OAS Sanctions Against Britain Sought

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — As the Organization of American States met today to consider Argentina's request for hemispheric sanctions against Great Britain over the Falkland Islands dispute, the British government rejected an Argentina peace proposal and said it would present one of its own to U.S. mediator Alexander M. Haig Jr.

The Argentine request for sanctions, made only hours after the secretary of state ended four days of talks in Buenos Aires and left for Washington on Monday, claimed that the British pledge to retake the islands by force represented a "grave and imminent danger" to hemispheric security.

Argentina said it was asking the OAS to impose the collective provisions against Britain under a 1947 treaty.

In London, meanwhile, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher told the House of Commons that the Argentine peace plan fails to satisfy British conditions — namely in giving the 1,800 Falkland Islanders a say in their future — but that Foreign Secretary Francis Pym will present her government's counter-proposals to Haig on Thursday.

"We shall seek to put forward our own proposals, I hope, to Mr. Haig, and Mr. Pym, with that in mind, plans to go to Washington on Thursday," the prime minister said.

Haig, landing at nearby Andrews Air Force Base early today, said that he would continue his peace-making efforts and that his next step would be to hear the British response to the Argentine plan he had earlier conveyed to London.

Haig declined to express optimism when asked by reporters at Andrews whether he thought a solution was at hand.

"I haven't described myself from the beginning as either hopeful or unhelpful," he said. "We're continuing the talks and we will see where they lead."

Haig told reporters he had held "arduous discussions" in Argentina and had "further defined and delineated the position of that government."

He indicated he may take to the air again on his peace-seeking mission, which already has covered 28,000 miles of shuttling to Buenos Aires and London.

The British have a fleet steaming toward the South Atlantic. The lead vessels in the armada reportedly could be within striking distance of the Falklands this weekend.

In Buenos Aires Monday, Haig warned that time "is indeed running out."

Haig opposed the Argentine move at the OAS, saying the Inter-American Treaty of Reciprocal Assistance, also known as the Rio Treaty, was not a proper tool for dealing with the Falklands crisis. He also noted that in addition to its commitments under that treaty, the United States has long-standing treaty obligations to Great Britain.

"I don't want to comment on whether it's a positive or negative sign," Haig said in Caracas, Venezuela, where he stopped on his return to Washington. "I think the Argentine government has been considering such a step for a considerable period. It remains to be seen."

N.C. Officials Irate Over Redistricting Rejection

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) —

The rejection of North Carolina's legislative redistricting plans by the U.S. Justice Department has angered state officials, who said one of the provisions struck down Monday was originally suggested by the federal department.

"I cannot wait to get in a courtroom with them," said James M. Wallace Jr., deputy state attorney general. "I don't think it's very reasonable for them to reject for those reasons."

The decision threw further doubt over the statewide primary for Congress, legislature and county offices. The vote had been set for May 4 but was postponed until state House and Senate redistricting plans were approved.

The ruling left state legislative leaders with a choice of revising their redistricting plans again in another General Assembly session, or of appealing the Justice Department's ruling in federal court.

While Wallace said he was ready to go into court, appealing the decision in the federal court for the District of Columbia, he said the decision would rest with legislators.

House Speaker Liston Ramsey reacted similarly, but said he would wait until he saw the ruling in writing before recommending a next step.

"I personally am in favor of applying to the federal court for some relief...from that bureaucracy up there," Ramsey said in an interview.

Acting under the 1965 federal Voting Rights Act, the Justice Department struck down the House and Senate district maps for the second time in five months.

The department's civil rights division chief, William Bradford Reynolds, said the plans were "a substantial improvement" over earlier versions, but that they still discriminated against black voters in some areas.

In the House plan, he objected to the drawing of a single-member district in Cumberland County with a majority white population but majority black voter registration. It was surrounded by an at-large district served by four House members.

In the Senate plan, he pointed to the 2nd Senatorial District in the state's north-eastern corner, saying that while it had a 51.7 percent black majority, the percentage of blacks should be increased to at least 55 percent.

Although the decision had been suspected by state officials for weeks, the ruling on Cumberland County drew sharp comments from redistricting leaders who said that single-member district had been suggested by Justice attorneys in meetings several months ago.

"He asked us for exactly what we did in Cumberland County, and we did it."

City School Board

Urge Relocating Alternative Program

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Greenville Board of Education Monday night called on the school administration to prepare a proposal for relocating the alternative educational program currently conducted at Agnes Fullilove Community School.

The motion also included a request for an estimate of the operational cost of the program if it were incorporated at another location, as well as a request for an assessment of evaluation of the Agnes Fullilove property if it was put up for sale.

The decision to look into the possibility of a location change for the program arose from discussion of a detailed report on the status of Greenville schools prepared by the board's subcommittee on facilities. Subcommittee members preparing the report were Wilson Rhodes, Derek Dunn and George Shoe, along with Bob Stewart and Francis Dorey of the school staff.

The part of the report relating to Agnes Fullilove estimates a need of $213,000 to bring the building up to acceptable standards. The estimate entails $40,000 to replace windows, $40,000 to rewire the building, $20,000 for new suspended ceilings throughout the building and $20,000 to rework the heat distribution system.

Terry Shank pointed out that a state evaluation committee several years ago suggested that the board prepare for a phase-out of the building within two to three years. Superintendent Delma Blinson pointed out also that the law requires that, if more than 50 percent of the value of a building is spent on repairs, then all standard codes, including full access for the handicapped, must be met.

A supplemental report prepared by Bob Stewart placed the operational cost for the past year at Agnes Fullilove nearly $48,000. Stewart estimated the cost of the program at some other facility would result in an annual operational savings of about $25,000.

In approving the motion for an alternative plan, the board indicated it was not making a commitment to relocate the Agnes Fullilove program.

Funding estimated by the subcommittee to upgrade all city school facilities to "the point of the condition they should be in" amounted to $600,515. The estimates of repair costs included: Eastern Elementary School, $48,000; Elmhurst Elementary School, $21,700; Sadie Sautler Elementary School, $42,900; Third Street Elementary School, $28,150; South Greenville Elementary School, $25,580; Greenville Middle School, $1,900; E.B. Aycock Junior High School, $106,900; J.H. Rose High School, $36,385; Agnes Fullilove Community School, $213,000; Cafeteria Building, $24,400; Maintenance Department, $21,600, and Central Office, $4,600.

The subcommittee also estimated costs of $11,000 for a full-time painter and $15,000 for a full-time carpenter.

In discussions on the $106,900 for Aycock Junior High, it was noted that the figure represents improvements of sectors that were originally cut or changed at the time of construction due to changes in original specifications because of insufficient funds. Major items are $35,000 to insulate ceiling lay-in and $10,000 to replace electrical aluminum wiring with copper wiring.

The calendar for the 1982-83 school year was approved. August 25 will be the first day of school, with June 7, 1983, set as the final school day. Make-up days for days missed due to inclement weather are April 6-8 with other days, if needed, to be added at the end of the school year.

Approval was given to the first reading of two policy papers which will receive a final reading at the first school board meeting in May. The two papers are on the community use of facilities and corporal punishment.

Other matters approved at Monday night's meeting are for an overnight field trip by Aycock students for a state competition to be held in Charlotte April 30 and May 1, to be chaperoned by teacher Ron Hochmuth, permission for a dozen seniors at Rose to be dually enrolled at ECU and Pitt Community College in order to meet Social Security requirements for survivor benefits, and the addition of seven persons to the substitute teacher list.

Blinson reported to the board that Congress passed a continuing resolution for the remainder of the fiscal year on education for the handicapped that "makes the cut in assistance far less severe than we thought it would be." In December, Congress passed a resolution for $931 million in funds for handicapped education. In February, President Reagan proposed reducing the fund by 27 percent. The March 31 congressional action rejected the presidential proposal and "instead the cut is only about four percent. This is good news to us."

Budget Hearing

The Greenville Board of Education has set 8 p.m. Monday as the date for a public hearing on the board's preliminary, proposed 1982-83 Current Expense Fund to come from local sources. The hearing will be at Wahl-Coates School.

At its April action meeting Monday night, board members approved a budget estimate that serves as a working basis prior to the formal drawing up of the current expense fund.

The proposals under this two-fold budget request are for:

•(1) A current expense budget request of $2,234,671, which includes a 5 percent pay increase increment but does not include provision for a cost-of-living increase. This budget request represents an increase of 12.67 percent above the 1981-82 local current expense budget.

The $2,396,831 budget request figure represents an increase over last year's fund of 20.84 percent.

"This higher figure is essentially what will be necessary to maintain the programs we now have," said Superintendent Delma Blinson. "We hope the public will attend the hearing so that they will be in a position to understand our basis for the projected fund figures."

The workshop figures cited here do not represent a formal budget commitment, but instead are used as a work basis for arriving at current expense needs from local funding sources.

HEATER SMOKED; REFUND NOT FULL

On December 18, 1981, I bought a ventless kerosene heater from Jolly's Pawn Shop for $248. At the time I told Joe Jolly, the proprietor, I did not want it if it smoked. He said if it did, he'd give me my money back. Recently we were rearranging furnishings for a wedding in our home and, when we took some pictures off the walls, I found that there were white spaces: the heater had smoked. I took the heater back and Jolly refused to pay me any more than he could get from the supplier, $186. I'm paying $300 to get walls of three rooms repainted and I think I'm due the full price of the heater at least. F.D.

Joe Jolly says he did not make any statement to you in the beginning about replacing the heater if it smoked. He said his usual adjustment would be to replace the heater, but since you wanted a refund, instead, he gave you the amount the company gave him and that he feels this is fair, that you've had the use of the heater for three months. It's your word against his as to whether a any verbal agreement to refund if the heater smoked was made in the beginning.

Ponder Impact Nuclear Bomb

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Ground Zero, the technical term for the point of detonation of a nuclear weapon, is being used as the name for a week of public education about nuclear warfare now being observed in Greenville and throughout the United States.

A number of area citizens participated Monday in a tour in which ground zero for an imaginary one-megaton bomb explosion was the Pitt County Courthouse, which is approximately in the center of Greenville — which Ground Zero participants say is believed to be the 76th most likely American city to be bombed in the event of nuclear attack.

The Soviet Union now has at least 8,000 nuclear warheads and a number of other nations either have the bomb or are developing it, a participant in the tour, Patrick O'Neill pointed out. He said Greenville could conceivably be on an attack list.

The tour began at the courthouse, where Ground Zero Week Planning Committee members Dr. James Joyce and John Gardner pointed out what would happen in the first circle of destruction, from the courthouse outward 1.7 miles. Joyce said "98 percent of the people in this area would be killed. And I would hope that my family and I would be among them, because death would be instant and the two percent who would be injured would suffer so violently that instant death, would, of course, be much easier."

Dr. Joyce said studies seem to show that all buildings would be destroyed, except for rare exceptions of buildings that are especially designed and reinforced. The downtown area would be instantly incinerated and area would be virtually unrecognizable and safe entry by anyone from outside would be impossible for several weeks. Winds up to 300 mph would occur as the mushroom cloud would rise. At the courthouse site itself there would be a crater 100 feet wide and 200 feet deep. An outer point of this circle would be Greenville Middle School.

The second circle would be between 1.7 and three miles out from the center of the city. Half the people in this area would be killed; half injured. The force of the blast would strike within seven to nine seconds; radiation damage would be instantaneous. Some very strong commercial structures would survive, but most commercial buildings and virtually all residential ones would be destroyed. Most of the hospital would be destroyed, along with virtually all doctors' offices, so medical help would be virtually non-existent. Probably all law enforcement officers in the area at the time would be either killed or severely injured, so police protection would be annihilated. East Carolina University and all or nearly all of the Greenville city schools would be destroyed. An outer point of this circle would be

Supreme Court Says Boycott Of Soviet Cargoes Was Illegal Act

By KEVIN COSTELLOE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supreme Court ruled unanimously today that the longshoremen's union can be forced to pay monetary damages for its boycott of Soviet cargo to protest the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan.

The justices said the boycott was illegal under federal labor laws, and that Allied International Inc., a wood products importer, can press its claims for damages against the International Longshoremen's Association.

Writing for the court,

Justice Lewis F. Powell noted that the longshoremen's union had no dispute with Allied or with the shipping or stevedoring company that also were affected by what Powell called an illegal secondary boycott.

A secondary boycott is a strike carried out against an employer who is not directly involved in a labor or other dispute. In this instance, the court held that Allied suffered losses even though it was not a party to the union's foreign policy grievance against the Soviets.

The ILA, Powell wrote, "does not seek any labor objective from these employers. Its sole complaint is with the foreign and military policy of the Soviet Union," Powell wrote.

"As understandable and even commendable as the ILA's objectives may be, the certain effects of its action is to impose a heavy burden on neutral employers," the justice wrote. "And it is just such a burden, as well as widening of industrial strife, that the secondary boycott provisions were designed to prevent."

The ILA members refused to handle cargo to and from the Soviet Union beginning

Jan. 9, 1980, two weeks after Soviet military forces moved into Afghanistan. Three months later, the ILA called an end to the boycott, which had extended from Maine to Texas and Puerto Rico.

Allied filed suit in March 1980, seeking a court injunction against the boycott as well as monetary damages.

Last January, the 1st U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals allowed Allied to press its claims under federal labor law and sent the case back to a lower federal court for trial.

The Supreme Court today affirmed that ruling.

THE BRODY MEDICAL SCIENCE BUILDING ... is a landmark of the city about 1.7 miles from the center of Greenville. Tour members gathered in sight of the building to discuss what destruction would take place from that point inward to the Pitt County Courthouse if a one-megaton nuclear bomb were exploded over the courthouse. (Reflector Photo By Carol Tyer)

Travel Along with Janet Stoughton

The physical act of boarding a plane or taxi seem to be the easiest part of vacation travel unless you happen to be physically handicapped. Elevators in airports, rest room access and car rentals are but a few of the problems which confront this segment of our population. While ramps, wider doors and wheelchairs are making travel easier for the disabled, change is slow in coming. If you are a handicapped traveler, make your disability known to your travel agent. The necessary communications and arrangements can then be made to make your trip easier. Usually, wise planning can make for a smooth transition through airports with necessary facilities.

The agents at QUIXOTE TRAVELS INC. have the kind of experience that makes it easy for them to make traveling easy for the handicapped. At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I don't know of anyone who is more concerned with their image than bankers.

For years, they were paragons of conservatism in three-piece suits and metal-rimmed glasses who were tucked away in rooms behind a desk with nothing on it.

You got the feeling they had steamed creases in their underwear and were married to women who did not wear lipstick.

Now, all of them want to be my friend.

They invite you to drop by and have coffee with them, call them by their first name, and tell them when their pens are out of ink.

Somehow I never considered being a friend a criterion for letting someone hold my money. I've got friends I wouldn't trust with my home phone number.

As a professional new checking account customer (I open a new account at a new bank every time my checkbook doesn't balance), I was cheered recently to see an ad for a bank in New Jersey that shows three "portly" men in bathing suits standing in the surf. The ad was inspired.

It said, "Instead of a friendly banker, personal banker or hungry banker, maybe you just need a 'chubby' banker."

It continued, "Here at First National State, we really know how to throw our weight around New Jersey's banking community. Pound for pound, we've got more experience under (and over) our belts than anybody. "Sure, our competitors claim to be hungry, but we prove it every day over lunch. And while some banks say they offer men of broad experience, we can offer broad men of experience. "So if your business is out of shape, call the bankers who are out of shape: Men whose motto has always been, 'Let's discuss that over lunch." Chubby is an image I relate to and like. A chubby banker isn't out jogging, he's watching my Christmas savings account. A chubby banker takes time for lunch and is in a happy mood to consider my personal loan. A chubby banker is worrying where his next Danish is coming from and doesn't have time to worry about my mortgage payment.

I'm going to write down their slogan, "OUR FIRST CONCERN IS LUNCH!" Now, there are three men who can truly laugh at themselves... all the way to the bank.

An Interesting Change

In a change of its budget reviewing procedures, the county commissioners have begun hearing department and agency heads directly as they prepare the 1982-83 budget.

In the past budget requests have been submitted to the county manager who in turn prepared a budget for the commissioners' consideration. Then usually department and agency heads appeared to make a final plea to avoid paring.

Under the new procedure, once the commissioners have heard from the department and agency heads they will set guidelines under which a budget will be prepared by the county manager. Then a final budget recommendation will be made to the commissioners.

The commissioners believe that the new procedure will save time, and that appears to be a good possibility. It could also mean that the executives will be more conservative in their requests of the county commissioners. It is the tendency of a department head to make up a "wish book" budget, knowing it will go through an executive officer and likely suffer some cutting before it is considered by the appropriating agency.

Under the new procedure the department and agency heads know they are talking directly to the people who will make the final decisions. Thus every request has to be defended from the start.

Budget requests were reportedly running behind those of the present years, although salary increases had not been included.

The commissioners have instituted an interesting change in procedure. It could be a more efficient way to assemble a budget.

Quality Must Be Emphasized

A mainstay of American industry is being dusted off. It is the word quality.

Quality is being emphasized in advertising. Ford Motor Co. Chairman Philip Caldwell said in a speech at Davidson College that faith must be restored in the nation's ability "not merely to deliver the goods, but to deliver the quality goods." He saw American technology as second to none.

Our nation is still hugely productive and innovative in manufacturing methods. It will be the task of industry to convince domestic and international buyers that we produce the highest quality goods in the world.

It can be done. It will take a partnership of management and labor and the development of individual pride in the products we turn out. There is nothing to stop us if we make the commitment.

Question Wisdom

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR

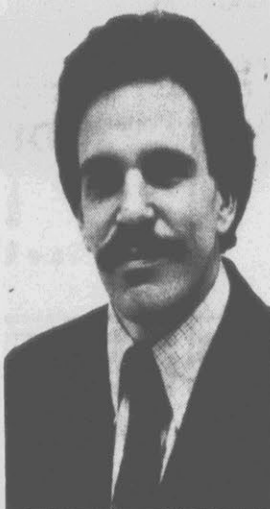

RALEIGH — As part of the politicking involved in passing Gov. Jim Hunt's 3-cent gas tax increase last year, the legislature provided counties with the same amount of money for secondary road improvements as the state's cities will get under the Powell Bill. That means that $31 million will be available to counties this year and about $40 million next year. Analysts for the legislature's Fiscal Research Division have now begun to ask the legislature if that is a wise policy to follow.

The program in question is highly sensitive politically. It involves whose roads get paved and whose don't. Under a 1973 formula, the money is distributed according to a county's percentage of the state's unpaved road mileage. The state maintains 76,134 miles of road, 18,800 of which are unpaved. If a county had 188 miles of unpaved roads, for example, it would get 1 percent of that year's secondary road money.

Most rural counties support the formula saying they have the greatest share of unpaved roads. Large metropolitan counties with more traffic can be expected to argue that a county like Wilkes shouldn't get five times more money than Mecklenburg. Another factor to consider, says analyst Jim Newlin, is that the money isn't used exclusively to pave roads — about one-fifth is used to widen, upgrade and stabilize paved rural roads.

Newlin and Beth Christenson, his co-worker, haven't recommended changes in the program, but they've raised some controversial questions:

•Should the state have a goal of paving all the unpaved roads in the state? A paved road costs twice as much to maintain as an unpaved road and once paved, some of these roads don't get enough traffic to keep the pavement "flexed" and in proper shape. Given the limited money available to the state Highway Fund now and the average cost of paving a mile of two-lane road being about $90,000, is it wise to be adding miles of extra high-cost maintenance road?

•Are the needs of the state as a whole served best by a system that allocates construction money on a county basis? Are the roads in greatest need of pavement getting it? A small rural county receiving a lot of money may get enough to pave a road which serves only a handful of taxpayers. At the same time, another county receiving much less might not have the money to pave a road serving many more people. It's not a case of large county versus small county," Newlin said. Wake County, for example, gets a lot of money. Jones County gets only a small amount. "And who's to say that maybe all of Jones' 57 unpaved miles need to be paved."

•Are state and local officials paving the most heavily traveled roads? Newlin says there is a "spirit of cooperation" between DOT and county officials with DOT obliging the wishes of the local powers. Newlin doesn't ask the obvious question: Are the county commissioners paving the

To the editor:

Your recent editorial regarding current interest rates hit the nail right on the head. I couldn't agree with you more.

There is a whole new world out there. People waiting for interest rates to return to the "old" lower levels before starting a project will be left behind.

Our economy will simply adjust upward so we can afford the current rates. We did this for gasoline and utility rates, among many others, for example. There is no other way.

One thing your editorial failed to mention is the current high returns being paid to savers. For many, many years, the savers in our country were paid very low rates of interest for the use of their money, and there were also few savings plans for them. Now the saver is being well rewarded for his investment and there are many savings and investment plans available to him. The current advantage to the saver will impact our economy in a very positive way for many years to come.

Strength For Today

A DOUBLE LIFE
Sometimes we hear the sinister whisper, "He's leading a double life!" The statement implies deception, often immorality.

Yet we all lead double, and indeed multiple lives. You are one person when working at your job. At home you are another person, fulfilling a role in the family. Perhaps you sit in the front pew in church and sing loudly, and at the nineteenth hole tell questionable stories over the bar.

But you cannot be all

Theory Facing Trouble

WASHINGTON — With his speech last week to Catholic educators in Chicago, President Reagan has reopened debate on the perennial issue of tuition tax credits for the parents of children in private schools. My guess is that, despite the president's support, the issue is a dead horse. Let us beat it anyway.

Mr. Reagan's proposal is to grant a credit against personal income taxes of $100 per child in a private elementary or secondary school. This credit would increase to a maximum of $300 in 1984, and to a final level of $500 in 1985. Families with incomes of more than $50,000 would receive smaller credits; families with incomes above $70,000 would receive none. The cost to the Treasury is variously estimated at $100 million the first year, rising to $2.5 billion in future years.

The idea is sound in theory. We live in a free society, but within that free society education is compulsory. This being so, it always has seemed to me that government should act evenhandedly to accord parents some degree of choice in the education of their children. The state's sole interest should be in the child's education — not in the child's public education, but in the child's education, period.

It ought to be immaterial, or so it seems to me, whether this education is obtained in a public school, a church-sponsored school, a military academy, a school emphasizing vocational training, or a private non-sectarian school that concentrates on Latin, Greek and English grammar. The token credits proposed by Mr. Reagan would not approach the per pupil costs of maintaining a child in a public school, but they would inject a small element of fairness into a situation that is now plainly unfair.

Yet the theory runs into trouble once we attempt to write it into legislative form. I have no First Amendment, church-and-state problems with a tax credit. The power vested in Congress to levy a tax on incomes necessarily embraces the power to say how that tax shall be imposed. My reservations go in another direction entirely.

Mr. Reagan is proposing, in effect, one more open-ended entitlement program. The principal evils of such programs are two in number: They necessarily require federal controls, and their costs have a way of getting completely out of hand. Witness educational grants, food stamps, Medicaid and the like.

The president mentioned only a single requirement for his plan of tax credits. No benefit would be available for a parent whose child attends a private school practicing racial discrimination. Without such a provision, his bill would get nowhere. But we may be certain that other standards of eligibility would follow as the night the day. What of the basic curriculum? What of academic accreditation? What of teacher certification?

These worrisome questions arose in 1978, when Congress last gave serious consideration to a tuition tax credit bill. Catholic spokesmen raised no great objection to rules and regulations in these areas, but spokesmen for some of the estimated 4,000 "fundamentalist" schools wanted no part of them.

In any event, it is highly unlikely that the administration's proposal will survive the hazardous course it faces on Capitol Hill. With sustained and vigorous arm-twisting, 51 votes for it might be mustered in the Senate, but prospects in the House are bleak. At a time when "entitlements" are being whacked on every hand, it will be difficult to sell a new one. When the clamor is to reduce the recurring federal deficits, the prospect of another billion dollars of red ink will have small appeal.

Much will depend on the weight Mr. Reagan chooses to put behind his plan. During his 1980 campaign, he promised to do "all that I can to see

Tugging For GOP 'Soul'

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Ronald Reagan's staid struggle with Sen. Robert Packwood for the soul of the Republican Party has escalated with an appeal by Reagan kitchen cabinet member Joseph Coors to withhold funds for the Senate Republican Campaign Committee while Packwood remains chairman.

Coors, the conservative, activist brewer from Golden, Colo., on April 15 sent letters to some 2,500 Republican money-givers asserting, "I cannot and will not support" the Packwood-led committee, beginning with its May 4 fundraising dinner in Washington. Coors urged the money men to join him in a petition to Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker saying, "we must withhold financial support" from the Senate committee until Packwood is gone.

But having failed to resolve the problems his good friend Bob Packwood has with the president, Baker will scarcely accept Coors' invitation "to join us in the effort to remove Sen. Packwood." Centrist Baker, a professional smoother-over, could not talk Coors out of sending his letter. He is, therefore, caught in a crossfire over the Republican future that imperils the Republican present.

More than personalities are at stake. In opposition to Reagan, Packwood is pro-ERA, pro-abortion rights, anti-tax cut, and favors less military spending and more arms control. He privately charts a base for his party that is shifted well to the left and embraces the constituency of John Anderson's independent presidential campaign. As a diehard supporter of Israel and foe of Reagan's AWACS deal, he has sought Jewish money to reinforce the normal Republican financial base.

In his letter to contributors, Coors accuses Packwood's campaign chairmanship of giving "special advantage to liberal candidates far to the left of the mainstream of our party" (specifically opposing 1978 primary bids of Reaganite senators Roger Jepsen in Iowa and Gordon Humphrey in New Hampshire). Currently, the committee's newsletter describes liberal maverick Sen. Lowell Weicker, running full tilt against Reaganism, as the "only hope of saving" the Republican seat in Connecticut; Prescott Bush, the vice president's older brother running on a pro-Reagan platform, is dismissed as just another challenger.

Nevertheless, Packwood would have been tolerated had it not been for his March 1 interview with The Associated Press describing the president as a senile racist. The White House deferred to Majority Leader Baker in not demanding Packwood's scalp, letting Baker handle it. That guaranteed more rather than less divisiveness as the 1982 campaign approached.

White House political aide Ed Rollins, determined that no Republican should be able to savage the president with impunity, protested that a Senate campaign committee fund-raising letter signed by Ronald Reagan never had been approved. He demanded that none of the remaining copies (some 2 million, according to Packwood's staff) be mailed.

At a March 30 meeting in Packwood's office, Rollins asserted that the problem is the wording of the letter ("I cannot carry this burden alone. I am only one man"), not Packwood's past criticism. The senator responded by calling Rollins "a god-damned liar."

Within the next two weeks, Packwood spread the word that the White House decision would cost the campaign committee some $2 million and Republican senators would henceforth be deprived of funds for mailing, television and the like. "You can thank Ed Rollins for this," a Packwood aide told distraught Senate Republicans.

Both damage estimates and counteroffensive moves by escalated April 15 when Craig Smith, Packwood's top political aide, told senatorial assistants that scrapping the Reagan letter would cost $30 million in campaign funds (a scarcely credible estimate). The game of political chicken between two giant "egos" could cost Republicans control of the Senate, said Smith, for which "the White House should be held accountable."

But out in Golden, Colo., Joe Coors had decided to move. On April 14, he telephoned the majority leader as a matter of courtesy to reveal his intentions. Baker's ties to Packwood are long and firm, dating back to Packwood's key role in Baker's upset victory for the floor leadership in 1977. So, Baker pleaded with Coors to hold off, arguing that it was too close to election day to change chairmen. Coors delayed for one day, then mailed the letter April 15.

His petition for Packwood's replacement so far has been signed by six major money men plus Rollins' predecessor at the White House, Lyn Nofziger, who thought Packwood should have been dropped six weeks ago. In seeking other signatures, Coors argues the senator has "seriously injured President Reagan and impaired the president's ability to implement Pat policies which advance our common goal."

Packwood has showed no sign of retreat. Addressing the Portland Kiwanis Club April 12, he attacked both the domestic and foreign policies of the president. At Astoria, Ore., April 15, he said Reagan has "removed the glue that held everyone together in the Republican Party." Such verbiage fortified the claim that "Sen. Packwood's statements go beyond mere debate."

'Warfare' Around The Corner

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) —

Warfare will return to the labor-management scene as soon as the economy turns around, says Professor Eugene Jennings. "To think that it won't," he contends, "is just wishful thinking."

The professor, who knows a bit about the subject, at least from the management side, thus takes issue with those who see union give-ups as the beginning of a more reasonable era in labor-management relations.

He does so with considerable conviction. Merely to survive, he argues, "unions must return to an ideological rather than economic stance." He foresees lessened efforts to accommodate to corporate financial statements and more old-fashioned calls for social justice.

This view is at odds with present practices, in which unions forgo raises and give up benefits in order to help companies survive in markets shrunk by recession and made tougher by foreign competition.

But, says Jennings, adviser to heads of major companies and corporate boards, unions in the future can maintain power only by being more aggressive, and many companies can survive only by substituting capital for labor. In that setting, he says, are the ingredients of conflict.

The forces already are in motion. Increasingly, he observes, "boards are taking back from management the almost total freedom management had in handling labor negotiations."

That freedom was given implicitly because of fears about shutdowns, he explains. "Management could do almost anything reasonable to avoid a strike. And the reverse also was true: So long as a costly strike was averted, anything was a reasonable settlement."

Now, says Jennings, professor of business administration at Michigan State University, boards fear that the cost of avoiding strikes could over time be too damaging to the corporation. And so the constraints.

Labor, meanwhile, is split over the issue of give-ups and, Jennings believes, "will have to prove itself by confrontation tactics." Young, once indifferent union members are turning aggressive, he says.

In his estimation, "this adds up to warfare, and probably even some violence." A big issue, he believes, will be management's effort to lessen its dependence on labor by spending heavily on robots.

Some background: In the past, Jennings explains, management willingly paid for work force reliability, for the assurance that the work force would be on the job every day with little absenteeism and idleness.

"But the reliability of the work force broke down," he argues, and he says it compelled management to lessen its dependence on labor.

He agrees that labor and management are cooperating on saving jobs in the now depressed economy. But, he contends, when the economy grows again labor still will be fighting for jobs while management will be relying more on capital — robots, for example — and less on labor.

Another difficult area might involve the quality of work life. Such programs seem to work best in non-union companies, where it is said they improve not just the work environment but productivity too. Jennings doubts the programs "will mesh with an aggressive labor force."

No matter what stance labor takes, the professor feels it will be faced with problems. If it acquiesces, automation and robots will come into factories; resist, and it will prove the need for them, he says.

Illustrating management's determination, he said, was a remark made by a director a week or so ago. "If we've learned one thing," Jennings quotes the man as saying, "it's to get out of the labor business."

Census Data Reflects Changing Face Of America

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans have a new self-portrait, and it's not a picture of "Ozzie and Harriet" or "Archie Bunker."

Asians are enjoying larger incomes than whites in the United States and 10 percent of the people in this country are speaking a language other than English in their homes. One of every eight Americans is poor.

The new self-portrait, painted in 1980 and unveiled by the Census Bureau Monday, shows that America is more a melting pot than ever. The report was based on long-form Census returns from one in five Americans.

The study contains a mass of statistics, some new and others confirming trends previously reported.

Of the 23 million Americans talking a language other than English in their homes, 48 percent are speaking Spanish, the report said.

Asians, according to the 1980 census, had a median family income in the United States of $22,075 a year. The median family income for whites was $20,840. Hispanic families had a median income of $14,711 and blacks had a median income of $12,618.

The median household income for the country as a whole in 1979 was $16,830, up 98.3 percent from 1969.

The percentage of people living in poverty declined from 13.7 percent to 12.5 percent during the decade ending 1980, with the largest decline in the South.

"A high percentage of people in poverty are women raising children," said Census Director Bruce Chapman. "Poverty seems to attach itself to people trying to raise children alone."

Chapman documented the widely reported growth in the number of women in the work force, commenting that the way for a family to succeed economically is for the woman to work.

Between 1970 and 1980, the number of working women jumped 58 percent, while men in the work force increased by 42 percent, he said.

"This is a milestone report," Chapman said. "What it is, is a snapshot of the country."

Other major findings included:

—Americans using public transportation to get to work declined to 6.3 percent in 1980, down from 8.9 percent a decade earlier.

—For the first time more than half — 66.3 percent — of all persons aged 25 and over have completed four years of high school.

—About 17 percent of Americans have completed four years of college, up from 11 percent in 1970.

—The use of central air conditioning increased 225 percent between 1970 and 1980.

—There are now 5.8 million one-parent families, or 19.1 percent of all families with children. That's up from 12.3 percent in 1970.

Non-family households, that is people living alone or with non-relatives, increased 71.9 percent during the decade and now constitute more than one-fourth — 26.7 percent — of all households. At the same time, households made up of families increased 15.7 percent.

Because of the large numbers of elderly living by themselves and young people moving out on their own, nearly 90 percent of non-family households consisted of one person living alone, Chapman said.

He cited the public transportation figures and the fact that 65 percent of Americans still drive to work alone to comment: "People will do what they want ... they tend to defy the prescriptions of the government and the media."

Housing costs more than doubled during the decade. For homeowners with mortgages, the monthly cost rose from $172 to $365. For owners without mortgages, the average monthly cost increased from $60 to $129. Renters saw their monthly housing costs rise from $108 in 1970 to $243 in 1980.

Mobile home use has jumped remarkably since 1960, when there were only 700,000 of them. By 1970, that figure had climbed to 2.1 million, and 10 years later it stood at 3.8 million.

Investment In Trees Boosted

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C.

(AP) — Investors planning a retirement account should put their money where it will grow — such as a reforestation project, the North Carolina Extension Service says.

William Gardner, an extension service specialist, says people with about 100 acres willing to put in about 30 years of work can reap a profit of $1.6 million, with tax breaks to boot.

Gardner, capitalizing on recent bank advertisements, calls his plan a "Forestry Retirement Account."

He said that while banks advertise that an investment of $2,000 a year in an Individual Retirement Account can earn up to $1.2 million in 30 years, a one-time investment of $15,000 can earn up to $1.6 million in the same period.

He said his predictions are based on the current rates of annual price increases for timber, which have been running about 2 percent ahead of the national inflation rate. That amounted to about 13 percent annually from 1970 to 1980.

Rick Hamilton, another extension forestry specialist, said the investment also has some risk — such as forest fires, which consumed one in every 400 acres of woodland last year in North Carolina.

Pine beetles and other insects and diseases are also a risk, he said.

Gardner said new tax laws and other incentives make it lucrative for investors to consider forest management.

Journey Scared New Elephant

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) —

Reid Park Zoo's new elephant has arrived after a cross-country trip, but curator Ivo Poglayen said Monday she was "scared to death" and won't be placed on public display until later in the week.

Poglayen said the 2½-year-old African elephant, unnamed as yet, arrived Sunday with a few minor ailments but was generally in excellent health.

The city bought her from a zoo in Asheboro, N.C., to replace "Sabu," a bull elephant who had to be destroyed last year because of medical problems.

The new arrival will share space with Connie, a female Indian elephant on display here for several years.

A contest is under way to name the new elephant.

tax breaks:

Income from a timber sale is no longer considered ordinary income but a capital gain and only 40 percent is taxable. An amendment effective last June limits the amount that can be taxed to no more than 50 percent of that 40 percent, the extension service said.

In addition, costs involved in managing the timber stand and sale expenses are deductible.

Since 1979, a tax credit has been allowed for investment in reforestation, such as the cost of preparing the site and replanting trees.

Hamilton said prices for Southern pine have increased from $1.83 per 1,000 board feet in 1900 to $135 in 1980.

He said Western timber supplies are diminishing and major wood products companies are already expanding operations in the South.

Hamilton said that about 67 percent of the woodlands nationally are privately owned, with 22 percent government-owned and the rest industry-owned.

In North Carolina, about 80 percent of the woodlands are privately owned, mostly by small landowners, he said.

HAIL DARWIN

PEKING (AP) — A thousand Chinese scientists commemorated the 100th anniversary of the death of Charles Darwin. One of the speeches at the ceremony called the British naturalist's theory of evolution "synonymous with mankind's progress and social development."

What's In A Name?

Africa's 51st nation, Zimbabwe, is celebrating its second anniversary this week. Formerly this metal-rich country was called Rhodesia, after Cecil Rhodes, its British conqueror of the 1890s. Its capital was named after Lord Salisbury, the pro-colonial British Prime Minister of the time, and another major city after the English Queen, Victoria. Now Zimbabwe is under the control of its African majority, which comprises 97 percent of the population. As part of the independence celebrations and in keeping with the new African mood, Zimbabwe is renaming these two cities. Just to keep geographers on their toes, Fort Victoria will be Nyanda, and from now on the capital will be Harare instead of Salisbury.

DO YOU KNOW — Who is the current Prime Minister of Zimbabwe?

MONDAY'S ANSWER — Bill Rodgers won the Boston Marathon in 1975, 1978, 1979 and 1980.

Now City Of Guinea Pigs

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Because marketing experts think Charlotte reflects national demographics and buying habits, residents are increasingly serving as guinea pigs for new national products, manufacturers say.

The New York Times last week placed Charlotte on a list of 15 most frequently used locales for test marketing new products and advertising campaigns.

A recent issue of Sales and Market Management, a New York-published trade magazine, also listed the city on several of the industry's lists of popular test markets.

National marketers say they consider Charlotte a perfect location for their studies because it reflects national demographics and buying habits and offers advertisers a well-defined market served by strong print and broadcast media.

"We wanted the most normal environment so that it doesn't cause people to realize they are being used as guinea pigs," said Joe Finnigan, a spokesman for Anheuser-Bush Inc., which recently began testing its new Budweiser Light low-calorie beer in the Charlotte area.

McDonald's also used Charlotte to test methods for marketing the new McRib pork barbecue sandwich. McDonald's began advertising the product on Charlotte radio and television stations last month and running discount coupons in newspapers to test advertising strategies and consumer reactions before committing to a national campaign.

Finding out what products are being tested is difficult.

"They (the companies) don't want publicity on their new products," said Harlan Janes, vice president for drug, health and beauty aid marketing at A.C. Nielson, who says his firm handles testing for most national manufacturers. He declined to identify what products are now being tested.

New Astronauts Chosen For Shuttle 'Challenger'

By SHARON HERBAUGH
Associated Press Writer
SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The astronaut who will become America's first woman in space greeted the news with uncharacteristic excitement, while the first black to be chosen for a mission tackled a pile of paperwork to control his enthusiasm.

Dr. Sally K. Ride, 30, and Air Force Lt. Col. Guion S. Bluford Jr., 39, were assigned Tuesday as mission specialists on the second and third flights of the space shuttle Challenger, both in 1983.

There will be two more missions on the Columbia before the Challenger begins operations.

Miss Ride, an astrophysicist, will fly with three male military officers on the mission.

Her voyage is scheduled to blast off one year from today — nearly two decades after Soviet cosmonaut Valentina Tereshkova circled the Earth for four days in 1963 as the first and only woman ever to fly in space.

The publicity is nothing new for Miss Ride, an Encino, Calif., native who was one of six women originally tapped by NASA.

She served as the first female capsule communicator during the Columbia's second and third flights, relaying orders from Mission Control to astronauts testing the spacecraft's robot arm.

But the cool, calm and reserved voice of the first woman cap-com was bursting with excitement when she told her mother she had been selected to ride aboard the 38th U.S. space mission.

"Sally is normally very cool, very low-key but when she called to tell me the news she was bordering on breathlessness," said Joyce Ride, her mother.

Bluford, who was assigned to the Challenger's three-day mission set for July 4, 1983, said he returned to his office and a stack of work.

"The four of us assigned to the STS-8 were called in together and told the news. But they told us that we couldn't tell anyone until it was officially announced. So I went back to my office and finished some paperwork," said Bluford, who is married and the father of two teenage boys.

Both Miss Ride and Bluford were among 35 candidates picked in 1978.

Miss Ride, a Stanford graduate, said she applied as a lark.

"Being an astronaut was never a life-long dream," Miss Ride said in a recent interview. "There was an advertisement in the Stanford newspaper that NASA was accepting applications. I of a lifetime," said the Penn State graduate who flew 144 combat missions in Vietnam.

Shortly after he was selected, Bluford said it might be better to be the second or third black in space "because then you can enjoy the experience a little more."

Now, he said, "I've been in the limelight once before and I can handle it."

The Challenger will make its first flight next January with Paul J. Weitz as commander, Air Force Col. Karol J. Bobko as pilot, and Donald H. Peterson and Dr. Story Musgrave as mission specialists.

Commanding the second mission will be Navy Capt. Robert Crippen, who flew the Columbia's maiden flight a year ago. The pilot will be Navy Capt. Frederick H. Hauck, Air Force Lt. Col. John M. Fabian and Miss Ride will be the mission specialists, working with three satellites that will be placed in orbit from the ship's cargo bay.

On the Challenger's third voyage, Bluford and Navy Lt. Cmdr. Dale A. Gardner will work with two communications satellites. Navy Capt. Richard Truly, a veteran of Columbia's second flight, will command the mission, and the pilot will be Navy Cmdr. Daniel C. Brandenstein.

NASA also named four of the six astronauts for the fourth mission, tentatively set for September 1983.

John W. Young, a veteran of five space flights, will be the commander of the seven-day mission. The pilot will be Air Force Maj. Brewster Shaw Jr., and the two mission specialists will be astronauts Owen K. Garriott and Robert A. Parker.

thought, 'Why not.'"

For Philadelphia-born Bluford, one of four blacks in the corps, becoming an astronaut was "more of an evolutionary thing."

"It was something that evolved through my interest in aviation. That interest has become the ultimate chance

Two Collisions Here Monday

An estimated $3,400 property damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Monday.

Heaviest damage, investigators said, resulted from a 9:28 p.m. mishap at the intersection of First and Jarvis streets, involving a car driven by Ilana Naomi Mallenbaum of 1303 E. Fifth St. and a parked car owned by Carol Suzanne Watson of Charlotte.

Officers estimated damage at $1,500 to each car. Police said Ms. Mallenbaum was injured in the collision.

Cars driven by Claudia Stewart Coulter of 117 Robin Road and Jerry Wayne Thornton of 505 E. Fifth St. collided about 4:10 p.m. on Elm Street, 50 feet south of the Brookgreen Road intersection, causing an estimated $200 damage to each of the two cars.

Seay Trial Going On In New Bern

NEW BERN — The trial of Earl Bailey Seay of Greenville, who was charged with the Feb. 12 armed robbery of a James City bank, continued today in Craven County Superior Court.

Seay, 41, entered an innocent plea Monday prior to the start of his trial and testimony was heard Monday afternoon from bank tellers of the James City branch of First Citizens Bank and from local police.

Seay took the witness stand today and told the court of financial problems that he said started in 1978. Seay testified that for seven months prior to Feb. 12 he had been working for an insurance company and had previously represented the Dale Carnegie program in Greenville.

The defendant testified that when he left the Carnegie program he was "so deep in debt that I didn't think I would ever get out." He said that after six months' employment with the insurance firm the company took him off salary and placed him on a commission basis because his production dropped.

Seay told the court that, after losing a policy carrying a premium of $5,000 per year, he soured on the insurance company and quit. He said that he had been scheduled to start work with another company on a partnership basis on Feb. 15.

Greenery For Vocational Ctr.

The Make America Better Committee of Pitt County and the Greenville-Pitt County Board of Realtors, in conjunction with the observation of Private Property Week in Greenville, placed potted greenery in the Eastern Carolina Vocational Center today in a program to make the center more attractive.

Two local realtors, Ann Duffus of Duffus Realty and Blanche Forbes of Century 21 B. Forbes, were to transport and put into place 65 to 70 large potted green plants at various places within the center.

"The plants have been contributed by Sunshine Gardens, Wachovia Mortgage and Wachovia Bank, Planters Bank and North Carolina National Bank," Ms. Duffus said.

"Our feeling is that these plants will give employees and students at the center a nice touch of green that will make the area more attractive and enjoyable," Ms. Duffus added.

District Event On Wednesday

The Northeastern District Extension Homemakers Association will hold its annual District Day in Greenville Wednesday.

The keynote speaker will be Vicki Riddle of Durham, a professional color and style analyst. She will discuss "Color and You." Catherine Turner, association state president, and Dr. Martha Johnson, specialist at N.C. State University, also will attend the 10 a.m. meeting at the Greenville Moose Lodge.

Seventeen counties are included in the Northeastern District. Rubelle Goin of Pitt County is district president.

Ground Zero...

Doctors' Park just beyond Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

In the third circle, from three to five miles out, 5 percent of the people would be killed; 45 percent injured and 50 percent unhurt, but susceptible to radiation damage. Some commercial buildings of average construction and a few residences would survive.

Beyond five miles, light damage would occur to commercial buildings up to seven miles out and moderate damage to small residences up to seven miles. Ground Zero spokesmen said 25 percent of the people up to seven miles out would be injured and unprotected people up to 12 miles from ground zero would receive second- and third-degree burns.

Winds would carry fallout a good distance from Greenville, if Greenville were attacked. And Greenville would, of course, feel the effects of bombings of nearby military installations and other cities.

Joyce, a member of the East Carolina University Department of Physics faculty, said the Ground Zero committee "does not advocate any particular plan of nuclear disarmament or cutback. We have as our aim educating the people of this area about the horror of nuclear war in the hopes that this knowledge will inspire and enable them to prevail upon our leaders to take the actions that must be taken to prevent this kind of disaster."

Larry Martin, a graduate student in the ECU School of Allied Health, planned the Ground Zero tour, Joyce pointed out.

Damage Done By Intruders

Greenville police today were investigating an early morning break-in at Greenville Heating and Air Conditioning at 308 Spruce St.

Chief Glenn Cannon said officers on patrol heard an alarm coming from the building at 2:56 a.m. Investigating, they found entrance to the business was gained through a skylight, and the intruders apparently left the building by breaking glass from a front door.

Although nothing was reported missing, Cannon said an estimated $700 damage was caused.

roads in greatest need, or the roads of their greatest friends.

"The state also faces a bridge crisis. Many of the 11,000 bridges on the secondary road system need repair. "Bridges are the weak link and limiting factors on a road network; bridge capacity can restrict weight limits for an entire section of road," Newlin wrote in a memo to a legislative committee studying the subject. Should the legislature allocate a portion of these secondary road funds to fix the state's bridges?

It's unlikely that the committee will make any recommendation in this area at the June short session. The committee plans to meet during six months of 1982, however, and to make further recommendations to the 1983 session. If they get into this area, the competing interests involved could make it one of next year's hottest issues.

that it is passed and signed into law," but events have gravely circumscribed his "all that I can." Certainly he can do little about tuition tax credits until the budgetary outlook for 1983 is much clearer than it is now, and with a full schedule of more pressing foreign and domestic affairs, it is hard to imagine that legislative leaders will invite prolonged debate over so emotional and controversial an issue.

The whole proposition strikes me as a nice idea, but — On Capitol Hill, such "buts" tend usually to prevail.

Liddy, O'Leary Speak At ECU

A debate featuring G. Gordon Liddy, the 1970s iron man of Watergate, and Dr. Timothy Leary, former Harvard Professor and guru of the 1960's drug culture, will take place at 8 p.m. tonight in Hendrix Theater, Mendenhall Student Center.

The topic of their debate will be "The Power of the State," defended by Liddy versus "The Freedom of the Individual" defended by Leary.

Liddy, the man who directed the 1972 Watergate break-in of the Democratic National Headquarters and then refused to disclose much about it, now makes a living talking about his role in the scandal. After being disbarred and spending four and one-half years in federal prison, Liddy turned to writing and lecturing. Historian Theodore S. White calls Liddy "a thoroughly dangerous man."

Leary, founder and director of the Psychedelic Research Project, will oppose Liddy in defense of the rights of the individual. While serving in the capacity of Director of Psychology Research for the Kaiser Foundation, Leary became a leader of the humanistic psychology movement. He left the Kaiser Foundation for a position at Harvard; however, his drug related research subsequently forced him to leave Harvard.

Tickets are priced at $5 and will be available at the door.

'Eve' Will Be Pitt Visitor On Thursday

The Eve of "Three Faces of Eve," Chris Costner Sizemore, will be in Pitt County Thursday to promote good mental health.

Mrs. Sizemore has had a book written and a movie filmed about her experience of three different personalities. She subsequently went on to experience 19 more "persons within her body" and her struggle for the mental health she feels she now enjoys was 49 years in length, Mental Health Association in Pitt County executive director Brenda Gray says.

Mrs. Sizemore has since written two books to share the story she feels was not truly told by the doctor who wrote "Three Faces." One is called "I'm Eve," and a second is "The Final Face of Eve." She and Dr. Elen Sain

"The Attic Child Series," nationally.

Mrs. Sizemore will meet the public at the Farmville Public Library at 9:30 a.m., at the Greenville Parks and Recreation Building at 2000 Cedar Lane at noon and in the Belk Allied Health Building at 7:30 p.m.

Her visit to Pitt County is sponsored by the Mental Health Association in Pitt County, the Pitt County Mental Health Center, the East Carolina University Department of Psychology and School of Allied Health and Social Professions, and the department of human services of Pitt Community College.

Being here Thursday will be a return visit for Mrs. Sizemore. She was here three years ago, shortly after her book, "I'm Eve," twice on the national best-seller list, was released.

GIVES TIME, GETS INVOLVED... Retired teacher Mrs. Bernie Fowler, above, says she loves teaching and can't stay out of the classroom. That's why at 83 she's a community schools volun-

Retired Teacher Giving Her Time To Students

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

AYDEN — At 83, Mrs. Bernie Fowler still loves teaching, and does it every day. Her pupils are eager; she reaches them as effortlessly as she'd touch a leaf.

She is a volunteer at Ayden Elementary and Ayden Middle schools, giving several hours of her time a week to youngsters there.

"If you really love teaching, you can't stay out of the classroom," she said. "I guess that's why I'm a volunteer."

Mrs. Fowler visits first grade classes at the elementary school to teach creative writing and tell stories. She also works with, in her words, "two special little boys who need me" at the middle school.

A native of Pitt County, she taught first grade for many years in the public schools in Mount Airy, then retired in 1969 to her home here.

"My daughter lives here and I asked if there was a volunteer program and she said they (Pitt County Community Schools) were starting one that year, so I got involved and have been a volunteer in the schools ever since," she explained. The Community Schools volunteer program began in 1978.

As a volunteer, Mrs. Fowler helps her first-graders compose stories — they dictate and she writes, on a large tablet, what they tell her. Then she and the class read the stories aloud together.

At the middle school, she and her two students "just do fun things" according to the retired teacher. "We take the mini-page from the paper," she added, "and work puzzles and jokes — anything to make them think."

She feels, she says, she gives students something they couldn't get otherwise. "One of the most important things is to make children think and this creative writing does that," said Mrs. Fowler.

"To be able to think and create is one of the greatest things in the world, and they create their own stories. I write exactly what they tell me."

Not only do the students benefit from her presence in the classroom, said the retired teacher, but she benefits too. "There are lots of compensations," she noted. "For example, the children see me at the store and say 'hey Mrs. Fowler, hello Mrs. Fowler!' and that's wonderful. I feel as though I'm a bigger part of the community since I've been volunteering."

"It's a two-way thing to me," she said. "They get, I give; I get, they give."

IN TODAY'S UNCERTAIN TIMES, PERDUE ANNOUNCES SOMETHING YOU CAN BE SURE OF...

$21,175.

With the population rising and the per capita consumption of poultry increasing, the future keeps getting brighter for Perdue's broiler producers. With prices increasing each day it seems there's only bad news. But Perdue keeps coming up with good news — like our New House Guarantee. Now you can earn a guaranteed $21,175.00 per year, the highest guarantee available in North Carolina.

Because of Perdue's consistent quality, the market for our product is more than our supply. To keep up with the demand, we need 150 more good producers in your area now!

If you're interested in a good dependable extra income, take a look at the six points below. We think you'll agree; Perdue broiler houses are one of the best agricultural investments you can make.

- Perdue has been in the poultry business for 62 years and is the fourth largest poultry company in the country and chickens are our only business.

- There are nearly 3,000 Perdue broiler houses in operation on the Delmarva peninsula and over 900 in North Carolina. You will be joining other successful farmers that are improving their farm income with poultry.
- Because of Perdue's consistent quality, the market for Perdue chickens in the Northeast is growing faster than we can grow chickens. Five major retailers are now wanting Perdue chickens but we cannot supply them. Even though we process over 4 million chickens each week we can sell 15% more chickens than we can produce.
- There is no other agricultural investment that offers you a guaranteed income on a weather-proof crop that has never failed to make money.
- Perdue absorbs fluctuations in the grain and poultry markets and these markets do not affect the producer's paycheck.
- As a broiler producer, Perdue will guarantee you a gross annual income of $21,175.00 for the first six years for each 500 foot house (based on 5.5 flocks each year). The market for Perdue broilers in the Northeast is growing faster than we can grow chickens. So if you're interested in a sound investment, we're interested in you.

Selecting Jury In Gardner Case

Ten jurors had been seated by 11:30 a.m. today in the trial of Ayden policeman Keith R. Gardner, who was charged with receiving embezzled property valued at $1,490 from Clark's Department Store in Greenville where he worked part time as a security guard.

Another defendant, former Clark's manager Abraham Pruett of Winterville, pleaded guilty March 31 in Superior Court to embezzlement of the fans and is expected to testify for the state in the Gardner trial.

Both Gardner and Pruett were charged in December, following an investigation by the loss prevention division of Cook United Inc., the parent company of Clark's.

Amend Budget

Members of the Greenville Board of Education Monday night approved a stepped-up action to authorize an immediate budget amendment to transfer $42,500 from current expense funds to the capital outlay budget in order to move ahead with construction plans for a vocational building at Rose High.

Superintendent Delma Blinson told the board Pitt County Commissioners have agreed to the board's request for additional county funding provided the city school board would agree to transfer the $42,500, which represents half the estimated $85,000 cost of the building.

The proposed building will house the auto mechanics course which is now operated in a rental structure costing $8,000 annually as well as a new course in graphic arts.

Victor Crowned

Alberto Salazar is crowned with a laurel wreath by Boston's Mayor Kevin White after winning the 86th annual Boston Marathon in 2:08.51, a new record.

Father Worries About Salazar

BOSTON (AP) — Jose Salazar fretted as he looked at his son, Alberto, lying on a cot in a garage where weary runners gathered following the grueling Boston Marathon.

Mass. in 1978. But then his physical reaction was the direct opposite of his condition after Monday's marathon, in which he beat Beardsley by only two seconds.

The elder Salazar, who brought his family to the United States 21 years ago from Cuba, said his son's problem in the marathon was caused by water and the warm weather conditions, as the temperature soared into the 60s.

But Salazar did not slack off, and ran just behind the pacesetter Beardsley until summoning up a burst of energy with about a half-mile remaining.

Boston Winner Eyeing Double In Olympics

BOSTON (AP) — He has the speed for 10,000 meters and the endurance for the marathon. Now Alberto Salazar knows he can prepare for both the same way.

He won the Boston Marathon Monday in 2 hours, 8 minutes, 51 seconds, the fourth fastest marathon in history. Nine days earlier, he was second in a 10,000-meter race in Eugene, Ore.

At the 1984 Olympics in Los Angeles, the races are expected to be run four days apart, and America's 23-year-old distance king is eyeing both.

Salazar said his victory "shows me that I can run a very fast 10,000 and a very fast marathon off similar training. I thought it would require much different training, but it didn't."

But the lesson had its price. Running under sunny skies with temperatures in the 60s and low humidity, Salazar became severely dehydrated.

Intravenous solutions were hooked up to both arms, and within 43 minutes, his temperature was up to 97.

"I was sure I was going to be all right," Salazar said. "My temperature was going up gradually. It was just a matter of time. But I wished it had happened sooner because of the pain."

Charlotte Teske, of Darmstadt, West Germany, captured the women's competition in 2:29.33. Jacqueline Gareau of Canada, the 1980 Boston winner, was second in 2:36.09.

Teske's time was the seventh fastest women's marathon, but far from the world record of 2:25.28 set by Allison Roe of New Zealand at the New York City Marathon last October.

Salazar, victorious in the other two marathons he has run, was a bit closer to his world record of 2:08.13, also set in New York last October. He eclipsed the course record of 2:09.26 set by Japan's Toshihiko Seko last year.

Beardsley, who led much of the race, gave Salazar a battle. The two-second margin equalled the previous closest marathon in 1978 when Bill Rodgers beat Jeff Wells.

He opened a gap of about 15 yards and beat back a late charge that brought Beardsley to within a couple of strides.

Beardsley said he tried to surge on the downhill parts of the course, hoping to open a lead that could withstand Salazar's vaunted sprinting ability.

"I just fell short by a couple of steps, I guess," said the 26-year-old Beardsley, who ran the fifth quickest marathon and his fastest. "I knew we were running a fast time, but I didn't think those times were possible on a day like this that's so warm."

"I finished second in a lot of races and this time I thought it might happen again. But I just had to gut it out," said Salazar, who came to Wayland, Mass., from his native Cuba when he was two years old and now lives in Eugene.

"Thanks to Dick Beardsley for pulling me to such a fast time because I could never have run that fast if I had been leading."

It was only Salazar's third marathon and his first in Boston. He also won the past two New York City Marathons. John Lodwick of Eugene finished fourth here last year and moved up one place Monday with a time of 2:12.01.

Fourth place went to Bill Rodgers, a four-time Boston winner, in 2:12.38.

"It was my fastest marathon of the year," said Rodgers, of nearby Sherborn. "I wanted a little bit faster but I died in the end."

"There was no cloud cover. It was the kind of day where you had to take water."

Salazar did that, but it intensified a pain in his side. But a lack of water can lead to dehydration. "I was in a dilemma," he said.

"I'd say it's probably the hardest effort I've ever put in."

In the late stages, Beardsley was brushed by a bus, had to swing wide of a police motorcycle and put up with a tightened hamstring that relaxed when he stepped in a pothole.

But he didn't blame his second-place finish on that. Kjell-erik Stahl was fifth, followed by Dennis Rinde, Terry Baker, Rick Callison, Robert Wallace and Ben Morturi.

The race began in Hopkinton, west of Boston, and ended at the Prudential Insurance Co. tower in the city.

The route probably will change next year, when the race is expected to be moved to a Sunday for national television coverage. Prudential has said it is ending its 16 years of sponsorship because of the Marathon's plans to seek numerous sponsors and pay prize money.

Warren Agee paced Ayden-Grifton with a 79, while Mark Davis had an 83, and Chuck Bollinger and Todd Venters each had 97's.

The win boosted the Farmville record to 15-3. The Jaguars return to action today in Wilson with a match against Greenville Rose and Wilson Fike.

Wilmington Slips Past East Carolina By 7-3

WILMINGTON — The University of North Carolina-Wilmington took advantage of three eighth-inning walks and an error to push over three insurance runs and gain a 7-4 baseball victory over East Carolina University last night.

The Pirates, who had an early 1-0 lead, fell behind in the fifth inning, 4-1, but then came back within one with a pair of runs in the seventh before Wilmington put the game away in the bottom of the eighth.

East Carolina struck early, pushing over a run in the top of the first. Mike Sorrell sliced a double down the right field line. He then moved up on an out and scored when Todd Hendley grounded out.

The Pirates then had threats in the second, third and sixth, but none of them paid off. In the second, Fran Fitzgerald singled and Jack Curlings reached on an error, but neither advances as three pop-ups ended the inning.

In the third, John Hallow reached on a one-out single and Hendley walked, but another pop-up and a fly ball ended that threat.

In the sixth, Hendley walked and took second on an infield out. Fitzgerald singled, putting runners at the corners, but a strikeout and a grounded again left the Pirates with nothing to show for their work.

Meanwhile, Wilmington came to life in the bottom of the fifth inning, pushing over four runs to take the lead. Don Stevenson singled to left, but was cut down at second on Tommy Phillips' grounder. Kelly O'Donnell walked and Tim Whitehead singled in Phillips. Paul Murr then followed with a triple, scoring both O'Donnell and Whitehead.

A passed ball then let Murr come across for the 4-1 lead.

The Pirates rallied for two more in the seventh cutting the lead back to 4-3. With one out, Robert Wells walked and Mike Sorrell was safe on an error. Both moved up on an infield out, and Hendley singled to drive in both of them and pull East Carolina back within striking distance.

But it was all for naught as the Seahawks came up with three in the eighth. Murr got things started with another triple, after one was out. Chris Cabbage walked, and that brought on reliever Bob Davidson, who walked both Clyde Kelly and John Slaughter, the latter forcing in a run.

Several times during the series of walks, East Carolina protested the calling of balls and strikes, but to no avail.

Roger Hudson followed with a grounder to first, but the relay home was thrown away, and both Cabbage and Holley scored on the play, giving the Seahawks their four-run cushion.

Sorrell and Fitzgerald each had two hits for the Pirates, while Murr's two triples left him the lone Seahawk with more than one.

The decision dropped the Pirates to 25-11 on the season, while Wilmington climbs to 24-13.

East Carolina has the next two days off before returning to action on Thursday night against N.C. Wesleyan in a 7 p.m. game at Harrington Field. Wesleyan, currently ranked second in the nation among Division III NCAA teams, is coached by former ECU aide Tony Guzzo.

Douglas To Carolina

Senior right-hander Gordon Douglas will apparently join Greenville Rose pitching teammate Roger Williams at the University of North Carolina next fall.

Williams earlier indicated he intends to sign with the Tar Heels, but has not yet returned his letter of intent, according to Rose High sources.

Douglas is 6-0 this season with an 0.55 earned run average. He's recorded 50 strikeouts in 38 innings of work. Douglas is hitting .286 with two home runs and 12 runs batted in.

Williams, who is 4-0 with a 1.80 ERA, has 51 strikeouts in 35 innings. He's hitting .450 with two homers and eight RBI's. He indicated prior to the start of the season that he would sign with the Tar Heels.

LIKES AGUIRRE PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Julius Erving of the Philadelphia 76ers, one of the greats of the National Basketball Association, thinks Rookie Mark Aguirre of the Dallas Mavericks is headed in the same direction.

"The most impressive thing about Aguirre is the way he works inside, mixing it up underneath and working the boards," Erving said.

Anderson Finds A Reason To Smile

By The Associated Press
The only thing Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson liked more than the sight of the ball going over the wall was the sight of it going over the plate. Kirk Gibson broke out of a 1-for-30 batting slump with a vengeance Monday night by pounding a two-run homer into the upper deck in right field, catapulting the Tigers to a 3-2 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

But as pleased as Anderson was over that blast, and Glenn Wilson's first major league homer in the seventh inning, he was even happier at the showing of pitcher Larry Pashnick. In his first major league start, the right-hander scattered eight hits over seven innings, including Jerry Martin's third-inning homer and sixth-inning RBI-single. Anderson said he was rewarding Pashnick with the No. 5 starting spot in the Tigers' pitching rotation.

"That was the best part of the game for me tonight - my pitching - because that's what's going to win it," Anderson said. "Pashnick knows what he's doing. He keeps the ball down, has a good move to first and works fast. "All his years pitching at Michigan State University were the equivalent of minor league training for him," Anderson added. "He's an experienced pitcher even though he's just a rookie."

Gibson took a dismal .083 batting average into the game, so he decided to get in some additional batting practice. But the pat on the back he got from Anderson did more for him than the extra swings.

"Sparky showed me something tonight," Gibson said after Anderson had given him the green light to swing away all four times he batted. "Actually, I didn't hit the ball all that well during the extra batting practice, either, but I told myself right then that if Sparky had that kind of confidence in me, I ought to have some in myself."

Gibson's game-winner, following an Enos Cabell single, came on a full-count pitch from Royals relief ace Dan Quisenberry.

"Quiz made several good pitches on him. Then he came right in the wheelhouse," said Royals Manager Dick Howser. "Quiz is the guy you want. That's a game situation...He's our guy. If he can't do it, we're probably going to get beat."

Blue Jays 5, Red Sox 4
Boston reliever Mark Clear put a pitch right in Barry Bonnell's wheelhouse and the Toronto outfielder planted in the screen above the Green Monster left-field wall to break a 4-4 eighth-inning tie.

"It was a fastball, right where I wanted it, on the inside part of the plate," Bonnell said of the homer. Two of the Blue Jays' other runs came on homers by Ernie Whitt and Lloyd Moseby.

Twins 5, A's 2
For eight innings, Oakland pitcher Rick Langford was virtually untouchable. Then he lost his touch - and the game.

"He's a good pitcher, a great pitcher. But it was our turn and we put almost all our hits together instead of spacing them out for nine innings," said Kent Hrbek, whose two-three-run double gave the Twins the game. Butch Wynegar, with a leadoff double in the third inning, had been Minnesota's only runner before John Castino singled to open the ninth.

Then Jim Eisenreich walked, Mickey Hatcher singled and Hrbek brought them all home with a hit that just eluded diving right fielder Tony Armas. Gary Gaetti's single sent Hrbek to third, Randy Johnson singled him home and Wynegar's single scored Gaetti.

"I just got a little too fine with my pitches, got behind a few batters and had to come in with pitches that were too good," said Langford.

Angels 3, Mariners 1
Mike Witt and relievers Luis Sanchez and Don Aase muffed the Mariners on seven hits while Bobby Grich doubled twice and scored two runs for California.

They broke a 1-1 tie in the fourth when shortstop Todd Cruz bobbled Tim Lili's two-out, bases-loaded grounder. Grich and Doug DeCinces doubled for a run in the second inning and in the eighth, Grich doubled and Lili singled him home. Witt's wild pitch in the first inning gave Seattle its only run.

Padre Bats Make Sweet Music For Dick Williams

By The Associated Press
Remember when National League pitchers would routinely hum the ball past San Diego's batters? These days, the Padres' hitters are tapping out music that's oh, so sweet to Manager Dick Williams' ears.

"Our bats have been singing for about a week," Williams said Monday night after they beat a tattoo to the tune of a club-record 24 hits in a 13-6 pounding of the San Francisco Giants. "We've been getting a lot of two-out base hits, but you've got to take what you can get when you get it," added Williams.

Without the Padres' hot bats, the NL West race might already be a mini-runaway, thanks to the unbeaten Atlanta Braves' record-tying 11-game winning streak. They go for No. 12 tonight at home against Cincinnati. The Braves own a four-game lead over the Padres, who have won six in a row.

Despite the awesome 24-hit offense (which still fell seven hits shy of the major league record set by the 1901 New York Giants), Juan Eichelberger still had to struggle all the way. He gave up 11 hits before becoming the first San Diego pitcher to go the distance this season.

"Hey, I'll take the win," he said with a smile. "but I'd like not to give up four home runs in a ballgame (by the Giants' Darrell Evans, Chili Davis, Jeff Leonard and Dave Bergman) ... We've got some offense without a doubt. All year long we're going to score four, five, six runs a game. If I can hold them to three runs, I can win."

Terry Kennedy, who spent three games on the bench last week because Williams didn't think he was aggressive enough at the plate, led the San Diego assault with four hits, three of them doubles, and four runs batted in.

Astros 6, Dodgers 4
Art Howe drove in three runs, two with a tie-breaking single in a four-run sixth inning, as Houston sent the Dodgers down their sixth consecutive loss.

Singles by Phil Garner and Jose Cruz chased Los Angeles Burt Hooton, Alan Ashby singled and Ray Knight doubled off Terry Forster, each driving in a run, then Howe greeted Alejandro Pena with his game-winning hit.

Phillies 2, Expos 0
Larry Christenson and Ed Farmer teamed for a three-hitter against Montreal as the Phillies snapped their three-game losing streak.

Philadelphia did all its scoring in the first inning against Scott Sanderson. Pete Rose tripled on the game's first pitch and scored on a one-out single by Gary Matthews, who stole second and scored on a single by Bo Diaz.

Bears Rip Indians

BEAR GRASS - Lawrence Watson hurled a two-hitter and had three hits to lead Bear Grass to an easy 11-0 victory over Chocowinity Monday in a Tobacco Belt Conference baseball game.

The win avenges an early-season loss to Chocowinity and leaves the Bears at 3-7 overall and 3-6 in the conference.

Watson struck out four and walked two en route to the win. Both Chocowinity hits - singles - came in the third inning.

Bear Grass struck for two runs in the first and scored at least one run in every inning but the sixth.

Bob Peele singled to open the first and scored on Watson's triple. Watson subsequently scored when Greg Harrison reached on an error.

The Bears upped their margin to 5-0 in the second. Tony Leggett walked and went to second on Dave Cratt's single. Peele then doubled home Leggett to make it 3-0.

Cratt scored moments later on Mark Taylor's sacrifice fly and Peele came home on Watson's single to make it 5-0.

Bear Grass upped its lead to 8-0 in the third before scoring a run in the fourth and two in the fifth for an 11-0 lead.

Peele had two hits for Bear Grass. Harrison had a triple for the Bears. The Indians did not have anyone with more than one hit.

Bear Grass travels to Mattamuskeet Thursday.

Lady Pirates Sweep State

RALEIGH - East Carolina University's Lady Pirates wound up the 1982 regular season in softball with a sweep of a doubleheader at N.C. State yesterday. The Lady Pirates took the opener, 4-0, then came back and downed the Lady Wolfpack, 5-3, in eight innings in the second game.

East Carolina pushed over three runs in the second inning of the first game, and followed that up with another in the sixth.

Jeanette Roth shut out the Wolfpack in the contest, and after also picking the victory in the second game, boosted her record to 24-5 on the year.

Cindy Livengood led the State hitters with two, while Gina Miller had a triple. East Carolina had no one with more than one hit, and no extra base hits.

In the second game, State pushed over one in the first, but the Lady Pirates scored two in the second. State tied it with a second run in the third, and it stayed that way until the eighth.

In the eighth, the Lady Pirates loaded the bases and Melody Ham slapped a triple to drive in all three runners. State rallied for one in the bottom of the inning, but fell two short.

Cynthia Shepard led the Lady Pirates with three hits, including a double.

Livengood, Amy Keith, Sue Williams and Carol Faucett each had two hits for State.

The twinbill ended the regular season for the Lady Pirates, now 32-7. The Pirates travel to Graham on Friday and Saturday for the State Tournament.

Bath Slips By Bullets, 3-1

JAMESVILLE - Roger Woolard scattered four hits and Bath used a wild pitch to score the go-ahead run en route to a 3-1 victory over Jamesville Monday in a Tobacco Belt Conference baseball game.

Woolard struck out seven and walked one en route to the win. His counterpart, Carl Ange, did almost as well. Ange struck out seven and walked two and gave up seven hits. But it was a wild pitch that allowed Bath to take a lead it never lost.

The game was scoreless after two innings, but Bath took the lead with a run in the top of the third. The Bullets countered in the bottom of the inning when Ange tripled home Matthew Moore. Moore had reached on an error.

Keith Waters led off the fourth with a double, but was stranded. One inning later, Bath took the lead.

Brian Swain singled to open the fifth and moved to second on Galen Braddy's one-out single. Woolard then singled to load the bases. Ange struck out the next batter for the second out and up came Travis Jackson.

Jackson was looking to put down a suicide squeeze bunt, but the pitch was in the dirt and got by Waters, the Bullets' catcher, allowing Swain to score and giving Bath a 2-1 lead. Jamesville had two runners on with one out in the sixth but failed to score. Bath added an insurance run in the seventh to seal the win.

The loss drops Jamesville to 8-3 overall and 7-2 in the conference.

Waters was two for three for Jamesville. Braddy, Woolard and Swain were all two for three for Bath.

Jamesville plays host to Belhaven Thursday.

Bears, Bullets In Softball Wins

Bear Grass 5
Chocowinity 3

BEAR GRASS - Bear Grass, trailing 5-3 in the third inning, exploded for nine runs and went on to record a 17-11 Tobacco Belt softball victory over Chocowinity yesterday.

Chocowinity had scored twice in the second, only to see the Lady Bears come back with three in their half of the inning. Chocowinity again went back out with three in the third, but the Bears then blew them away with nine in the bottom of the inning, taking a 12-5 lead.

Chocowinity added two each in the fifth, sixth and seventh innings, while the Lady Bears scored two in the fifth and three more in the sixth.

Wanda Sherrod led the Bear hitting with four, including two doubles, while Vernestine Laughinghouse had three, and Mary Rawls, Angie Mizelle and Cindy Harrison each had two. Both of Mizelle's hits were doubles.

Chocowinity's hitting was led by Eve Southerland with three, while Vickie McLawhorn had two.

The Lady Bears climb to 6-3 with the win. They travel to Mattamuskeet on Thursday.

JAMESVILLE - Kellie Hardison's grand slam home run sparked a five-run fifth inning that erased a four-run deficit and gave Jamesville a 7-4 victory over Bath Monday in a Tobacco Belt Conference softball game.

Bath led, 3-0, after the first inning and upped its lead to 4-0 with a run in the third. It stayed that way until the fifth. Jamesville loaded the bases in the fifth and Hardison then hit a shot to the outfield that was errored and allowed all four runners to score to give the Lady Bullets a 5-4 lead.

Jamesville added two more runs in the sixth to clinch the win, its eighth in 10 outings. The Lady Bullets are 7-2 in the league.

Selita Cross was two for three to lead Jamesville in hitting. Bath did not have anyone with more than one hit. Jamesville plays host to Belhaven Thursday.

Three Move Within Step Of Semifinals

By The Associated Press
While three teams were moving within a step of the Stanley Cup semifinals, the Boston Bruins were getting skated over in Quebec.

"The only way to beat Quebec is to keep checking and hitting," said the Bruins' Rick Middleton after his team was thrashed 7-2 Monday night by the Nordiques, who evened their National Hockey League quarterfinal series at two games apiece. "We weren't skating and Quebec was breaking out fast."

Too fast for the Bruins, who saw the best-of-seven series take a different outlook as the Nordiques rallied from losses in the opening two games in Boston.

The two-time defending champion New York Islanders downed their local rivals, the Rangers, 5-3 Monday to grab a 3-1 lead in that series. Surprising Vancouver, which has lost only once in its last 16 games, nipped the Kings 5-4 at Los Angeles to take a 3-1 margin. And Chicago took command of its matchup with St. Louis with a 7-4 home victory. All four series resume Wednesday night.

The Nordiques and Bruins each won three times on the other team's ice during the regular season but home ice has been crucial in their Adams Division final. The Stastny brothers each scored a goal and Michel Goulet connected twice against rookie goalie Mike Moffat to pace Quebec.

"Even when we lost the first two games of the series in Boston," said Peter Stastny, "we knew we could come back. Now it's all even and we're starting over again."

"It comes down to momentum vs. home-ice advantage," noted Bruins defenseman Mike Milbury. "That should balance the series."

Once again, the Nordiques used backup goalie John Garrett because regular netminder Daniel Bouchard was out with food poisoning. Garrett stopped 33 shots. Moffat could only manage 22 saves as the Nordiques built a 5-0 lead and coasted.

"Give Quebec a lot of credit," added Milbury. "Once they get a lead, they're tough to score against. We would go on a rush and the puck would be in our net."

Islanders 5, Rangers 3
Duane Sutter scored with 7:33 remaining to boost the Islanders to victory in a superbly played game. Mike Bossy had a goal and two assists and Bryan Trottier added three assists for the champions.

Rangers Coach Herb Brooks gambled by starting John Davidson in goal. Davidson, who missed most of the campaign with a back injury — his last appearance for the Rangers was on Oct. 14, a 2-1 triumph over Vancouver in his only start for the team all season — left after playing 33:08. He strained a muscle in his right leg while trying to stop a power-play goal by Clark Gillies.

Steve Weeks took over and was beaten by Sutter's game-winner.

"I had a little room to cut in front and I was going to go to my backhand," said Sutter, who scored twice, including the game-winner, in Game 2. "Weeks went to pokecheck and there was some room between his legs. I went for it and it hit the post and went in. I was surprised to see it go in."

"Duane's goal was the difference," said Trottier, who won the third game with an overtime goal. "They had turned it on and Duane turned it right around."

Canucks 5, Kings 4
Ivan Boldirev scored twice, including the winner for the Canucks. He opened the scoring in the first period, then gave the Canucks a cushion when he made it 5-3 on a slapshot from 35 feet at 1:41 of the final period.

The Kings got within a goal with 6:20 remaining as Doug Smith fired a shot past Vancouver goalie Richard Brodeur from 10 feet out. But Brodeur, who made 33 saves, held off Los Angeles the rest of the way.

"We can't think it's over," said acting coach Roger Nielson of the Canucks. "It still could be a long series; we're tired and LA is tired because the series has been so physical."

awarded third place in the Norris Division because they had two more wins — but the Hawks have dominated the division finals. They've peppered St. Louis for 18 goals in their three wins — the Blues won the second game 3-1.

Denis Savard had three goals and seldom-used Ted Bulley connected twice in the third period as Chicago rallied from a 4-2 hole.

"Earlier in the season I wasn't getting any ice time. I couldn't figure it out," said Bulley. "Just being in the playoffs was a big thrill for me."

Emile Francis, the Blues' president-general manager-coach, was disheartened by the way his team let the lead slip away.

Cooney Glad To Be Back At Work And Healthy

By The Associated Press
"Young fighters don't need as much training as older fighters," said trainer Victor Valle of 25-year-old Gerry Cooney, who is scheduled to challenge 32-year-old Larry Holmes for the World Boxing Council heavyweight championship June 11.

However much training a young fighter needs, it's good to see Cooney back hitting sparring partners, something he should do as much as possible before he meets Holmes fight because he hasn't spent much time hitting opponents in actual fights.

Cooney, trained by Victor

Valle and managed by Mike Jones and Dennis Rappaport, will fight for the first time June 11 since he knocked out Ken Norton in 54 seconds May 11, 1981. He will enter the ring against Holmes with less than six full rounds in 30 months.

That would have been 27 months, but Cooney tore muscle fibers in left shoulder while sparring Jan. 12. He tried to resume training in early February but couldn't.

The fight was postponed, with Holmes hollering that's when the Cooney camp wanted the match to be held in the first place.

"I feel much better. It's exciting to be boxing again," Cooney said after a recent training session in which he decked Walter Santemore in the first round of a three-round sparring session. It was Santemore who was in the ring with Cooney when the top contender injured his shoulder.

"It's a little bit sore, but my shoulder is sore," said Cooney. "Now I have to get my boxing in."

Cooney, who resumed sparring April 7, said he wasn't punching full force yet. Whew! He not only got off several hard hooks, he twice shook Santemore with the right, the hand many critics says Cooney doesn't possess.

He possesses it, but it seems that unless he makes a conscious effort to throw it, it comes off as a pushing punch, sort of an afterthought.

And Cooney sometimes seems like an afterthought in his own camp.

Co-manager Dennis Rappaport will talk at the drop of a hat, and get in a short speech before it hits the floor. Mike Jones, the other manager, is a little less hard sell than his partner, but he not shy.

Then there is Valle, the 64-year-old trainer, who is downright enthusiastic and obviously enjoying his participation in a big fight. At least a foot shorter than the 6-foot-5 Cooney, Valle likes to get in the ring and throw rapid-fire punches at his huge charge while wearing what looks to be catcher's mitts.

And when Cooney hits the speed bag, Valle shouts, "Go! Go! Go! Go!"

It cannot be doubted that the managers and trainer have the good of the fighter at heart. They have maneuvered him to a couple of million dollars and an unbeaten record in 25 fights and to the threshold of the heavyweight championship, the chance for mind-boggling purses. Cooney could get $10 million for fighting Holmes. Win, and the sky is the limit.

But they seem to be living vicariously, too, especially Rappaport and Jones, who show a great deal of interest in training and fight strategy, areas which are better left to professionals.

At the recent training session, Jones was heard to say, "If Dennis and I see something during the round, we should inform Victor who will pass it on."

If Victor has an idea about drawing up a fight contract or investing purse money, do Jones and Rappaport want to hear it, and would it be useful?

So, this is the show that has taken to the road to publicize the fight through exhibits, as Holmes also is doing.

This is the show that seeks to rule the boxing world — Valle, part cheerleader, part showman; Jones and Rappaport, frustrated talk-show guests; and Gerry Cooney, the strong man who seems to fit into his co-managers' carnival come-on approach to boxing.

And it could rule the boxing world because, Cooney, a quiet, likeable man, can punch harder than anybody around today, maybe as hard any fighter ever.

Ten-Year Pact For Dick Crum

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina football Coach Dick Crum, who has led the Tar Heels to three straight bowl-winning seasons, has been given a 10-year contract, according to a Raleigh newspaper.

Tar Heel Athletic Director John Swofford would neither confirm nor deny the length of the pact, but the News & Observer of Raleigh today quoted an athletic department source as saying the contract was for 10 years.

"We are extremely happy with him," Swofford said Monday. "I think there is a great deal of continuity in building a successful program."

Crum has posted a 68-22-2

Duo Takes Putt Event

Danny Pollard and Mike Mitchell combined to capture the top spot in the weekly Best Ball Tournament at the Greenville Putt-Putt Golf Course last night.

The two finished regulation play tied with Fred Bishop and LaVern Mayo with a 54-hole total of 31 under par 77. Pollard and Mitchell then won the playoff for first.

Third place was also decided by a sudden death playoff, as Jake Loftin and David Manning took that spot over Mike Brown and Mike Lloyd. Both teams finished 28 under par, with an 80.

The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

 Thus far South had lost only one club trick, and he still had the ace of diamonds to lose in the plain suits, but East's continual ruffs had created an amusing situation
 - West had a sure trump trick with the four!
 If this was a fairy tale, we would report that West scored his trump for an absolute top score on the board.
 But West had not been watching what was going on, and he did not realize that his 4-2 behind declarer's A-3 was a sure winner. When declarer led a low diamond towards dummy, West rose with the ace and, thinking that declarer had a fifth heart rather than another diamond, he elected to exit with a trump. So declarer ended up making the same number of tricks as everyone else.

American Ballet Opens A New Season In N.Y.

By MARY CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — American Ballet Theater, without Mikhail Baryshnikov, opened an eight-week season Monday night with a sexually explicit "The Wild Boy" and three other works.

"The Wild Boy" was choreographed by Kenneth MacMillan to very modern music by young British composer Gordon Crosse. It was designed for Baryshnikov, the ballet's artistic director who is recovering from surgery on his knee, and Natalia Makarova, and premiered in December in Washington.

Robert La Fosse and Lisa Houlton danced the lead parts. "The Wild Boy" was acceptable, but not great, receiving polite applause and no boos from the audience at the Metropolitan Opera House.

La Fosse, who was born in Beaumont, Texas, and joined this company in 1977, did well with the title role.

When he is dancing alone, Oliver Smith's design of trees behind and jungle ropes a la Tarzan above gives a sense of great space and freedom. Fosse romps briefly with dancers in animal costumes, who exhibited nicely feline movements.

At the end, when the woman and two men lie in a

Simon-Garfunkel Preparing Tour

LONDON (AP) — Singers Paul Simon and Art Garfunkel, reunited for a five-week concert tour of Europe and Japan next month, say they may tour the United States together or collaborate on another album.

The 1960s singing duo got together for a concert in New York last fall after 11 years as soloists. But they told a news conference in London on Monday they won't remain a double act forever.

"I would say that we will be together for a while, and then we will be apart again," Simon said.

"We never have a policy as to what our status is and what it will be next year," added Garfunkel. "Nor do I think we need to have one...The truth is, one improvises one's life."

Both singers said their September reunion in New York's Central Park before a half-million fans was a big boost, and the album of the free concert is selling well.

row and the animals scoot up, sniff the boy and dart away, the boy reaches out, bewildered, and the stage looks like a small cell around him.

However, it is never clear why the woman and two men captured the nature boy, whether they mean harm to him or what they are to each other. It is perfectly clear that the boy learns sex from the woman.

The ballet has a lot of vitality in its movement, but it is combined with a lot of blur in meaning.

The evening began with "The Kingdom of the Shades" scene from "La Bayadere" in which the corps de ballet moved well together.

Martine van Hamel and Alexander Godunov danced exquisitely most of the time. But they never took themselves beyond being dancers into being lovers reunited in a world beyond.

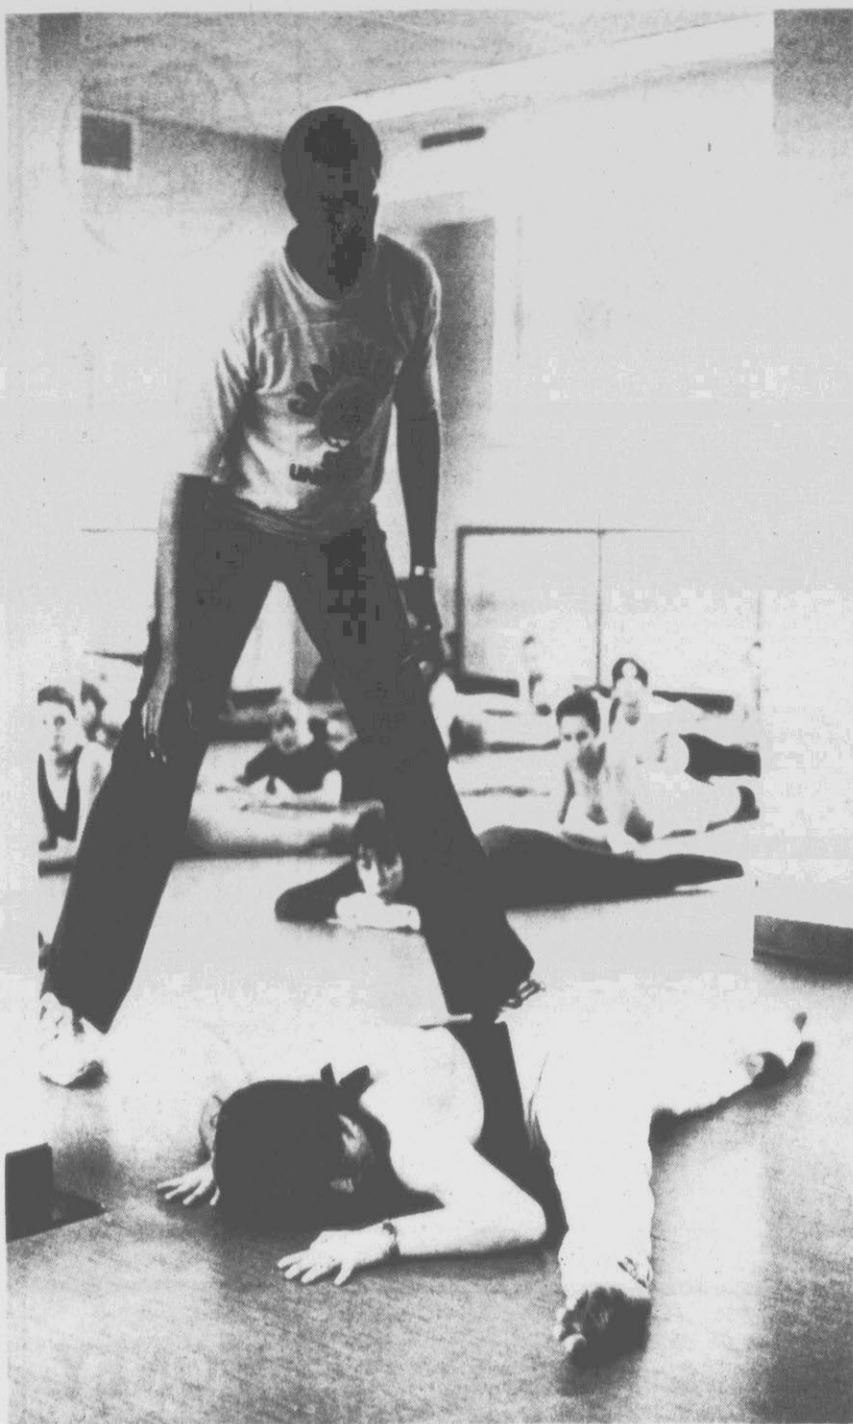

Cynthia Gregory was near perfection in a pas de deux from "The Sleeping Beauty." Fernando Bujones looked marvelous, too, but Petipa's choreography shows off the ballerina.

The evening ended on a Gallic note to send the audience out with cheer — the company's first performance in this city of George Balanchine's "Bourree Fantasque." In three movements, French humor, sentimentality and joie de vivre are heightened but never too much.

The best of the three couples was Magali Messac, born in Toulon, France, and with the Hamburg State Opera Ballet and Pennsylvania Ballet before joining ABT last season, and Danilo Radojevic, born in Sydney, Australia of a Yugoslav father and a German mother. He was in the Australian National Ballet before joining ABT in 1978.

She could be arch, coy and provocative with a small gesture and he, bending his knees, made the most of being a small Frenchman more than capable as the partner of an Amazon. They laughed at themselves and were quite happy with the arrangement.

Annual Awards Event Held For Cartoonists

NEW YORK (AP) — Mell Lazarus, creator of the well-known comic strips "Miss Peach" and "Momma," has won the National Cartoonists Society's Reuben Award, edging out "Doodles" artist Garry Trudeau and "Garfield" originator Jim Davis for the top prize.

Among the winners announced in 12 other categories Monday night was Etta Hulme of The Fort Worth (Texas) Star-Telegram, who was given the society's editorial award. She is one of three women editorial cartoonists in the country.

"I'm staggered," Lazarus said after receiving his Reuben at the society's 36th annual awards dinner in the Grand Ballroom of the Plaza Hotel. Lazarus said he had been nominated for the award 15 times before without winning.

Trudeau, who congratulated Lazarus immediately after the results were announced, was philosophical about losing. "I've been through this before," the Pulitzer Prize-winning cartoonist said, explaining that he had been nominated five or six times for a Reuben but had never won.

Emcee Bill Keane, creator of "Family Circle," explained that the Reuben is named for Rube Goldberg, who designed the statue that is presented to the winner. Goldberg himself won the award in 1967 for humor in sculpture.

Members of the cartoonists' society vote within their own categories, Keane said, with each member nominating and voting for the Reuben winner.

Others garnering awards at the dinner, attended by about 300 people, included Davis, who won in the Humor Strips category for his comic strip about a cat.

Arnold Roth, a free-lance cartoonist whose work has appeared in Money, Fortune and Psychology Today, received the illustration award, and Eddie Germano of the Brockton (Mass.) Enterprise, took the honors for sports cartooning.

The dinner's honorary chairman was cartoonist Milton Caniff, 75, who won the first Reuben in 1946 and another in 1971 for "Steve Canyon."

The other winners were: Irwin Caplan, free-lance, in advertising; Selby Kelly, free-lance, for animation; George Wildman, "Popeye," Western Comic Books, in the category of comic books (Humor); Frank Springer, Marvel Comic Books, for comic books (story); Bo Brown, free-lance, in magazine gags; Don Martin, Mad magazine, for special

'The End' At Big Drive-In

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The Queen Drive-In, the largest in North Carolina and South Carolina when it opened in 1949, has finally met "The End."

The drive-in's large screen was cut down Monday to make way for a new, multiscreen theater.

The Queen Drive-In made its debut 17 years after an industrialist, Richard M. Hollingshead, opened the nation's first drive-in theater in Camden, N.J., drawing about 300 cars at $1 each to see "Wife Beware," starring Adolphe Menjou.

C.B. Trexler, president of the National Association of Theater Owners in North Carolina, said the decline of drive-ins can be attributed to television, Daylight Saving Time, cable TV, motion-picture marketing changes, multitheater complexes, soaring land values and rising property taxes, the growth of single-parent families and changes in teen-age sexuality.

Of those factors, probably the competition of the walk-in and multiple screen theaters and movie marketing changes have had the greatest impact on the drive-ins, he said.

Trexler said that in the 1950s, movies were released to indoor theaters about two weeks before being released to drive-ins.

Now, indoor theaters lock up movie rights for 10, 12, even 16 weeks before they go to the drive-ins.

By then, he said, there's generally little market for them.

"They're wringing all the want-to-see value out of the pictures before they get to the drive-ins," he said.

Some theaters turn to gore and explicit sex to make it, he said. Others, like the Queen, fold.

Taste Marvel!

Latest research confirms MERIT delivers the taste of cigarettes having up to twice the tar.

Many low tar cigarettes make taste promises. But only 'Enriched Flavor,' MERIT offers proof not promises. Proof through extensive smoker taste tests.

MERIT Taste Does It.

In impartial new tests where brand identity was concealed, the overwhelming majority of smokers reported MERIT taste equal to—or better than—leading higher tar brands. Even brands with up to twice the tar.

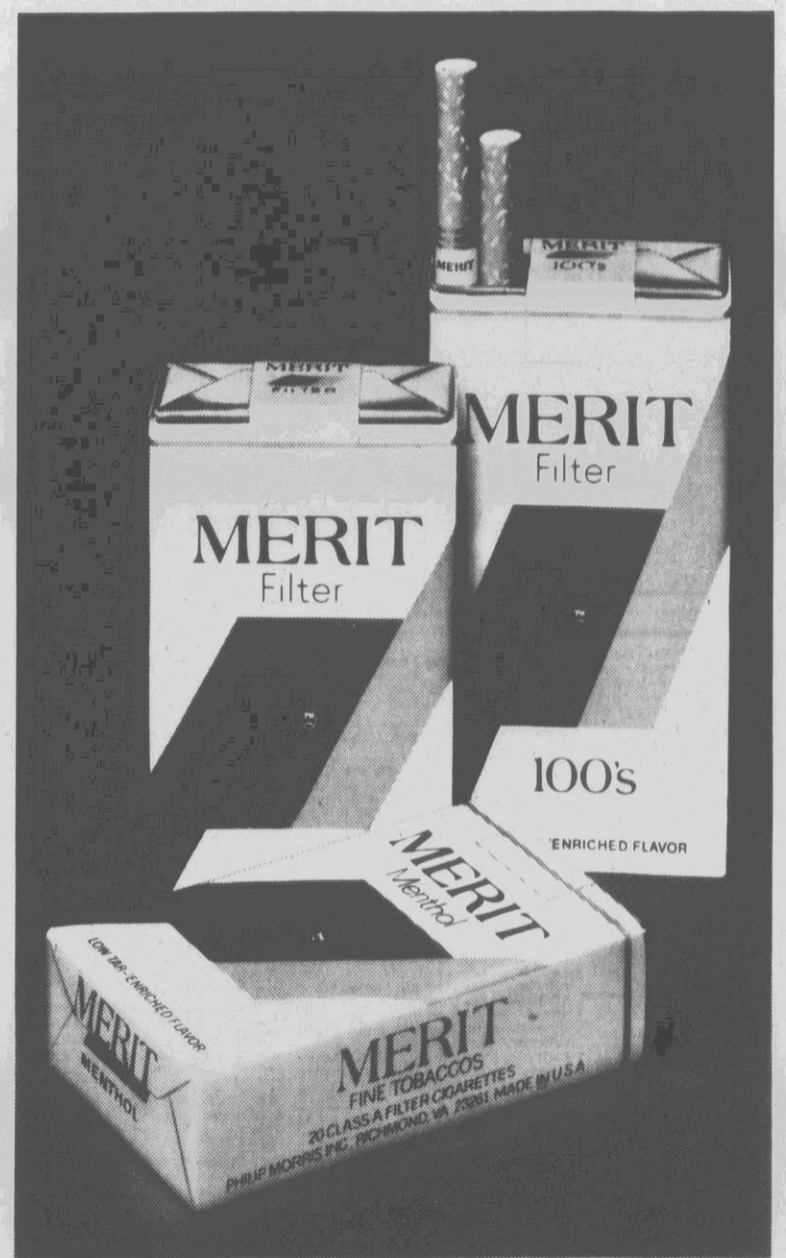

Moreover, when tar levels were revealed, 2 out of 3 chose the MERIT combination of low tar and good taste.

MERIT Taste Sparks Switch.

In a separate part of this extensive new study, MERIT smokers report that taste is a major factor in completing their successful switch from higher tar brands.

Confirmed: 9 out of 10 former higher tar smokers say MERIT is an easy switch, that they didn't give up taste in switching, and that MERIT is the best-tasting low tar they've ever tried.

Year after year, in study after study, MERIT remains unbeaten. The proven taste alternative to higher tar smoking—is MERIT.
