Reschedule Agency Purchase

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

WILSON — The North Carolina Eastern Municipal Power Agency's board of commissioners Thursday rescheduled the initial closing of its purchase of interests in Carolina Power and Light Co. generating units for late April.

The initial closing, previously scheduled for February, was delayed earlier this month because of a CP&L decision to delay the construction of one coal-fired generating unit at the Mayo plant, and to cancel construction of two nuclear units at the Harris plant in Wake County.

"This is the same project, on a smaller scale," NCEMPA general manager Ralph Shaw said. "We continue to be well-satisfied with the arrangement."

The original CP&L-Power Agency agreement, signed last year, enabled the agency to purchase undivided ownership interests in nine generating units at four CP&L plant sites.

Average savings for agency participants was then projected at 11 percent.

CP&L in December announced the cancellation of two of the four units at its Harris Nuclear Plant and a delay of 12 months in construction of two other units included in the joint-ownership project.

While the cancellation reduced the size of the agency's projected average savings to 5.5 to 6 percent, it also reduced the size of the agency's investment by one-half.

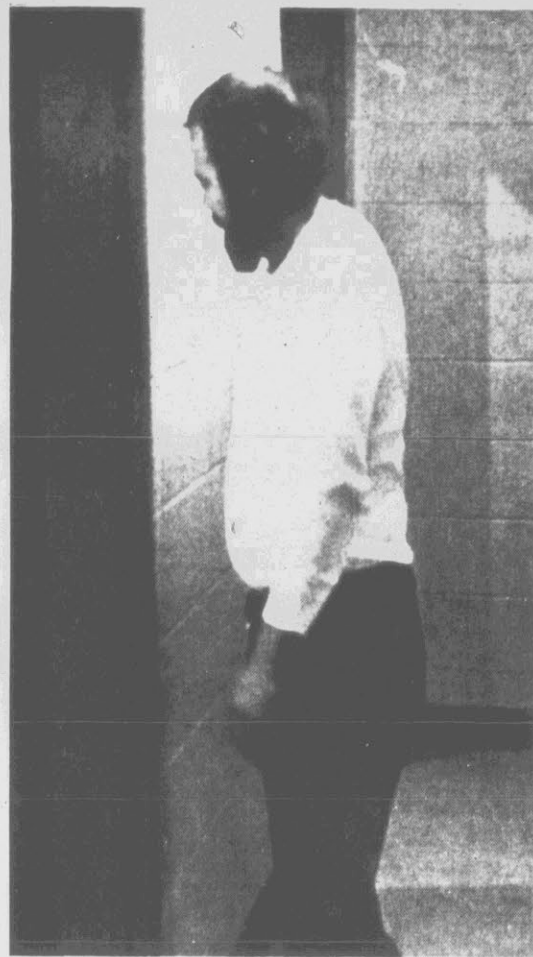

Shaw noted that "the savings are relatively just as significant as in the original agreement," because the changes considerably reduce the risks of ownership and the amount of investment required. Only about $2.7 billion in bonds will have to be sold, Shaw noted. If Harris units three and four had not been canceled, some $5 billion would have been needed.

The agency's consulting engineer, R. W. Beck and Associates of Orlando, Fla., estimated that with the changes in the agreement, power costs over the next 20 years for the 32 municipalities involved will be 5.5 to 6 percent lower than electricity would have cost if bought at wholesale rates from private utilities.

Under the modified agreement, the agency will acquire ownership in Brunswick nuclear units 1 and 2, coal-fired Roxboro Unit 4 and Mayo 1 and 2 (now under construction), and Harris nuclear units 1 and 2.

Eleven of the participating municipalities, including Greenville, that were formerly served by Virginia Electric & Power Co., began receiving all-requirements power from the agency on Dec. 30.

The other 21 municipalities, now CP&L customers, will begin receiving power from the agency at the time of the first closing.

Negative Mail

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mail to the White House and State Department is running between 10-1 and 20-1 against President Reagan's escalating support for El Salvador's military-civilian junta, according to a department official.

Harold Heilnis, the State Department official who monitors mail on foreign policy issues, also said the flow of letters on the Central American country has increased sharply since recent declarations of stronger U.S. support for the government.

The negative mail, while perhaps not a clear reflection of overall public sentiment, underscores the political problem facing the White House as it considers ways to bolster the Salvadoran government in its war against leftist guerrillas.

'Intensifying' Verbal Debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two days after trading blunt words at a diplomatic ceremonial, President Reagan and the new Nicaraguan ambassador are escalating their debate over the purpose of the arms buildup in Nicaragua.

"We know that the Nicaraguan army is of tremendous size, beyond anything that they might need for possible defense," Reagan told a nationally broadcast White House news conference Thursday.

At the Nicaraguan Embassy, on the other hand, Ambassador Francisco Fiallos Navarro told reporters, "We don't have offensive weapons but we are prepared to repel any attack from out of our country."

It was Fiallos' first news conference since assuming his post in Washington.

When Fiallos presented his credentials to Reagan Tuesday, the president accused Nicaragua's revolutionary government of "inviting alien influences and philosophies into the hemisphere." The ambassador replied that Nicaragua would solve its problems in its own way, even if this was "different from what some interests might hope for."

Report N.C. Ill-Prepared To Lose Federal Money

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina is ill-prepared to deal with the loss of over $300 million in federal aid expected if President Reagan's fiscal 1983 budget cuts are approved, state officials say.

The first round of cuts, proposed by Reagan and approved by Congress last year, resulted in a $121 million loss in North Carolina's state budget this year. That figure will increase to $163 million as the cuts are carried over into the next fiscal year's state budget.

"The effect of the 1982 (federal budget) cuts are really just now starting to be felt," said Harvey M. Lincoln, a state budget analyst on federal aid.

There is a certain feeling that this second round will not go through as easily, but some of the alternatives that are being proposed to reduce the deficit, such as just to freeze things, are still going to have an impact.

Gov. Jim Hunt and the General Assembly did not attempt to replace any of the budget losses from the first round of cuts with state funds. The governor and lawmakers have said they are in no better position to soften the blow with state dollars this year.

Welfare and education programs would be the hardest hit if Congress accepts Reagan's proposals, officials say, while the school nutrition program and aid to local governments would get by with minor trims.

Officials said the Reagan budget axe would affect a group including 28,000 pregnant women or women with infants who would lose nutrition subsidies, as well as 185,000 families who would see the value of their monthly food stamps reduced at least 5 percent to 18 percent.

Disabled persons would have to wait two years instead of one before becoming eligible for Medicaid, and the Legislature would have to reduce Medicaid services by another $41 million, officials said.

Also slated to be cut would be $6 million a year to run the offices of Legal Services of North Carolina Inc., which provides legal help to the poor.

The federal cuts would not actually take effect until Oct. 1, when the federal government starts its 1983 fiscal year. Starting then, federal food stamps that go directly to the state's poor would be cut by $46 million, and direct grants and loans to local governments and other local agencies would be cut by $51 million.

The Reagan proposals would not include a major blow to the school nutrition program, which suffered a controversial $20 million cut in the first round. The new proposals would cut the program by $2.2 million.

Local governments would not be hit as hard as they were under the first round of cuts, which eliminated grants for waste water and sewer treatment facilities and other economic development grants.

The latest proposed cuts would reduce direct mass transit aid to North Carolina cities by about half and cut $1 million the state gives local governments for mass transit.

Polish Govm't Spokesman Says Military May Tighten Controls

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Government spokesman Jerzy Urban says military rule may be tightened if Poland's underground opposition challenges Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski's government, the official PAP news agency reported today.

Church. A leading West German newspaper says the verbal attacks may be a prelude to a nationwide roundup of Polish priests.

The opposition's slogan, "The winter is yours, but the spring will be ours," has a "sinister air to it," PAP quoted Urban as telling the newspaper Zycie Warszawy.

He said the slogan, seen in leaflets and plastered on walls, hinted at "armed clashes, of going to the woods as soon as it gets warmer."

He claimed the slogan is "a battle cry of those who are ready to slaughter Poland, thereby simply giving the United States a pretext to embark on a showdown in the world trial of strength."

"On Dec. 13, 1981 the bottle with the imp inside was corked," he said in reference to the day martial law was declared. "Uncorking the bottle would allow the imp to escape."

FARWELL, Mich. (AP) —

The estranged husband of a woman who was killed by shotgun blasts along with six members of her family was arrested on murder charges when a man in Alabama spotted a car described in news accounts of the slayings, authorities say.

The slayings occurred Tuesday, one day before a divorce decree was to become final between Robert Lee and Garnetta Haggart. The livestock auctioneer married Mrs. Haggart last February, but left her in June when his checks started to bounce, relatives said.

Haggart, 31, of Rosebush, charged Thursday with killing his estranged wife, her parents, one of her sisters and two nieces and a nephew, was arrested later in the day when he crossed into Tennessee from Alabama.

"When he eased into Tennessee we put the road block up and he walked in on it," said Marion County, Tenn. Sheriff Loyd A. Hood.

Clare County, Mich. Sheriff Ghazey Aleck said Haggart was driving a 1980 Buick owned by a member of the slain family. Newspaper stories mentioned the family car was missing.

There was "no resistance," Hood said. "He was surprised."

Hood said a loaded .38-caliber pistol was found lying under the car seat by Haggart's feet.

Aleck said a businessman, believed to be the owner of a roadside restaurant, recognized the car from newspaper accounts of the massacre and notified authorities.

Meanwhile, friends began raising money for survivors of the massacre, including an infant found under the body of her mother.

Aleck said a sergeant from his department and two Michigan State Police crime lab experts would leave for Tennessee today.

If Haggart fights extradition back to Michigan, his return could be delayed by a week or more, Aleck said.

In addition to Mrs. Haggart, 23, the victims were her father, George W. Post, 53, a mailman; Post's wife Vaudrey, 42, another of Post's daughters, Helen Gaffney, 29, and Mrs. Gaffney's three children, Angela, 10, Tom, 8, and Amy, 4.

Post's body was found in the basement of the house on the family's 60-acre farm, which stands on a dirt road 3 1/2 miles west of Farwell. Mrs. Post and Mrs. Haggart were found inside the home. The rest were in a pickup parked outside, and apparently were shot while attempting to flee, authorities said.

The only survivor was Mrs. Gaffney's year-old infant Mandy, who was shielded by her mother's body in the pickup.

Aleck said Mrs. Haggart had returned to Michigan from Florida this week for a hearing on the final decree of the divorce. The couple married last February and lived together until Mrs. Haggart sought the divorce.

Relatives said the Haggarts apparently met a few years ago when Garnetta worked as a waitress near Haggart's home in Rosebush, south of Clare. They were married Feb. 28, 1981, with a reception at the Farwell Veterans of Foreign Wars post, where Garnetta's slain father George Post was treasurer.

Court records say the couple separated last July 8. Family friends said Haggart had disappeared a month earlier after the bad check warrant was issued. Mrs. Haggart filed for divorce July 23.

Neither she nor her attorney could locate Haggart, and they took out a newspaper ad to inform him of the proceedings.

Haggart, who was known to have worked as a livestock auctioneer, also had been sought by police on bad check charges in a warrant issued in Gratiot County, Aleck said.

HOW CAN CITIZEN HELP?

I am very interested in seeing the constitutional amendment that would give state legislators four-year terms defeated. I understand Tom Gilmore is the chairman of a Keep the Two-Year Term Committee. I would like to ask him how an ordinary citizen can help the effort. Mrs. R.T.

Hotline contacted Rep. Gilmore at his landscaping business office in Julian in Guilford County. He said yes, you certainly can help, by educating yourself and your neighbors about the issue. He suggested you write or call the committee's headquarters in Room 380, 400 Oberlin Road, Raleigh 27605; phone, 828-5646 and request fact sheets.

He added that the committee is in need of Pitt County volunteers to set up a local committee that would provide speakers for local groups and otherwise inform the public on the issue. If you wish to lead or take part in this effort, write or call the office, he suggested.

Donations by individuals or businesses are, of course, welcome, he said. The non-profit committee's mailing address is P.O. Box 10702, Raleigh, N.C. 27605. Contributions to and expenditures of the committee are to be filed with the State Board of Elections, he said.

Looking To A Big Weekend

GETTING THAT FISHING BOAT READY FOR THE WEEKEND ... If you're going fishing, you've got to do a lot more than just pop a line in the water and Bill O'Neal of Greenville, above, scrubs the winter off his boat and trailer in anticipation of a weekend of angling. Temperate weather earlier this week drew most people out-of-doors and filled many, like O'Neal, with hopes that Saturday and Sunday will also be pleasant. O'Neal says he plans to do some bass fishing in Plymouth over the weekend "if the weather is right." Temperatures are predicted to return to more temperate levels Saturday and sunshine is forecast. (Reflector Photo By Mary Schulken)

Will Increase Training For Salvadoran Troops

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Fort Bragg and other U.S. military bases may continue to host soldiers from El Salvador for special training, says the deputy assistant secretary of defense for inter-American affairs.

Almost 1,000 Salvadoran soldiers already are being trained at Fort Bragg, N.C., and another 500 are to receive training at Fort Benning, Ga.

Nestor D. Sanchez said Thursday the Salvadoran government "needs to train more troops and probably will ask us to help them in that way."

Whether the training will take place in El Salvador or the United States has not been decided. He said that will be the subject of negotiations between the two governments.

"Their plans, the Salvadoran plans, are to train at least four or five more battalions over the course of the next year or in the shortest period possible," Sanchez said.

Sanchez was at the John F. Kennedy Institute for Military Assistance to lecture to the Foreign Area Officers Course, a class which trains officers scheduled for military and political duties overseas.

Sanchez said he received briefings Tuesday on the training of the Salvadorans at Fort Bragg from Brig.

Gen. Joseph Lutz, Special Forces commander, and other Green Beret officials.

The last 466 soldiers of a 967-man Salvadoran contingent arrived at Fort Bragg last Friday for about 12 weeks of basic infantry training from Special Forces and 82nd Airborne Division personnel.

Also, 490 Salvadoran officer candidates are receiving training at Fort Benning, Ga., and up to 55 American personnel have been training Salvadorans in the Central American nation since last year.

Sanchez said American officials set a limit of 55 trainers at any one time in El Salvador and that their instruction consists primarily of training helicopter mechanics and pilots.

"They're trainers, not advisers. All we do is train them, and the bulk of it has been training maintenance people for the helicopters (and) the pilots," he said.

Sanchez said the U.S. government also has been sending trainers to neighboring Honduras to help that country intercept arms shipments from Nicaragua on their way to insurgents in El Salvador.

"We had teams of 5-10 people in there for short periods of time to help them primarily with their interdiction program, because

Tougher Poor Countries Loans

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, saying it wants a better return on its help to developing nations, is telling the world's poor countries that low-cost loans will be harder to get in the future.

"We want to help the poor countries of the world, the borrowing countries of the world," Beryl Sprinkel, undersecretary of the Treasury, said Thursday as he outlined plans for participating in some international lending institutions.

"We do not want to redistribute our wealth to them with zero results," Sprinkel said, detailing cutbacks in U.S. support of several institutions, including the International Development Association.

The association, the so-called "soft loan" affiliate of the World Bank, and three other institutions will see their U.S. funds cut from the proposed $1.54 billion in fiscal 1983 to $1.14 billion in fiscal 1987, according to Sprinkel.

Sprinkel said the United States wants the World Bank to insist on tougher conditions for IDA loans, such as guarantees that the money actually will improve the economy of the borrowing country.

Because other nations have followed the U.S. lead, the IDA has only $2.6 billion available this year for loans, which are typically for 50 years at no interest. Before the cuts, the IDA had anticipated getting $4.1 billion from the 33 member nations of the World Bank.

Congress has cut recent administration requests for IDA appropriations. President Carter sought $3.2 billion for three years. Congress spread it over four years with the consent of the Reagan administration.

The International Monetary Fund was not covered by the report released by Sprinkel, who said the administration was preparing a study on IMF operations. The IMF already requires tough conditions, such as the elimination of food subsidies and currency devaluations, before it will grant many loans.

The other three institutions discussed by Sprinkel are the Inter-American Development Bank, the Asian Development Bank and the African Development Fund.

By 1987, the administration proposes to increase contributions to the Asian bank from $111 million a year to $130 million. It proposed to raise contributions to the African bank from $41.7 million to $50 million a year for the next three years.

Preparing For 6th Generation

By THOMAS MURPHY Associated Press Writer SAN FRANCISCO (AP) —

Meet Frankie Underwood, and her daughter, Olene, and Olene's daughter, Kathlene, and Kathlene's daughter, JoAnn, and JoAnn's daughter, Kimberly — who is about to have a baby.

When Kimberly Peters' child is born on the peninsula south of San Francisco — and it's due any day now — the newborn will become the sixth living generation in the family.

To put it another way, Frankie Underwood, 90, will become a great-great-great grandmother. Her great-granddaughter will be a grandmother.

"I talked to my doctor last week and he thinks it's going to be a girl," Mrs. Peters, 19, said, noting the four ascendants leading back to Mrs. Underwood are all women. "But don't get me wrong. If I have a little boy, I'll be just as happy."

Though she says she will be quite honored to be one of only a few women to give birth to a sixth living generation, that honor had nothing to do with her decision to have a baby.

She recalled Thursday in a telephone interview from her San Mateo home, "My husband and I were married for a month and a half and I just started getting sick one day. I went to the doctor and that (pregnancy) was the problem. I'm really excited."

Back in Fitzgerald, Ga., Frankie Underwood is already getting excited, too — about a reunion. She says her granddaughter, Kathlene Langella, is tentatively planning one for the spring.

"I said 'Honey, how do you suppose we're ever going to get together? I'm in Georgia and you're in California,'" Mrs. Underwood recalled. "She said we'd manage somehow."

Most of the family is in California, with Kathlene Langella, 55, living in Burlingame, and JoAnn Jacobi, 37, in Foster City. However, Olene Cox, 73, lives in Macon, Ga.

Mrs. Underwood, who was born Sept. 24, 1891, and keeps track of family birthdates in her Bible, says she barely remembers her own grandparents.

"I didn't know anything much about my grandparents," she said. "I just remember seeing one of my grandmamas. I was very young then."

Mrs. Underwood has 58 living descendants, including the 16 great-great grandchildren of Mrs. Peters' generation, according to a count by granddaughter Mrs. Langella.

Slight Rise For Incomes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans' personal income rose a scant 0.2 percent in January after a December decline that was the first drop since the 1975 recession, the Commerce Department reported today.

December's figure had originally been reported as a slight gain, but department officials today revised it to a decline of less than one-tenth of 1 percent.

The last previous decline apparently was a drop of about the same size in July 1975.

The new report followed several earlier ones from the government with figures comparable to those of the severe 1974-75 recession.

In the last few days, the government has reported that industrial production fell 3 percent in January, matching the biggest drop since 1975, and that factory use dropped to 70.4 percent of capacity, the lowest since that same year.

Last week, the Commerce Department reported that the value of business inventories had dropped in December for the first time since 1975, but that was seen as an indication that companies were successfully whittling down stocks of unsold goods — generally viewed as a necessary move before recovery can get underway.

Personal income rose to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $2.495 trillion in January, the new report said. But after discounting for inflation, it was clear that Americans lost ground for a second straight month.

Part of the reason was the increase in the Social Security tax rate that took effect in January.

Dear Abby

Loss Of Dog Leaves Her Inconsolable

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I need help. I'm not a silly kid, I'm a 34-year-old woman who can't cope with the terrible loss I suffered two weeks ago. My dog died. "Naffkie" was like a child to me. I had her for 12 years. I got her at the animal shelter when she was 3. I was told if someone didn't adopt her she would be put to sleep within one week. She was part poodle and part cocker spaniel and she really was a beautiful dog. And smart? I'd say, "Let's go out," and she'd run and get her leash and bring it to me!

I can't stop crying, Abby. She wasn't even sick. She just started to have convulsions, and by the time I got her to the vet she was gone.

Everyone tells me I should get another dog, but no other dog could ever take Naffkie's place. Besides, I don't ever want to go through this again. It's like losing a child. I can't even look at her bowl or leash without crying. Maybe you or one of your readers can tell me if I should get another dog or not.

GRIEVING IN JERSEY

DEAR GRIEVING: You can never replace Naffkie, but you can fill the emptiness he left by getting another pet. Go to the animal shelter and rescue another homeless dog. It could be a lifesaver for both of you.

DEAR ABBY: My husband had a triple bypass operation 14 months ago. He is doing fine now and does everything he used to do before — except one thing. He hasn't made love to me since his operation. He says he is afraid the excitement might damage his heart. Abby, is this true? Don't tell me that every man who has had a bypass doesn't ever lay a hand on his wife again!

We've been married for 15 years and had a good sex life before this. I would hate to think our sex life is over so soon. Please ask some of your heart doctors about this.

NO LOVE IN TEXAS

DEAR NO LOVE: My heart doctors inform me that normal marital relations can be resumed following bypass surgery without fear of heart damage. Your husband should consult his own doctor for confirmation and reassurance.

DEAR ABBY: We have read you for years, but this is our first time to write. We need someone else's point of view. My husband and I have a golden wedding anniversary coming up in the beginning of 1983. We have 12 children. Some are far away, and in winter the roads are sometimes very bad. Would it be appropriate to celebrate our anniversary in the spring or summer? Some say yes, some say no. What is your opinion?

J. IN YAKIMA, WASH.

DEAR J.: I vote yes. The less you and your guests have to worry about, the better. Congratulations and God bless.

DEAR ABBY: Who said, "Civilized man arrived in the Pacific armed with alcohol, syphilis, trousers and the Bible"? I would like to convey to him my heartiest congratulations.

CHARLES

DEAR CHARLES: Havelock Ellis. And it's too late. He died in 1939.

Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Ex-Juvenile Teaches Parents

By CHRIS CHRYSTAL

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (UPI) — In the parent game, says former juvenile delinquent Paul Smyth, it's not how you play that counts but whether you win or lose.

Getting the respect of a delinquent child with whom you're doing battle is not where it's at, Smyth said. Winning is.

Parents who aren't winning in competition with their children need to be taught how, Smyth believes. He teaches them.

"Parents have got to learn there might be a few cuss words they could use that would stop some of those arguments," Smyth said. "If the kid loses, he's not damaged. It's a competitive move. Physical violence doesn't work at all."

Smyth, 42, a Detroit native who has worked for 15 years with kids and drugs and founded a home for runaways, has been teaching parent survival for three years at Santa Barbara High School, where he said he was expelled more than 20 years ago. As a teenager, he served time in juvenile hall and jail.

Smyth says his free "Parent Survival Training" sessions combine reverse psychology and common sense.

Parents should face it, he says, their kids probably won't stop smoking dope, having sex, cutting school or blowing curfew because mom or dad said so. The trick is to get results without being hung up on obedience and respect.

His clients are mostly single mothers and fathers, the majority of whom find their worst problem children are daughters age 15 and 16.

"Being good parents is backfiring," he said. "So we're looking at how they're going to get out of these skirmishes and wars."

"We liberate them from the 'right parent' syndrome and get them into what works and what is practical," Smyth said.

Sometimes parents must be unfair with kids and assert their own rights, he believes. To deal successfully with children, parents might have to be taught to cuss — if they don't know how — or to mention sex without blushing, he added.

"Parents worry about drugs, sex and alcohol, when they can't even get their kids to do the dishes," he said. "They talk about wanting respect and communication, which mean nothing to a 15-year-old. What they really want is for the kid to come home on time."

Smyth doesn't believe in fitting the stereotype of the "good" parent. He's out to win.

"We teach parents how to act like real rotten kids themselves, to be rude and do all the things that annoy them. They develop all sorts of creative moves to conquer this kid they were taught to love."

A woman who tried logically to talk her teenage daughter out of quitting school was advised to change her approach.

"The woman then tried to talk her daughter out of going to school. She told her 'I can probably get you a job,'" Smyth said. It worked. The girl said, "Wait a minute, what could I do?"

Smyth sees his role as "the coach of the team where I drill parents on how to play the parenting game." His student-parents come to class in athletic clothing and do calisthenics before class to loosen up. He dresses like a coach and blows a whistle.

Some of the parents play the child's role so behavior patterns can be acted out in class.

"The delinquent children aren't the enemy," he said. "They are the competitors you respect and love. But you still can compete with them."

Smyth puts out a brochure and workbook on his survival training and his classes are approved by the Santa Barbara County schools superintendent. More than 500 parents have completed the course in the last two years.

"A parent who wants a 14-year-old to stop smoking marijuana usually wants him or her to quit forever, but Smyth thinks this approach is a loser."

"All they can do is keep the kid from smoking weed in the house," he said. "You tell them, 'In my house, you can't do this.'"

Sex presents the same situation, he said. Parents "think if they talk about sex, the kid will do it."

There seems to be a growing consensus that ownership of tobacco allotments is going to have to be with those who actually grow tobacco.

Tobacco allotments go with the land and when land is purchased by industries or businesses for non-farm purposes, tobacco allotments are often acquired with it. Usually the non-farmer is not interested in growing the tobacco or even owning the allotment, but something has to be done with the allotment, so it is rented out.

It is likely that changes will eventually have to be made so that non-farm purchasers of land can dispose of it. Perhaps they may even be forced to.

But then what becomes of the widow whose husband grew tobacco all his life and left the allotment with the intention that it would support her during her lifetime? Hopefully some provision can be made to allow surviving spouses to rent out the allotments during their lifetimes. What would happen after that would depend on whether the next generation wished to farm the land.

The feeling among active tobacco growers is that changes will have to be made to either return tobacco allotments to the government or force the sale of allotments by non-producing owners.

To work out a practical way to do this will not be easy since tobacco allotments have been considered a part of the land and the price of the land has included the tobacco allotment.

It is almost a handwriting on the wall thing, however, that changes are ahead.

United Way Looks Ahead

G. Henry Leslie assumed the presidency of the Pitt County United Way and Frank Grooms became 1982 general chairman at the annual meeting held Wednesday.

Leslie is associated with Burroughs Wellcome and Grooms is with Eaton Corp.

The success of United Way in recent years has been beyond what anyone would have expected when the united giving program was organized. Not only have we been meeting our goals but we have done so in record time.

Pitt United Way has the momentum to continue its success now and we trust that these two men will lead the Pitt County United Way to another great year in 1982.

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Privately, a number of legislators in the North Carolina General Assembly concede that the redistricting effort just completed is the last one in which powerful lawmakers will be able to Save Their Own Seats.

That has been the game being played in Raleigh for the last several months as district lines from which members of the State House of Representatives and State Senate, and the U.S. Congress have been drawn and redrawn.

It is done to satisfy federal mandates and the U.S. Justice Department that every Tar Heel gets an equal shot at choosing his or her representative.

When a veteran and powerful legislator has many allies involved in the process and has some important green stamps to trade — support for past or future proposals under debate in the assembly — the district lines can be moved hither and yon to give that individual the best chance possible at winning re-election.

Losers
In the process, lines move in other places and the legislator without as much influence winds up losing, or at least fearful of losing, pockets of support.

Despite disclaimers and highdown rhetoric to the contrary, the underlying theme of redistricting is race. The federal mandates resulted from pressure from civil rights leaders demanding that blacks be given a fair chance at winning an election.

The legislative jockeying in recent months has been an attempt to set up districts which will satisfy the federal government and yet allow blacks to be elected only in chosen sections where they are already politically powerful. To draw the district lines without regard to political considerations — that is, to build districts purely on the basis of numbers of people residing therein — would almost certainly create more black districts.

The irony of it all is that Republican leaders in the General Assembly are by and large the ones pushing for a non-political redistricting of the state even though this would almost certainly create several largely black districts, and black votes are typically Democratic votes. It is the veteran Democratic machine politicians who are most vigorously seeking to block non-political district lines.

Winners
There is a way, and a fairly simple one, for the General Assembly to solve the issue.

Computers can be programmed to identify geographical areas with particular boundaries in which reside specific numbers of people. The base for the exercise already exists — the U.S. Census Bureau's census tract data which tracks all the way down to street address or rural box number every person in the state.

At the next census in 1990, many legislators agree, the lawmakers are going to be forced to push the right buttons and let a totally unthinking, impartial map emerge which will set up districts without regard to race, political parties, or incumbents.

The process will mean that urban counties with large delegations will be splintered along with rural ones. A ward system in the cities will emerge, replacing the present delegation bloc which mostly works together under the leadership of the most veteran member from that area.

Many new faces, ideas, philosophies and battles will result. That may be exactly what democracy was hoping for all along.

WASHINGTON TODAY

Little Room On Budget

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has offered to take a look at reasonable proposals for compromise on his new, high-deficit budget, but he's in no mood to negotiate on lower defense spending or higher taxes.

That wouldn't seem to leave much to negotiate about.

Those are the prime targets of congressional critics, most of them Democrats but some of them Republicans, who are looking for room to reduce the $91.5 billion deficit Reagan projected.

For a day, it seemed they might have some points for bargaining. Budget director David A. Stockman went to Congress Wednesday with what sounded like a conciliatory message on taxes and defense, although he ruled out any fundamental retreat from administration policy.

What Stockman meant, Reagan told his news conference Thursday, was that budget critics should come up with some specific proposals of their own instead of offering only "diatribe and opposition and criticism."

And Reagan is the boss. He's been complaining about the tactics of his critics ever since he sent Congress the budget. "Even before the budget came out you could hear the sound of knees jerking all over Washington," Reagan said in Des Moines Feb. 9.

And in Indianapolis the next day:

"To the paid political complainers, let me say as politely as I can, 'Put up or shut up.' We have a solid plan already in place. What do they have?"

Those are not the words of a president bent on finding room for compromise. But it is worth noting that for the president or his spokesmen to invite compromise at this early point in the process would be to concede too much too soon. There's plenty of time for bargaining later in the year.

"Suggest something and we'll take a look at it," the president said in explaining what Stockman said. "And if someone can present something that is reasonable and that will meet the fundamental objective which is to continue reducing the cost of government..."

At that point, he switched thoughts and began describing the budget points on which he doesn't mean to yield. Defense spending, which he wants increased by 18 percent, came first.

"We cannot back away on national defense without sending a message to the world, to our allies, as well as to our potential adversaries that would be very unwise."

Tax cuts were next. "And, as I've said before, on the tax program that was adopted by the Congress... it would be very foolish of us now to turn around and express a lack of confidence in that and say, 'Let's go in another direction.'"

A postponement of the second installment tax reduction due July 1 and a freeze on spending are among the steps congressional Democrats have suggested to reduce the deficit.

At the same time, Democratic liberals have complained at the social spending curbs Reagan's budget seeks. The president had a word for them, too, saying his economic recovery program depends on Congress to continue spending reductions "or they themselves can set back the recovery."

The president said he hopes congressional critics of his program will hear from their constituents because "I think there is widespread support" for spending cuts, defense increases and tax reduction.

None of that means that there will not be compromise, or at least change. Congress does not swallow administration budgets without revision, and Republicans are particularly worried about the political fallout of the projected deficit. They're the ones who will have to defend it to the voters in the congressional election campaign next fall.

Teddy Bear With Claws

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
BOSTON (AP) — Suddenly last summer young fops at Oxford and at Britain's red brick universities, too, amused themselves and annoyed their dons by coming to class with a teddy bear under their arms.

The bear's name, invariably, was Aloysius, not Paddington, in case you have failed to keep abreast of ursine nomenclature in the Mother Country.

That scatered isle, that other eden always has been a bedlam of eccentricity, but like Beatle haircuts, miniskirts and punk rock I understand this latest trend is now being exported to the colonies. I saw a chap in a Harvard ski cap crossing Boston Common the other morning with a girl on one arm and a large teddy bear on the other. The bear wore a crimson and white striped muffler. And I thought sure I spotted a MIT man clutching a furry toy bent over a Star Wars video screen in the games room at Logan Airport.

The bear bearers, of course, are emulating Sebastian Flyte in "Brideshead Revisited" and paying rightful homage to the British-made TV serialization of the classic Evelyn Waugh novel now being shown across the land on public broadcasting. It is quite the best thing to hit these shores from that side of the pond since the Queen Mary hung up her anchor in Long Beach.

Too bad Waugh, who died in 1966, didn't live to see playwright John Mortimer's splendid dramatization of his most successful book (among many fine ones) and his belated recognition as one of the great masters of English prose. He might have pointed his ear trumpet at William F. Buckley, the show's requisite host, uttered something maliciously ungrateful and headed off to White's for a celebratory dozen oysters, half a grouse and a whole partridge washed down with a bottle or two of Pontet-Cane 1957.

Waugh, a gifted eccentric and the last of the creative curmudgeons, isolated himself from carping critics and an adoring public by assuming the role of a dotty don or testy colonel, complete with a Victorian ear trumpet and the rumpled tweeds of a country gentleman.

I admired him from my introduction to "Brideshead Revisited," when it appeared here at the end of the war, but idolized him when I heard that he cultivated his enemies by giving their names to the worst characters in his novels. He called Piers Court, his country house at Stinchcombe in Gloucestershire, in "Stinkers." His detractors said he was a snob, but no snob could rise to that level of satirical self-deprecation.

Waugh just happened to like unashamed some of the good things in life: travel to exotic places, ships' libraries, stately homes, Italian architecture, Victorian furniture — his hobby of cabinetmaking brought him more satisfaction than his writing — good food, isolation from pedants, politicians, fools and the latest fads.

Asked by a pretentious BBC interviewer why he chose to live in the country when he hated gardening and rural life, he replied "to get away from people like you." Waugh had a strong views against exercise, which he contended "swirled up the poisons" that in middle life otherwise lie dormant in the body. He would point to the local golf links and tell his children it was an exercise yard for imprisoned colonels who had to go round and round hitting a ball into an elusive hole before they were allowed to eat.

Waugh's reverence for history, ritual and authority led him to the Roman Catholic Church, which received him as a convert in September 1930, although his views on Lent were somewhat unorthodox if characteristically aristocratic. He believed a two-pound lobster at lunch was in keeping with the

Strength For Today

WAITING

Much of life is made up of waiting — and much of the hardest part of it, too. Veterans of combat tell us that the action, when it comes, is not the bad part of their military experience. Men's spirits rise to meet crises, and as a result many, if not most of them, acquit themselves well. It is the waiting that erodes morale.

Quite apart from war, there are millions of ordinary everyday people spending their days waiting for some future event. Some hold on cheerfully through poverty or distress with their eyes on better days to come. Others must steel themselves for a blow which they know must fall.

For those among us who must wait, our motto should be, "Take courage!" The climb is at its steepest now. When we get to the top, whatever the result, the worst will be behind us. We will find joy ahead, or if not, strength to meet our needs. Be of good cheer! — Elisha Douglass

Other Editors Say Tale Of 2 Drives

(High Point Enterprise)

In Raleigh, Governor Jim Hunt named a Governor's Task Force on Drunken Driving and charged it with recommending ways to toughen state laws dealing with that kind of criminal offense. We don't have much reason to believe this will accomplish a great deal.

In Winston-Salem, a band of mothers, characterized in news stories as "indignant", vowed to keep one or more of its number on watch at every session of Forsyth County traffic court, to keep detailed notes and statistics on what happens to every drunken driving case that comes before the court. We have a great deal of confidence in the effectiveness of this move.

Ours is not to doubt the sincerity of the governor's wish to find some new method of combatting this evil or the collective wisdom of his committee of judges, prosecutors, law enforcement officers and corrections specialists.

It seems apparent, however, that there are about as many laws on the books as those books can reasonably hold. The laws are quite adequate. What is seldom adequate, though, is the determination of the total judicial system to come down hard on the miscreants who come before them.

The Winston-Salem court watch is by no means new. It has been done before, notably in Gastonia. But it is still the most effective way of leveling the public spotlight on the core of the drunken driving problem.

It is by no means foolproof. We've sat in enough courts to know that they can, now and then, effectively mask what they are about from those in the cheap seats. But enough statistics about which judge regularly lets 2 Breathalyzer blowers off with something less than a license revocation are a mighty force. Judges get very testy — and very careful — when they know their every move is being charted by someone who will share that knowledge with the widest possible audience.

So go to it, ladies of Forsyth. We applaud your determination. And go to it members of the governor's task force. You, at least, won't do any harm.

Budget-Balancing Amendment

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Though despair seems to deepen about balancing the budget, there is plenty of movement in that direction. Some day, maybe in the 1980s, it could be illegal for Washington to run in the red.

Such a turn of events could prove a huge embarrassment to President Ronald Reagan who, almost nobody can forget, did more than anyone else a year or so ago to promote the necessity of living within the budget.

To bring about such a state of financial discipline might require a constitutional amendment, but that possibility has grown from a remote possibility to a real, and some would say threatening, probability.

With the recent joining of Alaska, thirty-one states have declared themselves in favor of such a convention. Action by only three more state legislatures is needed to make that convention a reality.

Within a matter of weeks there'll be another "hit," says George E. Snyder, president of the National Taxpayers Union. He won't say which state it might be. Later, however, he speaks of Washington, Missouri and Kentucky as states where he believes there is reason for optimism.

Snyder, a former Maryland legislator, storms across the country on brief notice to talk to lawmakers or business organizations about this subject, dearest to his heart of all his cut-the-government projects.

"Last year we didn't get a state at all," he says, explaining that the election of a President who promised to balance the budget mellowed the emotions of people who otherwise would have supported the effort.

Disillusionment with President Reagan's huge budget imbalances may have intensified feelings, Snyder and other supporters of a convention believe. They sense victory. They feel it may be near.

In fact, says Snyder, with the agreement of one more state he expects the Senate to cave in and vote passage of a bill to seek an amendment limiting federal spending. The bill, he says, has 52 sponsors and 10 commitments, or just five votes short of the 67 needed for passage.

He expects more trouble from the House, but with elections coming up he feels some opposition might fade. Regardless, says Snyder, when 34 state legislatures call for a limited constitutional convention Congress must propose an amendment or agree to convene such a meeting.

"When three more states act, and if Congress still has not acted," Snyder declares, "a limited convention will be called to write the amendment to restore order to federal finances."

Opposition to a convention is fed by fears that once called it would mean open season for advocates of other constitutional changes. It is an accusation that supporters denounce as without any merit whatever. The convention would be for one purpose; it would be limited, they say.

Besides, adds the taxpayers union, a convention could only "propose an amendment to restrain Congress' power to spend." The amendment, it states, would become law only after ratification by 38 states.

Snyder points out that every resolution passed by the 31 state legislatures has asked specifically referred to a limited assembly. He adds that it is sought only if Congress fails to act.

Another objection centers on the contention that an amendment would bind government in a financial straightjacket. Advocates say a reserve fund, to be built in good times and dipped into in bad, would resolve that problem. It remains unclear where the reserve would come from.

What appears to be the strongest argument the advocates possess is the seemingly close correlation between budget deficits, inflation, high interest rates and unemployment. It's something affecting everyone.

Accompanying it is another claim that conveys to all a message of massive injustice, the contention that the key reason for excessive spending is special interest groups and pressure group politics.

The feeling that someone is getting an unfair share at their expense is certain to rouse the anger of any good taxpayer and put him in the mood to change the constitution of the United States, if necessary.

It makes taxpayers fighting mad. Like him, says George Snyder.

fasting regulations and several martinis were quite in order because "water was a great health risk when the church was founded." The changes brought about by Vatican II, especially the trendy translations of the Gospels, later somewhat embittered his faith and increased the acidity content of his personality.

As the publication of his diaries a few years ago showed, Waugh was unsparing with his scathing wit on family and friends. "My children weary me," he wrote. "I can only see them as defective adults... Auberon dull and barmy... Teresa mincing her words and rolling her eyes like a nun... Margaret stupid... Harriet mad."

Waugh served with great distinction and bravery as a commando in World War II. He was parachuted into Yugoslavia with Randolph Churchill, the prime minister's son, who was thought to be one of his closest friends until the diaries came out. FOCUS

The All-American Hero

Twenty years ago tomorrow, John Glenn stepped into the national spotlight as the first American to orbit earth. Quite an accomplishment for a small-town Ohio boy, but not his first or last. A World War II and Korean War hero, he flew 122 missions, shot down 3 planes and won 5 Flying Crosses and 19 Air Medals. In 1957, as a test pilot, he set a transcontinental speed record of 3 hours 23 minutes from L.A. to New York. After retirement from the space program, Glenn was elected to the U.S. Senate from Ohio in 1974 and again in 1980. And experts say he is one of the leading Democratic candidates for President in 1984.

DO YOU KNOW — Who was the first man to orbit the earth?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — The Gaelic name for Ireland is Eire.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

"...AND HE ROLLED A LARGE STONE ACROSS THE ENTRANCE..."
MATTHEW 27:60

TOMBS LIKE THIS ONE ARE STILL TO BE FOUND NEAR JERUSALEM. IT WAS IN SUCH A ONE AS THIS THAT JOSEPH OF ARIMATHEA UNDOUBTEDLY LAID JESUS TO REST.

THE LARGE CIRCULAR STONES WHICH SEALED THE TOMBS WERE ROLLED INTO A GROOVED SLOT. ONE MAN COULD EASILY ROLL IT DOWN — BUT, BECAUSE OF THE GREAT WEIGHT, IT WOULD ALWAYS NEED MANY VERY STRONG MEN TO PUSH THE STONE UP OUT OF ITS SLOT, IN ORDER TO OPEN UP A TOMB!

Woman Rabbi Sees Implication

BY LAURINDA KEYS
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — One of the 40 women rabbis now in the United States, Rabbi Laura Geller, believes the growing practice of ordaining women has implications that may shake up people's views of religion and God.

She says that in the nine years since the Reform and Reconstructionist wings of Judaism began ordaining women, women have found

Reiterating Opposition

WASHINGTON (AP) — Numerous church leaders are reiterating their opposition to U.S. military aid to El Salvador's ruling junta, and calling for a mediating approach.

With the U.S. administration stepping up its supply of arms, Archbishop John R. Roach, president of U.S. Roman Catholic bishops, noted their stand again such aid, and said:

"If the United States is to play any constructive role in ending the fratricidal conflict, it should be by strengthening the political will of those willing to dialogue, not assively increasing the destructive capability of the armed forces."

He said "responsible church voices in El Salvador" have repeatedly called for a negotiated settlement.

Among Protestant leaders expressing similar views, a United Methodist panel on international affairs criticized the Reagan administration's threat to do whatever necessary to keep the present junta in power.

"The real issue in Central America is the demand for political, social and economic justice by the people," the panel said in a letter drafted to President Reagan. "Soviet exploitation is not the basic problem."

They're being sponsored by the Southern Baptist Interfaith Witness Department and the American Jewish Committee's Interreligious Affairs Department.

positions in all kinds of rabbinical work, some leading their own congregations.

But the road has not been easy, she says, theorizing that the resistance has as much to do with nearly subconscious religious beliefs as with actual doctrine or custom.

Ms. Geller, director of the Hillel-Jewish Center at the University of Southern California, says that "in some significant, though unarticulated psychological way, the clergy, in the minds of the uneducated lay person stands for God."

"No educated person would say that the clergy stands for God, but the child in all of us, in some silly way, makes a kind of projection from the clergy person to the image of God."

"If the image of God is a masculine image, and the clergy person is masculine, there's no problem. But if the image of God is masculine and the clergy person is a woman, it forces you suddenly, in a direct way, to rethink your image of God. You have to deal with the possibility that God by definition transcends masculinity and femininity."

Ms. Geller, ordained in Reform Judaism in 1976, said:

"People don't like to have their childlike images shaken up. That's why it's important for Jews and Christians to

Theologians In Third Dialogue

MILL VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — About 40 leading Southern Baptist and Jewish theologians took part in a dialogue session this week at the Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary, the third of such national joint talks designed to deepen mutual understanding and appreciation.

They're being sponsored by the Southern Baptist Interfaith Witness Department and the American Jewish Committee's Interreligious Affairs Department.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Recent blizzards in the Midwest have crippled church operations, shrinking attendance and contributions, pushing up heating costs and often causing cancellation of services.

The U.S. Lutheran Council recounts numerous disruptions, including:

The Rev. Dr. Milton J. Nauss trudged more than two miles through snow to hold services at a St. Louis church, but only eight of 2,500 members showed up.

At Pipestone, Minn., at the scheduled ordination of the Rev. Richard Swanson, only seven of 40 invited relatives got there, and he says, "it was the only service in town." Installed at his first pastorate in Sturgeon Bay, Wis., he's twice had to cancel Sunday services.

Says the Rev. Frederick D. Hubert of Alexandria, Ind.: "Attendance is down, offerings are down, but costs are definitely up."

BOARD MEETING
A board meeting will be held at St. Matthew Free Will Baptist Church tonight at 7:30. Pastor Hattie May Cobb will preach at 11 a.m. Sunday, with music by the senior choir and ushers. At 3 p.m. Pastor Cobb, choir, ushers and congregation will hold services at Bethel Chapel in Washington, N.C. Eldress Cobb invites the public.

APPRECIATION
The Gospel Chorus of Selvia Chapel Free Will Baptist Church will honor its organist, Roger Ingram, in an appreciation service on Sunday at 3 p.m. at the church. The public is invited to attend, according to the pastor, the Rev. C. Gardner.

Special Program
The choir from Winterville Free Will Baptist Church, under the direction of Leah McGlohon with Debby Gray as pianist, will present a special program at Elm Grove Church Sunday at 7:30 p.m.

The Rev. E.C. Taylor, pastor, said no service will be held at the Winterville church Sunday night and urged the members to attend Elm Grove.

The program will feature Wayne Vincent, Greg Smith, Alice Hines and Louise Hand.

ordinain women, to encourage religious people to come to terms with an adult concept of God."

She says something else also happens when women are ordained, and that relates to the way congregants view their institution of worship.

"With the ordination of women comes a certain kind of change in the relation between the clergy and the congregation," she says, adding that it involved "the authority issue, people's unwillingness to grant women authority that they grant a man."

"When women are clergy people, the idea that the clergy are 'other' than the congregation, breaks down. A woman isn't other than the congregation. She's one of the congregation, she's just a woman. And if a woman can do it, anyone can do it."

She says this is a positive change so people won't view the rabbi as the only one who can lead them. The clergy becomes a coreligionist with a certain kind of training, it breaks down the hierarchy, so Jews take more responsibility for their Judaism.

"This is a significant revolution."

The first woman rabbi was ordained in 1972, and in the time since, Ms. Geller says women have gained a variety of rabbinical positions, some leading congregations, such as Rabbi Deborah Prinz of Temple Beth Am in Teaneck, N.J. Others are assistant rabbis.

"But one place you don't find women yet is as senior rabbis of large congregations. The reason for that is we're not old enough yet," says Ms. Geller, 31.

She says that Reform Judaism from its beginning was committed to equality between men and women, but "it still took close to 100 years for women to be ordained." Citing the subtle obstacles to it, she adds:

"In traditional Judaism, there is a distinction in the appropriate roles for men and women. Women are exempt from certain commandments and religious obligations, such as praying in communities at fixed times."

"Because of this exemption, women didn't develop the tradition of regular prayer or regular study. Also there are some other traditional restrictions for women that are relevant; they are not permitted to be witnesses in certain circumstances."

The result of this conservative tradition was that women were not permitted to lead the community in prayer, Ms. Geller says, and one of the expectations of a modern rabbi "is that he or she will lead the community in prayer, and in the traditional sense, be capable of acting as a witness, such as in matters of ritual conversion."

In contrast to traditional Orthodox Judaism, Reform Judaism seeks to adapt Jewish law to modern conditions, and Ms. Geller says its 100-year lag in ordaining women "has to be understood as an issue of social custom" rather than religious belief.

"Even among people who see no legal problems, there are some psychological problems people have with the ordination of women," she says, relating to their view of God and what religion is all about.

"People are still hesitant to grant women positions of authority," she says. "They fear that if a woman is ordained as rabbi, somehow that makes the clergy position seem less authoritative. If women can be ordained that must mean the role of the clergy is not that significant."

SPEAKER — The Rev. Randy Cox, pastor of First Free Will Baptist Church and the Raleigh Christian Academy, will speak at 7 p.m. service Sunday at Parkers Chapel F.W.B. Church. He also will speak nightly, at 7:30 o'clock, through Feb. 26. Special music and a nursery will be provided.

Reagan Press Conference Highlights

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here, at a glance, are highlights of President Reagan's nationally broadcast news conference Thursday.

THE ECONOMY

Reagan said he is naming a panel of private citizens to search out waste and inefficiency in government. He called it "the largest effort of its kind ever mounted to save tax dollars" and added, "We mean business and we intend to get results."

He said his administration inherited an economic mess and "since then we have made progress on many fronts. But obviously, we aren't out of the woods yet."

He called current high interest rates, "the greatest single threat today to a healthy, lasting recovery" from the recession and said the administration and the Federal Reserve will work together to quell market concerns. "I will devote the resources of my presidency to keeping deficits down over the next several years," he said.

Reagan said he'd be willing to "take a look" at alternatives to his $757.6-billion budget, but said "we cannot back away on national defense" and his tax cut program "represents the strongest thing we have."

EL SALVADOR

Reagan wouldn't discuss U.S. options in detail, but declared he has "no plans to send American combat troops into action" in El Salvador or elsewhere in the world. Asked what it might take before he would commit American soldiers, Reagan said, "Well, maybe if they dropped a bomb on the White House I might get mad."

"I don't think there's any parallel" between the American commitment in Vietnam and the current situation in El Salvador, he said.

SOVIET ARMS

He refused comment on whether the Soviet Union has introduced offensive weapons in Cuba in violation of an understanding that stemmed from the Cuban missile crisis. "You're talking about a subject that is under review and discussion right now and I would rather not answer that question," he said.

On Nicaragua, Reagan said the United States is convinced that Soviet-supplied "arms flowing into Nicaragua are coming via Cuba."

Order Recall Of Canned Salmon

BROOKSVILLE, Fla. (AP) — One of three bodies uncovered when a confessed killer led authorities to a wooded area has been identified as an 18-year-old recently released from the Navy.

Robert Dale Henderson, 36, a drifter who has confessed to "10 or 11" killings, has been charged with killing two people in Florida, three of his in-laws in Ohio, a man in Louisiana and a woman in Mississippi.

The Hernando County Sheriff's Office on Thursday identified one of the three bodies discovered in Florida as that of Robert Lee Dawson, 18, of West Helena, Ark., who had been discharged from the Navy at Orlando Dec. 17. The others two were identified only as being from Mississippi and Louisiana.

Invisible Mark For Diamonds

SCHENECTADY, N.Y. (AP) — An invisible mark can be made inside diamonds for identification purposes, General Electric researchers have announced.

Robert C. DeVries and Roy E. Tuft invented a way of firing a beam of charged atoms into a diamond to create a pattern of electrical conductivity just beneath its surface, GE said Thursday.

The mark can later be revealed by rubbing the diamond with a piece of cotton or silk to create static electricity and dusting it with a powder, which clings to the charged part of the diamond in a distinctive pattern.

Draft List Suddenly Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Draft registration has jumped since President Reagan decided to keep the program in operation, Selective Service officials reported today.

Acting deputy director Ray Wisniewski said there has been a definite increase in signups since Reagan's announcement Jan. 7.

When registration was reinstituted in 1980, more than 95 percent of eligible youths registered, but that percentage had dropped sharply in recent months. That decline was attributed to uncertainty over whether the program would continue, considering Reagan's opposition to registration during his 1980 campaign.

However, in the wake of the imposition of martial law in Poland, Reagan decided to leave the program in operation. While there is no actual draft under way, officials say the registration process could save several weeks in the event a callup is needed in a national emergency.

Wisniewski said he had no precise figures for an increase in registrations, but believed Reagan's decision is responsible for the boost.

All men are required to sign up for the draft at any post office within 30 days of their 18th birthday.

Identify One Of 3 Bodies

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration has ordered the recall of "possibly hundreds of thousands" of cans of salmon that may possibly contain the deadly botulism poison.

FDA spokesman Wayne Pines said Thursday the 7 1/2-ounce cans, carrying a variety of labels, carry two lines of code on one end, with five letters or numbers on the top line and four on the bottom.

The cans that might contain botulism have the code "K13" as the middle three characters on the top line, Pines said.

A Belgian, L. Eric Mathay, 27, died in Brussels Feb. 6 after eating salmon from a contaminated can, according to Pines, who said Mathay's wife, Michele, is recovering from botulism poisoning.

EDUCATION CUTS

He defended proposed cuts in federal college student loan programs, explaining: "It had become so loose that we had people borrowing money for college loans because they could then reinvest that money on current high interest rates and make money," he said. "I don't believe there is going to be any cut for a student with true need who really must have that kind of help to go to college."

HART NOMINATION

Reagan defended his nomination of Sam Hart, a black religious broadcaster from Philadelphia, to the Civil Rights Commission. "I'm quite confident about his ability," he said, responding to criticism of Hart's position on equal rights for women and busing. "He is not against equal rights. He's for them. He just happens to be opposed to the ERA," Reagan said.

MIDEAST

The United States is "not just an arms supplier" to the region because of the controversy surrounding Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger's discussions with Jordan about possibly supplying that country with missiles and F-16 fighters. He said of Weinberger's trip to Jordan: "I don't believe it was correctly portrayed in some of the stories" about the arms talks.

POLAND-DEBT

The president declined to say whether the United States will again save the Polish government from default on loans to U.S. banks. "Default as it stands right now would make Poland more dependent on the Soviet Union," he said, but "we haven't made a decision on that."

FARMERS

Reagan expressed concern about the plight of farmers, saying "I don't know what sector of the economy is hurt worse than the American farmer." He said he would use a grain embargo as a foreign policy tool "only as part of an across the board embargo" because he "won't penalize one sector of our industry—the farmers."

Say Haig Talks Tough At His Staff Meetings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. talks tough and uses some undiplomatic language during meetings with his senior staff. The Washington Post said in today's editions.

In private, Haig has displayed anger at U.S. allies, the White House staff, conservative allies of President Reagan, leakers and columnists, according to The Post.

The newspaper published what it said were excerpts from notes taken by a participant at nearly two dozen Haig staff meetings. It said the notes were verified "as to general content" with two other participants. The Post said it did not have notes from about 100 other meetings.

At the White House, deputy presidential press secretary Larry Speakes refused comment on the story. Asked if Reagan had read it, Speakes said, "He usually reads the paper ... so I presume he has."

The excerpts said that last Oct. 15, apparently after Great Britain claimed that Saudi Arabia was exerting pressure over the proposed Sinai peace-keeping force, Haig called Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington "duplicitous," using a vulgar noun in connection with that adjective.

Haig specifically called Carrington a "duplicitous bastard."

"European Friends — just plain cowardly. British lying through their teeth on MFO (Multinational Force and Observers). Saudis never pressured British and Europeans on MFO," Haig was quoted as saying.

The British now are expected to send a contingent of troops to the Sinai force, which is to separate Israeli and Egyptian forces when Israel withdraws from the Sinai in April under the Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty opposed by most Arab states.

On Jan. 4, Haig reportedly said that the "Saudis (have) an arrogant mentality that is absolutely devastating."

The Post said that on Jan. 18, Haig, taking a grimmer stance than he has in public, warned that once Egypt regains the Sinai, it "will go back to (the) Arab world with (the) U.S. isolated as Israel's sole defender."

On Oct. 15, Haig wanted to recommend changes in a presidential speech, and observed of the White House staff: "Unbelievable maze in the White House ... Most unbelievable way to do business. Don't know who to call."

Complaining of leaks, Haig called a column by Rowland Evans and Robert Novak "mischievous" for suggesting that Haig arranged to announce while Congress was in recess that Taiwan would not get advanced jet fighters. "Timing dictated in Peking," Haig was quoted as saying.

"We're going to have a problem with (the) Hill because of Evans and Novak," Haig reportedly said, suggesting that leakers acted "out of a desire to protect the president but result in screwing him."

The Post said Haig also complained about leaks from his own bailiwick: "Too much stuff coming out of the department. ... Too much access by muckrakers. ... Anytime they want a comment, they get it."

About Reagan's conservative supporters, Haig reportedly said: "Everything we've done has been torpedoed at every turn by the ideologues."

North Pitt Rolls Into ECC Tournament Title Game

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

FARMVILLE — North Pitt completed its final tune up for the Eastern Carolina Conference tournament championship game Thursday evening and was pronounced ready to go by Coach Cobby Deans.

Led by forward Dennis Bradley's 21 points and 13 rebounds, North Pitt rolled past Southern Nash, 62-55, and into tonight's ECC title game against Greene Central.

North Pitt and Greene Central split during the regular season and tied for the ECC title. The Rams were awarded the tournament's top seed because of the point differential in the two games.

North Pitt won the first game, 37-36, but Greene Central came back to capture the second, 48-45. The winner of tonight's game not only will take home the tournament title but also will be the ECC's #1 seed going into the districts which begin next week at Ayden-Grifton.

Deans said the Panthers are looking forward to playing the Rams again. "We're ready to play 'em," he said after Thursday's win. "The kids want to play 'em. We'll be ready."

North Pitt does indeed appear ready to face the Rams after last night's win over the defending tournament champions. The Firebirds defeated North Pitt, 55-54, in two overtimes last year to win the tournament crown.

"I thought we played one of our best defensive games of the year," Deans said afterward. "I thought offensively we were in the game the entire game, but it's our defense that helps our offense."

What helped the offense more, though, was North Pitt's prowess on the boards, particularly in the first half when the Panthers outrebounded Southern Nash, 21-5.

Bradley had 10 of those 21 rebounds, five on the offense boards. Bradley's work on the boards was most evident during one stretch in the second period when the Panthers were running off 10 straight points to extend a four-point lead to 14.

With North Pitt ahead, 17-13, at the end of the first period, Bradley scored two straight times on follow shots. After connecting on one of two free throws, Bradley then drove in for a layup to give the Panthers a 24-14 lead with 5:05 left in the half.

Guard Greg Hines, who finished the night with 13 points, hit a three-point play moments later to stretch the lead to 27-13. North Pitt led at the half, 30-19.

With Bradley sitting on the bench after picking up his third and fourth fouls early in the third period, forward Toby Crandol took over.

Crandol, who finished with 12 points, hit three straight baskets to go up, 40-25, with 3:50 remaining in the third period. The quarter ended with the Panthers ahead, 42-31.

The Panthers took their biggest lead of the night with just over five minutes left on a picture-perfect three-on-one fast break. Point guard Mitch Cox raced down the middle of the lane, looked right toward Crandol and then drilled a pass to center Richard Heller.

Heller hit the short jumper from the baseline and was fouled. He missed the free throw, but North Pitt led, 50-34. Southern Nash never recovered.

The Firebirds, who are now 15-9, scored six straight points to cut the deficit to 10 (50-40) with 3:21 minutes to go but Bradley returned to the floor and hit in succession a follow shot, a layup and a jumper to send the Panthers back up by 16 (56-40).

Southern Nash did not get close to 10 until the final 30 seconds, by which time Bradley and company had finished their tune up for the ECC tournament championship game.

The Firebirds, who will be the ECC's third-seeded team at the districts which begin Monday night at Ayden-Grifton, was led in scoring by Ricky Battle with 19 points — eight of which came in the final 1:12. Terry Battle added 17 points and Frankie Toney 11.

Both teams ended up with 10 turnovers for the night. North Pitt had the better of it from the field, hitting 25 of 46 (54.3%). The Firebirds, meanwhile, hit 22 of 42 (52.4%).

A-G Girls Stun Aycock, 48-42

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

FARMVILLE — Three days into the Eastern Carolina Conference tournament there was not an upset to be seen. Look again.

Relying on its brawn on the boards and its brains on the court, Ayden-Grifton shocked second-seeded Charles B. Aycock, 48-42, Thursday evening to advance to the finals of the ECC tournament.

The Lady Chargers, now 11-13, will play Southwest Edgecombe tonight (6:30 p.m.) for the championship. The Lady Cougars, who are 23-0 and have won 55 straight games, defeated Greene Central to advance to the finals.

"I feel fantastic," Ayden-Grifton coach Kathy Frazier said afterwards. "To say the least it was an upset. This has to be the most satisfying win I've had this year. No, I'd have to say for the past three years."

"The girls just had a desire to win tonight," Frazier added. "I think they felt the pressure tonight, but they played a smart game."

Indeed, The Lady Chargers, who ended the regular season in a three-way tie for third and then drew the third seed, committed but nine turnovers against a C.B. Aycock team that had lost just three games in 23 outings before last night's game.

Perhaps even more important was Ayden-Grifton's superb effort on the boards, particularly in the first half when the Lady Chargers outrebounded the Lady Falcons, 24-13, and took an 18-13 lead at the half.

Sophomore center Cora Faison led the A-G rebounding romp with 12 in the first half, five off the offensive boards. Faison finished with 16 rebounds and also scored a game-high 16 points.

Forward Angela Griffin had eight rebounds and was one of three to score 10 points as four of A-G's starters hit double figures. Also with 10 points for A-G were Danita McCotter and Linda Brown.

C.B. Aycock was led in scoring by center Sheri Williams with 11 points, five of which came in the fourth period to help Aycock cut a nine-point deficit to three. Guard Zina Jones and forward Jeannette Dixon both had 10 points.

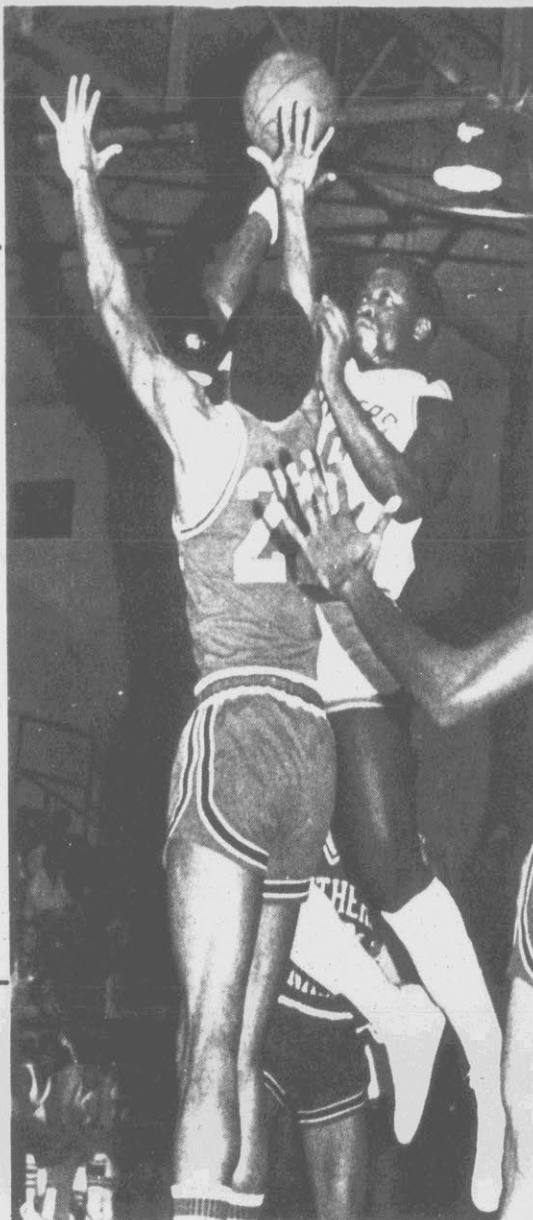

The Lady Chargers led, 18-13, at the half and upped their lead to 10 (27-17) midway through the third period before seeing Aycock score 10 straight points and tie the game at 27-27.

Up For Two

North Pitt's Dennis Bradley goes up for two of his game-high 21 points in the Panthers' 62-55 win over Southern Nash Thursday night in the semifinals of the ECC tournament. The Firebirds' Frankie Toney (22) tries in vain to stop Bradley's shot. Bradley also pulled down a game-high 13 rebounds. North Pitt will play Greene Central to night for the tournament title. East Carolina Women Host First-Ever Classic

East Carolina's Lady Pirates play host to what the school hopes will become an annual affair, the Converse Lady Pirate Classic, on Saturday and Sunday.

East Carolina meets Michigan State in the first round of the tournament, at 8 p.m. Saturday night, while Western Kentucky and Virginia State clash in the first game, at 6 p.m.

Sunday at 6 p.m., the two losers meet for the consolation title, while the championship is scheduled for 8 p.m.

"We're really excited about the tournament," ECU Coach Cathy Andruzzi said. "Our goal is to build excitement and bring new things to East Carolina, and we feel that this tournament is another step in doing that. Having it sponsored by a national company like Converse shows that our program is gaining national attention now, and also shows their respect for women's basketball in general."

Andruzzi feels that the field is a good one. "Michigan State has beaten such teams as Illinois and Ohio State, both top 20 teams. Western Kentucky has done a good job, and Virginia State is a fine team, too."

The tournament is the first for women at East Carolina. Back in the late 1960's a men's tournament, the Eastern Carolina Classic, was held, but folded after one year.

A banquet and reception is planned for Friday night at Mendenhall Center for the teams and their parties, with city and university officials on hand for the welcome. "We want this to be a first class tournament, one that can grow and attract the best teams in the country," Andruzzi said. "We hope that a lot of folks will come out and see some of the better teams around in action. Too, it will show these teams and others that we do have a good following here."

Because most of the teams involved are on road trips that include the Lady Pirate Classic, late information on records are unavailable.

Michigan State, the foe of the Lady Pirates in the first round, had a 10-9 record going into

Pirates Travel To Navy Saturday

East Carolina's Pirates, following a solid defeat at the hands of ECAC-South leader James Madison Wednesday night, 61-43, travel to Annapolis, Md., on Saturday to face the U.S. Naval Academy in a 1 p.m. contest.

The game is the first meeting ever between the two schools in basketball.

Navy comes into the game with a 1-4 ECAC record, while the Pirates are now 2-4. Navy is 9-13 overall, following a 93-78 loss to American University on Wednesday night. East Carolina, after its loss to Madison, drops to 10-12 overall.

Navy is led by the scoring of Rob Romaine, who sports a 14.0 average. They have only one other in double figures, Dave Brooks, who is hitting 10.4 per contest. The leading rebounder is Gary Price with 5.3 per game.

Overall, the Naval Academy is averaging 63.6 points a contest, while allowing 62.7. They are being outrebounded, however, 32.4 to 31.5.

East Carolina is led by Charles Green, hitting 12.2 points per game, while Morris Hargrove is scoring at an 11.1 pace. Tony Byles, recently returned from a broken wrist is at 9.9, while Bruce Peartree is scoring 7.5 per game.

Hargrove is the leading rebounder for the Pirates with a 6.1 average.

"There's no doubt that this is a big game for us," ECU Coach Dave Odom said. "Right now it's the biggest game of our season. It's important too in that we're all jockeying for positions in the pairings for the ECAC-South Tournament."

Following the game, the Pirates return home on Monday to host George Mason in another ECAC-South game. It is the final home game of the year for the Pirates, and members of the first East Carolina basketball team will be honored at the game, celebrating 50 years of basketball at the school.

Veteran NASCAR drivers and racing officials are worried that the indictments of 70 people, including three drivers and an owner, in connection with an alleged $300 million drug smuggling ring will result in "black eyes for stock car racing."

Robert Pence, head of the FBI's North Carolina office, announced Thursday that a federal grand jury in Miami had returned indictments against the 70 following a 2½-year investigation into narcotics activity in South Florida and North Carolina.

The charges involved the alleged sale and transportation of marijuana, LSD, Quaaludes and cocaine. Pence said the race cars allegedly were used to transport drugs from Florida to other states.

NASCAR drivers Gary Balough of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and William Harvey of Rome, Ga., both finishers in the Daytona 500, were indicted in Florida. Balough was among those arrested.

The men charged in North Carolina include NASCAR driver Peter Thomas "Pete" Pistone, 34, of Cabarrus County; Ronald Ciro Grana, 37, an associate of Pistone's who now lives in Traverse City, Mich.; John L. Trester, 33, of Charlotte; Pistone's brother-in-law; and Edward J. Hayes, 57, of Charlotte, Pistone's father-in-law.

The alleged drug smuggling has caused some drivers and officials with the National Association for Stock Car Racing to worry that the reputation of all those connected with the sport will be damaged.

One veteran driver, who asked not to be identified, said in an interview with The Charlotte Observer that the arrests will result in a lot of finger pointing and "unfair suspicions of guilt by association."

"I can tell you right now it's going to be rough on the rest of us, although we've never had a reefer in our life and wouldn't touch the stuff," said the long-time driver on NASCAR's Winston Cup circuit.

"I'll tell you how shameful and rude some people are when something like this breaks. I've had five or six calls within the past hour from fans just bluntly asking me if I'm involved and if I'm going to be arrested."

"It makes me mad as hell...And it also hurts so much I could almost cry. I can see right now that with much of public this is going to be one of those 'guilty-until-proven-innocent' deals for all of us."

Former Grand National champion David Pearson said the indictments could reflect badly on the sport at a time when it was beginning to gain major-league stature.

"Race car drivers have a bad enough time, anyway, the way people say it started from bootlegging moonshine and all that, which is exaggerated," Pearson said.

Current Grand National champion Darrell Waltrip said, however, that he does not think the indictments should have a "negative effect" on stock car racing.

"Every newspaper in the country at one time has printed stories linking a judge or a doctor or a politician with drugs and drug traffic...It's not like (stock car racing) is the black sheep," he said. "It's just that (drug charges) have ended up in our sport."

"It's certainly not something we condone, but it's not something we can control either."

Well-known driver Bobby Allison also expressed hope that racing fans will keep in mind that the arrests only involve a few drivers.

"I hope fans will remember this is a minority, and racing should not have to take any responsibility for what a minority does," Allison said.

Big 10 Stretch Run Boiling Down To Big Three

By The Associated Press

The Big Ten basketball race is boiling down to the Big Three — Iowa, Minnesota and Indiana.

The teams that were supposed to be up there at this time of the season continued to stay close to form with victories Thursday night as the league race headed into the homestretch.

Iowa, the nation's No. 7-ranked team and the league leader, improved its Big Ten record to 11-2 with a 59-53 victory over Michigan State. Eighth-ranked Minnesota, runnerup in the Big Ten at 10-3, whipped Northwestern 76-66. And Indiana, No. 20 in the country and third in the Big Ten race, improved to 9-4 in the conference by routing Wisconsin 88-67.

"I thought we played a pretty good game for us," said Michigan State Coach Jud Heathcote. "Iowa is an exceptional team in terms of teamwork, intelligence and big plays when it counts. They're not the most talented team, but they might be the best coached."

Bob Hansen scored 23 points and combined with Kenny Arnold to hit 13 free throws in the final two minutes to help the Hawkeyes clinch the game.

"Michigan State played tough and played well," said Iowa Coach Lute Olson. "We've had that same problem with them for a long time, so it didn't surprise me. The key thing for us, obviously, were those second-half free throws. They really bailed us out."

In other games involving the nation's ranked teams, it was No. 4 Missouri 60, Oklahoma 55; No. 5 Oregon State 55, Washington 44; No. 9 West Virginia 68, Stetson 60; No. 11 Idaho 71, Montana 58; No. 15 Fresno State 69, Cal-Santa Barbara 59 and No. 17 San Francisco 84, Portland 72.

The Top Twenty

Darryl Mitchell led a balanced scoring attack with 18 points and Minnesota scored 19 straight points in one stretch to whip Northwestern.

The Gophers had four players in double figures. Following Mitchell were Randy Breuer with 17, Trent Tucker with 14 and Tommy Davis with 11. Jim Stack led Northwestern with 22. "Everything is clicking now," said Mitchell, who has suddenly turned his game around. "I just realized it was my senior year. I don't want to be forgotten. It's a confidence thing. I'm just playing with a lot of heart and intensity."

Uwe Blab, Indiana's 7-foot-2 center, led four players in double figures with 14 points as the Hoosiers trounced Wisconsin. Indiana scored 21 straight points midway in the first half to erase a 12-10 Wisconsin lead and sweep to a 31-12 advantage.

"We got the results we wanted in the first half by getting in charge," said Indiana Coach Bobby Knight. "Wisconsin started out well and controlled the first few minutes. Then we came back and got control and that was important for us."

Forward Marvin McCrary scored five straight field goals and guard Jon Sundvold capped the game with four free throws as Missouri edged Oklahoma.

The 11,545 fans who jammed the Lloyd Noble Center exceeded its seating capacity and comprised the largest crowd to attend a college basketball game in Oklahoma. The Tigers, who have already clinched the regular season Big Eight title, raised their record to 23-1 this season and 12-1 in the league.

"I thought the defense was outstanding," said Missouri Coach Norm Stewart after watching his Tigers hold the Sooners to a meager 31 percent from the field in the first half. "That's what won the game for us."

A.C. Green connected on four baskets early in the second half to open a decisive lead and help Oregon State beat Washington. The Huskies had pulled to within 35-34 early in the second half before Green went to work. He led Oregon State in a nine-point spurt, scoring five points.

"We had a very balanced attack. We like to have four or five men in double figures," noted Oregon State Coach Ralph

Miller. "When you spread the court, you're going to cause a little bit of trouble."

Lester Rowe scored seven points during a five-minute period in the second half to lift West Virginia over Stetson, extending its winning streak to 21 games.

Tony Washam and Russel Todd scored 12 points each for the Mountaineers, while Freeman and Rowe contributed 10 each.

Phil Hopson's shooting helped Idaho take a commanding 40-23 lead and the Vandals coasted past Montana to clinch their second straight regular season Big Sky title. The Vandals will host the league's postseason tournament March 5-6 that will decide the Big Sky representative to the NCAA playoffs.

Rod Higgins and Donald Mason scored 17 points apiece to lead Fresno State over Cal-Santa Barbara. The Bulldogs also provided Fresno State Coach Boyd Grant with his 100th coaching victory at the school.

Quintin Dailey led all scorers with 31 points to help San Francisco defeat Portland. The Pilots led 41-34 at the half, and scored the first basket of the second half to lead by nine points, 43-34.

But San Francisco started a 14-5 spurt that tied the game at 48, and then rallied for a seven-point lead at 65-58 with 5:03 left in the game and the Dons never lost the lead.

In the boys' semifinal Thursday night, Chocowinity defeated Columbia, 61-56. Chocowinity will meet the winner of tonight's Matamoras-Belhaven Saturday night (8:30) for the title.

A-G Girls Stun Aycock...

only once at 6-4 with three minutes left in the opening period, refused to fold. The Lady Chargers used two jumpers by Griffin and a layup and a pair of free throws by Brown to go up, 37-29, with 3:45 left in the game.

Again, however, the Lady Falcons rallied. Consecutive three-point plays by Williams and Dunn brought Aycock to within 39-36. But, just when it appeared A-G might falter, Brown put in a follow shot to push the lead back to five, 41-36.

The Lady Falcons cut the lead to two (44-42) on a jumper by Jones with 34 seconds left, but McCotter swished both sides of a one-and-one and Lisa Ward got behind the Aycock press for a layup — her only bucket of the night — to clinch the win.

"When we got that 10 point lead I said this is going to be our night," Frazier said. "But then when we lost it I said, 'Oh, well.' And when we went up by (eight) I thought we had it."

"When the clock finally hit about 15 seconds to go I felt very confident we had the win," Frazier continued with a smile. "But, when the buzzer went off I knew we had it."

The game began with hints of an upset in the offing. The Lady Chargers jumped out to a 4-0 lead in the first minute and then on one trip down court had five shots at the basket. None of the attempts fell through, but Ayden-Grifton's dominance of the boards had begun.

The quarter ended with the score tied, 8-8, but Faison scored three baskets to lift A-G to a 14-9 lead with 3:40 left. Aycock cut the gap to 14-13 a minute later, but Ayden-Grifton would not fold and built its lead back to five (18-13) at the half.

With Faison going inside for two buckets, Ayden-Grifton outscored the Lady Falcons, 10-4, in the first 3½ minutes of the second half to up its lead to 27-17.

Aycock answered the A-G challenge by scoring 10 straight points and tie the game at 27-27. A-G led at the end of the period, 29-27, on Griffin's jumper in the lane at the buzzer.

A-G extended its lead to eight minutes into the final quarter and then held off Aycock in the final three minutes to preserve the ECC tournament's first upset.

Ayden-Grifton (48) — Faison 8 0-0 16; McCotter 3 4-4 10; Griffin 5 0-1 10; Brown 3 4-6 10; Ward 1 0-0 2; Totals 20-8-11-48.
Charles B. Aycock (42) — Lancaster 3 1-1 7; Dunn 5 0-2 10; Williams 5 1-1 11; Jones 5 0-0 10; Bunn 1 2-2 4; Hester 0 0-0 0; Totals 19-4-6-42.

Area Wrestlers Set For Regionals

Thirteen area wrestlers, led by seven from D.H. Conley, will be competing in the Eastern Regionals Saturday at Goldsboro High School this weekend.

Conley's Vikings, who finished second in the sectionals held last weekend at that school, will be joined by wrestlers from Farmville Central, Williamston and Rose.

Four wrestlers from each weight class of the two eastern sectionals advance to the regionals. The top four in each weight from each of the four regionals qualify for the state tournament, next weekend at Winston-Salem's Parkland High School.

First round competition is set for 10 a.m. Saturday. The finals will begin at 7 p.m. Saturday.

Last year, Conley won the sectional, then wound up second to Beddingfield in the regionals — and Viking Coach Milt Sherman would like to see that reversed this year — especially after Beddingfield's sectional victory.

"We would have liked to have won a few more weight classes, but we scored a point more than we did last year in winning the sectionals," Sherman said.

The 13 wrestlers include only one first place finisher in the sectionals last week, Brian Purvis of Williamston. Purvis, who wrestles at 158 pounds, is 24-0.

Williamston also qualified one other wrestler, 129-pounder John Corey, who gained a third-place finish in the sectionals.

The Conley wrestlers include 108-pounder Reginald Moore (second last week); 115-pounder William Green (fourth); 122-pounder Garrette Jones (fourth); 141-pounder Lorenzo Strong (second); 170-pounder Willie Green (third); 188-pounder Mike Long (second); and heavyweight Paul Menichelli (second).

Farmville Central qualified three to the regionals. They include 135-pounder Jerry Foreman (fourth); 141-pounder Connie Streeter (fourth); and 198-pounder Charles Sutton (second).

The other qualifier from the area is Rose High School's 158-pounder John Maye, who finished second to Purvis.

Winners of first round matches in the regional automatically advance to the state tournament.

The Toothbrush Proves Extensively Versatile

By GAIL MICHAELS
I recently read an article which stated that a child Zachary's age should have been introduced to the toothbrush on a regular basis by now.
I already knew that; I just haven't been able to find a toothbrush with a stainless steel handle three feet long or longer.

I started brushing Meg's teeth the minute the first ridge of white enamel broke through the gum. And Meg was not allowed to eat nearly as many of those sweets which Zachary groups together under one convenient heading. Be it candy, cookies, doughnuts or sweetrolls, if Zachary wants it, he bellows "Cake!"

It's this same decisiveness of personality which makes me hesitate to stick a toothbrush in his mouth. Every time I've suspected that he was cutting a tooth, I've taken him to the doctor on the pretense of a sore throat. I've always considered the fee worth it. It's sort of like buying a ticket to the circus. I'd much rather pay $14 to watch someone else risk limb and possibly life by prying open the jaws of the lion than do it myself.
But lately Zachary has demonstrated an increasingly intense interest in toothbrushes. I first noted this interest when Meg had chicken pox. During her most contagious period he helped himself to her toothbrush and cleansed his mouth thoroughly. Later he began to retrieve from the trash old tubes of toothpaste, old strands of dental floss; in short, all the accoutrements of dental hygiene.

Only after he had painted the front door with a free sample of Colgate's Winter Fresh Gel, however, did I decide he was ready to learn the one and only use for toothpaste.

I bought him an alarmingly short toothbrush of his own. He was with me and insisted upon having it, and I, thinking that perhaps a period of acclimation would be advisable, let him carry it around for the rest of the day.
He was quick in discovering its versatility. With it he groomed the cats, swept the floor under his highchair, cleaned the keys on my typewriter and fished several marbles out from under the secretary. He then tried to brush his father's teeth, his sister's teeth and my teeth. He settled for the teeth on his rocking horse.
But there was a marked change in his attitude when I finally mustered the courage to try it out on his mouth. "NOOOO!" he roared.
I persisted. So did he. I managed to wedge the brush handle between his teeth. Unfortunately, I had a finger resting on it and will probably lose a nail.
I even managed to touch the bristles to the top of the back molar. That was right before he smashed the artery in my right leg with the toe of his tennis shoe.

In the end, like Daniel, I emerged victorious with the strong conviction that, if I had to, I could even do it again.
But not, Heaven forbid, on a regular basis.

Two Collisions Here Yesterday

An estimated $1,300 property damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Thursday.
Officers said cars driven by Trilliss Elaine Paul of 1702 S. Elm St. and Charles Lynn Anderson of 121 N. Woodlawn Ave. collided about 9:57 a.m. at the intersection of First and Reade streets, causing an estimated $300 damage to the Paul car and $400 damage to the Anderson vehicle.
Police charged Anderson with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of the mishap.
An estimated $300 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in an 8:11 a.m. mishap on Fifth Street, 75 feet west of the Bancroft Avenue intersection.
Drivers of the vehicles involved were listed as Carol Warner Richardson of Route 1, Trinity, and Louella Carr Howard of Route 1, Greenville.

FOODSALE

Eyes Stolen
PERTH, Australia (AP) — The government is investigating the theft of a dead man's eyes, Western Australia Health Minister Roy Young said today.
"It's possible that the eyes have been removed legally, but that does not explain why nobody can say who did it and why. I am horrified by this incident," Young said.
Dr. William Laurie, a state pathologist, said the eyes were stolen from a 39-year-old heart victim and the theft was discovered three weeks ago when the victim's wife asked an autopsy be performed. She filed a formal complaint this week.

Man Charged With Larceny
Greenville police arrested Benjamin Haywood Cole, 40, of 404 W. Fourth St. Thursday night on larceny charges following investigation of an incident in the parking lot at the intersection of Fourth and Evans streets.
Chief Glenn Cannon said officers saw Cole allegedly take a hubcap from a car parked in the lot about 11:20 p.m. Further investigation revealed three other hubcaps allegedly from the same parked car, owned by Henry Roberson of Robersonville, in Cole's vehicle.
Charged with larceny in connection with the case, Cole was placed under a $400 bond pending hearing of the case in court.
