Columbia Crew Suggests Tile Checkup

By HOWARD BENEDICT AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Columbia, its tail broiled by the sun, soared through space today, its astronauts a little tired but eager to guide the ship through a demanding series of tests. They suggested one additional task: an inspection of some missing and chipped tiles on Columbia's nose.

Overall, the mission was proceeding nicely on its second of seven days.

"We've really got a gem going here," flight director Neil Hutchinson said at Mission Control. "We executed everything we wanted to do the first day, and we're looking forward to a really busy schedule for the next five or six."

Early today, Earth time, astronauts Jack R. Lousma and C. Gordon Fullerton were awakened to Willie Nelson's country music classic, "On The Road Again." Fullerton reported, "We've read the morning paper off the teleprinter," referring to overnight messages from Mission Control.

Lousma said that several of Columbia's 30,000 heat-protection tiles were missing and Fullerton suggested, "I'm thinkin' we ought to work in a little tile inspection" during the mid-day exercise of Columbia's robot arm.

The silica tiles protect Columbia during reentry and the missing and damaged squares are apparently located in "thermally benign," that is non-critical, area above the so-called sear line on Columbia's nose, according to the overnight flight director, Harold Draughon.

"It's not a matter of concern, it's a matter of engineering curiosity," said Charles Redmond of NASA.

The astronauts said they got a lousy night's sleep and reported uneven cabin temperatures — sometimes too warm, sometimes a little chilly.

Overnight, said Lousma, "There was noise in my ear every time we hit the high point in the orbit." Draughon speculated that ground radar, from a source located in an area including China and Iran, might be responsible.

Fullerton said, "I stripped down to my underwear for a while," while trying to sleep, but that it was cool enough this morning that "we both have our jackets on."

Doctors who spoke by radio with Lousma and Fullerton before they retired for their first night reported "they're enjoying what they're doing."

Especially Fullerton, the rookie.

"Unbelievable — much fun," the space novice said Monday. At one point he was so busy gazing at the spectacular view that Mission Control broke in: "If we can interrupt your sight-seeing, we have a few items for you."

Lousma suffered from some "slight nausea," on Monday, but Draughon said this wasn't unexpected since he had suffered motion sickness and thrown up several times during the 59-day 1973 Skylab mission.

Lousma took two pills, and before turning in he told Mission Control's Sally Ride that he felt fine, ready for today's busy schedule.

Among today's tasks, the astronauts planned extensive checks of the 50-foot mechanical arm, flexing its metallic muscles; the first serious attempts at processing drugs in orbit, and thermal tests, subjecting the craft to the high heat and deep chill of space.

Abandoning Of Railroad Seen Likely

By JERRY RAYNOR Reflector Staff Writer

Unless the state of North Carolina or private opponents appeal to the Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC), the Seaboard Coast Line Railroad Company's line from Parmele to Washington will be approved for abandonment effective April 10.

The ruling to permit closure was made March 11 by Edward H. McGrail, an administrative law judge who conducted a January hearing for ICC on the proposal to close the line. Disclosure of the order was made public Monday.

At a general interest public hearing held Monday by the N.C. Department of Transportation in Williamston, DOT representative Mark Bogg indicated the possibility of state action, but no firm commitment in that direction was voiced.

In his ruling, McGrail referred to the economic burden placed on the company and on interstate commerce in keeping the line operative, and said the continued operation of the line would outweigh the financial difficulties placed on businessmen and communities that would be affected by closure of the line.

Following the September 1981 request for abandonment, the state Department of Transportation, officials in Pitt, Martin and Beaufort counties, and several businessmen using the line for shipments opposed abandonment. Opponents cited a number of adverse factors abandonment would have on the area.

One of the Pitt County businessmen who has actively protested closure is J. Beverly Congleton of the Stokes-Congleton firm in Stokes.

"There's nothing more we can do now," Congleton said. "We have fought as hard as we could. I see no choice but to let it go down the drain. The chamber of commerce in Washington and the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce have gone to bat to try to save the line, but to no effect."

The Stokes-Congleton General Merchandise firm is typical of rural shippers who for years have used the Seaboard Line, primarily to receive incoming shipments of material.

"We get from 1,200 to 1,500 tons of limestone yearly by rail from Tennessee," Congleton said. "We went to considerable expense to build a block and concrete ramp for unloading, plus paying a yearly $200 fee."

Congleton noted that, throughout the nation, the action of railroad companies to abandon service to rural areas has become a pattern. He hit what he calls "their attitude of monopoly, that you had to get service from them on their terms, like it or not."

"As an example, when we order carloads of limestone, we do so on a staggered basis, two cars at a time. But Coastline would let the shipment pile up at Parmele, then bring in four or five carloads at once, which we could not immediately unload. As a result, we would unload two and have to pay $25 to $30 a day for not having the ability to unload the other two or three cars on arrival."

Congleton said the railroad's decision to abandon smaller lines has been obvious for years. "They long ago decided not to spend any money on upkeep, they have let the road beds deteriorate so that trains have to creep along at 10 to 12 miles an hour," he said.

"It's hard to understand all the talk years ago about enhancing the economy of an area by putting in rail service, then later turn around and stymie growth of an area by taking it away. It's no good."

Congleton said that, in the case of limestone shipments, it will be impossible to have the heavy material shipped in from Tennessee by truck. "The truckers simply cannot pull 25 tons of the material over the hills. Even if they could, there's no back load here for them to take back."

Summing up, Congleton said, "There's no way our business can afford to spend the money it would take to make an effective appeal. All of us who use the line can only hope the state will be able to take action before it's too late."

The amount of annual loss by Seaboard cited in its September request for closure was placed at $9,000. In his ruling, McGrail contends there are no commitments by industries to locate in the Parmele-to-Washington area, and no assurances that new users would provide enough rail

62 Applicants

The City Council committee charged with finding a candidate for city manager of Greenville is continuing to receive and review applications for the job, committee chairman Louis Clark said today.

Clark said that as of Monday the committee had received 62 applications "from all over the United States." Only five of the 62 are from North Carolina prospects, he said.

Clark said the three-member committee anticipates that it will receive applications until April 9, although that date is tentative. Following the cutoff, the committee hopes to narrow the candidate list down to "approximately five" and then invite those prospects and their spouses to Greenville for interviews, he said.

Clark, who is serving with council members Janice Buck and Stuart Shinn on the search board, said the committee anticipates narrowing the list to a final candidate for council consideration by the mid to latter part of May.

Clark, emphasizing that "no decisions will be made until after all applications are received," said he is sending personal letters to all applicants acknowledging receipt of their data and thanking them for their interest in Greenville.

The committee is seeking to fill the post created by the resignation of Ed Wyatt, who left Feb. 28 to assume new duties as city manager of Fairfax, Va. Gail Meeks, who served as budget and management officer under Wyatt, was named by the council to serve as interim city manager.

Clark said that, with operations running smoothly at city hall, the committee feels no pressure to rush into selecting a final candidate.

Smallest Inflation Gain Since July 1980 Cited

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tempered by falling gasoline prices, inflation rose at an annual rate of just 3 percent in February, the smallest gain since July 1980, and much the product, economists said, of the sharp recession.

In advance of today's report by the Labor Department, some economists even predicted the recession, a worldwide oil surplus and abundant food supplies might actually produce small declines in the Consumer Price Index in the coming months.

For February, the department reported today, inflation rose a seasonally adjusted 0.2 percent, off from the 0.3 percent of January, until last month the smallest advance since the summer of 1980.

February's gain was well under the 1 percent increase of February 1981. If last month's figure held for 12 straight months, the annual rate would be 3 percent.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said in response to the inflation report, "We believe it's good news for every American and it shows a steady decline in inflation over the past several months."

"The president has cut inflation, cut the budget, made good on his promises," Speakes said.

For all of 1981, inflation rose 8.9 percent, well below the 12.4 percent of 1980 and the smallest increase in four years. Most analysts are forecasting an increase ranging from 6 percent to 7 percent for all of this year.

Consumer prices rose 7.7 percent in the last 12 months, the smallest yearly advance since the period ending in June 1978, the department said. In another sign of the slowdown in inflation, the department also said consumer prices had risen at an annual rate of 3.7 percent for the three months ending in February, the lowest gain since the period ending in May 1976. Today's report said food prices climbed 0.6 percent in February, a little lower than January's 0.7 percent. Housing costs were up 0.4 percent, about in line with the gains of the last three months.

Energy costs, however, tumbled, as did prices for new cars due to the rebate programs offered by domestic automakers.

Gasoline prices fell 2.3 percent after a 1.7 percent drop in January. Last month's decline was the biggest since the 2.7 percent drop of April 1981.

New car prices were down 0.8 percent, following a 0.1 percent fall in the previous month. Used car prices were up 0.5 percent, compared with the 0.3 percent of January.

For other segments of the economy, today's report said:

—Housing costs were up 0.4 percent last month, reflecting the 0.4 percent rise in home prices and a 0.2

percent decline in mortgage rates. Rent rose 0.4 percent. Fuel oil prices and electricity costs were down while natural gas prices rose, but at a slower pace than in January.

—Prices for food bought at grocery stores rose 0.8 percent, a little less than the 1 percent advance of January. Fruit and vegetable prices were up substantially, but not as much as in January. Big increases were reported in prices for pork and eggs, but declines were felt in beef and poultry costs.

—Medical care costs rose 0.7 percent, a little better than the 0.8 percent rise of January. The increase was due to higher hospital costs and physicians' charges.

—Apparel and apparel upkeep costs were up 0.4 percent, after a 0.1 percent decline in January. Higher prices for clothing, the department said, reflected "both a return to regular prices from sales and the introduction of spring wear."

MONEY BACK

I bought, or thought I bought, a 3-year subscription to Nation's Business, the monthly publication of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States in May, 1978. My check for $49.75 was cashed. Since then I've written and called numerous times and have never been successful in getting my money back or the subscription started. Now what I'd like is my money back. J.D.

Hotline called the toll-free number of the Chamber of Commerce of the U.S. and talked to a woman in the Kensington, Md. office. She promised your money back if we'd send a copy of your cancelled check. This we did, along with a copy of the original order form. When it had not come after about three weeks, we called again and that time she had it sent. She could not explain the four-year delay, but you say you feel $50 richer, even though someone else has had the use of your money for all those years.

Supreme Court To Study Police Immunity Rulings

By RICHARD CARELLI Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — Carlisle Briscoe was not satisfied when an appeals court exonerated him from a burglary and assault conviction so he sued the police officer who had originally testified against him.

But a federal trial judge and the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals threw out the suit, saying that police officers "as witnesses are absolutely immune from... liability and were therefore properly dismissed (as defendants)."

On Monday, the Supreme Court said it will use Briscoe's lawsuit, along with two unrelated cases, to decide whether police officers accused of lying on the witness stand can be sued by the defendants they testified against.

The justices will review rulings that police officers enjoy "absolute immunity" from such suits seeking monetary damages.

Briscoe was convicted in a 1977 trial, but a state appeals court later overturned the conviction because of insufficient evidence.

Briscoe then sued Brington, Ind., Police Sgt. Martin LaHue, charging that LaHue falsely testified that fingerprints found at a crime scene could be linked to Briscoe.

Briscoe's suit, based on a much-used 1871 federal civil rights law, charged that LaHue knew that an FBI report showed no worthwhile fingerprints had been lifted from the scene.

The lower federal courts dismissed Briscoe's suit, claiming that officers have immunity.

Lawyer Edmund Moran Jr. of Chicago, representing Briscoe and one-time criminal defendants Chris Vickers Sr. and James Ballard in a Cedar Lake, Ind., case, said the consequences of the lower court rulings "are far-reaching for future litigants who wish to make police officers answer in damages for lying at their trials."

Fort Wayne's Morale Rising; Water Falling

By JOHN M. DYLE Associated Press Writer

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) — As floodwaters fell, morale was on the rise in Fort Wayne, where schools reopened, residents returned to waterlogged homes and power was being restored in parts of the city.

The real toll of a week of flooding was expected to surface today as the Flood Victims Assistance Center opened.

Thousands of applications for assistance were expected to be filed by many of the 9,000 people who were evacuated from their homes. Mayor Winfield Moses Jr. planned to ask the City Council to extend the flood emergency for 30 days.

"The immediate threat of flooding has past, but the impact of the flooding is still very much with us," Moses said. "We are undergoing an extensive and, hopefully, rapid flood victims assistance and reconstruction program."

Flood waters from the Maumee, St. Mary's and St. Joseph rivers, which converge in this city of 170,000, have been dropping since they crested early Thursday at near-record levels. It was the city's worst flood since 1913.

Secretary of Energy James B. Edwards visited Fort Wayne on Monday night "to get a rundown on how the flood cleanup is starting."

"I want to tell you how much the nation appreciated the volunteerism that was expressed so freely and openly here by so many people, particularly the young people," said Edwards, who also was attending a political fundraiser. "It's just a fine example of America at its best."

The assistance center, billed as a "one-stop" clearinghouse for flood victims' problems and questions, was to be staffed by federal, state and local officials who would counsel victims or help them apply for aid. Private agencies also would be on hand to provide food, clothing and other items.

Dear Abby

Woman's Sagging Morale Needs a Little Lift

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Do you know of any doctor who would give me a face-lift free of charge? When I get up in the morning I hate to look at myself in the mirror because of the way I look. I am a 48-year-old woman, but I look like 80! I would be willing to let a doctor experiment on me like a guinea pig. Regardless of how it came out, I couldn't look any worse than I do now. I would even be willing to sign a paper to that effect.

I am a poor woman, barely able to make ends meet, Miss Abby. Please help me. Sign this...

PRUNEFACE

DEAR PRUNEFACE: I know of no plastic surgeon in private practice who would be willing to take you up on your offer. But you have nothing to lose by inquiring at your local medical school. Good luck and God bless.

...

DEAR ABBY: My parents retired 18 months ago, sold their home up north and bought a condo in Florida to be near my husband and me. (I am their only child.)

They come here at 10 a.m. for coffee, stay for lunch and wait until the children come home from school. Since they are still here when I start dinner and they never have any plans, I invite them to stay for dinner. They don't sponge off us — they usually bring steaks, fresh fish, or something good for dessert.

They do many things to help us. Dad works in the yard and Mom sews and darns. I never drive anywhere alone — not even to the dentist. They go along for the ride and are content to just sit in the car and wait for me.

Although there are many retired couples in this community, my folks want no part of "old" people. We are their only interests. When they were newcomers, our friends were very generous about including them, but Abby, they should be making their own friends. My husband has been very patient, but we don't have a life of our own since they moved here.

Well, Dear Abby, my problem is somewhere in this rambling letter, so if you can find it, perhaps you'll offer a solution.

NAMELESS, PLEASE

DEAR NAMELESS: Your problem wasn't hard to find. You lack the courage to extricate yourself from a situation that has become stifling.

Try harder to prevail upon your parents to socialize with others. Introduce them to other interests and stress the importance of establishing their own circle of friends. The longer you wait, the more difficult it will be.

DEAR ABBY: This is my first letter to you, although I have been a fan of yours ever since you commenced publishing your column in the Atlanta Constitution.

One of my grown sons, knowing what an ardent fan you have in me, presented me with a copy of your new book, "The Best of Dear Abby," for Christmas. I have thoroughly enjoyed the book, but I must inform you that you left out my favorite letter, which I think is one of your best. I am enclosing that little gem, hoping that you will print it again so I can cut it out for my wallet. As you can see, the one I have is worn out.

CLAYTON H. PERRY, DECATUR, GA.

DEAR MR. PERRY: Thank you. It's one of my favorites, too, but with the voluminous material, small wonder it was overlooked. Here it is:

"DEAR ABBY: I've been dating this real neat guy who keeps telling me I don't have to worry about his getting me pregnant because he was injured while playing football. Should I believe him?"

NANCY"

"DEAR NANCY: No. He sounds to me like he's trying to complete a pass. Kick him in the end zone."

N.C. First Lady Here March 30 To Establish 'Friendship Force'

Mrs. James B. Hunt Jr. will be in Greenville March 30 to announce the establishment of the Eastern North Carolina Friendship Force for Pitt and Beaufort counties.

The announcement will be made during a Friendship Force coffee to be held from 10 a.m. to noon at Plaza Gardens, Pitt Plaza Shopping Center.

Greenville Mayor Percy Cox will speak, as will local exchange director Cheryl Taft and State Friendship Force director Millie Schecter.

The Friendship Force is a non-profit organization that coordinates an exchange program between U.S. citizens and citizens of other nations around the world, promoting understanding, friendship and concern among peoples of all nations, Mrs. Taft said.

Mrs. Hunt is honorary chairman of the North Carolina Friendship Force. She was an ambassador to Newcastle, England, in 1979.

The exchange program for the Eastern North Carolina Friendship Force will take place Sept. 27-Oct. 10 with a Western European country. During the exchange, a group of citizens from Pitt and Beaufort counties will stay in the home of a foreign family. At the same time, an equal number of foreign citizens will stay in Eastern North Carolina host homes.

Ambassadors from here are to be selected through an application process that provides each person an equal chance to be selected. The process also will help assure that the ambassadors are representative citizens of their community.

Host families here and abroad are selected on the basis of compatibility with ambassadors according to factors like occupation, interests and age.

The cost of the 14-day exchange is $715 for adults and $495 for children under 12. Other than the fact that it is a Western European country, the destination for the exchange is not revealed to assure the applicants' interest in the friendship philosophy of the exchange.

Although the target area for the project is Pitt and Beaufort counties, residents from all communities in the region are invited to apply as ambassadors.

Ask Venezuela Help 'Mediate'

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — The five leaders of El Salvador's leftist guerrillas have asked Venezuelan President Luis Herrera Campins to help negotiate a settlement to the Salvadoran conflict.

Herrera, a friend and staunch supporter of Salvadoran President Jose Napoleon Duarte, disclosed the rebel initiative at a news conference Monday. He said he was not ruling out a role for himself as mediator, but reiterated his support for Duarte's government and for Sunday's national elections in El Salvador.

"I must confess that I was surprised that they sent me the letter," Herrera said.

"The only thing that one can do is to demonstrate good will toward the goal of trying to end the violence and seek an institutional and democratic resolution that would lead to peace."

He said the Salvadoran elections, which the guerrillas are trying to disrupt, are a "necessary first step" toward solving the country's problems.

Has Potential Cancer-Killer

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — A biochemist at the Bowman Gray School of Medicine says he has developed a potentially overwhelming weapon against cancer of the ovary.

Dr. George J. Doellgast says his 10-year search was culminated last week when he successfully created hybrid cells by fusing cells from mouse spleens with cells from myeloma, a type of cancer. The hybrid cells have the ability to produce tiny cancer fighters targeted specifically against ovarian cancer, Doellgast said.

The new cells, called hybridomas, are capable of producing large quantities of the cancer fighters, which are called monoclonal antibodies.

Scientists in other parts of the country have developed hybridomas and monoclonal antibodies against some other cancers and against some viral and bacterial diseases.

But Doellgast said his work is a major breakthrough in the treatment of cancer of the ovary. He said, however, that much laboratory and animal testing still needs to be done before the technique could be used in human patients.

The key to the process is an enzyme which Doellgast has spent the first decade of his postdoctoral career studying. The enzyme, placental alkaline phosphatase, occurs in human placenta and in some cancers, most notably cancer of the ovary. No one knows what role it plays in the body.

But Doellgast, 38, said he has demonstrated that the enzyme, called PAP, makes these cancers vulnerable to monoclonal antibodies, which he says could be the most effective agents ever contemplated for diagnosis and treatment of ovarian cancer.

Dear Reader: I am in the process of compiling a book that will consist mainly of a collection of past columns. My publisher has suggested that I include a chapter on needlework for the handicapped — which I think is a great idea. It would include a listing of helpful devices that have been developed, what techniques various readers are finding useful, what forms of needlework are especially suitable for various handicaps and so forth.

While I have some of this information on hand, I need much more to make it a really meaningful chapter, so I am asking for your help.

If you are a needleworker who has a physical handicap or know someone who fits this description, please let me know what form of needlework is most suitable and what devices or instruction manuals are available. Anyone who shares information that can be used in the book will receive a complimentary copy when it is published later this year.

Dear Pat: I am a longtime knitter and crocheter so I naturally have a collection of patterns dating way back. Many of these are for classic sweater styles that are just as good today as they ever were.

My problem lies in the new system of skein weights used by many companies. How do I translate grams into ounces? — Mona R., Rochester, N.Y.

Dear Mona: In the past, most skeins of yarn were in 1-ounce, 2-ounce or 4-ounce sizes, so I will give you a few gram weights that are similar. One hundred grams are equal to approximately 3½ ounces; 50 grams are equal to approximately 1¾ ounces; 40 grams are equal to approximately 1 and four-tenths ounces; and 25 grams are equal to approximately nine-tenths of an ounce.

If your directions call for only a small number of skeins, you will usually be safe with just one additional skein. If more than four or five skeins are required, you may need more than one extra. To figure just how many, multiply the number of skeins required by the size of the skein; then divide the resulting number by the weight of the skein available.

For example, if your directions call for 14 4-ounce skeins, a total of 56 ounces are needed. Divide this figure by the 3½ ounces available in the new skeins and you will see that you need 16 of this weight skein. This same principle will apply for any of the weights listed above. Hope this helps!

(Because of the large volume of mail she receives, Pat is unable to answer your letters personally. However, she welcomes all questions and hints and will use those of general interest in the column whenever possible.)

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I saw an old movie on television the other night. Well, actually it wasn't THAT old. "The Snows of Killmanjaro" was made in 1952, and starred Gregory Peck, Susan Hayward and Ava Gardner.

It's been a long time since I've worked so hard watching a movie. I knew when Gregory first met Ava they would go to bed, but they never really said so in so many words and we never saw them "do" anything. I had to use my imagination.

After they were living together, Ava developed a drinking problem and became quite coarse and abusive. I had to sift through the "darns" and "You're self-centered and stuffy" to create my own profane dialogue, but I got there.

The baby scene was one of my best efforts. Ava was carrying Gregory's baby and she thought he didn't want it so when she was standing at the top of a long flight of stairs, I had to figure out she was going to throw herself down the stairs and lose the baby. They didn't give me a lot of help here, but I got a great scene in my mind out of it.

Even the war was rated G, with Gregory standing up to his commanding officer and deserting even though he was shot in the leg for it. They didn't show the torn-off leg, mind you, but I used the one I had seen sticking up in the Atlanta scene from "Gone with the Wind."

It was a movie of a man's sexual passions, black moods, and his violence set to a Bambi theme.

It was a lot of work for me. I live in the '80s where nothing is left to my imagination anymore, and it's rusty. Blood is red and sticky, sex is noisy and sweaty. Knives glisten, cars explode into infernos, bodies are pale and lifeless. Laugh tracks tell me when to laugh. Sad music tells me when to cry.

I worry about the imagination of my children. Do they have it or is it just dormant after being passive spectators at the shrine of the 21-inch screen all these years? After all, the only thing they've seen in black and white in their lifetime is an ink blot test.

When the movie ended, my mind raced on. Gregory Peck wasn't going to change. It would only be a matter of time before he dumped Susan and started fooling around again. He had "that look."

I had to smile as I turned the set off. The imagination might be rusty, but it was still good enough to keep it out of prime time.

Today Is Significant

FARMVILLE — March 23 is a significant day for Mrs. Lillie Ryals Smith, a resident of Guardian Care Nursing Home here.

Mrs. Smith's 95th birthday was celebrated in advance Saturday with her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Albert R. Smith of Greenville, and her friends at Guardian Care.

Ferries Are Essential

Among problems North Carolina will have to face in a time of squeezed revenues is an overhauling of the state's ferry boat equipment.

The Department of Transportation says the Legislature will be asked for $45.2 million over a period of 15 years to upgrade the ferry operations. The capital improvement funds would purchase 14 new ferry vessels, improve docking facilities and provide other improvements.

The request is based on recommendations by the N.C. Ferry System Study Commission. The commission said needs had not been adequately met in the past and if the ferry system is to continue to meet the needs "it is critical to take action now."

Two ferries, the "Lauch Faircloth" and the "Knotts Island" should be replaced immediately, it was recommended. In the future 12 more vessels should be replaced.

North Carolina's ferry system, centered in the east, is unique. So also are the coastline and inland waterways of our state. The ferry system has provided access to the Outer Banks and other coastal areas of North Carolina for both visitors and residents. It has provided access to the mainland for natives of formerly isolated areas.

Ferry vessels wear out and become obsolete and there can be no question that the state must move to provide modern equipment to keep the service operating in the years ahead.

As tight as state funds are going to be, it might be quite a battle to obtain what is needed. It will require much public support, particularly here in the East, to see that the job is done.

Gas Prices Down; Enjoy It

Even as gas prices slip in the United States, Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries are looking for ways to shore up their markets.

The OPEC representatives met in Vienna last week and its members were urged to keep the $34 per barrel benchmark price. Lowering of production seems to be the approach that OPEC will take to stabilizing the world oil market. For now, though, there is plenty of oil being produced to meet the world's needs. There is too much, in fact, and that is leading to the current falling prices at the gas pump.

One oil official simply offered the advice to the consumer, "Enjoy it."

Good advice. It is a certainty it won't last forever.

THIS AFTERNOON

Chief Goal: Jobs

By BILL NOBLITT
(First of Two Articles)
RALEIGH — Despite name changes and increased emphasis on college transfer courses, the chief goal of North Carolina's community colleges remains preparing students for jobs.

As the state's 58-campus system has matured, growth and change has been accompanied by recurring fears from private colleges and universities, and even from some officials in the state-owned system, that the technical institutes would pose a threat to them.

Two years ago that worry deepened when a special committee headed by former Gov. Terry Sanford proposed that all the schools be allowed to use the name "community college" rather than some being "technical institutes" and some "colleges."

All along, other institutes of higher learning resisted to some measure the establishment of "colleges" in their attendance areas, and especially resisted the addition of college transfer courses to the more important technical and vocational curriculums offered in the state community college system.

A Fear At the heart of this reaction has been the fear that the state was about building a statewide junior college system which in terms of course offerings and in view of low cost would pose unfair competition.

As Carl Horn, chairman of the State Board of Community Colleges sees it: "There is almost universal fear among private college presidents and some of the chancellors of the greater university system of the college transfer program.

"While I think that all four-year colleges ought to welcome it, that is not the case.

"There is controversy every time we have a technical college seeking to become a community college."

Larry Blake, president of the community college system, seeks to put that fear down. His system reaches an older, more mature, job-hunting clientele. Average age is 34, and most of the students are self supporting.

"In almost every study I have ever seen we don't cut into the clientele of four or two year schools, but rather attract another group who, except for the community college, otherwise would have never considered college," Blake contends.

IT'LL TAKE QUITE AN ENGINEERING JOB!

By JAMES KILPATRICK

Conservative Inaction

WASHINGTON — John Stuart Mill once had an especially unkind thing to say about conservatives. It is the "law of their existence," he sniffed, that makes them "the stupidest party."

That was 120 years ago, but recent events at home and abroad prompt a melancholy reflection that Mill had a point. Throughout Europe and in parts of the Far East, demonstrations against nuclear arms are increasing. Here at home, the burghers of Vermont are passing resolutions. A week or so ago, Senators Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts and Mark Hatfield of Oregon won national attention for their resolution urging a bilateral freeze on nuclear weapons.

Where are my brother conservatives? What are they doing about the most awesomely important political issue in the world? Alas, the answer is, not much. In politics, perception is everything. The perception grows that Senators Kennedy and Hatfield and their liberal colleagues are deeply concerned about the perils posed to mankind by nuclear war. A corollary perception grows that conservatives don't give a damn.

JAMES J. KILPATRICK

Such perceptions, I would argue, are wholly unwarranted. In his Nov. 19 speech to the National Press Club, President Reagan clearly expressed his determination to seek an agreement with the Soviet Union on nuclear weapons. He spoke movingly of the hopes and dreams of all people to escape from the shadow of a mushroom cloud. He set in motion Project START, an acronym for Strategic Arms Reduction Talks.

But the clarity of Mr. Reagan's message was diminished by his use of charts and graphs and statistics. His speech was a one-day story. Three months have passed and talk of START has just about stopped. Last week the State Department threw cold water on the Kennedy-Hatfield resolution. Their proposed freeze was "impractical."

The analogy may seem frivolous in this context, but it is woefully familiar. While conservatives dribble along, the liberals have a way of stealing the ball. Kennedy and Hatfield and their 100 liberal co-sponsors have seized upon an issue of life-or-death meaning to the whole planet, and there is not a sentence in their resolution that thoughtful conservatives could not support.

"The greatest challenge facing the earth is to prevent the occurrence of nuclear war by accident or design." What is wrong with that? "The nuclear arms race is dangerously increasing the risk of a holocaust that would be humanity's final war." Can anyone deny this? "A freeze followed by reductions in nuclear warheads, missiles and other delivery systems is needed to halt the nuclear arms race and to reduce the risk of nuclear war." Isn't this an idea worthy of exploration?

Of course such a moratorium merits discussion — and that is all the resolution asks. The resolution urges that the United States and the Soviet Union jointly "pursue" a complete halt to the arms race; that the two nations "decide" how such a mutual and verifiable freeze could be arranged; and that proceeding from such a freeze, the two nations "should pursue major, mutual and verifiable reductions in nuclear warheads, missiles and other delivery systems."

The element of a "freeze" is a new element, though the device of a truce is as old as warfare itself. Otherwise, unless words have lost their meaning, the Kennedy-Hatfield liberals are propos-

The Gesture Will Rankle

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Deputy White House chief of staff Mike Deaver, President Reagan's closest aide, persuaded his boss last week to overrule Secretary of State Alexander Haig in a high-noon battle for control of presidential appointments.

Reagan nominated a youthful protege and aide of Deaver named Gregory Newell, who has no diplomatic background, to be assistant secretary of state for international organizations. Haig's candidate was Al Drischler, a former aide of Sen. Paul Xalt, who lobbied the White House hard in his favor. Deaver, however, prevailed for Newell, a former advance man for Gerald Ford. Newell's present White House job is to handle mechanics of the president's daily schedule.

Deaver's motive in convincing Reagan not to agree to Haig's recommendation was mainly psychological: The president, he told Reagan, should not bow to Cabinet officers in disputes over presidential appointments. That reverses the usual custom and will generate hostility and anger in every Cabinet department, not just Haig's State Department.

The cold war between Sen. Bob Packwood and President Reagan continued when the senator demanded — and was refused — an advance text of the president's welcoming message to the annual Packwood-sponsored Tidewater Republican Conference on Maryland's Eastern shore.

Ed Rollins' chief White House political aide, retorted with this barb for Packwood's office: We'll give you that, provided you give us advance texts of the senator's interviews with the Associated Press. That referred to the AP interview in which Packwood, chairman of the Senate Republican Campaign Committee, portrayed the president as a fumbling old man.

A footnote: The White House has informed Packwood it will not tolerate further mailing of Senate campaign fundraising letters, prepared by Packwood but signed by Reagan, in which the president and senator are pictured as close colleagues. New letters diminishing Packwood's role are demanded by the White House.

Empty Senate Seat

Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker was miffed when a full week passed after the resignation of Democratic senator Harrison Williams without the New Jersey seat being filled by first-year Republican governor Thomas Kean.

"It's not as though this was an unexpected vacancy," one Senate Republican complained. "He (Kean) knew it was coming for weeks, and we could use the extra hand now." Senate Republican leaders would be horrified if Kean were to keep the seat vacant until a Republican nominee for the full term is chosen in the June primary. At this writing, Kean has given nobody a clear indication of what he plans. Between the two contenders for the Republican nomination, Kean obviously prefers conservative Jeffrey Bell over liberal Rep. Millicent Fenwick. But New Jersey politicians expect him to minimize making enemies by naming a caretaker Republican who definitely is not interested in running for the seat.

Senate Clubbiness

Conservative Republican senators explain their journeys to Connecticut to campaign for liberal maverick Sen. Lowell Weicker on grounds that challenger Prescott Bush Jr. (the vice president's older brother) would be a sure loser in November against liberal Democratic representative Toby Moffett.

Weicker is a staunch foe of most Reagan administration proposals. Nevertheless, Sen. Paul LaRait of Nevada, President Reagan's closest friend in the Senate, and Sen. Alphonse D'Amato, the New York conservative who knocked liberal Jacob Javits out of the Senate in 1980, have campaigned for Weicker. Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas is scheduled to join them.

"We hear that Bush is such a miserable candidate that he cannot beat Moffett," one conservative senator told us, denying that this was just the old Senate club in operation. However, a major source of the derogatory information about Bush's campaigning deficiencies is none other than a member of the club: Lowell Weicker.

Adarant Cap

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger has angered Republican conservatives in Congress by insisting on naming Dr. Henry Simmons to the long-empty post of deputy assistant secretary of defense for health. With House Minority Leader Bob Michel behind them, the conservatives have taken their case to the White House — so far to no avail.

Weinberger and Deputy Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci, a tennis-playing pal of Simmons, will not back down; the White House is not yet interested enough to get involved.

The source of Republican unhappiness with Simmons is the American Medical Association (AMA). When Weinberger was secretary of health, education and welfare in the Nixon administration (with Carlucci as his top aide), Simmons was brought in to head a division that rated the professional standards of private physicians. That infuriated the AMA and turned it implacably against Simmons. With the White House staying out of it, Simmons' name may soon go to the Senate.

To the editor:

I have just received and responded to a letter from "American Life Lobby, Inc." on behalf of Senators Helms and East. The item includes a survey form called "Official Opinions Survey of Abortion." Of course, the cover letter is strongly anti-abortion and labels Planned Parenthood, the National Abortion Rights Actions League and the National Organization for Women as "our foes."

In my mind, it is unfortunate and un-American to so readily label whole groups of American citizens as "foes." The group hopes to convince "our leaders" that the majority of Americans believe abortion is immoral.

"Morality," of course, is in the eye of the beholder. Common sense, plus the idea of "keeping government off our backs" suggests that we do not need more law. No doubt we need more "morality," regardless of the specific issues. But morality derives largely from personal individual orientation from church, synagogue and home life.

Senator Helms, East and others are too intent upon simplifying complex issues. It would be "simple" to put women in "their place" (so fight ERA) It was "simple" putting blacks in "their place" throughout a long history of slavery and then segregation of facilities, etc. How stupid could we have been? Very!

Denying women absolute and legal freedom via ERA seems equally stupid, on the face of it. Would men want to be stuck with less than freedom? Maybe if men were the ones who carried babies for nine months, breastfed them, and emptied diapers, our political rhetoric would calm down a bit. Women, I apologize for male behavior.

Strength For Today

THE HORIZON

A young man remarked recently that he had trouble with his eyes until he joined the navy. On sea duty he discovered that somehow his vision was improved by looking out over broad expanses of water, trying to identify objects dim on the horizon.

If such an experience is good for physical eyes, it is to be especially commended for the eyes of the soul. The more we seek for spiritual truth, the more does our desire for spiritual truth increase and the deeper our spiritual capacities become. The more intently we search for this truth, the better do the eyes of the soul become.

The more we want to know about prayer, the more we will know. The more intent we are on discerning the will of God, the more we will discover that will.

So we should always look toward the horizon. It not only improves the vision but also the inner perception — that is, the meaning and significance of the things we see. — Elisha Douglass

Doubling Up, And It Isn't Fun

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — While the overall population of the United States grows, there are fewer households today than there were two years ago.

People are doubling up — parents with children, children with parents, students with students, young singles with other singles.

The shrinkage in households reflects many things: a poor economy, lost jobs, energy conservation, high rents and carrying charges, acceptance of fewer creature comforts and, it would seem, lowered expectations.

While the decline is in the hundreds of thousands, it seems likely that millions of people are affected, not just those who have been crowded in on, but landlords, real estate agents, furniture and appliance manufacturers and sellers, and fuel suppliers.

Doubling up may seldom be comfortable, but it is often necessary.

Sindlinger & Co., a Media, Pa., research and marketing organization that has traced household statistics for nearly 30 years, attributes the decline mainly to economic necessity.

By means of daily telephone surveys, Sindlinger estimated the number of American households at 73.8 million in May 1980. In that month, it concludes, there were more households than ever before or since.

By August 1981 the number of individual households — any number from one person up who live at one address — had declined to about 73 million, a loss of 832,000 units.

The number has risen since then, but only to 73.6 million, a minor advance in view of the population bulge of young, household-age people now working its way through the economy.

What occurred, among other things, is that the swinging single teen-ager and 20-year-old found it financially impossible to finance the old lifestyle, and grandparents found their heating bills too high.

The latest "U.S. Housing Market" quarterly, published by Advance Mortgage Corp., a private lender, found further evidence in its regular quarterly analysis of the nation's major housing markets.

In Boston it found "Students — an enormous factor in this market — last year moved back to dormitories. This year, commuter students move back with families."

In Washington, D.C., where federal cutbacks are being felt, it found "Sunday paper has five columns of ads to share units."

In Detroit, center of an area that some economists maintain is in a depression, it found "Doubling-up is enormous." In Atlanta, "doubling-up is heavy." The same report comes from San Francisco.

Even in Dallas, where building and other economic activity is stronger than in most of the nation, the report finds "some doubling-up in North Dallas young adult market."

Sindlinger finds the double-up pressure greatest in the East and Midwest, less in the South and West. Houston, "amazing Houston," in the words of Advance Mortgage, seems to remain immune. "The Houston market is unbelievable," it says. It might get "even better."

Other than bringing families together again, a questionable advantage when the circumstances are considered, doubling-up seems to have served one purpose that might be considered positive. It has reduced pressure on a limited supply of housing, and in some instances on rents.

The Advance Mortgage report shows occupancy rates generally between 95 percent and 98 percent in major cities, an extremely difficult market for apartment-seekers.

Were it not for doubling up, it might be even worse.

Asking Why Man Was Denied An Artificial Heart

By MICHAEL WHITE
Associated Press Writer
SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The White House has asked the Food and Drug Administration to explain why a dying 37-year-old man from Florida has been denied his request for an artificial heart, a University of Utah spokesman says.

Dale Lott, a former Home- stead, Fla., fire department dispatcher, suffers from cardio myopathy, an inoperable disease of the heart muscle. His doctors have said he could die at any time. Lott, the father of a 10-year-old girl, says an artificial heart developed at the University of Utah is his only hope.

John Dwan, university spokesman, said Monday night the FDA sent the White House a statement about 10 days ago explaining the medical criteria for the implant that exclude Lott as a possible recipient.

"The White House called the FDA and they (the FDA) called us to read us the statement," Dwan said.

The criteria, which took the university and the FDA 1½ years to develop, specify that an implant may be done only on a patient whose heart stops during surgery and cannot be restarted. The patient must have undergone counseling and have agreed in advance to the implant. No suitable candidate for implant has yet been found.

University officials say patients such as Lott do not meet the criteria because it would be necessary to take out a working heart and replace it with the device.

Lott also suffers from diabetes and pulmonary hypertension, which make him a poor candidate for the implant, said Dr. Chase N. Peterson, university vice president for health services.

Dwan said President Reagan apparently received a letter from Lott's firefighters' union. The spokesman said the White House forwarded the letter to the FDA, asking the agency to explain why Lott could not receive the implant.

In its response, the FDA explained the criteria and said it would be "pleased" to consider any new criteria the university might submit. Dwan said. However, he added the message should not be taken to mean the FDA would agree that Lott should get the artificial heart.

"The FDA has not taken a position on the situation," Dwan said.

Meanwhile, Ellis Rubin, an attorney for Lott, said he is "optimistic" Lott will be the first human to receive the heart.

Dr. William C. DeVries — the only surgeon authorized to implant the heart — was to return to Salt Lake City Monday night after meeting in Miami with Lott's doctors, Dwan said.

Rubin, of Miami, said he had spoken with Lott's doctors about the meeting with DeVries, but declined to say what the outcome was.

"I have felt optimistic since I stepped off the plane here ... I have no reason to feel any different tonight," said Rubin, who arrived in Salt Lake City last week.

Rubin said he hopes to meet today with U.S. Surgeon General C. Everett Koop, who is visiting the university.

DeVries, head of cardiothoracic surgery at the university's medical center, has asked the review board to reconsider including patients with degenerating heart diseases as possible recipients.

Rubin, who had said he would abide by DeVries' decision, said Monday night he will appeal to Reagan if the FDA blocks DeVries from performing the operation.

But Dr. Ernst J. Eichwald, chairman of the review committee, says Lott's chance of surviving implant surgery is "so shaky, so unlikely," that his life probably would be shortened.

PANDA PROCEDURE — John Knight, a veterinary officer from the London Zoo, left, works with David Janssen of the National Zoo as they administer anesthesia to Ling-Ling, the female giant panda, during an artificial insemination procedure in Washington. National Zoo officials expressed delight Sunday after discovering the animal had ovulated while undergoing the medical procedure. The zoo workers will have to wait at least several months to find if the attempt was successful, as the normal gestation period for a panda is 132 days. (AP Laserphoto)

Local campuses of the system are effectively tailoring course offerings and times to meet the needs of the students who work and have other responsibilities. They are not, in sum, operating as dormitory schools for full time students attending class daily from eight-to-five.

What has the name change meant to some students? An opportunity to "go to college" even though the classes they attend are in auto repairs or such. As Edward S. Bright, dean of instruction at Pitt Community College explains: "We found that a number of students are leaving Pitt County to attend other institutions in the system...for vocational and technical programs that we were offering."

Students were driving by a technical institute to go to a college.

Unemployment Stress Also Affects Children

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — The negative effects of increasing unemployment on families — particularly children — may be magnified by federal policies, a panel on economics and stress revealed Monday.

"The most recent national unemployment rate was 8.9 percent," said Lewis Margolis, a pediatrician and epidemiologist who has conducted research on the effects of parental unemployment on children. But he pointed out that many more people experience sporadic unemployment than are reflected in those figures.

"In 1980, 18.1 percent of the labor force experienced some unemployment," he said. "That means that 21 million workers were out of work for some period of time."

Margolis said that in 1982, that figure would exceed the 20.2 percent who experienced unemployment in the recession of 1975.

The consequences of unemployment may be in child illness and child abuse, Margolis said.

"Fewer than 6 percent of children experience the trauma of hospitalization during a year, compared with 20 percent of children who experienced parental unemployment," he said.

"Children thrive on routine and continuity and changes ... are stressful for families and are stressful for children," he added. "We know that stress and the accumulation of stress makes us vulnerable to a variety of illnesses."

Child abuse is the most overwhelming factor stemming from joblessness, Margolis said.

"We know from a large 1968 survey of child abuse that children in families where the father has been unemployed at some point during the previous year were at six times the risk of other children of being abused," he said.

For make no mistake, the prevention of nuclear warfare is on its way to becoming the most popular cause in the world. In nations large and small, East and West, people clearly comprehend the fearful destructive power of today's atomic weapons. They accurately perceive the danger to the continuation of civilized life, and they want that danger removed. If conservatives fail to recognize this swelling demand, and to identify with it, they will justify the charge that Mill leveled against them long ago.

New Savings Certificate Is Approved For S&Ls

By ROBERT FURLOW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government regulators, pushed by Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan, are tossing a financial lifeline to the nation's beleaguered savings and loans. It's a new savings certificate with a built-in competitive advantage over banks.

The Depository Institutions Deregulation Committee approved the new certificate Monday despite one member's contention that it amounted to helping the S&Ls by robbing commercial banks.

The S&Ls cheered; the banks called the DIDC action "a fraud."

The committee also voted on Monday to authorize a 3 1/2-year certificate with no interest ceiling and to end ceilings on all but passbook savings accounts by 1986 — moves that could well prove more significant in the long run.

But most of the attention was focused on its approval of a three-month savings certificate, which would give savers relatively high interest and S&Ls a chance to lure those savers away from commercial banks.

Regan started the meeting by trying to assure American savers that their money in savins and loans is not in jeopardy, even if weakening S&Ls continue to disappear in mergers.

The government, Regan said, will meet its commitment "to safeguard the integrity of each insured depositor's funds."

President Reagan's top economic adviser then prodded the committee to approve the three-month certificate, which banks and S&Ls can offer as soon as May 1.

Rules covering it call for minimum deposits of $7,500, with interest linked to the weekly yields on three-month Treasury bills.

That interest is similar — about 12.6 percent at present — to the rate on six-month money market certificates already offered by banks and S&Ls. The minimum for those money market certificates is $10,000.

So the main difference for savers is only to make such accounts available to savers with $2,500 less to invest.

But the difference is much greater for the institutions because banks and S&Ls pay the same interest on the six-month certificates under most conditions.

On the three-month certificates, however, S&Ls will be allowed to pay one-quarter percentage point more — a slight advantage but one the S&Ls' trade association lobbied hard to get. The differential, which would disappear if rates fell to 9 percent or less for a month or more, is to expire in one year.

Roy Green, chairman of the U.S. League of Savings Associations, quickly issued a statement saying, "We applaud the DIDC."

Fritz Elmendorf, a spokesman for the American Bankers Association, said, "It's a fraud," hurting the banks and not helping savers.

DIDC member Paul Volcker, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, said he preferred to study the issue another month rather than approve it Monday. But he went along after Regan engineered a compromise between a minimum of $5,000 and $10,000 and after the treasury secretary proclaimed, "I want to do something today."

William Isaac, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., was the only member of the five-man committee to vote against the proposal.

"I can't see robbing commercial banks simply to transfer money to the thrifts," he said.

The DIDC also voted 4-1 to phase out almost all interest rate ceilings by 1986, this time with the opposing vote coming from Richard Pratt, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

The proposal was similar to one approved by the committee last year but then blocked by a federal court. The court agreed with a U.S. League complaint that said Congress had ordered retention of differentials on all existing account categories.

The new version tries to get around that by specifying deregulation for accounts that differ slightly in length of maturity from the existing accounts — in effect creating new accounts with no history of differentials.

The first phase of that deregulation plan — authorizing a no-ceiling 3 1/2-year certificate — also takes effect May 1. Certificates with shorter maturities would be authorized on April 1 of 1983, 1984 and 1985 and on March 31, 1986.

Congress created the DIDC in 1980 with the express task of providing an orderly and gradual phase-out of interest rate ceilings by April 1986.

VOA Director Resigning Post

WASHINGTON (AP) — After less than a year as director of the Voice of America, James B. Conkling is resigning amid a continuing controversy over the proper role of the United States' overseas broadcast operation.

According to a VOA official, the former president of Columbia Records denied that he was "resigning under pressure" from Charles Z. Wick, director of the U.S. International Communications Agency, which is the VOA's parent organization.

Conkling, 67, in a statement he read to the VOA staff on Monday, said he had been unable to adjust to "working within government bureaucracy" after being in the private sector, and that he had decided to spend more time with his family in California, said the official, who requested anonymity.

Sources in the VOA, however, said Conkling had been frustrated by the controversy surrounding Reagan administration plans to have the overseas broadcasts tailored to put U.S. foreign policy in a more favorable light.

Conkling could not be reached for comment.

Another VOA official, also asking not to be identified, said Conkling had been "under tremendous pressure from the right" to resign.

The director was caught between the conservatives and news professionals within the VOA "who wanted to keep the VOA reporting straight down the middle," that source said. "It was the right that won."

There have been reports in recent months about disgruntlement among some VOA employees over what they see as efforts by the administration to make the agency's news broadcasts more combative and anti-communist in tone.

Wick, a long-time friend of Reagan, has been quoted as saying that he intended to give the agency "the velocity of a projectile" to counter Soviet propaganda.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain and showers are expected in the forecast period, Tuesday until Wednesday morning, from Florida to Kentucky. Most of the country will be sunny. Good weather is forecast from the northern Plains to the Northeast. (AP Laserphoto Map)

Bullet Train Is Planned

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Amtrak officials intend to announce plans this month for a privately financed 150 mph "bullet train" that would cut train travel time between Los Angeles and San Diego in half, a newspaper reported.

A study conducted over the past seven months has concluded that such a train down the center of Interstate 5 is technically feasible, the San Diego Union reported in today's editions. It would cost an estimated $2 billion.

Currently, trains take two hours and 45 minutes, including stops, to make the 120-mile trip between the two cities.

The paper said Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. and some state senators have already been briefed on the plan, which is to be announced March 31.

By The Associated Press

Sunny skies and cool temperatures were forecast for today, but by tonight clouds and possibly thundershowers should move into the area, the National Weather Service says.

Low pressure off the South Carolina coast will move east as high pressure centered over southern Illinois builds into the state from the northeast.

Upper level disturbances will move toward the state tonight and Wednesday. They will combine with a stationary front to our south. Thus, an increase in cloudiness and a chance of rain can be expected.

Monday across the state skies were sunny, except for some cloudiness in the southeast portion. Afternoon temperatures were in the 60s and 70s, except for some 50s in the northeast and the higher mountains. The warmest area was Fayetteville with 75 degrees.

'Moratorium' Not Yet Firm

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interior Secretary James G. Watt says his proposed 18-year moratorium on mineral leasing in federally owned wilderness lands is not "set in concrete."

In testimony before the House Interior subcommittee on public lands, Watt said Monday that he is willing to compromise on the proposed legislation. His general position on the matter had been made public last week.

Responding to specific criticisms during his appearance Monday, Watt indicated he would not fight for one of the bill's most controversial provisions, requiring Congress to pass a law within 60 days each time it disagreed with the president on emergency uses of wilderness minerals.

"That would be an area where you may wish to make changes," Watt told the panel, responding to suggestions that the president obtain congressional approval for such action, rather than have his actions subject to congressional veto.

Monday night middle and high level clouds developed. However, by this morning the clouds had diminished over the state with the exception of coastal sections. Temperatures this morning were in the 40s with 50s in the southeast.

Precipitation during the last 24 hours has been less than one quarter inch and confined mainly to the southeast.

Recreational weather outlook: Skies will be mostly sunny today, except for partly cloudy conditions along the south coast. Temperatures will range mostly in the 50s and 60s.

Cloudiness will increase tonight with a chance of rain in the mountains. The threat of rain will overspread the state Wednesday and continue through Thursday. Lows tonight will range from the 30s in the west to the 40s in the east. Highs Wednesday will range from the 40s in the mountains to around 60 along the coast.

A small craft advisory is in effect for the coastal waters from Cape Hatteras north and the sounds for northeast winds 15 to 25 mph.

Solar Fraction

Greenville's solar fraction calculated by the department of physics of East Carolina University was 92 Monday, which means that a solar water heater could have provided 92 percent of your hot water.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE PUBLIC: EXCELLENCE. WHAT HAPPENED TO IT?

About 50 years ago, an 11-year-old boy with cars in his eyes used to wander around the car agencies in Chicago — his dream was automobiles. After his paper route, he would walk the length of Broadway looking at all the car agencies. He could tell one make of car from another if he was shown just a taillight lens. He was a car nut, and when the salesmen weren't watching, he would open and close hoods, doors and trunks to hear the solid thunk of a good fit. Even then, he could tell the difference between cars that were not as solid and were not built quite as tight. Cars at that time were built to last almost forever. He felt he would probably never own a new car, but maybe someday he would work on them.

EVEN A KID COULD TELL.

In those days, American cars were built by proud American craftsmen, and they were the standard of excellence for the whole world. Even a boy could recognize their quality and felt honored to live in a country that produced cars like that. There were many fine slogans: "When better automobiles are built, Buick will build them."

Studebaker talked about their "Father and Son" craftsmen teams that built cars together, passing know-how and excellence down from generation to generation. Dodge summed it up in a one-word slogan, "Dependability."

Pontiac advertised a car that was "Built to last 100,000 miles" and looked like it would. Many cars actually lasted that long, or longer, did not rust out, did not break down frequently, and owners were not annoyed by petty mechanical items that would cause them to return the car to the agency with problems frequently. In those days, the 1930's, people did not have a great deal of money to spend and they expected a strong, dependable, almost trouble-free car for their hard-earned dollars.

THE "3 C's" — CONSIDERATION, COOPERATION, COMMUNICATION.

Today, we are all sorry to say that things are very different in the American automobile industry. Workers say they have speeded up the lines to the point that they do not have enough time to assemble cars properly or check on quality control.

Whom do you want to blame — the union worker or the manufacturer? You can take your choice, depending upon your viewpoint, but both of them should be considerate of each other's problems, cooperate and communicate better between themselves. Neither can produce a quality car without the other. Now, more than ever, they should join together to help the United States automobile industry survive. Why should it be necessary to rework or attempt to rebuild any car when it has just come off an assembly line? Yet the rework portions of most U.S. plants are filled to capacity correcting mistakes and problems that have occurred on the assembly line.

Things are very different in Japan. Excellence is maintained by making every automobile worker on the assembly line in charge of quality control. No car, not one, is allowed to proceed on the line if a problem has occurred. Any worker can stop the assembly line — there is no rework factory because it is not necessary. The cooperation in Japan between management and union is one of "How can we do it better?" "What can we do to help Toyota make a better car?" "What can the company do to help make the worker more efficient and happy?" Yes, "happy" — they really are interested in his well-being.

His job is rotated frequently so he does not feel stalemated, he has financial security, he has lifetime employment, he has almost unending benefits. Plus, every worker in the plant has a top executive, it could be the Toyota Company President, to whom he can go at any time for help or advice on any problem. I happen to be an American, but I have learned very much from Toyota and the Japanese. I have applied it in our business, and you know what? It works.

A QUALITY PRODUCT IS THE REAL PAYOFF.

When all is said and done, the final product, what you see, what you feel and how it drives, is what makes a car sell or not sell. Toyotas have been voted the best quality cars in the world by German engineers, guilds, automotive specialists, car-buff magazines but, most importantly, by the buying public, whose demand for the Toyota quality product is unsurpassed. I am sure you can remember the concern of certain domestic manufacturers who stated, "Once the public gets the feel and dependability of the Japanese quality automobile, we may never get them back."

However, it wasn't always this way. The Japanese learned the car business from us Americans, and now the Americans are going to Japan to learn the car business from the Japanese. It will take a great deal of consideration, cooperation and communication from U.S. manufacturers and U.S. labor to get the job done.

If you doubt what I am saying, inspect a Toyota product very carefully from bumper to bumper, from road to roof, from one side of the interior to the other. Open the hood, the trunk, and look at the quality; it is so visible, it jumps right out at you. Lastly, drive one — one test drive is worth a thousand commercials. It's tight, it doesn't rattle, it rides and handles beautifully and everything works and continues to work. You really don't have to be a mechanic or an engineer to know quality.

If you think I am being un-American or unpatriotic, I also sell thousands of American cars. I own and operate the largest-volume General Motors Pontiac dealership in the world. I thought this open letter would be interesting and informative to all Americans.

RESTRICTIONS — WHAT HAVE THEY ACCOMPLISHED?

Japanese car sales are now restricted. Dealers can only receive so many. This was done voluntarily by Japan to help American manufacturers' car sales. The results have proved that these restrictions did not help — they were not the answer. American car sales have continued to drop even though imports have been curtailed. I believe you have to conclude imports were not the problem which caused the poor sales of U.S. cars.

Then what is the answer? I think the answer lies in the 3 C's: consideration, cooperation and communication between labor and management. I believe a healthy American automobile industry would be good for the Japanese industry.

Competition, as we used to say, is the spice of life. If we don't want to compete in anything we do, whether it is baseball, football, golf, swimming, or in business, why bother to keep score?

Instead of blaming each other and looking for excuses, why don't labor and management get together and start the industry moving — and you know what? It would be good for all involved: labor, manufacturers, U.S. car dealers and, finally, the U.S. consumer; for without him and his confidence, no one would sell anything. More competition would not hurt the Japanese, either. They, too, then would have to compete even harder. You know who would be the ultimate beneficiary. You — Mr. Consumer.

THE BENEFITS OF COMPETITION — FOREIGN OR DOMESTIC.

A few of the benefits I have personally seen already are a 40% increase in gasoline mileage in General Motors cars, downsizing and sharp weight reduction by nearly all domestic manufacturers, retaining much of the interior room but cutting off the wasted exterior hangovers, much better rust-preventive measures that several years ago were practically nonexistent, better quality component parts such as moldings, bumpers and the fit of same.

Also, and probably most important, union auto workers are now becoming aware that the quality assembly of an automobile is of paramount importance to the retail customer. Competition, in my book, is not bad, but absolutely necessary to give all us consumers better products at better prices. Without it, we would be paying more and getting less.

Incidentally, you have probably guessed by now who that 11-year-old kid was.

Violence On West Bank Is Unchecked

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Troops tear-gassed rioters and smashed padlocks of striking shopkeepers in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River today in the fifth straight day of violence over Israel's firing of a Palestinian mayor.

In Jerusalem's eastern sector, Arab youths burned tires, threw stones and tried to convince shopkeepers to close their stores, Israel radio said. Hundreds of police and border troopers patrolled the capital's old city to maintain order.

Disruptions also spread to the occupied Gaza Strip, where municipal clerks in Rafah struck over allegations an Israeli officer raped a teen-age girl. The military said she was detained briefly and "made up the story perhaps for revenge."

Arab demonstrators in Rafah hit an Israeli officer in the head with a rock, a military spokesman said. Troops dispersed the demonstrators with tear gas and made several arrests, a reliable Gaza source said.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin's government has dealt severely with the disturbances spurred by the dismissal of the mayor in the West Bank town of El Bireh last week. Soldiers have shot two Palestinians to death, wounded several and tear-gassed rioters throwing stones and firebombs since the rioting began.

Israel seized the West Bank and Gaza Strip in the 1967 Middle East war. Palestinian nationalists in the territories are demanding Israel's withdrawal and their own independent state.

The El Bireh mayor had refused to cooperate with the West Bank's new Israeli civilian administration, which many Palestinians view as a unilateral Israeli step toward granting them limited autonomy.

Says Solution Their Problem

By Sharon Vaughan
ECU News Bureau
 Preventing World War III is a problem facing today's youth, former U.S. Secretary of State Dean Rusk told an East Carolina University audience Monday night.

Each generation must find its own solution to the problem of organizing a durable peace "in a world in which thousands of megatons lie in the hands of frail human beings," Rusk said, adding that we must prevent a third world war because we won't be able to pick ourselves up after that one.

Rusk spent most of his lecture titled, "War, Peace, Diplomacy — Retrospects," recapping events that surrounded U.S. involvement in World War II. He said he recalls the words of a colonel sitting next to him when he received word that the first atomic bomb had been dropped on Japan: "War has now turned upon itself and is devouring its own tail."

Thirty-six years since the first atomic weapon was used in anger, Rusk said, today's students should try to block World War III to prevent another angry bomb.

Today's students, Rusk said, have never seen this country "getting on with its great tasks." They have seen the United States, he said, always in trouble: the deaths of the Kennedys and Martin Luther King Jr., Vietnam, Watergate, recession, inflation and unemployment.

Clash Between Rival Afghans

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Three hundred Afghan Moslem insurgents were reported killed in a recent clash involving two rival guerrilla factions in southeastern Afghanistan, Western diplomatic sources said Tuesday.

The sources, who requested anonymity, identified the groups as the Hekmetyar faction of the Hezbi Islami (Islamic Party) and the Harakat Inqilabi (Revolutionary Movement), both fighting to expel an estimated 85,000-110,000 Soviet troops and establish a fundamentalist Islamic regime.

If verified, it would be the bloodiest reported outbreak of violence between guerrilla groups since the Afghan civil war began nearly four years ago. Many of the factional disputes have involved the well-organized Hezbi Islami faction led by a former engineering student, Gulbiddin Hekmetyar, 35.

Billy Graham To Moscow Rally

Graham is expected to present a report to the conference, which starts May 10, Tass said Monday.

Dome Grows In Volcano

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — The giant lava dome in the Mount St. Helens crater continued growing overnight, sensitive scientific instrument showed.

Seismographs, which measure ground motion, detected rock falls and avalanches in the crater, indicating the dome was growing and jostling some material loose, said Bob Norris, spokesman for the University of Washington geophysics center.

Nothing indicated an explosive ash-spewing eruption was brewing, he said. The volcano blew towering ash and steam in eruptions Friday night and early Saturday. Afterward, scientists on foot and in airplanes found that the dome had been enlarged by molten rock pushing to the crater floor and hardening as part of the dome.

Geologists probably won't have accurate measurements of the dome for several days, Thom Corcoran, volcano information center spokesman in Vancouver, said Monday. Prior to the two weekend blasts, the dome was about 600 feet tall, 2,200 feet long and 1,800 feet wide.

Scientific field crews, which trek to the steaming crater whenever weather is clear, returned there Monday as the mountain settled into a calmer pattern after the two weekend blasts.

About 700 to 800 Weyerhaeuser Co. loggers also returned to work in the Kalama, North Toutle and South Toutle river valleys west of the volcano after access restrictions were reduced.

East Carolina Hosting Monarchs In ECAC-South Contest Tonight

East Carolina's baseball Pirates face Old Dominion in a key ECAC-South game tonight at 7 p.m. at Harrington Field.

Old Dominion and James Madison were pre-season picks to battle for the ECAC-South title, and the Monarchs bring in a 7-3-1 record to the game. This will be their first conference game however. Earlier reports of their being 2-0 in the league were incorrect.

The Pirates are currently 11-3 overall and 10-0 at Harrington Field. They are 3-0 in league play. Old Dominion is led by second baseman Carl Wasinger, currently hitting .355. He leads the team in homers with two and in runs batted in with 13. Third baseman/first baseman Bob Gilland is second in hitting with a .341 average.

The leading hurler, expected to be on the mound against the Pirates, is Jim Ambrose with a 3-1 record and a 2.79 earned run average. The Monarchs as a team have a 2.51 earned run average.

Catcher Fran Fitzgerald is the current batting leader for the Pirates, hitting a hot .410 clip. He leads the team in homers with three.

John Hallow, the right fielder, is right behind at .396, leading the team in at bats (53), hits (21), doubles (7), triples (2) and total bases (31). He's also tied with number three hitter, second baseman Mike Sorrell (.380) for runs scored with 14.

Rounding out the regulars over .300 are left fielder David Wells at .352, first baseman Todd Evans at .346, designated hitter Chuck Bishop at .343, and center fielder Robert Wells at .343. Evans, in 52 at bats, has yet to strike out.

Bob Patterson leads the pitching staff with an 0.60 earned run average and a 1-1 record. Charlie Smith is next in ERA at 0.64, followed by Bill Wilder at 1.51, Chubby Butler at 1.74, Bob Davidson at 1.80, Kirk Parsons at 2.33, and Brian Peterso at 3.52. The team ERA is 1.70.

East Carolina is hitting at a .324 team clip, while holding opponents to .184.

By RICK SCOPPE Reflector Sports Writer

Greenville Rose brought out the heavy timber Monday afternoon and combined it with the pitching of senior right-hander Gordon Douglas to whittle North Lenoir down to size.

Douglas hurled four no-hit innings and Rose banged out 13 hits — including a three-run home run by Douglas — to defeat North Lenoir, 10-2, yesterday in a nonconference baseball game.

"Gordon really threw hard today," Greenville Rose coach Ronald Vincent said after seeing the Rampants up their record to 3-0. "His arm was real loose and limber."

Douglas (1-0) struck out the first four batters he faced and five of the first six. He struck out six in all and did not give up a hit in four innings before being relieved in the fifth by Bill Owen.

"I felt good," Douglas said. "I hadn't thrown in a while. I haven't had a lot of work, but my arm felt good and I got in my rhythm."

Besides his work on the mound, Douglas also contributed at the plate with a three-run home run in the first inning against North Lenoir right-hander Joe Lane.

"He threw me six straight curve balls and after that I was sort of looking for another," Douglas said. "But he threw me a fast ball that was high. It was perfect."

Douglas was one of two players with three RBIs for the Rampants. The other was shortstop Sammy Hodges. Hodges finished the day with three hits in four at bats and two stolen bases.

First baseman Bill Kittrell and centerfielder Randy Warren both had two hits in three at bats for the Rampants. Kittrell had a double for one of his two hits and Warren stole two bases.

All but one starter — Mont Carter — had at least one hit. "I'm real pleased with our hitting," Vincent said. "We had a lot of hard hits and hit some balls real hard that didn't get in as hits."

Rose wasted little time in jumping on Lane, who was pitching his first game of the year. After Douglas struck out the side in the top of the first inning, the Rampants scored four runs with two outs gone in the bottom of the inning.

Tom Buie walked to open the inning and stole second standing up. Then, after Carter grounded to the pitcher and Hodges lined hard to second, Roger Williams walked.

Both runners moved up on a passed ball with Douglas at the plate. With the count at 3-2, Douglas blasted Lane's next pitch over the centerfield fence — some 345 feet — and Rose led, 3-0.

Crowell Pope reached second on a two-base error following

Douglas's home run, his first of the season and the Rampants' second. Randy Warren then beat out an infield hit and Pope, who was running with two outs, scored when catcher Scott Whitley dropped the return throw from first.

Hodges's single drove home Buie in the second with one out to give Rose a 5-0 lead. Buie had singled earlier in the inning.

North Lenoir scored its only run — an unearned one — off Douglas in the third. Jeff Braxton walked to open the inning and tried to steal second. The throw was there, but the ball got by Hodges and Braxton went to third. He scored on Greg Robinson's punt.

The Rampants loaded the bases with two gone in the bottom half of the third but failed to score when Carter grounded out to the pitcher. Rose made up for that in the next three innings, scoring five runs, three of which came in the fifth.

Hodges singled to begin the fourth, stole second and scored on Williams' single to give Rose a 6-1 lead. One inning later the Rampants extended their advantage to 9-1.

Warren singled and stole second to open the fifth and scored on Kittrell's double. After Keith Phillips walked, Hodges ripped a single to score both Kittrell and Phillips to give the Rampants an eight-run lead.

The Rampants' final run came in the sixth when Jeff Wilson, running for Curtis Evans, who had walked, scored on an error. North Lenoir scored its only other run in the seventh when Maurice Thorbes came home on an error.

Rose travels to D.H. Conley Thursday. The Rampants return home Saturday when they play host to Greene Central.

'Angry' Bradley, Purdue Earn Places In NIT Final Contest

NEW YORK (AP) — Dick Versace, basketball coach at Bradley University, would like to forget the things he said about the NCAA tournament.

After the field for the NCAA tournament was announced March 7, and after Bradley was not among those chosen, Versace became incensed.

His team had won the regular-season title in the Missouri Valley Conference, then was picked to the National Invitation Tournament field. He criticized the NCAA selection committee for bypassing his team, and he told his Braves to play "angry" in the NIT.

"I hope I've put that to rest," Versace said Monday night after his team earned a berth in the NIT final against Purdue. The two teams will meet Wednesday night at Madison Square Garden.

"I don't want to belabor the point. I don't care to discuss it anymore, and I don't want it to overshadow the performance of my team (in the NIT). Right now, I'd like to talk about our players and the 25 wins we had this season."

Bradley's 84-68 victory over Oklahoma in the NIT semifinal Monday night gave the Braves a 25-10 record. Purdue downed Georgia 61-60 in the other semifinal.

Senior forward Mitchell Anderson scored a team-high 25 points for Bradley and teamed with forward David Thirdkill and guard Barney Mines in a 13-3 run early in the second half that broke open a close game. Oklahoma, 22-11 and runner-up in the Big Eight Conference tournament, trailed by only one point, 38-37 at halftime, and the Sooners still were only one behind, 42-41, when Bradley's game-breaking burst started.

Mines, a junior, hit a three-point play, and Anderson hit two free throws to make it 47-41. After one free throw by Oklahoma's Les Pace, Thirdkill scored a pair of baskets to make it 51-42. David Little hit the second of two free throws for Oklahoma, and Anderson and Mines finished off the run with a basket each to make it 55-44 with 14:45 left.

Bradley stretched its lead to 19, at 65-46, by scoring nine straight points, and the Braves led by as many as 22, 76-54, on a pair of baskets by senior center Donald Reese with 4:04 to play.

"We felt like we were struggling in both halves," Oklahoma Coach Billy Tubbs said. "Offensively, we were never really in the game. If it hadn't been for Chuck Barnett getting hot in the first half, we'd have been out of it then."

Barnett scored 23 of his team's 37 points in the first half and wound up with 31. Mines added 18 for Bradley, and Reese had 13.

In the other game, sophomore center Russell Cross took a feed from Dan Palombizio along the baseline, pump-faked and put up Purdue's winning points with four seconds left.

The Big Question For NCAA: Can Smith Break No-Win Jinx?

By The Associated Press

Pardon North Carolina basketball Coach Dean Smith if he's starting to get the Minnesota Vikings syndrome.

Like the Vikings, who have gone to four Super Bowls and lost every one, Smith's Tar Heels have been to the NCAA Final Four six times and have yet to win the national championship. Just last year they got to the last game before losing to Indiana 63-50.

Will seven be a lucky number for Smith, whose team goes to New Orleans with a 30-2 record and the No.1 ranking? His players certainly hope so.

"I think he's the greatest coach in college basketball, despite not having won the national championship," said James Worthy, who scored 14 points in helping the Tar Heels win the Eastern Regional final 70-60 over Villanova.

"Everybody says Coach Smith is a great coach," said Tar Heel Jimmy Black. "But then they say he chokes in the Final Four. I know he's tired of hearing it and I know I'm tired of hearing it. And we're going to change it."

Center Sam Perkins said he'd like to win it all "just so people would stop asking that question."

Smith, whose team will face darkhorse Houston in the semifinals Saturday, takes a more philosophical approach.

"I'll settle for this every year," he said of making the Final Four. "I feel like we deserve to be there."

If North Carolina gets by Midwest Region winner Houston, as expected, the going will get much tougher in the championship game next Monday night, when the opponent will be the winner of Saturday's other semifinal between Louisville and Georgetown.

Louisville, with four starters off its 1980 NCAA championship team, has won 11 of its last 12 games, including a 75-68 victory over Alabama-Birmingham in the Mideast final.

The 20th-ranked Cardinals were only 12-8 at one point in the season, when Coach Denny Crum was experimenting with a lot of players. But there was method in his action as he built up the depth of his team to championship levels.

"We were developing our bench while playing one of the toughest schedules in the country," he said. "We decided we had to get experience from our bench. Our seniors were asked to sacrifice so the younger players could get that experience."

"Many seniors might resent that, but our players are for the team," said Crum. "This is a team and has to win that way without an All-American."

The Cardinals are now 23-9, and their depth was apparent last Saturday, when reserve center Charles Jones came off the bench to score 19 points, including seven free throws in the last 2:31.

Sixth-ranked Georgetown goes to the four-way showdown after demolishing No.4 Oregon State 69-54 to win the West Regional. The Hoyas, 29-6, broke the NCAA tourney record for shooting accuracy with an incredible 76.3 percent from the floor.

Creswell Tops Bear Grass

CRESWELL — Creswell struck for three runs in the first and sixth inning to whip Bear Grass, 7-3, Monday afternoon in a Tobacco Belt Conference baseball game.

Creswell jumped out to a 3-0 lead in the first inning and the Bears never got closer than a run the remainder of the afternoon. The loss leaves Bear Grass at 0-2 overall and in the conference.

Tony Davenport led off the bottom of the first with a single and Mark Clifton then reached on an error. Kevin Davenport followed with a triple to score both runners. Davenport later scored on a fielder's choice by Mike Davenport.

Bear Grass scored twice in the third to close the gap to a run. Bob Peele and Lawrence Watson singled and both scored on Mark Taylor's triple and Bear Grass trailed, 3-2.

Creswell got one of those runs back in the fourth and then scored three runs in the sixth to seal the win. Bear Grass' final run came in the top of the sixth.

Watson and Greg Harrison were both two for three for Bear Grass. Grant Davenport was two for four for Creswell. Bear Grass plays host to Belhaven Thursday.

Intercollegiate Athletics: It's A Big Time Business In U.S.

Part One of a Series
By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

When University of Minnesota guard Mark Hall was declared academically ineligible, a judge ordered him reinstated. Hall, the judge ruled, was recruited "to be a basketball player, not a scholar."

The landmark decision openly challenged the foundation of collegiate sports, already troubled by bulging budgets, competition bordering on desperation for recruits and the growing difficulty of treading a fine line between athletics and academics.

Intercollegiate athletics in America is big business. A football coach gets a million-dollar contract, a school gets a million or so for playing in a major bowl game and a star college athlete becomes an instant millionaire in the pros.

"If I didn't have to go to college as a preparation for pro ball, I wouldn't have," said Howard McNeil, who was declared academically ineligible for the Seton Hall basketball team during his senior season, the year he was hoping to catch the eyes of professional scouts.

"I think most students in college see a degree as just something to help you get a job afterward," McNeil added. "And the job I wanted was in basketball."

Hall, a three-year starter for Minnesota, filed suit against the university last fall, claiming his loss of eligibility would substantially damage his chances of a professional career.

In his ruling, U.S. District Judge Miles Lord found a paradox.

"It will may be true that a good academic program for the athlete is made virtually impossible by the demands of their sport at the college level," he wrote. "If this situation causes harm to the university, it is because they have fostered it and the institution rather than the individual should suffer the consequences."

Walter Byers, executive director of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, said that without sports many student-athletes would never have the chance to go to college.

And he noted that the letter of intent signed by all athletic recruits specifies that they must meet certain academic standards.

Nevertheless, McNeil's wife, Liz, also a Seton Hall student, said her husband "was hired to play basketball."

"I know they say the tradeoff is that I was getting a college education for free," McNeil said. "I was giving them something extra, so maybe I should have been given something extra, too."

Schools which have given something extra have found themselves penalized by the NCAA for violations ranging from phony grades to cash payments for players.

The NCAA enforces all manner of regulations that govern member institutions, spreading a net of investigators to catch and punish the schools which break the rules in search of athletic excellence.

NCAA rules permit a member institution to offer a student-athlete tuition, fees, room, board and books. Anything beyond that can cause problems. The regulations are contained in the NCAA Manual, the bible for college athletic directors and coaches. The book contains 187 pages of rules and regulations and another 110 pages of cases and interpretations, designed to clear up any confusion.

"I defy anyone to know all that's in this book," said Wade Walker, athletic director at Oklahoma. "And I defy anyone to interpret all the rules and regulations. It's highly technical and it's not always easy to interpret and apply."

Oklahoma went on NCAA probation in 1973 because of the altered transcript of a football player. "There are three or four rules and a multitude of regulations," Walker said. "We broke the rules and we were punished. We served our sentence. Everyone knows the rules. Those are the ones you don't touch, the ones you don't take any chances with. But in all candor, there are so many regulations that there is always the possibility of breaking them. We don't break any rules and we try not to break any regulations."

Many other programs have been penalized for bending academic standards, most recently Arizona State last year, when eight players were found to have received fraudulent credits.

In 1974-76, Southern Methodist was found to have been paying bonuses to football players based on the number of tackles they made. In 1976, an alumnus of Kentucky was found to have offered a race-horse to a recruit.

Under-the-table cash has led to various periods of probation for Michigan State, Oklahoma

State, Memphis State, Auburn, Colorado and Miami.

Sixteen schools, from UCLA to the University of New Haven, now are on some form of NCAA probation. David Berst, the NCAA's enforcement chief, said another 30 to 35 investigations are in progress.

Earlier this year, former Florida State University basketball player James Bozeman charged that he was given drugs so he could play while injured and accused the Seminole program of academic irregularities, under-the-table payments and racial discrimination. The coaches denied the allegations and the university held public hearings. The matter is pending.

The problems are hardly new.

Mychal Thompson, a forward for the Portland Trail Blazers of the National Basketball Association, says he was promised extravagant gifts by college recruiters.

"Cars, apartments, and first-class airfare home every time," Thompson told the Portland Oregonian last month.

Thompson played college ball at Minnesota and was the first player chosen in the 1978 NBA draft.

"They (the recruiters) would be real sly, talking out of the corners of their mouth, thinking that (the offers) would make a difference," he said. "Ninety percent of the major schools do it. Every college has to do it to get the blue-chipper."

Thompson said that at Minnesota "I just got extra money. ... If I needed extra cash to pay the bills, I always found a way to get it."

Not all investigations involve major violations.

Last fall, for instance, a

Miami football player was declared ineligible for a week for taking a $10 loan from a coach.

The NCAA Manual says a coach cannot lend a player money, no matter how little.

"If I could rewrite this book," said Ted Bredehoff, athletic director at Wichita State, holding up the Manual, "it would be about one-eighth of an inch thick."

"And if you did that, within five years, it would be right back to its current size," said Marty Perline, an economics professor who serves as the university's faculty representative for athletics.

Wichita State has just started serving a basketball program probation.

The passion to win begets rule-bending. Winning produces revenue, and that is vital for healthy athletic departments.

Yet, some schools spend more freely on sports than others.

"Because of their resources, state schools will always be more successful," said Darrell Royal, former football coach and athletic director at the University of Texas. "There are built-in advantages, unlimited funds, influential alumni, top-notch facilities."

All in the name of winning.

"I'm proud of the record I had," Royal continued. "But I recognize full well that I could have coached at another school, worked just as hard and just as well without achieving this record. Coaches always look at the other guy who's a good coach doing a good job but at a place with not nearly the same chance to win."

Martina: Not Mean Enough

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

"The trouble with me I haven't been mean enough," says Martina Navratilova. "It's different now — I'm using a black racket instead of a white one."

She is hungry. Hungry for blood — Chris Evert Lloyd's blood. Tracy Austin's blood. The blood of anybody who tries to block her inexorable march to the position of undisputed No.1 in women's tennis.

"When I first came here, I didn't think anybody in the world could beat me," Martina said, referring to the time in 1975 that as an 18-year-old she defected from her native Czechoslovakia and applied for U.S. citizenship.

"I think that's still so, but somewhere in the seven years between I got sidetracked. I didn't make the most of my potential. It was all my fault — mostly mental. I was too sure of myself. If I got down in a match, I got down on myself and let matches slip away."

"It's different now. I am a better player than I ever was, physically and mentally, more confident and more determined. My goals are to be the most consistent winner in tennis, win the U.S. Open and take over No.1 from Chrissy."

The first of the three goals already has been reached. With Lloyd passing up most of the winter tour because of a muscle sprain, Martina has won five tournaments, 21 matches in a row, and needs only to win the $100,000 first prize in the Avon Championships at Madison Square Garden this week to pass Lloyd as the game's all-time leading money winner among women.

Chris has a career earnings of $3,691,352. Martina is breathing down her neck with $3,626,704, of which $157,000 was won the first three months of this year.

Martina regrets that both Lloyd and Austin, the latter sidelined by a chronic back ailment, are absent from the field.

ACC Torney, Appetizer Now Rose Linksman Capture Second

By TOM FOREMAN Jr. AP Sports Writer
RALEIGH — Once upon a time, says North Carolina basketball coach Dean Smith, all you lived for was the three days of bedlam known as the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament. Anything after that was gravy, he adds.

But the ACC tournament is now the appetizer before the main course, the NCAA national championships. After Sunday's 70-60 victory over Villanova in the East Regional championship, Smith and his top-ranked Tar Heels will get to sit at the main table in New Orleans this Saturday with Houston, Georgetown and Louisville.

The Tar Heels will carry a 30-2 record and a 14-game winning streak into the game with the Cougars. The victor will meet the Hoyas-Cardinals winner for the national championship Monday night.
"Some years, you're just thrilled to get this far. I mean just absolutely thrilled," Smith told reporters after the Tar Heels had downed Villanova for the East Regional title. "Nowadays, when you go to the tournament knowing you can go on, it keeps you from putting too much emphasis on the ACC tournament."

There was a little aftertaste left with the Tar Heels after they completed an arduous 1980-81 season with a trip to the Final Four in Philadelphia. Smith said the team was playing its best basketball of the season in late March and hopes to repeat the pattern this year — with the exception of the 63-50 loss to Indiana in the title game.

"I feel like we deserve to be there this year," Smith said. "Last year was an upset."
In heading toward his seventh Final Four appearance, Smith said he wouldn't need to use the loss to the Hoosiers as incentive to compel his team to play well in the Louisiana Superdome.
"You don't have extra incentive," he added. "If you aren't ready to play when you get there ..."

The seven appearances place Smith behind John Wooden, former UCLA coach, who made it to the Final Four 12 times. Kentucky's Adolph Rupp led the Wildcats to six appearances in the championship round.
James Worth, whose emotional and offensive outbursts spurred the Tar Heels, said the Indiana game is far behind them.
"This is another year, another game," the 6-foot-9 junior forward said. "We're gonna have to prepare ourselves. Last year's game is behind us now. This is a new thing happening."
Senior point guard Jimmy Black adopted an old Southern adage in his approach to the Final Four — if it ain't broke, don't fix it.
"We feel like we're the number one team," Black said. "We're just gonna go out and do what we've been doing all year. We're not going to change anything."

ROCKY MOUNT — Rose High School's golf team continued unbeaten on the young season yesterday, winning its second match of the year at Rocky Mount's Hickory Meadows Country Club.
The Rampants finished the afternoon's round with a team total of 319, while Rocky Mount High School was a distance second with 341.
Rose's Brian Hill and Craig Davies led the day's play with a pair of 73's. Lynn Moore added an 86, Scott Wilson had 87, and Chris Evans and Susan Corbett both recorded 89's.
Rocky Mount's low scorer was Baker with a 76, while Thomas had 87, Vaughn had 88 and Gold had 90.

WILLIAMSTON — Farmville Central High School's golf team had little trouble in claiming its fifth victory of the year yesterday as it downed host Williamston at the Roanoke Golf and Country Club.
Farmville Central finished the day with a team score of 328, while Williamston was a distance 380.
Gary Hobgood led Farmville with a 79, while Jeff Cutler carded an 80. Scott Lewis added an 82 and Robbie Langston had an 87.
Williamston was led by Mark Ross with a 90, while Kathy Ross had 93, Doug Boyd had 95 and Rob Roney had 102.
Farmville returns to action on Thursday, playing host to Rose High School.

Lady Rampants Claim Second

Rose High School's girls softball team pushed over two runs in the bottom of the seventh inning and pulled out a 2-1 victory over North Lenoir yesterday.

The victory was the second in three starts for the Lady Rampants, both of the wins coming over the Lady Hawks.

North Lenoir took the lead in the fourth inning with its only run of the day and it stayed that way until the bottom of the seventh, when Rose pushed over both of its runs.

In the frame, Karen Winbon drove in the winning run on a two-strike pitch with two outs on the side.

Sheila Carmon and Wendy Jones led Rose with two hits each. No one had more than one for North Lenoir.

Rose travels to Greene Central today.

Creswell scored twice in the bottom half of the third to close within a run and then scored five runs in the fourth to take a lead it never lost.

Bear Grass made nine errors on the afternoon as the Lady Bears fell to 1-1 overall and in the league.

Angie Mizelle led the Lady Bears at the plate with two hits, including a solo home run. Both Cindy Harrison and Amy Bell had triples for Bear Grass.

ROBERSONVILLE — Roanoke Rapids scored five runs in the top of the seventh inning and gained a 9-7 softball victory over Roanoke High School yesterday.

Both teams scored single runs in the first inning of the game, and the visiting Lady Jackets added two in the third. Roanoke came back with four in the bottom of the inning, however, for a 5-3 lead.

Roanoke Rapids got one more in the sixth and Roanoke added two more to up the lead to 7-4 before the Yellow Jackets exploded for five in the top of the seventh to pull out the win.

Patricia Davis, Carol Gregg and Laurie Patton each had three hits to lead Roanoke Rapids, while Terri Faucett had two. Roanoke was led by Sharon Whitehurst and Marti Knox with three each, while Gwen Wynn and Sylvia Parker each had two.

Roanoke, now 0-2, travels to Edenton on Friday.

Fernando Back; But Not Signing

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Fernando Valenzuela, the 21-year-old Mexican-born left-hander who won the National League's Cy Young Award last year, has ended his holdout staged against the Los Angeles Dodgers.

The pitcher announced Monday that he will report today to the Dodgers' spring training camp in Vero Beach, Fla. But Valenzuela says he won't sign a contract. He even turned down a last-minute offer of more money through an incentive clause.

"Yes, we made them a new offer," Dodger owner Peter O'Malley told reporters at a Vero Beach, Fla. press conference. "Why they turned it down, I don't know. It had substantial incentive clauses."

"We made several calls. We made every attempt possible to resolve the matter," said O'Malley.
"I'm as puzzled today as I was a week ago, a month ago, two weeks ago. There is no bitterness or bad feelings on our part."

Valenzuela's attorney, however, said that the offer was nothing big. Dick Moss described it as "a little bone, a couple of little performance clauses."

The club, however, says it has not closed the door to the possibility of later raising Valenzuela's salary.

Even without his signature on a contract, Valenzuela will collect the reported $350,000 offered by the Dodgers compared with his $42,500 salary of last year when he won the National League's Cy Young Award as its best pitcher and the Rookie of the Year Award. He was the first player to win both in the same year.
"I have decided to report to the Los Angeles Dodgers in Vero Beach," Valenzuela said through an interpreter. "I will be doing so because of what I believe to be my duty to my family, to my teammates, to my friends and to myself. I am not reporting to sign a contract."

Valenzuela added that he did not believe his teammates would criticize him for the holdout. But he came under severe criticism from the Mexican-Americans in Los Angeles for his demands of $1 million and later $850,000 for the season.
"My representatives and I have never had any real negotiations with the Dodgers," Valenzuela's prepared statement said. "There have been meetings but the only negotiations have come from us."

The Dodgers have maintained that no second-year player has earned more than the figure they offered Valenzuela.

Hagler, Hearn Set To Meet

NEW YORK (AP) — "He boxes well, punches hard and has the ability to destruct and destroy," Emanuel Steward, the manager-trainer of Thomas Hearn, says about Marvin Hagler, the undisputed middleweight champion.

But before anyone at a Monday news conference could ask Steward if he hadn't got his fighters mixed up, Steward said, "My prediction is Thomas Hearn will win by a knockout along about the 13th round."

Hagler and Hearn, the former World Boxing Association welterweight champion, will meet May 24 for the middleweight title in a rich fight, although not as rich as a middleweight title defense by either Hagler or Hearn against Sugar Ray Leonard, the undisputed welterweight champion.

Hagler will make $5 million and Hearn $3 million — "maybe even more," said Bob Arum, who will co-promote the fight that will be shown on pay and closed-circuit television either in Las Vegas or Reno, Nev.

Leonard said in Mexico City Monday that he wants to fight Hagler before he retires and mentioned $20 million as his purse.

But Mike Trainer, Leonard's attorney, has said for a Leonard-Hagler fight to take place Hagler would have to weigh in at 154-155 pounds, although the middleweight limit is 160.

"This man (Hagler) is the middleweight champion," said Hearn. "Why should he come down? I think it would be very stupid of him to come down to 154."

But Steward, said Hearn, who will weigh about 155 for Hagler, would be happy to meet Leonard's conditions. In fact, said Steward, Hearn wanted the Hagler fight because he figures winning the middleweight title is the way to get a rematch with Leonard, who stopped him in the 14th round for the undisputed welterweight title last Sept. 16.

Hagler said doesn't think Hearn can carry out his plan, adding, "I'm just happy to see the fight materialize. It shapes up as by far the biggest payday of Hagler's career."

The fight is being co-promoted by Bob Arum Enterprises, Inc., and SelectTV of America, Ltd., an over-the-air-pay-television company.

"We think will be looking at 800,000-900,000 homes and we think we'll have 1 million seats for closed circuit," said Arum. "I think foreign rights probably will bring in $1 million."

The telecast also includes a 12-round fight between the Pipino Cuevas of Mexico and Hwang Chung Jae of Korea, the WBC's top two ranked welterweight contenders, in what the WBC recognizes as an elimination bout.

Asked why his Top Rank, Inc., wasn't promoting, Arum said because of the size of fighter's guarantees. SelectTV "wanted the most financially responsible of my companies to put up the money. My company with the most assets is Bob Arum Enterprises which is the parent company of Top Rank. Bob Arum Enterprises is wholly owned by me."

Two Miss Unanimous

ATLANTA (AP) — Joe Dawson of Southern Mississippi and Frank Burnell of Stetson narrowly missed unanimous selection to the 1982 All-South Independent basketball team announced Monday.

The team was chosen by the sports information directors at the 11 NCAA Division I independent schools in the South and was announced by John Justus, SID at North Carolina-Wilmington.

Dawson, the only repeater from the 1981 squad, and Burnell each received 10 votes. Dawson averaged 17.2 points per game and Burnell averaged 19.1.

Others named to the first team were Jimmy Foster of South Carolina, Oscar Taylor of New Orleans and Wayne Booker of Southeastern Louisiana.

The second team consisted of Mark Petteway and Claude Butler, each of New Orleans, Curtis Green of Southern Mississippi, Shawn Williams of UNC-Wilmington and Larry Wilson of Tennessee State.

Accorded honorable mention were Tony Britto of Campbell, Jerry Kelly of Southeastern Louisiana, Mark Reddick of Stetson and Eddie Talley of Charleston Baptist.

Yellow Jackets Rip Redskins

ROBERSONVILLE — Roanoke Rapids romped to a 15-5 victory over Roanoke High School yesterday in a North-eastern Conference baseball game.

The Yellow Jackets took advantage of nine Redskin errors and banded out nine hits to help them overcome an early 3-2 Roanoke lead.

Roanoke Rapids scored first, getting a run in the first inning. Chris Ray reached on an error and scored when Paul Carpenter got a hit.

After spotting the Jackets another run in the second, Roanoke came back to score three in the bottom of the second to take the lead. Dalton Everett doubled and Bernie Williford walked. Daruis Hudgins then cracked a three-run homer to provide Roanoke with a temporary lead.

Roanoke Rapids came back in the fourth, however, scoring five runs to put the game out of reach. Mike Alston reached on an error and Benj Arthur was safe on another misplay. Griff Burgwyn walked and so did Lee Gibson forcing in a run. Arthur scored on a sacrifice fly by Ray, and Carpenter doubled in the third run. Bobby Weisner then reached on an error, scoring the final two runs.

The Yellow Jackets added one in the fifth, five more in the sixth and two in the seventh on a homer by Weisner.

Roanoke got two more in the bottom of the seventh.

Carpenter, Weisner and Alston each had two hits to lead Roanoke Rapids. Angelo Spruill had three hits to pace Roanoke.

Yellow Jacket pitcher Tim Hux, who went the distance, struck out 11 Redskin batters.

Roanoke, now 2-1 overall and 1-1 in conference play, hosts North Pitt today in a non-conference game.

Demolishing Theaters Despite Star Protests

By RICK HAMPSON
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The wrecking crews were playing Broadway today, closing one of the Great White Way's long-running melodramas by demolishing two historic theaters that a star-studded cast of protesters failed to save.

Stars like Colleen Dewhurst, Richard Gere, Celeste Holm and Tammy Grimes were arrested with more than 160 other people Monday for trespassing when they moved into the path of machines waiting to raze the Helen Hayes and Morosco theaters.

After police carted off the protesters, a huge backhoe bit into the east wall of the Morosco, eliciting sobs and moans from the crowd. Some yelled "Shame!" and others sang "America the Beautiful." Protest leaflets fluttered from a window down to West 45th Street.

"I felt like I was being hit ... I started to cry," said Joseph Papp, the Broadway producer who organized the protest.

He hugged Miss Dewhurst, who was sobbing, as the bricks fell and dust swirled up.

"These theaters will be missed, I'm not kidding you," Papp said. "We need theaters where audiences can hear the human voice without amplification and where they can tell which actor is talking, without someone holding a hand up."

Demolition crews worked through Monday night to tear down the theaters, which are to be replaced by a hotel by Atlanta architect John Portman. The hotel plans call for a 1,500-seat theater, which opponents claim will be too big for good theater.

Papp led 170 protesters into a lot between the theaters Monday morning, a few minutes after the U.S. Supreme Court allowed the demolition.

Within 15 minutes the protesters were arrested and the last battle in a months-long fight against the demolition was over.

Waving to a crowd of several hundred and singing, "You don't know what you've got 'til it's gone," the demonstrators were driven to the police station, where they were issued summonses for criminal trespass.

Among those arrested were Estelle Parsons, Treat Williams, Mike Kellin, Susan Sarandon, Frank Converse, Michael Moriarty and Gary Sandy.

Assistant Police Chief Milton Schwartz agreed it was the most distinguished group he had ever arrested, but said, "I didn't have time to get their autographs."

The crowd chanted, "Joe! Joe! Joe!" as Papp, who held a cigar with one hand and Miss Dewhurst with the other, stood in line next to a police van.

A Darker Oliver Twist On TV

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Gone is much of the levity that characterized the movie and the Broadway musical. CBS' "Oliver Twist" is a deeper, darker, dramatic version of the Charles Dickens classic, but still worthy entertainment for all but the very young.

Dickens' 1838 book, which actually appeared in monthly serial form first, captured a grimy, gritty England and a society without much of a social conscience. A similar black portrait and commentary is drawn tonight.

Credit for the closer proximity to Dickens' work should go to director Clive Donner, who was a second assistant editor on David Lean's 1951 theatrical film version of "Oliver Twist," and writer James Goldman, who won an Academy Award for his screenplay of "The Lion in Winter."

A story of rags to riches and good defeating evil, "Oliver Twist" traces the adventures and mishaps of young Oliver, a pauper with a secret blue-blood ancestry. His mother died in childbirth, and Oliver begins life in an oppressive workhouse, where orphans are considered the lowest of the low. He eventually runs away to London and is adopted by a street gang of adolescent pickpockets.

The adult ringleader of these juvenile delinquents is Fagin, a Jewish fence and moneylender, played with compassion and humor by George C. Scott. Scott brings some motivation to this alienated man who becomes a miser and a loser because of the way he was treated by English society. Jews of that time were forbidden from owning land and mingling with the gentry.

Scott also provides some shading to the character. He's not really a malevolent man, but the damaged product of a prejudiced society. He uses his kids, but he doesn't abuse them. In fact, he shows some affection for these street urchins who have been abandoned by everyone else.

Newcomer Richard Charles, 10, plays Oliver in his first movie role. Last year, Charles almost got to play Oliver in a musical production in London. He was set to replace his brother on Monday, but the show closed on Saturday.

In tonight's "ITT Theatre" presentation, the angelic Charles is the ultimate good guy. Instead of a white hat, he has soulful blue eyes and a golden heart that plead for love and acceptance.

"Please, sir, I want some more," he says tentatively, breaking workhouse tradition in asking for another bowl of gruel for a sickly friend.

For his trouble, Oliver is whisked away to prison-like confinement. Later, he comes before the workhouse board to evaluate his ward status. His choices are a senior workhouse or a job making coffins. He's all of 9 years old. "Relief is one thing," says a board member. "Indulgence is another."

Scott is the only American in a stellar British cast. Tim Curry ("Amadeus," "Rocky Horror Show") is the maniacal Bill Sikes, a hired gun who forces sweet Oliver to commit crimes against his will. Eileen Atkins (who helped conceive "Upstairs, Downstairs") plays the insensitive supervisor at the workhouse, while Timothy West ("Edward the King," "Churchill and the Generals") is her scheming accomplice.

It's also a decidedly British looking production. Donner's cameras have found on-location scenes and studio sets that recall an ugly, nasty London. Through shadowy alleys and shady characters, Donner has re-created an England that is neither merry nor jolly and helps capture the essence of Dickens' concern for society's forgotten: the poor, the discriminated and the child laborers.

Eddie Fisher Says Burton 'Ambitious'

LONDON (AP) — Richard Burton planned to use Elizabeth Taylor to make him a star early in their stormy romance, singer Eddie Fisher claimed in a magazine article published here today.

Fisher, who was Miss Taylor's husband before she married Burton for the first time in 1964, said in an interview in Woman's Own that the Welsh actor thought Miss Taylor had no acting talent.

Fisher was quoted as saying he finally walked out on Miss Taylor after her romance with Burton blossomed during the filming of "Cleopatra," the screen epic that brought them together.

Fisher, now 53 and preparing to relaunch his career, claimed it was at that time that Burton told him: "You don't need her. You're a star already. I'm not. She's going to make me a star."

Fisher said he apparently sealed his own fate by suggesting Burton play Mark Antony opposite Miss Taylor's Cleopatra in the movie.

Fisher was quoted as saying: "Neither of us could take Burton seriously at first. He was scruffy. He played the buffoon and wasn't particularly handsome.

"But he could act. He had a marvelous voice. And he could drink heavily all night yet still work well the next day. Elizabeth started to become quite impressed with him."

Fisher told how he was "so much in love with Elizabeth" that at first he didn't mind acting as her nurse, messenger and assistant as his own career waned.

"Even if she had slight cold or felt faint, she would collapse with panic," he was quoted as saying. "But it just made me realize that underneath it all she was an insecure little girl and it made me love her more."

Mime Troupe At Festival

GRIFTON — The Curtain Players Mime Troupe and other members of the Ayden Theatre Workshop will be on hand to entertain during the Shad Festival, scheduled for April 1-4.

The actors will circulate through the pre-parade crowd Saturday morning selling official Shad Festival balloons and entertaining children with their mime routines. From noon to 5 p.m. the actors will operate a number of game booths at the McCrae Street lot.

The games lot, a new event to the 12-year-old Shad Festival, is located one-half block from the carnival rides, the square dancing and traditional events.

Two activities which have not been offered before in the area will be a make-up booth and a picture-taking booth. Visitors will be given a chance to dress up in costumes and have an instant photo snapped. At the make-up booth, a choice of theatrical faces will be offered.

Adjacent to the games lot will be the horseshoe tournament from 1-5 p.m. at the Methodist Church lawn and clogging and square dancing from 2-4 p.m.

For more information about the other 30 events of the festival, call 524-4356 or write Shad Festival, Box 928, Grifton, N.C. 28530.

North-South bid smoothly to their slam. When North made a two-over-one response and then followed with a jump preference, South upgraded his queen in partner's suit. Since he had control of the unbid suit, he launched into Blackwood and was content with a small slam once all first-round controls were located.

West led the top of his spade sequence and, when dummy hit the table, declarer was a bit perturbed by the "softness" in the red suits as well as the duplication in spades. It was possible that he could lose three tricks in hearts and diamonds.
Declarer won the king of spades in hand and cashed the ace-king of trumps, only to learn that he had a sure trump loser when East discarded a spade on the second trump. Prospects seemed bleak, but declarer was not about to lower the flag. The queen of diamonds was successfully finessed, the ace of diamonds was cashed and then came three top clubs, declarer sluffing a diamond from hand. Declarer cashed the ace of spades and ruffed dummy's last club to complete the groundwork and then presented West with his trump trick.
Declarer and dummy were each down to one trump and one diamond. West was saddled with the lead with

The Great Goethe

The 150th anniversary of the death of perhaps the greatest literary figure since Shakespeare is being commemorated this week. And most of us can't even pronounce his name. For over 50 years the poet, playwright, novelist and scientist Johann Wolfgang von Goethe (GER-tuh) dominated the German literary scene. His collected works run to 60 volumes and contain such masterpieces as his drama Faust. His Sorrows of Young Werther, about a young man who kills himself, sparked suicides throughout Europe. Goethe's personal life was as robust as his literary output. Although his many romantic liaisons became legendary, they inspired many of the beautiful lyric poems that are still treasured today.

DO YOU KNOW — Who wrote the English play Dr. Faustus?

MONDAY'S ANSWER — Mariner 4 was the first successful U.S. Mars probe.

Grand Jury Probe Begun

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Federal officials say it will take several weeks for a grand jury to complete its investigation of the Nov. 3, 1979, shootout that left five members of the Communist Workers Party dead.

The 22-member grand jury began its inquiry Monday into the Greensboro clash during a CWP-sponsored "Death to the Klan" rally to determine whether federal charges are warranted against the Ku Klux Klansmen, American Nazis and CWP members involved.

The grand jury was ordered after six Klansmen and Nazis were acquitted of murder charges in the case by a North Carolina jury in 1980.

U.S. District Judge Richard Erwin told the jurors that although attorneys for the federal government requested the grand jury, those attorneys could not "dominate or demand" any action by the grand jury.

Erwin said it would be wrong to return an indictment against a defendant simply because government attorneys requested it. "You are not the prosecutor's agent," he said.

At the same time, he said, "You would perform a disservice if you did not indict where the evidence warranted an indictment...." "Although you must work closely with the government, you must not yield your power or forego your independence."

Erwin told the jurors that if the U.S. attorney "refuses to act or is unable to act impartially on a matter, you may take the matter directly to the court." The judge said his instructions did not deviate from normal grand jury instructions approved by a 1978 judicial conference.

Erwin also told jurors that if they had any fixed opinions they should disqualify themselves.

After excusing the grand jurors to begin their work, Erwin denied a request filed by the CWP attorneys last week for a "special prosecutor" to supervise the grand jury proceedings.

About 35 to 40 spectators, many of the CWP members or sympathizers, were in the courtroom to hear the judge's instructions. The sympathizers formed a picket line briefly outside the Federal Building earlier in the morning, holding up signs.

Justice Department officials, who have been investigating the shootings, have said the grand jury probe will be wide-ranging. They said the grand jury could investigate the CWP and law enforcement officers, in addition to the six Nazis and Klansmen who were acquitted of state murder and rioting charges.

The six defendants were found innocent after a five-month trial in Guilford Superior Court in 1980. State charges against several others, including rioting charges against several CWP supporters, were dismissed several weeks after the trial ended.

A conviction of civil rights violations involving a death could carry a maximum sentence of life imprisonment. Non-fatal civil rights violations carry penalties of up to 10 years in prison, fines of up to $10,000 or both.

The case now goes back to Superior Court, for a new execution date.

Rook still has enough avenues of appeal, including the federal court system, to delay his execution for several more years.

Death Penalty Upheld For 2

WASHINGTON (AP) — The capital murder conviction and death sentence imposed on a North Carolina man for killing an Alexandria, Va. sheriff's deputy last year have been upheld by the Supreme Court.

Wilbert Lee Evans' broad constitutional attack against Virginia's death penalty laws and arguments his trial was tainted by the use of improper evidence were rejected Monday by the court.

The court also rejected arguments Monday that John William Rook's sentence should be overturned because jurors who imposed it did not specify what factors they had found that would point to life in prison as a more appropriate punishment.

Evans, now 35, was sentenced to death last June for the Jan. 27, 1981, slaying of Alexandria Deputy Sheriff William G. Truesdale of Landover, Md.

Originally arrested in November 1980 in Alexandria in connection with a 1978 homicide in North Carolina, Evans waived extradition back to his home state two days later to face murder and robbery charges.

He was returned to Alexandria in January 1981 to testify at the extradition hearing of another suspect in the North Carolina crime.

While Truesdale was escorting Evans and two other prisoners to jail after the hearing, Evans grabbed the deputy's gun and shot him in the chest. Evans escaped for about 10 minutes but was captured a few blocks away.

During the trial, Commonwealth's Attorney John Kloch said Evans had nothing to lose and planned it "like he was going to war" and said anything less than the death penalty would be an "insult to justice."

Evans testified he intended only to shoot off his handcuffs.

"I didn't have no intention to shoot anyone... I'm sorry," he said.

Rook's appeal did not contest his conviction for the May 12, 1980 rape and beating death of Ann Marie Roche in Raleigh.

Rook confessed to police that he grabbed Miss Roche off a Raleigh street, beat her with a tire iron, raped her, slit her throat and ran her over with his car.

The case now goes back to Superior Court, for a new execution date.

Rook still has enough avenues of appeal, including the federal court system, to delay his execution for several more years.

SLIDE BLOCKS I-40 — An Aurora, N.C. couple narrowly escaped serious injury when boulders, loose rock and dirt came down on Interstate 40 near the Tennessee line Monday. Jasper and Annie Laura Johnson of Aurora were treated for minor cuts and bruises after flying rocks from the avalanche destroyed their car as they drove along the east-bound lanes from Knoxville, Tenn. The slide buried approximately 300 feet of the west-bound lanes and sent scattered rocks and small boulders flying across the remainder of the highway. Traffic on North Carolina's main artery to the Knoxville World's Fair could be partially blocked for as long as two months while state highway crews clear the massive rock slide. (AP Laserphoto)

State Officials Promise Fast Action To Remove Rock Slide

WATERVILLE, N.C. (AP) — State officials said they'd act quickly to clear sections of Interstate 40 buried during a rockslide so North Carolinians' primary route to the 1982 World's Fair wouldn't be obstructed.

A pile of rock 200 feet wide believed to weigh 20,000 tons tumbled onto I-40 in the Great Smoky Mountains near the Tennessee border Monday, covering the road and injuring at least two people.

Cy Lynn, spokesman for the N.C. Department of Transportation, said it would take six to eight weeks to clear westbound lanes.

"We're very much aware that the World's Fair is going to be opening and that it is economically important to Western North Carolina to get it opened," he said. "We have a great sensitivity that that is a work order that is very important."

The World's Fair is scheduled to open in Knoxville, Tenn. May 1 and I-40 is the major link between Knoxville and North Carolina.

DOT crews hurried to the scene of the early-morning crash, and tried to see whether other vehicles had been buried.

"It doesn't look like anyone is buried in there, but it's possible. We're keeping our fingers crossed," said Ray Spangler a DOT division engineer.

"If anyone is under there, there isn't a chance in a million they survived," another state highway official said. "There's no way to tell for sure if a car was buried except to begin digging."

The slide occurred less than a mile from the state line in the Snow Bird range, located in the Pisgah National Forest.

M.C. Adams, DOT maintenance and equipment manager, said some of the rocks were "the size of cars." Both lanes of the westbound highway and most of the eastbound section were covered.

Jasper Johnson of Aurora, N.C., said he and his wife, Annie, were returning home from Knoxville when the rocks fell, and a boulder "about the size of a washtub" hit his car.

"Just inside the state line, I saw a shower of little rocks come down on the road, about the size of baseballs," he said. "Instead of trying to stop, I tried to speed up and get away from it."

"All my attention was concentrated on driving," Johnson said. "Then this big rock, about the size of a washtub, hit the car. I didn't see it coming, but I knew something terrible had happened. I think I passed out for a moment. I had the feeling we were going off the side of the mountain."

Johnson said the boulder knocked his car about 25 feet.

The Johnsons were taken to Haywood County Hospital in Waynesville, where they were treated for minor injuries.

The slide occurred one day before the DOT was to receive bids on a $9 million project to stabilize several slopes and shift a four-mile section of Interstate away from the steep rock cuts.

The project, which would require closing off one eastbound lane of the four-lane highway during peak periods of the World's Fair, was opposed from some tourism officials who said it would hurt the state's chances to capitalize on the fair.

But Spangler said Monday's slide showed the road should be made safe as soon as possible.

"It's hard to believe we haven't had more people injured than we have," he said. "If we had had more traffic on there at this time — if it was bumper to bumper for example — there is no way people could have avoided getting caught in it."

Primary Won't Be Held May 4

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's statewide primary won't be held on May 4 as originally scheduled, state officials say.

That's because the U.S. Justice Department didn't rule on legislative redistricting plans before today, passing the deadline set by the General Assembly for a May 4 vote.

The earliest possible date for the primary is now May 18, under the complicated law passed last month that also set five other potential dates through Aug. 3.

"It appears to rule out a May 4 primary," said James Wallace Jr., special deputy attorney general.

State Elections Director Alex Brock, in an interview, said May 18 isn't likely, either.

"Nobody ever gave a May date a prayer," said Brock. "June 1 is the earliest reasonable possibility, in our judgment."

The U.S. Justice Department, acting under the 1965 Voting Rights Act, okayed the latest congressional redistricting plan on Feb. 11. But it still hasn't ruled on state House and Senate plans, which also must be in place before the law permits the state Board of Elections to set the primary.

John V. Wilson, spokesman for the Justice Department in Washington, said the department by law has until April 24 to rule. "I don't expect a decision this week," he said.

The state law passed last month would have allowed the primary to be held May 4 if all three plans had been approved before today. In order to have a May 18 election, the plans must be approved before Tuesday, April 6. And for a June 1 primary, all must be approved before Tuesday, April 20.

Ayden Fireman Hurt At Blaze

AYDEN — A house near Rountree west of here was destroyed by fire Friday afternoon and a Winterville fireman was injured while fighting the blaze, according to Ed Skinner, secretary of the Ayden Fire Department.

Skinner said the Ayden Fire Department was dispatched at 12:02 p.m. to the house located on the Mack Allen farm on State Road 1117 off Highway 903 west of Ayden. Nothing was saved for the occupants listed as Mildred and Doris Ann Cherry.

The Winterville Fire Department assisted Ayden in fighting the fire and one of its members, John Billmyer, was injured when a floor collapsed. He was treated at Pitt County Memorial Hospital, after being taken there by the Ayden Rescue Squad.

Skinner estimated the loss at $13,000.

Rail Hearing

WILLIAMSTON — Three representatives from the Department of Transportation in Raleigh, headed by Mark Boggs, were in Williamston on Monday to conduct a public hearing on proposals that have been made to close three eastern North Carolina railroad freight lines.

The three under consideration are the lines from Parmele to Washington, the Parmele to Plymouth line, and the Ferside line running from Jacksonville to Wilmington.

Those attending the Williamston meeting expressed concern over the proposed line closings, especially the two lines leading out of Parmele. A spokesman for the Congleton Store in Stokes noted the Stokes-Washington line is still active, carrying about 14,000 freight cars annually on that route.

Local spokesmen also averred that the Parmele-Plymouth line remains an active means of transporting freight in the area. The line runs through Robersonville, Everetts, Williamston, and Jamesville on its route to Plymouth.

Boggs confirmed that reports show the Parmele-Plymouth line as being a profitable one, and in his opinion there was no way authorization would be given for the line's closure at an early date. He added there was a need for the roadbed to be upgraded, and that he felt the Seaboard Coast Line should be able to make necessary repairs.

Another point Boggs made was that the DOT people would, if necessary, pursue some type of action to keep the line open and in service. One of the possibilities he mentioned is that of purchase and operation of the line by a private firm. He also indicated that state funds might be available to ensure the two lines will remain operative.

Insurance Loss May Not Be A Disaster

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Environmentalists thinking that loss of federal flood insurance along certain barrier islands could retard coastal development might be mistaken, says a Sea Grant engineer Spencer Rogers.

"These no-insurance zones are not likely to have the expected effect," Rogers said. "In a lot of places, what they will do is encourage high-density commercial development, which is the least desirable type of development in a beach environment subject to storms and long-term erosion."

Federal flood insurance will begin drying up in 1983 for selected areas designated by the U.S. Department of the Interior as unfit for development because of high vulnerability to hurricane damage.

Environmentalists like the idea, but developers and most coastal towns hit with the designations are against it.

Rogers, who is paid by grants from state and federal government, spends his time giving advice to local governments on how to deal with coastal engineering problems.

He says lack of residential development would leave a vacuum which commercial developers would surely fill.

The government's policy of denying federal funds to undevelopable barrier islands will prohibit the Veterans Administration, the Federal Housing Authority and federally insured banks and savings and loans from making loans in the no-insurance zones.

Without such loans, single-family residential development and individually owned condominiums cannot be built or bought in the uninsured areas, Rogers said.

That means only commercial projects that can find private funding and pay back investors within a few years will be able to locate there, he said.

Rogers said the problem facing the federal government before the invention of flood insurance a decade ago was how to prevent property losses in high-hazard areas. Those losses cost the government millions in disaster relief and casualty tax write-offs.

Now that new coastal dwellings are hurricane resistant, Rogers said, residential development there would be least likely to suffer severe damage in a hurricane.

Established communities such as Wrightsville and Carolina beaches where old, poorly built structures still stand are where the losses will occur in a big storm, Rogers said. But under Interior's program, these communities will retain their insurance while new developments will be denied.

"The real question is not whether we're going to subsidize, because we are, one way or another," he said. "The real question is whether we're going to use that subsidy wisely and to the best advantage with a system that at least partially pays for itself as it goes, or whether we're going to use that subsidy to subsidize a system that at least partially pays for itself as it goes, or whether we're going to use that subsidy to subsidize a system that at least partially pays for itself as it goes, or

RETIRED PERSONNEL

The Pitt-Greenville Retired Teachers and School Personnel will meet Wednesday at noon at the Greenville Country Club for a luncheon meeting.

After lunch there will be a talk on "Crime Prevention for the Elderly." The talk will be made by Douglas Jackson, of the Greenville Police Department.

The meeting will be conducted by Irma Carr, president.

REVIVAL

Perry's Temple Free Will Baptist Church, one-half mile west of Saratoga on Highway 264, will hold a three-night revival Wednesday through Friday at 7:30. Evangelist Mary Williams will be in charge of the services.

Elder J.N. Perry, Jr., pastor, invites the public to attend.

Tests Found Drug Users

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Army is concerned about the availability of drugs to soldiers from Fort Bragg who now are on peacekeeping duty in the Sinai, CBS has reported.

In a Monday night broadcast, CBS said as many as 150 soldiers stationed at Fort Bragg who were scheduled to be sent to the Sinai have shown positive signs of drug usage.

About 50 were removed from the mission and no reason was given for why the other 100 were allowed to participate, CBS said. But its report said officials were concerned about the availability of hashish in Egypt, especially in light of the sensitivity of mission and boredom in the desert outpost.

A Pentagon spokesman Monday night said the Defense Department had no comment on the report.

Capt. Bill O'Connell, a spokesman for the public affairs office of the 18th Airborne Corps which includes the 82nd Airborne Division, also refused to comment on the report.

CBS said urine tests were given to 600 members of the 82nd airborne battalion, and 150 of those showed positive signs of drug use.

According to the report, the Army's urinalysis detected amphetamines, barbiturates, opiates, cocaine, Quaaludes, marijuana and hashish.

The report quoted a military drug expert as saying some, but not all, of the drug users were taken off the mission to Sinai.

"I would say roughly a third," he said.

Ask Approval Passenger Fee

WASHINGTON (AP) — Airport operators, concerned over dwindling capital improvement grants under the Reagan administration, are calling on the government to let them impose a passenger fee to make up the difference.

At least 46 airport operators took their pleas to members of Congress on Monday. They argued that the administration plans to spend up to $10 billion for a new air traffic control system but is sharply cutting back funds for airport development.

"We need much more balance between these two programs," Robert Michael, president of the Airport Operators Council International, which represents 187 airports, told reporters.

The administration plans to spend $450 million for airport development in the 1983 fiscal year, a 30 percent reduction from previous years, and wants to phase out federal assistance altogether. The airport operators say they need $750 million a year for expansion and improvements because of expected traffic increases.
