GEORGE WASHINGTON SLEPT HERE — In commemoration of the 250th anniversary of George Washington's birth, a flowing of people will visit his Mount Vernon home and his grave, from groundskeepers to President Reagan to county supervisors, to color guards, scouts and tourists. Immaculate care has been taken of this national shrine. (AP Laserphoto)

Happy Birthday, George —Your Home Is A Shrine

By DON McLEOD
Associated Press Writer

MOUNT VERNON, Va. (AP) — Happy Birthday, George Washington. Rest well. Your house and your memory are in good hands.

There are people who know this is your birthday and care, even if the federal government you started a couple of centuries ago celebrated it last week.

In the early light, when the dew still clings to the slopes you so carefully terraced, the keepers of your house will visit your tomb and lay a wreath, commemorating the 250th anniversary ry of your birth.

President Reagan arrives later, and then the governor and the county supervisors, color guards, veterans and scouts and all kinds of well wishers and tourists.

But these first visitors are special. These are the folks who look after Mount Vernon the way you did, or the way you would have if you could have spent more time here.

Your cousin Lund Washington took care of the place when you were away serving your country. The head man here today is John Castillani.

Mount Vernon is as beautiful as you would have wished, and financially sounder than you ever knew it. And in your own hospitable tradition it receives one million visitors a year.

And despite the trampling and the romping, the grass is lush, green and soft. They even have an underground irrigation system now.

Over there, fussing with the shrubs is Dean Norton. They call him their head horticulturalist, but like you, George, he's a scientific farmer who loves his work.

The boxwood gardens you laid out are firm, full and deep green. And those holly trees you put out as sprigs: you wouldn't believe them now.

And the house. It's perfect, George. Furnished with care very nearly the way it was when you breathed your last in the upstairs bedroom in that December chill of 1799. Most of the furniture isn't yours, but each piece is as close as they could come to an original.

And they're doing some things you would like.

They scraped through two dozen coats of paint and discovered what a lively spirit you were. Gone are the pale and drab hues that represented George Washington to visitors for so long. In their place are vibrant greens and vivid blues and lemon yellows. And they peeled away the toned-down browns of your study and recreated the wood graining you loved.

You may not like this, but there are wires running all through the place, to carry that electricity Ben Franklin made such a fuss over. But it's for the house's own good. The wires provide power for lighting at night without those dangerous open flames you used. They run cleaning machines, burglar alarms and fire alarms.

Remember how many houses burned to the ground in your day from a fleeting spark or a stuffy chimney?

You have the best fire detection and suppression system in the world. Just one flicker of flame and out spurts special gasses that smother the fire but won't harm your house, or your furniture, or your books, or your guests.

And they are working on a new security system. That's a fancy new term they use for protecting the place from those who would do it harm. There are electronic alarms, and television cameras, and they're installing remote controlled gates.

Haven't had much trouble of that sort here, though. Castellani says they keep a careful watch, but he thinks the real reason Mount Vernon survives so well is that "there is such a deep reverence and respect for George Washington." Imagine that, 250,000 school children in an average spring and there's hardly a scratch anywhere that counts.

You always did like young folks, and the keepers of your house do too. They let school groups in free in the winter months. Your dream of a federal university in the nearby capital city never did work out, but Mount Vernon soon will have a research center you would be proud of.

It cost them $2.5 million, but they think it was worth every penny. They've collected so many books and documents and artifacts about you over the years that they don't have room for them any more.

They've got more than half a million pieces of paper in the document collection. No room for the staff and visiting scholars to turn around, much less work together.

The new library opens this summer, and it will allow them to share the collection with researchers and scholars, promote seminars, sponsor fellowships and keep their priceless papers in a harmless climate.

And don't worry. It's tucked away under a little knoll where it won't spoil the view you loved so much.

All this costs a lot of money, though, and the Mount Vernon Ladies Association that saved your home from destruction back in the last century, are pursuing a fund-raising drive. Some of the most important business and government leaders of our time are helping.

It's only the second public appeal since the ladies raised the $200,000 purchase price in 1853, but it had to be done. They've got problems you never would have imagined. A gasoline

Local Leaders Join Governors' Concern

By DON McLEOD
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Leaders of the nation's county governments joined governors today in expressing strong reservations to President Reagan's plan to transfer billions of dollars in federal programs to state and local governments.

After a 90-minute debate, the National Association of Counties adopted a statement generally praising Reagan's good faith efforts but seriously questioning his methods.

The main disagreement was the county leaders' insistence that the federal government take over full responsibility for the nation's basic welfare programs.

The "new federalism" Reagan unveiled in his State of the Union speech last month would have Washington take over the expensive Medicaid program providing health care for the needy. But it would give state and local governments full responsibility for Aid for Families with Dependent Children, the nation's fundamental welfare delivery system.

The county officials also questioned Reagan's plans for financing the program transfer.

They said in a resolution that local governments should get a share of the federal revenues now devoted to fully funding the programs that would be transferred to them.

Reagan wants to finance a "new federalism" transition fund with money from excise taxes and the windfall profits tax on petroleum. The state and local officials say the taxes Reagan prefers could not be collected equitably at the state and local levels.

The county leaders, who are holding their annual convention here this week, and delegates to the annual winter meeting of the National Governors Association were scheduled to meet with Reagan at the White House later today.

The governors, meeting in closed session this morning, voted 36 to 5 to suggest a compromise to the president under which the federal government would take over Medicaid while the states assume responsibility for "some negotiated set of federal programs."

Left open for further discussion would be whether the states or federal government would take over welfare programs, specifically AFDC and the food stamp programs, which Reagan also wants to turn over to the states. Traditionally, the governors have lobbied for a federal takeover.

The dissenters were five Republicans: Govs. David Treen of Louisiana, Lee Dreyfus of Wisconsin, William Clements of Texas, Pierre du Pont IV of Delaware and Charles Thone of Nebraska.

Gov. Bruce Babbitt of Arizona, a Democrat who is a leading advocate of shifting programs back to the states, called the welfare issue "the rock of contention."

Babbitt said he didn't expect the governors to push the welfare aspect or their disagreements on the Reagan budget during the meeting with the president.

"The governors take it as a given that we're going to oppose further cuts in categorical programs," said Babbitt. He added that the governors also feel they have Congress on their side.

State and local leaders from both parties on Sunday flatly rejected Reagan's entreaty that they separate the 1983 budget battle from his "new federalism."

Await Polish Spring

LONDON (AP) — Members of the underground Polish independent trade union Solidarity believe a "Polish spring" uprising against martial law is inevitable, the London Daily Telegraph reported today.

The newspaper's Warsaw correspondent, Robin Gedye, who arrived in London on Sunday after a 12-day journey by car through the Polish countryside, said the declaration of martial law Dec. 13 and the suspension of union rights "has served to turn an opposition movement once confined to Solidarity's 10 million members into a wide and deep-seated hatred of the country's government."

Gedye reported that in visits to the northern cities of Poznan and Gdansk — both the scene of anti-government disturbances — and Lodz, Wroclaw and Katowice in the south, he had repeatedly seen the slogan, "Winter theirs, spring ours," painted on walls and printed in underground bulletins.

"At petrol stations and roadside cafes and in the privacy of homes," Gedye wrote, "the message was always the same: Things are quiet now, but we cannot continue much longer. When the warm weather comes ... the fight will begin."

Since the Polish military took power, Western journalists in Poland have largely been restricted to Warsaw, with only occasional officially mounted excursions into the countryside permitted.

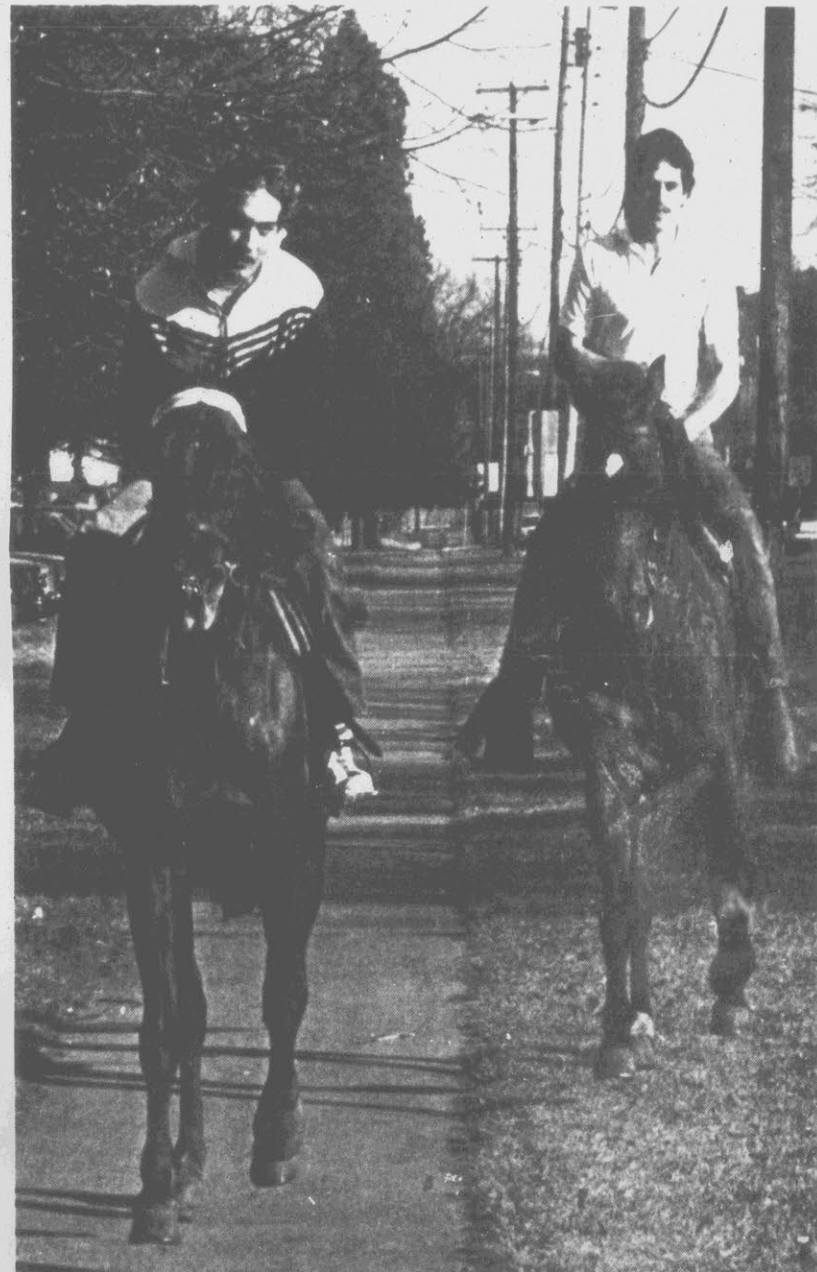

A spokesman for the Telegraph said Gedye had obtained a visa, allowing him to tour the countryside accompanying a group of British relief workers distributing food and medicine.

"They knew all about him being a journalist," said the spokesman. "It was all quite above board."

The correspondent for the conservative daily said rank-and-file members of Solidarity, formed in August 1980 by shipyard workers in Gdansk, expressed the "deep, terrifying almost childish conviction" that "the West would never stand by as an idle spectator to a bloody revolution" in Poland.

"The argument, repeated time and again, is that the West, and particularly the United States and Britain, owes Poland a moral debt for its postwar sell-out," he said.

He quoted one mother as saying she was willing to see her two sons die fighting the government rather than have them live under martial law.

Morgan Says He Wants To Rejoin U.S. Senate

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Former U.S. Sen. Robert B. Morgan says he's interested in another run for the Senate and says he'd like to challenge incumbent Republican Jesse Helms.

Morgan, a Democrat who was defeated in 1980 by Sen. John East, R-N.C., added a line to a prepared speech given Saturday to the Democratic Executive Committee in Raleigh. He said, "In the future I hope to have a voice back in the Senate."

Morgan, 56, did not say when he would run — in 1984, when Helms is up for re-election, or in 1986, when East's term expires.

But in an interview, he said, "I'd rather run against Jesse because he runs it (the GOP political organization) — he's the godfather." Morgan said he was not announcing a Senate campaign for 1984 or 1986. "That will depend on the circumstances," he said.

But he said he wanted to put the party on notice that he wasn't interested in any other office. Morgan has been mentioned as a possible 1984 candidate for governor.

Morgan refused to say whether he would step aside if Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt challenges Helms as expected. "I don't know what I would do," he said.

But Wallace H. Hyde of Asheville, a political ally of Morgan and Hunt, said Morgan "is not going to run against Jim Hunt."

"Today he said what he feels in his guts, that it's still in his blood, and if Hunt doesn't run against Jesse ... definitely, he'll run," Hyde said.

A top Democratic state official who also asked not to be named said Morgan might still have a political future and that some of his interest in the Senate resulted from bitterness over his defeat by East.

During his speech Saturday, Morgan said he was a victim of a "smear campaign" in 1980.

Morgan has denied he is bitter, but since leaving office, he has charged that Helms and Helms' political organization, the National Congressional Club, used unfair and misleading television advertising against him in the 1980 race.

During his speech, Morgan warned of "right-wing" and Republican attacks on the state's seven Democratic congressmen running for re-election this year.

Because of the large numbers received, Hotline can answer and publish only those items considered most pertinent to our readers. Names must be given, but only initials will be used.

HOME BURNED

The home of Steve and Peggy Haddock on the VOA Road west of Greenville burned Thursday night and their belongings were lost.

Emmanuel Holiness Church has asked Hotline to appeal for donations for the family. Anyone who wishes to give them household goods or clothing may call 752-7399 or bring the items the home of Haddock's mother, Mrs. Fannie Haddock — the fourth trailer on the left behind Pop Nichols' store off the Stantonburg Road. The couple and their four-year-old son, Stevie, are living there temporarily.

Sizes of the family are as follows: Steve, 33-34 waist, 31-32 length; Peggy, size 15; Stevie, size 5.

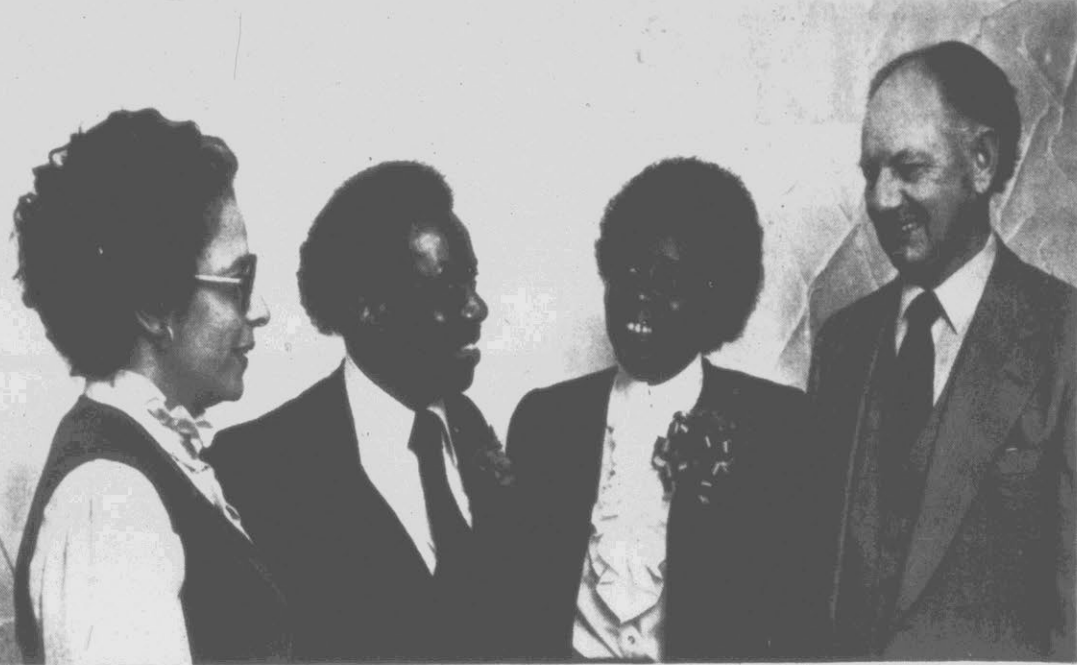

SOME PAPER HOUSES REMOVED

The Vocational Center recycling house where I've been taking my old newspapers is no longer there. And I've noticed that some others around town are gone. Is this a temporary measure on the part of the Vocational Center or a permanent one? My car trunk is chock full of newspapers and I need to know where to take it.

Joyce Chance, Eastern Carolina Vocational Center Recycling Department secretary, said yes, a number of the houses have been pulled in. A decision has not been made, she said, to put them back out. It's become too costly, she said, for the workshop to man the pickup of paper from the houses. Any individual or group who would like to make an agreement with the center to pick the newspapers up from the houses and leave the surrounding area in good shape may do so, she added. Call 758-4188, Ext. 211. The workshop will pay 50 cents per 100 pounds.

She emphasized that this amount will also be paid individuals who bring newsprint to the center, located in the Greenville Industrial Park.

She asked that the public NOT put magazines in the houses, since there's no recycling market for these at the present time and they take up space.

SUBJECT OF SPECIAL TRIBUTE . . . Rev. Dr. Clarence Gray, second from left, was the subject of a program of special tributes held in the Morocco Room of the Casablanca on Friday night.

Dr. Clarence Gray Is Honored By Associates Friday Evening

Rev. Dr. Clarence B. Gray was honored by church, city and education officials in a special tribute ceremony held Friday night at the Casablanca.

In the series of tributes, those representing various sectors of the community were: Civil Rights, D.D. Garrett, president Pitt County Branch of the NAACP; Education, Mrs. Jean Darden, assistant principal, J. H. Rose High School; Politics, Percy Cox, mayor of Greenville; and Religion, Rev. William B. Moore, pastor, Tenth Street Memorial Baptist Church, Philadelphia.

Programs of music before and during the session of tributes were provided by Johnny Wooten, the Eastern Elementary School Ensemble performing "Deep River," and the C.B. Gray Ensemble of Triumph Missionary Baptist Church performing "Whom Shall I Fear."

Edward Carter, of the Pitt County Black Assembly, presented remarks.

Gray, who is principal of Eastern Elementary School, was a member of the Greenville City Council from 1971 to 1981. A native of Simpson, he is a graduate of G.R. Whitfield School, Grimesland, and received the undergraduate degree from Shaw University. He has also studied at East Carolina University and holds the M.A. degree from North Carolina Central University, Durham. In addition he has a master of divinity degree from Shaw University, Raleigh.

In November 1981, Rev.

Gray was given the honorary doctor of divinity degree from Shaw.

Currently, he is pastor of Davis Chapel and of Triumph Missionary Baptist churches.

He is married to the former Gwendolyn Crandol of Pitt County. The couple has three children, Jacquette, 14, Clarence, Jr., 10, and Hattie Estella, 2.

Mexico's President Is Trying Ease Tensions

By JUAN MALTES
Associated Press Writer
MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo proposed a plan to ease tension between the United States and Nicaragua's leftist government, predicted improvement in U.S.-Cuban relations and said he is working on a peace plan for El Salvador.

The Mexican president, speaking to a crowd of about 40,000 in Managua's Plaza of the Revolution Sunday, called for a non-aggression pact that would disarm several thousand Nicaraguan political exiles he said are being trained in Honduras, Florida and California.

In return, Nicaragua's Sandinista government would scale down its arms buildup that Washington views as part of a Cuban attempt to spread Marxism throughout Central America.

"The money for defensive armaments could be dedicated instead to public works to defend the well-being of the Nicaraguan people," Lopez Portillo said.

The leader of the Nicaraguan junta, Daniel Ortega, appeared to endorse the proposal, saying he would "fight to achieve a minimum of communication" with Washington about such a pact. But earlier in the day, he blamed the United States for an explosion that killed four baggage handlers at the Managua airport Saturday night. He claimed the blast was part of a U.S. plot to undermine his government and discourage Lopez Portillo's visit.

Airport authorities said the explosion occurred in the baggage claim area, apparently in a dynamite-laden suitcase that came in on a Honduran airlines flight that originated in New Orleans and made stops in Guatemala and Honduras.

The airport was closed to all traffic Sunday except the Mexican president's jet, and it remained closed after he left Sunday night. The shut-down stranded visiting U.S. Rep. James Coyne, R-Pa., who said he was told he couldn't leave the country until the airport reopened Monday.

Turning to the U.S.-Cuban dispute, Lopez Portillo said there was a "serious possibility" the Reagan administration and Fidel Castro's Communist regime would soon start talks to narrow their differences, including U.S. claims that Castro is arming Central American guerrillas.

Lopez Portillo said the first step was taken in December when Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. met secretly in Mexico with Cuban Vice President Carlos Rafael Rodriguez.

"We have solutions to present to the interested parties" in El Salvador's war between leftist guerrillas and the U.S.-backed civilian-military junta, Lopez Portillo continued.

"The worries of the United States can be overcome because Mexico and the United States' own allies will help resolve the conflict," he said but gave no details.

The United States and the Salvadoran junta sharply criticized Mexico and France for their decision late last year to recognize the Salvadoran leftists as legitimate political groups.

Employee Lie Detector Test Is Becoming More Common In N.C.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — It is becoming increasingly common for North Carolina merchants to give employees lie-detector tests in an effort to cut down on in-house thefts, security officials and merchants say.

"There's a snowball effect," said Lee Heinrich, an owner of North Carolina Polygraph in Raleigh. "As one company uses it and others see the results, they want to use it, too."

"I think, essentially, the matter is very simple: It's survival," said Clyde Cook Jr., owner of Cook and Associates, a Raleigh security firm. "The small or medium-sized businesses are having to cut their losses or a lot of them are faced with extinction."

A recent U.S. Department of Commerce report said businesses lose $50 billion annually to theft. According to the National Retail Merchants Association, 40 percent of those losses are directly attributable to employee theft.

David Devine, president of the American Polygraph Association and head of polygraph services for Eckerd Drugs in Clearwater, Fla., said most merchants use the tests to screen prospective employees who might be untrustworthy and to seek out a culprit among employees if a theft occurs.

Devine said the growing problem of employee theft had caused his business to boom.

"There are 28 accredited polygraph schools in the country and it's damn hard to find examiners, so somebody's hiring them," he said. "There's no such thing as a decent polygraphist that's unemployed."

In North Carolina, 205 polygraph operators have been licensed by the State Bureau of Investigation, said Roy D. Brown, administrator of the SBI's private protective services board. Some of the licensees have gone out of businesses, and Brown estimates that there are 125 operators working in the state.

"We're in a mass society now, and this is a product of a mass society," Cook said. "When your neighbor's son applies for a job ... you don't have to ask him if he's a thug. But now we're drawing people from hundreds and thousands of miles away, whom we know nothing about, who drop a resume on your desk."

The extent of polygraph use varies with the needs of companies, merchants say. Firms with employees handling cash or drugs, or with employees who are unsupervised for a long time, are more likely to use the polygraph than companies that offer constant supervision or handle bulk goods.

"An individual has a tremendous opportunity and temptation in a convenience store — because they're alone — to take money or merchandise," said Robert L. Beaman, executive vice president of Fast Fare in Henderson. "The employer is somewhat vulnerable, because there's no one to report the theft."

The use of polygraph tests has drawn criticism from some quarters, especially the North Carolina Civil Liberties Union, which sees them as invasion of privacy and infringement on the constitutional presumption of innocence and ban on self-incrimination.

OVERWEIGHT?

Do you want shots administered to you, when they haven't been approved by the F.D.A.? Are you tired of struggling to lose weight only to gain it back?

Before you take another shot, buy another pill, before you clip another magazine diet, before you skip one more meal - stop ... ask yourself if this is the way you want to spend the rest of your life. Look beyond your desire to lose a few pounds and consider the fact that there is only one way to lose weight and keep it off. You have to change your eating habits -- not just while you are dieting, but permanently. No shot, no pill, no miracle formula, and no fad diet is going to do that for you... You have to do that for yourself. And the best way to lose weight is through education.

At Diet Center you will receive private, daily support from a counselor who cares and understands. She knows what it takes to make those permanent changes because she has done it herself. You will learn how your body functions and just how satisfying a nutritionally balanced diet really is. You will lose weight quickly and safely without hunger or loss of energy.

In just 10 years Diet Center has grown to over 1,100 locations all across the United States and Canada. We've grown this big, this fast for one basic reason... OUR PROGRAM WORKS!

At Diet Center you'll lose 17 to 25 pounds in 6 weeks. If necessary, that rate of reduction can be sustained until you have lost 50, 75 or even 100 pounds and more. And all this is accomplished without shots, drugs, stimulants or prepackaged foods. No wonder more and more doctors are prescribing Diet Center for their patients who need to lose weight.

When you decide to lose weight, call Diet Center for a free introductory consultation. We think you'll decide to try Diet Center, and when you do you'll find that this is the last weight loss program you'll ever need.

Rose High Wins

A team from J.H. Rose High School won the 1982 Pitt County Quiz Bowl which was held Saturday in the auditorium of the Library-Recreation Building in Greenville. Sheppard Memorial Library sponsored the local Quiz Bowl.

Members of the Rose team were Elizabeth Ellen, Jeff Prescott, Vince Hankins, and Shannon Stanforth. The team won $75 savings bonds given by Burroughs Wellcome, Procter & Gamble, and The Daily Reflector.

Alternate team members for Rose were Derek Dickens, Alayna Keller, Teresa McLawhorn, and Suzanne Wille.

Rose High's team won the Pitt County championship by defeating the North Pitt High School team 215 to 160 in the final question-and-answer game of a double elimination tournament.

As second-place team, Elwood Ayers, Judson Joyner, Woody Leggett, and David Davenport of North Pitt High School won $50 savings bonds. Alternate members from North Pitt were Ben Maddox, Martha Rollins, Renee Oakley, and Ken Whitehurst.

Other schools represented in the Pitt County Quiz Bowl were D.H. Conley, Ayden-Gritton, and Farmville Central. Moderators were Ken Tyndall and Harold Williams of WNCT-TV news. Judges were Dr. Moses Sheppard, Kenneth Hilton, and Willie Nelms.

As Pitt County champions, the Rose High School Quiz Team will take part March 20 in a regional Quiz Bowl competition to be hosted by Sheppard Memorial Library. The two top teams in the Greenville regional contest will face ten other teams in the state finals to be held on Saturday, April 24.

shortage or price rise, could cut income dangerously. Four rainy weekends in April could cost $150,000, a big enough piece of the $3 million budget to cause alarm.

And, like you, they think Mount Vernon should grow. There's always something to be done. They want to install craft and farm operations and let today's youngsters know what life was like on your plantation.

But most of all they want to keep Mount Vernon affordable to the millions of people who come here to get closer to you. They just can't raise the ticket price high enough to make the repairs needed and keep growing.

So, your countrymen are helping, they've already raised $3.5 million and hope to reach their $10 million goal by your next birthday. Looks like they'll make it, too.

"The ladies are very sensitive to being private owners of a national shrine," Castellani said. "They feel strongly that they hold it in trust for the public benefit and that it is in the public's best interest to keep the admission fees as low as possible."

Happy Birthday, Mr. President.

Couple Speaks Vows Sunday Afternoon

Martha Lynn Wilkerson and Stephen James Rafferty were married Sunday afternoon at three o'clock in a double ring ceremony performed by the Rev. Lawrence Patrick Houston Jr. in Saint Paul's Episcopal Church.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Moseley Wilkerson of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Judge and Mrs. John Francis Rafferty of Salem, Va.

A program of wedding music was presented by Mrs. Sharon Irwin, organist. Herbert Edwards Perry Jr., brother-in-law of the bride, sang "The Wedding Prayer" as a benediction.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and her sisters, Louise Wilkerson Perry and Christine Wilkerson Edwards of Greenville, were matrons of honor.

Bridesmaids included Jean Ramey Wilkerson, sister-in-law of the bride, and Ruth Daniels Woronoff, both of Greenville, Mary Jane Rafferty of Norete Dame, Ind., sister of the bridegroom, and Laura DeNeale Peeler of Charlotte.

Honorary bridesmaids included Kathy Curry of Charlotte, Carol Kelsey and Dorsey Sanderson of Greenville, Joy McCoy of Indianapolis, Ind. and Elizabeth Whitehurst of Charleston, S.C.

Thomas Michael Rafferty of Dallas, Tex., brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Ushers included John Francis Rafferty Jr. of Salem, Va., brother of the bridegroom, Herbert Moseley Wilkerson Jr., brother of the bride, and Clifton Hugh Edwards III, brother-in-law of the bride, both of Greenville, William Harrison Chamblee and Leon Wesley Worsham, both of Greenboro.

The bride wore a floor length gown of sata peau beaded with alencon and Belgium lace. The empire bodice was fashioned with a Victorian neckline and full length sleeves. Alencon lace beaded with seed pearls adorned the bodice and trimmed the sleeves. A Belgium lace ruffle, encircled with seed pearls, encircled the collar and cuffs of the sleeves. Beaded alencon lace motifs graced the full length A-line skirt which extended into a chapel train. She wore a chapel length mantilla of silk illusion trimmed with alencon lace and carried a semicascade bouquet of white roses, pixie carnations and ivy.

The attendants each wore a formal gown of rose blush knit designed with a high Victorian neckline encircled with a double ruffle of chantilly lace. The gathered bodice was centered by a band of chantilly lace that extended to the modified natural waistline. A corded tie belt enhanced the full pleated skirt. Cuffs edged the long full sleeves. They each carried a nosegay of mauve and pink pixie carnations, forever yours rosebuds interspersed with baby's breath.

Honorary bridesmaids each wore a floor length dress and carried an arm bouquet of pink carnations.

The bride's mother wore a street length dress of French blue crepe and chiffon and the mother of the bridegroom selected a street length dress of emerald green silk. Both wore corsages of white cymbidium orchids.

After a wedding trip to Williamsburg, Va. the couple will be living in Birmingham, Ala.

The bride and bridegroom graduated from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. She was formerly employed by Globe Hardware Co. and the bridegroom is employed by Dillard Paper Co., Birmingham.

A reception was held at the Casablanca after the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Norman Wilkerson greeted guests. Donna Harris, Betty Atkins and Sonya Sutton presided at the guest register. Good-byes were said Mr. and Mrs. George Wilkerson and Christine W. Mashburn.

On Sunday morning, a wedding breakfast was held at the Ramada Inn given by relatives of the bride. The bridal couple and out-of-guests were entertained at an after-rehearsal cocktail party given by friends of the couple at the Windy Ridge clubhouse. A rehearsal dinner was given by the parents of the bridegroom at the Beef Barn. A brides-

Dear Abby

Is Handyman Also Dandyman?

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I have a dear friend (I'll call her Emily) living in Illinois. I live in California. Emily and I have been like sisters for over 60 years. Her husband died two years ago and left her a lot of money and property. She's 81 and never had children.

About three months ago she called and told me she had rented a basement apartment to a 63-year-old man she hired as a handyman for that apartment building. (She owns several.) Then she called a few weeks later to tell me this man had been "courting" her. Now he is pressuring her to get married. She said at first she told him he was crazy, but he refused to take no for an answer. They were going to get married in June, but now he wants to move it up to April.

Emily acts like a schoolgirl in love for the first time! She called and said, "Don't worry, I haven't lost my virtue." I told her it was her money — not her virtue — I was worried about.

Last year when I was visiting her I checked out another man who wanted to marry her and found he was a liar and a phony. Emily is a sweet and generous person. I want her to be happy, but I'm so afraid some fast-talking slicker will win her heart and clean her out.

Abby, dear, am I wrong to interfere? What should I do?

CONCERNED OUT WEST

DEAR CONCERNED: Wrong? No way! You have good reason to be concerned about your sweet and generous friend. Write or call and tell her to discuss her plans with her attorney. Her handyman may be a dandyman, but he, too, should be checked out.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "Prefers a Preview" prompts this letter. I also fell in love with a man who respected me too much to go beyond a kiss until we were married. "Prefers" learned too late that her husband was gay. My story has a different ending.

When I married, I was a 23-year-old virgin. Nothing happened on our wedding night — or on any other night for a year after that. My husband finally admitted that he was unable to consummate our marriage because he had no sexual feelings whatsoever. He said he knew this when he married me but he didn't want to lose me. I cared for him, so I accepted this terrible disappointment.

Then Pearl Harbor came and changed my life. My husband, a college graduate, went into the service and overseas. Before he left, he said, "When I come home, I want to find you the way I left you — a virgin."

Well, he didn't. I went to work in a defense plant and met a man I couldn't resist. The inevitable happened and we fell madly in love. (He couldn't believe he had actually met a 25-year-old married virgin!) Within six months I was pregnant, so I wrote my husband a "Dear John" letter, telling him the whole truth. He divorced me on the grounds of adultery and I married my lover, who by that time was the father of our baby girl. We had four other children after that, and they're all grown with children of their own.

I'm 64 now and my husband is 73. We've had our ups and downs, but I have no regrets. My life probably reads like a soap opera, so if you print this, sign me

Wedding Vows Exchanged

AYDEN — The Community Baptist Church here was the scene of the wedding ceremony of Toni Renee Price and Stephen Wayne Strickland. The double ring ceremony took place Sunday afternoon at four o'clock. The couple's pastor, the Rev. Roy E. Wood, conducted the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. Dennis Price of Winterville and Mrs. Linda Price of Kinston. The bride was escorted and given in marriage by her uncle, Herbert Price.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Strickland Sr. of Ayden.

The bride's sister, Donna Price of Winterville, was her maid of honor. Bridesmaids included Charlene Strickland, sister of the bridegroom, and Lisa Stroud of Ayden. Leigh Ann Manning of Ayden was the flower girl. Stuart Ray McLawhorn of Ayden was the ring bearer.

The father of the bridegroom was the best man and ushers included Charles T. Strickland Jr., brother of the bridegroom, and Daniel Hart, both of Ayden.

The bride wore a white formal gown of satin and rose lace with high see-through neckline and bridal lace ring collar with white pearl buttons down the back.

The long full sleeves of rose lace were cuffed with scalloped bridal lace and pearl buttons. A full skirt of rose applique illusion over satin flowed into a chapel train bordered with bridal lace. The bride's over the face capel length veil of silkened illusion, outlined in matching bridal lace was attached to silk flowers with seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of whitesilk roses.

The maid of honor wore a formal light blue gown with floral design. It was complemented with puffed sheer sleeves and a sash at the waistline. The bridesmaids wore identical gowns and carried three long-stemmed carnations. The flower girl wore a white formal gown and carried a basket of miniature pink carnations.

The mother of the bride wore a street length rose colored dress with white flowers and long sleeves. The bridegroom's mother wore a light blue dress with long sleeves. Both mothers wore corsages of white carnations.

MRS. STEPHEN WAYNE STRICKLAND

At the guest register was Susan McLawhorn and Perry Price.

Ayden after their wedding trip

Music was rendered by Wendi Jones, organist, and Mrs. Pat Wood sang "Let It Be Me" and "The Wedding Prayer." The bridegroom sang a prerecorded arrangement of "If."

Now More Practical

Remember when it was fashionable to have one's own fallout shelter?

Properly the thing was designed with a filtering system so that radioactive fallout wouldn't reach its occupants. Inside would be enough dried and canned food to last for weeks, along with water and medical supplies. A Geiger counter was needed to determine when it was safe to come out and inspect the devastated world in which only fallout shelter occupants would have survived. Oh yes, there was one other thing needed in the shelter . . . a gun and plenty of ammunition to shoot the crazed hoards who no doubt would be clawing at the door in the end.

Now President Reagan is proposing a 400 percent increase in civil preparedness for nuclear attack funding. The fallout shelter idea may be pretty much passe, however. It was finally concluded that building adequate shelters was prohibitive, as was keeping them stocked for decades with food and water. Finally there is the overriding question of whether survival would be desirable in the event of a full scale nuclear war.

Now North Carolina and Pitt County look to an Office of Emergency Management and the planning is for natural disasters, such as hurricanes, as well as enemy attack.

The federal policy for dealing with an attack is a concept of crisis relocation with people to be moved from large population centers to the more sparse population areas. Existing buildings would be used, perhaps with dirt quickly pushed up around them to protect against fallout or explosions.

Perhaps what we've learned is that there isn't much protection against an all-out worldwide nuclear holocaust. However, we can and should be prepared for other catastrophes, whether it be tornado or some more conventional type w a r

Get On With Budget Work

Reports from Washington say that Budget Director David A. Stockman is more conciliatory concerning revisions in the Reagan budget.

The White House has been besieged with complaints about the cutting of social programs and, from the conservatives, the huge projected deficits.

It is likely that social programs have been cut all they can be. Thus if the deficit is to be reduced some whittling will have to be done on the defense budget and additional revenues will have to be found.

Both can be done. The defense budget is not untouchable and there is no question but that there is waste there. The Reagan tax cuts approved last year were too large and directed too much at the upper income segment. Still special tax provisions can be implemented which will reduce the deficit.

Congress must get on with what needs to be done, and it will certainly be better if the administration cooperates.

Power In Govm't

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — It seems news reports about state government devote an exorbitant amount of space to money. This makes it look like money is the most important thing there is.

Actually, to the politician, money is just the way you keep score. The individuals in the General Assembly, running the various state agencies, occupying the Governor's Mansion and seats of power therein are not getting rich.

They are, however, enjoying the ultimate in human enterprise for those people whose makeup is bent in that direction — control over jobs, parking spaces, type-writer colors, happiness or unhappiness of thousands of individuals, making high-rolling decisions which directly and immediately affect citizens for good or bad, and otherwise exercising power.

Around the State Legislative Building it is often said: He who controls the purse strings runs the program.

Ultimate Control of money is the ultimate power in government. That is why news reports in recent months have been filled with talk of the running battle between Gov. Jim Hunt and leaders of the General Assembly regarding budget matters.

Legislators are seeking to wrest control from Hunt over the multi-millions of dollars in federal block grants which are replacing the categorical grants of the past. Simply put, instead of every small agency or program scattered through state or local governmental agencies sending up a form asking for money and all the paperwork, administration, and bureaucratic wheel-spinning that entails, Washington will simply dump the money on Raleigh and let state government dole it out.

Who will control the money: local governments, the governor, state agencies? Who will get the money?

Legislators slipped into law a measure which prohibits line-item transfers within budget categories. Simply put, agency managers and the governor will no longer be able to decide they don't need paperclips, but would rather hire a new person — or vice versa — without first touching base with powerful legislators.

Legislators are even now planning the ultimate showdown over money-power. Traditionally, state agencies tell the governor, who is by the constitution director of the budget, how much they want. The governor weeds out the inflated and ridiculous stuff and comes up with about half the requests to make up the current $6 billion annual budget.

It takes a lot of help to do that in modern times. There are computers and staff people and the Advisory Budget Commission. That com-

Nonconformist On War

I was walking by the White House the other day, when I saw a man marching back and forth with a sign, "STOP THE CONVENTIONAL WAR."

Wanting to be helpful, I said, "Haven't you made a mistake? sir? Don't you mean, 'Stop nuclear war'?" "No," he said, "I mean conventional war. The anti-nuke people are protesting nuclear war, but no one is speaking out against conventional war."

"What's wrong with conventional war?" I asked.

"It's lousy," he said, "with the stuff they've got stockpiled now, the major powers can kill almost as many people with a conventional war as they can with a nuclear one. It will just take longer."

"I think you're exaggerating. A conventional war is a Shriners' picnic compared to a nuclear one."

"People think that because they've seen too many World War II movies. But if they believe that the next conventional war is going to be like the last one, they're out of their gourds. With the non-nuclear firepower, plus the conventional aircraft, and new laser-guided bombs, you can now flatten every city in the world without splitting one atom."

"Are you trying to stand here and tell me conventional war is unthinkable?"

He replied, "What's the difference if we wipe out the human race with bacteria or hydrogen?"

"Don't you think the people in charge know that?" I asked.

"I doubt it. When they bring up disarmament, all they are talking about is trying to stop the nuclear arms race. And they aren't talking much about that any more. But you never hear a discouraging word for the non-nuclear arms buildup. We've got people brainwashed into believing a conventional war is the only alternative to a nuclear one."

"But it seems so old hat to protest conventional war at a time when there are enough nuclear weapons to zap everyone off the Earth," I told him.

"That's why I'm doing it. No one is going to start World War III with nuclear weapons. It's going to begin with conventional ones and will escalate to nuclear, when one side decides it has no chance of winning. I have nothing against the anti-nuclear war people, but they're barking up the wrong tree. They're zeroing in on weapons and not war."

"Maybe you have a point," I concluded. "But it must be hard to get people excited about the dangers of conventional war when we've all grown up to fear a nuclear Armageddon."

"Why do you think I'm out here alone? It's hard to dramatize what a conventional war can do to people. You never hear a study being done on how many civilians will die in a conventional war, because everybody believes they can survive one as long as the weapons dropped on them aren't radioactive. They better get it through their dumb heads that they can be blown to bits, burned to death and starved out of existence, without one nuke missile being fired."

"You're a very depressing person," I told him. "That's what everyone tells me. But I've made a study of all the conventional weapons now stockpiled in the world.

Raids Haig Policy Turf

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — In his first low-key month as President Reagan's national security adviser, William P. Clark has quietly moved — with Reagan's support — against Alexander Haig's cherished foreign policy turf, predictably arousing resistance from the secretary of state.

Unlike public quarrels between Haig and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger over the U.S. approach to the Middle East or toward the Soviet Union, the Haig-Clark dispute concerns no single policy but how policy should be made. This is a struggle for the power to create, control and carry out U.S. foreign policy that under Reagan often has seemed to wander aimlessly.

Clark has issued a secret directive giving the National Security Council (NSC) staff jurisdiction over long-range U.S. policy reviews now conducted by the State Department. Haig, a stalwart defender of State Department turf, is fighting that directive. "The orders are that it is to be done here, but Al won't buy," one White House insider told us.

Reagan brought his old friend, Judge Clark, over from the relatively comfortable deputy secretary's niche at the State Department not merely to replace the fallen Richard V. Allen but to bring order out of chaos in making foreign policy. But Haig's opposition to Clark's plans threatens more disarray.

Clark is strengthened by the latest, unseemly outbreak of policy struggles between Haig and Weinberger. In daily headlines, these public battles show disorder within the president's national security bureaucracy. Foremost allies of the U.S. are privately asking questions about who's in charge while underlings of the two principals fuel hostility with leaks to the press and eud runs to promote their bosses.

That sets the stage for Reagan to elevate Clark and his NSC staff, with instructions to take command of the policy-making machinery and end damaging infighting. The first step in that direction is Clark's seemingly trivial directive empowering his staff to call its own policy-review meetings in the White House. In fact, the authority to call high-level meetings of top State, Defense and Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) officials and to dominate those meetings is the core of policy power.

Moreover, Clark has confided to intimates that he was not ruling out a change more basic than long-range policy review. He wants to upgrade the NSC staff, giving it closer control and management over day-to-day policy.

So far, he has made no overt move in that direction. But Clark has been taking charge in a far more personal way than Allen. When Weinberger sent Clark a speech he planned to deliver at a U.S.-West German conference in Munich Feb. 13, Clark ordered two sections changed, one dealing with the Soviets' Yamal pipeline, the other with West German contributions to NATO. White House aides say that Allen never censored speeches of Cabinet members.

Clark's first six weeks on the job contradict expectations that, considering his total foreign policy experience of one year under Haig's tutelage, he would be a highly-efficient paper shuffler without touching policy. Those predictions underestimated Clark's clout.

Clark's influence derives directly from Reagan himself, and the president is known to be solidly behind Clark in the current struggle for control over long-range policy reviews. White House insiders say Haig's resistance to the new directive has disturbed the president almost as much as the secretary's public protest last spring over Vice President Bush's selection as "crisis manager."

Haig's fight against the new directive may persuade the president the time has come for major bureaucratic changes, giving Clark and his staff new power to coordinate and control day-to-day national security operations as Henry Kissinger and Zbigniew Brzezinski did in the 1970s. That was forewarned by Reagan during the presidential campaign in what proved a vain effort to prevent the public feuding in his administration that poisoned relations between Kissinger and Secretary of State William P. Rogers and between Brzezinski and Secretary Cyrus Vance.

But Reagan has been confronting worse internal disharmony: public debate and private struggle between Haig and Weinberger over how to deal with the Russians, Poland, the Caribbean, the Arabs and Israel. For a year, the National Security Council staff, representing the president, has been locked out of resolving these disagreements. Judge Clark's seemingly trivial directive has opened the door a wide crack. Gen Haig's struggle against it unwittingly may push it open wider.

Other Editors Say Basis For Concern

(Washington Daily News)

The North Carolina Association of Educators (NCAE) at the meeting of its Board of Directors on November 20-22 in Raleigh passed 51 motions.

Motion No. three is the particular one we wish to discuss. It says "passed a motion that a Board committee be appointed to develop an aggressive and positive action strategy to promote quality education in North Carolina as an alternative to the increased activity in support of merit pay, the attacks on the Fair Employment and Dismissal Act, and the failure of the media to accurately report the commitment of this association to professional development."

While the entire motion is rather difficult to read and understand, what concerns us most right now is the last clause which reads "and the failure of the media to accurately report the commitment of this association to professional development."

Here we have a direct implication that the news media have been engaged in inaccurate reporting. So often when the opinions of an editor differ from those held by an organization, that newspaper will be charged with inaccuracies and with unfairness. And the same holds true for television commentators.

We are wondering if the differences here are those of opinion or are they cases in which the media actually has engaged in untruthful reporting to the detriment of the organization.

If the latter is true, then we ought to have a bill of particulars given to the media forthwith. If it is really a case of differences of opinion, then the matter of differences will continue so long as we have democracy and freedom of the press.

We are not really concerned then over any differences of opinion. We are very much concerned over any lack of dedication, lack of accuracy, and lack of truth in reporting with which the media, by implication is charged.

If the media is guilty anywhere along the line or to any degree, perhaps it might be merely a lack of communications or of interpretations or understanding. We do not believe that newspaper editors and television commentators in North Carolina engage in the publishing or the saying of half-truths or untruths. But where mistakes are made — human mistakes — let us be quick to correct them. But let no one charge inaccuracy or unfairness because of any differences of opinion on issues of the day.

The media and the NCAE have a right to differ on opinion. Neither has a right to differ on principal.

Commodity Fraud Is Rampant

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — he huge growth in trading of such commodities as gold and crude oil has spawned widespread fraud that is beyond the reach of federal regulators, says a congressional committee.

The Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations estimates there may be $200 million in commodity fraud a year — most of it going unpunished.

The subcommittee, which plans three days of public hearings on the subject beginning Tuesday, is exploring proposals to expand state jurisdiction to crack down on alleged swindlers.

Subcommittee sources say they have amassed evidence that the Commodity Futures Trading Commission can't police the field by itself and the CFTC is ready to concede the point.

Laurie J. Buchanan, spokeswoman for the commission, said: "It's no secret we're a very small agency. State and local enforcement help would be welcome."

The House Agriculture Committee also will hold a hearing Tuesday to begin deciding whether the CFTC should be renewed beyond Sept. 30, when its current mandate expires.

Philip McBride Johnson, chairman of the CFTC, declined comment on the upcoming hearings. He is expected to testify before both the House and Senate panels.

A Senate investigations subcommittee aide who requested anonymity said the panel's 6-month investigation shows that so-called "boiler-room activities have gone on relatively unfettered since the CFTC was created in 1975."

What may be worse, he added, is that the commission has given the unscrupulous "a license to steal" by adopting a new perfunctory registration system for commodity dealers.

"Registration is absurdly simple," he said. "The CFTC never requires a proficiency test."

The term "boiler-room operations" describes brokers who do business exclusively over the phone and often seem to vanish when it comes time to settle an investor's account.

Trading in commodities futures, unlike most trading in stocks, and other securities, involves contracting for the right to buy or sell the commodity at a given price at a future date.

The investor does not actually take possession of the commodity, be it precious metals, coal or crude oil. He also puts up only a fraction of the value of the commodity.

The investor gambles that the commodity will be worth more or less than a specified amount before the otion expires.

Sen. William V. Roth Jr., R-Del., the subcommittee chairman, said: "No type of investor is safe. Commodity con artists will not only go after a wealthy investor's venture capital, but also elderly people's pension money and widows' insurance proceeds."

The panel will examine 1978 amendments to federal commodity law that gave the CFTC practically sole jurisdiction over commodity trading, pre-empting state regulators.

States may still go to federal court to file civil fraud complaints, but state officials note that their legislatures do not usually appropriate funds to enforce federal laws.

"All we ask is to be given back police power to protect our citizens against fraud," says Tom Krebs, head of Alabama's securities division. "The CFTC . . . hasn't the staff nor the inclination to either protect or help us protect investors."

Richard D. Latham, securities commissioner in Texas, has written the Senate investigations subcommittee that there has been a drastic drop in enforcement since 1978.

"It is in no way related to the number of crooks operating in the commodities area," Latham said. "The crooks are still there. The states, however, have lost their right to fight the fraud with state statutes."

The great majority of commodities trading, particularly in farm products, is done over established exchanges which are regulated by the CFTC.

There were 98.5 million commodities contracts traded on the exchanges last year, worth billions of dollars to investors and producing more than $1.3 billion in commissions.

What the Senate investigations subcommittee is concerned about is "off-exchange" trading which it says is virtually unregulated and where most fraud occurs.

Subcommittee investigators say con artists have become increasingly sophisticated. A favorite scheme now involves "commodity pools" in which the investor buys an option in a variety of different commodities.

The subcommittee has obtained tape-recorded evidence from some of the alleged con artists.

Traditionally, brokers record conversations with customers to protect themselves against the investor who claims he said "sell," not "buy."

The panel has tape recordings of customers being told, months after their original investment, that they must come up with thousands of additional dollars before they can exercise the option. The investigators say that constitutes fraud.

Congress Costs More Despite Budget Cut Goals

By JAY PERKINS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Taxpayers are spending a little more on Congress this year — a total average cost of $2.4 million per legislator — to go about the business of deciding where to cut the budget of nearly everyone else in the government.

The cost of Congress keeps creeping higher each year. The 100 senators and 435 congressmen will spend $1.3 billion on their work this year, a small boost over the fiscal year that ended last Sept. 30. Next year, the congressional budget request is expected to inch upward again.

The spending figures for Congress are somewhat deceptive. They include the cost not only of operating the House and Senate but of running several agencies under congressional control. Among them are the General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, the Government Printing Office and the Library of Congress.

Also, part of the budget increase in recent years stems from cost-of-living raises that Congress has given its employees and federal workers, as well as some pay increases for its own members.

When inflation is taken into account, the legislators' spending on their operations has increased little — if any — in real terms since 1977, when the total topped $1 billion for the first time.

"You would have to say it has unquestionably declined in real dollar terms since fiscal 1979," said one House Appropriations Committee staff member, who declined to be quoted by name. "There has been stability or reduction in employment and other kinds of expenditures."

Since 1979, appropriations for the legislative branch have risen at an average rate of 5.5 percent while overall government spending rose 12.9 percent — about the same as the national inflation rate.

The current budget for congressional operations is about 5.8

percent higher than the 1981 budget. Budget requests for fiscal 1983, starting Oct. 1, are expected to jump about one-half of 1 percent to just under $1.4 billion, House and Senate staffers said.

Funds actually appropriated for Congress for next year could be less than that. Last year, the House pruned $81 million from congressional budget requests for fiscal 1982.

The situation in recent years seems stable when compared with the 1960s and 1970s, when spending by Congress on itself and its staff grew rapidly.

Last year, the Senate ordered a staff freeze that kept at 8,037 the number of full-time employees in the Senate and in agencies under Senate housekeeping authority. That freeze, however, was only for one year, and must be renewed annually.

Actual operations of the House and Senate account for about half of all funds spent by the legislative branch. The Senate's operating budget this year is $216 million, up from $206 million last year.

The House, with its much larger membership, is operating on a budget of $364 million — up $2.8 million from last year's levels. Items under the control of both branches add about $84 million to the total.

The congressional fiefdom extends far beyond the halls of the Capitol and involves more than what most people regard as typical legislative activities.

Congress will send $244,000 this year to the District of Columbia to educate the young pages that work on Capitol Hill. Another $734,000 will go to guides that escort visitors on tours of the Capitol. The Botanic Garden, which supplies plants for congressional offices and receptions, will receive $2.3 million.

Retirement benefits for former legislators and staff members, coupled with generous cost-of-living adjustments, cost $93.2 million last year, even though the number of people enrolled has been dropping. That's more than double the $45.0

million paid in 1976. The program in 1957 cost only $2.1 million.

Congress also will spend money for a doctor's office in the Capitol, barbers and beauticians, and chaplains that offer daily prayers on the House and Senate floors.

Some unusual expenses also come out of the budget. Congress spent $2,000 last April on a memorial service for the late Rep. Tennyson Guyer, R-Ohio, and it spent another $2,467 to send several members to the funeral of the late Rep. William Cotter, D-Conn.

It also spent $142 last July, one of several such expenditures during the year, for supplies for the Capitol Police K-9 corps, and another $95 for boarding the dogs. Another $1,608 went for ammunition for the Capitol Police practice range in the House Rayburn Building.

Another $595 was spent on tea for a meeting with West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt.

The cost of transcribing the millions of words uttered at committee hearings all over Capitol Hill is substantial. The House alone spent $168,000 in one three-month period for that service, as well as for furniture and supplies.

Congress also spends millions to tell the nation what it is doing. In fiscal 1981, it mailed 400,647,000 pieces of franked mail and paid the Postal Service $53,967,000. In fiscal 1980, which covered most of the election year, the cost of mail service was $62,603,000 for 511,869,000 pieces of mail.

The 1983 fiscal year budget contains a request for $55 million for mail franking privileges.

The House also spends $40,000 a year to maintain its $1.5 million television system, which provides gavel-to-gavel coverage of floor sessions. The Senate does not allow TV coverage of its sessions.

The House spends about $740,000 a year on salaries for the 37 people who operate the television system and the television studio used by members to make programs for broadcast back home. The Senate has a similar studio employing 15 people.

Some costs are difficult to estimate accurately. For example, the House and Senate will pay $864,000 this year in salaries for the 26 employees who work in the galleries reserved for the working press. But no estimate is available on the cost of light, heat or telephone service for the 3,900 members of the press accredited to use the galleries.

Armed Forces Tests Show Large Disparity In Personnel Quality

WASHINGTON (AP) — A nationwide testing program to study the quality of military volunteers shows that the armed forces are not being filled with below-average people as some critics have charged, according to Pentagon sources.

Results of the $3.5 million testing program, however, have raised another politically sensitive issue.

Young white civilians scored an average of 56 percent on the mathematics and reading tests, while Hispanics averaged 31 percent and blacks averaged 24 percent, the sources said Sunday.

The civilian youths were outscored in all three groups by the recruits who were tested, said the sources, who asked not to be identified. Among the recruits, whites scored 58 percent, Hispanics scored 41 percent and blacks scored 33 percent.

The sources emphasized that the purpose of the testing was to determine the quality of personnel joining the armed forces, and that it did not measure natural intelligence or learning potential.

Instead, the tests were designed to assess what those taking them had learned and their capability to be trained as soldiers, said the sources.

One unidentified Pentagon official quoted by The Washington Post said the test results raise serious questions about the quality of education in predominantly black schools.

The newspaper said the Reagan administration treated the results "like political land mines" and has met privately with representatives of such groups of the National Urban League, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund to explain the tests.

The Armed Forces Qualification Test was given to a sample of 11,914 men and women aged 18 to 23. The National Opinion Research Center at the University of Chicago administered it.

Dr. Paul B. Salmon, executive director of the American Association of School Administrators, said Sunday that the results "clearly demonstrate the national interest in education."

"At the very time that President Reagan is advocating severe cutbacks in funds for education, the Department of Defense is demonstrating that it understands we cannot have a strong military force without a well-educated populace," the director of the 18,000-member organization said.

Salmon said that despite the lower scores of blacks and Hispanics on the Pentagon's test, "We do have testing information that shows that minority and disadvantaged students are greatly benefiting from Title I programs."

For example, he said that the average reading performance of young blacks rose 9.9 percent between 1971 and 1980, according to a study by the National Assessment for Educational Progress.

mission is now made up almost entirely of legislators.

New Way

But when the budget is delivered to desks of the General Assembly, it has already been trimmed and adjusted and packed with special projects to win the favor of various powerful politicians. The average legislator can no longer understand the bulky volumes, let alone do anything about any of the items in it.

So, legislators want to slip into law a requirement that state agencies must make available not only to the director of the budget but to the General Assembly that raw data and unfiltered budget requests.

With their own computer power and staff, which is rapidly building, legislators would then be able to write a budget of their own instead of having to accept the governor's budget.

The power struggle will continue for a long time. A popular and strong governor like Hunt had mostly been able to keep things on an even keel. Next time, though, if a Republican governor is in office, or a Democrat who doesn't have the knowledge and power which Hunt does, the balance will tilt sharply again.

Congress required the Pentagon to make sure that at least 65 percent of recruits were high school graduates, after the 1980 discovery of a "miscalibration" of the AFQT since 1976.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST—Snow is expected in the forecast period, Monday until Tuesday morning, from the northern Plains to the Great Lakes. Cold weather is forecast from the northern Plains to New England. Mild, sunny weather is expected across the southern half of the nation. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Sunshine and moderating temperatures were forecast for late today and Tuesday by the National Weather Service.

Following a cold frontal passage Sunday, temperatures cooled steadily during the night as northerly winds prevailed. Skies were partly to mostly cloudy. A few light showers occurred in the northeastern corner of the state.

Some light snow and snow flurries were reported from the mountains overnight. Only a few flakes were observed at the Asheville airport but an inch or two of snow accumulated in several counties in the northern mountains.

The winds were rather strong across western North Carolina early this morning. Gusts of nearly 40 mph were recorded at Asheville. Pre-dawn temperatures cooled into the mid-30s across the west and north while southern sections had readings in the low 40s. In the northern mountains the mercury hovered around the 30-degree mark.

Most of the state will enjoy a sunny afternoon. The clouds will be slow to clear out of the northeastern counties but even there sunshine is likely this afternoon.

The return to clear skies will be the result of a high pressure system that will move from the central states and will be centered over the southeastern states early tomorrow. As the high drifts east by late Tuesday, winds will become southwesterly bringing in warmer air from the lower Mississippi valley.

Recreational weather outlook: The weather across the state today was expected to be mostly sunny but cool with brisk northerly winds adding to the chill. Highs will be in the 40s and 50s except for some 30s in the higher mountains. Fair skies will be the rule tonight as the mercury dips into the 20s and 30s.

Mostly sunny weather will make tomorrow a pleasant day as temperatures warm into the 50s and 60s except for 40s on the Outer Banks. Along the coast, a small-craft advisory is in effect. Northwest winds at 15 to 25 knots with occasional higher gusts will diminish slowly tonight. Tomorrow the winds will become more southwesterly.

Solar Fraction

Greenville's solar fraction calculated by the department of physics of East Carolina University was 64 yesterday, which means that a solar water heater could have provided 64 percent of your hot water.

Farm Scene

By LEROY JAMES
Cnty. Ext. Chairman

Survival will be a key word to farmers across the country this year as they try to hold on until crop prices offer them profit to repay debts and scratch back to some sort of economic stability.

It's time some of them took long hard looks at their operations to find what holes precious capital has been slipping out of and what they can do to stop those leaks.

It's time many looked at marketing strategies to determine if there isn't a more efficient way of selling what they work so hard to produce.

It's time to consider production practices that have followed the philosophy that if a little is good, then a lot will do wonders. Those excesses are simply too costly to consider anymore. If there is no accompanying yield increase, the expense cannot be justified.

It's time for a lot of folks to evaluate their size. If efficient production has been sacrificed for increased volume and expanded acreage, maybe this is a good time to pare back to manageable levels. Reduction volume may mean lower production costs, fewer inefficient hogs or cattle to feed and increased profit from those enterprises.

It may be time for some farmers to realize that traditional crops do not offer enough profit potential to keep them in business. They may need to consider other options after adequate analysis of production costs and market availability.

Regardless of what financial condition a farmer is in, it's always time to take stock of management abilities and production efficiency. That's what survival is all about.

Hard times often produce a harder breed of any life form. It's the old adage "only the strong survive." If that is indeed the case, folks who survive the next few years on the farm will be better equipped to handle adversity than most any other people who've come along in recent time.

Workshop Set

Pitt County 4-H is sponsoring a tractor workshop which begins Tuesday and continues six consecutive weeks at Hendrix-Barnhill, Memorial Drive, Greenville. Hours are from 7 to 9 p.m.

The workshop will be taught by Mark Warren and is for youth 12-19 years of age, not necessarily 4-H members. To pre-register, call the 4-H office, 752-2934, Ext. 362.

The materials used in the workshop will cover all the information youth will need to participate in the upcoming tractor skill-driving contests.

The first contest will be held in the early spring to determine a champion to represent Pitt County at 4-H State Congress July 26-30 in Raleigh. A second contest will be held at the fairgrounds during the Pitt County Fair and will be sponsored by Pitt County 4-H and the Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival. Participants in both contests must have been 14 or older by Jan. 1 of this year. For more information about the tractor skill-driving contests, call the 4-H Office, Dale Panaro, 4-H extension agent said.

Egypt Is Under Arab Pressure

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unless Egypt settles the Palestinian dispute with Israel it will not be welcome at the next Arab summit, says Jordan's ambassador to the United States.

Abdul Hadi Majali said Jordan would not want Egypt at the summit "because we believe there will be no results out of the Camp David agreements concerning the autonomy talks."

The former army general, interviewed on Cable News Network's "Newsmaker Sunday" program, also said he doubts Israel will withdraw from the Sinai by April 25, as promised in the Camp David peace agreements.

"I think they want to create something so they will not withdraw," he said.

Most of the Arab countries boycotted former Egyptian President Anwar Sadat for signing a peace treaty with Israel. But after Sadat's assassination, his successor, Hosni Mubarak, has taken steps to patch up the differences.

Heed Directions On Seedlings

Most tree seedling plantings failures result from not heeding a few easy-to-follow instructions printed on the seedling bags, says Jim Kea, area forestry agent with the Agricultural Extension Service.

Several hundred acres are scheduled for planting to forest, Christmas trees and windbreaks in each county this year. Failures often occur when seedlings are allowed to get too hot, too cold, too dry or too wet before planting.

It is not often possible to plant seedlings immediately after delivery from the nursery. Plan proper storage. Most nursery-grown seedlings are packed in seal polyethylene bags with a water-soaked material added to retain moisture. Refrigerated storage with temperature maintained from 32 to 40 degrees is best. Cool, sheltered, ventilated areas may be used for short-period storage. It is essential that the seedling bags not be exposed to the warming sun for a long period nor should they be stacked without ventilation between bags. One benefit to refrigerated storage is that the seedlings remain dormant and the planting season may be extended.

In this county, the best time of year to plant and expect good survival is from early December to early April, depending on cool weather and moist ground. Plant when soil moisture is good, but not saturated. Early plantings in wet heavy-clay soils may be heaved out of the ground from expanded frozen soil. Seedlings may also become dehydrated when drying winds blow over frozen ground.

Seedlings purchased from the North Carolina Division of Forest Resource Nurseries are packaged ungraded to keep costs down. Only quality seedlings should be field-planted. Grade to certain specifications, keeping a good top-root balance. The root collar diameter should be at least one-eighth inch for most pines, at least one-fourth inch for longleaf and white pines. The stem should be woody and rigid. The top length should be no more than 14 inches and the root system no less than five inches nor more than nine inches. Where needed, root pruning should be done with grading.

There are few areas where machines can be used for planting trees. Most will be hand-planted with bars of dibbles. Probably the most critical root-drying exposure period is when planting. The roots must be kept covered and moist at all times. Often dipping in a mud or gel mix will give adequate protection. Plant the seedling at the same or slightly deeper than the depth it grew in the nursery bed without bending the root.

If additional information is needed, contact your county agricultural extension office, Kea said.

Legal Deductions Open To Forest Landowners

Many forest landowners pay too much federal income tax because they fail to take advantage of the legal deductions, credits and preferential tax treatments which are incentives to timber production, says Jim Kea, area forestry agent with the Agricultural Extension Service.

"For instance, under a new federal law," he explained, "landowners may claim a 10 percent tax credit and a seven-year write-off of out-of-pocket reforestation costs of up to $10,000 per year." The law applies to reforestation expenses incurred after Dec. 31, 1979, added Kea, and individuals, corporations, partnerships and estates are eligible, but trusts are not. Costs of site preparation, seeds or seedlings, labor and tools and equipment depreciation are included.

"Many landowners have sold timber in the last year and these people also can cash in by paying less income tax," said the forestry agent. "Timber is a capital asset which if owned for over one year and sold, qualifies for long-term capital gains income tax treatment." Under capital gains, only 40 percent of the net long-term capital gains is taxed as income. Most landowners, said Kea, would qualify if they sell timber infrequently.

"Annual deductions of forest management expenses may be claimed even if no forestry income is realized during the year," he added. "If a landowner itemizes deductions, costs of short-life tools, equipment maintenance, salaries, wages, fees and equipment, depreciation must be taken out in the year incurred."

Kea said several publications are available which explain and list the federal and state tax benefits available to private forest owners, and copies may be obtained by writing Kea at P.O. Box 1148, Williamston, N.C. or calling 792-1621.

Craft Classes

For Youngsters

Various classes for young people sponsored by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department are getting under way this week.

All classes last for 10 weeks and all meet in the Jaycee Park Administrative Building. Cost for each ten week class is $5, with all materials included. To pre-register, call 752-4137, extension 200.

The classes are:
• Crafts classes ages 7-11. Monday afternoons 3:30 to 5 p.m. Simple crafts that can be finished in a class setting, such as Easter decorations and calico dolls.

• Needlework classes for 8-10 year olds, Wednesdays 3:30 to 5 p.m. — for 11-15 year olds, Thursdays 3:30 to 5 p.m.

Survival Test For Captioning

WASHINGTON (AP) — The future of the National Captioning Institute is being threatened by a decision by NBC to withdraw from the closed captioning program for the deaf.

The institute is the only organization in the country providing the service to television broadcasters.

NBC Vice Chairman Irwin Segelstein outlined the network's decision two weeks ago in a letter to the institute's president, John E.D. Ball.

Segelstein cited the disappointing level of support by the deaf community as shown through sales of caption decoders and the possibility the captioning system may soon become obsolete.

The NBC executive has agreed to meet with Ball later this week, but says a reversal of the network's position is unlikely.

"There's no question that this has to threaten the survival of NCI," Ball said in an interview.

Notice to Telephone Customers

WE ARE PROPOSING CHANGES IN THE RATES FOR CALLING OVERSEAS AND MEXICO.

The American Telephone and Telegraph Company has filed with the Federal Communications Commission a plan, to be effective May 17, 1982, to restructure rates for Overseas and Mexico Message Telecommunications Service (MTS). The restructure will result in rate increases and decreases and is designed to have no overall effect on interstate earnings. The purpose of the filing is to encourage calling during lower-priced discount and economy periods, relieve peak-period calling, simplify international rate schedules, and encourage use of customer dialing.

Here are the proposed changes

Overseas Message Telecommunications Service

• Establish a 1-minute initial period rate on all customer-dialed calls. (At present there is a 3-minute initial period rate on all classes of calls.)

Operator Station and Person-to-Person calls will retain the 3-minute initial period rate.

• Establish 3 levels of rates on customer-dialed calls and for each additional minute on all classes of calls: STANDARD (highest rate), DISCOUNT (middle rate), and ECONOMY (lowest rate). (At present there are only 2 rate levels applicable to many countries.) Operator Station and Person-to-Person initial 3-minute period rates will be uniform throughout the day regardless of the time called.

• Establish 9 world rate regions and eliminate multi-rate zones (except Cuba). The regions are: Europe (continental), United Kingdom/Ireland, Africa, Near East, Caribbean Atlantic (except Cuba), Central America, South America, Indian Ocean, and Pacific.

• Rate all collect calls billed in the U.S. at the Person-to-Person rate only. (At present collect calls from many countries are billed in the U.S. at Person-to-Person rates only.)

Proposed Rates for Dialable Countries within These Regions*

*For countries that are not dialable, additional minute rates are somewhat higher. For customers who do not have International Dialing, the dial rate will apply when special operator assistance is not required.

U.S.-Mexico Message Telecommunications Service

(The following changes apply only to the U.S. portion of the call. Additional charges applicable to the Mexican portion of the call are added to charges for the U.S. portion.)

• Change time-of-day and day-of-week rate periods of the U.S. portion of the call to align more closely with those in effect in Mexico. Day rates apply from 7am-7pm Monday through Friday. Evening rates apply from 7pm-11pm Monday through Friday, 7am-11pm on Saturday, 5pm-12 midnight on Sunday. Night rates apply to all other hours.

• Decrease the initial 3-minute dial rate for the U.S. portion of the call on calls over 430 miles. For example, the initial 3-minute dial rate for a call from New York to Mexico City will be reduced from $1.58 to $1.45, for the U.S. portion only.

• Increase the initial 3-minute dial rate for the U.S. portion of the call on calls up to 430 miles. For example, when the U.S. portion of a call is from 1-10 miles, the initial 3-minute dial rate for the U.S. portion will be increased from 23¢ to 35¢.

• Reduce the present 14 rate steps to 9.

• Introduce a 40% discount for the evening period and a 60% discount for the night period on customer-dialed calls and for additional minutes on all classes of calls.

Conflict Of Brazilian Church And Military Rule Heats Up

By K. MICHAEL FRASER
Associated Press Writer

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — The Roman Catholic Church's conflict with the military-backed government over church support of the urban poor appears certain to heat up again. Laymen and clergy alike predict increased strife as a result of restated church policy.

"The essential thing is the position that the poor have a natural right to land and decent housing and that the church will help them get it," Bishop Orlando Dotti said in an interview with The Associated Press.

The church's position comes at a time of growing confrontation between increasingly aggressive "squatters" and authorities, who frequently send police to remove them.

The church essentially sanctions squatters' occupations of unused city land, saying legal title — especially when concentrated in the hands of the rich — does not justify denying the needy the right to a decent standard of living.

The church's far-reaching support for the poor already has made it a target of violence.

A recent church study reported that since 1968 six priests have died, 19 have been kidnapped, 153 priests and nuns have been jailed and 10 priests have been deported, as a result of the church support of the squatters.

After a lull in the late 1970s, the conflict is heating up again.

In 1980, the church adopted a position supporting rural peasants and their demands for land. Since then, one priest has been deported, another has been sentenced to a year in jail under the national security law, and two more are awaiting trial in a military court on charges of inciting peasants to violence.

Nonetheless, the church reaffirmed its position to help the poor during a 10-day annual meeting of the National Conference of Brazilian Bishops, which ended Feb. 18. The NCBB is the governing body of the church in Brazil, and the main topic of debate during the meeting was "the use of urban real estate and Church action."

A document with the same name was approved by the bishops by a vote of 192 to 1. There were two abstentions.

"God gave man the use of the fruits of nature for his human development," the bishops said. This, they said, gives all men the right to land. Ownership of private property, particularly when unevenly distributed, should not prevent this.

They concluded the poor have the right to land and in some instances are justified in taking it. Such actions "should be judged before the fundamental and primary right to a place to live, derived from the vital necessities of human persons," they said.

The bishops decided the church will help the poor achieve a better standard of living by using the powerful techniques of education, to make them aware of their rights, and of organization, to make them stronger in backing their demands.

The Brazilian church says its position does not violate the spirit of Vatican restrictions on priest involvement in politics. Officials say the warning by Pope John Paul II — who visited shantytown slums in Rio de Janeiro in 1980 — does not extend to activism in social issues.

The problem of the urban poor is already explosive. It is caused by the rapid process of urbanization that has dramatically changed Brazil. Census data show 69 percent of Brazilians lived in rural areas in 1940, but by 1980 the balance had reversed so that just over 80 million people — 67 percent of the population — lived in cities. The country has 10 metropolitan areas of more than 1 million inhabitants, and Sao Paulo, the largest, has 13 million.

"This violent shift in the population has caused serious problems," says Ricardo Toledo Silva, a researcher at the Institute of Technological Research who has studied the process.

The cities have not adequately absorbed the flood of people, and millions have been forced into disease-ridden shantytowns.

Silva estimates the slum population in the Sao Paulo area is close to 1 million. Sao Paulo's cardinal, Paulo Evaristo Arns, says at least another 1.5 million are crammed into decrepit tenements.

Bishop Alfred Novak, who deals directly with the problem of the urban poor in Sao Paulo, said the bishops' document will have an important impact because priests working with the poor at the grass roots level "will now act with more energy and more support."

Man Killed By Cave-In

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) —

A frantic effort to save an Asheville construction worker failed Sunday, as the worker suffocated after a ditch in which he was working collapsed.

John Wayne Kuykendall, 28, was among eight employees of Hobson Construction Co. of Arden working on an Asheville city water line when the accident occurred, said Hobson supervisor Felix Evans.

Two other members of the work team — Kuykendall's father-in-law Harold Littrell, and brother-in-law, Harold Littrell Jr. — were partially buried in the dirt that covered Kuykendall but escaped serious injury, Evans said.

Evans said there was no telephone at the site and he had to drive to a phone to summon help. By the time he returned, co-workers had uncovered Kuykendall's head and shoulders but the rest of his body remained buried, he said.

Fifteen members of the Buncombe County Rescue Squad arrived at the scene 10 minutes after the 8:36 a.m. call came, said Dave Bossard, rescue squad chief.

Bossard said Kuykendall's body was buried in a standing position in hard-packed gravel and dirt.

Kuykendall was unconscious when emergency medical service personnel arrived. He immediately was given oxygen as rescue personnel worked to free him, Bossard said.

Rescue workers labored for more than an hour before Kuykendall was freed.

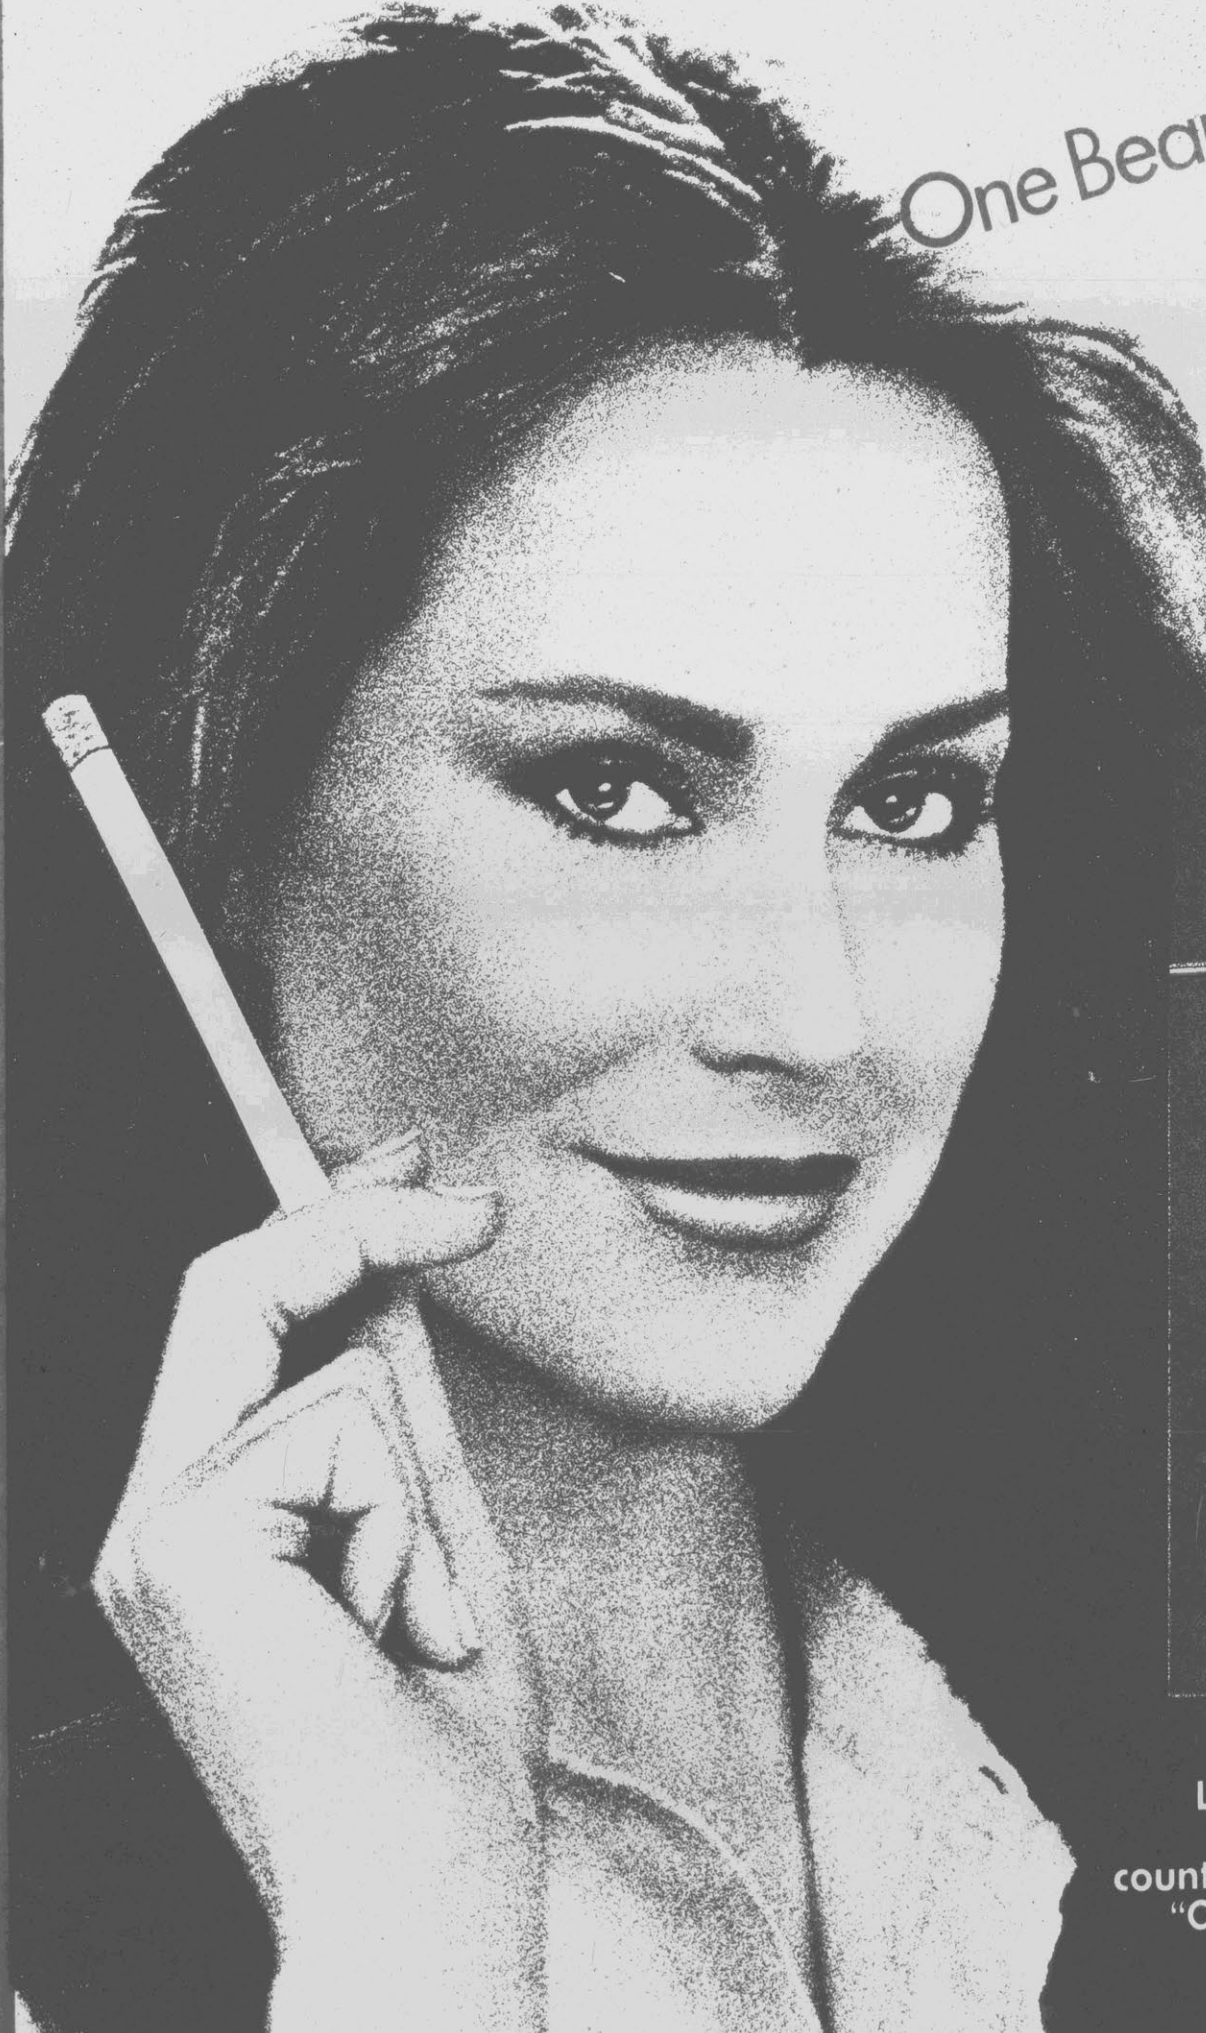

William DeBruhl, director of the city water department, said the cave-in could have been caused because the construction was being done in a nearby landfill area.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market showed a broad gain in active trading today amid hopes for relief from high interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 5.61 to 829.91 by noon. Gainers held a 4-1 lead over losers in the mid-day tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The NYSE's composite index rose 47 to 65.90. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 2.73 at 272.30.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 25.61 million shares at noon, against 21.84 million at the same point Friday.

Topic Given For Session

"Resources for Parents in Pitt County," will be the program topic for the winter meeting of the American Society for Psychoprophylaxis in Obstetrics, scheduled to be held at Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church from 7 p.m. until 9 p.m. Thursday.

Parents and professionals interested in promoting prepared childbirth, family-centered maternity care, and good parenting are urged to attend the ASPO meeting.

Over 20 ASPO representatives from across the county are scheduled to outline what is available to parents, and the goals and objectives of ASPO.

The local ASPO, affiliated with the national organization, hopes to expand its programs and services for prospective and new parents in the area.

The Parent Division will be recruiting members to participate in resource development, a speaker series, consumer advocacy, and parent support and educational projects.

More information about the session, and ASPO may be obtained by calling Tommie Pratt (professional division), at 756-3047, or Laura Kesler (parent division) at 752-1952.

World's Tallest Woman Is Dead

PEKING (AP) — The world's tallest woman, who stood 8-foot 1-inch, has died of diabetes and complications, the Peking Evening News reported today.

The newspaper said the 17-year-old peasant, Zeng Jin-Lian died Feb. 13 in Hunan province in central China. She had been hospitalized in October for treatment of diabetes and returned home for the lunar new year holiday.

She developed a fever Feb. 9 and her conditioned worsened, it said.

Wilderness Safeguards Are Offered By Watts

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Interior Secretary James Watt, dramatically reversing field, sys he now favors a long-term ban on new drilling and mining in the country's 80 million acres of wilderness lands.

Many environmentalists, who have spent the past year battling Watt over wilderness development, hailed the announcement Sunday as a "real victory." Others said they wanted to look at the fine print before passing judgment.

In an appearance on NBC's "Meet the Press," Watt said the administration will propose legislation to put federally owned wilderness land off-limits to oil and gas drilling and mining through the year 2000 — an 18-year moratorium.

He said the only exception would be if the president and Congress determined there was an "urgent national need" for oil, natural gas or strategic minerals during times of foreign embargoes or other crises.

Until Sunday's announcement, Watt had favored just the opposite approach, supporting proposals to extend for 20 years the right of oil companies and other developers to obtain mineral leases in wilderness areas. The 1964 Wilderness Act had set a Jan. 1, 1984, deadline for issuing such leases.

Before the Reagan administration took office, few leases had been issued, but Watt gave notice that he favored energy development on public lands. Energy companies have pushed for approval of about 1,000 pending oil and gas lease applications in 200 wilderness areas in 25 states.

Interior Department officials said Sunday that Watt's intention is to award none of those leases if Congress agrees with his package.

"This is a real victory for wilderness preservation," said William Turnage, executive director of the Wilderness Society. "This is a complete turnaround in the administration's policy."

John McComb, Washington director of the Sierra Club, said Watt "is responding to the overwhelming public rejection of his leasing proposals."

Jenkins Cites Role Of Communication

ECU News Bureau
A two-way street of communication between the institution and its public was the key to realization of many of East Carolina University's "ambitions" to service over a growth period of more than 30 years, says Dr. Leo W. Jenkins, ECU's legendary chancellor emeritus.

University status, a four-year school of medicine, a school of nursing, athletic conference affiliation, stadium expansion, a department of correctional services and other advances came about because the public said they needed and wanted them, Jenkins said.

Jenkins, who retired in 1978 after 31 years of service to East Carolina, including 18 years as president and chancellor, returned to the campus as keynote speaker for the seventh annual ECU-Phi Kappa Phi Symposium last week.

The theme of the symposium, chosen by a committee of the sponsoring honor society, was based on ECU's 75th anniversary celebration which occurs this year. More than a dozen symposium presenters focused on aspects of ECU's programs of instruction, research and service in scholarly papers which are to be published.

Jenkins said East Carolina's efforts "To Serve" overcame detractors, criticism and opposition because they gained widespread public support.

Ideas for new ways of serving the state and region came from the public, he said. The long, difficult task of establishing a school of medicine began, he said, when a "friend," a private physician from Plymouth, "knocked on my door" and presented facts about Eastern North Carolina's shortcomings and deficiency in health care and adequate medical services.

He said the splendid record achieved by graduates of the ECU School of Nursing in passing state board examinations one hundred per cent for many years belied detractors of the school.

Jenkins spoke to an audience in Hendrix Theater which included many members of the faculty, deans, department heads, administrators, trustees, representatives of the UNC Board of Governors, former East Carolina president John D. Messick and interim chancellor John M. Howell. Howell introduced Jenkins, saying that he probably is the last chancellor of East Carolina who will leave "a personal imprint" upon the institution.

Jenkins and his wife, Nancy Murray Jenkins, were honored at a reception following the symposium address.

Marcis Strikes Blow For Independents

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — It was a victory for the vanishing NASCAR Grand National stock car independents, but Dave Marcis needed a series of breaks and a heavy rain to pull it off.

The affable 39-year-old resident of Avery's Creek, N.C., won Sunday's Richmond 400, for his first Grand National triumph since the Dixie 500 at Atlanta in the fall of 1976.

In fact, it was only the fifth victory in a long Grand National career for Marcis, who has over the years operated mostly without the financing of a big-name sponsor or big-buck car owner.

This year, he has some much-needed sponsorship money provided by Kentucky coal-mining mogul J.D. Stacy — variously owner and sponsor of six cars in Sunday's race.

"The help from Mr. Stacy has enabled me to be competitive," Marcis said after waiting more than an hour before NASCAR officials gave in to the rain and made his victory official.

"Mr. Stacy is my sponsor, but I still operate like and as an independent. I build my own engines, own and prepare my own cars and haul the car to the track myself. I call all the shots and do all the work."

"In fact, I'll drive the tow truck home tonight (Sunday). It's about a nine-hour trip."

Marcis was running in fifth place on lap 244 and had just been put a lap down by leader Joe Ruttman when the series of incidents that brought him victory took place in rapid succession.

"Joe just flew by me in the third turn and I was pretty close behind him when I saw his left rear tire suddenly go down and he veered right into the guardrail," Marcis said.

Ruttman, who inherited the lead when defending Grand National champion Darrell Waltrip's car went out of the race with an ignition problem on lap 206, had built a margin of nearly eight seconds when he crashed at the start-finish line on the .542-mile Richmond Fairgrounds Raceway oval.

Benny Parsons was running second at the time, with Richard Petty and Dale Earnhardt close behind. Marcis was fifth, although he was between Ruttman and Parsons on the track.

When the fifth and final caution flag of the day came out for Ruttman's crash, Marcis moved across the line ahead of Parsons and found himself on the end of the lead

MVP Shoots

East Carolina's Sam Jones puts up a shot against Western Kentucky last night in the championship game of the Lady Pirate Converse Classic. Jones was voted the tourney's Most Valuable Player. (Reflector photo by Chap Gurley).

Lady Pirates Romp To Tourney Title, 108-54

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Sam Jones and Mary Denkler each scored 22 points and four other Lady Pirates hit double figures as hosting East Carolina captured the championship of the first-ever Converse Lady Pirate Classic last night, 108-54, over Western Kentucky.

Michigan State captured the consolation title with another rout, ripping Virginia State, 104-58.

Jones, named the tournament's Most Valuable Player, hit her first five shots of the game to put the Lady Pirates into a 16-6 lead and East Carolina was off and running.

It was six minutes into the second half before Western Kentucky finally managed to put more than two points together at one time, and by then the Pirates had rushed away to a 40-point lead, leading by anywhere from 35 to the final 54-point margin.

The 108 points was just one off the school record of 109, set in 1979 against UNC-Greensboro.

"It was a great, great game," an enthused Coach Cathy Andruzzi said as her team recorded its 14th win in the last 15 games. The Lady Pirates are now 16-8 overall, with just two games left in the regular season.

"To score 108 points and have only 14 turnovers is very pleasing," Andruzzi continued. "Twenty-eight assists, and we forced 27 turnovers. That's something, too. And we really outscored them, too (53-33 — despite a height disadvantage)."

"I can't say enough for the effort. I think this is the first time that we've had six players in double figures. That just goes to show that it was a total team win."

All eight Lady Pirate scored. In addition to the 22 of Jones and Denkler, Loletha Harrison added 18, Darlene Chaney had 14, Lillian Barnes had 12 and Lorraine Foster had 10.

"Loletha did a great job defensively, and Sam was super all over the court. She richly deserved the MVP award. Mary also had an excellent game, one of her best in field goal shooting (10 of 13). Everyone did the job tonight," she added.

That was well taken. For instance, Fran Hooks, who scored but two points, had eight assists. Chaney had 11 rebounds, while Harrison had 10 and Denkler pulled eight. Jones added five assists.

Shooting for the Pirates was red-hot too — from the floor at least. The Lady Pirates sank 48 of 83 shots, 57.8 percent. At the line, however, Andruzzi found the only thing she could be disappointed with — a poor 12 of 21 performance, 57.1 percent.

Defensively, the Pirates held Western Kentucky to only 32.8 percent from the floor, led by 18 by All-Tournament selection Lillie Mason, while Gina Brown added 12 and Cindy Young and Kathy Jo Henry each had ten.

"This win means a lot to us," Andruzzi said. "We really

ECU's Sam Jones Tournament MVP

East Carolina's Sam Jones was named the Most Valuable Player of the Converse Lady Pirate Classic, which ended last night with ECU winning the first championship.

Jones, who scored 41 points in pacing the Lady Pirates to two victories in the event, played 68 minutes in the two games, hitting on 19 of 36 field goals and five of seven free throws. She had six rebounds and handed out 13 assists.

Joining her as all-tournament selections were two teammates, Mary Denkler and Loletha Harrison. Denkler in 63 minutes of play, scored 44 points. She canned 18 of 33 field goals and eight of 14 free throws. She pulled in 18 rebounds, and had five assists.

Harrison, in 62 minutes, hit on 12 of 18 field goals, and six of ten free throws for 30 points. She had 22 rebounds and three assists.

Michigan State, which won the consolation title, beating Virginia State, had two selected to the all-tournament team, Brenda Jezowski and Deb Traxinger. Jezowski score 32 points in the tournament, while Traxinger had 21.

Rounding out the team was Lillie Mason of runner-up Western Kentucky, who had the most points in a single game, 29, and the most in the tournament, 47.

wanted to win our tournament.

Western Kentucky is a good team, but we got them out of their game early. We could have come out in the second half, too, and played sloppy but we didn't.

"Instead, we smoked. We smoked all night. We moved the ball well on offense with all the groups in there. We just did it all."

It took very little time for the Lady Pirates to establish the eventual outcome. Henry gave the Lady Toppers their only lead of the evening at 2-0, but ECU quickly ran off four straight baskets, two by Jones, and one each by Hooks and Barnes. And after another WKU basket, Denkler hit and Jones followed with two wrapped around a third Hilltopper basket making it 16-6.

The rest of the half, East Carolina steadily pulled away — actually for the rest of the game. Nothing the Lady Toppers could do would stop the flood of ECU points, as the Lady Pirates roared out to a 58-20 halftime lead.

And if Western Kentucky hoped for a turnaround in the second half, it was disappointed. The Lady Toppers tried a full-court press for a while, and it had the same results, although for a while the two teams just swapped baskets. But finally, again, the skills of the Lady Pirates told again, and the pull-away continued until Harrison hit the final points of the game with six seconds left — doubling the score on the Toppers.

The score marked the first time this year the Lady Pirates have cracked 100 points, and it was a jumper from the foul line by Denkler with 2:25 left that did the trick.

And Andruzzi was excited about the tournament, too. "We had a great crowd, great enthusiasm and I think our tournament committee and everyone involved did an outstanding job in showing some fine Southern hospitality to these teams. I want to thank the people from Converse (the commercial sponsor of the tournament). I think they were well pleased, and we hope that they will continue to sponsor us. We want to make this one of the top tournaments in the country."

Western Kentucky, with the loss, drops off to 11-14 on the season.

The Lady Pirates play host to South Carolina on Saturday at 7:30 p.m.

The consolation game of the tournament turned out to be just a hint of things to come.

although it was halftime before the Lady Spartans really started to turn on the gas against Virginia State. The first half was a dog-fight with the lead changing hands several times before Michigan State took it for good with 6:20 left on a free throw by Lil Preston, making it 30-29.

Prior to that, Virginia State had led by as many as six points, the last time at 25-19 just five minutes before Michigan State took the lead. The Lady Spartans tied it up twice before finally gaining the lead and pushing out to a six-point lead at 38-32.

But the Trojanettes rallied to pull back within one late in the half. In fact, with 1:39 left, a basket by Pam Rose trimmed it to 40-39 and it looked like the close game would keep right on going.

But right then, Michigan State made the moves that broke it open. Kathleen Edsall hit an 18-footer, and followed that up a few moments later with two free throws. Brenda Jezowski then scored on a fast break with four seconds left to run it out to 46-39 at intermission.

The second half turned it into a rout. Virginia State managed only 19 points in the half, and never could get back into the flow of the contest after MSU scored the first eight points of the half to turn the lead out to 15-54-39.

From there on, it was a steady pull away, to the final 46-point victory.

DHC Opens District Play Tonight

LITTLEFIELD — Riding the crest of a nine-game winning streak, D.H. Conley squares off against Southwest Edgecombe tonight in an opening round game in the District II 3-A playoffs.

The Vikings, who enter tonight's game having won 11 of their last 12 games, are coming off a 59-57 win over West Carteret to win the Coastal Conference tournament title. DHC, the CC's #1 seed, is 16-8 overall.

Southwest Edgecombe, the Eastern Carolina Conference's #4 seed, has not played since last Monday when the Cougars lost to Farmville Central, 48-46, in the opening round of the ECC tournament. SWE is 6-18.

Game time is 8:30. In other District II first-round games tonight, D.H. Conley's girls will meet Ayden-Grifton at 5:30 and unbeaten while at 7 p.m. Southwest Edgecombe's girls will face North Lenoir.

The District II tournament is being held at Ayden-Grifton.

Also tonight, Greenville Rose travels to Northern Nash in the first round of the Big East Conference tournament.

The Rampants, 12-10 during the regular season, carry a three-game winning streak into the 7:30 p.m. game. Rose finished in a three-way tie for fourth place with a 6-8 league record but in a drew the #6 seed.

Northern Nash finished third in the conference with a 10-4 record. The Knights were 18-5 overall.

In Sunday's Daily Reflector, a story on the District II tournament said North Lenoir would be playing North Pitt tonight. The Panthers do not play tonight, but instead will open district play Tuesday night at 8:30.

Watson Has Answer For Critics

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tom Watson was tired of being asked if he was tired, why his putts didn't go in the hole, and why he didn't make approaches to the green that were close to the pin.

After eight months of not winning a tournament, Watson silenced his critics Sunday. He finally won a Tournament Players Association event, and he had an explanation.

"I got lucky," said Watson after sinking a 30-foot birdie putt that gave him a sudden-death playoff victory over Johnny Miller in the $300,000 Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open golf tournament. "I actually got lucky on three holes."

So, for a while, Watson won't have to answer questions about his problems. The leading money-winner on the men's tour for five straight years starting in 1976, Watson beat Miller on the third extra hole. His long putt gave him a birdie and ended the first Los Angeles Open playoff in 32 years.

It provided Watson with the $54,000 first prize while Miller took home $32,400 for finishing second.

Watson and Miller deadlocked at 271 for the regulation 72 holes at the par 35-36-71, 7,029-yard Riviera Country Club course. Watson had a 67 in the final round to Miller's 69.

The total score was one shot off the tournament record of 270 established by Miller last year. Miller could have wrapped up his second straight title had he not bogeyed the 17th and 18th holes.

The pros have now finished up their Western tour with no double winner — Miller missed his chance to become the only one. Now they move to Miami, Fla., and start up the East Coast with the Doral-Eastern Open this week.

Had Miller not bogeyed his final two holes, he would have become the first since Ben Hogan to win the tournament twice in a row at Riviera. Now, he'll have to wait.

Because the PGA Tournament is at Riviera next year, the Los Angeles Open will be switched to Rancho Park, a Los Angeles city course. It comes back to the rugged Riviera course for 1984 and 1985.

Tom Wieskopf, with a 73, was third at 275. He earned $20,400. Wieskopf entered the final round tied for the lead with Miller but couldn't keep pace.

Bill Rogers and Lennie Clements tied for fourth place at 276 and earned $13,200 each.

While Watson gladly met with reporters after the tournament, Miller skipped his assignment. After being available all week, he suddenly decided he did not want to discuss his round with members of the press.

Watson started the final round two strokes behind Miller and Wieskopf, but caught up rapidly as the two faded.

Watson made putts of 30 and 20 feet to move him up early in the day.

Soccer Club Beaten

GOLDSBORO — The Goldsboro Soccer Club, led by Jake Jacobs' two goals, handily defeated the Jowi Sailboat Support Systems Soccer Club, 7-1, Sunday afternoon.

The Jowi Club's lone goal came late in the second half on a penalty kick by Chris Salt.

Don Benton, Dave Hine, Myo Chang, Roland Reeves and Phil Haddock all had one goal for Goldsboro.

McLendon Sixth Rosette To Qualify For State Meet

GREENSBORO — Jenny Johnsrude finished second all-around and Peggy Becker third and the Greenville Rosettes qualified their sixth gymnasts for state competition here Sunday at a sectional class 2 gymnastics meet.

Johnsrude, competing in the 15 and over age group, finished with an all-around score of 62.0 to finish second. She was first on the vault with a 17.30 and the floor exercise with a 16.35 and second on the uneven bars with a 15.15.

Becker was second on the floor exercise with a 17.3 and had an all-around score of 62.90 for second place in the 12-to-14 age group.

Ginger McLendon, competing in the 15 and over age group, qualified for the state meet with third on the floor exercise (16.15) and fourth on the balance beam (14.35).

McLendon became the sixth team member to qualify for the state meet — the required minimum for the Rosettes to qualify for the team competition at the state gymnastics meet.

McLendon's third place gave the Rosettes a sweep of the top three places on the floor exercise in the 15 and over age group.

Also Sunday, Debbie Sigler had an 8.8 on the uneven bars — the highest score on the compulsories at the meet. She finished with a 16.8 score on the bars.

Caroline Lee was second on the floor exercise (16.3) and fourth on the vault (16.3).

Dixon-Warren Win

Woody Dixon and Ester Warren won 22 of 28 games to easily capture the annual Frostbite Mixed Doubles Tennis Tournament this past weekend at the River Birch Tennis Center.

Runnersup were the teams of Al King and Gloria Carawan and Steve Creech and Eleanor Blackwell. Both teams won 17 of 28 games.

The tournament is sponsored by the Greenville Tennis Club.

Wake's Groh To Speak At Luncheon

Wake Forest football coach Al Groh will be the featured speaker at the regular meeting of the Greenville Sports Club Tuesday at noon at the Ramada Inn.

Groh came to Wake from Texas Tech last January as defensive coordinator under then-head coach John Mackovic. Before becoming Deacon head coach this past fall he coached at the Air Force Academy, the U.S. Military Academy and the University of North Carolina.

The next meeting of the Sports Club will be March 6 when the featured speaker will be ECU strength coach Jeff Johnson.

Arbitration Score: Clubs 12, Players 7

By The Associated Press

The baseball salary arbitration box score shows major league clubs with a 12-7 edge today after pitchers Dave Stieb of the Toronto Blue Jays, Ron Davis of the New York Yankees and Greg Minton of the San Francisco Giants lost their cases over the weekend.

Despite their losses, all three came away with comfortable salaries. Stieb was awarded $250,000 instead of the $350,000 he had asked, Davis will pitch for $300,000 instead of the $575,000 he sought and Minton gets $343,000 instead of the $495,000 he wanted.

"I can't believe it," Stieb said of his arbitration loss. "I thought everything had gone in my favor. There's no way I should have lost."

Stieb was 11-10, the first Blue Jay pitcher to post a winning record, with a 3.18 earned run average last season.

Davis, who was 4-5 with six saves and a 2.71 ERA last year, said he was not angry at losing his arbitration, just disappointed.

"I never wanted to go to arbitration," he said. "The club forced me to go. They made only one offer."

The Yankees' lone offer reportedly was $225,000, so by requesting arbitration, Davis increased that figure by $75,000 even though he lost his case.

"I'm a loyal person. I'll pitch just as hard for $300,000 as I would have for $755,000," he said, "and just as hard as I did when I was making $21,000."

Minton set a club record with 21 saves last season when he posted a 4-5 record and 2.89 ERA, appearing in 55 of the Giants' 111 games. The arbitration decision nearly doubled his 1981 salary of $180,000, awarded when he lost another arbitration hearing last year.

Just before the rulings on the three pitchers were announced, Seattle second baseman Julio Cruz broke a personal two-year arbitration losing streak.

Cruz was awarded $375,000, $175,000 more than the Mariners wanted to pay him. The club had prevailed in two previous arbitrations and General Manager Danny O'Brien thought that streak should have remained intact.

"We thought our case was much stronger," O'Brien said. "Now the pressure is on Julio. He has been very unhappy losing the past two years. Now we'll see how a happy second baseman plays."

Besides Stieb, Davis and Minton, arbitration losers this year have outfielder Bob Molinaro and shortstop Bill Almon of the Chicago White Sox, pitcher Frank Pastore of the Cincinnati Reds, pitcher Jack Morris of the Detroit Tigers, second baseman Pump Wills of the Texas Rangers, pitcher Dan Quisenberry and infielder Jamie Quirk of the Kansas City Royals, pitcher Don Aase of the California Angels and first baseman Dave Revering of the New York Yankees.

Ivan Lendl lies down in distress after missing a crucial shot in the third set of his match against Yannick Noah. Noah went on to defeat Lendl 3-6, 6-2, 7-5 to win the $200,000 Congleum Classic Tennis Tournament Sunday. (AP Laserphoto)

Bench Spurs Bucks By Kings, 110-104

Milwaukee Wins 12th Straight

By The Associated Press
When the Milwaukee Bucks get in trouble, Coach Don Nelson has a way to dig deep to find something extra.

No, Nelson doesn't have a big bag of tricks. He just has the kind of bench that you need to win 12 National Basketball Association games in a row, including a 110-104 victory Sunday over Kansas City.

All-star guard Sidney Moncrief, who leads Milwaukee in scoring, rebounding and assists, didn't play against the Kings because of the flu. But sharpshooter Brian Winters started in his place, scoring 15 points, including eight in third quarter when the Bucks overcame a 52-48 halftime deficit to go ahead 78-76.

"Sidney not playing was a real surprise to me," said Nelson. "I didn't know it until this morning. We're used to playing with him. He's only missed two games all season, so it was different without him."

"We played against the best team in basketball, in my opinion," said Kings Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons. "Absolutely the best defensive team in basketball... they've been on the doorstep for three straight years and now I think they're ready to break through."

The Bucks, who share the best record in the NBA at 39-14 with Philadelphia, got 28 points from Marques Johnson.

But it was the Bucks' depth that told the story, as six of the 10 players who saw action scored in double figures.

In the final period, subs Alton Lister and Pat Cummings were in the lineup, and Cummings scored eight of his 13 points.

"The unit I had in there was clicking and getting the job done so I just kept them in there," said Nelson. "I don't usually keep (starting center Bob) Lanier on the bench that much, but the guys in there were playing well. They're all reserves, which makes it nice."

There were 58 turnovers in the game, 30 by Milwaukee, but Kansas City hit only 20 of 34 free throws.

"I would say two things hurt us down the line," said Fitzsimmons. "First, turnovers, which Milwaukee forced. Secondly, free throws, and we have nobody to blame but ourselves."

Lakers 132, Nuggets 131
Los Angeles scored the final five points of the game to pass Denver.

The Nuggets went ahead 131-127 with 1:55 to go on a basket by Alex English, who led all scorers with 34 points.

But two free throws by Michael Cooper and a three-point play by Jamaal Wilkes with 27 seconds left put the Lakers on top.

Norm Nixon and Earvin "Magic" Johnson led Los Angeles with 26 and 25 points, respectively, while Dan Issel had 31 for Denver.

76ers 109, Suns 102
Philadelphia won its ninth straight game as Julius Erving scored 28 points, grabbed eight rebounds, and made seven steals against Phoenix.

The two teams were tied at 73 late in the third period before a 9-2 streak gave the 76ers an 82-75 lead going into the final 12 minutes.

Philadelphia extended its lead to 15 points with 7:42 remaining before Phoenix made a late run that cut the margin to four, 102-98, with 1:09 left.

Dennis Johnson led the Suns with 25 points, 10 rebounds and seven assists.

Knicks 122, Rockets 106
Randy Smith scored 26 points and combined with Michael Ray Richardson to lead a second-quarter rally that brought New York from nine points behind Houston to nine points ahead.

Pacers 118, Nets
Louis Orr scored 20 points and seven other Indiana players were in double figures against New Jersey.

Orr scored 10 of his points in the first seven minutes, giving Indiana a lead it never relinquished.

Buck Williams led the Nets with 22 points.

Mavericks 113, Bulls 97
Brad Davis, who normally concentrates on playmaking, scored a career-high 32 points and added seven steals and nine assists to lead Dallas over Chicago.

Davis hit 12 of 13 shots from the field in the second half, while forward Sam Vincent collected 17 of his 21 points in the first two periods.

Chicago, which lost for the 11th time in 12 games, got 22 points from Reggie Theus.

SuperSonics 103, Celtics 100
Gus Williams scored 34 points, including two free throws with three seconds left, as Seattle edged Boston. The Celtics trailed 63-43 at halftime but rushed back to take a 100-99 lead with 39 seconds left when Robert Parish scored on a dunk. Parish scored 21 of his 34 points in the second half.

But with 21 seconds left, Parish fouled Seattle's Jack Sikma and Sikma sank both free throws. With 10 seconds left, Sikma deflected Larry Bird's pass. Bird recovered the ball and missed a baseline jumper, which Sikma rebounded.

Hawks 109, Trail Blazers 97
Eddie Johnson scored 16 of his game-high 27 points in the fourth quarter as Atlanta came from behind to beat Portland. The Hawks trailed 64-47 at halftime, but held the Blazers to just 33 points in the second half as Johnson and John Drew came alive on offense.

The victory was the fourth straight on the road for the Hawks.

lap. Then, all three of the cars ahead of him pitted for tires and fuel, but Marcis kept going.

"The car was working very good all day," Marcis explained, "but that particular set of tires was very loose and I was losing ground. When Joe had his misfortune, I knew I had to keep on going to stay in the same lap with those other guys, then my crew chief Jerry Darling got on the radio and told me, 'Stay out there. Everybody's pitting and you're in the lead.'"

Less than two laps later, with the cars running slowly under the caution flag, the light drizzle that had been falling for about 20 minutes became heavy rain.

"It was very surprising to me that those guys, particularly Richard, pitted right then," Marcis said. "All they had to do was look out the window to see what the weather looked like. But I guess everybody's cars were getting real loose out there and needed tires. And the first reaction when a yellow flag comes out is to dive for the pits and get it taken care of."

Race officials red-flagged the field on the backstretch at the end of lap 250, an that's where the cars stood in single file until the decision was made to call it a day.

"We won it under rain conditions, but we were in contention all day, and I felt all along we had a shot at it," said the Wisconsin-born and raised Marcis. "I wouldn't pray for rain out there, with all those people in the stands, but when I got out of the car, I told a few of those guys (drivers) that if the Good Lord ever wanted to help an independent, this was the time."

Petty, who suffered a badly sprained ankle in the previous week's Daytona 500 and drove this race with a hinged cast on his right leg, wound up second. Parsons was third, with Earnhardt fourth and Terry Labonte fifth, one lap down.

Bobby Allison, whose car was practically demolished in an accident during the final session of practice Saturday, ran steadily most of the day and finished eighth — one lap down. His crew had worked until midnight Saturday, then came back to work at 4:30 a.m. Sunday to rebuild the front end of the team's Buick.

Marcis, driving a 1981 Chevrolet Malibu that he called "a real good short track car," averaged 72.914 mph in the shortened race. He picked up the winner's share of $19,495.

Gary Balough, who was one of several race drivers indicted last week for allegedly being part of a narcotics ring, started 11th in the 32-car field.

Weekend Back Home Takes Toll On Bengals

By The Associated Press

It was a long, lost weekend for the LSU Tigers, highlighted by an eight-second stretch which may go down as college basketball's version of boxing's long count.

The scores will merely show that LSU lost 54-53 to Tennessee on Saturday and 66-65 to Wichita State on Sunday, both in the so-called friendly confines of the Tigers' own Assembly Center.

The Bayou Bengals had no one but themselves to blame for Sunday's setback, missing the front end of one-and-one free throw situations four times in the final 3½ minutes before succumbing to Antoine Carr's driving basket with 26 seconds to play.

"We had every opportunity to win the game at the free throw line, but didn't," said LSU Coach Dale Brown. "I think that I can't possibly be irritated, even by less than inferior free throw shooting."

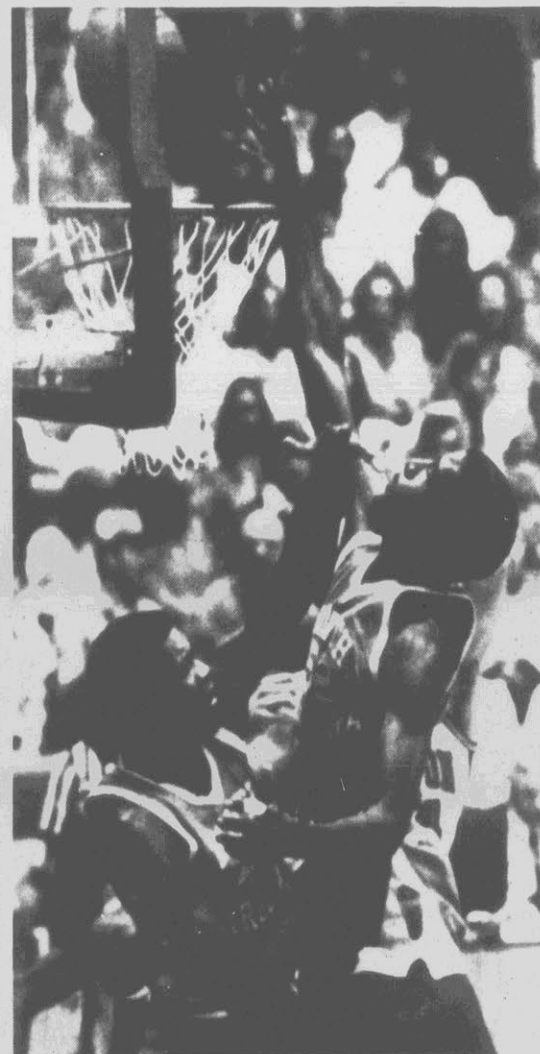

But Brown refused to comment on Saturday's windup when Tennessee's Dan Federmann scored a controversial tip-in basket as the buzzer sounded. More than a half-hour after the stormy finish, LSU Chancellor James Wharton said the school would ask the Southeastern Conference office to order the final eight seconds replayed during next month's SEC Tournament.

Tennessee called a time out after Leonard Mitchell's basket gave LSU a 53-52 lead. Federmann then tipped in the rebound of Steve Ray's shot as the LSU coaching staff surrounded the scorer's bench hollering that the clock hadn't started on time.

After a conference among Brown, Tennessee Coach Don DeVoe and the game officials, the winning Vols left the arena. DeVoe said one of the officials told him the game was over. "When he said that, that was it," DeVoe said.

"The Tennessee team has dressed and left," Wharton reported shortly thereafter. "The Tennessee coach refuses to replay the game. We are not going to settle this thing today. Emotions are too high."

When the Vols put the ball in play under the LSU basket, the clock apparently didn't start for several seconds until a Tennessee player was almost at midcourt. Larry Jones, LSU's interim athletic director, reported that time-keeper Tom Henry "punched it (the clock) and it didn't start. That's what he said."

The triumph kept Tennessee alone atop the SEC at 13-3 to 12-4 for 10th-ranked Kentucky, a 73-69 winner over Vanderbilt. A victory would have left LSU one game off the pace and tied with 19th-ranked Alabama, which nipped Florida 70-69.

The Top Ten
For the second time in 10 days, N.C. State pushed Virginia to the limit but the Cavaliers, 26-1, prevailed thanks to a pair of free throws and a blocked shot by Ralph Sampson in the final 24 seconds.

North Carolina's Jimmy Black made eight consecutive free throws in the closing minutes to help the Tar Heels fend off Clemson, which lost to Virginia on a last-second shot a week earlier. "I'd like to say that if Virginia is No. 1 in the nation and North Carolina is No. 2, then we're pretty darn good ourselves," said Clemson Coach Bill Foster.

Georgetown handed Missouri its second setback of the season as Eric Floyd scored 16 points and freshman Patrick Ewing won the battle of big men from Missouri junior Steve Stipanovich.

Rob Holbrook and A.C. Green combined for 11 points in the final seven minutes to help Oregon State stay ahead of Washington State.

BENNY DELLINGER... of Subway entertains the audience at the Attic with a guitar solo.

Local Listeners Enjoyed Subway

"A very new band who is progressing very rapidly! They put on a great show and hold the audiences' attention. Very exciting!" said Mike McDermott, an ECU student from Ayden.

"Excellent! I enjoy them because they play their own style of music. I hope they come back to Greenville soon!" said Raleigh Bland of Greenville.

These two rock-and-roll-lovers are speaking of 'Subway,' a new group which attracted a large and responsive audience at the Attic last week. Subway's vocally oriented music held the audiences' undivided attention to the last song — or what some thought was the last song — because as Subway said goodbye, the audience immediately insisted on an encore. Two more songs were played and the crowd went wild.

Subway, which has only been together two and a half years, consists of five members: Joel Makison, drums; Charlie Johnson, bass; Wayne Ryan, keyboard; Benny Dellinger, lead guitar; and David Wright, vocals.

Although the band tours a number of southeastern states, all the members agree that Greenville is their favorite place to play. "We love playing in Greenville! The audience is great!" said Ryan.

It seems Subway liked the Greenville audience, but how did the Greenville audience feel about Subway?

"Congratulations to Subway! I haven't heard better in a long time!" said Jan Morrison of Greenville.

According to Theresa Kemmer of Fayetteville, "I came here from Fayetteville just to hear Subway. I love them and I've been listening to them since they first got together!"

"One of the better bands to come around because they don't play the same old southern rock," said Scott Larson of San Francisco.

Wanda Jones, an ECU student, said she thinks they're fantastic and "they're all foxes!"

"Subway's super — more than super — they're the best band that has ever played here!" said Beth Carlson of Greenville.

John Rich of Greenville thinks "a band this good should be against the law!"

Well, it looks as though the feelings were mutual.

Liz Found Little Room With John

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Elizabeth Taylor says there was no place for her in the world of her husband, Sen. John Warner, and while she "really loved" him, she found life with him lonely and without meaning.

In an interview with Life magazine, Miss Taylor said that "being a senator's wife is not easy. It's very lonely. I wouldn't wish it on anyone."

The actress and her sixth husband, a Virginia Republican, announced they were separating Dec. 21.

She said she had offered to help Warner in his work, but was rebuffed.

"I would have done anything — licked stamps, typed speeches, run errands," she said, but added that she was told instead to go home.

While she "wanted to be the best wife anybody ever had" and wanted her marriage "to be a life-long run,"

A Review

'The Border' Is Tainted By Why

"The Border," a Universal production now playing at Plitt Theater, is a film that leaves one asking whys. Why was a movie with such fine potential so badly muddled? Why was the early promise of intriguing relationships between people hungry for compassion constantly thrust aside in favor of cheap melodramatic plot contrivances and gratuitous violence?

What might have been a first-rate film never develops — an unfortunate situation, as there's much that is commendable in this sometimes sharply focused, more often distorted and ambiguous story that deals basically with a timely issue — the illegal entry of Mexicans into the U.S. and the emotional strains this problem creates on both sides of the border.

Jack Nicholson strives to give credence to the role of the central figure, Charlie Smith, a man who reluctantly, because of his wife's insistent urging, leaves the park service to become a member of the border patrol force in El Paso, Texas. But not even an actor of Nicholson's talent can fulfill the ever shifting focus of character interpretation demanded of the splintered role.

Elpidia Carrillo, a young actress with an exceptional, madonna-like beauty, is assigned the most incisive role in the film — that of a nameless young mother on the surface resigned to the cruel buffeting of fate. Adversity has clearly given her an inner strength, a will to survive. Accompanied by her infant child and an engaging teen-age brother, she attempts time after time to cross the border, quietly refusing to despair. Her performance is one marked by grace and dignity.

Charlie's wife, Marcie, is played to the dumb broad hilt by Valerie Perrine. Her role is a coarse, gritty contrast to the instinctive gentleness of the Mexican woman. Marcie is self-indulgent, insidiously aggressive in her greed, dedicated to the proposition that happiness lies in the acquisition of gaudy trappings for her dream house. In moments of fear that she may be losing Charlie's devotion, she falls back on the allurements of sex as the compensation for all her shortcomings. She is despicable, yet somehow pathetic.

The major, insurmountable shortcomings of "The Border" rest squarely on the cumbersome script. If the story had been pared to the fundamentals of the emotional relationships of the three principals, "The Border" could have conceivably emerged as a powerful study of human conflicts framed within the broader scope of conflicts generated by the illegal alien entry problem.

Instead, the ultimate product is a film that attempts to travel with too much story baggage in several directions at once and gets nowhere much in the laborious process. (It was scripted by three writers — Deric Washburn, Walon Green and David Freeman — which raises the question of whether too many cooks is good for the broth.)

Granted, there may be corruption among border officials, but not even the most cynical will accept the extent of callous corruption depicted in the ranks of the border patrol, a widespread corruption involving wet back slave traffic and wanton murder. Equally unacceptable is the contrived situation in which Charlie Smith is cast as the lone hero who must, through one very implausible act of rescue, then by the expedient of a violent outburst of bloodshed, counter the evil within the ranks of the brotherhood of border patrol men. The carnage is patently at odds with the mainstream of caring that runs through the story, eventually negating the admirable achievements in the film.

Ry Gooder's musical score is disappointingly short on Mexican-American flavor, and much of the outdoor footage in Ric Waite's cinematography is pale and uninspiring.

On the brighter side of the coin, there are some real pluses. The opening scenes of a Mexican church devastated by earthquake; shots of ragged groups of children and young people wandering lost in the ruins; the operatic treatment of crowd scenes; and the wistful dreams of opportunities awaiting north of the Rio Grande, are symbolically superb. These early scenes succinctly capsule Mexico's dilemma of a booming population and a dearth of jobs for this human surplus.

Brief vignettes supplied by minor characters and a host of extras are consistently sensitive and appealing. Judging from "The Border," it can reasonably be said that Mexicans — or persons of Spanish extract — are remarkably gifted with a natural flair for acting.

As an entity, "The Border" falls far short of being the rewarding film it could and should have been. Yet, there's enough of real merit that shines through the chaos of too many story threads to make it worth seeing.

Suzanne Relates Difficult Time

NEW YORK (AP) — Suzanne Somers, fired from ABC's "Three's Company" 16 months ago in a contract dispute, says her time away from television was "a difficult period of growth."

Being sacked from the popular show after demanding $150,000 per episode was a saddening experience, Miss Somers said in an interview with People magazine.

But now, thanks to encouragement from her husband, Alan Hamel, she says she feels "stronger than ever."

She is trying for a comeback with a CBS special to be broadcast tonight. In the hour-long program she will be strutting and singing to 6,000 sailors aboard the USS Ranger.

A Legend In His Own Time

George Washington was born 250 years ago today and for the last 200 years Americans have commemorated the event. In 1782, his troops celebrated his 50th birthday, while the Revolutionary War was still going on. Washington was so popular that some thought he could have taken over the country during the last turbulent years of the war. One colonel even suggested he become king. Twice he was elected President — both times unanimously. Although almost worshipped by his countrymen, he didn't always get the royal treatment. He had to borrow 600 pounds to pay his own way to the first inauguration, and after taking office had to pay his own rent at the first Presidential mansion.

DO YOU KNOW — In what city did the first inauguration take place?

FRIDAY'S ANSWER — In 1961 Yuri Gagarin of Russia became the first man to orbit earth.

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, FEB. 23, 1982

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day to put things in the right order, including matters that have to do with your home, and conditions will run more smoothly in the days ahead. You can gain your aims now.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You have to give more thought and attention to home affairs if they are to work out more satisfactory. Be logical.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You can handle business matters efficiently now by getting an early start. Engage in favorite hobby with friends.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) A good day to do important work that will help you get ahead faster. The evening is fine for the romantic side of life.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Pursue what is uppermost on your mind and gain the support of associates in a new project.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) If you try to please higher-ups, you can advance more quickly now and add to present prestige. Show more devotion to loved one.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Personal affairs can be handled early in the day for best results. Evening is the best time to engage in new activities.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Handle conditions that are annoying and forget the fun side of life for the present. Sidelstep one who is argumentative.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Study new moves you want to make where career is concerned. Obtain the information you need from the right sources.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Carrying through with responsibilities you have assumed is fine. Give more attention to loved one who is downhearted.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Try to please an associate who is depending on you now. Plan how to gain your goals more readily.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Take care of routine duties early in the day so that you can have a leisurely and happy evening with family members.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Contacting those who can help you become more successful is the best way to proceed now. Strive for happiness.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be instilled with a romantic nature that will be pleasing to others. Send to the right schools so that your progeny will be able to make a fine mark in the world. The theater, politics and selling are all fine here.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Libya Jails French Family For 'Spying'

PARIS (AP) — Friends and neighbors of a French family jailed for life in Libya for allegedly spying for the United States and Israel say they plan to demonstrate outside the Libyan Embassy here to protest the action.

French officials said a Libyan court Sunday sentenced Denise Dupont, 57, and her sons Alain, 24, and Jean-Claude, 20, on charges of spying and then put the mother and younger son in a mental hospital for "simple-mindedness."

Friends of the family here said the Libyan spy charges were "ludicrous."

"They couldn't even take a bus or a train alone," said Robert Fromont, a friend of the Duponts who had pressed for their release since their arrest 22 months ago.

"It would be laughable if the situation wasn't so serious," Fremont said.

Mrs. Dupont and her younger son were being held in a psychiatric hospital in Tripoli because of signs of simple-mindedness, according to a French Embassy official there who asked not to be identified. He said Alain Dupont was in prison.

"It's a very sad affair and we can't explain it," the embassy official said. "Each country has its own form of justice, but this seems to be a negation of simple human rights. These were poor, helpless people. We have done everything to get them out."

French officials said the family arrived in Libya in January 1980 on three-month tourist visas. The sons were illegally employed in a Tripoli paint company, and all three Duponts were arrested on April 28, 1980, after a routine identification check, the officials said.

French authorities in Paris said they were awaiting an explanation from Libyan officials.

Mardi Gras Parades Roll To Tuesday

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Even behind his Mardi Gras disguise, Gene Orgeron was easy to recognize among the masked men throwing beads and doubloons from the floats of the Poseidon parade. He can't hide — he's too generous.

"Gene Orgeron throws like nobody else," said Barney Mahler, a friend who often rides Orgeron's $30,000 float in a Mardi Gras parade.

The Krewes of Poseidon, a Jefferson Parish organization, was one of 10 parades that rolled through the streets of New Orleans and surrounding parishes Sunday as the Carnival season continued toward its climax on Tuesday.

Orgeron "doesn't believe in breaking open a bag of beads," Mahler said. "Me, I like to break open a pack and throw it up with two hands and watch the people scramble. But Gene, he throws whole bags, a gross at a time."

The trinkets tossed by people atop the floats are a big hit among Mardi Gras parade-goers. The throws include silver dollar-sized aluminum coins called doubloons and brightly colored plastic beads.

The day's events climaxed with the parade of the Krewes of Bacchus, a lavish affair that features a celebrity as parade king and a big drunk dinosaur called the Bacchusaurus. This year's king was comedian Dom DeLuise.

The Bacchus parade is put on by the business and financial community of New Orleans. Poseidon's krewes members, on the other hand, are just plain folks. Riding companions on one float this year included a mailman, judge, receptionist, priest and Jefferson Parish councilman.

"A cross section of Poseidon is a cross section of the West Bank," insisted Lloyd Giardina, the councilman.

"On the West Bank you can't tell a guy's financial position by the way he dresses and talks. Everybody in Poseidon might look the same — jeans, regular open shirt — but I'm telling you some of those guys have grits — serious grits."

Orgeron, for example, his fleet of tugboats supports his gold nugget-encrusted watch and customized van air-brushed with scenes of Louisiana State University football glory.

"I'm not a fisherman. I don't hunt. This is what I love to do. I love LSU and I love to ride at Mardi Gras," he said.

"If I could, I'd ride every parade in the city, and then ride in Houma (La.), too."

He said he expected to toss out 350 to 400 gross of beads, which sell for $6 a gross. To make sure he had enough room for his beads and friends, he commissioned the $30,000 float, which he rents to the krewes for $1 a year.

He does get his "throws" wholesale — he's part-owner of a store that sells the beads and other items to Carnival parade riders.

"The float we built last year could have carried 24 people. We rolled with 14 because of the beads we carried. Every man on the float was riding with maybe 200 gross," said Mahler.

"That's about $1,200 on the average — and that doesn't count the doubloons."

Ex-Ambassador Eyes Politics

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former ambassador and Cabinet member Patricia Roberts Harris is leaning closer toward making a race for the mayor's office in the nation's capital.

The long-time Democratic Party activist, who held two Cabinet posts in the Carter administration, last week allowed a campaign committee to be formed on her behalf for the Sept. 14 primary. She also has been hinting that she will announce her candidacy within the next few weeks.

Mrs. Harris, 57, says she has considered running for mayor because of her conviction that Washington doesn't function as well as it could. It would be her first election campaign.

Preparing Release Of Evidence On Chemical War

By BARTO REPPERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is preparing to make public portions of a highly classified intelligence report presenting "hard evidence" that the Soviet Union used chemical warfare in Indochina and Afghanistan, according to U.S. officials.

The top-secret "National Intelligence Estimate," the sources said, contains material to back up U.S. charges that thousands of people have been killed in attacks with Soviet-supplied chemical weapons, including so-called "yellow rain."

"A lot of this evidence is very grotesque stuff," said one official, who declined to be identified.

The sources said a declassified version of the CIA-compiled intelligence estimate will be released within the next several weeks.

A second U.S. official, who also requested anonymity, said he expects the detailed material on Soviet involvement with chemical warfare will play a key role in persuading Congress to approve President Reagan's request for new binary nerve gas weapons for American forces.

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. apparently was referring to the CIA report when he asserted recently that the United States has new and "incontrovertible evidence" that the Soviets are using chemical weapons in Afghanistan, Laos and Cambodia.

Such chemical agents have killed "scores of thousands of non-combatants in all three target areas," Haig said in a television interview Feb. 14.

Haig's remarks indicated that the intelligence estimate — and possibly the forthcoming declassified version as well — may include physical evidence to confirm the use of specific chemical agents in Afghanistan.

Previously, administration officials have said publicly that while the United States has actual samples of deadly "yellow rain" from Cambodia and Laos, such convincing physical evidence had not yet been obtained from Soviet-occupied Afghanistan.

One official described the classified report as a two-volume document, several hundred pages long, which includes a variety of charts, tables and indexes summarizing available evidence on chemical warfare.

The "sanitized" version, this source said, will contain "everything that you've ever wanted to know about yellow rain — and that we can tell you without compromising sources or methods."

"Yellow rain" refers to a type of Soviet chemical agent released from airplanes as a yellow powder that floats to the ground. Symptoms resulting from exposure to it include dizziness, severe itching or tingling of skin with small blisters, nausea, choking, vomiting of blood, shock and death.

The intelligence report is said to cite several different estimates — ranging from 5,000 to more than 30,000 — on the number of fatalities caused by chemical attacks in Afghanistan and Southeast Asia.

CIA spokesman Dale Peterson declined to comment on the report.

In the face of mounting Western concern, the Soviets have consistently denied using chemical weapons. Moscow has dismissed U.S. charges as propaganda aimed at deflecting world attention away from American chemical warfare efforts.

Preparation of the U.S. intelligence estimate began after Haig disclosed in a speech Sept. 13 in West Berlin that the United States had preliminary evidence pointing to the use of "unlawful" chemical weapons.

Critics in this country and elsewhere insisted that the charges should be backed up with more detail.

In November, Richard Burt, director of the State Department's Bureau of Politico-Military Affairs, said laboratory tests had found that yellow rain samples from Cambodia and Laos contained high concentrations of trichothecene mycotoxins, potent poisons produced by certain types of fungi.

"We now have the smoking gun" to verify chemical warfare in Indochina, Burt told a Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee. In Afghanistan, he said, reports indicate the use of substances including nerve gas and non-lethal incapacitants such as tear gas.

But Burt added that there are "other chemical warfare agents" in use in Southeast Asia and Afghanistan which "we have yet to identify."

On Feb. 8, President Reagan officially notified Congress that the administration intends to resume production of chemical weapons. In his 1983 Pentagon budget, Reagan proposed spending $705 million for chemical programs, compared to $532 million in the current budget.

Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger warned in his annual report to Congress that the Soviet Union is "much better prepared" than the United States for waging chemical warfare.

The new binary nerve gas weapons — considered safer to store and handle because the chemical components of the gas would be mixed together only when a warhead is actually fired — are to be manufactured at the Army's Pine Bluff, Ark., arsenal.

Opponents of the program came within two votes in the Senate last year of defeating a $20 million request to install production equipment at the Pine Bluff plant.

Royal Tomb

LONDON (AP) — A British archeological team has uncovered the tomb of Egyptian Princess Tia, sister of Ramses II, the Sunday Telegraph reports in a dispatch from Cairo.

Tia's brother is known as the builder of the great temple of Abu Simbel, and as the pharaoh whose oppression of the Jews led to their exodus from Egypt under his successor, Merneptan.

The newspaper says Princess Tia's tomb was discovered by Geoffrey Martin, a professor of Egyptian archeology at London University, a few miles south of Cairo.

Debate Plan For Merger

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Plans to merge the departments of botany and zoology to form a biology department have sparked a bitter debate at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Students are concerned they won't be able to get the degrees they want, despite assurances from the administration.

"To destroy these two departments, leaving the first state university without botany and zoology, would be unthinkable," said a letter sent by an anonymous student to newspapers across the state.

The dispute has pitted faculty member against faculty member and the faculty against the deans and chancellor.

It is unusual to merge two long-standing university departments — especially when one, botany, is nationally recognized.

The dispute is partly a contest between traditional fields and the new research areas of molecular and cellular biology, with their well publicized tools of gene splicing and cloning.

But botanists say it's a question of survival. They have seen their numbers dwindle in recent years with opportunities shrinking at most universities.

"Professional disagreement has become personal animosity," said Prof. Lawrence Gilbert, chairman of the zoology department and the man expected to be chairman of the combined department.

The dispute is also procedural. The administration went ahead with the merger without soliciting formal votes from the individual departments, which some faculty members said should have been normal procedure.
