

Pitt Legislators Unanimous

Favor Re-Mapping To Court

By MELVIN LANG
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County legislators were unanimous today in calling for court action to resolve North Carolina's dispute with the Justice Department over redistricting the General Assembly.

"If it's minor changes only, we probably could go ahead and do it in the General Assembly, but I think we've messed enough with the Justice Department. We should go ahead to the courts and get it settled," veteran state Rep. Sam Bundy of Farmville said.

Rep. Ed Warren and Sen. Vernon White agreed with Bundy's assessment.

The Justice Department early this week rejected for the second time a proposed redistricting plan proposed by the General Assembly. The rejection was based primarily on two factors: a single-seat House district in Cumberland County and a far-flung Senate district in northeastern North Carolina.

Justice Department spokesmen said the Senate district, already more than 51 percent black, should have at least a 55 percent black majority. The Cumberland County House district has a predominantly white population but has a predominant black registration.

State negotiators say both districts were proposed originally by the Justice Department. Now, legislators say, they understand the department wants all of Cumberland County split into five one-seat districts.

"The (redistricting) committee turned over backwards to do exactly what they said they wanted in Washington," White said. "I'm to the point I believe it is time to let the courts decide rather than some bureaucrat sitting beside a desk."

Warren said he has been in favor for some time of "appealing the whole thing."

"They are going to make the decision in Washington anyway," Warren said.

The Pitt legislators voted against the rejected plan when it was approved by the General Assembly, primarily because of their opposition to districts that split several counties in the east.

"My instinct has been all along to appeal... They just cut us up in the northeast," Bundy said. "That's my good instinct now, to go to the courts."

Bundy noted that a federal court could decide that the state must go completely to one-seat districts. "But even if it comes to that, we still need to get it settled," he said.

Can't Set Date

State Elections Director Alex Brock has notified the Pitt Elections Board that his agency is without authority to set a date for the 1982 primary elections in view of objections to the Senate and House reapportionment plans.

Brock said that William Bradford Reynolds, assistant attorney general, Civil Rights Division, notified him Monday that both the state Senate and House plans had been reviewed under provisions of the Voting Rights Act of 1965 as amended and that both proposals "were objected to for specific reasons that will be delineated in his written communication to be mailed this week."

Brock, in his notice to local elections supervisor Margaret Register, said that, "The effect of Mr. Reynolds' objections renders the state board... without authority to set a date certain for the 1982 primaries as well as the filing period for U.S. Congress, state Senate and state House."

He continued, "It will now be necessary for the General Assembly to establish the date of the primaries either in special session or during the regular budget session scheduled for June."

Brock explained that the General Assembly will also have to "determine whether it will write new plans, adjust the current plans or initiate litigation relative to the objections interposed by the U.S. attorney general."

Israeli Jets Hit PLO Lebanon Bases

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli jets blasted Palestinian strongholds south of Beirut today, ending the nine-month-old truce in a hail of bombs and rockets after an Israeli soldier was killed by a land mine in southern Lebanon.

Israel confirmed the raid, and the Lebanese government and the Palestine Liberation Organization said the jets set off fires and drew heavy anti-aircraft fire.

There were no immediate reports of casualties from the Israeli strikes, and no indication that Israeli ground troops were involved.

The PLO said 60 Israeli F-15 and F-16 warplanes pounded the Damour, Douha and Naameh townships south of Beirut in a "criminal raid." Lebanon's state radio and television said the jets flew in four formations, and that thick palls of black smoke billowed from the bombed areas.

The attack began at 2:30 p.m. — 7:30 a.m. EST — and continued for more than 90 minutes. Israeli radio, however, said the raids were continuing through the afternoon, and that Israeli settlers along the Lebanese border took refuge in bomb shelters in case of PLO reprisal shelling.

Government sources, who declined to be named, said Syrian and Palestinian radar stations on the hills of the fashionable Douha neighborhood on Beirut's southern flank were devastated by Israeli jets.

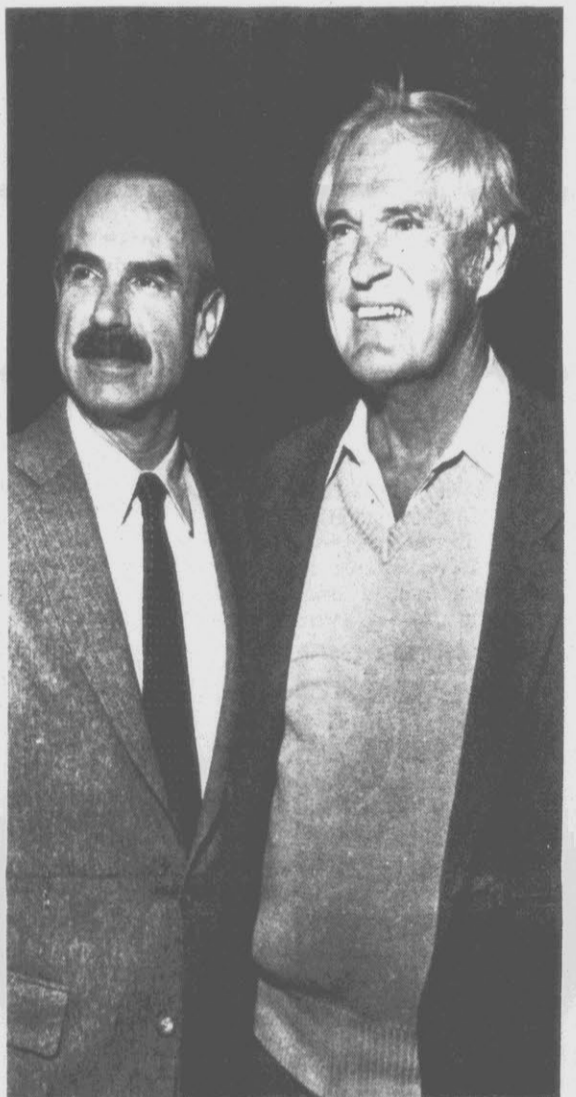

The Israeli military command in Tel Aviv confirmed its jet fighters struck deep into Lebanon on bombing runs against Palestinian guerrilla targets.

A military communique said that Israeli air force jets bombed Palestinian guerrilla targets south of Beirut and another two targets northeast of Sidon, a Mediterranean coastal town 35 miles north of the Israeli border.

The Israeli communique said the attack was in response to several "bloody attacks in recent weeks" by Palestinian guerrillas on "Israeli civilians in Israel and in Europe (which) reached a climax this morning when a terrorist mine killed an Israeli soldier."

It said "the targets that were bombed were used as active bases for terrorist actions against Israel" and were used to store military equipment, the communique said.

Hospital Bd. Directs Trustee To Invest Retirement Funds

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Memorial Hospital Board voted Tuesday night to direct its money management trustee, Wachovia Bank, to invest $1 million of its retirement fund assets in long-term insurance company funds for five years with an expected return of between 16 percent and 17 percent per year.

Three members voted against the action and two abstained. Discussion prior to the decision centered on whether the board should be so directing its trustee and whether it was wise to lock in such a large sum of money for so long.

It was pointed out that a half-million dollars is being left in other investment areas like stocks, bonds and real estate, and that more is being added all the time. The fund at the present time is experiencing little depletion, with only "a couple of dozen" retirees drawing from it.

Welcomed as new board members were Bernice Turnage of Farmville and Norma Van Veld of Greenville.

It was pointed out that the Greenville Service League has recently given the hospital $75,000 for the purchase of monitoring units for two critical care units.

An executive committee recommendation to transfer $65,000 to a special account in preparation for the retention of a firm to do long-range master facility planning was approved. General Director Jack Richardson reported that six firms have been interviewed for this activity and that Henningson, Durham and Richardson of Omaha, Nebr. seems the likely choice. PCMH officials have made visits, he said, to two sites where HDR has completed projects — Orangeburg Regional Hospital and Norfolk General Hospital, both regional facilities somewhat similar to Pitt Memorial.

Richardson explained, "There is a need to understand what the current (hospital) site will support from a physical and economic viewpoint. Future additions must be considered now and approximately sized from a space and engineering viewpoint."

This planning would involve functional analyses of every department of the hospital for serving the present number of patients (560 by this summer), 800 patients and more than 1,000 patients, it was pointed out, and hopefully would provide a better understanding of the options that can be considered.

Hospital community relations director Craig Quick reported on a "radiothon" held April 9 by WNCT radio, with $1,571.48 in gifts. He quoted station manager Henry Ambertson as saying he hopes to make the radiothon an annual event.

Trustees were invited to the hospital's fifth anniversary picnic April 30, to the East Carolina University Medical School commen-

Evacuation Is Resisted

By DANIELA GREBLER
Associated Press Writer

YAMIT, Occupied Sinai (AP) — The Israeli army launched its big evacuation operation in this Sinai town today and ran into furious opposition from shouting and weeping opponents of Israel's withdrawal from the desert peninsula.

"You'll all be fighting the Egyptians here in two months," one Sinai settler yelled at the troops. "You're sentencing yourselves to death."

The army delayed beginning the evacuation until Prime Minister Menachem Begin's Cabinet completed a meeting in Jerusalem affirming its commitment to the Sunday deadline for completing withdrawal.

In another development, Israeli jets struck at Palestinian targets in southern Lebanon, shattering a nine-month-old cease-fire that had been mediated by the United States.

The thousands of troops in Yamit were under orders to use utmost restraint, and they made no immediate attempt to force any of the 2,000 settlers and squatters into waiting trucks and buses. One family was seen leaving voluntarily, but the rest of those in Yamit were resisting and a few threw objects at troops and police.

Most of the settlers have departed, but ultra-nationalist squatters have moved in, vowing to resist the evacuation.

The return of the Sinai to Egypt had appeared threatened last week when Israel claimed Egypt was violating the peace treaty. But since then there has been a steady shuttle of American, Egyptian and Israeli officials between Jerusalem and Cairo, carrying assurances back and forth.

"In view of these facts, the government of Israel has decided that it shall on its part carry out all its commitments in accordance with the treaty of peace and will evacuate the Sinai of Israeli forces and civilians by April 25," Cabinet Secretary Dan Meridor announced in Jerusalem.

At the designated hour for starting the evacuation, hundreds of settlers mounted rooftops that were strewn with tires, clubs, stones and bottles.

They set fire to the tires and shouted at troops massing in the gardens below to get away.

Police that knocked on one door to serve an eviction notice had a bottle and handful of sand thrown at them.

The anti-withdrawal activists sent up a chant of prayers and belled out the troops over a loudspeaker: "Don't do this. Let Jews live in the land of Israel."

One bearded Israeli shouted at the soldiers: "Get out of here. You are creating a very dangerous situation."

Begin had earlier talked with relatives of a dozen extremists who have locked themselves in a Yamit bunker, threatening to commit suicide if the troops tried to remove them.

Their leader, Rabbi Meir Kahane, founder of the Jewish Defense League, arrived today from New York. Surrounded by a crowd of several hundred, he tried to communicate with them through an air duct, but appeared to get little response. At one point Kahane walked away with an annoyed shrug.

In Yamit, soldiers ran a pipe from the Mediterranean, apparently intending to use jets of water to help carry out the forced evacuation. They climbed onto rooftops while settlers and squatters appealed to them over loudspeakers to disobey orders and let them stay.

Lengthy Debate By Liddy, Leary

The debate at Mendenhall Student Center Tuesday night between C. Gordon Liddy and Dr. Timothy Leary was half an hour late getting under way but, once started, the packed audience kept the two going until nearly midnight.

Liddy, a prominent figure in the Watergate controversy, and Leary, former Harvard professor who became something of a cult leader in the 1960s, debated on opposing ideas. Liddy's topic was "The Power of the State," and Leary defended "The Freedom of the Individual."

In defending the right of the state to govern individuals, Liddy said the state had that right as long as it did not require the individual to do something intrinsically evil.

Leary took a libertarian stand, declaring that the state has no right to govern the individual to such an extent. Each of the two were given three alternating opportunities to speak, and after an intermission, the floor was open to questions from the audience.

Members of the audience directed their questions primarily to two topics — nuclear war and drugs.

Liddy came out favoring a nuclear build up in America, saying that the only way to have peace is to prepare for war. Leary maintains that American needs to look to a future where there will be a decrease in defense spending with more funds being channeled to scientific research.

During the debate, it was brought out that the two men first met well over a decade ago when Liddy was an assistant district attorney in Dutchess County, N.Y. At that time, he participated in an arrest of Leary on a drug charge.

Hotline gets things done for you. Call 752-1336 and tell your problem or your sound-off or mail it to Hotline, The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

Because of the large numbers received, Hotline can answer and publish only those items considered most pertinent to our readers. Names must be given, but only initials will be used.

HOSPITAL HOTLINE NUMBER?

What's that hospital hotline number I've heard about recently. I have some questions I'd like answered and would like to have the number before I enter the hospital next week. C.T.

The number is 757-4705. According to information provided by Pitt County Memorial Hospital, the service was developed by the Office of Community Relations and Development to encourage communication between patients and the hospital administration. The number is posted in each patient room and can be used 24 hours a day. The hospital's community relations office answers the calls and refers questions to appropriate sources for replies about hospital policy, programs and services. Craig Quick is PCMH community relations director.

FIREMEN HELPED

Joy and Judy Brann say members of the Greenville Fire Department went out of their way to help them recently when the car carrying them and their three children stalled at the stoplight on Green Street near the main fire station. "They helped us push it off the street and tried to help us get it cranked," the women said. "We couldn't have been treated more nicely."

County Budget Work Goes On

Preliminary work on the 1982-83 budget continued Tuesday as the Board of County Commissioners heard explanations from four county department heads relative to their initial funding requests.

Commissioners listened to budget explanations from Ed Garrison of the Social Services Department, tax collector Bill Smith, fire marshal Bobby Joyner regarding emergency management, fire marshal and rescue squads operations and from Sheriff Ralph Tyson.

Board members, who had told all county supervisors not to figure pay increases in their requests, asked the four department representatives Tuesday to go over their line items and point out any changes from current allocations.

Commissioners are using a new format this year in tackling preliminary budget work. Where the county departments and agencies in the past submitted their proposed budgets to the county manager for review and his recommendations to the board, the department heads are meeting with the commissioners first this year and the officials will then set more detailed guidelines before the manager's recommendations are made.

In previous years, department heads had appeared before the board to justify their requests after submitting their funding proposals to the county manager.

Salary figures will be considered by the board following completion of a study now under way.

Another budget session with additional department heads has been scheduled for Monday at 1 p.m.

WANTS TO KNOW IN WISCONSIN

DEAR WANTS: You're right. I have always known that Zsa Zsa was the older, but I wanted to confirm it, so I asked Eva.

Eva replied, "I am younger than Zsa Zsa. But, unfortunately, by only two years."

DEAR ABBY: I agree with "For Equality," concerning the cost of the wedding. Yes, it certainly should be split 50-50 between the bride and the groom (or their families).

But how about the expense of courting? When the couple is dating, in almost every case the male pays for all of it. Shouldn't that be on a 50-50 Dutch-treat basis, too?

Let the feminist groups challenge the age-old tradition of the male always picking up the tab.

FAIR IS FAIR

DEAR FAIR: I'm all for the 50-50 split. Then gone will be the days when a guy buys a girl a chocolate malted and then tries to squeeze it out of her.

Although the Soviet Union has been the No. 1 producer of sunflowers since the 1930s, the United States has taken the lead in exports of sunflower seeds and oil. Russia itself bought about 20,000 tons of "sun oil" from this country in Jan. 1982 alone. American farmers harvested 3.5 million acres of oil-seed sunflowers with a value of $441 million in 1981, up from only 10,000 acres in 1966. Last year, 1.7 million tons of seed and 332,000 tons of oil were exported.

Diet Turns Dog Into Self Shadow

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I live in a condo that has a rule: "No pets weighing over 17 pounds may live on the premises." When I moved here three years ago, Mimi, my French poodle, weighed 16 pounds, 4 ounces, so she was no problem.

Later Mimi put on a little weight, but not enough to make any difference (I thought) until the manager came to my door demanding to weigh her. I later learned that the reweighing of Mimi had been instigated by a neighbor who had a grudge against me because once or twice I broke the rule of no smoking in the elevator.

Well, Mimi weighed 21 pounds, so I was told I couldn't keep her at the condo. I immediately took her to the vet, who assured me that he could get Mimi's weight down to 17 pounds in two weeks, so I left her there.

Two weeks later when I picked Mimi up, I almost didn't recognize her. She weighed 16 pounds, 2 ounces, and she looked sad-eyed and listless. When I got her home she followed me around and whined constantly. Also, she ate practically nothing.

To make a long story short, Mimi died two weeks later. The vet said it was her heart, but I know it was the diet. Now I blame myself for letting that vet put her on that crash diet. It's too late for Mimi, but please print this to let animal lovers know that it is cruel and inhuman to put a dog through what I did. I should have moved and taken my chubby little angel with me.

SELFISH AND SORRY

DEAR SORRY: You meant well, so don't blame yourself. Readers, crash diets are hazardous to your health, too!

DEAR ABBY: Can you settle an argument? My husband

Elegance At The Table —Fine Linens Back in Popularity

A touch of elegance is returning these days to dining. A rekindling of interest in a more formal table has created a Renaissance in linens. Damask and lace are in style again.

Many of today's linens are a blend of natural and synthetic fibers — linens, and/or cotton and polyester. Developed in response to consumer demand for easy care, they also offer the benefits of soil release finishes and no-iron properties. Laundering calls for machine washing and drying using the permanent press cycle. Linens should be removed immediately at the end of the drying cycle to eliminate any wrinkling.

Linen damask is prized for its quality and beauty. The more it is used and laundered, the lovelier it becomes. Proper care will ensure its elegance for years. Stains should be treated as soon as possible. Many stains are readily removed when they are fresh but are difficult and, in some instances, impossible to remove when set by time or heat.

When laundering, machine wash on the regular cycle using hot water for whites and colorfast linens, warm for others. When drying in an automatic dryer, remove damasks when they are slightly damp. Iron damasks while they are still damp, first on the back and then on the right side to bring up the natural sheen.

Use the gentle cycle on the washer for the more delicate lace, lace-trimmed or embroidered linens. Iron embroidered or monogrammed pieces on the wrong side to avoid flattening the texture. A thin pressing cloth is advisable when ironing delicate lace or open work.

General Care of Glassware
For all of its decorative power and practical usefulness, glass is also easy to clean. Warm suds and rinses keep glassware gleaming. Of course, care in use, washing and storage is important. For example, fine crystal stemware is fragile and requires delicate handling. On the other hand, sturdy cookware can be scoured if necessary, using a nylon or other nonabrasive pad. Be sure to read and keep handy manufacturer's instructions for use and care of glass cookware and electric items.

Prepare glassware for washing. Rinse glasses and cups promptly to prevent stubborn rings. Wipe off lipstick stains. Scrape food particles from dishes, serving pieces and cookware. Use a rubber or plastic scraper to avoid scratching. Residue from eggs and starchy food will loosen in a cold water soak. Baked-or burned-on food responds to soaking in hot sudsy water. This lessens the need for scrubbing. Use paper towels to remove excess grease. If dishes are to be washed later, rinse and stack carefully according to size.

When using a dishwasher, pre-rinsing of normal food soils is not necessary. But large food particles or bones should be removed and stubborn cooked-on foods loosened and scraped from cookware. Dishes and glasses to be held before washing a full load may require rinsing, if the dishwasher does not have a rinse-and-hold cycle.

Are Increases Justified?

Utilities and telephone companies made regular trips to the regulatory agencies for a number of years seeking rate increases to offset rising costs.

In some cases the rate increases were justified. Cost of energy was soaring and thus affecting the earning power of the utilities companies. Added to that was the inflationary cost of personnel and all the other materials and supplies used by the corporations.

Telephone companies were seeing a part of their business disappear as deregulation allowed users to buy their own phone equipment and even services. Thus it became a regular thing to see the utilities' apply for and get increases.

The problem now is that rate increases are still being granted based on the inflationary costs of the 1970s. We wonder if anybody concerned has noticed that oil prices are actually dropping and inflation is down to a rate of 3 percent.

It is established that utilities have to have the revenues to operate and show a fair profit. However, the regulatory agencies should be carefully examining the figures used to request rate increases. They are for the most part based on past inflationary times and may not be relevant to the economic era we are now in.

Tokyo Air Raid Is Recalled

It was a dark time for the United States in April 1942. The Japanese strike at Pearl Harbor had plunged the nation into a war it wasn't ready for and there was little to cheer about concerning our military operations in the Pacific.

On April 18, 1942, however, Gen. Jimmy Doolittle led a group of B-25s on perhaps the most daring air raid of military history. The planes took off from an aircraft carrier with the mission of bombing Tokyo. The bombs were dropped and some of the flyers made it to the Chinese mainland. Last week the survivors celebrated the event which lifted American morale as nothing else could have done. Included was Gen. Doolittle, now retired and 85 years old. It is well to note that he was 45 when he led the daring and dangerous air raid.

There were many air raids in Europe and the Far East during World War II. None compared with the Doolittle raid on Tokyo for its impact in lifting the American spirit.

In The Pocketbook

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — Most of us think that only wreckers. Drunk drivers may be killing themselves and other people at an alarming rate, but we don't really believe it'll ever happen to us. The drunks will run into the guy next door and, of course, we never drink too much to drive.

Faced with that kind of thinking, how do you convince "social drinkers" to stay off the road? The state Department of Human Resources thinks you attack where people know they're vulnerable — in the pocketbook. We may not be ready to accept our own mortality, but almost everyone can relate to a big fat unexpected expense.

DHR has released a set of estimates showing the dollars-and-cents cost of getting convicted for driving under the influence. Get caught once, DHR says, and you can expect large legal fees, court costs and a big increase in your insurance rates. You don't have to be an alcoholic, you don't have to be falling down drunk the night you're arrested and you don't have to be in a wreck. Four martinis on the way home from work could cost you thousands.

Pete Martin, DHR's coordinator for drunken driving programs, says your costs start the minute the officer tells you you're under arrest. He'll drive you to jail and a wrecker will probably tow your car home at a price of about $65.

To get out of jail, you've got to post bond. If the judge knows you, or you at least look like the type of person who'll come back, he might let you out on your word.

More likely, Martin says, it'll cost $200.

Getting a lawyer will cost between $100 and $700, Martin estimates. Several Raleigh lawyers said they've never heard of a DUI case defended for $100 by any lawyer. Expect a lawyer's bill of $300, minimum, they said. It would most likely be in the $400 range, however, for a first offense.

If you don't believe that breathalyzers work, you might want to have a blood

$1,000 for appeals. The other said $500. If all you want is a limited driving privilege, Martin estimates it'll cost you $75 to $200 to have a lawyer file the papers.

Now that you've been convicted, and your license has been revoked for 12 months, you have to go to DUI school. That'll cost $100, but if you pass the course you get your license back early. Another expense is lost work time. Martin says the average North Carolina blue collar worker makes $46.62 a day. He can expect to lose at least one day's work going to court. But the biggest bite comes from the insurance company. Martin says a sample taken. But it'll cost you an extra $45.

If you get convicted, you can be fined $100 to $500. Two lawyers said the standard fine for first conviction is $150. District attorneys will often plea bargain with first offenders allowing them to plead guilty to a "10 (percent) offense." This carries the same fine. You also have to pay the $31 cost of court.

The legal fees will be bigger if you appeal to Superior Court. One lawyer says he charges a minimum of

One Way To Scare 'em

If we are sincere about deterring the Soviets from starting aggression, I can't think of a better way to scare the hell out of them than by piping in a local radio talk show from any town in America. Nothing would convince the Russians more how much we mean business.

"Hi, folks, Jerry Dodge here and welcome to another four hours of 'Let It All Hang Out.' Tonight we're going to deal with the question I am sure has been bothering most of you this week, and that is, 'Should the United States freeze its nuclear missiles or should we continue our arms buildup until we're certain we can zap every Commie in the world?' Let's hear from our first caller."

"Jerry, my name is David Umansky and my wife, Adrienne, thinks it would be real dumb to freeze our missiles now because we're on our own 20-yard line, and it's third down and if we don't come up with the big play, that means we'll lose the ball, and put the Russians in field-goal range. At this stage we can't afford to let them get three points on the board."

"How do you feel about giving up our first-strike nuclear capability, David?"

"Sick. Life is an Atari game. Once you've put in your quarter you've committed yourself. And even if you know you're going to be wiped out, you still want to take as many asteroids with you as you possibly can."

"Thanks, David. Hello there you're on 'Let It All Hang Out.'"

"Jerry, this is Louise Royal of Princeton, and first I'd like to tell you how much I enjoyed your program yesterday advocating the death penalty for people who are late in filing their income tax returns."

"Thanks, Louise. How do you feel about nuclear disarmament?"

"That's a good tip for our listeners. Why hasn't the government told the people about it?"

"They're afraid there would be a run on green garbage bags. But my brother-in-law says the civil defense people have been stockpiling them and will make the bags available as soon as the whistle blows."

"That's good news. Hello, you're on the air."

"Jerry, I'd just like to say that I think all the people calling in and talking about nuclear war are nuts."

"What do you do for a living, sir?"

"My car pool is against it, except for Bobbie Fletcher who thinks that there are too many nuclear weapons now. But no one pays any attention to her because she believes nuclear war is unwinnable."

"What makes her think that?"

"She said she read somewhere that if we had a war, everyone would be blown to bits so it doesn't make any difference who starts it."

"Have you tried to straighten her out?"

"No, we just laugh at her."

"Thank heavens Bobbie is not in the government. Let's take another call. You're on the air."

"Jerry, this is Anne Kohlmeier. I have a brother-in-law named Marty and he says if you dig a hole five feet deep and cover it with a green garbage bag and then you put a foot of peat moss over it, you can protect yourself against an atomic attack. The garbage bag and peat moss keep the radioactivity from penetrating the hole."

"That's a good tip for our listeners. Why hasn't the government told the people about it?"

"They're afraid there would be a run on green garbage bags. But my brother-in-law says the civil defense people have been stockpiling them and will make the bags available as soon as the whistle blows."

Literature's Lost Pages

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
NEW YORK (AP) — The news that a book publisher is restoring cuts, changes and a whole missing chapter to "The Red Badge of Courage" nearly 100 years after Stephen Crane wrote it gives hope that writers will win out over editors in the long run.

Score one for our side. Of course in the long run, we're all dead, as are Crane and editor Ripley Hitchcock, who excised 5,000 words from the classic novel on the Civil War when it was published in 1895 to make it more palatable to the public and less gloomy.

Rumors are rife, as they always are (you seldom run into an unripe rumor in these suspicious times) that a whole slew of literary masterpieces are about to re-emerge in their original manuscripts, exactly as their authors wrote them. Publishers row is agog with the possibilities.

Maybe this time around, we'll get the full story of "The Lady, or the Tiger?" which we all read in school without realizing it might have been a slick editor who stuck in that question mark to make the tale more palatable.

If you recall Frank R. Stockton's famous yarn, this semibarbaric king practiced a rough form of justice in which an accused perpetrator (as the TV version would have it) was led into the arena and given the choice of opening either of two doors. Behind one waited the fiercest, hungriest tiger in the kingdom. The other offered in immediate marriage the fairest damsel in all the land, regardless of the culprit's current marital status. The door prizes were always switched to keep up audience interest in the arena.

Well, of course it came about that the king's daughter fell in love with a handsome courtier, who was sentenced to the double door bit for daring to rise above his station. There was this man-eating tiger licking his chops behind one door, and the loveliest lady in the court, whom the princess hated with a jealous heart, poised for marriage behind the other.

By bribery and cunning the princess had found out which door held the tiger this time, and she shot a signal to her lover to pick the right-hand one. The editor, being a chicken, left it to the reader to decide whether the princess had sacrificed her lover to her detested rival or thrown him to the big cat.

Rumor is that in the original manuscript Stockton had the maiden emerge in wedding raiment, but the princess in fury jumped out of the royal box, tore her to shreds, then opened the door and kicked the slats out of the tiger, too. But that apparently was considered too violent for 19th century readers, so some little tin god in a green eshade and celluloid cuffs went to work with scissors and pastepot and turned the whole thing into an enigma.

I hear that pretty much the same thing happened to "Lady Chatterley's Lover." We never did get that last chapter, "Lady Chatterley's Lover's Lover," in which Constance finally goes off to live with the gamekeeper Mellors on a farm someplace and then one of his old boyfriends shows up. That was considered too 1980s for 1928, when D.H. Lawrence wrote the novel, but you can bet your ad budget the TV producers can't wait to get their hands on that original manuscript.

Maybe this time around, we'll get the original uncut, unedited version of the movie "Citizen Kane." There have been whisperings for years around the studios that the final scene where the kid's sleigh burns up with the word "Rosebud" on it was added as an afterthought to make some sense from heavy cuts in the plot.

The real Rosebud, they whisper, was Rosebud Bonbon, one of Kane's kinky lady friends, a carnival geek with a heart of gold and a stomach like cast iron who got him kicked out of Harvard for biting the head off a frog in biology class. The Hays office wouldn't buy it.

If the scholars can find the manuscript, we might at long last catch up with that rumored fourth ghost in the Charles Dickens classic "A Christmas Carol." They say Dickens, who always had an eye for the cash register and posterity, scribbled a sizzling final chapter with as yet un-invented TV specifically in mind, but prudish Victorian editor squelched it.

The fourth and final ghost supposedly was the Ghost of Christmas What Already? A number of years have passed. Bog Cratchit, surely as ever, gets drunk at the office Christmas Party and dumps a bowl of Smoking Bishop over old Ebenezer. Tiny Tim is off at the methadone center. Nephew Fred gets caught shoplifting at Harrod's on Christmas Eve. The goose the kid went out and bought, the one as big as himself, is loaded with coccidiosis. Old Marley, it turns out, kept a double set of books all those years, and the Inland Revenue folk have a lien against the firm. And a morals charge has surfaced against old Fezziwig.

"Humburg" is supposedly the last word in the missing manuscript.

Like the all the rest of this column — or is it Rosebud?

To the editor:

The Falkland Islands crisis coinciding with Ground Zero Week draws attention to the possibility of a nuclear conflict. Our government is now doing what it has accused the Soviets of doing for years — pumping huge sums into nuclear weapons production at the expense of the welfare of its citizens. I am terrified.

President Reagan insists we live behind a "window of vulnerability." He refuses to admit we are all vulnerable in this world, every minute of every day. War is not rational; men who would prepare to destroy a world are not rational. Irrational men are capable of terrible deeds.

The anti-nuclear movement, so called the "peace" movement, is gaining momentum daily. It has more to do with survival than with peace, for if we do not survive, we have nothing — no politics or religion or any of the other myriad things apparently driving us to racial suicide.

A major issue now is a nuclear freeze, but that is not enough. If not one more weapon were built, there now exist enough doomsday devices to completely demolish the earth as we know it. What is called for is a complete unilateral disarmament. Until we all realize that this is the most important issue in the world today — that it takes precedence over inflations, recessions, oil fields and petty nationalistic interests like the Falkland Islands — there is no hope.

Ours was the first and only country ever to use a nuclear weapon. It must not be allowed to happen again.

It is time for us all to say "No": to say that the use of nuclear weapons is an unthinkable atrocity far worse than any ever committed before in the history of mankind. If we must march in the streets to make ourselves heard, then let us march. We must make an effort to save ourselves and our children, for it is obvious that our government is not going to do it for us.

Strength For Today

FOR WHOM THE BELLS TOLLED

Centuries ago, John Donne, the great English churchman and poet, wrote these words: "I count all that part of my life lost which I spent not in communion with God and in doing good."

John Donne (1573-1631) had spent many years of his life in dissipation and debauchery. Suddenly, and in a spectacular fashion, he was converted and thereafter began to live a life of such Christian humility and virtue that his influence reached every level of London society. In addition, he developed into one of the most appealing poets which England has produced.

This man decided that nothing in this life was to be compared with the blessings and benefits of God offered to those who would submit to his will. He broke away from a life of carnal pleasure and dissipation which had held him in bondage.

When the bells tolled for John Donne, all England knew that God had taken unto himself a saint. — Elisha Douglass

1,500-Mile Bicycle Ride Will Be Lung Association Benefit

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer
East Carolina University junior David Hicks is spending his spare time the last two weeks of April making preparations for a 1,500-mile benefit bicycle ride for Eastern Lung Association. On May Day, May 1, David will head north to Syracuse, N.Y., his home, then return to Greenville by May 15.

Between now and my departure May 1 I'll be contacting businessmen and interested individuals in Greenville to try to get sponsorship for contributions to Eastern Lung. The plan we have come up with is to accept sponsors on a per-mile basis or on the basis of a whole trip," David said. "I know that lots of people who might want to help can only do so in a limited way, so we'll be glad to accept sponsorship in a half-cent, a quarter-cent per-mile basis or any other basis."

David's bicycle is a Raleigh Super-Sport. "It's 10 speed with a top speed of 40 miles an hour and a cruising speed of 20 to 25 miles an hour," David commented. "I plan to cover the approximately 300 miles to Washington, D.C., during the first 24 hours of the trip, then to reach Syracuse by the end of the fourth day, or about 100 hours."

From Washington, David will go to Philadelphia, then head for Scranton, Pa., and on to Syracuse.

For the trip, David will take a minimum of baggage — "just a small amount of food, a couple of spare tubes, and a couple of changes of clothes. I'll be stopping for meals, and will be staying nights along the way with friends and friends of friends."

David, a slender young man, has been getting ready for the long haul by daily rides "around the perimeter of Greenville. These laps run about 15 to 20 miles and it's good training for distance riding."

A major in business management, David says he has timed the trip to coincide with the break between the end of the semester and the beginning of summer school which he will attend.

"I'll stay with my family in Syracuse for four or five days, then head back to Greenville, hoping to be back here by May 15," he said.

Firms or individuals who want to provide sponsorship may call David at 757-1711 or contact the Eastern Lung Association office at 752-5903.

How Tar Heel Senators Voted

ROLL CALL REPORT
WASHINGTON — Here's how area senators voted after returning from the Senate's Easter recess. There were no House votes.

CUBAN POLICY — By a vote of 41 for and 39 against, the Senate killed a non-binding resolution similar to one approved by Congress at the time of the 1962 Cuban missile crisis. Among other provisions, the measure reaffirmed the Monroe Doctrine, urged a tougher policy towards the Castro regime in Cuba, and recommended military action if necessary to thwart international Communist subversion in the Western Hemisphere. The vote occurred during debate on legislation (S Res 20) to permit televising Senate floor proceedings.

Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., who supported killing the measure, said the resolution could upset the administration's delicate efforts to involve Mexico, Cuba and other hemispheric nations in the search for peace in Central America.

Dodd added that the measure "resurrects the ghost of the Tonkin Gulf resolution by giving the president virtually a blank check to undertake whatever military action he deems appropriate without obtaining a declaration of war or without any further congressional involvement."

Sen. Steven Symms, R-Idaho, the sponsor of the resolution, said the vote at hand was "a vote for the Monroe Doctrine, and a vote for prevention of a Soviet military base in Cuba. It will be a vote for opposing Soviet-Cuban aggression and subversion in the Western Hemisphere."

Senators voting "yea" wanted to table and thus kill the Symms resolution.

Sens. John East, R, and Jesse Helms, R, voted "nay."

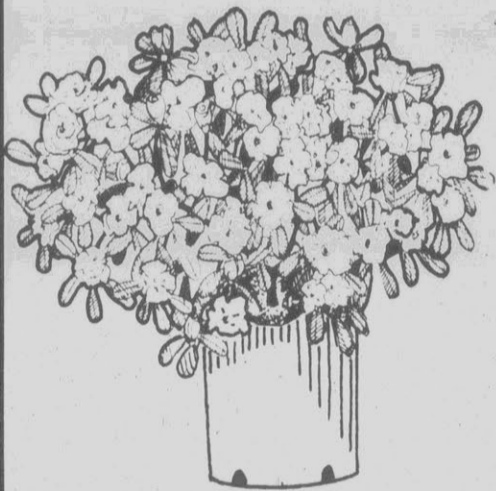

TO MAKE A BENEFIT RIDE ... ECU junior David Hicks is leaving Greenville May 1 for a 1,500-mile ride to Syracuse, N.Y., and back.

He is seeking sponsors for the ride, with all proceeds to go to the Eastern Lung Association.

Bail Opposed For Jeffrey MacDonald

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) - A federal appeals court has been told that Jeffrey MacDonald should be denied bail because he probably would flee rather than face life imprisonment for the murders of his wife and two daughters.

Government attorneys told the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on Tuesday to leave intact a decision of U.S. District Court in North Carolina that denied MacDonald bail after the U.S. Supreme Court upheld his conviction on March 31.

MacDonald, a former Green Beret doctor, was sentenced to three life terms after being convicted in August 1979 of the 1970 stabbing and bludgeoning murders in the family's Fort Bragg, N.C., home.

His conviction in the North Carolina federal court was reversed by the federal appeals court in Richmond on July 29, 1980, and he was freed on bail at the appeals court's insistence.

But the Supreme Court reversed the appeals court finding that MacDonald's conviction was improper because he had been denied a speedy trial. He was immediately taken into custody and now is in federal prison at Terminal Island, Calif.

MacDonald had been living in California on $100,000 bail since the appeals court decision. MacDonald's lawyers filed for a review of the Supreme Court decision, and also appealed the bail revocation to the 4th Circuit Court, saying it retained jurisdiction and its earlier order about bail still was valid.

But government attorneys, in their written response to that argument, told the court Tuesday that the power to grant or continue to deny bail rests with the district court.

Terms of the appeals court's 1980 order granting bail, they said, "implicitly continued the district court's power to act, at least where a change of circumstances dramatically increased risk that (MacDonald) would flee."

The district court, the government said, has "ample grounds for believing that (MacDonald) could not accept the suddenly looming reality of life imprisonment and that he would take flight at whatever unpredictable moment this reality struck home."

If the appeals court disagrees, the government said, it should consider the government's response a request to rescind its bail order.

MacDonald was convicted of killing his pregnant wife, Colette, 24, and their daughters, Kimberly, 6, and Kristen, 3, in their home.

He has steadfastly maintained that the murders were committed by intruders who chanted "Acid Is Groovy. Kill The Pigs." Last Friday, Brian Murtaugh, Justice Department attorney supervising the MacDonald case, said the FBI, at the request of a retired FBI agent, has reopened its investigation of the case on the basis of new evidence.

The evidence is a signed statement by Helen Stockley, a onetime police informant, who claims she witnessed the murders and that they were committed by a satanic cult that broke into the MacDonald home.

Ms. Stockley's account would support MacDonald's version of what happened.

Ms. Stockley was interviewed by authorities before MacDonald's 1979 trial in Raleigh, N.C., but gave conflicting accounts of her whereabouts the night of the killings and a judge severely limited her testimony.

The former FBI agent who requested the FBI to reopen its investigation of the case, Ted Gunderson, was employed by MacDonald's defense to make an independent investigation in 1980.

Gunderson, once in charge of the FBI's Los Angeles office, said he informed the agency in 1980 of Ms. Stockley's statement but didn't know for certain until last week that it had reopened its investigation.

Gunderson said the investigation apparently will focus on his allegations of civil rights violations against MacDonald and obstruction of justice.

Murtaugh confirmed in Washington that the FBI has been investigating Gunderson's report since June 1981 and said it has made "substantial progress."

But, the Justice Department lawyer added, results thus far have not supported Gunderson's contentions and "I'm convinced of the correctness of the jury verdict" that MacDonald committed the murders.

Report Sought On Coal Facility

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - Carteret County Crossroads, a citizens' group which has campaigned against coal trains, and two newspapers have filed suit against the State Ports Authority seeking release of an engineering report about the state's first coal export facility.

The three complaints, filed Friday in Wake Superior Court, allege that since March 1, the authority has refused public inspection of the report concerning coal transportation through Carteret and Craven counties.

The facility is run by Alla-Ohio Coals Inc., which has leased facilities at the state port in Morehead City. The company instigated the report.

The citizens' group contends that the Ports Authority used public funds in executing Alla-Ohio's lease, but failed to prepare an environmental impact statement as required by state law.

Alla-Ohio President Grant Godwin said in Washington that his firm had responded to "every conceivable question of environment and transportation" raised by the Crossroads group and found no basis for the complaint.

He said his company had analyzed what citizens called coal dust and found it was asphalt dust.

William M.A. Greene, Porth Authority chief, said the Ports Authority got its copy of the report free and would give it back to the company.

Gennis P. Myers, attorney for the authority, said the Ports Authority was reluctant to hand over the engineering report because of a dispute between the authority and the company which conducted the study.

Myers said the company wants the authority to pay the bill for the study.

Robert A. Stephens, editor of the New Bern Sun-Journal, said his paper had been trying for months to get the report and called the authority's reason for not handing over the report a "smokescreen."

The other paper filing suit was the Carteret County News-Times.

Final Trial Arguments On Seay Case Heard Today

NEW BERN — The jury trial of 41-year-old Earl B. Seay of Greenville was expected to begin its deliberations today following final arguments by the state and defense counsel.

Seay is charged with robbing a branch of First Citizens Bank on U.S. 70 east of New Bern of nearly $26,000 on Feb. 12.

The defense rested its case Tuesday afternoon and Judge Elbert Peel Jr. was expected to charge the jury today.

The defendant, who entered an innocent plea prior to his trial in Craven County Superior Court, told the court during emotional testimony Tuesday that one day during the two-week period prior to Feb. 12 he walked into a Wilmington bank with the intention of committing robbery but lost his nerve. The defense called as a character witness Stuart Buchanan, a Greenville insurance agency owner, who Seay had said he was negotiating with on a new insurance business venture that was supposed to begin on Feb. 15. Buchanan told the court that he would still hire Seay in spite of what has happened.

Seay said Tuesday that he had encountered financial problems beginning in 1978 and felt he was deeply in debt. The defendant, who formerly represented the Dale Carnegie motivational program in Greenville, also admitted that he had a drinking problem.

Dr. Robert Rollins, a forensic psychiatrist, told the court that based on his interviews with Seay, the defendant's wife and on test results he theorized that Seay had a low opinion of himself and did not feel that he had lived up to his or others' expectations. The psychiatrist said that while Seay thought he was in debt as much as $24,000, it turned out that the debt amounted to only $3,000 to $4,000. He said that Seay has had thoughts of suicide and had experienced a number of personal problems.

Rollins said that Seay was depressed and drinking and he viewed the bank robbery as the "final act to cover the fact he was a failure." The doctor also said that Seay's leaving a satchel in the bank following the robbery "indicated to me that he wanted to get caught."

Rollins testified that he felt Seay knew right from wrong at the time of the robbery but Seay's depression impaired his judgment and self control.

Seay's wife also took the stand Tuesday and testified that she knew nothing of her husband's action until law enforcement officers went to her house shortly after the

Gardner Trial Is Continuing

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
The trial of Ayden policeman Keith R. Gardner on charges of receiving embezzled property continued in Pitt County Superior Court this morning.

Gardner was charged in December with receiving 30 fans, valued at $1,490, which had been embezzled from Clark's Department Store in Greenville, where the officer worked part time as a security guard.

Former Clark's manager Abraham Pruett has pleaded guilty to embezzlement charges in connection with the case.

Pruett, who testified Tuesday afternoon, said he employed Gardner and several other law enforcement officers for "loss prevention" to watch out for shoplifters. He added that Gardner and other officers bought merchandise from the store at a discount.

Under direct examination by district attorney William Griffin of Williamston, special prosecutor for the case, Pruett said he sold Gardner a number of items during the period the department store was going out of business, including bicycles, air conditioners, electronic television games, a microwave oven and some "box type fans ... window fans."

Pruett said the first group of 72 fans Gardner purchased were priced regularly at $29 each.

They were "all new and in boxes. I asked if he wanted to buy the fans. Later on he came back and said 'yes.'"

Pruett then said Gardner picked up the fans on "Sunday morning ... we were always busy during the week," adding that Gardner paid the $360 ($5 each) for the fans a week later "in cash," and "I embezzled it."

Pruett also testified that "none of the money" Gardner paid him for four air conditioning units or other items went into the store account.

The former manager also said he gave Gardner a number of items that had been returned to the store "defective" after "I salvaged what I could."

When "another shipment of fans came in — 50 or 60 of them," which sold for about $49 each, Pruett said he discussed them with Gardner and "asked if he wanted to buy them" for $10 each.

Gardner at first rejected the offer, Pruett said. However, Pruett said Gardner returned later and said "he'd take 30 of them."

The former manager said Gardner came to pick up the fans on a Sunday morning. Pruett and Gardner were in the process of loading the fans on Gardner's truck, Pruett said, when "security (several of Clark's loss prevention division employees) came up," followed by "gobs" of local police officers.

Pruett also related how Gardner delivered the money for several of the items he purchased from the store to Pruett's home.

Saying no other store employee followed the same procedure, Pruett testified that he told Gardner that he, Pruett "would pay for the fans myself and let him pay me back."

Pruett said he embezzled $500 to $600 altogether.

Under cross-examination by defense attorney Jim Roberts, Pruett said he also sold other officers working part time items at discount prices, but said those purchases were made through the checkout line as store policy called for, although he acknowledged that "I loaned the boys money" to pay for some of the merchandise "out of my pocket and they paid me back later."

Pruett said Gardner had been "the most active as far as (apprehension of) shoplifters of the security officers," and acknowledged that Gardner had testified in court in shoplifting cases for the store since his arrest in December. He also acknowledged that he never told Gardner he was embezzling money from the store.

Pitt County Deputy Sheriff Billy Tripp, who Pruett said worked part time as head of the store security officers, told the court Tuesday that he recommended Gardner for the part-time job.

"I heard he (Gardner) purchased 20 fans," Tripp said, and "asked him" about it. Gardner, Tripp continued, "said he had. I told him it didn't look good. Normally you don't buy anything in the quantity of 20 window fans."

"I asked if he had a receipt," and Gardner indicated that he did, Tripp continued.

"I was supposed to be in charge of security ... just felt like it didn't look good."

Claude Malone of Kernersville, regional security director for Cook United, Clark's parent company, said as a result of a telephone call from the Cook home office on Nov. 24, a half-dozen employees of Clark's store in Greenville were interviewed. Following those interviews, Malone and three other Cook loss prevention division employees "then set up a surveillance," which began about 9 p.m. Saturday (Dec. 5).

Malone said the men watching the store were "looking for large items leaving the store."

About 9:30 a.m. Sunday (Dec. 6) Pruett came to the store, stayed about 10 to 15 minutes, then left to ride "up and down" various streets in the area for 20 to 30 minutes before returning.

Gardner, Malone said, came to the store about 10:45 or 11 a.m. After Gardner pulled his truck to a door at the rear of the building and began loading fans onto the vehicle, "We moved in on them," Malone said.

The security official said Pruett asked, "What are you boys doing here?" Malone testified Pruett then said he was "selling fans to Mr. Gardner."

Returning to the witness stand this morning, Malone told how he and others went to Gardner's home in Ayden that Sunday afternoon and removed a number of items from Gardner's garage and returned them to the store.

Malone, who described Gardner as cooperative, said Gardner returned a quantity of conduit to Clark's on the following Monday. "Our van wasn't big enough" to get all the merchandise back to the store, Malone noted.

The security officer noted that Gardner, at his home, "started talking about how he and his wife had discussed the deals he made at Clark's. She was wondering if the deals were too good to be true."

"Now I know how bad it looks," Malone said Gardner commented.

Testimony in the case was expected to continue through this afternoon.

Seeking Pair In Robbery Case

Greenville police were looking for two men who allegedly stole a pocketbook from Constance Lee Patterson of Eastbrook Apartments about 2:45 a.m. today. Chief Glenn Cannon said Ms. Patterson was approached by two men who forced her into an alley-way off Chestnut Street behind College View Cleaners, then pushed her to the ground. The chief, who said Ms. Patterson got up and was pushed down a second time, noted the robbers fled with her purse when a passerby stopped to see what was happening.

Astronomers Expect Giant Star To Explode

By WARRENE LEARY
AP Science Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A stellar event of the highest magnitude is imminent, say astronomers, who are predicting that the largest star in the Milky Way could at any moment become the next supernova observable from Earth.

The rare phenomenon, signalling a massive explosion of the giant, swollen star, could be sighted at any time — today or 10,000 years from now — but astronomers say it will be "soon" in the cosmic scale of time.

When it does, the star will suddenly appear to be up to 100 million times brighter than before it exploded and could be seen even in broad daylight for a time.

Dr. Kris Davidson of the University of Minnesota in Minneapolis said Tuesday that the star Eta Carinae appears to be the most likely candidate in our part of the Milky Way galaxy to become a supernova.

"It may not be the next, but we can't identify another one that will go off in the next 100,000 years," Davidson said in a telephone interview.

Scientists estimate that a supernova occurs every 50 years among the billions of stars in our galaxy. But because only about a tenth of the galaxy is visible from the Earth, one can be observed only every couple of hundred years.

The last supernova recorded occurred in 1604, however, so another is long overdue.

Eta Carinae, visible only from the Southern Hemisphere, appears to be the only star of its kind discovered in the Milky Way. It is 100 times more massive than the sun and has a diameter of about 60 million miles, compared with less than a million miles for the sun.

"We call it a blue super giant and it really is unique," Davidson said. "There are some stars in other galaxies that look similar, and these are among the most luminous stars there are."

Such a star has a typical lifetime of only 2 or 3 million years, compared with several billion years for a slower-burning body such as the sun. The giant stars are so bright because they burn up their hydrogen fuel at a tremendously accelerated rate, astronomers say.

Stars become supernovas when they burn up most of their fuel, swell and then explode in a burst of light and energy.

The explosion of Eta

Carinae would cause it to give off more light than the combined brilliance of all the other stars for a period of weeks, Davidson said. It would be visible from Earth as a bright point of light even in the daytime.

Eta Carinae is about 9,000 light years from Earth. A light year is the distance light travels in space in a year at 186,000 miles per second, about six trillion miles. That means its explosion into a supernova actually may have occurred thousands of years ago but hasn't yet become visible here.

The star has been known to astronomers for hundreds of years. But because a thick mass of dust and gas it previously ejected obscures direct observation, no one knew whether it was a new star forming or an old star dying.

Davidson and Drs. Nolan R. Walborn and Theodore R. Gull of the Goddard Space Flight Center in Maryland made new observations using the Cerro Tololo Inter-American Observatory in Chile and the International Ultraviolet Explorer Satellite orbiting the Earth.

Their work, financed by the National Science Foundation and published in the current Astrophysical Journal, determined that the star is nearing the end of its life.

N.C. Report 'Available'

North Carolina's report of public response to the 1981 Resources Conservation Act Program Report and Environmental Impact Statement has been completed and is available for public review, according to local soil conservation officials.

"The report contains the public's comments of the secretary of agriculture's preferred program and alternative programs for conserving soil and water resources," said Coy Garrett, state conservationist. "These comments will present to the secretary the views and priorities of citizens in North Carolina who participated in the response."

The state Soil Conservation Service office in Raleigh received approximately 1,400 responses during the public participation period — November 1981 through January 1982. Over 73 percent of the respondents supported the continuation of the current program trends, Garrett said. The secretary of agriculture's preferred program was opposed by 65 percent of those responding.

Garrett said 100 percent of the respondents supported the idea that the nation's water and soil resources are worth protecting and that prevention of their degradation is essential.

Equipment For Colleges Urged

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt said Tuesday that community colleges will need new training equipment and good faculty members to train North Carolinians for the jobs that are being created by high-technology industries.

Hunt called on industries at Research Triangle Park to help Durham Technical Institute provide technical training programs.

Hunt made the statements during a luncheon for representatives of Research Triangle Park organizations.

Hunt said the community colleges will need cooperation from the General Assembly, county commissioners and private industry to succeed.

Hunt said North Carolina businesses and industries donated more than $4.5 million worth of equipment, supplies and materials to the community colleges in response to an appeal he and community college officials made last year.

Pay in Labor?

TOKYO (AP) — Hanoi has sent 10,000 Vietnamese to the Soviet Union as "a part of Vietnam's repayment of debts", a Japanese newspaper reports.

The Yomiuri newspaper quoted Japanese government and foreign diplomatic sources in Japan as saying the workers were sent to industrial compounds about 124 miles south of Moscow. The arrangement was made to repay some of Vietnam's $3 billion debt to the Soviet Union, Yomiuri said.

The report could not be confirmed independently.

Volunteer Serving 4-H Clubbers 16 Years

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer
GRIFTON — After 16 years, Nancy Allen is leading her third generation of 4-H youths to adulthood. The first two, she said, have "grown up and graduated" so she's begun again. Mrs. Allen is a volunteer 4-H Club leader and works with the Grifton Shad Pioneers. "I had a teen-age club and they all graduated and went away," she said, "and for two years we had no club, so I started a new one, younger."

She likes working with children, Mrs. Allen said, and that's why she's kept 4-H alive in the community. "It's a challenge," she explained. "I got involved basically because of my own children but I liked it and stayed involved." Mrs. Allen, who was a Girl Scout leader before becoming a 4-H leader, said a friend persuaded her to get into 4-H. "The community wanted to start a club and a friend talked me into leading it," she explained.

"I enjoy it, I enjoy the kids ... they make me feel young," added the volunteer. "When I've done something for them and they've done something for me and I see that smile, that makes me very happy. Especially when they win ribbons."

Through the years, Mrs. Allen has taken her clubs camping, organized bike-athons, town clean-ups and worked with her youth in the local Shad Festival.

On her own, she's attended leadership seminars over half the years she's been involved in 4-H.

"Last year was my ninth year at Rock Eagle, Georgia, the 4-H leadership training program," said Mrs. Allen, "and I went to Washington, D.C., last January and that later led me to serve on a committee here." The traveling, said the 4-H leader, is one benefit of volunteering she would hate to lose. "I enjoy the trips — most of them are places I would never have a reason or opportunity to visit otherwise," she noted.

From her clubs, Mrs. Allen produced several 4-H'ers who were voted outstanding in Pitt County, one of which served as president of the county council. Her group was also nominated outstanding county club for three years.

In addition, Mrs. Allen's daughter, one of her previous club members, is a 4-H leader in Wayne County. Another of her former members, Cynthia Lilley, serves as assistant leader of the Grifton Shad Pioneers.

In relation to the community, the 4-H leader says her years of volunteering have made her feel needed. "You feel like you're doing something for people," she explained, "you feel like you're helping somebody."

As for the children, "They're going places they've never been before and I feel as though I'm giving them opportunities they wouldn't have otherwise," she said.

"Some of the kids have a lot of help from mama and daddy," she added, "and some of them don't have anything — this gives them something."

16 YEARS IN 4-H ... Nancy Allen, above, goes over the fine points of preparing demonstrations at a recent meeting of her 4-H Club, the Grifton Shad Pioneers. Mrs. Allen has been a volunteer 4-H leader for 16 years and is now guiding her third club. "It's a challenge," she said. "I got involved basically because of my own children but I liked it and stayed involved. (Reflector Photo By Mary Schulken)

Says Local Phone Rates May Rise 89.6 Percent

By BILL OUTLAW
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A state Utilities Commission spokesman says local telephone rates may increase 89.6 percent in the next five years.

Edward Hipp, a member of the Federal-State Joint Board that conducted public hearings in Raleigh Tuesday, said the increases were possible because of changes approved by the Federal Communications Commission.

Hipp says new formulas for determining local rates would drastically cut the revenues local exchanges receive from interstate tolls.

Weighted factors were given to long-distance calls under the old formula. The more long distance calls made, the greater the amount given local exchanges.

The FCC has changed the formula to drastically reduce the supplements local exchanges would receive for long-distance, out-of-state calls, move which utility companies say will force them to increase their rates.

Until disagreements over the new rates are settled, the FCC has adopted a temporary formula that includes about a 50 percent supplement for all long-distance call tolls.

Companies specializing in long-distance telephone communications, which includes the use of microwave transmissions, have pushed for a reduction in local fees they are charged, Hipp said. The interstate companies can reduce their toll charges on long-distance calls if the fees are lower.

Hipp says those companies could bypass the local stations altogether, but would have to exclude some local areas. Hipp says the companies do not want to do that because they want to offer customers full services nationwide.

Other changes approved by the FCC which Hipp said would affect local rates are:

— A deregulation of telephone equipment sold to customers, so that telephone companies may no longer add rental fees for equipment to their base local rates. Such equipment would have to be sold and purchased in separate transactions from the local rates, Hipp said. He said that means local rates may be increased to compensate for that loss of revenue.

— An increase in the depreciation expense for the telephone companies' equipment. Hipp said this means utilities will have to pay more in depreciation expenses on a yearly basis, which he said would probably be offset by a local rate increase.

— A change taking wiring and installation cost factors out of the local base rate formula. Hipp said that probably means an increase in installation charges, as well as an increase in base rates to compensate for a loss of another source of revenue.

— The separation of revenues from Yellow Pages advertising from computations in the base rate.

Hipp said the state's 89.6 percent figure was obtained from the National Telecommunications and Information Administration, part of the U.S. Department of Commerce.

Representatives from several local telephone companies, appearing at Tuesday's hearing, said the projected impact in North Carolina is close to the forecast provided by the Commerce Department.

Earl Bellamy Jr., general manager of Atlantic Telephone Membership Corp., said the changes amount to 45 percent of the cooperative's toll revenue and 25 percent of its total revenue. He said the total impact could result in an estimated 81 percent local increase.

Roy Long, a plant accountant with The Concord Telephone Co., said the changes in the toll-call formula would amount to a possible increase of $3.75 per month for local lines in the next five years — amounting to a 45 percent increase, not including other changes approved by the FCC.

James Heins, president of Heins Telephone Co. in Sanford, said he believes the changes will force his company, which serves 16,194 access lines in an area about 40 miles south of Raleigh, to increase its local rates.

Lawrence Weber, a representative from Southern Bell's Atlanta office, said

Southern Bell recognizes that the change in the formula would hurt rural, low density areas to a greater extent than other areas.

Southern Bell is in an interesting position because its parent company, American Telephone & Telegraph, owns AT&T Long Lines, which would stand to benefit from a decrease in the formula.

On the other hand, Southern Bell also could be forced to increase its local rates to compensate for the reduction in toll revenues for its local exchanges.

Hipp said members of the Federal-State Joint Board for the Southeastern Region will get together with board members from seven nationwide regions to make a recommendation based on the hearings' results to the FCC. He said the FCC would make the final decision on the changes.

LWW Urges ERA Okay

The League of Women Voters of North Carolina has called on Gov. Jim Hunt and the General Assembly to give ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment top priority in the June legislative session.

Citing polls that show 63 percent of all Americans support ERA ratification, league members attending the 15th biennial state council meeting in Winston-Salem recommended that the General Assembly "respond to this popular mandate." They commended members of the Legislative Research Commission's Committee on Economic, Social and Legal Needs of Women for the 8-2 vote recommending ERA ratification.

In other business, the league announced adoption of a position calling for state legislation that would compensate victims of violent crimes and establish services to aid crime victims. The year-long study by local league chapters resulted in support of a fully funded witness assistance program within every state court district, it was pointed out.

Representing the Greenville-Pitt County League at the meeting were Mildred Indorf, Edith Weber, Kay Adler and Rhea Markello.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today, leveling off after Tuesday's decline. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose .76 to 841.32 in the first half hour.

But losers took a 5-4 lead over gainers in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said the market was faced with some resistance from sellers after its spring rally of the past five weeks.

In the day's economic news, the government reported that the gross national product, adjusted for inflation, declined at a 3.9 percent annual rate in the first quarter.

The quarterly figures also showed inflation running at a 3.6 percent annual rate — its lowest level in almost 10 years. Brokers said neither of those figures came as any real surprise to traders.

Today's early volume leaders included Texas Utilities, unchanged at 27 1/2; Exxon, off 1/4 at 27 1/4; and International Business Machines, up 1/4 at 63 1/2.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average fell 5.52 to 840.56.

Losers led gainers nearly 3 to 2 on the NYSE.

Big Board turnover was 54.61 million shares, compared with 58.47 million Monday.

The NYSE's composite index slipped 0.65 to 66.55.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off 2.34 at 271.61.

Annexation Is Talked By Bd.

In one of the briefest sessions of the Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission in recent years, board members discussed an annexation request Tuesday night regarding property off N.C. 33 and voted to recommend City Council approval.

In recommending council approval, commissioners stipulated that the planning board's endorsement was subject to the provision of an easement through nearby property to Greenville Utilities Commission. Jim Walker representing petitioner Donnie Spain, said that the developers propose to construct an office building on the tract, which involves just over one acre and is adjacent to the Fast Fare and Helen's Grooming World.

Staff planner Skip Browder discussed the Tar River Neighborhood Association's R-6N (residential) neighborhood revitalization proposal and pointed out that meetings have been held with the association and planning and zoning task force regarding the zone.

Browder, who said last month that the association viewed the new classification as a means of preserving their neighborhood, indicated Tuesday that the planning staff should be ready to make a recommendation by the May meeting. Commissioners also discussed briefly a format for rewriting the city's Zoning Ordinance.

The board welcomed Dennis Alexander and Barbara Fenner as new alternate members.

Atlanta Defeats Cincinnati To Break Major League Win Mark

By The Associated Press The Atlanta Braves broke a major league record with 12 victories to start the 1982 baseball season and immediately leveled their sights at a goal they haven't reached in more than two decades.

"This doesn't mean anything if we don't go all the way," Braves right fielder Claudell Washington said.

The Braves have won their division only once, in 1969, since abandoning the city of Milwaukee 16 years ago. In fact, the Braves have not won an NL pennant since 1958, the year after Lew Burdette hurled a string of 24 scoreless innings in Milwaukee's seven-game World Series triumph over the New York Yankees.

"I'm pleased. I just hope it doesn't end here," Washington said after driving in the tie-breaking run with a triple and scoring on a wild pitch in Atlanta's 4-2 victory over the Cincinnati Reds Tuesday night.

The victory broke the modern major league record of 11 victories to open a season set by the 1981 Oakland A's. The Braves eclipsed the old National League mark of 10 in a row by the 1955 Brooklyn Dodgers and 1962 Pittsburgh Pirates on Sunday when they beat Boston 6-5.

Cincinnati took a 2-0 lead in the second inning, giving the highly vocal crowd of 37,268 in Atlanta a brief scare. Reds pitcher Frank Pastore and Eddie Milner drove in the runs.

Chris Chambliss got Atlanta started with a homer in the bottom of the second to cut the Reds' lead to 2-1.

"We're not flukes, we're not fly-by-nighters," Chambliss said. "These games are not mistakes. We're good. I think we'll get a lot of respect now."

The Braves scored three runs in the third inning to take the lead and notch their fifth victory coming from behind. Rafael Ramirez started the rally with a homer, and, one out later, Glenn Hubbard walked. Hubbard scored on Washington's triple off the top of the center field fence, and Washington scored when Pastore threw a wild pitch.

Steve Brodrigan got the victory with 41-3 innings in relief of Tommy Boggs, and Gene Garber pitched the final three innings for his third save.

"It's nice to break the record, but we're not about to relax now," Atlanta skipper Joe Torre said. "We're in a pretty good position now. We're after more things than a record. We want to play in October."

Atlanta broke the record with the help of eight road victories, including two in San Diego, three in Cincinnati and three in Houston.

Cards 7, Pirates 4 Darrell Porter and Dane Iorg had two RBI each as the Cardinals stretched the league's second-longest winning streak to nine games. The Pirates, meanwhile, lost their third in a row.

John Martin pitched 71-3 innings for the victory, allowing all four Pittsburgh runs on six hits. The loss went to Rick Rhoden, a traditionally fast starter who never had lost a game in April before.

Mets 3, Cubs 2 After giving up an unearned run in the first inning, right-hander Mike Scott threw seven shutout innings for New York, and Neil Allen earned his third save. Homers by Joel Youngblood and Dave Kingman provided the Mets' firepower.

Kingman's homer was his fifth and gave him a league-leading 14 RBI.

Gary Woods drove in Chicago's second run in the ninth with a single off Scott's hand. Scott left the game at that point but was not injured seriously.

Padres 8, Giants 4 San Diego won its seventh in a row, mounting a 14-hit attack that included a homer and four RBI by Luis Salazar. The Padres now have pounded out 51 hits in their past three games.

Terry Kennedy also had two run-scoring hits for the Padres, who overcame a 1-0 San Francisco lead in the first inning with two runs in the second and four in the third.

All of San Diego's runs in the third inning were unearned after errors by center fielder Jeff Leonard and shortstop Guy Sularz.

Dodgers 10, Astros 2 Left-hander Fernando Valenzuela scattered eight hits and pitched Los Angeles' first complete game of the season as the Dodgers broke a six-game losing streak.

Ron Cey and Ken Landreaux each singled three times to lead Los Angeles' 19-hit attack. Valenzuela, 2-1, struck out seven and walked only one. One of the two go home by Ray Knight.

Rick Monday homered for Los Angeles in the second inning.

Gaylord Strikes Out 13 En Route To Win No.298

SEATTLE (AP)—Seldom, if ever, have Seattle Mariners baseball fans expressed so much appreciation for a pitcher.

As Gaylord Perry's strikeout total grew Tuesday night, so did the crowd's holler.

"I thought I'd try a few tricks and wake up the fans," Perry said Tuesday night after he struck out 13 batters to help the Mariners snap the California Angels' seven-game winning streak with a 6-4 victory.

"They love baseball here," said Perry, recalling his Pacific Coast League days with nearby Tacoma in the early 60s. "We've just got to show them some."

For the 40th time in his career, the 43-year-old right-hander from Williamston, N.C., struck out 10 or more batters. His effort broke the Mariners club mark of 11. He now has 3,359 career strikeouts, second only to Walter Johnson, who had 3,508. Perry earned his first Mariner victory in three decisions and 298th career triumph.

The Angels, trailing 6-3 entering the eighth, scored quickly on Don Baylor's RBI single one out after a Juan Beniquez double. Doug DeCinces and Tim Foli singled, loading the bases.

Mike Stanton replaced Perry. Pinch-hitter Daryl Sconiers grounded to Seattle second baseman Julio Cruz, who forced Foli at second. But shortstop Todd Cruz threw the relay wildly past first with Baylor and DeCinces apparently scoring. However, second base umpire Steve Palermo called Sconiers out for Foli's interference with Todd Cruz, nullifying the two runs.

"If you touch the base, it's a legal slide," argued California Manager Gene Mauch, whose club played the from there under protest. "Foli said he could" touch the base. Mauch also said Palermo told Foli that he (Foli) touched second in front of California Coach Bobby Knoop and first base umpire Greg Kosc.

Despite striking out six in the first two innings, Perry yielded five hits and three runs as the Angels jumped in front, 3-1.

"I got some pitches higher than I usually do," Perry said. "I made some pitches I shouldn't have. I tried to show the younger pitchers to never give up."

Seattle Manager Rene Lachemann said he nearly pulled Perry early.

"He gets tougher and tougher when they get men on base," Lachemann said. "I don't care if he's 70 years old. He knows how to pitch."

But Mauch, like many others, contended Perry loaded the ball with a foreign substance to make it move more. "Gaylord Perry will be and should be in the Hall of Fame," Mauch said. "There should be a tube of K-Y Jelly next to the plaque."

Edmonton Owner Is Wounded

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — Peter Pocklington, the multimillionaire owner of Edmonton's hockey, soccer and baseball teams, was slightly wounded when police rescued him from a masked gunman who held him captive for 12 hours in an attempt to collect $1 million in ransom.

A spokeswoman said the police fired at the gunman and the bullet went through his arm and apparently lodged in Pocklington's shoulder. The gunman was reported in stable condition.

Publication of the gunman's identity was prohibited by law until he was formally charged. But the police said he was in his 20s, was armed with an M-16 automatic rifle and a knife and was extremely dangerous.

The police gave this account of the incident:

Wearing a ski mask, the man burst into the Pocklington home on the edge of the University of Alberta campus at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday and tied up the 40-year-old businessman-sportsman, his housekeeper and a male babysitter.

Pocklington's 5-year-old son, Zachary, was at school and his wife, Eva, was on the telephone with a friend. When the line went dead, the friend telephoned the police, and Mrs. Pocklington escaped barefoot from the house.

The police made contact by telephone with the gunman, who demanded $1 million in big bills and a safe escape route. Police negotiators persuaded him to release the housekeeper, a woman in her 50s, and the 21-year-old babysitter after four hours and told him they were getting the money together from local banks.

The housekeeper and the babysitter said their hands and feet had been tied with wire but they had been treated comparatively well.

After eight hours, Pocklington was permitted to speak with the police by telephone, and a police official reported: "He seems to be holding up well. There's no indication of ill treatment."

Meanwhile, Mrs. Pocklington told the police about a "secret entrance" to the house, and four police officers got in through it in the late afternoon. Several hours later the gunman was lured downstairs to collect the ransom, bringing Pocklington with him, and the police opened fire.

Pocklington, whose personal fortune is estimated at more than $100 million, struck it rich in the automobile business after coming to oil-producing Alberta province from his native Ontario 10 years ago.

Garber Predicted Braves Would Break Win Record

ATLANTA (AP) — Gene Garber said he told his wife the Atlanta Braves would break the major league record for consecutive victories at the start of a season and that he would be on the mound when it happened.

"I just had that feeling," Garber said Tuesday night after he pitched the final three innings of Atlanta's 4-2 triumph over the Cincinnati Reds that stretched the Braves' winning streak to 12 games.

"I told my wife I'd be on the mound when we won 12," said Garber, who now figures prominently in two streaks of baseball lore.

It was Garber who retired Pete Rose for the final time in the 1978 game that saw the former Cincinnati star's 44-game hitting streak end.

"That was a lot of fun," Garber said. "It brought back memories of another time."

"If you can't enjoy baseball in that kind of atmosphere, you don't enjoy baseball," he said, referring to a partisan crowd of 37,288 that roared on every Garber pitch as he retired the Reds in order in the ninth inning.

"This was more important than the Rose streak," he added. "That was more or less a personal confrontation."

The 12th victory erased the old modern baseball mark of 11 consecutive triumphs at the start of a season set by the Oakland A's last year. Atlanta had tied that mark with a 6-5 decision Sunday at Houston.

"Records are nice, but at the same time that's only 12 games," said Braves' third baseman Bob Horner. "The pressure is going to be there until Oct. 1 rolls around."

Chris Chambliss, who had a solo homer in the second inning, said the crowd reaction "reminded me of the games the (New York) Yankees used to play with Boston. You get pumped up because of the situation—the record."

Chambliss said the Braves were more excited about the streak than the Yankees got during winning streaks when he was there because "they knew more were to come."

"We're not flukes," said Chambliss. "We're not fly-by-nighters. We're good. I think we'll get a lot of respect now."

"We got our act together on the road and then came home and it was an October crowd in April," Torre said.

"I'm pleased," said Claudell Washington, who drove in the go-ahead run with a third-inning triple and then scored on a wild pitch. "I just hope it doesn't stop here. It doesn't mean anything if we don't go all the way."

Jones Top Award Winner...

women's NCAA tournament this past season.

Mimi Senkowski, project director for Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co.'s Special Events Corporate and Retail Marketing Department was the speaker for the occasion, urging top promotion of women's basketball.

"The women's (basketball) game as we have known it has only been around 12 years. That amazes me," Senkowski said. "It's still in its infancy and it would be an injustice to compare it to the men's game."

Senkowski said that the day of the passive fan is gone, that the fan wants to be involved with the teams it pulls for. She singled out East Carolina's "Rat Hat" as one promotional device that helps put the fan into the picture.

"But you have to broaden your horizons. You have to view women's basketball not only as a sport but entertainment too."

Women's basketball, however, is facing a problem in that federal funds for education are being cut back, and that could affect sports. Too, the NCAA is now sponsoring 29 championships for women in 12 different sports, and women's basketball is the only one that is a potential moneymaker.

"That's good and bad. It affords greater visibility, but it could also lead to the rich getting richer," Senkowski said.

She noted that early on, smaller schools had used women's basketball to gain

prestige while the larger schools with more funds viewed it as a necessary evil. But with the new revenues possible from the sport, the larger schools are taking over the sport and she noted that the once-powerful schools in women's basketball are no longer on the scene, most competing outside the Division I area.

"There are two alternatives that you can use in raising funds," Senkowski said. "You can sit back and wait for the support you feel that you deserve, but if you are not willing to pursue this support, you really don't deserve it."

"Or you can go after these outside funds. You can get it from alumni and boosters groups, but they've been hit too many times, or you can solicit corporate support (such as that supplied in sports now by Manufacturers Hanover)."

While noting that corporations such as the one she represents are not charity organizations, these companies have found that supporting sports is an outstanding way of advertising. "It exposes the corporation to the fans. And it is less expensive than taking out a full-page ad in a newspaper in many areas."

Manufacturers Hanover sponsors both the Westchester Golf Classic of the PGA tour, and the Christmas Doubleheader for women in Madison Square Garden. "This past year, we got more publicity on the women's doubleheader than we did in the golf tournament."

She said that women's basketball is a good thing to sponsor since it is an emerging sport. "The whole key is coming up with a program that is mutually beneficial to both the corporation and the sports program."

As to promotion itself, she recommends a grass-roots program, one that will bring in the younger crowd. "The youth are not as close-minded. Once you get them behind you, they'll keep coming back. You have to allow them to identify with you; you must get to know them on a personal level, make them feel important and appreciated."

She said that clinics, contacts with other sport teams and word-of-mouth are other important means of promotion.

"Promotion isn't easy. It takes a lot of hard work. But women can't sit back now and think that they've arrived. They have to look to the future and see just how far they still have to go."

Sweeting Wins Tourney

NAGS HEAD — East Carolina's Don Sweeting fired a two-over-par 73 yesterday at Seascope to go with his 64 of Monday to captured the championship of the Old Dominion Invitational with a total of five-under-par 137.

His 64 and the 134 both represent new tournament records for the two-day event.

"To my knowledge, no one has ever had a better round or tournament in East Carolina golf history," Coach Bob Helmick said of Sweeting's play.

As a team, the Pirates finished in fourth place with a team total of 578. Temple University took the team title with a 562, while William & Mary was second at 573, followed by Campbell at 577. Host Old Dominion was fifth in the 14-team tournament with a 579.

Other team scores were: UNC-Charlotte 591, UNC-Wilmington 593, Richmond 602, Virginia Military 615, Virginia Commonwealth 631, George Mason 635 and Salisbury State College 658.

Other scores for East Carolina were Chris Czaja, 78-73-151; Jerry Lee, 73-73-146; David Waggoner, 74-74-148; and John Derrico, 75-73-148.

The tournament wound up the 1982 season for the Pirates.

Four Women Sign With ECU

East Carolina University's women's basketball team has signed four players, it has been learned.

In addition to the already announced signing of SouthWest Edgecombe's Bridget Jenkins, the Associated Press' Player of the Year, Coach Cathy Andruzzi announced during the Lady Pirate Basketball Banquet last night that Lisa Squirewell, Sylvia Bragg and Rita Simmons had signed with the Pirates.

Squirewell, a 5-10 forward, will graduate from Wake Forest-Rolesville High School this spring, and was selected to the AP's All-State team.

Bragg is a 5-8 wing player from Jefferson-Hugenot-White High School of Richmond, Virginia, where she was a teammate of ECU freshman Darlene Chaney. She was an all-regional selection and recently played in the All-Metro All-Star game.

Simmons is a 6-0 center from Miami (Fla.) Central High School. She was an all-city selection last year.

It is believed that at least one more signee can be anticipated by the Lady Pirates.

Is Borg Simply A Spoiled Brat?

By The Associated Press

Is Bjorn Borg an arrogant, spoiled, insufferable brat? Or is he an unshakeable, independent-minded Swede who is willing to fight for his personal rights at the expense of his wallet?

Few matters in recent years have so aroused the tennis community as the decision by the All-England Croquet and Tennis Club to force its five-time men's champion to qualify for the 1982 Wimbledon and the young Viking's refusal to accede.

"Who does Borg think he is?" fumes a Mexican journalist, who has covered the international tennis scene for some 40 years. "Everybody else has to qualify. So should Borg."

"I think he is a whining cry baby."

Others wonder why Borg is so special. If he's the world's best, what is he afraid of?

For Borg and his long-time adviser, Lennart Bergelin, it is more than that. Principle is involved, and independence. Borg's stand is supported by a majority of his contemporaries, with Arthur Ashe, captain of the U.S. Davis Cup team, John McEnroe and Ivan Lendl speaking out publicly in his behalf.

While Wimbledon, as the austere 105-year-old great grandpappy of the game, may consider itself inviolate and beyond any insubordination, the last of the grass court classics may discover that the tournament suffers more than the man.

The blond, implacable Swede has been a Center Court hero for most of the last decade, a model champion, circumspect in behavior, exciting the staid, normally reserved ticket holders as never before and turning the moss-backed arena into a deafening din of school-age teeny-boppers.

Borg's absence would be keenly felt. But, with the British-Argentine emotions heating up to wartime pitch over the Falkland Islands, chances are two other of the world's top players, Guillermo Vilas and Jose-Luis Clerc of Argentina, will decide discreetly to sit this one out.

On top of this, the season's hottest player, Czechoslovakia's Lendl, winner of 10 of his last 15 tournaments, has hinted he may bypass Wimbledon to concentrate on the Davis Cup. Like Vilas and Clerc, Lendl isn't too happy playing on archaic turf.

Also, one can't forget McEnroe's heated rows with the All-England brass a year ago, resulting in the fiery American's spurning the post-tournament dinner and subsequently becoming the first winner to be black-balled by the club.

Last summer, before any of the foregoing events, it was thought that McEnroe's bitterness over his treatment might result in a boycott of his own. But John insists now he will play. "The best way to hurt them is to win again," he says.

Regardless, without the heart of tennis' Top Ten, the 1982 Wimbledon, the majestic championship of championships, will be reduced to a meaningless exercise, proving nothing.

Borg won't suffer.

Mark McCormack, head of International Management Group, Inc., puts Borg's earnings at more than $5 million a year with a backlog of endorsements and ancillary opportunities that will keep his bank account bulging for years.

It is ludicrous to demand that a player of Borg's accomplishments and stature be reduced to a qualifying level for a major tournament. At least, golf exempts its champions for 10 years — or until they reach an age that they are no longer competitive.

Borg is only 25. He is at the height of his game, with perhaps 10 years of championship tennis ahead of him if he so chooses.

Farmville Golfers Down Rose

WILSON — Farmville Central captured a pair of wins in a rain-shortened golf match yesterday in Wilson. Only nine holes of the projected 18-hole match were completed.

Farmville Central finished with a team total of 156, while Greenville Rose was second with 161. Wilson Fike was third with 167.

Gary Hobgood led Farmville and the field with a 39, while Jeff Cutler added a 33, Alan Wooten a 42, and Scott Lewis, a 42 for the Jaguars.

Rose was paced by Craig Davies with a 38, while Brian Hill had a 40, Spencer Mayo, a 41, and Lynn Moore, a 42.

Fike's low scorer was Claude Alligood with a 38, followed by Paul Sakas at 42, Steve Alt at 43, and Clay Mathison at 44.

Rose returns to action on Monday, hosting Central Hunt, while Farmville Central travels to Ayden-Grifton.

Borg Loses

Sweden's Bjorn Borg reaches high to return a backhand during his loss to Dick Stockton Tuesday in the qualifying round of the Caesars Palace Tennis Classic. Stockton won 7-6, 1-6, 6-2.

Chisox Streak Ends, 11-2

By The Associated Press

After flying high over the American League West, the Chicago White Sox finally came down to earth. It was quite a thud, too.

Shackled on one hit for six innings by Steve Trout, the New York Yankees broke through for seven runs in the seventh inning and went on to an 11-2 rout of the previously-unbeaten White Sox Tuesday night that stopped Chicago's winning streak at eight games.

"We didn't expect to get 16 hits on a cold night like this," New York's Lou Piniella said after a raw night in Comiskey Park. "But that's baseball. You can never tell."

Temperatures dipped into the 30s and snow flurries dropped intermittently throughout the game.

According to Chicago Manager Tony LaRussa, the White Sox were under no pressure to keep their streak going. "But," he said, "we're not happy we lost. It was a game we wanted to win, especially after we had a 2-0 lead."

That was wiped out by the Yankees' big seventh, which was highlighted by two-run singles by Rick Cerone and Willie Randolph. The Yankees sent 13 men to the plate in the seventh. They collected eight singles and then scored three more runs in the ninth.

Despite the defeat, Trout said, "I was extremely pleased with my performance. You can't go undefeated all year. Somebody had to get the first loss. We were just destined to lose. Maybe this defeat will bring us back to reality."

Tigers 8, Royals 0
Milt Wilcox, celebrating his 32nd birthday, pitched a one-hitter and rookie Glenn Wilson doubled twice and drove in two runs as Detroit defeated Kansas City. The only hit off Wilcox was Jerry Martin's one-out bouncer through the left side of the infield in the second inning.

Meanwhile, Detroit sent 10 men to the plate in its half of the second, scoring six runs off Kansas City starter Vida Blue. The rally included an RBI double by Wilson, who was called up from Detroit's Triple-A farm club at Evansville of the American Association last Wednesday.

The one-hitter was the first of Wilcox' big league career.

"I felt good all night," he said. "You couldn't ask for a better birthday present."

Indians 9, Rangers 4

Andre Thornton drove in three runs with a double and a homer and Toby Harrah ignited a six-run fourth inning with a single as Cleveland pounded Texas.

Texas starter Charley Hough retired the first 10 Cleveland hitters, then gave up six consecutive base hits in the fourth, including Thornton's run-producing double. Harrah became the first Cleveland baserunner when his fourth-inning, one-out single stretched his hitting streak to nine games. Bert Blyleven won his second game in two decisions with late relief help.

Red Sox 8, Orioles 3
Glenn Hoffman's two-run homer capped a three-run rally in the fourth inning and Boston went on to beat Baltimore and extend the Orioles' losing streak to seven games.

After the Orioles had gone ahead 2-0 with two unearned runs off Boston starter Bobby Ojeda in the top of the fourth, the Red Sox bounced back against Mike Flanagan.

Boston added another run off Flanagan in the seventh on an RBI triple by Jim Rice and four more in an eighth-inning rally capped by Dwight Evans' two-run double.

A's 4, Twins 3

Dan Meyer singled home the winning run with two out in the 16th inning to lead Oakland over Minnesota. Davey Lopes started the rally with a leadoff double and Twins pitcher Bobby Castillo intentionally walked Mike Heath and then walked Fred Stanley to fill the bases before Meyer came through.

Winner Dave Beard pitched 42-3 innings in his first appearance since he was called up from the minors three days ago.

EC, S. Miss To Play

East Carolina University's football schedule in 1983, 1984, 1985, and 1986 will feature southern independent University of Southern Mississippi.

The Pirates and Golden Eagles have played eight times in the past, the last game in 1980 in Ficklen Stadium in Greenville.

"We are pleased to renew our football relationship with a very strong, highly respected program like that of Southern Mississippi," Athletic Director Ken Karr said. "Southern Mississippi has built a fine program, including a Tangerine Bowl invitation last season."

"As we aspire to continue scheduling NCAA Division I-A schools, the likes of Southern Mississippi fits very nicely within our plans. We are happy to announce this four-game home-and-home series."

The 1983 contest will be played in Hattiesburg, Miss., as will the 1985 game. Games in 1984 and 1986 will be played in Greenville.

Swimmers Get Awards

Four members of the East Carolina University swimming teams were honored when the team held its annual awards banquet earlier this week.

Gregor Wray, a freshman, was named the Most Improved Swimmer on the men's team, while sophomore Nancy Rogers capped the same award for the women.

Doug Nieman, a senior, was named the men's Most Outstanding Swimmer, while sophomore Nan George garnered the honor for the women.

The teams also named co-captains for next season. Nancy James, a rising sophomore, will join Rogers as co-captain for the women. Former Rose star Lance Timmons and David Giovine, both rising seniors, will co-captain the men's team.

NHL Trio Looks To Finish Series

By The Associated Press
 Emile Francis says it takes two key ingredients to win the National Hockey League championship.

The coach and general manager of the St. Louis Blues, whose team is one of three on the brink of a long vacation as the NHL quarterfinal playoff series resume tonight, says, "To win the Stanley Cup, you've got to be both lucky and good. And, so far, our luck hasn't been too good."

The Blues trail the surprising Chicago Black Hawks 3-1 in the best-of-7 series that continues tonight in St. Louis. The rest of the schedule shows the two-time defending champion New York Islanders, ahead 3-1, at home against the New York Rangers; the Los Angeles Kings, down 1-3, traveling to Vancouver, British Columbia, to play the Canucks, and the Bruins and Quebec Nordiques, tied 2-2, colliding at Boston.

So far, the 1982 playoffs have produced some of the most competitive games in recent memory, with 22 of 50 games decided by one goal. And 11 of those victories came in overtime — a figure just two short of the record of 13 extra-period games set in 1980.

A year ago, there were only eight overtime games in the entire postseason schedule, and just 19 of the 68 games played were decided to one goal.

Islander defenseman Denis Potvin, who scored a goal in his team's 5-3 victory Monday night in New York, talked about the tightness of the series he is playing in, but the sentiment could have been shared by everyone.

"Nobody's getting a break; none of these games have been any fun," the Islanders' captain said. "Right from the opening whistle, there's been no coasting."

"And this is just the second of four series. It's a long road to go after this. We're going to have to be ready to play right until the final buzzer."

The Black Hawks, who took a 7-4 decision on their home ice Monday night in Game 4, have a chance to advance to the NHL's semifinal round for the first time since 1974, when they lost to Boston.

"The series isn't over," said Chicago rookie goal Murray Bannerman, who has been in the nets for two of the three Black Hawk victories. "But I think you'd have to agree that the mathematics are with us."

Francis said his team still is in it, but only if the Blues can stop Chicago forward Denis Savard.

Savard poured in three goals, one of them while the Black Hawks were shorthanded, in Game 4.

"Denis Savard is not going to wander all over the ice unmolested again," warned Francis. "If he does, we'll never get out of the hole we're in."

The Canucks still are playing with an injury-depleted rank of defenseman, but goalie Richard Brodeur has really picked up the slack against the Kings. He's allowed just 16 goals in seven playoff games.

"This proves we've got a good system," Brodeur said after his team's 5-4 victory Monday night. "It's simple, close-checking hockey and that's why it works...we're proving it."

"He (Brodeur) has been so aggravating to us," said Los Angeles defenseman Rick Chartraw. "He's been stoning us."

But the goalie has had help from the defenseman who remain healthy.

"Someone's always been coming up big for us, ready to go when we get hit by the injuries," said right winger Stan Smyl, acting captain since defenseman Kevin McCarthy broke an ankle in practice.

The only series that can't be decided tonight is Quebec-Boston, knotted Monday night by the Nordiques' 7-2 victory.

So far, each team has won both of its home games, which would appear to give Boston an edge, since tonight's game is at Boston Garden, as would be a seventh game, if needed.

It started with a dream. Henry Breyer's dream to make the best ice cream the country had ever seen. So he searched to find the best vanilla beans on earth. And he added only extra-rich, dark chocolate to Breyers ice cream. To this day, only fresh, natural ingredients go into Breyers ice cream. Like real milk and cream. Pure sugar. And nothing artificial. Ever. Sometimes, if you care enough, a dream can last a long, long time.

The bidding:

Pass 2♥ Pass 4♥
Pass Pass Pass
Opening lead: Ten of ♠.

At this very moment, a creeping paralysis is attacking many bridge players throughout the world. This strange disease attacks declarers whenever they encounter a bad trump break!

North-South glided into four hearts on a perfectly normal auction. As the cards lie, however, three no trump is a superior contract. Eleven tricks can be made by finessing the eight of hearts once the 5-0 break is discovered.

West led a spade. Declarer correctly ducked in dummy and East won the queen. He shifted to the jack of clubs, won by the ace. Declarer led a trump to the jack. When East showed out declarer's thought processes went into a state of instant shock. He decided that he had to pick up West's trumps, so he came to hand with the queen of diamonds and led a trump to dummy's eight. Then he cashed the king of trumps.

Now all declarer had to do was get back to his hand to draw the remaining trumps. He tried to do so by leading a diamond to the jack. Unfortunately, West ruffed and returned a spade. Declarer was locked in dummy with the ace with no way to get to his hand. No matter what he played, the defenders were bound to score their black-suit kings and another diamond ruff for a two-trick set.

Declarer forgot that the main object in rubber bridge is to make your contract. Instead of worrying about West's five trumps, declarer should have concentrated on making ten tricks. The sure-fire line is to draw four rounds of trumps, leaving West with the master trump. Now declarer starts on diamonds. West is welcome to ruff whenever he chooses, but declarer will be able to discard one of his black-suit losers on dummy's fourth diamond — the ace of spades is still an entry to dummy. Declarer will lose only one trump trick and two in the black suits.

Documentaries Given The Spotlight Tonight

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The Israeli-Arab conflict on the West Bank is so complicated and fragmented that both sides take on elements of underdog and victim.

That's the most lasting impression of tonight's "ABC News Closeup: Fortress Israel," a documentary that has some organizational deficiencies, but still manages to bring a multifaceted situation into sharper focus.

From the perspective of Dr. Samir Cabeth, a Palestinian nationalist who was jailed without charge last year, Israel is a prison. It rules appropriated lands, occupied by 800,000 Arabs, by suppressing political dissent, banning books, closing schools and making mass arrests.

"I expected the occupation to last three months, six months," Cabeth says. "I am living the last 15 years under martial law."

For Cabeth's fifth-grade child, Israel is a military dictatorship. "Soldiers with weapons to my children are Israelis," Cabeth says. "Any soldier from any country is an Israeli. He is a Jew, he has a gun."

Of course, the need for aggressive self-defense stems from Jewish history — both ancient and 40 years old — and the antagonisms of the Arab world surrounding Israel. Within these historical contexts, Israel, a democracy, sees fit to govern occupied lands as a military dictator.

"Every settlement in Israel is part of a territorial defense system," says Ariel Sharon, Israel's defense minister.

The Jews in Israel are imbued by this need to survive. Many of them see the lands taken from the six-day war in 1967 as their biblical birthright.

"The experience of the Holocaust only made it much clearer," says Judith Cohen, "that ... one needs a homeland to get a stronger foothold on this earth."

One of the many ironies is that the Arabs could say the same thing.

Mrs. Cohen, whose parents survived Auschwitz but lost a child there, says she doesn't "feel guilty for taking anybody's land." She's aware of discrimination, but not overly concerned. "I also know ... the other side of the tragedy, and that's my parents' tragedy."

"Fortress Israel," which examines three decades of Israel's struggles from the human angle, has been timed to coincide with Israel's withdrawal from the Sinai Peninsula on Sunday.

Another program closely associated with events in the news tonight is "CBS Reports: People Like Us," a documentary that offers four stories about Americans in trouble because of federal cuts in spending.

"These are people who have slipped through the safety net and are falling away," says Bill Moyers, the show's correspondent. "Except for matters of chance, they are people like us."

This documentary works well because the narrow scope allows for some very human situations to effectively represent a growing national condition. And it also has Moyers, who seems to really care about the suffering he sees. He's a superb listener.

There is a cerebral palsy victim who was removed from the Social Security disability rolls. He has a chance to plead his case, but that will take several months. There is an abandoned wife who took a job last summer but was forced to give it up because it made her ineligible for Medicaid, which she needs to finance her son's operation. And there is a woman who was forced to institutionalize her comatose 13-year-old daughter when Medicaid rules were changed.

In tough economic times, people often look for scapegoats to rationalize their plights. That's one explanation for the resurgence of the Ku Klux Klan, which is explored tonight in the PBS documentary "Bad Moon Rising."

The Klan is still preaching hatred, but its methods are much slicker. The subjects of the Klan's attention now go beyond blacks and Jews to the new Americans: the Vietnamese and Mexicans.

Archibald MacLeish Succumbs

BOSTON (AP) — Archibald MacLeish, a poet, statesman, librarian of Congress, winner of three

ARCHIBALD MACLEISH

Pulitzer Prizes and composer of verses hailing Americans and the "stars and expectations" that guide them, is dead at 89.

MacLeish helped plan the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization; he worked as a soldier, lawyer, editor, professor at Harvard, dramatist and farmer. He condemned McCarthyism, urged writers to rally against fascism, and explored theological questions in "J.B.," a play that won the Pulitzer Prize.

"There are all sorts of things I want to do that I haven't been able to," he said in his last published interview, which appeared six months ago.

MacLeish, who lived in Conway, Mass., and retired in 1970 as Boylston professor of literature at Harvard University, died Tuesday night in Massachusetts General Hospital, which he entered March 20 for treatment of an undisclosed illness. The cause of his death was not announced.

"Down to about two years ago, I was working my head in the usual way," MacLeish told the Greenfield (Mass.) Recorder in an interview published last November. "But I had a little heart business. I've been a lot slower."

In 1939 he published "America Was Promises," a strong and explicit social statement. He wrote: "Tom Paine knew the People."

"The promises were spoken to the People. "History was voyaged toward the People. "Americas were landfalls of the People."

"Stars and expectations were the signals of the People."

MacLeish exhibited his usual sharp opinions in the Recorder interview. He said President Reagan was "going to begin to think God talks to him," and aimed a dart at rock 'n' roll. "I'd like very much never to have to hear it again," he said.

MacLeish won a wide audience and his first Pulitzer Prize in 1932 for "Conquistador," a poem based on his trek by pack mule along the trail of the soldiers who conquered Mexico.

His second Pulitzer came in 1953 for "Collected Poems 1917-1952." "J.B.," which won the Pulitzer drama award in 1959, was a play in verse based on the Book of Job.

He spent much of his life on his 200-acre Uphill Farm in Conway, a small town in the Berkshire Hills of western Massachusetts where he lived with Ada, his wife of 65 years.

Born in Glencoe, Ill., on May 7, 1892, MacLeish graduated from Yale University, where he won a Phi Beta Kappa key, and received a law degree in 1919 at the head of his class at Harvard Law School. His schooling was interrupted by World War I, and he served in the field artillery, first as a private, then as a captain.

MacLeish was a writer and later an editor with Fortune magazine for nine years during the Depression. During World War II, he directed the Office of Facts and Figures and was assistant director of its successor organization, the Office of War Information.

MacLeish served as head of the Library of Congress for five years beginning in 1939, then became assistant secretary of state for cultural affairs, a post in which he helped develop UNESCO. He joined the faculty at Harvard in 1949.

Among his many awards were the Antoinette Perry Award in drama in 1959, the Bollingen prize in poetry and the National Book Award for poetry in 1953. A motion picture based on his book, "The Eleanor Roosevelt Story," won an Academy Award in 1966.

Poetry is "a means of knowing the kind of thing that can only be known emotionally ... that can't be analyzed, taken apart, spelled out and put back together again," he said in 1976.

In addition to his wife, MacLeish is survived by a son, William H. of Woods Hole, Mass.; a daughter, Mary H. Grimm of Kensington, Md.; a sister, Ishbel Campbell of Geneva, N.Y.; nine grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

CBS Keeps Top Rating

NEW YORK (AP) — The three major TV networks lost nearly a million prime-time viewers in the 28-week season that ended April 18 with CBS the No. 1 network for the third straight year, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. show.

Average ratings for all three networks declined in the season that began Oct. 5, although ABC actually added about 210,000 viewers to its average prime-time audience, a result of the increasing size of the TV universe as a whole.

CBS, in the period, lost about 330,000 viewers, and NBC an estimated 870,000.

CBS' rating for the season was eight-tenths of a point below the network's mark for the 1980-81 TV year, ABC finished off a tenth of a point, and NBC was 1.4 points from the previous season.

Analysts attribute the declining network audience to increased cable and pay TV activity, as well as heightened competition from independent stations.

While CBS maintained its grip on first place in the networks' competition for the TV season, with an average rating of 19 to 18.1 for ABC and 15.2 for NBC, two of the network's most consistent hits, "Dallas" and "60 Minutes," remained the dominant programs.

"Dallas" was No. 1 in prime time last season, and "60 Minutes" the year before. They finished one-two for the 1981-82 TV year.

The networks CBS' rating for the season means in an average minute of prime-time, 19 percent of the nation's TV-equipped homes were tuned to the leading network.

CBS finished first in the three-way race 19 times this season, ABC eight, and the two networks tied for first on one occasion.

FOCUS

Education is Child's Play

A neglected, motherless boy outgrew his lonely childhood to become one of the most innovative educators of the 19th century. Friedrich Froebel, whose 200th birthday is today, became convinced that the education of children should begin at birth. He thought education should be a continuous growth process with mental, physical and spiritual dimensions. Many of his ideas still seem modern. He emphasized learning through creative play, and believed in letting children develop spontaneously, through choice not force. A former forester, Froebel's most lasting legacy is the kindergarten or child garden. Each child is treated as a unique flower of nature which must be lovingly nurtured.

On New '82 1301 Tercel
9 Colors To Order From
• 3 Year/45,000 Mile TEMA Available!

Explanation: The remarkable new AutoTerm plan—available now at Toyota East in Greenville—brings down the high cost of transportation. AutoTerm is less costly than the conventional way of buying a car... and it's better than any lease you've ever seen.

Imagine, a new Toyota for under $133 per month... and with no money down! The savings on your monthly payments and down payment add up to hundreds of dollars. That's money in the bank... earning you money!

All vehicles qualify for TEMA (Toyota East Maintenance Agreement)—3 year, 45,000 mile extended service plan.

Term is 48 months. To calculate total of payments, simply multiply 48 by the monthly payment amount. First monthly payment and a refundable security deposit in that same amount required at beginning of lease. You have no responsibility at end of term... you may purchase the car or walk away... your option. Prices shown require approved credit and do not include tax and license.

Police Keep Home Life, Jobs Apart

By JOHN KENNEDY
Associated Press Writer
MEDFORD, Ore. (AP) — Elmer Kammel is 6 foot 4, a self-professed "hot dog," likable and street smart. Shirley Peters is 5 foot 4, blonde, meticulous and a quick wit.

Both are police officers in this southern Oregon town. They patrol in separate cars, but ride home together at the end of the working day. They are married.

"But there's nothing sensational about it," says Ms. Peters. "We're just a couple that happens to have the same profession."

They both prefer working the swing shift — 4 p.m. to 12 midnight — and not because they like listening to each other on the police radio or passing each other during their patrols. On the swing shift, the workday goes much quicker because there is more action, they say.

"We don't worry about each other," Kammel says. "We don't have the time to worry about each other."

They have dramatically different styles on the job.

"I like to go into a situation where you don't know what's going on, and everything happens so fast, it's like fastballs coming at you," says the 35-year-old Kammel.

"I like to go into a situation prepared," the 29-year-old Ms. Peters says. "I can handle a fastball but..."

Kammel, part Hawaiian and part German, is the son of a police officer and the grandson of a prison guard. He grew up in Southern California and worked for seven years in law enforcement in Cypress, Calif.

He moved to Medford seven years ago.

Ms. Peters grew up in Medford, the daughter of two teachers. She worked as a cocktail waitress, while a student at nearby Southern Oregon State College. One day, a police officer dared her to try out for a job on the force.

She got the job and became Medford's first woman police officer. She remains the city's only female on a force of about 45 patrol officers.

"I was hired a week before Elmer," she says. "I have seven days seniority." She also makes slightly more money because of it.

Their wedding — conducted out of town to avoid publicity — was about a year ago. It was her first marriage; his second. Ms. Peters laughs that it almost didn't come off. Two days before the ceremony, Kammel was hurt while chasing a suspected robber.

At first, department brass expressed trepidation over how the married officers would react when one or the other was confronted with danger.

"It seems to work very well," says Chief Otto McGee. "We were watching to see if it would cause any problems. It hasn't."

Kammel prefers street work and wants to be a sergeant. Ms. Peters prefers investigation work, and wants to become a detective.

"She likes to feel the water before she gets in," he says. "She's very meticulous."

"If it came to a bar fight, I'd rather have a male partner," Kammel says. "If it came to brains, I'd rather have her. She's bright."

"I don't come on as tough," Ms. Peters says. "I use my femininity."

It's common for the couple to answer the same call during a normal shift.

Once Kammel chased down a motorcyclist and Ms. Peters arrived soon after as the two wrestled on the ground. It took two other off-duty police officers to help subdue the suspect.

Although Kammel has two daughters from his first marriage, Ms. Peters still hopes to have children of her own.

But neither of them hesitates when asked if they will stay in police work.

"Elmer likes to hunt, I like to cook," she says. "We both like police work."

Country Life Insight From Literature

By MICHAEL RODDY
Associated Press Writer
PHILADELPHIA (AP) -
The cute but awkward phrases that adorn the placemats of tourist restaurants in Pennsylvania Dutch country are not all that the language has to offer, according to a Pennsylvania
State University professor.

Phrases such as "throw the horse over the fence
some hay" and "pass me
over the table some butter" are too literal translations of a language whose literature provides insights into country life in America during the 1800s, according to Earl C. Haag.

"Translation doesn't do the literature justice," Haag said. "These are stories about everyday life - nothing terribly deep - but just delightful stories about everyday occurrences."

Haag, a professor of English and German at the university's Schuylkill Haven campus, has written a new grammar which he hopes will make Pennsylvania
Dutch literature more accessible to people who speak the language but can't read it, and to a few people who don't know the language at all.

But he admitted that the marketing prospects for his work don't bode well to make it a best seller.

"The usage has been shrinking, although I hope that a book like this will help to bring it back at least as far as the literature is concerned," he said.

A count of the number of people who speak the language is hard to come by, but Haag said it was estimated 30 years ago that the language was spoken by about 300,000 people in Pennsylvania and the Midwest.

Although the language often is associated with the Mennonite and Amish people living in and around Lancaster County, Haag said members of the religious groups account for only 10 percent of the nation's Pennsylvania Dutch speakers.

The language, despite its name, actually is a dialect of German and is spoken by descendants of Lutheran and German Reformed settlers who came to this country from the Palatinate area of Germany, which is between the Rhine and France, Haag said.

"If you parachuted someone who speaks
Pennsylvania Dutch into Germany, around
Heidelberg, that person would have no trouble at all understanding what people
there would understand him perfectly," Haag said.

Haag said reading
Pennsylvania Dutch literature in the original language is important because the authors used a style of writing that loses a lot in the translation.

"There are all kinds of stories, very delightful stories, which, once you pick up a book, you wouldn't want to put down again," he said.
"But there's a very definite danger when translating a dialect that you would lose the flavor. You would end up with a story that's not nearly as nice as the original."

The body of Pennsylvania Dutch literature consists mostly of short stories and newspaper columns, much of it written during the 19th century or the early part of this century, he said.

People wrote about such things as harvesting, farming, sewing and that perennial preoccupation of the Pennsylvania Dutch, food.

At least three authors wrote poetry or prose works giving the life story of flax, from the time it is harvested until it is spun into linen. And a popular poem in the language describes a man hosting a party to his wife and of rags and using the occasion to tell stories about men, other women and to gossip about life, Haag said.

"It is a living language," he said. "When you walk down the street you hear people talking and you see things that you can't read it. But when they find out how delightful it is,
they will want to know more and more."

Lithuania's Church Sees Rising Role

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
Associated Press Writer
KAUNAS, U.S.S.R. (AP) —
The Roman Catholic Church in Soviet Lithuania is riding a wave of nationalist revival — a quiet echo of Poland.

"We have an old saying here: to be Lithuanian is to be a Catholic," said the Rev. Niktoras Butkus, who presides over Lithuania's only Roman Catholic seminary, located in this medieval city 60 miles from the border of predominately Catholic Poland.

When Lithuania was incorporated into the Soviet Union at the end of World War II, the small Baltic Sea nation had four Catholic seminaries. The lone survivor is the larger of two that remain in the entire Soviet Union, a nation where the state creed is atheism.

While religion has largely succumbed to communism elsewhere in the Soviet Union, Lithuania boasts 650 churches and 700 priests. "We are seeing more young people in church than we were 15 years ago, although we aren't sure how to explain it," said Butkus who studied for two years in Vatican City. "People don't believe in bread alone. Maybe they are coming to the church to find spiritual values."

"Many people are baptized and married in the church, and many burials are connected with the church," he added in an interview in his small office overlooking the seminary courtyard.

Lithuania was independent from 1918 to 1940, when it was taken over by the Soviet Union. It was overrun by the Germans in 1941 and reoccupied by Soviet troops in 1945.

Lithuanian partisans battled the Soviet army until 1957, according to knowledgeable Russian sources who say that Moscow subdued resistance only after virtually dismantling the church and deporting up to one quarter of the nation's 2.9 million people. The population has since risen to 3.4 million, of which about 10.5 percent is Russian and 9.5 percent ethnic Poles.

Evidence of a strong nationalist movement is more visible in Lithuania than in other Soviet republics. Four underground newspapers publish regularly, defying police efforts to suppress them.

Lithuanian nationalists interviewed in Vilnius, the republic's capital, say they seek independence from the Soviet Union. They claim KGB security police have cracked down on the church and dissidents since the Polish labor upheaval began in August 1980.

Several priests have been killed under suspicious circumstances, they claim, and authorities have imprisoned members of two known Lithuanian human rights movements, the Helsinki Watch Committee, and the Council for the Defense of Religious Freedom.

The crackdown appears part of a carrot-and-stick method designed to curb extremism and channel religious and nationalist sentiment into the official church, which is allowed to operate in the open.

The most violent outbreak of nationalist sentiment occurred in May 1972, when hundreds of youths reportedly fought police with clubs and bricks in the streets of Kaunas after 20-year-old Roman Kalanta burned himself to death to protest Soviet rule.

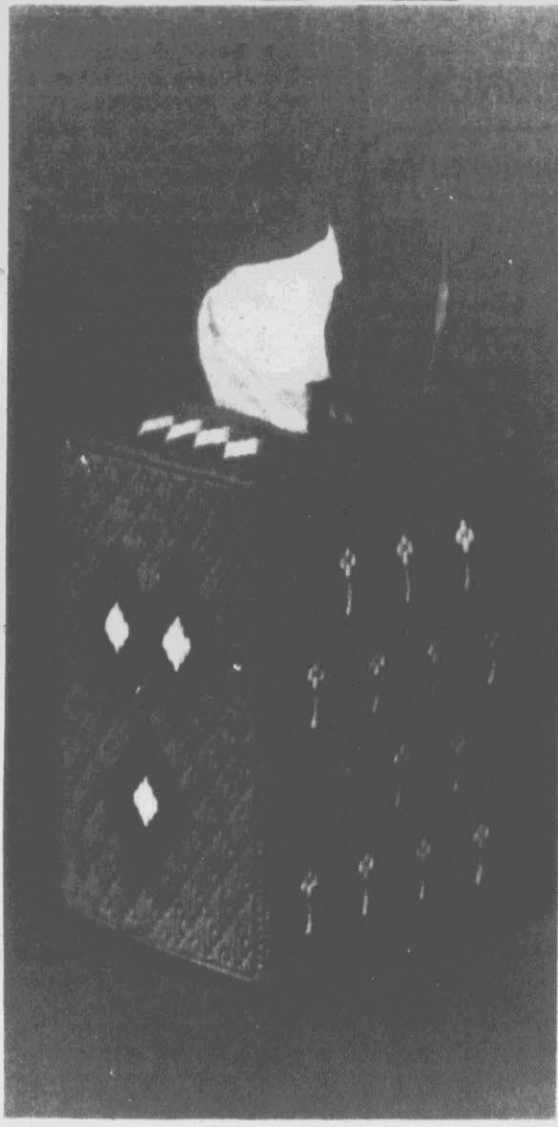

Not long after that, Soviet authorities began to give the official church more leeway. The number of students at the Kaunas seminary rose from two dozen after the war to 94 today. Eighteen young priests will finish a five-year course of study this year, and Butkus says he hopes to convince the government to expand the number of students entering the seminary to 30 a year.

Some of those now in the seminary reportedly passed through an "underground seminary" run by local priests throughout Lithuania. "They receive instruction from the priests, and get what they need to live from the people," according to one Lithuanian dissident, who said 10 young men would finish their unofficial studies this year.

TISSUE BOX COVER

Bargello diamonds sparkle on a boutique-size tissue-box cover, made with acrylic yarns and easy-to-handle plastic 10-mesh canvas. One of the easiest of many needle-point stitches, Bargello consists of long, straight stitches, each covering several canvas holes at once.

This is another of Pat's "Learn-a-Stitch" leaflets, with charts for four Bargello stitches included. Pick your favorite—or make each side of the box with a different pattern stitch. Construction details (all quite simple with plastic canvas) are also given for making eyeglass cases, coasters and bookmarks that can be made with your leftover canvas and yarns.

To obtain directions for making the Bargello Diamonds Tissue-Box Cover, send your request for Leaflet No. N-8720 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler, ("The Daily Reflector"), P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or you may order Kit No. KN-8720 by sending a check or money order for $12.50 to Pat Trexler at the same address. Each kit contains instructions, canvas, needle and acrylic Persian-type yarn sufficient for making two tissue boxes plus two or more of the smaller items. Available color combinations are: coral and green tones; gold and brown tones; blue tones; and purple tones. Please specify your choice of two of the color combinations if you want each box in a different color combination or one combination if you want both the same. Shipping charges are included in the kit price.

If you have never worked Bargello stitches, try following the chart below. Starting at the upper right hand corner, bring your needle up in the fourth hole from the top right corner of the canvas. Count over four canvas threads and put the needle down in the top hole, thus making the first stitch of the pattern.

Moving over one hole to the left each time, make three more stitches of the same height. In the fifth vertical row of holes from the right edge, bring the needle up two holes below the base of the last stitch made, thus stepping down two threads. Again, count up four threads and take the needle down. Make two more stitches identical to the last stitch made.

Reading from right to left on the chart, you have made the first seven stitches of the top row. Continue following the chart across to the top left corner, taking one vertical stitch for each vertical line on the chart, stepping up or down as shown by the medium stitch lines.

Follow this row with a row of the third color, shown by the darkest vertical lines on the chart. I am sure that you made the delightful discovery that, after the first row was established, the chart was much easier to follow. In fact, you can usually just set the chart aside once a base line is established.

For this practice session, you might want to keep repeating these color rows over and over or experiment with various colors. Bargello work can use starkly contrasting colors for a modern look or subtly shaded tones for a more traditional effect.

In a later column, I will discuss the types of yarn best suited for Bargello and special tips for you.

Grads Want 'Top School'

ON WAITING LIST — Penny Freeman holds up a waiting list reply card from the Univ. of Pennsylvania. Miss Freeman has been accepted at two colleges, rejected at two and placed on the waiting list at two others. (AP Laserphoto)

By LEE MITGANG
AP Education Writer
SCOTCH PLAINS, N.J. (AP) — They arrived in Saturday's mail: one yellow envelope and two white ones. She put them on the coffee table in her living room — the envelopes that would end months of suspense for Penni Freeman.

It was a suspense she had in common last week with thousands of high school seniors across the country who, depending on the what the mailman brought them from the colleges of their choice, now feel elated, heart-sick, or maybe just confused.

The second week in April, infamous as tax time to adult Americans, brings its own agony for high school seniors. That's the traditional time each year that most competitive colleges send out their acceptances and rejections.

Penni bit her lip, considered the envelopes for a few seconds. Had it all been worth it? Winning citizenship awards at Fanwood-Scotch Plains High School, getting named to French National Honor Society, being picked Homecoming Queen, getting nothing but "A's" and "B's" throughout her high school years?

Reaching for the envelopes, she decided to fall back on some ancient student folklore.

"The thinnest one's from Yale. I'll open that one first. The thin ones are always rejections," she said.

With her mother, Anne Freeman, pacing nervously in the next room — "God, I can't stand this!" she says — Penni opens the white envelope with "Yale University Admissions" emblazoned on it.

"The Admissions Committee," the letter starts, "has concluded its meetings, and I regret to report that we are not able to offer you admission to the Yale class of 1986."

Still, there were two unopened envelopes, both a bit thicker. A hopeful sign?

The University of Pennsylvania put Penni on their waiting list for admission to their next freshman class. So did Cornell College of Engineering. That one stung her, and her faced turned down dejectedly. It was a long shot, but Cornell was her "dream school."

"Oh well," she says, "that's OK because it makes my decision easier." She reminds herself that, after all, she's one of the lucky ones. She was accepted for admission earlier last week at Boston University and Penn State University.

If Penni is at all typical, a college degree from a top school is still a glittering prize, still the key to success — and, in her mind at least, still worth all the hard work of high school, still worth the small fortune that higher education now costs.

"I decided to shoot big," Penni says. "Go for the Ivy Leagues. When people hear you went to one of those, they say, hey, you can work for us tomorrow.

"Mostly my consideration was a job in the future — get some money, send it home, live on the rest."

But she still faced the problem: Boston University or Penn State.

The talk turns to money. It's harder for a middle class family like Penni's to pay for college since President Reagan made it more difficult for middle income students to qualify for federally guaranteed loans. Her parents have a combined income of $43,000. And she has a sister who will be a senior at Penn State next September.

Boston University would cost Penni about $10,500 a year. Penn State would run about $4,000 less. Will money govern her choice?

"I don't want you to think about the money," Mrs. Freeman tells her daughter. "Oh, maybe it will put a little strain on us, but nothing we can't survive."

"I truly feel," she says, "that school is still the most important thing."

Penni has until May 1 to decide where she's going, although she can switch later if she is accepted by a school where she was wait-listed, and decides to go there.

"It's tough," she says, staring at the envelopes. "I have a decision to make."

Ranchers See Vagrant Park Buffalo As Nuisance

By JOHN KUGLIN
Associated Press Writer
YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) — Is Yellowstone National Park a home where too many buffalo roam?

The wild bison herd inside the 2.2 million-acre nature preserve has grown to several thousand and the beasts are wandering into Montana, where the state wildlife agency says it may ask the Legislature to authorize the first bison hunting season in 100 years.

Bison, weighing as much as a ton apiece, are a thrilling attraction in Yellowstone Park for millions of tourists. But ranchers living north and west of the park view the vagrant bison as a threat because many of the animals carry brucellosis, a disease that can cause cattle to abort their young.

The National Park Service, saying harsh winters and other natural factors control the population, does nothing to control bison numbers inside Yellowstone.

"Every attempt man has made to manipulate nature has failed and usually has failed miserably," says Thomas Hobbs, Yellowstone's chief ranger.

Biologists say the park contains at least 2,000 bison. With an area larger than Rhode Island and Delaware combined, Yellowstone is the only place in the United States where a wild buffalo population continuously survived.

In 1900, Yellowstone's bison numbered less than two dozen. The population swelled in later years and the Park Service began "managing the herd" by shooting some of the animals. When that practice ended in the mid-1960s, the bison population was 300 to 400.

The Park Service knows of at least 21 bison that wandered into Montana so far this year. All were chased back into the park by rangers, who were sometimes assisted by sheriff's deputies, Forest Service workers, police officers, firefighters and state game wardens.

"We have a brucellosis problem with those bison," the Montana Fish and Game Commission was told last month by Mons Teigen of the Montana Stockgrowers' Association. Teigen told state officials they would "have to take on the federal government" over the diseased animals.

Frank Rigler, who ranches in Montana a few miles north of the park boundary, says he is worried about bison "hooking" his cows with their horns or infecting them with brucellosis.

Another rancher, Mike Parker, notified sheriff's deputies last June when he discovered a Yellowstone bison mingling with his herd of purebred cattle near West Yellowstone, Mont.

But the Park Service is opposed to controlling brucellosis in the bison, regarding the disease as part of the natural ecology. Opposition is so intense, says Dr. Bradford Newcomb, disease control chief for the Montana Department of Livestock, that "it's going to take a meeting of the (federal) secretaries of the interior and agriculture to get anything done" on the matter.

Park biologists say they are not in the game-management business and have no biological justification for limiting the bison population.

Nature will take its course, they say, and if a lot of bison die in a harsh winter, so much the better for coyotes, bears and other predators.

But everyone — the ranchers, Park Service and state Department of Fish, Wildlife and Parks — agrees that a hunting season in Montana is the easiest way to deal with bison filtering out of the park.

"If the state wants to set up some sort of lottery and hunt them when they cross out, that's fine with us," says Chief Ranger Hobbs. "We're concerned about our neighbors outside the park and recognize their concern about brucellosis."

The bison belong to the federal government inside Yellowstone but become state property when they leave the park, he said.

Leroy Ellig, the state wildlife agency's district supervisor, said chasing bison into the park isn't easy "because they only move if they want to. We'd just as soon be able to hunt them in Montana. Not by mobs of people, but sending out hunters accompanied by people from our department."

However, Ellig said, "my feeling is that just because a buffalo sticks his nose across the line doesn't mean we kill them."

As for tourists visiting Yellowstone, the bison have posed no hazards, Hobbs said. Despite animals' size, "they have amazing tolerance" when people ignore warnings and get too close, he said.

There were three bison-vehicle collisions in the park last year, said Hobbs, "and the car usually loses."

Replica Bell Gets A Home

MELBOURNE, Fla. (AP) — Plans are under way to provide a permanent perch for a one-ton replica of America's Liberty Bell — six years after school kids raised $10,000 to buy it in London.

"We can't just have it sitting outside," said Joseph Brett, head of a patriotic organization which has announced another fund-raising drive to build a colonial-style tower for the bronze bell.

Except for rare occasions, Melbourne's contribution to the nation's Bicentennial has been sitting at the home of former Mayor Adger Smith since 1976.

Known as the Bicentennial Bell, it was bought from the same London foundry, Whitechapel, that cast America's first freedom ringer. The original is at Philadelphia's Independence Hall.

The only other replica in Florida is in Miami.

Design plans have been drawn for a scaled-down version of Independence Hall, where Melbourne's massive bell will hang in permanent display atop a 53-foot tower.

But Brett, president of the nonprofit Honor America Inc., says it will cost about $50,000, and it will require another money-raising effort, plus help from foundation grants and other contributions.

Compete In Quiz Finals Saturday

RALEIGH — The Quiz Bowl team from Rose High School, representing the Greenville City School system, is one of 12 North Carolina school systems to compete in the third annual North Carolina Library Quiz finals being held Saturday. This event follows elimination of contenders through local and regional competition.

Members of the Rose High team are Elizabeth Ellen, Jeff Prescott, Vince Hankins and Shannon Stanforth. Alternates are Derek Dickens, Alayna Keller, Teresa McLawhorn, and Suzanne Willie.

The quiz is to begin at 1 p.m. and will be held in the Farrison-Newton Communications Building on Durham's N.C. Central University campus. The Quiz is a climax event of National Library Week and Library Week in North Carolina.

In addition to Greenville, other school systems with teams in the state finals are — Windsor, Washington, Wayne County, Kinston, Elizabeth City, Durham, Lincolnton, Cumberland County, Sanford, Hickory and Union County. This year about 30 regional and county library systems and 200 schools in the state participated at local and regional levels. # Salvadoran Press Agency Shows Tilt To Guerrillas

By CHRIS ANGELO
Associated Press Writer
MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Salvadoran Press Agency, headquartered in a four-room apartment here, is reporting the war in El Salvador with a tilt in favor of the guerrillas but with an effort also to report the government's side, says its director.

SALPRESS, as the agency is known, is staffed largely by volunteers committed to the leftist guerrilla cause, said the director, Jose Ventura. The agency is supported largely by U.S. and European sympathizers with the leftists' campaign to overthrow El Salvador's civilian-military junta. It was founded on plans drawn up by Enrique Alvarez Cordova, a former president of the Democratic Revolutionary Front, the leftists' political coalition, who was killed by right-wing paramilitary troops Nov. 27, 1980.

While the agency is one of the left's major outlets for the guerrillas' side of the war, Ventura claimed in an interview that it is not a propaganda agency. Ventura said he is not affiliated with any political party and is "not a revolutionary."

He described SALPRESS as an "alternative agency" founded in December 1980, "with the principal objective of giving the widest publication to the political, economic, military and social happenings in the Republic of El Salvador."

"We do not make propaganda," Ventura, 30, a former press officer for the University of El Salvador, added. "We also say what the government says."

Operating from the downtown apartment filled with donated furniture, a staff of nine puts together a daily information service, a weekly bulletin, radio interviews, magazine articles, video-cassette programs and distributes photos.

Sale of the services — photos are about $25 each and an article as much as $500 — helps pay the bills.

The agency is based in Mexico, Ventura said, because of its communications facilities and "great political space in which to move." It is legally registered here as a Central American news agency, he said.

Its information on the guerrilla side of the war comes from four battlefront correspondents for Radio Venceremos, the guerrillas' clandestine radio station. They relay their information to "safe houses" in San Salvador, where it is telephoned to SALPRESS here. It's taped, transcribed and turned into a brief news item and then telephoned or telexed to some SALPRESS offices.

Other articles, including analyses, are written here or come from the agency's correspondents in Paris, West Berlin, Washington, San Francisco, Montreal, Costa Rica, Nicaragua, Honduras and Panama.

Most copies of the weekly bulletin — about 5,000 in Spanish and 1,300 in English and German — go to the news media. The 500 distributed in the United States include copies for all U.S. senators. An office in West Berlin reproduces the bulletin and distributes 200 copies in West Germany, 300 in Austria and 200 in Switzerland.

Ventura acknowledges that "some of our people have strong links" with the revolution that sometimes come out in their stories. His job at SALPRESS, he said, is to see that there is "sufficient impartiality."

Otherwise, he added, "we would lose credibility and we would not provide any benefit to the Salvadoran revolution."

The day after El Salvador's March 28 Constituent Assembly elections, SALPRESS' daily bulletin carried seven stories.

The first article combined election results and a report of a guerrilla attack that quoted local residents and military sources. Another, from Washington, quoted a U.S. State Department spokesman as saying President Jose Napoleon Duarte's Christian Democratic Party was leading with 10 percent of the votes counted. A third was an interview with Guillermo Manuel Ungo, president of the Democratic Revolutionary Front, who said the elections were "a farce" in which the people were obliged to vote "with the regime's guns at their backs."

The Ungo interview and another article said the voter turnout was low. Final results, available several days later, showed nearly 1.5 million people voted, about twice the number expected. SALPRESS later reported the higher figure as reported by election officials in San Salvador.

Nearly all the journalists who work for the agency are Salvadorans, Ventura said, but they all work outside El Salvador except for the Radio Venceremos correspondents. The exceptions include two Americans in Washington, who each work as part-time volunteers.

Many of the Salvadorans who work for the agency would be killed if they returned home, Arnoldo Bernal Chavez, a spokesman for the Democratic Revolutionary Front, said.

The staff here, paid an average of about $80 a month, survives by writing for other publications and lives with Mexican families.

"They work a lot in their homes... Perhaps they also write propaganda," Ventura said.

"I'm not a revolutionary. I am somewhat of a bureaucrat. Perhaps they are revolutionaries."

While disavowing political leanings, Ventura said he was strongly affected when a nephew was shot dead by police who surrounded demonstrators at San Salvador's Metropolitan Cathedral in 1979. He said his "impartiality" does not extend to his work outside the agency.

Ventura is paid $300 a month and also writes for the Mexican newspaper El Dia, which generally reflects the views of the leftist sector of Mexico's governing Institutional Revolutionary Party, and for magazines.

He meets here every two months with representatives of the Democratic Revolutionary Front and the guerrilla high command, the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front. However, Liberation Front representatives are vague about the link.

Bernal Chavez said it had "very close relations" with SALPRESS, but declined to discuss financial support. Ventura said some of the support comes from "committees of solidarity" with the Salvadoran revolution around the world.

American Seeks Save Cairo's Islamic Monuments

By STEVEN K. HINDY
Associated Press Writer
CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — An international group headed by an American is trying to save some of the mosques, baths and schools of medieval Cairo — reputed to have been greater in its day than Paris and London.

Protected for centuries by Cairo's dry desert climate, many of the limestone and marble structures, built when Cairo was a center of the Islamic religion, are being demolished to make way for new housing or are slowly sinking into the city's rising groundwater. Many are occupied by squatters.

"It is astonishing there is as much left as there is of the medieval city," said John Rodenbeck, a native of Grand Rapids, Mich., who is chairman of SPARE, the Society for the Preservation of Architectural Resources in Egypt, one of the few groups trying to save the monuments.

"What is here is by-and-large in appalling condition, and in many instances, structurally dangerous. But it is basically intact, and what is needed is repair, renovation and rehabilitation. Of course its hopeless, but we'd be idiots not to try."

Most of the Islamic structures, which comprise the majority of the landmarks of medieval Cairo, are owned by the government's Ministry of Religious Endowments. Some non-religious monuments are privately owned.

Rodenbeck said some of the buildings have simply fallen down, some have been demolished by the government to make way for bridges and roads and others have been demolished by private contractors — some with the government's permission, some without.

Despite the Islamic revival in the Middle East, there is no coordinated plan to rescue the shrines of one of Islam's early capitals. The 250 mostly non-Egyptian members of SPARE, headquartered in London, basically aim to inform the world that Islamic Cairo is dying.

SPARE members lead monthly walks through the poor and overcrowded neighborhoods where the buildings are located. The neighborhoods are not a tourist attraction, and to their inhabitants the Islamic monuments are simply old buildings. The curiosity is the band of foreigners that have come out to see them.

"It used to be worse," Rodenbeck said in an interview. "About 15 years ago, I understand they used to throw rocks. In the Darb El-Ahmar area a survey was done a few years ago that showed 72 percent of the populace would like the old buildings torn down and new ones built."

Rodenbeck believes these attitudes may have changed because of a weekly television series on the monuments, and the work of Leila Aly Ibrahim, a member of the Association of Amateurs of Antiquity, who has lectured on Islamic architecture in the neighborhood's schools. The association is headed by the widow of President Anwar Sadat, who was assassinated last October. Still, SPARE counted 16 sites in the past three years that were demolished, some to make way for new housing, an urgent demand in a city of 12 million where many poor live in boats in the Nile River and in the tombs of the city's main cemetery. The biggest success of SPARE, Mrs. Sadat's group and the government's antiquities organization was the clearing two years ago of squatters from a cluster of mosques and a school in the Gamaliyya area near the Khan Al-Khalili, the main tourist market. Around the same time, SPARE and other advocates succeeded in getting about 70 of the roughly 500 medieval sites in Cairo included in the United Nations' world heritage list. Groups from Poland, Italy and West Germany have done some restorations, and British, Danish, Dutch, French and American groups are interested.

The prospects for medieval Cairo appear to be slightly better than for the excavations of Fustat, the capital of Egypt just after the Islamic Arab invasion of the year 641. Work stopped in October 1980, for lack of funds, and Cairo's municipal dump is now slowly encroaching on the site.

Specialist Laundry Cleans Radioactive Garments

By MEL REISNER
Associated Press Writer
UTICA, N.Y. (AP) — Giving competitors a daily lesson in adaptability, Tri-State Industrial Laundries has found a profitable niche in specialized cleaning.

The only laundry licensed by New York state to clean the radioactive garments used in nuclear power plants, Tri-State does business with nuclear plants throughout the Northeast. It also sterilizes clothing for the drug and microelectronics industries.

Some of our competitors are five or six times our size in terms of business," says executive vice president Arthur D. Cobb, one of three brothers who run the operation their father and uncle founded in 1920. "We have to do good work and develop these (specialties)."

"Our nuclear processing has been a good one; it's a business where service to the customer is extremely important. You have to do it right and do it on time. I'd say it represented about 20 percent of our business last year."

He says overall sales hit $10 million in 1981, a 12 percent increase over 1980. The company has grown from two men 61 years ago to a 240-employee concern. About 135 work here at the firm's 100,000-square-foot building, with others at service centers in Batavia and Albany, N.Y., Wilkes-Barre, Pa., and Hartford, Conn.

All laundering is done in Utica. Tri-State's fleet of semi-trailer trucks hauls goods to the centers, which handle regional sales, collections and distribution.

The company owns about 98 percent of the jackets, coveralls, shirts and laboratory coats it cleans, renting them along with industrial wiping cloths, floor mats and dust mops to customers in New York, Massachusetts, Vermont, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Maryland. A subsidiary, Nuber and Nuber Inc., sells uniforms.

Tri-State uses the machinery of the trade — oil-based dust collectors, 400-pound-capacity cylindrical washers, centrifugal extractors from Italy or Germany, tumble dryers the size of vans. But it concentrates on being able to adapt to changing needs, either through management changes or its own invention.

Good will plays a part, too. Every Christmas for three decades, Tri-State has fed Utica firefighters in commemoration of the department's work in putting out a 1952 fire.

Tri-State got into cleaning for nuclear plants in 1975 after pioneering a way to dry clean garments formerly washed with water, which was itself contaminated in the process.

"Calling it 'dry' cleaning is misleading, because in either (process) you use a liquid, but in dry cleaning the liquid is a solvent within a closed system and is constantly reused," Cobb says. "When we figured out how to dry clean the uniforms, we solved the problem of how to do without the water."

Spent solvent is stored in lead-shielded containers and eventually trucked to a low-level nuclear disposal site in South Carolina.

Cobb says his firm cleans radioactive garments for five public utility companies in New York and Pennsylvania. To improve service and meet specifications, Tri-State has equipped five trucks with dry cleaning equipment for on-site cleaning.

Garments that must be cleaned at the plant are handled in the "environmental room" — a facility at the back of the building clearly marked with the yellow-and-black triangles that warn of radioactivity.

Uniforms arrive in sealed plastic bags inside 55-gallon drums and go out the same way. Employees who work in the room wear the familiar protective suits and are checked with Geiger counters when they leave.

The exact cleaning process is a trade secret, but the state Department of Environmental Conservation has found that Tri-State's radiation releases are "unmeasurable."

The "clean room" used for clothing for electronics and drug firm requires the same kind of meticulous attention, Cobb says.

After clothing and linen enter the hermetically sealed room through a special chute, gowned workers with face masks wash it with water filtered to remove particles larger than the width of a human hair. In an atmosphere of constantly circulated, filtered air, the wash is transferred to a tumble-dryer that opens inside the room. It then is folded, packaged and sealed in plastic bags.

"Our customers open the packages when they're ready to put them on," Cobb says. "This goes beyond sterilization; here sterilization isn't really the important thing. They want to be sure there are no particles or anything else in the wash."

He says the customers of the "clean room" include pharmaceutical companies, high-technology industries that assemble tiny electronic components and firms working with special-alloy metals.
