$195 Million In Savings Cited

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Under the revised agreement between N.C. Eastern Municipal Power Agency with Carolina Power & Light Co. to purchase CP&L generating facilities, Greenville should save $195 million in the 20-years until 2003, Greenville Utilities Commission Director Charles Horne said this week.

The NCEMPA is an organization of 32 municipalities — 11 former Virginia Electric & Power Co. wholesale customers such as Greenville and 21 CP&L customers — which last year finalized plans to purchase portions of several CP&L generating facilities. Ownership of the facilities by the NCEMPA — which would act as the wholesale supplier of electricity to the various cities — was designed to provide lower cost power to the municipal customers.

Earlier this year, CP&L announced plans to delay construction of a coal-fired generating plant of which the NCEMPA is to be part-owner, and canceled plans to construct two nuclear generating units that had been part of the original purchase agreement.

Horne said the decision by CP&L has reduced the size of the projected savings to the municipalities. But he emphasized that the cancellation of the two nuclear units has also reduced the agency's planned investment by one-half.

According to Horne, consulting engineers initially had projected that the GUC — by participating in the power agency plan rather than remaining customers of Vepco — would save $400 million to $500 million during the 20-year period.

Since the amount of investment has been cut in half, Horne said the projected savings over the period have been reduced to the $195 million figure. However, he noted that the new savings figure is based on the projected CP&L rates over the next 20 years, rather than on projected Vepco rates for the period. And, he emphasized, CP&L rates are expected to average 5 percent to 15 percent lower for the period than Vepco rates.

The GUC director said that, as a result of the switch from Vepco to the power agency, GUC has agreed to purchase the Vepco substation here. By purchasing the Vepco substation — for $2.66 million — Horne said, GUC customers should realize another $50 to $75 million savings over the next 20 years.

Greenville and the 10 other former Vepco customers began receiving electric power from the power agency Dec. 30. The 21 other member municipalities will begin receiving electricity from the agency at the time of the first closing with CP&L — now set for late April.

Last Chance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of young men who have failed to reister for the draft must do so before Sunday — or face possible prosecution.

That's when the grace period expires for youths who have not complied by signing up at a local post office within 30 days of their 18th birthdays.

Attorney General William French Smith has promised "there will certainly be hundreds" of prosecutions against men who face a possible five-year jail term and $10,00 fine for not complying with the law.

According to Selective Service officials, about 88.5 percent of eligible young men have registered, meaning 927,504 have violated the law as of Feb. 23.

But spokeswoman Joan Lamb said compliance has jumped sharply since early January, when President Reagan announced that registration would continue.

Compliance among 18-year-olds had dropped to 72 percent in December, but climbed to to 79 percent the following month, she said. The highest compliance, among men aged 21, was 94.5 percent.

Officials speculated that the low complance was a result of questions over whether the program would be continued, as Reagan had campaigned against a peacetime registration program. But, in the wake of the imposition of martial law in Poland, the president decided to keep it in place.

There is no actual draft, but Reagan said that if one is needed in the event of an emergency, the registration program can save weeks of time.

Boycott Oil From Libya

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is stepping up its campaign against Col. Moammar Khadafy, the Libyan leader, by imposing a boycott of oil imports from the militant Arab country and halting sales of American oil and gas equipment to the Libyans, informed sources say.

The decision was taken by the National Security Council Thursday and is expected to take effect in two weeks, after consultation with the West European allies, Congress and oil company executives.

While the United States has long accused Khadafy of promoting terrorism, there was no apparent specific provocation for the move, which was under consideration for several months. Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. is understood to have played a leading role within administration councils in urging a boycott of Libya.

First word of the decision came from the Middle East Policy Survey, a newsletter published here. Informed sources confirmed the action, but insisted that they not be identified.

White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes refused today to comment on the matter, exeept to say the president is reviewing "a number of options" and that "no final decisions have been made."

Reverse Plan For Coast Guard Cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, under pressure from Congress, reversed itself today and canceled plans to close 15 Coast Guard search-and-rescue stations in 11 states and reduce operations at 16 other stations for budgetary reasons.

Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis told the Senate Appropriations subcommittee on transportation that in an effort to save $31 million, the Coast Guard will decommission three cutters, the Campbell at Port Angeles, Wash.; the Fir at Seattle, and the Hollyhock at Miami.

The service originally had proposed decommissioning 11 cutters in eight states as part of a wide-ranging cutback in operations announced Jan. 21.

Lewis said the Coast Guard will retire three patrol aircraft and save other funds by consolidating and streamlining certain functions.

Lewis said $19 million of the estimated savings "are proposed to improve efficiency through better management. The remainder can be characterized as belt-tightening with minimal operational effect."

The Coast Guard requested $1.403 billion for fiscal 1982, which ends next Sept. 30, but received $1.357 billion in operating expenses for the year. That left $46 million for the service to trim.

The announcement of cutbacks prompted protests from members of Congress in the affected states, and Sen. Mark Andrews, R-N.D., chairman of the transportation subcommittee, suggested that a proposed supplemental appropriations request for the Coast Guard be withheld until the service provided a "detailed justification" of its cutback plans.

Originally, in addition to the 15 search-and-rescue stations, the Coast Guard proposed to close two district offices in St. Louis and Long Beach, Calif., and to move the Coast Guard band from New London, Conn., to Washington.

The service said it would reduce the ranks of enlisted personnel by 1,000 people, and the Coast Guard Academy at New London said it would have to cut 100 cadets before the end of June.

Begins Williams Closing Argument

By DAVID PACE
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Wayne B. Williams is a "pathological liar" whose split personality fits the profile of a killer who struck "over and over without any apparent motive," a prosecutor told jurors at the murder trial today.

Assistant District Attorney Jack Mallard, delivering the first closing argument in the 9-week-old trial, described Williams as "a strong-minded person, a dual personality."

The climactic court session began after the smiling defendant flashed a victory sign for photographers as he was led from jail to the courthouse.

"Any person who kills over and over without any apparent motive would have to have a split personality, a Jekyll and Hyde," he said.

Mallard suggested the defendant's own testimony this week demonstrated a split personality. Williams was "calm and collected" the first day on the stand, but later "showed the other side of him. He showed a raging explosion inside him," the prosecutor said.

Mallard told the jurors that the law allows them to infer "consciousness of guilt" if they find a defendant has made contradictory statements.

"If a person gets up and tells the truth, the absolute truth, I don't care how many times he repeats it, he will tell the same story," Mallard said. "But if he starts lying, he won't remember what he said before.

"I suggest the truth is not in this man. He's a habitual, pathological liar, and that's been proven," the prosecutor said.

Mallard said the law does not require the state to prove Williams' guilt "to a mathematical or absolute certainty." Rather, he said, the state must prove guilt only beyond "a doubt founded upon reason."

"If you wait until we prove to a mathematical certainty anyone's guilt, we would never convict anyone," he said.

Williams, a 23-year-old black free-lance photographer and aspiring talent promoter, is charged with murdering Nathaniel Cater, 27, and Jimmy Ray Payne, 21, two of 28 young blacks slain in a 22-month string of killings.

No arrests have been made in the 26 other deaths, but prosecutors contend the deaths of Cater and Payne are part of a pattern of killings that includes 10 other slain young blacks.

Mallard said the person who killed the victims would have to be intelligent, able to get his victims' confidence, media-conscious, mobile, knowledgeable of police routine and at home on the streets.

"That's a profile of a person who was able to get away with this for a long time. It fits this person over here perfectly," the prosecutor said, indicating Williams. "You tell me it doesn't."

Summer Fun In February

LIFE IS JUST A TIRE SWING ... for those who grab on and risk the ride — and the ride goes around and around and around! The return of old man winter Thursday and today didn't keep these three youngsters from getting out and having some summer fun in Feburary. Above, Tajmaletty Reddick and Penny Harris, both 8 years old, whiz around on a homemade swing propelled by Billy Hawkes, 10, at the Seventh-Day Adventist School on 10th Street. Lows Thursday night crept down to freezing and the mercury is expected to tumble into the teens tonight, rising no higher than the 40s through the weekend. Whether it's crispy cold or balmy outside, kids and playgrounds go hand in hand. (Reflector Photo By Mary Schulken)

Taft's Name Given To Louisburg College Bldg.

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

LOUISBURG — The first of four new buildings to be constructed at Louisburg College, America's oldest junior college, is being named for Greenville attorney E. Hoover Taft, Jr.

At a ground-breaking ceremony Thursday, Taft turned the first shovel of earth for a classroom building to cost in excess of $2 million. Construction on the building will begin at an early date.

The modern building will be a three-story one of 43,890 square feet with 26 classrooms, 31 offices, and four conference rooms.

Dr. Allen Norris, Louisburg's president, prior to the ceremony, commented: "The board of trustees has expressed their pleasure in naming the new building in honor of Mr. Taft. He has served as a member of the board of trustees for 20 years, and has been chairman of the board for the past 14 years.

"On behalf of the college, I wish to add that his service to Louisburg has been most exemplery. His Christian leadership has indeed been instrumental in serving the needs of the school. The college would not be where it is today except for the work he has done with us and for us over the years."

During Taft's tenure on the board of trustees, Louisburg College has more than doubled its land holdings.

HOOVER TAFT

Another recent achievement has been the acquisition of a historic home, the Governor Bickett House, and renovating it as the home for the college president.

Under Taft's chairmanship, a fund-raising drive has been undertaken to raise $4.5 million for the addition of new buildings. New buildings planned include the classroom being named for Taft, a theater and a couple of smaller buildings. To date, the fund drive has resulted in raising $3.5 million of the $4.5 million goal.

Taft said, "It has always been my prayer to make Louisburg a beacon and a floodlight for young people. A beacon for the purpose of directing them in the right path to pursue through life; a floodlight to illuminate the environment surrounding them so they will attain truth and knowledge on this planet on which we live.

"I take great pride in the fact that this modern classroom building is being named in my honor.

Dear Abby

Cheapness Is No Cause For Celebration

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am a 23-year-old woman and my "problem" is a 25-year-old man I've been going with for nearly two years. To get right to the point, I have bought him presents (expensive for me) on every gift-giving occasion — his birthday, Christmas, Easter, Valentine's Day, etc. — but he has never given me anything. He has a good job and he could afford to buy me something, but this is what he does: He picks a fight with me just before Christmas or my birthday, and he decides it's better if we "cool it" for a while. We are always "cooling it" on special dates, and I get no present.

We were cooling it last Christmas, and we made up just before New Year's. Just before Valentine's Day he picked another fight so he wouldn't have to give me a present. (I gave him one anyway because I had already bought it.)

He's a nice guy otherwise, but I've just about had it with this stunt. Could there be some deep, hidden psychological reason for this? I really feel stupid because I was a ...

PSYCHOLOGY MAJOR

DEAR MAJOR: The problem is minor. The man is just cheap.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: When my son was born three months ago, my stepmother sent him a beautiful quilt she made especially for him. I was deeply touched by her thoughtfulness, until I found nine straight pins in it!

She is a meticulous person, so it's hard to believe she left all those pins in the quilt accidentally. I think my stepmother subconsciously willed evil on my child. You see, she tragically lost her only daughter, who was pregnant with her first child at the time. Now her only other child, a son, is dying of a terminal illness. So she is grieving for the grandchildren she will never have.

We had planned to visit my father and his wife when the baby is six months old. Now I have serious doubts about going. (They live 600 miles away.) I don't want to come out and accuse my stepmother, and I don't want to mention anything about this to my father, but I am honestly concerned about my baby's safety during that visit.

Do you think we should go and keep a sharp eye on our son? I hate to deprive my father of seeing his grandson, but I can't risk any harm to the baby.

FEARFUL

DEAR FEARFUL: I seriously doubt that your stepmother left the pins in the blanket because she "unconsciously willed evil" on your baby. However, if you honestly believe she did, you should not visit her. And the next time you see your doctor, don't forget to tell him about your fears.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: For years my husband has made dinner a miserable time by correcting our children's manners or their grammar at the table. He does this even when we have guests. I realize the importance of teaching youngsters good table manners and grammar, too, but I don't think children should be corrected in front of company. My husband is overly critical, and he picks on them for every little thing.

He insists that bad manners are rude. I say that he is being far ruder than the children when he makes our guests uncomfortable.

Incidentally, our children's manners are far from bad. In fact, we are often complimented on the way they behave.

INDIGESTION AT MEALTIME

DEAR INDIGESTION: You pushed the right button. Eating while anxious or upset produces indigestion. Your children's digestions are undoubtedly suffering, too. Mealtime should be enjoyable and pleasant, but because it's the only time the family gets together, some parents use it to give orders, make rules and lay down the law. It's unfortunate, particularly for the children. (Serve this to the tyrant in your house for dessert.)

Program On Potpourri

The Greenville Garden Club held its meeting at the home of Mrs. J.B. Spilman. A program on potpourri was given by Mrs. Robert VanVeld.

She told how to collect and dry ingredients while showing how to mix potpourri, giving names and reasons for using certain herbs. In giving its history, she said it was used 2,000 years before Christ and was used for hygenic and medicinal purposes as well as beauty aids. Potpourri was used in churches as well as in homes because of its odor.

She pointed out rosemary was used as a floor cover and that it lives 31 years and then dies. Some people say this represents the life of Christ.

Assisting hostesses were Mrs. K.R. Rowe, Mrs. M.G. Martin and Mrs. R.E. Laughter.

Emily Edwards was introduced by Mrs. J.C. Galloway as a guest. Mrs. Galloway explained her horticulture exhibit, daphne odora. A horticulture report was given by Mrs. R.M. Helms.

Dot Dail Gives Talk

Greenville Credit Women, International held its meeting Tuesday at Abram's Family Restaurant. Dot Dail of Winterville was guest speaker.

She gave a presentation on Dr. Norman Vincent Peale's "18 Techniques to Successful Living." District President Betty Jo Golf selected the theme for the evening "Let Your Ligh So Shine."

New members attending were Sandy Simmons, Sara Moseley and Pam Walker. Speical guests included Virginia Wilson and Ann Bass.

Plans for the spring board meeting were set with several members planning to attend.

Double Ring Ceremony Held

Landmark Baptist Church here was the scene of the wedding ceremony of Mary Elizabeth Gaskins and Julian Thomas Sutton Sunday, Feb. 14, at 3 p.m. The double ring ceremony was performed by Pastor John T. Woodley.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. Vernon Edwards Gaskins of Route 1, Ayden, and the late Mrs. Beulah Gaskins. She was given in marriage by her father. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Sutton Jr. of Route 3, La Grange.

A program of music was presented by organist Rita Glisson and soloist Judy Bowen.

The bride's honor attendant was Sybil C. Jarman of Ayden and the best man was Woody A. Sutton of Dover, brother-in-law of the bridegroom.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white lusterglo knit over peau de soie styled with a round neckline encircled with silk Venise lace. Her waltz length veil of illusion was edged in lace and attached to a Juliet cap overlaid in lace and beaded pearls. She carried a bouquet of white roses, fern, pine and eucalyptus tied with satin ribbons.

After the ceremony, a reception was held in the fellowship hall of the church and was given by friends and relatives of the bride.

After a wedding trip to the coast, the couple will live in Bucklesberry.

The bride is employed by Dupont, Kinston and the bridegroom is engaged in farming.

Educator Is Pilot Speaker

The Pilot Club of Greenville held a program and business meeting Monday night at the Ramada Inn. Kay Whitehurst was speaker.

Supervisor of secondary education for the Greenville School System, she discussed the Adopt-A-School program. The club will be adopting a school as a project with emphasis on children in special education.

Officers elected during the business session were: President, Mary Cochran; First Vice President, Jane Parker; Second Vice President, Anne Heffelfinger; Recording Secretary, Wanda Cozart; Corresponding Secretary, Emily Johnston; Treasurer, Audry Johnston. Directors are Frances Johnson, Dot Garcia and Elizabeth LeConte.

The club will conduct a bake sale April 3 and a smorgasbord April 14. Locations will be announced later.

Members will be co-sponsoring the North Carolina District Convention in Fayetteville April 23-25. Delegates will be Mrs. Garcia, Mrs. Cochran and Mrs. Parker.

Leigh Seamester was initiated as a new member. The meeting was conducted by Mrs. LeConte, president.

Life As It's Lived

Life Was Complicated With First Clothing

By GAIL MICHAELS

That account of Adam and Eve in the Garden has at least one thing right. The minute we put on clothes, life got complicated.

Wearing clothes entails washing them, and woman's average life-span took a 30-year nosedive as soon as she started lugging all that dead weight to the river to scrub it out on the rocks.

The situation isn't much better today. The industrial revolution did give us the washing machine, but along with it the standards of cleanliness got higher, so we're still slaves to those self-regenerating mountains of laundry.

Oddly enough, those of us who don't have washers in our own homes are more captive to the infernal machines than those of us who do. In the interest of minimal sanitation, the have-nots are compelled to go to the laundromat where they while away their hours slipping in overturned Coke, being run down by laundry carts raced by maniacal 8-year-olds and praying that the dryer doesn't stick on hot and transform all their knits into baby clothes.

At the moment I am a have. I have a washer in my utility room, and I would do about anything to keep it there, including ransoming a child. At least that would substantially reduce by washload.

My children could be dressed in clean clothes and left in a germ-free laboratory environment for 10 minutes or less, and they'd still walk out looking like the victims of a mudslide. They go through clothes the same way Orson Welles must go through food.

I don't know where I went wrong. The other day I did six loads of laundry. I was determined to see what lay at the bottom of my dirty clothes hamper. I even folded the clean clothes and put them away. Zachary, naturally, was there to help. He threw the socks behind the sofa and pulled three stacks of folded clothes off the sofa into one large heap. But I was patient and persevering. When I threw the last of Meg's size three dresses into the box marked "Attic" and finally saw wood at the bottom of the hamper, I felt truly fulfilled.

I celebrated my accomplishment with a cup of coffee. Zachary climbed up on my lap and dropped his teddy bear into the full cup. My sweater caught most of the overflow.

After I had changed us both, I put Zachary down for his nap. During the hour he slept, his output exceeded his diaper's ability to absorb.

I had just finished changing him and the bed when Meg walked in from school. She was wearing the extra clothes which I sent to school at the beginning of the year in a shoebox. She handed me the ones she had walked out of the house in that morning. "My lunch tray sort of turned over.

Then I happened to look at her shoes, the new white ones she had vowed to keep clean because, as she put it, she only walked on the bottoms of them anyway. They were a vile green. "Bean juice," she explained.

I won't elaborate on the orange juice Zachary poured down his front at snacktime or the grease mark glaring from the seat of Phillip's pants when he came home from work. Let it suffice to say that by the children's bedtime, the laundry hamper was full again.

"I can't believe it," I growled. "No matter how hard I work, nothing ever changes."

"Maybe we need to switch to Cheer," Phillip said.

"What good would that do? It wouldn't keep the kids from getting filthy."

"No," he grinned, "but it might improve your disposition."

Screening Scheduled

The KLAS (Kindergarten Learning Abilities Screening) program for the Greenville City Schools will begin Monday and continue through March 5.

Screening will be held from 8:15 a.m. to noon at the Greenville Moose Lodge.

Approximately 300 public school kindergarten children will be screened. The schedule is:

- Monday — Third Street and Elmhurst schools.
- Tuesday — Elmhurst School (second contingent).
- Wednesday — Eastern School.
- Thursday — Sadie Saulter.
- March 5 — Sadie Saulter (second contingent), students from private kindrgartens and make-ups.

KLAS is a comprehensive learning abilities screening conducted each spring for all kindergarten children by the Greenville City Schools with assistance from East Carolina University.

Parents of children who are presently enrolled in private kindergartens may bring them for screening on March 5.

MUSICAL PROGRAM

The Vines Sisters of Farmville will sponsor a musical program at the Snow Hill Community Center at 3 p.m. Sunday.

Featured are the Mighty All-Stars of Snow Hill, The Rock Islands of Fountain, the Golden Jubilees of Greenville and the Singing D-J "Andy" of Kinston.

We Are Now Involved

President Reagan has set broad new policies for the Caribbean area in a talk to the Organization of American States.

The president proposed special duty-free status for products from the region. He suggested tax incentives for U.S. firms which invest in that area, technical assistance and more economic aid to the nations involved. The president pledged that the special status held by Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands will be continued.

President Reagan cited "brutal and totalitarian forces" backed by the Soviet Union and Cuba as attempting to bring about Communist dictatorships in the area.

"If we do not act promptly and decisively in defense of freedom, new Cubas will arise from the ruins of today's conflicts," he said.

He suggested $350 million in extra economic aid and $60 million in military aid.

Reagan painted a dark picture of Communist totalitarism. He indicated he could foresee "more regimes so incompetent yet so totalitarian that their citizens' only hope becomes that of one day migrating to other American nations as in recent years they have come to the United States."

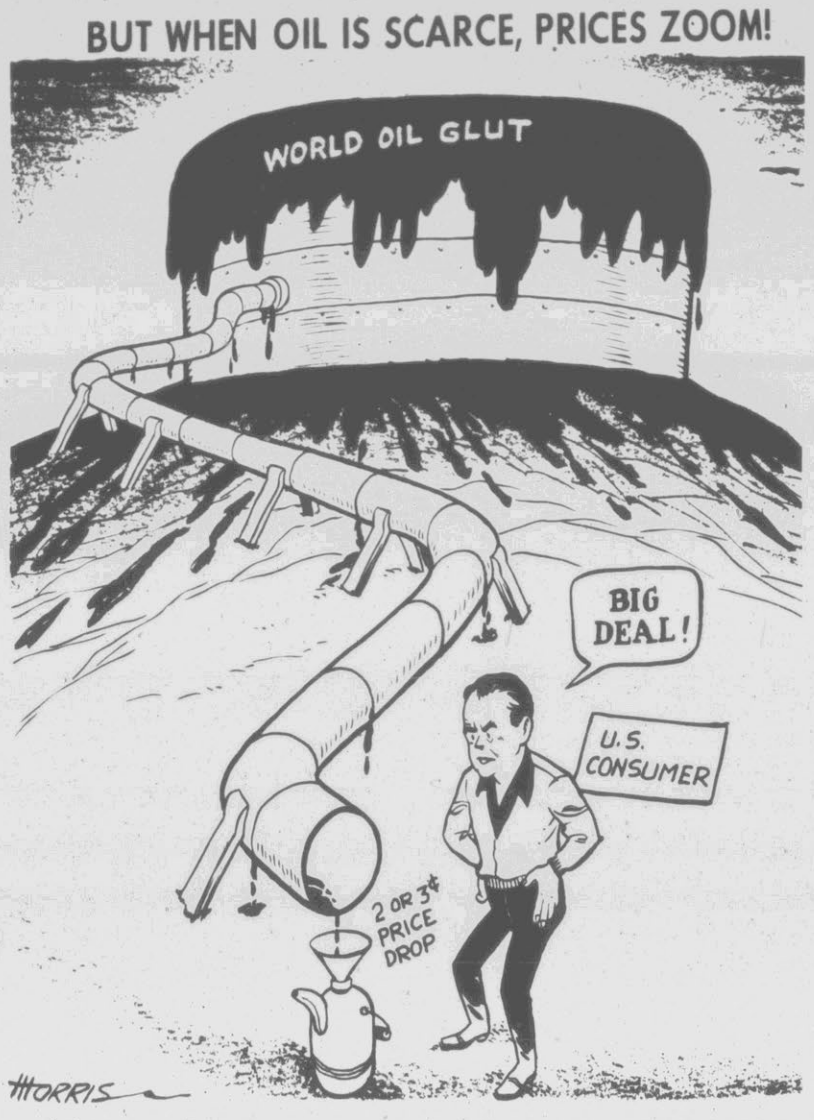

The policies laid down by the president should be supported by the Congress and the public. The Caribbean area and Central America are at our back door. The fall of even one more nation in that area to Communism is intolerable to a free society. There are some who say our nation shouldn't get involved. Unfortunately, we are involved. The future freedom of the Western Hemisphere is at stake.

Chamber Dream Is Realized

The Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce is on its way to realizing a dream. The Fleming home at Third and Greene streets is being renovated to become the offices for the chamber.

Workmen have begun the job of giving the old dwelling with its iron fence and magnolia trees an exterior facelifting and internal changes to make it suitable for office use.

The Fleming dwelling is an historic site. Soon it will be put to a practical use and the chamber will be in a central location that is easily accessible.

Support For Draft List

BY GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J. — With President Reagan's "grace period" for eligible young men to register for the draft expiring Sunday, Americans broadly endorse continuing the registration program.

In the latest Gallup survey, 7.1 percent of the public favors continuing to register young men so that the time needed to call up men for a draft in the case of an emergency would be reduced, while 23 percent are opposed and 6 percent uncommitted.

The present 3-to-1 level support for registration, however, is somewhat lower than that found in surveys conducted in 1979 and 1980.

President Carter reinstated draft registration after the Soviet Union's invasion of Afghanistan in December 1979. Although he originaly opposed the move, President Reagan decided last month to continue registration and named Feb. 28 as the final day for men born from 1960-1963 to comply with the registration law.

Alternate Programs Debated

The revival of draft registration has spurred debate on alternate programs for military and non-military service.

One plan studied in the current survey is the present military service system in Switzerland, which requires every physically able young man to spend 17 weeks in military training when he becomes 20 years old. After completing this training Swiss males must devote three weeks a year for the next eight years to the armed forces.

The American people lean in support of this plan, with 51 percent in favor and 41 percent opposed.

Here is the question asked to determine Americans reaction to the Swiss military training program and the results:

"One European nation requires every physically able young man at the age of 20 to spend 17 weeks in military training. Afterwards he must devote three weeks a year for the next eight years to this military training. Would you favor or oppose having the U.S. adopt such a plan?

Swiss Military Training Plan

Favor	51%
Oppose	41

Universal National Service

A border program of compulsory national service for young men and women has even wider support.

Under this plan, young people would have their choice of service — either in the military forces or in non-military work, here or abroad, such as work in hospitals or with the elderly.

In the latest (mid-1981) survey on the subject, 71 percent of the public backed this plan while 24 percent were opposed.

Here is the question asked and the trend:

"Would you favor or oppose requiring all young men to give one year of service to the nation — either in the military forces or in non-military work here, or abroad, such as work in hospitals or with elderly people?"

National Service For Men

	Favor	Oppose	No opinion
1981	71%	24%	5%

1976	62	33	5
1973	64	29	7
1971	68	25	7

Following is the question on draft registration and the trend:

"Do you favor or oppose continuing to register young men so that in the case of an emergency the time needed to call up men for a draft would be reduced?"

Boyles On Record

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — A growing number of influential civic and political leaders are going public with their support for President Reagan's budget plans, many of them Democrats departing the partisan course which demands that Reaganomics be denounced as cruel and unusual punishment for the poor and middle income citizen.

Add State Treasurer Harlan Boyles to the list. He told the Business Bureau in Weldon the other day that painful though the process may be, it is necessary to produce long-term cures.

"In my opinion, we are now on the right track, but we need to push even farther," Boyles stated.

"I have been, and I remain, a loyal Democrat. Yet, when I see a national administration under the other party doing what I think is the right thing, I am not going to oppose that administration on partisan grounds, as some are now doing."

The treasurer explained that he feels both parties in power in Washington in the past had contributed to the economic crisis, so both parties must now cooperate to resolve it.

Cut Back

Terming President Regan's proposals "a clear-cut alternative," Boyles spoke of both Reagan's budget cuts and his New Federalism plan to change state and federal program responsibilities as desirable.

Government has come to be viewed as having all the answers — being all things to all people. A government with a printing press — willing to use money in its efforts to cure problem after problem.

"A philosophy with failure written all over it," Boyles said.

As for the industrial and business world, it has had government as an adversary "facing tremendous odds in its efforts to survive, witness heavy taxation and regulation, scarcity of capital, disproportionate labor costs, and more recently, goverment subsidized competition from abroad. Again, an impossible situation," Boyles said.

Individual citizens face inflation, confiscatory taxation, "an open door to immigration against a trend toward growing employment, a multiplicity of government handouts having a direct impact on a person's willingness to seek of accept gainful employment," and absence of incentive to save or invest, he stated.

But as the federal handouts have been trimmed "there has been much weeping and wailing, and perhaps even some gnashing of teeth. We are told, daily, almost, just how much these changes will hurt us," Boyles commented.

And for years there has been a cry from state and local officials that the heavy hand of Washington mandating programs and snarling them in red tape be halted. Yet, when a plan is put forth to do that, it is resisted, he feels.

Even the effort to rejuvenate business is raising cries of alarm. "I do not have much sympathy with these criticisms. For many decades, America was known as a country of intense capital investment," Boyles said.

Business

"The economic results coming from this high level of investment astonished the world, and gave us a position of leadership. In recent years, however, we have slipped badly ... Government bears a great responsibility in fostering our economic health, for it is government which has the power to tax. For far too long ... we have followed a dangerous trend to increase taxes on production, rather than taxes on consumption ..."

As for the New Federalism proposal, Boyles sees it as a move to free major revenue sources for the states, leaving it up to the people in those states to decide which programs are worthwhile and should be continued, revised or eliminated.

"We have said many times that we could achieve more economy and more efficiency if we were allowed to tailor them (programs) to local conditions. Now, we are going to be given that opportunity, and I say we should

Thomas Jefferson III

The hardest thing for the Reagan administration to find is a "qualified" black person to appoint to an important position in the government. By "qualified," we mean somebody who is against busing, job-training programs, welfare, food stamps, government-subsidized housing, as well as equal-opportunity litigation.

But when the administration finds a black who's willing to buy the whole conservative package, he's welcomed into the government with open arms.

I don't want to brag, but I know one, and if all goes well he could become a rising star in the Republican Party.

His name is Thomas Jefferson III, and I ran into him in Brooks Brothers where he was being fitted for a suit.

"How goes the civil rights battle?" I asked.

"I'm not into civil rights any more," Thomas told me. "Here's my new business." He handed me a card.

It read, "Thomas Jefferson III, Chairman, Black Citizens for the B-1 Bomber."

"That's a heavy title," I said. "What do you do?"

"Anything they ask me to."

"Who do you mean by they?"

"The Republican Party."

"I thought you were a Democrat."

"I used to be until I decided there was no future in it. There are too many blacks in the Democratic Party, and there's no opportunity there. But if you're a black Republican you can write your own ticket. There are so few of us that when they find one, they can't do enough for you."

"Such as?"

"Well I'm particularly in demand for Republican fund raisers. Not only don't I have to pay $1,000 for dinner, but they always sit me on the dais. when I was a Democrat, I was lucky to get a seat near the kitchen door. You know when they introduce the head table and the Master of Ceremonies asks everyone to hold their applause? Well when they introduce me the audience can't contain themselves, and they start clapping right away. I get standing ovations for just taking a bow."

ART BUCHWALD

"That must be a great ego trip."

"You can't imagine how many people want to take me to lunch at the Metropolitan and University Clubs. I turn down nine invitations for every one I accept. All my host has to say is 'This is Thomas Jefferson III — he's black,' and you'd think I was Robert Redford. I even get to play golf at the best country clubs. When I was a Democrat I had to wait hours to tee off at a public course."

"I can see you in demand as a guest," I said. "But how do you make a living?"

"Speaking at business meetings. You can't imagine how many corporations are desperate for a black speaker to fill out their program."

"What do you tell them?"

"The same old thing the white speakers do. I attack big government, welfare cheats, social programs, and regulations that are stifling business. The only difference is when a black person says it they like it twice as much.

"When I was a Democrat, nobody asked me to speak. They were looking for a Jesse Jackson, or an Andy Young, or a Julian Bond or a Benjamin Hooks, and the Democrats always expected them to speak for nothing. But Republicans know if they want a black speaker they have to pay for him."

"You're on to something, Tom," I said in admiration. "You found out, as a black, where the money is."

"I'm just killing time until I get the right government appointment. They're going to have to come to me soon because they've used up every black conservative they've got."

"I wonder why more blacks don't try to get on the Republican gravy train?"

"I hope they don't. If too many blacks join the party, the novelty will wear off and the Republicans won't treat us any better than the Democrats."

Strength For Today

PERPETUAL LEGACY

A Christian layman of outstanding usefulness in his community and his church wrote out the following statement some years before his death and filed it away with his will.

"Believing that no legacy to one's children can compare with that of a clear Christian faith, I desire hereby to record my belief in God as the Creator and Ruler of all; in Jesus Christ, His Son, as my savior and Lord; and in the future life into which I have not the slightest fear to enter.

"My heart's desire for my children is that they may be whNlesome, strong, and Christian, and that they may serve God and men to the limit of their several abilities."

The man left an estate against which no inheritance taxes will be levied. He had laid up for himself and his loved ones treasures in heaven, where moth and rust do not corrupt, and where thieves do not break in and steal. — Elisha Douglass

Other Editors Say
Good Experiment

(The Morganton News Herald)

The Burke County Commissioners ought to be commended for their action in setting up a plan to offer discounts on county taxes paid early.

The new system will allow property owners a 2-percent discount if they pay their taxes during the month of July and a 1-percent discount for August.

The idea behind this is simple: The county gives the taxpayers a cash incentive to pay their taxes before they are due. If the tgaxpayers take advantage of this then the county takes that "early" tax money and invests it at the prevailing interest rate. The resulting interest should be enough both to cover the discount paid to the taxpayer and to fund the expense of the extra administrative work involved in setting up and carrying out such a system.

Given the right set of circumstances — that is, if the interest rate is high enough and the discount not too high — nobody should lose on the deal.

The gamble comes if the interest rates were to plunge drastically. Most of the economists we read maintain that interest rates will drop somewhat later on in the year, but not that much. If this is to be believed, the county's gamble may pay off.

We recognize that many taxpayers wait until the end of December to pay their tax bill and will continue to do so. But, we anticipate many taxpayers will take advantage of the discount, the same way smart shoppers will head for the grocery store that puts milk on sale at $1.50 a gallon.

The 2-percent discount, in truth, wouldn't be so much in actual dollars. For instance, on a tax bill of $300, a taxpayer making his payment in July would save $6. Still, there are those who, once they receive a bill, pay it then and there. They're the ones who'll make the new plan feasible.

This is an experimental thing. And, as we've said earlier, there is an element of risk involved. Better not to get in over your head when you're first learning how to swim.

United Way Survived Squeeze

By John Cunniff
AP Busines Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The United Way of America, which depends on voluntary local giving, came through the winter in pretty vigorous shape, despite tight money, layoffs, lower corporate profits and economic uncertainty.

More than $1.68 billion was raised by 2,100 United Ways for hundreds of local community services and charities, 10.3 percent more than a year earlier and the greatest amount ever raised in a 95-year history.

True, inflation cut that figure to a very small real gain, but any improvement was welcome in so depressing an economic climate. The reports from some communities were considered truly outstanding.

Detroit, for example, raised $43.5 million, or 2.5 percent more than it did a year earlier, when jobs were more secure and carmakers felt they had turned the corner. And in nearby Flint, where the jobless rate was beween 15 percent and 16 percent, the figure remained almost the same.

Denver's giving soared 24.5 percent, the greatest of any major city. Houston rose 23 percent, Dallas 19.6, Washington, D.C. 15, Atlanta 14.6, St. Louis 13.6, San Francisco 13.1 — rates that exceeded inflation and, therefore, represented real improvements rather than mere illusions.

"The results, more than anything else, tell us that Americans are still uniquely generous and caring people," said Donald V. Seibert, the United Way chairman, and chairman also of J.C. Penney Co., Inc.

But, while that observation is considered accurate by those who study the pattern of giving among countries, and may be reason for pride also, it really isn't the big consideration this year or next.

Instead, the major question before the country is whether voluntary giving can fill gaps opened by the federal government's retreat from many human service areas. Essentially, the question remains unanswered.

Said Seibert in a statement issued last week in Washington: "There is no way business, foundation and individual giving ... can match the level of federal tax dollars no longer available for human services."

That answer, however, is not as bleak as it sounds. Perhaps some of the dollar gap shouldn't be closed, Seibert suggested later in an interview. More efficiency, for one thing, could help as much as money.

For another, said Seibert, "we may see increased contributions in time and involvement with the local level." In other words, the volunteering of time and skills, which again may be as good as money.

And, he continued, the shift of assistance from the federal to the local government should allow for a better allocation of services and less waste. "It will involve local people figuring out how to do more with less," Seibert observed. "We're already seing it."

But he said in regard to a popular notion that "corporations are not going to be in and of themselves the key to closing any gap." Business giving may increase, he said, "but I hesitate to call it dramatic."

Corporations are now permitted to give 10 percent of pretax income to public services, up from the 5 percent that had existed for years. Still, in dollar terms, most companies give closer to 1 percent, and some well-known giant companies give mere fractions of that.

One corporate chairman, David Mahoney of Norton Simon Inc., recently lamented that "if every corporation donated 5 percent of taxable income there would be 11 billion additional dollars available to provide a shock absorber in this time of changed federal priorities."

Some companies do give 5 percent, and in some cities they have founded clubs to encourage others to do likewise. But so far, no great number of them appears to have reached toward the permissable 10 percent.

The responses to United Way campaigns, made as they were during the harsh economic winter of 1981-1982, give some suggestion that Americans are willing to give, in time, skills and money. But is it enough?

Already, says Carl Bakal, author of "Charity USA," charity in the United States is a $100 billion-a-year industry that employs 5 percent of the work force and uses the services of 55 million volunteers.

Nevertheless, that large effort may not be sufficient to pick up the slack. Big as it is, it may be only the beginning of what is needed.

N.C. Reservations For Worlds Fair Have Soared

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer

The World's Fair won't open in Knoxville, Tenn., for another two months but reservations at nearby Western North Carolina hotels and attractions already are up as much as 100 percent.

North Carolina tourism officials expect at least 1 million of the expected 15 million visitors to the fair to spend some time and money in North Carolina. The tourists are expected to pump more than $100 million into the state's economy.

"It's already grown beyond what we expected," said Garrett Alderfer at the Asheville Chamber of Commerce. "One day this week, we answered 362 written inquiries from people wanting to see the fair and spend their vacations in the Asheville area. That's not counting all the phone calls we get and the people stopping by our visitor center to pick up information."

Tour-bus reservations at the Biltmore House, Asheville's top tourist attraction, are at 40,000 — 100 percent above the 2,000 reservations at this time last year. Asheville's historic Grove Park Inn has booked 8,000 reservations so far, about 50 percent above last year's figure.

At High Country Host, a service organization operated by the Boone Chamber of Commerce, operators say they are answering hundreds of calls a day about accomodations during the fair's six-month run from May through October.

"Most days we're swamped with calls from people all over the country," said Maxie Williams. "They want to know where to stay, what to see." High Country Host operates toll-free "world's fair lines" for people seeking information on the Boone-Blowing Rock area.

According to the state Division of Travel and Tourism in Raleigh, Knoxville and Gatlinburg, Tenn., just across the border from North Carolina, already are booked up for the fair.

Late last year, North Carolina launched a massive campaign to promote the mountains as the best place to stay while visiting the fair.

The General Assembly appropriated $150,000 to the 11-county Western Carolina Associated Communities for promotion of accommodations and attractions and gave another $414,000 for a North Carolina exhibit at the fair. The state also paid for a promotional film about the mountains to be shown to groups all over the country.

But officials and businessmen in WNC towns are doing some promoting of their own. Asheville has a color advertisement in the current issue of Southern Living magazine depicting Asheville as the perfect spot to vacation and see the fair at the same time. Asheville plans to advertise in another 11 national publications ranging from TV Guide to Good Housekeeping.

"What we're saying is 'Turn in here for the World's Fair,' meaning stop in Asheville, gateway to Western North Carolina for the World's Fair," Aldefer said.

Ralph Young, an Asheville businessman, has purchased 40 new buses to transport people from Asheville to the fair. Young, who says he has invested "millions" in his enterprise, will operate buses to the fair every 30 minutes.

Since Asheville only has 3,300 motel rooms available, another businessman, Ken Lawson, has put together a "bed and breakfast" reservation plan for people who can't find rooms or who want to stay in a private home.

Asheville is a two-hour drive from Knoxville on Interstate 40.

In Boone, Chamber of Commerce officials are mailing brochures urging visitors to "Take the high road to the World's Fair." Area motels are beginning to fill up for May and June and a shuttle-bus operation to the fair, about three hours away, is cranking up, according to chamber director Sue Wilmoth.

"We just had a booth at the Florida State Fair promoting this area and we're doing some advertising in magazines," she said.

Officials of the small town of Franklin in the southwest mountains are counting on a unique event to attract fair-goers. On March 16, with the help of World's Fair President S.H. "Bo" Roberts, they plan to dedicate the world's largest bed.

The 16-foot by 20-foot, four-poster bed, which will get a space in the Guinness Book of World Records, will be made of solid oak by area craftsmen. The bed, along with the world's largest quilt, will be on exhibit at the fair, according to Betty Gideon of the Franklin Chamber of Commerce.

"We like to call ourselves the little town that thinks big and we're hoping that this will get people interested in stopping here on their way to or from the fair," Ms. Gideon said.

Trooper Objects Over Deposit; Pay Withheld

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A deputy attorney general says the state is on secure legal ground in withholding the pay of a state trooper who objects on religious grounds to the state's new method of paying employees.

Andrew A. Vanore Jr. said he knew of no legal barrier to keep the N.C. Department of Crime Control and Public Safety from withholding the pay of D.C. Whitt, who says he also opposes the new system for constitutional reasons.

"It doesn't make a bit of difference whether he likes it or not," Vanore said. "He's getting what he's entitled to, that is, his pay."

North Carolina is gradually replacing paychecks with direct deposits into employees' bank accounts in an effort to cut costs.

Whitt, a 12-year patrol veteran headquartered in Newton and a member of a Baptist church in Lenoir, says he sees the direct-deposit system as a possible precursor to the ascent of the Antichrist foretold in the biblical book of Revelation.

The Antichrist, according to the Bible, is the antagonist of Jesus Christ who is expected to exert great influence on the world, but to be conquered forever by Christ in his second coming.

"To me, this is the beginning of a cashless society," Whitt said of the direct deposit system. "And a cashless society means that before long things could be controlled by one person or one organization, and the Bible teaches that this one person could easily be the Antichrist."

Beyond religious concerns, the mandate to enroll in the direct deposit system instead of getting a paycheck infringes upon state employees' individual rights, Whitt said.

"If an organization's right to save money becomes more important than one's rights to private property then we're treading on very dangerous grounds," he said.

Ray Lichtner, crime control and public safety fiscal affairs director, said Whitt was the only one of the department's 1,000 employees to refuse to comply with the direct deposit system.

State budget officials have estimated that direct deposit is expected to save the state about $1 million a year in check writing and handling costs.

Lichtner said he had heard indirectly of several other employees who had voiced religious objections similar to those cited by Whitt, but those individuals decided to go along with the system.

"It just wasn't worth the cost to make an exception for one person," Lichtner said. "The state has elected to do this to save the taxpayers money and as a convenience to the employees."

Dr. Charles H. Duckett has joined the East Carolina University School of Medicine as professor and director of graduate education in the Department of Family Medicine.

Prior to his appointment, he was associate professor of family medicine and director of the family practice residency program at the Bowman Gray School of Medicine.

A native of Canton, N.C., Duckett received his undergraduate degree from Wake Forest College and his medical degree from Bowman Gray. He completed postgraduate training at the University of Virginia Hospital, Charlottesville.

A charter fellow of the American Academy of Family Physicians, Duckett was in private practice in Canton for 17 years. He held numerous leadership positions in the N.C. Academy of Family Physicians, including president of the group. He is past president of the academy's board of directors.

Close Zippers After Using

NEW YORK (UPI) — To protect zippers in clothing and home furnishings, always close them after use and before washing to keep them from getting out of alignment. If they do start to stick after repeated washing and wearing, the Soap and Detergent Association recommends rubbing the teeth with beeswax, candle wax or a zipper lubricant. It's also a good idea to promptly repair frayed tape edges that usually occur at the top or bottom of the zipper where it meets the fabric.

welcome it," Boyles said.

His suggestion is that the national government have responibility for national security, monetary policy, health care for the poor and elderly and other programs agreed on by the states. "All else would be in the hands of the states," he said.

SERVICE TONIGHT

Eldress Dorothy Pratt will be in charge of a service tonight for the Pastor's Aid Club. The service will be held at 7:30 p.m. at Bethel Chapel Free Will Baptist Church.

Advance Paperwork Sped Cheese Deal

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Officials say doing paperwork in advance helped expedite distribution of surplus government cheese to Asheville food stamp recipients, but not enough to avoid a traffic snarl caused by a three-block line of people waiting to get cheese.

Many of the people in line Thursday already had the necessary paperwork ready, because the food stamp office sent out cards to all food stamp clients, asking them to fill them out and bring them.

"I don't know what it would have been like if we hadn't done it," said Virginia Eldreth, administrator of the food stamp program in Buncombe County.

Aaron Gallion, a food stamp office supervisor, said about 400 people were waiting in the cold when he arrived at the office at 7:20 a.m.

The line quickly grew and food stamp officials said they twice called police asking for assistance in handling the traffic.

They were told that the department did not have anyone to send.

The cheese arrrived from government warehouses Wednesday and the food stamp office expects to distribute about 6,000 of the five-pound blocks of cheese to the needy by Wednesday.

Mrs. Eldreth said there may not be enough cheese to go around. The county asked for 36,750 pounds of cheese out of the state's allocation and received 29,000 pounds.

The cheese was bought by the U.S. Department of Agriculture in 1980 to keep the price of dairy products up at a time when the supply was high, prices were dropping and it appeared that some dairy farmers might be put out of business.

President Reagan ordered the cheese distributed to the needy to reduce the warehouse storage bill and to provide additional help in the face of rising unemployment.

Chemical Plant Stays Open Despite Explosion

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A Greensboro chemical plant will remain open in spite of heavy damage it sustained in a powerful explosion Thursday, the plant's president says.

Dr. Ralph Beaumont says he has yet to estimate damages to rin-Mont Chemical Co., which exploded with a roar and rained debris over a nearby field Thursday about 6:30 a.m. Two plant employees were inside at the time and both escaped injury.

Beaumont also said there had been several minor fires at the plant in recent weeks but said they were not related to the explosion. Another company official said those fires involved latex-based chemicals no longer used by the company.

Greensboro Fire Department Battalion Chief J.W. Maness said the explosion occurred in a reactor device which mixes chemicals. He said he was not sure what chemical or chemicals caused the blast, which firefighters feared might ignite a 25,000-gallon railroad tanker loaded with explosive propylene oxide parked nearby.

However, firefighters were able to keep the cars covered with water and the evacuation was not needed.

"If that tank car had exploded, it would have cleared everything within 5,000 feet of here," said Battalion Chief J.W. Maness.

It took firefighters about 90 minutes to bring the fire under control.

The heavily populated Pomona community, the Pomona Industrial Park and several shopping centers on West Market Street are within a half-mile of the Brin-Mont plant.

Walter Clinton Clapp, one of the two employees on duty, said he was inside a large brick building when he heard a loud hissing sound coming from upstairs. He said he started to check it out but something told him not to go.

Seconds later, the building exploded.

The blast knocked him sideways and he jammed his thumb against a door. He ran from the burning building to a field across the street to escape flying debris.

"I laid down in the field because bricks and everything was flying overhead," Clapp said.

He said it scared him so badly he started crying.

The other employee, Freddie Sturdivant, was working in an adjacent warehouse-office building, which was not heavily damaged.

"I heard something that sounded like a steam hose — you know, it gives a hiss — and then everything went boom," he said. "It jarred the whole building."

He said he ran outside, jumped in his car and raced to a pay phone to call the fire department.

David Holland said he was driving by the plant when the explosion occurred. Flying bricks caused an estimated $300 damage to his Jeep.

"There was a big flash and a loud boom and it started raining debris," he said.

Jaycees Honor Fire-Rescuer

James Tyndall, an employee of the city's Fire-Rescue Department, was honored Thursday night by the Greenville Jaycees as the recipient of the chapter's outstanding young fire-rescue man for 1981.

The Jaycees presented Tyndall an engraved plaque in recognition of his selection.

Tyndall joined the department in March of 1980 as a fire-rescue trainee and currently holds the rank of fire-rescue I.

A certified emergency medical technician, Tyndall's fire-rescue duties include responding to emergency medical calls providing basic life support treatment for persons, if required; extricating trapped victims from wreckage or other emergency situations; receiving and responding to fire alarms; and forcing entry into burning structures and searching for and rescuing occupants. He is also involved in the maintenance of rescue vehicles, equipment, and station facilities.

Tyndall, a graduate of Rose High School, attended Pitt Community College for two years, studying industrial management technology. He has also attended the N.C. Rescue College and N.C. Fire College.

He is an Army veteran, serving from August of 1964 until July of 1967.

The award recipient and his wife, Debbie, reside at 203 Ragland Road, Winterville.

Sheriff Resigns Amid Series Of Allegations

SANFORD, N.C. (AP) — Sheriff Harold Thomas, who resigned amid allegations of official misconduct and sexual harassment, says he'll seek re-election "to let the people of Lee County decide if they want me as their sheriff."

Thomas announced his resignation Thursday after Lee County District Attorney John Twisdale said last Friday that he would file legal action to remove Thomas from office if necessary.

After Thomas announced his resignation, Twisdale said the matter is closed as far as the district attorney's office is concerned.

In a letter addressed to reporters, Thomas said the events of the past are behind him and he is looking forward to running for sheriff again.

"I believe this action is in the best interest of my family and the people of Lee County. It also removes the controversy away from the sheriff's department," the letter said.

He said he would campaign aggresively for re-election.

Last week, the district attorney released four notarized statements from women who had worked for Thomas, accusing him of sexual improprieties. Several of the women also filed complaints with the Equal Economic Opportunities Commission.

Twisdale said his office investigated Thomas for more than a month and also had found evidence of irregularities involving the use of vending machine profits, the sale of weapons and use of escort fees for movers.

The four women accused Thomas of luring them into isolated situations and then trying to forcibly kiss them. They also said he used suggestive language, called their homes late at night and threatened their jobs if they complained.

Robert L. Perkinson, Thomas' attorney, said Thursday that an agreement had been reached pertaining to the sexual harassment charges filed with the EEOC, but wouldn't discuss its terms.

Robert A. Hassell, a Raleigh attorney who has been representing the four women in the case, said the agreement did not involve litigation but would not comment further.

Pitt Farm Bureau Urged Aid Program

Members of the Pitt County Farm Bureau were encouraged Thursday night to unite in an effort to save the tobacco price support program.

County Farm Bureau President Atlas Wooten stressed unity in a brief talk at the organization's annual picnic held at the Farm Bureau office in Greenville. About 65 members and guests attended the picnic.

Burney Baker, field representative of the N.C. Farm Bureau Federation, discussed Gov. Jim Hunt's plan for seeking ideas to help make North Carolina meet the needs of its citizens in the year 2000. He encouraged farmers to promote planning for production of sufficient food and fiber for the state.

Judy Bowen and Betty LaRue provided special entertainment for the evening. They were introduced by Alma Worthington. G.W. Harris gave the invocation.

Mrs. Worthington, a member of the R.F. Shaw Scholarship Committee, asked high school seniors interested in studying agriculture or home economics to contact the Pitt County Farm Bureau office for information concerning scholarships offered by the state Farm Bureau.

Wooten announced that Rebecca Davenport, Lois Briley, Margie Hart and Mrs. Worthington would attend a leadership conference for Farm Bureau Women in Raleigh March 17-18.

Feel Impact In Mecklenburg

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — First Union National Bank vice president Harald Hansen said Thursday that Mecklenburg County is beginning to feel pressures of the current recession.

Speaking at a quarterly press briefing on the local economy, Hansen said that while local conditions still are "far from serious," the area is being more deeply hurt by the recession than would have ever been predicted.

He said that local business people surveyed by the Charlotte-based bank expressed "a spirit of uncertainty and caution" about the economy. However, he said the sample of more than 50 was still optimistic about the second half of the year.

Long-Buried Ship Found On Office Tower's Site

REMAINS OF A SHIP — Archeologists put tags on the remains of a ship which was found while a team of archeologists were digging for artifacts on the construction site of a 30-story office building last week in lower Manhattan. (AP Laserphoto)

By JERRY SCHWARTZ
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Archaeologists digging through 300-year-old buried trash have found a ship that someone threw out before the Declaration of Independence was signed, back in the days when the Big Apple was just a town at the tip of Manhattan.

It is a fine ship that had sailed the Caribbean, but the ever-building city can't wait around forever for the painstaking work of pulling the whole thing out of the ground. Part of the old vessel will stay buried as a 30-story office tower rises above it.

"It was probably, for its time, a very ordinary vessel," Warren Reiss, co-director of the archaeological dig, said Thursday, "and yet it's the only one we've got."

The 18th century merchant ship, 80 feet long by 26 feet wide, was discovered 15 feet underground at Water Street in the financial district, where British developer Howard Ronson plans to construct an office building.

When the ship was found, Ronson postponed construction of his building by more than a month — at a cost of $500,000, according to his spokesman, Eamon Brennan — to allow the dig to continue.

But workers say that month won't be enough to raise the whole ship, so one side of the ship is being unearthed in numbered pieces, which are being kept temporarily in a pit filled with water so the wood won't deteriorate.

In addition, Mary Ellen Hern, a spokeswoman for the city Landmarks Commission, said the forward part of the ship — the first 20 feet — would be raised, restored and placed in a museum or institution.

The vessel apparently was buried some time around 1750 as landfill when Manhattan expanded eastward, archeologists say.

Experts say little is known about how merchant ships were built between 1660 and 1770. Historians hope to learn more about the technology of the time by studying the vessel.

"This is a rare opportunity to study the ship-building methods of the 18th century," says Norman Brouwer, curator of ships at Manhattan's South Street Seaport museum. "It's just too bad they don't have the opportunity to unearth the entire ship."

Reiss and his co-director and wife, Sheli Smith, will take the pieces and draw the ship as it was when it was built around 1740.

In addition to the forward part of the ship, other pieces — including a winch used to pull up the anchor — will be preserved.

The ship might have remained a buried treasure, under thousands of tons of concrete, steel and glass. But when Ronson proposed the new building, the Landmarks Commission noted that lower Manhattan was the center of colonial New York, and the site could yield artifacts.

Ronson agreed to pay for a dig, and he hired Soil Systems Inc. of Atlanta to do the excavation, which started in November.

A dig on the western side of the lot turned up more than 150,000 items, including bottles, dishes and other 18th century artifacts.

Then, according to Reiss, the archeologists decided to make another test dig on the eastern side of the lot in mid-January, two weeks before Ronson's Feb. 1 deadline.

"They hit a solid wall, and they didn't know what they had," said Reiss, a resident of Bristol, Maine. "They kept digging for a few days, and suddenly, they said, 'We've got a ship.'"

Reiss and Ms. Smith were called in to supervise the excavation. Ronson delayed construction and agreed to pay for the new dig, which cost an estimated $150,000, bringing his investment to $650,000. Since then, 40 workers have struggled six days a week, at times in snow and rain, to beat a new March 3 deadline.

Reiss, 34, is a historian and Ms. Smith, 27, is an anthropologist.

Reiss said the ship was "very well made, carefully made," between 1730 and 1740. Its bow was "apple-cheeked," not pointed, he said.

One thing is certain: the ship sailed in the Caribbean. It had an outer hull made of pitch and horsehair and "furring strips" of wood. Worms penetrated that outer hull and died; Reiss says the remains of three types of Caribbean worms were found in the ship.

The ship apparently was brought in as a derelict after 1746 — the date on a ceramic top found below its decks. By 1751, according to city records, landfill had extended Manhattan Island a block eastward.

BURIED SHIP — An archeologist digs at the construction site of an office building in lower Manhattan where an entire 18th century merchant ship was found. The ship, 80 feet long, was discovered 15 feet below the ground. (AP Laserphoto)

Facts About The BIBLE

BY JOHN LEHTI

THE MAN WHO EXPERIENCED BOTH ASPECTS OF "STONING"

AS SAUL OF TARSUS, HE HEARTILY APPROVED OF THE STONING TO DEATH OF STEPHEN, THE FIRST CHRISTIAN MARTYR, AND IN FACT STOOD GUARD OVER THE GARMENTS OF THE MEN WHO KILLED STEPHEN. LATER, AS PAUL, NOW ENGAGED IN SPREADING THE WORD OF CHRISTIANITY, HE WAS STONED HIMSELF BY AN INFURIATED MOB AT LYSTRA AND LEFT FOR DEAD ON THE OUTSKIRTS OF THE CITY, BUT....

...UNLIKE STEPHEN, PAUL DID NOT DIE. HE AROSE FROM THE ROCKPILE, UNDAUNTED, TO CONTINUE HIS GREAT MISSIONARY WORK IN SPREADING THE GOOD NEWS OF JESUS TO THE GENTILES!

Aver Game Is Door To Occult

By LAURINDA KEYS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — One of the hottest-selling games for youngsters these days is lambasted by Christian fundamentalist groups as an avenue to the occult.

The Christian Research Institute in El Toro, Calif., says the role-playing game "Dungeons and Dragons" is dangerous because it blurs distinctions between fantasy and reality, forces players to act out characters without morals and predisposes young minds to accept the occult.

Others defend use of the game in classes for gifted children, claiming it helps them use their imaginations.

The game, created by Gary Gygax, has been on the market for nine years, but its sales have soared lately along with growing public fascination with the world of fantasy and magic.

Signs of that trend have showed up in movies such as "The Dragonslayer," "Clash of the Titans," and "Star Wars," in coffee-table art books such as "Faeries," "Giants" and "Gnomes" — written as if such creatures were real — and appearance of the mystical unicorn symbol on jewelry and household furnishings.

Robert Landa, a Montebello attorney who believes the battle over the use of "Dungeons and Dragons" in public schools will end up in the courts, says:

"It's not a coincidence that this is happening (the popularity of the game). This is just the tip of the iceberg of what the occult is doing. And this affects the minds of children."

Landa represents a group called Californians for Biblical Morality. Last fall the group argued that Citrus College in Covina illegally allowed free use of its facilities to a gifted children's class teaching "Dungeons and Dragons."

Cress Bracci, executive director of the group, said the game teaches a religious practice, the practice of the occult.

"The word of God says that the occult is of the enemy," she said. "We just wanted to caution parents that if a child is innocently lured into that game, he will be dwelling on that power. Why should public facilities be used to promote occultism?"

Mike Tate of Sacramento, at Student at Capital Bible Institute who is completing a documentary on a fight over teaching of the game in Sacramento County public facilities, says:

"It's a religion of the occult. Children are taught witchcraft. By the time they become a dungeonmaster, they know all the arts of incantations and casting spells."

He says attempts are first made to get the game into "things like recreation and parks, so it will be accepted, then into the classroom."

A coalition of 10 churches in the Sacramento area opposed four "Dungeons and Dragons" programs in Sacramento suburbs last summer, and won one case.

In the marketplace, the game's popularity has boomed. Gygax estimated sales in fiscal 1981 at $20 million worth of games and accessories, up from $4 million two years ago.

"That's what keeps the store open. If it wasn't for that game, we'd have to close the store," said Bob Mendoza, an employee in The Last Grenadier, a wargames shop in Pomona.

A basic kit, with dice, lead figures of dragons, trolls, dwarfs and knights, and an instruction manual, costs $10, said Mendoza. He said the store offers free classes for children and that as players become more adept they buy more intricate game plans, stranger figures and advanced handbooks.

Marv Rubinek, owner of The Price of His Toys adult toy store in Beverly Hills, carries the electronic "Dungeons and Dragons" game for $65, and said he keeps selling out.

The beginning handbooks for "Dungeons and Dragons" tell how to play at killing monsters and searching for buried treasure.

The games are played in the mind, with each player assuming a role and, by the roll of the dice and the whim of the dungeonmaster, facing one danger or obstacle after another until they win treasure or get killed off.

But Landa notes that the cover contains the face of a demon.

"In the advanced stages, the players assume the roles of monsters, demons and demigods," he said. "And characteristics and powers of each character. "The player must learn all this, not like you'd learn history, but identify with the character of the demon so he can use his powers to survive and kill off another character."

Will Speak At Revival

REV. NED SAULS

Revival services will begin Sunday at 11 a.m. at the Black Jack Pentecostal Free Will Baptist Church with the Rev. Ned Sauls of Dunn as the featured speaker.

Sauls is president of Heritage Bible College. He is a native of Greene County and has served several pastorates in eastern North Carolina. He is also the assistant general superintendent of the Pentecostal FWB Church Inc.

The pastor of Black Jack Pentecostal FWB Church invites the public to attend. Special music will be provided each night by the church choir and others. A nursery will be provided.

JOY NIGHT

Joy Night services will be held at Fleming Chapel A.M.E. Zion Church Saturday at 7:30 p.m. The speakers will be the Rev. Charles Joyner, the Rev. Eugene Joyner, the Rev. Larry Walston and the Rev. Jimmy Stokes.

Music will be rendered by the Best Chapel Choir and the Fleming Chapel Junior and Young Adult choirs. The sponsor, Wilbert "Bunk" Edwards, said the public is invited.

YOUTH DAY

Youth Day services will be held at St. Matthew Free Will Baptist Church Sunday at 11 a.m., with Elder David Daniels preaching. Music will be rendered by the No. 2 Choir and Junior Ushers.

At 3 p.m. Bishop Stephen Jones will preach, with the No. 2 choir and the No. 2 Usher Board assisting. At 7:30 p.m. Eldress Shirley Daniels will preach, with music by the Gospel Chorus. Pastor Hattie Cobb invites the public.

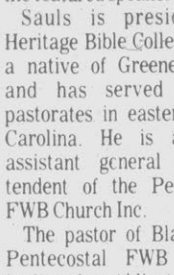

REHEARSAL

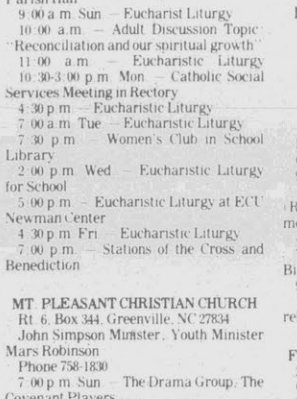

The W.J. Best Traveling Choir will have rehearsal and a business meeting at Sweet Hope Free Will Baptist Church Saturday at 3 p.m.

Biologist Says Falcons Could Rid City Of Blackbird Horde

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A biologist says there may be only one way to rid Charlotte of an annual blackbird infestation: more birds, but a different kind.

Dr. Richard D. Brown, assistant professor of biology at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte, says it's possible to encourage falcons to nest in cities such as Charlotte, Gastonia and Winston-Salem.

Since falcons prey on birds, they would encourage the pesky blackbirds to look elsewhere for a springtime stopover, says Brown, director of the Carolina Raptor (bird of prey) Rehabilitation and Research Center at UNC-C.

"I'm not saying this is the answer," he said. "But it is a potential way of solving the problem and it's nature's way of solving the problem."

According to Brown, peregrine falcons once inhabited North Carolina but left as urban development deprived them of habitat and the use of the insecticide DDT became widespread. DDT has since been banned.

A peregrine falcon was sighted last month in downtown Columbia, S.C., and Brown says with some encouragement the birds might return to North Carolina.

He said they could be lured by a process called "hacking," in which very young falcons would be placed in artificial nests in areas where blackbirds are a problem. Food would be placed in the nest in a manner that would keep the birds from knowing they were being fed by humans.

Once the falcons began leaving the nest, they gradually would be weaned from human care.

Since birds of prey are known to return to the area where they learned to fly, the falcons would be likely to return to the blackbird-infested area to breed. Thus, falcons would become a part of the area's bird population and the blackbirds should move on, Brown said.

The plan could present some problems, he added. Volunteers would have to be found to carry out the hacking process and transporting the falcons to their hack sites — and building their nests — could be costly.

Also, since falcons are an endangered species, state and federal permission would be needed.

Another problem is that the falcons would prey on robins and pigeons as well as blackbirds, which might cause people to shoot them. Such people fail to realize that the falcons kill only the birds least fit for survival and thus carry out their natural role, Brown said.

"It's nature's way of culling out the misfits," he said. "Predators keep the population healthy."

Birds of prey have been used successfully to remove droves of smaller birds from airport runways sporadically, but Brown said he knows of no attempts to remove the smaller birds by bringing the predator to the area.

Rockets Hoist Big Satellite

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Lighting up the night with a blue plume of flame, a 116-foot-tall Delta rocket carried a giant $28 million communications satellite into space.

The 2,425-pound Westar IV is twice the size of three other Western Union satellites now functioning in space. It was launched into orbit at 7:04 p.m. EST Thursday after strong winds in the upper stratosphere forced a 15-minute delay.

Boosted into the sky at 1,500 mph by nine rockets, the satellite was at the edge of the Earth's atmosphere in less than four minutes.

Among other duties, the 2,425-pound Westar IV spacecraft will transmit regional editions of Time magazine, the Wall Street Journal and Sports Illustrated from its orbital station 22,640 miles above San Antonio, Texas.

"It's a big bird," said Charles Gay, Kennedy Space Center's director of expendable rockets.

Westar IV joins three other Western Union spacecraft handling voice, data, video and print facsimile communications. It replaces aging Westar I, which was launched in 1974 and reaches the end of its design life in 1983.

It has a 10-year lifespan and carries 24 transponder channels, each capable of carrying 2,400 voice transmissions or one color television transmission.

It will cover the 50 states, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

Western Union's satellite network relays programs for Public Broadcasting Service radio and TV stations, Mutual Broadcasting System, some commercial TV networks, the Hughes Television Network, Cable News, Westinghouse Broadcasting and others.

Another satellite, Westar V, is scheduled for launch in 1982, taking over traffic now carried on Westar II.

Seminar In March Set

A seminar for health professionals, designed to address maternal-child health issues, has been scheduled in Greenville March 17-18.

Dr. Stanley Graven of the University of Missouri, a pioneer in the field of perinatal health, will be the featured speaker at the "Perinatal Symposium: Health Care in the '80s," being sponsored by the Coastal Plains Chapter of the March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation in conjunction with the Eastern Area Health Education Center and the nutritional division of Meade Johnson.

Graven will be joined by pediatric and obstetric faculty members of the East Carolina University Schools of Medicine and Nursing, and other health professionals.

Specific workshop sessions will focus on "pregnant" fathers, motivational factors in getting prospective mothers to eat what they should during pregnancy, effects of certain drugs on the fetus and nursing infant, special needs of adolescent parents, the parents roll in the modern delivery of perinatal care, and recent advances in understanding pre-term labor.

For further information, contact symposium coordinator Martha Ogburn at the March of Dimes office in Greenville, at 758-2542.

Resin Encases Ancient Tissues

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — A bit of hardened tree resin has given modern man a vew of fly tissues from 40 million years ago, the oldest tissues ever examined microscopically, scientists say.

There is even "an extreme longshot" that the tissues contain DNA, although most studies indicate that deoxyribonucleic acid, or DNA, degenerates after 1 million years, the University of California scientists said Thursday.

DNA, a basic component of all living matter, contains genetic codes.

The muscle, fat and other cell tissues of the fly "corresponded to what one would expect to find in a routine examination of present-day insects," said George O. Poinar Jr. and Roberta Hess in their article in this week's Science magazine.

Poinar, an entomologist, said comparison of the fly's tissues with those of its descendants might help show how quickly evolution works on the cellular level.

The fly looks much like an insect of the current family Mycetophilidae Diptera, the scientists said.

The small, brown female fly apparently settled into sap from a conifer tree on a spring day along what later became the Baltic coast, the scientists said.

It apparently lived during the early Eocene, at a time when early deer, horses and rhinoceroses were appearing on earth, the scientists said.

The oldest tissues examined before the fly were about 1 million years old, said Poinar and Hess. Scientists had largely been ignoring insects in resin, which they believed contained only skeletons without tissues, the two said.

"Everybody said they were just shells and didn't bother with closer examination," Poinar said.

Paper Mill Go-Ahead

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Union Camp Corp. got final approval Thursday from the state Department of Health and Environmental Control for the two primary permits it needs to begin construction of its $600 million paper mill in Eastover.

The only state permit that remains to be given final approval is an authorization from the state Budget and Control Board to allow Union Camp to place its water intake and discharge system in the Wateree River. However, Union Camp still must get a federal permit from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

Joe Stutts, manager of community relations for the Franklin, Va.-based corporation said the company has gotten no notification of the department's decision.

The Eastover paper mill is to be built on 3,700 acres on the Wateree River that divides Richland and Sumter counties. The plant is to be built in three phases and eventually will produce 2,250 tons of paper products daily. It will draw 37 million gallons of water daily from the river and groundwater and pump most of it back into the river which feeds into the rich Santee Cooper basin which is the state's second biggest tourist attraction.

First phase construction is expected to take 33 months with production to begin in mid 1984.

The mill will provide permanent jobs for 450 workers and have a $10 million payroll.

Shaw Alumni Sponsor Show

The Pitt County Alumni of Shaw University will sponsor the Shaw Players & Company in "Run Little Chillun," a black folk-drama with music, Saturday at 8 p.m., at the Roxy Theater on Albemarle Avenue.

The drama, an American College Theater Festival XIV production, is billed as "a show for the entire family."

"Run Little Chillun," by Hall Johnson, is being directed by Patricia C. Caple.

Tickets, available at the door, are $5 for adults, $3.50 for college students with identification, and $1 for public school students.

Women Hosting South Carolina

East Carolina's Lady Pirates play host to the University of South Carolina Saturday at 7:30 p.m. in Minges Coliseum, seeking an upset over the 13th ranked Lady Gamecocks, and possible national ranking themselves.

The game will be observed as "Youth Night" with all youths, 18 and under, being admitted for $1 each.

East Carolina coach Cathy Andruzzi will be shooting for her 100th career victory in the contest. She currently holds a 99-62 mark in four ECU seasons and two prior to that at Wagner College on Staten Island. Her ECU record is 78-36.

East Carolina goes into the game with a 16-8 record on the season, having won 12 of the last 13 outings, including wins over Virginia, North Carolina, N.C. State, and Michigan State. The only blot on the record since January 10 when the streak started against the Lady Cavaliers, was a 72-63 loss to then-third-ranked Old Dominion. And in that game, the Lady Pirates led most of the way before finally bowing to the taller club on the Monarch's home court..

South Carolina brings a 20-7 record, after losing to Old Dominion at Norfolk last night, 84-63. Other major victories by the Lady Gamecock include wins over nationally ranked Clemson, Memphis State, and Kentucky during an eight-game streak.

Despite problems suffered by the Lady Gamecocks during the controversial dismissal of ex-coach Pam Parsons, the team has regrouped and took a eight-game winning streak into the Old Dominion contest. They are now guided by assistant coach Terry Kelly.

The Gamecock scoring is led by all-American center Sheila Foster, 6-3, who averages 20.6 points a game and during the last eight games has averaged 26 points and 13 rebounds. She averages around 10 rebounds a game for the season.

She gets help from Evelyn Johnson, "Magic's" kid sister, who averages 13 points and 4.7 rebounds a game from her forward position. Point guard Sharon Rivers has handed out 162 assists and averages 8.7 points a game.

Wing Brantley Southers gets 9.2 points and 4.6 rebounds a game, while Becky Parker (5.2 points) and Marsi McAlister (4.2) share playing duties.

East Carolina's scoring is led by center Mary Denkler, hitting 20.3 points a game, and 8.5 rebounds a contest. She's joined in double figures by Sam Jones, now up to 16.9. Jones also has 147 assists on the year, and has just set a new single season steal record with 65.

Denkler needs only five points to pass both Kathy Riley and Sheila Cotton on the career scoring list and move into fourth place with 1,153 points. Jones needs just five assists to move past Lydia Rountree into second place on the career list with 246.

Joining them in the probable starting lineup will be senior guard Lillion Barnes, point guard Fran Hooks, and forward Loletha Harrison.

"South Carolina is an excellent team that is better than their record indicates. They are awesome," Andruzzi said. "We'll have to play our best. We'll have to stop Foster and Johnson. South Carolina is aggressive and physical. It will be a big game for both teams."

East Carolina is shooting for a post-season bid in the NCAA tournament after making the AIAW regionals last year. The Lady Pirates have one more game left in the regular season, as they play host to North Carolina on Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in Minges Coliseum. The Tar Heels enter today's ACC women's tournament as the top-seed after finishing in a three-way tie for the top spot.

Pirates Close With Indians

East Carolina University's men close out the 1981-82 basketball season's regular schedule Saturday at 7:30 p.m. when they travel to Williamsburg, Va., to meet William & Mary.

The meeting between the two will be the second of the year. In the first meeting, the Pirates pulled off a 61-58 win over the Indians. But since then, the Pirates have failed to win another ECAC-South game, losing seven in a row. The Pirates are now 2-7 in the league and 10-15 overall.

William & Mary, meanwhile, is 5-5 in the conference and 14-10 overall.

In the opening game, the Pirates led by as many as ten points in the first half and as many as seven in the second before having to pull it out in the final seconds. Tony Byles made a free throw and Morris Hargrove added another in the final 30 seconds to provide the three-point victory.

Hargrove led the ECU scoring in that one, hitting 15, while Charles Green had 12. Mike Strayhorn led W&M with 20.

The Indians snapped a three-game losing streak last night in beating George Mason, 53-47 in overtime, while the Pirates are in the midst of a four-game losing skid as the season climaxes.

Both teams will return to action next week in the ECAC-South tournament, to be played in Norfolk, Va. Pairings and game times for that tournament are to be set on Sunday.

"William & Mary is the type team that is going to play everyone a close game," ECU's Dave Odom said. "They are well rounded in all areas; they shoot well and they play tight defense."

The Indians play zone defense very good, and that has been the downfall of the Pirates recently as they have been unable to crack the good defenses thrown at them.

The Indians are led by freshman guard Keith Cieplicki, 6-4, who is averaging 12.9 points a game. Strayhorn, a 6-5 junior forward, is hitting 12.1 points a game.

Other starters are expected to be 6-4 senior guard Bill Barnes, 9.0; 6-9 junior center Brant Weidner, 7.7; and 6-7 sophomore forward Herb Harris, 3.8. Weidner is the leading rebounder with a 5.4 average.

"Cieplicki is an outstanding freshman" Odom continued. "Barnes, to me, is the team's stablizer. And Strayhorn is a fine player.

"It's a challenge for anyone to play at William & Mary. We need to make a good showing in the last game in order to be ready for the tournament."

Making a good showing would help. The last four outings of the Pirates, against James Madison, Navy, George Mason and Richmond, were anything but that.

Odom admits that he is disappointed with the season, but he does feel that the Pirates can put it together again.

Chief among his worries about Saturday, however, is whether forward Charles Green is going to be ready to play. Green, who suffered a knee injury against Navy, sprained an ankle in practice earlier this week, and did not play against Richmond.

Lee's Free Throws Preserve Rose Victory Over Fike In Wild Finish

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

ROCKY MOUNT — In a wild and frantic finish, Donnell Lee came off the bench to sink two free throws with two seconds left to give Rose High School the edge it needed to take a 54-53 victory over Wilson Fike last night in the Big East Tournanment semifinals.

In the girls' contest which preceeded the boys' game, Wilson Beddingfield downed Fike, 60-53.

Tonight, Beddingfield's girls face regular season champion Rocky Mount for the title at 7 p.m., while the Rampants meet the regular season winning Gryphons of Rocky Mount for the boys' title.

All four teams have qualified for the state playoffs, which begin with first round play on Tuesday. The winning teams will be hosts to the runner-up teams from the Mid-East, while the losing teams travel to the sites of the Cap-Eight winners.

The game between the Rampants and Golden Demons went to the wire and wasn't decided until after Lee sank his two free throws.

With a 1:50 showing in the game, Russell Perkins drove to the basket for a jumper that put Rose into a 52-46 lead — seemingly unbeatable. The Rampants throughout most of the final period had played keep-away from the Demons after having taken the lead at 45-42 on a three-point play by Freddy Cherry with 5:13 left. Lee's goal was the first basket since that point, while five free throws had been added in the meanwhile.

Courtside Discussion
Officials J.M. Merrill (facing camera) and Donald Barnes explain the situation to Rose High School coach Jim Brewington (left) and Fike coach Harvey Reid after an intentional foul and a technical foul with two seconds left and Rose in a one-point lead, 52-51. Rose, which was fouled, made two free throws, while Fike missed the two technicals awarded it, as the Rampants won 54-53, to advance to tonight's Big East finals. (Reflector Photo)

Following the shot, Rose committed a foul on Fike's Chris Ward, who hit the first of a one-and-one, trimming it to 52-47. After forcing a turnover, Fike finally hit on the third try when Ward threw back his own missed shot with 57 seconds left to cut it to 52-49.

After the inbounds play, Barry Smith was fouled, but failed to hit and Fike got the rebound. William Powell scored with 44 seconds showing to reduce the Rose lead to only one, 52-51.

Again, Smith was fouled just after the inbounds pass, and again, he missed with Fike grabbing the rebound.

With 20 seconds to go, Fike called a time-out to set up a play. But just after the inbounds, William Battle tapped the ball away from a Fike player and raced toward the basket for what could be a clinching basket. However, he traveled on the way in, turning it back to Fike with 11 seconds left. Fike, however, charged into a stationary Rampant going back down court, returning it to the Rampants with five seconds left.

Again, after the inbounds play, Smith was fouled with two seconds left. But this time, he retaliated by throwing the ball at the Fike player, and he was ejected.

The officials, after a discussion with both Rose Coach Jim Brewington and Fike

The ECU Strength Complex is located at 220 E. 14th Street.

Rams Escape Patriot Rally, 59-56

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

LITTLEFIELD — There Greene Central sat, content atop an 11-point cushion when a not-so-funny thing happened on the way to the District II 3-A semifinals. The Rams almost didn't make it.

With just over two minutes standing between the Rams and a semifinal showdown with D.H. Conley, Greene Central was out in front of West Carteret, 55-44, and appeared headed for an easy win.

Someone forgot to tell West Carteret.

The Patriots used four straight Greene Central turnovers to close within one before Roderick Lane and Cepado Albritton each canned a pair of foul shots to lift the Rams to a 59-56 victory Thursday night.

Greene Central, now 17-8, will play D.H. Conley tonight (8:30 p.m.) for the right to advance to district finals. North Pitt will play West Craven tonight at 7 o'clock in the other semifinal game. The two winners will meet Tuesday night (8:30) for the district title.

In another semifinal game Thursday night, SouthWest Edgecombe's girls' won their 58th straight with a 65-48 win over D.H. Conley. Also last night, C.B. Aycock's girls nipped North Lenoir, 29-28.

The Lady Falcons will play West Carteret today (5:30 p.m.) with the winner to face undefeated and defending state champion SouthWest in the district title game Tuesday night (7:00).

"With two minutes to go in the game we've got an 11-point lead," Greene Central coach Lewis Godwin said. "We've got 'em beat. Then we go out and play.... I don't know what.... There's no way to describe it.

"If there had been another 15 or 20 seconds they would have beaten us. I think the boys thought we had blowed 'em out. We just went into a coma, I guess."

Greene Central, which never trailed in the game, led, 26-18, at the half and stretched its lead to 44-32 after three periods. The Rams managed to maintain their lead through the first six minutes of the fourth period and led, 55-44, when suddenly their game fell apart.

Four straight trips downcourt resulted in turnovers — that is when the Rams could get the ball past the halfcourt line. Twice the Patriots' press forced turnovers in the backcourt.

Guard Dean Sutton converted the first into a layup and on the second Bruce Murray was fouled. He hit one of the two free throws. After another Ram turnover, Donald Johnson hit a jumper and Greene Central's 11-point lead was now four (55-51) with 1:18 left.

Twenty seconds later — after the Rams' fourth turnover — Johnson missed the front end of a one-and-one, but ran down the rebound in the left corner. His driving jumper on the baseline bounced off the rim, but Sutton grabbed the rebound and hit a short jumper to pull the Patriots within 55-53 with 49 seconds left.

The Rams again had trouble getting the ball in bounds and once they did West Carteret reserve Clint Sanford tied up GC guard Boneree Johnson for a jump ball.

Sanford won the tap but Sutton missed a 17-foot jumper. Reserve Johnny Potter grabbed the rebound — his third of the quarter — and was fouled with 26 seconds left. He hit the first to make it 55-54, but missed the second and Lane was fouled on the rebound.

Lane swished both free throws, but Sutton countered with a 22-foot jumper to cut the deficit back to one (57-56) with 15 seconds to go. The Patriots then took 12 seconds to foul someone and when they did it was the wrong man: Cepado Albritton.

Albritton, a left-hander, went to the line having connected on six of seven free throws. He hit both free throws — to the relief of his teammates and to his coach.

"We just fell apart there in the last two minutes," Godwin said. "But Cepado Albritton hit those free throws."

Albritton finished the game with 12 points and five rebounds and was one of three players in double figures for the Rams. Forward Roderick Lane, who hit only eight of 27 shots from the field, led the Rams with 19 points and 17 rebounds. Guard James Thompson added 14 points.

West Carteret, without leading scorer and rebounder Darryl Parmley, who was kicked off the team in mid-February, was led in scoring by Sutton with 22 points and forward Travis Adams with 16 points. Adams injured his leg with two minutes left and did not return.

Both teams shot poorly. Greene Central hit 21 of 53 (39.6%) shots from the floor while West Carteret canned only 26 of 69 (37.6). Greene Central also outrebounded the Patriots, 38 to 29.

"We hit the boards well and we played good defense and we penetrated good against their zone," Godwin said. "This is as good as we've played in a long time. The boys were ready to play tonight."

The game started slowly. With four minutes gone, Greene Central led, 6-4. The Rams then used three buckets by Lane and a pair of free throws by Albritton to take a 14-10 lead at the end of the first period.

Consecutive jumpers by Johnson and Thompson pushed the lead to 18-10 early in the second period. The Patriots cut the gap to two (20-18) on a jumper and two free throws by Sutton, but Greene Central scored six straight points to go up, 26-18, at the half.

West Carteret scored on four of its first five possessions of the second half to narrow the deficit to four, but a three-point play by Albritton and two jumpers by Lane in the final 20 seconds gave the Rams a 44-32 lead going into the final eight minutes.

With Adams and Sutton each connecting on two jumpers, the

SouthWest Solves DHC Problem For No. 58

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

LITTLEFIELD — SouthWest Edgecombe had its problems with Victim No. 58, but like so many other problems over the past three seasons the Lady Cougars had the solution — Bridget Jenkins.

Jenkins hit 14 of 20 shots from the floor and six of 10 from the free throw line to spark SouthWest Edgecombe past a determined D.H. Conley squad, 65-48, Thursday night in the semifinals of the District II 3-A tournament.

The Lady Cougars, who are now 26-0 and have won 58 straight games over the past three seasons, will play the winner of tonight's West Carteret vs. C.B. Aycock semi-final battle Tuesday evening for the district title.

D.H. Conley, which finished 11-10 last year in Coach Joy James' first year, ends the season at 20-6.

"Bridget Jenkins played a good ballgame," James said afterward in perhaps the biggest understatement of the tournament. "I don't believe she can shoot like that every night.

"But like I told the girls, I thought we played a real good first half but in the third quarter we got behind and ran out of steam," she said. "I'll say this, she (SWE coach Sandra Langley) knew we were here."

Langley did indeed. The Valkyries used a patient, passing half-court offense that gave them more shots inside in the first quarter than the Lady Cougars have given up in most games.

Conley, which never led, tied the game three times in the last 2½ minutes of the first period, the final time on a move inside by Karen Barret with eight seconds left to tie the game at 13-13.

The score was tied three more times in the first two minutes of the second period before three straight jumpers by Jenkins gave SouthWest a 25-21 lead with 5:19 left.

Then, with all-conference pick Delphine Mabry on the bench with three fouls and SWE clinging to a 29-27 lead with 2:55 left, the Lady Cougars scored eight straight points — four by Jenkins — to take a 27-28 lead at the half. Jenkins had 19 points at the half, including nine of 12 from the floor.

Unlike in the first quarter, when the Valkyries patiently looked for their shots, the third period saw the Conley offensive patience deteriorate into a one-pass, shoot-it-up attack.

SouthWest, taking advantage of DHC's impatience, pushed its lead to 14 (46-32) midway through the third quarter on a follow shot by Jenkins and the Valkyries were never able to get closer than 12 the rest of the game.

Joining Bridget Jenkins, who reportedly has narrowed her collegiate choices to East Carolina and Old Dominion, in double figures was her sister, Melody Jenkins, who finished with 13 points and a game-high 16 rebounds. The Lady Cougars aoutrebounded the Valkyries, 40-21.

Conley was led in scoring by Barnhill with 17 points and Darlene Cannon with 16.

"The third quarter was the turning point," James said. "We didn't take it to them like we did in the first half. We had some mental lapses. In the first half, we were really up. We were taking it to them.

"In the second half, we were not as patient. When someone the caliber of SouthWest gets a 15-point lead on you, you feel like you have to catch up in a hurry.

"The whole week we worked on being patient. I told them, 'Don't rush,'" she said. "I told them they were just going to have to take it to them. We did that in the first half."

Not, however, in the final two minutes of the second quarter or in the second half when the Lady Cougars pulled away for the victory. While disappointed over the loss, James was already looking ahead to next year.

"I want you to put this in the paper," she said. "We'll be back. I've only got one senior (Barnhill). We turned it around this year. Last year we weren't even in the districts."

Tulsa Peaking At Right Time

By The Associated Press

Nolan Richardson says his Tulsa University basketball team is "peaking at the right time" with the NCAA tournament a couple of weeks down the road.

"There's no telling how far they can go," Oral Roberts Cach Ken Hayes said Thursday night after watching Tulsa, the nation's eighth-ranked college team, rout his Titans 91-70.

The Hurricane won this year's bragging rights to the city of Tulsa with the help of a fine all-around performance by Paul Pressey. He had a school-record eight steals and scored a team-high 19 points.

"He does everything but sell tickets," Richardson said of Pressey. "And, he'd probably do that if we asked him to."

"It was the best brand of defense we've played this year," Richardson said in assessing his team's overall reformance. "When it's tourney time, that's when we need to play like that. We're getting ready for the tournament and peaking at the right time. Everyone is contributing."

Pressey's total steals broke his own record of seven set earlier this season. Pressey and Bruce Vanley keyed a surge that had Tulsa up by as many as 24 points in the final minute.

Vanley finished with 14 points while center Greg Stewart added 13 points and 12 rebounds. Herbert Johnson came off the bench to add 12 points while Mike Anderson had 10.

Oral Roberts' Chris Cantrell led all scorers with 22 points.

In other games involving the nation's ranked teams, No. 10 Memphis State beat Tulane 64-62, No. 11 Iowa routed Wisconsin 79-55, No. 13 Minnesota turned back Michigan 61-50 and No. 14 Fresno State tripped the University of Pacific 51-43.

The Top Twenty

Keith Lee and Derrick Phillips combined for 34 points as Memphis State beat Tulane to claim the regular season Metro Conference championship.

The victory avenged a 58-54 overtime loss to Tulane earlier this season in New Orleans. A victory Thursday night would have given the second-place Green Wave a tie with the Tigers for the conference title.

Otis Jackson, the Tigers' senior guard and playmaker, almost personally held off a Tulane rally at the end. First, he made two clutch baskets to give the Tigers a 64-60 lead. On the defensive end of the court, Lee had a key block and a rebound in the final seconds to preserve the victory.

Michael Payne, Bob Hansen and Kenny Arnold combined for 41 points as conference-leading Iowa routed last-place Wisconsin in Big Ten action. Iowa dominated the second half, outscoring the Badgers 15-0 during a five-minute stretch before Coach Lute Olson cleared the bench.

Darryl Mitchell scored 23 points and Trent Tucker added 18 to lead Minnesota over Michigan. The victory snapped a 19-year losing streak for the Gophers at Michigan's Crisler Arena.

A three-point play by Thad Garner pulled the Wolverines even at 26 four minutes into the second half and the teams stayed close until a Mitchell layup pulled the Gophers ahead for good. Minnesota led by as many as 10 points, 48-38, with four minutes remaining.

Donald Mason's 12 points led Fresno State over Pacific. The victory nailed down the Pacific Coast Athletic Association title for the Bulldogs.

Pacific's Matt Waldron had a game-high 20 points and seven rebounds.

Unranked Teams

Clark Kellogg's season-high 24 points paced Ohio State over Indiana. Both coaches, Ohio State's Eldon Miller and Indiana's Bobby Knight, were models of decorum. In their first meeting, they exchanged heated words after Ohio State freshman guard Troy Taylor was charged with a flagrant foul against Indiana's Jimmy Thomas in the closing minutes.

"Kellogg played very well," said Knight. "He put a lot of pressure on us, particularly in the first half. He may be the best forward in the country."

Derek Smith scored 22 points to lead four Louisville players in double figures in the Cardinals' 95-74 victory over Cleveland State; Jim Stack scored 20 points to pace Northwestern to a 67-50 victory over Purdue; Dwight "Jelly" Jones and Bobby Austin sent Cincinnati on a streak early in the final half, propelling the Bearcats to a 76-61 victory over St. Louis, and Roosevelt Chapman scored 25 points to lead Dayton to a 71-61 victory over Duquesne.

Also, Lester Wright hit a key rebound layup late in the game to lead Indiana State over Drake 69-61; Sam Vincent scored a game-high 22 points to lift Michigan State to a 56-47 triumph over Illinois; Virginia Tech's Jeff Schneider scored 22 points to lead the Gobblers to a 77-76 comeback victory over Florida State and Dino Gregory scored seven of his game-high 24 points in overtime, leading Long Beach State to a 79-76 victory over UC-Santa Barbara.

Roanoke Girls Are Eliminated

WELDON — Northampton outscored Roanoke, 22 to 3, in the fourth period to rally from two-point deficit and down the Lady Redskins, 51-34, Thursday night in the first round of the District I 3-A tournament.

Bertie defeated Gumberry, 52-46, in a boys' first-round game last night. The win was the first six games for a Northeastern Conference team in the district tournament.

Bertie will square off against Warren County Monday night (8 p.m.) in the semifinals. The victor will play the winner of tonight's (8 p.m.) Southwest Halifax vs. Washington at 8 p.m. for the championship Wednesday night at 8 o'clock.

In a girls' first-round game tonight, Williamston will battle Weldon at 6:30. The winner will meet Warren County in the other semifinal game Saturday night at 6:30.

Northampton will now play Northwest Halifax at Monday at 6:30 p.m. for the right to advance to Wednesday night's (6:30) championship game.

In last night's first-round game, Roanoke led at the end of the first period, 10-4, and held off Northampton in the second period to take a 23-16 lead at the half.

Northampton closed the gap to two (31-29) at the end of the third period and then totally dominated the final eight minutes, outscoring the Lady Redskins, 22 to 3, to capture the win.

Northampton was led in scoring by Angela Daye, who scored a game-high 24 points. Cathy Grant added 13 points and Delore Mitchell 12 as three players combined to score all but two of Northampton's 51 points.

Roanoke, which ends the season at 20-3, was led in scoring by Sylvia Parker with 15 points. No one else was in double figures for Roanoke.

In District I 1-A tournament action last night, Chocowinity's girls defeated Jamesville, 37-30, while Belhaven's boys scored 31 points in the third quarter to whip Columbia, 81-53.

Chocowinity will meet the winner of tonight's Belhaven vs. Bath victor Tuesday night (7 p.m.) for the district title.

Belhaven, meanwhile, will play the survivor of tonight's Chocowinity vs. Mattamuskeet game Tuesday at 8:30 for the boys' crown.

Five To State Event

WINSTON-SALEM — Five area wrestlers, including two each from D.H. Conley and Williamston will be vieing today and tomorrow for state wrestling championships at Winston-Salem's Parkland High School.

D.H. Conley's Mike Long and Williamston's Brian Purvis both won regional championships last week to qualify for the state championships. Purvis takes an unblemished record into the state meet, having won all of his matches this year.

Long, a 188-pounder, will be joined by teammate Lorenzo Strong, who finished second in the 141-pound class, as the Conley representatives.

Joining Purvis in representing Williamston will be John Corey, who finished third in the 122-pound weight class.

Rounding out the area wrestlers to qualify is Farmville Central's Charles Sutton, who took a third place finish in the regionals.

The top four finishers in each of the 13 weight classes qualified for the state meet from each of the state's regional meets.

O'Neal Leads Rampants To Second In Swimming

DURHAM — Kevin O'Neal won two individual events to lead Rose High School's boys' swimming team to a second place finish in the Eastern Sectional Swimming Meet held at Duke University yesterday.

Rose's girls finished ninth in their division, as teams qualified athletes for next week's state meet to be held at Greensboro Grimsley on Saturday.

Rose finished the meet with 74 points, well behind Raleigh Sanderson which topped the 18 team field with 137. Among the girls' teams, Chapel Hill took first with 137 points, while Rose finished with 13.

The top four finishers in each event qualified for the state meet.

O'Neal, with his two firsts, also shared a first on the winning 400-yard freestyle relay team. He set new sectional and school records with a time of 21.7 in winning the 50-yard freestyle. That time also surpasses the state record, but state marks can only be set in the state meet. O'Neal's other win came in the 100-yard freestyle, where he swam home in 48.6, edging out teammate Andy Cook who was second in 49.2.

O'Neal and Cook joined with Kelly Barnhill and Mark Schmidt to win the 400 freestyle relay in 3:22.7, another new sectional record.

Cook won first place in the 200-yard freestyle in 1:48.9, rounding out the Rose wins.

In other events, the 200-yard medley relay team finished third in 1:46.5. That group consisted of Greg Churchill, Will Monroe, Schmidt and Barnhill. Schmidt also finished seventh in the 100-yard butterfly in 58.1, but that failed to qualify for the state meet. Monroe was second and did qualify in the 100-yard breaststroke in 1:03.3.

Among the girls, the lone state qualifier was Mary Kay Cunningham, who finished fourth in diving with 232.0 points. The 200-yard medley relay team of Carolina Perea, Laura Scharf, Maria Kelly and Danny Radeka finished fifth in 2:14.2, just missing the qualifying place.

Allen Set As Prexy

LOS ANGELES (AP) — George Allen will become president and chief executive officer of the Montreal Alouettes of the Canadian Football League if owner Nelson Skalbania settles the club's $1.2-million debt, according to the Los Angeles Times.

"I think Nelson is arranging to do that (settle the debts)," the Times quoted Harry Ornest, a friend and business associate of Skalbania, as saying.

The Times also reported that quarterback Vince Ferragamo's status with the Alouettes is unclear. Ferragamo played with Montreal last season after leaving the Los Angeles Rams of the National Football League.

"That I can't discuss," the newspaper quoted Edmund Barton, the Los Angeles lawyer who drew up Ferragamo's contract, as saying when asked about the quarterback's contract and future.

The newspaper quoted sources as saying Ferragamo was not under direct contract to the Alouettes, but to Skalbania, for tax purposes.

Lee's Free Throws...

Coach Harvey Reid, gave Lee — substituted for the ejected Smith — two shots for an intentional foul. They then allowed Fike two shots for an ejection technical, plus ball control after that.

Lee, fresh off the bench, knocked in both of his shots, making it 54-51. Danny Williams, however, shooting for Fike, missed both of his — and it was all over.

Vernon Sampson hit a desperation buzzer shot to cut it back to the final point edge — all to no avail.

"This was a great birthday present," Brewington, who celebrated his birthday Thursday, said. "That (ejection) nearly cost us there at the end, but I've got to give a lot of credit to Donnell, coming off the bench cold to hit both shots. That won it for us."

Brewington also had continued praise for center Tim Harris, who led the Rampant scoring with 16 points, and who led the team rebounding.

"Our defense helped us out at the end, too. We were able to get a lot of turnovers against them, and I though we held (William) Powell down quite well. He got 32 points in their win over Kinston and we kept him away this time."

Powell finished with 11.

"It's a tough way to lose, but it's a great way to win," Brewington added, referring to the wild finish.

The game, a nip-and-tuck affair from tipoff to the final horn, saw Fike lead by no more than two at any point, and Rose by no more than six. Fike got the initial lead, but Rose took it at 6-4 on a jumper by Battle midway the first period. Fike regained it on a tap by Williams, but Cherry tied it up off a rebound with 20 seconds left for a 10-10 deadlock at the horn.

Smith canned a shot from the corner at the start of the second period to put Rose back ahead, and the Rampants pushed out to as much as a 23-17 lead late in the period on a three-point play by Harris. But Fike fought back behind Vince Dublin and finally took the lead on one of two free throws by Earnest Moody with no time left, 26-25.

After two early exchanges of the lead in the third period, Harris slammed one through to put Rose back ahead and again, the Rampants built up a six-point lead, 34-28, before Fike again rallied, finally taking the lead on a three-point play by Williams with 57 seconds left.

It could have been more, however. Brewington was charged with a technical foul for protesting too avidly an out-of-bounds call with seven seconds left, but Fike's Sampson missed both shots and Fike also missed on the shot after putting it back in play, leaving it at 39-38.

After two exchanges of the lead as the final period started, Cherry hit his three point play to put Rose up, 45-42, and he and Smith hit at the foul line before Perkins got his basket to make it 52-46 and set up the final frantic ending.

In the statistical end of the game, Fike actually did better. The Golden Demons hit on 48.9 percent of their field goals — actually scoring four more than Rose, which scored on just 41.3 percent. Fike also held a 39-31 rebounding edge, mainly due to a 12-2 edge in the last quarter.

But the big edge came at the foul line, where Fike actually lost the game and Rose won it. The Demons made good on just seven of 20 attempts, while Rose canned 16 of 22 — a nine point swing.

In addition to Harris' 16 points, Rose was led by Cherry with 12 and Perkins with ten. Fike was led by Williams with 13, while Sampson had 10 to go with Powell's 11.

While both Rocky Mount and Rose have now clinched state playoff berths, tonight's game is important in that the winner will have a home court advantage for the first round contest, and the loser must travel.

Rams Edge...

Patriots sliced the deficit in half midway through the fourth quarter. But a follow shot by Ray, a jumper by Thompson and two free throws by Johnson pushed the lead back to 11 with two minutes to go and the Rams appeared headed for an easy win.

The final two minutes were anything but easy, however, as the Rams fought off a late challenge by the Patriots and held on to advance into the district semifinals.

Parsons Claims Carolina Pole

On The Pole
Driver Benny Parsons is all smiles as he sits in his stock car at the North Carolina Motor Speedway near Rockingham Thursday after qualifying at a speed of 141.577 mph to win the pole for Sunday's 16th annual Carolina 500 NASCAR race. (AP Laserphoto)

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (AP) — It's only a 15 minute drive from Benny Parsons' home in Ellerbe to the North Carolina Motor Speedway. But the ride home has seemed a lot longer than that most of the time.

In the 13 years that Parsons has been a regular on the NASCAR Grand National stock car circuit he had, in his own words, "wrecked or done something wrong every time we've been here. Historically, this has not been a good track for me."

But the 40-year-old Parsons, who was born in North Carolina but spent some of his formative years living in Detroit, gave the Ellerbe folks something to be proud of Thursday when he won the pole position for the Warner W. Hodgdon Carolina 500.

"It's about the first good thing I've ever done here," the moon-faced driver said happily. "I suppose you'd say this is my home track, but it's never been very homey for me — until today."

Parsons never before had won a pole position here, and his best finish on the 1.017-mile, high-banked track in 24 starts was second-place in the fall race in 1979.

"For a long time, I drove for L.G.," Parsons said, referring to former car owner and current North Carolina Motor Speedway President L.G. DeWitt. "I expect that had some bearing on our lack of success here.

"There was a great deal of pressure on us — not just L.G. wanting to win real bad because it was his track, but also the crew. Most of them lived around here and they wanted real bad to do well here.

"Then it just became sort of a thing that something would always happen to me here."

But nothing happened Thursday as Parsons, driving a Pontiac LeMans, pushed Joe Ruttman off the pole by a bare .008-seconds.

Ruttman appeared to have nailed his first NASCAR Grand National pole with a fast lap of 25.868 seconds, or 141.533 mph in his Buick Regal. But Parsons, ignoring the wind, cold temperature and a bit of a slickness to the track that kept anyone from approaching Donnie Allison's 1980 qualifying mark of 142.648 mph, roared to a fast lap of 25.860, or 141.577.

"It's been a long time since anything run that good for me at Rockingham," Parsons said.

Only Harry Gant was left among the top contenders at that point, sitting last in the long qualifying line. But Gant's best lap was averaged out at 141.413, putting him on the inside of the second row for Sunday's race and leaving Parsons on top.

That gave Parsons two pole positions in three tries since joining the Harry Ranier Racing Team at the beginning of this seson. He also was on the top perch for the Daytona 500 three weeks ago.

"We could easily have won the race (last Sunday) at Richmond," said Parsons, who wound up second to Dave Marcis when rain shortened the race by 150 laps. "As long as we can keep going like this, with the momentum and all, we're going to do some good things."

Darrell Waltrip, defending champion here and the 1981 NASCAR champion, was the only other driver under 26-seconds elapsed time for a qualifying lap. His 25.909, or 141.309, was good for the spot next to Gant in the second row, with both driving Buicks.

Joe Millikan was the surprise of the day, putting his Pontiac Grand Prix on the inside of the third row at 140.475, followed by Dale Earnhrdt's Ford Thunderbird at 140.082, Jody Ridley's Thunderbird at 139.938 and 1981 Rookie of the Year Ron Bouchard's Buick at 139.863.

Cale Yarborough, last year's polesitter for this race, had a vibration in the front end of his Regal and shut off the car on his first attempt to qualify. But he later went out and put the car in the 11th spot at 139.665.

Daytona 500 winner Bobby Allison had trouble with a broken oil line in the morning practice session, then managed a fast lap of only 138.913 during qualifying. That put his Chevrolet Malibu 14th on Sunday's grid.

Richard Petty, still wearing a hinged cast on his right ankle — which was badly sprained in a crash at Daytona — qualified his Grand Prix 16th at 138.398. His son Kyle took the last of the 20 spots offered Thursday, hitting 138.116 in his Grand Prix.

Donnie Allison, continuing his comeback from a bad wreck in 1981, and Marcis were among those who failed to make the top 20 Thursday. However, 10 more spots were to go up for grabs today, with another six filling out the field Saturday.

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (AP) — The top 20 qualifiers for Sunday's Warner W. Hodgdon Carolina 500, with type of car and qualifying speed in mph:

1. Benny Parsons, Pontiac LeMans, 141.577.

18. Lake Speed, Buick Regal, 138.231.
19. D.K. Ulrich, Buick Regal, 138.146.
20. Kyle Petty, Pontiac Grand Prix, 138.116.

The last 10 spots in the 40-car field will be filled in time trials scheduled Friday.

Hampton Stops CIAA South From Shutout

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The 37th Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association basketball tournament came within two seconds of its first-ever first-round sweep by one division.

But a follow shot by Gerald Moore with two seconds left gave Hampton Institute's Pirates a 70-69 squeeze past Winston-Salem's Rams in the final game Friday night and saved the Northern Division from a shutout.

At that, however, the opening round produced only one genuine upet — a 97-82 romp by St. Augustine's Falcons, who had to win a playoff to get the Southern Division's final berth, over Virginia State's Northern Division champion Trojans, ranked No. 14 nationally in Division II.

Johnson C. Smith's Southern Division champion Golden Bulls whipped Norfolk State's Spartans 81-62 and Fayetteville State's Broncos, the Southern Division's No. 2 team, posted a 71-62 victory over Virginia Union's Panthers, at one time the top-ranked Division II team in the country.

Tonight's semifinals send St. Augustine's, 14-14, against Faytteville State, 20-6, at 7 o'clock and Johnson C. Smith, 21-6, against Hampton Institute, 19-7, at 9.

The winners play for the championship at 8 p.m. Saturday following a game between Virginia State and Norfolk State for the women's title.

"I have to give credit where credit is due. St. Aug's played very well — they outhustled us and outrebounded us (54-43). They wanted it more badly than we did," said Virginia State Coach Floyd Laisure.

The Falcons ran up a 51-41 halftime lead, and the Trojans, 18-8, never got closer than eight points in the last 20 minutes.

Donald Carroll had 25 points and 12 rebounds, Marvin Cook 21 points and Anthony Rogers 14 points and 10 rebounds for the Falcons, who shot 54 percent from the floor to just 33 percent for Virginia State.

Julius Norman had 23 points and Darrell Stith 22 for the Trojans.

"We've been playing pretty well lately. We like to run just like Virginia State does, so I told the kids it would be just like playing ourselves. We may have surprised some people," said Falcon Coach Harvey Heartley.

Johnson C. Smith trailed 4-2 against Norfolk State, 14-12, which also had to win a playoff to get into the tourney, then ran off eight straight points to take command. It was 36-24 at intermission, and the Golden Bulls shot better than 60 percent from the floor in the second half.

Bleu Oliver had 23 points and William Tibbs 15 for Johnson C. Smith. The Spartans were led by freshman Mike Manley with 24 and David Pope with 16.

Fayetteville State had won a regular season meeting with Virginia Union, 19-8, and the Broncos held off the Panthers at the foul line after going in front 38-37 with 15:04 left on a 20-footer by Richard Robertson.

The Broncos hit 25 of 30 free throw tries as the Panthers, only six of 12 at the line, had to foul in an effort to get the ball.

Bonny McNeil, who hit 10 straight foul shots, had 26 points and Robertson 20 for Fayetteville State. The Panthers, No. 19 in the latest Division II poll, were led by Herman Ford with 12 points and Curtis Powell with 11.

"We played their game in the first half," said Bronco Coach Jake Ford. "Once we got the lead, we changed the tempo and made them play our game. We told McNeil and (Doug) Singleton (seven of eight from the line) to control the ball 95 percent of the time. That way, they had to foul our two best foul shooters."

Although Moore hit the game winning shot, it was Tony Washington who rallied Hampton from a 48-39 deficit with 16:07 left. He scored the Pirates' next 14 points, and Hampton finally caught up at 60 with 7:11 remaining.

But the Pirates never went in front until Moore followed up a missed 12-footer by Zack Owens at the end.

Greg Hines had 24 points and 11 rebounds and Washington had 22 points, 15 in the second half, for the Pirates. Therman Grene fired in a game-high 30 points for the Rams, 15-11.

Stadler, On This Week, Grabs Lead At Doral

MIAMI (AP) — Craig Stadler sees a pattern in his play this year.

"Every other week I've scored well. And," he added with a smile peeking from beneath his bushy moustache, "this is one of those weeks."

Stadler, who has established himself over the last two seasons as one of golf's more proficient performers, had just completed a 6-under-par 66 that gave him a one-shot lead over Jack Nicklaus, Bobby Wadkins and longshot Eric Batten in Thursday's first round of the $300,000 Doral-Eastern Open.

The record supports his view of the pattern. On alternate weeks he's finished first (at Tucson), 13th and second (in the Crosby). On the off weeks, he's missed the cut, finished 31st and 21st.

"I've played well all year," said the man called "The Walrus" by his fellow tourists. "It's just that sometimes I haven't scored as well as other times."

Stadler, winner of more than $200,000 in both the 1980 and 1981 seasons, is off to his best start ever.

"I'm off to a very good start," said Stadler, who has won more than $97,000 already this year. "I'm more consistent than I've ever been. And I see no reason why it shouldn't continue."

There is, however, at least one major problem Stadler must contend with as he seeks to become the first two-time winner of the season.

That's Nicklaus.

Obviously playing well — Nicklaus hasn't finished lower than third this season — the holder of a record 17 major professional titles missed only one green on his way to a 5-under-par effort that left him a single shot back.

His driving, however, left something to be desired, Nicklaus said. "My game, in general, is pretty good. But I'm not driving as well as I expected to," he said.

He went into the deep rough on the 7,065-yard Blue Monster course at the Doral Country Club on five occasions and, on the 18th, he mis-hit his tee shot and failed to carry the water, setting up a double bogey 6 that deprived him of sole control of the lead.

"I enjoy playing here," Nicklaus said. "Through the years, I've played pretty well here."

Two strokes off the pace at 68 were Andy Bean, Jim Booros, Cal Peete, Mike Nicolette, club pro Steve Benson and two members of the European Ryder Cup team, Nick Faldo and Mark James.

Ray Floyd, who has won this title the last two years, could do no better than a 71. Lee Trevino, who has not made a cut this season, had a 75 the left him well back in the pack and in danger of failing to qualify for the final two rounds.

Trio Tied In Tourney

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Janet Coles battled her nerves, Lynn Stroney was leery of the greens and Ayako Okamoto was confused with the whole course.

But all three pro women golfers somehow managed for fire identical 2-under-par rounds of 70 Thursday to share the first-round lead in the $125,000 LPGA Arizona Copper Classic.

"I was quite nervous at the first tee," said Coles, a Carmel, Calif., native who was making her first start of the year. "I didn't settle down until about the 10th hole."

"You can hit it to the pin in Florida," said Storney of Gerard, Ohio. "Here, you have to lay it up quite a bit. My caddy helped me know which greens to go for."

Okamoto, a Tokyo resident, said it took her a while to get accustomed to the par-72, 6,206-yard Randolph North municipal course.

Beth Daniel, winner of last week's LPGA event at Sarasota, Fla., also overcame an erratic start and birdied three of the last four holes to finish at 71 — one stroke off the pace.

Daniel was joined by Amy Alcott, tour rookie Patti Rizzo, Barbara Moxness and amateur Nancy Tomich — a junior at the University of Arizona — plus Japanese golfers Tatsuko Ohsako and Yuko Moriguchi.

Leading money winner Hollis Stacy was tied with seven other golfers at even par, two strokes off the lead.

Sally Crackles For 30 Minutes

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — For 30 minutes Sunday, the longtime CBS comedy crackles with the bite and substance of an old favorite, "All in the Family." But, alas, the next 30 minutes demonstrate the artificiality of "Archie Bunker's Place" since Mike and Gloria left home.

The occasion for Sunday's episode is the return of Archie's daughter, Gloria (Sally Struthers), to the house in Queens, where she and the series flourished from 1971-78. Since Gloria and her husband (Rob Reiner) left, the major focus of the show has shifted from the homestead to Archie's saloon.

A new cast of characters allowed Archie to continue serving up ignorance and benign prejudice with his beer, and it's been one of the top 10 shows for much of this season. But that's habit viewing. The stories and humor, although still better than most sitcoms, have deteriorated. The thrill is gone.

On Sunday, Gloria and her son, Joey, return from California because the Stivics have separated. Archie (Carroll O'Connor), curious and concerned, tries to pry information loose, but Gloria isn't talking. Archie suggests Mike has found another woman or, perhaps, a man.

Then he works on Joey and finds out that Mike has left for a commune. That lets Archie rail at his favorite foil and allows for a sensitive moment with Gloria. And through Joey, some of the old give-and-take returns: "My dad says you would never have read anything if they didn't invent the toilet."

But the show bogs down when Gloria visits the bar and it really peters out when Gloria visits a veterinarian for Joey's sick turtle. The doctor, a crusty codger, is played by Burgess Meredith, and Gloria decides to take a job with him and move to the country.

If that sounds like a pilot for a new series, it might be. CBS has been trying to find a vehicle for Miss Struthers for some time, but let's hope the network finds something a little stronger. It's bad enough that "Archie Bunker's Place" has hit a bad bump in the road, but a spinoff of a weakening show just compounds the damage.

"Rascals and Robbers — The Secret Adventures of Tom Sawyer and Huck Finn" Saturday night is worse than a spinoff. It's a ripoff, and a miserable one at that.

Mark Twain's characters had humor and colorful boyishness, but CBS' movie is so bland and unimaginative that Tom and Huck could have been Tom and Jerry, and this could have been a Saturday morning throwaway.

Enthusiastic escapades and youthful dreams are all woefully lost here. "Rascals and Robbers" was filmed in Natchez, Miss., and Childersburg, Ala., but the settings never capture the broad panorama or excitement of Twain's Mississippi River.

"Rascals and Robbers" is supposed to be the continued capers of Tom and Huck. The boys overhear two swindlers scheming to bilk their home town of St. Petersburg, Mo. of $15,000. One of the villains, a fellow who masquerades as a bat and spreads his wings whenever he needs to be menacing, discovers the boys and chases them throughout the film.

The pursuit goes from one silly scene to another. The boys get involved in a crooked poker game, join a two-bit circus act and concoct a scheme to help a black man gain his sister's freedom.

Patrick Creadon, as Tom, and Anthony Michael Hall, as Huck, look sufficiently wide-eyed on their own, but "Rascals and Robbers" is so boring that it gives running away from home a bad name.

Apologizes For Miscue

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The National Academy of Recording Arts & Sciences has apologized for a miscue that kept the co-producer of the John Lennon-Yoko Ono "Double Fantasy" album from going on stage to accept a Grammy award and share his thoughts on the slain ex-Beatle.

"There was a technical problem," the co-producer, Jack Douglas, said Thursday, explaining a mistake in music cues apparently caused the orchestra to start playing again as Miss Ono left the stage with her 6-year-old son Sean.

"I never got to make the statement that I thought was kind of important to make," Douglas said. "I spent the last four months of John's life with him, and there were a few things I thought people should understand about John and about the record.

"John would have been thrilled with receiving a Grammy. He was proud of every gold record he acquired. He never took anything for granted."

"Double Fantasy," performed and co-produced by Miss Ono and Lennon, headed a diverse awards list at Wednesday night's ceremony.

Douglas said he was called by Ken Erlich, the producer of the show, who apologized for the mistake, calling it "purely accidental."

Delivering Protest Over Salvador Role

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A group opposed to U.S. involvement in El Salvador will deliver letters of protest Saturday to officials at Fort Bragg, where over 1,000 Salvadoran soldiers are receiving training.

The Army has issued permission to the group to use an area at Fort Bragg for a rally and speeches, but the group's plans for a motorcade through Fayetteville are in doubt.

A leader of the Feb. 27 Fort Bragg Coalition said he received a letter from post officials allowing the protesters to use a park behind the Officers Club Annex off Bragg Boulevard.

The Rev. Henry Atkins, a Greensboro minister and an organizer of the protest, said the group will read four letters and give them to a representative of Lt. Gen. Jack Mackmull, post commander.

Speeches and the rally will begin at 10 a.m. at Pope Park. The demonstrators will then drive to Fort Bragg for the letter readings set to start at about 2 p.m., Atkins said.

Organizers of the coalition, a group of various state organizations opposed to U.S. policy in Central America, wanted a motorcade to the post, but were told by Fayetteville officials that would require a permit and insurance.

Anne Welsh, another protest organizer, said an insurance expert told her the liability coverage required by the city for a motorcade would cost about $1,000 and said the group cannot afford the money.

UGANDA ROUNDUP

NAIROBI, Uganda (AP) — A guerrilla rocket attack on a military barracks in Kampala this week prompted a roundup by Ugandan soldiers in which 200 people were arrested, local residents and opposition sources said.

FLOATING HASHISH

RHODES, Greece (AP) — An inner tube containing 105 pounds of hashish washed ashore on the coast of the resort island of Rhodes, police said Thursday.

Another Syndicated Show To Bite Dust

LOS ANGELES (AP) — All those early afternoon news programs on local television are putting the squeeze on afternoon syndicated variety shows, and "The John Davidson Show" is being squeezed out altogether, says Group W Productions President Edwin Vane.

Vane said Thursday that marketing conditions have undergone a "dramatic change" and Group W Productions won't be renewing the Davidson show at the end of the current season.

The Davidson show is the second major syndicated show to fold this year. "The Mike Douglas Entertainment Hour" ceased production recently after its ratings became too small to be measured.

Vane said the Davidson show would leave the air Aug. 27.

"The decision is based primarily on a dramatic change in marketing conditions," Vane said in a telegram to stations carrying the show.

He said a trend of TV stations to expand news and information programs into the afternoon slots, "coupled with increased production costs, has made it economically impossible to continue."

Major survivors still in the field are Merv Griffin and Phil Donahue. Griffin is believed in a strong position because he is telecast in prime time in some markets, particularly New York and Los Angeles. Donahue's program, "Donahue," has created a large following.

Singer Has Art Lauded

LONDON (AP) — His bowls may be wonky, but singer Tony Bennett is winning praise for his oil paintings, and having recorded 89 albums and nearly 1,000 songs, his ambition is to paint full time.

Bennett, here for a 10-city British concert tour, revealed his second talent Thursday under his real name, Anthony Benedetto.

"He's obviously been influenced by Matisse and has a feeling for paint and color," said the Blackman Harvey Gallery's artistic adviser, Marjorie Allthorpe-Guyton, who decided that Benedetto deserved a showing here.

"After his career as a singer, he may well find a second career in painting," she said.

The gallery is showing 10 Benedettos — still lifes and London scenes in broad brush strokes — priced from $3,020 to $5,033.

"I've been painting my whole life and for the last seven years people have been nice enough to buy my paintings," said Bennett, who told The Associated Press that painting full time is his ambition. "It brings me great joy."

But gallery director Derek Wootton-Woolley confided to a reporter that "he's not very good at drawing and his bowls are wonky (twisted)."

DA VINCI SHOW

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Science and art will converge in an exhibition featuring works by Leonardo da Vinci at the University of Michigan Museum of Art May 8-June 13.

The show will combine paintings by the Italian Renaissance master with reproductions of his technical drawings.

Another Plea By Oral Roberts

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Financial troubles are facing the Oral Roberts Ministries, and the evangelist has announced a fund-raising drive for $120 million a year.

At a news conference Thursday, the Tulsa evangelist cited "another financial crisis" resulting from a decline in contributions after his City of Faith Hospital opened in November.

The ministries are "not broke, but at the rate we're going it might not be that far away," Roberts said.

The drive will include letters next week to his "partners," a television program March 7 when he will "lay it on the line" and a suggestion that Tulsans contribute 10 percent — or $12 million — during the next year.

Roberts' ministeries includes operation of Oral Roberts University, City of Faith and the Oral Roberts Evangelistic Association.

Alex Haley Recalls The Roots Of Best-Seller Fame

By BILL OUTLAW
Associated Press Writer

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Alex Haley traces his roots as a writer back to the days when he ued to listen to his grandmother and great-aunts tell stories on the porch of his Tennessee home.

Haley, who likes to tell stories himself, says he never thought about writing as a profession until years later when his buddies in the Coast Guard began paying him for writing love letters to their sweethearts.

Speaking as part of black history month at the University of North Carolina, Haley recalled how he came to write his best selling book "Roots," for which he won the Pulitzer Prize.

The mild-mannered Haley also credits those days of listening to his grandmother and great-aunts' stories, many dealing with their exploits in Alamance County, for giving him a sense of history that would lead him to track his genealogy and put it in book form.

He said his grandmother and great-aunts would sit on the porch, get their rocking chairs going in rhythym, and tell stories about Haley's great-grandfather, Chicken George, and Chicken George's grandfather, Kunta Kinte, who was brought over from Africa.

They would tell their stories, Haley recalled, in between chewing tobacco and spitting at lightning bugs.

"Aunt Liz could drop a lightning bug at six yards," Haley said.

Another important element in Haley's early development was the family tree — literally a tree with notches carved in it marking important dates in the family's history.

The notches marked dates such as Kinte's arrival in the United States and Chicken George's birthday. Haley said he felt extremely important when a notch was put in the tree marking his birthday.

Haley also recalls watching as his grandmother would take hours to put together a letter and send it to relatives and friends, a routine she went about on a daily basis.

"It seemed to be magic that you could put something on the paper, drop it in the hole (for the mailbox) and get a response to it," he said.

But it would be years before Haley combine the story telling and the writing. And then, it was when he would write love letters for his sailor friends for $1 a letter.

"I never thought about writing (as a profession) until I realized I was making more in writing (the love letters) than I was as a sailor," he said.

Haley retired from the Coast Guard after 20 years and began turning his thoughts to full-time writing. Among his early efforts was a story on jazz trumpeter Miles Davis, which resulted in the now-famous question and answer interview technique with an overview-like introduction that is used in Playboy magazine interviews.

But, as Haley tells it, in order to get the interview with Davis (who was known as a tough person to get to talk), Haley had to go to the same gym as Davis for six months, and then had to fight him in the ring.

"He didn't hurt me, but he peppered me pretty good," Haley said.

It was during the writing of the article that he discovered he didn't have enough quotes and information on Davis to do the necessary 3,000 words.

So, he began with an introduction describing what it was like going to the different jazz clubs with Davis, and padded the story by putting questions in front of the answers given by Davis.

The results were well-received, and Haley became the chief interviewer for the magazine.

Then came a book on Malcolm X, which was published shortly after the civil rights activist was assassinated.

Later, Haley began recalling his grandmother's stories about Chicken George and the family tree.

"I got my first bite of the geneology bug for which everyone infected by it can tell you, there is no cure," he said.

And the rest, as they say, is history.

Loveboat Skipper Also Deep Into Metaphysics

By KENNETH R. CLARK
UPI TV Reporter

NEW YORK (UPI) — Gavin MacLeod is the man who makes "The Love Boat" run, but metaphysics and "religious science" are the things that make Gavin MacLeod run and if the energy he exudes is any criterion, they constitute a fuel bordering on nuclear.

"I considered myself a victim for 40 years," he said during a brief break between the taping of "Night of 100 Stars," which ABC will air March 8, and promotion of the two-hour "Love Boat Musical Special," which ABC also will air Feb. 27 from 9-11 p.m., EST.

"I was a victim of my thinking — a victim of nonthinking," he said. "I didn't think we had anything to say about our lives. I always wanted to be an actor and I was always busy, but I found I gave more time to the characters I played than to myself.

"It wasn't until I was 40 that I said to myself, 'something's wrong — I'm really not happy.'"

That revelation, 10 years ago, led MacLeod into a study of metaphysics that became the hinge on which his whole life was to turn. In the course of the turning, he gained the biggest showcase of his career, discovered a new horizon in spirituality and lost a wife of 26 years.

It also transformed him into the generator of a positivity so strong light bulbs almost go incandescent in his presence.

"Religious science is a derivative of Christian Science," he said. "The mind — the energies you put out, the things you say you want and the things you want to become — you create. At first I thought it was kind of a daffy situation until I started doing it, and then I realized it works.

"I've never been more in tune with God and myself ... I have peace and from peace comes confidence. I know who I am and I'm really happy for the first time in my life.

"Right now I'm 50, chronologically, but I feel like a baby ... I'm in the business of youthing, not aging. I'm getting younger!"

The surge of soul growth transformed MacLeod, but he said it left a marriage, already strained by the demands of his career, doomed to divorce.

"Life seems to be a series of relationships and I think either we grow for them or we retreat back," he said. "For me, getting rid of the mass consciousness world and getting into my world has been the biggest factor.

"Everybody on the periphery of my world can fly with me ... but you have to fly together. One can't go first class and one tourist and I want to have a first class life.

"Merv Griffin said to me, 'how do you like living alone?' And I said, 'I'm not alone, I'm with God.'"

MacLeod also is "with" more of his public than he ever was in the days when he wore the sarcastic personna of Murray Slaughter on the old "Mary Tyler Moore Show."

He devotes every spare moment now to spreading, via talk show and lecture circuit, the gospel of higher consciousness and positivity. He plugs holistic medicine, he participates in Sunday services whenever he can with metaphysicist minister Terry Cole Whitacker and he's writing a book titled, "Take Command of Your Life."

He's also off and running with a new two-year contract as the skipper of ABC's Nielsen champion "Love Boat," and he has just buttoned up his first full-scale musical in the cruise liner format.

The show pulls almost as much current from the MacLeod generator as does his new metaphysical world view.

"There's this one number," he said, rubbing his hands in unconstrained glee. "Four great ladies doing 'I'm the Greatest Star' — Carol Channing, Ethel Merman, Ann Miller and Della Reese.

"So I'm sittng there and the number's over, and I'm thinking, 'you'll never see anything like that again!' The four ladies all came out equally like a stick of dynamite! It was like fireworks to watch those ladies work!"

Even "The Love Boat," in its general format, seems to reflect the MacLeod philosophy, which he said is a factor in its perennial popularity.

"In each one of our shows we try to show one person changing on that cruise — finding out something about themselves they didn't know before," he said. "I met a lady one day who said, 'I just love your show. The message is still there but you coat it with all the candy.'"

Cynics might sneer that the new Gavin MacLeod is candy coated, too, with all that talk of optimism, positivity and the ability to gain what he wants in life simply by "imaging" it, but he's been on the cynics' shore and he didn't care much for the scenery.

"I was really in the depths at one time," he said. "I was full of self-indulgence and self-punitive actions from lack of self esteem ... It was 'Yes, God, and No, God,' and guilt.

"I was guilty for being alive! No wonder being in theater became important to me. No wonder playing somebody else was more important than getting in touch with myself. It's conditioning!

"It's been a wonderful, wonderful growth into happiness."

Court Delays Hinckley Trial

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — An appeals court has delayed indefinitely the trial of John W. Hinckley Jr., the man accused of shooting President Reagan, so prosecutors can have more time to decide whether to challenge a pretrial ruling.

The three-judge panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals made its decision only six hours after a lower court judge set a March 9 trial date.

Hinckley, accused of shooting Reagan and three others outside a Washington hotel last March 30, has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity. That defense, if successful, could result in him being placed in a mental institution.

Prosecutors asked for the trial postponement, saying the March 9 date could have prevented them from seeking review of the ruling suppressing key government evidence.

Under court rules, the government has 45 days to ask the full 11-member appellate court to review a decision by one of its three-judge panels.

The same panel that postponed the trial ruled last Tuesday that the government could not use a 25-minute oral statement Hinckley gave on the day of the shooting, or handwritten notes taken from his cell in the federal prison at Butner, N.C. last July.

The panel said both pieces of evidence were obtained in violation of Hinckley's constitutional rights.

Hinckley had appeared in U.S. District Court Thursday morning when Judge Barrington D. Parker originally set the March 9 trial date. He appeared relaxed with his hands in his suit pockets.

Hinckley is charged in a 13-count indictment that accuses him of attempting to kill the president; assault on a federal officer; using a firearm during commission of a federal offense; assault with intent to kill while armed; assault with a dangerous weapon; assault on a police officer and carrying a pistol without a license.

Five counts in the indictment carry maximum terms of life imprisonment.

Psychiatric Tests First

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A 32-year-old Air Force staff sergeant will undergo psychiatric tests to determine whether he is competent to stand trial on charges stemming from the alleged kidnapping and sexual assault of an 8-year-old girl.

Military authorities said Staff Sgt. Juan Canalda, of Corona, N.Y., was charged Thursday with kidnapping and holding for sexual gratification, sodomy and taking indecent liberties.

The kidnapping charge carries a maximum sentence of imprisonment for life, and the sodomy and indecent liberties charges carry maximum sentences of 20 and 7 years respectively.

Canalda will undergo psychiatric tests at Fort Bragg's Womack Army Hospital and have a sanity hearing before any court martial, said Maj. Harmon Massey, Pope Air Force Base staff judge advocate.

Pope officials have declined to identify the alleged victim, the daughter of an enlisted airman at the base, but said she was not raped during her two-hour captivity last Friday.

Canalda allegedly kidnapped the girl at knifepoint at the Pope Elementary School about 3 p.m. Friday and held her until he was captured on the base at a roadblock set up by security police, said Lt. Brian Hoey, a Pope spokesman.

Quarterly Meeting

Quarterly meeting will be observed at Elm Grove Free Will Baptist Church this weekend.

Friday night board meeting will be held; Saturday night, Holy Communion. Sunday at 11 a.m. the Rev. Elmer Jackson and the Adult Choir will lead a service. Dinner will be served at 2 p.m. in the fellowship hall. At 3 p.m. the Rev. Nathaniel Darden and the Live Oak choir, ushers and congregation will render a service. The public is invited, the congregation says.

Making Tracks

On this date in 1827 the first commercial railway for passengers and freight was incorporated. Its goal was to connect Baltimore to the Ohio River — and thus the B&O Railroad got its name. Its first service of 14 miles cost a quarter. By 1900, railroads in the U.S. had laid 186,000 miles of track and built five transcontinental routes. Although freight traffic has remained fairly constant recently, passenger traffic has dropped tremendously since a World War II peak of 95 billion annual passenger miles. But passenger service may soon be revitalized with new "bullet trains" cruising at over 150 miles an hour — a stark contrast to the first B&O trains which were propelled by sails and horses.

DO YOU KNOW — What was the first transcontinental railroad in the U.S.?

Opening lead: Four of ♠.

Declarer's line of play at his three no trump contract was well chosen. But he was foiled at the last minute by a brilliant discard.

The auction was routine. With a balanced 10 points and no major suit, North knew where he wanted to play the hand, whether his partner held a maximum or minimum no trump opening.

West led his fourth-best spade, East won the queen as declarer held up, and continued with the ten. Declarer ducked again, West overtook and persisted with spades. Declarer held off until the fourth round of the suit and East had to find two discards. He chose to let go of a card in each red suit. Dummy parted with two diamonds.

Declarer cashed the king-ace of clubs, noting the fall of West's jack. Next came three rounds of hearts, ending on the board, and East had to find another discard. Since he could not afford to let go of a club, it would seem that East had to sluff a low diamond. But East looked deeper into the position.

It seemed certain that West's distribution was 5-4-2-2. If declarer had started with the king-queen of diamonds, the contract could not be defeated. East also worked out that his ace of diamonds was a distinct liability.

If East sluffed a low diamond, declarer would lead a diamond from dummy. Whether East rose with the ace or not, the contract would be safe. If he ducked, declarer's king would win and a diamond return would end play East forcing a club lead into dummy's Q-9 tenace. But rising with the ace and getting off play with a diamond was no better, for that would give declarer two diamond tricks whether or not he held the queen. So East decided to rid himself of his liability by discarding the diamond ace on the third heart!

That set up the king in declarer's hand, but that was only his eighth trick. No matter how declarer tried, he could not prevent the defense from coming to two more tricks before he had nine.

Answer to yesterday's puzzle.

CRYPTOQUIP 2-26

B A V W D H R C Y I R C Y I R B G W Q J C V G J H A A Y Q D B W H W H H R D H J Y D

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — HOPE ADDS LIFT TO HUMDRUM ROUTINE OF SPARTAN'S LIFE.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: A equals H

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, FEB. 27, 1982

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day to take no chances, but make a special point to coordinate your efforts with others so you can handle duties requiring your undivided attention. You can accomplish much now.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Try to avoid arguments with allies today or it could turn into something serious. Make sure to keep your promises.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Keep busy attending to chores without relying so much on others. Do something thoughtful for a special friend.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Be content with simple pleasures that don't cost much money. Follow your intuition which is accurate at this time.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Try to be more considerate at home and establish more harmony. The evening can be a most exciting time.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Make sure you listen to ideas of associates and try to cooperate more with them. Speak more clearly and concisely.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) If you are too extravagant now, you could jeopardize your present comfortable position. Improve your health.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Take a deep look into yourself and make plans for improvement, healthwise and careerwise. Express a talent you have.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Not a good day for investigating so get busy attending to necessary duties. Lend a helping hand to a good friend.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Keep away from an individual who never fails to either bring trouble or be in trouble. Make plans for the future.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Listen to what good friends have to say and follow their ideas to the letter for best results. Show more affection for loved one.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Spend some time looking into the facts and costs of new project before getting yourself involved. Use common sense.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Your hunches are not working as accurately now as usual, so don't follow them. Use your finest judgment instead.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be eager to get along well with others, but if too many favors are extended, it could lead to trouble. There is much talent in this chart, so sent to the finest schools. Give ethical training early in life.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Identity Of Dead Boy In Box Is Pursued 25 Years

By LEE LINDER
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) – For 25 years Remington Bristow has tried to identify "The Boy in the Box," an unknown child whose life and death have become his obsession.

One of his most important clues is a plaster mold of the little boy's face, made in death on a cold slab in the Philadelphia coronor's office where the 61-year-old Bristow once worked as an investigator.

"If you ever looked at the mask, or held it in your hand, you wouldn't give up the search either," Bristow told a reporter several days before the 25th anniversary of the discovery of the child's body.

"The feeling comes over you of the little boy crying out, wanting to be known, and you'd do anything in the world to answer the question, who is he?" he said.

Bristow, now retired and slowed down by illness, is still looking "for a lucky break," and he's gone all over the country to follow every clue.

"On my vacation, my wife and I would go to migratory workers camps searching and searching, and hoping," he said. "We went to Florida, into Oklahoma, Arizona, New Mexico, California, Oregan, and even into Mexico. We figured the parents were poor, transients.

"Everywhere we asked questions, showing the pictures, hoping to get some information, and it always was negative. In Mexico we even had an artist draw pictures of boy with different types of hairstyles."

He even offered a reward of $1,000, but never got any takers.

The search has cost him thousands of dollars.

"What's important," he said, "is to find enough time to devote to it. I don't think there's a day that goes by that I don't think about who the boy is.

"Last year I thought I had it made, but found the kid alive and well," he said. "That was a child that wasn't dead. He was now a young man who as a 4-year-old looked just like my 'boy in the box.'"

The box, hidden in bushes and prepared for burial, was found on Feb. 25, 1957. The carton was designed for a baby's bassinet.

Inside was the body of a little boy. Maybe 4 or 5. Perhaps even 6.

He was blond, with blue eyes. The body, wrapped only in a scrap of a cheap cotton flannel blanket, had been washed. The hair was crudely cut, and the nails carefully trimmed.

The boy had suffered head injuries, perhaps from a beating, maybe from an accident. Bristow believes the boy's parents "were going to bury him when they were frightened away."

After a police search and fruitless efforts by the medical examiner's office to identify the child, Morgue Case No. 29109 was buried in Grave 191 in a city cemetery. He wore a suit that belonged to a policeman's son.

A headstone, erected with money donated by Bristow and detectives, reads "Heavenly Father, bless this unknown boy."

Two or three times a month Bristow visits the grave, although those visits have become less frequent because of a recent stroke.

Bristow's wife, Jean, backs him 100 percent in what she calls his "obsession."

"Whenever someone calls about the boy he follows it up regardless of how slim the lead is," she said. "Nobody in the family would dare tell him to stop. They know how he feels about it."

Bristow, a native of Portland, Ore., came to Philadelphia in 1956 from California where he was an undertaker and deputy coroner. He retired in 1977, but still gets tips from the medical examiner's office.

"Nothing is hopeless," he said. "To finally find the parents, and talk to them, and close the case, would be a great way to end a career."

There are three filing cabinets full of reports, and Bristow's desk is covered with paraphernalia linked to the case.

Bristow feels he knows the boy better than his father and mother, or any sisters or brothers, "because I've had him for 25 years."

"He was little and undernourished, from a poor family, who somehow sustains injuries and dies," Bristow said. "A police poster is put out asking for information on a possible homicide and the parents see this, get scared and take off.

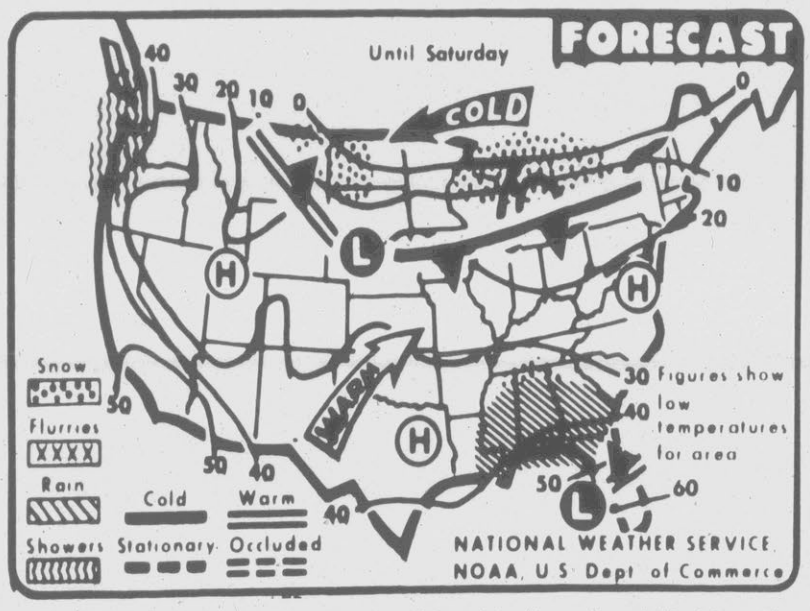

"They had bathed him, and cleaned him and they were going to bury him. It is not a homicide. They would have put him in a sack and thrown him away. There had to be a great deal of love to prepare him for burial.

"That's why I think that someday someone is going to come forward and say, 'That is my child.'"

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Cold weather is expected in the forecast period, Friday until Saturday morning, from the northern Plains to the Northeast. Warm, mostly sunny weather is forecast for the southern half of the nation. Snow is forecast for the Great Lakes. Rain is expected in the Southeast. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

Below-normal temperatures and precipitation highlight a dreary weekend forecast for much of North Carolina, says the National Weather Service.

A massive area of cold high pressure covers the mid-Atlantic states into the Ohio Valley and the southern plains. A cold front from the Atlantic through northern Florida extends into southern Texas.

Weak areas or ripples of low pressure have been moving along the frontal zone over the past 24 hours causing rainfall over the Gulf states. This area of precipitation contines to spread east but some of it has worked north into the Mississippi Valley this morning.

This has given the mountains of North Carolina a threat of some sleet or snow by late today and tonight and a chance of rain east of the mountains by Saturday.

Temperatures Thursday afernoon were noticeably colder than those record highs of Wednesday. In most cases the maximum for the 24 hour period occurred during the early morning hours.

By afternoon the 40s were evident over the northern counties with upper 40s to low 50s for the southern areas. Mountains were in the wider range from the upper 20s to the low 30s.

A variably cloudy sky early this morning kept temperatures from dropping to their potential levels, thus early this morning minimums were still in the 20s and 30s east of the mountains.

The recreational weather outlook for North Carolina continues rather cold and cloudy with some scattered sleet and snow possible over the mountains by later today into Saturday. Clouds will thicken statewide today with temperatures in the 30s over the mountains and from the upper 30s to the mid-40s elsewhere.

By tonight cloudy skies will extend into Saturday with a chance of sleet and snow mixed with rain over the mountains and a chance of rain east into the Piedmont to the coast by Saturday. Low tonight will dip near 30 over the mountains and northern counties while elsewhere the 30s will be the rule. High on Saturday will be in the 30s over the mountains and the 40s elsewhere.

Win Contest In Coloring

The winners of the National Children's Dental Health Week Coloring Contest, sponsored by McDonald's of Greenville, East Central Dental Society and the Pitt County Health Department, are as follows:

Grand prize winner — Eastern Elementary School's Jennifer Baines; first place winners — Elmhurst School's Joel Fickling, Eastern Elementary School's Deanna Barrett, and Third Street School's Yolanda Savage.

Dr. Jaspar Lewis and Mrs. Jamie Keeter presented each winner with a trophy and a ribbon.

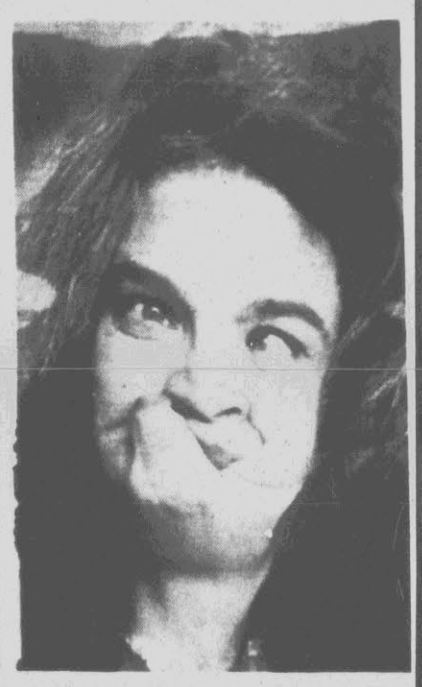

Day On The Mall For Girl Scouts

The Greenville Neighborhood Girl Scouts will have their annual Day on the Mall on Saturday at Carolina East Mall in Greenville from 1-3 p.m.

Approximately 175 girls will display their work in basket-making, first aid methods, finger print art, work on the computer badge and a Chinese dragon, as well as various other activities.

Ms. Linda Smith is chairman for the 1982 Day on the Mall. For more details, call Sandra Shanley at 756-0842.

VILE VISAGE — Geneva Winters of Carpenterville, Ill., displays the facial contortions that won her first prize in the National Enquirer's "Ugly Mug" contest. For the dubious honor, the 37-year-old Winters won $500 and a trip to Las Vegas. (AP Laserphoto)
