Valentine's: Day To Appreciate

By SUSAN RIES Reflector Staff Writer

Washington's birthday doesn't make your pulse jump. Groundhog Day is appreciated mostly by strange men in top hats. Lincoln's birthday is a sleeper of a holiday. Is there anything good to celebrate about a rainy February?

St. Valentine's Day. Greenville merchants should know.

Some area shops offered an alternative to traditional ways of expressing affection. Donna Tabar, owner of The Mushroom, started a small business on the side and offered helium-filled balloon bouquets instead of carnations or mums. "Balloons Over Greenville" sold a bouquet with a heart-shaped mylar balloon in the center, three balloons surrounding the heart that say "I love you" and 10 brightly colored ones around the center. Ribbons instead of string were used to anchor the bouquet.

"We've started romances with them by including a card that says 'meet me for lunch ...'" said

Ms. Tabar. The bouquets, which cost $20, are delivered by a messenger who sings a short, snappy song.

Greenville found out about her unique Valentines and business was brisk. "We've been going crazy with Valentine's Day balloons," she said.

If you didn't want to give a floating gift, Greenville florists were ready to provide something more traditional.

"We have seven refrigerators and they're all packed," said Marie Cox of Cox Floral Service late last week. Her store, back workroom and every other cranny in the place was crammed with daisies, tulips, jack-in-the-pulpits and orchids ready for delivery. She placed her orders for roses in October, to make sure Cox's had enough to go around Sunday.

Ms. Cox said she didn't fret about competition or deliveries or running out of snap-dragons. She was concerned about the high price of sending flowers to someone out of town.

"What worries me is when we pick up the phone and call New York and they want $75 for a dozen roses. We just tell people not to buy them. We don't want them to spend so much money," Ms. Cox said. Twelve roses cost between $40 and $50 in Greenville.

If you bought roses for your sweetheart this year it was probably an investment. Roses from Cox Floral Service cost $40 a dozen; John's Flowers charge $45 for short, $50 for medium and $55 for long-stemmed roses; Greenville Flower Shop charges $47.50 per dozen.

Greenville Flower Shop manager Cathy Stox said the number of out of town orders was up from last year. According to Ms. Stox, a good percentage of local florists' wire business used to be sending flowers to kids at school, but now the students are reciprocating and giving flowers to their folks.

Pact Saves Money, Jobs

Ford, Union Agree On Contract

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP)

Ford Motor Co. and the United Auto Workers union reached tentative agreement Saturday on a contract intended to save the nation's No. 2 automaker hundreds of millions of dollars while ensuring jobs for thousands of Ford workers.

Neither side could give an exact dollar estimate of the union's concessions or the number of jobs that would be saved by the tentative accord. It came after 13 consecutive days of emergency negotiations, including a 16-hour session Friday and 11 hours' work Saturday.

The savings to consumers because of reduced labor costs also were not known.

Ford and UAW officials said the agreement offers company workers wide job security through wage and benefit concessions over 31 months, a freeze on wage and cost-of-living raises and elimination of some holiday pay during the period.

In return, they said, Ford agreed to a guaranteed income for high-seniority workers and restrictions on subcontracting work to foreign and non-union companies.

If it is ratified by the 170,000 UAW rank and file, the agreement would go into effect immediately and expire Sept. 14, 1984. Ratification was expected to take about two weeks.

"We believe the agreement represents a major achievement in terms of providing UAW members at Ford with greater job security," the UAW said in a statement.

UAW vice president Donald Ephlin said, "If we didn't think it was good for the workers, we wouldn't have reached a settlement."

Union president Douglas Fraser said he could not estimate the savings to Ford, which said it lost more than $1 billion in 1981. "You can't put a figure on it because you would have to put a lot of assumptions on it," he said.

Ford's chief negotiator, Peter Pestillo, said only that the pact was worth "a great deal."

Analysts who worked on Ford's original proposal said it would save about $1 billion.

The talks were requested by Ford in an attempt to make it more competitive with foreign automakers.

Asked if he could say how many jobs the pact would save, Fraser said, "I can't; there isn't any way. It depends on the economy and interest rates. It certainly enhances the worker position because it obviously strengthens Ford Motor Co."

Ford has nearly 55,000 hourly workers on indefinite layoff and an additional 8,800 on temporary layoff, the result of slumping car sales and plant closings over the past three years.

Ford chairman Philip Caldwell, who was in Hong Kong, released a statement calling the pact a "historic agreement."

"While we did not achieve everything we sought, the agreement augurs well for our employees, the union, the company and the nation," Caldwell said.

The union said the tentative agreement includes a 24-month moratorium on plant closings caused by "outsourcing," contracting out the manufacture of components to non-union and foreign firms, and agreement to inform the union on any such decisions in the future.

Travelers from the Baltic port of Gdansk said police threw a tight ring of trucks and water cannon around the monument to workers outside the Lenin shipyards, where the now-suspended independent union Solidarity was born 18 months ago.

They said police in Gdansk were guarding railroad stations, that patrols standing 20 or 30 yards apart were checking identity cards, and that numerous tanks, armored cars and police trucks were deployed.

Tanks Used As Poland Braces For New Protest

WARSAW, Poland (AP)

The martial law regime deployed tanks, armored cars, water cannon and heavy police patrols Saturday to guard against possible protests as military rule entered its third month in Poland.

The Communist authorities also slapped a 25-year jail sentence on a former official convicted of spying for the CIA and rejected proposals to let Solidarity chief Lech Walesa attend the christening of his seventh child.

Beefed-up police units checked drivers' identity cards in Warsaw, and appeared in greater numbers than usual on the streets. Hundreds of police vehicles wound through Warsaw Thursday and Friday evenings.

Foreign reporters are limited to filing their stories through the government press center, which was closed for the day Saturday by 10 a.m. EST.

riots in the early days of martial law which left one person dead, and a renewed outbreak of violence Jan. 30 when a mob tried to burn the party headquarters and fought police with stones and gasoline bombs.

There have been persistent rumors that Poles plan to buy copies of the Communist Party daily Trybuna Ludu and strew them about the party headquarters, or light candles in their windows as signs of protest.

The Polish news agency PAP, in a dispatch from Lublin that it later withdrew, indicated there had been some sort of disturbance there and that the official response had been a severe retightening of restrictions.

Church sources also said the authorities had rejected two proposals to allow Walesa to attend the christening of his seventh child, a daughter born Jan. 27.

PAP, monitored in Vienna, said a Warsaw military court sentenced Bogdan Walewski, a former Foreign Ministry official to 25 years in jail and 10 years' loss of civil rights on conviction of spying for the CIA. It was the toughest sentence handed down since martial law was imposed Dec. 13. The prosecutor had asked for the death sentence.

Meanwhile, Roman Catholic Church officials said that Archbishop Jozef Glemp, Poland's primate, may deliver a sermon Sunday on the Polish crisis. Glemp returned Thursday from the Vatican, where he held week-long talks with Polish-born Pope John Paul II on strategy toward the martial law regime.

Labor-Reagan Feud Heats Up

BAL HARBOUR, Fla. (AP) — AFL-CIO leaders are converging on this sunny resort city for a policymaking meeting that almost certainly will send fresh storm signals to the Reagan administration.

AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland and the federation's executive council will mount a rhetorical assault against President Reagan's domestic and foreign policies while fine-tuning a political master plan aimed at electing union allies to Congress in the fall.

Threatening an apparent improvement in relations between the 15 million-member federation and the administration is what Kirkland's aides describe as his growing impatience with Reagan's response to the imposition of martial law in Poland.

When the 35-member executive council convened for its mid-winter meeting here a year ago, the AFL-CIO's differences with the new administration focused on Reagan's tax and spending policies. Now there are indications of a widening rift over foreign policy.

Following Reagan's most recent peacemaking session with Kirkland on Feb. 5, the AFL-CIO chief reiterated that he has "fundamental, principled differences" with Reagan's handling of the economy.

Asked if the disagreement over U.S. policy toward Poland was nearing that point, Kirkland responded, "I hope not. The administration has still not closed the door on taking those additional measures they have indicated they might take" if martial law is not lifted.

Relations between the Reagan White House and the AFL-CIO plummeted last summer following the chief executive's firing of some 11,500 striking air traffic controllers, who walked off the job despite having signed no-strike oaths.

CELEBRATION

The Pitt County NAACP was host Saturday to an Emancipation Proclamation Celebration attended by about 200 persons. Those present included, left to right, Milton Dove, chairman of economic development task force of the state NAACP; D.D. Garrett, president of the Pitt NAACP; guest speaker Kelly Alexander, president of the North Carolina NAACP conference, and Edward Muse, director of NAACP life memberships from New York. Approximately 35 life memberships were presented at the annual meeting. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Semesters ... A Way Of Life

By MELVIN LANG Reflector Staff Writer

East Carolina University is in its fifth academic year since it converted from quarters to semesters and the word on campus is tranquility.

"For a while students complained but now, four years later, there are no complaints," said Dr. Susan McDaniel, associate vice chancellor for academic affairs.

But Dr. McDaniel pointed out that the conversion was not a spur-of-the-moment event. "It wasn't quick in coming," she said, explaining that the Faculty Senate had discussed a switch to semesters for five years or more before it actually occurred.

Similar proposals now appear periodically for North Carolina's community colleges and technical institutes, but all 57 campuses in that system have retained the quarter plan.

East Carolina made the change for the 1977-78 academic year, joining the growing trend among four-year educational institutions in changing to the longer semester.

"My perception of the conversion, after having talked to several other schools, was that I think ours was probably the smoothest of them all. One of the things we did was pick the brains of those who did it first," Dr. McDaniel said.

"There were very few snafus. It was a big job, taking up any spare time we had in this university for a year ... We did it as easily as anyone could."

"The main thing that we did in the conversion was to plan ahead so that no student's progress would be deterred. Every student was converted."

Dr. McDaniel and Dr. Charles Russell, assistant to the president of Pitt Community College, tended to agree in interviews that semesters might be best for a university program while the shorter quarters were best suited for community colleges such as PCC.

Both agreed, however, that one benefit from the semester plan was the fewer times that students must be registered for classes.

"Many of us feel that you spend so much time registering and changing classes that it seems we lose a lot of good teaching time," Russell said.

Dr. McDaniel, who recently was named acting director of admissions at ECU, said of registration: "The registering process is a necessary evil. The more you can minimize it, the better off you are."

Shelters: Relics Of Bygone Era

By MELVIN LANG Reflector Staff Writer

President Reagan has proposed a 400 percent increase in funding for this nation's civil preparedness for a nuclear attack, but the idea isn't settling all that well with those responsible for carrying it out in North Carolina.

In fact, the terms "civil preparedness" and "civil defense" are discouraged. Today such functions are handled by an "Office of Emergency Management" with national supervision supplied by the Federal Emergency Management Agency, successor to the old Office of Civil Preparedness, which succeeded Civil Defense.

Existing structures, such as most of the buildings at East Carolina University or public schools, have replaced the backyard bomb shelter and the shelter-in-the-basement at the courthouse as targeted points for refuge. Dirt has replaced steel as the main line of defense against nuclear fallout.

At least in Pitt County and North Carolina, natural and man-connected disasters hold a more prominent role in OEM planning than does war. But planning for war has been carried out and remains in effect. Locally, those plans are contained in a half-inch thick document entitled "Pitt County Civil Preparedness Emergency Operations Plan For War."

An essential ingredient of the state war plan is "crisis relocation" — in the event of a military threat — of inhabitants of communities near the larger military installations. Those plans include making Pitt County a "host county" for refugees from the areas near Seymour Johnson Air Force Base at Goldsboro and Camp Lejeune in Onslow County.

Tom Pugh, deputy director of emergency management in North Carolina, said this type of planning was the target of a major share of Reagan's proposed increase in funding for FEMA. Under Reagan's budget, FEMA's budget would go from $11.8 million this year to $195.2 million in fiscal 1983 — an increase of about 75 percent. The president included in that amount proposals to boost funding for "nuclear attack civil preparedness" from the existing $11.6 million to $46.2 million in fiscal 1983.

"Most of the preparedness money would go to planning for crisis relocation," Pugh said.

"This is a federal policy, and I underline federal. This concept of crisis relocation has been bought by this administration."

Pugh acknowledged that he frowned upon the concept but added, "I don't have a better idea ... It's cheaper than building bomb shelters on every block."

In North Carolina, Pugh said, "We have tried to take a much broader approach, even steering away from the term 'civil preparedness'. We feel that if we are prepared for one disaster, we are prepared for all of them."

North Carolina's OEM is operating on an annual budget of about $2 million, with nearly a third of that in federal funds which are distributed directly to county OEMs.

Pitt County's emergency management operations are consolidated under an office headed by Bobby Joyner, who is the county fire marshal. His office also coordinates fire-rescue operations in the county.

Official Says U.S. Fearful Of Intervention

By E. MICHAEL MYERS

SHANNON, Ireland (UPI) — The Reagan administration fears that failure to find an early political solution to the Polish crisis may lead to violence and direct intervention by the Soviet Union, a senior U.S. official said Saturday.

"It is important that we pursue our policies to optimize the potential" for a peaceful political solution, the senior official traveling on Secretary of State Alexander Haig's plane said.

The official, who can not be identified under the rules of the briefing, spoke to reporters as Haig stopped in Ireland on his return to Washington following a meeting in Romania with President Nicolae Ceausescu.

The official said resistance to martial law in Poland probably is greater today than when martial law was imposed two months ago and, in combination with Poland's chronic economic problems, has put growing pressure on Warsaw and the Soviet Union to end the crisis.

There is "great uncertainty whether or not the lack of quick progress in that area (Poland) will not soon disintegrate into violence and the need for direct Soviet involvement," the official said.

In Bucharest, Ceausescu told Haig that U.S. sanctions against Poland were counter-productive but that he agreed it was necessary to lift martial law.

Haig, concluding a one-day trip to the Warsaw Pact nation, met for more than four hours with Ceausescu. Describing the talks as frank but cordial, the secretary of state played down the disagreement over sanctions as a "tactical question."

"There were some differences on the Polish questions as pertaining to sanctions against the Polish government, but there was a general view for the need for normalization in the lifting of martial law and the state of siege," Haig told a news conference.

Romania, which borders the Soviet Union but is seeking to accelerate industrial development through Western trade credits, has said virtually nothing on the repression of human rights in Poland or the Soviet role in the crackdown that was 2 months old Saturday.

"President Ceausescu made clear that sanctions against the Polish government might be counter-productive," Haig said.

"I would say that the concerns here involve the impact that sanctions against the Polish government can have toward the rapid normalization of the situation in Poland, and that is focus of the concerns that were expressed."

The secretary of state, who stressed the importance of the West maintaining dialogue with East European countries during the Polish crisis, said the question of American sanctions against the Soviet Union did not arise.

Haig, who has been on a six-day swing through Spain, Portugal, Morocco and Romania, was returning to Washington Saturday.

Three Mishaps Investigated

A Friday evening three-car collision at Greenville Boulevard and Memorial Drive caused more than $1,500 in damage.

According to police, cars driven by Carl Irwin Huber, 42, of 403 Winchester Drive and Tony Curtis Bulter, 21, of Ayden were waiting for the light to change when a vehicle driven by Kenneth Dean Huber of Kinston approached from the rear and collided with the Butler car, knocking it into the Huber auto.

Damage was estimated at $100 to the Huber car, $200 to the Butler vehicle and $1,500 to the Langston auto.

Gordon Ray Jenkins of Bethel and Carolyn Elizabeth Wood of Winterville were involved in another collision Friday at Greenville Boulevard and Bismark Street, near Memorial Drive. Police placed the damage at $600 to the Jenkins car, $200 to the Wood vehicle. Ms. Wood was charged with failure to yield the right of way.

Valentine's In Greenville . . .

Most flower shops were closed Sunday, but that didn't mean, however, that no florist will be sending out flowers on Valentine's Day. "We deliver till we get them all out," said Lisa Warren, secretary and bookkeeper for John's Flowers.

Candy has also moved into the big leagues. According to Hollowell's Drugstore manager Jack Tyler, it's the large boxes of sweets that sell first. Tyler was expecting to have sold all of the store's candy this year.

Tyler said that Hollowell's has stopped stocking the "real big ones" because most people are watching their waistline.

Apparently, price is no object when it comes to sweets. Eckerdt Drugs was selling a five-pound box of candy for $55. "We sold three that size last year," said manager Vick Tart. He believes that the customer pays more for the decoration on the box, however, than for the candy. When asked what kind of candy he was giving to his wife, Tart replied: "It's not the $55 one!"

The usually all-woman sanctuary of the lingerie department has had some brave visitors. Men who were looking for an intimate gift to give their wife or girlfriend have walked courageously among the wispy, black-lace creations fingering the goods and looking at prices. One young man walked up to a motherly saleswoman and said, "Do you have a nightgown my girlfriend would like?" The woman led him to a rack and helped him find something among the untouchable items.

While florists were rushing around at the beginning of the week, taking, filling and delivering orders, jewelers spent the beginning of last week waiting for the promised rush.

The manager of Zales in Carolina East Mall, Doug Cushing, said business was always slow up till a day or two before Valentine's Day.

"Usually at Valentine's day there are engagement ring sales," said Cushing. "People are buying floating hearts, 14-K gold chains, charms, add-a-beads, mostly low ticket items," Cushing said.

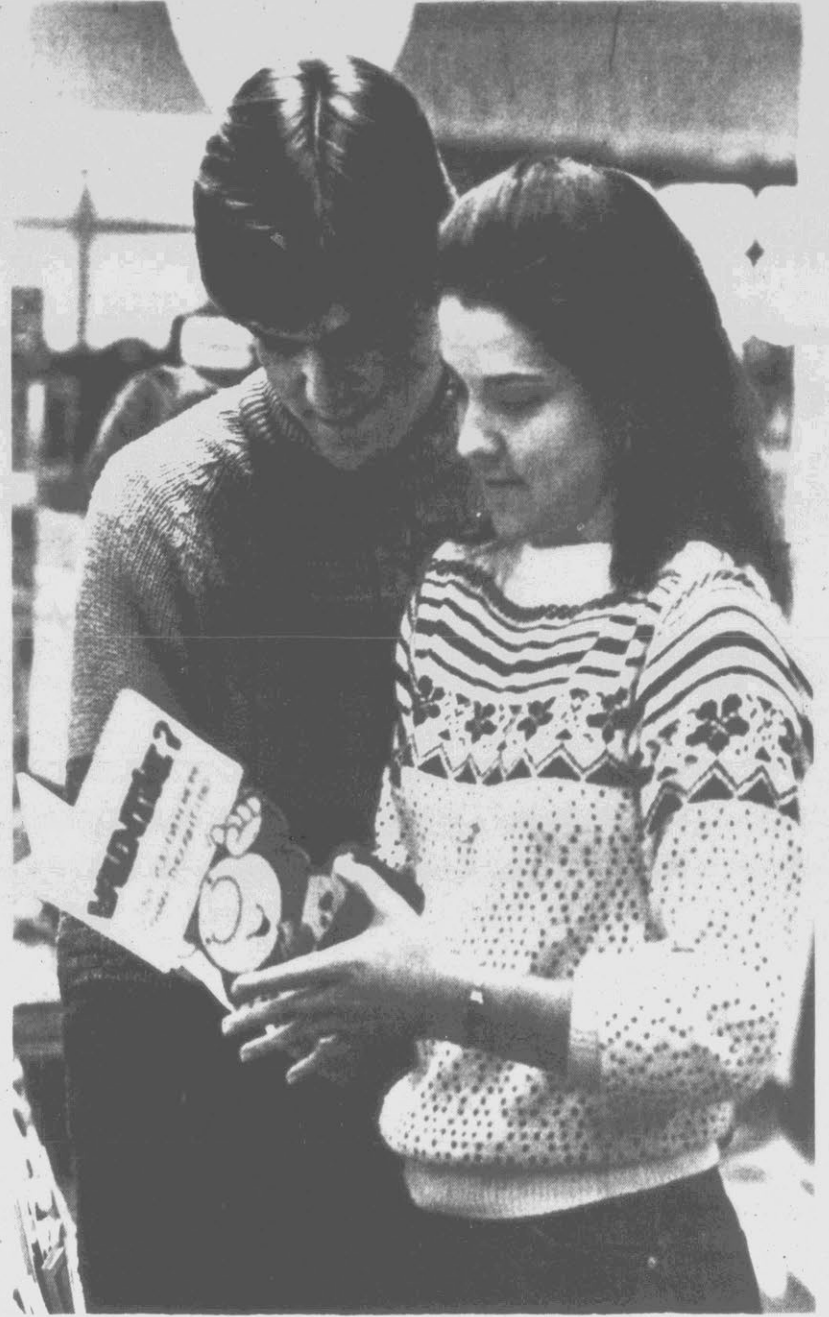

Melanie Smith, manager of J.D. Dawson's in Greenville, agreed with Cushing: "We've sold some hearts, compacts, pearl earrings, but no rings in the last couple of days."

If you were looking for Valentine's Day on a budget, the gifts at Gandalf's could have provided an easy answer, whether you wanted "Love Coupons," razors with handles shaped like a woman or shoe strings with hearts on them.

"We've sold 48 Love Coupons already," said Jan Ferree, the owner. The Love Coupons are a book of promises for things like a 30-minute back rub, a hug and a kiss or maybe a little bit more.

"Business has been the best this year I've ever seen. People are celebrating Valentine's Day more than I've ever seen," said Ms. Ferree.

Whether you bought rhododendrons for your true love or received something smooth, cool and gold to wear around your neck, Valentine's Day is the one day out of the entire year dedicated to kissing, hugging and snuggling. Appreciate it. It's certainly better than Groundhog Day.

Travelers Jam Florida Routes

By ANNE S. CROWLEY
Associated Press Writer
MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)

Despite a national recession and reports of high crime in this sun-drenched state, Northerners sick and tired of pulling on overcoats were packing southbound planes for the President's Day weekend.

The travel boomlet couldn't have been more welcome to an industry that lost $300 million last year. And a slight increase in airline ticket prices didn't seem to be turning the winter-weary away.

"It's a good picker-upper at a time when we need it very badly," said Eastern Airlines spokesman, Jim Ashlock. "I just wish it will be a lasting thing."

Eastern reported turning people away from Florida-bound flights at Northeastern departure gates, and Air Florida added seats by switching to jumbo jets on its flights from New York to Miami and Fort Lauderdale.

A fare war had dropped the price of a New York-Miami ticket to $77 each way this winter, but the low price failed to attract many new riders, probably because of the recession. It went up to about $125 Thursday, will drop again next week, after the holiday, then go up to $135 one way March 1.

"Both (Thursday) and (Friday), you could not get a confirmed reservation on hardly anything from New York and Washington to South Florida," Ashlock said. "By this time, they're getting a little sick of that winter up there. They're just tired of having to pull on galoshes and an overcoat every morning and just can't face doing it over a long holiday weekend."

Ashlock and officials of Air Florida and Pan American World Airways, who also experienced a weekend upswing, said the President's Day holiday generally marks the beginning of peak travel from the chill North to balmy Florida.

"This weekend is probably second only to the Christmas holiday period for North-South travel," said Pan Am spokesman Mike Clark. "It's probably the first real four-day weekend of the year — and the weather is still pretty rotten up there."

"January is always historically an off-peak time," said Robin Cohn, spokeswoman for Air Florida. "It does climb at this time of year. What's interesting is that this year, the trends are still developing, even with the recession."

"The question will be whether we'll get the volume we've had in the past. But at this point, the bookings look very strong."

Although tourism officials say the national recession is largely to blame for a sluggish winter season, South Florida's crime wave and the influx of Cuban and Haitian refugees have also tarnished the area's image as a tourist mecca.

Dade County had a record 620 homicides last year, and seven Florida cities were listed in the Top 10 in the FBI's annual report on crime in metropolitan areas around the country. A statistical analysis by the Dade-Miami Criminal Justice Council late in 1981 proclaimed the worst of the crime over, except for murder.

Ms. Cohn said Air Florida filled 96 percent of its seats on flights from New York and Washington to South Florida on Thursday and expected similar loads throughout the holiday period.

Some Miami hotels were also feeling the upswing, although their officers were not able to give exact figures.

"Our occupancy is higher than we forecast, but we're not full," said Gary Seibert, resident manager of the Fontainebleau Hilton in Miami Beach. "We should be running close to 70 percent," without any conventions over the holiday weekend.

On Thursday, the Air Transport Association reported industry-wide losses of $300 million during 1981. Miami-based Eastern, which moves more passengers than any other carrier, lost $65.9 million and had to cut 3,000 jobs in its first layoffs since the mid 1970s.

Even with a $125 fare, the airlines aren't making much money, Ashlock said, noting that the last "declared reasonable, profitable fare" was $227 each way.

"On a good day during good times, we'll make a few dollars," he said. "But it's tough with the low fares. It hurts to have to work that hard and carry that many people for so little profit."

Ashlock and Clark predicted that the boomlet would end soon, but Ms. Cohn noted "a good trend" of steady bookings through April.

Italians Crack Down On Aliens

ROME (AP) — The Italian government, seeking to stem a flood of immigrants from Africa and Asia, Saturday proposed stiff fines for employers who recruit or hire foreigners lacking work documents.

More than 500,000 foreigners are working illegally in Italy, according to government estimates. Many come from North Africa and the Philippines, taking low-paying jobs as dishwashers, housemaids and farm helpers.

Under a bill approved by the Cabinet and sent to Parliament, anyone who recruits foreigners to work illegally would face a jail sentence of one to four years and a fine of up to $8,000 for each foreigner recruited.

Marchers Will Re-Enact March For Voter Rights

SELMA, Ala. (AP) — Some of the names and faces were familiar as about 200 voting rights activists gathered here Saturday for a reenactment of the 1965 march across the Edmund Pettus Bridge that led to passage of the Voting Rights Act that year.

The activists planned to link arms Sunday in a symbolic march across the bridge, where their predecessors were beaten back by Alabama State Troopers in 1965.

Among those gathering for the demonstration were Tony Liuzzo, a Detroit bus driver whose mother, Viola Liuzzo, was killed in the 1965 protest, and John Lewis, an Atlanta voting worker who was one of those beaten by police in the march across the bridge 17 years ago.

Mrs. Liuzzo was shot as she drove civil rights activists from Montgomery to Selma at the conclusion of the march.

The Pettus Bridge incident drew national attention and caused the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. to lead another march across the bridge that year and on to Montgomery to urge voting rights for blacks. The second march helped persuade Congress to pass the 1965 Voting Rights Act.

Emergency ...

Some of the surrounding counties have not gone so far in centralizing their emergency operations. Joyner noted that in one eastern county the emergency manager coordinator is also the coroner, in another it may be the sheriff, in another it may be the county manager or a non-public official.

"We are in better shape than some of the other counties," Joyner added, noting that in addition to the "war plan" Pitt also has an updated "disaster plan" spelling out procedures to be used in the event of any type of catastrophe, ranging from war to hurricanes to chemical fires such as the one at Coastal Chemical Corp. in 1980. That plan is constantly under revision.

"Our plan is aimed more specifically now to disasters rather than the 'big bomb,'" Joyner said, explaining that all Pitt County and Greenville schools and East Carolina University buildings are designated as shelters.

In line with that, the public schools have alarm systems that can be triggered by the county communications dispatcher in the event of a pending disaster such as a tornado.

Joyner said a threatened school could be alerted within a minute after a tornado warning becomes evident. A full-scale disaster program could be implemented within an hour, he said, although a period of several days might be required to handle a relocation effort in the event the military bases are threatened.

Joyner said the era of bomb shelters, once a way of life in many sections of the country, is over. Only two or three are left in Pitt County, he said, although his office does receive an occasional inquiry about the shelters.

Today, he said, OEM personnel tend to believe that any all-out nuclear war would be preceded by a "period of readiness" in which steps could be taken locally.

"We give them whatever information we have (on home shelters), but we try to stress that there are other things that can be done," Joyner said.

"We know that we can take a bulldozer and go in there and push dirt up around Rose High School and turn that building into a good shelter. You can take any two-story building, put dirt on top of it and around it and have a good shelter."

Gone also are the public shelters, complete with food and other supplies, that sprang up after World War II. Some of the shelters still have the civil defense triangle posted at an entrance but all of the foodstuffs were removed and destroyed five years ago.

In the event of a major disaster, Joyner said persons needing shelters would be advised to bring with them blankets, bedclothing and "foods such as peanut butter." Agencies such as the Red Cross and Salvation Army also would be counted on to help supply food.

Joyner conducted a class last fall to train school administrators in operating shelters.

West Berlin Plans To Put Defecting Pilot On Trial

BERLIN (AP) — A 32-year-old Polish pilot flew to freedom in the West with six relatives Friday as freed pending trial by West Berlin authorities, a justice spokesman said Saturday.

The LOT airline pilot flew to West Berlin after he radioed Polish authorities that he had been hijacked. He locked the cabin to the flight deck to prevent guards aboard the plane from stopping his escape.

The man, identified only as Czeslaw K., was freed along with his wife's cousin, identified as 30-year-old Andrzej B., the spokesman said.

The spokesman said both men will stand trial on charges of depriving other passengers of their liberty — an offense punishable under West German law with a maximum five-year jail sentence or a cash fine.

The plane was a domestic flight from Warsaw to Wroclaw in southwestern Poland. It landed at Tempelhof airport in West Berlin.

The captain and his relatives asked West Berlin authorities for political asylum. The co-pilot of the plane and another of the original 19 passengers also decided to stay in the West.

A replacement crew from Poland flew the remaining 12 passengers and two crew members back home late Friday.

The police spokesman said both the pilot and his relative, who allegedly helped plan the escape, were under oath to report regularly to police pending their trial.

Last year, three Polish airliners were hijacked to West Berlin. All of the hijackers have since been sentenced in West Berlin courts. West Berlin authorities have refused to extradite the hijackers to Poland.

Treatment Plant Has To Be Built To Meet Needs

There is a little hope that just maybe some federal funding will be available for the wastewater treatment facility now in the planning stages for Greenville.

A spokesman for Olsen and Associates Inc., the firm designing the $11 million facility, said if additional federal funds are appropriated the Greenville plant might qualify due to its "innovative design."

Jim Brown said it is just a fond hope at present but, "We'll try to get classified innovative."

If such could occur it could be worth a great deal to our city. A bill was signed by President Reagan which would authorize some $45 million in water pollution control facilities funds for North Carolina. However, the actual appropriation has not yet been made.

If Greenville could qualify it might receive up to 85 percent of the construction cost for the plant.

Design, incidentally, is nearing completion and the plant is described as highly energy efficient and unique in this respect. It would be some 18 percent more efficient than other plant designs.

Whether or not federal funds become available it is a certainty that the new wastewater treatment plant must be built. The old plant is rapidly reaching its capacity and does not treat wastewater to the standards now required for the Tar River.

Every effort should be made to obtain state and federal funding for the project. Ultimately, however, the responsibility will rest on the citizens of Greenville — and we will have no choice but to construct the facility.

Delay Causes Confusion; Harms Election Process

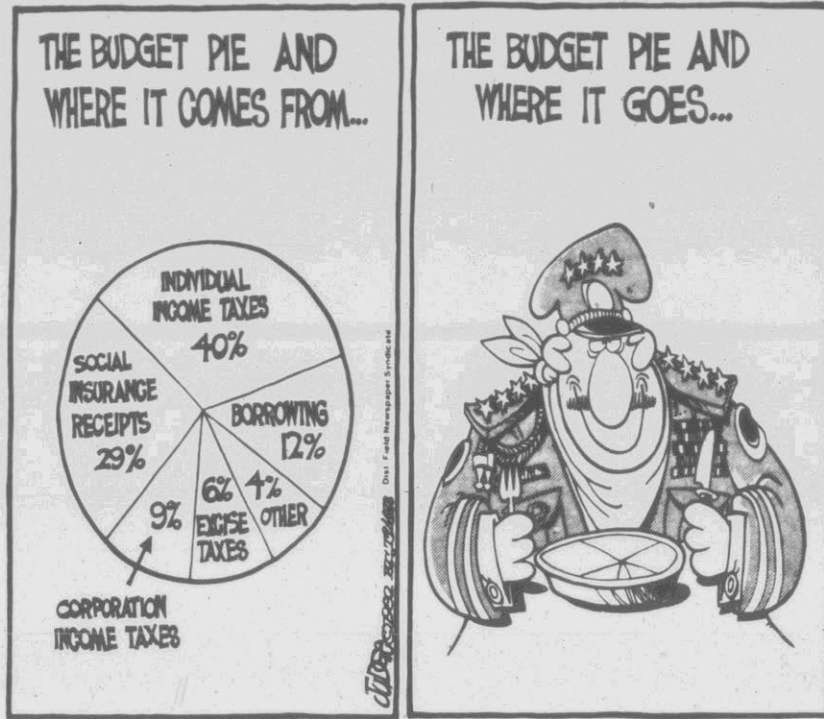

If ever there has been a confusing year for voters, this will be one for North Carolinians.

In the wrangle with the U. S. Justice Department over redistricting of the N. C. Legislature and the congressional districts, time slipped by. Finally last week a plan was approved by the Legislature. It will still have to be approved by the Justice Department and it faces the possibility of a citizens' suit.

As a result the General Assembly had to pass a bill which almost surely will mean the postponement of the statewide primary which had been set for May 4. Even now we don't know exactly when the primary will be held, although it will certainly have to be before the election in November.

Thus potential candidates for office don't know how to plan their campaigns and voters don't even know when to be available to vote.

If anything short circuits the election process, this does.

Sunday Morning Notes

Mary Schulken of our staff is an animal lover. Thus it is no surprise to those of us who know her that she stopped her vehicle on Arlington Boulevard recently to aid an injured sea gull.

Mary noticed that cars in front of her were avoiding something on the highway. As she approached she spotted the dazed gull. She stopped, turned on the warning blinker lights and picked up the bird. Later she carried it to Dr. A.G. Thompson who said the gull had been hit and was suffering from a concussion and a broken beak. The instructions were to keep the gull warm, feed it, use some salve on the beak and it should come around in a few days.

Home for the bird for the next few days was the Schulken apartment. Gradually J.B. (for Jimmy Buffet) came out of the concussion and began to eat ... virtually anything.

"French fries was his favorite," Mary says, but he also would eat bread, left over food and cat food.

After three days the gull was flapping around and becoming restless and it was clear the time had come for it to return to the wilds. Mary and her husband, Bion, took the gull to the area on the eastern bypass near the Carolina Opry House and set it on the ground. It appeared reluctant to leave them at first, but then spread its wings and soared to freedom.

Sea gulls are plentiful in this area now. Somewhere up in the skies we will be seeing one of the creatures whose name is J.B. ... and he just loves french fries. He very likely would not be alive today if it were not for the compassion of a human who took time to help on a busy thoroughfare.

We in the newspaper business take our knocks. It goes with the territory, and no doubt at times we deserve them.

Too, there are those who occasionally make us feel loved. A red Valentine came in the mail last week.

It read, "Happy Valentine's Day ... with a heart full of wishes for a day full of happiness!"

It was signed, "A customer."

There was a postscript: "Happy 100th Birthday, too."

Well, a Happy Valentine's to you!

Cheese Give-Away Is Popular Item

RALEIGH — Maybe the average person knows more than the television comics and syndicated columnists. President Reagan's big cheese give-away is proving more popular than anyone could have predicted.

North Carolina is asking the federal government for nearly 1.5 million pounds of the surplus cheese. "I have really been amazed at their response to the project," says John Syria, director of social services with the N.C. Department of Human Resources. "All 100 counties have agreed to participate and ... have enlisted the help of churches and a host of volunteer organizations."

When plans to distribute the surplus cheese to needy families were first revealed, many critics dismissed the effort as a slap in the face to hungry people.

Households eligible for food stamps will receive the cheese in amounts varying from five pounds to 20 pounds depending on family size.

The cheese will be shipped by rail from storage facilities and distributed throughout North Carolina by the Department of Agriculture. Distribution will begin in several weeks.

The income tax checkoff for political party contributions continues to be less than a popular way for Tar Heels to spend their dollars.

Only 7 percent of the taxpayers choose to designate a dollar for their political parties' campaign chest. The method first took effect in 1976.

Since then only $1.2 million has been chipped in for political parties. Democrats got $913,817; Republicans received $347,225; Libertarians got $5,983; and the Labor Party has received $181.

The peak year was 1978 when $261,588 was earmarked by taxpayers. The Liberation Party picked up its money from taxpayers during the 1979 and 1980 campaign period when television spots were being broadcast explaining that organization's political philosophy.

Does winning the White House affect contributions? The figures seem to point in that direction. With President Reagan in office, contributions to the Republican Party jumped from $66,527 in 1980 to $81,118 in 1981. Democratic Party checkoffs fell from $183,304 to $172,535.

The split of the tax fund is made from designations entered by the taxpayer on the tax form, or on the basis of party registration for funds checked off but not designated.

Attack Has Sharp Cutting Edge

WASHINGTON — The attack on President Reagan's White House political aide by loyalist Reaganite Sen. Roger Jepsen looks like a political lynching that failed, but it reflects the unfraternal mood of Republicans in Washington.

Jepsen's demand for the scalp of Edward J. Rollins Jr., recent successor to Lyn Nofziger as Reagan's in-house political aide, has an unusually sharp cutting edge. Prodded by Herman Pircbner, Jepsen's legislative aide who felt betrayed when his boss gave Reagan badly-needed support on the Oct. 28 AWACS vote, the senator's office has conducted what White House aides privately call a "witchhunt." The target was the president's personal political staff.

A familiar syndrome in Ronald Reagan's Washington emerges. Reagan has no more faithful follower than Roger Jepsen, the conservative ideologue with roots deep into Christian fundamentalism. But not even that strong alliance could withstand the atmosphere of distorted loyalties and unworthy demands for revenge that are undermining the vigor and common purpose of the Reagan administration.

Rollins was not the first target in the witchhunt for the source of a quote in the Oct.

29 Des Moines Register explaining how Reagan persuaded Jepsen to change his mind on "aye" on AWACS.

"We stood him up in front of an open grave," the unattributed quotation in the story by Register reporter John Hyde said, "and said he could jump in if he wanted to."

The first suspect was 24-year-old Douglas Elmets, a conservative Iowan assigned to minor political chores in Nofziger's office. When Nofziger informed Elmets in November that Jepsen's office suspected him as the source of the quote, he broke down and sobbed. "I'm from Iowa," Elmets told us on Feb.

8. "I think the world of Sen. Jepsen. I could never think of doing such a thing to him."

Sleuths in Jepsen's office accepted Nofziger's word that Elmets was innocent. They carried their confidential probe farther afield until it came to rest on a weekly Georgetown University seminar on public affairs. On Oct. 27, the day before the AWACS vote, Rollins (then Nofziger's deputy) was the guest lecturer. The reporter who wrote the article with the offending quote was present.

Chris Till, the instructor who conducts the weekly seminar, was telephoned by Pircbner at home. "Was your seminar on or off the record?" He asked her. She told us he was rude. "I refused to answer," she said. "I told him he was conducting a McCarthyite investigation. I told him he was intimidating my students. I told him the people of Iowa would be outraged if they knew that Jepsen's office was using taxpayers' money to conduct a personal vendetta."

But Professor Till's students were frightened. All but one submitted to interrogation while the recording machine spun. The consensus: No recollection of the quotation or anything close to it about perching Jepsen "in front of an open grave." But there were some who recalled that in a brief, rhetorical aside, Rollins may have said that considering the full weight of Reagan's pressure to get Jepsen's AWACS vote, "we just beat his brains out."

The phrase was indelicate but accurate. It fit Rollins, background as a Golden Gloves boxing champion more than his tour as a dean of students at Washington University in St. Louis. It gave Pircbner what he wanted.

A memorandum went to the White House over Jepsen's signature demanding action against Rollins. Last week, after several vain efforts to see White House chief of staff James Baker III, Jepsen got his interview.

Horror

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan is telling his supporters to "watch out for the horror stories" that his 1983 budget is causing suffering and hardships among the needy.

In sounding his warning, Reagan is also voicing some apprehension that such concerns might thwart his drive to cut federal spending for social programs and to turn them over to the states.

White House spokesman explained to reporters: "You are going to see a lot of stories of people on television and in the newspapers of people being deprived. But we've found a lot of them don't hold up."

The president appears to be at the crossroads in vindicating his philosophy that the states can do the job for the people better than Washington. He is beginning to rail against the federal government as he did so often before he reached the White House.

To critics of his "new federalism" program and high deficit budget, he says "put up or shut up."

He also is beginning to take jabs at the press, who he believes will be the bearers of the bad news. He also has begun to chide reporters for "instant analysis," and "knee jerk reaction" to his programs. He is determined to prove that he is on the right track, and that those of little faith are misguided.

First, he has to whip his Republican supporters into line. While not yet in major rebellion, some members of the GOP are defecting and their ranks could grow.

He has decided the best defense is offense. Hence, his warning to reporters that the Democrats will "probably try to find horror stories ... that I think all of you ought to be on guard against."

He said that there are those in government "who will, if possible, sabotage and deliberately penalize some individual" who is deserving of benefits "in order to get a story indicating that the programs are not working."

"We have much to do before we will see the light, but I think we are at least approaching the bend in the tunnel," he said.

The president hopes to align state and local legislators to back his "new federalism" and he is telling them, "There are pundits in Washington who consider the statehouse to be the backwater of American politics."

"They do not trust you to run your own affairs," he said in an address to the Iowa state Legislature. "They do not trust you to show compassion to your needy nor justice to your disadvantaged."

In short, Reagan has found and defined the enemy — Washington.

He says, "Washington has no corner on compassion or wisdom or morality," and he pledged, "If we do nothing else in this administration, we're going to convince that city that the power, the money and the responsibility of this country begin and end with the people and not in some puzzle palace on the Potomac."

He believes he has a receptive audience out there, and cited in his Des Moines speech a Gallup Poll that says shows Americans trust state governments more than the federal government 2-to-1.

"An all-intrusive federal government with big taxing and big spending doesn't work, never has worked and never will," he told the Iowa lawmakers.

Court Strikes A Blow For Freedom

BOSTON — The Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court struck a small blow for freedom the other day, in a case involving a couple of spunky school teachers, Shirley Hornketh and Joy Davenport. They took a stand on principle back in October 1978, and after a three-year battle they carried the day.

The two women are longtime, tenured teachers in nearby Greenfield. In 1978, over their unavailing protest, the local school board entered into a contract with the Greenfield Education Association, an affiliate of the Massachusetts Teachers Association, which is in turn tied to the National Education Association. This was one of those union shop contracts with an agency shop clause. Any teacher who refused to join the union nevertheless had to pay an "agency service fee" to the union.

The local union thereupon fixed dues for its actual members at $158 a year, and demanded an agency fee from non-members of only $5 less — $153 a year. Under Massachusetts law, no part of such an agency fee may be spent for partisan political purposes or for lobbying in areas unrelated to the public schools. The two teachers had reason to believe that the union was spending far more than $5 per year per teacher on things that had nothing to do with collective bargaining and contract administration. They refused to pay the $153 until they had an accounting.

The union's response was to demand that the two dissenting teachers be fired.

The Greenfield school board (its official title is the School Committee of Greenfield) was caught in the middle. Plainly the teachers had contractual rights as tenured teachers; they also had constitutional rights of free speech and free association. Just as plainly, the contract demanded the agency fee. The contract also spelled out procedures by which non-members could seek a rebate of that part of their fee expended for political purposes. The committee went to court for guidance.

Last month the controversy finally matured before the Supreme Judicial Court. Justice Paul J. Liacos handed all three teachers' unions a stinging defeat. The validity of the agency fee requirement, he noted, was not in dispute; indeed, the two teachers had paid their $153 fees into an escrow account in court. What was in dispute was the unions' demand that the non-union teachers submit to the unions' judgment of what was — or was not — political spending.

If the Greenfield union had prevailed, the dispute between it and the Greenfield committee would have gone to arbitration — but it would have been a most peculiar arbitration. The two teachers, not parties to the contract, would have had no say in the selection of an arbitrator. They would have had no right to participate in arbitration proceedings at all.

Well, said the unions, at the very least the dissenters should be compelled to pay the full agency fee to the local union while they pursued internal rebate procedures. What procedures? There was one procedure for the local union, a second procedure for the state union and a third procedure for the NEA. Each organization would make its own unilateral determination of its outlays for political activity. The complaining teachers would have no access to the unions' books and records. At the end of this cumbersome process, the two dissenters could then participate in arbitration — but the arbitrator would be bound by the unions' definition of political activity.

That is a lovely rebate procedure, is it not? The court rejected the notion. Each union's right to some permissible part of an agency fee "is outweighed by the potential that the impermissible amounts will be used, even temporarily, in violation of the dissenting teachers' First Amendment rights." The court refused to compel the two plaintiffs to pay the disputed fee to the local union pending adjudication by the State Labor Relations Commission. There it will be up to the union to justify a permissible fee.

This was a small victory for the rights of a non-union dissenter, but it is significant all the same. It says that a dissenter may not be compelled to pay a union now and fight for a rebate later. It is a useful lesson to teach a teachers' union.

Nothing Says The Forecasts Must Be Accurate

To the editor:

The uncontrolled influx of Japanese products, such as automobiles, textiles, radios, cameras and electrical parts, has and is destroying many American industries and eliminating millions of jobs.

After World War II, the United States rebuilt Japan, far better than before. Their industries were reconstructed with the most modern labor saving equipment, much better than ours.

Japan's auto industry wage rates are about 50 percent lower than ours. Japan's textile and electronic wages are even less than half U.S. rates.

Also, the Japanese government makes concessions to business — preferred treatment in depreciation allowances and tax rates.

After World War II, we also gave Japan very preferred tariff rates and unfortunately our government has not corrected this great advantage. Conversely, we pay very high tariff on all products we ship to Japan, except coal. For example, the tobacco tariff was 65 percent and now is 35 percent. The lowest tariff we pay Japan is 15 percent.

In 1981, we paid Japan $10 billion more for imports than Japan paid us for our products shipped to Japan. It is predicted that the deficit will rise to $16 billion in 1982.

Japan has been ordered to limit exports to the U.S., but they have done very little.

Has it occurred to you that your taxes underwrite or help pay for all Japanese cars sold in the U.S.? For example, Japan pays less than 3 percent ($145) on a $5,000 car. We should charge them at least 15 percent, which would mean $750 on each car. Japan shipped over two million cars to the U.S. last year and the increase in tariff would be much needed revenue.

The textile industry in North Carolina in particular has nearly been destroyed by cheap imports from Japan and other countries. It's been reported that Japan has enormous surpluses in a number of products and they've been accused of dumping those at below cost. Other countries such as Italy and France have reduced the number of Japanese cars they allow to be imported.

In my opinion, Japan's greed today is similar to Dec. 7, 1941, except today, it is a slow death for American business.

I urge you to contact your congressmen and insist they do something about increasing our tariff rates.

To the editor:

I appreciate your attention given to the proposed River Park Environmental Awareness Center in Thursday's edition of The Daily Reflector.

The plans and ongoing development of the center, however, are in large part due to the support provided by Mr. Tim Brinn, director, Regional Development Institute, East Carolina University. Also, development and installation of the solar panel is being conducted by students under the direction of Dr. Paul Waldrop, associate professor, department of industrial and technical education, East Carolina University.

NEW YORK (AP) — "Why aren't more women at the top of corporations?" The lecturer, a woman, was indignant — or she appeared to be — as she declaimed loudly about injustice and even hinted at female cowardice.

Her audience, mostly women, some of them aspirants to managerial jobs in their companies, picked up the mood. Later, they would buy her book. They would become angrier. Some might even conclude they had failed.

"A cruel hoax," says Eugene Jennings. The Michigan State University professor and management authority has heard the refrain at seminars and conferences. The anger is misplaced, he says.

Many self-styled female advocates don't know what they're talking about, he says. He calls them "kibitzers who don't have the courage to play the game, and who talk and write for self-aggrandizement."

Jennings, a professor of management, is known among other things for his role as adviser to corporate boards on executive policies, a role which grew out of his pioneering studies of mobility patterns.

"These advocates are unaware that it takes a quarter-century to develop a generation of corporate pres-

WASHINGTON (AP) — In other circumstances, President Reagan might have been more enthusiastic about fortune-telling in the federal budget. But he had to project some foreboding statistics, numbers that could translate into Republican political trouble this year and again in 1984.

Reagan saw it coming. He complained in advance that he didn't like the forecasting business but had to do it anyway. The law requires five-year projections of spending, deficits, inflation, unemployment and other statistics as part of the annual budget.

Fortunately, the law does not require that they be accurate. "There are too many imponderables for anyone to predict deficits or surpluses several years ahead with any degree of accuracy," Reagan said in his State of the Union message. "The budget in place when I took office had been projected as balanced. It turned out to have one of the biggest deficits in history."

That was a Jimmy Carter budget and while, for a time, it theoretically was to have been balanced, the notion didn't last for very long. Actually, when Carter presented it to Congress, he forecast a $16 billion deficit. That's a pittance compared with the deficits in prospect now, and with the outcome that budget year. The government closed its books Sept. 30, 1981, with a deficit of $57.9 billion.

Carter's 1982 budget, bequeathed to Reagan, envisioned a deficit of $27.5 billion. The Republican administration overhauled it with spending restraints and tax cuts. The best official guess now is that when the current fiscal year ends, the deficit will be $38.6 billion.

Reagan, who once blamed all sorts of ailments on deficit spending, now says the whole business has to be kept in perspective — and that it wasn't his doing. "Taken together, the effects of recession, higher interest rates, declining inflation and incomplete congressional action will mean high, continuing and troublesome federal budget deficits," he said.

The president said a change of one percentage point in unemployment can add $25 billion to a budget deficit.

Carter's last budget message forecast an unemployment rate of 7.4 percent this year. The Reagan administration figures it at 8.4 percent. Since this is a congressional election year, the Democrats will spend a lot of campaign time protesting administration policies they blame for the high rate of unemployment.

Reagan says those policies are beginning to work, and forecasts an upturn from the current recession by summertime. Unless and until that happens, he is likely to hear taunting Democratic replays of the campaign line he once used against Carter:

"A recession is when your neighbor loses his job. A depression is when you lose yours. And recovery is when Jimmy Carter loses his."

Reagan's budget projections show the unemployment rate declining steadily, to 6.8 percent by the time of the next presidential election, and to 5.2 percent by 1987.

His charts also forecast sharply decreasing rates of inflation, which will be a major Republican talking point in the coming campaign. The administration now projects an inflation rate of 6.6 percent for the current budget year and 5.1 percent next year. If his forecasts prove out, Republicans would go into the next presidential campaign with inflation down to 4.7 percent.

That would be a major political plus. But by Reagan's accounting, it also carries a price tag, in the form of increased deficits. He said "the most important factor contributing to the growth of deficit projections is quite simply the ironic by-product of our rapid and decisive success in bringing down the rate of inflation." His explanation is that as inflation goes down, the government does not take in "those hidden revenues" it has gained in the past as the cost of living increased salaries and so boosted tax revenues.

The Reagan tax cuts add to the deficits, too, but the president insists that they are a long-term cure and not a cause of the problem.

For all of that, the deficit projections are a serious problem for the administration. According to the forecasts in his own budget — and Democrats contend they are unrealistically optimistic — record deficits will persist through his term and the next presidential term of office, even if Congress agrees to spending curbs.

If Reagan gets every budget reduction he wants, which he won't, the deficit for fiscal 1983 would total $91.5 billion. His budget chart shows the deficits declining by about $10 billion a year after that, to $66 billion in fiscal 1986. That would be only slightly above what used to be the all-time record.

The forecasts span a period including one congressional and one presidential campaign, a prospect Republicans find unnerving. They are the ones who will have to explain it, and they have been criticizing Democrats over deficit spending for years.

Reagan made a point of that when the national debt hit one trillion dollars, saying it was the legacy of Democratic rule. The deficits projected in his new budget would add nearly half a trillion dollars to the debt total during the next six years.

George Gallup

POLL

PRINCETON, N.J. — The public predicts an improvement in the nation's inflation rate by the end of the year but a further deterioration in the unemployment situation.

In the latest Gallup survey, Americans' median estimate of the year-end inflation rate now stands at 10.2 percent compared to their estimates of 13.5 percent last March and 13.6 percent in November 1980. In contrast, the public's median estimate of the unemployment rate by the end of 1982 is now 9.4 percent compared to the 8.2 percent and 7.1 percent estimates for 1981 covered in the two earlier surveys.

The "misery index," the sum of the public's forecasts of both the inflation and unemployment rates, is now 20 percent, statistically indistinguishable from the 22 percent and 21 percent obtained in the two earlier surveys, with the current lower inflation forecast offset by the higher unemployment prediction.

A dramatic contrast between the current and previous unemployment predictions is found by comparing the proportions saying the jobless rate will be 9 percent or more by the end of 1981 and 1982, respectively. In the November 1980 survey, 24 percent of the public foresaw an unemployment rate of this magnitude; by March 1982 the figure had grown to 41 percent; in the current survey the comparable number is 6 percent.

The public's improved perceptions of the inflation picture are equally striking. In the 1980 survey 41 percent thought the inflation rate would be 14 percent or higher by the end of 1981, the figure grew to 5 percent in the 1981 survey; today, merely 12 percent think inflation will be 14 percent or more by the end of this year.

It's interesting to note that the public's median estimates for both the inflation and unemployment rates are marginally higher than the latest governmental estimates.

Misery Index A Carter Creation

The misery index was created in 1976 by presidential candidate Jimmy Carter to dramatize the failure of the Ford administration to improve the economy. Candidate Ronald Reagan, in turn, found the index an effective political weapon to us against President Carter during the 1980 campaign.

President Reagan's economic program — assisted by stable oil prices and high interest rates — has succeeded in reducing inflation, but at the price of the current recession. The government figure of 8.5 percent unemployment for January was down from the (adjusted) 8.8 percent December figure, but government statisticians reported no increase in employment in January. The explanation given is that many persons who have been out of work for a long time has simply given up looking for jobs and, by the government's definition, are not counted as unemployed.

Here is the first question asked:
"The inflation rate during 1981 was about 9 percent. By the end of 1982, what do you think the inflation rate will be?"

Following is the comparison of the current national results with those from the earlier surveys:

Inflation Rate By End Of Year

Here is the second question asked and the national results from all three surveys:

"The current unemployment rate is now 8.4 percent. By the end of 1982, what do you think the unemployment rate will be?"

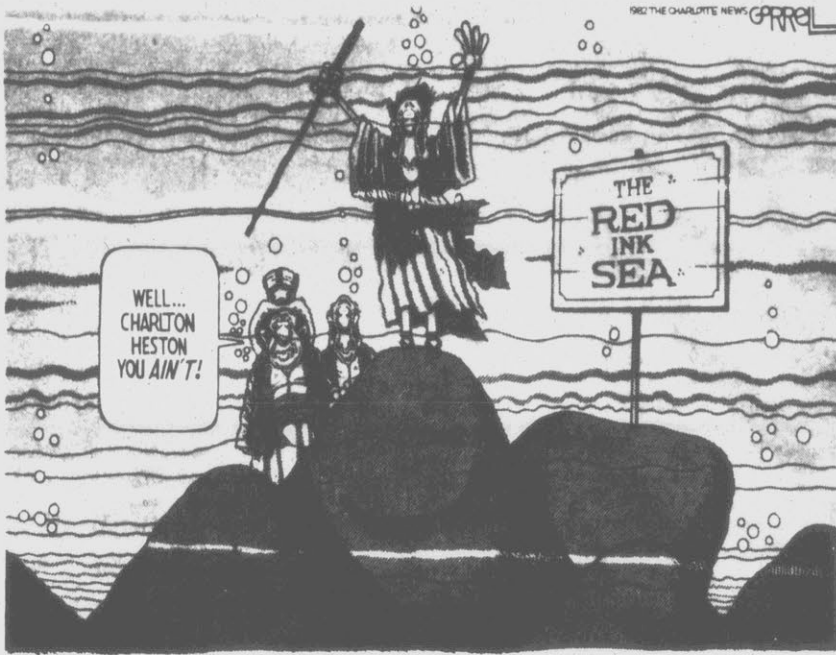

Unemployment Rate By End Of Year
Unemployment Rate By End Of Year	November 1980*	March 1981*	January 1982

As reported recently, President Reagan's approval ratings for his handling of economic conditions in general and of inflation and unemployment, specifically, are at or near their lowest points in regular surveys conducted since last March. In each of these key measurements more people now disapprove than approve of the president's actions.

The results reported today are based on personal interviews with 1,484 adults, 18 and older, conducted in over 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period Jan. 8-11.

For results based on a sample of this size, one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be three percentage points in either direction.

A Professor Says It's All A Hoax

idents," he says. "Early arrivals will make it in 22 years, but the majority will take 26."

Of the mobility of those who will make it to the top, he continues, "the critical mass of women in line and support jobs is almost where one would expect them to be if they were male."

The earliest large batch of women to seriously enter the management programs of major corporations left college in the years 1972-1977, and now are at second levels above non-managerial positions, he says.

"With Level 6 being division heads or equivalent, and Level 10 being presidents, a few women are at levels 3 and 4."

The vast majority of females now in high executive offices are really not contenders for the presidency, according to Jennings. Instead, they are board secretaries or administrative managers. "Females in actual positions to become president are indeed very few," he says.

But, says Jennings, the "critical mass" of women who entered managerial programs during the mid-1970s seems to be on schedule in their rise toward the top.

To force women higher could be abortive, says Jennings, citing the experiences in the 1960s of companies that promoted executives "ahead of their smarts," or beyond their attainment of wisdom and maturity.

"We broke them (overly mobile executives) or melted them down in horrendous numbers, but we learned our lessons well," he says. "We know now not to deprive the aspirant of maturity and wisdom."

Jennings, who conducted what was probably the first national seminar for female presidents and vice presidents back in 1965, is especially critical of the damage advocates do to certain very successful women.

The woman often brutally hurt by advocates, he observes, is the one who does not seek the brass ring, who is happy with a challenging job, who has self-imposed immobility. But such people, he contends, are perceived by "the chorus of cheerleaders as weak, passive creatures who are betraying the cause of women."

He suggests that the well-intentioned advocate should "encourage executives to do well in their jobs, take their time and build a good platform of results."

The clock, he advises, "cannot be set ahead without irreparable harm to the individual and the corporation."

'The Girls Could Hold It Better'

Craven to take a behind the scenes look at the ball.

Craven described the ball as "a harmless clamor given effervescence by a liberal supply of beverages." He added that "the girls could hold it better and drink it with more restraint than the boys."

"A boy, definitely drunk reels out of a room," Craven wrote in telling of the tour he made of the Sir Walter with N&O photographer Lawrence Wofford. "Take my picture," the young man demanded of Wofford.

"The flash bulb nearly floored him," Craven wrote. He told of a group of youngsters gathered at the end of a hall, some seated on the floor and others leaning against the wall.

"Besides the corridor, Raleigh's East Cabarrus Street would look like a church

"The rooms were smoked-filled and bottle strewn," it said. "In one dim vestibule at a suite door, a boy and girl were a single rigid image. When the flashbulb crashed upon their delirium, they broke. The boy grinned vacuously. The girl yelped. She grabbed his hand and raced down the hall, the boy stumbling in tow."

Craven also told of three boys who were weaving their way down a corridor when they encountered three "gaudily painted mothers." The women "look severe, and the boys pass them, heads down, crowding the wall."

"At the auditorium, the debs stepped upon the low dais in the center of the floor, each in her turn. Accompanied by soft music of Tommy Tucker, each girl took her bow. Each presented that lofty assurance owned by most attractive American girls that are well fed, well dressed and well schooled," the story concluded.

Sam Ragan, now publisher of The Pilot at Southern Pines who was then N&O managing editor, recalled that Craven's story won first prize for spot news coverage when the 1951 awards were announced the following January by the North Carolina Press Association.

Ragan said that the man who judged the contest, managing editor Russell Wiggins of the Washington Post, was greatly impressed by the story.

"He told me when he was looking at all the entrants, the Debutante Ball story just jumped at him. He had never seen one covered like that before and thought it was a fine idea," Ragan said.

What About All That Violence In Sports?

Yet, the conscientious objection of this unlikely hero has precipitated another round of debate over the excess violence in American sports. Even now, it's unclear as to who holds ultimate responsibility.

America's major professional leagues — baseball, basketball, football and hockey — have all gone through the motions of addressing undue or premeditated violence within their realms. Oversight committees have been established, and tighter rules written. Several years ago, in fact, the NHL assigned a game suspension penalty to the third man in on a fight — the very crime Paul Mulvey was trying to avoid.

Nevertheless, asserts Richard B. Horrow, sports violence has increased. Horrow, a lawyer now heading the Dade County Sports Authority in Miami, contends that league warnings and sanctions have often gone unheard or unenforced. Moreover, he adds, the media have only heightened the public perception of sports violence with their sensationalism.

It's been suggested that government take the initiative. In 1980, Horrow, then a clerk to a U.S. District Court judge, drafted an ill-fated, ill-conceived congressional bill to make excessive sports violence a federal crime. Since then, that bill's sponsor, Rep. Ronald Mottl (D-Ohio), has proposed more reasonable legislation mandating neutral arbitration panels to deal with the perpetrators on a case-by-case basis. As Mulvey discovered, however, discretion can make even the best-intended safeguards meaningless.

It also may be unfair simply to assign professional leagues and athletes the task of policing themselves. Until Americans undergo some drastic changes in their own approach to sports, such measures tackle only half the problem.

From the little league fields to Madison Square Garden, our own appreciation for sportsmanship is rather confused. As spectators, we're an unpredictable lot, cheering gracious gestures one minute and near-homicide the next. We lionize the bullies as well as the best.

Coaches are expected to balance our dual passions. We count on them, like good generals, to prepare their troops for the most bruising of battles, and to achieve the winning edge.

But we also ask them to be our moral force on the field, even when high standards of fairness could cost coach his job. Obviously, Don Perry of the L.A. Kings viewed his actions within the limits of discretion. And some agreed with him. One Winston-Salem (N.C.) junior league hockey coach actually told a young player that Perry was correct to penalize Mulvey for "disloyalty."

Perhaps Perry's doing only what we expect, but there are too many of his type at all levels of sports competition. Pushy coaches, proud parents and leagues of impressionable youngsters have a knack for giving in to the baser impulses of the game. We inveigh against violence only when the other team's to blame; if we're guilty, then "they" probably deserved it.

Until we come to terms with our own worst instincts, however, it may be too much to expect conscientious objectors like Paul Mulvey to change things for us.

Copyright 1982 Field Enterprises, Inc.

WASHINGTON — Paul Mulvey didn't fly here last week with the best of his profession for a White House luncheon and all-star hockey game. But he deserved an invitation.

Until recently, Mulvey, 23, was a journeyman forward for the Los Angeles Kings of the National Hockey League, with a rather dubious reputation as an "enforcer." That is, he often compensated for a less-than-stellar scoring ability with his fists and brawn in a game not noted for its gentility.

But last Jan. 24 the 6-4, 220-pound Canadian did the unexpected. When his coach "repeatedly" ordered him off the bench to lend his pugilistic skills to a mid-game fight, Mulvey balked. He eventually joined the fracas, but only after both teams had cleared the benches.

As far as his coach, Don Perry, was concerned, Mulvey had committed an unthinkable act of disobedience. The young player was subsequently offered to any other NHL club that would take him. When none did, he was banished to a New Haven farm team.

Stung by the initial flurry of publicity — all bad — the NHL suspended Perry for 15 days and slapped the Kings with a $5,000 fine. Lawyer John A. Ziegler Jr., the League president, declared, "We cannot and will not ... tolerate premeditated attempts to ignore or act against the policy of the league."

Had Mulvey again agreed to play the role of hit man, of course, his action would undoubtedly have drawn little attention from sportswriters or the league. It's what we expect from the game.

Four Hurt As Workers Try To Halt Shoplifter

Four employees of the Piggly-Wiggly supermarket on Dickinson Avenue were injured Saturday during a scuffle that sent two of the workers through a plate glass window after they attempted to stop a suspected shoplifter.

Police confirmed the incident but gave few details.

Kenny Raper, assistant manager of the store, said the incident started about 1 p.m. when employees recognized a man who had just entered the supermarket as a man sought for shoplifting earlier.

Raper said the man was watched and "we saw him put two steaks in his clothes." When he was approached, the man ran to the front of the store where his path temporarily was blocked by other Piggly-Wiggly employees.

The man eluded the employees and fled out the door, with the workers in pursuit, Raper said, but they were met by a second man who intercepted them.

"His buddy got out there and got into it," Raper said. "Within two minutes two of them came through the plate glass window ... They fell right in a pile of glass."

Raper said employees Timmy Hatch and Ronald Harrison, who were thrown through the window, and Danny McLawhorn were injured by the broken glass. A fourth employee, Richard Bowen, was hit by the suspected shoplifter.

Raper said the shoplifter fled. The second man, whose identity was not released by police, was taken into custody on charges of assaulting the employees and damaging property.

Cougar Shot To Death

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — The Lincoln-Mercury cougar was shot to death Saturday after the animal attacked and seriously injured a 9-year-old boy during an automobile show.

Police said the 130-pound puma, named Tom-Tom, was being led on a leash through the back door of the David L. Lawrence Convention Center by its owner, Bob Steele of Florida, shortly before the attack on James Seals of suburban Upper Saint Clair.

The cat, whose fierce roar highlighted Lincoln-Mercury promotions across the country as well as a national television commercial, was to be part of the car company's display at the show.

Steele said he noticed some boys running nearby as he opened the door and warned security guards around him to "watch that boy." He said Seals seemed to "run right under him (the cougar)."

Police said the boy never touched the animal, but the animal reacted by grabbing him around the neck and pinning him to the floor, refusing to let go.

Eyewitnesses told police Steele and other bystanders began kicking the animal and hitting it with a stick in a fruitless attempt to free the boy.

Steele reportedly jumped on the animal and tried to pry its jaws open. When that failed, an off-duty police officer standing nearby shot the cougar to death.

"If people hadn't gathered around and kicked the animal, I could have handled it ... could have gotten him to let go," said a shaken Steele, who added it was the first injury he had in 10 years of training dangerous animals. "They only made him more excited ... made things a lot worse."

Who's Next To Lose Job

Federal Workers Are Jittery

By HOWARD BENEDICT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — All around Washington, over coffee cups and water coolers, cocktails and canapes, jittery government workers are speculating on where next the RIF will strike.

Here, it means reduction in force. Elsewhere, its known as being fired, canned.

About 8,000 have fallen victim since Ronald Reagan came to town a year ago vowing to sharply cut the government work force. A popular T-shirt sold by street vendors reads: "RIFed by Reagan and Proud of It."

The president's campaign against the beleaguered bureaucrats accelerated earlier this month when Reagan unveiled his proposed budget for fiscal 1983. It calls for cutting 75,000 government jobs by 1984 and another 75,000 by 1987.

The present payroll lists 2.1 million civilian workers, 360,000 in the Washington area. The 947,000 civilian employees who work for the Defense Department are exempt from Reagan's RIFs.

The president also proposed giving workers smaller pay increases and reducing the benefits for civilian and military retirees. The administration followed up by directing several agencies to furlough thousands of employees for several days — one day at a time — without pay.

Unions representing government workers have vigorously protested the RIFs and furloughs but have not altered the administration's resolve.

At a recent meeting of the American Federation of Government Employees, members chanted long and loud: "RIF Reagan! RIF Reagan!"

Vincent L. Conroy, president of the National Treasury Employees Union, complained: "Being one of the fortunate who need not rely on government programs, the president is out of touch or just unconcerned with the hardships his indiscriminate budget cutting creates."

"I don't think we want to claim that these reductions will be painless," said Edward Preston, an assistant director of David Stockman's Office of Management and Budget.

Preston said the cuts are intended to hold down government costs. But the General Accounting Office questions the administrations claim last year that it could save $1.6 billion by eliminating 43,000 people from the federal payroll.

The GAO, the investigative arm of Congress, said in a report issued a few days ago that the figure was several hundred million dollars too high.

OMB, the report said, did not consider an estimated $94 million in severance pay, unemployment compensation and lump sum annual leave payments, $70 million in early retirement costs or $148 million in refunding employees' retirement contributions.

"I will readily admit that our calculations did not take into account those elements," said George H. Strauss, who heads the OMB division that prepared the numbers.

He said OMB staffers simply multiplied the number of people to be dropped in fiscal 1981 and 1982 by the average estimated salary of a federal worker in those years — $24,500 and $25,676.

"The question is: What would be saved if a particular job is abolished?" Strauss asked. He said his office was more careful with the figures in the 1983 budget.

"Once the entire 75,000 (proposed reduction by 1984) is off the rolls, that's when we save $2.1 billion," he said.

Dr. McDaniel also listed as some of the benefits of the semester system:

•More time for students to develop and instructors to grade term papers.

•"So far as learning is concerned, a person will have a better understanding if it is spread out over a longer period of time."

On the other hand, she said, "A semester for some people has drawbacks because they have to make better decisions. Right or wrong, you're stuck with half of a year instead of a third."

Similar reasoning applies to community colleges, but on behalf of the quarter system.

"Many people seem to think that, in the technical field it is better to develop the material into three or four areas, not just two," Russell said.

But, he said, "The main thing with the quarter system is that you can offer so many more courses." This is especially helpful, he said, to students who are not necessarily seeking graduation but are seeking specific courses in a short period of time.

He noted that the only major problem for PCC students would be for those who wish to transfer to a university on the semester system and have to wait for a new semester to begin.

Hunt Says Leaf Program Needs Farmers' Control

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Farmers should pay the cost of the federal tobacco price support program, but farmers also should control it, Gov. James B. Hunt Jr. told congressional committees holding hearings on the program's future.

Hunt said Friday that allowing farmers to pay the program's cost is the best way to assure it will cost the taxpayer nothing, but farmers should control the program they pay for.

"If we are going to err, I say let's err on the side of control," Hunt said.

The committees' hearings are expected to set the stage for major revisions in the program as tobacco's political allies look for ways to protect it from further assaults in Congress.

Congress came to the brink of disbanding the program last year after critics called it a federally guaranteed monopoly for a few farmers. The major criticism was that tobacco allotments can be leased by non-farmers who happen to own the allotments.

The committees are chaired by Sen. Jesse A. Helms, R-N.C., head of the Senate Agriculture Committee, and Rep. Charles G. Rose III, D-N.C., head of the House Tobacco and Peanut Subcommittee.

Helms said the committees' purpose is three-fold — to create a program that will not cost the taxpayers, to adjust the price support formula and to devise new rules for the lease and transfer of allotments.

Rose said ways of funding the price support program include allowing farmers to pay for it, setting aside a portion of federal cigarette taxes for it or having tobacco companies pay its cost.

But both Hunt and Sen. Walter "Dee" Huddleston, D-Ky., said they would be against the cigarette tax proposal. Hunt said the future of the proposal could be in doubt because President Reagan may phase out all excise taxes.

Huddleston, who would like to keep all committee work on the tobacco program within the purview of agricultural committees, said he opposes the proposal because it would have to go to congressional finance committees for approval.

Hunt also told the committees he favors a tobacco support program in which "the quota belongs to the land and not the man."

"The more we separate the quota from the land, the more problems we create in regard to both the integrity and the public image of the program," Hunt said.

Hunt also endorsed a proposal to allow the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture to raise or lower the support prices on low-demand leaf.

Currently, a formula sets all leaf prices. But farmers say the formula drives up the price of low-grade leaf and makes it non-competitive on the world market.

"There is no doubt that adjustments are needed in support of loan rates by grade," Hunt said. "Our median and better grades are of better quality and can demand premium prices on world markets. However, our lower grades are priced non-competitively. Tobaccos of similar quality are available in many foreign countries at much lower prices."

The hearing Friday in Raleigh was the first of a series. The Senate committee will hold hearings later in Lexington, Ky., and Washington while the House committee will hold as many as 10 hearings in the tobacco belts of the Carolinas, Virginia, Kentucky and the District of Columbia.

Fountain Is Undecided

DURHAM, N.C. (UPI) — Rep. L.H. Fountain, D-N.C., says he wants to determine the effect of adding Durham County to his district before deciding whether to continue his 30-year Congressional career.

"If I've got to come down three or four times a week to campaign, then I won't run," he said in an interview, telling a Durham newspaper there is too much work to be done in Washington to allow such extensive campaigning this year.

The General Assembly wrangled for hours last week before producing a new Congressional redistricting plan that put Durham County into Fountain's 2nd District, which covers most of North Carolina's northern coastal plain. Durham County had been in the 4th District with Wake, Chatham and Randolph counties.

The change makes Durham the biggest county in Fountain's largely rural district. It also gives Fountain almost certain opposition in this year's Democratic primary from H.M. "Mickey" Michaux of Durham, a former state legislator and U.S. attorney.

Fountain's supporters lobbied hard to keep Durham County out of the 2nd District. But in order to do it and stay within federally prescribed limits on population variances between districts, the mapmakers originally produced a 2nd District that looked like a fishhook.

The U.S. Justice Department threw out the plan on the grounds that keeping Durham County and its potent black voting strength out of the 2nd diluted the minority's political power. So this time the redistricting plan puts Durham County in Fountain's district.

North State Names Two Directors

North State Savings & Loan Corp. has announced the addition of John R. Roney of Williamston and Dr. Wayne P. Attkisson of Windsor to the firm's board of directors.

Roney, who is vice president of Interstate Securities Corp. in Greenville, is a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. The firm said that Roney was an instrumental figure in the organization of Bertie County Savings & Loan Corp. (proposed) and its eventual arrangement with North State.

The new director resides with his wife Billie and their two children, Rob and Gregg, in Williamston.

Attkisson is a practicing dentist in Windsor where he resides with his wife Margaret and their two children, Kenneth and Sallie Ann.

He is a graduate of UNC-Chapel Hill where he also attended dental school. Attkisson is a member of the board of directors of the Windsor Rotary Club.

North State has branch offices in Greenville and a pending branch facility in Windsor.

Non-Profit Service Counsels Debtors

FARMVILLE — David C. Bryan of Farmville has announced the formation of Consumer Credit Management Service of Eastern North Carolina Inc., a non-profit consumer credit counseling organization based here.

Bryan, who is president of CCMS, said the corporation will have three operational purposes: to educate, counsel and advise debtors with regard to the use of consumer credit and the budgeting and management of money; to negotiate with creditors on behalf of debtors for the purpose of designing and administering debt liquidation plans and distributing payments, and to provide the services at no cost to clients.

He explained that funding for the counseling service, as in all other non-profit counseling services throughout the nation, will be provided through voluntary, tax deductible contributions from cooperating creditors, employers as a benefit program for their employees, interested individuals and, eventually, the United Way.

According to Bryan, the groundwork for the new service is now being laid and while the CCMS is "in the works" and not yet located in permanent facilities, he is accepting calls at his home (753-2282).

"We are not talking about investment counseling," he explained, stating that the firm will focus on counseling clients on how to manage what they have.

He said that CCMS will have a primary service area involving Pitt, Beaufort, Craven, Edgecombe, Greene, Lenoir, Wayne and Wilson counties. Possibilities are also being explored, Bryan said, relative to the use of roving counselors to serve the counties around Pitt.

Bryan said the firm will help individuals and families work out financial problems by assisting them with livable budgets, educating them in money matters, working out re-payment schedules and staying collection activities, including repossession and legal actions.

Seminars and workshops will be planned by the firm, Bryan said.

ACLU Challenges Voter Rights Patterns In South

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The American Civil Liberties Union Saturday accused Deep South states of continuing to discriminate against black voters despite federal enforcement efforts under the 1965 Civil Rights Act.

As the issue is debated in Congress, the ACLU made public a lengthy dossier of violations compiled by its Atlanta regional office.

The report conceded Southern blacks have made political gains in the past 17 years — the number of blacks in office in the South has risen from less than 300 to more than 2,400 and black voting has risen dramatically — but it said the results remain far below black population ratios.

That, said the ACLU, shows the effects of continued discrimination through such devices as:

—At-large elections that can erase voting strength from black housing pockets; —Majority votes instead of plurality votes, which can be used to force black-white runoffs;

—Numbered posts, a requirement that a candidate run for one of several identical posts, coupled with a majority vote rule;

—Gerrymandering and annexations, which can be used to dilute black voting strength.

The record, the ACLU said, demonstrates the importance of the act's key enforcement provision — known as "preclearance" — which expires Aug. 6 unless Congress acts. The ACLU said preclearance should be extended and strengthened.

Preclearance — initially aimed squarely at the Deep South — forbids jurisdictions with records of discrimination from making any voting changes — even changes in polling places — without prior federal approval.

It covers Alabama,

Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi and South Carolina and about half of North Carolina, plus a few localities elsewhere. A 1975 amendment on behalf of minority-language voters added Alaska, Arizona and Texas, plus towns and counties scattered across the nation.

Federal Control Is Asked

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The federal courts should supervise the North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service to make sure it does not discriminate against blacks, federal attorneys say.

That request Friday officially ended the trial portion of a 1971 race discrimination lawsuit filed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture and 54 blacks who work or used to work with the service.

At issue in the case is whether the service took affirmative steps to eliminate the vestiges of racial discrimination stemming from the state's dual agriculture extension service — one for blacks and one for whites — that was officially dismantled in 1965.

U.S. District Judge Franklin T. Dupree Jr. gave no indication when he would rule on the case.

Testimony in the case ended last month. During closing arguments on Friday, government attorneys also asked that the extension service be ordered to pay back wages to black agents who earned less than whites with comparable qualifications.

The attorneys also asked that the court impose specific recruiting goals to increase the number of black employees and that all local 4-H programs be integrated immediately. Witnesses had said that some programs continue to be all black or all white.

Throughout the trial, extension officials have acknowledged that white extension agents traditionally earned more than blacks. But the officials insisted they did not have the power to alter the disparity.

They said that some of an agent's salary is paid by the state, but the rest is paid by counties, which award varying amounts.

The extension officials blamed local racial attitudes for the fact that only six county extension chairmanships have gone to blacks in the last 20 years. They also denied having direct control over 4-H programs, saying membership is voluntary.

The government relied heavily on statistical reports and studies to build its case. On Friday, defense attorneys attacked the government's key evidence — a complex mathematical analysis of extension service salaries.

State's Share Of Military Spending Up

By The Associated Press
Proposed federal budget changes mean North Carolina will receive much less money for social services but more for military construction and the Cape Hatteras Lighthouse, state officials say.

"All we know for sure right now is we're going to lose a lot of money in programs that are already tight," said June Milby, a spokeswoman for the state Department of Human Resources. "We don't have a lot of padding in our budget."

President Reagan has proposed a $757.6 billion federal budget for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1. The budget includes a 17 percent increase in defense spending and major cuts in social programs.

North Carolina is expected to receive some $107 million in fiscal 1983 for military construction work — the seventh highest amount in the nation. The funding is more than twice the amount the state will get this year.

More than a quarter of the construction money will pay for new maintenance facilities at the Marine Corps Air Station at Cherry Point.

Another bonus for the state in Reagan's budget is a $1.2 million recommendation for the National Park Service to stabilize the shoreline around the Cape Hatteras Lighthouse, which is threatened by beach erosion.

The effort to save the lighthouse has inspired a private fund-raising drive and has brought together political rivals Gov. Jim Hunt, a Democrat, and U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C. The project may require $4 million.

The $1.2 million will come with no strings attached and will not have to be matched with any private money, said U.S. Park Service spokesman Jim Howard.

But as the budget picture becomes clearer, many state officials are becoming increasingly worried.

For example, Reagan has proposed reductions in the more than 40 federally funded social programs he wants the states to run by 1984, said assistant state budget officer Jim Piner.

Those reductions will cost the state about $100 million in federal funds in 1983. Piner said the state is expected to lose $121 million in 1982.

The $100 million figure does not include losses in the Medicaid program that might exceed $48 million, said program director Barbara Matula.

Piner said the $100 million figure includes cuts in:

— The Title I program, which provides money to educate the educationally disadvantaged. State education officials say the program could be cut by more than $18 million next school year.

— The school lunch program, vocational education and federal impact aid to school districts with large numbers of military dependents. These cuts, along with the Title I reductions, total more than $34 million and may end more than 3,400 jobs across the state.

— The food stamp and welfare programs. Ms. Milby said these cuts will come at the same time North Carolina is under pressure to reduce its unusually high error rate in the food stamp program or face federal sanctions.

"The state doesn't have the kind of resources to make this money up," Piner said. "If (Reagan's budget proposals) are adopted, we'd have to reduce the state services."

Crow-Eating Time

HOLDREGE, Neb. (AP) — Eating crow may be one way for the people of Holdrege to solve the city's biggest problem.

So radio station KUVR is offering $25 for the best recipe for cooking crow, as a way of getting rid of the pesky birds that have invaded this south-central Nebraska city.

The Mayor of Holdrege estimates that as many as 100,000 crows converge on the city of 5,620 every night. The situation has gotten so bad that the city's health board ordered the crows shot.

More than 2,200 of the crows have been killed by city employees, but the problem still remains.

KUVR insists its contest is "genuine." "What else can we do to rid the city of these feathered beasts?" the station asks.

COLLISION INJURES THREE — Three persons were injured Friday in a collision on U.S. 264 Bypass at rural paved road 1529 (Old Creek Road). Trooper C. R. Taylor said a car driven by Edmond Bistany, which was making a left turn off the bypass, collided with a car driven by Marie Bowen White of 2616 S. Wright Road, Greenville. A passenger in the White vehicle, identified as Mrs. Ressie Pryor, of Route 1, Winterville, was listed in critical condition Saturday and Mrs. White was listed as stable. Bistany was treated and released, according to the officer. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Public Staff Balks At Rates

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Public Staff of the state Utilities Commission has asked the commission to dismiss requests by Duke Power Co. and Carolina Power & Light Co. for fuel-related rate increases.

Duke has requested an increase of $2.49 per 1,000 kilowatt-hours and CP&L has requested an increase of $2.32 per 1,000 kilowatt-hours. The increases would apply on bills from April through July.

The Public Staff represents consumers in rate increase requests before the commission.

Hearings on the rate increase proposal are scheduled for Wednesday in Raleigh.

Reagan Calls For GOP Support

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan urged Republican members of Congress on Saturday to show some election-year bravery and support his budget proposals, warning "there must be no such thing as retreat" on the defense buildup or on taxes.

At the same time, the president signaled his willingness to make room for improvement in his spending plan.

In a letter from his mountaintop retreat at Camp David, Md., to vacationing and campaigning GOP senators and representatives, Reagan called for "courage and endurance, heroism and statesmanship" on the part of those who supported his first round of tax and budget cuts but who are wavering in the wake of his latest plan calling for more domestic spending cuts.

"Where we have honest differences, you can count on me to be a willing listener and a sincere partner," Reagan wrote. "But this is no time for turning back."

Congress has just recessed for its 10-day Washington's Birthday break after members seeking re-election in November, including many administration allies, voiced strong skepticism about the president's latest budget with its record deficits and new program reductions.

White House spokesman Mark Weinberg said Reagan wanted to let the members know at the start of the recess that he remains committed "to push forward on the second phase of his economic recovery program."

"He will not compromise on basic principles," Weinberg said, but the president "is always willing to listen" and is confident that Congress "will come around" to support his budget plan as the members listen to their constituents and study his proposals.

Reagan said he saw again on a whirlwind three-state speech-making trip last week "the commitment and resolve of average citizens from all walks of life — farmers, factory workers, small businessmen and professionals pulling together through difficult times to make our country great again."

Reagan's trip included three public appearances, a GOP fund-raiser and two speeches to state legislators.

At his stops in Minneapolis, Des Moines and Indianapolis,

Reagan said, the people "urged me to hold firm to the course we have charted for recovery... There will always be room for improvement in any budget and any economic policy. Where further savings can be found or a better way of meeting agreed-upon goals can be worked out, I pledge my full cooperation to you, and I want to hear from you."

"But my first and foremost obligation is to keep faith with the American people. When it comes to holding down taxes and insuring a strengthened national defense to protect the peace, there must be no such thing as retreat," he said.

Rephrasing a line he has used repeatedly lately in praising American heroes, Reagan wrote, "There's an old mountaineer saying that heroism is endurance for one moment more. I understand the nervousness that some members of Congress may feel in an election year. The temptation is always strong to go for the easy option, the quick fix that may buy a little time but solves nothing in the long run.

"Well, it was decades of quick fixes and time-buying that landed our country in the economic crisis we are now working to overcome. It will take courage and endurance — heroism and statesmanship — to see us through," he said.

We want you to walk out our door with total confidence. So, if our error causes you to owe additional tax, that's all you'll pay. We'll pay any interest and penalty. At H&R Block, we stand behind our work. And we stand behind you.

Atlanta Jurors Visit Bridge

ATLANTA (AP) — Wayne B. Williams' murder trial jury climbed through brambles and peered into the murky waters of the Chattahoochee River Saturday on a 19-minute visit to the bridge from which prosecutors say he threw the bodies of two young blacks.

Helicopters carrying police officers and reporters clattered overhead as the 12 jurors and four alternates — under judge's orders not to talk during the inspection — walked slowly up and down the two-lane, steel-and-concrete span. One of Williams' lawyer was at the scene but Williams remained in jail. Sheriff's deputies blocked traffic and curious spectators from getting near.

Jurors were given a free run of the quarter-mile-long bridge and spent some of the time climbing through the brambles where members of a police stakeout team were stationed last May, when Williams was stopped near the bridge.

"They're doing a good job.

That indicates they did follow the testimony," said presiding Judge Clarence Cooper of Superior Court, as jurors walked to several of the key positions mentioned during the sensational trial.

Williams has pleaded innocent to murdering Nathaniel Cater, 27, and Jimmy Ray Payne, 21, two of the 28 young blacks slain during a 22-month period here. No arrests have been made in the 26 other cases but prosecutors have introduced evidence they say connects Williams with 10 additional slayings.

The bodies of Cater and Payne were found in the same area of the river about a month apart last spring, and prosecutors contend both were thrown from the same bridge.

The jury, which has been sequestered at a suburban motel since the trial began Dec. 28, was taken to the bridge in a white Fulton County jail bus, its windows covered with iron grillwork.

After receiving instructions from Cooper, jurors filed out of the bus and immediately headed to where the bridge crosses the river. They spent most of their time on the south edge of the bridge, where witnesses testified Williams' car was spotted moving slowly close to the railing.

The jurors walked up and down the bridge while court personnel and the reporters waited at one end.

How Do You Know When It Will Work ...

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Lovers seeking long-lasting marriages should wed when they are older and avoid partners whose parents were divorced, a University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill study shows.

But older women who have weathered a broken marriage may stand a better chance of landing their Valentine's Day targets than those who have never been married, biostatistician Dr. Chirayath M. Suchindran said.

Suchindran, who analyzes the data for a team studying divorce, remarriage and childbearing, explained the study in a telephone interview from his Chapel Hill office.

"A 25-year-old woman who has divorced is almost sure to remarry," he said. "A 25-year-old woman who has never married has a much lower chance of being married."

While the findings may be disheartening to single women on Valentine's Day, divorcees also have their problems.

"For the women who were divorced young, the chance of a second marriage ending in divorce is also much higher," Suchindran said.

Researchers in the project, funded by the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development in Washington, D.C., are analyzing data compiled by the Bureau of Census on marriage and birth patterns in the United States for 1975 and 1980.

Preliminary figures from the study, which is expected to be published later this year, show complex interactions among fertility, divorce and remarriage.

"Childless women have a much higher probability of getting remarried," Suchindran said.

He warned that the effect children might have depends on the circumstances. Women with no children have a greater chance of divorce in first marriages, but a better chance of success in their second match.

Marrying young increases the risk of divorce in all cases, Suchindran said, and a family history of divorce is equally dangerous.

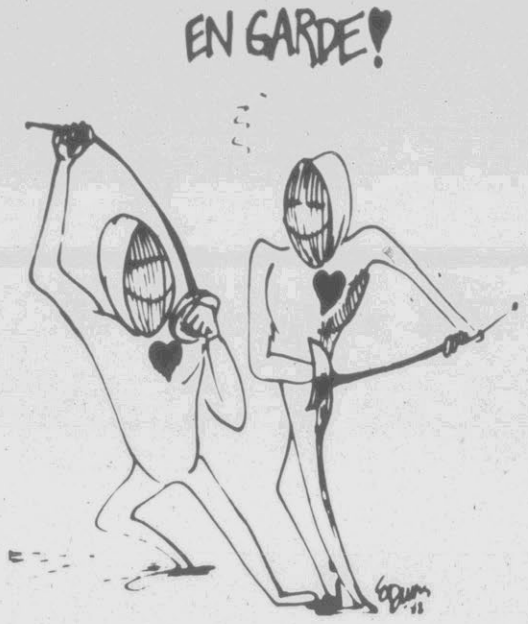

"If their parents were divorced then it is more likely that the child will also be divorced," he said.

Some racial differences in marital patterns also surfaced.

"First marriages among whites generally last about seven years," Suchindran said, while the dissolution rate of second marriages is six years. In addition, a higher proportion of second marriages end in divorce.

"We estimate that 15 years from now, 38 percent of first marriages among whites will end in divorce, with 50 percent of second marriages ending in divorce," Suchindran said.

He said among black couples about 55 percent of first marriages will end in divorce in 15 years, while only 32 percent of second marriages would falter.

Other racial differences tended to influence the figures, Suchindran said.

"Very few blacks get remarried," he said. "That's because many blacks after separating never get divorced. We assume that is for economic reasons."

The study has also shown that among blacks, the presence or absence of children has no influence on their parents' prospects for remarriage.

Many facts in the most recent study substantiate those from a 1979 study compiled by the same research team.

The rate of divorce is still increasing, while the average age of people getting divorced continues to decline, Suchindran said.

"The average age of remarriage in 1977 was 34.2 years for women and 33.6 years for men," he said. "In 1963 it was 31.8 years for women and 37 for men."

Recent evidence shows that nearly two-thirds of all divorces occur among people under 30, Suchindran said, and almost 40 percent of current marriages are remarriages.

Men and women appear to have different strategies when it comes to having children after divorces, he said.

Suchindran said 68 percent of the women who had children in previous marriages and 70 percent of those who were childless will have at least one birth in their second marriage.

"Men tend to bring to bring to remarriage a preference of not becoming a father again," Suchindran added.

Demographers Helen P. Koo and Janet P. Griffith of Research Triangle Institute and Barbara S. Janowitz of the International Fertility Research Program, also in Research Triangle Park, round out the research team.

Army's Marijuana Tests Stalled

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (UPI) — Several thousand urine samples collected for a marijuana detection program at Fort Bragg are piling up because of unexpectedly high costs and a shortage of needed chemicals, Army officials say.

Maj. James C. Mahoney, alcohol and drug control officer at the massive installation, said the Army failed to realize the tests could cost as much as $200 apiece.

Figures provided to UPI earlier this month showed the tests cost about $3 to $8 each. But Mahoney said those estimates did not take into account the costs associated with administering, processing and performing the tests.

The tests were begun Oct. 1 after Department of the Army investigators were told as many as 70 percent to 80 percent of Fort Bragg's enlisted troops might be using marijuana.

The Army is analyzing urine samples for THC, the active ingredient in marijuana. With the tests, the Department of Defense can detect whether a soldier has smoked at least one marijuana cigarette during the previous five days.

Fort Bragg has sent an average of 500 urine samples a week to the test laboratories, but because of the costs involved the Army has ordered only about 50 per week.

"We have to wait a couple of weeks," he said.

The major decline to speculate on the total cost of the marijuana detection program at Fort Bragg, but figures provided by him indicated the tests so far could cost the Army as much as $160,000.

"It's a very very expensive program," Mahoney said. "There is not enough money in the budget to continue the tests."

Sixteen Seamen Rescued From Sinking Tanker

FALMOUTH, England (AP) — Sixteen seamen who clung to the stern of their split tanker for 33 hours in turbulent seas were saved by a Dutch helicopter Saturday. But the British coast guard said it was pointless to continue looking for 15 other sailors and called off the search.

The rescued seamen were winched to safety from a 100-foot chunk of the Greek tanker Victory, which broke up in the stormy North Atlantic about 500 miles north of the Azores.

The body of one sailor was removed from a life raft in the dramatic operation carried out despite waves surging to 30 feet and winds of 70 miles an hour.

The 16 survivors, who had clung to the shattered stern for 33 hours after the 12,487-ton tanker broke up in a storm early Friday, were ferried to two Dutch Navy frigates in the area, the Van Speijk and Callenburgh.

Mike Clouston, senior watch officer at the Falmouth Coast Guard station, said that both frigates were medically equipped but none of the survivors needed medical attention.

They were being taken to the Azores, the nearest land, but were not expected to reach land before Sunday night or Monday morning, Clouston said.

Clouston said the dead man was believed to have been among three sailors who abandoned ship early Saturday after the stern began listing 45 degrees to port.

A search for the 15 missing men was called off at 5 p.m. after 20 life rafts dropped by rescue plans were found to be empty, said Clouston.

He said the men could have survived no longer than five hours in the 55-degree water and the Coast Guard decided it was "pointless" to continue.

The frigates, two Dutch helicopters, two British Nimrod patrol planes, the Liberian-registered chemical tanker Stolt Castle, the Greek tanker Fantasy L and a U.S. C-130 cargo plane took part in the search. The ships had been unable to get close enough to what remained of the Victory because of the rough water.

The Victory was carrying a cargo of molasses from Florida to the English port of Liverpool, and was 840 miles southwest of Lands End, England's southwestern tip, when it broke up.

The British coast guard said the tanker had no other cargo. A spokesman said there was no danger of pollution from a spillage of the ship's fuel supply because of the agitated waters.

Minutes after the tanker broke up at 1:30 a.m. Friday, 12 crewmen abandoned ship and launched a life raft but it was smashed by the gale-whipped waves and capsized, Clouston said.

For the next 24 hours, the rest of the crew clung to every available hold on what was left of the stern, consisting of the bridge superstructure, radio room and flooded engine room.

Rescue officials said the crewmen talked in radio reports of jumping overboard as the stern began to list badly.

Early Saturday, three crewmen decided they had enough, said Clouston, and jumped into the storm-tossed waters, apparently hoping to reach life rafts that had been dropped by rescue aircraft.

After the seas subsided a few hours later, the Dutch frigates sent out two Lynx helicopters, one of which developed engine trouble and was put out of service.

Shuttling 20 miles between the stricken vessel and the frigates, the remaining helicopter winched all the survivors to safety within 90 minutes.

The Victory, owned by the Greek-based Pam Shipping Ltd. and registered in Liberia, was carrying 15 Greeks, seven Pakistanis, six Filipinos, two Hondurans and two Guatemalans, according to the Greek Merchant Marine Ministry.

Pope Celebrates Mass On Nigerian Battlefield

By HUGH MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

ONITSHA, Nigeria (AP) — Preaching "unity, compassion and forgiveness," Pope John Paul II celebrated Mass Saturday on a former battlefield of the Nigerian civil war, the 1967-70 conflict with breakaway Biafra that claimed the lives of 1 million Ibo tribesmen.

On the second day of an eight-day tour of Africa, his first foreign trip since last May's attempt on his life, the pontiff arrived by helicopter at an open field recently cleared from the tropical rain forest.

Radio Nigeria estimated 2 million people were waiting to greet him, though church officials put the number at closer to 1 million.

"God bless all of you," the pope said in the language of the predominantly Roman Catholic Ibo. He was answered by loud cheering from the faithful, many of whom waved yellow-and-white papal flags.

In his sermon, the pontiff called for "unity, compassion and forgiveness" among Nigeria's 90 million people, 30 million of whom are Moslem. Of the nation's 18 million Christians, 5 million to 6 million are Roman Catholic. Many Nigerians practice various forms of spirit and ancestor worship.

John Paul also spoke in favor of family values and against polygamy — a practice still prevalent in Nigeria, even among Roman Catholic men who sometimes take one wife in church and others in traditional rites.

He also attacked the more "modern enemies of the family, the disturbing degradation of some fundamental values — divorce, contraception and abortion — (which) have not spared your country."

But the pope's homily, delivered in English, also pleaded for greater understanding for those who do not have children. Nigerians who die childless often are consigned to separate burial grounds, and a woman's barrenness can be grounds for divorce.

At one point during the Mass, mounted police with whips rode into the throng to control the crowd. There were no injuries, and the crowd that heard John Paul was on the whole a devout one — swelled by a number of local Moslems who were warned over the public address system not to take Holy Communion.

The pope showed no signs of pain or tiredness from the gunshot wounds he suffered May 13th when Turkish Terrorist Mehmet Ali Agca opened fire on him in the Vatican's St. Peter's Square.

Police To Bury White Blacks Defy S. African

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Some 2,000 defiant blacks marched five miles through Johannesburg's wealthy white suburbs Saturday to bury the white man who helped organize their union and was found hanged in a jail cell.

Prime Minister P. W. Botha's security forces made no move to intervene, though the two-hour march was illegal and unprecedented under the white-minority government's strict security laws.

"I am stunned. It's incredible," said Aubrey Aggett, 69, father of 28-year-old Neil Aggett, the first white in detention in a South African jail.

Some of the marchers, walking ahead of the funeral cortege, chanted "Botha is a terrorist!" and tore down election posters for Botha's National Party, which is in the middle of a municipal election campaign in Johannesburg.

Others held up green, gold and black banners of the banned African National Congress, which seeks the overthrow of white-minority rule and has recently stepped up its guerrilla attacks on government facilities.

Still others held up paper cutouts of jail cell bars.

One of the many whites at the funeral was Dr. Hendrik Koornhof, brother of Piet Koornhof, the minister in charge of black affairs. The doctor's daughter, Hanchen, has been detained for five months because of alleged anti-government activity.

The doctor told reporters, "The march was stirring." Asked if he was offended by the ANC banners, he said, "The ANC doesn't put me off. I reject terrorists. Of course, some people see everyone opposed to the government as terrorists."

At the graveside service, people shouted, "Neil Aggett was not a terrorist. Neil Aggett was a hero."

Aggett, a medical doctor, had been Transvaal province secretary of the African Food and Canning Workers Union. He was found hanged in his jail cell in Johannesburg Feb. 4, 70 days after being detained without charge.

The national secretary of the union, Jan Theron, who is also white, told several thousand mourners in St. Mary's Anglican Cathedral in downtown Johannesburg: "They (the police) say it was suicide. We say he was killed."

24th Daytona 500 Gets Green Today

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Darrell Waltrip is the favorite, Benny Parsons the polesitter, Buddy Baker the record-holder and still other challengers wait in the wings, but Richard Petty is the king of the Daytona 500.

red Pontiac Grand Prix, will open the 200-lap show around Daytona International Speedway's 2.5-mile, high-banked oval from the 21st position — the inside of the 11th two-car row.

Only Cale Yarborough, the only other man to win more than one Daytona 500, comes close to Petty at this mecca of stock car racing.

Parsons took the pole for Sunday with a record Daytona qualifying lap of 196.317 mph, while Harry Gant nailed down the other front row spot at 195.609. The rest of the top 30 were selected from the twin 125-mile qualifiers, with Yarborough joined in the second row by Baker, who took the second race.

Byles FTs Help Pirates Slip By UNC-W, 68-66

Arguello Fells Foe In Sixth

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Alexis Arguello, ignoring the chants of a hostile crowd, stunned hometown challenger Bubba Busceme with a thunderous left hook in the sixth round, then followed with a brutal series of punches Saturday to defend his World Boxing Council lightweight championship.

Arguello, 74-4, who scored the 60th knockout of his career, patiently waited his chance through five rounds, trying to decipher the left-handed style of the challenger.

Then, in the sixth, Arguello opened with two good right hands and clearly was going for a knockout.

Kitchel's 33 Leads Indiana Past No. 5 Iowa

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Ted Kitchel put on an awesome display of offense for the second straight game, and the Indiana Hoosiers romped to a 73-58 victory Saturday over fifth-ranked Iowa in a Big Ten Conference basketball game.

Kitchel scored 33 points, including Indiana's first 13 in the second half, then led the Hoosiers on the 14-4 sprint that gave them a 57-44 lead with 9:21 to play.

Then the Indiana defense took over, led by Jim Thomas and freshman Winston Morgan.

The victory avenged a lopsided 62-40 loss at Iowa last week and kept alive Indiana's Big Ten title hopes. The Hoosiers now are 14-7 overall, 8-4 in the conference.

Iowa dropped to 18-3 overall, 10-2 in the Big Ten.

Indiana's 14-4 burst began with five straight points by Kitchel and ended with a layup by Kitchel that put Indiana up by 13. The Hoosiers later stretched that margin to as many as 20 points, 68-48, on a three-point play by Morgan.

The Hoosiers were plagued by foul trouble as junior guard Randy Wittman bowed out with eight minutes to go. Morgan played the last nine minutes of the game with four fouls and center Uwe Blab sat out the final 10 minutes of the game in foul trouble.

But Kitchel, who scored 34 points in Thursday night's victory over Illinois, Morgan and Thomas were able to pick up the slack. Thomas had a pair of steals in a crucial situation, and he also contributed important rebounding punch from his guard position.

Thomas often was assigned to guard 6-foot-11 Iowa center Michael Payne, who led the Hawkeyes with 20 points.

Indiana led by as many as 10 points in the first half, but the Hawkeyes, behind Payne, battled to within 35-31 at halftime. The Hawkeyes, who never led in the game, got as close as one, 35-34, by scoring the first three points of the second half before Kitchel took over.

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Darryl Mitchell brought Minnesota within one point on a rebound basket with 16 seconds to go Saturday, then sank a pair of free throws with one second remaining to lift the ninth-ranked Gophers to a 53-52 Big Ten Conference basketball victory over Purdue.

Mitchell, a 6-foot-5 senior, finished with 18 points as second-place Minnesota pulled within one game of Big Ten leader Iowa, a 73-58 loser at Indiana.

Purdue's Russell Cross had given the Boilermakers a 50-46 lead on two free throws with 1:28 to go. But Minnesota's Jim Petersen hit the first of two foul shots a half-minute later,

Timekeeper Has Heart Attack

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Rufus Dixon, the Purdue basketball timekeeper, suffered a heart attack just after Saturday's 53-52 Big Ten Conference loss to Minnesota. Boiler-maker officials announced.

Medics worked on Dixon at Mackey Arena for about a half-hour before taking him to a Lafayette hospital.

His condition was not immediately known.

Master was the top scorer for Kentucky with 18 points, followed by Derrick Hord with 16, Melvin Turpin with 12 and Chuck Verderber with 11.

Alabama..... 62

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — The 12th-ranked Kentucky Wildcats erupted in the second half and whipped No. 10 Alabama 72-62 in a key Southeastern Conference battle before Saturday.

The victory moved Kentucky ahead of Alabama in the SEC title race. Kentucky now is 10-4 in the conference to Alabama's 9-5, although both teams are 17-5 overall.

Behind the shooting of sophomore guard Jim Master, Kentucky broke loose from a 32-32 halftime tie and outscored the Tide 40-30 in the second half.

Marquette..... 52

Va. Tech..... 51

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Michael Wilson scored 19 points and grabbed a game-saving rebound with six seconds left, leading Marquette to a 52-51 regionally-televised college basketball victory over Virginia Tech Saturday.

Marquette, 17-7, took a 52-47 lead on two free throws by Wilson with 1:57 left, then held off a rally by Virginia Tech. The Gobblers, 15-7, were led by Dale Solomon, with 16 points.

Wilson missed the first free throw in the bonus situation with 49 seconds left and Marquette leading 52-51. Virginia Tech rebounded and called time to plan a potential game-winning shot.

But guard Mickey Hardy missed an 18-footer from the left of the key and Wilson rebounded with six seconds left.

Virginia Tech led 34-31 at halftime. Marquette tied at 38-38 early in the second half, then switched to a zone defense to try to force the taller Gobblers to shoot outside. The Warriors pulled ahead 44-39 on a layup by Brian Nyenhuis.

St. John's..... 68

NEW YORK (AP) — John Pinone scored 23 points and Villanova used a 20-point edge from the free-throw line in the second half to beat St. John's 73-68 in a Big East Conference basketball game Saturday.

The Wildcats outscored the Redmen 21-1 from the foul line after intermission as they moved into a first-place tie with Georgetown in the conference at 8-3.

Ed Pinky added 15 points for Villanova, boosted its overall record to 17-6. Aaron Howard and Dwayne McClain each added 12.

Chris Mullin topped the 24 Redmen, 16-6 and 6-4 in the Big East, with 21 points. David Russell followed with 13 and Billy Goodwin added 10. Villanova connected on 25 of 29 foul shots in the game, while St. John's was only 8 for 9 from the line.

A three-point play by Pinone with 7:02 remaining put the Wildcats ahead for good, 53-52. Villanova opened the lead to as much as nine, 73-64 with 24 seconds on the clock, as Pinone converted four consecutive freethrows.

Spinks Keeps Title With KO

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Michael Spinks retained his World Boxing Association light heavyweight title Saturday, stopping Mustafa Wasajja of Uganda at 1:36 in the sixth round of their scheduled 15-round bout.

Spinks, now 19-0, jolted Wasajja in the fourth and fifth rounds with solid right hooks to the face, creating a welt under his opponent's left eye, before referee Tony Perez halted the bout.

Wasajja, 24-1-1, showed good hand speed and aggressiveness until the sixth. But he had a four-inch reach disadvantage and could not land any blows that appeared to hurt the 6-foot-2 champion.

Wasajja was most effective in the second round as he surprised Spinks by repeatedly hitting his way inside, landing several punches, then quickly moving back out of range. The tactic seemed to offset Spinks' timing. But by the next round, Spinks, also 175, effectively blocked Wasajja's rushes. It was Spinks' second defense of the title he won July 18, 1981, by defeating Eddie Mustafa Muhammed. Spinks, 25, and Wasajja, 28, had never seen each other fight before.

"With a guy with a little punch, you tend to relax a little. It's kind of dangerous to fight a guy like that," Spinks said before the fight with the No. 1 contender.

Ocasio New 190-Pound WBA World Champion

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Ossie Ocasio of Puerto Rico used powerful left jabs and hooks to wear down Robbie Williams of South Africa and win the World Boxing Association's new junior heavyweight title on a 15-round split decision Saturday night.

In the first championship bout since the 190-pound class was created, Ocasio dominated the early rounds, then held off Williams' late rally. Referee Ryoji Yoshida of Japan scored the fight 148-144 for Williams, but the two judges had it 146-144 and 147-143 for Ocasio.

Ocasio, who weighed 188½ pounds, cut Williams under the left eye in the eighth round and worked on his face after that. Williams, who weighed 186½ pounds, could barely see out of his nearly closed left eye by the end of the fight.

About 25,000 fans saw the match at Rand Stadium. The fight was postponed last Saturday because of thunderstorms.

Ocasio was warned several times for low blows, and Williams was warned for hanging onto Ocasio with his left arm.

Williams had been ranked the No. 1 contender in the new weight class and Ocasio No. 2.

The Eastern Carolina Conference (3-A) will crown a tournament champion on Friday night at Farmville Central, as the league begins its annual affair on Monday night.

Greene Central, which tied with North Pitt for the regular season title with 10-2 records, will hold down the number one seed in the tourney. Greene Central and North Pitt split their two regular season games, but Greene Central held a two-point edge in scoring, giving the Rams the title.

The number one seed carries with it a first round bye.

The Southwest Edgecombe girls, who won their third straight title, finished the year 12-0, and will draw a bye in their division as they open defense of their state championship from last year.

The Lady Cougars go into the tournament riding a 54-game winning streak.

Monday night at Farmville, North Pitt's second seeded boys face Charles B. Aycock (0-12), ranked seventh, at 5:30 p.m. That will be followed by a girls' game at 7:15 p.m. between number four seeded Greene Central (6-6) and North Pitt (6-6), seeded fifth. Rounding out the evening, the Southwest Edgecombe boys (6-6), seeded fourth, take on fifth ranked Farmville Central (4-8).

Tuesday, three more games will be played. In the opener at 5:30, Aycock's second seeded girls (10-2) take on number seven Farmville Central (1-11). That will be followed at 7:15 p.m. by Southern Nash's number three boys (9-3) against number six Ayden-Grifton (3-9). The evening will end with the number three Ayden-Grifton girls (6-6) taking on Southern Nash, ranked sixth (1-11).

Southwest Edgecombe's girls face the Greene Central-North Pitt winner at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday, while Greene Central's boys meet the Southwest-Farmville survivor at 8:30 p.m.

The other semifinal games are on Thursday, with the finals on Friday.

Four teams will advance into next week's District Tournament against four from the Coastal Conference. However, it is uncertain at this time which teams that will involve in the girls' bracket due to a three-way tie for third place in the final standings.

D.H. Conley's Vikings and Valkyries, seeded first in both the boys and girls divisions,

This is Conley's first year in the Coastal, having been moved along with North Lenoir, from the Eastern Carolina Conference.

Two games will be held each night, Monday through Friday, with the girls playing at 6 p.m. and the boys at 8.

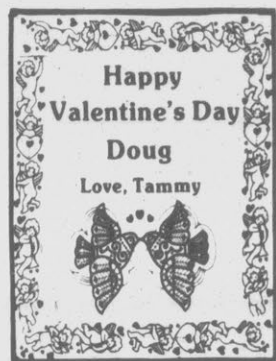

Monday night, the girls' game features number four West Craven (4-6) against Havelock (2-8), the fifth ranked team. The boys' game sends number four North Lenoir (4-6) against number five White Oak (3-7).

Williamston Wins, In League Tourney

AHOSKIE — Vincent Washington and James Maye scored 14 points each and Woody Sadler added 13 Saturday night to lift Williamston to a 66-61 victory over Ahoskie and into the Northeastern Conference tournament.

The victory gives the Tigers the #8 seed in the conference's post-season tournament. Williamston will play top-seeded Roanoke Monday night at 6 o'clock.

Ahoskie, which tied Williamston for eighth place during the regular season, ends the year with the loss. Under the league's tournament format, the ninth place team does not advance to the tournament.

Williamston trailed, 13-12, at the end of the first period but managed to outscore Ahoskie, 17-11, in the second period and take a 29-24 lead at the half.

Ahoskie, however, fought back to regain the lead in the third quarter by outscoring the Tigers, 25-17, to go up, 49-44, going into the final eight minutes of the game.

In those final eight minutes the Tigers outpointed Ahoskie, 22-12, to rally for the win and a chance at the conference tournament.

Ahoskie was led in scoring by Steve Sessoms with 23 points and Anthony Burke with 16 points.

Williamston (66) — Washington 3 8-10 14, Sadler 6 1-5 13, Maye 3 4-14, Horne 2 0-1 4, Thomas 2 2-3 6, Brooks 3 0-1 6, J. Spiller 1 3-4 9, Totals 24 18-30 66.

Islanders Streak By Philadelphia, 8-2

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Bryan Trottier scored five goals Saturday night and tied a National Hockey League record with four in the second period as the streaking New York Islanders routed the Philadelphia Flyers 8-2 for their 11th consecutive victory.

Trottier's five goals matched the Islanders' club record, which he shares with John Tonelli. Mike Bossy, who assisted on each of Trottier's five goals, also tied an NHL mark by earning four assists in the second period.

Trottier's first four goals came with Philadelphia short-handed and set an NHL individual record for most power-play goals in a game.

Brent Sutter got the Islanders rolling at 1:06 of the first period when he fired a shot through the pads of Philadelphia goalie Pete Peeters from the top of the left faceoff circle.

Then Trottier took over. At 9:02, he rapped the rebound of Mike Bossy's shot past Peeters with Philadelphia's Paul Holmgren serving a penalty, giving the Islanders a 2-0 lead after one period.

Trottier made it 3-0 at 1:04 of the second period, stuffing in his own rebound. Ron Flockhart of the Flyers interrupted the hot hand with his 25th goal of the season but Trottier quickly increased New York's lead to 5-1.

The 25-year-old center beat Peeters from just outside the crease as he was falling down at 8:41, and then shoved the puck into a gaping net 29 seconds later after Peeters left the right side open while anticipating a shot from Bossy on the left.

Stacy Retains S&H Lead

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Hollis Stacy, who fired a sizzling 6-under-par 66 in the first round, carded a 1-under 71 Saturday to retain her 1-stroke lead after 36 holes of the $125,000 LPGA S&H Golf Classic.

Stacy's two-round total of 7-under-par 137 places her one shot ahead of defending champion JoAnne Carner and Patty Sheehan heading into Sunday's final round of the 54-hole tournament. The winner will receive $18,750.

Three golfers — Vicki Fergon, Beverly Klass and Chris Johnson — were tied at 139, two shots off Stacy's pace, while Betsy King, Connie Chillemi, Debbie Austin and Jeannette Kerr were at 140.

Kathy Whitworth, Bonnie Lauer and Carole Charbonnier were in contention at 141.

Carner, who won last week's $125,000 Elizabeth Arden Classic, began the day two shots behind Stacy, winner of the Whirlpool Championship of Deer Creek two weeks ago.

Carner fired a 2-under-par 70 Saturday to move a shot closer to the lead while Sheehan, 1981 Rookie of the Year on the LPGA tour, carded a 1-under 71 over the 6,214-yard Pasadena Golf Club course.

Fergon vaulted into contention with a 68, despite a double bogey and bogey.

Stacy wasn't happy with her round and said she'll have to improve Sunday to keep the lead.

"There's no way I can play like I did today and win," she said, adding that she felt lucky to escape with a 71.

"This is always an exciting course to play," said Carner, who lost the Whirlpool tournament to Stacy in a five-hole playoff.

Nancy Lopez-Melton missed the cut for the first time this season after shooting a second-round 74 to push her 36-hole total to 151.

The Vols had to overcome a 31-28 Vanderbilt lead at the intermission.

The defeat dropped Vanderbilt to 5-9 in the conference and 12-10 overall.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Kenny Wilson's layup with 1:04 remaining was the winning basket as Davidson nipped South Carolina 52-51 in college basketball action Saturday night.

It was the ninth time this season in which a Davidson game has been decided by two points or less. The Wildcats have won six of the contests.

North, Levi Tied For Open Lead

HONOLULU (AP) — Andy North, who took a share of the lead with an 18th-hole birdie, looked ahead with professional detachment to Sunday's final round of the $325,000 Hawaiian Open Golf Tournament.

"I'm gonna go out and play the best I can," he said. "The key is to try to shoot the best score you can, regardless. You get what you can get."

And he'd be very happy to get just what he's been getting — another 3-under-par 69. He's had three of them so far, good enough for a 207 total and a tie with fast-starting Wayne Levi for the third round lead.

Masters champ Tom Watson, who twice had a share of the lead before two late bogeys, was two shots back at 209 and took a different view of his prospects.

"I didn't do anything spectacular today," Watson said after a 70. "And it looks like I'll have to do something spectacular tomorrow if I'm going to win the golf tournament. I'll probably have to shoot a 66 or 65 to win, because I'd expect either Andy or Wayne to have a real good score."

North, who has had three lean years since winning the 1978 U.S. Open, spiced his effort with an eagle-3 — his third in two days — and the birdie on the last hole, a birdie that gave him a piece of the lead and took place a few minutes after the national television cameras had ended their coverage for the day.

Levi, 28, a notorious streak player who has won twice in six years on the tour, had a solid, no-bogey 67 in the bright, warm, sunny weather.

Watson was tied, two shots back, with 44-year-old veteran Charles Coody, who hasn't won since taking the 1971 Masters, 21-year-old Bobby Clampett and Scott Simpson.

Coody shot a 68; Clampett and Simpson 70s.

Ben Crenshaw was alone at 210 after a 68.

Arnold Palmer, the National Seniors champion, had a 69 and was 3 under par for the tournament at 213. Bill Rogers, who last year ended Watson's string of Player of the Year titles, was at the same figure after a 68.

North, who had two lean years after his Open triumph, then made a comeback last season, regained his share of the top spot about 10 minutes after television coverage ended.

"I hit a driver for my second shot — got greedy and decided to go for it — and hit it in the bleachers," North said.

He got a drop from the 14th and bogeyed the 16th from a bunker, the only green he missed.

he made eagle-3 for the second time in as many days. He stroked a long iron to about 15 feet and made that putt.

"I'd just like to keep on shooting 69s," he said.

Levi got off to a very fast start, with birdies on three of his first four holes. He two-putted for birdie-4 on the ninth and took the lead alone with a 12-footer on the 10th, then parred in.

"I wasn't really trying to play conservative," he said. "I was just trying to play some smart golf, stay away from mistakes."

Watson took a share of the lead with a two-putt birdie on the par-5 ninth, fell one back when Levi birdied the 10th, regained a share with another two-putt birdie-4 on the 13th, then fell off the pace.

He three-putted for bogey on the 14th and bogeyed the 16th from a bunker, the only green he missed.

"Except for those two bogeys it wasn't a bad round, but I didn't do anything spectacular," he said. "I feel like I left a few shots out there."

Jennette, a 6-6, 252-pounder is a defensive tackle, who helped guide the Belhaven team to the state finals of the 1-A playoffs.

Jennette had narrowed his choices to ECU and N.C. State before making his decision to go with the Pirates.

Waltrip - Is His Driving Style Overly Dangerous?

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — It's truck drivers, not auto racers, who have been known over the years as "knights of the road."

There are some unwritten rules of etiquette, even on a racetrack; but most times it's every man for himself.

Darrell Waltrip has won 39 Grand National stock car races going into Sunday's $927,000 Daytona 500, but success has not changed his aggressive — some say over-aggressive — style.

There are people who think he's simply the best of a new generation of stockers — if not already on the throne, then definitely hovering near the seat of honor that "King" Richard Petty has occupied for nearly 20 years.

Others, while admitting Waltrip is extremely talented, feel his driving style is manic and often dangerous to others.

Incidents involving Waltrip the past two years at Daytona International Speedway, its 2.5-mile, high-banked oval one of the fastest of the NASCAR tracks, are readily used as examples by people expounding on either school of thought about the 35-year-old driver from Franklin, Tenn.

Waltrip, whose sparkling career does not yet include a victory in either of the major Daytona races — the prestigious Daytona 500 or Firecracker 400 — has had a great deal of success in the unique twin 125-mile qualifying races that help fill the 500 field.

A year ago, in winning a record-tying fourth qualifier, Waltrip dived all the way down onto the track apron to pass Benny Parsons coming out of the fourth turn of the last lap.

Parsons, the 1975 Daytona 500 winner and this year's polesitter, but sometimes characterized as too easy going, didn't try to cut Waltrip off or force him to back off. But he said at the time, "We were racing and I gave him some room."

Others weren't so kind to Waltrip, longtime Waltrip nemesis Neil Bonnett saying, "That was just a plain dangerous thing to do."

Then, Thursday, Waltrip finished second to Buddy Baker in a qualifying race in which the last seven laps were run under a caution flag as drizzle fell.

The caution flag was thrown on the 43rd of 50 laps and the leaders began racing for the finish line because the order in which they finish the lap determines the order in which they must stay during the yellow.

"I think we all knew it was going to be the last green flag and we had to race back to the line," said Dale Earnhardt, who suddenly found Waltrip's Buick moving right into his path as the lead pack headed for the third turn.

In television replays, it appeared Waltrip failed to see Earnhardt's Ford Thunderbird and moved right up toward him. Earnhardt braked hard and Bonnett's Thunderbird rammed him from the rear.

Bonnett skidded sideways down the track and a Buick driven by Ron Bouchard, the 1981 Rookie of the Year, plowed into him and also began skidding sideways.

Somehow, Bonnett straightened out his car and went on to finish seventh. Bouchard, doing a masterful job, sidewheeled his car through the third turn like a dirt car and managed to finish 11th.

"Darrell just tried to take a little space that I happened to be in," Earnhardt said. "The move worked for him, didn't it? He finished ahead of me."

"I guess you'd have to say that's racing, but that was a little too close. I doubt if Neil or Ron thought it was a good move on Darrell's part."

Bonnett, who once intentionally rammed Waltrip's car in the pits after a race in which the latter had pushed his way past Bonnett late in the race, nearly putting Bonnett into the wall, was disgusted about Waltrip's latest escapade.

"I thought what Darrell did (Thursday) was see that he was gonna go from second to sixth in a hurry, so he turned right, right into Dale's front bumper."

Outduels Ridley For $142,915 Prize Earnhardt Captures 300

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Dale Earnhardt and Jody Ridley played a strategy battle Saturday, but it was slower traffic that played the biggest part in Earnhardt holding off Ridley to win the $142,915 Goody's 300 late model sportsman race.

Earnhardt and Ridley, both of whom will drive in Sunday's Daytona 500 Grand National stock car race, broke away from the pack and stayed nose-to-tail, with Earnhardt on top, the last 15 laps.

On the last lap, Ridley tried several times to pass Earnhardt, but slower cars cruising along the lower portion of the Daytona International Speedway track kept him from making a real strong run at the leader.

"With about five laps to go, I started thinking about the last lap and what Jody would try to do," said Earnhardt, the 1980 Grand National champion. "I realized I could probably use the traffic if I could time it right."

"At the same time, Jody started backing off a little so he could try to slingshot around me with a head of steam on the last lap. And I was backing off, trying to time the traffic. So we were both backing off."

"But the traffic did come in handy; Jody just didn't have anywhere to go to get around me."

Earnhardt, who didn't win a race of any kind in 1981, moved into the lead on lap 105 after polesitter Mike Porter pitted. The winner collected $14,740, while Ridley got $10,400 for finishing second before a crowd of 75,000.

Sam Ard, who missed his pit three times and tangled with another car when he entered the pits for a fourth time, finished third. He was nearly 30 seconds behind the leaders.

Gary Balough, one of six drivers who battled for the lead throughout much of the race, was fourth. Geoff Bodine, one of eight drivers involved in 31 lead changes, finished fifth.

Earnhardt averaged 154.529 mph in a race that saw six drivers, including sixth-place finisher Harry Gant, run in a tight draft for more than half the race.

Daytona 500 Proving Ground For Drivers — And CBS Crew

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The 1979 Daytona 500 was a classic race, and it happened to be the first one televised live, start to finish, by CBS.

The network could hardly have started its coverage of stock car racing's crown jewel at a better time.

The race was run on a day when the other two major networks chose not to cover anything particularly significant. And much of the nation was housebound because of a major snowstorm that swept out of the Rockies.

When viewers turned on the television, there was the Daytona 500, a fast, furious event that had one of the most spectacular endings in the history of auto racing.

Cale Yarborough and Donnie Allison were dueling for the lead on the final lap when they touched fenders, came together again and then hit a third time, careening up into the wall, then spinning down into the infield.

As those two cars came to rest in the grass just past turn three on the 2½-mile high-banked Daytona International Speedway oval, Richard Petty and Darrell Waltrip sailed by under a full head of steam.

Petty managed to keep Waltrip behind him, crossing the finish line for what was then his sixth Daytona 500 victory, with Waltrip's car nearly touching his back bumper.

Then, as Brock Yates waited to interview Petty in Victory Circle, the scene suddenly switched back to the third turn, where Yarborough and Allison, soon to be joined by his brother Bobby, got into a punching, kicking, helmet-swinging brawl.

"It was a great start, but to tell you the truth, I think we've improved our coverage a great deal," said Neal Pilson, the new president of CBS Sports. "This is a great proving ground for us. We've got the same basic crew that was here that first year, and we're gradually improving each year and adding more equipment."

One new twist to this year's race, which will be televised Sunday beginning at noon EST, is that CBS has farmed out some of the preliminaries. The network, using 14

Panthers Roll Past Chargers

LITTLEFIELD — North Pitt rolled to a 49-29 victory over Ayden-Grifton Friday night, and gained a share of the Eastern Carolina Conference regular season championship with Greene Central.

However, Greene Central's overtime win over Southwest Edgecombe, 53-49, gave the Rams top-seeding in the league's tournament which opens Monday. North Pitt will take the number two spot in the seedings.

Earlier, Ayden-Grifton's girls rolled to a 38-33 win over North Pitt, pulling into a three-way tie for third place. A-G, North Pitt and Greene Central all finished the season with identical 6-6 league records. A drawing was to be held Saturday morning to determine seedings for the tournament for the three.

North Pitt's boys eased out into an 8-4 lead after one period of the slow first half. Ayden-Grifton came back with a 12-8 advantage in the second quarter, tying it up at the half, 16-16.

In the third period, North Pitt regained control, rolling up a 12-4 advantage over the Chargers. That put the Panthers into a 28-20 lead. Then, in the final quarter, North Pitt raced away, 21-9, to wrap up the victory and the share of the title.

Dennis Mitchell led North Pitt with 12 points while Greg Hines and Bradley Cox each had 10. Tyrone Gray led Ayden-Grifton with 12 points.

Ayden-Grifton's girls gained an 11-6 advantage in the first half, but North Pitt fought back in the second with a 12-8 advantage. That left Ayden-Grifton still in the lead, but by only one, 19-18, at intermission.

It stayed tight in the third period as both teams pushed through six pointers for a 25-24 A-G lead. In the final quarter, the Lady Chargers outscored the Pant-HERS, 13-9, to pull away and take the win.

Cora Faison led Ayden-Grifton with 12 points, while Angela Griffin added 11. Gladys Roberson had 10 to pace North Pitt. North Pitt's boys finished the season with a 10-2 league mark and a 15-7 overall record. The girls are 10-10 overall. Ayden-Grifton's boys are 3-9 in conference play and 6-16 overall. The girls are 9-13 overall.

Conley Whips Havelock, 65-53

Vikings Clinch League Title

HAVELOCK — D.H. Conley's Vikings gained a 65-53 victory over Havelock High School Friday night and clinched their initial Coastal Conference basketball championship.

Conley's girls downed

Havelock, 53-44, and claimed no worse than a tie for second place in the final league standings.

The Vikings closed out the regular season with an 8-2 league mark and a 13-8 overall record, while Havelock tumbled to 3-7 in the conference and 7-11 overall.

The Conley girls ended up 8-2 in the league and 18-3 overall. Havelock is 2-8, 4-14.

In the boys' game, Conley jumped out into a 12-8 lead in the first period. A 17-13 advantage in the second quarter ran the lead out to 29-21 by halftime.

In the third quarter, Havelock cut two points off the lead, 20-18, but still trailed, 47-41. Conley outscored the Rams, 18-12, in the final quarter to come away with the victory.

Keith Gatlin led Conley with 26 points, while Sammy Tyson had 19 and Donald Wilson added 10. Havelock was paced by Dino Fisher with 21 while Thomas Frazier had 16.

Conley's girls eased ahead,

8-5, after one period, only to see Havelock break away with a 22-11 margin in the second quarter. That left the Valkyries trailing, 27-19, at the half.

But in the third period, Conley turned the tables, out-hitting the Lady Rams, 19-7, and charged back into the lead, 38-34. Conley then outhit Havelock, 15-10, in the last quarter to wrap it up. Karen Barrett led Conley with 15 points, while Darlene Cannon and Irish Barnhill each added 11. Jeny Bell led Havelock with 19 points.

Both teams will be in action in the league tournament, to be played starting Monday at West Craven. (See elsewhere in the section for pairings.)

DU Sponsors International Wildlife Contest For Teens—Teenagers interested in wildlife conservation are invited to enter Ducks Unlimited's 1982 Great Greenwing Adventure Contest.

Eight contest winners from the United States, plus two from Canada and two from Mexico, will spend a week this summer in Alberta, Canada. They'll capture and band wild geese with DU biologists, perform other conservation tasks, and explore the scenic prairies, mountains and lakes of central Alberta. In addition, each qualified entrant in the contest will receive a handsome, signed and numbered print of "Across the Flats," a mallard scene created by wildlife artist Allen Hughes.

All DU Greenwing members who will be from 14 to 17 years old by June 1, 1982, may compete. Greenwing memberships (for youngsters under 18) cost $5 and include a year's subscription to Ducks Unlimited magazine. Roughly 80 percent of the $5 fee is spent on DU wetland projects. In 45 years, DU has created, preserved and maintained nearly three million acres of precious North American wetlands. These marshes, ponds and lakes provide habitat for 40 mammal species and 224 bird species.

Greenwing members who wish to take a shot at the free trip to Canada must write an essay titled "What I Find Most Fascinating About A Marsh." They should think things over and be creative. They may feel free to send DU any artwork or photographs of their own which will help them express their ideas. That's what the contest judges will be looking for—good ideas. How original are they? How clearly and creatively are they expressed?

Competition will be divided, according to age, into two groups. Entrants who are 14 or 15 as of July 1, 1982, will be judged in the Junior Division. Entrants who are 16 or 17 will compete as Seniors. Four Juniors and four Seniors (one from each waterfowl flyway) will be picked to make the trip. All essays, entry forms, and artwork must be received no later than April 12, 1982.

To receive an official contest entry form, and more information about DU's Greenwing memberships, write: DU Greenwing Program, P.O. Box 66300, Chicago, Ill. 60666-0300.

Southern Nash Sweeps Jaguars

STANHOPE — Southern Nash swept a pair of Eastern Carolina Conference games from Farmville Central Friday night, as the two ended the regular season.

Southern came up with a 58-55 win in the boys game, clinching third place in the standings, while the Southern girls upset Farmville, 62-49, to tie the Lady Jaguars for sixth place in the standings.

Southern's boys finished the year at 9-3 in the conference and is 14-8 overall. The Firebirds will face Ayden-Grifton in the tourney's first round. Farmville, 4-8, 9-13, ends up in fifth place and faces Southwest Edgecombe.

The Southern girls, by virtue of the size of their win, moves into sixth seeding and will meet the third place finisher.

Southern is 1-11, 3-16. Farmville's girls, in seventh, are 1-11, 3-17, and meet Charles B. Aycock.

The Firebirds rolled up a 16-10 lead in the first period of the boys' game, but Farmville stayed close with a 14-13 margin in the second. That left Southern in the lead, 29-24, at halftime.

Southern inched away in the third period, 15-13, and held a 44-37 lead as the last quarter opened. In that, Farmville again rallied, 18-14, but fell short of catching up.

Jeff Lucas led Southern with 12 points, while Terry Best, Frankie Toney and Ricky Battle each had 11 and Terry Battle hit 10. Farmville was led by Andrew Edwards with 13, while Melvin Sutton added 11.

Southern's girls gained an 11-8 lead after one period, then streaked away, 23-14, in the second. That built up a 34-22 halftime lead.

Southern again outscored Farmville, 17-16, in the third, running the lead to 51-38. Both teams pushed in 11 points in the final quarter.

Southern was led by Melissa Morgan with 22, while Nan Lewis had 18 and Cynthia Brown added 12. Farmville, which was missing leader Rose Lang, out with an ankle injury, was led by Rhoda Harris with 16.

Bear Grass Girls Upset Jamesville By 43-40

JAMESVILLE — Phil Peele scored 17 points to spark Bear Grass to a 43-38 victory over Jamesville Friday night in a Northeastern Conference basketball game.

The game was the regular season finale for both teams. The Bears finish the regular season at 3-13 in the conference and 5-14 overall. The Bullets end up 3-13 and 4-16.

In the girls' game, Bear Grass used 21 points from Angie Mizelle to upset Jamesville, 43-40.

The Bears moved out to a 14-6 lead in the first eight minutes but then scored only two points in the second period.

The Bullets, meanwhile, managed 12 points to take a 18-16 lead at the half.

It was a lead short-lived, however. The Bears outscored the Bullets, 16-10, in the third period to go up, 32-28, and then held off Jamesville down the stretch to win by five.

Joining Peele in double figures for the Bears was Marvin Brown with 10 points. Jamesville was led in scoring by Kenneth Moore with 12 points and Rex Bell with 10.

The girls game was close at the beginning and then saw Jamesville take command only to have Bear Grass rally and win.

The first quarter ended with the two teams tied at 12-12. Jamesville then outscored the Lady Bears, 16-8, in the second period to take a 28-20 lead at intermission.

In the second half, however, the Lady Bears held Jamesville to just 12 points to claim the win.

Bear Grass inched back to within two (34-32) at the end of the third quarter and then took the lead early in the final period and held it the rest of the way for the three-point victory.

Mary Rawls had 12 points for Bear Grass. Jamesville was led by Kim Floyd with 26 points.

Staub Becomes Player-Coach

NEW YORK (AP) — Rusty Staub will go into his 20th major league season in a new role of player-coach. The red-haired slugger, whose efforts last year were mainly as a pinch hitter, insisted, though, that becoming a parttime coach did not mean he was willing to see less time as a player.

"It's not going to take away from my desire to be on the field," said Staub, who will be 38 on April 1. "I am looking forward to putting in as much time on the field as possible."

Staub acquired the additional title as coach Friday with his main task to assist newly named hitting instructor Jim Frey. Mets General Manager Frank Cashen said Staub also will perform other coaching duties assigned by Manager George Bamberger and will work with the National League club's instructional program next fall in St. Petersburg, Fla.

"I consider Rusty to be one of the pure and smartest hitters in baseball," said Cashen, who announced Staub's new duties at a news conference at the player's Manhattan restaurant.

Month-Old Injury Halts Heavy Work By Gerry Cooney

KIAMESHA LAKE, N.Y. (AP) — Heavyweight contender Gerry Cooney was told Saturday to suspend sparring and bagwork because of the lingering effects of a month-old shoulder injury, but a spokesman said his World Boxing Council title fight against champion Larry Holmes still was on for next month.

"There has been no change in the fight. The March 15th date is still on," Rich Rose, the spokesman, said at Cooney's Concord Hotel training camp. The fight is scheduled for Caesars Palace in Las Vegas, with a purse which could go as high as $10 million for each fighter.

Rose said Dr. Jeffrey Minkoff, Cooney's physician, had ordered the Huntington, N.Y., heavyweight to suspend all training involving his left shoulder because the fighter was in "obvious pain." This includes sparring and workouts on the heavy bag and speed bag, Rose said.

Cooney will continue running to stay in shape, the spokesman continued. He said Minkoff wanted to run more tests on Cooney's shoulder and had given no time frame for the suspension of training.

Neither Cooney nor either of his managers, Dennis Rappaport and Mike Jones, was available for comment.

Holmes, in Las Vegas where he is training, said that the Cooney camp was trying to con him.

The champion said that, when he talked with co-promoter Don King two days, King told him the fight definitely was on.

"Right now, I'm going to pick up my wife at the airport. And then I'm going to go train," Holmes said.

King and co-promoter Sam Glass also were unavailable.

Through Rose, Minkoff issued the following statement: "While observing Gerry's workout (Saturday), I noticed he was in obvious pain. It's the left shoulder and it gives me cause for concern.

"I am suspending that portion of Gerry's workouts which require the use of the shoulder. He will continue to maintain complete cardiovascular fitness. I plan more tests for Gerry this week."

Cooney suffered the shoulder injury — described at the time as a slightly torn muscle but now identified by his handlers as a pulled muscle — Jan. 11 while preparing for an exhibition bout against Joe Bugner. That Jan. 22 show was canceled and Cooney spent 2-3 weeks of training without taking any sparring or bag practice. He continued to run and

Last week, Cooney resumed sparring, and had gone five rounds as recently as Thursday. He sparred again Friday but had not gone into the ring when Minkoff examined him Saturday.

Daytona Set To Run...

"There's no question that Terry has a lot of talent," Yarborough said after barely holding off Labonte to win the Thursday race. "He's smart, he's got a good car and he's capable of winning any race."

As for Waltrip, the 35-year-old veteran has won 39 Grand National races — none of them at Daytona.

"I guess you'd have to say I was due," Waltrip said. "If Richard doesn't win his private race again, maybe it'll be my turn."

Bobby Allison, who won here in 1978 and was second to Waltrip in the 1981 point race, changed teams this year. He moved from the Harry Ranier Team — which now has Parsons in the driver's seat — to the DiGard Team.

He will start on the inside of the fourth row, alongside Joe Ruttman.

The dangerous pair of A.J. Foyt and Dale Earnhardt, both trying for comebacks, round out the top 10.

Foyt, 47 and the 1972 Daytona 500 winner, is coming back from major injuries suffered in an Indy car race last July.

Earnhardt, 29, failed to win a pole or a race during the 1981 season after winning the Winston Cup title the previous year.

The Petty colors also will be represented by 21-year-old Kyle, who will start 12th in the race as he opens his second full season on the Grand National circuit.

His best previous NASCAR finish is fifth, but a victory by the youngster would give the Petty family its third generation of Daytona 500 winners, since Grandpa Lee won the inaugural race in 1959.

Also lurking back in the field is Neil Bonnett, a man who never has won the 500 but always is a threat by virtue of his ride in the Ford Thunderbird prepared by the famed Wood Brothers Team.

Actually, the Fords are considered to be something of a disadvantage this year because of a less aerodynamic front end and an apparent shortage of horsepower. Parsons is driving the only Pontiac LeMans in the race, but most of the other drivers will be piloting the Buick Regals that dominated the circuit a year ago.

"It should be one of the most competitive races anybody has ever seen in Grand National racing," Waltrip said.

Cummings Is Unstoppable As Demons Whip Loyola

By The Associated Press
Gene Sullivan had a game plan...but it didn't include how to stop Terry Cummings.

"In my book," said the coach of the Loyola (Ill.) basketball team, "there is nobody who can stop him."

The "unstoppable" DePaul center virtually had his way with Sullivan's team Friday night, scoring 33 points and grabbing 19 rebounds to lead the third-ranked Blue Demons to a 98-80 victory over Loyola.

"Terry Cummings is probably the hungriest player in the country right now," said Sullivan. "We figured we could beat them if we held Cummings to 20 or 25 points, but there was no way."

Cummings scored his game-high point total despite a nine-minute drought at the beginning of the second half.

"This year it is a different Cummings and a different DePaul team," said Sullivan, referring directly to the absence of 1981 star Mark Aguirre. "They play much more intensely. When Cummings took charge, he just destroyed us."

While DePaul Coach Ray Meyer might have been happy with Cummings' performance and his team's 22nd victory 23 games, he wasn't too happy with the officials, who hit the Blue Demons with 17 traveling calls.

"It was like Disneyland out there," said Meyer, who was furious enough to pick up what he said was only the third technical foul of his 40-year coaching career. "I thought, 'What the heck, I've got nothing to lose.'" Meyer said of the technical. "I felt like the team needed something to shake it up."

In the only other games involving ranked teams Friday night, No. 13 Idaho defeated Weber State 71-62 and California upset No. 19 Washington 54-50.

Top Twenty
Ken Owens' 25 points powered Idaho over Weber State. The victory — only Idaho's second in Ogden since the two teams began playing in 1963-64 — moved the Vandals to a league-leading 9-1 record in the Big Sky Conference. Idaho is 20-2 overall.

Michael Chavez had 20 points and California outscored Pacific-10 Conference leader Washington 8-1 in the last 3 1/2 minutes to upset the Huskies.

Unranked Teams
Reserve forward Darren Daye scored 10 straight points in a 2:34 stretch of the second half and finished with 18 to spark UCLA over Arizona 88-73; Larry Anderson connected on a 25-foot jumper with one second left to give Nevada-Las Vegas a 52-50 victory over Brigham Young; Guy Williams scored 13 points and grabbed 13 rebounds to lead Washington State to a 62-54 victory over Stanford; Eric Bailey scored 21 points as Boise State nipped Idaho State 71-68 in overtime and Orlando Phillips scored 18 points to pace Pepperdine over Gonzaga 73-59.

World Marks Fall In Wanamaker Millrose Games

NEW YORK (AP) — Mary Decker almost didn't make it onto the track. Candy Young wasn't sure she wanted to be on it. When both got finished at Madison Square Garden, however, they'd set world bests.

Decker, who set two indoor bests last week in Los Angeles, had trouble with a Wanamaker Millrose Games official Friday night before finally getting to the starting line for the women's mile run. Just 4:21.47 after the gun, she crossed the finish line to establish a world mark for the distance in the 75th edition of the meet.

Young, meanwhile, wanted to withdraw from the event when she learned on Wednesday that her best friend's sister had died. But Young, urged to compete by the friend, ran to a world best of 7.38 seconds in the 60-yard hurdles, finishing in a dead heat with Stephanie Hightower.

Decker's run-in with the official came just prior to the start of the mile.

"I was real upset because he nearly threw me out of the building," said Decker, who set marks in the 2,000 and 3,000-meter last week. "People around him told him who I was, but he said, 'I don't care,' and he pushed me."

"He said, 'What's your business here, anyway? You're not getting on the track.' I had to go around a fence (stanchion) to get on the track."

Once she was safely on the track, the 23-year-old Decker ran away from the field, with the 18,293 fans screaming support. She passed 1,500 meters in 4:03.6, then erased the previous best mile time — which she set on Jan. 22 in Los Angeles — by more than three seconds.

"It wasn't a surprise because it was what I was after," said Decker, who had missed the entire 1981 indoor season because of injuries. "I'm excited but I'd like to get it below 4:20."

"The crowd was so supportive to me, the last two or three laps it made me a little stronger. If no one was in the stands, I wouldn't have felt that extra adrenalin. They're reward is to see a good, fast time. I make the other people feel well by running well."

Earlier this week, Young didn't feel like running at all. The sophomore at Fairleigh Dickinson University was heartbroken over the death of her friend's sister.

"I gave a lot of thought to not running," said Young, who originally was announced the winner — further viewing of the tapes made the officials decide the race was a dead heat. "I wanted to go home, but she wanted me to run. She told me not to worry about her or her family. She told me, 'If you don't want to stay for yourself, do it for me.'"

Young, who shared the indoor best with Hightower at 7.47, appeared to be miffed at the decision to call the race a tie. But she credited Hightower with helping her lower the record.

"When I get together with Stephanie, it seems we're able to lower to it," she said. "We push each other to it. I don't think I could do it without her."

The biggest upset of the night came in the men's 5,000 when Doug Padilla erased the American mark with a time of 13:20.55. Padilla's clocking just missed the world indoor best of 13:20.4, set by Suleiman Nyambui of Tanzania in the Millrose Games last year. It also broke the American mark of 13:22.6 set by 1981 Millrose runner-up Alberto Salazar, who was fourth Friday. Salazar, reportedly suffering from tendonitis, edged Nyambui, who was fifth.

"I was just trying to hang on," said Padilla, formerly a competitor for Brigham Young University. "I was out in Lane 2 and I didn't want to be there."

"My strategy was to stay with Alberto. I knew he'd push it. Being ahead of Salazar made me run faster."

Madison Square Garden and Millrose marks were broken by Chandra Cheeseborough with a 6.61 in the women's 60-yard dash; Carl Lewis at 27 feet, 3/4 inches in the long jump; Bert Cameron with a 47.20 in the men's 400 meters; Renaldo Nehemiah, at 6.84 in the 60-yard high hurdles, and Earl Bell with a pole vault of 18-6 1/2.

Guyana's June Griffith took the women's 400 meters in an American all-comers 11-lap record of 52.88 seconds; James Robinson established another American 11-lap indoor mark in the 800 meters in 1:47.51; Don Paige broke the Millrose record by 10 seconds in the meet's first 10,000-meter race since 1933 with a 2:20.42; Delisa Walton took the women's 800 in a meet record 2:04.07; Stanley Floyd was first in the men's 60 in 6.10; Steve Scott won a sluggish mile in 3:55.37, edging out Tom Byers; Stanley Redwine captured the 500 in 56.29 and Debbie Brill won the women's high jump at 6-4.

Earl Bell's pole vault of 18-6 1/2 was two inches higher than indoor world record-holder Billy Olson managed. In the high jump, which closed out the meet and went past midnight, Milt Goode and Dwight Stiles each cleared 7-7. Goode was declared the winner on fewer misses.

To The Editor:

It is with no intentional disregard of the other athletic teams in our area that I wish to extol the excellent qualities of the Lady Pirate basketball organization.

No other athletic event in our community is as exciting or as rewarding to the fans as a Lady Pirate game.

I would emphasize the word "community," because to look into the stands you would see the local denizens from all walks of life, senior citizens, families, and the ECU students. Each and every one is supporting a winner!

In these days of such high inflation, there is no doubt that you can get more for your money by watching and cheering those "Rats" on to victory!

Northeastern Tournament Set To Start

The Northeastern 3-A Conference opens tournament play Monday night with three games at Williamston High School.

The tournament will wind up on Friday with the championship games for both the boys and girls. The top four teams in the tournament will advance to next week's District Tournament against the Rocky River Conference's top four teams, at a site still to be named.

Actually, a preliminary to the tournament was to be played Saturday night. With nine teams in the league, the last two places were to be decided between Ahoskie and Williamston in the boys' division, and between Bertie and Ahoskie in the girls' division. Winners there advance into the number eight spot in the bracket.

Monday night, at 5 p.m., top-seeded Plymouth (13-3) takes on the survivor of the Bertie-Ahoskie game (2-14) in a girls' contest. That will be followed at 6:30 p.m. by a boys' game pitting top ranked Roanoke (13-3) against the Ahoskie-Williamston survivor (2-14). Winding up the evening is a girls game between number two Roanoke (12-4) and number seven Roanoke Rapids (4-12).

Tuesday night gets underway with a 5 p.m. boys game between number two Bertie (10-6) and number seven Roanoke Rapids (8-8). A girls' game follows at 6:30 between Williamston (12-4), seeded third and Washington (5-11), number six. Rounding out the evening is a boys' game at 8 p.m. between Washington (10-6), seeded third, and Tarboro (9-7), ranked sixth.

Wednesday night — and for the rest of the week — only two games will be played. At 6:30 p.m. in the girls' bracket, Edenton, ranked fourth (11-5), takes on number five Tarboro (10-6). At 8 p.m. in the boys' bracket, number four Edenton (9-7) meets number five Plymouth (9-7).

Semifinal upper bracket games for boys and girls are scheduled on Thursday, with lower bracket semifinals on Friday. The finals will be played on Saturday.

Tobacco Belt Pairings Set

The Tobacco Belt Conference (1-A) will open play on four fronts Tuesday and Wednesday as it seeks its tournament champion. Tuesday night, the top four seeded teams in the girls' bracket will play host to the lower four teams, starting at 7 p.m. Wednesday night, the same format will be followed by the boys teams.

Columbia's girls, which finished the season 0-15, did not qualify for the tournament. Bear Grass' boys which ended up in a three-way tie for seventh with Jamesville and Creswell, all at 3-13, were eliminated by a coaches' vote held earlier in the week.

Tuesday night in girls' play, top-seeded Belhaven (15-1) takes on number eight Aurora (4-12), while Bath, ranked fourth at 10-6, hosts Bear Grass (8-8) in the same bracket. The winners meet Thursday at 7 p.m.

In the lower bracket, number two Chocowinity (14-2) takes on number seven Mat-tamuskeet (5-11), while Jamesville (11-5) entertains Creswell (5-11). Those winners meet Friday at 7 p.m.

Wednesday night, in the boys' upper bracket, Chocowinity, ranked number one (15-1) takes on Jamesville (3-13), while number four Columbia (9-7) hosts Bath (7-9). The winners meet Thursday at 8:30 p.m.

In the other bracket, Mat-tamuskeet, number three (11-5) entertains Aurora (6-10), while Belhaven, number two (15-1) hosts Creswell (3-13). The winners there meet Friday at 8:30 p.m.

The championships of the boys and girls will be held on Saturday night.

All games after the first round (Tuesday and Wednesday) will be played at Washington High School.

The top seven teams in the conference, along with Cape Hatteras, advance into the district tournament next week.

LEVEL DECLINED

The level of business activity in North Carolina declined in December, registering 153.3 or 0.4 percent below the November level, according to the Wachovia Business Index. Employment losses in both manufacturing and non-manufacturing industries and a shorter manufacturing workweek contributed to the decrease in the Index, it was reported. Price-adjusted average hourly earnings for manufacturing employees remained unchanged from November.

Manufacturing employment declined 1.0 percent while employment was down marginally in the non-manufacturing sector.

The seasonally adjusted unemployment rate for the state was 6.9 percent in December, up 0.3 percent from November.

DECLARED DIVIDEND

The board of directors of Eaton Corp. declared a regular quarterly dividend of 43 cents per share on outstanding common stock. It was the 248th dividend on common shares of Eaton, which has paid dividends annually since 1923, it said.

Directors also declared regular quarterly dividends of 29.6875 cents per 4.75 percent cumulative convertible preferred share, and 57.5 percent per serial preferred share, series A.

All dividends will be payable Feb. 25 to shareholders of record Feb. 8.

Tight Supplies Boost Prices

By PAULINE JELINEK
AP Business Writer

Coffee futures prices rose Friday amid continuing talk of tight supplies, analysts said.

On the Coffee Sugar Cocoa Exchange in New York, prices were 1 cent lower to 2.16 cents higher, with only the March contract falling. It settled at 158.68 cents a pound.

Analysts said as coffee bean roasters encounter dwindling supplies in the cash market, they have been turning to the futures market.

Contributing to the near term decline in supplies is the fact that producing countries have already contracted to sell all that they are allowed to this quarter under the International Cocoa Organization export quota system.

"The export control system has reduced the coffee on the market," said Pamela Rockley, director of New York research with A.G. Becker.

Orange juice prices continued a decline sparked by Wednesday's U.S. Agriculture Department report showing less than expected damage was done to Florida's orange crops by the freeze last month.

Miss Rockley noted that although there is a 16 percent production loss projected by the government, Brazilian juice available for import is expected to insure ample supplies. At the same time, consumer demand is expected to suffer somewhat because of higher prices recently.

The March-delivery contract for frozen concentrate orange juice on the New York Cotton Exchange fell 1.70

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — U.S. Ambassador Deane R. Hinton said Saturday that an American lieutenant colonel has been relieved of his duties here and will be sent home for carrying an M-16 rifle in the field in violation of standing orders.

In another development, Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., on a two-day fact-finding tour, said he was dissatisfied with information provided by Salvador's defense minister. He said he and Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., had received a "canned presentation" of the situation here, where leftist guerrillas are battling to overthrow the U.S.-backed government.

Hinton told a news conference that junior officers and other military advisers who also violated the regulation have been given an oral reprimand.

The incident caused controversy in Washington. President Reagan on Friday asked for a report, but said it was "understandable" the men were carrying the rifles.

Lt. Col. Harry Melander, a warrant officer and five men were part of a U.S. military team advising the Salvadoran armed forces on building a temporary bridge to replace one blown up earlier by leftist guerrillas.

Hinton did not say how many men beside Melander had violated the weapons rule.

Melander, described by embassy sources as an Army logistics and training specialist, was a supervising officer of the group working in southeastern Usulután Province, a guerrilla stronghold where heavy fighting between the leftist insurgents and the Salvadoran army is taking place.

He has been in the country less than six months on a one-year assignment, U.S. officials said.

The embassy sources refused to identify the men who received reprimands.

Some of the men were filmed by Cable News Network carrying M-16 rifles. U.S. military advisers in El Salvador are forbidden to engage in combat or carry anything more than sidearms for their personal protection.

They are allowed to keep M-16 rifles in their quarters, but have instructions not to take them out with them on the job.

Asked why the men were carrying M-16s, Hinton said: "I wish I knew. I wish it hadn't happened this way. They wish it hadn't happened this way."

"I completed an investigation yesterday," he said. "We looked into the circumstances. I issued instructions that the senior American officer involved was to leave El Salvador in a week, and that the junior officer and men who committed this violation ... have been given firm oral reprimands."

He said "not all the officers and men in that group" violated the orders.

Reagan told reporters in Washington on Friday that "The only thing I can assume is they were for personal protection and I think that's understandable. I'm asking for a full report and we'll have one from the Defense Department."

"The policy is," Reagan added, "that they do not engage in combat, nor were these gentlemen, as far as has been indicated, doing that at all."

Leahy told reporters Saturday that he had gotten on "very badly" with Defense Minister Gen. Jose Guillermo Garcia during a meeting Friday and that they had a "bit of an argument."

"I do not like coming all this way for a canned presentation on videotape that makes me think of the old training films they used to hand out to district attorneys so we'd know how dangerous marijuana was," he said.

Leahy and Pell are members of the Foreign Relations Committee.

In Washington another member of the committee, Sen. Larry Pressler, said Saturday that Reagan should make a major television address to explain the administration's policy towards El Salvador because, he said, it appears the United States is on the verge of getting involved militarily.

Five Guardsmen Indicted

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — A judge indicted five former National Guardsmen Saturday for the slaying of three American nuns and a lay worker. A sixth suspect was freed to testify against the others, court officials said.

Judge Bernardo Garcia Murcia, who has been gathering evidence in the case since the suspects were arraigned Wednesday, was to file his official ruling in San Salvador later in the day, his secretary Anibal Jimenez said.

Jimenez said Garcia Murcia telephoned him early Saturday in the court in the eastern city of Zacatecoluca, near where the Americans were killed Dec. 2, 1980, to announce he had indicted five of the Guardsmen and freed the sixth.

A higher court judge must review Garcia Murcia's ruling and certify whether or not there is sufficient evidence for a trial, which could take as long as a year. The five could face firing squads or 30-year prison terms if convicted.

The suspects indicted were identified as former Sgt. Luis Antonio Colindres Aleman and former privates Francisco Orlando Contreras Recinos, Jose Roberto Canjura Moreno, Carlos Joaquin Contrera Palacio and Daniel Canales Ramos.

Court sources said Contreras Palacios confessed to taking part in the execution-style killings of the women. The other five have said they are innocent.

Ordered freed was Salvador Rivera Franco, a witness to parts of the crime who has agreed to help prosecutors, court sources said. Salvadoran law bars defendants in a crime from testifying against other defendants.

Colindres, Contreras Recino, Canjura Moreno and Canales Ramos have been detained since last April 29 while Contreras Palacios was arrested two weeks ago. Rivera Franco was arrested Tuesday.

The victims were Maryknoll Sisters Ita Ford, 40, and Maura Clarke, 46, both of the New York City area, Ursuline Sister Dorothy Kazel, 40, of Cleveland, and Ursuline lay worker Jean Donovan, 27, of Stamford, Conn.

Green Cross Sends Volunteer Humanitarians To Salvadoran War

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — They are street-wise humanitarians treading a perilous middle road through the carnage of civil war, the saviors of El Salvador's sick and wounded refugees.

Although eyed suspiciously by government forces and leftist rebels alike, the Salvadoran Green Cross keeps rushing its jump-suited volunteers to this Central American nation's battle zones.

Few other Salvadorans experience the difficulty of staying neutral in the conflict more acutely than the 1,700 young men and women who work in the Green Cross' 36 field offices and ride in its 27 ambulances.

"We are caught between the sword and the canyon," said Jose Eliseo Franco, 35, a director of El Salvador's most active relief agency. Like other men of military age, he was asked by both sides to fight in a war that has killed an estimated 32,000 of his five million countrymen. He told them both: "I wasn't born for this."

The Green Cross is a non-political, non-sectarian international agency founded in France. It has no ties to Caritas, the Roman Catholic relief agency in El Salvador, but does deliver aid supplied by Caritas to outlying towns. There are about 200,000 displaced people in El Salvador, 33,000 of them cared for by Green Cross.

Franco has been developing a plan to use new ambulances and two-way radios to evacuate wounded civilians trapped by the hostilities that have raged the past 2½ years.

But there are obstacles.

Green Cross volunteers are far outnumbered by the ruling junta's 20,000 troops and the estimated 5,000 guerrillas, both of whom kill unarmed civilians suspected of supporting the other side. They kill civilians more often than they kill each other.

Five Green Cross workers are among the dead, and 18 others have been interrogated by both sides, Franco said.

The United States arms the junta and, according to Washington, the Soviet bloc aids the guerrillas.

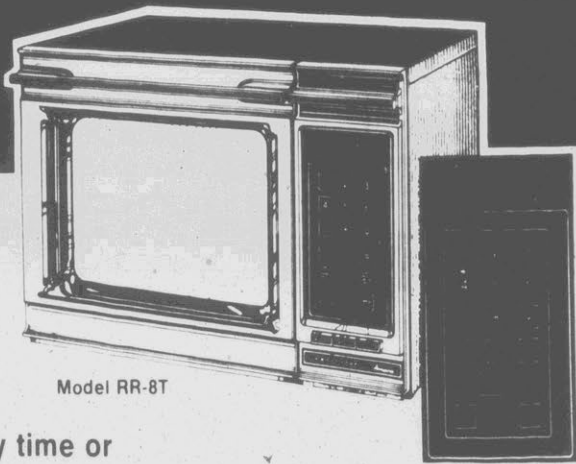

Meanwhile, the Green Cross has run out of medicine while waiting for the junta to allow it to use medical supplies and radios donated from other countries.

Government officials contacted by The Associated Press could not explain the four-month delay in paperwork that normally is completed in four weeks. But Western diplomats said the delay isn't surprising because the army suspects the Green Cross of sympathizing with leftists.

"The war has challenged those in our generation who want to serve the country in a practical way," said Luis Enrique Franco, 25-year-old brother of Jose Franco. Six members of the Franco family are Green Cross paramedics.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Some women married sentimentality.

Every Valentine's Day these women get $1.50 card at their plate with a heart on it, and a present expensive enough to be called in on the charge card.

I married gusto. On the birth of our first child, my husband leaned over, punched me on the arm and said, "Way to go, kid."

If you're going to live with gusto, you have to look for the little expressions of love that come each day. The following is a Valentine message for such a man. If you are a gusto husband, clip it out, mount it on a lacy doily and kiss your wife when you give it to her. It might save your marriage for another 15 minutes.

LOVE

Love is climbing out of a warm bed at night and checking to see if all the doors are locked when you think you hear something.

Love is giving you the pizza with the two slices of pepperoni on it when I love pepperoni.

Love is acting excited over a $72 needlepoint canvas you bought when we both know you haven't finished the quilt, the pillow top, the kitchen curtains and the latch hook rug.

Love is being mad at the kids at the same time you're mad at them.

Love is moving the car seat up as far as it will go when I get out, so you don't have to do it.

Love is painting a room together and letting you have the roller once in awhile while I do the window panes.

Love is never remembering what birthday you're celebrating.

Love is learning how to make coffee and where the cups are.

Love is pretending to be jealous of your old boyfriend who became a priest.

Love is never going on a diet when you're 'at.

Love is giving you the women's section of the paper to read first when the sports section is in the same one.

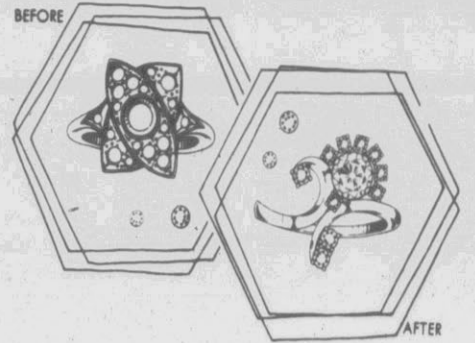

Love is refraining from telling you how the thermostat works.

Love is a lot of little things that add up to caring. It doesn't always add up to three little words. Sometimes, it adds up to six: I got your tank filled today. Happy Valentine's Day!

Woods Used In Furniture

"Quality, availability and cost usually determine how various woods are used in making furniture," says Glenda Herman, extension housing specialist at North Carolina State University.

Botanically, she explains, woods are classified as either hard or soft. And it is important to understand the difference when furniture shopping.

"Hardwood trees have broad, flat leaves that fall off in winter," the specialist explains. "They have a natural beauty of grain that makes them desirable for fine quality furniture."

As a group, hardwoods are stronger and less likely to dent than the soft woods. They also hold screws more securely. Popular hardwoods for furniture construction are: walnut, mahogany, birch, cherry, maple, gum, pecan and oak.

Soft wood trees have needles or scale-like leaves. Dr. Herman notes, and they stay green all year. Frequently-used softwoods are redwood, pine, cypress and cedar.

Sewing Can Express Creativity

Sewing is a means of expressing creativity and saving money.

But deciding when sewing is a saving can be difficult, says extension clothing specialist Judith Mock at North Carolina State University.

"Money, time, skills and supplies all count," Miss Mock says.

The first step is to compare the cost of a piece of ready-to-wear clothing with a similar fabric, pattern and notions.

"Research indicates that people feel that they save from 33 to 75 percent of the cost of ready-to-wear by making their clothes," Miss Mock says.

But, she adds, a good sale can often bring the price of ready-to-wear down below the sewing cost.

To put time spent on sewing into perspective, figure how long it will take to make the garment and multiply that by minimum wage, at least. Add this amount to the cost of materials and see if sewing still makes sense.

"Also think about individual skills," the specialist says. Make sure you have the necessary skills to sew a garment that will equal the same ready-to-wear item.

Supplies and equipment for sewing cannot be ignored, either, says Miss Mock. The more the machine is used, the more you get for your investment. And remember that when fabrics or notions are purchased and not used, they represent a loss of money.

Finally, the specialist notes, special needs may outweigh time and money considerations. For example, hard-to-fit consumers may find it more practical to sew rather than to shop and do extensive fitting.

Calder-Ray Vows Spoken Apparel Industry Aided By Computers

RALEIGH — Wanda Gail Ray and Mark Crider Calder were married Saturday afternoon at five o'clock in a double ring ceremony in New Hope Baptist Church. The Rev. Jack F. Coffey officiated at the candlelight ceremony.

A program of organ music was rendered by Mrs. Marvin Sparks and Mrs. Robert Davis Jr. as soloist.

Daughter of Mrs. Jeanette Price Ray and Mr. Billy Wayne Ray of Raleigh, the bride was given in marriage by her father. Her honor attendant was Lisa Bryant Matthews of Mount Olive, sister of the bridegroom.

The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. John Francis Calder Sr. of Faison. The best man was the father of the bridegroom.

Bridesmaids included Mary Bullard, Sharon Goodson, Susan Jarret, Susan Rollins of Greenville, Martha Hooser of Raleigh and Mary Hubbard of Cary.

Junior bridesmaid was Genise Murphy of Knightdale and flower girls were Amanda Bryant of Mount Olive, niece of the bridegroom, and Melissa Ray of Raleigh, sister of the bride.

Ushers included William Bennett and David Brown of Raleigh, John Calder Jr. of Atlanta, Ga., brother of the bridegroom, Dan Odom of Ahsokie, David Harris and Kenneth Swanner of Washington, Frank Powell of Greenville and Timothy Hesse, cousin of the bridegroom of Charleston, S.C.

The bride wore her mother's wedding gown. The bodice of antique ivory lace was adorned with iridescent sequins centered in lace flowers and buttoned down the back in satin covered buttons which also buttoned the pointed cuffs of the long sleeves. The skirt of the gown was of silk chiffon over taffeta with hand-stitched flowers of lace matching those on the bodice creating a flowing effect and bordering the hemline of the skirt and train. Her veil of tow-towered tulle was held in place by a headpiece bordered with handmade satin flowers and shaped pearl leaves with a touch of greenery. She carried a Victorian nosegay of white roses, miniature carnations and baby's breath.

The attendants each wore a formal gown of candlelight faile taffeta. The drape effect bodice featured an off the shoulder portrait neckline and full ante-bellum sleeves. The waist was defined by a self-flower and piping. The skirt was gathered. They carried long-stemmed red roses with streamers of cranberry ribbon.

The junior bridesmaid and flower girls also wore formal gowns of candlelight faile taffeta with puffed sleeves edged in matching lace, empire waistline and full skirt. The junior attendant carried a short-stemmed red rose and the flower girls carried miniature baskets of flowers.

The mother of the bride wore a formal gown of mauve chiffon and the mother of the bridegroom selected a formal gown of navy blue chiffon.

A champagne reception followed at the Plantation Inn. Assisting were Mrs. Mary Brown, Mrs. Nell Sutton, Mrs. Jessie Nelson and Mrs. Dorothy Wassong. Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Murphy served champagne. Rebecca Calder of Atlanta, Ga., sister-in-law of the bridegroom, presided at the guest register. Mark Stevens and Mrs. Alex Sabow directed the wedding.

A cocktail party and buffet was given after the rehearsal by parents of the bridegroom in the Heyward Room, Mission Valley Inn, Friday evening.

After a wedding trip to England and France, the couple will be living in Greenville.

The bride is a graduate of ECU and is a sales representative with Dictaphone Corp. The bridegroom is also a graduate of ECU and is employed by Wachovia Bank, Greenville.

Chances are that some of the clothing you purchased in the stores today was made with the help of computers.

"Computers are making inroads into apparel manufacturing," says Harriet Tutterow, extension clothing specialist at North Carolina State University.

Recent figures indicate that about 20 percent of apparel produced in the United States is made with the aid of computerized grading and marking systems, Miss Tutterow notes.

Computerized pattern design has several advantages, Miss Tutterow says, as well as some economic drawbacks.

New styles, for example, can be generated in approximately one-fourth of the original manual time. Computerized patterns are always the same shape and size. They do not wear out.

There is less trial and error in the pattern making process, Miss Tutterow says, and greater consistency of fit through uniform grading.

Planning the grading and marking on computer can save time and money, according to the specialist, but the company involved has to have a minimum amount of sales to make the investment worthwhile.

The computer system ranges in price from $75,000 to $250,000 and for most companies using the system there is a payback period of about two years.

"The American Apparel Manufacturers Association technical advisers state that for a small apparel firm to justify purchasing a computer system the firm would have to do $15 million in annual sales," Miss Tutterow explains.

Dear Abby

Caring Minister Is Always Ready To Talk

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: In the last year I have been arrested twice for drugs. I'm 15. About four weeks ago, the minister from our church stopped me and asked if we could sit down and talk. I was scared and made up some excuse, so he said he would call me sometime in case I changed my mind. He is super nice and seems so understanding.

I've changed my mind and think I should talk with him. I've been in trouble off and on since I was 12. I even attempted suicide.

The problem is I am scared to walk up to him, or even send him a note asking for help, since he never called. I can't talk to my parents because they are one of my big problems. We can never have a discussion without ending up yelling at each other.

I'm sorry now that I didn't talk with my minister when I had the chance. Now I don't have the nerve to approach him. What would I say? Do you think he really wants to talk to me, or was he just being nice?

NO NAME OR TOWN, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: I know your minister really wants to talk to you. Please go to the phone right now and call him. Tell him you are sorry you didn't accept his offer to talk, but you'd very much like to take him up on it now. Ask him when it would be convenient to see you. I promise you he will be delighted to hear from you. Good luck and God bless.

DEAR ABBY: I just can't stand to see another TV commercial showing a lot of fannies wiggling around in jeans so tight there is no way a person could sit down in them! This goes for men as well as women.

That bra commercial in which a man measures a curvy blonde's dimensions was bad enough, but a new low in vulgarity was reached when some swivel-hipped gal bragged that the underwear she was wearing under her clothes made her look like she wasn't wearing nuthin'! Disgraceful!

Please tell me where to write to complain about such tasteless commercials. If enough people object, maybe they will take them off the air.

DISGUSTED IN TULARE, CALIF.

DEAR DISGUSTED: Write to: Action Line, Direct Mail Marketing Association, 6 East 43rd St., New York, N.Y. 10017. Also send a copy to the president of the company that manufactures the product. If enough complaints are received, the advertising agency that's responsible for the commercial will be told to shape up or ship out.

...

DEAR ABBY: Please comment on people who allow their dogs to run free, leaving their deposits on everyone's lawns but their owners'.

This problem is not restricted to any "class" of neighborhood. I just recently moved to one of the more desirable areas of our city, and it's no better here.

Abby, please let these ignorant people know how inconsiderate and unlawful this practice is. Just as bad — if not worse — are the people who walk their dogs and stand watching while their dogs foul their neighbor's lawn, just as they have been trained to do! Sign me...

DISGUSTED IN RENO, NEV.

DEAR DISGUSTED: The "dog walkers" know how inconsiderate and unlawful they are, but they don't care. Confront them in the act and demand they either get a "pooper scooper" and use it, or be reported to the animal control authorities. A stiff fine will clean up their act in a hurry.

CONFIDENTIAL TO YOU: Today is St. Valentine's Day, so be a sweetheart and call someone who's alone and say, "I'm thinking about you." Take some flowers to someone in a nursing home. Put all your discarded clothes in a box for Goodwill. Donate some blood. Pay your dentist bill. Listen to your teenager. Tell your parents you think they're great. Tape a love note on his (or her) mirror. Forgive an enemy. Send a donation to CARE or the Salvation Army. If you love someone, tell him (or her) now; don't wait until next Valentine's Day to be a sweetheart again. Love,

DEAR ABBY: I'm thinking seriously about seeking psychological or psychiatric help, but I'm worried about how it might look on my record for applying for a job. I'm 20, and if I did get professional help and was later asked if I'd ever been under the care of a psychologist or psychiatrist, I would answer truthfully, but I don't want to risk losing a job because of it.

I guess I really owe it to myself to get professional help, but I don't want to have to choose eventually between being honest and getting a job. I'd appreciate your comments. Sign me...

STUMPED

DEAR STUMPED: If you need professional help, it would be a serious error to avoid getting it for the reason you have mentioned. Millions of people are receiving, or have received, psychotherapy. Many of them occupy positions of great responsibility — lawyers, judges, doctors, government officials, corporation executives, etc.

Your ability to get a job in the future will depend much more on your record and on how you present yourself than it will on that single question, even if it were asked. If it is asked, answer it honestly, adding that you have benefited from it. (You will be respected all the more for it.) You are under no obligation to go into detail about why you sought help.

It's Good News For Two Local Writers

Farmville native Sheila Turnage has received notification that the prestigious New York publishing firm of Harcourt, Brace and Javonovich has accepted her manuscript for a children's book. The publishers will assign an artist to draw illustrations for the book, which will be published at an unannounced date in the future.

"Trout the Ordinary" is the title Ms. Turnage has tentatively given the manuscript.

A graduate of East Carolina University with a major in archaeology and a minor in journalism, she was formerly employed as a staff writer for The Daily Reflector. Currently she works in Winterville.

Last year she won fifth place in the national writer's contest sponsored by The Writer's Digest Magazine. She has also had a few other stories published and has collaborated with Greenville's Christine Rusch in writing a couple of one-act plays.

Ms. Turnage is enrolled in the creative writing course taught by Patsy Baker O'Leary at Pitt Community College and is an active member of the Greenville Writers Club.

"I'm crazed with excitement at the prospect of seeing a book of mine in print," Ms. Turnage commented in expressing her reaction to the news her manuscript had been accepted.

Peter Makuck, whose collection of short stories, "Breaking And Entering," was recently published by the University of Illinois Press, has received word that one of the stories has received an outstanding literary recognition and two others have been nominated for awards.

The title story was cited with an honorable mention recognition when American short stories nationally were being considered for the 1982 edition of the prestigious anthology, "Best American Short Stories" of 1981.

Two other stories from the book, "Paper Options" and "Black Water, White Ducks," have been nominated for Pushcart Awards. If selected, they will be published in the 1982 anthology of "Pushcart Awards" stories. This is an annual publication of poetry and fiction published independently by an association of small American literary magazines.

"Paper Options" originally appeared in The Greensboro Review, and "Black Water, White Ducks" appeared in Carolina Quarterly.

In earlier years, two stories from Dr. Makuck's book have received nominations for inclusion in annual issues of "Best American Short Stories." The story "Assumption" was nominated in 1976, and "Paper Options" was nominated in 1979.

BIRDS IN HAND — The Pallid Falcon, right, of South America has been classified as a separate species since it was discovered over 50 years ago. However, a study team headed by David H. Ellis of the Institute for Raptor Studies in Oracle, Ariz., has discovered the Pallid Falcon is not a separate species. Instead, it is a different colored version of the better known Austral Peregrine Falcon, left, of Argentina and Chile. (AP Laserphoto)

Bess Myerson and Bill Adler offer "The I Love New York Diet" developed by the bureau of nutrition, New York City Department of Health. A safe and sensible diet without a gimmick, it works because it is based on sound nutritional practices conforming with the recently issued federal dietary guidelines for Americans. Hailed by doctors everywhere as the most effective and healthful diet ever created, it provides a practical program for lifetime slimmness that most people can live with enjoyably.

Ms. Myerson and Adler present the complete instructions for the bureau of nutrition's medically approved diet to counter the rising tide of potentially hazardous fad diets. Simple to follow, easy to go on and easy to stay on, "The I Love New York Diet" is designed for all Americans who desire to slim down healthfully and stay slim permanently without risk.

"Let's Stay Healthy: A Guide to Lifelong Nutrition" by Adelle Davis will be invaluable to everyone eager to promote good health through sound nutrition. Examining individual needs based on such factors as age, sex, climate, level of activity and economics, it makes it possible for the reader to formulate a personal program particularly suited to himself or herself. Ms. Davis explains in clear, illustrated detail how the body functions and gives simple expert descriptions of what nutrition really is and how it works.

With easy expertise she leads you through the complexities of the human body and explains briefly and with understandable diagrams just how the body handles or fails to handle those substances it ingests. She demonstrates which substances are used for growth, which for energy, which merely add on fat, and which may hurt or kill us by their toxic actions. "Let's Stay Healthy," a fascinating journey into ourselves as animate creatures always striving for an ideal state of physical and emotional health, can be an ideal nutritional manual for the many basic truths and fascinating world of clinical nutrition.

Dr. Arnold Fox presents "The Beverly Hills Medical Diet and Long-Life Anti-Stress Program."

Learn how the Beverly Hills Medical Diet can remove stress while putting zest into your life and help you overcome faulty eating habits and overweight problems. Dr. Fox offers hundreds of scrumptious, all-natural recipes, hints for enjoying delicious forbidden foods, what to eat in restaurants and a new exercise for people who don't like to exercise in his major nutritional breakthrough.

Beth A. Kuntzleman and the editors of Consumer Guide offer an effective fitness program in "The Complete Guide to Aerobic Dancing." Aerobic dancing combines the benefits of exercise, the pleasure of dance and the appeal of music into one of the most effective fitness programs ever. Aerobic dance borrows steps from everywhere and uses almost every kind of music and while you're hustling and having fun, you're also burning calories, increasing your heart-lung efficiency and improving your muscle tone.

"84 Years of Continuous Service to Eastern North Carolina"

Three Local Shows Provide Insights Into Varied Fields Of Art

"SOJOURN" ... is the title given by artist Willie Marlowe to this painting in blues, reds, yellow, pink, silver and green. Ms. Marlowe currently has about three dozen paintings being exhibited in the south galleries of the Greenville Museum of Art, 802 S. Evans St.

A MASK WITH PLANK CREST ... is a magnificently carved wood piece decorated with coarse fiber strings. The tall vertical piece (only the center detail is shown here), was crafted by an artist or artists from the Bobo Tribe of the Upper Volta area of Africa.

Three local art shows, one at Gray Gallery, East Carolina University, and two at the Greenville Museum of Art, 802 Evans Street, provide illuminating insights into the art of people in different times and different places.

The exhibition of more than 50 pieces of African Tribal Art at Gray Gallery is a rare opportunity for local viewers to see a good sampling of a wide range of exciting art garnered from a representative cross section of African tribes including the Yoruba, the Masai, the Dogon and several others.

African tribal art, until the beginning of this century generally relegated to the catch-all classification of primitive art, is in fact art that is vibrantly rich in centuries of associations — religious, cultural, and historical.

This stunning collection loaned to East Carolina University by the Duke University Museum of Art is mostly sculptural and encompasses masks, ceremonial figures in wood and fiber, trays and jewelry in metal or wood, woven textiles including a large blanket in white, black, red and yellow, and utilitarian objects lovingly decorated.

In recent years, the advent of excellent travel and art films showing and exploring the history of tribal art worldwide has created a base of public interest in such art, revealing the remarkable talent of artists who have created art that fills man's instinctive longing for beauty. Tribal art is as well a record of religious beliefs and a perpetuation of ceremonial practices expressed in terms of art.

Introductory notes on the exhibition by Rita Early are available at the gallery and are instructive. It is hoped that school children in the area will be given a chance to see this splendid show — books and films are no substitute for seeing the real thing.

At the Greenville Museum of Art, an exhibition of paintings by Willie Marlowe is being shown in the South Gallery. These paintings pulsate with color, and evoke a discovered world of shapes and colors similar to startling microscopic forms revealed in nature photography. Some paintings involve geometric inclusions, and a couple are of playful painted cut outs. Ms. Marlowe's work is an interesting venture into the relationship of colors and shapes.

The second show at the Greenville Museum of Art is a collection of hand-tinted platinum photographic prints made by Wallace Nutting. A minister, (born in 1861, died in 1941), Nutting had a long and varied career in which photography played a major role. Landscapes and interiors constitute most of the prints. There's a strong nostalgic note in the studies of elaborately gowned women at tea or sewing by the light of a large window. An informative brochure about Nutting and his work is available at the Museum.

NCMA Print Show Opens

By DAVID JOHNSON
N.C. Museum Of Art

RALEIGH — Approximately 30 prints showing a variety of techniques and imagery will be on view beginning today in the Collectors Gallery of the North Carolina Museum of Art in Raleigh. An opening reception with the public invited is being held from 4 to 6 p.m. today. The show will remain on view at the Museum, located at 107 E. Morgan Street downtown Raleigh, through March 21.

Other North Carolina artists whose work is included in this exhibition are Don Byrum of Charlotte; Ann Conner of Wilmington; Michael Ehlbeck of Greenville; Herb Jackson of Davidson; and Kurt Warnke of Belmont.

Clay And Fiber Show Coming

ECU News Bureau
"New Directions: Clay and Fiber," a national invitational exhibition set to open at East Carolina University's Gray Gallery Thursday, will include new works by 27 American artists.

The show will begin with a public reception in the gallery from 7:30-10 p.m.

According to gallery director Randolph Osman, the exhibition is funded by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts and will travel nationally under the auspices of the Southern Arts Federation in Atlanta. The purpose of the exhibition is to assemble "the finest work available in two very innovative and dynamic" contemporary art media, Osman said.

"New Directions" provides a cross-section of new and significant trends documenting the progress of traditional crafts media as they evolve into use in contemporary art," he added.

Works in clay include thrown and hand-built pieces in stone ware, porcelain and earthenware. Among the fiber works are woven pieces, printed fabric and sculpture hand-built from pulp and raw fiber.

Purchase funds from the ECU School of Medicine will enable ECU to acquire works from the exhibition for its permanent collection.

The ECU exhibition will run through March 18.

ECU Opera Theater To Perform Mozart's 'Cosi Fan Tutte' This Week

DRESS REHEARSAL... Cast members of the forthcoming ECU Opera production of Mozart's comic opera, "Cosi fan tutte," line up in a formal pose on stage during a dress rehearsal. The opera is being presented at the A.J. Fletcher

Recital Hall at 8 p.m. on three evenings, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Feb. 18, 19 and 20. Tickets are priced at $3. (ECU News Bureau Photo by Marianne Baines).

ECU News Bureau
Mozart's romantic comic opera, "Cosi fan tutte," will be performed by the East Carolina University Opera Theater Thursday, Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. in the Fletcher Music Center.

Tickets are available from the Central Ticket Office in Mendenhall Student Center in advance, with any remaining tickets sold at the door. All tickets are $3.

The production is directed by Dr. Clyde Hiss of the ECU School of Music Faculty. Some of the leading roles, sung by advanced voice students at ECU and by singers in the Greenville area, are double cast, enabling students to perform on alternating evenings.

The cast of characters include: Ferrando, sung by Mark Johnson; Guglielmo, sung by Clifton H. Harris and Michael S. Elliott; Don Alfonso, sung by Constantine T. Peters; Fiordiligi, sung by Patricia Hiss and Diane Finnegan Loop; Dorabella, sung by Susan W. Jones and Jayne Humphrey; and Despina, sung by Teresa Marie Guion and Janet Patricia Noyes.

Those who will be singing roles in the chorus and as soldiers, servants and townspeople, are Gregory P. Baldwin, Ada Milenkovic Brown, Phillip D. Brown, Julie A. Clemons, Jeff S. Hargett, Thomas Mercer, Denise Miller, Donna Montague, Grady D. Norris, Timothy S. Parker, V. Aloysius Parker, Teresa Raynor, Beth Smith, Robert Todd, Tremaine Waddell and Margaret Williamson.

Generally recognized as the supreme example of "opera buffa," the opera has "only recently regained its deserved prominence," noted director Hiss. The action depends upon a general belief that women are fickle and faithless in love, a view which outraged 19th century romantics.

The ECU production, sung in English, uses a slightly altered plot, which according to Hiss, gives it "a believability one could never have suspected."

"Above, below, around, through and saturating this plot is the glorious music of Mozart about whose music no superlative seems inappropriate."

The story is of a cynical gentleman who wagers with his two young friends that their sweethearts, like all women, will prove unfaithful given enough time. They hatch a scheme which calls for the men to report for military service, much to the consternation of their fiancées.

As soon as the young men are out of sight, they disguise themselves as eastern potentates and return to woo the girls attempting to win the wager by proving that the girls are steadfast in their love.

However, the girls do capitulate and thereby prove the old cynic's declaration—that all women are unfaithful.

Jeffrey Murphy Senior Recital

Jeffrey E. Murphy of China Grove, a student of the School of Music, East Carolina University, presented his senior recital at the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall on Thursday, Feb. 11. Jeffrey's instrument is the French horn.

He was accompanied by Deborah Paniel, piano; Susan Harris, violin; Amanda Karchner, viola I; Katherine Campbell, viola II; and Barbara Salter, cello.

For his program, Jeffrey performed four works—the rondo from Mozart's "Quartet in E flat," the andante from Strauss' "Concerto in B flat," Eugene Bozza's "Chant Lointain" and Arthur Frackenpohl's "Allegro."

Auditions For Outdoor Dramas

CHAPEL HILL — Fourteen major outdoor historical drama companies from across the nation will audition young performers from the Southeast at the Institute of Outdoor Drama in Chapel Hill March 27.

The institute is an agency of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, and it serves as a national center for research and service for outdoor historical dramas and festivals. The companies are seeking nearly 1,000 summer actors, singers, dancers and technicians. Mark R. Sumner, director of the institute, said most companies audition on their home grounds and at several regional locations, but the annual Chapel Hill audition allows performers to see many directors at the same time.

Seven North Carolina productions will participate in the auditions: "Blackbeard: Knight of the Black Flag," Bath; "Horn in the West," Boone; "The Liberty Cart," Kenansville; "The Lost Colony," Manteo; "The Sword of Peace Summer Celebration," Snow Camp; "Unto These Hills," Cherokee; and "Strike at the Wind," Pembroke.

Out-of-state productions are: "Hatfield and McCoys" and "Honey in a Rock," Beckley, W.Va.; "Legend of Daniel Boone," Chillicothe, Ohio; "Trumpet in the Land," New Philadelphia, Ohio; "Song of the Cumberland Gap," Pineville, Ky.; and "Beyond the Sundown," Livingston, Texas.

Applicants must be 18 or older and must have previous theater training or credits. All positions are salaried and all companies are equal opportunity employers.

Pre-registration is required by March 15. Detailed information and applications may be obtained from: Auditions Director, Institute of Outdoor Drama, University of North Carolina, 202 Graham Memorial 052A, Chapel Hill, N.C. 27514.

Christopher Fry Play To Open In Ayden Thursday

The Ayden Theater Workshop is presenting a Christopher Fry play, "The Lady's Not For Burning" as its next production. Performances will be given on three dates, at 8 p.m. on Thursday and Saturday, Feb.

18 and 20, and at 3 p.m. on Sunday, Feb. 21. All performances will be in the auditorium of the Ayden-Grifton School. Tickets are priced at $2 and are available by writing to: Ayden Theater Workshop, P.O. Box 293, Ayden, N.C., 28513. Reservations can also be made by phone, 746-6782. Any tickets remaining available will be sold at the door.

Doug Mitchell is director. Cast members, from Ayden unless otherwise noted, are: Mitchell Riggs as Richard, an orphaned clerk; John Williams of Greenville as Thomas, a discharged soldier; Shirley Hickman as Alison Eliot; Joel McLawhorn as Humphrey Devis, Alison's fiancée; Chris Phillips of Grifton as Nicholas Devis; Elizabeth Phillips of Grifton as Margaret Devis, Nicholas' mother; Joey Pollock as Hebble Devis, the mayor and brother of Margaret; Shelley Harker of Grifton as Jennet Jourdemayne; Marcus Caraway as the chaplain; Allen Trader of Kinston as Edward Tappereoom, a justice; and David Wardel of Greenville as Matthew Skippis.

Don Watson of Grifton is stage manager; costumes are by Betty Dixon and Mary Rogers, and the stage and set has been designed and constructed by members of the Ayden-Grifton Stagecraft class.

"The Lady's Not For Burning," centers around a discharged soldier, weary and ready for a change of life, who wanders into a small town and boldly confesses that he is a murderer and wishes to be hanged for his crimes.

When officials deny his request, thinking he is innocent, Thomas, a philosophical humorist, becomes annoyed. Soon thereafter, a young woman named Jennet Jourdemayne is brought in and charged with witchcraft. In contrast to Thomas, she wishes not to die. Thomas tries to convince the mayor that not hanging him is absurd and that hanging a beautiful, young innocent girl like Jennet is unreasonable. The end result of this situation is that the two fall in love and it seems as though neither will have to hang.

TWO WHO FALL IN LOVE — in Christopher Fry's "The Lady's Not For Burning" are Thomas (played by John Williams), and Jennet (played by Michelle Harker). The two are among the cast of the play which will have three performances at Ayden-Grifton School on Thursday, Saturday and Sunday, Feb. 18, 20 and 21. Tickets are priced at $2.

ECU Radio Station Again Operative

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer
After an absence of several years, the East Carolina University radio station is back on the air. Renewed broadcasting began on February 2. The station, with call sign WZMB is 91.3 on the FM dial.

Sam Barwick, general manager of the station, notes "we are on the air seven days weekly from seven in the morning until one a.m."

"Our programming is album oriented to rock and jazz, with some classical music too. We also have five minute news broadcasts eight times a day once every two hours." The news coverage, Barwick said, "covers international, national, state, and local news as well as sports."

Barwick notes that "programming includes a number of special broadcasts, such as personality interviews with people on campus, reports of events on campus, topical subjects from the community and current affairs. Some of these," he added, "are programs provided through religious organizations, but they are without religion endorsement."

In the same manner,

Barwick says, "we air public service announcements for non-profit community activities, as well as public service items for the campus." The station does not carry commercials.

WZMB is student owned and operated. In addition to Barwick, other staff members of the station are: Macon Dail, chief engineer; Elton Boney, assistant general manager and programming director; Lorie Niven, news director; Warren Baker, production director; and Slater Burroughs, business manager.

"There are also several others who work air shifts on the programs," Barwick said.

According to Barwick, the long closure of the campus radio station was due to a number of factors, including more than a year's delay occasioned by the failure of a contractor in 1980 to meet contract terms which necessitated beginning all the application and funding process all over again in 1981. "Finally in January this year all equipment was in place, our personnel trained and by the first of February we had everything in readiness to go back on the air."

NCSU Series Announced

Again in 1982, Mrs. Mae J. Gates will serve as membership representative in Greenville and Pitt County for the 1982-83 Friends of the College of N.C. State University. The membership drive is now underway.

The season line-up this year includes a celebration of the 50th anniversary of the North Carolina Symphony. For this event, a performance of Benjamin Britten's "War Requiem" will feature massed choruses, a boy choir, and soloists along with the orchestra.

Others scheduled to appear in the total of seven programs are: Itzhak Perlman, violinist; the Ballet Folklorico Mexicano with Jose Greco; Nina Lorca and Jorge Tyler; the Hartford Ballet; the Vienna Choir Boys; the Gewandhaus Orchestra of Leipzig; and the San Francisco Opera Touring Company in a performance of "Rigoletto."

Season membership to cover admission to the seven programs is still only $15. Admission to programs is by season ticket only. No individual tickets will be sold.

All concerts are to be held at Reynolds Coliseum on the campus of N.C. State University.

Bus tickets for Greenville and Pitt County residents who would prefer traveling to Raleigh and back by bus rather than by car can be arranged. For membership tickets and additional information, interested people are to contact Mrs. Gates at 758-1420.

ITZHAK PERLMAN... noted violinist, will perform during the 1982-83 Friends of the College series at N.C. State University. Six other programs are scheduled in the series. Tickets for the seven programs are $15 and locally can be ordered by calling Mrs. Mae Gates at 758-1420.

Brazil Subject Of Travel Film

"Bewitching Brazil," narrated by Commander Karl E. Stein, is the next film to be shown in the ECU Travel-Adventure Film Series. The film will be shown at 8 p.m. Feb. 25 in Hendrix Theater on the East Carolina University campus.

A movie about a dynamic country, a land with a future, "Bewitching Brazil" first takes the viewer to Rio de Janeiro, one of the great pleasure cities of the world. Here sun, sea and sand backed by mountains all meet to form Copacabana Beach, playground for playgirls and playboys.

Next on the travel ticket is Brazil's largest city, Sao Paulo, the nation's commerce center, then it's on to a coffee plantation, and to Ouro Preto and Congonhas where the present is deeply steeped in traditions of the past.

Other points to be visited are Brasilia, the new capital with its 21st century architectural masterpiece cathedral, designed to represent Christ's crown of thorns, and a look at the exotic lives of gauchos, cowboy adventurers living on sprawling fazendas.

Stein also includes scenes of the ancient religious ceremonies of the city of Salvador, the fishing fleets of Belem, the jungles of the mighty Amazon, and the magnificent Iguacu Falls, dwarfing in size the Niagara Falls.

Commander Stein, an acclaimed adventure traveler and explorer, has presented his travel films worldwide, including presentation to groups such as the National Geographic Society.

Tickets for the film are $2.50 and can be purchased at the Central Ticket Office, Mendenhall Student Center, or at the door prior to screening of the film.

Fact is, no apartments in town can legitimately claim to be more convenient to more things than Wedgewood Arms.

And, that's not all. Because Wedgewood Arms is not only convenient, it's different in other ways, too.

Darwin Honored On Quartet Of British Stamps

By MARGARET McDONAGH
British Post Office

Charles Darwin — the world's most controversial naturalist — dropped a bombshell on 19th century society with his theories on evolution.

His "Origin of Species" is a book that revolutionized science and fashioned intellectual thought: it also aroused argument and debate to fever pitch and even now — 100 years since the death of Darwin — controversy continues to rage. Especially in America.

The British Post Office has commemorated the centenary of Darwin's death with a special set of stamps issued Wednesday, February 10.

As a youth, Darwin showed little promise of becoming a world-famous scientist. At school he was bored with his classical education (in later life he said he found DARWIN HONORED — The world's most controversial naturalist, Charles Darwin, has been honored by the British Post Office on the occasion of the 100th anniversary of his birth, Feb. 10, 1882. Commemorative stamps with each depicting a sketch portrait of Darwin, a facsimile of his signature and some of the discoveries he made in the natural world have been issued. These are: 15½ pence, giant tortoise; 19½ pence, iguanas; 26 pence, finches; and 29 pence, prehistoric skulls. The stamps were designed by David Gentleman and printed by Harrison and Sons Ltd. (Photo Courtesy the British Post Office).

Shakespeare 'nauseating') and after two false starts toward a career — medicine and the church — he veered toward the natural sciences.

Fortunately, at college he made friends with influential teachers in botany and geology who encouraged him in fieldwork and natural history observation.

Then Darwin was offered a chance to sail with the naval ship "Beagle" on an extensive expedition in the southern hemisphere. Looking back on this voyage in later years, he called it "by far the most important event in my life."

During the next five years, from 1831 to 1836, the "Beagle" touched on nearly every continent and major island.

Darwin was called upon to serve as geologist, botanist, zoologist and general man of science: he investigated the flora and fauna of land and sea but nowhere impressed him as forcibly as the Galapagos Islands, 500 miles off the west coast of South America.

On these isolated, barren, volcanic islands he saw giant tortoises, elsewhere found only as fossils; huge lizards extinct in other parts of the world; enormous crabs and sea lions. He was struck by the fact that birds were similar to those on the neighboring continent but not identical.

The strange phenomena of the Galapagos Islands reinforced the idea of evolution beginning to form in Darwin's mind.

When he returned to England, Darwin began a notebook on evolution. His problem was how to explain the great riddle of the appearance and disappearance of species. And his answer was the doctrine of natural selection, the struggle for existence, the survival of the fittest — the foundation stone for "Origin of Species".

For 20 years, Darwin compiled his notebooks, substantiating his theory.

So intent was he on building a tower of irrefutable proof for his theories, that he neglected publication until the 1850s. Then, Darwin received a letter from a fellow-scientist, Alfred Russel Wallace, who had arrived at the identical conclusion of Darwin.

Darwin was in a dilemma. Both men had arrived independently at the same conclusion; though Darwin had given years of study to the subject, Wallace's ideas had come to him in a flash of intuition. So Darwin abandoned his huge tract and concentrated on what he called an "abstract".

In 1859, the book that was to become a milestone in the history of science was published.

The church was outraged. Although Darwin had carefully omitted any application of his theory to mankind, he was accused of claiming men were descended from monkeys.

Attempts were made to discredit Darwin by ridicule. His old geological professor at Cambridge wrote to him and said that the book had made him laugh until his sides ached and the theory was as wild as "Bishop Wilkin's locomotive that was to sail with us to the moon." One reviewer wrote asking if it were "credible that varieties of turnip are tending to become men." And the formidable bishop of Oxford asked one of Darwin's supporters "whether it is on his grandfather's or grandmother's side that the ape ancestry comes in?"

Innumerable clashes between church and science built up a huge controversy around Darwin's work; even today when it is generally accepted that the theory is basically correct, the word Darwinism can cause howls of outrage.

Because he was such an acute observer, Darwin's work has stood the test of time as scientific knowledge has expanded. His theories have been modified by the findings of modern science, but Darwin succeeded in foreshadowing the ideas prevailing today in genetics, paleontology and other sciences.

His work has presented mankind in perspective — an unfinished product capable of further progress. Man's long history is not that of a fall but of an ascent and he has at least another thousand million years to carry evolution to new heights.

UNC-Chapel Hill Offering A Variety Of Summer Travel Trips

CHAPEL HILL — From the Southwestern United States to the Greek Islands, Israel, Europe and China... practically the whole world will be a classroom in the summer of 1982 for people who take part in the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill's study abroad program.

With a record number of programs, UNC-CH's Division of Extension and Continuing Education will open the door for students, alumni and members of the public who want to study and travel at the same time. The public is encouraged to take part in these programs.

The division's off-campus credit program is offering new trips this year to the American Southwest, to Israel and to China. Trips to be repeated are ones to Greece, Oxford, England, Sicily, Naples, London and to a group of European countries.

"The geographical range is growing and giving more options for travel and study," said Becky Duning, program coordinator. "And the professors chosen to lead the programs are fine scholars."

"Students can learn as they live and travel with the professors on a day-to-day basis."

Costs of overseas programs does not include transcontinental transportation. An additional $15 fee will be charged for those registering after Feb. 13 for the trips to Israel, Greece, Oxford University, Sicily and Europe.

Brief details on the programs are:

Southwestern U.S.

This area will be covered by two trips. One is scheduled for May 16-June 30 and is designed to help develop geologic mapping skills and to teach various prehistoric and volcanic rock types. Cost of this trip is $1,050, including cross-country transportation and campsite fees on-site.

The other trip is from May 17 to June 12. Students interested in geography, or those who simply enjoy camping and hiking can join the expedition to New Mexico, Arizona and Colorado. Participants will stay in campsites at various national parks and monuments, where they will study area plant and animal life and will be introduced to American Indian and Hispano cultures.

Israel

The study trip to Israel, from June 21 to July 23, is planned to introduce students to the Old Testament world and to all aspects of archaeological field work. Students will take part in an excavation project under the guidance of experienced archaeologists, historians and biblical scholars from the United States and Israel. Cost of the trip is $1,002.

China

The trip to China is scheduled for June 7 to June 27, and will include visits to Peking, Honk Kong and five other Chinese cities. Tour members may visit museums and historical sites, factories and workshops, schools and communes. For details on the cost of the trip and other information, interested people are to contact Professor Lawrence Kessler in the Office of International Programs on the UNC-Chapel Hill campus.

Greece

The Greece study program, now in its second year, will begin May 17 and run to June 10. Included in the trip will be an exploration of the mainland and a 10-day excursion to the Cycladic Islands. The cost of the trip is $1,767.

Oxford University

Another trip in its second year is that to Oxford University in England. Students will live in St. Edmund Hall, a 700-year-old college of the university on the Aug. 1-21 trip. Participants will visit Stratford-Upon-Avon to view performances by the Royal Shakespeare Company and will attend other performances on the Oxford campus. Weekends will be left open for individual travel and study. Cost of the program is $1,224.

Sicily

Students can learn something of the Italian language during a visit to Taormina, Sicily, from July 15 to Aug. 5. The group visiting Sicily will visit local art treasures and archaeological sites in the country, and will attend artistic events such as ballet, drama and opera and local festivals in honor of patron saints. They also will be able to see the international film festival held in Taormina during the last two weeks in July. Cost of the trip is $1,044.

Bay of Naples

Two trips will be taken to the Bay of Naples — one on July 5-17, another on Aug. 2-14. The Naples program is designed as an introduction to classical Greek, Etruscan and Roman civilizations, Herculaneum and Pompeii, the villa of Tiberius at Capri and the Roman amphitheaters are some of the sites students will visit. Cost is $750, plus $40 for tuition and fees (with no additional late fee).

Europe

A study trip to Europe, beginning in Amsterdam and including France, Italy, Austria, East and West Germany and Czechoslovakia, is scheduled to begin May 16 and end June 12. The program surveys the legacy of two world wars in contemporary Europe through visits to museums, monuments and battle sites.

The trip also offers an opportunity to sample European culture on both sides of the Iron Curtain. Cost of the tour is $2,043 before Feb. 13.

London

The London Program, from May 16 to June 12, is planned to give students an opportunity to examine the family, school and central value and belief systems which bind English society. The trip also will include a visit to the Midlands and to six London theater performances. Emphasis will be placed on a comparison of American and English educational systems. Cost is $1,207.

Wilmington Professor Wrote Slave Drama

RALEIGH — UNC-Wilmington history Professor Robert Brent Toplin developed the docu-drama, "Denmark Vesey's Rebellion," that airs Wednesday at 9 p.m. on UNC-TV, Channel 25, Greenville. The program deals with the actual event in the American History: the plot of Charleston blacks in 1822 to organize a slave rebellion and escape to freedom.

Professor Toplin began work on the production in 1976, when he was asked by the PBS to submit a proposal for a television program on a historic theme of national interest. At the time "Roots" had not appeared, and Toplin suggested a show about slavery.

Shortly after, "Roots" was aired and won tremendous acclaim. Toplin was not discouraged by comments that the topic of slavery was now "already covered on TV." Instead, he felt the positive reaction to "Roots" showed that public curiosity about the history of slavery remained high.

With the help of several fellowships from the National Endowment for the Humanities, Toplin began research on the case of Denmark Vesey's slave plot. After many months of reading the original court records, personal letters and diaries, newspaper reports and government documents, Toplin pieced together descriptions of the events and leading personalities in the story.

Among the historic characters who Dr. Toplin found especially interesting were Denmark Vesey, a free black carpenter who led the conspiracy; Gullah Jack, an African-born witch doctor who led the recruitment of plantation slaves; Thomas Bennett, the governor of South Carolina who failed to detect the plot; and Rolla Bennett, the governor's personal slave servant who also secretly worked as one of the ringleaders.

After organizing the main outlines of the dramatic storyline, Toplin met frequently with William Hauptman, a professional screenwriter. Together the two completed the draft of a script for the program. Then Toplin brought in a team of 12 leading historians of slavery to evaluate the script in detail and recommend improvements.

Toplin has enjoyed developing "Denmark Vesey's Rebellion" and he believes many more cases from American history could be examined using docu-dramas.

"Docu-drama makes history come alive," says Toplin, "and it allows us to try and get close to historical reality by recreating visual as well as verbal images of the environment and the personalities of the time."

Toplin reports that preparing a production for TV proved more difficult than writing a traditional history book (he is author of four such volumes). "There was much more to worry about, such as the authenticity of clothing and furniture and the use of language and accents," he notes.

House Arranger Finds Supplies On Low Budget

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Diana Phipps' favorite resource is the five-and-dime. Her most frequently used decorating tools are a staple gun and a bolt of dress fabric she picked up for a pittance.

Unorthodox, yes. But not totally surprising, until she tells you the look she seeks to create is splendor — splendor on a budget that is.

"I have always had to achieve my effects on a tight budget," explained the self-taught decorator or "house arranger" as she prefers to be called.

Despite a lack of formal training, Mrs. Phipps has managed to gather quite a few laurels on her road to success. These include decorating assignments for such writers as Gore Vidal, Harold Pinter and Lady Antonia Fraser, publication of her work in decorating magazines, and authorship of a recent book in which she explains her methods.

furniture, she said. But her kind of splendor — played-down versions of rooms seen in museums, palaces or books — can be achieved by using the techniques of stage dressing.

Some of the elements she uses frequently to create her version of grand places are lavish amounts of fabrics, cushions, fantasy finishes of woodwork, gilding and second-hand furniture she refurbishes herself.

"Except for trompe l'oeil techniques which takes some artistic ability and some carpentry, any of the techniques I have employed can be done by any amateur with a staple gun, some paints and brushes and a sewing machine, as well as the courage of his or her convictions," she said.

The sewing machine is optional, but courage is the only absolutely required ingredient. Yet this intangible asset is what stops most people from successfully doing their own decorating in a way that will be personally satisfying.

"They are fearful they will make a mess of it and have to pull the whole thing down and waste all the money they have spent. But if you have a bolt of not-too-expensive material and a staple gun, you can try a lot of ideas. The secret is to keep going if it looks a mess until it doesn't look a mess anymore," she said.

The Phipps' decorating career was born out of her own needs. She moved to England 18 years ago after the death of her American husband, Henry Phipps, found a house for herself and young daughter, and set about fixing it up — an experience she describes in her book, "Affordable Splendor."

It was a matter of finding bits and pieces in junk yards, second-hand shops and "rubbish heaps," she explained, adding it was so much fun she soon bought another house and began fixing it up in a similar manner.

Over the years, she has rented or bought and fixed up a number of houses and apartments in England, where she now lives, and the United States. Yards and yards of fabric have added, wall-seedy walls, window moldings have been removed or added, walls taken down. More often than not, she adds things — such as columns, old doors, woodwork and "built in" bookcases, all made from low-cost finds.

In her own London living room, for example, the walls are covered with a dark-brown velvet fabric. It sounds expensive, but it wasn't. She bought a bolt of "hideous mustard-yellow velvet that nobody wanted," and dyed it dark brown.

More recently, she used her favorite resource — the five-and-dime — to improve on a mirror. The decoration — birthday-candle holders sprayed with several coats of paint and glued onto the corners. Popular wisdom has it that discretion is the better part of valor when it comes to decorating. Faced with a mattress and a box spring, most would cover it with a quiet piece of fabric, toss on a few pillows and try to ignore it.

Mrs. Phipps would be likely to go out and find four scrap columns, build a canopy out of old lumber, embellish the whole thing with store-bought moldings and paint it in a tortoise shell or marble pattern. Then she'd drape the bed with yards and yards of some fabric nobody else wanted.

Instead of a mattress and a box spring, she'd have a bed that looked fit for Marie Antoinette.

ELECTRONIC SNITCH

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The modern truant officer is now hiding in a computer.

To keep tabs on students who skip classes, high-school teachers in some districts fill out a computer "scanning" sheet which is sent to the school's central office.

The sheet is entered into a scanning machine connected to a large computer system, which reports back that same day to school officials the student's name and time of absence. Parents are then asked about a child's absence.

Backyard Shop Builds Devices For Disabled

By JOANNA MORGAN

PORT CREDIT, Ont. (UPI) — A small cabinet-making shop in Gene Walsler's backyard is the scene of a project to bring more independence to the lives of the disabled.

Walsler, with a group of volunteers and persons performing community service in lieu of jail terms, produces devices to make the homes of the disabled more livable. Their latest achievement is an "eating aid" for quadriplegics.

The device was originally developed by the department of orthopaedic surgery at Chicago University's medical school. But the Canadian volunteers made several improvements in the last year which will allow a person with only neck and head movement to have the pleasure of feeding himself.

The table-top portable eating aid, consisting of a cup, plate and spoon mounted on short metal posts at mouth-level, is the result of more than 800 hours' work by some 50 volunteers. Its design was acclaimed at a rehabilitation engineering conference in Washington, D.C. The National Research Council of Canada is considering its mass production.

Walsler, 54, who has a furniture refinishing business, has made several of the devices, each with added modifications, and intends to make more.

A scrapbook in Walsler's office shows the changes his group, "Housing Modifications for the Handicapped," has brought to the community's disabled. Among them:

—Until a wheelchair lift — a small open elevator — was installed in one woman's home, she daily dragged the wheelchairs of her twin sons afflicted with muscular dystrophy up and down a flight of outside stairs.

—A high railing built beside a toilet enabled a 37-year-old man in a wheelchair to use the bathroom without help.

—A small set of stairs enabled a man with a double leg amputation to put himself to bed without assistance.

The suburban Toronto group operates on about $10,000 a year from corporate and service club donations and fees charged to regional government agencies.

It has gone beyond construction work. With lawyers and architects who donated their services, Walsler's group carried to the Ontario Supreme Court and won a 2½-year legal battle to allow the family of a teenage polio victim to build an extension to their home to hold a wheelchair lift. Neighbors had objected that the addition would block their view.

Walsler's involvement with the disabled began actively some 8 years ago as he began making modifications to his own home for his wife, Gerry, who has had multiple sclerosis all their married life.

He installed a wheelchair lift so she could visit the furniture business she helped him set up 27 years ago. He also installed an electronic alarm system between the house and shop so she could summon aid.

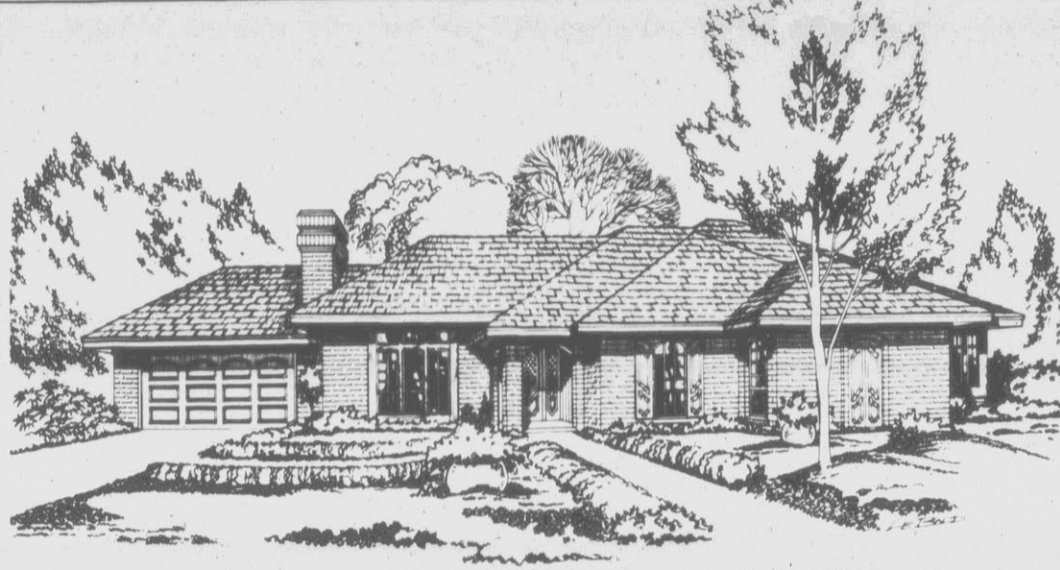

Backward Look At Wesleyan

ROCKY MOUNT — Robert Patrick's "Kennedy's Children," a story about five people looking back at their involvement in the 1960s, will be presented at 8 p.m. Feb. 16-20 at the D.S. Coltrane Theater on the campus of North Carolina Wesleyan College. Tickets are $3. Call 442-7121, ext. 238 for reservations. "Kennedy's Children" is for mature audiences only.

PLAN YOUR HOME

The Northcote

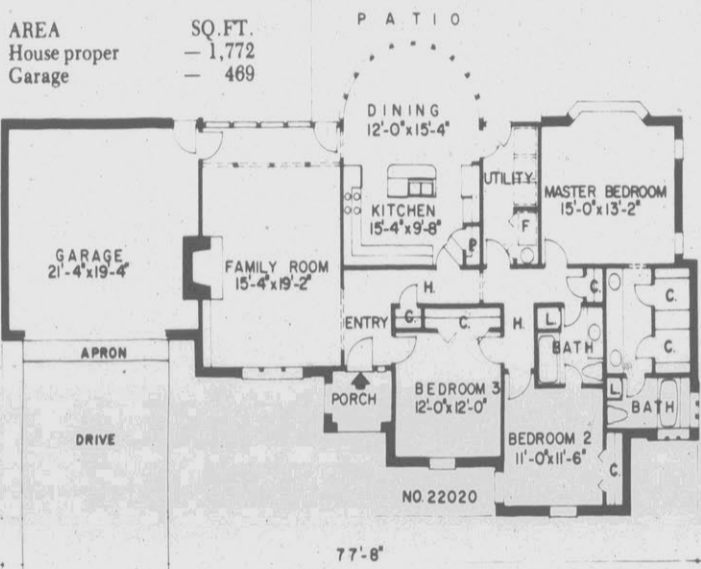

By Jerry Bishop

Tasteful Elegance Aim Of Design

Classic traditional lines on the exterior merge with a floor plan that expresses elegance in the Northcote, a charming French Provincial design.

Marked by a floor plan that allows easy access to all areas of the home, the Northcote includes three bedrooms, two full baths, a family room, and an imaginative kitchen/dining area.

The facade combines brick siding, hip roof, and small paned windows with arched lentils for a repeated, softly curving effect. Inside the entry, with clothes closet at hand, guests may be welcomed into the 19-ft. family room at left. Besides being generously proportioned, the family room is well-supplied with natural light and offers a wood-burning fireplace for warmth and atmosphere. A walkway at the rear of the room joins double garage with kitchen for convenience. Also accessible from the entry hall is the innovative kitchen/dining area. An island food preparation center and roomy pantry are included in the kitchen, and the connecting dining area takes on a semicircular shape and is heavily glassed to overlook the patio. At right, a utility room with space for laundry equipment is a step-saving addition. Each of the three bedrooms is large, and the master bedroom is favored with an impressive dressing area featuring double walk-in closets and adjoining a private bath. Linen and storage closets are plentiful. With entrances from the foyer or bedroom hallway, the third bedroom shows versatility and might be used as a guest room, library, or home office. The attached double garage will be appreciated in inclement weather and also offers an entry to the rear yard.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q.—The red bricks around my fireplace are turning gray. How can I clean them?

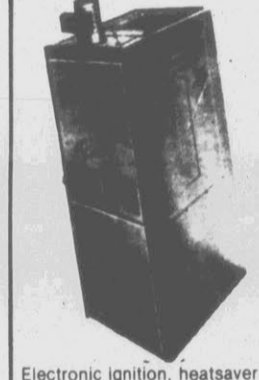

A.—Use detergent and water. Muriatic acid and water, half and half, will work on bricks that resist ordinary cleaning, but this is only a last-ditch solution. If it is necessary, wear gloves and take all the precautions necessary when working with a strong chemical. Before using the muriatic acid solution, see whether your hardware store or home center carries a product made for cleaning fireplace bricks.

how to stop the wind from coming through?

A.—Not enough details to give you a precise reply. Do you mean you can feel the wind on the inside or is it merely that the walls are cold? Don't you have any insulation in the walls? If not, that's your first priority. In any event, do the joints in the brick walls need mortar? Are there spaces in the foundation that require patching? This is one of those cases where you simply must find where the air is coming through.

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

He spent the first seen years of his life in Letchworth, England, a city north of London that was built as an "ideal" community, with everything carefully planned, from the center of town to individual residences.

That may or may not have had something to do with Chris Fye's decision, during his undergraduate days at the University of Illinois, to become an architect. But he does remember, even at that early age, that the first thing that struck him when he moved to the United States was that the houses all looked alike, especially the ranch-styled homes in suburbia.

It is not surprising, therefore, to learn that the design that won him first prize in an architectural contest was a two-story house. Although only 1,500 square feet, very modest for a two-story, it achieves an illusion of grandness with a cathedral ceiling and a first floor that has an open plan.

"Not having dividing doors and walls makes the whole house seem bigger," Fye says.

The Department of Architecture at the University of Illinois sponsored the contest in cooperation with Woman's Day Magazine. Seniors at the university had to follow certain guidelines. The house had to be a single-family, detached structure and in the $70,000 area, exclusive of land costs. It had to take into consideration energy conservation, ecology and today's smaller lots and smaller families. The panel of judges included the magazine's decorating editor, John DeSantis, and Herman York, contributing architect to Woman's Day as well as to "House of the Week," an Associated Press Newsfeature.

Fye, 28, has seen his winning entry become a reality. The design has just been translated into an actual house in the Tipton Lakes section of Columbus, Ind. It's a city known for its outstanding architecture, is sometimes known as "the Athens of the Prairie" and is a place where buildings have been designed by the likes of Eero Saarinen, I. M. Pei and Harry Weese.

The Fye house makes maximum use of the sun's light and warmth, with strategically positioned glass window panels.

"Living in natural light," says Fye, "is very pleasing. Sunlight makes people feel better ... warm and happy. In winter, it's a great feeling to sit in the sun's warmth — and you can really do this in the Columbus house."

Fye is currently working for a small architectural firm in Stockton, Ill. Did he always plan to become an architect?

"I don't know. I really had no great exposure to the field. My dad designs machines and my mother is a librarian. But I have always been interested in buildings — their esthetic relationship to the landscape and their practical relationship to their surroundings.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF
© 1982 Tribune Company Syndicate, Inc.
DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—I seem to be out of step with the rest of the bridge world. I bid when my partners expect me to pass, and pass when they want me to bid again. Can you help by explaining which situations are forcing and which are not?—P. Berry, Atlanta, Ga. (This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)

A.—You need a book, not a bridge column, to answer your question fully. But I will try to present some guidelines.

First, you have to differentiate between two types of forcing auctions:
a) Those that are forcing to game; and b) One-round forces.

Let us consider game forces first.
1a) A demand bid of two in a suit. That is unconditionally forcing to game, except when the opponents have been doubled, or where opener simply rebids his suit after getting a negative response. Then if responder has a completely trickless hand, he may pass below game.

2a) A jump shift by opener:
NORTH SOUTH
1 ♠ 1 ♥
2 ♠ 2 ♣

Neither partner may pass short of game.
3a) A jump shift by responder:
NORTH SOUTH
1 ♠ 1 ♣
1 NT 3 ♠

4a) An immediate cue-bid of the opponents' suit:
WEST NORTH
1 ♥ 2 ♥

Bids that are a one-round force:
1b) A change of suit by responder:
NORTH SOUTH
1 ♠ 1 NT
2 ♠ 2 ♣

Exception: where opener's rebid is one no trump and responder's second suit is lower-ranking than his first, it is not forcing.
2b) A reverse by opener:
NORTH SOUTH
1 ♠ 1 NT
2 ♠ 2 ♣

The reverse is forcing, but only to three of opener's first suit.
3b) A reverse by responder, even if preceded by a 1 NT rebid by opener:

NORTH SOUTH
1 ♠ 1 ♥
1 NT 2 ♣

The next series of bids are highly invitational, but not forcing:
1c) A jump rebid of his own suit by opener after a one-over-one response:
NORTH SOUTH
1 ♥ 1 ♠
3 ♥ 3 ♠

2c) A jump rebid of his own suit by responder, after a non-forcing rebid by opener:
NORTH SOUTH
1 ♥ 1 ♠
1 NT 3 ♠

3c) A jump rebid of two no trump by opener:
NORTH SOUTH
1 ♠ 1 ♣
2 NT

This jump can be passed by responder if he is sub-minimum for his response, or if his hand consists of nothing but a couple of queens and a couple of jacks, making it of doubtful use to opener.

Send any questions for this column to: Charles Goren and Omar Sharif, care of this newspaper. Each week a prize of a copy of the new "Goren's Bridge Complete," a $9.95 value, will be awarded for the question judged the best received.

See Help From 'Gang Of Four'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A pro-abortion group says anti-abortion efforts by a "Gang of Four" — President Reagan and Sen. Jesse Helms, Orrin Hatch and John East — are helping its cause.

Nanette Falkenberg, executive director of the National Abortion Rights Action League, said that because of the four men, the organization's membership has increased by 50 percent and its budget has doubled.

"We give this 'Gang of Four' full credit for convincing the pro-choice majority that legal abortion is threatened," she told a news conference Thursday.

A newspaper log should burn about as long as a wood log. Roll your newspaper log as tight as possible. The tighter it is rolled the better it will burn.

STEP ONE

After you have squeezed it tightly, bind it with a coat hanger or metal wire. Soaking the rolled newspaper in water and letting it dry completely will "season" the newspaper and make it burn more efficiently.

STEP TWO

STEP THREE

Finally, stack about six dried newspaper logs in a crisscross to provide more ventilation to the fire and light it. Enjoy.

Federal Voting Rights Act Still Stirring Debate

By BESSIE FORD

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — Southern blacks say extending the Voting Rights Act will protect them from gerrymandering and literacy tests, but most white politicians in the South want the law to die or apply nationwide.

"There's no ability to erase the history of denial," said civil rights leader Jesse Jackson. "The focus needs to be on enforcement of the Voting Rights Act — not a release from it."

The U.S. House of Representatives voted last year to extend the law, which is scheduled to expire in August. But the proposed extension has triggered a major confrontation between Senate liberals and conservatives.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, the South Carolina Republican who chairs the Senate Judiciary Committee, is among those who believe the law should apply to all states, not just a few.

"This federal law, just as others, should apply to everybody and at the same time give everybody an equal chance to seek relief from the unusual requirements of federal preclearance of state laws," Thurmond said.

The Voting Rights Act, which overrides states' discriminatory registration and voting requirements, was passed in 1965 after Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. attracted national attention with his massive and sometimes violent civil rights marches.

The act applies fully to nine states — Alabama, Alaska, Arizona, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina, Texas and Virginia — and partially to 13 others — California, Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Hawaii, Idaho, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Hampshire, New York, North Carolina, South Dakota and Wyoming.

The affected states were required to get Justice Department approval of election law changes, including reapportionment, and federal registrars and poll watchers were dispatched to make sure states did not discourage black voters.

King's widow, Coretta Scott King, said some opposition to extending the act comes from people who "believe that discrimination at the polls is a thing of the past."

"That's not true. In fact," she said, "many sophisticated tricks are still being employed to deny minorities their voting rights."

Unless the Voting Rights Act is extended, Mrs. King believes whites will use at-large elections, gerrymandering, last minute polling place changes and "outright threats and intimidation" to scare off black voters.

"All Americans have a stake in this legislation because voting rights is the heart and soul of the American dream," Mrs. King said.

Alabama blacks credit former Gov. George C. Wallace with creating the confrontation climate in the early 1960s that forced Congress to pass the Voting Rights Act. Wallace, however, declined to comment on extending the act.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., has suggested President Reagan was trying to "weaken" legislation to extend the Voting Rights Act by delaying tactics — an accusation the White House has vigorously denied.

The Justice Department has not counted the lawsuits filed under the 16-year-old law, but a spokesman estimated the number at 100.

One of the major cases in Alabama involved a black challenge of Mobile's at-large method of electing city commissioners. The U.S. Supreme Court upheld blacks' claims the three-man commission denied black representation and ordered Mobile to replace it with a mayor and city council.

The Justice Department reviewed 34,798 changes in election laws originating from the 22 states supervised by the Voting Rights Act and objected to 811 of the changes through 1980.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and Sen. John P. East, R-N.C., are firmly opposed to extending the act. But only one of North Carolina's House members, Republican Rep. Gene Johnston, voted against it.

"The act is no longer needed," said Helms. "It is unfair to single out certain areas of the country ... for federal intervention."

Alabama state Sen. Earl Hilliard of Birmingham, one of three blacks in the Alabama Senate, said he could not have been elected without the Voting Rights Act. "It's good having Uncle Sam on your side," he said.

Hilliard and another black lawmaker, Sen. J. Richmond Pearson of Birmingham, said white racists would regain control of the election process if the Voting Rights Act expired and blacks would resist — possibly with violence.

"It would bring on a lot of confusion that ought to be settled in the system," Pearson said. "There would be a whole lot of chaos. Blacks' expectations are greater now than ever before."

Black North Carolina state Sen. Henry Frye of Guilford said extending the law nationwide would weaken its enforcement.

"You have to go after the worst offenders," he said, "and historically the south was the worst offender."

Frye said he was denied the right to vote in 1956 because he could not pass North Carolina's literacy test. "They asked me to name the people who signed the Declaration of Independence," he said.

Robert W. Saunders of Tampa, Fla., chief of the Office of Civil Rights for the Southeast from 1966-76, said the Voting Rights Act was "the greatest piece of legislation to come down the pike."

"Discrimination went on in Alabama, Mississippi, Georgia and even parts of Florida," Saunders said, and extending the act would mean "states could not backslide."

"There is no guarantee that states won't discriminate unless there is a federal act that states will act uniformly. We are optimistic (of passage) although we know there are a lot of efforts underway to weaken it," said Saunders, a former field secretary of the Florida NAACP.

Mississippi black state Rep. Fred Banks, president of the Jackson NAACP chapter, noted his state has no black congressmen although 35 percent of Mississippi's population is black.

"Blacks hold less than 10 percent of the seats in the Legislature," Banks said, "and that number was achieved only after 13 years of litigation fought tooth-and-nail by some of today's advocates for the demise or crippling of the Voting Rights Act."

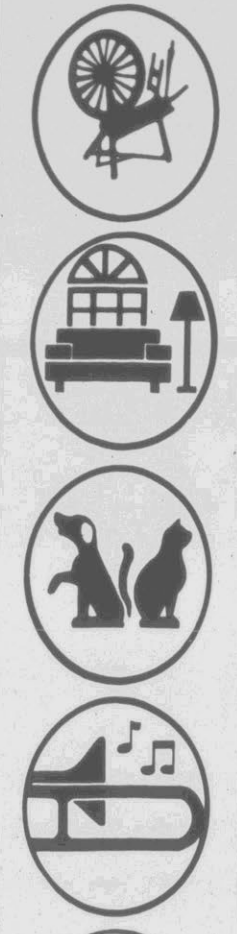

But a white Mississippi lawmaker, Rep. Stone Barefield of Hattiesburg, accused the Justice Department of bias in reviewing election law changes.

"When the Justice Department makes its decisions regarding voting change submission for purely political reasons ... we live under a government of men rather than of laws," Barefield said.

The Southern Christian Leadership Conference, meanwhile, is using the voting fraud conviction and imprisonment of two elderly Alabama black women — Julia Wilder and Maggie Bozeman — as a rallying point to pressure Congress into extending the act.

The SCLC drew on some 28 state, regional and national groups to organize a 140-mile march from Carrollton, Ala., to Montgomery to focus attention on Mrs. Wilder and Bozeman.

"The failure to extend the Voting Rights Act would expose the poor, blacks and browns to increased intimidation," said SCLC President Joseph Lowery. "Acts of discrimination regarding voting rights do not occur in a vacuum, but in a broad environment of insidious insensitivity and hostility."

The Real Estate Corner

In the houses we build, a little energy goes a long, long way.

The time is rapidly approaching when utility bills may surpass your mortgage payment. At Continental Homes, we build your home with many energy saving innovations. One example is a special optional insulation package developed by Continental's engineers, in conjunction with Owens-Corning. It's proved to offer a much higher degree of energy efficiency. Because we build your home inside our huge plants, bad weather, labor availability and material shortages are not a problem. So we also save you considerably in construction cost and time. At Continental Homes, we build your home to save energy. And a lot more.

Life As It's Lived

By GAIL MICHAELS

I'm sure that the founding fathers had nothing but good intentions when they drew up the Bill of Rights, but that one document has created more havoc than all of our wars and Lyndon Johnson's appendectomy scar combined.

Because of it, everyone in this country believes he has rights. On the surface that may seem justifiable. But the problem comes when one person's rights violate another person's rights, or what he perceives are his rights.

Thus we have welfare rights versus taxpayer rights, smoker's rights versus non-smoker's rights, dog-owner's rights versus pedestrian's rights, in short, on some issue or another, each citizen of the United States is in opposition to his fellow.

As a student in the '60s, I believed that all this conflict could be solved by the simple doctrine of fairness. With this in mind, I took up my placard and marched against injustices as diverse as war and beauty pageants.

But as a homeowner, taxpayer and parent of the '80s, I find the concept of fairness relative at best. For instance, I used to rest assured that the inevitable physical injury suffered by any criminal who succeeded in breaking into a house booby-trapped by my two highly skilled children was simple justice. Then I read that a thief not only can sue under such circumstances; he can win.

Even more confusing to me than criminal rights are children's rights. I guess I'm backwards, but when my emotionally and physically healthy daughter starts bugging me about her rights, my reply is as indelicate as my mother's used to be.

"You just don't understand," she told me recently. "I want to be free."

"Who's free?"
"You are. And I should be, too. I'm an American just like you, I'm not a Russian."

"The Russians have the Communist Party. We have the Utilities Commission."

"What does that mean?"
"It means that everything's relative." I sighed.

"You think I'm free because I can tell you what to do, and I think you're free because you don't have to worry about telling you what to do."

"That doesn't make sense," she sniffed. "I want to be free, and I want to live in my own house."

"Who will pay for it?"
"I'll get a job."

"What can you do?"
"I'll be an astronaut."

"Children can't be astronauts. They haven't had time to learn enough."

She threw up her hands in despair. "You see what I mean. You don't think I know enough about nothin'. You don't think I know what's good for me to eat. You think spinach is good for me, and I know it makes my stomach churn. And you think you know how much fresh air I need, and I know I need to watch some more cartoons so I can learn about the world faster."

This brought us back to the source of conversation. "Well, you'll have to learn about the world some other time. Now you're going to get on your coat and go outside or I'm going to call up Maura's mom and tell her that you can't spend the night tonight."

She emerged from her room 10 minutes later with a tear-stained face and a large piece of cardboard. On it was printed in large red letters, "Kids shood hav rites!"

I stared out the window as she marched up and down the front yard for an hour.

"A little bit of deja vu, my dear?" Phillip chuckled.

"I suppose so. I was just thinking about getting out there with my own sign."

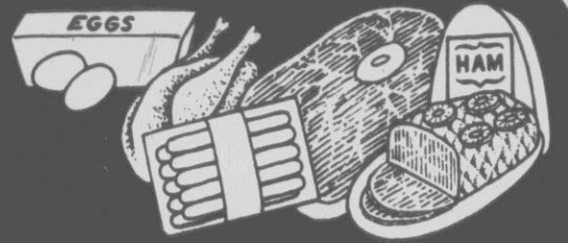

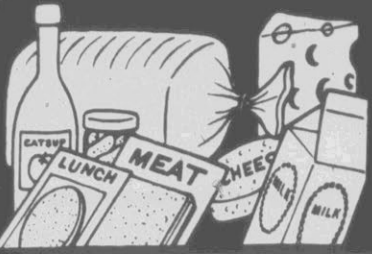

"I wouldn't do that 'if I were you," he said. "It might start a riot."

Carson: Returning To His Roots

Johnny Carson returns to his hometown, Norfolk, Neb., where he meets some old friends and encounters a few surprises, in "Johnny Goes Home," an NBC special, airing Monday, Feb. 15 (9:30-11 p.m.).

The program, Carson's first in-depth, camera-eye look at the midwestern city — opens with views of him driving through the countryside near Norfolk.

Johnny visits the house that he lived in as a teenager and goes through it with a member of the family which now lives there — young Wayne Kumm Jr. During a tour of the place, Wayne and Johnny braved a chill wind to take turns shooting baskets in a hoop outside the garage. "Johnny said he wasn't too good," Wayne said, "then he made three straight baskets."

Throughout the special, home movies taken by Johnny's father offer a counterpoint of Carson as a teenager in the same locales he visits now.

There is also a rap session involving Johnny and six of his closest Norfolk schoolmates, including Dr. John Busch, a dentist in Colorado. Busch clearly remembers Carson's first venture into the world of entertainment — as a magician billed as The Great Carson. "I was his handler," said Busch. "That was during high school. That whole period was lots of fun." Busch describes Carson as being very loyal, sincere and having solid Midwestern values.

"Johnny was always clever, always quick on his feet," added Busch. "Once in an English class, the teacher asked us to describe the organs of speech. Johnny said something like 'Well, the jaws and teeth are two.' The teacher said they counted as one because they could not be moved separately. Johnny responded: 'My father can.'"

Among the other events in the special are: a brief magic show by Carson at the high school auditorium; a bike ride through downtown Norfolk; a visit to the now-closed Granada Theater, where Johnny was an usher; a return to a railroad track bed over the Elkhorn River (Johnny tries to hang from the bed by his fingers, but ends up in the river); a dinner dance at the local ballroom for the high school class of 1943; and a halftime event at a football game where 6,000 people throw a surprise party for Johnny.

JOHNNY CARSON STANDS in front of the now-closed movie theater in Norfolk, Neb., in which he ushered as a youth, during the filming of the NBC-TV special, "Johnny Goes Home," airing Monday, Feb. 15 (9:30-11 p.m.).

Rocky Makes A Comeback

Rocky Balboa is back and, despite promising never to fight again, he goes headhunting for his nemesis, Apollo Creed, in "Rocky II." This sequel to the blockbuster 1976 hit "Rocky" will be making its network television premiere on Sunday, Feb. 14 (8-10:30 p.m.) on CBS. The cast of the first installment — Sylvester Stallone, Talia Shire, Burt Young, Carl Weathers and Burgess Meredith — reprise their roles.

SYLVESTER STALLONE AND TALIA SHIRE were both nominated for Academy Awards for their performances in "Rocky," the hit Oscar-winning motion picture. The sequel, "Rocky II," will be rebroadcast on Sunday, Feb. 14 (8-10:30 p.m.), on CBS-TV.

The story opens with a recap of the grueling bout that ended "Rocky." Balboa (Stallone) and Creed (Weathers) have both been beaten to a pulp, with Creed, the champ, having been deemed the winner of the slugfest.

Rocky, now sufficiently healed and released from the hospital, proposes to his shy girlfriend, Adrian (Miss Shire), marries her and, with the money earned from the fight, buys a modest house. Mr. and Mrs. Balboa are ready to settle down, and wisely so because, according to the doctor, if Rocky ever fights again, he could be killed.

Life in the suburbs soon begins to slip down the tubes — Rocky unsuccessfully tries his hand at making TV commercials, the money in the bank account dwindles and a steady job is nowhere to be found. Still, Rocky refuses to fight, and Adrian is equally adamant that he never step into the ring again.

never, anything can happen. Rocky, of course, fights again and even receives Adrian's blessing — this coming after she awakens from a coma after all, folks, what's a movie without a little contrived drama?

The super-match between Rocky and Apollo Creed is on, with each fighter preparing to knock the other one into kingdom come. The denouement of the film is obvious, but entertaining, and designed so that a sequel will fit nicely onto the final scene.

Although Stallone worked hard to achieve authenticity in the fight scenes, he admitted that boxing is a sport he could never pursue personally. "You have to be somewhat demented. I think, or poverty stricken and desperate," he once said describing the sport. "It's painful, unrewarding, fleeting, ephemeral. You knock a guy down, and then it's all over."

Tell that to Sugar Ray Leonard — I doubt that you'll hear the bell for Round 2.

However, as any insurance man worth his weight in actuarial charts will tell you — never say

THE Rook Look AT GARMENT CARE

DICKIE ROOK

A Brief History

Many stories have been told about the origin of drycleaning. One centered around a can of camphene that was upset during a lovers' quarrel, another, a lamp that was overturned on a table scarf, another a French sailor who fell into a vat of turpentine. In all of the stories, a textile article was accidentally saturated with a solvent and, then appeared clean after the liquid evaporated, always causing great surprise.

Following this discovery, Jolly Belin, a cleaning firm in Paris in the 1840's, is credited with having been the first to use camphene to actually clean garments. After the introduction of camphene, "garment scourers and dyers" found other solvents which could also be used, including benzola, kerosene and gasoline.

With these dangerously inflammable solvents, drycleaning was a hazardous business until the introduction in 1926 of the first petroleum solvent ever produced specifically for drycleaning — the Stoddard solvent. It was much less flammable, and had the advantage of being free from odor and impurities.

In the 1930's, perchloroethylene, a nonflammable solvent, was introduced and is today, used in the great majority of drycleaning plants.

Birthstone OF THE Month Amethyst

February's birth stone the Amethyst. The violet and purple varieties of quartz provide the most prized, and in many respects the most interesting of the large family of quartz minerals. The name Amethyst is said to have been derived from the Greek word "Amethystos" which is translated as not drunken, and was given to the stone from the curious belief that a wearer would not suffer from excessive consumption of an alcoholic beverage. As an Amulet an Amethyst was believed to dispel sleep, sharpen the intellect, an antidote against poison and to preserve the wearer against harm in battle.

Lana Turner returns to television after an 11-year absence to guest star on "Falcon Crest," airing Friday, Feb. 19 (10-11 p.m. on CBS). Miss Turner appears as Jacqueline Perrault, Chase Gioberti's wealthy mother who mysteriously shows up at the estate against Angie Channing's bitter disapproval.

Miss Turner epitomized Hollywood glamour during the 1940s, when she was billed as "The Sweater Girl," a moniker that Warner Bros. created to heighten the publicity for her first film — "They Won't Forget." Although Miss Turner was supposedly "discovered" at the soda counter of Schwab's Drugstore, her serendipitous discovery actually took place at the Top Hat Cafe, where she had gone for a Coke after skipping a high school class.

Her career soon blossomed as did her turbulent homelife — by the time she was 24, Miss Turner had endured two stormy marriages — the first to bandleader Artie Shaw (they eloped on their first date) and the second to Joseph Stephen Crane III, a sporadically employed businessman. In all, she has been married to businessman Bob Topping Jr. and another to actor Lex Barker — and an attempted suicide. Despite her emotional problems, Miss Turner continued to make movies. Among her most recent films are "Madame X," "The Big Cube" and "Bittersweet Love." Miss Turner's last three marriages took place in the 1960s, to Fred May, Robert Eaton and Ronald Dante (this final marriage ending in 1972).

VETERAN FILM ACTOR Lana Turner will be making a guest appearance on the Friday, Feb. 19 (10-11 p.m.) episode of "Falcon Crest." This is Miss Turner's first role in 11 years.

Miss Turner then began a string of films, including "The Postman Always Rings Twice," which is considered by many to be her finest work.

By 1957, she had endured more emotional turmoil as the result of two more failed marriages — one

Novels On TV

"Romance Theatre," a half-hour syndicated series direct from the pages of popular gothic romance novels, is being planned as a daily afternoon show. Stories will change weekly, with each one running five episodes. It sounds like it could be a winner when you consider how many paperbacks of this type are currently being sold.

Freezing But Warm

The weather may have been minus 11 degrees in Texas, but Bill and Susan Hayes of "Days of Our Lives" received a warm welcome from the West Texas Rehabilitation Center. They participated in their seventh telethon for the Center with Shari Lewis and Johnny Desmond. "Bill and I helped raise over $800,000, but I've never been so cold in my life," said Susan. "My lungs felt like they were packed in ice."

Tracy Austin is now an established member of the women's professional tennis circuit. One of her first accomplishments was in 1977 when she became the youngest player to compete in the Wimbledon championships at age 14.

Fast Tracking

Stock car racers at the Daytona Speedway can actually average the same speed as the sophisticated cars at Indianapolis Speedway. The reason being that the Daytona turns are banked which helps the cars hug the track through the curves, but the turns at Indy are flat which causes the drivers to slow down.

Black: Shedding His Label

Jimmy Black may finally be shedding his label as the unsung hero of North Carolina's basketball team. Usually, Black's name doesn't appear in too many headlines. Most of the attention focused on the No. 2-ranked Tar Heels has gone to All-America candidates James Worthy and Sam Perkins, Matt Doherty or Michael Jordan, who is having a brilliant freshman season.

Although his contributions often go overlooked, Black seems content to simply run the offense, get the ball to the open man, play solid defense and let the accolades go to his teammates. Black, the only starting senior on the squad, will be at the helm of Carolina when they meet Georgia on Sunday, Feb. 14 (1-3 p.m.) on NBC.

Jimmy has played a lot of great games at Carolina, but his efforts against N.C. State and Duke were certainly two of his best," said Coach Dean Smith. In those two conference games, Black totaled 25 points and 17 assists.

"Jimmy does everything we want a point guard to do and does it well," Smith said. "That includes scoring when the shot is there."

Pike's Peek

HOLLYWOOD — ANSON WILLIAMS and wife, LORRIE, back from visiting her parents, GENERAL and MRS. FRED MAHAFFEY in Germany, (he commands the third Infantry Div.) report that the threats of the Red Brigade are very real. They were under constant protection by the armed Military Police and undercover Military Intelligence. Now at work on "Happy Days" WILLIAMS says his number-one priority is to return to Germany "to put on full-fledged concerts for our troops. They need to know that WE know what they are doing for us."

NANCY WALKER, recovering from her recent surgery, has been signed to make a special guest-starring appearance in the '42" episode of "Trapper John, M.D."

"Dynasty" star JOAN COLLINS and CHUCK FRIES will team to film a two-hour TV movie on the story of JOAN'S daughter KATIE. Eight-year-old KATIE made a miraculous recovery after an almost fatal automobile accident that left her in a coma for months. JOAN will play herself in the film.

CAROL BURNETT'S next two-hour drama for CBS, "Beatrice," will be filmed entirely in Los Angeles, permitting CAROL to be with her husband, JOE HAMILTON during his recuperation from a heart attack.

Rumor has it CAROL LAWRENCE is planning to wed real estate tycoon GREGG GUYDAS early this spring — bets are on that ex-hubby ROBERT GOULET will not be asked to sing at the wedding.

Lewis: gearing up for auto safety.

FOR DREW LEWIS, Secretary of Transportation

Why is it that new cars are sometimes sold with serious defects and have to be recalled? —E.R., Odessa, Texas

● Frequently, the reason why the industry has to recall cars after they are sold is because some kinds of car problems develop after the car has been in use for some time. These kinds of problems are not detected during the presale inspection of the car because they do not crop up until later. During my tenure I expect to vigorously enforce the motor vehicle safety laws and oversee vehicle recalls. Traditionally, most automobile-recall campaigns have been conducted voluntarily by the automobile industry. While vehicle-recall campaigns always relate to safety problems, often the problems are not life-threatening.

FOR JOANNE WOODWARD, actress, director, PBS TV's Come Along With Me

Since this was your first time directing a TV special, did your husband, Paul Newman, give you much help? —S.B., Pueblo, Colo.

● He helped with technical aspects, getting me to think about camera angles and different ways to shoot scenes. And when a ghost voice was needed, he pitched in. His credit reads: "Voice of Hughie — P.L. Newman."

FOR DR. ZION YU, acupuncturist

I know acupuncture relieves pain, but can it make people look younger? —H.L., Monterey, Calif.

● Yes. It has been known in China for centuries as "rejuvenation treatment." It is painless and leaves no scars. It firms the skin, fills out the hollows and improves facial color by increasing blood circulation. The rejuvenation method is augmented by general acupuncture.

FOR POLLY HOLLIDAY, actress

Now that your series, Flo, is canceled, will you return to the cast of Alice? —L.E., Fort Smith, Ark.

● No. To return to Alice would be a step backward in my career. As soon as I made that decision I was offered a wonderful role in The Shady Hill Kidnapping, which was the premier program on public television's new weekly drama series, American Playhouse. I took a gamble and it paid off.

FROM THE "ASK" EDITOR

COUPLES: A guest at the recent nuptials of Kelly Collins (Bo Derek's sister) to Mike McGill reports it didn't rate a "10" in terms of opulence. She tells us the bride wore an inexpensive dress, the pair exchanged rings which together cost $150 and the reception was held at the home of Kelly's mother. . . . On the other hand, Ringo Starr and Barbara Bach, married several months ago, turned up at a party with matching diamond earrings. . . . In the wake of the Liz Taylor-

John Warner split, a friend of the two leaks this tidbit: Liz can't resist her old films on TV and wanted John to watch, too, something he didn't relish. By the time the late show was over, it was almost time for his alarm to ring — at 6:15 A.M. . . . As Susan Flannery, star of Dallas, was draining spaghetti she was cooking for a special dinner ("I was trying very hard to impress"), the whole lot slid down the garbage disposal. Susan wanted to slide down with it ("There went my dinner"), but her maid fished out the pasta ("It got stuck halfway") and rinsed it off saying, "They'll never know the difference." . . . ROMANCE:

Dorothy Greene-Pepper, author of Hate Poems for Ex-Lovers, or How to Break Up Laughing, and a palmist who has studied the hands of thousands of "mate-able" men and women, offers Valentine's Day tips on what hands reveal about love: If he keeps holding your hand long after the initial clasp, don't let him go: Protective men are hard to come by. . . . A man who holds your hand for everyone to see is proud, a braggart or just loves you so much he wants everyone to know. . . . Does he hold your hand under the table? Yes? He loves secrets, is shy — or could be married and hopes to explain you away as a mere acquaintance. . . . Beware of the person who drops your hand each time a friend comes up to say hello. That means you'll always play second fiddle in her/his life. . . . If a woman holds a man's hand so long it brings on perspiration and finger cramps, watch out. This woman will never let you out of her sight, and you'll have to make excuses for your absences. . . . The date that removes her beau's hand before he's finished shaking it is the one who will never let that man finish a sentence. . . . A firm handclasp indicates tenacity in love and other matters.

PRO AND CON

Should Convicts Continue To Be Allowed to Draw Social Security Benefits?

(Question submitted by Wilson Kerns, Walla Walla, Wash.)

Send questions of national significance, on a postcard, to "Pro & Con," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $10 for those published.

PRO David Rothenberg, executive director, Fortune Society (a self-help group for ex-offenders)

If we expect prisoners who return to society (99 percent do) to be less alienated, then we must include them in our socialization process. The small amount allowed for Social Security might be the stabilizing factor for released prisoners.

And this is money which he or she has paid for through past employment. The goal should be to lessen alienation and crime, not find new ways to punish and perpetuate hostility.

CON Representative Greg Carman (R-N.Y.), member, Select Committee on Aging

It costs the American people from $15,000 to $25,000 a year to keep a convicted criminal in jail. It's ludicrous to pay their room and board and, with Social Security payments, give them cigarette money on top of that. I've submitted a bill that would suspend the benefits of convicted felons as long as they are behind bars. This bill would save the Social Security system over $100 million over the next 20 years.

The Softer Side of Hard-Boiled Mickey Spillane

Critics have nailed his Mike Hammer novels as not much to chew on. Now Spillane, the self-proclaimed "Bubble Gum Champ of American Literature," is writing for a juvenile jury.

Thomas S. England/People Weekly

Spillane with daughter Kathy and author Gerry. All the kids live nearby and visit often.

By Dave Gerry

Mickey Spillane peers, squinting, out over the salt marsh behind his Murrells Inlet, S.C., home and shakes his head. "Progress," he growls, "has caught up with me again." Lately, the once-quiet seacoast he thought would remain unspoiled has become cluttered with condominiums, and Spillane, 63, feels his privacy being threatened.

"I've been looking at land in West Florida. Stone crabs in the backyard and a place to put my boat. The sidewalks get hauled in at 9 P.M." He nods, reflecting. "I think it's time to do another buy-me-a-house book," he says.

But the books that everybody's all-time tough-guy mystery writer is turning out lately have taken some people by surprise. They're literally kids' stuff: The Day the Sea Rolled Back and, just out this month, The Ship That Never Was, both mystery books for children age 9 to 14.

How come everyone's acting so surprised, though? Writing for young people is how it all began for Spillane.

Dave Gerry, a close friend of Mickey Spillane, is a freelance writer who frequently writes on sports topics.

"I got my start doing stories for kids — comic books," he explains. "I've never denied those comics. In fact, I brag about them every chance I get. I'm the Bubble Gum Champ of American literature. But remember, there's a lot of bubble gum sold."

It was 1946 when Spillane, just out of the Army, returned to Brooklyn, N.Y., and, with some friends, converted an old store-front into a comic-book factory. They packaged the complete product on the premises, then just sent it out to the printers. There was Blue Bolt, Human Torch, Sub-Mariner and Captain America. A great training ground for a writer. "You didn't have time to play author," recalls Spillane. "If you wanted to make a living, you had to crank them out. Let all the author-types knock me. They'd have gone broke in that game."

But as fun as it was, Spillane had a wife now, nicknamed Baby, a soft-eyed brunette from Mississippi. A war bride.

"And we were going to have kids. We weren't going to have them in the city. All cities are sinkholes. I knew it even then."

It took him short of two weeks to change a proposed comic-book detective hero named Mike Danger into private eye Mike Hammer, the hard-boiled detective of I, the Jury who plugged a dame in the gut with a .45 — she'd killed his friend — and told her, "It was easy." Mickey Spillane remembers, "My buddy, Joe Gill, used to read the pages as they came off the typewriter. 'Listen to this junk, will ya?' he'd say. 'Spillane grins. 'Everybody agreed it would never sell. You know what they say about last laughs?'"

Though panned by critics, the book was a huge success. To date, six and a half million copies have been sold.

By this time, Spillane had blown town. The $1,000 advance for Jury provided the down payment for a piece of farmland outside Newburgh, N.Y., 50 miles north of New York City. Spillane, who'd captained the swim team at Fort Hays Kansas State College, built a home, getting the walls up and a roof on before winter's first snow.

He kept a hot hand on his typewriter during those years. His motto: "Inspiration is the urgent need for money!"

By 1952 there were seven Mike Hammer books, including My Gun Is Quick, The Big Kill and Kiss Me Deadly. All of them were listed among the 10 most-translated books in the world. Curtly, he told a TV host: "Jules Verne, Tolstoy — that other Russian — they're lucky I didn't write three more." When Ernest Hemingway commented that "Mickey Spillane's still a comic-book writer," Spillane remarked, "Hemingway who?"

Meanwhile, Spillane and Baby counted the children as they arrived: Kathy, Ward, Michael, Caroline (now 32, 31, 26 and 24, respectively). But by then the single-lane dirt road out front of his property was two-lane paved, and tract-style homes were crowding up shoulder to shoulder nearby.

"Progress!"

Spillane had been to Myrtle Beach as a judge for a Miss South Carolina beauty contest and had seen Murrells Inlet. Fishing boats. Quiet nights. Long sun-filled days for the kids to grow up in. And another dirt road. "I bought this house from out in the middle of the road. Never even looked inside. We packed up the kids and

Thomas S. England/People Weekly

From: The Ship That Never Was

"Somebody is watching us through a spyglass!" Larry said.

"Exactly, and we don't want to disturb them."

"You're right, Josh. Tonight we'll just sack out by the fire here and tomorrow, after they see that we're friendly, we'll find the way up there."

They need not have worried about that. Whatever went around their faces, whatever unguent was in that cloth held to their noses, made everything dreamlike. When they awoke, their hands and feet were tightly bound, their heads were throbbing balls of pain, and, framed in the only light they could see, was the black shadow of some monstrous creature that babbled wild sounds. Both the boys moaned in total despair.

Observations

Hearts and flowers. Happy St. Valentine's Day! While folks swap Valentines (a custom dating back to an ancient Roman festival when boys drew girls' names from a "love urn"), we've got some special treats in store for you. First, The Children's Story... but not just for children, coming up Thursday, Feb. 18, on the "Mobil Showcase Network" (check local listings for time and channel). Actually, it's a chilling adult tale, based on a book by James Clavell, author of Shōgun. Set in a future America conquered by an anonymous "them," the story unfolds during a single classroom period, as a pretty teacher harrowingly subverts the belief of her second graders in God, country and family. It's gripping drama.

Love at sea. Next, turn to your local PBS station on Sunday, Feb. 21, for a cause de scandal that rocked England. The excitement's on I Remember Nelson, a four-part "Masterpiece Theatre" biography of England's greatest naval hero. Lord Nelson's affairs—onshore and off—are vividly brought to life through the recollections of his wife; the husband of Lady Hamilton, who was Nelson's mistress; the captain of Nelson's flagship, HMS Victory; and a young ordinary seaman who participated in the battle of Trafalgar.

"Don't waste your ammunition. He's in love with Masterpiece Theatre."

Zesty sampler. "Masterpiece Theatre" next turns to a different sort of love in a different age in Love In A Cold Climate. It's a cool, wintery tale of England's madcap high society in the 1930s, based on the Nancy Mitford best seller, and it begins March 28. Flickers follows on May 23 with an amusing look at a traveling film salesman's rapid rise from "gags to riches" in the pioneering days of British cinema. The "Masterpiece Theatre" season wraps up with Pride & Prejudice, Disraeli, and Testament of Youth—three old favorites that brought raves from critics.

Real life. Have you latched onto our different, real-life PBS offering yet? There are still eight more segments of Life on Earth, the most complete story ever filmed of life on our planet, on Tuesdays (check local listings for time and station). Featuring famed natural historian David Attenborough, the Mobil-funded series is a globe-spanning labor of love that took three years of filming to trace two billion years of evolution. On next Tuesday's episode, you'll follow Attenborough as he trails the exotic coelacanth—a fish thought to be extinct for millions of years that crawls on flipper-like fins and bears live young. And you'll be fascinated by frogs that grow protective skin over eggs carried on their backs. It's another Valentine treat to you in a television season filled with goodies.

It's a fact: The "Mobil Showcase Network" presentation of James Clavell's The Children's Story... but not just for children will be shown without any commercial messages.

MICKEY SPILLANE

Lynn Goldsmith/LGI

left Newburgh."

In the 60's the marriage broke up. Spillane shrugs, making no salient comments. No excuses. "Who ever knows exactly why? Mistakes are made. Looking back doesn't change things."

In 1965 he married an aspiring actress/singer, Sherri Malinou. Though they're still married, they currently live apart. "She despises it here. She loves the glitter and shine of Los Angeles." His mouth twists. "The Inlet's too small for her but getting too big for me all the time lately."

After a hiatus from writing books in the late 50's, Spillane wrote sporadically through the 60's and 70's, creating several new heroes. "If there was something I wanted to buy but didn't want to go into the bank account for it." There were new-car books. A new-boat book. Books to support the kids and his new wife.

There has been no crumbling of Mickey Spillane's financial base. His 24 books have had worldwide sales of over 150 million copies. That's fortunate, because he spends plenty of money for beer to entertain people who drop by to say hello. "A lot less nowadays as Miller Brewing keeps me well supplied." An extra bonus for his appearances in the popular Miller Lite beer TV commercials.

In the late 1970's there was another hiatus from writing, and only the Lite commercials kept Spillane in the public eye. He has nothing but admiration for the other famous names—such as Rodney Dangerfield, Dick Butkus and Boog Powell—who have also plugged Lite. "All those guys are great to be with. Every one of them. All of us amateurs doing a whale of a job as professional actors."

And Miss Lee Meredith—the beautiful blonde who has also endorsed Lite.

"Yeah, don't forget Lee." He grins. "Never forget Lee."

The most recent writing hiatus is definitely over now. "I've got three more kids' books planned in the series. When the kids grow up, I'll have a built-in audience for the old reprints and for anything new I write."

The books have been a special challenge. "I honestly never would have returned to a young market if an editor from a book company hadn't told me that kind of stuff was something I couldn't do successfully."

Maybe Spillane has told him about last laughs, too.

"It's no big deal. I'm a pro. I always have been. If Shakespeare were selling big today, I'd write like Shakespeare."

Last year, Kevin Dobson played Mike Hammer to near perfection in a TV movie, and another Hammer caper with Spillane himself writing the script is in the talking stage.

Crime fiction's tough old practitioner is also promising another Mike Hammer shoot-'em-up novel. "I've got this great ending already written. I'd tell it to you but maybe you'd swipe it. Ah, what's the difference? I'd only think up another one that would be better."

A new Mike Hammer. Out front of Spillane's house, workers are installing water and sewer lines. A front-end loader growls, belching black smoke. There is talk of paving the dirt road he loves.

Progress has found him again.

Another buy-a-house book for that gorgeous piece of property on the Florida Gulf Coast?

Mickey Spillane brings his eyes back, not wanting to leave his Inlet. There are memories here but...

"Maybe," he says.

The U.S. Postal Service has conceived what promises to be the philatelic event of the decade: the unprecedented issue in 1982 of 50 new stamps depicting the official Bird and Flower of each of the 50 States that make up our proud Nation. This issue seems sure to be one of the most beautiful and important issues in U.S. postal history.

This is the first time that the beautiful, official Birds and Flowers of every one of the Fifty States will have appeared in a single U.S. postage stamp issue. It also marks only the second time in history that a single U.S. stamp issue has consisted of 50 different stamps (the first such issue was quickly snapped up by astute collectors). These two facts alone, without any consideration of the beauty of the stamps themselves, seem destined to make State Birds and Flowers one of the most highly-coveted U.S. stamp issues of all time.

First Day Covers of This Issue Can Be Reserved Now

In conjunction with this outstanding new issue, the Postal Commemorative Society has arranged to have a series of fifty beautiful, full-color Covers postmarked by U.S. postal authorities with the official one-day-only First Day of Issue postmark of each of these new State Birds and Flowers stamps. This postmark forever insures the limited-edition status of this remarkable State Birds and Flowers First Day Cover collection. Each of the fifty First Day Covers in this collection features a privately-commissioned original work of art depicting the State's official Bird and Flower. These are faithfully portrayed in full color by Chuck Ripper, one of America's foremost wildlife artists.

The precise strokes of his brush depict the rich, red plumage of Ohio's Cardinal set against its Red Carnation... New York's regal Eastern Bluebird accented against its royal Rose... every nuance of color, shading and detail, captured by this superb artist.

Each and every state bird and flower seems alive... authentic to the minutest detail... the plumage, the beak, the tail of each bird... the graceful green leaves and delicate blossoms of each flower... a breathtaking pageant of Nature's own masterpieces.

An impressive museum-quality portfolio of the finest American wildlife art, the State Birds and Flowers First Day Covers are truly a collection to be enjoyed now and passed on to future generations in your family.

THE FAMILY

Does Your Child Need Counseling?

By Roberta Plutzik

Children are resilient and quick to heal, the old adage goes. But the traumas many children experience today—such as parental divorce and remarriage, frequent relocation, day care by a procession of surrogates, family financial burdens and competition in school—can take an enormous toll. The result? Discipline problems, withdrawal from parents, frequent displays of anger, night terrors, bedwetting, anxiety, fear of separation from parents and depression, which is often expressed in the form of hyperactivity.

Today, help for children who experience these difficulties is widely available from psychiatrists, psychologists and social workers, who counsel children and even infants. A therapist can provide neutral ground and an open ear to help a child work through a crisis his parents may not be able to handle. In some cases he or she can help a child modify and comprehend inappropriate behavior.

But the decision to enroll a child in therapy is understandably difficult for parents. They may not be sure whether their child is just "going through a phase" or has a serious problem.

There are guidelines for concerned parents, however. Dr. Murray Kofkin, a child psychiatrist in private practice in New York City, suggests parents ask themselves these questions:

- Are my child's problems appropriate or inappropriate to his age? For instance, occasional temper tantrums at 2½ are normal; at 4, these tantrums are cause for some worry.

- Has my child developed to a certain level and then reverted to a more infantile stage? For instance, has he become toilet trained and then begun to wet his pants frequently again?

- Is my child's worrisome behavior occasional or constant? For instance, is he troubled by nightmares once or twice a month, or every night?

- Is there an obvious context that would help explain a behavior change—such as a new teacher?

Parents often fear that to consult a therapist is to admit to having made child-raising mistakes for which they will be severely criticized. "Most parents are very proud when it comes to raising children," says Dr. Sirgay Sanger, a child psychiatrist who directs the Parent-Child Center at New York City's St. Luke's Hospital. "They wrongly believe they automatically should know how to raise children in a very complicated society without needing help."

How can a therapist help a child, who has little or no language fluency? "What the child therapist does is to use play to find out what's on the child's mind and to help the child resolve it," explains Dr. Lawrence Selter, a child psychiatrist affiliated with Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston. "For instance, using dolls, children can play out little scenarios and make up stories that have significance in their own lives."

Once parents have made the commitment to find professional help for their child, choosing a psychiatrist, psychologist or social worker can be an arduous task. "The degree does not necessarily guarantee the quality of care," says Dr. Selter. "The important thing is to know the background of a specific therapist before selecting him or her. For references, see a family physician first."

The cost of therapy ranges from $20 to $25 an hour for a social worker to as high as $100 an hour for a psychiatrist.

Once a therapist has been chosen, the parents need a way to explain to the child who the therapist is and what he or she will be doing. "The parents should tell the child the absolute truth in language the child can understand," Dr. Kofkin advises. "There should never be any deception, never the explanation that 'I am going to take you to see a nice friend of mine.'"

Parents must be patient while therapy is going on. At the start of therapy, there is usually some immediate improvement in a child's behavior because he or she gets a sense of relief from talking to someone new about a problem. Often, parents get too encouraged by the improvement and think that the problem has dissipated. Generally, however, real improvement is achieved over several months—or, for very serious problems, several years of therapy.

No matter how careful parents are in their choice of specialist, there can be false starts. "If the therapy doesn't make sense to the parents, they should always consult someone else," urges Dr. Selter. FW

It's Carnival Time in New Orleans

Yes, it's the time of year for frivolity and joyful, light-hearted merry-making. Join us in the true Mardi Gras spirit.

by Marilyn Hansen

On Tuesday, Feb. 23 it will be Mardi Gras in New Orleans, the time of the famed Masquerade Ball. It is indeed a high-spirited festival in New Orleans and in many places around our country.

Vern Lanegrass is a native of Louisiana and a graduate of Loyola University in New Orleans. An accomplished cook, he now lives in Los Angeles.

Vern hosts the popular syndicated TV series The Hollywood Chef. He also contributes food features to varied newspapers and magazines.

Recently, I was at a dinner at Vern's Los Angeles home where he prepared a complete and authentic Mardi Gras dinner for 10 people. You may wish to reproduce selections from this true Creole menu at home. "Creole cooking is a combination of Spanish and French with the herbs and spices of the Indies and Africa," says Vern. It is one of the most distinctly American cuisines.

"I prefer serving champagne throughout the meal as it is a festive time and champagne is a festive beverage."

Steaming hot cups of New Orleans-style coffee and chicory served in delicate demitasse cups close the meal, along with the Bread Pudding with Whiskey Sauce.

Recipes follow.

BAKED CHICKEN JAMBALAYA

How Safe Is Donor Blood?

By Lesly Berger

According to Robert Hubbell, director of communications at the American Blood Commission in Arlington, Va., over 95 percent of all people who reach age 72 will need some type of blood byproducts, blood components or blood transfusion during their lives.

Fortunately, the quality of donated blood used in transfusions today is very high. But as recently as 10 years ago there were certain safety hazards. According to Dr. Dennis Donohue, director of the division of blood and blood products at the Bureau of Biologics in Rockville, Md., patients were sometimes transfused with incompatible blood — that is, blood that was incorrectly typed or was meant to be given to someone else. There was also some difficulty with blood being contaminated by infection-causing bacteria.

However, thanks to improvements in current laboratory procedures, doctors' increased familiarity with the transfusion process and the handling of all blood in sterile containers, these problems are almost nonexistent today, Dr. Donohue says.

The most prevalent and serious risk that remains in the transfusion process is the possible transmission of hepatitis virus. "For seven out of 100 people who receive blood, hepatitis is a risk," says Dr. Donohue. "But this risk has been substantially lessened because of the improved testing for two of the three strains of hepatitis." He adds that of the people who may develop hepatitis through blood transfusion, only a small percentage will become ill. Additionally, there is some optimism about further improving the testing procedures for hepatitis.

Meanwhile, professionals in the blood-banking community agree that the most important advance in the safety of the blood-transfusion process can be attributed to the increase in the amount of blood provided by volunteer donors rather than by donors who are paid for their blood. Paid donors have been found to be more likely carriers of hepatitis virus. Unfortunately, only 3 percent of the population donates blood, and more volunteers are desperately needed.

But as safe as the blood from donors today is, a patient's own blood is still the best bet. "Ideally, a patient's own blood is the safest of all," says Dr. James Funkhouser, director of Diagnostic Laboratories at Miami Valley Hospital in Dayton, Ohio. In instances where a person is scheduled to undergo surgery, that person can sometimes arrange to supply his or her own blood three weeks in advance. It will then be stored and used later for the operation. FW

BEHAVIOR

Buoyed by a love of working and winning, women's butterfly champion Mary T.

The Competitive Urge: What It Is and How to Use It Well

By Mary Long

At 5 A.M. on a winter day, Mary T. Meagher is pulling on a bathing suit, getting ready to go to work. Soon she will plunge into chlorinated water and begin the first of the many miles of daily practice which have helped make her one of the fastest and strongest swimmers in the world.

Meagher, 17, world record-holder in the women's butterfly, is a competitor — perhaps a consummate competitor. In love with her work, spurred by challenge, challenged by pain, she has continued for three years to surpass her own remarkable achievements.

Competition. It's in the human blood. And Americans have always been particularly keen on sharpening their rivalrous urges to a fine edge. Though publicly most people claim that what's important is the spirit of the game, many of us secretly subscribe to the motto of the legendary football coach Vince Lombardi:

"Winning isn't everything, it's the only thing."

A few hours after Mary Meagher leaves her Louisville, Ky., home, her sister Maureen, 18, awakens. An especially talented dancer, Maureen performed until recently with a professional ballet company — and even danced with Baryshnikov. Like Mary, she put in long, sometimes grueling, hours, and strove competitively to do her best — to be the best if that were possible. But, always, she felt there was more to life than dancing. When she finished high school and was given the chance to begin a career as a professional dancer, Maureen decided instead to do what she really wanted to do: go to college.

Now a freshman in college, she still takes dance classes but is preparing for a business career, and she also makes time for sports and a social life. Admitting that, by nature, she is highly competitive, she also says she is happily learning more about becoming what scientists call a "cooperative" creature, the type of person who enjoys pursuing and sharing interests as much as he or she likes competing.

Mary Long is a freelance writer who often reports on psychological topics.

Meagher competes swimmingly.

Exactly when a child decides whether or not to embark on the competitive "fast track" of life still isn't known. But it starts early. "Youngsters are already on a track of competition or, on the other hand, of cooperation, by age 9 or 10," says Dr. Ralph Spiga, a behavioral researcher in Elmwood Park, Ill.

Some research projects raise disturbing questions about highly competitive individuals. Stanford University psychologist Carl Thoresen's and San Francisco cardiologist Meyer Friedman's research in 1959 on harried corporate executives made "Type A" behavior — characterized by impatience, aggression and competitive drive — a national buzz word. Since then, a number of medical researchers have found conclusive evidence that Type A individuals are prone to a variety of health problems: For instance, they experience more than twice as many heart attacks as their cooperative ("Type B") counterparts.

"Underlying the competitive behavior of the Type A is an elemental distrust, a fear that the good things in life are in short supply," says Thoresen. "Another's success is their loss." Probing interviews by Thoresen also reveal that a majority of Type A's recall childhood feelings of frustrated competition for love and approval.

But competition can be very healthy emotionally, if we do it properly, insists Dr. Harvey L. Ruben, a Yale clinical psychologist and the author of Competing (Lippincott & Crowell). We must, however, guard against competing in ways that cause problems. Ruben points out that the present-day pressure on kids to be the biggest, the best and the most invincible is absolutely unhealthy.

The key is realizing that competition is not just a fight for love and glory — nor a fight to the death. It can be a way of testing and bettering ourselves, learning new skills and achieving inner satisfaction. But for this to happen, we need to focus on the playing, rather than just the winning.

It's also important to learn when and when not to compete. According to Ruben, there are three steps to successful competitive behavior:

1) Assess the situation carefully: Measure the costs and benefits to you of any competition.

2) Know your own strengths and play by your own rules: In other words, everyone should do what he or she does best. Pick the right arenas to compete in, and avoid the wrong ones. Many of us pursue careers, relationships, arguments, wrestling matches, whatever, that all but guarantee we'll lose. We do it because somebody else — a parent, a teacher, a boss — has convinced us it's the only game in town. It is this unwillingness to walk away, to play our own games rather than those others present to us, that creates unhappiness.

3) Set reasonable goals: If you're always setting goals that are too high, you're going to undermine yourself, and you're not going to win.

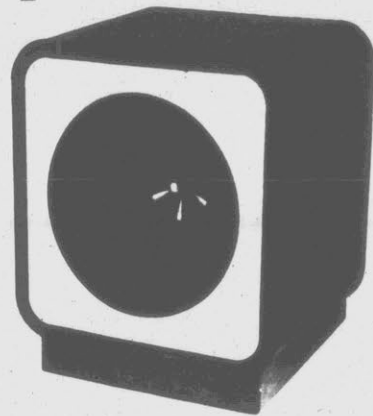

Another point to keep in mind: According to Ruben, the common components of most people's competitive goals are the need to feel esteemed and the need to experience a sense of belonging. Sometimes in our quest for these, we mistakenly compete for superficial signs of success, such as money, fancy clothes and corner offices. But ultimately they are not satisfactory substitutes for the good feelings we seek.

Mary Meagher's secret is to thoroughly enjoy the process of swimming and competing even while she excels at winning. "The best thing of all," she says, "is just working. Giving it your all, day after day, in workouts, and then at the end achieving your goals or just doing the best you possibly can. There's just nothing better." Her sister Maureen has also learned to focus on the process rather than the end result, to thoroughly enjoy personal challenges. It is this kind of competition — competing with self, or "autocomping," as Ruben calls it — that many psychologists regard as the healthiest form of competition. Nobody loses. FW

Clear Your Home of Mice, Rats, Roaches and Other Pests--and Keep Them Out!

Advertisement

SCRAM™ is a home-size version of the commercial pest control device that's safe for people, pets and the ecology. Try it in your home for 30 days.

SCRAM™ is small and unobtrusive--rugged, hi-impact case has black finish with brushed silver face. Measures only 3-1/2" x 4" x 3-1/2". Weighs about a pound.

They don't call them pests for nothing. The bugs and rodents of this world can make life miserable. Traps, sprays and poisons seem to have little effect...and professional exterminators don't come cheap. But now you can eliminate troublesome pests and keep them out thanks to new ultrasonic SCRAM™.

The electronic SCRAM™ unit doesn't kill rodents or insects--it repels them. Early laboratory research showed that ultrasound was effective in modifying the behavior of mice and rats.

As commercial exterminators began using ultrasonic sound to control rodents, other studies indicated that certain frequencies affected the behavior of insects, too. Now, professional pest control companies acknowledge the usefulness of ultrasonics in controlling certain rodents and insects.

UNIVERSITY TESTED

The heart of this new, electronic marvel is a special quartz crystal speaker. It enables SCRAM™ to emit ultrasonic sounds that only pests can hear.

These ultrasonic frequencies "attack" the auditory and nervous systems of rodents and certain insects causing pain and discomfort. The pests are forced to abandon the covered area and will not return while you continue to use SCRAM™.

A leading university tested SCRAM™ as absolutely safe for humans and pets. And since there are no poisonous chemicals, the ecology is not harmed in the slightest.

The ultrasonic output is above the hearing range of humans and household pets, so SCRAM™ is safe for use anywhere. It will not interfere with any electronic burglar alarms, fire or smoke detector, TV reception or other electronic equipment.

SET UP A BARRIER TO KEEP PESTS OUT THIS WINTER.

When you get your SCRAM™ you'll begin to notice some results in a few days. In two to six weeks your infestation will be eliminated. Then continual operation of your unit will prevent further nesting and inhabitations.

Even with colder weather approaching, you can keep pests from coming indoors as long as your SCRAM™ is in operation.

JUST PLUG IT IN.

There's no installation with SCRAM™. All you do is plug it into any 110-Volt AC outlet. The solid-state electronics and quartz crystal speaker require only 5 watts of power--just pennies per month--and it's maintenance free.

Put SCRAM™ anywhere: home, apartment, store, warehouse, or factory. It's the perfect answer for facilities where food is stored or handled such as schools, hospitals, and nursing homes.

SCRAM™ is effective in repelling:

- | | |
|------------|-------------------------|
| Mice | Rats |
| Roaches | Carpenter Ants |
| Crickets | Silverfish |
| Water Bugs | Locusts |
| Fleas | ...and many other pests |

Note: In spite of some claims, studies show that ultrasound is not effective in controlling bats or spiders.

It will repel pests from areas that are difficult to seal-off such as garages, farm outbuildings, boats and vacation homes. One unit protects an area up to 2500 cubic feet.

BRING SPACE AGE PEST PROTECTION TO YOUR HOME.

SCRAM™ is state-of-the-art technology. Until now, commercial units used by professional pest control companies cost up to $200--but lower cost solid-state components allow SCRAM™ to give you the same pest repelling power for only $49.95 (plus $2.85 shipping and handling). Now there's no need to empty messy traps or buy poisonous chemicals again and again.

TRY IT FOR 30 DAYS WITHOUT RISK.

We urge you to try the SCRAM™ unit for 30 days. If you don't see proof that it is the most advanced, efficient pest eliminator available today, return it for a complete, no-quibble refund--including return postage. You are protected by a one-year manufacturer's warranty as well as Shelburne's 26-year reputation for satisfied customers.

LINCOLN'S DISEASE

Even if Abraham Lincoln had avoided John Wilkes Booth, he would have died within six months of natural causes, anyway. So contends Dr. Harold Schwartz, a California internist who says Lincoln suffered from a little-known, but surprisingly common, ailment called Marfan Syndrome.

This hereditary condition causes elongation of the skeletal system and can be found in extremely tall, thin persons with especially long legs, arms and fingers. It can lead to vision problems and, most ominously, heart failure.

According to Schwartz, a former professor at U.S.C. who has studied Marfan Syndrome for 25 years, there is evidence of the illness throughout Lincoln's lineage. And as late as March 1865, a month before he was assassinated, Lincoln's writings show that he complained of cold arms and legs, fatigue, pain and a pulsation in his foot, all signs of a heart defect associated with Marfan Syndrome.

WASTE NOT, WANT NOT

Here's one TV show President Reagan should put on his "must-watch" list. This week (check local listings) PBS airs Star Spangled Spenders, an illuminating, albeit somewhat biased, look at Government waste and inefficiency. Over the course of an hour (during which the Federal Government will spend $325 million), syndicated columnist Donald Lambro outlines how Government regulations cost the typical American family of four $1,800 annually. He reveals numerous bureaucratic inanities, explaining how the cost of each McDonald's Big Mac gets hiked by 10 cents thanks to 41,000 regulations, from how salty the pickles are to how slowly the ketchup pours.

LADY CURES THE BLUES

The secret to curing loneliness may simply be to spend more time with women. This is true for both sexes, report researchers at the University of Rochester. About 100 male and female college seniors were asked to keep track of all their social interactions for two weeks. The findings: The more time the students spent with women, the less likely they were to be lonely, as judged from questions about the companionship they felt and the number of friends they had.

"Women in general are warmer, more empathetic and more interested in discussing personal problems than men," explains psychology professor Ladd Wheeler. And relationships with them thus display greater intimacy, self-disclosure and pleasantness, he adds.

ENERGY HAVES & HAVE-NOTS

Of our 50 states, only 13 produced more energy — coal, oil, natural gas, nuclear and hydroelectric — than they used in 1979 (the last year with complete data). According to research at West Virginia University, the United States on the whole consumed 78 quadrillion B.T.U.'s of energy, while producing only about 65 quadrillion. We had to import the rest. Of all states, Texas showed the greatest surplus between energy produced and energy consumed, followed by Louisiana, Kentucky, Arkansas, Wyoming, West Virginia, Oklahoma, New Mexico, Montana, North Dakota, Kansas, Utah and Colorado. The state with the greatest energy deficit was New York, followed by California, Ohio, Michigan, Illinois, Florida, New Jersey, Indiana, Georgia, North Carolina and Wisconsin.

REVEALED: HOW TO LOOK SMART

It seems two little dots can go a long way. After studying 30 journals in psychology, education and literary criticism, J.T. Dillon concluded that if you use a colon in the title of your article, readers will think you scholarly. As reported recently in Science '82, Dillon explained that to be considered highbrow, authors should write titles with no fewer than 15 words, including a short clause before the colon and a longer "post-colonic" one. The title of Dillon's paper on the subject — "The Emergence of the Colon: An Empirical Correlate of Scholarship."

IMPORTANT

HERE'S HOW YOU CAN TELL YOUR GEMFIRE COUNTERFEIT DIAMONDS ARE NOT CHEAP COSTUME JEWELRY.

- A. Count the facets. Gemfire stones all have 58 facets—just like expensive diamonds prepared by diamond cutters.
- B. Examine your stone in a dimly lighted room. It should sparkle like in daylight. Gemfire stones sparkle even in the moonlight.
- C. Study your ring under a powerful magnifying glass to look for flaws. Gemfire stones have clarity — are flawlessly perfect. No specks! No blemishes! No cracks!
- D. Gemfire stones are so hard you can actually scratch your initial in glass with them! Prove it to yourself.

Prince Valiant

WRITTEN BY WAL FOOTE

Our Story: GROGGY FROM EXERTION, PRINCE VALIANT AND BELISIARIUS TRADE TIRED BLOWS. FINALLY THEY LIE ENTANGLED IN THE DUST, THEIR BLADES AT EACH OTHER'S THROATS. "WHAT HO!" CRIES A JOLLY GAWAIN. "AS FINE A MATCH AS EVER I SAW. TIME FOR A TRUCE, NOW." GINGERLY HE SEPARATES THE ANTAGONISTS.

BELISIARIUS EYES VAL AND GAWAIN SADLY. "I SEE THAT MY UNKNOWN FOES ARE ILLUSTRIOUS MEN. YOU MEANT WELL. BUT YOU HAVE ACTED RASHLY."

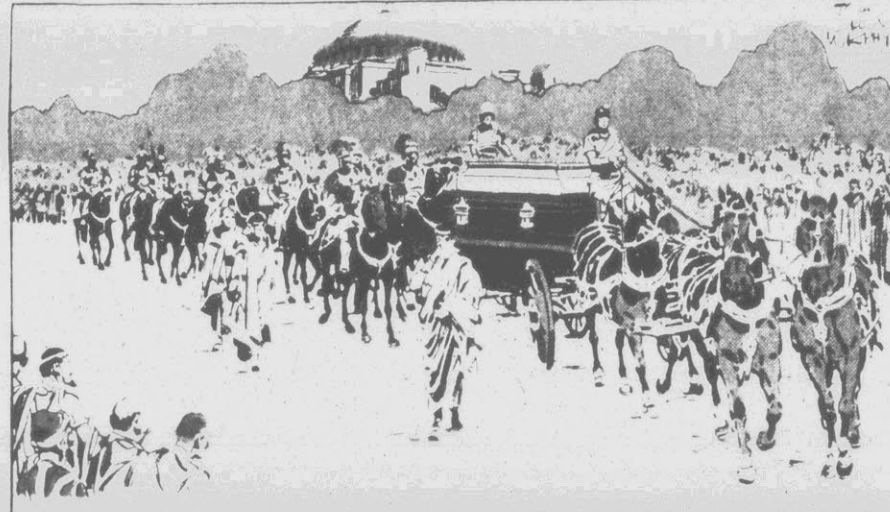

"JUSTINIAN IS PLOTTING TO USURP THE THRONE FROM HIS UNCLE JUSTIN. I WAS RUSHING SECRETLY TO THE EMPEROR'S AID. NOW NOTHING STANDS BETWEEN JUSTINIAN AND THE CROWN. I FEAR POOR JUSTIN ALREADY BREATHES HIS LAST. YOU ARE THE LOSER, VALIANT, YOU AND THE MISTY ISLES."

"JUSTINIAN HAS BEEN MY FRIEND," VAL PROTESTS. BELISIARIUS SPITS. "HIS ONLY FRIEND IS AMBITION, HIS ONLY LOVE, POWER. ABOVE ALL HE HATES YOUR FAMILY." EVEN AS THEY TALK, PRIAM, JUSTINIAN'S PHYSICIAN, ARRIVES IN THE MISTY ISLES. WHAT BITTER MEDICINE HAS HE PREPARED?

HE PRONOUNCES ALETA HEALTHY AND STRONG. "ALL WILL GO WELL," HE SMILES. THE QUEEN OF THE MISTY ISLES IS RELIEVED TO BE IN SUCH GOOD HANDS.

A WEARY BELISIARIUS DEPARTS FOR CONSTANTINOPLE. VAL AND GAWAIN GO BY A DIFFERENT ROUTE. AS THE GREAT WALLS BUILT BY THEODOSIUS HEAVE INTO SIGHT THE FIRST CRY IS HEARD: "THE EMPEROR IS DEAD. LONG LIVE JUSTINIAN." MOURNFUL BELLS TOLL ABOVE THE CITY. AT THE FUNERAL, A FEW DAYS LATER, JUSTINIAN APPEARS GRIEVED.

NEXT WEEK: Coronation

MEETING 8 p.m.

NOT SURE IF THAT FIGURE REFLECTS REAL-WORLD ECONOMICS... STILL SAY WE OUGHT TO INDEX IT TO INFLATION

INFLATION INDEXING IS ONE OF THE BIG REASONS WE GOT IN TROUBLE IN THE FIRST PLACE

... THIS IS WHAT ALL THE COMPUTER MODELS SUGGEST... SUPPLY-SIDE WOODOO IF I EVER HEARD IT...

LOOK, LET'S JUST ACCEPT THIS FIGURE FOR THE INTERIM, THEN WE COULD COME BACK AND DO ANY FINE-TUNING THAT'S NECESSARY. GOOD IDEA. I'LL GO FOR THAT. CAN WE HAVE A VOTE?

OKAY, IT'S BEEN MOVED AND SECONDED. ALL IN FAVOR OF AMENDING THE SPORTSCASTERS' AND SPORTSWRITERS' OFFICIAL CLICHE MANUAL MEANING OF 'TRYING VERY HARD' FROM 'GIVING 110 PERCENT' TO 'GIVING 120 PERCENT,' PLEASE. TROJAN HORSE.
