

Cold Damage To N.C. Apple, Peach Crop

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Two nights of freezing temperatures have damaged North Carolina's multimillion-dollar apple and peach crops but it will take weeks to assess the extent of the damage, agriculture officials say.

The National Weather Service in Raleigh issued a report Sunday which said the entire apple crop in the Asheville area and Henderson County was wiped out. But some officials in western North Carolina disagreed.

"There's no question that we've had some damage, but I don't think we've been completely wiped out," said Grover Westmoreland, chairman of the Henderson County Agriculture Extension Service. "It will be at least two weeks before we know."

Mel Kolbe, an extension horticulturalist with North Carolina State University, said the damage depended on the elevation at which the apples were growing. He said it would take a week to determine the effects of the past four nights' sub-freezing temperatures.

"There is definitely a lot of damage at higher elevations, ranging from 100 percent to partial," he said. "But in other areas the temperature got as low as 16 degrees and there was relatively little damage."

In the Shelby area near Charlotte, between three-quarters and a full crop was unharmed Sunday, Kolbe said. "But in Waynesville, it got as low as 13 degrees and growers said it looked like there was a lot of damage."

The last 100 percent apple kill was reported in 1955, meteorologists said, when a cold snap came on the heels of an unusually warm late winter season. A similar situation has developed in recent weeks.

In 1980 North Carolina, the nation's seventh largest apple-producing state, had apple sales totaling more than $24 million. Figures for 1981 were not available.

Westmoreland said area growers have done everything they can do to prevent freeze damage.

"Most growers are burning brush, burning anything the EPA will let them to get heat in those orchards."

"Some have propellers up on 30- to 50-foot towers hoping to bring some of that warm air down. Some are using helicopters to fly over their orchards to move warmer air in,"

he said.

Watts Auman, president of the N.C. Peachgrowers Association and Clyde Auman's son, said several growers he spoke to indicated their crops were "a complete loss."

"Some said they still have some, but they didn't say how many survived," he said. "Here at our farm, we still have about 10 percent or 15 percent of our crop."

Peach grower Clyde Auman said there was considerable damage to his trees.

"We still have some peaches left, but I'd say it would be a short crop," he said. "Most of the blossoms I've examined are gone, but we have our fingers crossed. We hope we still have some."

Uncertainties Becloud Return Of Space Shuttle

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer

WHITE SANDS MISSILE RANGE, N.M. (AP) — The space shuttle astronauts looked uncertainly toward home today, preparing to end Columbia's next-to-last test flight with a diving deorbit into Earth atmosphere and touchdown on the windswept gypsum floor of New Mexico.

Morning winds kicked up the desert sands, and NASA raised the possibility of a one-day "wave off." But the space agency said it expected an on-time, right-turn landing today at 12:27 p.m., mountain time.

If wave off occurred, Columbia would likely be brought home Tuesday morning. A second attempt, 90 minutes later today, was not impossible. There was no danger to Columbia in the delays, but thousands who gathered in the desert to watch the shuttle land would be disappointed.

Three hours before scheduled landing on Northrup Strip, after they had donned their pressure suits for descent, Mission Control's Steve Nagel told astronauts Jack R. Lousma and C. Gordon Fullerton:

"The forecast is for the winds to pick up, and we will have to watch it all the way to the deorbit burn. There is some probability of a waveoff, but we don't anticipate that."

Flight director Tommy Holloway predicted landing right on time (2:27 p.m., EST) and officials said it would top off a near-perfect flight.

"We're ready if you are," Mission Control told Lousma and Fullerton at wake-up. They were serenaded with the song "Six Days on the Road ... I'm a 'gonna make it home tonight," modified to mark the crew's eighth day in orbit.

The instant spaceport on the Army's super-secret missile range here was in good shape for today's scheduled landing. Military troops stood guard as an estimated 50,000 people were shepherded to a remote desert viewing site to see Columbia land.

Lousma and Fullerton were to end their 7-full-day, 3-million-mile journey with a supersonic tour of America's scenic Southwest and wheels down on one of two runways that form an X on barren Northrup strip.

"We look forward to coming back," commander Lousma radioed before he and Fullerton retired Sunday night.

The question of a delayed landing arose when

NASA forecast strong winds in the morning, becoming stronger around noon MST. The space agency doesn't want to land Columbia into gusting winds because the ship still is in a test program to gauge its capabilities.

NASA predicted predicted noontime winds of 12 to 22 mph, with gusts of 42 mph — marginal at best.

Late Sunday night, flight director Neil Hutchinson said he would favor staying up an extra day, coming home early on Tuesday, rather than hurrying the crew through preparations for a premature return today.

Despite a number of nagging technical problems that kept them on their toes, the astronauts said a safe landing would give them "a 100 percent mission." They appeared relaxed and ready on Sunday, conducting final scientific tests, troubleshooting a couple of the minor problems and testing systems needed for the fiery descent.

The space travelers originally were to have flown Columbia back to Edwards Air Force Base in California where it landed after its first two flights. But rain flooded the runways there before Lousma and Fullerton were launched, and touchdown and tons of equipment were shifted 800 miles to the east, and a makeshift base sprouted for 500 technicians flown in.

Ship Capsizes; 2 Known Dead

MIAMI (AP) — A Haitian freighter believed to be carrying 10 crewmen capsized in heavy seas off Florida today, and two crewmen were known dead and three others were missing, the Coast Guard said.

The 70-foot Esperancia, a Haitian ship bound from Nassau, Bahamas, to Miami, was overturned by 10-foot waves at about 1 a.m. today, said Coast Guard Petty Officer Mike Kelley in Miami.

Kelley said five crewmembers swam safely to shore from the vessel capsized off the Palm Beach County coast to the city of Highland Beach. Two other crewmen were found drowned in the heavy surf, Kelley said.

Kelley said difficulties in interpreting the Haitians' Creole made it unclear how many crew members were still missing.

"At first, we thought it was 21, but the fifth man told us there were only 10 on the ship," Kelley said. "That would leave three missing crewmen, since two are known dead. Although it's difficult to know what to go on, we'll assume there are three missing sailors. That corresponds to what most of the freighters of that type carry."

Kelley said the Esperancia, a wooden-hulled ship, had issued no distress call or message by radio before sinking. "There probably wasn't even a radio on board, unfortunately," he said. "Our first warning that something was wrong was when the survivors swam ashore."

The hull of the Esperancia, broken apart by rough seas, was also being pushed by the waves toward the beach, he said.

The Coast Guard reported heavy winds, overcast skies and rain early today, hampering the search for the missing sailors. One of the two Coast Guard helicopters involved in the search developed engine trouble and had to make an emergency landing on the shoreline at Delray Beach, he said. A helicopter from the Broward County Sheriff's Department was scheduled to start searching the water for survivors at daybreak, Kelley said.

The crewmen told Highland Beach police the boat had put into Nassau after developing engine trouble on the way to Miami. It then left Nassau for Miami, they said.

The Coast Guard also reported the sinking of a Cuban fishing boat Sunday in the Straits of Florida. Kelley said three Cuban fishermen were plucked from the sinking 40-foot boat by a Coast Guard helicopter about 40 miles southeast of Marathon. They were taken to Key West and later to the Krome Avenue detention camp west of Miami.

Belize Possible Refugee Site

WASHINGTON (AP) — The possibility of resettling Haitians in Belize is being discussed by that Central American nation with the United States and Haiti, according to a State Department official.

Those who might be resettled in the former British colony could include Haitians who have settled in the United States in recent years, said Philip Chicola, a Latin American specialist in the department's refugee bureau.

Thousands of Haitians have fled their impoverished Caribbean island homeland for the United States, most settling in South Florida.

No Majority Shaping Up In El Salvador Election

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — President Jose Napoleon Duarte's centrist Christian Democrats led five rightist parties in partial election returns today for a constituent assembly but appeared to be falling short of a majority.

With only about 10 percent of the polling places reporting, a Christian Democrat spokesman said his party had opened talks with other parties on forming an alliance. But a spokesman for the ultra-rightist Republican Nationalist Alliance, in second place, claimed it would be able to form a coalition excluding Duarte's party.

There was no reliable estimate of the turnout for Sunday's voting in which at least 60 people were killed as security forces fought guerrillas who apparently failed to prevent large numbers of Salvadorans from voting. New fighting was reported today in Usulután and in a San Salvador suburb.

Unofficial partial returns gave the Christian Democrats 50,606 votes, or 40.3 percent, to 36,837, or 29.3 percent, for retired Maj. Roberto d'Aubuisson's ultra-rightist Republican Nationalist Alliance, in second place.

The National Conciliation Party, which ran the government from 1961 until the 1979 coup, had 20,314 votes (16.2 percent). Democratic Action was fourth with 12,171 (9.7 percent); the Popular Salvadoran Party had 4,191 (3.3 percent) and the Popular Orientation Party had 1,419 (1.1 percent).

The Central Election Commission, in announcing the returns, did not say how many of the 4,600 voting stations were reporting, but less than 10 percent appeared to be included, based on earlier reporting rates.

The 60-member constituent assembly will meet on a date to be decided later to write a new constitution and name an interim government to replace the U.S. backed civilian-military junta that seized power in a 1979 coup.

The elections are considered important to continued support from the United States, which has provided the Central American nation with millions of dollars in military aid and about 50 military advisers.

U.S. Ambassador Deane R. Hinton repeated previous pledges to try to work with whomever wins the election, but added the Christian Democrats appeared "very much in the lead." He also said in the interview with ABC's "Good Morning America" show that the guerrilla drive to disrupt the elections was "a total failure."

Ex-President Jose Figueres of Costa Rica, one of 200 foreign observers who monitored voting, said it was too early to tell who won the election, "but the guerrillas lost."

Fighting continued today in Usulután where guerrillas fired from a church tower and rooftops around the city, witnesses reported. Army troops controlled the garrison and the main square in the center of El Salvador's fourth largest city. There was also fighting reported near an army barracks in a San Salvador suburb.

About the same time that dogwood trees bloom in eastern North Carolina, crabgrass begins to awaken from winter dormancy. Crabgrass can be controlled to a high degree with a pre-emergent crabgrass killer applied at this time. Likewise, sandspur can be controlled, but by using a postemergence crabgrass killer later on in the spring.

Crabgrass is a summer annual weed that causes unsightly clumps and patches in warm season grass lawns. A high percentage of crabgrass makes a bermuda, centipede or zoysiagrass lawn look shaggy. So, many homemakers would like to control crabgrass. Crabgrass is a native plant species of North America, whereas none of our lawn grasses are as closely adapted to our growing conditions as is crabgrass.

Crabgrass is easily controlled with pre-emergent crabgrass killers. It can be controlled by the same postemergent herbicides that control sandbur or sandspurs. The materials normally recommended by agricultural extension specialists are as follows: benefin (balan 2.5G), bensulide, DCPA (Dacthal), Siduron (Tupersan) and oxidiazon (Ronstar G). There are several fertilizer products that contain a crabgrass killer. Whatever the formulation, be sure to read the label to see if the chemical can be used on your lawn. It is important to be aware that centipede grass lawns can be suppressed by some of the crabgrass killers.

At the time dogwoods are in bloom, soil temperatures have warmed up to the point where crabgrass seed begin to sprout. Pre-emergent crabgrass killers must be applied to seed prior to sprouting in order to get control.

Those crabgrass plants that escape pre-emergent herbicide treatment or receive no pre-emergent treatment can be controlled by postemergent crabgrass killers. This type of treatment will also control sandspur and other grass weeds.

Postemergent grass weeds in the lawn require sprays of methane arsonate compounds. These materials are abbreviated CMA, DSMA, MSMA. Again centipede grass and St. Augustine grass are much more sensitive than bermudagrass, so read labelled instructions carefully.

It is important to spray one of these compounds when the sandspur (or crabgrass) is small and has only 3-4 leaves. The soil moisture needs to be good and air temperatures should be 80 degrees Fahrenheit or higher. Sandspurs may require 3-4 applications for good control. Frequent mowing and/or mowing with a bagging attachment are helpful in keeping sandspurs from getting back on the lawn where they can sprout again next year. Sandspur is a difficult and noxious weed. Proper timing of sprays is of utmost importance.

Walter Gray Retiring After 40 Years

By JERRY RAYNOR

Reflector Staff Writer

WALTER GRAY . . . After 40 years on the Bethel Police Force, 26 of those years as police chief, Walter Gray is retiring. His last day of police chief duty will be Wednesday, March 31. He is shown here at the entry door to the Bethel Police Station.

BETHEL — After 40 years with the Bethel Police Department, Chief Walter Gray is retiring. Wednesday, March 31 is his last official day of duty with the police department. "All the police work I've ever done has been in Bethel," Gray said. "I came here early in 1942 and have been police chief for 26 years, since November 5, 1955."

Bethel is a town blessed with long-lasting police chiefs. Gray explained that his predecessor, Chief Henry Martin, "served about 45 years. So since the turn of the century, to the best of my knowledge, there's only been two police chiefs here, Martin and myself."

When Gray came on the police force, the force consisted of three men. Now 40 years later Bethel has a five-man force.

"In my 40 years here, we have had four murders, and all of them have been solved. The record is not quite as good on solving major breaking and entering cases," Gray said.

"Years ago we were able to solve most such cases. Back then, most larceny could be traced to local people. But in recent years that has changed, with the mobility people have with cars. Another thing, there's a pattern of thieves who travel, hitting places, going on to somewhere else. Right now, we are able to solve about half the breaking and entering cases. These cases are our major problem."

Gray has served under nine mayors beginning with Louis Ayers on up to the current mayor, Frank Hemingway. "I want to say I have worked under some of the finest men that any policeman could work with anywhere," Gray said. "I've never had problems with any of them." In addition to the first and most recent, other mayors Gray has worked under are J.W. Rook, Robert J. Whitehurst, Robert L. (Bob) Martin, Clifton Everett, Sr., R.E. Reddick, James Dupree, and J.M. Butterworth.

Pitt Native

A native of Pitt County, Gray was born in Stokes in Carolina Township and finished high school there. He is married to the former Bertha Johnson Gray of Robersonville in adjoining Martin County.

"We have three children, all sons. We also have four grandsons and one granddaughter," Gray said. The sons are named Walter Bradley Gray, Kenneth Gray and Harry Edwin Gray.

The chief is a member of the First Baptist Church in Bethel and has been active in several clubs, serving as past presidents of the Bethel Rotary Club and Bethel Masonic Lodge No. 589.

When not working, Gray turns to two major pastimes for pleasure. "I enjoy fishing, especially salt water fishing," he said. "And until ten years ago I spent a lot of time with my ponies. My ponies won several awards. A pony named Jeff was my main prize winner. I still have one pony left, named Pal."

Like many men in public office, Gray has devoted time to serve on various local and area boards. He was a member of the Mid-East Commission for three years, during which time he served as chairman of that commission's Law Enforcement division. He was awarded a commendation for his work in that capacity. He has also served as a member of the Mid-East Commission's Housing Authority, and was named to that position by the Pitt County Commissioners.

Retirement for Chief Walter Gray will not mean a sudden, complete stoppage of service to Bethel after four decades.

"I will be working as a consultant with the Utilities Commission here in Bethel after April 1," Gray said. "Naturally, I'm glad I'll have something to do. I'm not ready yet to just stop working altogether."

On April 27, the town of Bethel will show its gratitude to the man who since 1942 has been with the Bethel police force. On that date, officials and friends will honor Walter Gray with a testimonial dinner at the Greenville Country Club. Mayor Frank Hemingway says "ex-mayors, town officials and friends will be on hand to honor Walter Gray."

Opine Prison Mothers Better Off At Home

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — After weighing the costs of imprisoning mothers against the benefit of leaving them in the home to raise their children, panelists at a recent family workshop urged that prison alternatives be found.

"It costs between $20,000 to $30,000 a year to incarcerate a woman," said Marge Woods, director of technical assistance and policy analysis with the National Council on Crime and Delinquency in Hackensack, N.J. "If you add to this the cost of caring for her children you can probably add another $5,000 to $10,000. Alternatives to incarceration easily cost half that amount."

Ms. Woods, appearing with a panel on women in prisons, said most imprisoned mothers would pose little threat to society if they were moved to work-release or minimum security programs. And their children often suffer in their absence, she added.

"Most of the crimes committed by women are directly related to their inability to support themselves and their children adequately," Ms. Woods said. "The majority of offenses committed by women are economic crimes."

Ms. Woods said men often "make a living at crime," while most women find themselves emotionally forced into criminal situations.

"The vast majority of female inmates, therefore, should not be incarcerated," she said.

Ms. Woods said children of imprisoned mothers often do poorly in school, have lower self-esteem than their classmates and feel a growing concern for both their mothers' and their own safety.

"The importance of early childhood bonding has long been recognized. Contact between these women and their young children should be maintained," she said. "Yet today, at least a quarter of a million children are separated from their mothers each year because of prison or jail walls."

Jennie Lancaster, assistant superintendent for treatment and programs with the N.C. Department of Corrections, agreed that most female crimes are an "emotional response to the environment."

Speaking from 10 years of experience in the largest prison network in the country, Ms. Lancaster said the "typical" woman in prison was married at 15 and dropped out of school.

About 40 percent of the female inmates are imprisoned for murder or manslaughter, she said, adding that those women were usually in a long-term "abusive situation."

Ms. Lancaster said male inmates were often unconcerned about the welfare of their children, concentrating most of their efforts on regaining their own position in the outside world. Women, however, insist on constant contact with their children, she said.

Citing a study showing that 21,000 women — 75 percent of those in jail or prison — are mothers, she said alternatives like community service or restitution could offer tremendous savings to the taxpayers.

The panel appeared at a media workshop on children and families sponsored by the Bush Institute for Child and Family Policy and the University of North Carolina School of Journalism.

Rape Case Investigated

Greenville police today are continuing their investigation of an alleged rape that occurred about 1:30 or 2 a.m. Saturday near the intersection of First and Cotanche Streets.

Chief Glenn Cannon said the victim, a 23-year-old East Carolina University graduate, had allegedly accepted an offer of a ride home from a young man she met in an uptown night spot. When they reached the parking lot where the man said he had parked his car, he could not find the vehicle.

Instead of a ride home, the chief said, the young woman was thrown to the ground. When she began screaming, Cannon said, the man allegedly beat, then raped her.

Cannon said the attacker was described as a clean-shaven man in his mid 20s, about 5-feet 10-inches tall, weighing 160 pounds, with short to medium length brown hair.

Hope To Blunt Birth Explosion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The world's population — about 4.5 billion last year — is expected to grow over the next two decades to between 5.9 billion and 6.5 billion, according to a congressional study.

Improved birth control methods and greater support of international family planning programs could keep total population toward the lower projected figure, an Office of Technology Assessment report on the study says.

The report, released Sunday, said that during the next decade more than 20 new or improved contraceptive methods will become available. They include safer oral contraceptives, improved intrauterine devices, new hormonal chemicals, long-acting steroid injections and implants and better barrier devices for women, including disposable, one-size-fits-all diaphragms, the study said.

But the study also concludes that worldwide family planning assistance will have to increase 10-fold by the year 2000 — to $10.7 billion annually — to supply needed levels of these contraceptive methods and services.

Fertility has been declining worldwide, but population growth is continuing because of past high birth rates, falling death rates and declining infant mortality.

"Even if growth rates continue their current decline, the world's population is expected to increase from 4.5 billion in 1981 to between 5.9 billion and 6.5 billion in the year 2000," said the study.

Almost 92 percent of the projected increase will come from less developed countries and three-quarters of this will come from just 18 countries, the study said. At the top of the list are India, China, Brazil, Nigeria, Indonesia, Bangladesh, Pakistan and Mexico.

Poverty, suffering, food shortages, environmental problems and strained economic and natural resources would continue to climb as a result, it indicated.

Increased assistance will be needed from developed countries such as the United States, and a commitment to family planning by receiving governments, for the world to get closer to the lower population projection of 5.9 billion, said the study.

The Office of Technology Assessment, a non-partisan study group that analyzes technical issues and suggests policy options to Congress, said the U.S. has numerous options in addressing the population problems.

The report said the United States has been increasing its dollar support of international family planning each year, including the $230 million recommended by President Reagan for fiscal 1983. But these increases have not kept up with inflation, resulting in present funds being proportionately less than 10 years ago.

The report said Congress could consider keeping U.S. support where it is, or increasing spending for the entire program or only parts of it, such as contraceptive research.

Candlelight Wedding Performed Sunday

In a candlelight ceremony, the marriage of Janice Darlene Pollard and Jason Scott Bowen was solemnized Sunday at 4 p.m. in the Meadowbrook Presbyterian Church. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Ed Walker.

Parents of the couple are Mrs. Jack McCandless of Ayden and Mr. Robert Gerald Pollard of Greenville and Mr. and Mrs. Jason LeMar Bowen of Ayden.

A program of wedding music was presented by Christy Emory, pianist, and Charlotte Dee Tripp sang "You Light Up My Life" and "If."

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white polyester, lined in acetate taffeta, chantilly lace and appliques of nylon. The gown was styled with a U-shaped neckline, sheer sleeves with ruffled cuffs, raised waistline with satin ribbon belt, bouffant skirt with lace trim and attached chapel length train. Her fingertip veil of illusion had pearl trim. She carried a cascade of white miniature carnations and blue roses accented with white streamers.

The honor attendant, Rita Jackson, wore a formal gown of baby blue polyester and cotton voile lined in acetate with lace and applique trim. The gown had spaghetti straps that tied at the shoulders and a camisole style bodice with tuck accents and pearl trim. She wore a headpiece of white baby's breath and carried a lighted candle in a pewter holder accented with blue flowers and streamers.

Bridesmaids included Vickie Scott, cousin of the bride, Deborah Heath and Tammy Gay. They were dressed like the honor attendant.

Flowers girls were Kelly Bowen, sister of the bridegroom, and Selena Cherry, cousin of the bride. They wore identical dresses of blue polyester organza styled with ruffled necklines, caplet sleeves and a set-in waistband. They wore white baby's breath headpieces and carried white wicker baskets with blue, pink and white flowers accented with blue streamers.

Junior Gay of Greenville was ring bearer and carried a white satin pillow accented with netting and streamers.

Steve Bowen of Grifton, cousin of the bridegroom, was best man and groomsmen included Andrew Stocks, Melvin Loftin and Robert Scott, cousin of the bride, all of Ayden.

The mother of the bride wore a formal gown of blue silk with matching lace. The mother of the bridegroom selected a formal gown of green polyester with matching lace. Both wore corsages of white orchids.

Grandmothers of the couple, Mrs. Irene Scott, Mrs. Hettie Pollard and Mrs. Hettie Maddox, were given white carnation corsages. An after-rehearsal party was given by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Parker at their home in Winterville.

A reception was given by the bride's mother in the fellowship hall following the ceremony. Assisting in serving were Shirley Davis and Betty Cherry, aunt of the bride. Rhonda Hudson and JoAnn Briley, cousin of the bride, presided at the register.

The bride is a graduate of Ayden-Grifton High School and is attending Pitt Community College. She is also employed by K-Mart, Greenville. The bridegroom is also a graduate of Ayden-Grifton and is employed by his father.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will live in Winterville.

The wedding was directed by Dorothy Parker.

It's the berries — a brand-new idea in delightful table settings, using the newest of the plastic needlepoint canvas products with a bare minimum of stitches. Even the first-time needlepointer can easily create this yummy strawberry place mat set with matching coasters, napkin rings and centerpiece basket.

Only the basket and napkin rings require any joining stitches — and those are done in a simple whipstitch. All pieces are worked on matching pastel canvas, now available in the oval place mat shapes, round coaster frames with the canvas built in and in flat 10-inch-by-13-inch sheets.

SOY CABBAGE

Flavorful and low in calories.

1 small head (1 pound, scant) green cabbage
1 tablespoon salad oil
1 medium onion, thinly sliced
1 or more tablespoons soy sauce

Core the cabbage and shred medium-fine — there should be 4 cups packed down. In a non-stick 10-inch skillet over medium heat, in the hot oil, cook the onion until wilted. Add the cabbage and cook uncovered, stirring often, just until tender-crisp — 5 to 10 minutes. Stir in the soy sauce. Makes 3 large or 4 small servings.

and depth that can be quite pleasing. The only time I recall being bothered by this was when I was using an off-white yarn in a combination of Mosaic and Tent Stitches as the background for a pillow. Next to the Mosaic Stitches, the Tent Stitches took on a distinctly gray appearance.

In most colors, however, the differences are so subtle that you may not even notice them unless you have large areas, side by side, worked in more than one type of stitch. This is just one of those bits of information that you may want to file away for future reference.

While on this subject, let's talk a bit about color coordination. Many people are so afraid of their own color sense that they stick to very neutral colors. You can add a lot of spice to your needlework if you will be a little bolder. With scraps of canvas and odd skeins of yarn, try out a variety of color combinations and various stitches.

If you don't trust your own ideas, visit a fabric shop for inspiration. On a recent trip to Hawaii, I found a beautiful hibiscus print with flowers and leaves in cerise, burgundy and ruby reds on — believe it or not — a light orange background, a color combination I would never have thought of on my own. I bought enough to line a plastic canvas tote and am copying the fabric design on the tote, complete with the orange background. I know that it sounds wild but it's looking great and is ever so cheerful to work with!

Dear Abby

Don't Loan Precious Books

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I loaned one of my precious books to a friend a year and a half ago, and she hasn't returned it yet. I'll bet I've asked for it no less than a dozen times, but she still has it.

The last time I asked for it, she said, "Oh, do I still have that book? I'll have to look around and see if I can find it." That was four months ago, and I haven't heard a word about it since.

Abby, I want that book! Any suggestions?

ANNNOYED

DEAR ANNOYED: It's a pretty good bet that your friend (a) misplaced it; (b) let someone else read it and she can't remember who; (c) just plain lost it.

You could call on her and wait until she locates the book. And if that fails, you will have learned a valuable lesson. Precious books are not for lending.

DEAR ABBY: What's all the commotion about missing silverware? If I had a dinner party and discovered that some of my silver was missing, the next time I entertained I'd send out for Kentucky Fried Chicken and let my guests eat with their fingers!

SICK OF THIEVES

DEAR ABBY: I am 30 years old, and for half my life this problem has been bothering me. My mother was married to another man before she married my father. Mother had a son by her first husband. He is my half-brother, right?

Well, my half-brother married, and I consider his wife my sister-in-law. They now have two small children, and I consider them my niece and nephew.

This sister-in-law insists on introducing me as her husband's stepsister, and she keeps saying that her children are not really my niece and nephew.

My mother, who is now dead, told me that because her son and I had the same mother, he is my half-brother, and his children are my niece and nephew. I have always believed that, but I would like to hear it from you.

Abby, what do you do with blood relatives who try to act like they're not related to you?

COLLEEN FROM TIVERTON, R.I.

DEAR COLLEEN: As little as possible. Your mother was right. Her son by her first marriage is your half-brother and his children are technically your half-niece and -nephew. But let's not split hairs — or nieces and nephews.

Do you have questions about sex, love, drugs and the pain of growing up? Get Abby's new booklet: "What Every Teen-Ager Ought to Know." Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

Oil Glut Gains Us Time

While the public in general, and motorists in particular, exult over the "oil glut" and resulting lower prices, there is another side to the coin.

Remember: the oil cartel dredged up a new agreement on strategy to put their consumers back over the barrel they knew too well a few short years ago.

The effects will not be felt immediately, but the intent is all too obvious.

Meanwhile, the energy alternatives which were seen as an ultimate alternative to dependence upon the cartel's grasp, are getting less and less attention.

True, there is more home and building insulation in use than ever before in America; and we have seen a lot of people turn to wood heat (with little thought given to pollution or replacement; and more fuel efficient autos are the hallmark of these times.) But when it comes down to the nitty-gritty, petroleum is almost as essential as air in keeping our society "alive and well".

All that can be said for past efforts to reduce oil dependency in this country is that Americans have gained some time... not a solution.

So while we are enjoying a temporary "oil glut", we suggest more time and effort be devoted to assuring what's left of the Free World is protected against the prospect of being held hostage by our uncertain "friends" in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

We have won a reprieve; we would be remiss in our self-responsibility if the time is not used to our best advantage.

The Honeymoon Is Over

"Mr. Reagan, Mr. Reagan. Wake up, your honeymoon is over."

"So soon?"

"You've had a longer one than most presidents, sir. If you weren't such a lovable guy we would have asked you to leave the honeymoon suite three months ago."

"Gosh, I was having such a good time. I wish it could have gone on forever."

"Don't we all? But no honeymoon can last forever — or it wouldn't be called a honeymoon. Now you have to go and find out what its really like to be married to the American people. Don't forget when you took your presidential vows it was for better or for worse."

"How does a President know when his honeymoon is over?"

"When the population starts to question all those beautiful things you whispered in their ears. They've heard them before, but when they're in love, they want to believe them. Then one day they say, 'He promised me a rose garden, and all he gave me was cheddar cheese.'"

"It's the media that have done it. They've made me into a Scrooge. I am a compassionate, kind, generous person and the softest touch they've had in a long time. But all they talk about is budget deficits, and unemployment and high interest rates. Why do they do that?"

"Because the press is in show business, Mr. President. They're always playing up the bad news in South-cotash and they never talk about the good news. Now will you please get out of bed so the maid can clean up the room?"

"Many times, Mr. Reagan."

"How about the student who took his college loan, and put it into a 20 percent money fund?"

"That was one of your best ones."

"Or the guy who took his food stamps and bought vodka with them."

"You told that one to everybody."

"They say I never get my facts right."

"They'll say anything, Mr. Reagan, when the honeymoon is over."

"Maybe my problem is everyone thinks I'm just a nice guy. As long as they ruined my honeymoon, I can now be myself, and show them I'm as tough and mean as they are."

"It's worth a try, Mr. Reagan. Well, I guess it's time to leave the suite. We've enjoyed having you, sir. Here, I'll carry those bags for you."

"I'm going to miss this place. I had some wonderful times here. Can I say goodbye to the help?"

"I don't think that would be wise, sir. The TV reporters will just start interviewing the people I had to lay off."

(c) 1982, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

"You know who really ruined my honeymoon?"

"No, sir."

"Congress. They're out to get me because they hate to see anyone happy."

"I couldn't agree with you more. Congress always promises a president a honeymoon, and then when he turns out the lights, they start dropping shoes on his head. Here, Mr. Reagan, is your bathrobe. Would you like to take a shower before you go?"

"Business hasn't been any help either. They're all so skeptical and downbeat, they don't believe anything I told them. If anyone ruined my honeymoon it was the gloom and doom boys on Wall Street. I gave them everything they wanted, and they still turned against me when I needed them."

"Businessmen are terribly fickle. They'll applaud you in the East Room and as soon as you leave for the Oval Office, they'll sell you short. I'll start packing your clothes while you're shaving."

"I'll tell you who really ruined my honeymoon. It was all those government bureaucrats who kept screaming about what I was doing to the old and the poor. I was willing to take care of the old and poor, but I wasn't going to let people who could work get a free ride any more. Did I ever tell you

Low Priority To Politics

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The stinginess of the keeper of the president's time in allotting mere minutes for political purposes points to this grim reality: The White House has no campaign strategy, no tactical plan and no consuming interest in the 1982 mid-term election.

After a request by black politicians for five minutes with President Reagan was rejected, a plea by a Republican senator for 10 minutes of reelection campaign help was first given the same treatment and was granted only after a week of intense lobbying. That typifies the style of Michael K. Deaver, deputy chief of staff who controls the president's body. But it also reflects the low priority in the white House for party politics.

Not only is there no plan to direct the mid-term campaign from the White House, but nobody believes there will be. This signifies a problem deeper than just technical incompetence: a deficiency of commitment among the president's men to the campaign interests of their party.

Recent evidence came on March 15 when Reagan visited Montgomery, Ala., to address the state legislature (followed by a visit to Gov. Fob James's office). On behalf of the 13 black legislators, state Rep. Alvin Holmes asked for five minutes with the president in the governor's office. Subject: Alabama's black unemployment.

Here was a golden opportunity for Reagan. Republicans shudder at the thought of Reaganphobic blacks voting in unprecedented numbers. Besides, one purpose of the president's intermittent travels is to reassure such disaffected voters. Yet, Reagan's advance men turned Holmes down flat, a slap that echoed throughout the media (and led to a walkout by Holmes when Reagan spoke).

Although the turnaround followed Deaver's policies, Deaver told us he had no part in the decision. But the next week, Deaver himself was calling the shots when Sen. William Roth of Delaware asked the White House to help his reelection campaign. He was bringing a group of financial supporters to Washington to see the sights; could the president spare them 10 minutes at the White House?

After all, this would consume a lot less presidential time and effort than going to Wilmington for a Roth fundraiser. There is no truer Reagan supporter than quiet Bill Roth, who at the moment of his snub was organizing 17 fellow Republican senators to filibuster any challenge to Reagan's tax cuts. Mike Deaver dismissed the request as "bull-bleep," but finally relented after Roth's case was pressed for a week.

Failing to understand the critical importance of heeding black apprehensions and helping loyalist senators are two glaring holes in the fabric of White House political planning. Written proposals to mobilize Cabinet members, coordinate national, Senate and House campaign committees and identify a campaign theme are gathering dust.

Nor has there been planning to use the Republican Party's greatest asset: Ronald Reagan. His travels are episodic, not part of a grand design leading to the Nov. 2 climax. The president's March 23 journey to New York City, part of the vague desire to show he has no horns, demonstrated how to ignore an opportunity.

On the day before, the senior staff labored for hours to put a gloss on the expedition and came up with peanuts — another year of the $1 million technical assistance program for the South Bronx (munificence justifiably buried on page B-4 of The New York Times). The big news was the president's mindless statements in a New York Post interview seeming to endorse Democrat Ed Koch for governor.

On that same day, the president finally unveiled his Enterprise Zones program — with not one black congressional face present. Democratic Rep. William Gray of Pennsylvania, an original co-sponsor, understandably declined to be present because the administration refused to give him a copy of the Reagan bill. Less understandably, the White House was not concerned by Gray's absence.

Gray's Republican brethren have become accustomed to that attitude, as witness the following incidents within a two-week span: Reagan picked a federal judge vociferously opposed by Rep. Trent Lott of Mississippi, the Republican whip and most steadfast Reagan voter in the House; the president turned up in flood-stricken Fort Wayne, Ind., without alerting its congressman, Rep. Dan Coats, to be there; Rep. Lynn Martin of Illinois was not informed when the weather station in her district was closed; Rep. Ron Marlenee of Montana, a member of the Agriculture Committee, learned of an important presidential farm decision only when it was announced.

Indeed, the White House can safely claim that all politicians' the friendly and the unfriendly, are treated

Leo Jenkins For Governor

Leo Jenkins for governor?

It's been heard before in the days when Jenkins was chancellor of East Carolina University and one of the best known figures in North Carolina affairs. Jenkins has retired from the ECU chancellor position after winning university status, a medical school and new respect for the institution.

He has recently returned to Greenville to live. He says of a gubernatorial race, Why not? He notes that President Reagan is 70 and if he can run the nation Jenkins ought to be able to handle a state. He feels the Reagan election has opened up politics for retirement aged people.

The Jenkins trial balloon is up, and it is up there with many others more than two years before the next gubernatorial election. It is generally believed, however, the governor's race is as open as it has been in many years. Leo Jenkins' chances are as good as anyone else's.

Power For People

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — One of the more persistent running arguments about government in North Carolina since the beginnings of the state is just how much power the "people" ought to have.

Wary of Colonial governors with absolute power, early Tar Heels wanted to make sure that no one person — or one group of people — were able to get too much control in state government.

That is why terms of office were severely limited. Legislators at first served only one year, and are still limited to two-year terms unless a proposed amendment to the State Constitution is endorsed by voters this spring. Until the current office-holder pushed through a change, governors could serve only one four-year term.

But lately as the size and complexity of government has grown enormously, and the role and power of government increased tremendously those in charge have tended to get further away from contact with the average citizen. The amount of time legislators spend in Raleigh diminishes in a direct way the amount of contact they have with the people at home.

Change So has been created a continuing pressure for a relatively recent notion in matters governmental: initiative and referendum. This system now in place under varying guidelines in about half the 50 states simply sets up a way by which citizens can petition for a specific change in law or establishment of a program and if a majority of the voters approve, it is done.

While thus far the North Carolina General Assembly has not moved in the direction of setting up an initiative and referendum system in this state, the matter will continue to be put before that agency by those who favor the system.

Obviously, legislators are reluctant to surrender such power to the people, allowing laws to be made over their own heads.

There is considerable fear among politicians that opening up such power for citizens can allow momentary whims and emotional concerns to overly dominate decisions. Making law is deliberately designed as a slow and careful process in which hot tempers, hysteria, and selfish interests are kept outside. There are committees to gather information and argue, two legislative chambers to counter one another, and several readings on different days before proposals are finally voted up or down.

The debate over initiative and referendum cuts to the very heart of the question of what type government we shall have.

As with the town hall meetings of New England or the village meetings of Switzerland, there are methods by which people can be directly and regularly involved in even the tiniest details of their government.

Such democracy, though, is not what the constitutions of the nation and state provide for. Ours is a representative form of government in which people are supposed to elect those who will perform the duty of making a thorough study and

Other Editors Say The Soft Touch?

(Washington Daily News)

"State officials say they don't agree with Wall Street analysts who say the North Carolina Utilities Commission is among the nation's softest on companies seeking rate increases."

The above was the first paragraph in a recent Associated Press story appearing in your paper.

The second paragraph in the story read "Merrill Lynch, the nation's largest brokerage house, ranks the commission second in the nation in granting utility requests."

A later paragraph reads Duff and Phillips analysts say the commission "has become increasingly friendly to electric, telephone, and natural gas companies during the past decade."

This charge of course is being strongly denied by the governor and by some other state officials. If we look at the picture, we see a lot of smoke; and in fairness to our own people here in this Pamlico area, we are not sure there is not a little fire along with the smoke.

We are not satisfied that the State Utilities Commission has been as sensitive to the plight of the average consumer as it might have been. Our utility rates seem to go up too much each time some company asks for a rate increase.

We cannot and do not charge utility companies with asking for far more in the matter of increases than they expect to get. But we continue to hear mumbblings that such is the case.

We are not satisfied with the efforts of the so-called Public Staff which is supposed to represent the public. To say that a company asked for a 25 percent increase in electric rates and was granted a 10 percent increase in no way represents any victory for the Public Staff. Indeed, it might well represent a bitter defeat for the people. The Public Staff may seek to take credit, but it could possibly be a case in which the company seeking the 25 percent increase really hoped only for an eight percent increase.

Wall Street is in a mighty good position to know the truth. Wall Street points out that investors are better off putting their money in N.C. Utility stocks than is the case in most other states. That fact tells a story all its own.

Has An Upbeat Point Of View

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst NEW YORK (AP) — It was back in 1963, said Craig Hall. He was 18, in college, when he put all he had, $4,000, into a small apartment house and learned how to be a successful real estate manager.

He learned well. He solved the problem of not enough funds in a typically entrepreneurial way: He went to his friends.

He learned to buy underperforming properties and improve the management, and then he took time out to write a book, "The Real Estate Turnaround," describing how he bought at far below market.

He continued with his partnerships, and over the years he has purchased properties worth more than $350 million but, he says, "only that first investment was made without the participation of investors-partners."

And now, age 32, he has written his second book, "Craig Hall's Book of Real Estate Investing," subtitled "How to Beat Inflation & Taxes Through Partnership Investment For High Returns at Low Risk."

It comes at a time of great change in the real estate markets. Rarely these days do you see those "make a million quick" books that sold so well in the 1970s. The bookshelves now are filled with gloom and doom.

But not Hall's. The ordinary person can still make very good money as a partner in real estate, he says, but probably not in the same way.

The do-it-yourselfers of the 1970s bought one- or two-family houses and rented them out. But, Hall observes, the days of quick appreciation may be ended, at least for now. Such houses also can be nuisances to their part-time managers. And, of course, they lack benefits of scale.

Even so, and despite high interest rates, he says, there are still opportunities for individuals who buy such properties carefully. But in his view, many people would be better off in partnerships instead. He lists some of the advantages: big returns even before computing the tax advantages, tremendous tax deductions that shelter income from regular jobs, relatively low risk, and no headaches about managing.

Hall, whose Hall Real Estate Group, based in Southfield, Mich., and Dallas, manages 12,000 apartments in 30 private syndicates, believes most people fail to realize the returns still available in real estate.

So let us not fail to show up at our battle stations. Nobody can take our place — nobody. — Elisha Douglass

ONE THING'S FOR SURE. WITH AN IRA FROM BB&T, YOU'LL AGE WELL.

Your age is going to increase with time, of course. There's no getting around that. But, with an IRA, so is your fortune.

You could retire a millionaire.

If you start your IRA (Individual Retirement Account) when you're in your early thirties and interest rates stay about the same as they are now, a $2,000-a-year investment will make you a millionaire by the time you retire! And even if you can't start that early, you can still build a whopping retirement fund.

You'll pay lower income taxes.

As long as you're a wage earner, whether or not you have a retirement plan where you work, you're eligible for BB&T's IRA. And you can open your account right now.

You're allowed to sock away up to $2,000 each year ($2,250 if you're married and only one of you is a wage earner, $4,000 if both of you are). And whatever your annual investment is, you can deduct every penny of it from that year's gross income. Which means real tax savings.

Your interest is tax-deferred.

The interest you earn, which is tied to money market rates, is compounded daily at BB&T, not monthly or annually as may be the case at some banks and savings and loans. This can add up to a difference of thousands and thousands of dollars by the time you reach retirement age.

And all your interest is tax-deferred. You pay no tax on it until you begin withdrawing funds at retirement, when you'll almost certainly be in a lower tax bracket and, therefore, required to pay less.

Your money piles up until you're 59½.

If you withdraw any money from your IRA before you reach the age of 59½, Federal regulations require you to pay a 10% IRS penalty on that money and perhaps a substantial interest penalty as well.

But once you hit 59½, nothing can stop you. You may take your money in a lump sum, receive it in monthly, quarterly or annual installments, or even wait until you're 70½ — but no later — to begin withdrawing funds.

Call or visit any BB&T office today and ask us about this extraordinary opportunity to save for your future. Then open your IRA and get started along the road to prosperity.

When you're ready to retire, you won't look old. You'll look like a million bucks.

Age: 30 IRA: $2,000

Age: 37 IRA: $23,454

Age: 44 IRA: $78,425

Expect Reagan Support Soviet Talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Announcement of support for U.S.-Soviet negotiations aimed at a gradual reduction in nuclear armaments is expected from President Reagan this week, according to administration officials.

Reagan, one official said Sunday, probably will follow the suggestions in a bipartisan resolution that eight senators introduced last week.

That proposal, whose backers include Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., and Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., calls for the administration to "propose to the Soviet Union a long-term, mutual and verifiable nuclear forces freeze at equal and sharply reduced levels of forces."

The administration official, who asked not to be identified, said, "We'll probably endorse that proposal."

Another official, who also asked that his name not be used, said it was not expected that Reagan would be making "a major new initiative," but that he would address the nuclear weapons issue because "he recognizes many are concerned about arms control."

The president is likely to be dealing with the theme at his news conference this week, which probably will be Wednesday. A time had not been announced for the conference.

The resolution introduced by the group of eight senators, which was first proposed by Sens. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., and John Warner, R-Va., is designed to allow the president to acknowledge the growing national concern over the arms race while still dealing with the Soviets from a position of strength.

The administration rejected Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev's March 17 offer to freeze deployment of medium-range nuclear missiles in the European part of the Soviet Union, saying the Soviet move didn't go far enough.

The Brezhnev announcement was widely seen as the latest attempt to counter NATO plans to begin deployment of 572 medium-range Pershing II and Cruise missiles in Western Europe in 1983.

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., appearing on NBC's "Meet the Press," Sunday, said the Brezhnev proposal in effect called on the United States "to quit while you're behind."

Reagan always has insisted that there be verifiable reductions in nuclear weaponry.

Reagan has rejected another proposal being sponsored by 20 senators and 154 House members which urges an immediate worldwide freeze on nuclear arms. That, says the administration, would put the United States at a disadvantage to the Soviet Union.

That proposal, put forward by Sens. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., calls for major reductions on both sides after the immediate freeze, but the administration position is that that would block the North Atlantic Treaty Organization plans for the Western Europe missile deployment.

NATO contends its new missiles are necessary to counter the more than 300 Soviet SS-20 missiles already in place.

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AJ ♥AK7 ♦93 ♣KQJ652
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♦ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—We would not fault you if you chose to rebid three clubs, but to our mind a jump to two no trump is more constructive. Though you have only 18 HCP, your good six-card suit compensates for any point deficiency. Essentially, your hand is balanced and no trump looks like your most likely game. In addition, you want the lead to come up to your hand in case partner has something like 10-x-x in spades.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK3 ♥AKQJ93 ♦8 ♣KJ6
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
2 ♥ Pass 2 NT 3 ♦ ?

What action do you take?
A.—Bid three hearts. Even though your hand might not produce a game, you should take this opportunity to tell partner that you are not interested in defending three diamonds doubled. If partner is completely broke, or has nothing but wasted values in diamonds, he is allowed to pass three hearts — with ten tricks in your own hand, you would have rebid four hearts.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KQJ5 ♥A ♦954 ♣KQ952
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♦ Pass 1 ♣ Pass 3 ♣ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—Opposite the right hand your better than minimum opening bid could produce a slam, but you cannot yet judge its potential. All you can do for the moment is to show your support for partner's suit. Bid three diamonds. If partner makes an aggressive move, cue-bid your first-round heart control.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠65 ♥1096 ♦AQJ82 ♠A73
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♠ 2 ♥ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—Don't pussyfoot around — raise to four hearts. Partner must have a good suit and excellent trick-taking ability to overcall at the two-level vulnerable. You have adequate support and solid controls. A bid of three diamonds would be a waste of time, and three hearts puts too much pressure on partner.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AK72 ♥KJ107 ♦6 ♣K982
The bidding has proceeded:
East South West North
1 ♦ Dble Pass 1 ♥ Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—Since partner might have next to nothing for his forced response, don't get too excited about your hand. A raise to two hearts is all it merits. That tells partner that you have better than a minimum takeout double, and invites him to game if he has the equivalent of about 8 working points.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠4 ♥KQ1083 ♦KJ9852 ♠7
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♦ 1 ♠ 2 ♥ 2 ♣ 3 ♣ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—Distributionally, you have a very powerful hand. But it has one flaw — it is aceless. So proceed with care. Since you have already bid freely at the two-level, a jump preference to four diamonds is adequate. If you launch into Blackwood, you run the risk of finding partner with only two aces. What then?

take the responsibility of deciding what ought to be done in government.

Rash and immediate change is revolutionary. Action taken in the heat of the moment can often be seen to be wrong. The people who set up our system of government had in mind that people should be in control, but that change should come in an orderly and peaceful fashion — evolutionary rather than revolutionary.

A further concern among policy makers is the advent of electronic monitoring of the public humor which appears to be just over the horizon. Cable television hooks and satellites will eventually mean that two-way communications can provide immediate public response to questions and problems.

Could the day arrive when vast numbers of people, ill-equipped by education or experience, consider sets of filtered facts without access to the whole truth, by a push of a button create havoc? Critics of initiative and reform fear that eventuality.

Kluxers Will Be Running

SMITHFIELD, N.C. (AP) — Four Ku Klux Klansmen from North Carolina will seek political office in this year's election, it was announced this weekend.

Glenn Miller, grand dragon of the Carolina Knights, said it would be the first time the Carolina Knights, a sect of the Klan, has sponsored its own candidates for those offices.

Miller said Sunday he is running for the state Senate from the 9th District, representing Johnston and Sampson counties.

Other candidates, he said, are Republican John Gooding, an electrical engineer from Kinston who is running for a seat in the N.C. House; Democrat Leroy Gibson, a retired Marine master sergeant and Jacksonville insurance man running for Congress, 3rd District, and Republican Warren Brooks, a retired industrial engineer from Winston-Salem, a candidate for Congress, 5th District.

Gibson, 51, founded the militant Rights of White People, a white vigilante group formed in February 1971 that gained attention when it sent armed patrols into some Wilmington black neighborhoods during racial tension in that city.

He was also charged in October 1973 with possessing an illegal explosive device and with having an explosive not registered with federal officials in connection with the May 1973 bombing of a Jacksonville bookstore considered liberal and antiwar.

He was sentenced to 10 years in prison and fined $10,000. The sentence was upheld by the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals but denied a hearing by the Supreme Court. Gibson served time in an Atlanta federal prison from January 1975 until he was paroled in July 1979.

Shadowed

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Soviet intelligence-gathering ships and reconnaissance planes are shadowing the U.S. aircraft carrier Midway and other vessels in a task force off South Korea's east coast.

The U.S. ships are taking part in amphibious landing maneuvers, part of "Team Spirit '82," the annual U.S.-South Korean joint military exercise.

Vice Admiral M. Staser Holcomb, commander of the U.S. 7th Fleet, told South Korean President Chun Doo-hwan about the Soviet surveillance when the South Korean leader visited the carrier Sunday, Korean correspondents accompanying Chun reported today.

Holcomb reportedly told Chun that two Soviet naval craft began following the American task force Thursday when the fleet passed through the Korea Strait.

Discourages Hopes To Try Child As An Adult

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A defense lawyer's plan to force a jury trial for a 6-year-old girl accused of hitting a schoolmate with a stick has fallen apart because the prosecutor doesn't want to argue the case in adult court.

"Either they take this thing back to juvenile court ... for arbitration or I'll dismiss it," State Attorney Eugene Whitworth said Sunday, adding that "the best interests of the child became forgotten."

Authorities had hoped to settle the matter in juvenile court or community arbitration, proceedings in which there would be no criminal record and probably no penalty for 6-year-old Nancy Jo Burch. But the attorney hired by her parents, Alan Wilhite, insisted on getting a full hearing in adult court. "We believe in the jury system," he said.

After the prosecutor's announcement Sunday, Wilhite said he would speak to the parents today and decide whether to push for vindication in juvenile court or allow the charges to be dropped.

"I am trying to protect a sweet little girl," said Wilhite, whose client is accused of hitting a 7-year-old girl in the nose with a piece of wood.

"I don't know where we go from here," he said. "It's a very sad situation."

The child is accused of aggravated battery for allegedly hitting Shirley Lynn Nickolls in an after-school tiff Feb. 4.

The two girls involved in the legal battle, both students at the same elementary school, have since made up.

"I push her on the swings and we talk," said Shirley Lynn, a second-grader.

Circuit Court Judge R.A. "Buzzy" Green said Sunday he is still upset that the parents of both girls allowed the case to get so far.

"It's really just a symptom of something much larger. We've become a society where we won't even meet our neighbor and at least talk about mending our differences," he said.

Friday, Green sent the case to Circuit Court on Wilhite's motion. Under Florida law, he had to grant the request.

Whitworth was then forced to file aggravated battery charges in Circuit Court or drop the matter. Defense attorneys had rejected community arbitration, in which all parties sit down with an arbitrator.

Whitworth said he would decide soon what to do about co-defendant Ronnie Dexter, a 13-year-old who is accused

Knights Of Columbus Marking Their 100th Year

By STEPHEN C. SMITH
Associated Press Writer

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — To thousands of Catholics, they're the men wearing plumed hats and brandishing silver swords during special church celebrations — the Knights of Columbus, regarded by many as the most powerful lay group in the American Catholic Church.

On Monday, "the Order" celebrates its centennial with a Mass and the re-entombment of the remains of its founder, the Rev. Michael J. McGivney, in St. Mary's Church here.

It was there 100 years ago that McGivney, concerned with the plight of destitute widows and orphans of working men, founded the Knights of Columbus. The priest, championed by the Knights as a candidate for sainthood, later established one of the first insurance programs in the nation for industrial workers — the cornerstone for the more than $6 billion worth of insurance the order carries today for its members.

From humble beginnings in the small working-class church, the Knights have grown into a 1.35-million-member organization that last year donated an estimated $40 million and 9 million man-hours to charity, in addition to providing pageantry at church celebrations.

The Knights have 7,156 local councils and lodges worldwide. More than 1 million members of the organization live in the United States and there are some 200,000 Knights in Canada, about 45,000 in the Philippines, 9,000 in Mexico, 3,000 in Puerto Rico and smaller numbers in Guatemala, Panama, the Virgin Islands, the Dominican Republic and other countries.

Insurance revenues provide most of the income for the order's charity programs, but Supreme Knight Virgil C. Dechant says the organization is not interested in profits.

"The insurance revenues, certainly, are very valuable to us because they supply the wherewithal for much of this work," said Dechant who worked his way up in a state chapter in Kansas before coming to New Haven as assistant supreme secretary in 1966. "We're tax exempt and that implies that we must use the monies that we don't pay in taxes for charitable works and we try to do that."

Dechant directs the organization from his modest office suite in the group's world headquarters — a modern 22-story red brick structure that dominates New Haven's skyline. But the quiet and unassuming 51-year-old Supreme Knight dismisses any suggestion that he is in a position to become the chief lay spokesman for 49.6 million Roman Catholics in the United States.

Dechant says the Knights can better serve the church by providing the financial backing and manpower for projects supported by the National Conference of Catholic Bishops and other Catholic groups.

"This is not right for me to say, but if you were to ask a bishop today or the conference of Catholic bishops, 'Where can you go to raise money for a special project?' ... there's only one place to go and that's the Knights of Columbus. And they all wear the door out," he said.

The Knights funded construction of a bell tower at the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception in Washington, helped lead a grass-roots campaign to insert the words "under God" in the Pledge of Allegiance, paid for the microfilming of some 11 million pages of precious Vatican Library documents, endowed a permanent chair of American history at the Catholic University of America and underwrote the link-up costs of telecasting papal ceremonies all over the world.

However, few projects rival the order's $10 million "Vicarius Christi" fund established last year to provide Pope John Paul II an annual stipend for whatever charities the pope wishes to help around the globe.

Dechant also points with pride to Knights of Columbus funding of the American bishops' fight against abortion, their support for natural family planning as an alternative to artificial birth control and a program supporting tuition tax credits for parents who send their children to private and parochial schools.

"We have not involved ourselves in partisan politics except where there are matters of faith and morals ... we try to restrict it to that," Dechant said. "We have no lobbying office in Washington. But we are involved in the pro-life issue, the aid to Catholic education issue and other matters that concern us. On moral issues, we do speak out. But we try not to become partisan."

It fought a long battle with the Ku Klux Klan in the 1920s and 1930s and won an important court test that overturned an Oregon law that would have prevented children from attending parochial schools.

"I think we really have been transformed into a family organization. We're no longer a bachelor's organization like we were years ago," Dechant said. "I think the factor that provides for the most satisfaction is the opportunity the order affords the members to work for the church, their fellow man and also the family."

Question State Broken Promise

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Some of North Carolina's largest newspapers have accused state officials of unwisely misleading the inmates who took hostages at Central Prison last week.

While expressing relief that the eight hostages were freed unharmed, the newspapers questioned officials' decision to promise to send the inmates to a federal prison in Virginia — only to have them returned the next day.

In a strongly worded editorial, The Greensboro Daily News said transferring the inmates to Virginia would be a "small price to pay for the preservation of innocent life and the prevention of wider outbreaks of violence in this notoriously overcrowded facility."

The newspaper said the decision to return the inmates to North Carolina shook the state's credibility.

"If prison officials appear to give the inmates too much of what they seek, that could encourage future hostage-taking in the prison," the editorial said. "If the state refuses to budge an inch on any point, that could lead to bloodshed. And if the state appears to renege on any deal it makes to end the crisis, that could mean almost certain death for hostages in any future incident."

The fear the state had ruined its chance to negotiate with inmates in future incidents also was voiced by The News and Observer of Raleigh.

It said Corrections Secretary James Woodard's decision was an attempt "to send a signal to other inmates that hostage-taking would win no concession." But the editorial in Friday editions said to renege on the deal "is to send another message: In a tight spot in the future, prison officials are not as good as their word."

"If Central Prison is ever caught again in a hostage or riot situation, getting prisoners to believe what officials say will be an obstacle to a peaceful resolution," the editorial said.

In a Sunday editorial, the Charlotte Observer commented that "the state's calculated dishonesty left the civil rights lawyer who aided in the negotiations feeling personally betrayed."

The editorial quoted lawyer Irving Joyner, who aided prison officials in the negotiations, as saying, "If they wanted somebody to lie to the inmates, they could have done that themselves."

The Raleigh Times, in an editorial appearing Friday, pointed out some mitigating circumstances in the state's legal and moral dilemma.

"Legally, courts do not recognize confessions obtained under duress," the editorial said. "So it can be argued that the state's concessions and promises, obtained under the duress of the hostage situation, are not legally real or binding either."

Lobbying For Student Funds

By The Associated Press
University of North Carolina President William Friday

headed back to Capitol Hill today, hoping to persuade Congress to avoid further cuts in federal aid to students.

Friday planned a meeting Friday in Washington with Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, to press for a number of changes in the student aid funding levels proposed by the Reagan administration.

Friday said the presidents of Harvard University, Clark College in Atlanta and the University of Utah would also attend the private meeting with Hatch.

He said he also hopes to discuss the student aid proposals with Sens. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and John East, R-N.C.

Last week, Friday warned a group of black leaders that predominantly black colleges and universities would suffer greatly if President Reagan's proposed cuts are accepted.

"The fact is that what is being proposed in student financial aid policy for 1983-84 will jeopardize all that we have done and all that we aspire to do in the years ahead in increasing higher educational opportunities for black Americans and all of our financially disadvantaged youth," Friday said.

His comments came during a Saturday address to The Hungry Club of Atlanta, an organization of black leaders formed in the 1960s to promote discussions between the races on how integration should take place.

The Reagan administration is recommending a 50-percent reduction in 1983-84 student financial aid levels from the 1981-82 funding. Basic Education Opportunity Grants would be cut by 40 percent and the College Work Study program by 30 percent, Friday said.

He said three other major aid programs — the Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants, the National Direct Student Loans and the State Student Incentive Grants — would receive no funding.

Kennesaw's Arsenal Growing As ACLU Talks Of Filing Challenge

By STEELE HOLMAN
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — The suburban city of Kennesaw has added seven pistols and two riot-control shotguns to its citizens arsenal after the town decreed that its citizens bear arms, the mayor said.

Kennesaw Mayor Darwin Purdy said in a telephone interview Sunday that a group from Elk City, Okla., flew to Kennesaw Saturday to give the city three pistols and two shotguns, while a dealer in nearby Stone Mountain, another Atlanta suburb, contributed three pistols.

Meanwhile, the director of the Georgia chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union said on Sunday his group is examining the law and U.S. Constitution for a possible court challenge.

The five-member City Council unanimously voted two weeks ago to require that each head of household possess a gun and ammunition. City officials called the move a response to a Morton Grove, Ill., law requiring residents to surrender their pistols to police.

The city has offered to provide weapons for homeowners who cannot afford to buy their own.

The weapons donated Saturday and a .357 Magnum pistol given by a Moline, Ill., group last week will be bolstered by at least seven more guns promised by other groups and firearms the city buys with donated funds, Purdy said.

None of the weapons has been distributed, however, because city officials have been so busy reacting to publicity the ordinance generated they have not had time to organize gun safety classes, he said.

"We expected it was newsworthy, but we didn't anticipate it being nearly as widespread as it was, nor did we anticipate it would be covered so quickly. This thing hit the worldwide wires the next morning," he said.

The mayor said the city has received more than 1,000 letters on the law and that about 95 percent of it has been in favor of the measure.

Some local citizens, however, say the action has made Kennesaw the "laughingstock" of the country, and Handgun Control Inc. of Washington, D.C., warned that local citizens may shoot one another.

Nevertheless, Purdy says he believes the law will withstand any legal tests.

"We didn't pass it thinking it would be set aside," he said. "We think it will withstand a court challenge."

ACLU Director Gene Guerrero, however, said his group nevertheless is looking at the law.

"We're researching the question, but we haven't made a decision" on whether to mount a challenge, he said.

"We think the City Council of Kennesaw has every right to express its opinion about gun control, but the proper way to do that would have been to adopt a resolution on their feelings and send it off to Morton Grove or wherever they wanted to," Guerrero said.

"But we think it is improper for them to pass a law that forces (residents) to possess a deadly weapon which they may not wish to possess. We consider it an invasion of privacy," he said. "Also, there has been no showing by the City of Kennesaw that the law is necessary."

Guerrero said the ACLU's interest was prompted by a lot of complaints on the case, including some from Kennesaw.

In another development, one of two chaplains assigned to the city police force has resigned in protest over the ordinance.

"The concept we try to present is peace, and this ordinance could be seen as opposed to that," said the Rev. Leo Herbert, pastor of St. Catherine's Catholic Church, who resigned March 17. "We're giving that sense up and resorting to violence and the prospect of violence. The gun is too much a part of American lifestyle."

Two Wrecks Cause Damage

An estimated $1,400 damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Saturday night.

Officers said cars driven by Paul Durwood McLawhorn of Route 2, Farmville, and George Michael Williams of 1612 Sulgrave Rd., collided about 10:28 p.m. on Cotanche Street, 75 feet north of the Reade Street intersection, causing $400 damage to the McLawhorn car and $700 damage to the Williams vehicle.

Police said an estimated $300 damage resulted to a car driven by William Jasper Stanley of 413 Vance St. when a pedestrian ran into his vehicle about 9:30 p.m. at the intersection of Fifth and Cotanche Streets.

According to investigators, the pedestrian, running across the street, ran into the Stanley car, hit the vehicle's windshield, and kept going.

Five Injured In Collision

Five persons were reported injured in a 7:05 p.m. collision Friday at the intersection of Evans Street and Red Banks Road.

Drivers of the vehicles involved were identified as Ricky Jay Braxton of Simpson, and Mary Seymour Delong of Route 7, Greenville.

Police, who said both drivers and three passengers in the Delong car were injured, estimated damage at $2,000 to the Braxton car and $1,500 to the Delong vehicle.

Tar Heels Face Hoyas Tonight For Title

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Though they haven't played each other this year, there is a feeling of familiarity between North Carolina and Georgetown, who meet tonight for the NCAA basketball championship.

That's due in large part to the friendship of the coaches and the relationship of two particular players.

North Carolina's Dean Smith acknowledges that Georgetown's John Thompson "knows our philosophy and I know his philosophy" after working together on the gold medal-winning U.S. Olympic team in 1976.

Their relationship goes back long before that, though, to a time when Smith met Thompson while trying to recruit players at Thompson's St. Anthony high school in Washington, D.C.

"John is one of my personal friends in college coaching," Smith acknowledges. "But whether John was in or out of college coaching, we'd stay in touch."

They will be very much in touch tonight in the Superdome, where a crowd of 61,000-plus and a national television audience in the millions will watch the Tar Heels and Georgetown Hoyas settle the score for 1982.

Also on the court will be two boyhood pals — North Carolina forward James Worthy and Georgetown guard Eric "Sleepy" Floyd, who grew up together in Gastonia, N.C.

They won't be facing each other, except of course if Floyd happens to drive on Worthy inside.

The two went to the same church and played high school ball against each other, but their friendship goes on the back burner at least for tonight's game.

"We get together in the summer and play some," Worthy said at Sunday's pregame press conference. I live about 2-3 miles from him. In high school out of eight games, we won about six."

In order to win here tonight, Floyd will be one of the key figures that Worthy and his teammates will have to contain.

Smith says that senior guard Jimmy Black "will see Sleepy sure to get plenty of help from his teammates, though, since the Tar Heel defense is a team concept based on players aiding each other.

Smith is, nevertheless, concerned about the sharpshooting Georgetown guard, primarily because he is due to break out after a poor shooting game in Saturday's 50-46 semifinal victory over Louisville.

"I worry about Floyd," Smith admitted. "He'll come out firing."

The most obvious player for Smith to worry about tonight would have to be Pat Ewing, the 7-foot center who is the most intimidating player on the Georgetown team.

"Pat Ewing is a talented individual," Smith said. "He can run and jump and he's big. But I don't look at him and say we must stop Ewing to win. I think one of our goals is to avoid his dunks, but they are a well-rounded team."

"You don't get many second shots," Smith said. He can block shots."

Smith will send one of his two top big men — either Worthy or Sam Perkins — against Ewing.

Ewing has been a high-profile figure in this tournament in other ways. His coach says he was the object of a death threat earlier in the month and Thompson has had a body guard with him ever since.

Thompson also said at Sunday's press conference that that was one of the reasons he had the team sequestered in Biloxi, Miss. — some 60 miles away. He said he felt Ewing would be more secure there.

Neither Smith nor Thompson has won an NCAA title, but the faure hangs heavier on the North Carolina coach. Smith has taken teams to the Final Four six previous times. This is Thompson's first trip.

The situation has become a celebrated cause for North Carolina players, who are vowing to win this game for their frustrated coach. "Everytime I read an article, it's about how Coach Smith always chokes in the Final Four," Black says. "I'm tired of reading it — and I'm sure he's tired of reading it, too."

If Thompson wins, by the way, he will become the first black coach in NCAA Division I history to do so.

The Hoyas, 30-6, are a balanced team that can either run and shoot, as they did against Oregon State in the West Regional finals while setting an NCAA playoff record shooting percentage for field goals, or play a smart deliberate game and keep the score down.

North Carolina, 31-2, is primarily a disciplined team that takes usually high-percentage shots, thus inviting the probability of a low-scoring game.

Patrick Ewing Seven-Footer Heart & Soul Of Hoya 'D'

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — His outstretched arms span the basketball court like a suspension bridge.

Patrick Ewing, the 7-foot freshman from Georgetown University, extracts a mighty toll from all who would pass.

He is the heart and soul of Georgetown's bone-crushing defense, and the price he extracts will bear heavily on the Hoyas' chances of winning their first college basketball championship.

Some of Ewing's teammates were asked at a news conference Sunday if they could describe the most impressive thing they had seen this freshman phenom do in practice. On everyone's mind was whether James Worthy and Sam Perkins of North Carolina could pay Ewing's price tonight when the Tar Heels meet Georgetown for the NCAA title.

"It's the size of Patrick's heart and his determination that set him apart," said Ewing's teammate, Sleepy Floyd.

Ewing is inexperienced, a rookie with immense raw talent. He lacks polish, but certainly not flare. His size alone — 225 pounds of steel spring wound around his 7-foot frame — is intimidating. Perhaps his greatest attribute, however, is his quickness.

He can block a layup with one giant step from the foul line, allowing Coach John Thompson to position him 10 feet or so from the basket in

Pirates Nip Ohio, 6-5, In 15 Innings

ECU Nine Wins Marathon

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Kelly Robinette slapped a two-run double into left centerfield in the bottom of the 15th inning yesterday, allowing East Carolina to nip the University of Ohio, 6-5.

Ohio had scored twice in the top of the inning on solo home runs off winning pitcher Bobby Patterson to take a 5-3 lead, but the Pirates rallied for the victory after two men were out, getting four hits and a walk to bring them back.

It was a wild game to say the least. East Carolina took a 3-0 lead over the first six innings, but Ohio rallied for two in the seventh, then pushed over the tying run in the top of the ninth.

The potential go-ahead run was nailed at the plate on the same play, setting off a scuffle between plate umpire W.D. McRoy and Ohio coach Jerry France.

France disagreed with the call at the plate on baserunner Pat Miller, who tried to score on a double by John Schanzbach that had driven in the tying run. John Hallow had thrown a strike to catcher Fran Fitzgerald, who appeared to make an easy play on the runner.

France, however, saw it differently, pointing to the plate, insisting his runner had tagged the plate before the tag. McRoy held his ground, and France bumped him, then forcible shoved him.

That brought the Ohio players on the run, and they had to restrain their coach, who was immediately ejected from the game.

Later, in the fateful 15th inning, when a bases-loaded walk was issued to Chuck Bishop, Bobcat first baseman Joe Ausec protested the call, and that found him headed for the showers.

The win did allow the Pirates to take a sweep of the three-game series from the Bobcats, who drop to 3-7 on the season. East Carolina is now 15-4.

"For 12 or so innings, we played pretty good ball," Coach Hal Baird said of the Pirates. "Again we played well on defense. But we made enough mistakes offensively to find a book. We made mistakes baserunning, even when we'd warned people to watch out for pickoff plays."

"It was a strange game that ebbed and flowed. Fortunately it swung in our direction in time."

Baird was unhappy about the Pirate pitching, despite the fact that ECU pounded out 14 during the game. There were many missed opportunities however, that Baird felt could have come to fruit. "It especially worries me with so many games coming up next week in the conference." The Pirates face William & Mary in a doubleheader, and have single games with Richmond and James Madison between now and Saturday — all on the road.

East Carolina opened the scoring in the third, getting a run. Robinette reached on an bunt single and was sacrificed up. He scored on Mike Sorrell's single.

In the fifth, another run scored for the Pirates. Again Robinette reached, this time on an error, and he stole second.

Sorrell again banged out a hit to bring him around.

The sixth saw the Pirates score a third run. John Hallow doubled and advanced on a passed ball and a wild pitch, giving ECU a 3-0 lead.

Ohio, which had gotten only two runners as far as second in the first six innings off starter Charlie Smith, got a threat going in the seventh. With one down, Mark Berick walked and Keith Vrotsos singled, Baird then elected to relieve with freshman Brian Peterson, who gave up a double to Rich Korkate, driving in both runners.

After Peterson gave way to Patterson in the eighth, Ohio "touched" him — literally — for the tying run in the ninth.

"With one down, Merick walked and Miller slashed a line drive into the chest of Patterson. Knocked off his feet, he retrieved the ball, but was so stung that he could not throw it. After a second out,

La. Tech Downs Cheyney St. To Win NCAA Women's Title

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Associate Coach Leon Barmore says Louisiana Tech is "the best basketball team to play the game" as a result of the Lady Techsters' winning the first-ever NCAA Division I women's championship on the heels of last year's AIAW title.

"I didn't think so before this tournament, but after winning two in a row, I think this basketball team is the best. You've got to win twice to be able to talk about yourself, and now we can talk a little bit," Barmore said.

Top-ranked Louisiana Tech capped a 35-1 season with a 76-62 victory over No. 2 Cheyney State, 26-3, in the finals Sunday.

"I guess a champion is a champion. Last year the AIAW was the only thing going," said Tech head Coach Sonja Hogg. Like many of the nation's other colleges, Louisiana Tech switched affiliation from the AIAW to NCAA in the past year.

The AIAW held with its own, and possibly last, championship

Cale Survives Six-Car Melee To Capture 500

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (AP) — Cale Yarborough's birthday present to himself arrived a day late, but it eliminated chances of him being caught a dollar short. In fact, it made him $17,360 longer.

Yarborough survived a six-car melee on the 44th lap of the 492-lap Warner Hodgdon Carolina 500 Sunday at North Carolina Motor Speedway to earn his present — his first checkered flag in three 1982 starts.

Afterward, the veteran Timmonsville, S.C., charger told reporters he was "36 (years old) and holding," neglecting to tell them he's held there five previous years. His 42nd birthday gift was his 29th superspeedway victory and third Carolina 500 title.

"After the last pit stop, we really started running good," Yarborough said. "We changed the chassis a little and got the tires staggered right."

Several tires were "staggered" in the accident 48 laps from the end which put leader Darrell Waltrip out of contention, eventually forcing him to settle for seventh place, a fact many of the 40,000 fans acknowledged with applause.

A part broke loose on Gary Balough's car and left Waltrip, Yarborough, pole-sitter Benny Parsons, Terry Labonte and Bobby Allison looking for a safe path.

Yarborough found one as did Labonte, Parsons and Allison, who finished in the next three positions. Balough found a path safe enough to allow him one more trip around the track under the green — a trip which ended when he hit the backstretch wall to cause the last of the day's nine caution periods.

Waltrip wasn't as fortunate. He hit the wall, damaging his car so badly he finished two laps behind.

"Our old car was doing just fine until the wreck," Waltrip said. "I took one of the hardest licks I've ever took. It looked for a while like it was all going our way, but you never know about this place."

Waltrip's experience wasn't unlike that of most of the day's leaders, and many admitted it was their own fault.

Joe Ruttman led 70 of the first 100 laps, but spun out. When Richard Petty tried to dive underneath him, Petty's car was struck in the right rear and both were sidelined. Ruttman finished 24th, Petty 30th.

"I tried to get through the corner too fast and I spun out," Ruttman said. "I just went in too hard."

"The wreck was my fault," Petty said. "The car was sitting in the middle of the track. I thought he was gonna go up, but he came down and I ran right into him. Sure did hurt my po' old race car."

"I fell in behind Ricky Rudd, he waded me around, but he wasn't running as fast as I thought," said Neil Bonnett, who was leading before he and Rudd mixed it up on lap 318. "I guess I nailed him pretty good. After that we developed a real bad vibration."

Yarborough, who led twice for 51 laps including the last 49, averaged 108.992 mph to take the largest share of the $232,665 purse.

Ard Wins First Half Of Classic

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (AP) — Sam Ard of Asheboro, N.C., winner of the 250-lap Late Model Sportsman half of the Dogwood 500 Classic double-header, says a week's postponement because of rain was just what he needed.

"After practice and qualifying last week, we made a few changes," Ard said Sunday after he won by the width of a bumper as he and Butch Lindley of Greenville, S.C., hit the finish line at Martinsville Speedway side by side.

"We knew we'd be running in the first race, which meant there wouldn't be any rubber on the track," said Ard, who had a $10,250 payday. "That's much harder on the tires. We made some spring adjustments and I just tried to stay high and not wear them tires out too fast."

give it away on the inside. If he was going to pass me, it was going to be on the outside."

It was a bad day for Geoff Bodine of Pleasant Garden, N.C., who started on the pole in both races and had visions of becoming the first driver since Ray Hendrick of Richmond, Va., in the 1970 Cardinal 500 to win both races after starting in the No. 1 spot.

A gear problem in the Sportsman race caused him to drop back and he finished fourth behind Ard, Lindley and Jack Ingram of Asheville, N.C., although he was in the 250th lap at the finish.

In the Modified race, Bodine cut a tire, then dropped out on the 153rd lap with engine trouble and wound up 26th. Jim Spencer of Berwick, Pa., was third behind Sacks and Evans with Roger Treichler of Sanborn, N.Y., fourth. Both were in the 250th lap at the end.

There were 11 lead changes among seven drivers and nine caution flags for 51 laps in the Sportsman race, in which Ard averaged 67.244 mph in an Oldsmobile. Ard, who went ahead for good on the 218th lap, led four times for 184 laps. Bodine was in front twice for 26 and Lindley twice for 17.

That Fellow Watson Back Again

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — That Watson fellow is back again.

He was displaced as golf's leading light last season, but Tom Watson — determined to reclaim the role he relinquished so reluctantly — is again at the top of the heap, the only double winner of the season.

"It's a great feeling," Watson said after he'd subdued a game and gritty Frank Conner on the third hole of a sudden death playoff Sunday for the title in the Sea Pines-Heritage Classic.

The victory was the 27th of his American tour career, was worth $54,000 from the total purse of $300,000 and tied Watson for 12th place on the all-time tournament winning list with Henry Picard and the Walter Hagen.

Perhaps most importantly, however, it sends him into the Masters as a winner again. This was his last competitive start before he defends his title in the first of the year's four major tests of golfing greatness at Augusta, Ga, starting April 8.

"I feel like I'm tournament-tough and tournament-ready," said Watson, who will take this week off to put the final touches on his Masters preparations.

"I'll be going in there sky high," said Watson, who scored his latest victory on a routine, two-putt par on the third hole of a sudden death playoff against a one-time tennis pro who has yet to win in eight years on the golf tour.

"He did what he had to do to get in the playoff," Watson said of the stocky, 36-year-old Conner. "He's a good player and he hung in there. I know how he feels. I've lost playoffs myself."

He's won them, too, including two this season. The first was against Johnny Miller in the Los Angeles Open.

Watson and Conner each finished the regulation 72 holes with 280 scores, 4-under par on the Harbour Town Golf Links that was made more difficult that usual by 25-mile per hour winds and temperatures that dipped into the low 40s.

Watson, who once had a two-shot lead, ran into a patch of trouble beginning on the 13th hole and bogeyed two of the next four. And Conner, playing behind him, finally caught up with a 35-foot birdie putt on the tournament's 71st hole. Watson played the last round in par 71, Conner in 73.

The first extra hole went to pars, Watson missing a 5-foot putt that would have won it, and Conner scrambling. The next was parred routinely by both and on the third Conner made the mistake that cost him the tournament. He pulled his second shot to the left of the green. Watson put his approach some 12 feet from the flag.

Conner had a difficult chip and ran it 15 feet by the hole, then missed it coming back, leaving Watson with the relatively simple chore of 2-putting from two yards.

D.A. Weibring, who got to within a shot of the lead before making bogey from the marsh of Calibogue Sound on the final hole, was third alone at 282 after a 70.

Soccer Club Downs Kinston

KINSTON — The Jowi Sailboat Support Systems Soccer Club scored six goals in the first half and went to easily defeat the Kinston Soccer Club, 6-3, this past weekend.

Jowi, now 3-3, was led in scoring by Bryan Cantrell with three goals. Jay Price, Hal Warner and John Toomey all had one goal each.

Afterward, the veteran Timmonsville, S.C., charger told reporters he was "36 (years old) and holding," neglecting to tell them he's held there five previous years. His 42nd birthday gift was his 29th superspeedway victory and third Carolina 500 title.

Thompson, Smith — Two Friends Meet For Title

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Five-foot-9 Dean Smith smiles when someone asks about the one-on-one basketball games with 6-foot-10 John Thompson at the 1976 Olympics. "It was no contest," says Smith, the North Carolina coach. "All he had to do was take me inside."

Smith will be put in a more awkward position Monday night when his North Carolina team meets the Thompson-coached Georgetown club in the finals of the NCAA basketball championship. Smith recommended Thompson for the Georgetown job in 1972.

"I can say for certain that he was the person who signed, sealed and delivered me to Georgetown," Thompson says. Smith, however, never envisioned that he was setting up competition for the national championship that has eluded him for two decades.

In fact, Smith says he has always felt uncomfortable coaching against people he likes, and he and Thompson are close friends.

That's why North Carolina has never scheduled Georgetown. The only time that their teams have met was last season, in the Great Alaska Shootout Tournament, when the Tar Heels won 83-71.

Smith first met Thompson when he was recruiting some of his players at St. Anthony's high school in Washington, D.C., and a warm friendship developed. How close are they? "One way to say it," says Smith, "is to tell you that he was at our pre-game meal for the Marquette game in 1977 (before the NCAA title game.) The players know we never have any strangers there. That should tell you a little bit about how close friends we are."

Thompson seconds the sentiment. Asked at Sunday's pre-game news conference if he was "a Tar Heel fan," Thompson replied, "I've never been a Tar Heel fan in my life. I'm a Dean Smith fan — there is a vast difference."

The two men talk often on the phone, usually at odd hours. "His wife always says when the phone rings between 1 and 2 she knows who it is," Smith said. "That's a m."

Thompson was one of Smith's assistants on the gold medal-winning U.S. basketball team at the 1976 Olympics.

"(From the Olympics), he knows our philosophy, and I know his philosophy," Smith says. "He's his own man. He teaches well and he certainly has done a fabulous job with his team. I think it's remarkable how at the beginning the impression they made and how far they've come. It's a real tribute to John and his coaching staff."

When Thompson first came to Georgetown out of St. Anthony's in 1972, he assumed a floundering program. The Hoyas had won but three games in 26 the year before. In Thompson's first year, the Hoyas had a 12-14 record, then moved up to 13-13 the next year. The third year, the Hoyas had an 18-10 record during the regular season and found themselves in the NCAA playoffs for the first time since 1943.

Before going into coaching, Thompson was a star center at Providence and a backup to Bill Russell with the Boston Celtics.

Smith, 51, was never in Thompson's league as a player. A bench-riding guard at Kansas under the legendary Phog Allen, Smith's one big chance in the spotlight came when he played for the Jayhawks' national championship team in 1952.

Their coaching philosophies are as different as their playing styles. Smith is master of the finesse game and chief practitioner of the delay game, symbolized by his notorious four-corner offense. The 40-year-old Thompson likes the power game and gets the players — like 7-foot Pat Ewing — to project their relations with players are quite different, too. Thompson rules with an iron hand, Smith with a softer touch. "I've never heard Coach Smith raise his voice to us," North Carolina forward James Worthy says, "except when he has to inspire us in practice."

"He's been my good friend," guard Jimmy Black notes. Thompson, on the other hand, isn't worried about making friends with his players.

"My priority in coaching is not to maintain a close relationship with the players," he says. "My priority as basketball coach is not to be popular. I'm not trying to be disgruntled or force my players not to like me, but I don't think my top priority should be to have a buddy-buddy relationship with my players. If that happens, fine, but having a basic respect for each other and working toward a common goal is more important."

Not that Thompson doesn't care about his players. "John Thompson is a remarkable human being," Smith says. "You need to get to know him and you'll know how much he helps people and how much he cares about his players."

Smith pauses. "Maybe he should run for president some day."

Stall-ball Could Be Part Of Final North Carolina, Georgetown Both Like Four-Corners Delay Game

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — North Carolina goes into a slowdown and gets booed. Georgetown does the same thing and nobody gets upset.

Stall-ball is in at this year's NCAA Final Four. Both North Carolina and Georgetown used the delay game to get here, and both may use it in tonight's championship game.

"Maybe both teams will start in a delay," joked North Carolina Coach Dean Smith, the oft-maligned inventor of the Tar Heels' notorious four-corner offense.

Maybe not at the start. But very possibly in the second half, with about seven minutes to play if Saturday's semifinal games are any indication.

North Carolina went into the four-corners against Houston Saturday with about seven minutes to play, leading 52-48. The result was 10 free throws and three easy inside field goals for the Tar Heels to cement a 68-63 victory.

Georgetown went into its delay to protect 39-34 lead against Louisville. The Hoyas didn't have a field goal the rest of the way, capping a 50-46 victory with 11 free throws.

"We're using our talent," Smith said. "If we work hard and get a lead, we want the defense to come out and stop us.

"At that point we feel we can make layups if the defense comes out to attack us. It's foolish to shoot 30-foot jumpers when you're five up with seven minutes to go," he added.

"The only time we don't use the four-corners is if we're up by 15 points with four or five minutes left and things are going well."

Smith said his teams began getting criticized for the tactic in the mid-1970s when All-American guard Phil Ford directed the offense.

"It became unfair," he said. "People say, 'You beat us, but you had to go to Phil Ford.' We began to feel guilty about winning games."

It has prompted talk of a shot clock to force teams to initiate action on offense.

Coaches, however, are still content to keep the game as it is.

A recent survey by the National Association of Basketball Coaches showed that coaches didn't want the shot clock.

Only one of 392 coaches voted for a 24-second clock.

A survey of 1,524 men's coaches rejected a 30-second clock by a 3½-1 margin.

Hanika Learns Lessons Well

NEW YORK (AP) — Martina Navratilova put on a tennis clinic in the opening set of the $300,000 Avon Championships final, and Sylvia Hanika of West Germany learned her lessons well.

When the 1-hour, 37-minute battle was over, Hanika had upset Navratilova 1-6, 6-3, 6-4 to capture the $100,000 first-place prize. And for the third straight major tournament, Navratilova had started brilliantly but ended up taking second place.

"I still can't believe it," Hanika told the crowd after her victory Sunday in Madison Square Garden. "This is the happiest day of my whole life."

"It's my biggest success. In the United States, it is one of the biggest tournaments. Maybe people will know me better now."

Like Navratilova, who suffered her first defeat of 1982 after winning 27 consecutive matches and 54 of 58 sets, Hanika is a left-handed serve-and-volley player. In the first set, she took lessons from the No. 2-ranked woman player in the world.

Navratilova, the Czechoslovakian-born U.S. citizen, needed only 23 minutes to crush Hanika in the opening set as the West German could hold serve only in the second game. Martina chipped to Hanika's backhand, controlled the net and hit winners from all over the court.

After Hanika knotted the score 1-1, Navratilova ran off seven straight games to grab a 2-0 lead in the second set. Then things changed drastically. "I really didn't change anything," Navratilova said. "She just started hitting winners. She was hitting the ball as hard as she can."

"I don't think she ever had a string like that and I don't think she'll have another string like that."

In the third game of the second set, Hanika hit her first passing shot of the day, a forehand that caught Navratilova flat-footed at the net. Then, in the fifth game, she staved off two deuces to finally hold serve with a backhand passing shot down the line.

That set up the crucial sixth game. With Navratilova serving, Hanika broke on top 30-40. The two went to deuce three times before Hanika rifled a service return down the line for a winner, then hit a forehand passing shot to break Martina and even the set 3-3.

"I think when I broke her... and made it 3-all, I really thought I could make it," Hanika said afterward.

The strong West German held serve, then broke Navratilova again, this time at 30-40, to take a 5-3 lead. When she held her own service, she had wrapped up the second set and knotted the score at one set each.

As she had before Tracy Austin in the finals of the U.S. Open and the Toyota Championships in December, Navratilova, who had easily captured the opening set, folding in the third.

"I was really mad that I didn't do anything in the third set," said Martina, who picked up $52,000 for her runner-up finish. "I was so worried about what she was doing, I missed too much. She came to the net more than I did, which shouldn't have happened."

his 2-1-2 zone defense. His racehorse stride often allows him to lead the Georgetown fastbreak. His slam-dunks enliven Georgetown fans, who appreciatively brandish banners reading: "And on the Eighth Day, God Created Patrick."

"He can do a lot of remarkable things," Ewing's backup, Ed Spriggs, said. "It's hard to pick out one thing he does, though. He guides the ball in real well on the alley-oop, and he leaps real well."

Derek Smith of Louisville, more than once a victim of the Ewing menace in Georgetown's semifinal victory, said: "You've got to give Ewing a lot of respect. There's a great chance you'll get the ball thrown back at you if you take it inside. He's very tall and very tough, and if you play against him, you must recognize that fact."

Whether he dominates tonight will depend largely on the performance of Worthy and Perkins. Both are 6-9, giving away three inches in height to Ewing, but they are widely acclaimed the best frontcourt tandem in college basketball. The hours they have spent working together on getting the ball underneath, or at least within range, become apparent at game time. Worthy feeds to Perkins in the lane, back to Worthy underneath — two points. Perkins passes to Worthy in the key, Worthy fakes in midair and drops the ball off to Perkins on the baseline — two points.

Their one-on-one talents also are unmistakable. Early in the first half of North Carolina's semifinal victory over Houston, Bishop walked to force in one, and Robinette followed with a linedrive up the gap in left center for the two-run double that won it.

Fitzgerald and Sorrell each had three hits for the Pirates, while Robinette, Hallow and David Wells each had two. Miller led the Ohio hitting with three, while Korkate and Ausec each had two.

One of the weaknesses in Ewing's game is related to one of his strengths. His intensity sometimes gets him into foul trouble, trying to do more than even he is capable of doing. Coach Dean Smith said that while the Tar Heels won't purposely try to exploit that weakness, "I won't mind if he has four fouls in the first minute."

Schzanbach hit one into right that Hallow dove for but missed, scoring Bercek. Hallow's throw to Fitzgerald, however, nailed Miller — bringing on the Ohio coach's ejection.

Sunday in Philadelphia with Rutgers beating Texas 83-77. Tech came into the NCAA tournament heavily favored. It was the fourth Final Four appearance for the Lady Techsters, defeated once in two years. Tennessee came nowhere close in the semifinals, losing 69-46.

For nearly 10 minutes, Cheyney State's Lady Wolves looked as though they could prove the foregone conclusion wrong. They led by as much as eight points early on and were up 20-14 with 10:20 remaining in the first half.

But a Tech substitution of 6-foot-2 Debra Rodman for 6-foot Pam Kelly gained the Lady Techsters enough height to post center Janice Lawrence high and start getting the ball inside Cheyney's zone defense.

Lawrence had 12 of her 20 points as the Lady Techsters took off on a devastating 26-6 spurt to tie the game, move ahead for good and take a 40-26 halftime advantage. "We did a better job getting it to Lawrence. Debra gave us more height than Pam did," Barmore said. During that spurt, Cheyney missed 13 of its last 15 shots. The cold shooting was augmented by the temporary absences of four-plagued starters Debra Walker and Valerie Walker. Cheyney had the height advantage in the starting lineup, but "as we substitute in, we substitute small people," said Cheyney State Coach Vivian Stringer. "They were subbing in the big girls, and their people are physically punishing."

Plenty Of Stars To Assist Nielsen Ratings

Two Top Opera Stars In Superlative Concert

By MARY CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Soprano Leontyne Price and mezzo-soprano Marilyn Horne, an inspired pairing of voices, gave a superlative concert of operatic arias and duets Sunday afternoon at the Metropolitan Opera.

Both are among the top opera singers of our time. Both have rich voices. Each has an individual timbre. Opera fans hearing either on a classical music radio station would recognize the singer as quickly as a best friend's speaking voice on the phone.

Miss Horne made her Met debut in "Norma" with Joan Sutherland. She has explained the superb blend in their duets as her big voice surrounding Miss Sutherland's closely focused one.

The duet from "Norma" which ended this concert sounded just as glorious — and much different. These two rich voices blended altogether — like the meeting of two fogs which nad rolled in from opposite directions.

Then came encores. Miss Horne introduced her jolly Meyerbeer aria, "No, No, no no," by saying, "This is sung by a sassy little page who says, 'You've never seen anything like me.'"

That went for the singer, as well, and her partner for the afternoon.

The concert was taped by the Public Broadcasting Service for showing on TV next season and by RCA Records.

Miss Price's solo encore aria was one of Puccini's sweetest bittersweet melodies. After she spun a silver thread across some high notes, a sigh was heard throughout the audience. The last encore was a duet from "Madama Butterfly" in which the two American opera stars blended their voices as ravishingly as they had in "Norma."

The concert began with Mozart, both of them focusing their voices small. They did a Handel duet which was the concert's least satisfactory offering. Miss Horne had let her voice take on its natural richness and Miss Price was still keeping hers small. The first half ended with a duet from "Aida" in which Miss Horne's voice glowed the brighter of the two.

But for the rest of the day, comparisons didn't need to be made. The two women were a match for each other — superb. Miss Price's beautiful tone, vocal control and shadings were awesome in Mozart's "Dove sono" and Verdi's "Paci, pace." She put every note just where she wanted it, with just the right volume and vocal coloring to show emotion.

Every aria that Miss Horne chose showed her range from soprano through mezzo into the deepest contralto — without a weak spot, strain or a register break. Each aria also showed off her remarkable coloratura flexibility and her vocal warmth.

The orchestra conducted by James Levine had two solos, with the overture to Verdi's "Sicilian Vespers," which the Met is performing this season, especially outstanding.

Miss Horne's voice was golden; Miss Price's the rest of the rainbow. When they took bows, they clasped hands and smiled with evident pleasure in the music and their own and each other's musicianship.

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — While Oscar winners will be receiving congratulations Tuesday morning, advertisers on Madison Avenue will be analyzing the overnight Nielsen ratings for Hollywood's favorite show.

There's a big draw for this year's program. Timothy Hutton, Loretta Young, John Travolta, Alice Faye, Gregory Peck, Bette Midler, Kristy McNichol and two dozen other stars were in rehearsal this weekend.

Their gathering at the Los Angeles Music Center is part of the film industry's biggest event of the year. Tonight's Oscar show will offer the customary supply of stars and a whopping bill: $2 million, according to director Marty Pasetta.

The show is big business. How big? Well, six sponsors are paying ABC $1,230,000 apiece for three minutes of commercial time. That breaks down to $205,000 for a 30-second spot. This year's buyers: Buick, Coca Cola, General Electric, Hanes (hosiery), Polaroid and Revlon.

Will they get their money's worth? A 12-year survey of Nielsen ratings shows that the broadcast's share of the nation's TV sets in use has declined from 78 per cent in 1970 to 58 last year. The lowest figure was 55 in 1980.

According to the A.C. Nielsen Co., the number of U.S. homes tuned in to the awards has remained fairly constant: from 25,390,000 in 1970 to 24,120,000 last year. A ratings analyst points out that more TV homes are added each year, hence the share of the audience has declined despite the drop in the number of sets.

The Oscars are a prestigious event, like the Super Bowl, Prince Charles' and Lady Diana's wedding, and the Olympic games," observes Jake Keever, sales vice president at ABC. "The attractiveness of such programs transcends ratings for sponsors who like to be associated with them."

Keever said ABC sends out the Academy prospectus to potential sponsors in the fall, offering preference to those who have bought the show the previous year. While sponsorship had been offered per-minute in the past, the network now insists on three-minute buys. There is no dearth of customers, Keever says.

The Academy insists that ABC limit commercials to six minutes per hour. Thus three hours of the Oscar show can provide $7,380,000.

If the drop in audience share disturbs the Academy or the network, they're not admitting it. But the Academy has become aggressive in protecting the Oscar name and its exclusivity.

Earlier this year the Academy sued a syndicated program, "Your Choice for the Oscars," which agreed to carry notices that it had no connection with the Academy. Even Bob Hope, longtime "Oscar's Best Friend," was prevented from using Oscar in the title of his special on NBC tonight. Academy show producer Howard W. Koch tried to ban stars who acted as presenters on other award shows, but a threatened suit by NBC, which broadcasts "The American Movie Awards," helped change Koch's mind.

"I try to stay off the other awards shows," says Jack Lemmon, who will be presenting the director award with Walter Matthau tomorrow night. "I think too many award shows dissipates the biggie, the Academy. It's the only big promotion of the year for the entire motion picture business, and therefore I support it."

Already this year TV viewers have been able to see the Golden Globes, the American Movie Awards, the People's Choice awards on national networks, as well as local and syndicated shows for critics' prizes, etc. Are there too many awards?

"It may have seemed that way this year, because most of the shows were in March," said Marty Pasetta, who directs the People's Choice, as well as the Oscars. "Also the Oscars are in March, earlier than usual."

"I'm not diluting the merits of the other shows, but there still is only one Oscar. It's the granddaddy of them all."

1,000 Paratroops In Mojave Jump

By BRIAN R. BLAND
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Over 1,000 paratroopers from Fort Bragg will fly across the country and parachute into the Mojave Desert Tuesday in one of the biggest jumps in United States history, military officials say.

The drop begins the most intensive period of the month-long Gallant Eagle 82 military exercise, a test of the Rapid Deployment Joint Task Force.

About 1,300 paratroopers from the 82nd Airborne Division will load into C-141 jet transports late tonight and fly six hours for the jump.

They will be joined by another 700 or so 82nd Airborne troops from March Air Force Base near Riverside, Calif. for the 6 a.m. jump at Fort Irwin, Calif.

The exercises will involve the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marines.

"It's not a matter of training the individuals and units," said Air Force Lt. Col. Neil Buttner, a spokesman for the project. "They're already trained. The idea is to see how all four services work together ... how procedures work together under a single commander."

Moving large numbers of troops a great distance quickly, then dropping them into five zones — each about 1 mile by 3 miles — provides a good test of the readiness of the task force to move into a world trouble spot if needed, Buttner said.

Fond Favorite

The sentimental favorite at tonight's Academy Award ceremony is definitely Henry Fonda. The 76-year-old Fonda has brought wit, compassion and thoughtfulness to a variety of roles in more than 50 years of stage and screen acting. Although named last year for a special honorary award from the Academy, Fonda has never won an Oscar for an individual performance in any of his 83 feature films. Despite recent ill-health his performance in On Golden Pond was acclaimed by most movie critics. His nomination as Best Actor this year presents a unique opportunity to honor a man whose name is for many synonymous with the best in Hollywood traditions.

DO YOU KNOW — What are the names of Henry Fonda's two children who are also actors?

N.C. Business Leaders Won't Abandon Tax Break Campaign

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Although the state's bad economic news mounts, business leaders haven't given up their push to win a major tax break for industry this year.

Representatives of the textile industry and other North Carolina manufacturers appeared before a legislative study commission earlier this month and reminded lawmakers of a tax-cut bill worth millions of dollars to them.

Passed by the state House last year and lodged in a Senate committee, it would give manufacturers a state income tax credit to offset the money they pay counties in property taxes on inventories.

The bill would cost the state more than $100 million a year in lost tax revenue, legislative staff analysts figure. But the credit would be phased in gradually, and one version ties the credit to a sweetener for the state — a speedup of corporate tax payments that would produce a windfall for the state in the first two years.

"The inventory tax bill is still alive, although I don't know how well it is," Charles Dunn, lobbyist for the North Carolina Textile Manufacturers Association said after speaking to the Study Commission on Property Taxes.

"I think the bill that came over from the House is ideal for the times we're in — it could help the state (by providing an initial windfall) and at the same time point us in the direction of easing the inventory tax burden." Paying property taxes on inventories has long ranked North Carolina industry leaders, who say many other states don't tax their inventories and that the tax discourages industries from locating here.

Invoking a supply-side argument, they say dropping the tax or offsetting it through a credit would cause new industrial growth — producing enough new taxes to offset the lost revenue to government.

The General Assembly is expected to be preoccupied with balancing the state's budget in its June session, but Dunn and other industry representatives say they intend to take the issue before legislators again then.

Sam Johnson, a former legislator who lobbies for both manufacturers and retailers, says he may seek a more limited version when the General Assembly returns in June. Acknowledging that the recession and prospects for state budget shortages make passage more difficult, he said supporters may propose a new version that would seek only a partial credit — 50 percent or so.

Dunn said he believed there were enough votes to win Senate passage of the full bill last year. But the bill was stuck in the Ways and Means Committee, headed by Sen. Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, who was opposed to the measure and kept it bottled up.

Royall, in an interview, said he expects a new push for the tax cut in June. But he called passage "very difficult to do."

Another lobbyist for it is former Gov. Dan Moore. His chief concern is a credit for retailers, but the strategy is to win the credit for manufacturers first and add retailers later, he said.

"I would say the chances are not too bright, although as far as manufacturers are concerned, there is some reason for passing it now because the state would get a windfall for a couple years," Moore said.

If the bill doesn't come out of committee this year, its backers will have to start over again in the House in the next session. And the textile manufacturers, who figure to benefit from any credit on inventory taxes, are preparing for that, too.

A new political action committee, called TEXPAC, was formed late last year by textile industry executives in North Carolina. Dunn said it has raised about $15,000 so far, for contributions to candidates in state elections — for governor and legislature.

Although Dunn says the committee was not formed specifically to win support for the tax bill, he says the textile industry intends "to be more active in the political process" in Raleigh.

"To some degree the textile industry has sort of felt like the spouse of long standing — to some degree we've been taken for granted," he said. "One of the things we've been trying to do is say, 'hey, look at us.'"

STILL A HEAVYWEIGHT — Mike McCanham, left, shares a joke with James Lawson, a doctor at a weight loss clinic in Southfield, Mich. McCanham, who weighed about 460 pounds on Dec. 2, 1981, has shed about 100 pounds and plans to lose an additional 170 by October of this year. The only solid food McCanham has eaten since Dec. 2 is two pretzels. (AP Laserphoto)

Speaking of Your Health... Injury Can Trigger Gout Attack

I hurt my toe while swimming. The day after this happened I had a sudden attack of gout. I have had mild gout for a long time and have been taking special drugs for it. I was surprised when my doctor told me that the injury could set off such a severe attack. Is this common knowledge or is this my own doctor's special opinion? — Mr. R.L.S., Ore.
Dear Mr. S.:

Gout is a vast and extensive disease. Much is known about it and much more is still to be found out about all its variations. It is well-known that an injury can set off an attack of gout in people who have an underlying tendency to this disease.

Though this is unrelated to your specific question, I know that you and my readers will be interested in knowing that even a sudden loss of weight, especially in people who are eating a high fat diet, can also precipitate such an attack.

Many cases have been reported of acute attacks of gout following a period on some new-fangled diet undertaken without a doctor's approval. Some cases have been reported of gout that were attributed to a minor operation or extreme fatigue. Emotional disturbances and infections have also been said to cause an attack of gout. Doctors have long recognized that diuretics (water pills) can sometimes cause an attack of gout even in people who are taking one of the many excellent anti-gout medicines.

Gout is not a curable condition. Rather, it is a controllable one. This means that once a patient has been diagnosed as having gout it remains with them for the rest of their lives and demands a rigid surveillance with diet and drugs.

I don't know why my doctor should insist that I stop smoking because I have the beginnings of an ulcer of the stomach. Could it be that he wants me to stop smoking anyway and therefore is putting pressure on me by saying that cigarettes are bad for ulcers? — Mrs. H.Y., Wis.
Dear Mrs. Y.:

It may be difficult for you to see any relationship between smoking cigarettes and ulcers of the stomach and the duodenum (small intestine). Many readers are confused because smoke gets into the lungs rather than into the stomach.

Yet there is a very definite relationship between the two. Most doctors agree that patients with stomach ulcers are better off without tobacco. Doctors have observed that stomach ulcers heal more rapidly when patients have given up smoking.

It is well-known that cigarette tobacco increases the amount of hydrochloric acid produced in the stomach. This added amount of acid irritates the lining of the stomach particularly in the ulcerated area.

It has also been shown that nicotine in the bloodstream interferes with the secretions of the pancreas and gallbladder that normally buffer excess acids in the stomach.

I am certain that your doctor feels your health will benefit generally if you gave up tobacco.
