Warehouse Burns

Flames leap skyward from a block-long warehouse at 12th and Washington streets Saturday night as firemen prepare to protect an adjacent warehouse. According to the Greenville police, the call was received at 10:12 p.m. Firemen arriving on the scene found flames coming from the wood-frame and tin structure. In a short time the entire building was engulfed in flames. Officials said the building was used by White Insulation. Its contents were not known Saturday night. Small explosions could be heard from within the burning building and sparks were carried several blocks by light winds. Fire units from Winterville and Staton House were called to assist Greenville. Graduates Will Find Jobs Scarce

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

For college students, and for high school students not planning to further their education at the university or community college level, this year might be a good year not to graduate. Jobs are hard to find.

"Things are really slack right now," Jim Hannon, manager of the local Employment Security Commission office, said last week.

"We're hoping for something in maybe a month ... a couple of (Pitt County) companies are hoping to expand. But it won't take care of the number of people graduating, though."

According to Hannon, there's "no difference between high school and college" graduates in finding jobs. Both groups are having problems. "Today, the job market is as flat as it can be."

But Hannon is optimistic that, "as the weather warms up, the job market will increase as well. In Pitt County, the job market follows the thermometer. When the temperature goes up, the number of jobs available goes up. When the temperature goes down, the number of jobs goes down."

Hannon suggested that, traditionally, most students want to start at the top. "They have to be a little bit more realistic" in the job market, he said. "They should be willing to take something less than their top expectations to start with.

"A lot of kids want first-shift jobs and $1,000 per month." Facing reality, he said, persons entering the job market should realize they may have to "start on the third shift at less than $1,000 and work up."

To help people find jobs, according to Hannon, the local ESC office has a "system of job clearences" and receives microfilm three times each week which "lists jobs in Greenville and the surrounding areas. If people are mobile," he said, "it will increase job prospects immensely."

"We were taking applications ... and a few people picked jobs in Rocky Mount, Wilson and Elizabeth City this morning ... not necessarily in Greenville."

Reagan Wins Republican Olive Branch

By TOM RAUM
Assciated Press Writer

EASTON, Md. (AP) — Republican officeholders on Saturday overwhelmingly endorsed the "goal of a balanced budget by 1985," but in mild, conciliatory terms clearly designed to close the party rift over President Reagan's unpopular budget.

The non-binding resolution adopted at the fifth annual Tidewater Republican Conference asserts that Reagan's economic recovery program is working so far and voices general support for keeping his tax cut intact.

"We've got to accent the positive," said Rep. Carroll Campbell of South Carolina, the chief author of the budget resolution.

Administration officials attending the conference expressed immediate pleasure with the outcome while conceding that balancing the budget by 1985 was unlikely.

"They expressed it as a goal, they didn't say anybody was going to be shot if we didn't achieve it," said budget director David A. Stockman, who headed a delegation of five Cabinet-level officials attending the conference.

The resolution, approved by voice vote, quickly defused concerns by some party leaders that the session might turn into a bitter battle over the Reagan budget, concerns heightened by the recent, sharp criticism of the president's policies voiced by Sen. Robert Packwood, R-

American Legion Is Thriving After Six Decades

By MELVIN LANG
Reflector Staff Writer

The mood in 1919 was one of pensive celebration. The Great War was over, and the veterans were coming home — back to a homeland that, for many, was vastly changed by the European war that had interrupted their lives.

Ahead lay a future of uncertainty for all, but especially for the veteran who had been disabled or the widows and orphans left without a husband-father.

Such was the climate when, in May 1919 in St. Louis, representatives of veterans from across the nation agreed on guidelines for a new organization that would become today's American Legion. Formal organization came six months later in the Legion's first national convention, held in November 1919 in Minneapolis.

David J. Whichard Jr. of Greenville, one of two North Carolinians at the Minneapolis convention and a charter Legionnaire, has maintained his interest in the organization. He smiles freely in recalling the early days of the Legion, which he said got its roots from a political wave that spread among the troops in France.

"What started the movement was that, back in France, a group of officers and others wanted to start a veterans organization to promote the candidacy of Theodore Roosevelt Jr. for the presidency of the United States. He got wind of it and suggested it would be a bad move," Whichard said.

Whichard, who was in the Army for a little over a year, said the servicemen went ahead with plans for a caucus in Paris in March 1919. At the caucus, they decided to form a non-political veterans' organization and began setting up the machinery to develop its implementation back home.

The St. Louis meeting came the next month.

"It spread from there to the different states," Whichard said. "During that summer and that fall, organizations were started in several states. All were interim affairs until November 1919 when they had the national convention in Minneapolis."

In North Carolina, the new Legion found a receptive audience. Between May and November, when the Legion was chartered, posts were developed throughout the state, starting with Post No. 1 at Raleigh. Locally, the Pitt County post was No. 39.

"We started out with only one post in the county," Whichard said. "We helped the Farmville boys organize their own post and later we did the same thing in Ayden.

"Back in the early days, when we had just one post, we would shift our meetings around. We held meetings all over the county. That kept a county interest in it."

Pitt County has produced two state commanders — J.H. Rose and Arthur B. Corey.

Whichard, who served as North Carolina's national committeeman in 1919-20, noted that the Legion has not changed its original purpose or its guidelines. "They still have the same constitution and bylaws, and the same programs," he said.

American Legion philosophy is best expressed by the preamble to its constitution:

"For God and country, we associate ourselves together for the following purposes: to uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States of America; to maintain law and order; to foster and perpetuate a one hundred per cent Americanism; to preserve the memories and incidents of our associations in the Great Wars; to inculcate a sense of individual obligation to the community, state and nation; to combat the autocracy of both the classes and the masses; to make right the master of might to promote peace and good will on earth; to safeguard and transmit to posterity the principles of justice, freedom and democracy; to consecrate and sanctify our comradeship by our devotion to mutual helpfulness."

But Pitt County Legionnaires, who will hold a 63rd anniversary celebration this week, have seen changes over the year.

W.C. Eagles, who joined the Pitt post during the Depression of the '30s, said attendance at Legion meetings is off sharply from that of the earlier years of the Legion.

Eagles, a former district commander, said veterans' needs and attitudes also have changed, especially during and after the Vietnam War.

"In World War I, I volunteered. I wasn't drafted," Eagles said. "But we had no business over there (in Vietnam). That was a mistake ...

"I think that spirit spread all over. It was too deep. The boys weren't welcomed back like they were in World War I or World War II."

Marshall Helms, a college professor who joined the Pitt post a decade ago and later served as post commander, disagreed with Eagles' views on the merits of the Vietnam war. But he did agree that attendance has fallen and that interest in the Legion by new veterans is not as intense as previously.

Each of the Legionnaires — Whichard, Eagles and Helms — stress the service aspects of the Legion, which locally sponsors the county fair and youth baseball.

"And the Legion will grow if it continues to be a service organization," said Eagles, who is recreating an old homestead at the fairgrounds.

Hannon said too, that the ESC office receives microfilm lists of jobs available state-wide "and it's possible for us to find job openings in other states as well."

The employment expert said, "It would help if people coming out of school would come in and talk to an interviewer and find out how to sit for an interview ... how to present yourself," and how to prepare a resume.

Saying publications on how to prepare a resume are available at the ESC office, Hannon suggested that, if a resume "consists of more than three pages, pages four, five and six end up in the trash can."

Looking for a job, Hannon emphasized, is a process of selling your talent. "Many people don't know how to do it ... at least effectively."

Furney James, director of the career planning and placement service at East Crolina University, said many ECU students who will graduate in the spring "are and will" find it difficult to locate jobs "because of the economy we're in."

Students at the university may sign up for job interviews one day a month, James said. "Some were in line at 6:30" one morning when the sign-up period didn't start until 9 a.m. "That's how hard some students are looking for jobs," he said.

Janes said, "Most folks have to go searching for a job ... people have to really search. If you don't go fishing, you don't catch any fish."

Some hints on finding employment?

"Prepare yourself by learning about the employer. Go to interviews properly dressed and be able to communicate and sell yourself to the employer.

"It's awfully easy to get discouraged," James said. "If you get discouraged, you're not really in the right frame of mind to go looking for a job.

"Stay optimistic ... positive," he said. "It is a very tight job market."

However, James suggested that the job market "is good in the health fields — nursing, medical technology — and computer science; some of your business-related areas — banks, manufacturing firms — are employing some people; (and) utilities."

Some areas in the teaching field are also providing good job prospects.

"Ten years ago we graduated almost 900 students with teacher education degrees. Last year, we graduated fewer than 500," James explained.

"There's a pretty good demand in a lot of areas ... math; we graduated only eight or nine prospective math teachers last year; the sciences, vocational teachers, industrial arts, special education, elementary teachers for grades four through nine ..."

Locally, according to James, the "industry, government, education in Pitt — the diversification — helps us a lot."

Brion Sweeney, involved with job placement at Greenville's Rose High School, said that while "the job market doesn't look good" for this spring's graduates, "It looks better for the highly skilled, and we're hoping that the vocational training we're giving our students will give them a bit of an edge.

"Even at that," Sweeney emphasized, "their youth tends to work against them. Strangely enough, the small employer is more willing and eager to work with high school graduates than are the larger industries in the area."

High school distributive education students, Sweeney said, may have an edge on other students. "Distributive education students get jobs while they are in school and many continue on" in those jobs after graduation.

He noted that about 25 percent of the almost-400 seniors at Rose High will be looking for jobs, rather than continuing their formal education this year.

According to Sweeney, "there is a lot of talk and a lot of books out" on the subject of "writing your resume." High school graduates, he suggested, "need to concentrate on filling out applications" rather than writing resumes because of their lack of experience.

Most applications, he pointed out "generally are not good ... complete ... interesting. They require a lot of thought."

And Sweeney said, "applying for a job or getting interviewed is no time for modesty. You only have a few minutes, so come right out and say what your strengths are."

"What we're doing," at the junior high school level and at the high school, Sweeney said, is asking students to "think of a job or career choice ... look at what you want," then "put together their high school curriculum so they will be more marketable when the time comes to get a job."

Aerial Tanker, Plane Collide

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — An Air National Guard aerial tanker on a refueling flight and a light, civilian airplane collided over the desert Saturday, destroying both planes and killing at least six people, including the entire tanker crew, officials said.

Air Guard spokesman Sgt. Jerry Knau said there were four people aboard the KC-135 tanker when it took off on a "routine refueling flight."

Air Force Lt. Col. Jim Reinhart, public affairs officer at nearby Luke Air Force Base, said from the crash scene that the entire tanker crew and two people aboard the civilian plane died.

Rescue workers began removing the bodies after investigators from the Federal Aviation Administration arrived at the crash site, about 30 miles west of Phoenix.

Spokesman Bill Jury of Boeing Co., which makes the KC-135, said the planes can carry 30,000 to 31,000 gallons of jet fuel for its own power and refueling operations. However, it was not known how much fuel the plane involved in Saturday's crash was carrying.

FAA duty officer Dick Hallen in Los Angeles, said the civilian plane was a single-engine Grumman American Yankee, en route from Phoenix to Livermore, Calif. He said it was not known how many people were aboard it.

Sheriff's Department Cpl. Kenneth Shauinger said Deputy Roy Seebert saw the military plane "totally involved in flames and falling from the clouds accompanied by debris."

Rick Siefken, a corrections officer at a prison at Perryville, said he saw the civilian plane "hit the tail part of the big one, and then that little one exploded and the wing fell off the big one, the right wing fell off."

Cocaine Still Status Symbol In Hollywood

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Comedian Richard Pryor, coming clean about the drug-caused accident that nearly killed him, admits in his new movie that cocaine is the enemy and tells his hip, young audience: "You've been doing it more than two weeks — you're a junkie. You won't be able to stop."

That warning, thrown out in the midst of a macabre comedy routine in Pryor's new movie, "Live on The Sunset Strip," is the performer's effort to offer with a few jokes the grim lesson of his story — the accident which set fire to his clothing and left him with third-degree burns on the upper half of his body.

Pryor could not know how timely his movie monologue would be.

The film opened this week as Hollywood learned that another comedian, John Belushi, found dead above the Sunset Strip, had died of a drug overdose, his arms pocked with needle marks from the cocaine and heroin injections that killed him.

"The surprise was not that Belushi was doing cocaine," says one entertainment industry insider. "It was the heroin. That's still pretty much of a no-no. But coke is everywhere. If he wasn't into coke, that would be a surprise."

Like most of those interviewed, this source talked about drug use in Hollywood with the understanding that his name would not be used.

Although Belushi's death spurred an initial burst of self-examination in entertainment circles, few believe that it will have a significant impact on the popularity of cocaine as the drug of choice in Hollywood.

"The blame will be put off on heroin," predicted one observer. "Everyone will say it wasn't the coke that killed him."

Cocaine, the fine white powder which became symbolic of Hollywood's fashionable decadence in the '70s, has spilled over into the '80s in new variations and combinations.

Its popularity has been traced to two factors — its reputation as a "safe," non-addicting high and its outrageously high price which made it a symbol of affluence.

"I still see coke at most Hollywood parties," says one source. "They bring it out on trays and serve it as dessert. It's a status thing, an ego trip."

Last year, police broke up a ring of drug dealers who operated out of a rambling mansion above Sunset Boulevard and made their deliveries in Rolls-Royces. Their clients jokingly called them the "cocaine caterers."

The darker side of the drug is rarely mentioned. There are whispers about movie stars who are "coked out of their heads" and don't show up for work.

"I know of one star who was snorting so much cocaine on a set that blood was running out of his nose and they had to stop shooting," says a movie writer.

"It's an addiction, a monster," Pryor shouts in his movie, referring to the "freebase" cocaine habit which was said to be part of Belushi's lifestyle too. "...I finally got to the point where drug dealers refused to sell me cocaine. They said, 'Man, you're killing yourself.'"

Freebasing, a method of processing cocaine down to its most powerful essence and then smoking it, has gained popularity in recent months in the fast-living moneyed social set that pursues the newest highs in town.

Republicans ...

Ore., the conference chairman.

The few efforts made from the floor to criticize the Reagan budget or to vow a stronger commitment to achieving a balanced budget were shouted down as participants extended an olive branch to the White House.

"The conference is very wary, and I think correctly so, about doing anything they regard as taking the ball away from the president," Packwood said.

For instance, a proposal by Rep. Joel Pritchard of Washington that "defense spending increases must be restrained" was rejected in favor of a vaguely worded pledge to "enact such fundamental policy changes in spending programs as may be necessary" for full economic recovery.

The final result "is so watered down it sounds like one of those Democrat proposals," said Rep. Bill Frenzel of Minnesota.

The Republican officials also backed, in principle, President Reagan's "new federalism" program to transfer about 40 federal programs to states and called on Congress to enact the needed legislation this year.

But at the behest of GOP governors attending the session, the conference said the federal government should retain much of the financial responsibility for welfare programs and that state governments should not be "financially penalized" for picking up federal programs.

Reagan's "new federalism" proposal called for the federal government to take over Medicaid with the states assuming responsibility for welfare programs.

The conference resolution was so broadly written that it accommodates both the president's original proposal and the concerns of state governors who are fearful of receiving federal programs without the revenues to pay for them, said Vermont Gov. Richard Snelling.

"Federalism has a basis in reason and fact and this is the time to do it," said Delaware Gov. Pierre duPont. "It makes sense from a constitutional point of view to bring some of these programs home."

On another issue, the conference sidestepped completely a proposed resolution that would have put members on record as opposing "legislative curtailment of the jurisdiction" of the Supreme Court and other federal courts on major social issues.

Although the resolution was not specific, it would include such measures as the legislastion, recently passed by the Senate, that would sharply limit the ability of federal courts to order busing to desegregate schools.

Deeply divided participants debated the issue for about an hour but, unable to reach a consensus, they voted to table the motion.

"It's such a sensitive issue, everyone wants to make their own decision on it, and they don't want to put the whole group on the record," Packwood said.

The conference, an annual session attended by Republican members of Congress, governors and other GOP state officials, registered its "hope that we can work on a bipartisan basis to further reduce projected deficits and achieve a balanced budget sooner than currently predicted."

The resolution also called on Congress to take "the steps necessary to achieve the goal of a balanced budget by 1985 as the best possible way by which to attain the economic goals of the president and the American people."

The resolution voiced support for a constitutional amendment "to restrain spending growth and stimulate economic growth" but without specifying the precise terms of such an amendment.

Reagan originally called for achieving a balanced budget by 1983, then modified his call to 1984. But he abandoned the goal entirely when he submitted his deficit-laden fiscal 1893 budget to Congress.

"We haven't said it can't be achieved. It's always helpful to have a goal and the discipline," Stockman told reporters after the vote. "This resolution is a good, general endorsement of administration policy. I think 95 percent of the people here endorse our policy."

Stockman said that while he had conferred with conference leaders in advance on the wording of the resolution that was adopted, he denied that the language had been dictated by the White House.

In other action, the conference voted its support of President Reagan's Caribbean Basin initiative and vowed support for "open and free elections throughout the Western Hemisphere."

The resolution adopted was a watered-down version of an original proposal urging that the United States "maintain all options, including the use of armed force, in order to protect our interests in Latin America."

However, the conference added a provision urging the Reagan administration to "seriously consider" Mexico's offer to serve as an intermediary in seeking a solution to Central American problems.

Tobacco Faces Some Change In Financing

Even the staunchest supporters of the tobacco program now know that major changes are ahead.

There is a good chance that the program will survive but it will have to be with the assurance that it will be at no cost to the government.

Rep. Charlie Rose said as much in a hearing in Virginia.

"The farmer generally knows that Congress almost killed the tobacco program last fall," Rep. Rose said at a hearing in Abingdon, Va., a burley tobacco center.

"Those of us who live in tobacco districts saved it.... To do that we made some promises. Our main promise was to run the program at no cost to the taxpayer."

The salvation of the tobacco price support system will be to remove it from the federal budget so it cannot be attacked by anti-tobacco forces, he indicated.

The recommendation is a charge of a few cents per pound when tobacco is sold to pay cost of administration, and in some cases insurance cost.

"The real enemies of tobacco arise from the health issue," Rose said. "If we can get (the price support program) out of the federal budget, they'll have a lot less of a target to shoot at."

It's pretty well spelled out. The legal machinery for operating the tobacco program can be kept intact. The cost of the program, however, will have to be absorbed in some way in the sale of tobacco. While all this is a matter of concern, it is not insurmountable. The tobacco program has been the most successful of the farm programs in terms of its cost to the government. It is likely that with a small charge at the time tobacco is sold enough funds can be raised to operate the program successfully.

That won't be easy and we don't have to be for or against it. It is simply a fact of life. The struggle that tobacco state congressmen and senators had to wage this year to keep the program intact should tell us that changes are in the offing.

Emergency System Handled Victims With Efficiency

Emergency care is something we all take for granted.

It hasn't been so many years ago when there was no emergency rescue ambulance service in Pitt County, however. And once victims were gotten to the hospital it all depended on private practice physicians being on call to give aid.

When two school buses collided in Winterville last week, the Winterville Rescue Squad was soon there. Noting a number of children were injured, squad members soon had assistance from Ayden and Greenville.

At the hospital, the 10 injured persons received treatment that was praised by Emergency Department Director Jack Allison.

Fortunately there were no serious injuries. It is nice, however, to know that a large number of injured people can be handled by our emergency system.

Alvin Taylor — Sunday Morning Notes

For the Davenport family of Pitt County there was a surprise in last Sunday's Daily Reflector.

They opened the paper to the Family Weekly section ... and there on the front in full color was a photo of Michele Davenport, along with Mickey and Minnie Mouse at Disney World.

Michele is the 11-year-old daughter of Dalton and Sue Davenport. When the picture was taken, however, she was 7 years old.

Mrs. Davenport recalled the family went to Disney World in January four years ago. The time for checking in the hotel was 3:30 and so they were walking around in the meantime. They spotted a crowd of what must have been hundreds of people and went over to see what it was all about. A photographer picked Michele out of the crowd and asked if it would be all right to photograph her with the Disney characters to be used to promote Disney World. The Davenports readily agreed, the pictures were taken and a few weeks later some copies arrived in the mail.

The Davenports had never seen the pictures used in any way since, however, although on a trip back this January they looked through promotional literature.

It remained for the major use to come last Sunday when the picture showed up in the Davenport home, as well as thousands of other area homes, on the Family Weekly front inserted in the hometown paper. It was, by the way, in many other homes throughout the nation since Family Weekly is distributed through newspapers nationwide. It is in some 500 newspapers and has a circulation of 12,352,006.

Mrs. Davenport said everyone was excited by the event. She pulled out the section and prepared to read the regular paper when the photo caught her eye. Michele was still asleep but she was awakened. The excited youngster was soon on the phone calling her friends.

It was also exciting the next day when Michele carried a copy to Farmville Middle School where she is in the sixth grade.

A number of family friends who saw the picture recognized the resemblance to Michele, but dismissed it as a coincidence ... until they learned it was, indeed, the local girl.

Mrs. Davenport says they would like to go back to Disney World with Michele and another daughter, age 8, to see the new section which will soon be opening.

It may be that on the next trip some visitors will recognize Michele as the girl who appeared on the front of Family Weekly.

Mrs. Melissa McLawhorn, formerly of Ayden, had a birthday party recently. As a child she learned sign language for the deaf and she showed those who had gathered to honor her that she still knew how to handle that.

Nothing unusual about that except Mrs. McLawhorn was celebrating her 101st birthday on Tuesday, March 2. She is a resident of University Nursing Center in Greenville and the party was given by Mrs. McLawhorn's daughter, Mrs. Alex (Ethel) Cuthrell of near Greenville.

Helen Thomas — At The Top

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In the search for simon pure conservatives to fill posts that have been traditionally held by so-called liberals, the White House has been striking out early and often.

Still, President Reagan has remained above the crowd when his appointees fall by the wayside for one reason or another. He can do that in the sense that rarely does he meet any of the persons he selects for top positions.

In the past year, several of Reagan's appointees have had to pull out, with a gentle nudge from the White House after a media expose on grounds that t h e i r qualifications have become suspect. Or sometimes because their background does not stand stiff scrutiny.

The naming of the Rev. B. Sam Hart of Philadelphia, a black radio evangelist, to the Civil Rights Commission is more than a case in point. His views on busing, the Equal Rights Amendment, and homeosexuals hardly fit into the category of tolerance or even objectivity. His opinions should have been well known to the White House and should have signaled trouble ahead.

There was a tendency in the White House to bemoan the fact that Hart had talked to the press after his appointment and frankly discussed his feelings on a number of controversial subjects that were bound to come up before the commission on which he was to serve. If he had not talked to the press, aides argue, no one would have known and it would have been clear sailing.

But Hart, faced with some financial problems in the past, decided to pull out.

White House Communications Director David Gergen said that Hart "made the point that given the controversy, he would have been divisive in the minority community ... and an embarrassment."

Gergen said that critics believe "that anyone on the Civil Rights Commission shouldn't hold those views. We disagree."

The White House also beat a retreat on the appointment of Detroit businessman William Bell for the chairmanship of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. The black appointee also withdrew after his qualfications for that position were questioned.

It has been a tendency in the Reagan administration to appoint people to top positions when they have a record of opposing the premise of such positions. It has been so blatant in terms of appointments that one can only conclude that Reagan wants the fox in the chicken coop to carry out his policy of reducing big government, or at least making ineffective such agencies with lackluster and weak leadership.

At the beginning of his administration, he named the secretaries of education and energy to preside over the liquidation of their departments. Traditionally the interior secretary has had a feeling for conservation and protection of the environment. Instead, he named James Watt, whose premise for more exploitation of federal lands was well known. He also named Ann Gorsuch to head the Environmental Protection Agency even though she had voted against anti-pollution laws in Colorado.

His appointment of Ernest LeFevre to be in charge of the Human Rights division in the State Department did not boomerang until it reached the stage of Senate confirmation hearings. It was then that testimony was replete with questions about LeFevre's own views and writings on the question of a human rights policy in international diplomacy. LeFevre, also seeking to spare the administration embarrassment, and what was shaping up as a defeat, withdrew his name from consideration.

There have been others who have had to pull out for one reason or another. And some of the appointees who made it, such as national security affairs adviser Richard Allen, were forced to resign following controversy.

Bill Noblitt — State's Electric Bill Is A Whopper

RALEIGH — Lyndon Johnson gained a certain amount of fame from his insistance that lights be turned out when not in use.

Most homeowners are practicing the same economy.

If that monthly bill from the electric company shocks you, imagine what happens in Raleigh when the state gets its bills.

There are in the neighborhood of 6,000 state-owned buildings in North Carolina.

Last year the total electricity bill was $21 million. Taxpayers have an obvious and direct interest in that major governmental expenditure, since such a big chunk of dollars could fund some important programs.

But many of the new, modern buildings were designed at a time when energy costs were not a factor.

One small example suffices: a major state office building in Raleigh has large expanses of glass windows facing the hot summer sun with no overhanging for shade. Backing the glass are black venetian blinds of metal which get so hot you can't lay your hand on them. They radiate intense heat into the building, causing airconditioners to hum overtime. Typically, windows in such recent buildings don't open so that even on comfortable spring and fall days the electricity must be used rather than native breezes.

What can be learned from past mistakes, and what can be done to make the older, the more recent, and future state buildings less a drain on the public purse is the purpose of a $51,500 project underwritten by the Alternative Energy Corp.

The result is supposed to be guidelines to make new state buildings more energy efficient.

What's the biggest need on community college campuses these days?

It isn't fivolous, nor a symbol of over-abundant times when so many students drive so many expensive automobiles, but rather an indication that the 57 campuses are doing an effective job of being what they are supposed to be — commuter colleges putting higher education within driving distance of most people in the state.

Rowland Evans and Robert Novak — 'Doc' Long Displays His Contempt

WASHINGTON — Inside the office of Marxist Nicaragua's head of state on Feb. 15, Rep. Clarence Long of Maryland followed up his accusation of U.S. government "cover up" by promising "to haul (assistant secretary of state) Tom Enders before my committee to get the truth" about whether Nicaragua is running guns to Marxist guerrillas in El Salvador.

During his one day in Managua, feisty "Doc" Long displayed his contempt for U.S. policy in Central America. That is perfectly acceptable on the floor of the House, but serious questions are raised in the minds of administration officials when free-wheeling members of Congress launch such assaults in the presence of foreign officials.

What sets Long apart from other traveling congressmen is his control over the president's new Caribbean Basin aid program as chairman of the House appropriations subcommittee on foreign operations. Long has quietly postponed three days of hearings on Soviet-Cuban-Nicaraguan aid to Salvadoran insurgents, demanding prior evidence of gun-running before holding the hearings. He is also likely to place the same condition on considering the president's entire Caribbean Basin aid program, econommic as well as military.

Long's performance in Managua was the subject of an understated cable from the U.S. Embassy that has been discussed with key members of Congress. It related details of his Feb. 15 interview with Daniel Ortega, one of nine members of Nicaragua's ruling Sandinista Directorate and nominal head of state and designated "coordinator" of the junta.

In his talk with Commandante Ortega, Long expressed sympathy for Nicaragua's Cuban-backed revolution and "distrust" of U.S. efforts to channel it into non-Marxist, pluralistic directions (at one point, however, cautioning Ortega that "concern" was growing over the junta's "Marxist-Leninist" trend).

Long listened as Ortega excoriated the Reagan administration for "supporting" alleged "counter-revolutionary" training groups in Florida to join with Honduran military teams against the Sandinistas across the Rio Coco in Nicaragua. Long agreed: The U.S. was guilty of "cover up," he said. He appeared to accept Ortega's claim of innocence in Sandinista butchery of Miskito and other indian tribes: The forced resettlement of indians, said O r t e g a , was "humanitarian."

U.S. officials escorting Long tried to set the congressman straight. Angrily, they told Ortega there is no question whatsoever about arms traffic from Nicaragua to Salvadoran guerrillas. They labeled "relocation" of indian tribes from their ancestral villages along the Atlantic Coast for what it is: "A massive human rights violation of an entire indigenous group."

James J. Kilpatrick — Never Fear, The Sky's Still There

WASHINGTON — From time to time we reach a kind of Henny-Penny, Chicken-Little point in our public affairs. One side or another is hollering so loudly that the sky is falling that it's difficult to hear a sensible, small voice saying, no, it's not. we're at that point now in the matter of pending bills affecting the powers of federal judges.

One such bill passed the Senate on March 2. The measure would prohibit federal courts from ordering that students be bused more than five miles or 15 minutes' travel time for reasons of racial balance.

Well, sir, the sky is falling. Sen. Dale Bumpers of Arkansas saw the vote as "the beginning of the end of constitutional guarantees in this country." Busing is not the issue, cried the senator. "The issue is whether we are going to remain a free nation."

The American Bar Association has mounted a major campaign to press the same silly notion. The ABA says that bills to restrict the courts are "an end-run" around the Constitution. Such bills would abandon the rule of law to "the whims of an ever-changing majority." The real issue is "ensuring that one branch of government does not become dominant over the others." If Congress successfully can restrict the federal courts in one area, and thus destroy their independence, it would thereafter require only 269 votes — a simple majority in each house — for Congress to act in other areas. We will have "lost our Constitution."

There, there, I would say to these handwringers, stop your sniffling and dry your eyes. The busing bill impresses some of us (including 57 senators sworn to uphold the Constitution) as an entirely appropriate exercise of legislative power. Our impression may be wrong. If that is so — if Congress has exceedcd its authority — it will require only five votes, a simple majority of the Supreme Court, to declare the act void. Assuming the House concurs with the Senate, a most uncertain assumption, it will be months or years before the matter will be resolved. Meanwhile, are we truly to believe the constitutional sky is falling? This is Henny-Penny stuff.

For the record, I happen to believe that other pending bills in this general area should be rejected out of hand. Absolutely to deny the Supreme Court appellate jurisdiction in any case involving abortion or school prayer would be most unwise. The Senate's busing bill, it should be emphasized, does not go nearly so far as to deny jurisdiction. The bill fixes limits, it defines a permissible remedy. It does not nullify constitutional principle; it rewrites judicial legislation.

Underlying the immediate commotion is one of the great continuing concerns of our system. Put simply, the question is, Who's minding the store? Where should the power be vested to decide how, where and when little children should be bused? In the ABA's view, if a judge fixes a limit of 30 minutes or 10 miles, that manifests the integrity of judges. If Congress fixes a limit of 15 minutes or five miles, that manifests the shifting whims of a transient majority. How come?

The infallibility of federal judges is not decreed in heaven or in the Constitution either. Judges are as capable as others of making large mistakes. The problem is that while judges may check the large mistakes of presidents and congressmen, there is no effective check whatever upon the large mistakes of judges. If a majority of the people perceive the court's abortion decision of 1973 as a large mistake, what are the people to do? The ABA's threefold answer is 1) to amend the Constitution, or 2) to pray that the court will reverse itself, or 3) to elect presidents who will nominate and senators who will confirm future judges who will correct the error. We should live so long.

Let us stop the hysterics. The Senate's vote of March 2 wasn't the beginning of the end of the Constitution. It wasn't even the beginning of an end of an argument. Those of us who oppose government by judicial oligopoly will be arguing this issue for years to come.

To the editor:

We have noticed many "Letters to the Editor" recently on the subject of potholes. Your own newspaper has probably printed some of these as well.

I'd like to take this opportunity to share with your readers some information about the condition of our highway system, how it got that way and what we're doing about it.

As your readers can tell, we are experiencing pavement failures (i.e., "potholes") across a large segment of our highway system.

The potholes of today were really "born" several winters ago as tiny cracks in the surface of the highway pavement. Over the years they have now reached "maturity" as full-blown potholes due to moisture seeping into these ever-growing cracks.

When this moisture freezes between layers of pavement, the ice expands and exerts heavy pressure on the pavement, causing it to break up. Traffic on top of this weakened pavement accelerates the damage to the roads.

Resurfacing work to protect our roads in the future will begin again in the spring as the temperature permits this work to be done.

We in the Department of Transportation appreciate the concern, interest and patience by the motoring public regarding their highway system as we work to take care of existing damage as well as protect the system from future damage with our resurfacing program.

Who Should Pay For A College Education?

Patricia McCormack
United Press International

Why not pin the cost of college on the kid who gets the education — instead of pauperizing parents or draining tax funds?

A degree at a public university can cost up to $20,000 and up to $50,000 at a private school, but it can be done, according to John R. Silber, president of Boston University and an academic maverick

For one, Silber is not lining up with other college presidents who condemn President Ronald Reagan's educational policies.

"...I have found it impossible to identify myself with groups opposed to the administration, for that could be interpreted as opposition to its goals," Silber told the Boston University Board of Trustees in a report titled "Reaganomics."

In that same report, Silber tells how to pin the cost of college on the kid who gets the degree by first setting up a rolling trust fund to advance school money to students.

It is an updated version of his Tuition Advance Fund — first pulled out of the maverick's hat in the late '70s. It was introduced in Congress but did not gain enough votes to get to first base.

In the current economic climate in education, however, the plan may be a little more appealing to solons — as well as to their constituents, especially students among them facing fiscal fidgets over proposed cuts in loans.

Silber never considered the TAF plan anything but sound fiscal sense. The Fund would advance money for higher education without bankrupting the public treasury or families, he maintains, and what's more, students would not mortgage their futures just to get a college degree.

It has been estimated that some loan programs at current interest rates can require a graduate to pay back between $400 and $500 a month for 10 years — after he starts working.

Here are highlights of the 1982 version of Silber's TAF, as presented to the Boston University Board of Trustees recently:

—Under TAF, a sum equal to tuition charged at an accredited college or university would be advanced to each student. A sum in addition to tuition up to the charge of room and board would also be advanced, provided the total advance does not exceed $7,000 in 1982 dollars.

—TAF, fully phased in, would provide this benefit to anyone on admission to a two-year or four-year accredited program provided no remedial work is required.

—The plan could be phased in over a period of years by making the advance available first in the senior year, then in the junior and senior years, finally in the sophomore and freshman years as well.

—The student who received the tuition advance would have the obligation to repay that advance plus a surcharge of 50 percent through payroll deductions following graduation.

—No individual would be obligated to repay until annual income reached $10,000. At that point, the IRS would collect a percentage — perhaps beginning at 2 percent at $10,000 and rising to 5 percent at $40,000 — of annual gross income.

"This would never be an onerous burden," Silber said.

"Nevertheless, repayments would be sufficient to establish a self-perpetuating endowment fo the financing of higher education within 15 to 17 years of its inception.

"From that point forward, it would be self-perpetuating with no further contributions from the Congress."

Silber said the plan is a peacetime version of the GI bill — adapted for civilian use. The GI bill gave money for education in return for serving in the armed services. Silber's plan would advance money — depending on paybacks as the beneficiaries reap the benefits of the prepaid education.

"The GI Bill saved human resources, enhanced human capacities, and in consequence increased all forms of productivity," he said, predicting that TAF could do the same.

"I submit that the Tuition Advance Fund is a program well designed to meet all of the requirements of a comprehensive financing of aid to higher eudcation," he said.

"It is a program that will ensure educational opportunity both of access and choice and that will pay for itself over a period of less than a single generation."

"The TAF program calls for the kind of self-reliant productivity that is consistent with Mr. Reagan's supply-side economics.

"I wish there were a way we could persuade the Administration to consider this proposal along with other proposals for the provision of educational opportunity ... essential to the preservation of the American dream of equal opportunity and the requirement of national survival.

"If the Administration does not realize that 90 percent of the families of America have a financial problem in financing higher education, it will ignore its own constituency."

POLL

George Gallup

PRINCETON, N.J. — Although most Americans endorse the principles underlying President Reagan's New Federalism program, many are concerned about certain possible consequences.

The latest Gallup survey finds a 54 percent majority of the "informed" public — those who are familiar with the program's provisions — saying the New Federalism is a "good idea," while 39 percent say it is a "poor idea," and 7 percent are uncommitted.

At the same time, however, 43 percent of the informed public believe the federal government is more capable than the states of taking care of the needs of poor people, while 24 percent think both federal and state governments would perform about equally well and only 28 percent feel the states could better carry out this responsibility.

A 64 percent majority also feels that under the New Federalism their combined state and federal taxes will increases, compared to 23 percent who think taxes will remain about the same and 9 percent who foresee a tax decrease.

Under Presidnet Reagan's New Federalism proposals, which, if enacted, would begin Oct. 1, 1983, there would be a gradual shift of responsibility to the states for many of the programs now funded and run by the federal government. As a first step, the federal government would assume the entire administrative and financial burden of Medicaid, the most expensive welfare program, while the states would take over the Aid to Families with Dependent Children and food stamps programs, both now shared by the states and Washington.

The second major provision of the New Federalism calls for the establishment of a transitional federal trust fund, that would help the states and localities finance more than 40 education, highway and community programs. This fund, which would be financed by federal excise taxes, would be phased out by 1991, when state and local governments would shoulder the full financial responsibility.

Backers fo the New Federalism hail it as the most effective way of sharply reducing the size and power of the federal government. Its detractors fear the states will not distribute benefits equitably, with some predicting a migration of the needy from poor to rich states.

These questions were asked in the latest Gallup survey:

"Have you heard or read about the Reagan administration's New Federalism proposal?"

Those who answered affirmatively (49 percent of the total) were then asked to describe the New Federalism. The 42 percent who were both aware of and could describe the program were considered to be the "informed" group and their responses are reported below.

Here is the next question asked:

"Under the New Federalism program, many of the present responsibilities of the federal government would be turned over to the individual states and local communities. To begin with, the federal government would provide the necessary money to pay for these social programs, but gradually the states would take over the payments for their own programs by local taxation. Does this New Federalism sould like a good idea or a poor idea to you?"

Here are the national results and the responses of key population groups, showing the political flavor of public opinion and the less favorable reaction to the plan on the part of center-city residents, Easterns and persons with family incomes of less than $15,000 per year:

New Federalism Program
(Based on informed group)

	Good idea	Poor idea	Not sure
NATIONAL	54%	30%	7%
Republicans	83	13	4
Democrats	35	57	8
Independents	54	37	9
Family income:
$15,000 and more	59	34	7
Less than $15,000	44	48	8
East	47	47	6
Midwest	55	37	8
South	56	37	7
West	61	28	11
Center cities	43	48	9
Suburbs	53	40	7
Non-metro areas	65	29	6

These questions were also asked:

"Under the New Federalism program, do you feel the states will take care of the needs of the poor and needy AS WELL AS the federal government, BETTER THAN the federal government, or NOT AS WELL AS the federal government?"

"Under the New Federalism program, do you think the total taxes paid by your family — that is, state and federal combined — will go up, do down, or stay about the same?"

As might be expected, those most concerned about these possible drawbacks are those whose overall appraisal is negative: Democrats, members of down-scale socio-economic groups and residents of the nation's center cities.

Following are the national results:

Take Care Of Needs Of Poor
(Based On Informed Group)

Federal better	43%
States better	28
States and federal equal	24
No opinion	5

State And Federal Taxes
(Based On Informed Group)

Will go up	65%
Will stay the same	23
Will do down	9
No opinion	4

The results reported today are based on in-person interviews with 1,547 adults, 18 and older, of whom 726 comprise the informed group, interviewed in more than 300 scientifically-selected localities across the nation during the period Feb. 5-8.

For results based on this group, one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be five percentage points in either direction.

Three Cheers For OPEC

John Cunniff

NEW YORK (AP) — Should Americans cheer as the price of oil drops?

Silly qustion, says the customer who has been forced by high prices to drive a smaller car, foresake a once-in-a-lifetime cross-country tour, and lower the living room thermostat to less than 65 degrees.

Should they rejoice at OPEC's troubles? Serves them right, says the executive whose company was forced to cut its expansion plans because high energy costs drained funds earmarked for capital investments.

But the answers aren't that simple, involving as they do the volatile politics of the Middle East, the perhaps complacent attitude of Americans, and the continuation of new international trade patterns.

A serious question exists, for example, of whether the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries can adjust to price competition as importing nations did, though perhaps poorly, to its cessation.

How, for example, will OPEC nations continue to pay for imports, which have risen sharply as they adapted to a higher standard of living? What happens politically if a decade of rising standards ends abruptly?

"Unless there is a political event, with one of the major producers reducing supplies, the ability of OPEC to maintain its exports and living standards seems bleak," says Robert Aliber, professor of international economics and finance at the University of Chicago.

Barring that "political event," which Aliber isn't convinced won't occur, he sees world oil demand falling and price-cutting becoming more common, no matter if the cartel continues to exist in name.

He gives this rationale: Already, 10 OPEC countries are failing to earn enough from oil exports to finance their current level of imports. "So," he said, "they must increase exports, but they can only expand exports by cutting prices." They are in a bind of limited options.

Even Saudi Arabia is likely to get hurt, he said. Current production of 8 million barrels a day is too much for that country under current market conditions, and it will have to cut, he said. If output drops below 6 million barrels a day, he contends, it no longer will be sufficient to finance imports, on which living standards depend.

But, he observed, the Saudis have $200 billion in the bank, a reserve, a cushion not possessed by other OPEC nations. In his opinion, the Saudis will spend some of this to maintain living standards, while simultaenously seeking an agreement with other nations to limit output.

While there is shock in the OPEC nations, it might be assumed they were prepared for the downturn in prices because of lessened demand and a glut of inventories on the market.

"I doubt it," said Aliber. "They think prices went up because they were smart rather than lucky." As prices fall, they think other forces are at work, he said, suggesting a plot "rather than Adam Smith's unseen hand," a reference to the 18th-century economist's description of market forces.

Such suspicions could have an affect on the United States' stake in the Mideast, but the larger impact could be caused by political unrest that might follow a reversion to living standards of a decade ago.

Belushi

Maxwell Glen Cody Shearer

WASHINGTON — Six months from now few people will recall where they were upon hearing that John Belushi was dead. But this fact belies his importance to children of the "Me" decade.

When Belushi entered our lives in 1975 as a regular on the iconoclastic television program "Saturday Night Live," he had already been titillating the irreverent side of coffeehouse and radio audiences for several years. Though his role in The National Lampoon Radio Hour was less memorable, the weekly broadcast — along with the television parody "Groove Tube" — may have helped prepare a mass audience for what Belushi would unleash upon it.

Yet there was an element of good timing to Belushi's arrival. In the fall of '75, America was smarting from Vietnam, Watergate and its dependence on foreign oil. Gerald Ford was president. Almost naturally, people were fond of saying that a new decade was upon us, and that it needed defining.

"Saturday Night's" troup of relative unknowns, the Not Ready for Prime Time Players, quickly became the most accurate of public chroniclers of these "new timss." They parodied things we all had to live with: families, television commercials and news anchormen. Their spoofs of celebrities left no one unscathed.

President Ford, "whose motor skills were always good materail for Chevy Chase, was often devastated by the antics of the young upstarts (leading at one point to special White House briefings on the president's athletic abilities); Dan Akroyd's incarnation as Papa Conehead meant a lot to those of us with stuffy parents; Gilda Radner's hawking of a floor wax that "doubless a dessert topping" helped change the way we look at commercials. And many young Americans will never forget the night that "Weekend Update" anchorwoman Jane Curtin ripped open her blouse in defiance of more than 20 million viewers.

It was John Beiushi, however, who was the trademark of "Saturday Night's" popularity. If they didn't watch him live, everyone knows well enough now that the grotesque actor was almost magically funny, whether portraying a dreaded killer bee or samurai television repair man. In his routines Belushi often widened the gap between sanity and insanity. Indeed, it seemed that he could make almost anything funny.

Belushi once explained his popularity this way: "My characters say it's OK to screw up. People don't have to be perfect. They don't have to be real smart."

In defining his own appeal, however, Belushi reminds us that everyone on "Saturday Night" had a following of some kind. Taken together, the Not Ready For Prime Time Players were a reflection of their audiences' everyday experiences. Belushi was only part of the crowd.

And it was with our own crowd that we made "Saturday Night Live" a weekly ritual. Many people would organize a new kind of party around the 90-minute show itself. Not everyone knew, of course, how revolutionary the show was during the early years: as late as 1978, one could still meet wide-eyed, newfound converts.

Today it's inditive, though perhaps unfortunate, that the chief convertional fodder at many parties is often old "Saturday Night" material. While the show drags on without the original cast, people seem to remember only the good old days.

Imitations can't recreate the zaniness that "Saturday Night" ushered into our lives. In its original form, the program triggered a complete release from the unrelenting facts of life. Once a week before bedtime, it became perfect medicine for a generation whose members were either face-to-face with reality or running away from it. The more serious we were in either pursuit, the wackier Belushi and Co. seemed to behave.

Belushi (with occasional help from Akroyd) tried to elicit the same satisfaction from the moviegoing audience, creating funny though implausible films such as "1941" and "The Blues Brothers." Unfortunately, his fans didn't need to sit through two hours of carefully-produced hysteria.

Yet, when Belushi's generation does look back at the best of the 1970s, it will probably overlook his Hollywood flops (as well as those of Chevy Chase and Dan Akroyd). Along with his six partners, Belushi will be remembered for giving us the comic relief we so badly needed. He sat us down and made us laugh.

The death of a clown, we're learning, hits us harder than we might have thought. Our generation hasn't embraced many comedians as its own. Fewer of them have died on us. It's understandable that Belushi's death, at 33, makes us wonder whether so many will laugh together again.

Edwin Gill: Scholarly And Versatile

Noel Yancey

When Edwin Gill died five years ago after 50 years in public life, the word most often spoken in the eulogies was "integrity." Few North Carolnians have merited that accolade more. But, as a reporter who covered the porlty bachelor's office for most of those 50 years, I can think of several other apt words and phrases. In my mind, Gill was scholarly and versatile, a politician in the finest meaning of that word and the model for an ideal public servent.

When I first encountered Gill around 1936, he was organizing the newly-created State Paroles Commission. He made it the model which several other states copied and which promted a national survey to describe North Carolina as a "laboratory in which a new, and possibly more effective type of parole supervision is being tested."

Gill switched readily from the roll of paroles expert to tax collector in 1942 when Gov. J. Melville Broughton needed a troubleshooter to take over the helm of the State Department of Revenue when it was rocked by scandal. Some observers said he whipped a tougher job as revenue commissioner then he had as parole commissioner. Under his stewardship, state revenue collections rose from $57.6 million the first year to $129.5 million the last year he held the job.

Because he backed the wrong horse in the 1948 gubernatorial election, Gill left state government in 1949 shortly after W. Kerr Scott was sworn in as governor. After practicing law briefly in Washington and a brief stint as collector of internal revenue, Gov. William B. Umstead appointed Gill state treasurer in 1953, and he held the job until just a few months before his death in 1978. Gill, a Laurinburg native and son of a bank cashier, was proud of the fact the North Carolina's credit rating was AAA — the highest grade given by the Wall Street experts who rate state bonds.

After studying law under Dean Samuel Fox Mordecai at Trinity College — now Duke University — Gill embarked upon the practice of law in Laurinburg. Like many young attorneys, Gill was frequently asked to make speeches. In his case, Gill's first speech was to the Confederate Veterans of Scotland County, only a hand full of whom were still living. He prepared it carefully and delivered it to the attentive old men with fervor.

When Gill had finished, the vets' commander, Dougald Stewart wrung his hand, thanked him and expressed the hope that Gill's speech would be printed in the Laurinburg Exchange. Swelling with pride, Gill said he would approach the paper's editor about publishing the address. "Well, I hope he does print it," said Stewart, "because we boys (the veterans) are so deaf we haven't been able to hear a word of what you said."

Gill's friend and neighbors in Scotland County must have heard — or read — and understood some of his speeches because in 1928 they elected him to the State House of Representatives. During the campaign, Gill went down the line for Al Smith, the New York governor — a Catholic and a wet — who was the democratic nominee for president. The state and nation went for Herbert Hoover for the presidency, but Gill had formed a lifelong friendship with O. Max Gardner, the Shelby Democrat who was elected governor. In the 1929 and 1931 legislatures, Gill fought for the reforms Governor Gardner advocated in schools, roads and local government finance.

In 1931, Gill became Gardner's private secretary. Gill's friendship with Gardner was to continue until Gardner's death in 1947, and was primarily responsible for Gill's decision to embark on a career in state government.

Gill's interest in art led him to take an active part in the drive for a $1 million state appropriation for art. The appropriation was matched with a million dollars worth of art treasures from the Kresse Foundation to form the nucleus for the State Art Museum's collection.

Von Bulow Jury Recesses

By LARRY LAUGHLIN
Associated Press Writer

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Stymied after three days, the jury weighing whether Claus von Bulow tried to murder his wealthy wife with an insulin injection called a break in its deliberations Saturday without reaching a verdict.

There was no indication how close the seven men and five women were from to a verdict.

Judge Thomas H. Needham said he would arrange for the jurors to attend religious services if they wish Sunday, and will allow them to resume deliberations whenever convenient afterward.

He asked if the jurors were anxious to eat dinner.

"Yes sir, I think they're a pretty hungry lot," replied jury foreman Barbara Connett.

The jurors returned to the courtroom at 5 p.m. as von Bulow sat at the defense table with his lawyers.

The tall, dapper socialite faces two counts of attempted murder. Prosecutors say he secretly administered insulin injections that sent his wife, Martha "Sunny" von Bulow into a lasting coma.

Since beginning deliberations at noon Thursday, the jurors returned to the courtroom once — late Friday — to ask for a review of testimony by the personal maid to Mrs. von Bulow. The jury then spent the night sequestered at a hotel and resumed deliberations Saturday morning.

Von Bulow, 55, wearing a black, double-breasted suit, waited with his lawyers on the second floor of the courthouse where the nine-week trial took place.

"It's hard to say," he responded when asked how he was holding up under the strain of waiting.

"Same as yesterday, only worse," said defense co-counsel John F. Sheehan. On Friday, his partner, Herald P. Fahringer, said the defense team was "hopeful and optimistic."

Prosecutor Stephen R. Famiglietti, meanwhile, was seen bringing a small portable television into the courthouse. Asked why, he said, "I'm crazy about basketball." He said he would watch the NCAA college basketball tournament while waiting for a verdict.

Famiglietti argued injections administered by von Bulow pushed his wife into comas Dec. 27, 1979, and Dec. 21, 1980. The state contends von Bulow wanted his wife dead so he could inherit his $14 million share of her $75 million fortune and be free to marry his lover, a former television actress.

He has been free on $100,000 bond. If convicted on the two counts of attempted murder he faces a maximum 40 years in prison. If Needham makes the terms consecutive, von Bulow would not be eligible for parole for 13 years, four months. Concurrent terms would mean he could be freed in 7½ years, according to the attorney general's office.

Mrs. von Bulow, 50, once a lovely fixture of international high society, has been comatose for more than 14 months in a New York City Hosital and is not expected to recover.

The jury emerged from its cramped chamber off the courtroom Friday to have a court stenographer read back part of the testimony of Maria Schrallhammer, Mrs. von Bulow's maid of 23 years. It was Miss Schrallhamer's suspicions that sparked the inquiry leading to von Bulow's indictment last July.

Medical experts called by Famiglietti testified injections of the hormone, which reduces sugar levels in the blood, are the only possible explanation for Mrs. von Bulow's comas.

Fahringer has portrayed Mrs. von Bulow as a mentally troubled woman bedeviled by drugs and alcohol. He contended her reckless habits, in combination with her hypoglycemia, triggered both episodes.

Fahringer, arguing her condition also could have been caused by a suicide attempt, brought in testimony from a psychiatrist who interviewed Mrs. von Bulow as she recovered from her first coma and described her as profoundly depressed.

A medical technician testified Mrs. von Bulow told him she had tried to kill herself. But a nurse who said she was present when the technician was in the room denied Mrs. von Bulow said that.

The defense also called an endocrinologist who said insulin injections could not conclusively be cited as the cause of either coma.

Miss Schrallhammer said she became suspicious of von Bulow because he delayed calling a doctor as his wife slipped into her first coma.

She said she began keeping track of a small black bag that appered among von Bulow's possessions in Newport and at the couple's Fifth Avenue apartment.

Inside, she said she found a hypodermic needle, syringes and barbiturates, and on one occasion, a vial of insulin.

The bag was seized from von Bulow's locked closet at Clarendon Court Jan. 23, 1981, by a private detective and Prince Alexander G. von Auersperg.

Social Security Freeze Rejected

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration on Saturday shot down a congressional proposal to clamp a two-year freeze on Social Security cost-of-living payments as way of reducing big budget deficits.

"In the president's view," said White House spokesman David Gergen, "Social Security is off the agenda for 1982."

Gergen said Reagan pledged not to make any changes in Social Security until a report comes in late this year from a bipartisan commission that was established to find ways to shore up the financially troubled system.

"There are no plans here to pursue any changes in Social Security until the commission reports," Gergen said.

The two-year freeze is among a list of options being discussed by senior Republican senators working on what they hope will be a bipartisan revision of Reagan's heavy-deficit budget.

Other major ingredients include higher taxes and cuts in military spending.

Gergen refused to discuss the various options point-by-point, but singled out Social Security as an area that the administration considers out of bounds.

Nicaraguan Rebel Changes Story Leaves U.S. Officials Red-Faced

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jose Orlando Tardencillas Espinosa went home to Nicaragua on Saturday, ending a brief and unhappy chapter for the U.S. State Department in its efforts to prove outside involvement in the rebel war in El Salvador.

"He was returned at his request last night to the Nicaraguan Embassy for prompt shipment back to Nicaragua," a U.S. official said. A spokesman for the Nicaraguan Embassy said Tardencillas was handed over to Ambassador Francisco Fiallos Navarro at 3 a.m. Saturday and was put on a flight to Managua at 10 a.m.

In Nicaragua, the newspaper Barricada, owned by the ruling leftist Sandinista National Liberation Front, said Tardencillas' recantation of statements he had made previously about outside involvement in El Salvador was an example of the dignity of a Nicaraguan youth."

Meanwhile, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. planned to leave for New York on Sunday for more consultations on a Mexican peace proposal for Central America with Mexican Foreign Minister Jorge Castaneda.

It will be the second time in two weeks that Haig and Castaneda have conferred on the plan. However, a senior State Department official said Saturday that the Administration still believes the plan is flawed because it wouldn't prevent outside intervention, which he said threatens all of Central America.

"You've got to look at Cuba and you've got to look at the Soviet Union in this mix, and you've got to deal with all," said the official, who insisted on anonymity. He said the Mexican plan also needs "a guarantee (from Nicaragua) to keep the hell out of the affairs of neighboring states."

"Without that it only becomes a delaying negotiating tactic to permit the activity to continue, at least we have to be concerned as Americans that that might be the outcome, and we cannot permit that."

He said the Mexicans "do not reject" the specific U.S. criticism of their plan, which calls for a negotiated end to the fighting in El Salvador, a non-aggression pact between the United States and Nicaragua and talks between Cuba and the United States.

As for Tardencillas, U.S. officials made no secret that they were happy to have him gone. "Whoever said that a terrorist is reliable," asked the senior official.

Tardencillas, 19, told reporters Friday that he knew nothing about Nicaraguan and Cuban involvement in El Salvador — a completely different story than he had told State Department officials just a short time earlier.

Officials had hoped that Tardencillas would tell reporters about being recruited by Nicaragua to fight in El Salvador and that he had been trained in Ethiopia and Cuba.

The story would have helped confirm the Reagan administration's allegations of Cuban and Nicaraguan involvement in the Salvadoran insurgency.

Tardencillas, who admitted to fighting on the rebel side in El Salvador, had told the story just that way after his capture early last year. But to be sure both sides had it right, State Department officials went over it again in a 20-minute "dry run" before reporters were brought in.

A source said Tardencillas was just fine in the "dry run," repeating the story just as he told it in El Salvador. But to reporters a short time later, he denied knowledge of outside involvement in El Salvador and said he had never been to Ethiopia or Cuba, let alone receive military training there.

Stunned officials didn't try to cover up their embarrassment. Dean Fischer, the State Department spokesman, simply observed that the man "had lied," if not Friday, then earlier.

Tardencillas told reporters he had been threatened with death if he didn't tell them certain things. But Fischer said there hadn't been any death threats, and the decision of officials to turn Tardencillas over to the Nicaraguan Embassy showed they wished no harm to come to him.

Tardencillas has been brought to Washington by the U.S. government on Tuesday. He had spent the previous year in a prison in El Salvador. An official said the Salvadorans had turned him over to U.S. custody.

The Nicaraguan Embassy had said in a statement Thursday night that it would hold the U.S. government responsible for Tardencillas' safety.

Leftist Rebels Stage Ambush

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist guerrillas ambushed government troops and civilians on a road in northern Chalatenango province, killing 20 civilians and wounding at least 15, an army commander said Saturday.

Col. Dionisio Hernandez, the Chalatenango military zone commander, said in a telephone interview that a number of soldiers also were killed in "prolonged" fighting with the guerrillas after the Friday night attack. He gave no figures.

Reporters in Chalatenango City saw the bodies of seven soldiers being buried in the local cemetary along with 13 of the 20 civilians slain, and were told the soldiers were killed in the ambush.

Hernandez said about 80 soldiers had been pulled back from a fighting area and were walking toward Chalatenango City, the provincial capital, when they were ambushed on a stretch of road near Guaragila, about 45 miles northeast of San Salvador.

He said that about 40 civilians, mostly peasants, had joined the military contingent a few miles back for protection. "Among the civilians killed were five children and a number of women," Hernandez said.

In San Miguel, 72 miles southeast of San Salvador, press reports said unidentified gunmen killed nine people, including an entire family of five. It said the bullet-riddled bodies were found on the streets.

Fighting was reported Friday in Tecoluca, but an army spokesman who asked anonymity said the army was in control of the town.

At least two people were reported to have died when guerrillas set fire to a cluster of huts on the outskirts of Tecoluca.

Residents reported army patols were combing areas in the northern part of the province in search of guerrilla hideouts.

The El Salvador Human Rights Commission estimates that more than 32,000 people, mostly civilian non-combatants, have been killed in political bloodshed since the U.S.-backed military-civilian junta came to power after an October 1979 coup.

The army reported 26 soldiers died in fighting last week, including Lt. Col. Mario Alberto Azenon Palma, a battalion commander killed Thursday in San Vicente province. He was believed to be the highest-ranking officer killed in action in the 28-month-old civil war.

On Saturday, acting Archbishop Arturo Rivera y Damas appealed to whoever wins in constituent assembly elections scheduled for March 28 to seek negotiations with the leftist guerrillas afterwards.

Rivera y Damas and the country's three other Roman Catholic bishops have endorsed the elections, called by the ruling junta.

Under the junta's plan, which the Reagan administration strongly supports, the assembly will elect a provisional president to rule the country while it reforms the constitution and decides when and under what rules people can elect a constitutional president and other national authorities.

All leftist groups are boycotting the elections. Only the centrist Christian Democrats are competing with five rightist parties.

Rivera y Damas told a news conference that whatever government emerges from the elections "must seek a dialogue for peace or it will not be doing its duty."

Without a dialogue between the combatants, the elections "are not a solution in themselves," because the left will not be allowed a voice in running the country.

Rivera y Damas also critized leftist guerrilla threats to disrupt the voting.

"If a large part of the people believe in elections as a possible solution to the conflict, then why should anyone deprive them of voting?" he said.

Bridge Crash Leaves 2 Dead, Five Injured

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — A truck rammed a group of cars stopped in dense fog for a minor crash on an interstate highway bridge early Saturday, killing two people and injuring at least five others, authorities said.

South Carolina State Patrol Sgt. W.H. Harvey said the truck, carrying small household appliances, wound up on top of one of the cars on the Savannah River bridge over the Georgia-South Carolina border. The crash set off a fire that destroyed two cars and burned the truck, authorities said.

Four people including a 4-year-old boy, were hospitalized at Doctors Hospital of Augusta, spokeswoman Jan Carter said. Three of them were in stable condition and the boy was in fair condition, she added.

The names of the victims were being withheld.

Another of the injured, Pedro Gonzales, 28, hometown unavailable, was in fair condition at Eugene Talmadge Memorial Hospital with burns on his face and neck, said spokesman Doug Vinson.

Several cars had stopped on the bridge because of a minor traffic accident in the dense fog, authorities said. The tractor-trailer truck slammed into the cars, damaging seven of them.

Authorities said the fog reduced visibility to a few feet on the bridge.

Witnesses said one man leaped over the side of the bridge and clung to the railing, apparently to escape the heat from the fire. They said he fell into the river but was pulled out by onlookers.

The accident was the worst of at least two dozen wrecks Friday night and Saturday after a dense fog blanketed the Augusta area, authorities said.

Legislative Building Gets Facelift

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state Legislative Building, its $8-million annex complete, is undergoing a nearly $400,000 facelift of its own.

Work in the 19-year-old, marble-faced building was delayed until the General Assembly adjourned its special session last month. As a result, state officials are hoping the biggest part of the refurbishment can be completed in time for the scheduled June budget session.

And if legislative reapportionment plans run into more trouble and another special session is needed before June?

"It'll be a nightmare so far as the schedule of work," said John Allen, legislative services officer. "Not for the members — we'll accommodate them."

Dust has been flying in the building since workmen began three weeks ago, knocking out walls to expand offices and building a new dining room.

"We will not be through by the time of the budget session, but we hope it will be just finishing work that is still to be done," said Allen, who is in charge of the Legislative Building and the new legislative office building across the street which opened this year.

With the addition of the annex, built after considerable controversy, all legislators will be afforded much larger offices. Those who move to the new building will get large, two-office suites with new furniture.

And for those who remain in the Legislative Building, two-office suites are being created by placing doors between the small cubicles that were designed for lawmakers' offices 20 years ago, before the advent of legislative secretaries.

Seventy-five of the 170 legislators will move into offices in the new building, although few have been moved so far, Allen said.

Several larger offices are being made in the Legislative Building, such as a large second-floor corner suite. It will be larger than House Speaker Liston Ramsey's office, which he intends to keep, and will go to the Rules Committee chairman.

Allen said the building also will include a new lounge for legislators in the old Finance Committee Room and a new vistors' lounge — which is expected to become home for lobbyists — is being created with a picture-window view of the old Capitol.

The Legislative Building, designed by Edward Durell Stone and opened in 1963 at a construction cost of $4.5 million, is built largely of custom-made crushed-granite blocks.

Allen said the blocks were made from a special mold which the state now owns. But because they would be so expensive to reproduce, the blocks are being salvaged from walls that have been removed and are being used in other areas of the building.

Among the other work going on is construction of a new cafeteria and dining room, which will be moved from two first-floor courts to the basement. Crumbling plaster is being repaired in the ceiling; the roof is being repaired and some of the large exterior tiles have been replaced.

Even the 28-foot terrazzo mosaic of the state's Great Seal, embeded in the entranceway, is being patched and filled.

The project is the first real maintenance ever performed on the building, Allen said.

The work has created one special problem. Because asbestos was used in the ceiling, Durham subcontractor Southeastern Shelter Corp. had to take special steps to control the dangerous fibers in areas where the ceiling was cut.

Several rooms, including half the basement, had to be sealed in plastic for several days until the fibers settled. Jake Harris, an executive with Shelter Corp., said the asbestos work presented no real problems.

Study Blames Lung Disorders On Mill Dust

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A three-year study by the World Health Organization indicates cotton dust causes both immediate and long-term lung disorder in mill workers, in contradiction to a report by another organization.

Although based on the same scientific evidence, the study disputes a report also released last week by the National Academy of Sciences, which concluded there is insufficient evidence that breathing cotton dust causes byssinosis, or brown lung.

The WHO report was released at a committee meeting in Geneva.

The academy report is significant because it is certain to be considered in the federal government's review of dust standards for American cotton mills. The review was part of President Reagan's campaign pledge to ease the federal regulatory load on industry.

The academy's past reports have carried considerable weight. Its Recommended Dietary Allowances appear on the side of virtually every cereal box.

Dr. Richard Schilling of London, a WHO comittee member and one of the world's leading brown-lung researchers, said in an interview with The Charlotte Observer that, "We quite definitely support the United States cotton dust standards."

But the academy report, says one of the doctors who helped prepare it, could be interpreted to mean the cotton dust standard is unnecessary.

The doctor, Kaye Kilburn of the University of Southern California, issued a minority report to the academy's study.

"That a chronic disorder due to cotton dust should be denied or seriously doubted despite almost 300 years of recorded history is not defensible," Kilburn wrote.

Dr. Jerome Kleinerman of Mount Sinai Medical Center in New York and academy committee chairman said the academy report's conclusion should "in no way be interpreted to say there is no chronic effect."

"What we're saying is that the evidence is not strong enough to totally implicate exposure to cotton dust as sole etiologic agent (cause) in chronic disease," he said.

Government studies have placed the number of former or current cotton textile workers with byssinsois at about 30,000, including 18,000 in North Carolina and South Carolina.

A recent textile industry survey estimated less than half of 1 percent of the nation's 300,000 active workers have byssinosis. About 115,000 people in North Carolina and South Carolina work in plants processing cotton.

Virginia House Plan Rejected

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department has rejected Virginia's latest plan for reapportioning its House of Delegates districts, saying it may discriminate against black voters, officials said Saturday.

The department, which under the 1965 Voting Rights Act has to approve the redistricting plan, objected to planned reapportionments in the Norfolk, Portsmouth, Newport News and Hampton areas.

Assistant Attorney General William Bradford Reynolds, head of the department's civil rights division, said he reviewed the plan and could not conclude that it "has no discriminatory purpose or effect."

Reynolds' objections were outlined in a letter to Virginia Attorney General Gerald Baliles.

The letter, dated Friday, was released Saturday, three days after a group of civil rights leaders from Virginia with Reynolds to complain that the proposal was discriminatory. The state's legislative leaders had defended the plan during a similar meeting with Reynolds earlier.

The 1965 law requires nine states, including Virginia, and parts of 13 others with histories of voter discrimination, to get advance clearance of any electoral changes from the Justice Department or the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia.

The latest Virginia plan, the fifth proposed in the past year by the state's legislature and rejected by the Justice Department, created 95 single-member districts and a five-member district in Norfolk.

Reynolds said the plan's "anomalous treatment (of Norfolk) is of particular relevance in that a fairly apportioned plan of single-member districts would provide for two districts with substantial black majorities."

Inflation News Can Be Bad As Well As Good

By OWEN ULLMANN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The good news, the Reagan administration is quick to note, is that inflation is coming down very rapidly. The bad news, an unemployed auto worker or bankrupt businessman says just as quickly, is that a severe recession is the reason why.

What President Reagan calls "supply-side" economics appears indistinguishable thus far from traditional Republican economics.

It's no secret that recessions cool inflation. Rising unemployment and consumer uncertainty reduce demand for goods and services, and that curbs wage and price increases.

Last month, wholesale prices fell for the first time in six years, the government reported Friday. The rare price drop, at an annual rate of 1.7 percent, occurred because the recession has "knocked the stuffing out of excess demand," observes Walter Heller, chief economist to Presidents Kennedy and Johnson.

The trade-off of slower economic activity and higher unemployment for lower inflation has been used repeatedly by Republican administrations as a policy tool — a tool that candidate Ronald Reagan, and later President Reagan, pledged not to use.

Reagan and his advisers insist they never intended to fight inflation with a recession and high unemployment. Nevertheless, they heartily endorsed the Federal Reserve Board's decision to ease inflation by slowing the growth of money and credit in the economy — a policy that triggered the recession by pushing up interest rates.

Reagan's initial economic forecast, prepared in early 1981, predicted inflation would come down significantly, but it did not predict a recession. Once the downturn hit, the administration, at varying times, blamed it on the economic "mess" inherited from the Carter administration, Congress' refusal to enact a tax cut early last year, the Federal Reserve's poor management of the nation's money supply and the financial markets' refusal to show their belief in the president's program by lowering interest rates.

The administration is sensitive to suggestions that it is resorting to recessions and unemployment to slow inflation. Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes, while hailing the latest price drop as "good news," was careful not to claim administration responsibility for the latest development, presumably because he also might have had to claim administration responsibility for the recession.

Similarly, White House officials were upset earlier this month when budget director David A. Stockman told a group of business supporters that high unemployment, an unexpectedly severe recession and numerous business failures "are all part of the cure" for ending inflation. Chief White House economist Murray L. Weidenbaum called Stockman's remarks "an unfortunate choice of words."

Weidenbaum suggested that the Federal Reserve, which has borne much of the blame for the recession, "should get a very large portion of the credit" for bringing down inflation.

The administration's recent humility on the price front may stem from the response Vice President George Bush received from angry labor leaders after he complained that they weren't giving Reagan credit for lowering inflation.

"If you destroy the economy of this country, you're going to get to the point where nobody can buy anything and prices are going to go down," AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland replied. "I don't recommend it as an economic policy, but if his (Reagan's) policies produced a drop in prices, his policies produced the unemployment that created it."

In his first nationwide address on the economy, on Feb. 5, 1981, Reagan said, "We don't have to choose between inflation and unemployment — they go hand in hand. It's time to try something different and that's what we're going to do."

Since Reagan moved into the White House, inflation, as measured by the Consumer Price Index, has fallen from 12 percent to 8½ percent. Many economists expect inflation to fall to 7 percent or less by the end of this year.

During the same period, unemployment has climbed from 7.4 percent to 8.8 percent — an increase of 1½ million jobless Americans. Many economists predict the unemployment rate will climb above 9 percent within a few months.

Weidenbaum says Reagan, in his economic address, was referring to long-term objectives rather than the temporary, painful and unavoidable adjustment the economy must go through now.

What's different this time, Weidenbaum contends, is that the president is putting in place a long-term program of tax and budget cuts so that when the economy pulls out of its current recession, inflation will not flare up again. But it will take time for the program to work.

Senators Shaping Budget Compromise

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In the midst of fiery political rhetoric about a budget stalemate, five GOP Senate leaders meet nearly every night to design a deficit-reducing alternative plan acceptable to President Reagan.

They gather in the large, well-furnished office of Senate Republican leader Howard Baker of Tennessee, about 50 feet from the Senate chamber, to discuss options and form a spending plan they hope Democrats can support.

The group in search of the "comprehensive bipartisan alternative" Reagan has said he would entertain includes Baker, Pete Domenici of New Mexico, Mark Hatfield of Oregon, Bob Dole of Kansas, and Paul Laxalt of Nevada.

While setting no timetable for completing the package, Baker and the others intend to "make a presentation" of various options to the entire Senate GOP membership at the Republican Policy Committee luncheon Tuesday to get their reaction.

The Senate leaders, who began with 12 pages of budget options, have narrowed their choices considerably this past week, a GOP leadership source said, and the alternative plan appears to be taking shape.

To make sure no option has been overlooked, however, Baker sent a letter to the GOP membership asking senators to submit to his office any "suggestions and plans" by 5 p.m. EST Monday.

Baker has said Reagan "is being kept fully informed" of the group's actions on a daily basis. Presumably, the president would let the group know of any options he totally opposes.

In addition, Baker has promised to show the completed package to Reagan first, before soliciting Democratic support.

Leadership sources said the group has tentatively decided on a "working sheet" of proposals to:

—Reduce the 1983 deficit by $40 billion to $45 billion through spending cuts for discretionary programs, including a small amount from defense, and the so-called entitlement or basic benefit programs such as Social Security, Medicare, Medicaid and food stamps.

—Increase revenues through excise taxes and tax changes, the revenue of which might be earmarked for certain programs such as defense or education. This would reduce the 1983 deficit even further, to somewhere below $100 billion.

—Leave intact the 10 percent individual income tax cuts to take effect this July and in July 1983, but perhaps eliminate the indexing of tax rates to inflation, which would take effect in 1985. Sources noted the indexing provision was not part of Reagan's original tax cut program.

Circus Elephant Goes Berserk

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — A circus elephant that had just towed a stagecoach loaded with children suddenly went berserk and ran trumpeting out of the arena, slamming into a showgirls' dressing room and trying to enter a shower stall.

There were no injuries in the mishap Friday night during a performance of the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey Circus at the Scope arena.

But "Bonnie" the elephant wrecked the empty stagecoach she was pulling as she galloped for the exit tunnel. She crashed into several props and then bolted into the dressing room, where she knocked down a wall, witnesses said.

"I guess she wanted to take a shower," said an unidentified Scope janitor who was cleaning up the debris Saturday. "Looks like she didn't fit, but she went in anyway."

Bonnie's romp was a rare occurence for the show's animals, said circus spokesman Gary W. Lane. "It's quite out of the ordinary. This doesn't happen every day."

During the show, three elephants were pulling coachloads of children picked from the audience. The coaches were paraded around all three rings during a Western cowboy show, which included gunfire. The children had gotten off the coaches and the elephants were being led from the arena when Bonnie bolted at a full gallop, according to witnesses.

French Elections Serve As Vote On Mitterrand

By GREG MacARTHUR
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) — The French left and right are squaring off for Sunday's nationwide provincial balloting, which both sides see as a referendum on the 9-month-old Socialist government of President Francois Mitterrand.

The conservatives are trying to recapture a measure of the power they held uninterrupted for 23 years before losing the presidency and the National Assembly to the left last spring.

The Socialists are hoping for a vote of confidence on their policies, including sweeping nationalizations, a wealth tax, a reduced work week and a regional decentralization program.

And among those running is former President Valery Giscard d'Estaing, attempting his first political comeback since being unseated by Mitterrand last spring.

Those elected will have executive powers over local affairs, while in the past they did little more than carry out orders from Paris.

More than 7,500 candidates are vying for the jobs of just over half of France's department administrators — 2,029 seats — in two rounds of voting on Sunday and March 21. About 19 million people are expected to cast ballots.

Giscard d'Estaing is considered a shoo-in for the local post from the wealthy suburban constituency of his home town of Chamaliers in central France, but his attempt to recapture the leadership of the right from his one-time ally, Paris Mayor Jacques Chirac, is open to question.

Chirac, president of the neo-Gaullist Rally for the Republic (RPR), became the main opposition voice following the Socialist victory and shows no indication of quieting down.

Late Friday, he filed a lawsuit against Interior Minister Gaston Defferre charging him with "defamation during a political campaign."

The suit followed a week of politically-charged accusations against Defferre, who counter-attacked by alleging Chirac and three other RPR Leaders had in the past "protected" a shady Paris gambler who was gunned down in the street Jan. 15.

Defferre, the mayor of Marseille, had been under intense opposition attack in recent days in connection with his refusal to promote a top-ranking police officer and the suicide of a national welfare administrator suspended from his job in Marseille.

Both men had reputations for being anti-union, leading to opposition charges of a government "ideological withhunt."

Premier Pierre Mauroy, who has been campaigning across the country in preparation for Sunday's first round, charged the right with cynically trying to use the suicide for its political ends.

The leftist press characterized the promotion dispute as an apolitical test of strength between the Defferre and a tightly-knit police hierarchy used to having its own way.

Analysts will also be watching the provincial elections to see if they confirm the decline of the French Communist Party.

Last spring, the Communists slipped from their habitual 20 percent of the vote to below 15 percent — their worst showing since 1936. Even so, they were brought into the Socialist government as junior partners.

The Socialists are predicting an overall leftist victory after the March 21 runoff of 52 percent.

That would be a slight decline from the 53.7 percent the left received when it captured the National Assembly last June.

The RPR and Giscard d'Estaing's smaller Union for French Democracy have agreed not to compete against each other in the first-round. Both sides have cooperated in fielding the strongest single candidate for any given seat.

The Communists and Socialists have come to no similar accord.

Austria May Approve Arm Sales For Libya

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Austrian Chancellor Bruno Kreisky said Saturday his Socialist government probably would approve arms deliveries to Libya "if Libya does not wage a war against another state."

He spoke to reporters at the airport after Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy, accused by the U.S. government of bankrolling international terrorism, left after a four-day visit, his first to the West.

Kreisky said officials traveling with Khadafy had negotiated with Austrian businessmen about arms shipments, but Kreisky said he had not arranged the talks and would give no other details.

However, Austria's nationalized Steyr-Daimler-Puch company has sold light battle tanks, assault rifles and ammunition to South American and Arab countries, and was believed to have talked to the Libyans.

From Vienna, Khadafy flew unexpectedly to Malta for talks with Socialist Prime Minister Dom Mintoff, presumably to discuss their dispute over off-shore oil exploration rights south of Malta. The state-run Maltese television said Khadafy was met at the airport by President Agatha Barbara and then went to the presidential palace. No details were immediately available.

In a joint declaration issued about five hours after Khadafy left, the Austrian government appeared to criticize the United States for imposing a boycott on Libyan oil.

It said in part: "Both sides stressed the need for the policy of detente. They were agreed in the opinion that the strict observance of all provisions of international law is indispensable, in particular the renunciation of the use or threat of force in international relations, including boycott measures and sanctions brought about not by resolutions in the United Nations, and that disputes between states must be resolved exclusively by peaceful means, with due respect of territorial integrity."

Meanwhile, Austrian Foreign Minister Willibald Pahr was on his way to the United States to brief top administration officials in Washington on Khadafy's visit.

Kreisky said the U.S. decision to call Austrian Ambassador Thomas Klestil to the State Department to express concern over the Khadafy visit might be "mild criticism" of Austria, "but everybody must stand criticism."

Crash Probe Questions Bad-Weather Routines

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's investigation into the snowy crash of Air Florida Flight 90 has raised critical safety questions about the way airlines operate in snow or icy weather.

Listening to 46 witnesses during nine day's of hearings, a federal inquiry panel focused repeatedly on whether the Air Florida jet that crashed, killing 78 people, was properly de-iced before it took off from Washington's National Airport.

Federal safety experts say evidence and testimony gathered since the Jan. 13 crash raises a variety of questions about industry-wide procedures used to protect against ice and snow.

Among the findings that concern investigators are:

—Widespread confusion about the chemical solution used to de-ice aircraft with no consensus among manufacturers, aircraft builders and airlines on what concentration should be used or how long the mixture remains effective.

—While manuals and training programs put strong emphasis on the danger ice poses to a jetliner, incidents where pilots take off with ice or snow on their wings still occur too frequently.

—Guidelines on when pilots should use an engine defrost system designed to keep critical thrust sensors from freezing are vague and at times conflicting. Engine icing has emerged as an issue in more than 70 incidents over the last few years, investigators were told.

—Responsibility as to who makes the final inspection of an aircraft was found to be unclear in the Air Florida case and may be at other airlines as well. In the case of Flight 90, the problem was compounded because another airline handled ground maintenance and de-icing — a practice used by an increasing number of carriers.

At the close of the public hearings Friday, Francis McAdams of the National Transportation Safety Board told reporters he expects the board to determine that "a chain of events" led to the Air Florida crash.

Many of those events involved the de-icing procedures and how both ground personnel and the flight crew perceived the potential danger the severe weather posed.

But testimony showed no agreement on what kind of chemical de-icing solution to use. American Airlines suggests a 25 percent solution of glycol and water. But Union Carbide, which produces glycol, suggests a mixture twice as strong.

At certain temperatures, American's manual calls for ground crews to use the soluton to clear away snow. However, a manual by the Boeing Co., which manufactured the 737 aircraft that crashed, warns against using the mixture for snow removal, saying it can mix with the snow and freeze.

Other testimony showed confusion about how long any solution, whatever the strength, will protect a plane against snow and ice accumulation.

An American Airlines maintenance chief suggested a loss of some protection within 10 to 15 minutes. Later an Eastern Airlines pilot said it was his impression the protection could last 40 minutes. A chemist for Union Carbide said he wouldn't venture a estimate because of too many variables.

The hearings also demonstrated disagreement within the industry about when pilots should use their engine defrost system. A Boeing bulletin said the anti-ice system should be turned on whenever there is wet snow. But the engine's manufacturer, Pratt & Whitney, does not differentiate between wet and dry snow.

Whether there was ice on the plane's wings, inhibiting lift, is another critical question in the Air Florida crash.

Robert Larson, Boeing's chief of technology, said he would never recommend the 737 aircraft take off with ice on the forward edges of its wings. Boeing submitted a list of nearly two dozen incidents reported since 1971 of control problems with the 737 because of ice or snow on the wings.

NTSB investigators have noted two crashes of commercial aircraft in 1979 and 1980 becaause of ice deposits on the wings' forward edge.

The investigators found that engine icing, believed to have been a factor in the Air Florida crash, also appears to be common. The Air Line Pilots Association told the panel there have been in the past two years at least 70 incidents of eratic cockpit instrument readings believed to be caused by engine icing.

According to Air Florida executives, the captain of Flight 90 had final responsibility for seeing that his plane was clear for takeoff. But testimony made clear the lines of responsibility were clouded.

Robert McKeon, an American Airlines mechanic, said he normally checks the engines on American's 727 aircraft, which have three engines mounted high on the rear fuselage. But on Air Florida's 737s, the engines are underneath the wings and he did not check them.

A maintenance supervisor said he thought it was the responsibility of the Air Florida representative to make a final check. That representative testified it was the pilot's responsibility, but witnesses said they never saw the flight crew leave their cockpit.

Investigators also have questioned whether proper separation was maintained between the Air Florida jet and an Eastern jet about to land, saying at one time the two aircraft closed within a mile of each other and briefly may have been on the same runway. FAA rules require a two-mile separation.

Eastern pilot Lawrence Jones testified that he was not alarmed by the separation, but acknowledged that his second officer, monitoring the air traffic control radio, at one point remarked, "It looks like this is going to be close."

Jones said no one in the Eastern cockpit saw the Air Florida plane because of poor visibility. Investigators do not believe separation played a role in the crash.

British Couple Win Jury Award

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — A jury has awarded $1 million to an elderly British couple hose son, a research physician, was shot to death in 1976 by robbers in his room at a Norfolk hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert A. Lewis of London had sued Norfolk Midtown Vacations Inc., former operator of the Holiday Inn-Midtown, for $2 million, alleging that security measures were inadequate. The inn has been since sold to Norshipco to house crews of Navy ships undergoing repairs at its shipyards.

"I don't believe it," Mrs. Lewis, 66, said in an interview Friday after the Circuit Court jury had awarded $500,000 to her and the same amount to her husband, who is 72.

Harvey E. White Jr., a defense lawyer, told Judge Thomas R. McNamara, "The amount shocks the conscience of a fair-minded person."

White asked the judge to either set aside the verdict or grant a new trial. McNamara said he would allow both sides to submit written arguments on the motion within the next few weeks.

Dr. Roger Julian Lewis, 33, a cancer research physician at Sloan-Kettering Institute in New York, was killed Feb. 13, 1976, in the motel room he was sharing with a friend, John F. Daly, a New York school teacher.

The two men, who lived together in an apartment in New York, were passing through Norfolk on their way south for a vacation.

Hunt To Visit City Monday

Gov. Jim Hunt will be in Greenville Monday for afternoon visits to Pitt Community College, the Pitt County Office Building on West Fifth Street, the Eastern Carolina Vocational Center and the Casablanca Restaurant.

Hunt is scheduled to present the Region 4 Secretary of Education's Outstanding Vocational Education Energy Award to Pitt Community College during a 1:15 p.m. to 1:35 p.m. program, then tour the PCC campus from 1:40 to 2:45.

At 3:30 p.m., the governor will be at the county office building at 1717 W. Fifth St. for a review of the Pitt County Juvenile Services Program. He is scheduled to tour the ECVC at 4:20 p.m.

Hunt will receive the first annual World Trade Award from the Coastal Plains Chapter of the N.C. World Trade Association at a 5 p.m. program at the Casablanca. He then will attend a reception sponsored by the Pitt County Democratic Women from 5:30 to 7 p.m. at the restaurant.

Wake Could Overtake Guilford

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Wake Conty will overtake Guilford County as North Carolina's second largest urban county before the year 2000, indicate new projections by state researchers.

The conclusion isn't new but the margins of growth are the first to be based on 1980 census data. The researchers who compiled the projections caution that the numbers still are preliminary.

For years, Guilford, the only county in the state with two major cities, has been second only to Mecklenburg in size.

The projections released recently by the North Carolina Office of Budget and Management show Guilford growing to 366,300 people by the year 2000, a 15.5 percent increase over the 1980 census population of 317,154. That rate is the lowest of any of the six major urban counties.

But Wake County is expected to grow 62.4 percent during the same period, from 300,832 people to 488,443.

And Mecklenburg County's expected growth is 24.8 percent, from 404,267 to 504,480.

In 1979, the state budget office predicted growth rates of only 5.2 percent in Guilford, 8.9 percent in Mecklenburg and 12.2 percent in Wake during the 1980s.

The new projections instead show Guilford with an 8.1 percent growth rate during the next 10 years, Mecklenburg with 12.6 percent and Wake with 29 percent.

During the same period, the projections say Forsyth County will grow by 12 percent to 272,864; Durham will grow 13 percent to 172,901; and Cumberland will grow 12.4 percent to 277,914.

The projections don't take into account the effect of water supplies, sewer service, roads or other governme[illegible] Both state [illegible] local planners [illegible] means the predictions could be upset easily.

Greensboro and Guilford County planners say limited water is a big reason Guilford is growing more slowly than other urban counties. County planner John Hampton said another reason is the high cost of land.

"I'd guess average raw land costs are 25 percent higher here than in Mecklenburg," he said, because so much land is owned by a few large development corporations that control the supply.

Universities — primarily North Carolina, N.C. State and Duke — and the Research Triangle Park combine with state government offices to draw people to Wake County.

Meanwhile, Mecklenburg has an aggressive growth policy and does not suffer from limitations such as water supply.

Karen Bunn, research director for the state budget office, said the figures were obtained by applying trends for past growth — patterns of migration, birth and death — to figures from the 1980 census.

Social Workers Planning Forum

A public forum entitled "Educational Needs of the Black Child, Family and Community — Phase II: Strategies for Intervention" will be held Saturday at Greenville Middle School on Arlington Boulevard from 2-4 p.m.

Almita S.R. Woods will be the keynote speaker. Workshop leaders include Edward Carter, educational advocate; Ernest Brown, community leader; Carolyn Ferebee, community coordinator and Ora Frizelle-Flynn, social worker.

The program is being presented in recognition of social work month and is sponsored by the Eastern North Carolina Regional Association of Black Social Workers.

Persons wanting further information may call Pearlia Rogers, coordinator, 758-5847 or Ann C. Speight, president, 355-6065.

East Federal Plans Merger

East Federal Savings and First American Federal have signed a letter of intent to merge the two institutions. The merger plan was announced by Bill Whittington, president of East Federal, and Ted Y. Matney, president of First American.

The new combination, with resources of over $650 million and 35 offices from the western Piedmont to the coast, will be the largest savings and loan in North Carolina. The headquarters of the combined institution will be in Guilford County and there will be locations in 25 communities.

Free Tax Help Is Available

Free tax assistance is available to taxpayers who need help filling out a federal tax return and cannot afford to pay.

It's called Volunteer Income Tax Assistance (VITA) and is offered by local volunteers who are trained in tax law and return preparation by the Internal Revenue Serivce. The volunteers will assist taxpayers with Forms 1040A and 1040.

There are two sites for tax assistance in Pitt County. Taxpayers can get help in the lobby of the NCNB on First Street in Greenville from 2 p.m.-4 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays. The ECU Accounting Society will be available to help in the Mendenhall Student Store on the campus of East Carolina University from 4 p.m.-6 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Assistance will be offered until April when the filing season ends. Taxpayers interested in free tax assistance should bring their tax forms packets, W-2 forms and other pertinent tax documents.

Prof Says British Have Changed English Most

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Americans speak the king's English better than present day royal subjects, says an associate professor of English at Duke University.

Ronald Butters, who also is editor of American Speech magazine, says it's not true that upstart American settlers "corrupted" the English language after the Revolutionary War. Instead, Butters says, it is the British who have changed English most.

As evidence of his theories, Butters cites language in the popular television show "Brideshead Revisited," originally a novel written by Englishman Evelyn Waugh in the 1940s. Butters says speech patterns in the script have been rewritten for TV to reflect contemporary British usage.

As the most striking example of changes in the language, Butters points to use of the word "done," a propredicate.

Contemporary British speakers, if asked, "Why didn't you tell me?" would probably respond, "I don't know, I should have done." But Butters says Americans probably would respond saying, "I should have," the way British would have answered around the time of World War I.

Judge Grants Execution Stay

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Attorneys for convicted murdere Velma Margie Barfield, the only woman on death row in North Carolina, will ask a federal judge March 26 to overturn her death sentence.

U.S. District Judge Franklin T. Dupree scheduled a hearing in federal court after granting a stay of execution Friday for Mrs. Barfield, who had been scheduled to die in the state's gas chamber March 22.

Mrs. Barfield, 48, of Saint Pauls, was convicted in 1978 of killing her fiance by putting rat poison into his beer. Mrs. Barfield also has admitted poisoning three other people, including her mother.

Dupree said he granted the stay of execution because he needed more time to read the voluminous case record, consisting of more than 2,000 pages, he said. But Dupree said it was his intention to handle the case quickly.

"This court is acutely aware of criticism the courts...are constantly being subjected to by the public...(about) the impossibility of ever getting to the end of a case," Dupree said.

Mrs. Barfield's case is considered the most advanced in pursuit of appeals of any of the 19 people currently under death sentences in North Carolina.

Recalled Formula Popular In N.C.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — An infant formula recalled by its manufacturer which as many as 10,000 North Carolina babies may be using should not pose a serious threat, says a state health official.

Wyeth Laboratories has recalled several types of formula deficient in Vitamin B, the Food and Drug Administration said. On Friday, several varieties of SMA formula, not previously noted, were recalled.

"SMA is a very popular formula," said June Milby, spokeswoman for the North Carolina human resources department. "About 80,000 babies are born in North Carolina each year. About one-third of them are put on formula."

She said her department estimates that mothers of about 10,000 babies may be feeding their children the formula now.

Dr. Ray DiNapoli, deputy director for health services of the N.C. Department of Human Resources, said babies could obtain Vitamin B from other foods. But he said many infants four months old and younger are fed exclusively with the formula.

"At least one-fourth and probably one-third of the formula consumed by babies in this state is SMA," he said. "Generally three brands are used, and SMA is one of the big three."

Virginia Man Charged In Kidnap

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — A Chesapeake man, returned to Virginia after his capture by North Carolina authorities, has been charged with the kidnap, beating, rape and robbery of a 22-year-old Norfolk woman.

Richard K. Jones, 19, was arrested in Manteo Thursday. Highway Patrolmen had pursued him after he attempted to evade a routine roadblock set up to check drivers' licenses.

Police said the victim was beaten severely before she was raped and later tossed nude in the trunk of her automobile early Thursday morning and driven to North Carolina.

The Highway Patrolmen stopped Jones — who was driving the victim's car — in a grocery store parking lot. They heard a clomor from inside the trunk and found the woman, battered and disoriented, inside. She had been in the trunk more than five hours, police said.

Jones faces North Carolina charges of possessing a stolen vehicle, carrying a concealed weapon and driving without a license.

Jones, who told police he is a plasterer and "jack of all trades," waived extradition proceedings in an appearance before Manteo District Court Judge John Chaffin. The judge ordered his bond kept at $20,000, and Jones was returned to Norfolk Friday where he was charged with abduction, rape, anal sodomy and robbery, Sgt G.O. Harcum said.

The woman told police Jones had approached her outside a Virginia Beach nightspot about 2:30 a.m. Thursday. She said the man pestered her for a ride home, saying he lived a few blocks from her residence.

She said she drove Jones to the front of her mother's home, where he then allegedly beat and choked her.

The victim told police that she was driven to a wooded area in Chespeake where she was raped.

Police said the unconscious woman was then thrown into the trunk of her automobile which they said was driven to North Carolina.

Capt. Sam Smith of the Dare County Sheriff's Department said Jones picked up a hitchhiker somewhere in Dare County Thursday morning. He later stopped in Wanchese where he worked several hours at a fish packing house, Smith said.

While Jones stacked boxes of fish, police said the woman remained trapped in the trunk.

Jones is not a regular employee of the fish house.

About 11:30 a.m., Jones headed north on North Carolina 345 between Wanchese and Manteo. He soon encountered a routine Highway Patrol license checkpoint. When he turned the car he was driving around and fled the roadblock, Troopers Terry K. Tolar and Michael Rivenbark chased him.

They pulled Jones over in the crowded parking lot of a grocery store just north of Manteo about noon.

The two patrolmen opened the trunk after they heard noises inside. They found the nude woman, called for aid and questioned and arrested Jones. At the time of his arrest, Jones was armed with a .22 caliber derringer, police said.

The victim was treated at Albemarle Hospital in Elizabeth City and released late Thursday.

Bootleg Records

STUART, Fla. (UPI) — Investigators who descended on a downtown Stuart warehouse said they found the largest cache of bootleg records discovered anywhere in the world.

Eighteen FBI agents, four Martin County sheriff's detectives and three bootlegging specialists from the Recording Industries Association of America Friday went to an E-Z Storage Co. warehouse where they discovered thousands of unauthorized records and master tapes.

"It was the largest contraband record seizure in the world," said detective Glenn Gumbinner. "It adds up to millions and millions and millions of dollars. You've never seen so many records in one place in your lifetime."

FBI spokesman Welton Merry said the seized goods could be "worth perhaps $100 million." No arrests have been made.

Some Legislators Quit Panels

By GENE WANG

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Most members of the General Assembly appear to be slowly complying with a recommendation by the state attorney general's office that they step down from certain state boards and commissions.

Letters of resignation have been trickling in since Attorney General Rufus Edmisten advised lawmakers other state boards and commissions come under a recent state Supreme Court ruling on separation of powers.

The court ruled legislators cannot serve on the Environmental Management Commission because many of its duties are reserved for the executive branch of government.

Following the ruling, Edmisten identified 41 other boards and commissions covered by the ruling and urged legislators to resign immediately or risk the chance decisions by those agencies would be challenged.

A spot check by United Press International found at least 20 resignations already submitted — 11 by House members and nine from the Senate. Two other House members said they are planning to submit resignations; one senator and one House member were undecided; and one senator said he doesn't plan to quit.

The holdout is Sen. Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, who said he will remain on the board of trustees of the North Carolina Science and Math High School unless asked to resign by Lt. Gov. James C. Green, who appointed him, or Gov. James B. Hunt Jr., who pushed for creation of the school

"I'm not going to resign," Royall said. "I don't believe that (membership on the board) is covered in the opinion in any way.

"It's really a board of trustees. It's different from what they think it is," he said, pointing out legislators serving on community college boards have not been affected by the Supreme Court ruling or the attorney general's recommendation.

Royall is also the chairman of the Advisory Budget Commission, which was advised to halt its administrative duties by the attorney general. The commission has made no changes in its procedures, but Gov. Jim Hunt has said he considers its actions advisory and has followed that "advice."

Resignation letters have been sent to various officials, including chairmen of the affected boards, the governor and other state officials, including Lt. Gov. James C. Green and House Speaker Liston Ramsey, D-Madison.

Thomas Taft, chairman of the State Ports Authority, said he was not aware of any resignations by its three legislative members. But Hunt's office said Sen. William Mills, D-Onslow, had stepped down and the state Commerce Department reported Rep. John Church, D-Vance, had also resigned.

Rep. Ron Taylor, D-Bladen, the third lawmaker on the ports authority, said he was waiting to talk to Ramsey before making a decision.

Church was appointed to the SPA as the representative of Commerce Secretary D.M. "Lauch" Faircloth and served as its non-voting secretary. The chairman of Roses Stores, Church said he felt he was picked to represent business, not the Legislature.

"I didn't have any qualms about quitting," he said, but his resignation from the State Art Museum Building Authority hurt more.

"I had some feeling, since I've been there since 1968 and was a charter member," Church said. "But I feel we accomplished our job — you can see brick and mortar."

"It might be for the best that we resign," he said. "I feel good about what I contributed to the state."

Two other lawmakers, Sen. James Garrison, D-Stanly, and Rep. David Bumgardner, D-Gaston, have followed Edmisten's advice and resigned their seats on the state Board of Transportation.

"I discussed it with the speaker before I did it," said Bumgardner. "His concensus was it was the right thing to do."

A pending lawsuit that includes a challenge of the board's legislative membership "as much as anything helped us make a decision to go ahead (and resign) rather than wait and see," he said.

Garrison, who had been on the transportation board for nine years, said he quit reluctantly but "we feel we owed it to the ... board members."

Rep. Charles Evans, D-Dare, said he had not submitted formal recommendations to two boards, the Coastal Resources Commission and the Seafood Industrial Park Authority, but he will.

He told the chairmen of both boards he will step down and skipped last week's coastal commission meeting to avoid any problem until he can send in his letters.

Nuclear Carrier Joins U.S. Fleet

Before nearly 7,000 people seated on the ship's hangar deck, Capt. Richard Martin directed the crew to set the ship's first watch. Then, saluting Navy Adm. Thomas B. Hayward, Martin said the ship was "ready for service."

Calling the ship, "a magnificent piece of hardware," Navy Secretary John Lehman said the Vinson has the capability "to help ensure peace for many decades to come."

A short distance from the pier, about 20 demonstrators from a coalition of peace activist groups protested the addition of another nuclear-powered ship to the Navy. There were no incidents.

The ship is named for the Georgia congressmen who served 50 years in the U.S. House of Representatives and was the first chairman of the House Armed Services Committee when it was formed in 1947.

Heels Escape Upset Bid By Dukes

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

CHARLOTTE — Coach Dean Smith of top-ranked North Carolina credited patience and key turnovers for the Tar Heels' 52-50 victory Saturday over James Madison in the second round of the NCAA East Regional basketball tournament.

"We had to be patient; we had to rebound well, we had to because we didn't shoot well in the second half," Smith said. "We tried to force the tempo and we gambled a good deal with our offense."

Smith said the Tar Heels were not surprised by the Dukes' strength, adding that, "We did not play a bad basketball game, not in the least. James Madison is an excellent team."

It took a three-point play with 57 seconds left by James Worthy to widen the Tar Heel lead to 50-46. After James Madison lost the ball on a foul, Worthy converted two more free throws with 34 seconds remaining to extend North Carolina's advantage to 52-46. Worthy finished with 15 points.

James Madison Coach Lou Campanelli called his team's loss "disappointing, crushing."

"What you saw out there today was as fine an exhibition of basketball as any team we've ever had playing under the worst of circumstances," he said. "We had one day to prepare to play the No. 1 team in the country. We played them pretty dead even for 40 minutes. We hung tough but we came away 2 points shy."

North Carolina lost possession when Matt Doherty failed to handle a long pass from Jimmy Black, but got a reprieve when Sam Perkins was fouled with 16 seconds left. Perkins missed the first of a one-and-one and kept the Dukes in the contest.

The death blow came when Dan Ruland's pass bounced off Keith Bradley's hands and rolled out of bounds.

North Carolina got off to a sluggish start but managed to shoot 59 percent in the first half while James Madison shot 61.1 percent.

The Tar Heels rallied from an early six-point deficit with eight unanswered points and, on Perkins' tap-in of a Worthy miss, took an 18-15 lead with 6:40 left before halftime.

The Dukes and the Tar Heels were tied three times down the stretch before a Michael Jordan layup and a free throw by Black gave North Carolina a 25-22 lead with 3:19 left. Two Worthy free throws gave the Tar Heels a 31-26 lead with 1:15 left, but a pair of free throws by Derek Steele with 56 seconds left established the halftime score of 31-28.

North Carolina, which is now 28-2, got 17 points from Perkins. James Madison ended its season at 24-6 and got 12 points from Ruland. Townes and Fisher also had 12 points for the Dukes.

Butler, Wilder Pitch ECU By Connecticut

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Freshman Chubby Butler and senior Bill Wilder combined for a five-hitter yesterday, giving East Carolina another fine pitching effort as the Pirates took their third straight from the University of Connecticut, 4-2.

The Huskies, which fell 11-0 and 9-2, also in five-hitters, to the Pirates in a Friday doubleheader, showed a little tougher stance in the Saturday game — only their third as compared to nine now for the 6-3 Pirates.

Butler, who was making his first start after seeing two innings of relief during the road trip last week to South Carolina, hurled the first six innings to gain the win. After some early problems, he settled down until the fourth when a freak hit was followed by a Doug Elliott homer to give the Huskies their only runs of the day. Butler, who fanned two and walked an equal number, allowed only four hits.

Wilder, who was in line for the starting role, but held out for Monday's ECAC-South game with George Mason, had only intended to warm up some in the bullpen, but came on when Butler tired. His three inning stint saw him allow one hit, walk one, and strike out three — the side in the ninth inning — as he earned a save.

"I thought this was a very well-played game," Pirate coach Hal Baird said.

"Chubby threw the ball well, although he was nervous before the game. He wasn't locating the ball well early, but he got better as he went on. I guess it was good to let him go on because we're going to have to piece some games together as we go along, and this showed we can do it."

While he had pulled Wilder from the rotation to save him for Mason, Baird noted that the senior ace had said he would just as soon throw a few innings of relief as work in the bullpen — if needed.

"And he was needed and did a good job," Baird added. "Chubby had thrown some 80 pitches and was starting to lose some of his stuff. They were staring their third bat-around, and we wanted to give them a little different look. If Chubby had been getting his breaking pitch and change-up over more, we probably would have gone a little further with him."

Baird also expressed pleasure with the Pirate defense, which did not commit an

EC Women Battle USC

COLUMBIA, S.C. — East Carolina's Lady Pirates test the University of South Carolina this afternoon at 3 p.m. in Carolina Coliseum.

At stake is a trip to Ruston, La., and a berth against the winner of the Illinois-Kentucky game in the Mid-Western NCAA Regional semifinals.

For the loser, the season is over.

Coach Cathy Andruzzi's women will be out to not only gain that berth — and be among the final 16 teams in the NCAA's first-even women's tournament — but to gain a little measure of revenge for an 86-81 victory the Lady Gamecocks pulled over East Carolina two weeks ago in Minges Coliseum in Greenville.

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

SUNDAY MORNING, MARCH 14, 1982

But it won't be easy. South Carolina is the taller of the two teams — a problem the Pirates have run into before — with their front line of 6-1, 6-1, and 5-11, and their guards of 5-11 and 5-7.

The front line may be one of the best in the country, led by 6-1 center Sheila Foster, averaving 20 points a game. She is joined by 6-1 forward Brantley Southers, one of the top freshmen in the country, and 5-11 forward Evelyn Johnson, sister of NBA star Magic Johnson.

In their first meeting, the Lady Gamecocks had a hot hand hitting over 60 percent of their shots, while the Lady Pirates suffered through a cold sub-40 percent evening.

"We've got to stop Johnson and Southers to have a chance," Andruzzi said. "We've got to play much better defense than we did the first game, and we have to be better on offense."

The game will be broadcast over the Pirate Sport Network, heard locally over WOOW radio in Greenville and WITN-FM radio in Washington.

Memphis St. Slips Past Deacs

AP Sports Writer

CHARLOTTE — Memphis State basketball coach Dana Kirk said his team stepped up its intensity in its matchup with 18th-ranked Wake Forest to take a 56-55 comeback victory in the second round of the NCAA East Regional Saturday.

"We did not play a good first half, but we came back and increased our intensity in the second half," said Kirk of his ninth-ranked Tigers. "We weren't alert against Wake in the first half, but the second half belonged to us."

Freshman center Keith Lee made sure it belonged to the Tigers when he hit a three-point-play with 2:27 remaining, a play that proved to be the decisive one.

Wake Forest coach Carl Tacy blamed poor shooting from the perimeter for the Deacons' loss.

"We couldn't get our shots to fall from the outside and Memphis got some good shots in the early going," Tacy said. "With our foul situation as it was, we did all we could afford to do with pressure on them in the second half and it wasn't enough."

In the first game, top-ranked North Carolina slipped past James Madison 52-50 and will face the winner of Sunday's St. John's-Alabama game. Memphis State advanced to the regional semifinals against the winner of Sunday's North-eastern-Villanova game.

The Tigers, 24-4, trailed by as many as seven points early in the second half, but clawed their way back to a tie at 47 on a three-point-play by Otis Jackson with 10:45 left.

The score was tied three more times in the next six minutes, due in part to a slowdown employed by the Tigers. Lee's basket and free throw gave Memphis State a 56-53 lead, but John Toms countered for the Demon Deacons with a 15-footer at the 1:30 mark to cut it to the final margin.

Memphis State had an opportunity to increase its lead when Bobby Parks went to the free throw line with 41 seconds left. Parks missed the front end of the one-and-one, but Wake Forest committed a turnover when Derrick Phillips intercepted a Danny Young pass.

Phillips also had a chance to put the game away, but he missed the front end of a bonus situation with six seconds left.

After Phillips' fouled Young, the Deacons tried a desparation shot, but Young's effort from 40 feet bounced off the left side of the rim.

Both teams shot at a torrid pace in the opening period. Wake Forest hit 65 percent from the field, while Memphis State hit 59 percent.

The score was tied three times in the first period, the latest at 26 on a free throw by Phillip Haynes with 8:32 left. Wake Forest then ran off seven straight

Panthers Fall

S. Durham Rallies From 10 Down To Slip By North Pitt In Regionals

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

WILSON — It was not a happy birthday for North Pitt coach Cobby Deans. The Panthers had the perfect gift for Deans within their grasp — a berth in the finals of the 3-A Eastern Regional.

But, fate — and a good, but not super Southern Durham team — stepped in to deny the Panthers their hoped-for dual celebration of a triumph and a birthday.

The only other time North Pitt has played in the state tournament on Deans' birthday was in 1977 when Wake Forest-Rolesville beat the Donnie Perkins-led Panthers, 48-42, for the state 3-A title.

Five years later the script was altered — it was the quarterfinals of the state tournament — but the results were the same as Southern Durham rallied from 10 points down and then watched a last-second shot roll off the rim to defeat the Panthers, 39-37, Friday night in the Eastern Regionals before a overflow crowd of 3,000 persons.

The Spartans, now 26-1, were to have played Warren County Saturday night for the regional crown and a berth in the state 3-A finals. Warren County, 23-7, defeated Bartlett Yancey, 59-56, earlier Friday night.

North Pitt, its hopes of what most would have considered a stunning upset falling just short, ends the season at 21-8.

"I'd like to play them again," North Pitt coach Cobby Deans said. "I'd like to get them on our schedule. I told you (earlier in the week) we wouldn't play timid. The guys wanted to play."

North Pitt scored the first 10 points of the game and led 10-3, at the end of the first quarter and 20-14 at halftime before Southern Durham scrambled back to tie the game (29-29) going into the final quarter.

North Pitt regained the lead briefly when Bradley hit one of two free throws with 7:09 left in the third quarter. It was the Panthers' final lead of the night.

A jumper by Greg Hines at the foul line cut the deficit to one, but Durham countered with a drive down the middle. After Mitch Cox hit one of two free throws to make it 35-33, guard Greg Webb swished a 17-foot jump shot and a layup to extend the lead to 39-33 — the Spartans' biggest of the night.

Two free throws by Parker and a driving one-handed jumper by Toby Crandol brought the Panthers back within two (39-37) with 1:30 left. On the ensuing trip down court, Derek Newkirk tied up Bradley for a jump ball following a Southern Durham miss and got the tap to Hunter with 40 seconds to go.

Blazers Whip Indiana

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Oliver Robinson scored 23 points and 17th ranked Alabama-Birmingham surged to a 19-point first-half lead as the Blazers downed defending national champion Indiana 80-70 in an NCAA Mideast Regional second-round game Saturday.

The Blazers, reeling off their 11th consecutive victory, took control with torrid shooting in the first 8½ minutes. The Sun Belt Conference titlists advanced to the regional semifinals on their home court next week against the winner of Sunday's game between No. 3 Virginia and Tennessee.

In an earlier second-round battle, No. 20 Louisville demolished Middle Tennessee State 81-56.

UAB, a victim in Indiana's march to the 1981 championship, had two 6-0 bursts and two other 5-0 runs to stun the Hoosiers and build a quick 26-7 lead.

Robinson had eight points during that stretch and Chris Giles, who finished with 17, added another seven in the early going.

The Blazers, 24-5, still led by 19, 32-13, with 8:19 left in the opening half and went to the locker room at intermission with a 40-22 advantage after Luellen Foster hit a layup at the buzzer.

Indiana, getting 24 points from Ted Kitchel, got within 14 four times in the first seven minutes of the second half. They chopped it to 11 five minutes later.

The Hoosiers, who have won four national titles, never got within 10 points until Jim Thomas hit a layup 2:29 from the finish that cut the margin to 71-62.

Indiana, 19-10, didn't get closer than eight points the rest of the way as Robinson hit two free throws for the Blazers, Jonath Nicholas sank four and Norman Anchrum hit two more in the final 90 seconds.

Houston Upsets Tulsa

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Guard Rob Williams ignited the Houston attack with 16 of his 26 points in the second half as the Cougars upset No. 10 Tulsa 78-74 in the second round of the NCAA Midwest Regional Saturday.

Houston, 23-7, advances to the regional semifinals in St. Louis Friday against Missouri, a 73-69 winner over Marquette Saturday.

The Cougars built their lead to 57-43 with 14 minutes left and used a half-court press to shut down Tulsa's attack in the last 10 minutes.

Williams, who hit 10 of his 15 field goal attempts, scored 11 straight points midway through the second half to stave off Tulsa's repeated comeback attempts before a crowd of 10,775.

However, the Hurricane was able to close in by hitting 13 of its final 17 points on free throws.

Paul Pressey had 16 points and 12 rebounds for Tulsa.

Tulsa, which ends the season 24-6, led only once in the contest on the game's opening free throw by Bruce Vanley. The score was tied 15-15 and 21-21 before Houston took a 36-31 advantage at halftime.

The Cougars, Southwest Conference runners-up, rambled to a 48-35 lead with a 12-4 spurt to open the second half and Tulsa could get no closer than five points until Pressey's final shot went in. . .

Houston, a team fond of fast breaks, went to a delay game with 6:30 remaining and did not score for five minutes. But expert ballhandling and a swarming defense also kept Tulsa's attack off balance in the closing minutes.

Steve Harris came off the bench to score 15 for Tulsa while Greg Stewart added 13 and Mike Anderson had 11. Forward Clyde Drexler added 17 points and Lynden Rose had 12 for the Cougars.

Alabama's Hopes Riding On Hurt Vs. St. John's

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Bobby Lee Hurt had one strike against him before he had played one minute of basketball at Alabama.

The 6-foot-9 freshman from Butler High School in Huntsville, Ala., became the object of national attention when he was quoted in a newspaper as saying he had accepted a $4,000 auto loan from a recruiter to sign at Alabama.

He later denied the report, saying he was misquoted, and the matter was dropped. He said he took a loan for $1,000 from a man named Glenn Harris, with no strings attached, and that he paid off the loan last summer.

"There was a lot of talk about his recruitment," Crimson Tide Coach Wimp Sanderson says. "Thankfully, though the situation is completed, dropped, and it's behind him now."

A lot of 13th-ranked Alabama's hopes will be pinned on Hurt Sunday when the Crimson Tide meets St. John's, N.Y., in the second round of the NCAA East Regional basketball tournament.

Starting center Phillip Lockett, a 6-9 senior, injured his ankle against Georgia in the Southeastern Conference tournament and could not start the final two games. Sanderson said Hurt probably would start against the Redmen.

"Bobby has come along very well, both physically and mentally since the beginning of the season," Sanderson said Saturday at a news conference. "He played in the tournament for us and was outstanding. He had a good game against Tennessee (seven points and six rebounds) and played very well against Kentucky (eight points and four rebounds)."

Alabama, 23-6, won the SEC by beating 15th-ranked Kentucky at the Wildcats' Rupp Arena, 48-46, on a tipin by Eddie Phillips with three seconds left. Phillips leads the team in scoring with an average of 15.5 points a game.

Hurt has averaged 25 minutes in each of Alabama's 29 games, but he has started just six of those. He averages 10.2 points and 5.6 rebounds per game.

St. John's, 21-8, advanced to the second round of the NCAA playoffs by beating Penn, 66-56, in the first round Friday night. The Redmen are led by forward David Russell (17.4 ppg) and freshman guard Chris Mullin (16.7 ppg).

In Sunday's other second-round game, Northeastern, 23-6, faces against Villanova, 22-7. The Huskies beat St. Joseph's, Pa., 63-62, in the opening round.

"I know we're playing a tough ballclub," St. John's Coach Lou Carnesecca said, "but I'm not going to become psychological about it. I'm not going to try to figure out the momentum, the phases of the moon or the position of the stars."

St. John's and Alabama last met in the National Invitation Tournament last season with the Crimson winning in overtime, 73-69.

Northeastern, a team that has become weary of its Cinderella image, again will be outsized when it meets Villanova. Both Dave Leitao and Eric Jefferson go 6-7, while Mark Halsel is 6-6. Villanova is led by 6-8 center John Pinone with freshman Ed Pinckney, 6-9, and Aaron Howard, 6-7, on the wings.

Still, Northeastern is second in the nation in rebounding margin, averaging 41.2 rebounds a game, 10 better than the opposition.

"When you average 41 rebounds a game, you're in a class by yourself," Villanova Coach Rollie Massimino said. "They're agressive, and they have the unselfishness to go to the glass. It just proves you don't have to be big, just active, to rebound."

Northeastern is led by Perry Moss, a -2 senior guard who averages 23.4 points per game. Pinone tops Villanova with a scoring average of 17.4 points.

"We're not here on a vendetta," Northeastern Coach Jim Calhoun said. "We have nothing to prove. We play a good schedule, not a great one like the teams in the Big East, but we're not surprised we're here."

Kite Grabs Lead, Nicklaus Is 'Cut'

LAUDERHILL, Fla. (AP) — Tom Kite, a winner only last Monday, grabbed the lead with a 5-under-par 67, while Jack Nicklaus grabbed his shoes and headed home, a victim of the cut Saturday in the second round of the $400,000 Honda-Inverrary Golf Classic.

Kite, the defending titleholder here and golf's leading money-winner last season, completed 36 holes of this rain-delayed event with a 132 total, 12-under par.

But his one-shot lead over big George Burns, who had a second-round 67 and a 133 total, was far from comfortable.

"Are you kidding?" Kite asked. "One shot with 36 to go? That's not even worth saying 'Kite's in the lead.' One shot is nothing. With 36 holes to go, five or six shots is nothing. I made up six in 18 holes last week.

"I'm pleased with the position I'm in, but I've got my work cut out for me."

But he won't have to contend with Nicklaus, the man he beat in a sudden death playoff for the Bay Hill title.

Nicklaus, in contention in every previous start this season, could do no better than a 71 and a 144 total, level par on the 7,129-yard Inverrary Golf and Country Club course.

It was not good enough to qualify for Sunday's double-round windup, a situation set up when Thursday's play was rained out.

"It doesn't matter," shrugged Nicklaus, who was making a rare, third consecutive tournament start. "I shouldn't have played this week anyhow. I didn't play that badly, but I couldn't get anything in the hole. Just kept cruising the hole, cruising the hole."

It was the first time he'd failed to make it for the last two rounds in almost two years, since the Atlanta Classic in 1980. This time he was in good company. His house guest, South African Gary Player, also missed at 73-144 and the two men — holding a combined total of 26 major professional titles — left in the same car.

Another casualty, who took it much, much harder, was Bob Proben, the young man who held the first-round lead with a 64. He blew 17 strokes higher to an 81 and was fighting back tears when he signed his card.

"Everything went wrong," he said. "Whatever I tried to do didn't work out."

Veteran George Archer held third at 134, only two off Kite's leading pace, after a 6-under-par 66.

It was two more strokes back to Hale Irwin, Andy Bean and Cal Peete at 136. Peete had a 66 in the muggy heat, Bean shot a 68 and Irwin had a 71.

The group at 137 — five strokes back with two round to go and very much in the chase for the $72,000 first prize — included Ray Floyd, England's Peter Oosterhuis, Gary Hallberg and Hal Sutton. Sutton and Oosterhuis each had a 67, Hallberg and Floyd 69s.

Bill Rogers, the 1981 player of the year, had a 70 and topped the big group at 138.

Tom Watson, with a 69, and Lee Trevino, with a 71, were at 140.

Kite, who had an amazing record of 21 finishes in the top 10 in 26 starts last year, is carrying on in the same vein this season. He's won once, lost in a playoff once and was third in another.

"This is fun, a good feeling," said Kite, who got his 67 without a bogey.

He scored from eight feet on the fourth hole, hit wedges to within tap-in distance on the 10th and 11th, dropped a 12-footer on the 14th and 2-putted for birdie-4 on the 15th, shaving the hole with a 20-foot eagle putt.

Barber Shoots 66, Leads By 1

INDIAN WELLS, Calif. (AP) — Miller Barber shot a 6-under-par 66 Saturday to forge a 1-stroke lead over Dan Sikes heading into the final round of the $300,000 Vintage Invitational.

Barber, 50, recorded six birdies in shooting the best round of the tournament so far.

Sikes, 51, shot a 3-under-par 69 to finish three rounds at 6-under-par 210. Four shots off the pace were Art Wall and Arnold Palmer, at 213, while Don January and Billy Caspar stood at 215, 1-under-par over three rounds.

The tournament at the 6,682-yard, par 36-36—72 Vintage Club near Palm Springs, which is for golfers 50 and older, concludes Sunday with the winner collecting $40,000. The runnerup will earn $24,000.

Barber's round, which was two strokes off the course record set by Gene Littler in 1981, said he was pleased with the way he played Saturday.

Wilson Not Expected To Play Against Tennessee

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Virginia guard Othell Wilson isn't expected to play against Tennessee in Sunday's second round of the NCAA Mideast basketball tournament and Cavaliers Coach Terry Holland said the team's second leading scorer may be lost for the season.

"He's going to dress for the game, try to warm up but is not likely to see a lot of action," said Holland at a Saturday news conference.

Holland said Wilson, who suffered a thigh bruise in the opening round of the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament, was unable to participate in Saturday's practice.

"He's improved a great deal," said Holland. "But he can't put weight on it without experiencing a lot of pain. There's a lot of blood in the muscle."

All-American Ralph Sampson, Virginia's 7-foot-4 center, says the absence of Wilson will mean a loss in quickness but that the club has enough depth to overcome his absence.

"He adds another dimension to our game but we have to be ready to play Tennessee without him," said Sampson, about Wilson who has averaged 12 points a game and was leading the club in assists when he was injuried.

Virginia, a third-place finisher in last year's tournament, brings a 29-3 record and the No. 3 ranking in the final Associated Press poll to Market Square Arena. Tennessee, which defeated Southwestern Louisiana 61-57 in first round play, is 20-9.

In the other second round match, No. 11 Minnesota takes a 22-5 mark against 27-3 Tennessee-Chattanooga, which moved ahead by eliminating North Carolina State 58-51 in Friday's other first-round battle.

"We have to contain and control the Virginia basketball team," said Tennessee Coach Don DeVoe, pointing out that the Cavaliers are more than Sampson.

"This game is not Dale Ellis (his leading scorer and rebounder) vs. Ralph Sampson," said DeVoe. "Our basic defense will be man-to-man but we'll try to do as much as possible to control the tempo of the game."

Warren Co. Nips S. Durham, 83-80

WILSON — Warren County edged Southern Durham, 83-80, to win the Eastern 3-A Regional championship Saturday night at Wilson Beddingfield.

Warren County will now play Swannanoa Owen for the 3-A title. Swannanoa beat Asheboro, 81-77, in two overtimes.

In other results Saturday, 67-56 and Rocky Mount beat Fayetteville Sanford, 57-48, to win the 4-A title.

In girls' action, Southwest Edgecombe, the defending 3-A champ, downed Weldon, 59-48, for its 61st straight victory and the Eastern Regionon title.

Edgecombe, 29-0 and top-ranked, will play 24-5 Shelby Crest, which upset No. 4-ranked Asheville Erwin 45-44 in the 3A West game.

Hoyas 'Defense' Wyoming, 51-43

LOGAN, Utah (AP) — Wyoming's inability to pass the ball and its penchant for turnovers spelled doom for the Cowboys as much as Georgetown's pressure defense, said Wyoming Coach Jim Brandenburg.

Sixth-ranked Georgetown shut down Wyoming in the waning minutes of their game Saturday afternoon to take a 51-43 victory in the second round of the NCAA West basketball tournament.

The victory moved Georgetown, seeded first in the West, into the regional semifinal in Provo next Thursday against Fresno State, which beat West Virginia 50-46 in the other second-round game at Logan Saturday.

"It was not so much what they were doing, it was what we weren't doing that hurt us," Brandenburg said. "Our guards were tentative and our inside people did not pass the ball well."

Georgetown guards Eric Smith and All-American Eric "Sleepy" Floyd scored the final five points of the game after Wyoming cut the Hoyas margin to three points with just under two minutes left.

"I really thought our downfall was the lack of ability to pass the ball," Brandenburg said. "We got the inside shots, but not enough of them. You can't beat a good team with 18 turnovers."

"Pressure defense is our way of playing," Georgetown Coach John Thompson said. "We tried to apply pressure and it helped us. We have to play good defense to be a good team. I felt that if we came out aggressive, that would help us because we had been sitting all week."

He said he had gambled by beginning to prepare Georgetown for Wyoming even before he knew the outcome of the first-round contest between the Cowboys and Southern California. That gave the Hoyas two days instead of one to prepare for Wyoming, he said.

Wyoming center Chris Engler, the Cowboys' leading scorer with 14, hit a basket with 1:43 remaining to make it 46-43 for Georgetown. But that was Wyoming's last basket.

Floyd made a basket and a foul shot and Smith hit two foul shots to keep the game out of reach. Wyoming threw the ball away twice and guard Mike Jackson missed a jumper with 49 seconds remaining.

It was Jackson's jumper with about six minutes left which drew the Cowboys to within 40-38, the closest they got in the second half.

Wyoming took an 18-14 lead midway through the first half, but a three-point play by Smith erased the lead and the Hoyas never trailed thereafter, and took a 29-24 halftime lead.

Wyoming was plagued throughout the game by turnovers resulting from Georgetown's tight full-court press. The Hoyas forced 18 Cowboy turnovers.

Georgetown, the Big East champion at 27-6, had drawn a bye in the first round, while Wyoming was beating Southern California 61-58 Thursday.

The Western Athletic Conference champions, unranked and seeded eighth in the tournament, finished their season at 23-7.

Smith finished with 13 for Georgetown and Floyd, an All-America, added 11. Seven-foot freshman center Pat Ewing scored seven points, gathered in eight rebounds and blocked one shot for Georgetown.

For Wyoming, Jackson scored 11 points but was guilty of seven turnovers.

Bill Garnett, Wyoming's 6-9 forward and leading scorer, was held to a mere five points by the Hoyas' clinging defense.

Fresno State Downs W. Va

LOGAN, Utah (AP) — Rod Higgins scored 18 points and Tyrone Bradley had five in the final 1:26 to power 11th-ranked Fresno State to a 50-46 victory over No.14 West Virginia in the second round of the NCAA West Regional Basketball Tournament Saturday.

The victory moved Fresno State into a West semifinal game Thursday against sixth-ranked Georgetown, which edged Wyoming 51-43 earlier Saturday.

With the score tied at 40, Bradley scored a layup and Higgins hit two free throws to give the Bulldogs a four-point edge with 1:07 remaining.

After a Mountaineer foul shot, Bradley sank two free throws with 46 seconds remaining to make it 46-41. West Virginia guard Greg Jones, who finished with 17 points, hit a short jumper but Higgins put the game away with two more free throws with 27 seconds left.

The game, tied 27-27 at halftime, pitted two teams with almost identical styles — pressure defense, patient offense and precision passing.

West Virginia, the Eastern Eight Conference champion and seeded fifth in the West, had gained the second round with a 102-72 victory Thursday night over North Carolina A&T. The Mountaineers finished their season at 27-4.

Late Foul Shots Lift Tigers By Warriors

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Ricky Frazier hit 20 points, center Steve Stipanovich added 19 and No. 5 Missouri used late free throws to stop Marquette 73-69 in the second round of the NCAA Midwest Regional Saturday.

Missouri meets Houston in the semifinals of the Midwest Regional in St. Louis Friday. Houston eliminated No. 10 Tulsa, 78-74, in the other second round game at Oral Roberts University Saturday.

Missouri used a 13-3 spurt midway through the second half to jump to a 56-43 lead over the Warriors with 11:34 left. But Marquette guard Glenn Rivers keyed a Warrior scomeback which brought them to within one at 60-59 with 5:34 remaining.

The Big Eight Champion Tigers went into a delay offense at that point and hit 13 of 16 free throws in the closing minutes.

Missouri, now 27-3, hit 62 percent from the field and 27 of 34 free throws, but was hurt by 24 turnovers to just 10 for Marquette, which ended the season 23-9.

Marquette, led by Rivers' 18 points, shot 32 percent from the field in the first half, but 18 Missouri turnovers in that period kept the margin to 35-30 at intermission.

NCSU Assistant Named VMI Coach

LEXINGTON, Va. (AP) — Marty Fletcher, the top assistant at North Carolina State the last four years, was named Saturday the new head basketball coach at Virginia Military Institute.

The 31-year-old Fletcher was the unanimous choice of a selection committee which weeded through more than 90 applications for a successor to Charlie Schmaus, VMI Athletic Director Tom Joynes said.

The school said last month it would not renew Schmaus' contract, which expires at the end of the school year.

Louisville Crushes Middle Tenn. State

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Coach Denny Crum of 20th-ranked Louisville said a pressure defense loosened his team Saturday as the Cardinals overcame an early deficit and crushed Middle Tennessee State 81-56 in an NCAA Mideast Regional second-round game.

"We were a little tight initially, but once we got into the flow with our pressure defense and got the tempo where we wanted it, we were all right," said Crum, who arrived in Nashville shortly before the game after recuperating at his home from a kidney stone ailment.

Derek Smith led the Cardinal scoring with 17 points, including a trio of three-point plays, and Jerry Eaves ignited the pressing defense that forced Middle Tennessee into 26 turnovers.

"Our pressure can have an effect on anyone," Crum said. "There's a lot of times when it has more of a negative effect on us than our opponents.

"That, however, was not the case against the Blue Raiders."

Coach Stan "Ramrod" Simpson of Middle Tennessee said he thought his team's upset victory over Kentucky Thursday night drained it emotionally.

"I don't think people realize the impact to a team like ours, beating Kentucky," said Simpson. "It's like the Boy Scouts beating the Russians."

Simpson also said he was surprised at the number of Louisville fans in the arena, apparently having bought tickets to watch a game that never took place — Louisville vs. Kentucky for the first time in 23 years.

Louisville, 21-9, advances to next week's regional semifinals in Birmingham, Ala., where the Cardinals will meet with the winner of Sunday's game between Minnesota and Tennessee-Chattanooga.

Spartans Nip N. Pitt...

Hines, realizing four seconds remained, sliced down the left side of the lane and put up a jumper that rolled around the rim before dropping off. Bradley seized the rebound and put it back in, but it was too late — the buzzer had sounded.

"We had wanted to get the ball to Bradley (behind a screen on the left)," Deans said, shaking his head. "We didn't do that, but we got off a good shot."

Deans stayed in the locker room with his players for over 15 minutes — more than twice as long as he normally does — after the season-ending defeat. When he emerged it was with watery eyes.

"We made it easy for them in the second half," Deans said. "We controlled the tempo like we thought we had to, but we let it get away from us in the second half.

"We kind of let them get started running and they hit a couple baskets," he said. "And offensively we started being too timid. We handled their man-to-man well, but we were timid (going for the shot) after we beat it."

Asked if this was his most disappointing loss, he said: "I say every loss is disappointing, but this is one of the most disappointing."

The loss was disappointing precisely because the Panthers carried out their game plan as Deans had outlined. They made Spartan star Curtis Hunter work for his shots, they more than held their own on the boards and for the most part they handled the Southern Durham full-court press well.

But, a picturesque game it was not. The two teams — two of only eight 3-A teams left playing in the state — shot poorly and had 28 turnovers between them. It was a rough, physical contest that saw five players end up with three fouls or more. Both Bradley and Hines picked up their fourth foul in the last minute of the third period. Neither, however missed much playing time as a result.

"I thought it was more physical game than we like," Southern Durham coach Larry Parrish said after seeing his team win its 19th straight game since an overtime loss to Kinston in a Christmas tournament.

The Panthers outmuscled the Spartans on the boards, 38-29, led by Bradley with 11 and Parker and forward Toby Crandol with six apiece. Derek Newkirk had eight rebounds to lead the Spartans.

North Pitt did make 16 turnovers, but less than a third of them came against Southern Durham's full-court press. Southern Durham had 12 turnovers on the night.

North Pitt hit 30.2% (13 of 43) from the field for the game, including just 28.6% (four of 14) in the second half. Parker, who played the entire second half with three fouls, led the Panthers with 12 points on a four-for-13 shooting night.

Parker was the only player in double figures for North Pitt. Hines, the 6-0 junior guard, was four of 11 for eight points and Bradley, the 6-2 junior forward, was three of eight for seven points.

The Spartans came into the game averaging 55% from the floor as a team, but ran into a 1-3-1 zone that caused them problems. Southern Durham hit just 13% (three of 23) in the first half, but canned 52.1% in the second half and ended up shooting 32.6% (15 of 46).

Hunter, the Spartans' highly-recruited 6-4 center who is averaging 22 points a game, hit two of 10 from the field and scored 10 points. Hunter had only four rebounds but also had four blocked shots and three steals.

The key to the game was Durham, a 6-0 junior who is averaging eight points a game as a reserve. Durham, the Spartans' best leaper and quickest player, came off the bench to hit five of eight shots from the field for 11 points..He also contributed five rebounds, three assists and two steals.

"We weren't penetrating their zone and we felt we had to do that," Parrish said. "George did that."

During the week-long buildup for the game, Deans had indicated the Panthers would be looking to control the tempo and get off to a fast start — which is what the orange-clad visitors did.

A follow shot by Bradley and a jumper by Hines gave North Pitt a 4-0 lead, a lead the Panthers quickly expanded to 10 on two driving buckets by Hines and a jumper by Parker.

The Spartans like to run and appeared tight and seemed troubled by the slower tempo. They missed their first 17 shots and did not score until Webb hit the front end of a one-and-one with 18 seconds left. Durham grabbed the rebound when Webb missed the second and put it in and the Spartans trailed, 10-3, at the end of the period.

A free throw by Durham and two by Hunter pulled Southern Durham within four (14-10) early in the second half, but a follow shot and a jumper by Bradley helped the Panthers stretch their lead to 20-14 at the half.

The first 16 minutes of play ended with the Spartans having hit only three of 23 (13%) from the floor and being outrebounded, 27-16. North Pitt did little better from the field, hitting just nine of 29 (33%).

"I can't explain the first half," Parrish said. "I can't tell you why the shots weren't going in. Our shot selection was very good and that's one of the reasons we didn't talk much about our shooting at halftime."

The second half was a different story, however. Southern Durham, with Parrish yelling for his team to force a faster tempo, used two layups by Nate Fuller on the fast break to tie the game a 22-22.

Hunter then slammed a miss through the hoop with 1:55 remaining to give the Spartans a 26-25 lead — the Spartans' first lead of the night.

"I thought that was probably the key shot of the game," Deans said. "We were sitting there and had forced them into a bad shot as I recall and we had blocked out, but we didn't go for the ball."

Hunter added a free throw moments later to push the lead to two, but North Pitt came back to tie the it up at the end of the period on two free throws by both Crandol and reserve Richard Heller.

North Pitt went on top briefly early in the final period, but Southern Durham quickly regained the lead with seven minutes left and never trailed again en route to their first regional victory since the early '60s.

Afterwards as Deans was heading back down to the gym from the locker room, he stopped as he opened the double-door to the gym. Deans paused — perhaps he was recalling that Parrish had said earlier in the week he had never heard of North Pitt — and said: "I think they'll remember us now."

Chattanooga Surprises N.C. State, 58-51

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Eight teams remain in the battle for the NCAA Mideast basketball championship and three of them are from Tennessee.

"It seems to be a Tennessee year," said North Carolina State Coach Jim Valvano after his club fell to Tennessee-Chattanooga 58-51 in Friday's first-round game.

Valvano mentioned Middle Tennessee's upset of No. 15 Kentucky in first-round Mideast play in Nashville, Tenn. He then correctly predicted Tennessee would advance past Southwestern Louisiana in the final first-round game.

Coach Don DeVoe's Tennessee Volunteers then advanced to second-round action against No. 3 Virginia with a 61-57 triumph.

Tennessee, 20-9, goes against the 29-3 Cavaliers in Sunday's opener at Market Square Arena. Tennessee-Chattanooga, 26-3, meets Big Ten champion Minnesota, 22-5, in the other game.

"I would have to think that with a field of 32 teams remaining, that there is something going from Tennessee. And it just so happens that I did mention that to our team prior to our taking the floor," DeVoe said.

"We are the state university and all the other universities (Memphis State gives the state four entries among the final 32) are representing their particular institutions well...This might be the first time ever that we've had this many Tennessee teams in the field after the first round."

North Carolina State found itself trailing the Moccasins by 20 points after going nearly 11 minutes without a field goal in the second half. The Wolfpack did pull to within six points in the final minutes before time ran out.

"We never really controlled anything," said Valvano. "We played poorly from the outset. We were very tight and didn't play well. Basically, we had five players standing around."

Russ Schoene and Nick Morken finished with 15 points apiece to lead for the Moccasins. Sidney Lowe, who sparked the Wolfpack comeback, led all scorers with 21 points.

The Wolfpack, who ended their season 22-10, shot only 42 percent after bringing a .524 average into the game.

"We tried to play them man-to-man, and we knew we had to play them tight," said Tennessee-Chattanooga Coach Murray Arnold. "We were conscious of their size and blocked out on the boards. We got in trouble when they started getting the offensive rebounds."

Junior forward Dale Ellis scored 23 points to lead the Volunteers.

"I think they let me get the ball down low in the square too much," said Ellis, who was nine of 15 from the field.

Michael Brooks, who had 16 points, made six clutch free throws in the final minute for Tennessee. Southwestern Louisiana, 24-8 as it reached the NCAA tournament for the first time since 1973, fell behind by eight in the second half but managed to pull to within two twice in the final minute. Each time Brooks made two free throws.

The game was tied 16 times before Ellis put the Volunteers ahead to stay with 14:20 left.

Jaguars Rip Vikes, 12-6

FARMVILLE — Wade Corbett banged out three hits, including a solo home run, and drove in three runs to lead Farmville Central to a 12-6 victory over D.H. Conley Friday afternoon in a nonconference baseball game.

Farmville jumped out to an 11-2 lead after two innings and never trailed as the Jaguars won their season opener. Conley is now 1-1.

Conley took a 2-0 lead in the top of the first. Roy Lassiter singled to open the game and stole second. Jeff Manning then singled Lassiter to third and Doug McRoy walked to load the bases.

Jeff Cox walked forcing home Jimmy Kaler, who had come on to run for Lassiter. Manning subsquently scored when Chris Buck hit into a double play, one of two DPs for Farmville.

Farmville wasted little time in jumping on the Vikings. Nat Norris walked and went to third when Corbett hit into a field's choice and an error on the play allowed both runners to move up a base. Bobby Carraway then reached on an infield single to load the bases.

Singles by Joey Steppe and Billy Godley brought home two runs and Eddie Jones then walked to force home Carraway and give the Jaguars a 3-2 lead. Alvin Baker then hit a grounder to third that was misplayed, allowing Steppe to score.

Randy Daniels singled home Godley to make it 5-2. Then, with two outs, Corbett singled to drive home Jones and make it 6-2. Five more runs in the second moved the lead to 11-2.

With one gone, Godley singled off Mike Gurkins, who replaced Lassiter to start the second inning. Then, with two gone, Baker walked and Godley moved up on a wild pitch.

Godley then scored when Lassister let Randy Daniels' grounder go through his legs at second. Taylor Walston walked to load the bases and Norris then hit a pop fly in the infield that Gurkins called for and then backed away from, allowing the ball to fall in and Baker to score.

Corbett then doubled to bring home the final three runs of the inning and give the Jaguars a nine-run bulge.

Conley added single runs in the third and fifth innings and two runs in the seventh. Farmville's final run came in the fourth on a home run by Corbett.

Daniels was two for four for Farmville. Lassister was three for three for Conley and had three stolen bases. In two games, Lassiter is seven for seven at the plate.

Pirates Bite Huskies Twice

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina's Bobby Patterson and Charlie Smith both turned in fine pitching performances Friday as the Pirates returned to the friendly confines of Harrington Field to sweep a lopsided doubleheader from the University of Connecticut.

Patterson scattered five hits on the way to an 11-0 victory, evening his record at 1-1 on the year. Smith, making his first appearance of the year, also tossed a five-hitter, as the Pirates made it a sweep, 9-2.

John Hallow led the ECU hitting in the first game of the day, banging out three hits in four trips — a single, double and triple — as he drove in two runs. Chuck Bishop added two hits, while Ricky Nichols drove in four runs on a three-run homer and a sacrifice fly.

"It's good to be back home," ECU Coach Hal Baird said after his club returned from a 1-3 road trip to South Carolina.

"We got two well-pitched games today. Charlie's arm has been bothering him some, but he threw a heck of a game. And Bobby threw very well. He didn't have his good stuff, but he was able to spot the ball well. He threw well against Clemson, too, but it didn't work out as well there."

Baird said he feels that Connecticut is a good team, but was hampered in the twin-bill by just getting started for the season.

The Huskies were able to come up with just two threats in the opener. A runner reached second in the second with two away on a single and a stolen base, and in the seventh, UConn put men on second and third with two away on an error, a single and a stolen base.

But each time, the Pirates and Patterson came up with the third out to get away unscored on.

Two more crossed in the fourth. Nichols walked and stole second, scoring on a hit by Hallow. Hallow, advancing on an out, scored when Todd Evans was safe on an error.

The Pirates broke it open with five in the fifth. Fitzgerald singled and Kelly Robinette beat out a chopper to the mound. Bishop singled in courtesy runner Carl Daniels, and Wells grounded out, scoring Robinette. Bishop, however, was cut down trying to go to third on Nichols' infield grounder. Hallow then tripled to score Nichols, and scored when Evans singled after Mike Sorrell had walked. Todd Hendley finished things off with a hit scoring Sorrell, but Evans was cut down at the plate.

The 11th ECU run came in the sixth. Robinette reached on a fielder's choice, moved up on walks to Mark Wakai and Wells, and scored on Nichols' sacrifice fly to deep center.

Connecticut both opened and closed the scoring in the second game. The Huskies got the first run in the top of the first. Tim Haviland reached on a two-base error, moved up on an out and scored on Tom Rossi's sacrifice fly.

A walk and an error put runners on first and third, but an attempted delayed double steal went for naught as the Bucs got the runner going home.

A double and a hit batsman gave the Huskies a threat in the sixth, but their only other score came on a solo homer to left in the seventh by Brian Fitch.

East Carolina took the lead with a pair of runs in the second and never lost it again. With one down, Carl Daniels walked and advanced on a balk. He took third when Wells reached on an error, and scored on a passed ball. David Wells then doubled to score Robert Wells.

The Pirates added four more in the third. Evans singled and Sorrell walked. Fitzgerald beat out a bunt to load the bases and with one down, Daniels reached on a fielder's choice that was errored, scoring Evans and Sorrell. The other two scored on a double to deep center by David Wells.

The final three came in the sixth, giving the Pirates a 9-1 lead at the time. Nichols reached on a fielder's choice and an error put David Wells on base. Hallow singled, loading them up, and Evans doubled to center, scoring all three runners.

"We were very fortunate to win these two," Baird said. "I just hope this will turn the corner for us. We've been experimenting with several lineups, and we still haven't settled on any one (lineup)."

The two teams were scheduled to meet again on Saturday, and will close out the string on Sunday at 1:30 p.m. George Mason comes in on Monday for an ECAC-South game.

McGee May Be Lost To Cal-Irvine

By The Associated Press

Cal-Irvine leads the advance to the second round of the National Invitation Tournament despite a loss — a very, big loss.

The Anteaters did defeat San Diego State 70-69 Friday night, but a two-inch deep cut on the shooting hand of All-American Kevin Magee kept him out of the game's final 17 minutes and will most probably keep him out of the rest of the tournament.

Magee injured the hand attempting to block a dunk by the Aztecs' Michael Cage. The 6-foot-6 forward had scored 19 points in the first half and the Anteaters will now have to continue in the NIT without one of the nation's premier scorers and rebounders.

"When the play was over and I saw the cut, I knew I was in trouble," Magee said of the gash that needed nine stitches. "I had the same kind of injury in high school and I was out three weeks. I knew I wouldn't be back tonight."

Three weeks might not seem like a long time to recuperate, but the finals of the NIT are scheduled for New York on March 24. That's just 11 days from now. More importantly, Cal-Irvine must now travel to Oklahoma to face the 20-10 Sooners on Monday night.

Will Magee attempt to play?

"I would recommend that he does not play," said San Diego State's team physician Dr.Lee Brown, who treated Magee. "The guy has a great future ahead of him."

Fine, but what kind of future does Cal-Irvine have without him?

Magee answered that with a statement filled with hope.

"People have criticized us all year for being a one-man team, but we're not, and we proved it. I just hope they will let me come with them to Oklahoma."

In other first-round games Friday, Maryland beat Richmond 66-50, Syracuse coasted past St.Peter's 84-75, Virginia Tech wore down Fordham 69-58, Mississippi held off Clemson 53-49 and Tulane surprised Louisiana State 83-72.

Cal-Irvine, 23-6, needed two free throws from Rainer Wulf to secure the victory. Wulf rebounded the missed free throw of teammate Bob Thornton, who had made his first, and was fouled. He sank the free throws for a 70-66 Anteater lead. Don Plummer, who led San Diego State with 19 points, scored with 52 seconds left to make it 70-69, but his 12-footer at the buzzer was short.

Randy Whieldon picked up Magee's scoring slack and finished with 18 points, second only to Magee's 20.

Maryland 66, Richmond 50

Freshman Adrian Branch scored 21 points to lead the Terrapins, who must now travel to Georgia for a second-round game Monday night.

Maryland, 16-12, held a seven-point halftime lead, 31-24, most of it built on Branch's inside play and the outside shooting of Pete Holbert, who hit four long-range jumpers over the Richmond zone.

The Spiders, 18-11, were appearing in their first-ever postseason tournament. John Schweitz took scoring honors for Richmond with 16 points, 10 in the first half.

Syracuse 84, St.Peter's 75

The Orangemen, finalists in last year's NIT, were led by senior guard Leo Rautins, who finished with double figures in points, rebounds and assists.

"Double figures in three categories; I call that a Larry Bird-type of game," said Syracuse Coach Jim Boeheim of Rautins' performance that included 12 points, a game-high 13 rebounds and 10 assists.

St.Peter's William Brown was the game's top scorer with 24 points. Tony Bruin and Erich Santifer each scored 19 for the Orangemen, 16-12, who will play host to Bradley in a second-round game Monday night.

The game marked the first appearance of senior Ron Payton and freshman Andre Hawkins since they were charged with sexual assualt in the alleged rape of a Villanova coed after Syracuse's first-round loss in the Big East tournament. Both players were given a warm welcome from the Carrier Dome-crowd of 16,435.

Virginia Tech 69, Fordham 58

Jeff Schneider led four Virginia Tech players in double figures as the Hokies eliminated the vistors from New York and set up a second-round visit to Mississippi Monday night.

Dale Solomon, the school's all-time leading scorer, was held to four first-half points, but he exploded for 16 in the last 30 minutes as Virginia Tech, 19-10, erased a 29-26 Fordham halftime lead.

Mississippi 53, Clemson 49

Carlos Clark scored 25 points and the Rebels used some clutch foul shooting down the stretch to beat Clemson.

Mississippi, 18-11, needed two free throws each from Michael Partridge and Sean Touhy in the final minute to preserve the win.

Clemson, 14-14, was led Horace Wyatt's 14 points.

Tulane 83, Louisiana State 72

Tulane marked its first postseason appearance in its 72-year basketball history with an upset of intrastate foe LSU.

The victory was the first for the Green Wave in 18 games with LSU and their first since Dale Brown took over the LSU helm 10 years ago.

Paul Thompson scored 19 points and John Williams added 18 as Tulane, 18-8, opened an 18-point lead with seven minutes remaining and stayed hot at the free throw line to preserve the final margin.

The series that dates to 1910 between the two teams and spanned 200 games was dropped after last season mostly at the insistence of Brown, who was apologetic after the game.

"I want to apologize to all the people that went through many hardships to get tickets. They were more determined and gave more effort than (the LSU) basketball team did tonight."

error during the game. "We've played pretty well these last four games," Baird commented. "I just hope we have a good home stand to get us through these early conference games." The Pirates play three league games — all against George Mason — this week.

Connecticut's starting pitcher, Brian Smith, a freshman making his first collegiate appearance, also hurled well, although the Pirates got to him for nine hits in his six innings of work. "He has good stuff, and should make a fine pitcher for them," Baird said.

Butler, after walking the first two batters he faced, came back and got the next two on strikeouts, and the first baserunner was cut down trying to steal.

Actually, no one reached second base for the Huskies, except when Elliott hit his homer in the fourth inning. Wayne Patenaude had singled to right on a bad-hopper over the first baseman with one away just before Elliott's blast to right center.

But that was it for the Huskies.

East Carolina got its first run in the first inning. Mike Sorrell beat out a bunt single and moved on to second when the throw was off target. David Wells moved him to third with a sacrifice, and John Hallow singled to right, driving him in.

Two more crossed in the second — also unearned. With one down, Chuck Bishop singled to right and with two away, Robert Wells slashed one up the middle, moving Bishop to third. Wells then stole second, and when the ball was overthrown, Bishop scampered home with the second ECU run. Sorrell reached on an error on his bouncer back to the mound, and David Wells singled to left, scoring Robert Wells.

The final run came over in the sixth. That all got started with two away. Bishop then drew a walk and on the run and hit, Kelly Robinette singled to center, then stole second. Robert Wells walked, loading them up, and Sorrell hit a shot back to the mound, off the pitcher's right hand, and before the ball could be chased down, everyone was safe, with Bishop scoring.

While that did close out the scoring, East Carolina and Connecticut both got off several well-hit ball — all right at fielders.

Sorrell led the ECU hitting, getting three, while Hallow added two. Shawn Grager and Elliott each banged out two for the Huskies.

The two teams meet once more today at 1:30 p.m. The Pirates then continue their current home stand on Monday hosting ECAC-South rival George Mason in a 3 p.m. game.

Tennessee Hogging NCAA Spotlight

By The Associated Press

It's next-door neighbors, North Carolina and Ketucky, are known as basketball hotbeds. Yet it's the Volunteer state which is grabbing most of the headlines in the NCAA tournament.

Middle Tennessee State grabbed the spotlight Thursday night with an opening-round upset of Kentucky in the Mideast sub-regional. And Friday night, both the University of Tennessee and Tennessee-Chattanooga advanced in the same region.

Tennessee forward Dale Ellis tossed in nine of 15 shots for 23 points to boost the Vols over Southwestern Louisiana 61-57 at Indianapolis. The victory moved Tennessee, 20-9, into an unenviable position — opposite third-ranked Virginia on Sunday.

Chattanooga, 27-3 and champions of the Southern Conference, jumped out to a 20-point lead by holding North Carolina State scoreless from the field for 11 minutes of the second half, then held on for a 58-51 triumph. The Moccasins, who scored their final 14 points on foul shots, will play No.11 Minnesota Sunday.

In other sub-regional action, it was Northeastern 63, St. Joseph's, Pa., 62, and St. John's, N.Y., 66, Penn 56 in the East at Uniondale, N.Y.; Kansas State 77, Northern Illinois 68, and Boston College 70, San Francisco 66 in the Midwest at Dallas; No.16 Iowa 70, Northeast Louisiana 63, and Pepperdine 99, Pittsburgh 88 in the West at Pullman, Wash.

Mideast Regional

"I think they let me get the ball down low in the square too much," said Ellis.

"The key to this game was having the lead going into the last five minutes," added Tennessee Coach Don Devoe.

"I would have to think that with a field of 32 teams remaining, that there is something going from Tennessee. And it just so happens that I did mention that to our team prior to our taking the floor."

The game was tied 14 times, but the Volunteers survived because of Michael Brooks' foul shoooting. Brooks, an 85 percent shooter from the free throw line, hit six clutch shots in the final minute.

"We are the state university and all the other universities (Memphis State gives the state four entries among the final 32) are representing their particular institutions well," said Devoe. "This might be the first time ever that we've had this many Tennessee teams in the field after the first round."

Chattanooga got 15 points from both forward Russ Schoene and guard Nick Morken.

"It seems to be a Tennessee year," said North Carolina State Coach Jim Valvano.

"We tried to play them man-to-man, and we knew we had to play them tight," said Tennessee-Chattanooga Coach Murray Arnold. "We were conscious of their size and blocked out on the boards."

East Regional

St. Joe's, which beat top-ranked DePaul in a sub-regional last year, won't pull off any more upsets. The Hawks were surprised themselves by ECAC North champion Northeastern, which got 24 points from Perry Moss and a pair of decisive free throws from Eric Jefferson.

"The win proves we belong in the East," Moss said. "Northeastern (23-6) is not a household name, but hopefully we will be."

Northeastern takes on Villanova Sunday.

St. John's Billy Goodwin put in 21 points and Chris Mullin added 19 as the Redmen, 21-8, moved on to a Sunday meeting with No.13 Alabama. That matchup worried Redmen Coach Lou Carnesecca.

"I haven't seen Alabama since the last NIT," Carnesecca said. "The film I'll show the players tomorrow is outdated. I think they've got three guys from last year."

Midwest Regional

Kansas State's Les Craft scored 21 points and Randy Reed added 15 for the Wildcats, 22-7, who play 12th-ranked Arkansas Sunday.

Craft was a perfect 11-for-11 from the free-throw line as K-State stayed comfortably in front after leading 31-25 at the half.

John Bagley overcame foul trouble for Boston College to contribute 10 second-half points as the Eagles stopped San Francisco. BC, 21-9, takes on No.2 DePaul Sunday.

Bagley sat out almost 18 minutes of the first half with three fouls. But he led the offense in the second half.

"It's the first time this year we've had to play without Bagley," said BC Coach Dr. Tom Davis, "and everyone did a tremendous job picking up the slack."

West Regional

West Coach Athletic Conference titlist Pepperdine, 22-6, advanced to a Sunday game with No.4 Oregon State, thanks to 27 points by Orlando Phillips and 24 from Boot Bond.

"We'll be fired up on Sunday for the rematch with the Beavers since we're not playing at OSU," said the Waves' Dane Suttle. "I've played them twice in my career at Pepperdine and lost both times."

Redskin Homers Defeat Panthers

BETHEL — Roanoke High School unloaded on North Pitt Friday, slamming four home runs on the way to a 14-2 victory over the Panthers. It was the season opener for the Redskins, while North Pitt falls to 0-2 on the year.

Joey Early hurled the five-inning victory, allowing only two North Pitt hits. He also contributed two two-run homers for the Redskins, leading the homer parade.

Roanoke grabbed the lead in the first inning of the contest, scoring once. With one out, Rick Hines singled, moving up on another out. He scored on a hit by Greg Casper.

After scoring once more in the second, Roanoke added three more in the third for a 5-0 lead. After two men were out, Lee Briley walked and both Jerry Griffin and Bernie Williford reached on errors, loading the bases. Dalton Everett then tripled, driving in all three runs.

In the fourth, Roanoke added four more, two on a homer by Early, and another on a homer by Joey Ross, batting right behind Early. The Redskins then closed it out with five in the fourth, including another two-run shot by Early, and another two-run homer by Lee Briley.

North Pitt finally broke the ice in the bottom of the fifth. Lee Manning singled and with one out, Keel got a hit. Brian Briley then reached on a three-base error, scoring both runners.

Roanoke opens Northeastern Conference play on Tuesday, hosting Roanoke Rapids, while North Pitt travels to West Craven on Wednesday.

ECU Relay Is Second

MOSCOW, Id. — East Carolina's 200-yard freestyle relay team broke two school records and surpassed one AIAW National record during the second day of competition in the AIAW Division II Swimming and Diving Championships, now underway at the University of Idaho.

After two days of competition, East Carolina stook 17th in the team standings, with 82 points. Over 50 teams are in competition for the title.

In the 200 freestyle relay, the Lady Pirate team of Nan George, Jennifer Jayes, Nancy Rogers and Moria McHugh stood second after the preliminaries with a time of 1:38.3. That broke the existing ECU varisty record and surpassed the AIAW mark in the event.

In the finals, they finished at 1:38.96, second in the meet.

In the only other competition Friday involving an ECU swimmer, George finished eighth in the 50-yard freestyle with a time of 24.89. In the preliminaries, she swam a 24.59, a new varsity record.

The meet continues through today.

Kinston Tops Ayden-Grifton

KINSTON — Kinston High School scored three times each in the first and third innings and gained a 9-6 baseball victory over Ayden-Grifton Friday afternoon.

It marked the second Viking victory over the Chargers this spring, and dropped the A-G record to 1-2 on the year. Kinston is now 2-1.

The Vikings also pounded Ayden-Grifton ace Tyrone Gay for all six runs before chasing him in the fifth inning.

Kinston started the scoring in the first, getting three runs. Jeff Jenkins reached on an error and moved up on a passed ball. Tony Grady struck out, but reached when the ball was dropped and then overthrown at first. Jenkins came around on the error. Jeff Hendricks then slapped a two-run homer for the 3-0 lead.

Kinston added three more in the third for a 6-0 lead.

Ayden-Grifton came back with a run in the fourth. Gay walked as did Doug Coley. Jackie Conway reached on a fielder's choice and Art Rouse singled, scoring Gay.

Kinston, however, came back with two runs in the bottom of the frame and it proved the difference. Vernon Byrd singled and was sacrificed up. He scored on a double by Paul Beaman, who advanced to third on an error. Paul Mitchell then singled him in.

Ayden-Grifton rallied for five in the sixth, and Kinston got another in the bottom of the frame, closing out the scoring.

Mitchell, Jenkins and Hendricks each had two hits to pace Kinston, while Rouse had two for Ayden-Grifton.

Valkyries Top Jags

FARMVILLE — D.H. Conley scored eight runs in the first inning and rolled to an easy 15-7 victory over Farmville Central Friday afternoon in a softball game.

Conley, now 2-0, pushed eight runs across in the first inning and two more in the second to go up, 10-0.

Farmville, now 0-1, cut the gap to 10-2 in the bottom of the second inning and whittled the lead down to 11-7 with five runs in the fourth. But the Valkyries scored three runs in the fifth to seal the win.

Sherri Waters, Darlene Cannon and Lisa Mills all were three for five at the plate for Conley. Helena Barnhill was two for five. Both Barnhill and Cannon had home runs. Cannon also had a double.

Angie O'Brien was three for three for the Lady Jaguars. Darlene Lane was two for three for Farmville.

OUTDOORS With Joe Albea

"Outdoors In North Carolina" Expo Slated — The Outdoors in North Carolina Expo will be held at the Raleigh Civic Center from March 25-28. Cosponsored by the North Carolina Department of Natural Resources and Community Development and the Raleigh Civic Center, the Expo will include all aspects of outdoor recreation.

The purpose of the show is to promote the awareness and appreciation of North Carolina's natural resources, and also to show Tar Heel citizens that rich opportunities for outdoor recreation exist in their own backyards. Various conservation agencies — including the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission and the State Parks and Forestry Departments — will have educational exhibits. The outdoor industry will also have numerous booths and displays — this will be a fine chance to learn more about outdoor equipment, or to line up your next outdoor vacation. Also, demonstrations, films and conferences on natural recource issues will be included.

The Expo is merely the opening event of the Outdoors in North Carolina celebration, which is a major theme for the coming year. As part of this celebration, various features of the state's natural resources will be celebrated in numerous events. For example, a "Mountains to the Sea" trek is scheduled for the spring, and the trek will include opportunities for hiking, canoeing, horseback riding and bicycling. Other events will celebrate the unique resources of the state's coastal, Piedmont, and Mountain regions plus specific resources such as water, wildlife and minerals.

"North Carolina has wonderful opportunities for environmental education, exercise and outdoor vacations," said Joseph W. Grimsley, secretary of the North Carolina Department of Natural Resources and Community Development. "And we hope to highlight the importance of these natural resources through this celebration."

For more information on the Outdoors in North Carolina Celebration, write to the N.C. Department of Natural Resources and Community Developemt,- P.O. Box 27887, Raleigh, N.C. 27611 or call (919) 733-6376.

Rebel Free Throws Nip Tigers

But for Mississippi, there's no place like home, and Weltlich is itching to get back to Oxford.

Mississippi edged Clemson 53-49 on clutch last-minute foul shooting Friday night to advance to the second round of the National Invitation Tournament. On Monday, the Rebels will turn home, where they have won 12 and lost one this year, to play Virginia Tech — a 69-58 victor Friday night over Fordham.

The loss was an especially tough one for Clemson. The Tigers finished the season at 14-14 — the first time they haven't had a winning record since they went 12-14 under Tates Locke in 1972-73.

Clemson's current head coach, Bill Foster, didn't like the way his team lost.

"I think the officials stunk, but that doesn't win r lose ball games," he said. "We had some chances to win it late. We just didn't do anything with them.

"We got the score tied, got the ball down court, had the right people in there, but the shots just wouldn't go down," he said. "This was just another in a long string of frustrating losses."

Weltlich said his Rebels, now 18-11, removed some doubts with their victory.

"It didn't particularly matter that it was Clemson, or that it was an Atlantic Coast Conference team, that we beat tonight," said Weltlich, "but just that we beat a team out of our league on the road.

"We were the fourth-place team in the SEC (Southeastern Conference) and this win should wipe the sneers off some people's faces," he said.

Junior Carlos Clark scored 25 points and had five steals, and guard Sean Touhy canned a pair of free throws with 17 seconds left, to lead Mississippi.

"This was a typical game for Clark. He's probably the best-hidden 6-4 weapon in the country," said the Mississippi coach.

Foster said, "He's great as it is, but when they (officials) let him push off to get open for a shot, he's even greater."

Wyatt was Clemson's leading scorer with 14 points, with sophomore guard Vincent Hamilton adding 13.

SECURITY NOTICE!

Can you say yes to any one of these questions?
Has your purse been stolen with keys in it?
Have you moved into a house or apartment and didn't have the key combination changed in the lock?
(How many keys were out to the previous tenants, relatives, friends, babysitters, neighbors??)
Did you buy or build a new house?
(How many keys are out to Plumbers, Electricians, Laborers, even Realtors? How many did they lose??)
Do all your locks have different keys? Would you like one key for all your doors?

Even if you have been living in the same house for years, how many keys have you lost in the yard, the garage, the car; and how many did you actually find?? Would your children tell you if they lost a key?

If you answered Yes to even one of these questions, you should probably change the key combination in your lock. You do not need to buy new locks. We can change the "Key core" in the center of your present lock for only $4.50 per core, don't worry about the key it's Free. (one per lock) When you bring the lock to the shop. Waltrip's Problem: Finishing The Race

BRISTOL, Tenn. (AP) — Darrell Waltrip says if he can just figure out how to finish races, he and the rest of Junior Johnson's team will be back on top of the world again.

The defending NASCAR point champion, still looking for his first victory of 1982, will start Sunday's Valleydale 500 Grand National stock car race from the pole position.

He took that spot Friday with a fast lap of 111.068 mph on the .533-mile high-banked oval at Bristol International Raceway.

It was the second pole victory of the season for the 35-year-old resident of Franklin, Tenn. But Waltrip has failed to finish the first two races this season — the third race, at Rockingham, N.C., has twice been postponed by rain.

"The thing is, it's not any kind of internal or personnel problem on our team," Waltrip explained. "It's been a couple of real strange things. At Daytona, we lost a pinlock, and that's a once in a blue moon kind of thing. And at Richmond, we broke a camshaft.

"Both times we were leading when the problem happened. If we can just finish one, we'll be pretty much where we were last year.

"We're not beat down by what's happened. If it was major problems in the pits, I'd say we were in a bind. But that's just not happening."

Ruttman, driving a Buick Regal virtually identical to Waltrip's, was first out on the track in the session to determine the first 15 starting spots for Sunday's race. He sailed around the asphalt at 111.010 mph, then stood nervously in the pits and watched while 19 straight drivers failed to surpass that speed.

Waltrip, however, was the 20th contender, right near the end of the first-day qualifying line. His first lap was just short of Ruttman, at 110.818, but the second lap was a gem.

"I knew it was a going to be close because that (Ruttman's speed) was about as quick as I'd been going," Waltrip said. "On the first one, I was pushing too hard, got a little too high in the first turn and almost lost it."

However, the man who won 12 races, including both Bristol events, and 11 poles a year ago, remained in control and grabbed his third straight pole at this track.

Ruttman, who finished second in the Daytona 500, was leading the Richmond 400 by nearly eight seconds when he blew a tire and hit the wall late in the race, and is on the outside pole for the Carolina 500 when it is finally run, was disappointed.

"It was my second biggest disappointment," he said. "My biggest was not winning the pole at Rockingham two weeks ago. We knew in practice that (Harry) Gant and Waltrip were quick, but we were right in there with them. The thing is, I got overanxious and blew it."

Benny Parsons, who has won the other two poles this season, took the third spot on Sunday's 30-car grid. Parsons, driving a Pontiac LeMans, was clocked at 110.327, putting him just ahead of Morgan Shepherd's 110.156 in another Regal.

The third row is made up of Richmond 400 winner Dave Marcis and Daytona 500 winner Bobby Allison, both driving Chevrolet Malibus. Marcis had a 110.099, while Allison's fast lap of 110.042.

Ricky Rudd's Pontiac Grand Prix was next at 109.916, with Gant on the outside of the fourth row at 109.659.

Leading the way into today's qualifying session to fill up the final 15 spots in the field was Richard Petty. The seven-time NASCAR champion was the last contender bumped in Friday's qualifying, turning in the 16th fastest speed of the day at 107.792.

1. Darrell Waltrip, Buick Regal, 111.068.
2. Joe Ruttman, Buick Regal, 111.010.
3. Benny Parsons, Pontiac LeMans, 110.327.
4. Morgan Shepherd, Buick Regal, 110.156.
5. Dave Marcis, Chevrolet Malibu, 110.099.
6. Bobby Allison, Chevrolet Malibu, 110.042.
7. Ricky Rudd, Pontiac Grand Prix, 109.916.
8. Harry Gant, Buick Regal, 109.659.
9. Dale Earnhardt, Ford Thunderbird, 109.590.
10. Terry Labonte, Chevrolet Malibu, 109.371.
11. Dick Brooks, Ford Thunderbird, 108.992.
12. Gary Balough, Buick Regal, 108.745.
13. Ron Bouchard, Buick Real, 108.628.
14. Neil Bonnett, Buick Regal, 108.432.
15. Jody Ridley, Ford Thunderbird, 107.701.

Last 15 places to be decided in qualifying session Saturday.

Background Could Key Ruttman To A Victory

RACING NEWS

BRISTOL, Tenn. — Joe Ruttman feels his racing background is well-suited to the Bristol International Raceway, boosting his hopes for his first NASCAR Winston Cup victory here today.

"I really feel good about Bristol," Ruttman said. "I just feel a lot more comfortable at a place like Bristol since I've driven so many races back home at half-mile, half-banked tracks like Bristol."

Ruttman replaced Dale Earnhardt last August as drive of the J.D. Stacy-owned Buck. In his second start in the Dale Inman-prepared auto last summer after replacing Earnhardt, Ruttman was leading the Busch 500 at Bristol when a cracked oil pan sidelined him.

"I think that we showed last year that Bristol is my kind of race track and with a little luck we can win this time around," said the 37-year-old native of Dearborn Heights, Mich. Ruttman now lives in Upland, Calif.

Ruttman earned the #2 starting position for the Warner W. Hodgdon Carolina 500 and was hopeful his first NASCAR victory would come at the N.C. Motor Speedway. But the race as been rained out twice and is now scheduled for March 28.

"I guess Bristol would be a more natural place for me to win my first NASCAR Cup race," Ruttman said, "since it is so much like so many other tracks I have won on."

The Valleydale 500 is scheduled for Sunday on the .533-mile track. Darrell Waltrip won the pole a year ago, setting a track-speed record of 112.125 mph in the process. He then went on to win the race in his Junior Johnson-built Buick and the $22,450 first-prize money.

While Ruttman's confidence is overflowing, his enthusiasm for returning to Bristol will be more than matched by Waltrip, the defending Winston Cup champion.

"Junior's cars are always the ones to beat at Bristol," said Waltrip, who joined the Mountain Dew-Johnson team last year. "We need a win to get this year going on the right track and Bristol sure seems to be a good beat to do that."

Johnson's cars have won 15 races at the high-banked speedway, including eight of the last 12 events.

"A lot of drivers complain that Bristol is a tough track to drive," Johnson said. "But that's because their cars aren't set up to handle it. If the car is handling properly, it isn't that tought.

"Knowing what springs to use, how to set up the chassis and what the car needs to do is important," he added. "We had been able to come up with the right combination and it has paid off for us."

Junior Co-Champs

Terps Pop Richmond

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell expected the worst, but he says his young Terps "played one of our best games of the year" to advance to the second round of the National Invitation Tournament.

"This was a big win for us," Driesell said Friday night after the Terps, 16-12, turned in a surprisingly easy 66-50 victory over Richmond's Spiders to earn a second-round meeting Monday night with Georgia.

It was the first-ever post-season tournament bid for the Spiders, 18-11, and a capacity crowd of 9,373 turned out.

"We knew they'd have a big crowd and would be all fired up, but we just played good defense and had excellent poise on offense," Driesell said.

Richmond took an 11-9 lead after the first eight minutes, but Pete Holbert — a sophomore with a 5.3-point scoring average — came off the bench to hit four straight jumpers over the Spiders' zone.

Holbert had two assists and freshman Adrian Branch, who led the Terps with a game-high 21 points, scored six points as Maryland opened up a 31-24 halftime lead.

"He played like he always does," Driesell said of Branch. "He didn't make any of the all-star teams, but he's tough."

Eight seconds into the second half, Bill Flye hit a jumper that got Richmond within five points, but Maryland then went on a 13-5 tear to open the gap to 44-31 midway the second half and the Spiders never got closer than nine points down the stretch.

During that span, the Terps worked for the good shot, getting a dunk by Branch, a layup by Holbert and 10 points at the foul line.

Holbert had 10 points and Mark Fotherfill nine to back up Branch for the Terps, who won the NIT in 1972 in one of their earlier appearances. The Terps shot 57.8 percent from the floor to 43.8 percent for Richmond.

The Spiders were led by John Schweitz with 16 points. Flye and Kelvin Johnson had 10 each.

"We were thrilled to be in our first post-season game every, but disappointed we didn't play better," said Richmond Coach Dick Tarrant.

"The picture was set for something beautiful with the big crowd and an electrical atmosphere. It's just a shame things didn't develop the way we would have liked them to have."

Business Notes

FIGURES CLIMB

The Grand Union Co., which operates food markets under the Grand Union, Big Star and Weingarten trade names, announced sales of $939,974,000 for its 12-week third quarter ended Jan. 2, compared with sales of $830,348,000 during the comparable period a year earlier.

Net income for the third quarter was $6,951,000, compared with net income of $11,238,000 for the same period last year.

Sales for the first 40 weeks of the fiscal year totaled $3,177,791,000 as compared with $2,686,626,000 during the comparable period last year.

RECALL REPORTED

Roper Corp. and Sears, Roebuck and Co. announced a recall involving 200,000 Roto-Tillers sold under the Sears and Roper names between 1963 and 1980.

A spokesman said a clutch-locking device that allows the tiller to be locked in reverse gear may present a safety hazard.

Owners of the tillers were urged not to use them before obtaining a free parts replacement kit being offered by Roper.

Ford's Benefit Checks Reduced

DETROIT (AP) — Laid-off, low-seniority Ford Motor Co. workers who voted for contract concessions in hopes of collecting a bundle of benefit checks are heading for a disappointment.

Jim Gallagher, a laid-off electrician from the Metuchen, N.J., assembly plant, said he had expected to receive about 15 benefit checks under the new contract but has learned he will get only three.

"I think it stinks," said Gallagher, who added he wouldn't have voted for the concessions if he'd known how few checks he would get. "They're literally giving me nothing."

Ford's new contract with the United Auto Workers union, signed March 1, requires Ford to deposit $70 million in the Supplemental Unemployment Benefit program, designed to provide laid-off autoworkers with 95 percent of their take-home pay when added to state unemployment benefits.

Gallagher and other low-seniority, laid-off workers thought the increase in the fund would mean more benefit checks.

But Ford has decided to ration the money into the fund rather than deposit it in a lump sum, and as a result, laid-off workers will receive fewer checks, Ford officials say.

Grain, Bean Prices Fall

By KEITH E. LEIGHTY
Associated Press Writer

Grain and soybean prices were sharply lower in moderate activity Friday on the Chicago Board of Trade as concern about the economy put pressure on mot futures prices.

"All the external factors lined up with a negative polarity," said Bob Lekberg, a grains analyst with Shearson American Express.

Lekberg said there was no support for prices to offset the negative effect coming from falling prices in other commodities markets. He noted that gold was lower, and treasury bills and treasury bonds were under pressure, which caused sympathetic pressure on grain prices.

"Today there was just an absolute lack of buyers," Lekberg said.

Wheat for delivery in March fell 3 cents, settling at $3.37½ a bushel; March corn was down 3 cents, settling at $2.55¼ a bushel; March oats fell 2 cents and settled at $2.05 a bushel; and March soybeans were down 10 cents, settling at $5.94½ a bushel.

Livestock and meat prices were mostly higher on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, with reduced supplies said to be prompting higher prices.

Robert Saathoff, director of commodity research in New York with Bache Halsey Stuart Shields Inc., said a decline in beef production is expected by traders, as animals have had a difficult time gaining weight during the extremely cold winter.

He said hog production also is continuing lower than for the same period a year ago, which also contributed to higher prices.

April hogs were .48 cent higher, settling at 50.30 cents a pound; and March frozen pork bellies were up .07 cent, settling at 74.57 cents a pound.

Coffee was higher and sugar and cocoa fell on the Coffee, Sugar & Cocoa Exchange in New York.

Orange juice prices fell for the third consecutive day on the New York Cotton Exchange.

Antoinette Mammaro, coffee, sugar and orange juice analyst in New York with Drexel Burnham Lambert, Inc., said traders still are reacting to the revised damage estimate of the Florida citrus crop released Wednesday by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Ms. Mammaro said the report indicated that juice yields were higher than traders anticipated and prices have fallen steadily as a result.

Orange juice for delivery in March fell 4.50 cents to 118 cents a pound.

Gold for delivery in April fell $8, settling at $322 a troy ounce, a life-of-contract low. Silver for delivery in April fell 19 cents to 701.5 cents a troy ounce.

Len Alpert, a precious metals trader in Greenwich, Conn., with Merrill Lynch Commodities, said the selloff Friday was triggered by sales of gold bullion on cash markets late Thursday, which drove down cash prices.

The selling was further encouraged by selloffs in currency markets and financial instrument markets, Alpert added.

CHICAGO (AP) — The range of commodity futures this past week on the Chicago Board of Trade was:

Positive Feelings About Their Work

Women have been ordained into the ministry by the Methodist Church since 1956. Presently there are approximately 15 women serving in church appointments in the North Carolina Annual Conference of the United Methodist Church. There are others having special appointments including students, clinical counseling and social work.

There are only five couples in the Methodist ministry in this conference and each couple's appointment is different. Carol and David Goehring are unique in that their appointments are identical and they serve in the same church, Jarvis Memorial United Methodist.

HAND BELLS PRACTICE ... is held weekly at the church. The Rev. Carol Goehring, left, is a member of the group. The hand bells choir participated in a festival in Fayetteville Saturday. Shown with Mrs. Goehring are Carolyn Winbon and Barbara Turner, center and right.

"Carol and I talk shop at home. It's kind of hard not doing so. We share each other's day — talking about things we do and people we see. We look forward to the other's critique of sermons and Bible study preparations," said the Rev. David Goehring.

Carol's grandmother takes credit for getting the two together. They met at orientation at Duke Divinity School Aug. 28, 1975, and were married exactly a year later.

"I think our closeness, cooperative spirit and understanding has come out of those first few years while we were both in divinity school. We were dependent on each other — we had only one old car and only an income from work study grants.

"We have our basic areas of responsibility. We are very much a part of Evangelism Explosion — a method of visitation ministry, which we have been trained for. Since training, we have trained five others in our church. We also share visitation evangelism (prospective members), preparing and conducting several Bible studies per week," he said.

Goehring is a university class Sunday School teacher, which puts him in direct contact with college students.

"I go to the campus to visit, plan programs for them and try to help them feel a vital part of the church. I also work with the Junior High Methodist Youth Fellowship in cooperation with other counselors," he said.

"We — Carol and I — attend as many athletic events with the young people as possible. We feel its important to be where the young people are. Monthly, the other junior counselors and I go over to Aycock Junior High School at lunchtime to visit the students, keeping in touch and letting them know we are thinking about them."

Just about every afternoon Goehring is out visiting church members.

"This is something I want to do, not something I think of as one of my responsibilities. It's hard for me to say when I'm working and when I'm not. My profession is to bear witness to the love of Christ Jesus. That cannot be bound into the eight-hour working day," Goehring said.

"Working with the people of Jarvis has certainly been a blessing. The folks here have helped focus my ministry for years to come.

"My interest in playing basketball prompted me to organize a church team. For three years we played in the city league. This year we were playing in the church league at the Greenville Boy's Club. This enables me to have another type of relationship with church members other than on Sunday morning. Our purpose is to enjoy the fellowship of being together and being good sports. We try to do right by the sport and the players. Sometimes I get too involved and get technical fouls. I'm not an angel on the court, but I'm improving my attitude.

"Sports — tennis and basketball — have opened new avenues and relationships with church members. I enjoy the competition and being with people. We all need free places where we can be ourselves. Instead of kicking my shoes off and sitting down, I get more satisfaction going out and playing basketball," Goehring added.

"Carol and I share the division of home responsibilities. I know our time is of equal value — of the housework that has to be done to keep the house functioning. We have to put heart, mind and soul into how we would want to influence our daughter, Kendra, and be consistent. Certainly central to our marriage has been our relationship to Christ as with our parenting. I know early on, I'm to make mistakes, but I don't think its going to be irreversible. I will need to ask for forgiveness and offer forgiveness.

"The greatest influence in our ideas of our parenting or how we are as parents is in the way our parents brought us up — seeing the positive as well as the negative — for that we thank our parents," he said.

"We have a close friendship with Dr. James Bailey. He has influenced us a great deal — his generosity and talents have greatly added to our ministry here," he added.

Goehring is chairman of the Fair Housing Task Force Committee, established by the mayor of Greenville and the City Council. He is also co-chairman of the Prison Fellowship Ministries in this area and is a member of Crown Point Masonic Lodge.

'Equal Values Shared'

The Rev. Carol Goehring says she feels positive about the work she and her husband, the Rev. David Goehring, are doing as a couple in the ministry at Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church.

"or many it required some adjustments in attitudes because they were not accustomed to two associate ministers, nor to a couple in ministry and especially to a woman in ministry. The congregation has been loving and we have grown together," Mrs. Goehring said in an interview.

"As a couple we can offer holistic ministry. For example if two heads are better than one for recognizing needs and opportunities, then we are better equipped than an individual minister to serve our people. Another point — if a couple separates, each of us can minister to the needs of both parties. Our individual styles and perceptions merge in our ministry," she said.

In recalling the first summer they were here, she said, "David and I had to divide our responsibilities both at work and home. We were appointed right after graduating from seminary. In terms of work, we divided evangelism and education which were our primary emphasis. After two years, we traded these areas to broaden our experience individually and to bring our own skills to the areas of concern. We each approach the areas differently — for having almost identical educational backgrounds, we are still equipped with unique personalities and abilities."

Some responsibilities they share. She's the cook and he's the bottle washer (for Kendra, their young daughter). Together they share youth work, instructing trainees for evangelism ministry, hospital visitation and assisting applicants for relief funds.

"We've drifted into roles that are comfortable for us and apprrently comfortable for the congregation. For example, I work closely with United Methodist Women and enjoy it. David on the other hand has found a real niche with the children's music program.

"Being a woman minister allows special opportunities. For example, women in the congregation sometimes find it easier to express their feelings and frustrations to me in counseling or home visits. They can discuss maritial problems, Christian education in the home, child discipline and issues that concern women with one who shares their concerns," she said.

Mrs. Goehring leads Bible studies for parishioners, including two groups made up of just women - "we have a close fellowship." She is often called on to give programs for various women's groups within the church as well as other groups. She frequently is asked to conduct baptisms, "possibly because of the maternal relationship."

"One of the things we enjoy doing as a couple is pre-maritial counseling and wedding ceremonies. Couples have related to us that by having a husband and wife bring them into the marriage relationship, it's special. In worship we enjoy presiding together and the congregation seems to appreciate variety and complimentarity. We try not to do things together that would overlap or require the attention of only one," Mrs. Goehring stated.

Continuing, she said, "Even before Kendra was born, the church overwhelmed us with their generosity and excitement. They worked with me to make sure all of our summer programs would run smoothly while I was away on maternity leave. The reception has been loving and Kendra is really a church baby. I can't say enough about the way everyone at Jarvis has blessed us.

"Probably the most difficult part of our two-career marriage, with a family, is scheduling. The game plan that we agreed on when we left for work in the morning may change before noon and change again before suppertime. A sense of humor and flexibility sees us through. It seems we never go any place in one car. We are in two cars from two different directions. Being in the same profession, we can understand sudden changes and schedules. It's not a nine to five job," she said.

On The Young Side

By Lisa Wang

After advancing from local to regional to district levels in the John Motley Morehead Scholarship Competition, William Bost and Elizabeth Longino have both succeeded in being named recipients of the prestigious Morehead Scholarships. Following the finalist competition at Chapel Hill from Feb. 27-March 2, the two seniors were chosen to receive the scholarships.

In making awards, the John Motley Morehead Foundation regards qualities such as scholastic ability, extra-curricular attainments, evidence of moral force of character and of capacities to lead and to take an interest in schoolmates, and physical vigor, as shown by participation in competitive sports or in other ways.

An honorary award accompanied by a great deal of money to finance the recipient's undergraduate study at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, the Morehead Scholarship covers the costs of tuition, board, room, laundry, books, all student fees and incidental expenses. In addition, off-campus summer programs are funded by the foundation.

Three draftsmen from Rose demonstrated their talent and won places in the VICA (Vocational Industrial Clubs of America) Regional Drafting Competition at Roanoke-Chowan Technical Institute March 1. Chip Cayton captured first place in the architectural drafting division, while Tom Lyons received second place in technical drafting. In the display category, Tim Harris won first place for a model of the solar home he and his classmates designed. The home is presently under construction. Now they will advance to the state competition April 22-24 in Charlotte. All three are under the instruction of Gary Niklason.

As its first big fund-raiser for the year, National Honor Society sponsored a rock-a-thon Friday. Taking turns rocking in chairs from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m., members plan to donate money collected from pledges to the 1982 Community Ambassador Fund. Ella Harris is the club's adviser.

WANDA LOUISE DAVIS...is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Mack Davis Sr. of Farmville, who announce her engagement to Jeffery Lee Tyson, son of Ms. Nora Jean Tyson of Farmville. A May 15 wedding is planned.

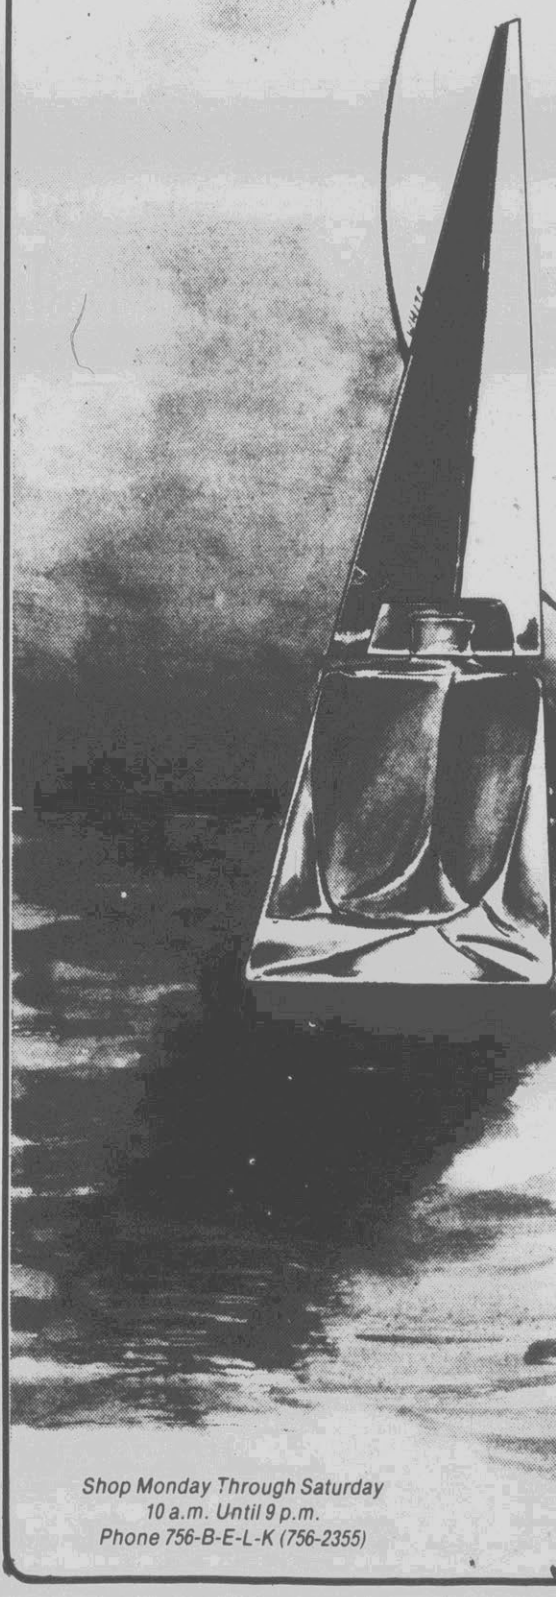
Introducing Volcan d'Amour
A Luxury Fragrance
by Diane Von Furstenberg . . .



You say astonish me. We respond with Volcan d'Amour. Irresistably elegant. Insatiably romatic. The lingering scent of violets . . . all blending, mellowing, coming softly together. An unusually high degree of natural ingredients, Volcan d'Amour contains no artificial coloring. So intensely feminine, it becomes the absolute definition of luxury. Volcan d'Amour imposes a certain kind of presence . . . a certain degree of peak experience. A compliment . . . a state of mind . . . an object. Available in provocative, asymmetric and multifaceted bottles with a unique design. Volcan d'Amour. How can we describe it better than . . . "Into my life you came, bringing peace to my heart . . . fire to my body . . . love to my soul. In your eyes I see myself. Feeling, reaching, looking for perfect harmony." It's so easy . . . simple. An exquisite fragrance . . . Volcan d'Amour.

Instant coffee was first introduced in 1901 by a Japanese chemist, and some of the brew was used during World War I. But it did not become popular until many years later. Today, 20 percent of all coffee is processed into spray- or freeze-dried form. This is simply the process of dehydrating liquid coffee into easily dissolved granules or powder.

Women Give Him Consolation

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I live in a rather exclusive community for retired people, and I am constantly amazed at the aggressiveness of some of the single women here.

A nice couple in their mid-70s were here for about a year, then the wife died. The husband buried her on a Tuesday and by Thursday he had received six invitations to the Saturday dinner dance! (He showed up at the affair and accepted "condolences" between dances!)

I have already told my husband that if I should die first, unless he wants to be hounded by women, not to put my obituary in the newspaper.

Abby, isn't there a prescribed length of time that one should mourn a loved one to show respect?

FLABBERGASTED IN ARIZONA

DEAR FLABBERGASTED: The time to show "respect" is when the loved one is living. The length of time one mourns is a very individual matter. A brief mourning period does not necessarily show lack of respect.

DEAR ABBY: Jerry, the guy my best friend, Anita, has liked for years, asked me out last week. I turned him down because I didn't want to hurt Anita. Being the close friends we are, I told Anita that Jerry had asked me out but I turned him down. She said I should have accepted, but I got the feeling that she was really glad I didn't.

Anita has had a crush on Jerry for a long time, but he's never asked her out. Although she knows Jerry has no interest in her, she still has feelings for him.

Recently a friend of Jerry's told me Jerry wants to ask me out again, and I don't know what to do. I don't want to hurt Anita, but this guy is really nice and nice guys are hard to come by these days.

It's a sticky situation. What are your thoughts on this, Abby?

CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: Anita would have to be both immature and unrealistic to consider you less a friend because you dated a guy she "liked a lot" but who had no interest in her. (Merely liking a guy doesn't make him her property.)

However, since you already told Anita that Jerry asked you out and you turned him down, and you got the feeling she was "glad," you'd probably feel guilty accepting a date with him now.

You're right, a nice guy is hard to come by, but so is a best friend. If you can handle the guilt, go ahead and date him.

PACKAGED FOODS

There are several ways to use packaged foods to save money if your family is small and if you have the right equipment to make use of it, says Mrs. Rachel Kinlaw, extension food and nutrition specialist at North Carolina State University.

For example, a small family might consider buying packaged potatoes. "They're cheaper and you don't have waste from rot or sprouts," Mrs. Kinlaw says. And if you prefer fresh potatoes, ask the produce manager to sell you less than five pounds.

Also when buying cerals, read labels for nutritional information and check to see if the product comes in different packaging materials. Boxes cost more than poly-bags.

Weddings Vows Said In Evening Ceremony

Victoria Elaine Schumacher and Samuel Newell Pearce Jr. were married Saturday evening at 7:30 in the Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church. Dr. James Bailey conducted the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. John A. Wichmann of West Babylon, N.Y. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel N. Pearce Sr. of Greenville.

The bride's honor attendant was Tomi Shumacher of Greenville, sister of the bride. The bridesmaid was Martha Ann Pearce of Greenville, sister of the bridegroom.

The best man was the bridegroom's father. Ushers included Timothy Wichmann of West Babylon, N.Y., brother of the bride, and Timothy Steven Pearce of Wilmington, brother of the bridegroom.

The bride wore a formal gown of ivory with a lace bodice and long sleeves of netting. Her veil of illusion was lace trimmed and she carried a bouquet of ivory roses.

The maid of honor wore a formal gown of dark lavender with spaghetti straps complemented by a sheer over-jacket. The bridesmaid wore an identical formal gown in light lavender and they each carried a bouquet of lavender, yellow and white daisies.

MRS. SAMUEL NEWELL PEARCE JR.

FOOD PRICE OUTLOOK

Retail prices of food may increase between 5 and 9 percent in 1982, says Dr. R.C. Wells, extension economist at North Carolina State University.

Abundant supplies of farm raw products are expected to temper further increases in processing and marketing costs, the specialist says.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Have you ever wondered what happens to rejected cheerleaders?

Some of them, convinced there is nothing to live for, drop out of school and enter the labor market. Others put the disappointment out of their minds and go out for ice hockey.

But most of us become eaten up with resentment and dwell on it for the rest of our lives.

I can walk into a roomful of people and with 90 percent accuracy point out those who have been cheerleaders. I can tell without being told that Dyan Cannon was a cheerleader. She's a laugher. Eydie Gorme was a cheerleader. She's cute. Dinah Shore was a cheerleader. She's popular. Patty Hearst was a cheerleader. She's rich. Raquel welch was a cheerleader. She can do pyramids without anyone standing on her shoulders.

A couple of years ago I was invited back to my college campus to receive one of the greatest honors your alma mater can bestow upon you . . . an honorary doctorate.

As I stood up to make my acceptance speech, it all came back. Cheerleader Tryouts: 3 p.m. Wednesday, March 12, in the gym.

Margie Kretscher wearing a turtleneck sweater that hung LOOSE around her neck. Holly Harper, who didn't have room in her arms for bones. Suzie Werle, who hadn't cut her hair since the third grade (and it was sapping all the strength away from her brain).

I knew every single word of the cheers. Every movement was flawless. I jumped like I had springs in my feet. I was the only one who did the entire routine carrying a handbag.

As I looked out over the crowd of well-wishers, I clutched the leather-bound honorary degree and blurted out, "Don't try to make up now. It's too late! Where were you when I had fat thighs and a cheerleader wish?"

When Johnny Carson went home to Nebraska on his special a few weeks ago, he also mentioned how he was rejected as a cheerleader and never forgot it. For some of us, it's like being short. We compensate. We try harder to achieve. We spend our lives trying to make the ones who made it feel miserable.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By MARGARET CLARK

Memorable characters, exciting periods of history and exotic settings make the following novels highly entertaining.

•Already a best seller, Anton Myrer's "A Green Desire" is the compelling story of two brothers who love the same woman.

The oldest brother, Chapin, is a collector — first of beautiful objects, then of people. In direct contrast, Tipton is solid, industrious, and upright; his sensible approach to life is tested by the scorn of his aunt, the betrayal of his glamorous Portuguese wife and the reckless tide of American finance.

Myrer uses the gulf between the brothers' life-styles to draw vivid scenes of American life at various levels during the first World War, the Roaring Twenties, the crash, the second World War, and just beyond. And his latest novel of romance, violence and family ties will hold the reader spellbound to its shocking conclusion.

In "North and South," Jakes charts the lives and loves of two families, Carolina planters and Pennsylvania industrialists, respectively, and shows how their fortunes intermingle before, during and after the Civil War.

This 735-page volume, first in a triolgy, tells the story of two young men who meet at West Point and, despite their regional differences, form a close friendship. But the relationship is soon to be severely tested by the institution of slavery and by the new abolitionist movement. Throughout the narrative, the author keeps the focus revolving efficiently — from North to South to West. It's a saga that's sure to bring a large, demanding audience.

•Set in Victorian-age New Zealand against a background of rich historical and domestic detail, "Greenstone," by Yvonne Kalman, is a woman's novel of romance and revenge.

Innocent and spunky Juliette Peridot endures long suffering and much injustice without complaint until her mother's strange legacy of gold coins hidden in her sewing basket, and the truth of her murder, combine to free Juliette from the burden of her past and unite her with her longstanding love.

Looming blackly over the large families of Peridots and Yardleys is Maire, Juliette's stepmother, whose scheming and social climbing gradually destroy her family. However, the second generation is born, and a sequel is inevitable for this epic with its lively New Zealand backdrops.

Potters Exhibiting

WINSTON-SALEM — An exhibition of functional pottery by two potters, Jose Dovis and Ron Garfield, goes on view Sunday at The Craft Shop of Piedmont Craftsmen, Inc., 300 S. Main St., in Winston-Salem. The exhibit will remain on view through April 10. Craft shop hours are 10 to 5 Mondays through Saturdays, and from 1 to 5 on Sundays.

Dovis, a native of the villaze of Coazze, near Turin, Italy, moved with his family to Argentina in 1959. There, he spent almost 10 years painting, sculpting and making pottery. Beginning in 1969, he and his wife, Vesna, spent several years traveling and studying in Bolivia, Peru, Mexico, Gautemala, CostaRica, El Salvador and Venezuela. In 1971 he settled in Washington, D.C., where he taught at the Corcoran School of Art and sold his pottery through American Hand and Talking of Michaelangelo.

The stoneware pottery he makes features brush decorations in cobalt and iron oxide. The decorations consist of geometric and floral borders with central motifs of animals, flowers, fruit and landscape. His pottery includes teapots, platters, pitchers, mugs, bowls, tiles and dinnerware, all produced in his studio on the eastern shore of Virginia near Exmore.

Garfinkel, a native of Minnesota, has shown regularly at the Piedmont Crafts Fair since 1970 except for the past two years which he spent in the Dominican Republic to help establish a cottage industry for potters.

He holds a bachelor's degree from Antioch College and a master's degree from UNC-Chapel Hill.

Garfinkel makes salt-glazed pottery in his studio in Monroe, Maine. His products include crocks, pie plates, souffle dishes, pate jars, mugs, tiles, casseroles, pitchers, bread bowls, and pans. Some are decorated with decals of flowers and vegetables, a few are decorated with abstract drawings.

RON GARFINKEL ... is one of two potters whose work is being shown in an exhibition of functional pottery opening today at The Craft Shop of Piedmont Craftsmen Inc., 300 S. Main St., in Winston-Salem. Garfinkle and Jose Dovis, a native of Italy now living in Virginia, are both showing pottery that is practical for home use.

Craftsmen Invited To Submit Work

RALEIGH — Carolina Designer Craftsmen and its standards committee is inviting all interested craftsmen to submit work for jurying in the CDC Spring Jurying to be held April 3 at Christ Episcipal Church, 120 East Edenton St., Raleigh.

Show Of Norris Work At Carriage Trade

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

David Norris, a 1980 graduate of the school of art, East Carolina University, with a major in printmaking, is having a small show of drawings at Carriage Trade Antiques and Art Gallery at 802 Clark St. The show will be on view until about the end of April and is open to the public during regular operating hours of Carriage Trade.

The drawings, in color, sepia, or in black or white, are of pastoral outdoor scenes or of yards with arrangements of houses. Those without buildings are freer in the depiction of nature's contours. These are peaceful places, presented in a highly realistic style. They are the kind of sylvan settings that invite leisurely walks. One painting, entitled "Last Remnant of a House on a Hill," is in a different vein from the other works, and is the only one in the show that comes off awkardly.

Norris, a native of Charlotte, currently lives in Greenville. He has exhibited in various local shows and has a work in the annual Spring Mills (South Carolina) Traveling Show. Norris also draws a comic strip for the East Carolina University newspaper, the East Carolinian, and contributes cartoons to a college press service.

Tissot Art Acquired

NORFOLK, Va. — "The Artists' Wives" by James Jacques Joseph Tissot, the major accession of the year by Norfolk's Chrysler Museum, will be unveiled to the public on Tuesday. The painting will be exhibited in the Impressionist Gallery.

Tissot was born in 1836 in Nantes, France, and died in 1902. He studied in Paris at the Ecole des Beaux-Arts and became friends with the noted American painter, James McNeill Whistler. The work of Edgar Degas is considered an important influence on Tissot's art.

"The Artists' Wives" was painted in 1885 as part of a series of 15 large paintings entitled "La Femme a Paris."

In The Chrysler Museum, Impressionist paintings by Gaugin, Renoir and Degas, as well as a painting by the academic painter Bougereau, flank the Tissot painting.

Museum hours are 10 to 4 Tuesdays through Saturdays, and from 1 to 5 on Sundays. The museum is located at Olney Road and Mowbray Arch.

Robert Furman Senior Show

ECU News Bureau

Commercial art works by Robert Furman of Castle Hayne, a senior in the school of art, East Carolina University, will be exhibited March 15-21 in the gallery of the Baptist Student Center on 10th Street.

Commercial illustrations, graphics, drawings, photographs and oil, acrylic, watercolor and gouache paintings will be included. The illustrations and graphics represent various media.

Upon graduation, Furman plans to seek a career in illustration or graphic design in the Richmond, Atlanta or Kansas City areas.

Dusenburg Sculpture At GMA

Sculptor Philip Dusenbury's nearly two dozen figures — all of people except for a bird, a dog and a pig-monkey combination — being exhibited in the North and South galleries of the Greenville Museum of Art, 802 S. Evans St., is a show of a different order from what local viewers will usually see.

A distinct division is made from Dusenbury's early works, shown in the North Gallery and the more numerous later works in the South Gallery. In the early sculptures, the figures, including a woman playing yo-yo and another woman with a rolling pin clutched in her hand, are earthy people solidly planted on their bases. Colors here are darker than in the predominantly white and gray-white of later pieces.

Elongation, almost to the point of emaciation in some figures, marks the configuration of Dusenbury's more recent works. These are based on keenly observed ordinary men and women made extraordinary by the emphasized shapes and the stances, gestures and expressions given them by the artist. They register the sadness of long years of living, of suffering and resignation. Yet the suffering is made bearable by touches of subtle humor and redeeming dignity.

A scrawny ancient dowager with blue-tinted hair, her sagging shape garbed in gold gown and shoes, is endowed both with pathos and some trace still of an air of determined social authority.

Two old men seated on a bench — one by dress and facial features looks like a Chinese mandarin — are appealing. A writer could very well conjure up a fine short story about these two conversationalists. These two, incidentally, are the exception to the emphasis on white and gray-white of most figures. One of the old men wears astonishing pink trousers.

In several of the sculptures, the print of newspapers used as a component in the sculptures shows through the finish of the surface. In one instance, that of a gold-colored swamp bird, the result is an incongruous two-line headline reading "Dreams Come True For Mother Who Was Once A Man." Could this convey a wish on the part of the bird (if it is a male bird) to lay an egg?

Dusenbury's austere sculptures fashioned of plastercloth and papier mache are sure to create a wide range of responses by viewers. Those who want to see something in the nature of seldom-seen works in the local area should not miss the chance to see his show. It's thought provoking, and an excellent account of an artist observing the world around him and projecting that world in his art.

Museum hours are 10 to 10 on Tuesdays, 10 to 6 Wednesdays through Fridays, 11 to 3 on Saturdays, and closed Sundays and Mondays. Dusenbury's show will be on view through March 27.

30th Anniversary For Flat Rock Theater

Associated Press Writer

FLAT ROCK, N.C. (AP) — Winter is a bleak season for the Flat Rock Playhouse in the Western North Carolina mountains — a time of empty plastic-covered seats, a boarded-up ticket office and a barren stage.

It's in the summer that the rustic red-barn playhouse — perched beside the large flat rock for which it is named — comes alive with the returning Vagabond Players, the glow of lantern light in the trees and the buzz of opening-night crowds.

It's the theater's combination of quality shows and intimate atmosphere that keeps theater-goers from all over the country coming back for more, says director Robin Farquhar.

"We give our audiences a variety of good shows, our actors are professional and we stage our plays in an intimate, comfortable setting," Farquhar says. "We are known as one of the best summer theaters around and we try to live up to our reputation."

The playhouse, whose season runs from mid-June to early September, is celebrating its 30th anniversary in Flat Rock. During the 30 years, more than 4 million playgoers from all 50 states and several foreign countries have attended Flat Rock performances.

The Flat Rock Playhouse, located in the small Henderson County community of Flat Rock, has long been acclaimed by critics as one of the 10 best summer theaters. Stars such as Academy Award-winning actress Kim Hunter, Andy Griffith and Lee Marvin started their careers as apprentices at the playhouse.

The state Legislature designated the playhouse the State Theater of North Carolina in 1961.

The Vagabond Players were organized in December 1937 in New York, where they played at several off-Broadway locations for three years. In 1940, Vagabonds, under the leadership of Liverpool, England native Robroy Farquhar, converted a 150-year-old grist mill in Flat Rock into the Old Mill Playhouse — the state's first professional summer theater.

During World War II, the players were disbanded and the theater was closed down. In 1952, the reorganized Vagabonds pitched tent on the flat rock in the current playhouse location, where they staged their shows for two seasons. It was two years before the troupe performed under a roof on a stage.

The playhouse has come a long way since its tent days. The Vagabonds moved into their permanent theater in 1973 and converted a Victorian mansion on the three acres of property into business offices, the box office and living quarters for male apprentices and the Farquhars. Other additions include new dormitories and a dining hall.

In the past two years, air conditioning, movie-theater-type seats and new carpet have been added to the theater itself.

"Every year, we attract people from all over the country and we like to think it's because we're very good and because our theater is comfortable and provides a good setting for our plays," said Farquhar, 32, who took over as director of the playhouse last year when his father, Robroy, stepped down.

The theater seats 450 people. About 40,000 visitors come to the playhouse every summer.

Since 1964, the Vagabond Touring Theater has taken its plays to students in elementary and high schools throughout the state. The players also perform daily during the summer at the nearby Carl Sandburg Home National Historic Site.

North Carolina Theater Arts and the Department of Cultural Resources provide grant assisance to the playhouse, along with an annual appropriation from the General Assembly. The non-profit theater receives about $200,000 a year, Robin Farquhar says.

"As with everything else, the costs of operating and maintenance are going up all the time and we would like to have more money," he said. "But the state has been fantastic in its funding and combined with their efforts, we plan to keep this theater the best anywhere."

Lorimer To Perform

Classical guitarist Michael Lorimer will appear in concert in Hendrix Theater, Mendenhall Student Union Center, at 8 p.m. on Thursay. Tickets are priced at $5, are available in advance from the Central Ticket Office and will also be sold at the door.

MICHAEL LORIMER

Lorimer, a favorite protege of Andre Segovia, is considered one of the world's most talented classical guitarists. He is the first American guitarist invited to perform in the Soviet Union. He appeared in performances in major Russian cities in 1975 and again in 1977. Recently, he completed a successful tour of Israel.

Llorimer is recognized as one of the leading exponents of the Baroque guitar. A critic in a review in "Music and Musician" following his London debut wrote: "If he is not the best Baroque guitarist in the world at present, the competition has still to present itself."

The San Francisco Chronicle called Lorimer, "A live one ... this will be one of the great careers. What sets Michael Lorimer apart is that he has already found a highly personal style, one that is musical to the core and utterly convincing in performance."

Indians Picketing For 'Windwalker'

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. — Dusty "Iron Wing" McCrea, an enrolled member of the Rosebud Sioux Tribe, and Jerome Bushyhead, a Cheyenne-Arapaho Indian, are leading a picket line against the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

The purpose of the picket is to have the academy acknowledge the movie "Windwalker" as an important tribute to native American people. Another stated purpose of the picket action is to bring public attention to a situation which Mrs. McCrea says "represents a racist attitude toward Indian people by the academy and the motion picture industry."

Ms. McCrea and Bushyhead are disgruntled, they say, as the academy "overlooked 'Windwalker' in the 1981 Oscar nominations, confusing it temporarily with a foreign language classification because the film was produced in a language other than English, using English subtitles."

The Indians are saying it has been a great embarrassment, not to mention a terrible injustice, to have a film made in America, by Americans, about Americans, confused with the foreign language category. "What can be more American than a film about the first Americans using their own language," Bushyhead asks.

The film has a cast of 60 native Americans, with actor Trevor Howard the only non-Indian in the cast. Authentic Cheyenne and Crow Indian dialects are used in the film with English subtitles and narration.

Mrs. McCrea and Bushyhead are seeking to have the academy award a special Oscar to "Windwalker" as "the most authentic Indian film ever produced."

Fiddler Becomes Violinist

KINSTON, N.C. (AP) — Walter Lyerly has rekindled the musical ability he learned at age 6 to become a member of the East Carolina University Symphony at 65.

Lyerly began playing violin in a family band in spite of his youthful resistance.

"My father made me practice," he said. "When I first started, I had to be made to play."

But the retired Du Pont employee now devotes three or four hours a day to his music.

"It's like an obsession with me," he said.

By the time he was 10, Lyerly had made his debut before "down to earth local people" at the Old Time Fiddlers Convention in Union Grove. He studied some classical music with a tutor during high school, but after that, his musical talents were silenced for many years.

"When I retired in April 1975, I got more into more formal practice," he said. That was when his son, Bill of the RCA recording artists' Bill Lyerly Band, brought him a set of violin strings and urged him to take up the fiddle again.

That led to more formal instructions with Leigh Riggs, program coordinator for the Community Council for the Arts, and then East Carolina graduate student Melody Jones.

"She thought I could go right on into the symphony," Lyerly said.

And that's what he did.

CLASSY FIDDLER . . . Walter Lyerly, 65, of Kinston, taught himself to play bluegrass music on the fiddle as a child. After he retired several years ago, he took up classical music and now plays with the East Carolina University Symphony. (AP Laserphoto)

Remembered For Famed War Song

The British composer Ivor Novello was only 21 years old when he wrote a patriotic longing-for-home song in 1915 that immediately became a smash World War I hit. The song, "Keep the Homes Fires Burning," was to the British what George M. Cohan's "Over There" was to the Americans. In fact, both songs became favorites of English-singing peoples on both sides of the Atlantic.

As so often happens when a creative individual does something sensational in his field early in life, he never manages to overcome the association with that particular creation.

This certainly applies to Novello. In the post-World War years, Novello achieved a solid reputation in Great Britain as a composer, playwright and producer. Among his musical successes were "Glamorous Night," performed in 1935; "Careless Rapture," 1936; "The Dancing Years" of 1936; and in 1949, "King's Rhapsody."

Novello was also successful in writing straight plays. In 1924, with Constance Collier he wrote "The Rat," and followed this success with plays such as "The Truth Game" in 1938 and "Fresh Fields," 1934.

Born David Ivor Davies in 1893 in Cardiff, Wales, he took as his pen name his middle name and the maiden name of his famous mother, the Welsh singing teacher, Dame Clara Novello. He died in London in 1951.

Today, "Keep the Homes Fire Burning" has become a standard musical symbol often heard in films relating to the World War I era.

Hospitality House

WASHINGTON — A playwright talks about her forthcoming play in Texas on Kay Currie's television program, "Hospitality House," airing from noon until 12:30 p.m. today over WITN-TV, Channel 7, Washington.

Jinni Nickell of Washington, in a segment taped at Miss Currie's home, gives details on her play entitled "Illumination of a Dream," about community development through the arts.

The kitchen guests today are the two chefs of Dondi's Fireside Restaurant in Goldsboro, Bond Jester and Mark Muntz. The two prepare double baked potato and creme de mint parfait. While they cook, Fireside's pianist, Paul Malpass, will provide background music.

Battle Anniversary

BENTONVILLE — March 19-21 marks the 117th anniversary of the Battle of Bentonville, when 80,000 troops clashed with heavy losses — varying accounts list more than 1,500 for the Union side and more than 2,600 Confederates. At any rate, the battle has been described as the bloodiest ever fought on North Caroilina soil.

On March 20-21, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. each day, a living history encampment will be held, featuring authentic Confederate camp activities.

Volunteers of the First N.C. Volunteer Infantry will recreate the life of a typical Civil War 19th century Confederate soldier. Garbed in authentic Confederate uniforms, the volunters will demonstrate cooking, military drills and firing and equipment uses.

The re-enactment is open to the public. Bentonville Battleground State Historic Site is located near Newton Grove, three miles north on U.S. 701 and then three miles east on SR 1008. The distance from Greenville — through Goldsboro — is about 80 miles.

A TALL GERANIUM . . . in the window of Jimmy Whichard's Renfrew Printing Shop on Dickinson Avenue puts forth two new flower buds. The shop's window, like others in town getting winter sun, has been a repository for potted flowers during the cold months of winter.

SUNTAN TIME AGAIN . . . In the sunny hours of the first spring days, the thoughts of many young people turn to getting an early start on a summer tan. Here, Mark Tripp, Jr. jogs shirtless in a Greenville park.

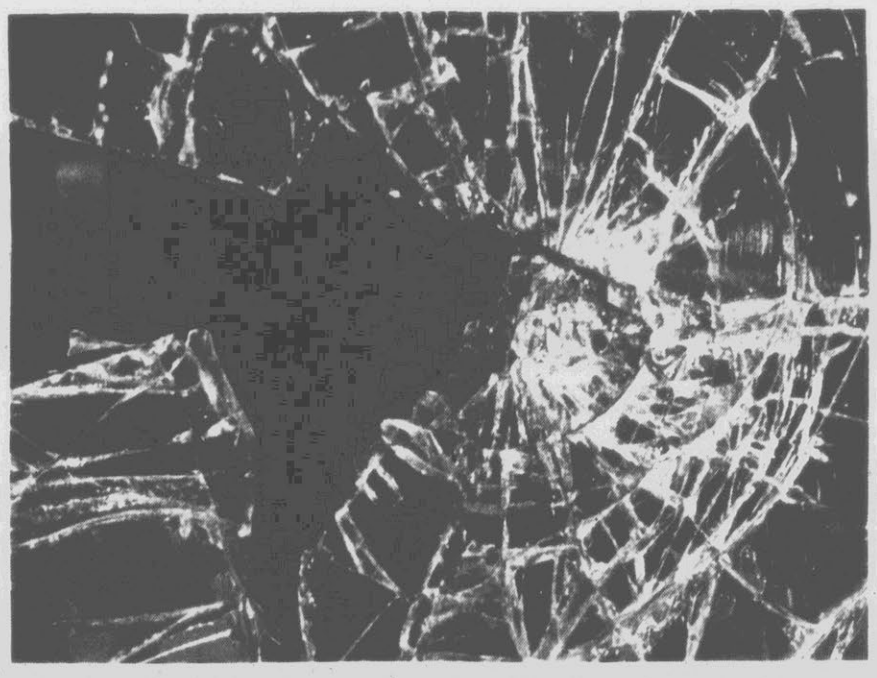
TUCKED AWAY STONE . . . These two Corinthian style capitals and part of a stone column laying on the ground are tucked away in a shrubbery-enclosed corner on the East Carolina University campus. The items are not identified, but are probably from one of the older university buildings demolished some years ago.

Spring Rambling In Outdoors Greenville

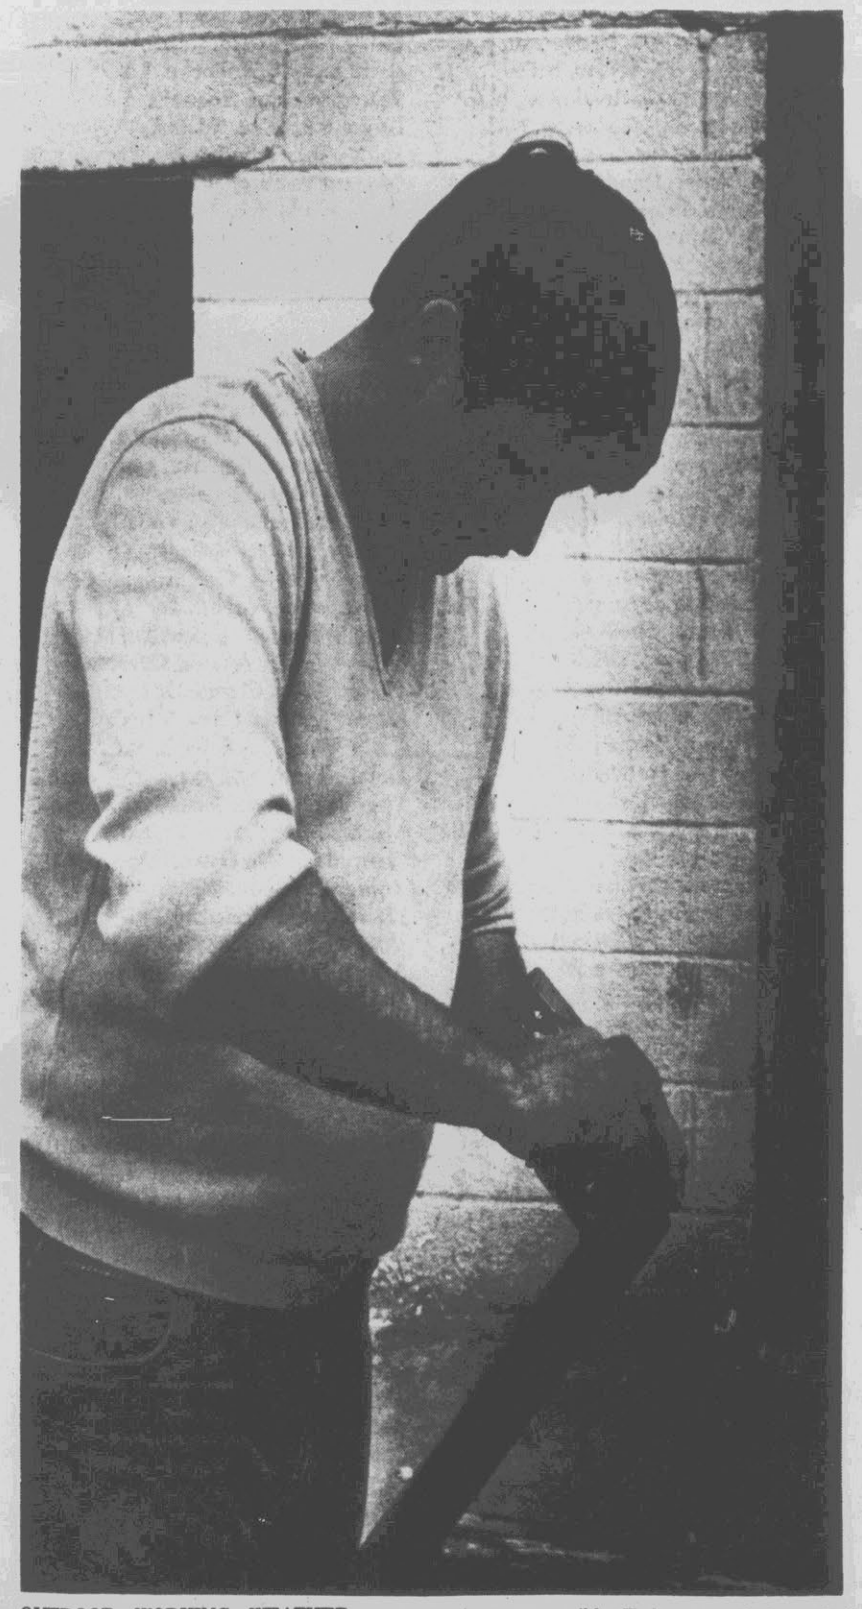
The calendar may say spring is officially almost a week away. But with daffodils, forsythia and spirea in bloom, with trees turning bright with buds and catkins, it might as well be said that spring is here.

Warm days mean it's time to explore the greening world. Sun worshippers are getting an early start on summer tans; and nature lovers are keeping a watch for the first spring hatch-out of spiders and butterflies.

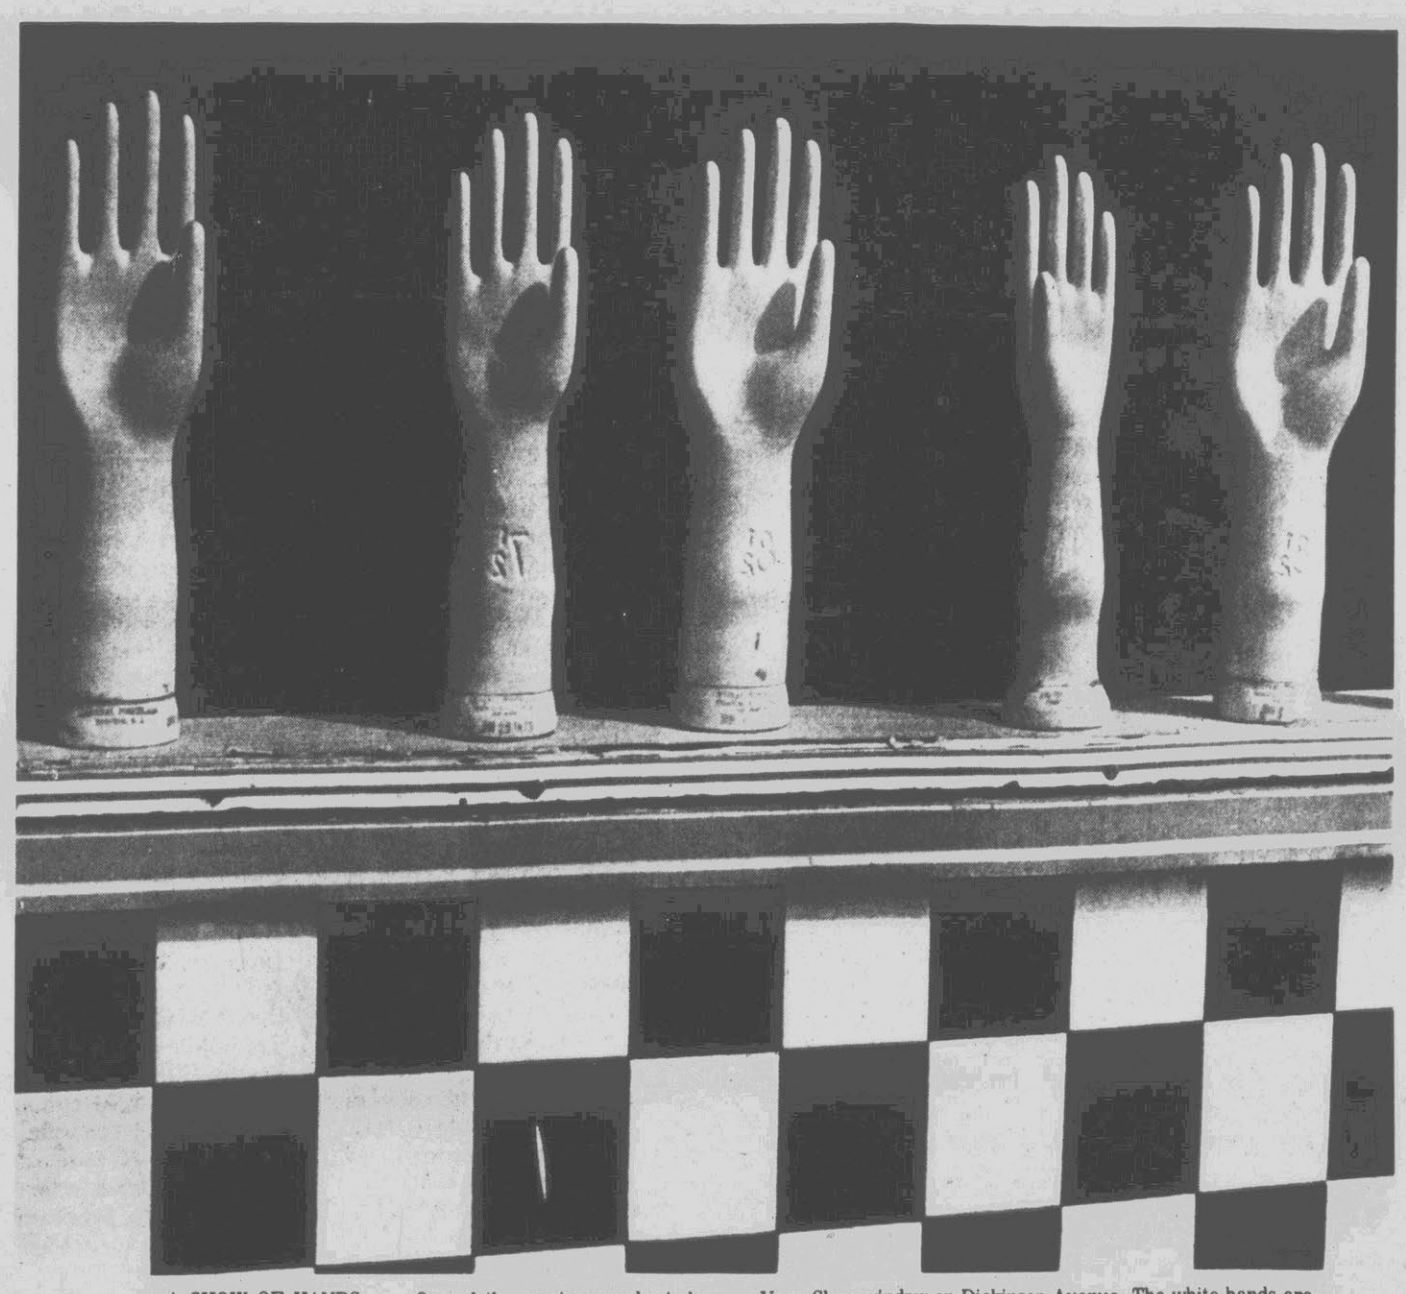
Days when the sun is warm on the face are ideal for camera rambles around town. In any place area of Greenville there are dozens of likely photographic subjects close at hand. The subjects on this page were discovered within a walking area easily covered in a couple of hours.



Text & Photos By Jerry Raynor



OUTDOOR WORKING WEATHER . . . William Hodges finds the warm early days of spring ideal for taking work outdoors whenever possible. Hodges was photographed this past week in front of a store on West Fifth Street, making repairs to parts of a pool table.



A SHOW OF HANDS . . . One of the most unusual window sights in Greenville's shop is this intriguing display of five upright hands. The quintet of hands is located in the Chain & Yarn Shop window on Dickinson Avenue. The white hands are a neat contrast to the black and white tiles on the outer wall beneath the window.

Life As It's Lived

By GAIL MICHAELS

One of the hardest tasks a parent can undertake is teaching a child to empathize. It's not that children aren't aware of other people's feelings; by the second time they decorate the new grasscloth in the den with red Crayola in anticipation of Mommy's shrieks or reach over and pinch a plug out of a playmate, they are fully conscious of their power to make all of those within the circle of their aquaintance wretched.

But they certainly don't want to share this misery; they much prefer to provoke it. The more aware they become of other people's feelings, the more anxious most of them are to excercise their newfound power unless the parents step in and stop them.

This the parents unsually do, for the mental health of all concerned, but not with a lesson in empathy. Anyone who has ever seen a toddler attempt to comfort a distraught sibling knows that small children have a tremendous capacity for love, but tapping those tender feelings proves next to impossible when a child is in a destructive mood. So, instead, parents resort to a power-play. They let the child know that, if he continues on his ruinous course, the unhappiness he causes will be nothing compared to the agony they'll inflict on him.

This, of course, isn't true, but because we parents have the advantage of height, our children tend to believe us. Those who have specialized in terrorizing their peers stop. Those who favor terrorizing their families tone down the attacks. They progrees to the next step in maturation. They decide that best way to gain power is to imitate us.

Meg is at this stage. She isn't content to let the adults around her bring her more unruly peers to her behavioral level. She wants to mete out rewards and punishments, too. That's why she gave Sarah and Jenny and Adam three grapes apiece when she shared her snack with them whereas she gave Jamie only two.

She gave an exaggerated sigh as she related the incident to me. "I told him I wished I could give him more but he'd had his name on the blackboard for talking at rest time and he is just going to have to learn to do better."

Here was a perfect opportunity for a lesson in empathy. "I am glad you shared your snack," I told her. "But when you share, you have to give each of your friends an equal protion. It's not up to you to punish them."

I felt certain that, from then on, Meg would be more cognizant of the feelings of others. Unfortunately, the habit of empathy is more difficult to acquire than I had anticipated. In a few days she was backsliding.

"Johnny's here," she said loudly when I came to pick her up. "You remember how he misbehaved last year in preschool. He practically stayed in the corner."

Johnny and his mother were standing nearby. I was embarrassed. "I'm sure he is more mature now that he's in kindergarten," I said as tried to hurry Meg along.

"Maybe so, but Brad said he hated him."

I pulled her out to the car. "How could you say those things when Johnny was listening? How do you think that made him feel?" I hissed.

"I didn't know he was listening. Besides, I didn't say I hated him."

I grabbed her arms and shook her. "It doesn't matter. How do you think he felt when he heard you say all those ugly things you said? Just how do you think you'd feel if someone was that mean to you?"

The tears poured forth. "About the same way I feel now."

I guess parents backslide, too, sometimes.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF
© 1982 Tribune Company Syndicate, Inc.

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—With both sides vulnerable, my partner opened the bidding with one spade and my right-hand opponent overcalled two clubs. I held the following hand: ♠KQ6 ♡93 ◇J652 ♣AQ73

Obviously, I had several courses of action, and there was disagreement among the players as to my best bid. Please discuss the merits of a penalty double over some of the other possibilities.—R. Greco, Jersey City, N.J.

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)

A.—I have often stated that I like the idea of doubling minor-suit contracts at the two-level. I consider that action among the safest at rubber bridge—even if the opponents make their contract, you haven't doubled them into game, and you stand to reap a rich harvest if they have overstepped the mark. So you can double an overcall of two clubs or two diamonds quite freely. But there are still some criteria that should be met by the doubler.

Foremost among them is that when you double a low-level overcall, you deny a good fit for partner's suit. There is a sound reason for this—when you have length in partner's suit, you could very easily be neutralizing some of your side's defensive potential because your high cards might be ruffed away. Hands where a fit exists are usually better suited to offense than to defense.

On the hand you submit, your holding in partner's suit strongly suggests that he has opened with a five-card suit. Since you have two of the top three spade honors, partner is more likely to have length, for with four weak spades he probably would have opened with one of a minor suit. So your spade holding might mean that your side can score only one trick in that suit on defense, and as a result, the penalty you obtain from the double could be inadequate compensation for a possible game.

Instead of looking for penalties, I would prefer trying for game with your hand—possibly by bidding two no trump or by upgrading your values slightly because of the position of the ace-queen of clubs and taking a shot at three no trump directly. However, switch the major suit holdings around so that I have a doubleton spade and K-Q-7 in hearts, and the double becomes more attractive. The hand has exactly the same high-card count, but now the lack of a fit makes our chances for game more remote.

Q.—If you were asked to give a one-word tip to improve someone's game, what would you choose?—J. Williams, Bronx, N.Y.

A.—Pass. More points are lost by players bidding when they should yield the right of way to partner than at any other single facet of the game. If players could only learn that there is nothing degrading about a pass, their results would improve noticeably.

Q. My neighbor says I should plant white and yellow corn side-by-side. Why? (R.V., Mount Airy)

A. White and yellow corn planted next to each other will produce corn with white and yellow kernels on the same cob. Although it will not affect the quality of the corn, it is better to plant a minimum of three short rows of one variety and then three more rows of another variety at the end of the row.

Q. I have been told that I should cut back my liriope (sometimes called lilytuft) during the month of March. Is this true? (P.H., Holly Springs)

A. Yes. Liriope, a stemless evergreen ground cover, needs to be cut back before the new growth has a chance to start growing. This will give the plant a less ragged appearance and allow it a more compact shape. The easiest method os to shear off the tops with the home lawn mower.

Q. Will freezing damage pesticides? What are the best storage conditions for pesticides commonly used around a home or garden? I am referring to such pesticides as Sevin and malathion. (L.B., China Grove)

A. Pesticides labeled "caution," such as Sevin and malathion will not freeze or be harmed unless subjected to extreme outside temperatures. A locked outside garage or utility building is ideal for storage. A basement is also good if small children do not have access to the area. Pesticides with "WARNING" and "DANGER" labels should not be used or stored around the home.

Q. I have recently purchased about a dozen one-quart azalea plants. My problem is that the soil is mostly clay. Will the azaleas have a chance to live? (R.Y., Salisbury)

A. Your azaleas won't have much of a chance if you plant them directly into the clay soil. Dig individual holes for each plant or prepare an entire bed. Make the holes larger than the root system of the plant. Work in large quantities of peat moss, leafmold or other organic matter. This will increase soil acidity and moisture holding capacity. Water the newly set plants well. After the water soaks in, firm the soil with your foot. This helps prevent settling of the root ball. Azaleas do best when planted near the soil surface. Mulch with three to four inches of pine needles.

Sealed Homes May Be Dangerous

By JAMES R. CAMPBELL
United Press International

Arctic winds rattle the shutters and shove snowdrifts against the doors, but it's warm and cozy by the wood fire. There's comfort in knowledge the house is zippered against that frigid air.

There's another layer of foam insulation in the attic and walls, and storm windows all around.

But maybe you don't feel just right, a little draggy perhaps.

Some environmental health authorities see a possible link between such feelings and toxic fumes wafting from nearly everything in the house as well as the stuff it's made of.

"It really impacts on the person who develops a sensitivity and can really become an unbearable situation," said Don G. Brown, a Ph.D in environmental health at the University of Michigan. "He may have to consider options, hard decisions about where he lives, how he lives, the things he brings into his home."

Before the energy crunch of the 1970's it didn't matter so much. Air whistled in and out of draftier buildings at least several times a day, perhaps two or three times an hour.

"The air exchange rate has dropped dramatically in most homes," Brown said.

"The complaints I get from people who call me as an environmentalist are usually rather general in nature — headache, nausea. Sometimes they say that they don't feel like thay have any energy. They may say 'when I go on a trip or I'm away from home or the office I feel better.' Well, you and I probably feel better on vacation. It's very difficult to tell whether its psychological or related to some chemical in the environment."

Health hazards could be as minor as that, authorities say, or as serious as a cancer threat. Allergens are known to be big trouble, particularly to asthmatics.

"Asthmatics represent people who are most sensitive and may therefore serve as indicators to the rest of us," Brown said.

"We haven't really assessed the total magnitude of what the problem may be," he said. "This is of relatively recent concern, dating from the energy conservation effort."

But the American Public Health Association's environmental section is concerned enough to have scheduled a session on it at its fall meeting in Montreal.

"One thought that's perhaps important is the cumulative effect," Brown said. "People might find themselves changing a job and the combination of what they're exposed to at home may combine to create health effects.

"The best example relates to a person who either smokes or lives in a home where he is exposed to heavy smoking and then gets a job where he is exposed to an industrial contaminant, say asbestos. These people have a much higher chance of developing asbestiosis, a form of lung cancer."

Many problems in the home or workplace are related to foam insulations containing formaldehyde.

"But there are many other sources — new carpets, sealants, adhesives for putting down various materials in the home," Brown said.

"Some recent studies indicate that exposure to certain levels of formaldehyde can be carcinogenic," he said. "I don't know if we're talking about exposure limits of that magnitude. I don't think anyone knows."

The Consumer Product Safety Commission voted 4-1 Feb. 22 to ban further installation of urea formaldehyde foam insulation on grounds it can cause respiratory problems, skin irritations and is a possible cause of cancer. Canada and the states of Massachusetts and Connectict previously had halted its use, although the Massachusetts action was later stayed. A trade organization, The National Insulation Certification Institute, said it would challenge the ban in court.

Dr. Salvatore DiNardi, associate professor of environmental health at the University of Massachusetts School of Health Sciences, will move this spring into a new home in South Amherst designed specifically as a laboratory for air quality studies.

"Everything you can think of is a source of indoor air pollution," DiNardi said. "Plywood, wallboard, sealants, glue, furniture, carpet, perma pressed clothes, detergents, all contain formaldehydes in one concentration or another."

He tagged cigarette smoking as probably the biggest problem in indoor pollution, but said anything burned to heat or eat can spell trouble.

"The other biggest source is the wood stove," he said. "That romantic odor of burning wood is really unhealthy.

"A wood stove produces a lot of particles, small enough to breath in," he said. "Large ones are filtered out in the nose, but others get down into the lungs. Some people, asthmatics, people with respiratory ailments, cardiac patients, have real problems."

DiNardi's house is being purposely sealed and filled with possible pollutants. From the experiment he hopes to fashion a whole house system of air cleaning that will help others live safely while cutting fuel costs.

Rush-Hampton Industries of Longwood, Fla., a maker of air purifying equipment, is providing financial support for the project.

"We're using everything in today's state of the art techniques to make it as airtight as possible, short of going underground," DiNardi said.

"I think I can build a whole air handling system for under $1,000, if you have all the duct work in place," he said.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — We just moved into an old house. Everything seems to be working fine except that, every once in a while, one of the fuses blows when the dishwasher is turned on. It would seem to be an overload on the circuit, but if that were the problem, why doesn't it happen all the time but only sometimes?

A. — It appears to be an overload all right, occasioned by the fact that the washer only overloads at certain times because of the surge of extra power to start the machine. It may be that it occurs only when something else on the same circuit is also drawing on the electricity. If you know which appliance, lights, etc., are on the same line, be sure they are not operating when the washer is turned on. The better way is to replace the regular 15-ampere fuse with what is called a time-delay fuse of the same amperage. This type of fuse allows for a temporary overload. If that still blows, then you will need a professional electrician to determine what is wrong.

Q. — I always have trouble distinguishing between ferrous and non-ferrous metals. It can be troublesome when the instructions for a project refer to one or the other of these types. I looked up ferrous in the dictionary and it explains that a ferrous metal is one with iron and small amounts of other metals or substances, but it doesn't tell which metals these are. Can you help us?

A. — Yes. Ferrous metals include carbon steel, wrought iron, cast iron and what is called mild steel. The non-ferrous metals include brass, bronze, aluminum, copper, nickel, tin and zinc.

Q. — Our garden hose is in good condition except for one place where it has been split as though it had been run over by something. Is it possible to replace just a few inches of the hose or must it be thrown away?

A. — You do not have to throw away the hose, nor do you have to replace a few inches of it. Merely cut out the damaged part and then join the two cut ends. You can buy a hose repair coupling mender at your local hardware store, lumber yard or home center. There is one type for rubber hoses, another for plastic hoses. Be sure to get the right kind, then follow directions on how to put the two ends together. If, as sometimes happens, no directions come with the mender, ask your dealer to explain how it functions. It is very simple and is almost self-apparent when you take a close look at the coupler. Be certain you use a sharp knife or blade to make a clean cut of the damaged section. Also, if you dip the ends of the plastic hose into hot water to soften them, the repair will be easier.

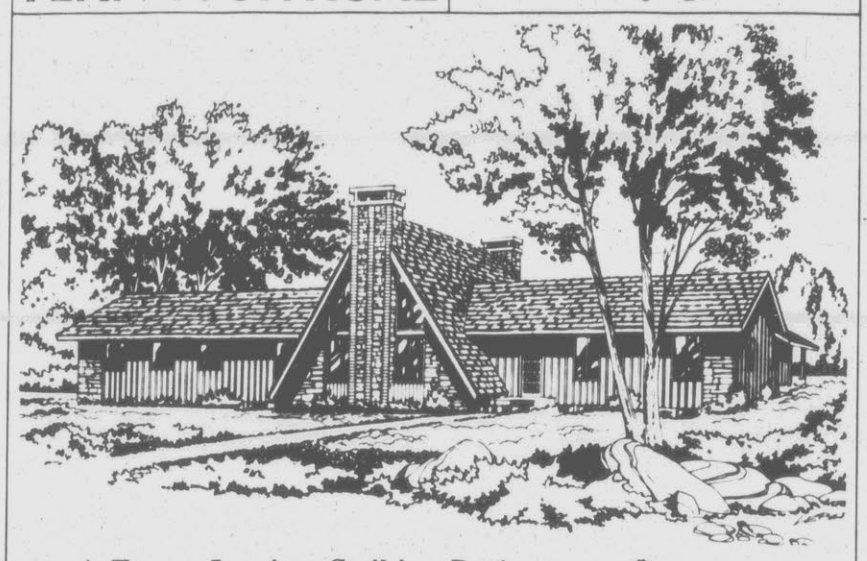
Q. — Our fireplace has been smoking a little. It seems to occur only when we have an exhaust fan on in the kitchen, which is a considerable distance from the fireplace, which is in the living room. How can this be making the fireplace smoke?

A. — Because the fan is drawing air out of the house and, when the fireplace is operating, this brings air down the chimney. That air, in turn, pushes smoke out of the fireplace opening. It's what is known as as reverse air flow and can take place for any number of reasons. You are fortunate in knowing what the reason is. Just be sure that, before you start a fire, the exhaust fan is off.

Q. — I read somewhere about rubbing a newly varnished surface with pumice in powder form. While I have never used pumice powder, it seems to me that it might cause scratches in the varnish. Isn't it an abrasive?

A. — Yes, it is an abrasive, but it smooths a surface rather than scratches it — if it is used properly. It must be used with either oil or water as a lubricant, although water should not be used if the finish is shellac. When a scratch occurs in a surface while using powdered pumice, it is because a tiny object, perhaps a sliver of wood that is almost invisible or a piece of hardened dirt, has found its way into the powder. Before using the pumice, check it carefully. Some woodfinishers even sift the powder to be certain it has nothing foreign in it.

PLAN YOUR HOME — The Maplegrove



A-Frame Inspires Striking Design

By Jerry Bishop

With a facade that suggests a winged A-frame, the Maplegrove, an innovative one level design, matches its striking exterior with a luxurious and livable floor plan.

Three bedrooms and two and one half baths are included in the plan, which also calls for a formal dining room and great room and informal family room.

Unique in approach, the facade uses an interesting combination of glass, wood, and stone, accented by front and rear chimneys. Entry is into a gracious foyer with the guest oriented great room at left. The great room, enhanced by high vaulted ceilings and expanses of glass, provides a generous area for entertaining, a wood-burning fireplace, and a connecting formal dining room.

The design, however, is equally geared to family living and supplies a family room with fireplace and vaulted ceilings adjoining the U-shaped kitchen. Careful planning results in a laundry room that doubles as a mud room, and a half bath that is just steps from the kitchen. The double garage has a convenient entry near the kitchen.

Bedrooms fill the right wing of the home and sport large closets. To indulge parents, the master bedroom provides two walk-in closets, a dressing area, full bath, and sliding glass doors to its own patio. Another full bath plus three hall closets are shown.

For additional storage, the plan calls for a basement.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

We are so enamored of power saws these days that it is difficult to imagine a time when workers had to supply their own power to cut wood, metal and other materials. Yet any of us who is into do-it-yourselfing knows there are many occasions when nothing will do the job quite as well as a saw held in the hand and not connected to an electric outlet.

The saw we are most likely to use when cutting wood is the crosscut. It is for the most common wood-cutting chore — cutting across the wood fibers or, as it is better known, cutting across the grain. Crosscut saws are sometimes used for ripping, which is cutting parallel to or with the grain, but if you do a lot of ripping, a rip saw is better.

For average work, a crosscut saw with seven or eight teeth per inch is best. Such a saw is known as a 7-point or 8-point saw. When you are doing a job which requires that the cuts be exceptionally smooth, you should use a 10- or 12-point saw.

Why not use a 10- or 12-point saw all the time and thus be certain the cuts are very smooth? Because the more teeth per inch, the slower the performance of the saw. Actually, the so-called rough cuts made by a 7- or 8-point saw are not that rough; it's just that those made by a saw with more teeth per inch are smoother. More important than this factor are the quality of the saw and the manner in which you use it.

After you have measured everything twice (a carpenter's admonition to his helper) and have made a line on the wood where the cut is to be made, be sure to saw on the waste side of the line, not on the line itself. The wood should be well supported, using clamps or a vise, along the sawhorses or something similar. The angle between the wood and the saw blade should be about 45 degrees (60 when using a rip saw).

To start a cut, draw the saw toward you a few times, extending your forefinger along the side of the handle for better control. Once the cut has been started, you can move the saw forward and backward, firmly but without excessive pressure. When using a ripsaw, apply the pressure only on the forward strokes.

Plywood is manufactured by gluing together pieces of real wood, but when this is done, the grains run in different directions. This is deliberate, since it has been determined that this will strengthen the overall sheets. Obviously, you cannot use a crosscut saw for cutting across the grain and a rip saw for cutting with it. The best way to cut plywood is with a cross cut, which handles rip sawing better than a rip saw handles crosscutting. A fine-toothed crosscut saw should be used.

A sharp tool is safer than a dull one. After you have used a saw for a considerable period of time and it doesn't seem to be cutting as well as it did, the chances are it needs to be sharpened and, in some cases, reset.

'Huggability' Counts In Selecting Pillows

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeaturs

Just when you may have thought your home furnishings wardrobe complete, along comes somebody with a new plan.

The Du Pont Co., a fiber producer, wants to convince Americans that they should trade their old pillows in not once every six years as statistics indicate is now the case, but once every three years.

"The average consumer is actually willing to buy a new pillow every two years. But she is so afraid of making a mistake that she waits at least two more years before committing herself. And then she buys the new pillow on sale," says Ed Dannenbaum, a marketing representative for the company.

Other things company executives found out as a result of a series of interviews and studies of consumer buying behavior are that "scrunchability" and "huggability" are the two most important factors in immediate positive buying decisions.

Watch enough people in a pillow department and you'll find that most of them squeeze the pillows in order to decide which one to take home, says Dannenbaum.

Almost as common as the habit of putting off new pillow purchases is the American penchant for recycling old pillows. People don't throw away their pillows, even though they go flat and lose their air cells by compression through use. "Instead, they give the old pillow to the kids, or put it in the guestroom," he adds.

If you refuse to accept the blame for the pillow industry's problems, you won't get any arguments from Du Pont.

"I blame the manufacturers and the retailers because they don't tell the consumer why she should buy a pillow and they don't explain the features of better pillows," says Dannenbaum. Unless the companies provide the necessary information, the American consumer will continue to buy every six years the cheapest pillow that has "scrunchability" that she can find.

After identifying the problem, it was natural that Du Pont should also come up with what it hopes is a solution to the pillow problem. The firm has just introduced a new synthetic "Quallofil" pillow construction which it says duplicates expensive down (excellent "scrunchability") at a moderate price.

The firm has engaged medical writer Dianne Hales to represent the new product in personal appearances around the country. Ms. Hales, author of "The Complete Book of Sleep," said recently that sleep is a central aspect of health. The way a person sleeps reveals his or her gender, age and physical and mental health, she added.

ARC Plans Observance For Mentally Retarded

The Association for Retarded Citizens-Pitt County is inviting local churches to cooperate in an awareness project designed to acquaint their congregations and the general public with the presence of the mentally retarded person in their communities.

The participating churches will observe Mental Retardation Sabbath-Sunday next weekend and make themselves aware of ways to meet the needs of retarded children and adults and their families in their congregations and communities.

According to ARC-Pitt President Sandi Hall, there are approximately 3,000 retarded citizens in Pitt County, with an additional 9,000 family members. This weekend is set aside to remember these citizens.

Martha Brockwell, the ARC parent-planner with the educational advocacy program who originated the Sabbath-Sunday observance, said, "Both the Jewish and Christian faiths affirm that, as God accepts and loves us with our faults and handicaps, so we are to love and accept one another. Our religious teachings tell us to remember, understand, respect and love those persons who may have special needs. Because someone may be less able does not mean they are less worthy. For centuries the retarded have been shunned and hidden away. Now we are realizing that these people can learn and grow and be contributing members of society, yes, even pay taxes like the rest of us."

Ms. Brockwell urged the public to join in the observance. For more information, call 756-3084.

The Greenville Utilities Commission will hold the above public hearing on March 23, 1982 at 7:30 P.M. in the Board Room (Third Floor) of the Greenville Utilities Building in Greenville, North Carolina.

The general Pretreatment Regulation (40 CFR, Part 403) was promulgated by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency in the June 26, 1978 Federal Register and became effective on August 25, 1978. This regulation, mandated by the Clean Water Act of 1977 (Public Law 95-217), governs the control of wastewaters discharged by all nonresidential users into Publicly Owned Treatment Works (POTW's). The objectives of the Pretreatment Regulation are to: (1) prevent introduction of pollutants into POTW's which interfere with plant operations and/or disposal or use of municipal sludges; (2) prevent introduction of pollutants into POTW's which will pass through treatment works into receiving waters or the atmosphere or otherwise be incompatible with POTW; and (3) improve opportunitites to recycle and reclaim wastewaters and the sludges resulting from wastewater treatment.

The Greenville Utilities Commission has been required to develop a Pretreatment Program. Copies of the draft Program Report together with a fact sheet are available for public review at the City Clerk's office, City Hall; at Sheppard Memorial Library; and at the office of the Superintendent of Water and Sewer, Greenville Utilities Building, Greenville North Carolina.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: F equals L

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. The Public's Favorites Are Chosen

What could be more democratic than an award show whose nominees and winners are chosen by the public? CBS presents just that when "The Eighth Annual People's Choice Awards" airs on Thursday, Mar. 18 (9-11 p.m.).

The nominees have been narrowed down to the top three vote-getters in 21 categories in the fields of television, motion pictures and music, and the winners will be chosen at this gala event.

The awards, statuettes approximately 10 inches high, symbolize audience approval with a pair of applauding hands engraved in crystal. Olle Alberious, whose work is displayed throughout Europe, designed and then executed each award at the famed Swedish crystal manufactory, Orrefors.

Making each sculpture is a delicate and time consuming process. First, molten crystal, at 2,600 degrees F., is poured into a mold, and then left to cool. That takes from three to five days. Once cooled, the crystal is hand-ground to shape, dipped in an acid bath, and finally engraved with copper wheels. Each award is numbered and signed, and is valued at about $2,500.

With such an artistically designed award, recipients no doubt will treasure the statue as much as the title that goes with it.

Among the finalists are:

Favorite Female Television Performer — Barbara Mandrell, Stefanie Powers and Loretta Swit.

Favorite Television Special — "A Special Anne Murray Christmas," "Bill" and "Bob Hope."

Favorite Male Musical Performer — Neil Diamond, Barry Manilow and Kenny Rogers.

The program will be broadcast live from the Civic Auditorium in Santa Monica, Calif.

THE Rook Look AT GARMENT CARE

DICKIE ROOK

Fragrances:

Be careful with your favorite perfume. You can spend not only your initial cost but also extra clothing dollars. A CLEANER WORLD GARMENT CARE CENTER offers the following suggestions.

The alcohol content of many perfumes and colognes will affect the dyes and cause permanent damage. The result could be stains, rings, color loss and odors. Women's fragrances are not the only offenders; men's aftershaves and colognes are also capable of these types of damages.

Another cause of damage is the pretty little sachets that many people put in their drawers for sweet smelling clothes. If these sachets, potpourris, or fragrant crystals come in direct contact with your clothing permanent damage can result.

Be sure to read and follow the directions carefully and accurately before using these products. You may be very glad you did.

Michele Will Tell

TO REGINA CUNNINGHAM IN FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

Here's the information you requested! David Ogden Stiers was born October 31, 1942, in Peoria, Illinois. His family moved to Eugene, Oregon, when he was 15. Following his high school graduation, David appeared in several stage productions at the California Shakespeare Festival in Santa Clara. Next came a two-year stint in the drama division of the Julliard School in New York, where part of his studies included voice training, both speaking and singing. He is a dramatic baritone.

The 6'3", 200-pound Stiers is single and lives in Los Angeles. He enjoys an extensive classical music record collection and has been a guest conductor with symphony orchestras in Portland and San Diego.

Q: Would you please tell me who the original "My Three Sons" were? J.L. NELSON, ROANOKE RAPIDS, N.C.

A: The original "My Three Sons" starred Tim Considine as Mike Douglas from 1960-1965, Don Grady as Robbie Douglas and Stanley Livingston as Chip Douglas.

Q: Please solve a family argument. I say Lynda Day George used to be on "Mission: Impossible" with Peter Graves. My husband says she was never on "Mission: Impossible." Who's right? NANCY BENTLEY, HICKORY, N.C.

A: Your husband is wrong! Lynda appeared in the role of Casey on the international intrigue hit series, "Mission: Impossible," from 1971-1973.

Q: My husband and I have an argument concerning the girl who starred in the movie "The Warriors." I say it was Deborah Van Valkenburgh of "Too Close For Comfort," and he says it was Julie Carmen, who recently played on "Cassie & Co." Can you settle this for us? J.M., GOLDSBORO, N.C.

Another Cop Show On The Streets

The city of New York plays a central character in "Baker's Dozen," a comedy series that reveals the humorous exploits, adventures and romantic entanglements of a team of undercover cops. The show debuts Wednesday, Mar. 17 (9:30-10 p.m.) on CBS.

The eager, young anti-crime unit, under the iron-fisted direction of a policewoman, Captain Florence Baker (Doris Belack), combats the craziness of social life in a big city today with unorthodox strategies, unconventional disguises and, most of all, humor.

Ron Silver and Cindy Weintraub star as Mike Locasale and Terry Munson, two members of the special unit who are romantically involved and often find problems mixing work with love. Alan Weeks and Sam McMurray star as O.K. Otis Kelly and Harve Schoendorf, respectively, who help out Mike and Terry, and resort to some unconventional disguises and a sense of humor to confront the continuous cast of street characters in New York City life.

Also featured are John Del Regno as Jeff Diggins, a former pickpocket who picks up information on the streets for the officers, and Thomas Quinn as Martin, a veteran officer who mans the desk at the station and dispenses philosophical briefs to those who care to listen.

Concerned about the dangers, and Terry's "being a woman," Mike is against her involvement as a decoy, but Terry protests, and, under orders from Captain Baker, she and Harve head for the nightspot posing as swingers.

Much of the show's realism can be traced to one of the executive producers, Sonny Grosso, who once worked as a cop in Harlem. Four years later, he was promoted to the Narcotics Bureau, where, with partner Eddie Egan, he broke the famous French Connection case.

In Search Of Joyce

By a curious coincidence Daniel J. Travanti, who plays Captain Furillo on "Hill Street Blues," was the first actor to read for the part. On the other hand, Veronica Hamel, who plays the female lead of Joyce Davenport, was the last actress interviewed for her role.

"We were getting close to our first day of shooting and we did not have the part cast yet," said Steven Bocho, executive producer. "When I saw Veronica coming down the hall that afternoon, I said to myself, 'God, she looks the part — please let her be good.'

"We grabbed Jim Sikking, who had already been cast as Lieutenant Hunter and was wandering around the building, to read with her — and we knew right away we had our Joyce Davenport."

Not So Minor

Former NBA center Bill Walton has been plagued by a foot problem. As he was about to undergo yet another foot operation, he remarked, "I learned a long time ago that minor surgery is when they do the operation on someone else, not you."

What Drives This Car?

A mysterious black automobile careens wildly through a small Utah town and terrorizes its inhabitants, in "The Car," to be rebroadcast as the NBC Movie of the Week on Friday, Mar. 19 (9-11 p.m.). James Brolin and Ronny Cox topline the cast of the suspense drama, which was originally released theatrically in 1977.

Brolin portrays Wade Parent, the sheriff of a small, rural town who is perplexed by a series of tragic highway accidents — all with a common element. In each case, the victims were involved with an aggressively driven black car, which seemingly drove straight at its targets, then sped away from the scene.

Within a short time span, two bicyclists, a hitch-hiker, a schoolteacher, a sheriff and several policemen become victims. As he gathers information from eyewitnesses, Parent steps up his attempts to confront the homicidal vehicle.

He soon has a head-on confrontation with the car and is amazed to learn that he cannot identify the culprit, since all the widows of the vehicle are blacked out. After barely surviving the confrontation with the auto, he watches helplessly as it leaves the scene again.

Now more determined than ever to stop the mayhem that has taken several lives, Parent devises a plan to wreck the car once and for all. Not until this is done will he learn who — or what — has been driving it on a perpetual path of destruction.

"The Car," which was directed by Elliot Silverstein, also stars Kathleen Lloyd as Lauren, John Marley as Everett, R.G. Armstrong as Amos and John Rubinstein as John Morris.

The screenplay was written by Dennis Shryack, Michael Butler and Lane Slate.

JAMES BROLIN STARS as a wary sheriff in a small Utah town who surveys a traffic-accident location following a hit-and-run collision between a motorcyclist and a mysterious black automobile, in "The Car," airing Friday, Mar. 19 (9-11 p.m.), on NBC-TV.

'Phoenix' Resurfaces

"The Phoenix," a fantasy/adventure about a super being from another time, cast adrift in the world of the 1980s, will be rebroadcast on Friday, Mar. 19 (8:30-10 p.m.) on ABC.

In the film, Judson Scott stars as the extraordinarily powerful and god-like Bennu, who is discovered by chance in an ancient sarcophagus in the Andean plain. Brought to life by scientific means, he must learn to cope with humanity today as he tries to bring hope to a world that has lost its innocence.

Once in the United States and awakened to a world unknown to him, Bennu is exposed to the civilization of today. Needing special life-sustaining materials in order to survive in a pollutant-filled society, Bennu mees a beautiful woman (Shelley Smith) who aids him in his quest for a new life.

Bennu's life on earth is dramatically changed when he uses his incredible powers to help a young boy, who cannot hear or talk, and his motives are misunderstood. He experiences man's inhumanity to man and must decide if this world is his destiny.

Bennu is befriended by two men who were witness to his wondrous discovery. Dr. Ward Frazier (E.G. Marshall) tries to help Bennu adjust to his new environment while lending him encouragement to cope with things as they are. Another, Diego De Varga (Fernando Allende), an insistent South American official, believes that Bennu is the good deity and demands that he return to the people and country where he was found.

"The Phoenix" also stars Daryl Anderson as Dr. Cliff Davis, Hersha Parady as Lynn and Jimmy Mair as Tim.

Beavers Try To Continue Streak

The Oregon State Beavers won the regular season Pac-10 title for the third year in a row, and they are expected to be strong competitors in this year's NCAA tournament. The semi-final game of the West — the region of which Oregon is a part — will be broadcast on Thursday, Mar. 18 (11:30 p.m.) on CBS.

The Beavers lost five of their top eight people after last season, and despite this being a year of rebuilding, they have performed well. As coach Ralph Miller said at the beginning of the season, "A great deal of our success will stem from the returnees (Charlie Sitton, Lester Conner and Rob Holbrook) being able to take the younger players in hand and get them started on the right foot."

The 6'4" Conner, from Oakland, Cal., has been called by former Bruin coach Larry Brown "Oregon's best all-around player...he does the little things it takes to win — making the great pass, getting the rebound, stealing the ball." This summation came after Conner contributed 17 points, 10 assists and seven steals to a 82-76 Pauley Pavilion quashing of UCLA.

Conner is the team's leading scorer with nearly 15 points per game, while hitting over 52 percent of his shots. This senior, the oldest of the Beavers, can put it all together to sizzle on the court — as he did against California (scoring an individual high 23 points), against Stanford (making a team high 10 assists), against Portland (grabbing an Oregon record 7 steals), and against Pennsylvania (going 8 for 8 from the free-throw line).

Pike's Peek

HOLLYWOOD — During the filming of BOB HOPE'S recent special, "Women I Love — Beautiful But Funny," the question arose as to whom made the most appearances with him — many guessed LUCILLE BALL — but she was second, with ZSA ZSA GABOR in third place. PHYLLIS DILLER, a personal favorite of BOB'S, is the all-time champ. PHYLLIS has made twenty appearances on BOB'S shows because he says, "she always makes me laugh."

MICHELE LEE of "Knots Landing" was shocked but pleased at the number of condolence cards she received from viewers when her TV-husband, DON MURRAY, was killed on the series.

Beginning Monday, March 29, "Search for Tomorrow" will be found on the local NBC channel in your area at 12:30 p.m. "Search" holds the title for being the longest-running daytime drama in the history of national T.V., having premiered in September of 1951.

SHIRLEY TEMPLE, recuperating from gall bladder surgery, was cheered to hear that Ideal Toys presented six SHIRLEY TEMPLE "Collector Series" dolls at the new toy fair to retail between $20-25. Her dolls have been on the market since 1934.

The "Night of 100 Stars," recently telecast on ABC, was a huge success in every aspect — however, JAMES CAGNEY, after waiting in a wheelchair for 5 and one-half hours, missed the grande finale picture call for all 265 participants. "There will never be another famous gathering like it in one frame," he almost wept in disappointment. In consideration of his being confined to a wheelchair, CAGNEY had been assigned to a room below the huge stage to make his entrance easier — (all others were in the Green Room and dressing rooms around the stage). Unfortunately, when the curtain call came for the photo — a (now unemployed) attendant forgot all about him and just left him sitting there!

WE START FRESH AT Chick-fil-A℠

Bright and early, we start preparing the market-fresh food and ingredients we serve. Our boneless breast of chicken is given an egg and milk dip. Only then is it ready to be sprinkled with our special combination of light seasonings and become the original boneless breast of chicken—Chick-fil-A.

We cut and squeeze fresh Sunkist® lemons to make our old-time lemonade and distinctive made-from-scratch lemon pies. Our cole slaw, carrot and raisin, and potato salads are all made fresh, too. Even our IceDream™ is made with genuine dairy products. You may wonder why we go through all this. But just one taste of Chick-fil-A will tell you it's...

BECAUSE EVERYTHING WE MAKE TASTES BETTER THAT WAY!

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022.
We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR SENATOR WILLIAM PROXMIRE (R.-Wisc.)

What bores you? How do you overcome boredom at political gatherings? —T.G., Utica, N.Y.

● A long speech read on the floor of the Senate by a senator who obviously has not read the speech before and so is full of guarded generalizations, puts a glaze, like a Sung vase, on my eyeballs. This is especially true when I'm on the floor, waiting to deliver a long speech full of guarded generalizations myself. I control my boredom by thinking about what a great speech I am going to deliver. After a long and embarrassing silence I might say something like: "You have just heard a full and comprehensive list of all the useful and significant accomplishments of the other party."

FOR SYLVIA MILES, star of Evil Under the Sun

You said you'll always remember this film, in which you turned "respectable," playing James Mason's wife. Is there anything else you'll always remember? —A.M., Minot, N.D.

● The fact that I'm the only American in the cast. In addition to Mason, there's Peter Ustinov, Roddy McDowall, Diana Rigg and Maggie Smith. I'll also remember that I was always treated with kid gloves.

FOR DR. ROBERT KOTLER, cosmetic and corrective surgeon

Please explain the terms "maxi-life" and "halfway house." —G.E., Spartanburg, S.C.

● Maxi-life is the one-time face-lift that — with proper care — will last indefinitely. A halfway house is a recuperative facility where patients may go after surgery, away from the prying eyes of family and friends until bandages are removed.

FOR RHONDA SHEAR, TV actress

Bob Hope says you're an "11." What ingredient do you have that Bo Derek doesn't have? —P.A., Huron, S.D.

● It could be that Bob Hope needs a better pair of glasses. Perhaps I'm actually a "1" and he has double vision, which makes me look like an "11." Truthfully, I admire Bo Derek and if she rates a "10," I'd be happy to be known as a "9." Although flattered by Mr. Hope's compliment, I'm also a bit disbelieving.

Guinness: Going "sir" crazy.

FROM THE "ASK" EDITOR

FAME: Sir Alec Guinness, now busy on the followup to the Tinker, Tailor, Soldier Spy series, was spotted by a bunch of kids. "There's that geezer from Star Wars," one yelled. Replied the distinguished actor: "Sir Geezer, if you please." . . . After the world premiere of The Seduction, a huge party was held at the Tropicana in Atlantic City where Colleen Camp, one of the stars, was constantly greeted by strangers. Colleen, also on screen in They All Laughed, beamed: "I bet you recognized me because I'm wearing what I wore on The Johnny Carson Show . . . . Believe it or not, Roger Rees, the toast of Broadway in Nicholas Nickleby, returned to London — and idleness. As of this moment, he doesn't have a job and, to be on the safe side, applied for unemployment. GAME: Fame and fortune have left no mark on Prof. Erno Rubik, father of the frustrating cube. He lacks millionaire tastes to match his wealth. His favorite eatery is any fast-food place; favorite meal, hamburgers and milk. . . . And speaking of that wretched toy, Chris Curran, star of Jury's Cabaret of Dublin, a traveling theater troupe, says: "Irish scientists researched Rubik's cube and found there are 130 different ways — to throw it out the window." . . . When the Susan B. Anthony $1 coin was issued, several Las Vegas casino owners got slots to accept them. Then, to their horror — claims gaming magazine Chips — they discovered a foreign coin, worth 6 cents, exactly the same size. End of Susan B. Anthony slots. NAME: Offscreen, Aloysius, stuffed companion to Anthony Andrews in the Brideshead Revisited TV series, responds to the name of Delicatessen. That's because he was discovered by actor Peter Bull in a Maine grocery store. Peter's protégé is not just any old teddy bear. He's 75 years old, had to audition for the plum role along with many other furry hopefuls and is insured for $20,000. Ann-Margret heads his list of guardians. His best bow tie comes from a top men's store. At functions, he has his own chair next to Mrs. Anthony Andrews . . . . A bit of President Reagan's past, so far overlooked, concerns his high-school days in Tampico, Ill. He was a lifeguard, known as "Dutch," and in two summers saved many people from drowning.

PRO AND CON

Should the U.S. Department of Education Be Abolished?

Send questions of national significance, on a postcard, to "Pro & Con," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $10 for those published.

PRO Anne Graham, assistant secretary for legislation and public affairs, Department of Education

Abolition is often cast as a budget measure to save money at the expense of schools. It isn't. The President's federalism proposal shifts funds and responsibility to states and curtails Federal regulations and intervention. Education studies show effective schools have community involvement. When Washington's regulations dictate how schools must be run, this involvement diminishes. That, as parents know, harms education. President Reagan's innovative proposal guarantees a new beginning for quality education.

CON Allan S. Cohen, Ed.D., chairman, Department of Education Coalition

No. It's part of the Reagan Administration's plan to eliminate Federal education funding. The Department of Education was created in 1980 to strengthen the Federal commitment to quality education. When communities are already pressed and property taxes are high, Federal funds to finance education should not be cut. Students should not be denied access to Federal grants and loans for college. The Department of Education deserves a chance so graduates can meet our nation's economic and international challenges.

COVER STORY

The Leprechaun Charm of Mickey Rooney

With a Broadway smash, a new TV sitcom and, begorra, another lassie, America's ageless munchkin is back in the clover.

With eighth wife Jan Chamberlain. Taking Mickey and his ponies in stride.

Nancy Moran / Sygma

By Mark Goodman

After six decades in show business: as a vaudeville toddler in a doll-sized tux, a child movie star and Hollywood's No. 1 box-office draw — as well as one of the town's most notorious drinkers, gamblers and, of course, grooms — the former Joe Yule Jr., alias Mickey Rooney, has slowed down to mere dervish level.

When a visitor knocks at his dressing-room door these days at Broadway's Mark Hellinger Theater, it flies open, and a grinning leprechaun with fringes of white hair cries out in a raspy voice, "Hey! Glad to see ya!" Yet, within this 61-year-old grandfather one can still see Judge Hardy's irrepressible son Andy, clapping his hands and proclaiming to a wide-eyed Judy Garland, "Say! Why can't we put together our own show? Why, we can use Pop's old barn!"

Rooney is not, to be sure, performing in the good judge's clapboard keep these days. Instead, he is knocking Broadway cold in the randy, roustabout valentine to the bad old days of burlesque, Sugar Babies.

Night after night, Rooney struts and yowls his stuff upon the stage, in drag and sailor suit, boffing it up broadly in a way that would make his burlesque-trouper father weep with pride. Starring alongside that lovely, ageless toe-tapper Ann Miller, Rooney's frantic energy envelops the whole theater. Supposedly sophisticated theatergoers crack like summer twigs when Annie plays the schoolmarm — complete with rolled-up newspaper — to Rooney's dunce pupil:

Annie: Why do hummingbirds hum?

Mickey: They forgot the words. (Whack, whack.)

And when the two veterans team up to sing "When You and I Were Young, Maggie," well, there's scarcely a dry eye in the house.

"A lot of people have forgotten how to laugh," Rooney says backstage. "Sugar Babies gives them something familiar: bacon, lettuce and tomato, with a lot of mayonnaise." And, yes, it takes him way, way back to his youth. "The jokes are like old friends," he says. "My father was a burlesque comic, and now I am, too. It's a complete circle. I am my father's son. I am my father.

"Seldom does a person get a second chance in life," he adds. "Up until Sugar Babies, Mickey Rooney was a famous has-been. Today, he's become a famous now-person."

Yes, he certainly has, and the way Sugar Babies is still packing the house after two and a half years, he will be there for quite a long time. But his is much more than the one-shot return to the limelight that it once seemed. He scored another hit in the beautiful film The Black Stallion and recently won a Golden Globe award for his portrayal of a retarded man in the TV movie Bill.

Amazingly enough, he has also sandwiched in a new TV series, NBC's One of the Boys, a genial piece of generation-gap juvenalia. The comedy stars Mickey as a retiree living with his grandson on a college campus. The venerable Scatman Crothers is onhand to add to the yuks.

"Yeah, we complement each other, me and the Scat," Rooney says. "Aren't those kids great! Hey, didja see the ratings? [Impressive.] And wait'll you see the other shows! I'm more happy for the other people than for myself."

But he is pleased enough with his own lot. "Can you imagine anything sweeter in life than to be in a hit on Broadway and on television?" Moreover, investment projects are panning out nicely, too, gainsaying the popular notion of his financial ruin.

And though seven shattered marriages have brought him 10 kids and over $1 million in alimony payments to date, he's now enjoying an eighth and relatively stable marriage to country singer Jan Chamberlain. Chamberlain, a savvy woman in her early 40's with two sons of her own, seems adept at taking Mickey in stride. Take her attitude on Mickey's abiding vice, the ponies (he neither smokes nor drinks now and is active in the Church of Religious Science): "I used to fall asleep in the ladies room at the track. I'd pretend to love it. Now I stay home and putter or lie in the sun."

One cannot imagine Mickey Rooney ever puttering or relaxing in the sunlight; only footlight and klieg light and spotlight will do. If anyone was born into show biz it was little Joe Yule Jr., son of Joe Sr. and Kansas City vaudevillian Nell Brown. Technically, Mickey was born in Brooklyn, but his childhood home was whatever stage his parents were booked on.

And though Mickey Rooney may be the eternal Irish stable boy, Joe Yule Jr. is actually a Scot. When told that he was to be the cover for this St. Patrick's issue, Rooney cried, "Ah, St. Paddy's Day! The wearin' of the corned beef and cabbage!" Just so, Mickey Rooney has danced the Irish jig as our favorite leprechaun for half a century. That is what the bright business of illusion is all about.

Early on, it was easy to see why

The Master Blend® Difference:

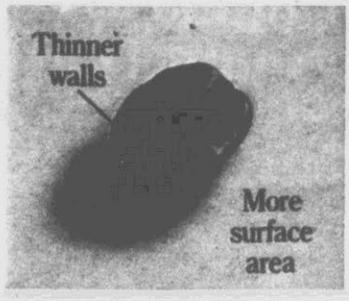
1. We make it differently.

Maxwell House® Master Blend® found a way to unlock flavor ordinary coffees leave behind. A special and expensive blend of beans is quick-roasted—hotter and faster—to puff up and have more surface area, thinner walls. That way, as the coffee brews, it's easier for hot water to get out the rich flavor.



2. To unlock more flavor.

Ordinary ground coffees leave good flavor behind during brewing. Master Blend unlocks more of this flavor and gets more of it out of each and every bean.

3. But you measure it the same way.

Make Master Blend the same way as ordinary coffee. Use the same number of scoops; get the same number of cups.

4. Why 13 ounces?

That's all it takes for a pound's worth of flavor.

5. How do you save money?

Since more flavor is unlocked, we can use fewer beans. Fewer beans cost less...and we pass those savings on to you.

NBC

On One of the Boys Rooney and Crothers find looking for work is no play.

Mickey would become the most versatile entertainer of his time. At age 2 he broke up a duet by toddling out from the wings and piping "Pal of My Cradle Days." Mom and Pop quickly dressed him in a midget tuxedo and brought him into the act. But age took its toll and at 4 Mickey became, not for the last time, a has-been.

When the Yules separated, Mom packed the youngster in a car and headed for Hollywood. There he got his break playing the tough-talking tot, Mickey McGuire, in a series of 37 two-reelers. When a cartoonist of the same name insisted that Mickey drop the McGuire, Mom suggested Looney, but Mickey wisely amended it to Rooney. The next break came in 1937 when he was chosen to play Andy Hardy. The success of this latter-day Tom Sawyer figure was astonishing. Judge Hardy's rambunctious cutup of a son would eventually cavort through 15 movies, and in 1939 and '40 top the likes of Clark Gable and Spencer Tracy as Hollywood's premier box-office draw.

The travesties committed upon child stars of those days are now the stuff of legend. Suffice to say Rooney burned a fistful of candles at both ends — working and playing equally hard. "Telling a girl you love her is like telling your three best jokes up front," he likes to say, and history makes it clear he could never resist doing either. He first married a breathtaking starlet named Ava Gardner, then an impressive succession of actresses and models. Rooney the comic also cannot resist joking about the most poignant and often tragic moments of his life: "Getting married is like batting in baseball games," he has said. "When the right one comes along, don't let it go by." Trouble is, when baseball players strike out, they don't get hauled into divorce court. "I have so many wives and children," he once told a judge, "that I don't know which house to go to first on Christmas."

But the judges were less than sympathetic, and the alimony and child-support bills continued to mount as his career plummeted. Still, Rooney hung in there. There were small but meaty movie roles (Requiem for a Heavyweight) and TV parts. Later there were Disney movies to do but nothing he could really get his teeth into. He was at a low ebb when he met Jan, who showed up at a Los Angeles party in 1974 on the arm of son Mickey Rooney Jr. She and Mickey Sr. eventually took up lodging together, and when he finally married for the eighth time, he was so nervous he sped off to the church with his cronies and left his bride at home.

But they have survived nicely and are relishing Mickey's born-again career. Says he, "God gave Rooney five aces to be the No. 1 entertainer in the world. At least I've learned to handle that now."

Then, as the crowd fills the theater, he pipes: "Listen to that, will ya! When that curtain goes up, every night is opening night for me!" He's so wound up, you expect him to dance about and click his heels — little Andy Hardy, putting together another show in the judge's ancient barn. FW

NEW LOW PRICE

Amazoy withstands active kids and cookouts. Gives you time to relax since it needs little water and cuts mowing two-thirds.

GRASS SEED WILL NEVER GROW A LAWN LIKE THIS—DROUGHT & WEAR RESISTANT!

FREE! UP TO 600 AMAZOY PLUGS DURING SPECIAL INTRODUCTORY OFFER

By Jack T. Johnson, Agronomist

Every year I see people pour more and more money into their lawns. They dig, fertilize and lime. They rake it all in. They scatter their seed and roll and water it.

Birds love it! Seeds which aren't washed away by rain give them a feast. But some seed grows, and soon it's time to weed, water and mow, mow ... until summer comes to burn the lawn into hay, or crabgrass and diseases infest it.

That's what happens to ordinary grass, but not to Amazoy Zoysia.

"MOWED IT 2 TIMES," WRITES WOMAN

For example, Mrs. M. R. Mitter writes me how her lawn"...is the envy of all who see it. When everybody's lawns around here are brown from drought ours just stays as green as ever. I've never watered it, only when I put the plugs in...Last summer we had it mowed (2) times. Another thing, we never have to pull any weeds—it's just wonderful!"

LAWN WATERED ONLY ONCE

And from Iowa came word that the state's largest Men's Garden Club picked a Zoysia lawn as the "top lawn —nearly perfect" in its area. Yet this lawn had been watered only once all summer up to August!

CHOKES OUT CRABGRASS

Thick, rich, luxurious, established Amazoy grows into a carpet of grass that chokes out crabgrass and weeds all summer long.

FOR SLOPES, PLAY AREAS, BARE SPOTS

End erosion of slopes with Amazoy. Perfect answer for hard-to-cover spots, play-worn areas.

NO NEED TO RIP OUT PRESENT GRASS—PLUG AMAZOY INTO OLD LAWN, NEW GROUND OR NURSERY AREA

When planted in existing lawn areas plugs will spread to drive out old, unwanted growth including weeds—from part shade to full sun. Goes off its green color after killing frosts. Begins regaining its green color at the time when the temperature in the spring is consistently warm. This, of course, varies with climate. Easy planting instructions with order.

NO SEED, NO SOD!

There's no seed that produces winter-hardy Meyer Zoysia. Sod of ordinary grass brings with it the problems of seed: like weeds, diseases, burning out, other ills. Save time, work, money. Plug in Amazoy.

TWO GROWN MEN CAN'T PULL IT APART

So deep-rooted is Amazoy . . . it grows into practically indestructible turf. Amazoy thrives in porous, sandy soil, "builder's soil"—even salty beach areas! Beauty is but one advantage of Zoysia Grass. It's also so vigorous and rich it thrives in soils where lesser grasses have failed you repeatedly. Start your Amazoy lawn this Spring, and never re-seed your lawn again!

WEAR RESISTANT

When America's largest University tested 13 leading grasses for wear resistance, such as foot scuffling, the Zoysia (matrella and japonica Meyer Z-52) led all others.

Your Amazoy lawn takes such wear as cookouts, lawn parties, lawn furniture, etc. Grows so thick you could play football on it and not get your feet muddy. Even if children play on it, they won't hurt it—or themselves.

PATTENTED STEP-ON PLUGGER IS... FREE WITH ORDERS OF 300 PLUGS OR MORE

Amazoy exclusive! No one else can offer you this patented 2-way plugger. Saves bending, time, work. Light, rugged, invaluable for transplanting. Cuts away competing growth as it digs plug holes.

CUTS YOUR WORK, SAVES YOU MONEY

Your deep-rooted, established Amazoy lawn saves you time and money in many ways. It never needs replacement...ends re-seeding forever. Fertilizing and watering (water costs money, too) are rarely if ever needed. It ends the need for crabgrass killers permanently. It cuts pushing a noisy mower in the blistering sun by ⅓.

YOUR OWN SUPPLY OF PLUG TRANSPLANTS

Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass was perfected by U.S. Govt., released in cooperation with U.S. Golf Assoc. as a superior grass.

PEOPLE QUIZ

Fear of Felony: Who Feels It the Most?

By John E. Gibson

makes him tick found that mugging is a primitive form of criminal activity practiced by those who are either too young or too inept to execute crimes requiring greater skill and knowledge. The main tactics employed by the mugger in his encounters are surprising and terrorizing his victims.

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Though men are more often the victims of crime, women have a greater fear of crime.
2. The personalities of murderers and drug offenders may have a great deal in common.
3. Despite elderly people's special fear of crime, they may actually be safer than younger men and women.
4. Many criminals exhibit a callous disregard for the pain and suffering they cause by their violent crimes.
5. Mugging is a crime perpetrated by the inept.

ANSWERS

1. True. A University of Chicago survey of crime's effects on both men and women showed that "Although crime and the fear of crime affect both the men and the women who live in cities, women . . . express significantly higher levels of fear than men." The study noted that women are less frequently victimized than men for most crimes but are almost exclusively the victims of rape. It concluded that women's perceived risk of rape and feelings of vulnerability contribute importantly to their greater fear of all aspects of crime.
2. True. In studies of criminal behavior conducted by a team of Johns Hopkins University investigators, murderers and drug offenders were given standard personality tests. Both groups made scores characterizing them as "individuals who are irresponsible, deceitful, shallow, temperamental and pleasure seeking." But drug offenders did differ from murderers in that they were more passive and less concerned with social approval than the murderers. They were also more impulsive, changeable and distractable.
3. True. A University of Houston study of patterns of crime against the elderly found that the elderly are less likely than others to be victimized in general and no more likely than other age groups to be victimized by gangs. The study also showed that assailants of elderly people are less likely to be armed than are assailants of younger victims.
4. True. In his monograph Explaining Crime, sociologist Gwynn Nettler reported that both male and female criminals are less responsive to pain than others. And it is believed that this greater immunity to pain explains, in part, their inability to sympathize with the pain they inflict on others.
5. True. A City University of New York study of the mugger and what

In the dining room of the John J. Glessner house are foods that Mrs. Frances Macbeth Glessner might have served at the turn of the century. Reminiscent of earlier times — a collection of recipes featuring the golden grains of the Middle West.

By Marilyn Hansen

The imposing granite home on South Prairie Avenue in Chicago gives little hint of the warmth and culture once found within. The home of John J. Glessner, a manufacturer of agricultural equipment, and his wife, Frances, was the scene of social gatherings at the turn of the century. The couple entertained members of the Chicago Symphony, a group of more than 100 musicians, at festive suppers.

Mrs. Glessner kept a daily household journal and regularly held a women's reading group in her library. Among her books are many cook- (continued on page 12) books, including: Good Things from a Chafing Dish, Breakfasts, Luncheons and Ball Suppers, Practical Cooking and Dinner Giving, Miss Parloa's New Cookbook and Liberal Living Upon Narrow Means. We include a chafing-dish recipe typical of the kind popular during that era.

The house has been restored and is open to the public.

WALNUT OAT BATTER BREAD

- 1½ cups boiling water
- ½ cup butter or margarine
- ½ cup sugar
- 1 tablespoon salt
- 2 packages active dry yeast
- 1 cup warm water (110°F to 115°F)
- 2 cups quick- or old-fashioned oats, uncooked
- 2 eggs
- 1½ cups whole-wheat flour
- 1 cup chopped walnuts
- 4½ to 5½ cups unsifted all-purpose flour

1. In large bowl, combine boiling water, butter, sugar and salt, stirring until butter is melted; cool to lukewarm.
2. Dissolve yeast in warm water. Stir dissolved yeast, oats and eggs into lukewarm water mixture. Add whole-wheat flour; beat until smooth.
3. Stir in nuts and enough all-purpose flour to make a stiff batter. Cover; let rise in warm place about 1½ hours or until double in size.
4. Grease two 9×5×3-inch loaf pans. Stir down batter. Drop batter by spoonsful, mounding in center, into prepared pans. Let rise, uncovered, in warm place about 45 minutes or until nearly double in size.
5. Heat oven to 375°F. Bake 45 to 55 minutes or until golden brown. Remove from pans. Cool on wire rack at least 1 hour before slicing.

Makes two 9×5-inch loaves

BEEF BARLEY VEGETABLE SOUP

- 1½ lbs. beef-stew meat, cut in ½-inch cubes
- 2 tablespoons all-purpose flour

- 1 teaspoon basil leaves, crushed
- Dash ground black pepper
- 1 package (10 ozs.) frozen, cut or Italian-cut green beans
- 2 cups carrot slices

- 1 cup coarsely chopped onions

1. In large bowl, dredge meat in flour. In 6-qt. Dutch oven, brown meat and garlic in oil. Drain fat if necessary.
2. Add water, tomatoes, barley, Worcestershire sauce, salt, basil and pepper. Bring to boiling, cover, reduce heat and simmer 1 hour. Add remaining ingredients. Bring to boiling, cover, reduce heat and simmer 20 to 25 minutes or until meat and vegetables are tender.

Makes about 4 quarts

*Note: Substitute ¾ cup quick barley for regular barley, if desired. Add quick barley to soup with vegetables. Proceed as recipe directs.

ACORN SQUASH BAKE

- 2 acorn squash (about 1½ lbs. each)
- Salt
- ¾ cup maple-flavored table syrup
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine, melted

Observations

NEED for Spring. Getting that warm feeling? Maybe it's because Spring arrives next Saturday, March 20, at exactly 10:56 p.m. But mark Friday, March 19, as the day to really spring into action. That's when young people's thoughts will turn to... energy. The event? National Energy Education Day, NEED for short. It's a nationwide grass-roots effort backed by Congress, supported by the President, state legislators, educators and businesses. But the real stars are the hundreds of thousands of elementary and high school students from more than 10,000 schools in 50 states. They've worked for months organizing fairs, teach-ins, special exhibits and much more to educate all Americans on the effective and efficient use of energy.

Mental energy. The agenda abounds in high-energy ideas: How more oil is being found, what's new about nuclear, hot about solar, why natural gas is...a gas. Students are learning by doing. Kids in Marshall, Texas, are learning the economics of energy exploration–by spending millions of play dollars "exploring" for oil on the mock-up of an offshore drilling site. Wallingford, Conn., boasts WATT (Wallingford Auditing Technical Team)–a group of students whose energy audit has saved the schools in the district $250,000 thus far. The secret? Simple ideas like turning down thermostats, turning off lights, and closing doors.

"But if I can't use my night light, how can I see what I'm dreaming?"

Fun and games. National Energy Education Day's fun too. In many states, students will offer Energy Night Live. This take-off on Saturday Night Live features Chevy Chasing, TV newsperson Melba Toast, and a family of "oil drops" who explain how they become the stuff Mobil and other oil companies turn into useful products like gasoline. In many schools, performances will be open to the public.

Live wires. Students in grades 4 to 12 with the hottest energy ideas will be eligible for Youth Awards presented by schools, communities, and states. Grand prize is a free trip to Washington, D.C., where winners will chat with energy experts and attend special receptions in the House and Senate. But everybody's a winner on this energetic day, for NEED hopes to spark community efforts all year round and will "prepare students and parents to meet our world's rapidly changing needs for energy." That's why our friends in NEED are friends indeed.

It's a fact: For information on National Energy Education Day, write to NEED, P.O. Box 2518, Reston, Va. 22090, or call your state's education and energy offices.

RECAPTURING A SIMPLER PLACE AND TIME

THE COUNTRY STORE THIMBLES

Available exclusively from Franklin Porcelain
Please order by March 31, 1982.

There was always a wood-burning stove, a large cracker barrel and a long wooden counter piled high with bolts of calico and flannel . . . It was the Country Store. Perhaps the most American of all establishments—and certainly a symbol of some of the most carefree years America has known.

Now you can recapture the simple pleasures of that time—with a very special collection of twenty-five fine porcelain thimbles, bearing original artwork based on the official trademarks of twenty-five companies whose names were household words here in America around the turn of the century. Here are the two "Campbell's Soup Kids" . . . the Heinz Pickles shield . . . the two little chicks on the Bon Ami box . . . each design based on the actual packages and advertisements that our grandparents recognized in the Country Store.

An American collecting tradition

Both individually and as a collection, The Country Store Thimbles provide a fascinating trip back in time—adding a new dimension to an American collecting tradition. For American companies have long regarded thimbles not just as a practical household item, but also as an excellent way to advertise. So they often provided customers with thimbles marked with their company names and slogans.

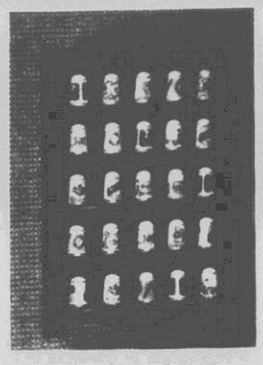
Adding to their fascination, therefore, each Country Store Thimble bears an original design created exclusively for this collection—not merely a reproduction of an early package or advertisement. And each design has been fully approved for inclusion in the collection by the company involved.

Each design will be fired on a fine porcelain thimble, encircled top and bottom with hand-painted bands of pure 24 karat gold. Each will be crafted by the master artisans of Franklin Porcelain, a Division of The Franklin Mint—and one of the very few facilities in America capable of such painstaking work.

Remarkable quality at a most reasonable price

Yet despite the care and time that must be taken with every thimble, the price for each is just $12.50. And you will receive, at no additional charge, a handsome hardwood display rack, plus specially written commentaries about each product and its maker.

The Country Store Thimbles form a collection that will be treasured by your family for generations to come as a unique reminder of a very special time in our history. But the collection is available only by direct subscription and only through Franklin Porcelain. It will be crafted exclusively for those who enter valid subscriptions for this series.



One fine porcelain thimble will be sent to you each month. But, since it will take time to craft them, it is important that the application at right be postmarked by March 31, 1982.

Guest in the Garden: Some Blooming Tips

By C.Z. Guest

Though the ground is still cold where many of us live, spring is approaching and if you're planning on planting a garden, it's time to prepare. Here are some strategies to help you get started.

The Seeds of a Good Garden

To grow flowers successfully you must start with good soil. The ideal mixture should be composed of 50 percent well-drained or porous topsoil, 25 percent peat moss and 25 percent coarse sand for drainage. Always add more sand to heavy clay soil. Soil temperature is also critical. It should average 65 to 70 degrees for most varieties (which means an air temperature of 70 to 75 degrees). Always use lukewarm water on seeds, because cold water lowers the soil temperature.

Seeds should be started indoors in flats. Sow them thinly in each row. Fine seeds (petunias, begonias, etc.) should never be covered with soil. Coarse seeds (zinnias, marigolds, etc.) should be covered lightly. Water seeds gently with a spray nozzle and keep them well ventilated, (no cold drafts, please).

Most seeds are ready for transplanting in 10 to 14 days.

Seedlings should be transplanted when their first leaves have appeared. Try to transplant when the seedlings are small, as very young plants are less susceptible to the shock of being transplanted. Always pick up seedlings by the leaf, never by the stem. Make sure they are firmly transplanted in the soil and shelter them from harsh sunlight with cheesecloth for two or three days.

As far as watering goes, plants should always be dry as evening or late afternoon approaches. If they're damp as the sun goes down, fungus will grow on them.

Tips for a Fruitful Backyard

Here are a few suggestions for people raising fruit:

1. Grow varieties that will adapt well to your climate.
2. Keep your trees as dwarfed as possible by pruning them. But don't do too much pruning until after a tree starts bearing fruit. You can encourage six to eight inches of new growth a year on apple trees by pruning lightly.
3. To fertilize, put an eight-inch-thick pile of mulch around each tree.
4. Give your trees water when they need it.
5. Keep your fruit-growing operation small. Fruit trees require care all year long, so it's wise to have a small orchard that you can really take care of.

When in Drought

If your area is experiencing a dry spell, well-prepared soil and heat-tolerant vegetable varieties are a must. Here are some other ways to deal with drought:

1. Sow and transplant early, because it rains a lot early in the spring so soil moisture levels are higher at this time.
2. A trough around each plant will trap rains for thirsty roots.
3. Mulch as soon as the soil warms up to help counteract dryness.
4. Don't be afraid to use "gray water" in the garden. Apply bathtub water, dishwater, or laundry-rinse water directly to the soil.

Delightful Dahlias

This spring, plant some low-growing dwarf dahlias. They're eye-catching in beds or as borders. The tidy little plants require no staking and almost no care whatsoever. Their only requirements are average soil, full sun, water and fertilizer. Even novice gardeners have great results the first time they grow these lovely flowers. Dahlias are ideal for cutting and arranging. Freshly cut, they last at least a week.

Seasonal Footnote: The Shamrock

With St. Patrick's Day just around the corner, we thought you might want to know something about the shamrock. The shamrock is a member of the clover family. It is the national emblem of Ireland and according to legend, St. Patrick used its three leaves to explain the nature of the holy Trinity. To this day, the shamrock is worn in buttonholes on St. Patrick's Day, in Ireland as well as in other countries around the world. FW

"Magic" Indian Oil

Catches Fish Like Crazy!

Here's what fishermen say about my spray:
"What you say is true. I caught fish like crazy—it really works!"
K.S. Evansville, Ind.

I made this remarkable discovery when my son went on his first fishing trip with me. We hired this old Indian guide in a small town in Wisconsin.

When our guide showed Mark how to bait his hook, I noticed that he rubbed something on the bait just before Mark put the line in the lake. Within minutes Mark had himself a beautiful bass. You can imagine how pleased I was and Mark, of course, wanted more.

So the whole thing was repeated—the guide put on the bait, rubbed it again, and up popped another beauty. Meanwhile, I sat there patiently waiting for my first fish.

This went on all morning. Mark caught 30 bass and I got eight.

When I pulled the boat in at noon and paid off our Indian guide, I noticed that a small, unusual seed had apparently fallen from the guide's pocket into the bottom of our boat. The odor from the seed was quite strong and certainly different from anything I had ever smelled before. This was what he had rubbed on Mark's bait!

When we returned home the next day, I gave the seed to a chemist friend of mine. He analyzed it and duplicated it into a spray for me.

I could hardly wait for my next fishing trip. What I discovered on that trip was absolutely unbelievable. I have never before caught fish like that. Every time I baited my hook, I sprayed it and up popped another fish.

I tested some more. I put spray on one bait and nothing on another. The sprayed bait got the fish almost immediately. The unsprayed bait got some nibbles, but nothing more.

I gave some of my friends samples of the spray to try and the results were the same—they caught fish like never before.

I named my spray "CATCH FISH LIKE CRAZY" cause that's just what it does and it works with all kinds of fresh or salt water fish. It works equally well on artificial or live bait.

THE FAMILY

The Shocking Plight Of Abused Parents

By Susan S. Lang and Harold Feldman, Ph.D.

Doris, an 80-year-old widow, lives with her 50-year-old daughter and 52-year-old son-in-law. Although Doris is somewhat feeble, she still enjoys walking around the house and being part of the family. But when a public-health nurse came to visit early one day, she found the old woman tied to her bed. Explained the son-in-law: "Oh, Grammy likes to wander but we were so busy today we couldn't watch her and didn't want her to hurt herself."

Trudi Smith

But later Doris admitted privately to the nurse that she'd been tied up since the night before. When she had refused to give her children money to go out, they had bound her up — their usual way of punishing her. Doris resisted intervention or help from the nurse, however, fearing more severe consequences.

Grandmothers, and to a lesser extent, grandfathers, are being bound to their beds, maimed, chained and beaten. Some are psychologically abused: insulted, threatened, ridiculed, humiliated, isolated and rejected by their families. Americans are also abusing their elderly parents by depriving them materially — neglecting to obtain adequate medical services, or not providing sufficient food or personal care — and by violating their parents' rights: forcing them from their homes and placing them against their will in institutions when other options are available.

Considered as common as child abuse, parent abuse is a widespread phenomenon in the United States, particularly among the middle class. According to a 1981 report of the House Select Committee on Aging, one million older Americans, most of them women and most of them over 75 years old, are victims of abuse, neglect or exploitation by their own families.

Though the number of cases being reported each year is increasing, a study by Elizabeth E. Lau and Jordan I. Kosbert at the Chronic Illness Center in Cleveland estimates that only one in six cases is actually reported. While every state requires that child-abuse incidents be reported and investigated, only 16 states have similar laws pertaining to elder abuse.

Victimized parents, as well as their abusive children, feel guilty, ashamed and embarrassed about the maltreatment and usually want no interference from outsiders. Parents, often dependent and without resources, fear that if they complain to the authorities, there will be reprisals — more beatings or possibly institutionalization. Also, they are more comfortable with their familiar, although distressing, situation than with the unknown.

Although modern medicine has managed to extend our average life span to 73 years, society continues to neglect its growing elderly population. Elderly parents are often economically, physically, socially, and emotionally dependent on their children. Only 5 percent of those older than 65 years are institutionalized, leaving the care of 22 million senior citizens to themselves or their families.

Parent abuse is the result of complex and interrelated factors. Some children are abusive because unresolved, tense relationships with their parents become aggravated by the financial and emotional stress of having to care for a parent. Others are caught between the demands of two generations — their parents and their own children — and find their energy and resources squeezed. This problem is likely to grow as the elderly population increases in numbers.

ABUSED PARENTS

Suzanne Steinmetz, an associate professor of individual and family studies at the University of Delaware and an expert in elder abuse, compares the abuse of parents to the abuse of children. "Both are economically dependent, politically weak and lacking in adequate legal protection," states Steinmetz, who also co-authored (with Murray Straus and Richard Gelles) Behind Closed Doors: Violence in the American Family (Anchor Press).

Are there solutions to the problem? Community programs could ease the stress for families by focusing on the family as a unit, and not just on the elderly. Short-term respite care, common in other countries, including France, Britain and Denmark, could provide temporary relief to care givers. Other needed services are support groups for families, cooperative family programs (groups of families, with elderly family members in residence, who exchange services) and senior citizen day care.

Changes in attitudes about the elderly and family violence also are critical. Older persons are not as highly valued in this society as they are in others (such as in Japan) and taking care of them is often perceived as a burden, rather than a duty, obligation or joy.

In a study of three-generation families, Harold Feldman, co-author of this article, and Margaret Feldman, professor of psychology at Ithaca College found that children who believed caring for the elderly was their duty were more satisfied having an older parent living with them. They felt good about themselves because they could be depended upon and were fulfilling an obligation. The Feldman study also revealed that the more the different generations viewed each other as equals, the happier they were living together.

In the study, wives were found to be the least satisfied with having an elderly parent in the home, probably because the brunt of the burden of care fell upon them. If men shared more equally in the responsibilities of providing care, perhaps much of the stress in the family could be alleviated.

Finally, one way to provide protection would be to view elder abuse as a real crime and not as a private family affair. There is a bill now in Congress, the Prevention, Identification and Treatment of Elder Abuse Act, that would establish a national center on abuse of the elderly and provide financial assistance to prevent, identify and treat such abuse, neglect and exploitation. According to Barbara Calkins, a Congressional fellow who has worked on the bill, "chances are pretty good" that it will pass this year.

Just as too many senior citizens are tucked away in corners and hidden out of the way, so is the prevailing problem of parent abuse. Before we find ourselves in an unbearable situation, resulting in abuse of those we love, we should work to protect ourselves and our families.

Old age may be inevitable, but the stress, strife and abuse often connected with it are not. FW

WHAT IN THE WORLD

By Eliot Kaplan

FACE THE FACTS

Tracy Garner

If you have a long, angular face, you tend to be cheerful, assertive and practical, though a tad naive. If yours is a short, squarish mug, you're more apt to be moody, dependent, imaginative and shrewd. Or, at least, so says a new study.

Using skull X-rays, an English dentist identified 20 countrymen as being long faced and 20 as being short faced. Then an American psychologist analyzed personality questionnaires filled out by all 40 persons.

As reported recently in Psychology Today, the doctors' explanation for their conclusions is admittedly iffy. During maturation, when bones are soft, the way muscles are set can affect the shape of the bones. The duo speculates that during the childhoods of "inhibited," socially conforming people," muscles around the temple and jaw might have tensed, resulting in shorter faces.

TRUTH BE TOLD

From Tad Tuleja's new book, Fabulous Fallacies, here are some "easy" questions we bet you miss:

— Who killed Lizzie Borden's parents? Not Lizzie; a trial found her not guilty.

— What ethnic group instituted scalping in America? It was the Dutch and the English who introduced it to the Indians.

— What started the Great Chicago Fire? Not Mrs. O'Leary's cow. A reporter later admitted he made up that bull.

— Where was 1969's Woodstock concert? In Bethel, N.Y., 40 miles away.

— Who said, "Anybody who hates dogs and babies can't be all bad"? At a Hollywood roast, author Leo Rosten said it about W.C. Fields.

Stuart Goldenberg

— Who first said, "All we have to fear is fear itself"? F.D.R. actually paraphrased the line from several sources, going as far back as the 16th century.

WINNING THE TEST GAME

Last year, over one million high-school students took the Scholastic Aptitude Test — S.A.T. (The next test will be given in two weeks.) Those nerve-racking, sweat-filled hours with a number-two pencil have been known to make — and break — the futures of many. The test is supposed to be foolproof, but author Michael Donner says he has discovered built-in flaws and exposes ways to exploit them in his book, How to Beat the S.A.T.

Donner, an expert game theorist, studied six full tests (some 1,000 questions) and told us the test should be looked upon as a game, with your opponent being the test maker. "It's his job to trick you," says Donner. "He wants to lead you into picking the wrong answers."

Your best bet is always applying the knowledge you have, but Donner outlines 17 tactics to use when stumped, many geared to specific types of S.A.T. questions. Among his general rules: Avoid answers in the a,c,e columns (the choices that first come to mind for most people); avoid identical answers on successive questions; avoid nonanswers like "none of the above."

Though the College Board has downplayed Donner's theories, he says, "My real aim is to sensitize people to the mind of the tester. It's like a hunt: You must first connect with your prey."

Tracy Garner

Quinn: A fine lad indeed.

FUNNY, THEY DON'T LOOK IRISH

Along with expected folks like Ronald Reagan, James Cagney and Art Carney, the Irish Consulate in New York reports that Irish roots can also be claimed this St. Patrick's Day by such unlikely lads and lasses as Richard Nixon, Gerald Ford, Barbara Stanwyck, Mary Tyler Moore and Anthony Quinn. No blarney!

WITH A BANG, NOT A WHIMPER

Charles Waller

Every 100 million years or so throughout evolutionary history, entire species of plants and animals have disappeared. Scientists have debated why, but one theory currently in vogue says that the dinosaurs, for example, were wiped out by a giant asteroid colliding with the earth.

A team at the University of California, Berkeley, headed by geologist Walter Alvarez, has reported that sea-floor deposits from some two dozen sites around the world show a thin layer of clay with an abnormally high level of iridium, an element rare in earth rocks but common in meteorites. The clay layer is estimated to have been laid down 65 million years ago, about the time dinosaurs and many smaller creatures became extinct.

Although other scientists believe the extinction was much more gradual, Alvarez proposes that upon impact, the giant asteroid — several miles in diameter — caused the earth to be enveloped by dust for months or years, radically changing the climate or cutting off sunlight.

BARCLAY

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

You don't have to wait. It's here now! The help you need for catastrophic medical bills...payable both IN and OUT of the hospital.

MUTUAL OF OMAHA'S

CATASTROPHIC

MAJOR MEDICAL COVERAGE

can provide these added dollars for covered sickness and accidents at a cost most families can readily afford. Yours over and above your basic hospital benefits.

Nearly every American family has its own horror story of the rampaging costs of an extremely long illness.

Either the family knows such a story, or they have personally experienced it.

Most people now realize that a family's earnings, bank accounts, entire life savings can be wiped out—swept away by the costs of a catastrophic illness—the kind of illness (or accident) you hope against hope will never happen, but which, unfortunately, sometimes does.

But even a catastrophic illness need not be a financial catastrophe. Now you can give yourself and your family the protection you need against the runaway bills caused by catastrophic illness or accident.

At Last, The Million Dollar Answer.

Mutual of Omaha's Catastrophic HealthCare Plan supplements the basic coverage most people have, which is fine for ordinary bills—but can't be expected to cover the cost of a truly catastrophic illness.

Mutual's new Plan provides up to $1,000,000 in protection for every member of your family. That's a MILLION dollars over and above your basic hospital coverage, which may sound like more protection than you could possibly need. But some people may, unfortunately, have to use all or most of it when faced with a long-term illness. That's when they'll be thankful they have Mutual's Catastrophic HealthCare Plan. It's the answer to medical bills that can run into hundreds of thousands of dollars today.

Why Coverage IN And OUT Of The Hospital?

When dealing with a long illness, where hospital costs of from $170 to $200 a day* are involved, it is sometimes economically and even therapeutically advisable to care for the patient out of the hospital.

Your present health insurance plan may only pay for hospital care. This plan can pay whether the patient is hospitalized, or recuperating at home, or in a convalescent facility. It pays for treatment by a physician or surgeon. X-ray and laboratory examinations. Drugs and medicines requiring a prescription and purchased upon a physician's order and dispensed by a licensed pharmacist...and much, much more!

How Much Does It Cost?

We'd like to explain how much this plan costs right here in this ad.

But it's really not that easy. Because the plan's cost depends mainly on how much medical insurance you now have. If you already have adequate basic protection against hospital and doctor bills, your premiums will be quite low.

However, if you don't have much basic coverage—or none at all—premiums will be higher. But then, your need is far greater, too!

You should know all the facts about this plan, and a Mutual of Omaha service representative will be happy to furnish these facts without obligation to you.

You'll learn about exclusions, reductions or limitations, deductibles, terms for continuing your policy in force and much more.

So why not tear off the postage paid reply card and mail it today. You may not be able to avoid catastrophic illness or a catastrophic accident. But with our Million Dollar Answer you can avoid the risk of catastrophic bills.

Free New Book

helps you fight inflation ... shows you how to stretch health insurance dollars and get more for your money...plus how to plan now for a better, more secure future.

ACT NOW! Mail the postage paid reply card today and get all the facts, plus your FREE copy of Mutual of Omaha's new book that tells you "How You Can Profit from a Health Insurance Checkup." Or write to: "Checkup," Mutual of Omaha, Mutual of Omaha Plaza, Omaha, Nebraska 68131.

65 or over? Get full facts about Mutual Care Hospital plans that can work hand-in-hand with Medicare to help pay most hospital-surgical-medical bills Medicare doesn't fully cover.

While the $1,000,000 Major Medical plan is not available in AR, CT, NH, & SC, other plans are available in all states.

Sadat Peace Coin

March 1982, Philadelphia. IMM announced today the release for sale of one of the rarest and most important silver coins to have been minted in recent history. The Sadat Peace Coin—struck in .720 fine silver and measuring a large crown size 35mm—was issued as legal tender in 1980 by the Egyptian Government. Struck for peace, in commemoration of the Camp David Accord, where the Peace Treaty between Egypt and Israel was signed on March 29, 1979. Moreover, the coin honors Egypt's Nobel Prize winning president, Anwar Sadat, with a magnificently detailed portrait. Only 100,000 of the Sadat Peace Coins were struck, making it a mintage that is quite literally hundreds of times rarer than U.S. Silver Dollars of the past. International Monetary Mint is offering these large Brilliant Uncirculated Sadat crowns at the Special Investor Opportunity price of only $30 each. You may never have a better opportunity to own this highly sought after coin. Investors who respond from this publication may purchase from 1 to 10 individual Sadat coins at this price. Because of the extremely limited number available, orders will be filled on a first-come, first-served basis with a strict limit of 10 coins per customer. All Sadat Peace Treaty Commemorative Crowns are accompanied by a certificate of authenticity and are fully guaranteed. Coins classified "Brilliant Uncirculated" have never been placed in general circulation and are still in mint state condition.

To qualify for this offering call Lee Collins toll free at 1-800-345-8502 (in Pennsylvania call our Special Operator at 1-800-662-5180), Dept. SCB-1503 for credit card orders, or send check or money order to: International Monetary Mint, Dept. SCB-1503, 390 Pike Road, Huntingdon Valley, PA 19006. An additional $2.75 is requested to cover insurance, postage, and special handling. If not satisfied, you may return your Sadat Peace Coins in their original condition within 14 days for a full refund. This offer expires April 12, 1982.

Lose 4-8 Lbs. in 1 HOUR!

and PAY NOTHING NOW!

With the Space Suit Slenderizing System—as documented by U.S. government expert

A leading physician, who serves as an expert for the U.S. government, recently demonstrated how the Space Suit Slenderizing System can help you lose weight, keep most of it off and lose more—as much as you want. In fact, he said, some people can temporarily lose even more than 4-8 lbs. in one hour.

The Space Suit Slenderizing System is a new way to temporarily or permanently lose weight and keep it off. It's up to you. Even though diet and exercise play a key role in any medically sound reducing program, it is the addition of the Space Suit Slenderizer that helps you to lose as much as 4-8 lbs. in the first hour and subsequently change bad eating patterns, while the System lets you take off as much weight as you want and keep it off!

Slim and trim your whole body!

Just take that first step into the Space Suit Slenderizer. It's a glittering, 2-piece suit made of thermally superactive material that you can use like a Turkish bath or costly Finnish sauna. Just start the easy exercise program and the heat builds up. You burn up pockets of excess fat and flab while eliminating pounds of fluid—as much as 4-8 lbs. of fat and fluid in the first hour, as you get properly conditioned!

Believe it or not, when you follow directions, you will not only keep most of that weight off, you will lose even more weight—As much as you want for as long as you like!

Take it anywhere!

You can carry Space Suit in your handbag, briefcase, lunch box, or jacket pocket. It's so comfortable, you can put it on while gardening, shopping, jogging, doing housework, or even watching TV. And, it's washable, too. Use it to exercise, to stay conscientious, and to reinforce your slenderizing activities. The Space Suit Slenderizing System gives you better results than any diet, exercise program, or reducing aid alone. You can use it to lose weight fast whenever you like, and keep it off as long as you like.

Let us take the risk!

Just fill out the coupon below and postdate your check for 30 days from today! You'll pay nothing now (not for 30 days), but we will send your Space Suit Slenderizing System NOW! Try it. Use it. Prince Valiant

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

created by HAL FOSTER

Our Story: THE TRIREME BEARING PRINCE VALIANT AND SIR GAWAIN GRUFFLY TAMES THE WAVES. "MISTY ISLES. TWO DAYS," SAYS SVEN FORK-BEARD, THE CAPTAIN. AND VAL IS ANXIOUS. JUSTINIAN HAS DESIGNS UPON HIS CHILD, AND ON THE MISTY ISLES. BUT WHY? PRIAM, JUSTINIAN'S PERSONAL PHYSICIAN, KNOWS.

HE WAS SENT TO "ASSIST" ALETA OUT OF "FRIENDSHIP." BUT HE IS PROUDLY PRIVY TO A DARKER PLOT. PRIAM ADMIRES HIS MASTER'S WIT.

HE HAS BUSIED HIMSELF AMONG THE POOR UNTIL ALETA'S TIME IS COME. IT IS ALL PART OF THE PLAN. HIS HELPMATE IS THE MIDWIFE THETA, WHOSE NIECE WAS DELIVERED FROM JUSTINIAN'S PRISON FOR A PRICE THAT THETA NOW PAYS. "THE EMPEROR WILL HAVE A MALE HEIR," PRIAM EXPLAINS.

"EMPRESS THEODOSIA IS WITH CHILD. BUT IF IT BE A GIRL?" HE CURLS HIS LIPS IN APPRECIATION. "WE MUST IMPROVE THE ODDS. ALETA WAS HIS FIRST LOVE. IF SHE BEARS A MALE, IT WILL DO." VAL DRAWS NEARER TO ALETA'S SIDE. THE ENEMY FOLLOWS.
