

Inflation Further Slowed

By SALLY JACOBSEN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite surging food prices, inflation in January rose at its slowest pace since the summer of 1980 — an annual rate of 3.5 percent, the government said today.

Analysts, in advance of today's report, attributed the overall slowdown mostly to the continuing recession, but cautioned that the low January figure would likely pick up somewhat later in the year.

The Labor Department said in its new report that the Consumer Price Index rose a seasonally adjusted 0.3 percent last month, the smallest increase since the 0.1 percent of July 1980. If the January figure held steady for 12 straight months, the annual figure would be 3.5 percent.

The new monthly calculation was slightly better than the 0.4 percent increase of December and the 0.5 percent of November.

For all of 1981, inflation rose 8.9 percent, well below the 12.4 percent of 1980 and the smallest increase in four years.

Economists are predicting an even lower rate for all of 1982, barring an unforeseen disaster, such as a crop failure or a major interruption in oil imports. Most predictions foresee inflation this year averaging 6 percent to 7 percent.

The rate for the year, some economists say, depends largely on the result of wage negotiations that are already under way or set to start. If labor contracts negotiated this year have only modest wage hikes, then inflation could be lower for several years to come, analysts say.

The government's new report said the January slowdown was helped by a sharp drop in gasoline prices, the smallest rise in used car prices in almost two years and a decline in clothing costs.

Housing costs, led by a 0.4 percent drop in prices for homes, rose a modest 0.3 percent, continuing a trend began in the fall. Mortgage interest rates went up a small 0.2 percent.

Rent was up 0.6 percent, less than in recent months, but fuel and other utility bills jumped 1.1 percent, the report said.

Food costs rose 0.7 percent last month, following small advances of 0.1 percent in each of the previous two months.

Prices of fresh vegetables soared 16.8 percent. Prices for sugar, non-alcoholic beverages, and cereal and bakery products also rose, but the costs for meat, poultry, fish and eggs overall fell 0.3 percent.

Actually, beef and egg prices fell to offset rises in the prices of pork, poultry and fish.

The report also said:

—Prices for transportation were off 0.2 percent after a 0.6 percent rise in December. Gasoline prices tumbled 1.7 percent after rising 0.5 percent in the previous month and 0.8 percent in November. Used car prices were up a small 0.3 percent, the smallest advance in 19 months. New car prices, reflecting many manufacturers' rebates, were down 0.1 percent after a 0.8 percent rise in December.

—Medical care costs advanced 0.8 percent, just about in line with the previously monthly increases. Charges for hospital and other medical care services were up 1.8 percent, while physicians' fees rose 0.8 percent.

—Apparel costs were down 0.1 percent after a 0.1 percent increase in December. Price declines were reported for women's and girls' clothing and for shoes, but prices rose for men's and boys' apparel.

The cost of entertainment was up 0.7 percent, ahead of the 0.3 percent advance in December but a little under the 0.8 percent increases of the three previous months.

All the figures were adjusted for seasonal variations. With this report, the department recalculated certain seasonal adjustments to reflect changes in 1981. This can account for some of the monthly changes reported previously.

In addition, the overall annual rate announced by the Labor Department is based on a more specific figure than the monthly calculation the department makes available.

The housing component of the index has been widely criticized for overstating the effect of increases or decreases in home prices and financing because those factors are so heavily weighted.

Mexico Keeps Silence Caribbean Aid Unveiled

By The Associated Press
President Reagan's Caribbean aid plan brought cautious praise from Panama, Costa Rica and Honduras and the expected attack from Nicaragua, but Mexico, a potential contributing partner, remained silent.

Reagan unveiled the proposal Wednesday in a speech to the Organization of American States. He called for $350 million in addition to the $474.9 million appropriated this year for 17 economically troubled nations in Central America and the Caribbean — with most of the money earmarked for El Salvador.

Honduras, Costa Rica, Belize, Jamaica and the Dominican Republic.

The president outlined an integrated program of trade, aid and investment for the area, including free trade for some products exported to the United States.

Reagan also proposed increasing grant military assistance by $60 million to $182.1 million for fiscal 1982 to help nations in the area against the "Soviet-backed, Cuban-managed support for violent revolution in Central America."

Reagan excluded Nicaragua, Cuba and Grenada from the program, saying their governments were "totalitarian," repressive, and threats to the region's security.

The oil-rich nations of Mexico and Venezuela previously indicated their willingness to join the United States in a coordinated economic aid plan for the area. But neither had any immediate official reaction to Reagan's initiative.

It appeared likely that Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo would condemn the proposal because of his often stated opposition to military aid, and to the exclusion of any country from the plan.

Lopez Portillo has strongly opposed U.S. attempts to put down leftist expansion in Central America. In a speech Sunday, apparently intended to influence Reagan's plan, he offered to mediate between the United States and the governments of Cuba and Nicaragua, and also suggested ways to end the civil war in El Salvador.

Nicaragua's ambassador to the United Nations Alejandro Bendana Rodriguez, said in New York "it is a pity" that Reagan "was not consistent in his speech ... and excluded Nicaragua."

There was no immediate official comment from Managua. But Nicaragua's Ambassador to the United States Francisco Navarro, speaking on the CBS show "Morning," said he thought the Reagan plan was "a good step the region needs badly" and that Nicaragua would like to be included.

Other Latin American nations reacted favorably but cautiously to the plan, which faces an uncertain fate in Congress because of growing voter resistance to foreign aid at a time of heavy domestic budget cuts.

Panamanian Vice President Ricardo de la Espriella said it represented "a good step toward the solution" of the area's problems.

But he said he wanted to see a "more concrete" outline approved by Congress, which he hoped "would not impose a political price on countries such as ours ..."

President Aristides Rojo

was out of the country and unavailable for comment.

President Rodrigo Carazo of Costa Rica called the program a "practical answer of the United States government to the pressing problems suffered" by Latin American nations.

Jamaican Prime Minister Edward Seaga described the initiative as "bold, historic and far-reaching in concept."

SIGNAL CHANGE COMMENTS ASKED

The city of Greenville has asked Hotline to request comments from citizens relative to the removal of certain traffic signals in the downtown area.

Engineering Department Director Ron Sewell said, "Several months ago, the Engineering Department of the city began an in-depth study to determine the feasibility of removing several traffic signals in the downtown area. Of the 22 intersections investigated, five qualified for removal of signals. These locations were First and Reade, Third and Reade, Third and Evans, Third and Washington and Second and Washington."

Based on actual traffic counts at these locations, it was estimated that the motorists of Greenville would save 17,248 gallons of gasoline per year. Other annual savings include a total of 22,028 hours of sitting at stoplights, and 2,336,400 stops. In addition, the city would save an estimated $5,322 per year in maintenance and operating expenses. Statistically, it appeared there should not be any increase in accidents, and as of this date, a review of the accident reports before and after the signal removal verifies this projection.

"Although the savings are substantial, how the public views these changes is important. Therefore, we would like to receive citizens' comments relative to the removal of these signals. We would like to know whether in their opinions, the concept at any particular intersection should be reactivated, and hear any other comments on this subject."

Sewell asks that comments be sent to Traffic Engineering, P.O. Box 1905, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

Sunbelt and energy boom states, led by oil-rich Alaska, have been pouring their riches into state colleges at a faster rate than inflation during the last two years, according to a new federal study.

But spending per pupil in most other states has either leveled off or declined. The study by the National Institute for Education in Washington found that per pupil spending was down 4 percent nationwide since the 1979-80 school year, to an average of $3,646.

"The purpose of the report," said author D. Kent Halstead, "is to provide each state education system, state residents, and state legislators, with the essential indicators so they can assess their current status and their funding with respect to higher education."

The report made no attempt to analyze the results state-by-state. But interviews with a number of state higher education commissioners suggested that the statistics told more about local economic or demographic conditions than about how seriously each state views its commitment to higher education.

Nevada, for instance, had a 17 percent drop in per pupil spending to $3,154 after inflation. But Dr. Robert Brsi, chancellor of the Nevada Higher Education Commission, insisted the decline reflected sharp growth in student population paralleling the growth in state population in the last 15 years.

State spending on higher education had apparently not kept pace with that growth. Brsi said, "and I am certainly going to take these numbers to the state legislature."

Clyde Ingle, executive director of the Minnesota Higher Education Coordinating Board, said the 16 percent decline in his state's per pupil support to $3,330 reflected a weak local economy, as well as a "deliberate decision" by that state in 1977 to slow higher education spending in anticipation of an enrollment decline.

He added the state wants to shift a bigger share of overall college costs away from the state and onto students in the form of higher tuition. A 25 to 30 percent hike at state schools lies ahead next September.

In Alaska, the federal study said per pupil spending rose 75 percent to $12,712, far and away the most spent of any state as well as the biggest percentage jump.

Dr. George West, vice president of academic affairs for Alaska's statewide university system, said recent construction on 12 of the state's 13 campuses, stepped up research spending and higher administrative and faculty salaries were among reasons for the rise.

Wyoming ranked second in growth rate, with per pupil spending up 28 percent to $6,608. North Dakota was third, up 20 percent to $3,890.

"We've always had a strong commitment to higher education," said John Richardson, North Dakota Commissioner of Higher Education, explaining that oil and gas finds in the state had enabled it to boost spending on state schools. Three faculty pay hikes since 1981 of 11 percent, 9 percent and 8 percent accounted for much of the spending increase, he said.

Other states where per pupil spending rose were Oklahoma, up 18 percent to $3,406; Connecticut, up 14 percent to $3,862; Texas, up 13 percent to $4,334; Hawaii, up 12 percent to $4,662; New Mexico, up 11 percent to $4,320; Georgia, up 10 percent to $4,492; Louisiana, up

Safety Committee Is Appointed

The City Council has approved the appointment of a 10-member ad hoc Committee on Public Safety that will investigate and make recommendations to the governing board relative to the feasibility of establishing a permanent public safety commission.

Dr. Wallace R. Wooles, professor and chairman of the department of pharmacology at the East Carolina University School of Medicine, will serve as chairman of the new committee.

Joining Wooles as committee members will be Mildred Indorf, Dr. John R. Ball, Richard J. McKee, Viola Vines, Dr. E. Jackson Allison Jr., Amos Mills, R. J. Boleman Jr., Dr. Edgar S. Douglas and Mary Roscoe.

In submitting the names for consideration, Wooles stated, "This commission would include as its responsibility the Departments of Police and Fire-Rescue. In determining the possibility of such a commission, we shall carefully look into the present range and level of service offered by each of these departments, the adequacy of the number of personnel, and the facilities and equipment available to carry out their responsibilities, review of budgets, additional needs of each of the departments, consistent with the desired and necessary level of services, and how other cities have approached and solved their public safety obligations."

Wooles said, "We shall also look carefully into the advantages and disadvantages of a proposed Commission on Public Safety to the people of Greenville, each of the departments in question, city government and the people in our surrounding cities and Pitt County."

PCC Gets Good Marks In Survey Of Graduates

A recent statewide survey of graduates and students who attended North Carolina community colleges revealed that Pitt Community College gets "good to excellent marks" from its graduates, according to Dr. William E. Fulford Jr., PCC president.

"Approximately 900 former students and graduates of PCC were mailed survey forms by the department of community colleges, with approximately 50 percent responding," stated Fulford. "The level of satisfaction expressed by the former students and graduates along with the high level of employment in skill areas for which students had received comprehensive training is a positive indication that Pitt Community College continues to provide the training needed by today's employers."

Edgar L. Boyd, dean of students at the college, reported that 91 percent of the PCC students surveyed indicated satisfaction with their total educational experience at PCC. Boyd pointed out that over 50 percent of the former students who attended PCC and 74.4 percent of the graduates said training they received was related to their present occupation.

Overall, 71 percent of all former students surveyed were employed, with 75 percent of the graduates employed. Likewise, 71 percent of those surveyed said they had partially or completely met their objectives.

Dr. Edward B. Bright, PCC dean of instruction, noted that 95 percent of the students surveyed stated that their primary objective in attending PCC was to train for an occupation or to improve existing skills.

Bright also remarked, "Ninety-seven percent of the PCC graduates surveyed rated their occupational training as good or very good."

He added that the report shows 88 percent of the PCC graduates were employed in North Carolina and 96 percent of the drop-outs were employed in the Tar Heel state.

Wedding Vows Said

JAMESVILLE — Lucretia Lynn Langston and Charles Edward Neetz were married Saturday afternoon, Feb. 13, at 5:30 p.m. in the Cedar Branch Baptist Church here.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Paul Weaver. A program of wedding music was presented by Mrs. J.C. Griffen Jr., organist, Robert Langston, soloist, J.C. Griffen Jr., pianist, and Sheri Griffen, flutist.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Langston of Farmville. She was given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Neetz of Holly Hills, Fla.

The bride's honor attendant was Debbie Lancaster of Raleigh and bridesmaids included Jeannie Modlin Bennett of Jamesville, Ann Rankin of Raleigh, cousin of the bride, Terri Terry of DeLand, Fla., Joan Hayes of Houston, Tex. and Janie Newman of Staten Island, N.Y. The flower girl was Meredith Owen of Farmville and the ring bearer was David Parker of Selma.

The best man was Cliff Doerzbacher of Staten Island, N.Y. Ushers included Ray McMahon of Houston, Tex. and Dan McMahon of Daytona Beach, Fla., Mark Langston of DeLand, Fla. and Bruce Langston of Port Orange, Fla., brothers of the bride, and Billy Newman of Staten Island, N.Y.

The bride wore a formal ivory organza gown trimmed in ruffled chantilly lace. The sweetheart neckline was accented with a double stand-up ruffle and the empire bodice was accented with seed pearls and chantilly lace. The long sleeves of lace were trimmed with ruffled cuffs. The skirt was accented with tiers of organza and lace ruffles which cascaded to floor length. She wore a derby with a rolled brim decorated with ivory silk roses with an illusion veil and carried a nosegay of daisies, red sweetheart roses tied with garnet red and ivory streamers.

After a wedding trip to Williamsburg, Va. the couple will live in Deer Park, Tex.

The bride graduated from ECU, Greenville, N.C. and attended the University of Maryland. The bridegroom attended Daytona Beach Community College, Daytona

Mrs. Charles Edward Neetz

Beach, Fla. They are supervisors with Wendy's Inc., Houston, Tex.

A reception was held after the ceremony at the Holiday Inn, Williamston. The refreshment table was centered with a silver bucket filled with an assortment of red and white carnations, roses and daisies. Similar centerpieces were used on other tables.

Music for dancing was provided by the Contrast Band.

Nancy Crisp and Shirley Lilley served cake and Nina Wallace and Luana Skibiel poured punch. Carole Dwyer presided at the gift table and Frances Rankin, Jane Thompson and Phyllis Langston registered guests.

A wedding breakfast was given by the grandmother of the bride, Allene Wallace, at the Holiday Inn Saturday morning. Members of the wedding party and out-of-town guests attended.

An after-rehearsal party was given by Mr. and Mrs. Ed Rankin, aunt and uncle of the bride, at the Williamston Moose Lodge Friday evening for out-of-town guests, friends of the family and members of the wedding party.

Lonely Loser Can't Win

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 24-year-old guy who can't seem to get a girlfriend. I've tried everything. I don't know what the problem is, but I suspect it's my looks or personality. Abby, people who know me say I'm really a nice guy once you get to know me. The problem is that in today's society girls judge guys by their looks.

I'm so lonely, I'd do anything to have a girlfriend to share things with. I'm shy, but when I do get up the courage to ask a girl to dance, I get turned down. I'm well-groomed, dress neatly and have good manners, but I was turned down 10 times one night in a disco. It's so depressing. Why am I such a loser?

All my friends have girlfriends. Some even have two or three, and they all treat their girlfriends lousy. I get invited to parties, but I hate to go because I don't have anyone to take. I hate going to movies all by myself and eating alone. I'm not the most exciting guy in the world, but I have a good job, a nice car and a few dollars in the bank, but money can't buy happiness.

JUST PLAIN LONELY

DEAR LONELY: I can't believe that a man of your description can't find a girl to date. A guy who gets invited to parties must have at least one good friend. Ask him (or her) what there is about you that turns girls off. Skip the discos, and ask your co-workers. Everyone has a sister, a roommate, a cousin or a neighbor who'd like to meet a nice guy. Don't give up. She's out there. And by the way, the answer to your prayers may be found in church.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter is to be married soon. A friend told me to expect some of the guests to bring their wedding gifts to the reception. She says it's a common and acceptable practice these days because people want to save the postage. I always thought wedding gifts should be delivered to the bride's home before the wedding.

When did this practice of bringing wedding gifts to the reception become "acceptable"? Surely the bride can't be expected to open gifts that are handed to her in the receiving line! Also, what if there are no adequate facilities for collecting and safeguarding gifts at the church, hall or wherever the reception is held?

And since the bride and groom leave for their honeymoon immediately following the reception, they can't very well take the gifts with them, so that means the bride's mother has the job of carting all the gifts to her home for safekeeping.

Please enlighten me.

BOTHERED AND BEWILDERED

DEAR B AND B: Thank you for pointing out the tremendous burden imposed on the bride's mother when thoughtless friends hand-carry gifts to the reception. No matter how "common" it has become, it is not acceptable.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

For a total of 26 days out of each year, I am one year older than my husband. Did you hear that, world? For you and for my husband who treats me like a Greek ruin, let me repeat it. Until March 19, I am one year older than my husband! I don't know why he makes such a big deal out of it. Fourteen out of every 100 wives in this country married "younger men." Yet during those 26 days, he displays a mean streak in him that is almost frightening. We'll be standing around at a party and someone will say, "Does anyone know the verse to 'Stardust'?" Then, this stranger for whom I have borne three children and trimmed the hair over his ears when he's between haircuts will publicly turn on me and say, "That was before my time, but maybe Erma knows." You'd think in 26 days he'd have heard someone humming it.

During that brief period of time before his birthday, he doesn't let a bit of trivia get by him. Who was Lincoln with at the time he was assassinated? Ask Erma.

Was Melanie's baby in "Gone with the Wind" a boy or a girl? Ask Erma. What was Bill Shakespeare REALLY like? Ask Erma.

I told him the other night, "I'm sick of your taking cheap shots at my age. Men don't get flak for marrying women younger than they are." "That's different," he said. "They're supposed to be. That's how our culture is set up." "You are saying there's nothing wrong with your friend, Frank, who at 51 is marrying a girl young enough to be his granddaughter?" "She's not that young," he said.

"She has training wheels on her brain. How can he relate to a wife who classifies bras as 'antiques'?" Don't ask me why society has divined that men must be older and taller than their wives.

Since men are slower to develop than women, I figured I did him a big favor taking him off the shelf and raising him until he caught up.

It's only during the period from Feb. 21-March 19 that I realize my limitations. What can you do in 26 days?

Bosses Night Held

The Pitt County Association of Insurance Women held its ninth annual Bosses Night Friday at the Ramada Inn. Elliott Frank provided entertainment.

Artist in residence at Pitt Community College, he presented a selection of Mexican guitar music.

President Joyce Mills, CPIW, served as mistress of ceremonies and gave the welcome with Don C. McGlohon responding. Marian Smith introduced guests including Don Langston, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Kittrell, Mr. and Mrs. A.A. Hines and Mr. and Mrs. Van Johnson III.

President Mills presented club awards. The Atta-A-Boy Award is presented to a non-member who has assisted and supported the club with various projects. It was given to Deborah H. Johnson, a learning disabilities teacher with the Pitt County Schools. The selection of the Boss of the Year Award is based primarily on a boss' encouragement and support of the club and his willingness to participate in club activities. The award went to Dalton D. "Skip" Bright of Hooker and Buchanan. He and his wife, Judy, have two children.

The Insurance Woman of the Year Award was presented to Nancy White of Ahsokie. She is employed by Greene-Bryant Insurance Agency there and has three children. She has served on the group's executive board and is presently co-chairman of the bulletin committee.

A Mexican theme was selected for the evening. Potted cacti and sombreros were used to decorate dinner tables. The club's scrapbooks and various state and regional awards were displayed.

Parliamentary Procedure Is Club Topic

A program on parliamentary procedure and protocol was given by Carolyn Hatcher and Cheryl Adams when the Alpha Omega Chapter of Epsilon Sigma Alpha International met at the home of Nellie Taylor.

St. Jude benefit dance co-chairpersons Louise Spain and Margaret Roberts reported on the dance with all proceeds going to St. Jude Children's Research Hospital, Memphis, Tenn.

Members held a Valentine's Day "My Hero" party honoring husbands. Entertainment was a singing telegram for them.

It was announced the March state council meeting will be held in Brevard March 6 and the state convention will be held May 14-16 in Charlotte. Bitter Lesson Learned

A federal court of appeals has ruled that handwritten notes which were obtained from John W. Hinckley's cell at Butner, N.C., cannot be used by the government in attempting to show the man who allegedly shot President Reagan is insane.

It also ruled that an interview given by Hinckley to officers on the day of the shooting cannot be used because he had first asked for, and had not been granted, the right to have an attorney present in his behalf.

A first reaction might be that valuable evidence is being thrown out on technicalities. It is doubtful, however, that in this particular case, the disallowed evidence is all that important to a conviction. There is other overwhelming evidence available to the government.

The actions might be cited as another case of the law being tilted toward the defendant. However, the court of appeals points out that the seizure violates the Fourth Amendment giving individuals the right to be "secure in their persons, houses, papers and effects against unreasonable searches and seizures."

The interview violates Supreme Court rulings that interrogation must end when a suspect asks for an attorney. That doesn't appear unreasonable if we recognize that an accused has the right to an attorney and a defendant cannot be required to testify against himself.

All this is basic law of which we are sure the FBI and the Secret Service were aware at the time. We doubt if there is any great surprise at the court actions.

In a time of much crime it is often difficult to abide by the Constitution in the handling and prosecution of criminal cases. We should never forget, however, that illegal search and seizure can be applied to innocent people as well as criminals. And if they are ever allowed by our courts they can be used for political reasons as well as the protection of society. It was a bitter lesson our forefathers learned in other lands.

Defense Stimulates Economy

A lot of people grumble about the disparity between sums allocated for national defense and sums allocated to social services in the proposed federal budget. But let's take another perspective.

At a time when employment, sales, production and construction are near depression levels and at the same time, the administration sees itself in a "catch-up" position in the military field we might see two solutions in one.

Rather than paying out billions in unemployment checks, welfare checks and such, those billions of dollars spent on defense would provide thousands upon thousands of jobs for the unskilled, semi-skilled and skilled; not only in the armaments field but into the igniting of demand and production in the normal civilian economy. In turn, we envision the generating of revenues, sales and markets and services throughout the consumer world.

If we need more defense goods (and most people appear to feel that way), we are in effect killing two birds with one stone.

One of her most popular topics is the changing role of women in politics and she speaks and urges women to take active leadership roles.

The job she seeks is "much more than a ceremonial job or an office that keeps certain archives, and issues seals to notary publics," Mrs. Knudson says.

As a constitutional officer and member of the Council of State, the secretary of state plays a key role in numerous high state decisions including various budget proposals, use of governmental buildings, and as an advisory group to the governor.

"The secretary of state should be a nerve center to give citizens an entry to every part of their state government. It not only has available a wealth of historical information, but much on current programs and trends," she says.

Other Editors Say Lead, Not Follow

(Greensboro Daily News)

It is distressing to find out that North Carolina has no money to clean up abandoned or inactive hazardous waste dumps and landfills. Unfortunately, the state legislature waited to see what the federal Superfund law looked like before it passed one of its own. Now it turns out that the federal law requires matching funds from the states. We don't have those matching funds.

The legislature should correct this lapse when it convenes this summer. There are 167 sites newly reported in North Carolina, and while officials say many of those sites won't require much work, some of them may. Just one hazard can cost plenty; it took $500,000 to clean up a Kernersville hazardous waste dump in 1980.

By the ominous look of things we'll find more dangerous sites before long. The state is already watching 410 current treatment, storage and disposal sites. There are also 126 sites identified in congressional hearings in 1979, some of which are on the new list of 167 new sites, which came to light thanks to the federal Superfund law. That law requires companies and knowledgeable individuals to tell the government what they know about landfills and dump sites.

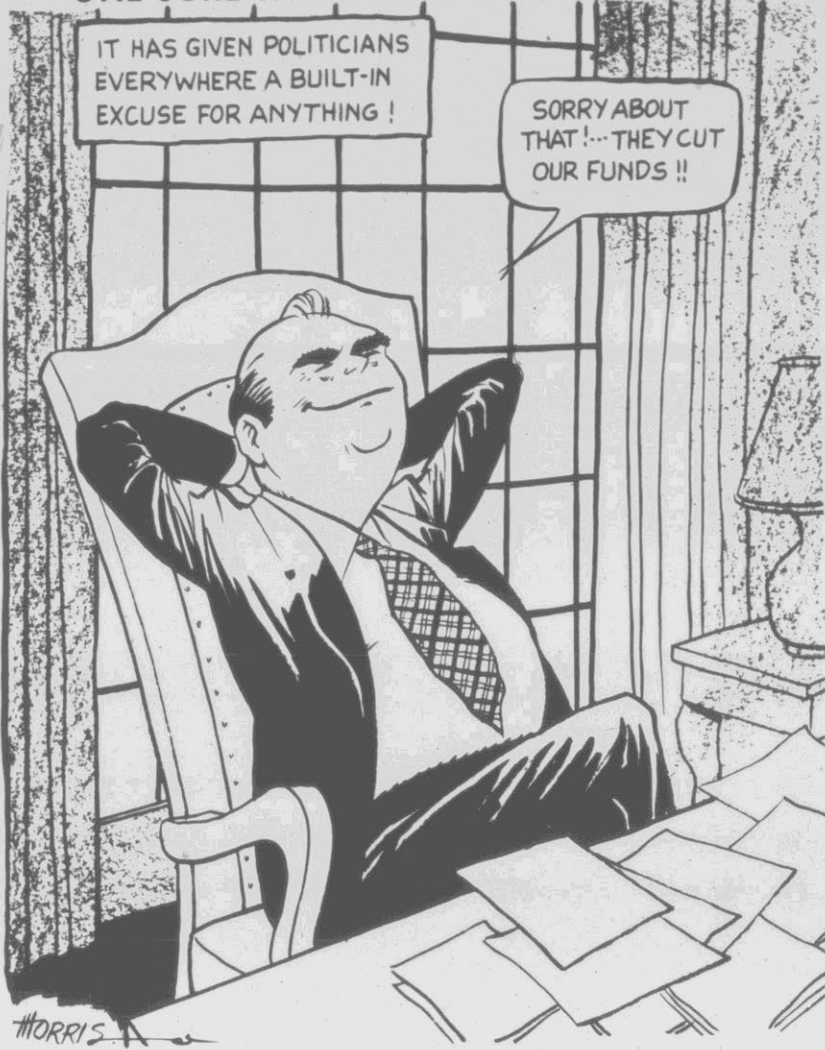

Keep in mind that those 167 sites were reported voluntarily. No one knows what ugly secrets someone is hiding out there. That is not alarmist talk. A look at the evidence uncovered without much work at all is enough to worry anyone.

We do not want to be too hard on state officials. For the most part, they sincerely want to do a good job, and they particularly want to hear now from private citizens who have suspicions about previously undiscovered dump sites.

However, without some help from the state legislature, they can't do much even when they discover those hazards. They are hobbled by a lack of money, and they are hobbled by laws that restrict our efforts to the level of effort in Washington. That must change.

It's time the legislators in this state, the 11th most industrial in the nation, admit that from now on they will have to lead, not follow, in the fight to clean up the land and water.

ONE SURE THING ABOUT REAGANOMICS!

By JAMES KILPATRICK

Lyrics Havn't Changed

WASHINGTON — The newspapers, the TV networks and the civil libertarians, with few exceptions, are singing a familiar refrain these days. To some of us it seems we've heard that song before. Twenty-five years ago it was "I'm Just Wild About Fidel," and the lyrics haven't changed significantly as the years have passed.

This time, of course, the hallelujah chorus hails the rebels of El Salvador. They are the good guys; the government forces are the bad guys. It is as if the lyricists of the liberal left were rhyming moon-spoon-June-swoon. It is all the same.

Thus the evening TV news brings us film of happy rebels, smiling at the camera. Have these friendly fellows engaged in acts of terrorism? Perish the thought! Have they murdered civilians? Maybe one or two, perhaps, but only because accidents will happen. What do the rebels seek? They seek justice, democracy, land reform, freedom, redistribution of the wealth and prosperity for the peasants.

First of all, of course, these freedom fighters seek to overthrow the government of President Jose Napoleon Duarte. What are we to believe of this government? It is, naturally, oppressive; it is dictatorial, tyrannical, lacking in popular support. This government violates civil liberties by day and tortures its prisoners by night. It exemplifies all the evils of the Latin American system by which the rich get richer and the poor get poorer. How can the United States support so evil a regime?

So goes the litany of the ever-bleeding hearts. But let us hark back to songs of the '40s. In the fall of 1949, if memory serves, the agrarian reformers under Mao Tse-tung were the good guys. The despicable forces of Chiang Kai-shek were the bad guys.

A few years later, during the regime in Cuba of Fulgenio Batista, The New York Times sent a star reporter — starchy-eyed, that is — to interview a charismatic figure then emerging on the scene. This ace newsmen, objective, hard-nosed, unbiased, confirmed every good thing my liberal friends had heard about Fidel Castro. A communist? Not so! Dr. Castro wanted nothing more than justice, democracy, land reform, freedom, redistribution of the wealth and prosperity for the peasants. As for the Batista regime? Oppressive, tyrannical, dictatorial, and besides all that, corrupt.

Then came the matter of Vietnam. Shall we recall the good and beautiful things that were said of the virtuous Ho Chi Minh? The terrible things that were said of the villainous Nguyen Van Thieu? Seven years ago this month, horror of horrors, Thieu was closing anti-government newspapers. Think of that! What about freedom of the press?

Only three years ago, it may be recalled, the shah of Iran was the black beast. He too was opp., dict., and tyrann., a master of torture, a looter of the treasury, a foe of every civil liberty known to man. How could President Carter have embraced him?

If we listen closely, we might hear echoes of other old refrains. South Yemen, Peru, Libya! Rhodesia, Mozambique, Angola! Cambodia! Ethiopia! In 1963 the British, hated masters of colonialism, gave independence to Uganda. After the British came Milton Obote; and after Obote came Idi Amin.

The credulity of my liberal friends is as boundless their tears are copious. They seem rarely to grasp one of the oldest and most melancholy observations of history, that at any given moment man's choices are more likely to be among the options that are evil than among the options that are good. Shall we agree, in the matter of Cuba, that the Batista government trespassed upon civil liberties? That the British, French and Portuguese denied no Bill of Rights for the African colonies? That King Idris of Libya was not precisely an enlightened monarch?

In the same vein, let us pro-

Hopeful For Registration

By MAXWELL GLEN and CODY SHEARER
WASHINGTON — when Thomas K. Turnage had to tell his 25-year-old son last year that he needn't register for a possible draft, the Selective Service System director must have seen the writing on the wall.

"I know a general officer with three sons, of whom two had registered," Maj. Gen. Turnage recalled last Tuesday in an interview. "He found out over the (Christmas) holidays that the other hadn't. (The third son) is registered now."

For Turnage, however, convincing as many as 1 million other young non-registrants to follow suit is an immediate and much bigger problem. He's not sure how many of those nameless young recalitrants will have signed up when President Reagan's seven-week "grace period" ends Sunday, Feb. 28. But he is, if anything, optimistic.

"I'm excited about the response to the grace period," said Turnage, who wouldn't offer specific numbers. "All I can say is that the last two inputs (from post offices) are the best two we've had since registration was reinstated."

If Turnage is right, that's good news for the administration. When President Reagan renewed draft registration Jan. 7, White House aides worried that his break from a campaign pledge would only further undermine popularity of a peacetime sign-up. Indeed, the president's characterization, then, of the world as "a dangerous place" didn't negate the fact that merely 75 percent of males born in 1963 had registered at post office windows last year.

But Turnage, a 59-year-old veteran of World War II and Korea, has had no choice but to be optimistic. As conciliatory as the "grace period" seemed, the gesture was the only card the administration could play. Should the general clemency fail to yield anything less than 90 percent of outstanding non-registrants, an overwhelmed Justice Department will probably throw up its hands. What does the U.S. attorney general do with 100,000 non-registrants?

Turnage's task is to worry less about no-shows than future registrants. "We just don't see this 'registration resistance' that a lot of people think exists," he said. "Based on our perceptions, it's just a matter of getting the word out." The balding general, for the record, added that he hasn't decided whether to track down non-registrants this spring with the help of government computer files.

Yet, in his recent public relations efforts, Turnage has been hard pressed to hurdle all the obstacles that led, in part, to his own son's confusion over registration requirements. As much as this military man takes pride in the "efficacy" of his agency's work, the last-minute publicity campaign has had to contend with inherent problems of execution and credibility.

Seven weeks ago, the Selective Service System rushed into production four public service announcements for television and radio. The 10-30- and 60-second spots, some of which feature country-and-western singer Jerry Reed, have been squeezed out of a Selective Service budget that doesn't afford press releases. Given the targeting difficulties of the non-registrant "market," the effectiveness of this campaign may never be determined.

Much of the grace period's success, Turnage admits, will have relied on the good will of the news media. Invoking civic responsibility, his agency has counted heavily on contacts with commercial and college outlets. The affable general believes few editors will shirk their duty, as some have in recent years.

"From what we've found, 33 of 36 editorial comments (compiled from around the nation) were favorable," said Turnage. "I like those odds."

From his perspective, however, Turnage only needs to win over a respectable share of the population. His chief responsibility is to keep the registration cards coming at levels that don't weaken U.S. posture "in a dangerous world." His preparations this month to issue three additional public service announcements and more mass mailings to high school seniors best indicate which young men Turnage is really after.

Strength For Today

INTOLERANCE
We hear today a great deal about the necessity for tolerance. Yet, in some situations a certain amount of intolerance is called for. Certainly no sane person would want to go back to the days when men flew at each other's throats because of religious and political differences of opinion; but this does not obviate the fact that people must have very positive convictions in matters of this sort if these convictions are to play a useful part in daily living.

A Hindu convert once complimented Stanley Jones — a famous Christian missionary of a previous generation — on his broad-mindedness. Jones replied that he was the narrowest man in the world when it came to a consideration of the place Christ should occupy in matters of faith.

Anyone who takes his religion seriously would have to take a similarly positive attitude about certain things in his faith which he considers to be of prime importance. — Elisha Douglass

Off-The-Cuff Remarks Costly

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Perhaps, as one of President Reagan's chief spokesmen insists, no one really cares if the president of the United States can "win quiz shows."

But that didn't stop the president from trying to show that he could.

So there he was, notes at the ready, just waiting for someone at his last news conference to challenge his accuracy. When one question at the very end just barely touched on the subject, the president pulled out his notes and was off and running in defending his statements at a prior news conference.

David R. Gergen, the president's assistant for communications, says no one in the White House, least of all the president, is particularly worried about the spate of news stories challenging the president's accuracy.

"I don't find a high-level of concern," although there has been some "irritation," he said, adding that Reagan "treats it all in good spirits." Gergen said Richard Wirthlin, the president's main pollster, "has never expressed a concern about this."

Besides, said Gergen, when you consider the number of facts the president deals with at a news conference, he did pretty well. "I would bet he was batting over 95 percent," he said.

"The assumption on the part of the public is that they have a leader," Gergen said in an interview. "They didn't elect him to win quiz shows."

Just the same, an in-chitch report was prepared by Cabinet Secretary Craig Fuller in an effort to refute reports that Reagan erred six times in his Jan. 19 news conference.

And elsewhere in the White House, there are signs that staff members are increasingly edgy about what the president says in off-the-cuff remarks.

Reporters were kept well away from Reagan last Sunday when he went to church in nearby Alexandria, Va. Although security reasons were cited, one staff member explained privately that he didn't want to have to tell James A. Baker III, the White House chief of staff, that the president had been given a chance to ad lib on the subject of El Salvador, a likely topic of press questioning.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said that in the future, there may be times when photographers will be given access to the president, but reporters will not be invited. This would enable the White House staff to get the president's picture in newspapers and magazines, and on television, without exposing him to questions that might be troublesome.

Several blocks from the White House, at the headquarters of the Democratic National Committee, executive director Eugene Eidenberg is watching closely but showing little glee over Reagan's recent problems.

"The errors a president makes in a news conference or other public statement are sources of cocktail party conversation or editorials, but they do not represent a major political weakness," he said.

"I don't think the American people are keeping a score of whether he got it right on the sequence of events in Vietnam, (a topic at the Feb. 18 news conference), which is not to say I don't want my president better briefed on matters of recent American history," Eidenberg said.

But Bob Neuman, the Democrats' spokesman, said that as a result of the scope of Reagan's problems — with the budget, the economy, and, yes, errors in news conferences — "a lot of people are not taking the White House as seriously as they were."

When Reagan's accuracy is challenged, said Neuman, "it hurts his credibility and it hurts the impression he is an awesome communicator who can stem any problems just by going on the tube."

It is Neuman's belief — and perhaps also his hope, given his job — that such questions could damage Reagan in the same manner Jimmy Carter's presidency was weakened by suggestions that Carter was an incompetent administrator.

Perceptions like that won't tumble a presidency, but they can contribute to a weakened president's downfall.

LIFE ATOP THE BUTTES — Like islands out of water, these sandstone buttes rise more than 500 feet above a Utah desert. Helicoptered to the top of the larger one, ecologist David W. Johnson found mice, chipmunks, wood rats and a lone snake living off the five acres of arid growth. He compares butte tops to real islands, detached from the "mainland", but by a cliff barrier rather than water. Like real islands they tend to have fewer species than the mainland, but as many — sometimes more — individuals within each species. How did the animals get up their in the first place? Were they trapped on the top several million years ago as the land around them eroded, forming the buttes? Scientists think they climbed, and more recently, Johnson has concluded that the animals who made it to the top are simply good climbers, able to scale the cliff barriers. All are small creatures that are at home in rocky places and eat shrubs, grass, insects and berries. Species found atop the buttes include the canyon mouse, lizards, chipmunks, pinon mice and the bushy-tailed wood rats, the biggest animal up there. (National Geographic Society Photo)

Acquire New Computer

East Carolina University has acquired a large scale computer system from Sperry Univac, a division of Sperry Corp., to service a variety of administrative tasks, Sperry reported.

The Sperry Univac 1100/62 computer will also serve as the host computer system for Pitt County Memorial Hospital and the ECU Medical School, according to the company, which said the system used by the three institutions is valued at $3 million.

The 600-bed hospital uses a Sperry Univac System 80 with 125 terminals and two printers, which are linked with the 1100/62 multi-processor. Pitt Memorial utilizes special software developed at Lafayette General Hospital, Lafayette, La., and has enhanced the package to complement patient care and accounting tasks, Sperry reported.

The medical school will use the system for administrative applications, physician billing and processing admission applications.

Sperry said the computer applications are being brought up in phases with the hospital coming on-line first, followed by the medical school and the university.

More Charges Of Bid-Rigging

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — Four indictments were handed down by a federal grand jury on Wednesday charging bid-rigging on North Carolina highway construction projects.

According to a statement issued by the U.S. Justice Department in Washington, three of the indictments accused Ashland-Warren Inc., a major paving company in the Southeast. In each case, the company was accused of acting through subsidiaries.

In the fourth indictment, the grand jury charged C.W. Matthews Contracting Co. Inc., of Marietta, Ga., and its vice president, Michael L.

Lawson, with bid-rigging on two construction projects in western North Carolina, one awarded in 1978 and the second in 1979.

The first Ashland-Warren indictment said that its subsidiary, the Thompson-Arthur Paving Co. of Greensboro, had conspired to rig bids from 1974 to 1979 on projects in the central part of the state.

The second indictment named a second subsidiary, the Asheville division of Warren Brothers Co., and said it conspired to allocate projects in western North Carolina from 1975 to 1979.

The third indictment said another subsidiary, Barrus Construction Co. of Kinston, conspired to allocate three projects in 1979.

The indictment did not name the subsidiaries of Ashland-Warren as defendants but said Ashland-Warren had conducted business through them. Ashland-Warren has already been convicted of bid-rigging on projects in Virginia.

He has also held responsibility for assigning seats in the Legislature, and is considered a major stemwinder at any Democratic party function.

The secretary of state serves on the Local Government Commission in addition to the Council of State, a job which Mrs. Knudson feels her work as a county commissioner will provide essential background. That unit works with local governments on numerous financial and investment proposals and plans, including bond proposals.

The most critical part of the office is keeping the official records — from the moment of incorporation, sale of securities, records of municipal annexations, election returns and a long list of other data of both government and private entities around the state.

Allotment Of Cheese Falls Short

By The Associated Press
Officials in Asheville were forced to reduce the amount of government cheese to be given its needy residents after the state allocated Buncombe county less than it requested.

Meanwhile, thousands lined up Wednesday to take advantage of President Reagan's order that tons of the surplus cheese be divided among the states for distribution to the poor.

The federal government had bought the cheese as part of the dairy price support system.

Social Service officials in Buncombe County said they asied for 36,750 of the 770,000 pounds the state is receiving from the U.S. Department of Agriculture. By the time all the requests were in from the counties, the state decided that Buncombe would receive 29,000 pounds.

Margaret Coman, director of the county social services department, said the shortfall will force the department to reduce the amount each family will receive.

"Every family that is eligible will receive one five-pound block of cheese, regardless of how many are in the family," Mrs. Coman said.

"Originally, we had planned to give one block to families with one to three people, two blocks to families with four to six people and so on like that."

Virginia Eldreth, administrator of the food stamp program in Asheville, said she expects most of the cheese to be picked up Thursday and Friday.

In Greensboro, the processed American cheese was an immediate hit with those who received it.

Buying Carrier

CANBERRA, Australia (AP) — The Cabinet today decided to purchase the British light aircraft carrier Invincible for $324 million, cabinet sources told reporters.

The 19,800-ton vessel, which Britain put on sale as a cost-cutting measure, will replace Australia's 29-year-old Melbourne as flagship of the Australian fleet.

Sale of the 19-month-old ship faces opposition in the parliaments of Britain and Australia.

"I just thank the Lord for it," said Lillie Brown as she and 4-year-old granddaughter, Debbie, toted their 15 pounds of cheese from the Greensboro Urban Ministry's PATHways Center at Lee and Martin streets.

"This will help just a little bit," said Brown, the 64-year-old wife of a disabled Gibsonville farmer. She had waited in line an hour and a half.

The 17 tons is part of the 50,000 pounds allotted Guilford County. The rest went to High Point, where 13,000 pounds were distributed Tuesday and the rest was given out Wednesday.

Pitt 2000 Meeting Is Scheduled On Saturday

Over 75 local leaders will meet in Greenville Saturday to launch the North Carolina 2000 planning project in Pitt County, according to Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce officials.

The meeting, sponsored by the Pitt County NC 2000 Steering Committee, will be held at the Ramada Inn, U.S. 264 Bypass, at 8:30 a.m. According to Pitt County NC 2000 Chairman Tommy Edwards, the purpose of the meeting is two-fold.

"First, we want to get this broad-based group of leaders thinking about the long-term future and about what life may be like in this state and county in 20 years," he said.

"Our second goal," he added, "is to get the leaders to involve every citizen in Pitt County in the NC 2000 project. We will encourage them to reach out to their communities to build local awareness of the emerging issues and to give our citizens a clear voice in choosing future directions for the state."

The featured speaker will be Kenneth Dews of Winterville, a member of the Commission on the Future of North Carolina. Dews will discuss statewide forecasts for the year 2000 in areas such as population growth, changes in jobs and availability of water and land.

Edwards noted that the kick-off meeting would be only the first step in the year-long NC 2000 effort. "During the next several months, counties across the state will be holding community meetings, participating in a statewide citizens' ballot on the future and sending delegates to a state conference on the future in September, 1982," he said.

The counties are working closely with the state-level commission, which will submit to Gov. Jim Hunt by December 1982 a report of recommended actions, Edwards said.

To 'Sound Out' Deficit Views

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is moving to "sound out" Congress on how it would reduce the huge deficits in his languishing 1983 budget plan, yet there is no indication the administration is ready to give ground.

His $75.6 billion budget was expected to receive another jolt today when Alice M. Rivlin, director of the Congressional Budget Office, reveals her agency's re-evaluation of the spending plan in testimony before the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Sources said the congressional analysis of Reagan's budget for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1 likely would show the administration's projected 1983 deficit of $91.5 billion is about $10 billion too low.

According to the sources, who asked not to be identified, the higher deficit forecast was due to higher estimates of defense costs and farm loan supports, and less optimistic assumptions about the nation's economic performance.

Republicans and Democrats alike have decried Reagan's budget for the unprecedented volume of red ink it contains, including forecasts of a $98.6 billion shortfall in the current fiscal year and an $82 billion deficit in 1984.

On Tuesday, Republican Sen. Pete V. Domenici of New Mexico, chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, proposed a plan to trim the deficits by scaling down the proposed Pentagon buildup, boosting some taxes and possibly postponing the last year of the basic, 3-year cut in personal income tax rates. Congress adopted the tax cut last year.

Deputy presidential press secretary Larry Speakes said today that Domenici's proposal was being circulated in the White House, where its figures were being checked.

Speakes cautioned Wednesday that "it's too early to tell" whether the plan could become another bipartisan compromise such as that drafted with administration assistance last year as an alternative to the original budget Reagan sent to Capitol Hill.

Speakes added that the president would "sound out" Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., and House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois at a White House meeting today. The reaction of other influential members of Congress also was being sought, he said.

Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan — appearing before the Senate Budget Committee Wednesday — said he found Domenici's alternative a "reasonable proposal."

"I find it very interesting. I don't reject it out of hand," Regan said to Domenici. "Politically, I won't comment on it."

Today, Regan did reject a separate proposal by Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., for an income tax surtax of up to 10 percent to reduce the budget deficit.

Regan told the Senate Appropriations Committee that a surtax or repeal of tax cuts voted a year ago would be quick fixes that would make the economy worse instead of better. He said surtaxes imposed in 1968 through 1970 produced a decline in economic growth, higher unemployment and fatter deficits.

Budget director David Stockman, asked about Domenici's proposal at a separate hearing Wednesday, said: "It's a good-faith effort to generate a comprehensive proposal. But there are problem areas that need to be looked at."

Stockman did not elaborate, but Murray L. Weidenbaum, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, mentioned three "obvious concerns."

They were: Domenici's unspecified plans to raise taxes by $122 billion over three years, his proposal to slice $20 billion to $25 billion from the Pentagon budget through 1985 and his suggestion of a spending freeze on hundreds of domestic programs.

And Regan said the phased tax 'cut should not be changed.

"For years we've attempted and failed to balance the budget with higher taxes... The time has come to break that dismal sequence," Regan said.

Despite the reservations, the reaction from administration officials was far milder than when Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., outlined his own alternative to Regan's high-deficit budget two weeks ago.

At the time, Regan dismissed Hollings' plan as "absolutely ridiculous" and an "affront to the American people."

However, an administration source, who insisted on not being quoted by name, said Regan's apparently conciliatory comments were aimed at appeasing Domenici "to keep him with us rather than agin' us. We don't want to knock him out of the box."

The source added that the Treasury secretary also wanted to avoid giving the impression that the president is being stubborn to the point of even talking about counter-proposals.

But, the source said, the administration does not yet intend to give ground on the president's budget proposals, particularly his recommended military buildup and his avowed resistance to tax increases.

Rep. James R. Jones, D-Okla., chairman of the House Budget Committee, has called Domenici's proposal "extremely significant" and "very close" to his own concepts of what needs to be done.

Oil From Garbage Said Below Price By OPEC

LONDON (AP) — Two British scientists say they have invented a method of making crude oil from household garbage at less than half the current OPEC price, press reports said today.

The Press Association,

Britain's domestic news agency, said a pilot plant set up by the scientists in Manchester, England, converts plastic, paper, cardboard, vegetable matter and textiles into three barrels of oil a day.

"We are doing in 10 minutes what it has taken nature 150 million years to do," Noel McAuliffe, one of the scientists, was quoted as saying.

The Financial Times calculated that about 11 tons of garbage can be converted into 26 42-gallon barrels of oil. The business daily said the oil is equivalent to good quality Middle Eastern crude and contains no sulfur or nitrogen, "so by oil standards it is virtually non-polluting."

"Although we are not sure the quality would be good enough for gasoline, we know it could be used for power stations and heating, where 75 percent of current British oil supplies go," McAuliffe was quoted as saying.

The Financial Times said research in Manchester "indicates that oil could be produced commercially at $15 a barrel, including the estimated 20 million pounds ($36.4 million) to build a full conversion plant."

The Organization of Petroleum Export Countries' current base price for crude oil is $34 a barrel, while petroleum from the British sector of the North Sea fields is $35. On the Rotterdam spot market, where prices have been depressed by the worldwide glut, oil sells for about $30 a barrel.

McAuliffe and his partner Roger Benn said their invention uses heat, pressure, a metallic catalyst and a processing liquid.

They said they spent three years on the project at Manchester University's Institute of Science and Technology. The municipal government financed them with the equivalent of $910,000, its garbagemen supplied the raw materials, and the government has applied for patents on the invention, the press reports said.

The municipality will soon start looking for companies to build an operational garbage-to-oil conversion plant, the reports added.

The Manchester Institute of Science and Technology said it is also involved in a longer-term project for using solar energy to convert plant life into fuel.

Many Firings Said Due Age

WASHINGTON (AP) — Many older workers are being fired solely because of their age, not because they are no longer productive, according to statements at a hearing of the House Select Committee on Aging.

Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., said Wednesday that more than 12,000 individuals filed formal charges of age discrimination with federal, state and local equal employment agencies in 1981, "and this represents only a fraction of those who experienced discrimination."

Pepper, chairman of the committee, said age discrimination "has its roots in negative stereotypes of aging and is nurtured by a youth cult mentality."

Aircraft Restorer Hopes His Rare Plane Begins A Museum

GOSHEN, Calif. (AP) — "My big dream is to develop an aviation museum in the San Joaquin Valley somewhere between Tulare and Fresno," says Ty Sundstrom, a 24-year-old Visalia apartment manager and aircraft restorer.

And the undisputed centerpiece of Sundstrom's vision would be a battered hunk of metal tubing that currently sits in an airy warehouse in this small Tulare County community.

Sitting on a pair of metal spoke wheels, the rusting skeleton is all that's left of the only known Ryan M-1 airmail plane still in existence, and Sundstrom considers it a priceless piece of aviation history.

When he first discovered the craft on an isolated San Luis Obispo County ranch, Sundstrom admitted, "I didn't know what it was. I was sure what it was before I made a second trip."

Sundstrom's initial interest in the 1926-vintage aircraft was primarily because of its rarity. But much to his delight, further research revealed that Charles Lindbergh flew the plane while hunting for the "Spirit of St. Louis" to carry him across the Atlantic.

Sundstrom says the craft has attracted the attention of the Smithsonian Institution, the San Diego Aerospace Museum and the Pacific Museum of Flight in Seattle. The last previous known Ryan M-1 was destroyed in a fire at the San Diego museum.

"The plane is priceless," Sundstrom said. "The Smithsonian is not interested just because this is an old airplane. They're interested because this is the first production strut-braced monoplane in the United States."

As an aircraft restorer, Sundstrom is always on the watch for news of old planes. He traded a set of antique wings for a tip on a downed aircraft that turned out to be the long lost Ryan.

Directions to the find sat around for six to eight months until Sundstrom planned a picnic in the vicinity — a coast range ranch about 20 miles south of Shandon in Bitterwater Valley.

He found the Ryan's twisted remains just where they had fallen from the sky more than half a century ago. The mangled metal fuselage and tattered cloth-covered wings had served as a toy for three generations of farm children.

The rancher told Sundstrom that in either 1930 or 1931 a pilot "went up to the house and said, 'The engine quit and I never want to see another plane,' and just walked off."

Research in Sundstrom's private aviation library and records of Ryan Aeronautical Co. in San Diego disclosed that was not the plane's first crash.

It crashed Christmas Day, 1926, near Bakersfield on a mail run for Pacific Air Transport after the pilot had bailed out. Parts were trucked back to the factory where the plane was reconstituted with its cockpit door in a different place and a new serial number.

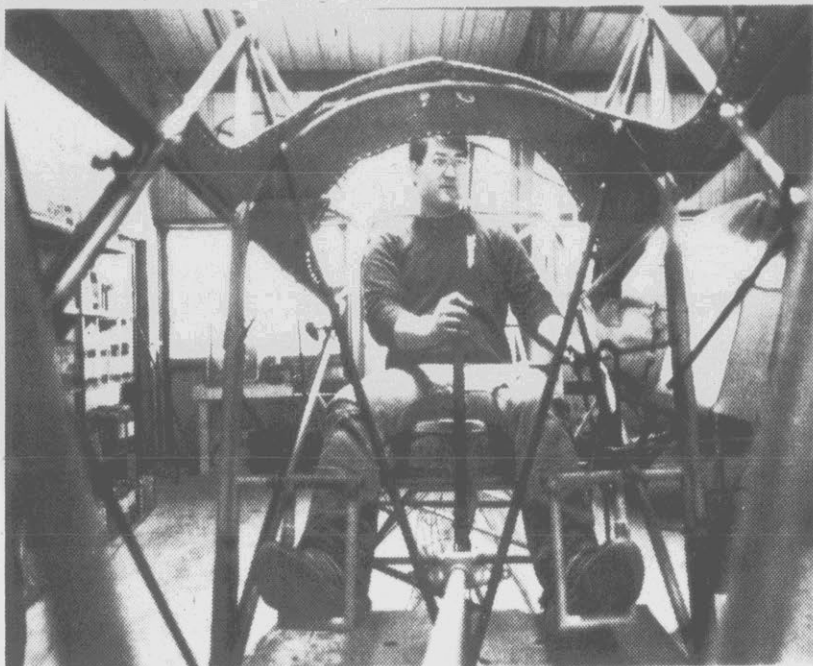

The manufacturer has loaned Sundstrom the blueprint of the original version to guide his reconstruction.

"Planes back then were all made by hand so no two are exactly the same," he said. The metal was reusable largely because its crisscrossed metal tubing was greased with linseed oil.

About 85 percent of the original parts were salvaged.

and Sundstrom will construct wings of "a close-grain spruce that gets a lot of strength from its weight." He is negotiating for an engine with people in Chowchilla, 70 miles north of Goshen.

Sundstrom, a licensed pilot, obviously has the utmost confidence in his restoration skills. He plans to test fly the plane himself once it's reassembled.

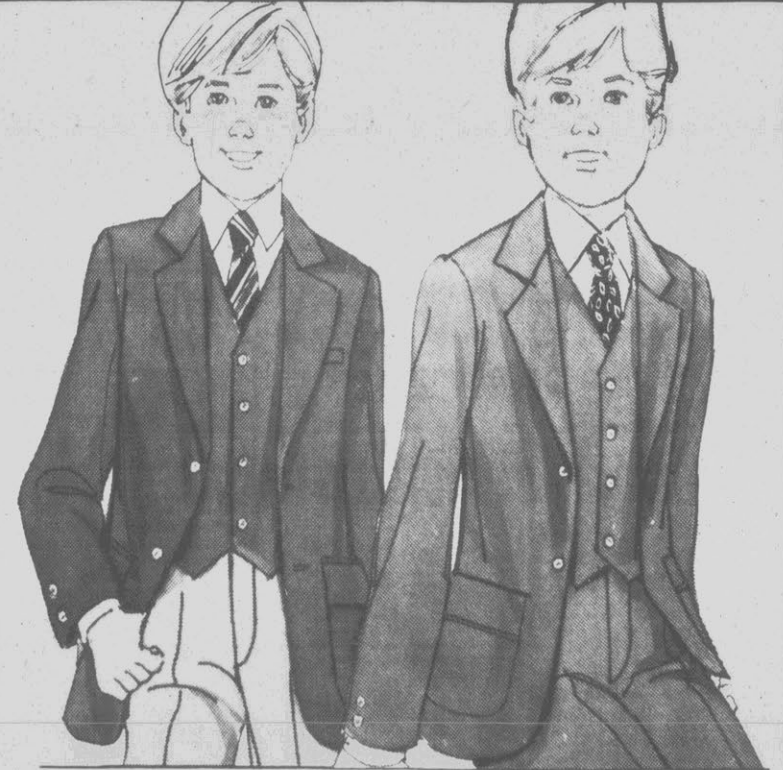

AVIATION RELIC — Ty Sundstrom, The Visalia, Calif., apartment manager sits in the open cockpit of a rare Ryan M-1 airmail plane which he is restoring. Sundstrom hopes eventually to start an aviation museum in the San Joaquin Valley.

Barge Cracks Ice Jam To Relieve Town's Flooding

SUN BATHING — Warm weather prevailed and with warm weather comes the sun bathers. Wednesday was no exception on the ECU campus. Susan Connelly of Morganton and Jill Bateman of Quantico, Va., sit on the grass in front of the Gray

Art Gallery catching up on the missed hours of sun during the past winter. Cooler weather today all but ended the Spring rites. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

By The Associated Press
It took the "old trick" of cracking an ice jam with a barge to relieve an Illinois town's worst flooding in a quarter-century, but the river water was still so high that 100 people stayed away from home a third day today.

While residents of Wilmington, Ill., were worrying about water, other parts of the Midwest got snow up to 8 inches deep

Wednesday and a mixture of snow, sleet and freezing rain glazed highways from the Great Lakes to New York City. Northerly winds chilled the Northeast.

The National Weather Service in New York City said the arctic air dominating the eastern half of the nation was "once again reminding us of the time of the year."

At least one person was killed and many suffered minor injuries Wednesday morning as scores of cars, buses and tractor-trailer rigs crashed on ice-slickened streets in Chicago. Joe Condon of the Illinois Department of Transportation said the accidents in the Windy City were "too many to count."

Bismarck, N.D., got 8 inches of snow Tuesday and northwestern Minnesota got a half-foot of it.

Working from the mouth of the Kankakee River, where it joins the Des Plaines River to form the Illinois River in northeastern Illinois, the Army Corps of Engineers used two tugs to push a barge onto the top of mushy, 14-inch-thick ice in the Kankakee.

The weight of the barge broke the ice and opened a channel 50 feet wide, said corps spokesman Dick Gustafson in Rock Island.

"The use of a heavy barge to break up ice by being pushed on top of it is a procedure tried before," Gustafson said. "Guess you would call it an old trick."

Several miles up the Kankakee river in the town of Wilmington, population 4,400, one more resident was evacuated Wednesday because of flooding. But that was an improvement over Tuesday, when about 100 people were evacuated.

The water had swirled over the banks of the river Tuesday and flooded a department store, a motel, a restaurant and two city parks. Wilmington Police Chief Frank Lyons said it was the worst flooding since February 1957.

At Cairo, Ill., the Ohio River, which was 3½ feet above flood stage at 43.4 feet on Tuesday, was expected to rise another 2½ feet by Saturday.

The Illinois River also was on the rise and the Mississippi River was expected to climb above flood stage at Chester.

Relatively warm days and cool, clear nights reduced the hazard of flooding in areas of Idaho already ravaged by flood waters, the weather service reported Wednesday.

Weather service forecaster Clyde O'Dell in Boise said all the rivers that had been at or near flood stage were receding Wednesday night.

Final TV Show Taped By Welk

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — As the smiling maestro gave the television camera his last "ah-one, ah-two" downbeat, Lawrence Welk taped his final show after 27 years on the air.

But the familiar pop of the champagne cork and floating bubbles will be around for a long time, as "The Lawrence Welk Show" will continue in reruns on more than 200 U.S. and Canadian TV stations until September.

The 1,542nd show for Welk and his Music Makers was taped Wednesday night in a family celebration, but no mention was made on-camera that it was different from any other.

The last show will be broadcast during the week of April 11. Afterward, it will be syndicated as "Memories with Lawrence Welk," with the bandleader taping new introductions for his 52 favorite shows.

"Spotlight On Our Musical Family," was the theme of the final show. Before the taping, he and Fern, his wife of almost 50 years, danced a waltz to the delight of the 250 invited guests.

The guests included two Welk children — Shirley Frederick and her five children, and Larry Welk, with his two. The audience also included such Welk

'Voice Of Zion' Giving Concert

The Voices of Zion of York Memorial AME Zion Church will present their annual spring concert Sunday at 5 p.m. at Wells Chapel Church of God in Christ on West Fifth Street.

The concert will feature recent gospel selections. The choir will be accompanied by Johnny Wooten on the organ and a brass ensemble on various selections.

Special guests will include Molly Small and the Celestials and a new gospel ensemble making their second appearance in the area.

The pastor, the Rev. Luther Brown, invites the public to attend.

alumni as cellist Charlotte Buck, honky-tonk pianist Joanne Castle, singer Sandy Griffith and Maxine Grey, an early "Champagne Lady," as well as 10 musicians who dated back to Welk's start in North Dakota.

The Lennon Sisters arrived after the show, coming from an out-of-town engagement. Also present was their uncle, Jimmy Lennon, executive vice president of the Welk empire. Sam Lutz, Welk's manager for 37 years, and Don Feddersen, his TV producer.

When ABC canceled "The Lawrence Welk Show" in 1971 after 16 years with the network, Lutz and Feddersen steered it into syndication, where it soon became the No. 1 show.

Welk has been taping his show at the ABC Hollywood studios.

"I'm not in a position to cut off the organization," Welk said in a recent interview. He is keeping the band on salary and will embark on a tour of one-night stands next month.

But Welk said his wife persuaded him to cut down his work and spend more time at their country club trailer park in Escondido, near San Diego.

Welk, who will be 79 next month, was asked if he would miss the TV show.

"I'm afraid so," he replied.

Economists Say Chances Of Real Depression Slim

By SALLY JACOBSEN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Private economist Edward Yardeni says he doesn't want to start a panic but there's a chance of the economy slipping into a depression.

Rep. Henry Reuss, the Democratic chairman of the Joint Economic Committee, has big pictures of Ronald Reagan and Herbert Hoover staring down at members of Reagan's Council of Economic Advisers. Hoover was president at the start of the Depression of the 1930s.

The Wall Street Journal runs a front-page headline that says "Depression Fears Grow."

There is growing talk — and concern — among a small group of economists and some Democratic politicians that the current severe recession will worsen and become a depression.

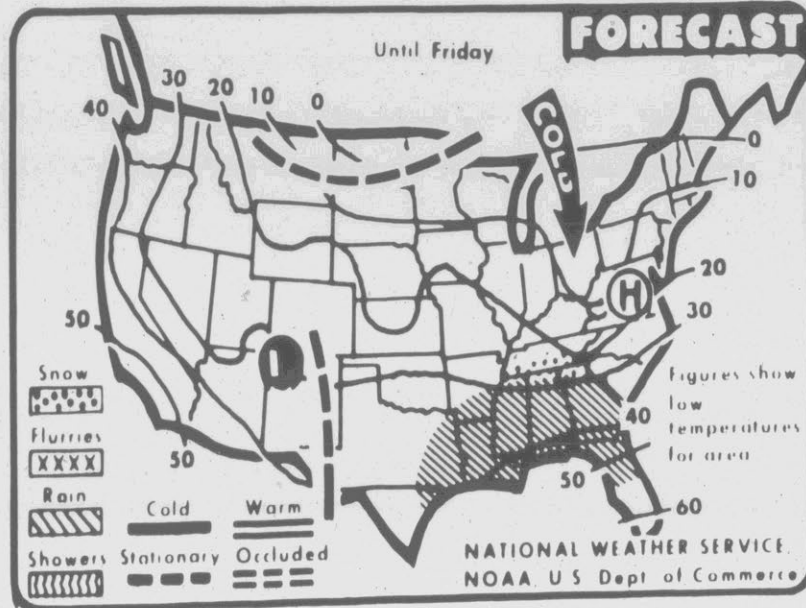

Other economists, though, won't use the word "depression" in talking about the condition of the economy. It's too frightening, conjuring up visions of the bread lines, bank failures and suicides of the 1930s, they say.

Besides, they say, such a severe economic calamity could never occur again, and it's too harsh to compare the 1930s-style Depression with the problems the economy faces today.

One problem economists have in talking about a depression is that they don't know when one begins. The rule of thumb for declaring a recession is when the Gross National Product falls for two consecutive quarters, but there is no similar gauge for a depression.

Yardeni, chief economist for E.F. Hutton & Co. Inc. brokerage, says he thinks "there's a 30 percent chance of a depression occurring." If the economy doesn't start picking up by May, he raises the odds of a depression to "50-50."

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Cold weather is expected in the forecast period, Thursday until Friday morning, across the northern half of the country. Warmer weather is expected in the southern half. Rain is forecast from east Texas to Georgia and northern Florida. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
Windows flew open and shirtsleeves were rolled up Wednesday as North Carolina caught an early touch of spring, but by this morning Tar Heels had been reminded that winter isn't over.

A strong cold front entered the state during the night, forcing out the remnants of a low-pressure system that brought record high temperatures to many areas Wednesday.

The National Weather Service predicted that the cold air would keep the state in its grip through Friday. Today's highs were expected to range from the mid-to-upper 30s in the mountains, the 40s in the Piedmont and the low 50s along the coast.

Things should get even worse Friday, the weather service said. Temperatures should plunge into the low teens in the mountains and aren't expected to get above the freezing mark anywhere in the state.

Forecasters said North Carolinians could not look forward to a break in the cold before Monday.

The brilliant sunshine of the past couple of days will give way to intermittent cloud cover, with rain expected in southeastern counties by Saturday.

Fayetteville and Jacksonville shared honors as the warmest areas in North Carolina Wednesday, recording 86-degree readings at mid-afternoon. Cape Hatteras, under the influence of cool Atlantic breezes, was coolest at 62 degrees.

"This is a teaser today," National Weather Service forecaster Bruce Cheatham said Wednesday. "We're looking at a 35-degree drop tomorrow. It'll be a slow process, but it will stay here awhile."

So Far, Woolly Worms 'Right'

BANNER ELK, N.C. (AP) — Banner Elk Mayor Charles Von Cannon says people may have scorned his use of a woolly worm to predict this winter's weather, but so far, he says, the worm was right.

Last October at the Woolly Worm Festival in Banner Elk, Von Cannon looked at one of the worms and predicted that the winter would be cold and snowy early, with an unseasonable mild spell in February and a cold, snowy conclusion.

According to mountain tradition, the color of autumn caterpillars gives observers a clue to the kind of winter weather to expect.

So far, he said, the worm is on target.

According to the Boone Area Chamber of Commerce, Appalachian State University in Boone is working on woolly worm research. The chamber said the worm's accuracy this winter may provide some solid answers for researchers and make believers of some of those who disbelieved.

Monday Agenda

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners will meet Monday at 10 a.m. at the county office building at 1717 W. Fifth St.

Included on the agenda is the consideration of appointments to the Pitt Memorial Hospital Board of Trustees and to the Pitt County Council on the Status of Women, the consideration of a request for a letter of endorsement for a grant for the Eastern Carolina Vocational Center and other items.

At 2 p.m., the board is scheduled to hear a report from Ray Graham, executive director of the Charleston, S.C., emergency medical services program, on EMS operations in Pitt County.

Graham is presently reviewing rescue squad operations in the county and is expected to make recommendations to the board on how EMS service here can be improved.

Police List 2 Accidents

An estimated $7,500 property damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Wednesday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a 7:18 a.m. collision on Greenville Boulevard, 65 feet north of the Golden Road intersection, involving cars driven by Shirley Dail Taylor of Route 2, Greenville, and Phillip Earl Johnson of 407 Perkins St.

Police, who said Ms. Taylor was injured in the collision, estimated damage from the mishap at $3,500 to the Taylor car and $3,000 to the Johnson vehicle.

Investigators reported a truck driven by Dewey Bryant Thomas of Route 4, Greenville, was involved in a collision with a car owned by Elmer Ray Edwards of Route 1, Winterville, about 9:15 a.m. on Memorial Drive, 750 feet south of the Chestnut Street intersection.

Officers, who estimated damage to the Thomas car at $1,000, reported the driver of the Edwards car told Ms. Thomas he did not have a driver's license and left the scene.

Investigation of the mishap was continuing.

Solar Fraction

Greenville's solar fraction calculated by the department of physics of East Carolina University was 89 Wednesday, which means that a solar water heater could have provided 89 percent of your hot water.

WILSON TO SPEAK
AYDEN — The Rev. Wilson will speak at Ayden Deliverance Center, 129 E. Second St., Friday at 7:30 p.m. Sister Murphy, the service sponsor, says everyone is invited.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market advanced broadly today, extending Wednesday's rally with the help of some favorable inflation news.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 2.38 to 829.15 in the first half hour.

Gainers took a 3-1 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Before the opening, the government reported that the consumer price index rose 0.3 percent in January. That marked the smallest gain for the index in a year and a half, and provided new evidence of a slowing in the inflation rate.

Analysts said the market also drew some benefit from the steep drop in interest rates over the past week.

Today's early prices included Texas Commerce Bankshares, up 3/4 at 33 1/4; Haliburton, up 1/8 at 41; Church's Fried Chicken, up

Advise An Eye On Commodities

By JAMES H. RUBIN
 Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional auditors are urging the Commodity Futures Trading Commission to keep closer watch on brokers and fingerprint them to help reduce massive fraud in commodity trading.

The General Accounting Office enumerated shortcomings in the CFTC's policing of the commodities markets but noted that the agency is planning improvements.

The GAO, the congressional watchdog agency, also told the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations Wednesday that a CFTC program to help fraud victims recover losses has been a failure.

CFTC Chairman Philip McBride Johnson was scheduled to testify before the panel today. He already has told a House Agriculture subcommittee this week that he agrees with commission critics that it needs help from the states to catch the swindlers.

Henry Eschwege of the GAO said that victims of commodity fraud have little hope of recovering their losses despite a federal reparations program that is designed to be a small claims court.

The program has been little more than an empty promise to investors who have lost tens of thousands of dollars to commodity swindlers, Eschwege said.

"The program was to provide an expeditious, inexpensive and easy-to-use process," he said. "Our work revealed that the reparations program is not meeting its objectives."

He said a typical reparations claim by an investor takes three years to process. As of August 1981, only 53 individuals actually received any money from their claims, he said.

Eschwege also noted that a

Conley Senior Wins Contest

Charles P. Shaw Jr., a senior at D.H. Conley High School, won first place Tuesday in the local segment of the American Legion's national Oratorical Contest.

Shaw discussed the Bill of Rights and its fundamental importance to states and private citizens.

Robert Benjamin Maddox, a sophomore at North Pitt High, won second place with a discussion of the political situation following the Revolutionary War. Third place went to Scott Cannon, a senior at Farmville Central High School.

The second stage of the seven-segment contest will be held Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at the Legion Building.

Judges for the local contest were five ECU professors: Herbert Carlton, Marshall Helms, Lawrence Hough, Fred Parham and Helen Steer. Owen Kingsbury was chairman and director of the session.

The national finals will be held April 23, with the winner getting a $16,000 scholarship.

Legion Holding N.C. Convention

E. C. Toppin, state commander of the American Legion, announced today that the annual statewide spring conference will be held in Charlotte on Friday, Saturday and Sunday at the Holiday Inn on Woodlawn Avenue.

Conference activities begin with commission and committee meetings Friday. David A. Wade of Boonsboro, Md., the national vice commander, will speak Friday.

Greenville men who will be attending include District Commander Marshall Helms, Vice District Commander James Langley, Commander Seth Jones of Post 39, and Commander Ernest Brown of Post 160.

The American Legion Auxiliary also will meet this weekend. Greenville auxiliary members attending will include Division President Sarah Ashton and Dr. Betty Levey.

Both meetings will end Sunday with a joint memorial service.

RICHMOND, Va. — John Schweitz sparked the University of Richmond to a 21-2 margin over East Carolina University in the first seven and a half minutes of the second half last night, and the Spiders went on to record an 89-63 victory over the Pirates in an ECAC-South game.

nearly developed into a wild melee.
For the Pirates it was another disappointed performance as they went down to defeat for the fourth straight time — all to ECAC opponents. The Pirates were in the game for much of the first half, although Richmond did build up as much as an 11-point lead during the frame.

Richmond ahead for the first time, 10-8. Peartree then tied it up again, 10-10, before two baskets by Schweitz and a pair of Flye free throws ran Richmond out to a 16-10 lead.
East Carolina never caught up again.
"I feel like we're a team of Humpty Dumpties," Coach Dave Odom said afterwards. "We've been broken and we haven't been put back together again.

mistakes" to gain the big victory.
"When you get to the shape we're in physically, you can't do much. This is our sixth game in 12 days, and I'm sure that we're very, very tired. I'd like to be able to give them a breather, but it don't get no easier.
"So if something is to be done, we're the ones who have to change it."
After the Pirates lost the lead to Richmond, it was extended out to eight points quickly. Peartree's streak came to an end as he hit a free throw with 10:16 left to cut it to 16-11, but a three-point play by Tom Bethea just six seconds later ran it out to 19-11.

four, but Richmond quickly ran back out to eight on two jumpers by Bethea. The two teams swapped points after that until Bill Dooley hit a pair of free throws with 3:05 left for a 32-22 lead. Then, with 1:09 left, a Schweitz jumper upped the lead to 11, 36-25, before Michael Gibson hit off a rebound with four seconds left to cut it back to 36-27 at the half.
But during the early minutes of the second half, the Pirates could do nothing right. They missed on four shots and suffered eight turnovers as the Spiders pushed through 13 straight points.

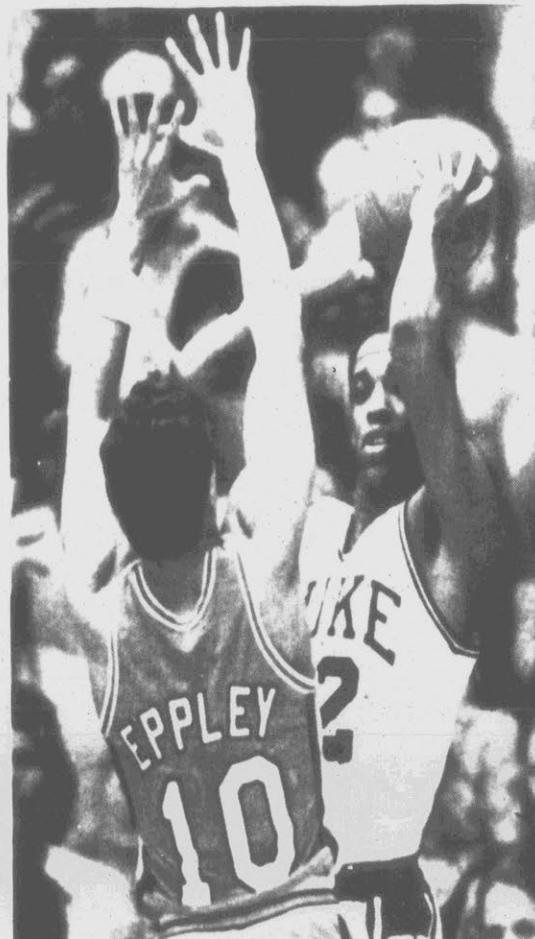

grove drove in for another layup with 12:10 left. But when Richmond had blow the lead out to 28, 57-29, just prior to the Hargrove shot.
Early in the string, Odom was hit with a technical as he argued with one of the officials during a time out. Asked later if he were trying to spark the team up by getting the "T" Odom said, "I wish I were that smart. I just felt, oh, I don't ever talk about officials. But I did want our players to know that I hadn't given up on them."
Then, just minutes after the lead reach 28, Schweitz and Hargrove suddenly began swapping punches under the Richmond basket. Pat Dierorio had just hit, and the teams were headed back downcourt. The two started slugging it out under the basket and both benches quickly emptied.

available for comment.
When the game resumed, Richmond quickly extended the lead to 30 — its apex — on four free throws, two each by Kelvin Johnson and Jeff Pehl, making it 65-35 with 9:15 left. Both teams began to sub after that, as the game wound down to the final 89-63 score.
Richmond shot 53.2 percent for the game, while holding the Pirates to only 39.3 percent. The Spiders, like the last three foes of the Pirates, also made good use of the foul line, hitting on 25 of 31 shots, as compared to 15 of 19 for ECU.

know that's as cliché as you can make it, but it's true.
"This has been a disappointing season. I expected more and I'll be the first to shoulder it. We just haven't been able to consistently play well."
Two Pirates didn't play in the game. Charles Green and Tony Byles. Both were held out because of injuries. Green, who twisted a knee against Navy suffered a sprained ankle in practice Tuesday. Byles has not responded to a hand injury suffered over a week ago.

Cavs, Heels, Pack, Devils Win

By The Associated Press
Some of the biggest names in the Atlantic Coast Conference lived up to their reputations Wednesday night — and the four winning teams were glad they did, while the four losers wished the stars had stayed at home.
There was Ralph Sampson, who as usual dominated inside play as top-ranked Virginia whipped Wake Forest 84-66. Vince Taylor delighted Duke fans in his final home appearance by sparking the Blue Devils to a 73-72, triple-overtime victory over Clemson.

he finished with 16 points for Georgia Tech, 9-15 and 3-11 in the ACC.
Worthy led North Carolina, 23-2 and 11-2 in the conference, with 20 points and 12 rebounds. Sam Perkins scored only six points but was credited by Tar Heel coach Dean Smith for stopping Steppe.

Wake Forest took a slim lead midway through the first half, but Sampson put Virginia back on top with an alley-oop dunk and a blocked shot which triggered a Cavalier fast break and layup. Virginia led 26-21 at halftime, and after an intermission the game became a rout.

Another Vince — Clemson's Vincent Hamilton — was the star in the opening half, scoring 14 of his 21 points and sparking the Tigers to a 39-32 halftime lead. Fred Gilliam added 16 and Horace Wyatt 13 for Clemson, 13-12 and 4-10 in the ACC.

"We really felt we needed one more win to get in the NCAAs," N.C. State coach Jim Valvano said. "This was a big win for us, and now I honestly don't think we can be kept out."

Maryland, 14-11 and 4-9 in the conference, was led by Adrian Branch with 12 points.
North Carolina gave Georgia Tech more than enough trouble without help from the Yellow Jackets. But Goza rubbed salt in his team's wounds, starting the second half by hitting an easy layup — in the Tar Heels' basket.

"I wish my mom could have seen this," said a chagrined Goza. "she always wanted me to score for North Carolina."
Brook Steppe, who had hit 81 percent of his shots in the previous three games, missed his first nine attempts though

Chip Engelland scored 16 points for Duke, 10-15 and 4-9 in the conference.
N.C. State's "D.C. connection" was at its best. Bailey hit eight of nine shots from the floor and finished with 20 points while leading both teams with six rebounds. Whittenburg added 14 points, including some crucial free throws, and Lowe dished off 10 assists.

The Wolfpack took a 25-22 halftime lead and the Terrapins narrowed it to 32-30 with nine minutes left. Then the Wolfpack outscored the Terps 12-4, with Whittenburg scoring all but two of the points in that spurt.

After the game the jubilant Wolfpack, 21-7 and 7-6 in the ACC, laid claim to an NCAA playoff spot.

At Durham's Cameron Indoor Stadium, no mystery surrounded Taylor's future. The 6-foot-5 senior guard knew it was his final home game and played as though it would be the only one he'd remember, scoring 35 points and hitting the winning basket after leading Duke through regulation and three overtime periods.

"I don't believe it right now myself..." Taylor said in a farewell address to the crowd after he was all but dragged from the dressing room following the dramatic win. "This is the greatest win of my life. I'm just thankful..."

Sampson scored 22 points and snatched down 20 rebounds. Craig Robinson added 20 points and Othell Wilson 15 for Virginia, 27-1 and 12-1 in the ACC.
John Toms scored 17 points for Wake Forest, 18-7 and 8-5 in the conference.
"We played real good defense in the first half and that kept us in it," said Virginia coach Terry Holland. "In the second half, the shots started dropping for us, and we were able to get going a little."
Sampson wouldn't say whether the game had been his last in Charlottesville's University Hall in the face of rumors that he would turn pro after this, his junior season.
"I'm not even thinking about that," he said. "Not now."

Sam Jones

Mary Denkler

East Carolina's Jones, Denkler: Odd Couple Or Dynamic Duo

By John Stallings
Special To The Reflector

Sam Jones and Mary Denkler are as unlikely a duo as one could imagine. Jones is fast, very fast. Denkler is no speed merchant. Jones is flashy, exciting. Denkler is steady, predictable. Left-handed Jones can put the ball on the floor and go to the basket with anyone. Denkler works for the open shot and rarely dribbles. Jones is a perfect wing player. The 6-0 Denkler is smallish for a major college center and doesn't jump that well.

Together, they are one of the finest one-two combinations in women's collegiate basketball. Like the entire East Carolina Lady Pirate team, they complement one another. They fit together. That has been the key for Cathy Andruzzi's steadily improving Lady Pirates.

Jones and Denkler will have their work cut out for them Saturday night when nationally 13th ranked South Carolina comes to Minges Coliseum. Tipoff is at 7:30 p.m.

"Youth Night" will be observed by the Lady Pirates at the game. All youths, 18 and under, will be admitted for $1 each.

The duo is in no small way responsible for East Carolina's surge after a 4-7 start. The Lady Pirates have rattled off 12 wins in the last 13 games with the only loss coming on the road to Old Dominion. The team has won on tough, aggressive defense and the offensive punch on Denkler and Jones.

With all their differences, the two have one striking similarity — the ability to put the basketball through the iron. Denkler, a junior from Alexandria, Va., became the eighth player in East Carolina history to reach the 1,000-point plateau earlier this season. She needs only five more points Saturday to pass both Kathy Riley and Sheila Cotton and claim fourth spot on the ECU career scoring list with her senior year still ahead of her. She leads the team and the state with a 20.3 scoring average and has ranked among the national scoring leaders all season. She leads ECU with a 47.2 percent field goal mark and trails only Jones with a 73.5 free throw percentage. The team's leading rebounder with an 8.5

average, she ranks fourth on the career list with 569 in three seasons.

Jones is third in this rate with a 16.9 scoring average and leads North Carolina with 147 assists, an average of 6.1 per game. She needs just five assists to climb to No. 2 in career assists despite having played only two seasons at East Carolina. The two-time Louisburg College junior college all-America set a new single season steals record in Sunday's 108-54 win over Western Kentucky. Her three steals pushed her season's total to 65. Her two-year total of 117 ranks fourth on the all-time ECU steals list.

Jones and Denkler possess a shooting touch that would make most male college players green with envy. Around 15-feet, both are deadly shooters. But both do much more than fire up jumpers.

Jones was the team most valuable defensive player last season and has been collecting "Rat of the Game" honors for best single game defensive performances by the handful. Denkler is a great offensive rebounder and has improved dramatically on defense.

"Sam Jones is possibly the best player I've ever had a chance to coach," said Andruzzi, who will be going for her 100th career win against South Carolina Saturday. "You need a person on the court that creates. Sam creates things for her teammates on offense. She's a tough competitor and totally unselfish. You don't get 147 assists in a season if you're not a great team player."

"Mary is a super ballplayer. She scores against the tough ones. She had 26 points and 15 rebounds against N.C. State, 28 points and 11 rebounds against Old Dominion and 29 points and nine rebounds against Northwestern. She's an excellent natural inside scorer."

Andruzzi added, "Her defense has been the biggest improvement in her game this season. She is a big asset on both ends of the court."

Only South Carolina and North Carolina remain on the regular season schedule. The Lady Pirates hope for an NCAA regional bid.

"The 'odd couple' will have a lot to do with reaching that goal.

Cummings Sparks Bucks' Win

By The Associated Press
When the Milwaukee Bucks need a big man in a hurry, Pat Cummings will do in a pinch.

"We rely heavily on our bench, and we like Pat in big-man situations," said Milwaukee Coach Don Nelson after a 113-106 National Basketball Association victory over the New Jersey Nets Wednesday night. "He's one of the reasons we can match up well against anyone's bench in the league."

Cummings scored 19 points in only 23 minutes to get the Bucks back on the winning track after their 12-game streak was snapped by the New York Knicks Tuesday night.

Nets Coach Larry Brown had scouted the Bucks Tuesday night and noted Cummings' contribution.

"He played well in the first half, scoring eight points. But then he didn't play at all in the second half," Brown recalled.

But rather than second-guess Nelson's decision not to use him late against the Knicks, Cummings explained, "They were playing smaller forwards. Nellie thought it was better and I went along with him."

Cummings, the third-year pro from the University of Cincinnati, was at his best Wednesday night playing center in the fourth period. With Bob Lanier sitting with his fifth personal foul with 9:16 remaining, Cummings came off the bench.

When he entered the game,

Milwaukee led 91-88. By the time Lanier replaced him with 3:50 to go, Cummings had scored seven points and Milwaukee led 106-96.

Marques Johnson and Quinn Buckner led Milwaukee with 21 points apiece while Ray Williams scored a game-high 26 for New Jersey.

In other NBA action, it was Boston 132, Utah 90; Indiana 118, New York 87; Portland 123, Kansas 111; Houston 120, Denver 110; Phoenix 131, Cleveland 97.

Celtics 132, Jazz 90
Larry Bird scored 27 points and Boston burst into a 30-point lead four minutes into the second quarter to crush Utah. The 42-point winning margin was Boston's widest of the season. Utah suffered its worst loss.

Pacers 118, Knicks 87
Herb Williams and Tom Owens led seven Indiana players in double figures as the Pacers buried New York by 31 points. The Pacers trailed only by two points twice early in the first quarter. But then they took the lead for good on two free throws by Williams with 6:35 remaining in the period.

Trail Blazers 123, Kings 111
Jim Paxson scored 25 points and fueled a third-quarter rally to lift Portland over Kansas City. Paxson ripped off a string of eight points late in the third quarter to break a 75-75 tie and put the Trail Blazers ahead for good as they snapped a five-game losing streak. Kansas City, losers of three straight games, trimmed the lead to seven at three times in the fourth quarter but could get no closer.

Phil Ford led Kansas City with 23 points.
Rockets 120, Nuggets 110
Allen Leavell scored a career-high 32 points and Houston survived the first sub-30-point game by Moses Malone in more than a month to whip Denver.

Leavell, a third-year guard, had his earlier career-high against Denver Nov. 4 when he scored 29. He hit 11 of his 13 shots in the second half when he racked up 23 of his points as Houston won for the 12th time in the last 14 games.

Suns 131, Cavaliers 97
Kyle Macy contributed 21 points to lead Phoenix over Cleveland. Macy, a second-year guard, had 14 first-half points as Phoenix streaked to a 58-50 lead and was not threatened thereafter.

GCA Hosting District Tourney

A Staff Report
Greenville Christian Academy enters the District IV playoffs Friday evening having lost only one game this year, but GCA head coach Dale Thatcher is not about to predict a district title.

"I wouldn't guess who'll win," Thatcher said. "Your guess is as good as mine who'll come out of this mess."

The District IV tournament is being held at Greenville Christian for the first time and begins Friday afternoon with two girls' games. But it is Friday night, when the boys take the floor, that is leaving Thatcher guessing.

Wake Christian will play Wilson Christian at 6:30 followed at 8 p.m. by GCA's return bout with Falls Road. The championship game is scheduled for 8 p.m. Saturday.

"We beat Falls Road by one, we beat Wake on a last second shot and we beat Wilson in three overtimes," Thatcher said. "So, I don't know who'll win."

One plus for the Knights, however, is the fact Falls Road will be without one of their top players. "They're not the same team they were when we played them the first time," Thatcher said.

Even if the Knights fail to win the district title, however, they appear to have a good chance at making the state tournament. The six district winners automatically qualify for the state meet, set for March 4-6 in Winston-Salem.

Two at-large berths fill out the eight-team bracket and Thatcher believes if his Knights fail to win the district they have a good shot at gaining an at-large bid.

Considering GCA's won-loss record, he may be right. The Knights have not lost to an in-state foe all season. GCA, seeded first in the district, is 18-1 and its only loss came to a Huntington, W. Va., high school in a national tournament.

"We've just got a team that's meshed together well," Thatcher said. "I can't really say what our strength is."

The starting five are made up of four seniors and a junior. The lone junior is 6-3 center Jerry Butts. David Hollingsworth (6-1) and Jerry Simpson (5-11) are at the forwards while John Parnell (6-1) and Troy Hudson (6-0) man the guard slots.

Hollingsworth leads the team in scoring, averaging around 19 to 20 points a game. Parnell, who scored 31 points Friday night in the opening round of the East Carolina Conference tournament, is right behind, averaging around 17 points per game.

Parnell, the Knights' point guard, also hits around 80 percent of his free throws. "He runs the show out there," Thatcher said. "He makes my job a lot easier."

The tournament begins at 2:30 Friday when Wilson Christian's girls meet Wake Christian, the #1 seed and the defending state champ. Falls Road will face GCA's girls at 5 p.m. The Lady Knights are 8-6 going into the district tournament.

The girls' district championship contest will be held Saturday evening at 6:30.

Tickets for the tournament are $2 for adults and $1.50 for students.

Rocky Mount Teams Win

Rocky Mount continued its march in the Big East 4-A Tournament, while Roanoke River Conference teams continued to dominate the District I-3-A event, and favored teams won in District I-1-A play last night.

In the Big East 4-A Tournament, Rocky Mount's boys and girls both advanced to Friday night's finals with wins last night. The boys downed Wilson Hunt, 76-47, and will face the winner of tonight's Fike-Rose game (9 p.m.) for the title. Rocky Mount has already clinched one of the two state playoff berths, so the winner of tonight's game will take the other spot.

The Rocky Mount girls topped Kinston, 62-42, to move into the finals against the winner of tonight's Fike-Beddingfield winner. Like the boys, the two finalists advance to state play.

In the District I-3-A Tournament, being played at Weldon, the Roanoke River Conference teams continued to oust the Northeastern teams. Warren County's girls ousted Edenton, 64-51, while the Northwest Halifax girls tripped Edenton, 58-32.

Tonight, Roanoke's girls face Northampton at 6:30 p.m., while Bertie's boys face Gumberry.

Earlier in the tournament, Warren County downed the Plymouth girls and Northampton upset Roanoke's boys.

Time Trials To Begin

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (AP) — NASCAR's Winston Cup Grand National drivers will begin arriving at North Carolina Motor Speedway Thursday to begin preparation for Sunday's Warner Hodgdon Carolina 500.

Time trials to determine the first 20 starters in the $232,665 event will get under way at 2:30 p.m. Thursday. The winner of the Busch Pole Position Award will collect $1,700. The winner will also earn a position in the 1983 Busch Clash at Daytona Beach, Fla., for an extra bonus of at least $10,000.

Among the favorites for the top qualifying spot are Darrell Waltrip, winner of two races and one pole at North Carolina Motor Speedway last year; Benny Parsons, Daytona 500 pole-sitter two weeks ago; Cale Yarborough, Richard Petty, Bobby Allison, Neil Bonnett, Buddy Baker, Harry Gant and Dale Earnhardt.

Grand National qualifying will continue Friday and Saturday.

NASCAR's Late Model Sportsman drivers will qualify Friday for Saturday's Coca-Cola 200, scheduled to begin at 2 p.m.

More than 40,000 people are expected for the 12:05 p.m. start of the 17th Carolina 500.

Kansas State Upsets Missouri

By The Associated Press
 When it comes to poise, you can't beat Jack Hartman's boys.
 "Our team did a good job of keeping its poise," Hartman said after his unranked Kansas State team upset No. 5 Missouri 57-56 in college basketball Wednesday night. "We got tired at the end, but we still played great."
 Perhaps the most poised of all the Kansas State players was Ed Nealy, who calmly hit two free throws in the last five seconds of the winning points in the midst of warring hands and thunderous noise at Missouri's Hearnes Auditorium in Columbia.
 "We felt very confident with Nealy at the line," said Hartman. "He has done it for us before."
 Nealy said he used the power of positive thinking to overcome the distractions of a hostile crowd.
 "I was just trying to think positive," he said. "I've been having a little bad luck at the foul line lately. It was pretty much a mental thing — I tried to get a good mental frame of mind and shoot it smooth."

 Nealy had been shooting only 46 percent from the foul line in conference games, but he was five of six from the line Wednesday night as the Wildcats avenged a 59-58 loss to Missouri earlier this season at Manhattan, Kan., while handing the Tigers their second straight loss.
 "I thought we did a good job of keeping faith," Hartman said of his team's stretch drive, which overcame an eight-point deficit. "It was a tremendous win for us. We've got a lot of courage, a lot of pride."
 Nealy, who scored 17 points, went for an offensive rebound and put up a wild shot that missed, but he was fouled by Missouri's Ricky Frazier to set the stage for his game-winning foul shot.
 Missouri, which lost a 63-51 decision last Saturday at Georgetown, called time after Kansas State went ahead, but Marvin McCrary missed a wild 40-footer with one second left.

 In other games involving the nation's cranked teams, No. 1 Virginia tripped Pittsburgh 82-77, No. 2 North Carolina trimmed Georgia Tech 77-54, No. 3 DePaul edged Furman 75-74, No. 6 West Virginia tripped Pittsburgh 82-77, No. 7 Kentucky stopped Mississippi Tech 71-54, No. 12 Georgetown trounced Providence 60-42, No. 15 Arkansas nipped Southern Methodist 54-53, No. 17 Alabama escaped with a 74-72 victory over Auburn and Georgia shocked No. 19 Tennessee 64-63.
Top Ten
 Ralph Sampson scored 22 points and grabbed 20 rebounds and Craig Robinson added 20 points and nine rebounds as Virginia overpowered Wake Forest.
 The Cavaliers' 12th victory in 13 league starts assured them of at least a tie for the regular-season Atlantic Coast Conference championship.

Virginia holds a one-game lead over North Carolina, and can claim its second consecutive outright championship by winning at Maryland Saturday.
 "Playing catch-up most of the time, we weren't able to do the kinds of things we like to do," said Wake Forest Coach Carl Tacy. "Our foul problems hurt us, particularly having (center Jim) Johnstone on the bench."
 James Worthy scored 20 points to lead North Carolina to an easy victory over Georgia Tech. The Tar Heels had little trouble disposing of the Yellow Jackets in while posting their 23rd victory in 25 games.
 Anthony Byrd led Georgia Tech with 18 points.
 North Carolina also outbounded Georgia Tech 50-32, numbers that were music to Coach Dean Smith's ears.
 "I thought we played a great rebounding game," said Smith. "I was impressed with Worthy's work on the boards and Sam Perkins' defense."
 Worthy scored his 20 points in 26 minutes and Georgia Tech Coach Bobby Cremins expressed gratitude that Smith held Worthy's playing time down.

 "I really appreciate the fact that he substituted tonight, because the score could have been a lot worse than it was," Cremins said.
 Terry Cummings scored 19 points and Bernard Randolph had 17 to help DePaul beat Furman. Cummings and Randolph combined to lead the Blue Demons back from an eight-point deficit at the half.
 Greg Jones scored 22 points and Russel Todd hit a pair of pressure free throws as West Virginia defeated upset-minded Pittsburgh to keep the Mountaineers' winning streak alive at 23 games. Todd's free throws with 49 seconds to play gave the Mountaineers, 24-1, a 78-73 lead. Seconds later, Jones stole the ball and led Tony Washam for a dunk shot.
 Derrick Hord scored six points during a 16-4 run that helped Kentucky thrash Mississippi State. The Wildcats reeled off 10 straight points during the streak, including a steal and layup by Hord and consecutive baskets by Dicky Beal, to take a 30-14 lead and Mississippi State never recovered.

Claims Athletes Back His Bill

BOWLING GREEN, Ohio (AP) — A lawyer who played a major role in drafting a bill to put pro athletes in prison and hand them stiff fines for violence to opponents says most players back his measure.
 Lawyer Richard Harrow of Miami, Fla., told a press conference at Bowling Green State University that the National Football League Players' Association has told him the union wants to set up some sort of system to reduce player violence.
 "The only people against this bill are certain NHL (National Hockey League) people" who believe that fights on the ice are an inherent part of the game, Harrow said.
 Rep. Ronald M. Mottl, D-Ohio, introduced the bill, which is now before a subcommittee of the U.S. House of Representatives.
 The bill would fine a player $5,000 and put him in jail for a year following a criminal conviction of "knowingly using excessive force and thereby causes a risk of significant bodily injury to another person."
 The legislation would create an implied threat to the pro hockey, football, basketball and baseball leagues. Harrow said the threat would be "clean up your own houses before the federal government intervenes to clean them up."
 Harrow, executive director of the Dade County, Fla. Sports Authority and author of the book "Violence In Sports," said his bill creates a "clear line" between physical force related to normal plays in pro sports and what he terms "sports attacks."
 Harrow said the bill defines sports violence as "force having no reasonable relationship to the competitive goals of the sport, is unreasonably violent and could not be reasonably foreseen or consented to by the person affected."
 Noting there are only a handful of such incidents in any given year, Harrow said the intent of the measure is not to "throw a bunch of poor athletes in jail." Instead, Harrow's purpose is to show "the symbolism of federal intervention. That's the theory behind the bill."
 Harrow said he doesn't think the chances are good that the bill will ever become law, but said if pro sports police their own ranks, it will have had an effect.

Court Security Review In Wake Of Shootings

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A committee will try to balance personal freedom and public interest as it investigates security at the Guilford County Courthouse, the county's senior resident Superior Court judge says.

Judge Charles Kivett created the committee in the wake of two recent shootings in the courthouse, one of them fatal. He said he hoped to convene the committee Friday.

"Under our laws, individuals attending court have a right to be free from unreasonable searches or possible harassment," he said. "On the other hand, there is a definite responsibility imposed upon the court to guarantee the safety and security of those attending court."

Kivett said he does not know how long it will take for the panel to complete its work.

"These matters are very sensitive," he said. "We have to be concerned whether we can search people indiscriminately."

Kivett named himself chairman of the panel. Other appointees include Forrest Campbell, chairman of the county commission; Public Defender Wallace Harrelson; Sheriff Paul Gibson, the presidents of the High Point and Greensboro bar associations, and other attorneys, including former District Attorney Ray Alexander.

District Attorney Michael Schlosser was not named to the committee.

"I selected the people who I thought are best qualified and who could approach this matter with an open mind," said Kivett.

He said Schlosser gave his opinion on courtroom safety during a weekend interview with a TV station. Kivett said he wants people on the committee who have not formed opinions already on how the problem should be solved.

Schlosser said Wednesday that his own staff is preparing to release a series of recommendations about courtroom security.

"I'm open-minded, but my secretaries and staff are concerned having their work interrupted by gunfire, so we are pushing ahead with our recommendations," he said.

Last Friday, Ralph Edward Thomas committed suicide in a third floor courtroom in the courthouse.

The 37-year-old defendant smuggled a .22-caliber pistol into the courtroom and shot himself in the head seconds after Judge William Helms sentenced him to life in prison for rape.

On Dec. 10, Horace Wilkerson, 21, shot himself with a homemade gun in a courtroom during a hearing in a domestic case. Wilkerson survived.

Shirley Daniels To Be Honored

The Black Awareness Corporation will honor Eldress Shirley Daniels of Greenville at 7:30 p.m. Friday at the Cornerstone Missionary Baptist Church on Railroad Street.

A short dramatization about black music will also be presented on in recognition of Black History Month. The Revelation Singers of Goldsboro will be guests at the meeting.

A group of ECU medical students will present a program on black history. This program is being sponsored by TSCD Sound productions and The Golden Dragon restaurant.

Fossil Site Bulldozed

SUMMIT, Del. (AP) — A 70- to 80-million-year-old fossil site that has been prized by geologists for 150 years has been bulldozed by mistake, officials said.

An unidentified spokesman for the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers said the corps was not aware of the importance of the site attached to the site, known as Deep Cut, when it bulldozed the area in an attempt to stabilize an eroding bank of the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal.

"I'm outraged that it could happen," said Robert Jordan, Delaware's state geologist. But it appeared to be "an honest mistake," he added.

The bulldozing has been stopped until a committee of state and corps officials can discuss possibilities for stabilizing what is left of the site.

Thomas E. Pickett, associate director of the Delaware Geological Survey, said the site is one of the best of its type in the mid-Atlantic region. He said the nearest exposure of comparable size and quality is at Martha's Vineyard, Mass.

Deep Cut contains a number of marine fossils and shows what the area looked like when that part of New Castle County was beach and shallow bay millions of years ago.

POLICE CLEAN-UP

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — The Mozambique Security Ministry has fired nearly 400 police agents for "lack of discipline, laziness and infiltration", and detained an unspecified number, the Portuguese national news agency reports.

opinion that the 1978 law establishing natural gas decontrol should not be tampered with.

Rep. John Dingell, chairman of the Energy and Commerce Committee, and Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, said they were alarmed at several actions the FERC either has taken or is considering taking to increase the price of different categories of natural gas.

Urged To Halt Price Pressure

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission is being urged by several Democratic House members to halt its efforts to accelerate price increases of natural gas.

In a resolution introduced Wednesday, the congressmen said the agency "should take no action to accelerate the decontrol of natural gas prices."

While the resolution would have no binding effect on the executive branch agency, the congressmen, who chair committees to which the FERC must report, said they meant to convey Congress'

N.C. Airlines Offer Reduced Rates Outdo Competitors

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Several airlines are engaging in all-out price warfare as they try to corner the North Carolina air travel market or at least get an edge on their competitors, officials say.

Both Delta and Eastern Airlines recently began flexible fare programs designed to match the lowest fare of any airline to any of their destinations.

While Delta says its curate tactics reflect its desire to cover its entire system in a time of rapidly changing fares, Eastern frankly acknowledges its latest move is a swipe at Piedmont Airlines, the Winston-Salem based line that offers lower-priced flights with more stops along the way.

In the latest matching scheme, Eastern allows an air traveler with a ticket for a hopscotch flight — one that stops in several cities before reaching its final destination — to trade in his ticket for one on a non-stop Eastern flight to the same city without having to pay more. There are certain restrictions, though. The passenger must have bought his ticket at least seven days before the travel date and cannot trade it until the day before the scheduled flight.

By accepting last-minute trade-ups, Eastern hopes to put passengers paying lower fares in seats that ordinarily wouldn't be filled, said Barbara H. Wilder, manager of Eastern's ticket offices in Raleigh.

Eastern began a seven-week test of its trade-up plan Tuesday in Richmond, Va., Charlotte and Raleigh-Durham, where there is "very strong competition from Piedmont Airlines," she said.

"We feel that it will be very well received because we're offering a higher level of service for the same price," Ms. Wilder said.

She also said Eastern "guards itself from being undercut by competitors" by offering a matching fare system like the trade-up instead of establishing specific fares.

But Piedmont officials said they were undaunted by the Piedmont and Delta plans.

"Piedmont is not at all worried that Eastern will take away business," said Donald F. McGuire, Piedmont vice president for public affairs.

"In fact, they're doing a good job for us. They're admitting that we have the best fares, and they're educating thousands of potential travelers about that."

Both Eastern and Delta offer other matching fare systems with fewer restrictions than Eastern's trade-up plan. Eastern promises to match the fare of any airline to any destination Eastern flies, provided the other flight is non-stop.

"We have had lots of inquiries about this and a lot of matches have been made," Ms. Wilder said. "The response has really been overwhelming."

Delta offers a similar matching fare with other airlines' flights on the same routes and with the same service, said R.E. Duncan, Delta's marketing manager in eastern North Carolina.

Finally Gets His Diploma

CHICAGO (AP) — Abram Pritzker isn't one to turn down a free offer, especially one that might, who knows, give him a boost in the world of business, as many a guidance counselor might say.

So when Pritzker was asked why he was picking up his high school diploma 69 years late, he replied, "They offered it to me, so I said I'd take it."

In 1913, Pritzker felt high school was "pretty boring" and wanted to go on to bigger and more rewarding challenges.

He tried Northwestern University for a year, graduated from the University of Chicago several years later, picked up a law degree from Harvard, co-founded the Hyatt Hotel chain and helped amass one of the nation's largest family fortunes.

But he never did pick up his high school diploma, until Tuesday.

In a special ceremony at his not-quite alma mater, Schurz High School, Chicago Public Schools Superintendent Ruth B. Love handed Pritzker, 86, his diploma and inducted him into the Schurz Hall of Fame.

NOT IMPRESSED BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Forest management and reforestation have made little impact on the Asia-Pacific region where deforestation continues at the rate of 12,500 acres per day, the U.N. Environment Program says.

What Next?

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. District Judge Barrington J. Parker is asking federal prosecutors to advise him of their next legal move in the case of John W. Hinckley Jr. so he can determine when to begin the accused presidential assailant's trial.

Parker scheduled a status hearing today following a federal appeals court ruling that the government could not submit oral and written evidence obtained from Hinckley.

The trial had been scheduled to begin Jan. 4, but was postponed indefinitely pending a ruling on whether that evidence would be admissible.

A three-judge panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals ruled Tuesday that an oral statement Hinckley gave to authorities without his attorney being present and handwritten notes by Hinckley seized from his cell at the federal prison in Butner, N.C., could not be admitted as evidence.

Federal prosecutors have not said whether they plan to ask the full 11-member appeals court to rehear arguments on the suppression of evidence issue or whether they would ask the Supreme Court to rule on use of the evidence.

The government seeks to use the handwritten notes and the oral statement to rebut Hinckley's contention that he was insane when he shot President Reagan, White House Press Secretary James Brady, a Secret Service agent and a Washington policeman March 30 outside the Washington Hilton hotel.

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Reactivating the Immune System

An excellent article in one of our prestigious journals, Geriatrics, highlighted new frontiers of research on modern medicine. It devoted itself to the possibility of reactivating the immune system in the elderly. For as one grows older, the immune system seems to be less efficient and people are deprived of their ability to counteract the onslaught of pollution, environmental changes, bacteria, viruses and a host of other hazards that surround us.

The decline of the immune system is said to be responsible for many of the illnesses identified with the aging process.

Experimental studies point to the possibility that replenishing our immune deficiency may yet prevent disorders such as arthritis, osteoporosis and arteriosclerosis.

In this fine article written by Saul Kent, a science writer, he points out that "one method of markedly increasing the life span in laboratory animals is by limiting food intake... Apparently food restriction delays the early maturation of the immune system and retards the age-related decline in that system."

Such findings in experimental animals when translated into their value in humans suggest that there may be major health benefits if there were a marked reduction in the amount of food consumed by the elderly. Of course, that reduction is predicated on the fact that supplementary vitamins and nutrients will be contained even in the limited food consumption.

Other possibilities include the use of amino acids to rejuvenate the immune system. Experimental studies suggest that RNA injections may be of value in the treatment of some forms of cancer.

This work is a radical departure from the standard approach to delaying the process of aging.

It is most comforting to doctors and to the laity that an army of dedicated research scientists is constantly protecting our health destiny.

One of the most miraculous accomplishments in modern medicine and surgery is the successful transplantation of the cornea of the eye from one person to another. This operation, once thought to be in the realm of science fiction, can now be performed successfully by well-trained eye surgeons all over the world.

Thousands of people are blessed once again with their sight through the generosity of strangers who have contributed their corneas for transplantation.

The Eye Bank for Sight Restoration, created in 1944, serves as a dedicated agency to seek out the generous people who would bequeath, after their death, a fragment of eye tissue so that the blind may again see.

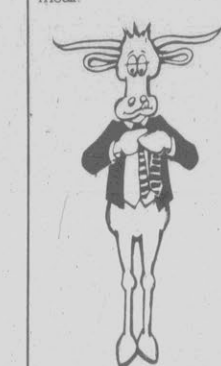

This is the ultimate in philanthropy and selflessness. The gift of sight is a living testimonial of man's tender devotion to man.

Williams' Credibility Is Up To Jurors To Decide

LEAVING COURT — Superior Court Judge Clarence Cooper makes his way through newsmen as he leaves the Fulton County Courthouse in Atlanta after presiding over another day in the trial of Wayne Williams. (AP Laserphoto)

By RICHARD T. PIENCIAK
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — The focus clearly was on Wayne B. Williams' credibility during his three days of testimony. Now it is up to the jury to decide who told the truth; the defendant, or the parade of prosecution witnesses he called liars.

"Are you saying that all of these witnesses that came in here and the points you've contradicted, they've all lied against you?" Assistant District Attorney Jack E. Mallard asked at one point.

"I didn't say all of them did. I say some of them have lied, some of them have told half truths, some of them have been mistaken, and, of course, some of them have outright lied," the defendant replied.

Mallard spent the most time grilling Williams on the events leading up to and culminating with his being stopped near the Jackson Parkway bridge on May 22, 1981, after members of a stakeout team heard a splash.

The body of Nathaniel Cater, one of the two young blacks Williams is accused of murdering, floated to the surface of the Chattahoochee River two days later, 1 1/4 miles downstream from the bridge.

The points of contention didn't take long to surface. Williams had just sat down in the witness chair Monday when he told defense attorney Alvin Binder that as far as victims Cater and Jimmy Ray Payne were concerned, "I've never seen them before in my life."

Williams is also charged with killing Payne. Payne and Cater are among 28 young blacks whose deaths in a 22-month period were investigated by a special police task force. No charges have been filed in the 26 other deaths, but the prosecution has introduced evidence linking 10 other slayings of young blacks with Cater's and Payne's.

Robert Henry testified he saw the defendant holding hands with Cater about six hours before Williams was stopped near the bridge. "I done told you I don't hold hands with no man, nowhere," Williams testified.

A. B. Dean, 80, told the jury he saw Williams standing on the side of a road with Payne near the same river on the day he disappeared. Williams said that was untrue.

Darryl Davis, 15, testified Williams promised him work, gave him money and fondled him. "He's a bare-faced liar," Williams replied on the stand.

Teen-ager Andrew Hayes told the jury that Williams picked him up at a game room along with Timothy Hill, another of the 28 slain young blacks. "I don't know any Andrew Hayes," Williams said.

Mallard followed: "Then you wouldn't have offered him $20 then to commit sodomy, would you?"

He answered: "If I had never seen him before, how could I?"

Police made a connection between the death of Charles Stephens, another murder victim, and fibers found in a car Williams once owned. But the defendant testified, "I assume they put them (the fibers) there," saying he last saw the car three months before Stephens disappeared.

Regarding a green carpet in the Williams home, a key element of the state's fiber evidence, Williams told the jury: "I know we had the carpet before the Christmas of 1969."

The prosecution brought in carpet experts to say the rug was made only in 1970 and 1971.

Davis and Eric Thompson, 15, testified Williams attended the funeral of Terry Pue, another victim, but the defendant said he had not.

Two sheriff's deputies claimed they saw Williams taking photographs at the Pue crime scene. Williams said: "I was not there."

Lugene Laster, a young man who knew murder victim

Joseph "Jo Jo" Bell, testified he saw Williams pick up Bell at a school basketball court. "No, I don't know Jo Jo Bell and I don't know where the basketball court is at the school," the defendant answered.

James Barrett testified he saw Williams with his cousin, victim William Barrett. Davis said he saw victim Lubie Geter getting into Williams' car. Ruth Warren said she saw Geter and the defendant talking together.

Williams denied all the assertions.

Sharon Blakely, a Williams business associate, testified he told her he had thrown trash off the bridge. But Williams insisted he "did not throw anything off that bridge."

When asked why he drove to a telephone across the river, passing 25 lighted phones in the process, Williams told Mallard: "To each his own. I have the right to use a telephone where I know there is one."

Asked if officer Freddie Jacobs was lying when he testified the defendant had turned his car around at the end of the bridge, Williams said: "Of course he was."

Williams denied Mrs. Blakely's contention that he told her he would confess if police gathered sufficient evidence. He also said Mrs. Blakely and her husband lied when they claimed he had downgraded "certain-type kids."

"All I can say is I just told you what happened, and if what I said and what officer Jacobs or somebody said disagree, it just has to disagree..."

Avers Williams Choked Father

By DAVID PACE
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Wayne B. Williams once beat and choked his elderly father for refusing to write him a check and slapped his mother when she tried to intervene, a teen-ager testified at Williams' murder trial.

Sheldon Kemp, 17, was one of a dozen rebuttal witnesses called by prosecutors Wednesday after testimony by the 23-year-old defendant ended with a series of angry confrontations with Assistant District Attorney Jack Mallard.

Williams was the 65th and final defense witness in his trial on murder charges in the deaths of Nathaniel Cater, 27, and Jimmy Ray Payne, 21, two of 28 young blacks whose deaths during a 22-month period were investigated by a special police task force.

No arrests have been made in the 26 other slayings, but prosecutors contend the deaths of Cater and Payne were part of a pattern of killings and introduced evidence linking Williams to the slayings of 10 other young blacks.

Williams' combative attitude during cross-examination Wednesday contrasted with his calm demeanor during his previous two days on the stand. He called Mallard "a fool" and insisted the prosecutor was being unfair in his questioning.

But despite his confrontations with Mallard, Williams never faltered in maintaining his innocence in the killings of Cater, Payne and the 10 other young blacks.

Kemp, who said he once was a singer in a group promoted by Williams, testified he was at the Williams' home in the summer of 1979 when the fight broke out between Williams and his 68-year-old father, Homer, over the check.

"Wayne started cussing and stuff and trying to beat him and push him," Kemp said. "His mom was trying to keep him away from his daddy and he pushed her and slapped her."

Kemp said the two men eventually ended up in a bedroom with Homer Williams lying on a bed and his son sitting on his stomach "with his hands on his throat."

When Williams let his father up, Kemp said the elder Williams got a shotgun and pointed it at his son, "saying he was going to shoot his head off."

Both Williams and his father, who testified in his son's behalf, denied any such incident took place when they were asked about it by prosecutors earlier in the trial.

Defense lawyer Alvin

Binder suggested that Kemp was getting revenge on Williams because he was kicked out of the singing group and because Williams' parents refused to buy him a mini-bike. The youth denied both allegations.

Another rebuttal witness, Angelo Fuster, disputed Williams' version of events before dawn May 22, when he was stopped by a police stakeout team near a Chattahoochee River bridge shortly after an officer under the bridge reported hearing a loud splash in the river.

Fuster, who was former Mayor Maynard Jackson's press secretary, said Williams' father told him June 3 that his son had said he stopped on the bridge "to get rid of some trash."

Williams testified he never stopped on the bridge and never threw anything in the river. His father denied ever telling anyone that his son had thrown trash into the river.

Prosecutors called two rebuttal witnesses in an effort to dispute the contention by Williams and his parents that the green wall-to-wall carpet in their home was installed in 1968, rather than 1971 as prosecutors claimed.

State Health Plan Confused

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A new health insurance plan for state employees has been thrown into confusion as a result of a state attorney general's opinion that legislators should not serve on some state committees.

In the opinion, Attorney General Rufus Edmisten said some committees, including the Committee on Employee Hospital and Medical Benefits, violate the separation of powers doctrine and the prohibition against the Legislature delegating authority to committees.

Rep. William T. Watkins, D-Granville, said that because the health benefits committee was included in the opinion, the new health plan may have to be referred to the full Legislature.

The new plan would be more costly to employees because it would increase co-insurance and deductibles. It would cover 425,000 state employees, teachers, retirees and their dependents.

The new plan would limit the total deductible and co-insurance to be paid in a year to $1,150.

State officials said Edmisten's ruling also raises questions of whether the committee's action last year freezing hospital and doctor reimbursement rates under the insurance plan was legal.

Since the freeze was imposed Oct. 1, state employees and teachers with medical bills have had to pay the difference between the rates in effect then and the current rates, which have risen in recent months.

State Treasurer Harlan Boyles said there were constitutional questions over whether the Legislature could delegate authority for the plan to a committee, but he was told he was over-reacting.

"Now we're going to have to see what happens and play it by ear," he said.

Fewer Driving State's Cars

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Hundreds of state employees have stopped driving state-owned cars back and forth from home since a commuting fee was imposed, says the head of the state's motor fleet management division.

"It (the fee) is having the effect the Legislature wanted," said Rilla Moran Woods. "Less of the state's gasoline is being burned by people commuting."

Seven Council of State members are avoiding the fee through a special exemption granted by Secretary of Administration Jane Patterson.

Technology Espionage Of Major Concern To U.S.

Seek Views

The Pitt County Board of County Commissioners has scheduled a meeting with about 50 county residents Friday in an effort to hear their views on the General Assembly's legislative redistricting plan for Pitt County and to raise funds to research ways to challenge the plan.

Under the plan, submitted to the U.S. Justice Department for approval, Bethel and Carolina townships will be placed in a different state House district and thus will not be represented by the same persons representing the remainder of the county in the General Assembly.

Commissioners, earlier this month, agreed to participate with other northeastern North Carolina counties in helping raise funds to finance research to see if the redistricting can be changed.

Although the state Constitution forbids crossing county lines, the Justice Department has told legislative leaders it would not approve a redistricting plan that followed county lines.

The Friday meeting is scheduled for noon at the Greenville Country Club.

By SALLY JACOBSEN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — An engineer with an aircraft company is caught selling government secrets about military radar and weapons systems to Poland.

A California couple is charged with illegally exporting highly polished laser mirrors, useful in weapons work, to Moscow via West Germany and Switzerland.

Two Americans, working with two Europeans, are accused of setting up a sophisticated operation using front companies to buy high technology. Shipped through various European countries, the equipment reached the Soviet Union or Soviet-bloc countries. The take included highly desirable semiconducttor manufacturing and testing equipment and electronic monitoring and computer equipment, according to the Commerce Department.

Reagan administration officials contend that the illegal acquisition of such technology has saved the Soviets billions of dollars in research and development costs and has helped advance the communist nation's military-industrial complex.

The administration is trying to stop plug such technology leaks through stricter enforcement, tighter controls on scientific exchange programs, heightened awareness by the business community and help from U.S. allies.

"This is a major problem for both the United States and the West," said Lawrence J. Brady, assistant commerce secretary for trade administration.

"There is no question but that the Soviets have been helped to the tune of billions of dollars through the acquisition of Western technology by illegal transfer," he said in a recent interview.

He said the Soviets use the illegally gotten goods to complement items acquired through legal channels and then adapt the technology to their system.

Through scientific exchange and graduate student programs, he said, the Soviets "acquire the know-how to permit them to infuse the stuff they've stolen into the Soviet system."

"We have the information which proves beyond a doubt that the Soviets have acquired massive amounts of technology that is of direct military benefit to them," Brady said.

Harry Rositzke, a retired CIA official, contends very little can be done to stop the illegal flow of high-technology to the Soviet Union.

In his recently published book, "The KGB: The Eyes of Russia," he gave an idea of the dimensions of the problem.

"The major focus of the KGB program in the United States is on industrial espionage: collecting information on commercially restricted or militarily classified equipment, manufacturing processes, research and development, advanced sectors of scientific research, etc.," he wrote.

In an interview, he said the Kremlin also can get goods simply by buying small items from cooperative U.S. businessmen and sending them out of the country in a diplomatic pouch.

Also, U.S. technology finds its way to the Soviet Union after being sold legally to Western European firms with which the KGB is in contact, he said.

Rositzke contended that industrial espionage and illegal exports have been going on for years. The new crackdown, he said, strikes him as being a "temporary phenomenon" that is part of the Reagan administration's get-tough policy with the Soviets.

But Brady said the United States became aware of the depth of the problem after the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan which resulted in a closer look at the Kremlin's technological expertise.

The scrutiny found the Soviets have caught up — or are catching up — to the United States in certain technical areas, which "raises questions as to how they've done this," Brady said.

"We've looked in some areas and seen Western equipment copied — even with the flaws," he said.

Other Commerce Department officials said U.S. scientists have reported that half to three-quarters of the lab equipment in military-related industries is of Western origin. Some Soviet computer components, they add, are virtually identical to those made by IBM.

Under the Export Administration Act of 1979, the United States requires validated licenses for electronic equipment, computers and other high technology items before they can be exported to the Soviet Union or Soviet-bloc countries.

As part of the sanctions imposed on Moscow after the martial law crackdown in Poland, the Commerce Department stopped processing applications for those licenses to the Soviet Union. Any controlled items that go to the Soviet Union without export licenses are considered illegal exports. The administration wants both the business and academic communities to pay more attention to the problem.

Some companies aren't "aware of the thrust of the Soviet effort, of its intensity, of its determination so ... we're going to try to educate the American public, the American industry, the pitfalls involved," Brady said.

Trying to get the academic community to go along with tighter controls on the access of Soviet exchange scientists and graduate students to militarily sensitive technology has proved controversial.

Adm. Bobby Inman, the CIA's deputy director, earlier this year warned scientists they "face legal restraints unless they voluntarily agree to measures to safeguard the technology. He also suggested that technical papers in critical areas be reviewed before publication.

Other efforts include the Customs Bureau's new "Operation Exodus" which targets specific ports to try to stop the illegal diversion of equipment.

The Commerce Department plans to open field offices in Los Angeles and

San Francisco to help boost its control over illegal exports. Already 20 percent of the investigative work of the department's Office of Export Administration takes place on the West Coast from which about one-quarter of licensed commodities leave for foreign nations, department officials have said.

"In the final analysis," Brady said, "we're a free country with our borders very loose and we will never prevent each and every illegal diversion. What we can do is to impede it to a much greater extent than we are now."

Kissinger Sets A Goal For Diet

BOSTON (AP) — Two weeks after open-heart surgery, former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger has been sent home with a new goal: losing 20 pounds.

"My intentions are honorable, as they have been on at least 10 previous occasions," Kissinger said of the impending diet as he was discharged Wednesday from Massachusetts General Hospital.

The low-calorie diet and exercise program are intended to help restore the 58-year-old former diplomat to full health after his triple coronary bypass operation Feb. 10.

Kissinger underwent 4½ hours of surgery to restore the flow of blood to his heart. Doctors removed a section of vein from his leg and used it to route blood around three clogged heart arteries.

Kissinger has lost 10 pounds in his recuperation so far, but doctors want him to get rid of 20 more of the 200 pounds he weighed before the operation.

"I feel in fine shape and in great spirits," Kissinger told a hospital news conference. However, he said he still has some pain from the surgery and needs more sleep than his usual four or five hours a night. But he plans gradually to resume his usual schedule after three weeks of recuperation in New York and Palm Springs, Calif.

"His operation at this point is as successful as any operation could be," said Dr. Mortimer J. Buckley Jr., chief of the hospital's cardiac surgical unit.

Kissinger thanked his doctors and said, "The humanity and warmth with which I have been treated here have been extraordinary. The nursing staff and I, after I surrendered and recognized who the boss was, got along marvelously."

Kissinger said he and his wife, Nancy, were "enormously touched by the flood of letters, telegrams and notes that we have received, many from people in leading positions all over the world."

He said he received telephone calls from President Reagan and former Presidents Ford, Nixon and Carter.

"Considering some of the things I said about him in the recent campaign," Kissinger said of Carter, "that was an act of very great human generosity."

Before the operation, Kissinger went to the hospital for a checkup complaining of pain in his right shoulder. Doctors found he had arthritis, but a large part of the pain was coming from severe coronary artery disease.

Buckley said patients with Kissinger's disease face a 10-15 percent chance of death each year if their condition is untreated.

Railroad Track Unsafe To Walk

SHELBY, N.C. (AP) — Cleveland County sheriff's deputies say two men have learned that it's dangerous to walk on a railroad track — though they had to learn the hard way.

Deputy Tommy Ledford said Randy Page, 21, and Robert Ward, 26, had to go over the edge of a trestle as a Seaboard Coast Line freight train bore down on them Tuesday.

Page jumped 30 feet to the ground while Ward managed to hang on to the trestle, dangling 30 to 40 feet above the ground while the train passed.

"It was almost on us," Page said Wednesday. "I just jumped. I took a nosedive about 30 feet, hit, bounced, rolled over and then slid. It knocked the breath out of me."

Page said he landed on his face and then his shoulder. He looked for his friend as he jumped. After landing, he spotted Ward hanging from the trestle with his legs still swinging.

Ward had splinters and scrapes and Page was scratched and bruised. Both complained of soreness from exertion, but were resting comfortably at their homes.

"I thought Robert got killed," Page said. "I saw him hanging, but I didn't know if he was just hanging there or got knocked off by the train. I thought, 'I done killed my best friend.'"

Ward said he feared for Page after he saw him jump.

"I heard him hit the ground. I thought he was dead," he said.

Ward said he held on as 105 cars of the train passed overhead, and panicked when the train slowed down.

"It seemed like about five years up there," he said. "Then the caboose pulled up and it slowed down and the guy pulled me up."

"I remember exactly what he said when he saw me. The guy asked me what I was doing up there. I told him I was hanging on for dear life."

Need A Mayor

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — After five months and three elections, New Bern still does not have a mayor, though that should end when the town board of aldermen meets March 9.

Mayor-elect Paul M. Cox was not present to be sworn in at Tuesday's meeting of aldermen, and therefore is not officially the mayor, according to City Manager Anthony Hooper.

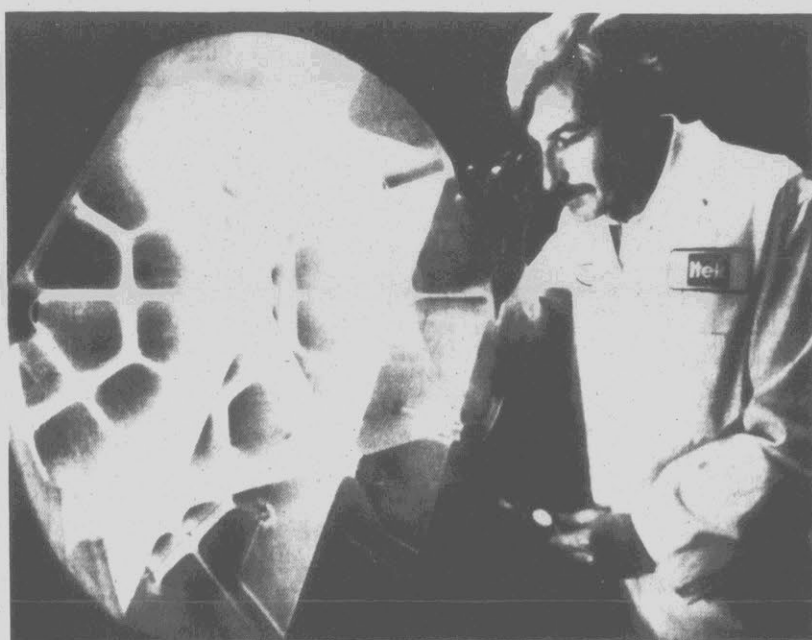

Cox was elected to the office after a run-off election on Feb. 16. He defeated opponent Donald W. McDowell by 268 votes in the citywide election.

Political newcomer McDowell had been a tenacious opponent of Cox, a five-term alderman, since October. Originally Cox had handily won the Oct. 6 mayoral race by a clear majority of votes over opponents Ethridge H. Ricks, a former mayor, and McDowell.

However, McDowell challenged the election results and the state elections board overturned the election, ordering a new mayoral race in January.

In January, Cox won the most votes in the three-way race between himself, McDowell and Ricks. Cox received 749 votes, compared to 466 for McDowell and 388 for Ricks. However, 803 votes were needed for a clear majority win. McDowell as the second highest voter-getter would not concede defeat, and called for a run-off.

According to Hooper, Cox is out of town until the end of the week. Hooper said Cox would probably be sworn in during a special ceremony before the March 9 meeting.

We put our foot down about apartments being within walking distance.

Wedgewood Arms apartments are within walking distance of three shopping centers, a nursery school, a junior high school, doctors and dentists' offices and an athletic center.

As if that wasn't enough, three major traffic arteries, 264 Bypass, Arlington Blvd., and Charles St. are close enough to be seen and not heard.

Fact is, no apartments in town can legitimately claim to be more convenient to more things than Wedgewood Arms. And, that's not all. Because Wedgewood Arms is not only convenient, it's different in other ways, too.

Take the floorplans: they're different from anything you've ever seen. And when you add in high energy efficiency, tennis courts, swimming pool, and the neighborhood "feeling" that these apartments will give you — well, you'll just have to see for yourself.

Quincy Jones Collected 5 Grammy Awards

SEVEN-UP — Quincy Jones has his hands full as he holds seven Grammy Awards, five of which were awarded him, during the 24th annual Grammy Awards presentations last night. (AP)

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — A tearful Yoko Ono brought the audience to its feet at the 24th annual Grammy awards as she accepted the album-of-the-year honor she shared with her slain husband, ex-Beatle John Lennon.

Miss Ono's appearance on stage with the couple's 6-year-old son, Sean, all but eclipsed the rest of the winners, including Quincy Jones, who won more Grammys than anyone else, and Kim Carnes, whose raspy-voiced hit, "Bette Davis Eyes," was named record and song of the year.

Al Jarreau, Lena Horne, Danny Parton, The Police, Manhattan Transfer, and "Hill Street Blues" theme composer Mike Post won two awards each Wednesday night from the National Academy of Recording Arts & Sciences.

Miss Ono, regal in an off-white evening gown, was at first unable to speak as the Shrine Auditorium audience roared its approval.

She murmured, "I think John is here," and asked her tuxedo-clad son if he wanted to say anything. When he shook his head "No," she said, slowly, "Both John and I were always very proud and happy that we were part of the human race who made good music for the earth and for the universe. Thank you."

Miss Ono and Lennon — who had won no Grammy since his days as a Beatle — were honored both as producers and artists for "Double Fantasy," with coproducer Jack Douglas also receiving a Grammy. The LP was released in October 1980, two months before Lennon was gunned down outside his New York apartment and just after the Oct. 1, 1980, opening of the 1981 Grammy eligibility year.

Jones, triumphing not only as a musician but also as an arranger and record producer, grabbed five Grammys, including producer of the year, an award honoring all his production work.

Jones' "The Dude" LP earned honors as best rhythm and blues performance by a group; the tracks "Velas" and "Ai No Corrida" were cited, respectively, for instrumental arrangement and instrumental accompaniment accompanying vocals.

Finally Jones shared a Grammy with Lena Horne for best cast show album, "Lena Horne: The Lady and Her Music."

Miss Horne was also a surprise winner in the female pop performance category, and Jones picked that award up for her.

"Man!" he marveled during one of his many trips to the podium. "Lena, I'm just sorry you're not here tonight. I love you."

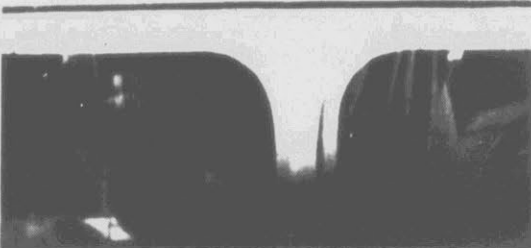

Jones' magic rubbed off on one other nominee: new-comer James Ingram won best rhythm and blues male vocal honors for "One Hundred Ways," a track from "The Dude." The female rhythm and blues award went to Aretha Franklin for "Hold On I'm Comin'."

Miss Carnes was an exuberant record-of-the-year winner for "Bette Davis Eyes," the No. 1 hit which also earned song-of-the-year honors for songwriters Jackie DeShannon and Donna Weiss.

The tune went all but unnoticed when Miss DeShannon recorded it in a less electronic style seven or eight years ago. "Perhaps the song maybe was a little ahead of its time," she said.

"We just got lucky," said Miss Carnes.

Sheena Easton, a petite Scottish singer who burst on the music scene with the theme to the James Bond film "For Your Eyes Only" and a bouncing ballad called "Morning Train," was named best new artist.

If there was a new trend in the Grammys it was that jazz artists seem to be succeeding as pop artists as well. Al Jarreau, who showed off his scat singing style with jazz player Pepper Adams, won best male vocal awards in both pop and jazz categories and Manhattan Transfer won jazz and pop honors for group vocals.

The best pop instrumental award went to Post, whose "Theme from Hill Street Blues" was also named best instrumental composition.

Perennially popular Dolly Parton won her second and third Grammys for "9 to 5" in the female country performance and best country song categories. She is recovering from surgery and did not attend.

The male country singer award went to Ronnie Milsap, for "There's No Gettin' Over Me," while the Oak Ridge Boys — previously winners of four gospel-inspirational Grammys — got their first country Grammy, earning group vocal honors for "Elvira."

In rock categories, Rick Springfield — whom soap opera fans know as a regular on "General Hospital" — won male vocal honors for "Jessie's Girl" and Pat Benatar got the female vocal nod for "Fire and Ice." The Police grabbed both best group vocal and best instrumental performance for

Focusing On Asheville Life

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The NBC television network's Today Show, in a series on liveable American cities, is scheduled to feature a segment Thursday on the mountain town of Asheville.

Based on the recently published "Places Rated Almanac," the show's hosts have proclaimed Asheville, with a population of less than 250,000, the best small city in which to live in the United States.

Authors Richard Boyer and David Savageau say in their almanac: "What city has a mild climate, low housing costs, extensive health care facilities, a low crime rate, a wide range of transportation modes, excellent educational opportunities, access to numerous recreational facilities, a generous offering of cultural activities, and a bright economic outlook? The answer — Asheville, the ideal small city to live in America."

On Thursday, another North Carolina area was scheduled to take the "Today Show" limelight — the Triad, consisting of Greensboro, Winston-Salem and High Point, which also made the 10-best list.

A Review

Neil Simon Play Deftly Staged

"A Neil Simon" has become synonymous with the prosaic, a sort of strawberry jello kind of show where you can't remember anything about it once it's over. We forget that simple, uncontrived dialogue, properly executed, is the stuff of which classics are made.

When performed with finely directed energy and timing, Neil Simon's plays can become as memorable as Bavarian cream. This is the case with Greenville Little Theater's production of Simon's "Barefoot in the Park," which plays today nightly through Sunday at 8:15 p.m. at the Methodist Student Center, Fifth and Holly Streets.

There is not one sluggish moment in the production; the deftly blended action-dialogue satiates.

The plot is very Simon. There are these newlyweds who move into a fifth floor walk up on 48th Street. Then they have a fight. Then they make up. Director Stephen Finnan has given us his best work so far at Greenville Little Theater, for an evening at once hilarious and biting. Looking at mirrors will do that to an audience.

Dwight Eastwood, as the eccentric Mr. Valasco, and David Werdal as the telephone man give good supporting performances. Hazel Stapleton, as the mother-in-law Mrs. Banks, reveals her familiar talent for the subtle, which makes all the difference in a "light" comedy like "Barefoot."

Gregory Watkins is husbandhood personified in his delightful portrayal of the bewildered young lawyer, Paul.

And there is no adequate description for the Corie given us by Allison Thompson. Her allive and concentrated energy do for theater what her unique soul-spirit does for punk radio. Absolutely top-drawer acting.

Today's Cryptokuip clue: W equals E

The Cryptokuip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, FEB. 26, 1982

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: There could be some unpleasant opposition by those who are unable to control their temper today. Keep in mind that a conciliatory attitude can prevent rows at this time.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Get a good hold on your emotions today or they could lead you astray and cause trouble. Use caution in motion.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) A friend is in a strange mood today and could prove most trying to you, but keep poised and this will pass. Relax tonight.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Any public duties you have should be handled without delay. Don't neglect to pay your bills. Avoid a troublemaker.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You have new ideas on how to expand right now, but proceed with caution for best results. Be poised.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Attend to routine duties early in the day so you'll have time for more important things later. Make the evening a happy one.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) An associate could be in a bad mood so control your temper and avoid an argument. Establish better relations later.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Be more alert to opportunities coming your way now. Take a more optimistic outlook on life. Show others you have wisdom.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Find new ways to put your creative talents to work. Strive to make life more satisfying. Take health treatments.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) If you control your temper at home today, harmony can be restored. Not a good time to engage in outside activities.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Don't labor under any miscalculations or unpleasant results could follow. Obtain the data you need from the right place.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Plan to save more money instead of spending it foolishly. Take time for thinking and planning about the future.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You may want to have a showdown with one you think has done you an injustice, but wait for a better time when tempers cool.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she may have to struggle to get ahead in life. Teach to be independent and to be more willing to work for what is desired, and to consider the feelings of others. Stress sportsmanship and honesty in your teachings.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — Train robberies have become so frequent in China's Sichuan Province that the Communist Party has assigned armed guards to escort important shipments along the Chengdu-Chungking railroad, the English-language China News reports.

Uncle Sam Wants You!

Sunday's draft registration deadline may not be very popular with 18 year olds. But it probably will not spark the kind of protest caused by the nation's first federally-enforced draft law. In 1863, because of mounting Civil War casualties, Congress passed a law drafting white males from 20 to 45 — unless they could pay $300 or find a substitute. In New York, an angry crowd attacked a draft office, destroyed the records, burned the building and nearly killed the Police Superintendent. Before the mob was quelled, it had grown to 50,000, burned and looted many buildings and killed many blacks — who were blamed for the "Black Republican War."

Besse's opening bid was an intermediate two bid, showing a hand of about eight winners. It was forcing for only one round, so North had no compunction to bid on when Besse simply rebid his suit.

West led a low club, and Besse did not think much of his chances. There was only one entry to dummy, and even if he used it for a winning play in spades or diamonds, and assuming that he could hold his trump losers to one, he still could not come to more than eight tricks. So Besse needed help from the enemy. He started off with a fine deceptive

Urge Help For Doctor Stress

BOSTON (AP) — Medical schools should encourage discussion of the stresses of medical practice that can lead to the high rate of suicide, drug addiction and social withdrawal among physicians, a doctor recommends.

Dr. Jack D. McCue of the University of North Carolina says young doctors should also have easy access to counseling to help them cope with the pressures of their profession.

For hospital residents, McCue says, "easy access to private, nonjudgmental counseling must be available. Unless impairment is severe, once a resident enters private practice, the opportunity to identify a problem and to provide career or psychological counseling rarely occurs."

He said it has been estimated that up to half of all students who graduate from medical school need psychotherapy.

McCue made his recommendations in a report in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

Doctors must cope with a variety of stresses, he said. Among them are anxious, uncomfortable patients; the necessity of inflicting pain on patients; embarrassment over conducting physical examinations; the difficulties of dealing with patients' deaths and the uncertainty of making medical decisions.

McCue said this stress has a variety of effects on the doctor:

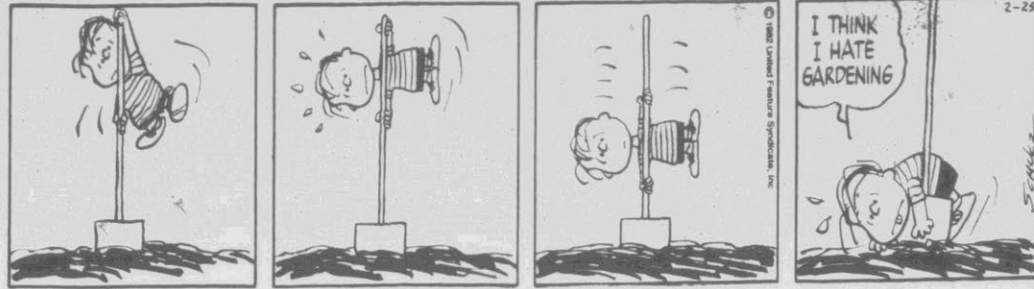

—The suicide rate among physicians is two or three times that of the general population. Drug addiction may be 30 to 100 times more common among doctors.

—Marriages and sexual relations are often unsatisfactory for physicians.

—Doctors sometimes avoid their families and spend all their time working. They are afraid of failure and also want the approval of other doctors. "The diligent, self-sacrificing physician who surrenders a personal life to patients wins respect from his colleagues, first in residency and later in private practice."

—Doctors may withdraw socially so that their patients won't see how wealthy they are. "Patients seek out busy and successful physicians, yet they are jealous of their prosperity and accuse the successful physician of practicing medicine for its financial rewards."

Try Again For Balance

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, who came to office proclaiming that government should live within its means, submits a budget of at least $91.5 billion out of balance...

Nearly two-thirds of the state legislatures demand constitutional shackles on deficit spending...

A Senate Judiciary subcommittee unanimously approves a proposed constitutional amendment that would require a balanced budget annually in peacetime — unless Congress specifically authorizes a deficit. The full committee endorses the idea...

According to officials of the National Taxpayers Union, these developments have brightened the prospects for success in their seven-year campaign to force just such a change in the Constitution.

Some members of Congress are not so sure.

"I would doubt that it (the amendment) would see the light of day this year," says Senate Majority Whip Ted Stevens, R-Alaska. "It would automatically require us to raise taxes by $100 billion, at the very least."

Even if it cleared the Senate, the amendment would face a formidable barrier in the House Judiciary Committee. Its chairman, Rep. Peter Rodino, D-N.J., argues that such an amendment "could make it impossible for government to really act responsibly" during hard times.

Leaders of the taxpayers union predict Congress will act as they approach their goal of getting two-thirds of the state legislatures to pass resolutions asking for a constitutional convention.

Beginning in 1975, the group has shepherded such resolutions through 31 legislatures, and its leaders think they have a good chance this year in Missouri, Kentucky and Washington — for 34, the magic number.

"They concede that the likelihood of a convention, a method of amending the Constitution that has never been tried, is remote. Their real objective is to force Congress to propose an amendment by the more conventional method of a two-thirds vote in both houses. The amendment then would have to be ratified by 38 states to become part of the Constitution."

"I think one more state would force it onto the calendar" in the Senate, says George Snyder, Taxpayers Union president. Once it is called up for action, he adds, "My guess is we are at this point within five votes — it could be seven" — of passing it.

In the House, Rep. Barber Conable, R-N.Y., one of the measure's prime sponsors, says, "If it comes to the floor, I think it will be passed. The bottleneck is the House Judiciary Committee."

Conable and the other principal sponsor, Rep. Ed Jenkins, D-Ga., both say this year's budgetary problems could add to the pressure for an amendment.

At a hearing on the measure last year, Murray Weidenbaum, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, urged House Judiciary members to try, for perhaps a final time, to get government spending under control under existing law" before tinkering with the Constitution.

Weidenbaum said at the time that Reagan's economic program would eliminate the federal deficit by fiscal year 1984.

But Reagan's latest budget estimates a deficit of $82.9 billion in fiscal 1984, with the red ink declining to $53.2 billion in 1987 but not disappearing even if his proposed spending cuts are enacted. The projected deficit in fiscal 1983 is $91.5 billion.

"This year has certainly shown that neither party is immune from the pressures of imbalance in the budget," says Jenkins.

"The pressure will grow as Congress focuses more and more on the size of the deficit," says Conable.

Jenkins says he has signed up 10 or 15 co-sponsors since Reagan sent his fiscal 1983 budget to Congress, bringing the total to 160 of the 435 House members.

The amendment being considered in Congress would not prohibit the government from spending more than it takes in, but would require a 60 percent vote of both houses to do so, except in wartime.

Any amendment proposed, either by Congress or a convention, would have to be ratified by three-fourths of the states.

If a convention were called, some constitutional authorities believe it would be free to revamp the entire Constitution instead of sticking to the issue of budget deficits.

"Many of us in Congress view it (the constitutional amendment) as a way to avoid the potential disaster of a constitutional convention," says Conable.

Jenkins said a constitutional convention would be "in my opinion the worst thing that could happen because I fear that it could end in chaos ... and they might pass something that would really be unworkable."

As yet, however, no action has been scheduled in the Senate. In the House, Rodino says his Judiciary Committee plans to "proceed very deliberately."

At the National Taxpayers Union office a few blocks from the Capitol, spokesman David Keating, was asked what will happen if Congress does not act.

"Well, I suppose we could always have a convention," he replied.

Varied Use For Hand Vacuums

BLOOMINGTON, Ill. (UPI) — A new hand vacuum for cleaning upholstery, drapes, furniture or floors can be carried by its handle or suspended from a shoulder strap.

The strap is part of an accessory kit that costs about $20 extra. The vacuum itself has a suggested retail price of about $60. It has a 3.3 amp motor and a 15-foot power cord.

The Eureka Whisk accessory tool kit also includes 2 wands, a flexible hose and a nozzle for carpets and hard floors, a dusting brush and a crevice tool.
