Bid To Blunt Immediate Nuclear Freeze

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is trying to blunt a congressional drive for an immediate nuclear arms freeze by saying it would leave the United States dangerously behind the Soviet Union and prompt the Kremlin to spurn real weapons reductions.

favoring the Soviet Union.
"The Soviets' great edge is one in which they could absorb our retaliatory blow and hit us again," he said at a prime-time news conference.
Hatfield and other proponents of an immediate freeze reacted coolly.
"Whenever he talks about the Russians being able to absorb a retaliatory strike, that indicates fantasyland thought or feeling," the Republican senator said.
Reagan threw his support to a rival resolution, backed by a majority in the Senate, that would not block his plans to deploy new strategic bombers, missiles and submarines pending a Soviet-American accord on arms reduction.

Jackson, D-Wash., was "an important move in the right direction."
Its call for major, verifiable reductions in U.S. and Soviet nuclear weapons to equal force levels are "essential elements of a truly effective arms control agreement," the president said.
Reagan's assertions of a Soviet "margin of superiority" were backed today by Deputy Secretary of State Walter Stoessel, who said on NBC-TV's "Today" show that to ensure a U.S. position of nuclear "inferiority" would "diminish the credibility of our deterrent."
Interviewed on the same program, Kennedy said there was no question on either side that the United States has more than enough nuclear warheads to "completely destroy ... effectively evaporate" the Soviet Union in a retaliatory strike. "So if we can defend ourselves, why not have a freeze?" he asked.

The Kremlin, responding today in a statement broadcast on Radio Moscow, said, "The president supported a speedier buildup of U.S. strategic armaments, including new bombers and ground- and sea-based nuclear missiles.
"Only when that was completed, he said, would his administration begin talks with the Soviet Union on nuclear weapons. This proves President Reagan's intention to break strategic parity and to achieve military superiority over the Soviet Union," the Soviet statement said.
Jackson, meanwhile, said he appreciated that "the president has inicated his support of the general thrust" of the proposal he and Warner have made.

But Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia, who has signed both resolutions, warned of growing impatience with the president's stand on arms control.
"It is discouraging that after 15 months in office the president is still unable to provide any specifics about his intentions," Byrd said. "I hope that his statement is a first step along a path of meaningful and expeditious negotiations."
Byrd warned that "neither the United States Senate nor the American people will stand still if the president's words are not followed in the days and weeks ahead by vigorous action in pursuit of strategic arms control and world peace."

Former Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie said the fact Reagan called a press conference "was a victory for the freeze movement." But Muskie said he was not reassured by the president's "superiority talk."
Leon Shull, national director of Americans for Democratic Action, said Reagan's support for the Warner-Jackson resolution "is out of step with America's wishes. Its actual purpose is to continue the buildup of unnecessary and expensive strategic forces."
Henry Kendall of Boston, a spokesman for the Union of Concerned Scientists, called Reagan's program "a guaranteed recipe for continuing the nuclear arms buildup the administration has wanted."

HEAVY TRAFFIC — Foot traffic stirs up dust on this road near Usulután Wednesday as Salvadoran troopers continued their search for guerrillas, and merchants look for buyers. (AP Laserphoto)

Usulután Slowly Emerges From Long Ordeal Of Guerrilla Attack

By JOE FRAZIER
Associated Press Writer
USULUTAN, El Salvador (AP) — Hours after the guerrillas left El Salvador's fourth largest city, the quiet was broken only by the rattle of an occasional ox cart on the cobblestones and the pealing of a church bell.
Then people stuck their heads out of their doorways, and life in Usulután, a city of 60,000 on the edge of the rebels' eastern mountain strongholds, edged back toward normal.
White flags of truce fluttered from bullet-scarred houses and shops. Even cars, bicycles and ox carts carried truce flags.
"We just waited for the will of God," said the portly owner of a corner store, telling a reporter about how she and her family passed the time.
"There is nothing we can do under the circumstances."
The central market was virtually empty, but troops stood guard on rooftops.
Spent cartridge casings littered the streets of some districts, remnants of the four-day battle here. But the children who slipped out to play in the sun didn't bother to pick up the now familiar residue of war.

Motorists drove around trees downed by guerrillas for roadblocks. Peasants with machetes moved in to cut up the trees for firewood.
There has been no electricity here for days and downed powerlines snaked across a number of streets.
For four days the leftists had mounted their strongest effort yet to take a major population center.

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate has decided to leave intact a congressional tax break to offset the cost of living in Washington, but the battle over the issue is far from over.
By a narrow vote on Wednesday, the Senate decided to put aside the tax issue, thus allowing a temporary spending measure to be approved and sent to the White House for President Reagan's signature.

The Senate's 81-18 vote on the continuing spending resolution, which already had cleared the House, means that seven government departments will be able to operate through Sept. 30, the end of fiscal 1982.
Sen. William Armstrong, R-Colo., led a two-day effort to repeal the tax break, which permits members of Congress to deduct $75 daily for each day Congress is in session.
Armstrong said he wanted to have "members of Congress taxed on the same basis as other taxpayers."
In more than 10 separate votes, the Senate supported Armstrong's efforts as the midnight Wednesday spending bill deadline approached.
"This is an absolute travesty," an exasperated Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., said at one point. "Once a year we run off the cliff just for the exercise of it."
But by late afternoon, Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., arranged for a procedural vote that allowed the Senate to forgo deciding the merits of the tax issue.
Specifically, the Senate voted 51-48 to declare the repeal proposal out of order because it was unrelated to the spending legislation to which it was attached.
"This will allow them (senators) to show that they voted against the controversial tax benefit even though the net result was that it remains in effect," said one Senate aide who asked not to be named.
Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said he would help find a compromise changing the present law in a way that would meet criticism of a congressional tax break.
Under the law passed last year, members of Congress may choose among three alternatives to reduce the cost of being a legislator in the capital.
The first allows the $75-a-day deduction. The second would allow a $50 daily deduction combined with tax and interest deductions for homeowners. A third sets no limit on Washington expenses so long as they are itemized and documented.
Under the last option, some critics have charged that some members of Congress might escape paying federal income taxes all together.
It was estimated that an average member of Congress would pay about $7,500 less in taxes in 1981 because of the new law that was quietly enacted last fall and winter.
The issue has proven particularly touchy in an election year.
Once the Senate disposed of the tax issue Wednesday, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., indicated he might use the spending bill as the vehicle for a fight over busing for school desegregation.

Helms withdrew his busing proposal but said he would attach it to either supplemental appropriations bill or a government debt limit measure which the Senate must act on when Congress returns from an Easter recess in about 10 days.

Bethel Chief Is Sworn In

BETHEL — Jerome K. Ratley was sworn in as Bethel chief of police here at 3 p.m. yesterday. Ratley succeeds Walter Gray, who was chief of police for 40 years.
Ratley said, "I'm happy that the people of Bethel have confidence in a young man after having somebody there for so long. I hope I can keep up the quality of law enforcement that they are used to."
Ratley, a graduate of Smithfield-Selma High School, attended North Carolina State University and James Sprunt Technical College in Kenansville. Ratley is currently working on his master's degree in criminal justice. He has approximately 80 hours of in-service training in the law enforcement field ranging from fingerprinting to criminal investigation.
Ratley, 24, previously held the rank of lieutenant and assistant chief for three and a half years in the Rose Hill Police Department. He has been involved with the volunteer rescue and fire departments for four years.
Ratley is a member of the North Carolina Law Enforcement Association, N.C. Fireman's Association, and N.C. Association of Rescue Squads. He received the Outstanding Law Enforcement Officer of the Year Award for Duplin County from the Rose Hill Jaycees.
Ratley is married to the former Deborah Capps. They are both originally from Selma. They have no children.

Hospital Tests For President

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will undergo tests today at the National Naval Medical Center in suburban Bethesda, Md., because of a "slight discomfort" in his urinary tract in recent weeks, a White House official said today.
Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said the discomfort had occurred a few weeks ago but had "cleared up after a few days on its own."
He said Reagan, who held a nationally broadcast news conference Wednesday night, was not experiencing any pain today. Reagan celebrated his 71st birthday on Feb. 6.
In 1967, while he was governor of California, Reagan underwent surgery to remove calcium deposits in his urinary tract.
Reagan planned to fly to the hospital in Bethesda by helicopter in early afternoon and return to the White House later in the day. White House officials said a statement would then be issued by Dr. Daniel Ruge.

A Sea Of Plants

WAKE 'EM UP AND GET 'EM OUT OF BED — Before tobacco plants can be set in the field they have to be removed from the beds, and that's what Annie Smith, Lottie Dennis and Valistine Tucker, left to right, are doing on this farm near Gritton. It's a job that takes a lot of bending, but if you grab an empty basket and make a seat like Ms. Smith, above, it gets a bit easier on the back. A few farmers began setting out the soon-to-be-golden leaf this week and nearly all began preparing. (Reflector Photo By Mary Schulken)

Couple Weds Sunday In Grifton Ceremony

GRIFTON — Wanda Kay White and H. Lyman Wingate Jr. were married in the First Baptist Church here Sunday afternoon at three o'clock. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. John L. Gray.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Walter O. White of Grifton and Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Lyman Wingate of Ayden.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents. Her honor attendant was Rhonda Hill of Kinston. Bridesmaids included Susan Conner, Valerie Harris and Susan Howes, all of Grifton. Carla Ann Hudson of New Bern and Kim Harris of Ayden. The flower girl was Lori Nicole Harris of Winterville.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man while ushers were Ollen Wingate and Keith Harris of Ayden, Neal White of Grifton, Benny Harris of Winterville and Greg Dennis of Farmville. The ring bearer was McRyan Shelor of Ayden.

A program of wedding music was presented by Mr. and Mrs. John Thompson of New Bern. Lisa Tripp of Grifton was vocalist.

The bride wore a gown of white chiffon over taffeta. It was styled with a high Victorian neckline accented with cluny lace and seed pearls. The long sheer sleeves ended in a lace cuff. The full skirt, styled in lace tiers, flowed to chapel length. She wore a white picture hat of cluny lace and chiffon with streamers of white illusion. The bride carried a cascade of white roses, miniature pink carnations and baby's breath accented by white bridal ribbon.

The attendants were each dressed in a formal gown of pink lustreglo designed with a high neckline encircled with pink chantilly lace. The gown was enhanced with a sheer yoke of pointe d'esprit outlined with a double ruffle of chantilly lace. Their gowns featured accordion pleated skirts. They each carried a nosegay of spring flowers. The honor attendant's was accented with pink ribbon while bridesmaids' were accented with white ribbon.

The flower girl wore a pink chiffon over taffeta gown fashioned with a high neckline. The gown fell in tiers of chiffon ruffles. She carried a basket of spring flowers.

After a wedding trip to Wrightsville Beach, the couple will be living in Ayden.

The bride graduated from Ayden-Grifton High School and attended Wayne Community and Lenoir Community Colleges. She now works at J.C. Penney, Kinston. The bridegroom graduated from Ayden-Grifton High School and is employed by Procter and Gamble, Greenville.

A reception was given by the bride's parents.

Assisting at the reception were Mrs. Carlton Hudson, Mrs. Raymond White and Mrs. Thomas Miller, aunts of the bride, and Lila Harris, sister of the bridegroom. Helen Lawrence, aunt of the bridegroom, served wedding cake.

The wedding was directed by Gladys Thomas of Grifton.

The bride-elect was honored at several showers prior to the wedding including a kitchen shower given by Mrs. Henry Stokes, Mrs. Alton Scoggins, Mrs. Bobby Price, Mrs. Early Mullen,

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Sometimes it seems like the whole country is at odds with one another. We can't agree on anything anymore.

There was a time when all you had to do to get a standing ovation was to mention God, motherhood and flag and hot cocoa before bedtime, and an audience would rise to its feet as one.

In recent times, I have seen speakers booed for advocating peace, clean air and children.

There are no more one-size-fits-all conversations.

I can't stand rejection, especially when I'm eating, and it's getting tougher and tougher to attend a dinner party and get a topic on which everyone agrees.

I've kept a file of safe topics. They're all here. You're welcome to them.

"TV is a cultural wasteland!" No one will say anything good about television in public. Count on it. Despite the fact that 150 million people watch an average of 42 hours of television a week, no one will defend it... even the couple who skip dessert to get home in time to watch "Dallas."

"Don't you feel sorry for Brooke Shields?" Never has compassion been put to such a strain, but no one, trust me, no one will risk being labeled a green-eyed monster. I have seen telethons put together to buy Brooke Shields a childhood.

"There's something wrong with a country that can put a man on the moon, but can't save the Asian Jocular from becoming extinct."

You've never seen outrage until you make this statement, despite the fact that there is no such animal as the Asian Jocular. Everyone wants to save something.

"The trouble with kids these days is they get too much." Kids are a cheap shot, but they're home in bed, so what the heck. You can blame them for pollution, the devaluation of the peso, mudslides in California, the inefficiency of the post office and the atrocities in El Salvador. Not one person will disagree.

"I simply won't pay $1.35 for a head of lettuce." This

Shower Given Bridal Couple

A kitchen shower honoring Linn Winbourne and Tommy Coghill, bridal couple-elect of April, was held Sunday afternoon. Hostesses included Dot Harris, Rae Evans and Verlin Cannon.

The refreshment table was covered with a blue cloth with a lace overlay and centered with an arrangement of white, yellow and blue spring flowers.

Mrs. Harris poured punch. Guests were greeted by the hostesses.

Brass and Copper

A regular dusting and an occasional washing in lukewarm, mild detergent water is usually all the care that brass or copper requires. Never use hot water on these metals. Many brass or copper objects are lacquered to prevent tarnish, and hot water will loosen the lacquer, causing it to peel. Once lacquer is damaged, it must be removed before tarnish problems can be tackled.

When brass or copper needs special attention, remove soft particles by scraping with a wooden spoon, plastic scraper or rubber spatula. Then wash with lukewarm, mild detergent water.

When these metals begin to darken, don't be alarmed. This is simple oxidation and will usually respond to homemade or commercial cleaners.

A homemade cleaner may be prepared by combining one part non-sudsy ammonia to two parts denatured alcohol, and two parts distilled water. Add enough whiting or fuller's earth to make a thin paste.

Brass or copper may also be polished with a nonabrasive cleanser applied with a dampened cloth. Be sure to rinse well.

Another homemade tarnish remover, good on these metals, is a combination of salt and vinegar or lemon juice. Just rub the mixture on the objects, rinse and dry.

statement is usually made by a woman who hates lettuce anyway, but it always arouses an entire room to complain about the economy and reminisce about when cars "with everything" sold for $135.

"Have a good day" used to be pretty safe, but the other night when I said it a man leered. "What kind of crack is that? It's easy for you to say. You're working!"

Scratch "Have a good day."

Dear Abby

Mother, Teen Don't Speak Same Language

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem many teen-agers have. I can't communicate with my parents — especially my mother. My father works most of the time, and when he gets home, he's tired. The last thing he wants to do is hear about my problems. He just reads the paper, has dinner and goes to bed.

My mom is another story. She's from Europe, and when she was my age, all she did was study and milk cows, so I can't blame her for being "dumb" when it comes to understanding American teen-agers. I can't seem to get through to her. I try to talk to her when she's not busy, but our hostilities get in the way and we always end up in a big fight. We're better off not talking to each other at all. I'd really like to have a good mother-daughter relationship.

I hope you have space in your column for this letter. My mother reads you faithfully, and if she sees it, it might open up some channels of communication. Thanks for listening.

The fellowship hall was decorated with magnolia, silver, bows and lighted tapers. The refreshment table was covered with a white lace overlay and a centerpiece of mixed spring flowers in a silver candleholder holding white lighted tapers. Brenda Owens poured punch and Brenda Sutton of Bell Arthur, niece of the couple, served the four-tiered wedding cake. Assisting in serving were Brenda Pilgreen, Bonnie Vernon, Laurie Sarvey, all of Greenville, and Frances Cannon of Ayden. Jo Ellen Vernon passed out scrolls. Gifts were received by Tammy Pilgreen and displayed by Sandy Brann of Farmville and Iris Peaden of Falkland.

Mrs. Strickland wore a aqua magnic knit gown complemented by an orchid corsage.

The register table was covered with a white lace overlay and accented with a basket of silk spring flowers. The gift table was accented with a miniature bride and bridegroom.

DEAR N.: You are a very intelligent girl, and your sincerity comes through. Better communication can be established between you and your mother if, when you engage in a dialogue with her, you make it a point never to interrupt. DEAR ABBY: I am a divorcee in my late 30s and I go to singles functions quite often.

I keep running into the same problem, and I don't know how to deal with it. After having a conversation (or a few dances) with a man, he comes on to me and asks for my telephone number, and whether I'm attracted to him or not. I always give it to him because I don't want to hurt his feelings.

Anyway, I end up not answering my phone for a week to avoid this particular man.

I used to say (when a man asked for my phone number), "I'm going with someone," but this is an old line, and besides, why would I be at a singles function if I were going with someone?

I know there has to be a better way of turning someone down diplomatically, but what is it?

Ports Authority Wise

The State Ports Authority displayed good common sense in backing off from a proposed $38 million development program at Wilmington. The decision wasn't all that difficult to reach — current SPA projections brought about a budget revision that shows a 66 percent drop in anticipated profit for 1981-82.

Business firms throughout the United States are dropping back in the face of persistent recessionary trends that have cut deeply into revenues while boosting production and marketing costs. While the ports have shown a slight overall increase so far this year, it hasn't been enough to warrant major expansion at this time.

Ports Director William M.A. Greene blamed the differences in budgeted revenues and profits and the revised projects on shortfalls in shipment of such items as coal, lumber, yarn, fiber and fertilizer. It's unlikely there will be a sudden demand for such items.

While backing the move to hold off on expansion now, we agree with Greene that Wilmington's status as a container port should not be abandoned and may even merit expansion. In Greene's words, "another look at the facts available" is needed.

Transplanting Heralds Spring

Spring is noted by the first robin, the first tree buds and the first blossoming of flowers.

In this area, however, the first note of Spring has a practical flavor.

When the first transplanting of tobacco is reported we know Spring

That event came this week with a front page photo of farm workers carrying out the time-honored task.

It is difficult times for the tobacco growers, but it is their primary way of making a living. We can all hope that they will have a successful growing and selling season.

Celebrity Search

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — I see where after two frustrating years, the mayor of Kingston, Ga. (Pop. 729) finally settled for "Famous Amos," the chocolate chip cookie mogul, as the genuine celebrity needed to enhance the town's annual Historical Festival.

Mayor C. Vernon Ayers had been previously turned down by Jimmy Carter, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., former Georgia Sen. Herman Talmadge and actors Burt Reynolds and Sorrell Booke, among others, before Famous Amos was deemed famous enough.

The festival kicks off April 17, but as of late this week no luminaries loomed in sight, which is a shame, seeing how Kingston, according to the mayor is "the most historic town in all northwest Georgia," with 12 historic markers, 18 buildings in the National Register of Historic Places and an official historic section taking in the whole two block downtown business district to prove it.

Then along came Famous Amos, or at least his press agent.

His honor may have jumped too soon. I wonder if he knew I was available.

My celebrity credentials are impeccable, if obscure.

I have been in my present job longer than Jimmy Carter kept his last one. Got better grades at Harvard than Teddy Kennedy (although I did not score the winning touchdown against Yale in a snowstorm), and my Who's Who, by actual count, is a centimeter and a half longer than Sen. Talmadge's.

I never heard of actor Sorrell Booke. But then he probably never heard of me, so we're even. I never heard of Famous Amos either. Nor had the mayor as it turns out. I know Burt Reynolds just won some kind of TV poll as the most macho man since Jon Hall or George Brent or somebody, but I once won a gold medal from the American Newspaper Publishers Association as a most promising prospect and even earlier in my career was voted "Carrier of the Month."

What's more, last July I put on a gray top and swallow tail coat to attend the royal wedding of Prince Charles and Lady Diana, and I didn't see Burt Reynolds anywhere in St. Paul's. Or Famous Amos, although he may have supplied the cookies for the garden party.

I received one of those engraved invitations that said, "The Lord Chancellor is commanded by the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh to invite..." — just to let you know right off it wasn't his idea. Anyhow, I had a better seat than Nancy Reagan although not as comfortable as the King of Tonga, who brought his own throne along.

Maybe the mayor can keep me in mind for next year.

As a newcomer to this celebrity game, I can bring a lot of genuine enthusiasm and a sincere smile to the scene. I have never cut the ribbon for a new supermarket or ridden in an open limousine in a parade or been grand marshal of anything, so honors like that won't bore me a bit.

As a matter of fact, I have never been interviewed on TV by Geraldo Rivera or asked to appear on "Real People," but I was once locked in a bathroom at the press center during the Shah of Iran's 2,500th anniversary celebration of the Persian Empire and Barbara Walters, bless her heart and ratings, set me free. Honest.

I also once talked to the pope, personally, directly, when the incumbent John Paul II held his first audience for journalists. I asked him if he would visit America soon, and he said "Yes," and he did. How's that for meaningful dialogue?

Among other things, I have traveled to the North Pole in a Navy blimp (eat your heart out, Famous Amos), and covered, so to speak, the World Nudist Convention on the French Riviera. Town fathers might want to keep that in mind when they're considering a 13th historical marker or footprints in the sidewalk or whatever they do to commemorate bona fide celebrities in Kingston, Ga.

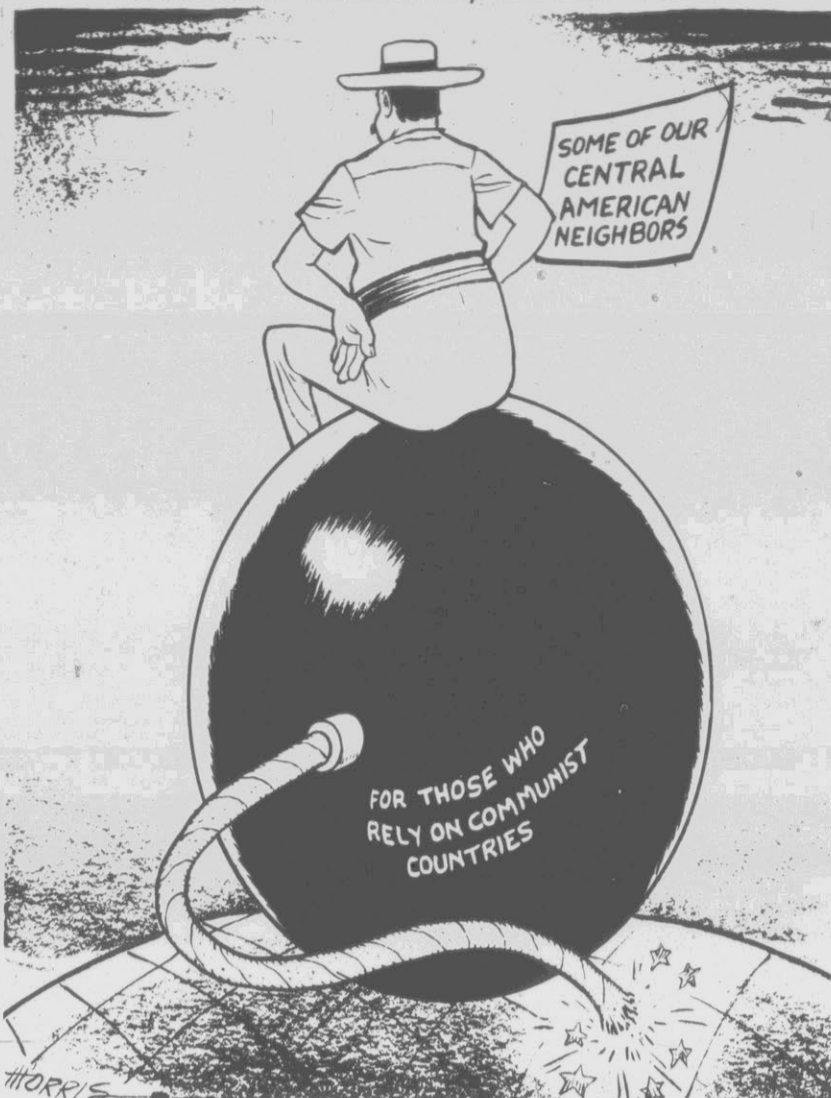

One thing I know in advance that they don't do down in Kingston, Ga., is pay an honorarium. Not even expenses. That's O.K. I'm used to sacrifices of that kind. I once addressed the Danbury Rotary Club. And the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick in Poughkeepsie, N.Y. There wasn't a dry eye in the house. Or a dry throat either.

As a celebrity, I am often mistaken for other celebrities. When I last was in Hollywood, trying to remain anonymous behind the requisite sun shades all celebrities affect, tourists in the courtyard of Grumman's Chinese kept mistaking me for Charles Laughton. That was some years back, when I carried a trifle more weight. And during the last Democratic convention in New York's Madison Square Garden, a cabdriver mistook me for Gov. Hugh Carey, possibly because we both have the same first name. He asked, "where to, governor?"

If Mayor Ayers tries to reach me and the office switchboard says "who?" or "never heard of him," let His Honor not be discouraged.

RUSSIAN ROULETTE, GROUP-PLAN!

By JAMES KILPATRICK

Congress, Heal Thyself

WASHINGTON — We hear a great deal these days from members of the House of Representatives who talk of cutting the Reagan budget. These doctors of fiscal medicine want to operate on extravagance and waste. Splendid! But they ought to listen to an ancient admonition: Physician, heal thyself.

Congressman James M. Collins of Texas has been trumpeting that sound counsel for the past three months. He is becoming the Republican member his Democratic colleagues most dearly love to hate — for Mr. Collins' crusade is against the waste that begins at home, in the grossly swollen payrolls of House committees.

Fifteen or 20 years ago, a plausible argument could have been made that congressional committees were understaffed. In those days experts from the executive agencies tended to outgun the legislative aides.

That imbalance no longer obtains. Congress has equipped itself with its own independent Budget Office. An Office of Technology Assessment provides analyses on scientific issues. The Library of Congress has greatly expanded its research services. More to the gentleman's point: Committee staffs have grown ... and grown ... and grown.

The growth is astonishing. In 1973, House committees employed 308 statutory staff members and 570 investigators. Last year the committees had payrolls of 761 statutory and 1,063 investigative employees. If these same increases had occurred in an executive agency, the committee chairmen would be howling their heads off.

The gentleman from Texas makes some sharp points. In the 93rd Congress (1973-74), the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries had a staff of 22 persons. Last year the committee had a staff of 82.

In the 93rd Congress, the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs had a staff of 46. Over the two-year life of that Congress, the committee reported 33 bills. In the 96th Congress (1979-80), the committee had a staff of 96. It reported 19 bills.

In 1972, the House Rules Committee got along nicely with a staff of six persons. In 1981, the committee had a staff of 44.

Over in the Senate, bills affecting the District of Columbia are handled by a subcommittee with a staff of seven. In the House, it evidently requires a full committee with a staff of 41 to perform the same labor.

All this costs money. In 1971, the House committees had authorization to spend $6.8 million. The request for 1982 is $40.3 million. Granted, 10 years of inflation have blown up the comparative figures, but when full account has been given to that factor, an indefensible increase still is evident.

It is this kind of thing that costs the Congress so dearly in terms of public respect. Out beyond the Potomac, the people probably do not know that the House Agriculture Committee has quadrupled its staff in 10 years. Such data have no remarkable impact. But the people are keenly aware of the totality of perquisites, special privileges, retirement benefits and opportunities for outside income that members of Congress have voted for themselves.

What it comes down to is the same old hypocrisy that infects special interests everywhere: Big business is agreeable to cuts in food stamps but not in export subsidies. Southern conservatives are very conservative indeed on housing loans but not on tobacco loans. Arms suppliers are full of reasons why the defense budget should be left intact. College presidents see nothing amiss in cutting defense, but cuts in

Boxed In By Calendar

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Behind resentment in the Reagan administration over Israel's hammer blows against U.S. policy is the prospect of a Soviet return to the Mideast, a calamity whose avoidance has long been a paramount goal of Washington.

President Reagan, described as "exasperated" by Prime Minister Menachem Begin's conduct, has been boxed in by the calendar. Reagan dares not publicly admonish Begin or Defense Minister Ariel Sharon, the one Israeli leader feared here even more than the ailing prime minister. Reagan worries that in reprisal for any U.S. pressure, the Israelis would renege on their final withdrawal from the Sinai, due April 25, and invade Lebanon.

In such tragic fashion comes the end of Secretary of State Alexander Haig's hoped for "strategic consensus": a U.S.-Israeli-Arab alliance to protect the Persian Gulf from Soviet conquest. The real threat, now visible far from the gulf, is super-power confrontation arising out of Moscow's reentry into the Arab-Israeli struggle.

Israel has taken three sharp detours from the Camp David peace process, leading to the threat of U.S.-Soviet confrontation in central Lebanon. Each detour has caught the administration unprepared, and each exposes the vulnerability of Reagan policy to Israeli exploitation.

Detour No. 1: There was no warning to the White House when Sharon, perhaps against Begin's own political instincts, on March 19 ordered the drastic military and police clampdown on West Bank Palestinian Arabs. One result desired by Israel, according to administration officials, is to strengthen the most radical elements in the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO). That would put agreement with Israel on West Bank autonomy beyond U.S. power to negotiate.

Detour No. 2: The last-minute refusal of Israel to accept the new Egyptian-Israeli border (despite clear delineation in British-Turkish maps of 1906) shocked the administration. The unpublished border dispute could mushroom into a political battle clouding Israeli withdrawal from the Sinai.

Detour No. 3: Although U.S. pleas and pressure eased last winter's threat of an Israeli invasion of Lebanon, the new West Bank disorders and a more radical PLO are likely to provoke the anti-Israel incident that Sharon says — more insistently than Begin — would trigger an invasion. Lebanon is thus linked to Israeli West Bank moves.

These three Israeli detours have bent Reagan's Mideast policy out of shape. Although each in itself would be cause for grave concern, taken together they have completely undermined U.S. policy. The most dramatic undermining: the return of Moscow to the center of Arab-Israeli politics if there is an invasion of Lebanon.

As administration specialists see it, an invasion would bring Moscow to the aid of its client, Syria. Syrian ground and anti-aircraft units, in Lebanon for months, would not be spared by Israel. Indeed, a primary Israeli motive would be to blacken Syrian eyes.

The Kremlin would send advisers and equipment, not combat forces. But that could include a Soviet-operated air defense system for Damascus, if Israel's U.S.-supplied air force decided to go after the Syrian capital. Given Israel's present rambunctious unpredictability, Reagan administration advisers do not forecast the full impact of U.S.-backed Israel in combat against Soviet-backed Syria.

However, two predictions are possible: An invasion would undo years of patient political work by many U.S. presidents in lining up moderate Arab states; Reagan no longer could deny the Soviet Union a major role

Strength For Today

LITTLE WHEELS HAVE PRIORITY

After a windstorm has swept across a countryside and torn down electric wiring, the repair men who rush in to repair the damage often find that they have to rewire the circuits which seem relatively unimportant before they can get to the really serious damage.

Likewise, in building satisfactory moral character we very often have to give our initial attention to the repairing of little damages. One of the great mistakes made by religious leaders today is in their attempt to enlist people in solving great social and international problems before these people have repaired the personal weaknesses of their own lives. It is futile to urge a person to join that army of human benefactors who are striving to make the world better so long as that person is evasive and somewhat unreliable in what he says and does.

So it often happens that we fail to do anything to make the world better because we need so desperately to make our own hearts honest, sincere, and generous. — Elisha Douglass

Housing Plan By Harry Keefe

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Worried by the thrift industry's anemic financial condition, which he fears could undermine the economy and confidence in the entire banking system, Harry Keefe has come up with a plan.

It is a plan, he says, that might avert savings bank mergers, panic among savers, the spread of housing's depression, and social chaos.

It would seek to do so by channeling savings to the thrifts, making mortgages available, putting builders and appliance suppliers back to work, and compromising youths' anger by making homebuying possible.

"Something has to be done," said Keefe. "We can't let this industry collapse." His proposal wouldn't cost the Treasury anything additional.

Those who follow banking might be surprised by Keefe's plan, since he is so closely associated with commercial banking, "big banking" as opposed to the thrift industry, which handles savings and mortgages.

The brokerage house of Keefe, Bruyette & Woods

Inc., of which he is founder and chairman, specializes in stocks of major commercial banks, analyzing far more than any other securities firm.

The antipathy of commercial bankers to thrifts — generally thought of as savings and loan associations, savings banks of various types, and sometimes credit unions — arises partly because thrifts over the years have enjoyed certain regulated advantages, designed to aid housing.

Keefe doesn't share the animosity. After he spoke recently a commercial banker told him he didn't care if the thrifts failed, suggesting it wouldn't hurt and might help his commercial business.

"What's your major industry?" asked Keefe. "Lumber," the banier replied. "And your business won't be hurt if lumber aren't built?" he asked. The commercial banker thought again.

Under Keefe's plan, savers could channel $2,000 a year tax-free into a "Homebuyer Account," modeled on an Individual Retirement Account except that the money would be used for a house instead.

"It would be a unique instrument to suppliers of mortgage money," said Keefe. It could not be offered by money market funds, whose high interest rates have siphoned money from the thrifts.

In Keefe's view, this would give the thrifts a flow of money to work with and enable them to make mortgages. It would permit people to buy homes. It would save housing and related industries from collapse — a collapse he fears might spread like cancer.

HBAs could be offered only by lenders with a certain percentage of assets in housing, perhaps 30 percent. Interest charges could be administered, maybe pegged to 75 percent of one-year Treasury Bills.

Such securities early this week had a bond equivalent yield of a bit more than 14 percent, a rate that would make the cost of money to the thrifts roughly 10.75 percent.

Since they need a 2 percent to 2.5 percent spread to make home loans profitably, the mortgage rate would be around 13 percent, or close to 5 percentage points lower than now, said Keefe.

If a couple saved $2,000 each or $4,000 for four years at 9 percent, a rate arbitrarily chosen by Keefe for illustration, they would have $20,000, based on quarterly compounding (many banks compound daily), and might be able to qualify for a house worth $80,000 or even more.

If we don't do something, said Keefe, we're headed for trouble. The whole system will be undermined "if we have repeated closings or threats" to the thrift industry, he said.

Beyond that, he said, the nation can't have prosperity unless more houses are built. Instead, vast social problems could arise, he fears, because the biggest bloc of voters are young and unable to own homes.

"They want babies and a house," said Keefe, referring to talks with his 30-year-old daughter and friends. "They don't care about Volker" he said, referring to Paul Volker, Federal Reserve Board chairman, who has pursued a high interest policy as an antidote to budget deficits.

Keefe said he feared that unless quick action is taken, "there'll be economic pressure that will destroy everything we've built — I'm talking social chaos."

To the editor:

One would think that we're at the point in history where mankind is on the brink of annihilation with the possibility of a nuclear war. The United Nations is in existence and the United States has been paying more than its dues into it for years at the expense of the American taxpayers. Away with the greed of the Industrial Military Complex for dollar profits.

Now is the time for our government to use the United Nations as a platform by making a stand and incessantly and repeatedly clamoring out the message of the necessity for both the United States and Russia to have total nuclear disarmament if mankind is to survive. Russia should be persistently confronted by us at the United Nations with the demand that Russia and the United States agree to nuclear disarmament.

The American people as well as the Russian people and, of course, the rest of humanity live in fear of total destruction when it comes to the matter of nuclear warfare. We are all members of the human race and we, the people, do not want the proliferation of nuclear arms. Considering the stupendous achievement of the global aerospace programs, society has the ability within itself to channel its efforts and talents toward peace on earth.

Our government should make its voice heard without let up, over and over again, to the United Nations with regard to Russia and the United States agreeing to a complete nuclear disarmament. Hopefully, the members of the United Nations would then be motivated to also speak up and take action. Let the United Nations serve a truly humanitarian purpose and fulfill its role as originally intended. Who knows, persistence could pay off at this crucial moment in time. I'd say it's worth a try.

ANTIQUÉ SALVATION — The Rev. William Robey holds a rare 1493 woodblock print by Albrecht Duerer outside his parish in Shady Side, Maryland. The print has hung in a chapel for 25 years with its value unknown, until a parishioner knowledgeable in art noticed it. Although the print is not likely to be valued in the hundreds of thousands of dollars, Robey says "The estimate of its worth now could possibly save the parish." (AP Laserphoto) in Mideast diplomacy.

In between appeals to Israel not to upset the Sinai timetable and not to destroy all chances for Palestinian autonomy, Haig explicitly has warned Begin and Sharon about the danger of giving the Soviet Union a new hand in the Arab-Israeli struggle. Begin has listened and understood, but some administration officials say privately Sharon says that portends deeper trouble ahead. As Begin's health declines (he is said by intelligence analysts to be aging faster than normal) Sharon's power increases. That may explain Israel's three detours — and the change in the focus of Reagan's Mideast policy from the Persian Gulf back to where it should always have been: the 35-year Arab-Israeli struggle.

Pell grants are something else entirely.

In this regard, the House committee chairmen probably are faithful to the first principles of representative government. They are just as hypocritical as everyone else. We get the kind of government we deserve — a melancholy thought if there ever was one. Mr. Collins' figures remind us not only of some sound advice to physicians but of another maxim also. While the House rightly is concerned with the mote in brother Reagan's eye, it ought to be equally concerned with the beam in its own.

Thunderbird Team Will Fly Again Despite Toll

HAMPTON, Va. (AP) — The Thunderbirds precision team will keep flying and will switch from training planes to advanced jet fighters, the Air Force says, despite the deaths of four pilots whose planes slammed into the desert last January.

The status of the aerobatics group was in limbo until the investigation into the Jan. 18 accident was over, Gen. W.L. Creech, commander of the Tactical Air Command at Langley Air Force Base, said Wednesday. The investigation determined that the lead plane was unable to pull out of a loop because of a mechanical problem, and all four planes rammed into the ground in the accident at Indian Springs auxiliary base, 40 miles from Nellis Air Force Base near Las Vegas, Nev.

"The Thunderbirds are a very valuable asset," Creech said at a news conference. "They're helpful for recruiting ... for showing the flag overseas. They more than pay for their cost."

The team will start looking for replacement pilots for training in their new F-16s, Creech said.

All scheduled performances through mid-August have been canceled and the pace of practice will determine when the team flies again.

"We hope to be back by the end of the year," the general said.

The Thunderbird pilots and their F-16s will be available for immediate deployment in the event of war, Creech said, something that was not possible when they used T-38 trainers.

In their 29-year history, the Thunderbirds have lost 25 aircraft and 19 pilots.

The accident happened because a device called the horizontal stabilizer load relief cylinder, which acts as a sort of shock absorber, jammed in the lead plane piloted by Maj. Norman Lowry III.

Lowry couldn't get the stabilizers into the angle needed to pull out of the loop, Creech said. A videotape of the accident showed the stabilizers moving from 4.3 to 7 degrees during the back side of the loop; they should have been at 17 degrees.

Because the jam was in the rear of the plane, Lowry would have had no indication of the problem, the general said. By the time he could see that he was too close to the ground, it was too late to pull out.

The other three planes were flying in such close formation, "looking over their shoulders" at Lowry, they followed the leader into the ground.

"Their job is to fly in very close formation, paying attention to the leader," Creech said. "They were flying an excellent formation." Because the leader had such belated clues, he never had time to warn them.

Air Force investigators were not sure what jammed the device, but speculated it could have been a rivet, bolt or washer jarred loose during normal wear and tear of flight or inadvertently left in during maintenance. They said it might have come loose and migrated during moments of near-weightlessness at the top of the loop.

Such problems have happened before to Air Force planes, Creech said, but he called the fact that it happened just when it did during the practice flight "a highly random occurrence."

The odds were extremely small that it would happen to a Thunderbird plane, he said, even smaller that it would happen to the lead plane and even smaller that the problem would show up as the pilot was trying to come out of a loop.

"This does not have profound implications for the rest of the fleet," he said.

The Navy's precision flying team, the Blue Angels, recently resumed air shows after an accident killed a team member Feb. 22.

Blue Angel Lt. Cmdr. Stu Powrie was killed in a training crash in the California desert near El Centro. Powrie was replaced by Lt. Cmdr. Jim Ross. The team resumed giving air shows March 21 with a show at El Centro.

Will Consider Nixon Library

LEAVENWORTH, Kan. (AP) — City officials have voted to consider establishing the Richard M. Nixon library here.

"I'd like to see a presidential library in Leavenworth, but I wish it didn't have to be his," Mayor Robert Dougherty said after the city commission voted Tuesday night on the proposal.

Nixon's lawyer, Stan Mortenson, said he had not been contacted by the city officials but that since a proposal was defeated to put the library in Independence, Mo., he has had many inquiries, mostly from Missouri, Oklahoma and Kansas.

Reluctantly Back Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — A legislative plan designed to help the financially ailing savings and loan industry is being reluctantly supported by state banking officials.

John E. Malarkey, Delaware's state banking commissioner, said on Wednesday that the Conference of State Bank Supervisors backed the plan, "not because we want to, but because we have to." The conference represents bank supervisors in all 50 states who regulate the nation's 10,500 state-chartered commercial and mutual savings banks.

"Emergency legislation (of this type) is never desirable. It can only be necessary. Legislation such as this makes winners of no one. It only increases the survivors list," Malarkey said.

A group representing most of the nation's banks turned thumbs down on the proposal during a hearing before the House Banking subcommittee on housing.

"A lowering of the interest rates is the only thing that will solve the problems of the thrifts and the other sectors of the economy such as housing and agriculture," said William H. Kennedy Jr., president-elect of the American Bankers Association and chairman of the board of the National Bank of Commerce in Pine Bluff, Ark.

MacDonald Quickly Returned To Custody Following Ruling

By KEVIN COSTELLOE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Dr. Jeffrey MacDonald was back in federal custody about one hour after the Supreme Court reinstated the former Green Beret's murder conviction in the slaying of his wife and two daughters, his lawyer says.

The 38-year-old MacDonald was arrested by FBI agents at his apartment in Huntington Beach, Calif., Wednesday, shortly after the Supreme Court acted, attorney Bernard L. Segal said.

MacDonald, who has been sentenced to life imprisonment, was taken to a federal detention center in Los Angeles. He will pursue further appeals.

Segal recalled he was talking to his client by telephone from San Francisco Wednesday when he heard a loud knock at the end of the line.

"It was like a stage knock," the lawyer said in a telephone interview. MacDonald had just said to Segal, "The Supreme Court has decided 6-3 against us. What can we do, if anything," the lawyer said.

MacDonald was informed of the Supreme Court's decision by a friend in Washington who saw the news on the wire service tickers, Segal said.

At the time of the February 1970 slayings at Fort Bragg, N.C., MacDonald was an Army captain serving as a physician. He has steadfastly maintained since then that his family was bludgeoned and stabbed to death by drug-crazed "hippies" who chanted, "Acid is groovy. Kill the pigs."

The FBI arrested MacDonald after U.S. District Judge Franklin Dupree in Raleigh, N.C., revoked a $100,000 appeal bond. Dupree had presided over MacDonald's trial.

Brian Murtagh, the supervising Justice Department attorney in the case, said the main reason for the quick action was the "risk of flight" by MacDonald.

The justices reinstated — at least for now — his convictions for the murders of his pregnant 24-year-old wife, Colette, and daughters, Kimberly, 5, and Kristen, 2.

Writing for the court, Chief Justice Warren E. Burger said a five-year delay between the deaths and the indictment by a federal grand jury did not violate MacDonald's right to a speedy trial.

But the high court sent the case back to a federal appeals court for consideration of a dozen remaining issues, including whether the five-year delay violated MacDonald's constitutional right to "due process."

The appeals court must also determine whether the trial judge improperly excluded incriminating, out-of-court statements by a woman who once indicated she took part in the murders.

Segal said MacDonald's case could return to the Supreme Court for a fourth time, even though MacDonald has lost his latest round before the justices.

"To the best of my knowledge, this is the first criminal case that has been twice fully heard and twice fully decided by the Supreme Court," Segal said. "Why not three times?"

The justices once turned down one of MacDonald's claims without a hearing and written decision.

"We will press these remaining issues quite vigorously," said Ralph Spritzer of Philadelphia, another of MacDonald's lawyers. He said there is a "fair likelihood" the case will be brought before the Supreme Court again.

MacDonald has been serving as a staff physician at the emergency unit at St. Mary Medical Center in Long Beach. Center spokeswoman Maureen May said MacDonald's future at the facility is uncertain.

MacDonald's lawyers also said they will attempt to have him released on bail pending the further proceedings.

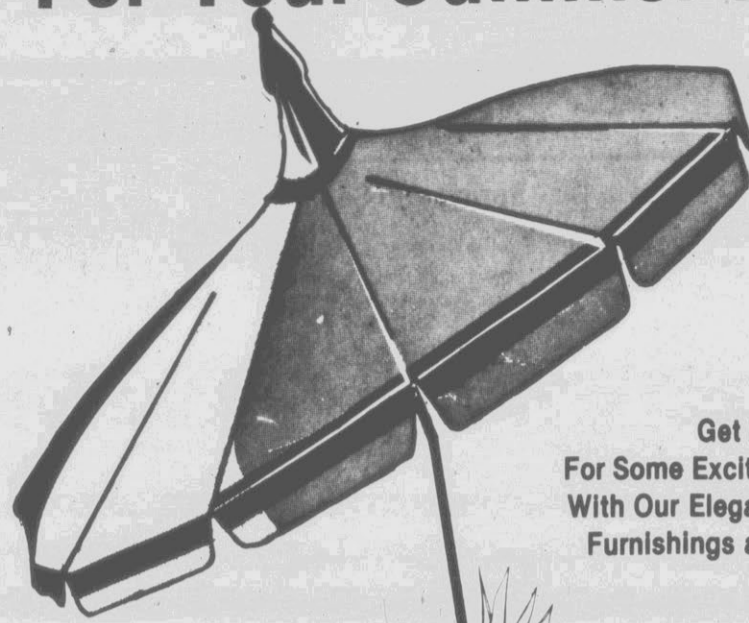

Alfred Kassab, the father of MacDonald's slain wife, rejoiced when he learned of the decision.

"It's been very, very hard on my wife and I ... it's been a constant thing for 12 years, trying to get him indicted and then having it overturned. I sure worked at it," said Kassab, who lives in Kings Park, N.Y.

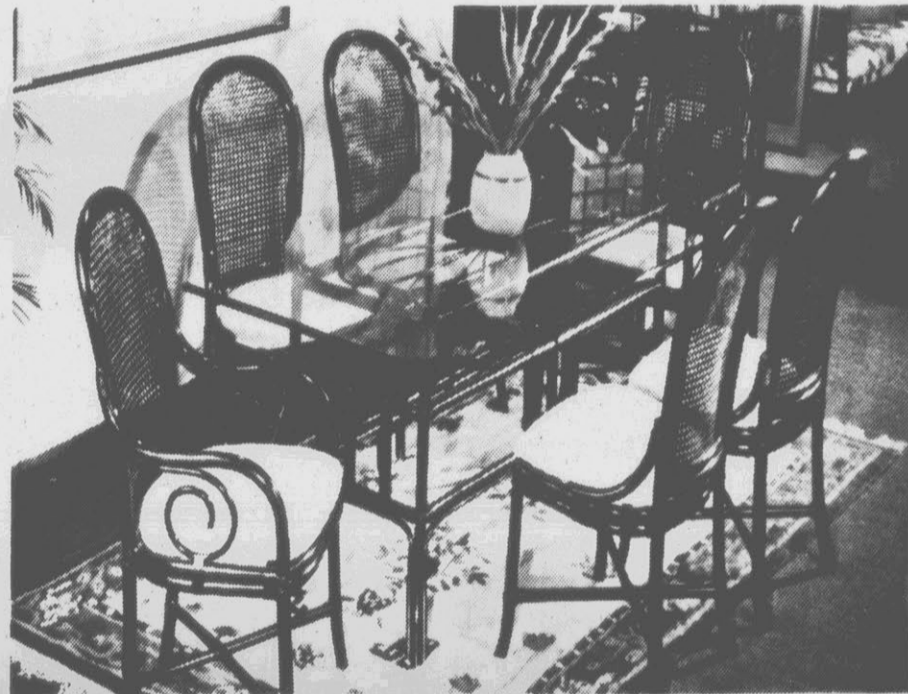

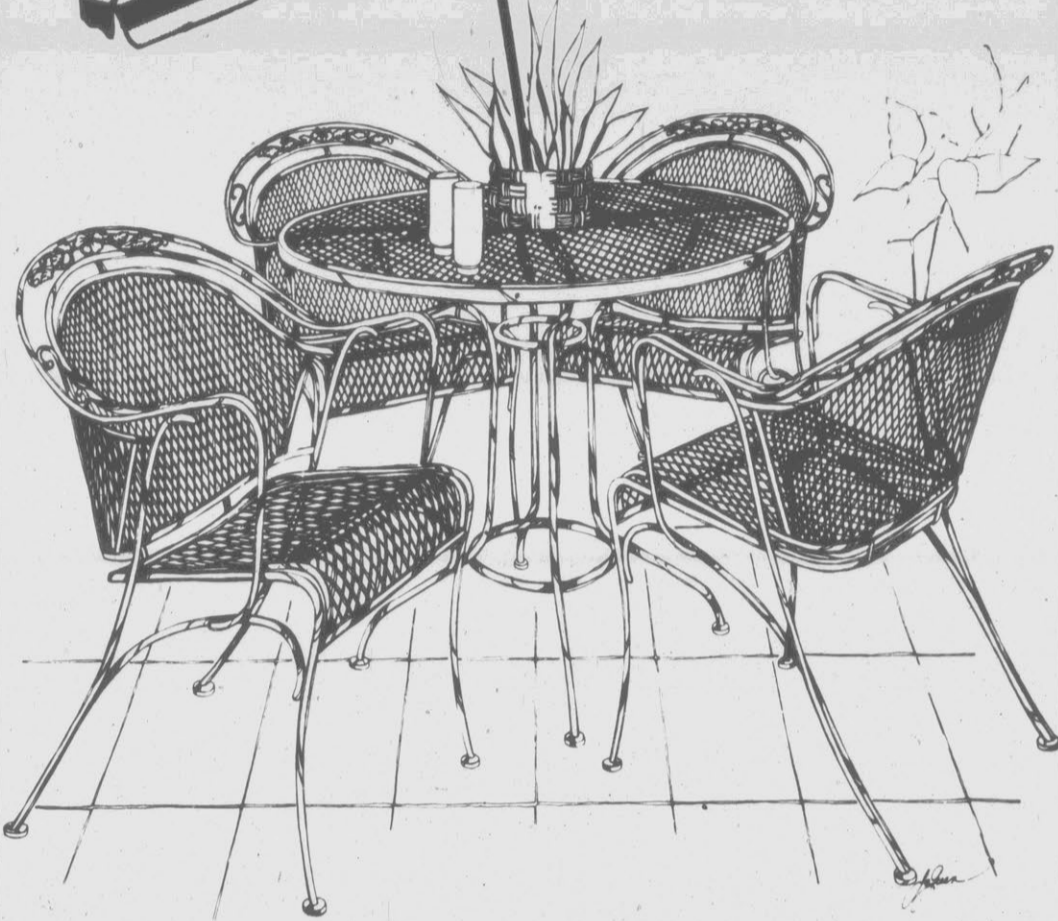

SEEKS HUSBAND — Princess Alexandra von Anhalt checks out an issue of a state publication about Texas with her nephew Prince Jurgen von Anhalt in their $350-a-night suite in Texas. The Princess came to Dallas Friday, from Germany, looking for a husband. She claims she is in Texas to stay, and insists she will get her man, a Texas rancher. (AP Laserphoto)

How's The Weather?

WEATHER OUTLOOK — Showers are expected in the forecast period, Thursday until Friday morning, from the central Gulf to the Midwest. Snow is forecast for the northern Plains. Mild temperatures are expected in the East and cool weather for the Northwest. (AP Laserphoto Map)

Get Bombs In The Mail

HONOLULU (AP) — At least four electrical appliances mailed to Hawaii residents this month were really bombs, and three of them blew up when they were switched on, injuring three people, authorities say.

The latest bomb, recovered unexploded Wednesday, was contained in an unsolicited burglar alarm and was rigged to go off when turned on, said Steward Ivie of the Postal Inspection Service.

But the 60-year-old Honolulu man who received the package in early March became suspicious of the device after hearing news reports of similar devices that had exploded.

Authorities said the packages apparently were sent by one person.

The most serious of the bombings occurred Monday, when a 31-year-old Honolulu man suffered shrapnel wounds as he switched on electrical hair clippers he received in the mail in early March.

During the first week of March two similar unsolicited electrical devices turned out to be bombs, injuring another Honolulu man and a resident of Maui. They exploded after being turned on, Ivie said.

An extensive investigation by federal authorities has not turned up any connection between the bombing victims.

The bomber "has no idea who he's going to injure. He's vicious," Ivie said.

By The Associated Press
The National Weather Service forecast calls for dry and mild conditions in North Carolina today, with sunshine and warm afternoon temperatures on tap.

Friday's forecast also is for mild weather, but clouds are expected to invade the sunshine.

High temperatures today are expected to be in the high 70s to low 80s with Friday's high reading in the 70s.

A weak cold front sputtered eastward through the state Wednesday night, dropping scattered showers on the western sections. Low temperatures overnight were in the 40s and 50s, except near 60 along the coast.

The national weather service is keeping a close eye on a new storm that will be developing in the great plains during the next couple of days.

Showers associated with that storm may advance into the North Carolina mountains late Friday. However, the best chance of the showers in the Tar Heel state will be Friday night and Saturday.

The extended outlook for Sunday and Monday calls for clearing and cooler weather.

Conley Club Plans Game

The D.H. Conley Athletic Boosters Club is sponsoring a parent-faculty basketball game on April 5 at 6 p.m. in the school gym.

Admission is $1 for students and adults. Preschoolers will be admitted free. A bake sale will be held at the same time and concessions will be available. Funds will go towards construction of a press box-concession stand restroom complex for the football field.

Eight Injured

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Seven elementary pupils and their 19-year-old driver were injured Wednesday when a Charlotte school bus overturned, officials said.

The accident occurred around 2 p.m. as a bus carrying 39 students from two Charlotte schools was rounding a curve.

How N.C. Senators, Representatives Voted

Roll Call Report Service
WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes March 18-24.

House
FDR MEMORIAL — By a vote of 288 for and 107 against, the House passed and sent to the Senate a bill (HR 4750) that is the first step toward creating a "living memorial" to President Franklin D. Roosevelt at Warm Springs, Ga. The federal unit would include a rehabilitative center utilizing the healing spring water that drew Roosevelt, a polio victim, to Warm Springs. The bill authorizes a study of the FDR memorial expected to cost $100,000 to $150,000.

Supporter Bo Ginn, D-Ga., said that as a former polio victim who also received treatment at Warm Springs he "can visualize no more fitting memorial to the late former president."

Opponent Larry McDonald, D-Ga., criticized the bill as "another in a growing number of bills ... to commemorate the myth that FDR saved our free enterprise system from going socialist and saved the world from totalitarian dictatorship. Nothing could be further from the truth."

Members voting "yea" favored creating the FDR memorial at Warm Springs.

Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, L.H. Fountain, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Ike Andrews, D-4, Charles Rose, D-7, and W.G. Hefner, D-8, voted "yea."

Reps. Eugene Johnston, R-6, James Martin, R-9, and James Broyhill, R-10, voted "nay."

Reps. Stephen Neal, D-5, and William Hendon, R-11, did not vote.

MONEY — The House passed, 299 for and 103 against, a "continuing resolution" appropriating money to fund the government for the remainder of the fiscal year, which ends next Sept. 30. The stopgap funding is needed because the House and Senate have failed to enact most of the regular appropriations bills for fiscal 1982. Debate centered on claims that continuing resolutions abuse the budget process. "For one thing, critics said, stopgap funding permits committees the shirk their fiscal responsibilities and to avoid confronting tough issues like busing, abortion and budget-cutting. The measure (HR Res 409) was sent to the Senate.

Supporter Silvio Conte, R-Mass., said it was necessary for Congress to set definite spending levels for the next six months. "If we cannot continue ... in an orderly procedure, at least let us let the rest of the country go on in an orderly procedure," he said.

Opponent J.J. Pickle, D-Tex., said "we are here to continue continuing our (previous) continuing resolution. At what point do we say, 'Stop the merry-go-round?'"

Members voting yes favored stopgap funding through Sept. 30.

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Rose, Hefner and Broyhill voted "yea."

Johnston and Martin voted "nay."

Neal and Hendon did not vote.

Senate
CONGRESSIONAL VETO — By a vote of 69 for and 25 against, the Senate adopted an amendment empowering Congress to void an executive branch regulation if simple majorities in the House and Senate vote to kill the regulation. The legislative veto could be used against virtually all federal agencies except the Defense Department and the Internal Revenue Service. It was attached to a regulatory reform bill (S 1080) that was headed for final passage and the House.

Supporter Carl Levin, D-Mich., said the measure was needed to rein in the "faceless (executive branch) decision-makers ... who owe no allegiance to constituents" and who are concerned with "rules rather than results."

Opponent Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said the Senate should now move into this delicate Constitutional area because "it is clear that the Supreme Court will pass on some or all of the intricate arguments over legislative veto in the near future ..."

Senators voting "yea" favored the amendment strengthening Congress' power to counter executive branch regulations it doesn't like.

Sens. John East and Jesse Helms, R, voted "yea."

ALLOCATING OIL — By a vote of 58 for and 36 against, the Senate failed to override President Reagan's veto of a bill (S 1503) giving him standby powers to allocate oil supplies and set prices in the event the nation again runs perilously low on oil supplies. To override the veto, two-thirds of those senators voting (63) had to vote "yea." The veto stands and a House vote is not required.

Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., a supporter of the standby authority and foe of the veto, said that if a shortage recurs, senators siding with the president "will have a very big question to answer with the American people ... 'Why didn't you put a plan, an emergency plan, on the shelf when you had a right and opportunity to do so?'"

Opponent Don Nickles, R-Okla., said the veto should be upheld because it fits with the president's "reliance on the marketplace, not on more government allocations and government controls, to be able to solve the problems."

Senators voting "nay" agreed with the president's veto of the bill.

East and Helms voted "nay."

Here's a chance to test your declarer play. Cover the East and West hands and decide how you would play six hearts.

The bidding might not have been scientific, but it was certainly effective. North's hand revalued to a good 19 points, and South decided that there was no way to find out how much duplication there was in the diamond suit, so he bid what he thought he could make. He was right, but he had to play well to land his contract.

West led a trump. Declarer won in hand and drew the remaining trump, ending in dummy. Then he cashed the ace of diamonds, and discarded a club from his hand! Declarer led a club to the king and continued with a low club. Had West followed suit with a low card, declarer intended finessing the ten. If East won the trick, it meant that the suit would break and declarer's spade loser would be discarded on the fourth club in dummy.

When West failed to follow suit, declarer's care in discarding a club on the ace of diamonds was rewarded. Declarer rose with the ace of clubs and led a spade from the table. He intended just covering any card East played. When East played low, declarer inserted the eight. West won, but he was end played.

Since a diamond would have given a ruff-and-sluff, West returned a spade. Declarer won the jack, cashed the king, then crossed to dummy with a trump to discard his last club on the ace of spades.

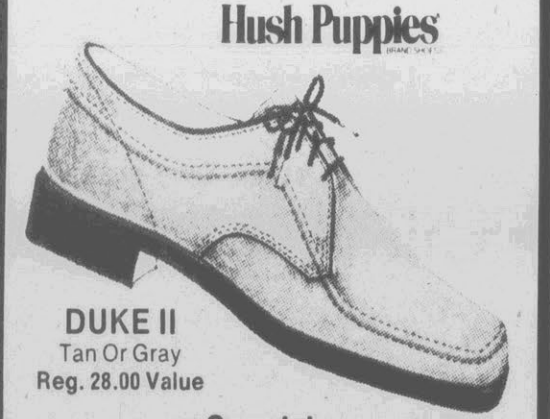

Naturally, all of our readers made the contract. After all, it is the same theme as we used in Tuesday's hand, just disguised a little!

Military Exercise Continues Despite Four Deaths

By BRIAN BLAND
Associated Press Writer
FORT IRWIN, Calif. (AP) — The make-believe war that has cost the 82nd Airborne Division 160 real casualties — including four dead — continued today as the paratroopers who jumped into the Mojave Desert waited for an "attack" by the National Guard.

The scenario of Gallant Eagle 82, the month-long military exercise by 40,000 troops to test the nation's rapid deployment force, has the 82nd in anti-armor positions, assisting a friendly country in Southwest Asia in countering a Soviet invasion. The maneuver phase beginning today is designed to slow down the invasion while simulated forces behind the 82nd prepare a counter-attack. Four of the soldiers participating in the massive exercise died Tuesday after they bailed out as part of a 2,300-man paratroop drop into the desert. Injured in the jump, which took place in blustery winds, were 156 other soldiers.

The dead were identified as 1st Lt. Robert C. Breitmayer, 27, whose mother lives in Estacada, Ore. and whose father lives in Forest Grove, Ore.; Spec. 4 Algarin R. Quinones, 19, whose parents live in Puerto Rico; Spec. 4 Larry D. Dunalp, 23, whose mother lives in Los Angeles and father in Las Vegas, Nev.; and Staff Sgt.

Michael W. Moore, 30, whose parents live in Humboldt, Tenn. A spokesman for the San Bernardino County Coroner's office said preliminary indications were that the four fatalities "appeared to have died of head or neck injuries," and one also had a fractured arm and leg. It appeared they had been dragged by their parachutes, said Deputy Coroner Marshall Franey.

"He was dragged to death," Smith said Wednesday. "It was the worst wind conditions (for a jump) I've ever seen." Nevertheless, Smith defended the decision to jump based on the wind measurement as the jump began. Breitmayer, he said, was the "last man out." "It was just a freak ... thing," he said. "We jumped here March 1 and it was great. At 6:07 this morning (24 hours after the fatal jump), it was perfectly still." Smith, his face cut and bruised, said he had been dragged more than 200 yards. "When you hit that hard and you're being dragged that fast, you can't release (the quick release catch to detach the parachute.)"

Desert camouflage netting, made of a special anti-radar material, had been draped over tents that sheltered headquarters, communications centers and vehicles. Many of the soldiers sleep in the open, though some at the rear will have tents, said Lt. Col. Patrick Cannan. "The enemy will be forced to go around this obstacle," said Maj. Jack Dye. "We make him go between two obstacles, concentrate him, then blow his stuff away."

LIKES NEW TANK — U.S. Army tank commander, Dennis Webster, tells observers he likes the Army's new M1 tank after a demonstration drive Wednesday in Warren, Mich. The 60-ton $1.7 million machine rides much smoother than previous tanks, he said. The Army received one of the first two M1s produced at General Dynamics' Warren, Mich. plant yesterday. Everybody Complains Congress Doing Nothing: But They Did

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Critics have long lambasted Congress for doing nothing. Not true. Just this year, amid the pressures of the federal budget, lawmakers have found time to give official recognition to peaches and patriotism; bald eagles and ballet.

most, Ferrell said, are not. "The ones that predominate are in the classic sense a special interest: a group, an association or whatever constituency that makes a request to a member, who innocently or blindly obliges that request." Earlier this month the House considered Joint Resolution 361, granting official recognition to the international ballet competition to be held in Jackson, Miss. Rep. Jim Dunn, a freshman Republican from Michigan, criticized "the activities that the U.S. government is involved in such as ballet days versus what we really should be involved in, and that is solving the economic problems... These are not normal times, and we cannot go on tradition in this body."

Billing Error Recognized

YAKIMA, Wash. (AP) — Peter Illyn's telephone bill looked as though he'd reached out to touch someone and forgot to let go.

Pacific Northwest Bell computers billed Illyn $2,622.92 for the month of March, and claimed $2,552 was for a single call placed March 5.

The long-distance bill for 7,598 minutes works out to five days, six hours and 38 minutes.

Illyn, a pastor at Yakima Four-Square Church, said the thought struck him as he read the bill. "What if I'm responsible for this and have to pay it?"

The only thing on the bill that looked faintly familiar was the sales tax — $25.97 — which was a lot closer to his normal monthly phone bill.

The phone company told Illyn not to worry. He was one of 73 Washington residents who fell victim to a computer foulup.

The problem was traced to an electronic operator computer terminal in Tacoma, said Dick Croy, manager of Bell's Yakima office.

The computer broke down as the calls went through. When it was repaired and returned to service, days later, it registered that the calls had ended, Croy explains.

Most of the errors were caught before the bills were mailed, Croy said, but a few of the sky-high bills made their way to their destinations. Croy says he thinks everyone who received an erroneous bill has had his account corrected.

legwork. "Obviously if a member can do someone a favor without committing a lot of staff time, he's gonna do it," said Ferrell.

Two years ago Rep. Dan Glickman, D-Kan., made an effort to cut the practice out altogether and leave it up to the White House, which can issue proclamations without the aid of Congress. That effort was largely ignored, and Glickman, recognizing an upstream swim, hasn't tried again.

"I don't see how you can stop introducing resolutions, I just don't," said Garcia. "How can anyone decide which ones are crucial, and which are absolutely hogwash?"

Watt Sued By Common Cause

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interior Secretary James Watt is the target of a suit filed by Common Cause which seeks to force him to turn over records telling what people he met with during his first year in office.

The self-styled citizens' lobby was turned down when it sought the information from the department through a Freedom of Information Act request, and decided to file the suit.

"We want to know who the secretary is dealing with in his official capacity as trustee for the American people of more than 500 million acres of federal land," Fred Wertheimer, Common Cause president, said Wednesday.

In rejecting the request, Deputy Assistant Interior Secretary Richard Hite had said Watt's appointment schedules are not "agency records" but personal papers.

By one estimate, the introduction of a brief resolution costs nearly $1,300 for printing and distribution. If the sponsoring senator or representative makes a speech supporting his bill on the floor, space to print it in the Congressional Record costs another $475.68 per page. Roughly 700 such bills were introduced last year.

"Those costs are nominal," said Mike Ferrell, staff director of Garcia's subcommittee. "The expensive item is the time taken up on the floor of a billion-dollar Congress. It takes at least 10 or 15 minutes to explain a resolution."

What some considered to be an example of the problem occurred last Oct. 20, when Rep. John Ashbrook, R-Ohio, demanded a roll-call vote on a resolution declaring the fourth Sunday in October to be National Mother-In-Law Day. It passed 305 to 66, with 28 voting "present."

"One of the dangers — and the mother-in-law thing highlights this — is that sometimes these things come up and the floor and there's some squabble between Democrats and Republicans, and they use this as a mechanism to delay and stall by asking for votes on these things," said Garcia.

So far this year the House has passed 11 such resolutions, the Senate more than two dozen. A few are on serious governmental topics, such as National Agriculture Day or Afghanistan Day. But

The House also has declared the third week in February as National Patriotism Week and 1982 as the Bicentennial Year of the Bald Eagle, and the Senate has designated July as National Peach Month.

Although any member can introduce a bill, both Garcia's committee and the Senate Judiciary Committee, which handles similar chores in that chamber, have rules to limit and discourage them from reaching the floor for action. That has kept National Junior Bowling Week, International Franchise Day and Parliamentary Emphasis Month from gumming up the floor calendars.

The House requires 218 co-sponsors — a majority — and forbids action on bills naming any commercial or political group or any particular state, city or school. The Senate rules call for 25 co-sponsors and bar politics and specific businesses or products.

The Senate rules are being re-evaluated to make it tougher, perhaps by requiring more co-sponsors. "There is some feeling that they've been taking too much time," said a staff member who asked not to be named.

Farrell said the co-sponsorship requirement, imposed in 1975, drastically reduced commemorative bills for a time because congressmen were reluctant to tie up office staff running around Capitol Hill to collect colleagues' signatures.

But lately the numbers have been creeping upward again. The special interests

Attempt To Save The Sea Turtle From Extinction

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer
MARUATA, Mexico (AP) — On a faraway bay fringed with palms and frothing with Pacific surf, Kim Clifton is struggling almost single-handedly against the tide, fighting to save a lowly turtle from its appointment with oblivion.

With American money and a Mexican helping hand, the young conservationist from Arizona is working desperately to halt the decline in the population of the eastern Pacific green sea turtle, a much-hunted subspecies with only one major nesting area in the Northern Hemisphere, the broad white beaches flanking this Indian village 280 miles west of Mexico City.

The eastern Pacific type — commonly called the black turtle because of its dark coloring — is the most critically endangered of three green sea turtles.

Clifton's fight has been difficult, even perilous. He is not ready to give up, but he is realistic.

"If everything goes as it's going now, the turtles will be driven right up to extinction," he said in a recent interview.

Sea turtles are hunted for their meat and hides, for shells that are turned into jewelry, and for their eggs, laid in sandy holes on Maruata's beaches, are prized by some Mexican men as aphrodisiacs and can fetch up to 75 U.S. cents each in Mexico City.

For the past four years, with a combination of cash, persuasion and the occasional assistance of a five-man Mexican marine detachment stationed here, Clifton has tried to bring the trade in turtle flesh under control.

He has paid villagers about 3 cents for each of hundreds of thousands of eggs they have collected. He and his helpers have released swarms of hatchlings into the Pacific. And he has stood guard against poachers killing the 100-pound-plus adult turtles.

"The bottom line is still negative, as far as the population decline," said Thomas Lovejoy, vice president for science of the World Wildlife Fund in Washington, D.C. "But Clifton's effort is the most important for saving the turtle."

The Fund is Clifton's principal sponsor, providing $59,000 of the project's $94,000 annual budget. The rest comes from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the private Center for Environmental Education in Washington.

The 33-year-old Clifton, a muscular blond six-footer

Pan American Highway reached this primitive stretch of the Mexican coast.

He found the 200 or so Indians here systematically slaughtering the black turtles.

"I saw them pulling in 80 turtles a day, slashing them open, just taking the skin and throwing the rest into the water," he recalled.

He returned in 1978 with money for the egg-buying scheme, and since then has spent every mating-nesting season here.

The female black turtles range over a huge stretch of Pacific coast, feeding in submarine turtle-grass grounds from the Gulf of California south to Colombia. Each year one-third of the females return to breed in the waters off Maruata and nearby villages, where the males have remained year-round. Beginning in July and continuing into February, females lumber ashore to lay and bury their eggs.

In four seasons Clifton and his local helpers have gathered more than one million eggs and put them in protected hatchery areas. They have released almost 700,000 hatchlings into the sea.

But this may represent only 30 percent to 40 percent of the eggs laid, he said, and heavy poaching of adults continues.

"There's 40 miles of coast to worry about, and there's no way to stop it," he said.

Mexican authorities have imposed on-and-off moratoriums and quota systems for black turtle hunting, but Clifton complained the Mexicans do not back this up with the money and men to enforce the rules.

Mexico has not signed the international convention banning trade in endangered species. The United States, on the other hand, bans the sale of all sea turtle products.

Naturally, the "gringo" conservationist has developed dangerous enemies in his crusade against the lucrative turtle trade. He has had some close calls while chasing poachers, and once someone fired on his house.

"I'm surprised I'm still in one piece," he said.

In the shade of his thatched-roof hut, Clifton said the simple life of Maruata can be rewarding. "And the animals are great," he said.

But the statistics are grim. It was estimated in 1965 that the adult black turtle population totaled 48,000 to 78,000. Last year, the nesting females totaled only 2,800, indicating a total female adult population of fewer than 10,000.

Clifton, who says he has put in enough time here and will leave for good after next season, finds a bright spot in the gloom — the turtle is a proven winner.

"It's going to be difficult even for the Mexicans to kill every one of them," he said. "They have survived millions of years. They're resilient. Who knows, maybe they'll turn up in San Francisco Bay someday."

World Wildlife Fund officials say they hope public or private Mexican groups will take over the task of protecting the turtles.

Open Season On Moose; 42,000 Seeking License

By JERRY HARKAVY
Associated Press Writer

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) - Applications have arrived from as far away as California and Saudi Arabia. Maine's second moose hunt in nearly half a century has drawn 42,000 entrants willing to gamble $5 or $10 for a chance to stalk the biggest game animal in North America.

And like the experimental hunt of 1980, Maine's 1982 moose season, promises to be a subject of controversy that could include a statewide referendum on hunting the animal that decorates the state seal.

Meanwhile, an organization seeking to ban future moose hunts - and perhaps block the one already set for September - is also counting names.

SMOOSA, which stands for Save Maine's Only Official State Animal, claims to be roughly 10,000 voter signatures short of the 37,000 needed to force the statewide referendum.

Opponents contend that the lumbering creatures are so easy to shoot that a moose hunt is a slaughter, not a sport. "It's like shooting fish in a barrel," they say, pointing to the high success rate of the 1980 season, when 636 of the 700 permit holders got their moose.

"It would be more sporting to shoot Budweiser trucks. They're about the same size, but they travel faster," said John N. Cole, a writer who is heading the SMOOSA campaign.

Fish and game officials say opposition is based on emotion rather than facts, and is being supported by anti-hunting groups trying to dictate what species constitute legitimate prey.

"Mallards are much easier to hunt than black ducks, but that doesn't mean they're not a worthy game animal," said W. Thomas Shoener, a spokesman for the Department of Inland Fisheries and Wildlife.

The 1980 season was a huge success, said Shoener, prompting the Legislature to approve annual seasons. The only change was the establishment of six hunting zones to disperse permit holders throughout northern Maine, preventing them from clustering in a popular area around Greenville.

Moose hunting in Maine came to a halt in 1935 because the herd was dwindling. But as clear-cutting of the state's vast forests became accepted practice during the 1950s and '60s, the moose made a comeback, and game biologists say their estimate of 20,000 moose in the northern half of the state is a conservative one.

"Northern Maine has turned into a big salad bowl for moose," said Shoener.

Fish and game officials reason that the herd is now large enough to support a controlled season, and that it can be shared by hunters seeking trophies or food and moose-watchers out for pictures or simply a glimpse of the big beasts.

"It's a mistake not to manage and use a resource to its fullest if it can support it," said biologist Fred Hurley. "We have without doubt the highest moose population in the continental United States. The closest would be the mountain states of Wyoming, Montana and Idaho."

Shoener also argues that law-abiding hunters are penalized if poachers are the only ones who wind up shooting moose. "We've had an annual season since 1935, but it's been limited to the illegal hunters," he said.

At a public drawing in May at the Augusta Civic Center, Cub Scouts will pick the 1,000 winners of moose permits, giving them the opportunity to take part in the six-day hunt that starts Sept. 20.

Although all 700 permits from the 1980 hunt were restricted to Maine residents, 100 of this year's permits are reserved for out-of-staters.

At last count, the department has processed about 10,000 applications from non-residents and 32,000 from residents, with a backlog of several thousand still to be counted. The application fees were $10 and $5 respectively.

Meanwhile, SMOOSA claims to be adding 500 to 1,000 names each week to its initiative petitions, and Cole expects to have the requisite number by the Fourth of July at the latest. While the issue wouldn't go to referendum until November of 1983, Cole quotes some lawyers as saying there's "a 50-50 chance" that the state could enjoin the September moose hunt once the petitions are submitted and verified.

His group argues that the wildlife department is backing the moose hunt as a new source of revenue. Shoener disagreed, saying the $250,000 expected to be raised is just "a drop in the bucket" in the department's $9 million budget, and that the revenue will be used for research on the health of the moose herd.

The department says Maine's moose season is gaining a reputation as "the workingman's moose hunt" because the license fees are so low.

Once the applicants have been accepted, they must pay permit fees - $25 for Maine residents and $200 for out-of-staters. In addition, the permit holder, and his designated partner if he chooses to have one, must hold a current Maine hunting license, which is $66 for out-of-staters and $10 for residents.

Weinberger In Philippines

MANILA, Philippines (AP) - Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger arrived here today from South Korea and proceeded immediately to a working lunch with Philippine President Ferdinand E. Marcos to discuss the future of U.S. military bases in this island nation.

Several hours before Weinberger's plane touched down, Manila police removed 150 demonstrators picketing the U.S. Embassy to demand the closure of the two major U.S. bases here. No arrests were reported.

Marcos indicated last week that he would take advantage of Weinberger's visit to press for an early renegotiation of the U.S.-Philippines military base agreement to remove what the government refers to as "inequities and irritants."

A briefing paper distributed to reporters accompanying the defense secretary said his Manila visit was being made to "reassure the Philippine government of high-level U.S. interest in the security of the Philippines and to hear what they have to say about their security requirements."

It said Weinberger, on the third and last stop of an Asian tour, will discuss the bases and "any areas of host-nation concern."

The 26-hour visit comes amid an uproar here over the death last February of a Filipino youth who had been scavenging for scrap metal in a garbage dump at the U.S. Navy base at Subic Bay.

Base authorities said the youth died after he accidentally fell into a ravine but the local mayor quoted two witnesses as saying they saw an American Marine push the victim.

Weinberger was scheduled to visit Subic, the main support base for more than 20 warships of the 7th Fleet, and Clark Air Base, home of the 13th U.S. Air Force, both located north of Manila.

On his arrival, Weinberger was met by Defense Minister

Juan Ponce Enrile along with ranking Philippine and American military officials.

It is Weinberger's first visit to the Philippines since he served here during World War II as an intelligence officer on Gen. Douglas MacArthur's staff. He earlier visited Japan and South Korea.

No Signs Of Slump's End

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer

North Carolina home builders say they see nothing to indicate that the state's depressed housing market will improve over the next few months.

And builders, realtors and building-supply companies say as bad as the situation is, it may get worse before it improves.

"Frankly, I see nothing on the horizon to indicate that the economy will turn around any time soon," said Nick DeMai, executive vice president of the N.C. Home Builders Association in Raleigh. "It looks like President Reagan is going straight ahead with his economic program, looking neither right nor left, despite the problems the housing and automobile industries are facing."

"It could get much worse before it gets any better," he added.

J. Watts Roberts of Gastonia, president of the state home builders, said if builders don't get some relief, the majority of North Carolina builders will go out of business this year.

"It's the interest rates that are killing us, and that gets back to federal deficit spending," Roberts said. "Until that spending is cut, interest rates will remain high and builders will be in serious trouble."

According to the home builders association, statewide new-housing starts are down 35 percent from the same period last year. Figures from realty boards show membership continuing to decline as realtors are forced out of business by slow sales.

On Monday, President Reagan outlined a five-point program to stimulate housing programs and allow private pension funds to invest more money in mortgages.

Builders say the program isn't the answer to solving the industry's problems.

"What we need are lower interest rates to get people interested and able to buy housing," said A. Wayne Witt, president of the Home Builders Association of Raleigh and Wake County.

"High interest rates are a direct result of deficit spending, too much competition in the credit market, and the only way to solve that is to balance the budget," he said.

The federal debt, currently about $1 trillion, must be financed through borrowing in the national credit market. That market is the same source of money for most home-mortgage loans, Witt said.

Witt said housing starts on single-family dwellings in the Raleigh area in January - the latest month with figures available - were down 60 percent compared to January 1981. Multi-family unit starts were down 38 percent.

Reagan announced his aid proposal in Washington, D.C., to a convention of real estate agents. The package included an easing of government regulations on mortgage revenue bonds, easing regulations on the use of union pension funds for home mortgages, relaxing regulations on Federal Housing Administration loans, allowing real estate companies to get involved in related businesses and reduction of processing time required by FHA loans.

However, realtors say they aren't pleased with the plan and agree with builders that the federal deficit and high-interest rates are causing the problems.

"It's simple. Lower the interest rate to the 12 or 13 percent market and you'll sell houses," said Roy Currie of the Charlotte Board of Realtors, where membership is down about 13 percent.

The interest rate on home mortgages at most state banks and savings and loans is 17 1/2 percent.

Realtors and builders are not the only people in the housing industry plagued by slow sales. Many building-supply companies that sell materials to other firms and private contractors have been forced to lay off employees until sales improve. The companies also are having trouble collecting their money on material that has been sold.

"So far this year we've had five customers we considered good customers declare bankruptcy," said the credit manager of Charlotte company, who asked not to be identified. "And when people buy material from you and don't sell any of the houses they build, they don't have the money to pay you. That makes it hard to collect."

However, housing spokesmen say there could be a silver lining to the dark cloud that is hovering over their industry.

"There is such a pent-up demand for housing out there, we know we'll be in good shape if we can just hang on until the economy shows some improvement," Currie said. "That's what's keeping a lot of people in this industry going."

N.C. Business Activity Rose

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) - Business activity in North Carolina increased during February, according to the Wachovia Business Index.

Business was up 2.3 percent, the index showed.

The rise was due to the recovery of the manufacturing work week, Wachovia spokeswoman Nancy Lovelace said.

The January work week was low because of severe weather conditions, she said.

The business index measures the level of economic activity in the state on a monthly basis.

Surveillance

Avalanche Toll Not Yet Known

LONDON (AP) — British warplanes and patrol planes are shadowing an unidentified submarine, believed to be a Soviet nuclear-powered Victor-class sub, in the area of two NATO nuclear submarine bases, the Defence Ministry says.

Authorities ordered the round-the-clock surveillance after the sub was first detected Sunday, submerged off the Firth of Clyde, one of the country's most sensitive defense zones. Nearby are bases housing U.S. Navy Poseidon submarines and conventional and hunter submarines of the Royal Navy.

"It's dodging around up there," a spokesman said Wednesday. "It's well outside the 12-mile limit and it's causing no real panic, but it's clearly of great interest to us."

The submarine's detection coincided with the arrival of a frigate-sized Soviet surveillance vessel, the 4,500-ton Primorya, off the Hebrides Islands several days ago, the spokesman said.

$43,000 Fine For Texasgulf

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's department of Natural Resources and Community Development has levied $43,000 in fines against the Texasgulf Chemicals Company.

Texasgulf is a chemical and fertilizer manufacturing facility on the Pamlico River.

The department announced a fine of $37,000 for air pollution violations and ordered the company to pay an additional $6,000 in water pollution fines.

The department said the company further complied with an order to post a $1 million bond as part of a commitment to construct additional air pollution control equipment if another air emission violation occurs.

Polish Plane Is Hijacked

Obituaries

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Two Polish soldiers pulled pistols on the pilot of a military plane over southern Poland today, forced him to land and pick up their families in a field, then made him fly to Austria at treetop altitude to evade Communist radar, police sources said.

The Soviet-made Antonov-2, a biplane sometimes used as a crop duster, landed at Vienna's Schwechat airport with 10 people aboard. The pilot said he wanted to return to Poland. The same type of plane was used by 20 Romanians who defected to Austria last July.

Witnesses said the Polish plane, traveling at an altitude of only 200-260 feet, flew along the Danube after crossing the Czechoslovak-Austrian border before touching down at the airport.

A police spokesman said "in order to evade detection in Czechoslovakia the plane was flying so low it grazed tree tops. Parts of branches could still be seen on the damaged wings after touchdown."

According to first police accounts, the plane took off from an airfield near Krakow, in southern Poland, for what was described as a routine training flight. It carried the pilot, another soldier and the two hijackers.

The hijackers pulled pistols and forced the pilot to make an emergency landing in a field where they picked up their wives and four children, aged 1 to 4, then flew to Vienna, authorities said.

Poland has been under martial law since Dec. 13.

Pirates, Indians Split Twin-bill

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — East Carolina University's hopes of an ECAC-South baseball title were given a severe jolt yesterday as William & Mary took the nightcap game of a doubleheader, 6-4, over the Pirates.

Big-10 'Stars' Top ACC Team

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa (AP) — It didn't come off quite as expected, but the Big Ten Atlantic Coast Conference "Super Shoot-out" was good enough to pre-empt the president of the United States.

"You've got to know what's important," quipped Kevin Boyle of Iowa, a member of the Big Ten basketball squad that scored an 89-85 victory over the ACC team Wednesday.

The game, which featured seniors from the two conferences, began at 7 p.m. — the same time as President Reagan's news conference.

But at least two stations — in Cedar Rapids and Moline, Ill. — carried the game rather than the news conference.

The contest, announced by Dick Enberg and Indiana Coach Bobby Knight, also was syndicated to stations around the country.

For a while it looked like the shootout would be a blowout: only seven of 12 ACC players showed up.

Jim Chipokas, a member of the local group that sponsored the game, said he paid $15,000 to a television service in Nashville, Tenn., to line up players — from the two conferences. Eleven athletes from Big Ten schools came, but only seven from the ACC.

The original plan — to have the Big Ten players compete against the ACC representatives — was scrapped. The 18 players were tossed together and Coaches Al McGuire for the Big Ten and Billy Packer for the ACC chose up sides.

single games with ODU, JMU and Richmond — all on the road. To have a clear shot at the championship, the Pirates would now need to win all three of those games.

The first of them comes today when the Pirates visit Richmond and the second is Saturday when they travel to James Madison. They meet Old Dominion on the final day of the month in the season-ending game.

In the opening game, the Pirates got outstanding pitching from freshman Bob Davidson, who upped his record to 4-1 on the season. Davidson gave up five hits, walked four and struck out three. Only one of the two runs against him was earned.

In the nightcap, however, Charlie Smith was bombed over the first two innings, giving up three hits, three earned runs, and three walks, while recording a strikeout. It was later revealed that Smith had a sore arm but did not say anything about it prior to taking the mound.

Kirk Parsons, who came on relief, also was touched for three runs, allowing six hits, four walks and striking out one. Smith took the loss as the Pirates never recovered from the early William & Mary lead.

In the opener, the Pirates grabbed the early lead, scoring a run in the first inning. Mike Sorrell reached on an infield hit and was sacrificed up. He scored on John Hallow's single to left.

The Indians rallied for one of their own in the second. Buddy Key singled to left and took an extra base when the ball got by David Wells. David Blows then doubled him in.

East Carolina went back out in the third, scoring three times after two were out. Hallow got things going with a double to center and Todd Evans singled him in. Todd Hendley tripled, scoring Evans, and Fran Fitzgerald followed with another three-bagger, plating Evans.

Up 4-1, the Pirates never were caught again. They added one more in the fourth. Kelly Robinette singled and was sacrificed up, then scored on a triple by David Wells.

The final three came in the sixth. Robinette doubled, moved up on a single by Robert Wells, but was thrown out on Sorrell's infield grounder. David Wells singled in Robert

Bumgarner To Quit Post As Grid Coach

By WOODY PEELE, Reflector Sports Editor. Dave Bumgarner, for 11 years the head football coach at Rose High School, announced today that he is resigning from that position.

The coach underwent triple bypass heart surgery last summer and assistant coach Ronald Vineet served as interim coach as Bumgarner took leave of absence.

But in announcing his resignation, the coach emphasized that his health was not a factor in his decision to leave the coaching profession.

"At this time in my life, I feel it is in the best interests of my family and myself not to coach anymore. I feel this is a good time to leave coaching from the standpoint of leaving on a winning note.

"I'd still like to be involved in athletics and help coordinate and promote our athletic programs here at Rose. But I want to spend more time with my family now."

Bumgarner and his wife, Cindy, have one son, Thomas David Jr., born last July, and they expect another child in the fall.

"My health is not a factor in the decision to quit," he said. "I feel great."

A graduate of East Carolina, Bumgarner received his bachelor's degree in 1964. As an undergraduate, he was a record-setting receiver for the Pirates, playing in two bowl games with the team. He also received his master's from ECU in physical education with emphasis on administration. He has his principal's certificate and is only five hours short of an advanced certificate.

Following his graduation, he played for one year with the Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League, then entered the coaching ranks at Edenton Holmes High School in 1966, where he remained until moving to Greenville in 1968. At Holmes, he served as assistant to Marion Kirby in football, and was head baseball coach.

At Rose, he first served as assistant football coach under Bud Phillips, and as head baseball coach. Several of his teams were conference champions or runners-up. He became head football coach in 1971, and in that position, guided the Rampants to several conference championships. His 1975 team won the state 4-A championship, and the 1979 team was the state runner-up.

Among some of the top players he coached were Al Hunter of Notre Dame, Doug Paschal of North Carolina, Ron Butler of UCLA, and Mike Brewington, Joe Godette, Rocky Butler, Macon Moye, Henry Trevathan and Ted King, all of whom attended East Carolina.

"The years here have been good to me," Bumgarner said. "The community support has been good whether we were winning or losing." Losing however, came far between, as the Rampants had only two losing seasons during the 11 years. The 11-year record of the coach was 71-30-3.

He coached in all three of North Carolina's post-season all-star games, serving as an

Houston Asks Richard To Move Down

By The Associated Press
The Houston Astros weren't all that impressed with J.R. Richard and asked him to take a trip to Tucson. Ron Jackson wasn't all that impressed with the Detroit Tigers and took a hike.

Richard, once one of the most imposing pitchers in the major leagues, is trying to make it back from a near-fatal stroke in 1980. He fell short of a big-league performance Tuesday — and on Wednesday, the Astros suggested his best route back to Houston might be through Tucson, the Astros' top minor league team.

"That's his only chance to pitch," said General Manager Al Rosen. Richard said he will "let God take care" of the decision.

If Richard chooses not to join the Pacific Coast League team, the Astros will put him on their injured reserve list.

"He's still a ways away," Rosen said after the 6-foot-8 right-hander gave up seven hits, two walks and three runs in three innings during an intrasquad game Tuesday.

Three of Houston's rostered pitchers didn't fare much better on Wednesday. The Atlanta Braves pounded Vern Rühle, Dave Smith and Joe Sambito for 14 hits, including Bob Horner's three-run homer and RBI-single, and downed the Astros 7-3.

Jackson, a first baseman who started last season with Minnesota and ended it with Detroit, batted 270 with five home runs and 40 runs batted in during 1981. The Tigers were suitably impressed to offer him a three-year guaranteed contract — but Jackson, who had played out his option last year, wasn't all that impressed with the numbers on that contract. Thanks, but no thanks, he said, and took off on his own, looking elsewhere for greener diamonds.

The California Angels decided to give him a shot. On Wednesday, he gave them one — a three-run homer, the difference in a 6-3 victory over Seattle.

Fernando Valenzuela made his first spring appearance for Los Angeles a satisfactory one. The rookie sensation of a year ago, a holdout this year, pitched two innings of relief, allowing three hits and one unearned run in the Dodgers' 10-inning 8-7 victory over Boston.

"I felt fine, very relaxed," he said through an interpreter. Valenzuela has refused to sign a 1982 contract. Last year he was paid $42,500. He asked for $850,000 this year. The Dodgers balked at that and renewed his contract at $350,000.

In the day's only big trade, Montreal picked up 35-year-old infielder Al Oliver from Texas and sent third baseman Larry Parrish and minor league first baseman Dave Hostetler to the Rangers. Parrish will play right field for Texas and Oliver figures to play first base for Montreal.

Oliver has batted .300 or higher each of the past six seasons, including two with Pittsburgh. "We've been working to get Oliver for 10 years," said John McHale, the Expos' general manager. "I know it gives us good balance from the left side of the plate."

Shortly after the deal was announced, the Expos beat the Rangers 3-0 as Ray Burris pitched six innings of two-hit ball and Wallace Johnson and Andre Dawson hit run-scoring singles in the third inning.

Among the day's other impressive pitching performances, Larry Christenson of Philadelphia stopped Detroit on two hits over six innings, fanning eight batters, as the Phillies romped 8-1. Mike Norris of Oakland hurled seven shutout innings as the A's downed Cleveland 3-1, and Tom Lollar pitched seven four-hit innings in San Diego's 5-1 victory over Milwaukee.

Garry Templeton had a two-run homer and Dave Edwards a two-run double in the Padres' triumph. Gary Roenicke hit a two-out, ninth-inning home run to propel Baltimore past the Chicago White Sox 4-3, and George Brett (who had homered earlier) hit a one-out single in the 11th inning to give Kansas City to a 4-3 victory over Pittsburgh.

St. Louis beat Toronto 4-3 as George Bjorkman hit a two-run double in the ninth inning, then scored the winning run on Mike Ramsey's single. Doubles by Cesar Cedeno, Paul Householder and Ron Oester in a six-run fifth inning carried Cincinnati to a 7-2 victory over the New York Mets. The Chicago Cubs won their fourth in a row with Junior Kennedy's seventh-inning single producing the winning run in a 3-2 triumph over San Francisco.

Dave Winfield, sidelined since March 19 by a neck injury, won't play in a 9-1 victory over the University of South Florida. It was not the best of ways to come back. He struck out in his only two at-bats.

Bears Divide Pair Of Games

BEAR GRASS — Bear Grass High School split a pair of games with Cape Hatteras High School yesterday.

Hatteras won the boys' baseball game, 13-11, while the Lady Bears won their softball game, 16-6.

Details of the game were not available.

The Bears travel to Aurora on Monday.

Fike Girls Top Rose Thinclads

WILSON — Wilson's Fike High School used second, third and fourth place finishes to gain a victory in a girls' track meet held there yesterday.

The Golden Demons finished the day with 65½ points, while Rose was second with 53½. Beddingfield was third with 49.

The Lady Bruins of Beddingfield won first place in six individual events, while Fike took four and Rose three. Rose added first place in two of the three relays, while Fike took first in the other.

The meet's only double winner was Fike's Janice Brown, who took the long and triple jumps.

The loss, the first for Rose, left the Lady Rampants at 6-1 on the season. They travel to Wilson Hunt next Wednesday.

assistant in the Shrine Bowl in 1978, the North-South Boys' Home game in 1975, and as head coach in the East-West game in Greensboro in 1980.

Bumgarner will continue his position as assistant principal at Rose High School.

Principal Howard Hurt pointed out that the resignation has not officially been presented to the board of education, and he is unsure of how the school will proceed in filling the vacancy.

Vincent, who served as the interim coach last fall, is believed to be a prime candidate for the position, although he has not decided whether he would be willing to give up his current job as baseball coach.

Assistant coach Jim Brewington, who didn't seek the interim job, said too that he had not made up his mind whether he would also seek the job.

"Coach Vincent is definitely in the picture, but it will probably come down to whether he wants to give up coaching baseball," Hunt said. Current procedures at Rose do not allow a coach to head more than one major program — baseball, basketball or football.

"Coach Brewington will also be given consideration should he be interested," Hunt added.

"One problem we might have, should we choose to go outside the system would be having a teaching position open to fill. Having one in the proper area might be hard to come upon."

It is expected that the school will act in the coming month or so.

Farmville Central Boys Run To Easy Victory

FARMVILLE — Rudy Carmon won three events and helped lead Farmville Central to an easy track victory over C.B. Aycock and Rosewood yesterday.

The Jaguars finished the meet with 132 points, while Aycock had 39 and Rosewood finished with four.

Carmon captured first place in the 1,600, the 3,200 and the 800-meter runs. Raymond Maye added wins in the shot put and discus, while Melvin Sutton won the triple jump and the high hurdles. Wesley Carmon took first in the 100 and 400-meter dashes.

The Jaguars are now 16-1 on the season, and host SouthWest Edgecombe and Aycock on Monday.

Pirates...

Key had two for the Indians.

The Pirates were not so fortunate in the second game.

The Indians pushed over three runs in the first inning before chasing Smith. With one down, Dan Zebrowski walked and Key singled. Greg Adams reached on an error, and with two away, Ed Stanko doubled in all three runners.

The Pirates came back with one in the fourth. With one down, Fitzgerald walked and scored when Evans tripled.

The Indians countered that in the bottom of the inning, however, making it 4-1. John Volpi walked and Aiken singled.

Billy Grossman then singled, driving in Volpi.

The Indians got another in the fifth. Adams tripled and with two away, scored on a hit by Steve Clinton.

East Carolina tried to rally, scoring three in the sixth to close the gap to 5-4. Fitzgerald singled but was cut down when Evans reached on a fielder's choice. Ricky Nichols reached on an error and Robinette singled to load the bases. Jay Carraway walked forcing in Evans, and Robert Wells reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Nichols. Robinette and Wells then worked a double steal, scoring the run that pulled the Pirates within one.

But they could rally no more, and the Indians added an insurance run in the sixth. Aiken walked, and with two away, scored when Key tripled.

Key, Adams and Clinton each had two hits for William & Mary, while no one had more than one for the Pirates.

The loss dropped the Pirates to 17-5 overall. William & Mary is now 6-13 overall and 1-4 in ECAC play.

East Carolina, after its game with Richmond today, is at home on Friday for a 1 p.m. game with Catawba, prior to traveling to Harrisonburg, Va., to face JMU on Saturday.

COME UP TO GOODYEAR QUALITY & INNOVATION

Despite Stats, Bird Is Not Satisfied

By The Associated Press
Larry Bird, who had just scored 35 points and pulled down nine rebounds, still wasn't satisfied with his game. "I did well on the offensive end, but there's other things out there too," said the 6-foot-9 forward after he led the Boston Celtics to a 119-109 National Basketball Association victory over the Washington Bullets Wednesday night.

"I felt the passing and rebounding weren't going my way," said Bird, who came off the bench for the 12th straight time since returning from a broken cheekbone. "Luckily, my shots were going in. It seems like anytime I'm shooting well, the rest of my game goes down."

Bird hit 15 of his 20 field goal attempts and all five free throws as the Celtics won their first game since Philadelphia snapped their 18-game winning streak Sunday.

"The most important thing in my mind was to get the first one after the streak is broken," said Boston Coach Bill Fitch. "You lose this one and it's two in a row, you go on the road (Friday at Atlanta), and I don't want that."

In other NBA action, Denver won its 11th straight game with a 120-119 decision over Dallas, Kansas City upset Seattle 116-109, Philadelphia edged Chicago 99-98, Indiana nipped Detroit 108-106, New Jersey bombed Cleveland 103-87 and Phoenix beat San Diego 127-106.

Washington Coach Gene Shue had hoped that his team might have an advantage by meeting the Celtics just after their club-record winning streak ended.

"I liked the idea of coming in here following the end of their streak," Shue said. "I guess I hoped they would be suffering a mild letdown."

His hopes were dashed as the Celtics controlled the tempo to end the Bullets' four-game winning streak.

"We're usually involved in tight games with the Celtics," Shue said. "Tonight we had to play their game, which is up-tempo, and as a result they were in control throughout."

With Bird scoring 21 points and the Celtics hitting 64 percent of their shots, Boston rolled to a 59-50 halftime lead.

Washington's last serious threat came early in the fourth quarter when an 8-2 run cut Boston's lead to 92-86. But the Celtics increased it to 105-92 with 4:56 remaining and never led by fewer than nine the rest of the way.

Boston, which won all six games in its season series with the Bullets, took only 79 shots from the field but made 49 for a 62-percent average.

Robert Parish had 21 points and 14 rebounds for Boston. Rookie Jeff Ruland, led the Bullets with a season-high of 27 points and 11 rebounds, while Kevin Grevey had 21 points.

Nuggets 120, Mavericks 119
Alex English scored 27 points and Kiki Vandeweghe added 25 as Denver won its 11th straight game, a club record.

Dallas had a chance to win the game twice in the final seconds. First Jim Spanarkel missed a shot from the corner and Jay Vincent, who scored 31 points, tried a tip-in that bounced off the rim at the buzzer. Mark Aguirre added 30 for the Mavericks.

"Before the 11-point run, nobody figured we had a shot at the playoffs," said Denver center Dan Issel. "But we proved we are a playoff team."

The Nuggets trail first-place San Antonio by only two games in the Midwest Division. They are in fourth place in the Western Conference, and six teams will make the playoffs.

Kings 116, Sonics 109

Mike Woodson scored 22 of his game-high 28 points in the first half as Kansas City played the spoiler role by beating Seattle.

The Kings, who won't make the playoffs, never trailed after Woodson, who sank 10 of 14 shots in the game, gave them a 6-4 lead.

Kansas City led by as many as 16 points early in the third quarter before Seattle cut the deficit to 10 late in the same period. But the Sonics couldn't draw even, and they fell three games behind first-place Los Angeles in the Pacific Division.

76ers 99, Bulls 98
Julius Erving scored 18 of his 32 points in the third period and scored Philadelphia's last four points in its victory over Chicago.

Erving broke a 95-95 tie with a basket and he hit two free throws to give the 76ers a 99-96 lead after the Bulls' Ronnie Lester missed one of two free shots. Dwight Jones' last-second shot cut the deficit to one.

Pacers 108, Pistons 106
Billy Knight's basket from 20 feet with three seconds left lifted Indiana over Detroit.

The Pistons, who fell three games behind Atlanta and New Jersey in the battle for the final playoff spot in the East, blew a nine-point fourth-quarter lead.

Kelly Tripucka, who led all scorers with 32 points for Detroit, tied the game for the seventh time with a basket before Knight's winning hoop. Don Buse led Indiana with 18 points.

Nets 103, Cavaliers 87
Backup guard Darwin Cook scored 19 of his 23 points in the second half to lead New Jersey past Cleveland, which lost its eighth game in a row and 22nd in 23 contests against Atlantic Division teams.

The Nets never trailed after Cook's 18-footer gave them a 64-63 lead with 4:31 left in third period. A 28-16 advantage in the fourth quarter put the game away.

Ron Brewer led the Cavaliers with 23 points.

Suns 127, Clippers 106
Phoenix handed San Diego its 11th straight loss as Walter Davis scored 24 points and Dennis Johnson added 21.

The Suns, who are tied with Golden State for the sixth and final playoff spot in the West, never trailed after taking a 35-23 lead after one quarter behind Johnson's 10 points.

Tom Chambers led all scorers with 30 points for San Diego.

Shore Tourney Escapes Carner

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — JoAnne Carner has won 33 tournaments on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, but never the $310,000 Nabisco-Dinah Shore tournament — the richest event in women's golf.

"I'm baffled," said Carner, who could have a dual celebration should she win the tournament on Sunday — her 43rd birthday. "When they held the Triple Crown (match play) at Mission Hills, I retired that trophy."

This will be her sixth try in the tournament. She and defending champion Nancy Lopez-Melton headed the select field which began today.

Carner is coming off a second-place finish in the LPGA's tournament in Hawaii last week. Amy Alcott won by a stroke, and Lopez-Melton finished third, two strokes back of Alcott.

Alcott ranks as one of the favorites for the Dinah Shore's $45,000 first prize, but the fact that Lopez-Melton is getting her game back in top form could be bad news for the rest of the women golfers.

Lopez-Melton, who won the tournament last year with an 11-under-par 277 over the 6,272-yard Mission Hills course, recently ended an eight-month winless streak with a victory in the Las Vegas tournament.

Her Dinah Shore victory last year, worth $37,500, was her first in the prestigious event.

Farmville Splits Meets

NEW BERN — Farmville Middle School and McDonald Middle School of New Bern split a pair of junior high school track meets yesterday.

New Bern downed the Farmville boys, 56-41. Ronald Streeter took first place in the 200-meter and was second in the 100 and ran a leg on the 400-meter relay team that finished first in 48.0. Anthony Ford won the long jump in 19 feet, 5 inches.

The Farmville girls took a 72-27 victory. The 440 relay team won in 52.5 and the 800 relay team won in 1:54.5. Patrice Ellis took the high jump with a leap of 4-6, while Christi Smith took the 100 in 11.6. Lisa Lang won the long jump with a leap of 16 feet, 6 inches, and won the 200-meter in 26.1.

The Farmville girls are now 2-0, while the boys are 0-2.

'So What?' Answers Digger

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Notre Dame's Richard "Digger" Phelps opened up a can of worms — Pandora's box or a hive of bees, whichever suits your fancy — with his charge that college coaches are paying as much as $10,000 a year for select basketball beef on the hoof.

"A conservative figure," responded Oregon State's Ralph Miller, named Coach of the Year for 1982 by the Associated Press. "They were talking about that kind of money 10 and 15 years ago. We've now got inflation."

"Digger must have had his reasons," said Tex Winter, 60-year-old coach at Long Beach (Calif.) State, new president of the National Association of Basketball Coaches. "But there is a time, a place and a method to handle such charges. It might have been wiser if Digger had followed the prescribed procedures."

Phelps' informal comments created a mild tempest in New Orleans last weekend and stole some of the pre-game attention from the business at hand — deciding the NCAA national basketball championship, which North Carolina won dramatically over Georgetown.

Coaches were sharply divided on whether Phelps was discreet in blowing the whistle as he did. But the most alarming feature of the controversy was the "So what?" attitude with which the charge was treated generally.

"They've been doing it for years and years," coaches conceded. "The only thing that's changed is the size of the payments."

The NCAA acknowledged as much.

"I wouldn't say abuses are rampant," said David Berst, director of the NCAA enforcement staff, from his headquarters in Mission, Kan., "but there's no doubt they exist. Little is different except the scope of it."

"Remember the University of Illinois slush fund in the 1960s? Athletes were getting paid $40, $50 and $60. That seemed like a lot then. It might be trivial today."

"We believe a vast majority adheres to the rules. There are occasional violators who are seeking that extra edge. There always have been."

Berst and his staff are kept busy rushing around answering alarms such as posed by Phelps and putting out brush fires. But it must seem to them that, when one blaze is extinguished, two or three pop up some place else. It's almost a losing cause.

Berst said 17 of the nation's colleges are currently undergoing some sort of sanctions while 30-odd are under investigation. One of the latter is Clemson, which produced the 1981 national football champion. "The largest illegal payment we've investigated," Berst said, "was between $50,000 and $75,000 a few years ago." The violator, unidentified, was properly punished.

Coaches, congregating in little clusters in New Orleans last week, talked openly of recruiting skulduggery — ranging from visiting limits to automobiles, insurance policies for the parents, race horses and even $100,000 bonuses.

"It's one thing to repeat these rumors and another to document them as fact," said the NCAA enforcement officer. "We welcome disclosures such as Digger made. They open the public's eyes and may inhibit other coaches similarly tempted."

The abuses have a far more sinister reach than the outcome of a campus game. They are inclined to erode young people's morals.

The nefarious basketball betting scandals of the 1950s and 1960s, and their echo a couple of years ago at Boston College, were probably offshoots of campus recruiting ills.

If it's okay to accept money under the table and get while the getting's good, a kid might rationalize, what's wrong with fixing points for a few extra bucks?

In 1951, 31 players from seven of the country's leading basketball powers were involved, and in 1957-61, 41 players from 27 colleges covering 43 games. Bribes ranged from $75 to $4,500. Most players were given immunity for cooperation.

Since then, the college game has gone really bigtime, competing with the pros for TV's millions. The mad scramble for talent is fierce, recruiting costs are astronomical.

Bigness carries with it big pressures. The talent search is a jungle. To remain competitive, the coach feels he must get players the best way he can — or else. He compromises his own moral judgment and scandal ensues.

It's become a fact of life. As long as money flows so freely, who can stop it?

Masters' Nod Rides On GGO

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Ed Sneed, a quiet, soft-spoken man, had a brush with golfing immortality three seasons ago, missing a victory in the Masters by a quarter-turn of the ball.

It was by that margin, on the final hole, that his par-saving putt failed to fall. The bogey sent him into a playoff, which he lost.

Now, he isn't even in the elite, international field which next week will play in the first of the year's Big Four events. His only chance to make that field is with a victory in the $300,000 Greater Greensboro Open.

That, of course, is a longshot. But, Sneed said, it isn't out of the question.

"I'm playing well enough to win," he said before teeing off today in the first round on the 6,984-yard, par 72 Forest Oaks Country Club course.

"I've played pretty well ever since Hawaii (in February). I'm probably playing better now than at any time in the last year and a half, maybe two years."

"I'm not striking the ball quite as well as I did a few years ago when I was really playing well, but I'm scoring because my short game is so much better."

It has been particularly effective for Sneed, a veteran of 14 years on the PGA tour, in his last three starts. He has been in the top 10 in each of his last three appearances. That solid performance helped boost his earnings for the year to more than $51,000 — more than he won all last season.

It lifted him to 19th place on the season's money-winning list and made him a factor to be considered in this chase for a $54,000 first prize.

Although a number of the game's leading performers are skipping this event to concentrate on preparations for the Masters, Sneed still faces a formidable field that is headed by Ray Floyd, a former winner of both this event and the Masters, and Larry Nelson, the defending champion and current PGA titleholder.

Among the other standouts are Lee Trevino, South African Gary Player, 1981 Player of the Year Bill Rogers, long-hitting Bruce Lietzke and 1982 tour title-winners Craig Stadler, Lanny Wadkins, Wayne Levi, Ed Fiori and Jim Simons.

Miller Likes Ewing's Looks

CORVALLIS, Ore. (AP) — Oregon State's Ralph Miller says Georgetown center Patrick Ewing is as good a college freshman basketball player as he's seen in his 31 years as a major-college coach.

"If he plays four years, he will be the best," the veteran Oregon State coach said after he returned from viewing Monday night's NCAA title game between Georgetown and North Carolina.

Georgetown ripped Miller's Beavers 69-45 in the NCAA West regional finals.

"It's hard to spot a real weakness," Miller said of the Hoyas' 7-foot freshman. "Ewing is not only tall, he's big. He's mobile, agile. He can jump. He has a nice touch away from the basket. All he lacks is experience."

The coach, named The Associated Press coach-of-the-year the past two seasons, spoke from experience.

"He's a mental block," Miller said. "It happened to us. It happened to Louisville. You wind up passing shots you should take and taking ones you shouldn't."

The Oregon State coach also had an opinion about the late-game play in which Georgetown's Fred Brown threw the ball to North Carolina's James Worthy, thereby sealing the Hoyas' doom.

"Everybody remembers the last mistake," Miller said. "I can remember some others along the way. Georgetown failed to capitalize on fastbreak opportunities. In fact, they bobbled the ball two or three times and North Carolina scored at the other end. Mistakes? I can remember five goaltending calls. Brown just made the last mistake."

Handicapped Awareness Week

Handicap Awareness Week will be held in Greenville Monday through Thursday and will feature a variety of public events related to the 1982 theme, "Focus on Ability."

Keynote speaker for the week's activities is Chet Mottershead, North Carolina liaison for the International Year of the Disabled. He will speak Monday at 9 p.m. in Hendrix Theater and will be introduced by ECU Interim Chancellor Dr. John Howell.

Preceding the Mottershead address, also in Hendrix Theater, will be an 8 p.m. screening of the documentary film, "A Different Approach."

Tuesday blind and sighted volunteers will play "beep ball," a modified version of softball for the blind from noon to 2 p.m. at the bottom of College Hill just off East 10th Street.

Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. the Caswell Center Choir will perform in the Jenkins Fine Arts Auditorium, followed by screening of several films about the handicapped.

Wednesday's activities include an exhibition by Special Olympics athletes at Bunting Field from 9:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. and attitudinal workshops for ECU staff members and invited employers.

A wheelchair basketball game featuring the Greenville Steelwheels is scheduled for Wednesday from 7:30 p.m. at Elm Street

Gymnasium. Thursday events are demonstrations of equipment for use by the blind on the campus mall and in Joyner Library; a concluding conference at 3 p.m. in room

School Buses In Collision

An estimated $1,350 property damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Wednesday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted when two city school buses collided about 3:55 p.m. on Elm Street, 200 feet south of the 14th Street intersection.

Police, who identified the drivers as Willie Duffie Hammond of 314 Conley St., and David Ray Sherrod of 200A Cadillac St., estimated damage at $400 to one of the buses and $300 to the other.

None of the 43 passengers — 20 on one vehicle and 23 on the other — was injured.

Cars driven by William Henry Roach Jr. of Route 2, Greenville, and Eva Roberson Spain of 205 Kirkland Dr., collided about 10:06 p.m. on Arlington Boulevard, 200 feet east of the Hooker Road intersection, causing an estimated $200 damage to the Roach car and $450 damage to the Spain vehicle.

2148 of Mendenhall Student Center, and an 8 p.m. performance in Hendrix Theater by Fantasy, ECU's sign language team which interprets the lyrics of popular songs for the deaf through mime and signing.

Each day of the observance also will include special displays in booths and simulation activities in the Student Center and on the campus mall from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Participants in simulation activities can briefly share experiences of the handicapped through use of blindfolds, earplugs, wheelchairs and other equipment.

Rubella and audiology screenings for hearing impairment are also scheduled for the campus infirmary Monday through Wednesday.

Handicap Awareness Week was planned and coordinated by three graduate students in the ECU School of Allied Health and Social Professions — Ramona Lopez, Jim Warren and Sharon McClung, all of whom are earning master's degrees in rehabilitation counseling at East Carolina University.

The three have spent about six months developing the plans for this public awareness effort as their master of science project.

Ms. Lopez, originally from Durham, previously earned a bachelor's degree in criminal justice. She decided to pursue a graduate degree in another field after discovering that working for the Department of Corrections was not as personally rewarding as she had hoped. Warren, a Greenville native, has a teaching degree in industrial technology and has worked in the building business. He said he wanted a "helping profession" and hopes to be a counselor or work evaluator for the handicapped.

Ms. McClung taught for three years in West Virginia before deciding to enter the rehabilitation counseling field. She has two undergraduate degrees in education and a master's degree in reading consultation. Handicap awareness will be discussed on "Carolina Today" Monday at 7:15 a.m. All events are open, not only to students, but to the general public. Further details may be obtained from C.C. Rowe, director of the ECU Office of Handicapped Student Services, 757-6799.

Won Gamble On T-Shirt, UNC

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Mark Feichter and Herman Williams gambled when they bought 1,200 T-shirts proclaiming the University of North Carolina the NCAA basketball champions.

But when the Tar Heels won, so did Feichter and Williams.

The men, who own a nightclub in Gastonia, were among other entrepreneurs in Chapel Hill who benefitted when hundreds of people poured into Franklin Street Monday night hungering for souvenirs commemorating North Carolina's 63-62 victory over Georgetown.

Feichter and Williams were selling their T-shirts on the street for $5.95 each. Other hawkers priced T-shirts as high as $10.

"People seem to want anything that has Carolina on it," said Wendy Holmes Eshleman, a clerk at Record Bar.

Services Set

The following services have been scheduled at Union Grove FWB Church for the weekend:

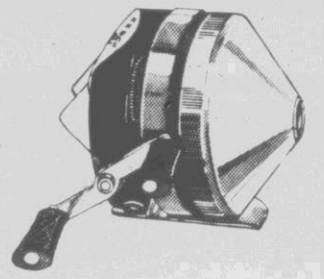

Friday, 7:30 p.m., quarterly meeting; Saturday, holy communion with Bishop Stephen Jones and Haddock Chapel rendering the services; Sunday, 9:45 a.m., Sunday school, 11 a.m., the pastor and senior choir will be in charge of morning worship; 2 p.m., dinner will be served, 3 p.m. Elder Jasper Tyson and Allen Chapel will close out quarterly meeting services.

The public is invited to attend, according to the pastor, Elder H.L. Hill.

To Focus On Campus Diet

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Mollie Fitzgerald wants today's college students to pay as much attention to their diets as they do to television. So the Duke University freshman is taking her crusade before the cameras.

Ms. Fitzgerald, of Pittsburgh, has started her own program on a college television network to show students how to use dormitory appliances for semi-gourmet cooking.

"A lot of the kids have appliances their moms buy them — blenders, hotplates and toaster ovens — but they never do more than Lipton's Cup-A-Soup," Ms. Fitzgerald said.

The first program, which aired Feb. 16, dealt with hors d'oeuvres — including shrimp spreads, cheese fondues and artichoke dips.

The second program, which will air March 17, will cover entrees, and the third will discuss desserts.

"The show is far from gourmet," Ms. Fitzgerald said. "It's more along the guidelines of convenience and practicality."

Ms. Fitzgerald began studying cooking at age 15 with a professional cook in Pittsburgh. Her training centered around fish, pasta and chocolates.

She also studied with Jacques Pepin of New York, Abby Mandel of Chicago and

Prisoner Recounts Ordeal On The 'Alcatraz' Of South Africa

By MAUREEN JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — Indres Naidoo arrived in chains on Robben Island, the maximum security prison dubbed South Africa's Alcatraz convinced he would be freed by a black majority government before the end of his 10-year sentence.

That was 18 years ago. Sentenced in 1963 for sabotage and subversion, the civil rights activist served his full term and emerged alive and unrepentant into a South Africa which remains under white minority control.

Today, the 46-year-old Naidoo works in exile for the African National Congress, South Africa's banned black nationalist guerrilla group.

His prison memoir published here by Penguin Books this week is a saga of beatings, mass assaults on inmates, starvation diets, and work gangs herded to the rock quarry with Alsatian hounds snapping at their heels.

"Island in Chains," written by the former "Prisoner 885-63," is billed by its author as the first documented account of life on Robben Island — a fate reserved for South Africans convicted of politically inspired crimes.

In it, Naidoo, of Indian descent, recalls white wardens raining blows on arriving prisoners and screaming, "This is the island — here you will die!"

"They hated us and we hated them, it was quite simple," he wrote.

But Naidoo also tells of gradually improved conditions brought about by a mixture of unrelenting protests by the 1,200 inmates and international pressure including annual visits by the International Red Cross.

The reforms included the right to smoke cigarettes, read apolitical books and sleep in a bed instead of on a mat on the floor.

"By the time I left, the mass assaults were rare," Naidoo told The Associated Press in a recent interview.

"But it was still common — and we know it still is — for individual prisoners to be assaulted by between four and five warders (guards). That happened to me, for example, for not taking my cap off to a warden."

In Pretoria, a spokesman for the South African Prisons Department said the 374 prisoners currently on Robben Island were treated "exactly the same" as inmates in other jails.

The spokesman said "particular attention" was paid to International Red Cross reports, and prisoners could also file complaints with senior prison staff, visiting doctors, magistrates and judges.

However, Naidoo said most visitors simply listened to the complaints and did nothing, or responded that Robben Island was "not a five-star hotel."

Naidoo claims to feel no resentment about his "lost decade" as a prisoner on Robben Island, the result of being caught blowing up a railway signal box outside Johannesburg.

"Either you submit and accept the status quo or you fight, and fight means armed struggle," he said.

"It is a cause I believe in. I knew the consequences of it, so why should I be bitter?"

The 3-square-mile island in the Atlantic Ocean off the Cape of Good Hope still holds South Africa's most famous prisoner: African National Congress President Nelson Mandela.

Mandela, 63, is in the 18th year of a life sentence, with no chance of parole.

Naidoo credits Mandela's presence in an isolated section of the prison as a powerful influence on him. Naidoo fled South Africa in 1977 and now works full-time for the ANC, processing refugees and guerrilla recruits in Mozambique, one of South Africa's black-ruled neighbors.

"Nelson Mandela's sentence won't end with his death," Naidoo vowed. "He will be freed by a government of liberation. There is no doubt before the end of this decade South Africa will be a free society under an ANC government."

No Room For Shuttle Cargo Until September 1987

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla.
(AP) — NASA expects the successful third test of Columbia to generate more customer interest in the space shuttle, but no one need apply for a flight until after September 1987. The 70 flights until then are fully booked with communications, weather and military satellites, space probes, planetary missions, science labs, and materials-processing payloads. The space agency is now working on manifests to accommodate those who want to launch payloads in the late 1980s and early 1990s. Many have expressed an interest since the shuttle began flying a year ago.

Columbia's third flight, which ended Tuesday, "advanced the shuttle a significant step toward operational missions," said flight director Neil Hutchinson. After one more test flight, scheduled for late June, the spacecraft will be ready.

The final shakedown flight is set to last seven days. It is to land at a dry lake bed at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., providing the final confidence for bringing the ship back to a 15,000-foot concrete runway near the Cape Canaveral launch site. Edwards was washed out by rain for Flight 3 and Columbia returned to another desert runway at White Sands Missile Range in New Mexico.

In the cargo bay for the fourth flight will be a classified Defense Department payload, reportedly testing infrared sensors for a future spy satellite.

Asked about secrecy surrounding that package, NASA's Glynn Lunney said Monday: "We're flying a DOD payload. Other than that I won't say anything about it, per our arrangement with them. We will fly a lot of DOD payloads, and we'll tell you the same thing on each."

Twenty-five of those 70 flights have been reserved by the Pentagon to carry up reconnaissance, military communications, navigation and other satellites and to test space weapons such as laser beams.

Columbia's first commercial flight is set for Nov. 11, the cargo a pair of communications satellites to be lofted into orbit for Satellite Business Systems Inc. and Telesat of Canada.

Meanwhile, the second shuttle, Challenger, is to make its debut next Jan. 20, hauling into space a large tracking and data-relay satellite, one of two that will provide almost constant communications between spaceships and Mission Control in Houston, eliminating the need for most of NASA's expensive network of ground stations.

Lunney said Challenger could be launched in December, but its satellite and a new lightweight external fuel tank probably won't be ready.

Four shuttles are being built, and the space agency and Pentagon will ask later this year for money to start a fifth. The Discovery is to be flying in January 1984 and the Atlantis in April 1985.

The cost of renting a cargo bay for a single flight is $35 million until 1985, when the prices will increase to about $50 million. If there is more than one user, they split the cost. A user can launch a payload on the shuttle for as little as a fourth of the cost on conventional throwaway rockets.

The first of several Spacelab launches is set for Sept. 30, 1983. Spacelab will serve as a reusable laboratory for as many as four scientists or medical experts. A huge space telescope will be orbited from Challenger and the Galileo space probe will be dispatched from Atlantis, both in 1985.

The Air Force is building a second shuttle launch complex at Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif. Discovery is to use it first, hauling a military satellite into orbit on Oct. 25, 1985, according to the current schedule.

That schedule calls for two more launches in 1982, six in 1983, 11 in 1984, 16 in 1985, 18 in 1986 and 16 through Sept. 15, 1987.

NASA later this year will request funds to start development of a space station to be used for scientific, military and industrial projects. The shuttle, capable of lifting up to 65,000 pounds in its bay, would be the ferry ship for building materials, construction workers and station occupants.

Christopher C. Kraft, director of NASA's Johnson Space Center in Houston, said if money is approved for the project in fiscal year 1984, "we could have a basic modular station up in seven to eight years."

Kraft predicted the present shuttle design will be flying for 30 years. Each of the vehicles is designed for 100 roundtrips into orbit.

"By 1990 we might start thinking about a follow-on vehicle," he said. "We could probably develop a derivative of the shuttle that would lift 200,000 pounds."

Hopeful News in Medicine

A vaccine against hepatitis-B infections has just been accepted by the Food and Drug Administration. The vaccine, derived from human plasma, has been examined with extreme care and found to be highly effective and safe in a number of well-documented clinical studies.

Hepatitis-B was once called serum hepatitis and is considered to be the most serious of the viral types of hepatitis.

In the study recently reported in The New England Journal of Medicine high risk patients were given three doses of the vaccine. The frequency of the occurrence of acute hepatitis was reduced by about 93 percent. The vaccine is given in a course of three injections.

At the present time, the vaccine is recommended for high risk groups. Doctors, dentists, surgeons, nurses, laboratory workers and paramedical workers will benefit from this new protective vaccine.

The vaccine is a testimonial to dedicated scientists who ceaselessly have been trying to find the answer to the problems associated with hepatitis-B infections.

It is expected that the reduction of cases of hepatitis-B infections will eventually reduce the occurrence of cancer of the liver sometimes associated with this condition.

The safety of children in automobiles has become a national priority. Each year about 2,000 children under the age of 5 are killed in vehicular accidents. Close to 80,000 children are injured.

Pressure exerted by doctors and health agencies on automobile manufacturers will induce them to incorporate safety devices in automobiles so that so many lives will not be destroyed because of neglect and carelessness.

A massive campaign through educational media, newspapers, magazines, and television can establish safety with new types of restraints. Legislation is imperative if we are to save the lives of these children.

A relatively new substance called retinoids already has shown great promise in the prevention, control and cure of certain cancers of the skin.

Retinoids, closely related chemically to vitamin A, has been used in Switzerland on experimental animals.

The early work has been duplicated in some specially chosen human cases.

The toxic side effects of the retinoids have been minimized. It is expected that before long the Food and Drug Administration will make the drug available.

SPEAKING OF YOUR HEALTH... Children have a right to be afraid in a new doctor's office. Impatience with them at this time tends to exaggerate their fears and makes future visits more difficult. A few extra minutes of caring to establish a warm relationship spares the "coronaries" of the doctor, nurses, and, yes, even the parent.

Dr. Coleman welcomes questions from readers. Please write to him in care of this newspaper.

Pets May Enjoy Health Insurance

MONTICELLO, N.Y. (AP)

— Only cats and dogs qualify, but New York residents who want an extra measure of protection for their four-legged car chasers and tree-climbers can invest in pet health insurance starting next month.

Starting April 27, the Monticello-based Frontier Insurance Co. will offer dog and cat owners the opportunity to insure their household pets against accidents or illness.

Company literature, soon to be cropping up in supermarkets and veterinarians' offices across the state, shows a picture of a dog and cat.

"Pet health insurance," it says, "because they're family too."

The premiums will cost $87.50 a year for a dog and $77.50 a year for a cat, said Walter Rhulen, president of Frontier Insurance.

But hamsters, goldfish, parakeets apparently are bad risks. Rhulen says his firm has judged cats and dogs the only household animals that need health insurance.

He said he has a cat and dog who visit the vet, and a pet python who has never been to the vet.

Profiles In Pride And Performance

Chris Howell

Chris Howell, a takeoff man in the finishing department, epitomizes the proud, concerned employee who means so much to our company. He's a member of one of our MAP teams (Maximizing Attitude and Performance), an employee-oriented program aimed at capitalizing on each employee's interest in doing a quality job.

Chris wanted a means of reminding himself and his fellow workers about quality problems discussed during weekly meetings. He designed a portable billboard that can be placed in the work area. He submitted his idea to his MAP team, the Pro-spectors, and they wholeheartedly endorsed it.

Now, when a quality problem is isolated and solved, Chris' bill board serves as a constant reminder.

Chris joined us in 1968. He and his wife, Kay, have one child.

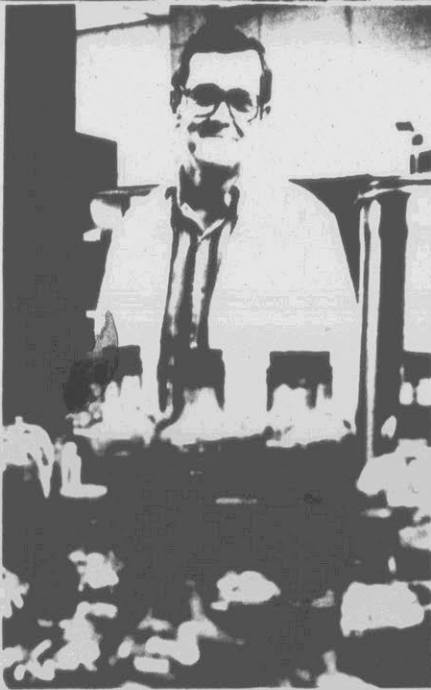

Janie Perry

Janie Perry is a quality assurance auditor, charged with random sampling the giant rolls of fabric directly from the knitting machines before they are dyed.

If she finds a defect in a fabric roll, she immediately checks the machine it came from to see if the flaw continues. If it does, the machine is shut down and steps are taken to correct it.

"I get an opportunity to save our company a lot of money," says Janie, a 14-year Farmville plant employee. "By stopping defects in the knitting department, we reduce the chances of them multiplying while going through the rest of manufacturing."

Janie puts a lot of pride and effort into her job and the results show in our marketplace.

Fred Johnson

Color is king in the fashion world and Fred Johnson, a laboratory color matcher makes sure that when a customer requests a shade, we give him what he wants.

Fred, a 13-year C&A employee also develops new dyeing procedures and tests dyestuffs to assure consistency and colorfastness.

But keeping tabs on colors isn't enough for Fred. He also serves as Mr. Goodwrench in the lab, patching anything from a stapler to a dyeing machine.

He's active in his church, too. He drives a Sunday School bus, sings in the choir and is a past deacon.

He and his wife, Emma Lou, have a daughter, Freddie, a sophomore at Meredith College in Raleigh.

Some Defy Israel's Deadline On Evacuating

Disavow N.C. Problem With Generator Tubes

By The Associated Press
A report by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission says there is an "extremely low probability" that problems with weak steam generator tubes at nuclear plants in the Carolinas could lead to a melt down.

The NRC released a report by its staff Tuesday saying the weak tubes are "virtually impossible" to fix, and that tube problems are responsible for about 23 percent of the nuclear plant shutdowns that are unrelated to scheduled refueling nationwide.

Spokesmen for Carolina Power and Light Co. and Duke Power Co. say they have no serious problems with the tubes at plants in North Carolina and South Carolina.

The report says there is an "extremely low probability" that tube ruptures in more than one generator at a plant could cause "ineffective re-flooding" of the radioactive core, which in turn could lead to melting of the uranium fuel.

Two of those plants cited in the report are Duke Power's Oconee nuclear station at Lake Keowee, S.C., and CP&L's Robinson plant near Hartsville, S.C.

Duke Power spokeswoman Mary Cartwright says the 20 steam leaks at Oconee's three nuclear reactors since 1973 and 1974 are not an "inordinate number."

"We don't have a serious problem (at the Oconee plant)," Ms. Cartwright said, adding that Duke is constantly reviewing the steam generators to ensure that leaks are repaired as soon as they are discovered.

CP&L officials said there is nothing new in the NRC report.

"Steam generator problems are very well studied and well publicized in the nuclear industry," said Lynn W. Eury, senior vice president of operations. "We continue to do our own analysis and monitor others in the industry."

Another CP&L spokesman, Mac Harris, says the utility plans to replace the Robinson plant steam generator with a more modern generator around 1984 or 1985. He also said the utility has planned to make changes in the chemical treatment of water used in the steam generators.

Harris said there have been four steam generator leaks since 1977 at the Robinson plant which required shutdowns.

Ms. Cartwright said Duke is working with the Oconee plant's designer, Babcock & Wilcox, on two possible methods to prevent tube leaks.

The firms are testing "lane blockers" that would slow the rate of water flow along open lanes in steam generators, reducing vibration that causes most leaks. Officials also are considering chemically treating water to prevent the build-up of deposits on tubes which weaken them, she said.

Relief From Pension Fund

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina Retirement Systems, a pension fund for state employees, has agreed to buy $100 million in securities from the North Carolina Mortgage Investment Corp. in an effort to boost the state's housing industry.

Chris Moore, director of a division that manages the $5.5 million pension fund, said the securities would pay market interest rates.

He said the investment will provide a new source of funds for mortgage lenders and home buyers in the state.

The program will allow savings and loan associations and mortgage bankers to make mortgage loans and sell those loans to the state pension funds. The lenders receive a loan origination fee and a fee to handle monthly mortgage payments, and keep records on the loans.

Principal and interest from monthly payments will go to the pension fund.

Moore said the risk is no greater than that on other investments the pension fund owns and is even less than some other investments, such as common stocks.

YAMIT, Occupied Sinai (AP) — Opponents of Israel's withdrawal from the Sinai defied a midnight deadline to leave, but the army made no move to remove them.

Leaders of the Stop the Withdrawal movement claim they have 3,000 squatters in the area ready to resist attempts to eject them, but they declined to disclose their tactics. Many movement members are non-resident Israelis who arrived recently to fight the Sinai handover to Egypt.

Only some 60 of Yamit's original 2,000 settlers remain in the sand-swept desert outpost. They marked the withdrawal deadline with tearful parties and reminiscences before moving on. They have been given until April 15 to move out.

Israel is to return the final third of the occupied Sinai to Egypt on April 25, under terms of their 1979 peace treaty.

Armed troops patrolled the town's streets in groups of three or four. But no attempt has been made so far to dislodge the ultra-nationalists who have occupied an air raid shelter and roofs of buildings, some protected by sandbags and stocked with food and even portable toilets.

Under no circumstances must we raise a hand against a soldier," said Bennie Katzover, addressing several hundred of his followers through a bullhorn at this Sinai town Wednesday.

The militants did not prevent the evacuation of Yamit settlers from proceeding Wednesday. Trucks laden with furniture headed north to Israel. Banks closed for good at noon Wednesday, the supermarket sold its last stock and sand swept across roads strewn with discarded possessions.

The Israeli military declared Sinai a restricted area as of midnight Wednesday and allowed only actual settlers with special permission to pass through army road-blocks.

A few settlers are not bitter, saying the personal price they are paying is worth peaceful relations with Egypt.

"You know what I would like to do?" asked Max Dektor, 70, Yamit's oldest male resident, as he swept his insurance office for the last time. "I'd like to write on the wall for whoever comes here next that I hope

"I am very happy that the army has taken no action yet," said Geula Cohen, the firebrand right-wing member of Parliament, who defiantly moved to Yamit to help fight the withdrawal.

About a dozen nationalists today fortified the observation deck atop an 81 foot memorial to Israeli soldiers killed in capturing the Sinai from Egypt in the 1967 Arab-Israeli war. Troops made no move to dislodge them.

But Israeli navy gunboats turned back five boats that sailed from Tel Aviv with about 30 nationalists aboard trying to get around the army lines sealing off Yamit.

Arrest Made In Break-In

Pitt County deputies arrested a local man on breaking, entering and larceny charges Tuesday after farm workers observed a break-in at a Route 4, Greenville, residence and then chased the suspect.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said his department was notified around 8:30 a.m. Tuesday that several people working on a farm near Bruce had seen someone enter the home of Major Streeter. He said the observers reported that they followed the suspect to the Falkland area and observed someone throwing objects out of the vehicle as it traveled along N.C. 43.

Tyson said the workers told deputies the vehicle turned around and returned to Falkland where an arrest was made. He said Franklin Rose Leak, 26, of 1216 Davenport St. was charged with breaking, entering and larceny. Bond for Leak was set at $500.

Tyson, who said that an automobile operated by Leak was impounded by officers, reported that two rifles and a hedge clipper were recovered. He said an investigation was continuing.

The boundaries of the new district still are uncertain, but it is expected to encompass parts of nine Florida counties along the Atlantic coast.

Much Like His Old 'Bandstand'

WASHINGTON (AP) — It was almost like another episode of American Bandstand at the Smithsonian's National Museum of America when entertainer Dick Clark presented a selection of No. 1 hit records for the last 25 years.

The host of the TV program also presented the museum Wednesday with the original bandstand lectern.

As part of an exhibition that's open to the public, Clark, 53, also contributed black and white photographs showing teen-agers waiting in line to dance on the show, which Clark began hosting in 1956, and entertainer Chubby Checker with his hit record "The Twist."

Former Justice At Alma Mater

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Former Supreme Court Justice Potter Stewart is stepping out of retirement to sit as a justice-in-residence at his alma mater.

Stewart will teach and meet informally with law students and undergraduates at Yale University next month and, during his stay, will sit on a panel to judge the Law School Moot Court and award the Thurman Arnold argument prize.

A graduate of Yale College in 1937 and Yale Law School in 1941, Stewart, 67, retired from the court last summer after 23 years as a justice.

Mexico's Clock Ticking Toward Day Of Decision

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Mexican clock, the "tiempo Mexicano" that once moved at so stately a pace, is ticking faster these days, down toward hours of decision.

Pressures are growing: A booming population packs the teeming cities or languishes in the bone-dry countryside. Food production lags. Foreign debt mounts while Mexican oil goes begging for buyers. Fire is spreading just over the horizon in Central America.

Three generations after their revolution, the people of Mexico are approaching elections that could pose a challenge to the long-unchallenged dominance of the Institutional Revolutionary Party (PRI).

No one expects the party, a broad-based monument to political pragmatism, to crumble into ruins, like some Mayan pyramid. But forces are converging that could begin to chip away at the PRI's power, not least of all the party's own decision to try to ease the pressures by liberalizing the tightly closed political process.

As a result, five parties besides the PRI are running candidates in the July 4 presidential and congressional elections, the most important of them a five-party, Communist-led coalition called the United Mexican Socialist Party (PSUM) and the conservative National Action Party (PAN).

The PRI candidate is economic administrator Miguel de la Madrid Hurtado, handpicked by President Jose Lopez Portillo, who is constitutionally barred from a second six-year term.

Lopez Portillo ran unopposed in 1976, and De la Madrid is expected to win easily this time. But one PRI senator predicted privately that the leftist PSUM may win 20 percent of the vote and the PAN 15 percent.

Strategists for the PSUM, novices at presidential campaigning, simply shrug their shoulders at prognostications.

"The important thing is that we're able to speak to the people, to millions, to build a political army," Fernando Pineda Menez, a PSUM propagandist, said in an interview.

Ordinary Mexicans sound resigned and cynical about the election process. If they do not abstain, many say, they will vote for the PRI, because that is what everyone does.

The left is trying to reach millions with the message that Mexico's new age of oil is raising but not fulfilling expectations.

The contrasts of rich and poor in Mexico remain striking. In Netzahuacoyotl, the greatest of the "ciudades perdidas," the "lost cities" that ring the capital, dust devils whirl down the gully-riven dirt "streets," adding grime to adobe hovels and corrugated-metal shanties where 3 million or more Mexicans — no one is sure of the number — survive amid scrawny piglets, garbage dumps and excrement.

Ten miles away, in the capital's affluent western and southern suburbs, the rich — new and old — dine in the cool elegance of hacienda restaurants or browse among chic imported fashions in a sparkling new shopping center.

In recent years Mexico has sped along with one of the world's few rapidly expanding economies, thanks to newly developed petroleum reserves that make it the world's fourth-largest producer of oil and gas.

As recently as a year ago, Mexican leaders were promising that oil would make this a "permanently prosperous country."

But the world oil glut that developed last year has shaken Mexico's financial self-confidence. This non-OPEC producer's oil exports dropped sharply and have recovered only at lower prices. The government has lost an estimated $5 billion in the process, money needed to help pay off some $50 billion in foreign debt, the biggest loan burden carried by any developing country.

The long-term economic soundness of such a major petroleum producer is unquestionable, the Mexicans argue. But the current economic profile is ragged in important spots:

— Those without jobs or with little work are believed to amount to one-third to one-half the work force. The flood of illegal immigrant workers into the United States attests to the severity of Mexican unemployment.

— Inflation in February hit 53 percent on an annual basis.

— Projections for growth of the gross national product in 1982 have been scaled down from 10 percent, forecast in a 1979 economic plan, to under 5 percent.

— Once agriculturally self-sufficient, Mexico has become a net importer of food, in part because it has turned more toward export crops and away from such staples as corn and rice. Lopez Portillo has launched an ambitious plan to try to restore self-sufficiency.

At the core of Mexico's problems is a population growing at one of the world's highest rates. It has quadrupled since 1946, to 72 million from 18 million. It will pass 100 million by the year 2000.

A government crusade for family planning in this Roman Catholic nation has reduced the growth rate to 3 percent a year from 3.6 percent in 1976. But that is still three times the U.S. rate.

Lopez Portillo's multi-billion-dollar development plan is dedicated to building new industries to export more manufactured goods and end Mexico's reliance on oil sales. But jobs cannot be created quickly enough, the president has had to trim his budget because of the shortfall in oil revenues, and the Mexican system itself is balking.

The Mexican railroads are badly deteriorated, and the few seaports had only 34 berthing spots when the development plan was announced three years ago. Official corruption is a way of life. A lack of skilled workers hobbles development in many sectors.

The PRI, founded 53 years ago as an amalgamation of victorious revolutionary forces, has thrived because of its adaptability, its knack for bringing ideas and dissidents of both left and right into the government fold.

As a result, the political-economic system is a uniquely Mexican hybrid of socialism and capitalism, with the establishment party deeply involved in both. The opposition conservatives rail against the 800 state-run enterprises as money wasters, and the leftists against the close ties the PRI elite has with Mexican big business.

The governing party's adaptation process is under way again in this election year.

"There is much more debate within the party these days," said the PRI senator, who spoke with a reporter on condition he not be identified. He himself belongs to a faction seeking still greater state intervention in the economy.

"The party is becoming more open," he said. "It reflects the society. The Mexican people are becoming more aware."

The PRI government recently began the process of raising minimum wages — which are now the equivalent of between $4.50 and $6.20 a day — to help offset a currency devaluation that has fed inflation. Boosting minimum wages, the standard for millions of Mexicans, will undercut the leftists' campaign.

"Mexico is a country that has developed a very intelligent governing class," said Joel Vicente, a PSUM leader in the southern state of Oaxaca, in a nod to his political foes. "After all, they have managed to keep power for 50 years."

But the time-tested PRI system is racing the clock.

Professor Bruce Bagley, a Latin American specialist at Johns Hopkins University's School of Advanced International Studies in Washington, D.C., says inflation, faltering oil revenues, unemployment and population growth are a potent combination.

"All those things are coming together so that, given the expectations that occurred in Mexico with the oil boom, and the inability of the system to deliver, we have the syndrome of growing discontent, cynicism, disbelief in the ability of the PRI to manage," Bagley said.

It is not an immediate threat, but one that will grow through the 1980s, he said.

If it is to grow, it must take root among the "campesinos," the tens of millions of peasants who are scratching away at the stubborn soil or who have given up and are searching for work in jam-packed Mexico City, Guadalajara or Monterrey.

Six solid reasons why Wachovia is the best choice for your IRA

Your Individual Retirement Account is one of the most important investments you'll ever make. So you'll want to think carefully about where you choose to make that investment. Consider these six advantages of choosing Wachovia.

1. Wachovia pays top money market rates

The interest rates Wachovia pays you are based on current money market rates, assuring you top interest rates for the life of your IRA. Compare them with the rates being paid anywhere.

Example: Current Rate on Wachovia IRA's Invested in the 18-Month Accumulator Variable Rate Fund.

14.15%

Per Annum Rate

Other investment options are available. For the current rate call your Personal Banker. Substantial penalties required for withdrawals prior to age 59½. Federal regulations also require a substantial interest penalty for early withdrawal of a time deposit.

2. Wachovia gives you flexible investment options

You choose from a variety of variable rate and fixed rate options for investing your deposits, depending on the amount you wish to deposit. What's more, you can change to a different option later if you wish. Your Personal Banker will explain when and how, and also explain the different options available for new accounts and rollover accounts.

Questions about IRA?
Call a Wachovia
Personal Banker.

3. Wachovia lets you open your IRA with any amount

There's no minimum for opening a Wachovia IRA. And no minimum for additional deposits. There's no fixed schedule for additional deposits, either. If you wish to skip an entire year or more, you can. You add as much as you like, when you like, up to the legal limit of $2,000 per year in each account. A married couple may have two IRA's, if both work, and invest up to $4,000. If one spouse is not employed, the limit is $2,250 for the couple.

4. Wachovia charges no investment fees

Unlike many other companies, Wachovia makes no charge for opening your IRA, and no annual charge for managing it. All your funds are put to work earning interest for your retirement.

5. Wachovia won't retire before you do

Wachovia's record of financial stability goes back more than a century. You know we'll be there managing your IRA properly whether you need us for 10 years, 20 years, or 50. And to add to your peace of mind, each Wachovia depositor's funds are insured up to $100,000 by the F.D.I.C.

6. You have a Personal Banker at Wachovia

At Wachovia, you don't deal with an institution, you deal with an individual; your own Personal Banker. That way, you know the name and telephone number to call with any question regarding your account. You don't end up talking to everybody at the bank before you get the answers you need.

Think about it. At Wachovia, you get top money market rates, flexibility of investment, no opening minimum, no management fee, security for now and the future and your own Personal Banker. Compare all that with any other source. Then come in and talk with a Personal Banker at Wachovia this week.

TV Docu-drama Keeps High Level Of Tension

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP)—In the hands of the right filmmakers, the recreation of an event can reproduce the same emotions precipitated by the original happening. Tonight's docudrama, "The Saving of the President" on ABC's "20-20," achieves that high level of tension and involvement. One year after the assassination attempt on President Reagan, America is privy to a gripping re-enactment of the measures taken by the staff of George Washington University Hospital to save the president's life. It's a medical thriller, with a cameo appearance by Reagan himself. It remains riveting, even with the details and outcome so freshly a part of the public's historical record.

The technique used by Emmy-award documentarians Holly and Paul Fine of station WJLA in Washington is to have the real surgeons and nurses recreate their medical teamwork on actor Donald Williams, who's portraying the stricken president. As the cameras and microphones capture the bustling activity in the emergency and operating rooms, the voices of the same hospital personnel are recalling their recollections from last March 30.

It's their narration, and the effect is a more refined version of reality, with no third person guiding us along. We're the witnesses tonight, just as we were witnesses to history one year ago.

As the president is being wheeled into the operating room, we see him passing a concerned nurse. Her voice recalls her thoughts at the time: "He looks real gray. I wonder if he'll make it."

At another point, one nurse steadies herself by saying: "I'm a nurse doing my job." Then she can tell the president of the United States to trust her to help him breathe properly.

What comes through so vividly and makes "The Saving of the President" so thoroughly engrossing is that these are real people doing their jobs, saving lives. One lab technician comforts the scared patient with a reassuring touch on the arm.

The film begins at the Washington Hilton Hotel. Although the real footage of the shooting exists, the Fines chose to re-enact it, giving the dramatic production a greater continuity and integrity. The side camera angle of Secret Service agent Jerry Parr pushing the president into the limousine is the same video image that's been fused into our memories.

But then the camera moves inside the limo, causing an agonizing feeling as the president is jerked back and forth in slow motion. The real Reagan voice recalls how, in retrospect, he was surprised how he hadn't felt the pain of being shot right away.

The real Reagan's one appearance came late in the film. The doctors who treated him made a house call several weeks after he was released from the hospital. The principals re-enacted that White House scene recently, and Reagan asks if he's now on his own blood supply after all the transfusions.

This is a man who could joke about party affiliations while on the operating table and under an oxygen mask. It's a rare trait, one that impressed the medical professionals. "The man was obviously celebrating life," one said.

But "The Saving of the President" drives home how death was not that far away. The final hospital scene has the stark image of the president in the solitude of the recovery room. The only sound is the "beep, beep," of his life signs.

George Washington University, with the production assistance of WJLA (the ABC affiliate), owns the film. For tonight's showing, and a later repeat, ABC has agreed to donate $115,000 to the tuition fund of the George Washington School of Medicine.

PHILADELPHIA (AP)— Actor James Stewart, once her leading man, summed it up for everyone: "She's the top of the class, with the accent on class."
Philadelphia gave a Hollywood-style tribute Wednesday night to native daughter Grace Kelly, better known today as princess of Monaco.

Huge spotlights pierced the night sky and a sell-out crowd of 970 people applauded the former film star. Tickets were $150 each.

Frank Sinatra was there, along with Bob Hope, Stewart Granger, Brian Aherne, Ricardo Montalban, Arlene Dahl and Rita Gam.

"You are sensational," Sinatra said, quoting a song he sang when he co-starred 26 years ago with Miss Kelly in the movie, "High Society." Hope acted as master of ceremonies.

Gowned in yellow silk taffeta, her blond hair braided in a bun in back and then carried across the top of her head like a crown, the 52-year-old princess walked to the stage of the University of Pennsylvania's Annenberg Center for the Performing Arts as the crowd gave her a standing ovation.

"What can I say?" she said, her voice muted by a cold. "I am overwhelmed. I am so touched. I would like to hug every one of you. I am so full of love."

The gala party featured clips from most of her 11 movies, including "The Country Girl," for which she won the Academy Award Oscar for best actress in 1954.

The crowd later dined on turkey, roast beef and fancy cakes and fruits, drank champagne and danced to the music of Peter Duchin.

The party was the kickoff for the Grace Kelly Film Festival, to be held the next four days at the Annenberg Theater. But the princess won't stick around to see the films. She was to fly back to Europe today to Prince Ranier III and their children who couldn't be here "because they were busy with other things."

Earlier in the day she met briefly with reporters, posed for photographers, and complained a little that movies aren't like they were two decades ago.

"Everything goes today," she said. "There's a different style now. There are many people making films who are interested only in the commercial aspects, and not in the artistic aspects. It is not necessary for so much sex and violence. The way of life has changed."

"No one really looks forward (to growing old)," she said, "but there it is. So far, it is not too bad."

Could she be enticed to return to the screen?

"I'm very delighted, touched and flattered that people ask, but it is very unlikely," she said. "Acting is a full-time job, and I don't have the time."

Entertainers Opposing Nukes

NEW YORK (AP)—A group of entertainers who believe they can make a difference are campaigning for an end to nuclear weapons.

"I believe we have just as much credibility as the president. After all, he was an actor," choreographer Eliot Feld said Wednesday.

Author and cartoonist Jules Feiffer said he was participating in the project "because I'm scared."

The group, Performing Artists for Nuclear Disarmament, also includes singers Harry Belafonte, Judy Collins, Carly Simon and James Taylor; actresses Jill Clayburgh, Meryl Streep and Colleen Dewhurst; producer Joseph Papp; directors Robert Altman and Arthur Penn; and playwright John Guare.

Among other things, the group plans a children's rally in Central Park in May, performances in conjunction with a United Nations disarmament conference in June, talk show appearances and festivals at small theaters.

Has Suspicions Restaurant Is Offering Nickel Lunch Over Proposals

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina Insurance Commissioner John Ingram said he hopes proposals made by two key legislators to reward safe drivers are sincere and not "another Trojan horse."

Ingram, who made his remarks at a press conference Wednesday, said he was not suggesting the chairmen were insincere. However, he did accuse one of the bills sponsors, Rep. Mary Seymour, D-Guilford, of "bottling up" a bill he supported in the 1981 General Assembly aimed at eliminating surcharges for drivers with clean records.

Ingram said he was "pleased that they have changed their position and now want to help the safe driver."

Ingram said he was not ready yet to take a stance on the changes offered by the chairmen of the legislature's Insurance Laws Study Committee — Seymour and Sen. Robert Wynne, D-Wake.

He said he could not comment on it since he had not had the opportunity to study the proposal. Although two state Insurance Department officials attended the committee meeting Tuesday, Ingram said he had not been in contact with them about the proposals.

If the committee approves the changes at its next meeting, the proposal would go to the General Assembly for its June session.

Wynn and Mrs. Seymour proposed a series of changes including one that allows companies wide discretion in the classification of drivers for rate-setting purposes. Another would set up a rate system allowing drivers with clean records to get a discount below the standard rate.

"My concern is for all drivers of the state — certainly the safe drivers," said Mrs. Seymour, who also said she thought Ingram's remarks were "just a political statement on his part."

Ingram said that allowing many more categories for driver classifications — the law currently allows four main classifications — could reduce competition by making it more difficult to compare prices.

Ingram charged that the insurance companies were not charging high enough rates for drunk driving, although later admitted he did not know what drunk drivers are charged.

By MÀRCIA DUNN

PITTSBURGH (AP) — There may be no such thing as a free lunch these days, but how about lunch for only a nickel?

The owners of a restaurant about 20 miles southeast of Pittsburgh are offering customers a 5 cent lunch featuring such milltown fare as hot dogs and sauerkraut, cabbage and noodles, and macaroni salad.

LaDonna's Restaurant, on busy U.S. 30 in North Huntingdon Township, cooked up the low cost meals six weeks ago to mark its 20th anniversary.

Owner Tony Bonazzo, 72, decided to keep his no-frills specials on the weekday menu to help western Pennsylvania's unemployed — and to whip up a little lunchtime traffic, too.

"We've gotten calls asking, 'Did one of the numbers fall off your sign?'" said Ann Alexander, Bonazzo's daughter who also is the restaurant's day manager. "And we say, 'No, it's true.' Then they say, 'What's the gimmick?'"

"It's been word-of-mouth saying, 'Yes, it's true, it's good food, they're not giving you garbage. They give good portions,'" boasted Mrs. Alexander, 43.

A nickel lunch, even unpretentious cabbage and noodles, draws hungry customers. Mrs. Alexander said the lunchtime crowd has tripled to about 150 people a day and includes laid-off industrial workers and striking employees of a nearby Westinghouse Air Brake Co. plant.

The crowds generated by the lunches has even helped ease unemployment; the restaurant has hired two more waitresses and another cook to handle the new customers.

Included in that crowd Wednesday was John Zoller, 37, an unemployed machine operator from Irwin who was able to take his family out for a meal, thanks to the restaurant's policy.

"The money's a little tight, the truck's been broken down and I don't go out much. (Nickel lunches) get the family out of the house and it helps out," Zoller said.

Zoller ate pizza bagels with his wife, Beverly, his youngest son, Joseph, and an unidentified friend.

His tab for three specials came to 15 cents. But he ran up his bill up to $7.58 when his party ordered onion soup, not on the special, four beverages and four pieces of pie at regular prices.

Unemployed workers such as Zoller are one reason the restaurant is serving up a bargain, Mrs. Alexander said.

"The nickel lunches aren't going to make us money," but the restaurant earns a profit when customers lured by the low prices come back for regular-priced lunches and dinners, she said.

Mrs. Alexander and her family plan to continue offering the nickel lunches.

"You turn on the news and you hear all these problems, the economy is bad, no one has really anything to smile about. And what can we do about it?" she said. "We've put a smile on peoples' faces, including our employees."

Services Set

The following services have been scheduled at Holy Mission Church, 905 Dickinson Ave.:

Friday, 7:30 p.m., praise service with Missionary Sandra Bryant of Bell Chapel Holiness Church as the speaker.

Sunday, 3 p.m., Eldress Ella Mae Brown and new Covenant Temple Holiness Church will render services.

Monday, 8 p.m., bible study.

The public is invited, according to the pastor, Eldress Shirley Atkinson.

FOCUS

A Gloomy Cloud Reappears

Next to nuclear bombs, perhaps the most devastating and indiscriminate weapon of destruction devised by man is nerve gas. One drop of this odorless, colorless material on the skin is lethal. Attacking the central nervous system, its chemicals cause all muscles to contract and keep them from relaxing. Sweating, blindness, defecation, vomiting, paralysis and ultimately suffocation occur. Once released, the gas is lethal to any soldier or civilian, man, woman, child or animal it contacts — unless they are protected by special suits and masks. Although the U.S. stopped producing such weapons in 1969, the '83 budget allots $30 million to revive the program.

DO YOU KNOW — What is the name of the infamous poisonous gas used in World War I?

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — Herbert Hoover was President during the stock market crash of 1929.

Conferee Avers Nukes 'Needed'

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — The chief of the Netherlands defense staff says a balance of conventional forces and nuclear weapons is necessary as a deterrent to aggression and to potential enemies of NATO nations.

Gen. Cornelis De Jager, on a tour of U.S. military bases, said Wednesday that NATO must always be concerned with war prevention because of the possibility that conventional war may escalate into nuclear war.

"You can never separate one from the other as long as the weapons are there," De Jager said.

De Jager says the decision on the actual placement of NATO missiles on Dutch soil remains in limbo. Dutch Premier Andries van Agt ran into political trouble because of it during May 1981 elections. At issue was the deployment of U.S. cruise missiles on Dutch soil, a move van Agt endorsed.

De Jager says the preparation of sites for the missiles will continue, although it was difficult because of the Netherlands dense population.

"The people feel that they only have to make the choice of, 'Will I put it in my front garden or my back garden.' Most do not have gardens and that's the actual problem," said De Jager.

De Jager said he favors conventional weapons rather than nuclear, but that it is necessary to have the latter as a deterrent.

"We know now that putting away nuclear weapons might make it attractive for an opponent to start something because of the balance in force," De Jager said. "Get away with those nuclear weapons," at this very moment are making war more possible."

While De Jager was saying nuclear weapons were necessary, the president of the National Council of Churches, Bishop James Armstrong, was in Greensboro saying disarmament was necessary.

Approve Relief In Price-Fixing Cases

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Judiciary Committee Wednesday approved legislation that would provide millions of dollars in financial relief to five companies that have lost price-fixing cases.

The awards follow nearly a year of intense lobbying by competing corporate interest.

North Carolina corporations that stand to lose portions of court-awarded damages they have won strongly oppose the measure and Sen. John East, R-N.C., voted against it.

Burlington Industries of Greensboro is one of those corporations. It has charged that the legislation would cause the company to lose all but $7.5 million of the $21 million it was awarded in a civil suit against a Spartanburg, S.C., company. The bill, called the Antitrust Equal Enforcement Act, is sponsored by Judiciary Committee Chairman J. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C. It would change the federal antitrust laws so that companies that lost price-fixing cases would only be responsible for damages reflecting their share of the market in which the price fixing occurred.

The Committee voted 10-7 to make the measure retroactive, an amendment which drew argument from East.

He said he was opposed to granting retroactive relief to

Says Incident Was Misunderstanding

STATESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — An attorney for a black minister who claimed he was beaten and kicked by a white Statesville policeman says the incident was part of a "misunderstanding" after charges of resisting arrest against the minister were dismissed.

The Rev. Emmanuel Smith, 27, pleaded guilty in Iredell District Court Tuesday to driving 50 miles per hour in a 35-mph zone and failing to produce a driver's license. He was fined $25.

A charge of resisting arrest against Smith was dropped as part of an agreement between David W. Minor, assistant district attorney, and Smith's attorney, James E. Ferguson II of Charlotte.

"It was all part of a misunderstanding," Ferguson said, speaking for Smith.

Smith, minister of the United House of Prayer in Statesville, had claimed that policeman M.J. Grant assaulted him after stopping him for speeding on Feb. 1.

The accusation prompted a five-week investigation by a citizens panel appointed by Mayor John R. Kurfrees.

The panel cleared Grant of any wrongdoing, concluding that he had acted properly when he arrested Smith when Smith refused to cooperate.

Three other Statesville officers present during the incident denied that Grant struck Smith during a scuffle that ensued as Grant attempted to handcuff Smith.

Minor said after Tuesday's hearing that the charge of resisting arrest was dropped after Smith agreed to plead guilty to the traffic offenses and not to appeal the decision nor to file civil action.

Fear More Bodies From Haitian Boat

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) — All six known survivors of a Haitian shipwreck say only 10 people were aboard, but already 21 bodies have washed ashore and officials fear they might find more.

"We don't have any idea of how many more (bodies) are out there. So we're just sitting here watching the beach," said Patrolman John Ballard of Hillsboro Beach, where five bodies presumed to be those of would-be Haitian refugees have come ashore in the past three days. Authorities say the bodies of 21 people — 13 men, seven women and one whose sex is still unknown — have been recovered since 15-foot seas washed over Florida's southeast coast Sunday night, sinking the Esperancia. The bodies have been found along a 10-mile stretch of the exclusive Gold Coast from Highland Beach to Pompano Beach.

The wooden-hulled freighter left Port-au-Prince in northern Haiti on March 4. Engine trouble forced it to spend two weeks in the Bahamas before it set out for Miami Saturday. On Sunday night, the freighter was broken apart by pounding surf off Highland Beach in southern Palm Beach County.

Because of current shifts, authorities said, bodies from the wreck could continue to show up through today.

As the death toll climbed, the survivors stuck to their story that only 10 people were aboard. But the Coast Guard said Wednesday it had suspected all along the freighter was smuggling refugees to Florida.

Coast Guard officers in the cutter Ingham boarded the Esperancia Sunday morning because of their suspicions that more Haitian refugees might be aboard. But because the City's Housing Director Fired

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Greensboro Housing Authority's Board of Commissioners Wednesday fired Executive Director William C. Gordon, six days after it began looking into allegations of financial misuse.

Gordon, 48, who has been chief of the city's public housing agency the past 13 years, called the action "unjust" and said he was surprised.

Esperancia agreed to the boarding, officials didn't "go tapping on walls, banging on bulkheads, looking for places where they can hide." Under the federal government's interdiction policy, the Coast Guard would have needed permission from the Haitian government to conduct a full search of the vessel. The Coast Guard said the 10 Haitians seen aboard the vessel presented passports and told authorities they were on their way to Miami to deliver food. The Ingham followed the Haitian freighter, then a utility boat took up the trail. But bad weather forced the utility boat to turn back and, one hour later, rough surf tore the Esperancia to bits.
