Argentina Seizes British Island Colony

By DOUGLAS GRANT MINE
Associated Press Writer

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) - Argentine forces seized the British-ruled Falkland Islands early today and appointed an Argentine military governor to administer the disputed South Atlantic territory, the Argentine junta said.
A source who requested anonymity said there could have been "some injuries" among the 84 British marine defenders, but there was no official report of casualties or confirmation of an invasion from the British.
An earlier Argentine communique spoke of "armed combat," but the official Telam news agency said there were "no armed encounters."
The independent Argentine news agency DYN quoted a military source as saying between 4,000 and 5,000 Argentine troops took part in the occupation of the islands, including 800 marines who landed on the island of San Pedro in the South Georgias.

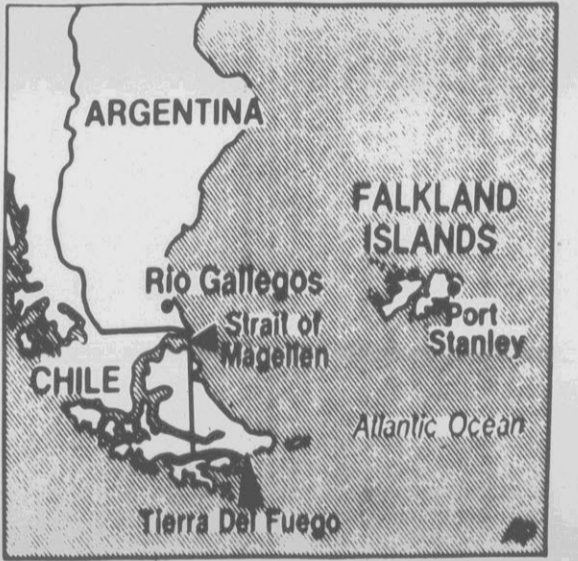

In Buenos Aires, citizens went about their business as usual, but in the city of Bahia Blanca, 400 miles south of the capital, sirens sounded and church bells rang in celebration. Last weekend, Argentines in the capital and other cities demonstrated against the junta because of economic problems.
"The exercise of Argentine sovereignty over all the island territory and air and sea space has been assured," the Argentine government said in a communique today.
"The government calls on the country's citizens to understand the deep and unmistakable national sentiment" in the decision to "convert into reality a legitimate right of the Argentine people which has been postponed, patiently and prudently, nearly 150 years."
The Interior Ministry said Argentina's chief of army operations, Gen. Mario Benjamin Menendez, has been appointed governor of the Falkland Islands, South Georgia and South Sandwich Islands. It also said that Gen. Osvaldo

Garcia has been appointed military commander on the islands.
The junta announced it would "guarantee the safety, lives property and rights of British citizens and English-speaking Argentines in the islands."
Argentine Foreign Minister Nicanor Costa Mendez told reporters the next step "will be to inform the United Nations of the events and explain the point of view of the Argentines."
Telam said Argentine marines had been flown to Port Stanley from the mainland city of Rio Gallegos, about 250 miles west of the disputed islands.
The pro-government daily La Nacion said the commandos stormed the airport shortly after midnight. The paper said reinforcements began arriving by air and sea two hours later.
The chain of islands is inhabited by about 1,800 people, most of them of British ethnic origin. They are a crown colony and have long been claimed by Argentina.
In London, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Cabinet held an emergency meeting to discuss the crisis.

Afterwards, Deputy Foreign Secretary Humphrey Atkins told the House of Commons:
"We shall sustain and defend the Falkland islands to the best of our ability." He did not elaborate on Britain's countermeasures.
In Washington, a White House spokesman said President Reagan telephoned Argentine President Leopoldo Galtieri several hours before the invasion to ask for restraint and express his "desire to see that hostilities be avoided."
The two leaders spoke through interpreters for 50 minutes.
Both Britain and Argentina announced that their national airlines were suspending flights to between their respective capitals.

Power Agency Board OKs Bond Sale

The board of commissioners of the North Carolina Eastern Municipal Power Agency has approved the sale of $400 million in bonds Thursday by the N.C. Local Government Commission.

The money will be used by NCEMPA to purchase ownership interests in seven Carolina Power & Light Co. generating units which are presently operating or under construction. Greenville is one of 32 municipalities represented by the power agency.

NCEMPA board chairman Simon Sitterson Jr., former mayor of Kinston, said the average interest on the tax-exempt bonds is 12.28 percent.

Since December 30, 1981, the agency has been providing all-requirements power to Greenville and 10 other municipalities formerly served at wholesale by Virginia Electric and Power Co. The agency will begin delivering all-requirements power to the remaining 21 participating municipalities now served at wholesale by CP&L immediately following the first closing, which is scheduled for April 21 in New York.

Over the next year, NCEMPA plans to issue an estimated $800 million in additional bonds and notes to complete its purchase with CP&L.

The agency will issue an estimated $2.6 billion in bonds and notes through 1993 to complete its acquisition and construction of all the units included in the joint project.

It is expected that over the next 20 years, the agency's power costs will be 5.5 to 6 percent lower than the cost of the same amount of power bought at wholesale from the private utilities. Engineering reports project cumulative monetary savings of $1.1 billion over the same period, and $6 billion over the life of the bonds (35 years).

The principal and interest on the bonds will be paid from revenues of the electric utilities operated by the member municipalities.

Greenville Utilities Commission director Charles Horne, now secretary-treasurer of the power agency, said GUC customers should save $195 million in the 20 years until 2003, as power agency customers.

He added that as a result of the switch from Vepco to the power agency, GUC has agreed to purchase the Vepco substation here. By purchasing the substation - for $2.66 million - Horne said GUC customers should realize another $50 to $75 million savings over the next 20 years.

The joint-ownership arrangement is advantageous to CP&L and its retail customers primarily because it lessens the pressure on the company to independently finance those units in which the agency acquires an ownership interest.

March Unemployment Hit 9 Percent

By MERRILL HARTSON
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Widespread layoffs and plant closings pushed the nation's unemployment rate to 9 percent last month, matching the nation's postwar high, the Labor Department reported today.

Just under 9.9 million people were out of work in March. Since last July, some 2 million have lost their jobs.

March's employment losses, the product of the continuing recession, cut across the spectrum of the population, with joblessness among adult males, traditionally the family breadwinners, equaling December's high of 7.9 percent, the department's Bureau of Labor Statistics said.

Unemployment among white-collar, blue-collar and full-time workers as a whole rose from February, when the national jobless rate was 8.8 percent.

The number of discouraged workers, who the government omits from the unemployment total because they have stopped looking for work, rose by 140,000 in the first three months of the year to 1.3 million, the highest level since the government began keeping that statistic in 1967.

The Labor Department said this increase was particularly felt among blacks, "who historically have accounted for a disproportionately large number of the discouraged." In the first quarter, blacks comprised nearly 40 percent of those who dropped out of the labor force because of frustration encountered in seeking jobs.

But rising unemployment, Treasury Secretary Donald Regan said Thursday, does not mean the administration's forecast of an economic recovery this summer is wrong.

Until business is firmly on the upswing, he said, hiring does not pick up. Rather, he added, employers tend to assign longer hours to existing workers before hiring new ones.

"Unemployment is what we call a lagging indicator," he said in an appearance on public television's

"MacNeil-Lehrer Report."

"It lags behind a recovery." At the White House, deputy presidential press secretary Larry Speakes said, "We find this, of course, disappointing and we are sensitive to any increase in unemployment. The president feels this keenly."

Private analysts say the absence of any clear signs of an early business turnaround indicates there will be no new hiring any time soon of the magnitude needed to provide relief from rising joblessness.

For March, total employment was 99.5 million, about 100,000 less than the month before.

When unemployment last reached 9 percent, at the height of the Arab oil embargo in May 1975, 8.4 million people were out of work, but the labor force was smaller then.

In 1938, 10.4 million people were out of work, the largest number ever, but the labor force was only 54.6 million.

The highest unemployment rate recorded since data was first compiled in 1940 was that year's average 14.6 percent. Monthly statistics were first compiled in 1948.

Some estimates say the rate was 25 percent in the worst of the Great Depression in the early 1930s.

The number of people who were forced to accept part-time work because of declining job opportunities grew by 150,000 in March, to a record of 5.7 million.

The Labor Department said the increase in joblessness among job losers, "most of whom were permanently terminated."

It said the number of people on layoffs has accounted for nearly all of the increase in unemployment since this recession began late last summer, and in March comprised over 57 percent of the unemployed.

Joblessness among blacks last month reached 18 percent, a record.

In testimony prepared for the congressional Joint Economic Committee later today, Janet Norwood, commissioner of labor statistics, said, "The seriousness of the employment situation for black workers is demonstrated by the fact that blacks comprise 10 percent of the population, but they constitute (approximately) 20 percent of the unemployed and nearly 40 percent of the discouraged."

The largest job losses took place in manufacturing, where employment fell by 130,000.

The department also said the number of people out of work for at least 15 weeks grew by 230,000 over the month.

For specific groups of workers, the department said:

-Joblessness among adult men rose from 7.6 percent to 7.9 percent.

-For adult women, unemployment grew from 7.6 percent to 7.9 percent.

-Teenagers, off slightly, from 22.3 percent to 21.9 percent.

-Whites, from 7.7 percent to 7.9 percent.

-Blacks, from 17.3 percent to 18 percent.

-Hispanics, from 12.6 percent to 12.7 percent.

-Full-time workers, 8.5 percent to 8.9 percent.

Joblessness among blue-collar workers reached 12.9 percent. The rate for white-collar employees was 4.9 percent.

Falkland People Team Up, Nab Theft Suspect

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

FALKLAND - Every community needs its heroes and Falkland has had several since Tuesday of this week.

Connie Mack Streeter and Donald Garris had the major roles in a drama that opened Tuesday morning about 8:30 a.m. when Streeter says he witnessed the theft of guns from his Uncle Major "Jack" Streeter's house. Roger Witherington and Bobby Garris had supporting roles and everyone out that time of morning in Falkland became part of the cast.

"Uncle Jack, Robert Lee Williams Sr., Robert Lee Williams Jr. and I were out in the field behind Atlas Wooten's house," Streeter said, "when a car drove into Uncle Jack's back yard. We watched and thought it would go on when the driver saw no one was home. He did come off the porch one time, but then he went back. I jumped up on top of the tractor to see better. I could see him come out of the house holding a rifle by the barrel. He put it in his car. All I could think of was that was probably my late daddy's gun that he had thought so much of. Also, that there'd been so many break-ins along here lately, maybe if I could catch that guy and help put an end to some of them.

"I jumped in my car and took off after him. I caught up with him about a half mile from the house and motioned to him to pull over. I saw I wasn't going to be able to handle it by myself and I remembered that Roger Witherington had told me he and Donald Garris were going to be working on a corn planter at a shop right at Bruce. I let the guy go on and pulled in and hollered to them to call the sheriff, that the guy ahead of me had broken into my uncle's house."

Garris and Witherington jumped into Garris's four-wheel drive truck and joined the chase, only taking time to shout to Donald's brother, Bobby Garris, who runs the store across the road, to "call the law."

Delay Despite Social Security's Serious Strait

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Reagan administration officials say they will put off making recommendations for the Social Security until next year, even though the system is in serious straits.

The three Reagan Cabinet members who serve as the system's trustees told Congress in their annual report Thursday that the Old Age and Survivors Trust Fund will be unable to pay benefits on time starting in July 1983 "without corrective legislation in the very near future."

The trustees said "the short-range financial status is significantly worse than was estimated last year," despite last year's cuts in student, survivor and minimum benefits.

"A series of economic downturns more severe than anticipated have led to the current financial crisis," said Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan, Labor Secretary Raymond J. Donovan and Health and Human Services Secretary Richard S. Schweiker.

But the trustees said, "Because the president has established the National Commission on Social Security Reform, the board has no legislative recommendations at this time and awaits the commission's report, which is due by Dec. 31."

The trustees also estimated that beneficiaries will get a 7.6 percent benefit increase this July based on the consumer price index.

Reagan was sharply attacked last year when he suggested cutbacks in early retirement, disability and other benefits. He eventually abandoned his proposals and set up the commission to seek bipartisan solutions.

Congress passed a stopgap measure last December to tide the old age fund over through 1982 by allowing it to borrow from the healthier disability and hospital reserves. But that borrowing authority lapses at the end of the year.

The combined old age and disability trust dropped by $1.9 billion in calendar 1981 to $24.5 billion, or enough to pay benefits for only two months, the trustees said. It was the seventh straight year of decline.

But the hospital, or Medicare, trust fund rose by $5 billion. Combined, the three funds took in $178.2 billion in payroll taxes while paying out $175.1 billion in benefits and medical bills for 36 million people. "Under present law, and on the basis of any reasonable set of economic assumptions," the old age and survivors fund faces more red ink at least through 1986, the trustees said.

Social Security operates on a pay-as-you-go basis with the trust funds serving as a buffer or contingency reserve. If the old age fund were depleted, there would be delays in the system's ability to send out checks on the third of each month, the trustees said.

The old age fund stood at $21.5 billion last Dec. 31, the disability fund at $3 billion and the Medicare fund at $18.7 billion.

The old age fund is expected to lose $4.7 billion this year and $19.3 billion in 1983 under some of the trustees' intermediate assumptions.

WALK FOR HUMANITY

The Greenville Hunger Coalition asks citizens to take part in this community's 11th annual Walk for Humanity to be held tomorrow beginning at 8:30 a.m. in Green Springs Park here.

Those who cannot or do not wish to walk themselves may wish to financially support the project by pledging so much per mile to one of the walkers. Anyone wishing to help and desiring more information may call 752-4216. The walk is co-sponsored by CROP, the community hunger appeal branch of Church World Service and is a non-profit, non-partisan community event, with all proceeds going to feed the hungry of the world. Those who wish may designate any one of 13 organizations through which their contributions will be channeled. One-fourth of the money will be used in the Greenville area.

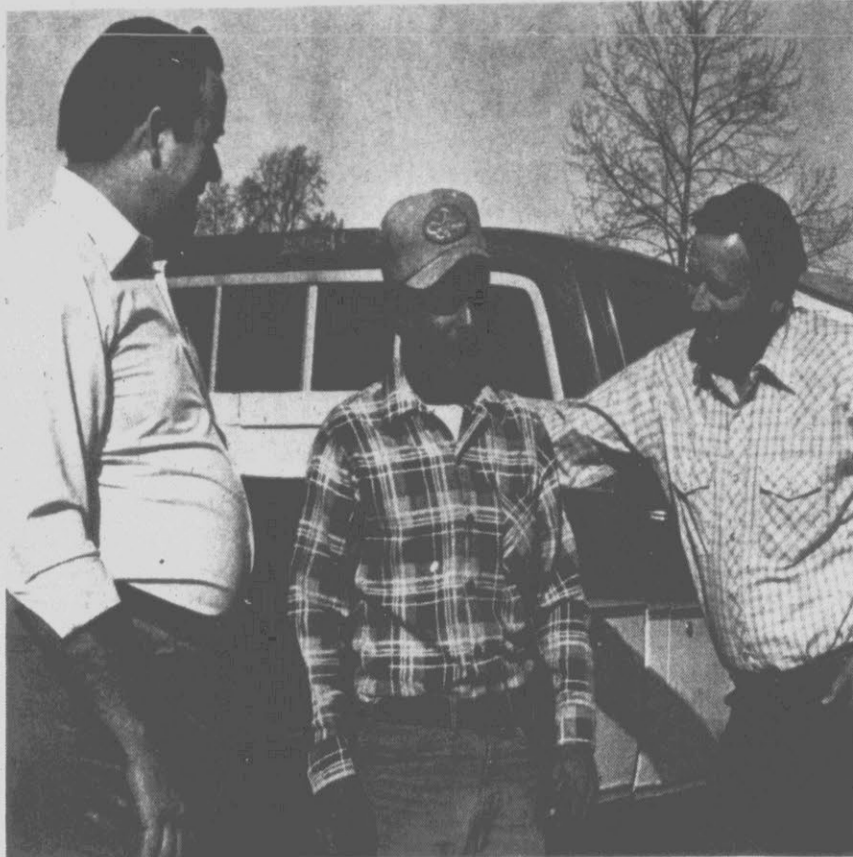

EARL SPAIN APPEAL

Faith Pentecostal Holiness Church has asked Hotline to appeal for donations to help with the cost of Earl Spain's four-month stay in Pitt County Memorial Hospital. Spain is a lifelong resident of Pitt County who has worked as a building contractor and farmer most of his life. He remains in critical condition.

Faith Church has set up a benevolent trust fund to defray the personal expense of this illness to the Spain family. Those who wish to make a tax-deductible donation may send it to Faith Pentecostal Holiness Church, Rt. 9, Box 500, Greenville. Inquiries may be made by calling the Rev. Paul N. ## Court Backs Restriction

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — A U.S. District Court judge ruled Thursday that a federal provision restricting the cultivation of Maryland tobacco in North Carolina is constitutional.

Senior U.S. District Judge John D. Larkins Jr. denied a request by a group of North Carolina tobacco farmers for an injunction against the restriction.

The growers were seeking to halt enforcement of an amendment to the 1981 Farm Bill, which requires growers of Maryland tobacco in states other than Maryland to pay a heavy marketing penalty. The North Carolina growers claimed the amendment was discriminatory and unconstitutional.

Maryland tobacco is not under the government's price support program, so there are no limits on production.

North Carolina lawmakers in Congress supported the amendment, in return for support from Maryland's delegation for the flue-cured tobacco price support program.

The program is sponsored by the young adult ushers. Various churches, along with the public, have been invited, according to the Rev. Hue Walston, pastor.

Falkland People Team Up In Capture...

"I didn't know what I was calling the sheriff for," Bobby Garris said, "till Jack Streeter came in in a few minutes and told me his house had been broken into and Connie Mack was chasing the man."

Streeter and Garris stayed on the suspect's tail through Falkland. He apparently tossed one rifle onto the shoulder of the road in front of Frankie Corbett's house just at the Falkland corporate limits and another rifle and some electric hedge clippers in a ditch a little further along. At Charlie Wilkerson's house, about a mile and a half north of Falkland, his car was running hot and he turned around and slowly drove back to Falkland with Garris and Streeter following.

At Norville's grocery he told Jamie Norville to call the sheriff that some crazy man was harassing him, trying to run him off the road. A crowd gathered and stayed around the man, blocking in his car until sheriff's deputies arrived. He was placed under arrest, his car confiscated, and the allegedly stolen guns and hedge clippers recovered by deputies from up the road.

"My daddy's gun is ruined," Streeter said. "A tractor ran over it before we could get it picked up from the shoulder of the road."

Franklin Rose Leak, 26, of 1207-B Davenport Street, Greenville, is the man who was arrested in Falkland and charged with the break-in and larceny at the Streeter residence. He was placed under $500 bond and released later in the day.

Leak has since been charged with the Jan. 22 breaking and entering and larceny at the residence of Steve Simmons on Rt. 6, Greenville near Saintsville in which about $600 worth of stereo equipment was taken. He was placed under $5,000 bond that time and is again out on bond.

"The fine cooperative work of the Falkland area citizens shows what citizens can do to prevent and solve crimes when they keep their eyes and ears open and work together," Sheriff Ralph Tyson said. "These men did a great job and we thank them."

Nixon Library Land Offered

LEAVENWORTH, Kan. (AP) — A businessman who says locating former president Richard M. Nixon's library in Leavenworth would boost tourism has offered to donate land for the building.

The Leavenworth City Commission is studying a proposal by Mayor Pro Tem Clyde Graeber to locate the library in Leavenworth, about 25 miles northwest of Kansas City, Mo., in northeast Kansas.

Shannon Wiley, owner of a local meat packing plant, said Thursday he is willing to donate 10 or more acres of a 100-acre tract of land he owns on a Leavenworth hill called Pilot Knob.

"I'm no politician," Wiley said. "I don't care if he was Republican or Democrat. He'd have to be pretty ornery before I wouldn't donate the land."

Nixon, the nation's 37th president, resigned in 1974 amid the scandal of the Watergate break-in.

Wiley said he had owned the land for 40 years and it wasn't doing him any good, so he "might as well give it to the city if it will help them out."

The city commission agreed Tuesday night to consider Graeber's proposal, which he claims would help bring more tourists into Leavenworth, which has a population of about 34,000.

William Zanders, executive director of the Leavenworth Chamber of Commerce, said he had not had an opportunity to discuss the proposal with Nixon's attorney, Stan Mortenson.

"The important thing is to convince the Nixon people that Leavenworth would be a good place for the library," said Zanders. "As far as I can tell, the issue is still open and I think Leavenworth has a good shot."

Zanders said 80,000 people already visit the Missouri River city each year to tour historic Fort Leavenworth, and a Nixon library could increase that total.

"The fact is the library would bring in jobs and new dollars," he said. "The impact on Leavenworth could be tremendous. More jobs for young people, more revenue for the economic community."

Graeber has said having a Nixon library within 50 miles of the Harry S. Truman Library in Independence, Mo., and within 150 miles of the Dwight D. Eisenhower Museum in Abilene, would be convenient for tourists.

There had been a proposal to put the Nixon library in Independence, but that died last month when the city council voted not to pursue the acquisition.

Rally Set For Reading

A "Reading-Writing Rally" will be held at Carolina East Mall April 3 from 10 a.m.-2 p.m. by the Greenville-Pitt Council of the International Reading Association.

"Presentations and displays of students' work pertaining to reading and writing activities will be available for public viewing," said Linda McLawhorn, vice president of the organization. "We urge all parents and interested people to come out and see what students in the city and county schools are doing in reading and writing."

Schools involved in the rally will be W.H. Robinson, Bethel, Belvoir, Sam Bundy, Pactolus, J.H. Rose, Third Street School, D.H. Conley, Farmville Middle, Stokes, Falkland, Gritton and G.R. Whitfield.

Holdout?

TOKYO (AP) — The reported sighting of a man with waist-length hair in the mountains of Guam has fueled speculation that a Japanese straggler from World War II is still hiding out on the Pacific island, a government spokesman said today.

Masao Shinozaki, of the Health and Welfare Ministry, said a man apparently fled after being spotted by a native Guamanian hunter last October. Although Guam was retaken by U.S. forces in July 1944, some Japanese soldiers escaped capture by hiding in the jungle.

Shinozaki said Guam police reported evidence that an unidentified person was living until at least six months ago in a cave on the 1,328-foot high Lam Lam Mountain of southern Guam. A bamboo canteen and coconut-fiber rope were found nearby.

Tokyo newspapers reported that Guam police, accompanied by U.S. Marines, found the cave. Shinozaki said the ministry will wait for further reports from Guam police and U.S. military forces on the island before deciding whether to launch an independent investigation. Eleven Japanese soldiers have emerged from hiding on the island since 1951.

Attorney Talks On Work Laws

ECU News Bureau

WRIGHTSVILLE BEACH — Laws safeguarding rights of workers must be observed rigidly in any institutional retrenchment or reduction of work force brought about by budget cutbacks and inflation-triggered recession, a university attorney said today.

Legal issues involved in personnel management may present a "real challenge" to personnel directors during such times of financial exigency, according to the speaker at the spring conference of the N.C. Higher Education Personnel Association.

"Clearly defined rules must be developed to insure that vested constitutionally protected property rights in continued employment are not violated," said Dr. David B. Stevens of Greenville, university attorney for East Carolina University.

"Priorities must be clearly established to insure that any retrenchment or reduction is accomplished in a fair, impartial and equitable manner," Stevens said.

Addressing the conference on "Legal Issues for Personnel Specialists in the 1980's," Stevens said the issues of equal pay for equal work and the doctrine of comparable worth in related jobs for men and women will require attention of management during the 80's.

Managers must make sure that employees, both faculty and staff, between the ages of 40 and 70 "are not victims of discrimination because of their age in favor of younger employees," Stevens said.

Ken Bradbury was speaker at the meeting of the Pitt County Association of Insurance Women held last week at the Ramada Inn.

Associated with Bradbury Adjusting Services, he discussed the new homeowners forms which are now being used with the new personal homeowners policy.

Extension Committee Chairman Sarah Jenkins reported she is helping organize clubs in Morehead City and Kinston. Sandra Sawyer reported attending a meeting of the state nominating committee in Raleigh March 16. President Joyce Mills told of the state convention to be held in Greensboro May 20-23.

Evelyn Stroud, chairman of the nominating committee, presented the following slate of officers for 1982-83 including: President, Audrey Stillwell; Vice President, Ms. Jenkins; Second Vice President, Sandra Smith; Secretary, Frances Blanchard; Treasurer, Marion Smith; and Corresponding Secretary, Sheri Tyson. They will be installed at the April meeting.

Marriage Announced

Mr. and Mrs. George Roebuck of Greenville announce the marriage of their daughter, Gloria Ann, to Noel Randolph Whitley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Whitley of Stokes on March 27 at 11 a.m.

Dear Abby

Daughter Is Both Ungrateful, Negligent

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Recently I flew 1,000 miles to visit my only daughter, whom I had not seen in a year. When I arrived at 10 a.m., she wasn't home, but I found her 9-year-old daughter taking care of her 15-month-old baby brother. My daughter came home at 4:30 p.m., saying she had been to her bridge club. She pulled some food out of the freezer and put it in the microwave oven. (It was still frozen in the middle when she served it!)

At 7:30 p.m. she left me and went to another bridge party. I was in bed when she came home. The next evening she opened a can of chicken soup for five people and called it "supper." She gave me half a cup. Saturday morning she and her husband left for the weekend while I baby-sat.

Monday afternoon she went shopping with her husband. They had dinner out and brought some pizza home for the children and me.

Tuesday she had some women over for bridge while I ironed. (I ironed 12 shirts, six blouses and six pair of trousers.) That night she served some leftover chili from the freezer. Abby, when she was growing up we always had linen tablecloths and napkins. She doesn't even have paper napkins; she tears one sheet of paper toweling in half for two people.

I had planned to stay for two weeks, but one week was long enough considering the way she treated me, so I gave her $20 to drive me to the airport.

When she was 16, I was widowed, so I went back to teaching school in order to send her to college. What do you think of this rude and ungrateful daughter, Abby?

HAD ENOUGH

DEAR HAD: Your daughter's rudeness is the least of it; leaving a 9-year-old to look after a 15-month-old child is child abuse. Add to that her failure to feed the children properly. Since your son-in-law witnessed all this and went along with it, he is also an unfit parent. Out of concern for your grandchildren, please don't ignore that sad situation, even if you have to notify the child protective services in the city where your daughter lives!

DEAR ABBY: I am a sophomore in high school (a boy) and I am an A-B student. I am active in sports and in quite a few extracurricular activities.

My problem is my parents. They can't stand to see me do anything except study. The minute I get home from school my mother is on my back. "Go and do your homework!" Then she says, "I never had to tell your brother to do his homework."

My brother is three years older than I, was a straight-A student, a real brain and a bookworm. He never did anything but study.

Abby, I am not my brother. Most parents would be tickled to death if their sons brought home the kind of grades I do. But mine are never satisfied. Not only that, but I'm beginning to work up a real hate for my brother.

I feel better just getting this off my chest. I hope you print it for my parents to see.

NO. 2 IN OAK PARK

DEAR NO. 2: Parents can't be faulted for encouraging their children to work up to their potential, but never should one child be compared with a sibling. Unfortunately, most parents aren't aware of how damaging such comparisons can be until it's too late.

DEAR ABBY: Ten years ago you gave me the address of where to write to request that my name be taken off the list for junk mail.

Well, three years ago I ordered a sweater that was advertised in a respected magazine, and as a result of that innocent purchase, I am on the list again. Now I am receiving 33 catalogs from every kind of publication imaginable!

Per your suggestion, I wrote to: Direct Mail Marketing Association, Mail Preference Service, 6 East 43rd St., New York, N.Y. 10017.

This was two months ago and I have heard nothing. Shouldn't I get a form to fill out? Or is the address I have outdated?

UP TO HERE WITH JUNK MAIL

DEAR UP: The address you have is current. Write again. (Maybe the computer "ate" your letter.)

Good For The Gander

A Superior Court judge in Mecklenburg County called it "outrageous" and "in the worst possible taste." We say that's only a wrist-slapping for the conduct of a trial attorney in Charlotte who had a case of champagne brought into the courtroom and then shared it with several jurors.

The incident occurred recently when lawyer Paul Williams, a defense attorney for a teen-ager just convicted of murder, rape and robbery, had a case of champagne brought into the courtroom after his client had been sentenced to life in prison rather than to death. The champagne reportedly was shared with other lawyers, newsmen and some jurors who had remained in the courtroom.

Williams drew an official reprimand from trial Judge Claude Sitton, but judicial officials said the action was not illegal. A spokesman for the state ABC Board in Raleigh confirms that decision. Under state law, the spokesman said, beer and unfortified wine — including champagne — may be drunk just about anywhere one desires unless there is a local ordinance specifically prohibiting it.

Ok, so it's legal to drink champagne in a courtroom. And it was legal, according to the judges, to give the jurors champagne as their official duties had been concluded.

But, outwardly, it looks more like a case of the "establishment" pulling off a "commoner's" stunt and getting away with it. Just try rationalizing Williams' conduct — and very, very light penalty — to a teen-ager who gets caught drinking beer in a public place because he wouldn't dare try it at home although it may be legal. Mecklenburg County's courtroom certainly is more public than a country road or a deserted parking lot in a small town.

Champagne, somehow, has become a symbol of the elite, regardless of its quality. We wonder what would have been the reaction if someone other than a lawyer had brought in a case of beer to the Mecklenburg courtroom. But it really doesn't matter.

Proverbially, what's good for the goose is good for the gander. We should practice it more.

Half, Better Than One

The big debate over defense expenditure is how many wars the United States should be prepared to fight at the same time.

When you ask to spend a trillion and a half dollars over five years, there are always a few sourpusses in America who want to know where the money is going.

Every President sees it differently. President Eisenhower believed nuclear weapons were enough of a deterrent to stop the Soviets, and he was for the "big-bang-one-war" theory.

John F. Kennedy was a two-and-a-half-war man and wanted us to be prepared to fight the Russians, the Chinese and some Third World country, all at the same time. Then, as luck would have it, the Soviets and the Chinese had a falling out, so he scaled down our military strategy to fighting only one-and-a-half wars.

Lyndon Johnson was also for one-and-a-half wars (the big one with the Russians, and the half one against the Vietnamese).

But before he could say "bang" the half-a-war turned into a whole one in dochina, and the military started having doubts that you could fight a half-a-war without escalating it into something bigger.

People who know about these things say Nixon's defense strategy after the Vietnam war ended was to also prepare us for one large war and one small war, not necessarily in the same area.

President Carter came along, and while his critics escalation," which mns rather than confront the enemy at the target of his choosing, we should attack him or his client state at a place where he is weak. All this is predicated on the assumption that only non-nuclear weapons are put into play.

The Reagan strategists have also added a new deterrent which ups the defensive ante, which is that we must also prepare ourselves for a "protracted war," rather than the short one that other administrations were counting on. The reason for this, according to an article written by Richard Halloran of The New York Times (from which I stole most of this information), is the Reagan people don't want the enemy misled into thinking he could outlast us in a conventional war.

say he only was interested in fighting one big war, he did start building up the military to fight two, though there was some question as to whether we could even fight one with a volunteer Army.

Now we have President Reagan, who insists we must prepare for a "nuclear war," a "conventional war" and a "protracted war," and that's why it's going to cost us one trillion and a half big ones.

Unlike his predecessors, who talked in terms of the numbers of wars we should be able to handle at the same time, the President and his Defense Secretary are thinking in other terms.

At the minimum we must have a three-ocean Navy, and prepare for "horizontal

Agency Far From Dying

By MARTIN CRUSINGER

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) —

When President Reagan unveiled his plan to dismantle the Energy Department, Energy Secretary James Edwards predicted Congress would pass a bill and send him back to fishing on the beaches of South Carolina by April or May.

But now that spring is here, indications are that the plan to abolish the four-year-old agency is going nowhere fast.

A Democratic senator said Thursday he has been told by reliable sources that the administration is abandoning the dismantlement effort.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen wouldn't say who his administration sources are, but he said they had assured him that even if Reagan does submit dismantlement legislation to Congress it will be only to "go through the motions" to fulfill a campaign pledge.

"They (the administration) will not dismantle the department," said Bentsen, D-Texas.

But Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige, who would inherit the bulk of DOE's functions, told reporters Thursday that the reorganization plan is still "very much alive." He predicted it will be submitted to Congress within the next few weeks.

However, other officials in the administration and Congress said Reagan's plan has run into big — and possibly fatal — trouble.

Reagan announced in December that he wanted to get rid of the Energy Department by sending 70 percent of its functions to the Commerce Department and scattering the rest among several agencies.

Edwards, a former South Carolina governor, predicted then that the measure would be forwarded to Congress along with the budget in January.

That deadline and several others have been missed as the administration worked behind the scenes to line up support. But the going has been tough, especially in the president's own party in the Senate.

Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, chairman of the Senate Energy Committee, and Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, both have expressed strong reservations.

Tower, chairman of the Armed Services Committee, has been unhappy over placing the DOE's weapons-building program — which accounts for half the agency's budget — in the Commerce Department.

Tower and McClure were among a group of Republican senators who met last week to discuss their concerns about the plan, according to one Senate source who asked not to be identified further. The source said no consensus was reached, but the group agreed to meet again.

"I don't think the administration has given up on the idea, but everybody realizes it has serious problems," the source said.

On the House side, Rep. Jack Brooks, chairman of the Government Operations Committee, has said he opposes dismantlement. The Texas Democrat's panel would have jurisdiction over the legislation.

Other Democrats have been even more vocal in their opposition. House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., called the plan "absolutely the wrong thing to do," and Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., called it a "tragedy."

Adding to the administration's problems is a strong lack of interest among most lawmakers who don't understand why they should waste time on a proposal that would do little to reduce the budget and seems to have little political appeal.

Edwards has maintained all along that the primary reason for getting rid of his agency was not budgetary. The administration estimates the savings would only be about $3 million a year because non-defense energy programs have already been cut sharply since Reagan took office.

But the administration has contended that a Cabinet-level agency is not needed for the government's scaled-down role in energy matters.

Teachers Needed Foremost

Pitt County's school principals say any cutbacks in personnel for next fall should be made in administration, starting with the system's county office, and not in the teaching ranks. We concur wholeheartedly with that philosophy.

For too long school systems across the state have delved into the teachers' corps each time staff changes were required. Pitt County is no exception. Remember, last year the Pitt County Commissioners eliminated pay for some central office administrators and the school board, exercising its control over internal funds, elected to pay their salaries from previously allocated funds. That was money that could have gone for more teachers, or more teachers in their fields of qualification.

Simply put, the public school system is in business for one reason and one reason only: to educate the county's children. That's done through teaching, not administration. And let's face it, you don't need supervisors if there is no one to supervise.

Risks In Disunity

BY P.T. O'CONNOR

RALEIGH — A remarkable warning is coming out of the congressional hearings on the rewriting of the tobacco program: The politicians are telling their constituents it can be dangerous to use the program as a political yo-yo.

The tobacco program is in trouble. Those who say the government ought to get out of the tobacco business almost gutted the program when they rewrote the national Farm Bill last year. The message from congressmen who helped keep the tobacco program alive was clear: We won't help you again if you don't straighten some things out.

Up for "straightening out" are the system by which allotments are assigned and leased, the government's costs for administration of the program and the price support formula.

There is no way on earth that every segment of the tobacco industry — the farmers, the manufacturers, the warehousemen — are going to be 100 percent happy with whatever recommendations finally come out of these hearings. There are too many competing interests. But the politicians are warning that when a compromise is developed, it is going to need industry-wide support. Stand united or the anti-tobacco forces could snuff out the whole program.

At the hearings, the congressmen say they themselves are united. Republican Sen. Jesse Helms said at the Raleigh hearing: "We have got to reach as broad a consensus as we can. Our principal concern is that we must resist all attempts that we create out of the tobacco program a political football."

Democratic Congressman Charlie Rose of Fayetteville said at the same hearing, "We need leaders and we need followers in the tobacco program. We don't need demagogues. We need constructive ideas."

Democratic Congressman Charlie Whitley of Mt. Olive said, "We on this committee have always acted in a totally bi-partisan manner. That is the secret to our success."

From South Carolina's Rep. John Napier, Virginia's Rep. William Wampler and Kentucky's Sen. Dee Huddleston came the same message: Allow bitter politics to enter the debate over rewriting the program and we may as well kiss it goodbye.

If there's ever been a case of the sinners preaching to the pulpit, this has got to be it.

It was the politicians last year who injected politics into the congressional tobacco debate. When the program was attacked in the Senate, Democrats pointed at Helms and said his years of attacking other peoples' programs were finally coming home to roost. A few even said privately they hoped the program would get chopped in the Senate — all the time believing Rose could resurrect it in the House — so

Other Editors Say No Calamity

(Greensboro Record)

North Carolina's rural grassroots bureaucracy may be uprooted by the Reagan administration and the bureaucrats aren't happy about it. Particularly Democratic bureaucrats.

To be abolished next January, if the administration has its way, are the Community Committees of the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS). The 977 "farm community" committees are composed of three members apiece and their official job is to elect ASC county committee members who, in turn, communicate with the ASCS state committee. You follow?

The unofficial job of the local committees is to be a neighborhood link between local farmers and the ASCS and Department of Agriculture. Even more unofficially, the mesh of local committee members provides a nice grassroots political organization for the state's predominant political party. That party, it is relevant to note, is not the same party that occupies the White House.

Thus, the discouraging words being spoken about the recommendation to disband the committees is at least 50 percent sour grapes. Gov. Jim Hunt, not exactly an impartial observer, is one of the complainers. Says the governor, "I am certain that if these Community Committees are eliminated, then other farm programs will diminish in the years ahead."

As the governor may be aware, diminishing farm programs by a few is the subject of a little debate in Washington these days. Not everyone thinks it's such a bad idea. But even without touching on that, experience doesn't necessarily bear out the governor. Some states already have no ASCS bureaucracy more local than the county level and full service continues to be provided there.

The ostensible reason for the recommendation is that some $130,000 can be saved if county-level committee members became the lowest level of rural resident on the ASCS payroll. Governor Hunt philosophically disagrees, saying that an average of $3,600 a year for each community committee member is precious little to pay for democracy.

It seems to us that democracy was never intended to be a salaried system. If it takes a few thousand dollars a year to keep some farmers interested in what's going on in the Department of Agriculture, then there is evidently not much interest.

If, on the other hand, community committee members are willing to continue to serve their fellow agrarians as unsalaried electors and, perhaps, Democratic go-fers, there should be no objections raised in the White House or anywhere else.

SETTLE DOWN

Civilization is based upon man's inclination to settle down in a definite place and there establish himself and his family.

Intellectual and spiritual civilization means settling down, also. Intellectually, we have to decide upon certain things and stick to them. We never want our minds to grow hard and adamant, but neither do we want them to be in a fluid state, unstable as water.

Glum News For Small Business

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The first annual President's report on small business and competition is out, and for the most part it doesn't make very pleasant reading.

Small business has difficulties. There is nothing new in that, because difficulty seems to be in the nature of small business.

For years, for example, it has been forced to fight big government, which inundated it with paper work; big business, which took markets because of efficiencies of scale; and with big unions and big demands.

"The roots of the American economy are to be found in the history of small business," according to the report, but that history has been one of decline for a century. Since the early 1960s its share of total output has been under 50 percent and falling. It's 38 percent now.

And now we have recession and, it seems, recession affects small companies more than big ones. There is a growing file of evidence.

The president's report, "The State of Small Business," mandated by Public Law 96-302, shows for example that in the 1974-1976 recession, small-business profits fell faster and further than in big companies.

When the economy began moving out of the pits in early 1976, profits rose more slowly in small companies than in large, the report states. But for many small companies there was no recovery. They failed.

Failures again are common, and small business is taking the brunt of them. The number reported by Dun & Bradstreet rose 42 percent between 1980 and 1981, with small business accounting for the major portion.

"The larger the firm the better chance it has of surviving," states the executive summary accompanying the report. "A firm with 21-50 employees has a 54 percent chance of surviving four years. A firm of under 20 employees has a 37 percent chance of surviving four years."

Not all the recession impact is necessarily negative. Small business does a better job of keeping workers during recession. And its innovation allows it to react better to many other problems too.

True, the superiority of small over large can't be demonstrated in all cases. Big business obviously enjoys major efficiencies of scale. Big business clearly is required in some industries, such as automobiles. Bigness is certainly an advantage in conducting international trade.

But the advantages of small business haven't been greatly appreciated by the public until the past few years, when self-survival compelled small business to organize into groups and blow its own horn.

Research helped. Studies at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology showed that between 1969 and 1976 more than 86 percent of new jobs were provided by businesses employing fewer than 500 employees.

As the president's report relates, that study showed "80 percent of new jobs were provided by firms having 100 employees or less" and "almost 66 percent ... by businesses with fewer than 20 employees."

In 1976, National Science Foundation research showed small business to be a more prolific source of innovations per research and development dollar than medium or large business.

And now, the president's report claims, small business produces twice as many innovations per employee as do companies with 500 or more workers. Innovation, of course, is the source of productivity gains.

"This historical vitality has been severely tested in recent years," the report concedes. Tested by bankruptcies, inflation that makes it difficult to replace assets without "excessive borrowing," and high interest rates that have exacerbated the risks of borrowing money.

It's an old story. Small-business people, who contribute so much and who so often are overlooked, are accustomed to but hardly satisfied with the situation, so neatly expressed in the report's summary.

"The economic health of the small business sector has been sorely tested," it states, "due to factors over which small business owners have little or no control."

Small business survival, it seems, is a matter of living by wits and ingenuity, talents with which small business seems abundantly endowed, but which are sadly lacking in some massive but anemic corporations.

Avalanche Rescue Workers Dig Through Snow

By DOUG WILLIS
Associated Press Writer
SQUAW VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — Rescue workers aided by dogs and emergency lights dug through snow more than two stories deep at a ski resort, searching for at least two more people believed buried by avalanches that killed six people. Two bodies were found Thursday buried almost 25 feet deep and another was found 11 feet down in the snow from avalanches that a resort spokesman said were beyond "our wildest dreams." The two known to be missing were "presumed perished," said Placer

County Sheriff Donald Nunes. Scores of rescue workers worked under lights until about 9 p.m. They were to continue searching today. "They have been on the line for 15 to 20 hours," said sheriff's Lt. Nick Mileur. "These people are just whipped, beat. They are just exhausted."

Three bodies were discovered shortly after 12 feet of new snow triggered the avalanches Wednesday afternoon at Alpine Meadows resort, about three miles south of Squaw Valley in the Sierra Nevada. Four people were rescued from the snow slides Wednesday, including 74-year-old John Riley, who said avalanches "had come down many times in the past, but not as bad as this."

The morning before the disaster, avalanche crews fired explosives into the snow to reduce the avalanche danger, said Werner Schuster, vice president of marketing for the resort. "The severity of the snow caused the snow to build up at such a rate that we simply could not stay on top of it," he said. "We knew that the avalanche danger was pretty extreme." But he said the size of the avalanches "never could have been expected, not in our wildest dreams." Alpine Meadows' 13 ski lifts were closed by heavy snow Wednesday and the main road to the resort was closed most of the day. But the cafeteria and main lodge, filled mainly with resort employees and members of the ski and avalanche patrols, were open. A few people from nearby condominiums had wandered into the resort before the snow crashed down from the mountain, Schuster said. One avalanche hissed down about 400 feet of the mountainside, leveling a 20-foot-wide swath of trees and burying the parking lot. The other rumbled down the mountain in a wall of snow 15 to 20 feet deep, slamming into an A-frame ski patrol building and ramming it into the wood-and-glass main lodge, causing at least $1 million in structural damage to the lodge. New slides blocked the road to the resort as rescuers made their way in aboard snow tractors, then by foot and on skis, to a search area about the size of a football field. Slides and snowdrifts blocked mountain passes throughout the Lake Tahoe basin and several hundred people in homes near the resort were being evacuated by a convoy of snow vehicles, Nunes said. They were not in danger from avalanches, but their power was out and provisions were running low, he said. The two missing were identified by the sheriff's department as resort employees Bernie Kingery, a 40-year-old avalanche expert, and Annie Conrad, 22. Authorities identified two of the three found dead

Thursday as Beth Morrow, 22, a resort employee, and 11-year-old Lauri Nelson, whose father also was killed. The dead found Wednesday buried in the parking lot were identified as David L. Hahn, 46, of Los Altos; Dr. Leroy James Nelson of Eureka; and Jeffrey James "Jake" Smith, 27, of the Lake Tahoe area.

Helms would look bad. When the fight moved to the House, Republicans showed the same eagerness to snatch political gain from tobacco's demise.

The coming battle offers no less opportunity for political chicanery, as the politicians have warned. But listening to them one has to wonder who are they warning. Are they preaching to the tobacco industry, or to each other? Democratic-Republican politics haven't been conducted on the highest of plains in this state in recent years and members of the two parties hold a great deal of bitterness towards each other. Now, on an issue of extreme importance to the state and one that can make or ruin a politician's career, they are being asked to join forces with their enemies. The politicians are being asked to trust each other.

As one North Carolina congressional aide said privately, "The big fear is that someone is going to start stabbing everybody else in the back." It won't take much more than one stab to start what could be the rapid dismantling of any tobacco unity that does exist. Given the tenor of political debate in the past few years, it's just hard to believe that knife won't be unsheathed somewhere along the line.

Department is certain how much money it needs to get us even with the Soviets, it has not explained where it will get the troops to fight a horizontal war, a protracted war and possibly a nuclear war all at the same time. But I'm sure once they get the weapons they'll be able to find the people.

If you think I'm crazy discussing what defense options are open to us these days, you should talk to the people in Washington who are thinking them up for us. (c) 1982, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

APARTMENT FIRE — Greenville firemen were called to 101C Lakeview Terrace Apartments shortly after 9 a.m. Friday when fire was reported in the apartment. Firemen on arriving found the rear of the apartment involved with fire. The occupant of the apartment was listed as Charlie Harris, who was not home at the time of the blaze. The kitchen of the apartment suffered heavy fire damage and adjacent apartments suffered minor smoke and water damage. Investigation into the fire is continuing. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Wind May Delay Space Shuttle's Moving Date

By STEVE BREWER
Associated Press Writer
WHITE SANDS MISSILE RANGE, N.M. (AP) — As seasonal winds swept across the desert and white sand swirled around Columbia, officials warned the same weather that delayed the space shuttle's descent to Earth might also slow its return to Florida.

"We're going to be cutting it close," said Jim Harrington, ground operations manager at Northrup Strip. "We're going to continue on with the vehicle and do as much as we can."

National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials, on a tight schedule to prepare the shuttle for its fourth mission tentatively scheduled for June 27, hope to get the spaceship ready for a return flight to Kennedy Space Center on Wednesday.

But winds gusted to more than 34 mph Thursday afternoon, stirring up the fine gypsum sand, reducing visibility to 200 feet and slowing Northrup crews, Harrington said.

The winds were similar to those that hit Northrup on Monday, causing a blinding sandstorm that delayed the shuttle's landing on the white gypsum flat by one day.

"We had some extra time factored into our schedule, so we're not really losing any time right now because we're still ahead of schedule," Harrington said. "But we can't get everything done while the wind is blowing and how long that's going to last is anybody's guess right now."

One of the operations that can't be performed when the wind is strong is the assembly and attachment of the tail cone — a 40-foot fiberglass shield placed over the Columbia's engines to streamline it for its piggyback ride atop a modified 747 jumbo jet.

The cone must be assembled and attached to the orbiter by Monday if the shuttle is to make its Wednesday deadline for departure from Northrup, Harrington said.

The cone comes in large sections that would "act just like a sail if the wind caught them," he said. The largest shelter at the operations center here, an olive-drab canvas hangar, is not big enough to hold the cone during assembly, he said.

Winds were expected to gust to more than 51 mph today, said David Novlan, chief forecaster at the U.S. Army weather station here.

Winds were expected to diminish by Saturday afternoon.

Other work would continue on schedule, with technicians wearing masks and goggles to guard against the blowing sand, Harrington said.

Technicians removed the shuttle's propellants Thursday and checked its pyrotechnic systems. They also changed the landing gear on the spacecraft.

Fifth Death Underlines Realism Of War Games

By BRIAN BLAND
Associated Press Writer
FORT IRWIN, Calif. (AP) — The death of a fifth paratrooper from Fort Bragg, N.C., has again underscored the stark realism of the war games in the Mojave Desert involving the 82nd Airborne Division.

In addition to the deaths, there have been 156 injuries as Gallant Eagle 82, the massive exercise involving 40,000 soldiers, entered its attack-counterattack phase today.

Gregory Lynn Watson, 25, of Hot Springs, Ark., became the fifth victim when he died Thursday at Loma Linda University Hospital. He had been in critical condition since the airborne assault of nearly 2,300 paratroopers at dawn Tuesday.

The death was announced by Col. Russell Davis, a spokesman for the month-long test of the nation's rapid deployment force.

In addition to the five dead, the jump left 87 soldiers hospitalized in Southern California, 22 hospitalized at Fort Bragg — home of the 82nd Airborne Division — and 42 that had been treated and released.

"Whenever you do an investigation, if you find someone did do something wrong, they could be subject to court-martial," Maj. Gen. Elmer Pendleton, deputy director of Gallant Eagle, told reporters Thursday. "I don't want to prejudice the investigation by saying too much."

Pendleton added that he'd had no indication of any wrongdoing or negligence in connection with the jump.

He criticized speculation that the jump — made during apparently safe wind conditions shortly after higher winds had abated — was carried out because a large group of reporters and photographers were at the edge of the fatal drop zone.

"You don't jump to impress the media or anyone else," he said. "You've got some pretty damn reliable people out there who've been with the airborne a long time."

The commander of the 82nd, Maj. Gen. James J. Lindsay, was the first man out of the lead plane, Pendleton said.

"I've been on exercises this size where there were no deaths, and I've been on exercises this size where there were 12 deaths," Pendleton said, acknowledging that the number of casualties this time was higher than normal.

ANNIVERSARY

PARMELE — The junior choir of New Hope Fellowship Tabernacle will celebrate its first anniversary on April 4 at 3 p.m. with various choirs participating.

The regular youth day service will be held at 12 noon and the public is invited, according to the pastor, Elder B.R. Barnhill.

Local People Attend Meet

The Pitt County-Greenville City Unit of the North Carolina Retired School Personnel organization was represented at the annual state convention in Charlotte.

Attending were its president and vice president, Erma S. Carr and Carmen M. Dawkins. Other delegates were Jaunita Olive, Edith and Lee Williams, Viola Vines and Vernon Ward.

The resignation of Baxter Ridenhour, executive director, was announced and will be effective July 1. The group was challenged to continue its interest and participation in public affairs and government.

SERVICE

GRIMESLAND — The Rev. Thomas and the Refugee Holy Church of Scotland Neck will conduct a service at the St. Monica Church April 3 at 7:30 p.m.

The Rev. E.L. Crandall, sponsor, invites the public.

ECU Plans Week Of Handicap Awareness

ECU News Bureau
East Carolina University's annual Handicap Awareness Week — Monday through April — will feature a variety of public events related to the 1982 theme, "Focus on Ability."
Keynote speaker will be Chet Mottershead, the state's liaison for the International Year of the Disabled, who will speak at 9 p.m. Monday in Hendrix Theater. Mottershead will be introduced by ECU's Interim Chancellor, Dr. John Howell.
Preceding the Mottershead address is an 8 p.m. screening of a documentary film,

"A Different Approach," also in Hendrix Theater.
On Tuesday, blind and sighted volunteers will play "Beep Ball," a modified version of softball for the blind from noon to 2 p.m. at the bottom of College Hill.
Tuesday evening at 7:30 p.m., the Caswell Center Choir will perform in the Jenkins Fine Arts Auditorium, followed by screening of several films about the handicapped.
Wednesday's activities include an exhibition by Special Olympics athletes from 9:30 a.m. until 2 p.m. at Bunting Field, ECU's track field and attitudinal workshops for ECU staff members and invited employers.
A wheelchair basketball featuring the Greenville Steelwheels is scheduled for Wednesday evening at 7:30 p.m. at Elm Street Gymnasium.
Thursday events are demonstrations of equipment for use by the blind in the campus mall and in Joyner Library; a concluding conference at 3 p.m. in Room 248 of Mendenhall Student Center; and an 8 p.m. performance by Fantasy, ECU's sign language team which interprets the lyrics of popular songs for the deaf through mime and gestures. The Fantasy show will be held in Hendrix Theater.

Each day of the Handicap Awareness Week will also include special displays in booths and simulation activities in the Student Center and on the campus mall from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. Participants in simulation activities can briefly share experiences of the handicapped — through use of blindfolds, earplugs, wheelchairs and other equipment.
Rubella and audiology screenings for hearing impairment are also scheduled for the campus infirmary from Monday through Wednesday.
Handicap Awareness Week was planned and coordinated by three graduate students in the ECU School of Allied Health and Social Professions — Romana Lopez of Durham, Jim Warren of Greenville and Sharon McClung of Clarksburg, W.Va. All are candidates for master's degrees in rehabilitation counseling and vocational evaluation.
All events are open to interested persons in the campus and local communities. Further details about Handicap Awareness Week activities are available from C.C. Rowe, director of the ECU Office of Handicapped Student Services, telephone 757-6799.

Easter Egg Hunt Slated

The annual Easter Egg Hunt sponsored by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department will be held at 2 p.m. Sunday at three different locations — Elm Street Park, the Foreman Park and South Greenville Park.
The hunt will be in three age groups — 2 through 5, 6-9 and 10-12. Each group will hunt for golden eggs in a separate area, with the finder of two golden eggs each to receive a special Easter Basket.
Free drinks will be served. Children between 2 and 12 are invited to attend and to bring their baskets.

Meet Monday

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners will meet Monday at 10 a.m. in the county office building at 1717 W. Fifth St.
Included on the agenda are bid openings for construction of a solid waste container site at the Port Terminal and construction of a building at the county garage, and the purchase of solid waste containers.
Other items of business include: a review of the capital outlay requests for the coming fiscal year for the Greenville City School system; consideration of a request from the N.C. Department of Administration's State Property Office for an extension of the lease for the "A" wing of the county office building which is now being used by the East Carolina University School of Medicine; a report on the extraterritorial jurisdiction for an area Northeast of Greenville, east of the Eastern bypass; an consideration of scheduling a public hearing on the Tar River Port Commission.

Public Invited To Theater Dedication

The public is invited to the formal dedication of the Messick Theater Arts Center on the East Carolina University campus at 4 p.m. Saturday.
Chancellor-emeritus Leo W. Jenkins will deliver the dedication address. A portrait of former East Carolina president John D. Messick will be unveiled during the dedication ceremonies. The dedication will take place in the newly refurbished and renovated McGinnis Theater which is a wing of the Messick Center.
Dr. Messick, now 85 years old and a resident of Wilmington, was president of East Carolina from 1945 until 1960. He and members of his family will attend the ceremony.

Mexico's Riches Shared By Minority Of People

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer
OAXACA, Mexico (AP) —

A land rich in oil, silver and gold, Mexico has an even richer vein of poverty, an underclass of perhaps 40 million poor, a nation within a nation that stretches from desert shantytowns on the U.S. border south to the tired green hills of Oaxaca.

It is the kind of poverty that has helped ignite Central America. And here the scale is much larger.

The poorest 40 percent of the Mexican population has just 10 percent of the income, and the top tenth has 40 percent. World Bank statistics show. This income gap is one of the most marked among developing nations.

The last guerrilla flare-up in Mexico was extinguished in the mid-1970s, and no major new violence has erupted.

But a plainly concerned Mexican government has reinforced its military garrisons on the Guatemala border, where refugees from Central American upheavals are spilling into Mexico.

At the same time a new assertiveness appears to be surfacing among the poor "campesinos," the peasants, of the Mexican south.

For a half-century the Mexican government has been synonymous with the Institutional Revolutionary Party (PRI), which is expected to continue its dominance in national elections this July.

The PRI has strong ideological defenses against El Salvador-like unrest — theoretically Mexico is still carrying out its populist revolution of 70 years ago, and the government's friendship with Cuba, Nicaragua and other revolutionary governments and movements deprives anti-PRI forces of international support.

The party was jolted last year, however, when a coalition of workers, campesinos and students, allied with local Communists, won the municipal election in Juchitan, near this drowsy old colonial city.

The coalition is stepping up its activities throughout Oaxaca state, demanding a greater share of Mexico's oil wealth for the peasants and urban poor.

WORKING THE LAND — Farmers at the San Raymundo Jalpan cooperative farm outside of Oaxaca, try to scratch out a living by using the old-fashioned wooden plows, bullock teams and brute labor (AP Laserphoto)

At the "pueblo" of San Raymundo Jalpan, a cooperative farm outside Oaxaca city, 486 campesino families try to survive on 827 acres. They live in one-room huts, with floors of earth and walls of reed. Each family earns an average of $30 or $40 a month from its acre-and-a-half.

"No, the oil money hasn't reached us," said Portino Antonio Velasco, a cooperative leader who has lived all his 64 years at San Raymundo. "But the pueblo progresses, little by little."

One of his neighbors, 28-year-old Erasto Cabrera Solis, was less uncomplaining.

From a hilltop, he pointed out sun-scorched fields where bullocks dragged ancient wooden plows.

"Half this land is too dry," Cabrera said. "We need four of five wells for irrigation. We've asked the government for years. We'll ask again but they'll delay again." What about Mexico's new oil revenues and development plans?

The young campesino laughed and spoke of corruption.

"This money is like a block of ice," he said. "It gets passed from hand to hand, and a little melts off each time. When it reaches the campesino, there's nothing left."

Mexico has too little good land and too many campesinos.

The country's agrarian reform, a process of redistributing farmland to the peasants that began with the 1910-17 Mexican Revolution, is grinding to an inevitable and politically volatile halt, the government declaring there is "no more free land." An estimated 4 million campesino families remain landless, working others' farms.

In Oaxaca and elsewhere in Mexico, campesino militants demand the break-up of the larger landholdings that remain, and sometimes invade farms, only to be dragged off by security forces or attacked by private guards.

"Even those campesinos who have land — the land is usually not good, and they don't have the equipment, the fertilizer, the seeds to produce," said University of Oaxaca sociologist Porfirio Santibanez, who has studied agrarian reform in the state.

At San Raymundo, for example, the campesinos have no tractors. It would cost each about a half-month's earnings to hire a tractor and driver to plow his field. In Oaxaca's back country, Indians still seed with pointed "coa" sticks.

Only 20 percent of Mexico's land is arable, three-quarters of an acre per capita of population, compared with 2.2 acres in the United States.

Mexico's population, now 72 million, is growing by 3 percent a year, and the rate is even higher in the impoverished south.

Thousands of Oaxaca's sons migrate, some going as far as the United States but most settling in fetid "colonias," the slums that cling to the outskirts of Mexico's cities.

The lucky ones who find work receive, at best, the official minimum wage, which varies regionally between 200 and 280 pesos a day, $4.50 to $6.20.

"That's not enough to live production will further squeeze the inefficient campesino and his tiny plot of land.

The PRI government has boosted social welfare spending in other ways, establishing a state-run supermarket chain that sells food staples at subsidized prices, a new public housing agency and a rural development super-agency.

But the government supermarkets account for only 5 percent of the nation's food sales, the housing agency's efforts have fallen far behind Mexico's breakneck urbanization, and all development efforts may suffer because of the current world oil glut, which has cost Mexico an estimated $5 billion in anticipated oil revenues thus far.

The PRI's leaders remain optimistic, however. The "oil boom" atmosphere still permeates even the smog of Netzahualcoyotl, a huge colonia of at least 3 million people on the fringe of Mexico City.

Juan Bravo, the party chief in Netzahualcoyotl, claims that its inhabitants view the great, dismal shantytown as a steppingstone to a better life.

"People from all over the on," said Rafael Gazga Iturribarria, a leader of the worker-peasant-student coalition.

"These are big families. Eight tortillas cost 50 pesos, and a pound of meat costs 100."

In the stuffy back room of his "miscellania" general store in a Oaxaca colonia, Adolfo Mendoza Hernandez told a visitor probably only 20 of the 100 or so families living in the trackside shanties ever eat meat.

"The rest eat corn, beans, rice," he said. "Milk? Never."

Statistics help tell the story of Mexican poverty: at least 40 percent of the population is undernourished; possibly half of Mexico's adults are illiterate; one-third do not have access to safe water; the infant mortality rate is 60 per 1,000, worse than Madagascar's and four times higher than the U.S. rate.

Three years ago President Jose Lopez Portillo launched a campaign to step up food production. It has made some headway, but total self-sufficiency will be difficult to achieve. And some critics fear its emphasis on country come here with economic problems. But they have a chance to better themselves, to move on. They are workers," he told a visiting reporter.

Bravo even finds cause for cheer in the colonia's bleak landscape.

"We have planted some trees now," he said with a smile. "I never would have thought I'd see trees in Netzahualcoyotl."

Though it may be coming under heavier questioning, the PRI's hold on power appears firm for now.

"I don't think there will be an explosion in Mexico at this time," said Ismael Carmona Castillo, a Oaxaca lawyer and campesino advocate. "And I think the PRI is a necessary evil, because there is really nothing to replace it right now."

The U.S. interest is clear: Mexican prosperity will reduce the illegal immigration of hundreds of thousands of Mexicans into the United States, and Mexican stability is essential to steadying the rest of the turbulent Caribbean region.

See A Future In Hovercrafts

LONDON (AP) — Descendants of the 22-year-old Hovercraft, the boat that flies on a cushion of air, are headed for a bright future, including overnight trans-Atlantic passenger and cargo service "cheaper than a plane but swifter than shipping," an authoritative British publication says.

Already, the 1982 edition of "Jane's Surface Skimmers" said, the Soviet Union is experimenting with a "Caspian Sea Monster" to carry 900 fully equipped soldiers at speeds of 350 miles per hour.

The 400-page annual was published Wednesday by Jane's Publishing Co. Ltd., which also issues a wide range of military yearbooks.

Britain launched the Hovercraft, which skims above the surface of the water on a cushion of compressed air that it supplies for itself, in June 1969 with a maiden trip at Cowes, on the Isle of Wight.

The craft now are used for regular service across the English Channel, while others are operating in China, Australia, Canada, Venezuela and Zaire.

One contributor to the Jane's survey, American scientist Stephan Hooker, predicted that wingships, a cross between the air-cushion Hovercraft and a plane, would fly the Atlantic at speeds of around 450 mph with cargoes of 1,000 or more tons, making the crossing in around nine hours.

"A passenger leaving New York in the late afternoon, for example," he wrote, "could spend a leisurely overnight journey arriving in Europe the next morning."

"I envisage the wingship providing transport for time-critical cargoes cheaper than aircraft but swifter than shipping."

The wingship, Hooker continued, "is neither ship, Hovercraft, hydrofoil nor aeroplane; but embodies the fundamental principles of aerodynamics and hydrodynamics engineered into a new type of craft." It takes off by means of down-thrust fans creating an air cushion until it reaches a cruising speed of several hundred miles an hour, then utilizes its wings to skim along the surface at heights of between 11½ and 45 feet. At that height, the craft is considerably more fuel-efficient than a jet plane, Hooker said.

However, should high seas or a fog bank be encountered, the wingship can fly over the top like a conventional plane, he wrote.

The Baddest Badman?

Jesse James! The name still has a blood-curdling ring. This legendary outlaw was first known for his daring Civil War exploits, as one of Quantrill's Southern raiders. Declared an outlaw after the war, he pulled a long series of successful bank and train robberies. Jesse was a folk-hero to some, but for others he was a cold-blooded killer. A hunted man for 16 years, he settled finally in St. Joseph, Missouri, as Thomas Howard. One hundred years ago tomorrow, while straightening a picture frame on the wall of his home, Jesse was shot in the back — not by a lawman, but by a gang member greedy for the reward.

DO YOU KNOW — What was the name of Jesse James' brother?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — The infamous poisonous gas used in World War I was called mustard gas.

The bidding:
South West North East
1♦ Pass 2♦ Pass
2NT Pass 3NT Pass
Pass Pass
Opening lead: Eight of ♦.

Here's another example of an old theme in a new garb. Even looking at all four hands, it is not easy to spot the threat.

South's rebid of two no trump was in the modern vein, showing a balanced, minimum opening. Since it was unlikely that South held four spades, North didn't waste time warning the enemy what suit not to lead! West led a spade, and declarer could count only eight tricks. The ninth could come either from the heart finesse or from establishing a long club. Since a losing heart finesse ran the risk of opening the suit for the enemy, declarer chose to go after the clubs.

But the play of that suit was also not without risk. If East could gain the lead twice to lead diamonds through declarer, it was possible to lose three diamond tricks and two clubs. So it was necessary to adopt an avoidance play to keep East off lead.

Therefore, declarer took the first spade trick in dummy and led a club to the six. West won the ten and reverted to a spade. Declarer won again in dummy and led another club. If East played low, declarer intended inserting the eight. But splitting the honors did not help East any. Declarer won and continued the suit to set it up.

Very clever, you say. But what if West had won the second club as well? Then the suit would break 3-2, and the ace next would set up two long clubs in dummy.

Aha, but what if it was West who held the four clubs? Then East would show out on the second club lead. Declarer would hop up with the ace and lead a club up to dummy's queen for his ninth trick.

Committees Seek More For Defense

By DON WATERS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress will be asked by its Armed Services committees to approve a $50 billion boost in Pentagon spending authority during the fiscal year that starts Oct. 1.

In actions announced Thursday, both panels approved some $180 billion for military weapons purchases and operations and maintenance, only about $3 billion below President Reagan's budget request.

The budget authority figure — which would actually be spent over several years as items are delivered — is $50 billion higher than Congress approved for the current fiscal year.

The Senate measure probably will reach the floor for debate and a vote during the week of April 19, said Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, the Senate Armed Services chairman.

Tower's House counterpart, Rep. Melvin Price, D-Ill., also said he looked for action in his chamber around that time.

Differences in the two versions will be compromised by a joint conference committee after that.

Most of the dollar cuts Tower's panel made in Reagan's request came from cancellation of funds for interim basing of the MX intercontinental missile and purchase of the first nine missiles, and a one-year postponement in buying Apache attack helicopters. The projected $16 million-per-copy cost of the helicopters was considered too high.

Price's committee made its biggest cuts among various research and development projects — some also involving the MX — and said it identified more than $1 billion in "economies and efficiencies" that could be made in day-to-day operations of the military services.

The Senate committee cut $106 million from the president's $252 million request to help reinvigorate the Civil Defense program, while the House members voted the full amount sought.

Generally, however, the Reagan rearmament program fared very well in both panels.

Among other things, they approved full funding for two Nimitz-class nuclear aircraft carriers and two Trident missile submarines, plus varying numbers of attack submarines, B-1B bombers, KC-10 tanker-cargo planes, C-5B cargo aircraft, guided-missile cruisers, anti-submarine helicopters and other weapons systems.

In terms of outlays — the budget category that includes funds to be spent only in one fiscal year — the Senate Armed Services panel shaved less than $1.15 billion from the $82.040 billion that Reagan requested.

"As promised, we were able to find some savings, but it is indeed to the credit of President Reagan and the Defense Department that this budget has withstood some very critical examination quite well," Tower told reporters.

He had told the economy-minded Senate Budget Committee last month that he thought he could find at least $2 billion in outlay savings.

Reminded by reporters that little more than half this goal had been reached, Tower said other savings could be made in separate legislation covering military pay, construction and nuclear weapons production that his committee will address later.

The Senate panel passed its authorization bill, 16-1, Wednesday night and the House approved its measure, 39-3, late Thursday.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

CONCUBINES, THE SAME AS HARLOTS? ... NO!

WESTERN CIVILIZATION HAS VIEWED A MAN'S CONCUBINE ON THE SAME LEVEL AS A PROSTITUTE—BUT NOT SO IN EARLY HEBREW SOCIETY! LARGE FAMILIES WERE ESSENTIAL FOR ECONOMICAL SECURITY AND POLYGAMY WAS COMMON. IN THOSE DAYS, A MARRIAGE CONTRACT AFFORDED THE HUSBAND-TO-BE A GENEROUS DOWRY FROM THE BRIDE'S FATHER—BUT THE HEBREW MAIDEN WHOSE FATHER WAS TOO POOR TO GIVE A DOWRY COULD BE A MAN'S WIFE IF HE PAID HER FATHER A SUM OF MONEY, THUS SHE ENTERED HIS HOUSE WITHOUT MARRIAGE CONTRACT AS A SECONDARY WIFE (CONCUBINE), BUT EVEN SO HER RIGHTS WERE PROTECTED BY LAW (DEUT. 21:10-14) AND HER CHILDREN HAD EQUAL RIGHTS WITH THE CHILDREN OF THEIR FATHER'S WIFE BY MARRIAGE!

USUALLY, HEBREW WOMEN EXPOSED THEIR FACES, ONLY HARLOTS VEILED THEIR FACES—SO THEY WOULD NOT BE RECOGNIZED AS THEY PLIED THEIR TRADE!

THE FIRST WIFE RULED THE HOUSEHOLD, ALL OTHER WIVES OR CONCUBINES WERE UNDER HER DOMINION!

NEVERTHELESS, EVEN THE OLD TESTAMENT POINTED TOWARD MONOGAMY. MOSAIC LAW (DEUT. 17:17) FORBIDS A KING "...TO MULTIPLY WIVES." HOSEA PREACHED MONOGAMY, MALACHI ADMIRES A HUSBAND'S LOYALTY TO THE "WIFE OF HIS YOUTH (2:14ff) AND LO, BY NEW TESTAMENT TIMES, A JEWISH HUSBAND USUALLY TOOK BUT ONE WIFE!

NEXT WEEK: LOT'S WIFE—SALT OR NOT?

Rev. R.G. "Dick" Arno has been in the full time service of the Lord for fifteen years. He was the Director of National Counseling for the Christian Broadcasting Network when the Lord commanded him to step out in faith and begin a new ministry.

In 1972, Dick became critically ill (comatose) while pastoring a United Methodist Church, in Pitt County. Over 125 neurologists studied Dick Arno's case records and concluded that: "he was healed by an act of Divine Power".

Rev. Dick Arno and his wife, Marsha are directing "The Refreshing Outreach". This ministry, located on Highway 264 between Greenville and Farmville, provides Christ-centered counselling to all levels of needs.

Come and let the love of Jesus Christ flow through Dick to you!

NEW YORK (AP) - The stock market kept Thursday's rally alive with another broad advance in active trading today.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 10.47 Thursday, rose 2.09 to 835.33 by noontime today.

Gainers held a 2-1 lead over losers in the mid-day tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The Labor Department said the unemployment rate reached 9 percent in March, equalling the post-war high it reached in May of 1975.

International Business Machines topped the active list, unchanged at 61.

The NYSE's composite index rose .35 to 65.84. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .13 at 263.50.

Volume on the Big Board came to 29.07 million shares at noontime, against 20.03 million at the same point Thursday.

Brezhnev Hospitalized; Health 'Deteriorating'

WASHINGTON (AP) - Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev's health has "deteriorated seriously" and he was taken to the Kremlin hospital in an ambulance last week for treatment of a possible stroke, it was reported today.

The Washington Post, in a dispatch from Moscow, quoted "well-informed Soviet sources" as saying the 75-year-old Soviet leader was expected to recover but would be hospitalized for several weeks.

Although the sources reported a "serious worsening" in Brezhnev's health, they did not suggest he was incapacitated, the newspaper said. The Soviet foreign ministry would not comment, the Post added.

The newspaper said its sources also disclosed that Brezhnev, who has undergone periodic bouts of ill health in the last few years, suffered a mild heart attack in early February.

The Post said Brezhnev was stricken aboard an airplane carrying him back to Moscow on March 25 from Tashkent, the capital of the Soviet central Asian republic of Uzbekistan.

The paper said he was removed from the plane on a stretcher and was carried in an ambulance to the Kremlin hospital. The Post said its sources suggested Brezhnev might have suffered a mild stroke.

The Post said its sources suggested that Brezhnev's health worsened as a result of the heavy demands of his schedule in Uzbekistan and the psychological stress of the recent deaths of several close associates, notably ideologist Mikhail Suslov.

The newspaper said a meeting of the Communist Party Central Committee, scheduled for this week in Moscow, was postponed until May 24, and Brezhnev's personal physician canceled a visit to England.

The Post report was published two days after the State Department acknowledged "rumors and unconfirmed reports" that Brezhnev had been hospitalized, but said it could neither confirm nor deny them.

Earlier, Lawrence Eagleburger, undersecretary of state for political affairs, told reporters that "it's clear there has been some

Man Is Shot On S. Pitt St.

Greenville police are continuing their investigation of a shooting incident in the 1900 block of South Pitt Street about 12:30 a.m. today.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Charles Scott, 26 of 612 South Pitt St. was shot in the left forearm and taken to Pitt County Memorial Hospital for treatment.

The chief, who said Scott reported he did not know the man who shot him, said other witnesses identified a possible suspect in the case.

hanky-panky, if you will, going on" involving the Soviet leadership. "There is clearly something going on in Moscow, but I don't think we ought to read too much into it."

Eagleburger and other U.S. officials suggested that political maneuvering had begun within the Soviet hierarchy, possibly in anticipation of a power struggle for a successor to Brezhnev.

Konstantin Chernenko, 70, a close ally of the Soviet president, is widely regarded as Brezhnev's heir apparent. He is a member of the ruling Politburo and a secretary of the Soviet Communist Party Central Committee.

Joint Maneuver For Caribbean

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) - The Atlantic Fleet's new emphasis on the Caribbean gets a boost next week with a joint U.S.-British naval exercise by a record 39 ships and more than 200 planes, Navy officials say.

The five-week readiness exercise beginning Tuesday will range from Norfolk into the Caribbean and will include two aircraft carriers, the Independence and the Forrestal, high-ranking Navy sources told the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot.

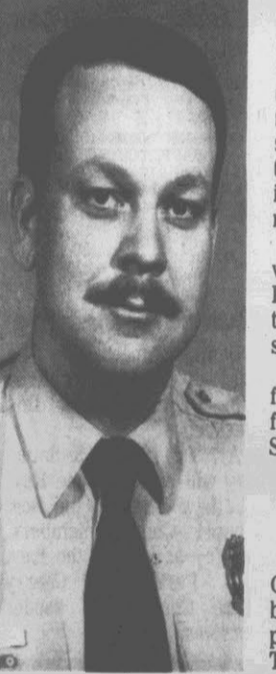

The exercise, called Readex 2-82, will be followed from April 27 through mid-May by another large-scale maneuver called Ocean Venture. That exercise will include more than 40 ships, the same two carrier battle groups as Readex and Air Force B-52 bombers.

Spokesmen said the Caribbean buildup was not in response to any particular crisis, such as the turmoil in El Salvador, but rather was an expression of concern about the entire Caribbean, the newspaper said.

Atlantic Fleet commander Adm. Harry D. Train said several weeks ago that East Coast warships were shifting their center of operations to the Caribbean.

The new corporal, who has attended a number of other law enforcement schools,

Rape Charge Is Lodged

Pitt County deputies arrested a Greenville man early today and charged him with the Thursday night rape of a 17-year-old local woman near Belvoir Elementary School.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that Reginald Peterson, 23, of 705 Cherry St., was arrested at 5:20 a.m. today at his residence and charged with the assault.

Sheriff Tyson said the woman told deputies that a man picked her up at a Greenville store Thursday night and offered to help her find her boyfriend. He said she reported that the assault took place around 11:30 p.m. in the man's car on a dirt road off Highway 33.

The sheriff said the woman was taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital where she was treated in the emergency section and released.

A first appearance hearing for Peterson was scheduled for today in District Court, Sheriff Tyson said.

Douglas Hurls Rampants By Gryphons

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
Maybe it was because it was April Fool's Day.
Or maybe luck finally ran out.
Or it could have been that this was just the year that Rose High School's baseball Rampants were just too much for the Rocky Mount Gryphons.
At any rate, the Rampants came away from Rocky Mount yesterday with a 7-0 victory as Gordon Douglas twirled a neat two-hitter in gaining his fourth win on the season.
For a number of years the Rampants have been unable to win in Rocky Mount, regardless of record, and the Rocky Mount Jinx had to be in the back of the minds of everyone as the game got underway.

But Douglas, who pitched four innings Tuesday against Northern Nash and gained that victory, had little trouble in mowing down the Gryphons. He didn't allow a hit until the sixth inning, and one of the two hits was a "rule-book hit" automatically awarded when the batted bat struck a baserunner.
One Gryphon reached in the first inning on an error and another on a walk in the second. An error put a man on base in the third, and another walk put a man on in the fourth.

Marshall White tagged Douglas for the first hit, a double, in the sixth, and with two away, Richard Maude's grounder struck courtesy runner Chuck Robbins between second and third for the automatic hit.
Although three Gryphons reached second base, none got further.
Rose, meanwhile, was taking advantage of everything Rocky Mount did to push over runs.
The Rampants banged out 12 hits, including three each by Roger Williams and Crowell Pope, to do the job.
Rose's first run, however, came without benefit of hit. Tom Buie led off with a four-pitch walk and he stole second — the first of three bases he stole during the game. Mont Carter then laid down a bunt, and the ball was overthrown at first, allowing Carter to arrive and Buie to speed all the way from second with the first run of the game.

After leaving two on in the second, Rose pushed in two more runs in the third.
With one down, Williams banged out his second hit and scored when Douglas tripled to deep right center. Pope followed with a single to left, scoring courtesy runner Jeff Wilson.
A fourth run scored in the fourth. Buie, again walking, stole up, and took third on Carter's infield out. He scored on a wild pitch.

The Rampants picked up run number five in the sixth inning. It was Buie again leading off this time with a single, and stealing second. He moved up when Sammy Hodges reached on an error and came home on a wild pitch.
The final two scored in the seventh. Pope led off with a single and Randy Warren walked. Courtesy runner Terry Smith was picked off second, but while he was in the rundown, Warren advanced to second. He scored on Bill Kittrell's single to left, and Kittrell moved up on a single by Keith Phillips. Another wild pitch brought Kittrell home and wound up the day's scoring.

Now, after long last, is the jinx dead?
"Certainly hope so," Coach Ronald Vincent said afterwards. "But this is not the same Rocky Mount team that we've seen for so many years either."
True — the Gryphons are only 1-7 now and 0-2 in league play.
Rose is 7-0 overall and 2-0 in conference play.
"I think we played very well today, and Gordon Douglas threw the ball very well. He was not at all tired after going four innings on Tuesday. He said yesterday that he felt fine and was looking forward to (the game)."

Vincent also praised the job done by Pope behind the plate in controlling the game, and the defensive play of shortstop Sammy Hodges, second baseman Mont Carter and third baseman Keith Phillips.
"We swung the bats very well today. And I think maybe it was against the best pitching we've seen all year," Vincent added.
The 12 hits off Rocky Mount hurler Barry Butler were tempered by nine strikeouts. He also walked six.
The Rampants return to action on Monday, traveling to Kinston.

Richmond Stuns East Carolina, 13-6

RICHMOND, Va. — East Carolina's baseball Pirates, stunned by William & Mary in the second game of a doubleheader on Wednesday, were floored by the University of Richmond yesterday, 13-6, as the Spiders further dimmed the hopes of a regular-season

ECAC-South championship for the Pirates.
The defeat left East Carolina with a 5-3 league record and only two games — road affairs with James Madison and Old Dominion — left to play. The Pirates now have to help from other teams to have a shot at the title.

Veteran ace Bill Wilder suffered the loss, his third in six decisions, as the Spiders rocked him for 13 hits and 11 runs — all earned. Richmond's Bob Debord hurled the victory for the Spiders, giving up 10 hits, but he kept the Pirates off base enough to prevent them from overcoming the big lead of his team.

East Carolina struck first in the game, getting a run in the top of the first. That came on a long, long drive by David Wells for the first of four home runs in the game.
The lead lasted only a short while however, as the Spiders rallied for five runs in the bottom of the inning.

Ken Harvey led off with a single and after one out, Ed Santa got a hit. Jeff Brown followed with another single, scoring Harvey. Andy Allanson then poked a three-run homer to clear the bases.
But the Spiders weren't through for the inning, scoring once more. Bobby Woods walked and Doug Budryk singled. Randy Milligan's hit loaded the bases and Hugh Miller's grounder got Woods at the plate. But Harvey, back up, walked, forcing in Budryk.
Richmond got all it was to need the rest of the way in the second, scoring two more times for a 7-1 lead. Brown singled but was cut down on Allanson's grounder. Woods doubled in Allanson and Budryk singled to score Woods.
East Carolina tried to rally, scoring four times in the third. Mike Sorrell singled and Wells reached on an error. Todd Evans singled and Todd Hendey cracked a grand-slam home run. That cut the gap to 7-5, but the Pirates got no closer.
Richmond added single runs in the fourth and fifth innings, then finished off the Pirates with four in the sixth, all scoring on a grand slam homer by Harvey.

East Carolina got its other run in the ninth. Kelly Robinette singled and Sorrell reached on an error. Robinette then scored off Wells' ground out.
Evans led the Pirate hitting with three, while Robinette had two.
Richmond was led by Brown and Allanson with three each, while Budryk and Harvey each had two.
The loss dropped the Pirates to 17-6 overall.

Following a home date with Catawba this afternoon, the Pirates were to travel to James Madison on Saturday for what now looms as a very, very important ECAC-South game.

Baker Hopes To Break Darlington Jinx

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — Buddy Baker hasn't won the Rebel 500 race at Darlington International Speedway in his last 10 starts. But Sunday could be different.

The Charlotte, N.C., native captured the pole position Thursday during opening-day qualifying for the 26th running of stock car racing's oldest event.

It was Baker's first pole win in 45 appearances at Darlington, including 22 Rebel 500s. It also was the best starting position he's had since a September 1980 outing at the Martinsville (Va.) Speedway. "I better not brag before we do something," he said after turning in the fastest time of the day. "But I think we'll be pretty darn hard to beat."

The 41-year-old veteran earned the No. 1 starting spot with a speed of 153.979 mph. His red Buick covered the famed 1.366-mile oval in 31.937 seconds.

"It just goes to show you what people can do with a wrecked race car," he said.

Baker drove the same Hoss Ellington-UNO Buick into a wall Sunday at the Warner Hodgdon Carolina 500 in Rockingham, N.C. He and four other drivers fell victim to a water slick left by Gary Balough's blown radiator hose.

"It was the hardest I've ever had a race car hit a wall," Baker said.

The mishap left him "semi-conscious" for some moments after it happened, he said. And he was still feeling bruised Thursday.

"Winning this pole sort of helps the way I feel," he said with a grin. "It makes my sore shoulder hurt a little less."

Baker credited the Ellington racing team with miraculously pulling the car back together in just four days. He said the crew "really deserves the pole more than I do."

Grabbing the No. 2 starting slot Thursday was defending champion Darrell Waltrip. The Franklin, Tenn., native posted 152.825 mph.

"Sure, I would have liked to win the pole," he said. "But at least we're in the front row. We'll be in good shape race day."

Neil Bonnett of Hueytown, Ala. earned the third position at 152.825. "Somebody will probably beat that speed," Bonnett said after his two-lap qualifying run. "But I feel that is as good as we could do today."

Benny Parsons of Ellerbe, N.C., grabbed the fourth starting assignment, and Dale Earnhardt of Kannapolis, N.C., took the fifth.

Local favorite Cale Yarborough of nearby Sardis posted 151.498 mph to get the ninth starting slot.

Even though the four-time

Rebel 500 winner was the first to take a qualifying spin, he knew his speed wasn't up to par as soon as he'd shut off his engine. "That's not near fast enough," he said. "I guess my car was set up just a little too loose."

Yarborough and Thursday's other 17 qualifiers will be working until Sunday's 1 p.m. post time to get their cars set just right. In the meantime, a battle for the final 18 starting positions will take most of today.

- Here are the qualifiers for the first 18 positions in the Rebel 500 stock car race with qualifying lap times:
1. Buddy Baker, Buick, 152.979 mph.
  2. Darrell Waltrip, Buick, 152.825.
  3. Neil Bonnett, Ford, 152.768.
  4. Benny Parsons, Pontiac, 152.659.
  5. Dale Earnhardt, Ford, 152.256.
  6. Harry Gant, Buick, 152.149.
  7. Ricky Rudd, Pontiac, 152.140.
  8. Ron Bouchard, Buick, 151.563.
  9. Cale Yarborough, Buick, 151.498.
  10. Morgan Shepherd, Buick, 151.498.
  11. Terry LaBonte, Buick, 151.404.
  12. Bill Elliott, Ford, 151.395.
  13. Tim Richmond, Buick, 151.353.
  14. Dick Brooks, Ford, 151.325.
  15. Joe Millikan, Pontiac, 151.302.
  16. Dave Marcis, Buick, 151.228.
  17. Richard Petty, Pontiac, 150.963.
  18. Jody Ridley, Ford, 150.097.

Greene Central Rips Panthers

SNOW HILL — Ritchie Chase hurled a three-hitter and Chris Suggs and Donald Warren banged out three hits to lead Greene Central to an 11-0 win over North Pitt Thursday in an Eastern Carolina Conference baseball game.

Chase, a right-hander, struck out six and walked two en route to his second decision in four outings this season. Chase gave up singles in the first and fifth and a double in the sixth.

Greene Central, now 6-4 overall and 2-0 in the conference, led, 1-0, at the end of the first inning and then scored twice in the second and three times in the third to take a 6-0 lead.

With one out in the second Warren singled, stole second and raced to third on a passed ball. John Mayo then walked and Suggs followed with a double to score both runners.

Tommy Goff doubled with one gone in the third and then scored on James Moore's triple to up the Ram led to 4-0. Chase singled home Moore and Warren followed with a single to put Clifton Joyner, running for Chase, on third. Joyner scored on Mayo's sacrifice fly.

The Rams added four runs in the fourth and another run in the fifth for their 11-run total.

Goff and Moore were two for three for the Rams and Chris Ginn was two for four. Suggs had two doubles for the Rams.

North Pitt did not have anyone with more than one hit. Quintin Dove had a double for the Panthers.

Greene Central plays host to Ayden-Grifton Tuesday.

Lady Rams Defeat North Pitt, 4-3

BETHEL — Greene Central scored two runs in the top of the seventh inning to slip past North Pitt, 4-3, Thursday in an Eastern Carolina Conference softball game.

The Lady Rams, now 7-1 overall and 2-0 in the ECC, led, 1-0, at the end of the first inning but the Panthers tied the game at 1-1 in the third. The Pant-HERS then took the lead with single runs in the fourth and fifth, but the Lady Rams cut the deficit to 3-2 with a run in the sixth.

Greene Central then pushed home two runs in the seventh and held on to hand the Pant-HERS their fifth loss of the season without a win. North Pitt is 0-3 in the league.

Jackie Holmes had two hits for Greene Central. Linda Harrel had two hits for North Pitt, one of which was a triple.

Greene Central plays host to Ayden-Grifton Tuesday while North Pitt travels to Farmville.

Hunter Chooses Tar Heel Blue

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina, fresh from winning the NCAA basketball championship, got another prize Thursday when Southern Durham star Curtis Hunter announced he was joining the Tar Heels.

Hunter, who was voted the Associated Press' high school basketball player of the year in North Carolina, voiced his decision Thursday at a press conference.

"We all know today is April Fool's Day, but I'm not going to throw any of that stuff at you," Hunter said. "I think I'm going to change school colors (from Southern Durham's red and white). It's going to be Carolina Blue."

Hunter became the second prep star from North Carolina to commit to Dean Smith's national champions. Brad Daugherty, 6-foot-11, of Swannanoa Owen earlier said he would become a Tar Heel. North Carolina has also gotten a commitment from guard Steve Hale of Jenks, Okla.

Rated as one of the nation's top 10 prospects, Hunter averaged more than 20 points a game as a three-year starter, including 22 points, 12 rebounds and three assists a game as a senior.

The 6-4½ high school center had narrowed his list of schools to five with Duke, North Carolina State, Georgetown and DePaul rounding out the list.

Jamesville Bullets Romp Past Columbia By 12-2

COLUMBIA — Jamesville High School scored early and went on to record a 12-2 baseball victory over Columbia in a Tobacco Belt game yesterday.

Jamesville pushed over the initial run in the first inning. Greg Hardison singled and stole up, taking third on an out. After Carl Ange was hit by a pitch, Rex Bell hit a sacrifice fly to score Hardison.

The Bullets came right back with three in the second for a 4-0 lead. Carlton Rogers tripled to open the inning and after one out, Marty Swinson and Kevin Perry both walked, loading the bases. Hardison reached on an error, scoring two runs, and after Kevin Waters walked, Ange grounded into a fielder's choice that scored Perry.

Jamesville added two in the fourth and six in the fifth, while Columbia's only runs came in the third.

Wilkins To Turn Pro

ATLANTA (AP) — Georgia forward Dominique Wilkins has decided to pass up his final year of college basketball to put his name in the National Basketball Association hardship draft, The Atlanta Constitution said Thursday.

Wilkins, 22, rejected a reported million-dollar offer from the Detroit Pistons following his sophomore season, during which he averaged 23.6 points and 7.5 rebounds.

The 6-foot-7 junior from Washington, N.C., is a two-time All-Southeastern Conference selection.

The newspaper quoted sources at Georgia who said Wilkins will make an official announcement of his decision to leave school later this week.

"I've been turning things over in my head and I've just about made up my mind," Wilkins said Wednesday. "I guess I'll be saying something in a few days."

STEPS DOWN — John Chancellor, anchorman for "NBC Nightly News" since 1971, has stepped down from the position, but will still do commentary and analysis for the show. Photos above are dated 1965, 1973 and 1981. (AP Laserphoto)

Chancellor Has 'Dream Job' In New Assignment

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — John Chancellor, anchorman for NBC's "Nightly News" for more than a decade, says he considers his new assignment as analyst and commentator for the program "a dream job."

"My only problem," Chancellor said with a chuckle, "is that for years I've been telling people, I wish I could say this or that, and now that I have the chance, my mind's a blank. I don't know what I'm going to talk about Monday."

Chancellor talked Thursday about his new job, as he prepared for his final broadcast as anchorman tonight. Tom Brokaw, the former "Today" show host, and Roger Mudd, the veteran Washington correspondent, take over as co-anchors Monday.

The transition at NBC has been without fanfare, in rather stark contrast to the hoopla that accompanied a similar changeover — from Walter Cronkite to Dan Rather — at CBS a year ago.

In fact, NBC has included Chancellor prominently in print and broadcast ads promoting the Brokaw-Mudd "Nightly News." New studio sets constructed for the program include permanent positions for Chancellor opposite Brokaw in New York and Mudd in Washington.

Chancellor, though he will be called a "commentator," said he considers the new assignment "a reporting job."

"I think there's a need to report on stories that don't fall into the specific categories we seem to use for television news," he said Thursday. "The world now is so complex, I think we need someone to pull all these things together."

Chancellor, who is 54, had sought the new role for at least five years. He said he first mentioned his desire to leave the anchorman's desk in 1977.

"I regard it as the best job in journalism, certainly television journalism," Chancellor said of his new assignment. "I get to travel, choose the stories I want to do, and control my material, within the normal standards of good journalism."

Chancellor's tenure as anchorman, which began in 1971, was characterized by a calm, thoughtful and rather low-key approach to the day's news.

"John Chancellor will always be known as one who came in early, played it straight, took broadcast journalism seriously, and never wavered," former NBC colleague David Brinkley said recently. Characteristically, Chancellor did not attend a luncheon Wednesday honoring the new co-anchors, preferring, an associate said, to leave center stage to Brokaw and Mudd.

Chancellor grew up in Chicago, worked briefly for the Chicago Sun-Times, and moved on to WMAQ-TV, the NBC affiliate in his hometown, in 1950.

"I have been called the Woodrow Wilson of American television, and the man who wrote that did not mean it as a compliment," he said not long ago in a bit of self-examination.

"I take it the other way around. I am what I am, plus the sum of my experience and education, and I think I have learned that there's no way to fake it. Be what you are."

'Party' For Radio Net

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Entertainer Barbara Mandrell co-hosted a party on live coast-to-coast radio as a galaxy of country music stars came out for the premiere of the Music Country Network.

The network of 70 radio stations, from Seattle to San Diego and Albany, N.Y., to West Palm Beach, Fla., began Thursday night. A joint venture of WSM Inc. and The Associated Press, it runs seven days a week from 10 p.m. to 5 a.m. in all time zones.

"I wanted to come over and be here. This is making history," said Roy Acuff, the 78-year-old Grand Ole Opry patriarch known as the "king of county music."

Acuff led a stream of entertainers and songwriters into the network's studio at the Opryland entertainment complex in suburban Nashville to chat with Miss Mandrell, the Country Music Association's entertainer of the year, and regular host Chuck Morgan.

Folly In 'Two-Minute Debate'

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — "Up next, the two-minute debate ... and Shawn Weatherly."

The above promotional message, which comes midway through ABC's new Sunday night magazine show "Inside America," symbolizes to a great degree what's wrong with television.

Any show that pretends to do justice to important issues in two minutes and, in the same breath, hypes a former Miss Universe and her pandering fashion show is insulting the intelligence of the American viewer.

And that's exactly the point of "Inside America," the transparent show being tested this month in the hot seat against "60 Minutes," CBS' high-rated, high-brow newsmagazine show.

Everything that "60 Minutes" is, "Inside America" isn't. As hygienic host Dick Clark says in the opening, "Inside America" goes beyond the headlines of war, inflation and bad news to "what we're all really interested in."

Does Dick Clark, America's Peter Pan, really know what America wants? Maybe he thinks all we want is junk-food television.

Sunday's "60 Minutes" lineup includes a piece on little-known Japanese experiments on American POWs during World War II, and a profile on Ted Watkins, founder of an anti-poverty agency in Watts.

Meanwhile, "Inside America" will ask: "Who's Sexier: Tom Selleck or Burt Reynolds?" and "If you could do away with one of the Ten Commandments, which one would you drop?"

But it's not all fluff. "Inside America" gets serious, too, with the two-minute debate. The pilot show asks: Should the government take steps to restrict the import of foreign cars? A senator and a trade association president each get a minute, then another minute of rebuttal.

Only "Inside America" can raise America's consciousness on a multi-faceted issue by parceling out the same time it allots to station breaks. This is just a sop, anyway, since the Federal Communications Commission requires the first hour of prime time Sunday night to be news or kiddie programming.

Which one is "Inside America"? The network said it's "a non-fictional, informational program."

When "Inside America" gets the two-minute debate out of the way, it presses on to the really informative stuff. Miss Weatherly, the 1980 Miss Universe, provides one of her weekly fitness and health reports.

This one allows her to model the latest in skin-tight summer clothing, while the camera breathlessly runs its lens up and down her body. This is bound to excite anybody tired of looking at Harry Reasoner, and it fits neatly into ABC's programming strategy: When the ideas are stale, keep the bodies fresh.

Actually, if the FCC finds "Inside America's" news hole a little shallow, the program could qualify as a kid's toy. Its speeding-bullet pace is aimed at the younger generation's limited attention span, or making certain that viewers won't have time to think.

When soap opera idol Michael Damian does an "investigative" piece on the video arcade craze, the story plays pinball with our senses, bombarding us with twirling graphics, Henny Youngman one-liners and the quickie questions.

Interviews are compiled with video addicts, kids, parents, a masked man from gambler's anonymous, a child psychiatrist and a math professor, all the while Damian is bouncing around, singing an ode to electronic games. One parent praises the games, saying "it's better to spend $15-$20 on good, clean entertainment than bail them out of jail."

If there's an audience out there for "Inside America, you can bet that man will be watching.

Losing Fight On Absenteeism

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Principal Jim Turner fought a losing battle keeping his Southeast Guilford High School students on campus during last year's Greater Greensboro Open Pro-Am Day.

This year, he and his staff took an "if you can't beat 'em, join 'em" approach. They allowed students to miss school Wednesday with advance parental permission.

'Banned Book' Read-Out Begun

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor Edward Koch declared it "Banned Book Read-Out Day," and authors and actors gathered outside the city's public library to read aloud from books forbidden on some shelves.

They included "The Diary of Anne Frank," banned in Montello, Wis., and "Huckleberry Finn," found obscene at a junior high school in Warrington, Pa.

"It's a sign of a certain social viciousness and I feel it should be fought," said author Isaac Asimov, whose "Treasury of Humor" was banned in a small Tennessee school district for a joke on "the uselessness ... (of) that familiar four-letter word."

Life As It's Lived

The Child Prodigy Can Offer All The Answers

By GAIL MICHAELS

Meg concluded long ago that she got the lion's share of intelligence in our family. And it frustrates her to no end to have to answer to a couple of half-wits who have no advantage over her other than their size.

I suppose I shouldn't really feel offended. I'm the first to admit that I don't have it all together. I hurtle from crisis to crisis like a woman shooting the rapids on a cookie sheet. I don't expect a child as perceptive as Meg to overlook this.

Besides, I am only one among many whose brain cells, in her estimation, are deteriorating at an alarming rate. She tends to regard most adults as evolutionary throwbacks. She is, consequently, an anarchist. She has picketed our house with a sign that read, "Kids shoo hav rites." And she constantly questions me about the necessity for laws made by adults.

According to her, for instance, we don't need traffic lights. If a traffic jam were to occur in the absence of one, we could just weave in and out among the cars until we got where we were going, and to heck with all the other drivers.

She gives my arguments against such schemes no credence whatsoever. No matter what I do, she doesn't take anything I say seriously. I try to be firm, as I was when, after considerable fruitless discussion, I insisted that she go to the bathroom before bedtime.

She looked at me as if I were chasing butterflies with an embroidery hoop. "I told you I don't need to go," she said. "I've already been today."

I also tried to establish mutual respect by taking an interest in her projects. The latest was a picture on black construction paper of a red and black Easter basket. I complimented her on her effort and taped the picture to the refrigerator.

"I didn't particularly care for it myself, but I guess Mommy knows what she likes," she told her father later with a note of doubt in her voice.

In short, I am usually no real use in her world or any other. She recently told her grandmother that my favorite activity was resting. "She loves to rest better than anything except her children and Daddy."

Naturally, her grandmother felt compelled to relate this to me. During the telling of this anecdote, Meg almost succeeded in chasing a smile away with a look of monumental gravity, and, when her grandmother finished her story, Meg gave an exaggerated sigh.

"All you people ever do is tell stories about what I say."

I could tell by the gleam in her eyes that, if we're able to indulge in such interesting pastimes, there may be hope for us yet.

Answer to yesterday's puzzle. computer

CRYPTOQUIP 4-2

DSM QLWP BIL VLMGP BILFMI

Yesterday's Cryptquip — WILD STACCATO NOTES SELDOM WILL CALM ONE.

Today's Cryptquip clue: Pequals Y

The Cryptquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Quiet Flu Season Is Winding Down

ATLANTA (AP) — The 1981-1982 flu season, winding down with the arrival of spring, has been "a quiet one," a researcher with the Centers for Disease Control says.

The Atlanta-based CDC, in its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report today, noted only a few confirmed occurrences of flu nationwide.

"There's flu out there, of course, because we never get more than a small fraction of the cases documented," said Dr. Karl Kappus. No new influenza cases have been confirmed in Georgia in the last week, Kappus said, adding that fewer than 10 have been reported all winter.

CDC said three isolates of the type A flu virus known as the Bangkok strain were reported from the U.S. Air Force in the first two weeks of March — one from an enlisted woman at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., and two from small children at Brooks Air Force Base, Texas.

North Carolina has reported its first flu virus isolates of the season, both type B, or Singapore, taken from children. The reports, in the second week of March, coincided with increased school absenteeism in western North Carolina, CDC said.

The first isolates of the A strain known as Brazil or England reported from Michigan were obtained in early March from adults in sporadic cases there, CDC said.

Nancy Says Money Can Not Buy Drug Answers

NARCOTICS "AND

FIRST LADY SHARES A HUG — First Lady Nancy Reagan shares a big hug Thursday with an unidentified teenager at the end of her visit with Narcotics Anonymous members at Calvary Chapel in Sandy Springs, Ga. Because of organization rules, the youngster can't be identified. In background are Bob and Charlotte Czekala, and at right is Le Verne Campbell, minister at Calvary Chapel. ATLANTA (AP) — First lady Nancy Reagan defends administration cutbacks in federal funding for drug abuse research by saying money isn't the answer to the drug abuse problem in the United States.

"I don't really believe money is the answer to the whole problem," Mrs. Reagan said Thursday evening. "I don't think money can buy parental involvement or awareness."

Mrs. Reagan's comments were prompted by criticism of administration cuts in federal drug abuse programs as the first lady visited a Narcotics Anonymous meeting in suburban Sandy Springs.

Fifteen adolescents enrolled in a privately funded drug treatment program attended the meeting.

Mrs. Reagan, who was scheduled to attend an anti-drug conference at Georgia State University today, said parental awareness and involvement will do more to solve the nation's drug abuse problems than additional federal funding.

"If we don't do something, we're in danger of losing a whole generation," she said. "I think this is such a terrible problem ... that I'd like to do whatever I can to help. The path I've chosen is to try to draw attention to it."

Dr. Douglas Talbott, head of another local drug treatment center and an observer Thursday evening, told Mrs. Reagan she could do more than just draw attention to the drug abuse problem.

He told her she also could help by talking to President Reagan about reinstating "seriously compromised funding" for addiction research centers such as the National Institute of Drug Abuse.

"She has made a contribution by bringing the problem to the forefront," Talbott said of Mrs. Reagan. "I'd like to see her actually working to secure more funding, by getting the administration to put a top priority on this as the nation's top health problem."

Earlier in the day, Mrs. Reagan visited Rivers Elementary School, where a class of 25 third-graders was told about the unhealthy effects of marijuana and the peer pressure they might experience later to try the drug.

At one point, Mrs. Reagan joined in, giving the children this advice: "At your age, at your point in life right now, if you can get a very good feeling about yourself, a good picture of self-esteem and pride in yourself, it's going to see you through an awful lot of problems that you're going to come to later in life."

Several children repeated the plots of television shows involving drugs, prompting Mrs. Reagan to ask: "Do you think that young people would listen more to the whole drug problem ... if they were told about it from people who were well known, like well-known actors or athletes?"

Swamps For Sewage Treatment

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A group of college researchers have suggested the use of swamps as sophisticated sewage treatment plants.

Researchers from North Carolina State University and East Carolina University presented the plans to the North Carolina Coastal Resources Commission's Water Quality Task Force.

The researchers say that if the research becomes reality, coastal cities that have had difficulty getting permission from the Environmental Protection Agency to build mechanical treatment systems might have an alternative.

Forrest Westall, of the North Carolina Division of Environmental Management, said the state is considering permitting a test swamp treatment project if a suitable location can be found.

Westall said the division will have to modify water quality regulations for the test to begin, because the regulations currently prohibit any project that would cause a body of water to violate the state's minimum water quality standards.

Mark Brinson, a researcher at East Carolina, said swamp treatment is a tempting alternative.

Present methods include dumping the effluent of mechanical sewage treatment plants into rivers, where it is broken down by stream movement, or onto land, where it is used as a natural fertilizer for agricultural operations.

However, Brinson says both methods are so common they are beginning to contribute to a deterioration of the nation's streams and wetlands.

He said wetlands act as natural filters because water and nutrients dumped into them move very slowly toward adjacent rivers and streams. In the process of moving through a swamp or wetland, the nutrients are filtered out by the grasses and other plants growing there.

Brinson said tests where the procedure is used showed that swamps had a good capacity for breaking down sewage that had been partially treated by mechanical means. The swamps were able to break down as much as 90 percent of nitrate in the sewage and could store much of the phosphorus the sewage contained.

Brinson said other states have used the method with varying degrees of success, and that he and several colleagues also tested the process on a very small scale in the Tar Swamp and Creeping Swamp.
