Hope Changes In Redistricting 'Suffice'

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — House and Senate panels eyed small changes in their redistricting maps today after the General Assembly agreed without a fight Monday night against appealing adverse rulings by the U.S. Justice Department.

The battle over legislative reapportionment could move into federal court soon on at least one front, however, under a bill approved by a House committee today setting the statewide primary for June 10.

Legislative leaders said they hoped revised redistricting plans could be enacted and sent to the U.S. Justice Department by Wednesday or Thursday, and that Justice would act swiftly to approve them.

But if approval doesn't come within five days, House Speaker Liston Ramsey said the state would go into federal court seeking an order allowing the primary to proceed under the new House and Senate district boundaries.

The bill, introduced in the House after being drawn up at the request of Democratic leaders, also provides that the primary would be held for all offices except legislative races — such as county offices and statewide judgeships — if legal obstacles remain for House and Senate reapportionment.

"June 10 looks good if we get our plan approved," Ramsey said in an interview. "If we don't get our plan, everybody else will go ahead and have their primary, and we'll set a date for ours later."

The House Election Laws Committee approved the bill on a voice vote, with opposition from Republicans who said the date favored incumbents.

The panel added an amendment providing that the House or Senate could go ahead with its primary if its plan clears legal hurdles but the other chamber's plan hits more legal obstacles.

If enacted, the bill would allow for no absentee ballots in legislative races.

Both the House and Senate met briefly Monday night as the legislature convened its fourth special session since the regular session ended in July.

A Senate subcommittee this morning recommended a redistricting plan that increases the percentage of black population in the 2nd Senatorial District, and it was to go to the full committee later in the day.

Weather A Factor In An Invasion

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — British military experts don't expect a major assault on the Falklands for at least two weeks, but they said a full-scale invasion will have to be "sooner rather than later" because of the Antarctic winter.

The analysts said Britain's next military step following the recapture of South Georgia, 800 miles east of the Falklands, is likely to be an air blockade around the Falklands to prevent Argentine planes from supplying the troops on the islands.

"That will probably mean clashes between the Argentine air force and the fighters aboard the task force's two aircraft carriers," a military think tank specialist who asked not to be identified.

Any all-out assault on the islands is unlikely until the British fleet's 1,500 marines are reinforced by some 3,000 commandos and paratroopers aboard backup ships strung out across the Atlantic.

The backup fleet, mainly requisitioned civilian vessels, also carries 20 more Harrier vertical take-off attack planes and troop-carrying helicopters, including twin-engine Chinooks that can drop paratroopers. The task force at present only has 20 Sea Harriers aboard the carriers Hermes and Invincible.

Press Association, Britain's domestic news agency, said government sources reported Monday British forces may be in action on

ILLEGAL ALIEN RAID — Agents from the federal Immigration and Naturalization Service load illegal aliens into Border Patrol vehicles

Illegal Alien Roundup Is Aimed At Opening Jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Immigration officials say "Operation Jobs," a series of raids on work places in nine major cities, is off to a good start toward its goal of catching and deporting thousands of illegal aliens in well-paying positions.

A task force of 400 agents launched the raids Monday morning. By day's end, officials of the Immigration and Naturalization Service said initial reports indicated as many as 1,000 aliens had been caught. Final figures were not immediately available.

The ultimate goal of the program is to put unemployed Americans in the jobs now held by the illegal aliens. INS officials say it differs from normal enforcement work because the agency has carefully selected work places where it expects to find aliens making well over the federal minimum wage.

"We're not after busboys and janitors," said Joseph F. Salgado, INS's director of enforcement. The raids already have drawn criticism from Hispanic groups. Arnold Torres of the League of United Latin-American Citizens said last week that the raids would help perpetuate the "lie" that illegal aliens are responsible for high U.S. unemployment because they take jobs from American citizens.

"We're watching them very closely this week. If they violate the due process rights of these people, we may sue them," Torres said Monday.

The INS allowed reporters to accompany agents in Chicago to observe a raid at Newlywed Foods, a bakery. Agents covered all the doors to the factory as the day shift workers were leaving and the night shift entering.

They stopped workers who, as one agent said, appeared to be Hispanic. Some had proper identification. Others had no identification, or counterfeit cards. About a dozen were arrested. Two said they were earning $5.13 per hour.

The INS agents said they had caught 45 illegal aliens making as much as $8 per hour in an earlier raid on Terracotta Industries in Chicago.

Rainfall Proves Great Blessing

By MARY SCHULKEN

The nearly two-inch rainfall that soaked Pitt County Monday and today has given tobacco farmers a break, say local agricultural officials.

"This rain will help the (tobacco) transplants live," said Roger Cobb, assistant agricultural extension agent for Pitt County. "When they're set out, some water is put out with them but if it doesn't come behind and rain, the plants don't flourish and the field has to be reset." It's expensive for farmers to reset, he added.

Many tobacco growers were in the fields transplanting tobacco last week, noted Cobb, because of the ideal cloudy, partly rainy weather. These plants, he added, needed the moisture the two-day rain dropped.

"It was not critically dry, but we needed rain," Cobb said.

The precipitation will also help corn plants sprout, noted the farm agent, and help incorporate water-dependent chemicals into the soil. "It will also give those who don't irrigate their tobacco beds a break. They won't have to haul water in to them."

A total of 1.36 inches of precipitation was recorded at 8 a.m. Tuesday by Greenville Utilities' Water Plant. Rainfall continued throughout the morning.

Temperatures remained mild today, with a reading of 66 degrees Fahrenheit at mid-morning. The low Monday dipped to a balmy 58 degrees F.

Cooler 50s and 60s will prevail on Wednesday and winds are expected to shift to northerly tonight.

Seek Retain Same Levels At Schools

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

A strong desire on the part of parents and teachers to maintain at least the current level of services in the city school system for the coming school year emerged as the major concern at a public input session on the school budget Monday night.

Attention was focused basically on a budget proposal that calls for local funding support from Pitt County Commissioners in the current expense category amounting to a 21.38 percent increase over local funding provided in the current fiscal year budget. Superintendent Delma Blinson briefly outlined the proposal, which calls for a total current expense budget request of $2,407,532. This figure incorporates an amount of $195,420 to provide pick-up funds for federal programs being cut.

During the two-hour session, more than two dozen spokesmen representing teachers in all areas of studies and grade levels, librarians, parents, guidance counselors, advisory committee members and school volunteers were given a time limit of three minutes to make comments relative to budget needs.

In several instances, speakers placed emphasis on the urgency of being able to continue to provide individualized help to students with learning disabilities (students with mental, emotional, physical impairments).

This category of students, according to spokesman Martha Coffman, represents 33 percent of the total school population. Currently, help is being provided these students through a variety of remedial and special help programs, both in special curriculum offerings and in regular classroom situations. Mrs. Coffman explained that state funds provide for only 16 percent of this group.

"The gap in funding must be closed," Mrs. Coffman said. "At this time more than 85 percent of children with special needs spend more than half the time in regular classroom situations." Additionally, word is that federal funding for many of these programs will be substantially cut in the coming school year.

Expressions were also made for the need to maintain programs to motivate the gifted student. A number of spokesmen in the areas of math, science and the arts documented exceptional achievements made by students at

ALCOHOL ONLY

I would like to know if North Carolina's laws concerning driving under the influence applies only to alcohol or whether incapacitated drivers are also checked for other drugs in their bodies. This question is prompted by a piece I saw on "60 Minutes" recently which pointed out that many fatal and seriously injurious accidents are now caused by people under the influence of drugs other than alcohol, yet only 14 states have laws which apply to other drugs. In the other 36 states, it seemed to say that a judge would have to let the defendant go unless the offending drug was alcohol, just because of the way the laws are presently written. R.T.

A spokesman for the N.C. Highway Patrol said North Carolina must be one of the 14, that this state has had laws against driving under the influence of drugs, just as for driving under the influence of intoxicating beverages, for many years. He cited Chapter 20-139-A of the North Carolina General Statutes: "It is unlawful and punishable as provided in General Statute 20-179 for any person who is an habitual user of any narcotic drug to drive or operate any vehicle upon any highway or public vehicle area within this state."

Part B reads, "It is unlawful and punishable as provided in General Statute 2-179 for any person who is under the influence of any narcotic drug or who is under the influence of any other drug to such degree that his physical or mental faculties are appreciably impaired to drive or operate any vehicle upon any highway or public vehicle area within this state."

Chapter 20-138-A states the same about any person under the influence of any intoxicating liquor. Part B specifies, "It is unlawful for any person to operate any vehicle on any highway when the amount of alcohol in such person's blood is 0.10 percent or more by weight ..."

The spokesman said that drugs do sometimes pose more difficulty in detection than does alcohol. The breathalyzer can be used to determine the level of alcohol use, he said, but a blood sample is usually needed to detect narcotics.

Three Sets Of Twins In One Day

THREE SETS OF TWINS ... were born Sunday at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. Babies left to right are Celeste and Leste Knight, Christopher and Christy Wooden, and Datesha and

In the span of nine minutes Sunday morning two sets of twins were born at Pitt County Memorial Hospital and before the day was over, a third set was born. All are full-term healthy babies who went home with their families today.

The daughters of Connie Ray and Annette Harrell Williams of 416 Cadillac St., Greenville, were born at 1:44 and 1:47 a.m. Datesha and Natesha are their parents' first children.

Born one minute later than Natesha was Celeste Knight, followed five minutes later by Leste. They are the only children of Ollie and Mary Knight of Route 3, Tarboro.

"It was wild in the delivery room," Mrs. Knight said. "The nurses were running back and forth between us wondering which of us was going to deliver first. Annette beat me."

The fifth twin of the day was also a girl, Christy, daughter of William Earl and Helen Marie Turnage Wooden of 702-B W. 14th St., Greenville. Her brother, Christopher, arrived seven minutes later. They are the fifth girl and third boy of the Wooden family.

Birth weights of the babies ranged from 4 pounds, 13.5 ounces, to 5 pounds, 9.5 ounces.

Newborn nursery head nurse Hilda Norris said, in her 18 years of caring for newborns at PCMH, she remembers only one other time when three sets of twins were born the same day. Two sets are not extremely unusual, she added. She said the nursery census had increased from 24 Friday at midnight, high from the usual 18-22, to a record or near-record 37 Sunday at midnight.

Lavish Productions For Fashion Designs

By EILEEN PUTMAN
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Rare orchids fill Halston's showroom. Geoffrey Beene booked his show in the Red Parrot nightclub, where the beautiful people gather. Bill Blass is holding forth at the Four Seasons and the Hotel

Pierre. Tony Chase, who designs costumes for stage and screen stars, hired Broadway actors to sell his samurai-inspired collection.

Masters at illusion. Seventh Avenue's top fashion designers hope their showmanship will persuade buyers that their creations can sell in stores all over the country, despite tight money and high unemployment.

They spend in the high six figures on lights, sound, makeup, flowers, champagne and $300-an-hour models to create in rich velvets and nubby tweeds their "statement" to the world.

In one showroom, a stage manager gives lighting and music cues and a willowy model prances before the audience. Andy Warhol smiles wanly.

Her suit draped with a silver fox stole, the model points her toes daintily and winks at the crowd.

"The more I see you, the more I want you," belts a singer.

Translation: "Buy me." The hustle is not subtle. It can't be.

The stakes are high — New York's $16 billion fashion industry makes and sells one-fourth of the clothes in the nation.

Buyers are not fooled by the illusion.

"It's just a show. I suppose it's necessary," said Alice Batigne, a buyer for a York, Pa., boutique.

"The productions mean nothing. Buyers may enjoy it on occasion but they don't really buy then. It's just a bunch of the designer's friends and fashion groupies," said Etta Froio, fashion editor at Women's Wear Daily.

For designers, the real selling effort comes after the shows, when buyers take a close look at fabric and price in showrooms. Slick Seventh Avenue productions have become the custom recently, imitating Paris where elaborate shows have been done for years.

Years ago, a "show" in New York was an intimate gathering in the designer's salon. Models walked by without the choreography.

Lee Abraham — chairman of Associated Merchandising Corp., a firm that advises stores like Bloomingdale's in New York, Rich's in Atlanta and Harrods in London — thinks the tough economy in recent years has forced designers to "extreme" promotions.

"It has to take something new and interesting to get them to pay with their money," he said.

There is growing uneasiness on both sides of the cash register of "buyer resistance."

Smaller and fewer orders are predicted as buyers wait to see what the economy will do.

"People are more cautious, much more analytical. They're thinking a lot more than they would in a season not filled with those overtones," said Judith Feller, senior vice president of Independent Retailers, a buyer's assistance firm that represents 225 stores.

Many buyers feel that moderate markets will be hit hardest, but haute couture is not immune.

Galloway and Mrs. C.D. Elks, seventh; Mr. and Mrs. Pat Patterson, eighth.

A unit tournament will be held Wednesday afternoon.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

The tourists are coming! The tourists are coming! This year, for the first time, the number of foreign visitors to the United States exceeds the number of Americans traveling abroad.

For those of you who have traveled extensively, I beg you to have compassion for these pilgrims who climb off the plane having consumed 18 hard rolls and a plastic chicken.

Those brave adventurers who balance a 35-pound camera around their neck and a tote bag filled with jelly beans which their travel agent told them the natives would accept in exchange for the privilege of taking their picture.

Those gypsy nomads who cringe every time they have to flash their passport. (If they look like their picture, they're too sick to travel.)

Those truth seekers who have studied the history, economics, politics, and power structure of America through satellite television and know two words: Matt Dillon.

Already, I could cry for them.

Some bus tour will tell them the No. 1 not-to-be-missed historic site is in White Sands, N.M., where the space shuttle, Columbia, recently landed. It has a few rattlesnakes, land mines and porta-potties, but you'll never forgive yourself if you go home without seeing it.

Another tour guide will charge them $40 a head to ride a mechanical bull in Texas and experience a "typical American evening out." They will be served barbecued ribs at a long table by a waiter who speaks only Spanish.

The itinerary will undoubtedly include a tour of a plastic factory where a showroom will have a prominent sign, "WE SHIP ANYWHERE," a trip through a bowery where they can see an American derelict, and a visit to the cave where Jesse James and his gang were reported to have hidden out. (Please use flash and set your cameras at 160th of a second.)

They will load up on "American" food: tacos, pizza, egg rolls and Polish sausage, and buy a cowboy hat they don't have the nerve to wear home.

The high point will be Disneyland, where they will pay $8 for a 52-year-old mouse on a T-shirt and meet other tourists in line waiting for rides.

They will go home convinced they have "seen America."

What a shame. All you tourists, and you all know who you are, can take my picture by five genuine American garbage cans for a bag of jelly beans. How about it?

Reader Thankful For America

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am retired, have a good income and am in good health. I play golf every day, have a roof over my head and have a supermarket to shop for food without having to farm and raise it myself.

I have an electric stove to cook my food, and a washer and dryer to do my laundry instead of a washboard and tub. I have nice clothes and shoes on my feet and don't have to go barefoot as I did when I was a child. I have a nice bathroom and don't have to go outside in the cold as I did when I was a child. I bathe in a bathtub with plenty of hot water whenever I feel like it instead of in a washtub behind a pot-bellied stove on Saturday night as I did when I was a child.

I am not locked up in prison or a mental hospital as some people are. I am free to go where I want. I have a television set and stereo that kings could not enjoy years ago.

I have a car for transportation instead of a horse and buggy. I was married for 22 years to a woman who was as beautiful as a movie star. I went through World War II without a scratch. Talk about heaven. America is heaven!

THINKING OUT LOUD

DEAR THINKING: Thanks for giving us all something to think about.

DEAR ABBY: I read the letter from the guy who says he's 24, decent and can't find a nice girl. Well, I'm 35, decent, and I've been looking for a nice girl longer than he has. I could tell you stories about past dates you wouldn't believe.

I've been stood up on dates more times than I can count. I took a girl out to a nice restaurant, wined her and dined her, then she excused herself to go "powder her nose" and never came back. I met a gal at a party once and she gave me a phony address and a phony telephone number.

I'm 6 foot 6, average-looking, Italian and Catholic. I tried a dating service and was sent a hooker. I've gone to church socials, tall clubs and discos. No luck. I swore off singles bars forever because all the "single" women I've met there were either separated, engaged or out cheating on their husbands.

I'm polite and love to dance. I'm not a drinker, I don't take drugs and I'm not gay. I have a good job and I'm ambitious. All I want is a woman who's reasonably attractive, intelligent and sincere. So where are all the decent women hiding?

SQUARE AND FRUSTRATED

DEAR SQUARE: You sound too good to be true. If you love to dance, join a square-dancing club. You'll meet attractive, wholesome, lively men and women, and singles are welcome.

DEAR ABBY: I am physically unable to father a child, and my wife and I are considering artificial insemination. Our question: Are there pictures of the donors on file at the sperm bank? We would prefer that the biological father of our child have the same physical features that I possess. Or is that too much to ask for?

TALL, DARK AND BROWN-EYED

DEAR TALL: Inquiries from the laboratories I researched disclosed that although pictures of the donors are not available, facts concerning their physical characteristics are. This includes race, blood type, hair color, eye color, physique, complexion, etc. Medical and family background are also included, as well as information disclosing the donor's I.Q., education, and musical, artistic and athletic abilities.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. Write to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Emotional Diseases Up

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A Duke University Medical Center psychiatrist says emotional disease has reached epidemic proportions in America.

Dr. J. Ingram Walker, speaking at a recent meeting of the Mental Health Association in North Carolina, said at any given time, 7 percent of the population is depressed bad enough to require drugs or behavioral therapy.

"America is experiencing an epidemic of emotional disease," Walker said. "In addition, in the United States, 20 million people experience clinically significant anxiety symptoms, 3 million are psychotic, 12 million are alcoholic, 2 million are dependent on drugs and 6 million children and teenagers are emotionally disturbed."

Walker, who wrote the recently-published book entitled "Everybody's Guide to Emotional Well-Being: Helping Yourself Get Help," said emotional problems often are accompanied by physical ailments such as high blood pressure, heart disease and obesity, and there are several ways to combat emotional woes.

"In the first place, we must be more aware that there are extremely effective treatments for the majority of emotional difficulties," he said. "Most cases of depression will respond to medical treatment. These medications are non-addictive and some of the newer antidepressants are virtually free of side effects."

Walker also says parents can help keep their children in the right frame of mind.

There Must Be A Catch

You can't say the North Carolina Extension Service isn't keeping up with the times. The extension service, which is more at home helping a farmer grow his crops or a homemaker make her pies, is now making a pitch for Tar Heels to become millionaires.

Borrowing from the widely distributed advertisements touting individual retirement accounts as a way of becoming a millionaire upon retirement, extension specialist William Gardner says the same could be accomplished with less money by investing in trees. All it would take, Gardner says, is 100 acres of land, some seedlings, about $15,000 in a one-time investment and 30 years of sitting back for those trees — based on current timber prices — to turn a neat fallout of $1.6 million. Gardner notes that IRA's utilizing $2,000 annual deposits would produce about $1.2 million in 30 years.

And there's more. IRA's are not taxed until you start receiving benefits. Well, only 40 percent of income from a timber sale now is subject to taxation and that was reduced even more under a new amendment that says no more than 50 percent of that 40 percent can be taxed. And in the case of trees, costs involved in the timber stand and sale expenses are deductible and you get a tax credit for investment in reforestation.

There is one major catch: one acre out of every 400 acres of forest in North Carolina was lost to fire last year.

Sinai Move A Brave One

Israel comes in for criticism of its failure to recognize rights of Arabs living within its borders and military raids on Palestinian bases in native countries, rightfully so.

Israel, however, deserves a large amount of credit for evacuating the Sinai to return it to Egypt on schedule.

The move put the Israeli government in the agonizing position of using troops to forcibly remove some of its own citizens.

More than anything else peace between Egypt and Israel is the great hope for the entire Middle East.

THE N.C. FARMER

Rely On Migrants

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
SPRING HOPE, N.C. (AP) — Nash County farmer Ted Bissett recalls the time when sharecroppers provided enough labor to harvest tobacco and sweet potatoes.

Now, he says, migrant farm labor is the only way to get crops out of the field before they rot.

Attorneys representing migrants say the agricultural system has soured, creating economic incentives for slave labor and providing workers with inhumane living conditions.

It's the farmers not the workers who are in a bind, said Ben Robinson, a Rocky Mount farmer and lobbyist for growers.

He says growers haven't had a profitable year since 1977 and, unless the economy changes substantially, he predicts more than 34 percent of North Carolina's farms will be sold at auction this year.

Officials predict that large growers, most of them in Eastern North Carolina, will hire 30,000 to 50,000 migrants and 150,000 local residents to bring in a $1 billion harvest this year.

"If we're treating people unfairly I wouldn't have my business," Bissett said. "Those fellows (migrants) wouldn't be jumping on that bus to go to work. They wouldn't be driving 1,000 miles to get here."

"We have very little standard housing percentage-wise compared to Brooklyn," Robinson said. "At least migrants have a roof over their head. They're being fed and I never have seen one migrant in a labor camp naked who didn't want to be."

"I'm not trying to defend poverty, but poverty was here when man was put on the face of the earth and it will be here when he leaves," Robinson said.

Migrant labor is the only job some farmhands know, said Bissett, who uses migrants to harvest his sweet potatoes and tobacco.

"It's probably been their livelihood for years. Their fathers did it; their grandfathers did it," he said.

Many are on the run, said Robinson, who raises peaches, blueberries, peanuts, grains and tobacco.

"A lot are criminals running from law-enforcement agencies, running from family problems, child support and what have you," he said.

Others have tried manufacturing jobs and failed to keep pace, Robinson says.

Farmers depend on migrant labor because government social programs have made local residents less willing to work in the fields, said Bissett and Robinson.

"Since they've been cutting those social programs, everybody has been there and ready to go to work," he said.

There are other problems with local labor, Robinson says.

"We take local labor and should the local economy take off... they'll leave," he said of the seasonal farmhands. "We've got to protect our investment by whatever means necessary."

Competition for workers sometimes is fierce, Robinson adds, charging that some growers enter other farmers' labor camps to lure workers.

"They find out what's paid in the area and offer $5 more a day," he said.

Frittering A Fortune

WASHINGTON — In the current issue of Conservative Digest, publisher Richard Viguerie has pulled together a hundred examples of grants and subsidies paid out over the past five years to various causes. The sums, relatively speaking, are small. They add up to a large anger.

Consider, if you please, certain grants of our tax dollars to homosexual groups. In 1979-80, the magazine reports, the Department of Health and Human Services gave $18,416 to the New Ways Ministry of Mount Rainier, Md., to study "the coming out process and coping strategies of gay women." That same period saw a grant of $167,724 to a center attached to California State University in San Francisco. The grant was for a study of "civil liberties and sexual orientation."

Under the now-abandoned Comprehensive Education and Training Program (CETA), $41,000 went to a feminist outfit to produce the all-nude "Leaping Lesbian Follies." Another CETA grant, this one for $640,000, funded nearly half the staff of the Gay and Lesbian Community Services Center in Los Angeles; the grant was intended to provide "education about gay lifestyles and gay people's problems." As recently as this past October, after the Reagan administration had come into office, $14,695 was channeled to the National Lesbian and Gay Men's Radio Project.

Is there any constitutional justification for this frittering away of the taxpayers' money? Over the years I have developed some small acquaintance with the "Constitution. Even if the general welfare clause is treated as a substantive grant of legislative power, how in the name of the Founding Fathers can these subsidies be regarded as promoting the "general" welfare?

The examples go on and on. During the 1981 White House Conference on Aging, the Gray Panthers got $30,000 for "media activities." The National Council of Senior Citizens got $12,347 topay for "2,000 annual subscriptions to Washington Weekly newsletter." Why should taxpayers be compelled to pay for this sort of thing?

Whatever the "Feminist Press" may be, it stood in line at the trough last July for two grants totaling $313,000 "for the improvement of post-secondary education." Is this a federal responsibility? The far-left United States Student Association knocked down $107,000 for this same amorphous purpose. The well-heeled League of Women Voters, the YWCA, and the National Organization for Women's Legal Defense Fund play the grantsmanship game.

It's a great game. Among the top-ranking professionals on the four is the National Urban League. Over the past five years, the magazine reports, the league and its affiliates have won 66 grants from the Department of Housing, 28 grants from CETA and five grants from the Department of Education. In a spectacular slamdunk maneuver, the league even got a grant to study a grant — $396,000 from the Justice Department "to assess completed research on the topic of minorities, crime and criminal justice."

Other Editors Say Whale-Watching

(Carteret News-Times)

Sixty-nine people on a bird-and-whale watching expedition out of Manteo got more than they bargained for. Their vessel, the Crystal Dawn, had to be rescued by the Coast Guard. Altogether the 67 passengers and two crew members were more than 18 hours at sea. And they never saw a whale. Some birds? Yes.

Whale-watching off the North Carolina coast obviously isn't as rewarding as off the California coast where the gray whales migrate.

There may be more whales off our beaches to the north than we imagine. The State Marine Resources Center on Roanoke Island, which sponsored the trip, might do well, however, to undertake a bit more research on frequency of whale-sightings before promoting expeditions for that purpose.

An old-time whaler of Carteret might suggest that the best place to sight whales is from a high dune on one of the outer banks. These days we have high-powered binoculars. In the 1800s, the husky men of the whale crews, designated as spotters, had to depend only on the naked eye to see the geyser of vapor that meant a whale was blowing. With the shout "Whale!" the crew would launch their boat into the surf and pursue the great fish, usually a Right or Bowhead whale.

Whales aren't as numerous as they once were. That's one of the reasons the whaling industry died out on Shackleford Banks at the beginning of this century. Whaling families left there and found homes on the mainland.

The whaling season here was usually February through April. Some years, depending on weather, it might have started in January. These months are treacherous ones to be in the waters around the North Carolina capes. Even people going to sea in today's craft with all the safety devices we can devise, take a risk. If their only objective is to sight a whale, is the risk worth it?

Strength For Today

LANDING AT THE BOTTOM

A religious writer of several generations ago made the statement that there are two ways of coming down from the top of a church steeple. "One," he said, "is to jump down, and the other is to come down by a ladder. Both will bring you to the bottom. So also, there are two ways of going to hell; one is to jump into it with your eyes open and the other is to go down by the ladder of little sins. The latter is the more usual means of entrance. The devil need only once get the wedge of little sins into your heart and you will soon be all his own."

The nature of man and the nature of moral purpose has changed little over the centuries. And it is still very true that whether we jump into the evils of life like a man jumping from a church steeple, or going into them gradually like one descending a ladder, the end is the same. We land at the bottom. — Elisha Douglass

Koch Eying Presidency

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — New York City mayor Ed Koch's closest political advisers are deadly serious in planning ahead for a presidential effort in 1984 if he is elected governor of New York this year.

Media consultant David Garth, mastermind of Koch's political fortunes since his first election as mayor in 1977, makes no bones about this ambition in private conversation. What's more, national Democratic strategists think Koch as governor would have a fighting chance in 1984. According to conversations among his associates, Koch would forego the early primaries — a tactic made possible by new rules providing for a large bloc of uncommitted delegates.

A footnote: While a heavy favorite for the governorship, Koch still faces a three-way race that always leaves room for doubt. Democratic lieutenant governor Mario Cuomo is nearly assured of the Liberal Party nomination and probably would run on a separate party line even if denied it.

Barry Backlash

A fund-raising letter for Planned Parenthood written by Sen. Barry Goldwater has angered Reaganite Republicans for putting Goldwater's conservative reputation, however faded, behind an organization that opposes many of President Reagan's economic and social programs.

In his three-and-a-half-page letter, the 1964 Republican presidential nominee said he first became a Planned Parenthood supporter 15 years ago. He praised its work on the pro-abortion front and its battle against the drive by conservatives to restrict the authority of the Supreme Court.

Planned Parenthood led the attack against Reagan's block-grants program, and has attacked the administration's new policy of notifying parents of teenagers who get government-subsidized advice on how to enjoy sex without risking pregnancy. The letter by Goldwater, who noted that he has parted company with some of "my usual political allies" in recent months, will be used in Planned Parenthood's major fund-raising drive among conservatives.

The Democratic No-Man

The Democratic "no" in highly-secret bipartisan negotiations on the budget has been sounded not by the tax and budget specialists but by Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill's agent in the talks: veteran Rep. Richard Bolling of Missouri, chairman of the House Rules Committee.

Bolling, a liberal stalwart in the House for 34 years who is retiring, has insisted that any budget package must cut into the third year of President Reagan's tax cut. Budget Committee chairman James Jones and Ways and Means Committee chairman Dan Rostenkowski have been considerably more flexible (though this may merely reflect the nice cop-tough cop routine).

Rep. Barber Conable of New York, senior Republican on Ways and Means, has retorted in the talks that cutting off the third year only hurts blue-collar workers. But Bolling has refused to budge.

Why Inman Is Out

The resignation of Adm. Bobby Inman as No. 2 man in the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) resulted in large part from the success of his boss, CIA Director William J. Casey, in keeping him away from President Reagan and from internal operations of the National Security Council staff.

Inman, who said he was quitting because at age 51 it was time to move on to a new career, had been the most persistent critic of early-tougher drafts of the administration's new CIA charter. His anti-charter moves were made discreetly in closed-door testimony on Capitol Hill. Inman, siding with congressional liberals, worried that the CIA was getting too much power under the new charter, a position that infuriated the White House.

But the larger reason for his resignation was his feeling of being shut out of intimate policy talks at the White House, where Casey seldom allowed him to roam. Inman backers told us Casey feared that the admiral's expertise as a long-time intelligence official would make Casey look bad. Other CIA officials fingered Inman as the "deep throat" of New York Times intelligence exposes.

The overwhelming belief among Connecticut politicians of all stripes is that Sen. Lowell Weicker will drop out as a Republican candidate well before the Sept. 7 primary and run as an independent.

That explains Weicker's increasingly tougher rhetoric against President Reagan. Although he remains a slight favorite to beat Prescott Bush Jr. (the vice president's older brother) in the July 23-24 convention, Bush is now expected to win the Sept. 7 primary.

The president's own political operatives, who have no love for Weicker, believe the liberal senator would finish a poor third behind Bush and Democratic representative Toby Moffett in a three-way race. Politicians on the scene do not agree. They say that Weicker, first elected to the Senate as a Republican in a three-way race in 1970, could repeat this feat as an independent.

Where Your Taxes Finally Go

By JOHN CUNNIFF

AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — A $25,000-a-year household can feel exceedingly small in an economy measured in the trillions of dollars and run on a federal budget of $725 billion, figures nearly incomprehensible to most people.

That is, until they are divided into the share that can be attributed to or assessed against each person or household, a skill that the Tax Foundation has developed to a fine art, and a formidable weapon too.

A weapon that among other things can be used by editorial writers and cartoonists to sting spendthrift congressmen or support more efficiency in government or warn the country about the dangers of government debt.

Do you know what May 5 is? It's tax freedom day, of course, as anyone exposed to Tax Foundation data knows. On that date the average worker will have earned funds sufficient to satisfy his federal, state and local tax obligations for the year, and can begin working for himself.

Freedom day is perhaps the best known of the non-profit foundation's statistical promotions, but never since its founding in 1937 has it ceased to add, divide or multiply to make its point, which is "to aid in the development of more efficient and economical government."

Do you know that the average worker will set aside 2 hours, 44 minutes for the tax collectors each day this year? And that this time is three minutes less than it cost to feed the tax collectors last year?

The foundation doesn't like waste, and very often, it suggests, taxes are wasted. Even when revenues are used efficiently, you get the feeling the foundation's officers feel they aren't spent productively.

This feeling has a lot to do with politics, and it isn't just a coincidence that the foundation was founded during the administration of President Franklin Roosevelt and that its officers and trustees are also the top officers of some of the country's biggest corporations.

Though its vigilance never ceases, it does change. Several years ago it conceded that despite its efforts Washington was where the power lay, and so it moved there from this city of corporate enterprise. It may also be more receptive to spending on social issues than many executives were during the 1930s. In the foreword to the foundation's 329-page data book, Thomas Macioce, chairman, offered it to those who "seek to maintain a strong America; to nurture the aged, the needy, and the infirm; and to rebuild our nation's industrial base."

That book, "Facts and Figures on Government Finance," a $15 volume, contains figures and breakdowns that a non-expert isn't likely to obtain without rummaging through unfamiliar, dusty files.

That in the latest available count, for example, there were 79,913 government units in the United States and that 67,780 local governments had property-taxing powers. Or that government spending for housing, now in the many billions, was only $15 million as recently as 1950.

The foundation also keeps up with issues as they evolve, and reports its findings in Monthly Tax Features, a four-page report. A recent issue gave more evidence of its art in making numbers understandable.

The lead story in that issue carried the headline "U.S. Will Take $6,916 in Taxes From Ordinary Taxpayer in FY 1982," which most readers will agree carries more of a wallop than saying Uncle Sam will spend $725 billion in the current FY, or fiscal year.

The breakdown shows the biggest expenditure of all will be for income security, mainly Social Security, which was, relatively speaking, only a two-year-old asterisk when the foundation was formed.

Income security now takes $2,291 from the ordinary taxpayer, described by the foundation as a worker earning close to $25,000 a year who is the sole support of a wife and two children.

National defense takes $1,712 from Mr. Ordinary, or 24.75 percent of his entire tax bill. To put it another way, it is also nearly 42 times the $41 of his taxes that is spent on "administration of justice."

While the ordinary worker might have had some notion that this is what he spends on such matters, he is less likely to be aware of the third-largest category, which will cost him $905 in this fiscal year.

That figure represents something the foundation has been monitoring and worrying about these past 45 years. "It is the interest charge on the federal debt.

Korean Policeman Ran Amok; Killed 58 And Self

VICTIMS — Some of the people who were injured when a South Korean policeman went on a shooting spree receive medical treatment at a hospital in Uiryong, Tuesday. (AP Laserphoto)

By K.C. HWANG
Associated Press Writer
SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Home Minister Suh Chung-hwa offered his resignation today to atone for a policeman who went berserk and reportedly killed 58 Koreans during a drunken rampage after an argument with his wife.

One report said the wife was among the dead.

The policeman, Woo Kum-kon, 27, exploded a hand grenade and killed himself in a farmhouse after eight hours of attacks in Uiryong, 200 miles south of Seoul, and five neighboring hamlets. The suicide blast reportedly killed three members of the farm family.

The massacre occurred in a remote mountainous section, and early reports of the death toll ranged from 53 to 79. But the government today said an investigative team of police and Home Ministry officials visited the scene of the slaughter and counted 58 dead.

Officials said the provincial police director for the area was suspended and four policemen were arrested. Three were assigned to the substation the killer was assigned to, and the fourth was a regional police officer, officials said.

The police reported 36 others were wounded, some critically. Because of a lack of medical facilities in the mountainous area, the wounded were taken to hospitals more than 30 miles away. Appeals for donors to give blood were broadcast and emergency blood supplies rushed to the area.

The Korean Broadcasting System gave this account of the policeman's rampage: Woo, a member of the Uiryong police force, began drinking heavily Monday after an argument with his 25-year-old wife and stole two carbines, 180 rounds of ammunition and seven hand grenades from the police armory. The arsenal was unguarded because all police officers on duty were attending a neighborhood association meeting.

Woo shot his first victim on the street in front of the Kungyu police substation, where he was assigned, then entered a post office where he killed a telephone operator and three other employees.

He ran through a shopping area, indiscriminately firing the carbines and exploding at least two grenades, and then moved through five neighboring villages on foot, firing the carbines and exploding grenades.

The police organized a manhunt with the help of military personnel shortly before midnight but did not catch up with their quarry before he ended his life in a farmhouse two and a half miles from the police station where his rampage started.

Four rounds of ammunition and one grenade were found in the farmhouse.

President Chun Doo-hwan, who had just said farewell to Vice President George Bush at the presidential mansion, expressed "profound shock and sympathy" for the victims. He sent his chief secretary to the scene to convey his personal condolences to the bereaved families, and the home minister flew to the area in a police plane to direct an investigation and relief work.

Prime Minister Yoo Chang-soon set up a special committee to investigate the tragedy.

Two minority parties in the National Assembly demanded that the home minister, the national police director and the local police director resign. Newspapers and some politicians charged that a lack of discipline in the police force was responsible for the tragedy.

Others questioned how such an unstable person could have been employed as a policeman handling arms.

Uiryong is about 50 miles from the south coast and 60 miles west of Pusan, South Korea's second largest city.

who were charged with slavery, not farmer Cecil Williams who hired them. Williams testified at the trial, but was immune from prosecution because he had contracted with the crewleaders to oversee fieldwork.

U.S. Department of Labor says courts have held that farmers give up responsibility for wage and health violations.

Robinson acknowledged that the laws force farmers not to get involved with field work, but would not say whether he believes the farmer should be involved.

Despite testimony in the slavery trial that some crewleaders beat migrants who tried to leave work, Bissett said he's never seen armed guards used to keep workers in camps.

"It may exist but I've never seen it. I think that's 10 percent truth and 90 percent made up," he said.

Robinson said he believes fewer than 1 percent of the crewleaders supervising migrants abuse their workers.

ESC Director John Fleming credits his organization with weeding out some of the worst crew bosses.

Pay for crewleaders varies, but almost always they must pay migrants' wages and other expenses from their own salaries. Robinson acknowledges that crewleaders' actual earnings are low, but says the pay is adequate.

"You can pay this crewleader so much money that if the crewleader wanted to he couldn't pay minimum wage, which means you have to cheat the workers on hours...." he said.

Reagan administration is feeding the outfits that bite it. The National Audubon Society, the Sierra Club, the National Wildlife Federation and Friends of the Earth have been funded in varying amounts, the better to attack the president's efforts to develop his own programs of conservation. The International Union of United Autoworkers is down for nearly $6.5 million for 1979-82. The Textile workers Union shook the taxpayers' money tree for $3 million over a three-year period. The Women's Equity Action League got a million. There's no end to this fiscal hemorrhage.

T.S. Eliot observed in a famous line that April is the cruelest month. For millions of wage-earning Americans, hard-pressed to make ends meet, the April 15 income tax deadline is a painful occasion. We pay our taxes under threat of being sent to prison if we don't. With this year's deadline fresh in mind, it is especially infuriating to discover where some of our money goes. Let us turn these faucets off.

Grades Lag At A Noisy School

By RICK HAMPSON
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) —

Every five minutes, for more than 50 years, teachers paused in classrooms on the east side of Public School 98, Columbus' voyage, the swallows' migration, planetary orbits — all stopped as a subway train roared by on the elevated tracks 75 yards away.

Reading tests showed students on the school's quieter west side were two months to a year ahead of their east side counterparts, who spent 11 percent of their class time waiting for the subway to pass.

Now a study reports that since improvements were made, reading skills in those rooms have pulled even with those on the west side.

Before the changes, each train bombarded the upper Manhattan school's students with as much as 89 decibels, a level at which "a speaker would have to scream to be heard 16 feet away," according to Anthony Paolillo, a Transit Authority engineer.

"I wish the trains wouldn't run anymore," began one youngster's composition assignment.

"It was hard to keep your train of thought," recalled Helen Morik, who attended the school and later led its parents' association.

Help finally arrived during the 1979 summer vacation, when the Transit Authority stuck inch-thick rubber pads between the rails and the railroad ties along 1,000 feet of track. And the education department put acoustic ceilings in three of the noisiest rooms.

The noise-proofing cut the racket by 8 decibels, according to Dr. Arline Bronzafit, an environmental psychologist who has studied the school for nine years. Teachers are interrupted less frequently and students endure a less intense sonic barrage, she says.

Elevated trains drown out the educational process at more than 50 other city schools, she said. P.S. 98 Principal Mark Shapiro said his school got help "because we made the most noise about the noise."

But the trains still go by. Some of Diana Hahn's second graders like to run to the window for a look when they hear them coming. Others use the time to talk with their neighbor. "It takes time to bring them back," she said.

So the teacher makes a game of it. After the train has passed, she asks, "Who remembers what we were talking about?"

Mrs. Hahn, whose Bronx apartment also faces elevated subway tracks, said she is used to the noise. "I always seem to pick a room next to the train. The other teachers want to be on the other side. I can tolerate a lot of noise."

P.S. 98's students, most of whom are poor and many of whom speak only Spanish, can ill afford any more disadvantages, Dr. Bronzafit said.

Inexpensive land near elevated tracks is often used for public buildings, but couldn't a better site have been found for the school when it was built in 1923?

"That's what the Transit Authority asked us," said Shapiro.

Amoco Is Issued Oil, Gas Leases

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Oil and gas leases have been issued allowing Amoco to develop any oil and gas the company discovers in North Carolina's national forests, a federal spokesman said.

George Olson, forest supervisor in Asheville, said the six leases were approved after an environmental assessment was completed.

Assassins' Trials

John Hinckley is scheduled to go on trial today for the attempted assassination of Ronald Reagan. He will not be the first Presidential assailant to plead not guilty by reason of insanity. One hundred years ago, Charles Guiteau, a failed lawyer and journalist, was tried for killing President Garfield. Guiteau, who claimed to be an employee of Jesus Christ & Co., successor to St. Paul and premier of England, turned the courtroom into a circus. But despite his crazy antics, he was found sane and guilty. Nevertheless Guiteau played out his part even on the gallows, singing his own composition in a farewell falsetto: "I am going to the Lordy, I am so glad."

Homes Fair To Offer Plan For Housing

The Greenville Home Builders Association will sponsor the fourth annual Better Homes Fair Thursday, Friday and Saturday at Carolina East Mall.

Linda Wilkerson, show coordinator, said the theme for this year's event is "Redo in '82."

She said the show will feature exhibits on every aspect of home building along with interior and exterior furnishings. Live demonstrations will be offered in the central court area every half hour beginning at 5 p.m. Friday and 10 a.m. Saturday.

Of special interest this year, Ms. Wilkerson said, will be working displays of a hot tub and a spa with live models and an outside solar hot water heater.

A "board cutting" will be held Thursday at 2 p.m. to officially open the show. Taking part will be Merle Bowser, current president of the local association, David Evans Jr., chairman, and Ms. Wilkerson.

The North Carolina Savings & Loan League said that a "major effort on behalf of the beleaguered housing industry, its thousands of out-of-work employees and frustrated home buyers and owners" will be announced Friday at a series of press conferences across the state.

The conferences include a 9:45 a.m. session in the main dining room of the Casablanca on Greene Street in Greenville.

League chairman William G. White, it was noted, will announce the plan to "Save the American Dream" as he highlights the current housing plight and projects future concerns related to affordable and available housing.

Solar Fraction

Greenville's solar fraction calculated by the department of physics of East Carolina University was 3 Monday, which means that a solar water heater could have provided 3 percent of your hot water.

local, regional and state levels in these fields. These achievements, they maintain, have been possible largely due to programs designed to give incentives to this segment of students.

Rose High art teacher Billy Stinson demonstrated achievements by unrolling a series of scrolls — a fairly small one for achievements 10 years ago, a much larger one for this year's achievements and then, to illustrate what could happen without monetary support, he unrolled a tiny six-inch scroll that would represent next year's possibilities if there is a drastic cut in funds.

A telling example of the effects of inflation in school costs was given by Margaret Hadden, media specialist at Elmhurst Elementary School. "It takes money to maintain school libraries," Mrs. Hadden commented. "For example, books for elementary libraries average $8 each. At the high school level, the average cost is $23 per book."

She cited a cost of $24 for a single lamp for projection machines, and mentioned that at the time of accreditation of the schools, one of the commitments made was to maintain libraries at Level 1 "with hopefully the ability to build toward Level 2 and Level 3."

Mrs. Mickey West, a fifth grade teacher at Wahl-Coates, was one of several persons to explain the problems being caused by the continuing cut in teacher aides. She cited the disparity of reading levels of students, saying that in a typical fourth grade some students are reading at first-grade level while others are reading at early high school level.

"Try to leave us our reading resource teachers," Mrs. West said. "Most of us do not want multiage classrooms. This is not a good situation for either the slow or the fast learner."

Several spokesmen such as Bruce Thompson, speaking for the Band Boosters, and Bill Bloodworth, president of the citywide PTA, referred to funds raised by students and parents to support the band program and other projects. "These funds are rightly a supplement, not a substitute for regular funding," Bloodworth commented.

Dr. Blinson, both at the beginning and at the conclusion of the input session, stressed two points.

One point, Blinson said, is that "this is a maintenance budget, one designed to keep current programs intact without losses. The second point is that we are asking County Commissioners to provide local funds to pick up those programs which will be cut due to loss of federal funds."

Blinson told the large gathering he was deeply gratified by their presence and support, then said: "I sincerely feel the County Commissioners have been responsive to our needs. I

Marijuana Is Seized

Agents of the federal Drug Enforcement Agency's Wilmington District seized a quantity of marijuana Sunday after stopping a truck on N.C. 43 near Falkland, a DEA spokesman said today.

Donald Young, resident agent in charge, said in Wilmington that no one was arrested in the late Sunday morning marijuana seizure but he added that investigation is continuing and arrests could be pending.

Young did not disclose the amount of marijuana seized but said his office is involved in processing the marijuana and "finding out the weight."

The vehicle was stopped by agents near Otter's Creek Bridge north of Falkland.

get the distinct feeling that they want to see a demonstration of support on the part of citizens for our school programs."

Blinson called on those present to get in touch with commissioners, to let them know of their concern. "If the commissioners feel the support is there, I think they will do everything possible to support our request," he said.

Formal adoption of the 1982-83 budget proposal is scheduled to be made at the school board meeting Monday. The meeting will be held at Wahl-Coates Laboratory School.

Woman Dies Of Gunshot Wound

TARBORO, N.C. (AP) — A 39-year-old Rocky Mount woman died Sunday after she was struck by a gunshot fired from a passing car, police said.

Police charged her estranged husband, Charles David Stanley, 52, with first-degree murder Sunday after he turned himself into police. Stanley was being held Monday in the Edgecombe County Jail without bond.

Police said Joyce Stanley was walking along a street with her son when a car pulled up alongside and shots were fired from the window of the car.

Stanley's stepson, James Allen Joyner, 23, attempted to stop the shooting by hurling a concrete block through the windshield of the car, and also hit the man with a bottle, police said.

RIGHT NOW YOU CAN PROFIT FROM THE TROUBLE OUR SUCCESS HAS CAUSED US.

At Perdue, we hear good news and bad news from up North. First, more people buy Perdue than any other brand of chicken. That's good. But far too many others ask for Perdue...and can't get it. That's terrible.

Right now, there are five major chains (with several hundred stores) waiting for their first shipments from Perdue. We have nothing to ship. We receive many calls every week from distributors requesting our birds. We have to refuse. And even our regular customers are on short rations.

Our chicken shortage has come about because we developed the most outstanding, high quality bird in the business. And we do an aggressive job of advertising its superiority.

Since we're not about to change our bird (except to improve it) and we're not going to soft-pedal our advertising, we have one alternative: to grow more birds.

We created this monster. We'll pay you well to help us feed it.

When you sign up to build a new Perdue broiler house and grow our chickens, good things happen:

1. We sell you North Carolina's most modern, most automated broiler house at a price that's very little more than the price of an ordinary house.
2. You start earning a secure, steady income. Based on our New House Guarantee you can make over $20,000 annually on 5.5 flocks of broilers. Many growers exceed this. Even folks who had no experience growing chickens until they joined Perdue (one reason for their success is that we have specialists who work closely with newcomers every step of the way.)
3. Your new broiler house is designed to increase the return on your investment. An extra thickness of insulation keeps birds cooler in summer. Warmer in winter. An automatic ventilation system prevents wide fluctuations in broiler house temperatures. And keeps the air cleaner too. All those improvements make healthier chickens. For details about this business opportunity, contact Perdue now. Before our troubles go away. Let's Talk Chicken. PERDUE

For 1982, we hope to build more new chicken houses than were built in the preceeding two years combined.

Evidence Grows A 'Black Hole' Is Really Out There

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Astronomers are gathering increasing evidence that a powerful "black hole" spewing huge amounts of energy exists at the center of the Milky Way galaxy.

Measurements of different types of radiation coming from the galactic center indicate a massive object sucking in dust, gases and possibly even stars, scientists said Monday at an American Institute of Physics meeting.

Although the galactic core is not visible because of intervening cosmic clouds, indirect measurements indicate an object that could have a mass between 100 times and a million times that of the sun.

"An exotic, compact object must exist at the galactic center," Robert L. Brown of the National Radio Astronomy Observatory told a news briefing. The object gives off 10 million times the radiation of the sun, he added.

Gamma ray, X-ray and infrared radiation measurements point to a powerful energy machine in the luminous core of the galaxy, and a black hole appears to be the most likely prospect, scientists said.

"While the nature of the compact object is not yet clear, most workers in this field believe that it is a large black hole being powered by the accretion of gas, dust and stars," said Marvin Leventhal of Bell Laboratories in Murray Hill, N.J.

Recent observations from balloon-borne instruments and space satellites confirm evidence of energy from matter-antimatter collisions that would be consistent with a black hole, Leventhal said.

The powerful source of radio energy was discovered in 1974 and there were suggestions it might be tied to a black hole. But only after new telescopes and satellites became available did strong evidence of this object begin to accumulate.

A black hole is believed to be a massive object, such as a large star, that collapses into itself and concentrates its matter and gravity.

Its gravitational force becomes so strong that little can escape from it, including light. Therefore, the center of such an object would appear to be a black hole in space. Brown said that under certain circumstances, some radiation such as high-energy gamma rays could escape from a black hole. As material spirals into the hole, it heats up and gives off radiation. This radiation pressure at the center could be so intense that it pushes some material out at the hole's poles, he said.

This mechanism could explain the unusual picture of the Milky Way's central object compiled by the Very Large Array radio telescope in New Mexico, Brown said.

This instrument, actually 27 radio telescopes used together, found the gases at the center distributed in an irregular, "S"-like spiral shape.

Hot gases usually smooth out to take on a uniform spherical shape, Brown said, but in this case there appears to be a central area with two opposite jets spiraling from it.

"These are signals of a black hole, based on what we see in other galaxies," Brown said.

Charge Driver In Accident

Robert Shelton Ologge of Route 9, Greenville, was charged with driving under the influence following investigation of a 1:53 a.m. collision today at the intersection of Fifth and Maple streets.

Police Department investigators said the Ologge car collided with a utility pole, causing an estimated $2,500 damage to the car and $1,200 damage to the pole and wires.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE PUBLIC:

THE PERFECT CAR.

There is no such thing as a perfect car. Many times, however, we read advertisements by manufacturers that claim their car is the perfect car.

Webster's defines "perfect" as, a) being entirely without fault or defect; b) satisfying all requirements; c) pure, total. For a car to be perfect it would have to be like Caesar's wife — above reproach — and, as we know from history, she was far from perfect.

You may have problems with anything that is mechanical, especially when it is built with over 4,300 different parts, which are made primarily with iron, steel, cloth, plastic, rubber, copper, etc. To make it even more difficult, they are assembled by human beings who also are not perfect. Automobile factories, as you can see, have a problem.

QUALITY WORK, NOT "RE-WORK"

Most American cars are built on enormous assembly lines which flow at the rate of 60 to 100 cars an hour. At the end of the assembly line the factories have re-work centers into which flows the so-called "finished product." Toyota does not have re-work centers. Quality control is maintained consistently throughout the assembly line by Japanese workers who can stop the line at any time to correct a problem. We believe that a car can be built to be the next best thing to perfection, and should be.

To build an outstanding automobile many factors such as design, engineering, styling and quality control are necessary. Unless you have a real team effort from the beginning of an idea to its final conclusion (which usually takes 5 years), you will produce what is known in the car business as a "lemon" — a vehicle that will be extremely troublesome and will not deliver the service or resale value you would expect.

Every Toyota is assembled in sparkling clean, modern facilities. The Japanese have invested in new plants to a greater extent than any other automobile manufacturing country. Also, before a Toyota worker can start building cars, he must go to a training school for one year. He is trained in three things: quality work, efficient production, and loyalty to the company. A Japanese worker would do anything necessary to help his company build the best cars in the world. Before we can hope to put the American automobile industry back on its feet, it is my opinion the American worker will have to make the same kind of commitment.

ASSEMBLY MAKES THE DIFFERENCE.

A fine-quality car must begin with the finest-quality component parts: excellent high-grade galvanized steel; triple-protective rust-proofing; quality priming and painting; the highest quality moldings; luxurious, sturdy interior fabrics; and engine component parts machined to perfection. Now even if you start with the foregoing standards of highest quality, the job is still only half done.

The critical time comes when all of these thousands of parts are put together on the assembly line. No matter how much a manufacturer spends on quality components — no matter how good the steel, brass and other parts may be — if they are not properly and carefully put together, the car could end up a disaster. Looseness on the assembly line can cause major problems for any manufacturer, even though he may have the best of intentions. In the automobile business, we call it assembly-line quality control. It makes the difference between excellence and poor quality. We say a Toyota car is worth more when you buy it because it has the highest quality built into it due to the most meticulous assembly. A Toyota is also worth more when you sell it because it retains its new-car look, performance, and reliability for many years and thousands of miles. There really is no substitute for quality.

WHY DON'T THE JAPANESE DRIVE FORDS?

Many people want to know why American cars aren't being sold in volume in Japan, Australia, England, Germany, or other foreign countries. The answer is simple: They're too big, they weigh too much, they don't have the quality, and — most of all — American manufacturers haven't even bothered to move the steering wheel from the left to the right side on export models.

Imagine driving a Toyota with the steering wheel on the right-hand side in the U.S.A., facing curbside rather than oncoming traffic while you try to shift with your left hand instead of your right. Try it sometime — I have, and although I think I am a pretty fair driver, I really got messed up. If American manufacturers are genuinely interested in foreign markets, one thing they will have to do is change the steering wheel position to accommodate the foreign consumer as the Japanese and the Europeans have done for the American consumer. This is a very costly undertaking but it makes sense to do it.

THANKS FOR YOUR LETTERS.

We receive more complimentary letters on our Toyotas than complaints. While our cars are not 100% perfect, we have satisfied 98.3% of our owners and are working on the other 1.7% (although it might take a Supreme Being to satisfy them). We have never claimed that our cars are absolutely perfect — they are not. Nothing is. However, Toyotas are the best cars for the money you can find, with excellent economy, high resale value, and very, very little downtime for repairs. Toyotas are most in demand from large national rent-a-car companies because they are in service 30 days of the month instead of being out a great part of the time for recalls or repairs. A car is only useful to a rent-a-car company when it is available for rental, not when it is out of service because of mechanical problems. We think a Toyota makes common sense for you, too.

Take a few minutes to test drive one at your neighborhood Toyota dealership. You'll see and feel what I mean.

the Falklands "within the next 48 hours."

But Defense Department sources and other experts said any landing operation at this stage would probably be limited to small teams of commandos sneaking ashore to reconnoiter Argentine defenses.

Reports from Buenos Aires have put Argentine strength in the Falklands at 9,000 troops although British sources said they have so far only identified five combat battalions, an estimated 4,500 men.

The sources reported that four of the battalions are massed around the Falklands' capital, Port Stanley, on the eastern island. Only one 900-man battalion is known to be on the thinly populated western island.

Once the reinforcements join the main group of British warships, Rear Adm. John Woodward, the fleet commander, will likely seek a beachhead on the west island to operate his Harrier "jump jets" from a land base.

"Bad weather could seriously impair combat sorties from the carriers," one source noted. "A land base would therefore be imperative to provide air cover for troops."

Argentina has numerical air superiority with 135 fighters and bombers, most of them U.S.-made A-4 Skyhawks. But the Falklands are more than 250 miles from the nearest mainland air base, most of the Argentine planes have a limited range.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices slumped today, reversing a recent upward trend.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, which had risen 3.42 points on Monday, fell 3.90 to 861.68 in the first two hours of trading.

Declining stocks outnumbered gainers by nearly a 7-5 margin, among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Trading was active amid a flurry of corporate earnings reports. Exxon Corp. was unchanged at 28 1/2 after reporting a 22.5 percent drop in its first-quarter profits.

Bethlehem Steel, which reported a $66.7 million loss for the first quarter and said it expected to report an operating loss also for the second quarter, fell 3/4 to 22 1/2. General Motors, which had reported a 33 percent drop in net income, lost 1/4 to 43 3/4.

Boeing Co., which had reported a 58 percent drop in profit, fell 3/4 to 20 1/4.

Eastern Airlines gained 1/4 to 6 1/4 after reporting a loss of $51.4 million for the first quarter. Most other airline stocks also rose.

The stock market has been steadily rising in recent weeks despite generally grim economic news.

Big Board volume totaled 25.44 million shares, down from 26.13 million in the same period Monday.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stock fell .35 to 68.24.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .92 at 275.37.

Bath Board Membership Is Challenged

WASHINGTON, N.C. — Testimony continued in Superior Court in the trial of a complaint challenging the right of a Greenville neurosurgeon to serve on the Bath Town Board of Commissioners.

The complaint, filed by David C. Everett Jr. of Bath, alleges that Dr. Ira M. Hardy II is ineligible to serve on the Bath board because he maintains a home and an office in Greenville and has a medical practice there.

Hardy, who also maintains a home in Bath, recently won a ruling from the Beaufort Board of Elections that he does have legal residence in the Beaufort County town, where he also serves as president of the Historic Bath Association.

Everett's complaint contended that all administrative remedies have been exhausted and that court action was the only recourse available in his drive to have Hardy ousted from the board. His suit seeks Hardy's removal from the board and restitution for his legal costs.

A jury was selected Monday. Testimony began Monday afternoon and continued today.

Budget Hearings

The Board of County Commissioners Monday continued preliminary work on the 1982-83 Pitt County budget by hearing from several county departments and agencies, including the health department and data processing.

Data processing manager Gene Windham told commissioners that his budget requests are some $246,000 less than for the current fiscal year because the center no longer handles computer operations for Pitt County Memorial Hospital (which paid for the cost of computer service). However, he said the requested level of expenditures represents a net increase because of proposals to add programs for several county departments.

Reminding the board that state funding for the health department will be $200,000 less for 1982-83 than for the current fiscal year, Dr. Robert Ehinger presented "the same budget we had last year ... no new faces ... no new programs," amounting to over $630,000 in county money.

Other departments and agencies heard Monday including the Agricultural Extension Service, the Pitt County Council on Aging, the county planner, housekeeping and the jury commission.

3 Collisions On Monday

An estimated $2,700 damage resulted from three traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Monday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a 4:27 p.m. collision on Memorial Drive, 500 feet south of the Sixth Street intersection, involving a car driven by Elizabeth James Stocks of Ayden and a truck operated by Durwood Thomas Goodwin of Route 2, Columbia.

Damage was estimated at $900 to the Stocks car and $800 to the truck.

An estimated $300 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in a 4:36 p.m. mishap on Greenville Boulevard, 50 feet east of the Red Banks Road intersection.

Police identified the drivers of the vehicles as Thomas Edward Wetherby of 178 Aycock Dorm and Sarah Downing Jones of 214 Umsted Dorm.

Cars driven by Arlene Carper Mayo of 2711 Shawnee Place and Joseph Clinton Sawyer of Goldsboro collided about 5:21 p.m. on Memorial Drive, 25 feet north of the Fifth Street intersection, resulting in an estimated $300 damage to the Mayo car and $100 damage to the Sawyer auto.

Yankee Players Have Come To Expect Changes Of Manager

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Yankees were humming a familiar tune as they prepared for the start tonight of manager Gene Michael's second time around.

"It was just one of those things," relief pitcher Rudy May said. "There's always been a big turnover here. We've come to expect it."

Only rain threatened to delay Michael's return to pinstripes as the California Angels and former Yankee Reggie Jackson invaded Yankee Stadium. A workout Monday was rained out, postponing Michael's on-field debut. But after a meeting with his players, he addressed some of the same questions he was asked when he first became Yankee manager on Nov. 21, 1980.

Then, Michael was introduced as Dick Howser's replacement at a coffee-and-crumpet-brunch thrown by owner George Steinbrenner. Less than a year later, the two would be worlds apart.

"I think it will be better this time," said Michael, who was fired on Sept. 6, 1981 after exchanging bitter words with Steinbrenner through the media. "I think I learned some things in the past year."

"I know it will be rough working for George. I know George is not going to be quiet," he said. "But I have to see what I can do with this club. The talent is there and winning will make it a lot easier."

Michael's rehiring was announced Sunday night. He replaced the fired Bob Lemon, who had replaced Michael last September. Lemon will now take over Michael's job as a Yankees scout.

Steinbrenner fired Lemon only 14 games into the season and with the Yankees record at 6-8.

Steinbrenner did not attend Monday's news conference and had not made himself available to reporters. In a statement released Sunday, however, the Yankees owner said: "It is the players who are not producing the wins, and perhaps this change will get them going."

Michael inherits a club with severe morale problems. A club that several players have characterized as chaotic. They said the problem stemmed from numerous trades and an erratic starting lineup.

"Lem tried to keep everybody happy," catcher Rick Cerone said. "It was chaotic, but we have to quit blaming others. We have to look at ourselves and say 'Hey, we're at fault.'"

"The team is struggling now, so I guess the manager has to go," Cerone said. "I think the attitude around here will be very different. It has to be, but who knows. There's been so much confusion around here — so many players with so much talent, and they all want to play."

For Yankee Owner Steinbrenner, Winning Is E-V-E-R-Y-T-H-I-N-G

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

If George Steinbrenner were a physician instead of a ballclub owner and a patient came to him with a cold, he probably would order the appendix out or amputation of a leg.

He acts impulsively, this high-strung, head-strong, often insensitive boss of the New York Yankees.

He admits he is demanding and intolerant of anything short of the ultimate. He must be No. 1. No. 2 won't do. The Avis slogan, "We try harder," is a repugnant motto to him. The name of the game is not to compete but win, win, win. The end justifies the means.

So a nice, old fellow named Bob Lemon becomes the latest casualty in this fierce drive to feed relentless ambition. After managing for only 14 games of a 162-game season, the grandfatherly Hall of Famer is crassly dumped as manager and succeeded by young Gene Michael.

Michael knows the feeling.

Last September, he too was abruptly fired as were Bill Virdon, Billy Martin and Dick Howser before him. Lemon joins Martin as being twice burned. Under Steinbrenner, there have been eight managerial changes in 10 years.

The ouster of Lemon on such short notice is hard to understand under any circumstances. It is mind-boggling when thrown against the poignant scenario of the winter meetings in Hollywood, Fla., last December.

Although planning to give the job to Michael on a long term basis, Steinbrenner nevertheless rehired the 62-year-old Lemon, a loyal employee and respected pilot, for the 1982 season, Michael to come back and carry on the next three years.

The Yankee owner called some writers to his suite to explain his rationale, and it was so touching it hit you right here.

"I was going another direction," he explained, "but when Lem showed up — having lost 25 pounds and not having had a drink for months — and requested that he be allowed to manage one more year, how could I refuse him?"

"Every time I have called him to do a job, he never asked when, where or how much. I felt that, because of this loyalty, he should be given this chance."

Recalling Steinbrenner's record for snap managerial shakeups, reporters asked if such a move didn't put Lemon under the guillotine — once the Yankees sagged, out would go Lemon, in would come Michael.

"No," insisted Steinbrenner. "I gave him my word. Even if we're 20 games behind, Lem will stay as manager. I will only replace him if he requests it in the case of bad health."

Lemon was flushed with pride.

"I've never had a chance to go a full season," he said. "George wants to see if I can go the route — me, too."

Now Steinbrenner is saying, in effect, he had his fingers crossed.

He didn't mean a word of it. Now it's down the drain for a man's dream.

But what of the Yankees? Will this sudden shift resuscitate "the greatest talent money can buy?" Don't bet on it.

These are not the proud, swashbuckling Yankees of old. It is a confused, disoriented lot, and has been from the start of spring training.

"I haven't had any fun all year," complained Goose

Gossage, the relief ace. "It was the most depressing spring I've ever had."

Steinbrenner virtually mandated that players be at camp — a drudgery anyhow — two weeks in advance. Then he brought in Olympic coaches and installed exotic electronic equipment to be used in intensive batting and running exercises.

Players were treated not like pros but like a regiment of Marines or a flock of collegiate rookies. Steinbrenner's personal heroes have always been the late General George Patton and Vince Lombardi.

The club was jaded by the time it left Fort Lauderdale. The boss not satisfied, kept reaching out and buying fresh talent, overloading the roster and creating frictions.

"It's like somebody goes to a candy store and buys everything," said pitcher Tommy John.

Shortstop Bucky Dent found himself playing second fiddle to Roy Smalley and Larry Milbourne. Dave Collins, an $800,000-a-year first baseman, was spending more time on the bench than on the field.

"I don't know what's going on?" said Dent. "When you don't play, you lose your rhythm."

General confusion pervaded the clubhouse.

The lesson Steinbrenner hasn't learned is that money can't buy everything — loyalty, morale, pennants and success.

When success failed to come immediately, Steinbrenner panicked. People got hurt — mainly Lemon but Yankee tradition as well.

Patterson Hurls ECU To 11-5 Victory Over N.C. Wesleyan

ROCKY MOUNT — East Carolina rode the pitching of Bobby Patterson and the strong hitting of several players to gain an 11-5 baseball victory over N.C. Wesleyan last night.

While rains poured down on the Pirate field in Greenville, no rain at all fell on Municipal Stadium in Rocky Mount, and the game went on as scheduled.

Patterson, who was tagged for eight hits and five runs, still struck out ten Wesleyan batters, a season high for him. He had twice fanned nine, against State and in the first meeting against Wesleyan.

Jack Curlings, serving as designated hitter for the Pirates, banged out four hits during the evening, while Mike Sorrell, John Hallow, Fran Fitzgerald, Ricky Nichols and Kelly Robinette each had two.

The win gave the Pirates a sweep over Wesleyan, ranked second in the nation among NCAA Division III schools this season.

It also kept alive the Pirate hopes of a 30-game winning season this year, as they climb to 27-12 with three games left in the regular season.

The Pirates started the scoring in the first inning, getting a pair of runs. With one out, Hallow reached on a bad-hop single and moved up on an infield out. He advanced to third on a passed ball and, Todd Evans walked. Fitzgerald then doubled in both runners for the 2-0 lead.

East Carolina increased its lead to 3-0 with another run in the second. Nichols beat out an infield grounder and was sacrificed to second. Sorrell then singled to right, scoring the first Nichols.

It stayed that way until the fifth, when the Pirates added four more for a 7-0 edge. With one away, Todd Hendley walked and Evans reached on an error. Fitzgerald again doubled, scoring Hendley, and Curlings got a hit to score Evans. After another out, Robinette singled, scoring the two runners on base. Robinette was thrown out, however, trying to stretch his hit to a double.

Wesleyan finally got its act together in the bottom of the inning, coming up with a couple of runs. With one down, Greg Hardison reached on an infield hit, and Toby Holliday singled up the middle. Willie Arrington beat out another infield hit, loading the bases. Greg Clark reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Hardison, and a balk by Patterson brought in Holliday.

The Bishops picked up three more in the sixth. Chuck Simpson singled and with one away, Earl Roberson walked. Mike DeLoane then hit a blast out of the park in left, driving in all three run and cutting the East Carolina lead to 7-5.

But the Pirates quickly rallied for two more in the seventh. Evans singled, his 54th hit of the season which leaves him only one shy of tying Macon Moye's single season record of 55. With one out, Curlings singled, scoring Evans, who had advanced on an out. Nichols singled and Robinette reached on a fielder's choice that got Nichols. Robert Wells walked, loading the bases, and Sorrell was hit by a pitch, scoring Curlings.

The eighth saw the Pirates score two more. Hendley singled but was out on Evans' fielder's choice. After a second out, Curlings reached on an infield hit and Nichols was safe on an error, the latter scoring Evans. Robinette then singled in Curlings with the final run of the game.

Hardison led the Bishop hitting with two, and was the lone Wesleyan player with more than one hit.

Wesleyan falls to 24-12 with the loss.

East Carolina returns home on Wednesday night to face Atlantic Christian in a 6 p.m. doubleheader at Harrington Field. The games close out the 1982 home season for the Pirates, who wind up the regular season with an ECAC-South game at Norfolk against Old Dominion on Friday.

Texas' Sims Is First Pick As NFL Draft Underway

NEW YORK (AP) — Ken Sims, a 265-pound defensive tackle from the University of Texas, was chosen by the New England Patriots today, as they had announced previously, as the National Football League began its two-day draft of college talent.

The only question about the 6-foot-5½ Sims in what has been termed a lean year for potential pro talent was an injury to his leg and ankle suffered last November which kept him out of Texas' last two regular-season games, along with the Cotton Bowl.

Some scouts have called this year's crop a "one-man draft," and Sims is the man they were referring to. Hailing from the tiny community of Kosse, Texas, Sims possesses a great combination of speed, strength and agility and won the Lombardi Award as nation's premier lineman in 1981.

The type of player who can dominate the line of scrimmage, Sims made 81 solo tackles last year, assisted on 29 others, had 10 sacks, pressured passer 32 times, broke up four passes and forced six fumbles.

Even before NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle had formally announced the Patriots' selection, Sims was being escorted to the podium, where he posed with the commissioner for photographers. Rozelle held a New England jersey with Sims' name and No. 77, the number he wore in college.

GRIFTON — Farmville Central's golf team gained a victory in a rain-shortened Eastern Carolina Conference match yesterday at the Grifton Golf and Country Club.

Farmville finished the match, ended after nine holes, with a team total of 157. Southern Nash ended up with 172, and Ayden-Grifton, the host team, was disqualified.

Farmville was led by Scott Lewis with a 37, while Alan Wooten had a 38, Jeff Cutler had 40 and Gary Hobgood, 42.

Southern Nash was led by John May with a 41, while Jack Morgan and Tom May each had 43 and John Harris had 45.

Ayden-Grifton was paced by Warren Agee with a 37, while Marc Davis had 47 and Chuck Bollinger had 51. Todd Venters and Tim Bollinger, the other two members of the A-G team, did not turn in a scorecard and were disqualified.

Farmville returns to action today, hosting Eastern Wayne, Wilson Fike and Williamston at the Farmville Country Club.

Nine Are Still Active

With the National Football League draft going on today and tomorrow, East Carolina University can look back at nine former Pirates who are now playing with the professional leagues either in the NFL or the Canadian Football League.

The latest signing of a former Pirate was announced yesterday when tight end Billy Ray Washington signed with the Montreal Alouets of the CFL. He brings to five the number of ex-Pirates playing with the CFL.

The dean of those players is linebacker Danny Kepley, named several times, including last year, as the CFL's Defensive Player of the Year. Kepley is with the Edmonton Eskimos. Others in the CFL include linebacker Glenn Morris of the Ottawa Rough Riders, and running backs Eddie Hicks and Theodore Sutton of the Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

Active in the NFL are linebacker Zack Valentine of the Pittsburgh Steelers, running back Sam Harrel of the Minnesota Vikings, defensive back Reggie Pinkney of the Baltimore Colts and cornerback Willie Holley of the Washington Redskins.

The "Skins" announced yesterday Holley's signing, which actually took place and was announced locally several months ago.

Games Are Rained Out

Rain forced the postponement of several area athletic events yesterday.

Postponed until today, weather permitting, are: Jamesville at Chocowinity, baseball and softball; Hunt at Rose golf; and Edenton and Roanoke at Williamston track.

Delayed until Wednesday were track meets sending D.H. Conley, Greene Central and Charles B. Aycock to SouthWest Edgecombe, and Eastern Wayne and Southern Nash to Farmville Central.

Creswell and Bear Grass' baseball and softball games were shifted to Friday. A girls' track meet between Conley and West Carteret was cancelled.

USC Threatens To Fight NCAA

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The president of the University of Southern California says the school may take legal action against the National Collegiate Athletic Association because of the severity of penalties issued against the football team.

The school is prohibited from playing in bowl games during the 1982-83 and 1983-84 academic years and from appearances on television in 1983 and 1984.

"The penalties are unreasonable, inequitable and wholly unjustified for the number and nature of the infractions involved," James H. Zumbege said at a news conference Monday.

USC was penalized by the NCAA last Friday because an assistant coach sold tickets given to players.

"We also believe that the severity of the penalties reflects a measure of vindictiveness that is shocking for an organization with the stature of the NCAA," said Zumbege.

He said USC had not been before the Infractions Committee in the past 23 years and had cooperated with the NCAA in its investigation.

"I am now exploring with counsel the legal options available to the university and will discuss them soon with the Executive Committee of the university's Board of Trustees," he said. "Football is a very, very important part of the university scene. We can't treat the possibility of going to court as a trivial matter."

He pointed out that the universities of Texas, Oklahoma and Georgia already had suits pending against the NCAA on various matters, but agreed that final settlements of suits might take several years.

He said USC would await the outcome of pending cases against the NCAA before taking action of its own.

David Berst, a member of the NCAA investigation staff, in Shawnee, Kan., defended the penalties.

"I will get mail this week saying that we let USC off the hook, and I'll get mail saying we were too harsh on USC to prove the point that we can penalize the big schools," he said. "Neither is true. We will let the comments fall where they may. The record will speak for itself."

Zumbege estimated the penalties might cost USC more than $1 million and other schools, both in the Pacific 10 Conference and independents such as Notre Dame would suffer financial losses from the TV ban.

The basic charge, and one admitted by the university president, was that assistant coach Marv Goux took tickets given to football players and then sold them at inflated prices, returning the money to the players.

Although the NCAA wanted Goux fired, the university argued successfully for a lesser penalty whereby he could not recruit or talk to booster groups for two years. He will remain on the staff.

Zumbege said an investigation indicated neither Director of Athletics Richard Perry nor Coach John Robinson knew of the transactions. The NCAA claimed the practice had been followed from 1971 through 1979.

Ryan Notches His First Victory Of The Season

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Les Moss, filling in for Mel Wright as a Houston Astros coach, says all pitchers should be blessed with Nolan Ryan's problems.

"He was in the 90s all the way, even in the eighth and ninth innings," said Moss after viewing Ryan's fastballs during the right-hander's 6-2 conquest Monday night of the St. Louis Cardinals. "The mistakes he makes he corrects himself."

Ryan, who had been off to his worst major league start, notched his first triumph in five decisions with the backing of heavy Houston hitting.

In Monday's only other National League contest, the Pittsburgh Pirates handed the Atlanta Braves their fourth straight defeat by rallying to a 6-4 victory.

"Once we had the lead, I was able to challenge the hitters," said Ryan after finishing with a four-hitter in which he made 137 pitches. "I needed the work. You just have to be positive about it."

Against John Martin, 2-2, the Astros also only faintly resembled the club that dropped 11 of 15 contests since winning twice over St. Louis in a season-opening series.

Ex-Cards outfielder Tony Scott singled sharply in the first, with Ray Knight belting his second homer one out later. Two innings afterward, it became 4-0 after Knight doubled and Jose Cruz crashed his first homer.

Knight, the third baseman obtained by Houston in an off-season trade from Cincinnati, labeled a 14-hit attack assembled by the Astros overdue.

Ryan, who fanned five and walked two, yielded an unearned run when shortstop Dickie Thon booted Smith's smash for a two-base error and Tommy Herr tripled in the third for St. Louis' first hit.

The Astros hurler was working on a three-hitter until Smith singled to open the Cards' eighth. Smith stole second, moved to third on Herr's fly ball and scored on Keith Hernandez' grounder.

Atlanta lost its fourth straight home game following a 13-game winning streak to open the season. Bill Madlock's two-run homer in the eighth broke a 4-4 tie. The Pirates tied the game earlier in the inning when Dave Parker doubled and scored on Jason Thompson's single.

Madlock then unloaded against reliever Larry McWilliams.

Thompson and Mike Easler also homered as the Pirates.

Winning Streak Changes Colors For The Red Sox

CHICAGO (AP) — Winning streaks — like most cats, dogs and horses — are color blind. But while animals are reluctant to change masters, winning streaks are not, exchanging their White Sox for Red Sox in the blink of an eye.

"It wasn't cold at all. It turned out to be a beautiful evening," Boston Manager Ralph Houk said Monday night after his Red Sox overcame 40-degree temperatures and brisk winds to sweep a doubleheader from the Chicago White Sox 3-2 and 5-0. It extended Boston's winning streak to seven games.

The Red Sox-White Sox doubleheader, both make-up games, were the only American League contests played Monday night.

"When we went 8-0 (the first eight games of the season) I was not overly concerned. Now we've lost four straight and I'm not overly concerned either," said Chicago Manager Tony LaRussa. "This is April."

The Red Sox return home for an eight-game stand, hoping to surpass the nine-game winning streak Boston rolled up in September 1980. "Maybe we should stay on the road."

Chuck Rainey, who posted his last victory on June 27, 1980, scattered just five hits and struck out five in the nightcap to gain the shutout.

"Tonight I just went after them as hard as I could. I just figured I'd throw as hard as I could," he said.

Rainey, 1-0, got all the support he needed from Rick Miller, who drove in the first run of the contest with one of his three singles to keyed the 13-hit Boston attack.

That run was the only scoring through five innings as Rainey got locked into a pitcher's duel with Chicago's Ernesto Escarrega, 0-1, a 32-year-old rookie up from the Mexican Leagues.

In the opener, Jim Rice decided another pitcher's duel by singling home Wade Boggs with the winning run in the eighth inning.

Boggs led off the Boston eighth with a single, the first hit of his major league career, and was sacrificed to second by Jerry Remy. Rice hit an 0-1 pitch from Richard Dotson, 1-2, up the middle to break a 2-2 deadlock and hand the win to Luis Aponte, 2-0, who came on in relief of Bruce Hurst in the bottom of the seventh.

Laker Coach Likes Layoff

By The Associated Press
Coach Pat Riley believes the nine-day break the Los Angeles Lakers had between their last game and tonight's playoff opener with the Phoenix Suns was more welcome than dangerous.

"I think the rest has helped us immeasurably," said Riley. "Norm Nixon was having a little problem with his knees, tendinitis. Jamaal (Wilkes) and Kareem (Abdul-Jabbar) were totally exhausted."

"We could be a little rusty in the beginning, but I think we'll work our way through that. The rest was worth any problems we might have with rustiness."

The Lakers, champions of the Pacific Division, haven't played since their regular-season finale a week ago Sunday.

Meanwhile, the Suns became only the fourth team to rebound from a 1-0 deficit to win a best-of-three National Basketball Association playoff series when they defeated the Denver Nuggets 124-119 in Denver Saturday night.

In another Western Conference semifinal opener tonight, San Antonio is at Seattle.

The second games of the two Western and two Eastern series will be Wednesday night. In the East, Boston plays host to Washington and Milwaukee is at Philadelphia. The Celtics and 76ers won Sunday's opening games.

Riley said the Suns "have played exceptionally well" recently with a revamped starting lineup that includes centers Alvan Adams and Rich Kelley.

But the Lakers coach added that "they're going to have a difficult time matching up with us with that lineup. That puts Adams on Wilkes."

A former Phoenix starter, Walter Davis "is getting production in less minutes," Riley said. "When he comes off the bench, they go right to him. When he comes in you better get your pants hitched up and shoes tightened because he's coming right at you."

Seattle survived the mini-series round with 104-83 triumph over Houston in Game 3 Sunday.

The Sonics, who overcame the individual talents of Moses Malone to beat the Rockets, now have to gear up for NBA scoring champion George Gervin of San Antonio.

Gervin, who turned 30 today, has vowed that he will play "until I get a championship. Who knows how long George Gervin can play?"

Gervin has been on a playoff team with San Antonio for nine straight years, dating back to when the Spurs were in the American Basketball Association.

That brought up the Cleveland Browns, who took another linebacker, Chip Banks, a 230-pounder from the University of Southern California, who led the Trojans in tackles his junior and senior years. He made 137 tackles last fall, deflected six passes and recovered two fumbles.

As soon as the Browns' selection was announced, Rozelle dropped the first bombshell of the draft, announcing that the Colts had signed discontented quarterback Bert Jones and promptly traded him to Los Angeles for the Rams' own first- and second-round picks this year.

Hoch Captures Wet Tourney

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — It bothered Scott Hoch not at all that the weather-plagued, USF&G-New Orleans Open golf tournament limped to a close a day late and $100,000 short.

"I never knew I liked rain so much," Hoch said after he'd nursed home a two-stroke victory Monday in the event that lost two days to rain and floods, had various delays and interruptions and finally was cut from the scheduled 72 holes to 54. With the tournament trimmed from four rounds to three, the purse also was reduced, from the announced $400,000 to $300,000.

"I'd like to think I could have won at 72 (holes)," Hoch said, "but I'm glad it ended when it did. I'm no masochist. I don't want to have to go out there and prove myself again over another 18 holes."

Tom Watson wasn't quite so sure.

Watson, who fired a 5-under-par 67 in a bid that fell a little short, said he wished "we had another round."

"It is disappointing in a way. But I didn't play very well over the first couple of rounds and the other guys played better. I thought I'd have to shoot a 65 to have a chance and I came up a couple of shots short of my mark."

Hoch won it, the second victory of his three-year PGA Tour career, with a closing 70 and a 206 total, 10 shots under par on the twice-flooded Lakewood Country Club course.

The triumph, secured when Australian Bob Shearer 3-putted the 17th hole and dropped two back with one hole to go, was worth $54,000 to Hoch, more than he'd won in either of his two previous seasons as a touring pro. It pushed his winnings to $126,176 for the season.

Watson, who had won this event the two previous seasons, and Shearer, a winner a week ago in Tallahassee, tied for second at 208. Shearer had a closing 71 and once had the lead before he drove into mud, rough and trash and took a double bogey-6 on the seventh hole.

That misfortune let Hoch regain the top spot and he held it the rest of the way despite some erratic play over the back nine.

"Maybe it was nerves," said Hoch, 26. "I don't know. But it probably was one of the worst nines I've played this year."

But it was good enough. And Hoch, in a hurry to nail it down, putted out on the 18th before Shearer could finish.

Safe Steal

Chicago White Sox' Tom Paciorek safely steals second base as Boston Red Sox' Jerry Remy gets the throw too late in third inning action of the first game in a two-night doubleheader Monday in Chicago. The Red Sox won the opener, 3-2, and took the second game, 5-0. (AP Laserphoto)

Hostage Will Join Timely Writer On Kentucky Derby Sidelines

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Hostage is the latest victim on the road to Saturday's Kentucky Derby, a path that this year has proved rocky indeed.

Just six days after pre-Derby favorite Timely Writer was knocked out of the classic because of an abdominal problem and surgery, Hostage was injured during a workout Monday and retired.

As the Arkansas Derby winner, Hostage had been considered one of the top contenders for 108th Kentucky Derby which is expected to attract a wide-open field of 20 3-year-olds for the 1 1/4 mile race.

Trainer Mike Freeman said the colt suffered a fractured sesamoid and a chipped bone in his right front leg.

Jockey Chris McCarron flew in from the West Coast for the workout, scheduled at seven furlongs over a sloppy track. "When I started breezing him, he was doing nicely," McCarron said. "Then I felt him take a couple of bad steps and he bobbed so I felt I'd better pull him up."

Freeman praised McCarron for cutting short the workout, saying that "he had the good sense to pull him up, sensing that he had done something quite serious."

Freeman, who had been preparing for his first Derby he was "obviously crushed. It was just one of those things, a one in a million shot. He did it all in one step. The horse has never liked mud and getting caught a little bit short on time, he was just going to have a steady breeze out there."

Hostage, owned by Mrs. Paul Hexter, had been reshad a half-hour before the workout, but Freeman said that was not connected to the mishap.

The son of Nijinsky II earned $209,096 in eight career starts, posting four victories, one second and one third. He had two victories and a second in three 1982 starts. Other leading Derby hopefuls struck by the injury jinx in recent months include Deputy Minister, the 2-year-old champion, Stalwart, Lets Dont Fight, Distinctive Pro, Aloma's Ruler and Victorian Line.

With Hostage out of the race, El Baba and Bold Style, the second and third finishers in the Arkansas Derby April 10 at Oaklawn Park, will be trying to become the first Arkansas Derby starter to win the Kentucky Derby.

El Baba, owned by Mrs. Joe W. Brown, is expected to emerge as the favorite for the Derby.

Joe Saad's shoe repair business has been located at 113 Grande Avenue for almost 36 years.

And for over 30 years, Joseph Saad has been advertising his family's local shoe repair business in THE DAILY REFLECTOR.

"My motto has always been 'Never lie to a customer'," said Joe. "If a shoe can't be repaired properly enough to fit correctly again I'll tell them so."

This way of doing business has apparently paid off for Joe. His shop now repairs shoes for third-generation customers.

Following his tour of duty in the Army during World War II, Joe opened the shop on July 3, 1946, in the same location that it is at today — 113 Grande Ave.

Although his wife Juanita, along with their youngest son Jimmy, now handle the routine shoe repairs, Joe does the specialty prescription footwear work that customers from as far away as Durham and the coast come to get done.

You can still get an old-fashioned shoe shine at Joe Saad's place, while passing the time of day with Lester Peterson, an employee for 18 years at Saad's Shoe Repair.

"Shoes have changed a lot over the years," said Joe. "Probably the biggest change is that shoes no longer leave those black heel marks that were so hard to clean off the floors."

"But one thing that hasn't changed over the years is our thoroughly enjoyable relationship with THE DAILY REFLECTOR."

Moore Defends Title With KO

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Davey Moore termed the successful defense of his World Boxing Association junior middleweight title as a blend of championship ingredients.

"I thought I had just a little more talent and that I was about three times as fast as he was," Moore said Monday night after his fifth-round knockout of South African Charlie Weir.

And Weir, battered to the canvas seven times in five rounds, was not about to argue the point. "He's a good fighter," said Weir.

Promoter Bob Arum said Moore, who won the title in his ninth professional bout and retained it for the first time before more than 50,000 screaming South Africans, probably will defend the crown next July in Las Vegas against Ayub Kalule of Uganda.

This was the fourth title bout Arum has staged in white-minority-ruled South Africa with a local white battling an American black. The American has won each time.

But it remains a bonanza for those willing to mine it as many countries refuse to have any sporting relations with South Africa because of its apartheid policy. The WBA's rival organization, the World Boxing Council, refuses to recognize any South African boxers. Arum has been sharply criticized for arranging fights here and for making it possible for the 22-year-old Moore to fight for the title so soon.

"I have watched every round of every fight the young champion has had and nothing pleased me as much as the improvement he showed tonight," said Arum.

Moore said Weir was a "tough fighter, but he didn't really hurt me anytime. In the second round I thought I had him but he stayed in there."

Both fighters came away with injuries.

Arum announced at the news conference that Moore had suffered a "slight tear in his right bicep" and would stay in South Africa until Saturday to undergo physical therapy. Weir said he had hurt his shoulder after being knocked down in the second round.

Weir, winner of 29 of his 31 bouts, was considered a hard puncher. After the title-fight losses of South African heavyweights Kallie Knoetze and Gerrie Coetzee, their was considerable pressure on Weir to win.

Roars of "Charlie, Charlie," greeted him as he entered the ring. And when the South African anthem, "Die Stem," was sung, it was followed by a deafening roar.

Weir seemed overwhelmed by it all. When Moore first knocked him down he glanced at his corner bewildered, looking for advice. He landed a few punches, but every time tried to slug it out he found Moore connecting twice for each of his punches.

In addition to keeping his crown, Moore collected $300,000. Weir got $150,000.

Lendl Defeats John McEnroe

DALLAS (AP) — Ivan Lendl has John McEnroe's number. McEnroe feels it should be Number 1.

For the fourth consecutive time, the second-ranked Lendl defeated the top-ranked McEnroe Monday night. The 6-2, 3-6, 6-3, 6-3 World Championship of Tennis Finals victory netted the Czechoslovakian $150,000.

But should Lendl be No. 1 in the world?

"His record is better than mine," said McEnroe, who was trying for a record three WCT Finals titles. "There's an argument for him being No. 1. He's playing better than I am although I don't like to think one match is everything."

Asked if he felt he was No. 1, Lendl said: "No answer."

Before the match, the 22-year-old who has now won $900,000 on the WCT tour this season, said "I would like to be No. 1 but I'm not going to say it ... don't ask me if I win."

Asked how important the match was to him, Lendl said "Everytime I beat him (McEnroe) it is important. This is my second biggest (victory) ... the Grand Prix Masters was the first ... the next is the French Open."

Lendl, who has won 78 of his last 80 matches, handled the defending champion superbly, temper tantrums and all.

He whistled 13 aces past McEnroe, who had a $60,000 payday. McEnroe battled gamely on a sprained ankle. He dived into some yellow carnations trying to save a point and generally hustled hard. But his first service was inconsistent, leading to some pouty antics on his part.

Once he refused to take the court after beefing about a linesman's call. Later he admitted "maybe it was a little petty."

Lendl refused to be bothered by the gamesmanship.

He was rock steady particularly in the third game of the fourth set which went to deuce eight times on McEnroe's service. Lendl broke service with a backhand winner and McEnroe never recovered.

Some of the 15,000 fans in Reunion Arena booed McEnroe in the first set, but warmed to him in the second when he broke Lendl's service for the first time in the second game.

McEnroe, who last beat Lendl in the 1980 U.S. Open, said "Those cheers made me feel good. It's not every day that happens, being the underdog. It should have made me more pumped up."

Sponsor Pumps In More Dough

NEW YORK (AP) — An old sponsor will give the Women's Tennis Association a new look next year.

The WTA unveiled its plan for a year-long, worldwide tour that will pour nearly $20 million into women's tennis in the next two years.

Virginia Slims, which sponsored women's pro tennis until four years ago, will bankroll the World Championship Series to be played in seven countries on four continents. The series will culminate in a season-ending $500,000 championship to determine the No. 1 women's player in the world.

Additionally, players will share in a record-setting $1 million bonus pool.

Under the new format, the separate indoor winter circuit, which many players felt led to many of the injuries suffered on the tour, will no longer exist.

"The new format will mean less injuries," said Chris Evert Lloyd, the world's top-ranked player. "I'm looking forward to playing the whole year."

In recent years, Lloyd has skipped most of the winter tour, preferring to spend time with her husband, John, one of Britain's top tennis pros.

"Part of the problem was in order to qualify for Madison Square Garden (and the Avon Championships — the winter tour finale), I would have had to play at least five tournaments," Lloyd said. "Now I can play two or three tournaments before March and still qualify for the year-ending championships."

No schedule was announced, but Jerry Diamond, executive director of the WTA, said there would no longer be 11 consecutive weeks of major tournaments during the first three months of the year as there have been in the past several years. And, the winter tour, he said, would be split between indoor and outdoor tournaments.

Besides Lloyd, other players attending the news conference announcing the new format included Billie Jean King, Virginia Wade, Diane Desfor, Rosie Casals and Ilana Kloss.

Casals won the first Virginia Slims tournament in 1971. King, who has won 20 Wimbledon titles and was WTA's first president, holds the record for most singles titles on the Virginia Slims circuit with 29.

"It's kind of hazy and foggy," King said when asked about the amount of money being offered in women's tennis by the new contract with Virginia Slims. "Everything's going so fast."

Lloyd publicly thanked King "for what you've done for women's tennis."

"I came along at just the right time," said Lloyd, who is now 27 years old. Then, referring to King, Wade, Casals and the others who started the WTA 10 years ago, Lloyd said: "They played practically their whole career for peanuts. Now, it's big business."

first-round pick, the Colts then chose quarterback Art Schlichter of Ohio State.

Schlichter and Jim McMahon of Brigham Young were considered the only quarterbacks who might go on the first round.

The 6-1½, 205-pound Schlichter started every game during his four years at Ohio State career. Despite playing in ground-oriented offenses, he rewrote the Ohio State record book in passing yardage and total offense.

Last season, despite an ankle sprain, he completed 172 of 324 passes for a school record 2,392 yards and 15 touchdowns.

'Private Contentment' Poses Queries

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — What do we really know about the people closest to us? Can their lives ever fulfill the expectations we have for them? If we judge them by our own standards, are they destined to come up short?

These are some of the fundamental questions of "Private Contentment," a melancholy, tangled play written by Reynolds Price for PBS' weekly "American Playhouse" series.

Sometimes moving, sometimes overly melodramatic, "Private Contentment" tonight examines the feelings of a young man when he learns his father has been living a secret life with another woman.

The play has been cleverly crafted with an absorbing premise, but it is sabotaged by some hammy dialogue that prevents intimacy between the characters and the audience. Like when the main character, a World War II soldier, plays a soulful number at the piano and says: "This is what we're fighting for."

Set in the south in 1945, the play begins with Logan Melton, a 20-year-old Army lieutenant preparing to go overseas. But his mother suddenly dies of a stroke, and Logan returns home for the funeral.

There, he and his father renew their arm's-length relationship. Paul Melton (John McMartin) is a traveling piano salesman who was, at best, a weekend parent.

Logan says he was ambivalent about his father having been away so often. He fluctuated between hate and love, which took the form of dreaming his father's time was being used enjoyably, drinking and chasing women, not being alone.

It turns out that Paul was doing fine, having met a school teacher named Lena (Kathryn Walker) 17 years before. Together, they had a daughter and lived a quiet life during the week in a backwoods retreat.

But as Logan and Paul take to the road to get away from their grief, Logan is unaware of his father's double life. And, despite the clues, it takes a while before he'll let himself recognize the truth.

When we're introduced to Lena, she's telling her class that the Russian; are our best allies, a tipoff to one of the play's lessons: that appearances are sometimes furthest from the truth.

Paul has taken Logan to the class, with the vague idea that he wants to share his two families with each other. But his selfishness is also evident. Logan is scheduled to leave shortly for the fighting in the Pacific, and he could have been spared the truth, particularly right after his mother's death.

But Paul is a weak man. He needs to absolve some of his guilt, so he lays his big deception out for Logan, whose first reaction is to call his father a small-time cheat.

Paul rejects the small-time label. Pointing to his heart, he says he had a lot of love to give, but his wife didn't have the same joy for life and living. Eventually, Logan comes to understand that his initial judgment was too harsh.

Lena, on the other hand, seems too kind and sensitive for Paul. But she explains that, as a widow, she needed somebody. "Being lonely is a simple skill," she tells Logan. "You can learn it if you want to."

Most of us humans choose not to. In a roundabout way, that's what "Private Contentment" is telling us.

Announcer Don Wilson Dies Of Stroke At 81

DON WILSON

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Don Wilson, the rotund baritone who played straight man to Jack Benny's jibes for 32 years on radio and television, is dead of a stroke at age 81.

Wilson's wife of 32 years, the former Louise Corbet, said she found her husband unconscious in their Cathedral City home after she returned from visiting a friend at Eisenhower Medical Center. Paramedics took Wilson to the medical center and he was pronounced dead Sunday evening.

"It was a massive stroke," Mrs. Wilson said Monday.

The couple had lived in Palm Springs about 15 years, she said, hosting TV talk shows together and raising championship poodles.

Mrs. Wilson has arranged for him to be cremated and his ashes scattered at an undisclosed location.

Wilson joined the Jack Benny radio show as announcer in 1934 after working as an NBC sports announcer. Benny soon made him a featured character.

His wife also became a regular along with Eddie "Rochester" Anderson, Dennis Day, Phil Harris, Mary Livingston, Artie "Mr. Kitzel" Auerbach, Mel Blanc, Bea Benaderet, Verna Felton and Frank Nelson.

"I've written a book about it called 'From Piggly Wiggly to Jack Benny,'" Mrs. Wilson said. "He (Wilson) started out in Denver, his home town, as a baritone in a trio. They were sponsored by a chain of grocery stores called the Piggly Wiggly stores. He went to San Francisco in 1927 and sang on radio there."

A Benny associate and producer, Irving Fein, called Wilson "a great foil for Jack. He was the hearty announcer who tried to get the commercial on the air and Jack would try to thwart him."

In Palm Springs, Wilson hosted "Town Talk," a celebrity interview show on KMIR-TV from 1968-75. For six months in 1975 the couple hosted "The Don and Lois Wilson Show" on competing station KPLM-TV (now KESQ-TV).

The Jack Benny show began on radio in 1932 and transferred to television in 1950. The show ended in 1965. Benny died in 1974.

No funeral is planned. Mrs. Wilson said she is her husband's only survivor.

Uncertainty Over Future

NEW YORK (AP) — One year after her separation from Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, Joan Kennedy says she is considering several television offers, or may return to school for her doctorate.

"Who knows?" Mrs. Kennedy said with a laugh Monday as she spoke to reporters at a cocktail party for fashion designer and fellow Bostonian Alfred Fiandaca.

Mrs. Kennedy was surrounded by well-wishers who complimented her on her appearance and wanted to know if she was down to a size 6.

"Not quite," she replied, adding that she keeps in shape by jogging on Cape Cod, where she plans to spend the summer with her three children.

She wore a white and palomino crepe de chine suit created for her by Fiandaca as she attended the show of the designer's fall collection at the swank Sherry-Netherlands Hotel on Manhattan's Fifth Avenue.

"I'm a Boston girl. He's a Boston boy. I wish him well," she said.

She said she still doesn't feel single. Her 14-year-old son Patrick has been living with her, and when asked if she felt like a single parent, she shook her head and answered, "No."

Mrs. Kennedy, 45, received her master's degree last June from Lesley College.

N.C. Tourism Still Prospers

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Officials say lower gasoline prices, the World's Fair and the need to escape from everyday routine have kept tourism in North Carolina a prosperous venture.

Participants in the annual Governor's Conference on Travel and Tourism also say the future looks good for the state's third-largest industry, despite deepening nationwide recession.

"The summer looks fantastic," said Jim Mealer, owner of the Holiday Inn at Wrightsville Beach and chairman of the Travel Council of North Carolina. "The western part of the state will have an unbelievable year."

Mealer's claim is backed by statistics as over the first two months of 1982, visits to the state's five welcome centers were up nearly 12 percent over 1981.

Tourist inquiries are up 52 percent over 1981's record pace in Asheville, not counting 10,000 specific requests for information about the World's Fair in Knoxville, Tenn.

The Raleigh Civic Center has booked 36 more conventions for the rest of 1982, more than it had in all of 1981.

"That's one thing a man's going to do," Mealer said of vacations. "He's going to take a vacation, he's shoveled some money back and he feels he needs it and he feels his family needs it."

Industry officials say the one area where the travel business is down is in corporate travel. Officials in Greensboro and Charlotte, where corporate trade makes up an important part of travel revenue, say business is off slightly.

"Companies are taking a second look, combining trips when appropriate and taking a close look at travel dollars and how they are being spent," said Marie Early of the Charlotte Chamber of Commerce. "I think, too, we'll see as the summer season approaches, we'll be off somewhat because families will be looking very carefully at how they spend their discretionary dollar."

The director of the U.S. Travel Data Center in Washington, Doug Froehling, said his company's surveys show the economy has caused corporatons to cut back on the number of people sent to conventions and forced business travelers to more frequently combine business with pleasure.

Wins Award In Poster Contest

Paige Brannon, a sixth grader in the Greenville school system, has been named a second place winner in one of three categories in the 1982 North Carolina Bicycle Poster Contest.

Paige placed second in "Best Theme Interpretation" for sixth grade students. North Carolina students in grades 4, 5 and 6 participated in the annual poster contest. Awards were given within each grade group for posters chosen as first and second place winners in three categories — best drawing, best theme interpretation and most original.

Presentation of certificates and prizes will be made by Transportation Secretary William Roberson on May 7 at 3 p.m. in the Highway Building Board Room in Raleigh.

Dear Charlie:
A select field of 56 pairs competed in the NatWest Trophy, held in Manchester, England. In effect, there were three separate events.

In the Invitation event, Paul Chemla and I finished second to Los Angeles Billy Eisenberg and Eddie Kantar.

This hand was highly amusing, although I didn't think so at the time. Paul and I had a misunderstanding in the auction. His pass of five clubs was supposed to show one ace. When East doubled seven spades, I presumed that he wanted a heart lead because he was void in the suit. So I corrected to seven no trump. After a club lead, that did not prove to be a felicitous contract. As a matter of fact, I ended up down eight!

Eddie Kantar got to the reasonable contract of six spades. West led his singleton heart and the defenders took the first three tricks.

The Swedish international pair of P.O. Sundelin and Jorgen Lindqvist also came a cropper, except in this case they were sitting East-West. G.C.H. Fox of London reached six spades against them and was doubled. What seemed like an excellent result in store for them became a GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Do your utmost to be of assistance to your associates, even if it means giving up personal activities. Be wise.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You can get much accomplished by attending to duties early in the day and reap in the benefits.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Show individuals you like that you are devoted to them, but don't permit some conniving person to impose on your good nature.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Use good sense and you can have more accord at home with family members. Find an outlet that brings in added income.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Use care in motion and in conversations today and save yourself much trouble that might otherwise ensue. Be alert.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Use tact in dealing with others today, especially at home with family members. Safeguard your reputation.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one of those delightful young persons who should be taught early in life not to be blunt with others and to think in a more kindly fashion. When lessons are learned this will be a successful chart.

Planner Upset By Birth Rate

By The Associated Press
Declining birthrates and a mobile population are playing havoc with school planning in North Carolina, and officials say the problem is expected to worsen.

Darrell Spencer, associate director of the state Department of Instruction's division of school planning, says the state's student population is expected to drop 5.6 percent, or about 62,700 students, in the next five years.

Strangely, the decline began during the last 10 years when North Carolina's total population was growing from 5,084,411 to 5,881,766, he said.

Spencer said the 1980 census showed that most growth was in suburban areas, resulting in student enrollment booming at suburban schools and forcing officials to use trailers as temporary classrooms.

City school officials have closed unneeded classrooms, which often brought protests from city residents who didn't want their children to be bused to schools far from their homes.

About 75 Gaston County people protested a School Board plan that suggested closing two elementary schools and a junior high school in an effort to save $450,000 a year in operating costs.

Gaston school officials contend the already declining student population of the three schools will worsen by a projected drop of 2,600 students in the next five years.

However, Gastonia and Cramerton residents questioned the suggested closings because school officials are building a new $2.6 million elementary school in southern Gaston County and plan a $4.5 million junior high school south of Gastonia.

Gastonia Planning Director Ed Munn said the new South Elementary School is located in one of three Gaston areas that accounted for much of Gaston County's 14,153 population increase from 1970-80. A suburban area along Union Road grew by 131, he said, while an area along S. New Hope Road increased by 59.6.

Win Rights To Air Routes Of Braniff

MIAMI (AP) — Eastern Airlines, looking for a foothold in a lucrative international market, has won the right to take over South American service from troubled Braniff International for a year.

"I will sleep well tonight," Sam Coats, Braniff's vice president for domestic and international affairs, said in Austin, Texas, Monday night.

Just as Braniff was saying it could no longer afford to fly the routes, the Civil Aeronautics Board voted 5-0 in an unusual evening session in Washington, D.C., to award Eastern the service for a year. The board rejected a competing, week-old offer from Pan American World Airways.

tragedy when West led the ten of clubs. Declarer won the ace, cashed the ace of spades to reveal the break, cashed the ace of diamonds and then crossed to the table with a club ruff. On dummy's three high diamonds he pitched his three heart losers, so the defenders made only their trump trick.

As you can see, there was a wide range of scores here. I went minus 2300 on the board, Fox went plus 1660. Ah well, these days happen!

Omar

Expect N.C. To Benefit From Fair

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — State tourism officials say the 1982 World's Fair in Knoxville, Tenn., should provide North Carolina's tourism industry with a large financial boost.

"Many people will have to come through our state to get to and from Knoxville," said Charles Heatherly, director of travel and tourism for the state Department of Commerce. "We hope they will spend all of their free time with us."

The fair is expected to attract 11 million visitors. State officials say 1.1 million of those people are expected to visit North Carolina and South Carolina.

The state is spending $414,000 for a 1,500-square-foot display at the fair with singers, dancers and entertainers in an effort to attract tourists.

The Western North Carolina Associated Communities, comprised of businessmen in the 11 westernmost counties, is spending $350,000 in radio and magazine advertising, hoping to increase tourism revenues by $50 million.

"We think the $350,000 will be a good investment," said Jerry Douglas, director of the group's 1982 World's Fair Project.

"At least 100 companies are bringing tours into Western North Carolina and Eastern Tennessee that have never been here before," said Dick Trammell of the Asheville Chamber of Commerce.

Group tour bookings at the Biltmore House in Asheville are up to 68,000, ten times what they were a year ago.

"We've spent quite a bit of money advertising this place," Public Relations Manager Mike Smith said of Biltmore, the Vanderbilt family's 225-room mansion and gardens located 111 miles from Knoxville. "But, it's already beginning to pay off."

Popular tourist attractions such as the Great Smoky Mountains National Park and Carowinds, say they expect increased numbers because of the fair, too.

The travel industry is taking advantage of the situation as well.

Eastern Airlines has added two nonstop flights between Charlotte and Knoxville beginning May 1. A week later, Greyhound will operate a special day two-way trip from Charlotte to the fair.

"We see this as an opportunity to introduce people to North Carolina," Heatherly said. "If we do a good job, they'll be back year after year."

Microcomputer Fair Planned

ECU News Bureau An eastern North Carolina microcomputer fair will be held at J.H. Rose High School on Saturday, May 8. It will be co-sponsored by the ECU Department of Science Education.

Other sponsors are Districts 12, 13, 14 and 15 of the N.C. Science Teachers Association and the National Science Teachers Association.

Featured will be a keynote address, "Microcomputers in Science Teaching," by Margaret Bingham, instructional computing coordinator for the N.C. State Department of Public Instruction and a special demonstration on the use of microcomputers in science for handicapped students.

The fair will include rotating 30-minute demonstrations of microcomputers with an emphasis on science software and brief exhibitions of special uses of microcomputers.

Persons wishing to attend the fair are requested to register with the ECU Department of Science Education by May 1. A fee of $2 per person will be charged all participants who are not members of the N.C. Science Teachers Association.

Scientists Believe MS Virus Is Now Identified

By PAUL RAEBURN
AP Science Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — A vaccine to protect against multiple sclerosis could be one eventual outcome of the discovery of a virus associated with the disease, scientists say.

Doctors at the Baylor College of Medicine in Houston who found the virus cautioned that more work remains before they know whether the virus causes multiple sclerosis.

If that turns out to be the case, it should be possible to develop a vaccine that would prevent spread of the disease, said Dr. Joseph Melnick, the leader of the Baylor research team.

In a report in the current issue of The Lancet, the British medical journal, Melnick said the virus has also been found in patients with two other diseases of the central nervous system.

Melnick and colleague Edward Seidel said they have spent 2½ years verifying their results, because many previous reports similar to theirs have not held up under scrutiny by other scientists.

A quarter of a million Americans have multiple sclerosis, and it strikes some 10,000 others every year, according to the National Multiple Sclerosis Society.

It attacks the brain and central nervous system, damaging the myelin sheath, a white insulating material that surrounds nerve cells and shields their electrical signals. The term "sclerosis" means hardening, and refers to the firm scar tissue that appears following damage to the myelin sheath.

Studies of the way multiple sclerosis spreads have suggested that it could be caused by a virus, and many scientists have searched for a virus in patients with the disease.

Melnick said he found the virus in four patients with central nervous system disease. Three had multiple sclerosis; one had amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, sometimes called Lou Gehrig's disease.

The virus is believed to be the same one found by Japanese researchers in patients with subacute myelo-optic-neuropathy, another chronic disease of the central nervous system.

Dr. Barry Bloom, chairman of the department of microbiology and immunology at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine in New York, called the report "exciting," although he said he was not personally familiar with Melnick's work.

He did have some reservations about the report. "What would worry me is that amyotrophic lateral sclerosis and multiple sclerosis are very different diseases and affect different parts of the central nervous system," he said.

"It would be unlikely, in my view, that the same virus would cause both illnesses, although that's obviously possible."

In a telephone interview, Melnick said little is known about the virus, but it appears to be a previously unknown virus. He said efforts are underway to determine its properties.

"What's exciting is that the virus has been found at the time people have the disease," Melnick said. In other reports of viruses linked to multiple sclerosis, researchers only had indirect evidence that a virus had been present at the time the patient had the disease, Melnick said.

Melnick and Seidel analyzed spinal fluid taken from 12 patients with nerve diseases and 27 others without such illnesses.

The virus was found in four of the 12 patients with the diseases; it was not found in any of the 27 patients without nerve ailments.

The scientists bolstered their case by also finding antibodies to the virus in the blood serum of the four patients carrying the virus. That provides additional evidence that the virus was not a contaminant picked up accidentally in the laboratory.

With a few exceptions, the antibodies were not found in patients without central nervous system diseases.

Dog Trailed Missing Boy

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — A 2-year-old boy who had been missing from his grandparents' home for more than an hour Sunday was found safe after a dog led rescuers into a wooded area and went straight to the boy's side.

Jimmy Glenn was spending the day with his grandparents when he apparently opened the door and wandered away.

Relatives noticed that the boy was missing, and, after an hour's search, notified authorities.

Deputies were organizing a search party to find the boy when the dog — a mixed-breed German Shepherd — came up to the house from woods on the other side of the street.

The dog ran back toward the woods, then stopped and turned to see if anyone was following.

Detective Ralph Seagroves said deputies looked for about 15 or 20 minutes with no success when the dog showed up.

"We kept following the dog," Seagroves said, "and all of a sudden we heard a whimper, and it sounded like a child, and when we did, the dog took off."

The deputies walked a bit further and found Jimmy near some pine trees. The dog, named Bullet, was beside the boy. The boy was crying, but otherwise was in good health.

Jimmy's grandmother, Janet Outland, said Bullet was given to her by Jimmy's parents when Bullet was a puppy.

Seagroves estimated that Jimmy had wandered a mile from the home and said he wasn't sure deputies could have found the child without the dog's help.
