

Israeli Troops Forcibly Move Squatters

By MARCUS ELIASON
Associated Press Writer

YAMIT, Occupied Sinai (AP) — Israeli troops climbed ladders to storm apartment blocks in the Sinai Peninsula from Egypt in the 1967 Arab-Israeli War. Israel began withdrawing from the Sinai in May 1979, two months after the signing of the Camp David peace treaty with Egypt.

The squatters fought back with burning tires, fistfuls of sand and poles with which they tried to knock down the scaling ladders. Men struggled with the helmeted, unarmed soldiers while women wept and screamed.

Firemen sprayed the diehard Jewish nationalists with jets of foam and sea water while a crane lowered a cage onto the roof to remove some of the 300 people from the two-story building in the dying settlement by the Mediterranean.

The army now has ejected about half of the 2,000 settlers and squatters who defied the government's order to evacuate the settlements Israel established after it captured the Sinai Peninsula from Egypt in the 1967 Arab-Israeli War.

Israel began withdrawing from the Sinai in May 1979, two months after the signing of the Camp David peace treaty with Egypt.

Though the army said there were no casualties, it was the most bitter clash so far in two days of struggle for Yamit and the most violent confrontation in memory between Israeli troops and Israeli civilians.

As troops and squatters battled on the roof of the 200-yard-long apartment block, bulldozers continued to tear down the town at the rate of a house every 15 minutes.

The action began with a whistle blast at 7:40 a.m. Troops charged the building and put up ladders. The squatters pelted them with sand and plastic cans, shoved at the ladders and pushed down on the heads of the ascending soldiers.

Resisters were wrestled to the ground and their hands tied with cord. At 7:50 a.m. two officers fired a long burst of automatic fire into the air.

Helmeted female soldiers followed the first wave of troops onto the roof to deal with women squatters.

Over a public address system, a leader of the resisters kept up a constant flow of abuse and distraught appeals to the soldiers.

"Soldiers, how can you do this?" the call went out. "The whole of Zionism is going up in flames."

Despite the heated emotions, both sides appeared reluctant to do each other physical harm. The squatters did not throw hard objects at the troops, and the soldiers tried to reason with the resisters as they manhandled them down the ladders.

Soldiers in teams of five carried many of the resisters to buses which took them across the border into Israel. One bearded religious scholar read his prayer book as he was lifted away.

Twenty minutes after the first onslaught, squatters were being taken out of the building in a steady flow. By 8:30 a.m., they stood in a line, their hands tied, and with tear-choked voices sang "Hatikva," "The Hope," Israel's national anthem. Two soldiers also were weeping.

Glimmer Of Hope For Budget Compromise

By CLIFF HAAS

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A glimmer of hope for a bipartisan compromise on President Reagan's red-ink spending plan is emerging just as some members of Congress were giving up the effort as a "game of budget chicken."

"I think they're making progress," Senate Republican Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., told reporters today. "I say that because I think there's been movement on both sides."

Baker declined to say what new ideas had been presented. But sources, who asked not to be identified by name, said House Democrats had submitted proposals dealing with Social Security.

One proposal called for setting aside money from offshore oil receipts to help fund the giant pension system, which now is financed solely by a payroll tax on workers and their employers. It was not clear whether Democrats also had offered to back spending cuts on Social Security, such as reductions and delays in cost of living increases.

Although congressional leaders had been openly pessimistic Wednesday in trading charges about who is holding up progress in the secret budget talks, some optimism surfaced Wednesday night following a four-hour negotiating session at the White House.

Before the talks resumed today, Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan, one of the administration's principal negotiators, said, "I'm still hopeful that our negotiations will be successful." And a White House spokesman said the president was urging his representatives to "continue talking" in the search for agreement.

Other administration officials, however, were pessimistic. They said House Democrats seemed in too much "disarray" to rally around a bipartisan budget plan.

After a speech before the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, Regan said: "For the good of the country, something has to be done here. Even if we were to break up, the problems don't leave us. Something has to be done about Social Security. Something has to be done about the deficits."

The treasury secretary said a proposed surtax on upper-income Americans was being advanced to offset projected domestic program cutbacks that are viewed as hurting low-income Americans. However, his aides say Regan personally opposes such a tax.

A spokesman for House Budget Committee Chairman James R. Jones, D-Okla., quoted the congressman as saying he "is convinced an agreement can be reached" and it is "in sight."

A Senate Republican source who asked not to be quoted by name was more restrained, but said there is "still the opportunity there to continue working."

"This was either put up or shut up time tonight (Wednesday)," a House Republican source said.

Sources familiar with the discussions declined to disclose details of Wednesday night's meeting except to say that "new ideas" on Social Security were discussed.

A three-year package of delays and reductions in cost-of-living increases for Social Security, government pensions and other benefit programs has been one of the elements under consideration in the search for ways to cut the budget deficits.

The upbeat mood Wednesday night was in sharp contrast to the tough talk earlier in the day from Democrats and Republicans alike.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., mocked Reagan's assertion that he would "go the extra mile" to reach a budget compromise.

The president is "willing to walk a mile — for a camera," O'Neill said. "He has yet to prove he is willing to walk a mile for a compromise."

Rep. Leon E. Panetta, D-Calif., a key member of the House Budget Committee, said Democrats are afraid the public will "jump on them" if they pull out of the budget negotiations and Republicans are "scared of death of moving without the president."

"We're in a game of budget chicken to some extent," Panetta said. "Who's going to move out of the trenches first?"

Among House Republicans, there was "a feeling that maybe this whole exercise has been a farce," according to one GOP source who attended a caucus meeting. The source asked not to be identified by name.

A number of the Republican congressmen present "expressed serious impatience with the negotiation process and the potential for arriving at a compromise with the Democratic leadership," said Michael Johnson, a spokesman for House Republican Leader

Robert H. Michel of Illinois.

Johnson said the mood of the House Republicans was: "Let's not continue with something that appears hopeless."

Baker also was reportedly downbeat about chances for a compromise.

White House officials, however, have tried to play down the gloomy mood on Capitol Hill.

O'Neill said the negotiators so far have agreed only that the projected budget deficit should be reduced to $94 billion or $95 billion in 1983.

Laupus Named Vice Chancellor

ECU News Bureau

In a change of title, Dr. William E. Laupus has been named vice chancellor and dean of the East Carolina University Medical School, interim Chancellor John M. Howell announced today.

Laupus has been dean of the school of medicine since 1975. It was under his leadership that the fully accredited four-year program of medical education was launched, with the first four-year class of graduates receiving ECU's first doctor of medicine degrees in May 1981.

Since an administrative reorganization in 1978, Laupus has functioned on the level of a vice chancellor, reporting directly to the chancellor. Earlier the dean of the medical school was under the administrative oversight of a vice chancellor for health affairs, a position which was abolished.

Laupus now becomes one of ECU's five vice chancellors.

"This is a fitting recognition of the superb manner in which Vice Chancellor Laupus has established a four-year medical program at ECU," Howell said. "Dr. Laupus not only achieved accreditation of the program in a short time; he recruited a faculty and organized their activities with such skill that the program has already been publicly acclaimed for its value."

"In a remarkably short time the medical school, in cooperation with Pitt County Memorial Hospital and other medical professionals in this region, has built a fine medical center for this region, making better medical services available to many people."

Laupus, a native of Seymour, Ind., received his undergraduate education at Yale and his medical degree from Yale University School of Medicine in 1945.

Creation of the new vice chancellorship in ECU's administrative structure was recommended several months ago and approved with the title change by the UNC Board of Governors.

Gardner's Case To Jury Today

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

A Pitt County Superior Court jury of five men and seven women was expected to begin deliberations this afternoon on the guilt or innocence of Keith Gardner, an Ayden policeman accused of receiving embezzled property.

"I did not know or ever suspected (Abraham) Pruett was embezzling," Gardner told the jury Wednesday afternoon.

Gardner, who worked part time as a security officer at Clark's Department Store in Greenville, is being tried on charges of receiving property embezzled from the store — 30 fans valued at $1,490 which were allegedly embezzled by Pruett, the store's former manager.

Pruett has pleaded guilty to embezzlement charges in connection with the case and earlier this week testified for the state in the Gardner trial. He told the court he sold Gardner 72 fans, four air conditioners, two bicycles, four electronic television games, a television, and a microwave oven — and embezzled the money.

Pruett also testified that he offered to sell Gardner 30 more fans. It was when Gardner and Pruett were loading the second group of fans that loss prevention employees of Cook United, the parent company of Clark's, moved in and charged the two men.

Gardner, 25, testified how he first purchased two bicycles and a microwave oven, and paid Pruett by check. "The check was made payable to Mr. Pruett," he said. Pruett said he would pay for the merchandise and let Gardner pay him back, the defendant told the court.

"The next item was the fans," Gardner said, relating how Pruett offered to sell him the 72 fans, priced regularly at $29, for $5 each, plus tax.

Gardner told how he contacted a number of people to see if they would be interested in buying the fans, which Gardner sold for $10 each. "They paid me prior to me picking up the fans" on Nov. 15, he continued.

According to Gardner, a number of Ayden residents

Greenville Man Is Sentenced For Bank Robbery

NEW BERN — A Superior Court jury Wednesday convicted Earl B. Seay of Greenville of the Feb. 12 armed robbery of a branch of First Citizens Bank located east of New Bern.

Judge Elbert Peel Jr. sentenced the 41-year-old Seay to 14 years in prison and recommended him for immediate work release. Peel also ordered Seay to undergo psychiatric evaluation and receive treatment as may be indicated.

Under the minimum 14-year sentence for armed robbery conviction, Seay must serve at least seven years before he is eligible for parole consideration. No appeal was filed Wednesday although defense counsel has 10 days in which to serve notice of appeal.

Peel ruled that Seay's sentence will start immediately with credit assigned for time Seay has accumulated in custody. He has been in jail since his arrest on Feb. 12.

Peel had instructed the jury that it could find one of three things — that Seay was guilty of armed robbery, guilty of common law robbery or innocent. The jury deliberated about an hour and a half before returning its verdict. Seay, who had pleaded innocent, took the witness stand during his trial and told of financial problems that he had encountered since 1978. He also said he had a drinking problem.

A forensic psychiatrist who testified Tuesday theorized that Seay was depressed, had a low opinion of himself and felt that he had failed to live up to his (Seay's) or others' expectations.

Dr. Robert Rollins also testified that he felt that Seay's action in leaving a satchel in the bank following the robbery indicated that he wanted to be arrested. Seay was apprehended by authorities at his Greenville home shortly after the robbery. Authorities recovered bank money from the trunk of Seay's car.

Stephen Horne of Greenville, Seay's attorney, contended in opening remarks that his client was suffering from mental problems and was not able to handle the pressures on him.

Seay formerly represented the Dale Carnegie positive thinking course in Greenville. He is also a former teacher at Craven Community College.

Extension Homemakers Have Northeastern District Meet

"A Beautiful You" was the main emphasis of yesterday's annual meeting of the Northeastern District North Carolina Extension Homemakers Association held here.

A color and visual image projection analyst, Vicki Riddle of Durham was keynote speaker. In her presentation "Color You Beautiful," she said, "When you first walk into a room, you have 30 seconds to make a first impression and its impossible to make over again."

She discussed color groupings which people fit according to skin tone and compared these to the seasons of the year. "Spring colors look like they have been washed in sunshine while summer colors are soft, beautiful and muted. Fall colors are vibrant and winter colors are also soft," she added.

Ms. Riddle discussed shopping guidelines including colors, accessories, correct style, shoulder seams, comfort of garment, skirt and sleeve lengths and makeup. "Purses should only be two inches thick," she said. She conducted color analysis on two women selected from the audience. She was introduced by Anne White, first vice president of the district.

District officers for 1983, presented by Mabel Holliday, are: Ms. White, president; Rebecca Rhodes, first vice president; Helen Harris, second vice president; Virginia M. Hewitt, secretary; Dot Cowan, treasurer; and Rubelle Goin, advisor.

District President Mrs. Goin announced Legislative Day would be held June 9 in Raleigh at McKimmon Center. Ada Dalla Pozza Day and luncheon will also be held. Mrs. Dalla Pozza, state home economics agent, North Carolina State University, will be retiring later this year. The Family Living Seminar will be held in Raleigh June 3.

Recognition of guests was made by Ms. Rhodes and included: Mrs. Dalla Pozza; Kathleen Nelson; Bertha Perry; Reps. Sam D. Bundy and Ed Warren; Ms. Holliday; Faye Leary; Mrs. White; Mary Julia Parrish; Sue B. May; and Rosalie Trotman. Three county Agricultural Extension chairmen, Frances Vovila, Tyrrell County, Sandra Brown, Washington County, and Jane Taylor, Hertford County, were also introduced.

Welcomes for the day were delivered by Linda Howard, president, Pitt County Extension Homemakers, Kelly Barnhill, Pitt County commissioner, and Leroy James, chairman, Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service. Greetings were made by Catherine Turner, president, N.C. Extension Homemakers Association, L.F. Amburn Jr., chairman, N.C. Agricultural Leadership Advisory Council, and Dr. Martha Johnson, assistant director, home economics, NCSU.

The business session was conducted by Mrs. Goin and the budget report was given by Ms. Leary. Entertainment was provided by Elliott Frank, visiting artist, Pitt Community College, and students of Marie Wallace School of Dance. Rena Manning, Velma Deitch and a quartet from Red Oak Christian Church presented the devotional. The D.H. Conley High School ROTC posted the colors.

Results of the cultural arts contest was given by Nellie Harrison.

The 1983 district meeting will be held in Perquimans County. Ms. Leary reported 416 were present for the meeting.

The district day committees included: hospitality, Beaufort and Craven counties; decorations, Hertford and Chowan; cultural arts exhibit, Martin, Currituck, Hyde, Pamlico and Camden; evaluation, Pasquotank; speaker, Perquimans; hostess county, Pitt; recognitions, Tyrrell; and registration, Washington.

Leggett-McCosley Vows Said

JASPER — Paula Susan McCosley was married to Randy Keith Leggett Sunday at 7 p.m. in Bethany Christian Church here. The Rev. Danny French performed the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Allie McCosley of Jasper. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ervin Leggett of Route 4, Tarboro.

Mr. and Mrs. Chris Berg of Deep Run presided at the guest book and distributed programs.

A program of wedding music was presented by Howard Harrison, organist, and Doug Lane sang "Evergreen," "If" and "Wedding Ring."

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a gown of chantilace and Venise lace re-embroidered with seed pearls over taffeta which extended into a semi-cathedral length train. She wore a hat of white pleated organza, Venise lace and seed pearls with illusion veil and carried a bouquet of white roses, orchids, chrysanthemums and gypsophila.

Pamela Wetherington of Ernul was matron of honor and Diane Leggett of Tarboro, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Lisa Leggett of Tarboro, sister of the bridegroom, Diana Ippock and Cindy Wetherington of Jasper and Kaye Ellis of Jamesville. They wore floor length organza gowns in various colors and matching picture hats. They carried parasols with nosegays of spring flowers.

The father of the bridegroom was best man while ushers included Tommy Newman and Floyd Conners of Wilson, Dan McCosley of Chapel Hill, brother of the bride, Tony McCosley of Jasper and Larry Leggett of Tarboro, brother of the bridegroom.

The bride's mother wore a floor length gown of rose chantilly lace and matte jersey and a white orchid corsage.

The mother of the bridegroom wore a floor length gown of yellow chiffon and matte jersey and a white orchid corsage.

The parents of the bride entertained at a reception in the church fellowship hall.

Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Taylor of New Bern, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Pollard of Greenville, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Herring and Mr. and Mrs. Alonza Wetherington Jr. greeted guests. Chris and Carla Berg presided at the bride's book.

Refreshment tables were covered with white cutwork linen cloths and arranged with spring flowers and candles. Cake was served by Mrs. Mark McCoy and Mrs. Carlton Davis. Mrs. Lister McCosley of New Bern and Mrs. Buck Crisp of Pinetops poured punch.

Good-byes were said by Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. Ippock and Mr. and Mrs. Robert McCosley of Fayetteville.

After the ceremony the bridal party and guests were entertained at the home of the bride.

For a wedding trip to unannounced points, the bride changed into a white floral jacket and wore her mother's corsage.

The bride graduated from Atlantic Christian College, Wilson, and is employed by John N. Peterson, New Bern.

The bridegroom will receive his degree in biology from ACC this summer.

The couple will live in Greenville.

The bridegroom's parents entertained at an after-rehearsal pig pickin' at the home of the bride's parents.

Ikebana Is Program Topic

The Greenville Garden Club held its April meeting at the home of Delphia Corbett. A program on "Ikebana, the Art of Japanese Flower Arranging" was given by Mrs. Robert Crouse.

In giving some of its history, Mrs. Crouse said, Ikebana dates back 500 years and was part of the tea ceremony. It was conceived by the Buddhist priest. She showed containers suitable and demonstrated several styles of arrangements using dogwood, azaleas, weeping willow and pine.

A poem was read by Donna Whitley. Mrs. H.C. Klingenschmitt gave the garden therapy report and reminded members of the workshops with Nancy Walters' classes at Aycock Junior High School. She showed a wild hyacinth grown in her yard. Mrs. H.F. Burns Jr. showed a lunaria plant.

Assisting hostesses were Mrs. J.A. Piver, Mrs. J.E. Ricks and Katherine Adams.

Getting Out Of Hand

The Justice Department, finally, has again rejected an effort by North Carolina's General Assembly to realign its representative base. This is the second time this year a legislative redistricting plan has been squelched by the Justice Department, which overruled the state Constitution in the process. The whole thing is getting out of hand.

Federal intervention into local and state level elections was worthwhile. It was intended to make certain that voting laws applied to all persons and that all persons had an equal chance to vote. But the Justice Department is now going beyond that tenement in apparently calling for just the reverse; in this case, specific districts in which blacks are guaranteed a seat. This type of discrimination is just the reverse of the discrimination the 1965 Voting Rights Act was intended to erase.

As it now stands, North Carolina's state elections are in jeopardy. No primaries can be held until a legislative redistricting plan can be submitted by the state and win approval of the Justice Department.

The second rejection is especially galling to North Carolina's lawmakers and others who have worked with the Justice Department in the last several months. Those who were in on the negotiations say one provision — calling for a single member district in Cumberland County — struck down this week actually was proposed earlier this year by the Justice Department. There's something to be said there.

It's about time the Justice Department, which has before shown it had problems sticking with a trend of thought, got out of everyday control of local elections.

Process Is On Schedule

The ECU chancellor list is down to four and by Saturday it may be pared to two.

Although the names will not be announced, the search committee will be meeting here Saturday and the ECU Board of Trustees will meet the same day.

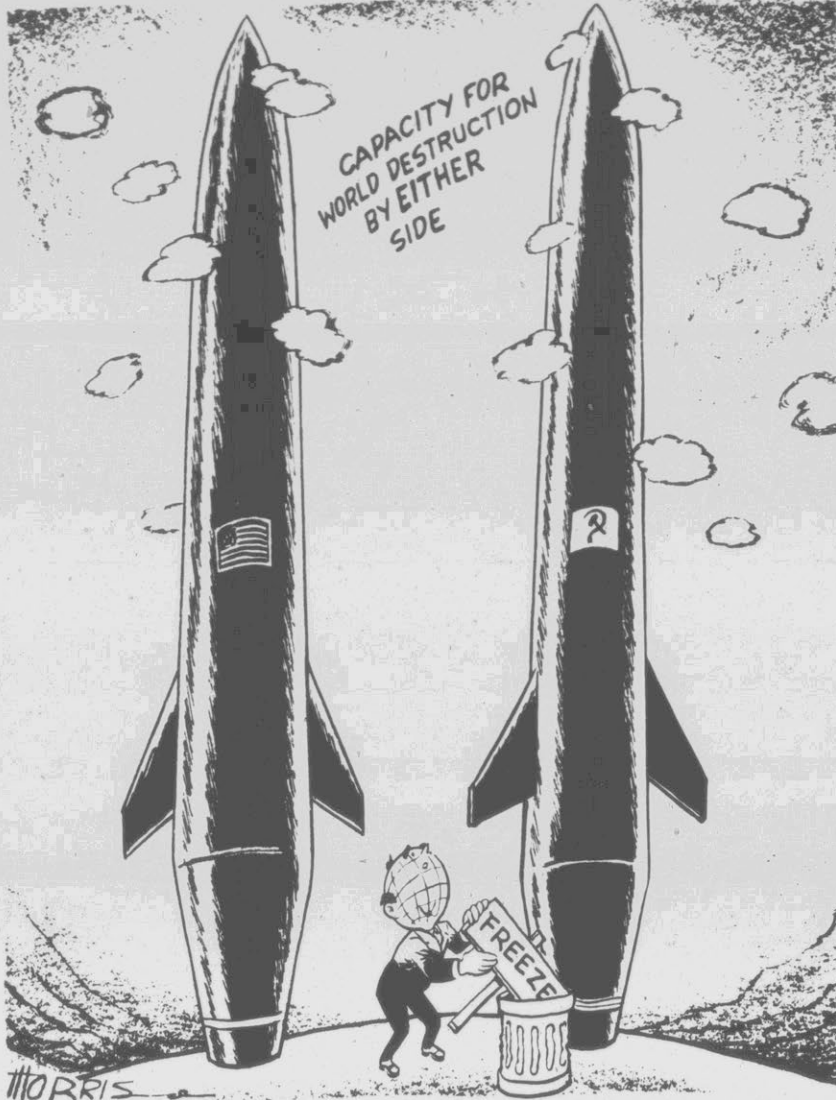

The committee must make recommendations to the board which, in turn, will submit recommendations to UNC President William C. Friday.

It is expected that the Board of Governors will approve a choice by May 14.

The selection process appears to be moving on schedule. That is desirable since many long-range directions that the university will take must await the naming of the permanent new chancellor.

LET'S GET TO THE REAL 'REDUCTION' PHASE!

THE WHITE HOUSE

Managing A President

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Evening is falling. Negotiators from the White House and Congress have been meeting for several hours, trying to find a compromise in the budget deadlock.

The big, black, iron gates of the White House swing open and several cars speed out, with members of Congress heading back to Capitol Hill. They barely slow down as they pass waiting reporters.

Inside the White House, officials are unusually tight-lipped about the events. Asked why, one official who is often anxious to explain policy developments says: "It will not be productive (to comment)."

The White House spokesmen are taking great care about what they say in public.

They have cut down on the opportunities for reporters to try for a quick answer from President Reagan as he gets in his car or boards a helicopter. Such moments do not allow Reagan to show himself at his best.

Aides are more reluctant than before to expand on what the president is saying. The less said along these lines, the better. That way the president's words must stand alone and there is less chance his comments will be diluted by interpretation.

What's more, says Larry Speakes, one of Reagan's senior spokesmen, "There are times when we want to keep things under wraps."

When it serves his purpose, Reagan, himself, claims to be following orders from his aides in his dealings with reporters.

He had just finished an informal, 11-minute question-and-answer session in the Rose Garden, discussing the Falkland Islands, the budget, and nuclear war while standing in front of pink and white crab apple blossoms, an array of red, white and yellow tulips, grape hyacinths and purple pansies.

Speakes moved to cut off the questioning, and the president complied, saying "my keeper says I've got to go back in."

Speakes, the chief deputy White House press secretary, discussed the White House relations with the press in a speech Tuesday to the Advertising Club of Metropolitan Washington.

"The era of bad feeling of Watergate is gone. The cynicism (in the White House press room) of the Carter administration is gone," he said. "We got away with a lot in the first year. It was an era of good feeling. The relationship between the press and the president is good, not great, but good."

Under the new press protocol, with Reagan holding one 30-minute news conference a month and one approximately 10-minute informal question-and-answer session a week, reporters will have approximately 15 hours a year to discuss the range of foreign and domestic policy issues with which he deals.

"It's our desire to not have the president stopped on the run for quick, one-shot questions," Speakes said, reasoning that foreign and domestic policy were too important to be enunciated with quick, one-shot answers.

"This White House is pretty much like the others," he said. "We like to set our own (Continued on page 5)

'Worst' Of All Worlds

BY MAXWELL GLEN AND CODY SHEARER
WASHINGTON — Faithful fans of CBS's Monday night situation comedy, "Private Benjamin," may not know it, but women in the military are hardly an undeserving lot.

In the armed forces, men outnumber women by a 10-1 ratio, and the women are prohibited from performing combat missions. Assistant Defense Secretary Lawrence J. Korb admits that military women live in "the worst of all possible worlds."

"For almost a year, we've been increasingly hearing that morale among the women is very low," he conceded at a recent women officers luncheon here. "The American people have to decide what role they want women to play in the defense of the country."

Right now, the woman's role seems determined solely by military tradition. Korb made his remarks, in fact, at a hastily-arranged meeting intended to smooth over some of the rough treatment women have been receiving during the last year.

A year ago last month the Army reported a "pause" in its recruitment of women. Last year, it enrolled 4,000 fewer women than during 1981. The Air Force and the Navy experienced similar recruiting shortfalls for women. Today the services are holding the number of women at present levels until a study of their effectiveness is completed (sometime in April).

Many women especially resented last January's comments by Navy Secretary John F. Lehman, who characterized as a "non-issue" a new law placing women and men on equal footing before military promotion boards.

"All of us have fought our own private war to prove that we can do the job," said one female naval officer to our reporter, Michael Duffy. "Some of us are going to be old and gray before anything ever happens." Added a female Marine: "I still get the feeling that I don't have a right to be there. It seems like the Marine Corps is doing me a favor."

The source of such frustration is an outdated federal law, long supported by congressmen, which prohibits women in combat assignments for the Air Force and the Navy (the Army by a similar policy). The ineligibility for frontline positions, which dates to the late 1940s, has made lines of advancement particularly fuzzy for the thousands of women who poured into the service during the last decade.

As women officers view their predicament, the male-dominated commanding ranks follow various — and frequently arbitrary — interpretations of what constitutes a "combat" assignment. Though women regularly pilot Air Force tankers, command Coast Guard cutters and serve on the Navy's ships, military managers frustrate their efforts to perform other duties by invoking the combat exclusion law. It's a wholly military Catch-22 for women.

"Right now, we're kind of skirting the issue," mused Korb. "To say, because of the combat exclusion, that women wouldn't be killed if we went to war is folly."

Unfortunately, every time Congress takes up the issue of women's equity in the military, politicians run for cover. They warn of "women in body bags," inferring that men are, somehow, more disposable. To fuel public paranoia, the skeptics cite news stories alleging womanly tendencies to perform routine jobs inadequately or become pregnant and excuse themselves from missions.

Such charges, however, aren't borne out by the facts. Men — not women — logged up the highest percentage of lost time, due largely to drug and alcohol abuse, absence without leave, and social diseases. Meanwhile, government and private studies have consistently shown that women have the ability to perform nearly all military assignments.

In Congress and in the Pentagon, Korb admits, there is an unofficial campaign to discourage women in the ranks, undermine the all-volunteer force, and return to the all-male draft.

As the assistant secretary suggests, it's time to address honestly the role women should play in our nation's defense. The Reagan administration should heed its own promises to reduce the arbitrary nature of advancement, establishing physical and mental standards for all military positions. (Under court order, New York City recently devised a test for recruits of both sexes to integrate its fire department; four of 80 women who applied recently have met the physical standards.)

For military women, improvements will come slowly. Bugged down with other defense matters, the administration isn't likely to give its best effort now for women's equity. Nearing its 35th year, the combat exclusion law won't be hastily repealed.

Yet when a "front line" position in today's military means sitting in front of a radar scope or "manning" a missile silo in Nebraska, combat may demand redefinition. If women are to take their responsibility in the nation's security seriously, the administration must find the time to bring the military up to date.

THIS AFTERNOON

Look Out, CWIP

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — Electric bills have never been the favorite mail in the box. Nor has the electric company ever been known to win popularity contests. But over the past several months, anti-utility sentiment has been growing beyond the usual level of public dissatisfaction and that sentiment is getting to the politicians who can change the utility laws.

Big rate increases granted by the state Utilities Commission, the recent reporting of large salaries for Carolina Power & Light executives and a controversy over how the utilities have used the fuel adjustment clause have heightened anti-utility feelings. Aides in Gov. Jim Hunt's office report the anti-utilities mail has been running very high lately. Legislators say they're hearing the same thing at home.

It appears almost certain that the fuel adjustment clause will either be changed or junked during the Legislature's June session. Hunt, House Speaker Liston Ramsey and Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green all favor some action — they're yet to decide what kind.

The fuel clause allows the utility commission to give utilities a rate hike every four months — and the commission has regularly done this — to make up for increases in fuel costs. The clause has been used lately — at a time when fuel costs have stabilized — to pay the utilities for the higher costs involved in burning coal and oil when their nuclear plants must be shut down.

If anti-utility sentiment continues to rise, the utilities might find themselves facing a strong effort to repeal the Construction Work In Progress (CWIP) provision in 1983. CWIP allows utilities to earn a return on the money they have put into the construction of a power plant before the plant is operating.

That means the construction costs are part of your about CWIP and in the interview announced he'll seek its repeal in 1983. "There'll be a bill introduced in 1983," and it will probably pass the House, he said.

Hunt said he's always opposed to CWIP. But he's been criticized for never getting out front in the fight against it. Hunt's failure to stop monthly bill and that you, in effect, have invested in the utility's construction program with no chance to earn dividends. "If the consumer is going to invest, he ought to earn a return," Ramsey said in an interview.

The utilities say your return is lower rates in the future. Consumer advocates counter that the plant may not come on line for 10 years and many consumer-investors will be dead, or will have moved away by then.

Other Editors Say Urban Solution

(Greensboro Daily News)

President Reagan recently unveiled a major urban program to revitalize America's ailing cities. Not surprisingly, the plan dovetails nicely with Reagan's free-market philosophy because it depends more on private businesses and less on government to rescue depressed urban areas.

Although the plan is not without problems, its advantages warrant serious consideration in Congress.

Specifically, the Reagan plan calls for the development of "enterprise zones" within 25 designated cities that are suffering from urban blight. Private business would be given tax breaks and other incentives if they invested in and hired deprived workers from these specified areas.

Each zone would cost the government $12.5 million annually, mostly in tax revenue losses. The cost for all zones would total $310 million each year, plus administrative expenses.

The virtue of the program is obvious: Government revenues, already stretched thin, would not be used.

The program contrasts sharply with the "model cities" concept of the 1960s whose lifeblood consisted of federal funds.

The enterprise zone concept has its detractors, however. The National Federation of Independent Business, for one, argues that the plan would subsidize businesses in the zones at the expense of businesses within the same city but outside the zone.

They have a point. Companies which invest in the zones would receive sizable tax benefits which include: a tax credit for capital investments, a 5.0 percent credit to employers on wages paid to disadvantaged workers and the elimination of the capital gains tax.

Other critics claim that politics will intrude into the program because politicians will lobby for enterprise zones in their locales. The administration disputes the charge and says designated areas will be chosen through a "competitive process" after state and local governments nominate such zones.

While the program is not without pitfalls, Congress should approve it. It comes at a time when many cities are economically depressed and unemployment is soaring. It also corresponds with a time when diminished federal funds cannot be thrown at problems with the same abandon as in the past.

THE BURDEN OF CONSCIENCE

We read in 1 Samuel 16 that the Lord sent an evil spirit upon King Saul which troubled him.

This statement has often perplexed Bible readers. Would God really send an evil spirit upon a man to trouble him? He certainly would, He certainly did, and He certainly does to this very hour.

A person who has any conscience at all experiences considerable discomfort when he does something wrong. We can be pretty sure that it is the Spirit of God himself which gives him a troubled conscience under these conditions. The conception of God as the constant giver of happiness finds no justification in the Bible. The Lord is certainly full of loving kindness, but the fact he is causes him to be severe in His treatment of erring men.

Yet the Bible makes plain that his purpose is not so much punishment as turning them from their evil ways. Under these circumstances a bad conscience is a blessing at a time when it is sorely needed. — Elisha Douglass

Inflation-Recession Effects

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) —

Among the more evident effects of inflation-recession are the slowing of the marketplace, the decline of mobility, and the discovery of utility in things that once would have been abandoned.

People in tough economic times are more realistic, less dreamy-eyed. They make do. They rely on old resources, internal and external.

Inflation-recession clearly reduces the frenetic activity of "coming and going, getting and spending" that William Wordsworth referred to. People retreat to old values, and sometimes pay less for doing so.

The age of the average car in use today is close to seven years. In 1970, according to the Motor Vehicle Manufacturing Association, people kept their cars only 5.5 years. Then, inevitably, they bought another.

To the great frustration of automakers, there is nothing inevitable today about retiring one car and declining to buy another, not when some families can get along as well, almost, with the one remaining.

Americans are also using their cars less than they used to. In 1970 they drove about 10,000 miles a year. By 1980 they were down to 9,135 miles, says the association. They are conserving, money and energy.

They are holding onto the same house too, a particularly painful matter to real estate agents who used to advertise small houses as "starter" homes and "first" homes, the expectation being that they would have the same couple back for something bigger in a few years.

Similarly with apartment dwellers, who used to say they were saving money for a suburban house. But, you may have observed, while they are still in the same apartment, now they own it and are calling it home.

Others have gone back to the old houses real estate agents offered them, with apologies, several years ago. They are fixing them up, and they are proud to tell you how they saved money on their "discovery."

In those houses people are installing inexpensive computers, to the further frustration of automakers who can't understand that priorities have changed and a person might prefer to stay home with his computer.

High cost and the relative decline in income because of inflation-recession produces financial insecurity. Insecurity in turn leads to cost-cutting. Consider the car: In 1970 it cost just 19 cents a mile to operate. By 1980, according to the same source, it cost 44 cents.

In roughly the same period housing costs have soared even more. So people stay put.

If, for example, a family has a $60,000, 8 percent, 30-year mortgage it isn't likely to give it up for a new one at 17 percent, no matter how nice the house they wish to buy. The additional cost would be the difference between $440 a month and $855 a month. Far too much.

Families therefore are more inclined to add a room or a bath if needed, while going their best to pay the heating or cooling bills, which also have soared.

Their economizing also tends to slow down the younger set. A college education is tough enough to finance without having to pay dormitory room and board. The kids, therefore, are often moving back home, saving money, when feasible, by becoming commuter students.

Advance Mortgage Corp., a Detroit-based, nationally active lender that regularly surveys housing markets, found recently that for the first time in many months Boston's apartment availability rate improved. It attributed the phenomenon to college students returning to families. The return to old habits is evident also to executive recruiters. Despite a flow of people to the Sunbelt states, they report some executives aren't as geographically mobile as they were a decade ago. Many, it seems, prefer to stay with what they have and what they know.

A better job, that is, is not always a lure anymore to an insecure executive. Instead, many demand in addition that the job represent an improvement in the quality of life. Notice that the newspaper ads often stress the mountains, beaches and schools, rather than the paycheck.

You might also agree that in the slower marketplace there may be less frivolous, fadish spending. So you think that blue jeans and Rubik Cubes disprove that assessment? Then compare them with the those old-fashioned horsepower wars, or the spending on extra rooms and kidney swimming pools. That was spending!

It may have been in such ways, as Wordsworth said, that "we lay waste our powers." And so, were he alive today he might be happy to see people staying closer to home, spending less, conserving more.

He, at least, would say they were living better.

CWIP's legislative enactment in 1977 was about the strongest issue his opponents had to use against him in the 1981 campaign.

During the past several weeks, Hunt's told his top advisers to start thinking about it again — 1983 may be the year to go after CWIP. "It's a strategic question," said one close aide. "Is there enough support to make that a key part of his program?" Hunt won't champion repeal of CWIP unless it looks like there's a good chance of victory. Ramsey's statement — he calls CWIP "a rip-off of the consumers" — could indicate that the Legislature is ready to repeal CWIP.

Ramsey said he's asked his legal staff to begin looking at other areas of utility law that might need changing. "I don't think the legislative branch wants to sit around while the people are getting ripped off," he said. One idea is to halve the terms of utility commissioners. He thinks they get "complacent" and "too cozy" with utility lawyers during an eight-year term.

Bring the term down to four years, he said, and the commissioners might do a job worthy of reappointment.

the coming day.

"The president's staff is saying the story today seems to be the Falkland Islands. It's sensitive. There's no point in the president commenting on it," he said as he portrayed the meeting.

At the same time, he said, reporters and editors — and he singled out television news executives — are also deciding that the dispute in the South Atlantic will be the important story of the day, realizing it calls out for presidential comment.

By 9 a.m., the clash begins, with reporters trying to get, first, a word or two from the president, or, second, the definitive word from his aides. On the other side, those aides are trying to make sure that the White House position is placed in front of the public, in just the form they wish.

And so each day goes, he reasons, with at least one thing to be grateful for — few of the 1,700 correspondents, photographers and technicians accredited to cover the White House show up each day.

And there's one thing to remember. Speakes calls it the press secretary's prayer: "Oh Lord, teach me to utter words that are gentle and sweet, because tomorrow I may have to eat them."

Grand Jury To Get Spy Case

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) — A preliminary hearing for Hungarian-born Otto Attila Gilbert, charged with spying, will be canceled if a federal grand jury indicts him, a U.S. magistrate says.

Federal prosecutors prepared to call witnesses before the grand jury today to testify in the espionage case.

U.S. Magistrate John Dunsmore Jr. scheduled a preliminary hearing for Gilbert on April 30. But he said the hearing will be called off if the grand jury here issues an indictment in the case before then.

Gilbert, 50, a naturalized American, was arrested in Augusta Saturday on a charge of spying for the Hungarian Military Intelligence Service.

Gilbert was flown Tuesday to Federal Hospital in Springfield, Mo., for treatment of phlebitis, an inflammation of the veins, in his left leg. He was expected to stay there for at least three weeks, Pierce said.

Gilbert was arrested after he gave $4,000 to U.S. Army Chief Warrant Officer Janos Mihaly Szmolka in exchange for classified military documents and film, the FBI said.

Szmolka, a 43-year-old Hungarian native who worked with the FBI and military intelligence officers to set up the arrest, has emerged as a hero to his neighbors in Lincoln County.

Court documents said Szmolka was visiting relatives in Budapest, Hungary, in December 1977 and January 1978 when he was approached by a man named Lajos Perlaki, who identified himself as an officer in the Hungarian Military Intelligence Service and asked Szmolka to sell him secret military information.

Szmolka subsequently informed U.S. military intelligence of the contact, launching a four-year intelligence operation that concluded with Szmolka's weekend meeting with Gilbert, allegedly Perlaki's courier, court documents said.

Szmolka and his wife, Peggy, who are both assigned to the Army's criminal investigations office at Fort Gordon, have lived in rural Lincoln County about 40 miles from the east-central Georgia base since they were transferred from Mainz, West Germany in January 1980.

Their home, a two-story brick house on 8.7 acres near Clark Hill Lake, "is not exactly the setting for a spy thriller," said C.G. Bentley, who calls his next-door neighbor "John Smoke."

"I think we ought to be grateful to him," said Bentley. "I think it says a lot about John that he'd do something like this for a country he wasn't born in."

Bentley said Szmolka emigrated from Hungary to the United States at the age of 16.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, APR. 23, 1982

YOUR DAILY
Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The daytime finds you with considerable ingenuity to handle whatever problems may come up. Deceptive influences are in effect as the evening approaches.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Engage in civic work you enjoy and accomplish a great deal. Take it easy tonight and restore lagging energies.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Find the right way to advance in your line of endeavor. A financial expert can give advice for a plan you have in mind.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Be clever and you relieve tensions easily and then you can carry through with regular duties intelligently.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Plan how to gain more respect and prestige in the outside world. Show increased devotion to loved one.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Schedule your time and activities well so that you can accomplish more. Enjoy a fine social activity in the evening.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) If you get your work done well and quickly, you can have more time later for the recreation you desire.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Find the best way to improve conditions at home and be more diplomatic with family members. Take health treatments.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Make the changes now that will help you get ahead faster in your career. Be more supportive of family members.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Find a better way of handling finances and you can add to present assets. Strive to be more efficient.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Get busy and gain your most cherished aims. An intuitive prompting could be erroneous now, so don't follow it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Handle those practical affairs with skill and accomplish a great deal today. Take no risks in money matters.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Joining with friends in discussing mutual problems can be helpful in solving them. Handle communications wisely.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one of those born organizers and can make a big success of life, provided you give a good education. Don't neglect spiritual training early in life. A good family life in this chart. One who will like sports.

Opening Second Museum In May

NEW YORK (UPI) — The American Craft Museum is scheduled to open a second museum May 20 with a major, three-part exhibit of handmade paper.

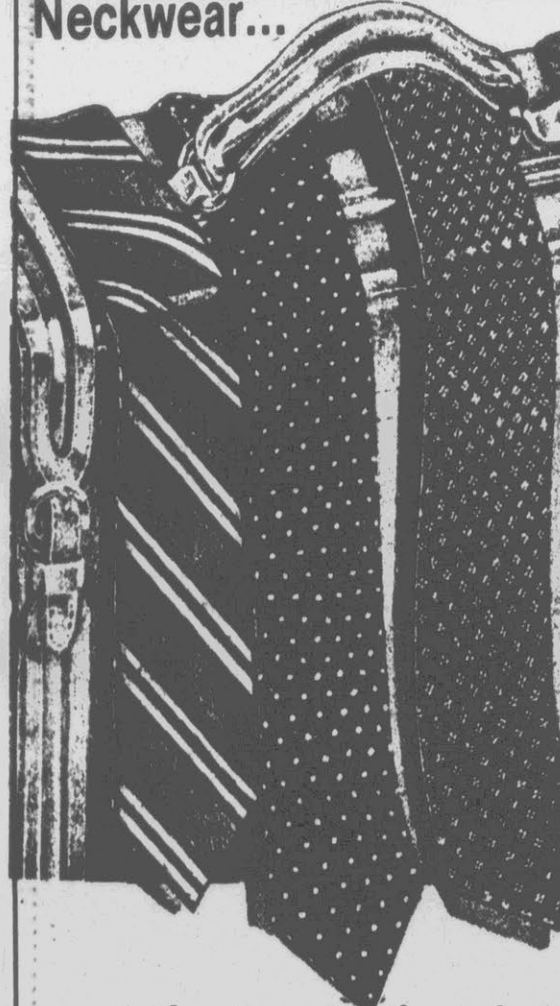

Two of the Making Paper exhibits will be in the original museum on West 53rd St. and the third, in 3,500 square feet of space in the lobby of the new world headquarters of the International Paper Co., on West 45th St. in New York City.

The new facility, to be known as American Craft Museum II, is sponsored by the paper company and the International Paper Company Foundation. It will more than double the craft museum's existing space and its exhibit program will be coordinated with that of the original museum.

The exhibit is scheduled to run through Sept. 26.

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer
ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — A state of emergency has been declared in the wake of a firestorm that started with an electric spark and leaped from roof to roof in 60 mph Santa Ana winds, burning up to 1,500 people out of their homes and causing $50 million in damage.

The notorious dry winds and the wood-shingle roofs of many of the 50 buildings destroyed by the fire Wednesday helped make the inferno the worst in the history of Orange County, home of Disneyland, officials said. At least eight people were injured.

As the evacuees whose houses and apartments were burned sought shelter with friends or relatives, or in hotels that opened their doors to help, Anaheim Fire Chief Bob Simpson said it was "God's own miracle" no one died.

The winds, which gusted up to 100 mph in Fontana, 30 miles away, died down by noon and the fire was put out.

"It looks like some kind of war-ravaged area. It's a terrible thing to see," Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. said after flying over the mile-square fire area in a helicopter.

Brown declared a state of emergency in Anaheim, the first step toward making fire victims eligible for up to $55,000 in federal loans. He said he would decide today whether to seek a federal disaster area designation, which would make displaced residents eligible for $5,000 grants and temporary housing for up to a year.

The firestorm was touched off shortly before 6 a.m. Wednesday when winds downed a power line which set the fronds of a palm tree ablaze. The buildings it destroyed included 534 apartment units.

Police spokesman Werner Raes said two residents suffered heart attacks in the fire. A third civilian, one police officer and three firefighters suffered minor injuries.

Flames formed what resident Simon Berkowitz described as "a wall of fire about three or four blocks wide" and sent clouds of smoke billowing skyward.

The fire left an eerie landscape of charred ruins, an occasional standing wall and a backdrop of towering palm trees that had escaped the flames.

"It was early in the morning and people were up anyway, getting ready to go to school or whatever," said Anaheim Fire Inspector Nadine Roberts. "If it had been in the night I think we would have had some horrible problems."

Most residents fled with little more than the clothes on their back, their children and pets. Those who weren't awakened by the smoke or sirens were alerted by police officers with bullhorns. In some cases they were awakened by neighbors — such as 81-year-old Anna Lefebre, a widow who pounded on doors at the 56-unit Barcelona Apartments complex before fleeing.

"I knocked all around," Mrs. Lefebre said. "I almost knocked the doors in."

"She may be old, but she's lively as a cricket," added Ruth Miller, a 97-year-old neighbor who abandoned her wheelchair but took with her the cage containing her pet parakeet, Honeybee.

"At the height of the fire we evacuated more than 2,000 people," Simpson said. "We now estimate that between 1,200 and 1,500 are displaced."

Simpson described the fire as the worst in Orange County history, and other Southern California fire officials said it was the worst non-brush blaze they could remember. Simpson estimated the damage at $50 million.

The damage from a July 1977 Santa Barbara fire that burned through 280 expensive homes was pegged at $30 million. A November 1961 Bel-Air-Brentwood fire claimed 484 homes worth $25 million.

More recently, 284 structures worth $28.8 million were burned in the November 1980 fire in San Bernardino.

Fifth-Graders In Business

BELFAST, Maine (AP) — An experiment in free enterprise by fifth-graders at East Belfast School produced one problem: how to slake the thirst created by their fast-selling bags of Colonel's Kernels popcorn.

With a professional approach to problem-solving nurtured by frequent corporate-style board meetings, the young entrepreneurs decided to diversify into Kool-Aid, teacher Louis Solebello Jr. said Wednesday.

The idea took shape in January. Meeting as 28 shareholders, counting Solebello and a teacher's aide, the class broke up into committees to manage advertising, cooking and packaging, selling and purchasing and organization.

After leasing several corn poppers, testing the target market inside the school and buying raw materials, the students began to make Colonel's Kernels. Kicking off their sales campaign at a special school movie, the students sold 190 25-cent bags the first day, saturating a market of about 150 students. Profits were four to five cents on each bag.

Sales expanded to two other district schools, and the class took out radio and newspaper ads. Cups of Kool-Aid netted more profits before the project wound down in March, showing net earnings of $150.

"For a while we were making and packaging popcorn three days a week," Solebello recalled. "It was an all-day affair."

Solebello said class time lost to production was offset by practical experience gained in the mathematics of marketing, the verbal techniques of advertising and the social skills of group enterprise.

Volunteers For Nursing Home

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer
Sarelle Hanes' audience crowds tightly around her sometimes, scuttling close in their wheelchairs, smiling and singing, some softly, some strongly, to the accustomed melodies that resound from the ivories.

Later, as she walks down the hall, she doesn't meet a single soul that doesn't reach for her or say "hey, Mrs. Hanes," or anybody she doesn't extend a hand to.

For over a decade, Mrs. Hanes and Kip West of Greenville have voluntarily provided church services at Greenville Villa Nursing Home. Every Sunday morning except two for 14 years, Mrs. Hanes has filled the home with piano music and for 10 years West has changed Bible verses into stories for residents of the villa.

"I've only missed two Sundays since I began," said Mrs. Hanes, who lists her age as 21 plus. "One was when it snowed and he (West) didn't come get me and the other was when there was a flu epidemic and there was a quarantine."

A church group persuaded her to volunteer her services to the nursing home, she said. "A committee from Jarvis Memorial Church came to me and said they (Greenville Villa) needed someone to run the Sunday school and they wanted me to do it. I said I'd never taught and they said, 'well, you can't learn any sooner,' so I did it," explained the pianist.

West filled in for a regular teacher one Sunday and stayed. "I came out one

MAKING MUSIC, MAKING HAPPINESS ... Mrs. Sorelle Hanes, above, has filled the halls of Greenville Villa Nursing Home with music every Sunday morning for 14 years. "Lots of people Sunday to substitute," he said, "and it occurred to me that it would be better to have someone to do this regularly and I've been doing it ever since."

West prepares his Sunday school lessons the night before and says he takes a section of the Bible puts life into it. "I try to make it like a story," he explained. "I try to make it so they can visualize it."

God has given Mrs. Hanes a place to show her talents, she says, and that has made all the difference in her life. "My fingers have really played the piano a lot," she noted. "Lots of people really hide their talents, especially when they're older. God has given me a place to show mine and it makes me happy."

The residents benefit from her happiness, added the pianist. "Music is good therapy. While they are singing they are forgetting their pain and infirmities for just a moment. "I watch them while I'm playing and I can see — they aren't feeling bad, they're feeling wonderful," Mrs. Hanes said.

West says teaching Sunday school at the Villa has enriched his own spiritual life. "Religion didn't mean much to me until I came out here," he explained. "Now it is fulfilling."

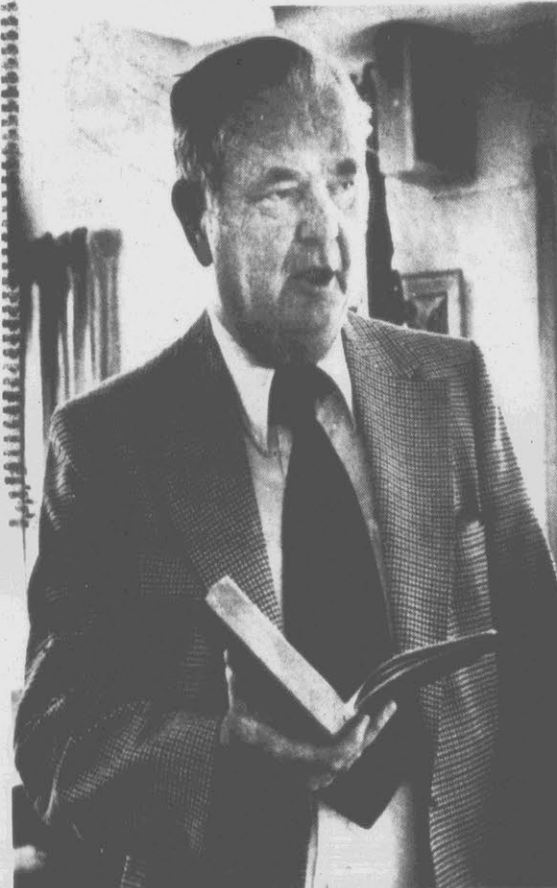

Both West and Mrs. Hanes agree it would be difficult to return to a regular church service after their years at Greenville Villa. "It would be hard to go to church and sit and do nothing," said Mrs. Hanes.

Terry Fuller, activities director at the nursing home, said the two volunteers provide warmth and love to the residents. "What they're giving, they're giving freely," she added. "They are dependable volunteers that help the staff as well as patients."

This help is a big part of the two volunteers' lives. "The longer we work here, the dearer the patients become to us," said Mrs. Hanes. "I think I know just about everybody here and everybody knows me."

"I've gotten so much more than I've ever given," noted West. "It's just a good feeling."

Founder Began With A Big One

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The founder of a national restaurant chain here in 1969 named his first restaurant after his third daughter, Wendy, and unveiled a unique merchandising touch.

The restaurant developed a triple hamburger, with three square patties on a bun, even though few people would eat such a large hamburger.

But it reassured customers to know it was available and it encouraged sales of the double hamburger, which appeared to be small in comparison, says Charles Bernstein in his book "Great Restaurant Innovators,"

Search For Bodies Continues After Grain Elevator's Blast

By CAM ROSSIE
Associated Press Writer
COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa (AP) — A grain elevator that exploded in flames and buried five men under smoldering corn and soybeans may never have been inspected for safety, a state official said.

"With 1,200 elevators in the state, we just don't have the manpower to get around every year," said Walter Johnson, Iowa assistant labor commissioner.

He said state records date back to 1972 and none indicates the Bluffs Elevator Co. had been inspected for safety.

He said the federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration also had no records of an inspection since 1971, when the elevator went into business.

Meanwhile, crews dodging grain slides and flying debris continued digging through the night for the bodies of the five employees who were working in the elevator when it exploded Tuesday afternoon. They are presumed dead in the blast, which also injured two dozen other workers.

the glare of special lights Wednesday night in the search for the workers' bodies in the still-burning grain.

"Our only interest at this point is trying to locate the people that are still inside," said Dick Elliott, assistant director of facilities at AGRI-Industries, the Des Moines company that owns the elevator.

"We're getting into the area where the men possibly may be," he said, adding that "there will be no stopping" until they are found.

He estimated the excavation, being handled by a local construction company, would take at least 48 hours, because the fire had not been completely doused.

Council Bluffs Fire Chief Norman Elgan estimated that one million bushels of grain were still burning.

AGRI-Industries spokesman Maurice Van Nostrand said two of the missing men were working in the headhouse — the top of the elevator. The other three men were in a walkway on the main floor of the elevator, he said.

He identified the missing as superintendents Keith Strait, 27, of Van Meter, Iowa; Rod Kelly, 37, of Missouri Valley, Iowa; Frank Driver, 49, of Plattsmouth, Neb., and Roger Kinney, 31, of Council Bluffs; and part-time employee John Mitchell, 22, of Council Bluffs.

Of the 24 injured, 11 remained hospitalized Wednesday.

Before the blast, the grain elevator consisted of seven tall concrete storage silos clustered around a wooden elevator house. The fire destroyed the elevator house, which was used to hoist grain up to be fed into the silos.

Van Nostrand said the elevator had been shut down for two weeks so that a new truck dump could be installed. The work was completed Friday and the elevator reopened Monday.

George Kornstad, AGRI-Industries facilities director, quoted workmen as saying that old wiring and equipment was being replaced during the shutdown. He said they had not finished replacing the older wiring.

Officials say the explosion probably was caused by a spark that ignited grain dust.

An official with the Iowa Commerce Commission, which sent inspectors to the elevator March 30 to examine grain supplies and records, noticed no high levels of grain dust.

While the inspectors weren't looking for safety violations, they did observe the building and premises, said Wallace Dick, director of the warehouse division of the commerce department.

"There is always a certain amount of dust in an elevator. If we find an unusual amount, we ask for a correction," he said, noting that no correction was requested.

91 Hospital Volunteers Recognized At Banquet

Pitt County Memorial Hospital recognized its 91 volunteers during the annual volunteer recognition banquet held recently.

It was pointed out that the 91 honorees gave 8,837 hours of service to the hospital.

Thirteen who each contributed more than 100 hours received recognition pins from Etsil Mason, director of volunteer services. This group of 12 women and one man spent nearly 4,000 hours in volunteer work at the hospital during the past 12 months. Ms. Mason pointed out. They are Mary Craft, Juanita Elks, Helen Kite, Marie McGlohon, Graham Nahouse, Evelyn Parker, Edythe Price, Ann Stalls, Gail Stevens, Ina Venters, Mildred Venters, Selma Walker and Jean Weaver.

Janice Buck, mayor pro tem of Greenville, was the featured speaker. She thanked the volunteers on behalf of the city of Greenville for their service.

"I learned from my experiences as a volunteer," she said, "that the greatest joy is to give rather than to receive. Volunteering is the best method I know to grow personally and professionally."

Other adult volunteers honored were Page Adkins, Susanne Allison, Roy Andrews, Delois Barrett, Donna Barwick, Gloria Bullock, Deborah Clemons, Hilda Cox, Lenoris Crandel, Nancy Dunn, Mona Farrell, Virginia Frost, Jennie Hall, Louise Harrod, Joyce Hybil, Robert Kirk, William Lamberts, Douglas Gower, Edna Latham, Mary LeCarpentier, Gary Lee, Carolyn Massey, Jeanne McCarthy, Carmela McIver, Linda Miller, Betty Jane Mister, Lynda Parker, Lavine Perkins, Melanie Pierce, Bonnie Porter, Sita Prasad, Lois Riggs, Gale

Order States Enforce Rest Home Standards

By BETTY ANNE WILLIAMS

Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is threatening to withhold aid to states if they don't enforce adequate safety standards at 30,000 board and care homes for the elderly and handicapped.

The penalties are part of an eight-point plan outlined Wednesday by Health and Human Services Secretary Richard S. Schweiker for improving safety conditions at rest homes.

Gerald W. McEntee, president of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, described the plan as "a half step in the right direction," but complained about its lack of fire code standards.

Citing the deaths of 143 people in 14 rest home fires since 1977, he said that problem still would go unanswered under the administration's plan.

"Every responsible organization concerned with fire safety agrees that sprinkler systems are the only way to prevent more deaths from boarding home fires," he said. "To ignore these deaths and the data that has already been developed on fire safety is absolutely irresponsible."

McEntee said that since 1977 there have been eight rest home fires in New Jersey killing a total of 71 people, one fire in Missouri killing 25, two fires in Pennsylvania killing 22, one fire in Ohio killing 14 and two fires in the District of Columbia killing 11 people.

Schweiker's plan includes a provision for the government to provide about $400,000 for the National Bureau of Standards to develop fire standards for rest homes.

Elma Griesel, executive director of the National Citizens Coalition for Nursing Home Reform, approved of the proposed penalties in cases where states don't enforce safety standards.

"If the facility didn't meet the standards (under the old system) it was the recipient who suffered," she said. "Their benefits (under Supplemental Security Income) were withdrawn."

Board and care homes or rest homes generally provide personal care along with some supervisory services to residents. Such an institution might make sure that an elderly or disabled person takes prescribed medication, for example. But they do not provide extensive nursing or medical services.

The plan outlined by Schweiker also would permit rest home operators to collect Supplemental Security Income benefits on behalf of their clients only if the proprietors could prove their institutions met state safety standards.

The plan, now subject to public comment, also would: —Establish an information clearinghouse to offer data on current rest home practices.

—Issue a contract for a national organization to develop a model state law for regulating rest homes.

—Allow states to obtain waivers which would permit the use of Medicaid money for rest home care so long as safety standards were met.

—Set up a new oversight unit within the Health and Human Services Department to coordinate activities on board and home care.

—Give the Administration on Aging, a departmental agency, authority to review claims by the states that they maintain and enforce rest home standards.

Program Draws Editorial Notice

ECU News Bureau East Carolina University's Costa Rica program has attracted editorial notice of at least two newspapers in the Central American nation.

Photographs and articles about the 16 participating students and ECU geography professors Drs. Simon Baker and John Bort, who are accompanying the group, have appeared in "La Republica."

A feature-editorial about the ECU group's studies of Costa Rica's volcanoes and field trips to the tropical reserve on Costa Rica's Southern Pacific Coast was included in a recent issue of the English-language newspaper, "The Tico Times."

Douglas' Blast Starts Rose Romp, 12-2

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
WILSON — Gordon Douglas slapped a grand-slam home run in the first inning that got the Rose High School Rampants off on the right foot as the unbeaten team rolled to its 13th straight win yesterday, downing Wilson Fike, 12-2.

Roger Williams boosted his pitching record to 5-0 with the victory, going the distance and allowing four hits — one of them a two-run homer by catcher Randy Ward. Williams walked just one and struck out 11 along the way.

Rose, meanwhile, was banging out 14 hits, including five for extra bases, and making a parade around the bases as the Rampants raised the Big East record to 5-0.

It all served to please coach Ronald Vincent quite well. "We hit the ball much better today," Vincent said. "We were very aggressive with the bats."

"You know, (Fike pitcher Jeff) Howell gave us fits last year. It took us until the seventh inning to get a run off him then," the coach recalled. Vincent also expressed pleasure with the defense, which did not commit an error, tagging shortstop Sammy Rose.

Hodges and first baseman Bill Kittrell as the glue that holds the infield together. "Roger threw about as well as he's thrown all year," the coach added.

For all purposes, the game was settled in the first inning, when the Rampants scored four times — thanks to Douglas' blast. With one away, Mont Carter walked and Hodges singled up the middle. Williams was also walked and that brought up Douglas, who lashed the first pitch out of the park in left field for the 4-0 lead.

Rose came back with two more in the second for a 6-0 lead. Kittrell got things started with a freak inside-and-outside the park homer. He sliced a drive down the left field line.

The ball landed in fair territory, then skipped foul and rolled past the end of the fence, which runs only in fair territory. Under ground rules, the ball remains in play for all you can get — and Kittrell got it all, scoring well ahead of the relay from the outfield.

Rudy Stalk kept things going with a triple to center — another freak — as the ball bounced away from the centerfielder and rolled all the way to the fence. Tom Bue then brought Stalks in with a sacrifice fly.

Fike got both of its runs in the third inning. Brad Almond got the lone walk of the game off Williams and after the senior righthander had struck out the next two batters, Ward poked the ball over the fence in center to cut the lead back to 6-2.

It was the last gasp, however, for Fike, as Williams retired the next 13 in a row, not allowing another batter to reach base.

Rose, meanwhile, wasn't nearly through, scoring two more in the fourth to up the lead to 8-2. Bue reached on an error and with two away, Hodges singled him in. Hodges stole second and moved to third with Williams grounded to second. Hodges kept moving on the play, and the relay to the plate was errored, allowing him to score.

Three more scored in the fifth. With one down, Randy Warren walked and was safe at second on an error on Kittrell's infield grounder. Bue singled to score Warren, and Mont Carter doubled, driving in both Kittrell and Bue.

The final run came in the sixth. Williams led off with a double and courtesy runner Mike Iaboni scored when Warren got a two-out single.

Hodges led the Rose hitting with three, while Williams,

Douglas and Warren each had two. Ward had two of the four hits that Fike got off Williams. Fike drops to 6-7 overall and 1-3 in Big East play.

The Rampants return to action tonight, hosting Wilson Hunt at 7:30 p.m. in Harrington Field.

"This is a very key game for us," Vincent said of the Hunt meeting. "Hunt's been on a tear recently, and has come on as a true contender in the title race. It's a game we really need to win."

Rose Girls Rip Eagles

Angie Atkinson won three events and Belina Haselrig added two as Rose High School's girls' track team romped past Northeastern of Elizabeth City, 95-36.

Rose won all but two of the individual events, while Northeastern helped its cause with two of the three relays.

Atkinson captured the wins in the long and triple jumps and added the 100-meter dash. Haselrig took both of the hur-

Teams Are Divided For Purple-Gold Grid Game

East Carolina University will put its new "I" offense on public display for the first time Saturday night at 7 p.m. in the annual Purple-Gold game, set for Ficklen Stadium.

Seniors chose up sides for the contest, which winds up spring practice for East Carolina and coach Ed Emory, now entering his third season.

Emory, however, will be watching the game from the stands, as the assistant coaches handle the on-field duties for the evening.

The Purple team will be coached by Norm Parker, who will serve as head coach, while Jim Holland, Rickey Bustle, John Zernhelt, Charlie Elmquist, and Jack Boone serve as assistants. Student coaches will be Tony Hensley, Fee Griffin and John Felton.

Panthers Drub SWE

BETHEL — North Pitt scored six times in the fifth inning and went on to record a 12-4 baseball victory over SouthWest Edgecombe in an Eastern Carolina Conference game yesterday.

SouthWest grabbed the early lead with a run in the second inning. Harold Hobgood walked and stole second. Justice Neal singled him to third, and he scored on a passed ball.

The Cougars added a second run in the third inning before North Pitt got its scoring started with one in the bottom of the fourth. SouthWest then added its other two runs in the top of the fifth for a 4-1 lead.

But North Pitt exploded for six runs in the bottom of the fifth to take the lead for good. With one out, Jay Hines walked, and after a second out, Quenton Dove also walked. Trellis Moore singled, scoring Hines, and Richard Heller's double brought in the two ahead of him. Mitch Cox singled in Heller to put North Pitt into a 5-4 lead, but the Panthers weren't finished.

David Keel singled and Ken Whitehurst followed with another double, scoring Cox and Keel for a 7-4 lead.

The Panthers then added five more runs in the sixth to salt the game away.

Moore led the North Pitt hitting with three, while Whitehurst added two. Doug Drake and David Proctor each had two for SouthWest.

The Panthers are now 6-5 overall and 4-5 in league play. They host Ayden-Grifton on Friday.

Hitting Contest

Sportcasters from the three area television stations will participate in a long-ball hitting contest Saturday prior to the start of the East Carolina-UNC Wilmington baseball game at Harrington Field.

The contest is slated to get underway at 5:30 p.m., with the baseball game starting at 7 p.m.

Participating will be Lee Moore of WCTI-TV in New Bern, John Castleberry of WITN-TV in Washington, and Mike King of WNCT-TV in Greenville.

Each of the three will hit two rounds of five balls each, hurled by former professional pitcher and now ECU head coach Hal Baird. The longest ball hit on the fly will win the contest, with ECU baseball players serving as judged.

Falcons In 14-3 Victory

PIKEVILLE — Charles B. Aycock kept rolling along in first place in the Eastern Carolina Conference with a 14-3 baseball victory over Farmville Central last night.

Aycock got all it needed in the third inning when it scored four runs. Kenny Grantham led off with a single and Dunnols doubled. Both runners scored on Thomas' single, and Bunn walked. Rose reached on a fielder's choice that scored Thomas, and after Curtis walked, another fielder's choice on Grady scored Bunn.

Aycock added four more in the fourth, five in the fifth and one in the sixth. Farmville got two in the fifth and one in the seventh.

Aycock's hitting was led by Grantham, Dunnols, Thomas and Gurley each with two. Grantham had a homer in the fourth inning.

Bobby Carraway, Billy Godley and Eddie Jones each had two hits for Farmville.

The Jaguars, now 1-4 in the conference and 3-9 overall, host Southern Nash on Friday.

Ram Netters Take Over First

PIKEVILLE — Greene Central nipped Charles B. Aycock, 5-4, in a key Eastern Carolina Conference tennis match yesterday, and moved into sole possession of first place.

The Rams had to forfeit one of the matches at the start. The match was actually started earlier but halted by rain, and when it resumed yesterday, number three singles player Jim Hubbard of Greene Central was sick and unable to play, forcing the forfeit.

But the Rams won four of the remaining five singles and took one of the two doubles to wrap it up.

Greene Central is now 9-3 overall and 3-0 in conference play. The Rams travel to Farmville Central today.

Summary:

 WILLIAMSTON — Williamston High School pushed over a run in the bottom of the eighth inning and nipped Tarboro, 3-2, yesterday in a Northeastern Conference softball game.

Williamston had taken the lead in the game in the second inning, scoring twice, before Tarboro tied it up with single runs in the third and sixth innings.

In the bottom of the eighth, Williamston loaded the bases and Gale Smith got the game winning hit that ended it.

Smith and Hope Hopkins each had two hits to lead Williamston. M. Jackson and D. Lunsford each had two for Tarboro, while S. Knight's homer in the sixth served to tie it up.

Williamston is now 8-2 and plays again on Friday, April 30, against Roanoke Rapids.

Tigers Top Vikes, 4-1
 WILLIAMSTON — Williamston High School scored early and went on to record a 4-1 baseball victory over Tarboro yesterday.

The win boosted the Williamston record to 4-5 on the year.

Williamston got all it needed in the first inning, scoring twice. James Ward walked and stole second. Tim Hines brought him in with a single, then moved all the way to third on an error on the play. He scored on Ed Phippen's single.

In the third, Williamston added a third run. Ward walked and scored when Hines reached on an error.

Tarboro got its only run in the top of the sixth. Jimmy Overstreet singled and scored when Greg Steel got a hit.

Williamston countered with one more in the bottom of the sixth. Keith Bryant singled, stole up and scored when Keith Perry singled.

Brian Pavisher had two hits for Tarboro and was the lone player in the game with more than one.

Williamston has a make-up game Friday.

 Favored Clemson rode eighth-inning home runs to victory and Georgia Tech pitcher Stu Rogers fired a two-hitter in first round action of the Atlantic Coast Conference baseball tournament Wednesday.

When the smoke cleared, Clemson had defeated Duke 10-9. Georgia Tech had knocked off North Carolina State 5-1. Virginia had whalloped Wake Forest 10-4 and North Carolina had slid past Maryland 8-7.

Winner's bracket play in the double-elimination tournament begins Thursday at 4 p.m. with Georgia Tech meeting Clemson followed at 7 by Virginia versus North Carolina.

North Carolina State and Duke meet in the opening game of the loser's bracket at 10 a.m. with Wake Forest challenging Maryland at 1 p.m.

David Lemaster and Steve Van Dyke cracked eighth-inning home runs to spark top-seeded Clemson to victory.

Lemaster, Clemson's first baseman, had gone hitless in his previous 16 at bats before tying the game at 9 with his drive to center field. With two out, Van Dyke hammered his first career home run to give the Tigers the victory.

The Tiger's Donny Hoover pitched 4 1/3 innings of scoreless relief to notch the victory and raise his record to 5-5. Duke starter Ken Fay, also 5-5, took the loss.

Rogers opened the tournament by pitching eight perfect innings before the Wolfpack's Tracy Black spoiled his no-hit big with a ninth-inning homer to right. Ken Sears followed with a double before Rogers regrouped and retired the side.

Rogers got all the help he needed in the fourth inning when third baseman Rick Lockwood smashed a 450-foot, three-run homer over the center field screen.

N.C. State's Joe Plesac was tagged with the loss.

SouthWest Eases Past Farmville C. Thinclads

FARMVILLE — SouthWest Edgecombe piled up points in depth and eased past Farmville Central in a boys' track meet held yesterday.

The Cougars finished the day with 119 points, while Farmville ended up with 104. Greene Central was a distant third with 35 points, followed by C.B. Aycock with 11. Rosewood also participated in the meet, but failed to score.

Farmville had two double winners during the day, as Virgil Jordan put the discus and shot put. Wesley Carmon took the 100 and 440-yard dashes. Pridgen won two events for Greene Central, the mile and two mile, while Corpening took the two hurdles races for SouthWest.

Farmville returns to action on Monday, traveling to SouthWest.

Several Games Are Rained Out

Rain and wet grounds forced the delay in several athletic events in the area yesterday.

Delayed until tonight are the following baseball games: Conley at White Oak and Ahoskie at Roanoke. Ahoskie and Roanoke will also play in softball tonight.

A tennis match between Fike and Rose was washed out and has not been rescheduled as yet.

Rogers got all the help he needed in the fourth inning when third baseman Rick Lockwood smashed a 450-foot, three-run homer over the center field screen.

N.C. State's Joe Plesac was tagged with the loss.

Brave Rally Keeps Win Streak Going

ATLANTA (AP) — It was a new way of doing things, but the results were the same for the amazing Atlanta Braves — another notch in a record-setting victory binge.

Trailing by a run with two down in the ninth, Claudell Washington lashed a two-run single up the middle to give the unbeaten Braves a 4-3 triumph over the Cincinnati Reds Wednesday night and extend Atlanta's winning streak to 13 games.

"Everybody's looking over their shoulder watching what the Braves are doing," said Washington. "If things keep going like this, we expect to go all the way."

Lady Luck was riding with the Braves in the final inning. Rookie Matt Sinatro walked to start the ninth and Rafael Ramirez, attempting to sacrifice the tying run to second, punched his bunt past the mound and beat it out for a single.

After Rufino Linares fled out, the Braves got the key break in the game. Brett Butler lashed a one-hopper toward short that appeared to be tailor-made for a game-ending double play, but the ball struck Sinatro on his right heel. It made Sinatro an automatic out, but Ramirez was safe at second and Butler on at first with a single.

Jim Kern uncorked a wild pitch to advance both runners and then pinch-hitter Biff Poceroba was walked intentionally, loading the bases, and setting the stage for Washington's game-winning single up the middle.

"I didn't do it on purpose," said Sinatro. "I tried to get out of the way, tried to score. I hesitated because it was a line drive and I didn't want to get doubled off. That's what happens when you're hot."

"I don't think the kid has the presence of mind to do it (intentionally)," said Atlanta Manager Joe Torre. "We don't coach it."

Torre said he expected a possible letdown after Atlanta had set the modern record for consecutive victories at the start of a season with a 4-2 triumph over the Reds Tuesday night. The latest conquest erased the all-time NL mark of 12 set by New York in 1884.

"I felt we were ready to play though," Torre said. "We hadn't won one in the ninth. It's just a good feeling to win."

It was the fourth consecutive comeback victory in Atlanta's streak, and their sixth comeback overall.

Asked what it would take to stop the streak, Washington replied, "Maybe for all of us to catch the flu or something."

Washington said in a way a defeat would be a good thing. "It's a drain coming out here every night in front of the cameras," he said. "Not that I want to lose, though."

Chris Chambliss had cut into Cincinnati's 3-0 lead in the fifth when he drilled his third homer of the year over the right field fence. Atlanta cut it to 3-2 in the seventh on a sacrifice fly by Rafael Ramirez that scored Dale Murphy, who had doubled and advanced to third on Chambliss' fly ball.

Larry Bitner gave the Reds their lead when he smacked a three-run homer in the third.

"What it boils down to is they did it when they had to," said Bitner. "When teams are playing this way, those things happen. You don't win 13 without quality players in there, though. They're getting good pitching, timely hitting, doing everything well."

The setback dropped the Reds to 3-10 for the year, 10 games off the pace, and left Manager John McNamara in no mood to talk about the Braves.

"I don't want to talk about them," he said. "I'm just worried about us winning a game."

Cobbs To Attend Fete

CHAPEL HILL — Jack Cobb Jr., and Annie Cobb Rice, children of the late John (Jack "Sprat") Cobb of Greenville, have been invited to attend the 1982 University of North Carolina Basketball Banquet on Tuesday in Chapel Hill.

The University will be honoring not only the players and families of the 1982 NCAA National Championship team, but also the players and families of the 1957 and 1924 national championships teams, of which the elder Cobb was a member.

Cobb was three times selected to the All-America team, in 1924, 1925 and 1926, and was the Helms National Player of the Year in 1926. He is a member both of the Helms Hall of Fame and the North Carolina Sports Hall of Fame.

The Cobb family along with the Cart Carmichael family annually present an award to the most outstanding defensive player on the UNC team.

'Monster' Ash Cloud May Change Earth's Climate

By JIM R. ALLEN
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Scientists fear a newly discovered "monster" cloud of volcanic debris drifting 13 miles above the surface of the Earth will cause droughts or heat waves in some corners of the planet.

The two-mile-thick cloud is made up of debris from the March 29 eruption of the Chichonal volcano in southeast Mexico and stretches from Mexico across the Pacific and Indian oceans to Saudi Arabia, researchers say.

The cloud, which scientists at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Ames Research Center say is one of the largest ever discovered, is already blocking sunshine in Hawaii, officials say.

"This cloud definitely has the potential for some climatic change in the next six months, but it's hard to get a feeling on how much effect," said Brian Toon, an atmospheric scientist with the Ames Research Center, located at Mountain View near San Francisco.

"It's a monster cloud and quite a big deal," Toon said Wednesday.

The NASA pilot who first noticed it said the cloud was so dense he could look through it straight at the sun without harming his eyes.

Toon said the shroud could lower the Earth's temperature at least 1 degree Fahrenheit and "in any one place it could become 10 degrees hotter or 10 degrees colder."

But "the real problem could be climatic changes that, localized, could cause droughts and heat waves," Toon said.

Scientists say the cloud carries more volcanic debris than any other similar cloud found in the Northern Hemisphere since the 1912 eruption of Alaska's Mount Katmai volcano, which collapsed and created a lake.

The cloud is nearly 100 times denser than the so-called "mystery cloud" observed in January. That invisible cloud, circling 10 miles above the Earth, is made up of tiny droplets of sulfuric acid from a volcanic eruption that hasn't been pinpointed.

The "monster" cloud is 140 times as dense as a cloud seen over Hawaii after the 1980 eruption of Mount St. Helens in Washington, said researchers at the Mauna Loa Observatory in Hilo, Hawaii.

"It's already causing sunlight to be reduced and it can be seen best over Hawaii," Toon said.

"From a satellite, it's been seen as a grayish-whitish haze from Mexico to Saudi Arabia."

Debris clouds usually create spectacular sunrises and sunsets, but this one gives a washed-out appearance to the usually clear Hawaiian sky, scientists say.

Bob Erickson, a pilot of a U-2 reconnaissance plane, spotted the cloud April 15 while he was flying a routine mission at 70,000 feet. He saw it again four days later, and said he was at least 10,000 feet below it each time.

"It looks like a typical cloud in color and density, but it's not," Erickson said. "I could look right at the sun and it didn't bother me" because of the density.

Roland Chan, an atmospheric scientist at Ames, said scientists won't be able to make specific calculations on the cloud's effect until it sinks low enough for a plane to fly through it and gather debris that can be analyzed. Another U-2 flight is planned for May 6.

Toon said temperatures might dip because the cloud would filter or block the sunlight. On the other hand, he said temperatures might be raised because the cloud could prevent release of the Earth's heat.

It is "beyond the realm of science to predict what, if anything, the cloud will do," Toon said.

But he added that after the 1816 eruption of the Tambora volcano in Indonesia, "there was significant localized cooling in New England and Western Europe."

The cooling caused frost every few days throughout the summer of 1816, causing famine and food riots in Europe, he said.

The discovery of the cloud illustrates what scientists believe is the susceptibility of the weather to changes in sunlight.

On Tuesday, physicist Richard C. Willson of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif., said satellite measurements found the sun's energy output was down one-tenth of 1 percent from February 1980 to August 1981. He said the small change has "great potential significance" and is likely to have contributed to the winter's bitter weather.

Breakfast Honors County Officials

The Mental Health Association in Pitt County held a legislative breakfast here Monday honoring Pitt County legislators, county commissioners and candidates for the county board.

Special guests were Sen. Vernon White, Rep. Ed Warren, Rep. Sam Bundy, County Commissioners Kelly Barnhill and Bob Martin, Calvin Kirvin representing Sen. John East and County Commission candidates Dr. Elliott Dixon, Charles McLawhorn and Ronald Garris. Several spoke concerning their commitment to mental health and mental retardation services.

Charles Ross, president of the Mental Health Association, welcomed the group. Dr. Stephen Creech, area director of the Pitt County Mental Health Center, discussed the services available in the county. Dr. Bill Martin presented the needs of the mentally retarded in the county and told how block grants could possibly affect services. Dr. Richard Williams and the Rev. Dan Earnhardt presented mental health needs and told how the block grants may affect present services.

Don Watson, chairperson of the association's legislative committee, reported the support needed in the county.

Sandra Hall, president of the Association for Retarded Citizens, closed the meeting by challenging those attending to speak out for "those who are unable to speak for themselves."

Form Coalition

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Twelve Filipino opposition parties today formed what they called a "grand coalition" dedicated to the destruction of President Ferdinand Marcos' authoritarian regime.

Salvador Laurel, 52, a former law professor and son of the late President Jose Laurel Sr., was elected acting president of the group and said its goal is "terminating dictatorship".

Brezhnev Reappears In Public

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev reappeared today at a Kremlin ceremony marking the 112th anniversary of the birth of Vladimir I. Lenin, ending a 27-day absence from public view that prompted rumors about his health.

The 75-year-old Brezhnev, who was reported by unofficial Soviet sources to have been hospitalized during his disappearance, looked paler and slimmer than at his last public appearance in late March.

But he walked to his seat and attentively followed a 55-minute speech delivered by KGB security agency chief Yuri Andropov in the Kremlin Palace of Congresses before an audience of 5,000.

Andropov accused Washington of "telling lies" about the "Soviet threat, international terrorism, all kinds of fabrications about Poland and Southeast Asia" in a drive to "push the world to war."

He also accused Washington of stalling in U.S.-Soviet talks in Geneva on reducing medium-range nuclear weapons in Europe in order to permit deployment of new American missiles on the continent.

"Leonid Brezhnev has compared the international situation to a crossroads, where the choice must be made between the arms race or reducing tensions. We have made our choice ... We passed this crossroad in the early 1970s. The experience of the 1970s showed that cold war and the arms race have no future and no one will gain anything from a hot war."

Andropov also reiterated Brezhnev's offer to meet President Reagan at a summit this fall in a neutral European country.

Andropov delivered the speech from a rostrum on the huge stage. Brezhnev followed the speech with a hearing aid in his right ear.

Last year's speech was given by Brezhnev's aide, Konstantin Chernenko, 70, who assumed a more prominent position in the Soviet hierarchy following the death in January of the Kremlin's top ideologist, Mikhail Suslov.

Brezhnev, wearing a dark suit with medals on his chest, remained standing for the playing of the Soviet national anthem and then took his seat on the stage with other Soviet officials.

A live television broadcast showed Brezhnev only as he approached his seat. At past official occasions, the camera usually showed him walking from the stage wings to his seat.

Brezhnev's face looked considerably slimmer than when he was last seen in public. He showed little emotion but applauded with the audience during the speech.

Brezhnev, seated almost directly behind Andropov, was flanked by Chernenko and another member of the ruling party Politburo, Viktor Grishin.

Also seated nearby were Defense Minister Dmitri Ustinov and Premier Nikolai Tikhonov.

Unofficial Soviet sources said Brezhnev was hospitalized for a period following his return to Moscow March 25 for treatment of exhaustion or possible stroke.

The Soviet government sought to quell speculation about his health by announcing April 5 that Brezhnev was taking his "regular rest."

Brezhnev offered in an interview with the Communist Party newspaper Pravda Saturday to meet President Reagan in the fall in a neutral European country, rather than in New York in June at a special U.N. session on arms control.

Western analysts said the unexpected proposal may have been designed to stifle rumors that Brezhnev's faction was no longer in charge at the Kremlin.

Vote To Cancel Used Car Rules

By JEFFREY MILLS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A House subcommittee has voted to veto a proposed federal requirement that would require used car dealers to tell customers about problems in vehicles up for sale.

By a 6-4 vote, a House Commerce subcommittee Wednesday rejected the Federal Trade Commission regulation. The full committee will now consider the veto resolution.

Rep. Gary A. Lee, R-N.Y., sponsor of the resolution, predicted it will be approved by the full House, where it has 300 co-sponsors. The resolution also has widespread support in the Senate, though it hasn't been considered there yet.

If approved by Congress, the resolution would be the first veto under a new law allowing Congress to overrule FTC regulations before they go into effect.

The FTC's used car rule would require dealers to tell on window stickers about any warranty they offer and about any major mechanical defects they are aware of.

The commission approved it after years of investigating automobile dealerships. An FTC probe found that dealers frequently make oral promises about the condition of cars that buyers soon find to be defective.

The veto move seemed certain to succeed last year until Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., managed to block it by objecting to a routine procedure as Congress rushed to adjourn.

Lee said the FTC should have revamped the proposed regulation before this session. However, the agency said it would not be legal to revise a rule once the commission had taken its final vote.

James J. Florio, D-Conn., the commerce subcommittee's chairman, defended the used car regulation, saying the rule requires "only a few modest disclosures."

"The choice," he said, "is whether consumers get minimal disclosures or not."

But Rep. Edward R. Madigan, R-Ill., said the FTC rule would have the effect of costing dealers to conduct a costly inspection of a car before selling it.

Superior Court Report

The following cases were disposed of during the March 29 term of Pitt County Superior Court.

Austaniel Brown, Tarboro, careless and reckless driving, 6 months jail suspended on payment of $125 and costs.

Roy Rodgers Bradley, Route 6, Greenville, careless and reckless driving, 6 months jail suspended on payment of $75 and costs.

Dwight Hines, 1909 Norcott Circle, common law robbery, 7 years jail.

James Earl Smith, Route 1, Macesfield, breaking, entering and larceny, 12 months jail suspended on payment of costs, restitution, 4 years probation.

Williams' Station, Macesfield, breaking and entering, 3 years jail.

Anthony Alexander Carmon, Winterville, breaking, entering and larceny, 12 months jail suspended on payment of $100 and costs, 1 year probation.

Thurman W. Williams, no address, possession of cocaine, 2 years jail suspended on payment of $1,250 and costs, 4 years probation.

William Colt, no address, larceny, 2 years jail.

David Earl Taft, 1304 Greene St., possession of burglary tools, dismissal by prosecutor; breaking and entering, 2 years jail, 30 days active, remainder suspended on payment of costs, restitution, 5 years probation.

Judge 'Suspends' Youth's Sentence

BEAUFORT, N.C. (AP) — A former Beaufort Middle School student who admitted attempting to take over the school at gunpoint has received a suspended commitment to a state juvenile detention center, authorities said.

John Michael Ricks, 14, was charged with two counts of assault by pointing a gun, possession of a weapon on school property, kidnapping and conspiracy to commit kidnapping.

As part of a plea bargain agreement approved by District Judge E. Burt Aycock Jr. of Greenville, Ricks admitted to three of the charges, although authorities did not say which ones.

A hearing for another eighth-grader charged in the case, Gregory Pigott, was delayed for 90 days.

The two youths were expelled from school as a result of the incident.

Police said the two were arrested after they were subdued by a substitute teacher, David Lee, while attempting to take over the school March 5 at gunpoint.

Beaufort police said they recovered one gun from the youths, another from a locker, and two incendiary devices, a cache of food and military-type clothing.

Three school officials described the incident as a brief but serious experience. "You're taught," said Lee. "You're stung" for 24 years, but you don't expect to see anything like this."

Aycock ruled that Ricks had been delinquent and ordered him committed to the North Carolina Division of Youth Services until his 18th birthday.

However, the judge suspended the commitment for 12 months, on conditions that the youth participate in a plan for psychological treatment, remain off school property, violate no laws, possess no firearms or military equipment and obey his parents.

Judge Has High Praise For Pre-Release Program

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

"I don't believe there is a community else in the country where people put themselves actively into community programs the way people do here in Greenville," former Judge Heman Clark told graduates of the eastern Pre-Release and Aftercare Center Tuesday night.

Clark, now state secretary for crime control and public safety, was guest speaker for the graduation ceremony of more than two dozen prison inmates hosted at Hooker Memorial Christian Church.

PRAC, with headquarters in Greenville, serves a 26-county area of eastern North Carolina. PRAC is a continuing program to prepare inmates from correctional centers in the area to return to the mainstream of society. Those in the program are housed at the correctional center in Williamston and are transported daily to Greenville for a period of several weeks for training.

Clark told the graduates "not everybody in society has good breaks. I know many of you are going back to adverse situations. You're going to have to work hard to stay out of trouble. It takes a special person to pick himself up, plus a little bit of 'Amazing Grace'."

"It is our fervent hope that you are going to be faithful to the trust that people have put in you. I congratulate you and I challenge you to make a success of the future."

Clark spoke about the determination of former Gov. Jim Hunt and other state officials to control crime in North Carolina.

"We are determined that crime not continue to be rampant in this state. People cannot live in horror and fear. That is unacceptable. We cannot live with the crime rate we are having now. We have made some progress and we are going to make more," Clark said.

The PRAC program in Greenville, Clark said, "is one to inspire people in other places to follow your step. It's one that works because people work to make it work."

Clark added that he is using the concept of the Greenville program for use in other areas of the state: "My job is to refine the state's crime control programs, and I'm taking any program that works from one part of the state to another. The credit for the success of PRAC, however, belongs to your community."

Anthony Revis, speaker for the graduating inmates, said "PRAC is one of the greatest things that ever happened in the Department of Corrections. It corrects instead of destroys. This is one time when we get to know something about ourselves, and to respect ourselves. When we learn this, we learn to respect others, the feelings of others, and that's the most important thing that we've got to do."

Two graduates, Floyd Hamilton and Roger Blount, teamed up to provide closing entertainment. The two, accompanied by pianist Debra Lee, sang "The Battle Hymn of the Republic."

Dr. Charles Coble, chairman of the PRAC Advisory Board, and Ted Gartman, chairman elect, presided over the meeting.

State Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Deep Run, introduced Clark, Clark, Hardison, Gartman and center Director Pat Higgins presented a number of awards to area volunteers. Matt Brewington, PRAC training coordinator and Paula Haigler, assistant training coordinator, presented certificates to the graduates.

Among guests present were Judges Giles Clark and David Reid.

New Explorer Post Will Be Organized

The department of health, physical education, recreation and safety at East Carolina University, in joint sponsorship with the East Carolina Council of the Boy Scouts, will begin a sports and recreation Explorer post this spring.

The organizational meeting for the new post will be held May 13 at 7:30 p.m. in Minges Coliseum.

The committee named to work with the post will be composed of Bill Cain, John Welborn, Ken Smith, Bob Wendling, Imogene Turner and Gay Blocker (chairman), all from ECU, and Robert Moseley from the East Carolina Council.

Ms. Blocker said the post will have as its objectives: to improve physical fitness; to explore various related careers; to encourage and involve youth in physical recreational activities; and to encourage consideration as coaches, officials, teachers, trainers, recreation planners and leaders for career or volunteer participation.

Moseley, area scout executive, said all Pitt County youth in grades 9-11 may seek membership in the post. He said that anyone seeking additional information about the program should call Ms. Blocker at the physical education department, Minges Coliseum, 757-6441.

Ask Plan On Cost Curbs

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina Utilities Commission has ordered nine utilities to explain what they are doing to keep costs down.

Saying it was concerned that rising utility costs and a deepening economic recession may be placing an extreme burden on citizens, the commission scheduled a conference May 12 to discuss the companies' actions.

Commission Chairman Robert Koger said the conference's purpose is "to put the companies on notice that they're going to have to intensify their efforts to cut costs ... and that people are hurting out there."

"...Just the fact that we're bringing them in will put them on warning (that) greater cost containment is needed... The economy is not getting any better."

The commission ordered the utilities to prepare reports spelling out plans, programs and other steps taken or proposed to minimize and streamline costs.

The utilities involved are Southern Bell, Carolina Power & Light Co., Public Service Co. of North Carolina; Duke Power Co., Virginia Power & Electric Co., Central Telephone, Carolina Telephone, North Carolina Natural Gas Corp., and Piedmont Natural Gas Co. Inc.

Nine Inducted By Honor Society

ECU News Bureau
Nine students in the East Carolina University Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures have been inducted into the ECU chapter of Phi Sigma Iota, national honor society in foreign languages.

Also initiated was Dr. Agnes Freudenberg Hostetler of the ECU language faculty.

Phi Sigma Iota's membership includes advanced undergraduate and graduate students of foreign languages and literatures, as well as faculties at campuses which have chapters. The 10 new members were formally taken into the ECU chapter at the chapter's recent annual spring banquet.

The inductees included Ann Marie Trotta, 200 Granville Drive, Greenville.

Police Checking Local Break-In

Greenville police were investigating a break-in at the Fast Fare at 425 Hooker Road that occurred about 3:45 a.m. today.

Chief Glenn Cannon said the robber broke a front window to gain entrance to the building and took 30 cartons of cigarettes, valued at $135, from the store.

VISITOR — Arietta Riddle of Durham, president of the state American Legion Auxiliary Department, will attend a district meeting in Greenville May 1 at Legion Post, No. 39 on St. Andrews Street. The meeting will be hosted by Pasico Norfoleet American Legion Auxiliary Unit No. 160.

Says Robbery At Knife-Point

Greenville Police Chief Glenn Cannon said officers were looking for two men in connection with an armed robbery on Colonial Avenue about 3 a.m. today.

The chief said Willie Howard Hawkins of 509B Sheppard St. told investigators he was walking along Colonial Avenue when a knife was placed at his back and he was ordered to drop his wallet on the ground, then lay down until both subjects fled.

Hawkins told police the wallet contained $157 in cash.

Ingrid Bergman's Portrayal Is Bound To Be Another Landmark

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Ingrid Bergman, a Swede, plays Israeli leader Golda Meir, and her superb characterization is bound to be another landmark in the Bergman legend.

Forty years ago, Miss Bergman tearfully flew away from Humphrey Bogart in "Casablanca." Next week, on "A Woman Called Golda," the 66-year-old actress soars above some plodding material and dramatically becomes the physical and spiritual embodiment of the late Israeli prime minister.

In the television age, it's harder to impersonate recent historical figures, particularly one with the distinctive public persona of Mrs. Meir. But Miss Bergman, a three-time Oscar winner, has thoroughly re-created the gait, speech and personal effects, including, of course, the cigarettes and hair bun.

"A Woman Called Golda," a four-hour movie over two nights next week, will be on Operation Prime Time, a 120-station syndicate with a history of steamy novels. Previous TV productions include "The Bastard," "The Immigrants," and books by Harold Robbins, Irwin Shaw and John D. MacDonald.

Proposed originally as a two-hour film, it was rejected by the commercial networks. In four hours, the production, filmed entirely in Israel, takes on epic proportions and a greater historical reach, chronicling the growth of Israel through Mrs. Meir's personal life and political dedication to Zionism.

The sacrifice is too much historical detail, but it's a fair exchange for the expansive glimpses of Mrs. Meir's diplomatic and political arm-twisting.

In 1948, she was sent on a secret mission to keep Transjordan from joining an Arab alliance against Israel. In the dramatized account, she's not cowed by King Abdullah's demands. He criticizes her stubbornness, blaming her for an inevitable war.

Twenty-five years later, as prime minister, she's negotiating for planes with an American senator (Ned Beatty). Serving tea, honey cake and her unique "kitchen diplomacy," Mrs. Meir wins him over with a mixture of soothing persuasion and toughness.

"A Woman Called Golda" presents both sides of the controversy over Israel's limited preparation for the Yom Kippur War that inflicted heavy casualties. The advice of the best military minds is not to mobilize.

Golda, who left Russia with her family during the pogroms in the early 1900s, grew up in Milwaukee, where she became an elementary school teacher. Her early years are remembered in flashbacks, sparked by questions from students during Mrs. Meir's return visit to the Fourth Street School.

We see how her Russian experience imprinted her with a fierce Zionism. America could only be an adopted land, and, after marrying a sign painter named Morris Meyerson, they emigrated to a kibbutz in Palestine.

Judy Davis ("My Brilliant

Career") plays the young, energetic Golda, while Leonard Nimoy (Officer Spock of "Star Trek") is the overshadowed, gentle Morris. Through the wonders of makeup, Nimoy bridges both Goldas, spanning some 40 years.

The Meyersons' marriage is not meant to be. He's not cut out for frontier living, and she's too politically dedicated to play housewife. Golda is 30 when they separate. Although they never divorce, Golda later takes on the Hebrew name, Meir.

Except to hint at relationships with men, in a composite character played by Australian actor Jack Thompson from "Breaker Morant," Mrs. Meir's personal life is minimized following her separation from Morris. She is an interested parent to her two children, but, basically, an absentee mother.

Miss Bergman, at first reluctant to come out of retirement to take this role, said her own conflict between career and family provided insights for playing Golda.

It may be the crowning achievement of her career. "A Woman Called Golda" is a tribute to Golda Meir and a triumph for Ingrid Bergman.

Air Criticism Of Cronkite

By JAMES SIMON
Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP) — Although a prominent CBS stockholder complained that Walter Cronkite had been too soft on communism, the retired anchorman has been re-elected to the network's board of directors.

Reed Irvine, chairman of Accuracy In Media, repeatedly criticized Cronkite Wednesday at the annual meeting of CBS stockholders. He received a cool reception from most of the other shareholders.

"Mr. Cronkite has demonstrated over the years a singular obtuseness on the subject of the security of the United States and a naive trust in the Soviet Union," said Irvine, head of the conservative watchdog group based in Washington.

Cronkite, who did not attend the meeting, covered the Soviet Union in 1946-48, Irvine noted. Irvine wondered aloud whether Cronkite "has clearly enunciated his repulsion with the communist system."

"One of the wonderful things about Mr. Walter Cronkite is that I don't have to take a moment to defend his credibility or describe the trust in which he is held," CBS President Thomas H. Wyman responded.

Wyman later announced that a plurality of the stock shares had been cast in favor of Cronkite remaining on the board. An exact breakdown on the vote was not available.

The complaints by Irvine and several other AIM members about Cronkite and CBS' news coverage dominated the meeting.

Irvine also tried to convince the stockholders that CBS needed a "viewer's advocate" to investigate complaints about the network's news coverage.

The proposal for a viewers' advocate was defeated. One top CBS official who asked not to be identified said the proposal got "considerably fewer" votes than it received in 1981, when 9.3 percent of the CBS shares were cast in favor of it.

Wyman later told the CBS stockholders that the company's decline in first quarter net income and earnings per share were attributable in part to the sluggish national economy.

CBS will continue to expand its non-broadcasting subsidiaries. Wyman said, noting the company's recent acquisition of Cuisine magazine and the right to market home video versions of Bally's electronic amusement games.

ARRESTED — Juanita Caridad Castro, sister and today of Cuban President Fidel Castro, was arrested Wednesday in Miami on charges of selling tranquilizer pills. Police said that she sold Tranxene capsules to a police officer on three occasions. (AP Laserphoto)

Springtime in Moscow

Once again it's Lenin's birthday, and that means it's time for spring cleaning — at least in Moscow. Today is called subbotnik, and everybody in Russia takes a holiday from normal work to donate free labor in a nationwide spring cleanup. Factory workers, students, bureaucrats and shop clerks all join together to remove all traces of the long winter's ravages. Streets and alleys are cleared of litter, dead branches are removed from parks, and benches and fences are given a fresh coat of paint. The streets are filled with vendor's stands, where people can celebrate the return of pleasant weather by quaffing kvass — a traditional beer from fermented bread — or a less traditional glass of Pepsi-cola.

DO YOU KNOW — What is the name of the famous park in Moscow?

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — Maria Montessori developed new teaching methods for young children.

Patients' Picnic Held Yesterday PEANUTS

The Mental Health Association's annual picnic for Pitt County patients at Cherry Hospital was attended by approximately 125 persons Wednesday at the Pitt County Wildlife Club. The partial hospitalization clients of the Pitt County Mental Health Center also were guests.

Volunteer Alton Warren prepared a barbecue lunch. Pitt Community College students provided dessert and acted as hosts. Music therapy students from East Carolina University involved the guests in rhythm songs and game.

The planning committee for the picnic consisted of Wayne Adkinson, chairman, Nora Lee Craft and Dot Dail. Special guests included County Commissioners Burney Tucker, Kelly Barnhill, Alton Gardner and Bob Martin.

Arrested In Alleged Rape

Barbara Ann (Baker) Grimes, 26, of 602 Church St. was arrested by Greenville police Wednesday on first degree sex offense charges in connection with the alleged rape of a 19-year-old woman.

Chief Glenn Cannon, who said the incident allegedly occurred in a Church Street dwelling about 7 p.m. Tuesday, said officers were continuing to search for a man involved in the assault.

Cannon, who noted that the incident was reported early Wednesday afternoon, said Ms. Grimes and the man allegedly followed the victim into a bedroom of the home. Cannon said Ms. Grimes then allegedly held the young woman on the bed while the man assaulted her. Ms. Grimes was jailed under $2,000 bond.

We put our foot down about apartments being within walking distance.

Wedgewood Arms apartments are within walking distance of three shopping centers, a nursery school, a junior high school, doctors' and dentists' offices and an athletic center.

As if that wasn't enough, three major traffic arteries, 264 Bypass, Arlington Blvd., and Charles St. are close enough to be seen and not heard.

Fact is, no apartments in town can legitimately claim to be more convenient to more things than Wedgewood Arms.

And, that's not all. Because Wedgewood Arms is not only convenient, it's different in other ways, too.

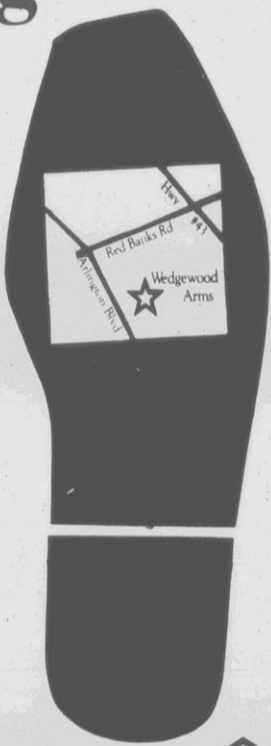

Take the floorplans: they're different from anything you've ever seen. And when you add in high energy efficiency, tennis courts, swimming pool, and the neighborhood "feeling" that these apartments will give you — well, you'll just have to see for yourself.

Pitt Firemen Had 89 Alarms

During March the rural fire departments of Pitt County answered 89 alarms with 82 fires, County Fire Marshal Bobby Joyner said.

There were eight house fires, two in house trailers, six in buildings, six in motor vehicles, 33 grasslands and woods fires, three false alarms, 24 "others" and seven mutual aids.

There were $237,500 involved in fires; $877,100 exposed; $18,200 lost; and $1.1 million saved by the rural fire departments, Joyner said. The Red Oak Fire Department had the most fires, he added — 12.

back to the dummy to enjoy the fruits of his labor. He tried to induce a defensive error by running trumps, but there was really no way the defenders could go wrong.

Without realizing it, the declarer has squandered an entry to dummy at trick one! Observe what would happen if declarer allowed the jack of clubs to win the first trick.

Let's suppose that the defenders are clever enough to shift to a spade at trick two. Declarer wins the ace of spades, draws two rounds of trumps as a precautionary measure, then leads a club to the king.

You don't need to be a mathematician to play a hand well. Just knowing that six missing cards are far more likely to break 4-2 than 3-3 can be enough to steer you to the winning line.

North-South bid well to their best contract. Once North raised diamonds, South was not sure of the potential of the hand.

West made his natural, though ill-considered, lead of the top of his club sequence. Declarer gave the hand little thought.

Briton Pledges Effort For Peaceful Solution

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - British Foreign Secretary Francis Pym, pledging his government's willingness to settle peacefully the Falkland Islands dispute with Argentina but noting that "real difficulties" remain, arrived here today to discuss new British proposals with the Reagan administration. "We will do everything we can to try to find a peaceful settlement to the dispute," Pym told reporters shortly after landing at Dulles International Airport outside Washington. But he also said there are "real difficulties and real obstacles" to reaching a settlement that avoids war with Argentina, which invaded the disputed islands April 2.

Pym made clear his government's view that the dispute stems from "aggression by Argentina and the unlawful invasion of the Falkland Islands." He went directly to the State Department for a working lunch with Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., whom Pym praised for his "heroic efforts" at trying to find a peaceful solution.

After lunch, Pym was heading to Capitol Hill for a meeting with members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

A British embassy source, who requested anonymity, said the committee was "another important source of opinion and decision-making in the American system" and the British felt it important to discuss their proposals with the panel.

Pym is expected to meet with President Reagan at the White House on Friday before returning to London later in the day.

The visit is Pym's first to the United States as foreign secretary. His predecessor, Lord Carrington, resigned soon after the invasion.

Although Pym carried with him new British ideas for resolving the Falklands dispute, both British diplomatic sources and U.S. officials privately expressed pessimism that a diplomatic solution can be quickly negotiated.

Classes At Jaycee Park

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department and Diane Lamb will offer a combined six-week class of modern jazz, tap, ballet, exercise and acrobatics starting April 27 Jaycee Park.

Classes include instruction for beginners, intermediates and advanced students ages 3 and up. Each class will meet on Tuesday for one hour following this basic schedule: ages 3 and 4 meet at 5 p.m.; ages 5-9 meet at 6:05 p.m.; and ages 10 and up meet at 7:10 p.m.

A session for those age 13 and up having a minimum of two years dance experience will also be held if there is sufficient interest. Class will primarily involve choreographing and displaying routines.

Class fees are $10 for six weeks. Students are asked to wear leotards and tights and provide tap shoes or hard-soled shoes if possible.

Classes will be taught by

Realtor Hopeful In Eyeing Future

The president of the N.C. Association of Realtors said here today that he feels the home buying dilemma in the state has "bottomed out" and he has a positive outlook on what he sees "down the road."

A.C. Robbins, a Chapel Hill Realtor, said there is a general feeling throughout the industry that the economy is turning around and he suggested that in time there may even be a housing shortage when home buying activity rebounds.

Robbins, in Greenville for an appearance this morning at the NCAR's "Traveling College," pointed to increases in residential resales in March and said higher levels are expected in April. He said that "with interest rates showing a downward trend, I see a greater demand... in buying."

The spokesman said he is "seeing some positive signs coming out of Washington" and he added, "based on what I'm hearing in traveling around, everyone agrees - Congress, the president, the Federal Reserve - that something has to be done." He said they realize that "when you help housing, it will help the overall economy."

Robbins said there has been a great deal of uncertainty about new financing programs and controversy has accompanied the concept of variable mortgages, where monthly home buying payments escalate after a few years as the income of the buyer increases. He said the program has allowed some people, particularly young couples, to buy homes where they would not have qualified initially due to lower incomes. Their potential for greater income down the road helps them meet the variable mortgage requirements, he said.

Robbins said he hopes to see Federal Housing Administration and Veterans Administration loan rates get down to the 14.5 percent range. He also predicted gradual declines in conventional loan rates from the present 17 to 18 percent.

He said the $5 billion, five-year housing program approved Wednesday by the Senate Banking Committee would have a positive impact and help a large segment of the buying population although he said it would aid certain areas of the state more than others. The program, aimed at stimulating purchases of newly constructed homes, would be targeted for people earning $30,000 or less and for mortgages of $67,000 or less.

The government would pay 1.15 percent of the mortgage the first year and 0.75 percent each additional year to five years, with a maximum subsidy of $12,000.

Gardner Case...

(Continued from Page 1) purchased the fans from him, including Magistrate Mitchell Oakley, who bought 12 fans; Magistrate Russell Wooten, who purchased 11 of the fans; Ayden Police Chief Tommy Burney, who testified he bought "two for my home" and arranged for the town of Ayden to buy four; several other Ayden police department employees and others.

Gardner, who said he was never informed of Clark's policies about the sale of merchandise to employees, testified that when he picked up the air conditioners and a quantity of damaged merchandise which Pruett had given him.

After purchasing the first group of fans, Gardner said a second shipment of fans - which sold for $49.99 each - was received and Pruett offered to sell them for $10 each.

It was when he went to the store on Dec. 6 to pick up the 30 fans which he had agreed to purchase, that the Cook security men moved in, Gardner said.

Gardner then described how he cooperated with investigators, and returned the defective property to store employees. He added that he returned to Clark's on Dec. 7 to see the loss prevention employees and "clear my name," emphasizing he had no part in the embezzlement and didn't want to be involved in it.

Pruett had been arrested on embezzlement charges on the Sunday he and Gardner were found at the store. However, Gardner said he was not arrested until after he visited the State Bureau of Investigation office here for an interview on Monday.

On cross-examination by prosecutor William Griffin, Gardner said, "I trusted Mr. Pruett." He said Greenville police officers who were working as store security officers were allowed to purchase television games and other merchandise at discounted prices, also.

Gardner emphasized that he was never suspicious of Pruett.

More than 20 character witnesses - some who purchased fans from Gardner and said they were told where the fans were coming from - testified to Gardner's "excellent" character and reputation in the community before the defense concluded its case this morning.

Defense lawyers began their closing arguments to the jury shortly after 11 a.m. today. They were to be followed by Griffin.

The jury was expected to begin deliberations this afternoon after hearing Judge Giles R. Clark explain the law to them.

Solar Fraction

Greenville's solar fraction calculated by the department of physics of East Carolina University was 15 Wednesday, which means that a solar water heater could have provided 15 percent of your hot water.

Set Workshop For Parents

The Association for Retarded Citizens-Pitt County is sponsoring a workshop for parents Saturday at 9:30 a.m. in the Pitt County Memorial Hospital Auditorium.

Joyce Starling and Martha Arnold from the ARC state advocacy office will address the rights of the child as affected through Public Law 94-142.

At 1:30 p.m. the session will feature Ann Harrison, director of exceptional children's programs in the Greenville schools, and Jean Averette, director of exceptional children's programs of the Pitt County schools. The two will talk about how teachers and parents can work together effectively.

MEETING

The class of 1967 of G. R. Whitfield School will meet at the home of Jill Ebron, 116 Oakgrove Ave., Greenville Friday at 8 p.m. to make plans for a reunion. Anyone wishing more information may call Leroy or Ella Telfair, 752-1308.

Pitt Center...

(Continued from Page 1) for mentally retarded persons was noted as being well-operated and the adult development activity program was considered a good program of its type. The Eastern Carolina Vocational Center's adult developmental activity program was cited for having good client programming and good development of subcontracts.

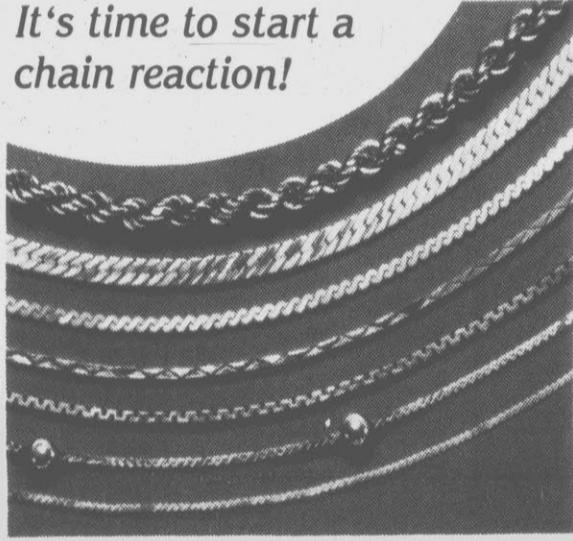

An extensive report of the survey may be seen by any interested person, Creech said. Copies are available at the Pitt County Mental Health Center, 752-7151.

Ms. Lamb, founder of Dancers Unlimited of Winston-Salem. Pre-registration is a must and can be made by calling either the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department at 752-4137, ext. 200, or Ms. Lamb at 756-7849.
