'Zero-Gravity Day' For Columbia Crew

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Columbia's astronauts, orbiting with nagging technical problems, plunged into a second day of troubleshooting this morning. Mission Control pared their work schedule and delayed a key test of the shuttle's robot arm.

Day Three was reconstructed as "zero-gravity day," with one major goal: "Get the crew back on the straight and narrow" for the tasks ahead.

Some work was going even better than expected. Astronauts Jack R. Lousma and C. Gordon Fullerton were told today that scientific experimenters are "very excited about the excellent data" coming down.

Capsule Communicator David Griggs said one of the successful tests involved firing a fast-pulsed electron gun mounted in Columbia's cargo bay. The idea was to study the impact of electrical changes generated by the beam. Among the other experiments was one measuring ultra-violet radiation from the sun.

Before Lousma and Fullerton had awakened, flight officials tinkered with the work schedule and decided to delay a grab-and-lift test of the 50-foot arm in Columbia's cargo bay.

Officials had told the exhausted pilots to sleep at least an extra hour this morning, vowing, "We won't call you; you call us." Predictably, that didn't hold up and a sheepish capsule communicator David Griggs said at 8:22 a.m., "We just couldn't wait any longer."

Lousma reported that the shuttle commode was out of order, but in any event he and Fullerton slept better on Tuesday. The wake-up music was the Marine Corps Hymn, and when it ended, Col. Lousma reported back, "I'm standing up by the way."

So it was a better start than Tuesday. "They didn't get a good sleep Monday night," explained flight surgeon Dr. Sam Poole. "They've had a very busy day; they've not eaten a lot. With a good night's sleep they'll be back on track." Poole reported Lousma had no difficulty Tuesday with the motion sickness that bothered him on launch day.

Flight director Neil Hutchinson altered the schedule, ordering up a lighter work day for the spacemen today, saying: "If you don't get the crew up to speed and feeling well, you don't get much work out of them."

Despite the crew's problems and a number of technical snags, Hutchinson described Columbia as a smooth-flying ship that should be able to complete its seven-day mission.

In adjusting the flight plan, NASA essentially swapped days three and four and today became zero-gravity day, so-called because jet thruster firings are to be held to a minimum to allow extensive scientific testing. The Wednesday agenda — more ambitious — in which Columbia would fly nose to the sun for thermal testing, would be accomplished on Thursday instead.

At first, Hutchinson said Fullerton might be asked today to remotely latch Columbia's 50-foot robot arm onto a payload, and perhaps lift it, without the guiding eyes of a failed camera. But by morning, Mission Control had postponed this test, at least until Thursday.

Military Takeover Hits Guatemala Government

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — Military officers who ousted Guatemala's right-wing president and installed a three-man junta say they acted because elections earlier this month were rigged to prolong an unpopular and corrupt regime.

Tanks and troops ringed the presidential palace in the Tuesday coup but no violence was reported. It was the first military takeover in 19 years in Guatemala, Central America's most populous nation racked by hundreds of political killings and a leftist rebellion.

Junta leader Efraim Rios Montt, a retired general who ran unsuccessfully for president eight years ago, told reporters he would dissolve congress and rule by decree with junta colleagues Gen. Horacio Maldonado Shad and Col. Francisco Gordillo.

In a televised address later, Rios Montt promised reforms and asked leftist guerrillas to lay down their arms, saying "subversion should not continue."

Rios Montt said ousted President Gen. Fernando Romeo Lucas Garcia fled the country by plane. It was not known where he sought sanctuary. Nor was there any word from Lucas Garcia's elected successor, Gen. Angel Anibal Guevara, who had been scheduled to take office July 1. The U.S. Embassy in Guatemala said it had received word that Guevara was safe.

Guevara, a close associate of Lucas Garcia, was elected March 7 amid widespread allegations that the voting was rigged.

Rios Montt told a news conference the ousted right-wing president and his successor had "imposed a government on us that does not represent the people."

Rios Montt, wearing a military uniform, promised elections to choose a new government but set no date. He also said "there is no state of siege in the country."

Coup leaders, described as junior military officers, also seized state-run radio and played martial music mixed with announcements that the rebellion was prompted by "corruption following a fraudulent election."

Rios Montt ran unsuccessfully for president in 1974 as candidate of a coalition headed by the center-right Christian Democratic Party. His two junta colleagues held high posts during Lucas Garcia's four years in office.

The junta leader vowed to "change Guatemala's image by way of its foreign relations, especially with the United States," which has criticized the country's human rights record.

In Washington, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. refused to speculate on the outcome of the coup but said "we are following it very closely."

The United States stopped military aid to Guatemala in 1977 after a dispute stemming from the government's refusal to accept human rights conditions.

Right-wing "death squads," paramilitary groups reportedly linked to the government and wealthy landowners, are blamed by Roman Catholic Church and human rights groups for most of the estimated 300 political killings reported each month.

Government critics say the death squads hunt and kill suspected leftists, guerrilla sympathizers and church figures who work with poor peasants.

There were reports Tuesday afternoon of shooting at the military garrison in Quezaltenango, 120 miles west of the capital, but Rios Montt claimed there was no resistance to the coup.

"The situation in the country is normal and tranquil," he said. "All areas are with the movement and support it fully."

By nightfall, Guatemala City and apparently the rest of the country were quiet, with no reports of leftist guerrillas exploiting confusion that followed the coup. The capital was heavily patrolled by military vehicles.

The only favorable early reaction to the coup Tuesday came from neighboring El Salvador, where leftist insurgents are fighting a civilian-military junta and elections are scheduled for Sunday.

Christian Democrat Julio Adolfo Rey Prendes, a powerful Salvadoran politician, congratulated coup leaders for "vindicating the country" after the reported election rigging. He also said a coup could happen in El Salvador if his country's elections are subverted by fraud.

Another Hike If No Freeze Okd

WASHINGTON (AP) — If Congress does not move to freeze benefit hikes, the nation's 36 million Social Security recipients can look forward to an increase of at least 7.4 percent in July.

The Social Security benefits, adjusted annually in July for inflation, are indexed to the Consumer Price Index of urban and clerical wage-earners.

The checks are adjusted based on the rate of inflation from the first quarter of one year to the first quarter of the next. With Tuesday's announcement of the February price figures, only next month's report on inflation in March is needed to make the exact determination.

Already, the price index over the last 11 months is up 7.4 percent.

Inmate Standoff Persists At N.C. Central Prison

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Negotiators, including a radio newsmen, today tried to free six prison employees from three knife-wielding inmates holed up in a tiny office in North Carolina's maximum security prison.

The inmates barricaded themselves and their captives inside a counselor's office in the prison's diagnostic center at 10:45 a.m. Tuesday, state officials said. Negotiators worked through the night.

At 5:45 a.m., Department of Correction spokesman Stuart Shadbolt said it was still unclear what the inmates' motives were. Up to that point, they had asked only to talk to a news media representative and requested food and drink.

"We still don't know what they want," Shadbolt said. "We're taking it one step at a time. We're trying to find out what it is they're interested in, trying to find some common ground."

Officials took Bart Ritner, news director of WPTF in Raleigh, into the prison. Ritner talked with the inmates by telephone and through the door leading to the small room where the hostages were being held, but did not go in.

Shadbolt said later that Ritner's efforts to secure the hostages' release had "fallen through," but said Ritner would remain inside the prison in case he was needed.

Shadbolt said the prison's strategy was being coordinated by a "management team" composed of N.C. Secretary of Corrections James Woodard, Director of Prisons Rae McNamara, and other prison officials.

The team decided to deny the inmates request for food and beverages, said Shadbolt. He declined to say why.

The hostages are employees who were working in the diagnostic center and were taken by the inmates with a lethal weapon, which was a knife," said Shadbolt.

Few details about negotiations were revealed. The inmates and captives communicated with negotiators by telephone and through a hole punched in the panel of the door leading into the office.

"The inmates were seen to have a knife on one of the hostages," Shadbolt said. He said the inmate was holding the knife at the neck of an unidentified hostage, but that none of the captives appeared to be bound.

He said the inmates did not seem desperate but sounded a little tired.

"We are continuing to discuss with them and keep the lines of communication open," Shadbolt said.

Negotiators included a special hostage squad from the State Bureau of Investigation, Gary Pearce, press secretary to Gov. James Hunt was also on the scene. A spokesman said he was there to monitor the situation for Hunt.

The hostages were identified as Lacy L. Joyner of Raleigh, a chaplain; David C. Atkins Jr. of Creedmore, a prison guard; and Charles R. Cameron of Apex. Hugh M. Martin Jr. of Raleigh, Jimmy J. Stallings of Smithfield and William Beckwith of Raleigh, all four data compilers in the diagnostic center.

The hostages were identified as Lacy L. Joyner of Raleigh, a chaplain; David C. Atkins Jr. of Creedmore, a prison guard; and Charles R. Cameron of Apex. Hugh M. Martin Jr. of Raleigh, Jimmy J. Stallings of Smithfield and William Beckwith of Raleigh, all four data compilers in the diagnostic center.

The inmates were identified as William Darrell Little, 26, of Dobson, N.C., eligible for parole in 1989 after convictions for breaking and entering, larceny, second degree rape and robbery; Ezekiel Hall, 28, of New York, eligible for parole in 2014 after convictions for robbery with a firearm, first-degree kidnapping and assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill; and Melvin Surgeon, 30, of Annapolis, Md., eligible for parole in 2015 after convictions for four counts of robbery with a firearm.

The counselor's room is approximately four-by-nine feet in size on the third floor of the prison. Shadbolt said the inmates barricaded the door with all the furniture in the room.

"It's confined to that particular section, the east wing of the floor," Shadbolt said.

Conditions remained outwardly calm around the prison which was reinforced by second shift of guards.

Officials said other inmates would not be confined to their rooms today and would undergo a "normal routine."

The nearly century-old prison houses 1,310 male residents, all felons.

Sen. White To Seek 8th Term

Sen. Vernon E. White of Winterville announced today that he is seeking his eighth term as state senator from the 9th Senatorial District comprised of Pitt and Martin counties.

"It has been a rare privilege to serve the people of my district and the people of North Carolina for the past 14 years," he said.

White said he was proud that he helped East Carolina University expand its programs in getting funds for a four-year medical school and for making Pitt County Memorial Hospital a teaching hospital affiliated with the medical school. He served on the Appropriations and Higher Education committees and the Medical Manpower Commission which recommended establishing a degree-granting medical school at East Carolina University.

He has served six terms as chairman of the Senate Agricultural Committee and three sessions as vice chairman of the Appropriations Committee. He also is vice chairman of the Appropriations subcommittee on education and base budget, and serves on the Finance

WANTS POLICY CHANGES

There is some high school policy that I would like to see changed because I think it's demonstrating rather than preventing irresponsibility and less than to-the-point communicative among students, their parents and school administrators. Two examples are Farmville Central High School's policy of penalizing students two points in every academic subject in which he has an unexcused absence, rather than dealing directly with the issue itself and reporting this to the parent. The other is failing a student who has been absent 30 days, even if the absences are excused and with good reason and the work made up. I am informed that both policies are several years old and stated in the school handbook. I understand the former is local school policy, the other county-wide. To whom should I talk? C.T.

FCNS Principal James McAdams suggests you contact Acting County Schools Supt. Tom Craft and Barbara Owens of Fountain, chairman of the Farmville Area Schools Advisory Committee, about the former; Craft and county school board Chairman Mark Owens about the latter.

No Objections To Pretreatment Regulations

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

No opposition was voiced Tuesday night toward proposed new pretreatment regulations for local industries at a public hearing held by the Greenville Utilities Commission.

The proposed pretreatment regulations, developed in accordance with guidelines issued by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, are designed to control the discharge of wastewater to the commission's sewerage system by nonresidential users.

Nine local industries have been identified as potential candidates for pretreatment. They include Fieldcrest Mills Inc. (Karastan spinning), Burroughs Wellcome Co., McGraw-Edison Co., Spunwind Inc., Union Carbide Corp., Pitt County Memorial Hospital, and the science complex (biology building), Flanagan Building (chemistry), and medical school complex at East Carolina University.

While the hospital and university facilities will not be subject to categorical pretreatment standards to be established by the EPA, the other five industries fall within 34 industrial categories for which federal categorical pretreatment standards are to be promulgated and they will be subject to the standards.

Nine other local industries fall within the 34 industrial categories also. However, based on information received during the study of the proposed pretreatment regulations, they were not found to be candidates for pretreatment.

They include: Vermont American Corp., Eaton Corp., Grady White Boats, Procter and Gamble Paper Products Co., U.N.X. Chemicals, TRW Staton Plant, Fieldcrest Mills (Karastan worsted), Empire Brushes and H.A. Haynie Co.

GUC Director Charles Horne noted that comments made Tuesday night, and written comments received within the next 15 days, will be included in the minutes of the hearing and taken into consideration by commission members before a final draft of the regulations are approved.

At a workshop session following the hearing, commission members discussed the possibility of using compressed natural gas, rather than gasoline, to fuel GUC vehicles.

Horne told the board that compressors and conversion units to convert 66 commission vehicles to natural gas would cost an estimated $188,000, and should pay for itself in about six years.

The installation of a CNG system on the vehicles, Horne noted, would not restrict the vehicles to the use of natural gas for fuel. Instead, the vehicles would be able to use gasoline or compressed natural gas.

A half-dozen or more of the commission's vehicles are presently equipped to operate on liquid propane gas.

Following the discussion, commissioners instructed Horne to prepare two proposals for bids — one including a proposal for converting 66 vehicles and another proposal to convert 38 vehicles.

Homemaker's Haven

By Evelyn L. Spangler
Pitt Home Agent

If home furnishings and accessories are to last and be enjoyed for many years, they need proper care and maintenance. Here are a few general rules that may simplify the care of home furnishings and accessories.

1. Read and keep the use and care labels attached to accessories and furnishings. They will state what the product is made from and point out any special care procedures that should be followed.

2. Assemble and store cleaning supplies, equipment and instructions in an easily accessible place. That way, they can be found immediately when they are needed.

3. Short intervals of continuous care are usually more effective than allowing an item to become so badly damaged or soiled that it requires a major cleaning procedure.

4. Immediately deal with spills or stains. It is helpful if the spill can be identified, thus aiding in the selection of removal procedures. Remember to test the recommended cleaning procedure in an inconspicuous place, if possible.

5. Scrape up residue or liquid with the dull side of a knife or blot with a paper towel. Work carefully from the edge of the spot toward the center to avoid enlarging the stain. A blotting action is preferred to rubbing.

Wicker
Wicker furniture and accessories should be dusted often, using a cloth dampened with water, a soft brush or vacuum cleaner attachment. From there, raw wicker and painted wicker require different treatment.

When cleaning raw wicker, that is wicker with no applied sealer, take the furniture outside and spray with a very fine spray from the garden hose. This small amount of water helps keep the fibers from becoming brittle or splitting. Be careful, however, not to over wet the fibers.

If further cleaning is needed, apply a mild soap or detergent solution. Rinse well and dry thoroughly. A coat of shellac once a year will enhance the beauty of raw wicker.

If the wicker has a painted finish, clean it the same way you would a piece of wood furniture with a painted surface. Do not wet the surface of painted wicker furniture; water may cause the paint to peel or crack.

Use milk or plain yogurt to clean piano keys and keep them white.

Peer Pressure Causes Him Loneliness

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My 13-year-old grandson is a nice-looking, intelligent, quiet boy. He does very well in school but is not particularly athletic. Last year he began to have trouble with his peers, becoming the butt of their teasing. He has become withdrawn and a loner. His apparent unhappiness has become upsetting to his parents, although they try not to show it.

How should this problem be handled? Is there some literature on the subject that we can give him to read?
CONCERNED GRANNY

DEAR CONCERNED: Reading is not the answer. Although his parents may mean well by not showing their concern over their son's withdrawn behavior, they aren't helping him by ignoring it. The boy needs to verbalize his feelings, not hide them.

If he can't (or won't) talk to his parents, he should be counseled by an understanding professional who is not emotionally involved.

DEAR ABBY: I am 27, single, attractive and no prude. After a second or third date with a guy (whom I know only casually), he wants me to go back to his apartment, assuring me that his intentions are honorable, but my instincts tell me otherwise.

When I politely refuse, he gets mad, then grudgingly takes me home. I never hear from him again.

On those rare occasions when I do go back to his apartment, as soon as the front door is closed, he starts making physical advances. When I refuse them, he gets angry and then takes me home, and I never hear from him again, either.

Surely there must be a way to continue dating a guy without ending up in the bedroom before it is mutually agreeable. But how? Sign me...

NO WIN

DEAR NO: If a guy drops you because you won't go to bed with him, his message is clear—all he wants is a bed partner. You're better off without him. (That's how you separate the men from the boys.)

There are still some good men around who prefer a woman who won't go to bed with a guy she hardly knows. Hang in there!

DEAR ABBY: I had a boyfriend who said he liked me, but I guess he liked another girl better because he broke a date with me to be with this other girl. Abby, I tried everything to get him back. I wore black satin jeans, makeup and high heels, but it didn't work. What should I do?
FIFTH-GRADE WORRIES

DEAR WORRIES: You're much too young to be "dating," but make a note of what didn't work to get a boy to like you. And thank your lucky stars for the valuable lesson you learned early in life.

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of an exceptionally beautiful son. Believe me, this is not just another mother talking. My problem: Whenever I take this boy into a supermarket or walk him down the street, strangers stop and tell me how beautiful he is.

Of course, I'm proud and pleased, but almost everyone who sees him says, "He's much too beautiful to be a boy. He should have been a girl!"

Abby, although he's not yet 2, remarks like these are not healthy for a boy to hear.

Most people mean well, but they need to be reminded that repeated remarks can influence the development of a small child. If you agree, I hope you'll use this in your column.
NERVOUS IN NORTHRIDGE

DEAR NERVOUS: I do, and I shall.

Home Economics Convocation Set

ECU News Bureau

Alumni and friends of the School of Home Economics at East Carolina University are invited to attend the school's annual convocation Thursday, April 1.

The event will begin at 6:45 p.m. at the Casablanca and will feature a banquet to honor current and past students. The theme is East Carolina's 75th anniversary, which is being celebrated this year.

"Home economics has been a part of ECU since its founding in 1907," said Mr. Eugenia Zallen, dean of the school, referring to the home economics curriculum which was part of the original offerings of East Carolina Teachers Training School.

Frances Parnell of Wilmington, an ECU home economics alumna and past president of the N.C. Home Economics Association, will be featured speaker. She is a high school teacher and author of a home economics textbook.

The recognition of outstanding seniors from the various home economics departments, announcement of scholarship and award winners and presentation of the dean's award to persons who have made outstanding contributions to the school during the 1981-82 academic year. In addition, 20 outstanding home economics alumni will be honored.

All persons interested in attending should call the home economics school, 757-6891, for reservations or further information.

Bride-Elect Entertained

Linn Winbourne, bride-elect of Tommy Coghill, was honored at a miscellaneous shower held Friday night. Assisting hostesses were Carol Batts and Jean McCombs.

The honoree was remembered with a white carnation corsage.

The refreshment table was covered with a white linen cloth and decorated with an arrangement of spring flowers in white and yellow. Dolores Bunting poured punch.

Special guests included mothers of the bridal couple, Sarah Winbourne and Earline Coghill.

Miss Winbourne was honored at a miscellaneous shower held Sunday evening at the home of Sybil Hardee. Assisting hostesses were Connie and Amy Hardee.

The refreshment table was covered with a gold cloth with a white lace overlay. An arrangement of white and yellow spring flowers were flanked by lighted yellow tapers.

Connie and Amy Hardee assisted in serving and receiving gifts.

Mrs. Hardee greeted guests.

The bridal couple will be married April 17 at 4 p.m. in the First Presbyterian Church.

Tar Heel Barbecue Best

Sandwiched between budget considerations and what to do about the Central American situation, Congress does manage to take up something of real importance on occasions.

Last week it was the "Barbecue Bowl" between North and South Carolina with Sen. Jesse Helms as master of ceremonies.

The contest was judged by the Virginia and Georgia congressional delegations. The winner was — who else? — a North Carolina firm, Short Sugars Barbecue Restaurant of Reidsville.

Rep. Eugene Johnson, R-N.C. expressed no surprise. North Carolina barbecue is "the real thing, clearly superior to the mustardy concoction prepared in the lower Carolina."

To which Rep. John Napier, R-S.C., replied, "Hogwash."

The judges charitably gave second and third places to South Carolinians.

Around here, there can be no surprise that North Carolina barbecue is the ultimate of the art. After all, barbecuing was invented here.

From time-to-time arguments have raged about whose barbecue in North Carolina is the best. There is a difference, but we will save that argument for another time.

Suffice it to say that, given unbiased judges, North Carolina barbecue will win any contest, bowl or whatever, every time.

President Must Earn Trust

President Reagan last week saw businessmen as "haggling" over his economic program.

He told the National Association of Manufacturers, "What we need now is not last minute haggling or displays of blatant self-interest. We need the support that only America's businessmen can give us."

He expressed disappointment in some business leaders.

What the president may have forgotten is that he has to earn the support of business leaders, and everyone else, by examples of leadership.

A solid economy is built on a trust in the national leadership as much as anything. If that leadership is lacking it is not surprising that businessmen are concerned and fearful of investing for the future.

THIS AFTERNOON

The Bottom Line

By BILL NOBLITT

(Second of Two Articles)

RALEIGH — The bottom line is that North Carolina's community colleges are obviously providing a place for advanced education to students who would otherwise not be able to go to college at all.

Surveys show that nearly eight out of 10 students enrolled in community or technical colleges of the 58-campus system report that this form of education was their first choice — not a last alternative to attending another institute of higher learning whether privately operated or in the state's university system.

What influences that decision? The fact that community colleges are commuting colleges with driving distance of almost any place in the state, their low cost, and the availability of flexible programming to meet many different educational needs are among chief reasons.

Two years ago a study commission headed by former Gov. Terry Sanford dropped the bombshell on the state's higher education community.

Change The proposal called for allowing all schools in the system to offer college transfer courses, and to change their names to "college" rather than "institute."

Until then, two distinct types of schools existed: the community college which offered college transfer work in addition to the continued emphasis on technical and vocational training; and, technical institutes which offered no college preparatory programs.

A demonstration of the way in which politics and power of educators rule the growth and development of the system can be seen in the way in which technical institutes are kept as non-college-transfer schools whenever a private or public college or university is nearby. Where there was no "competing" campus, community colleges developed.

Since the Sanford Commission report a number of campuses have changed names. None have added college transfer work. The latest attempt to change is in Greensboro where Guilford Technical Institute tried but failed to become Guilford Community College. There was considerable debate regarding the change, centered around the fear of competition, and the fear that adding college transfer courses would produce decreased emphasis and attention on the job-training goals of the school.

The Sanford report sought to allay such fears: "Many do not understand that when an institution becomes a community college and gains authority to give associate degrees, it does not shed any of its authority or duty to offer technical or vocational work."

Marc Allred, vice president for research and planning in the Department of Community Colleges, finds that a school's new image resulting from a name change and transfer courses actually helps increase enrollment and expand the job-training programs.

Tough The procedure for becoming a community college is not easy. There must be a complete review of how the new programs would affect the vocational and technical programs. Support for the change must come from local school boards and the board of county commissioners. The request must be approved by the State Board of Community Colleges, and then by the

Today In History

By The Associated Press Today is Wednesday, March 24, the 83rd day of 1982. There are 282 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Marh 24, 1603, the crowns of England and Scotland were joined under Scotland's James VI, who began his reign as James I upon the death of Queen Elizabeth I.

On this date: In 1924, Greece was proclaimed a republic.

In 1953, Dowager Queen Mary, widow of England's King George V, died at the age of 85.

In 1974, Uganda crushed a coup attempt against President Idi Amin following a machine gun and mortar battle with rebels.

In 1976, a military government took over in Argentina, overthrowing and arresting President Isabel Peron.

Ten years ago: Britain took direct control over Northern Ireland in an effort to restore order.

supply-side economics to work and each expects that issue may have to be fought out in a presidential election.

Because of their similar philosophies, Kemp vigorously pushed Lehman for secretary of the Treasury when Reagan took office and, when that failed, to be under secretary for monetary affairs. Shunned by the White House, Lehman set his sights on the governorship of New York.

While other Republican hopefuls for governor deferred to Kemp by telling him they would step aside should he wish to run himself, Lehman informed him he was in the race to stay no matter what Kemp did. While the others secretly informed Kemp without being solicited that they would do their best to see him nominated for president, Lehman made no such commitment.

Nevertheless, Lehman was shocked and angered when Kemp endorsed Ned Regan for governor. That split suppliers and angered Kemp's natural allies in the New York Conservative Party, who had embraced Lehman. Lehman himself attributed the move to Regan's promise to support Kemp for president.

When front-runner Regan revealed on March 11 he did not have the stomach for a primary showdown against tough, well-financed Lew Lehman, the chance to heal the breach was welcomed by conservative politicians. But what has happened since is not promising.

On March 11, Lehman telephoned Kemp and proposed breakfast in Washington. March 16 was decided as the date, but that day came and went without details being pinned down. Lehman phoned again on March 18, and the two disagreed as to who was supposed to have made the follow-up call for breakfast. It was then decided that they would lunch in Washington, but no date has been set.

Lehman seems reluctant to interrupt his campaign for a "blind" trip to Washington without a commitment for Kemp's endorsement. Kemp is unwilling to promise such an endorsement. As for presidential backing, it is certain that Kemp will not ask it and Lehman will not volunteer it. Most likely to be accomplished over the luncheon table is renewal of good feelings between the two men.

Apart from what help such a rapprochement would provide for Lehman's governor campaign and Kemp's ambitions to be president, it would reunite two of the most innovative young figures in the Republican Party. Kemp, 46, and Lehman, 43, are eloquent voices trying to dissuade the Republican Party and President Reagan from the masochistic depths of austerity and deflation. All that prevents them from working together is the abundance of ego and jealousy that has played so large a part in political history.

N.Y. Rift Is Crucial One

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Just what happens at a yet-to-be-scheduled luncheon in Washington between Rep. Jack Kemp and Lewis Lehman will affect not only their frigid personal relationship but the conservative Republican future in New York and the nation — and perhaps the presidential succession.

Nobody can predict that the rift between the political world's two leading suppliers will be closed over lunch, with Kemp endorsing Lehman's candidacy for governor of New York. Indeed, nobody can be sure these two busy politicians will find time to lunch. "You have two massive egos at work here," says one mutual friend, who believes a Kemp-Lehman rapprochement is imperative for the conservative cause.

The issue was set when state controller Ned Regan, endorsed for governor by Kemp and state Republican leaders, unexpectedly pulled out of the race. Lehman, a millionaire drug store chain owner and economic scholar making his political debut, suddenly became the front-runner. The newysierous prospect that he might be the next governor of New York radically transformed the speculation about the successor to Ronald Regan.

Conservative Republican politicians, who generally suspect President Reagan will not seek re-election, believe conservative Kemp would fare well in primary elections against Vice President George Bush, representing the party's moderate wing. But the prospect of a conservative governor of New York hostile to Kemp undermines his home base.

"As things stand today," one of Kemp's political advisers told us, "I don't think there's any doubt that Lehman as governor would put New York behind Bush."

Lehman, a close friend at Yale of the vice president's younger brother Johnny, backed Bush for president in 1980 (despite his description of supply-side doctrine as "voodoo economics"). But more influential than Lehman's distant friendship with the vice president is his coolness toward Kemp.

That coolness has nothing to do with doctrine. Amid Republican hysteria over budget deficits, Lehman and Kemp are lonely figures diagnosing the Federal Reserve Board's monetary policy as the true source of economic calamity. Each believes a return to the gold standard is necessary for

Did you know that every five minutes a mentally retarded child is born in the United States?

Approximately 6 million Americans are mentally retarded. They are not all children — they are of all ages. Their families are rich and poor alike. They live in every city, county and state in America. With proper training, many mentally retarded individuals can support themselves to some degree and can become self-respecting and contributing members of the community.

Retarded persons — like all persons — need to experience acceptance, understanding and love. They need to know that their community is concerned and cares about them.

Our community has a rich opportunity and challenge to expand activities to include retarded persons of all ages. This acceptance does not just "happen." It takes a concerned person to make it happen. Will you help? Will you be a concerned person in our community who will make a difference in the lives of others?

Strength For Today

THE VOLCANO IN THEIR HEARTS

Occasionally we read in the newspapers about people who have gone berserk. Perhaps they have lived quietly for decades — some of them into old age — and then one day they start out on a rampage of violence.

The cause very often is that for years these people have been harboring in their hearts a volcano. Just as quiet and stately craters suddenly erupt now and again, so out of the depths of some natures a group of hideous repressed resentments burst into a volcano like explosion.

Religion provides a means of handling these situations. God and his divine resources stand ready to help us as resentments, frustrations, uncontrolled passions seethe and rumble in our natures. The Holy Spirit quiets the fires. So we should try taking not only our desires to the Lord but our nagging resentments and the sins we consider so shameful that we try to put them out of our consciousness. These, as we admit, are out of our control, but they are not beyond God's control. — Elisha Douglass

Difference In Image, Reality

By JOHN CUNNIFF AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — What a remarkable illusion, said Bruce Jacobs, as he spoke about the image of the elderly as poor, neglected and victimized.

Rarely, he said, do you see such a disparity between the image promoted by the media, politicians and the elderly themselves, and the reality, which Jacobs measures as an assistant professor.

He finds that less than 5 percent of the elderly live in institutions, close to 75 percent live in their own houses, 80 percent have paid off their mortgages, and most of the others have small percentages on their loans, often at very low interest rates.

"Don't equate aging with poverty," advises Jacobs, who teaches political science at the University of Rochester. "Social Security is the most effective antipov-erty program we have."

Jacobs concedes that without benefits many of the elderly indeed would be impoverished, but as a group, he says, they aren't hurting. "Not to say that they're wealthy," he adds.

The number officially counted as poor, says Jacobs, is down from 33 percent of all elderly in 1959 to about 6 percent if non-cash benefits are included. Statistically, he maintains, there's a greater chance of being poor if you live in the South than if you are elderly.

Why then does the false impression exist? Because, he believes, two of the most poignant, most memorable images are of "poor, helpless, neglected older people," and poor, helpless, neglected young people."

The professor, who with Alvin Rabushka of the Hoover Institution wrote the book "Old Folks At Home," observes that individual instances of poverty are recalled more easily than statistical truth.

He argues that to maintain the image could bring problems in allocating aid to the real poor. He fears it could result in limited resources being wasted on aid to people who do not need it, leaving insufficient money and assistance to assist the truly poor.

Demographics enter the picture: The population is getting older. The number of people 65 years and older grew twice as fast as the general U.S. population between 1960 and 1980. Jacobs projects that by 2040 those over 65 years will make up 20 percent of all Americans.

Not only is the population growing older, but the old appear to be growing more aggressive in pursuit of their own well-being. They are organized. And, says Jacobs, as people age, voting activity rises.

With the ratio of contributors to recipients falling, he says, resources must be allocated more wisely or the risk exists for a major conflict of generations, of younger workers against older recipients.

He was asked how the image might be changed. By open discussions, by exchanging ideas, by matching statistical reality against those poignant images of the elderly poor that everyone has a soft spot for, he replied.

TB Star

As late as 1909 the leading cause of death in the U.S. was an infectious disease called variously the white plague, phthisis or consumption. Today we know it as tuberculosis or TB and it still kills 2 million people annually worldwide. But 100 years ago on this date, the German physician, Robert Koch, made a major advance against the disease by isolating the tuberculosis germ. Since 1900 the death rate from TB has dropped in the U.S. from 194 per 100,000 to less than 1. Koch is now considered to have been one of the world's greatest bacteriologists. For his important work on anthrax, bubonic plague and TB, he was honored with the 1905 Nobel Prize for medicine.

Lower Grades In Bar Exam

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Law-school graduates taking the state bar exam for the first time fared worse this year than last year, says the dean of the University of North Carolina Law School.

Sixty-five percent of the bar candidates passed the exam in February, while only 32 percent of the repeat applicants passed, said Kenneth S. Broun.

Figures on bar exam results were obtained Tuesday through interviews with spokesmen for four of the state's five law schools. Statewide results were to be released officially today by the N.C. Board of Law Examiners.

Only 153 applicants took the exam this year, the second time it has been offered in February. The test traditionally has been given in July, and most of the applicants take it then.

Last February, 73 percent of all applicants who took the test for the first time passed and 45 percent of the repeaters passed. In July, the passing rate for applicants taking the test for the first time shot up to 88 percent, forty-four percent of the repeaters passed.

The figures for February 1982 were more in line with 1980 figures, when the passing rate for applicants taking the test for the first time was 68 percent.

A comparison of results among the five law schools was not possible Tuesday because the UNC law school was the only school with complete results.

Broun said 77 percent, or 10 of 13 UNC graduates who took the test for the first time, passed. Only 18 percent, or two of 11, repeaters were successful, he said.

Broun cautioned that the figures "are not particularly meaningful" because the number of applicants was so small. But he said he was concerned that only two of the 11 UNC graduates who repeated the exam were able to pass it in February.

The success rate for graduates of N.C. Central University Law School, under pressure since 1974 to improve its passing rate, compared favorably with the statewide rate for first-time applicants. Three of five December graduates, or 60 percent, passed the test, said Charles E. Daye, dean of the school.

Daye said only one repeat applicant passed the test.

governor and the Advisory Budget Commission.

Upgrading of faculty, library facilities and holdings, and accreditation by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools are typically required. The program provides an associated degree representing the first two years of work, and may transfer to a four-year school with no loss of credits and no retesting.

As it was before the Sanford Commission report, there are 23 community colleges offering transfer work. Twenty-eight schools have changed names to "technical college" and seven remain technical institute.

The State Board of Education rejected the bid by Guilford Tech to become a community college.

Associated Press Writer
JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel's Cabinet rejected Prime Minister Menachem Begin's offer to quit after a tie vote in Parliament on a no-confidence motion, spurred by the military crackdown on Palestinian rioters in occupied Arab territory.

The 58-58 vote Tuesday in the 120-seat Knesset, Israel's Parliament, had brought the government to the verge of collapse because Begin had threatened to resign if he did not get a clear vote of confidence. Four Knesset members were absent.

"The Cabinet has just decided to reject the prime minister's proposal whereby he would have gone to the state president and tendered his resignation," Cabinet Secretary Aryeh Naor said.

The decision came during the fifth day of Palestinian rioting in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and Gaza Strip, territories seized by Israel in the 1967 Middle East war.

In violence reported today, Israeli soldiers shot and killed a young Palestinian demonstrating in the West Bank town of Hebron, the mayor said. Military authorities said they were

Threat For Drug Users

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — Members of a Sinai peacekeeping force found to use drugs who continue after participating in a rehabilitation program could be fired, Fort Bragg officials say.

A release from the Fort Bragg Public Affairs Office confirmed Tuesday that two "trained Army specialists" had been sent to the Sinai Desert to administer the first part of a two-part drug and alcohol abuse program.

The procedures will include counseling and drug education, Fort Bragg officials said. Participants will be soldiers identified as being drug users, officials said.

Army officials issued the statement in response to a CBS report that as many as 150 soldiers from the 82nd Airborne Division, scheduled for deployment in the Sinai, showed positive signs of drug use. The network reported that about 50 were removed from the mission.

Capt. William B. Maddox, a Fort Bragg spokesman, said Tuesday that 24 soldiers removed from the peacekeeping force showed signs of drug use following urine tests conducted in January. But he said 15 of those "were to be removed for other reasons."

Some were facing disciplinary action, some were ill and others were scheduled for overseas assignments that conflicted with the Sinai mission, he said.

"Other personnel who tested positive were interviewed individually by the Operation Awareness staff under the supervision of Dr. Tom Tennant, clinical director," the release stated. "All were found to be fully qualified both physically and mentally for deployment."

investigating. Two other Palestinians have been killed by troops since the riots began.

On Tuesday troops fired guns into the air, smashed padlocks on stores of striking shopkeepers and tear-gassed rioters who lobbed stones, blocked roads and burned tires. Four soldiers and four Palestinian youths were reported injured in those disturbances.

A curfew was imposed on the Gaza town of Rafah, where Palestinians rioted over charges an Israeli soldier raped a teen-age girl. The military strongly denied the accusations.

The unrest began after a West Bank Palestinian mayor was fired last week for refusing to cooperate with Israel's new civilian administration in the area, which many Arabs regard as Israel's step toward granting Palestinians only limited autonomy. Militant Palestinians want total independence.

The alliance of opposition parties that sponsored the no-confidence motion denounced the Cabinet's 12-6 decision to reject Begin's resignation. Moshe Shal, chairman of the Labor Party, the largest opposition bloc in Parliament, said the Cabinet's action would just "stave off the inevitable end."

The 68-year-old prime minister, re-elected to a second term last June, has enjoyed immense support in the Jewish state because of his militant stand against anti-Israeli Arabs and the Palestine Liberation Organization, an umbrella group of guerrilla factions fighting for an independent Palestinian state.

But his conservative government's harsh treatment of militant Palestinians in the occupied territories has been increasingly criticized not only by Arabs but by moderate Israelis and by the United States, Israel's main ally.

Begin is also criticized by extreme right-wing groups opposed to Israel's scheduled April 25 pullout from the Sinai Desert, which is being returned to Egypt under terms of the 1979 Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty.

Although the no-confidence motion focused on government action in occupied territories, it also criticized the government's handling of other issues ranging from foreign relations to the economy.

The tie vote resulted from the defection of right-wing rabbi Haim Druckman, who had been a member of Begin's 61-59 majority in Parliament. He rebelled over Begin's insistence of going through with Israel's Sinai pullout.

Druckman belongs to the National Religious Party, a junior coalition partner. The party is dedicated to the principles of religious Zionism, incorporating the belief that the Sinai is part of the biblical land of Israel.

Israel's two largest newspapers reported today that Begin favors new elections to strengthen the majority of his coalition, probably next November which is three years ahead of schedule. The papers did not say why Begin favors such a date.

During the parliamentary debate Tuesday, Labor Party leader Shimon Peres accused the government of aggravating relations with Egypt, turning the West Bank into a "Palestinian ghetto," wrecking the delicate relationship with Arabs of the recently annexed Syrian Golan Heights, damaging ties with the United States and mishandling the economy.

Defense Minister Ariel Sharon, replying for the government, denounced Peres for Labor Party policies when it governed in the 1970s. Sharon blamed Labor for increasing PLO influence in the West Bank.

The Begin government has tried to reduce PLO influence by encouraging West Bank Palestinians to join Israeli-sponsored government cooperatives under moderate Palestinian leadership.

C-of-C Okays East's Voting

U.S. Sen. John East of Greenville has earned a perfect 100 percent score for his voting record from the U.S. Chamber of Commerce in its analysis of the 1981 session of Congress.

The study, released in a special edition of the chamber's "Congressional Action" newsletter, shows East supported the chamber's position on 18 key economic issues last year.

East, a Republican, was one of only 16 senators to earn a 100 percent score.

"These key votes were vitally important to rejuvenate the economy by providing tax incentives and reasonable reductions in the growth of federal spending," East commented.

Some were facing disciplinary action, some were ill and others were scheduled for overseas assignments that conflicted with the Sinai mission, he said.

"Other personnel who tested positive were interviewed individually by the Operation Awareness staff under the supervision of Dr. Tom Tennant, clinical director," the release stated. "All were found to be fully qualified both physically and mentally for deployment."

Some Advocate Revising Law

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Some members of the University of North Carolina Board of Governors want the General Assembly to change a state law permitting out-of-state schools to offer course in the state without the board's approval.

The N.C. Supreme Court recently ruled 4-2 that the UNC board had no authority to regulate college courses taught in North Carolina by Nova University of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

State law now authorizes the board to license only the conferral of degrees in the state, the court said.

Some board members have said they may seek action from lawmakers as early as the June session.

REMOVED — Bangladesh President Abdus Sattar, above, was reported to have been removed from his post in a coup d'etat. According to news accounts, Gen. H.M. Ershad, chief of the army staff in Bangladesh, apparently took control of the government after declaring martial law in Dacca and announced himself as martial law commander. (AP Laserphoto)

Fraser Expects GM Pact's Approval

By ANN JOB WOOLLEY
Associated Press Writer
DETROIT (AP) — The talks between the United Auto Workers union and General Motors Corp. that led to a new concessions agreement nearly broke off during the final 37 hours of bargaining, UAW President Douglas A. Fraser says.

"I didn't know (at the time) if we would reach an agreement," Fraser said Tuesday. "It was very close."

He declined to elaborate on the trouble spots, but today's Detroit Free Press quoted an unidentified, highly placed UAW official as saying the near breakdown came over GM's reluctance to reverse its decision to close several plants.

"One more negative response from the company on that issue would have sent us home," the source reportedly said, adding that GM negotiators backed down and agreed to rescind the closings after top UAW bargainers threatened to walk out and break off the talks.

"It's always a risk to lay down a threat like that, but we had no other choice," the official said.

Fraser said he expects the contract will win approval from the union's 290-member GM council, which votes Thursday in Chicago.

The pact's unanimous acceptance by the 11-member UAW bargaining committee Sunday night was considered "a good representation of the rank-and-file," Fraser said. "Normally, if you get the committee to approve unanimously, you're in pretty good shape."

The council, made up of union leaders from across the nation, can vote to recommend the approval or rejection of the tentative contract or can opt not to recommend any action.

Fraser talked about the vote after a news conference with Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan in which the UAW and Donovan announced a $300,000 federal government grant would pay for retraining of 400 laid-off autoworkers for jobs in the aerospace industry.

Rockwell International Corp. would hire the workers to help build the B-1 bomber, a long-range combat aircraft, Donovan said.

He said details were incomplete, adding, "I hope that within six months we can have the UAW and Labor Department agree on the training mode and the placement of workers."

Fraser said that if the GM council votes to recommend approval for the contract, union leaders at each domestic GM plant will attend planning meetings March 31 and April 1 in Chicago.

There, the union leaders will go over the contract before explaining it to their membership, Fraser said.

UAW officials have said ratification should take about two weeks.

Although he expects the pact to be approved, Fraser said he does not expect approval to be as strong as the 98 percent margin by which the council voted March 11 to revive negotiations with GM. Earlier talks collapsed Jan. 28.

The agreement asks GM's 320,000 U.S. hourly workers to give up wage increases during the 30-month accord, defer their June, September and December cost-of-living allowance increases, and forfeit nine annual paid personal holidays — all of which would save GM more than $2 billion, analysts say.

In return, GM promised to cancel four announced plant closings to save 8,000 jobs, improve benefits for laid-off workers, implement a profit-sharing plan and agree to a two-year moratorium on plant closings related to the subcontracting of work to overseas and non-union facilities.

The agreement would run through Sept. 14, 1984.

Offer History Project Talks

East Carolina University's Department of Library Science will present a program entitled "Preserving Our Heritage: Oral History Projects" Thursday at 6:30 p.m. in the Joyner Library auditorium.

The event will be the final part of the 1981-82 Lectures on Librarianship series. Speakers include Donald Lennon, director of the ECU Manuscript Collection, and three collaborators on "A Team of Mules and A One-Room School," a collection of excerpts from interviews conducted by students in local schools as part of Pitt County Oral History Project.

The student-collaborators are Meredith Foltz of Shepard Memorial Library, Alice Keene of Pitt County Community Schools and Claire Pittman of Welcome Middle School.

Two Collisions Here Tuesday

An estimated $3,800 property damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Tuesday.

Heaviest damage, police said, resulted from a 4:10 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Greene Street and Gum Road, involving cars driven by Zarie Daniels Wooten of 408 White St. and Patty Elaine Roebuck of Route 11, Greenville.

Officers, who said both drivers were injured in the collision, estimated damage at $1,500 to the Wooten car and $800 to the Roebuck auto.

Cars driven by Mary Elizabeth Burns of 2012 Azalea Gardens and Lola Keech Tripp of Winterville collided about 2:10 p.m. at the intersection of Elm and Fifth streets, causing $1,000 damage to the Burns car and $500 damage to the Tripp auto.

Heavy Damage Due Collision

An estimated $3,200 damage resulted from a 2:05 p.m. collision Monday on Charles Street, one-tenth of a mile south of the Red Banks Road intersection.

Investigators identified the drivers involved as Benjamin Harold Norris of Ayden, Harry Vonzel Hunter of Route 1, Winterville, and Dorene Stadlander of Cherry Point.

Police, who charged Norris with failing to reduce his speed enough to avoid an accident, estimated damage at $1,500 to the Norris car, $2,000 to the Stadlander car and $700 to the Hunter truck.

Paper Sold To Roy Park

LUMBERTON, N.C. — Roy H. Park announced today the purchase of The Robesonian, a 112-year-old newspaper published each afternoon Monday through Friday and on Sundays.

Park, owner and president of Park Newspapers Inc. and Park Broadcasting Inc. of Ithaca, N.Y., purchased the Lumberton newspaper from the families of J.A. Sharpe

Jr., who had served as president of The Robesonian Inc.; Alfred M. Sharpe, secretary and business manager, and Courtney S. Ward, vice president.

The purchase announcement indicated the current officers would remain with the newspaper during a transition period.

Park, who now owns six daily newspapers, three weeklies and two shoppers in North Carolina, said the Lumberton transaction includes all assets of The Robesonian as well as the assets of the McCulloch Press Inc., publisher of the semi-weekly Bladen Journal in Elizabethtown.

Park Broadcasting's holdings include WNCT-TV, WNCT-AM and WNCT-FM, Greenville.

How Tar Heel Senators And Representatives Voted

By ROLL CALL REPORT
WASHINGTON — Here's how area senators were recorded on major roll call votes March 11-18. There were no House votes.

DISCLOSURE — By a vote of 55 for and 39 against, the senate adopted language making it easier for the government to prosecute journalists, authors and others who publish the names of covert intelligence agents. An individual would be subject to criminal prosecution if he or she had "reason to believe" the publication would harm the

AMBUSH VICTIMS
MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Communist guerrillas killed 13 policemen and soldiers and one civilian in two ambushes southeast of Manila, the government-run Philippines News Agency reports.

U.S. intelligence efforts if the individual had been engaged in a "pattern" of revealing agents' names. Prosecution could result even if the names already were in the public record.

The language replaced a stricter test of criminality, one that required the government to prove the individual had specific intent to harm U.S. intelligence operations. It was added to S-391, which was passed and sent to the House.

Supporter Walter Huddleston, D-Ky., said the stricter language would protect journalists and others "whose intention it is to further free discussion of governmental activities, but at the same time it will allow prosecution of those who name names in order to harm the U.S."

Opponent Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y., said the language would "chill legitimate journalism... When the First Amendment is threatened, so indeed is our national security."

Senators voting "yea" wanted those publishing agents' names to be subject to prosecution if they have "reason to believe" they are harming the country. Senators voting "nay" wanted "criminal intent" to be the key test of illegality.

Sens. John East, R, and Jesse Helms, R, voted "yea."

NAMING AGENTS — The Senate rejected, 37 for and 59 against, an amendment giving more specific definition to the "pattern of activities" test to be used by prosecutors in deciding whether to charge those who publish the names of covert intelligence agents. The amendment was offered to S-391 (see preceding vote) and was supported by senators who thought the legislation infringed on First Amendment rights.

Under the amendment, the "pattern" would have to be a series of disclosures having the primary objective of exposing covert agents.

Sponsor Bill Bradley, D-N.J., said his amendment would change the bill to mean that "where exposure is a mere side effect, as when a journalist is writing with the purpose of uncovering corruption in government, it would not make the author criminally liable..."

Opponent John Chafee, R-R.I., said the amendment opened too large of an escape hatch and that "it places an extraordinary burden on the prosecution."

Senators voting "nay" wanted prosecutors to have more leeway in determining whether publishers of agents' names are engaged in a "pattern of activities" injurious to U.S. intelligence operations. East and Helms voted "nay."

Trees Add To Property

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Trees and other plants not only beautify landscapes, they also increase property value and should be appraised, like the contents of your home, for insurance purposes.

Good landscaping is estimated to add up to 30 percent to property values.

Two pamphlets about the value of trees and what to do if landscaping plants are destroyed in a casualty are available free from the Council of Tree and Landscape Appraisers.

The council's "Guide for Establishing Values of Trees and Other Plants" is recognized by insurance companies, the IRS and the courts as the industry guide for landscape appraisers.

To protect your investment in landscape plantings, council experts recommend planning the plantings, perhaps with professional advice. The plantings should also be properly maintained. This includes photographs taken as the landscape matures or new plants are added.

If an accident, lightning, fire, flood or other casualty destroys any plantings, you should get a professional appraisal to present to your insurance company with your claim.

Losses not covered by insurance can be claimed as a tax deduction — for which you will also need a professional appraisal.

Skatathon To Benefit Hospice

Hospice of Eastern Carolina will be the beneficiary of money raised during a "Skatathon" to be held by East Carolina University's Gamma Sigma National Service Sorority Sunday from 1 to 5 p.m. at Sportsworld.

Hospice attempts to ease the pain and treat the symptoms of patients with advanced cancer so they can stay in their own homes as comfortably as possible. Its volunteers also try to help the patients' families deal with the illnesses and impending deaths of their loved ones. Initially funded by the East Carolina University School of Medicine's department of surgery, the program will depend for its continuation upon funds from local support. Gamma Sigma Sigma has chosen the Skatathon as its main project for the semester.

Participants may recruit his or her own sponsored. Participants will be admitted free and there will be a prize for the largest contribution. For more information, call 752-0882.

Plan Fun Fly Aid Air Circus

GRIFTON — The Fun Fly and miniature air circus will be a two-day event at the 1982 Shad Festival, report festival officials.

Flying for fun, one-quarter scale events and team air show competitions will be featured April 3 from 1 a.m.-4:30 p.m. The Fun Fly will continue April 4 from 1 a.m.-2 p.m. and local air show teams will perform from 2-3 p.m. The Cristen Eagles, a Navy air show team from Norfolk, Va., will perform. Air show events will take place four miles south of Grifton on the Du Pont lawn.

More information about the Shad Festival may be obtained by calling 524-4338 or writing Box 928, Grifton.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed higher today, continuing its strongest rally so far in 1982. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 30.82 points in the last four sessions, rose 1.53 to 828.20 in the first half hour today. Gainers took a 5-1/2 lead over losers in the early trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues. Analysts said the market's recent advance tended to feed itself by encouraging traders to believe that prices had bottomed out, at least for the time being. They also cited positive news in recent days on interest rates and inflation. Several banks lowered their broker loan rates Tuesday. And the government reported that the consumer price index rose only 0.2 percent in February. Today's early prices included General Motors, up 1/4 at 41 1/4; International Paper, up 1/4 at 33 1/2; and American Airlines, off 1/4 at 14.

Times Reports 'Direct Talks'

NEW YORK (AP) — The United States and Nicaragua have agreed to open direct talks on their differences as a result of diplomatic efforts by Mexico, The New York Times reported today. The newspaper quoted diplomatic sources as saying Mexican Foreign Minister Jorge Castaneda conveyed an American suggestion for talks during a four-hour visit to Managua on Monday and Nicaragua immediately accepted it, The Times reported. At the same time, however, Nicaragua is preparing to denounce before the U.N. Security Council what it says are United States plans to invade its territory. The sources said Nicaragua had indicated its readiness to open talks with Washington this week but the Reagan administration wanted to wait the outcome of elections in El Salvador next Sunday. Now the talks are provisionally scheduled for the first half of April, according to the sources, the Times said. State Department spokeswoman Anita Stockman said today she could neither confirm nor deny the report. "It's news to me," she said. "I'm not denying it; I just don't have anything on it." Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo called for direct negotiations between the United States, the governments of Cuba and Nicaragua and the warring factions in El Salvador to reduce tensions across the Caribbean Basin during a visit to Managua on Feb. 21. Castaneda held two rounds of talks with Secretary of State Alexander Haig in New York City this month and they agreed to meet again after the El Salvador elections.

Received Legion Award

Pierson Shaw, a senior at D.H. Conley High School, was first runner-up in the state American Legion Oratorical Contest held in Asheboro last Friday. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C.P. Shaw of Greenville. As runner-up, Shaw was awarded a $700 scholarship from the American Legion, Department of North Carolina. He was sponsored by the Pitt County American Legion Post No. 39. Prior to the state competition, Shaw was winner in the county, district and division levels. The purpose of the American Legion's National Oratorical Contest is to develop a deeper knowledge and appreciation of the Constitution of the United States on the part of high school students. Other objectives of the contest include the development of leadership, the ability to think and speak clearly and intelligently, and the preparation for acceptance of the duties and responsibilities, the rights and privileges of American citizenship.

Obituaries

Ayers
 Mrs. Georgia T. Littleton Ayers, 68, died Tuesday at her home, 639 Brock Ave., Winterville.

The funeral service will be conducted at 3:30 p.m. Thursday in the Wilkerson Funeral Chapel by the Rev. Paul Lanier, pastor of the Greenville Church of God. Burial will be in Pinewood Memorial Park.

Mrs. Ayers, a native of Craven County, spent most of her life in Greenville and for the past three years had lived in Winterville. She attended the Greenville Church of God.

She is survived by her husband, Elwood Ayers of Farmville; two sons, Charles F. Littleton of Winterville and Tracy Littleton of the home; four step-sons, Ronald Ayers of Farmville, James Ayers, Johnny Ayers and Joey Ayers, all of West Palm Beach, Fla.; a step-daughter, Mrs. Cletus Basford of Wilson; three sisters, Mrs. Lillian Daniels, Mrs. Paul Godley and Mrs. Willie Manning, all of Greenville; four grandchildren; 10 step-grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

The family will receive friends at the funeral home from 7-9 p.m. tonight.

Calhoun
 Mr. Radford Calhoun, 75, died Tuesday at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. Funeral arrangements will be announced later by the Wilkerson Funeral Home.

Davis
 Mr. Gerald F. Davis, 52, died Tuesday in Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p.m. Thursday in the Red Oak Christian Church by his pastor, Dr. Harold Deitch. Burial will be in the Snow Hill Cemetery. The body will be taken from the Wilkerson Funeral Home to the Church at 12:30 p.m. Mr. Davis, a native of Snow Hill, had been a resident of Greenville for the past 24 years. He was a deputy in the Pitt County Sheriff's Department until his retirement in 1972. He had also been a member of the Farmville Police Department and the East Carolina University Campus Police, and for a short time was employed at Cox Amature Works. Mr. Davis was a member of the Red Oak Christian Church. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Wilma Heath Davis; three daughters, Mrs. Wayne Heath of Durham, Mrs. Frank N. Taylor of Ayden and Tammy Davis of the home; a brother, Kenneth (Butch) Davis of Faison; three sisters, Mrs. Susie Rouse and Mrs. Jimmie Ingram, both of Kinston, and Mrs. Ann Powell of Swansboro; and two grandchildren. The family will receive friends at the Wilkerson Funeral Home from 7-9 p.m. tonight and at other times will be at the home, 2609 Dunn St.

Edwards
 Mrs. Ella Bright Edwards, 66, of Timmonsville, S.C., died Monday. Funeral services will be held Thursday at 2 p.m. at the Trinity Episcopal Church in Chocowinity with the Rev. Irwin Hulbert officiating. Burial will follow in the Oakdale Cemetery in Washington, N.C. Mrs. Edwards was a native of Beaufort County. Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. Linda Sutton of Timmonsville and Mrs. Lois Water Raper of Long Beach, Calif.; two sons, Phillip Gene Edwards of Washington and Benson Eugene Edwards of Timmonsville, S.C.; one sister, Mrs. Appie Mae Jones of Washington; nine grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

The family will be at the Paul Funeral Home in Washington from 7-8:30 p.m. today and at other times will be at the home of her son, Phillip Edwards (Swan Point).

Norlander
 Mrs. Leona C. Norlander of 115 Oxford Road died Monday in Pitt County Memorial Hospital. A funeral service will be conducted at 11 a.m. Saturday in the Wilkerson Funeral Chapel by the Rev. John Price, rector of St. Timothy's Episcopal Church. Burial will be in Pinewood Memorial Park. Mrs. Norlander, a former resident of Ardsley, N.Y., had been a resident of Greenville for 12 years. She was a member of St. Barnabas Episcopal Church in Ardsley. Surviving are her husband, John R. Norlander; a son, John Raymond Norlander of Glendale, Calif.; a daughter, Mrs. Carole L. Garozzo of Morrisville, Pa.; two brothers, Edward Beleski of Alexandria, Va., and Thaddeus Beleski of Pensacola, Fla.; a sister, Miss Clara Beleski of Glen Lyon, Pa.; and four grandchildren. The family will receive friends at the funeral home from 7-9 p.m. Friday.

Taylor
 Mrs. Lillian B. Taylor, 83, died Tuesday at the University Nursing Center. The funeral service will be conducted at 11 a.m. Thursday in the Wilkerson Funeral Chapel. Burial will be in Pinewood Memorial Park. Mrs. Taylor was born in Pitt County and spent her early years in the Hobgood Community of Halifax County. She was married to W. Clarence Taylor, who died in 1958, and they made their home in Greenville. She was a member of Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church. She is survived by three sons, Bill Taylor, Carlton Taylor and Alvin Taylor, all of Greenville; five grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. The family will be at the home of a son, Carlton Taylor, 217 Windsor Road, and will receive friends at the funeral home from 7-9 p.m. Wednesday.

IRA VS IRAs.
 At last, some good news for the American taxpayer. Now, with an NCNB IRA, a working couple can deduct up to $4,000 a year* from Federal and North Carolina tax returns every year. And that's not the only tax break that you'll be getting. Unlike other savings plans, you pay no tax on the interest building up in your IRA. Later on, when you start withdrawing from your NCNB IRA, you'll have to pay taxes, but chances are, by then you'll be retired and in a lower bracket. The new IRA at NCNB. One of the biggest tax breaks in our history is right in your neighborhood. And our people have been trained to help you make the most of it. Come in and talk it over. Now. The sooner you start, the better.

 "Oh, dem bases on balls," the legendary Casey Stengel was reported to have said.
 Last night, East Carolina coach Hal Baird might have heard to utter the same remark. Pirate ace Bill Wilder went through one of his shakiest nights of his career against ECAC-South foe Old Dominion last night, issuing walks that brought in the tying run, and then a three-run double that allowed the Monarchs to come away with a 4-1 victory in the contest.
 It was the first loss of the season at Harrington Field in 11 contests for the Pirates, and was also their first ECAC-South loss after three straight wins. Overall it dropped the Pirate record to 11-4.

 For the Monarchs, it was the first ECAC outing of the year and moved them into first place in the league standings with a 1-0 record. They are 8-3-1 overall.
 The game, for the most part was a pitching duel between Wilder, who slips to 2-2, and Monarch hurler Jim Ambrose, who improved his record to 4-1.
 Wilder, in six and two thirds innings of work, gave up only three hits, but walked five and hit three — a very unusual game for him. He also struck out seven.

Reliever Bob Davidson, who finished off the game, allowed one hit, walked one and struck out three to give the Pirate staff a total of ten strikeouts.
 Ambrose, in contrast, allowed five hits to the Pirates, but that was it. He did not walk a batter and struck out three.
 "They just played better," Baird said when it was all over. "They did what it took to win the game. I thought we had the chance to break it open early, but we didn't challenge them. They've got a good club, and I'm impressed with them."
 Baird said he felt that perhaps Wilder got a little "too fine" in his pitching after the first go-around. "He was trying to cut the corners a little too close and was just missing. Then, (in the seventh) when he started losing it, by the time we got someone warmed up, it was too late."

 While Baird said he was disappointed, he did feel that the Pirates had their chances to win the game, but were just unable to put things together. "Their kid pitched a fine game. He was ahead of the batters all night long and made us hit his pitch."
 "This will make it tougher (winning the conference title). They are stronger than (James) Madison. Ambrose is their best pitcher and we'll probably see him again. But I feel like we are capable of pushing some across against him. I felt we hit the ball better and played better defense. They just had that one inning."

 And those walks.
 Both teams had early threats that came to naught. In the first, Old Dominion put its two leadoff batters on via hits, but a fielder's choice and two strikeouts ended that. Again in the third, the Monarchs threatened on a two out hit batter and a walk, but again Wilder got the next batter to fan. Then, in the sixth, the same thing happened, only the walk came first and the hit batters after one out, but a fly ball and a strikeout again killed the threat.

 The Pirates meanwhile loaded the bases with two outs in the first, only to see an infield pop end that threat. In the second, they left a runner stranded on second on a two-base one-out error.
 Then, in the fourth, a mighty blast by Fran Fitzgerald got the Pirates their only talley of the evening. The homer — hit over the fence in dead center field, 410 feet from home — was Fitzgerald's fourth of the season, and provided the Pirates with a 1-0 lead.
 But East Carolina could do no more. No other baserunner reached as far as second base the rest of the evening as Ambrose bore down and got good backing behind him.

 Old Dominion then pushed ahead in the fateful seventh inning. Lenny Koperna led off, getting hit by a pitch — the third hit by Wilder. After an out, Joe Millis bopped one into the grass in front of the plate, and Fitzgerald threw out Koperna at second.
 Millis then stole second and Mark Wasinger walked. Paul Keyes followed, loading the bases, and Wilder then walked Bob Gilland, forcing in Millis with the tying run. Jeff Beard then slashed a drive down the left field line, just in bounds.

Superdome To Offer 'Distant Vision' View Of Tournament

 The semifinals and finals of the NCAA Basketball Tournament may make a unique sort of history — a "pay TV" attraction at the actual site of the event.
 "More than 61,000 tickets have been sold to both Saturday's semifinals and Monday night's championship game. Just how many spectators will be able to see what they have paid for is another story.
 "What it amounts to is they are paying $16 to sit in the Superdome and cheer for their team and watch the game on television," says Bill Curl, public relations director for the Louisiana Superdome in New Orleans. The best view from those distant seats, says Curl, is afforded on the Superdome's six giant TV screens.
 About a third of the seats are bad ones, so bad that the NCAA went to great pains to inform buyers that some of them were as far as 375 feet from the court. Tickets for the worst 3,000 seats are stamped "Distant Vision."
 Those paying $16 for the three games will have to peer over a set of rolling bleachers. The basketball court is situated along one side of the football field and a bank of seats from the other side rumbles across on rails to provide the basketball configuration.

 "NCAA officials have made the greatest effort to educate ticket buyers in the history of the industry, sports or otherwise," says Cliff Wallace, general manager of the Superdome.
 In fact, adds Dave Cawood, the NCAA's director of public relations, "It almost came to the point where we were asking, 'Are you real sure you want to buy these tickets?'"
 Those who can see the court will watch North Carolina and Houston in the first half of Saturday's doubleheader, followed by Georgetown and Louisville. The winners meet Monday night for college basketball's national championship.

 Although Georgetown has a sharpshooting guard in Eric "Sleepy" Floyd, Coach John Thompson says "defense is the thing that carried us right from the start of the season). There is no excuse for an off-day on defense."
 Both Georgetown and Louisville like to use a full-court pressure defense most of the way.
 "We've played with it and against it every day," says Louisville Coach Denny

Crum. "Hopefully, we'll be able to handle it. I'm sure they feel the same way. It will create some problems for us and create some problems for them."
 "Georgetown's overall talent and quickness is very similar to our own. It's a team very similar to our own, with the exception of the center spot, where they're a lot bigger (7-foot freshman Pat Ewing).
 "They like to run and shoot the good shots off the transition. I think the game will be won by the team that plays the best defense. That's usually the way it works in tournament play."

Vikings Edge Chargers

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley took advantage of a passed ball to score two runs in the first inning and added two more runs in the third to edge Ayden-Grifton, 5-2, Tuesday afternoon in a nonconference baseball game.
 Roy Lassiter doubled off A-G starter Tyrone Gay to open the bottom of the first and Jeff Manning then walked. Both runners then scored when catcher Doug Coley let the ball get by and roll to the backstop.
 The Chargers tied the game in the top of the third. Jackie Conway singled and went to third when Art Rouse singled and the throw hit him and bounced away. Both runners scored on Chris Strickland's single.
 The Vikings, their two-run lead erased, quickly went back to work to regain the lead in the bottom half of the inning. Lassiter walked and went to third when Jeff Manning singled. Manning subsequently stole second.
 Dixon Page followed with a single to score both Lassiter and Manning and the Vikings led, 4-2.
 Ayden-Grifton had runners on second and third in the fifth with one out but failed to score. It was their only other serious threat against Conley starter Doug McRoy.
 McRoy is now 2-1 this season. The senior left-handers struck out six and walked two and threw 101 pitches in the win.

Smith and Todd Rouse all had two hits in three at bats for Conley. Both Rouse and Lassiter had doubles.
 Ayden-Grifton, now 3-3, opens defense of its Eastern Carolina Conference championship Friday night when the Chargers play host to

Lady Bucs Sweep 'Pack

East Carolina University's women's softball team captured a doubleheader from N.C. State yesterday, but it took an outstanding defensive play in the final inning of the second game to preserve the victory.
 East Carolina, after gaining a 3-0 win in the opener, went into the final inning of the second game with a 6-1 lead, but State rallied for a pair of runs and had two on base with two away.
 Dawn McLaurin then cracked a fly ball to the fence in right center, driving in the two runners ahead of her. Mitzi Davis, however, hurled the ball to second baseman Ginger Rothermel, who relayed the ball to the plate, nailing McLaurin there to preserve the victory and end the game.
 In the opener, the Lady Pirates scored once in the first and added two more in the sixth as Jeanette Roth, now 9-2, shut out the Lady Wolfpack.

 Gina Miller, Davis and Shirley Brown each had two hits in three trips for the Lady Pirates. Brown's hits included a double and two runs batted in. Sue Williams had two in three appearances for State.

The 'Sheriff' May Be Key In NIT Title Game

NEW YORK (AP) — If there is a key matchup in tonight's National Invitation Tournament championship game, it could be how well Bradley's David Thirdkill defends the Big Ten's leading scorer, Purdue guard Keith Edmonson.

Bradley Coach Dick Versace calls Thirdkill "The Sheriff," and the senior guard certainly laid down the law Monday night, holding Oklahoma's David Little to eight points as the Braves rolled to an 84-68 semifinal victory.

Thirdkill, says Versace, "is the consummate defensive player in America today. He has absolutely the finest technique of any basketball player at the college level that I've ever seen."

In Edmonson, who is averaging 26.4 points in the NIT, Thirdkill should have his hands full when the title goes on the line at 8 p.m. EST in Madison Square Garden. Edmonson and sophomore center Russell Cross, Purdue's one-two scoring combination, had 25 points apiece in a 61-60 semifinal victory over Georgia.

"If we can do a job on Cross and Edmonson, that would be a terrific defensive challenge," says Versace.

Both Cross and Edmonson are destined for the pros, says Versace, "and you never really stop pros. You just try to chop them down a bit."

Purdue Coach Gene Keady is puzzled about why Edmonson, a 6-foot-5 senior, hasn't received more national recognition.

"Maybe its because our style of play is team-oriented and we don't stress the star system," he says. "He (Edmonson) can get the points if he needs to, but I'm not sure why he doesn't have more of a star status."

Both coaches say they'll stick with their basic styles of play that they displayed in the semis, when Purdue used discipline and careful shot selection while Bradley put on a 23-5 burst in the second half to break its game open.

Likening Bradley to Georgia, another fast-breaking team, Keady said, "I don't think you're going to stop them. I think you're going to have to control the tempo more than anything."

"We don't have a lot of quickness. We're just going to try to play our game," Keady said, adding that if the Boilermakers try to run with Bradley, "they'll blow us out."

Versace characterizes Purdue as "awesome with their size and bulk," and says "if you get in a five-on-five game with them, then of course they have the edge."

"But when you get up on a club like that, your quickness can be more effective."

Bradley boasts a balanced attack, with all five starters averaging in double figures for the tournament. Leading the way is senior forward Mitchell Anderson, who scored 25 points against Oklahoma.

"I think the main thing is for us to get our butts back on defense and try to stop all five of them," says Keady.

Sampson Named Player Of Year

NEW YORK (AP) — Ralph Sampson was cool under a barrage of questions about whether he had played his last college basketball game for Virginia and would turn pro in the National Basketball Association.

"I will make my decision when I know what I really want to do," the 7-foot-4 University of Virginia center said at a news conference Tuesday. Sampson won the Eastman Award as the college player of the year in a vote of the National Association of Basketball Coaches.

Coach Terry Holland said he felt a pro team would have to make a strong case to get Sampson to give up his final year of eligibility.

"There are a lot of questions the pros would have to answer in his mind to get him to leave school," Holland said. "His decision right now is to stay in school. He would like to get his degree. He works very hard at going to class. He has registered for classes next year. He has applied for his room."

"I think it's up to someone to come up with legitimate argument that makes sense to him for him to change his course of action."

Sampson, the first junior to win the Eastman Award, said he will base his decision on "the same guideline" he had used before and that was,

"What do I really want to do?"

Twice before, he had come to the conclusion that he wanted to stay at Virginia.

He had hoped to lead the Cavaliers to the title in the National Collegiate Athletic Association tournament, and it had not happened. Would that still be a consideration this spring?

"I'm going to think about it. It would be one more trip at it, one more time to get it," he acknowledged. "It's going to be a factor ... all those factors are going to be in there. But it will depend on what I really want to do in the end."

Sampson insisted the matter was not uppermost in his thoughts. "It is not a pressing thing," he said.

He thought, but was not sure, that he would have to decide by April 25 whether he will declare himself available for the NBA college player draft in June.

The 21-year-old said he would, as he had in his previous decision-making processes, discuss the matter with Holland.

Bigtime Schools Spend Millions, But Struggling

Part Two of a Series
By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

In 1980, the average National Football League team spent $6 million, not counting player salaries, and made a profit. The University of Oklahoma will spend $25 million more than that this year and lose money.

This illustrate the problems of bigtime college sports program today. All bigtime sports schools have comparably sized budgets, and even the most stable programs are struggling to balance the books.

At Oklahoma, anyone other than a student or faculty member had to pay $12.50 for a single ticket to a single football game at Owen Field in 1981. This year, the price for that same ticket will be $15.

But don't for one moment think that on opening day Sept. 11 against West Virginia, any of the 76,000 or so seats will be empty because of the increase. Football is king in Sooner country and if the ticket price goes up again next year, the fans still will pay.

Yet the Oklahoma athletic budget, inflated by the growth of women's sports and interest on long-term debts for such things as construction, has some people at Norman worried.

The average NFL team had revenues of almost $13.5 million in 1980, the last year for which figures are available. Oklahoma's 1981-82 sports budget shows receipts of slightly more than $8.1 million. So, while the NFL teams had an average profit of more than $1.4 million that year, Oklahoma's current sports budget of $8.5 million has a deficit of about $350,000.

For this reason, the next six months represent a crisis period for the future of sports at OU. That is the opinion of Robert Smith, assistant athletic director and business manager at the university. The budget is his domain and the numbers trouble him.

"This is a crucial time for the program here," Smith said. "We are at a financial crossroads."

In the back of Smith's mind is the situation at Colorado, which, like Oklahoma, is a member of the Big Eight Conference. From a budget surplus of $200,000 to $300,000 annually, Colorado found itself with a deficit approaching $1 million. Some sports were eliminated completely and others cut back to club level to close the gap.

"That is the kind of nightmare that could happen here," Smith said. "I see parallels between our program and theirs prior to their downfall and, frankly, that scares me. With our debt service ($908,950 this year) and multiplicity of sports, our total size is such that one shockwave, one fault in the crust and the whole earth could open up and swallow us like it did them."

So important decisions must be made. Where do you cut? Which sports are dropped? How do you bridge that dollar-and-cents gap? OU is searching for those answers right now.

Wade Walker, the university's athletic director, knows full well that he is operating a big business.

"A lot of people don't like to put it in that vernacular, but that's what it is," he said. "Our budget is probably bigger than any other department here. Health sciences or engineering might be larger, I'm not sure."

The difference, however, is that academic departments receive money from the university; OU's athletic department is self-sustaining. None of its funds comes from the university or its students. Sooner teams turn income over to the university rather than drawing from it.

"We receive no state or federal funds or student fees," Walker said. "Our income is generated from gate receipts, television-radio revenue and private donations."

That money can be substantial. A regular-season national television football game last year typically carried a $400,000 fee from ABC. Oklahoma's share of that would be $200,000, which is turned over to the Big Eight and redistributed to the conference schools. Participating schools in each game get an extra slice of the pie.

Bowl games are worth more than that. And tournament bids in the other sports are important moneymakers. Every one of the 48 teams invited to play in the NCAA basketball hoedown earned a minimum of $121,000. Even after sharing that income in the conference, the payoff is impressive. That's for one game. Advance past the first round and the money increases to $364,000 for a regional final and finally to a top of $500,000 for making the Final Four.

This formula has been adjusted twice in the past three years. Tom Jernstedt, assistant executive director in charge of championship events for the National Collegiate Athletic Association, said that had the old formula been maintained this season, a Final Four team would have been paid $1 million.

The National Invitation Tournament, with 32 teams, generates less income because it doesn't have the advantage of a national network television contract.

And money is the bottom line. Everywhere.

"I tell my football and basketball coaches after I hire them that I really don't care what their won-lost records are, as long as they sell peanuts and popcorn while getting those records," said Ted Bredehoff, athletic director at Wichita State.

Oklahoma's basketball team brought home NIT revenue this year, invited there after going 19-10 following a 9-18, no-tournament record in 1981. It was a major plus in a difficult budget year.

Still, though, football is No. 1 in Sooner country. It accounts for almost 33 percent of the budget expenditures and nearly 66 percent of the athletic department's income.

So when Oklahoma's sports program slices come, as Smith insists they must, don't expect any of the trimming to be done at the expense of the flourishing football program.

According to Walker, Oklahoma's sports budget is comparable to those maintained at schools such as Southern California, Michigan, Ohio State and Texas — high-visibility universities where sports and success are a top priority.

Sometimes, though, schools normally considered somewhat lower on the athletic ladder, get into the high stakes swing of things. Consider the $1.7 million package Jackie Sherrill received from Texas A&M to move there from Pittsburgh as football coach. The huge contract shook the coaching fraternity. But if Sherrill delivers victories, then the people in Texas will consider the money well spent.

Some college administrators view success in sports as a vital element to the overall health of their university. Dan Gibbens, a law professor who is the faculty representative for athletics at Oklahoma, understands that position.

"Does athletics impact on general fund-raising?" he said. "President (William Slater) Banowsky is an expert at private fund-raising. He believes excellence in athletics is contagious. We look for excellence throughout the university. That excellence helps him gain academic funding."

Sometimes, Gibbens said, the emphasis on athletics upsets other elements of the university community.

"Some faculty and students are dismayed at the amount of attention and money spent and all that goes into sports," he said.

But the fact is that a school with a championship football team is going to get noticed more widely in America today than a school with a championship chemistry department.

What's more, nobody is offering the chemistry professors $1.7 million to move from one school to another or $500,000 to reach the Final Four. So strictly from an economic standpoint, sports occupies a dominant role on many campuses.

Baird: League Status Road To NCAA Playoffs

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Baseball at East Carolina has a great history, and Coach Hal Baird would like to see the future just as bright, he told the Greenville Sports Club yesterday.

The meeting of the club was the last of the 1981-82 year.

"Being in the ECAC-South is something we've looked forward to ever since I've been here," Baird told the club. "This is the first time since 1977 that we've been in a league, and while independent status has some good points, it was clear that we needed to be in a league. It gives us a road into the NCAA (playoffs). The independents in this part of the country are about the strongest there are, so getting in as an independent isn't easy."

Baird emphasized this by pointing out that in 1980, his first year as head coach, the Pirates had the best winning percentage in the nation, but were still the last team picked for the NCAA field. "This shows you the rough road an independent has to travel."

Baird said that in the ECAC, four teams from the league, which not only includes the six teams in the ECAC-South but six other teams to the north of Virginia, will meet for a double-elimination tournament to decide the NCAA berth. Those teams will be chosen on the basis of overall record, league record, strength of schedule, strength of pitching staff and a couple of other criteria. Baird also noted that East Carolina would probably seek to be the host team for that tournament should it get in. He added the James Madison had won the tournament for the past four or five years, and has been the host team for that period, too.

"James Madison has done an excellent job of getting its program on the road, and Old Dominion has decided to put forth a good program too. They've reemphasized the

GCA Whips Wake, 9-0

Jerry Simpson's two-run home run in the second keyed a five-run outburst and John Parnell threw a two-hitter to lead Greenville Christian to a 9-0 win over Wake Christian Tuesday afternoon in a high school baseball game.

GCA, now 1-0, led, 1-0 at the end of the first inning and then scored five runs in the third to up the margin to 6-0.

Parnell went the distance on the mound to pick up the win. He struck out eight and walked none in tossing the two-hitter.

Simpson led GCA at the plate with two hits in two at bats. Hollingsworth was two for three.

GCA plays host to Wilmington Christian Tuesday.

sport and are currently building a new stadium that will be lit and seat 5,000," Baird said.

As far as schedule is concerned, Baird feels his Pirates face a very representative one. "Division I in North Carolina is very strong," he said. "There are nine or ten teams on our schedule that won 30 or more games last year. The only non-Division I teams we play are Atlantic Christian and N.C. Wesleyan. Wesleyan was the number three team in the country in Division III, and Atlantic Christian is a good area team."

Asked if he had a wish list for East Carolina baseball, Baird replied in the affirmative. He listed as prime needs for the program:

- The NCAA limit of 13 grants.
- Madison and Old Dominion already have this," he said, noting that ECU has about the dollar equivalent of five grants, spreading the money out among 20 players.

"The money to recruit the better players. We recruit mostly area players, but there are occasions when, say, there are no quality shortstops in the area, and we have to go looking."

"The money to travel with a little more class. I talked with (the Clemson coach Bill Wilhelm) recently, and they have a quarter of a million dollar program. Ours is about one-tenth of that. But I don't think we need that. We can do a lot more with a lot less. But it would be nice to have more," Baird said.

"As far as physical needs are concerned, Baird would like to see improved seating and more seating, with possibly improved lighting, but he feels this is down the road."

"We believe that we can generate the money to run the program," he said. "But we need for people to be Pirates, and not just come when we play Carolina or State."

allowing all three runners to score as he raced to second with a double.

"We started to get someone up after he hit the first batter," Baird said. But then, after he got two outs, we thought he could get out of it. By the time we could get someone warmed up, it was too late."

East Carolina now closes out its home series with four games Friday through Sunday. Rams Whip Hawks, 9-3

SNOW HILL — Butch Brown's double in the second inning drove in three runs and sparked a seven-run outburst to lead Greene Central to a 9-3 victory over North Lenoir Tuesday afternoon in a nonconference baseball game.

Greene Central led, 1-0, at the end of the first inning, but North Lenoir scored three runs in the top of the second to go up, 3-1. It was a lead the Hawks held but shortly.

James Moore singled to open the second and went to second when John Mayo was safe on a fielder's choice. Marlow Gilmore followed with a single to load the bases.

Walks to Kevin Fox and Chris Suggs drove in two runs and Chris Ginn's single brought home another. Brown then unloaded his double to score Fox, Suggs and Ginn. Brown subsequently came home on Moore's two-out single — Moore's second hit of the inning.

The lead more than held as Greene Central starter Donald Warren allowed just one more hit in the next three innings before being relieved in the sixth by Tommy Goff. Warren, now 3-0 this season, surrendered just four hits to the Hawks.

No one for North Lenoir had more than one hit. Cedric Coward had a double for the Hawks to drive in one run in the second.

Greene Central was led by Moore with three hits in four at bats. Suggs was two for three while Ginn and Tommy Goff were both two for four.

Greene Central opens its Eastern Carolina Conference schedule Friday when the Rams travel to Farmville Central.

'The Lip' Has Rings A Plenty

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
Leo Durocher has six World Series rings — as player, coach and manager — but only one which he wears on the next-to-last finger of his left hand and stores in the hotel vault overnight.

"You couldn't buy this ring from me for $2 million," he says, juggling the diamond-studded ornament fondly. "When I was a kid, my goals were first to play baseball, then go the majors, play on a winning team and finally manage a World Series champion."

"This ring fulfills my last ambition."

The inscription on the ring reads: "New York Giants, World Champions, 1954."

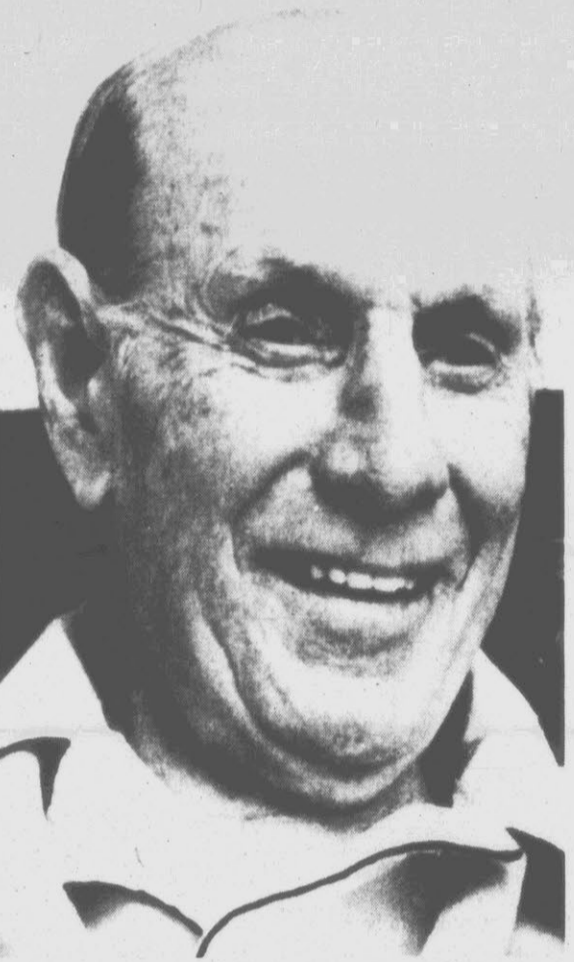

Leo gave one of his rings to his old friend, Frank Sinatra, and has the others tucked away in a drawer somewhere. He doesn't let the 1954 ring get out of his sight.

Those were the days — the days of the Dodgers, Giants and Yankees — and Leo the Lip, feisty, combative, fiercely untamed, left the imprint of his barbed personality on all of them.

He was a teammate of the great Babe Ruth. He was manager of the Dodgers when Jackie Robinson broke the color line. He personally called Willie Mays up from Minneapolis in 1951 and nursed the Say Hey Kid through an almost disastrous attack of rookie jitters.

He became the managerial idol of Billy Martin.

"People are always asking me to compare Willie Mays with Joe DiMaggio," Durocher said, relaxing in his Plaza Hotel suite. "No paper is thin enough to separate them. Personally, I think Mays was the greatest. But I managed him. Casey Stengel probably would say it was Joe DiMaggio."

Leo Durocher

Opinionated as ever, full of enough anecdotes to fill a library, the 76-year-old Lip came to town to visit his favorite dentist of 40 years, Dr. Murray Saklod, recovering from a recent stroke and honored Tuesday night by New York University's College of Dentistry. "Francis — that is, Mr. Sinatra — called," Durocher said. "Old Choppers, as we call the doc, worked on his teeth, too. Nothing could have kept me away."

The Lip, a rare visitor to New York, lives a life of luxury in Palm Springs, Calif., running five miles a day to strengthen a heart that underwent bypass surgery, shooting golf in the high 70s and hobnobbing with the movie set.

Briley Keys N. Pitt Past Redskins, 8-6

ROBERSONVILLE — Greg Briley was three for three and drove in six runs and North Pitt held off a seventh-inning rally by Roanoke to record an 8-6 victory Tuesday afternoon in a nonconference baseball game.

North Pitt scored four runs in the top of the seventh to go up, 8-3, but the Redskins rallied for three runs in the bottom of the inning before Roger Bell came in to cut the come back short.

Roanoke's Angelo Spruill and Joey Ross walked to open the seventh and both scored on Joey Early's triple. Lee Briley then singled home Early to cut the gap to 8-6.

After Darius Hudgins flew out, Greg Casper singled to give Roanoke runners at first and second. Bell, who came on in the seventh to relieve North Pitt stater Mike Brown, got the next two batters to fly out and strike out to end the threat.

The win leaves North Pitt at 2-2 overall. Roanoke is also 2-2.

North Pitt led, 1-0, at the end of the first inning and upped its lead to 4-0 with a three-run second. Walks to Lee Manning, Mitch Cox and Brown loaded the bases with none out and Briley then doubled home all three.

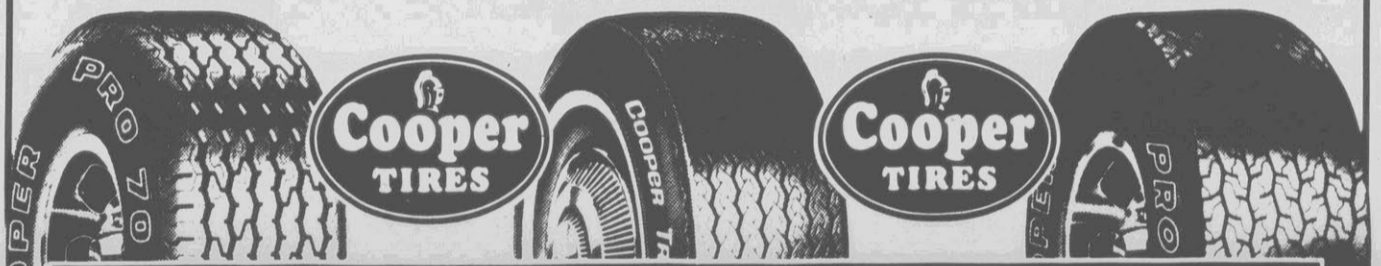

Roanoke got one of those runs back in the second and cut the deficit to one with two runs in the fifth. But, the Panthers pushed home four runs in the top of the seventh and then held on for the win.

Quintin Dove was two for three for the Panthers and had two RBI as he and Briley drove in all eight of their club's runs. Early was three for four with an RBI and Ross was two for four for Roanoke.

North Pitt opens its Eastern Carolina Conference schedule Friday when the Panthers travel to Charles B. Aycock. Roanoke is at Edenton Friday.

NCAA Seats A Block From Court, 19 Stories Up

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — They're possibly the worst seats ever sold for an indoor college basketball game — a block from the court and 19 stories up. But nobody's buying a pig in a poke, NCAA spokesmen said Tuesday.

The NCAA has sold more than 61,000 tickets to its Final Four college basketball championship playoff on Saturday and Monday, the most ever sold for an indoor basketball game.

A crowd of 75,000 once watched the Harlem Globetrotters play outdoors in Berlin, and the UCLA-Houston game at the Astrodome in 1968 drew 52,693 to set the previous indoor mark.

Included in the 61,000 record sale at the Superdome are some admittedly bad seats — about a third of the total. They are so bad that the NCAA felt it necessary to conduct a program of disclaimers trying to forestall complaints.

"NCAA officials have made the greatest effort to educate ticket buyers in the history of the industry — sports or otherwise," said Cliff Wallace, general manager of the Superdome.

"It almost came to the point where we were asking, 'Are you real sure you want to buy these tickets,'" said Dave Cawood, public relations director for the NCAA.

The ticket order form contained diagrams showing seats as far as 375 feet away from the court for $16 — a little over $5 a game. More desirable seats ranged to courtside at prices of $26 and $36.

Two letters went to the purchasers of the $16 seats, warning them that they were way back and pretty far up. Tickets for the most distant 3,000 seats are stamped, "Distant Vision." Big blowups of seating charts are being posted for visitors wanting to check seat locations in advance.

Despite the precautions, there'll be some complaining, said Bill Curl, public relations director for the Superdome. He said the stadium handled 34,036 for the semifinals of the NCAA's Midwest Regional last year and got no real kickback from that trial run.

A crowd of 35,077 watched the Jazz and the Philadelphia 76ers play a National Basketball Association game at the Superdome in 1977.

But those crowds were contained easily within the seats now selling for $36 and $26, and no major complaints ensued, Curl said.

It's the $16 seats, back where the occupants will have to peer over a set of rolling bleachers, that Curl feels will generate the criticism.

The court is situated along one sideline of the football field, and a bank of seats from the other sideline rumbles across on rails to provide the basketball configuration. The $16 seats are those left on the distant sideline above the movable section.

Curl said the best view of the game from those seats is afforded on the stadium's six giant television screens.

"What it amounts to, is they are paying $16 to sit in the Superdome and cheer for their team and watch the game on television," he said.

Cawood said he believes everyone who purchased tickets directly from the NCAA knows roughly how good or bad that ticket is.

"Our biggest fear is the person who buys the ticket second hand. That person may not have been told," he said.

Black, UNC Want To Get Smith Title

By TOM FOREMAN Jr. AP Sports Writer
CHAPEL HILL — All of North Carolina's basketball players want to see Coach Dean Smith win his first national championship after failing short six times. But Jimmy Black may want it more than any of them.

"My main concern is to let Coach Smith off the hook," Black told reporters Tuesday.

"I'm sure he's tired of hearing the same old song." But the senior guard's desire to present his coach with a national title go beyond just ending a streak which has been the subject of fans and writers since the Tar Heels reached the NCAA tournament two weeks ago.

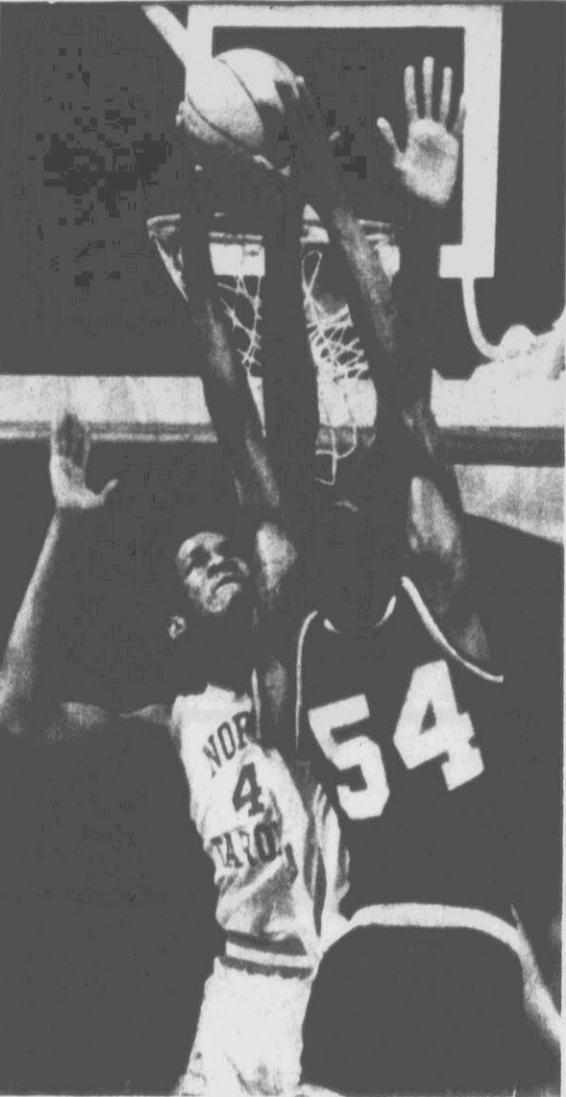

During Black's sophomore year, his mother died. At a time when he needed guidance, Smith was there, he said.

"At that point, he was my strongest supporter," the 6-foot-2 senior said. "I never considered quitting school because I knew that wasn't what she wanted me to do."

Black said his mother was never a quitter and she instilled that virtue in him. "If she were still here, she wouldn't want to see me quit or give up on anything I enjoyed doing. That made me strive a little harder to be even better."

Then came the summer after his mother's death. Black was driving to the beach when his car veered off the road and hit a tree. He suffered a cracked vertebra in his neck. A quarter-inch difference in that crack and his career would have been over.

Surgery corrected the problem and Smith helped him keep his life in perspective. "He was there when I woke up," Black said. "He was here

Hoya Coach Busy With Card Defense

WASHINGTON (AP) — Georgetown Coach John Thompson is busy figuring out how his sixth-ranked Hoyas can penetrate 20th-ranked Louisville's "pressure defense" in Saturday's NCAA basketball semifinal game at New Orleans' Superdome.

At a news conference Tuesday, Thompson wasn't tipping his hand on what tactics he plans to use against Louisville, whose best assets are its speed, physical abilities and depth.

"I don't know a lot about them," Thompson said. "I know they have depth and they use it," he said. "They get four new faces on the floor in a hurry and depend a lot on their pressure defense. I really haven't made up my mind about the matchups."

Thompson recalled that Louisville — now the only obstacle between the Hoyas and Monday's championship game — is the team he served up to his own players to help as an example when things were going sour earlier this year.

"We had lost a few games and I told the team to look at Louisville, how they were struggling trying to put it together. I guess we both turned it around."

FARMVILLE — Wilson Hunt romped to a 16-0 baseball victory over Farmville Central yesterday. Details of the game were not made available to The Daily Reflector.

Fans May Get Chance To See Former Gastonia Stars In Finals

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — Bowman as well, on the road to another battle. When the teams took the floor at Greensboro's Grimsley High, Huss was ready.

"I felt like it was time for us to go get 'em," said Burge. "We always looked forward to playing them. It was a challenge to beat them."

Huss won the state title on a jumper by Scott Harper with four seconds left, but only after Floyd scored 8 of his 14 points in the final four minute to help strip Ashbrook of a seven-point lead. Worthy had 19 points for Ashbrook.

A year later, the rivalry continued, but the drama was missing. Floyd and Huss won two of three meetings, but neither team qualified for the state tournament.

Since high school, Worthy and Floyd have played once, when North Carolina defeated the Hoyas 83-71 in the semifinals of last season's Great Alaskan Shootout.

Rose 'B' Team Crushes DHC

Rose High School's "B" baseball team gained a 12-3 victory over D.H. Conley yesterday, upping its record to 2-0 on the season.

Mike Kinley hurled a two-hitter in the win, going the distance, recording ten strikeouts along the way. He walked three.

Rose's hitting was led by Mike Iaboni with three hits including a solo homer in the third inning. Tony Daniels, Kinley and Jody Forbes each had two hits.

ECU Women Drop First

Lynn Heinman and Hilary Burk combined to win the finals doubles match to lift Trenton State past East Carolina, 5-4, Tuesday afternoon in a women's college tennis match.

The match was tied at the end of the singles competition, but Trenton took the lead with a win in the first doubles match.

The Lady Pirates came back to win the second and tie it up again, but Heiman and Burk then downed Kim Harrison and Hannah Adams 6-2, 6-1 to give Trenton St. the match.

"We've accomplished a lot of goals we wanted to," ECU coach Caroline Brown said. "We've definitely have momentum now."

The loss was the first for ECU in four outings this season. The Lady Pirates play host to Atlantic Christian Tuesday.

Summary:

Pam Fera (T) d. Debbie Christine 6-2, 5-7, 6-2
Katherine Tolson (EC) d. Donna Weeks 6-0, 6-0

Conley Rallies Past A-G, 4-3

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley's girls rallied in the sixth inning for four runs and eased past Ayden-Grifton, 4-3, yesterday in a non-conference softball game.

Ayden-Grifton grabbed the lead in the fourth with a pair of runs, but Conley rallied for four in the sixth, scoring the first on a single by Lori Kandrotas, getting another on an error, a third on a fielder's choice, and the fourth on a single by Michelle Kittrell.

Ayden-Grifton came back with one in the seventh, but Conley halted the rally at that point.

Kandrotas led the Conley hitting with two, while no one had more than one for Ayden-Grifton.

The Valkyries are now 5-0 on the season, while Ayden-Grifton dips to 0-2. The Valkyries host Rose Thursday, while Ayden-Grifton opens Eastern Carolina Conference play Friday, entertaining SouthWest Edgecombe.

WILSON — Wilson Hunt erupted for eight runs in the fourth inning and went on to hand Farmville Central its fifth straight loss, 11-1, Tuesday afternoon in a non-conference softball game.

The game was scoreless after three innings, but Hunt pushed home eight runs in the fourth to take command. Hunt added three more runs in the sixth for their 11-run total.

Farmville Central's only run came in the fifth. The Lady Jaguars are 0-5 this season.

Rhoda Harris, Julia Smith and Yvette Anderson all had two hits for Farmville. Kurney had a home run for Wilson Hunt, which banged out 27 hits against the Lady Jaguars.

Farmville plays host to Greene Central Friday.

WILLIAMSTON — Wanda Price singled and then raced home when the ball was misplayed in the outfield to lift Williamston to a 7-6 extra-inning win over Edenton Tuesday afternoon in a Northeastern Conference softball game.

The score was tied at the end of seven innings, 6-6, and neither team scored in the eighth. But, after Edenton failed to score in the top of the ninth, the Lady Tigers won it.

Price, the first batter in the bottom of the ninth, singled and the ball got past the shortfielder and Price raced home with the winning run to give the Lady Tigers their second win in three outings.

Edenton led, 2-0, at the end of the first inning but Williamston tied it up with runs in the third and fourth. Both teams scored four runs in the fifth, but it was not until the ninth that either scored again.

Price and Sonya Purvis both had two hits for Williamston. Both had triples for one of their hits. Edenton did not have anyone with more than one hit.

Edenton Rallies By Williamston, 9-5

WILLIAMSTON — Edenton scored two runs in the fourth and two more in the sixth to come from behind and defeat Williamston, 9-5, Tuesday afternoon in a Northeastern Conference baseball game.

Williamston led, 5-4, going into the top of the fourth, but the Aces rallied for two runs to go up, 6-4. Edenton then added two insurance runs in the sixth before scoring its final run in the seventh.

Ed Austin led Edenton at the plate with two hits, one of which was a double that drove in one run in the fourth. Mike Hardy also had a double for the Aces.

Williamston did not have anyone with more than one hit. Keith Bryant had a double for the Tigers.

Edenton led after the first inning, 3-1, but the Tigers tied it up with two runs in the second. Bryant singled and James Ward walked to open the second. Both moved up on a wild pitch.

Walks to Gray Thomas and Keith Perry scored Bryant. Ed Pippin then reached on a fielder's choice to score Ward and knot the score at 2-2.

Edenton went back on top in the top of the third with a run, but the Tigers countered with two runs to take a 5-4 lead — Williamston's only lead of the day.

Reggie Horne singled and Mike Daniels came in to run for the Williamston pitcher. Daniels promptly stole second. Sterling Mizelle then walked and both he and Daniels scored on Bryant's double.

CRYPTOQUIP 3-24

XVLBGV LFOX GFORVR XVLBGGVG

Yesterday's Cryptiquip — POOR TRAMPS ARE REMANDED TO COUNTY CUSTODY.

Today's Cryptiquip clue: O equals I

The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, MAR. 25, 1982

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
 from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The daytime gives you a good chance to put your practical affairs in better order. Tact and poise on your part are required to avoid an unpleasant situation from arising.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Morning is the best time for clearing up monetary problems. Make sure to follow advice you get from a business expert.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Taking the treatments that will improve your appearance is wise. Make new friends that are worthwhile.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Study just where you are headed and find more workable methods to gain success. Come to a better accord with loved one.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Don't rely on friends who are busy with own affairs at this time. Make plans to have more abundance in the future.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Be sure to handle an important duty well since you could be observed by higher-ups now. Take needed health treatments.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Put those creative ideas to work now and gain the respect of associates. Strive for increased happiness. Sidestep an opponent.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You have to use diplomacy if you wish to have the harmony at home you desire. Try not to offend others at this time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Contact persons who can assist you with routines and you get better results in the future. Avoid a troublemaker.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Anything of a monetary matter should be talked over with experts today. Show more devotion to loved one.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) If properly tuned astrologically, this should be a fine day for sociability. Take steps to improve your appearance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) A good day to have discussions with close ties and come to a better accord. Make plans to have greater income in the future.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Consult business experts who can give you the right advice at this time. Steer clear of one who has an eye on your assets.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will need much spiritual and ethical training early in life for your progeny to be successful. Anything that concerns big money matters is fine here. Give cultural advantages and the best education you can afford.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Lake Michigan PCB Level Dips

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — The level of PCBs in Great Lakes fish is dropping, but the "all clear" is still years away, experts on the toxic chemical say.

Average levels of polychlorinated biphenyls, detected in tests of Lake Michigan fish have gone down 60 percent in the last decade, Wayne Willford of the U.S. Interior Department's Great Lakes Fisheries Laboratory said.

However, scientists said it could be the year 2000 before levels of PCBs drop to 2 parts per million — the Canadian limit and a proposed U.S. Food and Drug Administration limit for consumption. The United States limit is now 5 ppm.

"We're probably a long way from removing the warning (against eating too much)...from Great Lakes fish," said Thomas Washington, executive director of the Michigan United Conservation Clubs.

The bidding:

Poland's stars have proved to be among the world's best. If their bidding seems at times erratic, their play compensates. This hand is from a Swiss team championship held in Amsterdam.

South was Bolek Ostrowski of Poland. He was certainly not reticent in the bidding when he leaped to four hearts on what could be charitably described as a porous suit opposite a partner who might be void!

HERS AND HERS — Experts at New York's Metropolitan Museum of Art believe this pair of pistols, seized in a drug raid nearly 10 years ago, were originally made for Catherine the Great, empress of Russia. Their value is put at $200,000. The pistols were in a police warehouse with other illegal weapons and were scheduled to be melted down, but were spotted by a police officer with an eye for beauty. Some Help For Acne Sufferers

West led a low spade. Declarer ruffed and made his first key play by leading a low trump from hand. West won and continued with a spade and declarer ruffed again. Now he cashed the ace of trumps, and made his second excellent decision when he discarded a club from dummy instead of a spade!

Declarer led a club to dummy's queen, ruffed a spade, crossed to the queen of diamonds and ruffed dummy's last spade — by keeping all of dummy's spades, declarer was able to single in his low trumps. Now he was able to cash the king of diamonds for his eighth trick and continue with a third diamond.

If West did not ruff, declarer would take his minor-suit aces for his contract. So West was forced to ruff, but now he was end played. He could cash his last trump, but at trick twelve he was forced to lead from his king of clubs into declarer's combined A-J tenace. So declarer lost only three trump tricks on a hand where eight or nine tricks seemed to be the limit.

WASHINGTON (AP) — According to a report to the Food and Drug Administration, more than 75 percent of acne sufferers can get effective help from non-prescription skin products containing sulfur, benzoyl peroxide or sulfur combined with resorcinol.

Acne affects 80 percent of all adolescents as well as some older people.

A special committee, whose work was part of the FDA's ongoing evaluation of the active ingredients in over-the-counter drug products, also determined there is no convincing evidence that chocolates or "junk foods" cause or contribute to acne.

The report also concluded that abrasive scrub products have no effect on acne lesions, although they are useful for washing oily secretions from the skin and for keeping pores open.

Products containing benzoyl peroxide, sulfur or sulfur combined with resorcinol are available in lotion, cream and gel form.

'Middletown' To Debut Tonight

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — One of the subjects of PBS' ambitious six-part "Middletown" series is driving down fast-food alley in Muncie, Ind., cursing his fate as the Shakey's pizza-maker in a city and nation of hamburger lovers. His business is floundering and he cannot afford the high-rent district, where McDonald's and Burger King reside. And, sadly, he admits he can't drive by an Arby's without stopping for a roast beef sandwich.

explores the continuity and change in individuals and institutions in America. The weekly series begins tonight with an episode on Muncie's 1979 mayoral campaign. The six separate documentaries were inspired by the sociological studies 50 years ago by Robert and Helen Lynd. The Lynds examined Muncie and its people, calling the project "Middletown" to avoid embarrassing the city's citizens. But today, many in Muncie see the national attention as a badge. An airport sign says: "Welcome to Middletown." The Lynds divided their findings into six themes: making a living, creating a home, training the young, using leisure time, engaging in religious practices, and participating in community activities. Davis, an Emmy-award winning filmmaker whose work for CBS News in the early 1970s included "The Selling of the Pentagon" and "Hunger in America," created similar categories for his documentaries, which took three years to film, at a cost of $3 million. Davis is a filmmaker, not a sociologist, and his work is more dramatic than scientific. His cameras recorded real people going through their days. But because of the presence of the cameras, the people often postured and posed, coming across more as TV characters than ordinary people. Davis' intention was to find ordinary Americans at crossroads in their lives. Consequently, conclusions about the people of "Middletown" are difficult, with the parts becoming much greater than the whole. But that doesn't detract from the TV impact of seeing Americans coping with their lives and grappling with familiar problems. The opening documentary, "The Campaign," is a compelling look at classic Americana, election time on Main Street. Hollywood couldn't have cast two more divergent personalities than Democrat Jim Carey and Republican Alan Wilson. Carey, Muncie's sheriff, is a big, brash, glad-handing Irishman. He kisses the hands of his female supporters and never seems to say anything substantial. Wilson is everything Carey isn't. He's a clean-cut lawyer, running for office for the first time. Shy and self-effacing, Wilson passes out his campaign literature by saying: "It's got a football schedule on the back if you don't want to look at the pictures." The personalities and process are fascinating. The weeks of campaigning captured on film never reveal any specific discussion of issues. Both men say leadership is the major issue. The other films, in order, are "The Big Game," about the important social force of a high school basketball game between two Muncie rivals; "Community of Praise," about a family of fundamentalist Christians; "Family Business," a riveting profile of a sinking pizza franchise; "Second Time Around," about a second marriage for both people, and the controversial "Seventeen," about seniors in high school. Xerox, one of the underwriters of "Middletown," withdrew support for an advertising campaign because of the explicit sexual talk in "Seventeen." "Middletown" has no narrator to create cohesion or draw conclusions, so the documentaries can ramble. But it remains a thoroughly worthy adventure.

Topped Goal

CHAPEL HILL — The UNC Center for Public Television has announced that viewer contributions to Festival 1982, an annual fund-raising event, surpassed the goal of $1 million set by the statewide network. Jake Dunlop, director of the center, said the money will be used to purchase programming for the coming year. Dunlop said the center raised $1.03 million, up 30 percent from last year. The number of contributors increased from 16,326 in 1981 to more than 25,000 this year.

Sci-Fi Movie Inspired Idea Of 'Selling Rooms'

By KENNETH R. CLARK
UPI TV Reporter
NEW YORK (UPI) — When Giovanni Cozzi saw the Ray Bradbury sci-fi movie "Fahrenheit 451," he came away with an idea calculated to make him a rich man. It was time, he decided, to sell rooms. The room of his inspiration was one enormous television set in which Julie Christie immersed herself to become one with her fantasies. Books were forbidden by law. The video tube, which covered an entire wall and allowed the viewer to participate as a character in its soap operas and sitcoms, was the only "reality." The futuristic Bradbury nightmare coalesced for Cozzi into a dream, and most of the dream already has come true under the aegis of his firm, New York Video. "I don't see the destruction of books like in that film," Cozzi said, "but I definitely see that room in somebody's home 20 or 30 years from now. When I started my business, I was thinking particularly of that movie." Cozzi's business today is the "media room" — not just a wide-screen projection television set. Not just a video cassette recorder or a video disc player with its library of recorded movies. Not just the beeping, pinging video games today's elders contend are rotting the minds of the young. Cozzi offers all of it in one room — and all at once for the audio-video buff who happens to have $20,000 to spend. Folks whose loose change doesn't run in five figures can count on Cozzi to help them build their rooms one piece at a time, but whatever the income level, he is convinced that every family eventually will have to have a room of its own, just as it now has to have a television set of its own. "In the United States, the average person watches television more than he drives a car ... more than he reads a book," Cozzi said. "The average is four hours of television a day. Ten years ago there was a boom in stereo and hi-fi equipment and people spent a lot of money on it. But they weren't listening four hours a day to the music. Watching television is the most popular thing to do right now." A stroll through one of Cozzi's media rooms is very much like a guided tour through Han Solo's space ship in "Star Wars." A modernistic glass-topped coffee table sits in front of a couch so deep and comfortable it could induce an occupant to grow roots. Mounted beneath the table are a video disc player, a video cassette recorder, a video game projector and a master console that shouldn't fall into the hands of anyone not qualified to fly a jumbo jet. Touch a button and a wall-size screen descends from the ceiling past four vertically mounted stereophonic speakers. Another lowers a television projector. Other buttons call up movies, a potential choice of about 80 satellite-fed commercial and cable TV channels (Cozzi predicts 133 by the 1990s), asteroid games, AM and FM radio, records and how-to cassettes ranging from kitchen recipes to kitchen construction. "We're planning to add a bar," Cozzi said. "Actually, we're designing a little robot bar. I'll place a bar under the screen over there — a mobile bar the same height as the coffee table — and all I'll have to do is press this button and it will bring me a drink."

At the protest that the owner of such a room never would have to leave the couch, Cozzi became defensive. "This isn't an exercise room," he said. "It's an entertainment room." Ditto the bedroom, right next door, where the headboard holds an identical control panel to transfer everything the media room has to offer right into dreamland. But Cozzi's media room is more than just a shrine to audiovisual hedonism. "Video discs and tapes can educate," he said. "More and more video tapes are coming out on historical programing, art programing and things like that. It's going to be easier to get children to watch something instructive when it's great fun to watch ... Watching television is easier than reading." At 28, Cozzi well might consider his success sufficient for a bit of laurel resting, but like so many of the young entrepreneurs who are emerging from the television revolution, he said he hasn't even scratched the surface. "Every time we put in a new installation in a home, it's like opening up a new showroom," he said. "One customer came to me and said, 'I just saw the installation you did in my friend's house. I want something more.'" "To think about 'more' can be hard because a lot of them have just about everything ... There's one project an architect presented us with that involves a yacht ... Around the world, wherever you go, television systems are different. "This yacht has a meeting room and five staterooms and the requirements are that the meeting room be able to receive television wherever they are in the world. We're still working on it. It's not going to be easy, but it's a real challenge. "Our main challenge is a technological challenge. We want to see how many things can be done with today's technology and that's a lot. That's what excites us." Bradbury would love it.

Long-Running Series Helped

NEW YORK (AP) — It was a big week for long-running TV series, and CBS — with half of the 20 highest-rated programs — was the primary beneficiary, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. showed. All but two of the 20 most-watched programs in the week ending March 21 were from a series introduced prior to this season. The exceptions were Carol Burnett's special, "Eunice," on CBS, and an ABC movie, "The Enforcer," in ninth place. The week's Top 30 was composed of programs from 28 continuing series, and included four newly introduced programs, notably ABC's "Fall Guy" in 21st place, and "Falcon Crest" on CBS 22nd. CBS, with "Dallas" in first place and "60 Minutes" second, won the networks' competition for the 17th time this season — but only the first time in three weeks. CBS' rating for the period was 18 to 17.9 for ABC — the winner the two previous weeks — and 14.6 for NBC. The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute, 18 percent of the country's TV-equipped homes were watching CBS. The rating for "Dallas" was 26.9. Nielsen says that means in an average minute during the show, 26.9 percent of the nation's homes with TV were tuned to the program. "Dallas" now has been first in the ratings 11 times this season. ABC's top-rated program, "Three's Company," finished third, while NBC's most-watched show, "Diff'rent Strokes," was 17th. Series introduced in the last several weeks were only moderately successful in the ratings. "T.J. Hooker" on ABC was the highest-rated — 33rd — with CBS' "Herbie, The Love Bug," tied for 37th, "Police Squad" on ABC tied for 45th, ABC's "Phoenix" 57th and "Baker's Dozen" on CBS tied for 58th. Norman Lear's special on ABC, "I Love Liberty," finished 41st. NBC had three of the week's five lowest-rated programs, starting with "Father Murphy" in 64th place and followed by a movie, "The Car," "NBC Magazine," and two CBS programs, "Shannon" and a news special, "Central America in Revolt." Here are the week's 10 highest-rated shows: "Dallas," with a rating of 26.9 representing 22 million homes, and "60 Minutes," 26.2 or 21.5 million, both CBS; "Three's Company," 25.6 or 21 million, ABC; "Alice," 25 or 20.5 million, and "M-A-S-H," 24.6 or 20.2 million, both CBS; "Too Close for Comfort," 24.5 or 20.1 million, ABC; "The Jeffersons," 24.4 or 20 million, and "Eunice," 24.3 or 19.9 million, both CBS, and Movie—"The Enforcer," 23.8 or 19.5 million, and "Hart to Hart," 23.2 or 19 million, both ABC. The rest of the Top 20: "Dynasty," ABC; "Dukes of Hazzard," CBS; "Love Boat," ABC, and "One Day at a Time" and "Archie Bunker's Place," both CBS, three-way tie; "Trapper John, M.D.," CBS; "Diff'rent Strokes" and "Real People," both NBC, and "Facts of Life," NBC, and "That's Incredible," ABC, tie.

Concert Thursday

The East Carolina University Choir, under the direction of Brett Watson, will perform in concert at Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church on Thursday at 8:15 p.m. The 46-member choir will open its concert with a Gregorian setting of the "Salve Regina," which will be followed by a four-part setting of the same melody by Renaissance composer Josquin des Prez. The choir will then divide into two equal choruses and will perform "Psalm 128" by Baroque composer Heinrich Schütz. Other works will include "Der Abend," a setting of the Friedrich von Schiller poem with music by Johannes Brahms. The second half of the concert will feature folk songs of Ireland, Scotland and the United States. There is no admission charged.

Investor Plans Big Development

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A Roanoke, Va., investor plans to build a 1,800-unit housing development, shopping center and office complex in south Mecklenburg County, which could grow as large as 500,000 square feet. The plan by James E. Body and Associates, a commercial investor, hinges on rezoning applications which Body has filed with the city and county. The firm has asked the county to rezone the housing tract from single-family residential to multifamily and conditional business.

Peru's Gold In Potatoes

By MARTIN ANDERSEN
LIMA, Peru (AP) —When Francisco Pizarro and his Spaniards sacked the Inca Empire of its gold and silver they were trampling over another kind of wealth only recently being developed to its full potential: the potato.

Scientists at the International Potato Center here say the potato's contribution to the fight against world hunger may be the most significant legacy of the Inca Empire.

"The potato has a terrific potential for feeding people in Third World countries that just has not been exploited," Dr. Richard L. Sawyer, the center's director, said in a recent interview.

"If you were buying just one food to get the proper balance of proteins to calories, with a good supply of vitamins and minerals, there is no better selection than the potato," said Sawyer, a graduate of Cornell University and a native of the potato-producing state of Maine.

The center's scientists are trying to selectively breed a more disease- and pest-resistant spud and to promote potato production in areas where historically they have not been eaten, such as the tropics.

One promising technology promoted by the center is the use of true, or botanical, seed rather than the traditional method of planting pieces of mature tubers — the eye and part of the potato's flesh. The true seed method, center scientists say, reduces potato diseases and production costs, while increasing net food production per hectare.

At its modern headquarters and laboratories outside Lima, the center's experts conduct research and train agricultural professionals from around the world. Nearly 60 scientists from 19 countries work at the center and its research stations in Peru.

To the average center visitor, perhaps accustomed only to the white, mealy Idaho spud, the variety of potatoes is astounding. In addition to the standard Irish white, potatoes come in a variety of sizes, shapes, textures, tastes and colors — including yellow, red, green, orange and bright purple.

Dr. Douglas Horton, head of the center's social-sciences department, said ancient prejudices, misinterpreted economic principles and political interests had created an ignorance of the potato extending beyond the general public to food scientists and policymakers.

"Western society tends to view wheat as the king of crops, while roots and tubers are considered inferior foods," notes Horton, a native of Joliet, Ill., who holds a Ph.D. in economics from Cornell.

This "cereal mentality," say center scientists, flies in the face of research indicating the potato is among the most efficient crops in converting natural resources, farm labor and investment into a valuable foodstuff with wide consumer acceptance.

The Lima center is one of four research stations in Peru, a country with a variety of ecological zones reflecting the possibilities for potato cultivation throughout the world.

At the center's highland station east of Lima in the fertile Mantaro Valley nearly 11,000 feet above sea level, scientists maintain the "world potato collection," gathered in expeditions throughout the Andes, the ancestral home of the potato. These include some 12,000 samples of primitive and wild varieties, some of which are believed no longer to exist in their natural state.

The vast selection of potato types — scientists estimate there are about 7,000 different species within the larger sample — provide the center with the genetic material needed to produce hybrids of greater resistance to disease and tolerance of climatic conditions.

First cultivated in Peru's mountain region near Lake Titicaca, the potato is one of the few food crops that produce well in cold climates. Anthropologists credit the potato with sustaining a number of ancient Indian civilizations, including the Incas.

Anticipating the needs of the modern household by hundreds of years, the Incas used a type of freeze-dried potato called "chuno" as a dietary staple. Its light weight — raw potatoes are 80 percent water — and nutritional value made chuno indispensable for feeding Inca warriors during military campaigns and for the Inca runners who carried messages throughout the empire.

The potato center was founded in 1971 as part of an agreement between North Carolina State University and the Peruvian government. A year later it joined the Consultative Group on International Agricultural Research, an international network of food-research centers funded by foundations, banks and donor countries.

'Differences' Seen By Age 3

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Differences in behavior according to sex emerge in children by the age of 3, and some of the behaviors may have a "biological base," say Medical College of Pennsylvania researchers.

"From the third year of life, we begin to see little boys walk around like little Tarzans," according to psychiatrist Henri Parens. At that age, he said, girls wanted to hold and own a baby, a desire found much less often and less intensely in boys.

Moon Rock Laboratory Threatened

By PAUL RECER
AP Aerospace Writer
SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — While the shuttle vaults America into a new era of space exploration, budget cuts are threatening to shut down one of the last elements of an old era — the laboratory that houses the Apollo moon rocks.

More than 800 pounds of lunar material brought to Earth in six moon-landing missions are stored in airtight vaults at a curatorial facility at the Johnson Space Center. Thousands of samples have been processed in the lab since the return of Apollo 11 in 1969, and about 14,000 samples are still under study by scientists around the world.

But a proposed bare bones National Aeronautics and Space Administration budget may force the moon laboratory to shut in 1983, cutting off the lunar material from further study.

Michael Duke, curator of the facility, said it takes about $1.5 million a year to keep the laboratory in full operation. Plans under study would shave the lab budget by at least half and perhaps to as low as $300,000.

"Just to maintain the integrity of the samples will take about $300,000 a year," said Duke. "That would put us at a bare caretaker level. A cut to $700,000 would enable us to do some work."

Two hundred laboratories around the world have studied the lunar rocks, but the number of scientists has declined in recent years. There are now about 50 teams analyzing samples, said Duke.

For astronomers and astrophysicists, the lunar rocks have been a bonanza.

The material has provided a fundamental understanding of planetary formation, said Duke, and much that has been learned can be applied to the Earth.

"We are only now putting together a story of the moon's crust. When we understand that, then we'll know also how the Earth's crust was formed," said Duke. "Everything we've learned helps us to pinpoint on Earth where mineral resources can be found and to learn how volcanoes operate."

There is no other facility in the world like the moon lab. First called the Lunar Receiving Laboratory, it was initially designed to conduct studies of the moon samples and to isolate returning moon astronauts. Scientists for a time worried that the moon rocks, and the men who collected them, could be bringing to Earth bacteria or viruses that could cause disease.

After three moon missions, NASA dropped the requirement for isolating the spacemen, but continued to keep the rocks in stainless steel vaults filled with dry nitrogen gas.

The lunar material has been studied in hundreds of different ways. Age tests dated some of the rocks at 4.5 billion years, the oldest material known. Dust samples were fed to laboratory animals and insects with little effect. Seeds were grown in some of the lunar samples and scientists found that certain plants thrived in the soil.

Learning the chemistry of moon rocks has enabled scientists to construct a rough history of the Earth's region of the solar system. Because the moon has little atmosphere, rocks from the lunar sample act as time probe, chemically preserving the characteristics of the early period of planet formation. Such information, said Duke, is not now available from any other source.

A $1.8 million addition to the lab was dedicated in 1979, on the 10th anniversary of Apollo 11, but the expenditure was vigorously opposed by some members of Congress. Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., gave the lab one of his "Golden Fleece" awards for supposedly wasteful use of taxpayer money.

Scientists have rallied to support the laboratory and a House appropriations panel has voted to allocate funds to keep it operating.

Many of the samples from Apollo are yet to be studied, said Duke, including several pounds of material from Apollo 17, the last mission, that have not even been opened.

Cheops' Boat Finally Goes On Display

By LISETTE BALOUNY
Associated Press Writer
CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Sunk for centuries in desert sands and for nearly three decades in a sea of modern-day troubles, the 4,500-year-old boat of the Pharaoh Cheops is finally on public display.

Like the Great Pyramid of Giza which marked Cheop's tomb, the vessel is imposing. Egyptian archeologists claim it is the oldest and best-preserved wooden vessel in the world.

The vessel was designed to carry the pharaoh after his death across the horizon into paradise to meet the sun god Ra. It is sometimes called the Solar Boat.

"It is composed of 1,224 pieces — the longest 23 meters (75 feet), the tiniest 10 centimeters (4 inches)," says its keeper, 72-year-old Ahmed Youssef. "There is not a single nail. It is all fitted together with 5,000 meters (16,400 feet) of hemp rope."

The boat, which stands on 12 iron poles in a museum of its own near the Great Pyramid of Cheops, has proved a joy and a frustration for Ahmed Youssef.

The dismantled vessel was found in 1954 in a trench covered by limestone slabs that weighed 18 tons each. Workers found it accidentally while clearing rubble around the pyramid.

After months of struggling with the 41 slabs, the pieces of cedar wood were recovered with minimal damage. Youssef, who had earned a reputation for repairs and restoration of the pharaonic temples in Luxor, was called upon to care for the boat.

For four years he struggled to fit the pieces together.

At the same time, the Egyptian Antiquity Department haggled over a site for it and architects debated over the shape of a special museum. Work on the shelter started finally in 1960 and was completed in 1978.

During those years, there were shortages of aluminum sheets for the sides and the roof of the building. The large glass windows designed to deflect sun rays were smashed and new glass had to be imported. Then changes in the administration of the Antiquity Department brought in new chiefs with new ideas.

After its building's inauguration in 1978, the air conditioning broke down, endangering the preservation of the boat because of improper atmospheric conditions in the building.

"We have now installed a new control system, new insulation and fire-protection to ensure the safety of the boat and a suitable environment for it," said Ahmed Kadry, now the head of the Antiquity Department.

The 30-horsepower air conditioning, shipped from the United States, maintains the proper humidity and coolness in the $2 million building. It can be adjusted to maintain the same climatic conditions despite the number of people viewing the ship from tri-leveled decks.

A spare unit and a huge electricity generator have been installed as a precaution against Cairo's frequent power failures.

"If the pharaohs were able to keep the boat unharmed for centuries, it behooves us to do as much," Youssef said.

"I have devoted many years to keeping it safe. Now I am glad to see it in its museum in my lifetime."

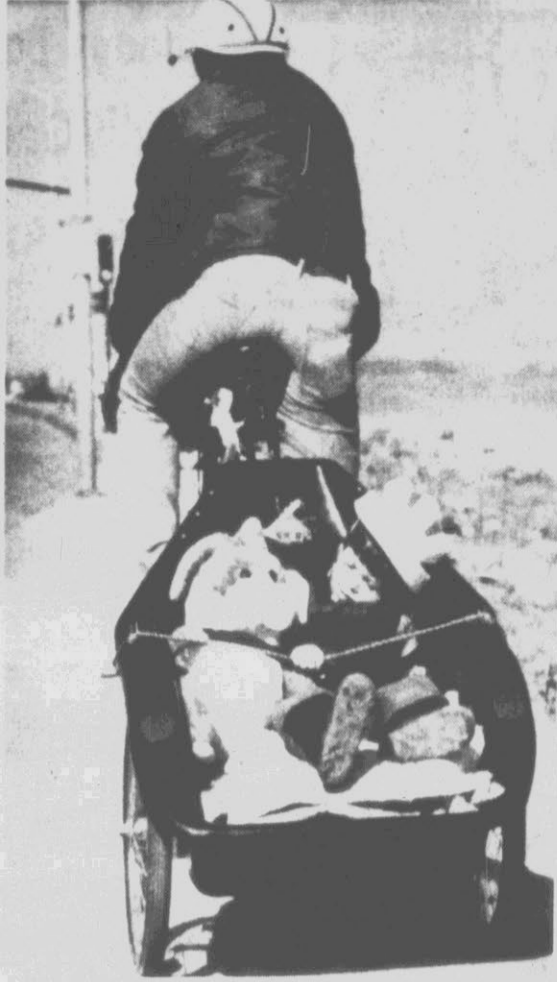

Wristwatch Includes Movie

NEW YORK (UPI) — A wristwatch that shows moving pictures is the latest wrinkle in men's LC digital quartz chronographs.

The watch in a stainless steel case with matching bracelet and black dial frame has two alarm settings and six pictures, each activated by the alarm.

One picture shows two people who shake hands. The other displays depict a runner, a figure typing, an airplane, a bell and a telephone.

The Seiko Master Planner has a manufacturer's suggested retail price of $115.

Welsh Culture Fading Away In Old Colony

By DOUGLAS GRANT MINE

Associated Press Writer GAIMAN, Argentina (AP) — He sits, staw-hatted, playing cards and sipping red wine with friends in a bar in this small Patagonian town. Argentine by birth and looking it — his hard farmer's hands and lined face deeply tanned — he calls to the barman not in Gaucho Spanish but in a clipped Celtic cadence.

His name is Ehedydd Jones and he is one of the descendants of the Welsh who colonized Patagonia — a vast expanse of sunbaked scrubland — more than a century ago hoping to preserve a culture increasingly dominated by the English at home.

Gaiman, a town of about 4,000 people in the province of Chubut, was founded a few years after the first boatload of 150 Welsh landed on the deserted Atlantic coast 40 miles northeast of here in 1865.

A few thousand widely scattered Tehuelche Indians were the vast region's only previous inhabitants.

Tegai Roberts, director of the small museum here recounting the history of the Welsh in the area, said about half of Gaiman's residents have Welsh names — Jones, Roberts, Williams, Evans or Davies — but that the culture is disappearing.

"The language is being lost," she said. "It is difficult to find a young person who speaks Welsh."

Miss Roberts said she could not estimate how many Welsh-descended people remain in Chubut. The community has been somewhat swamped in nearby Trelew where more recent arrivals swelled the city to over 50,000.

Petrus Jones, a 20-year-old fourth generation Welsh-Argentine who works in Gaiman's bank, said he knows only a few words of his grandparents' language and is not interested in learning it. He said his sister Olga studied Welsh briefly in one of the classes Miss Roberts used to give, but later married a Spanish-descended Argentine, moved to Buenos Aires and is rearing a completely assimilated family.

"If I were going to spend time learning a language," said Petrus, "I'd learn English or French — something I could use somewhere. They hardly speak Welsh even in Wales anymore."

Seventy-five-year-old Glynnis Williams' parents came from Wales in 1911, when the last group of Welsh settlers came to what by then was an Argentine province.

"My cousins write me from Wales in English," she said, adding that the Welsh still spoken in Paragonia is very correct. "A delegation came from Cardiff to dedicate a monument in 1965 and commented on how well we spoke," she said.

Miss Roberts said, though, some Spanish vocabulary had inevitably worked its way into the Welsh spoken here.

"Like 'patio' for example. There is no word in Welsh for that, so we use the Spanish one."

The Welsh-descended residents and those descended from later European immigrants mixed freely in Chubut. Mrs. Williams' case is not atypical. She married a Spaniard and had three children — all of whom were baptized Roman Catholic.

Gwynfe Griffiths is one of a dozen men who gather each evening in the Bar Oriental to socialize. They range in age from 25 to 60 and about half are of Welsh descent.

Gwynfe, 57, was the only one there one recent night who spoke the language, but he said he feels more at home in Spanish. His wife is an Evans and they speak Spanish at home on their 25-acre farm outside town.

"The families on the isolated farms are the only ones still speaking Welsh, and the old people here in town," he said, his blue eyes bright beneath the bill of a flat plaid cap.

Gwynfe said the congregations at the two Welsh Protestant churches in Gaiman are declining because of intermarriage and assimilation into the Argentine mainstream, which is overwhelmingly Catholic.

Nevil Alan Pugh embodies Gaiman's transition. The 42-year-old machinist is one of eight children born to local Welsh farmers over a 20-year period.

"My parents spoke to us all in Welsh. The older siblings grew up responding in Welsh, but the younger ones, like me, answered in Spanish from the time we started school," he said.

He is married to an Argentine and their children speak no Welsh.

Pugh said the Celtic penchant for good conversation over libation endures.

"We like to drink," he said, and added with a note of cultural pride as he gestured good-naturedly toward a pair of non-Welsh friends at the table: "We Welsh drink and the 'Tanos' (Italian-descended) and 'Gallegos' (Spanish-descended) get drunk."

"Eistedvod," the Welsh cultural festival of poetry, song and dance is still celebrated in Chubut every September, but many of the songs are sung in Spanish and the poetry competition is in the language of Cervantes rather than that of Dylan Thomas.

Soviet Role In N. Yemen A 'Concern'

By EARLEEN F. TATRO
Associated Press Writer
SANA, North Yemen (AP) — Saudi Arabia is pumping millions of dollars into North Yemen, the least developed nation on the Arabian Peninsula, in hopes of halting what it sees as a drift toward the Soviet Union.

watched the newscast at a coffee shop in Saadah. One remarked: "The Saudis are nothing but money."

The Saudis, on the other hand, are not viewed in the same way, since their aid is strictly military and it is not so evident as to play on North Yemeni pride.

Diplomatic sources in Sana said Saudi Arabia provides about $300 million a year in direct aid to North Yemen — and funnels an equal amount to the northern tribes who have successfully resisted government encroachment on their mountains and deserts where the chief occupation is smuggling trucks and consumer goods across the border from Saudi Arabia.

Official sources in Riyadh, the Saudi capital, have expressed deep concern over President Ali Abdullah Saleh's visit to Moscow last October, his Soviet-supplied weaponry, his inability to crush a communist-led guerrilla war 75 miles from his capital and his renewal of unification talks with his neighbor, Marxist-ruled South Yemen, a major Soviet client in the Middle East.

The Saudis could certainly stop this smuggling if they wanted to. It's a kind of indirect subsidy," one of the Western diplomats said. "The Saudis want the state to be strong enough to stay non-leftist, and at the same time they don't want it to be too strong."

The Soviet Union already has naval and air bases in South Yemen, at the entrance to the Red Sea. Since it shares a 350-mile desert border with Saudi Arabia on the southwestern corner for the peninsula, a hostile, well-armed North Yemen could pose a major threat to the oil-rich kingdom and thus to U.S. interests.

The northern tribal federations can field about 30,000 men — as many as President Saleh's army. They are armed with Soviet-designed Kalashnikov automatic rifles; shoulder-fired, SAM-7 ground-to-air missiles, and anti-aircraft guns mounted on pickup trucks.

In an effort to counter these perceived threats, the Saudis have pumped at least a half billion dollars into fiercely tribal and capitalist North Yemen in the past year, according to foreign diplomats in Sana who did not want to be named. With a projected $700 million deficit in its current $1.9 billion budget, North Yemen depends on more than 50 foreign aid donors to stay afloat.

The foreign diplomats in Sana said there is no indication the northern tribes — long financed by the Saudis but opposed to the Sana government — have forged an alliance with the anti-government guerrillas in the south who belong to the South Yemeni-backed National Democratic Front or NDF.

North Yemen, about the size of North Dakota with a population of about 6.2 million, lacks oil and virtually all other natural resources.

At the request of the Saudis in 1979, President Jimmy Carter rushed about $400 million worth of tanks, warplanes and artillery to North Yemen after its two-week border war with South Yemen. Saudi Arabia paid the bill and the United States stressed at the time that the shipment was made to please its major oil supplier.

The injection of U.S. arms into North Yemen's mostly Soviet-supplied arsenal brought Saleh's armed forces to the point where they lack little in the way of equipment, experts here said. The U.S. Congress recently appropriated $11 million in military credits primarily for training of personnel.

But the Americans, who some foreign diplomats here said have become too closely identified in Yemeni eyes with the often-resented Saudis, are trying to keep a low profile.

Only six U.S. officers are in North Yemen under a military cooperation agreement in contrast to more than 600 Soviet advisers. A few other Americans come and go on temporary training programs, while the bulk of training and maintenance for the U.S. M-60 tanks and F-5 fighter jets is carried out by Nationalist Chinese from Taiwan and Pakistanis under contract to the Saudi government.

Foreign diplomats in Sana, however, dismiss the prospect of a United Yemen as little more than wishful thinking.

North Yemen also has an estimated 600 Soviet T-55 tanks, about 75 Soviet MiG-21 jet fighters and SU-22 bombers.

"The Saudi money for U.S. arms gave both Saudi Arabia and the United States a bad name here," claimed one Western diplomat. "Saudi aid here does not consist of making them (the North Yemenis) more independent but rather more dependent because they can't afford to keep up these projects without more Saudi aid in the future."

The Saudis are often resented by the prideful North Yemenis because of this.

An example is the new Saudi-funded Peace Hospital in the northern city of Saadah near the Saudi border. On Feb. 16 North Yemen's state-run television devoted 15 minutes of its Arabic and English newscasts to the hospital's opening, showing dozens of berobed visiting Saudi dignitaries without ever identifying them or mentioning Saudi Arabia's role in the hospital.

A group of Yemeni men gestured derisively as they

Trying Cut Health Cost

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — As many as half of all American families are trying to reduce the cost of health care in questionable ways, says an extension family economics specialist.

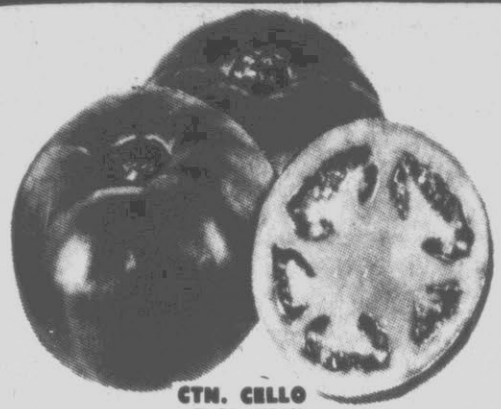

Among those questionable practices, says Kathy Prochaska Cue, are skipping annual checkups and dental care and postponing allergy shots, prescription refills and new eyeglasses.

Families who skip or put off preventive care may pay more in the long run, says the University of Nebraska specialist.

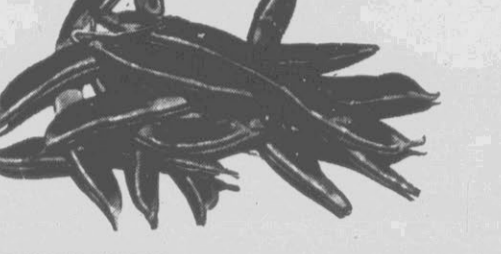

Her alternative suggestions include: —Don't make a doctor's office appointment unnecessarily. Telephone first if you are worried, describe the symptoms and ask if you should come in.

—Come prepared for appointments. Be as specific as you can about symptoms. Write down what you want to discuss with the doctor.

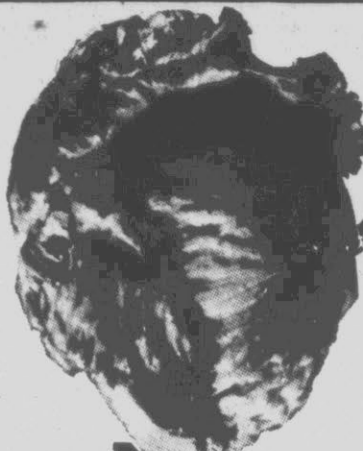

—If you receive a prescription, take it according to directions. Health care professionals estimate as many as 50 percent of patients stop taking prescriptions too soon or don't follow directions or never have the prescription filled.

'Eurocrats' Suffering A Bad Image

By ROBERT WIELAARD
Associated Press Writer
BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The 25th anniversary Thursday of the European Economic Community finds its 11,000 headquarters employees here under fire from their Brussels neighbors who see them as lazy, tax-evading freeloaders.

The popular image of the "Eurocrats," as Common Market staff members are called, has become so bad that Brussels Mayor Pierre van Halteren recently launched a campaign urging native city residents to stop criticizing them.

What has become apparent is that a majority of EEC employees now feel unloved in the Belgian capital and, if they had their way, would shift the community headquarters elsewhere.

An influential city newspaper, Le Soir, recently reported a poll of Common Market bureaucrats in which 60 percent said the EEC headquarters should be moved to one of the organization's nine other member countries.

A switch is not likely but local hostility doesn't help van Halteren's efforts to woo the European Parliament, now temporarily housed in Strasbourg, France, into settling permanently in Brussels.

In the past month, the mayor has tried to change the popular perception of Eurocrats as privileged layabouts who pay no taxes and smuggle home liquor and food they purchase here duty free. Eurocrats, he argued in a city publication, may not pay Belgian national taxes but they pay all local ones. Moreover, he stressed, they yield part of their income directly to the EEC in the form of a community tax "which is identical to the national taxes."

A common grouse among Bruxellois are the relatively high salaries and $40 annual quota of tax-free liquor and food enjoyed by EEC staff. Pay tends to be high because a large number of employees have college degrees and all receive an extra 16 percent allowance for living abroad, a community official said.

A senior Eurocrat can earn $72,000 a year, he said.

The city's mayor, stressing the positive, has pointed out the economic benefits of having the EEC headquarters here. Its presence not only has pulled in 11,000 "luxury immigrants," as the staff is called by some, but also encouraged many countries to enlarge their diplomatic representation.

But even here there have been some negative side effects. The EEC has been blamed for pushing up housing prices as much as 20 percent in some neighborhoods, said real estate consultant Francois Bertot. And developers, who miscalculated community expansion, are stuck with 350,000 square yards of surplus office space, he added. Mayor van Halteren, still hopeful of changing the poor image of the Common Market staff, urged native Bruxellois to forge closer ties with EEC officials and their families.

"Everyone can play a role in this spirited enterprise of European unity," he said with an enthusiasm not yet shared by all in a city which has proclaimed itself the "capital of Europe."

'Futurist' Sees Custom Revived

NEW YORK (UPI) — Arranged marriages and marriages of convenience may be due for a comeback, says futurist author Alvin Toffler.

In an article in Parents magazine, Toffler says he also expects computer dating and cable dating to increase. As people become more individualized, he says, "It's harder to find someone who has a similar set of values, interests, and attributes."

"I've heard elderly people in the United States and Japan and other countries again and again say things like, 'I married out of my head, not out of my heart and my heart followed.'"

"...two-career couples may get together because it's a good career package," Toffler adds.

More Turn
To Summers
At College

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer
Summer time is study time for a growing number of Americans who are spending their vacations on college and university campuses. The summer programs vary in length, cost and subject matter. Most provide separate schedules of activities for parents and children. The "students" do not get educational credit for their work, but they do get the chance to explore new areas of learning in a limited period of time.

The vacation colleges offer schools a way to make additional money and use facilities which frequently would otherwise be idle during the break from regular classes.

They offer consumers an alternative to traditional holidays, usually at a lower cost; meals and accommodations in college dormitories generally are included in the price. The vacation colleges also allow the whole family to vacation together, while providing enough flexibility to satisfy different age groups and interests.

There are several ways to select a vacation college. If you are interested in visiting a particular area of the country, check schools in the surrounding cities to see if any of them have special summer programs. You also can contact professional organizations for summer courses which are job-related.

You should consider the attractions not only of the school itself, but also of its location. What types of activities are available beyond the classroom? Are there summer theaters nearby, for example? Music festivals? Or museums?

One of the oldest vacation schools is the Dartmouth Alumni College in Hanover, N.H., which was founded in 1964. This summer's program, "The Renaissance: Forms, Reforms and Revolutions," will run from Aug. 8 to 19. There is a junior program for youngsters age 7 to 17.

The college is open to graduates and non-graduates alike, although the majority of participants are Dartmouth alumni. The college has room for 320 adult students in this summer's program; more than 160 people already have signed up. The price, including accommodations, food and all necessary materials, is $975 per couple. The junior program costs $375 per youngster.

In contrast to the Dartmouth Alumni College — which does not provide a choice of subject matter or dates — Cornell's Adult College in Ithaca, N.Y., offers dozens of topics over a five-week period from July 4 to Aug. 7.

There are three major courses: "The American Economic Climate of the '80s," "Health, Society and the Individual" and "China." In addition, there are seminars on everything from home computers to chamber music. Each course or seminar runs one week. There are separate recreational and educational programs for children.

Spokesman G. Michael McHugh said 978 adults and 597 children attended Cornell's Adult College last summer, and this year's enrollment is expected to be about the same.

There is a $200 charge per adult for each course or seminar. The basic dormitory room is $140 per person, based on double occupancy. Meals are included. The charge for children, including room and board, runs from $155 to $185, depending on age.

The popularity of different subjects fluctuates. McHugh said the course on today's economic climate "is getting a big play right now." Computer courses are perennial favorites, he said, as are lectures on investment strategies.

Steven Calvert, a spokesman for Dartmouth, said the most popular courses are the ones which have some application in modern life. "We always try to make the things relevant in some way," he said. The relevance of the Renaissance, he said, is that it represents "the birth of the modern age, the birth of science, the birth of our current ways of thinking about art, government, literature..."

Coast Guard Band Could Be Silenced

By SUSAN OKULA
Associated Press Writer
NEW LONDON, Conn. (AP) - Along with three cutters, search-and-rescue stations in 11 states and several training programs, the 45-member Coast Guard band has fallen victim to military budget cuts. By July 1, the smallest of the five premier U.S. military bands will be cut in half.

The cuts couldn't have come at a worse time for Judy and Gary Buttery. Expecting their first child in April, the two Coast Guard band musicians have received word that Gary, a tuba player, is losing his job.

Flutist Jill Maurer has begun taking courses in computer science. Although music has been her life for 10 years, she has decided "there is not much left in the music world."

The Coast Guard is trying to force retirement on 42-year-old Howard Pardee, a clarinetist in the band for more than 20 years. But, Pardee says, "I'm planning on staying." He plans a legal challenge.

Twenty-four musicians have been told they will be discharged. "As far as where the band is now (in musical proficiency), it's a high point, it's the best time," says the band's director, Lt. Lewis J. Buckley. "We'll have to start all over again."

Its concerts, attended by 300,000 people last year, are often standing-room only. The Coast Guard band's albums have reached a dozen in number, and some of its concerts are broadcast by National Public Radio, perhaps reaching as many as 1 million people.

The 45 members, based here at the Coast Guard Academy, also form a number of smaller ensembles, including a concert band, two woodwind quintets, a brass quintet and a Dixieland jazz group.

Sitting in his windowless, fluorescent-lighted office at the Coast Guard Academy recently, Buckley described his difficulties in deciding who would be fired.

"The band itself is, in many ways, a family," he said. "It's difficult for all of us."

The Coast Guard, which is under the jurisdiction of the Department of Transportation, will save about $546,700 annually by cutting the band personnel, service spokesman James Fillmore said. The Coast Guard's 1982-83 budget is pegged at $2.4 billion, while President Reagan's request for fiscal 1983 is for 20 percent less, or $1.9 billion.

Fillmore said the band cuts were an effort "to get economies under control without hurting the Coast Guard operation or mission."

Buckley defined the band's basic goals as public service, to generate awareness of the Coast Guard and to help with recruiting.

"To spend money to make people feel good about themselves and about their country is not a waste," said clarinet player Dan Lukens,

Joseph P. Kennedy II admits he'll never be one of the big boys in the petroleum business. But the 29-year-old self-taught oilman says he's happy beating major oil companies at their own game - and helping poor people in the process.

Kennedy, the oldest son of the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, is founder and president of the non-profit Citizens Energy Corporation. Through the company, he has helped supply about 18.5 million gallons of low-cost home heating oil to more than 175,000 households of poor and elderly Massachusetts residents the past three winters.

Though he bears one of the nation's best-known political names, he says he's interested in petroleum, not politics.

"You don't have to be in public office to perform a public service," Kennedy said from his crowded office, located in an apartment suite overlooking the Statehouse parking lot. "The most important thing is to help people, to fight back a little bit... I'm able to do it without a big office or bureaucracy - or even a boss."

Kennedy's program is a model of simplicity. He buys a barrel of crude oil, refines it, retains the home heating oil component of the crude and sells off byproducts like gasoline, kerosene and petroleum jelly at a profit.

His company uses the profit to sell the home heating oil to the state at a discount of 35 percent to 40 percent. State officials can stretch their federal fuel assistance funds by buying Kennedy's oil at a lower price, buying more of it to serve more people.

Kennedy sounds like a seasoned wildcatter when he talks about the merit of premium Arabian Light crude versus cheaper fuels.

The current world oil glut has been "devastating" to his young operation. "In order to stay in business we have to make a profit on other products. While the cost of a barrel of crude has remained high, prices have fallen on the other products," he said.

The glut also has prevented Citizens Energy from expanding the fuel aid to other states, he said.

Kennedy launched the program after spending two frustrating years in the Community Services Administration in Washington, helping monitor the success of anti-poverty programs. He said the idea came up in a 1978 conversation with Kennedy family adviser Richard Goodwin about the rapidly rising profits of major oil companies.

Kennedy conceded his name has been helpful in getting businessmen "to answer my telephone calls."

Another factor in his company's quick success was the industry practice of giving 30 days' credit on crude oil purchases, which allowed Citizens Energy to begin operations in 1979 without raising large amounts of start-up capital.

Three-piece suits and appointments with oil ministers around the globe are a big change from Kennedy's lifestyle 10 years ago.

"If you suggested we go out mountain climbing right now I'd probably go with you," he laughed. "The thing that's changed is that I have a family to come home to. I'd love to go sailing or make a TV show, but when I look at that versus spending a few hours with my children, I think I'd take my children."

Kennedy and his wife, Sheila, moved last August to a large home in Marshfield, on the shore south of Boston, to have more room for their twins, Joseph III and Matthew, now 17 months old.

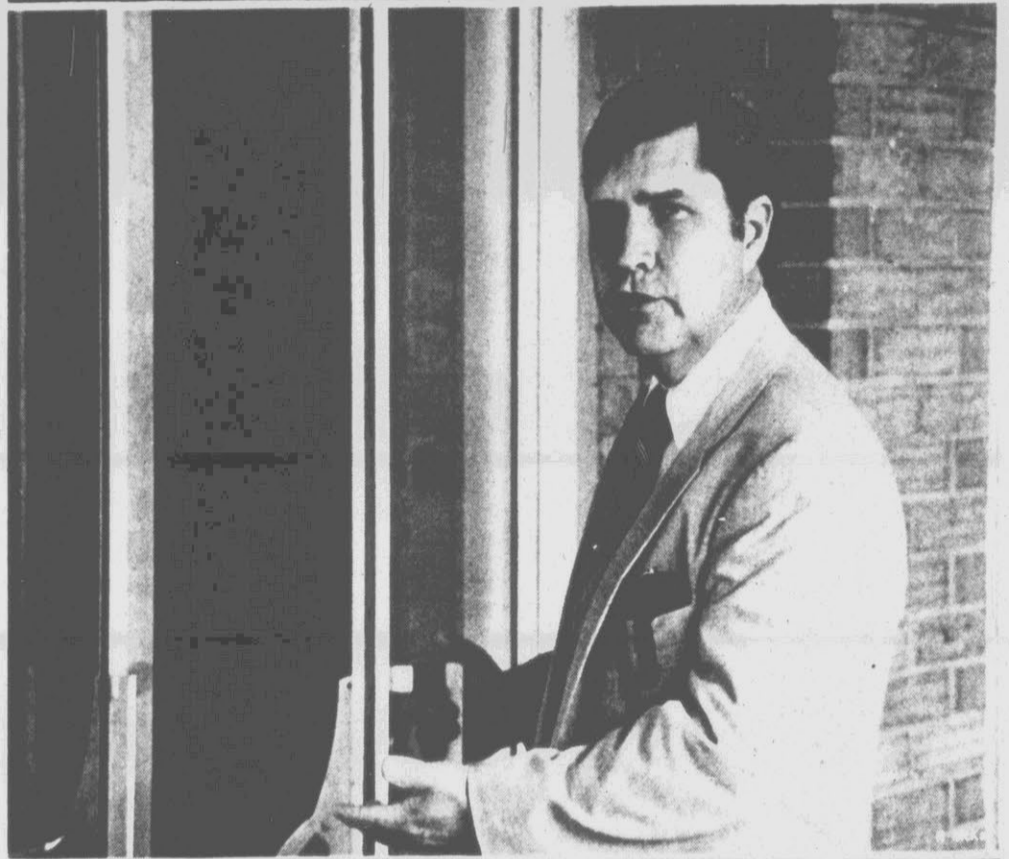

With his rugged good looks and winning smile, Kennedy is viewed by many as heir to his family's political fortunes in Massachusetts.

"BAPTIST CHURCHES INVITE YOU TO ATTEND."

Hundreds of Baptist churches in North Carolina are conducting HERE'S HOPE services during this time. They invite you to attend a Baptist church in your community. The HERE'S HOPE symbol is displayed in front of these churches. The message of the symbol is "this church cares about you and Jesus Christ cares about you."

There are more than 10,000 churches in North Carolina. They come in all sizes and denominations.

They are located in every community. North Carolina has a rich tradition of church people helping people.

Now is a good time to consider finding a church which will add meaning to your life.

I would like to invite you to visit a Baptist church during the HERE'S HOPE services. I believe you will find friendly people there who want you to join them in worship.
