Dealers See Still Lower Prices

By STUART SAVAGE

Greenville oil distributors say that, although the price of gasoline and diesel fuel continues to drop, they don't expect any major change in the driving habits of the consumer.

A survey of gasoline distributors in the Greenville area indicated that, depending on the brand, the tank-wagon price of gasoline — what the retailers have to pay — dropped last week from one-half cent to as much as 4 cents per gallon. While the price of diesel fuel has also declined, the drop has not been as consistant or as great as it has for the price of gas.

Charles Gaskins of Quality Oil Co., the local Shell distributor, said a 2-cents per gallon decrease Thursday resulted in a price of $1.099 for regular at the self-service pump. Citgo and Exxon distributors reported a 1½ cents per gallon drop as did Etna service stations, while the Gulf distributor reported a 3½-cents price cut.

The largest decline for the week was reported by the American (Amoco) distributor — a 4-cents decline. However, the full-service Amoco stations still reported the highest price at the pump — $1.219 for regular at full-service stations.

Phillips 66 reported the smallest drop — a half-cent last Monday — for a self-service pump price of $1.118 a gallon.

Walker Lee Allen of W. L. Allen Oil Co., the Gulf distributor, said their latest cut resulted in a tank-wagon price for leaded regular of $1.114, $1.154 for unleaded regular, and $1.214 for unleaded premium.

Allen, Gaskins and other distributors acknowledged that they don't know how low the price of gasoline will drop before it stops, but speculated motorists might pay $1 or less per gallon in the months ahead.

At the first of the year, Allen said, the wholesale price of regular was $1.243. With the latest decrease, that represents a 12.9-cents price cut in 2½ months.

Allen pointed out that a year ago — on March 17, 1981 — the tank-wagon price for regular was $1.289. "If you consider the 17½ cents price cut, and the three cents a gallon increase in taxes since that time, the wholesale price is actually 20½ cents less," today than a year ago.

The high cost of gasoline in the past, coupled with conservation efforts — the 55-mile-per-hour speed limit; more fuel-efficient, smaller American cars and small foreign gas-misers; and changes in driving habits — have combined to decrease the demand for gasoline.

The decline in demand has created a surplus, and it's because of the surplus that prices are now dropping.

"Maybe it (the drop in prices) will help consumption," Allen suggested. "Shortages (which began the upward movement of gas prices several years ago) are unheard of now," he continued, assuming there are no problems in the Mideast.

And the price drop, Allen said, "is good for all of us ... the consumer, the country ... business. Maybe it will help us sell a little more."

But the distributors say the dropping prices have had no noticeable effect on the volume of sales so far.

"We haven't noticed it" and "dealers said people are not driving any more," Gaskins said. "In my opinion ... I don't think the (lower) price will affect driving habits."

Etna's Walter Williams said "maybe young people" will drive more with lower-priced fuel, "but not the average individual." Even if the average driver does ride more, it will be "on a car with better mileage," so he doesn't see a great increase in demand.

ECU Trims List For Chancellor

A list of potential candidates for the chancellorship of East Carolina University has been narrowed to four, including Interim Chancellor John M. Howell and Dr. Charles Q. Brown, acting dean of the school of technology and chairman of the geology department.

Sources also say that Dr. Fred Young, president of Elon College, and Dr. James A. Robinson, president of the University of West Florida at Pensacola, Fla., are on the list.

Ashley B. Futrell, chairman of the ECU Chancellor Search Committee, would not confirm the names of those under consideration but he did say the schedule calls for a name to be submitted to the UNC Board of Governors on May 14 and the schedule is expected to be met.

In the meantime, the committee must decide on two nominees whose names will be submitted to the ECU Board of Trustees, of which Futrell is also chairman. UNC President William Friday will make a final recommendation for the new chancellor to the board of governors. The person chosen is expected to assume the position on July 1.

Earlier this month it was reported to the ECU Trustees that the list of candidates had been narrowed to less than 10. The list originally contained 148 names. Following some off-campus interviews the list was again pared and final interviews are expected to be completed soon. The selection committee reportedly will meet again Thursday.

Howell, a political science professor, has previous service as vice chancellor for academic affairs. He is considered popular on campus and in the community. It had been assumed he would serve only in the interim until a permanent chancellor was chosen, but there has been a growing interest in his assuming the position permanently.

Howell said he could not comment on the possibility that he was a candidate or among the final four. At the time Futrell asked Friday to appoint an interim chancellor it was specified that the person would not be a candidate. Howell said then he was not and, on Saturday, he said that was true — at that time. The interim chancellor said he had not been meeting with the search committee and he would not say whether he had been asked to meet with the committee.

Brown told The Daily Reflector Saturday that he felt the fact he was a nominee and an applicant was "pretty well known."

He said he would be interested in the position but reserved comment on his

Second Thoughts

CASCAVEL, Brazil (AP) — President Joao Figueiredo of Brazil, forced to give up smoking after a heart attack last year, had second thoughts after meeting 129-year-old Quintino Jose de Oliveira.

Brazilian newspapers published this account Saturday of Figueiredo's meeting Friday with the elderly man, who he found puffing on a cigarette.

"Have you been smoking for a long time?"

"Ever since I was a kid."

"Isn't that bad for your heart?"

"Not so far," said the veteran of the 1864-1870 War of the Triple Alliance.

"I'm going to talk to my doctor," the president said.

Hunt's The Choice, But For What?

By MELVIN LANG
Reflector Staff Writer

The choice for 1984 may not have been made, but one thing appears certain: Jim Hunt will be a candidate.

Apparently, the particular race that will be involved is still to be decided. Hunt, whose public visibility and language in recent months has been similar to that of a candidate making the rounds, isn't saying which office, if any, interests him or whether he has decided on or has even considered another race.

"I am not thinking about running for any other office," Hunt said routinely in response to an inquiry from The Daily Reflector recently. "My only concern is to do the best job I possibly can as governor for the people of the state of North Carolina."

Earlier last week, during a visit to Greenville, Hunt expressed his feelings more to the point, but still fell short of a personal commitment.

"This is a vital year," Hunt said. "I understand better why I am a Democrat now than in a long time. This is the year to go out and make sure the people know they made a mistake" when they elected John East, a Greenville Republican, to the U.S. Senate two years ago.

Hunt also called for the re-election of Rep. Walter Jones, a Farmville Democrat, saying: "We're not going to have statewide elections this year. But begin to make up for the mistakes made in 1980.

"Let's have Democratic leadership again. In 1984, elect a Democratic governor ... (and) senator" and put a Democrat back in the White House, he said.

Hunt, the first North Carolina governor to win re-election by popular vote, is barred by law from seeking a third successive term as governor. But he is being looked upon as a leading Democratic contender for the Senate seat now held by Republican Jesse Helms. There also are those who contend Hunt is becoming a likely challenger for his party's nomination for vice president, especially after his national exposure as chairman of a Democratic commission that recently submitted a popular recommendation for changes in the nominating process.

Helms, now in his second term, has not announced definitely if he will seek a third stint in the Senate. A Senate leader for some administration policies, Helms was considered for the GOP vice presidential nomination two years ago and may also be considered again in 1984.

But, at least in North Carolina, the common belief is that Helms will seek re-election.

And if that happens, Hunt appears to have the backing — if he wants it — to step in as Helms' Democratic opponent. Former Sen. Robert Morgan has indicated he might consider another effort to regain the seat he lost to East, but it is unlikely that he and Hunt would square off in a primary fight.

Hunt "is obviously our strongest and most visible Democrat," said Janice Hardison Faulkner, a former East Carolina University professor and now executive director of the state Democratic Party.

"And, of course, people interested in unseating Jesse Helms see him as the person who might do It. A lot of people are considering him for it.

"But the longer he (Hunt) stays in office," Ms. Faulkner said, "the harder the decision is going to be, because the longer he stays in the more attention he attracts for some national spot — the nominating kind. I don't think the die has been cast."

Ms. Faulkner said "grass roots sentiment is that Hunt is the best hope." She also said rank-and-file Democrats would rather have Hunt in the Senate than in the vice presidential race.

Farmville attorney John B. Lewis Jr. agreed with Ms. Faulkner's assessment that most Democrats would prefer to have Hunt run for the Senate.

"I believe that he could be a great benefit to this state as a United States senator. He has a knowledge of the state and the people, and of our needs ... the needs of the vast majority whereas the present senator, Helms, knows the needs and attempts to fill them only for a tiny majority," Lewis said.

'Art' Takes To The Skies

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

"Let it go at the count of zero," was the final instruction given by artist Howard Woody to about 30 young men and women holding his "Space Wings" at shoulder height off the ground in preparation for the sculpture's launching. Seconds later the helium and oxygen filled piece rustled like a flock of sparrows, then fluttered skyward, quickly gaining height to rise safely above the danger of snagging tree tops.

The launch Friday of "Space Wings," a brilliant blue and silver sky sculpture 60 feet long by 40 feet wide took place on the grassy slope between Third and Fourth streets east of Reade Street. Pre-launch activities — filling the six separate components with helium (helium and oxygen for the larger central body of the work) — required about an hour's time.

East Carolina University faculty sculptors Norman Keller and Robert Edmiston and a contingent of ECU sculpture students assisted in filling, then holding the pieces off the ground. When all components were filled, Woody tied them together.

Woody, a 1962 ECU graduate now on the art faculty at the University of South Carolina, has been invited to more than 100 places to launch sky sculptures. His next piece will be put airborne in Alaska in about three weeks.

Describing the role of sky sculpture as a work of art, Woody said:

"The action of the piece itself is an integral part of the sculpture. The atmospheric sky energy, the flow of air currents give movement to the piece when it's airborne, so that it resembles a slow aerial ballet.

"There're so many things in nature that are beautiful," Woody added, "and the art and poetry of atmospheric energy is another of nature's gifts."

Calculations of wind patterns at launch time indicated the piece would probably drift in the direction of Washington and New Bern. "It's impossible to predict just where it will come to earth," Woody explained. "It all depends on the pattern of air currents, their strength and direction. Usually, a piece will drift 30, 40 or 50 miles. The record was 285 miles for an air sculpture I released at Oklahoma City."

Eventually, atmospheric pressure causes the helium to expand, which in turn creates a leak so that the piece begins its descent to earth.

The height a sky sculpture will attain is also a matter of atmospheric circumstandes. After watching the drift of Greenville's "Space Wings" for a short time, Woody said, "I think this one will level off at about 4,000 to 5,000 feet. The record height to date of any of my pieces has been about 16,000 feet for a sculpture released at Boston."

Despite the ultra lightweight properties of Woody's sky sculptures, constructing a piece is relatively expensive and time-consuming. "The material for this one ran to about a thousand dollars, and required about 60 hours of labor to construct," Woody said, "so I follow and retrieve pieces whenever possible."

Woody fashions his sky sculpture from two types of huge sheets of silver metalized polyester, a cellophane type plastic that is merely .0005 of a thousands inch in thickness. "I have sheets in various colors, so that I can cut and shape the sculptures into any desired shape and combination of colors," he said. To seal the sculptural envelopes, he heat seals the seams, leaving an opening into which a supply of helium and/or oxygen can be inserted before making a final seal with tape at the launch site.

"There's one thing I forgot to do on this sculpture," Woody remarked. "It completely slipped my mind to fasten some type of ID or name tags to the piece so that whoever finds it will know what it is and where to contact me. But perhaps with the TV coverage being given the launch, people might hear about it and be on the lookout for it and contact the ECU School of Art."

Local authorities, including area military bases, were notified of the launch in advance to avoid any undue alarm that could arise should an aircraft suddenly encounter a fluttering blue and silver 60-foot-long object dancing its way through the eastern North Carolina sky.

Lewis continued, "I would much rather see Governor Hunt as a senator than as a vice president. It is a far more active position and we all saw from the Carter administration that you need to know your way around Washington.

"Hunt, as a senator, could express quite articulately the North Carolina belief in a balanced budget. He can show them how we do it and bring, hopefully, a realism as to how it can be done," Lewis said, adding:

"The economy is going to be very important ... fiscal responsibility as opposed to ultra conservatism as displayed by the other side. Salvador and Panama, none of those things are going to make a lot of difference."

Lewis said he believes North Carolina "continues to be a conservative state. (But) I think the representation of moderate conservatism and fiscal responsibility will find its expression in Democrats rather than in the primitive Republicans..."

Ann Evans, chairman of the Pitt County Democratic Women, indicated no choice of a race for Hunt but did say: "I am sure he will run and I think he will run. I certainly would hope so."

Auto Talks Centering On Profit, Guarantees

DETROIT (AP) — The United Auto Workers and General Motors Corp. need to narrow their differences on profit sharing, plant closings and guaranteed income for some laid-off workers, the union's top negotiator said Saturday as bargaining continued on a new contract.

"On some issues, we are very, very close," Owen Bieber, UAW vice president in charge of the GM Department, said at a news briefing. "But there are substantial differences on some other issues."

Bieber said the two sides, which met for 17 hours Friday, continued working, but added: "I am not going to predict a timetable (for ending the talks) at this point. Certainly, we're going to stay here and work as long as the tempo dictates that."

He added, "We hope to finalize this (contract) this weekend."

Alfred Warren Jr., GM vice president for industrial relations, said Saturday he expected negotiations to continue "quite a while," but said he did not expect bargainers to be working on Sunday.

Bargainers were trying to work out differences in profit-sharing "numbers," Bieber said, and were "talking about" seven plants that GM has announced will be phased out in the next two years.

"The issue of closed plants is obviously a very tough issue," Bieber said. However, he said issues on UAW-represented plants not covered by the national agreement and some seniority provisions have been settled.

Asked whether the talks might collapse without agreement, he replied: "The talks can always collapse, but I'm not here saying the talks are near the point of collapse. I came here hoping we could have a settlement, and I still hope we can."

The company had submitted its concessions package to the UAW on Monday, but that package contained only one paragraph on profit sharing: "The corporation will make a proposal ... taking into account the capital needs of the corporation and the need to provide a fair return to investors."

The UAW has said any GM agreement must parallel the pact signed March 1 at Ford Motor Co. The No. 2 automaker's profit-sharing plan kicks in when before-tax profits exceed 2.3 percent of total sales by Ford's domestic operations.

Driver Held Without Bond

A Greenville man was being held without bond Saturday in the Pitt County Jail after a Friday night hit-and-run accident at 10th and Charles streets.

According to police, Gary B. Eames, 22, of Greenville was waiting for a traffic light to turn from red to green when his car was rear-ended by a car driven by Mark A. Berbert, 22, also of Greenville. The accident caused an estimated $1,200 damage to the Berbert car; $1,000 in damage to the Eames vehicle.

Police said Berbert left the scene but was later apprehended by the Highway Patrol and charged with hit and run and driving under the influence.

Police also reported an accident in which a car being towed early Saturday came unhitched from the wrecker, collided with another vehicle and caused $2,900 in damage.

Roderick M. Phillips, 21, of Greenville was driving his car east on 10th Street when a car that was being towed by a Smith's Amoco wrecker came unhooked and crossed over into the path of Phillips. Police estimated damage at $900 to the Phillips car and $2,000 to the second auto, owned by Whitten E. Little of Bethel Park, Pa.

Israeli Troops Kill Teen-Ager

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli troops shot and killed an Arab teen-ager and wounded two other Arabs Saturday when a mob of demonstrators in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River began stoning the soldiers, the military command reported.

It said the soldiers fired "warning shots" over the crowd in El Bireh and one youth identified as 19-year-old Ibrahim Aly Darwish Koran was fatally wounded and two other demonstrators were hit. A soldier was seriously injured when he was struck in the head by a rock, according to the command.

Israel television quoted a "senior security source" as saying Israel would continue to use "a tough hand to deal with demonstrations on the West Bank."

The source was quoted as saying Israel would have to wait out the crisis and continue to encourage "moderate elements" in the West Bank.

Space Shuttle Ready For Launching On Monday

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Columbia embarks Monday on what its pilots term the "ultimate test flight," a mission to advance the ship toward cargo-carrying journeys later this year and to demonstrate it is a reliable, on-time transport to space.

The first two crews, says Columbia's third commander, proved the spaceship could get up and down, and fly again. "We're going to do that plus a lot more," said Jack R. Lousma. The mission, seven days, will double the ship's time in space.

"We're ready to do it on time, on schedule, to fly the full duration next week," his crewmate, C. Gordon Fullerton said upon arrival from Houston on Saturday. "After the flight I'll tell you how it is to fly that magnificent machine that we have waiting on the pad."

After their jets were refueled, the astronauts took to the air for an hour of spins and rolls over central Florida.

At launch pad 39A, the countdown activities were running ahead of schedule, and the weather outlook for Monday was "very good."

Marine Col. Lousma, 46, and Air Force Col. Fullerton, 45, are to begin their 116-orbit mission with a fiery sendoff at 10 a.m. EST.

The flight plan calls for them to roast and freeze Columbia's systems and lift payloads with its robot arm, measuring its capacity as an orbiting science laboratory.

And then the unexpected test: bringing it home to a contingency landing site — a white sand runway in New Mexico's Tularosa Basin. The new destination was necessary because the primary runways in the California desert are flooded with rainwater.

Lousma, the commander, is a veteran of 59 days in orbit aboard the Skylab space station in 1973. Fullerton, after 16 years as an astronaut-in-waiting, is making his first trip out there.

"It's a very ambitious and challenging flight plan," Lousma said in a recent interview.

"It's not just another ride; we're going to break new ground," Fullerton said. "From liftoff to landing, it's a textbook test flight — the ultimate test flight."

For the public, nothing exciting, like landing on the moon. But passing grades on this and on one more seven-day flight in June or July would end Columbia's test program and set up its first operational mission next November. The first commercial payload will be two communication satellites.

A lot more paying customers are waiting with checkbooks in hand to get their packages aboard the shuttle, and 70 flights have been booked into September 1987 for Columbia and three uncompleted sister ships.

But because of the technical and financial problems that delayed the shuttle's maiden flight more than two years, several potential customers have shifted to the unmanned European-built Ariane rocket, which starts commercial flights from a base in French Guiana next month.

Several customers have double-booked on Ariane and the shuttle to assure the earliest possible launch time. The shuttle is considerably cheaper, because it is reflyable and can hoist heavier loads, but to a communications satellite owner, lost time in orbit is lost revenue.

To stem the burgeoning Ariane boom, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration decided Columbia's third flight should demonstrate the shuttle is a reliable and less expensive way into space.

19 Missionaries Face Expulsion In Nicaragua

By TOM FENTON
Associated Press Writer

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Government forces arrested at least 19 Jehovah's Witnesses missionaries Saturday, and relatives in the United States quoted U.S. consular officials as saying the missionaries were flown to either Panama or Costa Rica.

Kathy McDaniel told The Associted Press in Omaha, Neb., that U.S. consular officers in Managua had called the family and said her brother-in-law, Vern, and 18 other missionaries had been expelled. Mrs. McDaniel said the family was told the missionaries were safe.

U.S. Embassy sources said the embassy was investigating and had asked the Foreign Ministry of Nicaragua's ruling left-wing junta for an explanation.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Joe Reap said "I understand the intent is to fly them out, shortly or already, initially bound for Panama as a first stop. My last report said a consular officer would see them off."

He said he had few other details and did not know "why this occurred."

Reap said earlier that the U.S. Embassy in Managua had "heard that a total of 20 were arrested. It thinks 10 Americans are included, but that's not confirmed."

Vern McDaniel, his voice cracking, said earlier in a telephone interview from the house where the arrests took place that at least nine Jehovah's Witnesses had been led off with suitcases in hand.

"I'm told there are agents now at my house. My wife and I are going there now. I suppose they are going to arrest us, too," he said. It was unclear Saturday night whether Mrs. McDaniel was among the 19 reported expelled.

McDaniel said he had no idea why the government was rounding up the group.

"We've had no trouble, nothing," he said.

Jehovah's Witnesses hold the beliefs that they should not bear arms, salute national flags or participate in secular government.

McDaniel said that when he arrived at the house 12 miles southeast of Managua, neighbors told him the others had been arrested, loaded into vehicles and driven off at about 10 a.m. EST.

A West German citizen and a Scotsman also were among those arrested.

McDaniel identified those arrested as Reiner and Jean Thompson of California; Kevin and Ruby Block of Minnesota and Canada; Ken and Sharon Brian of Canada; Elfride Urban of West Germany; Margaret Foster of Chariton, Iowa, and Ian Hunter of Scotland.

Duarte Sees Journalists

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Junta President Jose Napoleon Duarte said Saturday he has ordered the military to try to protect journalists, but he could not guarantee their safety if they travel with guerrilla forces.

Duarte claimed that four Dutch journalists killed Wednesday "were in a guerrilla area and with a guerrilla patrol and the army did not know they were there."

The junta leader made a surprise appearance Saturday afternoon at the Camino Real Hotel, where most foreign journalists are staying, and said he wanted to discuss the reporters' safety.

The American Society of Newspaper Editors sent a telegram to Duarte urging him to make sure journalists could "move freely throughout the country in safety" so they could "provide the most accurate coverage of the events in El Salvador to the people of the United States and of the world."

Government autopsies on the bodies of the four journalists showed no powder burns to indicate the killing was done at close range, judicial officials said Saturday.

The government claims all were killed in a firefight Wednesday between guerrillas and government troops.

However, the Dutch government says reports it has received indicate the reporters may have been murdered.

World Trade A Growth Area For The East

Gov. Jim Hunt's visit to the area last week coincided with the annual meeting of the Coastal Plains Chapter of the N.C. World Trade Association.

The association took the occasion to present Gov. Hunt with its first annual World Trade Award. It was fitting. The governor has done much to promote world trade for North Carolina, and there is a strong liklihood that North Carolina's future prosperity depends greatly on developing markets overseas.

Bob Mills, president of the chapter, said, "We at the association have begun this awards program to bring recognition to those who have done the most to promote world trade in North Carolina. In light of Gov. Hunt's record, I think it is particularly appropriate that he has been selected as the first recipient of this honor."

The governor saw North Carolina as a world leader: "I believe that North Carolina has just scratched the surface of its foreign trade potential."

Hunt said the annual value of exports from the state has more than doubled in five years — from $2.2 billion in 1976 to over $4.5 billion in 1981. Foreign investment has also grown and has amounted to $748 million since 1977.

We all know eastern North Carolina has a great interest in the export of tobacco throughout the world.

There are other farm products for which overseas markets can be developed. We can grow abundant supplies of soybeans, corn, peanuts and other crops. Our farmers are adept at pork and poultry production. The world demand for these commodities is sure to grow and we should do all we can to be ready to fill the need.

Gov. Hunt has shown us the way to aggressively seek foreign markets. We should continue to do all possible to develop our export potential.

Award To College A Matter of Pride For Our County

There was another award made on the governor's visit to the area last week — one he presented to Pitt Community College.

The national energy award recognizing excellence in vocational education was presented by the governor to President William E. Fulford Jr.

The award was one of 10 given in the United States.

The award, from the U.S. Department of Edcuation and Secretary T. H. Bell, is the Secretary's Award of Excellence. President Fulford noted that his institution offers an associate degree in energy technology. "This program has been viewed as a national model and numer ous two-year colleges have received copies of the curriculum and support research."

It is a signal honor for Pitt County Community College and something that should be a matter of pride to all Pitt County.

Sunday Morning Notes

Alvin Taylor

Sherman Husted is one of the original panelists on Channel 9's long-running "Carolina Today" early morning show.

He returned last week to serve as a panelist for one week, joining Slim Short and Susan Roberts.

When WNCT-TV went on the air in 1954 — the first television station in the area — Husted was a member of the panel along with Slim, Clint Long and W. E. Debnam. He also did the weather in those days and was famous throughout eastern North Carolina for telling us about approaching heat waves, snow storms, cold weather and even hurricanes. There was a time when the question was, "What does Husted say about the weather?"

At any rate Husted was right at home before the cameras last week, even though the cameras now transmit full color and there is a vast array of new equipment in the control room.

He told a story about growing up in Iowa and we called to ask him to elaborate.

Husted said he was about 16 in 1937 when the nation was still in the throes of depression. He lived in Leon, Iowa, and one Saturday he and a friend, Raymond Hull, got a ride to Des Moines with someone who worked there.

The two boys had been in dramatics in high school and they decided to visit a local radio station. There they found the young sportscaster on duty and they asked him for an audition.

"All right," the announcer said and tore off some teletype copy and directed them to a booth.

The announcer instructed them on how to use the mike and then sat back outside and listened. The two read their scripts and came out for an appraisal.

The announcer laughed. "You kids can read," he said. "Come back when your voices change."

The incident might have been forgotten ... except the man who was the sportscaster for station WHO, Dutch Reagan, is now president of the United States.

Husted said he has never met Reagan again but followed his career through the movies, television and now as president.

"He was 26 or 27 years old and well liked. He had a good voice. We always used Dutch Reagan and it took a long time to use Ronald," Husted recalled. "Lots of folks up in that area still remember him as Dutch."

He recalls the president as looking much as he does now, although younger, of course. His hair was probably shorter at the time as was the style for men in those days.

Husted and Dutch now share something. "I keep a jar of jelly beans," Husted said, laughing.

After Husted left WNCT he worked with Channel 12, with cable television and he was executive director of the Jacksonville, N.C., Chamber of Commerce for six years. He has now retired from the Naval Reserve and is considering business ventures.

Bum Rap

Helen Thomas

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan is on a new kick. It happens to every president. In private meetings, he is telling all comers that he believes he is getting a "bum rap" from the press, particularly in terms of his policies in Central America.

On that score Reagan is reflecting the administration's deep frustration in telling its side of the story on El Salvador and winning converts.

Part of the frustration stems from the fact that U.S. officials feel they cannot portray the extent of Cuban and Nicaraguan involvement without jeopardizing secret sources. And part is simply the conviction that Americans should believe in their top officials and back them up when they deal with war and peace issues.

But that isn't the way it is anymore. Reagan and others would like to call it the "Vietnam syndrome" but it also could be described as a healthy skepticism and scrutiny of what is at stake before taking the plunge into Caribbean ventures.

Reagan feels the blame lies with the media. But newspapers and the major television networks reply that they are giving both sides a fair shake. So much so perhaps that few can make up their minds as to the righteousness of the cause, or the credibility of some of the government's statements.

Most dispatches from Central America indicate that the Salvadorean rebels are getting outside help. Few doubt that is true. But the reports also tell of brutality on both sides of the fence and that mitigates the picture.

In an interview with TV Guide magazine, Reagan charges that television reporting has become slanted against El Salvador. He said he wished that reporters would "trust us, and put themselves in our hands and call and say 'I have this story'" when they are ready to publish a sensitive story.

Barring a war when censorship might be invoked, U.S. foreign policy moves are bound to be reported. If not by the American press than by foreign journalists. That does not mean that all secrets are revealed. The government does much that is undercover to protect national security.

But moves that threaten a larger involvement fall into the realm of the peoples' right to know. It appears that even the administration believes that since it is now embarked on a major effort to convince the public that outside infiltration, supported by the other superpower, and aided and abetted by Cuba and Nicaragua, threatens the other Central American neighbors.

On his recent trip to Oklahoma to see New Federalism, Reagan spoke at a GOP fund-raiser that the press was barred from covering. The Daily Oklahoman, getting a fill afterwards from one of the guests, said that Reagan was asked why he did not give more television speeches and hold more news conferences to combat what Reagan called "a worldwide media problem" on the subject of El Salvador.

Reagan, the newspaper said, replied that he would like to do that by making speeches, rather than holding news conferences.

A news conference subjects a president to interrogation and to a defense of his policies. A speech permits him to line up all of his arguments in a row with no questions asked.

Some of the State Department's efforts to win public opinion have boomeranged. A white paper issued in the early days of the administration was found to be faulty on several scores. A 19-year-old Nicaraguan, Orlando Tardencillas, captured in El Salvador was displayed as a showcase of outside intervention in that. But he recanted his earlier statements.

There is nothing wrong with the United States seeking to bolster democracy and to protect the Western Hemisphere. But there also is nothing wrong with the American people knowing what is happening and whether they can support it.

Campus Is One Of A Vanishing Kind

Bill Noblitt

RALEIGH — While various state and federal officials continue to debate the matter of whether North Carolina is doing enough to desegregate predominantly black college campuses while at the same time support them, the chancellor of one of those schools sees his campus as one of the vanishing kind.

Dr. Albert N. Whiting, chief administrator at North Carolina Central University at Durham, held true to his reputation for outspoken honesty when recently asked what future he sees for traditionally black colleges and universities in this state, and elsewhere across the nation:

"My answer to that question is an unpopular answer. I feel that, in the short run, the predominantly black institutions will remain predominantly black but will be losing black enrollment, which could mean that unless they integrate they will be losing enrollment overall," Dr. Whiting told writers for "We the People of North Carolina," the magazine published by the Citizens Association.

"In the long run, I think some of the minority institutions will close because of lack of enrollment and financial problems.

"Those that persist — and I feel a number will persist — will be those that are innovative and creative, those where the faculties and administrators get up off their duffs and compete."

The key to future success of black students and black education rests in learning to compete in the real world, Dr. Whiting believes, and not in fostering an educational experience rooted in what he terms "ethnocentrism." In sum, black students must live in and compete in a world largely composed of well educated, competitive white people.

"Our students will have to go out in an unsheltered, integrated world, so they might as well learn how how to operate and relate to an integrated society right here on the campus," Whiting said.

A way to get a vital record from the state records office in Raleigh is now in effect. The vital records branch of the division of health services in the Department of Human Resources keeps the certificates of birth, death, marriage, or divorce. People often find they need such documents.

Now, in cooperation with Western Union, the records office can process the request and have an answer or the copy of a certificate within hours.

Here is how the system works: Call Western Union toll free and request the document. Charge the costs to your Mastercard or Visa card ($9 covers all charges). A computer check of identity and filing the request on the state computer terminal is handled by Western Union.

A routine request by mail normally takes from four to 10 days.

The computer hookup is for those in a hurry and needing their certificate within four days.

A true measure of the times, however, is seen in the cost of the system. To call Western Union and charge the costs carries a bill of $9 because the matter is handled by wire and computer.

If you go to the local Western Union office and pay cash, the charge is $13.95.

Administration Sees A Power Struggle

Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

WASHINGTON — On the morning after Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan fired a policy broadside at David Stockman by endorsing a constitutionally-required balanced budget, Stockman and his key OMB aides huddled to plot counter-strategy — providing a new focus for the economic power struggle within the administration.

In backing the constitutional amendment for a balanced budget now rapidly gaining support in Congress, Regan was taking dead aim at Stockman. The director of the Office of Management and Budget is viewed at the Treasury as seeking to vindicate himself, after all the embarrassment of last November's Atlantic Monthly article, by balancing the budget through tax increases.

The constitutional amendment is in effect a promissory note for a balanced budget three or four years hence. As such, it is the antidote against Stockman's persistent pressing of President Reagan to dismantle his 1981 tax cuts to close the budget deficit.

At stake is who wins the protracted struggle for the president's mind between the budget director and the secretary of the Treasury. Regan, who early this year flinched and joined Stockman in advocating excise tax increases later rejected by the president, has returned to urging a steady course by Reagan. The constitutional amendment is the political device to stave off Stockman's demands.

Whether or not to increase taxes now is what the Stockman-Regan confrontation is all about. When asked by a reporter where President Reagan gets all his economic optimism, a Stockman ally on the White House staff replied that it all came from one man: Don Regan. The Treasury secretary'e newly-instituted private economic briefings for the president, pointing to a rapid and complete recovery, undercut Stockman's austerity medicine.

Stockman now predicts a budget fiasco with the current fiscal year's deficit climbing by some $10 billion over the estimated figure to a $100 billion in red ink. OMB dismisses as a seasonal aberration Treasury's mysterious and possibly meaningless figures showing an $80 billion deficit based on current cash flow.

But whether the number turns out to be $80, $90 or $100 billion, it will be unmistakably high. If the president follows Regan's course and endorses the constitutional amendment, he will affirm both his permanent commitment to fiscal integrity and his present faith in economic recovery. That would almost surely end Dave Stockman's tenacious drive to rescue fiscal integrity at the cost of wrecking Ronald Reagan's program.

Let's Add Things Up, Cutting Down

James J. Kilpatrick

WASHINGTON — The late Everett Dirksen of Illinois, he of the bullfrog voice and the Brillo hair, bequeathed to the Senate a memorable observation of the growth of federal spending. "A billion here and a billion there," he said, "and pretty soon it adds up to real money."

To look at the pending federal budget for fiscal '83 is to recall the Dirksen wisdom. How in the world have we managed to increase federal outlays from $246 billion in 1973 to a projected $758 billion in 1983? Inflation is one answer, of course, but the basic answer is: a billion here and a billion there, and now it has added up to real money. It is time to reverse the process.

There never was any rational excuse — there was only a political excuse — for increasing Social Security benefits beyond the increase in the recipients' cost of living. The generous impulses of past Congresses have put the primary trust fund in deep trouble. Without prompt remedial action, the retirement fund will run out of money before the end of this year, and the supplementary funds for disability payments and Medicare will run out next year.

A responsible Congress will face up to the old folks' lobby and do what has to be done. Merely by postponing this year's cost-of-living adjustment for three months, from July 1 to October 1, almost $3 billion could be saved. If future COLAs were limited to two-thirds of the increase in the Consumer Price Index, $5.4 billion could be saved in 1983. Over a five-year period the savings would amount to $76.3 billion. This is real money.

Another COLA reasonably could be reduced. Almost 1.5 million military retirees are of working age. The average age for officers at retirement is 45, for enlisted personnel 42. If Congress means business about cutting federal outlays, Congress could well consider cutting their COLAs in half. Over the next five years this would save $3.8 billion.

The budget is larded with subsidies for business and industry. A few years back Congress authorized companies with substantial export sales to create Domestic International Sales Corporations (DISCs). Through this device, an exporter can postpone payment of certain taxes almoet indefinitely. Elimination of this subsidy would save $2.6 billion over a five-year period.

Another possibility: The business community annually deducts about $1.5 billion for meals and other forms of entertainment regarded as "ordinary and necessary" business expenses. Much of this outlay is defensible; countless deals are in fact transacted over a luncheon table or in a box at the Astrodome. But certainly not all of this expense can be justified. To limit this deduction to 80 percent of provable costs would pick up $300 million a year. Why not?

Last month the Congressional Budget Office published a list of 110 opportunities either for reducing federal outlays or for increasing federal revenues. The CBO did not endorse any particular proposal; many of the enumerated opportunities are politically unrealistic, and others would create abrupt and unreasonable burdens for state and local governments.

But the opportunities, both large and small, are there for Congress to grasp if Congress wishes: A small increase in Western grazing fees would raise $3 million next year. To limit our personal deductions for interest on home mortgages to $5,000 would produce $1.8 billion. To abolish direct loans from the Small Business Administration would save $250 million. To end subsidies for foreign purchases of U.S. agricultural products would save $813 million. And so on.

For the past 40 years many of us have been riding gravy trains — farmers, businessmen, college students, poets, broadcasters, local government, barge operators, librarians, university presidents, providers of health services, home insulators, consumers of natural gas. You name it, some interest group is benefiting from a million here or a billion there. It all adds up.

It adds up to a trillion-dollar debt that must be serviced. It adds up to ruinously high rates of interest that contribute to an avalanche of bankruptcies. The only way we will get out of this mess is to apply the Dirksen rule in reverse. Let us add things up, cutting down.

To the editor:

As a senior at Williamston High School, I have had the opportunity to attend classes with mentally handicapped learners. I feel the handicapped learners need this classroom intermingling to prepare them for their daily encounters in life.

Although the majority of the teachers at WHS feel it would be easier to have a class of only mentally handicapped learners, these teachers feel this extra work is worthwhile because of the valuable lessons that are learned by the mentally handicapped learner and his fellow classmates. In order to teach these children, the teachers utilize an individualized learning program to allow the fellow students to reach their maximum capabilities.

Because mainstreamed students enlighten the classroom, the mainstreaming program is beneficial to the mentally handicapped learners and his fellow classmates. These students should be allowed to participate in the "normal" classroom and contribute to the other students.

To the editor:

A few days ago I read "Lincoln's Ten Cannot-ments" in a speaker's sourcebook. In view of what has transpired through the years I thought many of your readers whould be interested in them. They are as follows:

"You cannot bring about prosperity by discontinuing thrift."

"You cannot help the small man by tearing down the big man."

"You cannot strengthen the weak by weakening the strong."

"You cannot lift the wage earner by pulling down the wage payer."

"You cannot help the poor man by destroying the rich."

"You cannot keep out of trouble by spending more than your income."

"You cannot further the brotherhood of man by inciting class hatred."

"You cannot establish security on borrowed money."

"You cannot build character and courage by taking away man's initiative and independence."

"You cannot help men permanently by doing for them what they could and should be doing for themselves."

I always heard that Lincoln was called "Honest Abe." It seems that along the way a lot of folks have not believed him. Maybe we should have.

Polish Students Find Life Has Changed

Cody Shearer

WARSAW — The ease with which ruling generals imposed martial law on Poland's university campuses last December may have been the simplest part of the well-orchestrated national crackdown. But the government's measures have only temporarily lengthened the fuse leading to one of this. country's most explosive powderkegs.

At the moment, Polish campuses don't resemble the hotbeds of activism that existed last year. Under eight pages of regulations imposed Jan. 8, students have been required to attend all classes, remain off campus after hours, and resume mandatory courses in Russian and Marxist-Leninist theory. All extra-curricular activities, save those of the pro-government student organization, have been suspended. From what we could see, campuses become virtual ghost towns after dusk.

While Poland's restive and increasingly anti-communist students admit that some reforms of campus governance are still unchecked, they are overshadowed by their nation's larger econimic agonies. Pessimism about the future is one disease the generals can't cure under the threat of a gun.

Though it once boasted a membership of 80,000, the Independent Union of Polish Students is all but dead today. Half of its 30-member leadership still languishes in government internment camps, along with perhaps 200 other student activists, according to one spokesman who met with us privately in a small car on a deserted Warsaw street.

"Though the association posed no real threat to the government, it was the only part of the social reform movement that could be snuffed out completely," he said.

Underground newsletters are still published, but communications are limited to clandestine contacts between campuses. Under the threat of internment, students are extraordinarily fearful of talking openly. (We were met by one student and led by a series of six others from location to location before making contact with student leaders. Most demonstrated their anti-government feelings by wearing tiny electronic resistors on their lapels, where Solidarity buttons, now banned, once hung freely.)

Said one young official: "Since only one-fourth of the students were in the union, the others can't be trusted."

Aside from public warnings of possible arrest and expulsion for violating martial law, the government has clearly avoided stricter measures. Most liberally-oriented classes are continuing unfettered by on-campus government monitors. Attendance remains imperfect. Moreover, the new minister of science, higher education and technology, Benon Miskiewicz, has told university chiefs that the higher. education reform bill, which was sought by students and faculties last year and promised more university autonomy, will be in place next semester.

Indeed, the government may have no choice but to reinstitute some academic freedoms as well as some form of alternative student organization. If the authorities crack down on what's left of the liberal reforms, they'll probably have to choose between the embarrassment of closing down the universities altogether or the horror of firing on students. Maintaining order could soon become impossible.

Quite simply, Polish students have nothing left to lose. Young Poles face far hleaker prospects after college than most young Americans can appreciate. They know that their country is bankrupt and that the socialist promise ofa job for everyone falls flat when so many are already on the dole. They also know that emigration, despite this week's initiation of a relaxed exit visa policy for dissident elements, will be virtually impossible.

Meanwhile, though the government pays for students' room and board, food and housing shortages in the coming months are only likely to exacerbate unrest. "We have no future," said a 20-year-old woman who intends to enter a university next year.

Due to delays in the academic schedules, which resumed Feb. 8 after two months of internal turmoil, most students won't finish exams until July. Unfortunately, proposals for a general military training program, designed to keep potentially unruly young intellectuals off the streets, may then go into effect for the duration of the summer. It doesn't give students much to look forward to in the short term.

"Right now, it's a wait-and-see period," said the independent union spokesman. "Over the next several months, students will be forced, like their counterparts in the workers' ranks, to decide whether the economic crises, of their country allow for continued acquiescence to the. authorities."

Ironically, the Polish government may be tying its own noose with its requirement to return to the study of Karl Marx. It shouldn't take long for Polish students to see that they "have nothing to lose but their chains."

Plenty To Report... No Way To Get It Out

Noel Yancey

One of the ironies for a reporter covering a hurricane is that when the storm just brushes the coast lightly there is little damage, nothing much to report and plenty of communications facilities lying idle. But when a killer like Hazel smashed the coast in 1954, the newsman has plenty to report but no way to get the word back to his office.

That's the way it was when I covered Hazel. I was at Myrtle Beach when the storm struck, and I was calling The Associated Press office in Charlotte when the phone went dead. I drove 15 miles through the storm to Conway to use the phone but it, too, went dead, forcing me to drive 26 more miles to Marion, S.C., to call the AP with the first word of serious damage along the Grand Strand. I drove back to Myltle Beach, collected some more information and drove back to Marion.

I encountered much the same problem the following year in covering Hurricane Ione. At the storm's approach, I had driven to Morehead City with our family physician, Dr. Jay Meritt, who wanted to see what a hurricane was like. I'll never forget when water across the highway forced us to stop momentarily outside of Morehead City. A farmer came up to our car and told us solemnly that some folks in that section would "go hungry tonight." He explained that hurricane winds had knocked out the electric power lines and that with the power off people would not dare to open the doors of their bulging freezers for fear the entire contents would spoil.

That evening, shortly after we had checked in at the Jefferson Motor Lodge at Morehead City, Gov. Luther Hodges arrived in his big No. 1 limousine. For Hodges, it was the third time in five weeks that he had chased hurricanes up the coast, and all indications were that this blow would be more severe than hurricanes Connie and Diane earlier that year and might approach Hazel of the previous year in severity. He was accompanied by Thomas Goodman, regional administrator of the federal Civil Defense Agency.

As fierce winds and torrential rains lashed the city, Hodges insisted on driving over the bridge and causeway to Atlantic Beach to see how sand dunes built up since the previous storms had fared. Accompanied by a host of reporters and photographers, Hodges drove to the beach and, as the cameras flashed, he opined that the beach was taking a terrific pounding.

There was little sleep that night for either governor or newsmen as the winds continued to howl and drove rain water through the walls of the motel. The next morning, I found that the wind had ripped a sheet of metal roofing from a nearby building and had wrapped it around the Yancey family automobile. The wind-driven metal had etched fantastic patterns on the car so that a new paint job was needed when I got home. Fortunately, the AP bore the cost.

Although he had been up most of the night receiving reports on the storm, Hodges was up early and announced his intention to continue his inspection trip despite word from his staff that flood waters had blocked every highway leading out of Morehead City.

The doctor and I joined a caravan of cars that followed the governor's limousine out of the city. With the doctor driving, I took pencil and notebook and wrote down the information I had gathered. A short distance from the town on N.C. 24 we came to a point where water had risen over the highway to a depth of four and one-half feet — too deep for No. 1 or the Yancey Ford to negotiate. However, the state Highway Commission had brought a big, high-wheeled motor grader to the scene. Hodges, Goodman and other members of the governor's party took turns in climbing into the grader's cab which ferried them across the flood to a Highway Patrol car on the other side.

I gave the notes I had written to a partolman and asked him to deliver it to the AP office in Raleigh.

The doctor and I returned to Morehead City, and I collected what information I could get there. I learned that the Wallace Fisheries, a fish oil and meal factory, was destroyed with damage estimated at $750,000, that the North River bridge on U.S. 70 between Beaufort and Atlantic was washed out, and Mayor Alfred Cooper of Atlantic Beach reported that although no cottages were destroyed, roof damage had been heavy and that dunes built up after the previous hurricanes had mostly been washed away.

I turned my dispatch over to the Highway Patrol and asked them to radio it to Raleigh. Hodges, one of the most helpful governors as far as the press was concerned, had left instructions that this be done.

But the story of the storm damage in the Morehead City area was pretty tame stuff compared to the destruction wrought at New Bern where City Manager C.L. Barnhardt said Ione had delivered "the worst blow this city ever suffered." Damage estimated at $12 million included $250,000 to Barbour Boat Works, $150,000 to the Dixie Chemical Corp. plant and $125,000 to the Trent River Railroad bridge.

Police Chief Edward Belanzia said flood water was "farther up than I have ever seen it." It was 10 feet deep at times on New Bern's Middle Street and homes two miles from the Trent River had up to four feet of water inside. The National Guard, Civil Defense personnel and Red Cross evacuated an estimated 2,000 persons from flooded areas. A small boy was drowned while playing in a flooded street and a Cash Corner man drowned when a chicken coop blew over on him.

Imagine the frustration experienced by Marjorie Hunter, then a reporter for the Winston-Salem Journal. She now works in the Washington, D.C., bureau of the New York Times. She was at New Bern and had this information, but could not get it to her paper because the telephone lines were out. She told me later she had appealed to the Highway Patrol for assistance, but found its facilities were tied up as the troopers radioed my story from Morehead City.

"It was awful," she said. "I could hear them reading your story, and I could tell that what happened at Morehead City was nothing compared to what New Bern had suffered."

Security

James Gerstenzang

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan is on a new kick. It happens to every president. In private meetings, he is telling all comers that he believes he is getting a "bum rap" from the press, particularly in terms of his policies in Central America.

On that score Reagan is reflecting the administration's deep frustration in telling its side of the story on El Salvador and winning converts.

Part of the frustration stems from the fact that U.S. officials feel they cannot portray the extent of Cuban and Nicaraguan involvement without jeopardizing secret sources. And part is simply the conviction that Americans should believe in their top officials and back them up when they deal with war and peace issues.

But that isn't the way it is anymore. Reagan and others would like to call it the "Vietnam syndrome" but it also could be described as a healthy skepticism and scrutiny of what is at stake before taking the plunge into Caribbean ventures.

Reagan feels the blame lies with the media. But newspapers and the major television networks reply that they are giving both sides a fair shake. So much so perhaps that few can make up their minds as to the righteousness of the cause, or the credibility of some of the government's statements.

In an interview with TV Guide magazine, Reagan charges that television reporting has become slanted against El Salvador. He said he wished that reporters would "trust us, and put themselves in our hands and call and say 'I have this story'" when they are ready to publish a sensitive story.

Barring a war when censorship might be invoked, U.S. foreign policy moves are bound to be reported. If not by the American press than by foreign journalists. That does not mean that all secrets are revealed. The government does much that is undercover to protect national security.

But moves that threaten a larger involvement fall into the realm of the peoples' right to know.

On his recent trip to Oklahoma to see New Federalism, Reagan spoke at a GOP fund-raiser that the press was barred from covering. The Daily Oklahoman, getting a fill afterwards from one of the guests, said that Reagan was asked why he did not give more television speeches and hold more news conferences to combat what Reagan called "a worldwide media problem" on the subject of El Salvador.

Reagan, the newspaper said, replied that he would like to do that by making speeches, rather than holding news conferences.

A news conference subjects a president to interrogation and to a defense of his policies. A speech permits him to line up all of his arguments in a row with no questions asked.

Some of the State Department's efforts to win public opinion have boomeranged. A white paper issued in the early days of the administration was found to be faulty on several scores. A 19-year-old Nicaraguan, Orlando Tardencillas, captured in El Salvador was displayed as a showcase of outside intervention in that. But he recanted his earlier statements.

There is nothing wrong with the United States seeking to bolster democracy and to protect the Western Hemisphere. But there also is nothing wrong with the American people knowing what is happening and whether they can support it.

How To Feed Euphemisms

Dick West

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The friendly, euphonious folks who brought you "revenue enhancement" have struck again.

Following is a true and accurate duplication of the first paragraph of a news release that turned up in the Senate Press Gallery earlier this month:

"Senator Dick Lugar (R-Ind.) will hold a media availability in his office, room 1113 Dirksen, at 8:30 a.m., Tuesday March 6."

I've never seen a media availability and, frankly, I hope I never see one. But I can recognize a trend when it pops up under my nose, and here we have all the earmarks of another style-setter.

The only question is whether media availabilities will catch on big, the way parakeets did a few years ago, or whether they simply will be a passing fad, in the pattern of Nehru jackets and hula hoops.

I have been unable to establish the precise date when certain public figures stopped having news conferences and s t a r t e d holding media availabilities.

As best I can learn, the latter type of forum is a direct spinoff of your basic "photo opportunity."

It was, I gather, presidential candidates who first hit upon the epithet "photo opportunity" to characterize campaign activities lending themselves to picture-taking.

Since then, the phraseology has spread, virus-like, throughout the government information establishment, and is now even heard in the White House press room.

Presumably, photo opportunities are present at media availabilities. However, colleagues who have witnesses such phenomena tell me that at a media availability a public figure makes himself available to the media for questioning as well as for snapshots. I can believe it.

In his book "A Dictionary of Euphemisms & Other Doubletalk," author and lexicographer Huigh Rawson classifies most entries as "linguistic fig leaves" and "squeamish evasions." I would put "revenue enhancement" in the latter grouping.

That verbal escape hatch was discovered by fastidious senators who couldn't bring themselves to utter the words "tax increase."

It seems unlikely, however, that any lawgiver would be so sensitive as to balk at calling a news conference a news conference. So one must assume other motivations behind this particular rubric.

My guess is that media availabilities attract a higher grade of journalists than would be apt to show up at a plain, ordinary news conference. A senator who undertakes to hold one in his office is not without risk, however.

If they are anything like news conferences, media availabilities can become rather prickly and capricious, at times even turning vicious. Besides that, they are hard to paper-train.

Heart And Mind Of A President

Clay Richards

WASHINGTON (UPI) — During the heat of a tougher than expected battle for the GOP presidiential nomination in 1980, John Sears, one of the best political advisers in the business, tried to turn Ronald Reagan into something he wasn't.

Most candidates wanting to get elected would jump at Sears' advice. But when he proposed that Reagan would do best if he avoided the public spotlight, refused to debate his opponents and lowered his conservative rhetoric, Sears got fired.

That battle for the heat and mind of Ronald Reagan was never a contest. The future president on the morning after his New Hampshire primary victory, dispatched Sears and his associates, and went back to his old chum Lyn Nofziger whose political philosophy is never having to say you're sorry for being a staunch conservative.

After a year of unhappy confinement in the Reagan White House, Nofziger — and several other like minded conservatives — are gone now, and the battle is on again for the heart and mind of a popular president whose programs appear to be in deep trouble.

In the first three months of this year conservative true believers have been relentless in demanding that Reagan follow the true course. They point an evil finger at everyone from Secretary of State Alexander Haig to White House Chief of Staff James Baker as being among those who want to make the most conservative Americian leader of this century a politics as usual president.

When the president submitted a 1983 budget to Congress that not only called for deeper social cuts, but a record deficit of $91 billion, there were widespread threats of mutiny among Reagan loyalists on Capitol Hill.

Despite the mounting pressure on Reagan, and continued signs of a worsening economy, conservatives say they see signals from the president that he will again dig in his feet and refuse to alter his course.

"Human Events," the weekly Bible of the conservative movement, last week reprinted in full the text of Reagan's speech to the recent Conservative Political Action Convention.

"We will not turn back just as we near victory," Reagan said in a quote that was used as the headline of the newspaper version of the speech.

"Let me be very clear," Reagan said. "We will press for further cuts in federal spending. We will protect the tax reductions already passed. We will spend on defense what is necessary for our national security."

"I have no intention of leading the Republican party into next fall's election on a platform of higher taxes and cut rate defense."

At this point four years ago President Jimmy Carter was under attack from loyalists in his own party as well as the Republican opposition. He had charted a course for his adminisitration, but under stiff political pressure he changed his mind.

From that point on through the final three years of his administration Carter followed a vascilating foreign and domestic policy. Politically he never recovered.

Now Reagan is at that crossroads, but the stakes are much higher.

Military Jet Crashes, Killing 27 People

By JAMES LITKE
Associated Press Writer

WONDER LAKE, Ill. (A) — Search crews tramped through snowy fields on foot and on horseback Saturday looking for bodies in the mangled wreckage of a military jet that crashed in a ball of fire, killing all 27 people aboard.

The Illinois National Guard KC-135 tanker exploded during a thunderstorm and crashed from a height of 13,000 feet Friday night, scattering wreckage over four miles of northern Illinois, said air Force Lt. Col. Duane Swimley.

Officials said 23 of those aboard were Air Force Reserve passengers. The bodies were taken to a temporary morgue at the McHenry County court complex.

Coroner Alvin Querhammer of McHenry County said all aboard were killed and that 18 bodies were recovered by noon.

Col. Phil Gunby of the 126th Air Refueling Wing, to which the plane was attached, said four crew members and 23 passengers were aboard the plane. Officials said the passengers were Air Force reservists assigned to the 928th Tactical Air Lift Group at O'Hare International Airport.

Gunby said the passengers had been aboard a C130 flying from the state of Washington to O'Hare. He said the C130 had engine trouble and landed at K.I. Sawyer Air Force Base in northern Michigan.

Gunby said the KC-135, which was on routine training mission, picked up the reservists to take them back to Chicago.

Bob Raynesford of the Federal Aviation Administration said the last communications the plane had with the air control center in Aurora indicated no problems.

The plane was nearing the end of its flight when it exploded and crashed in swamms00 miles northwest of Chicago, but it was not known if the weather had anything to do with the crash. The National Weather Service said the storm was not particularly severe.

A witness said the four-engine jet, a military version of the Boeing 707, lit up the ski "like lightning."

"It was an orange color and it was frightening because we never saw anything that bright before," said Richard Carpenter.

He said the sky got brighter before he saw the plane emerge from the clouds, "rotating in a helicopter position, then it went straight down, It was a great big ball of fire."

"Then it hit, the was an enormous explosion. We jumped in a car and went over there, but it was too far back into the field. It was buring, then there was a loud explosion and we just got out of there."

Some of the wreckage landed about 500 yards from the Greenwood Elementary School, where 400 people had attended a science fair an hour earlier.

The plane missed a residential area by a half-mile, said Sgt. James Connelly of the McHenry County sheriff's department.

"It was one massive ball of fire," Connelly said. "I could have read a newspaper on my front porch. My house is about an eighth of a mile from the crash site. I thought the house acrossUA5₈L street blew up."

Nearby residents said a thunderstorm initially made them mistake the sound of the crash for thunder.

"I looked out and the whole sky got really orange," said Gina Graziano, who lives seven miles northeast of Woodstock. "Then I heard a little bang, like lightning or something."

In a few moments "the sky got red — it blew our do3₄

Bill Hoard, 15, who lives a mile west of the crash site, said, "There was a flash and the TV screen was all disrupted." He and his father went to the scene and got to within about 200 yards of the wreckage.

"All you could see was the black all ovc he ground," he said.

More than 150 searchers, hampered by intermittent sleet and snow, found no sign of life.

Raynesford said the military would investigate the crash.

Another KC-135 tanker collided March 13 over the Arizona desert with a small civilian plane, killing six.

Hotel Fire Injuries 13

BOSTON (AP) — Fire broke out on an pper floor of the 82-year-old Essex Hotel on Saturday, injuring 13 people and forcing the evacuation of 200 guests and residents, officials said.

Fire Department spokesman Ken Bruynell said the fire on the seventh floor of the 359-room hotel was brought under control by 10 a.m., about 90 minutes after the first of three alarms was sounded.

The blaze sent thick smoke into the upper floors and along hallways of the 11-story downtown hotel, hampering firefighters as they groped through the halls, checking for guests.

Extra ladder units were called to remove a number of guests trapped in their rooms.

Two firefighters were injured battling the blaze.

Bruynell said rescuers found one female resident in apparent cardiac arrest in her room. The woman was reported in critical condition at the intensive care unit of New England Medical Center.

Another hotel resident, a 71-year-old man, was also hospitalized with chest pains.

Two Local Scouts To Get Eagle Awards

Greenville Scouts Vince Hankins and Shannon Stanforth will receive their Eagle awards Sunday during services at St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

Both Hankins and Stanforth are members of Scout Troop 340, sponsored by St. James United Methodist Church. Both attend Rose High School and are members of the National Honor Society.

Hankins is the son of Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Hankins. His Eagle project involved the planning, surveying and painting of house numbers on the curbs in front of homes in his neighborhood to aid fire, rescue and police units in locating residences. He surveyed 100 homes and found that 70 needed new numbering.

Hankins, 17, became a scout in 1977 and progressed through the tenderfoot, second class, first class, star and life ranks prior to earning the Eagle designation. The new Eagle, who became a senior patrol leader last January, is a member of the Order of the Arrow.

Hankins attends Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church.

Stanforth, 18, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Stanforth. He is a member of St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

The basic aim of Stanforth's Eagle project was to initiate a relationship leading to volunteer activity by scouting for local agencies that serve the handicapped. His project was directed at benefitting the community by identifying areas in which Scouts can help those agencies and foster volunteer activities by troops and individual Scouts.

Stanforth became a Scout in 1975 and also earned his tenderfoot, second class, first class, star and life ranks in preparation for his Eagle work. He is a member of the Order of the Arrow.

Taking part in the Eagle ceremonies were Wayne Bryant, scoutmaster, Ron Sessoms, committee chairman, and Bob Fulgham, scouting coordinator.

Students Will Free Balloons

Students at Wellcome Middle School will launch helium-filled balloons Monday as part of a nationwide Writing Pals Balloon Contest sponsored by Weekly Reader, the classroom newspaper.

Teachers Rickey Byrd and Arlene Murphy said a message would be attached to each balloon explaining the purpose of the project and asking that the finder return the balloon to the school.

The newspaper will present a $500 prize to the school whose balloon traveled the greatest distance.

The project is designed to motivate children to write to and become familiar with children in other parts of the world. Wellcome pupils will answer each response to a message on one of the balloons.

Ott Alford Fund Is Established

The Pitt County Board of Education has established an "Ott Alford Appreciation Fund," county school officials announced, aimed at "honoring and showing deep appreciation" to former Superintendent Arthur S. (Ott) Alford.

"The purpose of this special fund is to answer all the requests we hear concerning 'What can I do?'" said Barry Gaskins, spokesman for the appreciation fund. "This fund will give an opportunity to those whose lives Mr. Alford has touched through his years of service to the county ... to tangibly express gratitude."

Alford retired due to disability Feb. 1 after 15 years as Pitt County school superintendent.

Committees are set up, said Gaskins, to handle donations to the fund. A reception is also being planned for April 4 from 3-5 p.m.

Persons interested in attending the reception or contributing to the fund, said Gaskins, should contact Sandra Garris, executive secretary of the Ott Alford Appreciation Fund at 752-6106, ext. 211, or contributions may be mailed to the Ott Alford Appreciation Fund, 1717 W. Fifth St. Greenville, N.C. 17834. More information, he added, may be obtained from any county school official, board member or principal.

'Ground Zero' Week Planned

Gov. Jim Hunt has proclaimed Aprils 18-25 "Ground Zero Week" in North Carolina to coincide with a national observance of the organization's efforts to educate and alert the American people to the threat of nuclear war.

In his proclamation, Hunt said "the threat of nuclear war is the greatest threat to humankind ever" and described the "Ground Zero" program as a "non-partisan and non-advocacy effort to encurage the American people to study, discuss and express themselves on this threat of nuclear war."

Dick Welch, a Greenville organizer for the organization, said the chapter at East Carolina University has invited Hunt and other widely known figures to participate in the local observance.

STICKY — Andy Kennedy, 16, is pulled from the mud after becoming stuck at a sandbag dike in Fort Wayne, Ind. It took other workers nearly 15 minutes to free him from the mud. (AP Laserphoto)

Flood Waters Fall At Fort Wayne

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) — Flood waters receded over most of Fort Wayne on Saturday despite a night of steady rain, and President Reagan declared the city a major disaster area while city officials planned cleanup operations.

City officials hoped a network of dikes would hold so the huge operation could begin.

"Our major concern is that we don't cause a leak," said Mark Rozeen, spokesman for Mayor Winfield Moses Jr. "The dikes are in many respects a house of cards. Our engineers tell me in some cases the only thing holding them up is the weight of all those sandbags."

Reagan's declaration was limited to Allen County, where Fort Wayne is located, but Bob Blair, spokesman for the Federal Emergency Management Agency in Washington, said other counties could be added.

Blair said the area now is eligible for federal funds for repairing public facilities, small business loans, unemployment insurance and temporary shelter for about 1,200 families displaced by the flooding.

Fort Wayne Mayor Winfield Moses Jr. thanked Reagan for the declaration in a conference call with Sen. Dan Quayle, R-Ind, who was touring the flood area Saturday.

Quayle quoted a relief worker's reponse to the declaration as, "Thank God, now we'll be able to do something for these people we've been taking care of."

Moses briefed the president, saying, "The rivers are going down. Those kids did the job. At the end there were nearly 30,000 volunteers, which is quite an accomplishment for a city of our size. Your coming here really enthused those volunteers."

Reagan replied, "Well God bless, oh boy, this is the best news of all."

After the call, Moses said the worst flooding may be over, but cautioned residents of the city's evacuated areas against returning to their homes.

"We would rather be safe than sorry when dealing with a very fragile dike system," Moses said. "If our rivers continue to drop as they have the past two days, I anticipate evacuees can return on Monday."

Sandbagging ended on all of the dikes early Saturday as the rain decreased to intermittent drizzle and water in the streets dropped to a depth about knee-high. There were no reports of leaks.

The Maumee River dropped to 23.07 feet by 9:30 a.m. Saturday, down about two feet. The St. Joseph River was down to about 16 feet, a foot above flood stage, while the St. Mary's River was at 17 feet and reported rising slowly south of the city because of rain overnight.

"We're not out of the woods yet," said Robert J. Binder, meteorologist with the National Weather Service in Fort Wayne. "There's a lot of ifs, ands and buts on this river stuff."

More than 9,000 people were still being told to stay away from their water-logged homes, but the mayor's office reported many evacuees were going back anyway. George Drew of the American Red Cross said about 200 people were still at the four emergency shelters around the city.

The mayor said he would wait until Sunday night to decide whether the evacuees can return home then.

The Red Cross also said well water in nearby River Haven was contaminated by sewage because of the flooding, and bottled water was being distributed to about 500 people in the area who depend on wells for their water.

Meanwhile, there was confusion over which of Fort Wayne's streets were open to cars, and traffic was snarled in some areas.

The main problems facing city officials were traffic control, a high school basketball tournament Saturday night and finding assignments for volunteer workers who continued to stream into the city.

Muncie Mayor Alan Wilson arrived Saturday morning at the Memorial Coliseum, where volunteer efforts were being coordinated.

Wilson, wearing work clothes, rubber boots and a baseball cap, was accompanied by 75 volunteers who drove to Fort Wayne in a caravan of 21 vehicles.

"We came up to help and to do whatever we're assigned to do," said Wilson, who was joined by his 12-year-old daughter, Jennifer. "I'm sure Fort Wayne would have done the same thing for us."

Campsite Found

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A state archaeological crew has uncovered traces of a 10,000-year-old Indian campsite, including part of a human skeleton, in Williamson County.

Frank Weir, director of archaeological studies for the state highway department, said the central Texas site east of Cedar Park is rich in artifacts from 6000 to 3000 B.C.

"The people that lived here were nomadic hunters and gatherers," Weir said.

Somehow, Procrastinators Stage Their Almost-Annual Banquet

By BEN WALKER
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The award envelopes weren't sealed, speeches weren't prepared and many of the members hadn't gotten around to saying whether they would show up.

But that was expected, and somehow the Procrastinator's Club of America awards banquet went off right on schedule, honoring two states and the world itself for defying time.

The Philadelphia-based organization founded in 1956, boasts 4,000 members worldwide.

"Well, that's 4,000 who are paid up," club president Les Waas said. "We think we have at least half a million more who haven't paid yet."

The awards banquet is traditionally the Procrastinator's featured event, even if it isn't an annual one.

"Oh, we've held banquets at least half the years since we've been founded," Waas said, tongue firmly implanted in cheek. "We hold them whenever we figure it's been awhile since we had the last one."

The procrastinators, he said, may have broken precedent with their latest awards. Two of the dubious achievements actually occurred within a year.

"We got around to it a little quicker than we expected," Waas said, a bit apologetically.

The first award presented at the banquet Friday night in Pennsauken, N.J., went to the host state for "taking so long to figure out who its new governor was," Waas said.

New Jersey's gubernatorial election, held Nov. 2, wasn't officially decided until four weeks and several recounts later, when Thomas Kean was declared a narrow victor over James Florio.

The Mississippi House was honored for ratifying the 19th Amendment this year, which gave women the right to vote, more than 60 years after it became part of the U.S. Constitution. The measure hasn't been acted on yet by the state Senate.

Is the Mississippi Senate already a candidate for next year's awards?

"'Already' is a bad word for us," Waas said. "But the state Senate is up there."

The final award went to the world.

"The world got the award for putting off coming to end," Waas said. "It was supposed to end March 10 because of the Jupiter Effect," a grouping of the planets on one side of the sun.

Waas was elected president on the group's most recent vote — in 1956. "There's no way of knowing if I'm still president," he admitted. "We haven't held our 1957 elections yet."

He said it costs $15 to join the Procrastinator's Club and dues are $5 annually, "if we ever get around to sending out the notices."

He also said it helps to have a busy schedule, and — suprisingly — a good sense of time.

"If you're on time to one thing, that means you must be procrastinating something else," he explained.

Chicago Freezes Pistols

CHICAGO (AP) — Handgun owners are rushing to register their weapons after passage of a new city ordinance that will freeze registration and outlaw new ownership of pistols after April 9, officials said Saturday.

Under the controversial ordinance adopted Friday by the City Council on a 30-11 vote, current gun owners must re-register their weapons and pay a $5 fee every two years.

Police Officer Larry Thomas said that since Mayor Jane Byrne proposed the ordinance Jan. 14, the flow of registrants is the heaviest in 11 years at the city clerk's office.

Thomas said applications rose from 400 to 800 a week, nearly all of them handguns.

"We've been swamped," he said. "The people all said they were trying to get in under the deadline, trying to beat the ordinance. We had scores of phone calls Friday when news spread that the ordinance had passed."

Police Superintendent Richard Brzeczek said earlier this year there were 717,000 registered handguns in the city and between 1.2 million and 1.5 million illegal handguns.

Violators of the new ordinance face a maximum of 90 days in jail and a $300 fine on the first offense and six months in jail and a $500 fine for subsequent violations.

New handguns bought after the ordinance takes effect could not be registered with the city and will be illegal. The ordinance does not include rifles and other long guns.

Handgun sales are already illegal in Chicago.

The ordinance first must be published in the next council journal, March 30, and would then become law 10 days later.

Joan McGuire, manager of Midwest Sporting Goods in suburban Lyons, said handgun sales had been steady or falling since the ordinance was proposed.

"I am very gratified," said Mrs. Byrne after the ordinance was adopted. "It's a good, strong law, and it is the first step in a nationwide campaign to tighten control of handgun ownership among private citizens in our country."

The mayor called for national gun controls and promised new regulation in Chicago after last year's assassination attempt on President Reagan.

The penalties for the Chicago ordinance were modified from Mrs. Byrne's initial harsher proposal, which was modeled on one enacted in the northwest Chicago suburb of Morton Grove.

That ban, considered the strictest in the nation, prohibits the sale and ownership of handguns by residents, except on-duty law and military personnel and licensed collectors.

Proponents of the ordinance acknowledged that it couldn't take guns out of the hands of criminals, but argued it would stem the proliferation of weapons and send a message to the state and nation.

VOLCANO DAMAGE — Mud and debris cover a work area near Mount St. Helens. Water rushed down the river after the volcano erupted Friday night. The eruption caused snow on the volvano to melt. (AP Laserphoto)

Mount St. Helens Erupts Again

By RON BARKER
Associated Press Writer

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Mount St. Helens spewed ash and steam miles into the air in two eruptions, dusting parts of two states with ash and sending an 8-foot wall of hot mud and melted snow down the nearby Toutle River, officials said Saturday.

Fears of flooding prompted the evacuation of about 65 people, but no injuries were reported and evacuees returned home late Friday.

And while rumblings beneath the volcano eased after the blasts, scientists said the activity could persist for several days. Clouds obscured the top of the volcano Saturday.

The first blast, at 7:28 p.m. Friday, shot an ash cloud to nearly 9 miles above sea level — nearly 7 miles above the top of the volcano — and the second blast six hours later sent an ash cloud some 3 miles into the air.

Earthmoving vehicles on the north fork of the Toutle River were tossed about like tinker toys by the force of the blast, but there were no reports of damage to homes.

Kathy Cashman of the U.S. Geological Survey said one large flow of mud, about 660 feet wide, swept out of the north side of the crater after the first eruption. The flow eventually broke into two parts, with one headed down the Toutle River and the other toward Spirit Lake.

The major damage immediately visible from the air Saturday appeared to be the collapse of an earthen retaining dam the Army Corps of Engineers built 12 miles northwest of the volcano to trap debris rolling down the mountain.

Larry Voshall, assistant director of the state Department of Emergency Services, said dam's failure allowed the wall of water to sweep down the Toutle, forcing the brief evacuations. Voshall said his department two weeks ago unsuccessfully sought additional federal funds for deeper dredging behind the dam.

The 1:37 a.m. blast Saturday, which lasted three minutes, was much milder than Friday night's explosive outburst, said A.B. Adams of the University of Washington geophysics center in Seattle.

Friday's blast melted snow and sent a crest of water 8-10 feet high through the earthen dam toward the hamlet of Kid Valley, about 30 miles from the peak, said Voshall.

The eruptions were the first explosive bursts from the 8,400-foot high southwest Washington volcano since October 1980, when the mountain erupted five times over three days. The volcano has experienced six non-explosive eruptions, which contributed to the growth of its lava doma, since then.

It was two years ago Saturday that the volcano showed its first signs of life since the mid-1850s. The activity that began March 20, 1980, culminated two months later — May 18 — in a cataclysmic eruption that left 60 people dead or missing, flattened 150 square miles of timber and sent an ash cloud around the world.

Geologists were not predicting what the volcano would do next, although more eruptions could come "without warning," Adams said. While earthquake activity declined, there was no sign of deep quakes that have signaled the end of some eruptions, he said.

"We're in an unknown situation. We haven't been here before," he said. "...The mountain is not safe. I think we should leave it at that."

Ash fom the eruptions dusted parts of southwest Washington and northern Oregon up to 150 miles away.

"It looks like somebody gave us a heavy frost," said Oregon State Trooper Mike Robinson.

Gov. John Spellman signed an order Saturday creating a "blue" fallback zone of 597,000 acres around the "red" hazard zone about one-sixth that size. The red zone around the volcano was closed early Friday, forcing loggers out of the area, because of predicted volcanic activity.

About 40 people evacuated from the Toutle River area north of the mountain and another 25 who left homes south of the peak were allowed to return home late Friday, said Cowlitz County Sheriff Les Nelson.

The wall of water diminished to only 3-4 feet in height as it flowed down the Toutle, into the Cowlitz River and on to the Columbia. No flooding occurred in the Cowlitz River, officials said.

Tracy Collins, a clerk at the Cowlitz County sheriff's office, said one man reported the Toutle River was eating away at the bank between his home and the river. "He didn't know if his house would be left when he got back," she said.

Interstate 5, the state's main north-south freeway, was closed to traffic for about 45 minutes early Saturday as a precaution when the cresting Toutle, about 5 feet above normal levels, passed under the twin freeway bridges.

The world's first adhesive stamp, the penny black, went on sale in England in 1841. The penny black and the two-penny blue stamp — both bearing the portrait of Queen Victoria — were an immediate success and printers worked night and day to keep supplies available. The use of stamps spread and in 1843 Brazil became the second government to issue them.

Former Senator Says He And Public Knows Now: 'I Was Shafted

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former Sen. Harrison Williams, seated at a desk that is his no longer, finds the idea of going to jail "absolutely unthinkable" and plans a new career in his home state of New Jersey.

Williams has been greeted with cheers by hosts of well-wishers since he resigned his 23-year Senate seat March 11 under threat of expulsion.

"People I didn't recognize came up and the one word that kept reappearing and being restated, both at the Orlando (Fla.) airport and when I landed in Newark (N.J.) was 'shafted — you were shafted,'" Williams said.

"I know I was shafted," he said in an interview with United Press International Friday afternoon in his Senate office, where he is winding up his affairs. Williams appeared relaxed, even jovial.

When the Democratic veteran resigned his seat, colleagues crowded around to shake his hand. Vice President George Bush kissed Williams' wife Jeanette, and a throng of Senate workers cheered him in the ornate Russell Office Building rotunda.

Crowds also cheered later at the Orlanda airport and at a Bible conference the Rev. Carl McIntire held for his fundamentalist followers at Cape Canaveral, Fla. McIntire had joined Mrs. Williams in the Senate visitor's gallery throughout the agonizing, six-day Senate trial.

And Williams was cheered again when he reached home.

Williams said telephone calls and letters have poured in, with the contents running "100 to 1 positive for me." But one "described me putting all that money in my pocket," Williams said with a laugh. "There never was any money."

A typical favorable letter, from a New Jersey woman, said news of the Senate trial gave her "the feeling that everyone is viewing your 'kick out of the Senate' with glee."

"I believe you were set up and framed," she wrote.

"The sustaining factor I have had for two years — and how many months? — is the fact that I never broke the law and I knew it," Williams said. "That has sustained me."

But what about the stock Williams received — 18 percent of a $100 million mining venture to be financed by an Arab sheik in exchange for Williams' political aid — all staged before hidden cameras by the FBI?

"It (the stock) was meaningless to me," Williams said. He insists the FBI set its trap based on Williams' wish to help two New Jersey friends who owned an option on a real titanium mine.

Robber Shoots 4-Year-Old Boy

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A robber holding five people at gunpoint threatened to shoot one of the captives, and despite a father's plea shot a 4-year-old boy in the hand and face, police say.

"I begged him," said Tyrone Anderson, the boy's father. "I begged him to please, please don't shoot my little boy."

The youngster, Cedric Gist, was later reported in stable condition in Mercy Hospital after surgery to reconstruct his broken jaw.

The shooting occurred early Friday after two men forced their way into Anderson's apartment. One of them held a bottle of whiskey in one hand and a pearl-handled revolver in the other, officials said.

At the time, Anderson, 21, the youngster and the boy's mother were watching a television movie with two other adults.

The man with the gun ordered everyone in the room to line up against the wall, Anderson said.

"I'm going to shoot one of you ... but I don't know which one yet," the gunman said, according to Anderson.

Anderson said, "He grabbed my little boy and held the gun to his head," but released him. A friend of Anderson's handed $17 to the armed man, but the bandit allegedly pointed his pistol at the child, who was sitting on his mother's lap, cocked the pistol and fired.

The bullet passed through the middle finger of the boy's right hand, which he had raised in self-defense, then lodged in his jaw.

The gunman and his companion turned and ran.

Police later arrested Conrad Laverne Allen, 27, and Larry Fields, 32, for investigation of armed robbery and attempted murder. Police reported they recovered $17.

Freedom's Price Tag Was Worth It

By The Associated Press

Charles Moore Jr. says getting his freedom cost $25,000, but it was worth it.

For 12 years, a jail term for his conviction on charges of forgery and passing bad checks hung over his head. On Friday, North Carolina Gov. Jim Hunt commuted his sentence, even though he still had nine years and 10 months left to serve.

"All through this, I had to think the Lord was with me," said Moore, after being told of Hunt's action.

"With the community, I felt like I wasn't by myself. This cost me $25,000 for the lawyer, but the community has started a defense fund. Freedom has no price."

Moore was originally charged with aiding and abetting forgery by driving a car for the man who forged the checks, court records show.

He signed a plea bargain arrangement, expecting to get a probation term at most. It wasn't until later that he learned in Durham County Superior Court that he had pleaded to the more serious charges.

He was sent to the Caswell County prison, where his thoughts returned to his 6-year-old son, Timothy, who was suffering from sickle-cell anemia.

"I was thinking about Timothy all day and all night long and before you know it, I was gone," Moore said. "It had gotten to the point where it didn't make no difference if I was killed if I couldn't help my son. At that time, I was in jail with fellows that did much worse crimes and had much less time. I just couldn't see putting in all of that time.

"Two or three years and I would have stayed there. But it just wasn't justified."

When the prison assigned him to a road gang, he saw a chance to escape and ducked into some trees. He went to Durham, and then on to Trenton, N.J., where he set up a new life — the life of a solid, church-going carpet layer who earned the respect of the community.

His new life began to crumble when he was arrested Nov. 23 at Philidelphia International Airport while returning from a vacation in the Bahamas.

He hired a lawyer, and members of the community rushed to his assistance.

Pennsylvania Gov. Richard L. Thornburgh held off signing an extradition warrant, aides said, because he was told that North Carolina officials were considering commuting the sentence.

Pastors from 11 Trenton churches urged officials in North Carolina and Pennsylvania to halt extradition proceedings.

The Rev. Theodore Booth, speaking for the pastors, said last December that the penal system is for the reformation of character.

"And if a person has lived an exemplary life for 10 years, I don't see any reason why he should be sent back to prison," he said.

On Friday, Hunt agreed, saying he was persuaded by the amount of support Moore received from the community and the fact that Moore was a church-going man.

Hunt's proclamation reduced the sentence from 10 years to five years, leaving Moore with an active term of two months — the amount of time he served before he escaped.

Moore will also serve an additional three years of probation in New Jersey under conditions established by the North Carolina Parole Commission and has been ordered to make restitution to the victims of the crime.

Pam Blowe, a spokeswoman for the North Carolina Paroles Commission, said Moore's case was unusual.

"We normally bring them back," she said. "The outstanding facts of this case was that he had been away for 12 years and had established himself as a community-type person involved in his church."

Moore said the first thing he's going to do is thank Hunt face to face.

At a celebration party Friday night, he said the news made him so happy, it gave him a "headache."

Reagan Vetoes Oil Allocation Powers

By MAUREEN SANTINI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, maintaining that Americans have been hurt by past efforts to allocate fuel supplies, vetoed a bill Saturday that would have given him power to allot crude oil supplies and impose price controls in cases of severe shortages.

"We must recognize that an interruption of a significant portion of foreign energy supplies ... will involve real costs," Reagan said in a written message to the Senate. "No magic federal plan can simply make them go away."

It was Reagan's second veto since he took office in January 1981. His first was cast last Nov. 23 against an emergency spending bill that he said was too costly.

Reagan said he sympathized with the idea of trying to prepare for energy disruptions, but insisted it was invalid to assume that "giving the federal government the power to allocate and set prices will result in an equitable and orderly response to a supply interruption.

"We can all still recall that sincere efforts to allow bureaucratic allocation of fuel supplies actually harmed our citizens and economy, adding to inequity and turmoil," Reagan said without elaborating.

"Further, the threat of such controls will discourage the very steps that are needed to provide real protection against such emergencies."

The veto message was released by the White House while Reagan and his wife, Nancy, spent the weekend at Camp David, Md.

It drew immediate statements of disappointment from the bill's sponsors.

Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, said he had hoped Reagan would change his opposition. Rep. Philip R. Sharp, D-Ind., called it "an unfortunate sign of complacency and lack of preparedness for the next energy crisis."

Since the United States imports a third of its oil, Sharp said, it remains "dangerously vulnerable."

Reagan said he did not want and did not need "general power to reimpose on all Americans another web of price controls and mandatory allocations."

He maintained that controls would only "shift losses from one set of Americans to others, with vast dislocation and loss of efficiency along the way."

The legislation was passed earlier this month in the House by a vote of 246-144, which would not be enough to override a veto, and in the Senate by a 86-7 vote. A two-thirds vote is needed to override.

The bill, which replaced emergency powers that expired last year, required the president to draw up an emergency plan within 180 days for dealing with severe petroleum disruptions, such as the 1973 Arab oil embargo or the 1979 Iran-Iraq war.

It gave the president sole discretion over whether the plan would be implemented, and would have expired Dec. 31, 1984, or 20 days before the end of Reagan's term.

Senate Republicans had supported the bill, but many House Republicans argued that it only reimposed emergency powers that failed to deal effectively with earlier disruptions.

Reagan said the measure could be "counterproductive to our preparedness efforts" because it would discourage such self-protective actions as stockpiling and switching to less costly fuels.

Six solid reasons why
Wachovia is the best choice for your IRA

Your Individual Retirement Account is one of the most important investments you'll ever make. So you'll want to think carefully about where you choose to make that investment. Consider these six advantages of choosing Wachovia.

1. Wachovia pays top money market rates

The interest rates Wachovia pays you are based on current money market rates, assuring you top interest rates for the life of your IRA. Compare them with the rates being paid anywhere.

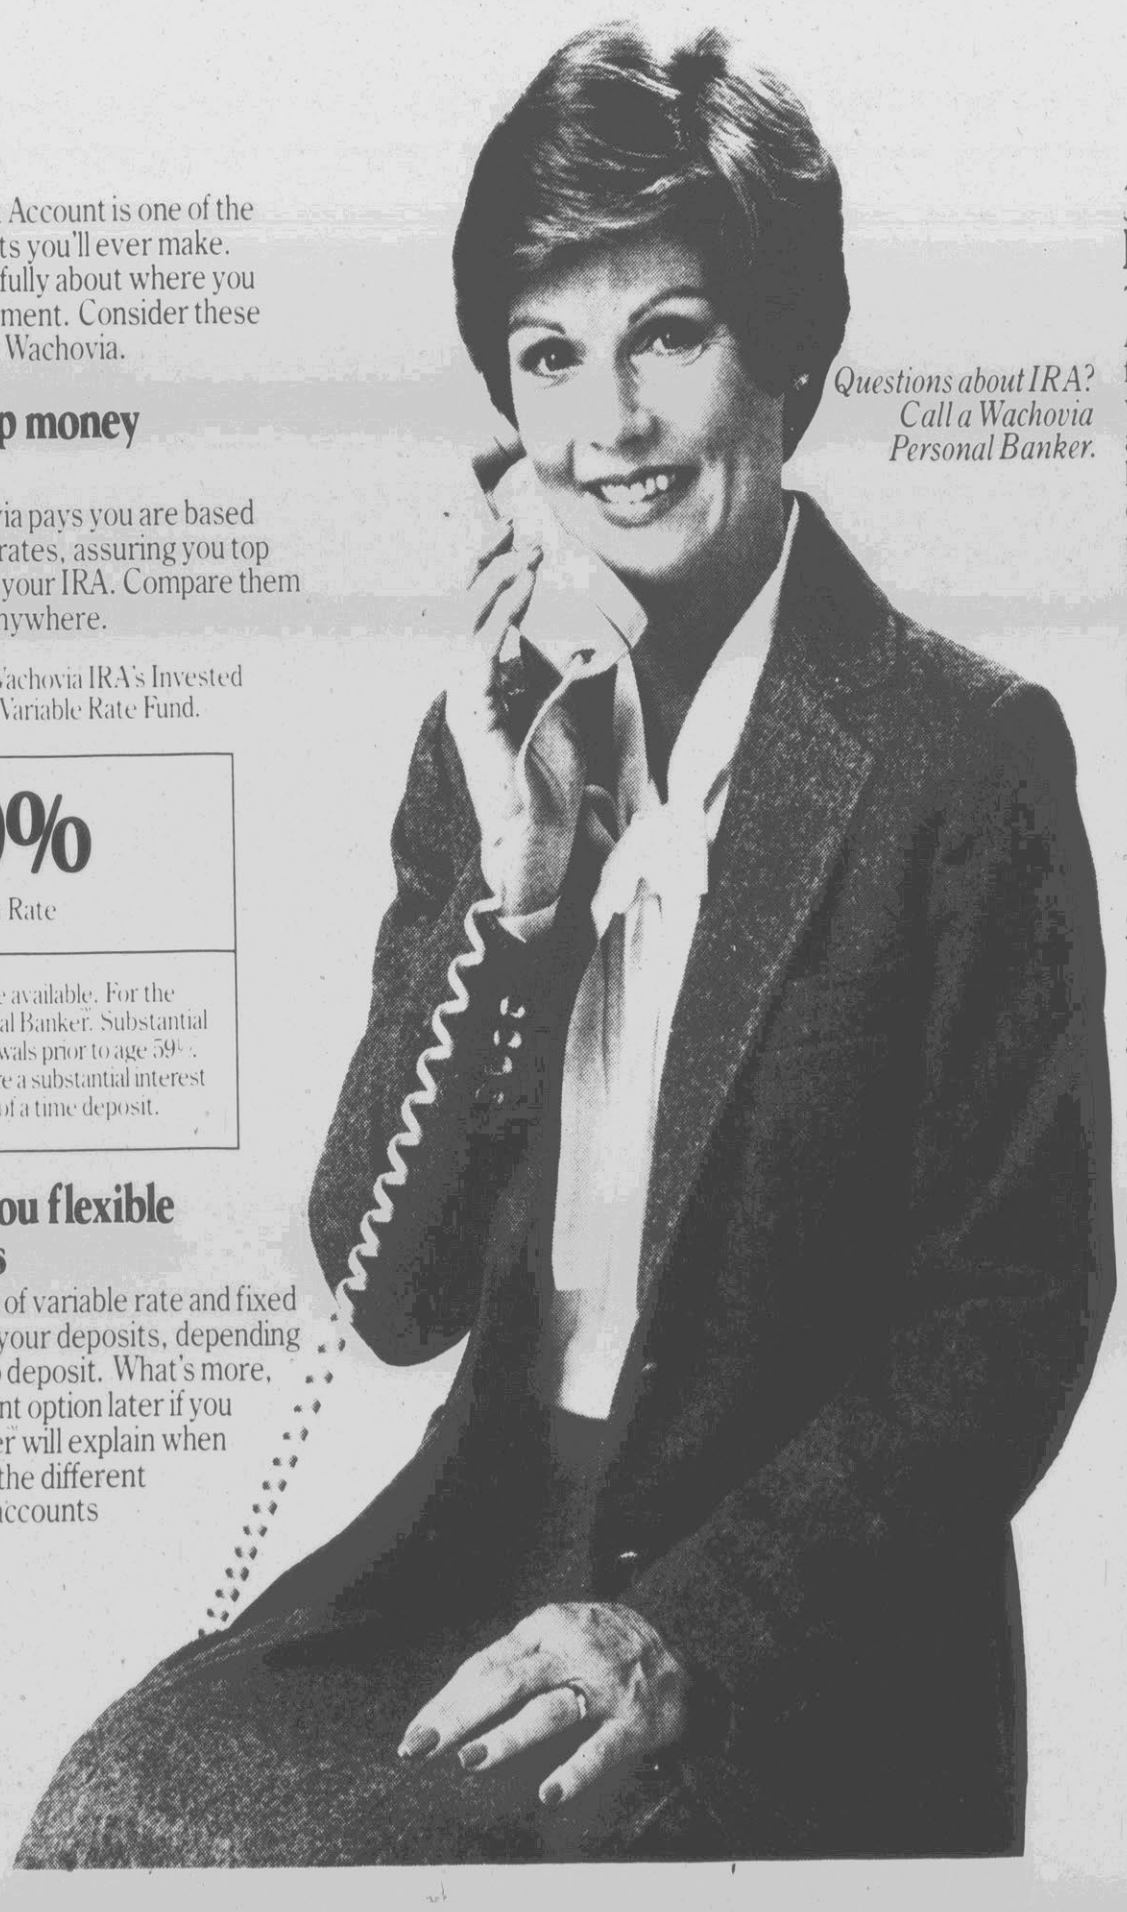
Example: Current Rate on Wachovia IRA's Invested in the 18-Month Accumulator Variable Rate Fund.

14.80%
Per Annum Rate

Other investment options are available. For the current rate call your Personal Banker. Substantial penalties required for withdrawals prior to age 59½. Federal regulations also require a substantial interest penalty for early withdrawal of a time deposit.

2. Wachovia gives you flexible investment options

You choose from a variety of variable rate and fixed rate options for investing your deposits, depending on the amount you wish to deposit. What's more, you can change to a different option later if you wish. Your Personal Banker will explain when and how, and also explain the different options available for new accounts and rollover accounts.



Questions about IRA? Call a Wachovia Personal Banker.

3. Wachovia lets you open your IRA with any amount

There's no minimum for opening a Wachovia IRA. And no minimum for additional deposits. There's no fixed schedule for additional deposits, either. If you wish to skip an entire year or more, you can. You add as much as you like, when you like, up to the legal limit of $2,000 per year in each account. A married couple may have two IRA's, if both work, and invest up to $4,000. If one spouse is not employed, the limit is $2,250 for the couple.

4. Wachovia charges no investment fees

Unlike many other companies, Wachovia makes no charge for opening your IRA, and no annual charge for managing it. All your funds are put to work earning interest for your retirement.

5. Wachovia won't retire before you do

Wachovia's record of financial stability goes back more than a century. You know we'll be there managing your IRA properly whether you need us for 10 years, 20 years, or 50. And to add to your peace of mind, each Wachovia depositor's funds are insured up to $100,000 by the F.D.I.C.

6. You have a Personal Banker at Wachovia

At Wachovia, you don't deal with an institution, you deal with an individual; your own Personal Banker. That way, you know the name and telephone number to call with any question regarding your account. You don't end up talking to everybody at the bank before you get the answers you need.

Think about it. At Wachovia, you get top money market rates, flexibility of investment, no opening minimum, no management fee, security for now and the future and your own Personal Banker. Compare all that with any other source. Then come in and talk with a Personal Banker at Wachovia this week.

Helms Criticizes Media For Challenging Institute

By The Associated Press

North Carolina Republican Sen. Jesse Helms says a report aired Thursday on ABC television concerning the tax-exempt status of the Institute of American Relations is part of an effort by the media to "bring down anybody who has a record of trying to stand up for free enterprise."

At a breakfast meeting of the National Association of Tobacco Distributors in Washington, Helms said the "2020" news program was not the first attacking him.

"I've had it all – The New York Times, The Washington Post, ABC, NBC, CBS ... I'll tell you one thing, they're not going to stop us," he told the 800 people gathered for the meeting.

The story raised questions about whether the institute, a Washington-based think tank with ties to Helms, had violated its tax-exempt status by lobbying for legislation.

Helms said several think tanks that have ties to him "work entirely within the legal framework."

"We file with the IRS year after year. As far as I know, there has never been a question," he said.

An attorney for the institute, Sam Crutchfield, declined to answer questions about the institute.

Under federal law, an organization does not have to pay federal taxes if its operations meet certain requirements. One such requirement is that it cannot make a substantial part of its activities lobbying for or against legislation.

According to the news program, the institute lobbied on behalf of several issues, including defense spending and the B1 bomber, even though forms submitted to the IRS indicated it was not lobbying on any state or federal legislation.

The broadcast quoted John Carbaugh, a Helms aide and officer of the institute, as saying the institute had not lobbied on specific legislation but for programs. Carbaugh said the institute's lawyers had prepared the IRS forms and were responsible for the omissions.

According to the broadcast, Helms was not directly involved.

Meanwhile, Helms also said he had urged President Reagan to hold radio "fireside chats" to sell his policies to America.

Helms said some of Reagan's top aides are afraid it might overexpose Reagan to the public and reduce his effectiveness.

"I say nonsense," Helms said. "Franklin Roosevelt wasn't inflicted with overexposure."

Alcohol Leading Cause Of Deaths

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A three-ear study of 600 drivers killed in single-vehicle accidents indicates far more had been drinking than taking drugs like marijuana, a researcher says.

"What I keep reading is of the terrible marijuana problem on our highways," said Dr. Arthur J. McBay of the University of North Carolina. "We are unable to find that it is a very significant problem."

McBay, professor of pharmacy and pathology at the university's School of Medicine, tested blood samples taken at random from the 600 drivers, all killed in single-vehicle accidents in North Carolina between 1978 and 1981. Single-vehicle accidents were selected because it is more likely the operator is at fault, he said.

Slightly more than two-thirds of those studied had blood-alcohol levels of at least .10 percent, the point at which a driver is considered to be under the influence in most states.

The study, the largest ever on a number of drugs in relation to traffic accidents, showed 79 percent of those killed had been drinking, McBay said.

Traces of marijuana's active ingredient, tetrahydrocannabinol or THC, turned up in 6.7 percent of the samples, while methaqualone was found in 6 percent and barbiturates in 3 percent.

PCP was found in three samples, each of which also contained more than .12 percent alcohol. Cocaine was found in two blood samples, one of which contained .11 percent alcohol.

Only three samples contained codeine, morphine or heroin.

Only 115 of the drivers had no drugs or alcohol in their systems, he said.

While McBay concluded that marijuana may have contributed to the alcohol impairment of 4 percent of the 600 drivers, only one driver was affected by marijuana alone.

"I think the significance of this study is that, with the exception of alcohol, we found relatively few drugs of abuse or addiction in the blood of drivers who died in single-vehicle accidents," McBay said.

The research indicated a need for improved methods of dealing with alcohol users, he said, rather than tougher enforcement against users of other drugs.

McBay said he had suggested to Gov. Jim Hunt that an alternative to prison be set up for those convicted of drunken driving — a concept he hopes may be instituted at a national level as well.

"The only thing we can afford is to put them into a no-security situation," he said. "They would live there and go to work but they'd be on probation and they would pay to stay there."

On Friday, Hunt told the first meeting of his Task Force on Drunken Drivers to hold a series of public hearings and to issue a report on what type of legal or administrative changes are needed.

Hunt told the meeting that of 1,516 state highway deaths in 1980, 414 were known to have been caused by drunken driving. McBay's study indicates that estimate was conservative.

The study, conducted at a cost of $10,000 a year, was streamlined by the development of a rapid method of screening blood for evidence of marijuana, McBay said.

Dr. Page Hudson, professor of pathology and chief state medical examiner, said the study supports efforts to raise the minimum age for the purchase of alcohol from 18 to 21.

"Data from this study and others we've done support that idea," he said. "So do the decreased numbers of alcohol-related deaths among teen-agers in those states that have made that change."

Some of McBay's findings were presented Feb. 11 at the annual meeting of the American Academy of Forensic Sciences in Florida. The complete study has not yet been published.

Audit Set On Records

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (UPI) — Auditors have begun poring over the North Carolina Heart Association's books to determine if any money is missing and whether misconduct is involved.

Accountants from Touche Ross & Co. began examining the association's books last week after the organization's executive board voted to suspend executive director W. James Logan, 61, and his wife, Hazel, a staff member.

Logan, who earns $43,900 yearly, and Mrs. Logan, who earns $12,500 yearly as clerk, were suspended with pay March 8 following allegations of "questionable purchases and payments."

Neither Logan nor his wife has been charged with anything and officials say the suspensions were enacted to allow them to ask questions.

Smith: Tar Heels Under Pressure

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Dean Smith, who has carried six previous North Carolina basketball teams to the NCAA Final Four without attaining the ultimate prize, says his top-ranked collegiate basketball power is under more pressure this year.

"It's hard for a No. 1 ranked team to go on through the NCAA," Smith said Saturday at a final news conference before Sunday's clash with unranked Villanova, the Big East Conference champion, in the NCAA East Regional title contest.

"Yes, there's more pressure this year," he said. "Being ranked No. 1 you always take another team's best shot."

But, Smith added, it's not the most pressure he's had to endure.

"The biggest pressure was throwing it up against Yugoslavia in Montreal," he said of the 1976 Olympics when he steered the U.S. team to the gold medal. "There were a lot of alumni — 160 million."

The Tar Heels, 29-2, and the Wildcats, 24-7, square off at 12:10 p.m. EST in the nationally televised (CBS) event that will qualify the winner for the Final Four in the Louisiana Superdome at New Orleans next Saturday. The East champion will take on the winner of Sunday's Midwest championship game between Boston College and Houston in the national semifinals.

Carolina advanced with a 74-69 triumph over No. 13 Alabama Friday night just after Villanova trimmed No. 9 Memphis State 70-66 in overtime.

The game will match teams with powerful inside games — Carolina featuring James Worthy, a second team All-American, and Sam Perkins, an All-Atlantic Coast Conference performer, and Villanova countering with burly John Pinone, a 228-pound muscleman, and 6-foot-10 freshman star Ed Pinckney.

Smith says he doesn't think one can pinpoint a key to the outcome, but Coach Rollie Massimino does.

"The key will be controlling the tempo and making sure we get to the right spots at the right time," the Villanova coach said.

"The biggest obstacle is to make sure we play smart and control tempo and not get all caught up with the fans and situations that come about with changing defenses," Massimino added.

Although the game is being played on a neutral floor — that of Carolina rival North Carolina State — Tar Heel fans will dominate the sellout crowd of 12,400.

"We're going into it with confidence and with the idea we can win the game," Massimino said. "We've come here to win. We didn't come here to tie."

Smith says his team "is playing the best we have played all year."

"I hope we haven't played our best game yet."

Villanova is one of three Big East powers to reach regional championship games and North Carolina is the only remaining entry from the original four ACC teams that began chasing the national crown 10 days ago.

BC, Houston To Meet Today In Midwest Finals

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Houston, a team the experts aid would be unstoppable if it ever put all the pieces together, and Boston College, which for a while looked like it was going to pieces, meet Sunday in the final of the NCAA Midwest Regional Basketball Tournament.

Tipoff is 2:25 p.m. EST in the St. Louis Checkerdome.

The outcome may hinge on the ball-handling wizardry of a little guard with the physique of a wrestler, or a 7-foot teen-ager from Nigeria who flashes signs of becoming one of the college game's dominant big men.

Akeem Abdul Olajuwon, 19, was one of six Houston players who reached double figures Friday night in a 79-78 semifinal victory over Missouri that was not as close as the final score indicated. The Tigers, who were ranked No. 1 in the country for two weeks during the season, were playing before a highly partisan crowd.

Louisville Defeats Blazers By 75-68

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Louisville, the team that never gave up, shattered Alabama-Birmingham's glass slipper Saturday by winning the championship of the NCAA Mideast Regional basketball tournament.

The 75-68 victory sent 20th-ranked Louisville to the Final Four in New Orleans next Saturday and Monday, with a chance to win its second national title in three years. The 1980 champion Cardinals will face Georgetown, winner of the West Regional, in the semifinals of the Final Four.

"Even when we were 11-7, I didn't give up on this team," said Louisville Coach Denny Crum, who still has four starters from the team that won it all two years ago. "I'm an optimist."

Crum credited his team's difficult schedule — which included non-conference opponents such as DePaul, Oregon State, Missouri and Virginia — for his team's tournament readiness.

"It doesn't guarantee any victories, but it does give you every opportunity to play well in a tournament," Crum said "We're playing well. I don't know if it's good enough, but I think we're playing just about as well as we can."

A pair of clutch free throws each by reserve center Charles Jones and guard Lancaster Gordon broke the back of a late Alabama-Birmingham rally and ended Coach Gene Bartow's attempt to become the first coach to take three teams to the Final Four. Previously, Bartow led Memphis State and UCLA into the Final Four although he never won it all.

"When we started on Oct.15, we had four starters back from a team that went to the NCAA tournament last year," said Bartow, whose program at Alabama-Birmingham is only four years old. "We set some high goals for ourself. We wanted to win the Sun Belt Conference ... and we did. We wanted to win the

Georgetown Burns Beavers By 69-45

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Georgetown's Hoyas qualified for the NCAA basketball tournament with a quick, aggressive defense, but they made it to the Final Four Saturday with some dazzling shooting as well.

The Hoyas, hitting slightly less than 50 percent from the floor this season, connected on 29 of 38 for a sizzling 76 percent — a tournament record — in routing Oregon State 69-45 in the West Regional final.

At one point, Georgetown hit 12 straight field goals, 10 in the second half when they shot an astounding 92 percent on 12 of 13.

Led by senior guard Eric "Sleepy" Floyd, who scored 22 points on medium range jump shots and uncontested layups, the sixth-ranked Hoyas got ahead early and never let up.

"We played our best today," said Georgetown Coach John Thompson. "I would have to say it was the best performance by any team I've ever coached.

"We tried to get the ball into (center Patrick) Ewing early, and once we did, they tended to forget about our other guys, especially Eric Floyd. Eric is one of the best players in the nation."

Floyd credited Ewing's dominating play inside for his scoring opportunities.

"Pat is such an awesome force inside that a team would be stupid not to fall back on him, and that left things open for me outside," Floyd said.

Ralph Miller, coach of fourth-raned Oregon State, called Georgetown "definitely the best team we've played this season."

"They did an exceollent job in every phase of the game at both ends of the court," added Miller.

The Beavers shot 38 percent from the floor, and Miller said his team's difficulty in hitting the outside shot was "the reason we fell behind early."

THE DAILY REFLECTOR
SUNDAY MORNING
MARCH 21, 1982

"It's especially gratifying to beat a team that was ranked No. 1 in the country," Houston Coach Guy Lewis said Saturday. "But right now we're working on coming back down to earth, and getting ready to play Boston College."

Although the talent-rich Cougars, 24-7, have been the perennial pre-season favorites to win the Southwest Conference championship, they never have. This year they finished second to Arkansas after going on a four-game losing skid midway through the conference season.

Boston College, rocked by a point-shaving scandal, lurched to a 5-6 start this season and did no better than fourth in the Big East Conference. The taller, more physically powerful Cougars would appear to have a big edge over Boston College. But the Eagles, led by muscular guard John Bagley, reeled off upset victories over San Francisco and DePaul in the sub-regionals. In the semifinals Friday night, they knocked off Kansas State 69-65 after trailing the Wildcats at halftime by five points.

"I can't say enough about this Boston College team," said Coach Tom Davis. "A month ago, we wouldn't have dreamed we would be here, and that's been our theme. We try to play loose and think positively."

"The DePaul game gave us some confidence, some sort of basis on what we could do," said sophomore forward Martin Clark. "It gave us the realization that we could win."

Pirate Women Win Tournament

GREENSBORO — East Carolina University's women's softball team went through two days of play in the North Carolina A&T Invitational Tournament with a perfect record yesterday, easily winning the title.

The first day of the event was a round-robin type event, with ECU winning all four games. They first topped UNC-Greensboro, 7-0, then downed hosting A&T, 13-1. That was followed by a 6-1 win over Western Carolina and a 4-3 victory over Pembroke State.

Saturday, the tournament format changed to double elimination, and the Lady Pirates went through that without a loss to claim the championship. In the opening contest, they downed Campbell, 5-3. Cynthia Shepard led the Lady Pirates with a homer and a triple, accounting for four runs batted in. Mitzi Davis and Ginger Rothermel also added two hits each.

In that game, Campbell took a 2-0 lead in the first and held it until East Carolina scored three in the third. Campbell tied it up with one in the fourth, but ECU came back with one in the fifth and another in the seventh to wrap it up.

The second game saw the Pirates top N.C. State, 14-6. The Lady Pirates scored once in the first and added two more in the second to take the lead. The Pirates then wrapped it up with five in the top of the fourth for an 8-0 lead at that point.

Shepard again homered in a 2-for-3 effort, while Shirley Brown went 3-for-4 and had two runs batted in.

In the third contest of the afternoon, the Pirates downed Pembroke again, 5-1. East Carolina got single runs in the first two innings to take a lead it never lost. Sheri Stout led the ECU hitting with two in three trips, while Brown went 2-for-4.

Simpson Blows Three-Stroke Lead

Lietzke, Bryant Tied For TPC Lead

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. (AP) — Bruce Lietzke was just starting to talk about how glad he was to be only two shots back when he was informed he shared the lead Saturday in the third round of the $500,000 Tournament Players Championship.

He quickly regrouped.

"I'd much rather be leading or tied for the lead," he said. "I've won coming from behind, but I'd rather be leading going into the last round every time.

"This would be an awfully good tournament to win."

His chances were heightened considerably when Scott Simpson, playing behind him, blew a 2-shot lead with a double bogey-bogey finish — well after the national television cameras had finished their coverage for the day.

Simpson's loss of three shots to par on two holes lifted Lietzke and Brad Bryant into a share of the top spot going into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $90,000 first prize.

If Lietzke was surprised by his sudden elevation to the lead, Bryant was even more startled.

"I haven't even thought about it," said Bryant when asked about his thoughts of winning, "but $90,000 is kind of attractive."

Simpson was cruising along with a 2-shot lead when he dumped his tee shot into a tiny bunker on the island green on the par-3 17th. He took two to get out, then missed a 6-foot putt for a double bogey-5.

Simpson, whose only previous victory came in the 1980 Western Open, also bogeyed the 18th, leaving Lietzke and Bryant as the co-leaders going into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $90,000 first prize.

Lietzke was a three-time winner last season and Bryant is a non-winner in his fifth year on the tour. They completed three tours over the watery, pot-bunker filled acreage that makes up the controversial Players Club course with matching totals of 210, 6 shots under par.

Lietzke, the game's most successful cross-handed putter, had a 3-under-par 69 and Bryant fought his way to a 71 in the warm, muggy, breezy weather.

Simpson and Vance Heafner were a single shot off the pace at 211. Heafner matched par 72 and Simpson had a 73 despite his horrendous finish.

Veteran George Archer was next at 212 after a 70.

The group at 213 included Jerry Pate, Ed Sneed, Hale Irwin and Tim Simpson, who is no relation to Scott. Pate had a 70 despite a ball in the water on the 18th, Sneed shot 74, Irwin and Tim Simpson 75.

Scott Simpson's closing collapse also let Tom Watson back in the title chase. He managed a 68, the best round of the day, and moved to within four strokes of the lead at 214.

"My only chance is for the wind to blow tomorrow," he said. "Without the wind, there are too many guys in front of me."

ECU Game Rained Out

East Carolina University's baseball game with the University of Virginia was rained out Saturday afternoon.

Also rained out were a baseball game between D.H. Conley and Rose High School, at Guy Smith Stadium, and a softball game between the two schools.

East Carolina and Virginia are scheduled to play today, but it was not known at press time whether the teams would attempt to play one or two games. Either way, the afternoon's activities will begin at 1:30 p.m.

East Carolina is scheduled to play Old Dominion in a key ECAC-South game on Tuesday night, its next action. Both teams come into the game unbeaten in league play.

The Pirates are currently 11-3 and in the midst of a nine-game winning streak. They are also unbeaten on their home field.

No new dates were set for the playing of the Rose-Conley games. Rose will play host to North Lenoir in a make-up game Monday at 4 p.m. at Guy Smith Stadium.

The softball team also plays Monday at 4 p.m. at the Guy Smith women's softball field.

NIT Field Whittled Down To Final Four Squads

NEW YORK (AP) — Purdue is hot, Bradley has something to prove, Oklahoma is loose and Georgia has Dominique Wilkins.

That, in the most simple terms, describes the final four in the National Invitation Tournament.

In Monday night's semifinals at Mdison Square Garden it will be Bradley against Oklahoma at 6:30 p.m. EST followed by Georgia against Purdue at 9. The winners meet for the championship Wednesday night.

Purdue sewed up the last semifinal berth Friday night with its third impressive tourney victory, an 86-68 stomping of Texas A&M. The previous night, Bradley topped Tulane 77-61, Georgia trounced Virginia Tech 90-73 and Oklahoma downed Dayton 91-82.

"We're on a roll, no doubt about it," said Purdue Coach Gene Keady, whose Boilermakers now are 17-13 after being 9-12 at one point.

"We were struggling there for a while. In fact we were dead," said Keady, who last year led Purdue to third place in the NIT. "It's been a year when we got caloused and just hung in tough, and I'm just glad the NIT had faith in us and kept us alive."

The Boilermaker turnaround has featured a two-pronged attack of sophomore center Russell Cross and senior guard Keith Edmonson, the leading scorer in the Big Ten.

Keady knows full well that to stop Georgia, which also has been hot of late, his team must deal with Wilkins, the third-team All-American forward known for his backboard-wrenching slam dunks.

"You see this picture of Dominique?" Keady said, holding up a photo of Wilkins in the process of dunking one. "That's intimidating. That guy can get up higher than any of our people. He's very impressive."

Georgia Coach Hugh Durham, while admitting that his 6-foot-7 star has played the key roll in leading the Bulldogs, 19-11, into the final four, insists they are not a one-man team.

"I think any time you have a great player people rely on him," said Durham. "We certainly prefer to play with Wilkins in the lineup and we prefer to play when he gets a lot of points, but at the same time we've got other talented players who are capable of scoring."

Durham agreed that Purdue is the hottest team in the NIT.

"We've done well, but they've done exceptionally well," he said. "They've got the big center (Cross) that we don't have, and I think that gives them an advantage. And they've been here before and that's another advantage."

For Bradley Coach Dick Versace, the sour taste of being ignored by the NCAA tournament committee still lingers. But the outspoken Braves' mentor emphasizes that he's glad to be in the NIT.

"Thank God there is an NIT and I hope there will always be an NIT because it is a place where teams can come and grow and gain recognition, walk down Broadway and have a place in the sun, a day that can lead them to other things, he said."

"When you see my team you'll see a very great basketball team," Versace said matter-of-factly of his 24-10 Braves, who are paced by seniors Mitchell Anderson, Donald Reese and David Thirdkill, who own a 24-10 record.

Earlier Versace had criticized the NCAA committee for not inviting Bradley while issuing bids to four Big East teams, including Boston College, which Versace said didn't have a good enough record to earn a berth.

"We suffered humiliation," said Versace, adding that he didn't have anything against Boston College, just the process that allowed the Eagles to get into the NCAA tourney.

Oklahoma Coach Billy Tubbs also wanted to get into a postseason tournament, but the NIT is just fine with him.

"We wanted to get into the NCAA or the NIT and I think we've gone above our expectations (by making the final four)," said Tubbs, whose Sooners bring a 22-10 record into Monday's game against Bradley.

Tubbs, in just his second season at Oklahoma, has turned around a team that went 9-18 in 1980, and as far as he's concerned, any more success at this point "would be just icing on the cake."

Led by junior forward David Little and junior guard Chuck Barnett, the Sooners "will just come in swinging," said Tubbs. "We've got nothing to lose."

Meyer May Not Return

CHICAGO (AP) — Complaining that he is being treated unfairly by the Chicago news media, veteran DePaul basketball Coach Ray Meyer says he isn't sure he'll be back for another season.

Meyer, 68, said he will decide soon whether to step aside and hand over head coaching responsibilities to his son, Joey, an assistant coach who has been designated as his father's eventual successor.

Meyer's comments came on the heels of DePaul's 82-75 loss to Boston College last Sunday in the NCAA Midwest Regional. The defeat marked the third consecutive year the Blue Demons lost their opening game in the tournament.

"I hope my detractors sleep well," said Meyer, who has coached the Blue Demons for the last 40 seasons and is the winningest active major-college coach. "My wife is very disturbed at the way the Chicago media has handled this. So much so that she has asked me to seriously consider retiring."

Meyer said he was upset at the difference in the way he was treated by the media during the season, when his team was 26-1, and the press reports that surfaced after the tournament loss.

"All through the season, when we were going 26-1, I was all right," Meyer said. "But we lose that game, and all of a sudden I'm stupid. I'm the guy who lost the tournament game in March, all right. But aren't I the same fellow that helped win all those games back in December, January and February?"

At a press conference the day after the Boston College game, Meyer indicated that he planned to remain at DePaul as head coach next season. But on Friday he said he might change his mind.

"Every time we lose, they (the media) take off on me," Meyer said. "When other coaches lose, they don't get it as badly as I do. Marge (Mrs. Meyer) wants me to retire so I won't take that abuse anymore. I'm not sure if I will come back, but I'm not close to making a decision. Now isn't the time, with my emotions like this."

Nicklaus Upset, Angry After Shooting Fat 78 At Tournament

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus discussed, with candor and good grace, the 83 he shot in the British Open last year.

He joked about an 82 in the last round of the Bing Crosby a few years previously.

Patiently, week after week, he attempted to explain his playing difficulties as he struggled through the frustrations and embarrassment of 1979, by far the worst season of his matchless career.

Over the last decade, the man generally acknowledged as the finest player the game has known also has been among golf's most gracious, patient and accessible performers.

But he obviously was upset, even angry, after completing a fat 78 Saturday in the delayed finish of the second round of the Tournament Players Championship, a title he has won three times.

It gave Nicklaus a 151 total — seven strokes over par for two trips over the new and controversial Players Club course — and sent him down the road, a victim of the cut for the second week in a row.

It was the first time in his matchless career Nicklaus had missed the cut in consecutive tournaments.

And he was not happy.

His steel-blue eyes were blazing and his jaw set in a tight, grim line as he quickly cleaned out his locker, changed into street shoes, grabbed a telephone and started making travel arrangements home to North Palm Beach, Fla.

"No comment," he said, forced a weak smile and rolled his eyes to the heavens.

"I just don't want to say anything I'd be sorry for later," he added.

It was not clear whether his displeasure was directed toward himself or the extremely difficult course designed and built as a permanent home for the annual championship of golf's touring pros. It is being played in compeition for the first time this week.

And it has been the subject of considerable conversation among the players, some of whom have been critical of the severely undulating greens, the severity of the penalties for a errant shot. The course features swales and mounds, vast expanses of wasteland and sand, pot bunkers more common to Scottish courses, grass bunkers and water on every hole.

Early in the week, Nicklaus said the course "is going to be fine. It's very much a British-playing type of course. You're going to have to play golf here. I like the golf course. I think Pete (architect Pete Dye) has done a great job."

But the man who has won a record 17 major professional championships only rolled his eyes and said "No comment" after he'd completed his second round, playing his last five holes five over par. He 3-putted the 16th and double-bogeyed the 18th from the water i7/8 his last competitive action prior to the Masters, annually his first big goal of the season.

Bodine Out To Win Pair

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (AP) — Geoff Bodine of Pleasant Garden, N.C., goes after the third sweep in Martinsville Speedway's 35-year history Sunday when he tries to win both halves of the $109,150 Dogwood 500 Classic national championship doubleheader.

The twin bill includes a 250-lap Late Model Sportsman race starting at 12:30 p.m. EST, and a 250-lap Modified event, and Bodine should be on the pole for both races.

"I sure would like a sweep and we've come close," Bodine said. "I've always had good cars here, and I think I know how to get around this trac. There's a technique to it, and I think I've got it."

Bodine won the pole Thursday for the Sportsman race with a speed of 89.868 mph in a Chevrolet Malibu, and he apparently captured the No. 1 spot Friday for the Modified event with a speed of 96.042 mph in a Chevrolet Cavalier.

Rain interrupted qualifying Friday with seven Modified cars still on the line, and the rain continued Saturday, canceling the additional time trials and the six 25-lap qualifying races that had been scheduled to determine the last 20 cars for each race.

Those cars will hold time trials at 12 noon Sunday for the Modified race. Bodine still could be bumped from the pole, but it is unlikely.

Thirty-eight Modifieds already have gone through time trials for the field of 40, and national Modified champion Richie Evans of Rome, N.Y., will challenge Bodine from the outside pole if Friday's times hold up.

Evans won the race last year on three wheels after he and Bodine wrecked coming across the finish line. Bodine had won the Sportsman race prior to the wild finish in the Modified event.

In the Sportsman race, Phil Parsons of Denver, N.C., will start on the outside pole opposite Bodine, who has nine career victories here.

Rocky Mt. Downs Chapel Hill, 61-58

GREENSBORO, N.C. (UPI) — Rocky Mount earned both revenge and the North Carolina Athletic Association state 4-A title Saturday as the Gryphons snapped Chapel Hill's 36-game winning streak by defeating the Tigers 61-58.

Senior all-state guard George McClain led Rocky Mount with 16 points as the Gryphons finished the year 28-2.

Chapel Hill, led by Sandy Anderson's 19 points, finished the year at 27-1. The Tigers had not lost since defeating Rocky Mount in last year's 4-A finals.

In an earlier game, David Henderson scored 21 points to lead Warren County to a 62-59 win over Swannanoa Owen for the state 3-A title.

Chapel Hill held a 42-41 lead going into the fourth quarter but fell behind as 6-foot-5 reserve forward Brian Hunter pumped in 10 straight points and the Gryphons did not miss a shot from the floor during the entire period.

Hunter gave Rocky Mount a two-point lead at 45-43 in the first minute of the quarter. The Gryphons stretched the lead to as many as five points during the period.

Chapel Hill came back late in the period, as sophomore reserve Ranzino Smith hit four straight baskets and Anderson hit a jumper from the right corner to cut the lead to two at 60-58 with 39 seconds left.

The Tigers had a chance to tie in the last 30 seconds, but Gryphon reserve Tracy Battle sank the front end of a 1-and-1 with 3 seconds left to ice the game.

Smith finished the game with 10 points, and all-state John Davis finished wiht 16 for Chapel Hill.

Hunter and reserve Mike Williams both scored 10 points for Rocky Mount. Jerome Garrett was the fourth Gryphon in double figures with 15.

Oklahoma Star To Attend UNC

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Jenks guard Steve Hale, son of former Oral Roberts University basketball coach Jerry Hale, says he will attend the University of North Carolina.

Hale, who carries a 22.4 point average and is regarded as one of the top recruits in Oklahoma, had considered Oral Roberts, Tulsa and Arkansas as well as North Carolina.

The Tar Heels have expressed high interest in the 6-foot-3 Hale. North Carolina Coach Dean Smith visited Tulsa in December to see him play.

"It's hard to describe, but I was very impressed with how smoothly things were run there," Hale said of the Chapel Hill, N.C., basketball program.

Warren County Beats Swannanoa For Title

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Jerome Cooper's two free throws with 24 seconds left thwarted a Swannanoa Owen rally and Kenny Crews' extra free throw wrapped up Warren County's 62-59 victory and the North Carolina 3-A boys championship Saturday night.

Warren County gained a 50-49 lead on a Cooper rebound with 6:26 remaining, but Owen's Brad Daugherty scored to give them a 51-50 advantage. Warren County's Reginald Burchette canned a free throw at the 5:47 mark to tie the game at 51.

The teams traded baskets until they tied it at 59 on a basket by Owen's Keith Parker at 2:21.

David Henderson, the game's most valuable player, missed on the first of three chances Owen had to tie the score again. Daugherty also missed an opportunity and Joe Greene blew a one-and-one. Stacy Ayers tried following a timeout but was called for traveling.

Cooper then connected on his game winning free shots, and later forced a turnover which led to a foul and Crews' insurance point.

Henderson finished with 21 points, while Cooper added 14. Warren County closed out its season at 25-7.

Daugherty led all scorers with 26 points. He also grabbed 15 rebounds, handed out 4 assists and blocked three shots. Phil Groce added 13 as Swannanoa Owen dropped to 28-2.

North Pitt Stings Eagles, 11-5

VANCEBORO — North Pitt scored three runs in the first two innings en route to an easy, 11-5, victory over West Craven Saturday afternoon in a nonconference baseball game.

The victory, the first for the Panthers in three outings this season, was sparked by Mike Brown, who was three for five and by Greg Briley and Daniel Keel, both of whom had two RBIs.

North Pitt wasted little time in taking command. Brown doubled to open the first inning and came home when Keel was safe on a fielder's choice. After Quintin Dove walked, Edward Ayers singled home Keel and Dove subsequently scored when the throw was misplayed at home.

The Panthers upped their lead to 6-0 in the second. Roger Bell and Brown singled to open the inning and both scored on Briley's double. Keel followed with another double to score Briley.

West Craven cut the gap to 6-2 in the bottom of the third, but the Panthers scored three more runs in the top of the fourth and added two more in the fifth.

The Eagles scored single runs in the fourth, fifth and seventh innings, but it was far from enough as they suffered their second straight lopsided loss to a Pitt County team. Ayden-Grifton whipped West Craven, 15-0, Friday.

Trelis Moore was two for four for the Panthers, who had 11 hits on the afternoon.

North Pitt is scheduled to play host to Roanoke on Tuesday, but there is a possibility the game might be switched to Roanoke should the Panther field still be unplayable.

Beddingfield Edges Rams, 4-3

SNOW HILL — Wilson Beddingfield pushed over a run in the top of the seventh inning yesterday and nipped Greene Central, 4-3, in a nonconference baseball game.

Beddingfield had taken the lead in the game in the third inning, only to see the Rams rally in the fourth and sixth to tie it up. All four of the Bruin runs came after two were retired — and the game-winning hit came on a two-strike pitch.

The Bruins grabbed the lead with three in the third inning. With one down, Tony Braswell got a check-swing single to right and then stole second. After a second out, he scored on a double by Joel Patterson, who then scored on another two-bagger, this one by Charles Davis. Woody Mercer then singled in Davis for a 3-0 lead.

The Rams fought back with one in the fourth. With one down, John Mayo reached on an error and advanced on Marlow Gilmore's single. A wild pitch then scored Mayo.

Greene Central got two more in the sixth, tying it at 3-3. Mayo singled and moved up on a hit by Warren. Chris Suggs then singled to drive in both runners and knot the game.

But Beddingfield pushed over the winner in the top of the seventh. Patterson walked and was sacrificed up. After the second out, Chris Williams banged out a two-strike single to drive Patterson over.

Williams led the Bruin hitting with two hits, while Suggs had two for Greene Central.

The loss drops the Rams to 2-3 on the year. They play host to North Lenoir on Tuesday. Beddingfield is now 1-2.

Dokes Retains Title With KO

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Michael "Dynamite" Dokes took target practice with Franco Thomas' face from the opening bell until he knocked him out in the fifth round Saturday in defense of the North American Boxing Federation heavyweight championship.

Thomas opened the fifth round by landing three looping left hooks as the crowd at the Playboy Hotel and Casino cheered the game challenger on.

Suddenly, Dokes crashed a left hook to Thomas' chin and followed wth a right-left-right to the head that dropped the West Virginian in a heap. Thomas struggled up at seven, took the mandatory eight, then turned to meet Dokes' attack. But he had nothing left to withstand the attack.

Dokes rocked Thomas along the ropes with a right to the jaw, then after a couple of light punches, crashed two overhand rights to the head. Thomas dropped face down, with his left arm over the lower strand of rope.

Referee Zach Clayton didn't even bother to count. Instead he signaled the scheduled 12-round fight was over at 1:33 and then rolled Thomas over on his back as Thomas' handlers and a doctor entered the ring. Thomas was able to get up after a brief time.

The victory on national television was the 25th for Dokes, 212¾, against a draw. The 23-year-old Akron, Ohio native, ranked second by the World Boxing Council and third by the World Boxing Association, scored his 14th knockout.

For 27-year-old Thomas, 213¼, of Fairmont, W.Va., it was the second straight loss and left his record at 24-4.

Dokes tool control at the outset and seldom missed as he speared Thomas with hooks, jabs and right hands to the head and also worked well to the body. Thomas landed an occasional hook but he missed more often than scored.

In a scheduled 10-round heavyweight fight, Tim Witherspoon of Philadelphia, 208¼, ran his record to 16-0, when he knocked out Luis Acosta, 210½, of Argentina with a single overhand right in the second round.

In middleweight 10-rounders, Irish Teddy Mann, 160, of Fork River, N.J., came on in the late rounds to score a unanimous decision over Robby Epps.

Jones Sparks UDC To NCAA II Championship

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — District of Columbia center Earl Jones scored 24 points Saturday night as the 4-year-old Firebirds outgunned defending champion Florida Southern 73-63 for the NCAA Division II basketball title.

In a consolation game earlier Saturday, Kentucky Wesleyan beat California State at Bakersfield 77-66 for third place.

The Firebirds, created in a merger of three schools, opened a 36-35 halftime lead to an eight-point edge at 16 minutes of the second half.

Florida Southern edged back to within a field goal, but the 7-foot Jones scored a layup, stole a pass and hooked another field goal to lift the Firebirds to a 58-47 lead at 9:13.

Firebirds forward Michael Britt, who finished with 20 points, followed Jones' hook with four straight field goals to hold down the Moccasins.

In the first half, UDC kept a one-to six-point edge over the Moccasins in the first seven minutes. But Florida Southern grabbed a 16-14 lead on a field goal by Mark King at 12:37.

The Moccasins took the lead four more times before Britt and Jones each scored a field goal to give UDC its halftime margin.

King led Florida Southern with 24 points, and Moccasin center John Ebeling, who was hit with three personal fouls in the first half but stayed out of further foul trouble, added 18 points. Ebeling also grabbed 14 rebounds.

UDC finished its regular season as an independent with a 23-5 record. Florida Southern of the Sunshine State Conference had a 21-9 mark.

La. Tech 82
Kentucky 60

RUSTON, La. (AP) — Senior center Pam Kelly scored 29 points — making 14 of 16 field goal attempts — to lead Louisiana Tech to an 82-60 basketball victory over Kentucky and the NCAA Midwest Regional championship.

Tech, the defending national champions, advanced to the women's Final Four next week in Norfolk, Va., for the fourth straight year

Kelly made nine of nine from the floor in the first half, as Tech built a 46-32 halftime lead.

Kentucky closed to within 50-44 about 3:30 into the second half, but a 12-2 scoring spurt by Tech — including four baskets by Debra Rodman and two by Janice Lawrence — ended the threat.

Tigers Power Past Minnesota

By The Associated Press

Home runs by Lance Parrish, Rick Leach and Chet Lemon powered the Detroit Tigers to a 9-2 exhibition baseball victory over the Minnesota Twins Saturday.

Parrish' three-run blast came in the second inning off Twins starter and loser Roger Erickson. Leach homered off Erickson to lead off the third and Lemon belted a two-run shot two outs later off Erickson.

The victory improved Detroit's spring record to 6-7, while the Twins dropped to 2-9.

Mike Vail's solo homer ignited a four-run rally as the Cincinnati Reds, 7-4, stopped the Kansas City Royals, 4-7. It was Vail's first home run of the spring and came off Kansas City starter Jim Wright.

Jason Thompson smacked a three-run homer and Tony Pena drove in thre runs with four hits as the Pittsburgh Pirates, 10-3, handed the Philadelphia Phillies, 4-7, a 10-7 defeat. Pena went 4-for-4, doubling home a run in the second and punching a two-run single in the fourth.

Rick Monday's grand slam homer powered the Los Angeles Dodgers, 8-4, over the New York Mets 10-4. Craig Swan worked the first five innings for the Mets, 3-7, giving up only three hits and one run.

The Toronto Blue Jays, 9-4, downed the Chicago White Sox 8-4 as Jesse Barfield went 3-for-5, batting in three runs. Aurelio Rodriguez homered for Toronto as the White Sox record fell to 6-6.

Pitchers Phil Niekro, Tommy Boggs and Al Hrabosky scattered two hits as the Atlanta Braves, 11-2, blanked the Houston Astros 2-0. It was the Braves' sixth shutout of the spring. Houston is now 3-6.

Reserve catcher Orlando Sanchez doubled home Mike Ramsay in the 14th inning as the St. Louis Cardinals, 5-5, outlasted the Boston Red Sox 10-6. Boston, now 5-8, scored three runs in the eighth and ninth innings to knot the score at 5-5, but the Cards scored once in the 13th and four times in the 14th off loser Dennis Burtt, the last of four Red Sox pitchers.

Randy Bass' base-loaded two-run single sparked a five-run rally in the sixth inning as the San Diego Padres downed Seattle 6-4. San Diego is now 6-4, while the Mariners dropped to 2-5.

Dave Bergman tripled home two runs in the fifth inning, then scored the tie-breaking run on Darrell Evans' single as the San Francisco Giants, 4-5, defeated the Chicago Cubs 6-3. The Cubs are 6-5 in exhibition play.

Bobby Grich led off the fourth inning with a home run, his third of the spring, to snap a 2-2 tie and lead the California Angels, 5-5, to a 4-2 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers, 4-6.

Bake McBride and Jerry Dybzinski each hit two-run doubles and Von Hayes added a solo homer as the Cleveland Indians, 6-4, beat the Oakland A's 8-7. The Indians took advantage of the wildness of A's starter Mike Norris, who had his third ineffective outing of the exhibition season. Dan Meyer and Tony Armas homered for Okland, now 5-4.

Lopez-Melton Up By Five At Pro-Am

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Nancy Lopez-Melton shook off a double bogey on the ninth hole to fire a 3-under-par 69 Saturday and take a commanding 5-shot lead after three rounds of the $200,000 J&B Scotch Pro-Am women's golf tournament.

Lopez-Melton, who started the day two shots in front of Sandra Haynie, made five birdies and 12 pars on the 6,237-yard, par-72 Desert Inn Country Club course. She faltered only on the par-4 ninth when she hit her second shot long, flubbed a chip shot and three-putted for a six.

Lopez-Melton finished the three rounds at 206, 11-under-par. Haynie, after an even-par 72, was at 211, while Ayako Okamoto of Japan was third at 212.

Okamoto, a star on the Japanese women's tour, shot a 4-under-par 68 to move into contention. She shared the day's best round with Patty Sheehan, last year's Ladies Professional Golf Association Rookie of the Year, who is at 3 under par for the tournament.

Two-time defending champion Donna Caponi struggled to a 2-over 74 that left her well off the lead at 216. Judy Clark, three shots behind starting the third round, also had a 74 to finish at 214.

A non-winner in more than eight months, Lopez-Melton said the 5-shot lead was the biggest she's ever had going into the final round of a tournament.

"Usually when I win a tournament, I come from behind," the winner of 23 LPGA events said. "I've only won one or two when I've been ahead."

Lopez-Melton said she plans to attack the golf course during the final round and try to expand her lead rather than protect it.

"I want to be aggressive," she said. "I'd love to win the tournament by a lot of shots, not just a few. I've never done that before, it's always been a fight."

ECU Women...

Then, in the championship game, the Lady Pirates again met Western Carolina, downing them 2-0. The game remained a scoreless deadlock until the sixth inning when Brown singled with two on, driving in both runners.

The eight wins over the two day period ran the ECU record to 11-3. East Carolina plays host to N.C. State in a doubleheader in Greenville on Tuesday at 3 p.m.

Tar Heels Stop Alabama; Memphis St. Falls

It's A Block
North Carolina's James Worthy (52) goes high to block the shot of Alabama's Eddie Phillips (51) during first half action in Friday night's NCAA East Regional semifinal game being played at Reynolds Coliseum in Raleigh, N.C. (AP Laserphoto)

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — There aren't many people who haven't heard of North Carolina's basketball tradition, but Villanova center John Pinone thinks its about time his team got some notice, too.

The top-ranked Tar Heels and the Wildcats meet Sunday for the NCAA East Regional championship and a shot at the national collegiate title. Villanova gained the berth by squeaking by Memphis State in overtime 70-66.

North Carolina placed five players in double figures as it stopped Alabama 74-69.

Pinone, who scored 19 points, hit a pair of free throws with 26 seconds left in overtime to give Villanova a lead it never relinquished. Stewart Granger iced the victory with two more free shots.

Ed Pinkney and Aaron Howard added 16 apiece for Villanova.

"It is no fluke," Pinone said of his team's victory. "We deserve to be in the final eight. Now, people will know about Villanova."

Wildcat Coach Rollie Massimino knew about his team all along. Once the game went into the extra period, he said he gained added confidence.

"We have lost overtime games in the past. We lost a triple overtime at Syracuse last year," Massimino said. "This year, I feel we are going to win when we go into overtime."

Massimino almost didn't get to see an overtime when Memphis State's Otis Jackson threw up a 30-footer with time running out. The ball rimmed out and left the score tied at 62.

"I was looking for a shot from the free throw line," Jackson said, "and time got away from me. I thought it was in."

Memphis State could have forced a second overtime, but the attempt never left the hands of guard Phillip Haynes. He was whistled for traveling.

"That's his best shot," Tiger coach Dana Kirk said. "I would have liked to have seen him get the opportunity to take it."

Massimino was asked to evaluate his upcoming opponents prior to the second game, but he shied away, preferring to enjoy the moment of his team's 24 victory in 31 games, tying Villanova's best victory total ever.

"Hopefully, we'll play the best we can," he said. "We're going back to prepare for the game on Sunday."

The contest comes against a team thought to have the advantage since its own home court is 30 miles to the west.

"We are very happy to be in the final eight," Tar Heel coach Dean Smith said. "Now our goal is to be in the final four."

The previous goal was achieved with the help of James Worthy and Matt Doherty, who scored 16 points apiece. Center Sam Perkins added 15, Jimmy Black had 14 and freshman Michael Jordan scored 11.

Alabama Coach Wimp Sanderson said his goal was to hold Worthy and Perkins down offensively. The result was 27 team fouls, including the loss of Bobby Lee Hurt and Eddie Phillips on fouls. Even reserve Phillip Lockett fouled out trying to keep the Tar Heel tandem in check.

"We can't afford to have three players in foul trouble and stay with a team as talented as North Carolina," Sanderson said. "We did the best we could inside and gave up some shots on the perimeter. They just knocked them home."

Sanderson then closed his news conference with a comment few Crimson Tide fans would dare make aloud, especially around Tuscaloosa in the fall.

Hoyas Demolish OSU...

The Hoyas, raising their record to 29-6, will advance to the Final Four in New Orleans next week and will meet Louisville, a 75-68 winner over Alabama-Birmingham in the Mideast Regional final Saturday.

It will be the Hoyas' first trip to the Final Four since 1943, when they lost to Wyoming in the championship game.

Georgetown, dominating the boards and throttling Oregon State with a swarming defense, applied pressure from the outset, moving to a 10-point lead on consecutive field goals by Floyd and stretched the margin to 42-25 at halftime.

The Beavers were unable to handle Floyd, a smooth, quick, 6-foot-3 guard, or Georgetown's intimidating 7-foot center Patrick Ewing, who set the tone early in the game with a pair of slam dunks over the shorter Beavers.

Georgetown reeled off eight straight points early in the second half for a 52-27 advantage, and with about nine minutes remaining, went into a stall, running precious minutes off the clock.

Floyd tossed in 18 points and Ewing added 11 in the first half. A three-point play by Ewing and guard Fred Brown's steal and layup gave the Hoyas a 15-point lead midway through the first half, and Oregon State got no closer than 13 points the rest of that period.

Georgetown, making its fourth straight tournament appearance, moved to a quick 7-2 lead on a three-point play by Brown. Consecutive baskets by Floyd put the Hoyas ahead 17-7 with 13:28 remaining in the half, and Ewing and Brown helped stretch the lead to 24-9.

A pair of baskets by Oregon State center Charlie Sitton and a short jumper by guard Lester Conner kept the Beavers in contention. But Floyd drove the lane and was fouled, converting the three-point play, with 39 seconds left in the half.

ECU Nine Edges George Mason

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina rallied for two runs in the bottom of the eighth inning Friday and pulled out a 4-3 ECAC-South baseball victory over George Mason.

The win kept the Pirates unbeaten in three starts in the league, while the Patriots drop off to 0-2. East Carolina, now 11-3 overall, has now won nine straight games.

Trailing by 3-2, the Pirates got the rally going when Todd Evans led off the bottom of the eighth with a single into left field. He was sacrificed up, and raced on to third on a passed ball.

Mason catcher Don Van Steelant, after chasing the ball down, tried to throw Evans out, but his throw was high and off the glove of Bob Sowers and into left field. Evans raced home with the tying run as the ball was chased down.

Fran Fitzgerald, who continued to fatten his average with a three-for-four afternoon, banged a single to left, and courtesy runner Ricky Nichols, on the hit and run, scored all the way from first on a double down the left field line by Chuck Bishop, giving the Pirates the lead.

This time, it was for good.

After rolling to a 7-0 win in the first meeting of the two teams on Thursday, coach Hal Baird was asked if the Pirates might have been a little flat for the game.

"I thought maybe we were during infield and batting pratice. We had very poor ones. But after the game got started, I thought we were up for it.

"I've just got to give George Mason credit. They played a fine game, came up with some good defensive plays, and their freshman pitcher did a very good job against us."

Key among the defensive plays were three double plays, all initiated by shortstop Jim Youngblood, who picked up three balls just a step from second, forcing one runner there before throwing on to first to complete the play.

Starting pitcher Les Wright, who left in the eighth, gave up 11 hits, but generally managed to keep the Pirates off stride.

"He kept hitting parts of the strike zone that kept us off balance," Baird said.

But he, too, had praise for his own freshman pitcher, Bob Davidson, who went the distance, giving up six hits — two of them solo home runs.

"He pitched well. His fast ball was way ahead of them early and their righthanders were all hitting to right field. But his breaking ball wasn't that good early, and they started grooving on his fast ball.

"But then, he got his breaking stuff back and got very, very tough," Baird pointed out. After the two homers, back-to-back in the sixth inning, Davidson, now 2-1, saw only two baserunners, one reaching on an error, and the other on a two-out ninth inning single. He struck out the side in the eighth, and ended up with five strikeouts.

Mason jumped on the Pirates for a run in the opening inning, taking a 1-0 lead. With one down, Robbie Foster walked and Kevin Anderson singled him to third on the hit and run. Van Steelant then hit a sacrifice fly to right, easily scoring Foster.

After letting threats go by the boards in the first and second innings, the Pirates tied it up in the fourth. Evans led off with a double to left and was sacrificed to third. Fitzgerald singled to right center, and it was 1-1.

East Carolina then took the lead with a run in the fifth. Robert Wells singled and Mike Sorrell advanced him with another hit. David Wells followed with another hit, scoring the other Wells.

Mason, which had had only one baserunner since the first, banged out two homers in the sixth to regain the lead, 3-2. They came with one down as Anderson and Van Steelant did the job.

"The first one was not a good pitch," Baird recalled. "It was right in the fat of the plate. But the other was a good pitch. He just hit it well."

Then, after double plays in the sixth and seventh foiled ECU rallies, the Pirates did the job in the eighth, pulling out the win.

"I told Gary (assistant coach Gary Overton) earlier that it was time for a gut check — to have a close game where we had to pull it out in the late innings. We got it today, and we pulled it out. It should help us as the season goes along."

Sorrell and Evans both ended up with two hits for the Pirates while Evans had two. Anderson led Mason's hitting with two.

The Pirates then play host to Old Dominion, one of the ECAC-South's co-favorites on Tuesday at 7 p.m.

Jackson Blasts First HR In California Uniform

By The Associated Press

Reggie Jackson has returned his first small dividend to owner Gene Autry as a member of the California Angels.

Jackson, who could earn $900,000 with the Angels this year if attendance clauses in his contract take effect, blasted a home run as California ripped Seattle 10-0 in an exhibition game Friday. It was the veteran outfielder's first four-bagger in an Angels' unform.

"I've been hitting the ball where it's pitched," said Jackson. "If I hit for a high average, I know the power will come. If I get my singles, I'll get the home runs, too."

Jackson said that Yankee Stadium's short right field forced him to be a pull hitter, "but in Anaheim Stadium, I plan to be more of a straight-away hitter."

Brian Downing had three RBI, while Bobby Grich homered and drove in two runs for the Angels. Geoff Zahn, Luis Sanchez, Mickey Mahler and Don Aase combined to hold the Mariners to three hits.

In other games, Atlanta became the first team to win 10 spring games as Larry Whisenton knocked in two runs with a homer and a sacrifice fly to help the Braves beat Kansas City 4-0 on another combined three-hitter.

Pittsburgh improved its record to 9-3 as Tom Griffin, Rod Scurry, Kent Tekulve and Randy Niemann pitched still another three-hitter for a 4-0 victory over the New York Mets.

The other New York team also was shut out, with Charlie Lea allowing one hit in five innings and two other pitchers giving up just four more hits as the Montreal Expos blanked the Yankees 2-0.

Oakland scored four runs in the first inning on Tony Armas' three-run homer and a solo shot by Mickey Klutts and went on to beat the Chicago Cubs 8-2.

Lenn Sakata had three hits as Baltimore snapped Texas' four-game winning streak with a 5-2 victory over the Rangers.

Dave Goltz pitched five scoreless innings to run his spring shutout string to eight, and Mike Marshall hit a solo homer as Los Angeles blanked Boston 4-0.

Don McCormack keyed Philadelphia's six-run seventh inning with a bases-loaded triple and the Phillies went on to trounce St. Louis 14-7, snapping their six-game losing streak.

Big East 'Taking Over' NCAAs

By The Associated Press

The NCAA basketball tournament is starting to look like the "Big East Invitational," thanks to Villanova, Boston College and Georgetown.

Following Georgetown's lead the night before, Villanova and Boston College both won their respective regional playoff games Friday night and lent a distinct eastern accent to this year's competition.

Villanova defeated Memphis State 70-66 in a tingling overtime game to earn a place in the East Regional finals in Raleigh, N.C., unday against top-ranked North Carolina, a 74-69 winner over Alabama.

Boston College tripped Kansas State 69-65 in the Midwest Regional in St. Louis and moved into Sunday's regional championship game against Houston, which shocked Missouri 79-78.

Sixth-ranked Georgetown, meanwhile, hoped to uphold the honor of the Big East today in the West title game against No. 4 Oregon State in Provo, Utah. No. 20 Louisville met 17th-ranked Alabama-Birmingham in the Mideast Regional finals at Birmingham, Ala.

John Pinone broke a tie with 26 seconds remaining in overtime by sinking two free throws and Stewart Granger added two more to clinch it 16 seconds later as unranked Villanova upset No. 9 Memphis State, the Metro Conference champion. Pinone, a burly 228-pounder, had forced the extra period with a layup that tied it at 62 with 28 seconds left in regulation.

Pinone led all scorers with 19 points and freshman phenom Keith Lee, Memphis State's second-team All-American, had 14 to lead the Tigers, despite fouling out with just under five minutes remaining in regulation.

"I was pretty confident," Pinone said of his game-clinching shots. "I'm a pretty good free-throw shooter. I just wanted to get the first one. I knew if I got the first one, the second would be a lot easier."

Pinone also was involved in a play on which Lee drew his fifth foul.

"I thought the foul call on Lee was a good one. He was in the air and leaned forward, so it was not my fault," Pinone said.

Lee, however, had a simpler and different view of the call.

"The way he (the referee) called it, I didn't think it was a foul. But the referee was calling the game. I can't call the game and play, too," Lee said.

Michael Adams and John Garris combined for 38 points and helped Boston College erase a five-point halftime deficit as the Eagles beat Kansas State. Adams scored 11 points in the second half and executed a daring steal in the final minute to help the upstart Eagles preserve a two-point lead.

Garris, a 6-foot-8 junior who averaged fewer than eight points during the season, scored 16 in the first half to keep Kansas State from assuming an overwhelming lead. He finished with 18.

The Eagles won despite a sub-par performance by high scorer John Bagley, who finished with only 10 points. Randy Reed and Tyrone Adams each scored 16 for Kansas State.

Both coaches agreed that Boston College's depth was the difference in the game.

"We don't have a first five, we have a first seven," said Tom Davis, Boston College's coach. "Garris played the best game of his career tonight, and it couldn't have come at a better time."

Kansas State built a five-point halftime lead, but Davis said the Eagles made a defensive adjustment at intermission.

"We went back to our normal defense," he said. "We were trying to do a little stunting in the first half, and it messed us up."

Kansas State Coach Jack Hartman said, "They kept fresh players in the game. We got very, very tired. Depth was a big factor."

Lynden Rose led six Houston players in double figures and the Cougars dominated Missouri inside.

Missouri, trailing by as many as 12 points in the second half, staged a last-ditch rally that fell short. With six seconds left, Ricky Frazier hit a follow shot to make it 79-76, then the Tigers intercepted a Cougar pass and Frazier scored the final basket at the buzzer.

Rose paced Houston's balanced offense with 16 points, Michael Young had 15, Clyde Drexler 14, Akeem Adbul Olajuwon 13, Larry Micheaux 11 and Rob Williams 10. Frazier, the Big Eight player of the year, finished with 29 points, 25 after intermission.

Williams Pitches Rose Past Greene Central, 5-3

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

SNOW HILL — Greenville Rose coach Ronald Vincent was looking forward to the first start of the season by senior right-hander Roger Williams Friday. The coach liked what he saw.

Williams pitched a one-hit shutout for five innings before surrendering four hits and two runs in the sixth as he hurled the Rampants past Greene Central, 5-3, in a nonconference baseball game.

"I was really pleased with the way Roger threw the ball today," Vincent said after watching his Rampants up their record to 2-0. "He kind of got tired, but he hasn't practiced that much this week."

Williams, who hurled three innings of relief against North Lenoir in Rose's season-opener on March 11, missed two days of practice this week with the flu, but appeared at full strength Friday — at least in the early going.

Relying on a overpowering fast ball, Williams (1-0) did not allow a hit until the fourth and it was not until the sixth that Greene Central finally scored. Williams struck out six and walked four on the day.

"We knew what we were going up against," Greene Central coach James Fulghum said, referring to Williams. "But there's nothing you can do but try to get the bat on the ball."

The Rams, now 2-2, trailed 5-0 going into the sixth, but used four straight hits — two of which were doubles — to narrow the deficit to 5-2. Williams got Marlow Gilmore to ground out to end the inning and was replaced by Bill Owens in the seventh.

After striking out Dana Harrell and getting Chris Sugg to fly out to first, Owens walked both Chris Ginn and Ritchie Chase. Tommy Goff singled home Ginn to make it, 5-3, but Brown hit into a fielder's choice to end the game.

"I think this game did something for us," Fulghum said. "We battled back after getting down by five and that's hard to do.

"We hit the ball hard there in the sixth," he added. "We've improved the way we're swinging the bats the last three games."

Vincent could not say the same thing about his team. Rose had its problems against Ram starter Ritchie Chase. Chase, who struck out six and walked three in suffering his second loss of the season, used a sharply-breaking curve to keep the Rampants hitless until the fourth.

Rose scored single runs in the fourth and fifth, but not until the sixth, with Chase obviously tiring, was Rose finally able to get to the right-hander whom the Rose junior varsity defeated twice by more than 10 runs last year.

"I'm disappointed in the way we swung the bats," Vincent said. "We swung at a lot of bad pitches. The guy's got a good curve ball and we haven't had a lot of practice time. It's taking some time getting into the groove."

The game began with both coaches and teams peering anxiously at the overcast, rain-threatening sky. Sprinkles fell intermittently throughout the game, but not enough to force the teams back into the dugouts.

Neither team threatened in the first three innings. The Rampants had a runner on second with two out in the first, but Williams struck out to end the inning. The Rams did not get a runner past first until the fourth, but Williams struck out John Mayo with runners on first and second to end the threat.

With two out in the fourth, Williams singled to left. Gordon Douglas followed with a drive into deep centerfield for a triple to score Williams and Rose led, 1-0. Crowell Pope flew out to deep center to end the inning.

The Rampants added another run to their lead in the fifth. Randy Warren beat out a grounder to short for an infield single and then stole second — one of four stolen bases for Rose on the day.

Two walks — to Billy Kittrell and Tom Buie — sandwiched around a strike out by Terry Smith loaded the bases. Mont Carter then hit a sacrifice fly to center to bring Warren home to give Rose a 2-0 lead.

After Williams set the Rams down in order in the bottom of the fifth, Rose broke it open in the sixth. With two gone, Kittrell singled home Douglas, who had reached on a fielder's choice and stolen second.

Kenny Kirkland then came on to pinch hit for Smith, the Rampants #9 hitter. Kirkland promptly stroked a double off the left field fence to score Warren, who walked earlier in the inning, and Kittrell and Rose led, 5-0.

In the bottom of the inning, the Rams scored twice as they began to guage a tiring Williams. With one gone, Chase walked and was replaced by Clifton Joyner.

Joyner went to third on Goff's double and scored on Butch Brown's single up the middle. James Moore then singled home Goff to make it 5-2 and give the Rams runners on first and second.

Mayo then lined a double to the right-centerfield gap, but Brown was out at the plate when Carter, the Rose second baseman, took the relay throw and sent it home to Pope. Marlow Gilmore grounded out the short to end the inning.

The Rams scored their final run in the bottom of the seventh, but it was not enough.

conference tournament, which we did. And we wanted to make it to the Final Four, and we made a real good run at that."

The difference probably was Louisville's fatiguing full-court press and a deep bench.

"Our bench was a big difference, and that's why we're going to the Final Four," said Crum, who got 31 points from his reserves, including a team-high 19 by Jones, compared to only six from the Alabama-Birmingham bench.

"It was fun to play against them." said Jones, a 6-foot-8 sophomore. "They run. We run. It was just a dogfight."

Louisville held an overwhelming edge in field goal percentage, shooting 60.4 percent to 45.1 for the Blazers.

"We were getting the ball to the open man well," Crum said. "Look at the assists. We got 20 and they got nine. A very important part of shooting 60 percent is getting the ball to the open man."

Jones hit two free throws with 2:31 left, giving the Cardinals a 64-60 lead, and after Louisville stole an inbounds pass by Alabama-Birmingham, Gordon was fouled by Norman Anchrum. Gordon sank both foul shots, giving Louisville a six-point lead with 2:28 left.

Jones added five more free throws down the stretch for Louisville, 23-9. Alabama-Birmingham finished the season with a 25-6 record.

Trailing 40-32 at the half, Alabama-Birmingham outscored Louisville 14-4 in the first 7:56 after intermission to pull into a 46-44 lead. Anchrum had six points in that run, and Chris Giles scored four.

But when Giles fouled out eight minutes later, with 4:04 to play, it spelled an end to the Blazers' Final Four hopes. Giles, a 6-foot-8 power forward, had enabled Alabama-Birmingham to stay with the Cardinals under the basket. Without him, the Blazers were forced to foul in order to gain possession of the ball, and Louisville hit 10 straight free throws in a one minute stretch that ended on a pair by Jones with 1:15 left that put the Cardinals up 72-64.

Louisville ran off a 10-2 streak that ended on a 15-foot jumper by Gordon with 4:34 remaining and Louisville leading 62-56.

Luellen Foster got the Blazers back into the game with a pair of baskets inside, cutting Louisville's lead to 62-60 with 3:05 to play.

That's when Jones and Gordon hit their free throws, and that's when Alabama-Birmingham's slipper cracked.

Derek Smith added 16 points for Louisville, despite an injury to his jaw that he sustained early in the second half. Smith lay on the court for nearly two minutes while team doctors administered to him, but he was able to play most of the rest of the game.

Jerry Eaves had 13 points and Gordon wound up with 11 for Louisville. Oliver Robinson topped Alabama-Birmingham with 20, Foster had 13 and Giles added 12 before fouling out.

Waltrip Looking For 'Bunch' Of Wins

HAMPTON, Ga. — Now that Darrell Waltrip had won his first race of the season, the 1981 NACAR Winston Cup champion feels the wins are going to come "in bunches."

"This team just seems to win them in big bunches, so hopefully this is the start of something good," Waltrip said after winning last week's Valleydale 500 at the Briston (Tenn.) International Speedway.

Waltrip's "team" is the Junior Johnson-Mountain Dew crew that won 12 races last year, including four straight late in the season to propel Waltrip to his first Winston Cup championship.

Waltrip will attempt to make it two straight wins today when he takes part in the Coca-Cola 500 at the Atlanta International Raceway.

"The car we're taking to Atlanta ran only two races last fall," Waltrip said. "It won Charlotte and was second at Atlanta. And the car that won Bristol won seven races last year.

"That's why I'm so optimistic about this season," Waltrip added. "We spent a lot of time building new cars last year. Now we have them in the shop and ready to go.

"This year the crew won't have to spend time building new cars. Instead, we can work on other things to help us win races. We are prepared. If we get some luck, we are going to win a lot of races."

Waltrip, who jumped from 20th to 11th in the 1982 Winston Cup point standings with last week's victory at Bristol, admits the first win of the season is important.

"No matter how good you did last year, there are no guarantees that you are going to win any races this season — especially with so many team capable of winning races," Waltrip explained. "That's why this was a pretty big win for us.

"But, what made it even more important is what happened ovber the winter. The boys back home (in Ronda, N.C.) needed a win."

Three key members of the team, crew chief Tim Brewer, head engine builder Harold Elliott and mechanic Eddie Tharp, quit in late December to join the Cale Yarborough-M.C. Anderson team.

Johnson and Waltrip have had to spend the last three months answering how the departure of the trio would affect the team. And when the season began with two straight engine failures, the inquiries increased.

"The boys just needed a win under their belts," Waltrip said. "Junior and I know we have the best team in the business, but there is nothing like a win to boost everyone's morale. Now we're going to get really tough (to beat)."

Waltrip will start in the #14 position Sunday, having qualified with a speed of 161.381. Dale Earnhardt will be on the pole. He qualifed for that position with a speed of 163.774.

Earnhardt On Coca-Cola Pole

HAMPTON, Ga. (UPI) — Not only is he $2,200 richer and the pole sitter for Sunday's Coca-Cola 500 race, Dale Earnhardt feels that his run of bad luck may finally be coming to an end.

Earnhardt, 29, collected the bonus money for running the fastest lap during the Thursday-Friday qualifying for the $350,775 race. His 163.774 mph speed in a Ford put him on the pole alongside Ricky Rudd whose Pontiac was clocked at 164.369 mph.

There are 40 cars in the race, which starts at 1 p.m.

"All of us are excited because we are so close to going for the really big season," said Earnhardt. "At Daytona we had the tough luck of running out of gas and then the engine fouled. We had a shot at winning at Richmond until it rained. We had the race won at Bristol until a car spun out in front of me."

Earnhardt teamed up with veteran car owner and crew chief Bud Moore early this year and they have been on the comeback trail ever since. The Coca-Cola 500 is the first pole position Earnhardt has held in three years.

"A lot of people thought, 'Well, Bud will be hard to work with,'" said Earnhardt. "They thought Bud and I wouldn't be able to work together. But it hasn't turned out that way. We seem to have our signals worked out. I take the car out and come back and we talk about what needs to be done. Then bam, bam, bam, it's done, with no problems whatsoever.

"Bud and I are going to win our share of races."

Earnhardt had nothing but praise for the way his car has been running of late.

"The car has been working well at every race so far this season," he said. "We've just run into a little bad luck here and there."

Defending champion Cale Yarborough will be starting in 15th position when the green flag drops at 1 p.m. Yarborough has won five times at AIR, more than any other driver.

Leaders after Friday's qualifying for the Coca-Cola 500 Sunday over the 1.522-mile, 328-lap Atlanta International Raceway:

1. Dale Earnhardt, Ford, 163.774 mph.

SW Edgecombe Wins 3-A Title

By The Associated Press

Four North Carolina High School Athletic Association basketball titles were decided Friday night, including the girls 3A division where SouthWest Edgecombe retained its title by posting its 62nd consecutive victory.

SouthWest got 30 points from Associated Press All-Stater Bridget Jenkins to post a 72-69 victory over Shelby Crest.

Another All-Stater, Vernon Odom, fired in 22 points and grabbed 10 rebounds to lead Bandys to a 64-61 victory over Sampson Union in the Boys 2A tournament.

Belhaven-Wilkinson knocked off Tryon 52-40 for the boys' 1A crown and Goldsboro knocked off Greensboro Page 52-42 for the girls' 4A trophy.

Four more championships are on the line Saturday night.

At Elon College, Belhaven-Wilkinson and Hiwassee Dam play for the girls' 1A title at 7 p.m. followed at 8:30 by the 2A tilt between Union and Bandys.

Boys play continues at the Greensboro Coliseum with Warren County and Swannanoa Owen fighting for the 3A title at 7 p.m. and Rocky Mount and Chapel Hill squaring off in the 4A matchup at 8:30.

Jenkins got scoring support from Delphine Mabry with 18 points and Janice Draughn with 15 as the Cougars won their 62nd consecutive game and finished the season with a 30-0 mark.

Crest, aided by two SouthWest turnovers, cut the lead to 70-69 with 17 seconds left, but then made a turnover. Jenkins was fouled with nine seconds left and sank both free throws.

Crest, which closed at 24-6, was led in scoring by Beverly Gilgore with 26 points and Pauline Finney with 24.

Odom, the tournament MVP, teamed with Benny Harris and Phil Brown to pace as Bandys rallied in the final period to close its season at 30-1.

Willard Hall, who led 19-8 Union with 23 points, sparked a surge which gave his club a 47-42 third-quarter lead, but Odom's 20-footer with three minutes remaining put Bandys ahead 61-59 and it never trailed again.

Mike Connor finished with 16 points and 11 rebounds, while Brown added 14 points and Harris 10 for Bandys. Bobby Smith and Jerry Corbett scored 10 each for Union.

Irvin Harris' 18 points led Belhaven Wilkinson to victory. Belhaven Wilkinson, 28-3, consolidated this year with Pantego, the team which had won 55 straight games and the last two 1A titles.

D.H. Conley Slips Past Farmville

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley overcame six errors and scored four runs in the fifth inning as the Vikings defeated Farmville Central, 6-5, Friday afternoon in a nonconference baseball game.

Farmville Central, now 1-2, trailed, 6-3, going into the top of the seventh, but the Jaguars scored twice in the inning to cut the gap to one before Doug McRoy, DHC's third pitcher of the day, came on to get Eddie Jones to pop out and end the game.

The Jaguars led, 1-0, after the first inning but Conley tied it up with a run in the third.

Farmville went back on top at 3-1 in the fourth when Nat Norris singled home Eddie Jones, who singled to open the inning, and Wade Corbett reached on a fielder's choice to score Randy Daniels, who had walked earlier.

The Vikings took their first lead of the game one inning later. Jeff Manning walked to open the fith and scored on McRoy's double. McRoy went to third on a passed ball and Jeff Cox walked and stole second.

McRoy scored on Jimmy Kaler's squeeze bunt to tie the game and Cox came home when Taylor Walston's throw to first went into rightfield. Todd Rouse then singled and Greg Toler laid down a bunt that was misplayed to load the bases again.

Dixon Page ground out to score Kaler and DHC led, 5-3.

The Vikings added what proved to be the winning run one innning later when McRoy walked, went to second on a passed ball and scored on Chris Buck's single.

Farmville loaded the bases in both the fifth and sixth innings but failed to score in either. In the fifth, Todd Rouse, on in relief, struck out two of the final three batters and got the third to fly out. In the sixth, Rouse struck out the final two batters.

Rouse struck out five in $2^{2}/_{3}$ innings of work as he captured his first decision of the year.

Farmville did managed to get to Rouse in the seventh, however. Walks to Barber, Norris and Corbett loaded the bases with one gone. Barber scored on Bobby Carraway's sacrifice fly. Norris scored moments later when Manning, DHC's third baseman, failed to handle a grounder by Joey Steppe.

Billy Godley then walked to load the bases and McRoy came on. McRoy threw Jones just one pitch and the Farmville batter popped it up to second where Rouse squeezed it for the final out.

Steppe led the Jaguars in hitting with two hits in five at bats, one of which was a double.

Wesley Smith was two for two for DHC while Rouse was two for three.

D.H. Conley plays host to Ayden-Grifton Tuesday, while Farmville plays host to Wilson Hunt.

ECU Golfers Move To 20th

GREENVILLE, S.C. — East Carolina's golfers improved from 22nd to 20th place in the 24-team Furman Invitational Golf Tournament Friday as the second round of the 54-hole event was completed.

Tennessee continued to hold the team lead with a 569 total, well ahead of second place Wake Forest, 582, and third place N.C. State at 583.

Alabama's Steve Lowery, in second place after the first round, moved into the second round lead with a 137 total, a stroke ahead of Tennessee's Jim Gallaher, at 138. Dillard Pruitt of Clemson is third at 139.

East Carolina had a two-day total of 612 to advance two spots in the standings. The Pirates were led by Chris Czaja at 147, while Don Gafner and Don Sweeting were tied at 153. David Waggoner was at 159, while Dan Lawruk rounded out the team with a 165.

The tournament was to wind up on Saturday.

The National Hunters Association — recently donated $500 to help support the fourth annual Hunter-Safety Shooting Tournament which will be held at the Kinston Police Range in Kinston on Saturday, April 24. Sponsored by the North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission, the tournament stresses shooting safety. Last year, the tournament was attended by over 60 schools with about 400 students participating. Each school sends a team to the event, and participants must be graduates of a hunter-safety program.

"We're very pleased with this donation," said John Daigle of Kinston, chairman of the tournament. "The tournament is a non-profit event, and we appreciate all donations."

Students at the tournament participate in three events — trap shooting, rifle shooting, and archery. Winning teams and individuals are recognized in overall competition and in individual events.

Pre-registration forms for the tournament must be received by April 2. For more information, contact Wilton Pate, 802 Pinewood Drive, Ayden, N.C. 28513.

Expensive Turkey — the following is an account of a court case against a wild turkey poacher in western North Carolina. A good example of how poaching wild game in North Carolina does not play.

At $112 per pound it does not play to poach wild turkeys in North Carolina.

This fall a wild turkey was illegially killed by a deer hunter on private property in western North Carolina. The kill was reported and charges were lodged against the poacher.

This bird was once common across our state, but in recent times its numbers have dwindled to dangerously low levels. Modern wildlife management practices have reversed this trend, and now North Carolina has a small, expanding population. With protection, citizens can expect to be treated to the sight of wild turkeys in our woodlands.

The poacher had his day in court with interesting results. First, there was the $250 minimum fine for illegal possession of a wild turkey. Then, there was the $400 replacement cost to the North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission. The rifle used in the incident was confiscated. Its value was estimated at $350. A $50 fine for trespassing was levied and cost of court added another $62. All totaled, the illegal wild turkey cost the poacher $1,112.

On top of this, the judge ruled that the poacher's hunting priviledges be suspended for two years.

Fishing Report — the warm weather of the last several weeks is sure to signal an early spring fishing season this year. The annual herring and shad run in our coastal streams is in full swing. Raccoon perch and white perch are biting in the tributaries of the Pamlico River. With the ocean temperature warming, it will not be long before the red drum, bluefish and flounder fishing will begin on the coast.

Public Hearings — have been set on either-sex deer seasons for the end of March. This public input into the setting of seasons is valuable to the Wildlife Commission. All hearings begin at 7:30 p.m. and the schedule is as follows:

•Edenton at the old courthouse on Monday, March 29.
•Nashville Courthouse on Monday, March 29.
•Wilkesboro Courthouse on Monday, March 29.
•Canton Municipal Building on Monday, March 29.
•New Bern Courthouse on Tuesday, March 30.
•Troy Courthouse on Tuesday, March 30.
•Morganton Courthouse on Tuesday, March 30.
•Elizabethtown Courthouse on Wednesday, March 31.
•Graham Courthouse on Wednesday, March 31.

Purdue Rolls Into NIT Final Four

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Purdue's basketball team was struggling "for survival ... fighting for our lives," says Coach Gene Keady, whose Boilermakers' two-month turnaround has carried it to the Final Four of the National Invitation Tournament for the third time in four years.

"This was our best game of the year," Keady said of Friday night's 86-68 victory over Texas A&M in the NIT quarterfinals.

Purdue lost seven of its first 10 games and finished the regular season at 14-13, the worst record among the original 3 NIT participants. Playing their first three NIT games in their home Mackey Arena, the Boilermakers turned back Western Kentucky 72-65, Rutgers 98-65 and then Texas A&M.

Purdue meets Georgia and Bradley takes on Oklahoma in the NIT semifinals Monday night at New York's Madison Square Garden. The latter three qualfied with victories Thursday night. The winners play Wednesday night for the championship.

"We had such a tough schedule early in the season," Keady said. "We had a couple close games. Louisville beat us on a last-second freak shot, and Houston beat us by one point in the Sugar Bowl. We never could get any games where we gained some confidence, and we started to be self-doubters.

"Then we started winning and gaining some confidence, and we got stronger and stronger and everybody started playing great. So we belong (in the Final Four), there's no doubt."

The Boilermakers won the NIT in 1974, finished second in 1979 and third last year. They also finished third in the NCAA tournament in 1980, making them the only school in the country to reach the Final Four of either one of the two major post-season tournaments each of the past four years.

Friday night's victory was keyed by 6-foot-10 center Russell Cross, who scored 26 points and had a season-high 13 rebounds, and 6-5 guard Keith Edmonson, who added 22 points. Edmonson is averaging nearly 27 points in NIT play this year.

"Our No.1 key was to go inside to Russell," Keady said. "I wanted him to have 45 points if he could. We wanted to go inside and get (Aggies 6-11 center Rudy) Woods in foul trouble, and it worked. We got him in foul trouble, and they got to standing around and got tentative on defense."

Woods, who fouled out early in the second half, did not score a point. Texas A&M, a third-round loser in its only other NIT appearance, 1979, was led by forward Claude Riley with 22 points.

The Boilermakers built a 16-point lead in the first half, saw the margin cut to 42-34 at halftime and widened the gap steadily to as many as 22 points in the final period.

"They're a good ball club," Texas A&M Coach Shelby Metcalf said of Purdue. "It was a good experience for us. They played their game. We just didn't get off to a good start."

AAA Champions

What's The Law On . . .

What's the law on...when are inland hook-and-line fishing licenses required?

"No person may fish by means of hook and line in inland fishing waters without having first procured a current and valid hook-and-line fishing license" GS 113-271 (a).

Exception: "a resident individual fishing with hook and line in the county of his residence using natural bait is exempt from the hook-and-line fishing license requirements of GS 113-271. 'Natural bait' is bait which may be beneficially digested by fish" GS 113-276 (e).

A person over 16 years old, using hook and line, fishing in waters classified as inland or joint is required a license regardless of tackle typel or bait when fishing in a county other than the county he is currently living in. Any artificial lure use requires a license in inland or joint fishing waters regardless of residence.

Any combination of artificial lure and natural bait used on the same line requires a license. Natural bait includes earthworms, night crawlers, minnows, crickets, grasshoppers, insect larva, doughballs, cut up fish, shrimp, grubs, crayfish, pike fins, liver, or any natural digestable bait.

When using one of these such baits, without any other artificial attracter whatsoever on the line, and while fishing within the county he is currently living in, a person is not required a license.

(Sections of law cited above are in part and not codified and should not be used as a legal defense.)

8th-Inning Triple Gives Williamston Win

Tigers Nip Vikes, 6-5

WILLIAMSTON — Keith Perry tripled in the bottom of the eighth inning with none out to score Gray Thomas and lift Williamston to a 6-5 win over Plymouth Friday afternoon in a Northeastern Conference baseball game.

Williamston, now 2-1, trailed, 5-4, going into the bottom of the seventh, but Roger Barber stroked a two-out double to score Reggie Horne and send the game into extra innings.

After Plymouth failed to score in the top of the eighth, Thomas opened the bottom half of the inning with a single. Perry followed with a triple to score Thomas and give the Tigers the win.

The game was tied at the end of the first, 1-1. Plymouth scored two runs in the third to go up, 3-1, but the Tigers came back to tie it up in the fourth. Sterling Mizelle reached on an error and stole second and Keith Bryant then walked.

Mizelle subsequently scored on Barber's fielder's choice in which no one was out. James Ward then hit into a fielder's choice to score Bryant and tie the game at 3-3.

Williamston took the lead in the fifth with a run, but Plymouth used a double by Travis Brown to score two runs and take a 5-4 lead in the top of the sixth inning.

Williamston later tied it up in the seventh before winning it in the eighth on Perry's triple.

Horne led Williamston in hitting with two singles in four at bats. Barber had a double. David Mizelle was three for three for Plymouth with a double and one RBI. Brown had a double and two RBIs.

Horne struck out three and walked three in going the distance to pick up his first decision of the season.

Williamston plays host to Edenton Tuesday.

Redskins Blank Pam Pack, 6-0

ROBERSONVILLE — Roanoke High School got three hit pitching from Joey Early and used a six-run sixth inning to take a 6-0 win over Washington High School Friday afternoon.

Early, who went the distance, struck out five and walked four along the way, as he scattered the three hits — two of them to Landen of the Pam Pack.

The contest was a scoreless battle until the sixth, when the Redskins finally broke it open. Dalton Everett led off the inning with a double and Terry Griffin reached on an error, allowing Everett to score. Bernie Williford singled and with two away, Early helped his cause with a run-scoring single. Joey Ross singled in two more runs, and scored on Greg Casper's double. Doug Baker reached on an error, scoring Casper with the sixth run.

Ross and Everett each collected two hits to pace the Redskins at the plate.

The win left Roanoke with a 2-0 overall and 1-0 Northeastern Conference record.

The Redskins return to action on Monday, hosting Roanoke Rapids in league game.

Chargers Roll By West Craven, 15-0

VANCEBORO — Doug Coley hurled a three-hitter and Ayden-Grifton struck for 10 runs in the third inning as the Chargers routed West Craven, 15-0, Friday afternoon in a nonconference baseball game.

Coley did not allow a hit until the fourth inning, when the Eagles got all three of their hits but failed to score. By then, the Chargers led, 13-0, and were on their way to their third win in five outings.

The game was called after five innings.

A-G jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the first inning. Chris Strickland led off with a single and scored on Bernard Ricciarelli's double. Ricciarelli scored on Terry Locust's triple.

The lead went to 3-0 in the second. Roger Moye walked and was replaced by Kelvin Harris. Harris promptly stole second and third before scoring on a passed ball.

The Chargers then decided the contest in the third. Keying the 10-run inning were Strickland and Ricciarelli, both of whom had doubles to drive home two runs.

Ricciarelli and Locust were both three for three for A-G. Riccarelli had two doubles and Locust had a double and a triple. Ricciarelli also drove in three runs.

Coley and Strickland were both two of four and both had doubles. Coley also had three RBIs.

The Chargers travel to D.H. Conley Tuesday.

Corn, Wheat Prices Wipe Out Losses

By PAULIE JELINEK
AP Business Writer

Corn and wheat futures prices rallied at midday Friday, erasing losses early in the session and extending the week's upward trend.

Soybeans turned lower in all but two contracts for nearby delivery.

Analysts said there was strong buying of grains among local traders who didn't want to hold short market positions, or commitments to buy grains contacts they earlier borrowed in the hope prices would fall.

Prices had fallen early in the day as traders focused on slumping gold and bond prices. Commercial firms also did some hedge selling early after farmers increased selling to country elevators and merchandisers lowered their bids in the cash market.

Wheat led in the advances, settling as much as 5 cents a bushel higher on the Chicago Board of Trade despite mixed views on whether crop yields would be cut by rain and flooding in Midwest winter wheat growing areas.

Prices fell last week, some to new contract lows, and then staged a recovery this week along with prices in some other financial markets. But there has been little fresh supply and demand news to change the outlook for grains, which have slumped all year because of a record harvest and recession weakened demand.

Corn for delivery in March rose 1¼ cents to $2.62 a bushel.

Gold and silver prices turned lower amid unconfirmed rumors that several banks in Denmark, Switzerland and the Mideast were having financial problems because of losses incurred in recent currency transactions. They were said to be selling large amounts of gold to raise money to cover those losses.

As the U.S. dollar gained against most foreign currencies, substantial selling also was reported among bullion dealers in the cash market and price chart watchers who had bought futures during rallies earlier this week, said Len Alpert, trader with Merrill Lynch Commodities in Greenwich, Conn.

On the Commodity Exchange in New York, March gold fell $7.40 to $316.60 a troy ounce, silver fell 13.7 cents to $7.028 an ounce; and copper fell 1 cent to 67.90 cents a pound.

Heating oil futures prices fell in light volume as OPEC ministers held an emergency session in Vienna, Austria.

After the close of the market, it was announced that OPEC leaders had agreed to hold production at 18 million barrels a day in order to keep the benchmark prices at $34 a barrel.

Tom McKiernan, a petroleum broker with Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. in New York, said the news was not likely to hold up prices.

EARNINGS ROSE

JCPenney announced that earnings for fiscal 1981 rose 44.1 percent to a record $387 million from $268 million in 1980.

For the fourth quarter which ended Jan. 30, income from continuing operations also set a record, increasing 14.6 percent to $207 million from $180 million in the prior year. The results marked the fifth consecutive quarter of record earnings.

HOLDING COMPANY

James B. Powers, chairman and president of Planters National Bank, announced that PNB has been authorized by its board of directors to establish a bank holding company.

Powers said the corporate reorganization is subject to shareholder and regulatory approval and is expected to take up to six months to complete. He added that no major changes in the organization, operations or personnel of the bank are anticipated.

Weekly

OPEC To Cut Oil Production

VIENNA, Austria (UPI) — OPEC oil ministers announced agreement Saturday to cut production and lower some prices slightly in an effort to end the over supply of oil on world markets.

The agreement, which was not expected to have a measurable impact on gas prices in the United States, emerged from two days of talks marked by disagreements, contradictory statements and hard bargaining.

The net effects of the complicated agreement were that OPEC production should drop by about 700,000 barrels of oil per day next month and that an intricate system of differentials charged by some OPEC members would be reduced by as much as 50 percent, effective immediately.

The actions were taken in an effort to bolster OPEC's current official benchmark price of $34 per barrel, which the ministers said would remain unchanged.

Under the differential system, however, members were allowed to charge as much as $3 per barrel more for their oil depending on its quality, proximity to markets and other factors.

An announcement said the differentials were being cut back to 1978 levels, or roughly by half. Since the countries that charge differentials — Nigeria and Libya among them — do negligible business with the United States, the cuts were not expected to have an impact on the U.S. market.

Congregated For Candlewicking

A RUNNING VINE ... with flowers design was used by Shirley Hardee on a matching pair of tiwn-size coverlets.

"Buddy's Diner" at Hamm's Crossroads was their weekly meeting place for 10 weeks. Every Monday morning at 10'clock the women started congregating for candlewicking.

Candlewicking is a form of embroidery which involves outlining a design with either knots or tufts. The earliest form of candlewicking was a woven form in which the knots of the design were formed during the process of weaving.

"A warm hearth, good food, friendship and a sharing of creative excitement — these were the ingredients which Colonial women wove, stitched and quilted into their coverlets when our country was new and life was fresh and simple but very challenging. At community gatherings women shared their patterns, stitchery knowledge, creative expertise and the intricacies of their perfectly formed stitches. They produced heirlooms which women of today are sometimes fortunate enough to find in their collections.

"The ladies of Hamm's Crossroads have found this same excitement in the candlewicking class offered by Pitt Community College. The class began at Calico Square on Evans Street but increased in size and was then moved to the activity building behind the home of Dicie and Buddy Mills," said Louise Downing. She is supervisor of workshops and seminars at the community college and also teaches classes in needlework.

"Colonial women later used the knot stitch to embroider the designs on bedcovers and canopies. The knots were worked in heavy thread on hand-woven cloth — both in natural color. The knotting technique gave way to an easier form of candlewicking worked by stitching small running stitches, then clipping them to form tufts. Sometimes the running stitches were raised by stitching each stitch over a twig or reed," Mrs. Downing added.

Designs for both forms of candlewicking were usually grapes, flowers or geometric forms. Stems were worked by laying 'wicking' cord and couching with thread. A satin stitch was sometimes used also to fill in areas not filled with the knots or tufts.

"The tufting form of candlewicking gradually led to the machine made chenille spreads which were so abundant that hand-tufted candewicking lost its popularity. The most sought after spreads today are the ones worked in the knotting technique. The ladies in the mountain area of North Carolina and Virginia work beautiful designs on unbleached muslin or homespun with tobacco twine or other soft cotton thread," said Mrs. Downing.

Using the candlewicking techniques, the women at Hamm's Crossroads have designed and stitched pillows, bedspreads and pictures.

"I was really not interested in any of this until after my mother died. I first attended a class in needlepoint in the fall of 1977 near Ayden and then learned crewel embroidery and cross stitch on my own. Three years ago I saw candlewicking being done at Moses Cone Craft Center near Blowing Rock and I have wanted to learn since then. We first made pillows with everybody doing the same design. Once we learned the stitches we could work in class and at home. Ten of the group are now working on bedspreads," said Ruth Stokes.

Mrs. Stokes designed an original dogwood pattern in 1980 for a class in exposed canvas pulled thread. "I knew I wanted that design in the center of my breadspread," she said. The border of the queen-size spread is in a smaller dogwood design. Prior to beginning work, Mrs. Stokes spent "three good days' hard work" getting the dogwoods traced onto a pattern, using tracing paper.

"Once this was done we taped the pattern on large tables with material placed on top and taped it. Using blue tracing pencils, the pattern was traced on. Everybody helps each other in getting the patterns traced on the paper and material. We have really had a good time in class. The fellowship is just great and everybody is willing to give of their time to help another.

"Candlewicking is unusual — it's pretty — it's something I can do myself and it gives me a lot of satisfaction knowing I can do it," she added.

Shirley Hardee said, "Candlewicking is the most fun. While working on it, you can talk to your husband and watch TV — you don't have to count anything. The fellowship here has been great. We talk and visit and share recipes."

Mrs. Hardee is working on her second coverlet designed with a running vine with flowers. She first completed the stem stitch around the coverlet and then padded the centers of the flowers using three layers of thread. "I enjoy doing this because I love pretty things and someday it will be an heirloom. My mother does pretty needlework and I think I was influenced by her in enjoying various types of meedlework," said Mrs. Hardee.

"Once you do candlewicking, you appreciate it," said Gladys Hardee.

The Wells Family Farm– 320 Years And Growing

By MARLENE AIG
Associated Pres Writer

AQUEBOGUE, N.Y. (AP) — When the Wells family began working this land on the fertile eastern end of Long Island, raising cows and chickens, Nieuw Amsterdam was a small Dutch settlement a 70-mile buggy ride to the west.

Today, the Wells family still works the land, still raises cows and grows potatoes and other produce and livestock. But Nieuw Amsterdam is now New York City, and the trip seems shorter — if less serene — on the busy Long Island Expressway.

But while cars and pickups rumble the roads once frequented by horses and buggies and mechanical equipment roars from barns once filled with the echoes of animals, the Wells farm remains a constant in this East End community.

On a blustery winter day Dan Wells, 26, goes about his chores much as the generations that preceded him.

"Sure, there's a tradition. But that not why I went into farming," says Dan. "I've been doing it since I was 13. There's no money in it, sometimes, but it gives you a good life.

"Even in a bad year, you can always eat well," he adds, and he and his father, Vernon, 52, laugh, because both are broad, healthy-looking men.

Dan and his two brothers, Craig, 22, and Todd, 20, were brought up working on what was recently cited by the New York Agricultural Society as the oldest farm run by the same family in the state.

"I've always loved farming," says Vernon Jr., whose hands are raw from winter work. "My father never discouraged me and I'm the 10th generation working this land ... I'm proud it's been in the family this long."

The land entered the family in 1661 though William Wells, an Englishman, who had arrived in the community in the 1640s when it was still part of Connecticut.

"He was the lawyer for the settlers when they were negotiating with New Haven," says Vernon Jr. "Being a lawyer, he got a good healthy section." The original parcel stretched 155 rods — about half a mile — from Long Island Sound to Peconic Bay.

Historically, the area has been placid. A British garrison kept the peace during the American Revolution, and when independence arrived, life continued much as it always had.

As for the Wells family, the men who could sought their fortune in law or business, taking advantage of the proximity of New York City.

But despite divisions and departures, much of the family stayed on and there has always been someone named Wells working the land here.

Today, Vernon Jr., and his three sons work 700 acres of that original farm, raising potatoes, pigs, sheep, cattle, cabbage, eggs and grains, and growing fruit for themselves in a part of New York better known as a bedroom community for the city or as a summer playground for the very rich.

Statistics show Suffolk County is the state's leading agricultural county, with an annual income of $80 million. Most of the farming, which employs 10,000 people, is done on the part of the island away from the sunny, exclusive Southampton mansions, in places like Aquebogue.

"People don't believe we farm this close to the city. They say, 'You grow anything out there?'" says Vernon Jr.

But farming is booming in Suffolk, with horse breeding and vineyards becoming popular, according to Ron Leuthardt of the Long Island Farm Bureau. Farming never left Suffolk, because, he says, "there isn't anything else on the East End except tourism."

When Vernon Jr.'s father was alive, three generations of Wells worked the land together. Vernon Sr. died last October. His widow, Ella, still lives in the house where her husband grew up.

"Everything used to be done by hand and horses," she says. "They used to mix the fertilizer by hand and get up before dawn to get the fires started."

Farms were smaller because "there wasn't any

At Wit's End

This column could he the most important document you've read since the small print of your credit union loan. foods. It's true. They discovered that when people carrying extra pounds looked at food, smelled it, or even listened to it sizzle, their bodies released increased levels of insulin which accelerated their conversion of sugar into fat.

And all these years, I believed my cadaver friends who waved a piece of cake under my nose and coaxed, "It won't hurt you just to smell it!"

Have you any idea how many times I've listened to cereal snap, crackle and pop and thought it was just another waltz? Or the TV commercials I've watched in ignorance while I outgrew my chair?

And when I think of the times I've sat in a theatre next to three boxes of buttered popcorn, I could kill them for costing me two beauty queen titles.

But the most revealing thing about this survey is that we don't have to inhale food to suffer its consequences, and where have we heard that before?

I'm taking my anti-eating crusade to the airlines. Why should I have to sit next to a person who stuffs calories into every opening in his face and gain weight for what he eats?

I don't want to stand in a crowded elevator any more next to a man with banana breath or wait in a doctor's office with a woman pigging out on candy bars.

I'm going to put a sign on the office doughnut pusher's desk saying, "Thank you for not eating." And I'll target restaurants and convince them they should have two eating sections: the serious side where they cook at your table and wheel a dessert cart around for you to see, and a godforsaken place where diners may pick at their lettuce alone.

As for grocery shopping, it's what I've suspected for years. They should have a sign over the door that reads, "CAUTION: This store causees fatness. Shop at your own risks."

Just writing this column has probably put a pound or two on mee, but it's not the first time I've had to eat my own words.

To keep sausages from curling in the frying pan, link them together with toothpicks.

place to store things ... Nowadays, they have all the modern equipment, but everything is so expensive."

Despite Suffolk County's commitment to farmland preservation, the Wells farm is zoned industrial because the town of Riverhead is seeking a larger tax base. "They want more industry," says Craig. "But it makes it more expensive to buy new land — interest rates so high — and put up new buildings."

And the family needs new buildings because the old ones were built for horses and aren't adaptable to storage, trucks and equipment.

Craig, like Dan, owns his own land and lives nearby, but spends a lot of time in his parents' kitchen, deciding whose potatoes to "scoop" to fill a distributor's request.

Todd is the only son still unmarried and living at home with Vernon and his wife, Patricia. They have a married daughter in Pennsylvania, a daughter studying finance in West Virginia and a 12-year-old daughter.

Ella, 80, views the goings-on at the farms through the dining room window and says she's glad that her son's sons are in farming.

She notes that her daughter's children, living in Michigan, both have master's degrees and both are having trouble finding jobs.

Breakup Aftermath: Auction

By DAN HORTSCH
The Oregonian

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — When the partners in a marriage come to a parting of the ways, they often end up parting with an accumulation of goods acquired over the years.

For most people, that means dividing up or selling the house and car, and perhaps a handful of odds and ends.

For at least one Portland-area couple, however, it meant auctioning off an estimated 15,000 to 20,000 items.

Those figures include a jumble of tarnished silverplate dinnerware going at 35 cents each, half-full cans of paint and sacks of nails, but they also take in gold coins, diamonds, antique desks and vases from far-off lands.

Not to mention the stuffed birds that "you won't see just anywhere."

Rich Reese, a Portlander who was in charge of the sale in northwest Portland that included the lineup of items from forks to stuffed birds, said he was acting for the divorced couple, who didn't want to be named.

He described them as in their late 30s and as "collectors and buyers with a tremendous collection of rugs, vases, crystal, silver," and a lot more.

They had so much to deal with, he said, that "they decided it was best to sell it all."

"All" isn't quite the word, either, since each was left with a number of items not put on the block, but it still amounted o a lot.

The sale, in a house borrowed for the event, drew throngs of people who crowded into the small rooms, listening to auctioneers Bill Woolridge and Cecil Kelley. Dozens more stood outside, waiting to be admitted.

For $35 they could buy a small stuffed turtle modified into an ashtray — offensive to the ecology-minded. That $35 could also pick up a small Chinese gong.

Both the turtle and the gong were perched on top of a carved mahogany desk, circa 1850. It went for $1,200. An oak roll-top desk was carted off for $3,000.

While some listened to Woolridge trying to get top dollar for a Chinese silver hand mirror, others wandered into the basement where, a newspaper ad had said, they would find an accumulation of generations.

Included in the accumulation were a couple of battered video games and short stacks of old Playboy and Penthouse magazines, all not far from a table full of children's toys.

Reese said friends and relatives of the couple had brought in some of their things for the sale, and apparently nothing was left out.

Engagement Announced

DONNA LUCILLE BRILEY...is the daughter of Mrs. Gerald Brien Briley of Ayden, who announces her engagement to Thomas Earl Hodges, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Matthew Hodges of Washington. The bride-elect is also the daughter of the late Mr. Briley. A May 22 wedding is planned.

Birthday Celebrated

RALEIGH — John D. Murphy, a former resident of Greenville, celebrated his 90th birthday at a reception here Saturday at St. Mark's Methodist Church.

Lucille Briley and the Rev. and Mrs. Tom Collins greeted guests. Guests sang "Happy Birthday" and "Let Us Call You Sweetheart."

Murphy's family was introduced and the Rev. Collins, his minister quoted a poem "Grow Old With Me" and gave an invocation.

Happy Teague sang several of Murphy's favorite hymns and was accompanied by Betty Moye at the piano.

Special guests were Mr. and Mrs. Jack Darden, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Parker, all of Farmville, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Batista of Jamestown, and Mrs. Helen Brown, Mrs. Annie Ernest and Mr. and Mrs. Layton Clark, all of Greenville.

For best baking results, hot air in the oven must circulate freely; stagger pans on oven shelves when baking several dishes at the same time.

Book News

By JULIE HICKS

With the winter thaw and the onset of spring comes the desire to commune with nature. There are some new books available now at the library which can help prepare you to enjoy the great outdoors.

Participation in many sports and hobbies depends on the weather. What do you do when you're on a mountain hike and a lightning storm strikes? "Weather For Outdoorsmen" by Walter Dabberdt explains how to act quickly to protect yourself and how you might have avoided getting caught in this life-threathening situation.

Do you know how to deal with rough weather on the water? The author tells how to judge windspeed and wave height and what precautions to take during storms on lakes and at sea. Fully illustrated with more than eighty easy-to-understand tables and charts, "Weather For Outdoorsmen" provides both a comprehensive introduction to the science of weather and is a practical handbook to the specifics of weather in various areas. While this book contains essential information for any adventurer, it is facinating reading for the armchair meteorologist as well.

The newly revised edition of "America's Backpacking Book" by Raymond Bridge is a thorough and intelligent coverage of the basis of backpacking. The author gives expert advice on all aspects of outdoor travel: preparing for a trip, hiking, camping and eating on the trail; selecting equipment and making your own; using map and compass; first aid and survival techniques; backpacking on mountains and in deserts; snow camping; and backpacking with children. Also listed are the better trails and wilderness areas in North America and reliable suppliers for backpacking needs.

Newcomers and seasoned backpackers alike will find "America's Backpacking Book" an invaluable sourcebook.

Moulton Farnham's revised edition of "Sailing For Beginners" is a classic guide for novice and the experienced sailor. All the fundamentals of boating are outlined in detail and illustrated with over 200 photographs and drawings. Farnham covers the rudiments of smallboat seamanship: the components of the boat itself, common nautical terms, gauging wind conditions, coping with hazardous situations and navigating tactics. "Sailing For Beginners" is an indispensable handbook for sailing enthusiasts.

Stories Perfect In Structure

Progress of Stories. By Laura Riding Jackson. New York. Dell Press. 1982. 416 pages, $15.95.

Ms. Laura Riding Jackson's stories are perfect in structure, beautiful of face, fluid in rhythm. They are also unnerving, unsettling, unfamiliar. Most people will hate them.

The qualities that make Laura Riding Jackson's fiction outstanding, both in content and style, are the very qualities that will keep "Progress of Stories" from becoming popular fiction. First of all, Ms. Jackson' s stories have no neat endings to clear up all the details and give things a point. As a matter of fact, the stories have no endings at all — they just stop. They have no heroes and heroines who wander about experiencing conflict and resolution of conflict from time to time. The stories often have no main characters. Finally, they have no plots — at least not the beginning-middle-end kind.

Unlike other writers, Ms. Jackson does not even pretend to create "stern order" from chaos. She knows better. Instead, her stories smile at us squinty-eyed while beneath the table they shred stern order with their toenails. And she good-naturedly rummages through the shavings, collecting what's worth collecting and building something flawless.

The something she builds is hard to describe.

If you want a literary genre to classify this book by, try "Fantasy" — but try it very gently. "Progress of Stories" feels like fantasy; Ms. Jackson writes fantastically (read this literally). She creates her own order, her own rules, her own rhythm, and she creates them consistently and believably. But her subject is truth and not make-believe — even though her stories are make-believe and not true.

This is not a collection of stories, but a story progression. The first step of the progression, "Stories of Lives," are stories of circumstance. She tells these stories the same way a keeper of an ant farm might map the course of ants — from here to there and back again; intended mission unknown, destination obvious.

The second step of the progression, "Stories of Ideas," builds on the first. These stories are not quite mappings of circumstance, and they're not quite almost-true. These are stories of idea. The stories have ideas; their characters have ideas. They're trying, but they're still far from the truth. "Stories of Ideas" also contain Ms. Jackson's humor at its most wicked.

The stories in the third group, "Almost-True Stories," are what most people call fairy tales — but they are fairy tales for adults. The characters aren't quite as certain, the mission not quite as clear, the point not so obvious.

This is where "fantasy" takes over. This is where her ability to create entire realities kicks into gear, where you feel her rhythm and description. These stories are like a layer of pipesmoke in an undisturbed room — clearly defined from a distance, but hazy if you stand in its center; untouchable, but holding together perfectly.

And through it all darts Ms. Jackson, trailing charcoal-grey humor and popping in and out like a demented hostess — checking to make sure you understand, teasing you, sneaking up behind you and pinching you, but never letting you forget to take her seriously.

The original "Progress of Stories" (the title stories in this volume) was published in 1935. This Dial Press edition includes not only the original work, but an additional 12 of Ms. Jackson's stories from a slightly earlier time period, one later story, author's commentary and a second preface.

I found the second preface and commentary superfluous. The work does not need explanation.

The 12 earlier stories and vignettes are taken from "Anarchism Is Not Enough" (1928) and "Experts Are Puzzled" (1930). Although not a physical part of the "progression," these stories and vignettes are technically as well-written as the original "Progress" pieces, but often lack "Progress's" humor and humanity.

The added pieces seem pale beside the title pieces. They seem to be added to the volume almost as an afterthought, and they deserve better.

Whether you're talking about the title pieces or the added stories, there is nothing ordinary or comforting about Laura Riding Jackson's work. She does not rely on familiar writers' hooks: her work is uncluttered by historical fact, political intrigue, sexual escapade. Her stories are totally free-standing and self-sufficient. And her stories are not for everyone.

Unless you have a willing suspension of disbelief, the ability to "wait just a little while," and absolutely no fond regard for "stern order," you are going to be very uncomfortable with this book.

"I am well aware that we form, all together, one monster," she writes. "But I refuse to giggle and I refuse to be frightened and I refuse to be fierce. Nor will I feed or be fed on. I will simply think of other things. I will go now. Let them stare. I am well though eccentrically dressed."

And so are her stories.

Renovated McGinnis To Open With 'Show Boat'

FATHER AND DAUGHTER ... Richard St. George, a member of the ECU drama faculty, and music student Janet Noyes of Wilmington, Del., are performing the roles of Captain Andy and Magnolia Hawkes in the ECU Playhouse production of "Show Boat." The production performances are set for April 1-3, 5 and 7-8. Tickets are $6 per person, ($4 per person when purchased in blocks of 20 or more) and are now on sale at the McGinnis Theater box office. (ECU News Bureau Photo)

ECU News Bureau

It's been many years since eastern North Carolina has heard the cry, "Show Boat's a-comin'," but the East Carolina Playhouse and the ECU School of Music have revived the call and are sending out the word that "America's grandest musical," the one named "Show Boat," is the grand opening production of McGinnis Theater on the East Carolina University campus.

The 55-year old musical will be presented April 1-3, 5 and 7-8 at 8:15 p.m. (There will not be a performance on April 4 or 6).

This new production of "Show Boat" heralds the year-long celebration of East Carolina University's 75th anniversary and is marked by a cast of some 65 actors, singers and dancers; ten complete scene changes, 200 costumes and 23 orchestra members.

According to Director Edgar Loessin, "this is the most extravagant production we have ever mounted here, and it comes with the grand opening of what we think is one of the best-equippped and spacious theaters in the southeast."

Written by the legendary team of Oscar Hammerstein and Jerome Kern, "Show Boat" was originally produced by Florenz Ziegfled in 1927. Since then it has become a beloved musical around the world and the only show of the last 30 years to have been given four first-rank productions in New York. Three movie versions have been released, the latest starring Howard Keel and Kathryn Grayson.

The memorable "Old Man River," the romantic ballad "Make Believe," and other timeless songs such as "Why Do I Love You," and "Can't Help Lovin' Dat Man" are woven into a story about high-spirited Magnolia Hawkes, daughter of a river boat theater impresario on the lower Mississippi of the 1880's.

Magnolia falls lyrically in love at first sight with Gaylord Ravenal, a handsome drifter addicted to gambling. Their idyll as man-and-wife takes them to the splendors of the Chicago World's Fair of 1893, where Ravenal, incapable of responsibility, deserts his wife and their daughter, leaving Magnolia to make a new life for herself and young Kim.

The poignant story concludes by showing Kim grown up to be a star of the modern theater, and the wandering Ravenal returning, old and defeated.

According to the New York Times, "'Show Boat'" is the most beautifully blended musical show we've had in this country." The New York Daily Mirror said "'Show Boat' sets the standard for musicals. It's magnificant."

"We think this is a very special theater event for the state because eastern North Carolina provided the impetus for the original novel, 'Show Boat,'" explained East Carolina Playhouse General Manager Scott Parker.

"Edna Ferber, a writer living in New York City in the early '20s, heard of a show boat working the waters of eastern North Carolina, and came down to research the life aboard the floating theater. From that experience she wrote the novel, and from the novel Hammerstein and Kern wrote the musical show.

"So, not only are we opening a lovely new theater center, but we're doing it with a magnificant musical that grew from the show boats of coastal North Carolina," Parker added.

Parker notes that many North Carolinians remember the old show boats, and that several of these people have been invited to attend the opening night performance as special guests.

"Show Boat" tickets are now on sale at the McGinnis Theater Box Office, which is open each weekday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Telephone orders may be made by calling 757-6390. Tickets are priced at $6 per person. When purchased in blocks of 20 or more tickets, tickets are $4 each.

"The Marine Resources Center — A Window to the Sea" is the theme of the exhibit sponsored by the Office of Marine Affairs in the Department of Administration. "Our exhibit will give Expo visitors a brief glimpse of some of the things they can see and do at the three state centers lcoated on our coast," said J.C. Jones, director of the state agency.

The centers are located on Roanoke Island in Dare County, on Bogue Banks in Carteret County, and near Fort Fisher in New Hanover County. Over three-quarters of a million people visited the three centers in 1981.

The Expo exhibit will include reminders of the state's coast — an old boat or two, anchors, and other objects of the sea as well as lots of sand. Three salt-water aquaria, two touch tanks and several information and display centers also make up part of the exhibit.

...N.C. Symphony Conductor Patrick Flynn

'North Carolina Audiences Listen With Their Hearts'

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

"Audiences here in the Carolinas are open to you. They listen to music with the right kind of care. They concentrate a lot of energy and you feel their rapport with you, their desire to want to be involved in the music. They listen with their hearts."

This is the way Patrick Flynn sums up audience reaction to the concerts he has conducted as principal guest conductor of the North Carolina Symphony since the beginning of the 1981-82 season.

Greenville audiences will have their first opportunity to hear him on home ground on the evening of Wednesday, March 31, when he will be here to lead the North Carolina Symphony in a program of three major works.

A native of the industrial city of Birmingham, England, Flynn came to North Carolina in March 1981 to audition for the position of principal guest conductor. After being chosen by the symphony's board for the post, Flynn is filling the role of principal conductor this season.

Flynn is additionally a conductor with the American Ballet Theater and for the British Broadcasting Company (BBC) Orchestra. He points out, however, that "this year my work will mostly be in North Carolina. This pleases me, as I like what I've seen of North Carolina and I love living in the Raleigh area."

Adds To Repertoire

The North Carolina orchestra, Flynn says, "is a very fine orchestra. It's a little short on strings, but the quality of players is high, and they work together effectively."

One of the things Flynn has achieved is enlarging the symphony's repertoire. "We've added 11 or 12 works not performed before," he said, "works like Stravinsky's 'Rite of Spring,' Tchaikovsky's 'Suite No. 3,' and Glazunov's 'Finnish Fantasy,' for example. We have also added a couple of Haydn symphonies and a Duke Ellington work, the suite from 'The River.'"

Flynn said next year there are plans to add music by North Carolina composers Robert Ward, Richard Hannay and Robert Suderberg to the symphony's repertoire.

Learns Quickly

Flynn admits a strong personal affinity for the music of composers Tchaikovsky, Brahms, Haydn and Richard Strauss. "I'm quite fond, too, of the music of William Boyce, the 18th century English composer. He has written some beautiful music."

As a conductor, Flynn is often called on to conduct contemporary music.

"Fortunately, I can learn a new piece of music quickly, so being faced with an unfamiliar score is not a great difficulty. In New York, because I'm known as being acquainted with 20th century Viennese music, I was given some contemporary pieces to conduct at the Juilliard School of Music."

Flynn mentioned, too, an occasion in Sydney when he was asked to conduct the first performance of a composition by an Australian composer.

Conducting a Japanese orchestra proved to be an event with a different twist. "Japanese musicians are incredibly disciplined," Flynn commented. "But I learned you have to rehearse them carefully. At performance, the smallest change in tempo, rhythm, or whatever, completely confuses them. They play well, but you must conduct exactly as rehearsed.

"Tokyo, by the way, has a big following in classical music. There are five major orchestras in the city."

Ballet Difficult

Asked if conducting for ballet performances was any different from regular concerts, Flynn said, "It is the most difficult of any conducting. It's different, too, in that you must know precisely how a piece is to finish up. You must be in complete control technically.

"Despite the difficulties," Flynn added, "it's challenging and rewarding. I have heard it said that dancers have no ear for music. That simply is not true. Dancers have a very keen sense of music. I much prefer conducting ballet to opera."

Flynn is reported to be the favorite maestro of ballet star Mikhail Baryshnikov, who is now serving as director of the American Ballet Theater.

Surprised Himself

At the age of 21, when it was time for him to take his diploma following studies at the Royal Academy of Music, Flynn recalls the test as "the toughest thing I've ever done."

"I thought anybody could conduct. It was easy for me. But when time came for the diploma tests, it turned out to be a gruelling two days of examination. The examination included three counterpart tests on scores by Brahms, Palestrina and Foure. I was sure I had failed. Instead, I was surprised. I was one of two who received the diploma." (Flynn not only passed, he won the prestigiuos Cassel Prize Gold Medal).

Since then, Flynn has been a busy musician, conducting over 30 symphony orchestras in Europe, Japan, America and Australia. In 1976 he moved to New York when he was appointed a conductor of the American Ballet Theater. For two seasons he conducted the Ballet Theater's repertoire at the Metropolitan Opera House, at Kennedy Center and on the company's European and American tours. In addition, he has supervised preparations for Baryshnikov's "Nutcracker" and "Don Quixote" ballets and has re-orchestrated both scores.

Also since 1976, Flynn has led the BBC London Orchestra in public and broadcast performances, including the July 4, 1981, concert of the BBC Concert Orchestra at the Royal Festival Hall in London. Each year for the past five years he has made two guest appearances as conductor of the Paris Opera.

Other Fields

For many musicians, the rounds of regular and guest performances as conductor taken on by Flynn would have been more than enough to keep occupied.

But Patrick Flynn has managed to carry out these far-flung assignments and yet find time to embrace other musical fields.

He has directed the music of Broadway shows such as "Hair" and "Jesus Christ Superstar." His achievements encompass the composition of film scores — one of which, "Sunday Too Far Away," won the director's prize at the Cannes Film Festival in 1974. He has to his credit scores for theater and radio drama, as well as music for documentaries.

"I enjoy writing scores for documentaries," Flynn said. "It's something entirely different from any other type of composing."

For The Audience

Patrick Flynn believes in "putting together a program that appeals to the listeners. One thought often expressed is that you cannot mix classical and popular music, that if you do you will alienate both those who like the classics and those who like popular music. But I feel that good music is good music, whatever the source. I feel you can offer a good program with a mixture of music. After all, it is the audience who pays for the programs."

On March 31 Greenville audiences will have a chance to judge for themselves what they think of the ability of this tall, lean, easy-going Englishman as a conductor as he leads the North Carolina Symphony in a program of three works by two composers.

The March 31 N.C. Symphony Program Listed

Three works are listed for the March 31 program by the North Carolina Symphony under the baton of principal guest conductor Patrick Flynn. Two of the compositions are by Felix Mendelssohn, "Hebrides Overture" and "Symphony No. 3 in A minor." The third work is Robert Schumann's "Symphony No. 4 in D minor."

The concert begins at 8 p.m. in Minges Coliseum. Advance tickets are priced at $5.50 for adults, $3.50 for senior citizens and students, and $2 for children. They are available at Mendenhall Student Center, the Book Barn, the Record Bar (both locations), at First State Bank, at Pitt-Greenville Arts Council (in North State Savings and Loan), and at the Beaufort County Arts Council.

Teachers of fourth, fifth and sixth grade students in Greenville are helping young folks brush up on a couple of songs they will be singing along with the North Carolina Symphony Orchestra on March 31.

At 11:30 a.m., Wednesday, in Rose High School, elementary students from city schools in these three grades will attend a "Children's Concert" by the symphony under the baton of James Ogle, associate conductor.

The "Children's Concert" will open with two selections from Mendelssohn's "A Midsummer Night's Dream," — the Incidental Music and the Wedding March.

The two songs which the children will sing along with the orchestra are "The Star-Spangled Banner" and "I'd Like to Teach the World to Sing."

Other selections to be featured on this program are The Infernal Dance of King Kastchei and the Finale from Stravinsky's "The Firebird Ballet Suite;" the first movement of Beethoven's "Symphony No. 5 in C minor;" and the overture to Gershwin's "Girl Crazy."

New Plaques For Historic Properties

The House Station located at 2424 S. Charles St. (N.C. 43 south) in Greenville is the first of a series of Pitt County buildings to receive a newly designed historic plaque to designate properties of significant architecture.

House Station, completed in 1891, is an excellent example of adaptive use of a building while preserving its original design and appearance for all to enjoy. The project was headed by the Historical and Cultural subcommittee of the Livability Committee, Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, Walter Faulkner, chairman of the Livability Committee in 1981 explained.

(Station House will be one of the buildings included on the Heritage Tour scheduled to take place on April 17.)

Through the chamber's efforts, two county preservation groups, The Greenville Area Preservation Association and The Pitt County Historic Society have formed a joint committee to encourage owners of Pitt County properties to nominate significant structures — either commercial or residential, or those used for religious or educational purposes for plaque consideration.

"We hope to have requests for nominations coming in from citizens all over the county," Keats Sparrow of the Pitt County Historic Society said.

The Greenville Womans Club is another local group that has expressed interest in assisting the joint plaque committee in the project by agreeing to assist in distributing nomination forms.

The new plaque is a brown shield having a white field with a yellow inside border. The raised green letters show the name and year of the building. Based on a design submitted by Kate Phillics through the chamber, the new plaque design is the culmination of a decision reached by Joe Goodson, Kate PHillips, Pat Rice, Keats Sparrow and Walter Faulkner, representing three interested groups.

House Station is currently occupied by Century 21 Ann Bass Realty. In adapting the building for commercial use, architectural features were preserved as evidence of its original use as a train depot at House Station. This includes keeping the wide-board floors uncovered wherever possible. The building was originally located on U.S. 13-N.C. 11 a short distance north of Greenville.

Occupancy of a building or house is one of the key factors used in the criteria for considering the placing of a plaque. The Fleming House of 1902, for example, has been nominated and approved for a plaque.

"However, before the plaque can be placed on the house, located at 302 South Greene Street, the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce will first have to complete renovation which is now under way and occupy the house," Pat Rice, past president of GAPA commented.

While the age of a property being nominated is one consideration, a structure recently constructed in such a manner that would reflect the true architecture of a distinctive period or style can also be considered.

Persons having an interest in nominating properties may pick up a nomination form from the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, or write to: Plaque Committee, Greenville Area Preservation Association, P.O. Box 673, Greenville, N.C., 27834.

Additionally, plans are under way to design a metal plaque to designate houses or public buildings in Pitt County listed in the National Register of Historic Places. Buildings already designated on the register include the Jones-Lee House, the Robert Lee Humber House and the old section of the Pitt County Courthouse, all in Greenville.

FIRST PLAQUE — The relocated, renovated House Station now located on Charles Street extended (N.C. 43 south), is the first property in Pitt County to receive a newly designed historic plaque. Shown here are (left to right), Walter Faulkner, representing the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce and the Greenville Area Preservation Association, Ann Bass, owner of the property, and Frank Wooten, president of the Pitt County Historic Society. Tile Can Widen Job Range Of Do-It-Yourselfers

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Decorative building materials once were tied closely to what was available in the immediate vicinity.

Wood was used in forested areas, brick where brickworks were handy, and natural stone where boulders dotted the fields.

Transportation and the demands of international trade have helped widen the range for many decorative building products, which helps explain why a group of Italian tile producers recently hired 19 American design firms to create interiors using ceramic tile.

In Italy, a leading producer of tile, the product is used in many indoor and outdoor applications, and the Italians currently supply about 18 percent of the tiles used in the United States.

But to gain more sales, the tile producers decided to show how to use tile creatively in entryways, dining areas, boudoirs, living areas and even a billiard room which was part of a recent model room group show at the Italian Tile Center in New York City.

Generally speaking, the well-trained hands of the interior designer were evident in each room. But the designers also came up with some interesting ideas for do-it-yourselfers.

If you are working without a designer, use tile simply in a single color for both floor and wall surfaces, several suggested. They explained that intricate patterns require meticulous planning to come out right.

"If you take one color and stick to it for floors and walls, you can't go wrong," said David E. Bell, who did something similar in a bathroom he and his associate, Donald Cotter, designed.

Eric Bernard agreed. If you use the same color grout as tile, any small imperfections in installation will be almost impossible to spot, he said. According to Bernard, "the larger the tile, the more expensive the installation and the more skillful the installer must be." By using 6-inch square or smaller tiles, a do-it-yourselfer will eliminate much of the cutting which makes tile installation difficult.

There was a difference of opinion as to how complicated it is to lay tile. The consensus was that jobs involving laying only a small number of tiles are well within the scope of most consumers.

Paul Leonard, who built a tile table top in his room, said the project was simple. He used a ready-made base that normally supports a butcher block top and laid decorative tiles on a plywood top with a tile adhesive. Next he applied the grout and then covered the table edges with wood moulding.

The resulting table was displayed in a cheerful kitchen, but Leonard suggests the same idea would work well for a patio picnic table or a table in a garden room or living room. Any sort of table base can be used, he said.

Another do-it-yourself project could be a table base of tile. That's what Chuck Giordano and Charles Kaminskas did in an all-white dining room. Their table base also has a tubular neon light in it. But if you leave out the light, it's a simple matter of gluing on a few tiles. The plywood base can be constructed after measuring the tiles so there is no cutting to do. The designers laid a glass table top on their base, getting it up to proper height by the addition of a plexiglass block.

Barbara Ross and Barbara Schwartz, partners in Dexter Design, suggest creating a kitchen island for food preparation out of tile. The two did just this in a kitchen they designed. They set a cooktop into the island and since tile accommodates hot pots without scorching, it's a practical surface choice.

Robert S. Hart's lounging room featured walls in a shiny pale-blue and white ceramic tile combination. To add a decorative note, he used several coordinating tiles with birds on them as a frieze where the ceiling and wall met.

It's easy and inexpensive to execute the idea of the frieze in your own home, said Hart. Apply the tiles with adhesive at the ceiling, baseboard or as a chair rail in a room. For neatness, attach some moulding above and below the tiles.

Other ideas for using pictorial tiles include creating wall hangings by framing a tile or creating a wall mural with several tile colors and patterns.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — About a year ago, some mildew developed on some of the shingles on the lower part of the outside of our house. I read it could be washed off wth a solution of household bleach and water, so I followed that advice. Everything came off fine and the shingles have looked good ever since. Lately, I note the mildew is starting to come back. The shingles, by the way, are painted white. The last time I painted them was several years ago. Should I repeat the bleach treatment?

A. — Either you did not get off all the mildew, which is a growth, or the conditions that originally caused it have returned. Be sure the area gets plenty of sun, which sometimes requires removing shrubbery that is preventing the sun's rays from reaching the wood. Wash again with the bleach solution. Repaint the area, either separately or when you do the entire exterior. This time get a paint that has a mildew-preventive in it or add a mildewcide to whatever paint you select. Ask the dealer to help you decide how to handle it.

Q. — When my wife was cleaning in the area around our furnace, she poked the aluminium duct with the end of a broom and caused a small crack in it. What is the best way to repair this?

A. — With an aluminum tape sold in most hardware stores and home centers. It has an adhesive backing and is easy to apply.

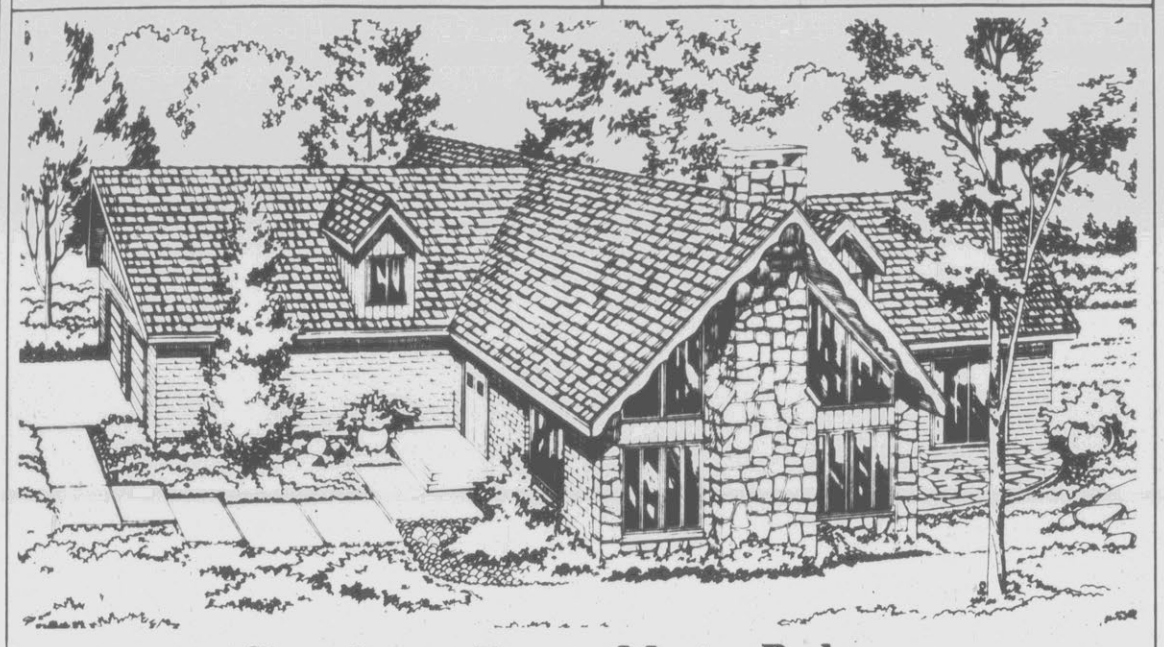
Q. — We have very old asphalt floor tiles in our kitchen. They are still solidly attached to the floor, but we now want to change the color of them. Can they be painted? We have never used anything on them except wax. When no wax has been applied for a few weeks, the tiles are very dull.

A. — You can paint the tiles, but you must use a floor or deck paint that is thinned with water, since turpentine or other solvents will soften or otherwise damage the asphalt. Before doing any painting, be certain every bit of wax has been removed from the floor.

Q. — There is a tiny drip from a water pipe in our basement. It is so slight the leaking water doesn't even fill a cup during an entire day. Didn't I read in your column some time ago that a wooden plug could be used to halt such a leak?

A. — Yes, but that was meant only to be a temporary repair, although I have seen it last a long time. A wooden plug, tapered to a fine point, can be pushed into the opening until it is so tight that it cannot be removed by hand. Wood swells when wet, so that the water flowing through the pipe keeps the plug in place. If the opening is too small to permit the entry of the tapered plug, a wooden toothpick sometimes will do the job. But, to repeat, if you want a more permanent repair, use one of the various types of repair materials made especially for water pipes.

PLAN YOUR HOME — The Sherbourne



Greenhouse Favors Master Bedroom

By Jerry Bishop

Lavish and rambling, the Sherbourne, a delightful stone-trimmed design, spotlights an impressive master bedroom with greenhouse and expresses a similar approach to luxury throughout the home.

Rooms are expansive and finely detailed and include seven bedrooms, a great room, family room, and laundry center.

Glass, stone, and brick fashion an eye-catching facade for this dramatic home. Inside the tiled foyer, guests are within steps of the great room, furnished with wood-burning fireplace and access to one of the two patios. A powder room is conveniently placed near the entry.

Want your lawn mower to cut better? Want to keep it virtually free of repairs? Want it to last twice as long as it otherwise might?

Of course you do. Then you have to keep it maintained properly with a little effort and a little knowledge. A simple thing like keeping the air filter clean can prevent poor engine performance and flooding. Take the air cleaner apart and remove accumulated dirt and grease. Wash the foam element in kerosene or a liquid detergent to remove stubborn dirt. Dry the foam by wrapping and squeezing it in a dry rag. Soak the element in 30-weight engine oil, using your hand to squeeze the oil-soaked element in order to distribute and remove excess oil.

From Bill Borachok, service manager for Jacobsen lawn cutting equipment, comes the suggestion that you can prevent future trouble by removing packed grass from the bottom of the cutter deck. This will avoid clogging. He says an advantage of the more expensive cast-iron cutting deck is the fact that it will have less packed grass because there are generally fewer areas where the grass can collect.

The mower's cutter bar should be examined before each use. Place the machine on its right side and make sure the cutter bar follows a straight line. It should be replaced if bent or cracked. Damage, even from a microscopic crack, could grow, allowing a piece of the bar to break off and be thrown out from under the mower, possibly causing serious injury.

Engineers recommend you check the oil level every five hours of operation and that you change the oil every 25 hours. Always change the oil when the engine is warm, and check your owner's manual to determine the appropriate type of oil for your mower.

Check the carburetor. Minor adjustments may be required to compensate for differences in fuel, temperature, altitude and engine load. All adjustments should be made with the air cleaner in place and the fuel tank half full.

Start the engine and run it long enough so it can attain operating temperature. If the engine is out of adjustment and will not start, close the needle valve by turning it clockwise. Then open the valve one-and-a-half turns counter-clockwise. Move the engine control to run at normal operating speed and turn the needle valve in clockwise until the engine starts to lose speed.

Then slowly turn the valve out counter-clockwise past the point of smoothest operation until the engine just begins to run unevenly. Now turn the needle valve back in clockwise very slowly until the adjustment is slightly to the rich side of the midpoint.

It is advisable to give your mower an overall inspection after several uses. Make sure each of the wheels is firmly tightened. Also, make sure the engine bolts are secure. And be certain all electrical connections and the mower's drive belt are properly tightened and not frayed, scuffed or broken. Give the muffler a once-over, making sure it is intact.

Don't forget the grass catcher. The bag should be sturdy, have no holes and be free of wear and tear. Also, with an electric-start engine, make sure to use the battery charger that is supplied with the equipment and follow the manufacturer's instructions.

Q. I've been hearing a lot about the gypsy moth. Do I have to worry about them eating my trees this year? (Ms. L.G., Roxboro)

A. North Carolinians shouldn't worry about the gypsy moth defoliating their trees this year. Only two spot infestations have been found in the state — one in Wake County and one in Johnston County — and hopefully these will be eliminated this spring. It takes several years for the population to build up enough to become a threat to trees.

Q. How should I care for my spring flowering bulbs after they finish blooming? (M.G., Bladenboro)

A. Give them an application of low nitrogen fertilizer, such as 5-10-10 or 4-8-12. Higher rates of nitrogen will cause more foliage and fewer blooms. Also, don't be hasty about cutting foliage. Wait until it is completely dead before removing.

Q. Several of my azaleas are over-grown and scraggily looking. When should I prune them and how much? (Mrs. L.L., Kannapolis)

A. Prune immediately after flowering, when the blooms begin to fade. You'll destroy the flower buds if you prune now. Contrary to popular belief, azaleas can be pruned severely. Tip prune to lower the height of the plants. Also reach down and prune out entire branches. This will induce new growth down inside the plants and cause them to have a denser flower display.

Contest Produces Winning Ideas

NEW YORK (AP) — Suggestions ranging from a "hand tool library," where people could borrow tools for home repairs, to free dental care for needy children were among community improvement ideas submitted in a program held in three U.S. cities during 1981.

The challenge to civic groups in Southfield, Mich., Santa Ana, Calif., and Raleigh, N.C., was: Tell us how you'd spend $25,000 to make your community a better place in which to live, and it's yours, no strings attached. The benefactor was International Telephone and Telegraph Corp., which has extensive operations in those cities.

The "Best Civic Idea" program, devised to encourage more community initiative and broader corporate support in the wake of federal aid cutbacks, drew a total of 57 ideas.

Among those submitted were a motor bike race track for teen-agers, psychological help for families of slain policemen and support for treating alcoholics and drug addicts.

Funding of little theaters was suggested several times, as was the making of documentary films to publicize area historic attractions.

One group said it would use the grant to teach gardening to apartment dwellers. Another said it would spend the $25,000 to instruct others how to apply for philanthropic grants.

Entries were judged by panels of prominent citizens of the three cities, including mayors, school superintendents, bank presidents and clergymen.

— In Southfield, a Detroit suburb of 85,000, the winning idea was for a neighborhood recreation program in a vacant school building. The A.M. Optimist Club of Southfield-Landrup, which submitted the idea, noted the project was aimed at "a regularly scheduled and socially acceptable outlet for the energies of Southfield youth."

While the program had already been in existence for several months, the grant would upgrade facilities, provide a program for senior citizens, and halt deterioration and possible vandalism of the building.

Life As It's Lived

By GAIL MICHAELS

Although Zachary has never been a cat's best friend, in the past he and two other felines have observed a tenuous truce based on Zachary's generosity at the high chair and the superior speed of cats. But lately Zachary has become more aggressive and the cats, their wariness dulled by the former state of peace, haven't yet got used to the persistence of their persuer.

The sofas and chairs and window sills on which they were wont to perch are now all within Zachary's reach. He waits patiently until they emerge from hiding under the bed. The other day I heard a piteous meow, and Zachary staggered into the kitchen lugging the largest cat around her middle, upside down.

My sister-in-law put her finger on the cause of Zachary's new offensive. He's establishing his place in the pecking order, she told me. He has suddenly realized he's low man on the totem pole as far as the family's concerned, and he's determined to remedy the situation.

I hadn't thought about it in quite that way, but it's true that most families have their own pecking orders. These orders aren't as clear-cut as they are in the chicken coop. In our family the order varies according to each member's perception. Meg thinks it's me, Phillip, and her in descending order. Phillip swears it's more like me, Meg, and him. I know what the true order is: it's Meg, Phillip, and me.

But from where Zachary stands, it must look as if he's always on the bottom rung. Actually, as the baby, he excercises more control than he realizes. His sister defers to him when he wants the toy with which she's playing because he's supposedly more vulnerable. Phillip and I must meet his demands because he's ostensibly so helpless.

His helplessness is what bothers him. He's still too small to resist effectively when his sister grabs him inder the arms and deposits him in a heap outside her door in response to one of his invasions on her room. He's still too small to reach those lovely marbles in the tennis ball can on top of the refrigerator or to win the race away from the bathtub. He can reach the horizontal hold, but he can't yet reach the "on" button of the television. In short, it's an adult world, and by virtue of size alone no one is easier to push around than Zack — except the cats.

And push Zachary does. A quick shove punctuates his favorite commands: Get off! Get down! Go 'way! He was devastated when the cat didn't respond after he had yelled at her and slapped the tree that she had climbed to end a prolonged chase. "Her won't get down," he informed me in a wounded voice.

This doesn't mean that he can't be affectionate. Although the cats aren't particularly appreciative of his bear hugs, he bestows them lavishly anyway. After all, a pecking order wouldn't be complete without a few pecks, and Zachary gets plenty, for none of us, not even Meg, can resist those chubby cheeks and the soft fold at the back of his neck. Naturally, he wants both to reciprocate and to pass all this love on down the lines to his four-legged companions.

I just wish he'd refrain from such expressions of love when he's holding the cats upside down.

Military Stepping Up Training In Use Of Masks

By DAVID MOULD

FORT JACKSON, S.C. (UPI) — Army recruit Beverley Battle stumbled out into the cold afternoon, coughing, crying, spitting and gasping for breath after 15 seconds in the Fort Jackson gas chamber.

"Keep moving and don't rub your eyes!" a stocky drill sergeant bellowed as a dozen dizzy soldiers grabbed pine trees to keep from falling while staggering down a sandy path from the small wooden building.

"Whatever you do don't rub your eyes! That'll make it burn worse!"

Soldiers are briefly exposed to tear gas in the Army's basic training. The growing threat of chemical warfare has prompted military officials to step up instruction in the use of gas masks and protective clothing.

"Until last year, basic training lasted seven weeks. Four hours were devoted to training in chemical, biological and nuclear warfare," Army spokesman Lt. Col. William Cauthen said.

"Now basic has been expanded to eight weeks, and 14 hours of training have been devoted to the area."

More than 45,000 new soldiers a year at Fort Jackson just outside Columbia, S.C., and at Fort Dix, N.J., Fort Benning, Ga., and Fort Leonard Wood in the Missouri Ozarks are taught to defend against chemical, biological and atomic attacks.

"None of us likes the idea of chemical warfare, but we know our enemies have it, so we've got it too," Cauthen said. "It's dumb to go into any battle and know that the enemy has something, and you don't use because you don't like it."

On Fort Jackson's simulated battlefield in the woods of central South Carolina, recruits trudge past crashed planes, bombed-out trucks, mangled jeeps and fake dead bodies. Gunfire crackles in the distance.

Suddenly, an alarm wails from a gas-detection device and soldiers scramble to get into black gas masks with long snouts and bulging glass lenses.

"These people have nine seconds from the time the alarm sounds to get that mask on," said chemical-warfare instructor Lt. Robert Brown. "That's the time limit for passing the test.

"Depending on the concentration of gas in an area, nine seconds could be enough," he said. "But if the gas is highly concentrated, you could be dead long before nine seconds run out."

The gas masks, called M-17A's by the Army, are made of butyl rubber and contain two canisters of charcoal filtering material. Soldiers who wear glasses get special inserts for the lenses.

The Army uses tear gas — the type police use in riot control — in training.

"An enemy probably would use nerve gas, blister gas or blood gas in the field," Brown said. "They can fire it in mortars, artillery, drop it in bomblets from planes or spray it from the air."

Nerve gas makes the body "twist and jerk," Brown said.

"You'll lose control of your reflexes and it then it causes death," he said. "Blister gas is like the mustard gas used in World War I. It produces severe blisters on the skin and inside the lungs. It's like getting spattered all over with hot grease.

"Blood gas causes death by suffocation," he said. "The gas breaks down the normal transfer of oxygen in the blood. It's like drowning because the body can't get oxygen."

Cauthen said the key defense in a chemical attack is advance notice.

"Warning is the best protection," he said. "If you smell gas and put on your mask you've probably already inhaled a good portion of it. It's best to go ahead and wear the mask and protective suit if you suspect there might be gas in the area."

Charcoal-lined coveralls protect the body from irritating gas, but "the suits don't protect against radiation," Cauthen said.

"But in a nuclear attack, radiation is not going to kill a soldier. The blast and heat will kill him."

When an atomic blast warning sounds on the training field, recruits drop face-down in the dirt with their hands under their bodies and their heads pointing away from the explosion.

"A nuclear blast is so destructive, though, there's really not a whole lot you can do to protect yourself," Cauthen said.

The tear gas used in training gives the skin a slight burning sensation.

"The eyes, mouth and nostrils start burning," Cauthen said. "It makes the eyes tear and causes drooling. A lot of people say they can't breathe. If the soldiers have eaten before going into the gas chamber, some of them throw up.

"They come out of that building feeling pretty sick, but they've got a lot more respect for that gas mask."

Most of the gagging, sobbing recruits emerging from the gas chamber said the 15 seconds they spent inside were "the most awful thing in basic training."

Death Row Population Growing

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

Across the nation 1,000 convicts, most of them men, await death by electrocution, hanging, poison gas, firing squad or lethal injection. For a decade, the population on death row has grown steadily.

It is likely to grow some more before it declines.

"Judges like the notion of capital punishment — provided that nobody gets killed," says George Georgieff, the man in charge of trying to kill Florida's killers.

That's how he explains why six years after the U.S. Supreme Court said the death penalty can be a valid punishment, only one man who did not want to die has been executed for his crimes.

Thirty-six states have a death penalty law. Georgieff, as head of the criminal appeals division in the Florida attorney general's office, is paid to carry out his state's law.

Experts, proponents and opponents, will not predict with any certainty when — or if — the actual imposition of capital punishment will become routine once again. But the consensus is that 1982 will not be the year.

In Texas, some believe the overflowing point has been reached.

"We are spending lots of time, lots of money and lots of energy" trying to bring criminals to justice "but that justice is not being carried out," says Harris County District Attorney John B. Holmes from his Houston office.

"There seems to be no finality. If we are not going to carry out the death penalty, let's repeal it," Holmes says. A repeal would free more than 150 from the Texas death row.

Not long ago the country's most dangerous outlaws were put to death with regularity. There were 717 executions in the 1950s, and 191 from 1960 through 1967.

An undeclared moratorium began in 1957, and appeared to become permanent when in 1972 the Supreme Court ruled that capital punishment as it then existed was unconstitutional.

The high court said the states were too "arbitrary and capricious" in the way they decided who would die and who would spend their lives behind bars.

State legislatures drafted new laws they hoped would meet constitutional standards, and in 1976 the Supreme Court said at least three of them — in Florida, Georgia and Texas — succeeded.

Today, four of every 10 death row inmates can be found in those three states.

Other state laws subsequently were modified in attempts to conform to what met with court approval in 1976. What has happened since? Not many executions. Plenty of court action.

Four men have been executed: Gary Mark Gilmore in Utah in 1977; John Spenkelink in Florida in 1979; Jesse Bishop in Nevada in 1979; and Steven Judy in Indiana last year.

Of the four only Spenkelink pursued all legal appeals. The others, in effect, chose death over further court battles.

Although it was anticipated the Spenkelink case would be the first of a flood of executions, instead it stands as an aberration. Hundreds of other condemned convicts have gone to court with uninterrupted success to prolong their lives.

Nowhere are state officials more zealous in seeking to impose the death penalty than in Florida, where nearly 200 prison inmates await execution.

"We are simply stymied," Georgieff says when discussing inmates who have been on death row since the mid-1970s. "Our only barrier exists at the federal level." A barrier he believes was built by "timid federal judges."

"It doesn't matter to me if tomorrow they wipe the thing out. But if we have the death penalty, let's cut the malarkey and get to it," Georgieff says.

Robert Stubbs, executive assistant attorney general in Georgia, says: "As long as a defense lawyer wants to fight and a defendant doesn't want to die, they will find some judge who will listen — and delay."

In Georgia, where more than 100 people are on death row, capital punishment is a political issue.

The state legislature has called on federal judges to clear the way for more executions, and Gov. George Busbee promised Georgians that as many as three death row inmates could be executed this year.

The normal appellate process can take three years or much longer.

It can include three or more trips to the nation's highest court, with time-consuming stops in state and lower federal courts along the way.

Stubbs says it is in the federal courts where the most time is wasted.

"In (Atlanta) some judges have sat on a case for two years or more before making a ruling," Stubbs says. But review by federal judges recently has grown speedier. "They read the newspapers, too," Stubbs adds.

Meanwhile, the Georgia death row, like those in other states, is "a reservoir being filled up," Stubbs says.

No one, not even the Florida pro-death penalty prosecutors Stubbs calls the "Tasmanian wolves," voices a belief that convicted murderers should be rushed to death, the irrevocable sentence. But state officials were encouraged by an opinion authored last year by Supreme Court Justice William E. Rehnquist, the court's most politically conservative member.

Rehnquist said states cannot kill anyone because of his brethren's constant "tinkering with the principles laid down in ... 1976" and "the natural reluctance of state and federal ... judges to rule against an inmate on death row."

"The existence of the death penalty in this country is virtually an illusion," Rehnquist said in the opinion that spoke only for himself.

He added: "When society promises to punish by death certain criminal conduct, and then the courts fail to do so the courts not only lessen the deterrent effect of the threat of capital punishment, they undermine the integrity of the entire criminal justice system."

John Charles Boger, a lawyer whose deep convictions have led him to a practice devoted entirely to trying to save the lives of death row inmates believes the recent emphasis on procedure — what Rehnquist calls "tinkering" — is well-founded.

"The courts have concluded that many of these cases were ill-tried," says Boger, who earned a divinity degree from Yale before turning to the law and a career with the NAACP Legal Defense Fund.

But Georgieff, the Florida official, says, "It's not a compliment to the judiciary for it to take 10 years to decide whether a three-day trial was fair."

A year before Rehnquist's angry outburst, a constitutional scholar with the conservative American Enterprise Institute in Washington said much the same thing.

In a published article, Bruce Fein accused the Supreme Court of "shirking its responsibility to provide the nation and its lawmakers with stable constitutional guidelines to govern the enactment and administration of capital punishment statutes."

Fein then made a suggestion some have found startling.

"A ruling striking down the death penalty (completely) would provide the spur for a thoughtful examination of whether a constitutional amendment reinstating the penalty would be appropriate."

Roger says the day may come when the death penalty is struck down because of the infrequency of its imposition — a day when the Supreme Court equates that infrequency with arbitrariness and capriciousness.

Doctor's Affairs Leave Wife Sick at Heart

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Being married to a doctor is hard enough, but being married to a young, good-looking, successful one is double trouble.

It's not his patients he gets involved with, it's his office help. After his first affair, I thought I was partly to blame, so I gave him all the attention he needed at home, in bed and elsewhere. But after his third affair, I offered him a divorce so he could marry his secretary. He swore that he really loved me and the last thing he wanted was a divorce. If it were not for my faith and my children, I would have ended my life.

Abby, why is he doing this to me? Why can't he fire his secretary? I have talked to her, but, of course, she's too much in love to listen to me.

I don't know how much more of this I can take. Should I be doing something more? Marriage counseling might help, but he won't hear of it. Please advise me and pray for this . . .

UNHAPPY DOCTOR'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Firing his secretary won't help. He'd probably initiate an affair with the next one. Give him an ultimatum. Either he gets counseling to try to get over his playing around, or you're leaving. Please get counseling yourself to help you cope with this situation. Lead from strength. If he thinks you don't mean it, he'll continue his present behavior.

DEAR ABBY: In response to the dialogue that appeared recently between "Longtime Pastor" and "Lutheran Mother":

I, too, have had some unusual requests for weddings, such as a couple in their 80s asking that the choir sing "The Impossible Dream." (Request denied.)

However, I have also performed a wedding ceremony for an "obviously pregnant bride" because the couple had been previously refused by a Catholic priest. They had been loyal church members, and this rejection had driven them and both sets of parents away from the Catholic Church. They were under a great deal of pressure and on the verge of walking away from Christianity altogether.

Jesus frowned on premarital sex, but he also forgave a woman caught in adultery. The United Methodist wedding service I use doesn't ask the bride and the groom whether they are virgins. However, it does ask them whether they will henceforth remain true to each other, and I expect them to take that vow seriously.

Frankly, I give the man a lot of credit for not running away, and the woman for wanting a church wedding. I am tired of denominational legalism or fundamental dogmatism wrecking lives of people in the name of Christ.

THE REV. J. ROGER SKELLEY-WATTS,
BOLIVAR, OHIO

DEAR ABBY: The story of the married woman who castigated her father in his own home in the presence of others for committing the unforgivable crime of talking with his mouth full still infuriates this 58-year-old father. She described him as "warm and loving."

Does that lady not know that there are abusive fathers, drunken fathers, cruel fathers and deserting fathers? I liken her action to that of a woman who receives a beautiful present, then complains bitterly because she doesn't like the box it came in.

May I tell that lady a story:

Once upon a time it was considered ill-mannered, vulgar and completely unacceptable to break your crackers in your soup. Then one night, at a dinner party, an American broke his crackers in his soup. This was duly reported. Suddenly it became quite acceptable to break your crackers in your soup.

Why? Because your nation was no longer singing, "Brother, Can You Spare a Dime?" Why? Because your nation was singing, "Happy Days Are Here Again." Why? Because the name of the American who broke his crackers in his soup was Franklin Delano Roosevelt!

If you use this, sign me . . .

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN
AND OMAR SHARIF
©1982 Tribune Company Syndicate, Inc.

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—In a recent column, you mentioned the gambling three no trump opening bid. I can understand your devotion to a gambling convention, but I thought that bridge was a game of skill. What is this convention and how do you use it?—R. Bell, Birmingham, Ala.

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)

A.—You certainly hit where it hurts! But then, I believe that life is a gamble, and that you don't enjoy anything fully unless you are willing to take an occasional chance.

Not that gambling three no trump involves any great risk. As most commonly played, it is a preemptive bid designed to make life miserable for the opponents. The requirements for the bid are: A solid seven-card minor suit with no more than one king in an outside suit.

It might seem that an opening bid of three no trump with this holding runs the risk of large losses. That is true, but only to a limited extent. There are certain safeguards built into the convention. Responder acts as follows:

1) With stoppers in the other suits, he passes.

2) With a weak hand, he runs to four clubs. This is an escape mechanism—opener passes with length in clubs, or corrects to four diamonds if that is his suit.

3) A jump to five clubs shows a good hand that is not suited for no trump but which offers a chance for game in opener's long suit. Again opener passes or corrects to five diamonds, depending on which is his suit.

4) A response of four hearts or four spades is natural — to play. Responder has a good hand, but is not interested in slam.

5) A response of four no trump is Blackwood. However, since opener can't have a side ace and must have the ace and king in his long suit, this version of Blackwood is used to locate a side king, if opener has one.

That leaves just one possibility uncovered. Suppose that responder has a decent hand with controls in the majors, a singleton diamond and two or three low clubs. If opener's suit is clubs, the hand is good enough for game, but if opener has diamonds, four may be high enough. Responder bids four diamonds. Opener passes if his suit is diamonds, but converts to five clubs if that is his long suit.

Registration

Registration will be held Monday at Industrial Park Child Care Center from 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. for those who wish to enroll their children in the summer program or kindergarten for the 1982-83 year.

Dickens' Orphan Finds A Home

"Oliver Twist," the timeless Dickens classic about an orphan who undergoes a series of hardships before discovering the secret of his ancestry will be broadcast on Tuesday, Mar. 23 (9-11 p.m.) on CBS. In the production, one of America's most well-respected actors — George C. Scott — appears as one of the most well-known characters in English literature — Fagin — and the result is an extraordinary performance that is not to be missed.

Orphaned at birth, Oliver Twist (played by newcomer Richard Charles) is raised in poverty and hardship in a workhouse run by Mrs. Mann (Eileen Atkins) and the parish beadle, Mr. Bumble (Timothy West). Soon after being thrown into the wide world at age 9, Oliver finds himself in the London tenement lodging of Fagin, a moneylender and fence who trains a gang of young pickpockets.

Bill Sikes (Tim Curry), Fagin's cohort, sizes up the young recruit as a potential thief, while Nancy (Cherie Lunghi), Sikes' woman, befriends Oliver and tries to save him from being groomed for a life of crime.

Nevertheless, Oliver is taken along by Sikes on a robbery in the country, where the youngster is shot by a butler as he tries to wriggle through a pantry window. Sikes flees.

The master of the house, Mr. Brownlow, a benevolent country squire, nurses Oliver back to health and gives him a home. Monks, the son of one of Brownlow's oldest friends, who has seen Oliver at Fagin's place and thought he recognized him, offers the moneyleader 500 pounds to "do away" with the boy.

Having overheard the plot, Nancy warns Brownlow's niece Rose of the threat to Oliver. For her betrayal, Sikes takes cruel revenge, but not before the secret of the boy's ancestry is about to be unraveled.

"Fagin is larger than life," Scott said. "And he's obviously corrupt as hell, but I don't see him as a particularly malevolent man. I guess his miserliness is his worst trait, that terrible obsession with money and the kind of sick power it has over him.

"He's frightened to death of Bill Sikes, certainly, and he's the kind of man who will take advantage of those who are weaker than him and be craven to those more powerful...an interesting chap, wouldn't you say?"

GEORGE C. SCOTT STARS as Fagin, headmaster of the school of young thieves, as Richard Charles stars as Oliver, in the new production of Charles Dickens' "Oliver Twist," airing Tuesday, Mar. 23 (9-11 p.m.), on CBS-TV.

LOVEBIRDS JOANIE AND CHACHI (Erin Moran and Scott Baio) are leaving the "Happy Days" nest to seek their fortunes in Chicago, in "Joanie Loves Chachi," a new half-hour comedy series, premiering Tuesday, Mar. 23 (8:30-9 p.m.), on ABC-TV.

Gets New Date

"Nurse," the dramatic series on CBS, will move to Friday nights at 10 p.m. following the high-rated "Dallas," beginning April 23.

Facts Uncovered

Doing some investigative reporting of his own, comedian David Letterman uncovered some startling facts about the news show "60 Minutes." "It's 57 minutes, 30 seconds," reported Letterman on a recent edition of "Late Night with David Letterman." "And without commercials, 51 minutes, 30 seconds."

Michele Will Tell

Q: My son and I have a bet going. Is Margo Kidder, who played Lois Lane in the movie "Superman," the same girl who plays Jackie Templeton on "General Hospital"? I say yes, he says no way. Who's right? MERV CUMMINGS, MT. OLIVE, N.C.

A: You lose! Lovely actress/model Demi Moore appears in the key role of Jackie Templeton on "General Hospital."

Q: Please tell me the name of the girl who plays Wendy on "Search For Tomorrow." Also, is Blair ("Facts of Life") and Liza ("Search For Tomorrow") related? WONDERING CONNIE, DURHAM, N.C.

A: Lovely Lisa Peluso portrays Wendy Wilkins on "Search For Tomorrow." She's seventeen years old. No, Lisa Whelchel (Blair) and Sherry Mathis (Liza) are not related.

Q: I would like to know if the head man on "Strike Force" and the head man on "Today's FBI" are the same person. Also, why did Genie Francis of "General Hospital" leave the show? BETH MAYNARD, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

A: Not hardly! Although they're both on police shows — Robert Stack, head of "Strike Force," and Mike Connors, head of "Today's FBI," are not the same man. Genie Francis left her long-running role of Laura to allow some time for her personal life.

Q: Could you tell me where Parker Stevenson is now and how long did he play Frank Hardy on "The Hardy Boys"? A FAN IN ROANOKE RAPIDS, N.C.

A: Parker Stevenson has been virtually inactive in show business since the demise of "The Hardy Boys." A graduate of Princeton University, Parker is thirty-one years old. He starred as Frank Hardy for two seasons.

Q: Can you tell me the name of the theme song of "Simon & Simon"? Also, who plays it and is it available in a record. L.M., CONOVER, N.C.

A: Most likely it is an original composition written expressly for the series. For further information write to "Simon & Simon," CBS-TV, 51 W. 52 Street, New York, N.Y., 10019.

Q: Please give me the address of Michael Landon. C.L., FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

A: Write to Michael Landon c/o "Little House on the Prairie," NBC-TV, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N.Y., 10020

Comedy Is A Key For Linville

Larry Linville caused such a furor in his first high school play that the drama teacher ran screaming from the building.

"I was 16-years-old at the time," Linville remembers. "It was a dramatic Christmas play that turned into a laugh riot romp." Despite the teacher's horrified reaction, the talented actor recalls, "the audience loved it."

Linville's comedic talents will be showcased when he appears in the series "Herbie The Love Bug," airing Wednesday, Mar. 24 (8-9 p.m.) on CBS. Also starring in the fun-filled comedy about the Volkswagen with a mind of its own are Dean Jones, Patricia Harty, Richard Paul, Claudia Wells, Nicky Katt and Douglas Emerson.

Although obviously possessed with a flair for performing, Linville studied engineering at the University of Colorado until the cover of Life magazine altered the course of his life. "I was walking by a newstand one day and saw a picture of Trevor Howard on the cover," he explained. "I admired him very much as an actor and found out from the article that he attended the Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts in London. I thought to myself, 'if it's good enough for him, it's good enough for me.'"

Four weeks later Linville arrived in New York to audition for the prestigious school. "I walked into a room with about 300 people," he said. "They only accepted three and unbelievably, I was one of those chosen."

For the next two years, Linville studied in London although his parents' evaluation of his career choice was less than encouraging. "They thought I was a crazy lunatic throwing myself into the great gutter of the world," he remarked. However, as Linville's career gained momentum, his parents had quite a change of heart. "The first time I hit television," he said, "they went berserk. Then it was alright. It became 'my son the actor rather than my son the flake.'"

'Capitol' Makes Debut

CBS' new daytime drama, "Capitol," will be introduced in a primetime presentation on Friday, Mar. 26 (10-11 p.m.). The contemporary drama deals with "the intrigues and glitter behind the marble curtain of Washington, D.C.," according to the network.

The focus will be on the public lives and private ambitions of two prominent families, the McCandlesses and the Cleggs, who have been bitter enemies since the dark depression days of the 1930s.

The special one-hour presentation concerns the 24 hours prior to the return of Air Force Captain Tyler McCandless, hero of a recent Persian Gulf incident, and the furor it creates. Tyler will discover that he is returning to an old-fashioned hero's welcome, complete with top-level reception and award ceremony.

Adding to the intrigue is Sloane Denning, a beautiful and ambitious television anchorwoman, who may be in love with Tyler, but is not averse to his arch-rival, young Congressman Sam "Trey" Clegg.

Further complicating the situation is Julie Clegg, who defies the family feud to fall in love with Tyler but is no match for the ruthless Sloane.

"Capitol" also features Rory Calhoun as lawyer Jeffrey Tyler, father of Clarissa (Constance Towers) and grandfather to her son, Tyler.

Miss Towers began her theatrical career as a singer, and has made nightclub appearances at the Coconut Grove in Los Angeles, the Persian Room of New York's Plaza Hotel and Miami's Eden Roc. As "Capitol" develops, she may have an opportunity to sing in the show.

CONSTANCE TOWERS PORTRAYS stunning Clarissa McCandless, mother of returning Air Force hero Tyler McCandless, in "Captiol." The show premieres Friday, Mar. 26 (10-11 p.m.) and moves to a daytime slot on Monday, Mar. 29 (2:30-3 p.m.), on CBS-TV.

On Broadway, she played Julie in the Lincoln Center production of "Show Boat," and was in "Ari," the musical version of "Exodus," "Anya," the musical version of "Anastasia," and, most recently, "The King and I," starring opposite Yul Brynner.

Miss Towers has also starred across the nation, in such musicals as "The Sound of Music," "Kiss Me, Kate," "Oklahoma!," and the comedy "The Cactus Flower."

Among her many awards for performing on stage, television and motion pictures are the New York Critics' Outer Circle Award for "Excellence in Theater," the American Academy of Dramatic Arts Achievement Award, and the Best Musical Actress of 1974 award of the New Jersey Drama Critics Association.

Miss Towers is married to John Gavin, the former actor and now the American Ambassador to Mexico.

Gray To Star

Filming has begun this week on "Not in Front of the Children," a new motion picture for television starring Linda Gray, for later broadcast on CBS.

Miss Gray, who stars a Sue Ellen Ewing on the Network's "Dallas" series, portrays a divorced mother who must fight for the right to keep custody of her two young daughters after she decides to live with a younger man.

The NCAA Rolls On

Atlantic Coast Conference champion North Carolina (winner nine times in the last 16 years), the top-seed in the East Regional of the NCAA basketball tournament, is hoping to continue its winning tradition as this event begins to narrow toward the championship game. CBS will present the East finals and the Midwest finals on Sunday, Mar. 21 (noon-4:30 p.m.), with the winners of these matchups heading for New Orleans to take part in the Final Four shootout.

Carolina entered the NCAA play with a 27-2 record, the best mark in Coach Dean Smith's 21 years in Chapel Hill. Even so, the competition in the NCAA is formidable, and the Tar Heels must keep their guard up. In regard to the tournament, Smith said: "I think the Basketball Committee has done a good job of making all the regionals difficult, but I think the East is as strong if not stronger than any other."

The Tar Heels have been paced throughout the season by guard Jimmy Black and a pair of first-team All-Americas, forward James Worthy and center Sam Perkins — last year's ACC Rookie of the Year.

Sophomore Perkins, who helped Carolina finish second in the NCAA tournament in 1981, is averaging 14 points and nearly 8 rebounds per game, but is equally as dominant on defense — leading the Tar Heels in blocked shots. It is his versatility that prompted Coach Smith to comment: "Sam has developed into one of the most complete players in the game."

"The first time I walked on a basketball court as a kid it just seemed natural to shoot the ball lefthanded," said the Latham, N.Y., native. "I also throw a football and softball with my left hand. But, I do everything else righthanded. I really don't have any explanation for it."

Twain's Wipeout

Writer Mark Twain tried his hand at surfing once. He recalled the incident in "Roughing It" this way. "I tried surf bathing once, subsequently, but made a failure of it. I got the board placed right, and at the right moment to; but missed the connection myself."

Pike's Peek

HOLLYWOOD — PRINCESS GRACE won't exactly be "acting" in ALEXANDER COHEN'S movie "Rearranged" — she will be playing herself with some scenes to be filmed in Monaco at the castle. It will be a documentary about gardens, a subject very close to her heart.

JOE GARAGIOLA was honored recently by the City of Tucson, Ariz., with the renaming of a local recreational facility to Joe Garagiola's Rodeo Park. JOE'S longtime buddy, YOGGI BERRA, a N.Y. Mets coach, was at the presentation ceremonies. BERRA put his arm over his fellow ex-catcher's shoulder and said, "Now we've got a place to play."

Comedian writer DON NOVALLO, best-known for his portrait of Father Guido Sarducci on "Saturday Night Live" for two-and-a-half years, has added a new dimension to his versatile career. He has been named producer of "SCTV Comedy Network" the late-night satirical comedy series on NBC — that should be an improvement.

One of these days the Oscar may be called "Kate's Thing" or "the Hepburn Prize" based on KATHARINE HEPBURN'S continued romance with the Academy Award. This year, the amazing MISS HEPBURN has received her 12th nomination — nothing really new for her — she has held the record since her 11th nomination in 1968.

In case you have been wondering about that Fritos Corn Chips commerical the voice you hear belongs to none other than CARELTON CARPENTER singing his hit tune "Aba Daba Honeymoon."

All systems are go for SAM ELLIOTT to star in an ABC pilot, "Travis McLee" — and to make it the best he can, SAM has an office on the lot to work with the show scripted by STIRLING SILLIPHANT.

Can an IRA Really Make You a Millionaire?

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

In defense of Carter's policies.

FOR HAROLD BROWN, former Secretary of Defense

When reviewing your term in the Pentagon, do you recall joyous days you'd like to relive? Do you desire to have done things differently? —N.S., Albany, Ga.

● My approach is to try to learn from what has gone on before but not attempt to relive it. It's much better to move on because there will always be new problems. There are some things that we in the Carter Administration did very well in the areas of foreign policy and national security. For example, we helped bring peace between Egypt and Israel as a first step in resolving the problems of the Middle East. But our performance was mixed. The attempted rescue of the American hostages held in Iran failed, of course. I would not care to relive the events as they took place.

FOR JOSE FELICIANO, recording star-composer

What changes would you like to see made in the U.S. to help blind people become more independent? —P.E., Cumberland, Md.

● I wish the Government would find a way to emboss paper money so blind people could determine different denominations without outside help. I know money is embossed in some other countries. We should follow their example.

FOR KARYN WEISS, director of product development, L.J.N. Toys

Is it a fact or hype that Brooke Shields really posed for the new Brooke Shields fashion doll? —B.A., Waco, Tex.

● She did indeed. Brooke not only sat while a clay sculpture of her head was made (the first step in a painstaking process), but she also offered helpful advice to insure the doll's reality. Brooke was pleased with the final version.

Sygma

FOR MORGAN FAIRCHILD, star of The Seduction

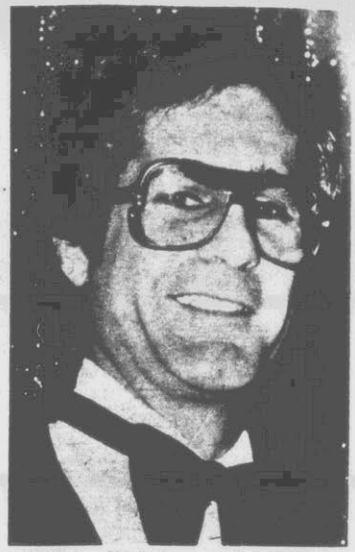
Because you've played so many "bad girls" do you find they make a greater impression than "good girls?" —C.J., Panama City, Fla.

● Nasty gals seem to have a longer life span. I imagine there must be so many "good girls" who want to identify with ladies who say and do exactly what they want, with no thought of the consequences. Good girls would never do that.



White: Waltzing on the water.

FROM THE "ASK" EDITOR

THIS AND THAT: Sara Taylor — mother of the one and only Liz — who lives in Rancho Mirage, Calif., complains that no one ever mentions the nice things that her daughter does (i.e., establishing a hospital in Africa). She calls Liz "the most perfect daughter in the world, and a home-baby." Mrs. Taylor, going on 86, has never wanted to be in the public eye, enjoys her privacy, prefers to do her own grocery shopping and is said to have a flawless complexion. . . . Society bandleader Stuart White will never forget this engagement. He was providing music for a party on a yacht. A volley of fireworks marked their launching and everyone rushed to the side to watch. Result? The yacht capsized. Only bookings Stuart now accepts are those on terra firma. LOST AND FOUND: John Payne, retired leading man of the 40's, has no financial problems except the frustration of knowing he lost millions by not following his own instincts. "Twenty years ago," said Payne, "I thought Ian Fleming's Moonraker would make a great movie. But all the Hollywood wise men turned it down. So I gave up, even though my gut feeling said 'keep going.' After every door closes in your face, what can you do?" Payne cringes at hearing that the James Bond movies have reaped millions, and the cash still flows in. . . . A very strange object was found by the cleaning staff in the disco of the Loews Monte Carlo Hotel in Monaco. It looked like a chair leg or table leg, but because not one of the chairs or tables was legless, the mystery remained unsolved. Next morning there was a frantic inquiry for a wooden leg. A messenger came to collect it, but offered no explanation of how the limb became separated from its rightful owner. The manager was too polite to ask. HERE AND THERE: Henny Youngman signed a deal with a Chinese bakery and, very soon, his jokes and one-liners will be stuffed into millions of fortune cookies. First gag to roll off the presses is, of course, "Take my wife — Please." . . . A British inventor dreamed up a machine to curb nightmares; it prevents bad dreams and will cost the equivalent of $200. . . . French sea explorer Jacques Cousteau, 71, plans a $4-million expedition up the Amazon to study natural resources. . . .

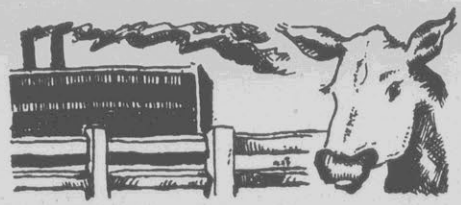
PRO AND CON

Should "Enterprise Zones" Be Established by the U.S. Government In Depressed Rural Areas to Revitalize Them?

PRO Representative Wes Watkins (D.-Okla.), member, Appropriations Committee

After World War II we drafted the Marshall Plan to rebuild Europe and established programs to revitalize our decaying inner cities. "Enterprise zones" now are proposed to restore prosperity to inner cities, while rural America, facing equally serious economic and social problems, is forgotten. My bill establishing "enterprise zones" in depressed rural areas would provide incentives for small businesses to create employment and income-producing opportunities, thus leading to revitalization of these areas.



Send questions of national significance, on a postcard, to "Pro & Con," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $10 for those published.

CON Roger J. Vaughan, deputy director, N.Y. Governor's Office of Development Planning

Tax incentives for firms in poor, rural areas will not create jobs. First, taxes are much less important in location decisions than transportation, trained labor, water supply and access to bank financing. Second, with the tax cuts passed in 1981, many firms expanding or relocating will have sufficient tax credits and allowances so that they will not have to pay taxes for several years. Therefore, additional tax incentives will be of little value and will do nothing to improve the rural business climate.

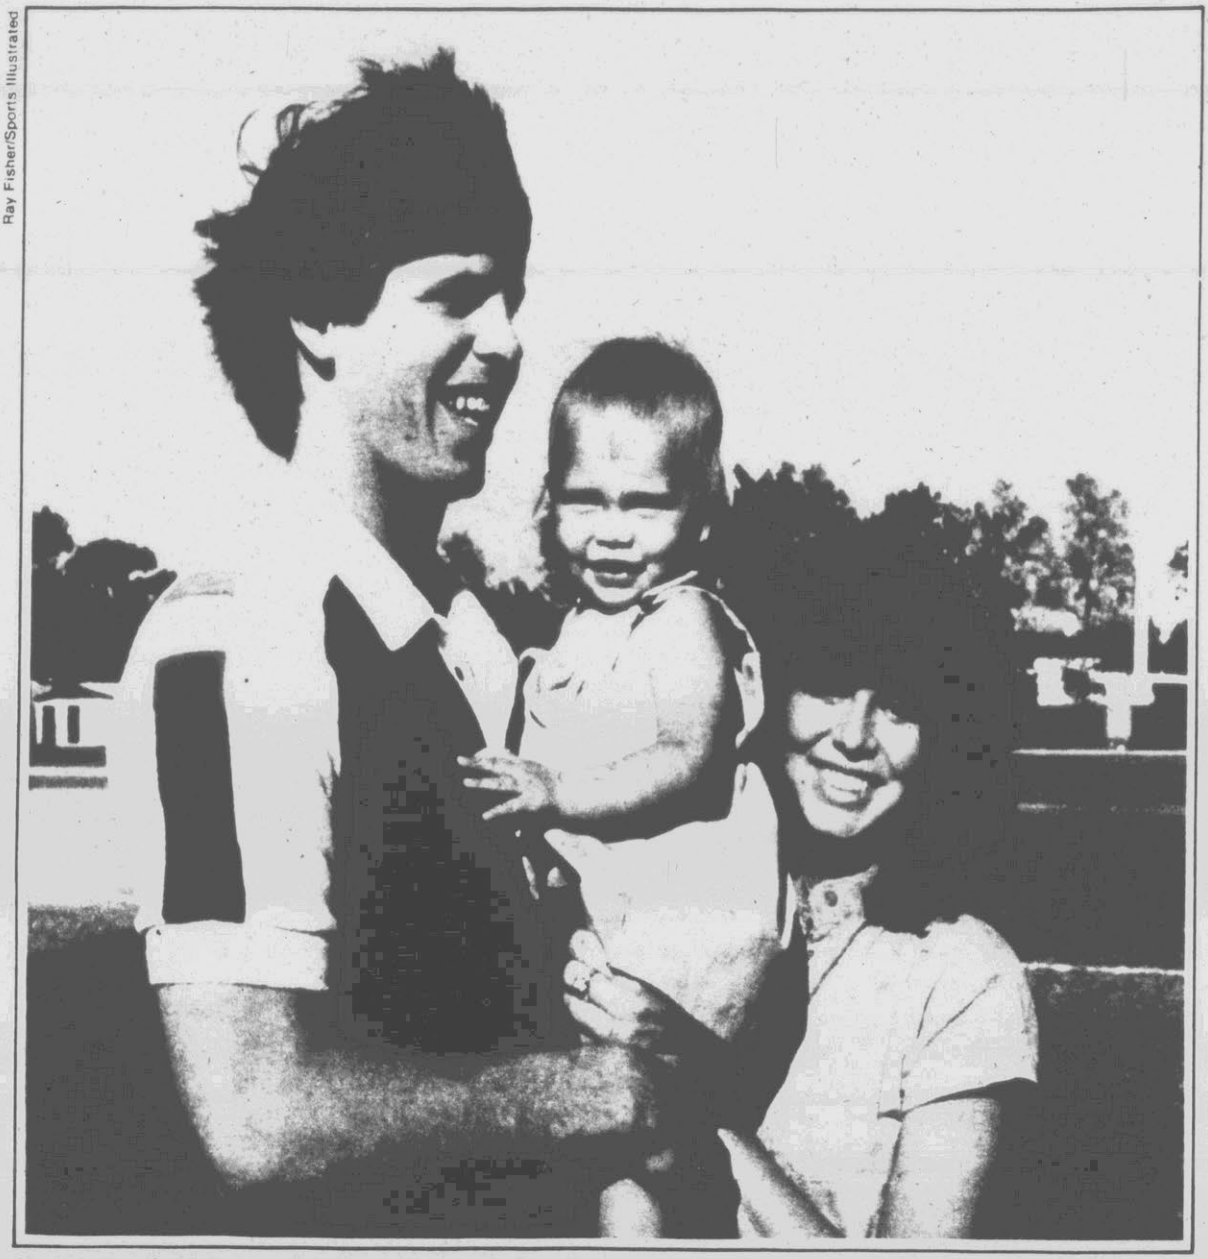
COVER STORY

THE TRIALS OF BOSTON'S



Ray Fisher/Sports Illustrated

Ainge with wife Michele and daughter Ashlee, 2. Son Austin was born in October.

It seems as if the enormously gifted Celtic rookie has spent more time in a law court than on a basketball court.

For a time, it looked as if Danny Ainge, the modern-day Frank Merriwell, were destined to become the man without a sport. During a good part of 1981, he stood somewhat bemused at the center of the most bitter contractual dispute in recent memory. Indeed, in an era when legalese regularly drowns out the most lyrical of performances on diamond, hardcourt or gridiron, it is a testament to the seriousness of the Ainge case that it inspired the passion it did.

Now that he is a bona fide, albeit subsidiary, member of the Boston Celtics, defending champions of the National Basketball Association, Ainge has put all the furor behind him and can concentrate on his game.

Hard to believe it was only months ago that he was wearing the baseball uniform of the American League's Toronto Blue Jays. But on Sept. 24, after finally deciding that he was "a better basketball player than a baseball player," Ainge announced his retirement from baseball in the middle of a three-year, $525,000 contract with the Blue Jays. The Celtics, baseball contract or no baseball contract, made him their third pick (31st player chosen overall). Ainge himself attended the draft, sitting discretely alone in the back of the room to see which pro team might have the temerity to select him. Soon thereafter he stood in civvies in Federal District Court in Manhattan, seeking to escape his baseball pact.

The reason was that Ainge was not pleased with his commitment to baseball. A third baseman, he had been pegged by the Blue Jays as "the next Brooks Robinson." But at the plate, he more closely resembled Brooke Shields, hitting all of .187 (a pound under his playing weight) with no home runs in 1981.

Few fans knew much about his baseball career, but nearly everyone remembered his heroics in last year's N.C.A.A. basketball finals, when he led Brigham Young University to a stunning upset of Notre Dame with a driving,full-court layup in the final seconds of the game. He had proved over a brilliant four-year career at Brigham Young that, at a wispy 6 feet 5 inches, he could play guard or small forward with equal facility, that he could run, pass and shoot with the best of them, and the N.B.A. scouts garlanded him with praise.

The trouble was that the baseball diamond and its dollars had lured him early on. Under N.C.A.A. rules, an athlete can sign a professional contract in one sport and retain his amateur standing in another. So when the baseball scouts came at the close of his high-school career, Ainge couldn't resist the temptation.

"When I signed the contract I was sure I wanted to play baseball," Ainge later reflected, "but it was too early. I should have waited until after my senior year. I never imagined I would have the kind of year that I did [24.4 points per game as Brigham Young's captain]. My thinking was that I was stuck in a bad situation for three years and I should try and make the most out of it. I know I told a lot of people I was going to play baseball, but there's a difference between saying, 'I have a contract to play baseball,' and 'I have a contract to play baseball but I really don't want to,' which is how I felt."

Even now, Ainge, who just turned 23 on St. Patrick's Day, says, "I'm a little puzzled by all the controversy. It's been nonstop for four years, people anxious to talk to me about this, as if I were such a unique athlete. I'm hardly the first athlete to have the opportunity to play more than one sport."

Of course he isn't. It's common knowledge that the New York Yankees' $20-million outfielder, Dave Winfield, had his pick of the three major professional sports (baseball, football and basketball). It is also true that at one time several ballplayers tried their versatile hands at two sports at once: Dave DeBusschere and Gene Conley each spent several hectic years pitching for major-league teams in the summer and shooting for N.B.A. teams in the winter. But that was before the N.B.A. playoffs competed with the traditional Memorial Day doubleheader for public attention and before the World Series collided with Halloween. Besides, no one else but Ainge signed a long-term contract in one sport before deciding his career lay in another.

Says Michele Ainge, "If we had known what all was involved in jumping to basketball, we probably wouldn't have made that step."

Up to that point, life had been a simple matter of studies and games for Ainge, and he excelled effortlessly in both. He grew up in Eugene, Ore., and in high school achieved the singular honor of being named to Scholastic magazine's all-America teams in baseball, basketball and football. But before matriculating at B.Y.U. in 1977, which he chose in part because, as a Mormon, he liked the school's Mormon tradition, Danny signed a multiyear baseball contract with Toronto. He thus led a curious sort of collegiate double life: a prominent campus figure who would pack his books away at the end of the spring term and go off to the professional baseball wars.

That kind of responsibility will make a youngster grow up and settle down quickly. In March of his sophomore year, Danny married Michele Toolson (whom he met when he asked to sit beside her on their first day of classes) and became a father (daughter Ashlee is now 2) midway through his junior year. Meanwhile, his basketball career leaped and bounded even as his baseball career plodded. He was third-team all-American his sophomore year, second-team all-American his junior. Then came his fabulous senior year, when his aforementioned spectacular feats in the N.C.A.A. playoffs captivated national attention. The nation's college coaches even voted him Kodak's player of the year award, ahead of fellow seniors Mark Aguirre and Isiah Thomas.

His professional baseball statistics were less a matter for celebration. As the ill-starred 1981 season began, Ainge had hit just .239 over two seasons bouncing back and forth between Toronto and its Syracuse farm team. Blue Jay president Peter Bavasi and vice president Pat Gillick remained high on Ainge, but Danny did not entirely share their enthusiasm and began hinting he would rather jump to pro basketball.

That was all Red Auerbach, savvy general manager of the Celtics, needed to hear. His backcourt of Tiny Archibald and Chris Ford was aging, and Ainge was just the sort of hot-shooting, highly maneuverable guard the Celtics like. Auerbach saw in Ainge's versatility the reincarnation of John Havlicek, the longtime Celtic "Sixth Man" now destined for the N.B.A. Hall of Fame. Auerbach decided to make a full-scale bid for Ainge.

The Blue Jays heard the drums too, of course, and sent out letters of discouragement to all 23 N.B.A. teams before the June basketball draft. The Celtics declined discouragement and picked him anyway.

The strike-shortened baseball season followed, and it was a dreary one for Ainge. "I realize now I had never been happy in baseball," Ainge says, and his play reflected that disenchantment. Listen to his final baseball memory: "Do I remember my last baseball game? I sure do. It was the 13th inning on a cold night in Toronto. They put me in at shortstop in the bottom of the inning. A ball was hit into the hole, and I dove to save a run. Then I tried to throw home, but I threw my arm out. I think I got a touch of tendonitis, which I still feel playing basketball. That's what I remember about my last baseball game."

Ainge decided to go with the Celtics, and the Blue Jays took the case to Federal court. Ainge claimed Gillick had given him verbal permission to play basketball. The Blue Jay front office said that was not the case; Bavasi said in court his reaction to Ainge's pronouncement was like "an ailing wife being left behind by her husband for a blond floozy in Boston."

Wide World

"He's going to be a great player," says Red Auerbach. "Not just a good one."

The problem, you see, is that 23-year-old Danny Ainge is just too talented for his own good.

The jury agreed that Ainge had no right to break his baseball contract. It was said that the Blue Jays wanted to beat Auerbach more than they wanted to keep Ainge, but legally it did not matter: The court ruled that Danny Ainge still belonged to Toronto. Ainge, vowing that he was seriously through with baseball, returned to Brigham Young to coach the basketball junior varsity.

As if all this weren't enough for him to contend with, Michele gave birth to their second child, son Austin, in October. "The whole affair put a lot of pressure on my family," Danny concedes. Michele is willing to go a step further. "I didn't really care which he played," she said recently. "I just wanted him to be happy. But I will say this: When we made the decision to jump to basketball, we didn't have any idea what all it would entail. If we had known, we probably wouldn't have made that step."

Auerbach saw in Ainge's versatility the reincarnation of former Celtic John Havlicek.

Still, Danny stood his ground, and the painful negotiations between the two clubs began, with the Blue Jays demanding what amounted to a $1-million ransom. Finally, on Nov. 27, a full month after the start of the N.B.A. season, the Celtics managed to win Ainge's release and sign him. Best estimates put the payoff to the Blue Jays at $500,000, with Ainge signing a Celtic contract for either two or four years (so it will not expire in 1984 along with that of Larry Bird, Boston's millionaire star) for between $400,000 and $500,000 a year.

Predictably, Ainge has started slowly, playing seven or eight minutes a game. Rare is the rookie who ever breaks into the Celtic lineup under the best of conditions, and Ainge missed the entire pre-season and a month of play. Right now, as the team's fifth guard, playing mostly in noncritical situations, Ainge is proving to be a fine shooter, though his floor game and timing remain inconsistent. "My game has been spotty so far," Ainge concedes. "Good moments and bad moments. But I wanted very badly to be a Celtic, and I'm just glad to have it all done. The other players were great from the start. They've gone out of their way to make me feel comfortable, on and off the court. It makes you feel part of the group when you get razzed by everyone else."

Jerry Wachter/F O S

No-hit Ainge sang the blues in Toronto, where he never batted above .243.

For their part, the veterans on the club like Ainge's look on the court. Says forward Cedric "Cornbread" Maxwell: "He can't look like a seasoned veteran. Right now, though, I see his potential as a pro. He shoots the ball extremely well. He plays good defense. He's a player who's going to help this team in the future."

Insists Auerbach, "He's going to be a great player, not just a good one. He's got that baby face and guys think he's kind of weak, but he's really a tough kid. He's got the quickness, he's got the shot, and he's got a lot of intestinal fortitude. He's a winner. He just needs to learn a little about the pro game. It's only a matter of time."

Ainge likes Boston so much he has already bought a new house in the ritzy suburb of Newton. Now, at last, he feels at home. "I'm a lot more comfortable now than I was," he admits. "I think I can contribute more on the basketball floor than I did on the baseball field." Still, he's well aware of what he's up against. "The first thing I have to do," he says, "is beat somebody out of a job." FW

THE SEXES

By Norman Lobsenz

When Being Apart Brings Couples Together

Is a person who enjoys solitude a poor bet for a marriage partner? Quite the contrary, says family therapist Carl Whitaker of the University of Wisconsin. Couples who enjoy spending time apart actually feel a greater sense of closeness, Whitaker notes, than do men and women who never leave each other's company. In fact, unless a person enjoys separateness, he or she will find it hard to tolerate togetherness.

Being separate does not mean avoiding closeness or keeping a spouse at a distance. It means being able to function as an individual. If you know you can act independently, then it's possible to overcome the fear that being close to another person means being overpowered, a fear that can get in the way of intimacy.

How can couples encourage the growth of personal independence within a loving marriage? Here are some suggestions:

- Enlist each other's support for the idea of independence by talking frankly about your needs and feelings.
- When you want to be alone, be honest and specific about it. Don't expect a partner to "know" when you want to do something on your own.
- Give your partner the right to be alone without getting jealous. Reassure each other that the need to be separate does not mean you are rejecting the other person.

Grooms Getting Their Feet Wet

There's new hope for the man who feels he's been left high and dry when friends give a bridal shower for his fiancée. The "groomal shower" is growing in popularity.

A shower for the groom is a still-rare but expanding phenomenon, write family sociologists Felix Berardo and Hernan Vera of the University of Florida. It is a protest against traditional patterns of sexual segregation, they say, reflecting changing attitudes about marriage and a move toward greater equality between husbands and wives.

But there are some differences between male and female showers. Unlike bridal showers, where presents emphasize aspects of setting up a new home, gifts at the groomal shower the researchers attended were inexpensive and replete with sexual jokes and innuendoes.

How did the groom like testing the waters? "His reaction was essentially a feeling of not knowing how to act," write Berardo and Vera. Still, everyone agreed the event was a "great party" and "lots of fun." FW

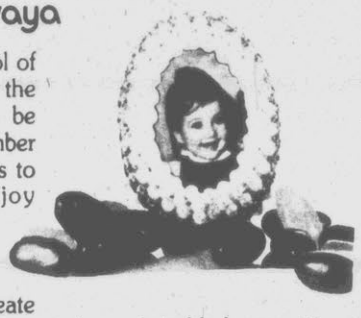
Create Egg-citing Easter Treasures

By Rosalyn Abrevaya



A pearl-studded egg with a favorite photo on it makes a lovely keepsake gift.

Eggs, long the symbol of birth, spring and the Easter season, can be the basis for a number of delightful craft projects to make now and enjoy throughout the year.

Real eggs, plastic eggs and crochet-covered eggs are used to create everything from an Easter-morning treat to a keepsake treasure.

Panorama eggs, the old-fashioned kind, with little scenes inside are made from egg-shaped pantyhose containers covered with a special mixture which includes sugar, water and the juice from fruit. The peek-through windows reveal scenes inside: You can draw the scenes yourself or cut them out of greeting cards.

Make an old-fashioned panorama egg with a little scene inside.

Plastic eggs can also contain wonderful surprises, such as a beanbag bunny which is made from fabric scraps and curls up inside of the egg when not being hugged or tossed!

With our instructions, you also can turn out delicate little baskets using eggshells, plastic eggs, jello molds or egg-carton cups covered with the special mixture mentioned above. Like the panorama eggs, they can be filled with miniature flowers, paper cutouts or candy.

For another delightful decoration, fill a straw basket with crochet-covered eggs. Any beginner can crochet the covers because only one kind of stitch is used.

A jeweled "photo egg" also makes a lovely keepsake gift. To make a "priceless" treasure, mount a snapshot on a real egg and decorate it with simulated pearls

Complete directions with photographs and illustrations for all of these projects are included in the booklet, "Easter Crafts That Last All Year" (#354). For your copy, send $1.25 plus 25¢ postage and handling for first-class mail to:

Weekend Woes: Why Days Off Can Bring On a Headache

By Susan Gordon

For most of us, the weekend means leaving office tensions behind, catching up on sleep and just relaxing. But those precise weekend benefits can actually cause headaches. In fact, "the vast majority of headaches occur during periods of relaxation," says David R. Coddon, M.D., associate professor of neurology and director of the Headache Clinic at The Mount Sinai Medical Center in New York and author of Breakthrough: The Control of Headaches (Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, due out this fall).

Though it hardly seems fair, the body's systems don't adapt readily to a change in their Monday through Friday routine, and in headache-prone people, disrupting the body's patterns can trigger a headache. Here are the causes and the cures for some common weekend headaches.

Changing your sleep pattern: If you wake up at 10 A.M. on Saturday after five days of rising at 7, the change in your blood flow (and/or hormonal system and biorhythms — scientists aren't sure of all the factors) may bring on a headache. In addition, "by sleeping later and missing your usual breakfast time, your blood-sugar level drops," says Seymour Diamond, M.D., director of the Diamond Headache Clinic in Chicago and author of Advice From the Diamond Headache Clinic (International University Press, due out in April).

Dr. Diamond advises setting your alarm for your usual wake-up time, grabbing a bite to eat and then going back to sleep if you want to. Dr. Coddon recommends another approach: Get up at your usual time and treat yourself to a nap later in the day.

Leaving tension behind: The term "tension headache" is a misnomer, Dr. Coddon believes, because on-the-job tension can actually prevent headaches. When you're tense, your body releases adrenaline, which constricts the blood vessels, evening out the flow of blood. When the weekend arrives, without the usual stress, the adrenaline recedes, the flow of blood is no longer as evenly regulated and a headache is more likely to occur.

To avoid this type of headache, Dr. Diamond advises that you plan weekend activities and keep busy. "Maybe relaxation is not for you!" he says.

Change in eating habits: A weekend can mean lots of snacks and party foods. Unfortunately, consuming too much food can alter your body chemistry and cause a headache. In particular, avoid eating too many foods containing sodium nitrates, which dilate the blood vessels, often causing a headache. Nitrates are used primarily in preserved meats — such as hot dogs, bologna and salami. Interestingly, undereating can also cause a headache. As mentioned earlier, there's a drop in blood sugar when you miss a meal. Shoppers and museum visitors who skip lunch are particularly prone to this type of headache. A glass of orange juice or a candy bar can temporarily relieve the pain (because of the sugar).

Reports one neurologist: "The vast majority of headaches occur during periods of relaxation."

Alcohol: Even if you're normally not a headache sufferer, you may have experienced "the morning after" headache. Alcohol, like sodium nitrates, is a vasal dilator (it dilates blood vessels) and alcoholic drinks contain other substances besides alcohol, such as tannin, which can interact with the alcohol itself to change your body chemistry.

If you wake up with a headache caused by overindulgence, take three plain aspirins and have a cup of coffee with sugar. The sugar will boost your blood-sugar level, and the caffeine will constrict the blood vessels (as adrenaline does).

Caffeine withdrawal: If you're accustomed to drinking coffee, tea or cola during the week and then cut way down on the weekend, the withdrawal could be giving you a headache. Try drinking at least a percentage of the amount you usually consume on weekdays, or cut back on your caffeine consumption during the week to your weekend level. FW

Zoysia Lawn Wasn't Mowed Or Watered For A Month! Not A Weed In Sight!

If your family is like mine, you're squeezing every dollar to make sure you have enough to go around. And it looks like things are going to stay that way.

One way to cut expenses is to cut the costs, and work, of lawn care. For example, a woman wrote about her zoysia lawn that she had mowed it only twice ALL SUMMER. She hadn't spent a cent on weed-killers. Not one cent for fertilizers. Yet her lawn was as green and weed-free as a pile carpet.

ZOSYIA LAWNS STAY GREEN THROUGH HEAT AND DROUGHTS

Let the scorching sun burn lawns around you into hay—your zoysia stays fresh and green, an emerald isle of beauty. I have yet to water my own zoysia lawn. One day I saw that my sprinkler had gotten cobwebs! In Iowa, a zoysia lawn was declared the area's "Top Lawn—nearly perfect." Yet this lawn had been watered only once that entire summer!

CUT YOUR WATER BILLS. SAVE THE WORK OF LAWN SPRINKLING. START A FAMOUS ZOYSIA GRASS LAWN NOW.

Weed-killing chemicals are NOT NEEDED for a weed-free Zoysia Lawn

How is it possible that Famous Meyer Z-52 Zoysia stays weed-free without using expensive, risky chemicals? It grows so thick that crabgrass (weed) seeds don't get enough light to germinate!

Has Cut Mowing To Once A Month

Zoysia grows sideways, not just up like ordinary grass. It forms a thick, interwoven carpet of turf that keeps its well-groomed look weeks longer. It cuts your mowing by half, 2/3 or more!

No-Reseeding—Not Ever!—With Lakeland's Famous Zoysia

Plug in Lakeland Zoysia and never buy grass seed again. Zoysia lawns don't grow old; they just grow better. They sparkle under 100° heat . . . stay green through droughts. They resist diseases and insects which ruin ordinary grasses. After sharp frosts, they only give up their green color, then green up better than ever each following Spring. Famous Zoysia gives you the closest thing to an indestructible lawn you have ever seen.

Ends Washouts on Steep Slopes Perfect Where Other Grasses Do Poorly

Deep-rooted zoysia holds soil in place, stops it from washing away from slopes. It's your perfect answer for worn out or weedy areas, too.

In a typical newspaper article I read (quote):

NO NEED TO DIG UP YOUR LAWN
PLUG IN Z 52 ZOYSIA

"upgrading your current lawn" requires the right selection of grass seed plus "regular applications of fertilizer (and lime where needed)." This article also said you need, "weed, insect and disease control." Sound familiar? Of course!

Why not forget all that work and expense, and plug in Famous Meyer Z-52 Zoysia? To upgrade your lawn with zoysia, don't dig it up. Just set plugs into holes in the soil a foot apart or less. Let those plugs spread toward each other ao form a carpet of solid turf. Growth is so vigorous it chokes out old growth you want to get rid of, WEEDS INCLUDED.

From Coast to Coast People Write to Mike Senkiw

From Hudson, N.Y., E. LaRoche writes how he planted plugs "in the worst possible place—clay with weeds and gravel . . . It formed a 4" thick carpet of grass. Not children, dogs, cats, rabbits, extremely hot sun or drought could kill it."

From Sacramento, Calif., J.M. writes how he bought our Zoysia "for a weed infested spot—it took care of the problem."

From Indiana, M.A. Low, Sr. writes how he visited a physician friend in Albert Lea, Minn. where he saw a "whole back yard was entirely in zoysia and it was beautiful...a deep green."

The success of many thousands of delighted Famous® Zoysia owners awaits you. Prove it to yourself today.

DOES 60 lbs. OF TOMATOES FROM ONE YIELD SOUND INCREDIBLE?

NOT IF YOU OWN THE Amazing TREE TOMATO

Noted Citriculturist of New Zealand says:
"Ripening in New Zealand from late April to early November, the tree tomato has a very long fruiting season. Its wide range of culinary uses make it a valuable winter and spring fruit . . . a welcome addition to the menu." "Although introduced into New Zealand many years ago, it is only in recent years that the tree tomato has become better known for its many uses. It is now much sought after, and its popularity is indicated by the high price realized for it on local markets . . . Under suitable conditions the plant will produce from 40 to 60 lbs. of fruit annually."

From New Zealand comes the biggest garden sensation of the century . . . THE PERENNIAL TOMATO!

GROW IT OUTDOORS AS A TREE—INDOORS AS A HOUSEPLANT!
The TREE TOMATO will thrive marvelously—indoors or out! If you live in a temperate zone, plant it outdoors and enjoy its bountiful, exotic beauty in your garden! WAVE AFTER WAVE OF SUCCULENT TREE TOMATOES GROW AS QUICK AS YOU CAN PICK 'EM!

Landmark Smoker Study:

Merit Taste Scores!

Newest research confirms MERIT delivers taste of cigarettes having up to twice the tar.

One low tar cigarette consistently proves it can meet the taste demands of higher tar smokers.

The cigarette: 'Enriched Flavor'™ MERIT.

MERIT Beats Toughest Competitors.

In impartial tests where brand identity was concealed, the overwhelming majority of smokers reported MERIT taste equal to—or better than—leading higher tar brands.

Moreover, when tar levels were revealed, 2 out of 3 chose the MERIT combination of low tar and good taste.

Taste Debate Ends.

In a second part of the same study, smokers confirm that MERIT taste is a major factor in completing their successful switch from higher tar brands.

Confirmed: 9 out of 10 former higher tar smokers report MERIT is an easy switch, that they didn't give up taste in switching, and that MERIT is the best-tasting low tar they've ever tried.

Year after year, in study after study, MERIT remains unbeaten. The proven taste alternative to higher tar smoking—is MERIT.

MONEY

Can an IRA Really Make You a Millionaire?

By Andrea Pawlyna

The new Individual Retirement Accounts (IRA's) are being touted as a wage earner's dream of financial security come true. The question is, are they as good as they sound?

IRA's have been around since 1975, but in the past they were available only to workers not covered by company pension plans. Since Jan. 1, however, when the Economic Recovery Tax Act took effect, anyone earning an income (and this includes about 80 million working Americans) automatically becomes eligible to start his or her own tax-sheltered retirement plan — with compounded interest.

Under the law, individuals are allowed to contribute $2,000 a year to an IRA. Couples with one working spouse can invest $2,250 and two-income couples can salt away $4,000 yearly.

Whatever money you put into an IRA is deductible on your income tax return. For example, if you have a taxable income of $25,000, you will pay $700 less in Federal income taxes next year if $2,000 of that income is deposited in an IRA.

What's more, earnings from IRA contributions are not taxed until you begin withdrawing money after age 59½ — when, if you've retired, your tax bracket will be lower. How fast your money grows, of course, depends upon the interest rate that is being paid by the institution you invest with, and it will vary depending on economic conditions.

Andrea Pawlyna is a freelance writer specializing in consumer affairs.

Consider the following: A 30-year-old worker who invests $2,000 a year in an IRA for the next 35 years (assuming daily compounding and an average interest rate of 12 percent) will retire with the grand sum of $1,161,137. Your money multiplies fastest when interest is compounded daily, rather than annually or quarterly.

"Becoming a millionaire is naturally going to be an enticing factor," says Rita Downey of Baltimore Federal Savings & Loan, which has been heavily promoting its IRA "Millionaire's Club."

There are a variety of IRA's to choose from. Banks, savings and loan associations, insurance companies, credit unions, brokerage houses, even the U.S. Treasury Department, are offering IRA's in the form of certificates of deposit, annuities, stocks and mutual funds. Some employers are also setting up payroll-deduction plans for their workers.

Which approach is best for you? Banks and other lending institutions offer security, but they tend to pay lower interest rates. Stocks and mutual funds, on the other hand, dangle potentially greater earnings before you, but they pose an element of risk.

Financial planners point out that your age, current financial assets and existing retirement coverage should be carefully weighed before deciding where to put your money.

"I'd tell a younger person [30 to 40] to put the money in an aggressive growth fund of stocks and mutual funds within an IRA," says Harry Guinivan, associate director of public information of the Investment Company Institute in Washington, D.C., a group which represents mutual funds. Counselors often advise switching to a conservative, Federally insured bank certificate as retirement nears because it offers a steadier return.

Contributions to an IRA can be large or small, depending on what you can afford, as long as you don't exceed the annual limits set by law. But once the money is deposited, it cannot be withdrawn before you reach age 59½ without your incurring substantial penalties.

According to Internal Revenue Service rules, early withdrawals are taxable as ordinary income. In addition, a 10-percent penalty is levied on the amount withdrawn. (These penalties are waived in the event of death or disability.)

When you reach 59½, you may begin making withdrawals without penalty, although you do not have to take any money out until age 70½. From then on, a minimum withdrawal schedule is required.

The IRS permits you to transfer your money from one account to another once a year, provided the money is reinvested within two months of withdrawal.

IRA's, however, aren't for everyone. Money needed for a down payment on a house or for a college education, for example, should be left fairly liquid. And if inflation continues at its present pace, even $1 million won't buy much in 35 years. It will have about as much buying power as $50,000 today, according to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics. Aerobic Nutrition, by Don Mannerberg, M.D., and June Roth, published by Hawthorn, New York, ($13.50), should help you to look and feel better. It is a fascinating book concerned with how to achieve good health through good nutrition and good living habits. The introduction states, "The secret of preserving youth and vitality so that each day can be used to its fullest, both physically and mentally, is to maintain good oxygen delivery to the brain . . . . There's a direct relationship of nutrition to the availability of oxygen to the blood. That is what aerobic nutrition is all about. . . . A change of daily diet to permit an unblocked flow of oxygen throughout the body, along with a change of attitude that will keep the muscles of the body in frequent motion, could mean a change in your prognosis for a long and vital life."

The book also contains an aerobic nutrition weight-loss diet and a large collection of recipes. Each recipe has been tabulated for protein, unsaturated and saturated fat, carbohydrates and calories.

The authors are well qualified. Dr. Mannerberg, former medical director of the Cooper Clinic of the Aerobics Center, Dallas, Texas, is now in private practice. June Roth has written many nutrition books and cookbooks, including Salt-Free Cooking with Herbs and Spices (Contemporary Books, Chicago).

Would you give away $15,000?

Asking anyone if he would give away $15,000 may sound like a foolish question, because the answer is obviously "NO!" Yet, if you plan to build on your property and finance your new home, paying this amount and more in extra financing charges is very, very easy to do.

of nearly $15,000 over the life of a 20-year mortgage. That's a difference of $62.00 more in your monthly payment, each month for 20 years. If you increase the cash price just slightly, to $35,000, you will end up paying a total in excess of $17,000 MORE. Would you give away that much money?

CHILDREN

The Importance Of Being Praised

By Jody Gaylin

When Little Jack Horner stuck in his thumb, pulled out a plum and said, "What a good boy am I," he may really have been on to something. Praise is an important ingredient in raising a happy, confident child.

Unfortunately, according to Donald Peters, professor of human development at Pennsylvania State University, some parents tend to overpraise their children, while others tend to underpraise. Nonetheless, the right kind of praise and the right amount can stimulate and motivate a child, aid in the development of his talents and bolster his self-esteem. Child-development experts offer some do's and don'ts:

The Bettmann Archive

Little Jack Horner: Plumb proud.

•Be specific. When Tommy builds a terrific tower out of blocks, don't just tell him what a good boy he is. It's a positive remark but too vague. And don't say something like, "You'll be a fine engineer someday and make us all so proud." By doing that you are really just using your child's accomplishment for your own self-aggrandizement, points out child psychiatrist Richard A. Gardner in his book, Understanding Children (Creative Therapeutics). Instead, let your child know what an impressive tower he built. By linking your approval to his specific achievement, you not only encourage him to do more but also help him learn what your values and standards are.

When your child does something bad instead of good, the same rule applies. Make sure it is the behavior, not the child, you condemn. A child who spills his milk at the dinner table should not be told that he is clumsy and awkward. Such negative labeling, says certified school psychologist Bonnie Maslin, only damages his self-image. Instead, agree that it is a shame the milk was spilled — and teach him how to clean it up and avoid doing it again.

According to Gardner, some parents go too far with their praise because they cannot permit themselves to see any defects in their children. A parent who is disproportionately overjoyed at his daughter's success on the tennis court, says Maslin, puts extraordinary pressure on her. Too much praise can frustrate a child by setting goals that are too high. On the other hand. . .

•Don't be too honest. Despite all the warning about praising too much, most of the experts agree that there is a place for the gentle white lie. When your 4-year-old brings home a sticky, messy Mother's Day card, it would be mean for you to comment on the artistic merits of the work according to adult standards, says Gardner. Besides, he adds, when you tell him or her the drawing is beautiful, you are really responding to the feelings of love poured into the creation and your response to those efforts.

•Avoid "loaded" praise. A parent who says, "The picture is beautiful, but wouldn't it be better to put the tree over there," or, "The 98 on your math test is fine — maybe next time you'll bring home a 100," implicitly criticizes his child, conveying to him that he hasn't quite measured up, says Maslin. This type of praise doesn't stimulate or encourage a child to repeat a noteworthy performance; it only results in anger or frustration.

•Be consistent. According to Donald Peters, some parents dish out praise only when they are feeling good. Praise should be based on your child's behavior, not on your mood.

Peters believes that no child is too young for praise. He urges parents to pay close attention to their child's behavior so that they can be specific in their praise. Most parents don't need to be reminded when to scold their child, but when it comes to teaching him right and wrong, a pat on the back can be even more effective than a swat on the behind. FW

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.
The Road to Raleigh is:
Yellow lines and just laid asphalt.
Endless stretches of black ribbon that run all the way to where the sun disappears.
It's telephone poles and fence posts,
you keep passin' 'em one by one.
It's those rows of corn, that sea of wheat.
Tall trees blocking out the sun.
It's 13 speeds in an overdrive gearbox.
And a CB handle
when you've got the country music turned off.
The road to Raleigh is a man who gets up when he wants to...
goes to bed when he says.
Pushes himself to the limit and then relaxes with gusto.
He doesn't give a damn what you think.
The road to Raleigh has the feel of hard rain and blowin' snow.
The light of a rising sun,
the pale of a pea soup fog.
It's got the smell of hot coffee.
And the stench of diesel fuel.
It's got men.
It's got freedom.
It's got the flavor you can only get
When you're on the road to Raleigh.
Take the road to flavor.

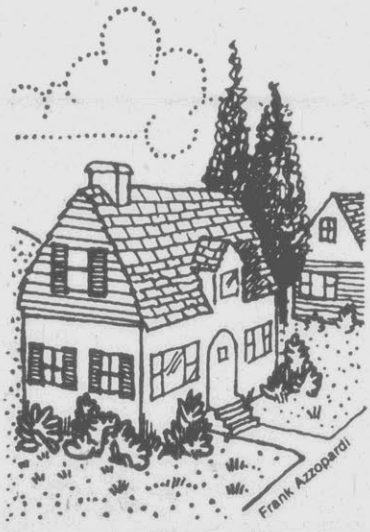
WHAT IN THE WORLD

By Eliot Kaplan

THE SITE REPORT

Atlanta is one peachy city. In fact, according to the Places Rated Almanac, it's the best spot to live in America.

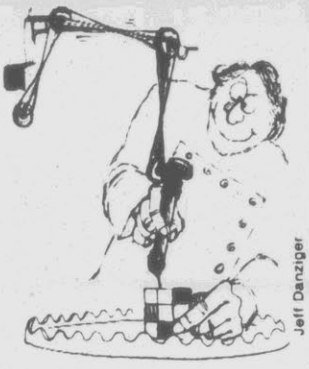
This fascinating new book by Richard Boyer and David Savageau looks at 277 metropolitan areas, comparing government statistics in nine categories — climate, housing, health care, crime, transportation, education, recreation, culture and economics. Among its thousands of findings: Buffalo has a milder climate than Phoenix. Charleston, W. Va., is the foggiest city in the U.S. St. Cloud, Minn., is the least crime-ridden city in the country. (Miami is the most crime-ridden.) Billings, Mont., has the most bowling alleys per capita; Tuscaloosa, Ala., the fewest. The worst place to find a drink is Florence, Ala.; the best is Eau Claire, Wis.



Here are the book's top 15 U.S. metro areas:

1. Atlanta.
2. Washington, D.C.
3. Greensboro-Winston Salem-High Point, N.C.
4. Pittsburgh.
5. Seattle—Everett, Wash.
6. Philadelphia.
7. Syracuse.
8. Portland, Ore.
9. Raleigh-Durham, N.C.
10. Dallas-Forth Worth.
11. Knoxville, Tenn.
12. Nashville-Davidson, Tenn.
13. Anaheim-Santa Ana-Garden Grove, Calif.
14. (tie) Cleveland. San Francisco-Oakland.

THE ULTIMATE SOLUTION



If these are your sentiments about that infernal multicolored toy, pick up the new book Dissolving Rubik's Cube, offering 93 novel ways to dispose of the sucker once and for all. As author Ken Lawless told us, "I was amused by all those 'simple solution' cube books, which are about as simple as the theory of relativity. I wanted a way to insure the cube stayed solved, something along the lines of a hand grenade."

A TAXING ANALYSIS

If you've ever considered working abroad, 1982 is a great time to try it. Provisions in the new tax law allow expatriates to exclude up to $75,000 in overseas income from U.S. taxes.

Several sections of the tax law have now become applicable and will affect your 1983 return, including a reduction in the minimum tax rate on unearned income and easing of the "marriage penalty" for two-income couples.

Still, despite the Reagan Administration's grandiose claims, the new plan rates only a D–, according to Karen Arenson, author of The New York Times Guide to Making the New Tax Law Work for You. "It has only worsened inequities that were already there," she told us, "by providing its greatest benefit to the rich. It would have been fairer and generated as much revenue for the Government to eliminate loopholes completely and just cut the tax rates."

BORN TO CRIME?

The causes of crime are many and varied, but a recent study indicates that a predisposition to criminal behavior may be inherited.

Dr. Sarnoff Mednick, professor of psychology at U.S.C., studied records of 14,427 children adopted in the 1920's in Denmark (chosen for its precise record-keeping). He found that children whose biological fathers had criminal records and whose adoptive parents did not were twice as likely to engage in crime as those whose biological fathers were not criminal. And the likelihood increased if the father was a repeat offender. He speculates that such crime-related factors as nervous-system disorders, low intelligence and alcoholic tendencies are genetically transmitted.

"The environment still is the most crucial factor in determining criminality," Mednick told us. "But biological factors can make the difference in situations where the social setting would not predict crime."

He notes that the bulk of violent crime is committed by a tiny percentage of people and says he hopes his research will lead to comprehensive testing of first-time offenders and voluntary treatment for potential recidivists.

CONCEPTION & THE PILL

Women who use birth-control pills take longer to conceive after they stop than do women who use other forms of contraception, a new study says.

As reported recently, a team of Boston doctors interviewed 3,214 married women who had had planned pregnancies. They found that while 77 percent of those using other forms of birth control had conceived within six months of their last contraceptive use, only 57 percent of Pill users could make the same claim. Similarly, 25 percent of ex-Pill users required more than 13 months to conceive, compared to 12 percent of those using other contraceptives.

The doctors note that while many couples are considered infertile if they fail to conceive within 12 months after stopping birth control, for Pill users 15 months might be a more appropriate interval.

can I shine
Whene'er my FIRST

With this my SEC-
OND did combine
To make a happy hit.
My WHOLE with both fixed in line
Snug as they can

Can you come up with the one-word answer?

No fair peeking.

Prince Valiant

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

CREATED BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: A SECOND WARSHIP BEARS DOWN ON THE TRIREME.

ITS FIERY MISSILES SPUTTER HARMLESSLY ON THE VINEGAR-SOAKED HIDES. NOW PRINCE VALIANT TAKES THE TILLER. THE TRIREME CURLS ABOUT AND GLIDES BACK INTO RANGE. GAWAIN'S CROSSBOW SNAPS TO LIFE. THE ENEMY VESSEL BECOMES A FUNERAL PYRE.

ONE IMPERIAL WARSHIP REMAINS, LYING BROADSIDE BETWEEN SVEN FORK-BEARD'S TRIREME AND OPEN SEA. "RAMMING SPEED," VAL SHOUTS.

SVEN QUICKENS THE TEMPO. THE OARSMEN STRAIN. "HOLD ON," SVEN WARNS MERRILY. LIKE A MEAT CLEAVER ON STALE BREAD, HIS TRIREME SPLITS THE HULL. WITH NARY A GLANCE AT THE BOBBING FLOTSAM, SVEN SETS A COURSE FOR THE MISTY ISLES.

WILL VAL ARRIVE IN TIME? ALETA CALLS TO A LADY-IN-WAITING: "THE MOMENT IS NEAR." AN URGENT MESSAGE FINDS PRIAM BUSY AMONG THE POOR OF THE MISTY ISLES. JUSTINIAN'S PHYSICIAN SMILES. THE TIMING IS PERFECT. HE TAKES ASIDE HIS ACCOMPLICE, THE MIDWIFE THETA.

"WE ARE WANTED AT THE PALACE. THIS WOMAN HAS JUST DELIVERED A STILLBORN BOY. BRING IT SECRETLY TO ALETA'S ROOM."

SPRING HAS KISSED THE EARTH ONCE MORE. THE BIRDS HAVE LAID THEIR EGGS. THE FOXES GUARD THEIR DENS. THE SHEEP ON THE HILLSIDES ARE FEISTY AND PROTECTIVE. AWAITING PRIAM, ALETA DREAMILY SAVORS THE SEASON, CONSCIOUS OF THE MANY THINGS THAT WILL SOON BE HATCHED, UNAWARE THAT ONE OF THEM IS A PLOT.
