JUST STEAMING, AS OF NOW — Steam rises from the lava dome in the crater of snow-covered Mount St. Helens. An increased rate of swelling of the crater floor and lava dome indicate a "mild" eruption of the volcano could begin at any time, scientists say. The prediction of an eruption within one to five days was made by the U.S. Geological Survey and the University of Washington geophysics center on Monday night, shortly after a half dozen scientists returned from the crater and reported the swelling. (AP Laserphoto)

Grand Jury Indicts Hospital Official

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Grand Jury has returned two bills of indictment — one alleging embezzlement of $53,113.94, the other for false pretense — against Robert Ingram Barnes Jr., suspended associate director-general services of Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

The indictment for embezzlement states that between February 1980 and November 1981 Barnes was "entrusted by ... Pitt County Memorial Hospital Inc. with various documents, among them being various purchase order forms and duties, among them ... procurement and supervision of procurement of various supplies for use by the surgical unit at said ... hospital.

"And that being so employed and entrusted ... Barnes did unlawfully, willfully, fraudulently, knowingly, corruptly, and feloniously, cause to be produced certain fraudulent and fictitious purchase orders, packing slips, and invoices, whereby certain various and sundry surgical supplies were fictitiously and fraudulently ordered and said to be received by Pitt County Memorial Hospital Inc. from one said fictitious supplier, George Nappe Distributor ..."

The indictment charged that the "supplies were never lawfully ordered, and never received by Pitt County Memorial Hospital Inc. from George Nappe Distributor, thereby causing to be used by Pitt County Memorial Hospital Inc. certain checks in payment thereof for said fictitious goods and surgical supplies ..."

The checks, drawn on Planters National Bank and Trust Company, Greenville, in the account of Pitt County Memorial Hospital Inc., were made to the order of "George Nappe Distributor," according to the indictment.

Twenty-eight check numbers were listed in the indictment. According to the indictment, Barnes embezzled and converted to his own use "the said check ... and did endorse or cause to be endorsed to his own use the said checks and collect the monies then and there belonging to Pitt County Memorial Hospital Inc. ..."

The indictment for false pretense mentioned the same acts as the embezzlement indictment and stated, "The pretense was calculated to deceive and did deceive in that the said Robert Ingram Barnes Jr. did receive the aforementioned (28 numbers) checks and monies therefrom."

Barnes was arrested by a State Bureau of Investigation officer. His first appearance in Superior Court was scheduled for today, with the amount of bond to be set at that time. First announcement of money missing from the hospital was made March 2 in a press conference held at the hospital. Barnes had been suspended the previous Friday.

Guerrillas Hit Funeral Rites

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist guerrillas attacked the funeral of three civil guardsmen killed in a rebel attack the day before, and the mourners fled leaving the coffins in the road, witnesses reported.

No casualties were reported in the gunfight Tuesday between 150 government troops and guerrillas who opened fire on the army-escorted funeral procession on the outskirts of Cuscatancingo, a working-class suburb on the northern side of San Salvador.

The coffins were recovered after the firing subsided. The guardsmen were killed Monday when truckloads of guerrillas attacked army posts in Cuscatancingo and the neighboring suburbs of Mejicanos and Ciudad Delgado. The Defense Ministry said 15 guerrillas died in those assaults, but the rebel Radio Venceremos admitted only two dead and claimed six soldiers were killed.

U.S. Ambassador Deane R. Hinton predicted 500,000 of the estimated 1 million to 1.5 million voters would vote in the election March 28 despite the guerrillas' pledge to disrupt the voting. He said such a turnout would be "substantial."

The election will choose a 60-member constituent assembly that will write a new constitution and replace the U.S.-supported civilian-military junta with an interim government that is to hold elections of a president and a congress.

At a news conference Tuesday, Hinton acknowledged the election could be won by rightists opposed to land redistribution and other reforms attempted by the junta to undercut rebel strength. Salvadoran officials have said they fear a right-wing victory could destroy chances for a political solution to the 29-month-old civil war.

Hinton also said increased U.S. training of the Salvadoran army would give the government a "significant military advantage" in the war over the next few months.

Church and human rights groups say more than 32,000 people have died in fighting since the junta took power in October 1979.

Junta President Jose Napoleon Duarte was quoted today in the Washington Post as saying he expects his Christian Democratic Party to win the election and control any right-wing attempt to reverse the junta's reforms.

West Germans Share In Soviet Freeze Criticism

By ALISON SMALE
Associated Press Writer

BONN, West Germany (AP) — West Germany said today the unilateral missile freeze announced by Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev was aimed at undermining preparations for U.S. missile installation in Western Europe.

A government statement on Brezhnev's announcement of the freeze Tuesday in the European part of the Soviet Union said the moratorium "is dependent on the West refraining from preparations to deploy American Pershing 2 and cruise missiles."

NATO is to deploy 108 Pershing 2 and 464 cruise missiles beginning in late 1983 unless Moscow by then reduces or scraps its arsenal of SS-20 missiles threatening Western Europe.

Government spokesman Kurt Becker said Brezhnev's proposal merely repeated "in content" previous Soviet suggestions of a moratorium on missile deployment.

The Bonn statement said Brezhnev's announcement "also aims to prevent the deployment of American weapons in Europe independent of the Geneva talks (to limit nuclear arms in Europe) and to maintain the current imbalance in this area in favor of the Soviet Union."

In Stockholm, leading Swedish politicians split over the Brezhnev proposal as the Swedish Parliament opened its foreign policy debate.

"I regard this proposal as definitely favorable. It is excellent if the superpowers offer to downgrade the arms race, which can initiate a process that may result in real agreements and mutual measures," Swedish opposition Social Democratic Party leader Olof Palme said.

Swedish Foreign minister Ola Ullsten was more guarded in his approach and said that he "welcomed any sign which may lead to disarmament even if amounts to straws so small they are hardly noticed."

"It is hard to grasp the importance of the Soviet proposal. The Soviets have already deployed 300 SS-20 intermediate-range missiles that can reach targets in Europe and there is reason to believe that the Soviets actually have finished that program. It is against that background the Soviet offer must be judged," Ullsten said.

Echoing a statement by President Reagan to the Oklahoma legislature Tuesday, Ullsten went on to say: "What Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev offers is a sort of moratorium to maintain Soviet superiority."

"A positive attitude to the Soviet offer must be coupled with a large number of reservations and with the utmost watchfulness," Ullsten said.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher told the House of Commons in London Tuesday she rejected Brezhnev's overture for two reasons: it "freezes the total superiority of the Soviet Union in these particular theater nuclear weapons," and the Soviet missiles "can just as well be targeted on this country and the rest of Europe from beyond the Urals as they can this side of them."

A spokesman for the nuclear disarmament movement in the Netherlands, Gijs von der Fuhr, said his group welcomes "every proposal aimed at freezing the deployment or development of nuclear weapons systems." He said they hoped Brezhnev's moratorium "will lead to broader and more comprehensive steps to stop the nuclear arms race."

To counter the Soviet missile buildup and to pressure the Soviet Union into reducing it, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization agreed to station 572 U.S. Pershing 2 and Tomahawk cruise missiles in Britain, the Netherlands, Belgium, West Germany and Italy beginning in 1983. But there is strong opposition to accepting them in all but Italy.

The United States and the Soviet Union have been negotiating for 3½ months in Geneva to limit the missile deployment, but the talks recessed Tuesday until May 20 with no indication of any progress toward an agreement. The United States has been demanding removal of all land-based medium-range missiles from all of Europe, while the Soviet Union argued for a joint moratorium on new missile deployment.

The Reagan administration claims that the Soviet Union has a 6-to-1 missile advantage over NATO forces in Europe. The Soviets say this does not include missiles aboard U.S. bombers and submarines threatening the Soviet Union and that these even up the ratio.

Eligibility Is Said In Doubt

By STUART SAVAGE

There is some question whether or not Thomas B. Brandon, who announced plans Monday to seek Democratic nomination to the 1st Congressional District seat now held by Rep. Walter Jones, will be able to continue his contractual legal services for the Mid-East Commission if he seeks election to Congress.

Brandon, a Robersonville attorney, declined to comment today on the matter. However, he said he would make a statement following a meeting Thursday night of the Mid-East Commission's board.

Spokesmen for the Mid-East Commission said this morning that Brandon, under contract to provide legal services in connection with the commission's program for the agency, may fall under the Hatch Act, which prohibits federal employees from campaigning for public office.

The commission's activities are supported in part by federal funds. The spokesman noted that Brandon may receive up to $11,421 a year under the contract, and that 75 percent of the funds come from grants under the federal Older Americans Act.

The spokesman, saying the Mid-East board is expected to make a ruling on the matter Thursday night, noted that Brandon may

Leslie Re-Elected Chairman At Hospital Board's Meeting

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

G. Harry Leslie was re-elected chairman of the Pitt County Hospital Board of Trustees during the board's annual meeting Tuesday night.

Leroy James is vice chairman; Mamie Smith, secretary; Marvin Baldrée, treasurer, and D.T. Jones, assistant treasurer. Other members of the executive committee are Moses Moye, W.J. Senter, Noel Lee and Dr. Frank Longino.

The board welcomed three new members and said goodbye and thank you to four. Welcomed were J. Reid Hooper of Greenville, B. Gene Paramore of Grimesland and Henry Humphries of Washington, N.C. Hooper and Paramore are Pitt County Commissioners appointees, while Humphries was appointed by the UNC Board of Governors. Awards were given to outgoing trustees Mildred Indorf and Robert Monk Sr., both for service since March 1976, and to Emphraim Smith and Glenn Strickland for service since 1973.

Jackson Builders of Goldsboro, low bidder on plans to build an office-education center on the hospital grounds, was approved by the board. Jackson's price is $287,495.

A pastoral care counseling program will be set up at the hospital, with a board-appointed committee working with the staff hired to offer the patient service. The program will be reviewed annually to be sure it's true to its original purpose, chaplaincy committee chairman Noel Lee told the board.

Approval was given to a plan for the hospital to self-insure losses due to employee injury, with St. Paul's Insurance Co. handling the claims. This switch away from workman's compensation supplied through the state will save the hospital $35,000 to $37,000 the first year and possibly $65,000 the next year, Dr. W.J. Senter, committee chairman investigating the possibility, said. The hospital would be responsible for the first $50,000 in claims, with the rest to be underwritten by St. Paul's.

A gift of $175,000 from the Duke Endowment to help with hospital renovations was announced.

Capital expenditures of $60,700 for budgeted items (six infusion pumps, a photocopier, a respirator, a ventilator for small children and an infant transport unit) were approved, as were non-budgeted items of $63,903 (furniture for new rooms, the cost of which is being covered by gifts to the hospital). The purchase of two plate embossers tied in to the hospital computer system was also approved. Their combined cost is $26,000.

Branch Banking and Trust Co. was accepted by the board as the repository of funds for the next two years. The bank is to pay the hospital the current rate of interest on whatever amount is in the hospital's accounts each evening. The current rate is about 13 percent.

Building Committee Chairman Charles Gaskins reported that the building committee has heard presentations from eight different firms concerning providing the expertise needed from various disciplines to help the hospital make long-range decisions for future growth and development. Two of these firms will be called back, he said, for further consultation before one is recommended to the board for selection. Director Jack Richardson called the board's attention to two new publications: the hospital's annual report and a new patient information publication offered to each patient as he or she enters the hospital. The annual report, besides its stated function, serves as a good recruiting and gifts' solicitation tool, he said.

Associate Director Rick Gilstrap said the opening of some new beds in February, at least for the time being, "diffused some of the problems getting patients in and reduced the number of turnaways."

The hospital's next accreditation survey is set for mid-April, with preparations having been made all along, Gilstrap indicated. He explained how department managers meet the day after each board meeting to be informed of board decisions and discussions.

The board was informed that the Pitt County Grand Jury has handed down indictments accusing now-suspended Hospital Associate Director Robert I. Barnes Jr. of embezzlement

Rezoning Activity Light At Commission's Meet

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Rezoning activity was light at Tuesday's Greenville Planning & Zoning Commission meeting as only one zoning change was considered and recommended to the City Council for action.

Board members, following brief discussion, voted to recommend that the council approve a request by Tucker Farms Inc. to rezone 10.42 acres north of the 264 Bypass from highway commercial to R-6 (residential). The property is located south of Shenandoah Subdivision and east of Baker Heights Subdivision.

Planning director Bobby Roberson said the R-6 zone along Tobacco Road will allow the development of single family, duplex and multi-family units. Clarence Tugwell, board chairman, said he viewed the rezoning from commercial to residential as an upgrading of the property's zoning classification.

The commission endorsed a suggestion that the name of North Park Drive, located off Staton Road east of the Spunwind facility, be changed to Staton Court. Roberson said the name change was suggested by the post office since there is already a park drive located here.

The planning director said a name change is justified when there are duplicating street names that might tend to confuse the public. The street is located in the North Park Industrial Center, a small industrial development involving five or six lots. In other business, commissioners approved a request by Linwood Stroud for preliminary plat approval of Woody Village, located off the Belvoir Highway on State Road 1447. Roberson said the development, containing just over three acres, will contain six mobile home lots of 6,000 square feet each.

The section has city water but sewer service is not available, it was pointed out.

The board approved a recommendation that the filing fee for rezoning petitions be increased from $50 to $100. In raising the fee charge, the commission stipulated that the $100 fee would cover a maximum of 10 notifications to adjoining property owners. The cost of all notifications necessary over 10 would be borne by the rezoning petitioner at a rate of $10 each.

Roberson said there have been some problems in assuring that property owners who adjoin proposed rezoning tracts receive notification. He said in order to send certified letters, where the recipient must sign for the mail, it is necessary to increase the fee to cover legal advertisements and the cost of numerous notifications. Roberson added that rezoning matters usually average 10 notifications per request.

Planner Skip Browder said the staff hopes to have a draft ready soon of a proposed R-6N (residential) neighborhood revitalization zone

Sutton-Allcox Vows Spoken

VANCEBORO — Chapman United Methodist Church was the scene of the wedding ceremony of Cheryl Ann Allcox and Michael Lynn Sutton on Saturday, March 6, at 3 p.m. The Rev. Haywood Martin performed the double ring ceremony.

Piano music was presented by Mary Adams and Sue Heath was soloist.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Allcox of Route 1, Vanceboro, the bride was given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Sutton of Route 1, Stokes. The father of the bridegroom was best man.

Sharon Williford of Greenville was honor attendant, Sandra Clark of Graham was bridesmaid and the junior bridesmaid was Tracy Haddock of Wilmington. Amy Paramore of Greenville was flower girl.

Bradon Sutton of Stokes was ring bearer and ushers included Wesley Deal and Ricky Hill, both of Greenville.

Racheal Bright of Vanceboro was mistress of ceremonies.

The bride wore a formal gown of white organza over peau de soie designed with a high neckline encircled with scalloped chantilly lace. The empire bodice was overlaid in chantilly lace beaded with pearls. The full split bishop sleeves are enhanced with an inserted fitted sleeve of French chantilly lace and cuffs. The modified A-line skirt was accentuated by a flounce of pleated organza that extended to an attached cathedral train. The flounce was topped with scalloped chantilly lace and edged with lace. Appliques of lace were scattered over the skirt and train.

The couple will live in Greenville after a Florida wedding trip.

The bride is a graduate of Chocowinity High School and is employed by C.H. Edwards, Inc. The bridegroom graduated from North Pitt High School and Pitt Community College. He works at Procter and Gamble.

The parents of the bride gave a reception following the wedding and was held in the church fellowship hall. Refreshment tables were covered with lace cloths and held an arrangement of tulips, carnations, baby's breath and greenery, accented with candles.

Tresure Whitford presided at the bridal register and Sybil McLawhorn served

Easter Eggs Are Good Fun and Good Food
Brightly-colored Easter eggs can lend a festive air to your holiday celebrations and make for good, nutritious eating at the same time.

Have an engrossing Easter egg hunt and have egg salad sandwiches afterwards. Seasoned with flavorful meats or cheeses and garnished with crisp lettuce, celery or cucumbers, egg sandwiches can lead you on a search too as you look for just the right combination of breads, spreads and other ingredients to make your perfect sandwich.

Here are a few hints on buying and preparing eggs that should help your Easter egg season go smoothly.

When buying eggs, look for the USDA grademark which lets you know the interior quality of the egg and the appearance and condition of the shell. The higher the grade, the higher the yolk and white of the egg will stand when broken out of the shell.

For had cooking choose those eggs which have been in the refrigerator the longest — or buy them several days ahead of time. When hard-cooked they will be easier to peel.

Put a single layer of eggs in a saucepan, add enough water to cover the eggs, about one inch, and bring water to a boil. Cover the pan, remove it from the heat and let it stand 15 minutes. Cool the eggs promptly in cold water.

This will also help make the eggs easier to peel and will help prevent green discoloration between the yolk and white. This discoloration is only a harmless chemical reaction between the sulfur in the white and the iron in the yolk.

To color eggs, put about one-half cup of water in a small container like a custard cup or cereal dish. Add one envelope of a fruit flavored drink powder and stir until dissolved. Place a

Dear Abby

He Wasn't Ready For Engagement

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I tried to surprise my boyfriend with an engagement ring for Valentine's Day, and he refused to accept it. I was really hurt. We're not kids, Abby. I'm 27 and he's 26, and we've been dating for nearly two years. We're both working, but I make more than he makes, so I figured I could better afford to give him a ring. So I went ahead and bought one. I wasn't really trying to pressure him into getting married right away, but I guess he thought I was because he's cooled off quite a bit since then. Do you think I was too pushy? How should I handle things now?

HURTING IN HOUSTON

DEAR HURTING: Apparently your boyfriend wasn't ready for a formal engagement, which is what a ring usually signifies. Back off, and let him call the signals. Your valentine has a rather pushy ring to it.

DEAR ABBY: I have a suggestion to all those wives who complain because their husbands watch football all weekend. My solution proved to be a salvation to our relationship and to my sanity. I calmly, without giving him any notice, began to plan activities away from home during the time football games were being watched. This way, I and my children had something fun to do, it kept the children out of my husband's hair, and I didn't have to nag or be his servant while he was glued to the tube. The kids and I have entertained ourselves with concerts, movies, horseback riding, picnics, etc. After a while, my husband started to feel left out. Also, without me there to provide snacks and background noise, football watching wasn't that much fun. He still watches football, but not nearly so much. About half the time he joins us, and we're all much happier. So the solution is simple: Learn to entertain yourself. You'll be setting a great example for the kids in the process.

EX-FOOTBALL WIDOW

hands to crackle the shell all over. Peel the shell off and slice or chop the egg. Then, choose your favorite ingredients to make into a sandwich.

A wide variety of breads, spreads and other ingredients can enliven an egg sandwich.

Choose from the following for your own special sandwich:

- Breads — whole wheat, rye, enriched white, oatmeal, onion rolls.
- Spreads — mayonnaise, salad dressing, butter, margarine, mustard.
- Meats — sliced cooked corned beef, ham, turkey, chicken, roast beef, deviled ham or sandwich spreads.
- Vegetables — lettuce, tomatoes, onion, celery, cucumbers.
- Cheese — sliced or spreads.

Remember, too, the wise ways of handling food with clean hands and utensils and refrigerating leftovers. Food left standing at room temperature can foster the growth of bacteria which can cause food poisoning — particularly when eggs are mixed with dressings.

Enjoy your Easter eggs — it'll be fun finding them and fun eating them.

Watch State Spending

It can't be too surprising that state revenue collections are not up to expectations, given the current state of the economy.

Gov. Hunt doesn't see any additional funds available for a legislative budget session in June.

"I hope the economy will get better so we can give some additional pay increase," the governor said last week, "but I cannot say that I'm optimistic about that."

An analysis of collections show they were about 1 percent below the projected level for this fiscal year. If things continue like that the revenues would be some $30 million under the anticipated level.

That doesn't mean revenues are under last year's, only that the increase is running less than what had been projected. That, however, is a matter of concern to state government.

While it is far from disaster time in government, it is a time to watch spending carefully. State officials should save where ever they can to offset any revenue losses. We can hope and even expect better financial times later this year, but the time for state agencies to trim spending is now, so that cuts won't be more severe later on.

Belushi Death A Tragedy

It is not rare to read of a celebrity who learned about drugs the hard way, kicked the habit and is able to draw on his or her experiences to urge others not to go the same way.

Actor-Comedian John Belushi was not so fortunate. At age 33 he is dead and the coroner's office has attributed the death to "acute cocaine and heroin intoxication."

We can only consider what might have been — that Belushi could have been one of those who lived to go on providing our society with many more years of entertainment.

For most of us there has been a day or a moment when events could have changed to mean the difference between disaster and continuing a useful life.

THIS AFTERNOON

The Uncertainties

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Some answers clear up some confusion concerning this spring's primary election in North Carolina — such as when the election will be held, and whether absentee ballots can be used — but even then a great deal of uncertainty remains.

The confusion over the date and the use of absentee ballots comes from the lengthy delay and changing of district lines by the General Assembly. Until the state was properly re-districted (to the satisfaction of the U.S. Justice Department) the filing deadlines and election rules could not be determined.

The big question still to be answered, however, is whether Tar Heel voters will be choosing members of the General Assembly for two year terms or four year terms.

One of the amendments to the State Constitution which is up for approval or rejection during the primary election would change the current two-year terms to four-year terms.

Big Change

If the change is approved, those winning nomination and then election next November would take office on January 1, 1983, and remain in the General Assembly until the end of 1986.

Not since 1835 has there been a change in the terms of office in the North Carolina General Assembly. From 1776 until 1835, legislators served one-year terms.

All 120 seats in the House of Representatives and 50 seats in the Senate are up for election at the same time.

This practice of itself is one of the principal reasons for strong opposition to changing from two-year terms to four-year terms. If longer terms were implemented some critics contend that a staggered system would be desirable to keep from having a complete or nearly complete turnover at one time.

Others argue just as strongly against having a staggered system with four-year terms. Holding the election of legislators at a time when neither the national presidency nor the state's governorship is on the Opponents, including former governors and led by a former legislator, focus on the tendency of the Legislature to become professional. Longer terms will provide more distance from the public and allow legislators to build power bases in Raleigh to remain in office longer periods.

Other changes in the State Constitution on the ballot include:

- Allowing governmental units to issue revenue bonds to help pay for building projects at private colleges and universities, providing funds to be repaid by the private schools, but attracting investors because the return would be tax-free.
- Allowing governments to build transit facilities such as airport hangars and shiploading terminals, then lease them to private operators.
- Bypassing the Court of Appeals so that rate cases by public utilities companies (Please turn to Page 5) line means a better election to some since the momentary personal popularity of a strong candidate doesn't affect the outcome. Staggering four-year terms would cause half the membership to run during state and national campaigns.

Legislators who are pushing for the change to four years in office say that campaigning has become increasingly expensive, and that they must now spend so much time in Raleigh attending legislative matters that little time is left for campaigning. They also believe longer terms will provide a measure of insulation from immediate public reaction at the polls to decisions which are made which might prove unpopular.

Opposition

There is organized opposition to the change in terms, while there is no visible support other than from legislators themselves.

The 'Laid Back' People

LOS ANGELES — As many people may have been aware the end of the world was to have taken place last Wednesday, March 10.

The prediction was based on the so-called "Jupiter Effect," when all the planets lined up on one side of the sun and were supposed to cause earthquakes and volcano disruptions.

I happened to be in L.A. on March 10, which is the best place to be if the world is going to come to an end, because Southern Californians seem to take things like this more in stride than any people I know.

All the stuff about them being laid back does happen to be true.

On the morning of March 10, I started making my farewell telephone calls to dear friends. I called up Newcombe first.

"Well, Newcombe, I guess you know what day this is."

"Wednesday?" he said, taking a wild guess.

"It's the day the world is coming to an end."

"You mean the L.A."

"There is no Sunday night. The world is going to end today."

"But what about the caterer? He's already ordered the avocado dip and potato chips."

"I'm sorry you went to all that trouble, but our fate is in the stars. The planets are against us."

"You want me to tell that to a Los Angeles caterer?"

"Don't tell him anything. When the earthquake comes, he'll disappear with his avocado dip and never be the wiser."

I then called my next friend, Angie Dickinson:

"Angie," I said, "today's the end of the world. Would you like to come over to the hotel for a final drink?"

"Oh, my God, I'm glad you called. I read about it yesterday and made a 3 o'clock appointment with my hairdresser."

Before I could make the next call, the phone rang.

"My name is Peterson and I'm with the B.H. Real Estate Company. As you know the world is going to come to an end today so I'm happy to announce one of my clients in the San Fernando Valley is willing to sacrifice his $6-million, two-bedroom ranchouse for $5 million."

"Suppose the world comes to an end before I get to look at the house?"

"Then the $5 million asking price will be negotiable."

Dodgers haven't signed Fernando Valenzuela yet?"

"It's worse than that. We can expect a Jupiter Effect and we're all going to be swallowed into the ground."

"That happened to me a couple of months ago during a mudslide at my house. I was sucked in right where my Jacuzzi was. But it always sounds much worse than it is. The trick is to take a deep breath and fight your way to the top of the muck."

"Goodbye, Rick. You made my stay on Earth worthwhile."

My next call was to Bernheim:

"Alain," I said, "I called to say au revoir."

"What do you mean, au revoir?" he said. "We're giving a dinner for you Sunday night."

As March has been designated "Mental Retardation Month," Mayor Percy Cox has proclaimed the week of March 14-20 as "Mental Retardation Week."

In observance of this month, we wish to make the public aware of the services available to developmentally delayed children in Pitt County. There will be open house at the four Pitt County child development centers March 24-26 and 29 from 9:30 a.m. to noon. These centers include: United Cerebral Palsy Center, Winterville-Ayden-Gritton Child Development Center (WAG), Farmville Child Development Center, and Remedial Educational Activity Program (REAP).

On behalf of the 3,000 mentally retarded citizens in Pitt County, the Association for Retarded Citizens-Pitt County wishes to say "thank you" to all who have helped to enrich the lives of these very special people. It is because of a caring community that these citizens are at last being accepted as worthwhile.

Every five minutes a mentally retarded baby is born in the United States. Slightly more than 100,000 children born this year will be diagnosed as mentally retarded at some time in their life. Mental retardation is a lifelong condition — not a disease. These persons are not all children — they are of all ages.

Among God's children, there is no place for inaction or isolation of others. There is a place for giving and accepting. Once treated as outcasts, persons with mental retardation are now beginning to be accepted as members of the community. With proper training, at least 85 percent of all persons with mental retardation can support themselves to some degree and can become self-respecting and respected, contributing members of the communities in which they live and work.

VERY GOOD--BUT DON'T LET UP ON IT!

Real Intent Is Disclosed

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Mieczyslaw Rakowski, Poland's "moderate" deputy prime minister, confided to a friend in a taped conversation nine days after the Soviet-ordered clampdown that martial law "has to last quite a long time, not a month or two but maybe a year or even two."

The surfacing of the Dec. 22 taped conversation in which Rakowski described Solidarity leaders as "little s--- faces" was made available both here and to the Vatican by pro-Western Polish sources. It shows a stunning variance between the public pronouncements of Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski (designed to soothe the West) and the real intentions as disclosed by Rakowski.

Rakowski's harsh prediction of two years of martial law is being followed by unmistakable signs of Soviet crackdown that appear aimed at returning Poland to its pre-1956 state of total subjugation to Soviet power and ideological purity. In 1956, when anti-Russian, anti-communist hatreds threatened a Polish uprising against the Soviets, the Kremlin bought peace with special dispensations for Polish workers, farmers and intellectuals that set it apart from other Soviet satellites.

One of the darker results of Jaruzelski's visit to Moscow early this month was a decision, not yet reported in the West, to place Soviet industrial experts in strategic sectors of Poland's bankrupt, decaying economy. That smacks of a return to Stalinism, when the Soviets tried to direct and influence the economics of its European satellites by on-the-scene control. The rupture with Moscow by Yugoslavia's Marshal Tito was a direct result.

This crucial economic intrusion was ambiguously mentioned in the communique following Jaruzelski's talks with Soviet president Leonid Brezhnev. The communique spoke of "mutually-beneficial cooperation in a number of industries" and disclosed that "agreements have been concluded."

Whether the Soviet effort to return Poland to pre-1956, dismantling major economic, political and ideological concessions gradually gained over the past 26 years, had been agreed to before the Dec. 13 martial law decree is unimportant. But a close reading of the taped Dec. 22 conversation with Rakowski, the so-called moderate leader in Jaruzelski's strong-arm government, reveals a lot more than Jaruzelski was saying publicly.

Rakowski spoke testily of the Catholic Church, the most powerful unifying force in Poland, and called its terms for settling the Solidarity issue "impossible." "There is no return; that is, we have to search for new solutions, we are not sure whether we will find them but... the Church must also look" Rakowski said. Ten weeks later Polish-born Pope John Paul II is still appealing for Jaruzelski-Solidarity talks, and the release of Solidarity leader Lech Walesa. The arrest of at least two Catholic priests presages a crackdown on the Church.

Rakowski's remarks also foretold the trials of Solidarity leaders that have now been announced by the Polish government. He attacked "a narrow group of advisers who pushed Solidarity... in the direction of disaster and I consider that those people... should be made to answer for that."

The prospect that Jaruzelski — or Moscow — would allow a revival of Solidarity in any form was obliterated by Rakowski: "...we should not reactivate trade unions. Neither should we undertake any efforts to create a renewed Solidarity... (it would mean) the same big mess in factories... protests, telexes, work stoppages, discussions."

It is inconceivable that Rakowski, a Jaruzelski loyalist, would have spoken as he did without authority from the Kremlin, the source of planning for successive stages of the Communism Party crackdown in Poland.

He praised and defended Jaruzelski, suggest (as he did in a public interview and in Bonn when he called on West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher) that Jaruzelski's martial law saved Poland from Soviet military intervention. That is the message Jaruzelski and Moscow want the West to swallow. Rakowski called his boss, the general, "a man of high culture, a man speaking beautiful Polish who writes very nicely." That is high praise from the former editor-in-chief of Polityka.

But Rakowski's chilling words about Solidarity's leaders, words that clearly pointed in December to what would happen in March, reveal more than a courtier's flattery. "I don't even have any resentment to those fools in Solidarity," Rakowski said. "Little s--- faces, in essence, as that (Zbigniew) Bujak and others... It amused me to see how they were received in West European salons by political leaders... I do not have resentments over all of that."

Rakowski's self-described "resentments" are for "my friends" among Polish intellectuals, "that corps from which I grew up and in which I grew up, you understand... that field has to be cleaned up."

Those words look prophetic as Poland's Soviet masters move, slowly at first: to end the special dispensations granted Poland alone in 1956, to impose ideological purity on Poland's degenerate Communist Party, and to liquidate "enemies of socialism."

Supply Side Isn't Supplying

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The trouble with the supply side economic policy as currently practiced, it appears, is that it just isn't supplying.

"Too much money goes into interest expense — and not enough into new cars, new homes, new factories that create jobs, and needed public works," said James Stewart, chairman of Lone Star Industries.

Stewart said it in advertisements placed in 21 newspapers. "Like you," he said, "we support the fight against inflation — but not by destroying the economy with high, erratic interest rates."

He isn't the only one to advertise his feelings. Real estate and homebuilder groups, both of which have been devastated by high interest rates, have also taken out ads to screech their anger and opposition.

Increasingly, business' displeasure with high interest is turning into hostility in speeches, interviews, newsletters, letters to Congressmen, advisories to clients and, above all, in a wholesale reluctance to invest.

President Reagan himself has revealed his irritation about the high rates, although promising a sharp decline by later this year.

Business people, lenders especially, seem far less convinced of that outcome, and that very attitude may be part of the problem. Because of uncertainty, lenders now seek premiums on loans they make, premiums that are reflected in the huge spread between inflation and interest rates, now more than 6 percentage points, the highest in many decades.

Those high rates are generally regarded as a major, and probably primary, reason for a rare decline in plant and equipment spending plans, which were among the economic goals most desired by Reagan.

In the Reagan scenario, tax cuts would put more money into corporate treasuries for modernizing and expanding plants, which then would be able to turn out products at a lower per-unit cost. But what tax cuts give, high borrowing costs appear to take away.

"Real interest rates would have to drop sharply and quickly to reignite economic activity," says Salomon Brothers Inc., the securities house where Henry Kaufman, the interest rate guru, presides over the economic staff. "This drop is highly unlikely," it adds.

While it is possible that the decline in capital spending plans is too easily blamed on high interest rates, few business consultants dismiss them as a cause. Many of the better known forecasting organizations now foresee declines of several percentage points in capital spending for 1982. All mention high interest costs; some blame them entirely.

At the same time that many major companies are in a holding pattern, neither advancing nor retreating, others are slipping into grim money troubles and a few are just a step or so from insolvency.

Business failures as measured by Dun & Bradstreet are more than 50 percent higher than a year ago, and small businesses recently listed interest rates at the top problem in a survey by the Federation of Independent Business. Overall, says Morgan Guaranty Trust, "corporate reliance upon short-term debt was pushed in 1981 to an all-time high." Forced to refinance that debt, companies must continue to pay dearly.

With such a fight on their hands, most businesses seem occupied with the immediate rather than the future — with just getting by or retrenching. Why expand when customers too are probably less liquid than indicators portray? A potential car buyer, for example, might have savings, but those savings also might be locked into a pension program.

In fact, asks John Wright, an investment adviser and manager of large portfolios, why invest in a lot of bricks, machinery and problems when you can buy bonds, sit back and effortlessly make as much or more?

As Stewart sees it, there is enough blood around for just one patient but there are two patients in bed.

Which are we going to save, he asks? Federal Reserve high interest policy, which his ad portrays as a vampire? Or the U.S. economy, which he depicts as a worried Uncle Sam?

St. Patrick's Day

Over 1500 years ago a runaway slave with little education converted an entire country to Christianity. The historical figure of Patricius Magonus Sucatus, a Romano-Briton, is now shrouded in the mists of time. But the legends of Ireland's St. Patrick abound. He supposedly expelled all snakes — the symbols of evil — from Eire permanently. The shamrock, it is claimed, was used by the saint to explain the Trinity. Other legends concern matrimony, at that time still permitted to priests. In an early concession to feminism, St. Patrick supposedly established the custom that nuns could do the proposing every leap year. But Patrick himself — although the grandson of a priest — turned down St. Bridget's offer and remained celibate.

DO YOU KNOW — What religion was practiced in Ireland before Christianity?

'Liberators' Intercepted

By MIKE McQUEEN
Associated Press Writer
MIAMI (AP) — Fifteen people planning to invade Haiti with pistols and shotguns were being escorted back to Miami Beach today after FBI agents arrested them en route to the Caribbean nation, authorities said.

Federal agents, hitchhiking on a Coast Guard cutter, moved in and arrested the 15 shortly before nightfall Tuesday, charging them with violating U.S. neutrality laws by setting sail from America to invade a friendly nation.

It was the second alleged attempt this year to overthrow the regime of Haitian President-for-Life Jean-Claude Duvalier, known as "Baby Doc." The first attempt, in January, also was stymied. Officials declined to speculate whether the two were linked.

The Coast Guard cutter moved in after the Wanderlust III and the Sassoon, both 35-foot boats, left the Florida Keys, FBI and U.S. Customs agents, who had been waiting several days for the boats to leave, ordered them intercepted 5 to 10 miles south of Marathon Key, said William Nettles, an FBI agent in Miami.

The federal agents had been following up tips in Miami and Key West about the invasion, Nettles said.

Customs spokesman Jim Dingfelder in Miami said six handguns, three rifles and four shotguns were among the weapons seized. They included .22-caliber rifles and .30-caliber carbines, he added.

"We'd been working with the FBI on this," Dingfelder said. "We went to the Coast Guard to have them allow us to get on one of their boats. And we just waited for them (the alleged liberators) to make the first move."

Many of the suspects arrested were from the Miami area, he said.

"They had not been down there (the Keys) for a protracted period of time. Many came from other cities, a good part from (near Miami)," Dingfelder said.

Nettles said officials weren't sure if the incident was linked to the January invasion attempt by Bernard Sansaricq and his followers.

"At this point, we really don't know," Nettles said. "I wouldn't want to speculate." Sansaricq and six of his followers have been indicted by a federal grand jury in Miami on the same charges of violating U.S. neutrality laws. His trial is scheduled for March 22.

Sansaricq, a Cooper City, Fla., gas station owner, mustered 35 Haitian exiles at South Caicos, in the British Turks and Caicos Islands, for his planned overthrow, officials say.

On Jan. 9, Haitian government troops clashed with Sansaricq's eight-man advance party on the island of Tortuga off Haiti's northern coast. Three rebels were killed, the government reported.

The following day, Sansaricq led his group from South Caicos with the announced intention of joining the fight.

But two days later, the boat's motor died about 28 miles from Mole St. Nicolas, the western end of the northern tip of Haiti, Sansaricq later told The Fort Lauderdale Sun-Sentinel.

The Coast Guard responded to the boat's distress signal and ferried Sansaricq's forces to the United States.

HEALTH BOARD

Dr. Sam T. White II, chairman of the Pitt County Board of Health, announced that there will be a board meeting Thursday at 7 p.m. in the conference room of the Health Department.

Pathologists Back Retaining Noguchi

LOS ANGELES (AP) — All 13 autopsy surgeons at the coroner's office have signed a letter to county officials supporting their boss, Coroner Thomas Noguchi, as "a competent forensic pathologist and a decent man."

Dr. Eugene Carpenter, a longtime pathologist with the department, said Tuesday he drafted the letter and the other pathologists signed it.

The Board of Supervisors voted unanimously Thursday to suspend Noguchi for 30 days starting March 19 unless he answered six charges in a two-page personal letter by 5 p.m. today.

In the hand-delivered letter, Noguchi was accused of mismanaging his department and allowing private business activities to interfere with operations in the department. The letter also said his statements about the deaths of actors William Holden and Natalie Wood demonstrated "unprofessional speculation."

Meanwhile, the county grand jury was expected to release a report today on its audit of Noguchi's department. An earlier audit prepared by Hufford recommended that Noguchi be fired and the coroner's office be absorbed into the Sheriff's Department.

Carpenter said the surgeons believe Assistant Coroner Richard Wilson — not Noguchi — should be the target of the county's investigation.

Carpenter suggested Wilson, who was appointed in 1976 to give Noguchi administrative help, had failed in that task.

"Our belief is that Wilson not only did not put the department in order, but botched things up

Baha' is Eye Elections

The Baha'is of eastern North Carolina will meet in the coffee house of Mendenhall Student Center, East Carolina University, Sunday from 2 to 6 p.m. to discuss their local communities' organization for the upcoming annual elections.

The meeting, hosted by the newly formed ECU Baha'i Club, is being conducted by the Eastern North Carolina District Teaching Committee.

Every locality in which nine or more adult believers live elects a Local Spiritual Assembly (limited to nine members) on April 21, the first day of Ridvan, the festival commemorating the Declaration of Baha'u'llah, prophet-founder of the Baha'i faith. Since the faith has no clergy, the spiritual assemblies are responsible for and supervise local Baha'i affairs.

Participating in Sunday's meeting will be Dr. Adrienne Reeves, an educator from Charleston, S.C. As a Baha'i Auxiliary Board member, she is responsible for propagation of the faith in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida and the Bahamas.

The local Baha'i contacts are Jeremy and Karen Tarlo, 752-4483.

College Costs High? Students Told Don't Give Up

By BEN OLAN
(Third in a Series)
"The first thing I tell a high school senior or junior now is 'don't despair,'" says Tally Wickstrom, executive director of the College Scholarship Service. "If the seniors who need it haven't filled out an application for financial aid, it's not too late. Do it now! Despite the government cutbacks, there's still quite a bit of money available." High school seniors should keep in constant touch with the financial aid officers of the colleges to which they've applied, advises Joseph Sciame of St. John's University, president of the New York State Financial Aid Administrators Association. "We are reassuring students that funds will not dry up in one or two semesters. The financial aid system is still in motion," he said. Says Harold Higgenbotham Jr., director of financial aid at New York University, "one of the things I tell parents of students who want to go to college is, 'There will be help available, but that help may have to be bolstered by more sacrifices on your part.'" The College Scholarship Service, an adjunct of the College Board, assists in the distribution of financial assistance to needy students. Its main office is in New York, but it has regional offices in Philadelphia; Atlanta; Austin, Texas; Waltham, Mass.; Evanston, Ill., and Santa Clara, Calif. The CSS's Financial Aid Form (FAF) is used by most students. They may be obtained from high school guidance and financial aid offices. When completed, the form is to be sent to the financial aid director at the college of the student's choice. The director then will attempt to work out a financial aid "package" for each student who demonstrates need.

millions of dollars by cuts in federal student assistance that went into effect last Oct. 1. What's more, it is feared that additional cutbacks recently asked by the Reagan administration — particularly in the Pell Grant and Guaranteed Student Loan programs — will be approved by Congress later this year. "There is no question that any changes will be for the worse," says Tally Wickstrom of the College Scholarship Service. "But it is not the end. We've come a long way. In 1958, only about 98 million in student aid was available from the Federal, college, state and private sectors. Then, it went up steadily to almost 117 million in 1980-1981."

cent of the overall student assistance. Estimates also place college contributions at 15 percent, the states' at 7 percent and private aid sources at about 3 percent.

Even if approved by Congress, there is little likelihood that President Reagan's plan, disclosed in his State of the Union message last Jan. 25, to transfer the responsibility for some education services to the states will immediately affect the major educational programs.

Despite their low contribution percentage compared to other financial aid sources, private grants, loans and work study programs are not to be discounted, educators say.

The College Board urges high school juniors and seniors to:

1. Find out if their parents' employers or labor unions sponsor student aid programs.
 2. Contact local civic and fraternal organizations, religious groups and veterans' posts.
 3. Check with their guidance counselors and look for notices on school bulletin boards.
- Also investigate programs that may be underwritten by local businesses or industries.

The eligibility requirements and application procedures for private special aid programs often differ, as do the number of awards given annually and the average size of the awards.

There are many companies which offer scholarships to children of employees who have made good grades. The list includes Proctor and Gamble of Cincinnati, IBM of Armonk, N.Y., General Electric of Schenectady, N.Y. and the Celanese Corp. of New York City.

Clubs and other organizations are also a source for aid programs. Examples are the Knights of Columbus and the Elks Foundation. In addition, many ethnic groups like to encourage the development of promising students of their nationality. Some are: The Danish Brotherhood of America (Omaha, Neb.), The National Slovak Society (Pittsburgh, Pa.), the Kosciuszko Foundation (for Poles, New York) and the Daughters of Penelope (for Greek women, Washington, D.C.)

Here is a sampling of other unusual scholarships for students of specific backgrounds:

The University of Maine — a tuition and fee waiver for all students whose parents or grandparents are North American Indians and have resided in Maine at least one year.

Washington University of St. Louis — A fund for descendants of Civil War Veterans.

The University of Miami — Scholarships for Armenian students.

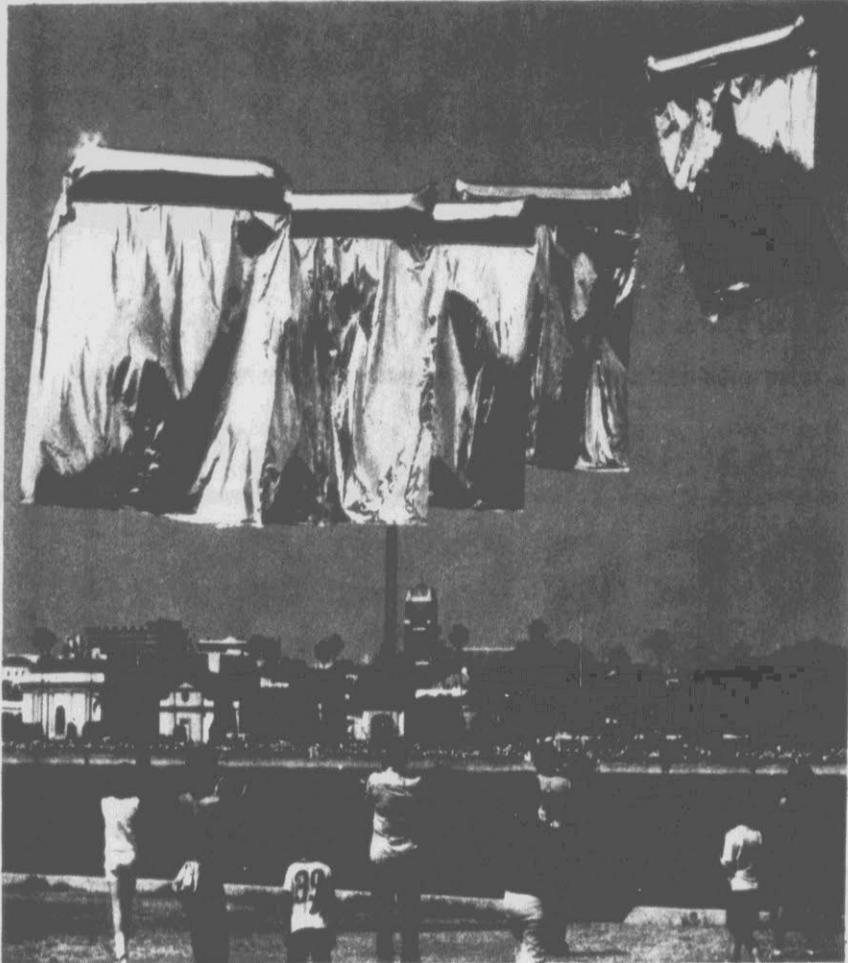

Whitman College in Walla Walla, Wash. — a fund for students from Idaho.

Goucher College, Towson, Md. — a fund for women with promise in the sciences.

There are also a number of private computer search firms that, for a fee, attempt to match a student's qualifications with a vast number of scholarships available across the country. However, students are advised to check on the reliability of such companies before making an investment.

Lecture And Launch Of Sky Sculpture At ECU

A WOODY SCULPTURE LAUNCH ... Shown here is the initial stage of the launch of a five-component Howard Woody sky sculpture that took place in the spring of 1978 at St. Petersburg, Fla. Woody, a 1962 graduate of ECU, will be on campus Thursday and Friday. He will lecture Thursday night at 8 p.m. and launch a sky sculpture at noon Friday.

Howard Woody, a 1962 graduate of East Carolina University and currently a member of the faculty of the art department of the University of South Carolina, will be on the East Carolina campus on Thursday and Friday to lecture and to launch a work of atmospheric sky sculpture.

At 8 p.m. Thursday, Woody will give a lecture in the Jenkins Fine Arts Building relating to the development of his sky sculpture.

At noon Friday, weather permitting, he will release one of his sculptural works created from silver metallized polyester film, a cellophane type plastic material only .0005 inches in thickness. This sheer material is used by Woody as it can respond to the slightest winds. The construction employs 10-foot-wide polyester envelopes that can support radar echo panels in spaced out positions.

After release, the several elements are visible (in sunshine) with sparkling, flashing sunlight reflected from the air sculpture surfaces. A native of Salisbury, Md., Woody was raised in Roanoke, Va. He received the bachelor's degree from the Richmond, Va., Professional Institute in 1958 and his master's degree from East Carolina University in 1962. Prior to joining the faculty at the University of South Carolina, he taught in colleges in North Carolina.

Over the past several years, Woody has shown his sky sculpture in numerous outdoor events from the east to the west coasts in the United States and in Canada, England, France, Belgium, the Netherlands, Austria and Denmark.

Woody notes, "The intent of atmospheric sky sculpture is to visually define and document the air structure in the sky environment. This structure consists of air motion, pressure, temperature and humidity, formed by both the weather patterns moving across a region and the local topographical features. The expendable sensor sculpture is designed with a flight balance to permit a slow ascent into the upper level of near-earth space. The sculpture is the flight itself from the beginning to the end."

There is no admission charged for the lecture or for viewing the sculpture launch.

'Non-Agenda' Topics For School Bd.

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer
Several spokesmen addressed a variety of topics during the non-agenda public expression time block at the Monday meeting of the Greenville City Schools Board of Education.

•Nina Debiase expressed concern that her child, a second grader, had been called on to solicit for the March of Dimes fund drive. Superintendent Delma Blinson explained that the schools on occasion did permit students to take part in programs sponsored by non-profit organizations, such as the Heart Fund and the March of Dimes. Participation, he noted, was on a volunteer basis.

Mrs. Debiase added she had no objection to the concept of school assistance in such programs, but she felt strongly, especially in the case of young children, that parents should first be contacted before a child is asked to be part of such a program.

•Walt Morehead, representing the Pitt County Black Assembly, made comments on the draft memorandum of the Affirmative Action Plan for Greenville City Schools. Morehead commended the general plan and its intent, and offered a some recommendations.

One consideration, he noted, is that the plan as stated is not measurable in specific terms. He noted that numbers and some means to define the point when goals were reached needs to be incorporated. Also requested was a statement referring to past inequities in employing minorities. Morehead also mentioned the assembly's hope to establish ratios of minority teachers based on the student population ratios in Greenville schools, not on a statewide or some other basis.

Blinson responded by pointing out that relative to the assembly's suggestions, he had conferred with three legal experts, who advised "that we definitely should not state that there has been invidious discrimination on the basis of race in the past, unless we believe that and are prepared to settle law suits from non-employed past applicants, plus the possibility of defamation suits from former board members and administrators."

Blinson also pointed out that the N.C. School Board Association and the American Association of School Administrators believe a statewide percentage is a better guide. Another problem in hiring more minorities in the near future is the low turnover rate of teachers resigning or leaving the system to open up new staff positions. Additionally, Blinson commented that the Supreme Court has ruled that student population ratios is not an appropriate yardstick for hiring decisions — that the key is the job market.

The board will continue to receive input on the draft of the city schools' affirmative action plan and will take final adoption action at a later date.

•Another spokesperson, Mary Guy, outlined the status of progress in a move to seek support "to maintain federal funds for public education at the 1981-82 level."

Mrs. Guy informed the board that the Sadie Sautler Elementary PTA has designated her as legislative coordinator in a drive to seek signatures on a petition being circulated in efforts to insure the continuing availability of federal funds. Plans are being made to send copies to all Greenville City PTA presidents, hoping they in turn will become active in seeking public support in bringing to public attention the problems that the proposed budget cuts would entail. Other plans under way include contacting all 142 school districts in North Carolina as well as officials at the national level.

U.S. Soldiers Arrive For Peace - Keeping Duties

By LARRY THORSON
Associated Press Writer

SHARM EL-SHEIKH, Israeli-occupied Sinai (AP) — The first contingent of American soldiers arrived today to begin peacekeeping duties between Israeli and Egyptian forces at the southern tip of the Sinai Peninsula.

An El Al Boeing 747 jetliner brought the 450 desert-camouflaged paratroopers of the 82nd Airborne Division on a direct flight from Fort Bragg, N.C., their home base.

Wearing dark orange berets and carrying two water canteens each, the soldiers lined up on the tarmac with the Straits of Tiran at their backs for review by Lt. Gen. Frederik Bull-Hansen of Norway, the commander of the Multi-National Force and Observers (MFO).

The troops were to march for nine miles in 80-degree heat to their new base overlooking the Red Sea.

A later flight today was bringing 220 more U.S. soldiers.

The battalion, commanded by Lt. Col. William Garrison of Fort Worth, Texas, is the major contribution to the force that will monitor demilitarization of the Sinai Peninsula in accordance with the 1979 Camp David peace treaty between Israel and Egypt.

The United States is contributing 60 percent of the estimated $25 million cost for the first year of the MFO. Israel and Egypt are paying 20 percent each.

Colombia and Fiji also are sending infantry battalions, and a variety of support functions will be carried out by soldiers from Australia, New Zealand, France, Italy, the Netherlands, Norway, Britain and Uruguay.

The Americans' arrival was watched by a few dozen Israeli troops and civilians and some Bedouin Arabs who sat under crude sun shelters outside the airfield.

A few of the Israelis wore T-shirts with slogans protesting the withdrawal from Sinai which Israel must complete April 25. But there were no demonstrations over the territory, which Israel captured from Egypt in the 1967 Arab-Israeli East War.

Meanwhile, in Israel:

—The army imposed a curfew on the Golan Heights' largest town following "repeated disruptions of public order," the military command in Tel Aviv said. Israeli sources said the curfew was imposed on Majdel Shams because townspeople stoned an army vehicle Tuesday.

The 15,000 Arabs of the Golan have been on strike for five weeks in protest against Israel's annexation of the territory captured from Syria in 1967. As Syrian nationals, they are refusing to accept Israeli identity cards, saying that would make them Israeli citizens against their will.

—In the Arab sector of Jerusalem, schoolgirls set up a roadblock of burning tires in an anti-Israel demonstration, Israel Radio reported. It said one girl was detained. Palestinian youths were reported to have stoned passing cars in Shuafat, an Arab suburb of Jerusalem.

—An opinion poll published by the Jerusalem Post said 41 percent of those questioned rated Prime Minister Menachem Begin as the man most suited to head the government. It was a drop of 4 percentage points in his popularity rating since November, but he remained well ahead of his nearest rival, Shimon Peres of the opposition Labor Party. He was the choice of 18.1 percent.

Hearing Slated On Rail Plan

WILLIAMSTON — The N.C. Department of Transportation has scheduled a 10 a.m. meeting Monday at Martin Community College to obtain comments from area citizens on a draft state rail plan.

Economic Development Commission office in Washington.

The session is one of five being held across the state to seek public comment on plans to maintain or improve rail lines in towns facing potential loss or reduction of rail freight service.

The North Carolina Rail Plan is part of the DOT's effort to preserve rail service on low-density rail freight lines, and focuses on the potential effect of rail service loss on communities where the service is important for economic growth.

Public comments will be heard on the need for preserving and improving service on the Seaboard Coast Line track between Parmele and Washington and between Parmele and Plymouth, following a discussion of rail service by DOT staff members.

The public comments will be incorporated in a final report, which will recommend rail projects for funding by federal, state, local and private sources.

Copies of the draft rail plan may be reviewed at the county manager's office in Pitt, Beaufort, Martin, Washington and Halifax counties, and at the Mid-East

Reagan Slogs Through Flood-Stricken Ft. Wayne

By JAY PERKINS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Outfitted in galoshes borrowed from a farmer, President Reagan toured a rain-sodden

TRUE GRIT — President Reagan grimaces as he lifts a sandbag in Ft. Wayne, Ind., Tuesday. The President visited the flood-ravaged area on his way home from Oklahoma City. (AP Laserphoto)

Indiana city to demonstrate his concern for the flood victims. With television cameras recording every movement, the president stood beside the muddy banks of a river overflowing from spring rains Tuesday, passing sandbags down the line and congratulating his young helpers for putting into practice his credo that volunteerism can help make America great again.

The scene climaxed Reagan's 2-day foray through Middle America, a trip in which he continually sought to reassure minority citizens worried about his plan to give states new powers and middle-class workers beset by the current recession and the young and disadvantaged "who may fear that government is turning its back on them."

Reagan devoted major sections of his speeches to state legislatures in Alabama, Tennessee and Oklahoma this week to reassuring those forced out of work by the current recession and the young and disadvantaged "who may fear that government is turning its back on them."

But his trip to Fort Wayne, Ind., a stop scheduled only after the president saw on a Tuesday morning telecast the widespread flooding in the area, gave him a chance to put his words into action.

Dressed in a dark blue business suit and wearing overshoes borrowed from an Indiana farmer, the president joined young volunteers who were stacking sandbags along the overflowing St. Mary's River.

He then toured a makeshift rescue center at a nearby church, standing on a picnic table in the middle of a cot-filled room to offer his sympathy to the flood victims.

The president appeared disheveled as he returned to Air Force One after his two-hour visit. Mud was splattered on his suit. He heaved a big sigh as if exhausted and exhilarated at the same time.

One of the volunteers at the river, 16-year-old Tammy Newman, said the president told the group that "he's very proud that we volunteered to do this. He said that growing up in Illinois, he was used to plenty of flooding."

At the rescue center, the president held a lengthy but almost inaudible chat with 74-year-old Frank Howenstein, who was lying on a cot and visibly distressed.

And he even found time for a quip, remarking as he left the rescue center, "I hope we meet again some day when our feet are dry."

Before touring the site of Indiana's worst flood since 1913, the president flew over tornado destruction in Bartlesville, Okla., for a firsthand look at what he called "that swath of destruction."

But the high point of his day clearly was Fort Wayne, an area hit so hard by rain and the spring thaw that in some areas the normal course of the three rivers flowing through the countryside could only be determined from parallel rows of trees in the flooded farmland.

"There isn't any way to express the sympathy all of us have," he told one woman at the Red Cross rescue center. "I think there's going to be a lot of prayers said on your behalf before this is over."

And he said the volunteer activities he had seen "makes me realize that we haven't got anything to be afraid of in this country."

The president's trip to Fort Wayne was not without its problems. A tornado skirted the airport barely an hour before his plane landed. His limousine, carried by a giant Air Force cargo plane, arrived only minutes before his plane touched down.

And the bus carrying the national press accompanying him to the site lost the motorcade and the president had to wait in his car for more than 10 minutes so that cameras and reporters could record his deeds.

The chief executive was hardly dressed for a climb up the muddy river embankment, borrowing overshoes at the last minute from Greg Miller, a Portland, Ind., farmer who told the president he had lost $100,000 in rain damage last year.

Although 670 farmers had applied for federal loans after the county was declared a disaster, only 10 had received any money, Miller told Reagan. And with spring planting only 30 days away, he said he needed the money.

An aide to Reagan said later the president "is going to call (Agriculture Secretary) John Block" today to try to help Miller.

Reagan made no commitment for federal aid to the flood victims, saying only "our people are in communication on that." But an aide said aid was a virtual certainty.

White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said Reagan decided to visit Fort Wayne Tuesday morning and suggested it to his aides as he drove to the Oklahoma state capitol to address the Oklahoma legislature.

Testing Time

Students in grades 1 through 9 in Greenville's public school system will participate in an annual testing program next week, starting with practice sessions on Monday.

Charles Ross, director of instruction for the schools, said tests to be given grades 1 and 2 are the Prescriptive Reading Inventory and the Diagnostic Mathematics Inventory. Students in grades 3, 4, 5, 6, 7 and 9 will be given the California Achievement Test.

Tests are to be administered by classroom home teachers unless otherwise authorized by the principal of the school.

The schedule for the testing program is:

- Grade 1 — Monday, practice test; Tuesday-Thursday, 30-minute tests; March 30-31, 50-minute tests.
- Grade 2 — Monday, practice test; Tuesday-Thursday, 60-minute tests; March 30 and April 1, 60-minute tests; March 31, 50-minute tests.
- Grades 3-6 — Monday, practice test; Tuesday-Thursday, 90-minute tests.
- Grades 7-9 — Monday, general instruction session; Tuesday-Thursday, 90-minute tests.

Tests will be given during the first part of the morning on the dates indicated. The school system suggests that parents see that children get a good rest prior to testing dates. Also, each child is to come prepared with No. 2 pencils with erasers and a supply of scratch paper.

Persons with questions on the tests may call Charles Ross at 752-4192.

Want Sharing Of Intelligence

WASHINGTON (AP) —

Members of Congress are finding it increasingly difficult to obtain secret intelligence information under the Reagan administration, says Sen. Joseph Biden, a senior member of the Senate Intelligence Committee.

During previous administrations, the Delaware Democrat said Tuesday, CIA and other intelligence officials would willingly divulge to the Senate panel information about U.S. national security interests, "including the blemishes."

Now, however, Biden said, "They don't trust us - the whole attitude is different."

Biden spoke with reporters during a break in Senate debate on a bill that would permit prosecution of journalists or government officials who reveal the names of American intelligence operatives.

A vote — expected to be close — on key issues debated on the measure is tentatively scheduled for Thursday.

The debate has focused on whether a prosecutor should have to prove that a journalist or official intended to damage U.S. intelligence operations by disclosing agent names, or whether it should be sufficient to show that there was a pattern of activities which would create a "reason to believe" such interests had been impaired.

Biden, urging an intent test, said a more lenient prosecutorial standard "would set a dangerous precedent" and pose a serious threat to civil liberties.

While speaking with reporters, Biden said in regard to the Intelligence Committee's access to sensitive information that "everything is just closing down."

"They used to tell us everything we wanted to know," Biden said, referring to briefings the panel used to get from CIA officials.

But under the Reagan administration, he said, "All we get is what they want to tell us."

In all intelligence matters, Biden said, the impulse of the Reagan administration is to publicly disclose as little as possible and adopt an attitude of "trust me" when questions about their policies are raised.

Missionaries In Greenville

Greenville has four new missionaries from the Church of Latter Day Saints.

Elder Ben Castleberry of Orem, Utah, has been in Greenville two months. He's a business major from Dixie College in southern Utah.

Elder Ken Milburn of Vancouver, Wash., has been here two weeks. He's an electronics engineering major from Brigham Young University.

Elders Marlow Blanchard and Dirk Sanderson, both Ricks College students, have just arrived. Blanchard, from St. Anthony, Idaho, is an education major and Sanderson, from Deaver, Wyo., is a child psychology major.

Each of the young Mormons is giving two years of his life to go at his own expense to share his faith with the world. At any given time, approximately 30,000 young volunteer missionaries are in the field, they said.

For more information about the church and its work to strengthen the family, the men said any one interested may call 757-3748 or 752-7344.

No Deporting Of Salvadoran

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. (AP) — A Salvadoran teen-ager has won his fight to stay in the United States after convincing federal officials that he will return to El Salvador once his education is complete.

"I'm glad it happened this way. I'm happy now," Marcos Flores-Handal said Tuesday after the Immigration and Naturalization Service dropped its case against him.

"I hope to go to college and get my degree (in engineering) and go back to El Salvador," the 18-year-old said. "I'm really tired, and I have to do my homework now."

Deportation proceedings scheduled for today were canceled after Flores-Handal's meeting with INS officials in San Francisco.

He was required to post a $500 bond to guarantee that he would stay in the United States only as long as he was a student.

The youth's lawyer, Martin Lawler, said of the bond, "It's ransom, but we paid it anyway."

Flores-Handal got a student visa and came to live with his brother Rick, an American citizen, two years ago after his father was killed in El Salvador and his mother died of cancer.

He initially enrolled at Los Altos High School, south of San Francisco. Last December, with approval of school officials, he transferred to Burlingame High School.

He was taken into custody after an immigration official making a routine check in February discovered Flores-Handal had transferred without reporting the change to the INS.

Flores-Handal was freed when his history teacher posted a $5,000 bond. An administrative law judge later ordered the money returned and said the teen-ager should remain free on his own recognizance until a deportation hearing.

Although Flores-Handal's transfer brought him to the attention of immigration officers, it was the fact that his parents were dead which concerned them, INS district director David Ilchert said. The agency questioned whether the youth actually intended to return home after completing high school, he said.

"That was basically the issue that had to be resolved," said Ilchert. "The business about changing schools ... could have been satisfied at an earlier date."

Flores-Handal's student status was renewed after he presented documentation proving he had told American officials of his situation when first applying for a student visa in 1980.

Effectiveness Training Set

A special course for women, "Effectiveness Training for Women," will begin Thursday at Pitt Community College.

The course will meet Thursdays for 10 weeks from 7-10 p.m. and will stress a system of skills and methods through which women can handle problems and resolve conflicts. It will give, according to PCC officials, "a problem-solving approach to personal growth — a way of resolving conflicts openly, yet non-aggressively."

Persons interested in registering should call Pitt Community College at 756-3130, ext. 238.

Knoxville Curbs Expo Evictions

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The City Council has approved an ordinance intended to stop evictions by greedy landlords hoping to cash in on the World's Fair tourist trade.

But Joe Levitt, a landlord and lawyer, says the ordinance passed Tuesday night is unconstitutional and that he may evict some of his several hundred tenants to test it in court.

About 1,000 Knoxville tenants — about 5 percent of the city's renters — have been evicted by landlords who plan to rent to visitors to the World's Fair, which begins May 1 and runs for six months.

Because zoning laws prohibit short-term rental of apartments and mobile home lots, landlords must get exemptions to charge nightly rates.

The new ordinance sets up a panel appointed by the mayor to hear complaints from tenants who believe they have been unjustly forced to move, including those who received eviction notices and those whose rents were greatly increased.

If the panel finds in favor of an evicted tenant, it could recommend that the City Council deny a landlord the special zoning exemption to rent on a short-term basis.

Mayor Randy Tyree said any apartment or mobile home park landlord who rents to World's Fair tourists without a zoning exemption could face a maximum 30-day jail term and $50 fine for each time he rented illegally.

"I have just had enough of these evictions, and whatever it takes to stop them we need to do it," Tyree said before the council approved the ordinance. "The reputation of Knoxville is being dragged through the mud by a few greedy individuals."

John Austin, the lawyer for a citizens group called Tenants for Fair Housing, said he believes the ordinance will stop the evictions and make it easier for those people already evicted to get their homes back or find places to live.

that can be reviewed by the planning and zoning task force. The zone was proposed by the Tar River Neighborhood Association as a means of providing some type of "vehicle to preserve their neighborhood," Browder said.

Browder also said the staff is looking at the possibilities of alternative residential development standards with regard to guidelines such as land use intensity systems and planned residential districts. The matter will be discussed further at the April meeting.

Tugwell appointed commissioner Dick Farris to the planning and zoning task force, replacing Herb Norman who indicated that he could no longer serve on the committee.

The board welcomed Rufus Keel as a full time member. Keel had been serving as an alternate but was appointed by the council last week to full membership.

Chosen Attend June Seminar

Monica Lynne Stokes of Ayden will attend the 1982 Hugh O'Brian Youth Foundation Leadership Seminar in Belmont June 4-6, according to foundation officials.

A sophomore at Ayden-Grifton High School, Ms. Stokes is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Billy Stokes. Her activities include varsity cheerleading, softball, Student Government Association, Task Force and the Science, French and Pep clubs. Around 100 other sophomores from throughout North Carolina have been nominated by their schools and selected to attend the seminar. Criteria for selection includes demonstration of outstanding leadership potential in school and community activities.

How Tar Heel Senators And Representatives Voted

By Roll Call Report
WASHINGTON, D.C. — Here's how area House members and senators were recorded on major roll call votes March 2-10.

House
WATER — By a vote of 311 for and 50 against, the House passed a bill to settle a water claim brought against the government by the Papago Indians of Arizona. The 14,000-member tribe would be guaranteed water from federal sources in Arizona and the city of Tucson, and the government would set up a $15 million trust fund to indemnify the Indians for the past federal abuses of their water rights. The bill (HR 5118) was sent to the Senate.

The essentially undisputed basis of the claim is that for nearly 100 years the government failed in its legal obligation to protect the tribe's dwindling water supply and, in fact, encouraged nearby development that deprived the tribe of its water.

Supporter Robert Lagomaarsino, R-Calif., called the bill "the best and least expensive" way to settle the claim.

No opponents spoke against the bill. The Administration opposed it as too expensive, citing a $101 million price tag that supporters disputed. Members voting "yea" saw the bill as the best means of resolving the long-pending water claim. Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, Charles Whitley, D-3, Stephen Neal, D-5, Charles Rose, D-7, W.G. Hefner, D-8, and William Hendon, R-11, voted "yea."

Tuition Tax Bill Is Seen As Difficult

STATESBORO, Ga. (AP) — Legislation providing tuition tax credits for the families of private school students may be difficult to get through Congress, a Reagan administration official says.

The difficulty lies in the recent storm over an administration proposal which critics said would give tax exemptions to private schools which discriminate against minorities, says Charles O'Malley of the U.S. Department of Education.

Malley, the department's newly appointed director of private education, says the administration's tuition tax credit legislation may be ready for debate in Congress by early spring and will "undoubtedly contain non-discrimination language."

But, he adds, "It's going to be extremely difficult to get it (tax credit legislation) through. That's why I'm trying to lessen hostility between private and public school educators."

O'Malley's comments came Tuesday during his keynote address at a two-day conference of private school educators from Southeastern states meeting at Georgia Southern College.

The biggest stumbling block to passage of the legislation, O'Malley said, is the bill's requirement that schools with pupils receiving tax credits admit students of all faiths, but not necessarily all races.

He said he doubts the legislation will require schools to adopt quotas because the Reagan administration takes the position that the tax credits benefit "students, not the schools."

He said the recent controversy over a tax exemption for Bob Jones University in South Carolina had made the administration "wary" about what to introduce in Congress.

He said he found it difficult to understand the controversy because, he said, tax breaks have for years been given to nursing homes and day-care centers.

"But when you get to the ages of 5 to 17, you're entering taboo-land for some reason. I could never figure that out, though," he said.

Reps. L.H. Fountain, D-2, Ike Andrews, D-4, Eugene Johnston, R-6, James Martin, R-9, and James Broyhill, R-10, voted "nay."

Senate
CHILE — The Senate confirmed, 83 for and 12 against, the nomination for James D. Theberge as U.S. ambassador to Chile. Theberge, a former Georgetown University professor and Marine Corps lieutenant, was ambassador to Nicaragua under President Ford. Most senators opposing his confirmation were liberals protesting the Reagan Administration's moves towards closer ties with the right-wing military dictatorship that rules Chile. But opponents also included conservatives who linked Theberge's Nicaraguan tenure with the left-wing overthrow of the Samozan dictatorship.

Supporter Charles Percy, R-Ill., said Theberge "has not had any role in determining our policy towards Chile," and that the nominee possesses "the highest levels of professional integrity and dedication."

Opponent Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., said the Senate should send White House and the Chilean government "a clear message" that it dislikes the regime's "long, well-documented record of deliberate and grievous human rights violations."

Senators voting "yea" favored Theberge's nomination. Sen. John East, R, voted "yea."

Sen. Jesse Helms, R, voted "nay."

OIL PLAN — By a vote of 86 for and 7 against, the Senate approved legislation (S 1503) giving President Reagan standby authority to allocate oil supplies in the event of a shortage of foreign supplies. It is up to the president to decide whether to use the authority. The bill has been sent to the White House. Supporter Bennett Johnston, D-La., said "it is too late if we wait for the Straits of Hormuz to be blockaded," and he added that the president opposes the legislation because it would mean work for the Department of energy, which Reagan wants to abolish.

Opponent Don Nickles, R-Okla., said that federal allocation during the 1973 and 1979 oil shortages "actually contributed (to), complicated, and aggravated the shortages that we had at those particular times." Senators voting "yea" wanted the President to have the standby powers. East and Helms voted "yea."

Rep. Jones Will Speak

ECU News Bureau
Rep. Walter B. Jones, D-N.C., will speak on "New Federalism" at the first meeting of the American Society for Public Administration's Eastern North Carolina Chapter March 26.

ASPA is an organization designed to facilitate and enhance communication between administrators at different levels of government, explained Edwin R. Griffith, an East Carolina University political science professor and one of the chapter's founding members. It consists of state, local and federal administrators as well as educators and students, he said.

ECU interim Chancellor John M. Howell, also an ASPA member, will give the opening remarks at the organizational meeting at the ECU Regional Development Institute on Fifth Street. A business meeting will begin at 4 p.m., followed by the program-dinner at 6 p.m. where Jones will speak. RDI is sponsoring the meeting.

Members will use the society's quarterly meetings to talk about common problems and new developments in the public administrative field, Griffith said. People interested in joining the chapter may contact Farmville Town Administrator Bob Morgan at 753-5166 or Griffith at 757-6030 before March 18.

St. Pat's Day In Erin And America Widely Differ

By Beverly Weaver
University News Bureau
UNC-Chapel Hill

CHAPEL HILL — The emphasis on green, from clothes to beer, and the grinning leprechauns that Americans consider St. Patrick's Day traditions all conflict with the customs the Irish themselves attach to their patron saint, whose day is celebrated March 17.

Native Irishman Patrick O'Neill, assistant professor of English at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, knows.

"It's a very quiet affair," he says. "The only formality involves public parades and people who visit the local cemetery to commemorate public heroes."

"But most people stay home on St. Patrick's Day. There's very little ritual associated with it. Americans who are used to the rather boisterous exhibition that we have in this country would be a bit disappointed with St. Patrick's Day in Ireland."

O'Neill says the Irish would not approve of the American partying associated with the day, especially the green beer.

"People do drink a lot all right," he says, "but they drink the real stuff."

O'Neill, who has been in the United States since 1976, has taught Celtic languages and English here for almost two years. To explain Irish sentiments about St. Patrick's Day, he gives a little background on the saint himself.

St. Patrick remains shrouded in mystery, he says, due to the scarcity of historical evidence about him. Two documents that Patrick himself wrote comprise all the sources: one is an autobiography and the other an angry letter to a British prince.

The autobiography, written as a justification for his mission, is not the story of legends like the saints banishing all snakes from Ireland, O'Neill says. Rather, it tells of a man who was alien to Ireland, having been taken there as a slave.

"The general feeling of scholars is that he was living in the south of Wales at the time of his capture, and that he was probably of a fairly good, aristocratic Welsh background," he explains. Patrick only vaguely referred to the details of his capture in writing.

He subsequently escaped and returned to his native land, only to return to Ireland later as a missionary.

"He seems to have gone through some kind of religious experience," O'Neill says, "what Americans call being 'born again.'" The experience was a dream he had, and the voices he heard were the voices of the people he had known in Ireland.

"They told him to come back and work among them. (Patrick) felt this to be a missionary calling."

"But contrary to popular belief, he never really seemed to enjoy working in Ireland. He saw it as a duty and obligation, and he does make that point quite clear."

Patrick, O'Neill says, wrote of being terrified of the "barbaric" Irish.

Also, despite his patron-saint image, "Patrick did not singlehandedly convert Ireland to Christianity," O'Neill said. "It's pretty clear now that there were people Christianizing the Irish people before Patrick and probably after him," he said. "It seems that his work centered in the north and probably the northwest of Ireland." That probably was the area where he had lived as a slave.

But if Patrick's writing and other scholarly research tell of a humble missionary, Irish writings, at least some of them, tell a different story.

Although the saint's life and work took place about 400 to 450 A.D., there are no references to him in Irish literature until about 200 years after his death, O'Neill says.

"This would suggest that there wasn't a really strong devotion to him until well after his death," he says, "when people in the northern part of Ireland tried to foster the cult of Patrick for their own interests."

Now, with the political lines drawn in Northern Ireland, some Irish people ignore the feast day, O'Neill says.

"I suppose, on the whole, protestants in Northern Ireland do not celebrate St. Patrick's Day because they associate it with the Roman Catholic Church," he says.

For those who do celebrate, the day rarely is associated with Patrick the man. "The idea of St. Patrick," O'Neill says, "is based for the most part on statues and pictures of a tall bearded man with a bishop's pastoral staff in his hand and snakes at his feet, and he is driving the snakes into the sea."

"That's about as close to Patrick as most Irish people come."

Despite historical evidence, the snake legend persists. Legend has it that Patrick banished the snakes from the island country forever, and some people still believe snakes cannot live there.

"Later biographers of Patrick in the seventh and eighth centuries put all his weaknesses aside and glorified him as the miracle worker and banisher of snakes," he says. "Even the Venerable Bede in the eighth century mentions that snakes cannot live in Ireland, and he is a man who wrote good, solid history."

However, he says, no evidence of the snake legend or any others can be found in the saint's own writings.

Still he says, the religious holiday of St. Patrick holds a symbolic importance for the Irish.

The wearing of the shamrock has quietly displayed their devotion to one legend.

"The popular belief is that when Patrick came to Ireland, he had a lot of trouble trying to get people to believe the idea of the Trinity," O'Neill says. "He used the shamrock with its three leaves as his illustration."

"For most people, Patrick does represent the Christianization of Ireland. He's a convenient symbol of something — Christianity — that has left a lasting impression on the Irish people," O'Neill said.

Concerned Over Pilots In Nicaragua

WASHINGTON (AP) —

Two former Nicaraguan pilots are in the United States to offer evidence about Cuban and Soviet involvement in Central America, but the State Department is having second thoughts after last week's public relations debacle.

The pilots are reported to be waiting somewhere in the Washington area for the State Department to make up its mind.

Several State Department officials Tuesday confirmed the presence of the Nicaraguans, who defected to Honduras last week after hijacking a C-47 cargo transport plane. They requested political asylum in the United States.

The two, identified as Gustavo Quesada and Octavio Barrera, told a news conference in Honduras that Soviet aircraft and a large number of Cuban advisers had been sent to Nicaragua.

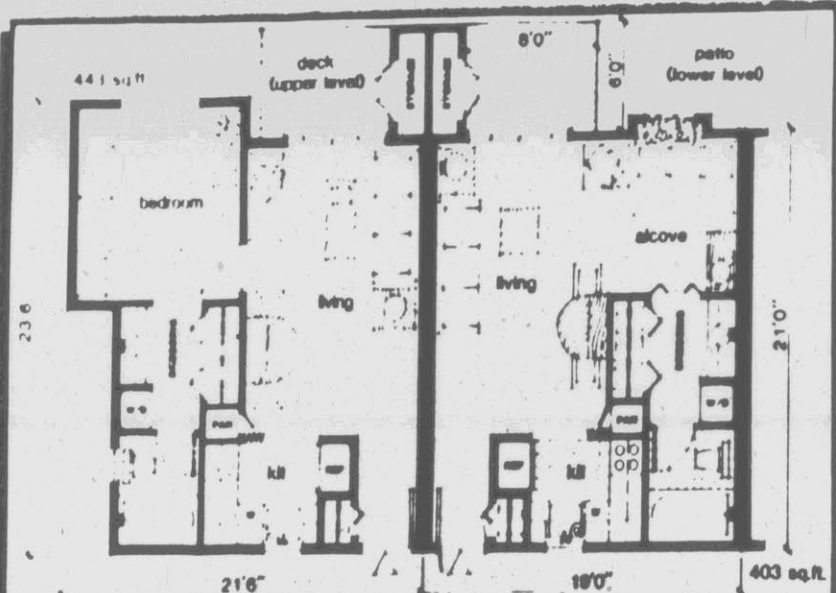

A State Department official said one of them claimed to know of Nicaraguan aerial resupply missions to the rebels in El Salvador. Because the issue is so sensitive, neither this official nor the others wanted to be identified.

Initially, the State Department had planned to present the pilots to reporters as early as last Saturday to tell what they knew. As of Tuesday, however, there appeared to be considerable disagreement whether they should appear at all.

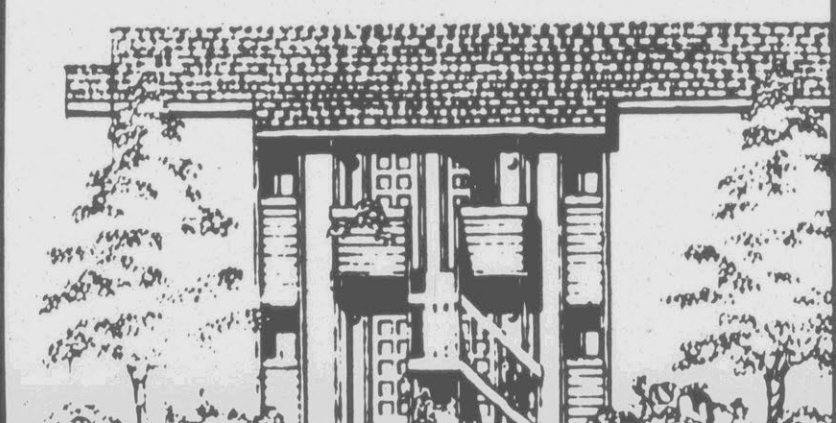

One official indicated the initial plan was derailed because of the fiasco resulting from the State Department's presentation of Jose Orlando Tardencillas to reporters last Friday.

Tardencillas, a Nicaraguan captured in El Salvador last year, had been expected to tell of Nicaraguan and Cuban involvement in the Salvadoran insurgency, a story he had told previously. But he crossed up the State Department by denying there was any such involvement.

Officials acknowledge that the Tardencillas incident has hurt the administration's effort to prove Nicaraguan involvement in El Salvador, although they point out that Tardencillas did admit he was a Nicaraguan and that he was fighting on the side of

1,118 Fires In County Reported During 1981

Pitt County recorded 1,118 reported fires — an increase of 421 from the previous year — during 1981. Fire Marshal Bobby Joyner reported today.

In an annual report, Joyner said the extremely dry weather, coupled with the use of supplemental heat sources in homes, probably accounted for the increase. The total does not include fires in the city of Greenville.

Fire departments reported 14 injuries to firemen, four more than in 1980. There were five deaths attributed to fire during 1981 in the county, all in mobile homes. There was one fatality in 1980.

Three children of Mr. and Mrs. Primus Lynch died near Bethel April 15 when their parents awakened to find their home on fire and went out a window but were unable to enter the room where the children slept. The children were Jasper Leon Sherrod, 9; Calvin Tyrone Sherrod, 7; and Demetria Lynch, 4.

On Aug. 20 Randy Harris, 24, died in a fire in his mobile home in Triangle Trailer Park in the Eastern Pines District. Mike Manning, 23, died in the bedroom of his mobile home in the Pactolus District Oct. 3. All three fires were reported in the early morning hours — 1:17 a.m., 2:02 a.m. and 5:10 a.m.

The county started sending two departments to each structure fire last year, Joyner said. All departments in the county will have quick dump systems by June 30. All but two have it now, he added. The Pactolus Fire Department received a 1,000-gallon-per-minute pumper in 1981.

Fire safety classes were given to 810 grade school children. A fire education display was put up at Carolina East Mall in February with fifth grade classes and volunteer fire departments participating.

Safety inspections included 54 of schools, 13 of day care centers, 48 of foster homes and 5 "miscellaneous" inspections. Volunteer departments assisted in making inspections of homes and businesses in their communities.

Training by the 604 members of the various departments came to 26,331 hours between July 1, 1979 and June 30, 1980, and 30,223 hours between July 1, 1980, and June 30, 1981.

The average county response time was said to be 7.5 minutes.

Alarms answered county-wide were as follows: 244 houses, 87 buildings including 37 tobacco barns, 128 motor vehicles, 250 grass and woods, 15 false alarms, 261 others and 133 mutual aids. Twenty-four calls were out of the county and there were 62 calls to assist at the scene of motor vehicle accidents. The dollar value of property involved in fires was said to be $5,896,440; the dollar value exposed to fire, $15,479,709; the total potential loss, $21,376,149; the dollar value of property lost, $1,541,130; and the value of property saved, $19,835,019. The 1981 fire loss was $447,103 more than in 1980.

Fire department expenses for the year were $168,213; capital outlay, $37,814; yearly payments, $55,646.

The question facing State Department officials is whether the pilots would be believed, or possibly, whether the State Department risks having another unhappy surprise.

One official who favors having the pilots go public with what they know insisted there are no parallels with the Tardencillas incident.

"They are two different cases totally," he said. "These are Nicaraguans who were members of the Sandinista forces. They defected. It was their decision to leave Nicaragua."

"OUR CHURCH MEANS A LOT TO US."

For us there is no better way to start a week. At church, we find friends and get encouragement. It is here we get our hope. In spite of all the troubles around, we have found our church gives us hope for the future.

And most important, we found Jesus Christ here.

And it is here that we learn more about Him. We know our church is not a perfect place, but we aren't perfect either. Maybe that is why our church means so much to us — it accepts us as we are.

There are many good churches in North Carolina. Ours happens to be Baptist. During this time hundreds of Baptist churches in our state are having what they call HERE'S HOPE services.

This is your invitation to visit a Baptist church near you. They will be looking for you. And we hope you find a church which means as much to you as ours does to us.

NEW YORK (AP) - The stock market was little changed today, continuing the sluggish, neutral trend that set in at the start of the week.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose .09 to 798.42 in the first half hour.

But losers held a 7-6 edge on gainers in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Economic statistics for February have produced signs of a slight pickup in business activity. The government reported Tuesday that industrial production rose last month for the first time since July of 1981.

But analysts said the data might be reflecting just a temporary rebound from weather-depressed levels in January.

Interest rates, meanwhile, remain high. Several large banks raised their prime lending rates Tuesday from 16 to 16 1/2 per cent.

Today's early volume leaders included PPG Industries, down 1/8 at 32; Raytheon, up 1/4 at 29 1/2; and Texas Utilities, unchanged at 21 1/4.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average fell 2.66 to 798.33.

ECU's Scharf To Quit Post

Ray Scharf, East Carolina University's head swimming and diving coach for the past 15 years, announced Tuesday his resignation effective June 30, 1982.

"I'm going to continue my job teaching at East Carolina," says the 45-year-old veteran Pirates coach. "I've completed the things I set out to do. I'll never divorce myself from aquatics, that's my life. When you stop having challenges, you stop living. People lose their vitality when they don't seek new horizons."

Assuming the Pirate head coaching post will be Scharf's two-year assistant coach Rick Kobe, a 28-year-old native of Winsor, Vt. Kobe previously served as head coach of the Raleigh Swim Association from 1978 to 1980, and as assistant coach at West Virginia University from 1976 to 1978.

"I think Rick is a young and enthusiastic individual," Scharf said. "If I didn't think he could continue the same kind of loyalty and pride I wouldn't have recommended him or stepped down. He's dynamic and a good coach with all the tools. And he's a heck of a..."

Gatlin Honorable Mention

Two Repeat On All-State Squad

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Curtis Hunter of Southern Durham and Bandys' Vernon Odom lead the 1981-1982 Boys' Associated Press All-State Basketball Team, both having been selected for the second consecutive year.

They are joined this year by Brad Daugherty of Swannanoa Owen, Rocky Mount's George McClain, David Henderson of Warren County, Bob Beecher of North Stokes, Steve Warden of Forsyth County Day, Chapel Hill's John Davis, Jerry Lattimore of South Mecklenburg and Hickory's Chris Washburn.

Washburn, a sophomore, was the only underclassman chosen by a panel of North Carolina sports writers.

Hunter averaged 22.4 points, 12.3 rebounds and 3.5 assists in leading the 26-2 Spartans to Class 3A's top ranking most of the year.

The 6-foot-4, 185-pounder shot

63 percent from the floor, 68 percent from the free-throw line and has narrowed his college choices to North Carolina, North Carolina State, Duke, Georgetown and DePaul.

Odom's reputation as a shooter is widely documented, but he's done much more while leading Bandys to a 29-1 record and Friday's Class 2A championship game against Sampson-Union.

Averaging 26.3 points, including a high of 42, he has boosted his career total to 2,553 points, second best in state history.

Odom, 6-2, 170, also averaged 8.2 rebounds, 4.6 assists and 3.9 steals while hitting 53.1 percent of his field goals and 80.8 percent of his free throws.

The 16-year-old Daugherty, 6-11½ and 212 pounds, has verbally committed to the University of North Carolina. While leading Owen, 29-1, into Saturday's Class 3A title matchup with Warren County, Daugherty averages 25.9 points and 17 rebounds each outing.

Daugherty hit 63 percent from the floor and 69 percent from the line while blocking nine shots per game, including 19 in one game, 14 of which remained in play.

Henderson has sparked Warren County's tournament fire by averaging 26.9 points, 10 rebounds and six assists for the 24-7 Eagles.

BC Turning It Around

Related story page 18

By The Associated Press

Most recent headlines concerning Boston College's basketball team left something to be desired...until last weekend, that is.

First, the Eagles got off to a 5-6 start, beating only such nonpowerhouses as Bentley, Stonehill, Brown, New Hampshire and Fairfield. Then, Rick Kuhn, a former BC player, was convicted of conspiring to fix six games during the 1978-79 season and sentenced to 10 years in prison.

Finally, Bradley Coach Dick Versace ripped the Eagles' schedule when they were selected for the NCAA Tournament and his team was bypassed. Versace intimated that BC was picked as one of four teams from the Big East Conference because Dave Gavitt, the league's commissioner, also is chairman of the NCAA Division I Basketball Committee.

But there has been a sharp turnaround ever since Boston College stunned second-ranked DePaul 82-75 Sunday to advance to the Midwest Regional semifinals in St. Louis this weekend against Kansas State. There was a noisy campus rally Monday and "Meet Me in St. Louie" signs greeted the team when it returned home.

"It's a great experience," said Coach Tom Davis. "It's the excitement of life. It's what sport is all about...trying to do your best."

"We were 5-6 at one time, but I did not think we were playing poorly. We lost on the road to some very fine basketball teams. I think the players just kept working. Accepting the losses made us work harder."

Boston College isn't the only one of the 16 remaining teams which may not be household name to college basketball aficionados. Idaho and Fresno State aren't traditional powers, either, although they are ranked eighth and 11th nationally.

The other Midwest semifinal

Win Over DePaul Quiets Detractors

sends fifth-ranked Missouri against Houston. In the East Regional at Raleigh, N.C., top-rated North Carolina meets No.13 Alabama and ninth-ranked Memphis State faces Villanova.

The Midwest Regional at Birmingham, Ala., sends third-ranked Virginia against No.17 Alabama-Birmingham and seventh-rated Minnesota against No.20 Louisville. And in the West Regional at Provo, Utah, No.6 Georgetown takes on Fresno State and Idaho goes against fourth-ranked Oregon State.

That game will be a rematch. Idaho's Vandals, with a skinny 6-foot-6 center and no super scorer, embarrassed OSU 71-49 in the Far West Classic last December.

"I would assume probably they have improved more than we have," says Coach Don Monson. "It's tougher for us to play a team twice, especially the quality of Oregon State. Even though we're not awesomely big, I think we're intelligent enough, our guards are good enough, my big players are quick enough that we can offset a lot of things."

"And when you get this far, you're only talking about two (victories) to get to the Final Four. So realistically and honestly, I feel we can do that."

Fresno State expects 1,500 or more of its rabid fans — the Red Wave has become almost as well known as the team — to follow the Bulldogs to Provo for the game against Georgetown, the top-seeded team in the West Regional.

"Some of the players have mentioned that all those fans and support make you feel accountable," says assistant coach Tim Thrash. "They want to feel they've done well for the fans. They don't want to let the fans down at this point."

The Bulldogs will ask 6-7 Rod Higgins to go against Patrick Ewing, Georgetown's heralded 7-foot freshman center.

The shortest trip will be that of Alabama-Birmingham. The Blazers' campus is about a mile from the Jefferson County Civic Center and, says Coach Gene Bartow, about the meeting with Virginia and 7-4 Ralph Sampson. "I feel very good going into Birmingham."

UAB ousted defending champion Indiana over the weekend.

Sixteen teams, of course, still have a shot at the crown, but forward Buck Hailey of Middle Tennessee State says Louisville "can win it all." Middle Tennessee lost ached and everybody's coming off the bench doing the job," Hailey says. "They're the first team that really made us fold like that. They're big and quick. It's hard to play a team that's big and quick. It's incredible how they pressed for 40 minutes without getting tired."

Hunter, Jenkins Selected N.C. Players Of The Year

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Of all the talents possessed by SouthWest Edgecombe's Bridget Jenkins and Southern Durham's Curtis Hunter, perhaps the most outstanding is their ability to win.

Both proved they could win off the court when a panel of North Carolina sports writers chose them as the 1981-1982 Associated Press Players of the Year.

On the court, they proved their ability to win long ago. Jenkins' Class 3A Edgecombe team has captured 61 consecutive games, 29 this year, entering Friday's championship showdown against Shelby Crest. Hunter's Spartans finished their season at 26-2 and the state's No. 1 ranking in Class 3A.

"Bridget is really an outstanding shooter, particularly under pressure," said Cougars' coach Sandra Langley. "She's versatile. She handles the ball well, shoots well, she does everything well."

Jenkins followed in the steps of her sister, Alpha Jenkins, in being named to this year's Girls Associated Press All-

State team. Alpha made the squad last year and will be a sophomore at Old Dominion next season.

Bridget is expected to attend either Old Dominion or East Carolina.

Jenkins averaged 19.5 points, seven rebounds and 2.2 assists per game this year while shooting 59 percent from the floor and 68 percent from the free throw line.

Southern Durham coach Larry Parrish says he understands college coaches' desire to have Hunter in their lineups.

"He's a very complete player," Parrish said. "He takes a great deal of pride in all aspects of the game. He enjoys the assists of passing, he leads the fast break even though he's our center. He excels in every phase of the game."

Hunter's statistics back Parrish's statements.

While scoring 22.4 points this year on 63 percent shooting from the floor, he also grabbed 12 rebounds and doled out 3.5 assists per game.

Walker To Stay For Junior Year

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Georgia Coach Vince Dooley and the National Football League can breathe easier now that two-time All-American tailback Herschel Walker has decided not to fight the system.

Walker, who two weeks ago said there was a '70-30' chance he would challenge the NFL rule that prohibits the drafting of collegiate undergraduates, announced Tuesday he would not take the case to court and would stay at Georgia for his junior season.

"I have weighed all the facts and have decided that I will remain at Georgia and will not challenge the NFL underclassman rule," the 6-foot-1, 222-pound Walker told a jammed news conference.

"I still feel the NFL rule is basically unconstitutional. However, I don't want to interfere with the system that's designed to be the best for the majority of people involved," he said. Walker never said he wanted to play in the NFL before his college eligibility ran out, but had expressed a desire to have the right to play pro football if he so desired before his college class graduated.

Jim Heffernan, the NFL's public relations director, said from his New York office: "He's made his decision, and we wish him continued success." When asked what the NFL's response might be if the undergraduate rule were challenged at another time, Heffernan replied: "If someone does, we'll consider it at that point."

Dooley, also at the news conference, said he was pleased to again have the services of the 20-year-old Walker, who has amassed 3,741 rushing yards and 35 touchdowns in two seasons at Georgia.

"Needless to say, I'm very pleased over Herschel's decision. I'm pleased for a lot of reasons. It's in the best interests of college football, I'm pleased for Herschel, and I'm pleased for Georgia and our program," he said.

"I don't disagree with his feelings that it's an individual's right (to be able to play in the NFL when he wants to), but I think it's the right decision," Dooley said.

Walker, who is in the midst of exams this week, said he feels the NFL rule will be challenged by someone soon. But he declined to say whether he would raise the issue himself next year or remain at Georgia through his senior year.

"I never obligate myself to anything, and I never try to predict the future," said Walker, who wore blue jeans, navy blue warm-up jacket and tan boots during the 20-minute question-and-answer session.

"I'll stay my junior year," was all Walker would say about the future.

"I think I have become more mature being around the people at Georgia and experiencing the college life. It has helped me both as a person and athlete," Walker said.

Walker said he thinks he would have won if the issue had been taken to court.

"I don't think I'd go to court with a case that could lose. I thought we could win and all my advisers thought we would win," he said.

"I think I can play in that league, but I don't think I'm prepared mentally to play in the NFL at this time," Walker added.

In NCAA Tournament

Big East Making Name For Itself

PHILADELPHIA (A) — The city game is back in the big cities of the East.

From playgrounds where kids shoot at hoops that have no nets, the Big East Conference — a collection of teams from the industrialized Washington-to-Boston corridor — is making a name for itself.

The three-year-old conference has three teams — Georgetown, Boston College and Villanova — still left in the NCAA tournament, more than any other league.

More than the basketball-powerful Atlantic Coast Conference. More than the West Coast-oriented Pac-10, and more from the Big 10 country.

A fourth Big East team, St. John's, won a first-round NCAA game before losing by a point to Alabama. Two other conference teams — Syracuse and Connecticut — went to the NIT. Only Seton Hall and Providence College didn't go on to postseason play.

Six Big East teams have gone to postseason tournaments the previous two seasons. Slowly, the Big East is making believers.

Georgetown, 27-6, was the top-seeded team in the West regional. Villanova, 23-7, was third-seeded in the East. And Boston College, 20-9, distinguished itself by controlling second-ranked DePaul 82-75 in a Midwest regional last weekend.

"One of the problems with Eastern basketball was that we didn't have a conference," said Boston College coach Dr. Tom Davis Tuesday.

"We've got great players in the East, and the reason the Big East is so great is the cities," he said. "That's where the players are. Now, our league will see to it that the players stay here."

Davis didn't have to look far for his starting backcourt. John Bagley is from Bridgeport, Conn., while Dwan Chandler is from Boston.

Villanova's sleek guard Stewart Granger and standout freshman Ed Pinckney are from New York. Georgetown's monster center, Pat Ewing is from Boston, while many of the Hoyas come from Washington.

The fact that great players are in the New Yorks and Philadelphias and Washingtons is not news. Coaches from distant areas have long come here to recruit players.

"More and more players are staying home now," said Big East's energetic commissioner, Dave Gavitt, also the Providence athletic director. "Our conference has helped bring basketball attention to the East. We're a new conference, but obviously, we're not new teams."

Gavitt, on the NCAA's tournament selection committee, was criticized after Boston College — which finished fourth in the Big East this season — went to the NCAA tournament.

"I didn't think we were out on a limb with BC," Gavitt said after BC beat second-ranked DePaul. "Of course, it's always great to see Eastern teams do well."

That's how Davis feels. "We want Georgetown and the other Big East teams to do well," Davis said.

"No conference is doing for college basketball what the Big East is doing," Davis adds. "This is now the place to play."

Purdue (14-13) Still In NIT Hunt

By The Associated Press Nobody in the original 32-team field had a worse record than Purdue's 14-13. Yet the Boilermakers are still alive for the third round of the National Invitation Tournament and seem to be getting stronger.

A couple of factors are working in their favor as they prepare to host Texas A&M Friday night.

First, they're coming off an impressive 98-65 romp over Rutgers. Second, they have a strong postseason tradition, having finished second in the NIT in 1979, third in the NCAA in 1980 and third in the NIT last year.

"We want to get this next game and get to New York City," said sophomore guard Ricky Hall. "This is our seniors' last year. They've been in three Final Fours and they've never won, so we definitely want to go this year and send them out right."

The Boilermakers are led by senior guard Keith Edmonson, the Big Ten Conference leading scorer, who had 29 points in the Rutgers blowout.

The game between Purdue and Texas A&M, 20-10, will cap the third round, which begins Thursday night with Virginia Tech, 20-10, at Georgia, 18-11; Tulane, 19-8, at Bradley, 23-10; and Dayton, 21-8, at Oklahoma, 21-10.

Winners of those games will converge on New York's Madison Square Garden for Monday night's semifinals.

Texas A&M is coming off a 69-65 win over Washington in which Claude Riley scored 17 points including three key jumpers down the stretch.

The Aggies had two players foul out late in the game, and Coach Shelby Metcalf promised his team would prepare better for Purdue.

"One more win and we go to the Garden," he said.

Metcalf's sentiments were echoed by Bradley Coach Dick Versace. After his Braves knocked off Syracuse he said, "Just one more game and we're in New York. I've always liked New York."

Bradley's opponent, Tulane, will be playing for the third straight game on the road, a situation not to the liking of Coach Ned Fowler.

"It's a shame we have to play three tough games in a row in very hostile environments, instead of getting to play maybe one game in the Louisiana Superdome, where we'd have an advantage," Fowler said after his team's 56-51 second-round win at Nevada-Las Vegas.

Dayton, with the best season record of the surviving teams, has the unenviable task of playing at Oklahoma, where the crowd acted like a sixth man as the Sooners edged Cal-Irvine 80-77 in the second round.

"I've never seen a crowd as good in college basketball," said Oklahoma Coach Billy Tubbs. "They were awesome."

Dayton has a trump card of its own with the return of sparkplug guard Kevin Conrad who came back from a case of mononucleosis to key the Flyers' 61-58 win over Illinois.

SSS Whips Ram Girls

SMITHFIELD — Smithfield-Selma High School rolled to an easy victory over the Greene Central girls' track team yesterday in the Lady Rams' opening meet of the year.

Memories Of Fight Remain Vivid For Bill Musselman

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Memories of a violent outburst in a college basketball game between Minnesota and Ohio State have been dimmed by time, but in these parts at least, Bill Musselman still lives with the boing and name-calling 10 years later.

Musselman, in his second tour as coach of the National Basketball Association Cleveland Cavaliers, looks back with some bitterness on the incident, saying he was denied the chance to give his side of what happened.

Musselman was 31 then, the hard-driving coach of a Minnesota basketball team known for its intense, showy pregame drills.

During a game with Ohio State at Minneapolis in 1972, some of Musselman's players attacked several of the Buckeyes, beating and stomping them in what remains one of the ugliest incidents in collegiate sports history.

Much of the blame was directed at Musselman, who stood accused of recruiting vicious young men to play for him and driving them to a frenzy. And much of the anger still directed at him today by Cleveland area fans stems from the incident.

"It doesn't happen other places," Musselman said of the boing and name-calling. "Just here. Here, where I was born, grew up. The place where I live.

"I was branded by that incident," he said in an interview with Tom Melody of the Akron Beacon Journal. "It didn't matter that I had had no trouble to speak of before that, no trouble to speak of since that."

"I still can't believe it, I'm still amazed by the lingering reaction to it," he said. "There's no way I wanted something like that to happen — and, if it did have to happen, I certainly didn't want it to happen against Ohio State."

"Do you think I wanted my mother in Wooster to have to put up with what she had to put up with, do you think I wanted other members of my family, my friends, to have to live with such a thing?"

Musselman said the Big Ten gagged him after the incident, refusing to allow him to say things that he felt should have been said.

"Someone from the league came into the dressing room immediately after the game and told me not to say a word about the officiating," he said.

"Well, in fact a lot needed to be said about the officials. They allowed the game to get out of hand, allowed things to be done by both teams that never should have been condoned. One of the officials never worked a game before that season."

Musselman is particularly galled about being called "Musclehead," something for which he blames Cleveland sports talk radio show host Pete Franklin.

He recalled that one night after his son had helped lead his Brecksville High School basketball team to victory, the boy returned home, hurried to his bedroom and closed the door.

"His team had won, he scored 32 points, a part of the game has been shown on television — yet he was hurt, unhappy," Musselman said. "I found out later it was because of the names he had been called, Musclehead."

On another occasion, fans threw hot dogs at Musselman's son.

Musselman said that because of such incidents, his desire to be a coach has ebbed. He coached the Cavaliers for part of last season, then was fired but stayed with the team as director of personnel.

Last week, Cavaliers owner Ted Stepien, who had replaced Musselman with the untried Don Delaney and then earlier this season fired him and picked Chuck Daly, decided on yet another coaching change.

Daly was out, and Stepien once again turned to Musselman to coach the slumping team, which has the worst record in the league.

Chargers Defeat D.H. Conley, 11-7

LITTLEFIELD — Ayden-Grifton scored twice in the second inning and never let up after that as the Chargers rolled to an 11-7 baseball victory over D.H. Conley yesterday.

Tyrone Gay hurled the victory for the Chargers, but gave way to relief in the sixth inning. He also helped the hitting along with a pair of hits, while Doug Coley and Joey Kennedy each also added two.

The Chargers started the scoring in the second inning with two runs. Roger Moye walked and stole second. He scored on Kennedy's single. Kennedy moved to third on a sacrifice and a passed ball, scoring with Art Rouse got a hit.

Ayden-Grifton added a third run in the third. Terry Locust walked and stole second. He scored when Gay doubled.

The Chargers went on to add two in the fourth, five in the fifth and one in the sixth for their 11-run total.

Conley, held scoreless until the fifth, finally broke the ice with a run. Wesley Smith walked and Jeff Manning was hit by a pitch. Walks followed to Doug McRoy and Jeff Cox, forcing in Smith.

The Vikings then added two in the sixth and four in the seventh before finally being closed out.

Mills led the Conley hitting with two.

The victory boosted the Charger record to 2-2 on the year, while Conley slips to 1-2. Conley play host to Farmville Central on Friday, while Ayden-Grifton visits West Craven.

a recruiter. Swimmers coming here will have the opportunity to swim under one of the better young coaches in the country."

"I'm very excited about the position," said Kobe, who earned his undergraduate degree in physical education and health at Fairmont State and his masters in the same field at West Virginia. "As a young coach, it's always a goal to get a head coaching position. My goal will be to take East Carolina swimming as far as it can go and to have the best teams we've ever had. And we're close to that. Recruiting has gone great. Next year we have the potential to be the best we've ever been here. I'm excited to be involved in it."

Scharf, who led this year's mens team to a 5th place finish at the Eastern Intercollegiate, and the women's to a 16th-place finish in the AIWA National meet, compiled a career men's record of 93-55 in dual meets and coached 24 women's all-Americans, including eight this year.

Ray Scharf

He reeled off 11 consecutive Southern Conference titles from 1966 to 1977 and coached 127 individual conference champions. Eighty-six of his swimmers were named all-Southern and over 40 have qualified for the NCAA Division I championships.

Scharf's numerous awards include "Coach of the Year" at the Eastern Intercollegiate, the NCAA's 15 year service award and "Master Coach" status which was presented in 1977 by the College Swimming Coaches Association for his service to the sport and his domination of the Southern Conference.

Scharf graduated from SUNY-Brockport, and gained a masters at Arizona while serving as assistant coach there in 1962. He was head coach at Edison High School of Newark, N.J., for two years, and after supervising programs in the YMCA at Alexandria, Va., the Mt. Vernon Yacht Club, the Fort Hunt (Va.) High School, and as assistant coach at American University, he joined ECU in 1967.

He will continue as director of aquatics at East Carolina.

ECU Game Rained Out

Rain and wet grounds forced the postponement of yesterday's baseball game between Fairfield University and the East Carolina Pirates, as well as several other spring sports activities.

The ECU-Fairfield game was to be made up as part of a doubleheader today at 1 p.m. at Harrington Field.

Other activities washed out, and their new playing date, if known: North Carolina at East Carolina softball, will not be made up; Williamston at Washington baseball, softball and tennis, to be played today; Jamesville at Bath baseball and softball, today; Rose at Greene Central softball, Wednesday, March 24; Roanoke Rapids at Roanoke baseball and softball, Wednesday; Bear Grass at Chocowinity baseball and softball, April 7; Conley at Ayden-Grifton softball, today; Rose at Kinston tennis, today; and Goldsboro at Greene Central baseball, Thursday.

SSS Boys Fell Rams In Track

SMITHFIELD — Smithfield-Selma High School dominated action in a threeway track meet held here Tuesday, downing Greene Central and Charles B. Aycock.

On Live TV

WNCT-TV, Channel 9, will carry Friday night's North Carolina-Alabama game live, starting at 9:35 p.m., it announced today. Originally, the game was to have been carried on tape delay at 11:30 p.m.

Smithfield-Selma finished the day with 135 points, while Greene Central was a distant second with 32 points. Aycock finished the afternoon with only 11.

The Rams, now 1-1, travel to Wilson Beddingfield Monday.

For Mountain Climbers, Style Is The Essence

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

What constitutes an athlete?

It's one thing for a 220-pound man to demolish another of equal size in a 20-foot square ring, a la World Boxing Council heavyweight champion Larry Holmes.

It takes a lot of finesse and power to escape the swarming arms of nearly a dozen clefted giants and run for a touchdown, as O. J. Simpson did in football.

Steel nerve and unshakable concentration are required to sink a 10-foot putt on the final hole for a major golf championship, a trademark of Jack Nicklaus, also to ski down a mountainside at 80 mph as an Ingemar Stenmark or gun a sleek machine around a curve at close to 200 mph in the fashion of auto racing's A.J. Foyt.

But what about taking on a mountain, a 29,002-foot peak such as Mount Everest, a silent, solemn adversary with jagged rock edges as sharp as butcher knives and an icy 125 mph breath that can almost cut a man in two as cleanly as the swipe of a sabre.

"We are athletes, too," says mountain climber Ned Gillette. "We train for it just as a guy does for football or baseball. We use our own subtle techniques to gain an end. And, most of all, we have to persevere."

"It's a sport, like any other," adds Jan Reynolds, like Gillette a product of the New England snow country, whose interest in scaling impossible heights was pricked by climbing firebreaks while the two of them were teaching skiing in Stowe, Vt.

"You have to be mentally prepared and alert. Make one mistake and it could be fatal."

Gillette and Reynolds are not just every day, run-of-the-mill mountain climbers. They are part of a small, select team aimed at making history.

They are adventurers, girding for the last leg next month of a unique conquest — the first ever to encircle completely the world's highest peak, Mount Everest, in the Himalayas.

"Scaling Mount Everest is no longer a big deal," Gillette said. "Others have done it since Sir Edmund Hillary first reached the peak 28 years ago. The object is to find another way of doing it. Style is the essence of adventurism."

The style of these hardy New Englanders is to ski and climb entirely around the great mountain with its precipitous cliffs, jagged rocks and perpetual snow peaks.

The first half of the project was completed in January when Gillette and Reynolds, aided by Craig Calonica and Jim Bridwell of Squaw Valley, Calif., pushed through three ice-covered passes, each 20,000 feet high, first to conquer the 23,442-foot Mount Pumori, west of Everest, and then reach Makalu, Nepal, to the east.

They became the first Americans ever to climb Mount Pumori.

The final test, to be launched in April, will cover a two-month, ski-climb through Tibet, until recently closed to expeditions from the West.

"Their mountains are national treasures and they charge trespassers," said Gillette. "So, as in pro tennis and golf, we need sponsors."

The sponsor of the so-called "Camel Expedition" is the tobacco firm, R.J. Reynolds, which held a news conference in New York Tuesday to describe the novel undertaking.

Gillette and Reynolds will be joined on the final expedition by Steve McKinney of Squaw Valley, Calif., who set a world speed record of 124.34 mph skiing down a mountain in Portillo, Chile, and Jim Bridwell, 37, of San Jose, Calif., who has been scaling mountains since he was 18.

Reynolds, 25, slim and pretty, is a specialist in cross-country skiing. Gillette, 36, is a scholarly-looking Dartmouth grad whose talents run also to photography and writing.

The team will travel light, each carrying some 75 pounds of gear. There will be no guides or porters.

TPC's New Home Sparks Controversy

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. (AP) — The world's finest players — including Jack Nicklaus, Tom Watson and defending champion Ray Floyd — may take second billing to a piece of real estate this week in the ninth Tournamet Players Championships.

The 72-hole event which begins Thursday offers a $500,000 purse to a 144-man field that almost certainly will be without equal in American golf this year.

It's also likely to produce a certain amount of controversy.

The tournament, the annual championship of golf's touring pros and rapidly growing to a position of prestige and importance rivaling the established Big Four tournaments, moves to a new, permanent home at the Players' Club this year. The course has a unique design and is located just across the road from the Sawgrass links that served as the tournament site for the last five seasons.

The Players' Club is billed, according to TPA Commissioner Deane Beman, as "a functioning example of golf's future."

There was, however, some unanticipated expense involved in getting it functioning.

The course, hacked out of woodlands and swamps and usually raked by swirling winds of the Atlantic, is owned by the tournament players themselves. It was scheduled to host the 1981 TPC, but the debut was delayed for a full year.

"I was on the policy board during the construction of the course," said touring pro Ed Sneed. "When players ask me, 'why did we have to spend $1 million to go in and redesign eight greens — not solving problems of drainage or settling ground or anything like that but to correct the design?', well, I don't have an answer for them. I feel like I've got a certain amount of egg on my face."

At least one hole, the par-3 17th, remains controversial. The entire carry, only 132 yards but in fickle, changing winds that swirl above the treeline, is over water.

"It's a little too severe," Sneed said. "It's entirely possible that a guy could come to that hole on Sunday with a five-shot lead and lose the golf tournament."

The most important new feature of the course, however, is the "stadium golf" concept. This involves huge man-made mounds terraced to provide seating for thousands of spectators, around greens and other key viewing areas.

"Instead of being able to put 20,000 people on a golf course, we can handle 50,000," Beman said.

The new club, he said "truly represents a milestone, both for golf in general and for the TPA Tour. As much as we believe the club will serve as a model for the future of tournament golf courses, we also feel its existence is a positive reflection of just how far the Tour has come over the years."

The TPC is the only designated tournament — an event in which all leading players are required to compete — now on the schedule.

Two Return On Team...

The 6-5, 190 pounder has visited Duke, South Carolina and North Carolina State and has a trip to Maryland on his schedule.

McClain, who rocked Kinston for 43 points, will lead Rocky Mount into Saturday's Class 4A championship game against top-ranked Chapel Hill.

A 6-1 long-range bomber, McClain has connected on 45 percent of his field goal attempts and 80 percent of his free-throw tries while averaging 24 points and nine assists.

Beecher, whose 6-10, 210-pound frame led North Stokes to a 28-1 record, has verbally committed to Virginia Tech.

There he hopes to duplicate his 25-point, 12-rebound, six blocked-shot averages. A 64 percent shooter, his high was a school record 44 points against East Surry.

Warden hit 54 percent from the floor while scoring 22.5 points and grabbing 8.5 rebounds per game, his best scoring effort being a 40-pointer against North State Academy.

Davis, a strong 6-5, 196, has again led defending state champion Chapel Hill to the No. 1 ranking in Class 4A.

Davis is averaging 18.4 points, 8.1 rebounds, 3.8 assists and 3.3 steals while shooting 63 percent from the floor, down from last year's 70 percent.

Lattimore, a 6-3, 190-pound guard, is considered a step slow by some, but was quick enough to score in double figures every game en route to a 21.3 norm.

He shot 57 percent from the floor, 72 percent from the line and grabbed 6.3 rebounds and 2.5 assists per game.

Hickory is in the mountains, but even they can't hide "Mount Washburn." At age 15, he is 6-11 and weighs 240 pounds. After leading Hickory to a 23-3 season, he will run the hurdles for the track team.

Washburn averaged 17.1 points, 8.7 rebounds, blocked 66 shots and hit 60.1 percent from the floor and 64.9 percent from the line. He also dunks the ball — 80 times this year including nine in one game.

Eight players were chosen Honorable Mention All-Staters. They are: Keith Gatlin of D.H. Conley; Davidson recruit Rafael Hernandez of Southview; James Rhone of Fayetteville Cape Fear; Mark Maye of Charlotte Independence; Mike Hinson of Greensboro Grimsley; North Davidson's Charles Douthit; Greensboro Page's Michael Foster and Ed Bleyat of East Burke, already committed to Clemson.

play, Hobgood was joined in scoring by teammates Alan Wooten, 78; Robbie Langston, 78; and Jeff Cutler, 88.

Kinston's low man was Tinsley Mitchell at 76, followed by Charles Evans and Lee McGee, 77 each; and Mike Marshall, 79.

Hunt was led by Davis Lane at 78, followed by Jay Pittman, 80, Mike Kennedy, 81, and Kent Williams, 83.

Boston Forward Scores 31 Points, Grabs 21 Rebounds Celtics Edge Bullets Behind Bird

By The Associated Press
Larry Bird just won't cooperate with the Boston Celtics' plans to bring him back slowly from a fractured cheekbone.

Bird, coming off the bench for the fourth straight game after missing five in a row because of the injury, scored 31 points and tied his career high with 21 rebounds as the Celtics edged the Washington Bullets 98-97 in overtime Tuesday night.

The victory stretched Boston's National Basketball Association winning streak to 12.

The streak, which has helped the Celtics take a 3½-game edge over Philadelphia in the race for the best record in the Eastern Conference, left Coach Bill Fitch in good humor over Bird's performance.

"I like the way things are going now, and Larry likes being the sixth man," Fitch said. "Someone told him he's the highest-paid sixth man in history."

Bird was less enthusiastic, but diplomatic, about his admittedly temporary role. "It's all right," said Bird, who had eight points in the extra period. "Right now, it's my turn to sit."

The Celtics trailed 62-46 in the third quarter, but rallied for an 83-82 edge.

A field goal and two free throws by Spencer Haywood, who led Washington with 24 points, gave the Bullets an 86-83 edge with just 14 seconds remaining, but the Celtics retained possession after Bird hit one free throw and missed a second with 11 seconds to go.

Bird's eight points and four of his first 14 shots, saved Boston in the extra period.

"You can't be gun shy," said Parish, who finished with 21 points. "I made the shots when they counted, that's all that matters."

"Robert hasn't had a night like that since training camp," Fitch said of Parish's poor shooting percentage in the first half. "But when it came down to the nitty gritty, we called his number."

Washington Coach Gene Shue said the key to the loss may have been center Rick Mahorn's ejection early in the second period after he was called for two technicals.

"Boston is trying to win the championship," Shue said. "But we're trying to make the playoffs. The officials ought to recognize the importance of the game and walk away after the first technical."

Shue and Jim Chones of the Bullets also were called for technicals just 11 seconds after Mahorn's two.

Bucks 106, 76ers 91
Sidney Moncrief scored 17 of his 32 points in the fourth quarter to break open a close game against Philadelphia. Milwaukee led 80-76 when Moncrief started a string of 13 straight Bucks points that put them ahead 93-81 with 4:43 to go.

Suns 114, Rockets 109
Dennis Johnson scored a season-high 37 points, including two late free throws that helped Phoenix withstand a last-ditch Houston rally.

The Rockets faced an 86-78 deficit after three quarters, but they cut the gap to 111-109 with 27 seconds left. Then Johnson hit the two foul shots and Len "Truck" Robinson, who scored 25 points for the Suns, connected on one of two free throws with nine seconds to go.

Lakers 120, Blazers 108

Johnny Davis scored 26 points to help Indiana beat Seattle and break a four-game losing streak.

The Pacers, who had lost 12 of their previous 13 games to the Sonics, led 62-54 at halftime and extended the margin to 15, at 74-59, with 6:25 remaining in the third period. Seattle could get no closer than nine points thereafter.

Nuggets 154, Jazz 138
Denver handed Utah its 11th straight loss while scoring the most points by an NBA team this season in a regulation game.

Alex English had 32 points, 13 rebounds and 10 assists as the Nuggets scored 100 points or more for the 100th straight game since Jan. 18, 1981. The league record is 129 by the San Antonio Spurs.

Spurs 114, Knicks 91
George Gervin and Mike Mitchell both scored 33 points as San Antonio bombed New York.

Gervin had 31 points and Mitchell 29 with 5:30 left in the third quarter. At that point, they had more points than the entire Knicks team as the Spurs led 78-57.

Michael Ray Richardson scored 25 points to lead New York.

Pistons 114, Clippers 110
Isiah Thomas scored 27 points and Kelly Tripucka added 26 to lead Detroit past San Diego.

The Clippers, who got a game-high 33 points from Michael Brooks, trailed 97-94 early in the fourth quarter, but Tripucka hit four straight baskets for the Pistons to open a 105-98 margin.

How can you use a classified ad to help with the family budget?

1. Sell that tuba that hasn't sounded a note the last three years. Any musical instrument will do if you don't have a tuba.
2. Take a good look in your garage. If there's a bike, moped, or motorcycle that hasn't had a rider in a long time, now's the time to exchange it for cash.
3. Grown-ups also let still-good items go unused! Got a sewing machine, typewriter or knitting machine you haven't mastered? Find a cash buyer for it.
4. Don't forget sound equipment . . . radio, TV, stereo, tape recorder, CB, walkie-talkie . . . people are always looking for things to listen to.
5. And the workshop . . . wherever it is . . . is the place to spot tools which still have a lot of good use in them. Let someone else put them to work while you fatten your budget.

That's how!

Just take inventory of the many good items in your home some family would like to have. Then give us a call to place your ad. Classified ads have been helping families stretch their budgets for years . . . and they can help you, too.

CHEESE-OLD NUTRITION SECRET FOR TODAY

By Ronald M. Deutsch
KROGER Nutrition Consultant

When the legions of ancient Rome marched out to conquer the known world, they had with them an old nutrition treasure which let them fight and thrive far from home. Cheese. Unlike perishable milk, most cheese tends to keep well which is one reason why ancient societies with no refrigeration searched for new kinds of cheese. Today we benefit from their search with approximately 800 varieties of cheese available. KROGER wants you to know how to make the most of the wide variety of cheeses not just for taste, but for concentrated nutrition. Examples? Cheese can be a bargain in high-quality protein. It offers vitamins and minerals which are often short in diets of those who don't drink milk. So learn to put cheese nutrition to work. At KROGER now you'll find recipes and hints on keeping and cooking all free!

Nomination Revisions Advocated

WASHINGTON (AP)—Calling the presidential nominating system "cumbersome, complex and confusing," a bipartisan commission recommended today halving the number of primaries and shortening the time period for selecting national convention delegates.

The commission also urged increasing the influence of elected and party officials at conventions and eliminating rules binding delegates to support the results of primaries and caucuses.

Headed by former Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird, a Wisconsin Republican, and former Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson III, an Illinois Democrat, the commission was established by the White Burkett Miller Center of Public Affairs at the University of Virginia.

Also serving on the commission's executive board were Robert Strauss, former Democratic Party chairman, and Anne Wexler, a White House aide during the Carter administration.

"From both ends of the political spectrum come demands for change," said the commission report. "This new movement knows no partisan cast, nor does it seek to benefit any one candidate or faction. It is motivated solely by the belief that the public interest is ill-served by the current nominating system."

The commission, which took testimony from about 1,000 people, said the current nominating system "is more the result of unintended consequences and mutual miscalculations than deliberate design."

The group said it was advocating a small number of practical changes which could be implemented immediately.

However, there appears to be no inclination on the part of either the Democrats or Republicans to jettison their own plans in favor of the Laird-Stevenson commission views.

The Republicans have no plans for changes in their rules before their 1984 convention.

The Democrats, on the recommendation of a commission on presidential nominations led by Gov. Jim Hunt of North Carolina, are rewriting their rules and are expected to approve changes at a party meeting later this month.

The recommendations of the Laird-Stevenson commission include:

—Reducing the number of presidential primaries to a maximum of 16 and scheduling them regionally by time zones. In each election year, the order in which the regions would hold their primaries would be determined by lot.

—Giving caucus states greater flexibility to set aside uncommitted delegates.

—Changing state laws and party rules "to assure that all delegates, no matter how they are chosen, would retain the option of exercising independent judgment in their convention vote."

—Including members of Congress, governors and high party officials as ex-officio delegates who would not be bound by the results of delegate selection contests.

—Enforcing a strict time frame within which primaries, caucuses and "beauty contests" or straw polls may be held, beginning no earlier than the first week in March and ending no later than the first week in June.

—Raising the limit on individual campaign contributions from $1,000 to $5,000.

Summer Study In Morocco

ECU News Bureau
Ten East Carolina University students will participate in ECU's first summer study program in Morocco.

Donna Glisson of Route 10, Greenville, a sophomore education major will be one of the participants in the May 11-June 26 program, which will be directed by Dr. Robert E. Cramer of the ECU Department of Geography and Planning.

The program is a cooperative project between ECU and the Experiment for International Living, based in Brattleboro, Vt.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — THINK: THE FAST WALLAROO IS A LARGE, SWIFT KANGAROO.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: S equals F

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, MAR. 18, 1982

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day when you can express goodwill and are able to get together and work out personal problems with others. Make a point to maintain self-control and understanding of others.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You may feel sluggish early in the day but later can make up for lost time and accomplish a great deal. Be sensible.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) New projects appeal to you but they need more study before you jump into them. New contacts yield fine benefits now.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Make sure you carry through with promises made and you gain fine benefits from them. Show more affection for loved one.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You may not agree with the ideas of an associate, but think them over carefully for a better appraisal.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Improving your surroundings now can add to your comfort and pleasure. Take time to improve your appearance. Be logical.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Express your finest talents and gain the support of higher-ups. Don't waste time with persons who have selfish interests.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Study home conditions and clarify any problems there in a friendly fashion. Make your life as you want it to be.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Make it a point to contact persons who can give the advice you need to make greater progress in career matters.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Ideal day to handle money matters and increase your security in the future. Give more attention to close ties.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You can easily make an excellent impression on others at this time. Accept social invitations and dress in good taste.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Think over your ideas for the future and make plans to profit by them. Consult an expert for advice you need.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Good time to get together with friends and make mutual plans for the future. Take no chances with one who opposes you.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she could be easily spoiled, so teach your progeny to stand on own two feet and make the most of the talents in this chart. Would do well in the field of entertainment. Teach to set a goal and then to follow through.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

If there was a better dummy player than the legendary Helen Sobel Smith, it is news to us. That is not just the opinion of one of the writers of this column, who was for many years her regular partner, but also the opinion of the world's great players who had the privilege of watching her. Her bidding might not have always warmed the hearts of purists, but no matter how high she climbed in the auction, she had the ability to deliver the contract if there was any hope. Here's an example of her skill. Against four hearts West got off to the good start of the jack of clubs — a low club would have ended played East at trick one; and ace of spades and another, though giving partner a ruff, would have greatly simplified declarer's task. Declarer covered the jack of clubs with the king, and East won the ace. East continued with the queen of clubs and, with hardly a moment's thought, Helen discarded a diamond! Now the defenders were helpless. Since the ten of clubs would set up the nine in dummy a low club would be no better, even if Helen chose to ruff. East chose to shift to a diamond. Declarer finessed, drew four rounds of trumps

Mime Grop To Perform

RALEIGH — Theater Just For Us, in its last children's series of the season, will feature "Touch," a mime group from the Art School in Carrboro.

"Touch" will present two shows Saturday at 10:30 a.m. and again at 2:30 p.m. in Stewart Theater, on the campus of North Carolina State University. Tickets are priced at $3.50 each.

The show is recommended for children in grades K-6. The program is supported in part by the North Carolina Theater Arts Division of the N.C. Department of Cultural Resources.

Verdi Opera To Air Saturday

WASHINGTON — Giuseppe Verdi's opera of patriotic rebellion, "I Vespri Siciliani," will be broadcast live from the Metropolitan Opera house beginning at 2 p.m. Saturday. Locally, the broadcast will be carried over Radio Station WITN, 930 on the radio dial.

Performers are Wieslaw Ochman as Arrigo, Palbo Elvira as Monforte, Ruggero Raimondi as Procidia, and Renata Scotto as Elena. James Levine conducts the Metropolitan Opera Orchestra.

It's Debut Time Again With Herbie And Cops

By FRED ROTHENBERG

AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "Hill Street Blues" sliced cops open and discovered flesh and blood. "Baker's Dozen" goes a step further and finds they're all stand-up comics.

"Baker's Dozen," tonight's new CBS comedy, is on-location police work played for laughs. It's a nice try, but, ultimately, so-so television because situation comedies and reality are mutually exclusive. In "Baker's Dozen," the believability of the New York City streets and crime is authentic enough to make the rapid-fire one-liners seem forced and out of place.

There's something incongruous about a cop risking life and limb, then telling jokes or doing a soft shoe. Reality works for "Hill Street" because the humor comes from the characters, not the serious situations. And, besides, who ever heard of authenticity being sweetened by a laugh track?

Hill and Renko on "Hill Street" cope with the pressures and frustrations of their jobs through humor, but in "Baker's Dozen," laughs are the real objective. That's OK for "Barney Miller." Those cops never leave the precinct house, and their comedy really is about office work and bureaucracy.

Danger never gets in the way.

Maybe if the comedy was funnier, the reality objections would be less severe. But in its current format, "Baker's Dozen" is six of one and a half-dozen of another, and it just doesn't add up in the end.

The premise of the show is that two cops on the decoy team are having an undercover relationship. Ron Silver is Mike Luccasale, an unorthodox detective who goes by the book . . . his own.

He's also a chauvinistic worry wart when it comes to his girl friend, Terry, played by Cindy Weintraub. Their friendship is the series' strong point. They're very likeable together, and it's fun to hear them dissect a movie, their jobs, and life from conflicting points of view. But Mike's overprotectiveness wears thin very quickly.

Tonight's pilot is the best of the first three shows. It involves Mike and Terry staking out a singles bar to nail a suspect who comes on to women then cuts their throats. The comedy-by-play in the bar, while the cops wait for their man to show up, is quite good.

But the comedy isn't maintained when the other characters are introduced. Doris Belack is the no-nonsense Capt. Baker, the woman commander of the anti-crime unit. When she's not around, the fun supposedly begins, as everybody in the squad room tries to top the other's one-liners.

That includes such stereotypes as the balding, fat, cigar-chomping officer (Thomas Quinn) who never leaves the office, and the jive-talking, swinging black officer (Alan Weeks).

In the third episode, when Mike reluctantly allows Terry to meet his Italian parents, "Baker's Dozen" trots out every stale father-mother cliché-joke imaginable. This allows Silver to reprise his insecure, fast-talking character who was so grating in the "Rhoda" series.

CBS' "Herbie, The Love Bug," from Walt Disney Productions, is charming family entertainment that the 7-year-old critic in the household found very enjoyable.

It stars Dean Jones, who has made a career out of "Herbie" theatrical films. The Volkswagen, who's smarter than the average sitcom character, also gives a winning performance.

In tonight's opening episode, Jim (Jones) and Herbie foil a bank robbery and save a hostage named Susan (Patricia Harty). Susan turns out to be a divorced mother of three all-American kids, and the adults and the car begin a G-rated relationship.

Larry Linville (formerly Frank Burns in "M-A-S-H") is the one obstacle to happy motoring, but have no fear, Herbie is no lemon. "Volkswagen does it again."

Old Theater

Biting Dust

STATESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The Historic Iredell Foundation and local residents are putting up a fuss, but their protests are falling on deaf ears as plans proceed to raze the historic Playhouse Theatre.

The 1927-vintage building, which in its heyday was a palace of chandeliers and mirrored walls where stars of silver screen and radio performed, has been sold to Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., which plans to level it and build its first Statesville branch on the site.

At one time, Minnie Pearl, Little Jimmy Dickens and the Three Stooges graced the Playhouse Theatre. But it closed March 7 with less flashy film entertainment — "The Soggy Bottom Gang."

"While it has been sad to a lot of people, there's only one way I can look at it now," said Bill Sams, the 37-year-old president of Statesville Theatre Corp., which owned the Playhouse. "And that is that nothing stays the same. Everything has to change."

A sign of the changing times, Sams said, is the price of coal to fire the theater's furnace, which has jumped from an original $4 to $85 a ton.

The orchestra pit, pipe organ, box seats and footlights have long since been removed. Backstage are five dressing rooms — comedian Soupy Sales and a chimpanzee sidekick were the last big stars to use them in the 1960s — and a six-story fly loft where backdrops were raised in the days of Vaudeville.

"It was the largest stage, when it was built, from Atlanta to Washington," said house manager Bill Warren, 51, as he removed fixtures last week. The theater seats 826.

Elvis Presley canceled a date to play there in 1955 so he could go to Hollywood to make his first film, "Love Me Tender."

For Warren, the Playhouse has been a way of life. He started there in 1951 and has popped corn, put up marquee signs and run projectors.

"I don't know anything else but theater," he said.

Newspaper Co-Op Couponing, Westport, Connecticut 06880

SPEEDY MINI-PIZZAS

- 1 (6-oz.) can Hunt's Tomato Paste
- 1 cup water
- 1/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese
- 1/4 teas. oregano
- 1/4 teas. sugar
- 6 English muffins, split and toasted
- 8 oz. shredded mozzarella cheese
- Toppings: sliced pepperoni, green pepper rings, sliced olives, sliced mushrooms

In a small bowl, combine Hunt's Tomato Paste, water, Parmesan, oregano and sugar. Spread equal amounts on muffin halves. Sprinkle with mozzarella, garnish with toppings as desired. Broil 3 to 4 minutes or until cheese melts. Makes 12 mini-pizzas.

POPCORN GORP

- 1/2 cup Orville Redenbacher's Gourmet Popping Corn
- 1/2 cup Orville Redenbacher's Gourmet Buttery
- 1 (6-oz.) package dried fruit bits
- 1/2 cup dry roasted peanuts
- 1/2 cup dry roasted sunflower seeds

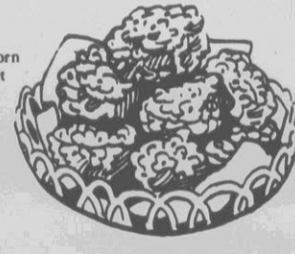

Pop Orville Redenbacher's Gourmet Popping Corn in buttery oil. Combine all ingredients. Store in tightly covered container. Makes 1/2 quarts.

PEANUT BUTTER BALLS

- 1 cup peanut butter
- 1 (14-oz.) can sweetened condensed milk
- 1/2 cup coconut
- 2 1/2 qts. popped Orville Redenbacher's Gourmet Popping Corn
- 1 (6-oz.) pkg. semi-sweet chocolate pieces

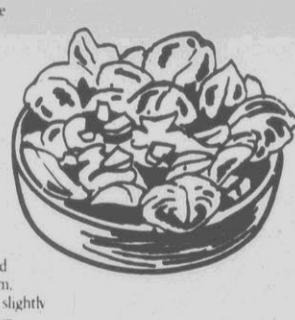

In a large bowl, combine peanut butter, milk and coconut; add popcorn and toss until well mixed. Form into 1 1/2-inch balls; place on wax paper in large flat container. Refrigerate. Meanwhile, melt chocolate over hot water in double boiler. Spread over tops of balls in lacy pattern. Return to refrigerator to harden chocolate. Makes about 30 balls.

APPLE 'N NUT TOSS

- 2 cups diced tart, red apples, unpeeled
- 1 Tablsp. lemon juice
- 1 cup diced celery
- 1/2 cup Sunlite mavoisaise (below)
- 1 cup chopped walnuts
- 1 cup shredded lettuce, chilled

In a medium size bowl, sprinkle apples with lemon juice to keep from discoloring. Combine apples with celery. Add mavoisaise and mix well. Arrange chilled lettuce leaves on six salad plates and spoon on salad mixture. Sprinkle with nuts. Makes 6 servings.

JIFFY PORCUPINES

- 1 pound ground beef
- 2 cup pre-cooked rice
- 1/4 cup chopped onion
- 1 teas. salt
- 1/4 teas. pepper
- 2 Tablsp. Wesson Oil
- 2 (8-oz.) cans Hunt's Tomato Sauce
- 1 cup water

Mix beef, rice, onion and seasonings. Form into small balls. Fry in hot Wesson Oil, turning frequently, until light brown but not crusty on all sides. Add Hunt's Tomato Sauce and water. Mix well. Cover. Simmer about 20 minutes. Makes 4 servings.

BATTER FRIED CHICKEN

- 1 egg, slightly beaten
- 1/2 teas. baking powder
- 2/3 cup milk
- 1 Tablsp. Wesson Oil
- 1 cup sifted all-purpose flour
- 2 teas. seasoned salt
- 1/4 teas. pepper
- 1 (2 1/2 to 3-lb.) frying chicken, cut up
- Wesson Oil for frying

Combine egg, milk and Wesson Oil. Stir together flour, baking powder, salt, and pepper; add to milk mixture; beat until smooth. Dip pieces of chicken in batter; drain 5 to 10 minutes on rack. Fill Dutch oven 3/4 full with Wesson Oil; heat to 375°F.; cook chicken about 12 minutes. Drain on paper towels. Makes 4 servings.

Mexican Communists See No Chances In 1982's Election

By SOLL SUSSMAN
Associated Press Writer
MEXICO CITY (AP) — Arnoldo Martinez Verdugo, the communist-backed candidate of Mexico's Unified Socialist Party, says he knows he can't win the presidency in July but feels his campaign eventually will bring about change in the country.

The governing Institutional Revolutionary Party has dominated politics here for more than 50 years and even Martinez Verdugo says that won't change soon.

But Martinez Verdugo, who describes himself as an active communist for nearly four decades, says his campaign is important.

"It can make a political influence," the 57-year-old politician said in a recent interview at the party's multistory, sparsely furnished offices. "And above all it offers the presentation of better alternatives. You advance in the creation of a force and a perspective for change."

The Institutional Revolutionary Party's campaign has taken its presidential candidate, Miguel de la Madrid, by plane and helicopter to every state in the country.

Martinez Verdugo said he will do the same, but in a different way: "I do it by bus."

His leftist coalition, known as PSUM, was formed last fall from the registered Communist Party and four unregistered small leftist parties.

It claims about 80,000 members. About 32 million Mexicans will be eligible to vote in the July 4 balloting. In the 1979 congressional elections the Communists ran with the support of the four other leftist parties and got 704,000 votes, 5.4 percent of the national total.

Under the political reform of 1977 that opened up the political system, the PSUM must get at least 1.5 percent of the vote July 4 to stay registered.

Martinez Verdugo does not predict a crisis in the Institutional Revolutionary Party's dominance it has held since 1929.

"I think that there is a necessity to modify the course, above all the economic course, that the country follows," he said. "But I think it would be adventuresome on my part to say that now in this electoral campaign that course is going to be modified."

Martinez Verdugo added that although the short-term is sewed up there is a chance for future change.

He was born in a peasant family in northern Mexico, came to Mexico City to study painting but worked in a factory to support himself and became involved in union activities.

The author of three books on political history, Martinez Verdugo speaks more with the air of quiet authority of an academic than a politician.

"Mexico's economic growth characterizes us as savages," he said. "It is too concentrated, too anti-popular. It has created great groups of monopolies, great associations of financiers, and I think that there is a growing impulse ... for this economic development to be modified."

He said Mexico's new oil wealth should be directed more toward social development, "not to a concentrated group of bureaucrats made wealthy and to great monopolies."

His coalition's economic platform calls for less emphasis on the sales tax and other forms of taxation that affect the poor more than the wealthy. "I don't have — we in general don't have — the idea that socialism is something uniform for all countries," he said. "It is rather a creation that each country has to make for itself."

There has been discontent in the coalition, whose symbol is a yellow hammer and sickle on a red circle. One significant leftist party, the Mexican Workers Party, refused to join because of disagreements in basic campaign policy and strategy.

"It's that we have not come to agreement on what the revolutionary party of Mexico should be. We have different conceptions," he said. "I'm convinced that in the end there will be a fusion."

Gold Medalist A Snack-Maker

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — Almost a decade after he won a Gold Medal and two silvers in the Munich Olympics of 1972, swimming star Mike Stamm is busy making midnight snacks for a Saudi Arabian prince.

At least five evenings a week, he drives to work at the ocean-view mansion of Prince Fahad T. Abdulaziz, 26-year-old nephew of King Khaled of Saudi Arabia. He advises Fahad about food, puts menus together, prepares and serves meals starting as late as 10 p.m. and works as late as 3:30 a.m.

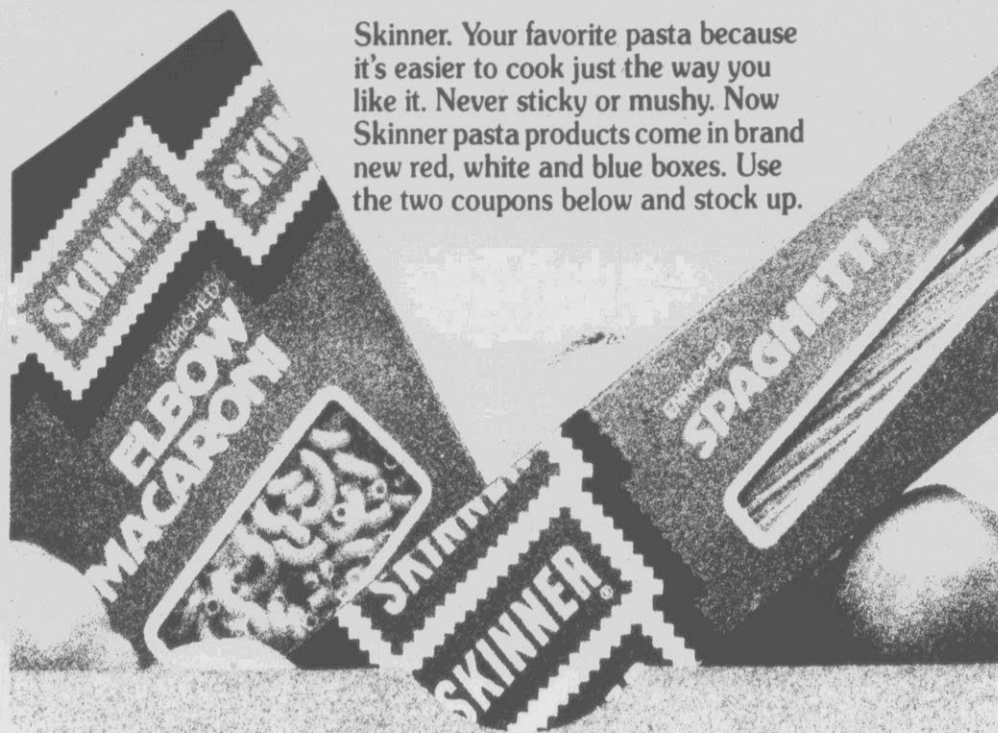

Stamm, 30, who took the night job last September, also works part-time as a maitre d' at a nearby restaurant.

"I learned to cook in college," he said. "I lived with one of the other swimmers and we used to cook for each other."

"They're young people," said Stamm of the prince and his friends.

Durable Star Of The Left Sees Communism Failure

By ROBERT BARR
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — When Susan Sontag stood up and denounced communism as "fascism with a human face" — well, you wouldn't believe the fuss.

The crowd boomed. Weeks later, debate raged in obscure journals. There were even snide suggestions that Ms. Sontag, a durable star of the left, would soon be writing for Reader's Digest.

And what did she say? "There are many lessons to be learned from the Polish events. But, I would maintain, the principal lesson to be learned is the lesson of the failure of communism, the utter villainy of the communist system."

"It has been a hard lesson to learn," she continued. "I am struck by how long it has taken us to learn it — and of course I include myself."

To understand the stir caused by these words, you must consider the time, and the place.

It was Feb. 6. The night of the Reagan administration's international television propaganda spectacular, "Let Poland Be Poland."

The night some prominent leftists hired Town Hall in New York to express their support for Poland and Solidarity, and their contempt for Reagan's policies. Their contempt, as Ms. Sontag put it, for "Reagan the union-buster, Reagan the master of the butchers in El Salvador."

To people who have spent a lifetime opposing the Richard Nixons and Barry Goldwaters and Ronald Reagans, it's a bit embarrassing to condemn martial law in Poland, and find President Reagan agreeing.

So distinctions become essential. The distinction of having authors Studs Terkel and Kurt Vonnegut Jr. at Town Hall, instead of Charlton Heston, the host of "Let Poland Be Poland," the distinction of having a song from aging folksinger Pete Seeger instead of from aging crooner Frank Sinatra.

The distinction of listening to Susan Sontag, author of "Illness as Metaphor," "Styles of Radical Will" and "Trip to Hanoi," the last based on her 1968 trip to North Vietnam.

Ms. Sontag said the left should have been more attentive in the 1950s to emigres from eastern Europe. Then she slipped on the brass knuckles.

"The emigres from communist countries we didn't listen to, who found it far easier to get published in the Reader's Digest than in the Nation or the New Statesman, were telling the truth," she said. "Now we hear them."

"Why didn't we hear them before...?"

Comparing martial law in Poland to right-wing rule in Chile and Argentina, Ms. Sontag said: "Communism is fascism — successful fascism, if you will...

"I repeat: not only is fascism (and overt military rule) the probable destiny of all communist societies ... but communism is in itself a variant, the most successful variant, of fascism. Fascism with a human face."

Despite Ms. Sontag's warm words for the Reader's Digest, the fight started at Town Hall has moved into the left's familiar arenas: earnest journals like The Nation and newspapers unknown outside New York, like the Soho News.

Some writers said that communism's evil was already well known; others insisted that communism and fascism are not the same thing.

Philip Green, a member of The Nation's editorial board, said he and his friends were angry when rebellions were put down in Hungary and Czechoslovakia, and were no less angry about events in Poland.

"No matter how anti-communist we were," he added in the magazine's Feb. 27 issue, "part of our anger and desolation certainly sprang from a feeling of betrayed hope — hope that out of communism something better might emerge. Is it now proven that we have been wrong to be at all hopeful?"

Ms. Sontag, writing in the same issue, rejoined: "Yes, it is now proved. We were wrong."

Sociologist Nathan Glazer wrote in the Soho News: "All credit to Susan Sontag's outrage: It is directed to intellectuals who have often praised one or another version of communism because it was not as bad as Stalin's tyranny, or worse, because they believe it superior to Western freedom."

He added: "I am not sure how useful it is to say ... communism is fascism... Jews who fled from the Nazis into Soviet Russia, Cambodians who fled from the Khmer Rouge to the invading communist Vietnamese army, were both, at the crudest, most practical, life-saving level, making these distinctions. And so must intellectuals."

For the Soho News, the argument developed another angle when Ms. Sontag sued for $50,000, alleging her copyright and performance rights were violated when the newspaper published a text of her speech. The newspaper says it had a right to reproduce the text, since it was a political speech given at a publicized news event.

In The Nation, attorney Aryeh Neier wrote, "I applaud Sontag's effort to recapture anti-communism from Reagan, Haig and Thatcher."

"Mainstream American anti-communists," he added, "have given anti-communism a terrible name."

"Mainstream anti-communism ... has been a pretext for suppressing liberty at home through loyalty investigations, political purges, surveillance and dirty tricks, and for doing worse abroad through the bombardment of Vietnam and Cambodia, the 'destabilization' of Chile and the arming of murderers in El Salvador," Neier wrote.

"I have expressed these views in the pages of this magazine, but I would not care to in the Reader's Digest," Neier wrote.

"Well," said Susan Sontag, "does he imagine that I feel differently?"

Gator Ride

A Misprint

ATLANTA (AP) — When the daily calendar for the House Rules Committee listed a bill about alligator rides, bewildered legislators asked the former head of the Game and Fish Commission for an explanation.

Without missing a beat, George T. Bagby said the bill was an attempt by the Natural Resources Department to raise funds by offering alligator rides in the Okefenokee Swamp in southeast Georgia.

The rides would cost a dime, but the first ride would be free "to those who made it," he said. Bagby, an aide to Democratic House Speaker Tom Murphy, added the rides would be for "Republicans only."

It wasn't until order was restored among committee members of both parties that state Rep. John Hawkins, D-Atlanta, explained the title of the bill had been misprinted.

It should have referred to "alligator hides," he said.

The measure would allow the sale in Georgia of products made from the hides of alligators from other states. Current state law only allows the sale of products made from Georgia alligators.

Farm Prize In 'Contest'

BALM, Fla. (AP) — After trying unsuccessfully for three months to sell her rundown farm near Tampa, Mary Lou Sylvester and her husband, Roland, are offering the homestead as grand prize in an essay contest.

Entrants must buy a spoonful of soil for $50 to be eligible to submit a 30-word essay on why they want to be farm owners, she says.

If the contest is successful and draws 1,000 soil-buyers, the couple will offer the house as the top prize, a $1,000 cash prize for second place, $500 for third, $250 for fourth, down to $25 each for those who place 16th through 30th.

And they'll still have enough left over to buy another place in Wimauma, she says. They had been trying to sell the farm for $60,000.

Since raffles are illegal in Florida, the Sylvesters believe they are on safe ground with the writing contest.

So far, Mrs. Sylvester says, one sample has been sold.

If she gets the essays, she plans to have a panel of judges pick the winner.

Played Host

To 19 Million

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (UPI) — Atlantic City played host to more than 19 million visitors in 1981, making it the most popular tourist attraction in the United States, according to the Convention and Visitors Bureau.

It said there were 2 million visitors in 1976, the year before casino gambling was legalized. The resort city on the Atlantic Ocean now has nine casino hotels.

Grads Have Job Source

WORKING — Thanks to Jobs for Delaware Grads, 19-year-old Sherry O. Mumford is taking her first step toward self-support by working at a quick-food restaurant in Dover. (AP Laserphoto)

By THERESA HUMPHREY
Associated Press Writer

DOVER, Del. (AP) — All Sherry Mumford wanted when she graduated from high school last year was a job — and because of a state program that focuses on students most likely to be unemployed once they leave school, she has one.

Miss Mumford is one of the first success stories of Jobs for Delaware Graduates, a program that targets high school seniors pursuing general education diplomas.

She graduated from Dover High School in June 1981 and immediately began work at a newly opened fast-food restaurant. She started as a cashier and, in less than a year, has had two promotions and a wage increase.

The 19-year-old Miss Mumford says she owes her job to JDG.

"They teach you about interviews, how to fill out applications and write resumes," Miss Mumford said. "I probably wouldn't have gotten this job and the advancement if I hadn't gone through JDG."

In the past, Miss Mumford has had summer jobs, but it never occurred to her to take a resume when applying for a job.

If it wasn't for JDG, "I wouldn't have known how to go about asking an employer questions to let him know I was interested in the job," she said.

JDG — a statewide non-profit corporation — is the brainchild of Gov. Pierre S. du Pont IV, whose wanted to provide high school students with jobs in an attempt to keep the teen-agers off the state's unemployment rolls. The program is funded by the U.S. Department of Labor, private foundations and state funds.

"I think it's an attempt not to add to the problem if you can't solve the problem," said Bebe Ross Coker, JDG's director of administration. "These are the kids who fall through the cracks."

The program attempts to teach students basic employment skills — such as how to act during an interview, the importance of arriving on time for work, how to dress, writing resumes, vocabulary and handwriting, among others.

The program is volunteer on the student's part and does not take away from regular class time.

JDG looks for entry-level jobs at businesses ranging from laundries to fast-food restaurants to department stores. Ms. Coker said most of the students start at minimum wage, but added that salaries for JDG graduates range from $6,000 to $16,000 per year.

"We tell kids there is dignity in work. You have to start somewhere," she said. "Invest in yourself."

Although JDG does not guarantee job placement, its results have been promising.

In June 1980, JDG's first graduating class had 611 students of which 517 were placed in jobs — an 85 percent placement rate. The program also includes a nine-month follow-up of students, and in March 1981, 74 percent of those placed were still working.

Ms. Coker said that some students who had changed jobs were included among those still working.

In June 1981, with 935 graduates, 800 of the students were working by September 1981. Retention figures for the 1981 graduates will not be available until later this month.

In the 1981-82 school year, 1,034 seniors are taking part in the program. JDG began in eight Delaware high schools and now operates in 24 of the state's 25 high schools.

Students fail to win a placement for a variety of reasons, Ms. Coker explained. Some go back to school, others move from the area or get married and decide not to work.

Some students have been fired from jobs, she said, but many employers come back to JDG for more referrals.

"We're going to have kids that goof off," Ms. Coker said.

One student who worked as a mechanic for a major automobile dealer had a bad habit of taking "joy rides" in the new cars, she said. The youth was fired, but the employer turned to JDG for a replacement.

The JDG concept actually makes the employer's job easier, according to Michael A. Suber, a Burger King manager who hired Miss Mumford.

"I like the concept of it. It's more like preventive medicine," Suber said. "They're helping the kids before they become a statistic."

He said JDG students he has interviewed seem to be more prepared and not as nervous as other new graduates.

"These kids are responsible. They have a job and they want to keep it," he said, adding that he saves money on his operation because he does not have to advertise for job openings.

"It's like having our own private screening process," Suber added.

Developing relationships with employers is a major part of the program, Ms. Coker said. She said the JDG staff, or job specialists, establish a rapport with employers to see what is needed from potential employees. And when an employer is having a problem with a JDG graduate — especially if the graduate is about to be fired — the job specialist is available to help.

JDG is the model for the Jobs for America's Graduates program launched last year by the Reagan administration, which is trying to engender a spirit of voluntarism in the United States. Pilot programs are currently under way in Tennessee, Massachusetts, Arizona and Missouri.

Even Some Dairy People Agree Program Failing

AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —
Get set for another scramble in Congress over federal milk price supports, a program that costs taxpayers more than $2 billion a year and has bought huge surpluses of butter, cheese and non-fat dry milk.

Congress scaled back the supports last year, but dairy farmers keep producing more milk. As a result, the Reagan administration wants further steps to trim subsidies.

Even some dairy producer groups acknowledge the support system is in deep trouble and are advocating their own legislative package that would let farmers absorb part of the cost of the government acquiring large surpluses.

Surplus cheese is being given away to needy families, and dairy products are given schools and other institutions as part of the government's normal assistance programs. But hardly a dent is being made in the surpluses.

Agriculture Secretary John R. Block, expressing a frustration that plagued many of his predecessors who were faced with rising milk surpluses, says the dairy program costs $250,000 per hour. He says that is "intolerable" and "unacceptable."

Just storing the surplus costs $42.5 million a year. Last year alone, the Commodity Credit Corp. of the USDA bought the equivalent of about one of every 10 gallons of milk that farmers produced.

By Block's latest reckoning, the dairy support program will cost $2.2 billion and may approach that level again in 1982-83 if nothing further is done.

The basic problem is too many milk cows, Block says. And there's only one real solution: A voluntary cut-back of about 10 percent in the nation's dairy herd "before someone else does it for us," he told a dairy meeting recently.

Block has ordered a "public dairy symposium" to be held in Kansas City, Mo., on March 22-23 to gather view for drafting recommendations to Congress on

FREE CHEESE — Harrisburg, Pa. residents line up to receive packages of cheese being offered the needy by the Dept. of Agriculture. Though surplus cheese is being given away, and donations made to schools and other institutions, hardly a dent is made in the surpluses which cost $42.5 million a year simply to store. (AP Laserphoto) changing the dairy support program.

What is this awesome dairy surplus and how did it get that way?

With the passage of the Agricultural Act of 1949, Congress authorized a nationwide milk price support program based on a percent of parity — an indicator linked to costs of production and purchasing power.

It has been tinkered with, sweetened and pruned many times over the last three decades.

The government does not pay dairy farmers directly. Instead, the Commodity Credit Corp. is required to buy butter, cheese and non-fat dry milk to keep prices from falling below the specified support price for "manufacturing grade" milk.

Related programs built around federal milk marketing orders — and, in some cases, state programs — set floor prices for milk sold at retail.

Dairy farmers were once more numerous, but the average herd was smaller and so was the average milk output.

But there were times of surplus production and government stockpiles rose sharply. In 1953, for example, the CCC bought the equivalent of 10.2 billion pounds of milk. Another bulge was in 1962 when purchases totaled 10.7 billion pounds. By comparison, last year's surplus purchases rose to 12.9 billion pounds, a record.

Milk production set records the past two years at 128.4 billion pounds in 1980 and 132.4 billion pounds in 1981. The old record was 126.9 billion pounds in 1964.

Cows today are gushers of milk compared to cows in 1964.

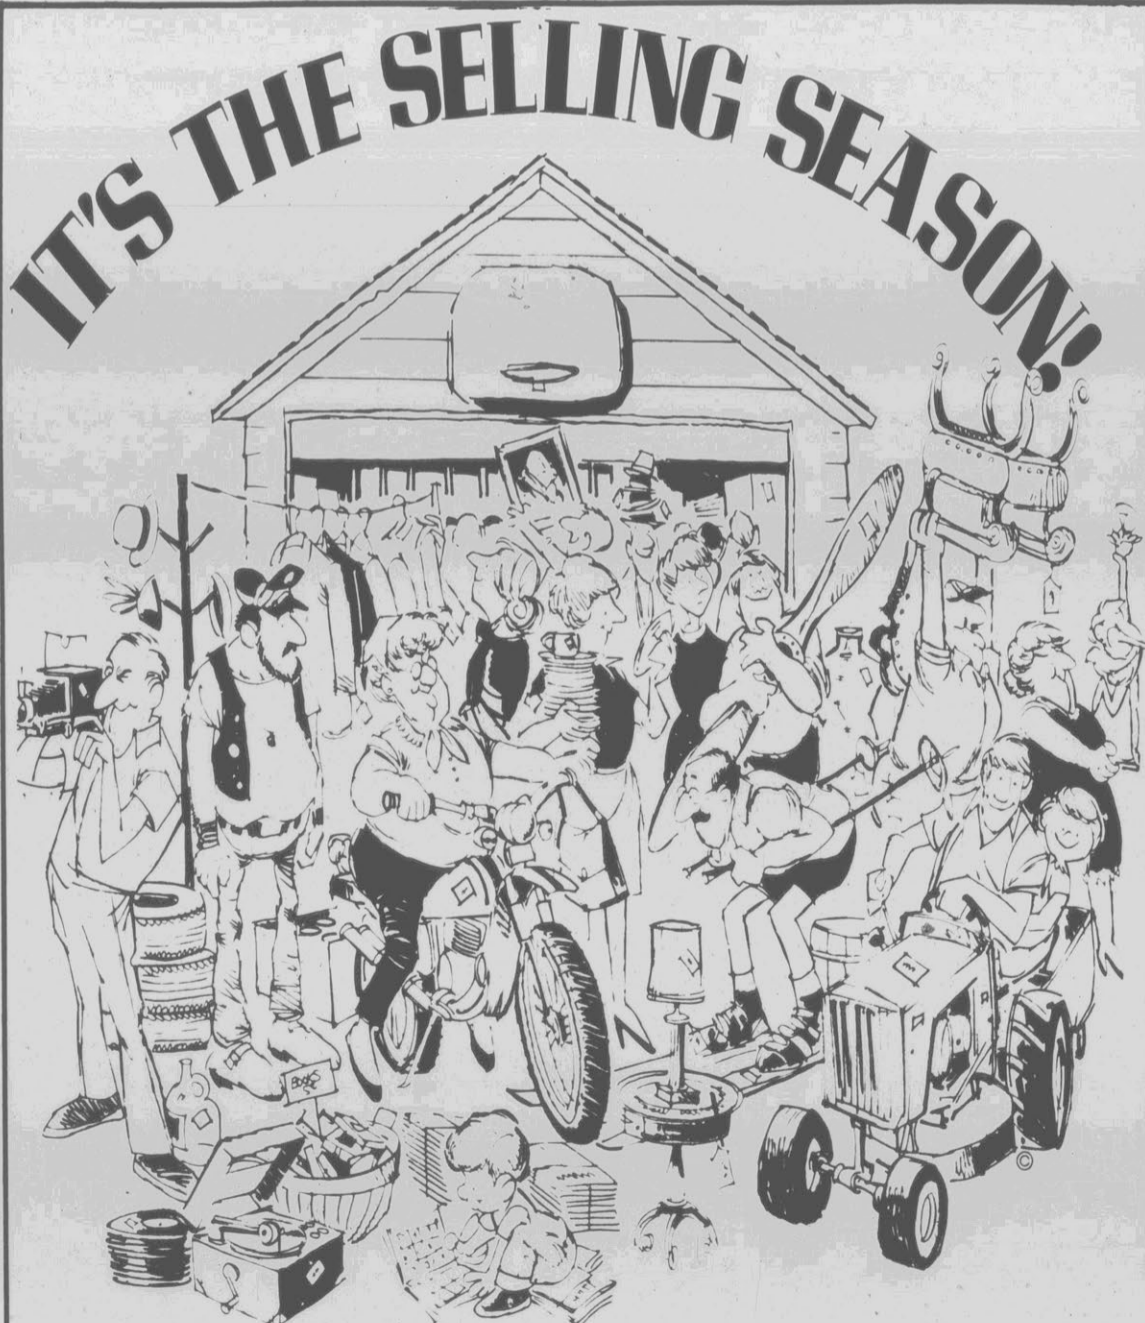

Last year, according to USDA records, the average dairy cow produced 12,147 pounds of milk — 1,412 gallons. In 1964, the average cow produced about 8,000 pounds or 930 gallons.

Expressed another way, it took 10.9 million cows in 1981 to produce a record level of milk, compared to 15.7 million cows in 1964.

The production climb has accelerated in the last few years. So have prices of milk paid to farmers, largely because of rising supports.

In 1978, according to official USDA figures, milk production was 121.5 billion pounds, with commercial use at 118.8 billion pounds. The average farm price of milk was $10.60 per 100 pounds.

By 1979, production rose to 123.4 billion pounds and commercial use to 120.2 billion pounds. The farm price average for the year was $12 per 100 pounds.

Females Do Make It As A Trooper

By CYNTHIA ROBERTS

Associated Press Writer
HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — It has been 10 years since women joined the ranks of bleary-eyed cadets on their loathsome "morning run" at the State Police Academy.

Each day at dawn, the runners pounded out three miles at full speed, gulping the too-sweet air from the town's chocolate factory.

Fourteen of the cadets graduated in 1972 as the first women in the nation to be trained as state police troopers on an equal basis with men.

They learned to box, to shoot, to ride and to arrest. Their classmates harassed them, and the public gawked. But only one woman dropped out during six months of training, and nine remain on the job a decade after those awful days as cadets.

"Frankly, people didn't think it was going to work. They gave us two years, maximum," said Cpl. Kathy Doutt, a member of the pilot class.

Ten years later, 39 women patrol Pennsylvania highways as troopers, another four have made corporal and a dozen are at the academy.

They make up only 1.5 percent of 3,773 troopers on the force and in training. Their numbers have risen slowly, compared to court-mandated hiring and promotion of racial minorities stemming from a 1974 lawsuit. Racial minorities now make up 7.7 percent of the force.

Ms. Doutt, a researcher at Harrisburg headquarters after five years as a trooper, said her degree in psychology from St. Olaf's College in Minnesota "didn't prepare me for the paramilitary life" at the police academy. But on the road, she appreciated her "yes sir-no sir training" in the face of danger.

"I've looked down the barrels of guns twice," the 32-year-old officer recalled recently. "In a life-threatening situation, there's no time to ask 'Why?'"

The first female cadets were told they would work only with juveniles, female offenders or as undercover officers. Halfway through their training, "they told us we would be doing everything, going on patrol," Ms. Doutt said.

Although she suspects "a lot of pressure" was involved in expanding their assignment, she added, "I think Pennsylvania deserves credit for making this move."

In 1972, then-Commissioner Rocco Urella was not working under threat of a lawsuit, but realized "it was time" to drop sex discrimination in hiring, police spokesman Tom Lyon said.

As department policy, Lyon accompanied a reporter to interviews with most of the women on the force. "They're usually very good, but a couple of 'em, you never know what they'll say," Lyon said.

The force still has troopers "who want to make women look bad," he said. "Some of those back-country stations haven't seen a woman yet."

Catcalls still ring in the ears of today's cadets, and there also have been public accusations of harassment, as with the 1974 resignation of Judy McCarr, one of the first female recruits.

Ms. McCarr accused her superiors of discriminating against her because of her personal relationship with the son-in-law of a retired state police lieutenant.

"We were singled out more at first," said Cadet Nancy Shaheen, 22. "The other cadets gave us a hard time until we proved ourselves... but there are some guys, well, I just couldn't have gotten through the academy without them."

The size of academy classes was reduced from the annual grouping of 150 to 200 cadets to five groups of 40. Crystal Rogers was one trooper who found strength in the smaller groups.

"In my cadet class, it was like a family. We wanted each other to make it," she said.

Ms. Rogers, 26, a divorced mother of two who drives a midnight patrol, left her blue-collar job at Bethlehem Steel Corp. to become a Harrisburg police officer before joining the state police.

Hot and Dry

Winter for

The Israeli

By KEN KUSMER
Associated Press Writer
TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — While the United States and Europe shivered in heavy snows this winter, most of Israel was soaking in unseasonable sunshine.

Farmers hated it. Rabbis prayed for relief. Consumers worried the spring's produce prices would soar.

Winter is when Israel gets most of its rainfall and this winter's dryspell could mean trouble.

Water is a precious resource in Israel, and there's never enough of it even in normal times.

Modechai Yakobovitz, spokesman for the Mekerot Water Co., the national water firm, said the water tables have not attained normal levels since Israel was founded almost 34 years ago.

"To bring the underground water reserves back to normal, we would need a non-stop rain for two or three months," Yakobovitz said. "We have a very grave overdraft of water."

Water is part of the political tension in this semidesert region. One-third of Israel's water resources originate in occupied Arab territory. Its largest reservoir, The Sea of Galilee, is supplied by streams from the Golan Heights, which Israel annexed in December after capturing the area from Syria in 1967.

The Jordan River marks the frontier between Israel and Jordan, and both nations draw on it for their farmlands. It used to carry 38.5 billion cubic feet of water per year, but Israel began drawing off 14 billion cubic feet a year when it completed its national water carrier in 1964. When Jordan finishes in a few years a U.S.-funded dam project on the Jordan's main tributary, the Yarmuk River, the flow of the biblical stream may drop to just 1.05 billion cubic feet a year, said Dr. Micha Klein of Haifa University.

Israelis count on a rainy winter to replenish their reservoirs. Two-thirds of the annual rainfall usually comes in December, January and February, according to the Israel Meteorological Service. This year, December and January were dry.

"Until the end of November, the rainfall was normal and above in most places," said Zipora Gat, director of the Agricultural Meteorology Division of the weather service. "But as of the end of January, it was around half of what was expected."

The last week of January, public prayers for rain were held, and Chief Rabbi Shlomo Goren said dozens of farmers from across the country asked him to declare days of fast and more prayers, according to local news reports.

Relief finally came in a series of storms the first week of February, but it didn't quench the thirst, and only sporadic, scattered showers had followed.

The dry winter has caused $69 million in agricultural losses, said Yossi Barak, an economist at the Histadrut Labor Federation, which represents 80 percent of Israel's farmers.

It could mean disaster for the summer crops as well.

"We can only speculate how bad it will be," said a spokesman for the Agriculture Ministry.

Heaviest of the winter casualties were 100,000 tons of wheat, a loss of $21 million, Barak said. The November rainfall allowed the wheat to sprout, but could not sustain it, the weather service said. Without the rain, the crop would not have sprouted — and would have survived — until the February rains.

The drought also wiped out the entire crop of Chinese cabbage, a light-colored, lettuce-like vegetable which is mostly exported, meaning a $1.26 million loss, Barak said.

The winter losses also include $17.5 million for added irrigation not needed in a normal year, Barak said, adding that this is not covered in the farmers' insurance policies.

Yakobovitz said the water company was pumping into irrigation systems three times as much water as normal for the first half of the winter.

LOWE'S

Lowe's Pricing Policy:

Many items in this tabloid carry a reference retail price. The reference is intended to provide a guide to the range of retail selling prices in our area and may be useful in identifying different units of the same manufacturer. An item's reference retail price is either the manufacturer's suggested retail price or our determination of its full retail price based on prices at which it or similar merchandise is offered by principal retailers (department stores, specialty shops and other non-discount sellers) in our selling area. While we believe our reference retails do not appreciably exceed the highest retail prices at which sales are made in our selling area, we cannot assure you that our reference retail prices, as described above, represent the prices in every community on any given day. Some items in this advertisement are listed at "regular" selling prices. The merchandise is offered at this price except during a special sale. The purpose of showing a reference retail price (or a regular price) is to assist you, our customer, in making a knowledgeable and better informed buying decision. We suggest that you also do comparative shopping and compare our prices. (Prices in this tabloid do not include delivery charges. Ask us about delivery rates.)
Lowe's Raincheck Policy: If we sell out of an advertised item, we'll issue you a raincheck. When we restock, you'll be notified so you can buy at the previously advertised price (except for products marked "Limited Quantities"). Our smaller stores may not stock all advertised items. But every item shown here can be ordered for you.
