

Gov. Hunt Here For PCC Award Event

By MARY SCHULKEN

North Carolina's energy future depends on the state's ability to train skilled researchers and capable technicians, says Gov. Jim Hunt.

The governor's remarks came during a visit to Pitt Community College today to present PCC officials with a national energy award recognizing excellence in vocational education.

"We are on the right track in North Carolina," he told college officials. "We are sharpening tools we will need to build a secure energy future. But our research development efforts will mean little," he continued, "if we don't have skilled workmen to install, operate and maintain new energy technologies.

"That is why energy technology training programs like this one are so important," noted the governor.

Hunt added that he felt only through technical training will the state be able to produce mechanics, carpenters and other skilled technicians that are needed to "transfer energy discoveries into commonplace."

The award, presented by the United States Department of Education and Secretary T.H. Bell, is known as the Secretary's Award of Excellence. PCC's energy program represents region IV of the nation, which includes eight southeastern states.

"This is one of the highest honors attainable for the college, its faculty and students," said PCC President Dr. William E. Fulford. "This national award represents many hours of hard work and planning on the part of our entire college family."

PCC offers an associate degree in energy technology and was one of the first colleges in the nation to develop this program, explained Dr. Fulford. "Because of this, we've provided significant curriculum development research in this area. This program has been viewed as a national model and numerous two-year colleges have received copies of the curriculum and supporting research."

In addition, noted Dr. Fulford, the energy technology department has integrated into the community through local projects. He listed the following examples:

•Passive solar house construction - PCC is constructing a 1,500 square foot house designed by architectural technology instructor Sam Arnett which will give students "hands-on" experience with energy-efficient methods and materials.

•Energy Audits - students, in cooperation with Greenville Utilities, conducted home energy audits of 110 homes, identifying areas of greatest heat loss and advising owners on energy conservation.

•Alcohol fuels training program - The college designed and built a six gallon-per-hour wood-fired alcohol still capable of producing 188-191-proof ethanol.

•Vehicle conversion - The auto mechanics department installed a dual carburation system that allows one of the college vehicles to burn propane.

NATIONAL ACCLAIM FOR PCC ENERGY PROGRAM...Pitt Community College has been named a national winner of an outstanding vocational education awards program sponsored by the United States Department of Education. The college is one of 10 in the nation to receive this award, which recognizes the energy technology department.

Industrial Revenue Bonds OKd

By STUART SAVAGE

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners this morning gave final approval for the issuance of $1.4 million in industrial revenue bonds for Eaton Corp.

The bonds, which still must be approved by the Local Government Commission, are to finance an expansion of the Eaton plant in Greenville.

The bonds, handled through the Pitt County Industrial Development and Pollution Control Financing Authority, have been underwritten by McDonald & Co. at an interest rate of 14 percent for 20 years.

There is no liability on the part of the county for the bonds, which will be repaid through Eaton Corp. profits. In other business this morning, the board named Ray J. Boleman, city executive of Planters National Bank & Trust Co. to replace Reid Hooper on the Industrial and Pollution Control Facilities Financing Authority.

Commissioners also approved advertising for bids for 10 additional 40-cubic yard solid waste containers, and approved bonds for members of the county ABC Board at $5,000 each.

The commissioners also agreed in principle to advertise for bids for health care insurance for county employees after specifications are drawn up and gave approval to accepting bids for contract hauling of solid waste containers and landfill operations.

Dr. Delma Blinson, superintendent of the Greenville City Schools met with the board to "receive directions" on what might be done to finance construction of a building to house the auto mechanics and graphics vocational programs at Rose

High School. Blinson said the proposed building, estimated to cost $85,000, could be built through a lease-purchase arrangement or other means.

He noted that the school system is now paying $8,000 a year to rent a building for the auto mechanics program.

The board suggested that Blinson return with figures on the school system's projected capital outlay requests for the coming fiscal year and the amount of money on hand that could be used for the project, before any action is considered.

French Left Trails In Provincial Elections

PARIS (AP) - President Francois Mitterrand's Socialists went to work today on Communist voters whose abstention gave conservative parties the edge in the first round of elections for local government councils in half of France.

Although the Socialists remained the largest party in the voting Sunday with 30 percent of the votes, their Communist allies slipped to less than 16 percent, down more than six points from the last provincial elections in 1979.

The combined leftist vote was 3.7 percentage points less than the showing in 1979 and 5.9 points less than the leftist triumph in the National Assembly election last spring.

The leftists hoped to do better in the runoffs next Sunday for local council seats which no candidate won by a majority in the first round.

Because of the Socialists' comfortable majority in the National Assembly, the results represent no threat to Mitterrand's control of the national government. But the authority of the local councils is to be increased considerably under Socialist plans to decentralize the government, and both the left and the right turned the voting into something of a referendum on the nine-month-old government.

It was the left's second election setback this year. Two months ago special elections were held for four vacant National Assembly seats, and rightists won all four of them. If the runoff election next Sunday confirms the rightist trend in the first round, it could affect the pace at which the Socialists continue their program of nationalization, taxation of the rich and government decentralization.

Final results for 1,535 of the 2,029 canton council seats gave the Socialists, Communists and Radical Left 47.57 percent of the vote to 49.73 percent for candidates of former President Valery Giscard d'Estaing's Union for French Democracy, the neo-Gaullist Assembly for the French Republic and other rightists.

The tiny Ecology Party got the rest.

"The right was able to rally all its supporters while the left was unable to muster the whole of its forces," said the Socialist Party's first secretary, Lionel Jospin.

The "government must be very disappointed," said Paris Mayor Jacques Chirac, the president of neo-Gaullist party.

More than 7,500 candidates were running for the 2,029 members of local councils in half of the cantons. The other half, including Paris, will be elected in 1985.

Damage Heavy

A Saturday night fire which destroyed a wood-frame and metal warehouse on 12th Street, between Washington and Greene Streets caused more than $90,000 damage it was estimated today.

Spokesman for Eastern Insulation Service said the 10 p.m. blaze destroyed an estimated $60,000 worth of insulation and sheathing and a motorcycle that was stored in the structure. (Information on the fire published in Sunday's edition incorrectly identified the occupants of the building as White's Insulation Service.)

A spokesman for the Pitt County Tax Supervisor's office said this morning that the building, built about 1924, was owned by James Milton Williamson of Greenville.

The tax value of the 20,480 square foot building was listed as $30,510 in January, the spokesman noted.

Greenville Fire-Rescue Department Chief Jenness Allen said this morning that officers are still trying to determine what caused the fire.

Serious Crime Declined In State During 1981

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - Serious crimes declined in North Carolina in 1981, according to figures compiled by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and released today by the state Department of Crime Control and Public Safety.

Department Secretary Heman Clark said the latest figures show the seven major categories of crime declined 2 percent in 1981 when compared to 1980, and that murders declined 12 percent statewide.

"The latest figures ... indicate North Carolina is third from the bottom in the South Atlantic region, meaning that only two states in our region, Virginia and West Virginia, have lower crime rates," Clark said.

In addition, Clark said, North Carolina's crime rate last year was lower than average in the South and the nation.

But state Attorney General Rufus Edmisten warned the state should not relax its crime-prevention efforts in light of the good news.

"In 1980, North Carolina suffered through the highest reported crime rate in our state's history," he said. "It is very gratifying for me to see the small decline in the rate of reported crime in 1981 over the catastrophic rate of crime in 1980, but I feel this drop is not significant enough for us to become overconfident and forget that we must continue to support law enforcement and crime pre-

WHY NO FIRE EXTINGUISHER?

My car caught fire in a downtown parking lot Friday, Mar. 4, around 11 p.m. A policeman at the scene called the fire department and reported the location as another parking lot, so valuable time was lost. I wish that policeman had had a fire extinguisher to help me, because in the beginning, the fire was well-contained and wouldn't have taken much to put out. I don't have too much complaint about him, though. There is another person I want to complain about: Well before the fire truck arrived, however, a fireman in a car arrived. His function seemed to be to arrive at the scene of the fire ahead of the fire truck to determine what, if any, other equipment might be needed. Considering his duty at the fire, you would think that he would be capable of offering some assistance in putting out the fire. He didn't. Why? Because he didn't carry a fire extinguisher. I only have to replace a $1,500 car on a very small income. One day someone may have to replace something, or more importantly, someone for the same reason. D.R.

Your indignation would seem warranted if your facts were correct, Greenville Assistant Fire Chief Donald Mills said. But the man who was first at the fire was not a member of the Greenville Fire Department. The three firemen on the pumper sent to your car fire told Mills that they saw a man in firemen's turnout gear at the fire when they arrived, but they do not know who he was. He was apparently a volunteer from another department, Mills said.

Mills agreed with you that a fire extinguisher used immediately would have probably saved your car. He suggested that perhaps all volunteer firemen should carry fire extinguishers, as well as turn-out gear, in their vehicles. Indeed, everyone should, he added.

Coping With High College Costs The ABCs...Anger! Bewilderment! and even Confusion!

By BEN OLAN
(First in a Series)

"I'm wiped out," Marian Benedikt, a Brooklyn mother of three, said angrily. "I had to pay $12,000 recently for our oldest son's tuition and expenses in medical school and there's nothing left in our savings account."

"The cuts are going to force many college students out of college," speculates Mary Coffey, a New York University junior, referring to Federal cutbacks in student financial assistance.

"It's shocking! People are frightened," pointed out Janet Lipschultz, a high school guidance counselor. "There is a great deal of confusion. There is fear among parents that they won't be able to send this year's high school seniors to college next fall. Tuition and expenses are going up everywhere. The government grants are going down and they're making it tougher to get loans."

"The cutbacks will deprive a lot of students from going to college and will hurt many schools. There is bound to be a drop in enrollment," said Bob O'Brien, a general contractor from Pittsfield, Mass., who has helped put four of his six children - all girls - through college. The two others are in their next-to-last college years.

"I'm sure I'd have panicked if the situation when the first one started college was the same as it is now," added O'Brien, whose daughters range in age from 20 to 26. "I guess I'm lucky. Well, maybe not so much. I still have to make six weddings!"

It is rather obvious, then, that the reaction of many of the nation's needy students, their parents and educators to the increasing cost of attending college on one hand and the government cutbacks in student aid on the other can best be described as anger, bewilderment and confusion. Still, there is hope for the needy students who want to go to college as leading educators and others will emphasize later on in this series.

However, while stressing that current high school seniors and college undergraduates seeking assistance should send their completed financial aid applications to the colleges of their choice immediately, most of those in the college education sector are pessimistic.

"It's a disastrous situation," observed Harold Higginbotham Jr., director of financial aid at New York University. "All the changes in the student aid program have discouraged some students from going to college."

Leo Kornfeld, former deputy commissioner of Student Federal Assistance and a co-author of a new book, "How to Beat the High Cost of Learning," pointed out, "The government's program was supposed to give equal opportunities to the rich and poor to go to better schools.

Only the wealthy will be able to go to college now. It's scandalous."

Since January, 1981, the Administration has trimmed Federal student assistance by millions of dollars. Even if approved by Congress, there is little likelihood that President Reagan's plan, disclosed in his State-of-the-Union message last Jan. 25, to transfer the responsibility for some educational services to the states will immediately affect the major post-secondary education programs. However, it is feared that further cuts proposed by the Administration in the federally-funded Pell Grant and Guaranteed Student Loan programs will be approved by Congress later this year.

In the wake of reduced grants to the disadvantaged and more stringent requirements for loans to the middle class, students and their families are digging

Martin Attorney Is Candidate

ROBERSONVILLE - A Martin County attorney, Thomas B. Brandon III, announced today that he plans to file against incumbent Rep. Walter B. Jones of Farmville, for the First Congressional District seat in the U.S. House of Representatives.

A Democrat, Brandon said eastern North Carolina, "will need aggressive leadership in Washington in the future if the area expects to retain its place among other progressive areas of the state and nation," and "a Congressman who will actively speak out to protect its agricultural interests, and one who will propose bold and innovative solutions to the problems which the state's agricultural industry faces."

Brandon, who said his philosophy of government emphasizes a strong national defense as well as essential human services, identified other immediate problems as high unemployment rates, and the administration's failure to move toward reducing federal deficits.

The prospective candidate, who holds a B.S. degree in chemical engineering from North Carolina State University and an M.S. degree from Louisiana State University,

Spring Floods Rising In Midwest; More Rain Due

By BETSY BROWN
Associated Press Writer
Flooding rivers that have left thousands homeless continued to rise today in northern Indiana and Ohio, with water more than 7 feet deep in the downtown areas of some cities.

National Guardsmen kept a lookout for looters as emergency crews filled sandbags to try to hold back the area's worst floods since 1913.

Thunderstorms today dumped about 1½ inches of rain in cities such as Evansville, Ind., Louisville, Ky., and Chattanooga, Tenn., while dense fog reduced visibility to near zero across most of Nebraska, Kansas, northern Missouri and the Florida panhandle.

A winter storm over the Rockies and northern Arizona dropped about 4 inches of new snow in Flagstaff and Pinetop, Ariz., with another half a foot forecast for the mountains of Colorado and Wyoming. Cold rain and ice was expected to spread into the northern plains.

Rivers swollen by melting snow in Ohio, Indiana and Michigan flooded low-lying areas, causing millions of dollars in property damage and at least three deaths, authorities said.

In Fort Wayne, Ind., more than 3,000 residents were evacuated as the Maumee River, formed by the confluence of the St. Mary's and St. Joseph rivers, climbed Sunday to 9 feet above flood stage and another half a foot early today. Forecasters said thunderstorms were expected to bring more rain to the area today and tonight.

Indiana Gov. Robert Orr declared disaster emergencies for the city of 170,000 and surrounding Allen County, as well as LaPorte County, about 100 miles to the northwest.

"Several neighborhoods are severely under water," said Fort Wayne Mayor Winfield Moses, who estimated damage at $11 million. "The St. Mary's River still is very flooded and it probably will be many hours before it reaches its crest."

The Army Corps of Engineers brought in 150,000 sandbags Sunday to complement the 55,000 in place already in the 2,000-square-mile watershed area, said city Transportation Director Carl O'Neal.

An 84-year-old woman confined to a wheelchair said she was evacuated from her home by boat. "They had to carry me," said Gladys Hall, one of 160 people at two Red Cross shelters in Fort Wayne.

"This is clearly the worst flood in 69 years," said Moses, who surveyed the damage by helicopter Sunday morning.

In 1913, the Maumee swelled to a record 12.1 feet above flood stage, inundating Fort Wayne. Seven people died and damage was estimated at $1.25 million in that flood, which saw rivers rise 20 feet in a 30-hour period.

Cheryl Kunberger, a spokeswoman for the mayor, said most flooding was in the central part of the city: "We have about 1,000 of our evacuees from there." On Sunday night, water was 3 feet deep in the 10-square block area, officials said.

On the city's southwest side, "Those people evacuated themselves," most staying with friends or relatives, Ms. Kunberger said.

An army of 2,000 volunteers fought the flood, some coming for miles around to help control the water.

Jimmy Knighten, 14, traveled 50 miles from Muncie, Ind. "I was bagging sand. I was moving sand in lines and hauling sand," said the boy, smeared with dirt from head to toe.

Ohio Gov. James Rhodes sent a telegram to President Reagan on Sunday night asking him to declare several regions in the northwest part of the state as disaster areas.

"It's getting to the point where people are getting scared," said Les Heyman, assistant fire chief in Grand Rapids, Ohio, downstream from Fort Wayne. The Maumee was 6 feet above flood stage there, and it was expected to rise another foot today.

Water rushed into the northwestern Ohio town of 1,100 people outside Toledo after an ice jam broke on the Maumee.

dustries of Kinston, which has been cited for providing extensive support and materials to the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council, as well as the role of management in the P-GAC fund drive.

Vulture Viewing
The beautiful swallows gliding gently back to Capistrano symbolize for many the welcome return of spring. But for others it's the lurking, circling buzzards of Hinckley, Ohio, that bring spring. The buzzards have returned to tiny Hinckley on this date for at least 50 years. Legends say they first came to the area in Indian times, when a Wyandotte maiden accurately predicted an eclipse. Blamed for the event, she was hanged at the bend of the Rocky River where vultures were attracted to her body. On Sunday as many as 60,000 vulture viewers will be attracted to Hinckley to eat pancakes, buy buzzard T-shirts and celebrate the vernal equinox.

Four persons were charged with traffic violations in connection with three wrecks investigated by Greenville police Saturday night.

Officers reported Thomas Wilson Rivers of 402 Orton Drive was charged with driving under the influence following investigation of an 8:30 p.m. mishap on Greenville Boulevard, 500 feet west of the Red Banks Road intersection.

Police said the Rivers car collided with an auto driven by Traci Elizabeth Allen of Route 1, Winterville, causing an estimated $2,000 damage to each of the two vehicles.

Cars driven by James Elam Caldwell III of 1017 West Wright Rd. and Larry Earl Joyner of Rocky Mount, collided about 9:50 p.m. at the intersection of Fifth and Cotanche Streets, causing an estimated $350 damage to the Caldwell car and $500 damage to the Joyner auto.

Caldwell was charged with driving under the influence, failing to stop for a red light and transporting whiskey with the seal broken, following investigation of the mishap.

Cars driven by Thomas Randall Brookshire of Winterville, James Allen Kaler of 101 Harrel St., and Karen Elizabeth Cottingham of 103 East Baywood Lane collided about 9:15 p.m. at the intersection of Tenth Street and Cedar Lane.

Investigators, who set damage at $100 to the Brookshire car, $500 to the Kaler car and $200 to the Cottingham auto, charged both Kaler and Ms. Cottingham with failing to reduce their speed enough to avoid an accident.

"YOU ARE IMPORTANT!"

That is what my pastor told me. And I feel important when I go to church with my Mom and Dad. I sing in a choir at church and we do a lot of things, like have parties and go on trips. And that's fun.

I know I'm young, but I learned about Jesus Christ at church and I believe in Him. He helps me every day. Jesus is very important to me. Maybe that's why I feel important. I would like others to come to my church.

Right now my church and lots of other Baptist churches are having special services to invite new people to church. They're called HERE'S HOPE services.

There's a sign in front of a lot of Baptist churches telling about them. I hope YOU will attend. You'll find out that you are important.

DEAR ABBY: Re the missing silverware: My first teaching assignment was in "wood shop" in Los Angeles Juvenile Hall, where all tools had to be accounted for at the end of every class because of the threat of physical assault with a tool. Tools also could be useful in helping the young inmates escape.

At the end of every class, if any tools were missing, I would announce what was missing and tell the students that a general search would be made. I would then diplomatically absent myself to go looking in the paint room or wood storage room while the students milled around. The missing items always miraculously appeared. They were usually turned in by "friends" of the guilty parties. That way nobody was apprehended or accused, and everyone benefited by this approach.

The world's first adhesive stamp, the penny black, went on sale in England in 1841. The penny black and the two-penny blue stamp — both bearing the portrait of Queen Victoria — were an immediate success and printers worked night and day to keep supplies available. The use of stamps spread and in 1843 Brazil became the second government to issue them.

I announced to the guests that I must have "misplaced" a fork and a spoon and asked if they would mind helping me look for them. I suggested that we search all over the house. Then I made myself scarce for about 10 minutes.

When I returned to the dining room, the fork and spoon were on the sideboard! I laughed and apologized for "misplacing" them, and the party went on.

Believe me, I am more careful about keeping an eye on them these days. (My sisters, not my silver.)

DEAR ABBY: How does one retrieve a missing article? This worked with youngsters, so maybe it will work with adults: When my son (now grown) had his 10th birthday party, I noticed one little boy was fascinated with a collection of miniature ceramic animals I had on display. I saw him pocket a small dog when he thought nobody was looking.

I waited a while, then I said in a surprised tone, "Oh, one of my little doggies is missing. Let's everybody look on the floor, behind the sofa and in all the corners!"

All the children started looking. Then the boy who had taken it announced, "Here it is! I found it in the corner!" And he handed over the doggie. I was greatly relieved. And I'm sure he was, too.

Too Many Want To Talk

There are times when we seriously wonder if the United States belongs in an adult world of nations.

Take the events of last week, for a shining (or dismal) example.

Aerial photos of the Nicaraguan garrisons' buildup have been available for months. They have been studied and analyzed by the best in the business, and when the time came for "going public", Nicaraguan spokesmen were already primed (by loose talk and simple logic) for their rebuttal. They had ready explanations and disclaimers of malevolent intent.

What else could they say? (And there will be some Americans who believe the disclaimers rather than the findings of their own government.)

Then the Washington Post helped make matters worse by publishing details of the worst-kept "secret" since Wrong-Way Corrigan flew the Atlantic, about the intended covert action against Nicaragua.

Honest-to-Pete! A foreign government doesn't need to maintain an espionage network in the U.S.; all they have to do is leave it to a few good reporters to bare all on front pages of newspapers and as lead stories on television.

It was the newsmen's job to report the news as they found it, but it was also an obligation of people in government to be absolute "clams" when cognizant of what comprises secrets in the national interest.

As of today, the word "covert" has a hollow ring. There are people in Washington who don't know the meaning of the word nor the responsibility it entails. The cover has been blown, contemplated counter-actions bared and our country becomes the sitting duck for propagandists. Chances of success in the plan to provide any kind of diversionary activity against the Caribbean communist strategy is undermined.

Amidst professionals in government we have a lot of juveniles who cannot resist displaying their "inside" knowledge, thinking it enhances their personal image. Our disgust is unprintable.

The Educated Patients

By ART BUCHWALD

The good news for hypochondriacs today is that the Food and Drug Administration has given permission to companies to advertise prescription drugs directly to the public.

There is no law on the books preventing pharmaceutical people from advertising prescription-type drugs to patients, but they refrained from doing it in the past, figuring the doctor might be a better judge of what a patient needed.

But business is business, and the companies now feel if a patient is educated in the efficacy of a certain prescription drug, sales will soar, and it will give doctors less work to do.

I have not made up the above item. It is a fact, and according to The New York Times it has been encouraged by Dr. Arthur Hull Hayes Jr., the commissioner of Food and Drugs.

The only ones who are not thrilled by the pharmaceutical companies drumbeating their prescription drugs are doctors. The fear is that most people bombarded by commercials may believe the actors on TV, rather than their physicians.

There is no reason NOT to believe that this scene may soon be playing in your local doctor's office:

The M.D., after examining the patient: "You seem to have a chest infection. I'm going to give you a prescription. Take four a day, six hours apart."

"What are you giving me?"
"Dundemycin. I've had very good luck with it for chest infections."
"But eight out of ten doctors are prescribing Carraflex for people with chest problems."
"Where did you hear that?"
"Orson Welles said it on television during a commercial last night. I think it was Orson Welles — but it could have been Robert Young or Ricardo Montalban."

"With all due respect to those fine actors, I don't believe they know much about chest infections."
"Maybe so, but whoever it was held up a test tube of bronchial bacteria and then showed how Carraflex killed them twice as fast as Dundemycin."

"The reason I don't prescribe Carraflex is that it tends to have side effects such as nausea, palpitations of the heart, and can even cause severe kidney damage."

"They didn't say anything about that in the commercial."
"They wouldn't. If they had to read all the side effects of Carraflex, they couldn't afford the TV time. Please take the Dundemycin. I'm sure it will clear it up."

"I don't know, Doc. I respect you, but Orson Welles knows a lot about medicine. And Robert Young has played a doctor on TV for years. And as far as Ricardo Montalban goes, I'm not one of those people who think a guy is a lousy M.D. just because he speaks with an accent. Besides, Carraflex sponsors the L.A. Dodgers baseball team and I want to show my gratitude."

"You're going to have to get another doctor if you want a different prescription."

"That's what they said in the TV commercial. If your M.D. is not clued in on the miraculous medical benefits of Carraflex, find yourself a doctor who is! Then they gave a toll-free number for people to call to find the name of the doctor nearest you who is willing to prescribe Carraflex."

"No hard feelings, Doc?"
"Of course not. Miss Denna, send in the next patient."
"Mr. Rubin, what seems to be wrong?"

"You gave me a sleeping pill prescription for Lohdeedah."
"I remember. You said it was satisfactory."

"Yes, but that's before I heard about Blissnatabs. Apparently they're the only pills on the market that make you dream of Brooke Shields."

Tough Job Market Is Ahead

The job market will be tough this year, according to local officials involved in the field.

Jim Hannon, manager of the local Employment Security Commission office, says, "things are really slack right now."

Furney James, director of the career planning and placement service at ECU says many of the university's graduates this year will face difficulty in locating jobs "because of the economy we're in."

Brion Sweeney, involved with job placement at Rose High, said that "the job market doesn't look good" but "it looks better for the highly skilled, and we're hoping that the vocational training we're giving our students will give them a bit of an edge."

It's not going to be an easy year for young people entering the job market. In fact the outlook is as glum as it has been for many years. It is not an impossible situation, however, and the job seeker with perseverance will be the one who obtains employment.

CAPITOL LETTER

Clamor Is Hushed

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Come this time most years, groups representing teachers and state employees have begun to renew their annual clamoring for pay raises from the General Assembly.

But this year there's been an unusual quiet, imposed by the economic hard times. The blunt reality, according to state budget officials, is that the issue is no longer whether a new pay raise will be in order come July but whether state workers and teachers might actually have to take a cut in the last pay raise they got.

Legislators and budget experts aren't predicting a pay cut this time around, but they keep suggesting the possibility in talk about the budget. And by expressing concern just about being able to continue the 5 percent higher pay that was enacted last fall, Gov. Jim Hunt has seemingly ruled out any further increase this year.

"We're very hopeful, of course, that we can operate in such a way...that we can continue the 5 percent," Hunt told reporters last week.

"Beyond that, it depends on what happens with our economy," he added. "We are in a very deep recession.

It does not appear to be getting better."

Pay raises are often an issue by now in preparation for the General Assembly's short session scheduled for June, when it normally puts finishing touches on the budget for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

This time, however, the fiscal 1983 budget, adopted in principle last year, may be in for a major overhaul.

When legislators approved the budget, it included a deficit in the new fiscal year of $112 million. Legislators and budget officials don't call it a deficit, since a balanced budget is a constitutional requirement, but prefer to call it an "unfunded balance" and say legislators would cut the budget before allowing deficit spending to begin.

But whatever the name, legislators must come up with $112 million extra by July 1 just to continue the state budget — and state salaries — at the current level.

Legislators had hoped that amount would be easily covered by the budget surplus the state usually has at the end of each fiscal year in June. But this year, with the economy performing so poorly, tax collections haven't been up as much as lawmakers hoped — and that means the surplus, if any, may well be smaller.

The current state budget depends on 10.3 percent larger tax collections this year than last. But according to David Crofts, chief economist for the legislature's staff, they have grown by no more than 9.5 percent for the first eight months of this year. And for January and February, growth was a disappointing 5 percent.

Marvin Dorman, deputy state budget officer, contends Crofts' view is overly pessimistic. But he says if the state's economy doesn't soon recover — and it of course is dependent on the national economy — state government may face real budget troubles.

"I think we're in good

Other Editors Say The Lesson Is-

(Winston-Salem Sentinel)

There's a lesson for North Carolina in a recent comparison of the climate for business expansion in the 48 contiguous states. The study by a Chicago accounting firm ranked this state 17th.

The same firm in similar surveys over the past two years placed North Carolina second. The reason for the slide should give us a clue as to what needs to be done to promote sound economic growth.

The drop in rank did not represent any change in conditions within the state. It came about because Alexander Grant & Co., the accounting firm, broadened the factors taken into consideration. When vocational training and the percentage of high school graduates in the population were added, North Carolina tumbled.

The conclusion seems clear enough. If the state really expects to expand job opportunities at above average wages, it must first improve public education and provide more training in job skills.

North Carolina was 47th in vocational education enrollment as a percentage of population. The state was 44th in the percentage of the 18-and-over age group with four years of high school. The figures are evidence of the need to solve the high school dropout problem, and to beef up the community college system.

The lesson is brought home by the category in which North Carolina placed first by placing last. The average manufacturing wage in this state is the lowest in the nation. While the survey said that this is a plus for manufacturers looking for a plant site, it is nothing in which Tar Heels can take satisfaction.

What it does demonstrate is that two decades of industrial development have not moved North Carolina out of the cellar in terms of paychecks for its workers. The companies which have located here have had no measurable impact on the average wage. Of course, it can be said that a low-wage job is better than no job at all. The objective of state industrial development must be to raise per capita income, not merely to stand still.

The place to begin, the new survey teaches, is in the classroom and the vocational workshop. The lesson should not be lost on leaders or the public.

'Dr. Pain' On Team?

By ROWLANDEVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The lack of interest among President Reagan's White House advisers in hastening economic recovery is confirmed by a backstage movement to install Alan Greenspan as the administration's economic czar.

That is hardly a prescription for quick revival of the economy that would succor jobless workers, failing entrepreneurs and panic-stricken Republican candidates. To his critics, Dr. Greenspan is Dr. Pain, a rigid advocate of austerity willing to countenance unemployment if necessary to keep inflation in check.

Even if Greenspan refuses to abandon his $500,000-plus income as a Wall Street business economist to return to Washington full-time, his influence in the Reagan administration will remain immense. His protege in the Cabinet, budget director David Stockman, has publicly — amidst surprising inattention — proclaimed unemployment as a positive good.

All this points to a major victory for the prevailing Wall Street school of thought that the country must go through an endeterminate period of pain and suffering to wring inflation out of the system. Ronald Reagan's 1980 campaign speeches upbraiding Jimmy Carter for fighting inflation with recession are ignored.

The Reagan White House, to be sure, is all too aware of the deepening panic in the land, with talk of "depression" growing everywhere. But the absence of any reason to forecast a recovery is not countered with changes in policy intended to promote economic growth. Instead, senior White House aides, acked by Stockman, want to summon Greenspan from New York.

The leader of the move is the powerful Michael K. Deaver, deputy chief of staff. Deaver does not pretend to be a student of economics but abhors what he perceives as confusion in economic policy. He believes that Greenspan in economic affairs would perform the same nonsense, desk-cleaning operation conducted in national security matters by William P. Clark.

Other senior presidential aides (notably, Richard G. Darman and David Gergen) admire Greenspan extravagantly for both his views and his competence. Greenspan is a resolute enemy of budget deficits who considers their reduction paramount to good economic policy. Since that entails spending cuts and probably tax increases, Greenspan would fight a deflated economy with further deflation (which happens to be the present Republican consensus in Congress).

That horrifies the little band of supply-siders hiding on the White House staff. Underneath Greenspan's commanding presence, they see President Gerald Ford's chief economic adviser responsible for the ludicrous WIN (Whip Inflation Now) campaign. In presidential campaigns dating back to 1968, Greenspan has seldom disguised his taste for austerity.

The problem in bringing back Greenspan is less his reputation as Dr. Pain than the difficulty in finding a slot for him that would not encroach on somebody else's turf in the crowded senior White House staff structure. Nor would Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan easily submit to an economic czar working hand-in-glove with David Stockman. But even if Greenspan-for-czar efforts fail, his impact on Reagan administration policy as an outsider has been immense from the start.

His recommendation to delay the first-year tax cut, successfully taken up by Stockman, is partially blamed by supply-siders for prolonging the recession. There has been no subsequent recantation of austerity as the remedy. When Stockman on March 4 told a U.S. Chamber of Commerce breakfast that unemployment "is part of the cure, not the problem," the Greenspanite flavor was

Strength For Today

LIFE CAN BE OVERSIMPLIFIED

A boy recently indicted for armed robbery in this town grew up in a fine, exemplary home. Yet a respected aged lady in the town, active in church work all of her life, had parents who ran a speakeasy during her childhood.

Human personality is baffling. We find diamonds in ash heaps and counterfeit coins in the cash box. Many students of human behavior have precise formulas worked out whereby they can account for every case of human misbehavior. There was a mother fixation, they say, or the parents dominated the child, or the child was compelled to go to church when he didn't want to go, or he grew up in a broken home, or the family lived in poverty, or had too much money.

Every one of these enumerated factors has brought disaster to some personality, yet we cannot make a formula for human disaster from one or all of these factors.

Life is complex; no one factor explains it. — Elisha Douglass

What Is An IRA Really Worth?

By LOUISE COOK

Associated Press Writer
How much is an Individual Retirement Account REALLY worth?

Figures compiled for The Associated Press show that if you had been able to open an IRA 30 years ago, you could be collecting more than $11,000 a year today.

You couldn't have opened an IRA in 1952, of course. They didn't exist until the mid 1970s and workers who were covered by company pension plans couldn't open an IRA until this year.

But the AP asked the U.S. League of Savings Associations to look at what might have happened in the past in an effort to put future IRAs into perspective.

The ads for the tax-deferred retirement accounts have been criticized for painting a false picture. Those ads say, for example, that $2,000 a year invested at 12 percent interest compounded annually will yield more than half a million dollars in 30 years and about a million in 35 years.

But the ads don't tell you — and no one knows — what a million dollars will be worth in 30 or 35 years. If the rate of inflation decreases, so will interest rates. If the rate of inflation doesn't decrease, higher prices will eat away the value of those IRA dollars.

To test the growth of an IRA in terms of spending power, the AP asked the league of savings associations to draw up a hypothetical account opened in 1952 by someone who was then 35 years old.

Economists for the league found that contributions and interest to that hypothetical account would total nearly $70,000 today. The account would provide an annual payout, before taxes, of $11,509 — about half the median family income and more than double the average Social Security benefit.

The economists made several assumptions: —The account started with an annual contribution of $584. That's the equivalent of $2,000 today.

—Contributions rose gradually, with inflation, reaching the $2,000 level last year. The law governing IRAs sets the maximum contribution today at a flat $2,000 and does not provide for increases, but many people have suggested that the investment level will be raised in the future to reflect inflation.

—The interest rate was tied to the interest rate on three-to-five-year U.S. government notes. It started at 2.5 percent and rose gradually to 14.2 percent in 1981. Interest was compounded annually.

—The account holder began withdrawals in 1982 at age 65. While contributing, he or she was in a 30 percent marginal tax bracket.

The league economists said contributions to the account over 30 years added up to $27,225. Interest was worth $41,109. The total in the account at the end of 1981 was $68,334.

The law requires withdrawals to be made at a fast enough pace so that the money in the account will be exhausted by the time the holder has reached his or her life expectancy. In the case of the holder of the hypothetical account, the league economists said withdrawals would have to be made over an 11-year period.

Since the money in the account keeps earning interest, the person drawing on the hypothetical IRA would actually wind up with $126,599 in 11 years at the rate of $11,509 a year.

The law allows you to defer federal income taxes on IRA contributions and interest until you start withdrawals. (You cannot make any withdrawals until you are 59½ or you must pay a penalty.)

The league economists calculated that the holder of the hypothetical account paid $33,000 less in federal income taxes than would have been paid if the money, including interest received, had been taxable.

At a 30 percent marginal tax rate, the after-tax value of $11,509 would be $8,056 a year. Federal income taxes over the 11-year payout period would total about $38,000 — the $33,000 in deferred payments, plus taxes on the interest that kept accumulating during the payout.

If the account holder moves into a lower bracket — by retiring for example — the after-tax gain improves. In the 25 percent bracket, the after-tax payout would be $8,632 each year. Over 11 years, federal income taxes would add up to $31,600.

shape, unless March and the rest of the fiscal year are like January," said Dorman. "If there's no recovery, we're going to have some problems."

If the surplus is significantly smaller, then legislators may consider wiping out that 5 percent raise that just took effect in January, said Sen. Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, the multi-titled Senate budget leader.

"If it stays like it is today, there'd be no question about it," said Royall. "But I believe it's bound to improve. I've got to be optimistic."

Add to the budget outlook, however, the prospect of more federal budget cuts proposed for 1983 by President Reagan — which if fully imposed would cut $341 million from the state budget next year, according to Dorman.

"The General Assembly will have tremendous pressure on it," he said. "The first question is going to be where we stand financially, and whether the General Assembly wants to consider picking up any of the federal cuts."

president met with a rump (five members) of his economic policy advisory group. The board's supply-siders, Dr. Arthur Laffer and Rep. Jack Kemp, were not present — for the simple reason they had not been invited.

Greenspan and Laffer represent opposite ends of the Republican economic spectrum. Greenspan is dedicated to the demolition of the welfare state, willing to take the cost of temporary pain inflicted on the economy. Laffer is committed to economic growth, believing that the welfare state will wither away in a growing economy.

In his 1980 campaign, Reagan, Reagan promised both growth and an end to the welfare state. As an intuitive politician, however, he ultimately may decide that new policies — however, he ultimately may decide that new policies — especially in monetary affairs — are necessary to save himself and his party from the stigma attached to Republicans as the party of pain. For now, however, the principal answer to a deepening climate of fear is the return of Dr. Pain himself, Alan Greenspan.

The bulk of the 1981 changes went into effect last Oct. 1, and since by then most needy students had received their grants and loans for the current academic year, the full effect is not expected to be evident until this fall.

Meanwhile, most colleges are strengthening their financial counseling services and seeking to develop new techniques to combat the cuts. They are necessary, say financial aid officers, to keep students from having to drop out of school and to avoid the possibility of the student population in many colleges dividing into the wealthy at one end and the subsidized poor at the other.

"The Administration is operating on the assumption that enough students can pay or work their way through college," said Benny H. Walker, director of financial aid at Furman University in Greenville, S.C. "It is failing to realize what inflation has done to the family income."

"We don't own a car and haven't taken a vacation in six years," said Mrs.

Benedikt, whose son Richard, 19, is attending Albany (N.Y.) Medical College. Mrs. Benedikt a probation officer, and her husband, Robert, a director of warehouse operations for a music firm, had a combined gross income of $43,000 in 1981. Mrs. Benedikt said their aggregate take home pay was $26,000.

"I've got a daughter, Heidi, who's a freshman at New York Maritime College, for whose education we're contributing $2,500 this year, and another son, Gregg, who's a senior in high school. Gregg will be the one to suffer. We'll have no money left for him. My husband and I feel guilty because we can't give all of our children what they need," Mrs. Benedikt said.

"In many cases," explained Janet Lipschultz, a guidance counselor at John Dewey High School in Brooklyn, "it's the students who feel tremendous guilt when they have to ask their parents for money to go to expensive private colleges (the average for resident students is $6,885, but it's more than $12,000 annually at many prestigious schools). A lot of parents are wondering whether it's worth $5,000 to $9,000 for their children to go to a state or public institution...or whether to send them to college at all."

Packwood Is A Maverick

NEW YORK (AP) — Sen. Bob Packwood keeps getting in hot water with the Reagan administration, but that's OK; the Oregon Republican says he isn't chasing higher office that would require help from the top.

"I'm not prepared to give up the last shred of privacy I have," he told People magazine in an interview. "I want to go to Shakey's Pizza with my family without being recognized."

What Packwood, 49, seems determined to do is make his name as a political curmudgeon. Much of Washington rolled its eyes recently after he and other Senate leaders "just shake our heads" when President Reagan tells one of his anecdotes about welfare cheaters.

But Packwood's blasts at the president also come in the direct form — as when he said Reagan's stands on women, blacks and minorities "will hurt us more in the long run than the economy."

His friends say his short-term goal might be Senate majority leader. But for that, Packwood, who rivals Lowell Weicker as the Senate's top GOP maverick, might have to temper his ways.

"On the issues where I differ (from mainstream conservatives) I apparently do not do it quietly," he told People. But he added, "Or maybe the issues are not quiet issues."

N.C. Crime...

(Continued from Page 1) Edmisten said he feared crime in 1982 will rise because of increases in the number of crimes reported and the recession. To prevent that, he called on the General Assembly to renew its commitment to law enforcement in the state.

"Our jails are overcrowded. Our police are overworked," Edmisten said. "In short, the criminal justice system simply is overwhelmed by the volume of crime. I feel the General Assembly must take a greater interest in protecting the people of North Carolina or we may lose even this small victory over crime."

L.D. Hyde, crime prevention division director, said the figures marked the first time the state has seen a decrease in its crime rate in eight or nine years, and he attributed the decline to a variety of crime-prevention programs including the neighborhood Community Crime Watch program.

"More than 10,000 communities in North Carolina have organized Crime Watch," Clark said. "Among the success stories are Buncombe County's 25 percent decrease in Index 1 (the seven most serious crimes) for 1981; Wake County's 6 percent decrease; Fayetteville's 8 percent decrease; Wilmington's 19 percent decrease and Goldsboro's 11 percent decrease."

According to the figures, the four major violent crimes — murder, rape, robbery and aggravated assault — fell 2 percent overall. Property crime, including burglary, larceny and motor vehicle theft, fell 1 percent, with burglary alone down 5 percent and motor vehicle theft down 7 percent.

Clark said credit for the decrease also should go to violence prevention programs and juvenile crime prevention programs underway in every county.

He also said there has been an increase in crime prevention efforts by individuals, such as increased security in the home, and a "heightened commitment by law enforcement agencies to the prevention of crime as opposed to the investigation, detection and apprehension of suspects after the crime has been committed."

Edmisten said he feared crime in 1982 will rise because of increases in the number of crimes reported and the recession. To prevent that, he called on the General Assembly to renew its commitment to law enforcement in the state.

Top $5,400 In Fund-Raising

Students from Pitt County and Greenville Schools raised more than $5,400 in the Burger King Basketball Shoot-Out competition held to raise funds for the North Carolina Easter Seal Society.

The funds will be used to provide therapeutic equipment and services to handicapped children and adults through the Easter Seals programs. Students from county schools taking part in the event were from A.G. Cox Elementary, Farmville Middle, Bethel Elementary, North Pitt High, Wellcome Middle, and D.H. Conley. Students from E.B. Aycock represented the city schools.

Students taking part obtained sponsors from friends and neighbors in their respective communities who pledged a certain amount of money for each basket made during a three-time Shoot-Out time period. Prizes were awarded at each school on the basis of most money raised and most baskets made.

Local scores then were compared with 37 other schools in Eastern North Carolina entered in the competition to determine regional, then state winners.

Two of the four regional winners for most money raised came from the Pitt-Greenville group — Willie Little of Bethel Elementary School, with top honors in the kindergarten through fourth grade division, and Lineberry of E.B. Aycock Junior High in the 5th through 12th grade division.

Lineberry also took the state fund-raising trophy in his grade division, which was presented to him at pregame time at the NCSU vs. Wake Forest game.

Helena Barnhill of D.H. Conley High School won the regional and state Girl's Sharpshooter trophy for the highest number of baskets made in the high school grade division.

These winners will appear on the upcoming Easter Seals Telethon to be aired March 28 on WPTF-TV, Raleigh.

Poland Meets Debt Deadline

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — A Polish banking official said his financially troubled country will pay off today the last of the overdue interest it owes on loans from Western banks.

By the end of last week, Western bankers estimated that only about $20 million of an estimated $500 million in 1981 interest payments were still outstanding.

Western bankers said they do not expect to sign until next month a new agreement on rescheduling the rest of Poland's debts, despite assurances over the weekend from Warsaw by Jan Woloszyn, first deputy president of Poland's foreign trade bank, that all of Poland's 1981 interest payments will be completed today.

Poland was unable to meet a Feb. 15 deadline for the interest payments, causing a planned March 4 signing of the rescheduling plan to be postponed until April 6.

Completion of the back interest payments is a condition to the signing of an agreement to reschedule the repayment of $2.4 billion in loans originally due for payment to Western banks last year.

Bankers in Frankfurt and Zurich, Switzerland, said it would take until the end of this week until the task force managing the rescheduling negotiations can determine whether interest payments to all 500 creditor banks actually have been made.

Poland had been given until March 26 to repay its 1981 interest.

A West German bank official said it was "highly unlikely" the signing date for the rescheduling accord would be moved up because of the earlier completion date.

Poland owes an estimated $26.5 billion to Western banks and governments. The rescheduling arrangement covers only the $2.4 billion in principal payments that Poland was unable to pay last year. Polish officials want those loans continued.

Poland also faces the problem of meeting an estimated $2.8 billion to $3 billion in interest falling due in 1982 on the $26.5 billion debt. Woloszyn said Poland also would need help from the Western bankers to meet that obligation.

Woody Peele

During the past few weeks, there has been a lot said and a lot written about "slow-down" play and shot clocks in NCAA basketball. Taken mostly to task was North Carolina coach Dean Smith for his play in the final minutes of the ACC final against Virginia, while Dave Odom of ECU also caught some of it for his game plan against the University of Richmond in the ECAC-South tournament.

Less was said about the N.C. State-Maryland game, or the final seven minutes plus of the Wake Forest-Virginia games, both of which involved the same type of play.

Personally, I think those who are after a shot clock are about as far off base as they can be. They argue that the fans don't like this type of play. Well, maybe so — the uninformed fans that is.

Those who appreciate the game do appreciate it. They realize that the goal of the game is not to score, score and score some more, but to win.

I can remember some years back when East Carolina was still playing in Christenberry gym. Virginia Tech came to town bringing with it Top Twenty ranking.

To those who did come to see the game, they probably expected that there was no way that East Carolina could have won — but the Pirates did, using a slow down game to control the tempo and scoring in the game.

Obviously, there was no way that the Pirates could have gone on the court and won playing Virginia Tech's run and gun game.

But Coach Tom Quinn did the job, and for me at least, it was a thing of beauty to behold. East Carolina played flawlessly on the floor, and Virginia Tech got more and more frustrated, and it hurt their game.

Beside me on press row sat a Roanoke newspaper, covering the game for that city's newspaper. "This is terrible. This is terrible," he kept saying. "They shouldn't allow something like this to happen."

If some fans had their way, it could not happen. Strategy would be erased from the court. It would be run and shoot, run and shoot, and naturally, the team with the most talent would win.

Even the prospect of a clock late in the game would take away from the strategy, I believe.

And talk about boring, watch a couple of Sunday afternoons of NBA ball with 100-plus to 100-plus games, and you may find that boring too.

I would much rather see a well-played defensive game with good strategy by both coaches than that type of play.

The shot clock might be good for women's basketball, but I do not think it has a role in the men's game. Let's allow the coaches to have some role in the game.

Jordan Wins Rookie Award

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina freshman Micahel Jordan has become the second consecutive Tar Heel to be chosen Atlantic Coast Conference Rookie of the Year.

Jordan, a 6-foot-5 guard from Wilmington Laney, follows North Carolina center Sam Perkins as the league's top-rookie performer. In winning the award, Jordan collected 78 of the ballots cast by the Atlantic Coast Sports Writers Association.

Runner-up in the voting was Maryland forward Adrian Branch, who received 24 votes.

Jordan was an all-ACC-tournament selection after helping the top-ranked Tar Heels win the ACC tournament. He averaged 13.6 points and 4.5 rebounds per game during the season.

"I think Michael is extremely deserving of this award," said UNC head coach Dean Smith. "He stepped into a starting lineup on an ACC contender and contributed a great deal. He has played in a lot of pressure situations and has responded well."

Jordan is only the fourth freshman ever to start at North Carolina in Smith's 21 years as head coach. The others were Phil Ford, Mike O'Koren and James Worley.

"I think he has improved throughout the season and certainly was instrumental in our ACC championship," Smith said. "He did a good job in the tournament."

ECU's Green Gets Honor

DETROIT — East Carolina junior forward Charles Green has been named to the All-Junior College Transfer third-team by Basketball Weekly, it was announced today.

Green, who transferred to ECU from Catonsville (Baltimore) Community College this past season, was the Pirates second-leading scorer (11.3) and rebounder (4.3) this year.

The honor was the second in two weeks Green has received from Basketball Weekly. Green, a 6-7, 200-pounder, was among those selected as honorable mention to the All-Atlantic Coast Region team last week by the weekly publication.

A&M To Battle Huskies In NIT

By The Associated Press

After watching the Texas A&M basketball team on film, Washington Coach Marv Harshman gives the Aggies a five-star rating.

"They are either the quickest team I've seen — or the film was on fast forward," says Harshman. "Their people are tall like Brigham Young but slimmer and quicker."

Harshman will see them in person tonight in a second-round game of the National Invitation Tournament in Seattle.

"They'll out-quick you to the ball," says Harshman. "I think they would like to run with the ball if you let them, which would create a big problem for us. They are a very good pressure team, too, but it's their quickness which impresses us most."

Washington and Texas A&M gained opening-round NIT victories Wednesday night. The Huskies, who usually play before sparse crowds at home, won 66-63 over Brigham Young before 15,689 fans at Provo, Utah, after trailing by 16 points in the first half. At College Station, the Aggies beat Lamar 60-58.

The Huskies finished fourth in the Pacific-10 Conference race this season, losing their last five regular season games. Texas A&M was third in the Southwest Conference.

Harshman said the Aggies reminded him of Oregon State, the Pac-10's champion this season.

"They (Texas A&M) are awfully quick to the basketball and pressure very well," Harshman said.

In other second-round games tonight, Bradley is at Syracuse, Tulane at Nevada-Las Vegas, Maryland at Georgia, Dayton at Illinois, Virginia Tech at Mississippi, Rutgers at Purdue and Cal-Irvine at Oklahoma.

Dates, sites and pairings for the third round will be determined after second-round action. The semifinals and finals will be held March 22 and March 24 at New York's Madison Square Garden.

The NIT's only first-team All-American, Cal-Irvine's Kevin Magee, suffered a badly cut hand while trying to stop a dunk by San Diego State's Michael Cage in the Anteaters' 70-69 opening-round win.

The injury knocked the 6-foot-6 forward out of the game early in the second half, after he had scored 20 points, and there was some question about whether he can play tonight.

"I would recommend that he does not play" against Oklahoma, said San Diego State team physician Dr. Lee Brown. "The guy has a great future ahead of him."

Cal-Irvine Coach Bill Mulligan, however, said, "Don't worry about Monday. Kevin will play, even if he has to do it one-handed."

Magee wasn't sure of his status. "I won't know what's happening to me on Monday until Monday," he said.

Tulane made the first postseason appearance in its 72-year basketball history a successful one by beating Louisiana State 83-72 last week. It was also the first victory for the Green Wave in 18 games with LSU.

Waltrip Finesses Way To Win

BRISTOL, Tenn. (AP) — There's no doubt that Darrell Waltrip is an aggressive driver.

Sunday, however, in winning the Valleydale 500 Grand National stock car race for his first triumph of 1982, the defending NASCAR Winston Cup champion, used a bit of finesse as well as a heavy right foot.

"Actually, your strategy is always to start on the pole and lead as long as you can. If somebody passes you, you let them run out front for a while and try to figure out to beat 'em at the end."

"That's pretty much the way it happened this time," Waltrip explained after winning his third straight race on the tough, high-banked half-mile oval of the Bristol International Raceway.

Waltrip started his Buick Regal from the front of the 30-car field and led until the first caution flag came out on lap 111. That's when Dale Earnhardt came on to take command of the grueling 500-lap race. With the exception of a few laps following a pit stop under the green flag on lap 258, Earnhardt stayed ahead of Waltrip, who was having a few handling problems, until lap 398. At that point, Earnhardt tangled with a slower car driven by Gary Balough.

Earnhardt's Ford Thunderbird, struck on the right side by Balough's skidding car, blew a tire and spun into the muddy infield in the third turn. He managed to keep the car going, but was fifth when the green flag fell again with 94 laps remaining.

Earnhardt, who has been struggling to win since late in the 1980 season when he took the point championship, finished second. But it was all Waltrip the rest of the way, with the 35-year-old Franklin, Tenn., driver finishing 13.2 seconds ahead.

Waltrip averaged 94.225 mph in the race marred by just four caution flags — one in the last 350 laps. He won $26,520 from the total purse of $179,000.

The winner said he got a bit too far behind after the first caution flag because of a poor chassis adjustment, but said he felt he would catch Earnhardt at the end "one way or another."

"The adjustment we needed to make would take too long under the green, so I knew we had to wait until the next caution. But it (the race) kind of went according to the way I figured it would," Waltrip explained. "Sometimes when you drive as hard as he was driving, you're liable to have problems. I'm not criticizing his style, but this is a tight racetrack and it's a difficult place to drive that hard and stay out of trouble."

Asked the difference between driving too hard and driving aggressively, as he describes his style, Waltrip grinned and replied: "You have to keep it right on the verge of going too fast without going too fast."

"One of the faster cars, I don't know which one, clipped Balough and sent him spinning," Earnhardt explained of his mishap. "I kept going up the track, hoping I could get by him."

"But he caught me in the door and my car wouldn't run a lick after that."

"These things happen in racing," he added. "We'll just go after them again next week (Sunday) in Atlanta."

Waltrip, who drives the car campaigned by Junior Johnson, was both excited and relieved to have the team's first victory of 1982 in the bag after going out of each of the first two races with mechanical problems while leading.

"We've got some boys down there (in the pits) that needed to win a race so they would know that they knew how," Waltrip noted. "Now that they've got that behind them, I think we're really gonna be tough."

"We got off to a slow start last year and wound up winning 12 races, I don't see why we can't do it (win that many) again this year. Our team seems to win races in bunches, so maybe this will be start of something good."

Morgan Sheppard, driving a Buick, was the only other competitor on the same lap with the top two at the end. Terry Labonte was fourth, one lap behind, and Bobby Allison wound up fifth, two laps down. Both drove Chevrolet Malibus.

over for the round-tripper. The tenth run came in the sixth. Hallow walked, moved to third on Evans' single and scored on a sacrifice fly by Hendley.

Finally, East Carolina got two more in the seventh. Robert Wells reached on an error and David Wells beat out an infield hit. Hallow then doubled to right center, scoring both runners.

Connecticut broke the ice in the fourth, as Tom Rossi opened by reaching on an error and Doug Elliott doubled. Wayne Patenaude grounded out to score Rossi and after Tim Haviland walked to load them up, a single by Mark Grumoli brought in courtesy runner Chris Kuselias.

The other run — the only earned run for the Huskies — came in the sixth. Haviland opened with a double and scored on Grumoli's hit to center.

Elliott led the Connecticut hitting with three, while Patenaude, Grumoli and Pete Vincent each had two.

In addition to the three of Evans, Wells and Robinette, Sorrell and Hallow each had two. The only member of the starting lineup not to get a hit was Robert Wells.

The Pirates return to action this afternoon, hosting George Mason in a 3 p.m. game in the ECAC-South. Fairfield visits on Tuesday and Wednesday in 3 p.m. games, while Mason is back for more conference play on Thursday and Friday. Virginia closes out the consecutive string of games with contests here on Saturday and Sunday.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Take care of matters which you have been neglecting lately. Use your own good judgment now for best results.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You may feel a little despondent today, so take it easy and rebuild your energies. Be happy with yourself.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Use tact in the handling of a private matter and all works out to your satisfaction. Strive for happiness.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Not a good day to expect help from friends who have problems of their own at this time. Show kindness to others.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Taking any risks where your good reputation is at stake today is unwise. Make an effort to alleviate a personal problem.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Study new outlets for increasing your income. Use your own good judgment in making an important business decision.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Don't postpone routine duties at this time because you have an urge to go on a fun spree. Be more cheerful.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) A good day to settle a dispute of long standing with an associate. Strive for more harmony with close ties.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Make plans now to handle the work ahead of you more efficiently. Take time to improve your appearance. Be thoughtful.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Plan sensible recreational activities for the days ahead. A business matter should be handled promptly for best results.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will want to complete whatever has been started but could easily get into a rut by being too dependent on one activity. Expose your progeny to a wider range of activities. Don't neglect ethical training.

Congregations At Convention

The two congregations of Jehovah's Witnesses in Pitt County will join with other congregations from a five county area in eastern North Carolina for a two-day convention in Fayetteville March 20-21.

More than 1,000 people are expected to attend the series of Bible lectures. This will be the first of three conventions scheduled this year for the congregations in this area.

"One of the highlights of the event will be a talk entitled 'Surviving a Generation of Darkness,'" said W.R. Nichols, a Greenville minister. The speaker will be L.R. Beda from the world headquarters of Jehovah's Witnesses in New York.

Nichols said that all meetings are free and the public is invited to attend.

Carolina Symposium

CHAPEL HILL — The fragmented U.S. culture will be examined during this year's three-week Carolina Symposium starting at UNC-Chapel Hill starting Wednesday.

The symposium, "America in Pieces," will bring top-name speakers from around the country to talk about various phases of society — religion and the rise of fundamentalism, special interest groups, ethnicity and education.

Among speakers to be featured are author Tom Wolfe, Detroit Congressman John Conyers, Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist Frances Fitzgerald, former U.S. Sen. Frank Church, former Atlanta Mayor Maynard Jackson and Pat Robertson, founder of the Christian Broadcasting Network and the host of "The 700 Club."

Murphy Evans, chairperson of the symposium, said lectures, workshops, panel discussions, films and photo exhibits will highlight the biennial, student-run event.

Begun in 1927, the Carolina Symposium alternates yearly with the Fine Arts Festival. It is dedicated to issues of national concern.

The symposium events are free and open to the public.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF
1982 Tribune Company Syndicate, Inc.

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦AK63 ♦AQ965 ♦A1093
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♦ Pass 1 NT Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—It is more likely that partner has a club suit than that he has four spades. Nevertheless, we would choose to reverse with two spades. There is a chance that North opted to bypass a weak four-card spade suit, and we might still be able to show clubs conveniently at our next turn.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦73 ♦K963 ♦KQJ8 ♦A109
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
1 ♦ 1 ♦ ?

What action do you take?
A.—You have just been presented with an opportunity to tell partner that much of your strength is in the opponents' suit. Double. Don't worry about the possibility that the opponents may run to spades. Partner might be able to take care of that suit and, anyway, you'll get another chance to bid.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦J106 ♦AQ10 ♦K986 ♦Q109
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
Pass Pass 1 ♦ Pass 2 ♦ Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—Partner's jump as a passed hand is a one-round force, so you must bid again even though you have a minimum opening bid. Because of the balanced nature of your hand and the good intermediates, we prefer two no trump to a raise of partner's suit with only three trumps. The latter action might make partner overvalue his hand and get your side overboard.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦J105 ♦763 ♦J10865 ♦K7
Partner opens the bidding with one spade. What do you respond?
A.—With only 5 high-card points, we would not blame you if you passed. However, we are reluctant to take that action with such good trump support. Since a raise to two spades would be too encouraging, we would respond one no trump to see how partner reacts.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦AJ76 ♦6 ♦AK105 ♦J954
The bidding has proceeded:
East South West North
1 ♥ Dble 1 ♥ Dble
Pass Pass 2 ♥ Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—It looks as if West is trying a baby "psychic" on you. Since partner is marked with spade length for his penalty double of one spade, we would bid two spades to expose West's chicanery.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦J62 ♦A109 ♦KQ863 ♦94
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♦ 1 ♦ 2 ♦ Pass 3 ♦ Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—Partner is showing extra values, and we have something in reserve for our free raise. If partner has a spade stopper, there could be a reasonable play for three no trump, and even five diamonds cannot be ruled out. We would show our interest with a cue-bid of three hearts and leave the decision to partner.

TO ALL INTERESTED AGENCIES, GROUPS AND PERSONS:

The above named city proposes to request the US Department of Housing and Urban Department to release Federal funds under Title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 (PL 93-383) to be used for the following project:

Title: Restoration of the Robert Lee Humber House
Purpose: To structurally repair and aesthetically restore the subject structure, thereby allowing safe, functional public use.

Location: Southeast corner of Fifth and Washington Streets, Greenville, Pitt County, North Carolina.

Cost: The city's share in the improvements is estimated to be $45,000.

It has been determined that such request for release of funds will not constitute an action significantly affecting the quality of the human environment, and accordingly, the above named city has decided not to prepare an Environmental Impact Statement under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (PL 91-190).

The reasons for such decision not to prepare such Statement are as follows:

1) There are no adverse impacts attributable to the proposed project.
2) The proposed project will be of long and short range benefit to the city.

An Environmental Review Record respecting the within project has been made by the above named city which documents the environmental review of the project and more fully sets forth the reasons why such Statement is not required. This Environmental Review Record is on file in the Office of the City Planner and is available for public examination and copying upon request.

No further environmental review of such project is proposed to be conducted, prior to the request for release of Federal funds.

All interested agencies, groups, and persons disagreeing with this decision are invited to submit written comments for consideration by the city to the Office of the Mayor, PO Box 1905, Greenville, NC 27834. Such written comments should be received on or before March 30, 1982, and the city will not request the release of Federal funds or take any administrative action on the within project prior to the date specified in the preceding sentence.

Burnett Brings Back A Parody

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Everything about Eunice is small — her town, her mind and her fortune. The only exception is her dream to be big, but that's sabotaged by her capacity to work, which, of course, is small.

Carol Burnett's satirical sketch character has been expanded tonight into the 90-minute play, "Eunice" on CBS. This bittersweet parody of mid-American life won't even play in Peoria. Some will find it silly, some grating and some offensive.

As comic relief on the long-running "Carol Burnett Show," Eunice and her cast of dolts and numbskulls could work for 10 minutes at a time. But the one-dimensional quality of it all is blinding in long form.

This is not to fault the sensational Miss Burnett and her fine ensemble cast. The problem lies with the idea, which never flourished because the script never offered anything really funny or touching. One has to wonder, though, how such a talented performer as Miss Burnett would sink this low, although she calls "Eunice" "the best thing I've done in a long time."

Miss Burnett plays Eunice. She's a shrill woman with a talent for nothing except finding flaws in everybody else. "Your biggest kick in life is taking the wind out of everybody else's sails," her successful brother tells her.

Miss Burnett says she likes the character because she's human and vulnerable. Actually, she's about as human as the sticky side of a postage stamp. She's full of vulnerability alright, like a spider, and neither are worth watching.

Ken Berry plays her brother, Phillip, who has managed to overcome the stifling, high-decibel family environment by leaving home. His father never comes out of the bathroom and his mother makes him feel guilty for having ambitions. Phillip becomes a successful writer.

Phillip is the sensitive, sensible one, and his life has become a form of taunting to the rest of the family. They can't be proud of him, so they choose to stay in their own egocentric worlds, asking questions but never listening to any of his answers.

Harvey Korman plays Ed Higgins, a beer-guzzling dimwit whose goal is to own a chain of hardware stores so he can finance musicals for Eunice. Their lethargy and ignorance are well-matched, and they get married. It's not destined to be a life of excitement, enthusiasm or bliss.

Vicki Lawrence is Mama. She doesn't want the best for her children, just what she has. Nothing. When Eunice is still in high school, her mother smashes dreams like they were flies on the wall. That's supposed to be one explanation for Eunice turning out to be a loser who

IN RECITAL TOMORROW — Phil A. Thompson, performer on flute, clarinet, and alto saxophone, and Jess Casey, piano, will be guest recital artists at 8:15 p.m. Tuesday, March 16 in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall. The two are on the music faculty of Winthrop College, Rock Hill, S.C., and Casey is Dean of the School of Music there. They will present a program of American music, performing the works of Griffes, Piston, Wilder, Hannay and Bernstein. There is no admission charged and the public is invited to attend.

ABC Signs Affiliates To Another Late-Nighter

By BOB MACY
Associated Press Writer
LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — ABC is planning a late-night, "people-oriented" information program for the fall, and 83 of its affiliate stations have signed up for the show, officials say.

The program will be broadcast after the network's "Nightline" news program, but will not be a rehash of that news program. ABC officials told a meeting of its affiliates on Sunday.

Eighty-three affiliates have signed up for the show, which was described as a sort of "Goodnight, America" program, said Stan Marinoff, program director at WISN-TV, Milwaukee.

He said the show is still in the planning stage and ABC is considering broadcasting it from midnight to 1 a.m. EST, three or four times a week starting in the fall.

Marinoff discussed the show after closed meetings between network officials at ABC, NBC and CBS and TV station executives during the 19th Annual National Association of Television Program Executives conference being held in Las Vegas through Tuesday.

"It will deal with people, not major newsmakers," Marinoff said of the show. "It will be people-oriented rather than event-oriented."

CBS already has announced a news program that will run from 2 a.m. to 5 a.m. CBS affiliates were told Sunday that New York would feed six straight hours of programming so that stations in western time zones would get live, up-to-date news.

Both NBC and CBS have suggested a 60-minute evening newscast but have backed off because of strong objections by affiliates who do not want to give up 30 minutes of local program time.

NBC affiliates also were told the late-night "David Letterman Show" has gained twice the audience in the 18-49 age bracket as "Tomorrow" with Tom Snyder, the previous show in that time slot.

NBC announced it will promote a four-night mini-series on 13th century explorer Marco Polo, which will run in May, said Ron Klayman of WMC-TV in Memphis, Tenn.

He said NBC announced it was developing eight half-hour comedies for the fall season, will shift its "Diff'rent Strokes" comedy to a 10 a.m. time slot, and has ordered more episodes for its new "Fame" series.

Although NBC noted it continued to be a strong second in the Monday through Thursday prime-time ratings, the network acknowledged it had ratings problems on the other three nights, Klayman added.

blames her hopeless, hapless life on everybody else.

Eunice wants to be an actress. But she says she can't go to New York, where Phillip is prospering, because she's chained to her mother and husband at home. It's this thinly disguised fear of failure that becomes the controlling force in her life.

The plot is simple and simple-minded. It's four short plays stretching from 1955 to 1978. The set is the kitchen, where Mama works and dispenses her brand of sarcasm and depression.

It's hard to figure out what audiences will like about this black comedy. Except for Phillip, the characters aren't likeable. The story is nonexistent. There's probably a statement here somewhere, but it either went over our heads or under our feet.

Honor Beatty As A Director

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
BEVERLY HILLS (AP) — The Directors Guild award, often an indicator of Oscar trends, went to Warren Beatty Saturday night for his direction of "Reds," the saga of American journalist John Reed.

Beatty, who rarely attends film industry events, accepted his award at the Beverly Hilton.

He thanked his fellow workers and commented on the making of his film about Reed, an American communist who chronicled the Russian Revolution.

"Only in America could a picture of this subject and this size be made without censorship from government or the people who put up the

Go-Go Band Alive, Well

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Go-Go's are alive and well and recording in Los Angeles.

No fooling. They really are. The all-female rock band, riding high on the music charts, has been beset by a rumor that its lead singer has died — but it's not true, a spokeswoman said Sunday.

"They're here in Los Angeles and they're fine," said Betsy Alexander, national director of publicity for International Record Syndicate. Lead singer Belinda Carlisle and the four other members of the band are cutting a new record, she said.

Switchboards have been flooded by calls to IRS, the Go-Go's label, and at A&M Records, which distributes the Go-Go's No. 1 album "Beauty and the Beat" and top-10 single "We've Got the Beat," she said.

Most callers are teen-agers claiming to have heard on television or radio of Ms. Carlisle's drug-related death, Ms. Alexander said.

She speculated the rumors might be related to comedian John Belushi's death, of a heroin and cocaine overdose, on March 5 in Los Angeles.

The calls "seemed to start right after Belushi," she said. "The only thing I can think is that the girls knew Belushi. John used to hang out with the people in the underground L.A. scene."

money," Beatty said. It was the second straight year that an actor won the Directors Guild award; Robert Redford was named best director of 1980 for "Ordinary People." Redford, like all but two winners in the Guild's 34 years of awards, went on to win the Academy Award for director.

Another actor, Alan Alda, was selected for best direction of a comedy TV series for the "The Life You Save" segment of "M-A-S-H." Other television winners: "Dramatic series — Robert Butler, 'Hill Street Station,' an episode of NBC-TV's 'Hill Street Blues.'"

Musical variety — Emile Ardolino, "The Spellbound Child," of PBS' "Dance in America."

Actuality — Stan Harris, "Command Performance at Ford's Theater — The Stars Meet the President."

Documentaries — Robert Guenette, "Great Movie Stunts: Raiders of the Lost Ark."

Specials — Herbert Wise, "Skokie."

Commercials — Rick Levine.

Tour Set At Rose High

Ninth grade students and their parents are invited to visit Rose High School Wednesday night as a part of tenth grade orientation. They will be given a guided tour of the building from 7:30-8:00 and at 8:00 will meet in the cafeteria for a brief orientation of the school and a discussion concerning tenth grade registration.

Among those available to share information and to answer questions will be Principal Howard Hurt; Mrs. Jean Creech, counselor; Mrs. Marie O'Callaghan, co-ordinator of the program for Gifted and Talented students; Dave Melton, co-ordinator of Resource Services; Brian Sweeney, job placement officer; and representatives from the academic, fine arts and vocational departments.

CANCELLED

The recital of Antonia Dalapas, soprano, with Rosemary G. Fischer, piano, and Anne Searl, flute, scheduled for Sunday, March 21 in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall, has been cancelled.

The program will be rescheduled for a later date, to be announced.
