See Renewed Tobacco Allotment Debate

BURLINGTON, N.C. (AP) - North Carolina's tobacco growers are heading for the fields this spring with the knowledge they'll be paying more for growing less. The reason: Too much tobacco was grown last year, oversupplying the market. In 1981, farmers had a good year and heavy harvests. Most farmers took advantage of a federal price-support program stipulation allowing them to market up to 10 percent above their quota. This year, the federal government has cut production by a corresponding amount. According to the North Carolina Department of Agriculture, the state's quota for 1982 will be 643 million pounds, down from 716 million pounds last year. Farmers depending on volume production for a profit must rent more allotments to produce the same amount of tobacco. As the demand for allotments increases, so does the going rate. In Alamance and other counties in the Old Belt tobacco market, farmers paid an average last year of 30 to 35 cents per pound to rent allotments, said John Cyrus, the Agriculture Department's director of tobacco affairs. This year's lease rate is expected to be 40 to 45 cents. The rate is higher in portions of Eastern North Carolina, where farmers are reporting paying as high as 65 cents. Last year, they averaged 45 cents to 48 cents a pound. Despite those rates, some growers are scrambling to get more, prompting allotment holders to raise prices. Officials say the problem is most severe in the Old and Middle belts, where practically all growers overproduced last year following several bad crops in the late 1970s. The search for allotments prompted Caswell County grower Ken Maes to advertise in a local paper that he was willing to pay 60 cents a pound - almost double last year's rates. He's still waiting for a response to his ad. Maes said the allotment system and price support program need some adjustments and that "somebody's going to get hurt" when the program is revised - as he is sure it will be. Allotments are based on pounds, but most growers refer to allotments in acres. The average allotment size is 3.3 acres. An average acre of tobacco generally produces about 1,700 pounds. According to state figures, more than 116,000 people hold allotments across the state. Forty-three percent of those holding quotas do not grow tobacco but lease it to farmers, pocketing an estimated $120 million last year in rents, according to state estimates. There is no breakdown of lease profits county-by-county. (Please turn to Page 7)

Difficulties For Haig Peace Role; Time Running Out

By MICHAEL WEST Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) - New difficulties were reported today in talks to end the Falkland Islands crisis, and the U.S. Embassy said Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. was planning to leave London within hours. It did not give his destination, but the evening newspaper, The Standard, said the pilot of Haig's Air Force jet had filed a flight plan for Washington. A British government spokesman said the difficulties arose in telephone conversations Haig had with Argentine Foreign Minister Nicanor Costa Mendez after Haig's talks with Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher Monday. British Foreign Secretary Francis Pym said Haig "is now considering how best to handle these difficulties." Haig was in London attempting to avert a war between Britain and Argentina over the Falkland Islands. The British Broadcasting Corp. quoted British government sources as saying "the Argentine government has reneged on assurances it gave Mr. Haig when he was in Buenos Aires." It didn't elaborate. Haig, emerging from Mrs. Thatcher's official residence, refused to say what had gone wrong. He returned to his hotel and, British press reports said, was in phone contact with Buenos Aires and Washington. The Argentine news agency DYN said Costa Mendez "flatly and energetically rejected" a proposal by Haig for tripartite administration of the Falklands by Britain, Argentina and the United States because it did not include British recognition of Argentine sovereignty over the British colony in the South Atlantic. The London Times reported: "The British government has stated it is eventually willing to negotiate sovereignty, given total withdrawal of Argentine forces and authorities. But the crucial catch, which emerged last night, is that no change in the status of the islands would be contemplated by ministers before the end of this year. "Clearly, the Argentines would be unwilling to give up possession of the islands without tighter commitments from the British on the timing of a long term settlement." Haig returned to London from Buenos Aires Monday, met for 1 1/2 hours with Mrs. Thatcher and other British leaders, and then "had a number of telephone conversations" with Costa Mendez during the evening, State Department spokesman Dean Fischer reported. "A complication has arisen at that end," said Fischer. "We are hopeful it will be clarified tomorrow (Tuesday)." Haig had planned to return to the Argentine capital Monday evening, but the Buenos Aires newspaper La Nacion said he told Costa Mendez: "I am suspending the trip because the two sides present no possibility of accord. But I will continue working, trying to bring the two countries closer together."

Arab Outrage Undiminished Boys Shot In Jerusalem Riots

JERUSALEM (AP) - An 8-year-old boy was killed and 27 other Palestinians were wounded in anti-Israeli rioting today, and a Jewish immigrant from the United States shouted slogans and flashed the V-for-victory sign as he was arraigned for the bloody attack on one of Islam's holiest shrines. The boy, hit by a bullet, bled to death when a mob blocked the ambulance trying to get him to a hospital, the military command said. It said 21 Palestinians were wounded trying to attack a small army encampment near Jabalya refugee camp in the occupied Gaza Strip. It said 11 of the Palestinians were hit by bullets and 10 by rocks thrown by fellow rioters, and that four soldiers were wounded by stones, one seriously. Troops shot six other Arabs, aged 12 to 13, during a riot at the Nuseirat refugee camp in the central Gaza Strip, the military said. In other action, the military command said two Palestinian guerrillas infiltrated across the Jordan River during the night, threw a grenade at an army patrol in the West Bank and escaped back to Jordan. A spokesman said there were no injuries. Bearded, bespectacled Alan Harry Goodman was led into a Jerusalem court shouting "justice, justice, for national liberation." Magistrate Haman Shelah ordered him held for 15 days on suspicion of "murder and all related offenses" at the Dome of the Rock. Two Arabs died in the Easter Sunday attack. A police spokesman said the other offenses were too numerous to describe in a routine request for extension of custody, the customary procedure until the police investigation is completed. Goodman was not called on to enter a plea. Answering Shelah's questions, in English, he said he did not have a lawyer and could not afford one. He added in a firm, low voice, "It doesn't matter. This is a political action rather than just a legal matter." The judge said he would appoint a defense lawyer. At one point, the thick-set man tried to break away from the security men holding his arms and lost his glasses in the struggle. Israeli newspapers reported that Goodman told police he wanted to "liberate" the Temple Mount from Moslem control and to avenge the deaths of Jews in Palestinian terrorist attacks. On Monday night, Goodman took part in a police reconstruction of the assault. The immigrant from Baltimore, a soldier in the Israeli army, is accused of emptying his M-16 automatic rifle Sunday in the Mosque of Omar. Also called the Dome of the Rock, it is Islam's third holiest shrine after Mecca and Medina because it is built around the stone from which Moslem tradition says the prophet Mohammed ascended into heaven. The Temple Mount, a plateau in the Arab quarter of Jerusalem, is also revered by the Jews because it was the site of King Solomon's temple and still contains the temple's western wall, the Wailing Wall that is Judaism's most revered shrine. Police said Goodman killed two Arabs and wounded nine before he ran out of ammunition. About 150 people were injured in the rioting that followed Sunday and Monday in Arab East Jerusalem, the West Bank and Gaza, including 16 Palestinian Arabs hit by Israeli gunfire Monday. Israeli newspapers, responding to reports of a probe of possible links between Goodman and Jewish extremist groups, urged the government to crack down on such organizations as Kach, a tiny offshoot of the U.S.-based Jewish Defense League led by Rabbi Meir Kahane. Kach denied any connection with Goodman. In New York, Kahane said Goodman was never a member of Kach or the JDL, but he called his act "courageous" and offered to pay for a lawyer for him. A State Department spokesman said the U.S. Embassy was told a consul could visit Goodman as soon as the police finished questioning him. Police arrested 37 Arab leaders who tried to march down Salahadin Street, the main shopping street in Arab East Jerusalem. All were released on bail. Most Arab shops and schools were closed in response to the call by the Moslem Supreme Council of Jerusalem for a week's general strike. King Khaled of Saudi Arabia called on Moslems throughout the world to observe a daylong strike Wednesday to demonstrate solidarity with the Arabs in the territories occupied by Israel. The Saudi state radio said the following countries would participate: Iran, Pakistan, Morocco, Lebanon, Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates, Bahrain, Qatar and Saudi Arabia. Morocco requested a U.N. Security Council meeting on the shooting, and the council scheduled private consultations this morning on the request. A public council meeting was expected to follow.

Reagan Plans Propose Tuition Tax Credits

By TERENCE HUNT Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan has decided to ask Congress to approve a package of tuition tax credits that could provide up to $500 to parents of children in private and parochial elementary and secondary schools, sources say. The program would be phased in over three years, probably beginning in 1983, administration sources said Monday. It was not immediately clear how large the initial credit would be, but sources said it would climb to a maximum of $500 when the program is in full force. The sources, who insisted on anonymity, said the program would be structured to focus its benefits on lower- and middle-income families. The size of a taxpayer's credit would depend on his income. Reagan is to outline the proposal in an address Thursday at the National Catholic Education Association's annual convention in Chicago, the nation's largest Catholic-school district. Thousands of Roman Catholic educators are meeting there this week in a convention that opened Monday. Catholic parents were told at that convention today that tuition tax credits was an idea whose "time ... has come," and that Reagan's proposal will pass Congress this year if the parents mount an effective lobbying campaign in Congress. Frank Monahan of the government liaison office of the United States Catholic Conference said, however, that unless the president lobbies for his proposal in Congress, "the Reagan tax credit bill will be perceived on Capitol Hill as an administration going through the motions of making good on a campaign commitment." About 5 million children attend private schools, 3 1/2 million of them in Roman Catholic schools. As a presidential candidate, Reagan endorsed the concept of tuition tax credits, but sometimes added the caveat that adoption of any program would have to wait until it is fiscally prudent. Ironically, announcement of Reagan's plan comes in the midst of negotiations between the White House and Congress on how to curb federal budget deficits, now expected to exceed $100 billion for fiscal 1983. No estimate was available on how much Reagan's proposal would cost the Treasury. Tuition tax credits have been proposed in the past, but have run into obstacles in Congress from those who fear they conflict with the Constitution's requirement for separation of church and state or from those concerned that such aid would come only at the expense of public schools. Reagan's tuition tax credit would be limited to elementary and secondary school pupils. It would not cover students in private and parochial colleges.

Secret Polish Radio Station Claims Abuses

By THOMAS NETTER Associated Press Writer

WARSAW, Poland (AP) - The resistance to martial law in Poland launched its first underground radio station, Radio Solidarity, with an 8 1/2-minute broadcast that accused the country's official media of lying about treatment of jailed union activists. The station said it would broadcast again on April 30. "This war had and still has many victims," said the FM station, which went on the air Monday night with an eight-note signature tune taken from a song popular during the Nazi occupation and two announcers, a man and a woman. The program denied reports by Warsaw radio and television and the government-controlled newspapers that the thousands of jailed members of the independent labor federation Solidarity were receiving better treatment than common criminals. "It is not true that internment is something different from ordinary prison," said the station. "We still get information about beatings in internment camps." It reported that a Catholic theology student was beaten during interrogation and was still subject to physical abuse although he was in need of hospitalization. There was no official reaction to the broadcast. The radio's range was difficult to determine, but some Poles living on the outskirts of Warsaw said they had been unable to tune in even though they knew the frequency, suggesting its range was limited to central Warsaw. Although Solidarity activists have circulated clandestine pamphlets and broadsides since Premier Wojciech Jaruzelski declared martial law Dec. 13 and suspended the union, it was the first anti-government broadcast. It was assumed that it had the approval of those union leaders still at large since rumors of the broadcast were around long enough for them to disclaim any connection with it. The broadcast hour, 9 p.m., had been announced previously by typewritten notices circulated in Warsaw. The announcers asked listeners to indicate the quality of reception by flashing their house lights three times if very good, twice if good and once if bad. The male speaker apologized to those unable to receive the broadcast "because we realize how our voice is expected." "The two of us will always be on the air," he said. "God grant it to the successful end when our radio station stops being needed." Poles were told not to let holidays like Easter make them forget the harsh realities of life under martial law. "The families gathered at the Easter tables ... and for a moment we forgot that we are living in a country which is at war," a war declared by authorities "against their own nation."

Guillain-Barre Hasn't Got Best Of Her — Her Mind

By CANDY HATCHER
Burlington Daily Times-News

WHITSETT, N.C. (AP) — Edith Buckaloo is paralyzed, but her mind is sharp, her eyes vibrant. And her lips patiently wait to tell a story that began over two years ago.

The 17-year-old Whitsett girl is a victim of Guillain-Barre Syndrome, a disease similar to infantile paralysis, often "French polio."

The pretty blonde lies at home in a hospital bed by a window, surrounded by sunshine and medical equipment. The machine breathing for her snores quietly, and Edith's blue eyes dart back and forth, sensitive to every movement.

Two pictures painted by Edith hang on the walls. One is a countryside landscape; the other is a still life, a bowl of flowers.

Her long, fine hair is spread over her pillow, her delicate features touched with the makeup the nurse has applied.

As a freshman in high school, Edith sang in the church youth chorus, was a cheerleader and a member of the track team at Eastern Guilford High School, and worked at Memorial Hospital of Alamance County as a candy stripper.

Now she is trapped in a body that refuses to work. She moves her lips silently to say what she feels, and her eyes communicate her sense of humor and determination.

Because no one knows what causes the disease or how it is transmitted, doctors can only treat the symptoms of Guillain-Barre Syndrome.

The major problems caused by the disease are insufficient breathing and blood flow through the paralyzed limbs and loss of use of involuntary muscles.

Guillain-Barre Syndrome is best known as the disease that followed the swine flu vaccine injections in the controversial mid-70s effort to prevent flu. In many cases the disease succeeds an illness such as pneumonia, measles, or mononucleosis.

Edith did not take a swine flu vaccination. Her disease came after a cold and cough.

The paralysis usually works from the feet and toes through the legs and into the trunk, then to the arms. In extreme cases, such as Edith's, the disease works its way into the lungs.

There is a 95 percent chance of recovery and younger patients tend to recover more quickly than older ones, according to Dr. John Kaplan of the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta. Most Guillain-Barre patients recover complete use of their limbs within a year.

Edith is not one of those. In January 1980 she contracted a cold and a lingering, hacking cough. Over the next few months she ran a fever and felt tingling in her hands. At track-team practice her timing was off.

By Easter, Edith had suffered from weakness and an inability to grip. Changing clothes became a chore.

On a trip to Carawinds amusement park in Charlotte, Edith had to be helped out of a ride. She was too weak to stand by herself.

Edith visited her doctor, who sent her to a neurosurgeon and then to a neurologist. The neurologist immediately diagnosed the case as Guillain-Barre Syndrome. Treatment with drugs helped Edith at first, but then she grew worse.

She entered Duke Hospital in June 1980 for replacement of her blood with plasma and plasma substitutes from donors.

But her condition deteriorated further.

In August 1980 she returned to Duke, having lost the ability to use her arms and legs. She stayed in the hospital until January 1981, when she was moved to Wesley Long Community Hospital in Greensboro. A tube was inserted through her skin into her windpipe and a ventilator keeps her breathing.

Edith uses her lips to form letters and words but she cannot speak. She has no control over any part of her body below the neck.

But she insists on maintaining her feminine appearance, wearing a frilly nightgown and cosmetics and keeping her hair neatly brushed. She hesitates to wear reading glasses around strangers.

Edith says she feels vulnerable because of her inability to talk or perform tasks for herself. "If I am ever off the ventilator, nobody would know it," she says.

"Probably the biggest plus for Edith is that her doctor has been very honest with her from the beginning," a nurse said. "It's a big reason for her acceptance of the disease."

Although Edith has been in the hospital since the end of her freshman year, she has kept up with her class and is now a junior.

"She takes advantage of everything she can do. Edith is extremely bright, extremely motivated, and that's the biggest part of her success," says Jane Moore, who teaches her algebra, American literature, Spanish and world history.

Recently Edith communicated with the wife of a Guillain-Barre patient. The woman told her that "you don't control (the disease), it controls you."

But Edith disagrees. "I won't let this disease get the best of me," she says. "I just know I will get better. That's what is keeping me going. I have no doubt in my mind that I will get better."

Dear Abby Harold, Still A Stepper, Father-To-Be?

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Harold (not his real name) and I will celebrate our 57th wedding anniversary in August. I am 78 and Harold is 81. He was quite a stepper (ladies' man) in the early years of our marriage, but I was patient and understanding, and with God's help he settled down and became a good husband and a model father. We have five grown children, 17 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Our neighbors have a 20-year-old daughter who is expecting a baby in July. She is not married, and she's been telling everyone that my Harold is the father of her unborn child! Harold doesn't deny that he has had a recent fling with her, but he insists that it isn't possible for a man of 81 to father a child. Is it? I need to know.

GRANNY IN ARLINGTON, VA.

DEAR GRANNY: It's possible for a man in his 80s to father a child. And although it's rare, it's also possible for a man in his 90s to father a child, so if I were you, I'd keep my eye on Harold.

DEAR ABBY: I am 29, but look much younger because I am so small. I have stepchildren who range from age 10 to 17. Now, it is obvious that I couldn't have a 17-year-old child when I myself have been taken for a 20-year-old. But you wouldn't believe how many strangers stop me and ask, "Are you their mother?"

I wouldn't mind if the person were friendly, but most people are just nosy and demand to know in a very rude tone. I am tempted to tell these people that it's none of their business, but instead I always say, "No, I am their stepmother."

Friends I have told this to, and even the kids themselves, say I should just say yes and watch people's eyes bug out of their heads.

My question: Would that be wrong of me? How would you handle this?

DEAR TOO YOUNG: I'd just smile and say, "No, I'm not their mother — but I wish I were."

DEAR ABBY: My daughter's divorce has been final for over a year (no children). She's 30, attractive, intelligent (college grad) and has a lot on the ball. She dates a little but not as much as she'd like to. (She's not the type to push herself.)

The problem: She's ashamed to go out in public unless she has an escort. We've had several arguments about this, but she won't listen to me. I've tried to tell her that she has to get out and socialize, and it's not necessary to have a date for every concert or civic event. She doesn't even want to go to family gatherings or celebrations unless she has a man on her arm. Lots of people in town don't even know she's divorced.

What is your feeling on this, Abby? Maybe she'll listen to you.

PORTLAND MOM

DEAR MOM: I can understand why your daughter would be reluctant to attend a "couples" affair without a date. But family gatherings and civic events do not require an escort. A woman who's interested in dating again after a divorce should get out where she can be seen. Visibility is essential to popularity.

CONFIDENTIAL TO CHRIS IN CINCY: Don't send for the Salvation Army trucks to pick up your plaid clothes — further investigation (and a lot of mail) convinced me that plaids are ALWAYS fashionable.

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple, "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's new booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (37 cents) envelope to: Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I've been feeling strange this week and finally figured it out. It's been eight full days since I've seen the entertainment industry award itself.

There's no business like show business for handing out trophies to themselves. I've seen maybe 35 or 40 shows this year featuring tear-stained faces giving humble speeches that make monks look like braggarts.

There's the Golden Globes, People's Choice, Critic's Choice, Cannes Film Festival, American Movie Awards, the Oscars, Emmys, Tonys, Grammys, and enough country-Western awards to have Barbara Mandrell changing her dress every 15 minutes and giving an acceptance speech.

At first, I must confess I enjoyed the glitter of the event and razzle-dazzle of all those stars in one room. After awhile, it was like watching "The Wizard of Oz" for the 18th time. You start rooting for the tornado.

I realize I no longer love a winner unless they show up for the award. I used to anticipate someone falling out of her dress like the spectators of the Indy 500 waiting for someone to hit the north wall. I no longer care.

And I can no longer sustain my enthusiasm at 1 a.m. anymore for the man who won an award for laying the sound track on the black-and-white foreign documentary, "Midnight Escargot," and accepts the award in French. I have begun to analyze

Against The Grain

Just as the law, diplomacy has a long arm. That has been demonstrated quite handsomely in the case of Saudi Prince Turki bin Abdul Aziz and his new home-away-from-home in Miami. It has taken three trips to Miami by the former U.S. ambassador to Saudi Arabia, John West, and action by the U.S. State Department to smooth the ruffled feathers of Prince Turki and the equally upset Miami Police Department.

Most of the smoothing went to Prince Turki, who was granted diplomatic immunity from prosecution after Turki and Miami's police filed a suit and a countersuit that nearly led to criminal charges being filed against the prince.

West, who also is a former governor of South Carolina, spent four years in Saudi Arabia as a diplomat. He drew on that experience when he returned recently to Miami, explaining publicly that Turki won diplomatic immunity to keep him available as a source of relief for Americans charged in Saudi Arabia. West pointed out that 30,000 Americans reside in Turki's homeland. Many of them, he said, run afoul of Saudi laws, including those which prohibit drinking of alcoholic beverages. Princes such as Turki are usually the only source of mercy in such cases, West said. Without their help, West said Americans convicted in Saudi Arabia face public whippings or long jail terms.

Undoubtedly West's version is accurate. But, even knowing that, the fact that someone with "pull" can be placed above the law of the land still goes against the grain.

Extended Per Pound Profit

Statistics compiled by a North Carolina State University economist reflect an interesting twist for flue-cured tobacco growers. According to Dr. Charles R. Pugh, growers' average costs increased by 12 cents per pound of tobacco last year while their profits climbed by slightly less than 11 cents per pound.

Pugh's report, based on records kept by 42 tobacco-producing farms, placed the average difference between enumerated costs and market prices at 35 cents per pound, up from 24.4 cents per pound in 1980.

The costs reflect actual operating expenses plus depreciation. For 1981, the average cost was set at $1.31 per pound of tobacco sold. The actual increase was one of the largest jumps in tobacco production costs in several years — but higher market prices and the stepped up price support program actually extended the per-pound profit margin.

THIS AFTERNOON

Low-Key Senator

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR CLEMMONS — One man's throwaways can be another man's treasure.

Two of the state Senate's biggest weights — Sens. Kenneth Royall and Harold Hardison — passed up the chance to speak at the N.C. Editorial Writers Conference this month. The editors then invited their third choice, Sen. Bob Jordan of Mt. Gilead, and he couldn't have been happier to accept.

"I don't get an opportunity like this all the time," Jordan, a candidate for lieutenant governor, said after speaking to the small audience that included editorial writers from about 26 newspapers.

The biggest political problem Jordan faces now is that few people outside of the Legislature and the Democratic Party know who he is. Very few of the writers had met him before the conference. "He's unknown around the state," one publisher from Jordan's state senatorial district said. "He's real low-key."

Jordan is 15 months away from a formal announcement about his candidacy. But, on the other side of the thin line that distinguishes between formal and informal candidates for office, Jordan is quite frank about his plans to run. He'll be in the race unless something totally unexpected happens between now and the end of the 1983 legislative session.

Jordan, 49, is a trained forester and co-owner of Jordan Lumber Company.

His father, Robert Jordan Jr., was well known in political circles for having chaired the Montgomery County Board of Commissioners for more than a generation. Sen. Jordan's base of political support comes from connections made through his father and through his own service for the University of North Carolina — first on the Board of Trustees from 1961 until merger in 1971 and then on the Board of Governors until he was elected to the state Senate in 1976.

In the senate, Jordan is about as powerful as one can be without sitting in Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green's triumvirate of Royall, Hardison and Sen. Craig Lawing. He's chairman of Senate's Base Budget Committee, the panel that spent six weeks at the beginning of the 1981 session reviewing the state's two-year $10.9 billion continuing budget — that is, the portion of Gov. Jim Hunt's budget earmarked to continue work the state already had in operation.

As powerful as that job is, Jordan is not part of the Senate's inner circle. "I try to steer clear of total identification with the leadership," he says. "I don't

Other Editors Say A Bipartisan Job

(Washington Daily News)

We want to make it very clear that whenever the party primary date is finally set, both Democrats and Republicans are involved in the bipartisan effort to defeat four-year terms for North Carolina legislators.

When Beaufort County Democrats met in convention, a resolution was offered against four-year terms for legislators, and not a single voice was heard against the motion.

Several other Democratic conventions in other counties passed similar resolutions against four-year terms. Pitt County and Durham County, we read, passed resolutions calling for the four-year terms.

In Beaufort County Republicans have not yet met in convention, but the Republican leadership in the county has come out strongly against four-year terms.

Again, we want to point out that no one asked the legislature for passage of this issue. It is purely and totally a selfish matter among a majority of the legislators who are seeking to "feather their own political nests".

Had there been a cry from the people of our state for such a referendum, we could at least give some justification for the referendum. But when legislators vote for themselves and their own personal interests ahead of what the people want, then it is time for all of us to ask some questions.

Gere in the Pamlico area we have almost 16,000 voters registered including Democrats, Republicans and unaffiliated. While we ought to have around 23,000 registered, the fact is that too many of our people, otherwise eligible to vote, are not able to do so now because they are not registered.

It would seem to us that such an issue as this one calling for four-year terms ought to serve as a sufficient slap in the face for people in all walks of life now to get registered so that they can vote against the proposal.

When the leadership in our state of both Democrats and Republicans stand up together and say "let us defeat this proposal" then all of us should take due notice. And today bi-partisan leadership along with bi-partisan rank and file people are calling for the defeat of this four-year term proposal. It is our sincere hope that we can defeat this issue so strongly that we can point to the legislators who voted for it and ask them "have you forgotten who sent you there?"

Strength For Today

AGE OF HURRY

People often remark that the tension of this age is unprecedented. It would be hard to prove such a contention when we think of tensions which must have existed in past ages when people were under threats of invasion, massacre, persecution, and plague. The present age differs from past ages and not in the amount of tension but in the speed with which changes occur and consequently the speed with which we must adapt to them.

But not everyone or every-

Unthinkable Is Thought

WASHINGTON — This is the perfect time of year in our capital city — a time of tulips and daffodils and cherry blossoms, of greening willows and warming sun. For the next several weeks Washington will be the most beautiful capital in the world, lovelier than London, more enchanting than Paris.

It is thus a most appropriate time, on this Easter weekend, to think of Washington in flames, of Washington destroyed. For the first time since we incinerated the people of Hiroshima, 37 years ago come August, Americans are beginning to think upon such things. We are beginning to comprehend the consequences of atomic war. The spring brings a stirring of imagination, of apprehension, and if God please, of determination also.

It is an astonishing development in our public affairs, this awakening from a deep sleep. From time to time in these 37 years, generally on anniversary observances, we have heard talk of Hiroshima. We have been kept informed of nuclear tests, of new members joining the multinational nuclear club. Our political leaders have engaged in well-publicized debates upon the limitation by treaty of nuclear arms.

Yet it is a curious thing. It is only now, in this spring of 1982, that both here and abroad the unthinkable is being truly thought. Three books about atomic war are scheduled for April publication; the news magazines are filled with analyses and interviews; two earnest resolutions, impressively sponsored, are pending in the Senate. Last week, after a faltering start, Mr. Reagan seized the initiative. He proposes face-to-face talks in June with Leonid Brezhnev on measures that might be taken now toward arms control.

Victor Hugo once remarked upon the impossibility of resisting an invasion of ideas. That is what we are seeing this spring. Some of the invading ideas are horrifying. The idea of Washington in ruins is such an idea. We are beginning to understand, in ways we could not or would not understand before, what nuclear holocaust would mean.

Other ideas, constructive ideas, are gathering force. A conviction is growing that the mind of man, having conceived the idea of self-destruction, is equally capable of conceiving self-salvation. An earthly Armageddon is avoidable. Means can be found — prudent, achievable means — for preventing the ultimate, irreversible madness of nuclear devastation.

In this awakening process, we grow impatient with petty haggling over imaginary numbers. What earthly difference does it make if the Soviet Union has 7,868 megatons of destructive capacity and we have only 3,505 megatons. Is it really material that we have 9,480 warheads and the Soviets have but 8,040? Does any person seriously suppose that if we were to double our nuclear arsenal, while the Soviets obligingly stood still, such "parity" would have meaning?

I doubt that the figures have meaning even to the military or the diplomatic mind. The theory of mutual assured destruction is a fine

Dismay Over MX Politics

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Hardening lines in the struggle over the MX missile between the Republican Senate and the Reagan administration threaten a shattering defeat for the president's effort to build U.S. nuclear strength as the only way to induce the Soviet Union to agree to major, mutual arms reductions.

Outraged that the Pentagon has not yet come up with a "survivable" basing system for the MX, the Senate Armed Services Committee — with defense-oriented Chairman John Tower in the lead — knocked out all money for the first nine MX missiles in the new defense budget.

That deletion, as much in sorrow as in anger, adds long-range strategic missiles to the deep troubles President Reagan is already having in holding European support for NATO's nuclear program. With both these modernization programs under highly emotionalized attacks from pressure groups promoting a nuclear freeze, Reagan's fundamental nuclear strategy — arm to disarm — is in perilous shape.

That may explain Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger's assent to William P. Clark's stern suggestion that the Pentagon come up with a survivable base for the MX, pronto. Ten days after an unannounced visit by Tower to Clark, the president's national security assistant, in which Tower asked for White House pressure on the Pentagon, Weinberger on April 9 ordered a full-scale briefing for himself on a new MX basing system.

The new system, called Densepack, is being considered by Republican leaders, including Tower and Sen. John Warner, chairman of the nuclear forces subcommittee. It would put the MX in super-hardened silos, close together, making use of techniques designed to enhance survivability.

Weinberger's previous moves on the MX chessboard have dismayed the congressional defense bloc, culminating in his now-canceled decision to put the missile in old and unprotected Titan silos. But up to now, the battle over MX basing has been more philosophic than concrete. The Warner subcommittee's lopsided vote deleting the first nine missiles moved the struggle to harder ground and sounded a real alarm within the administration.

Shortly after that vote (which the subcommittee called a "deferral without prejudice"), Warner wrote Weinberger March 23 giving him three days to answer this question: How quickly could Weinberger select "a survivability-based system" and have it in operation?

But Weinberger was on another trip abroad. The ambiguous answer that came back March 26 infuriated Warner and Tower. Signed by Under Secretary of Defense Richard D. DeLauer, it insisted that the Pentagon's present, non-survivable basing plan was "sound." It blamed the subcommittee for doing "damage" to the president's overall nuclear modernization program and delaying "the date at which the Soviets will have incentive to stop their arms buildup and negotiate seriously for major reductions in nuclear arms."

"Insulting," one committee insider told us. The result of that letter was to harden the full committee, whose unanimous vote on April 1 confirmed the subcommittee decision. That stripped from the president the heart of his strategic nuclear program.

Under best of circumstances, the record of the administration's handling of the MX would raise disturbing questions about political strategy and national security management. But the president today confronts the worst of circumstances, comprised of two overlapping conditions: runaway Soviet nuclear weapons programs that Reagan says have made the U.S. inferior to the Soviet Union; and an antinuclear movement sweeping Western Europe — and possibly the U.S. — that is putting political pressure on democratic governments to freeze weapons at present levels.

Critics of the administration's agonizing MX missile indecision have plan-changing point to the recent statement of Soviet Marshal

It may be of interest to note, as a sign of the times, the amount your subscriptions have inflated upward in the last 90 years.

In going through old family papers recently, I chanced across receipts from The Eastern Reflector (as it was called in those days) from D.J. Whitchard "ED & PROP" for a year's subscription from March 22, 1889 to Feb. 22, 1890, and from March 22, 1890 to Jan. 1, 1892. The price for these subscriptions was the princely sum of $1.50 per year. This was to Charlie Cobb.

Compare this with your present rate of $48 and we shudder to think what things will cost in the 2060's.

Today They're Doing Without

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — There are some things in life an American just can't do without, they were saying back there a decade ago. Like a car with 8 cyls., 350 hp., and a house with family room, 3 brs., 2 bth.

But Americans have done without them. Forced by necessity, especially by high prices and interest rates, they have shown they can indeed do without the things the marketing people had said were essential.

They have accepted downsizing, and even have made small-is-beautiful a symbol of smartness. Conservation is in, waste is out. A little wear and tear on the automobile is a merit badge and a sign of good sense.

Only those whose peculiar talents help them ride the crest of inflation still buy up a storm. They drive hand-rubbed cars. They build big, empty vacation houses for the sheer joy of owning.

Some economists have an explanation for this. There is, they say, an element that has been almost immune to inflation, made up of doctors, lawyers, technology entrepreneurs, entertainers, and athletes.

But even these may be showing signs of hurting. "Apparently the recession is forcing the big-ticket consumer to retrench," says Edward Yardeni, chief economist at E.F. Hutton & Co., the securities firm.

Yardeni's observation followed an announcement from General Motors in March that it would suspend production for a week at a Cadillac plant.

"Even the rich can't afford Caddies, notwithstanding a $2,000 rebate on the Seville," he comments, suggesting that one reason might be that some of the entrepreneurs who generally buy Caddies are going broke.

Whatever may be happening to the rich, the middle and lower classes know all about it. They have resisted rebates and gone for years with the old jalopy, and they have lived without the house of their dreams.

They have cut lifestyles, in some cases drastically.

The number of households actually diminished last year as singles doubled up and parents and children reunited under one roof, the luxury of separate apartments being too much for their pocketbooks.

Some families have learned to exist with 50 percent of take-home pay going for rent, utilities and insurance on the furniture, or if they own a house, for mortgage, tax, utility, insurance and heating bills.

Recalling the aspirations of a decade ago, the change seems remarkable, challenging the assumptions of marketing people that they could motivate almost at will. Inflation took care of that notion.

Americans are adaptable. While the size of houses rose during the 1960s to include extra baths and bedrooms, and a family room too, the trend is now the other way. Homebuyers want less; the affordable home rather than the elaborate home is now the dream; and the goal.

Remember what used to be called the mobile home? Metal framed and boxy, it was scorned by those who aspired to a "real" house.

But now, the same people who used to scan the classifieds for the magic 3 brs., 2 bth. are reading catalogues which tout the economy of "manufactured homes," successor to the old style mobile units.

A decade ago it was smart to spend. Now it's smart to save. How long people will put up with it is debatable, and there are even some who speak about impending social disorder should the austerity continue.

Meanwhile, statistics show Americans are more reluctant to use credit and more highly motivated toward reducing their debts.

Marketing people might argue that it is not nearly so fulfilling as spending, but those who have adapted to the new style of rebuilding the bank account say it is smart in a way some people wouldn't understand.

The bidding:
 East South West North
 1 NT 2 ♠ Pass 4 ♠
 Pass Pass Pass
 Opening lead: Ten of ♠.

Our good friend Pierre Schemmel, captain of the French world champion team, has come up with some interesting hands. If you want to test your declarer skill, cover up the East and West hands with your thumbs and decide how you would play four spades after a club lead.

East's opening no trump bid showed 15-17 points. North's raise to game is a trifle aggressive, but it does give you the opportunity to show your ability.

Obviously, the contract hinges on not losing a heart trick. Since East is the no trump bidder, it looks as if we should play him for the queen of hearts. But before committing ourselves, let's see what we can find out about the holdings.

First, play the king of clubs from dummy at trick one. East wins the ace and continues with the queen of clubs. You ruff and lead the queen of spades. East wins the king and you can now virtually claim the contract. Whom do you intend playing for the queen of hearts, and why?

Since East cannot have a singleton spade, he must have started with the ace-king, so that's seven points. From the opening lead and play to the first two tricks, East has seven points in clubs, bringing his total to 14. And he must have a high diamond because West would surely have led the king of diamonds if he held the king-queen. Thus, East is marked with 16 or 17 points in spades, diamonds and clubs. Therefore, he cannot hold the queen of hearts as well.

If you are a "hot dogger," you can now announce that you are playing West for the queen of hearts and table your cards. Your audience will be suitably impressed. Or, if you enjoy rubbing it in to the opposition, you can play the hand very slowly, displaying great signs of mental anguish with each card you play. Either way, your contract is a lock, simply because you have the ability to add to 17.

War Games On N.C. Campuses

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Unlike the 1960s and 1970s, when many students protested for peace, a growing number of college students are spending extra-curricular hours in the 1980s learning techniques of war.

The students are members of commando clubs and their training includes learning how to handle M-16 rifles and hand grenades and how to invade beaches and destroy bridges.

Currently, the clubs exist on two North Carolina campuses, with 15 students participating at Duke and 35 at North Carolina State. Several reportedly exist nationwide.

The commando clubs are student-run, student-financed organizations that spend time away from books and libraries to conduct military-like exercises with help from the U.S. Army.

In North Carolina, the U.S. Army provides equipment for the commando clubs and offers training at Fort Bragg and Camp Butler, said U.S. Army Cpt. Michael S. Morrow, a ROTC officer at N.C. State and adviser to the commando groups.

The Army, which hopes to enlist new recruits through the clubs, provides equipment for the exercises, and schedules college commando outings to coincide with regular Army training missions to keep the expense of using helicopters and landing craft to a minimum.

"We are not a fascist, paramilitary group," said Walter Christman, who organized the student-run commando club at Duke. "But it's not some Boy Scout expedition either," he said.

One of the Duke group's recent expeditions included a simulated attack on a bridge on U.S. 70 in Duke Forest, where students were outfitted with M-16 rifles and simulated hand grenades. They were ferried about by military helicopters.

In addition to the training exercises, the students also have participated in war games, trading dining halls and dormitories for C rations and tents.

Morrow, an assistant professor of military science at N.C. State and adviser to the commando groups, said the exercises provide good training.

Christman, a four-year Army veteran, organized the Duke group along the same lines as his Army Special Forces unit. He said the commando club has caught on faster than he expected.

"Here you've got these guys at Duke — mostly liberal arts types — and we were surprised to find they really like to do these type of things," Morrow said.

"Commando clubs are campus organizations just like any other fraternity," Morrow said. "It's just a different twist. Anybody can join, but they are not for everybody."

Jordan's sat in on some of those closed-door meetings for which Green, Royall and Hardison are so well known. He's also walked out of a few.

Jordan considers himself a "fiscal conservative and a social liberal." The government must continue doing things for people, he says. "We can't gut social problems but we must improve on them."

Right now, his job is to build a statewide network of support. He says he's having "excellent" success with local government officials, teachers and the state's political godfathers. "I have to make those people who are involved in the process understand that I'm willing to do what it takes to win. No one wants to support someone who doesn't want to win. And, I have to prove to myself that it is out there. That I can win." (His most likely opponents appear to be former House Speaker Carl Stewert, former Transportation Secretary Thomas W. Bradshaw and Hardison.)

At the editors' conference, Jordan appeared with Reps. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, and Dave Diamond, D-Surry. When the legislators left and the editors started talking theory. It lacks only the virtue of reality. A point was reached long ago at which both the United States and the Soviet Union had such monstrous arsenals that further accretions became senseless. These have been 37 years of lunacy, of idiots racing against imbeciles, of civilized nations staggering blindly toward a finish line of unspeakable peril.

The immediate necessity is to call a truce, to stop the further buildup of nuclear weapons by either side. Such a freeze, we are told, would leave a dangerous "imbalance" of nuclear arms in Europe, but this is the kind of hypothetical tally-stick computation by which medieval penitents once counted their indulgences. Dangers are relative; risks can be calculated. Where is the greater danger and the greater risk — in accepting this supposed imbalance or in continuing the perilous race?

No one would minimize the difficulties in reaching an accord with the Soviet Union, but neither should these problems be magnified. In any event, the effort must be made and it must be made now.

Despite similar promises by Ronald Reagan made with bewildering repetition ever since the start of the 1980 presidential campaign, the long delay in deciding on a survivable basing system for the MX has now collided with the demand for a nuclear freeze, a collision likely to affect an election-year Congress.

Little wonder, then, that Reaganite senators worried about their country's security have deleted money for the first MX missiles — not to kill the MX, but to persuade the administration at long last to decide.

Yankee Hall Graves Date To Revolutionary Days

A GENERAL VIEW OF THE CEMETERY . . . at Yankee Hall on the Tar River just outside Pactolus. The cemetery, not fenced in, is easily subjected to damage. Grave stones remaining and still legible show burials dating back to the time of the Revolutionary War in America.

SAM RALSTON'S GRAVE STONE . . . though broken into three fragments, reveal that British in 1798. He died at age 50 on Feb. 11, 1829 and was buried in the Yankee Hall Cemetery. Ralston was exiled from his native Ireland for being associated with a rebellion against the

On a placid day in the spring of 1982 the nearby Tar River laps and ripples against the shore, the same river that was a witness to the burial of this "fine flower" that fell "before its time." If it could but tell us what happened here 200 years ago, it could only supply the missing letters and words on the grave-stones that time and neglect have erased.

Eight headstones remain; some lie broken into fragments too numerous to piece together. On one of the eight time and weather have already obliterated the inscription; on others the elements have erased certain letters and words as on Mrs Almy's marker depicted above. Other graves, now trodden, sunken, unmarked and forgotten, lie beneath the briars, vines, and stubbles of the field. Since there are two burial spots divided by a lane, one wonders if at one time the two areas were one.

As one comes into Pactolus from Greenville, an unpaved road branches from the highway to the right. It is narrow, and winds and turns as it skirts fields and meadows through stretches of farmland. This circuitous dirt road leads to the edge of Tar River and to what is left of a colonial graveyard, the site of what was known as Yankee Hall.

Only sky and river, trees and fields are witnesses of the past here. Birds trace circles in the air and the sound of silence is shattered by a lone brown thrasher that scratches among fallen leaves. There is nothing more here but the silent dead. For anyone with a sense of history, it's easy to transport one's self into the 18th century, to Pitt County before and during the years of the Revolution.

An aura of long ago hardship, danger and deprivation pervades the scene. Why else would a man's gravestone indicate that he died at the age of 35, his wife at 22? A young girl at 15 and yet another at 36?

There was the same temperate climate that prevails at present, one that perhaps drew these people here in the first place. But winters can be harsh. Fish and game were more abundant then, but a river can be rampant, and wild game can be elusive, fierce. Was river water conducive to typhoid fever? Were injuries accompanied by fatal infections? Were there drownings? Was one mauled by a wild animal? Was there death from childbirth? How far away was the nearest doctor if indeed there was one?

No four-laned highway straddled this spot, no convenience store, no landing strip for airborne craft, no vaccinations, penicillin. Not even matches or stoves.

As one rubs vigorously on a tombstone in an effort to read the engraving, he envisions those God-fearing people, the grieving family and friends, as they stood on this soil and buried their dead.

Among these dead were a man and his wife. She preceded him in death by two years:

In Memory of Elizabeth Speir Wife of John Speir She was born Dec. 7th 1771 And departed this life March 31st 1799 Age 27 years 8 months 24 days ---and---

In Memory of John Speir son of John and Penelope Speir He was born November 3, 1765 And departed this life Feb. 14, 1801 Age 35 years 8 months and 11 days

Two of the eight marked graves are covered with full-length slabs, each filled in its entirety with inscription. The more completely inscribed one is covered with mud, mold and briars. Nevertheless, with some scraping and brushing one finds the following words:

Here lies Col. Alexander Stewart Born in Scotland Dec. 9, 1725 Died 30th July 1779 The remainder is illegible. To clear this marker sufficiently in order to decipher all that is here would necessitate brawn and time. Yet these secrets, battered by over 200 years of winds, rains, hail, sleet, sun and snow, make them all the more intriguing and worth the time of anyone who has the stamina to uncover them.

The slab on the other grave, though broken in two and subject to 150-plus years of time and abuse, lends itself to easy persual and propels one into a sense of perpetuity:

In Memory of Sam Ralston A native of Ireland Who was exiled from his country for being associated with United Irish Society in the fatal Rebellion of 1798 He was born in the county of Antrim Oct 1, 1778 and died in this place Feb. 11, 1829 Age 50 years 4 mo. and 10 days

Wolfe Tone in 1791 organized the United Irish Society to achieve civil, political and religious liberty for Ireland, but there were undercurrents to achieve independence from England. With the promise of French aid, which never arrived, the members of the society waged a serious rebellion in 1798. Its leaders were executed or imprisoned and its participants were exiled.

Today six counties including Antrim comprise Northern Ireland, the one remaining portion of original Ireland that still doesn't have its independence from England. Now, almost 200 years later, the fighting in that troubled land rages on. Can one thus say that Sam Ralston's inscription is the saddest of all - the "last syllable of recorded time"? As William Butler Yeats wrote:

"Was it for this the wild geese spread
"The gray wing upon every tide;
"For this that all that blood was shed,
"For this Edward Fitzgerald died
"And Robert Emmet and

Wolfe Tone, "All that delirium of the brave?" Another stone still legible marks the grave of an infant:

In memory of Hugh Blair Telfair Son of Hugh and Julia Telfair He was born on the 2nd day of May 1814 and departed this life on the 24th day of March 1815 Age 10 months and 22 days

In addition to that of the infant is the grave of Julia, its mother, who died three months before the death of her child:

In Memory of Julia wife of Hugh Telfair She was born the 26th November 1792 and departed this life on the 15th day of December 1814 Aged 22 years and 19 days

Although Hugh Telfair had lost his wife and young son, he was to lose a daughter: Here rests until the Ressurrection all that was mortal of Margaret Eliza Toole daughter of Hugh and Julia Telfair and wife of Henry Irwin Toole, Died July 16, 1848 Aged 36 years and 1 month

As indicated earlier, there are other graves on the Yankee Hall graveyard spot, sunken, unmarked, hidden forever. Though these people mostly died young, their spirit molded and fashioned this county of Pitt.

Obviously little has been done in years past to preserve this bit of land so historically significant. Today, after 200 years of minimum attention, it is remarkable that anything remains in this old graveyard. Even now, ravages continue in this unfenced ground. A vivid example of this is the fact that Eliza Toole's monument is now on the ground broken off from its base. Only a few weeks ago it was intact and upright as it had stood for 134 years.

History Shows North Carolina Did Have First English Colony

By C.R. Cannon, Manager Dare County Tourist Bureau "Facts," Mark Twain once observed, "or what a man believes to be facts, are delightful . . . Get your facts first, and then you can distort them as much as you please."

The venerable Mark Twain notwithstanding, the time for distortion is over. The day of reckoning is at hand. North Carolinians are readying for a celebration.

It all revolves around a simple, yet memorable historical fact having to do with the earliest settlement of the English in America.

Virginians may stake a claim at Jamestown, settled in 1607, but our Cavalier cousins were latecomers. And, their Calvinist convictions to the contrary, Pilgrims who disembarked at Plymouth in 1620 were surely not the first.

The first English colony in America was established in 1585 by a hardy band of settlers sent to Roanoke Island in what is today northeastern North Carolina. That's a fact! And during the next few years, every school child and adult within hearing distance will learn more about Roanoke colony as America's 400th anniversary (1984-1987) unfolds in celebration of this early and remarkable chapter in our nation's history.

The first colony was sent to America by Sir Walter Raleigh, a favorite in Queen Elizabeth's court. After the colonists encountered many hardships and returned home, Raleigh dispatched a second group of settlers in 1587. By 1590, however, that colony disappeared and the fate of those more than 100 men, women and children who were part of "the lost colony" has remained a mystery since.

Raleigh's effort to create an English outpost on the shores of the New World came at a time when Spain had dominion over the seas, a period when England was emerging from her fractured feudal past to claim a place among European nation states. Raleigh ultimately fell from favor, but by his bold vision he paved the way for the permanent settlements that followed at Jamestown and Plymouth.

•Another fact: "The Lost Colony," the story of Raleigh's settlement, is America's oldest outdoor symphonic drama. Written by the late Pulitzer Prize-winner Paul Green, it was first performed in 1937 to commemorate the 350th birthday of Virginia Dare, the first child born of English parents in America. Now under the direction of Broadway veteran Joe Layton, 1982 performances are scheduled nightly, except Sundays, from June 11 through Aug. 28.

Major events for the quadricentennial celebration are being planned by America's 400th Anniversary Committee, a 14-member group created in 1973 by the N.C. General Assembly.

The committee has recently published a series of illustrated folders, written by Outer Banks author and historian David Stick, which depict 16th-century Indian life.

Included among anniversary plans are the following events:

In April of 1984, Gov. Jim Hunt will lead a delegation to Plymouth, England, to lay a plaque commemorating the 1584 expedition which was led by Amadas and Barlowe.

The celebration will officially begin on July 13, 1984. At Manteo on Roanoke Island, 400 years after the expedition arrived, a 16th-century sailing vessel similar to the one that brought the colonists to America will be christened the Elizabeth and permanently docked.

The next year, a collection of the drawings of John White, governor of the second colony, will be brought from the British Library for exhibit in North Carolina. Also scheduled is a British-American Folk Festival at Durham.

In 1986, the committee will sponsor archaeological research on and in the vicinity of Roanoke Island in an effort to collect evidence about the native American. There is also hope of locating the lost "Cittie of Raleigh."

The anniversary will conclude on August 18, 1987, Virginia Dare's birthday.

Roanoke Island and Manteo, a village named for one of two Indians who befriended the colonists, are well suited as focal points for the 400th anniversary. The island is located just west of Nags Head and Kill Devil Hills, communities on the Outer Banks of North Carolina. Separated centuries ago from the Carolina mainland and extending like fingers into the sea, the Banks have long been a popular vacation destination for travelers from throughout the country. Included among the many attractions is the Wright Brothers Memorial, symbol of another historic "first" - yet one more memorable fact about the Dare coast.

Further information about plans for the celebration is available from America's 400th Anniversary Committee, 109 E. Jones St., Raleigh, N.C. 27611; for more information about the Outer Banks of North Carolina, contact the Dare County Tourist Bureau, P.O. Box 399, Manteo, N.C. 27954.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecast for the period until early Wednesday.

day predicts rain for much of Maine and showers for western Washington. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
The National Weather Service says it will be partly cloudy, windy and warm today with widely scattered showers mainly in the west.

High temperatures are going to be in the 70s and low 80s. Skies will begin clearing gradually in the west tonight, but in the east there will be mostly cloudy conditions along with widely scattered showers.

Lows will range from near 40 in the northern mountains to around 60 in the southeast.

Wednesday is going to be mostly sunny with gradual clearing in the southeast. Highs will be in the 70s with some cooler 60s in the northeast and in the northern mountains.

Along the coast, southerly winds will increase to 15 to 25 mph with higher gusts today and tonight. By early Wednesday morning winds will become more northerly at 10 to 20 mph then shift to the northeast during the day.

Temperatures before sunrise ranged from around 50 in the Asheville area to the mid 50s at most eastern locations, about 5 to 10 degrees above normal for this time of year.

On this date in 1877 the second severe coastal storm in three days hit the middle Atlantic coast. The first storm flattened the sand dunes at Hatteras and widened Oregon Inlet three quarters of a mile.

The second storm produced hurricane force winds along the North Carolina coast causing more beach erosion and landform transformation.

Tells 'Big Foot' Hoax 60 Years Afterwards

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — A confession from a retired logger who said he perpetrated a Bigfoot hoax by stamping giant footprints in the snow has only fueled a researcher's belief that the 800-pound apelike creature exists.

At 86, Rant Mullens said he wanted to get a six-decade-old practical joke off his chest; he said he spurred the legend of the Bigfoot of Mount St. Helens by carving wooden "feet" to leave large footprints.

"If I don't set the record straight now, people will go on believing there really is a hairy monster," the logger said from his home in Toledo, Wash. "I tell you, people will believe just about anything."

But Mullens' confession adds credibility to the Northwest's sylvan legend because the Mount St. Helens story didn't mesh with other sightings. Dr. Grover Krantz, a Bigfoot researcher and a Washington State University associate professor of anthropology, said Monday.

Mullens' tall tale was only one of many stories and it was a "particularly dumb hoax," Krantz said.

Mullens confessed to his Bigfoot hoax in a copyright article published Sunday in The Columbian of Vancouver.

Indian legends of the apelike beast, also known as Sasquatch, have been around for centuries. But accounts of "the hairy apes of Mount St. Helens" began in 1924 after three miners from Kelso fled to a ranger station near Cougar, spinning an incredible tale of huge, hairy creatures that hurled boulders down on their cabin. They finally fought the monsters off with rifle fire, the miners said.

Their stories caught public fancy around the world. Anthropologists swarmed to the area, hoping for a glimpse of the "mountain devil," or to capture the creature itself. The miners' sighting gave weight to subsequent Bigfoot reports from British Columbia to Northern California.

But the real story, Mullens said, began when he and his uncle George Ross were returning from a fishing trip in 1924 and decided to throw a scare into some miners in the area.

"George was always playing jokes, so he and I rolled some rocks down over the edge. Then we got out of there fast," he said.

"When we heard that the miners were telling hairy ape stories, we both had a good laugh. We never told anyone the true story."

In 1928, Mullens and fellow Forest Service workers "thought we would have a little fun" while building a trail near what is now the Swift Reservoir.

With jackknife and hatchet, Mullens whittled out a pair of huge feet from some green alder wood from the banks of the Muddy River.

"Ned Packard held up his bare foot, and I drew a print of it and enlarged it," he said. "When the feet were finished, Bill Allen fastened some sticks to them (as handles) and stomped around some parked cars belonging to huckleberry pickers."

"When the pickers came back and saw the huge footprints, they got out of there fast."

Mullens completely discounts any idea of a Bigfoot in the Mount St. Helens woods.

"I was born within 30 miles of Mount St. Helens and have worked in the woods here almost all my life," he said. "I have never seen anything out there that I could not explain."

But Krantz, co-editor of the book, "The Scientist Looks at the Sasquatch," is convinced that Bigfoot exists.

"I always had my doubts about the miners' sighting," Krantz said. "It didn't follow the regular pattern. In other sightings, the Bigfoot was solitary, not in a group. And they don't normally attack or throw objects."

"If anything, (Mullens' disclosure) makes the Bigfoot thing a little cleaner because a very deviant story has dropped out."

He said close inspection of other Sasquatch footprints supports the belief in the creature.

"The footprint indicated a design of a foot that is intended to carry about 800 pounds of body weight. I don't think any faker would have been able to figure out these subtle things," said Krantz.

He said he also believes a film taken of a Bigfoot in northern California in 1967 is reliable.

Street Work

By TOMMY FORREST
Reflector Staff Writer

WINTERVILLE — A public hearing was held prior to the regular meeting of the board of aldermen Monday night.

The hearing was to decide whether the town would help in a street project involving Chapman Street, the west side of N. Railroad Street, and Tyson Street.

According to Town Clerk Elwood Nobles, the project would cost $25,000. Each property owner would be assessed $3.84 per foot and payment time would be two years without interest. The town agreed to take the project. A public hearing was set for May 10, for a preliminary assessment roll on the streets.

Recreation Department President Bruce Gray reported the commission has added five new members, which the board approved. This brings the total membership of the commission to 27. Gray said the department received $26,271 during last year, with disbursements of $24,019. Gray also asked the board for softball field lights for the coming summer. The board approved the request and said all lights would be out by 11 p.m. each night.

In other business heard by the board, Burnice Harris, representing local farmers, asked the board to reinstate the policy of the town supplying water for farmers. The town did not change the policy, and no water will be supplied.

The board also set May 14 for a public hearing on revenue sharing.

The board set 1981 tax lien sales for June 14, for sale of property for delinquent taxes.

In further business, Ruby Benson, of Ragland Acres, asked the board for help on a drainage problem through her property in the subdivision. The board said that until the subdivision is taken into the city, no action would be taken.

Allotments...

but many non-farmers are on that list.

Duke Power Co. and Cane Mountain Resorts Inc. are listed as allotment holders as is Carolina Power & Light Co., a Raleigh-based utility that serves much of North Carolina.

Weyerhaeuser and Texasgulf Inc. hold allotments, as does Gov. James B. Hunt Jr.'s father and Sen. Jesse Helm's wife. None grow tobacco, choosing instead to rent that right to dirt farmers.

Gov. Jim Hunt has said that taking away the program would put many elderly people on welfare rolls and has repeatedly said he opposes attempts to radically alter the program.

The program has ips boosters at the federal level, too. Second District Rep. L.H. Fountain of Tarboro said last year that eliminating the allotment program would be a crushing blow to towns in Eastern North Carolina.

Critics counter that allotment holders who do not farm their allotments are sponging off a system originally designed to help only growers — creating a middle man in the system.

Only a last-ditch coalition of pro-tobacco congressmen staved off attacks from federal lawmakers opposed to reducing welfare funds while financing the tobacco price supports.

All 11 House representatives from North Carolina voted to save the tobacco program. North Carolina Senators Jesse Helms and John East shielded it in the Senate.

Tobacco Belt congressmen fear the next Farm Bill that comes before Congress could spell doom for the allotment program.

Most Washington legislators now concede the program must be changed, but differ on what should be done.

Sixth District U.S. Rep. Gene Johnston feels major changes are not necessary and says the program has cost very little.

"We need to take away the rocks the anti-tobacco zealots throw at it," the Greensboro Republican said recently.

Rep. Bob Shamansky, D-Ohio, a critic of the federal program, said, "What we're seeing here is not democracy in action but hypocrisy in action. The program is ultimately a loser."

Shamansky promised another fight if the program remains the same.

He said the program has cost taxpayers over $600 million since its inception.

Tobacco supporters say it has cost taxpayers little, if anything, because tobacco bought with federal money ultimately is sold to someone else.

Johnston says the program has been cheap.

"We've made $130 billion in excise taxes" from tobacco sales since the program began, he said, "and our losses on this program have been $53 million. I'd make deals like that all day long. It's been a super program all along."

If the program is not revised, legislative observers expect the next fight to be even more intense, and the outcome could be different.

Changes will come, promised Joan Teague, a staff member of the House Tobacco and Peanut Subcommittee chaired by Rep. Charles Rose, an Eastern North Carolina Democrat credited with saving tobacco in the House vote on the four-year Farm Bill.

Teague predicts the program will remain — but with changes. "We want to make it a no-cost program," she said. "If we can come up with some good recommendations that can go through Congress, we think it can be very positive."

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market remained adrift for the second straight day today, stalling a spring rally.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stock rose .06 to 66.82. The American Stock Exchange index was up .96 at 273.84.

Volume on the Big Board reached 20.12 million shares over the first two hours today against 21.04 million in the same period Monday.

Reports Suggest U.S. Consumers 'Cautious'

By The Associated Press

The government's latest economic reports indicate consumers are being cautious about spending.

The Commerce Department reported Monday that retail sales fell 0.5 percent last month, led by a steep decline in gasoline sales.

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige predicted sales at retail outlets were "likely to remain somewhat sluggish" for the next three months.

Retail sales had increased a revised 2.6 percent in February, the department said.

The Federal Reserve Board, meanwhile, reported that consumers in February took on $75 million more in new credit than they paid off. The relatively small increase was seen by economists as further evidence that the economy is mired in recession.

Ted Gibson, senior economist at Crocker National Bank in San Francisco, said the debt figure represented "a consistent pattern of weak consumer spending, particularly in durable goods which are financed."

The Federal Reserve said the increase in installment debt equalled a 0.5 percent annual rate of increase. That compared with a 6.8 percent growth rate for all of last year.

The report included short- and medium-term installment debt such as credit-card balances, auto loans, finance company loans and home improvement loans. It did not include long-term credit such as home mortgages.

The Commerce Department, in its sales report, said the big gainers in March were general merchandise stores, up 2.3 percent, and drug stores, up 2.7 percent. The largest decline was for gasoline sales, down 7.7 percent.

In other economic developments:

—Beginning today, consumers can earn as much as 13.154 percent on six-month savings certificates sold by banks and savings institutions, a drop from the previous rate of 13.17 percent. The new rate is based on results Monday of the government's auction of $4.7 billion in Treasury bills.

—Governors of the Federal Reserve Board instructed its staff to work out details for a plan to change the way the Fed reports the nation's money supply. Their aim is to concentrate less on week-to-week results and more on four-week averages, although figures probably will continue to be released each week.

—Phelps Dodge Corp., which last week said it would close most of its copper-mining operations at least until June, announced it had cut salaries of its 6,700 white-collar employees by as much as 8 percent. A letter from Phelps Dodge Chairman George B. Munroe to white-collar employees did not specify how long the salary reductions would remain in effect.

—Business leaders are more optimistic about a recovery, according to the Conference Board, a business-sponsored research group. The board says its latest survey showed business leaders are still unhappy about the state of the economy but the measure of confidence, based on a scale of 0 to 100, rose to 47 in the first quarter of this year from 43 in the final quarter of 1981.

Rockathon Will Be Held

A Rockathon will be held for the benefit of the American Lung Association of North Carolina, Eastern Region, on the ECU campus Thursday, April 15.

Sponsored by Alpha Sigma Phi, the event will be held from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. in front of the Student Supply Store. All 12 of the ECU fraternities will participate by having their representatives rock in rocking chairs during the 12-hour period to raise money to aid the Lung Association in the fight against lung disease.

"All of the participants will be soliciting pledges from sponsors in the area prior to the event," Mark Jacobs, chairman of the project said.

"These monetary donations will be based on the number of hours the fraternity representatives rock. They will be also receiving donations at the site of the Rockathon on April 15, and a prize will be awarded to the house that raises the most money."

"The American Lung Association is grateful for the effort made by these students on our behalf," Deborah Bryan, director of the Eastern Region of ALANC said. "It is refreshing to see such healthful civic-mindedness coming from our college campus. The money raised by this event will be used locally to further public education about lung disease, and to support medical research. We are dependent upon the help from volunteers through projects such as this Rockathon."

Confirm Big Loss For N.C. Apples

VALE, N.C. (AP) — Lincoln County, where the apple crop usually brings in more than $1 million a year, has lost from 80 to 85 percent of its crop this year due to two killer frosts, Agriculture Extension Service agents said.

Nelson Crisman, who has four acres of peaches, two acres of pears and 26 acres of apples, said his fruit crop was destroyed by the frosts.

"I got wiped out on the peaches," said the 44-year-old farmer. "If I have enough left to make a peach pie, I'll be lucky."

"This was going to be the year I paid off the disaster loans from the last bad year I had," Crisman said sardonically.

Lincoln County has 200,000 apple trees, making it second among North Carolina's 100 counties in apple production.

David Choate, the county's Agriculture Extension Service agent, said the county's peach crop was also hit hard.

"I don't think there will be any significant amount of peaches produced in Lincoln County this year at all," Choate said. "It's probably the worst year we've had for both apples and peaches in the last 20 years."

Lincoln County's problems weren't restricted to that part of the state. The first freeze in late March destroyed 50 to 60 percent of the state's apple crop and a second freeze last week brought the destruction figure closer to 80 percent. The crop amounts to about $24 million annually.

Choate said the killer frosts hit owners of small farms especially hard since they depend on revenue from each year's crop to buy the fertilizers and sprays needed to protect the trees.

Choate said apple farmers had hoped they could make up last year's losses, which were caused by low prices.

"If the small farmer has to start borrowing more money this year, and paying high interest on it again, I don't know how he's going to survive," Choate said. "If he does survive, he's just going to squeeze by after what happened this year."

Report Crash Of Big C-130

ANKARA, Turkey, (AP) — A U.S. Air Force C-130 transport plane with 28 people aboard crashed today in eastern Turkey, the U.S. Embassy said.

It said the plane carried 10 U.S. Air Force crewmen and 18 passengers, all believed to be civilians employed by the U.S. Defense Department.

The embassy spokesman said the crash was in mountains about 350 miles east of Ankara and that there was no immediate word on casualties.

The spokesman said the wreckage had not yet been sighted.

He said the plane went down over the Kizildag mountain range between the cities of Erzincan and Sivas.

He said the crew was part of a wing from Dyess Air Force Base, near Abilene, Tex.

ECU's Wilder Turns Back Tar Heels, 2-1

CHAPEL HILL — Bill Wilder, who has been struggling at times this year, turned in a masterful performance yesterday against the University of North Carolina, pitching a one-hitter in leading the East Carolina Pirates to a 2-1 victory.

Mike Sorrell. Aside from that only four other runners reached base, one on an error in the seventh, and three runners in the third, when Carolina got the tying run. Two of those reached on the only walks Wilder allowed.

Hallow could return for Thursday night's doubleheader against N.C. State back in Greenville. Nevertheless, the Pirates banged out seven hits against the two Tar Heel hurlers who worked, led by Todd Evans' three.

McGee followed with a grounder back to the mound. Wilder fielded the ball and turned to throw to third baseman Todd Hendley for a force there.

The second baseman and shortstop had both moved toward the bag to take a potential throw, and the ball rolled past both of them as they tried to retrieve it into right, with Wells streaking home on the single.

Rampant Rally Tops Farmville, 9-6

By RICK SCOPPE Reflector Sports Writer Greenville Rose threw a welcome home party for former assistant coach Billy Davis Monday afternoon, but it was the Rampants — not Davis — that left with the biggest smiles.

Billy Godley had allowed Rose just two hits and the Rampants had left five men on — including the bases loaded in the third without scoring.

The Rampants loaded the bases in their half of the third, but Stalls popped out on the first pitch he saw to kill the threat.

With one gone, Carter and Hodges stroked back-to-back singles off Godley and Roger Williams reached on an error to score Carter. Hodges later scored on Douglas' sacrifice fly to make it 6-3.

Norris singled home Jones, who walked to open the inning. But Rose extended its lead to 9-4 with three runs in home half of the sixth.

wild pitch. Williams, on with a walk, scored the final run of the inning when Randy Warren singled.

Williams struck out Alvin Baker to end the game and preserve the victory of Kirkland, now 2-0. Kirkland, a right-hander, gave up six hits while striking out three and walking two.

Delayed Steal Lets Conley Gain Finals With 4-3 Win Over Kinston

By RICK SCOPPE Reflector Sports Writer D.H. Conley coach Ritchie Wynns reached in his well-stocked storehouse of tricks Monday night and pulled out a winner in the semifinals of the Pitt County Invitational Tournament.

Garrett walked Jerry Lamb to open the seventh and things got progressively worse. Back-to-back errors by Chris Strickland allowed Jamie Windburn and Brad Almond to reach and Lamb to score to cut the gap to 4-2.

Wynns to his storehouse of tricks. After Burkette threw one strike to Roy Lassiter, Toler raced off first but stopped about three-quarters of the way to second. Burkette threw to second baseman Jeff Hendricks who did not look at Smith, but instead began to chase Toler back to first.

Conley, now 4-6, will play Greenville Rose tonight (7:30) for the tournament title. Rose beat Farmville Central, 9-6, Monday. Farmville plays Kinston at 5 p.m. for third place. New Bern meets Washington at 2:30 for fifth.

Conley threatened in both the first and second but did not score. Lassiter singled and McRoy was hit by a pitch with none gone in the first. But Dixon Page and Buck popped out and Smith struck out to end the inning.

Conley pitched to two batters in the sixth. The Vikings finally broke through in the third. Manning singled to left and, after Lassiter and McRoy flew out, Page and Buck singled to load the bases. Smith then lined a single into right to score Manning and Page and tie it at 2-2.

Rawley Does Job In Relief For Yankees

By The Associated Press
As they have so many times in recent years, the New York Yankees turned to their bullpen to protect a lead and got a couple of much-needed strikeouts. But — surprise! — it wasn't Rich Gossage. The Goose was unavailable Monday night, having worked an unaccustomed 31-3 innings Sunday in losing a 12-inning 7-6 decision to the Chicago White Sox. So the Yankees turned to Shane Rawley, the other half of their 1-2 relief punch since the weekend deal that sent Ron Davis to Minnesota, and Rawley did a job that would have made Gossage proud.

Starter Dave Righetti and relievers Rudy May and John Pacella were seemingly trying to squander a 10-1 lead. The Texas Rangers scored four times in the eighth inning and twice in the ninth and had two long-ball threats waiting in the wings in pinch-hitters Leon Roberts and Bobby Johnson, both representing the potential tying run.

Rawley punched them both out to preserve the Yankees' first victory of the season, a 10-7 triumph that spoiled the Rangers' home opener.

The Yanks built their big lead behind a 14-hit attack that included Willie Randolph's three-run homer and Dave Winfield's solo shot. Righetti allowed six hits and one unearned run in seven innings before tiring in the eighth.

"In Seattle, it was good to win, but here, you're expected to win," said Rawley, who was acquired from the Mariners less than two weeks ago. "A win here goes to a better cause than it did over there."

He said he struck out Roberts and Johnson on fast balls.

"I mixed in a couple of sliders, but it was mostly fast balls," he said. "I was hoping I wouldn't have to go in, that one of them (the other relievers) would get them out, but I told them I would be ready if they needed me."

The Yankees chased Frank Tanana, making his Ranger debut after signing as a free agent, in 32.3 innings. They scored four runs in the second inning on singles by Lou Piniella, Graig Nettles and Rick Cerone, plus Randolph's homer.

Jerry Mumphyre delivered a two-run single in the fourth and Winfield clubbed his second home run of the season in the fifth off Jon Matlack.

A single by Piniella and a double by Watson gave the Yankees a run in the seventh and they got two more in the eighth on a single by Mumphyre, a two-base muff by right fielder Larry Parrish and Piniella's RBI double.

White Sox 3, Red Sox 2

The White Sox spoiled Boston's home opener, breaking a scoreless duel in the sixth when Kemp doubled, Tom Paciorek singled him home and scored on a double by Carlton Fisk. Carl Yastrzemski hit his 428th career homer for Boston, but the White Sox scored what proved to be the winning run in the seventh on an infield hit by Bill Almon, a forceout by Ron LeFlore, who stole second and came home on Tony Bernazard's double.

"I was more than just a little worried in the ninth," said Chicago Manager Tony LaRussa, who had to go to his bullpen twice in the inning to protect the lead.

"It's tough to sweat in this weather (50 degrees), but I sure did. Winning the first three games does build confidence, but we really haven't accomplished that much. The games we won could have gone either way."

Blue Jays 9, Tigers 5

Damaso Garcia drove in three runs, Luis Leal scattered seven hits in 72.3 innings and the Blue Jays erupted for five runs in the fourth. Garcia singled a run home in the second to give Toronto a 1-0 lead. The Tigers went ahead 2-1 in the third, but the Blue Jays chased Milt Wilcox in the fourth.

Garcia singled home the tying and lead runs, pinch-hitter Garth Iorg doubled another run across and Barry Bonnell's two-run pinch double capped the uprising. The Blue Jays increased the margin to 8-2 in the sixth on a walk, Iorg's triple and a single by Alfredo Griffin. Willie Upshaw homered in the seventh.

Towson State won the first two doubles matches to ease by East Carolina, 5-4, in a college tennis match Monday afternoon.

Towson State won three of the first singles matches, but the Pirates rallied to win the final two and tie the match at 3-3 going into the three doubles matches.

Towson State, however, won the first two doubles, including a three-set win in the #2 doubles to seal the win.

ECU, now 10-4, travels to High Point College today.

Brown, Loftin Win Tourney

Mike Brown and Jake Loftin jumped out to a big lead and barely held on to win the Monday Nite Bestball Tournament at the Greenville Putt-Putt Golf Course last night.

Brown and Loftin shot an 83, 25 under par for the three round event. Hard-charging Robert and Bobby Beacham finished one stroke back after picking up four strokes the last round. Johnny Carow and Henry Beacham finished a distant third, ten strokes off the pace.

Sutter's Old-Fashioned Fastball Makes Split-Finger Toss Better

By The Associated Press
Bruce Sutter has been tough enough for National League batters with his "split-fingered fastball." Now he's added something to his repertoire.

"It just makes the other pitch that much better," says the St. Louis Cardinals' reliever in reference to his current reliance on the plain, old-fashioned fastball.

Going to his fastball more often than usual Monday, the bearded right-hander pitched two strong innings in relief to nail down the Cardinals' 5-4 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

"I threw more fastballs than I did any time in my career," said Sutter, whose deliveries usually consist exclusively of split-fingered fastballs, a twisty fork ball which drops. "It seemed like a lot of guys were taking pitches."

Actually, Sutter said, an alteration in his pitching style had been in the process long before preparation for the 1982 campaign.

"I've been around this league for six years," he said. "Everybody knows where the ball starts with the split-fingered fastball. It (the regular fastball) makes me much tougher."

Sutter said he was satisfied with his two-inning stint which was marred only by Tony Pena's triple in the eighth. The hit by the Pittsburgh catcher came with one out. Sutter responded by mowing down mountainous Dave Parker on a swinging third strike and afterward retired the Pirates' last four batters.

George Hendrick's two solo homers, two RBI singles by Keith Hernandez and a two-base error by Pittsburgh shortstop Dale Berra gave the Cardinals the lead before Sutter arrived.

"He's money in our bank," Hernandez said of Sutter following the relief star's first save of the season. "I'm never worried about Bruce Sutter. He knows what he's doing."

Braves 6, Reds 1
Bob Horner and Chris Chambliss smashed solo homers and Bob Walk and Rick Camp combined on a four-hitter to lead undefeated Atlanta over Cincinnati for the Braves' sixth straight victory.

The Braves' fast start topped the five opening wins by the world champion Milwaukee Braves of 1957, previously the best start of a Braves' team since records were kept in 1930. They had won no more than four opening games since moving to Atlanta in 1966.

Walk, 2-0, pitched shutout ball until the eighth inning, when the Reds scored their run on an RBI triple by Dave Concepcion. Camp came on at this point and nailed down the game for Atlanta. Walk helped his cause with an RBI single in the seventh.

"We've been able to cut down on our walks and make people hit the ball," Walk said. "And we're doing well."

Astros 2, Dodgers 1
Phil Garner's 11th-inning single scored Jose Cruz from third base with the winning run as Houston beat Los Angeles.

Cruz opened the 11th with a popup to short center field off losing pitcher Dave Stewart, 0-1. The ball fell in for a double between shortstop Mark Belanger and center fielder Ken Landreaux. Intentional walks to Denny Walling and Alan Ashby sandwiched around Dickie Thon's sacrifice bunt loaded the bases with one out.

Stewart struck out Kiko Garcia before Garner rapped his third hit of the game.

Mike LaCoss, 1-0, earned his first victory since joining the Astros. LaCoss allowed one hit and struck out one in the 11th.

The Dodgers took a 1-0 lead in the fifth on Steve Sax's RBI single. The Astros tied the score in the eighth on a throwing error by Sax at second base that allowed a run to score.

Cubs 5, Mets 4

Keith Moreland drove in two runs with a homer and a single to lead Chicago over New York. Moreland delivered one of five singles in a four-run fourth inning and hit his third homer of the season in the sixth for what proved to be the winning run.

Chicago starter Dickie Noles was the winner, but needed help in the seventh from Bill Campbell. The loss went to Mets starter Craig Swan.

"I'm not a home-run hitter, I like to use the whole ball park and if I hit a few home runs that's fine," said Moreland. "I can drive in runs. I drove in over a hundred one year in the minor leagues. If I make contact and play all year I should be able to hit 20 home runs but I still wouldn't consider myself a home-run hitter."

Conley Girls Suffer 1st Loss

SNOW HILL — D.H. Conley's girls' softball team suffered its first loss of the season yesterday, bowing to Charles B. Aycock in the first round of the Greene Central Invitational Tournament yesterday. The Valkyries then rallied to top Northern Nash in the losers' bracket contest.

Conley fell to C.B. Aycock, 7-6, after the Falconettes scored two runs in the bottom of the seventh inning.

Aycock scored two in the first inning, and both teams scored single runs in the second. Conley then pushed over three in the third to take a 4-3 lead. The Valkyries added two more in the fifth, while Aycock got one each in the fifth and sixth to sent Conley into a 6-5 lead with one inning left.

In the bottom of the seventh, however, Musgrave led off with a triple off the glove of diving leftfielder Darlene Cannon, followed by a single by J. Pridgen, scoring Musgrave. Pridgen moved up on an error and scored the winning run on Ann Lancaster's sacrifice fly.

C. Sauls, M. Whitley, D. Pridgen and B. Montague each had two hits for Aycock. Conley's hitting was led by Karen Barrett with three, while Irish Barnhill, Helena Barnhill, Kori Kandrotas, Sherri Waters and Darlene Cannon each had two.

In the second game, Conley faced Northern Nash and rolled to a 14-6 win. Northern Nash scored five in the first inning, but Conley came back with four in the second. After another Knight run in the bottom of the inning, Conley picked up one in the third and two in the fourth for a 7-6 lead.

The Valkyries broke it open with six in the fifth and added one more in the seventh.

Helena Barnhill and Kandrotas each had four hits to lead Conley, with Barnhill having a homer and Kandrotas a triple. C. Edwards and L. Foster each had three for Northern.

Conley is now 9-1 on the year.

In other first round games, Greene Central beat Northern Nash, North Lenoir topped Smithfield-Selma and New Bern beat Plymouth. C.B. Aycock then topped Greene Central and North Lenoir downed New Bern in the winners' bracket, while Plymouth topped Smithfield-Selma in the losers' bracket. Scores were unavailable.

Today, Northern Nash played Smithfield-Selma at 11 a.m. for seventh place, while Conley and Plymouth meet at noon for fifth. Greene Central and New Bern were to collide at 1 p.m. for third, with North Lenoir and Aycock colliding in the championship game at 2:30 p.m.

Jazz Coach Knows Feeling

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Utah Jazz Coach Frank Layden says he remembers the sting of losing 18 straight games.

That's why he can sympathize with San Diego Coach Paul Silas.

The Jazz beat San Diego 112-107 in Monday night's lone National Basketball Association game — one played without a scoreboard clock and interrupted by a brawl.

The loss was the Clippers' 18th straight, tying them with Utah for the longest losing streak in the league this season.

"I feel for Paul," Layden said. "I think his team did everything they could tonight." Utah guard Darrell Griffith, who paced the Jazz with 28 points, agreed.

"I give them a lot of credit," Griffith said. "They didn't take a dive tonight. They came out after us and played hard."

"It's been a great experience having to deal with adversity," said Silas. "I think I've handled it well and the team has handled it well. When you lose, it's tough to stay up."

Tom Chambers, a rookie from Utah, scored 38 points to lead the Clippers before fouling out with less than two minutes to go.

"We're going to keep playing hard," Chambers said. "If we lose 20 games, we lose 20 games. But no one is going to say it's because we didn't play hard."

The game was played without a scoreboard clock. An electrical malfunction forced officials to use a hand clock to time the game.

Meanwhile, Utah's Adrian Dantley and San Diego's John Douglas were ejected after exchanging blows with 5:22 left in the third quarter. The scuffle erupted under the Clippers' basket after Chambers rammed in a dunk to tie the contest at 66.

Dantley, the NBA's No.3 scorer with a 30.6 average, finished the night with 17 points.

Dantley scored 13 points and Griffith 12 in the first quarter as Utah broke to a 39-28 lead. The Jazz were up 58-51 at halftime.

Chambers scored 14 points in the third quarter as San Diego narrowed Utah's lead.

The Clippers' Rock Lee — who was signed as a free agent Sunday — replaced Douglas after the fight. He missed two free throws that would have given San Diego a 68-66 lead, and Utah's Ricky Green scored to spark another Jazz surge that carried them to a 86-76 lead at the end of the period.

Chambers and James Brogan, who scored 24 points, carried San Diego in the fourth quarter.

Torre Enjoying Fruits Of His Return Back Up

ATLANTA (AP) — Among major league baseball managers, it's a short hop from "Who's Who" to "Who's He?" — and vice versa — and Joe Torre is enjoying the fruits of the return trip.

After five frustrating years with the anemic New York Mets, he now has the Atlanta Braves sizzling.

Overnight, the failure becomes a genius. It's the irony of the profession.

"We owe it all to the skipper — he's given us a winning attitude," says Brett Butler, the Braves' sensational rookie.

in the movie of the Margaret Mitchell Civil War novel.

Just coincidence. Brett's mom, we're told, never read the book or saw the movie.

Many of the thousands of fans who descended on Augusta, Ga., for the Masters golf tournament last weekend could hardly wait to get back to the hotel to catch the latest chapter in the exciting serial: "Joe Torre's Comeback."

A Braves star of the 1960s, Torre is finding it an exhilarating experience.

"It all started in spring training," Torre insists. "From the first day, our purpose was to put emphasis on attitude. We were going to get the work done but we were intent on playing every game to win."

"We had a good spring record — 18-7. What we did was carry this attitude and the momentum right into the regular season."

"Frankly, I am pleased with how it's all worked out."

Without much production from the team's top offensive threat, third baseman Bob Horner, the Braves nevertheless produced some airtight pitching and sparkling defensive play in their sweep over San Diego and Houston.

Rick Mahler pitched a two-hit shutout in the opening game and ran his goose-egg string to 18 Sunday when the Braves beat speedballer Nolan Ryan for their fifth straight victory. The score was 5-0.

Bob Walk and Tommy Boggs both had shutouts working until the late innings of the three games they started while reliever Larry Williams came to the rescue of rookie Steve Bedrosian in Saturday night's 8-6 triumph over the Astros.

"Our pitching staff was a question mark in spring training," Torre said. "With Phil Niekro injured, I had no idea what our starting rotation would be. But now it is jelling."

Oilers Even Series With Kings

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Edmonton Oilers Coach Glen Sather is unhappy with what he considers rough play by the Los Angeles Kings, but he's not fighting mad.

"Our style of game is not to get involved in fights," Sather said Monday night after the Oilers beat the Kings 3-2 to send their best-of-five National Hockey League playoff series back to Edmonton for a deciding fifth game tonight.

"One of our guys has bite marks on his back," Sather said. "I called the NHL (earlier Monday) and said, 'What are you going to do about this kind of stuff?' I was told the referee didn't see it so nothing could be done. This is not ice hockey.

"If we can win a game without retaliating, that's what we want to do."

Sather said the Oilers played their style of hockey — staying out of trouble and out of the penalty box — in the victory that evened the Smythe Division semifinals at 2-2.

"We have to play the game in Edmonton just like we did this one," he said. "The Kings tried to get us into penalties, but we haven't been that type of team all year."

Pat Hughes and Glenn Anderson scored second-period goals to pull the Oilers away from a 1-1 tie, and Grant Fuhr turned in a fine performance in goal to key the victory.

"It was a good game and Fuhr was the difference," said Kings' Coach Don Perry. "The tempers were high, but it wasn't a dirty game."

Fuhr said he expects the final game to be a replay of the other four, which have been exciting and extremely competitive.

"It will probably be another close game with a lot of tight checking," he said. "The Kings play well at Edmonton."

Fuhr, who had allowed a goal by Marcel Dionne in the first period, gave up another to Los Angeles' Mike Murphy with 8:44 remaining in the contest. But he held the Kings at bay the rest of the way to preserve the victory.

Jari Kurri scored the other Edmonton goal, tying the contest at 1-1 in the opening period.

In other playoff action tonight, the defending Stanley Cup champion New York Islanders host the Pittsburgh Penguins and the Quebec Nordiques face the Montreal Canadiens in Montreal. Both series are tied 2-2.

After blasting the Penguins 8-1 and 7-2 in the first two games of the opening-round series at the Nassau Coliseum, the Islanders saw the Penguins turn things around. Unaffected by those blowouts, the Penguins went home and downed the Islanders 2-1 in overtime in Game 3 and 5-2 in Game 4.

The Canadiens, who finished third in the overall points race behind the Islanders and Edmonton, were also faced with a fifth game at home, against provincial rival Quebec.

The Canadiens were shocked by Edmonton in three games last spring. This year, the Canadiens trailed Quebec two games-to-one, but dominated the Nordiques in Game 4 in Quebec.

Dempsey Still Critical

NEW YORK (AP) — Jack Dempsey, one of boxing's all-time great heavyweight champions, remained in critical condition at New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center, according to a hospital spokesman.

"There has been no change," the spokesman said, since Dempsey, 86, was hospitalized on Sunday.

Hospital spokesmen, apparently at the request of Dempsey's family, were reluctant Monday night to elaborate on the former champion's illness or discuss his condition beyond the terse, "critical ... no change" comments.

Dempsey, known as the "Manassa Mauler," fought several memorable fights. He won the heavyweight title July 4, 1919 when he knocked down 6-foot-6½ Jess Willard seven times in the first round and stopped him after three rounds.

In a defense against Luis Firpo of Argentina, "The Wild Bull of the Pampas," on Sept. 14, 1923, he was knocked out of the ring in the first round, then knocked out Firpo in the second.

His most famous fight was the "Battle of the Long Count" Sept. 27, 1927 in a rematch with Gene Tunney, who had taken away his title. In the rematch, Dempsey failed to go to a neutral corner after scoring a knockdown in the seventh round in accordance with a relatively new rule. Referee Jack Barry would not start to count until Dempsey went to a neutral corner, and Tunney might have gotten a few extra seconds to get up. Tunney won a 10-round decision.

Dempsey also knocked out Georges Carpentier, "The Orchid Man" from France, in four rounds July 2, 1921, and outpointed Tom Gibson on July 4, 1923, in the fight that bankrupted Shelby, Mont.

Tabor City Trims Panthers

ROBERSONVILLE — Willie Gord and Rodney Allen each slammed three-run home runs to lead Tabor City to an easy 15-4 win over North Pitt Monday afternoon in the first round of the Roanoke Easter Tournament.

Tabor City plays Plymouth today (3 p.m.) in the semifinals. Plymouth had a first-round bye in the double-elimination tournament. Williamston, which had a first-round bye, plays Northeastern in the other semifinal (7:30). Northeastern beat Roanoke, 9-2, Monday.

North Pitt meets Roanoke at 5:30 p.m. in the loser's bracket.

Gord's three-run home run keyed a four-run first inning that gave Tabor City a 4-0 lead. Tabor City added another run in the second before Allen's three-run homer sparked a seven-run third and gave Tabor City a 12-0 lead.

North Pitt finally got on the board with Greg Briley's solo home run in the third and then added three more runs in the fourth. But Tabor City got those three runs back in the fifth and the game was called one inning later.

Briley and Mitchell Cox each had two hits in four at bats for North Pitt. Gord and Randall Duncan were both two for three for Tabor City.

Rose Inks New Phillie Pact

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Pete Rose, a 15-time All-Star with three World Series rings and numerous batting titles, has taken aim at the major-league hit record.

And on Monday, the Philadelphia first baseman signed a contract that will keep him in a Phillies uniform while he pursues the mark.

Rose, 491 hits away from Ty Cobb's all-time record of 4,191, signed a year-by-year guaranteed contract through the 1986 season, when he'll be 45 years old.

The new contract boosts the remaining two years on his current pact and can bring him up to $1.5 million for each of the following three years.

Rose, the all-time National League hit leader now with 3,700, signed a five-year contract at a reported $800,000 per season in December 1978, when he left the Cincinnati Reds and joined the Phillies as a free agent.

"Each year is a guaranteed figure," said Phillies President Bill Giles, accompanied by Rose and Rose's long-time adviser, Reuven Katz. "At the end of each year, the Phillies have the option to review Pete's performance and status for the following season."

Giles said Rose would be released if the Phillies decided not to renew their option, but he emphasized the team had no intention of doing that.

"He'll be playing for us when he breaks Ty Cobb's record, whether it's in 1984 and however long it takes."

Rose, who turns 41 Wednesday, is only 3-for-16 after four games this season. But with a career average of .310 and an NL second-best of .325 last year, he's not worried about the future.

"I take each game as it comes. I'm more worried about tomorrow's game than I am about the record," he said. "I don't worry about things I can't do in the next game."

A Pulitzer For John Updike After 'Giving Up Hope'

By RICK HAMPSON
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Having "given up all hope" of winning, novelist John Updike won a Pulitzer Prize for his novel "Rabbit is Rich," a book about America under President Carter and an era of diminished expectations. Sylvia Plath, a poet who became a heroine for feminists long after she killed herself two decades ago, won a Pulitzer on Monday for the posthumous volume, "The Collected Poems."

In the journalism awards, The Associated Press and The New York Times each won two Pulitzers, and the Kansas City Star and the Kansas City Times were cited for showing how and why two skywalks collapsed at the Hyatt Regency Hotel, killing 114 people.

The Detroit News won the gold medal for public service with an investigation that led to a series of stories detailing "a pattern of deception and unresponsiveness" in the way the Navy reported shipboard deaths of sailors to their families.

Charles Fuller won the drama award for "A Soldier's Play" as the annual awards were announced for the 66th time.

"There have been times that I had hoped to win the Pulitzer in the past, and I had given up all hope," said Updike, 50, of Georgetown, Mass. "I guess the moral of 'Rabbit is Rich' is that despite the diminished expectations we are all in some sense rich."

The prizes were announced by Michael I. Sovern, president of Columbia University, which administers the competition. Most of the prizes carry $1,000 cash awards.

AP's Saul Pett was awarded the prize in feature writing for a portrait of the federal bureaucracy, and Ron Edmonds of the AP was honored in spot news photography for his pictures of the attempted assassination of President Reagan.

The prizes were the 32nd and 33rd won by the AP — 17 for reporting and 16 for photos.

"At my stage in life it is profoundly sweet," said Pett, 64. "I can be as cynical as the next man, but I am living proof that Jack Kennedy was wrong: Life need not be unfair."

John Darnot said he was "overwhelmed" at being awarded the international reporting prize for his dispatches to The New York Times from Poland, but added, "I only regret that so far it has not ended better for Poland."

Jack Rosenthal of The Times was cited for editorial writing.

The general local reporting prize went to the staffs of the two Kansas City newspapers, which published more than 340 stories and hundreds of pictures about the collapse of the Hyatt's skywalks July 17.

In addition, Kansas City Times reporter Rick Atkinson was honored for national reporting. The Pulitzer Board praised his series on "America's chaotic management of its water resources" and other national stories combining "solid reporting and stylish writing."

Other prizes in the arts and letters categories:

—History: "Mary Chesnut's Civil War," edited by C. Vann Woodward;

—Biography: "Grant: A Biography," by William S. McFeely;

—General non-fiction: "The Soul of a New Machine," by Tracy Kidder; —Music: "Concerto for Orchestra," by Roger Sessions.

A special Pulitzer citation in music was awarded to Milton Babbitt "for his life's work as a distinguished and seminal American composer."

Journalism prizes also went to:

—Paul Henderson of the Seattle Times for special local reporting;

—Ben Sargent of the Austin American-Statesman of Texas for editorial cartooning;

—John H. White of the Chicago Sun-Times for feature photography;

—Art Buchwald of the Los Angeles Times Syndicate for commentary;

—Martin Bernheimer, music critic of the Los Angeles Times, for criticism.

Buchwald, who writes a humor column, said, "I'm going to be a better person now and I'm only going to write Pulitzer Prize-winning articles."

Sylvia Plath, born in Boston, was unheralded during her life, which she ended in England in 1963 at age 30. She was later recognized for poems that dealt with self-hatred and problems of child-bearing.

"A Soldier's Play," the only work considered for this year's drama prize, explores race relations at an Army post in 1944. Charles Fuller's play was mounted by the Negro Ensemble Company and has been running off-Broadway since last November.

Fuller, who lives in Philadelphia, said he wanted to spend the night with his wife and two sons. "I really want to digest this with them and talk about what all of it means. I'm very elated, of course, and this will change some things. But it mustn't change the way things are with our family."

Updike's prize novel was the third about the life of Harry "Rabbit" Angstrom and is set in the hero's middle years. The first two books were "Rabbit, Run" in 1960 and "Rabbit Redux" in 1971.

"Mary Chesnut's Civil War" is C. Vann Woodward's restoration and interpretation of the diaries and journals of Mary Boykin Chesnut, whose account of life in the Confederacy is a key historical primary source.

"The Soul of a New Machine" by Tracy Kidder is an account of the world of computers and the people who design and market them. Paul Henderson's award for special local reporting recognized the role of his Seattle Times stories in exonerating a man wrongly convicted of rape.

The editorial cartooning of the Austin American-Statesman's Ben Sargent was represented by a drawing of a grotesquely fat boxer, labeled "Defense," gorging himself with food as a military administrator massages his man and proclaims: "Slim down?! Why, he'd never be able to fight again!"

The Detroit News' public service gold medal was for stories it originally entered in the category of special local reporting.

It was one of the three finalists the jury in that category recommended to the Pulitzer Board.

However, the 17-member board on April 2 exercised its right to move stories from one category to another, said Bob Christopher, secretary of the board.

Bureau Chief Reid Miller in the AP office after receiving word he was awarded a Pulitzer Prize for spot news coverage. Mears was a Pulitzer winner in 1977. (AP Laserphoto)

Clash Over Music Tour

LONDON (AP) — The British music world's version of a restriction on foreign imports threatens to touch off an embargo on the U.S. side of the Atlantic.

The Los Angeles Philharmonic's London agent, Jasper Parrott, said Monday the orchestra is "absolutely outraged" because the Department of Employment refuses to permit the group to give five concerts in London next year to celebrate the 150th anniversary of Brahms' birth.

The Visiting Orchestras Consultative Association, which makes recommendations to the government, forbids touring orchestras to appear more than twice per year at a major London concert hall.

Carlo Maria Giulini and the LA Philharmonic planned to perform all four Brahms symphonies, his two piano concertos, violin concerto and German Requiem at five concerts in London's Royal Festival Hall from May 31 through June 5, 1983.

But the Department of Employment refused to grant work permits for the LA Philharmonic.

"The object of the work permit scheme is to safeguard jobs in this country," said David Waddington, undersecretary of state for employment. "If you have an open-door policy, that must mean ... less money to be spent at the box office for concerts staged by British orchestras."

Bluebirds Believed Returning To N.C.

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — A North Carolina conservationist is forecasting an explosion in the state's bluebird population, possibly becoming as plentiful as they were 50 years ago.

"This coming nesting season, it's going to be a population explosion," predicts Jack R. Finch of Bailey, a retired orchard grower and nurseryman who has promoted and practiced bluebird conservation for 10 years.

The increasing bluebird population is something Finch and others have worked for by maintaining special nestboxes to supplement bluebird's natural nesting sites. Finch has placed 2,000 bluebird nestboxes across the Carolinas.

The bird's population had declined since the 1930s but Finch says evidence now indicates a reversal of that trend. He said that while most people don't notice the change, bluebird numbers have been increasing significantly the past two years.

Finch says he became interested in the birds after learning that 90 percent of the bluebird population had died in just a few decades. That death rate was caused by a shortage in natural nesting cavities, such as a hollow in a dead tree or a fence post, and competition with house sparrows and starlings.

Finch helped organize the Home for Bluebirds Inc., a group concerned that young people might never know the sight and sound of a bluebird.

Through sales of special nesting boxes and brochures, Finch has kept the non-profit organization going with the help of others interested in the bird's preservation.

Finch says people wanting to help build the bluebird population advises that it takes a long-term commitment when erecting a nesting box. The boxes need frequent inspections and certain precautions must be taken to prevent invasion by the bluebirds' enemies. "What too many people do is put 'em up and forget 'em," he said. "What they're doing are raising sparrows, and that does (bluebirds) more harm than good." Sparrows, starlings, squirrels, snakes and cats can destroy bluebird eggs and their young. The 1 1/2-inch round opening in the box will keep out the starling but not the sparrow. Mounting the box on a greased pole of one-inch metal pipe will help keep cats, snakes and squirrels from climbing to the nest.

A Taxing Time

This is Tax Week for the many Americans struggling to fill out all their tax forms by midnight of April 15. The first federal income tax was levied 120 years ago to pay for the Civil War. In 1895 the federal income tax was ruled unconstitutional, but the 16th Amendment, passed in 1913, made the tax perfectly legal and taxpayers perfectly miserable. Filing out tax forms might make some people wish they lived in Kuwait, where the tax rate for everybody is zero! But things could be worse. In Norway 2,000 citizens are taxed at over 100 percent of their income. And shipping tycoon, Hilmer Reksten, reportedly has paid up to 491 percent of his income in taxes.

DO YOU KNOW — Under Reagan's proposed tax cuts, what will be the highest income tax rate?

MONDAY'S ANSWER — The New York Times has won the most Pulitzer Prizes — 48.

Chill Cut Into Beach Traffic

By The Associated Press
The Easter holiday has traditionally marked the beginning of the tourist season at North Carolina beaches, but cool weekend temperatures kept many from getting sand in their shoes.
Coastal merchants and tourist officials say crowds were good, but most tourist took advantage of indoor attractions to get out of the air, made chilly by temperatures in the 50s and low 60s.
C.R. Cannon, Dare County Tourist Bureau manager, said Saturday's crowds were good, but had dwindled by Monday when temperatures in the 70s warmed clear skies.
Cannon said many people visited indoor attractions, including the season opening of the North Carolina Marine Resources Center. The Wright Memorial at Kitty Hawk and the Elizabethan Gardens in Manteo reported business comparable to previous years.
Robin Orr, owner and manager of the Jolly Roger Motel and Pier at Topsail Beach, said the Easter weekend still provided the year's first big financial push.
"Traditionally Easter weekend kicks off our tourist season," Orr said. "Our business was a little slow this year because of the weather, but we were booked."
At Atlantic Beach, there were an estimated 65,000 visitors who came despite overcast skies, said police dispatcher Terry Rhodes.
"That's really slack," he said. "But it was very cloudy and overcast and kind of cold."
"We had an average or slightly better than average Easter crowd," said Andrew Janaviczki, owner of the Stump Dweller's gift shop in Surf City. "Sunday the sun came back out and lifted everyone's spirits. Some people who had planned to leave Sunday afternoon decided to stay through Monday."
H. Maynard Hicks, owner of the Islander Motel and Restaurant, said the tourist trade was much the same at Emerald Isle. He said the weather caused some motel cancellations, but business was booming at the restaurant.

Order Waste Site Insurance

By WILLIAM KRONHOLM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Faced with a public outcry, the Reagan administration is reversing itself and ordering the nation's hazardous waste industry to get insurance by this summer to cover potential losses from explosions and other major chemical accidents.

But an insurance expert doubts whether underwriters have the expertise to evaluate risks of chemical wastes.

The Environmental Protection Agency, reversing an earlier decision because of public opposition, announced on Monday that it was ordering all hazardous waste facilities to have liability insurance in force by mid-July covering possible injuries and property damage from sudden chemical accidents.

Other accidents, such as leakage into water supplies, also must be covered by insurance, but that will be phased in over three years.

The EPA said about 10,000 facilities would be affected. Each facility operator would have to be insured for $1 million per accident and at least $2 million per year.

For the long-term accidents resulting from leakage, coverage would be $3 million per accident and $6 million per year.

EPA Administrator Anne Gorsuch released a statement saying that the insurance coverage "helps to assure the public that funds are available to provide compensation for personal injuries and damage that may be caused by accidents."

But an insurance industry expert questioned whether insurers can properly evaluate the risks of hazardous waste sites without increased enforcement and licensing activity by the EPA.

"We just do not have in-house the necessary expertise to enforce governmental regulations," said Les Cheek, vice president for federal affairs of Crum & Forster Insurance Cos., a major commercial insurer.

"The concern I've always had is that the EPA will not inspect and license these facilities before they're required to have liability insurance," Cheek said. "Some facilities will be turned down by the underwriters and will go to the states to seek to compel insurers to take un-insurable risks."

The effect, he said, "would be to keep in business operations that should be closed down."

The regulations are similar to proposals put forward by the Carter administration. Those regulations were withdrawn last fall by the Reagan administration's EPA, which questioned their necessity.

EPA officials admitted Monday they had miscalculated the public reaction to that decision, however, and said nearly unanimous public opposition persuaded them to reverse it.

The decision got a mixed reaction from environmentalists. Jim Lewis of the Environmental Action Foundation in Washington said the insurance industry would serve as a valuable check on the federal government's regulation of hazardous waste sites.

"It's a useful backup to EPA, but it can't be used as a substitute for proper enforcement by the federal government," he said.

Jacqueline Warren of the Natural Resources Defense Council said questions remain over possible loopholes in the regulations that would allow only partial coverage of hazards.

"People are not going to be protected as they think they may be," she said.

Under the regulations, to be published in the Federal Register this week, liability coverage for major accidents such as chemical explosions must be in place by mid-July.

Coverage for slow leaks of toxic chemicals from landfills and other disposal sites would be phased in. Firms doing more than $10 million in business annually would be required to have that insurance by next January. Those with business of between $5 million and $10 million must have coverage by January 1984, smaller operators by January 1985.

Firms unable to get coverage would have to shut down, said John Skinner, director of state programs within EPA's solid waste office. But he added that the lack of coverage is likely to result from poor operations that insurance companies found to be too risky. He said such closing would be a "desirable result" of the insurance requirement.

Still Battle Small Fires

By The Associated Press
State firefighters were working late Monday on the remnants of 75 small forest fires which had demanded the attention of more than 400 forestry service workers throughout the day.

State forester M.B. Kunselman said firefighters were still battling blazes in Bertie, Chowan, Edgecombe, Burke, Cherokee and Swain counties.

The latest outbreak, sparked by low humidities and temperatures in the mid-70s, follows on the heels of last week's crunch of more than 500 fires which consumed more than 50,000 woodland acres.

Last week's blazes, including a 10,000-acre fire in Hyde County, have been contained with plowed fire lines, Kunselman said. Most of the firefighting crews on the larger fires had been released by Monday, but a few state forestry employees were patrolling the areas.

Kunselman said the patrols were pumping water on remaining ground fires in sparsely settled areas of Hyde and Pasquotank counties.

Tom Hegele, a forestry service fire prevention specialist, said the biggest fires were in Bladen, Dare and Pasquotank counties, although most of the new fires were near Fayetteville, New Bern and Rockingham in the state's southeast and eastern portions.

"There were warmer temperatures, it was a beautiful day and people invariably want to go out and work in the garden, clear fields and burn trash," Hegele said. "And things get away from them."

A ban on burning was lifted last week, but Hegele said there is a chance it will be reimposed if conditions don't improve.

"We don't like to keep (a burning ban) on unless it is necessary," he said. "We realize a lot of people have to do burning, and we don't want to make it harder on them."

He said the forecast for Tuesday was for low humidity and winds gusting to 25 percent, which could result in more fires.

"If we get a couple of days like that with no rain, we may have to think about canceling permits again," he said.

"We are asking people to use caution if they are doing any burning," said Kunselman, adding that fires and improving weather seemingly go together.

Police Charge Wounded Man

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Raleigh man, who was recovering from what police say was a self-inflicted gun wound, has been charged with first-degree murder in the March 12 shooting death of his wife.

Kenneth M. Thomas, 30, was transferred from Wake Medical Center to the Central Prison hospital Friday, after the arrest warrant was served. He is charged in the death of Mary Annette Thomas, 28.

Thomas held police at bay outside his house for about two hours March 12 before they rushed the house and discovered Thomas seriously wounded and Mrs. Thomas dead.
