Warnings By Britain, Argentina 'Crisis Debate' For Commons

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Cabinet met today prior to an emergency debate in the House of Commons on the Falkland Islands crisis.

No details of the Cabinet meeting were made public, but a high-placed British official who requested anonymity said it was up to Argentina to respond to U.S. peace proposals, not Britain.

"As far as we are concerned, they were addressed to Argentina. We have not been asked to say yea or nay."

A Foreign Office spokesman told The Associated Press that the proposals were being "considered" by Britain but added that the U.S. government was in no doubt about the British position.

"We remain in touch with the Americans on a constant basis," he said.

Britain's announcement Wednesday of a 200-mile air and sea blockade around the islands as of 7 a.m. EDT Friday was seen here as a diplomatic deadline.

But British military sources said any British bid to recapture the islands, occupied by Argentina April 2, probably would await the arrival in two or three days of paratroop reinforcements being flown out to join the 1,500 Royal Marines with the British war fleet.

As preparations were being made for the blockade, sources said British pilots and ship captains have been given the sonar sound "signature" of all known Soviet submarines to avoid sinking any that might intrude in the war zone.

Grim warnings about the possible conflict came from both sides.

Argentine Foreign Minister Nicanor Costa Mendez said the Falklands could prove to be "Britain's Vietnam."

Rear Adm. John Woodward, commander of the British fleet bearing down on the Falklands, predicted in a dispatch he sent to five British newspapers that the campaign could become "long and bloody."

The admiral sent his assessment after he was strongly criticized in London for saying in an interview two days before he thought the "big match ... should be a walkover." His initial statement followed Britain's almost bloodless recapture Sunday of the Falkland's dependence of South Georgia, 800 miles east of the main island group.

The London Daily Express said an unnamed Argentine marine commando, among 194 men taken prisoner on South Georgia, was shot to death by a sentry Monday when he tried to sabotage a submarine.

Reagan To Discuss Aftermath Drafting Budget Is 'Up To Congress'

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress has no choice but to try to draft a budget "a piece at a time" after the failure of President Reagan and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. to resolve their differences on "dollars and philosophy" during a three-hour bargaining session.

"This doesn't mean that the government has broken down," said House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas. "Now it goes back to the orderly process of legislation in the House and in the Senate where it would have had to go in any event."

The president scheduled a nationally broadcast address tonight (8 p.m. EDT) to discuss the aftermath of his unprecedented Capitol Hill meeting Wednesday with O'Neill and other congressional leaders.

Most, if not all, of the major radio and television networks planned to broadcast the speech live.

Treasury Secretary Donald Regan, interviewed on the CBS-TV "Morning" show today, said of the president's speech:

"He'll lay out a program of where he thinks this country has to go. ... You'll see a lot of the fighting Reagan qualities."

Regan said the president is now "going definitely on the offensive. He's got to work with the people to get his program through the Congress if he can't work with the congressional Democratic leaders."

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan "went the extra mile and one step more" to work with the Democrats but that they refused his offer. "So now we turn to our own leadership and proceed with the budget," Speakes said.

"Our feeling is we simply were not met half way," said White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III. He led administration bargainers in the series of 13 budget meetings between White House officials and members of Congress that led up to the session Wednesday in the richly decorated Presidents' Room of the Senate floor.

O'Neill, D-Mass., said compromise was elusive because of "basic philosophical disagreement" between the White House and congressional Democrats. The president believes his "spending cuts of last year, which he wants to cut some more, are not hurting anyone out there in America," the speaker added.

Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., who also attended the meeting Wednesday, said the "differences between us were so great in both dollars and philosophy" that agreement was impossible.

Democrats said the talks collapsed with their rejection of a last-minute compromise proposal from Sen. Baker — that Reagan had accepted calling for a three-month delay in the 10 percent personal income tax rate cut scheduled for July 1983. That was to have been coupled with a three-month delay in the 7.4 percent Social Security cost-of-living increase scheduled for this July.

"That, for all practical purposes, was just not any deal at all and we turned it down rather quickly, flatly," said Rep. Richard Bolling, D-Mo., who attended the meeting and emerged as the spokesman for House Democrats.

"About that time, we got to the point where we were talking about the inability to get together on the crucial issues," Bolling said.

Senate Republicans had a slightly different version.

A Senate Republican source, who asked not to be quoted by name, said Reagan himself offered a 90-day delay in the July 1983 tax cut if the Democrats would split the differences remaining in other areas. Presumably, this would have meant some adjustment in cost-of-living increases, although not in 1982. But, the source said, Democrats rejected that offer.

"President Reagan and his people honestly believe that their program is fair and I know that we're convinced that it isn't fair," Bolling said. "And I think it broke really on that issue."

"I rather think now, looking back, that maybe this effort was dead in the water from the beginning," said Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., another negotiator. "The philosophical differences are too deep."

O'Neill said the meeting only produced an agreement on a deficit target for each of the next three years: $105 billion to $110 billion for 1983; $78 billion in 1984, and $35 to $40 billion in 1985.

Now it is up to both houses of Congress to try to "proceed in our committees and do the budget work a piece at a time," said Senate Finance Committee Chairman Bob Dole, R-Kan.

Alien Raids Up To Court

By The Associated Press
This week's crackdown on illegal aliens holding jobs in the American workplace so far has netted about 3,500 arrests, but many are being set free and a federal judge has set a hearing on whether to halt the raids.

The raids in nine cities by 400 agents of the Immigration and Naturalization Service also have stirred protests from church groups and organizations representing Hispanics, Arabs, Jews and other immigrants.

A Roman Catholic parish priest in Denver says he's so outraged by the roundup he's willing to harbor illegal aliens in his church and bar federal agents from entering. The manager of a fishery in Santa Rosa, Calif., said he can't find American workers to replace the 53 fish cleaners arrested at his establishment.

In Los Angeles, attorneys for an immigrant rights group won a federal court order Wednesday barring the imminent deportation of 150 Mexicans. They were among 425 arrested in the Los Angeles area since Monday as part of "Operation Jobs."

In Detroit, federal agents have released all but 36 of the 107 arrested in that city. Robert Wagus, assistant director of the INS office in Detroit, said the rest "probably would be deported."

Wagus said 71 were released because their families produced documents showing they were working legally. They didn't have the proper working papers in their possession when taken into custody.

The raids, billed as an attempt to open up jobs for unemployed citizens, also were criticized Wednesday at a news conference in Detroit by the League of Latin American Citizens, the Arab Community Center for Economic and Social Services and the Jewish Community Council of Metropolitan Detroit.

Employment In Pitt County Holds Its Own

Pitt County continues to hold its own and is generally in better shape than its neighboring counties as the unemployment rate in North Carolina continued to inch up for March. Only one of the seven neighboring counties, Craven, had an unemployment rate lower than that of Pitt.

Pitt's unemployment rate of 9.4 percent for March is slightly lower than the statewide 9.7 percentage. In February, the statewide percentage was 9.3. For the first time since March 1975, the North Carolina rate of 9.7 percent was higher than the national unadjusted rate of 9.5 percent.

The range of unemployment in North Carolina varies dramatically, with a low of 3.8 percent in Orange County (the only area with a jobless rate of less than 4 percent) to Swain County's staggering unemployment rate of 25.4 — or one out of every four persons in the work force currently unemployed.

A comparison of Pitt County's labor force, employment and unemployment figures, and the unemployment rate with counties bordering Pitt geographically shows:

County	Labor Force	Employed	Unemployed	Rate
Pitt	47,538	43,130	4,450	9.4
Beaufort	21,490	19,070	2,420	11.3
Craven	30,080	27,710	2,370	7.9
Edgecombe	31,470	27,110	4,360	13.9
Greene	9,300	8,310	990	10.6
Lenoir	29,620	26,700	2,920	9.9
Martin	12,870	11,280	1,590	12.4
Wilson	34,020	30,210	3,810	11.2

The labor force report covering the month of March, issued by the Employment Security Commission of North Carolina, reveals a pattern of generally healthier employment figures in metropolitan areas than in the state's rural areas. In all but a couple of the reported urban areas, the percentages of unemployment was lower than the state average.

In the Raleigh-Durham area the March percentage is 4.7 percent. Percentages in other metropolitan areas are: Fayetteville, 8.6 percent; Charlotte-Gastonia area, 6.6 percent; Greensboro/Winston-Salem/High Point area, 8.7 percent; Hickory, 9.6 percent; Salisbury-Concord area, 7.7 percent; Wilmington, 10.9 percent; Asheville 9.2 percent; Burlington, 10.8 percent; and Jacksonville, 7.3 percent.

In addition to Swain County, other counties with an unemployment rate nearly double and in some instances more than double the state rate are: Tyrrell, 19.8 percent; Mitchell, 19.6 percent; Cherokee 19.1 percent; Yancey, 19.1; and Dare County, 18.6.

'State Of Siege' In El Salvador

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The Salvadoran junta reimposed a renewable 30-day state-of-siege, suspending constitutional guarantees and giving authorities wide powers of search and arrest.

The military said the action was taken Wednesday because of continuing attacks by leftist guerrillas trying to overthrow the government.

Salvadoran officials said at least two guerrillas have been killed and an undetermined number wounded since more than 4,500 troops began an anti-guerrilla sweep Sunday in northeastern Morazan province. The operation is supported by field artillery and aircraft.

There was no information on government casualties.

The state of siege was in effect from March 1980 until the civilian-military junta lifted it to allow campaigning for the Constituent Assembly elections last month.

Had Big Cargo Of Marijuana

The tractor-trailer seized Sunday near Falkland by agents of the federal Drug Enforcement Agency contained 20,600 pounds of marijuana, according to a DEA spokesman.

The resident agent in charge of DEA's Wilmington District, Donald Young, said today the truck was stopped on N.C. 43 by personnel of the state license and theft section of the Department of Motor Vehicles operating a routine mobile weight station. He said the local State Bureau of Investigation office was then notified and the DEA agent in this area responded.

Young said the license and theft officers apparently make routine checks of trucks to ensure that cargoes, weights and papers are in order and in compliance with state laws.

He said his office is still investigating the matter and no information is available yet on the truck.

The DEA spokesman said earlier this week that no arrests were made in the late Sunday morning marijuana seizure but he indicated that arrests could be pending.

NEEDS SHELTER

Nina Blount, pastor of Tabernacle of Prayer here, has asked Hotline to appeal for donations for the downpayment on a used mobile home for Mrs. Bertha Lee Moore. Mrs. Moore is 73 years old and is urgently in need of shelter, as she is no longer allowed to occupy the trailer in which she has been living.

Elder Blount says her church has already raised $100 and that $500 more is needed by May 10, after which Mrs. Moore will be without a home if she is not assisted in obtaining a residence. She can make her own monthly payments if friends will help with the downpayment on a several-years-old trailer the church members and a social worker have located, Elder Blount said.

Tax-deductible contributions may be sent to Tabernacle of Prayer, P.O. Box 7331, Greenville. Designate Bertha Lee Moore fund. Inquiries may be made by calling Elder Blount, 756-7435.

REALTORS' FEEDBACK

Donations to the trash and treasure sale of the Greenville-Pitt County Board of Realtors enabled those giving the sale to raise $1,560 for the East Carolina Vocational Center.

Sale chairman Ann Duffus said the Realtors thank the employees of the Vocational Center who assisted with the sale and the general public who supported it.

Pierce Fellowship Has Its 60th Annual Meeting

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

An estimated 200 men braved cool and cloudy weather Wednesday to attend the 60th annual John Pierce Fellowship Club meeting at Camp Contentment on the banks of Contentnea Creek.

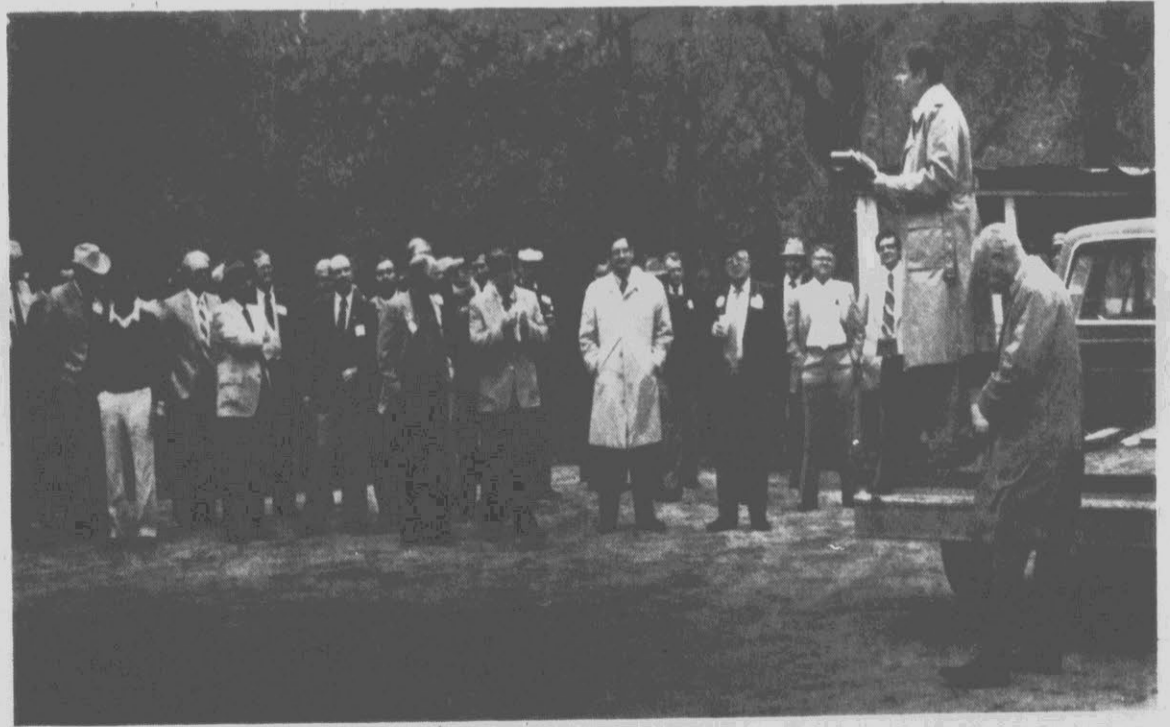

President Jack Lewis of Farnville presided over the meeting, which saw the election of W. Jack Edwards of Stokes as the president for the coming year and Linwood Briley of Bethel as vice president.

The fellowship club had its beginning on April 4, 1922, when a group of 19 men met at Peele's Beach on the Pamlico River in Beaufort County to celebrate the 48th birthday of John B. Pierce of Ayden — a respected merchant and cotton broker. The group so enjoyed the outing that they decided to celebrate again the following year.

The first meetings were known as "J.B.'s Birthday Party," then later as the "John Pierce Birthday Party." In 1942, the year Pierce died, the name was officially changed to the "John Pierce Fellowship Club," and the first club president was elected.

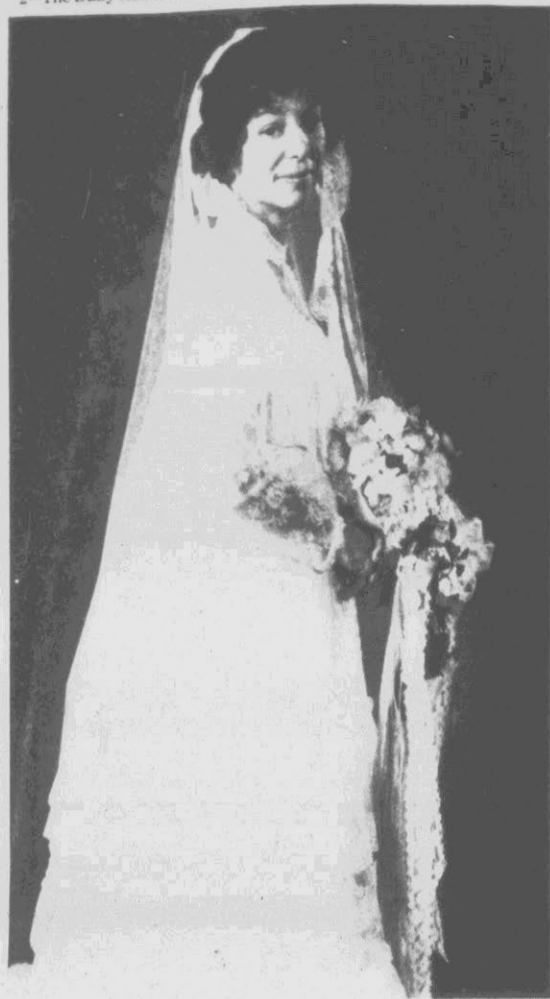

While there are no membership rules, the club has been all male and almost all Democrats.

Among those attending Wednesday's fellowship club meeting were N.C. Attorney General Rufus Edmisten, Sen. Vernon White and N.C. Senate hopeful Linwood Mercer, state Rep. Ed Warren, N.C. Court of Appeals hopeful Horton Rountree, George Lennon, Burt Montague and Dennie Riggs, district attorney candidates Tom Haigwood and Bob Shoffner, State ABC Board Chairman Marvin Speight and highway Commissioner George Harper.

MRS. MICHAEL DALE PURDUN

Couple Weds On Saturday

Angela Maurice Whitehurst, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Elton Whitehurst of Greenville, and Michael Dale Purdun, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Purdun of Houston, Minn., were married Saturday afternoon at three o'clock.

The double ring ceremony was performed by John Brick at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Nunn, sister and brother-in-law of the bride.

The honor attendant was Brenda Gayhardt of Greenville, sister of the bride. Bridesmaids included Bobbie Sue Kelley, niece of the bride, and Lee Ellen Fleming, both of Greenville. The bride's niece, Crystal Michelle Nunn of Greenville, was flower girl.

The best man was Wally Purdun, brother of the bridegroom. Ushers included Jimmy Nunn and Tommy Gayhardt, brothers-in-law of the bride of Greenville, and Ralph Purdun of Houston, Minn., brother of the bridegroom.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal gown of white chantilly lace over peau de soie designed with a high neckline encircled with chantilly and silk Venise lace. The fitted bodice was enhanced with a sheer illusion yoke outlined with a chantilly lace ruffle edged in miniature silk Venise lace. The waistline was encircled with miniature floral silk Venise lace with a satin bow at center back. The chantilly lace fitted sleeves were edged in floral silk Venise lace and the full circular skirt and chapel length train were accented with cascading tiers of matching lace. She wore a fingertip length veil of illusion edged in chantilly lace held in place by a caplet overlaid in matching lace.

Satin ribbon accented the illusion. She carried a bouquet of daisies and miniature carnations with baby's breath and greenery.

The honor attendant wore a baby blue formal gown styled with a satin bodice layered with matching lace and accented with white carnations and baby's breath worn in her hair. Her bouquet was of white carnations with blue and white streamers.

The attendants were each dressed in gowns of baby blue layered with blue lace. They wore white hats and their bouquets were identical to that of the honor attendant.

The flower girl wore a light blue smocked dress with cap sleeves and lace trimming the skirt. She wore baby's breath in her hair and carried a basket of silk flowers.

Mrs. Ethel Wynn and Mrs. Minnie Ward, grandmother and great-grandmother of the bride, were remembered with white carnation corsages.

A reception followed the ceremony and was also held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nunn.

The couple will live in California after a wedding trip to unannounced points.

The bride attended J.H. Rose High School and Pitt Community College. She works at "The Daily Reflector." The bridegroom attended Augusta High School, Wisconsin, and is a corporal in the U.S. Marine Corp.

Piano keys will stay white if they are cleaned with milk or yogurt.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

They're one of the last groups to come out of the closet.

They're the men and women who are unable to have the baby they so desperately want. They number one out of every six couples of childbearing age.

They're infertile and they've heard more advice than people with bad backs.

"Just relax. It'll happen. You're trying too hard."

"Adopt a baby and bingo!"

"Enjoy the freedom. You don't know how lucky you are."

"Be grateful. You have a husband (wife) who understands."

"Hire a surrogate mother." "Volunteer in the children's ward. You'll get your fill of kids."

They get about as much sympathy as an 83-pound woman who is trying to gain weight.

We live in an ignorant world where people feel if you can drive a car you can have a baby, which only adds to their feeling of inadequacy.

A support group for infertile couples in Iowa wrote that they suspected I had had a miscarriage and asked me to write something on their behalf if only to create a little understanding and lure the rest of the people out of the closet.

I had six years of marriage without children, followed by two miscarriages. After having three children, I still indulge myself in the sin of wallowing in self-pity and dwelling on what might have been.

Without children, I became a person that even my best friend was reluctant to tell when she was "expecting." I cried for a week. I went through a who-cares period and lashed out with, "Thank God, it's you and not me."

I wanted to physically hurt any woman who complained she had a bad day around the kids. I did physically hurt anyone who said, "How come you don't have kids? Don't you want them?"

I vacillated between grabbing every baby to my breast to shoving them away and saying, "You're a mess. Go to your mother."

Unless you have experienced the emptiness, there is no describing the pain. Unless you have held a baby and despaired at having to give it back, you cannot possibly know what it is like.

Closets are without air. They cannot sustain life. If you can't come out for yourself, do it for the millions

Regrets Shouldn't Skirt Dress Issue

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I was invited to a bridal shower for a cousin. I plan to decline, although I would have accepted had it not been for one of the restrictions spelled out in the invitation.

It is taking place in a Lutheran church hall. No alcohol will be served, nor will smoking be allowed. That was all right with me until I came to the last restriction: "Dresses only, please!" (In other words, no slacks or pantsuits.)

I do not own a dress or even a skirt. I can't afford to buy a dress and the accessories to go with it for this occasion, but I do have some very presentable pantsuits.

I plan to send a gift with my mother, who is attending. When I decline, should I say why?

WRONG CLOTHES

DEAR WRONG: Absolutely. They might insist that you put on your pants and come.

DEAR ABBY: Thanks for telling "Unhappy Doctor's Wife" to demand that her cheating husband either clean up his act or get out.

Because of our four children, I also hung in there while my doctor husband swung with nurses, secretaries and who knows who else.

The pits for me was the day I was actually trying to find a way to kill myself so that it would look like an accident and my children wouldn't know the truth and suffer. That's when I began to realize that my life was worth more. Gradually I forgave myself for the imagined guilt. (What woman hasn't thought, "If my husband got what he wanted at home, he wouldn't look elsewhere?")

He refused to go for counseling, saying he was satisfied with his life, and since I wasn't, I was the one who needed counseling. Well, I got it. And thank God I did. I sued my husband for divorce, and now, 10 years later, I have peace of mind, my self-respect and a satisfying career.

Yes, he married his office nurse. She's a nervous, insecure wreck who has him tailed when he goes out of town to medical meetings. I feel sorry for her, but she knew what he was like before she married him.

My message is threefold: 1. Take charge of your own life. 2. Time wounds all heels. 3. There is life after hell for a doctor's wife.

DEEP IN THE HEART OF TEXAS

DEAR ABBY: This is an earthshaking problem. The magnitude of the conflict is so enormous, the scope of those afflicted is so wide and the agony it inflicts is so devastating that an immediate column reply is our only salvation!

Forget divorce, abortion, war and perspiration order and settle this question: What is a proper salutation for a business letter when the name, gender, title and position of the correspondent is unknown?

"To Whom It May Concern" is too overused and trite. We remain in anguish awaiting your reply.

FROM WHOM IT DOES CONCERN

DEAR FROM: The same old salutations are still proper — "Dear Sirs," "Gentlemen" or "To Whom It May Concern."

But, if in your opinion they are "overused and trite," address your letter directly to the firm, i.e., "Dear Sears Roebuck," or "Dear Feinstein, Wu and O'Malley, Attorneys-at-Law."

When your letter is answered — voila! — you have a name to use in your next letter: the person who signed the reply.

Helms' One Track Mind

North Carolina's infamous "Senator No" at times has a one-track mind that needs derailing. As a television commentator in Raleigh a decade ago, Jesse Helms had a single subject that was dear to his heart: halt communism at all costs. Now he's using the same biased, short-sighted approach in single-handedly supporting Argentina's grab for power in the South Atlantic.

Argentina, Helms says, is a key factor in preventing the spread of communism in the Western Hemisphere. Accordingly, he seems to feel perfectly at ease in disregarding the fact that Argentina moved first in its current dispute with Great Britain; in disregarding the fact that Argentina may have claimed the Falkland Islands but England had controlled them for 150 years. So, when England retaliates for Argentine military action, it is Helms who rides forth on his great white stallion to put a halo around the heads of the Argentine junta. England, he says, violated the Monroe Doctrine. James Monroe never gave any indication that he would support such an interpretation of his doctrine. His plan was designed to protect Central and South American from external aggression, not to protect it from retaliation for its own improper conduct. England's rule over the Falklands may have been the result of colonialism, but one doesn't just move in and take over after a century and a half.

Helms apparently has strayed from his collards and cornbread upbringing. England, with its historically close ties with the United States, certainly has more to offer in the way of preventing communism's spread through the world than Argentina's military leaders—who may not even be in power tomorrow.

It would be encouraging if Helms would remember his heritage, his history and his perspective. We can only hope, in giving him the benefit of the doubt, that his eyeglasses and hearing aid need changing.

Get The Budget Moving!

Consideration of a budget compromise seems to have bogged down in Washington with the administration talking softly but appearing adamant on proposed changes.

Something will have to give soon... and the giving should be done by the Reagan administration. It was, after all, the Reagan policies which created the current mess that sees the nations facing an awesome budget deficit. It is also Reagan's responsibility to submit a budget and steer it through Congress.

The prospects of a deadlock over the budget, with the possibility of a record peacetime deficit, is hanging heavy over American business and thwarting the anticipated economic recovery.

The administration needs to settle its budget differences with Congress, and it needs to do so without delay.

THIS AFTERNOON

Pro In The Polls

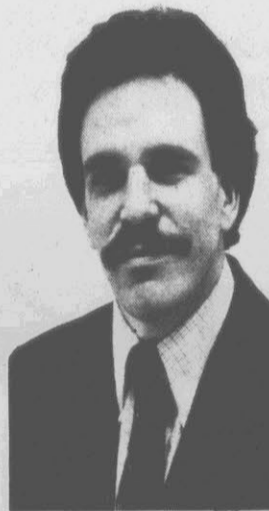

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR
CHAPEL HILL — Phil Meyer caught a lot of flak when he and his students at UNC's School of Journalism polled 593 North Carolinians on the possible 1984 U.S. Senate race and found Gov. Jim Hunt leading Sen. Jesse Helms by a 52-33 percent margin. Several newspapers called it an exercise in futility, meaningless and misleading. Publicly, Hunt's people said it was speculative. Privately, they said it wasn't a very good poll. Former Congressional Club chairman Tom Ellis called Meyer "Professor Backwards" — a reference to the finding that Hunt was leading. Ellis, of course, thinks Helms is way ahead of Hunt.

The poll did have some serious flaws if it is to be used as gospel on the 1984 race. The students screened out neither those who aren't registered voters nor those who aren't likely to vote. And, based on the 1980 Carolina Poll, Republican scepticism seems warranted. In 1980, the journalism students said President Carter and Sen. Robert Morgan were well ahead in North Carolina while GOP polls found it to be a much closer race. In the end, the Republicans won those races.

But before you write off Phil Meyer, you might want to hear a little about his background. He isn't any amateur and he isn't an Ivory Tower pontificator, either. Phil Meyer is a heavyweight of journalism education and a man who, for many years, had to rely on the accuracy of his polls to put food on his table out there in the free enterprise system.

Meyer came to UNC last August from a marketing job

Other Editors Say A Threat Returns

(Goldsboro News-Argus)

Rabies has become such a rare disease since the advent of immunization vaccines, it would be awfully easy to ignore its existence. Pet owners could safely presume that the odds against even an unvaccinated animal contracting the disease are astronomical.

But last week came word that a skunk in Watauga County was observed chasing a dog. Skunks are usually inoffensive creatures, except, of course, for their propensity to exude an awfully unpleasant odor when aroused.

When a farmer saw this one on the attack, he killed it and turned it over to the County Health Department.

It was found to have rabies. That was the first reported case of rabies in a skunk in this state in 40 years.

Except for rabies in bats, cases of rabies had been unheard of for 21 years until 1975. That year a cat in Bladen County was found to be rabid.

The latest incident in Watauga County alerts us to the fact that threat exists in the western part of the state and in the southeastern section.

The message is clear. We must recognize the possibilities of rabies popping up again in these areas and elsewhere. Many stray dogs and cats roam every county in this state. Many are not protected by vaccinations.

Rabies was virtually stamped out through a nationwide program of vaccinations. We can prevent its again becoming a problem by taking advantage of the rabies clinics held each year or by having our pets vaccinated by taking them to a veterinarian's office. The cost in time and money is minimal. The protection is important.

Meanwhile, the State Division of Health Services warns us against exposure to animals acting strangely. Rabies is a disease affecting the nervous system. When an animal is observed acting abnormally, animal control officers should be called.

An untrained person should not attempt to capture such an animal unless an emergency exists.

Our best protection is to make certain that all pets in our neighborhoods are inoculated and that abnormally acting animals are not ignored.

SECURE CHILDREN

Psychologists often tell us that the main cause of juvenile delinquency is insecurity caused by broken homes. Children need to be aware of a firm unity of purpose in which father and mother stick by each other through thick and thin, continuing to love each other, not letting anything separate them to the slightest degree. A child looks up, as it were, to this union existing between his parents; and down deep in his nature something whispers to him that he need

BY JAMES KILPATRICK

An End To Paternalism

WASHINGTON — Over the next couple of weeks, members of Congress will have to make up their minds on the Federal Trade Commission's pending regulation on the sale of used cars — whether to buy this lemon or to call off the deal. The proposition is one more piece of paternalism. It ought to be junked.

This regulation has been limping around legislative halls longer than an old DeSoto. Back in 1974, when the regulatory climate was a good deal sunnier, Congress directed the FTC to work up a used-car regulation. Early in 1976 the FTC published a first draft. Everybody walked around the idea, kicking the tires; nothing much happened. In September 1978 the FTC produced a "final staff report" that weighed half a ton. The report delighted Ralph Nader and depressed the car dealers.

Again, nothing much happened. On Capitol Hill the climate got chilly. At one point 51 senators signed a notice to the FTC that the then-pending rule would have to be remodeled. Last August the FTC produced its final repaired and repainted version. Unless both houses of Congress adopt resolutions of disapproval by mid-May, the regulation will become effective six months later. The House Commerce Committee is expected to report a veto resolution almost any time now; if the House adopts the resolution, as expected, the Senate probably will follow along. Then we would expect some form of court challenge to the legislative veto, and the whole proposition could be parked for months or years.

The regulation, if it ever goes into effect, would apply to every used-car dealer in the nation — about 70,000 small-business men. A dealer would be defined as a person or company selling more than five used cars in a 12-month period. The rule would require every such dealer to post a window sticker on his automobiles. The sticker would inform prospective customers that "a seller's spoken promises may be no good," or perhaps that "spoken promises are difficult to enforce."

"Ask us to put all promises in writing," the sticker continues. "You can make a seller keep written promises."

After that friendly beginning, the window sticker would list 14 general categories of possible defects, subdivided into 52 specific problems. Does the car suffer from "abnormal visible exhaust discharge"? Are the shock absorbers functioning "improperly"? Do the brake linings or pads have a thickness of less than 1/32 inch? The dealer would be expected to disclose information about any specific defect of which he is aware.

At first glance the regulation looks pretty spiffy. After all, why shouldn't a dealer be compelled to disclose the existence of faulty brakes or a rusted muffler? If a head gasket needs to be replaced, isn't this something the buyer should know?

The problems here are threefold. Without a bureaucratic army the regulation could not possibly be enforced. The rule would add significantly to a dealer's cost of doing business, thus increasing the price of used cars and driving more sales into the unregulated market of owner sales. The rule would broaden the power of federal authority at a time when the trend toward state responsibility is gaining momentum.

The whole proposition, it seems to me, amounts to overkill. Today's used-car dealers are the descendants

High Noon In Corrals

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

AP Special Correspondent

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M.

(AP) — The makers and the shakers of the newspaper business are gathering in San Francisco this week for their annual solemn conclave, but I wonder if they'll come to grips with one of the more gripping problems occasionally gripping the print medium.

What do you do if some dude comes busting into the editor's office, grips you by the lapels and wants to rearrange your nose for sticking it into someone else's business?

This is known as advocacy readership, the consequences that sometimes follow the truth of the printed word, or the rare error of same in cases of even more imminent danger. In the emergency ward, it is usually diagnosed as instant reader impact. Columnists are sometimes prone to this vibrant form of reader reaction.

The question came up the other evening when a bunch of the men and women pursuing the editor's craft in places like Clovis, Silver City, Grants, Portales, Roswell and Carlsbad, were whooping it up at the annual meeting of New Mexico AP managing editors at a watering hole outside Albuquerque.

The subject wasn't on the agenda, but it fostered some lively discussion and grisly anecdotes.

Apparently readers in the rugged old Southwest take their newspapers seriously and don't tolerate too widely a margin of editorial error. It's been a while since they strung an editor up in these parts or creased his Stetson with a round from a Remington while he sat at another product of the same name, but lone vigilantes still ride into town seeking editorial redress.

An editor has got to keep his or her wits about him or her, when 6 1/2 of unbrushed blue denim uncurls from behind the steering wheel of a dusty pickup truck and begins waving a fist the size of a Western saddle to stress the nuances of his deposition.

The solutions advanced for cooling or curbing this type of compelling argument were as colorful as some of the case histories, but I won't embarrass these real life folk heroes of the newspaper game by quipping them by name, lest the disgruntled return to town to give it his second best shot.

One veteran editor who has had the problem come up several times and still retains most of his original teeth pronounced himself to be a firm believer in shuttle diplomacy. He shuttles the dude over to the cafe to buy some time over a cup of coffee. This avoids having the office busted up too in case negotiations fall through. Also there might be time for the circulation manager to call the sheriff before the editor comes busting through the plate glass window onto the sidewalk. Time is of the essence in these editorial differences of opinion, since cowpokes riding into town in a pickup with a grudge in their saddlebags don't move at the stately diplomatic pace of the British navy advancing on the Falklands.

"I try to find out, quick as I can," said another editor, "which tiny part of his complaint I can agree with and stress that as long as I can before getting into the rebuttal. This allows his temperature to go down a little under his Stetson. Reasoning may not work very often but it takes the steam out of people. Pretty soon he's talking about calling his lawyer instead of his favorite embalmer, which may prove to be the worst consequence."

One old-timer, who labored for decades as a real ink-stained wretch before the offset process robbed the cliché of its validity, advanced the idea that adding a little bulk to the backshop, like apprenticing the fullback at the community college or the bouncer at the local tavern, might defuse editorial dissent or at least equalize the debate.

Others agreed that arguments for the defense voiced from within a 24-inch collar carried considerable weight, but that kind of help was hard to come by these days.

A newcomer to the editorial chair, to whom the threat of violence had not yet presented itself in the unhypothetical state, theorized an ingenious stall for time and compassion. He said he'd pick up the phone right away and say, "pardon me, fellow, but I gotta call this special number right now and have my pacemaker checked."

One courageous editor, whose name deserves to be used, couldn't recall facing a single High Noon showdown in the editorial corral despite taking some unpopular stands in the community.

"When they bust into my office," said editor Becky Barber of the Grants Beacon, "and see it's a woman behind the desk, they start sputtering for the top editor, and the senior editor, and the managing editor, and the executive editor. When they find out all of them is me, their fury begins to fall apart at the seams."

This led to speculation among the disadvantaged males of the species that perhaps they'd better keep a wig and some lipstick in the desk top drawer and go into instant drag when that pickup truck roars into the parking lot with a real live letter to the editor.

Someone also suggested that with all this new newspaper technology coming into vogue — terminals and computers and deep dish antennas and what not — some enterprising supply firm should come up with an instantly breakable plastic brick.

That way the fearless editor can slam his fist on the desk (bisecting the brick) with a thunderous karate chop and say, "By George, I don't agree a whit with what you're saying and I'll defend freedom of the press to the death."

Two Ominous 'Ifs' Still Loom

By JOHN CUNNIFF

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — If the

inflation game is over, as so many economists claim it is, then a drastic shift of fortunes, probably one of the most pronounced of the century, could ensue.

Should it occur, it would mean that the floaters — certain housing investors, workers, oil producers, borrowers — who used inflation to balloon assets would lose their updraft and return to earth.

For those who financed the flotation — savers, mortgage lenders, fixed-income investors and in general those who believed in sensible economic management, it would be the return of justice and a fair return.

While two ominous "ifs" still loom, optimists already feel the first evidence of the shift is now taking place. Savers are receiving returns that enable assets to grow. Mortgage lenders have broken through usury laws and again can lend at a profit. Analysts term extremely favorable the outlook for fixed-income securities, such as long-term bonds.

The changed outlook, a consequence of inflation having been reduced to manageable levels — perhaps only 4 percent for the calendar year — is described by some securities analysts as poetic justice.

For 15 years or so, they remind us, the exploiters of inflation grew without necessarily inventing or manufacturing or providing any greater services. They invested in inflation, and often borrowed to do so.

In borrowing, investors often drew in Uncle Sam as a partner, and he absorbed a major portion of the costs by agreeing to allow income tax writeoffs. And, of course, they repaid lenders in cheaper dollars.

Meanwhile, their investments may have risen faster than inflation in general. And while the investment appreciated in market value, the investor often could deduct a good deal of taxes for depreciation.

The fortunes of those who fed financing to the exploiters went the other way. They lost. The tax deductions that helped finance market exploitation were matched by higher tax brackets for others. Savers, in effect, lost savings. Mortgage lenders lost on loans. Automakers and municipalities almost went broke financing big wage increases.

To apply moral measurements to such activities accomplishes little or nothing, because the exploiters were only doing what they felt they had to do: Follow the incentives of the marketplace.

There was an incentive to borrow, to invest in tax shelters, to seek assets that would keep pace with inflation. OPEC nations also played the game to the limit for the same reason. If they were to be paid in dollars of fading value then they would demand more of those dollars.

The incentives were warped. You could actually save by borrowing. If you borrowed at 12 percent and invested at 15 percent you pocketed the difference after paying taxes. But often the taxes could be deferred.

The other "if" — the first was if inflation continued at low, single-digit, manageable levels — is if the losers over the past 15 years can take advantage of the advantage that seems to be presented to them.

So far, there are big question marks. Many people cannot afford to save. Many people cannot afford to buy a house. Many mortgage lenders are in precarious financial positions. Automakers still haven't been able to rebuild their markets. Businesses still must pay dearly to get money to expand.

Reducing the rate of inflation, and making it stick, may resolve one part of the problem. But until the economy expands again, the losers to inflation over the past decade or so must wait for justice.

journalism schools. After Harvard, he went to the Detroit Free Press where his polling helped the paper win a Pulitzer Prize for its reporting on the aftermath of that city's racial riots. The next year he conducted a series of startling polls for The Miami Herald which, following Martin Luther King Jr.'s death, showed black residents were more firmly committed than ever to peaceful social change. In the mid-70s, Knight-Ridder put his skills to work making money as he helped devise a news strategy for increasing circulation.

Meyer defends the concept and accuracy of his Carolina Poll, both as educational tool and news. Journalists should be familiar with polling techniques so they'll know how to evaluate stories based on polls, he says. A good place to learn polling is in school.

As for the poll showing Hunt leading Helms, Meyer says it is an accurate reflection for the day it was taken. He does not say that it is an accurate predictor of the outcome of any campaign between the two.

In the next two years, he'll conduct polls he hopes will accurately predict political races. To do that, he'll design a poll that weeds out potential non-voters, makes adjustments for those who are likely to change their minds before election day and predicts how the undecided will vote. There are proven methods to do these things, he says.

It may take until the next election for Meyer to shed the title of Professor Backwards; but given his experience in the field, he may be the person to make the poll a valuable journalistic and political tool in North Carolina.

NEW YORK (AP) — Some 2 million visitors are expected to attend a traditional Irish county fair along a one-mile stretch of Brooklyn's waterfront June 5-6.

The two-day Great Irish Fair will feature music, song, dance, Celtic sports, arts and crafts and authentic Irish food and drink in booths between the city's Brooklyn and Manhattan bridges.

Proceeds from the fair will help support the work of the Catholic Charities, Diocese of Brooklyn, on behalf of more than 100 non-denominational community-based human service programs.

Inducted Into Honor Society

ECU News Bureau Fifteen students in the East Carolina University Department of Library Science have been inducted into the Alpha Eta Chapter of Alpha Beta Alpha honor society.

Alpha Beta Alpha is the national library science honor organization for undergraduate and graduate students. Its ECU chapter was organized in 1966.

The new ECU members include Mima Dixon of Washington, Vanessa Gaskins of Wilson, Teresa Taylor of Kinston and Paula Dudley, Keith Howard, Ylva Lindholm and Betsy Tugwell, all of Greenville.

Professor Emily Boyce, chairperson of the ECU Department of Library Science, and Dr. Carol Veitch of the library science faculty are the chapter's advisers.

of the horse traders of yore. Doubtless there were some unscrupulous traders in the old days — men who would palm off a mean-tempered beast as a sweet old mare that had been ridden only to church on Sundays — and doubtless there are some sly fellows in the used-car business today. Any industry that annually sells 19 million units of anything will have its bad actors.

But it is simply a wrongheaded public policy to lay the heavy hand of the federal government on a business that can be effectively policed by its own members and by local authorities. The civil courts are not incapable of dealing with outright fraud. Existing laws on express and implied warranty still function. The ancient admonition of "caveat emptor" — buyer, beware! — still applies.

The last thing on earth the depressed auto industry needs right now is another wet blanket of rules, regulations, inspections, paperwork and added costs. If we mean to get government off the backs of our people, we ought not to put the FTC in the rumble seat now.

May Encourage Rape Reports

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Victims of rape and sexual assault may have more incentive to report the crimes and cooperate with investigators now that the state pays for evidence collection, officials say.

Since the Rape Victim Assistance Program was started last summer,
$16,676.73 has gone for 182 of 259 claimants. The other requests either have been rejected or are being considered, said Jim Scarcella of the state Department of Crime Control and Public Safety.

"Before this program was created, rape victims were the only crime victims who had to pay for the collection of evidence," said Scarcella.
"We feel that's just too much to ask them to swallow on top of everything else."

Hospital and doctor bills for the victims often total hundreds of dollars, and many victims don't have insurance, said Cindy
Dorman, director of the N.C.
Council on the Status of Women's office of services to victims of sexual assault.
Between 30 and 35 percent of North Carolinians have no health insurance, Scarcella said.

"Knowing that you can get help paying for medical care makes it easier to go to the hospital and call the police," Ms. Dorman said. "We think this is an excellent program, one the state can be proud of.
We hope it will lead to more convictions of rapists."

The program, given a budget of $200,000 a year in July 1981, provides up to $500 per individual although the average payment is $94, Scarcella said. Payments are made to the hospital or doctor, not the victim, he added.

In order to be eligible, the victim must report the rape or sexual assault within 72 hours. The victim is encouraged — but not required — to prosecute the rapist and testify against him if needed, Scarcella said.
The hospital then verifies

the crime with the law enforcement agency to which it was reported. Any medical costs related to the assault within 90 days of the incident are totaled and sent to Scarcella's office. If the victim has health insurance a claim is made, and if the insurance company won't cover all the costs, Scarcella's office is told how much more money is needed.
"Most health insurance policies will cover the costs of medical care after rape," Scarcella said. "But when psychological services or other unusual services are required they often don't pay."

Most requests for assistance are approved but it isn't automatic, he added.
Some have been turned down because the police report showed the assault wasn't sexual in nature, while others were rejected because the victim didn't go to the police in time, he said.

Perhaps the biggest problem with the program is a lack of visibility, Scarcella said. Many hospitals aren't aware of it or don't participate regularly, he said, while Ms. Dorman said many of the 1,300 victims who reported rapes to police last year didn't ask for help.

"We've been working with law enforcement, rape crisis centers and other organizations, familiarizing them with the program and urging them to use it," Ms. Dorman said. "Sometimes we still get bills from the hospitals that think we take care of it."

Although the state is in a recession and officials are seeking ways to reduce spending, Scarcella said he thinks the program won't meet the budget ax.
"The public mood is in favor of this type program.
It's very popular," he said.
"There's a growing consensus that we've got to get these people (rapists) off the street, and if this helps I don't think it will be cut."

Noguchi Unhappy, But Reports For New Job

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former Los Angeles County Coroner Dr. Thomas T. Noguchi is still trying to get his job back, but he's reported for work anyway at his new post.

Noguchi, who was demoted from coroner to physician specialist, reported for work Wednesday morning but spent most of the day tying up loose ends from 14 years in his old job, said Bill Gold, a spokesman for the coroner's office.

Noguchi, 55, was suspended for 30 days by the county Board of Supervisors before the board voted Tuesday to demote him and cut his pay because of alleged mismanagement, moonlighting and making sensational statements about the deaths of Hollywood celebrities.

Dr. Ronald Kornblum has been appointed acting coroner.

"I'll be taking regular routine autopsies, collecting evidence, putting my signature on the papers, and testifying (as a medical examiner) every day in court," Noguchi told reporters as he arrived for work amid applause from his fellow employees.

He said he performed his last autopsy two months ago. Kornblum said it may be awkward to have Noguchi back in the lab with the other dozen physician specialists. He said Noguchi might be transferred to another department, such as Health Services.

Supervisor Mike Antonovich, who oversees the coroner's office, said he believes such a move will take place.

"I do not foresee any problems. It would give the (coroner's office) an opportunity to function and would be in the best interests of Dr. Noguchi if he assumes his responsibilities in the Department of Health," Antonovich said.

Meanwhile, Noguchi's attorneys lost a court appeal to get him reinstated. Superior Court Judge John Cole reaffirmed his own ruling earlier in the week, denying Noguchi's request to be reinstated while he appeals his demotion to the county Civil Service Commission.

"I would think that nothing further can damage his reputation," the judge said in response to attorneys' arguments that the demotion will harm Noguchi's professional standing.

"It's public knowledge that he has been demoted. Nothing this court does can affect that," Cole said.

Noguchi's attorneys, Godfrey Isaac and Rosalind Marks, also sought a temporary restraining order to enjoin the county Board of Supervisors from appointing a permanent replacement before Noguchi's civil service hearing has ended.

"That is entirely superfluous," Cole said in denying the request. He said there was no evidence the supervisors would "do anything so silly" as to appoint a permanent replacement before the end of the hearings.

Noguchi's pay went down from $69,340 a year to $67,704 after the demotion.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecast for the period until early Friday predicts showers for southeast Georgia and most of Florida, and for western Texas, most of New Mexico and much of Colorado. (AP Laserphoto)

By The Associated Press
The National Weather Service says skies will be partly cloudy today with afternoon temperatures warming into the 60s to around 70.
It will be mostly cloudy tonight with lows will be in the 40s for the most part.

Skies will become partly cloudy Friday when highs will once again be in the 60s to around 70.
Small craft advisories are in effect for the coastal waters and sounds. Coastal winds will be northeast at 15 to 25 knots through Friday.

It was mostly cloudy along the coast last night and there was some spotty cloudiness at times across the rest of the state. The cloudiness thickened over the mountains as dawn approached. Overnight lows were mostly in the 40s.
Skies ranged from mostly sunny in the west to mostly cloudy in the east yesterday. Except for the 50s in the higher mountains, afternoon highs were in the 60s and 70s in the west.
The range was from 56 at Boone to 76 at Bryson City. In the east highs were in the 50s and 60s. The coolest location was Elizabeth City with 55.

East Says Act Being Abused

By The Associated Press
North Carolina Sen. John East says the 1965 Voting Rights Act is being used to assure the election of a certain percentage of black officials.
East made his remarks to the Senate Judiciary Committee Wednesday, saying the act should be changed. As an example, he pointed to North Carolina's problems in getting approval for the state's redistricting plans from the U.S. Justice Department.
He said the Justice Department's recent objection to the state Senate redistricting plan was "clearly a move in the direction of proportional representation" because the rejection was based on not having enough blacks in the 2nd Senatorial District.

East plans to offer prepared amendments to a House-passed voting rights bill which would require nationwide application of the act and a shift in burden of proof.
The committee's morning session was cut short when

East demanded that there be a quorum of committee members. He said he was not trying to be an obstructionist, but wanted a full quorum because the bill is of "enormous" importance. A committee meeting scheduled for Tuesday was postponed when the state's other Republican senator, Jesse Helms, used a parliamentary maneuver to delay it. Helms said he sought the delay to gain time for negotiators seeking to work out a compromise.

Orders Changing

Name For Sub

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is ordering the Navy to change the name of the nuclear attack submarine Corpus Christi after criticism from church officials and members of Congress.

In Latin, Corpus Christi means body of Christ. It also is the name of a city in Texas, which is what the Navy had in mind when the sub — still under construction — was named.

Reagan instructed the Navy Wednesday to rename the vessel City of Corpus Christi. The president "understood the point of view of those who wanted the name changed, and he directed it be changed," said White House assistant press secretary Mark Weinberg.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., called Reagan's deputy chief of staff, Michael K. Deaver, last week to ask the president to change the name.

Revenue-Sharing Hearing Tonight

The city has reminded local citizens interested in the 1982-83 revenue sharing program that a proposed use hearing on the appropriation of revenue sharing funds for Greenville is set for tonight at 7:30.

Residents will be given an opportunity to provide written and oral comments on possible fund use for 1982-83. The hearing will be conducted in the third floor council chambers at city hall.

MUSIC PROGRAM
The Pitt-Greene Interdenominational Choir will render a musical program at Selvia Chapel Free Will Baptist Church Saturday at 7:30 p.m. The choir will meet at the church at 6:30 p.m.

Spy Plot Jeopardized Future Weapons

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A number of key present and future U.S. weapons have been "put in jeopardy" because of information passed by a defense industry radar engineer to a Polish spy, according to an intelligence report.

The report prepared by the CIA listed the futuristic radar-evading "Stealth" bomber, the new B-1 bomber and the F-15 jet fighter's look-down-shoot-down radar as among the endangered systems.

It said William H. Bell, the American engineer, passed more than 20 "significant classified reports" to a Polish intelligence officer who operated under cover as a business executive.

The information probably reached Soviet intelligence, according to the report, which became available Wednesday.

"The information in these documents put in jeopardy existing weapons and advanced future weapons systems of the United States and its allies," the report said.

"The acquisition of this information will save the Polish and Soviet governments hundreds of millions of dollars in research and development efforts by permitting them to implement proven designs developed by the United States and by fielding operational counterpart systems in a much shorter time period," the report said.

"Specifications on current and future U.S. weapon systems will enable them to develop defensive countermeasure systems," the report said.

Bell, a former radar project engineer with Hughes Aircraft Co., pleaded guilty last year in Los Angeles to charges that he transferred filmed copies of documents to Marion Zacharski.

Bell was sentenced to up to eight years in prison and fined $10,000, while Zacharski was given a life term for conspiring to commit espionage.

The document prepared for Congress by the CIA this month provided the most specific material so far on information the CIA said Bell furnished the Polish spy.

The Bell case was highlighted in a report that focused on the problem of legal and illegal Soviet acquisition of Western technology.

"Clandestine acquisition of the West's most advanced military-related equipment and know-how by the KGB and GRU (Soviet intelligence services) is a major and growing problem," according to the report, which intelligence officials said was drawn up from information gathered by the entire U.S. intelligence community.

"The Soviets and their Warsaw Pact allies have obtained vast amounts of militarily significant Western technology and equipment through legal and illegal means," the report said.

The Reagan administration is making a major effort to clamp down on the flow of high technology of military value to the Soviet Union.

Referring to the classified reports it said Bell provided to the Polish spy, the CIA document listed:

- The quiet radar system for the B-1 and Stealth bombers.
- The F-15 look-down-shoot-down radar system that is capable of spotting enemy aircraft that might try to attack at low altitudes where ground-based radar normally could not see them.
- The sophisticated Phoenix missile system carried by Navy F-14 fighter planes and designed to take on many enemy targets simultaneously.
- An all-weather radar system for tanks and an experimental radar system for the Navy.
- Patriot and improved Hawk air defense missiles.
- A ship-borne surveillance radar and a submarine sonar system.
- A new air-to-air missile and unspecified NATO air defense system.

Vote Extending Ocean-Dumping

By SKIP WOLLENBERG
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two House subcommittees have approved legislation to extend for one year a ban on dumping harmful sewage sludge in the Atlantic Ocean.

The bill also prohibits dumping of low-level nuclear wastes in the oceans for two years.

The measure was approved by voice vote Wednesday by the House Merchant Marine subcommittee on oceanography and fisheries and now goes to the full committee. A hearing is expected next week.

Current law provided for a phase-out in ocean dumping of municipal sewage sludge by Dec. 31, 1981.

While dozens of cities in the Northeast found alternative disposal methods, a handful continued to use the oceans as the deadline approached.

Last year, New York City won a decision in U.S. District Court in New York permitting it to continue dumping in the ocean while the Environmental Protection Agency adopted new guidelines on harmful dumping. The EPA was ordered also to consider alternative methods of approved disposal.

As a result, New York City and more than six New York and New Jersey sewerage authorities continue to dump sludge at a site 12 miles off the New Jersey coast in what is known as the New York Bight Apex.

The two House subcommittees narrowly defeated an amendment Wednesday to ban all sewage sludge dumping at the site.

In extending the current ban for another year, the law also would order the EPA to designate ocean sites where dumping may occur.

The EPA would be required to consider the type and quantities of wastes, the ability of the waters to assimilate the materials and to assess the immediate and cumulative effects of dumping on the ecology near the dump site.

Boat Traffic Is Briefly Blocked

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Boat traffic along the Intracoastal Waterway was blocked for short periods of time Wednesday while Coast Guard crews worked to pump aviation fuel from a barge which ran aground.

The vessel was carrying about 12,000 barrels of fuel when it ran aground on the west bank of the waterway at Rich's Inlet, near the New Hanover-Pender County line Monday night.

Coast Guard Capt. Edward Grace said fuel was slowly leaking from the vessel, but posed no serious environmental threat.

Lodge Sees 25th Year

Crown Point Masonic Lodge 708 of Greenville celebrated its 25th anniversary April 17 with an early morning breakfast and work in the Master Masons Degree.

During the breakfast, Master Roy S. Selby gave a brief history of the lodge and recognized charter, honorary and life members.

Past and present officers of the 5th Masonic District were recognized, along with William P. Harper Sr. of Parkersburg, W.Va., who traveled the farthest to attend; Hugh J. Sawyer of Greenville, who had the longest service in Masonry with 66 years, 8 months and 2 days, and Henry Carawan of Washington, who at 93, was the oldest.

Also recognized were Past Grand Master Leslie H. Garner of Greenville and James W. Brewer of Greenville, illustrious potentate of Sudan Temple and also a past grand master.

Seventy Master Masons representing 13 Masonic lodges attended the session at which three candidates—Edwin Congleton of Stokes and Clarence N. Talbot and Kenneth R. Bryant, both of Greenville—became Master Masons.

Heavy Rain Storm Damage Reported

BY MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

The spring thunderstorm that roared through Pitt County late Tuesday and dumped an inch of rain and peanut-sized hail in less than an hour damaged the county's tobacco and vegetable crops, say agricultural officials.

"Some tobacco beds west of Greenville near the Stantonsburg Road area were completely devastated by the hail," said Pitt Extension Agent Sam Uzzell. "They were destroyed. It's a little early, though, to tell about the condition of the plants already in the field."

"The tobacco plants in the field are so limber now it probably didn't break them," noted Roger Cobb, Pitt extension agent. "They may have been drowned out by the downpour."

Hail, some of it reportedly an inch in diameter, gutted much of Charlie Stocks' early spring crops at Charlie's Vegetables. "Anything that was ready to harvest was ruined," he said. "Cabbage, butter beans, field peas, garden peas, broccoli, cauliflower, spinach, silver queen corn—all totally destroyed."

In addition, he said heavy rain washed soil away from melon and canteloupe plants that were sprouting and hail damaged 50 percent of his tomatoes. Stocks put no figure on his losses, but said he felt he'd "missed out on at least half of the market."

"We'll start over, of course," said the truck farmer. "There's nothing else you can do."

Erosion damage, said Uzzell, was a big effect of the storm. "Fields that have been well-prepared probably have some crusting from the big rain," he explained, "and the run-off surely moved some chemicals around."

Approximately 1.99 inches of rain, one inch of it measured shortly before midnight, soaked Greenville Monday, according to Greenville Utilities' Water Plant.

Hail reportedly the size of ping pong balls covered lawns and stripped trees near the Stantonsburg Road area during the storm. "Most of it was the size of peanuts," said Mark Sugg, a resident of the area, "but some of it was as big as a ping pong ball and tore the leaves from trees."

Suggs said his yard was completely covered for a while Tuesday night. He said it looked white: "...my deck looked like someone had peppered it with a shotgun."

The storms that flooded streets and roads and woke many early-to-bedders with vicious lightning and booming thunder brought cooler air to the area Wednesday, with temperatures dipping into the 40s overnight. At 8 a.m. today, it was 46 degrees Fahrenheit in Greenville, according to the GUC Water Plant.

Accused Cocaine Dealer Left Warning Letter

By JOE QUINLAN
Associated Press Writer

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — He started as a "wise guy" who didn't have to work hard in school. He ended with a shotgun propped against his body. But before killing himself, Paul Mayotte left a haunting message about drug abuse to "whoever I don't know."

Mayotte, 36, killed himself April 22, hours before he was to appear in court on cocaine-selling charges.

"I'm a physical wrecker. I can't believe I'm...alive. Too much of everything...booze, cigs, reefer. My lungs are gone...my nose is shot...I can't breathe half the time. I get three-four day hangovers. I feel 80 or 180," he wrote in a nine-page letter to his family and Thomas Guilmett, an undercover state trooper.

"I hate myself. I can't believe I did this to myself. I had everything as a kid," Mayotte wrote.

Copies of the letter, with some personal parts written to Mayotte's family deleted, were released Wednesday by Hampden County District Attorney Matthew Ryan.

Mayotte, who authorities alleged was a mid-level wholesaler, and 17 other people were arrested last October in connection with what authorities called an $8 million cocaine ring operating in the Springfield area and Florida.

"I hope you will let some kids read this letter. I was a good kid once upon a time, long, long ago," Mayotte wrote. "You've got to get them when they're young. Mom and Dad were so right. One bad habit leads to another. God, I wish I had listened."

Mayotte said it all began when he was young. "I guess I got away with too much...Being a wise guy at a young age brought me to the point I am now. I am sure of it."

Mayotte said he "loved the White Lady of Death (cocaine) more than anything 'cause it makes your problems go away. The more you snort the wiser you become until finally you lie, cheat, rob."

Ryan said Mayotte, who lived in Monson and worked occasionally as a bartender, shot himself twice in the stomach with a 12-gauge shotgun that was found propped between his body and the floor of his pickup truck, parked on a country road.

"I'm heading for the last roundup anyways. I just don't want it to be in Walpole (state prison)," Mayotte wrote.

Ryan and Mayotte's attorney, Daniel M. Kelly, said there was no indication that he had planned to plead guilty. Ryan also said Mayotte would not necessarily have gone to Walpole, considered the state's toughest prison, if he had been convicted.

Kelly said the family asked to have excerpts from the letter released because "they just didn't want this personal tragedy to go in a meaningless way." He said the family hoped the letter would prevent another tragedy.

"I've been so dumb, so weak, so crazy. I wish I could have stopped. I really do. It just happened too fast for me...I have to do this. I'm sorry," Mayotte wrote at the end of his note.

"Give this to whoever I don't know."

Class Of 1942 Plans Reunion

Greenville High School's class of 1942 is planning its 40th reunion July 31 at the Casablanca Restaurant.

Previous reunions were held in 1962, 1972 and 1977. Of the original 96-graduates, 82 are living and have known addresses. Those who were in the class but graduated elsewhere are also included in the reunion plans.

Jack Edwards, chairman of the reunion committee, said, "Members of other classes who are interested in our reunion are most welcome. Just call 756-5024 and we will mail you details."

Voters Greeted Real Underdog

CUMBERLAND, Md. (AP) — Patrons of a bar in this western Maryland city broke into cheers when their underdog canine candidate for mayor made a campaign appearance.

The candidate, a 15-year-old mixed breed, wore a bow under his shaggy chin for the Wednesday night meet-the-candidate rally in support of his write-in campaign.

Scott, as he is known, shook hands with voters and submitted to pats on the back in the best political tradition.

Armand M. Pannone Jr., Scott's owner, campaign manager and spokesman, told the crowd the dog was running in Cumberland's May 18 general election as an independent "canine American."

Wayne Hill Jr. said he planned to vote for Scott because "he's the underdog, and I root for the underdog." Besides, Hill said, Scott "makes more sense than the other candidates."

Pannone insisted Scott's candidacy is serious business.

"We just figured Scott has as much independence as anybody else in the city's administration," said Pannone. "He can do just the same, and that is nothing."

Retired Justice Has Changed Views On Brandeis

By STEPHEN C. SMITH
Associated Press Writer
NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Retired U.S. Supreme Court Justice Potter Stewart says he was shocked when he learned that Justice Louis D. Brandeis paid a law professor to advance his public policy views, but now believes there was nothing wrong with the arrangement.

"I soon began asking myself: 'What is so shocking about it?'" Stewart said. "I know by reputation, and at least by history, that Justice Brandeis remained a strong ideologue and maybe it was better for him to do these things indirectly and not by direct action."

"It would have been quite wrong of him to use his office to be influential. And that he held the office, maybe it was right not to do so in any public way. So maybe I was wrong to be 'shocked,'" Stewart said.

Brandeis died in 1941;

Frankfurter died in 1965. Stewart, who retired in July after 23 years on the high court, is in residence at Yale for two weeks.

On other issues, he said he fears that conservative pressure to limit the powers of federal judges in emotional issues like abortion, school busing and school prayer could succeed and upset the constitutional balance of powers.

Legislation pending before Congress would limit the ability of federal judges to use busing to achieve racial desegregation, curtail the availability of abortion and even limit Supreme Court jurisdiction to ban prayer from the classroom.

"As a citizen, I'm against all such legislation because it distorts the balance of the functions of the three branches (of the federal government) which has been accepted by the American people since the days of Chief Justice John Marshall," Stewart said. Marshall was chief justice from 1801 to 1835.

Stewart said it was "almost an insult" to give justices liberal or conservative labels. He contends justices never set out to establish policy, but sometimes can't help doing so because of the nature of the law and the issues they must decide.

"I think to say one is a great liberal judge or a great conservative judge is almost a contradiction in terms. You can't be a great judge if you allow your ideology to distort your views and duty as a judge," said Stewart, who graduated from Yale College in 1937 and Yale Law School in 1941.

"I never thought that I, as a justice of the Supreme Court, was making policy except so far as necessarily any judge, whenever he decides any case, is doing so. Nor did I think the majority of the court was.

"Every time you decide a case that results from an ambiguity in the law, in the statutes or in the Constitution, you are making policy because you're filling in one of the interstices. However you decide the case, whether you fill it in this way, that way or the other way, you're making policy."

Stewart also said he never experienced political pressure on the Supreme Court.

"The intellectual and professional pressures and the pressures of conscience were very great, but political pressure was totally absent," he said.

Expect Cuts For Schools

BURLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Public school controllers from the western half of the state say public cuts will probably have to be made in public school budgets, and they don't know where the cuts will be made.

The school officials are meeting in Burlington to review the handling of fiscal affairs regarding state funds in the school systems.

"All of us involved with the public schools are afraid cuts will have to be made and we don't know where they will be made," said Joe Porter, state controller.

"The local people have to determine what they want to provide above what the state is providing. We furnish estimates to the local systems, like the cost of fuel and electrical power, and they use those figures as guidelines for preparing estimates for what the local funds should be."

The officials also discussed auditing problems, workman's compensation, micro-computers, statistical reporting and federal programs, the controllers met for one hour today with Bridges, and for one hour to hear Porter review the proposed changes to be presented to the state Board of Education.

Report Drivers In A Collision

Cars driven by Cynthia Mooring Cox of 1016 Brownlea Drive and John Marvin Oakley of Route 3, Greenville, collided about 8 a.m. Tuesday on 10th Street, 25 feet east of the College Hill Drive intersection.

Police Department investigators estimated damage from the mishap at $1,200 to the Cox car and $200 to the Oakley vehicle.

Withdrawals Top Deposits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans withdrew more money from savings and loan associations last month than they deposited, the government reports.

The development reverses the increase in savings recorded in February, but such an increase has occurred only twice in the last 13 months — an indication of the weakened state of the savings and loan industry.

Withdrawals at federally insured savings and loans exceeded new deposits by $1.4 billion in March, compared with February's $761 million gain.

When $6.5 billion in interest was credited to savers' accounts, overall net deposits grew $5.2 billion in March — more than twice the increase in the previous month, the report said. The big jump in interest payments is typical of the end of a quarter.

NEW YORK (AP) — A broad stock market retreat extended into a third day today following the collapse of budget negotiations between President Reagan and Congress.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which tumbled 12.94 points over the past two sessions, shed another 3.99 to 848.65 at noon. The blue-chip average had been down 6.65 points at the end of the first half-hour of trading before gaining back some of its lost ground.

Two stocks fell in price for every one that rose in the mid-day tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks.

Reagan and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. failed to resolve differences on a federal spending plan Wednesday. Reagan is scheduled to make a nationally broadcast speech tonight on the budget.

The NYSE's composite index fell of all its listed common stock fell .34 to 67.21. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .74 at 272.09.

Big Board volume reached 23.39 million shares over the first two hours today, up from 21.13 million in the comparable period Wednesday.

Sterling Drug topped the NYSE active list, down 1 1/2 at 25 1/4, in trading that included a block of 313,000 shares changing hands at 25 1/4 a share and a block of 100,000 shares crossing at 26.

Jury Ruling Favors Hardy

WASHINGTON, N.C. — A Beaufort County jury has rejected a challenge to the right of neurosurgeon Ira M. Hardy II, who has a medical practice and a home in Greenville, to hold a seat on the Bath Board of Commissioners.

Dr. Hardy, who testified he maintained the Greenville residence only to better serve his patients and to qualify for access to Pitt County Memorial Hospital, was elected to the Bath board in 1979 and again in 1981. He has maintained a home in Bath since the mid-1970s, and has moved his voter registration and tax addresses to the Beaufort County community.

His status on the board was challenged by David C. Everett Jr., a Bath real estate agent who contended Hardy was not legally a resident of Bath. Testimony at the three-day trial indicated the two had opposed each other in a development plan proposed by Everett that was rejected by the Bath board.

Hardy's claim that he was a Bath resident previously had been upheld by county and state election officials.

A jury of nine women and three men took only 10 minutes to rule in Hardy's favor Wednesday. Everett said he would appeal the jury's decision.

Scout Camporee Begins Friday

WASHINGTON, N.C. — Over 3,000 Boy Scouts and adult leaders, including approximately 500 from throughout Pitt County, are expected to take part in the East Carolina Council's annual camporee beginning Friday.

The three-day event, which concludes following campsite worship services Sunday morning, will be held at Camp Bonner North, the council's permanent scouting facilities on the Pamlico River near Washington.

The theme for this year's camporee is "Footsteps of the Founder."

Area scout executive Bob Moseley said Pitt County towns will send 40 patrols and some 500 Scouts to the camporee and a staff of 25 adult leaders will be on hand.

Heber Adams will serve as chief of the Pitt County section, designated as the gold area. Other adults assigned include Bill Pluderman, events judge; George Williams, campsite judge; and Pratt Williamson, scorekeeping.

Traffic control will be provided by members of the Greenville Police Department's Explorer Post, with detective Peter Lavin as adviser.

The Rev. Lee Parker of Farmville will conduct Sunday services. Special citations will be presented by Marine Corps Maj. Gen. Richard Kuci.

Moseley said parents and others may visit the camporee on Saturday.

Harder To Bar News By Radio

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP) — When countries attempt to bar outside news, the one medium most difficult to shut off is radio, says Jim Hill, president of a radio network in the United States.

"Newspapers, magazines and television can mostly be stopped from getting into a country. But jamming all radio broadcasts is difficult and very expensive," Hill said.

The family will receive friends Friday from 7-9 p.m. at Hardee's Funeral Chapel and at other times will be at the home, 1802-A Hopkins Drive.

Smith's No-Hitter Highlights EC Sweep

By WOODY PEELE Reflector Sports Editor Two weeks ago, Charlie Smith went to the mound against Atlantic Christian and was chased after less than two innings, having given up seven runs on five hits and three walks. While the Pirates came back to win the game, it was less than a happy outing for the Robersonville native.

behind me," Smith said in praise of his teammates. "It's easy pitching when you get defense like that. And I felt pretty good too." Smith said that his fast ball began sinking in the third inning. "I started jamming them then. I had been getting my fast ball up and that had gotten me in trouble, but it worked well tonight after I really got started."

With a single up the middle and John Hallow provided all the Pirates needed with a homer over the fence in right. Evans and Fran Fitzgerald kept it going with singles, and Hendley finished things off with another homer, this one to left, to provide the Pirates with the final three runs in the 5-0 win.

But Atlantic Christian came back with a run in the third to tie it up. With one down, Jon Luse singled and Russ Williamson followed with another hit, moving Luse to third. He scored from there on Eric McDaniels' infield grounder.

time. Jim Woods will provide the play-by-play for the contest. That game closes out the regular season for the Pirates. They will learn on May 8 whether they will be one of the four teams selected to the ECAC-South's post-season double elimination tournament that will decide the league's NCAA representative. East Carolina is seen as one of the favored teams for selection to the tournament, along with ODU and James Madison, which will host the tournament.

Last night, however, Smith turned the tables on Atlantic Christian as the East Carolina righthander tossed a no-hitter at the Bulldogs and the Pirates completed a sweep of a doubleheader winning the second game, 5-0.

For Smith, the no-hitter was his first ever. "I've come close a few times, but this is the first."

Two of the hits were record setters. And fittingly, they both came in the fifth inning. Hallow picked up a double in the frame, his 23rd career two-bagger, erasing the old career mark of 22 set by Macon Moye (1978-80). Then, Evans followed Hallow at bat, rapping off his 56th base hit of the season, breaking another Moye record, that of 55 hits in a season, set in 1979.

In the fifth, however, AC struck for the lead, scoring twice and chasing starter Bob Davidson. Greg Baker led off with a single and with one away, Williamson singled. Both of them were little pops that fell just over the heads of the retreating infielders in the shallow outfield. McDaniels then reached on a ball hit off the glove of Davidson, loading the bases. Davidson then walked both Smith and Ruff Bailey, forcing in two runs and giving the Bulldogs a 3-1 lead.

East Carolina was paced by Evans and Fitzgerald, each with three in the opener. Evans also had two in the second game, as did Sorrell.

But it was an obviously delighted Smith that stole the evening with his gem. He walked three and struck out an equal number along the way. The closest Atlantic Christian came to a hit in the game was in the seventh inning. Designated hitter Mack Smith led off with a shot to Todd Hendley at third. Hendley had to range to his left for the ball, made the stab and just threw out Smith in a bang-bang play at first base.

Minutes later, Ruff Bailey reached when his grounder got through Hendley, but a fielder's choice, followed by a walk and a fly ball ended the game and the Pirates surrounded Smith in glee.

East Carolina grabbed the lead in the first game with a run in the second inning. Fitzgerald singled to left and courtesy runner Chuck Bishop was sacrificed up. With two away, Robert Wells singled him over for a 1-0 lead.

In the seventh, however, after leaving a man at second in the sixth, the Pirates finally managed to tie it up, forcing the extra inning. Sorrell

Says Raiders Were 'Ragtag'

LOS ANGELES, Calif. (AP) — The mayor of Oakland says the Raiders were just a "ragtag" football team without the people of that city, who began to fill the coliseum after the team contracted its use in 1966.

testified. Wilson said there was no indication by Davis at that time that he was close to an agreement with the Los Angeles Coliseum.

"To say I was upset is an understatement," Wilson said. "I always believed... I dealt with Mr. Davis in good faith. The only conclusion I can come to is that either Mr. Robertson lied to this honorable court or Mr. Davis was not negotiating in good faith. I thought that the Jan 19 session was a good, healthy meeting."

Raiders attorney Joseph Alioto, however, pointed out that Oakland officials backed off from an agreement with Davis in late January of 1980.

The city officials substituted another offer Feb. 4, which Davis found unacceptable.

Alioto asked Wilson if the substitution had constituted bad faith negotiations, to which Wilson replied, "No, not at all."

"Isn't it true that the city was holding Al Davis against his will. Was there any doubt about that?" Alioto asked.

Wilson replied: "Yes, there is. Mr. Davis can go anywhere he wants, any time he wants."

Fike Wins Girls Title; Rose Thinclads Second

WILSON — Wilson Fike rolled to victory in the Big East girls' track meet yesterday, capturing first place in five events.

Wilson Beddingfield actually won more events, winning eight, but failed to pile up enough places behind first to take either first or second.

Rose, which won only one event, finished second in the meet.

Fike finished the day with 173 points, while Rose had 123½. Beddingfield was third with 114, while Northeastern was a distant fourth with 32.

Rose's lone winner was Shelia Murphy, who captured the title in the 100-meter dash.

Laskey's Debut For Giants Good One

By The Associated Press
It wasn't bad for a first major league start — a three-hit shutout and an RBI single to boot.
"This is the first dream-come-true in the big leagues for me," Bill Laskey said Wednesday after pitching the San Francisco Giants to a 7-0 victory over the Montreal Expos. "A lot of fans and friends in Toledo are going to read about it and say, 'I can't believe he did it.' I won't believe it until I read it."
At any rate, Laskey's parents came to San Francisco from Toledo, Ohio, to watch their son's fine debut. That alone made him nervous.
"I was nervous the whole first inning," he said. "But then I settled down and started getting ahead of the batters. I didn't think people knew me here, but then they started chanting my name by the end of the game."

Laskey's teammates, and Manager Frank Robinson, then gave him a big hand in the dressing room.
"This is a shot in the arm for the whole club," Robinson said. "He was the last one we cut in spring training, but he knew if he stayed in the groove, he'd be back soon. He's in the rotation now."
Laskey, called up last week from Phoenix where he had a 1.29 earned run average, pitched no-hit ball for 32-3 innings before yielding a double to Al Oliver. The 24-year-old Laskey gave up a pair of singles in the fifth, then retired the final 14 hitters he faced.

The Giants took a 3-0 lead in the fourth with the help of five singles. Jack Clark singled home one run, Jeff Ransom's sacrifice fly delivered another and Laskey's first major league hit, a hard grounder between first and second, capped the rally.
Bill Gullickson, 1-1, took the loss, becoming the first Montreal pitcher to fail to go at least six innings in a start this season. He gave up three runs in the four innings worked.
Elsewhere in the National League, Philadelphia beat Los Angeles 9-3, New York edged San Diego 5-4 in 15 innings, St. Louis tripped Houston 5-4, Chicago blanked Cincinnati 6-0 and Atlanta beat Pittsburgh 7-6 in 10 innings.

Phillies 9, Dodgers 3
Pete Rose tied an NL record with his ninth career five-hit game, and Philadelphia scored all its runs in the last two innings, including a six-run ninth, to come from behind to beat the Dodgers.
Bob Dernier's double broke a 3-3 tie for the Phillies in their big ninth inning and Ivan DeJesus contributed a two-run single.

Rose singled his first three appearances, doubled in the eighth inning, and singled again in the ninth. His ninth five-hit game and first since 1978, ties Max Carey. The major-league record of 14 five-hit games is held by Ty Cobb.
"Any time you get five hits, you've got to be happy — you dream about those kind of games," the 41-year-old Rose said. "I was just happy to get the double in the eighth and get the tying run to second and give us a chance to hit (in the ninth)."

Mets 5, Padres 4
Mookie Wilson led off the 15th inning with a triple and scored on a sacrifice fly by Bob Bailor as New York beat San Diego and halted the Padres' winning streak at 11 games.
The winning rally came off Gary Lucas, 0-1, after the reliever had pitched four strong innings, giving up only Wilson's hit and striking out four. Pete Falcone, 2-0, was the winner.

The Padres jumped on former teammate Randy Jones early, scoring four unearned runs en route to a 4-1 lead after four innings. But the Mets chipped away and finally tied it 4-4 in the sixth on a two-out RBI single by Hubie Brooks.
Cardinals 3, Astros 4
David Green's two-run single capped a four-run sixth inning that led St. Louis over Houston. The Cardinals trailed 3-1 at the start of the sixth against Houston right-hander Joe Niekro. Lonnie Smith's grounder bruised the index finger on Niekro's right hand, however, forcing Dave Smith, 0-2, to take over two batters later. Smith eventually absorbed the setback as the Cards batted around in the inning.

"I just said to myself that if I hit it to the right side, they couldn't get a double play," said Green, whose winning hit through the right side came with one out. "I hit it hard enough. It went through. (St. Louis Manager) Whitey (Herzog) told me if they threw a strike, don't take it, just swing away."
Braves 7, Pirates 6
Shortstop Dale Berra's error on a two-out bouncer by pinch-hitter Bob Watson brought home Bob Horner from third with the winning run in the 10th inning for Atlanta. The victory snapped a five-game losing streak for the Braves.
Horner started the winning rally with a two-out walk, and moved to third on Chris Chambliss' double off Rod Scurry 1-1, before Kent Tekulve came into the game to face Watson, who was hitting for Bruce Benedict. Rick Camp, 4-1, was the winner.
The Pirates had tied the game 6-6 with a run in the ninth, on Dave Parker's RBI single.

Royals Get The Hits To Snap Boston Win Streak

By The Associated Press
The inning that helped Kansas City snap Boston's eight-game winning streak came at the right price, said Red Sox Manager Ralph Houk.
"The big inning was pretty cheap — one home run off the right-field foul pole in the first inning, when the Royals scored five runs."
"Everything they hit was a base hit whether they hit the ball good or bad," Houk said. "When that starts happening there isn't much you can do."
George Brett started the Kansas City first with a double, and Amos Otis drew a walk from Boston lefty John Tudor, 3-1. McRae, a right-handed hitter, then sliced an 0-2 pitch from Tudor down the right-field line, which measures only 302 feet. Singles by Jerry Martin, Frank White, Dennis Werth and Greg Pryor produced the final two runs of the inning.
McRae said he wanted to pull the ball over Fenway's "Green Monster" in left field, but he couldn't get the right pitch.
"I just naturally try to pull the ball and get it up in the air here," he said. "On the home run, though, the pitch was on the outside of the plate and I just went out and got it. I thought it was going to go foul. In a normal ballpark, it would have been foul."
The Royals scored their final three runs in the next inning on McRae's two-run double and an RBI single by Frank White.
Dennis Leonard, 2-1, allowed five runs on seven hits in the first three innings, but blanked the Red Sox the rest of the way for the win.
Yankees 6, Angels 0
Tommy John tossed a six-hit shutout, and the Yankees scored three of their runs in the third inning off Ken Forsch, 2-2. Consecutive doubles by Ken Griffey, Oscar Gamble and Dave Winfield produced the runs. The Yankees already had scored twice in the first inning on Griffey's RBI single and a groundout by Winfield.
The victory was John's first in four decisions and the 224th of his 18-year major league career. He walked one, struck out five and held the Angels hitless until Fred Lynn doubled with two out in the fifth.

Brewers 2, White Sox 1
Rollie Fingers shut out the White Sox on one hit over the final 22-3 innings, and Jim Gantner's single broke a 1-1 deadlock in the seventh inning. Fingers earned the victory for a 2-2 record.
Gorman Thomas started the Milwaukee seventh with a walk off Chicago left-hander Britt Burns, 2-1. Thomas went to second on a sacrifice and, one out later, Gantner drove a grounder up the middle to score Thomas.
Fingers got the call with one out in the seventh and runners on first and second. He got Ron LeFlore to hit into a forceout and fanned Tony Bernazard.
Blue Jays 6, Rangers 4
Toronto pinch-hitter Rance Mulliniks smacked a two-run single in the seventh inning that snapped a 4-4 tie and handed Texas its sixth loss in a row.
The victory gave Toronto a sweep of the two-game series and was the first time this season the Blue Jays have won consecutive games.
Jim Clancy earned his first victory in three decisions, getting relief help from Joey McLaughlin in the eighth. McLaughlin yielded homers to Buddy Bell and Lee Mazzilli.
Indians 6, Mariners 1
Len Barker and Tom Brennan combined on a four-hitter, and the Indians scored six runs in the first inning to end their four-game losing streak. Barker, 3-1, yielded a run on three hits, and left after seven innings when he was troubled by a bone spur in his right elbow.
Twins 4, Tigers 2
Randy Johnson and Gary Gaetti each homered in the fourth inning as Minnesota ended a four-game losing streak. The Twins led 1-0 when Johnson led off the fourth with a solo shot. After John Castino walked, Gaetti hit his homer, giving Minnesota a 4-0 lead.

A's 6-1, Orioles 2-5
Cliff Johnson and Dwayne Murphy hit home runs for Oakland in the first game, and John Lowenstein and Eddie Murray homered for Baltimore in the nightcap.
Mike Norris, 1-2, scattered five hits and struck out six in Oakland's victory.

East Carolina Turns Out Its Share Of Pro Players

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer
The joy of cable television is that the insatiable sports fan can get his fill of his favorite event. One man's thrill can be another man's agony, however.
When the National Football League conducted its 47th draft of collegiate talent this week, not only were professional football fans able to find out who their favorite teams claimed, but the players were also able to find out where they were going — eventually.
In Greenville, two East Carolina University players were sweating bullets. When the Entertainment and Sports Programming Network concluded its coverage of the NFL draft, offensive tackle Tootie Robbins and defensive end George Crump had no idea where they were headed.
Indeed, they were both fairly confident they'd be drafted. But after the first two rounds had concluded, neither Crump nor Robbins had been notified.
That waiting ended in the fourth round. Crump was selected by the New England Patriots, the second team to choose in that round. Robbins followed five choices later, a pick of the St. Louis Cardinals.
Do not think the pair of draftees from East Carolina are drops in the football bucket, be assured that the Pirate football program has turned out its share of NFL members.

The streak started in 1974 when linebacker Danny Kepley, snubbed by the NFL, took his talents to Canada. He is now one of the premier defenders in the Canadian Football League as a member of the Edmonton Eskimos.
Ten more Pirates have paraded into the pro ranks. Most notable are Zack Valentine, a reserve linebacker and special teams standout with the Pittsburgh Steelers, and Tony Collins, a pleasant surprise for the Patriots in his 1981 rookie season.
Crump came to ECU as a 220-pound "weakling." About that time, the Pirates were initiating a weight-lifting regimen. Now, the Chesapeake, Va., native is going to Foxboro at 6-foot-4, 260 pounds. He learned of his selection by telephone from the Patriot offices.
"I really expected to go between the fourth and sixth rounds," he said. "Then, when it got to 5:30 and they were halfway through the third round, I figured I'd have to wait until (Wednesday)."
"I was walking around in my room. I couldn't stand still. I had to lie down awhile," he added.
Crump said when he finally got the phone call, he had to ask when his name was drawn. "I almost went wild then. It was a great shock to me."
Robbins wasn't as patient, but it could also be said that his desire got in the way.

"I was hoping to go in the first two rounds. I won't say I was disappointed because I never said I was going in the first two rounds," the 6-5, 270-pounder said. "I felt like I should have gone in the second or third rounds."
Watching television didn't help his nerves either.
"When I saw the first round go by and the second round, I figured it was about my time. I told my roommate I've got to go in the third round," Robbins said. "It was pretty hard watching the first three rounds go by and not getting drafted."
Robbins said he talked with Cardinals' head coach Jim Hanifan and found out what he needed to do to become a member of the squad.
"He said the only thing that he sees that I need a little improvement on is my pass protection," Robbins said. "He said the coaching staff would enjoy working with me because I have a nice attitude."
Crump literally grew to become one of East Carolina's outstanding defenders. He hopes he can continue the good work, now that his ultimate dream has come true.
"You say you would like to play professional football, but you never think you will," he said. "It's a strange feeling just to be chosen as one of the few. You feel like everything you've done in the past has paid off."

hitless until Fred Lynn doubled with two out in the fifth.
Brewers 2, White Sox 1
Rollie Fingers shut out the White Sox on one hit over the final 22-3 innings, and Jim Gantner's single broke a 1-1 deadlock in the seventh inning. Fingers earned the victory for a 2-2 record.
Gorman Thomas started the Milwaukee seventh with a walk off Chicago left-hander Britt Burns, 2-1. Thomas went to second on a sacrifice and, one out later, Gantner drove a grounder up the middle to score Thomas.
Fingers got the call with one out in the seventh and runners on first and second. He got Ron LeFlore to hit into a forceout and fanned Tony Bernazard.
Blue Jays 6, Rangers 4
Toronto pinch-hitter Rance Mulliniks smacked a two-run single in the seventh inning that snapped a 4-4 tie and handed Texas its sixth loss in a row.
The victory gave Toronto a sweep of the two-game series and was the first time this season the Blue Jays have won consecutive games.
Jim Clancy earned his first victory in three decisions, getting relief help from Joey McLaughlin in the eighth. McLaughlin yielded homers to Buddy Bell and Lee Mazzilli.
Indians 6, Mariners 1
Len Barker and Tom Brennan combined on a four-hitter, and the Indians scored six runs in the first inning to end their four-game losing streak. Barker, 3-1, yielded a run on three hits, and left after seven innings when he was troubled by a bone spur in his right elbow.
Twins 4, Tigers 2
Randy Johnson and Gary Gaetti each homered in the fourth inning as Minnesota ended a four-game losing streak. The Twins led 1-0 when Johnson led off the fourth with a solo shot. After John Castino walked, Gaetti hit his homer, giving Minnesota a 4-0 lead.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Air Forbes won, the only unbeaten horse in the Kentucky Derby field, has a lot of tradition to overcome.

He never raced as a 2-year-old and he's an Ohio-bred.

The last time there was a Derby winner who didn't race as a 2-year-old was 100 years ago when Apollo captured the Run for the Roses.

The last Ohio-bred Derby winner was Wintergreen in 1909.

"Obviously, he doesn't know he's from Ohio," said owner Edward Anchel. "And he doesn't know that he would be only the second unraced 2-year-old to win. Of course, we don't know that he can't read the newspaper, so we're trying to keep that away from him."

More than 20 3-year-olds were expected to be entered today at Churchill Downs for the 108th Derby, first leg of thoroughbred racing's Triple Crown. However, the field is limited to 20 starters based on money earnings.

Some other top contenders include El Baba, the Louisiana Derby winner, Santa Anita Derby winner Muttering, Cassalaria, a one-eyed colt, and Star Gallant, second in both the Derby Trial and Florida Derby.

Numerous losses of top Kentucky Derby contenders because of illness or injury, including early favorite Timley Writer, and the apparent lack of a real standout has prompted the late flurry of entrants for the 1 1/4-mile race, worth $250,000-added.

"It doesn't matter if there is 15 or 20," said Air Forbes' trainer, Frank LaBocchetta, a 42-year-old former bricklayer from New York. "I have a superior horse. There's nobody better."

The colt's trainer also feels he has the best jockey in Angel Cordero, who rode Air Forbes' sire, Bold Forbes, to victory in the 1976 Derby.

"I couldn't ask for a better jockey," LaBocchetta said. "I'm sure Angel will do what's necessary when it counts. Air Forbes' earnings of $173,880 guaranteed him a spot in the field."

Despite his unbeaten record, Air Forbes won is suspect because he has been to the races only four times in his career, making his first start March 4, and was not impressive in winning the Wood Memorial April 17 at Aqueduct. The Wood, over 1 1/4 miles, has produced such recent Derby winners as Pleasant Colony last year, Seattle Slew (1977), Bold Forbes and Foolish Pleasure (1975).

But Air Forbes won was hard-pressed to beat Shimatoree, a non-Derby starter, by a head in the Wood with a time of 1:51. Cordero blamed the colt's ordinary final quarter-mile on a strong wind that hit the horses at the top of the stretch.

It was unlike his first stakes start, the one-mile Gotham at Aqueduct April, when he blew by Shimatoree in the stretch for 3/4 length victory in 1:35.3.

"Time doesn't mean anything to me," said Cordero after working out the colt earlier this week. "He feels stronger for this race than he did for the Wood. I think he's the best chance I have of winning the Derby since Bold Forbes."

Seattle Slew was the last Derby winner to go into the race unbeaten, winning three times at 2 and the Flamingo and Wood at 3.

Another Derby prospect, Stephen's Peskoff's Lejoli, joined the list of ailing Wednesday. Lejoli, winless in six starts this year, including a last-place finish in the Blue Grass Stakes has a throat ailment and will be operated on, according to trainer Leon Blusiewicz.

On Tuesday, Arkansas Derby winner Hostage withdrew because of a fractured sesamoid, suffered during a workout.

Dear Charlie:

At the risk of boring you, here's another hand from the NatWest Trophy event. It shows you what a fine player my partner, Paul Chemla, is. The auction undoubtedly needs an explanation, since it confused us as much as it will the reader. West's two no trump opening bid in theory shows five clubs and a five-card major suit. I was sure that the suit had to be spades, so I thought partner's spade bids were cue-bids—that is, until he bid the suit a third time. Who can blame West for doubling? West led a diamond, and when dummy appeared Paul still couldn't be sure whether West had five hearts or whether he had violated his system. Had he known, he could have won the queen of diamonds and run the nine of spades.

As it was, he won the queen of diamonds and, to the dismay of the large audience watching on Vu-Graph, he continued with a low spade to the ace. But the spectators had not reckoned on my partner's skill.

Paul cashed the ace-king of diamonds—West's third-best opening lead had been revealing—and discarded a heart from his hand. Next came the ace of hearts. West realized that, if he ruffed, he would be end played, so he discarded a club. But that was merely postponing the hour of reckoning. Declarer continued with a spade to the king and another spade. West could score his two trump tricks, but then he had to lead a club away from his king into Paul's combined A-Q tenace. Paul lost only the two trump tricks for an absolute top.

Best regards,
Omar

Panel Of Governors Talk Future Needs

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt and three former North Carolina governors say the state must be prepared for the future, but agree there is reason to be optimistic.

Participating in a discussion before 100 people on the North Carolina A&T State University campus Wednesday, Hunt, Dan Moore, Bob Scott and Jim Holshouser all said water resources, responsive politicians and cooperation between cities rank among the state's greatest future needs.

The discussion was part of a Commission on the Future of North Carolina meeting, and was led by University of North Carolina President William Friday. It will be televised on UNC public television stations Wednesday night and Sunday afternoon.

Moore, 76, who was governor from 1965 to 1969, says there's a need for planning future water supplies and environmental protection.

Scott, 52, says the state should begin to designate areas for future reservoirs and protect them from development. He said cities have to be prepared to share water sources.

Holshouser, 48, the only GOP governor elected this century, said state and local governments must cooperate to end duplication of services. A Southern Pines attorney who was governor from 1973-1977, he says the state will have to change its perspective on growth as the South moves into the mainstream of national life.

Scott says the state will have to change its perspective on other matters as well.

"Money is not as plentiful," Scott said. "No longer are there two cars and boat in every garage."

He said during his administration from 1969 to 1973, "We never dreamed the situation would be like it is today." And the situation may change even more dramatically by 2000.

"We may change our lifestyle but we will evolve into a lifestyle no doubt better than what we know today," Scott said.

GOP Fund-Raisers Are Gearing Up For Races

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Financial reports for the first quarter of 1982 indicate that possible Republican challengers in the 3rd and 4th Congressional Districts are gearing up for major campaigns.

William W. Cobey Jr. of Chapel Hill, a possible 4th District candidate, and Eugene "Red" McDaniel of Buies Creek, an expected 3rd District candidate, face primary opposition for the right to challenge Democratic incumbents.

McDaniel, who has scheduled his formal announcement of candidacy for this morning, reports raising $24,718 during the first quarter, with expenditures of $19,510 and $5,207 in on-hand cash.

Most of his money came from contributors, including eight who gave $1,000 apiece.

Admah Lanier, Scotts Hill landowner and developer, is a declared GOP candidate in the 3rd District, but has not filed a report.

Cobey's report to the North Carolina Campaign Reporting Office showed that he had raised $35,285 by the end of March. That gives him a wide margin over the district's lone announced GOP candidate, Leo Tew, who reported $190.

Cobey reported expenditures of $4,224 with cash on hand March 31 of $31,060 and no debts. Tew reported spending $2,171, having no cash on hand and debts of $5,630.

U.S. Rep. Ike F. Andrews of Cary, the 4th District's five-term Democratic incumbent, reported raising $7,102, spending $7,102 and having $6,898 on hand.

The 3rd District incumbent, Democrat Charles O. Whitley of Mount Olive, reported raising $1,250, spending $2,251 and having $33,764 on hand.

H.M. "Mickey" Michaux Jr. of Durham, one of three announced Democratic candidates for the 2nd District seat being vacated by retiring Rep. L.H. Fountain, reported raising $14,698. He listed expenditures of $15,354, $5,474 on hand and $6,131 in debts.

Rep. Walter B. Jones, Democratic incumbent in the 1st District, reported raising $19,650, spending $6,770 and having $91,521 on hand. Rep. Stephen L. Neal, D-Winston-Salem, reports raising $48,399 for his 5th District race while spending $16,956 and having $22,888 on hand.

Composite Of A TV-Addict

BOSTON (AP) — People who watch a lot of television exercise the least and smoke the most, according to a survey of health habits.

The survey of Massachusetts residents found that overall, 43 percent of the people are overweight, 33 percent smoke, 28 percent get no exercise, and 12 percent indulge in "robust alcohol use."

However, people who watch more than five hours of TV a day are markedly less likely than usual to exercise. And these folks are heavy smokers. Almost half of the TV addicts use tobacco.

The study, conducted by the Massachusetts Department of Public Health, also found that well-educated people have the healthiest lifestyles.

"The advantages of social position may well include behavior that enriches physical health," the researchers wrote. "Since a healthy lifestyle requires neither wealth nor higher education, preventive medicine and health education can perhaps produce their most profound impact within less advantaged strata of our society."

The researchers surveyed 1,091 people and published the results in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

The survey found that almost 13 percent say they run or jog, and 56 percent claim to exercise at least twice a week. People who did not finish high school are the least likely to exercise.

Robust drinkers — those who have four or more drinks at a sitting at least twice a week — tend to have a high school education or less. However, over 90 percent of those with college educations or household incomes over $20,000 a year also drink at least once a week.

Meanwhile, people who did not complete high school are the most likely to be overweight, the study said.

Celebrity, Pariah Due Autobiography

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Richard Rodriguez remembers the moment in 1975 when he turned down Yale, rebuffed the many Ivy League universities which courted him as a professor and began his protest of educational programs which "rewarded me for having brown skin."

On that day, Rodriguez, who had excelled as an English literature scholar, left academia and set out on an inward journey which would ultimately thrust him into the public spotlight.

Seven years later, his painfully personal autobiography, "Hunger for Memory,"

The Education of Richard Rodriguez," has made him an instant hit in some circles and a pariah in others. Some Mexican-Americans have accused him of being "a brown Uncle Tom."

"They will say that a man like me gave up too much, that I became an Anglophile, that I was cut off from my heritage," Rodriguez says. "I'm a public man, an assimilated American. I know how to survive in this society."

Rodriguez, 36, has produced in the autobiography of his youth a powerful tract condemning bilingual education, denouncing affirmative action and advocating the cultural assimilation of Hispanics into the American mainstream. Bilingual education — a method of providing Spanish-language teaching in American schools — is repugnant to Rodriguez, a kind of "cultural apartheid," which he says isolates the immigrant from the public world in which he or she must live.

"I'm talking about what language means to the heart of a child," Rodriguez said in an interview, his unaccented English words spilling out in a torrent. His parents were born in Mexico.

"I know Mexican-American families that have been here for five generations and still speak Spanish and live in a Spanish society," he said. "They go on in that isolation of the ghetto world." His vigorous opposition to affirmative action came later in his educational life — years after he had won scholarships to Stanford University and Columbia University as a graduate student, and studied abroad on a Fulbright Fellowship.

"I was being given benefits because there were Mexican-Americans who were disadvantaged," he said. "I became the lucky one. But my luck depended on their being absent from the university. It produced a sense of guilt that you could never ameliorate. Was I supposed to go back to the barrio and teach Milton and Shakespeare?"

"I was moving away from what my life had been and yet I was benefitting from my skin being brown," he says. "I was willing to get scholarships for my ability, but not because I had brown skin. I don't want to be valued for the wrong reason."

When the offers began pouring in from Yale and elsewhere, he agonized, because he realized that other non-minority students had no such offers.

"I will not teach as long as affirmative action policies are used in hiring," he says. "I don't pretend to be in any sense a minority."

Fearful of being dubbed a reactionary, he stresses that he favors affirmative action for those who truly need it — the lower classes and the very young. If it is to work, he says, it must begin in grade school.

For Rodriguez, it was different. The nuns at his Catholic school in Sacramento, Calif., forced the 6-year-old, who spoke mostly Spanish, to speak only English. When he retreated to silence, they visited his parents and suggested the use of English at home.

"One day in school I raised my hand to volunteer an answer," he writes. "I spoke out in a loud voice. And I did not think it remarkable when the entire class understood. That day, I moved very far from the disadvantaged child I had been only days earlier. The belief, the calming assurance that I belonged in public, had at last taken hold."

SURVIVING — At 36, Richard Rodriguez has become a celebrity in some circles and a pariah in others, with his autobiography "Hunger for Memory, the Education of Richard Rodriguez". (AP Laserphoto)

Video Games Invading Homes

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — About 8 percent of the nation's homes now have video games, according to one manufacturer who forecasts that this figure will reach 50 percent by 1985.

"The industry enjoyed a billion dollars in sales in 1981 and should more than double that in the coming year," says Jim Levy, president of Activision, a designer and producer of home video games.

Space Station Said Next Step

By IKE FLORES
Associated Press Writer
Cocoa Beach, Fla. (AP) — A space platform that would unfold in orbit like a butterfly and grow giant solar wings was the hot topic at the 19th annual Space Congress.

"It's a natural outgrowth of the shuttle program," Dr. Hans M. Mark of NASA told reporters Wednesday night before addressing 500 participants at the space conference at Patrick Air Force Base.

Mark said whether or not Congress commits funds for a space platform, "we're going to go out and do it."

Mark said he hopes a space platform would be placed in orbit in this decade.

He said the National Aeronautics and Space Administration had not yet presented a firm proposal to Congress because "we don't know which way we're going to go yet..."

The Soviet Union announced April 20 it had placed a new space station, Salyut-7, in orbit. An earlier space station, the Salyut-6, reportedly is slipping from orbit after having been closed down during the last manned Soviet mission in May 1981. It had been home to 16 cosmonaut teams, including Soviets Valery Ryumen and Leonid Popov, who set the space endurance record of 185 days in 1980.

Mark, who served as secretary of the Air Force from 1979 to 1981, found fault with the Soviet program, saying they should first develop a reusable space shuttle.

"The Russians are going at it backward," he said.

The Space Congress is an annual symposium dedicated to the exchange of space science and technological information. It draws NASA, military and private industry specialists who present technical papers, conduct panel discussions and give speeches.

Engineers for two NASA contractors, TRW Inc. and McDonnell Douglas Corp., discussed prototypes for the space platform, which could be used to launch, deploy, retrieve and maintain satellites or other spacecraft.

Larry Morata of McDonnell Douglas said a basic space platform would go up on the shuttle while folded in a cocoon fashion. Once in orbit, the shuttle's robot arm would place it in space and help to unfold it "butterfly fashion," he said.

Additional shuttle flights then would bring more modules and "wings, legs and feet, which would be added to make the platform grow eventually into a manned space station," Morata said.

Marshall Norvick of TRW said space scientists are seeing "more and more interest in the commercialization of space." The platform would allow versatile operations such as Earth observation stations, an infrared telescope beam developed for the shuttle and astronomy and weather satellites, he said.

Paul Goldsmith of TRW and Martin Gerbasi of Lockheed Inc. presented a technical report on the development of "solar power wings" to be added to space platforms to provide the heavy power demands necessary for their different functions. Sufficient power is especially important in placing satellites in higher orbits from the platforms.

The NASA contractors are working on the development of light-weight, fold-out designs of solar power panels, which would be attached to the space station in modular form. These would permit flexibility and greater efficiency in the operations of the space station. The Space Congress, which continues through Friday, is devoted this year to the issue of how space can benefit mankind. Its panel sessions include concepts for future projects and future shuttle cargo plans. Other topics being discussed are space manufacturing operations, commercial applications and energy choices for the future.

Admit Misplacing Seized Narcotics

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Narcotics agents testifying in a drug trial acknowledged Tuesday they misplaced nearly 3,500 Quaaludes, worth thousands of dollars.

The agents, testifying in the trial of Jorge Alvarez, told lawyers they couldn't find the 3,460 white pills Alvarez is accused of having in his possession.

City-County Bureau of Narcotics agent Bill Simons testified he and other agents believe the pills were destroyed by mistake in February, when the bureau burned several hundred thousand dollars worth of seized drugs.

On questioning from Alvarez's attorney, Assistant Public Defender James Parish, Simons admitted the agents didn't know where the pills were, though they did have the 92 pounds of marijuana Alvarez is charged with having in his possession.

Outside court, narcotics bureau director Ray Davis said he is satisfied the pills, worth about $3.50 each on the street, were inadvertently destroyed during the annual cleaning.

Davis said two pickup truck loads of narcotics worth well over half a million dollars were burned at a secret site in the county Feb. 11.

Alvarez, 25, is being tried on four trafficking charges stemming from an undercover drug buy and raid at a local barbecue Dec. 9 1980.

Backing For An Annual Fuel Rate Adjustment

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A move to allow fewer increases in fuel adjustments under state utility reform has gained momentum, with Gov. Jim Hunt calling for a limit of one fuel-rate increase per year.

Legislators, state regulators and utility reformers agreed in general Wednesday the present rate adjustment every four months was too frequent.

"I think it's clear that whatever we do, there ought not to be a decision on fuel rates more frequently than once a year," Hunt said, following a meeting of the Legislature's Utility Review Committee.

Hunt, who said he has not made a decision on whether to seek a repeal of the present law, was not alone in his opposition to the numerous fuel-rate increases each year.

The North Carolina Utilities Commission earlier this month voted privately to call for repeal of the law, but then changed its vote and instead called for restoration of its authority previously denied by the courts.

The commission's Public Staff Director Robert Fischbach asked for legislation to merge fuel cost changes into general rate cases which are generally held about once a year.

Commission Chairman Robert Koger told the committee that the commission also would favor less frequent adjustments, preferably once a year.

"The public is tired of these frequent rate cases," he said.

Executives of Carolina Power & Light Co., Duke Power Co. and Virginia Electric & Power Co. told the committee they were opposed to Fischbach's plan because merging the fuel proceedings with general rate increases would threaten company finances. They also say it would anger customers because rate increases would be too high if passed all at once.

The Legislature will convene June 14, but the committee took no action on legislation for that time. The committee assigned state Rep. George W. Miller Jr., D-Durham, to meet with committee staff members and draw alternative proposals.

Consider Additional Food Giveaways

By BOB FICK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, under attack from several quarters for its cuts in federal nutrition programs, is considering giving away more surplus government food to poor people.

"It is possible the government may be making more initiatives in that area," said Mary Jarratt, assistant agriculture secretary for food and consumer service.

The administration already has a nationwide program to distribute cheese to the needy and is testing the feasibility of a similar program for surplus butter.

The Agriculture Department spends billions of dollars a year to purchase and store surplus farm commodities, especially dairy products.

While the dairy surplus is the government's major problem at the moment, Ms. Jarratt told the House Agriculture nutrition subcommittee Wednesday the department also has "some volume" of nearly a score of other staple commodities, including honey, flour and oats. She declined to say whether any of those items would be included in an expanded free distribution program.

Meanwhile, a coalition of welfare and senior citizens groups called the All-Peoples Congress has urged an "immediate release of the billions of pounds of so-called surplus food that is being hoarded by the government in warehouses across the country."

The administration has already won major spending cuts in food stamps, school lunches and a summer feeding program for poor children. It is now proposing further cuts in food stamps and in special supplemental food programs for infants, children and pregnant women.

"We know there is a vast segment of the American community which is undernourished, and if we could get more food into their stomachs, they would be less drag on our health system, they would be more educable," said Rep. Fred Richmond, D-N.Y., subcommittee chairman.

"We should encourage organizations dealing with poor people to use our surplus commodities," Richmond said. "It would be an enormous help to the taxpayers."

Ms. Jarratt said the administration is evaluating the commodity stockpiles but, "I'm not at liberty to say what we might do with them."

A major administration concern about free distribution has been the impact it would have on conventional marketing of the same privately owned commodities.

However, Reagan announced late last year a giveaway of 30 million pounds of surplus cheese to the poor and quickly increased the amount to 100 million pounds.

Two months ago, the department launched a pilot project in 10 northeast Iowa counties for free distribution of 40,000 pounds of surplus butter.

Although that program has yet to be formally evaluated, Ms. Jarratt told the subcommittee, "It is possible the government will make a broader butter distribution."

She said about 75 million pounds of the cheese have been ordered by states and charitable organizations eligible to distribute it and more than half that amount has actually been given to poor families. She predicted that more would be made available once the 100 million pounds has been claimed.

Youth Fitness Not Good, Says AAU

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly half the kids in America are so out of shape that they flunked a standard fitness test, a study shows.

The analysis by the Amateur Athletic Union also showed that in some categories the average teen-ager's performance declined after age 14.

For example, the typical 15-year-old boy takes 13.3 seconds to sprint 100 yards while 14-year-old boys cover the distance in 12.6 seconds.

The typical 17-year-old girl can do only 38 modified push-ups in two minutes, compared with 43 performed by an average 12-year-old girl.

Dr. Wynn F. Updyke, associate dean for graduate studies at Indiana University's School of Health, Physical Education and Recreation, attributed the falling off — or leveling off — after age 14 to the fact that many schools drop compulsory gym and physical education after the eighth grade.

At a news conference Wednesday, Updyke made public the analysis based on the performance of 7,600 youngsters who were chosen at random from four million children given the tests during the last two school years.

"Although the basic standards are designed to be attainable by the average healthy youngster in each age and sex group, only 43 percent of participants were able to achieve them during the 1979-80 and 1980-81 academic years," a summary said.

Updyke said there were no significant differences in test results by geographic region and the scores in 1980-81 were no better or worse than those the previous year.

He said the standards for what the average healthy youngster should be able to do in tests were arbitrarily fixed, but based on AAU testing that goes back 39 years.

To meet the standards, a 14-year-old boy would have to be able to do 41 bent-knee sit-ups in a minute and 38 push-ups in two minutes, jump a distance of six feet, three inches from a standing start and run a mile in seven minutes, 42 seconds.

A 14-year-old girl would have to do 34 sit-ups, 42 push-ups and a five-foot, five-inch standing long jump and run a mile in seven minutes, 48 seconds.

The physical fitness testing program is sponsored by the Amateur Athletic Union with underwriting from Nabisco Brands, Inc.

Less Bombing In U.S. In '81

WASHINGTON (AP) — There were 9 percent fewer bombings in the United States last year than in 1980, and fewer deaths and injuries as the result of such incidents, the FBI reports.

FBI Director William Webster, using preliminary figures, said Wednesday there were 1,135 bombings in 1981, down from 1,249 in 1980. Deaths were down from 34 to 31 in 1980 and injuries declined from 160 in 1981 to 130, the FBI reported.

Explosive bombings were down 13 percent in 1981, when they figured in 728 incidents, the agency said. Firebombings remained relatively stable, accounting for 407 incidents.

Estimated property damage was up last year, however, from 1980's $12.6 million to $65 million — mainly because of attacks in Puerto Rico on an Air National Guard installation near San Juan Airport and on two power substations.

Hepatitis Shots To Parishioners

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Durham health officials say 125 Holy Infant Catholic Church parishioners have gotten shots to protect themselves from infectious hepatitis after the pastor who administered Easter communion got the disease.

Durham County Health Department Director Dr. John Fletcher is urging all parishioners who attended the services to get the shots of immune globulin.

Fletcher says there is no known instance of hepatitis having been transmitted through the Communion ritual, but urged immunization as a safety precaution.

Infectious hepatitis is transmitted principally through the contamination of hands, food or water. The incubation period for the virus ranges from 15 to 50 days and averages between 28 and 30 days. Symptoms include fever, malaise, loss of appetite, nausea and abdominal discomfort.

According to Fletcher, the Rev. Jim Behan apparently got the disease through contact with a church parishioner who works at the Hotel Europa. He said the hotel worker prepared a meal for Behan at the church about two weeks before the priest became ill.

The parishioner was the first of two Hotel Europa employees to be confirmed as having infectious, or viral hepatitis type A. Both helped prepare pastries at the hotel.

Orange County health officials have suggested that anyone who ate pastries at the hotel between April 6 and April 20 be immunized against hepatitis.

Fletcher said approximately 150 persons have already gotten shots of immune globulin at the Durham Health Department.

Jerry Robinson, director of the Orange County Health Department, said about 70 persons have come to the department for shots and others have been immunized at doctors' offices and hospitals.

Church Secretary Mrs. Joanne Tamayo said the parishioner who worked at the hotel was hospitalized Easter Monday and Behan visited him daily at the hospital. The parishioner was released from the hospital after about a week.

Mrs. Tamayo said Behan became ill April 23 and was admitted to Durham County General Hospital Monday, where he remains.

In many cases, hepatitis is a mild illness that lasts a week or two. In rare cases, it is severely disabling and lasts several months and fatal in less than one-tenth of 1 percent of the cases.

Evans St. Ext. And Pitt Plaza

'Confusion Corner' Has A Relatively Safe Record

STUART, Fla. (AP)—Life in this Atlantic Coast city is uncomplicated and serene—until one encounters every driver's nightmare.

It's "Confusion Corner," where seven streets and a railroad come together to form one of the city's hubs.

It rivals Boston's every-man-for-himself rotary intersections, Mexico City's "glorietas," the dangers of rubbing bumpers with New York cab drivers and competing with those daredevil pilots who semiguide automobiles on the narrow streets of St. Thomas in the Virgin Islands.

Confusion begins with the physical makeup of the corner.

The Florida East Coast Railway tracks are slightly elevated, meaning drivers must go over a hump when crossing the intersection. In the middle of the corner—but not at its true center—is a triangular obstacle with arrows and signs mandating drivers to stay to the right.

Four of the streets are two-laned, one has three lanes, another has four and the seventh has five.

The posted signs are maddening: stop signs, railroad signs, No U-turn signs and signs that say "Do Not Enter." Some say "No Parking" while others advise that there's a hospital in the vicinity.

A few say "Keep Right," others warn of a pedestrian crossing and there are speed limit signs. Even they aren't uniform. On some streets the maximum speed is 25 mph, on others 30 mph—if you dare.

Signs advise that the Florida Turnpike lies somewhere to the west and that parking is reserved for the nearby fire department. One sign points to a non-existent Martin County Vehicle Inspection station and there are a number of slender upright posts with street names.

"I think they should tear it down and start all over again," says Teresa Holmes, sales manager of a nearby shoe store.

But most city residents disagree and want Confusion

Corner to remain as it is.

"It works very well," Mayor Joan Jefferson says proudly. "It's a little earth-shaking, but that's good for you." She calls it "Courtesy Corner."

Observers find drivers do display courtesy most of the time—but not always.

At times, the cacophony of horns and screaming motorists shatters the serenity—particularly after a train blocking Confusion Corner for a time has passed and traffic begins to move again.

No police officer is assigned to guide traffic, nor is there a traffic light of any kind. Only signs—enough of them to perplex the confused, confound the puzzled and muddle the flustered.

"Whenever we have to manually take control of Confusion Corner, it takes five officers to do it," says Police Chief Charles White. "We can't wait to get them out of there and let the signs handle the traffic."

Still, it remains one of the safest intersections in the city. Of 79 vehicular accidents in the entire city during February, only three of those were at Confusion Corner. "They were fender-benders," White says.

An explanation is that drivers encountering the maze for the first time automatically slow to a crawl as they try to collect their bearings, while veterans do the same out of respect gained through experience.

Only one merchant has dared to post a sign amidst the array of road advisories. It's dust-covered and advertises "Sleeper and Love Seat $799."

Drivers dropping their eyes to the roadway in front of their vehicles find more confusion. Directional arrows are painted in most of the lanes, plus railroad crossing and stop signs.

There are yellow lines in the streets as well as white lines. On the sides are parking lines. However, while most streets leading into Confusion Corner permit only parallel parking, diagonal parking is allowed on one. And, for some unknown reason, one two-lane street has an island in the middle.

Over the years, there have been numerous efforts to devise a mechanized system of traffic lights to control traffic at the corner—but none has materialized.

Zack Mosley, the retired writer-artist of the comic strip "Smilin' Jack" has lived in Stuart since the early 1940s. He giggles when Confusion Corner is mentioned.

"I call it 'Malfunction Junction,'" he laughs. Mosley maintains it was worse years ago.

"There used to be a double track there and my father once turned too quick and started driving up the second track until he saw a train coming. He got out of there fast, and it was then he learned that corner was pure confusion."

CONFUSION CORNER — Life in Stuart, Fla. is uncomplicated and serene — until one encounters a vehicular nightmare where seven streets and a railroad come together to form one of the city's hubs. Yet, somehow, it's one of the safest intersections in the city. (AP Laserphoto)

Grand Prix To Bring Money

DETROIT (UPI)—The Detroit Grand Prix auto race June 6 is expected to bring a much-needed cash infusion to Detroit, which has been especially hit by the economic troubles of the auto industry.

Some experts have estimated the 175-mile race featuring the world's most expensive and exotic racing cars over a 2.5-mile course in the downtown area will bring $3.4 million into the city, but mayor Coleman Young thinks that estimate "may be on the low side."

The race marks the first time Formula One Grand Prix cars have ever appeared in the Midwest. The 16-race Grand Prix circuit each year is held on four continents.

'Quest For Fire' A Thinking Man's Science Fantasy Film

Why cavemen watched their fires by night is the basic theme of director Jean-Jacques Annaud's daring cinematic presentation, "Quest For Fire," an R-rated 20th Century Fox released movie now showing at Plitt Theater.

Wherever this film may be shown — Rome, Bangkok or Greenville — viewers will have the rare pleasure of coming to their own conclusion about the dialogue. The imaginative early language utterances have been created by noted British novelist Anthony Burgess, and the gestures and body movements reasonably attributable to primitive man have been created by behavioral theorist Desmond Morris. Fortunate choices, as the two have given "Quest For Fire" an authenticity that is perhaps as near the real thing as man can reconstruct from the dim past. The magic of fire as the source of warmth, protection and the god of the home hearth is convincingly projected throughout the film.

Impressive landscapes, ranging from rugged hills to pastoral green locales to rocky caves and murky swamps, provide a sense of untouched areas that likely existed 80,000 years ago, the time of the movie's action. Locales in Scotland, Africa and Canada have been photographed by Claude Agostini in views alternating from vast sweeps of unpopulated areas to smoky close-ups.

Good choices of technology and superb photography, however, cannot alone assure a rewarding piece of entertainment. Success, whatever the genre of a movie, depends to a major degree on the quality of acting. In "Quest For Fire," the cast admirably measures up to the difficult challenge in portraying instinctive qualities of fear, joy, anger, jealousy and love though denied the familiar framework of a known language.

The large cast of unknowns is headed by Everett McGill as Naoh and Rae Dawn Chong as Ika in the primitive romantic leads. Ron Pearlman as Amoukar and Nameer El-Kadi are marvelous as Naoh's long suffering sidekicks in the exhausting, torturous journey (quest) for a new source of fire. The three are sent out to find fire after their tribe loses this most precious of all elements following a raid by ape-type people and an ensuing retreat into the precarious refuge of a swamp island. Their long journey leads them to inadvertently saving Ika, (a slender maiden elegant even though she is clothed only in a coating of mud), from the fate of being the next meal of an ugly tribe who has captured her.

Ika's tribe is considerably more advanced than the tribe of the three wanderers. From them, the three learn laughter, use of propelled stick weapons more effective than their crude tree limbs, and above all, the miracle of making fire by rubbing sticks together.

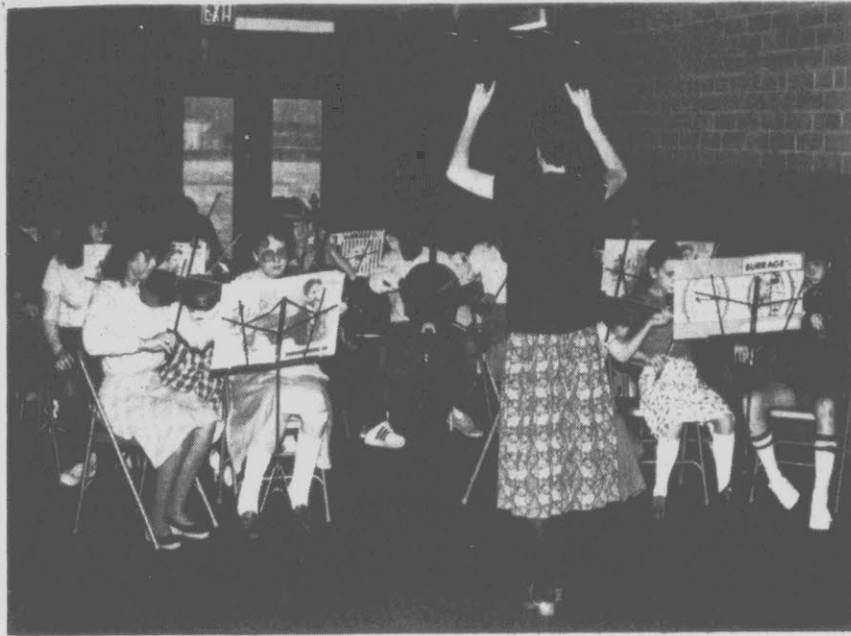

Christopher Tucker and Stephan DuPuis have devised creative makeup that splendidly transforms the actors into varied ethnic tribes — the Ulam, the Wagabou, the Kzamm and the Ivaka. They have also created the grimmest, most-in-need-of-baths cast ever assembled in a movie.

Philippe Sarde's music score, performed by the London Symphony Orchestra and Les Percussions de Strasbourg is first rate, and there's an unforgettable pan flute solo by Simon Stanciu.

"Quest For Fire" is R rated due undoubtedly to the ample display of uncovered perrieres, male and female, and the sexual encounters carried out in primitive style in the presence of other tribal members.

"Quest For Fire" is a science fantasy adventure that consistently conveys a ring of truth. It shows with honesty and humor that our primitive forebears were indeed endowed with a spark of humanity that was essential to survival, and to a

Orchestra Program Set

About 175 young musicians — students in the elementary and secondary schools of Greenville — will be in concert at 8 p.m. tonight at Rose High School. They will be presenting to the public their second annual All-City Orchestra Program.

In tonight's concert, which is free, performances will be presented by five groups.

One group is the South Greenville Orchestra, conducted by Wesley Thomas. Another is the Wahl-Coates Orchestra, conducted by JoAnn Moore. The Greenville Middle School Orchestra, the Aycock-Rose Chamber Players and the Aycock-Rose Orchestra are conducted by Candace Dixon.

The Aycock-Rose Orchestra is comprised of full string, wind and percussion sections.

Selections to be performed are:

•South Greenville School Orchestra — "Reuben and Rachel," a round in two parts; "Springtime," a French folk song; "Old MacDonald Had a Farm"; Albert Poehen's "Petite Etude"; an andante and allegro by Mozart; and an "American Folk Song Suite" arranged by Errante.

•Wahl-Coates School Orchestra — "Go, Tell it on the Mountain," "Polly Wally Doodle," and "Comin' 'Round the Mountain."

•Greenville Middle School Orchestra — Edmund J. Siennicki's "Capriccio" and the "España Cani" arranged by Merle J. Isaac.

•Aycock-Rose Chamber Players — "Cannon for Strings" by Pachelbel, arranged by Ades and the Isaac arrangement of Bach's "Brandenburg Concerto, No. 3."

•Aycock-Rose Orchestra — the March from Bizet's opera "Carmen," arranged by Woodhouse; Mozart's "Ceremonial March" arranged by Gordon; and the Overture to Rossini's "William Tell," arranged by Lehmeier.

Pupils Present 'Music Machine'

"The Music Machine," edited by Phil Perkins, will be presented at St. Peter's School Saturday.

Thirty students in grades one through six will give the school's first spring musical. Kim Smith, science teacher at the school, is the director and will be assisted by faculty members Mary Callery, Sister Joan and Sister Bernadette. Glenn Buck, a junior at D.H. Conley High School, will be guest pianist.

Paul Allen, Frances Faye Collins and David Allen will recreate the lead roles of Stevie, Nancy and the Conductor, respectively. Soloists will include Ms. Collins, Joan Giordano, Marey Harrington, Crystal Smith, Paige Smith and Dan Wooten.

A special children's matinee performance will be held at 3 p.m. and the evening performance will start at 8 p.m. A donation of $1 for adults will be received at the door to help defray production costs. The production is open to the public. For further information call 752-3529.

CRYPTOQUIP 4-29

WGMMDJC VSGW IFBB HFVWBN
 DNJMSDA HFAADJINJD

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — BOASTFUL INSINUATIONS ARE A DREADFUL BORE.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: V equals S

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Albums, Cassettes Thrown In Bonfire

HUNTERSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Nearly 30 teen-agers threw their rock 'n roll albums and cassettes into a bonfire, saying the music wouldn't let them be the kind of Christians they wanted to be.

The teen-agers, members of the Huntersville Church of God, were led by 42-year-old John Banks, a Mount Holly evangelist and former rock group member.

Albums by Led Zeppelin, Foreigner, AC-DC and Dolly Parton could be seen through the thick smoke of the bonfire.

Andy Wood of Huntersville said his son participated as a way to show his devotion to the church.

"A youth can get to spending too much time with records, especially hard rock records," Wood said. "There's so much good Christian music they can listen to."

"Some of the different groups pray to the devil," said Fred Wood, 16. "Since we want to live for God, we're going to destroy Satan's records."

"People at school gave me records to burn," said Charlotte high school senior Jay Smith. "I loved the albums, but now I feel good about getting rid of them. It's like a burden has been lifted."

"Let me get in there," said 26-year-old Scarlett Daugherty, pushing her way toward the bonfire with a collection of tape cassettes.

"My friends were offering me $100 for the whole collection, but I didn't give in.... I knew that if I gave the stuff away, I'd just be spreading the bad to someone else."

"Our young people saw what drugs and music can do," Banks told the 150 people in the audience.

FOCUS

Everybody's Coming to Knoxville
 Knoxville, Tennessee, nestled in the Appalachian hills, hardly seems an international cosmopolis. But for the next six months it will be a bustling center of international activity. Eleven million visitors are expected to inundate this city of about 200,000 during the 1982 World's Fair on Energy, which opens Saturday. Exhibitions from 22 nations are spread out around the Sunsphere, which towers 266 feet above the fair. Visitors will be shuttled around on sky rides and people movers to see technical and art exhibits. They'll view live performances ranging from local bluegrass to the Prague Philharmonic. And they'll sample foods as varied as gyros and goulash, Ginza chicken and Peking duck.

DO YOU KNOW — Which was the most recent World's Fair held in the U.S.?

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — The Argentinian name for the Falklands is the Malvinas.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, APR. 30, 1982

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A good time to observe the progress you have made, and to make plans for even greater advancement in the future. Show that you are one who seeks harmony with others.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Try to understand an associate's position better and improve the relationship. Safeguard your reputation tonight.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Listen to the views of others carefully before you team up with them in some enterprise. Be wary of outsiders.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Make certain you don't spend too much money for pleasure, as you could easily be tempted to do at this time.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Plan how to save more money instead of spending it like there's no tomorrow. Show others your wisdom.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Discuss the future with associates and come to a fine agreement with them. Find a better method to avoid costly mistakes.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Study every angle of your monetary needs and make plans to have increased income in the days ahead. Use common sense.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) A good day to handle personal affairs since the planets are favorable for such now. Handle business affairs wisely.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Morning is best for handling private affairs. Complete week's work with added enthusiasm and analyze your progress.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Good day to deepen relationships with friends. Use extreme caution in motion today and avoid possible accident.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Seriously delve into new interests that can pave the way to a more prosperous future. Take needed health treatments.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Gain the backing of the influential for whatever responsibilities you may have to discharge. Sidestep a troublemaker.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Forget antiquated ways and engage in modern methods and gain added income in the future. Adopt a positive manner.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one who can carry through with specific plans in a most precise way, so direct the education along scientific lines for best results. A most unusual profession could emerge here. A lover of music in this chart.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

We put our foot down about apartments being within walking distance.

Wedgewood Arms apartments are within walking distance of three shopping centers, a nursery school, a junior high school, doctors' and dentists' offices and an athletic center.

As if that wasn't enough, three major traffic arteries, 264 Bypass, Arlington Blvd., and Charles St. are close enough to be seen and not heard.

Fact is, no apartments in town can legitimately claim to be more convenient to more things than Wedgewood Arms.

And, that's not all. Because Wedgewood Arms is not only convenient, it's different in other ways, too. Take the floorplans: they're different from anything you've ever seen. And when you add in high energy efficiency, tennis courts, swimming pool, and the neighborhood "feeling" that these apartments will give you — well, you'll just have to see for yourself.
