Friday To Make Final Decision

ECU List Pared To Three

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

East Carolina University's Board of Trustees, in an hour-long executive session Saturday afternoon, approved the recommendation of its Chancellor Search Committee to submit the names of three men for consideration as chancellor of the school.

Neither ECU board chairman Ashley Futrell, who also headed the 15-member search committee, nor other trustees would comment on the board's action. Futrell said only that he was scheduled to call University of North Carolina President William Friday at 8 p.m. Saturday with the results of the selection process and said any announcement would be up to him.

However, usually reliable sources said the search committee recommended the names of acting ECU Chancellor John Howell, University of West Florida President James Robinson and Elon College President Fred Young, as the names to be submitted to Friday.

At Friday's discretion, the choice for chancellor will be announced when the UNC Board of Governors meets on May 14, Futrell said before the meetings.

The search for a new chancellor began last year after former Chancellor Thomas Brewer resigned Sept. 9. His resignation ended a three-year administration marked by turbulence among faculty, athletic leaders and school supporters, and controversies which stemmed from his apparent interest in other jobs.

The list of potential candidates for the post originally contained 148 names. Following some off-campus interviews the list was again pared and four finalists were selected earlier this year.

The four finalists — Howell, Robinson, Young, and Charles Q. Brown, chairman of the ECU Geology Department and acting dean of the ECU School of Technology — were interviewed on campus, beginning in late March.

Within the past two weeks, search committee subcommittees visited the Elon and West Florida campuses for interviews with colleagues of the two off-campus finalists. The results of those visits were reported Saturday before the final recommendations were made.

Earlier, it had been thought that only two names would be submitted to the UNC president for consideration. However, officials said the board could submit two, three or even all four names to Friday.

One board member confirmed that at one point during the trustees meeting there was some discussion on

Trustees Approve Energy-Saving Projects, Raise Retirement Age

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The East Carolina University Board of Trustees voted Saturday to spend $672,000 on energy-saving capital improvements to three dormatories and raised the compulsory retirement age for all university employees — including the chancellor — from 65 to 70.

The energy-saving improvements include new windows, new shower heads and other items for Jones, Aycock and Garrett residence halls. Funds for the project will come from a $242,000 federal energy loan and other sources.

The federal loan, at 3 percent interest, is to be repaid over a five-year period through energy savings.

In connection with other capital projects, the board's buildings and grounds committee reported that a site adjacent to the Brody Medical Science Building has been selected for the medical school's radiation theropy facility, while the proposed new classroom building will be located on the site of the school's old power plant and laundry — bordered on the west by the Flanagan Building, on the north by Graham and on the east by Rawl.

It was also reported that design of the radiation theropy building is on schedule and should be ready for bid by December or early January.

Following the recommendations of the executive committee, trustees voted to extend the compulsory retirement age of university employees from 65 to 70. The University of North Carolina Board of Governors had earlier established the retirement age at 65. However, the board later extended the age limit five years, allowing the various UNC member campuses to raise the limit to 70.

Trustees also approved 3,044 degree-candidates scheduled to graduate May 8. The candidates include 2,176 for baccalaureate degrees and 868 — including 36 MDs — for graduate degrees.

In other business, the board presented a resolution of appreciation to Lester Nail for his "outstanding service" as president of the school's Student Government Association, the ECU Board of Trustees and the Chancellor Search Committee.

Nail, as SGA president this academic year, has served on the Board of Trustees and the Chancellor Search Committee. He will graduate May 8, and plans to attend law school.

Nail told the board "serving with you has been one of the greatest learning experiences that I've had," and said he has no fears for the future of East Carolina. "You love her as much as I do and you'll take care of her."

Local Candidates Ready For Primary To Be Set

By MELVIN LANG
Reflector Staff Writer

A suspended date for North Carolina's local primaries has given Pitt County candidates more time — time that is not really welcomed — to carry out their campaigns.

Originally set for May 8, the primary was put off after the Justice Department rejected legislative efforts to redistrict congressional and General Assembly districts. A congressional realignment has now been approved, but the legislative lineup of districts is still up in the air with the General Assembly scheduled to begin the latest effort to redistrict itself on Tuesday.

Robert L. Shoffner Jr., a public defender seeking election as district attorney, doesn't like anything about the delay.

"It's somewhat frustrating to run in a primary when you don't even know the date. It's hard to gear up for that type of campaign, not knowing whether it's going to be in four weeks or three months," Shoffner said.

Thomas D. Haigwood, the chief assistant district attorney and a candidate for the DA's job, noted that this was his first attempt at public office and "I haven't had a chance to make any (campaign) plans" because of the repeated primary delays.

"I just wish they would go ahead and set it," Haigwood said.

Similar comments were voiced by incumbent Sheriff Ralph Tyson and Farmville Police Chief Ron Cooper, who is opposing Tyson.

But Cooper said he doesn't object to the extra campaign time.

"It has given me a chance to get to know more people, and that helps for name recognition," Cooper said. "I probably welcome this extra time. It's a lull time and I'm trying to take advantage of it."

Cooper said the delay has not really affected his campaign plans although, he noted, "I think what I've already done will have to be done over again."

The delay has had some mental repercussions, Cooper said.

"I went into this saying first it would be May 4, then May 18, then in June ... and I'm still here working in the office," he observed.

Tyson, a veteran campaigner, is seeking his fifth full term as sheriff and says this campaign has been a strange one.

"We started up and kind of had it moving out," he said. "Overall we would rather go ahead and have it early. You never know how to plan this way, and it has changed our campaign plans."

Shoffner and Tyson each expressed some concern over the size of the vote if the primary eventually is scheduled late into the summer.

"If it drags into the summer, a lot of people are going to be worried," Shoffner said. "A vote in the summer ... you'd wonder if the vote were really indicative of the county's feelings. A lot of people go to the river, to the beach or other places during the summer."

"They're not coming back in to vote," said Tyson, who also expressed the belief that a special primary for local officials would not be beneficial.

"I think that would mean a smaller vote," Tyson said. "But the sooner we can have the primary, the better I will feel about it, even if we do have a smaller vote."

Shoffner added, "You almost wonder if you should just stop and wait, but you can't do that. But there's one thing about it — everybody's in the same boat."

The Legislature has several alternatives before it, including one endorsed last week by Pitt County's legislative delegation: appeal the redistricting rejection and let a federal court resolve the impasse.

Two other proposals include one that would have the Legislature revise its redistricting plan and resubmit it to the Justice Department, with all primaries held up until the plan is approved, and a plan calling for a quick primary for congressional candidates and local officials, with legislative primaries to be held later.

Any chance that the Legislature will set two primaries dimmed last week when the plan drew opposition from Sen. Kenneth Royall of Durham, chairman of the Senate Ways and Means Committee. Royall said he objected to the proposal because of the additional cost of several hundred thousand dollars that would be required if two primaries are held.

Warns Argentines To Keep Planes Away

British Step Up Threat To Use Force

By MAUREEN JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Britain has warned Argentina to stay clear of its naval task force approaching the Falkland Islands or risk "appropriate response" from the fleet, the Defense Ministry announced early Sunday.

Argentina replied by asserting it would use its "legitimate right of self-defense."

The Defense Ministry said Britain sent a statement Friday to the Argentine military junta warning that any approach by Argentine warships or military aircraft "which could amount to a threat to interfere with the mission of British forces in the South Atlantic will encounter the appropriate response."

It also said any Argentine ships or aircraft, including submarines, naval auxiliaries and civil aircraft "engaged in surveillance of the British forces," will be regarded as hostile "and are liable to be dealt with accordingly."

A ministry spokesman said the U.N. Security Council had been informed of the statement. He declined further comment.

In Buenos Aires, the Argentine Foreign Ministry reported Ambassador Eduardo Roca presented a note Saturday to the 15-nation Security Council in response to the British warning. It said the Argentine note declared, "The repressive intention of the United Kingdom is thus patently proved ... authorizing the republic of Argentina to make immediate use of the legitimate right of self-defense."

With the British armada reported battling killer seas and hurricane-force winds, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher held an emergency meeting of senior ministers Saturday to discuss a new peace plan for the Argentine-occupied archipelago.

Foreign Secretary Francis Pym reported on his talks with U.S. Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. during the three-hour meeting with Mrs. Thatcher and five senior ministers. Afterward, Mrs. Thatcher said a diplomatic solution was still being sought.

"We are working for one — of course we are," she told reporters before leaving for her country home, Chequers, 30 miles from London.

Pym had conferred with Mrs. Thatcher for two hours immediately after returning from Washington with the new plan. "I think you can say that it is a bit of progress," he said.

Pym gave no details of the plan or whether it brought Britain and Argentina closer on the key questions of sovereignty and British insistence on a withdrawal of the Argentine troops who seized the Falklands from Britain April 2.

But a well-placed British source in Washington said the proposals were not satisfactory.

The foreign secretary was tight-lipped upon leaving Mrs. Thatcher's 10 Downing Street office following his meeting with the other ministers.

A spokesman for Mrs. Thatcher said, "We are still in touch with Mr. Haig as the search for a peaceful settlement continues." The spokesman, in accordance with British practice, declined to be identified.

"Overnight we shall be in touch with the State Department and through the State Department with Mr. Haig," he said.

Asked if the emergency Downing Street meeting had changed gloomy forecasts of the possibility of a peace settlement, the spokesman said it "would not change that feeling."

He said the "nature of the meeting is that decisions are taken on what we need to communicate. People will have gone away now to communicate."

Time Marches On... Again

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An hour flew by in nothing flat early Sunday morning with the annual switch to Daylight Saving Time.

The time change officially occurred at 2 a.m. local time Sunday when, for most of the nation, it automatically became 3 a.m.

But most Americans reset their clocks before they went to bed Saturday night, following the simple reminder: "spring forward, fall back."

The time change will be reversed the last Sunday in October, when clocks will be set back one hour to conform to Standard Time.

A few parts of the country are exempt from the time switch: Arizona, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa and 81 Indiana counties in the Eastern time zone.

The law was passed in 1966 to eliminate confusion existing under previous measures that for years had allowed states and localities to decide for themselves whether to observe Daylight Time.

There could be other changes in in the future. Legislation is pending in Congress to advance the starting date to early March — a move supporters say would save energy and reduce street crime by providing another hour of daylight in the evening.

Sources said Howell was a near-unanimous choice for one of the recommendations at the two and a half hour-long selection committee meeting, which began at 10 a.m. Committee members were reportedly "divided" on the other choice, so a decision was made to submit three names for consideration.

The list of names will be submitted to Friday in alphabetical order.

Howell, 60, came to East Carolina in 1957 and has served as chairman of the department of political science, dean of the college of arts and sciences, dean of the graduate school and provost and vice chancellor for academic affairs. He was appointed acting chancellor by Friday on Jan. 8.

He went to West Florida after three years as president of Macalester College.

He was deputy superintendent of public instruction for the state of Virginia from 1971 until he went to Elon College.

Brown, who came to ECU in 1966 after teaching at Clemson University, has served as director of institutional development (now institutional advancement), and is currently chairman of the geology department and acting dean of the school of technology.

Texas Charter Bus Overturns, Kills Woman

ELGIN, Texas (AP) — A charter bus carrying members of a Houston garden club to a luncheon in Austin overturned near here Saturday, killing one person and injuring the other 20 aboard, authorities said.

The injured were taken to Brackenridge Hospital in Austin, said Larry Todd, spokesman for the Texas Department of Public Safety.

The department withheld the dead woman's identity until relatives could be notified.

Car Hits Girl Lying On Road

A teen-ager was seriously injured Saturday night as she lay in the roadway about 1.5 miles south of Fountain.

According to Trooper Spencer Padgett, Rosa Mary Avent, 15, of Route 2, Farmville, was lying in the highway on U.S. 258 when she was run over by a car driven by Jackie Norris of Farmville.

Padgett said the teen-ager was walking with a friend when she apparently fell and the companion continued walking, not knowing of the mishap until she heard the car strike the girl.

The investigator said no charges were filed.

Wreck Injures Three Persons

A head-on collision near Greenville Friday night resulted in the injury of three persons.

Trooper Spencer Padgett reported a car driven by Rebecca Parks Buck and a vehicle driven by Howard Dean Wooten of Route 2, Chocowinity, collided on the Stantonsburg highway about two miles west of Greenville.

Padgett said the head-on collision injured Wooten, Ms. Buck and a passenger in the Buck vehicle, Evelyn Louise. The trooper said Wooten was charged with driving left of center.

Laupus also reported that the Brody Building is scheduled for completion in mid-June and said the medical school will move into the new facility in July.

Dr. Robert Maier, vice chancellor for academic affairs, told trustees that the school's master of science in nursing degree program has won accreditation by the National League of Nursing, while Dr. Elmer Meyer, vice chancellor for student life, reported on an energy conservation contest held recently for the 15 residence halls.

He told the board that during the nine-week contest, designed to call attention to energy conservation, the use of electricity dropped 12 percent, saving some $9,000.

Winner of the contest, he noted, was Jones Dorm, with a 21 percent reduction.

Falklands ...

Falklands dependency of South Georgia, but Argentine naval sources in Buenos Aires said they considered an imminent clash "improbable."

The British Defense Ministry said a Sea King helicopter from the armada's carrier-flagship HMS Hermes ditched in the sea Friday night. It said one crewman was missing, but refused to confirm whether the helicopter sank.

The task force's two aircraft carriers, nearly 8,000 miles from home, have only about 20 Sea King anti-submarine and troop-carrying helicopters, while the Argentine air force can operate from the mainland, 250 miles from the Falklands.

The British Broadcasting Corp. noted weather reports of 70-knot winds and 30-foot waves in the seas round the Falklands, increasing the hazards of any attack.

The BBC also said Mrs. Thatcher might have decided not to attack ahead of Monday's meeting of the Organization of American States, when Argentina plans to invoke a mutual assistance treaty in cases of "aggression" against member states.

Argentina's foreign minister, Nicanor Costa Mendez, was flying to Washington from Buenos Aires, where he told a BBC interviewer the chance of war was "half and half."

For the third straight day, the British Defense Ministry insisted its armada "has not landed anywhere."

Speculation persisted, however, that Britain will attempt to land marines on lightly occupied South Georgia before any attack on the main islands, 800 miles east, where an estimated 9,000 Argentine troops are dug in.

Chris Moncrieff, chief political correspondent of Britain's Press Association news agency who returned from Washington with Pym, reported the foreign secretary "now believes it is virtually impossible for the crisis to be resolved without a shot being fired."

Moncrieff said Pym, who met three times with Haig, "has told close friends...that he thinks the crunch will come in days rather than weeks."

In Washington, deputy British Labor Party leader Denis Healey met with Haig Saturday at the State Department to pressure the Reagan administration to align itself with Britain in the event of war.

"The Argentines should be in absolutely no doubt whatever where America will stand if a diplomatic settlement is not now reached," Healey told reporters.

Gasohol would have fueled the engine of tHe original Model T Ford. That car was designed to run on gasoline, alcohol or a combination of both.

Glenn Places Blame For Recession On Reagan

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Ohio Sen. John Glenn, telling North Carolina Democrats their party faces a national resurgence, said Saturday that President Reagan must shoulder the blame for the economic recession.

"I think it's high time this administration accepted responsibility for its own policies and stopped trying to blame everyone else for the mess that they themselves created," said Glenn, a possible 1984 presidential candidate.

The celebrated former astronaut and now Democratic senator appeared with Gov. Jim Hunt as the main speaker at the state party's Jefferson-Jackson Day fund-raising banquet.

In remarks prepared for the event, Glenn said Reagan's economic policies were "fatally flawed from the very start," and are to blame for ballooning budget deficits that far surpass deficits of the Democratic Carter administration.

The deficits, he said, are the cause of sustained high interest rates that have crippled farmers, hurt business, contributed to unemployment and made home ownership "an American nightmare."

In a press conference before the speech, Glenn laid the blame on the three-year tax cut package proposed by President Reagan last year and enacted by Congress.

He said it was "wishful thinking" to assume budget cuts alone are enough to significantly reduce the projected deficits of the next several years. Glenn said Congress should reduce the size of the tax cut due to take effect this summer and postpone the tax cut scheduled for next year.

"The deficits we see now are far beyond anything that was mentioned in the last election," he said. "President Reagan, during the campaign, was just caustic in his comments about Jimmy Carter even considering a $41 billion deficit. Now we'd think we were so lucky we wouldn't know what to do if we could just get by with a $50 billion deficit.

"The thing that has done it is the one-fourth revenue cut, tax loss, in a three-year period," he added.

Glenn said the Republican administration's problems in handling the economy are a partial cause of what he said was renewed voter interest in Democrats. But he said he was not yet a candidate for president in 1984 and would assess his prospects for running later this year.

"Whatever happens to me, we have a big Democratic resurgent time coming up," he said.

Glenn planned to spend the night at the Governor's Mansion at Hunt's invitation, just as another presidential hopeful, Walter Mondale, did last month.

Hunt, who says he has not taken sides in the presidential race, described Glenn as "one of America's finest leaders." Glenn, sidestepping an invitation to criticize North Carolina Republican Sen. Jesse Helms, returned the compliment to Hunt, who may challenge Helms for the Senate in two years.

"He (Hunt) has a tremendous record here and a national reputation," Glenn said. "I think we need him in Washington."

The Jefferson-Jackson dinner is an annual event capping a day of activities by North Carolina Democrats. State Party Chairman Russell Walker said nearly 2,000 tickets were sold at $25 apiece, with the money going to the state party organization.

Kidnapper Of Bank Official's Wife, Child Sought

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — The wife of a rural bank manager was found safe but handcuffed to a tree Saturday afternoon with her 1-year-old daughter just out of reach, one day after they were kidnapped at gunpoint, authorities said.

Their discovery by a passing motorist, who heard the woman's screams, came shortly after Douglas Patterson, 35, pleaded at a news conference for the kidnapper to reopen contact with him.

Connie Patterson, 33, and her daughter, Jana, were in satisfactory condition at St. Peter Hospital's emergency room, where they were being kept "mostly for observation," said nursing supervisor Mitzi Vandewege.

The kidnapper remained at large, said Thurston County authorities.

Patterson said his wife and child appeared to be cold and hungry, but otherwise unhurt and in good emotional shape. The baby rubbed off some skin while squirming overnight in a car seat, he said.

Patterson, manager of the South Sound National Bank in Grand Mound, said his wife told him that a young man with a gun forced his way Friday night into their home in Salkum, about 45 miles south of Olympia, and ordered her and two daughters into their car.

They were driven along an old highway, U.S. 99, to a point seven or eight miles south of Olympia. Mrs. Patterson was handcuffed to a tree, her mouth taped shut, while Jana was placed in the car seat beside her.

The abductor, who identified himself as "Dave" in telephone conversations with Patterson, kept the other daughter, 4-year-old Julia, with him. Julia was found Friday night, wandering unharmed at a gravel pit near Interstate 5 near Olympia.

Patterson said his wife managed to work the tape off her mouth and kept screaming all night long. At about 3 p.m. Saturday, an unidentified citizen heard the cries and came to the rescue.

Patterson said his wife told him the abductor was very polite, and appeared more nervous than she was. She had to calm her own kidnapper, Patterson said.

"Apparently he's in very desperate straits economically, but that's a hard way to make a living," Patterson said.

Patterson had talked with the abductor seven or eight times through the night and followed instructions to go to a number of telephone booths in the Olympia area. He lost contact, he said, at about 1:30 a.m. Saturday when he got lost and missed a telephone rendezvous.

He said at the news conference that he was trying to find a way to get "Dave" the money he sought. The amount demanded was not revealed.

The Pattersons have been married 12 years and have five children, all under 11. Three other children were at home during the abduction but were not taken.

Patterson said "Dave" was "a polite person, has good composure, appears to be well educated and seems to have things together. He used no gutter language. He made no threats."

The car was found Saturday morning at the Capital Mall Shopping Center in Olympia, Whitaker said.

The abductor contacted Patterson on Friday evening, officials said.

The bank in Grand Mound, a small southwestern Washington town about 22 miles south of Olympia, opened for business as usual at 9 a.m. Saturday. Patterson could be seen sitting at his office desk in a corner room of the small modern wood and stone building, resting his head on his arms.

The small community of Grand Mound has only one four-way stop light, three gasoline stations, a Dairy Queen, a restaurant, a mobile home sales lot, a grocery store and the bank.

Bodies Found In Burned Car

MIAMI (AP) — Four bodies burned beyond recognition were found in a car that had been doused with a flammable material and set afire in an avocado grove, police said Saturday.

The late-model Oldsmobile was so badly burned that the color of its paint could not be immediately determined, police said. Police said it had Georgia license plates, and had fancy wire wheels.

After firefighters doused the flames late Friday, they found a man's body in the back seat. When they opened the trunk to make sure the blaze was out, they found the bodies of a woman and two men.

Police at the scene were unable to determine the race or age of the bodies, which were taken to the medical examiner's office in Miami for autopsy. Late Saturday, police said the victims' identities remain unknown.

Only pieces of clothing worn by the victims were recovered.

The car had been set aflame between two rows of 15-foot-tall trees in the avocado grove.

"It was a hot fire that scarred surrounding trees," said Metro-Dade Homicide Detective Jim Ratcliff. "There was an accelerant used on the vehicle to start it burning."

Metro Fire Safety Lt. Charles Zahalka said the fire was "definitely arson."

Homicide Sgt. Al Singleton said there was nothing to indicate drugs were involved in the case. "Then again, if there were drugs in the car, they would have been burned," he added.

The car was found in an area where thieves often abandon and burn stolen cars, officials said.

Willful Evasion Of State Taxes Harms Others

For some years now North Carolina has lacked any real clout in enticing its citizens to pay their taxes. Revenue Secretary Mark G. Lynch has come up with a plan that could change that situation.

State tax law has made it only a misdemeanor even if a potential taxpayer willfully evaded payment of his taxes. The punishment for conviction is relatively light — a fine of up to $1,000 and six months in jail, or both. If you willfully fail to file a return the punishment is only a fine of up to $200 and 30 days in prison, or both.

Those penalties could look appealing to some would-be taxpayers who would gladly exchange a petty fine and a slight jail sentence for thousands of dollars.

Lynch says that should be changed. He wants the penalty for willful evasion stepped up to $10,000 and/or five years in prison. Violation would constitute a felony. Lynch says willful failure to file should remain a misdemeanor, but would step up the penalty to $10,000 and one year in jail, or both.

His proposals are a step in the right direction. This country's democracy was founded following a war in which one of the more enduring slogans was, "No taxation without representation." We have that representation in Raleigh, and it was through those representatives that the taxes used to fund this state's operations were levied. So long as the tax law remains the law, it is the duty of every citizen to pay his fair share as determined by that law. To do otherwise is not a success for the willful evader; it only adds that much more of a burden on the taxpayer who dutifully foots the bill.

Housing Slump 'Bottoms Out'

A.C. Robbins of Chapel Hill, president of the N.C. Association of Realtors, says he believes the slump in home buying has "bottomed out." He sees positive things ahead.

He pointed to declining interest rates as spurring the sale of homes.

Robbins hopes to see Federal Housing Administration and Veterans Administration loan rates decline to 14.5 percent or in that range. He also expects declines from the now prevalent 17 to 18 percent conventional loans.

There is a general feeling in the industry that the economy is turning around which could eventually lead to a housing boom, he indicated.

We hope so. There is certainly a desire for housing among young couples and single adults in the nation. Most are being held back because they cannot qualify for loans. Improvement in the housing industry can mean better times for many other industries.

Barry Schweid — Proof

WASHINGTON (AP) — Israel's final retreat from Sinai should be proof that peace is not an impossible dream in the Middle East. But the return of the land to Egypt is getting scant attention in the Arab world or elsewhere.

Instead the focus is on Lebanon, where Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization may be on the verge of a full-scale war. Former President Jimmy Carter is clamoring for more forceful U.S. diplomacy, and Israel is winning little praise for yielding the Sinai buffer and taking military risks in the interest of peace.

What should be a first step toward an overall settlement, reducing the danger of another Middle East war, is to most of the world a trivial event. Jordan, Saudi Arabia and the rest of the Arab states are maintaining their boycott of peace talks with Israel despite the surrender of Sinai.

Most Arab governments remain suspicious of Egypt, although less of President Hosni Mubarak, who is moving rapidly to mend relations, than they were of his slain predecessor, Anwar Sadat. The pressure is building on President Reagan to put heat on Israel to relax its control over the West Bank of the Jordan River and Gaza and give ground in the stalemated negotiations over Palestinian autonomy.

The three Camp David partners, Israel, Egypt and the United States, by all odds should be taking bows for making peace work. Instead, after Sunday, all three will face new demands — Israel to clear the way for a Palestinian state, Egypt to rejoin Arab ranks, and the United States to abandon the Camp David formula for another approach.

And yet, Israel and Egypt seem determined to defy the skeptics and strengthen their economic, cultural and diplomatic ties. This week, their ambassadors, Moshe Arens of Israel and Ashraf Ghorbal of Egypt, talked optimistically in interviews here of the two countries eventually drawing as close as the United States and Canada.

"We would love to see that," Ghorbal declared. He said Egypt stands ready to be "the broker of peace" between Israel and the other Arab states.

Unfortunately, their optimism is not widely shared.

Carter, who presided over the hectic 13 days at Camp David in 1978, says the Reagan administration's failure to take a more active role in the Middle East has jeopardized chances for a wider peace.

"There's a tension and an absence of trust and good will that existed when (Israeli Prime Minister Menachem) Begin and Sadat and I were embracing each other and clasping hands," he told Atlanta newspapers last weekend. "That time is gone — maybe not permanently."

Other critics say Reagan should have appointed a personal representative to take charge of flagging negotiations over Palestinian autonomy. In this view, delegating the job to Richard Fairbanks, an aide to Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., isn't enough to impress Israel and Egypt to settle their differences over the Palestinians.

The doomsayers warn that time is running out for Israel to come to terms with its other neighbors. Begin is given little credit for fulfilling his commitments under the treaty, including the painful uprooting of Jewish settlers in Sinai.

Indeed, even with the withdrawal Sunday, only one of the three great goals of Camp David will be fulfilled. The two others, a five-year experimentation in self-rule for the Palestinians and a comprehensive peace, remain elusive.

Alvin Taylor — Sunday Morning Notes

Recently it was reported that drive-in theaters are on the wane in the nation.

A check of the local scene indicates that is the case here. Drive-in movies have virtually disappeared. One is open on weekends, but wasn't open at all during the winter.

In other areas the drive-in movies have disappeared, or survived only by switching to X-rated movies.

That doesn't mean the demise of movie theaters, however, even though that has been predicted from time-to-time as television and other entertainment encroached.

In fact, locally there are more theaters than ever, thanks to the multiple theater complexes. Currently you can take your choice from 11 movies on any given day.

And what happened to the drive-ins? There are always social theories. The drive-ins appealed to young couples who were looking for a place to park, or to the young families being formed after World War II because they could include the kids and nobody had to dress up.

Now the young couples don't have to park; they have apartments and television. There are fewer families with children and many of those are single parent situations.

It also might be true that we can watch television at home casually, and we want going to the movies to be special.

For those who were around, who can forget the movies under the stars at the South-11 Drive-In in the 1950s? (You newcomers don't know where the South-11 was? Try the northeast corner of the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and Memorial Drive.)

There in May 1950 you could have caught Bing Crosby in "A Connecticutt Yankee", or Charles Starrett and Smiley Burnette in "Laramie."

You would have also seen in their newspaper ads a reward offer of $25 for the apprehension of anyone guilty of cutting wires and taking off the speakers.

In October 1955 you could have caught "Karamoja" and "Halfway to Hell" at the South-11.

Then there was the Meadowbrook Drive-In north of the river. There you could have seen "Escape to Burma" with Barbara Stanwyck in October 1955.

That same month you could have seen "Susan Slept Here" at the Meadowbrook. Viewed in the present X-rated concept, one might think "Susan Slept Here" would have packed them in. The movies weren't so unrestrained then, however. That one starred Dick Powell and Debbie Reynolds and would be no more than a "G" under the present rating system.

At any rate going to the drive-ins was fun. There was always the guy who kept his foot on the brake until the folks behind him finally asked him to douse the tail light. There were the trips to the popcorn stand, usually in the projection booth. There was the temptation to steal the speakers. And yeah, the kids did "make out". In fact the drive-ins became known fondly as "passion pits." If such innocent fun seems quaint now, maybe our society has become too blasé.

Paul T. O'Connor — Campaign Funds May Be Short

RALEIGH — When North Carolina's congressmen look for campaign money this year, they may find that their party's campaign committee doesn't have anything for them. Nationally, the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee will be contibuting to less than 20 percent of the Democratic candidates for the U.S. House this year.

The congressional campaign committee traditionally gives $1,000 to $2,000 to every Democratic nominee for the House. This year, Rep. Tony Coelho of California, committee chairman, has decided to focus on only 80 seats and try to give each of those nominees $25,000. "We used to shoot with a shotgun, now we're going to take aim," said the committee's press aid, Evan Zeppos. The money, he said, will go to those Democratic incumbants who face a very close race and to those challengers to Republican congressmen who have a very good chance of winning.

The committee will announce the winners this summer. Zeppos wouldn't say which North Carolina congressman will get the big prize. "We don't want to let them (Republicans) know our strategy," he said.

Fifth District Rep. Steve Neal has spoken with Coelho and says he thinks he's in for $25,000. Neal will face the winner of a Republican primary between former state Sen. Anne Bagnal and Winston-Salem builder Wallace Vanhoy. Neal defeated Mrs. Bagnal in a close race in 1980.

In a recent interview, Neal said he understands 4th District Rep. Ike F. Andrews and 8th District Rep. Bill Hefner are also in contention for the extra money. Andrews is being challenged by former UNC-Chapel Hill athletic director Bill Cobey — the Republican candidate for lieutenant governor in 1980. Eighth District Republicans have said they'll launch a big attack at Hefner, but so far that attack hasn't materialized.

Zeppos confirmed that those three are getting serious consideration.

The state's other Democratic congressmen, 1st District Rep. Walter Jones and 3rd District Rep. Charlie Whitley and 7th District Rep. Charlie Rose, probably will not get aid. Zeppos said the committee will not even look at the 2nd District — where Rep. L.H. Fountain is retiring — until a nominee is chosen.

For the chosen 80, the $25,000 should be a big help. The Republican war chest for the election will probably be in the area of $30 million.

Rowland Evans and Robert Novak — West Bank Policies Cause Problems

WASHINGTON — Israel's sponsorship of an anti-PLO "cadre" on the West Bank has collided with official policy of the American consulate in East Jerusalem, fomenting a new, bitter but still-undercover U.S.-Israel dispute.

U.S. diplomats have attempted in a series of private moves to convince Prime Minister Menachem Begin and the increasingly-powerful defense minister, Ariel Sharon, that there will be no yielding on the American consulate's work in the West Bank.

But the campaign against Consul General Brandon Grove, characterized as "vicious" by one U.S. official, may intensify. Israeli officials are lobbying congressmen and senators to pressure the Reagan administration. In response, Secretary of State Alexander Haig has passed firm warnings to Israeli Ambassador Moshe Ahrens to tell his government: Stop harassing Grove. This new U.S.-Israeli dispute is a harbinger of serious problems ahead as the Reagan administration, following the April 25 Israeli withdrawal from the Sinai, must finally come to grips with the Palestinian issue.

Moves against Grove heated up on March 30 when Sharon, in an unnoticed interview in Hebrew, was questioned closely by the party organ of Begin's Likud coalition. In the plain speech for which he is justly famed, Sharon roasted Grove and the Reagan administration and accused the Americans of surreptitiously backing a Palestinian state in the West Bank.

"To this day," Sharon said, "the U.S. consulate in East Jerusalem is very actively fostering extremist elements" in the west Bank. The consulate is doing this dirty work by continuing to help "various so-called voluntary organizations" — Catholic and other religious and relief charities.

From the top down, U.S. officials are concerned and upset about Israel's tough moves against Palestinian officials chosen in free elections approved by previous governments of Israel. So as of now, Brandon Grove's orders are solid: Change nothing!

But on the larger question of the future of the West Bank, no such determination is yet visible.

James J. Kilpatrick — Enlightened Act Is Now Endangered

WASHINGTON — A Senate subcommittee held hearings last week on extension of one of the truly enlightened laws of recent years, the Endangered Species Act of 1973. The dismaying report on Capitol Hill is that the act itself is now endangered. A quiet coalition is forming among mining interests, the wood products industry, furriers and land developers to gut the act of its key provisions.

This cannot be permitted to happen. If there is one cause that should unite true conservatives, it is the extension of this protective law for another three years, without weakening amendments. Politically speaking, not all conservationists may be conservatives, but if the appellation has any meaning, every principled conservative should count himself a conservationist. Let us stand up and be counted.

The Endangered Species Act has suffered from a regrettable lawsuit, from a thoughtlessly bad press and from misguided amendments added to the original 1973 law. To the extent that most persons have heard about the act at all, they probably have heard of it in terms of the snail darter and the Tellico dam, or perhaps in connection with the Furbish lousewort and the Dickey-Lincoln project in Maine. Or perhaps word has spread through the grumbling of various developers about bureaucratic delays.

The two key sections of the law are Section 7 and Section 9. Under Section 7, federal agencies are prohibited from taking any official action likely to jeopardize an endangered or threatened species. Under Section 9, it is unlawful for any person to take, possess or transport such species.

It was Section 7 that led to the Supreme Court's 1978 decision holding up completion of the TVA's Tellico dam in Tennessee. Icthyologists had determined that the dam would endanger the tiny snail darter, a previously unknown species of perch. A six-man majority on the court held that "Congress has spoken in the plainest of words." The challenged section was stoutly upheld. Construction halted. While an exemption was being worked out, the darters were successfully transplanted and eventualy, I beleive, were discovered elsewhere. Meanwhile, cartoonists and editorial writers went into raptures of ridicule.

Superficially, thoughtlessly, it may have appeared indeed ridiculous to delay a $90 million dam in order to save an insignificant fish. After all, as dissenting Justice Lewis Powell observed in a footnote, there are some 130 species of darters already identified and new species are regularly discovered. What's one darter more or less?

Good question. Why should we strive to prevent the extinction of species? The current list of protected domestic species includes 35 mammals, 69 birds, 25 reptiles, 45 fish, 23 clams, 61 plants, 13 insects and a handful of snails and amphibians. Why protect the Indiana bat, the willow warbler, the mission blue butterfly and the dwarf bear-poppy? The answer is, we do not know. We may never know. But we must not be prevented from ever finding out. We protect them because they are there.

The 1973 act passed the Senate 92-0 and drew only 12 opposing votes in the House. The law was preceded by committee findings that natural species were disappearing from our planet at an alarming rate. The near unanimity of the Congress provided a remarkable and gratifying example of bipartisan concern manifested in farsighted law.

We must not be shortsighted now. The pending Senate bill (S. 2309) would extend the act for three years. It would make some sensible modifications in the procedure by which exemptions may be obtained; it would reduce the long delays that have frustrated several desirable projects. In that regard, it needs to be understood that the act does not operate to preserve every endangered species and habitat forever and forever. Mechanisms exist to provide exemptions, and these mechanisms have worked effectively.

While the basic act is being extended, Congress ought also to restore some of the funds that overly zealous budget-cutters have cut out. It makes little sense to have "the most comprehensive legislation for the preservation of endangered species ever enacted by any nation," to quote Chief Justice Warren Burger, and to withhold the few million dollars required for effective enforcement.

The existing law expires Oct. 1. Not much time remains to push an extension bill through committees and floor debate, but with the same wisdom and unity shown in the job can be done.

Blacks Renew Marches To Call Attention

Harold Jackson

United Press International

Southern black leaders say demonstrations will increase and violence is possible if unemployment remains high, social programs are cut again and two decades of civil rights gains crumble under the Reagan admininstration.

In a throwback to the 1960s, blacks are reviving civil rights marches, including a 2,000 mile Alabama-to-Washington hike that began last week, and are renewing threats of economic boycotts to fight discrimination.

"We are marching to draw attention to problems, to let people know we are dissatisfied," said the Rev. Abraham Woods, president of the Birmingham, Ala., Southern Christian Leadership Conference chapter.

"We seek to set in motion a kind of spirit that will start rolling and move barriers out of the way," he said.

The SCLC is regaining some of the clout it lost after the assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., and has spearheaded many of the recent civil rights protests in the South — especially those urging Congress to renew the 1965 Voting Rights Act.

"We need a Voting Rights Act," said Rev. George Lowery, the head of the Atlanta-based SCLC.

"Blacks hold less than 2 percent of the elective offices in the nation and face an intensifying resistance to political achievement," Lowery said. "Devious schemes to dilute and neutralize the effectiveness of black voting have been put into effect in many parts of our country."

Lowery and his disciples also espouse the King-derived tactic of boycotting businesses with poor civil rights records, but have yet to announce any specific targets in the South.

"It doesn't take too many black people to stop trading to interfere with the margin of profit," said Woods.

Some black leaders, however, don't feel the renewed marches and boycotts will produce the positive results they did in the 1960s.

Former Fayette, Miss., Mayor Charles Evers, whose brother, Medgar Evers, was assassinated in the 60s, put it this way:

"The marching days are out. It wouldn't do any good at all. That type of tactic won't work now.

"In the early days, it wasn't the marches that did so much good," Evers said, "it was the treatment we received — the dogs, the beatings, the jailings — that kind of thing. People are more humane now."

Miami Urban League president T. Willard Fair agrees it was public outrage at the way civil rights demonstrators were treated — not the actual demonstrations — that spurred passage of civil rights laws.

"Bull Connor (the late Birmingham, Ala., police commissioner) did more to pass the Civil Rights Act than Martin Luther King Jr. ever did," said Fair.

But Fair and Greensboro, N.C., NAACP president George Simkins agree that black demonstrations are likely to increase.

"With the cuts in social programs and with people unable to find jobs, the cuts in Medicaid, Medicare and food stamps, I feel definitely there will be a movement to the streets and demonstrations," said Simkins.

The president, they feel, is insensitive to the needs of the nation's poor and will do nothing to prevent the crumbling of 20 years of civil rights progress.

And there is little support among Southern black leaders for the Reagan-backed military buildup that Lowery charged "emasculates financing for life-support programs."

"We expected that the administration would not be a friend as far as civil rights is concerned, and we have found that is the case," said Woods.

"It is going to be hard to get the Reagan administration to bend," echoed Simkins. "It is going to take a lot and lot of pressure to get him to bend."

Some blacks say the pressure may take the form of violent.

"When people were saying 'Burn, Baby, Burn,' it was because they were impatient with the movement," Woods said.

"There is still some impatience today, to the extent some people don't want to get involved. Others are open for violence. These people are frustrated and in a very volatile mood," he said.

Jim French, editor of The Chronicle, a black Charlotte, S.C., newspaper, says there is potential for violence in the port city, but it may may be defused by Charleston's new black police chief.

"In the East Side, people are looking for jobs, but there are none, particularly for the unskilled," French said. "There may be confrontations ... but that depends on the new chief and how he deals with black issues."

Ike Williams, South Carolina's NAACP field director, also sees the potential for summer violence.

"Unless things improve, this could be a very, very hot summer in terms of not just racial unrest, but a clear-cut national dilemma among the classes," he said. "The poor and disadvantaged, regardless of color, will feel the pinch of unemployment and the frustrations of the economy."

State Rep. Alvin Holmes of Montgomery, Ala., who walked out of the chamber during President Reagan's recent speech to the Legislature, says he believes violence can be avoided.

"The black leaders are opposed to that. I think most of the blacks know we in leadership positions are doing everything we can," he said.

Evers said a summer of violence should be avoided at all costs.

"I don't think it will create anything but problems," Evers said. "It would become a disaster. The Russians, China and Cuba would all try to take advantage of the situation. We can't afford any type of racial violence."

Fair said any racial violence in Miami is more likely to be a clash of black Americans and Latin Americans or black Americans and Haitians.

"The have-nots will be pitted against each other for survival," he said. "Ethnic relations will be very strained."

Miami, however, had three bloody days of rioting that killed 18 and caused over $100 million in property damage in Liberty City two years ago following a white jury's acquittal of white police officers charged with the beating death of a black man.

Some say preventing riots may be more difficult in the 1980s since there is no single leader who can sway masses of people to non-violence the way King did. Others say even King wouldn't be as successful today.

"We have several leaders now, but not with the same influence King had," said Cleo Kirk, treasurer of the Memphis, Tenn., NAACP.

"Jesse Jackson would be the only one with that kind of charisma who could draw a crowd wherever he goes," said French.

Jackson was credited with cooling tempers in Chattanooga, Tenn., in 1980 when three Ku Klux Klansmen got only light sentences for spraying four black women with shotgun pellets. The appearance of the director of Chicago's Operation PUSH ended three hot days of racial unrest.

"If Martin were here now, he wouldn't be accepted," Evers said. "Things are different. Martin would go out and challenge. There is no need for that anymore."

But Fair says many of problems blacks faced in the 1960s have returned to haunt black Americans again — poverty, unemployment and lack of affirmative action.

"You are creating the environment that made Martin Luther King," he said.

Public Forum

To the editor:

The March 30 East Carolinian issue's lead article informed readers, "SGA Appropriates Funds for ECGC Informational Pamphlet." The essence of the article is that the Student Government Association at ECU appropriated money to a group known as East Carolina Gay Community. Their president is a student named Mark Zumbach. This group, according to their name, is made up of homosexuals. What this amounts to is that these avowed homesexuals have received monies from the SGA at East Carolina University for the purpose of attempting to "increase an awareness of people of different sexual orientations."

Mark Zumbach well said it, when in an interview he stated that this area (Eastern North Carolina) is in the Bible Belt and is very conservative in its thinking. And the Bible condemns homosexualism. In fact, it condemns it in any of its 14 titles (15 including the modern day title which attempts to give credence to it, "gay"). There are no 'right' sexual alternatives for any human being. Any deviation from the standards taught us by God is perversion. It should not be accepted by anyone, by nations, governments, cities or educational institutes. In fact, are we so blind that we cannot see from even the animal kingdom that homosexualism is not natural and is wrong? I have never seen one homosexual dog, cat, elephant, bigmouth bass or eagle. That's quite a commentary on humanity.

I call on the SGA to rescind its appropriation to homosexuals. I call upon the administration of ECU to rescind its charter for the ECGC. I call upon the students of East Carolina University to wake up.

And I call upon the great citizens of Greenville not to take this lightly, because it will affect the quality of life here in Pitt County. These gay bars need to be closed. Our police department, zoning commission, City Council, County Commission should be unified in their efforts to maintain the highest quality of life in our community.

To the editor:

I was impressed by the irony of the immigrant's comments shared by Alma Worthington in a recent letter to the editor. The immigrant painted a bleak picture of life in the Soviet Union: the unavailability of such items as meat and refrigerators, being "committed forever to living in one place," being "put in jail for complaining about it," and living "in constant fear ... where the courts are designed to protect the government and justice is formulated in one simple concept of guilty unless you can prove otherwise."

In his happiness at escaping this dismal life, the immigrant advised Americans to "become law-abiding citizens, never go on strike, and not demand more freedom and never insult their government."

With all due respect to obeying the law and not insulting anyone (especially the government), the virtues listed are just those prized by governments that require their people to do without refrigerators, mobility and justice. They need people who will shut up and do what they're told.

The immigrant's point that we should appreciate what we have is well taken. We do, but we know that we must show our appreciation actively. We give our time and ideas because we know we have to if our democracy is to work.

Rehabilitation Is Needed

WASHINGTON — Nobody's arguing about whodunit.

John W. Hinckley Jr. shot and nearly killed President Reagan and three attendants over a year ago outside the Washington Hilton. Videotapes and other dramatic evidence, while perhaps inadmissible in the trial that begins Tuesday, have convinced most Americans of that.

Unfortunately, Hinckley's mental state on the morning of March 30, 1981, is likely to prove inconsequential to the country's judgment of the young loner. Whatever the outcome of his trial, Hinckley's plea of "not guilty by reason of insanity" has only further undermined our respect for the intricate relationship between mental illness and criminal justice.

After a year, most Americans may simply have no interest in this important aspect of the Hinckley saga. Spoiled by recent courtroom thrillers in Newport and Scarsdale, we've absorbed what little intrigue there is to Hinckley, a young man whose life has proven a tragic descant to the Marvin Hamlisch song, "What I Did for Love " Moreover, there's a diminished sense of outrage: To varying degrees, Hinckley's victims all survived.

Yet, as intriguing as Hinckley's weakness for actress Jodie Foster may still be, most of us are now waiting patiently for the criminal justice system to "put away" Hinckley. We don't really care how it's done, just as long as he's unable to take another trip to New Haven.

Such an attitude may reflect our widespread anxiety about violent crime in America. With the paranoia of a lynching party, we worry that Hinckley's craftful defenders (who reportedly received $500,000 up front for accepting the case) can somehow circumvent "justice." With increasing frequency, however, we ourselves may be doing just that.

It's no great secret that for some 3,000 years enlightened sorts have maintained that only those individuals capable of "evil intent" should be held responsible for crimal acts. Historically, feeble minds deserved mercy, not punishment.

In this century, the advent of psychological expertise and psychotropic drugs altered our view of criminal insanity. It became possible to treat and stabilize individuals for re-entry into society. Today, those who are found "not guilty by reason of insanity" (fewer than 1 percent of all convicted felons) become the wards of doctors and shrinks, not courts and parole boards.

Whatever the jury's final determination, many of us would argue that, in stalking and shooting a president, Hinckley lost his chance for eventual freedom.

But it's important to remember that treatment, stabilization and possible re-entry have always been part-and-parcel of an insanity plea — from Hinckley or anyone else. In accepting such a plea yet ignoring the accompanying baggage, we're essentially remolding our approach to the criminally insane.

"If Hinckley is found to be insane, we'll all go home at night feeling comfortable that we're a society that basically rehabilitates insanity acquittees," said Edward Kovachy, a California lawyer and psychiatrist who spoke with our reporter, John Riccardi. "But we're not. If we really believed in rehabilitating the insane, someone like Hinckley could be out in the street in a month, and nobody would stand for that."

It's not coincidental that three states — Illinois, Indiana and Michigan — have already transformed the public's unspoken contempt for the "rehabilitative model" into law. With "not guilty by reason on insanity" replaced by "guilty but mentally ill," attorneys in these states can review all hospital discharges and oversee the re-entry of the criminally insane into society. With its increased involvement, the judicial system has helped assuage public fears that psychiatrists arbitrarily release mental patients with little regard for the general public's safety.

Whether we like it or not, if John Hinckley is found insane, he'll deserve the chance to be rehabilitated and released. Such is the standard befitting our legal tradition.

POLL

PRINCETON, N.J. — President Ronald Reagan's decision to launch a highway safety campaign to reduce drunken driving will be applauded by the American people, who demand tougher laws on drinking and driving.

A large and growing majority nationwide — and heavy majorities in each of the four major regions — want stricter drinking/driving laws in general. In addition, eight to 10 endorse a mandotory two-day jail sentence for drunk drivers convicted of a first offense.

While supporting tougher laws, however, six in 10 Americans are opposed to police stopping motorists at random, even though they may not have committed an offense, to administer and alcohol-level test.

One In Six Admits To Driving While Intoxicated

The current survey also reveals that four out of every 10 drivers say they have operated a vehicle after drinking while as many as one in six admits to having driven after drinking too much to drive safely.

In a Gallup Youth Survey, one teenager in 10 admits to having driven while under influence.

Recently, President Reagan established a 30-member commission to work with state and local governments on drinking/driving problems. The panel is charged with heightening public awareness of the problem, encouraging states to deal with drunken driving in a more organized and systematic manner, encouraging the use of the latest techniques for solving the problem and generating local support for better enforcement of laws against drunken driving.

Each year drunken driving is blamed for about half the country's 50,000 automobile fatalities, an estimated 800,00 auto accidents, 750,000 serious injuries and $5 billion in economic losses. Federal studies have shown that on weekend nights one in 10 motorists is intoxicated and only one in 2,000 is arrested.

This question was asked:

"Do you think there should or should not be stricter laws regarding drinking and driving?"

Percent In Favor Of Stricter Laws

	1977	TODAY
NATIONAL	82%	89%
East	82	92
Midwest	83	91
South	83	87
West	79	86

Two-Day Mandatory Sentence Favored

A total of 77 percent of all survey respondents would like to see drunk drivers convicted of a first offense required to serve a two-day jail sentence. Certain states, including California, have such a law on the books.

Here is the question:

"In some states, drunk drivers convicted of a first offense are required to serve a mandatory two-day jail sentence. Would you like to see such a law in this state, or not?"

The results:

Two-Day Jail Sentence For First Offenders?

	Yes	No	No opinion
NATIONAL	77%	21%	2%
East	76	18	2
Midwest	78	18	4
South	77	21	2
West	82	16	2

Opposition Found To Spot Checks

While public support for tougher laws on drinking and driving, in general, has grown since 1977, less backing is now found for specific measure of random spot checks, as seen in the results below:

"Do you favor or oppose police stopping motorists as random — that is, making spot checks — to give them a test such as the breath-alcohol or coordination test, even though they may not have committed an offense?"

Random Checks For Alcohol Level

	Favor	Oppose	No opinion
TODAY	36%	62%	2%
1977	44	53	4

The adult findings reported today are based on in-person interviews with 1,580 adults, 18 and older, interviewed in more than 300 scientifically-selected localities across the nation during the period March 12-15.

For results based on a sample of this size, one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be three percentage points in either direction.

Gladys Tillett: Champion Of Women's Rights

As a lifelong battler for women's rights, Gladys A. Tillett has always contended that the main arguments being used against the Equal Rights Amendment are the same ones she ran into nearly three quarters of a century ago when she was fighting for the right to vote.

She says ERA's foes talk about how it will harm the family or come between men and women.

"I don't want to disappoint these people," she said in an interview several years ago, "but there's nothing in the amendment that will affect the relationship between men and women. That's still up to them.

"It's my highest ambition to be born free and equal. I may have missed it by a few years, but I want to end up that way."

At the time of the interview, Mrs. Tillett was president of ERA United, a coalition of groups attempting to influence the North Carolina General Assembly to ratify ERA.

She carried the battle from one end of the state and back again, arguing that ERA will do nothing but put women in the Constitution and confer on them equal legal rights.

"Do you know you are not in the Constitution?" she would ask visitors to her home in Charlotte. "All the Equal Rights Amendment will do is put women in the Constitution."

Heading the ERA battle in North Carolina came as the culmination of a career which saw Mrs. Tillett serve successively as president of the student body at the state college for women in Greensboro, organizer of the first North Carolina chapter of the League of Women Voters, first women precint vice chairman in Charlotte, campaign manager in 1927 for one of the first women elected to the General Assembly, vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee for 10 years, first woman appointed to the State Board of Elections, member of the U.S. delegation to the United Nations and U.S. representative to the U.N. Commission on the Status of Women.

Mrs. Tillett, who now lives in a Charlotte nursing home, is the widow of Charles W. Tillett, a prominent Charlotte attorney.

When Mrs. Tillett first approached the Democratic chairman in Charlotte, around 1920, about registering women to vote, he was incredulous about her desire to be a precinct vice chairman.

"'Why, Gladys,' he said, 'you wouldn't want to be a precinct vice chairman, would you? Your father was a judge,'" Mrs. Tillette recalled. "It was as if it were going to disgrace myself or something."

But she got the appointment and embarked on a political career that saw her become national Democratic vice chairman.

After 10 years in the Democratic national headquarters, she resigned in 1960 to work in the U.S. Senate campaign of the late Frank P. Graham. Later, President John Kennedy appointed her an alternate delegate to the U.S. General Assembly and to the U.N. Commission on the Status of Women.

"There is more custom and tradition to break down when it comes to eliminating discrimination because of sex than there is in ending racial prejudice," she said shortly after her appointment to the U.N. commission, which has taken a leading role in working for elimination of discrimination against women throughout the world.

"All other rights will come to a woman after she gets equality before the law," she said. "If a woman doesn't have equality before the law she can be utterly helpless."

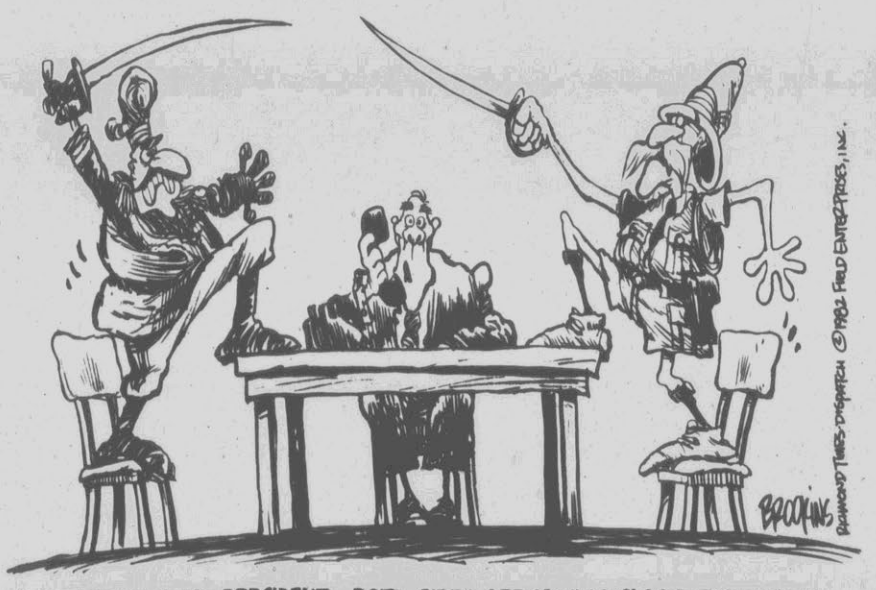
She expounded on this theme in many speeches throughout the state during the ERA battles of the '70s. She was completely at ease behind the podium, and her audiences were fascinated by her vast experience and her sparkling humor.

"Mrs. Tillett is one of the great ladies of the nation," said Duke University President Terry Sanford several years ago. She and Sanford had worked together in the Kennedy presidential campaign of 1960.

"Terry asked me if I would take the religion issue while he took the race issue," she said, recalling her speech to the 1960 Democratic Convention in Los Angeles.

Sanford and a host of other North Carolina politicians, including the present governor, Jim Hunt, joined Mrs. Tillett in battling for ERA. But she recalled that an old boyhood chum from Morganton, former U.S. Sen. Sam Ervin Jr., had remained adamantly opposed to ERA.

"I would never let that come between us," she said. Then her face lit up. "But his daughter is for us and his daughter-in-law."



"THAT'S RIGHT, MR. PRESIDENT--BOTH SIDES ARE MOVING CLOSER TOGETHER IN THE FALKLAND CRISIS.... BUT I WOULDN'T EXACTLY CALL IT PROGRESS..."

Egyptian Flags Fly Over Sinai

By LARRY THORSON

RAFAH, Sinai (AP) — Egyptian flags unfurled Saturday over the northern Sinai town of Rafah, bisected by barbed wire into Arab and Jewish halves on the last day of Israel's 15 years of occupation.

Israeli troops patrolled Rafah, paying no attention to the Egyptian flags that technically appeared a day early.

Arab workmen laid bricks and concrete to prepare a pedastal for a 50-foot flagpole where the official flag-raising ceremony will be held Sunday afternoon at the new border terminal two miles east of town.

The Bank of Egypt prepared to open a new branch, the dusty main street was spanned by colorful banners welcoming the return of Egyptian rule, and the red, white and black Egyptian flag snapped in the hot wind above many houses.

Israeli money began to disappear and Egyptian currency was taking over. The Bank of Egypt's Rafah branch manager, Abdel Khader a-Tiyal el-Fadali, cheerfully showed off the attractive, newly furnished offices.

"We will be open for business at noon tomorrow," el-Fadali said, happy that two weeks of frantic work had made the branch ready on time for the return of Egyptian rule.

The manager said some of his staff of 20 came from Cairo but some of the jobs were going to Rafah people. An assistant, Samir Mubarak, was one Rafah native to benefit from the bank's opening, and he said Egypt was preparing jobs for all the Rafah people who previously had worked in Israel.

"And they will earn a lot of money, like in Israel," Mubarak said. "Egypt wants to raise the standard of living here."

Another Rafah resident, Odel el-Shar, said, "The people are very happy. Before this was Egypt and now Egypt comes back." But like many in the town nestled in the Mediterranean coastal sand dunes, he has a problem, for the new border slices Rafah in two.

A concertina-wire fence runs straight through Rafah, climbing up the sides of houses and over rooftops, closing off streets and alleys. El-Shar said he was part of a big family with relatives on both sides. He lives on the Egyptian side but has an orchard on the Israeli-held side.

"Both countries say there will be permits to let us cross, but we don't know when they will be issued," he said.

When the border goes into effect Sunday, roughly 20,000 of Rafah's people will be in Egypt and 60,000 will be in the Israeli-occupied Gaza Strip. Or as the people here say it, there is "Rafah-Egypt" and "Rafah-Palestine."

Egypt Plans Low-Key Celebration

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — To keep things calm and not irritate the Israelis, Egypt plans low-key celebrations Sunday to mark Israel's withdrawal from the last third of war-conquered Sinai.

"You know that the Israelis are withdrawing — there are some certain sensitivities," Foreign Minister Kamal Hassan Aly told a news conference. "The Egyptians are celebrating and the Israelis are withdrawing. We want to keep all the feelings as cool as possible."

Anwar Sadat, key architect of the peace treaty with Israel, had planned a three-day extravaganza to mark the regaining of Sinai after 15 years of Israeli occupation. But President Hosni Mubarak scaled down the plans within weeks of his precedessor's assassination Oct. 6.

The foreign press center said the governor of North Sinai would officially raise the Egyptian flag in the border town of Rafah at 1 p.m. — 7 a.m. EDT — and the South Sinai governor would do the same in the town of Sharm el-Sheikh at the same time.

Torch-bearing runners who set out from Cairo Friday where were expected in the two towns at the same time, and folk-dancing and other Bedouin ceremonies were expected.

The press said military cadets would parade through the streets of Cairo and other cities, and April 25 would be a national holiday in the future.

"We consider the 25th a very normal day, but it is a very good sign for normalization between the two countries and to strengthen the relations between the two countries," said Aly.

He added the withdrawal "will create a new era in the area devoted to the peace process," and a "good mood" toward normalization in Egypt. He appeared to be trying to allay Israeli fears that normalization will lag after the withdrawal.

Aly said the dispute over a small patch of border land at Taba, south of the Israeli port of Eilat on the Gulf of Aqaba, would be handled on the basis of agreed principles and would not impede the withdrawal.

Israeli soldiers and civilians will withdraw to the borders at Taba that Egypt recognizes and Egyptian forces would observe the border Israel recognizes, he said.

He said the multinational peacekeeping force would move into Taba itself, and the dispute will be solved by conciliation or arbitration — as specified by the Camp David treaty.

Israel, however, has not made public its position on the Taba plan announced by Aly. Last Wednesday, the Israeli Cabinet said Israeli forces would withdraw to the line recognized by Israel.

Israeli developers are building a 15-story luxury hotel on the disputed land. Aly said among the details still outstanding was the question of whether or not work on the hotel would stop.

Self Destructs

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A Trident missile carrying dummy warheads went off course and blew itself up Saturday after a test-firing from a nuclear submarine in the Atlantic Ocean, an Air Force spokesman said.

Bush Sees No Threat To U.S.-China Ties

TOKYO (AP) — Vice President George Bush said Saturday the United States would view with "great seriousness" a downgrading of relations by China, but he said Peking's objections to U.S. arms sales to Taiwan pose no major threat to those ties.

The Chinese-American relationship is a "fundamental one" in which each country recognizes its own national interest, Bush told a news conference. It "is not in such a state that it would require a visit to patch things up," he said.

The present itinerary for Bush's two-week Asian tour includes Singapore, Australia and New Zealand.

U.S. officials said privately however that the Chinese have invited Bush to visit Peking and and the question of whether he goes or not is largely a "logistical" one.

Bush served a term as the United States' top diplomat in China before full relations were established in early 1979.

He said the Reagan administration views the U.S. relationship with China as "a very, very important one," and "if a visit by the vice president would be productive and useful, we would go the extra miles."

Communist China has objected to U.S. plans to sell some $60 million worth of military spare parts to the rival Nationalist government on Taiwan. They want the Reagan administration to set a deadline for cutting off all defensive arms sales to Taiwan.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman said Bush told Japan's Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki that the United States will not sell advanced fighter jets to Taiwan, but that the spare parts deal was proper under the Taiwan Relations Act that accompanied the establishment of full U.S. ties with Peking.

The Peking government regards Taiwan as an integral part of China subject to rule by the mainland. It objects to the arms sales as delaying reunification.

Bush said there has been no shift under President Reagan in the U.S. policy of dealing with Taiwan on an unofficial basis.

"In all relationships, requirements change as to terms of defense, but this president is not leaving friends in the lurch," he said.

Bush, in a day crammed with official visits and ceremonial events, held what a U.S. official called "substantive" discussions with Japanese leaders on U.S.-Japan trade friction as well as Sino-U.S. ties.

He said Bush did not reiterate U.S. proposals for Japan to spend more on defense, because "there was nothing really to discuss."

Bush and Suzuki reportedly discussed in some detail a program expected to soon be announced by Japan to increase access of American farmers and other foreign producers to the Japanese market. A U.S. official said the plan, an attempt to help reduce Japan's current $16 billion trade surplus with the United States, offered "no agricultural initiatives of any note."

Bush said Japan and the United States must not allow trade disputes to disrupt their close relationship.

Reagan Criticizes Man-In-Street 'Tax Cheats'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan lashed out at middle American tax cheats Saturday and said the "underground economy" was a stumbling block in getting the recession under control.

"The people in this economy are I'm sure honest people in most of their activities. They just have a double standard where taxes are concerned," Reagan said in his weekly radio address to the nation delivered from the Oval Office.

Reagan made it plain he was not just talking about merchant princes who find tax shelters for their income.

"They can be the friendly neighborhood fixit man, a mechanic, craftsman or member of the professions. They have one thing in common — they prefer to be paid in cash," Reagan said.

He said that as a result of the underground economy, which he defined as "a kind of cash and carry barter system" with no taxable records some $95 billion was not paid in taxes to the federal government.

"As we struggle to trim government spending, it's hard not to think of how close that unpaid tax could come to wiping out the deficit," the president said.

Reagan then paraphrased Sir Walter Scott's 1805 poem, 'The Lae of the Lost Minstrel,'' reciting: "Breathes there a man with soul so dead, Who never to himself hath said, 'I owe it to my country and my fellow citizens to quit being a freeloader!"

Reagan also defended his proposed tuition tax credit for private school students and urged bankers to cut interest rates, which he said should not be more than 10 percent, "but they are."

In the official Democratic response, Sen. Alan Cranston of California said Reagan's talk was "interesting — but unhelpful" and offered no solutions to economic problems.

"He talked about tax avoidance and the underground economy, but he offered no solutions," Cranston said in a radio speech from Chicago.

"He talked about tuition tax credits, but no leader of Congress expects any such legislation to pass at this time. It would increase further a deficit, which, under President Reagan, could reach $180 billion in the next fiscal year," he said.

"The president talked about high interest rates, but it is the Federal Reserve Board's policy of tight money — a policy which the president supports — that is primarily responsible for those high interest rates."

In his five-minute address, Reagan said his proposal to give tax breaks to families sending children to independent and parochial schools was under attack by "the public school lobby" which claimed it would mainly benefit students "attending exclusive finishing or prep schools."

Reagan countered that the "overwhelming majority of so-called private schools are church supported" and mosot of the students come from families making less than $25,000 a year.

He said that if the parents decided to put all of their children in public schools instead, taxes to run the public system would rise.

"I think they're entitled to some relief, since they are supporting two school systems and only using one," he said.

The president wrapped up the address by lauding innovative businessmen who find ways to beat high interest rates and increase sales.

Reiterating his consistent stand that interest rates are being kept high because of nervous money markets, Reagan added that "not everyone out there in the marketplace is afraid."

He said new low-interest plans among some car dealers Ohio and Indiana had met with "overwhelming" success, a major automaker is offering a limited low-interest deal and some tentative plans in the field of home mortgages are being devised.

"You know," he said, "there really is something magic about the marketplace when it's free to operate. As the song says, 'this could be the start of something big.'"

Crowd Runs Police Line, Clashes With Klansmen

HANNIBAL, Mo. (AP) — Protesters broke through a police line in this historic Mississippi river town Saturday and clashed with 25 Ku Klux Klan members before being driven back by police wielding night sticks.

Several people were left with bloody faces.

Scores of officers converged on the melee and managed to whisk the Klan members behind a fence surrounding the baseball field where they were listening to speeches before the protest began. The Klan members piled into cars and were escorted out of the city by the Missouri Highway Patrol.

"That's it. The high theater is over," said Maj. C.E. Fisher of the Highway Patrol.

No serious injuries were reported.

The protesters were from two anti-racist organizations — the International Committee Against Racism and the Progressive Labor Party.

Mayor John Lyng said three anti-Klan protesters were arrested, but all were released later and no charges were filed.

Clemens Field was patrolled by about 100 officers, some wearing riot gear, as tension ran high before the afternoon Klan recruitment rally. At least 150 news media members were on hand to watch the demonstration. Two police snipers were posted on a roof of the old National Guard Armory adjacent to the ballpark.

The anti-Klan demonstrators, who had been marching peacefully outside the field chanting "Death to the Klan," suddenly marched through a gate patrolled by officers and stormed the area where the Klan had gathered.

Three rows of 50-gallon steel drums filled with water were placed in front of the Klan, but after a shouting match, the demonstrators threw aside the drums, brushed past another line of police and fought with the Klan members.

Before the skirmish, Amy Spain of St. Louis, a spokeswoman for the International Committee Against Racism, said the group was "trying to stop the murderous filth of the Ku Klux Klan."

Hannibal, about 80 miles northwest of St. Louis, is the birthplace of Mark Twain and believed to be the setting for his novel, "Huckleberry Finn."

Rep. Ashbrook Dies In Ohio

NEWARK, Ohio (AP) — Rep. John M. Ashbrook, an outspoken conservative who had represented Ohio in Congress since 1961, died of an apparent heart attack Saturday. He was 53.

Ashbrook collapsed at his apartment-office in Johnstown, said Dr. Edward Carlin, emergency room physician at Licking Memorial Hospital here. He was pronounced dead at the hospital at 12:28 p.m.

Ashbrook's physician, Dr. Robert Young of Johnstown, said one of the congressman's aides notified him just after 11 a.m. Saturday that Ashbrook had fainted. Young arrived within minutes and said he detected "no productive heartbeat."

Ashbrook was the leading candidate for the Ohio Republican Party's nomination for the U.S. Senate this year.

Ashbrook, who represented Ohio's east-central 17th District, was a staunch conservative. The American Conservative Union gave him a 97 percent rating, while Ralph Nader's liberal Congress Watch organization gave Ashbrook only a 10 percent rating.

In 1972, Ashbrook had sought the GOP presidential nomination, but failed to win a single delegate vote at the national convention.

"John Ashbrook was a man of courage and principle," President Reagan said in a statement. "... His patriotism and deep belief in the greatness of America never wavered, and his articulate and passionate calls for a return to old-fashioned American values earned him the respect of all who knew him."

bus tours of the campus, the annual Alumni Luncheon at the Greenville Country Club, a campus-wide open house and exhibits, a baseball game and the Purple and Gold football game.

Acting Chancellor John M. Howell was the featured speaker for the luncheon. Outgoing alumni President Phillip R. Dixon of Greenville presided at the luncheon. Active members of the Alumni Association elected the following to the board of directors: Gene T. Aman of Raleigh, S. Gerald Arnold of Fuquay-Varina and Luther M. Taylor of Lost Tree Village, Fla.

During the annual meeting of the board of directors a record budget which would provide for over $125,000 in funds for university programs of excellence was adopted.

Three alumni were honored for outstanding and dedicated service to the university and/or the Alumni Association. Ashley Futrell, president of the ECU Board of Trustees, presented the awards to Harold Dean Green of Greensboro, Troy W. Pate Jr. of Goldsboro and Baxter Ridenhour.

Also promoted in the Greenville plant reorganization were Howard Powell, Sandra Capps and Richard Modlin.

Powell, who was promoted to director of the material management division, will be responsible for the materials handling division, formula and packaging administration, and planning and scheduling department. He joined Burroughs Wellcome in 1970.

Ms. Capps, as manager of production and engineering administration, will have responsibilities for the coordination of the production and engineering unit project system and unit headcount, expense and capital expenditures. She joined the company in 1977.

Modlin, promoted to manager of the chemical manufacturing division, will be responsible for activities of chemical manufacturing. He has worked with Burroughs Wellcome since 1971.

Nuclear Unit Out Of Service

SENECA, S.C. (AP) — The Unit 3 reactor at Oconee Nuclear Station has been taken out of service so workers can check a backup system in one of its steam generators, a Duke Power Co. spokeswoman says.

Workers will inspect the auxiliary feedwater spray header inside each of two steam generators, spokeswoman Debbie DuBose said Friday.

The steam generator is a heat exchanger between the reactor and turbine systems. Heat from the reactor passes through a bundle of water-filled tubes in the generator to a secondary water system, changing that water to steam. The steam turns the turbines.

The spray header provides additional water to the generator's secondary system in case the main water supply is interrupted.

"Other units of similar design in the country have recently shown damage in this area," said Paul Barton, Duke's manager of operations and maintenance. "Acting on the side of caution, we decided to shut down Oconee Unit 3 early for inspection."

Duke had planned to begin a lengthy shutdown of the plant in late May for refueling, planned maintenance and a 10-year inspection required by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

That work will be done done during the current outage and the plant should be back in operation by late summer.

State, Job Firms Clashing

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina is cracking down on job-search agencies it says violate state law and break their promises, and state officials say at least two firms may be run out of the state.

The state Department of Labor plans Monday to ask a Superior Court judge in Wake County to make permanent an order that one of the firms, National Executive Search of the Carolinas, mend its ways. The department has ordered the company to close its Charlotte office.

Deputy labor commissioner Taylor McMillan said the affiliate of a Washington-based firm illegally charged a fee before giving service and by publishing misleading advertisements. A spokesman for the company denied in a telephone interview that it had broken any laws.

Late last week a similar business, Robert Jameson Associates, obeyed a state Department of Labor order to freeze its Charlotte operation while negotiations with North Carolina officials continue. Other closings may follow, officials said.

Labor Commissioner John Brooks wants to rid the state of any private personnel agency that preys upon innocent job seekers, McMillan said.

"With jobs so tight, people are more apt than usual to become victims of businesses that don't obey the law," McMillan said. "And when (the firms' clients) can ... put down two or three thousand dollars and get nothing out of it, we think it's time for the state to protect the interest of its citizens."

Private personnel agencies are not employment agencies, but the personnel firms often don't make that clear to their clients, McMillan said.

Personnel agencies usually charge 10 percent of the salary the client seeks — for example, $2,000 for a $20,000 job. But they often merely counsel the applicant, help write a resume and provide lists of companies to send the resume, he said.

"They claim they aren't obligated to find people jobs but it's obvious that that's what the clients have been led to believe they'll do," McMillan said. "Who would pay $2,000 for help with a resume?"

William P. Jones of Charlotte, who went to NES for help and later complained to the state attorney general's office, agreed.

"I'm convinced I was taken," he said. "They didn't find me a job and they did only about half of what they said they'd do."

Jones said he paid NES $2,308 last September after a newspaper ad convinced him the firm could practically guarantee him a well-paying job in marketing or insurance.

North Carolina licenses all personnel services that charge the job hunter a fee.

Hinckley Trial To Begin Tuesday

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With his trial only days away, lawyers for John W. Hinckley Jr. are trying to shield a jury from seeing a replay of the most graphic scenes on the day President Reagan was shot.

Defense lawyers contend the only issue at the accused presidential assailant's trial is his mental state on the day of the shooting, and graphic pictures and videotapes of the attempted assassination will make it hard for the jury to consider his case fairly.

Jury selection is set to begin on Tuesday in the long-delayed case expected to turn into a battle of psychiatric experts over the sanity of the man who may have been motivated by a crush on a teenage actress he had never met.

Hinckley, 26, son of a Colorado oil man, is accused of trying to kill Reagan and assault with the intent to kill White House Press Secretary James Brady, Secret Service Agent Timothy McCarthy and Washington police officer Thomas Delahanty.

The four men were gunned down in a barrage of gunfire on March 30, 1981, as Reagan left a Washington hotel after giving a speech to a labor group. If convicted, Hinckley faces life imprisonment on the most serious charges.

Defense lawyers are trying to block testimony from any of the victims, but it remains a possibility that Reagan will testify either in person or on a videotape.

The prosecution wants to show the jury videotapes of the shooting including scenes of Brady grievously wounded in the head, McCarthy being lifted off the ground as he was struck in the abdomen with an exploding "devastator" bullet and Delahanty writhing in pain on a sidewalk.

Last week, U.S. District Judge Barrington Parker, who will preside at the trial, disclosed the videotapes have been edited at his direction, but he has not formally ruled on whether the tapes will be admitted into evidence.

Defense lawyers also are trying to prevent the jury from seeing photographs of targets confiscated from a Denver firing range where Hinckley had practiced and enlarged photos of bullets, designed to explode on impact, like those used in the Reagan shooting.

Hinckley's lawyers have acknowledged Hinckley fired the shots on the day of the shooting, but intend to argue he is innocent of the crime by reason of insanity.

The jury will be asked to weigh testimony from a battery of psychiatric experts who have examined Hinckley, and his family members who are expected to describe Hinckley's childhood and adolescent experiences.

A key element in the defense case is Hinckley's purported fixation with a actress named Jodie Foster, who played a prostitute in the movie "Taxi Driver."

Hours after the shooting, law enforcement officials found a letter Hinckley wrote to Miss Foster, declaring, "Jodie, I'm asking you to please look into your heart and at least give me the chance with this historical deed to gain your respect and love."

Parker has not yet decided whether the jury will see the film. But defense and government psychiatrists have seen it and could testify about its influence on Hinckley.

Cox Student Wins Top Spot

ELIZABETH CITY — Roy Lewis of A.G. Cox Grammar School came away with top honors in the Elizabeth City State University Algebra I Contest held recently.

Lewis beat out 140 students from across North Carolina for the top spot in the individual competition. As first place winner, he will participate in the next competition on May 6.

Also winning for Pitt County was the Chicod school team, who came away as first place winners of the team category.

Mike Elks from Chicod, who placed third in the algebra I contest, and Mary Ellen Lyons and Carl Dunn of A.G. Cox received honorable mentions.

Bethel, Grifton and North Pitt schools also participated in the event.

'Moderate' Castro Rejects Plan For Caribbean

WASHINGTON — Cuban President Fidel Castro says President Reagan's Caribbean Basin initiative is an attempt to turn that entire region into another Puerto Rico, where American-sponsored development efforts have "failed totally and absolutely."

In a previously unpublished interview on March 26, a partial text of which was released Saturday, Castro said the countries of Central America and the Caribbean would be better off if they followed the Cuban model rather than relying on the Reagan program.

Castro's glowing account of the achievements of his revolution, particularly in health and education, contrasted sharply with Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr.'s statement last week that Cuba is an "economic shambles."

Haig said Cuba's economic problems are such that Castro is "anguishing" over whether he should align himself more with the West at the expense of his close ties with the Soviet Union.

In the interview, Castro indicated his 23-year old experiment has worked quite well.

"Cuba, without any Alliance for Progress, without any Caribbean Basin initiative, has a better social situation than any other country in Latin America," Castro said.

"We have no drugs, we have no gambling, we have no prostitution, we have no beggars, we have no unemployment," he said.

U.S. officials said the latter claim was inaccurate, citing independent sources who contend that 150,000 Cubans are unemployed out of a population of 10 million.

The interview, the first with an American since 1979, was conducted by Randall Robinson, exective director of TransAfrica, a black American group which advocates liberal U.S. policies in Africa and the Caribbean. The interview appeared in the organization's new publication, TransAfrica Forum Issue Brief.

Castro's overall tone toward the United States generally was moderate. He reaffirmed his support for Mexico's efforts to bring the United States and Cuba into a dialogue but said "one would not be able to even dream" about improved relations if the United States were to pursue an "interventionist path" in Central America.

He made no reference to U.S. allegations of Cuban weapons shipments to rebels in El Salvador and elsewhere.

His harshest comments were directed at Reagan's Caribbean Basin plan, which attempts to promote development through trade preferences, investment incentives and economic assistance. His comments indicated an intimate knowledge of details of the program.

Castro was particularly scornful of the administration's initial proposal for $350 million in balance of payments assistance for the region, most of it earmarked for Central America.

"Actually, this amount of resources would not solve the problems of even one country (in the region)," he said.

The program is aimed at assisting more than 30 countries but the problems of Haiti alone could not be solved with an amount 10 times larger than what Reagan has proposed for the entire region, Castro said.

The Alliance for Progress, begun during the Kennedy administration in 1961, was far more ambitious but "no problems have been solved; they have sharpened," Castro said.

He said the U.S. intention is to integrate the economies of Central America and Caribbean countries with the American economy, "turning them into a sort of Puerto Rico."

The U.S. attempt to develop Puerto Rico through investment incentives "has failed totally and absolutely," Castro said, noting that the island has high unemployment and a high emigration rate to the American mainland.

He said experience has shown that Reagan's initiative cannot solve the problems of Central America and the Caribbean.

China Tightens Import Rules

PEKING (UPI) — In a major policy statement on its growing trade relationship with the West, China said Saturday it must protect its industry from a deluge of foreign imports.

The Communist Party's official newspaper Peoples Daily said broad contacts with other nations should continue — but not at the expense of China's own industrial production and development.

"Imports of television sets, radio cassette recorders and wristwatches on our nation's market is hurting our own same products and becoming more apparent," the front page editorial said.

The editorial, the first policy statement on future controls of imports into China, said the United States, Japan and the European Common Market all have policies designed to protect and promote their own products.

It said China should strictly control those imports which can be manufactured locally.

The Peoples Daily last week reported Chinese industry was concerned with the flood of Western electronic gadgets, machinery and automobiles, appearing to suggest protectionist policies were being considered as the communist nation comes to grip with a growing trade relationship with the West.

Protecting industry at home is "becoming more and more sharply in front of us," said the editorial sanctioned by the nation's leadership.

Official newspaper commentaries recently have debated the usefulness of foreign products and their detrimental influences in what some Western economic analysts see as a debate within the Chinese government on national self-reliance.

Bitter memories of colonial-type controls by Westerners in China before the Communist revolution in 1949 set the nation on a strict policy of self-reliance until the current moderate leadership placed economics first and politics second in a crash course toward modernization.

Agreements with the West should concentrate on importation of advanced equipment and technology not already available by Chinese suppliers, the editorial said.

If increased imports obstruct national industrial development, then they "should be controlled," the editorial said.

Ex-Mexican Official Held In Car-Theft Ring

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The former head of Mexico's national security agency was in a U.S. prison Saturday after his arrest by the FBI in connection with an international car-theft ring, officials said.

Miguel Nazar Haro, 57, was taken into custody Friday after he finished 12 hours of testimony to a federal grand jury investigating the theft ring Friday. He was being held at the federal Metropolitan Correctional Center in lieu of $200,000 bail.

Earlier in the week, Nazar Haro, accompanied by his attorney, announced he had filed an $11 million libel suit against Time magazine over an article that termed him a "conspirator" in the thefts. The article claimed he would not be prosecuted because he was an valued informant for the CIA.

Nazar Haro, who for the last four years headed Mexico's Directorate of Federal Security, has denied both claims.

The dispute about Nazar Haro's alleged link to the CIA led to the firing by President Reagan earlier this month of William H. Kennedy, the U.S. attorney in San Diego.

Reagan was angered that Kennedy confirmed for a San Diego newspaper reports that the Justice Department had blocked an indictment of Nazar Haro because he was a key CIA informant on Mexican and Central American affairs. Kennedy had been asked by federal authorities to resign but refused, insisting what he said was true.

Nazar Haro told reporters Thursday he had helped the United States government on criminal matters when asked, but he denied being a paid informant for the CIA.

Investigators in San Diego have said that Nazar Haro was implicated in the car-theft ring by his own security agents, who were among 14 men convicted and sentenced in the case.

The theft ring has been blamed for stealing as many as 4,000 expensive cars, most of them from Southern California, and taking them to Mexico.

An affidavit attached to the federal complaint on which he was arrested alleged that Nazar Haro received three stolen cars from the theft ring in 1979.

Asked Friday if Nazar Haro's arrest indicated a shift in policy toward the former Mexican official, federal prosecutor Robert Rose said only, "The complaint was filed with the approval of the Justice Department."

Nazar Haro's attorney, Harold Rhoden, criticized the timing of the arrest.

"This is not the way it should have been done," Rhoden said. "If they planned to arrest him, they should have told him from the beginning."

Hunt's Office Is Largest User Of State Aircraft

By GENE WANG

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Trips by Gov. James B. Hunt Jr. and aides on state planes, including a visit to New Orleans to see North Carolina win the NCAA tournament, cost taxpayers $17,733 the first three months of this year.

A United Press International study of state flight logs shows the governor's office was the largest single user of the state's twin-engine airplane and three helicopters.

The Commerce Department, which operates the aircraft for economic development, spent $24,437 for air travel, but that involved trips by five different divisions within the department.

The Industrial Development division had the largest tab — $17,288 — followed by the International Development office with a $3,319. The Motion Pictures and Television office used state aircraft for $1,579 in trips; department officials accounted for $1,560 and the Economic Development agency spent $690.

The official flight logs for state aircraft list travel time, destinations and number of passengers. They do not reflect the purpose of trips, but are used by the Commerce Department to bill appropriate agencies.

Although the logs listed $17,733 in flights carrying Hunt or his aides, they do not reveal whether all trips were billed to the governor's office.

The logs do show Hunt and four passengers flew to New Orleans March 27 for the NCAA finals and returned March 30. That 6.8 hours of flying time cost $2,040 at the $300 hourly rate, but the total does not include landing and tie-down fees for the plane during the visit or food and lodging expenses for the pilots.

Brent Hackney, Hunt's deputy news secretary, said the trip was not a vacation.

"He was down there to represent the state for the NCAA tournament," Hackney said. "He also spent the better part of one day touring an oil rig."

There has been increasing interest in recent years in exploratory oil and gas drilling off the North Carolina coast.

Two of the plane trips were to take Cabinet members to a series of public hearings on the federal block grant program in late March.

Hackney said some of Hunt's plane trips also involved his work with a Democratic Party commission that recommended reforms in the presidential nominating process. The cost of those flights will be reimbursed by the Democratic National Committee.

The flight records also show Lt. Gov. James C. Green made three trips in the state plane at a cost of $930 and spent another 18.6 hours traveling in state helicopters.

The Commerce Department absorbed the cost of Green's helicopter trips, which would have cost $3,627 based on a charge of $195 per hour.

The state, until late last year, had provided free helicopter travel for the governor, lieutenant governor and House speaker and billed them for non-department use of the plane.

The department began billing Hunt's office for helicopter use on Dec. 1, but Deputy Commerce Secretary Victor Barfield said Green is still getting free trips because "he doesn't have a travel budget and most of his travel is at our request."

Barfield said the question of billing Green for non-Commerce helicopter travel "will have to be addressed in the lieutenant governor's budget at some point if the price of fuel stays up."

Agriculture Commissioner James Graham spent $2,764 in the first three months of the year for two helicopter trips and two airplane trips.

Graham's office and other state agencies are billed $315 an hour for helicopter use, a higher rate than the Commerce Department charges for its own use and that of the governor, lieutenant governor and speaker.

His costliest trip was $1,543 for a Feb. 1 trip to eastern North Carolina. Graham flew from Raleigh to Lumberton and then to Bethel, a Pitt County town 127 miles north. Later that day he flew back to the Robeson County town of Fairmont. The logs show the helicopter flew empty to Lumberton and then back to Fairmont, where it picked up Graham and flew him back to Raleigh.

Nerves Affect Ovaries

Nerves may play an important role in the activity of human ovaries, organs long thought to be controlled exclusively by hormones, according to a new study announced by an East Carolina University medical researcher.

It appears that ovaries are linked directly to the vagus nerve, one of 12 major nerves from the brain, and to the nerves of the spinal column, said Dr. Hubert W. Burden, professor of anatomy at the ECU School of Medicine.

Burden announced his findings in New Orleans last week at the annual meeting of the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology.

The findings may mean that women given drugs to alter brain function may also find that the drugs are altering their ovarian activity, Burden said.

Scientists have known for years that hormones produced by the pituitary gland, which lies just beneath the brain, regulate the release of ripe eggs every month in women of reproductive age. The role of the nervous system until now was thought to be insignificant, Burden said.

Technical advances in the ability to trace nerves, however, have sparked renewed interest in their function in the reproductive system, he said.

The research team, supported by the National Institutes of Health, injected a radioactive substance into rat ovaries and followed the path of the chemical back into nerve cells, Burden said. Rat ovaries are anatomically similar to human ones.

While the study supports the view that nerves have a greater impact on ovaries than was previously believed, Burden said hormones are still considered the primary controllers.

Fire Hits Ice Cream Plant

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A morning fire melted metal beams and frozen ice cream at the Pine State Creamery Co.'s main processing plant Saturday, sending thick black smoke billowing over downtown Raleigh, fire officials reported.

More than 30 firefighters and six fire trucks labored for about an hour to bring the blaze under control, containing it to an ice cream section where popsicles and other frozen dairy goods are manufactured and packaged.

About an hour and a half after the fire started, the roof began buckling and a supporting brick wall cracked in several places, said Chief J.E. Warren.

"The intense heat inside the building melted the metal beams," he said.

The fire was believed to have started in a room containing electrical panels for the plant, said Harry Prevette, who is in charge of quality control for the plant.

James C. Jackson of Killo Pest Control was in the building with his son when the fire started around 7 a.m.

"We kept smelling smoke in the milk room," he said. "We went in the ice cream room and the smoke was rolling in so bad we had to get out."

Although no injuries were reported, firefighters entered the building wearing gas masks to protect them from potentially dangerous fumes from ammonia used in refrigeration at the plant.

R.B. Redfern, Pine State vice president, said there was no estimate of damage to the plant.

The fire was the third at the creamery in six years.

Float off to sleep tonight.

It matches the density of your own body, which is mostly water, by the way, so you'll immediately feel more comfortable than you ever felt in bed before. A waterbed conforms to your body's contours and temperature too. It doesn't restrict circulation like your ordinary mattress, so you won't toss and turn all night. And because it gives you the support you need where you need it, it eliminates the cause of backache and other nighttime-related problems including insomnia.

You can forget sleeping on a cloud. No cloud ever offered the gentle support and warmth of a waterbed. Come "test rest" one at Phillip Manning and let us put you to sleep.

Need a New Roof?

Now You Can Get 5 Extra Years For No Extra Money.

Certainteed Fiberglass Shingles are warranted for 20 years — 5 years longer than ordinary asphalt. And they're priced the same!

The fiberglass mat makes the big difference. A fiberglass mat repels moisture more effectively than the mat under regular asphalt shingles. The result is an exceptionally tough, durable, longer-lasting roof.

And these shingles feature a U.L. Class A rating for fire resistance. Their fiberglass base offers extra protection against external fire. In fact, they're one of the most economical Class A roofs you can buy. It's just one more benefit of fiberglass that adds to the roof's built-in safety and durability.

$7.60 Per Bundle

Self-sealing adhesive strips are activated by the sun, bonding the shingles into a single, weatherproof shield that can resist winds up to 60 miles per hour. The shingles are also resistant to blistering and warping, "cupping," and decay. All these features combine to produce a very rugged (and economical) roof.

Just because they're tough doesn't mean they're not attractive. These handsome shingles are available in a variety of colors, from basic black to earthtone shades. (Stop by today and see for yourself.)

A Daily Reflector Review

Rose High Offers An Enchanted Evening

Go to see Rose High's production of "South Pacific," if only for the "Honeybun" number. Mary Beth Cunningham, as Nellie Forbush, is a standout, with all the charming vitality the number requires, but she's equally matched by Shaun Wallace as Luther Billis in his island female costume as he dragstrips through the number with her. I fully expected him to bust out (no pun intended) into "I've Got A Loverly Bunch of Coconuts", even though that song isn't in the show.

Rogers and Hammerstein's "South Pacific" has become a classic, with its story of true love hindered by prejudice, and its unforgettable songs — such as "Some Enchanted Evening," "A Cockeyed Optimist," and "Younger Than Springtime."

For sheer entertainment, this production is very good. If the performers had really listened to what their characters were saying, rather than just reciting-singing their lines, it could have been great.

Tim Shank, with just the right touch of accent and good looks, epitomized Nellie's middle-aged hero-lover Emile, but needed a touch of aging for his role. He was very good (I think I'm in love with him myself), and his takeoff on Nellie's "I'm Gonna Wash That Man Right Outta My Hair" delighted the audience.

Mary Beth Cunningham (Nellie) lit up the stage in "I'm in Love With a Wonderful Guy" and "Honeybun". If she could get that vivacity into the opening scene of the show, it might help set a faster pace for the whole production. She's a delight.

But there's a scene stealer loose — Shaun Wallace (Luther). He's got a good voice, sharp comedy timing, a flair and vibrancy that perks up the entire show when he's onstage. He and his crew of sailors do a knock-out job on "There Is Nothin' Like A Dame" and "Bloody Mary."

Kim Lingerfelt does a good job of portraying Bloody Mary, delivering her songs in an expressive manner. "The Happy Talk" number was charmingly staged. Too bad, we couldn't hear it — nor the lovely words of "Bali Ha'i", since she was virtually drowned out by the orchestra — a problem with several other numbers in the show.

Other performers of particular note were Brian Berryman as Captain Brackett, Chip Little as Lt. Cable, Jim Hickmon as Commander Harbison, and Carmela Weber as Liat.

All in all, director Betty Topper and Rose High have risen once again above apparently insurmountable odds to put on a heck of a show in spite of pitifully inadequate facilities. There are some rough spots, yes, but the achievement stands: on the floor of the gym, they've raised outstanding, original sets, staged one major musical number after another (with great choreography by Sherryl Mercer), challenged the creative arts — drama, dance, music, art — and in one fell swoop brought it all together for a special night's entertainment. Good show, Rose High!

Can you imagine what all this talent and determination could accomplish in a real auditorium? They've proved they deserve it.

Final performance is this evening at 8 p.m. — in the Rose High gym, complete with bleacher seating. Bring your cushions ... and cheers.

Rose High Plans Observance Of North Carolina Heritage Week

Rose High School is observing North Carolina Heritage Week beginning Monday and concluding Friday. The event, established in 1970, seeks to highlight North Carolina's historic and artistic values by encouraging schools and colleges to give special emphasis to the study of Tar Heel history and culture.

This year, the theme is "Retold Tales: A Look at Tarheel Memories." Some of the activities scheduled for the week are:

•Monday — North Carolina folk art displays with materials loaned by Woodside Antiques in Greenville and Ye Ole House in Farmville, and screening of the movie, "Beautiful Balloon Ride," a travalogue of North Carolina tourist sites.

•Tuesday — Dr. Karen Baldwin, Dr. Jim Kirkland and Dr. Paul Dowell, all of the English department at East Carolina University, will give a presentation on N.C. folklore and folktales.

•Wednesday — Dina Hill, an arahaeological technician with the state Division of Archives and History, will speak on exploration of shipwrecks off the coast of North Carolina. Also, the film "Down to the Monitor" will be shown, and the Green Grass Cloggers will give an outdoor performance during the lunch hour.

•Thursday — Early craft demonstrations will highlight the morning's activities. Organized by Myra Sexauer and the Greenville Recreation Department, the sessions will show spinning and quilting. In the afternoon, Mary Ann Pennington, director of the Greenville Museum of Art, will display and speak on North Carolina art such as Jugtown pottery and famous etchings.

•Friday — A presentation in business and industry in North Carolina will conclude the week's activities. Ed Walker, president of the Greenville-Pitt County Chamber of Commerce, will make the presentation.

The activites will be held in the Rose High Media Center. They have been coordinated by Brenda Lewis, media specialist, and Dorothy Brannan, social studies teacher.

On The Young Side

By Lisa Wang

Maragret Cherry and Lisa Kitrell have been chosen to participate this summer in Girl's State on the campus of UNC-Greensboro. Sponsored by the women's American Legion, the program is designed to encourage leadership and involvement in government for rising senior girls.

Maragret and Lisa were selected based on qualities of leadership potential and enthusiasm. They also demonstrated ability to fit into the community group. The session will begin on June 22.

In an essay contest sponsored by the Greenville-Pitt County Board of Realtors, Cathrine White won first place and $100, while Mont Brown received $25 for third place. Their essays will now advance to the state level to be judged by the North Carolina Association of Realtors.

Open to students in grades 10-12, the contest's topic was, "How Losing Private Property Rights Would Affect My Future, and Why These Rights Should Be Observed." Essays were judged on grasp of concept, point of view, writing style and creativity, and grammar. Formal presentation of awards was made April 19 at Carolina East Mall.

First place at the regional high school math contest at Elizabeth City State University was captured by Angie Michel, while Margaret Cherry won forth. Teresa McLawhorn and Suzanne Wille received honorable mentions. Angie will now compete in the state math contest in Raleigh.

Another first place for Rose came in the field of art as Jessica Murphy claimed first in the Wachovia Bank Art Competition in the 10-12 grade division. Over one-hundred pieces of art from twenty-eight city, county and private schools in the Greenville-Pitt County area were displayed in the competition, which was presented as part of the Eastern Carolina Arts Festival. For first place, Jessica received a $50 savings bond.

Donnie Baker won second place in a citizenship essay contest sponsored by the Greenville Civitan club. Written on the topic, "Influence in Government — Are your rights as a private citizen being threatened by special interest groups?" Donnie's essay was judged for orginality, organization, clarity and mechanics of composition. Any 11th or 12th grader was eligible to enter.

A team composed of Curt Carman, Alayna Keller and Catrina Logan competed in the math contest sponsored by Wayne Community College in Goldsboro. Alayna won third place and will advance to the state contest.

New Key Club officers for next year were elected at a meeting conducted Wednesday night. They are: John Little, president; Jay Mahoney, vice president; Kipper Hair, secretary; John Ormond, treasurer-historian; and Frank Layne, sergeant-at-arms.

East Carolina Airs Ball Out In Debut Of 'I'

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

For several years now, the fans of East Carolina have been screaming for the Pirates to "put the ball in the air."

Last night, the crowd of several thousand who attended the annual Purple-Gold scrimmage game in Ficklen Stadium, should have been happy. The ball was put up time after time, as the Pirates unveiled their new "I" offense with a potent passing attack.

First string quarterback Greg Stewart threw one touchdown pass and hit on 11 of 20 tries for 193 yards to lead the Purple to a 36-7 win over the Gold. And Stewart's backup for the game, sophomore Kenny Gibbs showed some surprises too, hitting on 10 of 13 passes for two touchdowns and 129 yards in passing.

Second string quarterback Kevin Ingram of the Gold didn't have as good luck, but obviously drew the worst end of it in trying to scramble around behind the line. He hit on only three of 11 for 44 yards, while backup Larry Brobst hit on three of eight for 29 yards.

It all totaled up to Purple hitting on 21 of 33 tries for 322 yards and three touchdowns, while the Gold hit on six of 19 for 73 yards.

"The Gold lost some people right at the end of practice that could have made it closer," Coach Ed Emory, who watched the game from the press box, said. "The Purple ended up with most of the defensive starters, and the protection on the Gold was the big difference. Ingram didn't really have enough time to get off his passes."

But Emory was also pleased with the play of Stewart, and his group of receivers. Tight end Norwood Vann led the way with six catches for 110 yards. Transfer Robert Pittman, Vann's backup, caught four for 37 yards and two touchdowns, including one on the final play of the game.

The Purple got two quick scores to grab a 14-0 lead before the Gold got going. Fullback Scott Lewis scored on a one-yard plunge, and Rameriz pulled in a five-yard pass (one of three receptions for 39 yards) for the second touchdown.

Purple later added a 22-yard field goal by Billy Parker, a five-yard scoring run by Stewart, and Gibbs' two passes to Pittman, of 11 and nine yards.

The lone Gold touchdown was a one-yard run by Earnest Byner in the late stages of the first period.

"I was a little suprised that the Gold didn't have more offense," Emory said. The Gold did, however, outrush the Purple, 147-99, on seven less tries. And Emory defended Ingram's play, saying that he had been close to Stewart all spring. "He made some things happen in the first half, but he may have forced the ball up too quickly in the second when his protection broke down."

The tailbacks were practically unseen tonight, as they ran the ball only on option plays and were thrown to only once. "That won't happen during the fall," Emory promised. "I expect our tailbacks to run the ball 18-22 times a game."

He said that the Pirates emphasized the passing game in the contest to give it some time under fire under full game conditions. He also noted that the quarterbacks have not been protected all spring. "We wanted to give them a fair chance. Their reaction will be different if they know that they're not going to get hit." He added, however, that they will be protected in the fall, to prevent injuries.

He was also pleased with the job Gibbs did in reserve, and noted Isiah Hill, a reserve fullback, did a good job. "We really will have to see the film to evaluate everyone's performance."

Purple got an early break less than two minutes into the game when James Martin intercepted an Ingram pass and returned it 32 yards to the Gold nine, setting up the first score. Lewis got that in three plays, the last of a yard and Parker added the PAT for a 7-0 lead with 9:32 showing.

Stewart guided the Purple in again on its next drive. Taking over on its own 32, the Purple moved 68 yards in 10 plays, including a 16-yard pass to Vann, a 17-yarder to Ramirez and a 20-yarder to Will Barrett, former Rose High School player. A 32-yard touchdown pass to Vann was called back for holding just before the pass to Barrett, which set up the five-yard toss from Stewart to Ramirez for the score. This time, Chuck Weinstein added the PAT for a 14-0 lead with 3:50 left.

The Gold then marched 75 yards in nine plays for its only score of the game. An 18-yard pass from Ingram to Lloyd Black keyed the drive, followed by a 30-yard scramble by Ingram that put the ball on theone. Byner took it over from there with 32 seconds left and Kurt Larkins cut the margin to 14-7.

The lone score of the second period was Parker's 22-yard field goal, which ended a march which had started on the Purple 28. A 20-yard pass to Barrett opened the drive, and a 21-yard toss to Vann helped it along. But the drive stalled at the six,

EC Softball Team Falls In Finals

GRAHAM — Western Carolina scored three runs in the fourth inning to beat East Carolina, 4-1, and capture the AIAW state softball championship Saturday afternoon.

Western Carolina broke open a scoreless tie in the fourth with a three-run outburst to take a lead it never lost. The Lady Pirates scored a run in the sixth but could get no closer.

ECU opened the day by losing to Western Carolina, 4-1, but then defeated UNC-Charlotte, 17-0, to advance to the championship game.

The Lady Pirates took a 1-0 lead in the third against Western Carolian but saw the Lady Catamounts score twice in the fourth and add single runs in the fifth and sixth to capture the win.

Mitzi Davis was two for three and Cynthia Shepard was two for four to lead ECU.

ECU came back to wallop UNCC in the second game of the day. The Lady Pirates led, 2-0, after the first inning and then upped their margin to 5-0 with three runs in the fourth.

ECU put the game away one inning later when the Lady Pirates erupted for 12 runs.

Yvonne Williams was two for three to lead ECU. Davis, Shepard and Jo Landa Clayton were all two for four. Davis and Shepard had three RBI each.

Padres Beat Braves For Tenth Straight, 6-4

ATLANTA (AP) — A two-run throwing error by pitcher Rick Camp allowed San Diego to score the go-ahead runs as the Padres downed the Atlanta Braves 6-4 for their 10th straight victory Saturday night.

The Padres, trailing 4-2, took the lead with a four-run eighth inning rally off Atlanta's two star relievers, Gene Garber and Camp.

Broderick Perkins drew a one-out walk and pinch-hitter Randy Bass was hit by a pitch and then yielded to pinch-runner Dave Edwards.

Gene Richards singled to left, scoring Perkins, and Juan Bonilla follwed with a bad-hop single past short that scored Edwards and tied the game at 4-4. Richards reached third and Bonilla second on the throw to the plate and Garry Templeton was walked intentionally, loading the bases.

Ruppert Jones then hit a high chopper to Camp, who threw into the dirt past the plate, allowing both Richards and Bonilla to score.

The 10th consecutive victory tied a club record for San Diego set in 1978.

It was the third loss in a row for the Braves, who had opened the season with 13 consecutive victories.

Richards doubled and later scored on Templeton's sacrifice fly in the first inning and the Padres added a run in the seventh when Templeton doubled and scored on Sixto Lezcano's single.

UNC-W Bops Pirates, 5-3

Don Stevenson doubled home three runs in the eighth inning to power UNC-Wilmington to a 5-3 victory over East Carolina Saturday evening in a college baseball game.

The game was tied at 2-2 going into the top of the eighth when the Seahawks loaded the bases and Stevenson ripped a three-run double down the rightfield line to give UNC-W a 5-2 lead.

Paul Murr started the inning with a single to right and went to second when Chris Cubbage walked. Both Murr and Cubbage advance a base on a sacrifice bunt by Clyde Holley.

ECU's Bill Wilder, who went the full nine innings and was tagged with his sixth loss in 11 decisions, then walked Johnny Slaughter intentionally to load the bases.

Wilder fanned Roger Hudson and went 3-2 on Stevenson, the #7 hitter, before the UNC-W centerfielder unleashed his double.

ECU did not threaten in the bottom of the inning but managed to score once in the ninth before Mike Sorrell struck out to end the game.

Fran Fitzgerald doubled to center to open the ninth. Pinch hitter Jay Carraway stuck out and Kelly Robinette grounded to first, moving Chuck Bishop, who was running for Fitzgerald, to third.

Robert Wells then hit a 2-2 pitch up for a single to score Bishop and make it 5-3. Sorrell then struck out swinging for the final out.

The loss drops ECU to 26-12. UNC-W is now 25-14.

Fitzgerald, Wells and John Hallow all had two hits for ECU. Fitzgerald and Robinette had doubles. Murr and Stevenson had two hits for UNC-W. Both of Stevenson's hits were doubles. Tommy Phillips also had a double.

The Pirates jumped out to a 1-0 lead in the first inning when Todd Evans singled to left to score David Wells. Wells walked to open the inning and went to second on Hallow's single. Todd Hendley then hit into a double play to end the inning.

UNC-W quickly countered, scoring two runs in the top of the second. Slaughter walked and went to second when Hudson reached on a fielder's choice. Slaughter went to third on Stevenson's fly out to center.

Phillips followed with a double to score both Slaughter and Hudson and UNC-W led, 2-1.

The Pirates had runners at first and second with two out in the fourth but could not score. In the sixth, Hallow singled and stole second but was left stranded.

ECU finally tied the game in the seventh when, with two outs, Robinette doubled to left and scored on Robert Wells' double to the right-centerfield gap, making it 2-2.

One inning later, however, the Seahawks struck for three runs and from there they held on for the win.

ECU travels to N.C. Wesleyan Monday.

Reflector Will Honor Athletes

The Daily Reflector will annually honor the top high school and collegiate athletes of Pitt County, it was announced today.

The "Athlete of the Year" awards, to be presented at the end of the school year, will honor the top male and female athletes from one of the high schools in Greenville or Pitt County, and the top male and female athletes who either attend East Carolina or are residents of Pitt County.

For the high school awards, nominees will be requested from the high schools located in the city and county, and the sports staff of The Daily Reflector will make the selection of the top winners.

For the collegiate athletes, nominations will be solicited from East Carolina and the public at large, to insure that athletes attending schools away from the area receive proper attention. Again, the sports staff will make the final selection from those nominated.

Individual trophies will be presented to the four honorees, and a permanent plaque with their names inscribed will be on display at The Daily Reflector offices.

Individuals wishing to nominate a collegiate athlete may do so at this time. Nominations should include details as to the nominees worthiness for

DON SWEETING

East Carolina Golfer Said 'Overburdened' With Potential

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

When he was a sophomore at Chapel Hill High School, Don Sweeting was cut from the golf team. Undaunted, Sweeting went to work at a local golf course looking to improve his game.

The improvement has been amazing. Since the spring of 1979, Sweeting has seen his name go from the unlisted on his high school roster to the top spot on the leader board at the Old Domionion Invitational.

Not bad for someone who did not take up golf until he was 17. Unlike many of his college competitors, Sweeting did not spend all his waking hours as a kid on the links.

Basketball, not golf, was Sweeting's first love. But, golf may be his last — and most enduring. Especially if East Carolina coach Bob Helmick is correct in his assessment of Sweeting's potential.

"Sweeting is overburdened with talent," Helmick said. "He's got tremendous potential and capablity. If he progresses the next couple of years like he's done the last two he could be as good a college golfer as there is."

Sweeting put that potential on display last weekend in the ODU Invitational at the Seascape Golf Course. Sweeting shot a record-breaking 64 in the first round and followed that with a 73 to win the tournament with a record five-under-par 137.

"He just got everything going together," Helmick said. "When he's got it going he can be awesome."

Four weeks earlier Sweeting shot a 67 at The Palmetto Classic, a round that included two eagles and two bogeys, one on the final hole. "I knew what was going on and I was excited," Sweeting said. "(At ODU) I had a smooth flow going and it was more low key."

Sweeting's was the first tournament triumph by an ECU golfer since 1972 when Eddie Pinnix captured the Camp Lejeune Invitational. The victory also lowered Sweeting's stroke average to 75.0 for 22 rounds this season.

"This year has been a great learning year, as far as my confidence and my swing," Sweeting said. "Bob (Helmick) has helped me a lot with my attitude this spring.

"Every once in a while I'll come up and hit a bad shot and it just gets me down and I don't try as hard," Sweeting added. "But Bob's helped me with that."

"He has not been consistently getting it going," Helmick said. "But, he's got the right mental attitude ... the confidence, which I refer to as a postive attitude.

"He thinks positive," Helmick said. "He thinks he can make every putt and that he can hit a drive 150 feet away exactly right."

• •

Two years of high school golf hardly gives a golfer the experience a college coach looks for as he scans the greens and fairways for recruits. Still, with little more than that on his resume, Sweeting searched for a school.

"I really didn't know if I'd be able to play college golf," he said. "I sent out a lot of letters."

Only two were returned — neither of which had the answer Sweeting was looking for. Having applied at North Carolina, N.C. State and ECU, Sweeting decided to journey to Greenville for a business degree — and, perhaps, a chance to play golf.

Sweeting wasted no time in introducing himself to Helmick. "I went out to talk to him and asked him about 20 questions and he let me try out," he recalled. "At the tryout there were some better scores than mine, but he decided to keep me."

Not only that, Helmick took Sweeting to ECU's first tournament of the year — the Methodist College Invitational. The decision paid off. Sweeting shot a 76 and a 79 for the Pirates' second best score.

"You can look at a golfer and just about tell what kind of golfer he is," Helmick said. "You can tell if he'll ever be able to break 80 (or if that's his limit).

"Sweeting is capable of really getting it going," Helmick added. "He needs some refinement in his iron game, but he's dedicated his time to his game. It's hard job to be good (at golf) and he's willing to work at it."

Both Helmick and Sweeting agree that Sweeting's willingness to practice is a key to his success.

Rampettes Set New School Relay Mark

NEW BERN — Greenville Rose set a school record in the 400-meter relay as the Rampettes finished fourth in the Colonial Classic track meet Saturday afternoon.

Jacksonville won the meet with 70 points followed by Jacksonville with 70, Goldsboro with 57½ and Wilson Fike with 30. Rose was next with 25 points.

The team of Shelia Murphy, Sonya Williams, Angie Atkinson and Judy Daniels ran a 49.41 to finish second overall in the 400-meter relay and break the school record.

Rose also finished first in the sprint medley relay.

Rose results:

Long jump — 6. Angie Atkinson (R) 16-4½; 400 relay — 2. Rose (Shelia Murphy, Sonya Williams, Angie Atkinson, Judy Daniels) 49.41 school record; 800 relay — 3. UNC Defeats W&L In Lacrosse

LEXINGTON, Va. (AP) — Top-ranked North Carolina overcame a Washington & Lee slowdown and snapped a 7-7 tie with three straight goals in the fourth period for an 11-8 lacrosse victory Saturday over the No. 8-ranked Generals.

Consecutive goals by Mack Ford, Jeff Homire and Dave Wingate gave the Tar Heels a 10-7 lead with 4:38 left and the defending NCAA champions, 8-0 this season, held on for their 20th consecutive victory in the last two years.

W&L, 6-3, took a 3-0 lead in the first period on goals by Rob Staugaitis, Jeff Mason and Dave Nickels, but the Tar Heels scored three goals in the last three minutes of the quarter to pull even and the game was a seesaw affair after that.

The Generals resorted during the first three periods to a slowdown offense which consisted of isolating a player in a corner of the field with five teammates surrounding him with interlocked arms so the Tar Heels couldn't get the ball. W&L abandoned the slowdown in the final period.

Homire and Wingate had three goals each and Ford two for the Tar Heels. Michael Burnett had one goal and three assists and Wingate had an assist.

The Generals were led by John Sancilio and John Doub with two goals each and Staugaitis with one goal and two assists.

Rose set a meet record in the 6,400-meter relay and the distance medley relay.

The team of John Byrd, John Ormond, Kenny Smith, and Harry Williams ran the 6400 in 18:00.2 to break the old mark of 18:14 set by Rose last year. Bryd, Smith, Williams and Tyrone Forbes combined to run a 10:31.8 in the distance medley to eclipse the old record of 10:34.4 set by Broughton in 1976.

Cardinals Take 12th Straight

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The free-swinging St. Louis Cardinals continue to take the season one game at a time, and that suits former Phillies Lonnie Smith and Dane Iorg.

Smith drove in two insurance runs with an eighth-inning single and Iorg went 4-for-4 to lead the Cardinals to their 12th straight triumph, a 7-4 victory over Philadelphia on Saturday.

"I like to play against the Phillies," said Iorg, who made his major league debut with Philadelphia in 1977 before being traded to St. Louis the same year. "I like to beat them."

Smith, traded to the Cardinals in the off-season, said he may have been trying too hard against his former teammates.

"I had been looking for too perfect a pitch in my first four at-bats. But that last time up, I was able to think the ball over the middle for two runs," said Smith, who had three RBI.

St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog said the Cardinals were unconcerned about prolonging their victory string. "Nobody's thinking about the streak. We're not doing anything different. We're just taking them one at a time."

Philadelphia Manager Pat Corrales, whose team slipped to 3-11, was quiet after the game. "You saw it," he said. "We threw it away."

The Cardinals snapped a 4-4 tie in the eighth inning with three runs off reliever Ed Farmer, 0-1. With one out, Iorg reached on an infield hit. Pinch-runner David Green stole second and, after Ken Oberkfell was intentionally walked, Ozzie Smith singled to load the bases.

Orlando Sanchez, pinch-hitting for reliever Doug Bair, 1-0, drove in one run with a ground out. Lonnie Smith then singled in Oberkfell and Ozzie Smith.

The St. Louis rally spoiled a fine hitting effort by Philadelphia catcher Bo Diaz, who knocked in all four Philadelphia runs with two homers and two doubles. He had staked Philadelphia to a 2-0 lead in the second. He followed a single by Garry Maddox with his third homer of the year, off St. Louis starter Joaquin Andujar.

The Cardinals, closing in on the team's record 14-game winning streak set in 1935, scored in the fifth on singles by Iorg, Oberkfell and Lonnie Smith. Iorg and Oberkfell singled in runs in the sixth.

MONTREAL (AP) — John Stearns drove in a run with a seventh-inning double, and Charlie Puleo combined with two relivers on a four-hit shutout as the New York Mets beat the Montreal Expos 1-0 Saturday.

Stearns' drive down the left-field line off loser Ray Burris, 0-3, drove in Gary Rajsich, who had doubled off the right-field wall. The hits were the third and fourth off Burris, who previously had not allowed a baserunner to reach second.

CHICAGO (AP) — Dave Parker's run-scoring double keyed a two-run seventh inning that helped Pittsburgh overcome a five-run deficit, and Don Robinson pitched the Pirates to a 8-5 victory over the Chicago Cubs on Saturday.

The Pirates broke through for three runs in the fifth, added another in the sixth on Dale Berra's first homer and finally went ahead in the seventh.

Robinson worked 62-3 innings in relief of Ross Baumgarten, giving up three hits for his first victory this year. He also went 3-for-4 at the plate and drove in a pair of insurance runs in the ninth with a single.

Cincinnati 3
Houston 2

HOUSTON (AP) — Dave Concepcion and Johnny Bench drove home first-inning runs with a double and single to lead the Cincinnati Reds to a 3-2 victory over the Houston Astros Saturday night.

The Reds jumped on Astros starter Bob Knepper, 1-2, for all three runs while Frank Pastore, 2-1, was shutting out the Astros through the first five innings.

Ed Milner led off Cincinnati's first inning with a strikeout and Ron Oester singled prior to the consecutive RBI hits by Concepcion and Bench. Former Astros center fielder Cesar Cedeno then hit into a double play to end the inning.

The Astros also ended the next two innings with double plays before the Reds pushed across their third run in the fourth on Mike Vail's single after Cedeno had doubled to center field.

Pastore allowed only three hits and did not permit a Houston baserunner past first base until the fifth inning when he lost his shutout. Denny Walling's doubled to the warning track in right field, went to third on Terry Puhl's fly ball and scored on Ray Knight's sacrifice fly to Cedeno in center field.

The second Houston run came home on Alan Ashby's RBI single in the ninth off reliever Bob Shirley. Tom Hume came in to get the last three outs and post his fourth save.

But, there's just enough polyester to give it strength and hold it's shape. It's great if you travel. you don't have to carry an extra suit and you don't go into climate shock when you step off the plane.

Aikens Injured

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Kansas City Royals have put first baseman Willie Aikens on the 15-day disabled list because of a slight muscle tear in the thumb of his throwing hand.

Aikens, who led the Royals in home runs with 17 last year and was second on the team with 53 RBI, apparently suffered the injury on his right thumb while sliding into second base April 13 in Baltimore.

Lee May, a 15-year veteran, will replace Aikens at first base.

Tigers Roll To Eighth Straight Win

NEW YORK (AP) — Larry Herndon blasted a three-run homer, and Kirk Gibson and Jerry Turner added solo shots as Detroit downed the New York Yankees 7-2 Saturday, giving the Tigers their eighth straight victory and rookie Larry Pashnick his first major-league win.

Herndon's homer gave Detroit its 5-2 margin in the sixth after Gibson had walked and Richie Hebner rapped a broken-bat single off starter and loser Doyle Alexander.

Alexander was making his first appearance after returning to new York from San Francisco in a spring-training trade. Left-hander Shane Rawley relieved him to start the seventh, and George Frazier pitched the ninth, yielding an RBI double to John Wockenfuss and a run-scoring single by Chet Lemon.

Turner's homer, which opened the scoring in the second inning, was a drive to right-center that glanced off the glove of leaping center fielder Jerry Mumphrey and went over the wall.

Gibson hit his third homer of the season in the fourth, giving Detroit a 2-0 lead.

New York made it 2-1 in the fifth when Larry Milbourne opened with a double, took third on Willie Randolph's flyout and scored on Pashnick's wild pitch.

The Yankees, who lost their third straight, scored their second run in the seventh as Randolph drilled a triple that eluded Gibson in center and scored on Mumphrey's single. Kevin Saucier came on and got Ken Griffey and Lou Piniella to ground out, ending the threat and earning his third save.

Boston 8
Toronto 7

TORONTO (AP) — Boston's elder statesman, Carl Yastrzemski, capped a five-run fifth inning with a three-run homer, and the Red Sox withstood a late Toronto rally to defeat the Blue Jays 8-7 Saturday.

Glenn Hoffman ignited the big inning with a single to center against Toronto starter Dave Stieb, 0-2, and moved to third on Rick Miller's single. Gary Allenson chased Hoffman home with a double that scored Hoffman and sent Miller to third.

Jerry Remy's double to left scored Miller, and Allenson went to third. After Dwight Evans grounded out, Allenson was tagged out at the plate when Jim Rice hit into a fielder's choice.

Yastrzemski then followed with his fourth homer of the season and 430th of his major league career, a line drive smash over the fence in right field, to give Boston a 6-0 lead.

The Blue Jays, who lost their fourth consecutive game, rallied for three runs in the sixth off Boston starter Mike Torrez, 1-1. Wayne Nordhagen and Alfredo Griffin drew successive one-out walks and Damaso Garcia doubled them both home. Rance Mulliniks followed with a single to score Garcia before Bob Stanley relieved Torrez and halted the rally.

The Red Sox increased their lead to 8-3 in the eighth on Hoffman's two-run single.

The Blue Jays pulled to within a run in the bottom of the inning when Griffin led off with an infield hit and went to second on Stanley's throwing error. The right-hander then walked Garcia and Mulliniks, and rookie Jesse Barfield greeted reliever Tom Burgmeier with a grand slam over the left field wall, his first four-bagger of the season.

The Red Sox had taken a 1-0 lead in the second on Miller's two-out RBI single.

Chicago 4

BALTIMORE (AP) — Eddie Murray's second home run of the game, a three-run shot in the seventh inning, gave the Baltimore Orioles a 7-4 victory over the Chicago White Sox Saturday night and snapped a nine-game losing streak.

Murray, who leads the American League with a .519 average and 1.000 slugging percentage, has hit safely in 17 consecutive games dating back to last year and has 15 runs batted in for the season. It was the fourth time the switch-hitter had connected from both sides of the plate in the same game.

Al Bumbry's third hit of the game, a single off reliever Kevin Hickey, 1-1, launched the winning rally. After Rich Dauer was retired for the second out, Lamarr Hoyt replaced Hickey.

Gary Roenicke drew a walk after the first two pitches from Hoyt were pitchouts. Murray then hit a high fly into the upper deck, just inside the right field foul line.

Coles Atop Lady Classic

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Tour veteran Janet Coles fired five birdies to take the lead in the rain-interrupted second round of the $150,000 Orlando Lady Classic Saturday, but the leader in the clubhouse after the full 36 holes was second-year pro Chris Johnson.

Coles was 7 under par after 14 holes and was to complete her round early Sunday along with 20 others unable to finish because of rain and darkness.

Johnson, still looking for her first victory, shot a 4-under-par 68 to go with her opening 73 for a 141 total over the rain-swept 6,106-yard Rio Pinar Country Club course. This put Johnson at 1-under with one round to go in the 54-hole event.

Postlewait and Coles were in the same final threesome and had to call it a day after completing only 14 holes. It took them five hours to get that far after two rain delays earlier in the day.

Coles, a one-time winner in her six years on the women's tour, started the day at 2-under, 4 shots behind Postlewait. But while they matched birdies for awhile, Postlewait had a double-bogey on the par-3 fourth hole and a bogey on the 12th to slip one behind Coles.

The two leaders and 19 others who teed off late Saturday will have to take up where they left off early Sunday.

Hoch Up By 1 At Open

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - Scott Hoch birdied three of four holes immediately after the rains came and slogged into a one-stroke lead Saturday in the uncompleted second round of the weather-disrupted $400,000 USF&G-New Orleans Open Golf Tournament that now is set for a Monday finish.

Hoch, 26, a runner-up at Doral this year and seeking his first PGA Tour title, finished two rounds over the rain-soaked Lakewood Country Club course at 136, 8 under par.

It appeared his score would stand up as the lead even though 30 players were stranded by the afternoon rains that flooded the course and extended the tournament's schedule an extra day.

Of those still on the course when play was held up, Steve Melnyk was in the best position. He was 4 under par for the tournament with three holes to play. He and the other 29 who were stopped by the flooded conditions were scheduled to come back Sunday morning to complete their rounds — weather permitting.

And it seemed unlikely the weather would permit. The forecast called for an 80 percent chance of rain continuing Sunday on the course that was saturated by earlier showers that washed out Thursday's play and threw the tournament schedule into disarray.

The completion of the second round now is set to start at 7:30 a.m. Sunday. When all players have completed their rounds, the field will be cut to the low 60 scorers and the third round will begin about 9:30 a.m. The final round now is set for Monday.

While officials were juggling the tournament format, Jack Nicklaus made preparations to return home to Florida.

Nicklaus, who missed the cut in two of his last three starts, again seemed unlikely to have qualified for the final two rounds.

Nicklaus bogeyed his final hole in a driving rain, finishing off a 4-over-par 76 that left him at 147. The cut figure will not be determined until all rounds have been completed, but it appeared highly unlikely Nicklaus would qualify.

"Not at 147," he said.

"I didn't play all that badly," he said. "I'm not unhappy with the way I'm playing. It's just the putting. I had one 3-putt and one 1-putt. You can't score with one 1-putt."

Bob Shearer, the soft-spoken Australian who held the first round lead, managed a 71 and was one off the pace at 137. He was followed by Tom Jenkins, who birdied three of his last four holes for a 69 and a 138 total.

The group at 139 included Larry Ziegler, Gary Koch and Lon Hinkle, who has been out of action with a shoulder injury for about three months. Ziegler had a second round 71, Koch 68 and Hinkle 69.

"I'm getting too far behind," said Watson, already a two-time winner this season.

"I'm feeling more confidence with the way I'm playing," he said. "I hit a lot of shots where I was looking, but I didn't putt very well. The score could have been a little better."

Snead, January Lead Legends

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Sam Snead and Don January charged through the cold and mist with a 10-under-par 60 Saturday to take a commanding eight-shot lead in the Liberty Mutual Legends of Golf Tournament.

The 69-year-old Snead and the 52-year-old January posted a 36-hole best-ball total of 122 which was 18-under-par over soggy Onion Creek Golf Club.

The tournament was shortened to 54-holes after Thursday's round was canceled by heavy rain.

Bob Toski and Japan's Chin-Sei-Ha maneuvered into second place tie with Julius Boros and Miller Barber with an 8-under-par 62 for a 10-under-par 130 thanks to six birdies by the red-hot Toski, regarded at the premier teaching pro in the game.

Boros and Barber birdied the last four holes for a 5-under-par 65 and 130.

Total prize money is $450,000 with the winners splitting a hefty $100,000. Toski's career earnings were only $101,253.

With heavy overnight rains turning portions of the course into a quagmire, the players were allowed to lift and clean the ball even in the rough. The slow greens allowed them to bang their putts hard at the hole.

Snead, who won this tournament five years ago with Gardner Dickinson, had six birdies, including a 35-footer from off the green on No. 12.

January-Snead went out in 31 and came home in 29.

Defending champions Gene Littler and Bob Rosburg, just a shot back when play started on the damp, 55-degree day struggled to a 2-under-par 68 and were nine shots back.

Snead and January finished second in this tournament two years ago, blowing a big lead on the final day. They were eighth in 1981.

"He's the hardest worker we've got," Helmick said. "Anyone can go out and what I call beat a golf ball, but he knows how to practice, which a lot of kids don't know how to do.

"You're average golfer goes out and loosens up (with a few swings) and then says he's ready to play," Helmick said. "He (Sweeting) goes out and hits the ball with a specific thing in mind.

"He may go out and hit a seven-iron for an hour. He may be floating it a bit or may just not be hitting it right. Most kids aren't dedicated enough to do that."

Said Sweeting: "You've got to know how to practice and I think that's one of my strong points. I think that's one of the reasons I've been able to progress so fast."

Helmick said Sweeting's driving and putting are extremely strong but that work is needed on his iron game. "He can drive and putt with the best of them," Helmick said. "And his iron game is good but not what I'd call excellent."

But, Helmick is quick to add, Sweeting still has two years left and some 40 tournaments left at ECU, time enough to improve on his iron game. "If he'll work on his game he can be as good a golfer as there is by the time he's a senior. If he doesn't (work), he won't be."

When told of Helmick's praise, Sweeting smiled. A few moments later he was gone — off to Pinehurst for a weekend of golf.

ECU Unveils 'I'...

A later drive near the end of the half ended when Clint Harris intercepted Stewart in the end zone.

On the first play of the second half, Stewart appear to pass 83-yards to Ramirez, but it was called back. Emory explained: "Each of the teams was allowed to put in two plays (not in the regular play book). The Gold used that reverse by (Carlton) Nelson (which gained 11 yards). And I believe that Ramirez really came off the bench and not the line of scrimmage to catch that one."

And the official proved equal to the task, spotting the illegal play for what it was.

Nevertheless, Stewart drove the team on in in 11 plays, including a 47-yard toss to Vann, a 17-yarder to Ramirez and a 16-yarder to Barrett. The quarterback himself got the final five on a keeper into the left side of the line. Weinstein again kicked for a 24-7 lead.

Purple's next possession also resulted in a touchdown, on a six-play, 61-yard drive. Hill picked up 19 of those on one burst up the middle, and added 16 two plays later. Gibbs then hit Pittman for the final 11, and it was 30-7.

Taking over with 1:56 left at its own 10 after a Smokey Norris interception, the Purple marched in seven plays for the final score on the last play of the game. Gibbs tossed to Deno White for 44 yards to set it up, then hit Pittman for the final nine as time ran out.

"This spring has been very, very intense," Emory said. "We got better physically, better in mental toughness, more physical, and our commitment after the last game (a loss to William & Mary) until now has been great.

"If we can keep these players who played tonight and get our injured healthy, I think we have a chance to be a good football team this fall. Right now we have to put our main emphasis on the books and make sure that everyone does stay eligible."

Asked if he felt that the crowd went away happy with the offensive show, Emory said he wouldn't want to answer for them. "I can say that they saw more passing tonight by the Purple and Gold than they've seen in this stadium for the last ten years.

"My only disappointment is that Nelson, Stefon Adams and Byner really didn't get to show off their talents. But that happens sometimes in games."

For them, the chance to show off their abilities will have to wait until the fall — but then, that's when it really counts anyway.

Hawks Rally Past D.H. Conley

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

HOLLYWOOD — North Lenoir put D.H. Conley on the Coastal Conference critical list Friday afternoon — and Conley coach Richie Wynns is without hope of his Vikings recovering.

DHC, after scoring six runs in the sixth inning to take a 6-3 lead, saw the Hawks rally for four runs in the top of the seventh to escape with a 7-6 win over the Vikings.

The win leaves North Lenoir at 8-6 overall and 3-0 in the conference. Conley falls to 4-8 overall and 0-2 in the conference. The loss was the Vikes' fifth one-run defeat in their last seven games.

"You saw it: We played one-half of an inning and that was it," Wynns said afterwards. "We can sure find a way to give the other team one more run than we're able to score.

"This ends any conference (title) hopes we have," Wynns said. "We knew we could lose two and still have a chance, but when you lose the first conference game by a run and then play a half an inning against a team you know you have to beat...

"That just doesn't show you much...what's the word I'm looking for...much desire out of your ballclub."

Wynns said there will be changes made in the coming weeks "You're gonna see some new faces on the varsity," Wynns said. "We're not gonna go with nine seniors the rest of the way."

The Vikings outhit the Hawks, 10 to five, but North Lenoir took advantage of eight walks by DHC starter Doug McRoy to capture the win. McRoy, a left-hander, struck out eight before being relieved with one run in and the bases loaded in the seventh.

"The walks gave them runners on in every inning but one and that really puts pressure on you," Wynns said. North Lenoir left eight men stranded, the Vikes seven.

Through five innings the Vikings bats were silent and the Hawks led, 3-0. The bats suddenly came to life in the sixth as Conley sent 11 players to plate and banged out seven hits to take a 6-3 lead.

The Vikings' lead was quickly in trouble in the seventh, however, as McRoy walked Lee and Bobby Price to open the inning. Kornegay followed with a single to load the bases.

Batts worked McRoy for a walk after running the count to 3-2 to score Craig Hill, who was running for Lee.

Lassiter replace McRoy and was greeted by a double off the third base bag by Maurice Thorbes. Price and Kornegay scored on the play and Kenny Abrom, who was running for Batts, went to third.

Braxton then sent a long sacrifice fly to center that easily scored Abrom to send the Hawks into the bottom of the seventh with a 7-6 lead.

McRoy popped out and Smith grounded to third to open the inning. Manning managed a walk but was thrown out at second on a throw from catcher Scott Whitley in a hit-and-steal to end the game.

"We were just as flat as we could be today," Wynns said. "We've only played five games in 29 days, and two of those were in the (Pitt County) tournament."

The Vikings were scheduled to play at White Oak Thursday, but after driving to Jacksonville the game was called because of a threat of rain. "We were ready to play (Thursday)," Wynns said. "That took something out of us."

The Hawks wasted no time in jumping on DHC, taking a 1-0 lead in the first when Lee Kornegay singled to score Bert Potter, who walked to open the inning. North Lenoir had runners at first and second in the second and second and third base in the third, but did not score either time.

The Hawks upped their lead to 3-0 in the fifth when pitcher Jimmy Batts hit a 3-2 pitch for a single to score Potter and Kevin Lee. Potter walked to start the inning and Lee grounded to McRoy but reached when McRoy's throw to second went into centerfield.

Down 3-0, the Vikings' finally began to connect off Batts, who came into the game with a 4-2 mark but did not get the decision after being relieved by Lee in the bottom of the sixth.

Dixon Page opened the sixth by reaching on an error by second baseman Jeff Braxton but was cut down at second on Jeff Cox's fielder's choice. McRoy then hit a ground rule double to right to move Cox to third.

Wesley Smith lined a single to center to score both Cox and Steve Mills, who was running for McRoy, to make it 3-2. Smith went to second on Jeff Manning's single but was out at third on Greg Toler's fielder's choice.

Mike Gurkins, pinch hitting for Jimmy Kaler, lined a single to right to score Manning and tie the game. Singles by Lassiter and Chris Buck scored Toler and Kaler, who reentered, to make it 5-3. Lassiter later scored on Page's single to push the lead to 6-3.

It was a lead short-lived, however, as the Hawks rallied to regain the lead in the seventh and come away with the win, a win that kept North Lenoir's title hopes alive and Conley's all but dead.

Southern Cal Gets Probation

LOS ANGELES (AP) — University of Southern California officials were using the weekend to collect themselves after the National Collegiate Athletic Association dealt it a stiff, three-year football probation.

The NCAA's Infractions Committee announced the penalties Friday from Mission, Kansas, saying USC's actions constituted a "flagrant" violation of the rules.

The panel banned the Trojans from bowl games during the 1982-83 and 1983-84 academic years and prohibited television appearances during 1983 and 1984 for violations that include a ticket-selling scheme to funnel cash to players during a 10-year period.

The school remains eligible for television appearances this season.

Butch Brown and Richie Chase both had two-run singles in the inning and Dana Harrell and Ginn each had two-run doubles to lead th Rams. Ginn had three RBI in the inning.

"I never thought much about cancer until it hit close to home—twice." Charles W. Appich, President

"To me cancer was something that happened to other people. Then my own father got it. He was covered by a group health plan, but that coverage just wasn't enough when it came to the high cost of his cancer treatment."

"Soon after this our parts manager at work was diagnosed as having cancer. Fortunately he was covered by an American Family Life cancer-only policy. His claim was substantial and it was paid in just a few days."

"Because of the very satisfactory experience our parts manager had, most of our employees decided to sign up for the coverage and have the monthly premiums deducted from their paychecks."

"In these days of tons of paper work and red tape, we have found American Family Life claims easy to report, inquiries are answered immediately and new applications are processed quickly. And all at reasonable rates."

PEUGEOT

Spark Plugs Tipped With Silver
Magnetic Pulse Ignition, Precisely Metered
Fuel Injection...The Peugeot 505 S Shrugs
Off Tune-Ups, For 30,000 Miles.

And an exhaust "sniffer"

It is Peugeot's view that cars should not require constant, annoying trips to the shop for tune-ups.

The XN6 Bosch-fuel-injected engine that propels this ton-and-a-half car to almost 100 miles per hour (there are no speed limits on some roads in Europe) would take still another book to describe. But one high-technology detail: there is an on-board computer that "sniffs" the exhaust gases, instantly analyzes them, and then orders the fuel injection system to tune itself for the most efficient and most pollution-free mixture of fuel and air. The system is so efficient that the XN6 engine passes both the Federal and California emissions standards.

The ignition is by magnetic pulse; there are no points to replace.

It should be no surprise to learn that the Peugeot 505S is designed to take you 30,000 miles between tune-ups.

Ayden-Grifton Nips North Pitt, 5-4

BETHEL — Jackie Conway singled home Terry Locust with what proved the winning run in the sixth inning as Ayden-Grifton slipped by North Pitt, 5-4, Friday afternoon in an Eastern Carolina Conference baseball game.

North Pitt tied the game at 4-4 with three runs in the bottom of the fifth inning, but the Chargers rallied for the go-ahead run in the sixth and then held on for the win.

Locust doubled to open the inning and Joey Kennedy followed with an infield single. Conway, a freshman, then ripped a single to score Locust and give the Chargers a 5-4 lead.

The Panthers did not threaten in the sixth, but in the seventh Trelis Moore reached on an error and was sacrificed to second. But he got no farther as Ayden-Grifton held on.

Ayden-Grifton is now 10-5 overall and 5-1 in the conference. North Pitt falls to 6-6 overall 2-3 in the league.

Locust led A-G with two hits in three at bats. He had three RBI. The Panthers were led Ken Whitehurst, who was two for three, and Greg Briley, who was two for four. Whitehurst had a double.

A-G jumped out to a 1-0 lead in the first inning and upped its lead to 2-0 in the second. The Charger lead went to 4-0 in the third.

Chris Strickland and Bernard Ricciarelli walked to open the inning and moved up on a ground out by Tyrone Gay. Locust then singled to score Strickland and Ricciarelli and A-G led, 4-0.

North Pitt scored once in the bottom of the inning and the erupted for three runs in the sixth to tie the game.

Greg Briley singled and moved to second when Moore reached on an error by Strickland. Quintin Dove reached on a fielder's choice in which Briley was forced out.

Richard Heller then reached on Strickland's second error of the inning to load the bases. Daniel Keel followed with a double to score all three runners and tie the game at 4-4.

A-G regained the lead in the sixth and held on for the win.

Ayden-Grifton travels to SouthWest Edgecombe Tuesday. North Pitt traveled to Williamston last night, and hosts C.B. Aycock on Tuesday.

Nets, Hawks Eliminated In Two Games; Suns, Rockets Still Alive

By The Associated Press

The message was clear for the Phoenix Suns and Houston Rockets in their National Basketball Association playoff games — win and keep on playing or lose and wait until next season.

But the urgency of the situation didn't quite sink in for the New Jersey Nets and Atlanta Hawks.

On Friday night, Phoenix whipped Denver 126-110 and Houston beat Seattle 91-70 to send their best-of-3 series to final games. But the season ended for the Nets, as they lost 103-92 to Washington, and the Hawks, 98-95 losers to Philadelphia, in two-game sweeps.

"The Suns knew what they had to do to beat Denver after dropping the first game 129-113 on Tuesday, but they nearly let it slip away.

"We learned our lesson from the first game," said Phoenix forward Alvan Adams, who scored 25 points. "We knew we couldn't afford to let up at all because they had beaten us before that way with a big third period."

Denver sliced the Suns' 23-point lead in the second quarter to 87-82 in the third on David Thompson's three-point goal at 3:45. But Phoenix reeled off eight straight and coasted the rest of the way.

Dennis Johnson paced winners with 29 points, including 12 in the first quarter as the Suns raced to a 41-20 lead.

Dan Issel scored 26 points, Alex English 21 and Thompson 19 for the Nuggets. The decisive game will be played tonight in Denver.

Rockets 91, SuperSonics 70

Moses Malmne scored 28 points and grabbed 23 rebounds as control-minded Houston halted the fast-breaking Sonics.

The final game will be played Sunday in Seattle. The Sonics won the first game 102-87 Wednesday.

Houston led from start to finish and turned back a Sonics' rally that trimmed the margin to 55-50 in the third period. But Malone hit three straight baskets to give Houston control again. Gus Williams paced Seattle with 18 points. Jack Sikma added 16 and 11 rebounds.

Bullets 103, Nets 92

Kevin Grevey sparked a fourth-quarter rally with 13 points over a four-minute span to carry Washington over New Jersey.

The victory moves the Bullets into the Eastern Conference semifinals against Boston. The best-of-7 series opens Sunday in Boston.

New Jersey led 50-47 at the half behind Albert King's 8-for-8 shooting from the field. But Spencer Haywood scored 11 of his 15 points in the third period to give Washington a 71-68 edge.

Grevey, who finished with 23 points, hit a basket to give Washington a 79-70 lead and then over the next four minutes connected on two three-point goals and completed a three-point play as the Bullets pulled away down the stretch.

76ers 98, Hawks 95

Caldwell Jones dropped in four pressure free throws in the final 1:07 of overtime to lift Philadelphia over the Hawks in a physical contest in which 75 fouls were called.

The 76ers advance to the second round of the Eastern playoffs Sunday against the Milwaukee Bucks in Philadelphia.

Jones gave Philadelphia a 95-93 lead when he hit two free thows with 1:07 to go and added two more with 21 seconds remaining for a comfortable 97-93 advantage.

Atlanta's Dan Roundfield, the game's top scorer with 29 points, sent the game into overtime when he pumped in a 15-footer with 12 seconds to go to tie the game at 90.

Cardinals Capture 11th Straight Win

By The Associated Press

When it's time to pop the champagne corks in St. Louis, Ozzie Smith says the whole world will know. Now, however, is not the time.

The Cardinals, who now own the longest winning streak in the major leagues, won their 11th in a row Friday night with a 9-2 drubbing of the Philadelphia Phillies.

George Hendrick drove in three runs, two with a homer, and Smith slugged the third homer of his four-year career, two of which he hit this season. Hendrick and Smith also had two singles apiece.

In the San Diego locker room afterward, Smith was explaining the Cardinals' cool demeanor. "There's not a whole lot of celebrating in here because it's still early," Smith said. "When the time for celebrating comes, everyone will know."

Hendrick and Smith, who was traded from San Diego to St. Louis in the offseason for shortstop Garry Templeton, each homered in the seventh, when the Cards scored three runs. St. Louis also scored three runs each in the fourth and seventh innings.

While the St. Louis locker room was restrained, Philadelphia's locker room at Veteran's Stadium was downright sullen. The Phillies now have lost 10 of their first 13 games this season.

"The fans booed tonight, and they had every right to, considering the way we played," said Manager Pat Corrales, who spoke rather candidly with his team after the game.

"One guy after another is trying to be a hero and trying to hit the ball out of the ballpark," the Phillies manager said. "We can't be doing that right now, we're a bunch of singles hitters."

The Phils lost their one proven home run hitter, Mike Schmidt, when he was sidelined with a cracked rib April 13. He could out six weeks.

Padres 6, Braves 3

Sixto Lezcano's second homer of the game, a three-run shot in the 12th inning, gave the Padres their ninth victory in a row and the second-longest winning in their history. The Braves have lost two in a row after winning their first 13, a major league record.

San Diego took a 3-2 lead in the 11th when Lezcano singled, was sacrificed to second and eventually scored on Kurt Bevacqua's single. But the Braves sent the game into one more extra inning in the bottom of the 11th with a run on Glenn Hubbard's single.

Expos 5, Mets 4

Al Oliver's bases-loaded, infield single scored Rodney Scott with the winning run in the ninth for Montreal. With one out, Scott singled and Terry Francona was walked by reliever Jesse Orosco. Andre Dawson beat out an infield single and Oliver followed with his hit off Neil Allen. Oliver also homered in the fourth, driving in two runs to tie the score 2-2. Trailing 4-3, the Mets tied the score in the top of the ninth on Mookie Wilson's RBI triple.

Astros 7, Reds 3

Art Howe and Phil Garner hit consecutive home runs in a six-run third inning that carried Houston over Cincinnati. Reds right-hander Tom Seaver, 0-2, issued successive walks to Denny Walling, Terry Puhl and Alan Ashby before Ray Knight singled home the first two runs of the inning.

Joe Niekro, 2-1, got the win despite yielding three runs on five hits as the Reds scored all of their runs in the seventh.

Pirates 12, Cubs 10

Pittsburgh snapped a four-game losing streak, pounding out 17 hits to beat the Cubs. Omar Moreno drove in four runs, while Mike Easler and Tony Pena each drove in three.

Jason Thompson homered for Pittsburgh, helping to make a winner of Eddie Solomon, 1-2, the first of four Pittsburgh pitchers. Kent Tekulve earned his first save of the season.

Dodgers 9, Giants 0

Bob Welch tossed a seven-hit shutout, the second straight by a Los Angeles pitcher, and Ron Cey keyed the Dodgers' 14-hit attack with three-run homer. Two days earlier, Jerry Reuss blanked Houston on a one-hitter, and Dodgers pitchers now have a streak of 25 straight innings without allowing an earned run.

What's The Law On...

What's the lay on...trotlines and set-hooks?

"Trotlines and set-hooks may be set in the inland waters of North Carolina, provided no live bait is used; except that no trotlines or set-hooks may be set in designated public mountain trout waters, or in any of the impounded waters on the Sandhills Game Land. For the purposes of this Regulation, a set-hook is defined as any hook and line which is attached at one end only to a stationary or floating object and which is not under immediate control and attendance of the person using such device. Each trotline shall have attached the name and address of the user legibly and indelibly inscribed. Each trotline shall be conspicuously marked at each end with a flag, float, or other prominent object so that its location is readily discernable by boat operators and swimmers. Trotlines must be set parallel to the nearest shore in ponds, lakes and reservious. Untended trotlines, as evidenced by the absence of bait, may be removed from the water by wildlife enforcement officers when located in areas of multiple water use.

Recognizing the safety hazards to swimmers, boaters and water skiers which are created by floating metal cans and glass jugs, it is unlawful to use metal cans or glass jugs as floats. This shall not be construed to prohibit the use of plastic jugs, cork, styrofoam, or similar materials as floats." 15 NCAC 10C .0206

OUTDOORS With Joe Albea

Full stringer — Fisherman are gamblers at heart. They toss dice every time they go out, hoping the cubes will turn up their number. Statistics are usually dull, but when it comes to understanding why some fisherman have bad luck, the numbers tell an interesting story.

Here are some revealing statistics gathered by Mercury outboards' fishing experts:

All the best available estimates show that there are about 31.5 million acres of warm water in the United States. If you exclude the Great Lakes, this figure comes down to 28.1 million. If this water were divided equally among the 40 million licensed anglers in America, each of us would have seven-tenths of an acre on which to fish.

Right away you can begin to see the problem, because not all of these 28 million acres are capable of raising fish. Choosing the right acre is like picking a winning horse.

If you still think the odds are in your favor, consider the fact the average angler makes 21 trips per year to his favorite fishing hole for a grand total of 840 million fishing excursions annually. That's 29 trips per acre of warm water. If each trip lasts five hours then each acre of fishing water receives 105 hours of pressure.

Don't be discouraged by the numbers. Fishing is like playing poker, only instead of a full house you're after a full stringer, and luck still rules the game.

Wild foods weekend slates — The seventh annual North Carolian Wild Foods Weekend will be held May 7-9 at the Betsy-Jeff 4-H Center in Reidsville. Participants will learn how to identify and prepare edible wild plants and will also learn to cook wild fish and game. A Wild Foods Banquet prepared by the participants will highlight the weekend.

The cost of the weekend — including meals and lodging at the 4-H center — is abouit $45. For more information, write Wild Foods Weekend, Rockingham Community College, Wentworth, N.C. 27375.

Fishing Report

Salt Water — The fishing on the coast is still slow. King Mackeral are being caught offshore by the charter boats. As soon as the water temperature goes up the fish will move inside closer to shore. Gray trout and flounder should be in the first week in May.

Freshwater — The Bass were hitting better this past week with good reports from the Chowan River and Mattamuskeet Lake. The fluctuation in temperatures over the last several weeks seems to be the reason for the slow spring fishing so far.

Local news — Billy Byrd of Greenville had a good day on the Chowan River recently. The fish he caught weighed four pounds and was caught on plastic worms.

Ruttman Back In Pack But Feels Chances Good

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (AP) — Joe Ruttman will be starting in the No. 11 spot for Sunday's $204,100 Virginia National Bank 500 Grand National stock car race, but he still thinks his chances of winning are good.

"There's no question we can win. Our car is every bit as good as the No. 2 Stacy car," Ruttman said Friday after his fast lap of 89.422 mph in a Buick was the fastest of the second day of qualifying that rounded out the 30-car field for the race at 12:30 p.m., EDT, Sunday.

Ruttman was referring to the No. 2 Buick owned by J.D. Stacy that Tim Richmond drove Friday at a qualifying speed of 89.102 mph that earned him the No. 8 position for Sunday's race. Ruttman recently resigned from the Stacy team, and Richmond took his place.

Had he turned in his fast lap Thursday, Ruttman would have been in the No. 4 spot behind pole-winner Terry Labonte, Benny Parsons and Harry Gant.

Labonte set a qualifying record for the spring 500-lap race on the local .525-mile track of 89.988 mph, while Parsons was second at 89.868 mph and Gant third at 89.834 mph. Ricky Rudd earned the No. 4 spot at 89.337 mph.

That No. 4 speed also was bettered Friday by Darrell Waltrip, who turned in a fast lap of 89.418 mph in a Buick. Waltrip, who has won three poles and three races this year, failed to crack the top 10 Thursday.

The old qualifying record was 89.094 mph set last year by Mike Alexander. The first eight drivers Thursday had a faster speed, as did Ruttman and Waltrip on Friday.

"I probably would have run faster, but I messed up on my first lap," Ruttman said of his Friday speed. "I overdid it between turns one and two and lost my opportunity for a real good lap. I jsut went out for a good solid lap on the second one."

Behind Ruttman and Waltrip in Friday's qualifying were Butch Lindley, Dale Earnhardt, Dave Marcis, Brad Teague, Jody Ridley, 15-time Martinsville winner Richard Petty and Lake Speed.

On tap today was the Azalea 150, a 150-lap national championship Modified race for which there were 48 entries. National Modified Champion Richie Evans of Rome, N.Y., won last year's race.

Bodine Finally Has Ride He's Been Longing For

RACING NEWS

MARTINSVILLE, Va. — Geoff Bodine had ached for years for a top ride on the NASCAR Winston Cup Grand National circuit.

"Just to be on the Winston Cup circuit in a Grand National car wasn't enough," Bodine said. "I want to be a consistent winner. I want to be a success."

Bodine has finished first in more than 400 races during his racing career, most of which has been spent racing in the Late Model Sportsman and Modified classes.

Now, however, a smile on his face widens as he gazes at the No. 50 Pontiac that has turned his dream of a top ride on the Winston Cup circuit into a reality.

"I wanted this so badly that I have to keep pinching myself to realize that I'm not dreaming," said Bodine, a native of Chemung, N.Y. Bodine turned 33 last Sunday as he made his debut in the Cliff Stewart-Performance Connection auto at the North Wilkesboro Speedway.

"It was a surprise, a pleasant surprise, when Cliff called me," Boding said. "And I didn't hestitate when he asked me if I wanted to drive the car for the rest of the Winston Cup season."

Bodine replaces Joe Millikan in the Stewart-owned auto, which is one of eight cars on NASCAR's winner's circle plan that rewards the teams which won races in 1981 and are running in all 30 Winston Cup events in 1982.

"It's great for me, but there's a sad part to this, too," Bodine said. "I know how Joe feels not to have a ride. I hope he comes up with something.

"Auto racing is a team effort and Joe and this team just didn't seem to be hitting on all eight cylinders. I just hope everything works out for him. I know the heartache one goes through wanting to be here and not being able to."

Bodin encountered problems throughout the Northwestern Bank 400 last week and finished 15th. But, he feels a return to Martinsville Speedway — one of his favorite tracks — for today's Virginia National Bank 500 will allow him to run up front.

He has won nine Sportsman and Modified races at the almost flat .525-mile track, and he has won the pole position for the last nine Sportsman and Modified races run at the speedway.

"I've always seemed to run well at Martinsville and I'm really looking forward to going there in a top Grand National car," Bodine said. "I know it won't be easy to win a Winston Cup race there, with so many good teams, but I want to be a success and I'm going to work as hard a s necessary to do it."

Firebirds Top Farmville, 9-1

FARMVILLE — Elvis Perry hurled a three-hitter and drove in three runs to lead Southern Nash to a 9-1 triumph over Farmville Central Friday afternoon in an Eastern Carolina Conference baseball game.

Perry struck out eight and walked one en route to the decision. Perry gave up two singles to Wade Corbett, who was two for three, and a run-scoring double in the third by Bobby Carraway.

Carraway's double gave Farmville a 1-0 lead in the third, a lead the Jaguars quickly lost when Southern Nash struck for two runs in the fourth. A single by Perry scored one run and a double by Durwood Williams scored the other.

The Firebirds upped their lead to 7-1 in the fifth, the big blow a two-run double by Perry. Southern Nash scored its final two runs in the seventh as it handed Farmville its 10th loss in 13 games. Farmville is 1-5 in the ECC.

Perry was three for four to lead Southern Nash. Dexter Harris was two for three while Carl Blackman and Kevin Shearin were both two for four. Blackman had two RBI and Shearin had a double.

Farmville travels to Greene Central Tuesday.

Orioles Drop Nine Games In A Row

By The Associated Press

It has been almost two weeks since the Baltimore Orioles last won a game, so about all Manager Earl Weaver can do is fantasize how it must feel.

"It would be nice to win 2-0 once," he said after the Orioles dropped their ninth in a row Friday night, losing to the Chicago White Sox 4-2. "I'd like to give up just one run and we get two. How you go about doing that I just don't know. We score four and they score six. We score six and they score eight. I'm not very happy right now."

The Orioles are going so badly these days — their record is 2-10 and they haven't won since April 10 — that they were done in by Jim Morrison, who had only four hits and a .138 batting average in Chicago's first 10 games. Friday night, he doubled and scored on a single by Ron LeFlore in the fifth inning and slammed a tie-breaking triple in the White Sox's two-run ninth. Morrison, who also had a bunt single, raised his average to .212.

"Morrison's hitting is an example of the depth we have in our batting order," Manager Tony LaRussa said. "He's our eighth batter, but he can hit with power and he comes through when we need him."

Tigers 9, Yankees 1

Dan Petry fired a seven-hitter and Larry Herndon, John Wockenfuss and Alan Trammell drove in two runs apiece as Detroit romped to its seventh straight victory. The Tigers scored two runs off loser Dave Righetti in the second, two more in the third and chased him in a two-run fourth as they beat the Yankees for the fourth time in seven days. Trammell's RBI single and Lou Whitaker's sacrifice fly in the second inning gave Petry all the runs he needed.

Brewers 2, Rangers 1

Moose Haas scattered six hits in eight innings and Don Money singled home the winning run as Milwaukee won its third game in a row. Haas gave way in the ninth to Rollie Fingers, who earned his second save by striking out two of the three batters he faced. The Brewers broke a 1-1 tie in the fifth inning when Gorman Thomas doubled and scored on Money's single off Rick Honeycutt.

Red Sox 5, Blue Jays 4

Jim Rice belted a two-run homer, Carney Lansford added a solo blast and Dwight Evans threw out the potential tying run at the plate from right field to end the game. Boston's John Tudor blanked the Blue Jays until the eighth when he needed relief help as Toronto scored three runs. Rice also singled a run across in the sixth following a triple by Evans. His homer in the eighth after Evans singled pushed Boston's lead to 5-0.

Toronto's Al Woods singled with the bases loaded and two out in the bottom of the ninth, but Evans cut down Alfredo Griffin at the plate to end the game.

Royals 11, Indians 6

Amos Otis, Lee May and Hal McRae each collected three hits to lead a 16-hit assault on four Cleveland pitchers and help Kansas City end a four-game losing streak. McRae tagged reliever Dennis Lewallyn for a two-run homer in the sixth, giving the Royals a 9-6 lead, and they added two more runs when May singled and pinch-runner Dennis Werth scored on a double by Jerry Martin, who went to third on a wild pitch and came home on an infield hit by U.L. Washington. Andre Thornton hit a two-run homer for Cleveland.

Angels 7, A's 2

Brian Downing hit his sixth homer and drove in two runs and Tim Foli had a two-run single as California defeated Oakland behind Ken Forsch's seven-hit pitching. Downing led off the bottom of the first inning with his homer and singled a run home during a three-run second inning. Foli's two-run single highlighted another three-run burst in the third.

Oakland starter Matt Keough was ejected at the start of the third inning for not heeding a warning not to rub the back of his neck and the bill of his cap while on the pitching rubber.

Twins 12, Mariners 4

Bobby Mitchell and John Castino belted home runs and Ron Washington laced four hits to lead an 18-hit Minnesota attack. Minnesota starter Roger Erickson gave up singles to the first five Seattle batters, but went the route.

Bertie Downs Roanoke, 9-6

ROBERSONVILLE — John Brooks had four RBI and Bertie struck for four runs in the sixth inning en route to a 9-6 victory over Roanoke Friday night in a Northeastern Conference baseball game.

Roanoke trailed, 5-2, after four innings but Angelo Spruill doubled home two runs to key a four-run fifth and take a 6-5 lead. Bertie quickly erased the deficit, however, with a four-run outburst in the sixth.

Roanoke starter Joey Ross walked Perry Lee and Randy Russell to open the inning. Tony Lee then ripped a single to score Perry Lee and chase Rose for Joey Early.

Early promptly hit Willie Ryan with a pitch to load the bases and then walked John Jernigan to force Russell home. Brooks then reached on a fielder's choice to score Lee and Warren Mizelle later walked to score Ryan with the Falcons' fourth run of the inning.

Roanoke failed to score in the final two innings as the Redskins' dropped their seventh game in 11 outings. Roanoke is 3-4 in the league.

Bertie led, 3-0, after the top half of the first, but the Redskins came back with two runs in the bottom of the inning to cut the gap to one.

Dalton Everett reached on a fielder's chocie to score Darius Hudgins, who singled to open the inning. Greg Casper then singled home Early, who walked, for the second run.

The Falcons scored a run in the third and fourth to extend their lead to 5-2, but the Redskins rallied again — this time scoring four runs in the fifth to take their first and only lead of the game.

With one gone, Early walked and Ross singled. Everett then reached on an error to score Early. Spruill followed with a double to score Ross and Everett and tie the game. Casper then tripled home Spruill and Roanoke led, 6-5.

Casper led Roanoke with two hits in three at bats. Hudgins and Ross were both two for four. Ryan was two for three and Tony Lee was two for five for the Falcons.

Roanoke travels to Bertie Tuesday.

Islanders Have Unfamiliar Company

By The Associated Press

The New York Islanders are right where you would expect them this time of year — the Stanley Cup semifinals. Keeping them company there are two clubs who seemed more like pretenders than contenders when the National Hockey League playoffs began.

The Chicago Black Hawks, who finished 15th in the overall standings this season and fourth in the Norris Division, reached the NHL's Final Four with a 2-0 decision over the St. Louis Blues Friday night. They'll take on the Vancouver Canucks, winners of the Smythe playoff after winding up 11th overall.

The Islanders, overall points champions this season and two-time defending Stanley Cup titlists, also moved into the semifinals Friday when they ousted the Rangers with a 5-3 triumph. Both the Islanders and Black Hawks needed six games to win their series, while the Canucks beat Los Angeles in five.

The only quarterfinal series still undecided is tied at three games apiece thanks to Boston's 6-5 overtime decision at Quebec, with Peter McNab scoring the game-winner 10:54 into the extra session. Game 7 of that series will be played Sunday in Boston.

The Black Hawks reached into the past to eliminate the Blues as veteran goaltender Tony Esposito, who turned 39 Friday, made 31 saves to post his sixth playoff shutout.

Denis Savard and Rich Preston scored goals 4:37 apart in the second period for Chicago, which had a 30-38-12 record this season.

Esposito has taken a back seat to Murray Bannerman for most of the playoffs, starting only three of the Hawks' 10 postseason games. But, says Bob Pulford, Chicago's coach, Esposito was "the big difference.

"The guy rose to the occasion to give us a game we could not afford to lose," Pulford said.

"A lot of people asked me if I wasn't too old to play at 39," said 'Tony O.' "I stay in great shape 12 months a year and I consider myself a quality goalie. As far as I'm concerned, I'll be around a long time."

Islanders 5, Rangers 3

The Islanders struggled to beat the Rangers in a tight series, with the champs winning all three games played on the Rangers' home ice. Butch Goring scored two goals and defenseman Dave Langevin — who had one goal all season — scored the game-winner with a long slapshot with only 6:08 to play.

"In the playoffs," said Denis Potvin, the Islander defenseman most likely to score goals, "it doesn't matter whether a guy had 60 goals or two. Anyone can be a hero."

"I'm surprised that we didn't play better in these two series," said Goring, noting that his club was extended to overtime in the decisive fifth game of the opening series with Pittsburgh. "It's better if we win our way. We've had only three or four Islander-type games out of 11. I'm disappointed and surprised about that."

Rangers Coach Herb Brooks was proud of his troops.

"I think we've proven we belong in the top echelon of the NHL," said Brooks. "We wanted to close the gap between us and the best. This series showed us we've done that."

Bruins 6, Nordiques 5

McNab, a sometime-performer in the playoffs, got the chance to be a hero after the Bruins blew 3-0 and 5-2 leads. McNab, standing in front of Nordiques goalie John Garrett, got the puck from Wayne Cashman and swept it through the crease into the far corner.

"I didn't fully realize what had happened until I got back to the dressing room because it was like a jungle on the ice after the goal," said McNab, who also scored in the first period.

"We didn't feel down after we blew the lead," said Boston's Rick Middleton. "Our team plays better in the clutch. We got the winning goal and that's what counts."

Barry Pederson added a goal and two assists for the Bruins, while Real Cloutier connected twice for Quebec and Michel Goulet had a goal and two assists.

"The odds were against us but we came back from a big deficit and were really tired," said Nordiques Coach Michel Bergeron. "We went into Boston and won our last game and there is no reason why we can't do it again."

Coach Don Coryell of the San Diego Chargers, rated an offensive genius, was a defensive back in his college days at the University of Washington.

LaMotte Gets Ace

Joe LaMotte had a hole-in-one recently on the 12th hole at Brook Valley. He used a 7-iron for the 139-yard shot. He was playing with Charlie Berkey, Austin Britt and Jerry Meyers when he made the ace.

The Twilights Tournament, Jack and Jill, will be start on Wednesday, May 5, at 5:15 p.m. They will be held the first, third, and when it occurs, the fifth Wednesday of each month through September.

Livestock, Meat Prices Fall

By KEITH E. LEIGHTY
Associated Press Writer

Livestock and meat prices were higher on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange on Friday as retail demand for meat continued strong.

John Ginzel, a livestock analyst in Chicago with Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc., said cash prices have been rising amid a fairly aggressive demand at the retail level, and that supported futures prices Friday.

He noted that prices for carcass beef are at season highs and demand has not fallen off.

The supportive factors were supplemented by supportive technical factors, such as trends on price charts, Ginzel added, giving a further boost to futures prices.

Cattle for delivery in June was .25 cent higher, settling at 69.80 cents a pound; June live hogs were .55 cent higher, settling at 59.45 cents a pound; and May frozen pork bellies were 1.47 cents higher, settling at 83.77 cents a pound.

Grain and soybean futures prices closed higher in very active trading on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Prices were higher in early trading with influence from the quarterly grain stocks report released Thursday by the Department of Agriculture, sources at the floor said.

Soybeans showed the greatest gain associated with the report and the grains followed the up-ward move in what was said to be sympathetic support.

Further support came during the day when Great Britain urged British citizens in Argentina to leave the country, and from higher gold prices, said Bob Lekberg, a grains analyst in Chicago with Shearson American Express.

Most traders, Lekberg said, were evening up their contract positions because the conflict between Great Britain and Argentina could cause a substantial price move in either direction.

Price gains were somewhat restricted, Lekberg added, be-cause selling by farmers at country locations picked up during the day and grain elevator operators sold contracts on the futures market to protect their cash purchases.

Wheat for delivery in May was 3½ cents higher, settling at $3.76¾ a bushel; May corn was 1¾ cents higher, settling at $2.78½ a bushel; May oats were 2¼ cents higher, settling at $2.12 a bushel; and soybeans were 12¾ cents higher, settling at $6.63 a bushel.

Cocoa made a surprising rally despite a continuing poor outlook for higher prices, said Pam Rockley, director of research for A.G. Becker in New York. She added that the market was oversold and traders were buying contracts to cover their short positions, or agreements to deliver, and that pushed prices up. The rally, she noted, boosted prices past levels at which orders to buy had been placed with commission houses, which gave further support to prices.

Cocoa for delivery in May was $128 higher, settling at $1,717 a metric ton, which is 2,204.6 pounds.

Orange juice prices increased on the New York Cotton Exchange in response to a report from the Florida Citrus Processors Associaton released after the close of trading Thursday that said movement of frozen concentrate from the producers to wholesalers and retailers increased substantially during the week ending April 17, Miss Rockley said.

The report said 4.49 million gallons of frozen concentrated orange juice moved during that week, compared to 3.83 million in the previous week and 3.31 million in the same week of 1981, Miss Rockley said. She added that the figure is an indication of increased demand.

Orange juice for delivery in May was 1.35 cents higher, settling at 114.10 cents a pound.

Gold for delivery in June, the most active conract traded, was $7.10 higher, settling at $356.70 a troy ounce and May silver was 7.5 cents higher, settling at $7.26 a troy ounce.

SALES HONOR

American Family Life Assurance Co. recognized Linda Whorton of Greenville as recipient of the "Fireball" award for sales achievement over a 13-week period. The firm said she is also in line for the "Super Fireball" award.

Both awards recognize new employees who have reached a company goal their first 13 weeks in the field, American Family Life said.

S&S APPOINTMENT

J. A. Smith III, president of S & S Cafeterias, announced the appointment of J. L. Henderson, who was the opening manager for the Greenville restaurant at Carolina East Mall, to manager of the Florida Avenue facility in Tampa, Fla.

Henderson, who has been with the 20-unit cafeteria chain for 22 years, is a member of the National Restaurant Association. He resides in Tampa with his wife, Paula.

PERFORMANCE NOTED

Bank Administration Institute (BAI) of Rolling Meadows, Ill. reported that First State Bank of Greenville and Winterville is one of the nation's top banks in terms of financial performance bsed on an analysis by BAI.

The 1,200 top banks were cited from among those 14,000 banks in the nation with assets under $150 million, according to Joseph Ciaburri, chairman of BAI's high performance bank assembly.

Three factors were weighed in the analysis: return on assets, return on equity and deposit growth, Ciaburri reported.

LOWER TOTALS

The company said that sales for the first quarter were $1.33 billion, a 2 percent decrease from 1981's first period total of $1.36 billion.

Net earnings totaled $44.1 million, a 20 percent drop from the $55 million posted in the first quarter last year.

Fully diluted earnings per share were $1.18 compared with $1.47 a year ago, while primary earnings per share were $1.25 compared with $1.60 in 1981.

INCREASED EARNINGS

Bancshares of North Carolina Inc., parent company of Bank of North Carolina N.A., announced net income fo $1,135,206 for the three months ended March 31, an increase of 24.2 percent over $914,080 for the same period in 1981.

Bancshares said there were no gains or losses on securities transactions during either period.

Ttal assets of Bancshares were $441,348,007 on March 31, compared to $379,554,024 the previous year.

Net earnings were $3,149,000 or $1.42 per share, as compared to $3,199,000 or $1.45 per share for the previous year.

Upturn Predicted

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Predictions that the nation's economy will continue its downward spiral should be seen as an indication, however paradoxical, that the end of the recession is near, a First Union Corp. official says.

"I find myself on the side of one well-known economist who says, 'Talk of a deeper decline is exactly what we used to hear when the recession was about to level off and an upturn was beginning to unfold,'" said C.C. Cameron, president and chairman of the Charlotte-based financial institution.

Speaking at the corporation's annual meeting this week, Cameron said Americans should have a more positive attitude about the economy.

"The economic indicators in the weeks ahead may well give us the sign that this recession has bottomed out," he said. "Today, I believe the Federal Reserve has done a fine job in slowing inflation."

Spinoff Firms See More Suits

By C.W. MIRANKER
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — In Silicon Valley, California's spawning ground for high-technology companies, some estabilshed businesses have been turning to the courts to discourage the flight of key employees.

Companies are even hiring outside experts to drop in on new businesses organized by former employees to make sure trade secrets haven't made the move too.

One of those consultants is David Hodges, a professor in computer sciences and electrical engineering at the University of California at Berkeley, who makes unannounced inspections of Seeq Technology's San Jose factory.

His visits are part of an out-of-court settlement between Seeq and Intel Corp., which filed a trade secret lawsuit days after Seeq's founders left Intel last year.

Seeq paid Intel an undisclosed sum under the settlement. Intel stated Seeq had not been using its trade secrets. And Hodges' job, as a technical expert mutually chosen to be "special master," is to see it stays that way.

But to industry observers the suit was only in part about secret techniques or devices — in this case computer memory chips — who knew about them and whether they were misappropriated.

The year-old legal wrangle and others like it are mainly protective slaps at the spinoffs that collectively spur the computer industry to technological innovation but sting the companies that lose employees to them. They're after something less tangible than legal redress.

They're retaliating against employees whose departure to form their own companies seems like a "raid" on talent or technology. They're an ominous reminder to still-employed people with entrepreneurial urges that they'd better be loyal while still drawing a paycheck and if they decide to form a competing business, they'd better do it properly. And they're a warning to venture capitalists not to bankroll would-be entrepreneurs before they've severed past ties.

There aren't a lot of these suits — Intel vs. Seeq, National Semiconductor Corp. vs. Linear Technology and Storage Technology vs. Ibis Systems Inc. are the big three.

But lately older Silicon Valley companies appear more aggressive and "ready to come down tough" on spinoffs, says Larry Sonsini, a partner in the Palo Alto firm Wilson, Sonsini, Goodrich and Rosati that represents Linear and Ibis.

"You just get a feeling ... that people are threatening them more, bringing them more often than at other times," adds lawyer James H. Pooley, author of a book on trade secrets and a senior partner specializing in trade-secret litigation at Mosher, Pooley, Sullivan & Hendren in Palo Alto.

The reason: the potent combination of the traditional mobility of the industry's talented people plus a relatively new phenomenon — readily available venture capital — has cost established companies people.

Venture capital firms raised a record $1.3 billion in 1981, much of it going to startups, according to Hambrecht & Quist, a venture capital and investment banking firm. With so much money available, "a lot of people have gone off to set up their own companies," Sonsini says.

The slump in the semicondictor industry has made established companies especially sensitive to losing key people. They've become "more dependent on fewer people doing more work and being more innovative," Pooley says. "The creative people and the high performers are even more valuable to a company during bad times than in good."

Given such pressure on large, mature companies, one defendant regards the suit against him as "proper protectionism" even though he disputes its claims. But to others, the suits seem ironic or hypocritical since the plaintiffs themselves were spinoffs not long ago.

Silicon Valley, the 30-mile-long heartland of the computer industry south of San Francisco, was populated by spinoffs. The list reads like a verse of biblical begats: from Bell Labs came the now-defunct Shockley Transistor, which gave rise to Fairchild. Former Fairchilders founded Intel, Signetics, Advance Micro Devices, Precision Monolithics, Four Phase, among others, and resuscitated National. Intel alumni founded Zilog, Xicor and Seeq; and each company in Intel's generation has a long line of descendants, too.

"In our minds, we weren't trying to do anything different from what (Robert) Noyce and (Gordon) Moore tried themselves when they left Fairchild to form Intel," says Phillip Salsbury, Seeq's executive vice president and chief technical officer.

The company had six founders, five from Intel's special products division where they had been working on memory chips known as EPROMs and EEPROMs.

Intel is the leading manufacturer of erasable programmable read-only-memory chips (EPROMs) and has pioneered work on electrically erasable programmable read-only-memories (EEPROMs). EEPROMs have a tremendous commercial significance: The chips allow the programs they contain to be changed by the computer for which they supply programs. In other words, the computer could reprogram itself.

Coupled with the profitable possibilities was the American dream, Silicon Valley style: "Having your own company is one of the ultimate expressions of professional achievement," Salsbury says. "That's something that just seemed like the American way.

After seven years at Intel, one of the largest semiconductor houses with more than 14,000 employees, he wanted the "day-to-day excitement" of a small company.

Now mature and often bureaucratic, the previous generation of spinoffs can be stifling, less fun to work for, disenchanting for experience people who had risen in the company but nonetheless joined too late to strike it rich. So Salsbury and "company" quit.

A week later, they were being sued.

Because Seeq had no offices, no phone number, no product and no processes at that time, Salsbury says the suit was "something like a fishing expedition."

And Intel lawyer Roger S. Borovoy admits it was a response not to theft of a trade secret but to the "risk of losing our technology ... the risk that the technology is going to be misappropriated" by a group of people close to Intel trade secrets.

Borovoy accuses Seeq's founders of "negotiating with venture capitalists behind our backs ... refusing to tell us what product they were going to make. We sued Seeq because they went beyond the bounds of propriety."

Senior Citizens Plan Spring Sale

The Town and Country Senior Citizens Club met Thursday at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, with 80 members attending, to make final plans for a "Spring Happening Sale" with the theme "Senior Citizens Round-up."

The club needs volunteers to work at the Carolina East Mall May 7-8 at the March of Dimes booth. Callers for the Bloodmobile are needed for May 18 to remind people the unit will be at the Moose Lodge May 19.

Band's For Fun Of It

ENTHUSIASM...means everything. Age, experience little says Bill Garner (center) who prior to the organization of the community band has not played in 47 years. To his left is Wesley Sumrell, a first-year alto saxaphonist; to his right, Gordon Lee, a veteran tubist.

DRUMMING'S HIS PLEASURE...James Allen has played in top-40 bands since high school and relishes the once a week jam sessions the community band affords him.

TRUMPETERS...Peter Bradbury (left) and Randy Erwin (right) both had not played since high school when they joined the community band last November. Other trumpeters (not pictured) are Bob Morgan and Carl Massey.

FARMVILLE — Members of the Farmville Community Band recognize no limitations of age, recentness of experience or length of experience. They know only the joy of making music together.

Self-acknowledged amateurs, they've done little performing so far, but they're going public Saturday at 2:30 p.m. with a performance during the Farmville Arts and Crafts Festival on the Walter B. Jones Town Commons here.

Practices held each Tuesday evening, at present in the Farmville Central High School band room, are free and easy. Someone calls out a number and they try it out.

Jerry Walters, director of the Farmville High and Middle schools bands, leads most numbers, but J.D. Patterson, manager of Pitt-Greene Electric Membership Corp. headquartered here, is the acknowledged leader of the German numbers. This is because of his several years of participation in the widely known Little German Band of Raleigh.

For all their professed casualness, though, the participants are serious about their music. Most have long-held devotion to their particular instruments and to music.

Bill Garner, an advertising salesman, says he's the oldest member of the band and probably the one who's been away from his instrument, the B-flat tenor saxaphone, the longest — 47 years. He was the leader of a professional dance band for a number of years prior to World War II.

Gordon Lee, a tobacco warehouseman who began playing the tuba in the seventh grade at Greenville High School, has played his instrument in the Shrine Band for 25 years. He goes to Raleigh to rehearse the third Sunday of each month and plays with the Oman Temple at the Oktoberfest in Charleston, S.C., "every year I can make it." The Shriners are more polished, he said, but being in this band is meaningful to him, too.

Randy Erwin, who works for Carolina Telephone, had not played the trumpet since high school until the band was formed. It's great, he said, resuming an enthusiasm that began for him in the fifth grade in Farmville.

Like Erwin, Peter Bradbury, a plant breeder with Pfizer Genetics here, started playing in grade school — in Champaign, Ill. — but had not played much since high school. He and Erwin agree, "The fingers come back a lot quicker than the lips."

Farmville Town Administrator Bob Morgan is also a trumpeter. He began playing in junior high school in Hampton, Va., and before coming to Farmville played in the Chapel Hill Village Band. So is Carl Massey, a Farmville native who began playing in grade school. He is employed by Farmville Implement Co.

Wesley Sumrell, a sixth grader at Farmville Middle School, joined the band only recently and is surprising his instructor, Jerry Walters, with how well he's keeping up with his more experienced fellow band members.

James Allen, office manager for Martin-Marietta Aggregates Company's quarry and stone-crushing operation in Fountain, plays drums and has since he was 7 years old. He has played during and since high school for a number of top-40 bands.

Sherry Walters, presently the only female member of the band, is an assistant band instrument technician at Cha-Rich Music Inc. in Greenville. She learned to play the clarinet in junior high School in Chesapeake, Va., and majored in music education at East Carolina University, as did her husband, Jerry.

GERMAN MUSIC.. is enjoyed by all the band members. They look to Joe Patterson (not pictured) as their mentor for this type of music. Pictured is Bill Garner, tenor saxaphonist.

Frank Styers, a television and satellite sales and service businessman, plays trombone. He, too, has been playing since school days.

The band was started by John Barker, local librarian and musician, under the auspices of the Farmville Arts Council. Its first and only previous performance was at the town Christmas-tree lighting held in early December.

The band welcomes new members. "In fact, we need them," Walter said. "We especially need some lower brass — trombones, woodwinds, baritones."

Anyone who would like to participate may just show up any Tuesday night — preferably with his or her instrument in hand. Those who no longer have their instruments but would like to play should contact Morgan, 753-5116 days. The band has been seeking the reasonable purchase and donation of good used instruments, so no one who really wants to take part has any reason or excuse not to, he says.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

A woman in Illinois has a son who is "into weight lifting." She has noted that the stronger the muscles become in his upper arms, the weaker the muscles become in his fingers.

In other words, the boy can press his own weight, but he can't turn off a water faucet.

The answer is a simple one. Teenagers develop only one part of their bodies at a time. If they're making good grades, don't expect them to pick up their room. If you want them to have eight hours sleep a night, they can't handle the garbage. If you want the truth out of them, don't push them to turn off the lights in their room.

If you want logic, you should have raised collies.

We have all lived through the years of parental innocence. I had a son who played basketball four hours a day. The muscles in his legs looked like a bas-relief map of Brazil. Those legs carried him back and forth on that gym floor a hundred times a day. The walking muscles that would transport him home on foot have not developed today.

I had another child who talked on the phone so much we all chipped in and bought her a tongue transplant for her 16th birthday. She could not have formed the words "thank you" had she been given Erik Estrada.

To understand teenagers, you must understand their anatomy. No two things work at the same time.

On the eve of their 16th birthday, their hands will form little fists in anticipation of car keys which dangle from them every minute.

The eyes that develop X-ray vision to see a piece of pound cake wrapped in aluminum foil in the back of the refrigerator will not see a dog that is tunneling under the door in an effort to relieve himself.

By the time a teenager is 17, there are few things that are "operational." The hearing is gone. The voice is never heard. There is no sign he or she recognizes anyone. The muscles throughout the body are a mass of inertia.

The only thing that really works is the mind. It accelerates to age 35 and holds there until he or she is 35. Then it goes back down to age 17.

Fields-Harrison Vows Said On Saturday

Janet Grey Harrison and Michael Everette Fields were wed Saturday evening at six o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J.K. Wetherington. The Rev. Melvin Rawls conducted the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lee Gaskins of Vanceboro. The parents of the bridegroom are Mr. Leonard Fields of Rt. 1, Blount's Creek, and the late Mrs. Aileene Fields.

Leonard E. Fields of Blounts Creek served as best man. Ushers were J.K. Wetherington of Rt. 2, Greenville, and Edward Bailey of Lexington.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal gown of sky blue lustreglo designed with an open neckline and an empire bodice with a satin ribbon around the waist and an accordian pleated skirt. The sleeveless gown was complemented with an overlay of antique Nottingham lace accented with a silk flower at the shoulder. She wore a halo of sky blue sweetheart roses, forget-me-nots and azalea florets with streamers and carried a bouquet of miniature lilies, sweetheart roses, daisies and forget-me-nots in sky blue with blue and white satin streamers.

The mother of the bride and the stepmother of the bridegroom wore corsages of blue daisies and sweetheart roses. The mistress of ceremonies was remembered with a corsage of white gardinias.

Dear Abby

Cash-Flow Is One-Way

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: There's a man in our club who has so much money, I'm sure he doesn't even know how much he has. He's considered high society and nobody would dare say anything to him about this bad habit he has, but I think it's time somebody did.

He never has any money. When he needs cash for a tip or a caddy or whatever, he'll turn to whoever is standing near him and say, "Anybody got $10 — or $20?" This happens all the time.

The funny part of it is the way everybody fights to accommodate him. You'd think it was an honor to give this millionaire money.

Far as I know, he's never made any attempt to pay anybody back. I gave him $20 once, and that was the end of it.

My question: Should I remind him that he owes me $20?

P.O.'D IN PALM SPRINGS

DEAR P.O.'D: Go ahead. And when you do, he'll probably turn to somebody else and say, "Anybody got $20?"

* * *

DEAR ABBY: My husband died suddenly of a massive heart attack three weeks ago. He was only 49 and was never sick a day in his life. It was a terrible blow to me and our four children.

Last week my daughter, who just turned 18, came to me and said she wanted to get married to the boy she has been going with for nearly two years.

I never knew marriage was on her mind and thought maybe she missed her dad and wanted to get married so she would have someone to lean on. Then she told me she had to get married! (The baby is due in six months.) I am in shock over this. I like the boy, but he's only 19 and going to college.

They have to get married as soon as possible, but I wonder what kind of wedding I should put on in view of the circumstances. She wants a church wedding.

DOUBLE TROUBLE

DEAR DOUBLE: Talk to your clergyman and let him guide you. Your daughter can have a lovely church wedding, but since you are in mourning and she is pregnant, hold it down to a quiet, dignified family affair with only very close friends.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: A few years ago you printed "A Mother-in-Law's Prayer." I thought it was hilarious and read it at a bridal shower. Everyone loved it. I've lost my only copy. Please run it again.

NEW YORK POST FAN

DEAR FAN: With pleasure. Here it is:

A MOTHER-IN-LAW'S PRAYER

"O, Lord, help me to be glad when my son (or daughter) picks a mate. If he brings home a girl with two heads, help me to love both of them equally. And when my son says, 'Mom, I want to get married,' forbid that I should blurt out: 'How far along is she?'

"And please, Lord, help me to get through the wedding preparations without a squabble with the 'other side.' And drive from my mind the belief that had my child waited a while, she or he could have done better.

"Dear Lord, remind me daily that when I become a grandmother, my children don't want any advice on how to raise their children any more than I did when I was raising mine.

"If you will help me to do these things, perhaps my children will find me a joy to be around, and maybe I won't have to write a 'Dear Abby' letter complaining about my children neglecting me."

Engagements Announced

SHARON LOUISE ALLEN...is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L.R. Allen of Grimesland, who announce her engagement to William Henry Harman, son of Mrs. Dorothy W. Harman of Winterville and Mr. Asher W. Harman of McLean, Va. The wedding is planned for June 26.

KAREN ELAINE WHITEHURST...is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dewey D. Whitehurst of Greenville and Mr. and Mrs. Julian Eliot of Bath, who announce her engagement to Michael Wayne Chandler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward E. Chandler of Washington. The wedding will take place June 20.

40 N.C. Artists In New NCMA Show

RALEIGH — Four Greenville artists are featured in the exhibition "Forty North Carolina Artists" which opens May 2 in the Collectors Gallery of the North Carolina Museum of Art, 107 E. Morgan St., downtown Raleigh.

The four from Greenville whose work has been selected for inclusion in the show are Paul Hartley, Charles Kesler, Clarence Morgan and Mel Stanforth.

Dr. Edgar Peters Bowron, NCMA director, notes the show represents the largest number of commissioned works by North Carolina artists ever to appear in the museum. "We're very excited about this show," he said, "not only because of its artistic significance, but because it demonstrates how the museum is working with businesses for North Carolina artists."

Selected for the project by the museum staff, each artist created a 2- by 2-foot painting with subjects ranging from landscapes and human figures to non-representational art. After the exhibition at the museum, the paintings will be assembled and hung to form one large mural in the administrative area of Philip Morris' Cabarrus County cigarette manufacturing facility near Concord. The facility, the company's first in North Carolina, is scheduled to begin operating in early 1983.

The Collectors Gallery exhibition will be the only public showing of these works before they are installed at the Philip Morris facility.

This approach to a mural, decided on last November, has resulted in a varied range of subjects and styles painted in oil, acrylic and mixed media.

For example, "Blues off Fort Macon Jetty" by Winston-Salem artist Robert Dance is a scene of four fishermen on a rocky jetty, so realistically painted that the light appears to come from within the canvas. By contrast, "Make—Make 4" by Clarence Morgan of Greenville is a non-representational piece in collage and oil, with bright colors that seem to dance against a dark background.

NCMA hours are 10 to 5 Tuesdays through Saturdays and 2 to 5 on Sundays. Admission is free.

DUST LIGHT ... by Greenville artist Paul Hartley, painted in watercolor, acrylics and oil on canvas, is one of the works by 40 North Carolina artists to go on view at the N.C. Musuem of Art in Raleigh on May 2. The 40 works, each 2- by 2-feet, will later be assembled into a mural for the new Philip Morris facility near Concord. (Photo Courtesy N.C. Museum of Art).

SANDMAN — Brian Burgeson and Jule Brand, both of Morrisville, N.Y., put finishing touches on their "Sandman" at a Ft. Lauderdale, Fla. beach recently. Both say they miss New York even with its recent run of wintry spring weather. The two are in Florida on a spring break. (AP Laserphoto)

Gallery Of The World

By D.J. ROSENBAUM

MONTCLAIR, N.J. (UPI) — If, as author Norman Juster once noted, being lost is more a matter of not knowing where you aren't than not knowing where you are, Robert Wylie Brown will never be lost.

There's a globe of the world as it once was believed to be, an array of illuminated globes showing the constellations or the earth under the seas and a transparent double globe of the earth and the stars.

"You can count the number of map stores on the fingers of your hand," said the 6-foot-tall Brown, 49, who became interested in geography when he was told to teach an elementary school class in it. He now holds a Ph.D. from Columbia University in the subject, which he taught at Rutgers University for eight years.

Unlike other map stores, Brown said, his is set up like an art gallery.

As a visitor walks in, he sees a wall covered by the famous moonscape photograph with a rising earth. Covering another is a huge street map of New York City made up of 36 7½-minute U.S. Geographic Survey quadrants.

On display boards are maps of the world, three-dimensional relief maps of the United States and sections of it, maps locating the geographic origins of different plaids and scotch whiskies, maps detailing the British campaign against Gen. George Washington for New York City.

Prospective customers, including children, often wander through. Some eventually buy.

There is more to a good map than accuracy, Brown said, noting The (London) Times map of the world has country names such as "Rhodesia." The nation has been known as "Zimbabwe" for several years.

"The use of color is important, and in the more sophisticated, color is used to show altitude and vegetation," he said. "If you are looking at a world map, projection is important."

Brown seems to favor the globes, especially the more complicated ones. Several of them are lit from within, showing constellations or mountain contours of the earth. His apparent favorite, though, is the double globe of earth and stars.

That globe can be manipulated to let a prospective star-gazer see which stars would be visible at any time on any day from any place in the world.

"I got into the heavens because my customers asked for it," Brown said, cradling the globe. "I'm very much earthbound."

That 20-inch model costs $325. It is available in sizes up to 72 inches in diameter, for a mere $8,250. He does not stock that one, though: "First of all, I couldn't get it in the door."

Which brings up another question: Who buys these things?

"Fathers and mothers who want them for their kids," he said. "Grandmothers are very good — they want to buy things that aren't toys.

"Lovers are very good. I had a man who came in to look at a globe for his girlfriend's new apartment. I thought he was going to spend about $50, but he walked out with a $300 globe."

BUT NOT AS FAR AS THE COWBOY — Two commercial advertisements for cigarettes posted on the side of a vending machine bear testimony that though women may have come a long way, the rugged American cowboy in action still takes precedence over a pretty, fashionably dressed woman — at least that's the situation to judge from the size and placement of the two ads on an outdoor machine in Bethel. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

Something Different

WILMINGTON — Jack Bowman gave a bird house with three eggs. Claude Howell's donations include a washboard, a bathing suit, marionettes and a receipt holder.

From Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Johnson there is a black bear skin; Ned Crouse has contributerd uniform trousers and child's stockings; and Joseph N. Mintz has provided a 1926 Crosley Dynacone speaker.

For more variety, Jo Moore has donated a Gee-jogger and Leon R. Pierce a military shaving kit; and a sizeable number of items given by Bill Reaves include a tobacco box, a shoehorn, butter churn, and jewelry.

An item sure to be of nostalgia value to older servicemen, donated by Victor S. Sneeden, is a bomb release mechanism from a World War II B-29 bomber — remember them?

If you guessed that this collection is one earmarked for the Fantasy Yard Sale of the Year, you're wrong.

These something old, something different, something almost new items are among items donated by Wilmington area people to the New Hanover County Museum. The museum is conducting a volunteer drive to assemble a collection of artifacts — ordinary and exotic — depicting life as lived in past years. The collection will play an integral part in the museum's role showing Cape Fear history.

Koonce Wins energy Art Award

GOLDEN, COLO. — Lucien M. Koonce, a Greenville native now living in Des Moines, Iowa, is one of 15 prize winners in the Energy Art Exhibition now on view at the Foothills Art Center in Golden, Colorado. Koonce was awarded the second-place Beta Award of $1,550 for his untitled terra-cotta sculpture.

The Energy Art Exhibition attracted over 550 entries from across the nation, including paintings, photographs and sculptures all depicting some aspect of energy. Jurors selected 88 works for the show, representing artists from 26 states, and awarded $15,000 in cash prizes.

Summer Theater Ticket Sales Plan Set

ECU News Bureau

Twenty-five eastern North Carolinians have volunteered to coordinate season ticket sales for the East Carolina Summer Theater's 1982 season.

The volunteers cover a 15-county area. In previous seasons, volunteer regional representatives have accounted for the majority of Summer Theater season ticket sales, according to General Manager Scott Parker.

"Big Musicals Are Back" is the slogan for the 1982 season. The season includes July productions of "Grease," "Shenandoah," "Cabaret " and "She Loves Me."

All performances will be held at 8:15 p.m. in the newly enlarged McGinnis Theater, located in ECU's John D. Messick Theater Arts Center.

"The Summer Theater draws its audience from a large geographical area in North Carolina," said Parker. "We have found it's easier for many of our patrons to buy seasons tickets through a regional representative and save a trip or phone call to Greenville."

The volunteer regional representatives, chaired by Mrs. William S. Corbitt Jr. of Greenville, recently gathered at the ECU chancellor's residence for a preseason reception.

Their hosts were interim Chancellor John Howell and Summer Theater producer-director Edgar Loessin.

Bethel: Mrs. Ferrell Blount III.

Farmville: Mrs. Sylvester Aycock.

Robersonville-Williamston: Mr. and Mrs. Tom Brandon.

Greenville: Mrs. William S. Corbitt Jr., Mrs. W.S. Corbitt III, Mrs. Don Hardee, Mrs. Louis Singleton, Mrs. I.J. Edwards., Mrs. Ed Davis, Mrs. Leslie Fuchs, Mrs. Randy Williams, Mrs. Percy Cox, Mrs. Mel Markowski, Mrs. Sue Little, Mrs. Michael House and Mrs. Jasper Lewis.

Coleman, Luby In Monday Recital

Faculty pianist Donna Coleman, with guest artist violinist Richard Luby, will appear in recital at 8:15 p.m. Monday in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall on the East Carolina University campus. The concert is free and is open to the public.

For their program the two will perform Beethoven's "Sonata in G Major, Opus 30, No. 3" in three movements; "Deuxieme Sonate" by Bela Bartok; and after a brief intermission, Charles Ives' "Sonata No. 3 (1905-14)."

The Ives sonota is unusual in that it includes a pure and simple statement of a hymn-tune by the violin at the very close of the work.

Luby, a professor of violin at UNC-Chapel Hill, has been a soloist with the Philadelphia Orchestra, the Detroit Symphony, the National Symphony Orchestra and the Rochester Philharmonic. He is a member of the Mozarteum Players, a New York City based ensemble which performs music of the Classic period on original instruments. Several recordings have been critically acclaimed.

ECU Club Hosted Two-Day '82 Flying Disc Classic

FAVORITES ... in Frisbee circles throughout the United States and also in Europe, Japan and South America are the Velasquez brothers, Jens and Erwin, of South Plainfield, N.J. They recently won a championship in Sweden.

Text And Photographs By Jerry Raynor

AN ACROBATIC FEAT ... that drew cheers is performed by one of three players competing in the Tri-op semifinals on Sunday afternoon. The player carried out a stunning flip and retrieved the Frisbee to continue the play.

It was another first for East Carolina University. On Saturday and Sunday, April 17 and 18, the East Carolina Frisbee Disc Club played host to one of a series of national sanctioned frisbee tournaments scheduled for 1982.

Earlier tournaments this year have been held in Sacramento, California and in Fredericksburg, Virginia. Other sanctioned tournaments scheduled for 1982 are to be held in Charlotte; Manassas, Virginia; St. Louis, Missouri; Huntsville, Alabama; Brussels, Belgium; Santa Cruz, California; and Salisbury, Maryland.

One of the most intriuging aspects of the sport of disc throwing, is that as a sport it is still in its infancy. . . it is additionally the pioneer sport in utilizing a product of the 20th century miracle of lightweight material, plastic.

Stars of the flying disc clssic circuit are relatively unknown outside the small circle of ardent fans who faithfully keep tabs on these events worldwide. According to some players here Sunday, the basic rules of flying disc performance as a competitive sport are just beginning to emerge.

Because of these factors, there's a freshness, a forerunner type of appeal in the competition that carries the zest of new excitement both for the participant and the spectator.

For those who love to throw flying discs, a practical point is the basic simplicity and the relative inexpensiveness of the game.

"The game is booming because people are looking for a lively sport that doesn't cost an arm and leg, something that meets the physical needs of an individual as well as for groups of players," commented Tony Tomasino of N.C. State University, Raleigh. Tony is N.C. distance record holder.

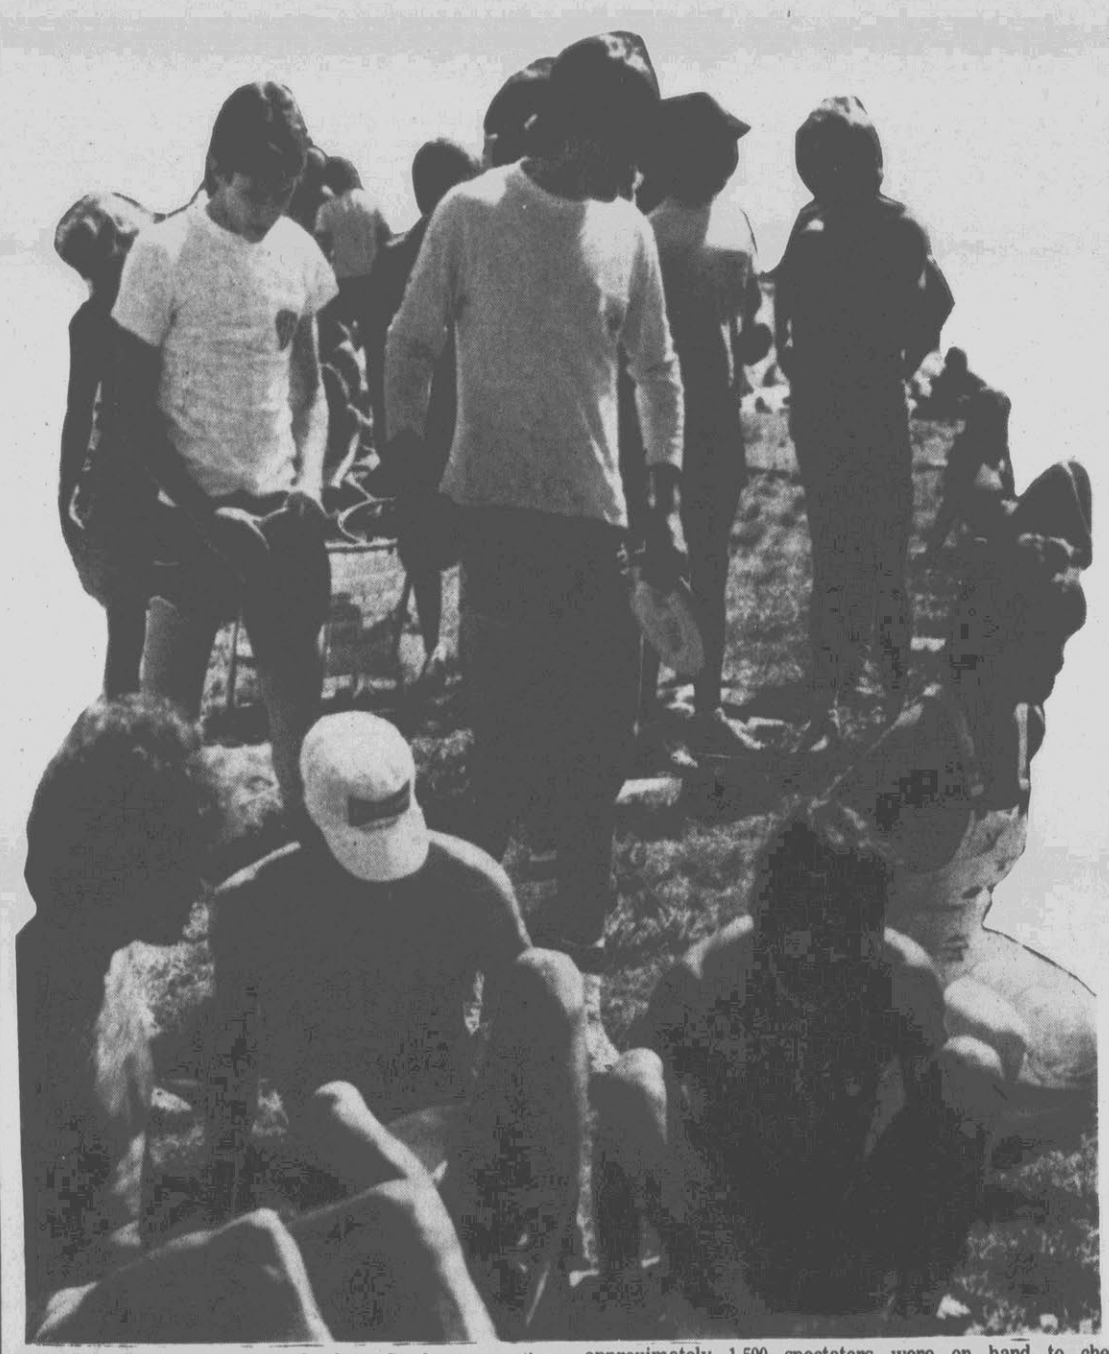
"It's a sport you can practice alone, with a friend, or with a group of people without having a lot of space or having to make a lot of preparation," commented Peter Laubert of the ECU team.

Occasionally, there's a lucky player who can afford to devote full time to following the flying disc trail. Donnie Rhodes of Austin, Texas, is an example. "You could call me a professional player," Donnie said. "All I do is play Frisbee, along with a little dancing." Winner of three world championships, Donnie, whose speciality is free style, picked up two top winning spots in Greenville Sunday. A vivacious youth, Donnie is a natural showman. During a lull period Sunday, he sprinted onto the field with a friend to entertain spectators with an impromptu performance that was part Frisbee, part ballet, and part clown acrobatics.

Most flying disc circuit players, however, fall into the category of college students who work circuit time around their studies. Jaime Chantiles of Scarsdale, N.Y., explained "I'm a student pursuing a master's degree in finance at Colorado University in Boulder." State champion in Colorado for two years, Jamies said "things worked out so that I was able to come down to Greenville for this competition."

Favorites whereever they go are the Velasquez brothers, Jens and Erwin, of South Plainfield, Newe Jersey. "We are part time students, and travel a lot," Jens said. "Whenever it's possible, we attend competitions. Already we've been five times to Europe. We have also competed in events held in Japan and South America."

The enthusiasm of these young people make it obvious they love being a part of the flying disc circuit. And judging from the number of spectators who spent nearly a full afternoon Sunday watching the various divisions of competition, its a young sport with a promising future.



SPECTATORS ... begin to settle down Sunday as another division of events got under way. The sunny weather made sitting on the grass a pleasant experience. By 2 p.m. Sunday, approximately 1,500 spectators were on hand to cheer competitors from a dozen states.

LAST MINUTE PRACTICE . . . Jamie Chantiles of Scarscale, N.Y., a student at the University of Colorado, Boulder, practices shortly before competition time on Sunday.

Do Homework Before Buying New Appliance

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — With appliances offering more features than ever, consumers need to do a little homework to be certain they buy a product suited to their needs, advises a consumer-affairs specialist of a major manufacturer.

Jean Hopwood of General Electric's Major Appliance Business Group offers these guidelines to help ensure satisfaction:

— Think of the future: Refrigerators and ranges, for example, last a long time. Individual and family needs can change considerably during an appliance's life span, so don't automatically buy to satisfy just today's needs. Instead, look for the appliance that will still meet your demands years from now.

— Consider your lifestyle: Because singles and working parents spend more time outside the home, they should look for appliances that save time and work. Microwave ovens, for example, are perfect for them. Microwave ovens can eliminate the need for much planning and provide immediate meals.

Large families, on the other hand, should consider appliances with a variety of features. Examples are self-cleaning ovens, refrigerators with large capacity and food-preservation capabilities, dishwashers with cycles to clean heavily soiled pots and pans, and dryers with sensors to turn off when clothes are dry.

— Avoid impulse buying: Read consumer publications, talk to different dealers, call manufacturers, contact your local utility company and speak to neighbors whose lifestyle and needs most resemble yours. All can give important tips to help you make the right decision.

— Know your financial limitations: If you're on a limited budget, it is not always necessary to buy the top models when appliances with fewer features can still offer high quality. Also, when buying on credit consider finance charges prior to purchasing.

— Shop before you buy: A good rule is to start with the manufacturers' top-of-the-line model. If you find features you won't use or need, move to the next level until you find the model that's right for you.

— Check electrical requirements: Make sure your home or apartment's electrical system can handle the appliance you're planning to purchase. Have the wiring checked by a qualified person.

— Know your own requirements: Have a good idea of the type of appliance you want before you go into the dealer's store.

Here's The Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — There are a lot of outside noises in our neighborhood that we would like to keep out of our house. It isn't too bad in the winter when the windows usually are closed, but gets very annoying in the warm weather when the screens are in place and the windows open. Is there any way to keep out this noise?

A. — This is a difficult problem to solve for the very reason you mentioned — noise can't be stopped if there is nothing in the way to stop it. You can only hope to make it less annoying once it gets into your rooms by having sound-absorbing materials there, such as drapes, rugs and upholstered furniture. These things keep the noises from bouncing around, but the overall effect is likely to be less than you want.

Q. — I found an old kitchen cabinet made of wood in our attic. It is in good condition structurally, but the white paint finish on it looks kind of messy. It has such a good design that we are thinking of using it in the living room if the wood is of good quality. Is there any way of finding out before we go to the trouble of taking off the old finish?

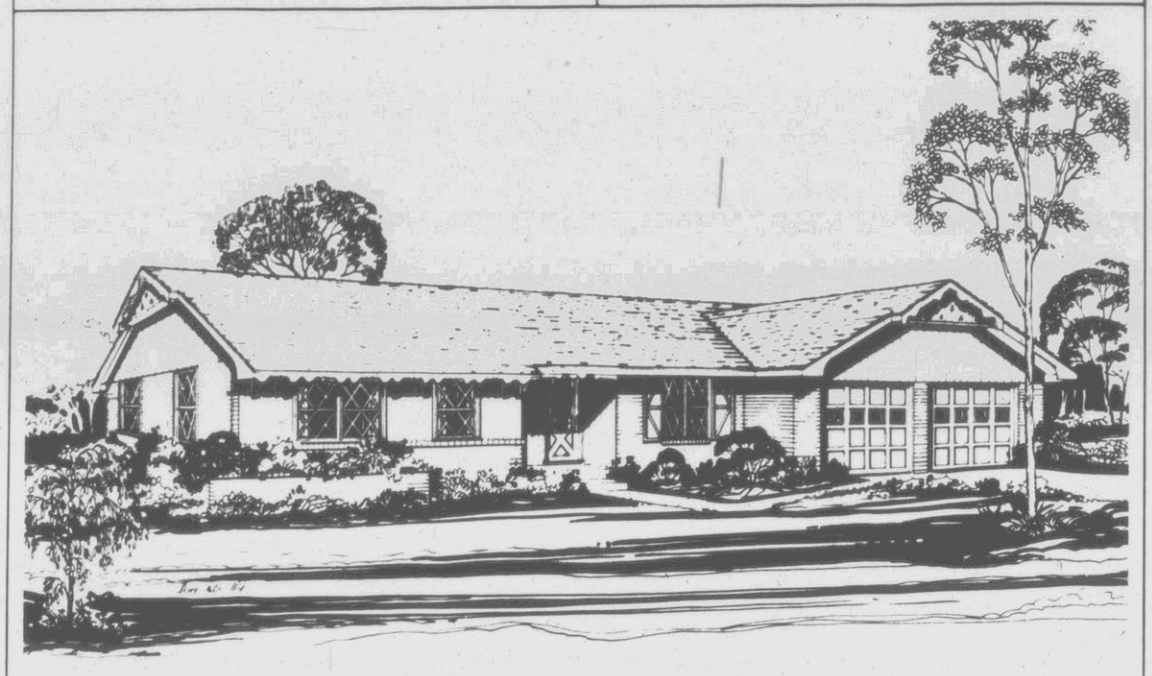
A. — None that I know. But you need not completely strip the cabinet to make that determination. Use paint remover to take off the finish on the top of it. When you do and decide it is wood that is pleasing to the eye, you can go ahead with the rest of the cabinet. However, be prepared for the possibility that a cabinet with a good top may have a lesser quality wood on the sides. After the finish is off, you can stain it, seal it and finish it with a clear finishing material. Should the removal fail to take off some of the coloring, try sanding and then, if necessary, bleaching. The bleaching will produce a uniform lightness which then can be stained to a desired tone. All of this is based on the assumption that you do not want to repaint the cabinet. If you do, then the staining and bleaching are not necessary.

Q. — We have an old bedroom bureau which we would like to clean. The finish is in good shape. We finished it with varnish a few years ago, but left it in the basement and it is kind of dirty. Can we clean it with lacquer thinner?

A. — No. The thinner may act as a remover. Use denatured alcohol, which will clean but not disturb the finish. Alcohol will act as a remover on shellac.

(The techniques of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, remover, stain, bleach, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P. O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.)

PLAN YOUR HOME — The Cottonwood



Efficient Floor Plan, Engaging Exterior

By Jerry Bishop

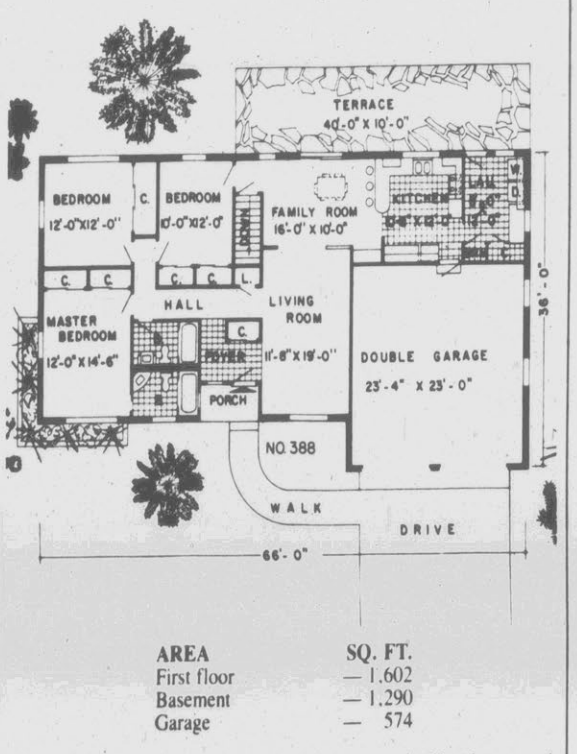
Simple lines and charming accents mark the exterior of the Cottonwood, a three bedroom ranch style plan. Inside, a workable floor plan manages to conserve space while including extras line the first floor laundry room.

Layered with brick and trimmed with diamond light windows and cross-buck front door, the Cottonwood radiates a homey appeal. A no-nonsense floor plan is dominated by the large tiled foyer which directs traffic to the living room at right or to the central hallway for easy access to bedrooms or family room.

Besides its obvious accessibility, the living room also merits a sizable area for entertaining and extensive wall space for furniture placement.

Informality reigns in the adjoining family room, a airy spot for family dining or conversation. It furnishes a snack bar, joining the room to the kitchen, and sliding glass doors that connect to the 40-ft. terrace. The kitchen itself is functional, and it offers a handy entry from the garage.

Bordering the kitchen is the laundry, an uncluttered area favored with 96 sq. ft. of space and direct access to the back yard. The room shows a built-in counter, broom closet, and storage closet and is large enough to consider adding pantry shelves.



AREA	SQ. FT.
First floor	— 1,602
Basement	— 1,290
Garage	— 574

Bedrooms are clustered to the left of the foyer and include three ample rooms and plenty of closet space. The master bedroom is well supplied with natural light and features double closets and private bath.

Additional storage and workshop space abounds in the basement, where plans call for 1290 sq. ft. of space, and the oversized double garage may also be used for storage.

Interior Award Winners Feature Quiet Livability

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

As one of the judges remarked at the presentation, each of the winning entries was a livable space furnished quietly in the best materials the client could afford.

For the past 24 years, the awards, sponsored by S. M. Hexter Fabric Co., and chosen by a jury of designers and editors, have been offering a glimpse into the standards of taste being proffered by the decorating establishment.

Judging from this year's winners, the first part of the 1980s is shaping up as a time in which decorating is meant to solve the problems of space arrangement in an unobtrusive fashion.

Where once a designer might have preferred to be known as a trend setter breaking new ground, this year's winners said they were more concerned about carrying out their clients' wishes.

Hal Adams, a New Yorker whose apartment design took first place in the residential category, said an important test of an interior was its appropriateness.

It's rather like dressing, he observed. "If you've got on sneakers, then you'd better put on a pair of jeans. If you're wearing patent leather shoes, then black tie is correct."

Mark Epstein, also of New York, received first honorable mention for his refurbishment of a suburban tract house. Epstein said that as a rule every decorating job involves rethinking the space to fit the client's needs.

He has found that suburban homes built even only a few years ago are almost always too formal for today's style of living.

"Rooms that are cut up into small separate spaces, each behind its own door, don't work today," he said. As a result, he generally starts by knocking down walls to provide for a more fluid and open arrangement of space.

Along with greater informality, there is an attitude that concentrates more on personal comfort and less on show, he added. "Years ago, people started by decorating the living room. Today, they often start by creating a retreat in the master bedroom and bath."

For Milo Hoots Jr., a Washington designer who received second honorable mention for an apartment for a couple relocating from a larger house, the first step in any project is to help clients define their needs and sort out priorities.

By and large this means fitting many possessions and activities into fewer, smaller, less architecturally interesting rooms.

The three designers agreed that whether they hire design help or not, most Americans face similar situations in furnishing their homes.

Among typical problems is the need for more storage space, easier maintenance and better lighting.

Although the number of possessions and the amount of time spent at home have not diminished, the amount of living space available to most people has. As a result, more built-in or store-bought storage furniture and rooms furnished for multiple use are usually necessary.

The anonymous character of new homes also requires more decorative ornamentation to create an atmosphere of warmth and comfort, the three designers said.

On balance, none of them would prefer to return to a more gracious past. They and their clients find much in the present that gives richness to home life.

"People love gadgets," explained Epstein. His clients opt for whirlpools in the bathroom, living areas that are furnished with the latest in media equipment, and kitchens that are efficient, easy to care for and filled with labor-saving devices.

Unlike the past, however, when possessions were on display, today's prized objects are usually stored out of sight.

The softness that once was furnished by ornate architecture and the clutter of possessions now comes from artful use of colors, lighting and many different surface textures.

English navigator-explorer Henry Hudson entered the bay later named after him in 1610, during his fourth and last voyage seeking a northwest passage to China. Hudson explored the bay's eastern shore from August to September in his 55-ton ship, the Discovery, and wintered in James Bay. The crew mutinied when supplies ran short, and Hudson, his son, and loyal crew members were set adrift in open boats June 22, 1611. Nothing is known of their fate.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

© 1982 Tribune Company Syndicate, Inc.

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—In a rubber game the other night, I picked up: ♠Qxx ♡x ◇Axx ♣AKJxxx

To my surprise, I heard my right-hand opponent open the bidding with one club. I presumed that it was probably a "short" club, so I overcalled with two clubs. Naturally, I intended the bid as showing a club suit. Unfortunately, my partner read it as a cue-bid to show a powerhouse. The result was something of a debacle. Both of us insist that the other was to blame, even though we realize that that cannot be the case. What's your opinion?—R. Jacobson, New York City

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)

A.—With the increasing number of "short" club conventions proliferating throughout the country, there are players who use a two club overcall of an opposing one club opening bid as natural. However, these players are still in the great minority. I would never risk a partnership misunderstanding by making such a bid unless I had a prior agreement with partner on the subject.

Failing agreement on that point, I would expect my partner to treat a two club overcall of a one club opening exactly as he would my two spade overcall of a one spade opening, or a cue-bid of any other opening bid in the immediate seat — as a strong hand with support for the unbid suits, needing little or nothing from him to make game. I have a slight personal preference for using an immediate cue-bid to show a strong two-suiter rather than a three-suiter because with that type of hand I don't want partner to convert a takeout double to penalties at a low level.

One other point I would like to make. Just because you hold a good six-card suit and it is a minor, don't presume that an opponent who opens the bidding in that suit has necessarily made a prepared bid on a short suit. You should treat all suit bids as showing a four-card or longer suit until you learn otherwise. On the hand you submit, your best course is to pass after your right-hand opponent opens the bidding, to see what develops. You can always back in later with a club bid, and then there is no chance that partner will misunderstand the bid.

Q.—I learned only recently that the Charles Goren award for "Bridge Player of the Year" was given to Deng Xiaoping. I am surprised that you allowed your award to be presented to the head of a Communist government. —R.B., Kokomo, Ind.

A.—First, the award was made by the International Bridge Press Association, not by me. Second, it was for "Bridge Personality of the Year," not player of the year. Third, I think it was an excellent choice.

In bridge, there are only good players and bad players, not communist players and capitalist players. Bridge should live up to its name and be a bridge between nations. Politics and bridge, like politics and sports, should be kept apart.

Wedgewood Arms apartments are within walking distance of three shopping centers, a nursery school, a junior high school, doctors' and dentists' offices and an athletic center.

As if that wasn't enough, three major traffic arteries; 264 Bypass, Arlington Blvd., and Charles St. are close enough to be seen and not heard.

ECU Given Radiation-Detection Monitor

ECU News Bureau

East Carolina University has received a gift that can make the jobs of technicians, researchers and medical personnel who may be exposed to small amounts of radiation safer by "reading" a badge worn by the worker.

The Burroughs Wellcome Co. has given ECU sophisticated radiological monitoring equipment that quickly measures the amount of radiation a person has been exposed to and computes dosages on a cumulative basis.

"This really enhances our radiation safety program," said Daniel D. Sprau, ECU radiation safety officer, who will be in charcge of operating the $20,000 system.

Sprau said thermoluminescent dosimeter (TLD) wrist and ring badges will be issued to between 200 and 250 people whose jobs bring them into contact with varying types and amounts of radiation, including X-rays, radiation scanners and radioactive isotopes used as tracers and scanners in research.

"The great advantage is that the system brings our monitoring 'in house,' " Sprau said. Until now, radiation detection badges had to be sent to Chicago for monitoring, a costly procedure that required three weeks to a month.

The system given by Burroughs Wellcome consists of a high-speed Eberline TLD Reader with teletype interface, a J.L. Shepherd Dosimeter Irradiator, a glow curve recorder, a high temperature annealing furnace, a teletype and accessories.

Accessories include a supply of lithium fluoride chips that capture the electrons which spin off radioactive elements. Subjected to intense heat, the electrons are released and emit a measurable glow of light in direct proportion to the amount of radiation. Shields of different thickness are used to determine whether the radiation consists of Beta or Gamma rays by measuring the degree of penetration.

Burroughs Wellcome, the pharmaceutical manufacturer, has used the TLD system at its Research Triangle Park research and development facility since 1976, according to Elizabeth Katsikis, corporate radiation safety officer. She said ECU was chosen for the gift because of it's rapidly developing medical school, medical technology advances and scientific research.

Burroughs Wellcome has a large, modern production facility located in Greenville and its scientists work closely with ECU, according to John McConney, Greenville site manager for Burroughs Wellcome.

The officials said ECU is the first state university in North Carolina to have such a radiological monitoring system.

Expressing the university's appreciation, acting Chancellor John M. Howell noted that through many years of association, Burroughs Wellcome has given ECU many useful gifts.

Life As It's Lived

By GAIL MICHAELS

Oddly enough, the strongest allies of the status quo are not adults but children. Children are conformists of the highest order. They want everything their peers have, and if their parents try to buck the system by refusing to provide these necessities, the kids make them srffer. Meg knows how to lay on the guilt like peanut butter.

She believes, for instance, that one of the more important tasks of a parent is to keep the dentists and the Japanese toy makers in a financially comfortable position. She wants an allowance so that she can buy candy, plastic eggs, plastic vampire fangs and plastic bubbles in a tube. You name it, if it cracks under the weight of a tennis shoe, if it's easily ground into a rug, or if it can make a vacumum cleaner sound like a trash compactor, she finds that the 89 cent or $2.19 price tag is irresistible.

"Molly has an allowance," she whined when I refused her request for a purple plastic headband adorned with the image of her favorite cartoon character. "If I had an allowance, I could buy this and wear it to church tomorrow."

"Life is hard," I answered with my usual maternal concern.

"Molly says she is learning the responsibility of handling money," Meg continued. "I need responsibility, too, but you treat me like a baby."

I intended to be reasonable. "I'll be delighted to give you an allowance, but you have to work for it. You have to feed the cat, keep your room clean, make your bed every morning, set the table and fold the towels."

We are still negotiating. She is not sure she wants that much responsibility. But she definitely wants a tooth fairy who brings dollars and books and gum instead of two lousy dimes and a nickel. She wants Count Chocula cereal. She wants a Snoopy Sno-Cone machine, a My Pretty Pony, a mechanical dog with kidney problems. Molly has all this and more. Molly has a mother who doesn't make her eat her vegetables, who lets her wear a pink bra, who tells hick jokes and little moron jokes. Meg has to make do with a mother who still thinks 200-pound canaries are funny.

. "I love you," she reassures, "but most of the time I wish I lived with Molly."

If that's supposed to make me feel low, it does. My only respite from all this guilt is my relationship with Zachary. He has resisted all attempts of disapproving strangers to part him from his pacifiers, one for his mouth and a spare for each hand. He hasn't seemed to care if he has alligators parading across his chest or not. In short, he almost lulled me into believing that he was a nonconformist like his mother. The lack of guilt made me feel positively heady.

But I got my comeuppance on Easter. I had decided to depart from the norm of a year's supply of marshmallow eggs and self-propagating plastic grass. I filled Meg's and Zachary's baskets with a few small toys instead.

Meg was delighted. She finally got the purple headband she wanted. But Zachary quickly gulped down the few jellybeans he had and began to examine the Matchbox moving van with the removable back. After a while he came toddling over with one piece in one hand and the other piece in the other hand.

"Let me see, Zachary," I said. "What did the Easter bunny bring you?"

He gazed at me mournfully. "A bwoken twuck."

I sat there speechless with dismay. Meg quickly realized that opportunity had knocked.

"Poor, poor Zachary," she said , patting him on the shoulder. "It's too bad I don't have an allowance, or I'd buy you a truck that was decent."

There are bats that eat frogs, catching them at the rate of more than six an hour. The frog-eating bats, which haunt tropical forests from Mexico to southern Brazil, hunt their prey by tuning in on their mating calls. Remarkably, says National Geographic, the bats can distinguish between edible frogs and the poisonous kind.

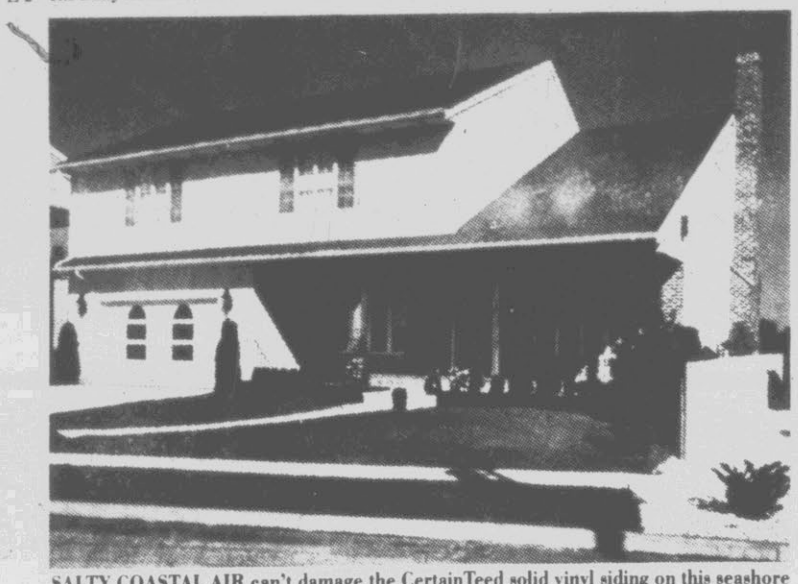
Spring is home improvement time!



SALTY COASTAL AIR can't damage the CertainTeed solid vinyl siding on this seashore home. The durable siding material also resists dents and will not chip, peel or show scratches. It will be around for a long time, too, judging from the product's 40-year prorated warranty.

Solid vinyl siding withstands the rigors of Mother Nature

For years, man has fought the elements with shelter materials that eventually would succumb to the hostile environment. Salt air and moisture did in wood siding, while hailstones wreaked havoc with aluminum.

One home siding material, however—solid vinyl siding—handles the environment with ease. So much so that it is virtually maintenance-free.

While solid vinyl siding has been around for several years, the first such siding that was sold carried only a 15 or 20 year warranty. But, the product performed so well that manufacturers such as CertainTeed have increased their prorated warranty up to a full 40 years.

Homeowners in coastal regions find the durability of solid vinyl siding especially attractive. Whereas wood siding in these areas requires repainting every three or four years, solid vinyl never has to be repainted since the color is molded clear through the material.

Salt air creates headaches for owners of some aluminum-sided homes, too. Once the protective cover paint is scratched or chipped, salt air can begin to corrode the metal, similar to the way road salt attacks automobiles. Solid vinyl siding, on the other hand, will not corrode.

Don't think that vinyl siding is only for owners of seashore homes, though. Midwesterners like the way hailstones bounce off the siding without leaving a mark. And, homeowners everywhere are happy to send their paint brushes into permanent retirement.

As for appearance, CertainTeed solid vinyl siding is virtually indistinguishable from fine clapboard. The rugged panels have a woodgrain texture and are available in a variety of widths. CertainTeed makes solid vinyl siding in nine attractive colors, more than any other manufacturer.

If you have better things to do with your time than maintaining your home, think about adding solid vinyl siding. And, if you want more information, write to CertainTeed Corporation, P.O. Box 860, Valley Forge, PA 19482.

Turning old into new to meet housing needs

When it comes to housing, Americans are marching to the beat of a different drummer than in the past. Gone are the days of being a throw-away society. Increasing emphasis is being placed on preserving, restoring and remodeling America's existing housing stock.

The cause for this conservation explosion stems from realization that our country faces a serious housing shortage.

Economic conditions have created a radical decline in the number of new houses being built, the median price for a new home is over $70,000 and the mortgage financing available is at the highest rates ever seen in this country. Simultaneously, the formation of households in America is on the rise.

To combat this growing shortage Americans are taking the offensive. They're turning to repair and remodeling.

Residential renewal

According to the National Home Improvement Council (NHIC), $21.6 billion was spent for upkeep and improvement of residential properties during the first six months of 1981.

In cities and towns throughout America, people are combining creativity and ingenuity to turn existing housing inventory into the modern homes of tomorrow.

Uninhibited thinking is resulting in the renewal of neighborhoods, the transformation of abandoned manufacturing sites and the continuation of the American tradition of home ownership

Repairs vary

While some individuals are turning unconventional structures such as unoccupied manufacturing lofts, churches and factories into housing units, the mainstay of the population is either fixing up the home they already own or, if a first time buyer, looking for a home which is undervalued because it needs repair.

"Be careful not to over-estimate your capabilities," warns Hammon, "or the results could be disappointing."

Existing structures

As America awakens to the overwhelming benefits and cost-effectiveness of what they and responsible home improvement contractors can accomplish together, more and more of our existing housing stock will return to fruitful use.

The National Home Improvement Council, which is the largest trade association representing all segments of the home improvement industry, endorses the movement toward utilizing America's existing housing resources.

"The drumbeat heard today is announcing the rebirth of America's existing housing stock," states NHIC's Hammon, "a rebirth which will afford more individuals and families home ownership than ever before."

ONE OF THE BEST TIME SAVERS to come along in years is no-wax vinyl flooring. If you use Perk®, a product designed for this finish, you can clean and shine in one easy step without rinsing. And, you'll never have to worry about build-up.

Time-consuming jobs you don't have to do

The best way to deal with some jobs around the house is not to have to do them at all. Here are three spring home improvements that are easy on the budget, and will help make housekeeping easier for you.

Did you know that in just one year the stove in an average kitchen generates 200 pounds—yes, pounds—of grease and soot? Why spend needless hours cleaning this mess when a simple range hood, ducted to the outside of your home, will keep your kitchen almost free of this problem in the first place.

Range hoods have undergone great improvements during the past few years. They're easy to install and much quieter than older models. They'll also help keep your kitchen cool.

Hate defrosting your refrigerator and freezer? Before investing in the self-defrost kind which can boost your electricity bill, try improving what you have.

Close the doors of these appliances over a thin piece of paper, and then give the paper a tug. If you can pull the paper out, then air is going in the same way. A new gasket will easily fix that leak.

Another way to help keep these appliances frost-free longer is to keep the exhausts well vacuumed and at least three inches away from the wall.

One of the best time-savers to come along in years is no-wax vinyl flooring. Because of the tremendous range of colors, patterns and textures, designers are using it throughout the house.

Some insulation jobs need professional's expertise

If you're thinking about adding insulation, but are one of those homeowners who disdains manual labor, you'd better hire a professional contractor.

Do-it-yourself is definitely not for you. You're not alone, however. An estimated $29 billion in home modernization projects is expected to be handled by professionals this year, according to a recent home improvement study.

Adding insulation to finished walls is an example. It requires the skills and services of an expert. Hiring a contractor is virtually the only way to get the job done efficiently and thoroughly.

Helpful hints

The Mineral Insulation Manufacturers Association offers the following tips to those considering an insulation contractor:

- Get a list of candidates from friends, neighbors, or your local utility. Or, look in the telephone directory under "Insulation Contractors—Cold and Heat."
- Get price quotes based on the same terms. For instance, specify the type of insulation and the R-value you desire. Savings vary. Find out why in the seller's fact sheet on R-values. Higher R-values mean greater insulating power.
- Ask your local utility for the proper R-values to install in your area. In general, MIMA recommends R-30 or R-38 for attic floors; R-13 for walls; and R-11 or R-19 in floors above cold spaces.

The most popular kind of insulation is mineral fiber, either rock wool or fiber glass.

Wallcoverings: quick way to redecorate this spring

One of the fastest ways to redecorate your home or apartment—and to add an instant atmosphere that reflects your personality—is to use wallcoverings.

Aside from the beauty that color, pattern and texture add, wallcovering is also a great way to solve wall problems, from persistent cracking over windows to bumps and uneveness in walls.

The good news for spring home redecorating is the expanding fashionable designs in new Sanitas collections and the ease of hanging those wallcoverings with the new Sanitas Paste-the-Wall®.

All you need to apply it is either a paint roller and tray, or a pasting brush. You paste an area the size of one strip of wallcovering and then hang one strip at a time.

You don't need to move all the furniture to the center of the room, just far enough away from the wall so you have a little elbow room. You don't need messy pasting tables or big, sloppy water trays.

You set up in seconds . . . just open the bucket of Paste-the-Wall and cut your strip or strips of wallcovering. So, if you can't do the job all in one day, don't worry. You can spread it out over a period of time.

If you accidently get some Paste-the-Wall on the ceiling or floor, you can wipe it up with a sponge and warm water. And, you can re-use your tools because they're washable, as well.

Sanitas, which is known to many people as the oldest, most respected manufacturer of strippable, scrubbable, fabric-backed vinyl wallcoverings, also has some other decorating hints for the handy homeowner:

- Pattern and texture do a lot to minimize flaws such as hairline cracks, which show up with paint.
- All-over or non-directional patterns work best for covering up the unevenness of a wall. Stripes and foils tend to make the flaws more pronounced.
- Measuring and pre-cutting your wallcovering makes your project go faster. Arrange them in the order they'll be hung, and have the pattern all going in the same direction.
- The easiest way to achieve the new Romantic look is with wallcoverings.

Not many doctors make house calls these days, but even fewer leave your house with heating bills 15 percent to 25 percent lower than before. Yet, that is exactly what the "House Doctors" of Princeton Energy Partners (P.E.P.) are doing for a growing number of homeowners across the country.

Using state-of-the-art technology and equipment, House Doctors examine a home and actually measure energy leaks and their locations. Those that can be doctored easily are fixed on the spot, resulting in immediate energy savings of 15 percent to 25 percent.

The homeowner is also given a briefing on additional work that could be done to the home, listed in order of importance and with cost-effectiveness of each item.

Because it measures amounts of heat being lost at specific locations, the House Doctor approach can also save homeowners costly, and perhaps unnecessary, energy repairs. For example, insulating a wall or ceiling without pinpointing and repairing invisible energy leaks is both wasteful and less effective.

Rx for residences

A House Doctor will properly diagnose the problem first, so that houses doctored under the P.E.P. prescription have been seen to save their owners as much as two-thirds of their previous heating bills.

The principles that make the House Doctor technique so effective are the results of research at Princeton University, demonstrating that many factors come into play in home energy efficiency.

This research has made the public increasingly aware that insulation is not a panacea to all energy ills, and that invisible yet common problems such as air infiltration and "bypass" heat losses need a more pinpointed approach for reducing a home's energy consumption. These factors are only measurable with instruments such as those used by P.E.P. House Doctors.

House Doctors work in teams of two trained technicians. On arrival at a home to be doctored, they first set up a large fan or "blower door" to simulate a wind of 20-miles-an-hour on all exterior surfaces of the structure simultaneously.

While one monitors instruments to determine overall heat loss, the other scans walls and ceilings with an infrared detector to locate areas where energy is escaping through invisible bypasses.

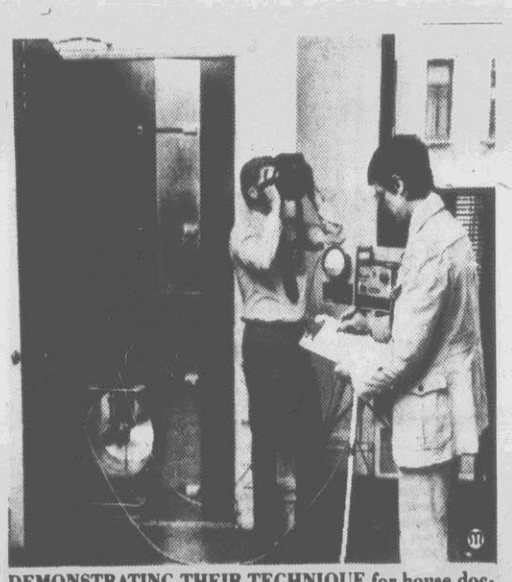
Identifying problem areas

A complete examination, which takes half a day, identifies and eliminates energy leaks from such unexpected sources as attics, ceilings and walls, between floors, through electrical outlets, around furnace flues, or anywhere else heat might invisibly escape.

House Doctors also perform furnace tune-ups, adjust the functioning of hot water systems, and calibrate clock thermostats, discussing settings with the owner. Total cost of the visit is about $380 (with some variation based on house size).

House Doctors are trained professionals under certification of Princeton Energy Partners, an energy management and consulting company serving residential energy conservation businesses and homeowners.

Several of the principals of P.E.P. originated the "House Doctor" Program while at Princeton University's Environmental Studies Program, and they are currently building and training a network of certified House Doctors in franchises around the country.



DEMONSTRATING THEIR TECHNIQUE for house doctoring, above, is the Princeton Energy Partners team of Kenneth Gadsby (L) and Herb Mertz (R). A large fan called a blower door, manufactured by one of the principals of Princeton Energy Partners Inc., is installed to create a 20-mile-an-hour exterior wind on all outer surfaces of the home. Herb Mertz monitors instruments to calculate the overall heat loss from the house, while his associate, Kenneth Gadsby, scans ceilings and walls with an infrared heat detector to locate areas where energy is escaping through invisible bypasses.

All reroofing jobs are not the same

All roofs have to be replaced sooner or later but all reroofing jobs are not the same.

If the old roof surface is relatively smooth and the deck is in good condition, a tear-off may not be necessary. Asphalt shingles, in most cases, can be applied directly over the old roofing.

A professional roofing contractor should be able to tell whether you can avoid the cost and inconvenience of a tear-off.

Rejuvenate kitchen with new wallcoverings, fabrics, ideas

Any homemaker knows how much time she, and her family, spend in and around the kitchen and, sooner or later, even the best-planned kitchen needs to be freshened, brightened, hopefully made even more practical and useful.

Many of today's new wallcoverings and companion fabrics have been designed not only to provide a wide range of choices, but also to give you, with a bit of ingenuity, a totally new look.

Furthermore, they've also been produced with scrubbability built in, so that everything will stay just right, with a minimum of care.

This kitchen is an excellent example of how it can be done. As you can see, its proportions are far from ideal.

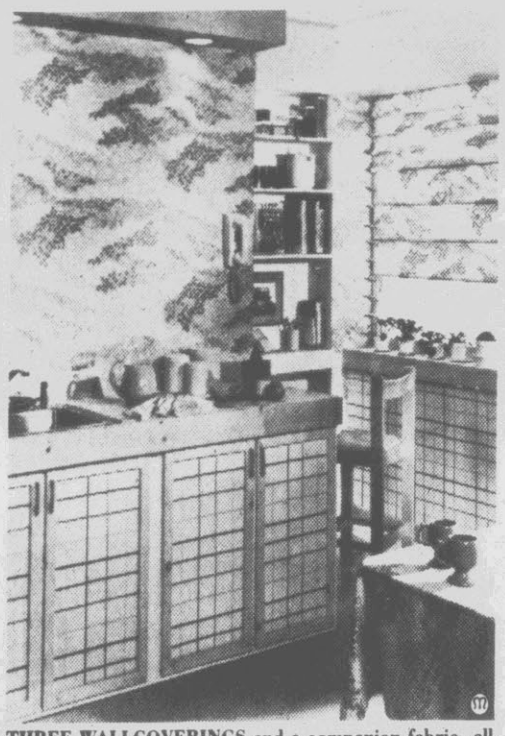
There's an awkward corner, a window that's not particularly well placed, and a soffit all around the ceiling: too much happening without any special visual relationship to each other.

However, three wallcoverings and one fabric from the new "Gloria Vanderbilt Wallcoverings & Companion Fabrics" Collection by James Seeman Studios, Division of Masonite Corporation, have been utilized, and the result is a coordinated, crisp and country-look room that solves this kitchen's needs and contains guidelines for other rooms as well.

Color and scale are vitally important in making everything work harmoniously, and here it began with the choice of a floral "mini-landscape" design called "Rambling Road," in greens, yellows, orange on white, for the main walls, and its fabric companion for window shades and tablecloth.

An effective contrasting design called "Tattersall," a check in green, blue, and yellow on white, has been set into the light wood kitchen cabinets and under the window sill, its "open" look adding perspective and depth, visually suggesting space beyond.

Not at all incidentally, an open check, trellis, plaid or similar grille-like design is very useful in providing the illusion of more space than you've actually got, and this is called a "windowpane" effect for exactly that reason.



THREE WALLCOVERINGS and a companion fabric, all designed by Gloria Vanderbilt for James Seeman Studios, give a new look to this kitchen, now bright, fresh, easy-to-care-for, and with the added plus of a new home office in a once-difficult corner. For a free brochure on the "Gloria Vanderbilt Wallcoverings & Companion Fabrics" Collection and its many color, design, scale suggestions and ideas, write to James Seeman Studios, Division of Masonite Corporation, 50 Rose Place, Garden City Park, NY 11040.

While most of the colors in "Tattersall" are the same as in "Rambling Road," stronger blue stripes are now part of the picture: good color sense involves adding grace notes wherever possible and attractive, with your eye telling you how it all fits together.

One really helpful structural change, for both utility and appearance, has been accomplished by making the corner area a home office and combined storage/display space.

All this involved was adding some shelving and a miniature desk, in the same wood as the cabinetry, plus a caneseat stool. For coordination with the rest of the room, both this wall and the soffit have been covered in a very subtle design by Gloria Vanderbilt called "Diamonds," with tiny flecks of yellow on a white diamond-patterned ground.

By the way, some left-over pieces of "Diamonds" have been used to cover the three canisters on the countertop, a good idea for practically any small pieces in need of quick and easy renewal.

The fresh and cheerful quality of the wallcoverings, and their practicality, are echoed in the equally practical white vinyl tile flooring, and the breakfast table, with a "Rambling Road" tablecloth, fits into the scheme whether set against the wall, pulled out for informal snacking, used as an extra surface whenever necessary.

For a free brochure on the "Gloria Vanderbilt Wallcoverings & Companion Fabrics" Collection, write to: James Seeman Studios, Division of Masonite Corporation; 50 Rose Place, Garden City Park, NY 11040.

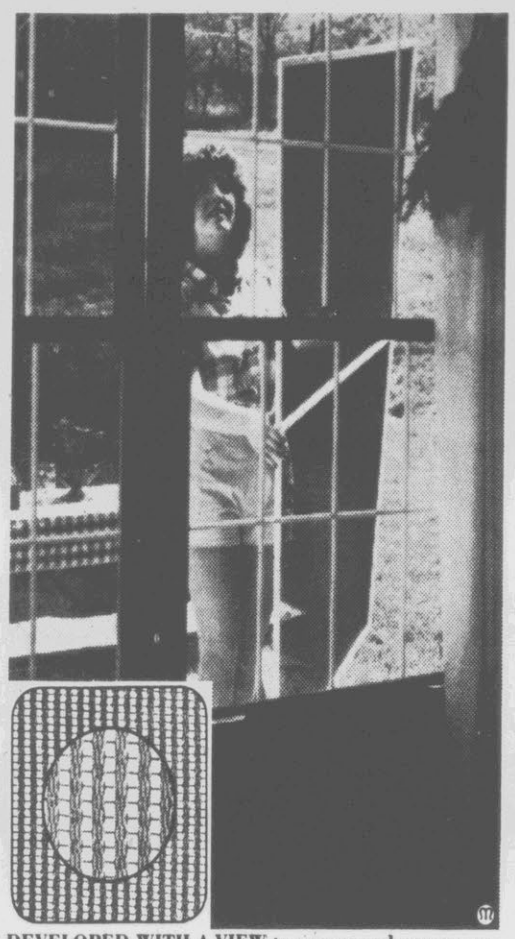
Exterior solar screen insulates doors, windows



DEVELOPED WITH A VIEW to year round energy savings, attractive, affordable SunScreen Solar Screening helps reduce energy waste, thus reducing air conditioning and heating bills. In summer, SunScreen blocks out up to 70 percent of the sun's glare and heat, while letting in gentle breezes and, in winter, it helps insulate windows against strong winds. SunScreen's effectiveness is due to its distinctive rib-weave construction (inset), shown actual size and enlarged. SunScreen can be installed on any type or size of window.

All homeowners today are looking for ways to make their homes more energy efficient. As a result, many homes are now fairly well insulated, except for one important area.

You need only to touch a window pane during a cold winter storm, or sit near an unprotected window during a hot sunny day, to realize windows and sliding glass doors can be very vulnerable areas for energy waste, both winter and summer.

Why then do people continue to build homes and offices with large areas of glass? The reason is simple: people like windows.

Oftentimes we buy and build because of the view. Psychologists tell us that people are actually healthier in an environment where they can see out.

What windows do

Windows do have some benefits in building design. They can help save energy by offering supplemental lighting or heating. This natural sunlight is almost a must for growing flowers and other plants indoors. During many times of the year, windows can be opened for ventilation if they are equipped with insect screening.

The ideal solution in window management is to equip your windows in such a way that you see out, heat stays inside in winter and excess heat is blocked out during the summer months or on bright sunny days. One simple solution that has already helped over a million homeowners is SunScreen Solar Screening.

SunScreen is also the ideal product during that time of year when windows are opened for ventilation since it is an open mesh that replaces regular insect screening. SunScreen allows air to circulate and gentle breezes to enter, but stops the bugs.

SunScreen, as its name implies, was developed originally as a "summer" product. When attached on the outside of the window, inches in front of the glass surface, SunScreen stops up to 70 percent of the sun's heat and glare before striking and entering the window. It has been used effectively for years in such hot climates as Arizona, California and Texas.

As an exterior shading product, it is particularly effective on east, west and south-facing windows, and on sliding glass doors facing pools or patios. Exterior shading is several times more effective than any shading at the window surface or inside the window.

More recent tests, however, have shown that SunScreen helps to insulate windows and doors against the harsh winds of winter, too. It seems the unique ribbed weave construction of SunScreen greatly reduces "wind wash" on the glass surface. In addition, the semi-dead air space between the screen and the glass acts as an insulating blanket.

For maximum year-round performance, SunScreen should be installed from 1" to 3" in front of the glass (on the exterior side). Laboratory tests show up to a 15 percent increase in the thermal performance of a clear ¼" plate glass when SunScreen is installed in this fashion. Some building owners report much greater savings.

Fading of furnishings, drapes and carpets is also a year-round problem. SunScreen greatly reduces these problems, winter and summer.

SunScreen reduces glare, too, and this feature is especially appreciated where reflections from snow, water, adjacent buildings or even paved surfaces might cause a problem.

In the winter months, SunScreen can help prevent hot spots around windows and can result in a more uniform distribution of heat.

Another unique feature of SunScreen is its daytime privacy...you can see out, but not in. Homeowners can leave the shades up and the drapes opened and still enjoy daytime privacy. Most flowers seem to flourish too behind SunScreen's gentle shading.

Selection of colors

Woven of long-lasting fiberglass yarn, SunScreen is available in a variety of pleasing colors to enhance the exterior appearance of any type building.

Most homeowners prefer to have SunScreen installed by an authorized dealer. To find a dealer in your area, look in the telephone book under Screening/SCREENS—DOOR AND WINDOW or STORM WINDOWS AND DOORS.

SunScreen is also available in many hardware and home centers, and installation is not difficult for the do-it-yourselfer.

To be really effective, SunScreen should cover the entire window area. If you have half-screens or no screens at all, you may be better off to contact an installer.

The payback period for SunScreen should be less than three years, even if custom installed, that's based on today's utility rates, which will surely rise in years to come.

So, if you have unprotected windows and glass doors, SunScreen might just be the solution you need for year-round comfort and economy. The modest cost of SunScreen might fit your budget better than other forms of window treatment available.

For additional information, or if SunScreen is not available locally, contact the manufacturer: Phifer Wire Products, Inc., P.O. Box 1700, Tuscaloosa, AL 35403. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Attic ventilation system offers comfort without using energy

When residential attic space is either not ventilated at all or inadequately ventilated, the result can be heat build-up in the summer and a reduction of insulating value in the winter.

But, by using the natural forces of wind pressure and thermal effect, an attic ventilation system called Vent-A-System is eliminating these problems without the use of energy.

How it works

Vent-A-System incorporates two separate units. The first is a continuous louvered opening along the peak of the roof that lets warm air escape from the attic, preventing heat buildup in summer and moisture condensation in winter.

The second part is a louvered vent opening under the eaves on both sides of the house, parallel to the ridge. Air enters through the openings, forcing the heated air up and out through the peak. The whole process is a natural one and eliminates the need for energy-consuming power fans.

In the summer, the hot air trapped in the attic can result in a hot, uncomfortable house and quicken or contribute to roof shingles buckling or deteriorating.

With Vent-A-System, the warm air is forced naturally from the attic. The cooler attic also means air conditioners don't have to work as hard.

Good attic ventilation is also important in wintertime, too, because it helps reduce heat loss. In the winter, moist air infiltrates into the attic space from the rooms below, condensing in the cold attic on the rafters and the underside of the roof.

As it begins to melt, the moisture dampens the insulation below, causing it to lose its insulating value. Additionally, roof sheathing, rafters and joists may rot, paint peel and plaster deteriorate.

Vent-A-System's natural process prevents this condensation and also keeps the roof temperature close to the outside air temperature to reduce the melting and refreezing action on roof overhangs and gutters.

Remodeling door is easy to install, saves on heating and cooling bills

Remodeling to replace your entrance doors can save valuable energy dollars, give you more security, and make it easier to sell your home as a more attractive package.

With the new Benchmark Remodeling Door, a handyman can do-it-yourself in a few hours. You simply install the new door into the existing wood frame.

A total package

This new design comes complete in its own carton, with clear and illustrated instructions. You get a steel insulated door, pre-hung in its frame, with weather-stripping that seals like a refrigerator, and a thermal barrier threshold. A total package that blocks heat flow—in or out of your home.

With its dense foam insulation and tight sealing against air infiltration, a Benchmark door system provides several times the insulating value of a solid wood door plus storm door.

Homeowners may also qualify for an Energy Credit Tax Deduction because these doors meet the 1.5 inch insulation thickness rule.

Ease of installation, whether you do it yourself or with outside help, is the unique advantage of this Remodeling Door. Basically, you simply remove the old door and slip the complete pre-hung package into place, using the existing frame.

Before beginning, you measure the wood frame for proper size. Remodeling doors come in two widths—one which will fit openings from 31¾" to 32¼" and another to fit openings from 35¾" to 36¼". Both will fit opening heights from 79⅞" to 80¼".

After selecting the correct size, you are ready to follow this simple step-by-step installation.

First, carefully pry off existing interior trim and save for re-use. Then remove the old door, strike plate, hinges, weatherstripping and the old threshold. Check to see that door sill is flush with floor level.

Read instructions first

Now, open the carton and read the instructions. After placing the two sections of threshold together, you are ready to place the pre-hung Remodeling Door into the opening.

First make sure that the hinge jamb is square to ensure a vertical installation for free swinging door operation. Then nail the hinge flange to the existing frame.

Then nail the strike flange to the old frame, and open the door. Now you secure both hinge and strike jambs with screws into the studs behind the existing wood frame and the door is in.

To finish the installation, you replace the strike plate and lockset according to manufacturer's instructions.

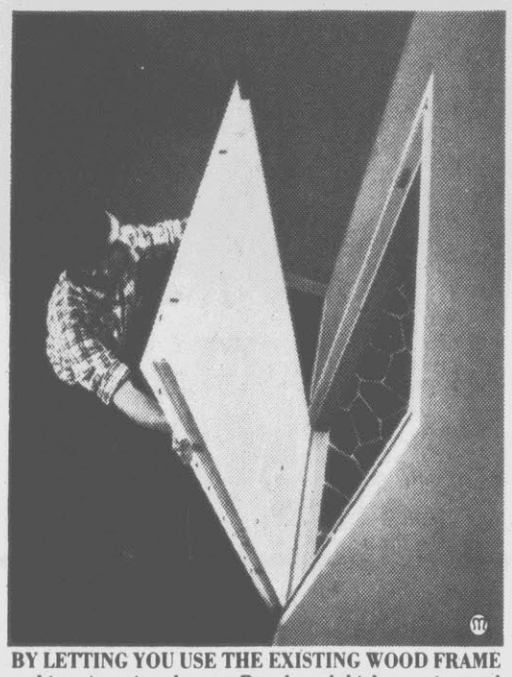
Now you cut the factory-supplied weatherstrip stops to exact length and nail these to the frame against the closed door. Caulk these stops and the threshold. Replace the interior trim and you're finished.

Many architectural styles are available in these Remodeling Doors—traditional, contemporary, doors with tempered insulated glass in clear, stained and leaded type models.

All provide homeowners with a handsome new entranceway that saves on fuel bills while increasing the home's resale value. And all these advantages are yours at a do-it-yourself price.

Send for information

For a free brochure in full color showing the variety of Benchmark Remodeling Doors, contact General Products Company, Inc., P.O. Box 7387, Fredericksburg, VA 22404. Phone 703/898-5700.



BY LETTING YOU USE THE EXISTING WOOD FRAME and interior trim, the new Benchmark high security steel door can be installed in just a few simple steps. Advantages include the added security of a steel door, plus energy savings substantial enough to qualify homeowners for an Energy Credit Tax Deduction.

More than just a bath!

HERE'S A ROOM THAT CAN ADD A SPRINGTIME TOUCH ALL YEAR LONG. This all purpose room opens onto a private garden patio on one side and a health center on the other. Bathtub is the Kohler Caribbean, 6′ (1829mm) long, and 36″ (915mm) wide with gently sloping back, safety grip rails and Safeguard® slip-resistant bottom. Kohler's Rochelle toilet in privacy compartment features low silhouette and sculptured styling. Farmington self-rimming lavatory is complemented by faucets from Kohler's Alterna line in polished chromium. Lounging area features skylight and sun lamp. Color scheme can build on blues, greens and woodtones of the outdoors.

Short on storage space? Add certified cabinets

Many a shopper returns home with a mass of groceries too voluminous to fit the available storage space. One solution is to halve the volume of groceries while doubling the number of trips to the supermarket.

A better one, says the National Kitchen Cabinet Association, is to update the kitchen. Additional storage space in the form of base, wall and corner cabinets adds up to time and trip-saving convenience.

Many up-to-date kitchen cabinet lines offer additional storage and convenience features such as revolving shelves, partitioned racks and slide-out trays.

When shopping for kitchen cabinets, NKCA advises consumers to consider performance and durability as well as appearance and convenience. Look for the NKCA-certification seal inside a cabinet door or drawer.

The seal means the cabinets meet the tough construction and performance standards of the American National Standards Institute (ANSI).

To earn the seal, kitchen cabinets and bath vanities must pass more than 30 laboratory tests and inspections, which measure such things as structural resistance to overloading, door slams and impact from dropped objects.

Finish tests measure resistance to heat, humidity, detergent splashes and spills of such potentially harmful substances as alcohol, catsup and mustard.

VANITY UNIT FARES WELL AS BATHROOM STORAGE AREA

When shopping for bath vanities look for the certification seal of the National Kitchen Cabinet Association. Only those units that meet the rigid construction and performance standards of the American National Standards Institute can display the seal.

ENERGY-SAVING TIPS FOR THE HOME

Did you know that a significant amount of heat is lost through the openings for the electrical switch and receptacle outlets in the outside walls of your home?

HouseMaster of America, a nationwide network of home inspection and warranty professionals headquartered in Bound Brook, N.J., recommends reducing that energy waste by installing UL-listed insulating gaskets between the wall plate and the receptacle or switch.

WHEN CHOOSING A NEW ROOF, you'll want one that is attractive, cost-effective, long-lasting, fire-resistant, and easy to install—qualities you'll find in Johns-Manville fiber glass shingles.

Time to reroof? Choose right roofing material for your home

Have you examined your roof lately? If not, you may want to take a close look at it. If you see shingles that are cracking and curling, and spaces where shingles once secure have blown away, well, you need a new roof.

And, don't delay. If you wait until water from a leaky roof stains your ceiling, you'll need to redecorate as well as reroof.

There are several qualities you'll want in a roof and several materials to choose from, including fiber glass based asphalt shingles from Johns-Manville Sales Corporation, a subsidiary of Manville Corporation.

What to look for

You'll want a roof that lasts, that is fire-resistant and economical. You'll want an attractive roof that blends well with the rest of your home's exterior.

Since time is money, you'll want a roof that can be installed easily and quickly, whether you're going to hire a contractor or do it yourself. In short, you want the best roof for your money.

While wood shingles and shakes are often considered attractive and relatively long lasting, they are expensive and most lack fire-resistance. The combustibility of untreated wood roofs is of growing concern to homeowners and fire fighters, particularly in areas subject to hot dry spells.

Things to consider

Because blowing embers from brush fires often ignite wood roofs, some cities prohibit the use of wood shingles and shakes in new construction and replacement roofing.

Clay, cement and slate tiles —with their own traditional beauty—are highly fire-resistant and durable. However, as they age and endure increased exposure to the elements, they can become brittle and crack easily.

They can also be quite expensive and, because they are very heavy, they require a much stronger support system.

Conventional asphalt shingles are less expensive and can last approximately 15 years. But, their organic cardboard base, made of wood chips and waste paper, is more flammable so the shingles provide only minimal fire-resistance.

Fiber glass shingles, developed by Johns-Manville, have all the qualities you're looking for: durability, fire-resistance, ease of installation and the rustic appearance of wood.

They have an inorganic rot-resistant fiber glass base and are coated with weather-resistant asphalt. What's more, this composition has earned the shingle an Underwriters Laboratories Class A fire-resistance rating, the highest attainable.

Four different designs, all moderately priced and available in earthtone colors, offer you a wide and attractive choice.

A building supply dealer or roofing contractor will gladly show you various samples and colors, and help you determine how much material you need.

Reset control can spell economical heating bill

Jim Little of General Heating, Inc. points out that there are a number of steps the homeowner can take against high heating cost.

"You can't do much about the price of fuel," Mr. Little says, "but there's a lot you can do about the amount of fuel you use. Installation is one big thing, obviously. And one of the most significant ways to reduce the amount of fuel you need is making you heating system more efficient — more energy-conscious."

Mr. Little pointed to a product on the market. It's called an Outdoor Reset Control for Hydronic Heating Systems (Boilers), and — though it takes a little explaining — it can cut fuel costs up to 25 percent, according to Mr. Little. The control qualifies for the 15 percent Energy Tax Credit.

"The average boiler in a hot-water system heats the water to around 200 degrees," Mr. Little explains. "Most homes built in the past few years are designed to keep that boiler at 200 degrees no matter what the temperature is outside. The fact is, though, that you really only need the water at that temperature when the thermostat outside reads zero."

In other words, zero degrees outside usually requires 200 degrees in the hot water to keep the house warm?

"Right," Mr. Little says. "Actually, though, when the temperature outside climbs to, say, 40 degrees, you really don't need that 200 degrees anymore " normally you need 130 degrees!

The problem is that boilers aren't built to compensate for outdoor temperatures. It's a matter of cost-efficiency for the boiler manufacturer.

That is where a Reset Control comes in.

By means of sensors, it monitors outside temperature and automatically, continuously adjusts the temperature of the water in the heating system.

"With the Reset Control," says Mr. Little, "you only heat the water to the temperature that's needed to heat your home on that specific day. That means you use less fuel!"

Reset controls can be installed on boilers with tankless heaters, however, a timer is necessary in order to provide domestic hot water during the hours 120 degree or 140 degree water is required. The timer by-passes the Reset Control and the boiler water temperature is increased until it reaches the low-limit set point.

Cost? "Dependeing, of course, on how much fuel you use, the control pays for itself in only a few heating months," says Mr. Little.

So the consumer does have some weapons in the war against high heating costs — obvious ones, like insulation and turning the thermostat down, and not-so-obvious, like Reset Controls.

Replace worn screens now for cool, bug-free summer

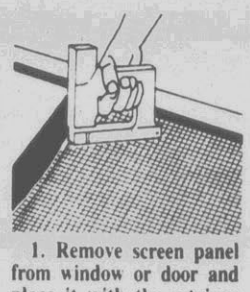
Remember the tear in the family room window screen? On the left side. There it is. It happened so late in September that you decided to wait until next spring to fix it.

For a couple of weeks afterwards, you either opened the window and had every bug in the neighborhood as a house guest, or you kept the window closed and missed the cool autumn air. Well, it's spring and now's the time to get it fixed.

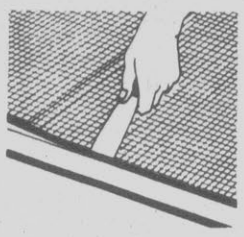
Fixing that screen may not be as hard as you thought. You can either take it to your neighborhood hardware store for repair or do it yourself.

Either way, you'll want to select a good quality screening material. One of the most preferred materials on the market today is aluminum. It's easy to work with and its natural corrosion-resistant properties make it look better longer.

The fine mesh keeps small insects out of the house and resists separating. Aluminum screening is also easy to clean with any mild soap and clear water rinse. Aluminum screen can be used in any type of frame.



1. Remove screen panel from window or door and place it with the retainer spline groove up on sawhorses. Using a wide chisel or putty knife, remove molding carefully. Work outward from center.



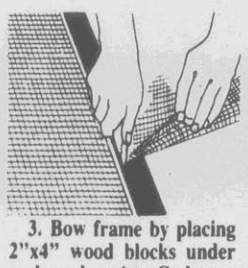
2. Cut screen to size, leaving a little excess all around. Staple or tack screening to one end of frame.

There are two types of screen frames—wood and aluminum—with different procedures for replacing screens in each. Diagrammed below are the four steps involved in replacing wooden frame screens.

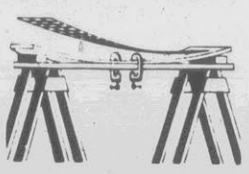
Be sure to remove the wood molding carefully so that it can be used around the new screening and buy a sheet of aluminum screen larger than the area to be covered. The excess material will give you something to hold on to when pulling the screen taut to fit the frame.

Spring is also a good time to consider repainting the frame. A good coat of paint will help prevent absorption of moisture that may cause swelling, distortion and even rotting. If the frame is loose at the joints, reglue them and add reinforcements.

If you'd like more information on repairing or replacing wood or aluminum framed screens, write for a free brochure offering step-by-step instructions. Write Aluminum Company of America, 509-L Alcoa Building, Pittsburgh, PA 15219.



3. Bow frame by placing 2"x4" wood blocks under each end, using C-clamps along center of each side. Pull screening taut as you tack down the second end. Then remove clamps and blocks.



4. Fasten sides, pulling the screen taut as you work. Work from center of each side toward the ends. Fasten center rail (if any) last. Trim off excess screening with a sharp knife and reattach molding.

Bottoms Stars As George Osmond

On the surface, it would seem Joseph Bottoms, who hails from a large family of actors, would be a natural to play George Osmond, the patriarch of the famous Osmond entertainment clan in NBC-TV's "Side by Side: the True Story of the Osmond Family," Monday, Apr. 26 (8-10 p.m.).

Bottoms, who achieved notoriety for his performance as Rudy Weiss in NBC's highly honored "Holocaust" mini-series, includes fellow thespians Timothy, Sam and Ben Bottoms as his brothers.

In addition, he was Marie Osmond's personal favorite to play opposite her portrayal of her mother, Olive Osmond.

"When the script came to me, I agreed to do it without reading it," said Bottoms. "I like biographies and true stories. I like this story because they are a remarkable family.

"George Osmond obviously is a very disciplined father who demands order," said Bottoms. "That's what makes a family strong. If you have a parent who doesn't command respect, then the children will not be in a position to command themselves. Parents must help them make decisions.

"Kids want someone to take charge too. They want an order to their lives. I've seen George and the family. Believe me, there's order in their lives!"

"My wife is a very organized person," said the Santa Barbara native. "Organization is the key to life. She's taught me that I have to organize my life and career."

Surprisingly, the widely viewed 1978 telecast of "Holocaust," which almost literally made Bottoms an overnight star, had a minimal impact on his professional life.

"If I had had a personal publicist, I would have taken off like everyone else," he said. "I still don't have one.

"I'm often confused with my brothers too, and I've always had to fight my age and playing people younger than I am. Maybe in five more years, when I start to look a little older, that will change."

JOSEPH BOTTOMS, WHO COMES FROM A LARGE entertainment family himself, with brothers and fellow actors Timothy, Ben and Sam Bottoms, joins another famous show business clan when he co-stars as George Osmond, patriarch of the family, in "Side by Side: The True Story of The Osmond Family," airing Monday, Apr. 26 (8-10 p.m.), on NBC-TV. Starring opposite Bottoms is Marie Osmond, who plays her mother, Olive Osmond.

Poseidon Still Holds Treasure

PRODUCER-DIRECTOR IRWIN ALLEN walks in the heat of the upside-down engine room of the capsized ocean liner S.S. Poseidon in his production of "Beyond the Poseidon Adventure," airing Sunday, Apr. 25 (8-11 p.m.), on ABC-TV. Starring in the sea drama: (l to r) Michael Caine, Sally Field, Telly Savalas, Peter Boyle, Jack Warden, Shirley Knight, Slim Pickens, Shirley Jones and Karl Malden.

Sally Field and Michael Caine, risking their lives for a fortune in salvage as they scramble through the twisted corridors of the capsized Poseidon, face a human danger deadlier than the ocean's depths, in "Beyond the Poseidon Adventure," a sequel to one of the most popular "disaster" films ever shown.

This film, with approximately 30 minutes of action footage added to its theatrical version (which was released in 1979) will be rebroadcast as The ABC Sunday Night Movie, Apr. 25 (8-11 p.m.).

In the story, salvage skipper Mike Turner (Caine) has one interest in the capsized ocean liner Poseidon — the fortune in abandoned jewels and cash he knows must be in the ship's safe. What he and his companions — including the beautiful Celeste Whitman (Ms. Fields) and a self-described medical man named Stefan Svevo (Telly Savalas) — soon discover is that several passengers are still trapped in the upside-down liner.

Turner is a scavenger, but he's not a killer, and soon his interest in the loot he has claimed gives way to his concern for the human lives aboard. Svevo, on the other hand, is an imposter ready to sacrifice the lives of everyone — except himself — for his own secret goal. As a result, a deadly race ensues between Turner and Celeste and the passengers for whom they have assumed responsibility, and Svevo's ruthless comrades.

And only one group can reach the surface alive.

"Beyond the Poseidon Adventure" also stars Peter Boyle, Jack Warden, Shirley Knight, Shirley Jones, Karl Malden and Slim Pickens.

LONI ANDERSON STARS AS JAYNE MANSFIELD, Hollywood sex symbol of the 1950s, and Arnold Schwarzenegger portrays her devoted husband, body-builder Mickey Hargitay, in "The Jayne Mansfield Story," to be rebroadcast Tuesday, Apr. 27 (9-11 p.m.), on CBS-TV.

'Fonz' Still Popular

Henry Winkler has revealed that he still receives more than 20,000 fan letters each week for The Fonz.

Michele Will Tell

Q: Did Nell Carter play on the TV series "Sheriff Lobo"? MONCHE' SIMMONS, WHITEVILLE, N.C.

A: Yes! Nell Carter, who stars in "Gimme A Break," portrayed Sgt. Hildy Jones on "Lobo."

Q: Would you please tell me if Dana Hill played in "Fallen Angel"? MICHELLE CARSWELL, MORGANTON, N.C.

A: She sure did! As a matter of fact, her critically acclaimed performance in "Fallen Angel," resulted in her being cast as Gabby on "The Two Of Us."

Q: Please tell me what year the next Star Wars movie will come out. I read in a magazine that the movie will be out in 1982, and my friends say 1983. Who's right? A FAN IN DENTON, N.C.

A: As far as we know, the next installment of the Star Wars saga is scheduled for release this year — 1982.

Q: Please tell me if the character of Esther on "Sanford & Son" is played by a male or female, and by whom. S.K., WILSON, N.C.

You probably have not endeared yourself to her with this question, but, LaWanda Page (Esther) is definitely a female.

Q: Many years ago Wally Cox starred in a TV series as a comic "Superman" type character. Can you tell me the name of the show, and the part he played? ELAINE PACE, CARY, N.C.

A: You are referring to "The Adventures of Hiram Holiday." Wally starred in the title role on NBC-TV from October 3, 1956 to February 27, 1957. Hiram was a meek professor who possessed uncanny skills — much like Superman.

Q: Has Tony Geary ever been on the show "Barnaby Jones"? ADRIENNE McNEIL, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

A: Yes, he has. Tony has appeared in some 50 television shows, among them — "Barnaby Jones."

Q: I would like to know how much Tom Selleck, of "Magnum, P.I.," weighs and his height. LISA FULLE, HENDERSONVILLE, N.C.

A: Tom Selleck is 6'4" tall, weighs 200 pounds and, although you didn't ask, has brown hair and hazel eyes.

Q: What is Ken Curtis doing since "Gunsmoke" went off the air? WONDERING IN REEDY CREEK, N.C.

A: Since "Gunsmoke" was cancelled, Curtis never recaptured the fame he had as the hillbilly deputy Festus. At sixty-six years old, he is virtually inactive in the business.

The Feds Set A Trap

An honest New York cop accidentally gets caught in an elaborate trap set by federal narcotics agents, then finds himself a powerless and threatened pawn in a deadly game of high stakes power politics, in "A Question of Honor," to be broadcast on Wednesday, Apr. 28 (8-11 p.m.) on CBS.

In the thriller, Ben Gazzara plays Joe DeFalco, a hard-working essentially honest narcotics cop who longs to make the big arrest that will cap his career. Meanwhile, federal agents under the leadership of Walker (Robert Vaughn) have set up an elaborate, politically motivated scheme to uncover corruption in the city administration.

Much time and money have been spent laying the groundwork, and the feds are ready to move in for the kill. With forced cooperation of an operative (Tony Roberts) within the police department, and a drug smuggler named Danzie (Paul Sorvino) brought in from Italy, the trap is set.

The policeman expected to walk in, however, is tied up elsewhere, so DeFalco and his young partner (Steve Inwood) follow up the planted tip and nab Danzie. DeFalco is not interested in Danzie's bribes nor will he give in to the federal agents' demands that his prisoner be turned back over to them. Determined to rescue their operation, the agents pull out all stops in an effort to make DeFalco crack.

"The movie is about a whole system, not just one man," said Sonny Grosso, a former police officer, who is the film's writer and producer. "We are showing things the way they really are in the police department. Sure cops can be brutal. Sure, they sometimes do things that are not legal. But here is why they are that way. I hope we show reality as well as it was shown in "French Connection."" (Grosso was Eddie Egan's partner in the real "French Connection" drug bust in New York City.)

Request Honored

Melody Thomas, who portrays Nikki Reed on "The Young and the Restless," will be honoring a request for her appearance at the first annual awards show for makeup and hair-styling specialist in the film and television industries called "Those Fabulous Imagemakers."

Ms. Thomas will be appearing four times throughout the show, presenting awards to seven up-and-coming hair and makeup artist from around the country, who have been chosen as a result of a national talent search in those areas.

"Those Fabulous Imagemakers," which was taped recently at the Pasadena Civic Auditorium, and will air nationally via syndication in May or June of this year, also includes appearances by Bette Davis, Debbie Reynolds, Victoria Principal, Linda Purl and Gil Gerard, among others.

No Recession

In the midst of a sagging national economy, the three television networks recently doled out $2 billion to the National Football League for the privilege of bringing its grid games to America's living rooms for the next five years.

This pinpoints the incredible prosperity at the networks, which somehow are able to transcend even national recessions.

Winkler Stars In 'The One And Only'

Henry Winkler stars as a cocksure young man who uses histrionics in the wrestling ring, in "The One and Only," airing as an ABC Movie Special, Friday, Apr. 30 (9-11 p.m.). The film was originally released theatrically in 1978 and played to modest reviews.

In the story, Winkler plays Andy Schmidt, an eccentric would-be actor who is obsessed with being the center of attention. With insufferable overconfidence, he lands the heart of his college sweetheart (played by Kim Darby), and they set out to take New York by storm.

Schmidt soon learns that his acting talent is not all he has cracked it up to be. Eventually, he drifts into wrestling, where he plays to cheering audiences. The boy-loses-girl part of the story comes in when Schmidt's wife gets sick of being associated with wrestling and goes home to mother (played by Polly Holliday).

Schmidt finally hits the big-time with an attention-getting gimmick — dressing up like Gorgeous George in tights and dying his hair blond. The event is broadcast on television, and Schmidt gains the notoriety he has long sought.

"The One and Only" also stars Herve Villechaize (of "Fantasy Island" fame) as a midget Lothario, William Daniels as Schmidt's father-in-law, and Gene Saks as Schmidt's manager. Harold Gould and Ed Begley Jr. also appear.

Cole Is Speaker

Dennis Cole, popular daytime actor, always finds time for a worthwhile cause. He was the special guest speaker at the American Cancer Society's fund raising auction and dinner in Denver, Colo., and Anchorage, Alaska.

For A Special Mother
A Lamp Should Be Just As Beautiful To Look At As To See With 39½" High
A lamp should give you as much joy as it does light. After all, you spend as much time in your home with the light off as on.
So while any lamp is made to give you a light, a Stiffel is made to give you a glow, you might say you don't even have to light a Stiffel to love a Stiffel.

A Real "Snoop"

Though she's never worked for a television station or taken a journalism course, Marcia McCabe has no trouble playing hard-hitting investigative reporter on "Search for Tomorrow." In fact, she's a natural detective. Said Marsha: "I'm rather snoopy in real life, so the part fits."

Former Bat Boy

Steve Garvey has come a long way from being a Dodger bat boy at age seven in Tampa during spring training, but he still remembers those experiences. "I enjoy letting a 7-year-old boy carry my bats to the field because he'll never forget that," says Garvey. "I remember all those things. The smell of the pine tar, the balls, the gloves, the shoes."

Hartung Defeated

Nebraska scored it's fourth consecutive team title in the NCAA Gymnastics Championships at Lincoln, Neb. However, Nebraska's two-time individual champion Jim Hartung was unseated by UCLA's Peter Vidmar who won that title.

Thoroughbreds Run For The Roses

On Saturday, May 1 (4:30-6 p.m.), ABC Sports will present the Run for the Roses — the 108th Kentucky Derby from historic Churchill Downs in Louisville, Ky. Considered to be America's greatest horse race, the 1982 Derby will have a record $250,000-added purse. Jim McKay, Jack Whitaker and Howard Cosell will be the commentators.

There were 388 horses nominated for the mile-and-a-quarter (10 furlongs) race, which was the second highest number in the history of the Derby (432 horses were nominated last year). Included in the nominations are a record 19 fillies.

The top contenders as of press time are: Timely Writer, winner of the Florida Derby at Gulfstream Park, winner of the Flamingo Stakes at Hialeah Park, and winner of the Champagne Stakes at Belmont, the most prestigious race for two-year-olds. Timely Writer also shared the Experimental Handicap Award with Deputy Minister and finished second to Deputy Minister for the Eclipse Award for two-year-olds.

Star Gallant, winner of the Fountain of Youth Stakes at GulfstreamPark, finished second in the Florida Derby, and was unbeaten as a two-year-old.

Air Forbes Won, is the winner of the Gotham Stakes at Aqueduct and son of former Kentucky Derby winner Bold Forbes.

El Baba, winner of the Louisiana Derby at Fair Grounds, also won all seven of his starts.

TV Chatter

By Polly Vonetes

HOLLYWOOD — The long-running feud between RICHARD HARRIS and DON GREGORY will be soon coming to an end. DON says: "I'll grant HARRIS his wish: he doesn't have to work for me anymore." When "Camelot" opens in London, Dec. 18, HARRIS will not be there — GREGORY is planning to star RICHARD BURTON back in the role from which illness forced him out and HARRIS in.

"Dukes of Hazzard" star JOHN SCHNEIDER, is rapidly becoming a real SUPER STAR — besides his triumphant performance on the Academy Awards he has just wound up the two-hour CBS film "Happy Endings" and has begun filming Universal's "Eddie Macon's Run," in Texas with co-star KIRK DOUGLAS.

MARY ANN GORDON (Mrs. Kenny Rogers) and Linda Thompson (Mrs. Bruce Jenner) have told "Hee Haw" producer SAM LUVULLO they'll be back for the 14th season in Nashville come June. As you know they have both been busy with the stork.

A welcome addition to the television scene will be BARBARA STANWYCK who has been signed to make her first return to TV since "The Big Valley, in "The Thorn Birds" with RICHARD CHAMBERLAIN and RACHEL WARD. The nine-hour miniseries for ABC will be filmed in Southern California and Hawaii.

ELIZABETH TAYLOR is still having her "ups and downs" — she is very excited about closing a fantastic deal with Warners for global rights to MIKE TODD'S "Around the World in 80 Days." — however, she is down-right angry about a proposed telemovie based on a less-than-flattering biography of her.

5 Fail-Proof Tips to Help You Keep Your Cool at Work

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

Most countries lack a free press.

FOR RICHARD LEONARD, chairman of the American Committee of the International Press Institute

Is the state of the world's free press better than a year ago? — L.V., New York City

● Overall, I don't think so. The Reagan Administration has proposed revising the law in ways that would restrict the press from obtaining information about government that it has been able to get previously. I consider that significant because the United States is the key to the free flow of news throughout the world. In most of the world, especially in the Soviet Union, South Africa and parts of South America, there is no concept of freedom of the press. The worst threat globally is the United Nations/UNESCO attempt to create a New World Information Order, which would encourage greater control of the flow of news.

FOR DR. IRENE KASSORLA, psychologist, author of Nice Girls Do

What do you do when you feel depression creeping up on you? — M.J., Warren, Ohio

● I wash my hair, put on my makeup more carefully or wear something new. After 45 minutes of this kind of grooming, the symptoms start retreating. Women who don't put their faces on first thing in the morning worry me. It means they don't care.

FOR TONY LO BIANCO, star of TV mini-series Marco Polo

After working in Morocco on the show, how do you find the people and their culture? — E.A., La Crosse, Wisc.

● My heart went out to a people so generous with what they have, when they have so little. The young people are basically like our own youth but better educated than earlier generations and more independent. The Moslem population in general was very hospitable.

FOR MARTA HEFLIN, of Broadway's Come Back to the 5 & Dime Jimmy Dean, Jimmy Dean

Is it true that your family almost disowned you after college? — J.R., Bangor, Maine

● In 1972 I was trying to form a rock group out on the West Coast. My uncle Van (actor Van Heflin, who died in 1972) came to visit what I called "home" and was shocked. He felt that I shouldn't live as a hippie. Now I know what he meant.

FROM THE "ASK" EDITOR

MOVIES: Michael Caine and Christopher Reeve, who'll be sending shivers up and down many spines via their latest movie, Deathtrap, scare as easily as the rest of us. Chris dubs such films as Friday the 13th and Texas Chain Saw Massacre as "terrifying" ("I just can't watch them"). Michael is fearful of heights ("I don't go up unless I have to, so what usually happens to me in movies is that I'm stuck at the top of a skyscraper"). . . . MAGAZINES: The March-April issue of International Wildlife carries a fascinating report: "All Their Prey Are Brothers." It mentions Bo gliding soundlessly on bare feet, "naked except for aprons of soft antelope skin." Bo Derek the subject of a "wildlife" story? No, it's not the Bo, but bushman Bo, an African hunter. . . . MARRIAGE: In all the suspense of whether Liz and Dick will take the plunge again, let's check up on the first Mrs. Richard Burton. She's still happily wed to Jordan Christopher, several years her junior, whom she married 18 months after she and Richard split 18 years ago. . . . According to a good pal of the Osmond brood, there's not a shred of truth to the buzz that Marie Osmond and John Schneider have discovered each other. In fact, there is no special man in Marie's life right now. . . .

Osmond

MEMORY: Because Don Ameche starred in the 1939 film Alexander Graham Bell, the Bell System honored the actor at the start of their yearlong celebration of "100 Years of Bell Phones for the Home." Ameche recalls very little of the screen classic: "It was just another job." What he does remember is that nine hours before he began it he wound up working on Midnight with John Barrymore and Claudette Colbert: "I had no time to study the new script; I memorized the lines during make up and while walking to the set." . . . MISCELLANY: Barbara Walters explained why she and controversial attorney Roy M. Cohn have remained friends for 25 years: "We never discuss politics." . . . Princess Stephanie of Monaco doesn't mind being reprimanded by her mom and dad (Princess Grace and Prince Rainier) if she opens the front door after the Cinderella hour. Says the 17-year-old, "When parents are strict, it shows they care." . . . George Burns, 86, explains why he likes to dance close to young girls: "It keeps me warm. All they have to do for me is light my cigar."

PRO AND CON

Should Parents Be Allowed to Educate Their Children at Home Instead of Sending Them to School?

Send questions of national significance, on a postcard, to "Pro & Con," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $10 for those published.

PRO Raymond Moore, president, Hewitt Research Foundation, co-author, Home Grown Kids (Word Books)

For centuries, the home schools' production of leadership and genius has been unmatched. Consider Lincoln, Edison and F.D.R. And today, home-schoolers score significantly above the national norm. Even parents with a modest education become master teachers. Informed educators who look closely at today's sociable, home-taught youngsters are quick to endorse parents' constitutional right to teach. Those with vested interests shouldn't fear the small percentage of parents who choose this option.

CON Terry Herndon, executive director, National Education Association

The real question is: Do compulsory school-attendance laws serve a valid public purpose? The answer is yes. Society has an interest in the education of all of its children. Uneducated or miseducated citizens become the problems of society rather than its assets. Therefore, the states should establish criteria for educational programs required of all students. Home education is acceptable only if the educational programs measure up to the accepted standards. Some will, but most do not.

COVER STORY

Johnny Wants to

Perhaps the main reason he can't, argues this renowned author, is that his reading textbooks offer nothing more than junk food for the mind. But you can help.

"Anybody who writes down to children is simply wasting his time. You have to write up, not down. Children are demanding. They are the most attentive, curious, eager, observant, sensitive, quick and generally congenial readers on earth. They accept, almost without question, anything you present them with, as long as it is presented honestly, fearlessly and clearly." E.B. White

Reading is the basis not only for all academic work, but also for much of the work we do to make a living. Even driving a car demands the ability to read street signs and road maps, for example. In our society today, the nonreader who does well in life has become a rare exception, and the national decline in reading achievement has become possibly the most serious educational problem confronting us today.

Failure to learn to read does not in itself necessarily make for social maladjustment, yet the connection that exists between emotional disturbance, asocial behavior and reading difficulties is widely known. There seems to be little doubt that school failure makes a child discouraged with himself, with school, society and ultimately with his life. Moreover, it's been found that who will do well in school and who will do poorly is largely determined by the end of the third grade. Thus, reading instruction during the first three grades is crucial.

There are as many different reasons that children refuse to learn to read as there are children. Fortunately, the number who actually suffer from neurological disorders that make it difficult for them to learn to read is quite small. But regrettably, reading difficulties of many perfectly normal children are ascribed to neurological causes, although no valid indications are found that such causes exist.

Many children, for example, are diagnosed as suffering from a learning disability called dyslexia, or "word blindness." But as one famous specialist explained the widespread application of this scientific-sounding diagnosis, "It calms parents, floors teachers and covers my own incompetence."

Oftentimes, such a child may respond once given a learning situation that meets his psychological needs. For instance, my colleagues and I helped one problem boy who had been moved from foster home to foster home. By the fourth grade, he still could not read. Gradually a good relationship developed between him and his teacher, who induced him to look at the pictures in the book and make up his own stories about them, most of which were still of a violent nature.

One day, the teacher observed that the boy seemed to have an emotional reaction when he overheard other children reading stories in primers about the lovely times parents and children have together — stories obviously alien to his traumatic background. So the teacher began to blot out the words "father" and "mother" with a heavy black marker whenever they appeared. Eventually the child joined her. This supposedly "word-blind" child then proceeded to blot out — with no errors — those two words on the nearly 40 remaining pages of the book. When he next tried to read the book, he did so with hardly any mistakes and was very pleased with himself. Within a few weeks, he was reading up to grade level and enjoying it.

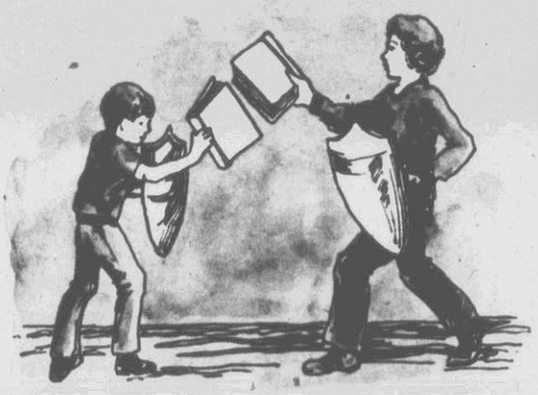
One cannot expect that many nonreaders can be cured so dramatically. Not infrequently, learning in school means growing up to the child, and there are children who are so determined not to grow up — either because growing up seems to be dangerous, or because it means giving up infantile satisfactions they desperately crave — that they refuse to make any moves toward it. Other children feel pressured by their parents not only to grow up, but also to achieve academically. If for this or other reasons the child feels rejected by his parents, he may in turn want to reject them. Refusing to learn to read seems an easy way to hurt parents where they feel it most.

There are many more children who simply are poor readers, and these form the great bulk who suffer from reading difficulties. Poor readers are not born as such, they are made — many by the way they are taught reading in school.

The books from which children are taught reading constitute an insult to their intelligence. Children come to school with a well-developed vocabulary of, on the average, about 4,000 words, some of them quite difficult ones. Even the least verbal of first graders has mastered over 2,000 words. And then they are taught from primers containing a vocabulary of not more than 150 different words, out of which it is impossible to construct a meaningful story. Some 40 years ago, comparable U.S. primers contained over 650 different words, and children learned to read from them at least as well, and probably considerably better, than they do today. Children respond to this paucity of interesting material by becoming utterly disgusted with these texts. They conclude that if this is what reading is all about, it isn't worth the effort.

When I asked first graders about their primers, even the good readers loudly declared that on their own they would never read such "junk." Angrily, they told me how it infuriates them that they are supposed to be so stupid as to believe real people could behave the ways characters do in these terribly repetitive books. According to the children I spoke with, the people in primers are all made out of plastic. "They aren't shy! They aren't afraid! They aren't angry! They aren't upset!" As one child summed up, "They aren't anything!"

Any adult reading these primers cannot help agreeing. Nobody would want to read if this were all that reading is about. The books simply do not relate to children's lives. For instance, in examining the books of several publishers, from first preprimer up to and including third-grade readers, we found that none contain any stories about the arrival of a new baby in a family, though this is a common occurrence and causes complex and ambivalent feelings in a child, with which he needs help in dealing.



Learning must not become a battleground with your children.

The reason given for these boring primers is that one should make it easy for children to read by giving them only simple words at a very slow pace, although the evidence belies this. When I asked children what words they would like to learn, I never encountered a single one who wanted to learn to read Dick and Jane, or Janet and Mark, unless these happened to be their own names. Not a one wanted to learn to read "look," or "see," or "Here I come" or "Here I go," the words endlessly repeated in the primers.

On their own, children want to learn difficult

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Bruno Bettelheim, 78, is a psychoanalyst who directed the Orthogenic School for disturbed children at the University of Chicago for 30 years. His latest book, co-authored by Dr. Karen Zelan, is On Learning to Read: The Child's Fascination with Meaning (Knopf).

Rare is the child who won't eat ice cream. We must make reading that flavorful.

words that fascinate them for some reason. And they learn these with great delight. Learning difficult, meaningful words is a real achievement to the child. Such a feeling of pride is particularly necessary to motivate a child who originally was not interested in learning to read; it induces him to make further efforts to develop his reading skills.

But the excitement of being able to read some words soon fades when the texts the child must read force him to reread the same word endlessly. Word recognition deteriorates quickly into empty rote learning when it does not lead directly to the reading of meaningful content. A child who has to read: "Nan had a pad. Nan had a tan pad. Dan ran. Dan ran to the pad. . ." and worse nonsense does not get the impression he is being guided toward becoming literate, because what he is being made to read is obviously not literature.

And as primers become simpler, children, because they are bored, read them with less and less facility. The publishers, in response, make the books even simpler and, thus, even less effective.

The mean score on the verbal section of the Scholastic Aptitude Test (S.A.T.) has been declining for the past 10 years. Although it is difficult to establish a cause-and-effect relationship between the declining verbal ability of college-bound students and the decline in primer vocabulary over the past decades, there can be no doubt that the score reflects a diminishing regard for the written word.

Textbook writers and publishers know their books are uninteresting and so have tried to make them more attractive by adding colorful illustrations. But the trouble with pictures is that the printed text then becomes even less appealing in comparison. What's worse, able to guess from the pictures what the text is about, a child reluctant to read now sees no reason to struggle with words.

Why do publishers continue putting out such dull primers? The reason is that neither children nor teachers buy textbooks — school boards and superintendents do. And their first concern is that nobody complain about their choices. For instance, one publisher came up with a story in which children bring a balloon home from a fair, whereupon a cat leaps on it and it bursts. Seems harmless enough, but when the book was tested in an Illinois school system, cat lovers were outraged, saying the story had maligned their pets. The local school superintendent — who was coming up for re-election — withdrew the book, and the publisher, afraid of similar complaints elsewhere, dropped the story.

It doesn't have to be this way. Primers used throughout Europe are far more difficult than those used in the U.S. The stories don't talk down to the readers. No words are avoided because they might be too difficult — as is done here — because the child who uses them in everyday conversation already knows what they mean and is thus eager to master any technical obstacles they present.

Perhaps it's not surprising then that at the end of the first grade, the average European child has a larger reading vocabulary than the average American child. In addition, reading retardation is much less common among European children.

Fortunately, there are many children who manage to become literate despite the way in which they are taught reading. They do so because they are highly motivated by their home environment or because of an attachment to their teacher. Studies show that nothing correlates more highly with a child's future academic success than the academic achievement of his parents. The reason for this is not just that the parents are committed to the merit of reading, a commitment which they pass on to their children, but also that from an early age the child can observe how important reading is to his parents and how much they enjoy it. Additionally, parents who are avid readers are more likely to read often — and with enjoyment — to their children. So the child becomes convinced that reading is important and enjoyable long before he is confronted for the first time with a primer in school. And he is then able to distance himself from the stupidity of the primers, since he knows not all books are like those. Still, many years later, that child will remember how disgusted he was with the books he had to read in early grades.

In our search for causes, we must not be deflected by the child's claim that he cannot learn to read, that it is impossible for him. The typical child learns early in his life that his parents tend to pay little attention if he states that he does not want to learn or do something they want him to — they simply insist that he must. But children also learn that the outcome is very different when they steadfastly assert that they would like to do what their parents want but simply cannot. Many parents just insist no further and show compassion with their children's apparent inability. The same parent who would not accept for a moment his child's assertion that he cannot put his toys away lets himself be baffled by the child's statement that he cannot learn to read, failing to see that this may be only a camouflage for his not wanting to read. This does not mean it is wise to simply continue to apply pressure on the child to learn to read; learning should never be permitted to become a battleground on which parents and children meet as enemies.

We believe that learning, particularly learning to read, must give the child the feeling that, through it, new worlds will be opened to his mind and imagination. And this would not prove difficult if we taught reading differently. Seeing how a child is lost to the world and forgets all his worries when reading a story that fascinates him, how he lives in the fantasy world of this story even long after he has finished reading it, makes one realize how easily young children can be captivated by books, provided they are the right ones.

I do not know how many children still claim that they can't stomach spinach, but I do know that hardly a child claims that he can't eat ice cream. The reason is that they enjoy eating it. The secret, then, is to make reading seem as enjoyable and tasty, as rewarding and as attractive, as we can make it. Our reaction to a child's refusal to read should be to do everything in our power to remove what caused the child's reluctance to become literate, and to read with him in ways that make reading appear to be one of the most enjoyable experiences in the world — as it surely is. WORKING

Keeping Your Cool At Work

By Peggy Schmidt

The most common reason for getting angry on the job is because you feel you've been treated unjustly by someone who has power over you. But many employees ignore annoyances because they're afraid of the consequences of expressing their ire.

Letting out your anger in a rational way, however, can produce positive results. Here are the steps psychotherapist Martin Haydon, who teaches stress management at New York University, recommends you take the next time you feel your tension-level rising:

1. Evaluate the importance of the incident. The seriousness of the situation should influence what action you take. If, for example, your boss chews you out for a mistake within earshot of your peers, it's probably not worthwhile to make an issue of it. On the other hand, if your boss unnecessarily criticizes you in front of managers whose opinion could make a difference to your career, it would make sense to talk over your anger at a later time and ask your boss to help restore your damaged credibility.

2. Analyze how legitimate your anger is. Did your behavior contribute to the anger-provoking incident? For example, if a job you wanted is given to an outsider, it's only fair to consider whether you made it clear to your boss that you wanted the position.

If you decide your reaction is reasonable, make an appointment with your boss or drop in to see him when he's not busy.

3. Explain rather than criticize. Starting off the conversation in an accusatory way will only put your boss on the defensive. Your boss is more apt to listen and care if you word your concern in a positive way — by saying you don't want your anger to begin affecting your productivity or your working relationship.

4. Be specific and selective about your complaining. Bring up one or two examples of incidents that left you feeling angry but don't bring up all your grievances. That will only make it difficult for your boss to respond.

5. Communicate what you would like to see happen. One of the biggest mistakes people make when they have the opportunity to say what's troubling them is losing sight of their objective, says Professor Haydon. You may feel better by simply getting the matter off your chest, but unless you and your boss reach an understanding, it's likely that the problem will continue.

If your boss's behavior is the cause for your anger, you cannot expect him to change his personality, but you can propose a mutually agreeable way to get around the problem. If, for example, he's stingy with compliments, you might work out an informal arrangement for reviewing your work so that there are structured times during which you can expect feedback. FW

We're looking for people to write children's books

Writing for children is the perfect way to take up writing, says the author of 53 children's books. Your ideas come right out of your own experience. And while it's still a challenge, it's probably the straightest possible line between you and publication – if you're qualified to seek the success this rewarding field offers.

By Alvin Tresselt, Dean of Faculty

If you want to write and get published, I can't think of a better way to do it than writing books and stories for children and teenagers. Ideas flow naturally right out of your own life experience. While it's still a challenge, the odds of getting that first unforgettable check from a juvenile publisher are better than they are from just about any other kind of publisher I know.

Later on, you may get other checks from other publishers. But right now, the object is to begin — to break into print — to learn the feeling of writing and selling your work and seeing your name in type. After that, you can decide if you want your writing to take another direction.

But after 30 years of editing, publishing, and teaching — and 53 books of my own — I can tell you this: you'll go a long way before you discover anything as rewarding as writing for young readers.

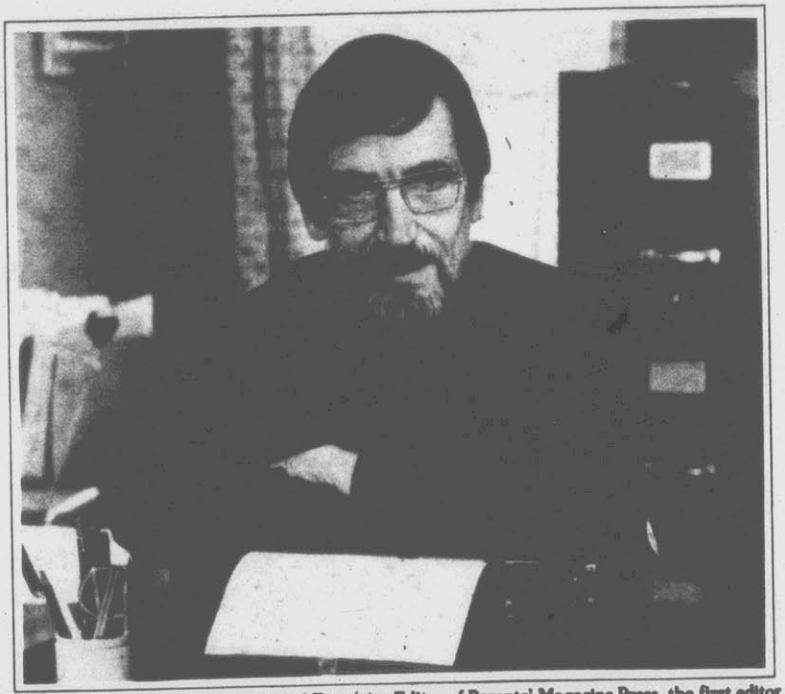
Your words will never sound as sweet as they do from the lips of a child reading your books and stories. And the joy of creating books and stories that young people 'really dig' is an experience you'll never have anywhere else. (In this age of boob tube illiteracy, convenient morality, and plastic values, do you know of a more important audience?)

But, that's not all. The financial rewards go far beyond most people's expectations because there's a surprisingly big market out there for writers who are trained to crack it. More than 130 million young people's books are purchased each year. Between 2,000 and 2,500 new titles appear annually and new authors account for as many as half of them.

There are also 250 monthly magazines looking for material for young readers. You can imagine how much writing it takes just to keep them going!

'Am I really qualified?'

Yet two big questions bedevil nearly every would-be writer: "Am I really qualified?" and "How can I get started?"



Alvin Tresselt was Vice President and Executive Editor of Parents' Magazine Press, the first editor of Humpty Dumpty's Magazine for Children, and has served on the board of the Author's Guild. His 53 books for young readers have sold over two million copies.

This is our definition of a "qualified person": It's someone with an aptitude for writing who can take constructive criticism, learn from it, and turn it into a professional performance. That's the only kind of person we're looking for. The reasons are simple: our reputation is built on success, and if prospective students don't have the earmarks of success, we probably can't help them. And we tell them so. It's only fair to both of us.

To help us spot potential authors, we've developed a revealing test for writing aptitude. It's free, and we don't charge for our evaluation. But no one gets into the Institute without passing it. Those who pass and enroll receive our promise: You will complete at least one manuscript ready to submit to a publisher by the time you finish the Course.

When we teach, you learn

I've learned a lot about writing for children and I love it. Now I'm passing my knowledge on to my students so they can profit from it. When I'm not writing my own children's books I spend my time at The Institute of Children's Literature, a workshop for writers that does only one thing and does it better than any other educational institution I know of: It trains qualified people to write for the young reader.

This is the way I work with my students, and my fellow instructors — all of whom are experienced writers or editors — work more or less the same way.

When you're ready — at your own time and your own pace — you send your assignment to me and I read it and reread it to get everything out of it you've put into it. Then I edit your assignment with a red pencil just the way a publishing house editor would if he had the time. I return it along with a detailed letter explaining my editorial comments. I tell you what your strong points are, what your weaknesses are, and just what you can do to improve. It's a matter of push and pull. You push and I pull and between us both, you learn to write.

The Proof of the Pudding

This method really works. I wouldn't spend five minutes at it if it didn't. Last year we received hundreds of letters like these from successful students: "Before taking your Course, the short stories I scribbled for my two tiny tots never caught an editor's fancy," writes Emily Burns of Salem, Ore.

"My first sale, to National Catholic Weekly, was a Course lesson. Then I sent another Course assignment to a writer's competition and won first prize of $400!"

"My instructor's advice was invaluable in plotting, character, motivation, and dialogue. I am most grateful for her personal interest and encouragement. Best of all she helped me understand my own strengths and weaknesses and how to emphasize the first and remedy the second. Better instruction hath no man than this!" Elizabeth Henley, New Cambria, Mo.

Marilyn Day of Marissa, Ill. says, "I'm proud of this accomplishment. Now I'm no longer a housewife, I am a writer!"

And Mary Carruth, Dublin, Cal., writes, "I sent out my first article with a prayer and a hope, and it was accepted. Your Course with its structure and support, has been everything I hoped for and needed."

"When I started this course, I did not really think that I had the ability to write", writes Sister M. Laetitia Mudde, West Haven, Ct., "But my instructor made me believe in myself." I have a file full of similar letters. Folks like yourself so full of pride they could easily convince you that indeed it is a pity more people — men and women — don't write for children.

Free Writing Aptitude Test offered

THE SEXES

By Norman Lobsenz

To Graduate Is a Rite

Birth, ceremonies of manhood and womanhood, marriage and death are solemn milestones of a person's journey through life. But even lesser "passages" from one stage to another need to be observed with some ritual, says Gary Margolis, a Middlebury College counseling director. As reported in the Journal of the American College Health Association, he notes that students increasingly tend to skip attending commencement exercises, and points out that this has emotional drawbacks: "Graduating from college involves one of our most moving and psychologically complex expressions — saying goodbye. . . . We acknowledge and review the past; we let its memories, feelings and images accumulate in us, while anticipating the future. Strong feelings . . . surface and need our attention. . . ."

Heartening News About Friendship

Recent findings indicate that social contacts are much more important to good physical health than was previously believed. At a recent meeting of the American Heart Association, S. Leonard Syme, professor of public health at the University of California at Berkeley, cited a new University of Michigan study on this subject, covering nearly 3,000 persons over a 10-year period. The study showed that those who had a minimum amount of social contact were four times as likely to die earlier than their projected life expectancy as those who had regular companionship.

Evidently, Syme said, "Part of the human condition is that we need other people." However, being satisfied with the relationship does not seem to be necessary. Said Syme: "It's important that you're married, but it doesn't seem to matter whether or not you're happy about it."

The Word on Children's Books

Parents who would like their children to take an interest in reading are often bewildered by the flood of literature aimed at young readers. The following lists, recently compiled by groups of experts in the children's book field, offer useful guidance:

Excellent Paperbacks for Children lists inexpensive books in a wide range of subjects for youngsters of all ages. Produced by the American Association of School Librarians and the Association for Childhood Education International, it is available from A.C.E.I., Dept. FW, 3615 Wisconsin Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20016, for $3.85.

Bibliography of Books for Children, also put out by the A.C.E.I., contains an annotated listing of hundreds of recent books with the age level indicated for each entry. The 112-page volume costs $6.55 (address same as above).

A Fair Share

As lawyers and judges come to realize that it is important for children of divorce to have close relationships with both parents, courts are increasingly giving fathers a more equal role in custody. Experiments with joint custody — where mother and father share the child's time — have proved most successful. According to Brandeis University sociologists Kristine Rosenthal and Harry Keshet, fathers who share custody of their children feel more comfortable about child care and have fewer conflicts with their ex-wives than do fathers who don't share the responsibility. Spouses who share custody have to depend on each other, "and each has a stake in seeing the other as an adequate parent."

An even more novel approach to custody has been formulated by a Traverse City, Mich. judge who gave three teen-age boys custody of their divorcing parents' home and ordered the parents to alternate monthlong stays with their children. According to newspaper accounts, the mother described the solution as a "good option," the children were pleased and the father thought it helped to create a stable life for the children. FW

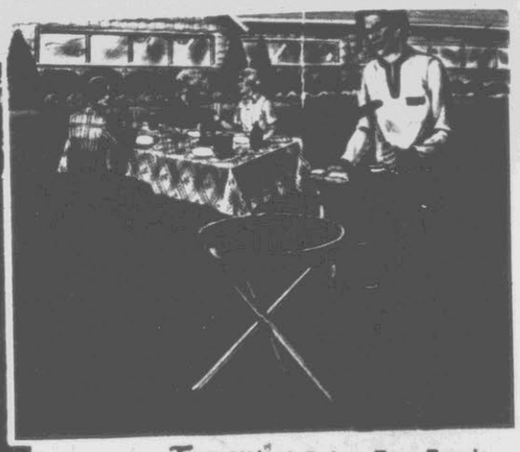
Now! You Can Start Your Own "Million Dollar" Zoysia Lawn!



SALE $2.88 plus as much as 900 FREE plugs

Lakeland's Famous® 30-Below-Zero Zoysia Takes Wear, Tear, Cookouts, Children's Games . . . After 30 Below Zero Winters, It Bounces Back Green, Thick, And Beautiful! Closest Thing To An Indestructible Lawn You Have Ever Seen!

Zoysia Lawn Wasn't Mowed Or Watered For A Month! Not A Weed In Sight!

If your family is like mine, you're squeezing every dollar to make sure you have enough to go around. And it looks like things are going to stay that way.

One way to cut expenses is to cut the costs, and work, of lawn care. For example, a woman wrote about her zoysia lawn that she had mowed it only twice ALL SUMMER. She hadn't spent a cent on weed-killers. Not one cent for fertilizers. Yet her lawn was as green and weed-free as a pile carpet.

ZOSYIA LAWNS STAY GREEN THROUGH HEAT AND DROUGHTS

Let the scorching sun burn lawns around you into hay—your zoysia stays fresh and green, an emerald isle of beauty. I have yet to water my own zoysia lawn. One day I saw that my sprinkler had gotten cobwebs! In Iowa, a zoysia lawn was declared the area's "Top Lawn—nearly perfect." Yet this lawn had been watered only once that entire summer!

CUT YOUR WATER BILLS. SAVE THE WORK OF LAWN SPRINKLING. START A FAMOUS ZOYSIA GRASS LAWN NOW.

Weed-killing chemicals are NOT NEEDED for a weed-free Famous® Zoysia Lawn

How is it possible that Famous Meyer Z-52 Zoysia stays weed-free without using expensive, risky chemicals? It grows so thick that crabgrass (weed) seeds don't get enough light to germinate!

Has Cut Mowing To Once A Month

Zoysia grows sideways, not just up like ordinary grass. It forms a thick, interwoven carpet of turf that keeps its well-groomed look weeks longer. It cuts your mowing by half, 2/3 or more!

No-Reseeding—Not Ever!—With Lakeland's Famous® Zoysia

Plug in Lakeland Zoysia and never buy grass seed again. Zoysia lawns don't grow old; they just grow better. They sparkle under 100° heat . . . stay green through droughts. They resist diseases and insects which ruin ordinary grasses. After sharp frosts, they only give up their green color, then green up better than ever each following Spring. Famous Zoysia gives you the closest thing to an indestructible lawn you have ever seen.

Ends Washouts on Steep Slopes Perfect Where Other Grasses Do Poorly

Deep-rooted zoysia holds soil in place, stops it from washing away from slopes. It's your perfect answer for worn out or weedy areas, too.

In a typical newspaper article I read (quote):

NO NEED TO DIG UP YOUR LAWN
PLUG IN Z-52 ZOYSIA

"upgrading your current lawn" requires the right selection of grass seed plus "regular applications of fertilizer (and lime where needed)." This article also said you need, "weed, insect and disease control." Sound familiar? Of course!

Why not forget all that work and expense, and plug in Famous Meyer Z-52 Zoysia? To upgrade your lawn with zoysia, don't dig it up. Just set plugs into holes in the soil a foot apart or less. Let those plugs spread toward each other ao form a carpet of solid turf. Growth is so vigorous it chokes out old growth you want to get rid of, WEEDS INCLUDED.

From Coast to Coast People Write to Mike Senkiw

From Hudson, N.Y., E. LaRoche writes how he planted plugs "in the worst possible place—clay with weeds and gravel . . . It formed a 4" thick carpet of grass. Not children, dogs, cats, rabbits, extremely hot sun or drought could kill it."

From Sacramento, Calif., J.M. writes how he bought our Zoysia "for a weed infested spot —it took care of the problem."

From Indiana, M.A. Low, Sr. writes how he visited a physician friend in Albert Lea, Minn. where he saw a "whole back yard was entirely in zoysia and it was beautiful...a deep green."

The success of many thousands of delighted Famous® Zoysia owners awaits you. Prove it to yourself today.

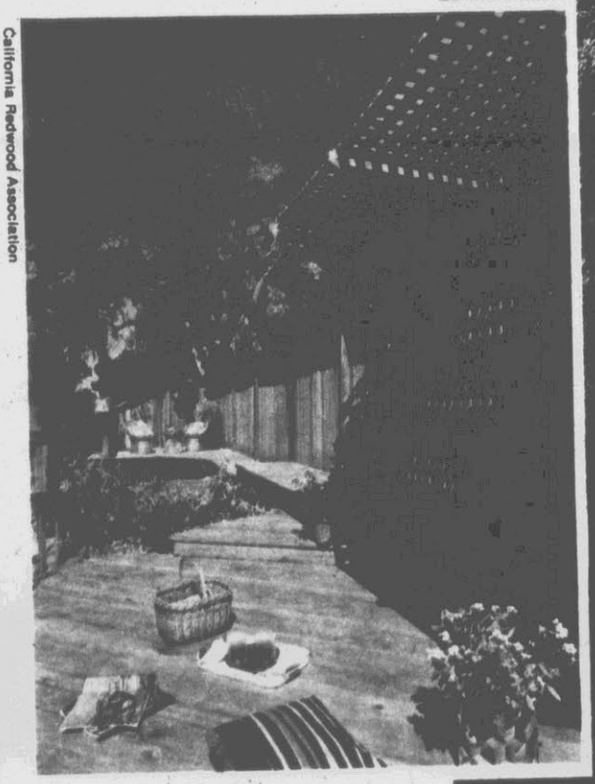
YOUR GREAT OUTDOOR HOME SPRUCE-UP GUIDE

By Rosalyn Abrevaya



California Redwood Association

Grotfman/Alpha

Now that spring has been with us for more than a month, it's time to think about the outdoor life and take stock of whatever backyard space you have. If you're not making the most of this area for your living enjoyment — with a garden, patio, deck or some combination of the three — you're missing a lot of fun.

To inspire you, FAMILY WEEKLY spoke to top landscape architects and asked for their best ideas.

Even with space limitations, "if you'd love a colorful garden, you can have one in a short time," says Mahlon Perry of Dallas. One of his suggestions is creating a backdrop of shrubs at the edge of your patio and then planting some lush green ground cover in front of the shrubs. Then, "for an instant garden," buy full-size blooms in six- to eight-inch clay pots and set the pots in the ground cover.

If you don't have space for ground cover, Perry suggests container gardening. He recommends flower-filled containers at least 18 to 24 inches in diameter. Another alternative is hanging baskets. "For a natural look," he recommends green, gray or wire-and-moss pots, rather than white ones.

For maximum patio space, Edith Henderson of Atlanta suggests abandoning the idea of a flower bed against the house and running the patio surface right up to the outside wall of your home.

Says Henderson: "If you need to shade your patio, consider cultivating one or two good-looking, quick-growing trees, such as the flowering cherry tree or the sugar maple." Henderson advises that you buy the tree when it is at least two feet high. You can expect the rapid-growing varieties to grow 10 to 12 feet in about two years. (Ask your local nursery for those that grow best in your region.) How to decide where to put the tree so it gives maximum shade? Our expert has a simple trick:

LESS THAN 65¢ A MONTH HELPS KEEP SEPTIC TANKS AND CESSPOOLS FROM BACKING UP AND BREAKING DOWN.

Every time you do a wash, your detergent, soap and bleach wash away some of the bacteria your septic tank or cesspool needs to work. That can mean back up and break down. And costly repairs. Rid-X helps prevent all of that by putting back the bacteria. Rid-X and one extra flush of your toilet a month may be the only attention your septic system needs.

RID-X KEEPS YOUR SEPTIC SYSTEM IN ITS PLACE.

OUTDOOR SPRUCE-UP GUIDE

Place a tall stick or a fishing rod in the ground at the desired location and check where the pole's shadow falls during the day. You might have placed your tree too far away for it to contribute enough shade or too close, making the patio shadier than you want. "In a few years, a quick-growing tree will cast a very respectable shadow to cool off a hot terrace or deck," says Henderson.

You've heard of the L-shaped room. Well David Gates of Walnut Creek, Calif. has a great design idea for a small 12-by-20-foot area — the L-shaped deck. It's designed to wrap around a central focal area, such as a tree. Gates recommends an L-shaped deck with two levels. This is an especially nice arrangement for a family because it divides the deck into separate areas. Parents can relax in one area, for example, while children play in another.

Adds Gates: "If you have a patio or deck area you want to add new life to or [if you] want to increase its privacy, you might screen in one side or construct an open-air top (with several 4-by-6-foot wood boards) to support vine growth or hanging plants." Or, if you're feeling more ambitious, you can "excavate a small section at the edge of the patio and put in a small pond or fountain."

Do you want to add a vegetable plot to your outdoor area? Gates recommends a "raised vegetable garden." You take four 2-by-12-foot wood boards to create an enclosure that will hold 12 inches of potting soil. This is practical because it improves drainage. It also adds an attractive landscaping element to your backyard.

Duncan Callicott of Nashville has several tips for those who want "less garden and more paved surface" for their backyards. To create an attractive hard-surface design, Callicott suggests prefinished concrete paving stones which come in a variety of shapes.

You can pave directly on the ground or place the paving stones on an existing concrete patio, using mortar to hold them in place.

Bricks for paving are now available in a new one-inch thickness. Callicott tells us they're easier to handle than traditional two-inch-thick bricks. Using these bricks also means that the patio surface will be on the same level as the floor of the house "so you don't have to step up to your patio."

Pat O'Brien of San Francisco has some thoughts about hard-surface paving in the backyard. To make it more attractive and soften its look, she suggests that you replace some of the concrete with gravel, granite blocks or brick. She also offers a quick way to add atmosphere to your patio: Set up a free-standing latticework panel or place one against a retaining wall to support flowers or vines.

For those who are planting a flower garden, O'Brien advises giving some careful thought to the color scheme. She suggests that if your trees or shrubs are dark green, white or brightly colored flowers are good. Against silver or gray foliage, yellow and mauve flowers will go well. She advises reading up on gardens and seeking advice from the local nursery.

Some parting tips come from James van Sweden of Washington, D.C., who believes that the ideal backyard area should combine a deck with a brick or textured-concrete patio in a rectangular shape. Soften the edges of the patio with ground cover and a variety of low-maintenance flowering perennials that will bloom at different times.

AT HOME

It's Paint-the-House Time!

Painting the outside of your house is not a task most people relish. But it's better to do it than to let your old coat of paint blister and peel.

Where do you begin? Your main considerations are selecting the paint and preparing the surface.

Today most homes are painted with oil or latex paints. Both types have advantages, notes William S. Rosenthal, technical marketing manager for Pittsburgh Paints. "Some professional painters use the oil type because they have always used it," he says, "and feel it has greater penetration value [provides more effective adhesion when the homeowner has not done the proper surface preparation]. However, latex paints in general retain their flexibility longer [the ability to expand and contract with the surface in all weather] and exhibit better color retention. They also tend to be easier to apply and clean up."

How to decide which type is right for you? "A general rule in exterior painting," says Rosenthal, "is to apply the same type of top coat that has been applied previously — that is, oil over oil, latex over latex, so that finishes will adhere better." What if you decide to change the type of paint? "If your siding is painted with an oil-base paint and you want to switch to a latex," Rosenthal responds, "prime the entire house with a good oil-base primer and then apply the latex house paint."

But before that first stroke of primer or paint is applied, you must prepare the surface. You should clean off loose material — such as dust, rust or old paint — using a scrub brush, paint scraper, sandpaper or steel wool. Be sure to fill in any holes with putty, so that the surface will be smooth. To clean off stubborn material, you might need a power sander or wire brush. If mildew has accumulated, the surface needs to be scrubbed, rinsed off and allowed to dry completely.

Even if your home is covered with aluminum, it can be painted to give it a fresh face of color with paints especially formulated for metal siding. These paints come in white, pastels or deep rich tones.

Paint-Color Tips

1. When choosing your shade, consider the colors of your neighbors' homes. You may not want a "me-too" look, but it's wise to have your home blend in to a degree.

2. A house painted a light color will look larger than one in a darker shade and will also reflect the sun's rays rather than absorb them which means the house will be cooler in summer.

Guest in the Garden: Cultivating Fruit And Flowers

Jeannene McDonald

By C.Z. Guest

Growing flowers and fruit is a rich experience — one type of gardening delights the eye, the other, the palate. Here are some planting tips for a few exotic and classic varieties.

Lavish Lilies

Few flowers bring to the garden the rewarding fragrance, grace and exotic beauty of lilies from the far corners of the earth. They add loveliness, charm and allure to any flower bed.

The spectacular day lily is undoubtedly the most gratifying, foolproof perennial you can plant. It thrives in all areas of the country, and is remarkably easy to plant and grow, even for the most inexperienced gardener. Day lilies are ideal planted either in a bed or as an eye-catching border for sidewalks, driveways or lawns. If you plan now, next year at this time you'll be enjoying beautiful blooms in shades of light salmon, pale yellow and orange from these lovely flowers.

If your taste runs to the exotic you might prefer planting calla lilies. Created through years of cross-breeding, they come in brilliant shades of maroon, purple, orange-red and rosy pink and feature a lovely chalice shape. As cut flowers they can't be beat — they can last up to three weeks. Thrill to their grace and beauty in your garden this summer.

A Rosy Garden

Roses are one of the most popular of all garden flowers. They can be grown in every part of the country and are available in many varieties. But if you want them to stay healthy you must feed and water them properly and protect them from disease and insects — especially throughout the summer.

Roses need a great deal of water, particularly in areas where rainfall is not sufficient. A thorough weekly dousing to penetrate eight to 10 inches deep is required for most gardens. Mulch (any organic material — grass clippings, hay, buckwheat hulls), helps conserve moisture, so apply it in June after the soil has warmed up.

Roses must be fed three times a year. Fertilize them in early spring, again when the flower buds first open and then at the end of July. But don't feed them after early August, because it encourages new growth which would be killed by the first frost. Always water rose bushes well after feeding.

Mature roses do better when potted for about one month before planting in garden beds. Use a rich potting soil mixture, similar to what the rose bush was originally grown in. The carefully selected potting mixture and warm soil temperature in the pot encourage better root growth and better top growth. Cool soil in the garden slows root growth.

Note: Roses need at least six hours of sunshine daily.

Blushing Berries

We all know that no store-bought berries can hold a candle to ripe, juicy, freshly picked strawberries from your own garden. So this summer, why not treat yourself to this delightful fruit.

To figure out your family's needs, plan on 25 plants per person for average consumption of fresh berries. If you plan to save money by stocking the pantry and freezer with homemade pies, jellies and jams, figure on 50 plants per person! Remember, you can never have too many fresh, garden-grown strawberries.

These berries will give you a greater return per square foot of garden than any other small fruit. Try tucking your little plants 12 to 18 inches apart along your entrance walk, driveway, garden path or around your flower beds.

Pick strawberries only when plump, firm and in full blush. Never hull or wash berries until you are ready to use them. If you do, they'll lose vitamin A and C fast, and the quality of the berries will deteriorate in storage. For the most nutrition and the best flavor, use berries as soon as possible after picking.

Strawberries also make a beautiful ground cover, better than grass, and you'll never have to mow, just pick!

Putting Life Into Cut Flowers

Gardeners and non-gardeners alike should know how to prolong the life of cut flowers. Here are a few simple tips.

1. Cut the stems with clippers or a knife on an angle (this helps the flowers absorb water). Remove all leaves that are below the waterline, and place flowers into lukewarm water immediately (it's better than cold water because it's less of a shock to the flowers) in a clean container.

2. Keep flowers away from extreme temperatures: drafts, air conditioners, heaters or sun.

3. Check the water level daily, adding more as needed. FW

HEALTH

Is Surgery The Only Answer?

Marc Slade/FPG

The unkindest cut: Experts contend that at least one operation in four is unnecessary. The wisest course for patients is to seek a second opinion.

By Andrea Pawlyna

This year, surgeons will perform more than 24 million operations in the United States. But critics claim that as many as 25 percent of those operations may be unnecessary.

According to Myron K. Denney, M.D. — a surgeon and author of Second Opinion (Grosset and Dunlap) — and other health experts, operations such as tonsillectomies, hysterectomies, gallbladder removals and surgery on the spine are frequently performed unnecessarily.

One way to protect yourself against unnecessary surgery, according to these experts, is to seek a second opinion whenever possible. "Before you undergo any operation, you should be satisfied that it's something you need," Dr. Denney says. Adds Sidney Wolfe, M.D., head of the Health Research Group in Washington, D.C., which has long criticized surgical excesses. "Any time you are making an important decision about your health, a second opinion is crucial."

Statistically, studies done on second opinions — such as one seven-year study at New York Hospital/Cornell Medical Center in New York — indicate that second opinions confirm the need for surgery about 75 percent of the time. But bear in mind that those numbers also mean one out of four patients (representing potentially 6 million operations!) is told that surgery isn't needed.

How can you improve your chances of making the right decision? The first step is to learn as much as you can about the operation. Before agreeing to any elective operation (and 85 percent of nonemergency surgery falls into this category) and before seeking a second opinion, health experts advise patients to make sure they know the answers to the following questions: Why is the surgery necessary? What are the benefits and risks involved? What will happen if I don't have the operation? Are there other ways I can be treated? Simply being well informed may help you make a sound decision.

But if you are still uncertain, you should seek a second opinion. "Gather as much information as possible from both physicians," Dr. Denney advises. What if the second doctor disagrees with the first? "Then the patient must weigh the facts to decide which opinion is more valid," Dr. Wolfe says. Before making a decision, take stock of all the information you have received.

"Obviously, a patient cannot hope to study all the conflicting analyses," writes Dr. Denney. "However, you should know that these choices are available and learn all about your own case in terms of which treatment you might prefer." You should feel certain about your decision, he notes. "If you don't feel absolutely confident about it, then I would say no to having the operation."

If you are considering surgery and would like a second opinion, there are several ways to find a specialist who may be able to advise you:

- Ask your surgeon to give you the name of another doctor. Most physicians are not offended when their patients ask to have a second opinion.
- Contact the local medical society representing the type of specialist you would like to consult.
- Call the Government's toll free, second-opinion hotline: (800) 638-6833 (800-492-6603 in Maryland). Patients who call are given the names of up to three specialists to contact in their community. FW

Observations

Green revelation. Back during World War II, when farmers traded hoes for guns, civilians pitched in with "Victory Gardens," small plots that provided 40 percent of all of the fresh produce consumed in the U.S. Well, times are rough again–and once more Americans are showing their self-reliant side. Millions of folks are poring over "frost line" charts in The Farmer's Almanac and seed catalogs that tell when it's safe to plant crops (it's "go" in 34 states; still too cool in 16). All this is part of a green thumb revolution that saw vegetable gardens planted by 38 million Americans last year–more people than bowl, play tennis, golf, jog, camp, or fish. The lure? Savings. Gardens For All, the National Association for Gardening, predicts the average gardener may trim $400 from that 1982 food bill by raising "home-grown."

Bloom boom. In Chicago, 6,000 "public housing gardeners" expect to market 237 tons of vegetables this fall. Boston's got more than 120 garden sites. In Austin, Texas, the Grow Yer Own group raises vegetables in 12 urban plots. City farmers in numerous other urban areas provide cheap food for the needy–and spur urban renewal by "greening" unsightly vacant lots.

"Harry, are there supposed to be worms in the compost?"

Food, Inc. Corporations and the federal government "dig" gardening too. Hewlett-Packard Corp. in Santa Clara, California, supplies 60 garden plots on which employees grow vegetables. Kimberly-Clark Corp. in Neenah, Wisconsin, has 20 acres of irrigated gardens for plant workers. Members of the gardening club at Bell Labs in Holmdel, N.J., are assigned 20x20-foot plots where enough vegetables can be grown to feed a family of three for a year. The Department of Agriculture funds gardening information programs for 175,000 green-thumbers in 16 cities.

Down on the farm. It's great to grow your own, but feeding 230 million Americans still requires advanced commercial farming. That, more than ever, takes energy: natural gas for fertilizers ... gasoline and diesel fuels to power tractors, combines and the trucks that bring farm produce to market ... electricity for irrigation pumps. For the U.S.A., agriculture's a super bargain: Farmers not only help feed our people, they helped offset the cost of oil imports in 1981 by exporting goods worth $43 billion. So we say, "keep on plantin', Americal" –in the towns and cities, and "down on the farm."

It's a fact: For more information on home and community vegetable gardening, write to Gardens For All, Dept. P-112, 180 Flynn Avenue, Burlington, Vermont 05401.

FOOD

The $40,000 Cake

By Marilyn Hansen

At the 30th Bake-Off, held in San Antonio, Tex. and sponsored by the Pillsbury Company of Minneapolis, Minn., a first-generation Dutch woman won first prize ($40,000) for her Almond-Filled Cookie Cake recipe, an old-time specialty. Elizabeth Meijer lives in Danbury, Conn., and reads FAMILY WEEKLY in the Danbury News-Times. Her cake, rich and buttery, has a texture similar to a Scottish shortbread. Every December Elizabeth bakes 8-inch-size versions of this cake, wraps them carefully and sends them as Christmas presents to friends all over the country. Now, you can enjoy this traditional specialty.

ALMOND-FILLED COOKIE CAKE

Crust:

- 2⅓ cups all-purpose or unbleached flour*
- 1⅓ cups sugar
- 1⅓ cups unsalted butter or margarine, very soft
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 egg

Filling:

- 1 cup grated or finely chopped almonds
- ½ cup sugar
- 1 teaspoon grated lemon peel
- 1 egg, slightly beaten
- 4 whole almonds

1. Heat oven to 325°F. Grease 10- or 9-inch springform pan. Lightly spoon flour into measuring cup; level off.
2. In large bowl of electric mixer, blend all crust ingredients at lowest speed until dough forms. Chill, if desired. Divide dough in half; spread half in bottom of prepared pan.
3. In small bowl of mixer, blend all filling ingredients except whole almonds; spread over crust to within ½ inch of sides of pan.
4. Between waxed paper, press remaining dough to 10- or 9-inch circle. Remove top layer of waxed paper; place dough over filling. Remove waxed paper; press dough into place. Garnish center with almonds.
5. Bake in preheated 325°F oven for 55 to 60 minutes or until light golden brown. (Place foil on rack below pan during baking to guard against spillage.) Cool 15 minutes; remove from pan. Cool completely. Makes 24 servings

PEOPLE QUIZ

Do Outgoing Men Have an In With Women?

By John E. Gibson

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. If you're an extrovert and your rival for a woman's attention is an introvert, you'll always win her affection with your outgoing nature.
2. Introverts smoke for different reasons than do extroverts.
3. Extroverts are better readers than introverts, quicker to absorb and comprehend books, magazines or newspaper articles.
4. It is quite possible that you may be neither an introvert nor an extrovert.

ANSWERS

1. False. The extrovert does not always have the advantage in a romantic situation, say studies at London's Institute of Psychiatry. The upper hand an extroverted man is likely to have in winning a woman tends to be true only when other factors are equal. For example, if the introvert is more charming, handsomer or has more in common with the woman than his extrovert rival this naturally affects the odds — which is one reason introverts often do quite well in affairs of the heart.
2. True. In psychological studies at the North Florida Community Mental Health Center, university students were tested to determine personality type, and then completed reports about where and why they smoke. The results, which match the findings of other research, indicate that smoking has a greater tranquilizing effect on introverts than on extroverts. "Self reports of smoking to achieve tranquilization correlated positively with introversion, and similarly, introversion correlated positively with a greater desire to smoke in a stressful, as compared with a nonstressful situation." It would appear that extroverts are more inclined to smoke simply for the pleasure and satisfaction they derive from it.
3. False. In studies at the University of London 200 students were randomly selected and given personality tests to differentiate introverts from extroverts. Their performance was then tested on a standardized reading test, designed to determine vocabulary, speed of comprehension, etc. The mean total score for the introverts was significantly higher than the mean score for extroverts. This difference was felt to reflect both superior reading skill and superior test performance due to more persistence and concentration throughout the test.
4. True. Professor of psychology H. J. Eysenck, noted for his extensive studies of personality types, concludes from his research and the findings of other leading authorities, that in addition to introverts and extroverts, there is a third category which people can fall into. Psychologists call this group ambiverts. Ambiverts share the personality traits and tendencies of both of the other types. FW

CARBURETOR GETS 200 MPG!

BY R.C. WEBSTER

WASHINGTON—Establishment of a new world record for fuel economy —an incredible 1,368 miles per gallon achieved in the Shell Motor Mileage Marathon by a special three-wheel vehicle with 90cc engine—has touched off a stampede among car manufacturers and tinkerers to drastically increase the gas mileage of cars.

They are attempting to achieve this with the Pogue Carburetor, a device which the Ford Motor Company has shown can deliver over 200 mpg to an ordinary sedan.

This gas-miserly carburetor has never been mass-produced.

The Pogue is covered by several patents issued by the United States Patent Office here, but a recent book asserts that the patents are invalid, that anyone can now build the Pogue without legal restraint.

As a result, vendors, parts manufacturers and entrepreneurs are racing to mass-produce this peerless fuel conserver.

COPIES AVAILABLE

The book, called "Secrets of the 200 MPG Carburetor," contains full details, instructions and diagrams on how to construct the Pogue. It states that anyone can build the carburetor, even in a home workshop.

Copies of "Secrets of the 200 MPG Carburetor" are available from Premier Distributing, P.O. Box 7777-W, New York, N.Y. 10001, at $4.95 (plus $1 postage and handling; total, $5.95).

205 MPG

The Ford Motor Co. of Canada, in a test that is documented in "Secrets of the 200 MPG Carburetor," proved that the Pogue Carburetor does indeed achieve a remarkable 25.7 miles per PINT—or 205 miles per gallon.

Allan W. Wallace, author of "Secrets of the 200 MPG Carburetor," says the Pogue's gas mileage is not all that remarkable.

He says that others have invented carburetors with exceptionally high gas mileages, too, but that the American people have been kept in the dark about them by the oil companies, which are seeking to preserve their gasoline sales.

To support his assertion, Wallace documents several instances of stupendous gas mileages, including 84 mpg achieved by Ralph Moody of Oak Hill, Fla., with a Ford Capri, and 100 mpg by Thomas W. Ogle of El Paso, Texas, with a Ford Galaxie.

Wallace says he has amassed enough case histories "to fill a set of volumes the size of an encyclopedia." He includes construction details for the most interesting and feasible systems in his book.

"I feel the public has a right to know how to produce its own high-mileage systems," he says.

"If enough people are tooling around in 100-mpg cars, the auto and oil industries will have no choice but to offer fuel-efficient carburetors in all production models."

Wallace says that the average car burns only 20 percent of the fuel it consumes. The rest is lost, unburned, and is emitted through the car's tailpipe as air pollution.

"The carburetor of today is little changed from what it was 50 years ago," he says. "I'm hoping that my book will spur a change—to the benefit of the nation, the ecology, and the consumer."

HOW TO ORDER

To obtain a copy, readers of this newspaper need merely send their name and address with $4.95 (plus $1 postage-handling; total, $5.95) to the following address:

MEDIA

The Vitality Of the Media

William C. Marcil On Newspapers

Colburn Hyldston III

William C. Marcil, 46, president-elect of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, is the president and publisher of the Forum Publishing Co. in Fargo, N.D.

With the recent closing of some metropolitan newspapers, concern has been expressed over the condition of the newspaper business and its ability to continue to do its job. It's an unnecessary concern; newspapers adapt very well.

Last August, as one example, The Washington Star closed. Yet the next month, five daily newspapers began publishing around Washington. Already their daily circulation is edging toward 150,000. Other suburban newspapers in the area also have increased circulation, and recently a new newspaper, The Washington Times, published its first prototype weekly edition and announced plans for daily publication.

So, although I'm saddened by the fate of the Star, I'm happy to tell you that the newspaper business is alive and thriving in the Washington area. The same is true throughout the country. Daily circulation at the 1,745 daily U.S. papers has topped the 62 million mark. Sunday circulation is at an all-time high of more than 40 million. In fact, more than 130 million U.S. adults read a newspaper each day.

But those statistics don't mean that the newspaper business can loaf along. Newspapers are challenged every day. Competitors abound. And newspapers are facing these challenges head on.

Among our economic concerns is the dramatic increase in the cost of newsprint (paper) over the past several years. Since up to 40 percent of a newspaper's operating expense can be the cost of the newsprint, this is a very real worry. Newspapers have had to eliminate waste and develop new layout and design concepts.

Another challenge comes from the rapid advances in electronic technology. Many feel that the flood of cable TV outlets, satellites and home computers spells problems for the newspaper business. But the challenge posed by the electronic technology is a positive one and is opening more doors for newspapers and for information consumers.

The newspaper business has confidence in the free enterprise system and in the competitive marketplace, because we have a competitive service that the American reader and advertiser want and need. Our financial independence is one of the elements that contributes, of course, to our editorial independence.

We recognize that along with freedom goes responsibility. And we believe that a free press is the best insurance that the people also will remain free.

To fulfill that obligation newspapers must have ready access to the information the people have a right to know. Over the years governments have tried to block, in one way or another, that access. Today is no different, the major effort being in the form of amendments to the Freedom of Information Act, the 1966 law that provides for public access to Government files but permits withholding of classified national defense data, trade secrets and internal personal files.

This attack is a challenge to the idea that the Government's business is the people's business. The burden of proof lies with those who would change the act. They haven't made a case yet; I doubt they can.

We in the newspaper business are opposed to any law that threatens the free flow of information to the public. We know a healthy, vigorous, free press and a strong, free country are inseparable. Without both, neither can exist. □

Bill Leonard on TV

Bill Leonard, 66, recently retired as president of CBS News. Before joining CBS in 1945, Leonard was a reporter for the Bridgeport, Conn. Post-Telegram.

Ed Murrow was fond of saying that he wished television had never been invented. What Murrow meant was that television lights, cameras and movements gave a working journalist simply too many distractions and that these tended to dissipate and obscure what he considered the real business at hand, communicating the thoughts and observations of one person to another. Murrow thought of himself as a word man whom God had blessed with a convincing voice (what a voice) and any further complications to his trade must be the work of the Devil.

A generation after Murrow the country abounds with good souls who would echo Murrow, albeit for a variety of reasons, and would wish that television had never been invented. Among these one could count any number of educators, preachers, reformers, child psychiatrists, elitists and I suppose, above all, publishers. In other words, a healthy chunk of the very best people (giving publishers the benefit of the doubt).

What troubles folks, I imagine, is that it all works so well. As entertainment, one episode of The Dukes of Hazzard commands a larger audience than has ever seen Hamlet in theaters in 350-odd years. As commerce, one 30-second Super Bowl commercial costs $345,000, not because sponsors enjoy paying that for a fleeting exposure, but because, presumably, somewhat more than $345,000 worth of goods will move as a result of the investment. And where news and information is concerned, annual surveys tell us that, quite simply, most people get most of their information about what's going on in the world from television.

What the future holds then, as I see it, is an even more vigorous competition for the attention and the dollar of the subscriber-viewer. The major technological change in the next decade will be the ability to bring many more electronic services and choices into the home, many of them specialty services catering to specialty interests. A lot of these will be offered only at a cost, thus competing for the attention and the pocketbook of a householder who once spent those hours or those dollars in another place, or on another medium. Ten years from now, your home entertainment information center will offer up to 100 channels (some cable systems are approaching this already). The temptation to stay at home will be even greater than it is today with "simple" television. Because, for a price, you will be able to bring in pretty near anything you want, pretty near anytime you want it.

Isn't it curious that in 100 years or so we may have changed from a society that stayed at home where there was nothing to do because there was no way to get somewhere else, to a society that can go anywhere, anytime, but stays at home because going somewhere else isn't any better than staying where we are?

All this sounds as if our future lives might be lived almost totally in self-contained electronic igloos, complete with 100 buttons and removed from the need to talk, walk and rub against each other. I have perhaps a foolish but abiding faith that as long as there are good restaurants and attractive women there will always be crowds on the streets, at least when the weather is nice. One hundred million sets were tuned in to the Super Bowl, but there where the game was played, they were still scalping seats right up to kickoff to those who wanted to be there. FW

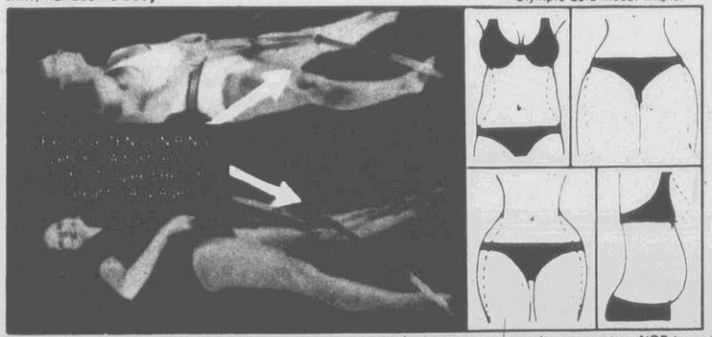
SYNOMETRICS...an Olympic Champion's Discovery!

Turn Belly Fat into a Rock-Hard Lean Stomach

In 7 short minutes a day with the "miracle" of SYNOMETRICS the fantastic new discovery for speed shaping away ugly, embarrassing fat and flab... to reveal a brand new rock-hard, lean, trim, handsome body!

Introducing IKE BERGER
Olympic Champion and truly one of the world's great athletes
• Olympic Gold medal winner



"I'm over 50, yet in just 7 days SPEED SHAPER™ 'burned' off the fat and flab I've lived with for thirty years."

"I thought my fat and flab was with me for life... SYNOMETRICS "burned" it off in only 7 days."

HY HARRIS,
New York, N.Y.

IKE BERGER explains SYNOMETRICS

You already know about the Isotonic and Isometric principle of body dynamics. Millions of people use one or the other in their daily exercises. One day I accidentally discovered that if I used BOTH methods together in one single exercise, I automatically speeded up the results tremendously and I reduced my daily exercise hour down to only 7 short minutes.

THE SCIENCE OF SYNOMETRICS

I later learned the scientific reason for this amazing result. It's called SYNERGISM—meaning that when you combine two methods the result is greater than the both of them separately. I now called my new discovery SYNOMETRICS and developed a special exercise unit I call the SPEED SHAPER. And that's just what it is... a speed method to give you results in minutes, NOT hours. Now... build yourself a "fantastic looking body" with the incredible SYNOMETRICS—the invention that works on the exciting new scientific concept of ISOTONIC + ISOMETRIC.

IRON CLAD MONEY BACK GUARANTEE

In just a few days you must actually begin to see measurable, real results... or your money back promptly and without any question.

• No diet needed if daily caloric intake does not add to present body weight.

WORLD PRODUCTS, Dept. SS-322
1202 Brighton Rd., Clifton, NJ 07012

If the SYNOMETRIC Unit can really start shaping me up in just days, and I mean ALL over (stomach, waist, chest, arms and legs), I will keep it and use it... otherwise, I will want a full refund. Rush SYNOMETRIC to me.

WHAT IN THE WORLD

By Eliot Kaplan

FANGS FOR THE MEMORIES

Since founding the Vampire Research Center 10 years ago, the renowned parapsychologist says he has found 43 men and women in North America who must drink human blood to survive — who are living vampires. Kaplan says there is a chemical in blood that keeps these folks alive for centuries and adds that not all vampire victims are unwilling — some people actually enjoy having their blood drained.

© Paul Lansdale

Vampires, says Kaplan, come from the everyday ranks of accountants, doctors, clerks and lab technicians (how convenient), but don't sleep in coffins, don't have fangs, do cast a reflection in the mirror and can be warded off by garlic, since it makes the blood unpalatable.

"I don't believe in the supernatural," says Kaplan, in a serious vein. "There's nothing above nature. We just may have to redefine it."

A STAR IS PORN

Joining 1,743 other celebrities so honored, comedian Norm Crosby recently had his "star" installed in Hollywood's Walk of Fame. To mark the occasion, the X-rated Pussycat Theater nearby took down the titles of the movies playing there, The Satisfiers of Alpha Blue and The Budding of Brie, and changed its marquee to read, "Congratulations, Norm Crosby!" Well, all day, the box office was then flooded with inquiries asking what times the Congratulations, Norm Crosby! movie was showing.

Crosby: X-rated

COPING WITH AN EMPTY NEST

When children leave home for good, it may be fathers, not mothers, who have the most trouble adjusting to the empty nest, according to research by a family-studies specialist.

Clifton Barber of Colorado State found that, in general, both parents viewed their children's "launching" as a positive experience and looked forward to moving on to a new stage of their lives. Moreover, parents seemed to get along better with each other and with their children once the kids had left.

Peter Bono

But Barber says that while women seemed to prepare for the empty-nest syndrome and quickly got over their initial grief, men showed deep regret at not having spent more time with their children when they were younger. "The men felt they had blown an opportunity forever," says Barber, "and during our interviews, several broke down and began to cry."

NO PLACE LIKE NOME

Perhaps its governor should be comedian Rodney Dangerfield instead of Republican Jay Hammond, because Alaska just don't get no respect. According to a publicity person hired to beef up Alaska's image, 5 percent of Americans think Alaska is another country. I mean, really now, doesn't everybody know it's part of. . .

THE SCOOP ON THE MEDIA

Social scientists Stanley Rothman of Smith College and Robert Lichter of George Washington University interviewed 240 journalists from leading newspapers, news weeklies and the network news departments. He found that 95 percent are white, 79 percent are male, 68 percent come from the Northeast or North Central states, 93 percent graduated college and 80 percent of their fathers were professionals or businessmen. Half eschew any religious affiliations. The majority are liberals on most issues, with 81 percent voting for McGovern over Nixon in 1972 and the same percentage choosing Carter over Ford in 1976.

How does this affect the news we get? "There's absolutely no evidence of bias in political coverage," says Lichter, who is now studying media treatment of key controversial issues. "But being human, journalists' backgrounds do play a role in what stories they choose to cover."

The Bettmann Archive

THE UNKINDEST CUT

Each year 65 percent — over 1.2 million — of newborn American males are circumcised. But now a pediatrician says the operation is unnecessary and possibly harmful.

Dr. Paul Fleiss of the U.S.C. School of Medicine says there is no evidence that removal of the foreskin prevents disease and says proper hygiene is just as effective. He adds that unless the circumcision is being done for religious reasons, parents might want to reconsider, since infection, bleeding and perhaps psychological trauma can result.

The operation is done without anesthesia and, Fleiss notes, "Earlier, we thought infants could not feel pain, but now we know that from the day of birth they can."
