

Beauty and The Beasts

HOPING FOR GREENER GRASS — SOON! ... Oblivious to the idyllic Pitt County farm scenery surrounding them, these Herefords search for something besides cornstalks to munch in this field on the Washington highway near Greenville. Although spring is still nearly two weeks away, tender, greener pastures are just around the corner for those bovines still dining on winter feed. Warm, late-afternoon sunshine etches the patterns in the old wood of the barn, and the shadow the winter-weary tree throws on the wood is pleasing. But only fresh, verdant grazing land would catch the attention of these creatures. (Reflector Photo By Mary Schulken)

Prison Sentences Face Convicted Bid-Riggers

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — A Superior Court judge has warned that people convicted of bid-rigging charges in the future can expect active prison time along with whatever fines may be imposed against them.

Judge David Reid commented Monday after sentencing two electrical construction company executives to jail terms after they pleaded guilty to rigging bids on the East Carolina University Medical School project.

"Let this send a warning to any other people in the future who might be tempted to involve themselves in bid-rigging activities in this state. Let them know the state will impose an active sentence in these cases," Reid said.

"The most important factor is that the defendants be imprisoned, not the length of time they are imprisoned," Reid added.

Robert S. Shackelford, president Bryant-Durham Electric Co. Inc. of Durham, was sentenced to five months in prison and William A. Williamson, manager of the electrical division of Richards & Associates of Carrollton, Ga., received a four-month active sentence.

Both sentences came as a result of plea-bargaining agreements.

Also Monday, three companies agreed to pay restitution for a construction project at Rex Hospital, even though no charges have been filed in connection with that project. One agreed to pay restitution in a Central Prison project.

The two executives and the companies they represented were each charged with engaging in unreasonable restraint of trade, a misdemeanor which carries a maximum punishment of two years in prison and a minimum $1,000 fine for corporate defendants. Felony charges of false pretense and conspiracy were dismissed.

As part of the plea-bargaining agreements, Richards &

Associates and Bryant-Durham Electric were each required to pay $10,000 and court costs.

Both have been suspended from the state's list of approved bidders.

Shackelford and Williamson also agreed to help the state in the continuing investigation of collusive bidding on state projects.

Al Cole Jr., the special deputy attorney general who headed the state's investigation into the bid-rigging cases, told the court Monday the investigation into the rigging of bids on the ECU project is almost completed, with the exception of one or two loose ends.

"However, there are other indictments to be made in other areas," he said.

He said he is still investigating bids made on expansion projects at Raleigh Central Prison and Rex Hospital.

Refunds Not For Churches

By MARY SCHULKEN

AYDEN — Local churches will not get a refund from the electrical department like the Masonic Lodge did, the Town Board of Commissioners has indicated.

"The circumstances are different," said Commissioner Robert Harris at Monday's monthly meeting of the board. "First of all, the Masonic Hall was charged twice as much per kilowatt, even on demand, as the churches were."

A refund was granted the Ayden Masonic Hall during a recent workshop session when town officials discovered that the lodge had been billed at a rate two times as high as normal. According to Harris, the lodge was billed at 24 cents per kilowatt whereas the churches were billed at 11 cents per kilowatt.

"First of all we feel we were discriminated against because only certain churches had demand electrical meters installed," said Melvin Fussell, a representative of the churches. "Only three churches and the Masonic Hall were put on demand to begin with. Then, when the Masonic Hall received a refund we weren't even considered."

"We're asking now that you consider giving us a

Pleases CWP

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — The Communist Workers Party says it is pleased by a planned federal grand jury inquiry into a violent 1979 anti-Ku Klux Klan rally, but will watch carefully to make sure the investigation doesn't become a "witch hunt against the victims."

The Justice Department announced Monday that the grand jury would investigate the Nov. 3, 1979 shootout that left five CWP members dead after a "Death to the Klan" rally in Greensboro.

CWP members will "cooperate with any genuine attempt to bring the perpetrators to justice," said Signe Waller, a spokeswoman for the party.

"But we would be wary of any process which might be used as a witch hunt against the victims," she said. "The danger we see is that in some manner this will be used to continue the cover-up" of the shooting and subsequent police investigation of the shootout.

Nine other demonstrators were wounded in the confrontation. Four members of the Klan and two members of the American Nazi Party were accused by the state of murder and felonious rioting in the incident but were acquitted in a 96-day trial.

Reagan Moves On Capitol Hill

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, back in Washington after a West Coast mini-vacation, is renewing the campaign for his unpopular 1983 budget plan before an unlikely group of skeptics — 53 Republican senators.

But despite fresh conciliatory statements from presidential aides, congressional and White House officials alike say they don't expect any compromise spending plan to emerge from Reagan's trip to the Capitol today.

The president was meeting first with the Senate GOP leadership and committee chairmen and then with all 53 Republican senators.

Reagan, whose visit to the Senate is described by a spokesman as a "friendly neighborly gesture," repeatedly has invited Congress to make deeper cuts in domestic spending than he recommended.

But so far he has shown little willingness to accept changes in either the 3-year tax cut legislation approved a year ago or his proposed Pentagon buildup.

But spokesman Larry Speakes, talking to reporters Monday, appeared to open the door to at least some reduction in the defense budget.

"If we cut defense, we can't cut it where it would be misread by the Russians, and that's the president's key point," he said.

"Any major cut in defense would send the wrong signal as far as our nation's determination to rebuild our national defense."

And presidential counselor Edwin Meese III told reporters that Reagan has "already indicated that he's pretty flexible on most everything except the two fundamental areas, taxes and defense."

But Meese also specifically declined to "speculate" about the defense budget — apparently leaving the door open to some reduction.

"What's a compromise? Everybody knows that the final budget that is signed will not be the same budget, item for item, that he submitted," Meese said.

In advance of today's session, the Republicans' assistant Senate leader, Ted Stevens of Alaska, predicted that Reagan will agree to compromises "including defense and including revenues and including normally sacrosanct areas such as entitlements."

But Stevens, appearing on the CBS-TV "Morning" program, said he expects there will be "very little" deleted from the president's proposed defense budget.

Speakes, however, said this morning the president "really is firm on no cuts in the defense program."

"He will certainly look at suggestions," Speakes said, adding that "he knows of nowhere where the defense budget can be cut, with the exception of management savings."

"His goal is to rebuild defense and send a signal to the Russians we're very sincere about this," the spokesman said.

He said that any change in this plan "could send a signal that could be misinterpreted abroad."

Virtually all the GOP senators are upset with Reagan's budget and concerned that big deficits will keep interest rates high and abort an economic recovery expected later this year.

Working under the direction of Senate GOP Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee, key Republicans are reviewing a lengthy list of possible changes in Reagan's plan — including much higher taxes, lower defense spending and possible changes in Social Security.

Baker hopes to have a possible alternative to Reagan's big-deficit proposals in the next several days.

Speakes, repeating Reagan's previous position, said Monday that the president would be willing "to listen to any member of Congress who has a serious, comprehensive alternative."

But Meese said the administration "will not be responding until we see what the ideas are up there," in Congress.

"Nobody is talking about wholesale changes," Meese said, although he added he sees a budget compromise "coming together in the next 60 days."

In the view of Senate Republicans, there's a lot of compromising to do.

Block Grant Programs Explained For Board

By TOMMY FORREST
Reflector Staff Writer

WINTERVILLE — Dale Holland of Talbert Cox and Associates explained to the Winterville Board of Aldermen Monday night the new community development block grant.

Holland said the state will be taking over the program and changes have been made since the last federally funded grant took place in 1980.

Holland said grants could be applied for in three categories: community revitalization, economic development, and planning and development. The official added the amount for the first two categories could be a maximum of $750,000, with no matching local funds needed.

"A big change this year will be a 20 percent amount that can be used outside the target area if the funding is granted. This could be used for sewer systems, upgrading water lines and other improvements," Holland commented.

Holland also explained to the board that only one public hearing would be needed instead of the two for the last grant period.

"Since the state will be taking over, there will be less paper work and this will make it easier for applications to be submitted," Holland concluded.

The board passed a motion to pursue the grant program and approved Talbert Cox Associates to administer the program.

In other business heard by the board, Lewis Dibble of Dibble and Associates of Washington, N.C., explained his proposal for the new 1.6-mile power line to be constructed north and south of Winterville.

Dibble said the estimated cost of the project would be about $88,000.

In a letter to the board it was explained the new system would consist of two circuits for the town. One circuit would begin at the north end of the town at the Greenville Utilities feed point and a second circuit to be connected to the utilities connection at the south end of the town. This would give the town a stand-by feed point in the event of an outage.

Alderman Bobby Crawford explained that construction of the power line would be financed by the town, using a $92,465 refund from Greenville Utilities. The board's plan to use the refund for the power line has drawn complaints from some citizens who asked why the town could not receive power directly from Carolina Power and Light Co. rather than using Greenville Utilities' lines.

Crawford explained that it would probably cost the town in the "millions" if they had

GOT REPLACEMENT CORD(S)

I ordered a replacement cord for my Norelco hot comb Dec. 22, 1981 and have never received it nor any answer to my letters. I have a cancelled check for $3.80. A.A.

Hotline called Norelco Service Inc. in New York City and talked to someone who said he'd check on the claim and call us back. We waited about a week for the return call and when it did not come, we called back and, being able to learn nothing about the outcome of our previous call, put the request for a replacement cord through again. Then we called you and learned you'd got the first cord, apparently the result of our first call, and no doubt have a second one on the way. You say you don't mind having a spare. We recommend that you send Norelco another $3.80 for the second cord.

Rep. Warren To Be A Candidate

ED N. WARREN

Rep. Ed N. Warren announced today that he plans to be a candidate for reelection to the N.C. House of Representatives in the 1982 Democratic Primary.

Warren, who is serving his first term in the House, said he will officially file as soon as the Department of Justice and/or the federal courts approve the legislative districts for the state, and the State Board of Elections determines the filing date.

A Democrat and Pitt County resident, he is in the tobacco business as a farmer and warehouseman and has business interests in several other enterprises.

Questionnaire For Readers

A questionnaire appearing in today's Reflector will give Pitt County residents an opportunity to say what they want the state to be like in the year 2000.

The questionnaire, which is being distributed throughout the state during March, is on page six of today's paper.

Thomas L. Edwards, chairman of the Pitt County NC 2000 Committee, said the questionnaire is part of NC 2000, a long-range planning project now under way in the county and across the state. He said citizens are being asked to identify what they value most about the state now and want to preserve for the future and what they think needs most improvement.

The committee, he said, will be placing the questionnaire in public places such as libraries, banks and offices and distributing it through community organizations throughout the month of March.

Edwards said the Pitt committee is part of a network of county committees responsible for making sure local citizens and leaders have a voice in the statewide planning effort. The committees are feeding information into a state-level Commission on the Future of North Carolina, appointed by Gov. Jim Hunt and chaired by University of North Carolina President William Friday.

He said the commission is exploring alternate courses of action and will submit a report of recommended actions to the governor in December.

Rep. Bundy Will Seek 7th Term

SAM D. BUNDY

Rep. Sam D. Bundy announced today that he will seek a seventh term in the N.C. House of Representatives in the 1982 Democratic primary.

Bundy, who has represented Pitt and Greene Counties since 1971, said he will file as soon as the Department of Justice and/or the federal courts set up and approve the legislative districts for the state, and the State Board of Elections sets the filing date.

The Farmville Democrat has served as one of the two Eighth District representatives in the General Assembly in the 1971, 1973, 1975, 1977, 1979 and 1981 sessions.

Avers Women Benefit In New Tax Regulations

Winston-Salem attorney Meyressa Schoonmaker, a public advocate of women's better understanding of laws affecting them, says women can benefit more than men from new tax regulations on pension funds.

"Women as a group have the greatest potential to take advantage of the Individual Retirement Accounts because statistically women working outside the home are earning less than men and, therefore, have lower retirement benefits," Ms. Schoonmaker said Monday night.

Ms. Schoonmaker is founder and president of the North Carolina Center for Laws Affecting Women Inc., a non-profit research center concerned with the role of women, children and family in society. She delivered the keynote address at a seminar in Greenville on how laws affect women and later expanded on her speech during an interview.

"The IRA gives them (women) the opportunity of increasing their retirement, particularly for women who have interrupted their working careers to raise children and have less years in which to accrue retirement benefits.

"The new IRA makes it possible for wives who work in their husband's business without salary to be paid up to $2,000 for their work, deposit that amount in an IRA and not increase the tax bite on the business — a factor that kept many wives unsalaried until now," she said.

Ms. Schoonmaker travels the state conducting workshops to acquaint the public with laws as they affect support joint bank accounts, divorce, distribution of property upon divorce and pensions and retirement.

During her presentation, she listed recent changes in North Carolina law that affect women such as divorce and support laws, division of assets acquired during marriage.

"I think the most important thing for women today is to understand the changes in law that have occurred and plan their future accordingly," she told the Greenville seminar. "The blueprint by which women must build their lives has changed. No longer can security be based on marrying and living happily ever after.

"Women are going to have to understand what men have understood for centuries — that they are going to have to support themselves and probably others as well," Ms. Schoonmaker said.

Louise Downing of Pitt Community College introduced Ms. Schoonmaker as well as speakers for group sessions which followed dinner at the Casablanca.

Nancy Barnhill Aycock discussed criminal laws, while a discussion of domestic relations and property laws was led by Ann Heffelfinger. Laws that affect the senior citizen was Elizabeth Warren's workshop topic. All are Greenville attorneys.

Mary Ann Rose, assistant to the chancellor for special assignments/director of equal opportunity programs, East Carolina University, led the discussion on health law issues.

Helen Simpson of Robersonville, field coordinator, N.C. Council on the Status of Women, announced Women's History Week is now being observed throughout the state.

The seminar was sponsored by Pitt Community College, Pilot Club of Greenville, Pitt County Council on the Status of Women, League of Women Voters of Greenville-Pitt County, Greenville National Organization of Women and Women's Political Caucus.

Minor Flooding By Heavy Rain

RAEIGH, N.C. (AP) — About an inch of rain Sunday caused minor lowland flooding in four Eastern North Carolina rivers.

The National Weather Service reported minor flooding on the Neuse River near Smithfield, the Lumbee River near Lumberton, the Roanoke River near Williamston and along two locks of the Cape Fear River.

Hydrologist Bill Smith said the Neuse and Lumbee Rivers probably would remain slightly above flood levels during the week. The overflow on the Roanoke River was caused by the rain and release of water from the Kerr Lake Dam.

Whitley Plans Candidacy

MOUNT OLIVE, N.C. (AP) — Third District Congressman Charlie Whitley has announced that he will be a candidate for reelection in 1982, subject to the Democratic primary.

Whitley, completing his third term, served more than 15 years as administrative assistant to his predecessor, David N. Henderson, before seeking his own election in 1976.

In the House, Whitley serves on the Agriculture Committee and is the ranking Democratic member of its subcommittee on tobacco.

Rep. Bundy...

During his tenure, Bundy has served on the education, agriculture, mental health, state personnel, election laws, constitutional amendments, highway safety, base budget, appropriations and finance committees, and has been vice chairman of committees on education, state personnel and constitutional amendments. He presently serves on the Advisory Budget Commission and the State Board of Awards. For six years he represented the House Education Committee on the North Carolina Advisory Council on Teacher Education.

Prior to going to the General Assembly, Bundy was a school administrator for 42 years, the last 24 years in his native Farmville. Before retiring from his school duties, he was principal for six years of the Sam D. Bundy School, which was named in his honor.

Bundy is a longtime member of the Kiwanis and is a Mason, a Knight Commander of the Court of Honor, a 32nd Degree Scottish Rite Mason, a York Rite Mason and a member of the Sudan Temple of the Shrine.

For many years a member of Farmville Christian Church, he has been an elder and member of the church board. In addition, Bundy has served as president of the North Carolina Christian Men's Fellowship and president of the State Convention of the Disciples of Christ.

Since 1972, Bundy has served on the board of trustees of Mount Olive College and is a member of the Pitt County Farm Bureau and the Pitt County Agribusiness Association.

Bundy, who will be ninth in seniority out of 120 House members, said in announcing his candidacy, "I have enjoyed representing the good people of Pitt and Greene Counties. I have supported legislation which I thought was good and opposed legislation which I have thought was not in the best interest of our people. I have supported appropriations for education, mental health, agriculture and in other areas which I thought were reasonable in line with the resources at hand."

He said, "If nominated and elected, I plan to continue to give my full time and best efforts in representing all people and all segments of our society."

Rep. Warren...

ren was in school administration for 20 years, having served in Belvoir, Falkland, Ayden, Greenville and at Pitt Community College.

He has been past chairman of the Pitt Board of County Commissioners, Pitt Memorial Hospital Board of Trustees, Pitt County Health Department, Mental Health Association and United Way. He is a member of the Greenville Rotary Club, Chamber of Commerce, Agribusiness Association and the Farm Bureau.

The first term representative is serving on several budget committees for state appropriations: agriculture, appropriations base budget, appropriations base budget on natural and economic resources, appropriations expansion budget, education, local government, rules and operation of the House, and wildlife resources. He was recently appointed by the speaker of the House to serve on task forces on exceptional children and on the teacher tenure law.

"My experience this term along with my prior experience on the board of commissioners has prepared me with very good experience to serve ... again in 1983," Warren said.

He commented, "The input which I received from friends and constituents has been very helpful. I supported legislation which I felt was in the best interest of the people. I have been and will continue to be close to the people of the district."

Warren said, "I feel that my record will speak for itself. Most of the legislation I sponsored or co-sponsored was for tax relief."

Warren is a member of First Christian Church where he serves on the board of deacons and the finance committee. He and his wife, Joan, live in Greenville.

LWV Opens Funds Drive

The League of Women Voters announced today the kickoff of its annual finance drive seeking contributions from "investors in the league's work for good, open government."

Members of the Greenville-Pitt County League met this morning at the home of Finance Director Rhea Markello for a briefing and then began calling on prospective contributors who did not respond to the appeal mailed two weeks ago.

"Because dues paid by local LWV members go chiefly to the state and national league for their work, we must depend upon contributions from the community for local projects," Ms. Markello said. "This community has always responded generously."

She explained that League members volunteer many hours of service to the community, assisting with voter registration, gathering and distributing factual, non-biased information on political candidates and issues, monitoring meetings of governing groups, conducting in-depth studies of local, state and national concerns, presenting candidate forums, holding public forum on topics of current interest, and publishing information like the Community Service Guide, the latest issue of which is being made available to the public beginning yesterday.

Membership in League, she pointed out, is open to any man or woman 18 or older.

Anyone not contacted who wishes to contribute to the League finance drive may mail contributions to P.O. Box 1551, Greenville, or contact Rhea Markello, 752-9130.

Find Volcanic Link To Cloud

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Preliminary findings indicate that a cloud circling 10 miles above the earth is made of tiny droplets of sulfuric acid from a volcanic eruption somewhere in Africa or Asia, researchers say.

Ames Research Center scientists hope to confirm today those findings, issued Monday and based on a study of samples collected Saturday by a U-2 reconnaissance plane which passed through the cloud at 50,000, 55,000 and 60,000 feet over the Gulf of Mexico.

"It's very likely volcanic," said Pete Waller, information officer for Ames, which is operated by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. "It almost has to be. The scientists found very little rock debris," he added, which eliminates a nuclear blast or a meteorite explosion.

Waller said scientists also found levels of radioactivity so low that the experts virtually ruled out the possibility that the cloud, which was discovered Jan. 23 by Japanese scientists, is the remnant of a nuclear explosion.

"A typical pattern with a volcano is that it ejects ash, rock and lots of sulfurous gases," said Waller. "Within the first week all the ash and rock falls out, leaving behind the sulfurous residue. That hangs around for months and gradually turns to sulfuric acid."

Waller said the cloud is girdling the earth from the equator to about 50 degrees north, along a line passing through Germany, Poland and several states, including Washington, Idaho and Montana.

The location indicates the volcano erupted several months ago in Asia, Africa or somewhere in the ocean.

"There's a volcano in Zaire which has been acting up since December," Waller said, describing Mount Nyamuragiri. He added that about 600 volcanoes currently are active around the Pacific Ocean.

May Endanger Coal Terminals

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Declining crude oil prices may endanger proposed coal terminals along the Cape Fear River.

In September, when the Williams Terminals Co. announced plans for a $70 million coal-loading terminal near Southport, crude oil was $35 a barrel. Since that time, crude oil has dropped to just under $29 with analysts predicting it will bottom out at around $28.

The decline in coal demand has caused several coal terminal projects to reassess their future.

One coal company has already abandoned plans to build in Brunswick County.

Couple Marries In Raleigh

RALEIGH — Carol Gordon Cox and George Albert Threewitts were married Saturday at four o'clock in a double ring ceremony performed by James Hunt in the Unitarian Church of Raleigh. Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Albert A. Gordon III of South Yarmouth, Mass. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Louise Threewitts of Littleton. A program of music was presented by Patricia Long of Raleigh, organist and Dr. Karl L. Rodabaugh of Greenville, who played the trumpet. The honor attendant was Margaret Cox of Greenville, daughter of the bride. Nora Wagoner of Charlotte, niece of the bridegroom, served as flower girl. The best man was Roscoe Wagoner of Charlotte, brother-in-law of the bridegroom. The ushers included Bert and Bobby Threewitts of Greenville, sons of the bridegroom. A reception was held at the church following the ceremony. Punch was poured by Marcia Howlet, sister of the bride, Sara Wagoner, sister of the bridegroom, and Ruth Edwards. A wedding luncheon, given by the mother of the bridegroom, was held on Saturday at the Velvet Cloak. After a wedding trip to Charleston, S.C., the couple will reside in Greenville. The bride attended the University of Massachusetts and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. She is now an associate professor of nursing at the East Carolina University School of Nursing. The bridegroom attended Atlantic Christian College and East Carolina University. He is currently the assistant director of the ECU News Bureau.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

There is one thing I have never taught my body how to do and that is to figure out at 6 a.m. what it wants to eat at 6 p.m. I suppose there are some people who roll out of bed and can hardly wait for the day to go by to get at those cabbage rolls, but I'm not one of them. I am always surprised when it is time to eat and there is nothing on my plate. When my children were younger, I figured out there were two kinds of mothers: those who dragged out of a warm bed and put nutritious chili in a wide-mouth thermos, and those who stuck a stick of gum and a holy picture in a sack with instructions to "Trade up!"

When 43 percent of the women in this country went out into the marketplace to work, planning ahead for meals became a real challenge and hamburger became our national bird. There's something about hamburger that's so ground. It's like an old friend. I am never defeated by frozen hamburger like I am a package of chops that are welded together or spare ribs that wrap around a piece of frozen fat which is held captive until the spring. I never met a frozen turkey that was not capable of sinking the Titanic. But hamburger is conquerable even at 6:30 when the big game starts at 7:30 and it's frozen like a rock. I know all of you have tried traditional ways to defrost hamburger, but have you considered some of the following newer ones?

1. Tuck frozen hamburger under your armpit while setting the table.
2. Balance meat under your shower cap as you run through the hot water.
3. Put it in your dishwasher and run it through the dry cycle.
4. Have the children put it on top of the TV set when they first arrive home and begin playing video games.
5. Put it under the rear tire of your car and back up.

There are some people who put hamburger out on the countertop or sink before they go to work in the mornings. I don't know any of them personally.

Lanai is known as Hawaii's "pineapple island". Its early native inhabitants were exiled subjects banished by the Hawaiian royalty to the island which was believed to be inhabited by evil spirits. It was not until a major pineapple company doled out $1.1 million for Lanai did its fortune turn. Erosion was halted and roads and model plantation towns were built. Today, this relatively untrampled paradise, eight miles from Maui, is a magnificent escape for the traveler. Solitude and quiet are provided away from the beaten Hawaiian path. This sleepy isle is a must-see for the "barefoot" traveler.

BPW Meet Announced

The Greenville Business and Professional Women's Club will hold its monthly meeting Thursday at the Ramada Inn Paganery Hall starting about 6:30 p.m. for dinner. The business meeting will follow at 7:30. The program will be "Safeguarding Your Future." The Legislation and Ways and Means Committee, chaired by Mary Daugherty and Alethia Brickhouse, respectfully are in charge of the program. The hostess for the meeting will be the entertainment committee, chaired by Doris Marlow. Membership in BPW is open to all persons who are actively engaged in business or the professions and to persons enrolled in college or a university or any other accredited educational institution above the high school level. For further information regarding the club or reservations, call Cotten Smith at 758-0519 or Elizabeth Deal at 752-2917 before Wednesday morning.

Credit Increasing, Payment Decreasing

Americans are getting deeper in debt and getting less for the money they spend, says Thelma Hinson, extension family resource management specialist at North Carolina State University. "National statistics show that our consumer debt load (short-term installment credit) averages more than $5,000 for every man, woman and child in America," she says. And, she adds, the buying power of 1980 incomes was six percent less for wage earners and 15 percent less for farmers, than that of 1979 incomes. "Credit is increasing and repayment of debt is decreasing. Personal bankruptcies are increasing," the specialist warns. If money problems have not affected your family, you're in the minority. Studies show 54 percent of families argue about money.

And money problems are often cited in divorces. "Money problems will not solve themselves," Dr. Hinson warns. "The solution will depend on the actions of individuals and families." To help you assess your financial stability, ask yourself the following questions. Does your family have a sense of financial well-being? Can you handle money problems without arguing? Is monthly income greater than expenditures for everyday needs and is money saved regularly for emergencies and future goals? How do you handle credit? Do you reserve paying finance charges only for big ticket items, like cars, furniture and major equipment? And is monthly credit owed (not the mortgage) less than 15 percent of monthly take-home pay? Finally, is insurance protection adequate against major financial risks such as property damage, illness, or death of wage earners?

Treat yourself to the boutique look at a bargain basement price by knitting either of these summer cotton coolers. The knitting is easy with just enough pattern stitchery in the yokes to make them interesting to work and exciting to wear. Both are made with double strands of cotton and the easy-to-follow directions are written without abbreviations for small (8-10), medium (12-14) and large (16-18) sizes. To obtain directions for making the Cotton Coolers, send your request for Leaflet No. BK-3782 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler ("The Daily Reflector"), P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582. Or you may order Kit No. K-3782 by sending a check or money order for $10 to Pat Trexler at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges. Please specify your choice of crystal blue, sunshine yellow, cream, peach, spice, fudge brown, black or white.

Dear Pat: I recently bought a basic pullover sweater pattern and would like to vary the basic design by adding panels or borders of lace stitches to it. Could you print some simple pattern stitches for me and others who like to experiment? — Frances B., Charleston, S.C.

I always love to hear from readers who like to create their own originals with the use of pattern stitchery, so I am glad to oblige.

With this — or any pattern stitch — try a sample swatch before starting your sweater to be sure you like the effect and to check your gauge.

Before starting the directions for a lace panel insert, I will explain a couple of the terms used. When you see the phrase "slip-slip-knit" (abbreviated SSK in many directions), work in this manner: slip 2 stitches, one at a time, from the left to the right needle, slipping them knitwise. That is, insert the needle into each stitch as if you were going to knit it, but just pass it from one needle to the other without working it. Then, insert the tip of the left needle into the fronts of these 2 stitches and knit them together from this position. A "double yarnover" is made by bringing the yarn to the front of your work after a knit stitch and then wrapping the yarn completely around the needle, again returning it to the front of your work. Here is a lace insert, worked over a panel of 10 stitches, which I think you might enjoy. For rows 1 and 3 (the right side of your work), knit 3, knit 2 together, make a double yarn over, slip-slip-knit, knit 3. For rows 2 and 4, purl 4 stitches, knit 1 in the back loop of the first strand of the double yarnover, then knit in normal manner in the next strand of the double yarnover, purl 4. For rows 5 and 7, knit 1, knit 2 together, make a double yarnover, slip-slip-knit; repeat from * to * once; knit 1. On rows 6 and 8, purl 2, knit the strands of the double yarnover in the same way as in row 2, purl 2, knit the double yarnover strands as before, purl 2. Repeat these eight rows as many times as desired for pattern. Since this is an open eyelet type of pattern stitch, it will be looser in gauge than the stockinette stitch you are using for the balance of the garment. If you are making only one panel in any one garment piece, you may not have to make any adjustment. But if you are making more than one, you will surely need to reduce the total number of pieces in that section or your garment will be too large. Just how many stitches you need to subtract depends upon the weight of your yarn and the gauge you are working in. Use the sample swatch to determine this. Cast on 30 stitches. Work 10 in stockinette, 10 in pattern and 10 more in stockinette. After working a few inches, take the stitches off the needles and measure the separate panels. Then if, for example, your stockinette panels measure 2 inches and your lace panel measures 2 and 2/5 inches, you would subtract 2 stitches from each section for every panel added. Quite often in this column I give pattern stitch directions, so keep watching for other ideas for stitches that you can adapt to basic directions.

Future Is In The East

In a time when most economic news seems to be dismal, it is not always easy to envision bright and prosperous times ahead for our region.

We can be assured, however, that they are there. The United States is still a nation in search of the kind leadership which can grapple with the modern day problems that this nation faces.

As of now the search has been disastrous but we can be assured that the leadership is developing somewhere which can carry the United States in the direction of fulfilling its still unrealized potential.

When that occurs Eastern North Carolina will be in a prime position to share in the development and prosperity... not in the old sense of destroying environment and misusing our resources, but rather by living in harmony with nature and developing a better life for everyone.

Acting ECU Chancellor Dr. John Howell sees a promising future for his institution and he bases that on the outlook for Eastern North Carolina.

The acting chancellor sees ECU located "in an area that is developing... with space to develop, the population is going to grow." The university, in response to the needs of the people it serves, will play a large part in the planned development and growth of the region.

East Carolina, the acting chancellor predicted, "could be one of the major university centers of the country in another 75 years. I don't see any problems." Our climate is good, and there is space for growth. "It's a good place for a person in higher education to be."

Not only is this an area where those in higher education will want to locate, but it is also an area where responsible industries will want to build in order to attract the high technology people they will need. Not only will they want to locate here but they will want to help maintain the positive features of Eastern North Carolina.

Thus the future is bright for the East. If it doesn't seem all that positive at the moment we should be setting our sites a little further in the future. As much as anything our nation is going through great change as it attempts to cope with major technological and social change. The leadership we need will develop, and it is virtually a certainty that Eastern North Carolina will be at the forefront in the prosperous times that will be coming.

HARDLY THE IDEAL POLL-WATCHER!

Costly Trip Quietly Hit

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — President

Reagan has quietly cracked down on frivolous travel abroad in costly government-owned airplanes by high- and middle-level bureaucrats. His personally signed order was written with the help of national security adviser William P. Clark. It reminded touring bureaucrats that "such travel... is in itself a part of our foreign policy" and must be "for specific reasons which are consistent with our overall national security policy," limited to "as small as possible" a number of officials.

The crackdown is overdue. To police non-essential travel in the future, the president will insist that "with as much advance notice as possible," the itinerary, names of officials, objectives of the trip and list of "events, meetings and appearances" must be given to Clark for advance approval.

White House Hardnose
As a sign of the political muscle it intends to wield in the 1982 campaign, the White House threatened to fire Thorne G. Auchter as head of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) unless he rescinded politically-embarrassing job reductions in Rhode Island.

Auchter's plan to downgrade OSHA's Providence office and remove more than half its employees was strenuously opposed by Republican senator John Chafee of Rhode Island, a longtime supporter of the controversial agency. Chafee was outraged. Reagan aides, no friends of OSHA, worried that the rebuff would undermine Chafee's prestige in his re-election bid this year in heavily-Democratic Rhode Island. In the eyes of the White House, that danger was magnified by the increase in OSHA staffing in neighboring Massachusetts, where Sen. Edward M. Kennedy also faces re-election this year.

Auchter refused to change his plans. His boss, Secretary of Labor Raymond Donovan, refused to intervene. It was then that presidential aides told Auchter, a building contractor from Jacksonville, Fla., who is new to politics, that he would be fired unless plans were changed. Auchter promptly restored Rhode Island's OSHA contingent.

Nixon's Advice
Former president Richard M. Nixon has passed this advice to the White House: Send out both Vice President George Bush and Rep. Jack Kemp on nationwide barnstorming tours as twin — and competing — Republican point men for the 1982 campaign.

It is a typically-Nixonian solution to the lack of a Republican tough guy to scourge the Democrats this year, in the mold of Vice President Spiro T. Agnew in 1970 and Vice President Richard M. Nixon in the 1950s. Bush is a "good guy," clearly not cut out for hatchetman.

So, Nixon told a presidential aide, why not use Kemp (another "good guy") and Bush, potential future rivals for the Republican presidential nomination? The news media could be counted on to join in the contest of determining which one did the best job.

Seeking A Senator
New York state Republican leaders are talking about ex-Treasury secretary William Simon and present Housing and Urban Development secretary Samuel Pierce as possible recruits to take on Democratic senator Daniel Patrick Moynihan this year.

Simon, a New Jersey resident though his office is in Manhattan, is being boosted by Nassau County Chairman Joe Margiotta. Other Republican leaders may ask the White House to prevail on Pierce, a prominent New York City lawyer, to come home and run against Moynihan.

Both Simon and Pierce (who is black) are longshots. The talk about them reflects growing concern in Republican circles. State GOP Chairman George Clark has privately given up trying to talk businessman Lewis Lehrman into running for senator instead of governor. Clark grumbles that the White House and Senate give much lip service to pushing Lehrman into the Senate race but have yet to lift a finger toward that end.

Are Venus Probes Scientific?

The space race was something of the 1950s and 1960s which ended with the United States putting men on the moon, a feat which has still not been equalled by the Soviets or any other nation.

That is not to say the Russians have lost interest in space, however. Last week they landed two space probes on Venus. It followed a series of Venus landings with unmanned craft.

It is tempting to wonder what the Soviets are up to. The tendency is to feel that every move they make is connected with the military. Perhaps not in this case, but certainly if the mission is scientific, the Soviets will be more than willing to share the data with scientists of other nations.

The Rehnquist Court?

WASHINGTON — In the current issue of The New Republic, two writers bewail the role of the Supreme Court of Justice William Rehnquist. He emerges from their lamentation as a judicial activist who distorts precedents and manipulates records, the better to gain his invidious ends. The writers find his influence altogether evil. I find his influence altogether splendid.

The two critics are Owen Fiss, a professor of law at Yale, and Charles Krauthammer, a senior editor of the magazine. Their article provokes a few observations about Justice Rehnquist and about the larger issue of federalism also.

Can today's court fairly be called "The Rehnquist Court"? I wish it were so, but it takes a vivid imagination to accord such dominance to Rehnquist. This is nobody's court, but that is a condition that has obtained more often than not. A long time ago we had a Marshall Court, and largely because of one fatal opinion we had a Taney Court, and in our own time we had the Warren Court. Today's court lacks definable direction. It just drifts along.

Last term the court handed down opinions in 126 argued cases. Rehnquist was par for the course: He wrote 14 of them. Only three of the 13 were even modest landmarks, and only one of the three had anything to do with state and federal relations. This is hardly the stamp of some born-again Calhoun. The two critics name Rehnquist "the leader," but it seems a doubtful appellation. Rehnquist participated in 84 cases last term in which the court divided; he was on the losing side in 23 of them, and the 23 included some major cases involving free expression, labor law and sexual discrimination.

The New Republic finds it "astonishing" that Rehnquist and Chief Justice Burger voted together so often. The two conservatives disagreed in only 11 of the 120 cases in which they both took part. But that was no more astonishing than the unity of the two liberal justices, Brennan and Marshall. They disagreed only 10 times out of 123.

The gravamen of the magazine's attack on Rehnquist is that the justice is successfully pressing his ideas of "state autonomy" on his colleagues. The two critics are themselves apostles of national power. They declare it "a fact" that today the states, and not the federal government, pose the greatest danger to liberty. But surely that is a curious "fact." If Memphis closes a city street, or Mobile changes its local government, or San Diego regulates billboards, the purported dangers are at least confined. When a president orders draft registration, or Congress sanctions racial discrimination, it's a different matter.

To The New Republic, every vestige of state sovereignty went down the drain at Appomattox. The resulting Reconstruction Amendments, they contend, "denied that the states have a 'separate' and 'independent' existence" and "repudiated the doctrine of dual sovereignty." The contention is passing strange. In its very opening sentence, the 14th Amendment affirms that all persons born or naturalized in the U.S. are citizens both of the United States "and of the state wherein they reside." If that is a repudiation of dual sovereignty, the framers of the amendment chose peculiar words to express their intention.

In my own view, and in the view of most conservatives, Rehnquist is on the right track. In what is known as the Usery case, he mobilized a five-man majority in support of the position that Congress may not nullify a state's power to fix the wages and hours of its own employees. In the Pennhurst case, he pulled together a six-man majority in support of the idea that Congress may not impose fiscally ruinous obligations upon the states without their consent. In a dozen criminal cases, he has steadfastly promoted the old concept that state courts should be accorded more (Please turn to Page 5)

THIS AFTERNOON

What Is Wrong?

By BILL NOBLITT (First of Two Articles)
RALEIGH — Most citizens don't fully grasp the enormity of the problem surrounding membership on various state government boards and commissions by the members of the General Assembly.

We learned, of course, in civics classes that the executive and the legislative branches of government should be separate. It has to do with the balance of power. But what does that mean?

The business of government is raising money — taxation — and spending it — allocation. Who determines who pays how much, and who determines who gets to spend how much for what purpose is powerful.

The General Assembly is supposed to be the board of directors for state government. Members should get reports on what is happening, listen to proponents of various causes and determine whether government should respond, put forth ideas and objections, and monitor the budget.

Employees
The executive branch is supposed to be the "hired hands" working full-time every day to make the enormously intricate machinery run smoothly and efficiently. When an employee wants to make a suggestion, put forth an idea, propose a new and better way, he is supposed to take the matter up with the board of directors who will make a decision.

In sum, legislators are actually supposed to be rather remote from the daily grind of state government. They are supposed to sit in judgement on programs and plans, and pass judgement on spending proposals and taxation schemes. It is then up to the hired hands to carry out their instructions and answer to the directors if anything fouls up.

Now there are about 400 boards, commissions, or councils in the executive branch of government, in 15 departments. While membership is not limited to employees of state government, many are mostly composed of such. There are others as well: laymen, professors, experts... The General Assembly has lately taken to spelling out quite narrow particulars for membership on certain boards to the end that only one person can possibly qualify — that one person being already in the mind of the legislator establishing the qualifications.

Despite the makeup of membership, those various boards are indeed "hired hands" because they are (Please turn to Page 5)

To the editor:

Twelve years ago the Environmental Protection Agency banned all dumping of nuclear waste into USA coastal waters because of serious health questions about the effects of this dumping on humans. Now, because of mounting stockpiles of nuclear wastes which no one wants, the EPA is planning to reverse itself and drop that ban. New regulations that would allow ocean dumping of radioactive wastes, including the sinking of radioactive submarines, are now being written by the EPA.

The USA Navy says that the coast of North Carolina is the probable dumpsite for the disposal of its radioactive submarines if these regulations are adopted. If the Navy establishes the coast of North Carolina as a dumpsite, we can only suspect that other waste producers will want to use the same dumpsite to dispose of their nuclear garbage.

Proponents of nuclear dumping tell us the oceans are so big that the waste will be diluted and will never affect humans. Studies of past nuclear dumpsites off the coast of California show the opposite is true. Research scientists have traced radionuclides from those dumpsites to the fish markets of San Francisco. Jackson Davis, an environmental studies professor and head of the Psychobiology Department at the University of California, Santa Cruz, says regarding ocean nuclear dumping, "You could not design a better way to put radioactivity into our food."

Jon Hinck, spokesperson for the Greenpeace USA environmental organization says, "The history of ocean dumping shows that all the promises of eternal safety have been consistently exaggerated. If radioactive waste goes into coastal waters, one day it will come back to us."

Unless the citizens of North Carolina become actively involved in protesting this ludicrous EPA plan, the coast of North Carolina may eventually become a nuclear graveyard. The time to act is now, before it's too late. I urge each citizen to light up our elected representatives' switchboards and express our horror that such a plan is even being considered.

Not Quite As It Was Planned

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — When

worried critics of Lyndon Johnson's policies said he was risking inflation, among other things, the president called them nervous Nellies.

Unable to generate enthusiasm for his policies, Jimmy Carter retreated to Camp Davis to figure it all out, returning after a week or so to explain that a malaise affected the American people.

And now, as businesses fail and jobs are lost and criticism of his economic governance grows, Ronald Reagan brushes off his attackers as sob sisters, the suggestion being they are weak and emotional.

In such ways do presidents defend themselves and their policies and, it seems entirely possible, maybe hide from painful realities too.

President Johnson's guns and butter policy — war against communists in Vietnam, war against poverty at home — may have ignited the inflation that exists to this day. The Nellies seem to have been right.

History has yet to complete its judgment, but the malaise referred to by President Carter may have been his rather than the people's, and President Reagan's dismissal of critics may be a refusal to face facts.

The fact is that business groups which supported him in the past and continue to hope for success of his economic program — big business and small, and Wall Street among them — have grave and growing doubts about his budget deficit and high interest rates.

The essence of criticism is that the supply-side economics practiced by Reagan is not supplying the private sector with energy needed to get the economy going again. High interest, it is said, destroys supply.

Examples of this are found everywhere.

Households that benefit from tax cuts still cannot buy homes because the costs of financing take too great a share of monthly income.

Builders cannot build because borrowing costs produce expenses that, in a poor market, cannot be passed along in selling prices.

Automobile users continue to drive older cars rather than retiring them and buying new vehicles, one reason being that high interest rates make monthly charges prohibitive.

Businesses in general, it is claimed, cannot expand and modernize so long as the high level of interest rates pushes capital costs to levels that do not permit a satisfactory net return.

"At the current high level of interest rates it makes little economic sense to invest in new plant and equipment," says John Wright of Wright Investors' Service, a financial advisory and management firm.

Wright, founder of the Bridgeport, Conn. firm, and before that the founder of a manufacturing company, observes that only a few percentage points separate the current return on equity of the Standard & Poor's

Strength For Today

THE SIXTH SENSE

If anyone ever possessed a sense by which he could almost invariably tell which stocks would rise in the market, or which horse to bet on, or which team would surely win, he would certainly value that sense very highly.

Actually, all of us possess such a sense, except that it applies to more important matters than picking winners or making money. All of us, by nature and training, have a conscience. It should and can be a most decisive voice in many of life's most decisive issues. What can possibly be more important than conduct, or than character, which both shapes and is shaped by conduct?

Like our other senses, conscience needs to be used and exercised if it is to work well. We should call it out whenever we can. We do not want it to be sluggish. And especially, we should never disregard its voice. That can become a dangerous habit; dangerous to ourselves and to others.

Our best friend is our conscience. — Elisha Douglas

Both Sides

A countdown shows that members of the General Assembly actually sit on 90 of those executive boards, either required in those seats by the law governing the particular commission, appointed by their peers because of their relationships, or named by the governor as a reward for services to him.

So what if a legislator or two sit on a board? There would be any number of others on that body. In practice, though, all those others turn to the legislators as the source of wisdom and insight as to what the group is supposed to do, what the law is, and what it should do to get favorable treatment in the legislative halls.

And then, then the legislator goes back to the Legislative Building to become the sponsor of legislation affecting that particular board or commission. Further, his friends and colleagues look upon him as the resident expert so that when a question of money or law comes up regarding that particular agency, that particular lawmaker — working both ends against the middle — is in charge on critical matters affecting both day-to-day execution of government business, and of making law affecting that program. IN-BODY PUMP — The Food and Drug Administration Monday approved the first drug pump that can be implanted entirely inside the body, to prolong lives of liver cancer patients and to treat blood clotting disorders. Top photo shows the actual pump and bottom is a diagram of the inside of the device. (AP Laserphoto)

Implantable Pump Is Given FDA's Approval

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new type of drug pump, the first that can be implanted inside a patient's body, offers hope of longer lives to liver cancer victims and thousands of others suffering from other problems, says the Food and Drug Administration.

The FDA, which approved the new device Monday, says it can add more than two years to the life expectancy of liver cancer patients and prevent blood clots in victims of phlebitis and other ailments.

The agency also is studying the pump as a way to dispense drugs to treat brain tumors or insulin for diabetics.

FDA Commissioner Arthur Hull Hayes Jr. noted that 9,400 people who might otherwise die of liver cancer each year could be helped by the drug pump, as could the 745,000 who suffer from phlebitis and the 50,000 whose deaths are linked with pulmonary embolisms.

The drug pump, which provides continuous drug therapy, can be inserted in the chest or abdomen. Previous such devices had to be worn outside the body.

The new pump, made of stainless steel, titanium and silicon rubber, was invented by Dr. Henry Buchwald of the University of Minnesota. Infusaid Corp. of Sharon, Mass., manufactures the device, which weighs 6.3 ounces, 3.5 inches across and one inch thick.

Dr. William Ensminger, associate director of the University of Michigan's Clinical Research Center, said the pump "enables us to extend life expectancy from about four to six months to beyond two years" for liver cancer patients.

Experimental work with the pump revealed an 85 percent remission rate for liver cancer patients, said Ensminger.

Implantation of a drug pump will lessen the need for hospitalization and, in the case of patients with clotting problems, the need for a painful and expensive series of injections. It can be refilled by a family physician using a hypodermic needle.

Liver cancer patients who were given drug pumps experienced fewer side effects than with other cancer treatments because the pump delivers the drug treatment directly to the cancer site without significant deposits in other parts of the body, the FDA said. Those side effects include nausea, vomiting and a lowered blood cell count.

For patients with clotting problems such as phlebitis and pulmonary embolisms, the drug pump with few exceptions helped free them of pain and enabled them to carry on active lives, according to the government. About 92 percent of the patients with previously untreatable clotting disorders had no recurrence of the disease during research tests with the pumps.

Phlebitis is a painful inflammation of the veins. Pulmonary embolisms are life-threatening blood clots in the vessels between the heart and lungs. They are the primary cause of 12,000 deaths and a contributory cause in 38,000 other deaths each year.

"He's just too diffident," one well-placed GOP tactician told us. "Diffidence may be admirable in some fields, but not for a political candidate." The complaint is that Laingen for months had every opportunity to pin down the Republican nomination by announcing his candidacy, but instead has professed self-doubt and displayed timidity.

A footnote: The principal announced candidate against liberal Democratic senator Paul Sarbanes is Lawrence Hogan, controversial county executive in suburban Prince Georges County, adjoining Washington. Hogan trails Sarbanes but is considered a possible winner because of support, shown in the polls, from conservatives, blue-collar workers and — surprisingly — blacks.

U.S. Attacks Soviet Union Use Of 'Yellow Rain'

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, stepping up its public charges that the Soviet Union is using chemical warfare in Afghanistan, says thousands of people have died in recent Soviet chemical attacks on the Afghans. The chemical strikes are "a particularly heinous aspect" of the Soviet camaign to subdue Afghan rebels that has been going on since the Red Army entered Afghanistan more than two years ago, a top State Department official told Congress Monday. At least 3,042 people have been killed by chemical attacks in Afghanistan since the occupation began, deputy secretary of state Walter J. Stoessel Jr. told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Since last fall, a number of administration officials, including Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., have charged the Soviets with using chemical warfare in Afghanistan and also with supplying chemical weapons that are being used in Laos and Cambodia. Critics have challenged the administration to show proof and Monday's testimony was the most detailed yet offered. Stoessel said information from Afghan military defectors and refugees added up to 3,042 deaths from 47 Soviet chemical attacks since the occupation began in December 1979. But that total only includes incidents about which the State Department has detailed information, according to Phillip Stoddard, deputy assistant secretary for intelligence and research. He said he was sure the overall total is "considerably higher," and later amended that estimate to "quite a bit higher." Last month, Haig said in an interview that the Soviet chemical attacks have killed "scores of thousands of non-combatants" in the three nations. A classified National Intelligence Estimate has been prepared by the CIA to support the U.S. charges. The Soviets have denied the contentions, saying they are only U.S. propaganda and are designed to win support for new production of U.S. chemical weapons, which have not been made since 1969.

Some version of the CIA study, which is said to be several hundred pages long, will be made public within the next few weeks, sources have said. Stoessel told the panel Monday that the department will give its evidence "in the very near future" to a United Nations subcommittee created last year to investigate the charges. According to the Stoessel, the Soviets are using a variety of chemical weapons, including "irritants, incapacitants, nerve agents, phosgene oxime and mycotoxins, mustard, lewisite and toxic smoke." Stoessel estimated that the Soviets have about 100,000 soldiers in Afghanistan and have suffered 10,000 to 15,000 casualties. About 3 million Afghans, "almost one-fifth of the pre-invasion population," have become refugees with many of them going to neighboring Pakistan, he said.

Asthma Education Program In April

An asthma family-education program for children ages 5 to 15 and their parents will be sponsored by the American Lung Association of North Carolina, Eastern Region. The program will be held on five consecutive Wednesday nights beginning April 1 and concluding on April 29.

All sessions will be held between 6:30 and 8:30 p.m. at the Brewster Building, Rooms B204 and B205, at East Carolina University.

Deborah Bryan, regional director of the American Lung Association, said the program is designed to increase the family's knowledge about asthma and to enhance the child's confidence through better knowledge and increased participation in physical activity.

Enrollment is limited to 20 families and the association said that, if possible, both parents should attend the classes with their children. A $10 registration fee, is charged to cover the use of the facilities. A limited number of scholarships will be available for families who meet eligibility requirements for a reduced fee.

The weekly sessions will include breathing exercises, basic asthma education, mechanism of asthma, evaluation, signs and symptoms and other related topics. At each session the children will be involved in swimming.

The members of the program staff are Dr. Jarrett Barnhill, Dr. Sudesh Kataria, Dr. Yash Kataria, Dr. Jim Nickelsen and Rhonda Stanley, all with the ECU School of Medicine. Also, Dr. Michael Bramley, pediatrician; Frank Harper, physical therapist; Bill Young and Shelton Dixon, respiratory therapists, and Ms. Bryan.

Families may register for the program by calling the American Lung Association at 752-5093 between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Appointed To Committee

Nancy M. Jenkins of Greenville has been named to the Executive Mansion Fine Arts Committee by Gov. Jim Hunt.

The committee consists of 16 members, all appointed by the governor, each serving four years. Its function is to advise the secretary of cultural resources on the preservation of the executive mansion and to make recommendations to the secretary on any renovations necessary to preserve the building.

Mrs. Jenkins is the wife of former East Carolina University Chancellor Leo W. Jenkins. She is past coordinator of consultation and education of the Pitt County Mental Health Center and is a former chairman of the Greenville Board of Education.

More Jobless

Unemployment in the Greenville labor area climbed from 5.9 percent in November to 8.2 percent in January, the Employment Security Commission reported today.

The civilian labor force in Pitt and Greene counties was estimated at 54,440 in January, up 1,340 from the mid-November total of 53,100. Total unemployment, estimated at 4,470, was up 43.3 percent from the mid-November total of 3,120.

Industry employment by place of work showed losses across the board except for modest gains in textiles (up 40) and transportation, communications, and public utilities (up 30). Primary losses involving over 100 workers were noted in the following industry groups: transportation equipment (down 100), tobacco (down 470), construction (down 100) and government (down 290).

The two-county breakout of the labor force for the month of January was:

•Pitt County — labor force, 46,110; employment total, 42,250; unemployment total, 3,860; unemployment rate, 8.4.
•Greene County — labor force, 8,330; employment total, 7,720; unemployment total, 610; unemployment rate, 7.3.

Grifton Council's Officers Selected

GRIFTON — Ray Wooten has been named chairman of the board and Ervin Gray executive vice president of the newly formed Grifton Council of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

Other officers are Myra Day, vice chairman of budget and finance; Richard McLawhorn, vice chairman of community development; Mike Phillips, vice chairman of economic and industrial development; Ervin Gray, vice chairman of organization and membership; and Russell Houston, vice chairman of public and governmental affairs.

Other directors for 1982 are Jerry Cox, Roger Davenport, Brenda Gray, A.D. Hicks, Leon Patrick, Leatrice Powers, Dr. William E. Rasberry, Odessa Rogers, Jesse Williams, Ralph Thaxton and Alton Gardner. A program of work has been developed by the Grifton Council to be implemented through the volunteer efforts of the citizens and business community of the town. The program will include a promotion of recreational programs and the development of an informational brochure to promote Grifton. Other concerns are the revitalization of the downtown area and the recruitment of industry.

The new council has 20 members and will seek new members to be part of the organization.

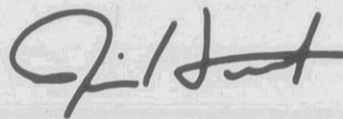

The Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce is now the largest business and professional organization east of Raleigh. The chamber represents four councils in Pitt County. There are over 800 members in the combined councils of Ayden, Bethel, Greenville and Grifton.

OUR FUTURE BEGINS NOW

What do you want North Carolina to be like in the year 2000? Planning for our future is too important to be left only to government. So the Commission on the Future of North Carolina, chaired by William C. Friday of the University of North Carolina, and leading citizens in all 100 counties, are working together in an effort called NC 2000 to find out what the citizens of our State want our future to be.

The questionnaire below has been prepared to give you a chance to say what you like about this State and what you think needs to be improved.

I urge you to speak out now. Together we can make a difference. This is what NC 2000 is all about.

1. The Commission believes the following qualities are important for North Carolina to have in the future. Please check the ten (10) you feel are most important.

- a. Adequate, affordable housing
- b. Enough good jobs
- c. An adequate, clean water supply
- d. Adequate protection from crime
- e. Adequate health care services
- f. Help for the needy
- g. Enough good farm land to keep agriculture strong
- h. Adequate community services (such as fire protection and sewer lines)
- i. Good quality education for our children
- j. Opportunities for job training for new workers and those who must change jobs
- k. A clean, beautiful, and healthy environment
- l. Cultural activities (such as art, music, theater)
- m. Good roads
- n. Recreational opportunities
- o. Controlled growth and prevention of urban sprawl
- p. Adequate mental health services
- q. Colleges that are affordable and high quality
- r. Efficient state and local governments
- s. Adequate energy
- t. Regard for the dignity and worth of every person
- u. Clean, fresh air
- v. Fair system of taxes

2. If there are important qualities missing from the list above, add those by filling in the blanks below:

w. _____
x. _____

3. In the future, which three of the qualities checked or added previously do you think will be the most important to improve?

(Use the list to find the letter of the item which should be improved and fill in below.)

- _____ most important to improve
- _____ second most important to improve
- _____ third most important to improve

4. In the future, which three of the qualities checked or added previously do you think will be the most important to keep as they are? (Use the list to find the letter of the item which should be kept and fill in below.)

- _____ most important to keep
- _____ second most important to keep
- _____ third most important to keep

5. How old are you? _____ years

6. What is your sex? 1—male 2—female

7. What is your race? 1—American Indian 3—White
2—Black 4—Other

8. What is the last year of school you completed? _____

9. What county do you live in? _____

10. If you had five minutes to spend with the Governor of North Carolina to talk about the future of the state, what else would you say?

Please mail your questionnaire to:

Piedmont Firm Seeks Expansion For Drink

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer
SALISBURY, N.C. (AP) — One 96-year-old Salisbury woman credited it with her longevity. A Colorado man flies into Salisbury periodically to pick up several cases. And in wartime, lovers of the beverage arranged to have it sent to foreign countries.

The object of such affection is Cheerwine, a mixture of cherry flavoring with cola pioneered by L.D. Peeler in 1917.

"From the stories I've heard, he (Peeler) came up with Cheerwine because the drink was red like wine and was fun to drink with all those little carbonation bubbles bouncing around," says Mark Ritchie, Peeler's great-grandson.

Despite the efforts to which some Cheerwine lovers have gone to maintain their supply, it still has a limited distribution. Until last year, the drink was distributed only in parts of North Carolina and South Carolina. Cheerwine now goes to Tennessee and Georgia and parts of Virginia.

Cheerwine was concocted as a result of the sugar shortage at the beginning of World War I in 1917. At that time, Peeler owned the Mint Cola Co. in Salisbury, which produced a soft drink called Mint Cola. But with very little sugar to sweeten his product, Peeler started testing different flavor combinations. When he hit on wild cherry flavoring mixed with Mint Cola, he knew he had a hit.

"We advertise Cheerwine as deliciously different and it is," says Ritchie, public relations officer for Cheerwine. "No other soft drink tastes quite like it and has the fizzy little bubbles that tickle your nose. It's the secret ingredients that make Cheerwine unique."

Cheerwine is made and bottled by Carolina Beverage Corp. and Piedmont Cheerwine Bottling Co., two companies owned by Peeler's son and his family. The companies share a 35,000-square-foot, red-brick building on the outskirts of Salisbury and produce about 14 million bottles of Cheerwine a year.

Ritchie says the main goal this year is to distribute Cheerwine all over North Carolina, not just west of Goldsboro.

The only Cheerwine production and bottling plant is located in Salisbury. Cheerwine is sold in other areas by distributors of other soft drinks, like Coca-Cola and Pepsi.

Until last year, Cheerwine officials depended heavily on word-of-mouth advertising to tout their product. But with a $250,000 advertising budget last year and again this year, Cheerwine is ready to take on the industry heavyweights.

"We plan to be more aggressive in our advertising to try to get a bigger share of the soft-drink market, but we don't plan any fancy song-and-dance type productions," Ritchie says of upcoming television spots being scheduled by a Charlotte advertising agency.

Cheerwine also plans to advertise in newspapers, radio spots and on billboards.

Brooklyn Bridge Maybe For Sale

Superior Court Report

NEW YORK (AP) — So you want to buy the Brooklyn Bridge? This time, the century-old landmark really might be for sale.

George Schoepfer, the Triborough Bridge and Tunnel Authority's executive officer, says he toyed seriously with the idea of selling the bridge recently while trying to figure out how to "catch up with the backlog of deferred maintenance."

"I didn't see any reason why we couldn't handle the financing, at least in part, in the private sector," he said. "With tolls, it would be a great business. After all, there are no free bridges. They're either toll supported or tax-supported."

There are other possible ways to solve the maintenance problem on the bridge, Schoepfer is quick to say. But, he adds, "I'd love to see it sold after all those jokes."

The following cases were disposed of during the February 15 term of Pitt County Superior Court.

James Arthur Acklin, Route 1, Bethel, assault, 30 days jail and pay $150 restitution.

Sylvester Daniels, Route 2, Farmville, accessory after fact of breaking, entering and larceny, dismissal by prosecutor.

Robin N. Davis, 606C West 14th St., possession of stolen property, 12 months jail suspended on payment of costs, restitution, 3 years probation.

Raymond Earl Ellis, Farmville, forgery, 1 year jail.

Richard Robin Evans, 206 Evanswood Dr., assault, not guilty.

Charles Randall Goodman, 207 Allendale Dr., driving under influence, 90 days jail, suspended on payment of $100 and costs, attend alcohol school.

Snodie Douglas Haddock, Route 1, Grifton, sexual offense by substitute parent, 3 years jail.

Kenneth Harper, 1108 Legion St., possession of stolen property, 12 months jail suspended on payment of costs, restitution, 3 years probation.

Lizzie Harris, Route 5, Greenville, voluntary manslaughter, 15 years jail.

Marion Dawson Lewis, 1307 West 4th St., carrying concealed weapon, shoplifting, 18 months jail suspended on payment of costs, 3 years probation.

James Mark McCormick, Route 2, Winterville, careless and reckless driving, 60 days jail suspended on payment of $100 and costs.

Gregory Kent Moore, 313 South Evans St., stop light violation, dismissal by prosecutor.

Willie Lee Morris III, 901 West Fourth St., larceny, 12 months jail suspended on payment of costs, 2 years probation.

Richard C. Payton, Route 1, Fountain, accessory after fact of breaking, entering and larceny, dismissal by prosecutor.

Kenneth Allen Taylor, Old Tar Road, assault on female, 2 years jail.

Anthony Taylor, 403B Dudley St., armed robbery, dismissal by prosecutor.

Gregory Taylor, 403B Dudley St., damage to real property (2 counts), possession of stolen property, armed robbery (2 counts), 18 years jail; driving under the influence, no operators license, dismissal by prosecutor.

NEW YORK (AP) - Stock prices continued their decline today, following a drop Monday to the lowest level in nearly two years.

The noon Dow Jones industrial average was down 5.71 at 789.76, after a drop of more than 11 points Monday. Losers had an 8-1 edge on gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Many investors sold off on Monday as prices plummeted amid concern about the recessed economy. Today, President Reagan was to meet with Republican Senate leaders and committee chairmen on Capitol Hill and there were signs that the White House would modify its position on spending, which could influence the projected deficits that have many investors concerned.

RCA led the most active list, up 3/4 at 19 1/2, on reports of a takeover by Bendix and a heated exchange of statements Monday by the two companies.

The NYSE's composite index of more than 1,500 common stocks gave up 0.37 to 61.66. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off 3.67 to 240.99. Volume on the Big Board reached 31.56 million shares in the first two hours, up from 29.31 million on Monday.

Marathon Oil, whose shareholders will vote on U.S. Steel's takeover on Thursday, rose 3/4 to 75 1/2.

Middle South Utilities led the decliners on the Big Board, down 3/4 at 13 3/4. Texas International was off 3/4 at 11 1/4.

to build a line to CP&L connection points. He also explained that, if a refund were given each customer, that refund would be so small it would hardly be noticed.

Use of the refund for the power line "would save the town from having to borrow the money, since the line will have to be constructed. We're already committed to Greenville Utilities to build it," Crawford said.

Sandra Hardison, director for the Winterville-Ayden-Grifton Child Development Center in Grifton, explained to the board the work of the center. She said federal funding for the center probably will be cut. In the event of major cuts, she said, the center will need the support of the Winterville community.

Ms. Hardison presented the board with letters from parents and Pitt County officials stating the need for the center.

The center deals with physically and mentally handicapped children that Pitt County schools can not accommodate. It now serves 18 students and over the past eight years has served about 78 children.

Mayor E. C. Hines read a letter from Pitt County Fire Marshal Bobby Joyner asking for the town's support for the disaster plan that can be used for natural and man-made disasters. The board agreed to support the plan.

Hines reported that painting of the water tank had been completed and inspected. He added the newer tank was inspected and would need painting in about two or three years.

A water tap connection for the Winter Forest Condominium project was discussed and the town decided to use two three-inch meters from the six-inch water main.

The board also voted to discontinue water sales for farm use this summer. Town Clerk Nobles said only two people have contacted his office about obtaining the water.

Hines reported a check had been received from Greenville Cable TV for the 3 percent franchise revenue. The check totaled $1,410.

Bruce Gray of Winterville Recreation Inc. asked the board for help in getting a small ditch dug on the new recreation department land. The board approved the town performing the work.

Hines read a proclamation from Gov. Jim Hunt designing March 7-13 as Women's History Week in North Carolina. The board approved the proclamation.

City Counts 2 Collisions

An estimated $2,500 property damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Monday.

Police reported a car driven by Ruth Ann Hodge of Route 5, Rutherfordton, failed to stop for a stop sign at the intersection of 14th Street and Red Banks Road about 2:20 a.m., and ran into the yard of the Quincy A. Burroughs residence, striking the house.

Officers, who charged Ms. Hodge with failing to stop for a stop sign and leaving the scene of an accident, estimated damage at $1,200 to the car and $500 to the Burroughs yard and home.

Cars driven by Allen Ray Forrest of 494 Eleanor St., Diana Gale McCormick of 102F Cedar Court and Mary Lee Crisp of Shady Knoll Trailer Park, collided about 6:01 p.m. at the intersection of 10th and Ernul streets.

Investigators, who charged Ms. McCormick with failing to reduce her speed enough to avoid an accident, estimated damage at $400 to the Forrest car, $350 to the McCormick vehicle and $50 to the Crisp car.

refund, too," he added. Town officials stated they did not know why demand meters had been installed solely on those buildings, which include the First Baptist Church, the First Baptist Church and the Ayden United Methodist Church. The board voted last month to remove these meters from all churches.

A motion made by Marvin (Bear) Baldree Jr. to allow the churches a refund was not seconded and a later motion by J. J. Brown calling for study of the circumstances was withdrawn after discussion.

"We have contacted a lawyer," Fussell told the board, "and we will be back."

Sandra Hardison of the Ayden-Grifton Winterville Child Development Center requested that the board "realize our facility is there and give us any support you can."

"We serve 18 mentally and emotionally handicapped children," she said. "Most of these are referred to us by agencies or the school system."

"Many people do not know," she continued, "even after we've been in the county for numerous years and in Grifton for five years, that we are here. We'd appreciate it if you could in-

Store Operator Is Fatally Shot

PINETOPS - The owner-operator of a country store at Cobb's Crossroads two miles southeast of here was murdered Monday night while leaving the store at closing time.

A spokesperson for the Edgecombe County Sheriff Department said Fred Speight Jr., 36, apparently died beside his truck in the parking lot of the store after being shot an unconfirmed number of times. She said Speight's family reported he called home at 11 p.m. and said he was on the way. When he had not arrived by 11:30 p.m., his mother went to check on him and found him. The store money box was missing.

An intensive investigation was under way by the Edgecombe County Sheriff Department, assisted by the State Bureau of Investigation.

Speight, who had succeeded his father in the operation of the family business, was the father of three children, 12 to 16. His family lives in Pinetops.

UNC Retains Top Spot In Both Polls

From Wire Reports
When Dean Smith suggests his No.1 ranking really isn't worth all that much and Ray Meyer is joking about his No.2 position, you know one thing — the NCAA college basketball tournament is at hand.

Smith and his North Carolina team Monday retained the top spot in the final Associated Press college basketball poll for the 1981-82 season, collecting 47 of 59 first-place votes. The Tar Heels, who were the preseason favorite and held the nation's top spot for 10 of 15 polling weeks, received 1,162 of a possible 1,180 points.

It also earned North Carolina, 27-2, the top seed in East regional of the NCAA tournament.

"All the regionals are difficult, but I think ours is as strong or stronger than the others," said Smith, who has reached the Final Four six times without taking home the big prize. "We're happy to be playing in the East. However, that doesn't assure us of anything."

Meyer knows the feeling. His DePaul Blue Demons, who got 10 first-place votes and 1,100 points, have gone into the NCAA tournament the past two seasons with the top ranking and been ousted in their opening game.

"Now we're No.2, and that means we'll win our first game," said Meyer, now in his 40th season at DePaul, 26-1 and the first seed in the Midwest Regional. "It's a tough region. There are some good ballclubs in it and we still have to get by that first game."

Ralph Sampson, the player of the year last season, is hoping that third-ranked Virginia's season is just five games longer, with the final game at New Orleans against North Carolina.

"We're looking at four or five more games and being in New Orleans in late March," said the big center, who was upset that North Carolina slowed down the Atlantic Coast Conference championship game against Virginia.

"I guess they didn't think they could play with us," Sampson added. "We were just getting into the flow, then they went to the slow game. I guess they didn't think they could stop us."

The Cavaliers, who held the top spot for three weeks this season and are 29-3, got one No.1 vote and 1,067 points.

Oregon State and Missouri, the only other team to occupy the nation's top position, held the fourth and fifth positions, while Georgetown jumped from No.8 to sixth.

Oregon State also got a first-place vote and collected 869 points — eight more than Missouri and 13 more than Georgetown.

No. 6 Tigers Edge Pirate Nine, 2-1

CLEMSON, S.C. — Todd Hendley's error in the bottom of the ninth inning allowed Mark Davidson to score the winning run and lift sixth-ranked Clemson past East Carolina, 2-1, Monday in a college baseball game.

Davidson walked to lead off the ninth, sending ECU starter Bob Patterson to the dugout to be replaced by freshman Bob Davidson. Freshman Jim McCollum greeted Davidson with a double — his second of the day — that was just fair down the left field line.

ECU leftfielder John Hallow's throw to the plate held Davidson at third and the Tigers had runners at second and third with none out. David Lemaster, who hit a home run earlier in the game, was then intentionally walked to load the bases.

Bryan Smith followed with a grounder to third that Hendley failed to handle, allowing Davidson, a junior from Statesville, N.C., who transferred to Clemson this season from UNC-Charlotte, scampered home with the unearned run to give Clemson its 12th win in 13 outings this season.

The Pirates are now 2-1. Jimmy Key, 4-6 a year ago, went the distance to up his record to 4-0. Key, a left-hander, gave up five hits, struck out six and walked two.

Patterson took the loss, his first decision of the season. The senior lefty allowed only two hits while striking out seven and walking five — all five of which came in the last three innings.

The two hooked up in a tight pitching duel for the first eight innings. Clemson's lone run before the ninth came on a two-out home run by Lemaster in the second inning.

With two gone in the fourth inning, Hendley walked and Todd Evans reached on an infield single but Fran Fitzgerald flew out to right field to end the threat.

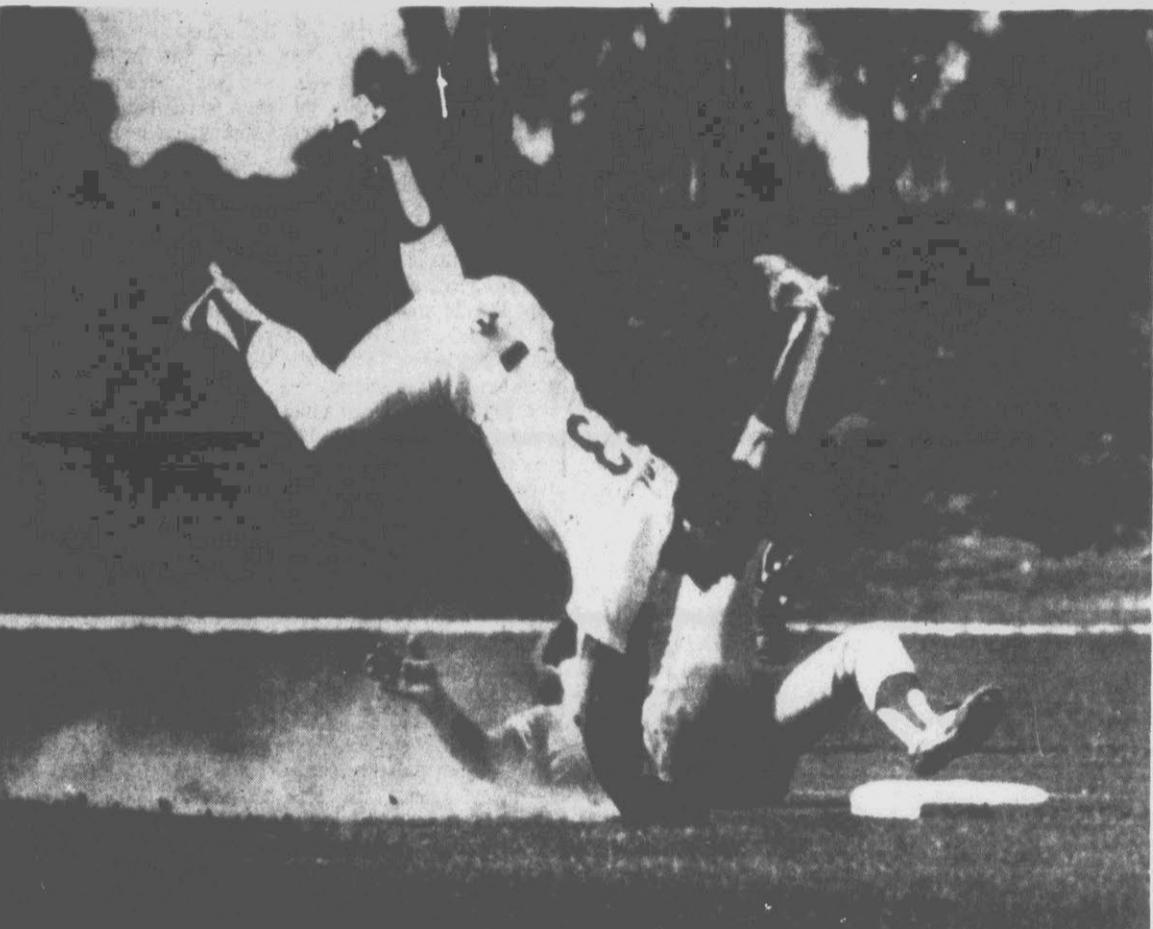

The Pirates threatened again in the fifth but were turned away once more. Cuck Bishop singled. Key then caught Bishop leaning the wrong way at first, but Bishop still managed to steal second.

Both runners moved up a base when Kelly Robinette grounded out, but Jack Curlings and Robert Wells both struck out to end the inning.

ECU finally tied it up in the sixth. Mike Sorrell reached second on a throwing error by Key and went to third on Hallow's sacrifice bunt. Sorrell was thrown out at the plate when he tried to score on Hendley's grounder to third for the second out of the inning.

ECU will face the Tigers again today. Ace Bill Wilder (1-0) will go for the Pirates today.

Oklahoma Meets Oral Roberts

NIT Opens Play Tonight

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma and Oral Roberts University, two teams not expected to make it to post-season play this year, open the National Invitational Tournament tonight at the Mabee Center.

The Sooners, who finished the Big Eight Conference season with a rush, and Oral Roberts, which is in a rebuilding year, received bids after losing in their conference post-season tournaments.

Oklahoma lost to Missouri 68-63 in the finals of the Big Eight tournament at Kansas City after finishing third in regular-season play. The Sooners had been picked to finish last at the start of the season.

The Missouri loss gave Oklahoma a 19-10 record. Oral Roberts lost to Xavier 74-71 in the opening round of the Midwestern City Conference tournament and finished 18-11.

Oral Roberts Coach Ken Hayes does not think the layoff will hurt the Titans.

"It's unfortunate for both teams that we don't have more time to prepare, but we're just happy to have the opportunity to play in the NIT," he said.

"Our dream all along was to be in post-season play. When the season started — with the NCAA (regional) tournament being here — we thought it would be nice to play here in that. But I don't think that was a realistic goal, with as young a club as we have."

Oral Roberts, which is making its fifth post-season appearance, was faced with only a slim NIT chance after the Xavier loss and had quit practicing.

The Titans have only one senior starter, guard Cat Johnson.

"We have to improve our offensive inside game," said Oklahoma Coach Billy Tubbs. "We have to have a guy who can score inside in a big, tough game."

David Little was most of Oklahoma's offense against Missouri, scoring a game-high 32 points.

Tubbs believes Oklahoma should have been picked instead of Kansas State, which finished second in regular Big Eight play, for the NCAA tournament. He pointed out the Sooners beat the Wildcats in two of three games during the year.

"Before the season, I thought there were two teams a cut above everyone in this league — Missouri and Kansas State," he said.

Deans: Panthers Ready For Southern Durham

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

BETHEL — During a dinner last Thursday evening, North Pitt coach Cobby Deans polled his players on who they believed would win when the Panthers face off against Southern Durham.

The ballots tallied, it came as no surprise that North Pitt was the unanimous choice. After all, the Panthers are not an unbiased electorate. Theirs is a body of 15 (plus coach) that stands just three games — 96 minutes — from the state 3-A championship.

Game No. 1 in the hoped-for three-game set comes Friday evening at 8:30 when North Pitt meets highly regarded Southern Durham in the first round of the 3-A Eastern Regionals at Wilson Beddingfield High School.

The Panthers (21-7) enter the game as the underdog. Led by highly recruited Curtis Hunter, the Spartans have lost only one game — an overtime loss to 4-A Kinston — in 26 outings this season.

But, Deans and the Panthers have taken their vote and made their choice and come Friday will be looking to produce the upset. The winner will play the survivor of the Bartlett Yancey-Warren County game Saturday night (8:30) for the regional title.

"When I called (to find out the pairings), I was hoping to hear another name," Deans said. "But then I thought about it and I said, 'You've got to play them so why not do it first.'"

"I really think we're ready to play," he added. "I wanted to play them tonight. I just think we're ready."

"Of course, what I've got to do this week is keep (the emotion) down till Wednesday. But this is a unique group of kids. I don't think the pressure bothers them. I want to say that, but I may be wrong."

Deans speaks from experience. He has been here before. This is the fourth straight year in the district playoffs for the Panthers under Deans. Prior to this season, however, North Pitt's last district championship came during the 1976-77 season.

North Pitt, with Donnie Perkins leading the way, downed Ayden-Grifton, 46-41, to win the title five years ago. The Panthers went on to down Madison-Mayodan, 66-64, and South Stokes, 47-39, before falling to Wake Forest-Rolesville, 48-42, in the 3-A championship game.

"I've learned to do the same things during the state tournament as you do during the regular season," Deans said. "You try to keep everything as close to the same as possible."

"You try to keep practice times the same and not too much hoo-haw, but you want some," he added. "You can't be looking back. It's what's before you that counts."

What is before the Panthers is Southern Durham, a team that is ranked #1 in the state in the latest AP poll and a team that may have the best high school basketball player in the state in Curtis Hunter.

None of that awes Deans, nor, he says, his players. "This is a confident group of kids," Deans said. "I think Curtis Hunter is going to have to play his best game."

"If he's as good as they say he is — and he probably is — he's going to have to prove it to about eight of us. We've got some pride down here and we're not gonna just roll over and die."

"The kids realize this is a big test, but they know what they've got to do."

One of Deans' immediate concerns as he readies for the Spartans this week is forward Dennis Bradley. Bradley, a 6-2 junior, sprained his right ankle with less than a minute to go in North Pitt's 37-25 win over D.H. Conley Tuesday night in the district finals.

"We've had ice on it on and off and I'm anxious to see how he'll do this week," Deans said. "It's a big question mark."

North Pitt will practice every day this week, with Monday and Tuesday devoted to reviewing the basics and fundamentals.

"It'll probably be the same thing we did the first week of practice," Deans said. "We'll work things like blocking out and man-to-man defense. Those are things that can lose you a ballgame and you don't want to let anything like that do that now."

Come Wednesday Deans will begin to

S. Cal Headed For Probation?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Southern California's football team could be placed on probation and put out of the bowl picture next year, the Los Angeles Times reported today.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association has been investigating reports that some of the school's football players sold their tickets at inflated prices.

The newspaper quotes a university source as saying the NCAA investigation has verified reports that assistant coach Marv Goux acted as ticket broker for the players, and that his role was more extensive than previously reported.

But the Times said there was no evidence Goux made a profit from the sales.

USC officials went before the NCAA infractions committee to defend the football program

ECU's Green On All-Region Club

DETROIT — East Carolina forward Charles Green has been selected as an honorable mention selection to Basketball Weekly's All-Atlantic Coast Region Team, it was announced today.

Green, a junior college transfer from Catonsville (Baltimore) Community College, was the Pirates' second leading scorer (11.3 points) and rebounder (4.3) this season.

Green (6-7, 200 pounds) is originally from Washington, D.C.

right there."

He said he believes Goux did not make any money in the deal.

"He didn't get anything out of it. He just kept the players happy. A player could get a couple thousand bucks, if you multiply 16 tickets or whatever it was by 100 or 200."

"Every guy who had his eyes and ears open in the old PE building, where the USC locker room used to be, saw it. Or, if you hung around the student union building where the coaches' offices were, you saw it."

Goux denied any role in the ticket sales when questioned by reporters in January, but the Times reported its source said Goux told the NCAA infractions committee of his "activities as a ticket broker."

Such a role could lead to a restriction of his recruitment activities even though the school has said he will not become the scapegoat for any violations.

The Times also said it is believed that some players testified before the committee about the sales.

The Miami News in 1979 reported that Richard Wood, now with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, said he got up to $500 from Goux for 10 Rose Bowl tickets. Wood later said he was misquoted.

Goux and the school's athletic director, Dick Perry, refused comment on the report.

"I was told by the president of the university that there is nothing I can say or do," Goux said. "When the university says that you can have a news conference with Marv Goux, then I'll do it."

Kelly Named USC Women's Coach

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Terry Kelly, the interim coach who directed the Lady Gamecocks to 15 wins in 22 games after the resignation of former Carolina women's head coach Pam Parsons, has been hired for that position, a university official announced Monday.

Kelly, 28, has guided the Lady Gamecocks to a 22-7 record and a berth in the first North Collegiate Athletic Association national tournament for women as interim coach this year.

Kelly was named acting head coach on Jan. 1 after the resignation of the controversial Parsons and has directed the team to 10 wins in its last 11 games. During that period, the Lady Gamecocks have beaten five teams ranked ahead of them in the Associated Press Top 20.

"Coach Kelly has demonstrated excellent leadership this season," University of South Carolina athletic director Bob Marcus said, in making the announcement.

The Lady Gamecocks will play host to East Carolina Sunday in a first-round Midwest Regional NCAA playoff game in the Carolina Coliseum.

If victorious, the team will travel to Ruston, La., to compete in the second round of the Midwest Regional on March 18.

They will probably be matched with top-ranked Louisiana Tech, Kentucky and Arizona State.

"We can play any six players

Bus Chartered For ECU-USC

Fans wanting to go the East Carolina-South Carolina women's tournament game Sunday but not wishing to drive are in luck — thanks to the ECU athletic ticket office.

The ticket office is sponsoring a chartered bus that will leave ECU at 8 a.m. Sunday and return after the 3 p.m. game. The bus will leave from the parking lot beside Minges Coliseum.

Seats on the bus are $23.50 per person, not including the price of the ticket to the game. Tickets to the game are $4 for adults and $2 for students with an ID card.

Interested persons should contact the ticket office before noon Thursday.

in the country," Kelly said. "Our first six are very talented, but we do have problems with depth and height. If we get past the first round, it will be quite a challenge to go up against teams like Kentucky and Louisiana Tech, provided they get that far."

Kelly, a native of Harriman, Tenn., became Carolina's assistant coach June 1, 1981, after four seasons in the same capacity at Tennessee Tech.

Now Brett Wants More Money

By The Associated Press
Everything's up to date in Kansas City. Now it's George Brett who wants more money.

The Kansas City Star — the newspaper, not the ballplayer — said in a story from the Royals' spring training camp Monday that Brett is seeking a contract similar to those recently signed by George Foster of the New York Mets (five years, $10 million) and Gary Carter of the Montreal Expos (eight years, $15 million).

"The whole situation regarding baseball salaries has changed since I signed my present contract," said the 28-year-old third baseman.

Brett is in the first year of a five-year pact he negotiated two years at an estimated annual salary of $900,000, plus a reported $500,000 signing bonus.

"At the time I was negotiating it, my father, (brother) Bobby and I agreed that if I could get to the million-dollar plateau things couldn't get any higher. Now, some guys are getting $2 million who have never hit .300. I've done it six times."

General Manager John Schuerholz said the Royals are willing to listen to Brett — the two have met five times in the last month — but no promises have been made.

"With a player of George's caliber, we're not going to say, 'See you later,'" Schuerholz said. "His is not an unreasonable request. We've never felt there were any threatening overtones, nothing along the lines of 'If you don't do this, I'll do that.' But there is a strong emotional feeling on George's part that he should be categorized with Foster, Carter, (Mike) Schmidt, and players of that caliber.

"We will give the request appropriate consideration to see if something should be done to make him a lifetime Royal."

The Royals' policy has been not to renegotiate contracts, but they have granted extensions at higher salaries.

"I feel I've contributed a lot to this club and I'd like to be paid like some of the other players in baseball," said Brett, a two-time batting champion and the American League's Most Valuable Player in 1980 when he batted .390.

"It's a delicate matter. It might take a year to work out. It might take two years. I just wanted them to be aware of my intentions."

The Royals opened their major league exhibition schedule today against the Pittsburgh Pirates.

In Monday's action, four Atlanta pitchers held Los Angeles to one hit — a seventh-inning double by Ron Cey — and the Braves ran their spring record to 3-0 by blanking the Dodgers 5-0. Jose Alvarez, Larry Bradford, Gene Garber and Al Hrabosky were the pitchers as the Braves continued their sensational mound work — they haven't allowed an earned run in an 'A' game.

But the Braves' 'B' squad lost to the New York Yankees

3-2. The Yankees got RBI singles from Andre Robertson and Lou Piniella in a three-run sixth inning. Both Atlanta runs came against Tommy John.

The Montreal Expos also exhibited some strong pitching. Ray Burris hurled three perfect innings, Scott Sanderson and David Palmer allowed one hit apiece and Woodie Fryman tossed a perfect ninth as the Expos beat the Baltimore Orioles 2-0.

George Bell's ninth-inning double gave the Toronto Blue Jays a 4-3 victory over the Chicago White Sox. Bell also drove in the tying run with a seventh-inning single, while rookies Paul Hodgson and Jesse Barfield homered for the Blue Jays.

Dennis Eckersley, Mike Torrez and Mark Clear scattered five hits and Jim Rice rapped a two-run double as the Boston Red Sox defeated the Detroit Tigers 4-1.

Rick Bosetti tagged San Francisco's Bob Tufts for a home run in the bottom of the 10th inning — the ball hit the left field foul pole — giving the Oakland A's a 3-2 victory over the Giants.

Singles by Kevin Rhomberg, Mike Fischlin and Joe Charboneau broke a 12th-inning tie and the Cleveland Indians nipped the Milwaukee Brewers 9-8.

In intrasquad games, Dave Parker had three hits and two RBIs for Pittsburgh, Foster hit his first home run as a member of the Mets and rookie Mike Calise of the St. Louis Cardinals hit a pair of homers.

Triple-Header On Tube Set For NCAAs

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS announced Monday a tentative lineup of telecasts of opening-round NCAA basketball tournament games, including a triple-header with two of the top four seeds and a rare potential match-up between Kentucky and Louisville.

The network, in the first year of a $48 million contract with the National Collegiate Athletic Association, will begin its live tournament coverage Thursday night, with the West Region first-round game between Southern California and Wyoming. The telecast, from Logan, Utah, will begin at 11:30 p.m., EST.

The next night, CBS will carry another West first-round game, this one between Northeast Louisiana and Iowa at Pullman, Wash. Gametime again is 11:30 p.m.

On Saturday, CBS plans to televise all eight NCAA tournament games on at least a regional basis.

Most of the country will see a triple-header, beginning at noon, EST, including top-seeded North Carolina vs. the Ohio State-James Madison winner in the East from Charlotte, N.C.; Louisville vs. the Kentucky-Middle Tennessee winner in the Mideast from Nashville, Tenn., at 2:15 p.m., and fourth-seeded Georgetown vs. the Southern Cal-Wyoming winner in the West from Logan, at 4:30 p.m.

A Louisville-Kentucky matchup would be the first basketball meeting between those intrastate rivals since 1959, when Louisville knocked the Wildcats out of the NCAA tournament.

Opening-weekend coverage concludes with a double-header Sunday. Most of the nation will see third-seeded Virginia vs. the Tennessee-Southwest Louisiana winner from Indianapolis at 2:15 p.m., followed by second-seeded DePaul vs. the San Francisco-Boston College winner from Dallas at 4:30 p.m.

Two of Sunday's games — Oregon State vs. the Pepperdine-Pittsburgh winner from Pullman, and Arkansas vs. the Kansas State-Northern Illinois winner from Dallas — will not be carried on even a regional basis by CBS. Those games, however, will be provided to NCAA Productions, which in turn will supply them to stations wishing to carry the telecasts.

Jay Rosenstein, a CBS spokesman, stressed that the lineup of telecasts could be changed, depending upon the outcome of first-round games.

ESPN, the all-sports cable network, also begins its NCAA tournament coverage Thursday night, with live broadcasts of Ohio State-James Madison and Wake Forest-Old Dominion at Charlotte.

If Strike Disrupts Season

NFL May Use Replacement Players

By The Associated Press
The National Football League hasn't rejected the idea of using replacement players in the event the 1982 season is disrupted by a strike, a league official admits.

"We haven't ruled it out. We haven't ruled it in, either," one NFL executive said of the possibility that rookies and veterans cut during training camp might be recalled in the event the NFL Players Association goes on strike.

The players' union and the NFL Management Council, representing the 28 owners, resume negotiations next Monday for a collective bargaining agreement to replace the four-year contract which expires July 15. The league also is in the midst of bargaining with the three major networks for a new television contract. The value of that TV package could reach $2 billion over five years.

Ed Garvey, executive director of the players' union, didn't seem distressed by the prospect of the NFL attempting to put other players on the field.

"They would have the right to try to hire replacements," said Garvey. "The question is whether the networks would pay those millions of dollars to show pickup football. I don't think they would. The league can talk about using other players, but that doesn't mean it would."

If there is a players' strike, as there was for six weeks during training camp in 1974, this one likely would be called for sometime after the Sept. 12 start of the regular season — perhaps around Oct. 24, the first Sunday after the World Series.

The 1974 walkout was ineffective partly because of a lack of fan interest (they were more interested in baseball's developing pennant races) and partly because of division within the players' ranks (a number of marginal veterans were trying to hold onto their jobs and rookies were trying to win them).

"We learned a lot from the past," said Frank Woschitz, a union public relations man. "We learned what mistakes we made."

The union, Woschitz said, has enough money to survive a full-season strike. But the players may have problems. "We've been telling them to save their money, to keep the jobs they have in the offseason or to look for a job for then if they don't have one," he said. "If they're a member of our credit union, they can borrow from it. Also, we hear that more and more players' wives are getting jobs."

The clubs have Crocker National Bank's $150-million line of credit to assure no break in their cash flow. For every game wiped out by a players' strike, the teams will receive what they would have made had the game been played. And the league will have several years to pay back the loan.

discuss the Spartans individually, going over their strengths and weaknesses and their personnel. While he will devote time to Hunter, Deans insists the Spartans other four starters will get their share of his attention.

"It could hurt you if you go in there with the thought that you've got to stop Curtis Hunter," Deans said. "They've got four or five other good ballplayers."

"When you get this far, though, it not how much talent you've got but how much that talent produces," Deans added. "That gives everybody a chance to win it."

For Kite, Victory Strange Sort Of Vindication

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — There was a strange sort of vindication for Tom Kite in his playoff victory in the Bay Hill Golf Classic.

"I've played a lot better several times, both last year and this year, and haven't won," Kite said Monday after he'd chipped in for a winning birdie on the first hole of sudden death, beating Jack Nicklaus and young Denis Watson of South Africa.

"But I'm not giving it back. It's awful hard to win a golf tournament," Kite said.

He knows that as well as anyone.

He once missed a title by the margin of one stroke. And that was a penalty he called on himself when he and he alone saw his ball move on the green.

He had an incredible 21 finishes of 10th or better last year. And won only once. He lost a playoff earlier this year in a remarkable turnaround when Ed Fiori rolled in a 40-foot birdie putt and Kite missed a 6-footer.

In the last two seasons he'd done almost all that could be done in golf — except win. He topped the 1981 money-winners. He led the tour in scoring average. He had one string of 17 consecutive tournaments in which he finished eighth or better. But in all that long string, he didn't win.

And it was becoming very, very frustrating.

"People say I'm a conservative player. I'm not. I'm very aggressive," Kite said. "I think they just say that because they don't know, because they're trying to explain why I don't win and they really don't know."

"Nor do I."

But he won this one, a day late due to a series of storms that disrupted and delayed the event on Arnold Palmer's Bay Hill Club course.

And Kite, who slipped almost unnoticed out of the pack with a last-round 69, was almost embarrassed by it.

"I apologized to Jack and Denis for chipping in on them," he said after his 20-foot effort had found the cup on the first extra hole. "You just don't chip in to win. But, doggone it, they were trying to do the same to me so I'm not apologizing too much."

Kite, Nicklaus and Watson, a 26-year-old native of Rhodesia now living in South Africa in his second full year of competition on the tour, all finished the regulation 72 holes at 278, 6-under par. All had chances on the playoff hole. Nicklaus missed a 24-foot birdie putt that, Kite said, was "as good a putt as you can hit. I don't know how it stayed out." But it did. And Watson missed a 12-footer that would have extended the playoff.

Nicklaus, generally acknowledged as the game's greatest player, had a one-stroke lead when last round play started in chilly, breezy weather. But he went from trouble to disaster to quandry. He hit in the sand. He three-putted. He got one embedded in a tree. He had to hit two shots left-handed.

But he turned it around with a couple of late birdies that let him reach the playoff with a 4-over-par final round of 75, his highest score of the season.

"That's five straight weeks of frustration," said Nicklaus, who has been in contention in every start this season but has yet to win. "All I had to do to win the golf tournament was play golf today. And I didn't do a very good job of it. One thing seemed to multiply another."

Watson, with a closing 72, had the best tournament of his brief American career.

Lanny Wadkins and Craig Stadler missed the playoff by a single stroke at 279. Stadler, who had a share of the lead until he bogeyed the 18th from a bunker, shot 70 and Wadkins matched par 71.

Ray Floyd, led or shared the lead most of the day but knocked himself out of it with two late double bogeys, the final one from an embedded lie in a hazard on the 17th. He finished with a 76 and was tied at 280 with Fuzzy Zoeller, who had a closing 67.

The victory, only Kite's fourth, was worth $54,000 from the total purse of $300,000 and pushed his earnings for the year to $115,710.

OSU Has Defense On Its Mind

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Coach Eldon Miller has issued a defensive incentive to his tournament-bound Ohio State basketball team.

Miller refused to name the Buckeyes' leading defender at the school recognition banquet Monday night. The 87 points Ohio State surrendered at Minnesota Saturday, costing the Buckeyes a share of the Big Ten title, may have had something to do with it.

"It's going to hinge on what happens in this (NCAA) tournament," he said.

"If we play at that end of the floor just 90 percent to our potential and keep our turnovers at nine or 10 a game, the Buckeyes will be very hard to beat," Miller said.

Ohio State, 21-9, one of four Big Ten teams in the NCAA playoffs, will face James Madison, 23-5, in an East Regional first-round game Thursday in Charlotte, N.C.

The winner earns the dubious honor of playing top-ranked North Carolina in the second round Saturday.

"We have a great challenge ahead of us," Miller said. "People say we're in a bad bracket. But nothing would be better than to play North Carolina. We cannot look past Thursday night though. It will be as tough a game as we've been involved in all year."

His teammates named all-conference Clark Kellogg as their Most Valuable Player. The 6-foot-7 junior forward from Cleveland led the league in rebounding for the second straight season, the first non-center to accomplish that feat since 1960.

Kellogg, however, preferred to bypass the acclaim, saying, "Without my teammates, we wouldn't be as successful as we've been."

Kellogg averaged 16.1 points and 10.4 rebounds, leading the Buckeyes to their third tournament appearance in Miller's six coaching seasons at Ohio State.

Sophomore forward Tony Campbell, a 6-6 product of Teaneck, N.J., was voted the Most Inspirational Player.

Also receiving plaques for leading the Buckeyes in various departments were center Granville Waiters, 55.5 percent field goal shooting; guard Larry Huggins, 83.9 percent free-throw shooting; guard Troy Taylor, most assists; and Kellogg, 10.4 rebounds per game.

To The Editor:

East Carolina University basketball coach Cathy Andruzzi has given Pirate fans something we can be proud of: a highly competitive, oftentimes awesome, group of athletes who, over the past two years, have gained national recognition. This is something ECU fans rarely get to experience.

So what are the rewards for such an outstanding basketball program?

- 1 — The possible deterioration of the program.
- 2 — The possible loss of Coach Andruzzi.
- 3 — A return to mediocrity.

This appears to be the cycle which all of our more productive athletic programs go through.

I would think that the program which produces the best results would be rewarded with an increase in funds so it can continue to improve and gain recognition for itself and most importantly for ECU.

I certainly do not mean to sound facetious, but it appears to me that Coach Andruzzi's women deserve a larger slice of the athletic budget than Coach Odom's men.

The point I am trying to make is — ECU cannot let such an outstanding coach and program slip through its fingers. We cannot afford another setback, just when things are looking up.

Raises Questions And Answers

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — "Between Two Brothers" on CBS tonight is one of those rare television movies that raises questions worth asking, while pointing the way toward answers worth thinking about.

The film, starring Michael Brandon and Pat Harrington, is about two brothers whose life-long bond is tested by different natures, lifestyles and goals. But beyond this rift, "Between Two Brothers" explores some universal themes: the delicate balance between career and family, the thin line between helping and hurting a family member in trouble, and the integrity of politics.

That's quite a lot to tackle, but the movie's success is that it's entertaining, intelligent and illuminating, despite a plot that occasionally borders on the improbable.

Brandon plays Bob Frazer, a successful lawyer, family man and would-be congressman from his family's home district, although he now lives in the its greener suburban section.

Harrington is older brother Russ, whose drinking and gambling has subverted two marriages. He still runs the family paint business out of a garage next to his mother's house. Russ gives a care-free appearance to hide his bitterness. He was forced to become surrogate father for Bob after the accidental death of their father.

Glimpses of these feelings surface when Bob returns to the family home for blue-collar publicity photos for his congressional campaign. While posing for family portraits, Russ hams it up, trying to upstage his brother.

The tension escalates in a one-on-one basketball game that each brother sees as a test of individual mettle. Later, through some well-crafted weaving of background and motherly explanations, we get clues why each man has chosen, or been forced to choose, a particular direction in life.

Meanwhile, Bob's glossy campaign shifts from the economy to crime, when the district experiences a dozen burglaries. The movie opens with the commission of one of those burglaries. The burglar, equipped with a police band radio on his belt, even stops at the refrigerator for a beer.

It looks like Russ may be responsible for some of the crimes, when he starts living beyond his means. Because of the depressed economy and cheaper competition, Russ has been losing jobs. But he still seems happy-go-lucky, Bob tells his mother. "How else would he act in front of you?" she replies.

Bob becomes suspicious when his wife, an accountant played with spunk by Helen Shaver, realizes from Russ's tax information that four of the homes burglarized were painted by Russ. Bob refuses to listen at first, but as the circumstantial evidence gets stronger, the measure of this man is that he thinks of his brother's welfare, not his election.

Bob's campaign manager, Alex Brock, slickly played by Peter White, has more of a one-track mind. He has attempted to make political hay by exploiting the incumbent's weaknesses, the job of the image-maker. But, when he learns that Russ may be in trouble, Alex's advice is to sever ties with Russ.

While Bob is grappling with this conflict, his campaign and investigation of his brother takes up all his time, putting him at odds with his wife. Their relationship, which had been filled with sophisticated humor about their love life, gets tangled. In the end, Bob must make some important decisions. Viewers may question his choices, but certainly not that they're worth contemplating.

A Review

Uneven Ride On 'Chariots' Film

One of the ironies of life is that high expectations may lead to disappointment.

Such was the case for me with "Chariots of Fire." Word of mouth, glowing reviews and seven Academy Award nominations had primed me for a great movie — but I came out so let down, I doubted my own judgment. So I saw it again, and this time the movie was better. The pity is that it should have been great.

"Chariots of Fire" is based on the true story of the British track competitors in the 1924 Olympics, interweaving the stories of two of them.

Eric Liddell (Ian Charleston) is a Scotsman dedicated to God, and a runner. He is persuaded to fill the need of the moment for a "muscular Christian." As Eric explains to his sister: "I believe that God made me ... fast, and when I run, I feel His pleasure ... to win is to honor Him."

Harold Abrahams (Ben Cross), a Jewish student at Cambridge, is out to prove something. He's in rebellion against anti-Semitism, and says, "I'm going to take them on — all of them — and run them off their feet." After he loses to Eric, he's determined to beat him.

At the Olympics, they are rivals under the same flag, but they never do get the chance to race each other (a misleading buildup that disappoints), for Eric refuses to run in the Sunday heats because "to run on the Sabbath is against God's law." So the stories again diverge as the focus shifts from man-against-man to a race for individual medals.

There's a good story here, but its potential is unrealized. The setting is beautiful, the pageantry impressive, but the main characters are superficial; they tell us of conflicts we never see. Eric is the almost-too-perfect hero torn between his beliefs and goals, but we never doubt the beliefs will win. Harry says he's an underdog, but we never see him "under," and his desire to beat Eric is never resolved. And because we never see their depth, I, for one, didn't particularly care if they won their medals. The exaltation of the race came from the magnificent score by Vangelis, not from rooting for a favorite racer.

Ian Holmes makes Sam Mussabini, Harry's coach, the most "real" character in the film with his facial reactions, character details and telling lines. His reaction to the race, for my money, is the best scene in the film. I hope Holm wins the Best Supporting Actor Award — he deserves it.

The movie was better on second viewing, I think, because I had the story in proper chronological order in my mind. The opening flashback, the flashback within a flashback, the stylistic treatment of time (with an overabundance of slow motion sequences) only confuse, and in the mental effort of untangling the story, at first viewing, I missed the minor details that are the jewels of British filmmaking: the maimed porters (World War I veterans), the unforgettable character actors, and the attention to authentic detail.

If you're going to see this film just once, give it all your concentration; if you want to get its full value, see it twice. As with many good films, the more you see it, the more you will see.

I can see no reason for the PG rating, except the twisted story line. "Chariots of Fire" is idealistic and inspiring —

Singer Sets Up 'Award'

NEW YORK (AP) — Singer Kenny Rogers says he has endowed a $1 million "World Hunger Award" for journalists who "bring attention to the issues of world hunger."

Rogers announced Monday that he and his wife, Marianne, felt "although one million dollars is a substantial sum of money, it would have little impact by itself on the war against hunger."

Rogers said he conceived of the award after asking the late singer Harry Chapin, who founded the World Hunger Organization, what he would do with $1 million.

Rogers said he and his wife "found recent reports pinpoint public education as the major key to the elimination of hunger."

"This awards program provided us with the opportunity to effectively encourage, honor and reward those journalists and other people, professional and nonprofessional, who contribute substantially each year to the education of the public about the issue and its elimination," he said.

The awards, which will be given in 10 categories and carry "substantial cash prizes," are to be given each year on the day after Thanksgiving at a luncheon in Los Angeles, Rogers said. The first awards will cover a one-year period to June 30, 1982.

a refreshing change from our standard movie fare. But the film's assumption of the audience's familiarity with competition running, the warped time frame, the English "old boy" setting and accents, will perhaps limit the film's audience to runners, "Masterpiece Theater" enthusiasts and film elitists. Ironic, because the story of a man standing up for what he believes and striving for a goal is an uplifting experience that could be shared by everyone.

"Chariots of Fire" is currently playing at the Plaza Cinema Theater.

Yesterday's Cryptiquip — COUNTY CLERK SMIRKS; FAT YES-MAN SMILES FATUOUSLY.

Today's Cryptiquip clue: D equals S

The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

If declarer could see all the hands, he would have no problem making four spades on this deal. Since our South could not do so, he had to rely on technique.

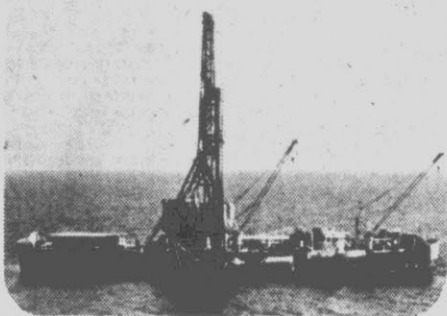

By bidding a new suit at the two-level and then jump raising his partner's suit, North showed a powerful hand without getting his side above game level. With an aceless minimum opening, South had no reason to proceed any further.

West led his lowest diamond, declarer finessed the queen and East won the king. The jack of hearts in dummy meant that that suit could not be attacked profitably, so East simply returned a diamond. Declarer won in dummy and made the key play of ruffing a diamond. This maneuver, by no means easy to spot, removed a key exit card from West's hand.

Declarer cashed the king-queen of trumps — he wanted to keep the ace in dummy as a possible entry if he felled the jack of clubs in no more than two rounds. Next came three rounds of clubs, followed by the ace of spades. Now declarer led dummy's good club and discarded a heart from his hand.

Oceans cover 71 percent of the earth. Beneath these waters lies a vast treasure house of natural resources. Off-shore oil reserves are estimated at 2 trillion barrels. Basins in the Red Sea may contain $2 billion worth of zinc, copper, silver and gold. The Pacific Ocean has rich deposits of readily accessible minerals. They contain enough silver to last 100 years, a 1,000 year supply of lead and zinc, 2,000 years worth of iron and a 20,000 year supply of aluminum. But who owns it all? The International Law of the Sea Conference, re-opening this week at the U.N., hopes all nations can agree on the peaceful and equitable development of these vast resources.

BOYS WILL BE BOYS — After many months of indoor play, youngsters in Jacksonville, N.C. happily greeted the arrival of spring-like weather this week. New Peanut Strain Is Resistant To Fungus LEWISTON, N.C. (AP) — State agricultural scientists say they have developed a new variety of peanut that is resistant to the highly destructive fungus disease called black rot which caused $12 million in damages to the state's peanut crop last year.

Dr. Durward F. Bateman, director of the N.C. Agricultural Research Service, said a peanut variety called NC 8C is the first break in research efforts to help protect peanut farmers from cycloconium black rot. He said the peanut variety is being released for limited planting this year.

The new variety was developed by research service scientist Johnny Wynne and plant pathologist Marvin Beute in an accelerated breeding program that began soon after black rot was identified as being in the North Carolina and Virginia areas in 1970.

NC 8C is described as a large-seeded Virginia type peanut with a runner growth habit similar to Florigrant, which is the predominant Virginia-type peanut variety.

The disease-causing organism is known to exist in most major peanut producing counties of the two states.

Bateman said the development of a black rot resistant peanut "is a major research achievement and gives growers their first effective tool in dealing with CBR (black rot)."

The resistant variety will enable growers to return peanuts to fields where profitable production has been made impossible by black rot, Bateman.

"However, NC 8C isn't a cure all. Growers will have to continue rotation (alternating peanuts with other crops) and follow good management, particularly in controlling nematodes."

Nematodes are tiny worm-like organisms in the soil that reduce the effectiveness of the new peanut variety's resistance to black rot.

Bateman said NC 8C also is more tolerant of the Southern stem rot fungus than other commercial varieties.

Comparative tests of NC 8C with Florigrant in 1978-80 on clean land showed that the NC 8C average yield was 3,986 pounds per acre, compared with 3,498 pounds for Florigrant. Bateman said that increased the value of NC 8C peanuts in the tests amounted to $114 per acre.

In tests conducted on infested soil on the Everett Byrd farm at Clarkton, N.C., NC 8C yielded 3,719 pounds per acre — compared with 2,275 pounds for the more susceptible Florigrant — increasing the value to $362 per acre, said.

Black rot was originally identified in Georgia in 1965, but has become a more severe problem in the northern end of the peanut belt in North Carolina and Virginia.

The original expansion plan would give the Sheraton 489 rooms, making it Charlotte's largest hotel. The Holiday Inn-Woodlawn now is the largest with 462 rooms but is planning a 108-room addition.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The Sheraton Center is studying development plans that could expand the number of rooms in its announced 14-story hotel addition by as many as 100 more than the 180 originally projected.

The addition announced in August to the 309-room hotel is planned as a tower of guest rooms, hotel offices, luxury guest suites, a coffee shop, game room and health club.

DIGGING FOR DOLLARS — The Palm Springs (Calif.) Thrift and Loan Association had a unique gimmick to attract new customers, and put their plan into effect last week, giving away some $34,500. About 900 people waited in lines throughout the week for an opportunity to grab some of the free cash. A coin box containing over $600 in assorted

Stringent DOT Ethics Policy Hit By Roberson

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Transportation Secretary William R. Roberson says his department's ethics policy is so tough he can't let an old friend, who does business with the state, buy him dinner.

And Roberson, saying the prohibition is "ridiculous," is proposing that the Board of Transportation on Friday drop the policy it adopted last summer in the wake of the bid-rigging scandal and replace it with a less restrictive guideline.

The proposed new policy would still ban the acceptance of gifts by DOT employees from contractors or others doing business with the department. But it would provide some new exemptions, allowing gifts or favors if the contractor and employee are "friends" and if the motivation is personal, not business.

"I had a personal friend of 20 years, a consulting engineer... (who) asked me out for dinner," Roberson said in an interview Monday. "I couldn't accept, which I think is ridiculous."

The new policy, while less restrictive than the original one, would still go farther in banning the acceptance of gifts or favors than does the 1981 law enacted by the General Assembly, department officials said.

"The original policy was put together at a time of, really, a great deal of sensitivity on that issue in the atmosphere of bid-rigging," said Cy Lynn, department spokesman.

"Now that the dust has settled a little bit... they're trying to make it a little more realistic about what is reasonable and what is not reasonable," Lynn said.

The 1981 policy said officers and employees of the Department of Transportation "shall under no circumstances for any reason solicit or accept gifts, loans, favors or meals from individuals, representatives, firms, partnerships, companies or associations doing business or soliciting business" with the department.

It provided an exception, however, for "incidental of nominal value" where the employee and department would not be "obligated" or "embarrassed."

The new policy also exempts "incidental of nominal value." But it drops reference to loans in its prohibitions. And it adds an exemption for "customary gifts and favors between friends where it is clear that friendship is the motivating factor rather than the business of the individuals concerned."

Eugene Smith, senior deputy attorney general and counsel to the Transportation Board, said the 1981 policy had prevented state employees who were neighbors or personal friends of contractors from exchanging birthday, anniversary or Christmas gifts, having "get-togethers," or being taken out for lunch or drinks.

He said that policy went beyond the 1981 law, which makes an exception for friends but makes violations a misdemeanor.

The policy is important, he said, because a DOT worker would be subject to disciplinary action if he violated the board's policy on gifts, even if it didn't violate the law.

Roberson said the new policy would allow a contractor to buy dinner for a department employee and perhaps allow larger gifts, such as a weekend trip, if the motivation was friendship and not business.

"If it's reciprocated... like a fishing trip," he said. "You pick up the check this time, the other fellow the next time. As long as it's on a personal friendship basis, we wouldn't have any objections."

Gary Pearce, a spokesman for Gov. Jim Hunt, said Monday the governor was unaware of the proposed change in policy.

Senators Claim 'Intimidation'

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Democratic leaders have lent little credence to a call by two Republican state senators for an investigation into alleged intimidation of state officials by Transportation Secretary William Roberson.

The senators, Cass Ballenger of Catawba County and Gilbert Boger of Davie County, say Roberson is trying to gag, harass and intimidate department workers Monday to prevent them from talking with legislators.

The senators issued letters Monday to House Speaker Liston Ramsey and Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green citing the case as reason for reactivating the joint Legislative Committee on the Department of Transportation.

Ramsey, in an interview, said the committee was planning to begin meeting to review department actions, but he said the Roberson matter would not be a part of its study.

"Of course not," Ramsey said. "If someone is attempting to infringe on someone's constitutional rights, that would be a matter for the executive or judicial branch of government, not the Legislature."

Green's press secretary, Margaret Webb, declined to comment and said she could not reach Green for comment.

The senators also attempted to deliver to Gov. Jim Hunt a letter urging him "to assure freedom of speech is restored" to department employees. Press Secretary Gary Pearce, who dismissed the complaints as partisan politics, said Hunt was unable to see them.

Ballenger, an unannounced candidate for the GOP nomination for governor in 1984, and Boger, a leader of Ballenger's campaign organization, held a news conference Monday to criticize a memo issued by Roberson Jan. 29.

Roberson, appointed DOT secretary by Hunt last summer, told department workers to inform his office of "any communication you or anyone in your division or section" has with state legislators.

The senators said Roberson was trying to prevent state employees from talking with legislators to tell them of department problems — or even to make charges of corruption. "If that's not trying to scare somebody to death, I don't know what is," Ballenger said.

"We fully believe this right here is why we have bid-rigging in North Carolina and corruption in government," added Boger.

Transportation Department spokesman Cy Lynn said Roberson had restated longstanding department policy. He said it covered only conversations about official business and was needed so that department management would know what legislators had requested and whether their questions were answered.

"That in no way was intended to cut off interaction between a state employee and their legislative delegation," Lynn said.

Iowa Snow A Sneak Attack

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — A sneak-attack snowstorm that left 4 inches of snow and glazed the streets of central Iowa caused a rash of traffic accidents and has been blamed for at least one death, officials say.

"We had a little snow burst," said Chuck Bikle, a forecaster for the National Weather Service in Des Moines. The snow left about as quickly as it arrived, but not before slickening streets and highways in central Iowa Monday. Police departments and the Iowa Highway Patrol said there were numerous accidents in the area.

In an accident on Highway

69, Dorothy Hill, 47, of Slater was killed Monday afternoon when her car went out of control and slid head-on into the path of a truck. Polk County authorities said the road was icy because of blowing snow.

Forecasters had expected only an inch of snow.

"Frankly, it was a rather amazing element, I must admit, when I got up this morning and saw that much snow on the ground," Bikle said.

The snowfall limited visibility in central Iowa. At times, it was impossible to see buildings across the street in downtown Des Moines.

"We've had a few minor personal injuries and we've got a whole ton of property damage accidents," said police Sgt. Gary Clark.

Cars were backed up on entrance and exit ramps having even slight inclines. Police and other drivers had to push cars up the ramps one by one.

Scrap Aluminum Price Slipping

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A year ago, scrap aluminum cans were selling for as much as 35 cents a pound at recycling centers, but the top price being paid now is 21 cents a pound and headed down, experts say.

"It's basically supply and demand," said Jim Douglas, owner of the Bealer Wholesale-Recovery Unlimited recycling center. "The smelters have so much (scrap aluminum) now that they're building up big inventories. The stuff they're getting in is just sitting there in rail cars."

The industry blames the dropoff in automobile production and the sluggish home-building industry for the sinking demand for aluminum. Factory orders declined 30.8 percent in November and 24.7 percent in December. The 1981 yearly decline was 15.8 percent.

Aluminum production in the United States fell to an annual rate of about 4.1 million tons in January from about 5.5 million tons in January 1981.

Court Ruling Is Said Good Sign

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina Gov. Jim Hunt said Monday that action taken earlier in the day by the United States Supreme Court could signal a good future for the state's drug paraphernalia law.

The Supreme Court upheld a Nebraska statute prohibiting the sale of drug paraphernalia.

"Both the Nebraska and North Carolina statutes closely followed a model law drawn up by the federal Drug Enforcement Agency," Hunt said. "Now that Nebraska's version has now been upheld by the highest court in the land, I am even more confident than before that our North Carolina law will withstand any court challenge and will be a stronger weapon in our war against drug abuse."

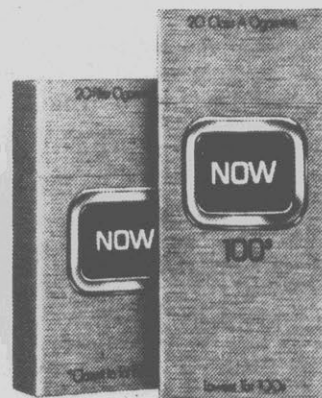

WINTER GOES ON AND ON — Iowans were greeted by another snowfall Monday as the record winter of 1982 continued to pose problems for city dwellers and farmers alike. On this particular day, cattle seek shelter from the snow near some evergreen trees. Spring begins on March 20. (AP Laserphoto)
