Derailment

TRAIN DERAILS — A conductor for a Seaboard Coast Line train received minor injuries this morning in a derailment near the Du Pont plant near Kinston. According to Seaboard Coast Line customer mobile agent Harry Cleaton, the man was identified as O. K. Williams of Rocky Mount, who received a cut on his nose and a shoulder injury. Cleaton said the train had two cars, a hopper car and the caboose, in addition to the engine. The hopper car was loaded with soybean meal for the Sunnyside Eggs operation near Winterville. Cleaton said the hopper car apparently jumped the tracks, causing it and the caboose to overturn. There was no estimate of damage, according to Cleaton, and the cause was not immediately determined. The train left Kinston at 9 a.m. and the accident occurred about one mile south of the Du Pont plant about 10 a.m. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

High Court Agrees Take Up Schools' Tax Break

By KEVIN COSTELLO
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court said today it will settle the bitter dispute over federal tax breaks for racially discriminatory private schools.

The justices also announced they have picked a special advocate to defend the 11½-year-old government ban on tax exemptions for such schools, granting an unusual Justice Department request.

The Reagan administration's announcement last Jan. 8 that it intended to lift the Internal Revenue Service ban on tax breaks for racially biased schools raised a storm of protest among blacks, civil rights groups and others.

The court appointed William T. Coleman Jr., former secretary of transportation and the first black to serve as a Supreme Court clerk, to argue against the tax breaks for racially discriminatory schools.

There was no immediate indication of when the case would be scheduled for oral arguments before the justices. It probably will not be argued until next fall.

The tax exemption dispute has a complex history. Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., has called the dispute one of the "administration's two greatest political fumbles so far."

Last October, the Supreme Court agreed to hear a challenge to the ban filed by two Christian schools with racially discriminatory policies.

Then, as part of the January announcement, the Reagan administration asked the high court to drop the appeal, saying its policy reversal and intention to lift the IRS ban made a decision unnecessary.

Later, in a second reversal, the Justice Department asked the Supreme Court Feb. 25 to go ahead and decide, after all, the legality of the ban on tax breaks for racially biased schools.

The Justice Department also said the high court should appoint a special advocate to argue in favor of the prohibition, because the government is sticking to its Jan. 8 position that IRS officials had no congressional authority to impose the ban in 1970.

As late as last September, the administration said it supported the IRS ban on tax breaks for racially biased schools.

The Supreme Court today also granted the government's request to present its views — without supporting the IRS ban — during the oral arguments.

Just days after the public outcry that arose from the January announcement of the administration's intention to lift the ban, President Reagan asked Congress to bar tax breaks for racially biased schools.

So far, the lawmakers have indicated they will not pass the measure proposed by the president.

The two schools in the case are Bob Jones University in Greenville, S.C., and Goldsboro Christian Schools in Goldsboro, N.C.

Bob Jones bars interracial dating and interracial marriage among its students, while Goldsboro refuses to enroll black students. Fewer than a dozen of the 6,300 students at Bob Jones are black.

Both schools defend their racially discriminatory policies on religious grounds, but lost their challenge to the tax-exemption denial in the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Administration officials previously said they intended to grant tax exemptions to Bob Jones and to Goldsboro, even while they were waiting for Congress to decide whether to pass the ban requested by the president.

Then, on Feb. 18, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, in a related case, barred the government from issuing tax exemptions "to any school" that discriminates against blacks, including Bob Jones and Goldsboro.

That order was the immediate cause of the administration's reversal of its previous position that the Supreme Court appeal should be dismissed, the Justice Department said in its court filing Feb. 25.

Federal tax exemptions often are considered crucial to a private school's financial existence. Tax-exempt schools do not have to pay federal unemployment and Social Security taxes, and contributions to such institutions are tax deductible.

The IRS has revoked the tax exemptions of more than 100 private schools since 1970, and has denied exemptions to an unspecified number of other learning institutions because of discriminatory policies.

Of those schools, only Bob Jones and Goldsboro specifically have cited their religious beliefs as grounds for the racial discrimination.

The government noted Feb. 25 that it still opposes the notion that the constitutionally mandated freedom of religion "guarantees" tax breaks to schools that racially discriminate on the grounds of their religious beliefs.

After the Jan. 8 announcement of the government's policy shift, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People asked the Supreme Court for permission to defend before the Supreme Court the ban on tax exemptions for schools that discriminate against blacks.

Award Contracts

By STUART SAVAGE

Pitt County Commissioners this morning awarded contracts for the construction of a solid waste transfer station at the Port Terminal and a building at the county garage.

J.H. Hudson Inc. was the low bidder for the solid waste site at $25,000. Other bids ranged from $25,700 to $38,700.

Low bidder for the garage addition was Eastern Construction Co. at $7,950. Other bids for that project ranged from $8,000 to $10,680.

The garage addition is scheduled for completion in 30 working days, while the transfer station is expected to be completed in 45 days.

Commissioners this morning also agreed to fund half the bid cost of a proposed $85,000 vocational building at Rose

High School, if the Greenville Board of Education will finance the other half of the cost from surplus funds.

City school officials several weeks ago asked the board for assistance on the project to house the auto mechanics program and another program on-campus. The mechanics program is now being quartered in a building some distance from the high school for which the school system pays $8,000 a year rent.

In other business today, the board adopted a resolution proclaiming the week of April 25-May 1 as Emergency Medical Services Week in Pitt County, and adopted a resolution opposing a state-proposed 50 percent increase in rates for autopsies performed by the medical examiner.

If approved, the county would be required to pay $300 per autopsy. The cost to the county is now $200.

Argentinian Declares A Solution 'Approaching'

By WILLIAM H. HEATH
Associated Press Writer

Buenos Aires, Argentina (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. and Argentine negotiators are "approaching a solution" to the conflict between Britain and Argentina over the Falkland Islands, a member of the ruling military junta reported today.

A newspaper, meanwhile, reported that Argentina was willing to participate in negotiations at the United Nations on the key issue of who has sovereignty over the islands, ruled by Britain for 149 years and seized by Argentine troops on April 2.

"We are approaching a solution, with the aid of the United States, but preserving Argentine interests," air force Cmdr. Basilio Lami Dozo told reporters.

He said Haig and Argentine leaders were working on a final draft of the latest proposal to be carried by Haig to London and Washington.

Details of the latest proposal in the 17-day impasse were not immediately reported by officials. In London, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher met with her defense and foreign secretaries but there was no immediate comment.

But the Buenos Aires newspaper Clarin said Argentina had proposed U.N. negotiations on the issue of sovereignty within a fixed time period. In the interim, an Argentine-British administration with representatives of the 1,800 islanders would govern the island under American supervision, the report said.

A joint Argentine-British police force would keep order on the islands. The Clarin said this was contingent on Britain turning back its 40-ship armada heading for the Falklands. In return, Argentine troops would be withdrawn.

Argentine Foreign Ministry and U.S. State Department officials refused to confirm or deny the newspaper report.

Haig, who ended 12 straight hours of talks with Argentine leaders at 2 a.m. today, resumed the negotiations at Government House.

President Gen. Leopoldo Galtieri's press secretary, Rodolfo Baltierrez said: "The final stage of the second round of negotiations has begun with the same differences that existed this morning (when talks ended)." He did not elaborate.

Haig's spokesman, Dean Fischer, had said earlier that the secretary of state planned to leave Buenos Aires today but he would not say where Haig would fly next or characterize the talks.

Haig and Argentine Foreign Minister Nicanor Costa Mendez talked for nearly 12 hours Sunday.

Government sources said then that Argentina rejected any proposal that did not recognize its sovereignty over the islands 250 miles off the nation's southern coast.

"We still believe that negotiation is better than war and we're putting all our efforts behind the talks," Costa Mendez said Sunday. "What is not so positive is that there has been no definite progress."

Galtieri repeated that

Argentina will not return the Falklands, which Argentines call the Malvinas. "We are on Argentine territory, and we're not going to abandon it," he said.

Argentine C-130 transports continued flying men and weapons to the islands, occupied by an estimated 9,000 soldiers.

In London, British lawmaker Winston Churchill, a defense policy spokesman for Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and the grandson of Britain's World War II leader, predicted that within days the Harrier planes aboard the 40-ship war fleet steaming toward the Falklands would impose an air blockade of the islands, and British marines and paratroopers would land to establish air strips for the planes.

Then it will be "only a matter of time" before the Argentine garrison runs out of supplies and has to surrender, he wrote in the Sunday Express.

British submarines are already enforcing a 200-mile sea blockade zone around the islands. The British Defense Ministry said most of Argentina's 31-ship navy had put to sea but no "major" vessel had defied the British blockade.

The Defense Ministry reported Sunday that the British armada was "en route and on time" but declined to elaborate. The fleet left England on the 8,000-mile voyage two weeks ago and reportedly passed the halfway point last week.

Gaza Strip Resisters Are Forcibly Removed

By DANIEL A. GREBLER
Associated Press Writer

YAMIT, Occupied Sinai (AP) — Israeli troops lifted women resisters off a roof with a crane and battered open doors today as they began removing Jewish settlers who reject Israel's pledge to return the Sinai Desert to Egypt.

"There was some weeping and everybody is in depression, both us and the army," a settler identified as Menachem Granit said in a two-way radio broadcast overheard by reporters.

"Everything is being done in slow motion." More than 2,000 squatters in the Mediterranean coast town of Yamit barricaded themselves in buildings after morning prayers but troops made no immediate moves to evict them. Yamit was the last of the settlements Israel established after it captured the Sinai in the 1967 Arab-Israeli War.

The last third of the territory still in Israeli hands is scheduled to be returned to Egypt next Sunday in accordance with the 1979 Camp David peace treaty. The rest was handed back in 1980.

All civilians in the territory were ordered back to Israel on March 31. Maj. Gen. Haim Erez, military commander of the evacuation in Yamit, said he hoped those who refused to leave would do so peacefully.

"If not, we'll find a way to evacuate them without any thing happening that we don't want," he said.

Troops used a crane to lift six women from a rooftop in Talmei Yosef, a desert farming village five miles east of Yamit, anti-withdrawal activists said over two-way radio.

Granit said several hundred soldiers entered the village along with police carrying eviction notices, and fire engines and ambulances stood by. He said settlers refused to open their doors, but the army battered them open.

In Yamit, Israel's two chief rabbis, Shlomo Goren and Ovadia Yosef, tried to reason with Jewish extremists barricaded inside an air-raid shelter who threatened to kill themselves if soldiers tried to remove them. The group reportedly demanded guidance from their leader, American-born Rabbi Meir Kahane, who was in New York.

"We have tried to persuade them not to commit suicide," one military chaplain said. "They listened to the rabbis but they didn't answer."

The ultra-nationalists in the bomb shelter, most of them believed to be Americans aged 17 to 25, sent out a note Sunday saying if the troops tried to evict them, one of them would commit suicide every two hours, and the last one alive would fire on the troops.

"We are ready and willing to fight and die to prevent this sacrilege (of withdrawal) from taking place," the six-page message said. "We cannot and will not be taken from this shelter alive."

They were the only ones of those remaining who threatened violent resistance. Israeli authorities said they were members of the Kach movement, led by Kahane, and included at least two women.

Meanwhile, engineers cut off Yamit's phones and razed buildings in the town's small industrial areas.

Deputy Secretary of State Walter Stoessel returned to Jerusalem from Cairo, continuing his efforts to insure the transfer of the territory on schedule despite Israeli charges that Egypt violated provisions of the Camp David treaty.

Israeli officials said the handover appeared no longer in doubt because of Egyptian promises during the past week of U.S.-Egyptian-Israeli diplomacy.

Stoessel said he returned to Israel to review "the progress we have made" and was confident the withdrawal would take place on time.

The most serious dispute remaining is over precise demarcation of the new border between Egypt and Israel.

BUILDING HULL DEMOLISHED

There is the charred remains of a building beside the railroad that crosses Evans Street Extension that's visible from Evans Street. It's a real eyesore and with the city's stringent codes, I don't know why it's permitted to stay there. C.B.

The building hull you pointed out has been demolished and the site cleaned up. Hotline's call to the City Building Inspector's office was quickly acted upon. The owner was sent a letter directing that the structure be demolished, with court action as the alternative. The owner complied within a short time and the site's back in its natural state. We thank the city and the owner for their prompt action.

Without Volunteers, Could Accomplish Little

By MARY SCHULKEN

To volunteer, according to Webster's Third International Dictionary, is to grow spontaneously. Ask any of Pitt County's hundreds of volunteers and they'll say they've done just that.

Ask anybody connected with the volunteers — 4-H, agriculture, schools, health care — the list is endless — and they'll say their programs couldn't exist without those who donate their time and resources.

April 18-24 is National Volunteer Week, a time set aside by leaders to honor those who give their time. In Pitt County the week will be marked by banquets and awards.

"Without our volunteers, well, we just couldn't have a 4-H program," said Dale Panero, Pitt 4-H Extension Agent. "We are fortunate that a wide variety of volunteers are involved in Pitt County 4-H and we solicit volunteers of all ages and with all types of talents."

Panero noted that during 1981, 189 adult volunteers and eight teen leaders were active in the county 4-H programs.

Anybody, said the extension agent, can be a volunteer. "We don't just utilize continuing volunteers," she said. "Many of our helpers are one-time volunteers — people who teach a workshop, judge a show, sponsor an event. Club leaders, special interest leaders and resource leaders are all important in our county."

"Volunteer assistance is the only way we can make 4-H activities available to as many young people as possible," added the extension agent.

Volunteers are essential to the schools too, say school officials, teachers and administrators. According to Barry Gaskins of Pitt County Community Schools, 395 volunteers were utilized by that program between September 1981 and December 1981. These 395 persons gave 3,591 hours of their time.

"In all of North Carolina, school volunteers have increased by 18.5 percent, with volunteer participation increasing by 10.7 percent, participation in community schools' programs by 59 percent, and hours of community use of facilities increased by 8 percent," noted Gaskins. He said these figures were reflected in Pitt County as well.

Statewide, he added, data from 87 school systems indicated that from September-December 1981, 28,625 volunteers gave 325,792 hours of their time.

In Pitt County, said Gaskins, these people tutor students, assist with field trips, media centers and clerical duties, participate in health screening, are career day volunteers, resource volunteers or are "listeners."

Learn 3 Of 5 Violent Crimes Done By Strangers

WASHINGTON (AP) —
The Justice Department says that strangers commit three out of five violent crimes, a figure that remained stable during the 1970s despite the rising fear of such crime.

The department's Bureau of Justice Statistics reported Sunday that 59 percent of violent crimes from 1973 through 1979 were committed by strangers, as opposed to relatives or acquaintances of the victims.

Robbery was most frequently perpetrated by strangers, in 76 percent of the cases, followed by rape at 65 percent, aggravated assault at 56 percent and simple assault at 53 percent. There are more than 2½ times as many assaults as rapes and robberies.

In a report entitled "Violent Crime by Strangers," the bureau noted that polls found an increasing fear of crime during the 1970s, particularly of street crime by strangers, "even though the rate of violent victimizations by strangers remained stable."

"The rate at which strangers committed rapes, robberies, and assaults was exceedingly stable, averaging 19.6 per 1,000 in the population of persons 12 years old and more, from 1973 through 1979," said the bureau's acting director Benjamin H. Renshaw.

On the other hand, the rate of violent crime by non-strangers increased from 10.7 per 1,000 persons to 12.0 per 1,000 in the seven-year period," he added.

The data was based on the bureau's National Crime Survey, which twice a year interviews 132,000 people about crime. The survey is considered the government's most accurate crime measurement because it includes crimes not reported to the police as well as those that are reported.

The FBI's Uniform Crime Report covers only crime reported to the police and has showed more fluctuation than the survey. The survey has found that about two-thirds of violent crimes in America are not reported to the police.

The study defined strangers as those unknown to their victims or known only by sight. It noted that violent crimes by relatives and acquaintances may be understated because of fear of embarrassment or retaliation.

The survey found a stable average of more than 3.3 million rapes, robberies and assaults during the seven years.

The survey does not include murders, but the study said that FBI reports since 1976 showed a stable proportion of murders by strangers, about 20 percent.

In rapes and assaults by strangers, the assailant was more often a lone white male over age 21. In contrast, people robbed by strangers were more likely to be confronted by a pair or group of black males, who were as likely to be under 21 as older.

Whites were the offenders in two-thirds of all assaults, more than half of all rapes but only a third of all robberies. Rapes and assaults by strangers usually involved victims and offenders of the same race; that was less so with rapes and assaults by non-strangers.

Fewer than 10 percent of violent strangers were female.

Strangers used weapons in four of 10 violent crimes, including half the robberies, 30 percent of the rapes and 40 percent of the assaults. In these crimes, offenders used guns and knives almost equally.

The study noted that FBI data shows that guns are used in murders more than all other weapons combined and that a gunshot wound is more likely to be fatal than an injury caused by any other weapon.

Only one in 20 victims of violent crimes by strangers received a serious injury, such as a gunshot or knife wound, broken bones or internal injury. One in four received minor injuries, including bruises, cuts and swelling.

Thirty-six percent of rape victims received some type of physical injury, six percent of them serious, the study said. Robbery and assault victims were injured 30 percent of the time, but four out of five of those injuries were not serious.

Two-thirds of all violent crimes by strangers were not completed. The completion rate for robbery was 61 percent; rape, 38 percent, aggravated assault, 30 percent and simple assault, 21 percent.

Renshaw said that not all persons interviewed have been crime victims, because the sample for the study is selected randomly. Part of the interview group is changed every six months, and the rotation allows for each person to be interviewed every six months over a three-year period, he said.

Two Officers Acquitted Of 3 Drownings Plan Return To Jobs

By SALLY CARPENTER
Associated Press Writer
DALLAS (AP) — Two of three officers acquitted of criminally negligent homicide charges plan to return to their jobs in the county where three teenagers drowned when a boat carrying all six capsized last summer.

Jurors returned nine innocent verdicts Saturday for the officers, who were charged with negligently causing the youths to drown by loading them into a 14-foot motorboat with a posted 400-pound passenger limit. The boat had no life preservers or running lights.

The officers were suspended after being indicted on three counts of the misdemeanor charge, which carried a maximum penalty of a year in jail and a $2,000 fine for each count.

Jurors also could have convicted the trio of violating the Texas Water Safety Act, a misdemeanor punishable by a $500 fine.

Reserve deputy Kenneth Archie and probation officer David Drummond will return to their positions, their attorneys said. Deputy Kenny Elliott, who now works for an Abilene oil company, will look for a law enforcement job elsewhere.

The black teens had been arrested for investigation of marijuana possession at a celebration of Juneteenth, commemorating June 19, 1865, when Texas slaves received word of their freedom.

Carl Baker, 19 and Anthony Freeman, 18, both of Mexia, and Steven Booker, 19, of Dallas, drowned in Lake Mexia.

The two white officers — Elliott, 24, and Drummond, 33 — swam to shore after the boat overturned. Archie, a 23-year-old black officer, clung to the craft until he was rescued. The officers said they tried to save the youths.

A spokesman for a group of blacks that had pressed for felony charges against the three said he would continue to seek a Justice Department investigation.

Kwesi Williams and other members of the Comanche Three Committee wore black armbands and carried signs outside the courthouse as jurors deliberated Saturday.

"We're going to keep on keepin' on," said Williams, who called the trial "a showcase" that "appealed to the basic racist ideology."

"We never expected this to yield any results," he added. "What else do you expect from an all-white jury?"

Evelyn Baker, mother of one of the victims, said she also expected an acquittal "because this is white folks."

Special prosecutor Larry W. Baraka said he didn't know whether federal charges would be brought against the officers. Assistant Texas Attorney General Gerald Carruth, who helped prosecute the case, said no further state charges would be pursued.

The jury deliberated nearly five hours before reaching the verdicts, which were read by Dallas County Criminal Court Judge Tom Price.

"We had a fair judge and a fair jury and we got a fair trial," said James Stafford, who defended Archie.

"I was elated, I was overjoyed, but I was not surprised" by the verdict, added Elliott's attorney, Charles Newlin.

Defense attorneys contended the case belonged in civil court. The lawyers noted that two of the victims' families have filed lawsuits seeking $8 million in damages against the officers.

They said media coverage of the drownings was the only reason criminal charges were brought against the officers.

To convict the three of criminally negligent homicide, jurors were required to determine that an ordinary person would have perceived a "substantial and unjustifiable risk" under the same circumstances.

Prosecutors contended the officers perceived danger because they conferred about whether they would need one trip or two to carry the six passengers across the lake to a sheriff's command post. Officers' testimony that they removed handcuffs from the suspects before loading them on the boat also showed such concern, prosecutors said.

But defense attorneys contended the only danger the officers anticipated was from a crowd that was gathering around them.

Bucky Waters Eyes Congress

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Raymond C. "Bucky" Waters, a Duke University Medical School official and former coach of the Duke basketball team, says he may run for Congress on the Republican ticket.

Waters said he has spoken to Thomas F. Ellis, chairman of the National Congressional Club, which began as a vehicle for the political career of Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C. Ellis said he thought Waters would be a "super candidate and a super congressman."

Waters joins a raft of people whose names have been floated for consideration in the 2nd District seat vacated by L.H. Fountain's announced retirement.

F. Douglas Biddy of Durham and Barry Gardner of Rocky Mount declared their interest in the seat Saturday at a meeting of Republicans in Durham.

Also mentioned as potential candidates have been former professional basketball player Jack Marin for the Republicans. Democrats in contention are H.C. "Mickey" Michaux Jr. of Durham, James E. Ramsey of Roxboro, I.T. "Tim" Valentine Jr. of Nashville and W.W. "Billy" Yeargin Jr. of Oxford.

British Armada On Its Final Leg To Falklands

By PETER ARCHER
Press Association Writer
ABOARD HMS HERMES
AT SEA (AP) — Britain's Falkland Islands armada, led by the aircraft carrier Hermes, is now on its way from Ascension Island to the occupied Falklands.

As the aircraft carrier weighed anchor, ready to start the final leg of the journey south, the crew was called to action stations when a submarine was sighted.

The sub was seen about 30 miles away by an oil tanker accompanying the task force. Its identity was not known, but it was thought to be an immediate threat.

The fleet is ready to reinforce Britain's naval blockade of the Falklands, currently being maintained by nuclear-powered submarines.

With two carriers in the force — HMS Invincible is the other — it is possible that an air blockade could follow, with Sea Harrier vertical-takeoff jets patrolling over the islands.

Before leaving Ascension Sunday, commandos on Hermes were transferred to other ships, which will probably hang back in the convoy.

The carriers and their escorts are expected to forge ahead, leaving the marines ready to move at short notice.

During the weekend, I flew by helicopter to an accompanying assault ship. For security reasons, I am unable to report what I saw. But one thing is certain, the troops are well-equipped and ready for any action.

Hermes, flagship of the naval force, reached Ascension last Friday, having taken 12 days to steam 3,500 miles deep into the Atlantic.

Ahead of us are another 3,000 miles before we reach the Falklands.

On arrival at Ascension, fresh supplies were ferried out to the ships. Helicopters filled the air, lifting vital provisions from the island and from a fleet auxiliary supply ship at anchor nearby. Ammunition taken on board at Portsmouth was distributed to other ships in the convoy.

The island, a small outcrop of volcanic rock, is British and is being used by the task force as a forward operating base. It is playing an important role as a staging post, although it is not necessarily seen as a rendezvous point for the fleet.

If the naval operation to free the Falklands is thought of in phases, arrival at Ascension marks the conclusion of Phase One.

Few people were allowed ashore. Those who did go — those with an essential part to play — were issued water bottles because of a chronic water shortage on the island.

From the ship, the island looks bleak but inviting. But not much happens on Ascension. It is home to an American base and a British Broadcasting Corp. relay station — and little else.

Modern systems for intensive swine production are, unfortunately, designed to favor intense production of the mites that cause sarcoptic mange. Confinement rearing provides close contact on a year-round basis.

Areas around the eyes, ears, back and neck are most often affected. The skin becomes thick, rough, red and pimply. Small brown specks are quite often noticed. Sarcoptic mange mites are virtually invisible to the naked eye. Constant itching can be a sign of mange infestation, although in mild cases itching may not occur.

Mange mites and lice are generally found infesting swine. Pig-to-pig contact is the major means of transmission. Mange mites can live in warm bedding for several days before attaching to a new host.

Successful treatment of mange is a difficult assignment because it requires a complete break in the parasite's life cycle. The sow is a focal point for pest measures since toxicity of many chemicals to pigs under weaning age can occur. Sows should be treated with lindane, toxaphene or malathion during mid-gestation. Don't forget to treat the boars since they are quite often the source of reinfection of sows. Make sure to put some mixture directly into the sows' ears as this is a location where mange mites gather. Place 2 cc's of insecticide mixed with mineral oil into each ear.

In order to break the mange cycle one must treat two times at 10-day intervals. The life cycle of sarcoptic mange is 10-15 days from egg to egg-laying adult female.

Marijuana In City's Auction

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — When she found 17 small bags of marijuana in a suitcase displayed with other merchandise at the city's annual spring auction, Sue Helderop was startled.

"I just couldn't believe my eyes," she said. "But I knew what it was right away and knew what I had to do with it."

Ms. Helderop handed the suitcase containing the bags to Police Officers Charles Doezema and David Novokoski, who said they flushed the contraband into the sewer system.

Police said the marijuana probably had been overlooked when the suitcase was confiscated. They described the weed as old, mixed with tobacco and probably worth about $85.

The suitcase, empty except for a few seeds, was sold for $5.50 to Carla Mills, of suburban Wyoming, who said she didn't mind that the bag's contents had been removed.

"I don't smoke the stuff, anyway," she said.

The Saturday sale was to dispose of bicycles, audio equipment and other confiscated or abandoned goods collected by the city.

Safeguards Are Needed

Vadim I. Kuznetsov, First Secretary of the Soviet Embassy in Washington, didn't sound like a missile rattler as he talked during a panel discussion at East Carolina University last week.

In fact, he exhibited the same concerns as American leaders about the possible devastation of nuclear weapons.

He said there is "an obvious need to negotiate, to come up with concrete means to limit, reduce and eventually to liquidate arsenals of nuclear weapons."

Kuznetsov reminded his listeners of the heavy losses suffered by the Soviet Union during World War II and maintained there was a "greater abhorrence of war in the Soviet Union than in America."

He said it would take five freight trains carrying TNT stretching from New York to Los Angeles to equal the power of a 100 megaton bomb. Such bombs have a force 2,500 times more powerful than the bomb used on Hiroshima.

He claimed the U.S. chooses not to listen to Soviet proposals to ban production of neutron weapons and other new weapons intended for the European theater.

The words sound convincing. Nevertheless it remains a fact that little progress has been made on an accurate way of verifying that any nuclear ban treaty is being adhered to in the Soviet Union and the United States.

There are few who believe the Soviets will intentionally institute a nuclear war. The best way for both sides to avoid that is to reduce nuclear arms and tension. Any treaty, however, will require adequate safeguards and inspection.

Soviet Eyes Opportunity

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — High-level alarm over Soviet manipulations to exploit U.S. discomfiture in the Falkland Islands triangle sent a top-secret cable crackling from the State Department April 12 to Secretary of State Alexander Haig.

A desperate Haig was in London trying new mediation gimmicks to keep Great Britain, this country's closest ally, out of a shooting war with Argentina, a strong supporter of the Reagan administration's anti-communist policy in Central America.

The gist of the cable: Moscow is showing it cannot keep its hands off the U.S.-British-Argentina triangle and intends to exploit it to the utmost despite its vast overcommitment from Cuba to Afghanistan. The Soviet Union cannot resist poking into fresh trouble when the opportunity arises.

That could mean more than mere friendly Soviet words. If Argentina needs military aid and cannot get it elsewhere, it will buy, beg or borrow from the Soviet Union — and Moscow will gratefully accommodate. The Russians have been working frantically but fruitlessly with Buenos Aires to arrange short-term credit, instead of cash-and-carry, for its massive grain purchases. A Soviet-Argentine arms deal could relieve Moscow of having to pay gold for grain.

The Soviet line has been developing slowly since Moscow's decision to abstain from the United Nations Security Council demand April 3 for "immediate withdrawal" of Argentina from the British Falklands. The Kremlin's support for Argentina's position mocks that resolution. The Soviets belittle Haig's mediation effort, claiming it is part of a U.S.-backed revival of long-gone British colonialism — enough to justify later arms sales to Buenos Aires. Both the U.S. and Britain, says the Kremlin propaganda line, are plotting to "plunder" undersea oil around the Falklands.

This propaganda line, aimed at damaging the U.S. in Latin America, could be more lethal than intelligence reports to Buenos Aires by Soviet vessels shadowing the British fleet. Still worse, if Haig's mediation fails and a shooting war breaks out, the Soviets could get a toe-hold in Argentina — Moscow's first ever in South America.

Preliminary work looking toward Soviet-Argentine military cooperation was laid in late 1979. At the height of Argentina's agreement over the U.S. military cutoff decreed by President Jimmy Carter's human rights policy, a senior Soviet general and three colonels visited the capital. In a report from Buenos Aires, Tass revealed Soviet aspirations by calling that visit "transcendent."

The perils for the U.S. in this Soviet intrusion beyond its sphere run deeper in the future. Senior presidential advisers fear that if Argentina is forced to retreat precipitously, an anti-U.S. government more nationalistic than the present military regime may take over.

With the Soviet Union then in the forefront as Argentina's new best friend and the U.S. cast in the villain's role, there arises the prospect of Soviet-Argentine friendship unimaginable before the Falkland crisis. As a bonus, the Soviets might acquire naval ports in the South Atlantic, valuable help for their growing fleet of submarines.

More than just enforcing the Security Council resolution's simple command for "an immediate withdrawal" from the islands, Haig is trying to keep Argentina as an irreplaceable hemispheric ally. In the long run, the U.S. has more at stake in the Falkland Islands than even the British.

Budget Compromise Needed

Washington is a town of rumors and with estimates of the federal budget deficit escalating it is not surprising there are rumors of compromise between the administration and Congress on the proposed budget.

A recent one was that a compromise budget proposal was being worked out to levy a 4 percent surtax on those who make more than $40,000 annually. The president was non-committal on that prospect.

The budget submitted by the president is already in shambles because of the unexpected severity of the recession and the over-large tax cuts instituted last year. There is virtually no support in Congress for it.

Thus, it is obvious that there is going to have to be some compromise on the part of the administration or the president runs the risk of losing control of the budget-making process entirely.

North Succotash Is OK

While South Succotash has been having a bad time of it, with high unemployment and suffering caused by the recession, the picture in North Succotash is entirely different.

This is what angered President Reagan recently, when he felt the TV networks were just dramatizing the worst aspects of his economic program. No one bothered to take a camera crew up the hill to North Succotash. If they had they would have found that Reaganomics IS working.

North Succotash, with its beautiful homes, manicured lawns, sumptuous country club and thriving shopping mall, is what the American dream is all about. And while the citizens there have to take their lumps with everybody else, they are not crying and blaming Reagan for all their problems.

The reason I know all this is that my cousin Walter lives in North Succotash, on Peach Tree Lane. This year, he sold his family's umbrella factory in South Succotash to United Discount Industries, a conglomerate out of Houston, who bought it, not to make umbrellas, but because Cousin Walter had a $5 million tax loss carryover. Once the deal was made, United closed down the factory, putting 500 people in South Succotash out of work. It was one of these unemployed men that the TV networks interviewed, which gave the country the impression everyone in Succotash County was hurting. Had they interviewed Cousin Walter they would have realized that things were not half as bad as the TV news shows make them out to be.

Over lunch, by the swimming pool, Cousin Walter said he had just met with his accountant, and he wouldn't have to pay any taxes this year. "That's wonderful," I said. "How did you manage to do it?"

"First I traded my stock in the umbrella factory so I didn't have to pay any capital gains. Then I took my salary from United and went into a real estate tax shelter in Columbus, Ohio, with several guys from the club. Since the first five years was all interest, we could deduct the profits from our oil well investments."

"You must have a good accountant."

"Everyone in North Succotash does. That's what makes it such a nice place to live."

Disparity In Pay

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — About half the teachers at the Governor Morehead School for the Blind here want to know why they aren't getting paid as much as their colleagues in North Carolina's public schools. Teachers at the state's School for the Deaf in Morganton, at Eastern School for the Deaf in Wilson and Central School for the Deaf in Greensboro are asking the same question.

Instructors at these schools come under the supervision of the Department of Human Resources (DHR) while local school boards supervise public school teachers. The legislature sets the salaries for both groups and pays them with state money, however, the DHR teachers must meet all the standards which the Department of Public Instruction sets for public school teachers.

Starting salaries are the same for both groups. A disparity arises after a few years, however, as public school teachers get automatic annual "step raises" and DHR's teachers must compete with each other for a limited number of state employee merit raises.

The difference in pay can be substantial, said Sally Moore, president of the professional teachers association at the Gov. Morehead School. One teacher at her school makes $300 less each month than she'd be making as a public school teacher. Of the 52 teachers at the school, she said 27 are paid less than public school teachers with similar training and experience, 16 are paid more and the rest make about the same.

For those getting less, the average is about $150 a month, according to Raleigh's Rep. Aaron Fussell, who has argued the teacher's cause in the General Assembly. These figures do not include local supplements which school boards provide with county money.

No one seems to know when the disparity began. But Fussell said it got worse after the new public school teacher pay scale went into effect in 1980. He introduced legislation to correct the disparity last year. The bill was moved through his House Committee on Blind and Deaf Institutions, and was incorporated in the budget as passed by the General Assembly. The bill

State Budget Officer John A. Williams Jr. has refused to distribute the raise, however, saying he doesn't have the statutory authority. The budget bill appropriated the money for the raise, he added, but it didn't change

Other Editors Say Merge Systems?

(Washington Daily News)

When we stop to consider that Robeson County today has five separate school systems with five superintendents, five offices, five sets of supervisors, and five of whatever else a system contains, we begin to understand the wisdom of combining school systems.

Recently, state officials took direct notice of the number of school systems in the state and urged them to engage in some combining.

Now we must realize all over North Carolina that so many school systems in our state, about 140 in all, are just too many. The fact is that some of them are unnecessary. We hear it said that when two systems are combined, no money is saved. We have heard that statement many times, but somehow we find it impossible to believe. Certainly, it takes very little knowledge to argue strongly that one unit combined can be operated more cheaply than two.

Now what we are getting at here is that one day the state of North Carolina is going to come in and combine school systems if local people do not make that decision. Either the legislature will order the N.C. Department of Public Instruction to do the job or some special commission might be created.

Once the job of combining starts, county lines might not be respected. There is always the possibility that in order to save money, one school superintendent might serve two or three counties. It is very conceivable that this might well be the case one day.

We do not believe in combining school systems haphazardly and without thorough consideration and thought. We talk about individual schools and we mix up combining systems with combining schools, and thus adults make decisions for youngsters which are not always in the very best interest of the pupils who are the pawns in the real story.

For more than 30 years we have heard the prevailing discussion on combining the Washington School system and the Beaufort County system. There are potent arguments on both sides. We see both sides plainly, we believe.

We also must realize that one day before too much longer the state of North Carolina might force us to quickly and without adequate groundwork a merger of the two systems. We hope it will not happen this way. But somehow we seem to see the handwriting on the wall.

And it could come about sooner than we realize.

Strength For Today

NATURE OF FAITH

People frequently entertain the mistaken notion that faith and belief are the same thing. Faith involves belief, but faith is something vastly beyond mere belief.

We read in the Epistle to the Hebrews (11:1) that "Faith is the giving of substance to things hoped for." That is, it is a God-given spiritual capacity within the human heart which makes it possible for us to work with God and with him perform miracles.

The patriarch Abraham

first manifested religious faith as we understand it. He believed God's promise and obeyed God's command, and thus took a step into that creative realm of religious faith which, when others follow, makes it possible for them to create along with God. For faith enables them to give substance to the things they had hoped for.

Faith thus gives substance to the heart's deepest desires and confirms the conviction of things not seen. — Elisha Douglass

When You Can't Pay The Bills

By LOUISE COOK

Associated Press Writer
Your bills are up and your income is down.

What do you do when you can't pay your debts? A growing number of families are asking themselves that question because of a recession that has pushed the unemployment rate to 9 percent and eliminated or reduced paychecks for millions of Americans.

Lenders and credit counselors say there are several things you can take to minimize the problem of unpaid bills.

Start by explaining the situation to your creditors. "At this particular time they're exceedingly understanding," said Robert Gibson, head of the National Foundation for Consumer Credit, a non-profit organization which operates more than 200 counseling centers across the country.

Gibson explained that changes in the law have made it easier for people to escape their debts by going bankrupt; lenders would rather accept reduced or delayed payments than take the risk of never getting their money at all.

Borrowing money to pay existing debts may or may not be a good idea. Consolidating what you owe into a single loan is usually helpful only if the interest rate on such a consolidation loan is lower than the interest you are paying on the money you already have borrowed.

A consolidation loan also may give you a false sense of security. "Most people can't handle them," said Gibson. Once they are relieved of the immediate pressure of overdue bills, they start spending again and wind up even deeper in debt.

James Kendall, a spokesman for the U.S. League of Savings Associations, said consumers should not ignore signs of trouble in the hope that the problem will solve itself.

"Take some steps early on to avert the panic," he said. "Take the initiative." Suppose you have lost your job. Or your working hours have been cut back. You know you're going to have trouble making next month's mortgage payment on time.

Explain the problem to the lender immediately; don't wait until the payment already is overdue. "Go to them before they come to you," said Kendall. "Lenders will look much more kindly on someone who tells them in advance (about a potential problem)."

Be completely frank. You will have to give the lender all the details of your financial situation — even if it makes you uncomfortable. Kendall conceded that "adds to the stress" you already may be under, but said total honesty is essential.

"Depending on who you are and what kind of payment record you have, you may get a fair amount of forbearance" from the lender, Kendall added.

The definition of "a fair amount" will vary from lender to lender, but you may, for example, be able to pay only the interest on your mortgage for several months or you may be able to cut your payments in half. You may even be allowed to skip a couple of months completely.

You will, of course, have to pay back the debt eventually. If you don't you could face the possibility of losing your house. State laws on foreclosure — and the amount of time that must elapse before you are forced to leave — vary widely and may affect a lender's willingness to let payments slide.

Kendall said, however, that "lenders will try to stay away from foreclosure." In today's market, they are reluctant to wind up as owners of houses they cannot sell. They also are human beings. "Lenders don't have horns and pitchforks," Kendall added.

If you are unable to handle your problems yourself, you may want to seek help from one of the counseling centers run by the National Foundation for Consumer Credit. The counselors can work out a budget for you and can deal with your creditors to arrange a debt-repayment schedule. The centers are listed in the telephone book under "consumer credit."

They Do Run, Run

More than 7,000 runners are expected to line up for today's 86th annual Boston Marathon. The first Boston Marathon in 1897 had only 15 starters and even as late as 1965 there were fewer than 400 in the field. But today, with an estimated 20 million U.S. joggers, everybody wants to try the marathon. The grueling 26 mile 385 yard race is the ultimate test of athletic endurance. But according to marathoner Dick Traum, "Anybody who takes the time to train can finish a marathon." Traum runs marathons on an artificial leg. Some other competitors are blind or in wheel chairs. For all would-be marathon champs, all it takes is a little practice — about 150 miles a week.

DO YOU KNOW — What man won the Boston Marathon in 1975, 1978, 1979, and 1980?

Somebody goofed in the legislature. Fussell said it was Rep. Billy Watkins of Oxford, powerful chairman of the House Expansion Budget Committee, Fussell said his bill included the needed State Personnel Act changes. When Watkins incorporated the bill into the budget, Fussell said, Watkins dropped that important provision.

Watkins shook his head when asked about Fussell. He admitted the special provision got dropped but said, "Aaron knew what passed. It was up to him to see that in the transition everything was included...I can't do anything about it until June."

Fussell said he expects the General Assembly to change the State Personnel Act during the June short session. As for the $109,000, he thinks that money ought to be paid to the teachers retroactively once the law is changed. In a tight budget year, however, he conceded that legislators might be scouring the budget for every penny they can find and this little nest egg might make a good target.

Elderly Rich Sleep Easier

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — It's not enough that they have bigger houses, fancier clothes and more exotic vacations — a new study shows that the elderly rich also sleep easier, a University of California researcher says.

Senior citizens with big bucks sleep better than those without because "they are healthier, wealthier, can take better care of themselves and can eat better," said Dr. Sonia Ancoli-Israel.

The study involved residents over age 65 of La Jolla, a San Diego suburb that's one of the more expensive U.S. communities. Ms. Ancoli-Israel headed a team of researchers assigned to the university's Sleep Disorders Clinic at the Veterans Administration Medical Center in La Jolla.

"The biggest surprise is that so few people are complaining about sleep," she said in an interview this week. "If you looked at past studies (elsewhere), many more complained."

The majority say they're "very satisfied" with their sleep and have little trouble falling off to dreamland, she said. Once asleep, they wake up on an average of only once or twice a night.

They use fewer sleeping pills than the national average — only 4 percent of the men and 18 percent of the women, the researcher said.

According to previous surveys, she said, as many as 45 percent of America's elderly have trouble sleeping. About one-third of all sleeping pills reportedly are sold to the elderly.

Among the elderly interviewed by the research team of University of California's San Diego campus, only 12.5 percent of the men and 14 percent of the women have "troubled sleep," Ms. Ancoli-Israel said.

The survey so far has involved 155 elderly people, reached since last August by telephone and then interviewed in their homes.

Although the study is scheduled to last four years, Ms. Ancoli-Israel said preliminary results show those interviewed are averaging 6 hours, 48 minutes of sleep and 44 minutes awake a night.

Expect Choices To Be Made At Sat. Meet

The East Carolina University chancellor selection committee, at a Saturday meeting here, is expected to choose two names to present to the university's board of trustees and to University of North Carolina President William C. Friday for consideration as the next chancellor of ECU.

The 15-member chancellor selection committee will hold an executive session at 10 a.m. at the Willis Building.

A meeting of the board of trustees has been scheduled for 2 p.m. Saturday, in the Van Landingham room of the Home Economics Building. It is expected that the trustees will go into executive session to receive a report from the selection committee.

ECU board chairman Ashley Futrell, who also serves as chairman of the selection committee, said the names of the two nominees will not be made public.

The tentative schedule calls for the names of the two nominees — following approval by the trustees — to be submitted to Friday by May 1. At Friday's discretion, a choice for chancellor would be announced before the UNC Board of Governors on May 14.

The four finalists for the chancellorship — acting ECU chancellor John Howell, acting dean of the ECU school of technology and chairman of the ECU geology department Charles Q. Brown, University of West Florida president James A. Robinson, and Elon College president Fred Young — have been interviewed on the ECU campus.

The list of potential candidates for the post originally contained 148 names. Following some off-campus interviews the list was again pared and on-campus interviews with the four finalists began in late March and were completed last week.

GOP Renews Remapping Suit

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina Republicans have renewed their federal suit against the state's legislative reapportionment plans, charging the General Assembly lacked constitutional authority to enact the plans in a special February session.

Attorneys for the state, meanwhile, waited for a ruling they hoped would come today from the U.S.

Justice Department, which is reviewing the state House and Senate plans under the 1965 Voting Rights Act.

John Wilson, spokesman for the department in Washington, said today it was "fairly definite" the department would rule on the plans late today.

Federal officials have spent nearly two months reviewing the House and Senate plans, which were enacted in February to replace earlier plans struck down on racial grounds by the Justice Department.

Attorneys renewed a lawsuit, filed by a group of Republicans protesting the legislative redistricting plans, in a supplemental complaint filed with the U.S. District Court in Raleigh. It had the effect of raising new arguments and renewing the suit to apply to the latest redistricting plans.

In its court papers, the GOP plaintiffs cited provisions of the state Constitution saying reapportionment should be handled by the General Assembly "at the first regular session convening after the return of every decennial census of population."

The extra session held in February "was not a regular session, and therefore was without constitutional authority to enact any law pertaining to redistricting," the Republican complaint said.

The complaint also said the legislature "has failed to make an honest and good faith effort" to redistrict, and has repeatedly created "grossly malapportioned districts" and "submerged black voting strength."

It also charged that the General Assembly formed single-member districts in some areas but not in others, and did so "for completely arbitrary and capricious reasons."

The GOP suit seeks to have the legislature abandon its traditional system of using some multi-member districts and turn to a system of all single-member districts.

Another suit pending against the redistricting plans has been filed by the NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund.

Jim Wallace, senior deputy state attorney general, said he was not surprised by the GOP suit's charges. "It's just like they used to tell us in law school — give the court as many pegs as you can," he said.

Wallace also said he believed there was an increasing likelihood that, if the Justice Department rejects the legislative redistricting plans again, legislative leaders would decide to fight the ruling by going into federal court in the District of Columbia.

"I would think they're ready to fight," he said.

The dispute over redistricting plans has forced the state to postpone its scheduled May 4 statewide primary until a settlement or court ruling is reached.

Supreme Court Agrees Decide On Mail Rates

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today agreed to resolve a legal conflict that could determine how quickly postage rates for first-class mail will rise.

The justices' eventual decision, not expected until sometime in 1983, will deal with two conflicting federal appeals court rulings over how changes in the nation's postage rates are made.

The high court's decision necessarily will favor first-class mail users or bulk mailers — depending on which lower court approach is adopted.

Richard Webber, a lawyer for the National Association of Greeting Card Publishers, said his clients believe a one-cent difference in the first-class postage rate "means fewer mailings worth millions of dollars."

He said bulk mailers, such as magazine publishers and shippers, also had "tremendous amounts" at stake in which rate-changing method is used.

Congress in 1970 relinquished the control it traditionally had exercised over setting postal rates as it established the U.S. Postal Service and the Postal Rate Commission as independent agencies.

In the last 12 years, mail rates have increased six times.

Under federal law, the Postal Service submits proposed rate changes to the commission, which studies the need for the new rates and makes its recommendations to the Postal Service's board of governors.

The board may approve, reject or modify those recommendations, which the commission may make only after considering nine factors specified by law.

One of those factors is "the requirement that each class of mail or type of mail service bear the direct and indirect postal costs attributable to that class or type plus that portion of all other costs of the Postal Service reasonably assignable to such class or type."

The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Washington consistently has interpreted that language to mean the cost of each type of mail service must be assessed "to the maximum extent possible."

That approach favors first-class mail users because greater discretion than would be allowable under that criterion in raising revenues to meet the Postal Service's $23 billion annual budget historically has meant adding a greater share of residual costs to first-class mail.

The Postal Service enjoys a government-sponsored monopoly on first-class mail, but must compete with private enterprise in other types of mail-delivery services.

The 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, however, ruled last Nov. 2 that Congress gave the Postal Service far greater discretion to apportion costs among the various types of service.

"We reject the D.C. Circuit's rulings ... requiring the attribution and assignment of costs based on cost-of-service principles to the maximum extent possible," the 2nd Circuit court said in a case sparked by the 18-cent first-class charge.

The Nov. 2 ruling thus would free the Postal Service from requiring all postal costs of providing service to a particular class to be allocated to that class.

The United Parcel Service, the National Association of Greeting Cards Publishers, the Postal Service, Dow Jones & Co. and Newsweek Inc. all urged the justices to resolve what lawyers for United Parcel called "a paralyzing conflict."

Government lawyers told the high court, "This conflict will subject future postal rate proceedings to great uncertainty ... the lawfulness of (future) rates will be determined by a race to the courthouse" by mail users seeking one rate-making method or the other.

Wrong Birth Sign Made Starry-Eyed Woman Blink

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Please tell me when and where astrology originated, and who keeps this nonsense going?

I am so tired of women asking me, "What's your sign?" the minute I meet them. I have even been dropped because of an otherwise seemingly intelligent woman's belief that because I am a Libra and she is a Scorpio we could never get along well together. We got along very well until she got so heavy into this horoscope thing.

I don't believe in a message from my horoscope any more than I do a message found in a Chinese fortune cookie. Sign me ...

UP IN ARIES ABOUT PISCES OF NONSENSE

DEAR UP: Astrology originated sometime before 2000 B.C. in Babylonia (or southeastern Iraq). At first the astrologers studied the heavenly bodies to make general predictions about the future. But between 600 B.C. and 200 B.C., they developed the system of casting individual horoscopes.

Interest in astrology declined in Europe with the coming of Christianity, as people sought guidance from religious leaders rather than from astrologers.

Newspapers in England began publishing horoscope columns during the 1930s. Such columns soon appeared in newspapers throughout the world and became very popular.

Astrology is based on the belief that the heavenly bodies form patterns that can reveal a person's character or future. Many people believe that astrology is simply superstition. And scientists regard it as utter and complete hogwash.

Who keeps this "nonsense" going? People who take it seriously — and people who don't, but find it sufficiently fascinating to follow faithfully.

It's fun and harmless, unless, of course, the believers and the non-believers come to blows over it.

DEAR ABBY: I would appreciate it if you would give me an answer to a question that has been on my mind for years.

On what occasion does a person use "Excuse me" and "Pardon me"? Is there a difference between the two?

If there is, I would very much like to know the correct usage or application.

ED N.

DEAR ED: Some years ago, "Excuse me" was used when a person asked permission to leave the room, and "Pardon me" was the correct form of apology for some minor breach of etiquette. "Pardon" sounds a tad more elegant than "excuse" because of the French "pardonnez-moi."

Today, the terms are interchangeable, unless, of course, you are referring to what Gerald Ford did for Richard Nixon.

DEAR ABBY: In response to "Save the Fish," the woman who felt sorry for the fish her husband catches: I once knew a woman who told me that she cooked live crabs by putting them in a kettle of cold water, then placing the kettle on the stove and turning on the heat.

Horrified by this, I asked her why on earth she didn't boil the water first and then drop the crabs into the boiling water. She said, "Oh, that would be too cruel!"

Winners Named In 'Flying Disc Classic'

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Warm sunny weather Sunday coupled with the absence of strong spring winds made an ideal situation for the semi-finals and finals of the 1982 Natural Light Flying Disc Classic held in Greenville Saturday and Sunday.

The East Carolina University Frisbee Disc Club hosted the meet which drew champion competitors from Maine, New York, Texas, Colorado, New Jersey, the Carolinas, Georgia, Virginia and other states, as well as a native of England and another from Denmark.

The event was held in the large grassy area just behind the Allied Health Building off Charles Street.

Top winners in the major categories of competition on Sunday were:

- Distance, men's division — Tony Tomasino of N.C. State University, Raleigh;
- Distance, women's division — Michele Marini, Rochester, N.Y.
- Self-caught flight, men's division — Dave Griffen, Falls Church, Va.
- Self-caught flight, women's division — Linda Burt, Raleigh, a student at ECU
- Free style, women's division — Sue Strait.

• Open free style pairs, Chris Ryan, New York, N.Y. and Donnie Rhodes, Austin, Tex.

• Open free style tri-op (three players), Ryan, Rhodes and Jason Salkey of London, England.

"We had a total of 63 entrants, which made for a good, competitive showing," said Peter Laubert, president of the ECU Club. "The attendance at the Saturday preliminaries was not all we had hoped for, about 600, but Sunday's turn-out was really good, something around 1,500."

Radar, a New Bern dog owned by Jim Baker and 1981 Mid-Atlantic States Canine Champion, was one of the attractions featured in this Sunday's disc classic. Another major attraction was the appearance of a well-known brothers champion team, Jens and Erwin Velasquez of New Jersey.

Laubert said that Ryan and Rhodes, as winners in both the free style pairs and free style tri-op, won a sizeable portion of the purse available for the event as well as adding to their already impressive string of championships.

"For a first time event, it turned out great," Laubert commented. "We hope to have this again in Greenville next April."

The disc classic concluded shortly after 5 p.m. Sunday. The Awards Ceremony was held at Freddie's Restaurant downtown.

Laubert said that accounting of concessions is being carried out. "We will know in a day or so how much will be donated to the March of Dimes campaign."

Appointment Made

U.S. Rep. Walter B. Jones announced that Vance Anderson Warren of Greenville has been found qualified and will be offered a full appointment to the U.S. Military Academy for the class entering this summer.

A Rose High School graduate, Warren was a member of the football team, Photography Club and Key Club.

Roller Coaster Slid Backward

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) — A four-car train on an amusement park roller coaster stalled and slid backward into another train, slightly injuring 14 people, officials said.

The train, carrying 24 people, was headed up a steep incline Sunday evening at Marriott's Great America park when it "stalled near the top and rolled backward" into the station and struck another train, which was not moving, said park spokeswoman Judy Hadfield. Of the 14 injured, ten were treated and Alyssa James, 12, of San Francisco, was taken by ambulance to a San Jose hospital, she said.

Sees Indicators Of Cooperation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Citing "very disquieting signs" of Argentine-Soviet cooperation in the Falkland Islands crisis, Britain's ambassador to the United States is warning that the Soviet Union eventually may establish a military presence in that area.

In an interview on Cable News Network's "Newsmaker Sunday" program, Ambassador Nicholas Henderson said such a development "would be a very serious matter."

The signs of Soviet cooperation with Argentina have come despite the South American nation's purported support for U.S. anti-communist policies in Central America, Henderson said.

The week after the takeover of the Falklands — which Henderson described as the "gateway to the South Atlantic" — Argentina concluded agreements with the Soviets involving future fisheries cooperation, use of Soviet ships to fish off the Falklands and nuclear cooperation, he said.

He also noted news reports suggesting that the Soviets are providing "extremely important help" to Argentina by supplying information about the movements of the British fleet heading toward the Falklands.

"Those are very disquieting facts," he said. "If by chance, the Argentines got away with what they are trying to get away with, the Soviets would say with some justice, I suppose, that they had helped Argentina achieve this position."

The Soviets would then "insist on some quid pro quo, which would be some presence in the South Atlantic," he said.

In another interview on the Cable News Network, Argentine Ambassador Estaban Takacs said his government was prepared to withdraw its forces in keeping with the U.N. resolution. But, he said, the withdrawal is contingent on British compliance with the first point of the resolution, which calls for a cessation of hostilities.

He said the "acts of aggression" include the dispatch of the British fleet to the area, the imposition of a British blockade around the Falklands and the application of economic sanctions by the European Economic Community against Argentina.

Henderson said he believes Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. prolonged his talks in Buenos Aires over the weekend because he "must have run into considerable intransigence" on the part of Argentine authorities.

He said Great Britain continues to insist that Argentina carry out the April 3 U.N. Security Council resolution calling on Argentina to withdraw its military forces from the islands.

Rape Attempt Investigated

Greenville Police are investigating an attempted rape that occurred about 10:10 p.m. Sunday near the intersection of Fifth and Maple Streets.

Chief Glenn Cannon said the 24-year-old victim of the attack told investigators a man, armed with a knife, forced her into some bushes in the 1500 block of East Fifth St., and attempted to rape her.

However, Cannon said the victim reported that she talked the man out of having sexual intercourse with her and told investigators he left the scene walking south along Maple Street after nicking her neck with the knife.

The attacker was described as a black male, about 17 years old, 5 feet 4 inches to 5 feet 5 inches tall, dressed in a two-color vinyl jacket, dark shirt and jeans.

Arrest Made After Chase

Jerrold Douglas Spellman, 32 of 808 Bancroft Ave., was arrested on larceny and breaking and entering charges following a 2:53 p.m. incident Friday in a parking lot at the rear of 1205 South Evans St.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Spellman allegedly entered a car and took a pocketbook belonging to Elaine Ruth Harrington of 113 Alexander Circle from the vehicle.

Two witnesses gave chase and caught Spellman at the intersection of Charles Street and Charles Boulevard and held him for police.

Far Off Course

WEYMOUTH, England (AP) — Bird watchers are flocking to the Isle of Portland peninsula on the southwest coast of England to see a little brown bird which turned up in England for the first time after apparently losing its way along the U.S. East Coast.

A picture of the Savannah Sparrow appeared today in the Daily Express. Although sparrows are common in England, this variety has never been recorded here before.

"It is more than likely that it was blown off course by westerly winds while migrating along the U.S. East Coast and then hitched a lift on a ship. In the autumn it will try to migrate, but it will be confused, and that will probably be its end," said Chris Harvard of the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds.

PLAN A NEW NAME
SALISBURY, Zimbabwe (AP) — The Zimbabwe government has decided to rename its capital from Salisbury to Harare, after a 19th century tribal chief, the Information Ministry announced.

"We are very flexible on the long-term, provided it takes into account the peoples of the islands, who hitherto have been adamant in wanting to stay as they are and not be incorporated into the Argentine, a non-democratic system, against their will," Henderson said.

Auto Union And AMC Reach Concession Contract Accord

MILWAUKEE (AP) — United Auto Workers union members working for American Motors Corp. have until May 3 to ratify a new contract granting the No. 5 automaker $150 million in payroll concessions.

Under the tentative three-year AMC pact, reached Sunday, workers would forgo pay raises and the company would invest the savings in new product development.

The pact follows earlier concession contracts the union negotiated with Ford Motor Co. and General Motors Corp., the country's two largest automakers.

Raymond Majerus, UAW secretary-treasurer, said the three-year deal guarantees workers their donations would be refunded by 1985 with interest.

Should AMC's improvement program not produce a profit level by that time, workers would be repaid through a formula reflecting a percentage of each car's sale price, Majerus said.

Richard T. MacCracken, AMC vice president of industrial relations, said the "unique employee investment plan" can provide the company with $150 million toward development of a new Jeep line and a Renault-designed X-42 model.

Automakers said last week that 249,636 workers were on indefinite layoff as the industry continues to slump from foreign competition, inflation and high interest rates.

The AMC agreement involves about 14,000 workers at plants in Milwaukee, Kenosha and Toledo, Ohio.

Talks stalled two weeks ago over a union demand that AMC demonstrate interest in austerity budgeting by reducing the number of higher-paid supervisors. AMC said it needed to keep the supervisors on the payroll to be able to expand production quickly when the auto market recovered from its sales slump.

The agreement, MacCracken said, "includes assurances of equality of sacrifice by other company employees," whom a UAW statement identified as "salaried employees and executives."

Majerus said workers would be investing $8,000 to $9,000 each by postponing cost-of-living increases for six quarters, or 18 months, retroactive to last month. The pact also suspends a 3 percent increase which UAW called an "annual improvement factor," and suspends 21 to 28 days' pay, depending on the local.

The money would collect 10 percent interest compounded annually, with wages and benefits "restored to the paychecks well before the agreement expires," Majerus said.

The union said expiration dates are Jan. 31, 1985, for Toledo Local 12, and Sept. 16, 1985, for Kenosha Local 72 and Milwaukee Local 75.

The agreement contains some new benefits for workers, including company-provided legal counsel, which the union also negotiated from Chrysler, ranked No. 3 among U.S. automakers. Volkswagen of America, ranked No. 4, is the only U.S. automaker with no union concessions.

A UAW statement said other provisions include a contract re-opener clause in case there is a substantial improvement in sales, extended medical insurance protection for laid-off workers, and a commitment by AMC to avoid subcontracting to foreign factories.

Under a 30-month agreement with GM effective last week, about 470,000 UAW members are deferring cost-of-living increases and forgoing wage increases and some paid holidays, providing GM with an estimated $2.5 billion.

Under a 31-month agreement with Ford, workers are freezing wages, forgoing eight paid holidays and deferring cost-of-living increases for nine months, saving Ford as estimated $1 billion.

UAW and Chrysler, whose previous concession pact expires in September, are to resume talks in July.

ONE THING'S FOR SURE. WITH AN IRA FROM BB&T, YOU'LL AGE WELL.

Your age is going to increase with time, of course. There's no getting around that. But, with an IRA, so is your fortune.

You could retire a millionaire.

If you start your IRA (Individual Retirement Account) when you're in your early thirties and interest rates stay about the same as they are now, a $2,000-a-year investment will make you a millionaire by the time you retire! And even if you can't start that early, you can still build a whopping retirement fund.

You'll pay lower income taxes.

As long as you're a wage earner, whether or not you have a retirement plan where you work, you're eligible for BB&T's IRA. And you can open your account right now.

You're allowed to sock away up to $2,000 each year ($2,250 if you're married and only one of you is a wage earner, $4,000 if both of you are). And whatever your annual investment is, you can deduct every penny of it from that year's gross income. Which means real tax savings.

Your interest is tax-deferred.

The interest you earn, which is tied to money market rates, is compounded daily at BB&T, not monthly or annually as may be the case at some banks and savings and loans. This can add up to a difference of thousands and thousands of dollars by the time you reach retirement age.

And all your interest is tax-deferred. You pay no tax on it until you begin withdrawing funds at retirement, when you'll almost certainly be in a lower tax bracket and, therefore, required to pay less.

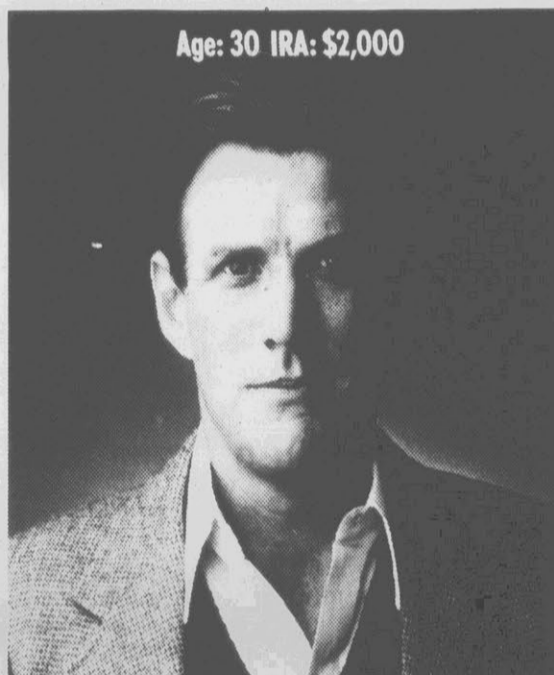

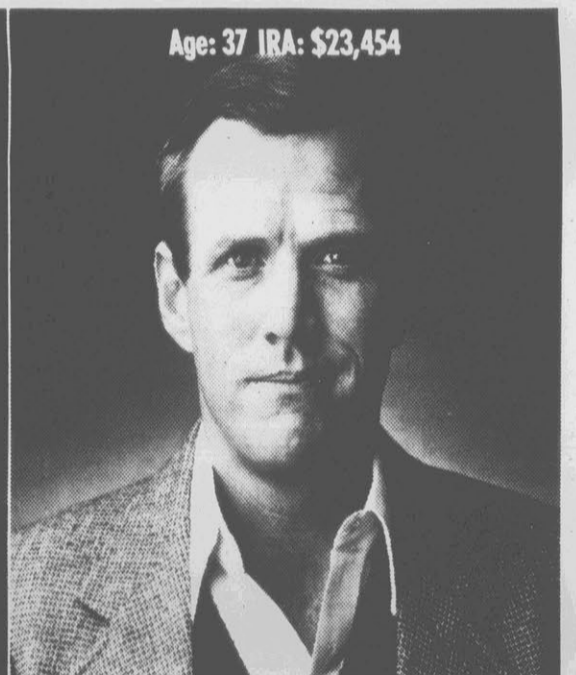

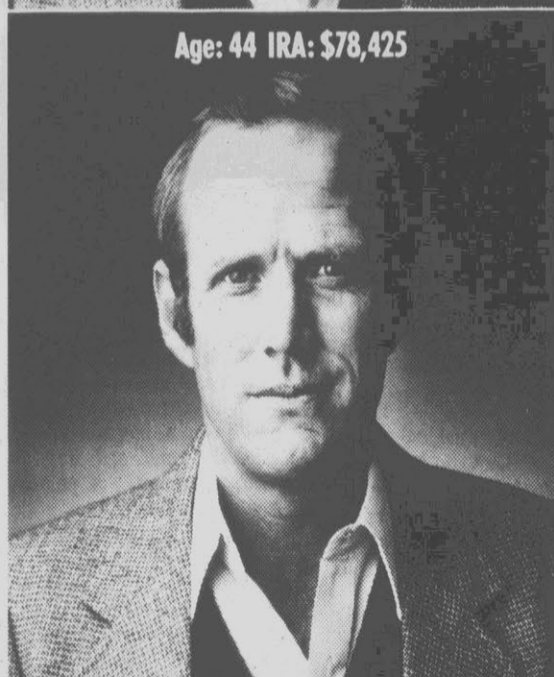

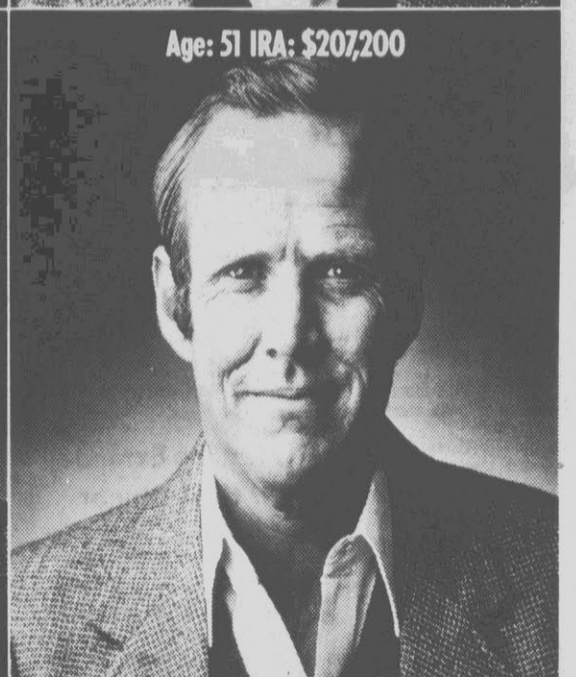

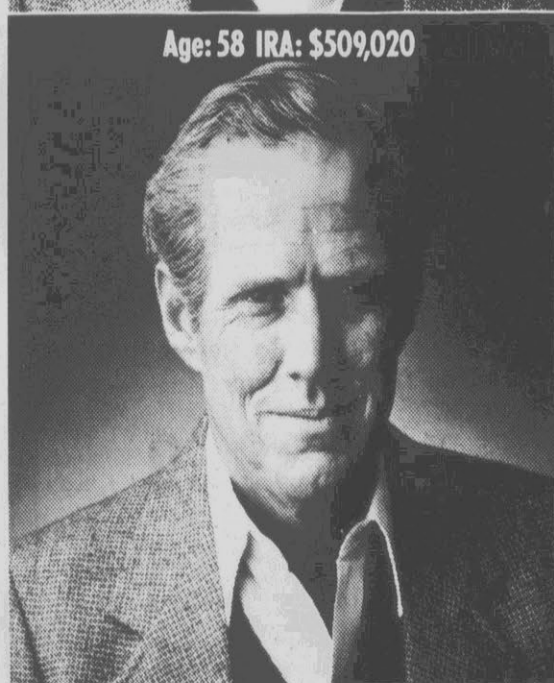

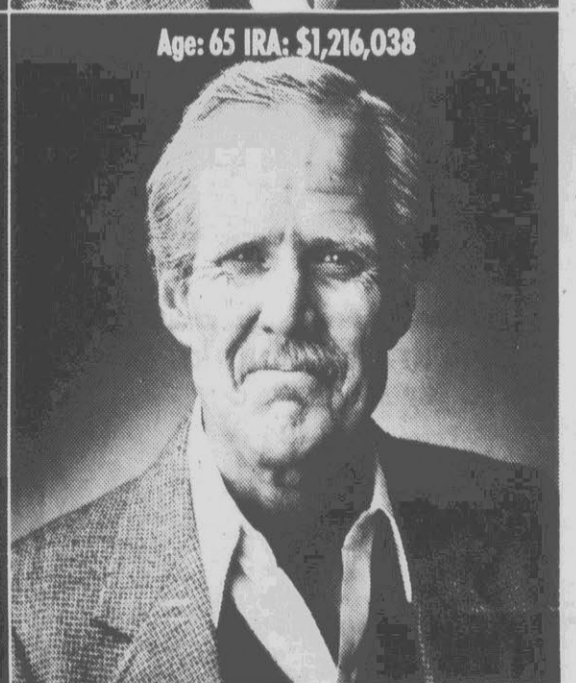

Your money piles up until you're 59½.

If you withdraw any money from your IRA before you reach the age of 59½, Federal regulations require you to pay a 10% IRS penalty on that money and perhaps a substantial interest penalty as well.

But once you hit 59½, nothing can stop you. You may take your money in a lump sum, receive it in monthly, quarterly or annual installments, or even wait until you're 70½—but no later—to begin withdrawing funds.

Call or visit any BB&T office today and ask us about this extraordinary opportunity to save for your future. Then open your IRA and get started along the road to prosperity.

When you're ready to retire, you won't look old. You'll look like a million bucks.

Age: 30 IRA: $2,000 	Age: 37 IRA: $23,454
Age: 44 IRA: $78,425 	Age: 51 IRA: $207,200
Age: 58 IRA: $509,020 	Age: 65 IRA: $1,216,038

Nobody works harder for your money.

Projected growth shown is based on 12% interest compounded daily on an annual contribution of $2,000 deposited on the first day of each year for 35 years.

Home Of Iran Dissident Ransacked By 'Guards'

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iranian Revolutionary Guards ransacked the home of a leading dissident Moslem clergyman over the weekend, disarmed his bodyguards and seized anti-government tape recordings, Tehran newspapers reported.

The whereabouts of Ayatollah Kazem Shariatmadari were unknown after the raid on his residence in the holy city of Qom. An Iranian who declined to be identified for security reasons reported by telephone that he saw the old man brought out of his quarters as a crowd screamed insults at him.

Shariatmadari, white-bearded and believed to be in his 80's, is the religious leader of 13 million Turkish-speaking Iranians in the northwestern part of the country. He has long dissented from the views of Iran's supreme leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini on the Islamic republic, arguing clergymen should have a less active role in government.

The government-controlled Tehran newspaper Keyhan reported houses belonging to Shariatmadari and his son-in-law were seized along with the ayatollah's personal library and theological seminary "by the people of Qom and the revolutionary guards on Friday," the Moslem sabbath.

The report said Shariatmadari's guards were overpowered and that printing equipment, communications

An Argentine On Royal Payroll

LONDON (AP) — With Britain and Argentina poised on the brink of war, London newspapers reported Prince Charles has hired an Argentine to care for his polo ponies at the Windsor Castle stables.

The news made headlines in London on Sunday, although a Buckingham Palace spokesman said the prince hired Argentine-born Raoul Correa before Argentine forces invaded the Falkland Islands, a British colony in the South Atlantic, on April 2.

"Mr. Correa was hired long before the Falklands issue came to a head. He has lived in this country for 13 years, he is married to an Englishwoman and has a British passport," a palace spokesman said.

Correa, 38, is responsible for the prince's eight ponies. His wife, Linda, was quoted by The Sun newspaper as saying, "He is very happy in his new job."

Child Hit By Vehicle

A seven-year-old Pactolus Elementary School student was hit by a car while crossing the road to meet her school bus on Industrial Drive north of Greenville this morning.

Investigating Highway Patrol Officer R.G. Pierce said Natera Gray, daughter of Belinda A. Perkins of Rt. 11, Greenville, was in good condition in Pitt County Memorial Hospital following the 7:10 a.m. accident. The child ran into the path of a car driven by James Alton Mitchell, 29, of 1130 Oakgrove Avenue, after she saw her school bus approaching.

Trooper Pierce quoted witnesses, including Natera's mother, as saying Mitchell braked and greatly slowed his car before it struck the child. She was unconscious at first, but regained consciousness before being transported from the scene by the Greenville Rescue Squad. Doctors in the Emergency Department of the hospital said she was responding to questions, he added.

Pierce called the accident unavoidable and said the driver will not be charged.

Surviving him are his wife, Mrs. Sue Ewing Clement of the home; three sons, Dr. J.E. Clement of Greenville, A.L. Clement of Raleigh and Charles E. Colorado River Bodies Found LEES FERRY, Ariz. (AP) — Three bodies recovered from the Colorado River have been identified as those of members of a film crew who were in a helicopter that crashed after the team filmed a love scene.

A fourth crew member, Lori Lee Gere of Tarzana, Calif., was hospitalized in Page, Ariz., in stable condition following Saturday's crash after a scene from "American Eagle," a two-hour CBS television adventure film.

The helicopter was returning from filming a scene atop a narrow canyon when it hit a cable stretched across the river and crashed. All four aboard were employees of EMI Productions Inc.

Big Spy Case

ÁUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — A 50-year-old Hungarian who was arrested on a downtown street faces espionage charges in what a federal prosecutor says may be one of the biggest spy cases in U.S. history.

Otto Attila Gilbert was arrested by FBI agents Saturday afternoon and taken to the Richmond County Jail, officials said.

Claims Killing Due Complaint Social Stress Risks Disease

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. — No matter how healthy the diet, constant social stress still can lead to a higher risk of heart disease and related problems, a new study indicates.

Dr. Jay R. Kaplan, an assistant professor of comparative medicine at Bowman Gray School of Medicine, says a research team found monkeys fed a low-fat, low-cholesterol diet still had high incidences of heart disease and hardening of the arteries if they were in groups whose social hierarchy changed frequently.

In Washington, Justice Department officials who asked not to be identified said of Gilbert, "We didn't know who he was until we got him on Saturday."

The officials said Gilbert was born in Budapest, Hungary, in 1932 and was working for the Hungarian intelligence service, targeting people in the U.S. military.

He is a resident of Forest Hills, N.Y. Department officials said he would be charged with conspiracy to commit espionage and that the government would seek to have no bond granted or a high bond, in the neighborhood of $10 million.

Agents will go before U.S. Magistrate John W. Dunsmore Jr. to present affidavits listing items found in Gilbert's possession at the Augusta Hilton hotel, said Pierce, who described the items as "unbelievable." He refused to elaborate.

A news conference was to be held on the steps of Augusta's federal courthouse after today's hearing, Smith said, adding that information on the case will be released simultaneously from FBI headquarters in Washington, D.C.

The details are of "national significance," Smith said.

Braves Break NL Mark With 11th Straight Victory

By The Associated Press

Eleven games don't make a season. The Atlanta Braves know that. And so, it seems, do the Houston Astros.

"We knew they were a good club, not a pushover," Houston's wily pitcher, Joe Niekro, said after the Braves beat the Astros 6-5 to match the year-old Oakland record for the most victories at the start of a baseball season. "The season is not made on 11 games," Niekro said. "I still think they'll have to play like hell to beat us."

They played like...well, like winners on Sunday, staying cool, rallying from an early deficit, playing the kind of ball their new manager, Joe Torre, has been advocating.

"He's just helped us work hard," said Dale Murphy. "He let us know if we worked hard, good things would happen. He's brought some different feelings, maybe a different outlook."

"He's given us a sense of awareness, things like keeping in the ballgame, like not relaxing with runners on, not holding runners on, not executing — mistakes we've made in the past," added fellow outfielder Claudell Washington. "He's made us aware of the things we have to do to win. He's brought a lot of consistency to go with the talent we already had."

Against Houston, Biff Poceroba, batting for winning reliever Al Hrabosky, drilled a two-run double in the eighth inning to break a 4-4 tie.

"That was one of the highlights of my career," said Poceroba. "The other highlight would be making the World Series this year."

"The attitude here is outstanding," he went on. "It's never been like this. It's a completely different atmosphere...It's contagious, the atmosphere and the togetherness we have on this club. It hasn't been here in the past. That's the key ingredient in this ballclub right now."

Even Torre saw the 11th consecutive victory — which snapped the NL record shared by Brooklyn (1955) and Pittsburgh (1962) — as something really special.

"This is better than anything else. There is nothing better than team effort. I won the MVP and the batting title and I would have given both of them up for a World Series."

Houston scored four runs in the second inning, two on Jose Cruz' single, to take a 4-1 lead. But in the sixth, Atlanta tied it with three runs, two on Murphy's triple, the third on Chris Chambliss' double.

With one out in the eighth, Chambliss doubled again. After an intentional walk to Bruce Benedict and a forceout grounder by Rafael Ramirez, Poceroba doubled to left-center field. Houston's final run came on Ray Knight's sacrifice fly in the bottom of the ninth.

Cardinals 6, Phillies 5

Almost lost in the tumult of the Braves' feat is the Cardinals' performance. They've won eight in a row. David Green made Philadelphia their victim again with a pair of key singles.

First he tied the game in the bottom of the ninth, then he handed the Phillies their eighth loss in 10 games by singling home Keith Hernandez in the 11th inning.

"I've got a new stance. I'm a little lower in my crouch. I can see the ball better," said Green, batting 400. "Last year (when he hit .147 in his first trip to the majors) I was too excited. It was my first year in the big leagues. I found out I was human."

Expos 7, Mets 6

Home runs by Gary Carter and Andre Dawson helped Montreal build a 6-0 lead in two innings, then Tim Wallach singled home the game-winner in the sixth as the Expos withstood a pair of two-run homers by Dave Kingman and one by George Foster.

"Even though Montreal got six runs, I figured we'd come back," said Mets Manager George Bamberger. "That seventh run killed us."

Cubs 5, Pirates 2

Leon Durham's three-run homer highlighted Chicago's four-run third inning that gave Ferguson Jenkins and the Cubs their victory over Pittsburgh.

Bill Buckner and Larry Bowa had RBI singles for the Pirates' only run. Jenkins went five innings, then Randy Martz took over and cut down all 12 batters he faced.

Padres 9, Dodgers 3

San Diego hadn't taken a four-game series from Los Angeles, its more affluent northern neighbors, since 1969. But a two-run double by Terry Kennedy and a two-run triple by Broderick Perkins, both in a seven-run eighth inning, powered the Padres to victory in the finale of the weekend series and stretched their winning streak to five games.

In the third inning, Dodgers pitcher Bob Welch sailed a pitch behind leadoff batter Juan Bonilla. He took several steps toward the mound and several players charged from the dugouts, but no punches were thrown.

Giants 4, Reds 2

Reggie Smith, a villain in San Francisco last season when as a member of the Dodgers he charged into the stands after a fan, hit his first homer as a member of the Giants. The two-run drive in the fourth inning wrecked pitcher Tom Seaver's delayed debut for the Reds.

Seaver, bothered by a pulled muscle and a bout with the flu during the spring (he hadn't pitched since a March 26 exhibition), doubled and scored in the third inning. But in the fourth he walked Jack Clark and Smith hit a 3-1 pitch into the right field seats, the 297th homer of his major league career.

White Sox Rally To Post Eighth Consecutive Win

By The Associated Press

It's been the kind of month for the Chicago White Sox that even when they botch up a play it somehow manages to work in their favor.

Take for instance Sunday's game with the Baltimore Orioles, when the White Sox had runners on first and second with nobody out in the seventh inning and the score tied 4-4.

That situation would normally dictate a bunt to sacrifice the runners along. But Chicago Manager Tony LaRussa went against classic baseball strategy and ordered Tony Bernazard to hit-and-run.

The play almost backfired, too, when Bernazard swung and missed. But Baltimore catcher Rick Dempsey threw the ball into left field attempting to nail Vance Law, who was speeding into third.

Law kept going around third base and Ron LeFlore also came home, giving the rampaging White Sox their eighth straight victory. They haven't lost yet.

"If Dempsey makes the throw," Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver sighed, "we get out of the inning."

Instead, the Orioles had their sixth straight defeat.

"The White Sox are playing good ball," said Weaver. "They don't bunt, they keep getting hits. That's my kind of baseball."

LaRussa refused to expound on his unusual seventh-inning strategy, saying: "It's a play we hope to use again. It would be dumb of me to say what I saw on defense."

But LeFlore explained: "We had the hit-and-run on and even if Dempsey makes the throw to third, Law would have been safe. When I saw the ball go into left field and (John) Lowenstein was deep, I knew I also could score and kept running. It would have taken two good throws to get me."

"I wasn't surprised at the hit-and-run," said Bernazard. "It was a good call by Tony. They had everybody charging. I tried to make contact but it was a screwball outside and I missed it."

Mariners 4, A's 3

Richie Zisk tied the game with a leadoff home run in the ninth inning and Todd Cruz delivered the game-winner with a single to lead Seattle over Oakland.

After Zisk's homer off Tom Underwood, 0-1, Jim Maler singled and took second on an error on the play by Joe Rudi in right field. Underwood then walked Al Cowens intentionally and Joe Simpson sacrificed the runners along. Underwood walked Bud Bulling to load the bases and set the stage for Cruz's infield single that brought home Maler with the winning run.

Dan Meyer had hit a three-run homer in the sixth inning to help the A's take a 3-1 lead.

Wells, Fitzgerald Homer For ECU Pirates Outslug UNCC

By WOODY PEELE

Robert Wells slammed a solo homer in the sixth inning to start a three-run rally that led to an eventual 14-7 baseball victory as East Carolina University downed UNC Charlotte Sunday afternoon.

The three-hour-plus slugfest saw the Pirates bang out 16 hits, including the homer by Wells, a three-run shot by Fran Fitzgerald, a triple by Todd Evans, and doubles by Wells, Evans, Todd Hendley and David Wells.

Charlotte collected only one less hit — 13, including a two-run homer by Ronnie Rideout, and doubles by James Dickerson and Tony Koger.

East Carolina trailed early, 3-0 and 5-1 before rallying to finally take the lead at 7-6, never to lose it again.

Kirk Parsons got the win, his fourth of the year, in relief of starter Brian Peterson, who came out after two and a third innings.

"We didn't play well, but we hustled and came back and won it," Coach Hal Baird said. "Kirk did a good job in relief, holding them off for us to come back on them. He did all we asked of him."

Baird praised the offensive play of John Hallow, who had three hits and scored four runs. David Wells and Fitzgerald also contributed three hits each, while Evans and Robert Wells each had two. All but leadoff hitter Mike Sorrell had at least one hit for the Pirates.

"I hope that we'll get a little more solid from here on in," Baird said. "We're going to need it to get where we want to be."

That, unstated, is into the ECAC-South playoffs, and from thence, into the NCAA playoffs.

bringing in Dickerson with the second run.

The Pirates again rallied, getting three in the bottom of the third to pull within 5-4. David Wells walked and Hallow singled to center. Both scored on Evans' double, and a two-out single by Jack Curlings brought in Evans.

The Pirates tied it up for the first time in the fourth. With two away, David Wells hit a ground-ruled double to center, scoring when Hallow singled to center.

Once more, Charlotte took the lead with a run in the top of the fifth. With two away, (Please turn to page 10)

ECU Nine Wins...

(Continued from page 9) Dickerson doubled and scored when Strickland singled. Finally, in the sixth, the Pirates pushed ahead for good. Robert Wells started things with his second homer of the year, over the fence in right, tying it again. With one down, David Wells singled and scored on Evans' triple to center. After Hendley walked, Fitzgerald reached on an infield hit, scoring Evans for an 8-6 lead.

Robert Wells doubled after his foul pop had been dropped by the 49er catcher Sorrell reached on an error and David Wells singled in the first run. Hallow walked, and was cut down at second on Evans' fielder's choice that scored Sorrell. A passed ball scored David Wells, and Hendley walked. That set things up for Fitzgerald to hit a three-run homer to left center, rounding out the scoring as the Pirates took a 14-6 lead.

White Sox...

(Continued from page 9) Lynn, Reggie Jackson and I will all take turns. Indians 8, Royals 2. Toby Harrah smashed three hits, including his fourth home run, and Alan Bannister keyed a four-run first inning with a two-run double as Cleveland defeated Kansas City. John Denny scattered five hits and struck out six in seven innings to earn the victory.

The Pirates added six more runs in the seventh inning. Charlotte struggled back with one more run in the ninth. Kevin Ayers led off with an infield hit, and Pittman reached on an error. With one away, Strickland walked but was put out at second when Randy Duncan grounded to short. Ayers scored on the play, and that did it as a pop-up ended the game. Strickland led the Charlotte hitting with three, while Ayers, Dickerson and Rideout each had two.

The win boosted the Pirates to 25-10 on the season, while Charlotte falls to 15-17-1. East Carolina plays at UNC-Wilmington tonight before taking a couple of days off for a much-needed rest. They then return to action on Thursday, hosting the number two team in NCAA Division III, N.C. Wesleyan, coached by former ECU aide Tony Guzzo.

Rangers 9, Brewers 6. Doug Flynn singled home the tie-breaking run and George Wright belted a three-run homer in a four-run Texas eighth inning as the Rangers defeated Milwaukee for the Brewers' fifth consecutive defeat.

Tigers 5, Yankees 2. Alan Trammell drove in two runs and Dan Petry and Elias Sosa combined on a six-hit effort as Detroit beat New York.

Trammell's RBI single highlighted a two-run second off Dave Righetti and Trammell later doubled home the final Tiger run in the eighth. Red Sox 4, Blue Jays 3. Glenn Hoffman tripled with none out in the ninth and scored on a wild pitch to lead Boston over Toronto. Hoffman led off the ninth with a high pop which Toronto right fielder Jessie Barfield was unable to grab at the foul pole. That came against reliever Roy Lee Jackson.

Houston, Seattle In Mini-Series

By The Associated Press
Houston Coach Del Harris is shedding no tears because his team blew a chance for the home-court advantage in the first round of the National Basketball Association playoffs.

The Rockets needed a victory over Kansas City on the final day of the season Sunday to clinch fourth place in the Western Conference, but the Kings, who won only 30 of 82 games this season, beat Houston 106-104.

So, instead of facing Denver at home for two games in the best-of-3 mini-series, the Rockets now must meet Seattle, with only one game in Houston. The series starts Wednesday in Seattle. "To tell you the truth, we're glad we're not playing Denver," said Harris. "They've been a real problem. And we're the winner of our mini-series has to play San Antonio. Los Angeles is playing so well that it's good to hold them off as long as possible."

The Lakers will meet the winner of the Phoenix-Denver Western Conference mini-series, which starts Tuesday, in the second round. In the Eastern playoffs, Washington is at New Jersey starting Tuesday and Atlanta is at Philadelphia beginning Wednesday. Harris said he didn't mind having to meet the SuperSonics, although Seattle's final record of 52-30 was six games better than Houston's. "It doesn't matter who you play in the playoffs," said Harris. "The important thing is making it, and how you respond to whomever and wherever you play. The advantage of playing Seattle is we've beaten them in the last two outings, and once we've past them, we get another shot at San Antonio."

Eddie Johnson scored 21 points and Larry Drew added 18 to lead Kansas City over Houston. Lakers 120, Suns 115. Phoenix also blew a chance for a first-round home-court advantage by losing to Los Angeles at home. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar led all scorers with 34 points for the Lakers, while Jamaal Wilkes added 31. The Suns, who had won their previous four games, led 113-100 with 2:53 to go, but Los Angeles scored the next five points, three of them on Wilkes' three-point play with 1:57 left.

Dennis Johnson led Phoenix with 22 points. Blazers 99, Hawks 96. Washington beat Atlanta for fifth place in the Eastern Conference as Rick Mahorn scored five of his 14 points in the final 1:46 to hold off a late Hawks' rally. Atlanta trailed by as many as 20 points in the second half and still was behind 90-75 before Tom McMillen and Dan Roundfield led a 15-2 burst that cut the deficit to 92-90. But Mahorn's five straight points for the Bullets gave them a 97-92 lead with 36 seconds to go.

Don Collins, Frank Johnson and Greg Ballard scored 18 points apiece for Washington. Roundfield led Atlanta with 24. Pistons 116, Cavaliers 113. Isaiah Thomas scored 29 points and John Long added 28 as Detroit handed Cleveland its 19th straight loss, one short of the NBA record of 20 set by Philadelphia in 1972-73. A three-point goal by Ron Brewer, who led all scorers with 32 points for Cleveland, made it 114-113 with 20 seconds left in overtime, but Terry

Tyler hit two free throws with 11 seconds left for the Pistons. Jazz 128, Spurs 120. Rickey Green scored 19 of his career-high 35 points in the fourth quarter to lead Utah past San Antonio, which got a bye in the first round of the playoffs by clinching the Midwest Division Friday night. George Gervin, who won his fourth NBA scoring title in five years, led the Spurs with 16 points. Only Wilt Chamberlain, with seven, won more scoring championships. Celtics 119, Knicks 99. Boston coasted to its 63rd victory, most in the league, as Robert Parish scored 31 points against New York. It was the Celtics' second-best season ever, topped only by the 68-14 mark by the 1972-73 team. Blazers 119, Sonics 104. Jim Paxson scored 25 points and Mychal Thompson and Calvin Natt added 21 apiece to lead Portland over Seattle. 76ers 110, Bucks 86. Julius Erving scored 18 points as Philadelphia won its 58th game, second-best in the NBA. Milwaukee, which got a bye in the first round by winning the Central Division despite winning just one of its last five games, was led by Alton Lister with 17 points. Bulls 112, Pacers 104. Artis Gilmore and Larry Kenon scored 20 points apiece as Chicago ended the season with a four-game winning streak. The Bulls, 34-48 this season after making the playoffs a year ago, survived an 18-0 spurt by Indiana that turned a 63-47 deficit into a 65-63 lead.

Isles, Nordiques, Canucks Capture OT Playoff Wins

By The Associated Press
For the Vancouver Canucks, New York Islanders and Quebec Nordiques, overtime was the right time. Those three teams scored Stanley Cup overtime victories Sunday night in vastly different manners. The Canucks edged the Kings 4-3 in Los Angeles as defenseman Colin Campbell - who didn't score a goal all season - connected twice, including the game-winner 1:23 into the extra session.

This has been a goalkeepers' series, and I don't know if they can both keep it up. Stan Smyl had tied the game with 5:48 left. Thomas Gradin was Vancouver's other scorer, while Marcel Dionne, J.P. Kelly and Dave Taylor collected goals for LA. Islanders 4, Rangers 3. The two-time defending champions won their sixth overtime game in the last seven as Trotter banked home the rebound of Ken Morrow's shot off Rangers goalie Ed Mio. Bob Bourne had two goals for the Isles and Mike Bossy one, while the Ranger scorers were Mike Allison, Robbie Ftorek and Reijo Ruotsalainen. "I wasn't shooting to score and I didn't see it go in," said Trotter, who got the first overtime goal of his career. "I found a little hole, but I didn't shoot for it. I whipped it in front, figuring there might be a rebound or someone else would get a shot."

The Islanders, who have made a habit of winning in overtime - they're 17-5 overall in OT games - let one of their big guns, Bryan Trottier, do it. Trottier's backhand ended matters three minutes into OT at Madison Square Garden. At Quebec, Wilf Paiement's neat move and blistering drive 11:44 into OT lifted gave the Nordiques new life in their series with the Bruins. All of those series stand at 2-1, with the Canucks, Islanders and Bruins in front. In the other best-of-seven National Hockey League quarterfinal, Chicago leads St. Louis 2-1 after a 6-5 home triumph by the Black Hawks. Action resumes tonight in all four matchups.

"I always hope we have an edge in overtime because of our experience," said Islanders Coach Al Arbour. "We always try to go after the other team in overtime. We don't hang back, because it's too easy to get beat when the puck is in your end. We have the kind of team that puts the pressure on opponents in overtime." Nordiques 3, Bruins 2. Mike O'Connell and Rick Middleton scored for Boston, Anton Stastny and Real Cloutier for Quebec, and, after a tight, scoreless third period, the teams went into OT. Both clubs went all out on the attack before Paiement ended it. "Anton got the puck to me across the ice, and when I got to the blueline, I faked (Bruins defenseman Ray) Bourque," Paiement said. "I guess I caught him a little flat-footed. I didn't really see much space, but when I saw (Boston goaltender Mike) Moffat come toward me, I fired low to the far side."

Canucks 4, Kings 3. "What a unlikely guy to get two goals," said Roger Nielson, the Canucks' assistant coach who has been serving as bench boss for the past 11 games. "He doesn't even score in practice." Campbell wasn't apologizing, however, for his 50-foot blast past Kings' goalie Mario Lessard. It was the second 50-footer he'd connected on in the game. It was the Celtics' second-best season ever, topped only by the 68-14 mark by the 1972-73 team. Blazers 119, Sonics 104. Jim Paxson scored

Wadkins 'Clear' T Of C Winner, Streck 'Clear' Two-Time Loser

RANCHO LA COSTA, Calif. (AP) — Lanny Wadkins was a clear winner of the MONY-Tournament of Champions. Ron Streck was a clear loser. In fact, Streck was a two-time loser.

He lost the golf tournament to Wadkins when he 3-putted the 18th hole Sunday, a bogey that knocked him out of a share of the lead. And he lost sole possession of second place, and more than $14,000, about a half-hour later when he was assessed a 2-shot penalty for moving a branch with his hand while preparing to play his second shot from beneath a low tree on the 16th hole.

"You cannot do that," said Clyde Mangum, deputy commissioner of the PGA Tour and the man in charge of this tournament, an elite gathering of only the winners of four titles from the last 12 months. He assessed the penalty. The two strokes increased Streck's final round from a 71 to a 73. And it tipped his total from 281 — one stroke back of Wadkins — to 283. The change dropped Streck from sole possession of second place, worth $40,500, to a 4-way tie for second, which was worth $26,162.50.

Streck did not object to the penalty. But he strongly objected to the timing of the ruling.

"They made the call in the NBC trailer an hour and 10 minutes after it had happened. I think that is very unfair to me," he said. "They should have told me on the 17th tee."

Officials said they were unaware of the infraction until television viewers began flooding the La Costa Hotel with calls questioning Streck's actions in moving the branch. After Streck completed play, he and Mangum viewed films together. The films showed Streck moving the branch with his hand to get it out of his face as he addressed the ball.

"I deserved the penalty, obviously," the bitterly disappointed Streck said.

He said he had his eyes closed and the leafy branch was "sticking in my mouth. More of a reflex action than anything, I just brushed it away." He said he was concentrating on the shot to such an extent that he was not aware he'd violated the rules.

The penalty dropped Streck back into a tie for second with new Masters champ Craig Stadler, U.S. Open title-holder David Graham and Andy Bean at 283. Stadler had a course record-matching, 8-under-par 64 in the final round and Graham shot 71.

Bean, who was involved in a similar incident with viewers calling in to question his actions under a tree when he won the Doral Open two months ago, closed with a 70. Bean was not penalized at Doral.

The group at 284 was comprised of Tom Watson, Tom Kite, Wayne Levi, Danny Edwards and Johnny Miller. Watson had a final-round 75 that included a double bogey-6 on the eighth hole. Kite shot 73, Levi 70, Edwards 68 and Miller 67.

Streck had an apparent one-stroke lead playing the last two holes, but Wadkins got a share of the top spot with a 40-foot birdie putt on the 17th and was handed the lead alone when Streck 3-putted from about 20 feet on the last hole.

The victory, Wadkins' second of the season, was worth $63,000 from the total purse of $350,000.

"Winning this tournament means a lot to me," he said. "It gets me in three tournaments that are very important. It gets me back in this one next year. It gets me in the Masters. And it gets me in the World Series of Golf."

Tigers Win Golf Crown

ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. (AP) — Clemson golf coach Bobby Robinson found himself almost speechless following his team's victory Sunday in the 28th Atlantic Coast Conference golf tournament.

Robinson's Tigers entered the tournament as a darkhorse, but responded with steady performances to capture their first title ever.

Meanwhile, North Carolina's John Inman who spent the night before studying for a final exam, passed the test provided by the Northgreen Country Club course. He fired a final round 69 — lowest round of the three-day tourney, and took medalist honors, the second consecutive year a Tar Heel golfer has won such an honor.

Clemson finished at 876, 12-over par on the 7,134 yard, par-72 layout, but three strokes better than first-round leader North Carolina State.

North Carolina finished third at 880 while Wake Forest was at 890, its lowest finish in 21 years.

Duke, seventh after the first round, rallied to finish fifth with a 904 total. Virginia was sixth at 913, Maryland seventh at 921 and Georgia Tech last at 943.

Prior to Sunday, Clemson's highest finish was second place in 1980. Even then, the Tigers were 38 shots off the record-setting pace of Wake Forest. With the second-round lead in hand and a chance for the title staring them in the face, Robinson said his team took nothing for granted.

"We never even talked about it ...," Robinson said. "But I still felt we could win. The reason I thought so was that the players were confident. We went out and did what we had to do. From my point of view, this is the most important 18 holes of golf we've ever played."

Inman's winning total was 213, 3-under-par for the tournament and an equal number of strokes ahead of his nearest competition.

NORTH WILKESBORO, N.C. (AP) — Darrell Waltrip theorized that the best way to win the Northwestern Bank 400 NASCAR event would be to win the pole position, gain the lead at the first green flag and stay there.

Waltrip implemented his theory and it worked as he guided his Junior Johnson Buick to a relatively easy victory Sunday on the 1.5-mile track, his third triumph of the season.

That theory wasn't without several problems, however. The 1981 NASCAR driving champion found himself one lap down with 100 laps to go when he went to the pits to change tires. One lap later, with Labonte leading, a caution flag was raised to allow an ambulance to leave the infield area with a heart attack victim.

Labonte then was allowed to pit without losing his lead. "When the caution came out, Junior said a man had had a heart attack and I said, 'I know: it was me,'" said Waltrip. The Franklin, Tenn., veteran then regained the front spot for the remaining 65 laps to earn the first prize money of $32,300.

Labonte had his own troubles near the finish. He led for 41 laps and was trying desperately to catch Waltrip. But he and Bobby Allison tangled cars three laps from the checkered flag, sending Labonte's car into the wall. The 25-year-old who came into the race as the Winston Cup point leader continued despite the fender-bender and took what he thought was second place.

Dale Earnhardt and Benny Parsons both passed Labonte when he and Allison wrecked and they were listed as second and third behind Waltrip. But NASCAR officials reviewed the confusing finish and officially awarded second place to Labonte. Earnhardt took third and Parsons was moved to fourth.

"I had a fender up by his door and he just came down on me and cut me off," a bitter Labonte said of the collision that cost him one last run at Waltrip.

"He took me out at Richmond and he got into me at Martinsville. I'm fed up with it," he added.

Labonte picked up $13,000 for his effort and will remain Winston Cup point leader.

Defending champion Richard Petty finished fifth, a lap behind the leader.

Blue Devils Take Tennis Title

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Marc Flur of Duke University beat Clemson's Jean Desdunes 1-6, 7-6, 6-3 Sunday to lead Duke to its first Atlantic Coast Conference tennis title.

The Blue Devils went through the regular conference season undefeated and led the tournament from start to finish. Entering Sunday's third round, however, Duke's lead over the Tigers was only 58-55.

On six different points, Desdunes had match point with Flur, but Flur fought back to win the second set and then went on to win the third set and match.

The Blue Devils won four singles championships and two doubles titles for a team score of 73. Chiam Arlosorov of Duke, who was voted the Most Valuable Player of the tournament, won the No. 1 singles championship, defeating Mark Dickson of Clemson 5-7, 6-0, 6-3.

Other winners were Rick Rudeen of Clemson in the No. 3 singles spot, who beat Will White of Duke 6-3, 7-6; Darryl Wilburn of Virginia in the No. 4 singles spot, who beat Richard Akel of Clemson 5-7, 7-5, 6-0; and, in doubles competition, Gregg Cooper and Jean Desdunes of Clemson beat the Duke team of Chiam Arlosorov and Mike Smith 3-6, 6-3, 6-3.

Clemson was second with 62. North Carolina took third with 48 and Virginia rounded out the first division with 44.

Maryland, Wake Forest, North Carolina State and Georgia Tech closed out the team standings.

Duke coach John LeBar was chosen Coach of the Year, while Dickson was awarded the Sportsmanship trophy.

LeBar had announced earlier in the season that this would be his last at Duke. But he said Sunday that he has talked with Duke Athletic Director Tom Butters about the possibility of remaining. Nonetheless, LeBar's post-match comments gave every indication that he was on the verge of leaving.

"After working for a long time, it really feels good to finish like this, to have a great team like this one," he said.

Boston Marathon Set To Run

BOSTON (AP) — For 86 years, the Boston Marathon was an amateur event.

That era ended with this year's race today.

"I meet people every day now," said 74-year-old John A. Kelley, who wore No. 51 today in commemoration of his 51st appearance in the Boston Marathon, "with gray heads, bald heads, who tell me how their fathers took them to Fenway (Park) on Patriot's Day morning to see the Red Sox and then on to the race to cheer us in."

"Boston is Boston. It's tradition. But I'm as confused as all get out now. Jeppers, it's a whole new ball game."

Kelley's confusion stems from the race's planned move from amateurism to professionalism next year.

Radical changes are in store.

They are being made to keep up with the changing times.

Many of the world's top marathons already have been commercialized, but Boston has been steadfast in its resolve to retain the true amateur code.

Now, it has buckled, somewhat to the chagrin of race director Will Cloney, president of the Boston Athletic Association.

"The marathon is going to be the same as every other marathon in the world, with commercial sponsorship," said Cloney.

Had the Boston Marathon held to its past stance, it might not have attracted world record holder Alberto Salazar this year.

"Alberto told me, 'I want to be a part of that era before the changes are instituted,'" his father, Jose Salazar, said before his son went out and attacked his world mark of 2 hours, 13 minutes, 8 seconds, set Oct. 25, 1981, in the 1981 New York City Marathon.

Among the changes to be instituted next year are:

—Paying expense money and prize money to the leading men's and women's runners. (The Boston Marathon never has given athletes money for airfare, food allowances or housing, let alone prize money).

—Running the race on a Sunday instead of the traditional Monday Patriot's Day, making it more attractive for television, which plans to show the race nationally for the first time.

—Realigning the course from its usual starting point of Hopkinton, west of Boston, to the Prudential Insurance Co. tower in the city. (Prudential, the race's sponsor for 16 years, is withdrawing after this year in protest of the move toward commercialism).

Actually, commercialism already has crept into the race. In addition to Prudential, several companies sponsored this year's event. But no prize money is being awarded.

That will come next year. Of course, it will be distributed under the guidelines of the International Amateur Athletic Federation, the world governing body for track and field. Under IAAF rules, athletes can accept prize money as long as they put it into trust funds and use it for "training purposes."

In that way, the athletes retain their amateur status and remain eligible for international competition and the Olympic Games. It still is as hypocritical as the old "under-the-table" payments, but it is acceptable.

"It is legal as far as the governments are concerned as long as the athletes pay their taxes," said Fred Lebow, director of the New York City Marathon. "...The athletes benefit financially...everybody is happy."

While the prize money might be confusing to some, such as Kelley, it certainly is welcome news to the younger runners like Bill Rodgers, winner of the Boston and New York City marathons four times each, and Craig Virgin, the 1981 Boston runner-up.

"Running has had a bad image problem," said Rodgers, referring to the highly criticized under-the-table payoffs.

What do you bid now?

A.—Despite your 13 points in high cards, you have a flat hand and few intermediates. You need no more than raise to three hearts. Any further action is up to partner.

1♣ Pass 1NT Pass

2♣ Pass 2♥ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—You have a very good hand, but there is nothing you can do with it! Partner has shown a weak hand with long hearts (remember, he wasn't strong enough to bid two hearts over one spade), and he doesn't particularly care for either of your suits. You have a misfit, and the prudent course is to withdraw from the auction, albeit reluctantly. Pass.

Pass 1NT Dble Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—We know that partner's double is for penalties, but with your unbalanced hand we don't think you should sit. Partner is likely to lead a red suit, and that could cost your side a trick and a tempo. Jump to three clubs—that describes your holding accurately: a hand with a good suit but not much in the way of high cards.

What action do you take?

A.—While we would quarrel with a pass, your partner's vulnerable preempt has promised seven winners, and with your three you should be safe at the four-level. Therefore, we would make one try for game by bidding three spades. Should partner have spade support, you could make four spades. If he returns to four diamonds, pass. (Naturally, your bid of three spades is a one-round force.)

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠5 ♥AK94 ♦AK76 ♣A1095

The bidding has proceeded: East South West North

Pass 1♥ Pass 1♣ Dble ?

What action do you take?

A.—There is one recommended way to show a good hand in this situation—redouble. Don't worry about your singleton spade—if the opponents leave in the redouble, you are presenting partner with five tricks in top cards and he needs only a couple of well-placed queens to walk home with the contract. It is more likely that the opponents will run, and thus enable you to inflict a substantial penalty.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠K92 ♥A1095 ♦Q98 ♣K105

The bidding has proceeded: West North East South

Pass 1♦ Pass 1♥ 1♣ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—A difficult hand. We would select two no trump despite the fact that you are a whisker short in high cards for that action. You have fine intermediates and the queen in partner's suit is worth more than the two points allotted to it by the point count.

Q.7—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠AK762 ♥A94 ♦84 ♣J92

The bidding has proceeded: North East South

3♦ Pass ?

AUTOS COLLIDE

Cars driven by Charles Theodore Hardison of Route 1, Grimesland, and Delmer Alan Alligood of Route 6, Washington, collided about 10:30 p.m. Saturday on North Greene Street, causing an estimated $7,800 property damage.

Greenville Police Department investigators, who made no charges, estimated damage at $800 to the Hardison car and $7,000 to the vehicle driven by Alligood.

CBS Describes 'Stacked Deck' Facing Parolees From Prison

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — With this season's slew of crime fighters filling prisons in prime time, CBS is letting some offenders out on parole.

The seamy side of their story is covered Tuesday night in "Parole."

The film, carrying the parental-discretion advisory, brutally depicts prison life and the stacked deck against parolees. The moral tone is that choices for ex-cons are limited on both sides of the steel bars.

"I thought when you've done your time, you paid your dues. You come out clean," says parolee Jimmy McCusick. Not so, says his parole officer. "The real time starts on the outside."

James Naughton (of CBS' "Making the Grade") is parole officer Andy Kirschner. Andy gets personally involved in his cases, taking their problems to heart. His work is a commitment, not a 9-to-5 job. This infuriates Andy with his ex-cons, at least as much as they'll trust anybody with a badge.

The movie makes Jimmy, played sympathetically by newcomer Mark Soper, a criminal sottie who's sweet on a young girl. She pledges to remain faithful while he's in prison. "Parole" is set in the real Massachusetts Correctional Institute at Walpole.

But Jimmy's naive notions about prison life are shattered when he's sexually abused by a prison gang. He won't inform the guards, knowing it would infuriate the lifers, who have little incentive to be on good behavior. The impression also is that the guards wouldn't be able to stop it anyway.

Jimmy becomes eligible for parole after three years. On trial again, he swallows his pride to impress the parole board, including one hard-boiled member who calls him a punk.

After convincing the board of his good intentions, he's released with a warning: "Things change. I hope you make it."

The movie then deals with his efforts to stay clean. The odds are heavily against him, as if the criminal must be better than average to atone for once being worse.

The world isn't welcoming Jimmy with open arms. His girl friend has grown up and away. While she was the center of Jimmy's prison dreams, her life went on without him. And she isn't sensitive to his prison-induced sexual insecurities.

His sense of self is further diminished by the attitude of prospective employers reluctant to risk Jimmy's reputation.

"Parole" takes the narrow position that the disillusioned ex-con has just two sources of support: the criminal element, which preys on his vulnerability, or the parole officer, who can help the ex-con ride out the hard times and force him to deal with reality.

Andy is the right man for the job, since he understands the system doesn't prepare the ex-con for the straight future. So he works hard at being a caring confidante who believes in his parolees more than they do.

Naughton plays it with a pleasing blend of humor and toughness, traits that might work for a regular series, too. After all, the TV criminal class of 1981-82 will be on the streets next fall.

Ballet Is A Job To Baryshnikov

NEW YORK (AP) — Mikhail Baryshnikov says ballet is his job but his true loves are books, paintings, music and his 1-year-old daughter, Alexandra.

"Ballet is no longer my life," he said in an interview with People magazine. "It is my job. My life is my interests."

The 34-year-old artistic director for the American Ballet Theater, which he joined after defecting from the Soviet Union eight years ago, is recovering from a knee injury and won't dance in the company's eight-week New York season.

But he does star in his second television special, "Baryshnikov in Hollywood," to be broadcast this week.

Of his young daughter by actress Jessica Lange, Baryshnikov says, "She's picking up my accent."

He's less concerned about Alexandra picking up his dance ability. "A lawyer or an accountant," he suggested for her future career.

Courtroom New 'Art Museum'

DENVER (AP) — The newest art gallery in town is the courtroom of U.S. District Judge John L. Kane Jr.

He's offering display space on one of his courtroom's walls for any artist who is a member of the legal profession or any artist whose work portrays the legal system.

The current display features paintings — mostly watercolors — of birds in flight, snow-covered mountains and various animals. They're the work of Denver lawyer Clive O'Leary and a price list says they cost from $465 to $1,785.

One painting, which sells for $1,535, depicts two ducks carefully watching their eggs in the nest. The title? "Protective Custody."

Retirement Bores Fifi

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — At 78, former movie femme fatale Fifi D'Orsay says retirement "is getting on my nerves."

The Canadian-born actress, who got her break in Will Rogers' first talking movie, "They Had To See Paris," in 1929, still makes occasional appearances and has a role in a musical opening in June at a Hollywood theater.

She became the French bombshell of 14 motion pictures made over seven years, and still wears false eyelashes and speaks in a thickly accented voice punctuated by a throaty laugh.

"I'm a performer. I'm really an entertainer," she said in a recent interview, then said with a laugh: "Believe me, I'm not good, but I'm contagious."

"I just love show business," she said. "I know one thing; I'm not as ugly as I say I am sometimes. I never thought I was pretty. I was always a type; the animation does it."

After her brief stardom, the black-haired vamp had small roles in nine films, the last in 1969. In 1971, she appeared on Broadway in the Stephen Sondheim-Harold Prince musical, "Follies."

"I think if I really tried, I could get back in (films) again. I can't get down the stairs very fast but I walk well. I'm proud of my age. I'm very agile. All I need is a good agent."

Acid Rain Is Threatening N.C.

By The Associated Press
The problem of acid rain, once thought exclusive to the Northeast, is now becoming a major threat to North Carolina and industrial pollutants from as far away as Alabama and Texas have been fingered as the culprits. Rain with the acid content of vinegar has reportedly fallen on Raleigh. In the Great Smoky Mountains, trout have died in holding ponds and hatcheries after their water suddenly turned acidic.

Scientists studying the phenomenon agree it is too early to blame acid deposition directly for the fishkills or to estimate its impact on forests and crops. But they do know that sulfuric and nitrous acids, once thought to be only a problem in the Northeast, are falling regularly throughout North Carolina.

For example, between October 1978 and September 1979, the Piedmont Research Station in Rowan County recorded only two rainfalls above pH 5.6, the level considered a "normal" rainfall. During that same time period, a station in Macon County, in the mountains on the Georgia border, recorded only five readings above pH 5.6.

Researchers use a pH scale to measure the degree of acidity or alkalinity of a solution. The scale runs from 0 to 14; 0 being completely acidic and 14 being completely alkaline. A pH of 7 — that of distilled water — is considered neutral.

Normal rainfall has a pH level of 5.6 because carbon dioxide given off naturally by plant life dissolves in rain and becomes carbonic acid. In North Carolina, for example, factories and power plants discharged 637,875 tons of sulfur dioxide into the air in 1979. During that same period, 578,724 tons of nitrogen oxide were emitted. Duke Power's Dan River station, Alamance County's source of electricity, accounted for 6,777 tons of sulfur emissions last year.

Particles caught in air currents travel 200 to 300 miles a day. North Carolina discharges fall on the Northeast or over the Atlantic Ocean.

Paul Wilms of the N.C. Department of Natural Resources, Division of Environmental Management, points south when he seeks the source of North Carolina's acid rain.

"To the best of our knowledge, we're impacted from the Birmingham, Ala., and Texas Gulf Coast areas," he said, adding that Alabama's coal-fired electric plants, Birmingham's steel mills and Texas' oil refineries are causing the consistent acidic rainfalls here.

Twelve years ago, Alabama pollutants would not have traveled this far, Wilms said. That was before the Clean Air Act encouraged power companies to build taller smoke stacks, sending ash high into air currents, instead of having it fall on their own heads.

"By doing that they provided a vehicle for getting the pollutants into the atmosphere and jet streams," he said. "More important, previously the pollutants that didn't get high enough to enter the atmosphere also didn't have time to react and form acids."

Paul Pate, director of the environmental health program of Jefferson County, Alabama, wasn't sure his state was responsible for acid rain on the Tar Heel

State. "It's a long way from Birmingham to North Carolina," Pate said. "The study of air currents ... is not a hard science. Nobody can say where particles come from over a 500 mile trip."

Pate suggested that because of the higher stacks, most of North Carolina's acid rain problem could be coming from 12 coal-fired power plants operated in Tennessee and Alabama by the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Two years ago, TVA plants emitted 1.6 million tons of sulfur and 442,000 tons of nitrogen into the air.

A TVA spokesman said 1981 figures will be lower, thanks to the installation of emission scrubbers on the stacks at some plants.

TUMBLING DOWN — Demolition experts detonated a series of dynamite charges Sunday to topple the dozen giant chimneys at the decades-old Libby-Owens-Ford glass plant in the Kanawha City section of Charleston. The plant was closed two years ago, and the site will be the home of a new shopping mall. It took less than 20 seconds for the stacks to tumble to the ground. (AP Laserphoto)

Health Fair To Be Staged

The Pitt County Health Fair will kick off a three-day celebration of good health with clowns and music Thursday.

The fair will be open Thursday from 3:30 to 7:30 p.m., Friday from noon to 7 p.m. and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Clown Alley will perform and the Double Paradoes barbershop quartet of Greenville will start singing at 6 p.m.

The fair is sponsored by the East Carolina University Schools of Medicine, Nursing and Allied Health, Pitt County Memorial Hospital, the Pitt County Health Department, the Pitt County Dental Society, WRAL-TV, Carolina East Mall and Carolina East Centre.

Health professionals and non-medical volunteers will help participants understand how daily lifestyle choices and habits affect total health. They will be available to answer questions and suggest referrals.

Visitors will be able to participate in free screenings for height, weight, blood pressure, anemia, oral cancer, and visual acuity. An optional blood chemistry analysis will be provided for an $8 fee. Those who wish to take this test should not eat or drink anything but black coffee, clear tea or water for four hours before taking the test. Participants should continue to take all prescribed medications and diabetics should maintain a regular diet.

Screenings are optional and do not take the place of a physical examination. They will be given only to individuals 18 or older.

Underground Economy Costs Govm't Money

By CARL HARTMAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — An international economist says countries around the world are losing millions of tax dollars because of the flourishing underground economy.

Vito Tanzi, head of the fiscal affairs department at the International Monetary Fund, puts the value of the underground economy in the United States at between $120 billion and $140 billion each year.

The U.S. gross national product — the value of goods and services produced — is about $3 trillion a year, and Vanzi projects that between 4 percent and 8 percent of the GNP is unreported.

The underground economy is the term applied to income that is not reported to the federal government. It covers waitresses who pocket tips, baby sitters earning extra cash and people involved in illicit businesses such as narcotics dealers.

Tanzi made his estimate of the U.S.'s underground economy in a book entitled,

"The Underground Economy in the United States and Abroad."

Another economist, Edgar Fege, said Tanzi's figures are low. He estimated that the value of the American underground economy in 1978 was 33 percent of the GNP — nearly a trillion dollars.

In some countries, the underground economy is more active than in the United States, Tanzi said.

Two Colombians, Roberto Junguito and Carlos Caballero, estimated that in their country exports in the late 1970s were under-reported by between 23 percent and 41 percent.

This occurred partly because of $500 million sales of marijuana and cocaine and also because of false invoices, they said in a contribution to Tanzi's book.

But Tanzi quoted an Italian professor as saying the underground economy was Italy's "second economic miracle" because it allowed people to maintain a higher standard of living.

Peter Reuter of the Rand Corp. suggested that one-fifth to one-third of Italy's GNP is due to "irregular sector economy."

For example, official statistics show that nearly 1.5 million houses were built in Italy between 1971 and 1979. But the electric company made more than three million connections to new houses.

In France, economists estimate the social security system lost about $4 billion in unpaid contributions from holders of unregistered jobs in 1978.

"All sources agree that it (not reporting income) is practiced by virtually everyone, takes all possible forms and varies in scale from the trivial to the regal," Tanzi wrote.

Designer Adds Spherical Sofa

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — The discomfort of spending his nights on a sleeper sofa moved Frank Petersilie to create a better way to convert the couch to a bed. What he came up with is a design so unique, it's patented.

Petersilie's invention is a round sleeper, for which his company, Spherical Furniture, gets its name. It was among the innovative styles of furniture on display during the Southern Furniture Market.

While a design professor at Appalachian State University in Boone 10 years ago, Petersilie founded Spherical. The company not only has a plant in Boone, but also operates a plant in Los Angeles and sells its sofas all over the world.

"The idea started as a pet peeve over the horrible way sleep sofas operated," Petersilie said. "Somebody said why didn't I come up with something better, so I did."

Spherical sleep sofas have no wood or steel in their construction — even the hinges are cloth.

The sofas are made of polyurethane foam. The sleepers are covered in specially designed slip covers made at the Boone plant. To change them to beds, flip down the back section and move two ottomans into place. Then you have a circular bed.

"We were the first company in the United States to use foam in mattresses," Petersilie said. "Europe had been using foam for years, but it hadn't caught on here."

Round isn't the only way Spherical makes its beds. Square models and corner units are available. Mattress sizes range from a single bed to king-size, yet all can use conventional sheets.

Old Central Prison To Lose Towers And Turrets

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The old towers and turrets that make Central Prison stand out will be gone soon, like so many things victims of changing times. They will be replaced by a maze of buildings that look more like college dormitories.

The contrasts between the century-old prison and the $27 million complex now taking shape are amazing. The old Central has been notorious for its overcrowded conditions, with 1,400 or more men crammed four to a cell and scores to each dormitory, in a building designed for fewer than 900 prisoners.

With the new Central comes the latest in prison design. There are individual cells for each inmate, electronically controlled doors, secured guardposts positioned to watch each inmate constantly — and virtually no bars anywhere. After 26 years of working inside aging Central Prison, Warden Sam P. Garrison says he's going to "feel like I'm a long way out of place" when the new complex opens.

"It looks almost like a college campus," Lt. Bill Perry, who has helped guide construction of the new prison, observed from the prison's exterior.

"It'll be a hell of an improvement. I can tell you that," says Garrison. "No bars is an indication of security. If you don't have a bar to cut, you have to use a jackhammer to get out."

The new prison stands on the same spot as the old, so as to take advantage of some newer existing buildings that will remain. A final phase of construction will run the total cost to more than $35 million. That final leg can't be erected until the old main building is torn down and after inmates are moved into the new portion.

Construction contractors last week turned over to the state one of the new buildings — the kitchen, dining and bakery sections. The main portion, the cellblocks, should be turned over to the state within a few months, officials say.

With the new building comes a learning experience. Prison officials have to learn how to operate the complicated observation centers and guard posts, and they have to retrain guards.

"It's going to be either an electronic marvel or an electronic monster," quipped Stuart Shadbolt, Correction Department spokesman.

Several months of training for staff, followed by a test of the facility using minimum-custody inmates to find unnoticed gaps could delay the move until 1983.

Visitors enter into a granite-floored lobby and, once cleared through the first guardpost, are taken by elevator to a visitor's area. Individual booths will allow them to talk, but not touch, inmates. A spacious lobby has a dramatic skylight and playroom for visitors' children.

Using a master control room, guards will watch boards of lighted monitors to watch every main door in the prison. A red light means the door is open and green means it is closed. There are "overall control rooms" on each of the building's three floors.

Each cellblock is arranged in a "V" shape, with a row of eight cells on each side. Above is a second tier with two rows of eight cells, making 32 cells in the V. A guard will be in a sealed booth in the center, observing the entire scene, and between them is a "day room" with a few steel tables for those times inmates are let out of their cells.

Directly above that double-decked grouping is the same arrangement with another guard booth, for a total capacity of 64 people per block. Each cell is 7 feet by 10 feet, with a five-inch narrow window — too thin to require bars.

The entire area is sealed and air conditioned. Windows are of a tough plastic called polycarbonate. Steel doors are operated electronically from a control booth.

There are six brightly-trimmed cellblocks with 384 cells, and the total capacity will be increased to nearly 1,000 with other buildings — the more modern, existing hospital and mental health buildings and a new set of cells yet to be built. An older dormitory will remain, the only place where inmates won't be in single cells, said Shadbolt.

The prison also has a new gas chamber and a four-cell death row, though the state has executed no one in 21 years. Two windows are in place for observers, and the two chairs and gas-creating mechanism will be moved from the old chamber.

There are rooms for counseling, offices, a gymnasium, an auditorium and music room. And there are concrete-lined escape tunnels in the event of fire that empty into a walled-in exercise yard.

The prison was designed by Garrison and other prison officials, along with their architect and a consulting firm.

"We're not relying on electronic surveillance and a lot of cameras," said John Duncan, architect with J.N. Pease and Associates of Charlotte, who describes new Central as on the "leading edge" of prison technology. "We have guards in secure control rooms observing inmates," he said. "They won't be out there moving inmates around."

The walls are foot-thick reinforced concrete, the most difficult building material to penetrate, Duncan said. Also central to the prison is a long, sealed corridor the length of the compound, connecting seven main buildings.

Construction continued without moving the inmates. The lone escape during construction came when two prisoners carved through a steel door in the corridor at the old building and walked out the new front. They were recaptured, and prison officials say that problem has been solved.

Aside from external security, officials say the new building will provide inmates with more privacy and protection from each other, and will be more humane than the old prison.

"Most of the prisoners will like it, I think, because of the single-cells," said Garrison. "There will be an element of course that won't. They won't get to be the bulls anymore."

Honor Accorded

Dr. Constantine G. Kledaras, professor in the East Carolina University Department of Social Work and Corrections, has been named "Social Worker of the Year" by the North Carolina chapter of the National Association of Social Workers.

A Raleigh native, Dr. Kledaras was cited for his "contribution, dedication and outstanding service of excellence to both his profession and to the community." He has served in a number of leadership positions for the North Carolina Chapter of NASW, as well as acting as Liaison for Aging to the National Association of Social Workers. He is now on the NASW-NC board of directors as a member-at-large and on its executive committee and is a state delegate to the National Delegate Assembly. He is running for president-elect of the organization.

A professor at ECU for more than 10 years, he previously was an administrator at Dorothea Dix Hospital in Raleigh.

A plaque honoring him will be presented at a luncheon meeting in Raleigh Friday.

Seven Die In N.C. Traffic

By The Associated Press
The state Highway Patrol says seven people, including two pedestrians killed Friday night, were killed in weekend traffic accidents in North Carolina.

The seven deaths brought the North Carolina highway death toll to 285, compared with 396 on the same date in 1981.

The latest victim was identified Sunday by the patrol as Michael Edwin Price, 37, of Matthews. The patrol said Price was killed at 7:31 p.m. on a rural road south of Stallings in Union County when he lost control of his motorcycle and hit a fence.

Wallace Elliot Jr., 28, of Tyner died when the vehicle he was driving was struck head-on by a second car that crossed the center line of U.S. 17 north of Hertford, the patrol reported. One person was injured in the accident.

Jessie Fowler, 18, of Tabor City, died Saturday afternoon when his car left a rural paved road near Chadbourm at a high rate of speed. Troopers said the car hit a ditch embankment, throwing Fowler from the car, which rolled over him. The accident occurred about 5:45 p.m.

Kenneth Ray Wilson, 35, of Nebo, died Friday night when a vehicle ran over him as he lay on a rural road in McDowell County near Marion.

William Donald Yates, 22, of Raleigh, also died Friday night when he walked into the path of oncoming traffic on U.S. 1 north of Raleigh.

A three-car collision Saturday at 4:05 a.m. in Cabarrus County resulted in the death of Grady Dallas Ward, 23, of Lawndale. The highway patrol said a car crossed the center line and struck the Ward vehicle and another vehicle three miles north of Harrisburg. Two people were reported injured.

Ernie Lawson Martin, 34, of Franklin, died Friday night when his car went out of control, struck an embankment and overturned in six miles north of Franklin in Macon County.

Ingram Critical Of TV Station

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina Insurance Commissioner John Ingram on Sunday praised an NBC documentary on insurance and chastised the Durham Life Insurance Co. for preventing some television viewers from seeing it.

Ingram said Durham Life, owners of WPTF-TV, deliberately censored the program as part of "continued efforts of the powerful insurance industry to hide the truth from the people."

In a prepared statement, Ingram said the documentary broadcast Saturday night on most NBC affiliate stations accurately described problems the public faces with the insurance industry.

The "NBC White Paper" addressed life insurance, what the industry does with its money, complaints about the industry and the effectiveness of insurance regulators at the state level, Ingram said.
