Pres. Reagan Returning To Budget Confrontation

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, after criticizing the deficit-cutting alternatives offered by senators in his own party, will meet with them this week amid growing indications he may be willing to compromise.

"He is not negotiating; I don't expect him to be at this point," the Senate Budget Committee chairman, Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., said Sunday. "But he knows what we're doing."

Reagan is scheduled to go to Capitol Hill on Tuesday to have lunch with the 53 GOP senators concerned that predictions of rising annual deficits in future years will choke off any economic recovery.

The administration concedes that its forecast of a $91.5 billion deficit in fiscal 1983 under the president's budget was about $5 billion too low. The Congressional Budget Office predicts the deficit will be well over $100 billion.

White House budget director David Stockman notified key congressional committees Friday that bumper crops will push the cost of farm price supports next year to $6.7 billion dollars. The administration last month had estimated that fiscal 1983 farm supports would cost only $1.8 billion.

Domenici, interviewed on NBC's "Meet the Press" program, said he believes Reagan is willing to negotiate slight increases in taxes and a small reduction in his defense budget if Congress does not try to raise the administration's domestic spending proposals.

"The most important thing for a bipartisan group in the Senate to do is forget about taxes for awhile and put down what we collectively say we will do in budget restraint over the next three years," he said.

"If we aren't capable of convincing him that we're for real on budget cuts ... then forget about it," he added.

Domenici said Congress is moving "in the direction of" putting together an alternative budget proposal that reduces, rather than raises, the annual budget deficits in future years.

"But it's not there yet," he said. "Hopefully, it won't be too far off."

Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan said Saturday that the administration is willing to "discuss" repealing the "indexing" provisions in last year's tax bill that, beginning in 1985, will cut tax rates to compensate for inflation.

But Regan said the president would balk at any kind of tax increase if it is used to avoid spending cuts. He also said Regan will not consider any change in the three-year, 25 percent cut in income taxes or the accelerated depreciation schedules approved last year.

High Court Again Turns Back Census Challenge

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, again showing no desire to second-guess the 1980 national census, today turned away New York's claim that "hundreds of thousands" of its black, Hispanic and other-minority residents were not counted.

New York City, joined by the state and eight voters affected by the allegedly faulty results, had filed the challenge.

The high court on Feb. 22 rejected Detroit's similar challenge to the census results, which effect amounts of federal aid, the make-up of state legislatures and, in some cases, representation in Congress.

More than 50 court challenges have been filed attacking the 1980 census results, which set the U.S. population at 226,504,825. The suits charge that the census must be accurate enough to satisfy the Supreme Court's one person-one vote principle.

The challengers suffered another serious setback Feb. 25 when the justices ruled in cases from Denver and Essex County, N.J., that address lists used by census takers are confidential even when sought as possible evidence in lawsuits.

In writing for the court in that Feb. 25 decision, Chief Justice Warren E. Burger said, "There is no indication in the Census Act that the hundreds of municipal governments in the 50 states were intended by Congress to be the monitors of the Census Bureau."

Burger's opinion had nothing to say about whether the constitutional mandate of a census every 10 years envisioned states, rather than municipal governments, to act as Census Bureau "monitors."

In the New York case, a 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruling imposed conditions that state and city officials said make it virtually impossible for a trial judge to handle.

The appeals court ordered U.S. District Judge Henry Werker to make sure that any gains made by New York in census adjustments did not result in an unfair disadvantage to the 49 other states.

"The opinion of the 2nd Circuit in this case, in practical effect, precludes judicial consideration of challenges to census accuracy," New York said in its appeal to the Supreme Court.

Justice Department lawyers disagreed, saying the 2nd Circuit appeals court "clearly did not foreclose further litigation in this case."

Judge Werker had found that "conservative estimates" showed that between 772,000 and 905,000 people were not counted in New York state. That would be enough to deny New York at least one congressional representative, lawyers for the state and city said.

Report Uranium Wealth

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina may offer enough uranium to make mining profitable, according to two state geologists and a U.S. Bureau of Mines report.

"I think the potential is here," said Dr. John Denison of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. "I have been told by people who have looked at rocks in all three areas (of the state) that there are definite signs of uranium."

Dr. John Callahan, a geologist at Appalachian State University, says he sees the Dan River Basin as having the most potential in North Carolina for uranium mining.

The Marline Uranium Co. has been drilling for the ore just across the state line, near Danville, Va. Company officials say they have also obtained mineral leases on property in Rockingham County.

Other possible mining sites include the Appalachian Highlands around Avery, Burke and Caldwell counties and the Deep River Basin, which runs south into North Carolina from Danville, Va.

A report recently released by the U.S. Bureau of Mines estimates that there are millions of pounds of uranium with a high potential for future development in a proposed wilderness area of the Pisgah National Forest.

The U.S. Department of Energy recently studied potential uranium sources in North Carolina and cited estimates that North Carolina has a potential of 53,000 tons of various grades of uranium.

This compares with total known U.S. reserves of 1,122,000 tons.

The price of uranium recently has declined from a high of $40 a pound to $23 a pound, but industry analysts say the decline is temporary and they expect uranium to become a major energy source during the last part of this century.

ECU News Bureau

Retired faculty members celebrated East Carolina University's 75th anniversary on Founder's Day today by presenting a gift of $7,500 to establish a permanent student emergency fund.

And when a committee of retired faculty members headed by Dr. Richard C. Todd at Greenville presented the check to the acting Chancellor John M. Howell, Howell had another surprise—a birthday party.

Howell invited the retired faculty committee and members of the university's 75th anniversary committee to cut an official ECU birthday cake at the chancellor's home. It turned into one of the largest gatherings of the day on campus because students are on spring break and most academic departments were closed.

Founder's Day commemorates the anniversary of the act of

Polish Govm't Asserts Door Open To Returnees

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Interned activists who accept the government's offer and leave Poland may return to their homeland whenever they wish, official spokesman Jerzy Urban said today.

Urban told foreign reporters at a news conference that 17 of the nearly 4,000 who have been detained under martial law have submitted applications for passports in response to the government's invitation last week.

He said people who depart under the offer "will leave being Polish citizens. And every Polish citizen may come back to Poland at any time."

The purpose of the offer, however, is "to protect the state from their activities. Authorities seek the most humanitarian way of isolating those people," Urban said.

"If someone wants to go abroad and stay for example in Paris, instead of staying at an internment center, he can go."

Justice Minister Sylwester Zawadzki, speaking at today's news conference, said 3,953 people are still in custody at 25 martial-law detention centers. That figure is 142 lower than one issued by the Interior Ministry at the end of February.

In a sermon Sunday, Poland's Roman Catholic primate urged the Polish people and their government to be "reasonable and realistic" and compromise their differences.

"We can't say now or never, or anything or nothing," Archbishop Jozef Glemp told worshippers at St. Michael's Church in Warsaw.

The archbishop repeated the call of the 60 bishops of the Polish church, made in a statement a week earlier, for a social accord by "the government, church and trade unions."

"To reach an accord, we have to compromise," he declared.

HELP FOR POLAND

The University Church of Christ here has asked Hotline to appeal to anyone who would like to join its "Christians of Encouragement" effort to share with the people of Poland.

The Rev. John Brick, minister, said the congregation is raising money and collecting good used clothing, food, blankets, medical supplies, detergents, soaps, toothpaste, toothbrushes, baby supplies, and other staple items to be sent to Poland via its denomination's organization called "Christians of Encouragement." Overhead is said to be kept practically nil, with virtually every cent going to buy supplies or to transport the goods. The organization was responsible for trucking 20 tons of food, purchased in Copenhagen, into Poland just before martial law was declared.

Brick suggested that other churches organize their Sunday School classes and prayer, Bible study and fellowship groups to assist University Church in this project which will run through Saturday, Apr. 10. Anyone wishing to have items picked up may call Judith Stancill, 756-4729; Marchetta Beavers, 756-1757, or John Brick, 756-6545. Checks should be made out to the University Church of Christ and designated "Help for Poland."

Midwest Again Snowstormed As Canadian Cold Moves Into East

By The Associated Press

A fierce snowstorm hit the upper Midwest today while cold Canadian air spread across the East, freezing the leftover rainwater and snow from a weekend storm that killed at least 16 people from Maine to Florida, authorities said.

Heavy snow driven by strong northerly winds during the night built drifts and reduced visibility to near zero, closing highways in eastern North Dakota. Snow fell at the rate of 3 inches an hour in Des Moines, Iowa, the National Weather Service said.

Winds of 45 mph created chill factors of about 50 degrees below zero across North Dakota, while four cities in Michigan posted record lows for the date. It was 24 below zero in Marquette, eclipsing a record of minus 14 set in 1967.

About half a foot of snow fell during the night in Albany, N.Y.

Seven people died Sunday in a Newark, N.J., traffic accident, and 47 people were injured in Wheeling, W.Va., when a bus carrying members of a brass band flipped on its side.

In West Virginia, crews had restored electricity to about 11,000 of the 15,000 homes that lost power Sunday when lines snapped under the weight of up to 6 inches of heavy, wet snow. Most of the power outages were reported in Kanawha and Putnam counties.

The Southeast was pounded by thunderstorms that produced a tornado which knocked down some trees and damaged homes in DeLeon Springs, Fla., west of Daytona Beach, the National Weather Service said.

The storms dumped more than an inch of rain at Key West, Fla., and at Cape Hatteras, N.C., which was also buffeted by winds gusting to nearly 70 mph.

A 63-year-old man was electrocuted in Florida's Dade County when he stepped in a puddle that had a fallen power line in it, police said.

Tornado watches were issued briefly Sunday for Florida, which was hit by high winds and rough seas.

In southwestern and central Georgia, early-blooming peach trees were threatened by falling temperatures early today, a forecaster said. Below freezing temperatures were expected in most of the state.

"The cold could be a little bit of a problem down there, depending on how fully they are in bloom," said John Lang of the National Weather Service's Atlanta office.

Elsewhere in the nation, numbing cold sent temperatures falling well below zero in the upper Midwest, with Warroad, Minn., posting a reading of minus 26.

The Sunday storm dumped up to 7 inches of snow on western Maryland, and temperatures dropped quickly early today, glazing many roads and causing a rash of minor traffic accidents Sunday night, police said.

"There's a bubble of cold air working down from Canada," said meteorologist Ray Newcomb at the Baltimore-Washington International Airport.

Temperatures dipped to the low 20s in western Maryland early today, and some readings in the teens were expected.

Maryland authorities declared snow emergencies Sunday in Washington, Allegany and Garrett counties. Snow flurries continued today in mountains near Oakland, where Newcomb said 8 inches fell Sunday.

In Newark, N.J., seven people on their way to church were killed after their car skidded out of control on a rain-slicked street and collided with an oil truck, which burst into flames.

In western Pennsylvania, which was covered by up to 8 inches of snow, icy roads were blamed for weekend accidents that claimed six lives, four of them Sunday. One of the accidents, which killed one person, involved at least 11 trucks and seven cars on Interstate 80, temporarily closing a stretch of the highway early today.

A three-car crash Sunday afternoon killed a Maryland woman and a Delaware man when their car skidded into oncoming traffic in the snow north of Blossburg, Pa.

In Wheeling, W.Va., 47 people on a chartered bus carrying the Chatfield (Minn.) Brass Band from Washington, D.C., to Rochester, Minn., were taken to two hospitals for treatment after the bus flipped on Interstate 70 about 8 miles east of the city.

Gift Of $7500 For Student Emergency Fund

the General Assembly granting a charter for the school which would later become East Carolina University on March 8, 1907.

Todd said his committee was organized because East Carolina's 127 living retired faculty felt "it would be fitting and appropriate" to make a special anniversary gift. He said the fund "will be open-ended and we expect it to grow."

The fund will be administered by the office of student financial aid for loans to students with emergency needs. Todd said, "There are no strings attached" and the loans will be interest free.

Joining Howell in accepting the gift, Lester Nail, president of the Student Government Assn., said "The student body thanks you."

At present, he said, the SGA administers a small emergency loan fund which makes loans of $25 for emergencies. On March 1, he said, the fund provided about $1,600 in $25 loans for students in need. "It's needed," he said.

"We are pleased to do our part in the 75th anniversary program," Todd said. He said 83 retired East Carolina faculty members live in the immediate Greenville area. A total of 63 local and out-of-town retirees contributed to the fund which is to be known as the East Carolina University retirees student emergency aid fund.

Attending the ceremonies with Todd were Dr. Henry Wanderman, foreign languages; Dr. Mildred Southwick, library services; Dr. Lawrence Brewster, history; Prof. Louise Williams, mathematics; Prof. Elizabeth Drake, music; Prof. Lee Williams, library. Other committee members who were unable to attend include Dr. James Fleming, foreign languages; Dr. John Horne, admissions; and Prof. Nell Stallings, physical education.

70 Years Later, Says Wrong Man Was Convicted

NEAR TRIAL SITE — Alonzo Mann told The Tennessean in a copyright story that he thinks Leo Frank was innocent of the murder of Mary Phagan, is shown descending steps of the Fulton County Courthouse across the street from where Frank's trial occurred. (AP Laserphoto, Copyright by Nancy Warnecke of The Tennessean)

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — An 83-year-old man who says he wants to clear the record before he dies claims the wrong person took the blame for the 1913 murder of a teen-age girl in a sensational Atlanta murder case.

Alonzo Mann of Bristol, Va., says he is certain Leo Frank, a Jewish pencil manufacturer, was innocent of the murder of 14-year-old Mary Phagan, the Tennessean reported in a copyright story Sunday.

Mann, who worked as an office boy at the National Pencil Co. in Atlanta in 1913, said he believed Jim Conley, a black sweeper at the company and the key prosecution witness in the case, killed the young white girl

April 26, 1913, for her $1.20 in wages to buy beer.

Conley, who died in 1962, maintained throughout the trial that he was with Frank when he disposed of the girl's body.

Frank was convicted and was sentenced to death, but his sentence was commuted by Georgia Gov. John Marshall Slaton, the newspaper said. In August 1915, a group of vigilantes who called themselves the Knights of Mary Phagan stormed the Milledgeville, Ga., jail where Frank was held and dragged him out at gunpoint. Frank was lynched about 175 miles away in an oak grove near Marietta, Ga.

The trial was flamed by anti-Semitism and caused both a resurgence of the Ku Klux Klan and the birth of the B'nai B'rith Anti-Defamation League.

Mann said he often thought in the ensuing decades that he might have saved Mary Phagan's life — or that of Leo Frank.

Mann worked April 26, 1913, then left briefly to attend the Confederate Memorial Day parade, he said. When he returned to the job, he saw Conley holding the limp girl near a trap door leading to the factory's cellar.

If Miss Phagan was unconscious, not dead, when Mann saw her, she might have been spared if he had yelled for help, Mann said.

"On the other hand, I might have lost my own life," he said. "If I had told what I saw that day I might have saved Leo Frank's life. I didn't realize it at the time. I was too young to understand."

But Mann did understand Conley's threats. "He wheeled on me and in a voice that was low but threatening and frightening to me, he said: 'If you ever mention this I'll kill you.'"

"I was young and I was frightened," Mann said. "I had no doubt Conley would have tried to kill me if I had told that I had seen him with Mary Phagan that day."

Mann, who said he had refused to give Conley a dime for two beers the morning of the murder, said Miss Phagan went to Frank a short time later to get her pay.

"I am convinced that she left the pay window and was coming down the stairs or had reached the first floor when she met Conley... Her pay was never found in the building after she died."

Mann said he decided to make the statement because he wanted the record clear and "to get this off my heart."

Mann, who passed several lie detector tests given by a firm hired by The Tennessean, said he told his mother what he had seen that April day at the factory, but she told him to keep quiet.

"After he (Frank) was convicted my mother told me there was nothing we could do to change the jury's verdict," Mann said. "My father agreed with her. I continued to remain silent."

Only Edibles Can Qualify In Contest

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Rutabaga sculpture, green bean and strawberry jewelry, collages of tuna fish, chocolate, pineapple chunks and whipped cream — as long as it's edible, it's eligible in a university "eat your art out" contest.

"The spirit is just to be as tacky as possible. But it's all in fun," explained Susan Davis, publicist for the Louisiana State University student union's program department.

"Some people may think that we just want pretty food. But what we want is sculpture out of food. Any bizarre sort of thing. Also jewelry."

She said no one is sure what to expect of Thursday's contest, but, "We're hoping to make this a tradition with hundreds of entries a year."

LSU's Art Advisory Board got the idea from a former staff member now working at Indiana University who sent a flyer about a similar contest there, Ms. Davis said.

The staff member, Laura Hull, described only one entry in a note to her former co-workers, said Ms. Davis.

"She said that the worst was a banana split. A banana split in half with whipped cream and sardines. Very artistically arranged, we're sure."

All materials must be edible, with one exception: "People can use structural devices like toothpicks or string, but nothing toxic," she said.

Categories for prizes are still being determined but she had two suggestions: "Least appetizing and most esthetically ambitious."

Each display will be on exhibit for about an hour and a half, "or until it is eaten," she said.

Wood Finishing To Be Topic

Enrollment is limited, said Kea, and persons wishing to attend should call 752-2934, ext. 361 to reserve seats.

Corn Contest Being Planned

A youth corn contest planning meeting will be held tonight at 7:30 o'clock at the Agricultural Extension Office, 1717 W. Fifth St., (second floor, old hospital.)

Double Ring Ceremony Performed On Sunday

AYDEN — Daniele Sullivan and Steve Blum were united in marriage Sunday at 2 p.m. in the Ayden United Methodist Church here. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Henry Bizell.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vance L. Sullivan from here. The bridegroom is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. B. Blum.

The bride chose a formal gown of white organza and chantilly lace over peau de sole designed with a Queen Anne neckline outlined in miniature silk Venise lace. The fitted bodice, overlaid in chantilly lace, featured a ruffled lace collar. The lace Victorian sleeves with cuffs were edged in silk Venise lace. The full bouffant skirt and attached chapel length train were enhanced with multi-tiers of chantilly lace trimmed flounces. She wore a fingertip veil of illusion edged in chantilly lace and held in place by a Camelot cap overlaid in matching lace beaded with pearls. She carried a bouquet of silk flowers, roses, dogwood and carnations.

The honor attendant was Michele Sullivan, sister of the bride of Ayden. She wore a blue printed dacron organza gown fashioned with an on-off the shoulder neckline outlined with organza ruffles which also formed the sleeves. The gathered skirt was accented with double ruffles and side pick-ups attached to bows. She carried three carnations tinted blue and gathered with a white ribbon. Bridesmaids included Patty Bowen and Connie Smith, both of Greenville. They wore dresses identical to that of the honor attendant. They carried three carnations tinted blue and gathered with a light blue ribbon.

The flower girl, Virginia Godwin from here, wore a dress of the same style as the honor attendant made of white eyelet and accented with blue ribbons. She carried a white lace basket filled with rose petals.

The mother of the bride wore a formal gown of mauve qiana with a pleated chiffon overlay. She wore a white orchid.

The best man was Michael Scolaro of New York and ushers included Edward Williams and Thierry Sullivan, brother of the bride, both of Greenville. The ring bearer was Kevin Atkins of Selma.

A program of wedding music was presented by Janipat Worthington, organist, Mike Pollard, pianist and Cathy and Eugene Joyner, soloists.

A reception was held in the church parlor immediately following the ceremony. The bride is a graduate of Pitt

Community College. The bridegroom is employed as merchandiser for Kinney Shoe Corp., New York.

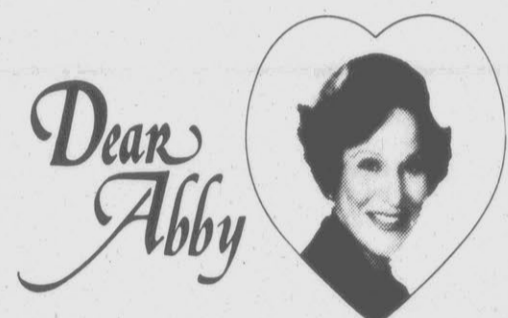

After a wedding trip to the mountains of New York, the couple will reside in Cranbury, N.J.

DEAR ABBY: Our children gave me a copy of "The Best of Dear Abby" for Christmas. I had expected to find it filled with wisecracks and funnies. On the contrary, seriousness seems to be the keynote. It is evident that you do not lightly take your responsibility as an adviser.

Your book reminds me of a rose. The pages become petals, rich with fragrance of empathy, compassion, seriousness, wit and humor. The stem has its thorns. The book is mighty near to being a documentary on humanity.

May I please have permission to reproduce by Xerox pages 48, 49 and 50, which contain correspondence from "Miserable in Phoenix"? I desire to give copies to our children and grandchildren and their friends who may be raising teen-agers.

I am 94 years old and my beloved wife of 64 years is 87. We both enjoy your book immensely.

Rather than becoming an old pest, I will say "Goodbye." Love,

CHARLES ALBERT SMITH, ALTADENA, CALIF.

DEAR CHARLES: An "old pest"? Never! Your letter made my day. You may use the specific material from my book to share with family and friends. Everyone desiring to reproduce copyrighted material must request permission, as you did.

P.S. To those who have complained that their local bookstores are out of my book, it's available by sending $9.95 plus $1 for postage and handling to: "The Best of Dear Abby," 4400 Johnson Dr., Fairway, Kan. 66205. Make checks payable to Universal Press Syndicate, and please mention the name of this newspaper.

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend who just had a miscarriage. I'm afraid if I ignore it, she might think I don't care. But what if I were to call her just at a time when she is spending a peaceful evening with her husband? I don't want to bring up something that she may have succeeded in putting out of her mind temporarily. What should I do?

TO CALL OR NOT TO CALL

DEAR TO CALL: If you want to express your sympathy, don't call — write. A written message is less intrusive.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. Write to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Bright Future Ahead

East Carolina University has celebrated its 75th birthday, and there is indeed much to look back on of which we can all be proud.

As satisfying as it is to look back on what has been accomplished, it is the future that counts and we must turn to the future to build on the solid base that has now been established. The directions the university's development will take will depend to a great extent on the new chancellor who will soon be chosen.

We do know, though, that ECU is now a university by every definition. It offers doctorate degrees and it has a foundation for research. It is carrying out its mission of providing a strong undergraduate studies program as it develops many masters degree programs, along with doctorates in medicine and other fields in the School of Medicine.

East Carolina enjoys good financial support from state appropriations. Its strong public support, particularly in the East, seems to assure it of reasonable state funding.

It may well be, however, that the institution won't see spectacular developments, like the establishment of a medical school, for some time in the future. What is more likely is we will be in an era of refinement and improvement of existing programs and the addition of new programs as rapidly changing technology dictates.

It is certain that much of the enrichment funding in the university's future will have to come from alumni and outside sources.

There is undoubtedly a great future ahead for East Carolina University. The next measure of its accomplishments likely will come when the 100th anniversary is celebrated. There is no reason we can't look back on positive developments of that 25-year period with just as much satisfaction as we now feel for the first 75 years.

For Appearances' Sake

I have not made up my mind yet whether or not I want to declare Poland in default on its loans. I've been wrestling with the problem ever since the Polish government declared martial law.

My first thought is that if we foreclose on them, it will teach them a lesson to pay their interest and principal on time. When I get a loan from the bank and put up my car or house for collateral and can't make the payments, the bank has no hesitation about taking them away. So I have always said, "What's good enough for me is good enough for Poland."

But apparently banks think differently about Poland than they do your average borrower.

Plummet, vice president of the "I Love New York Bank and Trust Company" explained why. Although Poland owes his bank a billion dollars, the company chiefs have no intention of declaring the loan in default.

"If we put Poland into default, we would be admitting we made a bad loan to her, and people would start questioning our banking judgment. So we have to pretend the country isn't bankrupt."

"I can see the bank's reputation is at stake," I said, "but how do you stay in the loan business if you can't collect your money?"

"You have to understand international finance. All the Western banks have made loans to countries who are in almost as bad shape as Poland. If we foreclose on get on their feet and start paying back their interest. As long as they're paying their interest, we can pretend they are good credit risks, and then no one can criticize us for making a bad loan."

"But in your heart you must know that's a pipe dream."

"International bankers live on pipe dreams. Let's assume we declared Poland in default. That would leave her no choice but to turn to the Soviet Union for financial help. The western banks would be cut off from ever loaning Poland money again. Other countries would say we were heartless and money-grubbing institutions, and if we treated Poland like that, we would probably treat them the same way. Our reputation as benevolent moneylenders would be destroyed."

"So what you're saying is that you would rather make a bad loan than no loan at all?"

"No bank likes to make a bad loan. But worse than making one, is to admit you have. As long as we keep it on the books as a good loan, no one is going to question why we made it in the first place. But the moment you put the borrower into default, all hell breaks loose, and the people in the bank responsible for making the loan could lose their jobs."

"You don't feel that way about some poor sap who can't pay back his business loan, do you?"

"We would if he owed us a billion dollars. But if he borrows $50,000 and doesn't pay (Please turn to Page 5)

Poland, we would have to foreclose on other countries who can't pay back their debts. This would cause some of the largest banks in the world to go under. As long as we pretend they are still good loans, we can all stay afloat."

"But I thought the whole purpose of declaring Poland in default was to send a message to the present Polish government that we disapproved of their methods of squashing Solidarity."

"Banks are not concerned with political messages. We have to think of our money first. If we foreclose on Poland we have no hope of seeing any of it again. But if we can carry them, there is always the chance they may

Inertia Over Urgent Step

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — A Jan. 5 letter stamped "secret" from Secretary of State Alexander Haig to President Reagan, urging emergency funds for Radio Free Europe (RFE) to reach captive Poland, two months later lies dormant in White House files — the victim of bureaucratic inertia.

The president himself probably never read it and certainly did not study its importance is another melancholy example of how tardily Democratic government reacts to unexpected crisis. Here was an opportunity — informing Polish patriots shackled by martial law — to be grasped by cutting bureaucratic corners and bypassing staff lethargies. The same opportunity would have produced instant decision in the Kremlin.

But in the Reagan White House, corners are not easily cut. The letter from Haig — co-signed by Reagan's old friend Charles Z. Wick, head of the International Communication Agency (ICA), and Frank Shakespeare, newsworld chairman of the Board for International Broadcasting (BIB) — remains submerged in the White House bureaucracy.

RFE, which broadcasts from Munich to Eastern European Soviet satellites, proved its ability to penetrate a Polish news blackout in August 1980. The communist government's first reaction to Solidarity's uprising in Gdansk was to cut all communications out of that Baltic seaport. Down in the coal-mining regions of Silesia, party first secretary (and Politburo member) Zdzislaw Grudzieu said publicly the "only" information that even he had of the electrifying movement in Gdansk came from RFE.

Haig's Jan. 5 letter informed Reagan that a key purpose of martial law in Poland was to impose the silence of the grave throughout the country by cutting all communications. Leaders of Solidarity who have escaped jail would be blind and deaf.

RFE, operating on its same budget of the past five years, managed to increase Polish broadcasts from 19 to 24 hours a day for a week after martial law. But it was forced back to 19 hours by inadequate funds and staff fatigue.

Soviet jamming signals are under no such financial restraints. Ten Soviet-based jamming transmitters are going full blast against RFE's Polish broadcasts and transmission to the Soviet Union by Radio Liberty (RL).

Haig, Wick and Shakespeare told the president in their long-ago letter that RFE and RL must be given at least $15 million to $20 million extra for a crash program to modernize dilapidated Munich studios, upgrade existing transmitting signals and hire extra staff. They also asked an additional $280 million to build more powerful transmitting stations for RFE and RL, as well as the U.S. government's voice of America.

But in the Reagan White House, even letters from Al Haig to Ronald Reagan are routinely deflected into the system, in this case the National Security Council (NSC) staff and the Office of Management and Budget (OMB). Haig's letter was no exception. That seems particularly odd in view of Reagan's campaign attack against President Carter for starving RFE and RL ("a Reagan-Bush administration will turn this sorry situation around," Reagan promised Oct. 7, 1980).

White House aides claim mitigating circumstances: that the new budget was locked up before Haig's letter arrived; that it contained no careful "justification"; that in the transition of William P. Clark succeeding Richard V. Allen, as NSC director, the NSC was understandably in a state of confusion.

The truth is simpler. Normal operating habits of the U.S. government, even at its loftiest levels, lack flexibility for command decisions. That condition is exacerbated in the Reagan White House by the phalanx of palace guards surrounding and protecting the Oval Office from the outside world.

The president has been privy to only one brief meeting (on Feb. 18) that discussed the need for emergency RFE financing. When it came up then, both chief of staff James Baker and counselor Edwin Meese, neither of whom knows much about Poland, wanted full OMB justification.

"They sent it into the glue factory," one official told us, even though the cost is a small fraction of a single B-1 bomber ($250 million). RFE's value in informing Polish patriots about what their martial law leaders are doing is worth a fleet of B-1 bombers. That simple conclusion would be reached by Reagan in an instant — if he were asked.

Instead, RFE's beam, piercing the dark night of Poland, will remain weak. That costs Solidarity's remnant the insights and information essential to continue pressure on Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski and his Soviet masters.

Electronics Age

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — A lot of Tar Heels today remember when an auto trip from Salisbury to Raleigh was a major undertaking. Would the roads be passable? What was the weather likely to do? How could you get gas? How many tires would it take to get there and back?

What few radios there were in the 1920s gave precious little more than static and occasional bursts of music or talk.

Taking an airplane instead was out of the question.

That was only 60 years ago.

Look what those 60 years have brought.

Now take a mind-boggling look into the future — not 60 years, but just 20 years. When you consider the rate at which knowledge and technology have leaped ahead, one feeding upon the other, to put us today squarely in the middle of the dawning of the electronics age, the next century seems a truly fantastic and frightening place.

Study Thanks to the homework being done by the microelectronics committee of the Greensboro group working on the North Carolina 2000 project, that ever-so-close future doesn't seem half so frightening as it might otherwise.

Alex Greenfield, chairman of the group, compiled a thick book of clippings and thoughts which pull together on overview of the Electronics Age so that the study could get underway from a realistic position, and seek to ask the right questions before casting about for answers.

The consensus is that tremendous advancements in the exchange of information and the replacement of Experts agree that the ingredients for that wonderful electronic future are already in hand. It's now a matter of putting all the pieces together most efficiently.

There are now more computers being made annually than babies born in the United States each year. Those big, expensive computers of a decade ago now sit on a desk. Expensive and time-consuming key punching to feed information and instructions to the machines are being replaced by machines which teach themselves. On the horizon are still smaller, more powerful, smarter computers — with the cost declining all the while.

Helping To Rescue Weak S&Ls

By SALLY JACOBSEN

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) —

Federal regulators, wrestling with the unprecedented financial woes of the savings and loan industry, are helping rescue weak S&Ls by increasingly turning to the $7 billion fund that insures customers' deposits.

Last year, the regulators used financial assistance in a record 23 mergers, up from 11 in 1980 and three in 1979. Over time, the fund will expend nearly $1 billion for the 1981 mergers.

So far this year, the regulators have given financial help to merge savings and loans in Illinois, Texas, California, Georgia and New Jersey, and regulators expect dozens more before year's end.

The regulators say their main concern in arranging the mergers is to protect the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp., which insures depositors' accounts in 3,756 savings and loans around the country. The fund has about $7 billion in assets and a $750 million line of credit from the Treasury.

The total amount in deposit accounts is about $515 billion, according to bank board figures.

To shield the fund, officials have come up with a number of new ways — some controversial — to bail out weak associations.

The most controversial is to permit large S&Ls to cross state lines to acquire weaker institutions. The six interstate mergers approved so far have saved the insurance fund an estimated $2 billion, says H. Brent Beesley, director of the insurance corporation. The fund is an arm of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, the chief federal supervisor of S&Ls.

"The viability and strength of the FSLIC is the glue that holds the whole thing together," Beesley said in a recent interview.

A group of smaller commercial banks has sued to try to halt the mergers. The banks fear the out-of-state trend will spill over into their industry and they could be takeover targets.

Roy Green, chairman of the U.S. League of Savings Associations, said the regulators have been "acting as responsibly as possible under the constraints they are working under." But he worries there are not enough strong S&Ls willing to take over weaker ones and recommends congressional approval of a $10 billion aid plan.

Jonathan Gray, an analyst with the New York investment firm of Sanford C. Bernstein, said the regulators "are doing what they're supposed to be doing ... They're trying to stretch their reserves over a broad problem area."

Beesley predicted that some 500 savings and loans are likely to be absorbed by mergers this year. Permission was given to merge 323 into other institutions last year, according to the bank board.

A Brookings Institution study predicted the number of S&Ls would drop to 2,900 or 3,000 by the end of next year.

Beesley said the greater number of mergers is due not only to the financial pressures of high interest rates and inflation, but also to technological and other changes "which make it more and more difficult for a financial institution to survive without a strong asset base."

High interest rates and inflation have caused unprecedented operating losses for the savings and loan industry. Savings and loans, the primary source of home loans, have been forced to pay more for new money than they are getting from old mortgages.

The insurance corporation keeps tabs on S&Ls through its supervisory agents around the country. The agents identify S&Ls likely to run out of net worth — the excess of assets over liabilities — within two years, Beesley said.

Government officials meet with a weak association's management to discuss solving the problem by bringing in new capital, cutting costs, selling some assets or merging with a stronger S&L, he said.

"The most typical thing they are encouraged to do is find a safe harbor in which to merge," he said.

Within six months of the projected failure of an institution, the supervisory agents will ask the S&L for permission to seek a merger partner, he said. Partners first are sought among S&Ls within the same state and with a willingness to merge without money from the fund, he said.

'Paraphernalia' Law Challenged

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The first challenge to North Carolina's drug paraphernalia law follows a U.S. Supreme Court ruling upholding a similar Illinois ordinance. But opinion is divided on what effect that may have.

George Gardner, state American Civil Liberties Union executive director, said the U.S. Supreme Court ruling probably won't have any effect on North Carolina's law, because the Illinois law only required businesses to have a license to sell items for drug use.

But Raleigh Vice Detective O.T. Perry said the Supreme Court decision makes him a lot more confident about North Carolina's law.

North Carolina's law, which went into effect last October, doesn't specifically ban rolling papers, water pipes and other items commonly associated with drug use. But it lists at least 14 instances in which such items should be considered drug paraphernalia.

According to the law, it's illegal for merchants to sell a product to someone they know or "reasonably should know" intends to use the product for drug consumption.

Maximum penalty for possession of drug paraphernalia is one year in prison and a $500 fine. Manufacturing and delivering paraphernalia is punishable by two years in prison and a fine of not less than $1,000.

The test case will come when Robert Hocutt, manager of a Raleigh novelty shop, appeals his conviction under the law in Wake County Superior Court.

He was sentenced to 30 days in jail and a $1,000 fine and is free on bond pending his appeal.

Raleigh police officers arrested Hocutt last November, confiscating about 250 items and closing the store after they bought a rolling-paper holder with a marijuana leaf design and books on marijuana and cocaine.

"We knew it would be a test case when we went," said Perry. "We sat down and talked about it and figured someone had to do it. It wasn't a shot in the dark."

Perry said detectives chose The Joint, a popular spot with college students, because officers knew of violations after the new law took effect.

Daniel Flebotte, Hocutt's lawyer, said he plans to challenge the constitutionality of the law on the basis that he believes his client's First Amendment rights of freedom of speech and expression were violated, because some of the items seized were books.

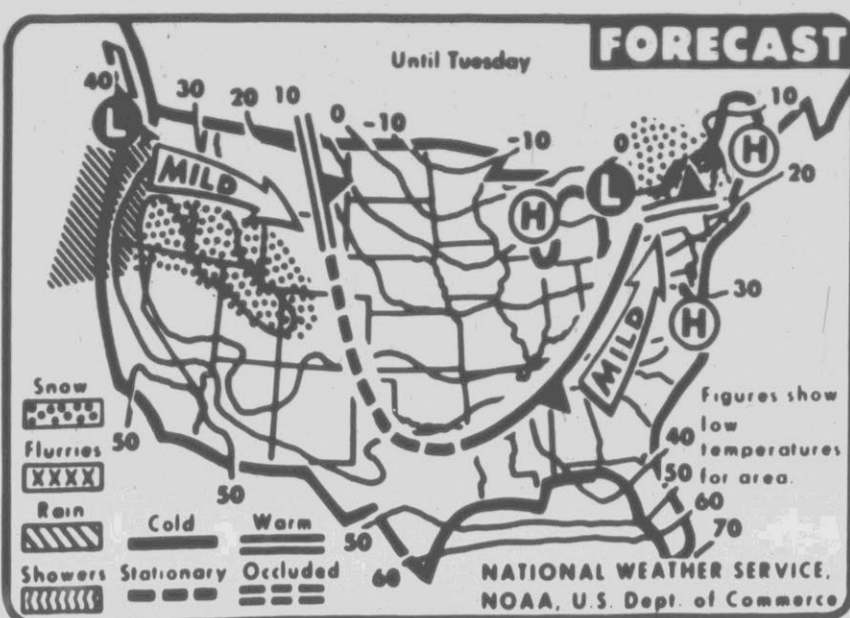

"You can sell books on how to make an atomic bomb, why not books on anything else?" Flebotte said. "One of the books seized was called, 'Legal First Aid for Today's High Society,' written by two Florida lawyers. It's called paraphernalia. That bothers me."

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Mild weather is expected in the forecast period, Monday until Tuesday morning, from the West across Texas and into most of the East. Cold weather is forecast for the northern Plains and New England. Rain is forecast for the northern half of the Pacific coast and snow into the Great Basin and for New York and New England. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
High pressure brought cooler, drier air into North Carolina today, chasing out the rain that left the ground saturated and filled some streams and rivers to overflowing.

The National Weather Service said the high will dominate the weather until moving out to sea Tuesday, with little recirculation expected across the state.

On Sunday, average rainfall was between 1 and 2 inches, concentrated mostly over the coastal areas. Temperatures ranged from around 70 over the south coast and the low 40s over the northwest Piedmont. Some mountain regions reported snow flurries with the mercury in the 30s and 40s.

The recreational weather outlook called for dry conditions, possibly into Wednesday, with mostly sunny skies by this afternoon. Temperatures were expected to be in the 30s and 40s in the mountains with 40s and 50s to the east. Lows were expected to reach the 20s to the west tonight.

Tuesday's highs were predicted to reach the 50s and low 60s over much of the state, remaining in the 40s at higher elevations.

Breezy conditions today resulted in a small craft advisory for the sounds and coastal waters.

French Jumbo Jet Sabotaged

PARIS (AP) — Investigators examined a cut instrument cable today in an attempt to discover who caused an Air France Boeing 747 to abort a flight from Paris to Los Angeles.

Police said it was a technical problem, and probably a malicious act, that did not endanger the jumbo jet or the 256 people aboard.

According to investigators, the jumbo jet took off from Charles de Gaulle Airport Sunday at 5:11 p.m. for California. But after the pilot retracted the landing gear, he noticed the warning light in the cockpit that shows the gear is down was still on.

After a series of checks, the pilot jettisoned most of the 57 tons of fuel and returned to the airport, landing safely at 6:18 p.m.

Mechanics checked the plane and discovered that the cable controlling the warning light had been cut. Officials stressed that the landing gear itself was functioning normally.

The damaged cable was replaced, and the plane took off again for Los Angeles at 9:40 p.m.

Five Die In N.C. Traffic

By The Associated Press

Five people have died in North Carolina traffic accidents this weekend, including a South Carolina pedestrian struck on Interstate 85, the state Highway Patrol reported this morning.

Edward W. Bouwarde, 21, of York, S.C., was standing in the middle of the road when he was struck by an oncoming vehicle early Saturday morning in Cleveland County south of Kings Mountain, the patrol said.

Also on Saturday, 53-year-old I.M. Lassiter of Chapel Hill died when the car he was driving was struck head-on north of Pittsboro and Constance G. Haviland, 62, of Greensboro was killed when the car in which she was riding pulled into the path of another vehicle on U.S. 70 near Princeton.

On Sunday, Donna M. Heath, 25, of Wilmington died when the car in which she was riding was struck by another vehicle traveling at a high rate of speed south of Wilmington and Andrew G. Wright Jr., 57, of Kernersville was killed when the car he was driving ran off the road and hit a tree in Forsyth County about 3 miles west of Winston-Salem.

The deaths bring the state's total for the year to 153, compared with 249 for the same period last year.

Farm Scene

By ROGER COBB
Ag. Ext. Agent*

Time to plant corn is closing in on us. With the arrival of corn planting we also encounter the problem of controlling weeds. This is a problem that must be faced every growing season. Failure to get control of weeds costs yield per acre but also in harvest loss. Weeds may also cost you in machinery repair.

We can classify weeds in one of these three categories: grasses, broadleaves or perennials. Perennial weeds are by far the hardest to control. We usually think of johnsongrass and bermudagrass as perennials. They are, but we have a few more we often have to contend with. Trumpet creeper, horsenettle and bigroot morningglory are perennial weeds too. These three perennials can only be effectively controlled in corn.

Fall tillage is important in the control of trumpet creeper, horsenettle and bigroot morningglory. This is effective in reducing the spread or buildup of these weeds. In the spring plant an early maturing corn variety and use Aatrex or Atrazine. This may be tank-mixed with a grass herbicide. After harvest treat infested areas with 2,4-D Amine plus Banvel. It is important to control drift to sensitive crops like tobacco. Spot treating perennial weeds with Roundup is another possibility.

Control of horsenettle is particularly important if you raise tobacco. Horsenettle carries tobacco Mosaic virus which is becoming more of a problem in Pitt County.

Johnsongrass and bermudagrass are two pests that seem to always give problems. To control these two weeds apply Roundup in the fall after an early corn harvest. This is the best time for Roundup to be translocated to the rhizomes and stolons. After fall application of Roundup till the soil a couple of times in the fall or winter to chop up rhizomes and stolons. Prior to planting incorporate Sutan plus or Eradicane. As cultivation may also be needed.

from any place in the industrialized world will be possible. A review of goods to be bought and sold can be presented selectively or to an open audience with orders placed and filled and funds electronically transferred. Engineers can monitor various mechanical jobs anywhere in the world and fix anything which goes wrong. Computers responding to voice input instead of a keyboard can receive and deliver to any place your messages — in any language — and bring back responses.

Working at home will be commonplace. The few people who must go to the factory will be there merely to tell the machines what to do.

Today's generation doesn't have as much trouble with all this as we older generations have. They have grown up with electronics and play Pac Man and fiddle with computers.

Of future problems, the committee is learning that putting North Carolina out front in this electronic revolution is important, and that sweeping changes in the education system at all levels is critical to that movement — not just to prepare young people for the new world, but to re-train us older people so we can adjust to that space-age and live productively in it.

Laker Believed Trying Again

LONDON (AP) — Sir Freddie Laker, whose cheap-fare Laker Airways collapsed a month ago, is reportedly circulating plans for a smaller, full-priced airline.

The Sunday Times said it had obtained a copy of a prospectus prepared by Laker and his backers that "is now doing the rounds" to come up with about $192 million in financial backing.

The paper said Laker appeared to be contemplating a "shoestring operation" with only five aircraft and 70 employees.

His Laker Airways had 13 aircraft and 2,795 workers when it collapsed Feb. 5, owing $378 million.

The paper said the airline, Laker II, would concentrate on service from England to Los Angeles, Miami and New York.

Banks Trim Near $58 Million Prime Rate From Nat'l Guard

NEW YORK (AP) — Two of the nation's largest banks cut their prime lending rate today by one-half percentage point to 16 percent, raising the possibility of a broader drop in the interest rate charged to commercial borrowers.

Chase Manhattan Bank, third-largest U.S. bank, acted first and was followed moments later by Morgan Guaranty Trust Co., the fifth-largest. Neither commented on the reasons for its action.

Economists have said, however, that the Federal Reserve Board appears to be loosening its grip on money and credit in the banking system. That could lead to widespread declines in interest rates affecting all kinds of borrowers.

That view was bolstered last Friday when the Fed announced a $3 billion drop in the nation's basic money supply, known as M1, for the last week in February.

Another factor in favor of lower interest rates, economists believe, is a recent slowdown in business credit needs because of the economy's slump.

"Losing Hair? Try This At No Risk"

HOUSTON, Texas—If you don't suffer from male pattern baldness, you can now stop your hair loss...and grow more hair.

For years "they said it couldn't be done". But now a firm of laboratory consultants has developed a treatment for both men and women, that is not only stopping hair loss...but is really growing hair!

They don't even ask you to take their word for it. They invite you to try the treatment for 32 days, at their risk, and see for yourself!

Naturally, they would not offer this opportunity unless the treatment worked. However, it is impossible to help everyone.

The great majority of cases of excessive hair fall and baldness are the beginning and more fully developed stages of male pattern baldness and cannot be helped.

But, if you are not already slick bald, how can you be sure what is actually causing your hair loss? Even if baldness may seem to "run in the family," it is certainly not proof of the cause of YOUR hair loss.

Hair loss caused by sebum can also run in your family, and many other conditions can cause hair loss. If you wait until you are slick bald and your hair roots are dead, you are beyond help. So, if you still have any hair on top of your head, and would like to stop your hair loss and grow more hair...now is the time to do something about it before it's too late.

Loesch Laboratory Consultants, Inc., will supply you with treatment for 32 days—at their risk—if they believe the treatment will help you. Just send them the information listed below. All inquiries are answered confidentially, by mail.

GREENSBORO — Top-ranked North Carolina took the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament championship over its big nemesis, but coach Dean Smith couldn't win. The Tar Heels downed Virginia 47-45 in the tournament championship and gained a berth in the NCAA East Regional at friendly Charlotte. But the way they achieved their 27th victory in 29 games reopened the major issue of the tournament: Is the shot clock coming to college basketball. History will show that the 29th annual ACC tournament was one of the lowest-scoring three-day sessions in recent memory. The North Carolina-Virginia score was the second lowest ever with only North Carolina State's 42-39 triumph over South Carolina in double-overtime was lower. Scores rarely ventured above the 60-point plateau and, at the end of one half of the Maryland-N.C. State game, the crowd at the Greensboro Coliseum booed at the 13-11 count. Smith was put to the test by reporters after all the celebration and net-cutting was done. He restated his support for a shot clock, but apparently was upset because questions seemed to ignore the game and focus on the slowdown. "Isn't it amazing? We just had a great basketball game out there until the final 8 minutes to play and that's all you want to talk about," Smith retorted. He said the Tar Heels might have picked up the pace if Virginia had decided to come after them. "It takes two anytime you have a slowdown game. They chose not to chase us aggressively until the three-minute or two-minute mark. When they did chase, they did a good job," Smith said. Virginia was forced to chase North Carolina in the first 11 minutes when, led by James Worthy's 16 points, the Tar Heels jumped to a 26-16 lead. The Cavaliers rallied, however, to cut the lead to 32-31 on a Kenton Edelin dunk. Sam Perkins retaliated with a hook and gave North Carolina a 34-31 halftime edge. Virginia took its first lead at 35-34 on a baseline drive by Jimmy Miller. Ricky Stokes helped extend the lead to 3, then the teams traded baskets. Tar Heel freshman Michael Jordan then took control. His four consecutive jumpers guided North Carolina to a 44-41 lead at 8:44. They were the last baskets for the Tar Heels and the last points for Jordan. He said he didn't mind. "We were ahead," Jordan said. "I was very pleased with what coach did."

Jeff Jones, who was burned by each of Jordan's jumpers, scored at the 7:34 mark. His shot was Virginia's last bucket until Ralph Sampson's dunk at the final buzzer. The Cavaliers fouled Matt Doherty twice in the final 30 seconds to try and wrest the lead from the Tar Heels. The strategy paid off the first time when Doherty hit the front of a one-and-one. But Miller dribbled a pass off his foot and the awakened Virginia from its dream of a comeback. Virginia Coach Terry Holland was hoping the lull would work to his advantage in that Doherty might have been a little rusty at the free throw line.

"If it did come to a free throw situation, at least it would have been a long time since anyone had shot the basketball," Holland said. "Maybe they would miss it." Doherty proved Holland wrong again by hitting two more free throws with 1 second left. Holland was also asked about the delay tactics and the possibility of a shot clock. While he was in no mood to talk after the game, he later said slowdowns might come increasingly into vogue. "Normally, with the better teams playing each other, you don't see that much of it," he said. "But it's a trend in college basketball and we expect to see more of it." The tournament also yielded three more entrants in the NCAA title chase. N.C. State was placed in the Mideast Regional, where it will meet Southern Conference champion Tennessee-Chattanooga. Wake Forest also has a first-round date with Old Dominion of the ECAC-South, also in the East Regional. The Cavaliers also gained a berth. They are top-seeded in the Mideast Regional and will face the winner of the first-round game between Southwest Louisiana and Tennessee.

Jones: Game Of Patience

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Virginia guard Jeff Jones called Sunday's game against top-ranked North Carolina a battle of patience. Teammate Ralph Sampson wasn't convinced that in this case, patience was a virtue. The Tar Heels had the greatest amount of it and needed it all to capture their 10th Atlantic Coast Conference tournament title with a 47-45 victory over the third-ranked Cavaliers. It was the lowest-scoring championship game since North Carolina State defeated South Carolina 42-39 in two overtimes in the 1970 tournament. It was the second-lowest production in the tournament's 29-year history.

North Carolina went to a version of its four-corner offense with 12:59 left. "I guess they didn't think they could play with us," Virginia's 7-foot-4 Ralph Sampson said. "I guess they just want to play that way." Virginia had a chance in the closing seconds, but that chance bounced away in a moment. "The ball bounced off my knee," said Jimmy Miller, the freshman Cavalier forward who lost the ball out-of-bounds with three seconds left. "I was getting ready to square up and shoot and someone hit my wrist and the ball hit my knee."

Virginia coach Terry Holland said he had instructed his club to take extreme care of the ball on its last possession. "I told our players to take very good care of the basketball," Holland said. "I knew they would be wacking at it and that's what happened on the final play." Virginia began that final possession with 28 seconds left. Following a timeout with 25 seconds left, the Tar Heels disrupted the Cavalier offense with fouls at the 21- and 13-second marks.

"It turned out not to be that much time with all the fouls they had to waste," Holland said. "They were able to use up the clock on fouls." North Carolina jumped out to an early 8-0 lead before the Cavaliers began a steady comeback. "We were really nervous and jumpy in the beginning," Sampson said.

Heels, Cavs Gain No. 1 Seeds In East, Mideast

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — NCAA officials, breathing a sigh of relief over the lack of conference tournament upsets, believe they've assembled the strongest 48-team field ever for their national basketball championship. At the same time, Dave Gavitt, commissioner of the Big East Conference and chairman of the NCAA Division I Basketball Committee, admitted Sunday that the tournament did not take in the nation's best 48 teams. "But we're closer to having the best 48 than in recent history," Gavitt said in announcing the tournament pairings and seedings on national television. "We did not get many upset winners in post-season tournaments at all." By majority vote of NCAA members, the committee is required to give automatic invitations to the champions of 28 conferences, leaving 20 at-large invitations. Most conferences, in an effort to get as many teams into the tournament as possible, stage post-season playoffs to determine their automatic qualifier. When teams that otherwise would not be considered get hot and win post-season tournaments, the result can be dilution of the field's overall strength. But Gavitt believes that is not the case this year. "This is the deepest and strongest field we've ever had," he said. "The word 'upset' no longer applies in the NCAA Tournament." In making the 20 at-large selections, he added, "there were some very close calls. Four or five years ago, teams with nine defeats, people would have said didn't belong in the tournament. Last year, our champion (Indiana) had nine losses."

North Carolina, DePaul, Virginia and Georgetown were named the top seeds in the four regionals. Geographically speaking, top-ranked North Carolina got the best deal and Georgetown, ranked No. 8 in The Associated Press Top 20, got the worst. North Carolina is the top seed in the East Regional and never would have to leave its home state until the semifinals in New Orleans. Georgetown was assigned to the West Regional, about 3,000 miles from its Washington, D.C., campus. "Based on the competitiveness of college basketball today, there is no easy path to New Orleans," said Georgetown Coach John Thompson. "It is going to be tough no matter what regional you're in."

"We're happy to be playing in the East," said North Carolina Coach Dean Smith. "However, that doesn't assure us of anything. I think all the regionals are difficult, but I think ours is as strong or stronger than the others." Second-ranked DePaul is the top seed in the Midwest, and Virginia, ranked No. 3, is seeded first in the Mideast. Fourth-ranked Oregon State, the Pacific 10 Conference champion, is the No. 2 seed in the West. Among the more notable teams left out and later picked up by the National Invitational Tournament were Bradley, 21-10; Iona, 24-8; Nevada-Las Vegas, 19-8, and San Diego State, 20-8. The top four seeds in each region are given byes into the second round. The regional championships will be March 19-21 at Raleigh, N.C., in the East and at St. Louis in the West. ## Maryland, Clemson Make NIT

NEW YORK (AP) — Some of the coaches whose teams are headed to the National Invitation tournament don't agree on the significance of their selections by the oldest college basketball tourney in the nation. Still, none of them was willing to turn down the invite. The NIT picked all 32 of its entrants Sunday after the NCAA national championship tournament had grabbed its 48 teams. The tournament gets underway Tuesday night in Tulsa, Okla., where Oklahoma (19-10) takes on Oral Roberts (18-11). Other pairings have Western Kentucky (19-9) at Purdue (14-13), Connecticut (17-10) at Dayton (19-8), Long Island University (20-9) at Illinois (17-10), Lamar (22-6) at Texas A&M (18-10), and Washington (18-9) at Brigham Young (17-12) Wednesday. On Thursday, Temple (19-7) will be at Georgia (16-11), Iona (24-8) at Rutgers (19-9), American (21-8) at Bradley (21-10) and Murray State (20-7) at Nevada-Las Vegas (19-8). The opening round concludes

Friday with Maryland (15-12) at Richmond (18-10), St. Peter's (20-8) at Syracuse (15-12), Fordham (18-10) at Virginia Tech (18-10), Mississippi (17-11) at Clemson (14-13), Tulane (17-8) at Louisiana State (14-13) and Cal-Irvine (22-6) at San Diego State (20-8). The four teams which win three games will advance to Madison Square Garden for the semifinals on March 22. The finals will be held two nights later. "It's not my idea of a bowl trip," said Oklahoma Coach Billy Tubbs after learning that his Sooners, who lost in the Big Eight tournament final to Missouri, were NIT-bound rather than invited to the NCAA event. "We don't know anything about Oral Roberts, except for the name of their coach. The game would be kind of like a physical education class. We'll just go out there and throw the ball up." Tubbs wasn't exactly crushed by having to settle for the NIT. (Please turn to page 9)

U.S. Downs India In Davis Cup Play

CARLSBAD, Calif. (AP) — Weary of fan abuse, John McEnroe says the American public only sees him in a black hat — never in red, white and blue.

"Here I am out there playing for my country — in my own country — and the fans, some of them, are cheering for the other guy," McEnroe complained Sunday after the United States completed a 4-1 triumph over India in first-round Davis Cup play.

"I am not John McEnroe when I am playing Davis Cup. I am the United States of America," said the star of the defending U.S. team.

The temperamental 23-year-old, currently the world's top-ranked player, aired his frustration after an incident that almost cost him a second penalty point in three days.

It came during the third set of McEnroe's 6-1, 5-7, 6-4 victory over Ramesh Krishnan.

With the games tied at 44, McEnroe stalked to the edge of the stands and glared at a heckler for almost a full minute.

"I didn't say a word to the guy but the umpire assumed I had," he said, explaining the penalty point.

U.S. team captain Arthur Ashe appealed on those grounds and the penalty was rescinded, but McEnroe wasn't totally pacified.

"In any other country in the world, the fans would have been rooting for a complete destruction of the other team. Here, they root for the underdog, even at the expense of patriotism," he said.

McEnroe was levied a penalty point in his 6-4, 9-7, 7-5 victory Friday over India's ace, Vijay Amritraj, for making remarks.

Davis Cup rules prohibit players from talking to anyone other than the captain.

The U.S. squad, passing its first test since beating Argentina for the Cup in December, advances against Sweden in a second-round test later this summer at a site yet to be determined.

The Americans bolted to an unbeatable lead over India with two victories in Friday's singles and a doubles triumph on Saturday.

Eliot Teltscher overpowered Krishnan 6-3, 6-3, 6-4 Friday and McEnroe and Peter Fleming teamed up to defeat Amritraj and his brother Anand in doubles.

Vijay Amritraj prevented a sweep by upsetting Teltscher, No. 7 in the world, Sunday 7-5, 6-3.

Afterward, Ashe made it clear he has to have a firm commitment soon from Jimmy Connors, who passed up playing in the semifinals and finals last year.

Ashe said his present team is "very fired up" about future Davis Cup competition and Connors' decision would have to come soon.

"The team as a whole was disappointed when Jimmy didn't play last year, and I have to think of team camaraderie. I want him to play, but I want him to make a full commitment. I don't think that's too difficult to do."

"Jimmy would have to make a commitment not just to me, but to the team in general that he'd be with us the rest of the way.

The U.S.-Sweden clash probably will pit McEnroe against Sweden's Bjorn Borg, the five-time Wimbledon champion who lost the All-England Club title to the American last year.

Borg, who is winding up a five-month hiatus from tennis, is expected to play for his native country in the quarterfinal round.

"I talked to Borg the other week and then he expressed interest in joining the squad against the U.S.," said the Swedish non-playing captain, Hans Olsson. "We are confident that Borg will play although there is no agreement for the time being."

Besides the U.S.-Sweden match, other quarterfinal clashes of the non-zonal competition, scheduled to be held July 9-11, will send Australia against Chile, New Zealand against Italy and Czechoslovakia against France.

The semifinals will be held Oct. 24 and the finals Dec. 10-12.

Sweden crushed the Soviet Union 4-1, the two countries splitting the final-day singles after Sweden had clinched the best-of-five tie by winning Saturday's doubles. On Sunday, Konstantin Pugaev of the Soviet Union dourned Joakim Nystrom 6-4, 3-6, 6-4, while Sweden's Mats Wilander overcame Alexander Zveriev 4-6, 10-8, 6-2 in abbreviated matches.

Peter McNamara and Mark Edmonson both won the singles matches as Australia ousted Mexico 3-2.

Beckish To Give Talk

Larry Beckish, East Carolina's new offensive coordinator, will be the featured speaker at the regular meeting of the Greenville Sports Club at noon tomorrow at the Ramada Inn.

Under Beckish, Wichita State finished ninth in the NCAA in total offense last year. One of Beckish's main tasks at ECU will be to install the 'I' formation and a variation of the shotgun.

The club's final meeting of the year will be March 23 when Bones McKinney will be the featured speaker.

Nicklaus After 69th Win Today

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) —

Jack Nicklaus had planned a fishing trip today.

Those plans were canceled.

Instead, he's going hunting.

Due to earlier weather delays and postponements, a double round of 36 holes had been scheduled Sunday to complete the tournament. But along came another thunderstorm. It caused a delay of

one-shot lead over veteran Ray

Floyd in the storm-disrupted third round of the $300,000 Bay Hill Golf Classic.

Due to earlier weather delays and postponements, a double round of 36 holes had been scheduled Sunday to complete the tournament. But along came another thunderstorm. It caused a delay of almost four hours, made the completion of a double round impossible and set back the final 18 holes until today.

Although it wiped out Nicklaus' planned fishing trip off the Florida Keys, it didn't really bother him.

"I'll take a win any way I can get it," said the man who holds almost all the records worth having, but who has gone without a victory since taking the 1980 PGA national championship.

"I've been in contention in every tournament I've played this year, but this is my best shot," Nicklaus said after he'd compiled a third round 67, 4-under-par on the rain-soaked 7,089-yard Bay Hill Club course.

His 203 total, 10 under par, was a single stroke better than Floyd, who trailed by three late in the day but trimmed Jack's margin with a birdie-birdie finish in chilly, gusty winds. That closing burst put Floyd in with a 66, matching the best round of the tournament.

Woody Peele

Except for the tournaments, the 1981-82 basketball season is history. What will happen there is anybody's guess. It did come as somewhat of a surprise that both Carolina and Virginia received top seedings in the NCAA regionals, and a fourth meeting could be upcoming in New Orleans later this month. Each must win a pair of games first, however.

In the women's tournament, the top four seeds, Old Dominion, Louisiana Tech, Southern California and Long Beach State, were less of a surprise, and East Carolina's being named to a berth is the highlight of the season for local fans.

South Carolina, the Lady Pirates' opening foe, will be no pushover, and it is doubtful that the Lady Gamecocks will be looking ahead after the close call they had in Greenville just a week ago.

Being named to the field is another feather in the cap of ECU coach Cathy Andruzzi, who will be taking her second straight team to the women's playoffs — that despite the loss of five seniors and four starters off last year's team. In fact, after the opening the Lady Pirates went through Andruzzi should get consideration for national coach of the year among the women.

Hopefully, all this will not combine to contribute to her leaving ECU after the season ends.

Meanwhile, Coach Dave Odom has begun preparations for his fourth year at the helm of the men's program next year.

The coach was highly disappointed with this year's performance, and hopefully can get things turned around in the right direction next fall.

However, there are already rumblings among the Pirate "faithful" and Odom could find the going rough among supporters unless things do turn around.

And as the season ends, we have changed our minds about the big rule change of this year. At the start of the season, we did not care for the jump ball rule that gave the ball, alternately, to each team after the initial jump.

But after seeing it for a year, we feel it is as fair as possible. In fact, we'd like to see it extended to women's basketball and high school play also.

But the high schools have a rule this year that we'd like to see the others adopt too. Under high school rules this past season, if a team forces a five-second count, it gets the ball. We'd like to see this adopted by the colleges (it has been discussed already) with possession under the jump ball rule switching only on true "jump" situations.

That would reward a team for good defensive play, rather than forcing them to do it twice in some cases.

Terps, Tigers In NIT...

"It's a good tribute for our team," he said. "One of our goals at the start of the season was to be involved in postseason play and that's what we accomplished."

Virginia Tech's Charlie Moir found the NIT invitation a mixed blessing.

"I would have preferred the NCAA," said Moir, "but it's really an honor to be in the NIT. I hope we can do as well as we did in 1973 (when the Hokies won the tournament)."

Dick Tarrant of Richmond could not hide his enthusiasm. "It's the first time in the history of the school that we've gotten a postseason bid, either the NCAA or NIT. I feel great. We're pretty thrilled."

Dale Brown of LSU, which made it to the NCAA Final Four last year, looked at his team's 14-13 record this season and still saw a club deserving a tournament bid.

"There are now 12 teams that we've played against that are going to a national tournament," said Brown. "I think it's going to be a real advantage to our young team."

"Indiana went (to the NIT) and then won the national championship. Virginia went and made it to the final four. The NIT has been a stepping stone to win the national title."

Peer Carlesimo, the NIT's executive director, doesn't quite see his tournament that way.

"Because of upsets and automatic bid, we always get good teams," he said. "Every year, in most of the major conferences, the difference between No. 1 and Nos. 5 and 6 is just a foul here and a basket there."

"We didn't have as many major upsets this year as in the past but between the ones we did have and the teams we didn't anticipate being available...we welcome those surprises."

A Review

'Making Love': Dimensionless

Take a young doctor named Zack (Michael Ontkean), color him slender, dark and handsome with a classic profile. Take his wife, Claire (Kate Jackson), a television executive, color her slender, dark, beautiful with a figure (and a wardrobe) other women will certainly envy. Take a third person, a young novelist named Bart (Harry Hamlin), color him dark, handsome, physically rugged.

Further color them with the pink of success in their individual career pursuits, brush in a tint of youthful flair for elegant lightweight surface chatter, and add a substantial wallop of bright color to represent choice posh quarters in which the characters nest when not working.

Now, place the portraits together in a cinematic triangle and name it "Making Love." So far, all is shaping up as another two handkerchief experience in film's land of triangular make-believe — the big suspense should be, which guy gets the girl.

But wait, there's one final stroke of color to add — a dark hue of human desire, male homosexuality. Thus, instead of the traditional triangle, there emerges a 1980s style triangle on the subject of a love that not too long ago was spoken of in hushed tones as one that cannot be named.

With this contemporary premise and a talented trio to work with, the viewer rightfully expects a compelling drama tense with heights of illicit ecstasy and depths of gut-wrenching agony.

Not so, Doctor Zack, married for eight years to beautiful Claire, suffers no real inner soul searching as he plays at the fringes of being gay before taking the plunge in maneuvering an affair with the novelist Bart, the body beautiful man of his dreams.

Mr. Beautiful, though captivated by the intelligence and charm of his pursuer, has dedicated his life style to one-night tricks. He wants to be "free," and falling in love, he has the courage to decide, could spell the end to his cherished freedoms — to write, and to play the life between time blocks of literary inspiration. He does have the good grace to give vent to a moment of doubt in not accepting the idea of a permanent relationship — "Why did he have to complicate it, to tell me he loved me?"

Meanwhile, back in the lavish loneliness of their dream house, wife Claire ponders and ponders, seeking clues to what has gone wrong with the ideal balance of thought-sharing and love-making in their lives. Her attempts to draw the truth from Zack results in the movie's most dramatic explosion — a word-battle on the merits of cold-striped toothpaste versus plain white toothpaste.

When the great moment of revelation does arrive, when Zack reluctantly shatters the wall of silence that Claire has begged him to tear down, and he tells her of his true sexual preference, she reacts by relating an ambiguous story about the time her father never took her on a promised outing.

Despite its subject matter, "Making Love" ends up being an innocuous cross between a true romance story and a gay soap opera. Far more physical passion comes across in the popcorn eating scenes than in the discreetly veiled heads-and-shoulders love scenes. What could have been a fascinating probe into human emotions turns out to be about as substantial as cotton candy. Nobody suffers. All trail off unscarred into their mid-thirties years to a promised land of new found happiness.

"Making Love," now showing at Plitt Theater, is lovely to look at, is well acted, entertaining and devoid of any worthwhile dimensions about gay life, or any other kind of life.

THORPE RESIGNS
LONDON (AP) — Jeremy Thorpe, former Liberal Party leader acquitted in 1979 of a charge of trying to murder his former homosexual lover, has resigned as director of Amnesty International's British section.

SHE'S HAD ENOUGH — Phyllis Diller makes her final appearance Sunday as a, yes, a concert pianist. Miss Diller started her second career at the suggestion of another comedian, Jack Benny, who used to have a secondary career of his own as a concert violinist. Appearing with the Bloomfield Symphony in Bloomfield, N.J., she played the Beethoven Piano Concerto and a selection of Bach and Broadway tunes. Miss Diller said she no longer had the time to practice. (AP Laserphoto)

Networks Losing Viewers After Complaints Over The Offerings

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Cut ... That stinks ... Do it again.

That's a universal refrain from directors the world over, and, in a sense, it applies to the 1981-82 television campaign. All season long, the ultimate directors, the viewers, have been panning Hollywood's product.

Through mid-February, the networks lost 4 percent of their share of the prime-time audience, as compared to the season before.

Figures from the Ted Bates Advertising Agency reflect that only 84 percent of the viewing audience watched an average minute of prime time on ABC, CBS and NBC this season. Most of the loss comes from NBC's dismal ratings, with the missing audience turning to movies and sports on cable and independent stations.

So this month, the networks are launching their third season, experimenting for the fall with more new programs. The old-new programs have fared poorly. The highest rated, CBS' "Falcon Crest," ranks 13th, but even test patterns would benefit from a lead-in from top-rated "Dallas."

The only new shows to crack the top 40 are "Fall Guy" (26th), "Bret Maverick" (29th), "Father Murphy" (35th) and "Love, Sidney" (39th).

It takes time to build hits, but viewer disinterest reflects the programmers' tired thinking. The first two shows to debut in March, however, were, at least, innovative: the TV detective spoof, "Police Squad," and the multicharacter "Chicago Story."

Will the other new shows continue this trend? You're the director. Here's the script: New season ... Take three ... Action.

Monday: CBS unveils two sitcoms April 5. "Report to Murphy" features Michael Keaton as an idealistic parole officer who takes chances with his ex-convicts. "Making the Grade" stars James Naughton as dean of a tough St. Louis high school.

Tuesday: ABC's "Joanie Loves Chachi" begins March 23. It's another spinoff from "Happy Days," starring Scott Baio and Erin Moran.

Joanie and Chachi move to Chicago to play music in a night club. That same night, CBS tries something different with Sam Watson as an American professor who travels to England in 1912 to study science. The series is created by John Hawkesworth ("Upstairs, Downstairs").

Wednesday: The movie "Love Bug" comes to CBS March 17 as a series. Dean Jones returns with his costar, a Volkswagen. "Baker's Dozen," about two undercover cops who are in love, debuts the same night on CBS.

Thursday: ABC offers "Police Squad" and "9 to 5," based on the movie and being produced by Jane Fonda in her first foray into television. It debuts March 25, as does CBS' "Cagney and Lacey," about the on- and off-duty lives of two female police partners.

Friday: Until "Dallas" goes to reruns, nothing on NBC or ABC would get a fair chance. The only change is NBC's "Friday Night Movie," replacing low-rated "Cassie & Co" and "McClain's Law."

Saturday: NBC debuted "Chicago Story" March 6 and ABC unveils William Shatner as "Sgt. Hooker"
