

Redistricting Study Backed

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of County Commissioners agreed today to help form a committee to raise funds for financing research on the proposed Congressional redistricting which would split Bethel and Carolina townships from the rest of the county.

Commissioner R. L. "Bob" Martin said Pitt and a number of other counties in Northeastern North Carolina will try to raise $5,000 to fund the cost of the research, which will deal with the constitutionality of crossing county lines.

Martin and Commissioner Charles Gaskins emphasized that no county money will be involved in the research. They said the funds will be raised through donations.

Martin noted that the problem of splitting counties arose because the Voting Rights Act requires U.S. Justice Department prior approval of redistricting plans.

In effect, the Justice Department has told the General Assembly that in redistricting for the House of Representatives, the N.C. Constitution provision which prohibits the crossing of county lines cannot be followed.

The board this morning also named Gene Paramore to the board of trustees of Pitt County Memorial Hospital, representing Grimesland Township.

Rebellious Syrian City Still Fights

By TOM BALDWIN
Associated Press Writer

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — The rebellious northwestern city of Hama remained sealed off from the outside world today amid reports of continued fighting there between Syrian troops and diehard Moslem fundamentalists entrenched in caves and ancient catacombs.

The government had announced plans to reopen the city to traffic and trade Sunday, two days after it claimed troops had crushed a rebellion by Moslem Brotherhood extremists.

The reopening was canceled along with plans to take journalists on a tour of the city 110 miles north of Damascus. Officials warned reporters attempts to approach the besieged city would be "life-threatening."

The fighting erupted Feb. 2 during a search for Moslem Brotherhood terrorists who have fighting the government for the past 2½ years.

The brotherhood is made up mainly of Sunni Moslems, the major Islamic sect in Syria, who resent the domination of the minority Alawite sect to which Assad belongs and which controls the government and the army. Hama is a Sunni stronghold with a tradition of opposition to Assad and the Alawites.

The government was reported to have attacked Hama, a city of 250,000, with 5,000 to 8,000 troops using tanks, artillery and helicopter gunships. Whole districts were reported destroyed, and Syrian sources said at least four mosques were destroyed.

The government announced Friday its opponents had been crushed. But other sources said there was still hand-to-hand fighting in the narrow, winding streets of the ancient Hida district, in the catacombs below it and in caves in the hills northwest of the city.

Neither food nor medicine was allowed into Hama, a source said.

Hundreds of deaths have been reported although there has been no exact fatality toll. Syrian sources said that by Friday, security forces had wounded an estimated 2,000 insurgents, while the rebels wounded 400 government soldiers.

The government-controlled media accused the United States and Israel of aiding "the minority Moslem Brotherhood troublemakers." Sunday newspapers said the trouble in Hama was caused by "Zionist-imperialist conspirators to the Moslem Brotherhood gangs," the government's terms for Israel and the United States.

5-Day Drill

TOKYO (AP) — Japan and the United States began a five-day drill today near Mt. Fuji aimed at improving coordination of joint ground forces. About 1,000 members of Japan's Self Defense Force and 500 U.S. soldiers from Japan, Hawaii and the U.S. mainland are taking part, a spokesman said.

More than 400 civilians gathered near the command post to protest the exercise, police said, adding that the demonstration was peaceful.

Carrier Is Back In Service

ALAMEDA, Calif. (AP) — The USS Enterprise, the world's first nuclear powered aircraft carrier, is back in action after a three-year, $276 million overhaul.

The 1,123-foot vessel entered San Francisco Bay on Saturday with nearly 3,000 people, in addition to 952 cars, 17 dogs, 15 cats, two rabbits and a guinea pig. The civilian paraphernalia was permitted as an inexpensive means of getting the crew members, their families and possessions from Bremerton, Wash.

Pitt's Share

Pitt County is receiving $135,151 as its share of funds allocated by the N. C. Board of Transportation, as authorized by the State Highway Bond Act of 1977 for improvements to the state's secondary road system.

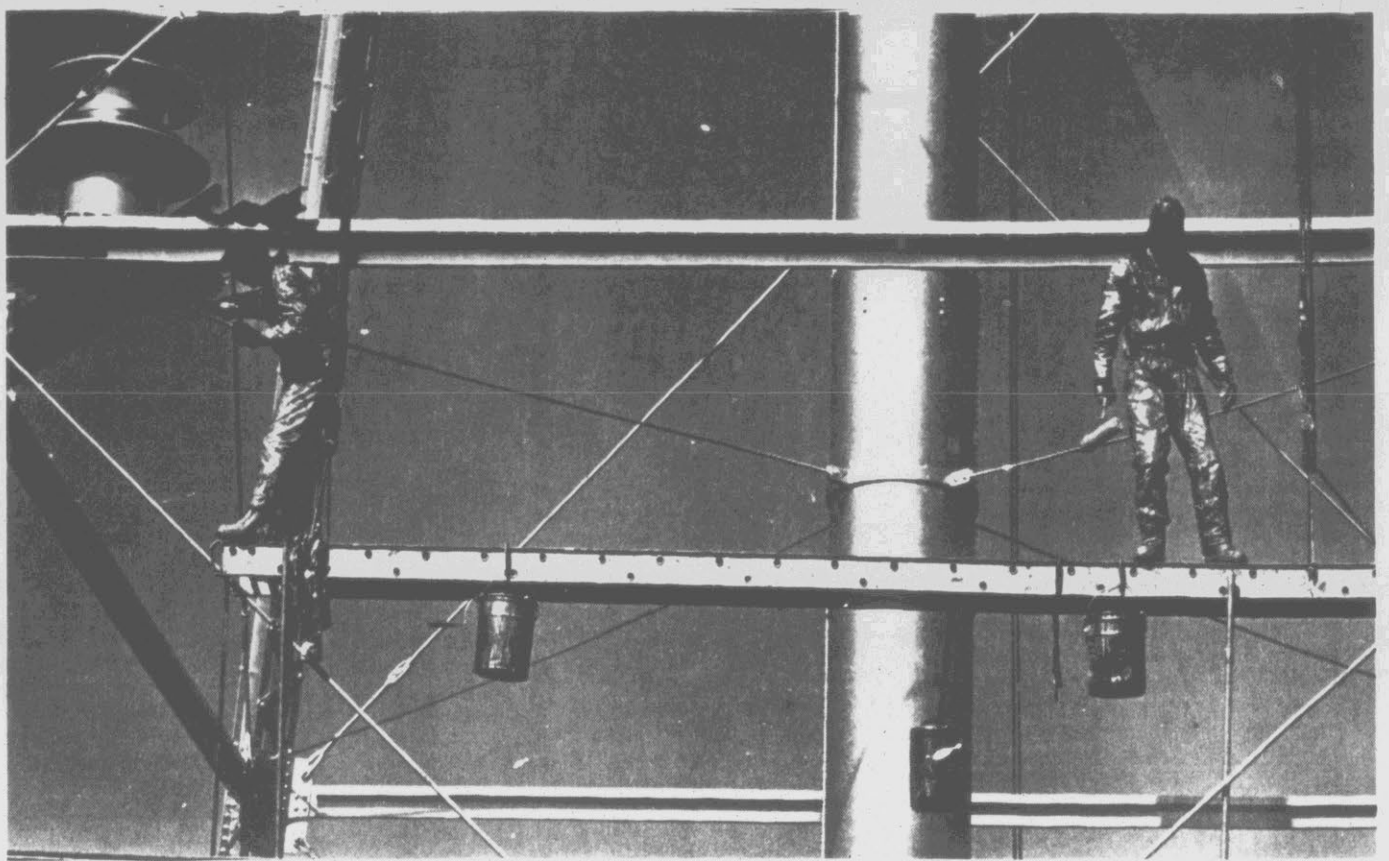

Pitt's share, which is part of the last $10 million authorized by the bond act, is based on a formula whereby each county receives a percentage of the total funds available, determined by the unpaved miles of secondary roads in the county in relationship to the total mileage of unpaved secondary roads in the state.

Pitt County has 257.14 miles of unpaved roads, according to the state board, while the total mileage of unpaved state maintained secondary roads in North Carolina is 19,000.

Fund allocations in several neighboring counties include: Beaufort, $153,558; Craven, $98,192; Greene, $40,513; Lenoir, $96,331; Martin, $72,117; Wayne, $77,273; Edgecombe, $41,832; and Wilson, $50,546.

Secretary of Transportation W. R. "Bill" Roberson Jr. said public meetings will be held in each county to gain citizen input relative to secondary road needs. County commissioners will then review and forward recommendations to the state.

The $300 million highway bond act directed that $75 million would be used to improve the secondary road system in North Carolina, while $175 million was earmarked for improvements to the primary system and $50 million set aside for the state's urban road system.

GETTING NEW PAINT — The town water tank in Winterville gets a new coat of paint as workers Wendell Hankins, and Steve Chaney, looking like silver space men, put on the final touches. It took about 35 gallons of paint and 250 hours to complete the task. Painting the 75,000 gallon tank cost approximately $5,000. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Killers Claim A Victim

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — An American Catholic missionary who left Nicaragua because he opposed the leftist government has been murdered in Guatemala, the 15th church worker kidnapped or murdered in this Central American nation.

No one claimed responsibility for the killing of Brother James Alfred Miller, 37, of Custer, Wis., on Saturday.

Church and human rights groups blame most of the political violence in Guatemala on ultra-rightist supporters of the military government. But another missionary who worked with Miller in Nicaragua said he asked for a transfer after the 1979 Sandinista revolution installed a leftist government.

"He was not in agreement with what the Sandinistas were doing," said the brother, who requested anonymity.

National police said Miller, known locally as Brother Santiago, was shot to death by several "heavily armed men" as he was repairing a window at the school for poor Indians where he taught in Huehuetenango, 165 miles northwest of Guatemala City.

"He was working outside the Indian center when he was shot by four men wearing hoods," said the LaSalle Order of which he was a member.

Witnesses said the killers escaped in a car.

Begin Avers Arms Sales Violating Reagan Pledge

By ARTHUR MAX
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin said today the sale of U.S. anti-aircraft missiles and F-15 fighter planes to Jordan would violate a pledge by President Reagan to preserve Israel's military advantage over Arab states.

He asked the Knesset, Israel's 120-member parliament, to pass a resolution condemning the proposal by U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger. Opposition leader Shimon Peres said his Labor Party, except for a few left-wing members, planned to support the resolution in voting later today.

Begin told the Knesset the proposed sale of Hawk mobile anti-aircraft missiles and F-16 fighter jets to Jordan would neutralize the deterrent power of Israel's air force.

Speaking from a wheelchair as he continues recovering from a broken hip joint, Begin recalled that Reagan had promised last September to maintain Israel's qualitative edge over the Arab armies.

Instead, he claimed, Israel was becoming overpowered through sheer weight of the heavily armed Arab countries.

"There is a certain quantity which creates a new quality," Begin said. "Beyond a certain ratio, no valor is of avail."

Reports that Weinberger proposed selling Jordan the planes and missiles during his visit to Amman last week galvanized Israeli opposition that threatened to take on the same proportions as last year's acrimonious battle over the sale of U.S. AWACS spy planes to Saudi Arabia.

"If such a deal goes through, it would bring new and most dangerous elements into the Middle East," Cabinet secretary Arieh Naor told reporters after the Cabinet discussed the deal at its weekly meeting Sunday.

"Israel can't and won't sit in silence" while it sees a shift in the regional balance of power, he said.

Naor said Israel's new ambassador to Washington, Moshe Arens, would seek State Department clarification of the situation when he presents his credentials on Tuesday.

Israeli military officials claimed mobile Hawks in neighboring Jordan would endanger aircraft in Israeli skies. They said they feared F-16 fighters in Jordan would pose a greater threat than the more sophisticated U.S. F-15s sold to Saudi Arabia last year because Jordan's pilots are more skilled.

Weinberger reportedly proposed the sale to bolster Jordan against its unfriendly northern neighbor, Syria, and to keep King Hussein from turning to Moscow for arms. Hussein has already announced he won't alter his purchase of Soviet SAM-6 anti-aircraft missiles regardless of whether he gets U.S. rockets.

The Israelis also are angry because Middle East tour last week. He went to three Arab nations — Saudi Arabia, Jordan and Oman — and the Israelis believe that points to a shift in the Reagan administration's support for Israel.

An unidentified member of Weinberger's staff was quoted in Sunday's New York Times as saying the administration is trying to "redirect" U.S. Middle East military policy away from Israel. Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. denied that on ABC-TV's "This Week With David Brinkley," saying "redirect" was a "very incorrect word."

"Our policy toward Israel has not (changed), and I do not contemplate that it will change in the period ahead," said Haig. However, he added, "It does not mean we do not seek good relations with moderate Arab states in the region."

The Reagan administration was preparing to send two special envoys to the Middle East this week, one a veteran and one a novice.

Philip Habib was returning to try to shore up the shaky cease-fire he helped arrest last summer to halt fighting between Israel and Palestinian guerrillas in southern Lebanon. And Richard Fairbanks will be making his first attempt at breaking the deadlock in the Israeli-Egyptian talks on Palestinian autonomy.

The administration is worried that Israel will take action against a reported Palestinian buildup in southern Lebanon, and it wants to achieve progress in the autonomy talks before Israel returns the final third of the occupied Sinai desert to Egypt on April 25.

Saudi Arabia, meanwhile, renewed its call for direct Arab peace talks with Israel provided the Israelis accept the Palestine Liberation Organization as a partner in those talks. Israel says it will never negotiate with the PLO because it is a terrorist organization.

The Saudi proposal came in an unusual replay on the state radio Sunday of a commentary Feb. 4.

Siamese Twins Share Normalcy

By ELISSA MCCRARY
Associated Press Writer

SPINDALE, N.C. (AP) — While the only known Siamese twins to be successfully separated celebrated their second birthdays last week, their parents gave thanks for the normalcy the celebration represents.

"Most of the time, they can do most anything they want to," said Kim Beaver, mother of twins Shannon Elaine and Fonda Michelle Beaver. "They don't know they're supposed to be handicapped."

The girls are agile and move around well although each has only one leg. They go to physical therapy sessions daily and are able to maneuver their way quickly through parallel bars.

"It really is a miracle. They've grown into two bright, active children," said Dr. Bobby England of Forest City, who delivered the twins Feb. 9, 1980. "In many ways they're very normal."

In January, the twins were fitted with artificial legs and braces. Mrs. Beaver said the children are learning to walk by themselves.

"They can almost stand up and walk alone. It won't be anytime 'til they can walk with no help," she said.

The only medical appointments scheduled for the twins in the near future are routine checkups.

The twins were scheduled to be featured tonight on ABC's "That's Incredible."

Two years ago, the twins were born in Forest City to Kim and Arlin Beaver. Mrs. Beaver was 14 at the time of the birth and her husband was 19.

The babies were joined just below the ribs. They shared a pelvis, bladder, colon and rectum.

Last January, the twins were separated by a team of specialists at Memorial Mission Hospital in Asheville. The surgery left both children with no colon, each with one kidney and Shannon with no bladder.

Both children wear special pouches to collect body wastes.

About six weeks after the operation, the Beavers took the babies home to Spindale.

Mrs. Beaver, who is now 16, said taking care of the twins is not much different from caring for any other two-year-olds.

"They get into things and they want to eat a lot," she said. "But I don't think it's really any harder than taking care of any other twins would be."

England said the Beavers are doing a good job of taking care of the twins, adding, "They're (the twins) healthy and happy."

However, a District Court judge awarded the Rutherford County Social Services Department legal custody of the twins last August after doctors and social services officials complained about the Beavers' arrangements for medical care for the twins.

LOST EVERYTHING IN FIRE

The Charles Tripp family lost everything when their house near Winterville burned last week. No one in the family of six was injured because they were away from home at the time.

St. Peter's Catholic Church of Greenville has asked Hotline to appeal for help for the family. They have found another house — in Winterville — and are in need of furnishings for it, especially beds and dressers, pots and pans, kitchen and table utensils, and books and toys for the children. The children are Tammy, 11; Charlie, nine, Tonya, seven, and Peter, two. Especially needed, their grandfather, Woodrow Tripp, said, are pants for Charlie (10 husky); slacks for Tammy (29-30 waist); pajamas and shirts for Peter (Size 2) and socks for all of them. Anyone who can help is asked to call 756-0217 or 752-4349. Tripp's parents, Woodrow and Rose Tripp, live at 413 Line Avenue, Greenville.

PAPER RECYCLING

HOTLINE has had a number of inquiries in the past few days from people wanting to know if anyone buys old newspapers for recycling.

The answer is yes.

The Eastern Carolina Vocational Center, in the industrial park North of Greenville, pays 50 cents per 100 pounds for old newsprint. The recycling operation there is open from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Saturday.

Tar Heel Recycling in Williamston and Wilson Paper Stock in Wilson, also purchase old newspapers.

Driver Killed

BETHEL — A 25-year old resident of Robersonville, Kimberly Dale Holmes, died in a two car accident on N.C. 13 south of Bethel at 2 a.m. Saturday morning.

According to the report on file with the State Highway patrol, the accident occurred some four miles south of Bethel near the intersection of N.C. 13 with RR 1426.

The report notes that the vehicle driven by Holmes crossed the center line and hit head-on a car driven by Larry Ray Hardee of Box 216, Bethel, who attempted to swerve to the right out of the path of the Holmes car but was not successful.

Hardee was transported to Pitt Memorial Hospital, where he remains hospitalized in a stable condition. Hardee has been charged with driving under the influence, the Highway Patrol reported.

Holmes and Hardee were each traveling alone at the time of the accident.

Damage to the 1976 model Hardee vehicle was listed at $2,000, and that to the 1968 vehicle driven by Holmes at $600.

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦K8652 ♥73 ♦A95 ♠1072
The bidding has proceeded:
East South West North
1 NT Pass Pass Dble Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—Had partner doubled in the immediate seat, you would have been delighted to pass for penalties. In the balancing seat, however, partner's double only promises a near opening bid, which makes playing for penalties a bit close—especially since partner's opening lead might cost a trick or a tempo. Bid two spades.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦74 ♥AK1095 ♦762 ♠K95
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♥ 1 ♠ 1 NT Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—Since partner was not forced to bid over the interference, his voluntary action should show a better than minimum opening bid. You have a useful hand, and what you do next should be predicated on what you know of partner's bidding habits. If he is a timid soul, take the pressure off him by jumping to three no trump; if he is an aggressive bidder, a raise to two no trump should be sufficient.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦Q10652 ♥963 ♦K7 ♠984
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
2 ♦ Pass 2 NT Pass 3 ♦ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—Your mediocre hand has suddenly turned to gold! You have a superb fit for partner's second suit and a key card in his primary suit. Unfortunately, you have no cue-bid available to show your strength. Therefore, we suggest a jump to five spades. Partner should realize that the only thing that could have brought you to life is a fit for both his suits, but no outside control.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦A107 ♥63 ♦972 ♠AKJ95
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♥ Pass 2 ♣ Pass 3 ♥ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—With two aces and a king, you have a very good hand for partner despite the fact that you have only two low cards in his suit. On this auction, he surely has a long, nearly solid heart suit. Slam cannot be ruled out—indeed, it might depend solely on partner's diamond holding. Cue-bid three spades and then bid four hearts at your next turn. This will alert partner of your slam interest while pinpointing your diamond weakness.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦8 ♥QJ76 ♦A9852 ♠K107
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♦ Pass 2 NT Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—We would not fault you greatly if you simply bid three no trump, but that might not be the right spot or even the right level! If partner has a long club suit, or even a four-card heart suit that he decided not to mention, you could make a slam in any of three suits on a hand where three no trump might be defeated. We would try three hearts, to see what response that evokes from partner.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦A83 ♥AK72 ♦KQ4 ♠QJ6
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♦ Pass 2 NT Pass 3 ♦ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—This problem is similar to the last, and we would not bid three no trump for similar reasons. Instead, we would pinpoint our strength with a bid of three hearts. Responder has shown an unbalanced hand and there is the possibility that you have only one spade stopper and do not have nine running tricks. Partner's next bid will clarify the situation.

Catalogue Carries Potential Wives

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Australian bachelors seeking mail order brides from the Philippines are now able to select their prospective mates from a videotape catalogue.

The new bride service was introduced in Sydney on Valentine's Day by a company that introduces Australian males to eligible Filipino women.

Gary Breasley, managing director of APP International Agency Pty. Ltd., said the new service was available for a membership fee of $169 annually.

Breasley said his company formed a year ago has a membership of 500 Australians. He said there were about 2,000 marriages between Australians and Filipinos in Australia last year.

His new service includes a file containing photographs and biographical information about prospective Filipino brides. The prospective bridegroom can view a 20-second videotape of the woman of his choice.

If he likes what he sees, he can watch an eight- to 10-minute interview in which the woman tells of her family, job ambitions and education.

Breasley said the video introductions would revolutionize the mail-order bride business, "a dignified, totally proper and very human phenomenon which brings happiness to many people."

He said 99 percent of his clients were successful in finding Filipino wives.

Filipino women were anxious to escape the poverty of their country where women outnumber men, he said.

Dear Abby

I Know, You Know

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I was so glad to see the letter in the column about people who use "you know" in every other sentence. I was once one of those people, and I didn't realize it until I met the man who later became my husband.

Here is how he broke me of the "you know" habit: Every time I said "you know," he would say, "Yes, I know." Then I realized I was "you knowing" in nearly every sentence! If people who have this sloppy speech habit want to overcome it, they should ask a close friend to do what my husband did. It's embarrassing at first, but it really works, and it's worth it.

CURED IN VIRGINIA

DEAR CURED: You're right, you know?

DEAR ABBY: Here is my story: I was in the U.S. Air Force for 20 years and retired a few years ago at the age of 37. At 21 I married a hometown girl, expecting to grow old with her and enjoy our retirement years together. I soon found out that retirement with my wife was not what I had expected, but for the sake of our children, I stayed married.

Two years ago, while cleaning out our basement, I came across a box of fragile items that had been wrapped in old newspapers. It was then that I read a Dear Abby column in the Duluth Herald dated Sept. 11, 1968. That article changed my life.

I am divorced now and have met a lovely woman whom I hope to marry soon. All I want to say, Abby, is that had it not been for your article, I might have still been married to a woman who was becoming more like the woman in that article every day.

I just wonder how many other people are in similar circumstances, but lack the courage to do something about it.

Thanks for helping me to change my life for the better. I'm enclosing a copy of the article, which I shall always treasure.

NO NAME, PLEASE

"DEAR ABBY: My husband is retired now, and most of his cronies are either dead or too sick to be any company to him. He used to be quite the 'man about town' and I spent many evenings alone and heavy-hearted, wondering when he would come home.

"Now, do you know what? I can't get him out of the house. I actually have to look for things for him to do. 'Go to the grocery store! Go to the drugstore! Go to the hardware store!'"

"I can't stand the sight of him anymore. I get nauseated when I hear his key in the door.

"After he reads the morning paper, he starts to follow me around like a puppy, supervising the cooking, housekeeping, etc.

"If I have an acquaintance in for a cup of tea, he moves right in and monopolizes the conversation.

"Dear God, I am so sick of him, death would be a welcome release. Sincerely, WEARY"

"DEAR WEARY: Yours or his? The quality of a marriage is only as good as the materials used by the builders. The 'lumber of life' is caring, sharing, patience, forgiveness and understanding. One can't expect to spend his twilight years in a cathedral when he's accumulated only enough 'lumber' for a shack."

DEAR ABBY: I know I did a dumb thing, but I need advice, not a lecture. For the last 2 1/2 years I've been having an on-again, off-again affair with my husband's brother. (He's married too.) Nobody suspects a thing.

I have a baby who's nearly a year old and I have a funny feeling he's my brother-in-law's child. I'm not going by looks because my husband and his brother look a lot alike. It's just this funny feeling I have.

I am going crazy wondering if my feelings are right. Is there any way to tell for sure?

NEEDS TO KNOW

DEAR NEEDS: Keep that "funny feeling" to yourself and assume the baby is your husband's. Attempting to confirm your feelings could wreck two marriages and still leave the father's identity in doubt. You've been lucky so far. Don't press your luck.

There are more households in the United States than a decade ago but fewer persons in each, on average. The number of American households grew by 27 percent in the '70s, reaching a total of 80.4 million, U.S. Census figures show. During the same period, however, the average household declined in size from 3.1 to 2.8 persons.

COOKING IS FUN!

By CECILY BROWNSTONE

AP Food Editor
DEAR CECILY: My mother tells me that when she was a little girl, her grandmother often made ladyfingers and it was great fun to watch her shape them with a spoon. Mom says the ladyfingers were delicious — light and airy. Single ones were served dusted with confectioner's sugar. Do you have a recipe for making ladyfingers this way? I would love to try it. — TEEN-AGER purpose flour

Confectioner's sugar
Line a cookie sheet with unglazed paper. In a 5-cup bowl (about 5 by 4 inches) with a hand-held electric beater, beat the egg white and salt until foamy; gradually beat in 1 1/2 tablespoons of the sugar, continuing until egg white holds stiff straight peaks when beater is slowly withdrawn. In a 3-cup bowl (about 5 by 3 inches), without washing beater, beat the egg yolk and vanilla slightly; gradually beat in the remaining 1 1/2 tablespoons sugar until thickened and lemon color. With a rubber spatula, gently fold the egg yolk mixture into the white. Fold in the flour in 2 additions by sprinkling it over the mixture as you do so. Using 2 tablespoons and pushing the batter from the side of one spoon, drop the mixture by heaping tablespoons onto the prepared pan in 4 by 1-inch strips, a couple of inches apart. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until set and a pale gold color — 10 minutes. With a metal spatula, remove to a wire rack to cool. Sprinkle with confectioner's sugar. Serve singly. Because these ladyfingers are on the dry side, they are perfect to use (halved) crosswise if necessary) in sherbet glasses filled with chocolate mousse. Makes 12.

Credit Card Tips Given

Credit card fraud is a problem facing honest card-users and merchants alike. The best way to protect your card from unauthorized use, says Dr. Justine Rozier, extension family resource management specialist at North Carolina State University, is to follow these helpful tips.

—Try not to let your card out of your sight. It's not always possible, Dr. Rozier notes, but if you can watch the merchant imprint the one proper sales slip and keep alert to get your card back right away.

—Guard your credit card number. Don't show a credit card to anyone. Don't leave it lying around in any situation where a stranger can read the number.

—Save your copy of all sales drafts. If you do throw away your sales drafts (after you've checked your bills), tear them up in ways that destroy the number and the name that goes with it.

—Check all bills carefully. —If you find charges for purchases you never made, call the appropriate number (usually on the card) immediately and follow the instructions that you will be given.

—Carry credit cards where it will be difficult for a pickpocket to get at them. Never carry more cards than you think you might have to use that day and, at least once a week, check all your cards to make sure you have them. If not, report the loss immediately.

Cut Bloat, Not Services

If there is any doubt as to how far our society is pulling back from equal opportunity one only has to look at the cuts in special education in the Reagan administration budget.

North Carolina education officials say as many as 34,000 poor and handicapped schoolchildren could be affected by the cuts. The state's loss in 1982-83 for the public schools could be $34.8 million.

"If the cuts stand, the impact will be catastrophic, particularly on handicapped youngsters," Jerome B. Melton, deputy state superintendent of public instruction, said.

State officials said most of the money goes for special teachers and aides to improve reading and math skills and for special assistance to handicapped children.

Federal and state law require that handicapped children receive an appropriate public school education, and the question now is where the money will come from to provide the special services some handicapped need. Obviously the burden will fall on local and state governments, and it is unlikely that the funding will be available at those levels of government.

It is easy to talk about bloat in government and make slashing cuts. There is, after all, some bloat there. Nevertheless much of the federal appropriations to the states goes to do some real good, and in this case you can ask any parent who is confronted with the special problems of a handicapped child.

Cutting out unnecessary spending takes very careful study of government. Making wholesale cuts which affect vital programs such as educating the handicapped is not our idea of a society shouldering its responsibilities.

Trimming Deficit Has Merit

President Reagan has had a meeting with members of his own party concerning the huge deficits which are projected for his upcoming budgets.

Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker, Jr., House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel and Sen. Paul Laxalt met with the president concerning budgetary problems. The president, however, has indicated that he will not compromise on the big tax cuts or on the large increases in military spending.

A freezing of the Pentagon budget and trimming of the administration's three year tax cut, which is tilted toward the wealthy, has been proposed by Democrats.

It is an idea which has merit and certainly the president should give it consideration.

THIS AFTERNOON

Green Encourages

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — County commissioners are heartened in their search for additional local revenues by support from Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green for another penny sales tax with the income earmarked for local governments.

Green had raised questions about the added penny during a meeting of the state Board of Education, which led to circulation in print and by word-of-mouth that he would oppose the money going to local governments.

"Contrary to statements attributed to me by the press, I have never stated that I opposed ... because I do favor the bill in its present form," Green has written to the leadership of the North Carolina Association of County Commissioners.

In its present form, the proposal would allow any county to collect a fifth penny in sales taxes. A local option law allowing counties to collect a fourth penny in sales taxes is already in effect in 99 of the 100 counties. Only Burke has chosen not to collect the tax.

The state keeps three cents of the sales tax. The House of Representatives passed a measure allowing the fifth penny option, but the proposal stalled in the Senate Ways and Means Committee.

Stopped
State Senator Kenneth Royall of Durham, chairman of that group, let it be known that with the state facing a budget problem, any additional income would not likely be given over to local governments.

In addition to endorsing the proposal, Lt. Gov. Green passed on some political strategy to local government officials: it's time, now, to do some heavy lobbying with members of the State Senate on this matter if favorable action is expected.

Meanwhile, State Schools Supt. Craig Phillips and State Treasurer Harlan Boyles have been pushing another sales tax proposal. They would add the penny, with the money earmarked for local school renovation and construction, for water and sewer work, and for local treasuries. A penny would yield about $250 million, and be split $100 million to the two major projects, and $50 million for general government.

Green's endorsement and his further comment that he does not intend to retreat from that position have encouraged county commissioners to renew efforts to wrestle the measure out of the Ways and Means Committee.

Grover Lancaster of Craven County, president of the Association of County Commissioners, says local governments are now facing an increase in spending for programs mandated by federal and state levels, but funded with decreasing budgets.

The foundation for local government money is the property tax, a highly visible and direct tax which puts tremendous pressure on county and city officials who must set the tax rate each year.

Angry
Meanwhile there seems no let-up in the uproar which occurs whenever local governments revalue property. (Please turn to Page 5)

Other Editors Say N.C. 2000 Goals

(Laurinburg Exchange)
We don't doubt that a number of good ideas will come out of discussion and planning sessions conducted by the N.C. 2000 committees across the state.

Serving on these committees are, for the most part, knowledgeable and concerned citizens who are familiar with their counties' histories and problems and who have a stake in seeing that they are prepared for the future.

At a kickoff meeting here in Scotland County, more than 40 citizens joined with the nine members of the local committee in sharing their ideas about how to prepare Scotland for conditions in the year 2000. Most of their concerns deserve the attention of those who will be in a position to alter the county's course, if necessary, to avoid pitfalls or aim for prosperity.

But we don't see any assurance that elected officials or others in leadership roles will adopt policies in accordance with any of the recommendations of the N.C. 2000 committee here in Scotland — or anywhere else, for that matter. If those who set local policies that control growth and progress don't use the suggestions of the N.C. 2000 committee, then a lot of valuable time and effort will have been wasted.

Political opponents of Governor Jim Hunt, and others, have criticized the governor's N.C. 2000 program for being nothing more than a thinly-disguised attempt by Hunt to inflate his own political balloon.

We will assume for now that is not the case and that Hunt is just as concerned that North Carolina be ready for the year 2000 as the members of the local N.C. 2000 committee appear to be.

But if the committees work hard to come up with solutions for our future problems and those recommendations are ignored, we would be more inclined to believe they are being taken advantage of for somebody else's gain.

There's Leaks & Leaks

Ronald Reagan, as with all recent presidents, is obsessed with leaks in his administration. He doesn't understand why people who work for him continually spill the beans to the media. And as with all presidents, he insists he's going to put a stop to the leaks at any cost. With all due respect to Mr. Reagan, he has as much chance of stopping leaks in Washington as he does getting his wife to serve State Dinners on Tupperware.

There are all sorts of leaks in Washington.

The most common is the "official government leak." Any administration learns very quickly the best way to set off a trial balloon is to leak it to one or two news sources.

Example: "This is Apollo at the White House and what I'm going to tell you is not for attribution. The President is going to put an excess profits tax on suntan oil."

The story is printed in Krupnik's column. All hell breaks loose with the suntan oil lobby, and the President decides to forget it.

The next day the President's press secretary announces, "There is absolutely no foundation to the story that there will be an excess profits tax on suntan oil."

Krupnik calls up Apollo at the White House. "You made me look like a fool."

Apollo says, "We'll make it up to you. We're sending over a top-secret CIA report to you on a KGB call girl ring at the United Nations."

The second most common leak involves someone in the administration who is out to get someone else.

"If you write it, I'll deny it, but Malibu was chewed out by the President yesterday for telling Ed Meese the only one in the administration who believes the 1983 budget figures is Bonzo."

The reporter calls up alibi and asks him if the story is true.

Malibu says, "The one person who could have told you that was Burbank. If you want the real story, Burbank was caught red-handed stealing jellybeans out of the White House. "You made me look like a fool."

Apollo says, "We'll make it up to you. We're sending over a top-secret CIA report to you on a KGB call girl ring at the United Nations."

President's personal jar, and he's been banned from the Oval Office, unless there is another person in the room."

The third type of leak, which is impossible for Mr. Reagan to stop, comes from a disenchanted bureaucrat who sends inside memoranda in plain white envelopes to columnists all over town.

They read like this: "From the Secretary's Administrative Aide: 'To All Employees. 'You will soon receive a questionnaire which must be filled out and returned to the Secretary's office no later than Friday, giving your views on Abortion, Gun Control, Busing and Prayers in School. The purpose of this survey is to help the Secretary get to know his staff better and to encourage a smoother and more efficient relationship in the department. If you do not wish to fill out the questionnaire, you may return it with a note stating your reasons why you refuse to be a team player.'"

There is another type of leak that everyone in Washington is familiar with, and that's one where a person wants to get credit for something he or she has done.

"I'm sorry I'm late for dinner, but I'm been working behind the scenes to get a bill passed, which would impeach a federal judge who made a ruling in favor of any desegregation issue that Sen. Jesse Helms disapproves of. If you use my name, play down my role, as lot of us were involved in the final product."

Then finally there is what we call the "accidental leak."

This might occur at a cocktail party where a

A Tax Policy Ally Leaving

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Martin Anderson's role as President Reagan's only White House ally against new taxes proved that his departure as domestic policy chief leaves a void not to be filled quickly — if ever.

Anderson was beneficiary of scant praise during his year on the job and not a few sly jibes. No administrator, he sometimes isolated himself from his own staff. No Washington power broker, he did not plant and fertilize pet projects. Although perceived as a true-believing Reaganite, neither supply-siders nor Moral Majoritarians considered him reliably doctrinaire.

Instead, Anderson was, as some Cabinet members derisively called him, "the keeper of the sacred scrolls" — Reagan's campaign commitments. He tried to preserve the link between the campaign and the presidency it produced, leading to his quiet but ultimately successful holdout against the excise taxes.

Nobody will perform this function when Anderson leaves March 1. To suggest that Edwin L. Harper, moving over from deputy director at the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) to replace Anderson, will keep the sacred scrolls is to invite guffaws from other presidential aides. Harper may prove a more competent bureaucrat than Anderson, but he is a most unlikely candidate to confront the entire Cabinet for the sake of the president's credibility.

Whether Anderson is quitting because (as he says) he wants to write and think or because (as some colleagues claim) he was distraught by what is happening in the White House the effect is clear. Following the departure of Richard V. Allen and Lyn Nofziger, Anderson's exit further weakens the tenuous link between the highly-ideological Reagan campaign and the less-ideological Reagan administration.

Anderson's style was so understated that his role was hard to detect. He seemed especially removed from the struggle when the drive to increase taxes, begun by OMB Director David Stockman last fall, neared apparent success at year's end. Anderson characteristically kept his cards face down. Far from arguing his case in the news media, his position was shrouded even from White House insiders.

Thus, when Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan finally agreed to new taxes, the president seemed all alone in his instinctive reluctance. But as the Treasury poured out hoary tax increase schemes, Anderson protested. Although his doctorate is in economics, Anderson's basic argument is not economic.

Rather, he warned the president with soft-voiced persuasion that the tax package would be interpreted as sharp departure from the 1981 tax-cut program, an about-face that would erode his credibility. The recession had made Reagan's balanced-budget pledge unattainable; but at least he could avoid promise-breaking tax increases that would produce only $8 billion in extra revenue anyway. When business magnates poured fourth their anti-tax arguments on Jan. 21, the president overruled his entire Cabinet and senior staff — except Anderson.

The selection of Harper, a Nixon-Ford veteran with only tenuous ties to the Reagan campaign, suggests that senior aides at the White House are not eager to see a new keeper of the scrolls. No consideration at all was given to a live possibility: Edwin J. Feulner Jr., president of the Heritage Foundation and a respected pillar of Reagan's own conservative movement.

Instead, as with most Reagan White House vacancies, Anderson's was filled before it was revealed. Presidential counselor Edwin Meese III, whose subordinate Anderson is, was attracted from transition days to Harper's nonideological, non-theoretical style. The choice of Harper was a fait accompli when chief of staff James Baker III, Meese's rival for power, was told about it.

It remains to be seen whether Harper can match the political judgment displayed by Anderson in the tax battle. For all his tweedy academic aura, Anderson has spent much of his life in politics. It was he, in the last days of torrid debate on the Treasury tax package, who pointed out the political stupidity of taxing costume jewelry, fur gloves and admission tickets to movies.

The day after his resignation was announced, Anderson overruled his own aides to eliminate a sub-minimum wage from Reagan's new proposal for special tax benefits to enterprises in decayed inner cities. Anderson thereby preserved the broad coalition for "enterprise zones" built by Republican representative Jack Kemp of New York with liberal Democratic representatives Robert Garcia of New York and William Gray of Pennsylvania.

However adept Harper proves to be in a White House sorely short of political horse sense, he will not worry about preserving the old campaign link. The White House Domestic Policy Office will produce more paper, get better organized and maybe fiction more effectively, but the nagging from Marty Anderson will be gone. That raises the possibility of unpredictable changes in the Reagan policy.

Elderly Have Legal Aid Needs

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer
Older people get less legal help than younger ones, even though they often need more.

That conclusion comes from the American Bar Association, which is trying to alert the elderly to their legal rights and to public and private agencies which can help them enforce those rights.

Lyman Tondel, chairman of the ABA Commission on Legal Problems of the Elderly, said older Americans have a special need for legal assistance because they "are often dependent on services provided by large, governmental bureaucracies, which are implemented through complex, rapidly changing regulations."

The ABA says surveys have shown that "legal service programs do not serve the elderly poor in proportion to their numbers in the population." Older people who are not officially classified as poor, but live on limited incomes face a situation that is "even more alarming," the ABA says, because they have too much money to qualify for poverty-linked law programs and not enough to hire private legal aid.

The ABA commission on the elderly and its Young Lawyers Division have just compiled a new, state-by-state guide to legal services for the elderly. The "Law and Aging Resource Guide" costs $3 and is available from the Commission on Legal Problems of the Elderly, 1800 M St. N.W., Washington, D.C., 20036.

The ABA says there are several reasons for older people's lack of legal representation. Among them:

- Older people may not recognize some of their problems as legal.
- They may not know how to get in touch with existing sources of help.
- They may lack transportation or be physically unable to use available transportation to seek legal aid.
- They may not feel comfortable accepting free or low-cost legal aid, looking on it as "charity."
- They may be suspicious of the legal profession as a whole.

Many legal service programs for the elderly are funded, at least in part, by the federal government through the Administration on Aging. Nancy Coleman, an ABA staff member, said 80 percent of local aging authorities provide some kind of legal program for older people. In 1980, an estimated 400,000 elderly people received legal services paid for through Title III of the Older Americans Act.

The ABA predicts that federal budget cutbacks will force a greater reliance on private legal efforts. It says more than 40 state or local bar committees already have separate programs dealing with the problems of the elderly.

More than a dozen law schools, meanwhile, have set up seminars on law and the aging or have established programs not only to provide direct legal representation, but also to train future lawyers in areas that affect older clients.

Among the most widespread programs currently operating are reduced-fee lawyer referral systems. Elderly people are put in touch with attorneys who will provide services at lower-than-usual rates.

In Florida, for example, the bar association's Elderly Referral Panel assists people who are over 60 years old and have an annual income which is too high to qualify for public legal aid, but is less than $10,000 a year for two people. Anyone who is eligible can call a toll-free number and get the name of a local participating attorney who will provide a free, 30-minute legal consultation. Additional services, if necessary, will be billed at a rate that is below the attorney's regular charge.

In other areas, bar groups have focused on specific problems, like Social Security or wills and estate planning. In Illinois, for example, the Senior Citizens Wills Program, sponsored by the Chicago Bar Association, the Suburban Cook County Area Agency on Aging and the Senior Citizens Legal Services, offers eligible older people free consultation with a private lawyer for preparation of a simple will.

Protecting Incumbents In Redistricting Strategy

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Rep. L.H. Fountain may not be crazy about the new congressional district legislators drew for him last week, but even some of his best Democratic friends point out that it could have been worse.

It could have been worse not only for him, but for two other eastern Democratic congressmen whose home isn't far from Fountain's in Tarboro — Reps. Walter Jones of Farmville and Charles O. Whitley of Mount Olive.

Concern over the possible inclusion of populous Durham County in Fountain's largely rural, eastern North Carolina district dominated debate among legislators over congressional redistricting. In the end, his 2nd District added Durham over objections by Fountain's allies.

But what wasn't mentioned so much was the geographical problem posed by the fact that three of the state's 11 congressmen live very close to each other in the east. Jones' home in Pitt County is just across the border from Fountain's in Edgecombe, and Whitley is a county away in Wayne.

Many possible redistricting combinations were ruled out from the start since no Democratic legislator wanted to put two incumbents together in a district.

"There's a historical guideline that's not mentioned much, and that is protecting incumbents," observed state Rep. Roger Bone, D-Nash, as his colleagues slugged it out last week over reapportionment. "One of the real headaches we've had is where they live — they aren't 60 miles apart."

And, he noted, make that distance 90 miles and you bring in Reps. Charles Rose of Fayetteville and Ike Andrews of Cary, five of the state's seven Democrats.

"If you look at where they live, where do you go? You have to go up the Virginia line with the 2nd, and that is the problem," added Bone. "We've been dancing all around it, but the problem is it's like a brick wall in the East."

Bone wasn't suggesting the legislature create trouble for the Democratic congressmen, especially not for Fountain. He is a former county campaign chairman for Fountain.

But another legislator, Rep. Dan Blue, D-Wake, warned his colleagues that if they failed to approve this redistricting plan, the U.S. Justice Department or a federal court could draw lines in the east that ignored their concern for protecting incumbents.

Blue, one of three blacks in the state House, examined the population and concluded that it would be possible to draw an entirely new district in the east that could have black population larger than any district now — at least 45 percent and perhaps as high as 50 percent black, he said. Fountain's new 2nd District is 40 percent black.

It would include the heavily black counties of the northeast as well as Edgecombe and part of Pitt and Wayne counties, Blue said. It would take in two or three of the incumbents, and force changes in six existing districts.

Blue likes the new redistricting map and said he didn't think the Justice Department would go so far as to suggest such a district. But he said the danger for incumbent Democrats was that if legislators had chosen to push the old map passed last year and rejected one by Justice, a federal court might have eventually drawn the lines and considered the black district he described.

"If that had occurred, that you're going to have to go in there and draw a black district, it would have thrown the entire redistricting picture out," he said. "A court certainly wouldn't consider incumbency."

Training Program Is Planned

WILSON — An intensive 40 hour training program to be carried out on six dates in June, sponsored by the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) has been announced.

The program, to be held at Atlantic Christian College in Wilson, is being limited to 75 persons, so those who are interested are encouraged to register at an early date.

The purpose of the 40 hour training program is to teach the nine in-depth listening skills considered necessary to effectively reach out and call on the inactive church member.

Fee for the program is $150 per participant plus room and board which will be available at a nominal rate at the college. In addition, a sponsor's fee of $150 is asked of an applicant of another denomination or Disciple region which wishes to become a sponsoring organization. There will only be a $50 sponsor's fee required for an individual church which would like to participate.

Dates for the program are Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, June 1, 2 and 3, and Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, June 14, 15, and 16.

Dr. John S. Savage, president of Leadership, Education And Development (LEAD) Consultants, Inc. is to be the trainer for this event.

Peace Forum

BERLIN (AP) — About 5,000 mostly young East Germans marked the anniversary of the allied bombing in Dresden in 1945 by holding a peace forum challenging the policies of the Communist government, reports reaching West Berlin said.

Reports from witnesses said that about 1,000 people gathered in front of the ruins of the town's once resplendent Frauenkirche destroyed in the Feb. 13, 1945 raids that killed at least 35,000 people, and lighted candles.

Communist police watched the procession, but did not interfere, reports from church sources in West Berlin said.

for tax purposes. The unpopularity of that process which doubles or triples values every eight years and the direct access of local citizens to the taxing process are causing many county commissioners to reconsider whether they will continue in office.

As Lancaster puts it: "good, civic-minded people are becoming unwilling to run for the office of county commissioner or to run for re-election because of all the hassles involved."

Added to the money crunch is the steady growth of services provided by county governments in recent years, including numerous programs once considered urban in nature, such as police and fire protection, garbage collection, recreational programs and such.

Most of the local county budgets goes to education and human services programs. Total county revenues last year were $965 million, with nearly $600 million spent in those two areas.

Farm Scene

The use of chemicals to control weeds in tobacco has increased over the last ten years. In 1970, it is estimated that only five percent was treated with herbicides. This has increased to over 80 percent in 1981. Herbicides are a part of a total weed management program which includes crop rotation, fall tillage, cultivation and good recordkeeping.

Good weed control in past years and tillage during early stalk and root destruction has lowered grass pressure in a lot of fields. Some weeds have increased even though grasses seem to be on the decrease. Ragweed, morning glory and horsenettle have increased in recent years.

Ragweed is a host for the disease Granville wilt. We need to control this weed in tobacco as well as rotational crops. Enide 90W and Devrinol 50W suppress ragweed if rains come after application. This is in addition to good control in rotational crops will help cut down on ragweed populations.

Horsenettle is another weed which is a host for disease. Horsenettle harbors the disease of mosaic. Mosaic is an extremely important disease which has been on the increase in recent years. Control of horsenettle is more effective in corn than in tobacco.

Cultivations are still needed to control these two weeds plus morning glory, cocklebur, prickly sida, sicklepod and nutedge.

The three methods of applying herbicides are pretransplant incorporated at or within seven days after transplanting, or at layby. Each method may be suitable for a given weed situation and total farming operation.

Pretransplant incorporated may be a way to reduce trips across the field and have less dependence on rainfall for incorporation. This usually supplies consistent weed control plus many provide clean fields if transplanting is delayed.

One disadvantage may be the possibility of root injury that can cause stunting. Chances of root injury can be reduced by applying the pre-plant chemicals at the lowest rate, (when weed pressure allows) proper incorporation and avoiding the use of two preplant herbicides in combination.

At or following transplant method may be a good choice if grass pressures are not heavy. Devrinol 50W or Enide 90W may be applied at transplanting or up to seven days afterward. Transplant application is best because it cuts down on trips over the field and moisture at transplanting may help activate the chemical.

Band applications of 16 inches over the row are usually used. Cultivations when fertilizer is applied will control weeds in the middles. Band applications are more economical. If no rain occurs after transplanting, cultivate lightly.

Layby is the last method for applying herbicides. Layby applications are helpful in extending weed control. They may also help with harvesting due to clean fields. Layby applications do not control existing weeds so they need to be applied after a layby cultivation. They will then control weed germination if adequate rainfall is received.

PITT PEANUT CHAMP — Tracy Barnhill Sr. is the 1981 peanut production champ for Pitt County, with a yield of 5,140.8 pounds per acre on 46.6 acres. He and his son, Tracy Barnhill Jr. were given a trophy at the February county peanut production meeting recognizing them as high producers of the year. Above, from left to right, are Norfleet Sugg, president of the N.C. Peanut Growers Association, Tracy Barnhill Sr. and Tracy Barnhill Jr. Eight other peanut farmers in Pitt County qualified for the 5,000-Pound Club, according to extension agent Sam Uzzell. In order to qualify, a grower must raise 5,000 or more pounds of peanuts per acre of land and be certified by ASCS records. In 1981 Pitt producers Glenn James, Thurston James, Darrell Bullock, Tracy Barnhill Sr., John L. Corey, Raymond Harris, Dewey Whitehurst and Will Congleton qualified.

See Continued Erosion Loss

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Scientific advances in farming and construction are outstripping progress into one problem that plagues both industries — soil erosion.

"A lot of the techniques we've been advising in the past — terracing, strip-cropping, contour planting — are simply not practical for the farming operations of today," said C.B. McCants, a soil science professor at North Carolina State University.

The modern farm operation, designed to bring maximum profits on sometimes marginal land, has built-in problems contributing to soil erosion, he said. Erosion-control techniques also are expensive because they mean sacrificing some tillable land to plant rows of grass or build ledges to cut soil losses.

Although scientists have learned much about erosion, many say they are not much closer to eliminating it than they were in the 1930s, when it claimed more than 50 tons of earth per acre every year and ruined the future of cotton in North Carolina.

Contributing to the problem are major construction projects that push soil erosion damage claims to new heights. Airports, highways, housing developments and shopping centers are claiming about 36,000 acres of prime farmland a year, according to a 1977 study of state soil resources.

"During raw construction, you're probably losing 60 to 100 tons of soil per acre per year," said Joseph A. Phillips, a professor of soil science at N.C. State and chairman of the state's Sedimentation Control Commission. "Even after urban areas are nailed down, the soil erosion will exceed a loss of 10 tons per acre each year."

Phillips said construction projects, with gullies and visible soil runoff, are not as sinister as the farm problem.

"Nonagricultural activities are so drastic you can identify them very readily and bring them into closer compliance with state laws."

Waiting Shortens Farmers' Tempers

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Many North Carolina farmers who were eager to testify before recent congressional hearings on the federal tobacco program found their tempers were shortened by long waits.

"You know what this is, don't you?" said one farmer. "It's just a glorified (type of) sitting around the potbellied stove and talking."

Gov. Jim Hunt and spokesmen for groups like the state Farm Bureau Federation and the North Carolina State Grange were given priority in appearing before the panels.

John D. Merritt, an administrative aide to Rose, defended the process, however, saying, "for the purpose of the House and Senate hearings process, you have to go to the institutions first."

"You don't have to go to them at every hearing, but you better have them on the record first so that farmers will have something to agree or disagree with," he added.

The hearing was one in a series being held by the Senate Agriculture Committee, led by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and the House Tobacco and Peanut Subcommittee, led by Rep. Charles G. Rose III, D-N.C.

The two committees are seeking ways to revise the 43-year-old federal tobacco program. The hearings were started after the program narrowly escaped serious overhaul in Congress last year.

Arrest Here

A Greenville man has been arrested and charged with armed robbery in the Friday afternoon holdup of the James City branch of First Citizens Bank.

The Pitt County Sheriff Department assisted the Craven County Sheriff Department, the State Bureau of Investigation and the FBI in the arrest of Earl Bailey Seay, 41, at his home at 503 Eleanor Street here Friday about 8:15 p.m., Sheriff Ralph Tyson said. He said the accused was taken to the Craven County Jail, where he was held in lieu of $50,000 bond through his first appearance today in Craven County District Court.

Seay is a former representative of the Dale Carnegie course here.

He allegedly held up the bank about 5:45 p.m. Friday, and according to the arrest warrants, threatened four persons in the bank with a pistol, before leaving with between $15,000 and $20,000 in cash. He was alleged to have left a briefcase in the bank, an act which assisted law enforcement officers in quickly making an arrest.

Sheriff officers said the bank money was recovered from the trunk of Seay's car, parked at his residence.

Damage Heavy

AYDEN — Ayden firemen responded to an early morning fire at the home of Joe Colenda, 206 North Pitt St.

According to fire officials, Colenda and his wife were asleep and awakened by cracking and snapping. Colenda and his wife escaped without injury.

According to Clavin Hardee, Ayden fire chief, the fire apparently started in the den of the brick home and spread into the attic. Hardee said the home suffered heavy fire damage to the den-kitchen area and heavy smoke damage to the remainder of the house.

Damage was estimated at $28,000.

Cause of the fire has not been determined.

Aircraft Mart Said Challenged

By CARL HARTMAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The European Airbus is challenging U.S. leadership in the world aircraft market, says the Aerospace Industries Association of America.

Calling the Airbus "without a doubt the most successful program ever attempted by the Europeans," the association said heavy financial backing by the French and West German governments gives the company tremendous leverage in promoting sales.

"The U.S. industries, while they do not desire greater government involvement, do feel that they are at a competitive disadvantage in their day-to-day activities," said the U.S. trade group.

Airbus Industries, which makes the wide-body plane, also has British, Spanish, Belgian and Dutch participation.

In a study called "The Challenge of Foreign Competition," the American group said Airbus had only 3 percent of the world market in 1977, but by last September had 43 percent of the backlog of orders.

A major problem for the U.S. industry, said the study, is the limit placed by the government on the U.S. Export-Import Bank, which has $10 billion out in loans to other countries for the purchase of Boeing and McDonnell Douglas planes. Boeing, this country's biggest single exporter, is also the bank's biggest client.

The Export-Import Bank lends money to foreign purchasers of U.S. planes at 12 percent interest, while France can offer 11.4 percent and West Germany 10 percent, according to the study.

However, American critics of Ex-Im say the U.S. rate is considerably less than the foreign customers could get from regular banks, and less than Ex-Im itself has to pay when it borrows money — so the cheap loans are a subsidy by the U.S. taxpayer to the aircraft firms and their foreign customers.

The Reagan administration is trying to limit Ex-Im lending to $3.8 billion for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, but a similar attempt was frustrated for the current year when Congress raised the figure to $4.4 billion.

Rainfall Has Aided Water Table

By The Associated Press

The two-year drought that had meteorologists predicting critically bad farm conditions has been broken by plentiful rainfall in recent weeks, but it may be too soon to celebrate, officials say.

The dry spell that began in 1980 caused experts to say last summer and fall that substantial amounts of rainfall would be needed, especially in western North Carolina, to replenish the all-important groundwater.

"We were on the verge of a really critical situation," said Ed Simmons, a hydrologist with the U.S. Geological Survey's Water Resources Division in Raleigh.

He was cautious about putting worries aside too soon, however.

"Now, it appears we're well into a recovery period," he said, adding, "if this precipitation would just continue."

The increased precipitation has caused the National Weather Service to stop issuing its weekly emergency water supply bulletins.

"Nature has gone the other way and now we are in a wet regime," said Al Gustafson, a hydrologist with the weather service in Raleigh.

Things have changed so much weather-wise that continued downpours could actually jeopardize farm crops which only months ago were thought to be in danger because of a lack of rain.

"Cropwise, we are in great shape already," said Katharine Perry, an agricultural meteorologist with the state Agricultural Extension Service at North Carolina State University. "In fact, if we don't start slacking off it is going to be hard for growers to get in and plant."

The streamflow on the Deep River is a good example of how rapidly nature can turn the tables. A gauge at Moncure, about 20 miles west of Raleigh, recorded an average flow of 3,690 cubic feet per second last month, which is 60 percent above the long-term monthly average.

Only three months ago, the same gauge registered a comparative trickle of 207 cubic feet per second.

Likewise, results can be seen at the French Broad River near Asheville. Streamflow there in January was at normal levels — about 2,000 feet per second. But the river reached a low in October, when only 500 feet per second was recorded.

It got so bad that at one point this winter the levels at the North Folk Reservoir in Asheville were 42 feet below the dam spillway. If that level had dropped another three feet, the city would have declared mandatory water-use restrictions.

But the reservoir made an amazing comeback and now stands only 7.6 feet below the spillway.

Claims U.S. Plans War

TORONTO (AP) — The leader of the Communist Party of Canada says the United States is preparing for "aggressive war" with the Soviet Union.

"The new military strategy of material preparations for aggressive war by the United States shows it is ready to take civilization to the edge and over the brink to achieve its aim of world domination," party leader William Kashtan told 200 delegates at the party's 25th annual convention in Toronto Saturday.

Kashtan said Canada's survival depends on peaceful co-existence between the United States and the Soviet Union. He claimed that arrival is threatened by recent policy changes by the Reagan administration.

He cited the administration's decision to produce the neutron warhead, and NATO's plan to deploy U.S.-made medium-range missiles in Western Europe as clear indications of what he called aggressive U.S. intentions.

"The peoples of Europe realize they are considered expendable by the United States in a limited nuclear war and there is a similar fear growing in Canada," Kashtan said.

The party, which has about 5,000 members, is calling for Canadians to join world peace organizations — which Reagan has called "Soviet propaganda machines" — to demand an end to nuclear arms production and have Canada declared a nuclear-free zone.

Health Care Forum Set

A public forum, "Health Care for Older Citizens — Today's Problems, Trends and Needs" will be held Tuesday at 8 p.m. at the First Presbyterian Church here.

The forum, being sponsored jointly by the League of Women Voters and the Pitt County Council on Aging, will first examine national and state trends with Assistant Secretary of the Division of Aging, Ernest B. Messer, keynote speaker. Messer served as chairperson for the House Committee on Aging during his last term in the state legislature.

A local panel will then discuss what they see as problems and needs of older citizens in health care. The panel will include James L. Mathis, M.D., chairman of psychiatry, ECU School of Medicine; the Rev. Robert Clyde, chairman of the Pitt County Council on Aging and Mrs. L.H. Churchill, speaking as a consumer of health care.

Solar Fraction

Greenville's solar fraction calculated by the department of physics of East Carolina University was 83 yesterday, which means that a solar water heater could have provided 83 percent of your hot water.

Civitan Club To Hold Meet

The Tar River Civitan Club will meet Tuesday at 6:30 p.m. in the fellowship hall of the First Presbyterian Church. An informal 'bring your own' supper will begin at 6 p.m.

The meeting is being held an hour earlier due to an educational program related to the club's Save-A-Babe project. Beverly Orr of the UNC Highway Safety Research Center will train members to instruct parents in the proper use of infant safety seats.

Through its Save-A-Babe program, which is coordinated with the Pitt County Health Department, the club plans to make infant safety seats available to parents on a low fee rental basis.

A Civitan area dinner-meeting will be held in Kinston Feb. 18 and those attending from here will leave from the Plaza Cinema Theater at 6 p.m.

Chancellor Is Named

CHAPEL HILL — Dr. Robert Poulton was named the new chancellor of North Carolina State University on Friday. Poulton will become the 10th NCSU chief executive officer and will take office July 1, succeeding Joab L. Thomas, who has resigned to take the position of president of the University of Alabama at Tuscaloosa.

Chancellor for the past six years of the University System of New Hampshire, Poulton is an animal nutritionist and endocrinologist, and is the third scientist to head NCSU.

Poulton, 54, is a native of Yonkers, N.Y., and is a graduate of Rutgers University. He was selected for the NCSU post from a field of more than 200 candidates considered by the University of North Carolina Board of Governors.

North Korean Ship Skipper A Defector

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The captain of a North Korean freighter said today he defected to the South because he feared punishment at home after his ship ran aground.

Kang Dock-hun, talking to foreign reporters at a meeting arranged by the Information Ministry, declined to give any details of his actual defection from the time he left his ship at a drydock in Singapore, Dec. 31 to Feb. 9 when he arrived in Seoul.

Kang said his freighter, the 14,000-ton Cheungsan-Ho, ran aground on a reef off Sri Lanka more than a year ago, causing substantial damage. The ship limped to Singapore and went into drydock in July for six months of work, he said.

As the work neared completion, Kang said, he began to worry about his future in Communist North Korea.

He said he recalled that a friend of his was "carried away" and not heard from again after he was blamed for a shipboard fire that caused a loss to the state.

Kang, 46, lamented leaving his 43-year-old wife, 17-year-old daughter and 10-year-old son behind in Nampo, the port for the North Korean capital of Pyongyang.

"I feel very sorry for my family in North Korea, but I also feel a great sense of relief to be in South Korea," he said through an interpreter.

Kang said his family "probably has been taken from home to an isolation camp. If I am branded a traitor, they might be given sub-human treatment."

Kang said his freighter, purchased from Poland three years ago for $1.8 million, carried mostly raw materials such as iron ore and coal. But he said he occasionally carried shipments of arms to Iran, Bangladesh and several Africa countries. The weapons shipments were camouflaged as farm implements, he said.

Saudi Raps Insinuation

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — The Saudi Arabian information minister today said the recently formed U.S.-Saudi joint military committee is solely for "following up military purchases and projects" between the two countries.

"Talk about anything other than that has no share of truth whatsoever," said Abdo Yamani, in a statement to the Bahrain-based Gulf News Agency.

Yamani's remarks were in response to criticism from the Arab press that Saudi Arabia was giving the U.S. a toehold in the region.

U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, at the end of three days of talks here last week with his Saudi counterpart Prince Sultan, announced the formation of a joint military committee chaired by himself and the prince.

Weinberger said the committee will handle "military matters of mutual interest" and expressed hope that this will prove helpful "not only to the U.S. and Saudi Arabia, but to other nations as well."

Yamani, according to Gulf News Agency, said he was surprised by "the chatter of speculations stirred about the committee's formation and tasks."

ECU Men, Women Return To Action

Lady Pirates Battle Duke

East Carolina University's Lady Pirates return to the hardwood Tuesday night in Minges Coliseum, seeking to start another winning streak.

The Lady Pirates will be entertaining Duke University in a 7:30 p.m. contest. East Carolina had a nine-game winning streak stopped last Thursday night when the bowed to second-ranked Old Dominion, 82-73, after leading much of the way.

The Lady Pirates come into the game with a 13-8 record, and have completed their road schedule. All five of the remaining games will be played in Minges, including the Converse Lady Pirate Classic, set for Saturday and Sunday.

During that period, Coach Cathy Andruzzi will be shooting for her 100th career victory. The third-year head coach at ECU needs only four more wins to reach that level. She is currently 96-62 in her six year career.

The Pirates have done well so far, too, against in-state and Atlantic Coast Conference opposition. The Lady Pirates are currently 5-1 against ACC schools, having lost only to N.C. State in Raleigh early in the season. They are 7-1 against in-state opponents, having beaten both Appalachian State (twice) and Campbell and UNC-Wilmington once each, in addition to North Carolina, State and Wake Forest.

"Duke has a controlled tempo club which keeps every score close," Andruzzi said. "They are usually in a position to win late in the game. Debbie Leonard does a great job coaching for Duke."

"They beat Virginia by 16 last week and they did it with good defense. Like we are, they are young and rebuilding. We'll have to play a smart game against them."

The Lady Pirates are still hopeful of an at-large NCAA Tournament berth this spring. "If we continue to play like we have the last few games, we've got to be in the regionals," Andruzzi said.

ECU Men Meet E. Illinois St.

East Carolina's men play host to Eastern Illinois State University tonight at 7:30 p.m. in Minges Coliseum, seeking their second straight win — and their second over an Illinois school this year.

East Carolina's junior varsity will entertain Louisville Junior College in a 5 p.m. preliminary contest.

The Pirates, earlier in the season, downed Western Illinois, 85-69, and Eastern has also claimed a win over that school.

Saturday night, however, the Panthers had a four-game winning streak stopped by Baptist College of Charleston, 68-60 in overtime. Eastern is now 10-12 on the season, while East Carolina brings in a 9-11 mark.

Eastern returns six of the top seven players from last year from a team that recorded a 16-11 record. However this is its first year in Division I competition.

"Eastern Illinois will bring a very quick, aggressive team. At this point in our thoughts on Eastern Illinois, I know that we must be prepared with our transition defense to stop their fast break," said Coach Dave Odum.

Eastern is led by the scoring of two of its three forwards. Kevin Jones, a 6-3 junior is hitting, 13.8, while Ricky Robinson a 6-6 senior, has a 13.4 average. The other starters include forward Leigh Hankins, a 6-6 senior, hitting 9.4 points a game, and guards Vincent Smelter, a 6-2 freshman, 4.7, and Kurt Lorenzen, a 6-3 senior, averaging 1.8 per game.

Hankins is the leading rebounder with 5.6 per game, while Jones is pulling 5.5.

The game is the last non-ECAC-South contest for the Pirates, who entertain league-leading James Madison on Wednesday.

After a Saturday game at Navy, the Pirates close out their home season against George Mason next Monday night.

Pearlree Wins Rookie Honor

CENTREVILLE, Ma. — East Carolina's Bruce Pearlree has been named the ECAC-South Rookie-of-the-Week for the second time in three weeks, league officials announced this morning.

Pearlree scored 23 points against Old Dominion and 10 points against UNC-Wilmington this week to earn the honor.

The 6-1 freshman guard hit 14 of 23 from the field and five of eight from the foul line. He has started the last six games for ECU and is averaging around 15 points per game over that span.

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Sugar Ray Leonard, predicting he'll win by a knockout, fights Bruce Finch tonight in his first defense of the undisputed welterweight championship.

Leonard gained sole possession of the title by stopping Thomas Hearns in the 14th round last Sept. 16 at Las Vegas, the scene of many title fights over the past several years.

But this mountain gambling resort hasn't had a championship fight since Jack Johnson knocked out Jim Jeffries in the 15th round in defense of the heavyweight championship July 4, 1910.

Tonight's fight at the 6,700-seat Centennial Coliseum will be televised live by Home Box Office, a cable TV company, at about 7:15 p.m., PST.

It will be the second match between the two men. Leonard outpointed Finch in a three-round amateur bout in 1973, the year Finch turned pro.

"He just beat me," said Finch. "He was the better man. But I'm a much better fighter than I was when I was an amateur."

As a pro, Finch, a 27-year-old native of Milwaukee now fighting out of Las Vegas, has won 30 fights against three losses and a draw.

He goes into his title bid on an 11-fight winning streak, his last eight under the management of Punch Your Lights Out, Inc. (Las Vegas attorney Keith Gallier and Bernie Dommermuth, owner of the Orbit Inn at Las Vegas).

Finch's last loss was a second-round knockout by Hearns Sept. 7, 1978. For that fight he got his previous highest purse of $3,000. His title bid will be worth about $100,000.

Allison Captures Daytona 500

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The rear bumper was gone, the fuel pressure read zero and the engine sputtered, but for Bobby Allison, vindication came in the form of a Daytona 500 victory.

The 44-year-old driver from Hueytown, Ala., overcame all obstacles Sunday and won the 24th running of stock car racing's most coveted prize and a $120,050 share of a $927,625 purse.

"I had faith in the crew," Allison said when asked about 1981, when he ran out of gas with 26 laps remaining and lost a race he had dominated. "He (crew chief Gary Nelson) got on the radio and said we were going to try to go the distance. And I said, 'okay.'"

So Allison built an insurmountable lead after pitting with 100 miles remaining and had barely enough fuel to finish. Running for a different team last year, a similar decision cost him a chance to join Richard Petty and Cale Yarborough as the only drivers ever to win the race more than once.

Clearly, Allison was more fortunate than he was when he saw seven-time winner Petty drive off a year ago with a victory that should have been his.

On the fourth lap of 200 run over the 2.5-mile Daytona International Speedway, Allison said he "might have got up into Cale" and started a chain-reaction crash that took three cars from the race Sunday. It also took the rear bumper from Allison's Buick Regal and very nearly ended his day against the wall atop the high-banked fourth turn.

Allison also managed to escape unscathed when Bobby Wawak, who had been black flagged, blew his engine entering the first turn on lap 104. Petty, polesitter Benny Parsons and hard-charging Neil Bonnett were not so fortunate. They crashed, and a crowd of 110,000 saw a starting field of 42 reduced to 24.

"Probably about $100,000," said Petty when asked the extent of his injuries. "And I hurt my foot (a sprained right ankle) a little bit, too."

Bonnett, who was not injured, said he hit oil from Wawak's car, was rammed from behind in dense billow of smoke and pushed into the wall.

Allison's chief rival, Darrell Waltrip, who beat him in a late-season rush to win the 1981 NASCAR Grand National driving championship, was the next major casualty. He failed to win the race in his 10th try when his car's engine blew on lap 152.

Waltrip, the pre-race favorite, had taken the lead seven laps earlier. Allison escaped potential disaster again despite running closely behind Waltrip when the engine let go.

But the victory, Allison's first in the race since 1978, was by no means tainted. He led the pack for 147 laps.

Only Petty's 184 in 1964, and A.J. Foyt's 167 in 1972, were more dominant figures. Petty finished 27th while Foyt, driving for the first time since he was seriously injured in an Indy car race last July, settled for 21st when his car left the race with handling problems.

The race came down to a question of Allison being able to go the distance. He barely succeeded after building a huge lead over second-place finisher Yarborough and Joe Ruttman.

"We knew it was going to be close, but we had to gamble," said Allison, whose margin of victory was 22.87 seconds. "It finally cut out when I was coming in after the race. They had to push me to Victory Circle."

He said he would have pitted for gas late in the race had Yarborough done so.

"But as long as they were out there running, we had to keep going," said Allison.

As one of 10 drivers who exchanged the lead 31 times, Allison was in front for the final 38 laps. His average speed was held to 153.991 mph because five cautions slowed the field for 34 laps and he was not pressed in the final stages of the race.

Had that been the case, Waltrip thought the outcome would have been much the same.

"My hat's off to Bobby," he said. "He's the fastest car out there. He's handling better than anybody else, and that's definitely the key here."

"Bobby was just awesome today," said Ruttman. "He was going way too fast."

Yarborough, Ruttman, Terry Labonte, Waltrip and Bonnett were the only drivers capable of running near Allison after the pattern of the race was set.

Earlier, Dale Earnhardt ran near the front, but his car blew a head gasket when it ran out of gas on the 44th lap. Labonte, who finished a lap behind the leaders in fourth position, lost any chance he had when he was forced to pit for fuel with two laps remaining.

"When I had to pit for gas, I felt sure he would, too," Labonte said of Allison. "Before, I wasn't sure if I'd have to stop or not. When I ran out of gas, I found out."

Bill Elliott finished fifth with Ron Bouchard, Harry Gant and Buddy Baker nailing down the next three places. Bouchard, Gant and Baker all sustained some damage in the Wawak incident.

Streaky UNC Whips Georgia

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.

AP Sports Writer

GREENSBORO — North Carolina coach Dean Smith recorded his 12th consecutive 20-win season this weekend with the help of some streaky basketball by his second-ranked Tar Heels.

James Worthy's 19 points, combined with some clutch free-throw shooting in the closing moments gave the Tar Heels a 66-57 victory over a pesky Georgia team.

The victory tied Smith with Nevada-Las Vegas coach Jerry Tarkanian for the most consecutive 20-win seasons. But Smith intimated that the victory was gained without 40 minutes of precision basketball.

"We played a good basketball game in stretches," Smith said. "On occasion, we weren't as sharp as we'd like to be at this time of the season."

One stretch that did indicate the Tar Heels were at the top of their game came in the opening six minutes. North Carolina hit its first 10 field goals and claimed a 20-7 cushion. A brief drought set in, however, and the Bulldogs reeled off 10 unanswered points to close within 20-17 at 11:31.

"We did battle back when we were down 20-7 and in basketball someone's going to have a spurt," said Georgia coach Hugh Durham. "But you don't like to use your spurt to catch up."

The Bulldogs did use the spurt to take a 32-29 lead late in the first half, but baskets by Jimmy Black and James Worthy gave the Tar Heels a 33-32 lead at halftime.

The opening six minutes of the second half were almost a carbon copy of the first. North Carolina's 11-3 streak increased the lead to 44-35. But Georgia ran off six of its own, only to find itself down by 44-40. Having used another spurt just to get close, the Bulldogs found themselves fighting for the rest of the way.

The Bulldogs were within 48-47 on a Vern Fleming layup at the 9:31 mark. But two Worthy free throws and a three-point play by freshman Michael Jordan stretched the lead back to six and made Georgia's task even tougher.

A pair of Gerald Crosby jumpers kept Georgia within striking distance, the last of the two making it 57-53 with 2:09 to play. Jordan connected on one of two free throws, however, and Worthy converted an interception into another basket to ensure the victory.

"We had a good effort today," Durham said. "We have proven when we're down, we can scratch and get back in the game."

Dominique Wilkins matched Worthy's 19 points, while Eric Marbury added 13. Georgia is now 13-9 after having won four in a row.

Valenzuela Could Sit Out Season

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The agent for Fernando Valenzuela says the 1981 Cy Young Award winner will sit out the 1982 baseball season if the Los Angeles Dodgers renew the left-hander's contract without his signature.

As a second-year player, Valenzuela, who also was selected National League Rookie of the Year in 1981, is not eligible for either free agency or arbitration.

The Dodgers are entitled to renew his contract without his signature and can cut his salary 20 percent. Players must be renewed between March 1 and 10.

"Whatever the deadline is," said Tony DeMarco, Valenzuela's agent, "if we haven't found the answer to our needs, we'll know what to do. When somebody has you by the neck and is choking you, you do what you have to do to survive."

It is believed that DeMarco is seeking an estimated $1 million a year for Valenzuela, 21, the first player ever to win a Cy Young Award and be named rookie of the year in the same season. The Dodgers are believed to be offering somewhere around $350,000 to $400,000. Valenzuela was paid $42,500 last year.

"I'm going to give the Dodgers a chance to show they are what I think they are, a great organization," said DeMarco. "If they show me at some point I've been a foolish optimist, we'll do other things... We'll go to the wire."

Dodgers' Vice President Al Campanis had no comment on DeMarco's statements, saying only, "I don't think you tell people through the papers what you're going to tell them at a meeting."

The next meeting between Campanis and DeMarco is scheduled for Wednesday.

DeMarco said Valenzuela would report to spring training in Vero Beach, Fla., later this month whether or not he had signed a contract by then.

"We're still trying to work something out," said DeMarco. "We're looking for ways. We have another meeting in the middle of next week to see if something can happen."

"When the time for spring training comes, Fernando will go even if it's a bloodbath at the negotiating table."

Valenzuela pitched the first inning for the Dodgers in an exhibition game at Dodger Stadium Sunday against the University of Southern California, which is part of the club's annual open-to-the-public workout.

A crowd estimated at 35,000 watched Valenzuela retire the side on a grounder to second, a fly to shallow center, a walk and a foul pop. The defending World Champions won the seven-inning game 7-3.

Moreno 3rd All-Around

WINSTON-SALEM — The Rosettes' Kerri Moreno finished third all-around this past weekend at the Class 3 State Championships held at the Winston-Salem Gymnastics Center.

Moreno, competing in the 12 to 14 age group, was first on the floor exercise with a combined (compulsory and optional) score of 17.00 — one of the highest scores of the meet on the floor exercise.

She took second on the balance beam with a 16.50 to help her ring up 62.85 points and finish third all-around.

Frankie Lynn Hardee, also competing in the 12 to 14 age group for the Rosettes, was third on the vault with an 8.5.

Stacy Captures Classic

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Patty Sheehan said it was her "finest round" of golf ever, but it wasn't enough.

Sheehan fired a sizzling 67 in the final round of the $125,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association 54-hole S&H Golf Classic, to end with an 11-under par 205.

But Hollis Stacy staved off the on-rushing Sheehan, making birdie on four of the last five holes and canning a two-foot putt on the final hole of the 6,214-yard Pasadena Golf Club to win with a record 12-under-par 204.

It was Stacy's second victory in three LPGA events this season, following her five-hole sudden-death win last month at the Deerfield Beach LPGA

Whirlpool Open. LPGA tournament director Jim Mann said Stacy's two wins in the season's first three tournaments was "a first."

Rival JoAnne Carner, expected to duel Stacy, fell back on the final nine to finish third at 8-under 208.

The 27-year-old Stacy, who also fired a 67 for her 1-stroke victory, won $18,700 in the event.

Stacy, saying she wanted to "be No. 1," said it was no surprise Sheehan pressed her for the lead all day.

"She's an excellent player," Stacy said, but added: "I felt confident all day long."

Stacy, plagued with putting problems earlier in the tournament, opened Sunday's play with a par, while both Sheehan and Carner birdied the hole to create a three-way tie.

But Stacy, who bogeyed two of the first four holes, was told by her caddy she was standing too close to the ball. The adjustment made all the difference.

Sheehan came back on the sixth hole to again tie Stacy, but dropped back with a bogey on the seventh.

Stacy held onto her slim lead until the 15th, when she birdied to move two-up. She birdied the 16th also, but Sheehan came back to press for a playoff with birdies on the 17th, where she nearly aced the par-3, and 18th.

Levi's Open Triumph 'Very, Very Important'

HONOLULU (AP) — Wayne Levi's victory in the Hawaiian Open put him in a different, much more pleasant category on the pro golf tour.

"It was a very, very important victory for me," Levi said after he'd outlasted a host of would-be challengers with a 2-under-par 70 Sunday, good enough for a 1-stroke triumph.

There are at least three major benefits.

First, he's no longer subject to the rigors of the Monday morning qualifying rounds, the 18-hole shootout non-exempt players must survive just to gain a spot in the tournament field.

Second, "there's another berth in the Masters," Levi said.

And third, there's a spot awaiting him in the Tournament of Champions at La Costa, Calif., "an absolutely great tournament for the pros," Levi said.

Levi, 28, captured his third individual title in a six-year career with a 277 total, 11 strokes under par on the Waialae Country Club course that winds its way some 6,881 yards through Palm Groves and along Pacific beaches.

Scott Simpson finished second, one stroke back at 278 after a closing 69, with Chip Beck at 68-279.

Ben Crenshaw, 21-year-old Bobby Clampett and former U.S. Open champ Andy North were next at 280. Crenshaw had a 70 despite a lost ball and a triple bogey. Clampett shot 71 and the disappointed North, who was tied for the lead on three separate occasions over the final round, finished with a 73.

Masters champ Tom Watson never got started. He was only two off the lead going into the final round but took himself out of it with a fat 76 and a 285 total. He was tied at that figure with Arnold Palmer, the national seniors champ who had a closing 72.

"It was a very close tournament," Levi said, "with four or five guys within a shot or two. It all came down to the last few holes. The other fellows fell back and I was able to hang in there."

North, Crenshaw, Clampett and Beck all made their challenges. All fell back. Crenshaw came back from that triple bogey to get close again, then bogeyed two in a row.

From a share of the lead, North bogeyed three holes in a row, 3-putting the first two. Clampett hit one out of bounds on the 17th. Beck fell out of contention with a bogey on the 16th.

And Levi, playing the bright orange ball that has come into vogue on the pro tour this year, held steady in the growing pressure.

Soccer Club Wins By 6-2

NEW BERN — The Jowi Sailboard Support Systems Soccer Club defeated the New Bern Sporting Goods Soccer Club, 6-2, Sunday afternoon in their season-opener.

The Jowi Club, formerly the Greenville Soccer Club, led, 4-0, at the half and then coasted in with the win.

Brian Cantrell scored two goals — one in each half — to lead the Jowi club. Chris Salt, Hall Warner also scored in the first half. Rob Ehinger and John Toomey had goals in the second half.

Fernando Gambirazio scored both New Bern goals, one of which came on a penalty kick.

Kriek's 'Best' Stuns McEnroe

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — For South Africa's Johan Kriek, defeating John McEnroe for the U.S. National Indoor Tennis Championship was "my best accomplishment ever."

Kriek upset top-seeded McEnroe 6-3, 3-6, 6-4 Sunday. Later in the day, McEnroe also lost in the doubles championship when he and partner Peter Fleming fell to Kevin Curren, a South African who attended the University of Texas, and Steve Denton 7-6, 4-6, 6-2.

"Today I had to beat No. 1 in the world in the finals of a major tournament and I did," Kriek said. "That has to be a personal best." Kriek, ranked 16th on the world computer list and seeded eighth here, complimented his opponent.

"Even when he's off, he's very difficult to beat," Kriek said of McEnroe. "People should take their hats off to John McEnroe. He's so good for the game — he plays every week and he plays doubles, too. That gives people a chance to see him twice."

Kriek, 23, who nearly quit the event in the second round over a line dispute, received a trophy and a check for $40,500.

A dispirited McEnroe had little to say after the double loss.

"I have to catch a plane," he said in the locker room. "I don't want to say anything because I might say something I will regret."

Asked if he were disappointed about his performance, he said: "Well, I can't say I'm happy about it."

Kriek, a 5-foot-8, 155-pound right-hander who was born in Pongola, South Africa, gained the finals by beating Buster Mottram in the semifinals Saturday.

In the finals, Kriek jumped to a 3-0 lead in the first set and breezed to a 6-3 win. However, McEnroe roared back in the second set, beating Kriek by the same score, 6-3.

McEnroe broke Kriek in the first game then held his serve to move ahead 2-0. But Kriek came back to win.

"A key in the third set was my return of service," Kriek said. "Sometimes McEnroe hits ace after ace after ace, and he never lets you in. Today he didn't. When he served well, it seemed I got some great returns, and that might have thrown him off."

McEnroe marched into the finals without losing a set, beating Tim Wilkison, Gilles Moreton, Terry Moor, Roscoe Tanner and defending champion Gene Mayer.

Kriek defeated Pat Dupre,

Tim Gullikson, David Carter, fourth-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis and Mottram before facing McEnroe.

In other tennis action, the top seeds, were victorious at Richmond and Kansas City.

Jose-Luis Clerc of Argentina topped Fritz Buehning 3-6, 6-3, 6-4, 6-3 to win $100,000 in the Richmond World Championship Tennis Classic. Clerc played the entire tournament with a sprained ankle.

Yanks, John Agree To Contract Terms

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — On Valentine's Day, the love affair between Tommy John and the New York Yankees warmed up again.

John, a 38-year-old left-hander who has won more games in the last three seasons than any other American League pitcher, settled his salary dispute with the Yankees by agreeing to a contract that calls for an estimated $1.7 million over the next two years.

"I'm glad to get it over and was glad it put to bed," said John, who was to report to the Yankees' spring training camp here today and begin working out Tuesday.

The agreement was worked out in a 30-minute three-way telephone conversation among John, Yankees owner George Steinbrenner and Bob Cohen, the pitcher's lawyer.

John and Cohen had filed a grievance over the Yankees' original offer and contended that the pitcher could become a free agent if the arbitrator sided with him. The new agreement replaces the two option seasons in the contract John signed as a free agent in November 1978.

John, whose record in three seasons with the Yankees is 52-26, contended the Yankees' earlier $475,000 salary offer represented a cut of more than the permissible 20 percent maximum. The difference of opinion stemmed from $1.4

million in deferred payments. John said that "nothing good would have been accomplished from letting this thing linger. It's like in a marriage. If you have an argument and patch it up fast, it's okay."

Boston Celtics L.A., 108-103

Celtics Turn Tables On Lakers

By The Associated Press Turnabout is fair play where the Boston Celtics and Los Angeles Lakers are concerned.

On Sunday, one week after a 119-113 loss to the Lakers in Boston, the Celtics turned the tables on the West Coast, edging Los Angeles 108-103.

Larry Bird, frustrated for most of the game and held to just 12 points, scored on a key three-point play — a scoop shot and a free throw — with 19 seconds remaining to give Boston a 107-103 lead.

"The Celtics and Lakers always play each other hard," said Boston Coach Bill Fitch. The Lakers' Pat Riley called it "a classic game of two great teams playing. It came down to the wire, to a few crucial plays. This week and this game, it was not our luck to get those calls."

Cedric Maxwell led the Boston scoring against the Lakers with 27 points, 12 in the fourth quarter as the Celtics rallied after trailing 79-74 at the start of the final period. Jamaal Wilkes paced the Lakers with 25 points.

The Celtics, who trailed most of the game, went ahead to stay on Gerald Henderson's free throw that made it 91-90 with 5:13 to play. Earvin "Magic" Johnson scored five points in a row to bring the Lakers back from a 104-98 deficit, but missed a free throw that would have tied the contest and Bird followed with his three-point play.

76ers 117, Knicks 105

Julius Erving and Andrew Toney scored 26 points apiece and Philadelphia pulled away in the final two minutes for its sixth straight victory. Mike Newlin scored 23 and Maurice Lucas 19 for the Knicks, who led by 11 in the third quarter but were outscored 20-7 the rest of the period.

Toney connected for a pair of baskets and Maurice Cheeks converted two free throws to ignite a 13-4 spurt down the stretch.

Bucks 125, Cavaliers 97

Marques Johnson scored 30 points, connecting on 13 of 14 shots, to lead Milwaukee to its ninth straight victory. The Bucks scored the game's first eight points and were never in trouble, opening a 97-77 bulge entering the final quarter.

Spurs 114, SuperSonics 94

Mark Oberdief scored 25 points and reserve center Dave Corzine added a season-high 23 points and 12 rebounds to lead San Antonio.

The Spurs led throughout the second half in winning for the fourth time in as many meetings with Seattle this season. Coming off the bench in relief of George Johnson, who is suffering from bronchitis, Corzine played 37 minutes in leading the Spurs to their 21st victory in 26 home games.

Warriors 103, Kings 93

Purvis Short scored 24 points and Golden State held off a fourth-quarter Kansas City rally. The Kings, after trailing by as many as 29 points early in the third quarter, got within nine in the final minute.

Mavericks 111, Nets 109

Jay Vincent scored 10 of Dallas' last 14 points and finished with a game-high 30 as the Mavericks recorded their 16th triumph in 39 games. They won only 15 all last year, the team's initial season in the NBA.

Pacers 107, Trail Blazers 91

Johnny Davis scored 25 points, while Billy Knight and Tom Owens added 19 apiece for Indiana, which led most of the way. The Pacers led by 17 points in the last quarter.

Ray To Fight...

he isn't taking Finch for granted, said Sunday he thinks big-fight pressure has gotten Finch.

"He's lost," said Leonard. "I can see it in his eyes, in his expression."

Asked for a prediction at a Saturday news conference, the 25-year-old Leonard looked at Finch and said, "I think — when do you feel like going down Bruce — it will not go past eight."

"I don't carry anybody. If I hurt a guy in the first round, I'm going to try to take him out in the first round."

Leonard is such a prohibitive favorite to make his record 32-1 — he has scored 22 knockouts — that the only betting line is whether the fight will end before or after the eighth round.

The champion says he wants to fight three or four times this year, and negotiations reportedly are virtually completed for a May title defense against Roger Stafford, who upset Pipino Cuevas, the former World Boxing Association champion, on a decision last year.

Leonard will get $1 million for his 1982 debut, about $12 million less than he received for beating Hearns, who held the WBA title.

In two other fights last year, Leonard defended the World Boxing Council championship by knocking out Larry Bonds in the 10th round, then won the WBA junior middleweight title by knocking out Ayub Kalule in the ninth round. He gave up the junior middleweight title after winning the undisputed welterweight championship.

Dan Duva, president of Main Event Productions, Inc., said Reno's championship fight drought will end before a sellout crowd paying $20, $40 and $150 for tickets.

ORDINATION OF 100 — This was the scene Sunday in Kaduna, Nigeria, as Pope John Paul II ordained 100 priests on a bamboo altar. During the ceremony in Nigeria's Moslem heartland, the pontiff pleaded for more recruits to the priesthood. (AP Laserphoto)

Moslem Leaders Rebuff Papal Gesture To Islam

By DENNIS REDMONT
Associated Press Writer

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — Moslem religious leaders snubbed Pope John Paul II on his visit to northern Nigeria, rebuffing his drive to improve relations between Christianity and Islam.

The pope had planned to deliver a speech Sunday to religious leaders at the State House in Kaduna stressing such common aspects of the two religions as opposition to abortion, respect for human rights and belief in one God.

But after addressing at least 500,000 swaying, hand-clapping people at an open-air Mass, the pontiff's appearance at the State House was canceled and he made his second speech instead to two Moslem provincial governors in a crowded airport waiting room.

After reading his speech, the pope presented two pontifical medals then waited, visibly embarrassed, for the customary response of thanks. It never came, and he boarded his plane for the flight back to Lagos.

A government spokesman said rivalry among three Moslem sects prevented agreement on a delegation to meet the pope. But Catholic leaders said the failure of the religious representatives to appear was a setback for Vatican efforts to weave better ties with Islam.

"You can't solve in one day problems of so many centuries. We have to keep trying," said the Most Rev. James Dempsey of Providence, R.I., the bishop of Sorkoto, whose Nigerian diocese is 90 percent Moslem.

For the past 16 years, since the Second Vatican Council, the Roman Catholic Church has been trying to relegate to history the Crusades and the slave raids in which the two religions' members slaughtered each other as an act of faith.

After the creation of a Secretariat for Non-Christians, Pope Paul VI braved a cool reception in Moslem Turkey and went to predominantly Moslem Indonesia, where he addressed 50,000 Moslems, Christians and Buddhists.

Official Moslem-Christian meetings, however, have often dissolved into bitter disputes. Five years ago, the Vatican had to disavow an Arab-language communique issued at a Tripoli Catholic-Moslem meeting which condemned Israel and Zionism too sharply for its taste.

Since then, few meetings have been held. John Paul II pursued the goal of rapprochement by also traveling to Turkey and telling Moslem leaders in Kenya in 1980 he would "do everything possible to develop the spiritual bonds between Christians and Moslems."

In the Philippines last year, he called the Moslems his brothers and at a meeting with 60 Islamic representatives urged them to work with the predominantly Catholic central government instead of fighting for the independence of the southern Philippines.

The pope's trip to northern Nigeria Sunday, the third day of his eight-day African trip, started successfully with the open-air mass in Murtala Muhammed Square. Church officials estimated the throng at 500,000 and said it was history's largest gathering of Christians in a predominantly Moslem area.

The government deployed thousands of troops on horseback and used German shepherd dogs to keep the crowds in check. Security men even ran a metal detector over the pope's throne, constructed of dried mud, just before he came to the bamboo altar to celebrate Mass.

There was no trouble. Using the local Hausa language, the pope asked the cheering throng, "Saanku? (How are you?)"

The choir chanted "Stolat" — "May you live 100 years" in the pope's native Polish and sang hymns in Hausa and English.

Would Charge Plot By Nkomo

SALISBURY, Zimbabwe (AP) — The nation's main daily newspaper, in an unprecedented attack today, urged the government to charge Joshua Nkomo, the junior coalition government partner, with treason because of arms caches found on properties he owns.

The Herald, controlled by the state-owned Mass Media Trust, also said that any armed revolt following his arrest should be "crushed ruthlessly."

The paper suggested that Nkomo and his five Patriotic Front parliamentarians in Prime Minister Robert Mugabe's 25-member coalition Cabinet be dismissed and forced to join white former Prime Minister Ian D. Smith in the opposition back benches.

The newspaper, which often reflects government thinking, accused the Patriotic Front Party of deliberately burying millions of dollars of weapons on farms in the western Matabeleland province.

The weapons included armored cars, bazookas, rockets, machine guns and mortars. Military officers said their was a sufficient amount of weapons to equip a 5,000-man brigade — about a 10th the size of the present national army.

Nkomo, whose support is drawn mainly from the Matabele tribe, has denied any knowledge of the arms.

which were discovered in at least 35 caches this month. He specifically denied charges by Mugabe that the Patriotic Front was plotting a coup.

Mugabe, addressing supporters Saturday, said the government would this week decide on the fate of the Patriotic Front in the coalition.

The two rival leaders led separate armies in a seven-year guerrilla war to end nine decades of white-minority rule in the former British Colony.

Mugabe, who won a landslide victory in elections two years ago, after Britain arranged a cease-fire and constitutional settlement between warring parties, led the country to independence April 18 1980.

Police Department investigators, who charged Ms. Pullen with failing to stop for a stop sign, estimated damage at $1,000 to the Pullen car and $800 to the Daniels vehicle.

Spaghetti Lunch Earned A Trip

LONDON (AP) — He may have gotten nowhere near the record, but John Blakesley's marathon spaghetti lunch won him a trip for two to New York's Little Italy district.

Blakesley out-ate more than 100 other contestants Sunday in a competition organized jointly by a London pizzeria — aptly named Fatso's — and the Standard, the capital's afternoon newspaper.

"Some people have said I eat like a pig. Well, it certainly paid off this time," said a jubilant Blakesley after consuming 100 yards of spaghetti in one minute and 31 seconds.

"I feel great. I could have eaten even more. Mind you, I won't be eating spaghetti again for a while," he said.

The Guinness Book of World Records lists the holder of the 100 yards spaghetti-eating record as Steve Weldon, of Austin, Texas, who took just 28.73 seconds in May 1977.

Fear Busing Bill Impact On N.C.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — With 34 of North Carolina's 143 school systems under court-ordered desegregation plans, the state could be shaken up by an anti-busing amendments being considered in Congress.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., submitted amendments that would keep federal courts from requiring that students be bused more than five miles or 15 minutes from home to correct racial imbalances. The Helms amendment would specifically forbid U.S. Justice Department lawyers from requesting school-desegregation suits that could lead to busing.

The amendments, attached to a bill allocating money to the Justice Department, were passed by the Senate Feb. 4, but face additional consideration in the Senate and the House.

The Johnston amendment in its present form specifies that the measure would be retroactive to previous judicial orders, but North Carolina officials differ in their opinions of the impact such a law would have.

"That amendment could affect the whole atmosphere of where boards assign kids to school," said A. Craig Phillips, state superintendent of public instruction. "Boards might undo the solid decisions they've made about assigning kids."

But Dr. H. David Bruton, chairman of the state Board of Education, disagreed, saying, "That assumes a lack of commitment on the part of the local boards, and I don't sense any lack of commitment."

Kelly M. Alexander of Charlotte, president of the North Carolina chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said "the clock was being turned back" by the amendment.

"The South is known to do anything it can to deny blacks equality," he said. "If school boards can find a way to sit and do nothing, they'll do it."

The amendments could lead some school systems to seek an end to the practice of busing. But school officials said the amendment probably would have little effect on the 34 systems involved because only 2 percent of the 1.1 million students are bused for desegregation purposes.

Charlotte attorney Julius L. Chambers, president of the NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund, said the amendment clearly is unconstitutional. He said fund directors are considering whether to challenge the amendment.

"We have enough local pressure to keep it (integrated schools)," said W.O. Patrick, Wayne County school board chairman.

Other school officials varied in their assessments.

Howard L. Hall, Cumberland County school board chairman, said, "There is no reason (to change assignment plans). I think we're pretty balanced out now."

However, Wake County Superintendent Walter L.

Marks warned that the proposal might cause some school boards to ease desegregation efforts.

"The attitude of people can be affected — not only boards, but citizens," he said.

Study Backs Contentions

WASHINGTON (AP) — A North Carolina NAACP official has used a report by an Atlanta-based civil rights organization to back up assertions that state officials have deliberately moved to dilute black voting strength.

Charlotte attorney Julius Chambers, president of the NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund, told the Senate Constitution Subcommittee that the Southern Regional Council study provides evidence that blacks still need the protection afforded them by the 1965 Voting Rights Act.

The subcommittee is holding hearings in Washington on the renewal of the Voting Rights Act.

The study said state officials have conducted "a quiet campaign of resistance" to limit black political strength in county politics in recent years, as 27 counties with black populations of 25 percent or more changed electoral procedures between 1965 and 1980 as a way to minimize black voter impact.

According to the report, that made it more difficult for black voters to combine their support behind black candidates.

The 46-page report, prepared by Steve Suits, the council's executive director, was published in October by the Rockefeller Foundation as part of a book entitled, "The Right to Vote."

Suits said in the report he chose to study black voting participation in North Carolina because it had a reputation as a state that showed self-restraint when racial violence was occurring elsewhere in the South.

'Fitness' Rated By Moral Majority

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The "fitness" of members of North Carolina's congressional delegation is the topic of a state Moral Majority publication that lists the voting record of each on selected moral issues.

"This is a very valuable tool as far as encouraging a well-informed electorate," said the Rev. Lamarr Mooneyham of Durham, president of the state Moral Majority. "We're not concerned with anyone wearing a badge. We just want them to be informed."

The four-page newsletter, started last week, is being mailed to 10,000 of the group's members. "Congressional Update" lists votes by the state's 11 congressmen on six issues related to the family and its moral upbringing.

The six issues in the first letter were: prohibiting use of federal funds for abortions for federal employees, eliminating funds for legal services, cutting income taxes, curbing government spending, protecting the tax-exempt status of private schools and prohibiting certain sex acts in Washington.

Mooneyham said a "yes" vote on the issues was preferred by the Moral Majority.

All 11 congressmen voted "yes" on at least three of the six issues.

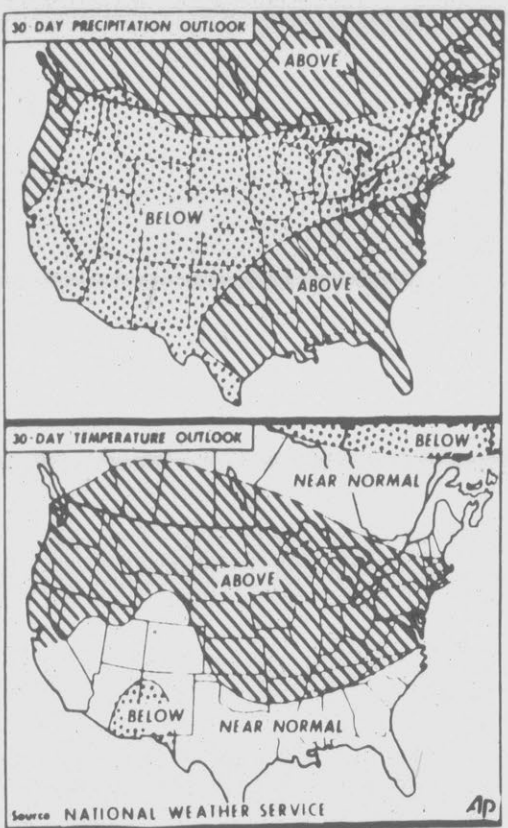

North Carolina congressmen interviewed said they were not concerned about the ratings.

"They have as much right to put out their opinion as any group," said Rep. Ike F. Andrews, a Democrat from Cary. Rep. Walter B. Jones, a Democrat from Farmville, agreed, saying, "The Moral Majority is a group that has a right to be heard."

Health Care Costs Climb

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Higher health-care costs may be on the horizon for North Carolinians if inflation and federal reductions persist, hospital administrators say.

Hospital officials are examining a wide array of ways to accommodate lower reimbursement rates for Medicare and Medicaid.

"Somebody has to pick up that cost, and basically, it's the private patient," said John R. Willis, administrator Rex Hospital, a 384-bed private facility in Raleigh.

Hospital administrators discussed their frustrations last week at the winter meeting of the North Carolina Hospital Association in Raleigh.

Paul R. Perruzzi, deputy director of the state Division of Medical Assistance, said hospital costs nationwide were up 18.8 percent in the first nine months of 1981 compared to the same period in 1980.

A spot check of 15 major hospitals in the state showed an increase of 17.1 percent in payroll costs and 1.4 percent in administrative costs from January through September 1981, Perruzzi said.

Six of the 14 hospitals reported little or no increase in the number of patients admitted. One showed a decrease in admissions.

Hospital administrators also said they're afraid President Reagan may impose stringent rules that would curtail federal funding to hospitals where expenditures are rising too rapidly.

Equally disturbing to administrators is the prospect of further reductions in reimbursement rates for care of patients under Medicaid and Medicare programs.

The federal government has cut 2 percent from its share of Medicaid funding for North Carolina. As a result, the state decided to limit certain kinds of patient services, freeze reimbursement rates to doctors and hospitals and reduce the number of eligible recipients.

As of Jan. 20, some 22 hospitals statewide had implemented rate increases amounting to $16 million to compensate for Medicaid reductions, said Thomas A. Rose, president of Blue Cross and Blue Shield of North Carolina.

Harold G. Koach, president of Forsyth Memorial Hospital in Winston-Salem and chairman of the hospital association, said his facility lost about $350,000 last year under the Medicaid program.

"We had to transfer that to (bills of) paying patients," he said. "And that crunch is getting more and more difficult to overcome."

Clark C. Havighurst, law professor and director of Duke University's program on legal issues in health care, said hospitals compete for patients but that competition has centered around services not prices.

"I think in the future, you're going to see cost begin to matter," he told administrators at the Raleigh meeting. "That means you're going to have to start repricing some of the services you've provided."

He suggested patients could help lower costs by becoming more aggressive in comparing health care costs and demanding that their physicians place them in hospitals that give good value for the dollar.

June Milby, spokesman for the state Department of Human Resources, said the poor already are feeling the effects. The limit on doctor visits has left 12,161 people with reduced or terminated benefits. Limits on prescriptions have affected 21,442 individuals.

Perruzzi said the Medicaid reimbursement crunch will get worse. In the next fiscal year, North Carolina's loss should jump from $25 million to $45 million, he said. For Medicare, the proposed federal budget calls for reduction of $5.3 billion in fiscal 1983.

Robert A. Stewart, controller of Catawba Memorial Hospital near Hickory, said his facility recoups only 84 cents for every dollar it spends on a Medicaid patient.

At Duke Medical Center in Durham, the reimbursement rates have prompted a hiring freeze, elimination of 105 positions and a study to see where further cuts can be made.

BEACH CLOSED — A Dade County (Fla.) police helicopter hovers over swimmers at Crandon Park Beach on Key Biscayne over the weekend in an attempt to close the beach after a school of 50-to-60 sharks was spotted just offshore. Experts say unusually high temperatures for February have attracted greater than normal numbers of swimmers to local beaches and that this could possibly increase the number of shark attacks. (AP Laserphoto)

Investigate Plane Crash

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Federal investigators are looking into the single-engine plane crash that claimed the lives of two 22-year-old Jacksonville men shortly after the took off from a rural airstrip Sunday.

Police said James Weldon Simpson and Danny Edward Hall were both licensed pilots and authorities are not certain which man was piloting the aircraft. Highway Patrol Trooper R.A. Hood said the plane could be controlled from either seat.

Officials said Simpson is the son of Weldon Simpson, the airstrip owner and currently a candidate for county commissioner in Onslow County.

Sheriff's deputies said a Federal Aviation Administration investigator was expected to arrive this morning to look into the crash.

The Piper J-3 crashed shortly after 4 p.m. after taking off from the White Oak airstrip adjoining the White Oak High School parking lot, police said.

According to Hood, the engine was apparently dead when the plane went down.

Some youths in a field within 100 yards of the crash site said they watched the plane take off, appear to lose altitude, rise again and then crash.

Counties Try To Avoid Waste Facility Sites

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Officials in several North Carolina counties where hazardous-waste facilities may be located are trying to create ordinances that will keep out the waste without being overruled by the state Hazardous Waste Board.

Three waste-treatment companies have announced they are considering sites in Mecklenburg, Anson, Lee, Chatham, Moore and Harnett counties.

SCA Services Inc. of Boston has proposed a hazardous-waste treatment plant southeast of Charlotte in the Arrowwood Industrial Park. Chem-Security Systems Inc. of Bellevue, Wash., is considering building a hazardous-waste landfill in southeast Anson, and Chemical Waste Management Inc. of Long Beach, Calif., is looking for a landfill site in Lee, Chatham, Moore or Harnett counties.

North Carolina, which has no hazardous-waste landfills or treatment plants, is the nation's 11th-largest generator of the toxic wastes. Gov. Jim Hunt said a new law giving the state the power to override local laws to locate hazardous-waste plants was designed to give the state authority to deal with the wastes created by an increasingly technical and industrial society.

Chatham County Planner Kieth Megginson said the county ordinances to circumvent the law indicate counties don't completely trust the state or the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

"I think there is somewhat a distrust on the local level of both the state and federal government, especially the U.S. EPA because they're having their budget cut back so much," Megginson said.

"The counties I'm familiar with aren't totally convinced the state will have the time, and/or money, to assume the responsibility for hazardous-waste, so the county says, 'Well, we'll do it.'"

Megginson has written a tough county ordinance that has attracted attention in Anson, Lee, Moore and Harnett counties as a model for regulating hazardous-waste firms.

Under the proposal, a company new to the county would have to pay $10,000 to apply for the permit and the county would use the money to hire expert consultants to review the company's plan and its proposed safeguards. The $10,000 fee might change before commissioners finally adopt it, Megginson said.

In all cases, county commissioners and planners are trying to create the strictest regulations possible while not being so strict they invite the state to pre-empt the ordinances.

If the state Waste Management Board considers the regulations unreasonable, the governor can order the local ordinance stricken, and the company can build a plant, regardless of local opposition.

But planners and commissioners say they believe they can enact requirements regulating hazardous-waste facilities where streams or water supplies would be threatened, where a neighborhood is too close, where roads would not support chemical-laden trucks or where the soil characteristics invite runoff or seepage of deadly chemicals.

"I think we can protect the health, safety and public welfare and still allow hazardous-waste plants under reasonable conditions, or else there'll be more and more dumpings along the side of the road somewhere," said Walter Fields, a Charlotte-Mecklenburg planning staff member.

A Review

'Cannery Row' Well-Presented

John Steinbeck's novels translate well onto screen. Not long ago, there was an exceptionally fine TV film made of his novel "Of Mice and Men." Now, MGM (through United Artists) has released a film based on "Cannery Row." The film is currently playing at Plaza Cinema.

Overall, "Cannery Row" is eminently satisfying. Occasionally, there are memorable moments, especially when Audra Lindley has stage center.

Miss Lindley as Fauna, the heavily-beaded, orange-winged madam of the Bear Flag Restaurant (read house of girls) gives a stunning performance. Many viewers will know her as Helen Roper in the TV series, "Three's Company." Nothing she has achieved in that small screen comedy gives a hint of the extent of what she can do with a role like Fauna.

The stars — Nicke Nolte as the lovable and beloved eccentric marine biologist, and Debra Winter as Suzy, one of madam's girls and a beautiful young woman determined to be her own person, are good in their roles. Ms. Winter is certainly one of the loveliest young women to grace the screen since Ava Gardner. The fact that these two do not stand out as strongly as Miss Lindley or other supporting cast members is attributable to the fact the principals are not basically as interesting as some of the novel's lesser characters.

Two of the town's bums, ragged, piano playing Mack (played by M. Emmett Walsh) and the huge stuttering black man Hazel (played by Frank McRae) are two film characters long to be remembered.

One of the surprises of this film is that Steinbeck's California eccentrics to a substantial degree are American counterparts to the outlandish people that populate Fellini's bizarre Italian films.

There is as well a marvelous ambience of fantasy in the set of delapidated Cannery Row in Monterey that borders on surrealism — the plush, over ornate interior of the house of ill repute; the elaborate haphazardness of Doc's marine laboratory; the sleeping quarters of the town bums, rusting drain tiles surrounding an outdoors living room of salvaged grandeur. And ever present just beyond Cannery Row is the majesty of the sea pounding and swirling over the rocks of Monterey.

Music too adds its charms to the rich texture of the film — Doc's recordings of chamber music and from the house, a number of good things in popular music from the 30s and early 40s.

An unusual scene stealer in this film is a veritable army of slithering, croaking frogs. The ingenious capture of this writhing mass is alone worth the price of admission.

"Cannery Row" marks the directing debut of David Ward. His script combines the original 1945 novel about Cannery Row with its mid-50s sequel, "Sweet Thursday." His film is a sensitive recreation of the spirit of the novel. Readers fond of the Steinbeck's work should be pleased with the movie.

Super Cast Of Stars In Benefit Show

By JAY SHARBUTT
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Elizabeth Taylor flubbed a line and said Queen Victoria celebrated her diamond jubilee in 1997. Liza Minnelli did "New York, New York" backed by a chorus line of seven New York Yankees.

And the likes of Al Pacino, James Caan, Roger Moore, Robert De Niro and former New York Mayor John Lindsay high-kicked and sang with Radio City Music Hall's famed Rockettes.

Sunday's one-night stand featured one of the greatest casts in show business history, which was assembled for a $2 million benefit for the Actors' Fund of America.

Billed as the "Night of 100 Stars," featuring nearly 200 celebrities and a 36-piece orchestra, the show lasted 5½ hours and played to a sell-out crowd of 5,882 people who paid from $50 to $1,000 a seat to see the glittering extravaganza at the huge midtown Manhattan theater.

The streets were filled with hundreds of fans crowding behind police barricades to see the celebrities arriving in the fleet of 60 limousines hired for the occasion.

The red carpet was literally rolled out for the stars. Four blocks of fabric stretched from Radio City to the New York Hilton for the performers and audience to promenade on after Sunday's show.

Inside the theater, tuxedoed men abounded. So did women in fancy gowns, furs and jewels, prompting "Mork and Mandy" star Robin Williams to gasp, "My God, look, Tiffany's blew up!"

Despite the show's length — the program was taped and will be edited to a three-hour telecast scheduled for an ABC airing March 8 — the audience generally remained cheerful during delays between the more than 40 segments in Sunday's big show.

But they occasionally groaned at repeated scenes in which a huge birthday cake commemorating 100 years of the Actors' Fund was rolled on stage and candles on it were lit as Helen Hayes, Princess Grace and James Earl Jones ticked off major and minor events in each decade.

At one point, they chuckled appreciatively as comedian Alan King jokingly noted: "I hope you all live as long as this evening seems to be."

The evening had its high points, though: Miss Piggy in a duet with Metropolitan Opera star Placido Domingo; Harry Belafonte singing "Try to Remember;" Dudley Moore on piano, accompanying pop star Christopher Cross on the theme from "Arthur"; and Sammy Davis Jr. singing, "Mr. Bojangles."

There was a "lovers of the silver screen segment," in which celebrities like Farley Granger and Joan Collins, Bud Cort and Ruth Gordon, and Warren Beatty and Diane Keaton strolled on stage beneath clips of films in which they co-starred.

The audience jumped to its feet, applauding, when an ailing Jimmy Cagney, seated in a chair, was saluted along with other Hollywood superstars from Gene Kelly to Lillian Gish, who joined him on stage.

One number, based on the old "What's My Line" show, featured 34 of TV's current stars. There also was a glossy fashion show with gowns modeled by Susan Anton, Cher, Gina Lollobrigida and Brooke Shields.

Showcasing the top names of stage, screen, TV and music, "Night of 100 Stars" aimed at raising $2 million for the Actors' Fund, created in 1882 to help needy members of the entertainment community.

Cash Offered By Johnny Cash

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) — Country music singer Johnny Cash is offering a $560 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the robbers who broke into his Montego Bay home last December.

The gunmen stole $50,000 in cash and jewelry and 175 pairs of shoes which were to be donated to an orphanage.

An advertisement signed by Cash offering the reward appeared in Friday's Gleaner newspaper in Kingston.

The police later detained two men for questioning about the robbery but later released them.

STARS APPEAR — Elizabeth Taylor, left, stands with Princess Grace of Monaco on the stage of Radio City Music Hall in New York for Sunday's "Night of 100 Stars." Some of the biggest names in show business appeared on the stage in a benefit for the 100th anniversary of Actors Fund of America. (AP Laserphoto)

Protest Opera Star's Absence

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Opera buffs broke into catcalls, shouted insults and stamped their feet after being told that soprano Montserrat Caballe couldn't appear. The protest forced the La Scala opera company to cancel a long-awaited performance of "Anna Bolena."

A few minutes before curtain time Sunday night, the theater announced that the Spanish singer was "indisposed" and would be replaced by American soprano Ruth Falcon. There were no details of the singer's problem.
