CRUISER TORPEDOED — Britain announced a Royal Navy submarine torpedoed the Argentine cruiser General Belgrano off the Falkland Islands

Crippling Blows To The Argentine Navy

By The Associated Press

British missile-firing helicopters sank one Argentine patrol boat and damaged another in a clash inside the war zone Britain imposed around the Falkland Islands, the British Defense Ministry announced today.

The reported sinking came a few hours after a British submarine damaged Argentina's only cruiser in a torpedo attack outside the war zone.

The ministry also announced it was requisitioning the luxury liner Queen Elizabeth II, two more cargo ferries and a container ship to take 3,000 troops, helicopters and other war equipment to the Falklands, bolstering the 60-plus ship British armada already lurking off the islands.

The additional ships, which must make an 8,000-mile, three-week voyage to reach the Falklands, were further indications Britain was preparing a long siege to wrest back the islands Argentina seized April 2.

A ministry communique said "two armed Argentine patrol craft-type naval auxiliaries" initiated the latest shootout around midnight Sunday in the Falklands (11 p.m. EDT) when they "fired on a Royal Navy Sea King (helicopter) from HMS Hermes," the carrier-flagship of the British fleet.

"Two Royal Navy Lynx helicopters from ships of the task force then engaged the ships with missiles. One of the ships was sunk and the other certainly damaged," the communique said. Ministry officials said they did not know the names or size of the patrol boats, or whether they were among the nine patrol boats belonging to the Argentine navy. British news reports said the vessels were small patrol craft with a crew of about 15.

The British communique said the shootout took place north of East Falkland island and 90 miles inside the blockade area.

The helicopters dropped "life-saving" equipment to the boats, and there was "no damage" to the attacking helicopters, it said.

In Buenos Aires, Argentine military sources said they had no knowledge of the reported patrol boats attack.

In a statement early today, Argentina cried foul over the torpedoing of an Argentine cruiser 50 miles beyond the war zone.

"It should be emphasized that the attack took place to the southeast of Isla de los Estados and outside the so-called 'zone of exclusion,'" the Argentine joint chiefs of staff said in a communique.

The Argentines also announced rejection of a new peace proposal announced Sunday by Peru's President Fernando Belaunde Terry. Buenos Aires claimed the plan was suggested by U.S. Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., and like several previous Haig proposals was not acceptable.

In New York, British Foreign Secretary Francis Pym met today with the U.N. Security Council President for May, Chinese Ambassador Ling Qing. Speculation was he would ask more action from the 15-member peacekeeping body to encourage a settlement. The council's Resolution 502 passed after Argentina seized the islands called for withdrawal of Argentine troops, cessation of hostilities and negotiations.

Britain admitted the submarine attack Sunday on the cruiser General Belgrano, the former U.S. light cruiser Phoenix, occurred "just outside the edge" of the 200-mile "total exclusion" zone. But it claimed the 44-year-old cruiser, Argentina's second largest ship, "posed a significant threat" to the British fleet in the area.

The British Defense Ministry said the submarine, reportedly one of three nuclear-powered hunter-killers in the area, "severely damaged" the 13,645-ton cruiser with torpedoes.

When fully manned, the General Belgrano has a crew of 1,000, but there was no word of casualties. The British communique said the submarine "resumed her patrol" after the attack.

Argentina said the General Belgrano was hit by one torpedo "that produced damage," and that Argentine ships "have been dispatched to the area to aid the cruiser should it become necessary."

On Sunday, Pym told reporters in Washington that Britain did not plan new attacks if Argentine forces stayed out of the 200-mile air-sea blockade zone the British government imposed Friday.

"There is no other military action envisaged at the moment other than making that secure," he said.

Isla de los Estados is at the southern tip of the South American continent about 250 miles southwest of the Falklands.

The General Belgrano is the only warship still in active service that survived the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor. Launched in 1938, it fought throughout World War II with the 7th Fleet in the Pacific and was sold to Argentina in 1951.

Besides the cruiser, Argentina's navy has one aircraft carrier, seven destroyers, seven frigates, four submarines (one of them knocked out in an earlier British assault on South Georgia), nine patrol craft, two fast gunboats and two torpedo boats, according to Jane's Fighting Ships 1981-82.

Argentina lost a submarine a week ago when British forces scuttled it while they retook South Georgia Island, a Falklands dependency.

Unemployment Overpayments Are Recovered

A total of $242,562 in unemployment insurance overpayments have been recouped for the three-month period of January, February and March 1982, according to the Greenville office of the Employment Security Commission.

Jim Hannan, manager of the Greenville office, noted that "much of that amount was the result of fraud." Hannan added that "local staff members detect a few cases of fraud and overpayment each week, but many are reported by the public for investigation. The general public is now more aware that it is illegal to receive unemployment insurance benefit while working."

"We get tips concerning suspected fraud. When we do, they are investigated. If the tips prove to be valid, criminal procedures are instituted."

Henry Byrne, the Area Fraud Investigator assigned to the Greenville office, investigated five fraud cases in February resulting in convictions for all five — a 100 percent record. In March, Byrne had 60 cases still under investigation either for fraud or overpayment. He also investigates overpayment for refund purposes.

Ron Hawks, supervisor of the Benefit Payment Control Unit noted, "In March, investigations were increased significantly due to the effectiveness of the computer crossmatch system. This enables us to compare employer and unemployment insurance claims records and identify potential fraud situations."

Of 75 persons tried statewide in March for defrauding the Employment Security Commission, all 75 were convicted.

Hannan says anyone who knows of a person working and receiving unemployment insurance at the same time, or if they know of someone who supplied fraudulent information, they are to call the ESC office (756-2686) to give such information. "They don't have to give their names," he said. "They can call anonymously and tell us the name of the person they are reporting and where they work. We can take it from there."

Bundy Files For Office

Rep. Sam D. Bundy filed today as a candidate for his seventh term in the N.C. House of Representatives subject to the June 29 Democratic primary.

Bundy, who paid his filing fee with the Pitt Board of Elections, will seek one of the two seats in the 9th House District.

Under the proposed redistricting plan, the 9th District would include all of Pitt and Greene counties except Bethel and Carolina townships. The plan has won tentative approval from the U.S. Justice Department.

N. C. Election June 29

By BILL OUTLAW
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State election officials, warning of "severe hardships and confusion" if the 1982 primary is delayed further, have avoided another clash with federal officials by naming June 29 as Election Day.

In a rare Sunday meeting, the board also scheduled primary runoffs for July 27 and gave indigent candidates until noon May 17 to file petitions seeking to have filing fees waived for legislative and congressional races.

Legislative and congressional candidates must file by noon Friday.

"I think it's fair to say if we had not made the changes ... it would have been terribly difficult to predict with any certainty when we might have the primaries," said Bob Spearman, elections board chairman.

"If we hadn't done this, the only alternative would have been court action."

The General Assembly had originally set the June 10 date at a special legislative session last week. But the U.S. Justice Department balked at that date, saying it might not give minority candidates time to wage effective campaigns.

Justice Department officials said Friday they were prepared to approve the state's plans for re-drawing state house and senate district lines, but insisted that the primary date be changed. The June 29 date reflected a compromise between the state's preference of June 10 and federal officials' desire for an election in July or August.

The Justice Department has 60 days to review the plans. But state officials expected to hear today that they had been approved.

Sunday's decision was the latest of many maneuvers designed to win federal acceptance of North Carolina's redistricting plans. Justice Department officials rejected two redistricting plans approved by the General Assembly, saying they diluted minority voting strength and thus violated the Voting Rights Act of 1965.

The legislature adopted a third plan last Tuesday and the Justice Department approved it Friday.

Alex Brock, state election board director, said he didn't like the newly established dates but said the board had to choose between them and an indefinite primary delay.

"I don't like it because it'll take legal authority out of the hands of North Carolina," Brock said. "But if it'll let us get on with the primary, then it's not that critical."

In a resolution adopted during Sunday's meeting, the board said, "Any further delay in the scheduling of a definite primary election date ... would produce severe hardships and confusion and cause irrevocable damage to the electoral process."

Report Reagan Plans To Accept Brezhnev Invite

Police Move In As Poles Rally

WARSAW, Poland (AP) —

Hundreds of riot police swinging batons moved in on a crowd of thousands of Solidarity union supporters rallying in Warsaw today, witnesses said. They said security forces opened up a water cannon and fired tear gas in an attempt to break up the demonstration, the second mass challenge to martial law in three days.

Witnesses said there were injuries and ambulances were rushed to the scene, at Warsaw's Castle Square. There was no immediate word on whether there was gunfire.

According to the witnesses' accounts, police had at least twice shouted orders for the crowd to disperse but were met by shouts of "Gestapo! Gestapo!"

They said despite police orders to disperse within 10 minutes, people continued to fill the square, unfurling Solidarity banners and singing the Polish national anthem. The crowd surrounded about 400 riot policemen. A police commander then yelled "Fire!" and police sent ear ported in today's editions that Reagan has decided to accept Brezhnev's offer to hold a summit meeting in a third country, probably Austria or Ireland, in October.

The Post, citing unnamed administration officials, said the invitation has been discussed favorably with the Soviet ambassador to the United States, Anatoly F. Dobrynin.

Speakes, the White House deputy press secretary, said he would not comment on diplomatic discussions as a matter of policy but noted the last time U.S. officials met with Dobrynin was several weeks ago.

Brezhnev extended his informal invitation on April 17, as a counter to Reagan's proposal that the two men meet in New York in June.

The Post said Reagan is expected to convey his intention to go ahead with the summit during his discussions in Europe next month with Western European leaders.

Speakes said Reagan still hopes Brezhnev will attend the United Nations in June and that the two leaders could meet then.

The Washington Post reported in today's editions that Reagan has decided to accept Brezhnev's offer to hold a summit meeting in a third country, probably Austria or Ireland, in October.

Camporee Citations To Five Pitt Scout Units

INSPECTIONS...took place shortly after troops arrived Friday at Camp Bonner North and members of Troop 30, sponsored by Jarvis

Memorial United Methodist Church, lined up for their review by events judge Bill Plueddemann (C). (East Carolina Council photo)

WASHINGTON, N.C. — Special citations were presented to five Pitt County scout troops during the East Carolina Council's annual camporee which concluded Sunday at Camp Bonner North.

Selected for the citations, which were presented by the council, were Troop 452, sponsored by First Presbyterian Church of Greenville; Troop 30, Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church; Troop 191, Mt. Calvary Free Will Baptist Church; Troop 550, Winterville Recreation Commission; and Troop 571, Farmville Methodist Church.

Twenty troops, involving some 400 scouts, competed from Pitt County's gold area. A staff of 25 adult leaders helped coordinate the gold area activities.

In Saturday's patrol competition, three events were set up in each of the camporee's six designated areas. Scouts were required to compete in the three events in each area to earn ribbons on a patrol level. The gold area staged the marksmanship, nature and 50-yard dash competition, while other events included crafts, physical fitness, fire building, and cooking, among others.

Approximately 3,000 scouts took part in the weekend activities, which concluded with Sunday morning services. The Rev. Lee Parker, pastor of First Christian Church of Farmville, conducted services in the gold area.

Heber Adams served as chief of the Pitt County section.

FOSTER HOMES FOR ANIMALS NEEDED

The Pitt County Humane Society is in desperate need of foster homes for dogs and cats, especially dogs, Humane Society Vice President Barbara Haddock says. She said normally the most a foster home operator would need to keep an animal is two weeks, just long enough to find a home through the Adopt-A-Pet column in this newspaper or with other means used by the society. Those who're willing to provide foster care, but who cannot pay for food will be helped out by the Society. Mrs. Haddock's phone number is 752-9922.

ADOPT-A-GRANDPARENT FEEDBACK

The Hotline item on Adopt-A-Grandparent published recently said that there is no organized Adopt-A-Grandparent program in Pitt County. This is incorrect, Terry Fuller, activities director of Greenville Villa Nursing Home points out.

There are programs at Greenville Villa, Guardian Care, Farmville (at this time in cooperative with the Farmville Child Development Center), and University nursing homes. To learn how to become involved with any of these programs, call the activities director of each.

High Court To Judge Social Security Provision

Knoxville Expo Delay Is Resolved; Free Entry

By TOM EBLEN
Associated Press Writer
KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — World's Fair officials let about 2,000 people charge through admission gates without tickets today after long lines formed when the exposition's opening was delayed 35 minutes.

"There were some problems at all four main gates ... a cash delivery problem," Bill Carroll, the fair's vice president for communication, said.

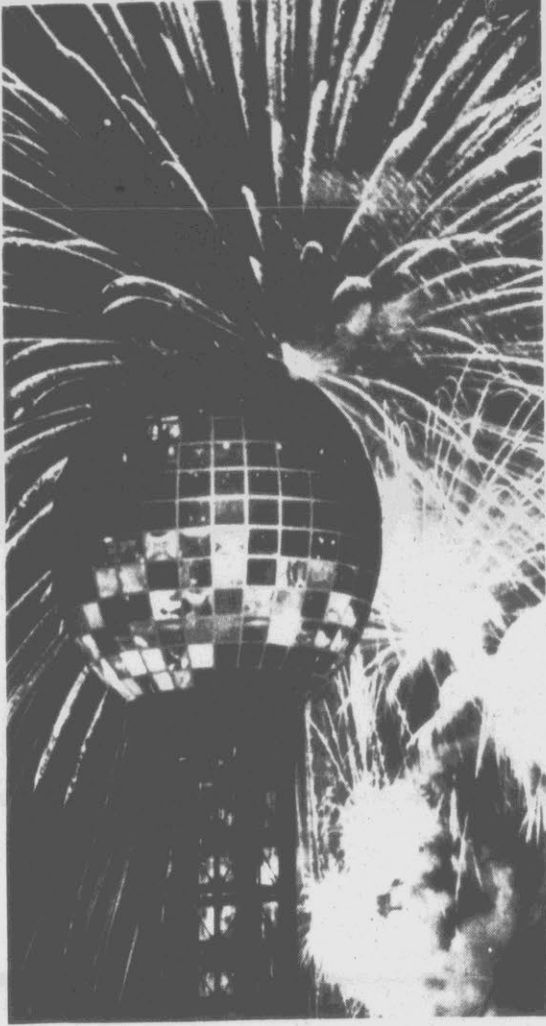

"There was a backup — a safety problem when people began backing up into the streets — so they opened the emergency gates and let everybody in to relieve the pressure," he said.

"A lot of people got in free today and Merry Christmas to all of them," he said.

About 15 minutes after the crowd began pouring in at 10:35 a.m. EDT, the large gates were closed, ticket booths resumed selling $10 admissions and the turnstiles were unlocked.

The snafu occurred a day after attendance was only half the 80,000 people which promoters had expected to attend Sunday, the second day of operation. But most of the people attending said they liked what they saw.

"It's wonderful," said Lee Shiwoong, a 40-year-old Korean architect who said he traveled half-way around the world just to spend three days at the energy-theme exposition. "The buildings are very good. I learn a lot about energy."
Official figures released after the gates closed at 10 p.m. EDT Sunday showed 40,001 people attended, fair officials said.

Degree For 84-Year-Old

MIAMI (AP) — Five years and three muggings after Celia Muller enrolled at Miami-Dade Community College for "something to occupy myself" the 84-year-old walked down the aisle and received her degree.

"I feel young," she said after ceremonies at the college's North Campus on Sunday. "I'm walking on air."

Ms. Muller was awarded an associate degree in arts. She says she picked courses she liked — English literature, music, geology and modern dance.

"I was the oldest one in my classes, positively," she said. "The teachers and students were nice to me."

But the five years of study weren't easy. Ms. Muller has no car, and had to ride two buses to reach class. Three times she was mugged between house and campus.

"I still cry about it," she said. "One time I was in the hospital for 10 days. Two boys pushed me down, took my purse, my papers, everything. It was a traumatic experience."

But college life agreed with her. "I got a lot of A's, some B's and C's. Last semester I received three credits for tutoring foreign students."

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today agreed to judge the validity of one Social Security provision which, the government concedes, deprived some men of benefits that women in similar circumstances could collect.

The justices said they will review a federal trial judge's ruling that struck down the provision as an example of impermissible sexual discrimination.

Before 1977, the Social Security Act treated men and women differently in conferring spousal benefits.

Those are monthly payments available to people aged 62 or older who are entitled to only minimal or no old-age or disability benefits based on their own account. A provision in the act said those people could receive benefits based on their spouses' incomes.

But before men could receive spousal benefits, they had to prove they depended on their wage-earner wives for one-half their support. Women applying for spousal benefits faced no such requirement.

In other actions today, the high court:

—Ruled by a 7-2 vote that Albuquerque, N.M., cannot force the Seventh-day Adventist Church to get a permit before its members can solicit donations.

—Agreed to decide when federal prosecutors can share secret grand jury information with lawyers in non-criminal sections of the Justice Department.

—Agreed to settle a tax dispute, in a case from Texas of considerable importance to tax shelter investors, involving the tax consequences of so-called "non-recourse" loans for which the borrower does not agree to become personally liable.

—Left intact a lower court ruling that a Peachtree City, Ga., ordinance unconstitutionally banned the posting of prices on a gasoline station operator's signs.

—Refused to dismiss an appeal previously filed with the high court by a convicted Illinois murderer who now says he wants to die for his crimes. The court also left intact the death sentences of two Texas men convicted of killing law enforcement officers, and rejected arguments that a Georgia death row inmate was denied a fair trial.

In the spring of 1977, the Supreme Court struck down the differing treatment of men and women under the disputed provision of federal law as unconstitutional sexual discrimination.

Later that year, Congress amended the Social Security Act to eliminate "gender-based differences," but discovered that such eradication caused financial problems.

As explained by Justice Department lawyers, "elimination of the one-half support requirement made substantial numbers of retired male federal and state employees eligible for un-reduced spousal benefits based on their wives' earnings."

The result was a "windfall" to some retired government employees.

To avoid that drain on Social Security funds, Congress wrote an "offset" into the law which generally required that spousal benefits be reduced by the amount of any state or federal government pension received by an applicant.

But to shield already-retired government workers, Congress provided a "grandfather clause" exempting from the offset those spouses eligible for a government pension prior to December 1982 who would have been eligible for full spousal benefits under the act "as it was in effect and being administered in January 1977."

That made the man-woman distinction a factor once again, and sparked Department of Health and Human Services officials to tell Nathan Rosofsky of Forest Hills, N.Y., he could not collect spousal benefits because he could not offer proof to meet the one-half support requirement.

Rosofsky sued, and U.S. District Judge Eugene Nickerson of Brooklyn last Oct. 6 struck down the offset provision.

Because of the law's wording, the judge said benefits for men and women must be eliminated rather than to force Congress to provide benefits for Rosofsky and similarly situated men. HHS Secretary Richard Schweiker then sought Supreme Court review.

"The district court's decision rejects Congress' considered judgment that a grandfather provision tied to January 1977 eligibility criteria is necessary to protect the economic interests of reliant spousal beneficiaries," the appeal said.

"The grandfather provision is supported by real, legitimate economic considerations totally unrelated to any presumed differences between men and women," it argued.

Agree On F-5G Sale To Jordan

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration has reached agreement with Jordan on the sale of F-5G fighter planes and Stinger antiaircraft missiles, sources said today.

The sale is to be submitted to Congress after the November election, said the sources, who requested anonymity. Under the law, Congress can block the sale, which is certain to run into Israeli objections.

A U.S. delegation headed by Francis J. West, assistant secretary of defense for international security affairs, arranged the sale in Amman late last week, the sources said.

Jordan was turned down, however, in its request for two squadrons of F-16 jet fighters and I-Hawk missiles.

According to the sources, State Department officials wanted to condition the deal for the F-5Gs and Stinger missiles on Jordan's participation in negotiations between Israel and Egypt, but the Pentagon vetoed the recommendation.

Jordan has boycotted the peace treaty between the two countries and declined to participate in talks over autonomy for Arab Palestinians living on the West Bank of the Jordan River and in Gaza.

The sources said Jordan would be allowed to purchase 36 of the F-5Gs, which are produced by the Northrop Corp. The aircraft is rated as substantially more effective than the F-5Es now in Jordan's air force.

The Stinger is a shoulder-fired antiaircraft missile designed for use by infantrymen.

Jordan wanted the I-Hawk missiles, which can be mobile, for its air defenses. It now depends entirely on Hawks anchored in fixed positions.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said on a visit to Amman in February that he had discussed with Jordanian officials the possibility of a sale of U.S. F-16 fighters and I-Hawks.

His announcement kicked off a storm of protest in Israel and prompted assurances from President Reagan that the United States remains committed to maintaining Israel's military superiority over its Arab neighbors.

When the subject came up again last month, Larry Speakes, the deputy White House press secretary, said Jordan had "legitimate security needs and we have a longstanding supply arrangement with them."

Farmville Man Assigned

Jerry Lee Mozingo has been promoted to Probation Parole Officer 1 effective May 1.

A native of Farmville, Mozingo succeeds Mike Langston in this position.

Mozingo has been with the Pitt County Adult Probation and Parole Office since April 1, 1980, when he was named a court intake officer with the unit.

He is a graduate of East Carolina University where he majored in corrections work. Prior to being named as intake officer, Mozingo was employed by the U.S. Census district office.

Jimmy B. Cannon, Unit Supervisor of the Adult Probation and Parole office, said that Mozingo will be stationed in Greenville and that his primary duty will be to supervise adult probation and parolees throughout Pitt County.

In addition, Mozingo will assist in investigations for Superior and District Courts and for the North Carolina Parole Commission.

Mozingo has completed several training courses in parole and probation work, including attendance at the Justice Academy at Salemburg.

UAW Appears Backing New Harvester Pact

CHICAGO (AP) — Responding to what their leaders called "desperate financial trouble," members of the United Auto Workers appear to be approving a concessions contract with ailing International Harvester Co.

In another development today, the company's chairman, Archie R. McCardell, resigned and was replaced by Louis W. Menk, former chairman of Burlington Northern Inc. The company also announced that executive vice president Donald L. Lennox had been elected president and chief executive officer to replace Warren Hayford, who resigned recently.

Early ratification vote results Sunday from several locals showed workers generally favoring the pact between the huge union and the truck and farm implement manufacturer.

However, locals in some parts of the country remained steadfastly opposed to a contract calling for millions of dollars in wage and benefit giveaways in return for corporate promises of job security.

The union was expected to announce vote totals today from its Solidarity House headquarters in Detroit, UAW spokesman Dave Mitchell said.

Several locals announced their totals Sunday night. In Fort Wayne, Ind., Local 57 voted 1,600-322 in favor. Local 98 in Indianapolis announced that 64.5 percent of its members approved the contract and Local 226 there approved it 203-40.

In Chicago, Local 6 ratified it by a 70 percent-30 percent margin.

"We've done the surgery on the patient. It's up to them (the company) to deliver now," said John Minchin, president of Local 402 in Springfield, Ohio, which voted 948-842 in favor of the concessions. Local 658, a clerical workers group in Springfield, overwhelmingly approved the package with 80 percent voting in favor.

However, five of six locals in the Quad Cities area reportedly rejected the pact. The sixth there did not announce its results. Harvester employs more than 3,000 workers in the four cities, Rock Island and Moline in Illinois and Bettendorf and Davenport in Iowa.

The two largest locals at the Louisville, Ky, plant overwhelmingly approved the pact.

Hubert Rockey, president of Local 1336, said about 96 percent of the membership approved the proposal. Joe Booker, president of Local 817, reported a 92 percent positive vote. The tallies were not disclosed.

The two locals represent about 2,400 active employees at the Harvester plant and foundry there, with 900 on layoff.

Stephen Yokich, vice president and director of the UAW agricultural implement department, had warned workers of Harvester's "desperate financial trouble," before the weekend voting began.

The two sides reached a tentative accord Thursday after three weeks of intense emergency talks, six months after the company approached the union asking for concessions. The agreement would run through Oct. 1, 1984. The current contract would have expired in October.

The talks affect about 30,000 UAW members, about 10,000 of whom are on indefinite layoff.

Fuel Charge Should Go

There is a growing trend among politicians and regulators toward a once-a-year adjustment in fuel costs for North Carolina's public utilities. We wonder if even annual adjustments go far enough. Why not do away with the fuel adjustment, as a separate factor in setting utility rates, in its entirety?

The Utilities Commission's Public Staff director, Robert Fischbach, has asked for legislation to merge fuel costs into general rates cases. We agree with that request.

Fuel adjustments came into being when the cost of oil fluctuated so rapidly no one could keep up with it. A rate set this week to cover fuel costs would fall far short next week. Utilities then sought, and obtained, permission to pass on higher costs resulting from those seemingly all-too-frequent breakdowns of nuclear reactors. But fuel costs, whether it is oil, coal or nuclear, generally can be projected now. Utilities have more experience with nuclear reactors and a better understanding of when they will go out for scheduled service or otherwise. Oil costs have stabilized to a degree; certainly, they do not fluctuate with the abandon of a few years ago.

Once a year is often enough to consider fuel costs for a utility, and that cost should become a part of the utility's general rate structure — not something that can be tagged on to the consumer's bill.

U.S. Rejecting Expansionism

The United States has forcefully come down on the side of Great Britain in the war over the Falkland Islands.

Our nation had no other choice. England has been our staunchest ally in the long struggle against the spread of Soviet Union communism since World War II. Argentina, on the other hand, has a record of repressive government which tramples on individual rights. Its high handed military seizure of the Falkland Islands is proof enough of its leadership's dictator thinking.

Our government has reinforced its support of England by imposing sanctions against Argentina and offering supply aid to the British.

The message should be clear enough. The United States, which has opposed military expansionism elsewhere in the world, won't tolerate it in our own hemisphere. It can be assumed that will apply equally to rightist and leftist dictatorships.

Patrons, Beneficiaries

The airlines are in one of the most brutal price wars in history. They're all being killed, but no one will surrender.

It's gotten so that when you go to the airport, you never know anymore how much you're going to pay for a trip.

I went to National Airport the other day to take a plane to Miami, Florida. The lady wrote out my ticket. "That will be $50."

"It seems like a lot of money," I said.

"Ah, yes, but it also entitles you fly on to Karachi, Pakistan, for the same price."

"I don't want to go to Karachi," I told her.

"Well, for $5 more you can go to Hong Kong, and stay at a hotel for three nights."

I was about to pay for the ticket, when I noticed the person at the next counter from another airline put up a sign.

It read, "Fly to Miami with us for $40 and have the use of a rental car for one week." I told the lady to forget it, and I got in the other line.

While I was waiting, a man came up to me in a red jacket and whispered, "Can I talk you for a moment?"

"I'll lose my place in line."

"You won't be sorry," he said. "Follow me around the corner." When we got out of sight of the counter, he said, "We'll take you to Miami for $25 and your family can go for free."

"My wife and children are at home," I said.

"We'll send a limousine for them and hold the plane."

It seemed like a pretty good deal, and I was about to take it, when a very attractive lady in a blue uniform came by and dropped her purse. I picked it up and handed it to her.

"Don't do anything until I talk to you in the bar," she said.

I excused myself from the man in the red jacket and followed her. We found a table and she took my hand in hers.

"I overheard you saying you were going to Miami," she purred.

"Yes," I said, as I nervously looked around.

"Why don't you fly with Snail Darter Airlines?"

"How much is it?" I asked.

"How much would you like to pay?"

"I hadn't thought about it," I admitted. "Would $15 be enough?"

"We can put you in first class for that. Here's a coupon. Go to our ticket counter and tell them Sally sent you."

"Thanks a lot. Can I pay for the drinks?"

"Of course not! When you fly First Class, they're on the house."

I picked up my suitcase and started heading for the Snail Darter Airline counter. It was at the end of the terminal and as I was walking there, a young man, his head shaved, wearing a saffron robe, came up and stuck a carnation in my suit lapel hole.

"I gave to the Hari Khrisna's (cq) at the office," I told him.

"I'm not a Hari Khrisna. I'm marketing vice president of Camelot Airlines. We're willing to make a deal."

"Do you fly to Miami?" I asked.

Appraisals Debate

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR

RALEIGH — Once every eight years, taxpayers get hit with what can be a shocking upward revaluation of their real property. Eight years' worth of real estate appreciation suddenly comes home to roost. The house that was valued at $20,000 in 1974 is rated at $44,000 in 1982. And doesn't that cause a political commotion when it happens to almost everyone in town?

Now there is talk of changing the laws which require real property reappraisals every eight years. The legislature's Property Tax Study Committee is looking at the question and in the latest issue of "Popular Government," Institute of Government researcher Joseph Ferrell calls for more frequent reappraisals. "It seems beyond question that equitable administration of the property tax demands frequent adjustment of property values and that once in every eight years is not frequent enough," he writes.

There are two arguments for more frequent reappraisals — or more frequent adjustments of the appraisals. Doing so would also make the tax system more equitable and it would eliminate the sudden surge in tax rates which real property owners face every eight years.

The tax valuation system now goes through an eight-year cycle. Ferrell writes that in the first year, the tax burden of real, personal and utility property are balanced. If real property amounts to 60 percent of a county's tax base, it should bring 60 percent of the tax revenue.

But that balance is disrupted in each of the next seven years. Personal and utility property is revalued annually while real property is ignored. Inflation will probably make real property more valuable but its tax assessment countrywide will stay the same. Inflation and depreciation will affect personal and utility property, also, probably increasing its overall value. This will be monitored every year and adjusted. Thus, over the eight years, the county's tax base is likely to rise solely at the expense of personal property and utility taxpayers.

Doug Holbrook, director of house is revalued at $44,000, your taxes don't necessarily rise a corresponding 120 percent. Most likely, your mill rate will be cut some, but not enough so you'll pay as little as last year. The revaluation should put real property tax revenues back into balance with other property in a county. So you'll pay more tax. If appraisals were made every four years and then adjusted every year, your increase would be smaller, but you'd get one tax hike every year.

Before endorsing more frequent tax revaluations, homeowners ought to con-

Other Editors Say It Can Be Done

(The Shelby Daily Star)

It's interesting how many ways government can find to save money when the squeeze is on. An Associated Press story noted that "North Carolina officials say they are pinching pennies on everything from hiring to the use of copying machines because state revenue has not lived up to predictions."

People who pay revenues to the state in the form of income taxes or other charges have been pinching pennies for some time now, so it's good to hear that their government is finally doing the same thing.

As a result of cost-cutting measures, state government hopes to spend $150 million less than the legislature allocated for the period July 1, 1981 through June 30, 1982.

Our government is not likely to suffer to any great extent by the cuts departments are making. For instance, the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development has cut airline travel from about $13,000 a month to less than $4,000....

The Department of Administration has cut the gasoline it needs by about 155,000 gallons a year and cut energy costs in its main office building by about $4 per square foot, saving $250,670....

The Department of Education has installed teleconference equipment at its eight regional offices, allowing statewide meetings without participants traveling to Raleigh....

The Department of Commerce is holding three, rather than four, meetings of the Occupational Administration Advisory Board this year, and cutting the number of training conferences it holds across the state.

You get the picture. State government, through necessity, is finding ways to operate under reduced budgets.

Departments are finding ways to streamline their operations.

It would be nice if government would operate in this manner all the time.

Strength For Today

INSPIRING PROMISE

"Now faith is the giving of substance to things hoped for, a conviction of things not seen" (Heb. 11:1, marginal reading).

Faith is God's creative power working through man. Although it rests upon belief, insofar as it gives substance to things hoped for, it is vastly more than belief. Although faith is the gift of God, it is a gift which God never withholds from all who want it. We can have as much religious belief as we are willing to accept — or rather, as much as we are willing to use.

In the act of faith, God and man become co-creators. It is a solemn and arresting fact that we, sinful, weak, and faltering people can actually become partners with the living God. We can have within us a God-giving power which the Bible calls faith, and when we have this, then we can begin to give substance to the things we have hoped and dreamed and long for.

"Ask and it shall be given to you." This is a promise. — Elisha Douglass

Stalking Cheap Loan-Dealers

By SALLY JACOBSEN

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) —

Savings and loan associations, weighed down by low-paying mortgages in a time of high interest rates, are increasingly on the lookout for homeowners who have secretly shifted their cheap loans to new buyers.

Some S&Ls even have sent employees to local government offices to pore over public records looking for the transactions, which are in violation of mortgage agreements.

"There's no doubt it's a problem," said Raleigh Greene III, executive vice president and counsel of Florida Federal Savings and Loan Association in St. Petersburg, Fla.

"It's a big problem," said Rowland Barstow, chairman of Bell Federal Savings and Loan Association in Chicago.

He said the practice has been going on since mortgage interest rates shot above 12 percent. They're now running at 17.5 percent, well above the 4 percent interest rate of some loans Barstow said his institution still has.

Savings and loans, suffering unprecedented earnings losses because of high interest rates and inflation, are eager to turn over their cheap mortgages for higher-yielding ones. According to industry figures, savings and loans have roughly $500 billion in mortgages and almost $300 billion of that is in mortgages averaging under 10 percent.

Caught by high interest rates and tight mortgage money, prospective home buyers and sellers are just as eager to find ways of either buying homes or getting rid of them. Monthly payments on a 30-year, $50,000 fixed-rate mortgage run about $713 when interest rates are 17 percent, more than twice the $333 monthly payment of a 7 percent loan, according to savings and loan industry figures.

"It's a symptom of the real estate market," said Mark Clark, a spokesman for the U.S. League of Savings Associations. "In these kind of conditions, there's a tendency (on the part of buyers and sellers) to find any way they can to complete a sale."

Seven out of 10 sales of single-family homes involved above-board "creative financing" in April, according to preliminary figures from the National Association of Realtors. That's up from four

Position Is Now Eroded

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Ronald Reagan's offer to touch his untouchable third-year 10 percent tax cut by delaying it for three months as part of a $122 billion tax increase did not faze Democrats but drove his most loyal supporters in the administration and on Capitol Hill close to despair.

It would have been despair, pure and unadorned, had Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill accepted the president's retreat. Even so Reagan's position has eroded. He cannot escape going into the renewed budget debate with the $122 billion in new taxes as his starting position. Nor can he avert the perception that the third-year tax cut is violable after all.

Yet, little more than a day before his climactic encounter with O'Neill, the president was privately telling businessmen he would "have to go to the public" on the budget issue. That he would offer so much is testimony to the persistence and determination of his remarkable chief of staff, James A. Baker III, to revise the basic shape of the Reagan economic program.

Actually, Baker's negotiations seemed to have collapsed nearly a full week before those three-plus hours on Capitol Hill. On Thursday, April 22, the White House was quietly planning for Reagan to go to the nation on the next Tuesday evening to state his case against the Democrats.

At that point, Baker had brought Reagan close to the futile practice — begun by Herbert Hoover — of trying to balance the budget by raising taxes. The latest White House worksheet showed three-year tax boosts totaling $113.3 billion, most of it levied against business and upper-income taxpayers. That was not nearly enough to satisfy Rep. Richard Bolling, the speaker's agent in the talks, who insisted that the third-year income tax cut be eliminated.

Still, Baker prevailed on the president to make one last bid. On Friday, he was presented by Baker with three options for touching the untouchable: split the 10 percent tax cut into 5 percent each for two years; delay it for six months; delay it for three months. Not surprisingly, Reagan rejected the first two options out of hand, but then, wholly unexpectedly, accepted the third.

That offer was not made by Baker in the semi-final negotiating session Tuesday. Indeed, no negotiating took place after Bolling upped the ante by demanding $165 billion in higher taxes. Although intransigence that intense had not been expected at the White House, the president nevertheless anticipated disagreement and proposed journeying up to Congress the next day.

At the session with O'Neill, the three-month delay and the $122 billion tax increase were proposed — and even more. By offering to meet the speaker halfway, the president was implicitly agreeing to something over $140 billion in new taxes. Acceptance by O'Neill there would have been followed by resignations at Treasury and in the White House and defections of famous Reaganites on Capitol Hill.

"All bets are off," House Republican whip Trent Lott, one of the hardest-line Republican negotiators, told us after the final disagreement; he meant that the last Reagan offer was limited to Democratic concessions, without which it would be withdrawn. Yet, Lott and other Reagan loyalists cannot escape the certainty that this massive tax increase will be seized upon in Congress as the starting point for new budget battling.

Beyond that, the final

Today is the fourth anniversary of Sun Day, a day that many people recognize and promote the use of solar energy. Sales of solar equipment have increased annually by 155 percent and opinion surveys continue to show that the American public's preferred energy options are solar and other renewable energy resources.

President Reagan's anti-solar and anti-conservation programs are on a collision course with consumers who are tired of relying on dangerous and costly sources of power. For example, money allocated for the Solar Bank by President Carter has been frozen by the Reagan administration. And funds for solar research and development have been cut drastically, while spending on nuclear has been increased.

Write to your representative. Urge them to support release of Solar Bank funds to help stimulate our crippled housing industry. Tell them you want representatives who can provide some leadership in building a sustainable energy future.

Abandon Big Shale Oil Project

HOUSTON (AP) — Exxon Corp.'s decision to write off its $1 billion Colorado shale oil project leaves analysts convinced that the push for synthetic fuels to replace imported oil is over, at least for now.

"Synthetics have been indefinitely postponed, maybe never to get off the ground," said John Lichblau, president of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation.

Exxon, the world's largest oil company, announced

Sunday that it was closing the Colony Shale Oil Project, the largest synthetic fuels undertaking in the nation. The plan was to mine oil-bearing rock and crush and heat it to extract the oil.

Randall Meyer, the president of the subsidiary Exxon USA, said estimates which set the cost of the project near Parachute, Colo., at $2 billion to $3 billion had doubled while oil prices had fallen.

"It's the end of a pretty brief era," Daniel Yergin, an energy analyst at Harvard, told the New York Times.

Exxon bought out Atlantic Richfield's 60 percent interest in the project in 1980 for $300 million and spent another $400 million developing the site.

Exxon said its contract with Tosco Corp. required it to pay another $380 million to Tosco because the minority partner had decided not to continue the project on its own. Of that sum, Tosco will use $80 million to repay loans to the Synthetic Fuels Corp., a federal agency set up with a great fanfare under President Carter to promote the industry.

"If they (Exxon) cannot see such a project through to the end, then I think it says something about the need for government participation on a sustained and intelligent basis in order to make such a field demonstration on a commercial scale fully effective," Morton Winston, president of Tosco, told the Times.

Exxon's 8,800-acre project with recoverable reserves estimated at 500 million barrels of shale oil employs 2,100 workers.

Floyd McDainels, the mayor of Parachute, said the Exxon decision was "just another of the ups and downs we've gone through the last 50 years."

"The basic opinion in town has been, well, an oil company can quit overnight," McDainels said.

The project, which the Exxon statement said would have been finished in 1986 or 1987, would have included a shale mine producing 66,000 tons of rock a day, above-ground "retorting" designed to produce 47,000 barrels of shale oil a day and a process to improve that oil to the equivalent of 45,000 barrels of very light crude easily refined into gasoline.

U.S. imports have dropped to about 3.2 million barrels a day as world prices have dipped near $30 a barrel.

Tosco, with headquarters in Los Angeles, began developing shale oil technology in 1955. The Colony project was established in 1964 as a joint project of Tosco, which owned 40 percent, the Standard Oil Co. of Ohio, which owned 30 percent, and Cleveland Cliffs Iron Co., which owned 30 percent.

Ownership changed hands four times after 1964, with Arco buying a 25 percent share in 1974. Arco bought another 35 percent in 1976 when Shell Oil Co. and Ashland Oil left the project.

Derby Scourged By Pickpockets

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Thirty-five pickpockets, 19 of them juveniles, apparently worked together as a ring and stole thousands of dollars from racing fans at Churchill Downs during the Kentucky Derby, Louisville police have revealed.

The youngsters told police the leader of the ring left about 1 p.m. Saturday, before the Derby began, and headed for Knoxville, Tenn. and the World's Fair.

The youngsters said the leader had at least $40,000 with him, but Lt. William Spaulding, a Louisville detective, said Sunday he does not know whether to believe the youths because they told conflicting stories.

Police think the head of the ring is a Chicago loan shark. Some of the children, 18 boys and a girl, said they had to work for the man because their parents owed him money. Most of the children carried return bus tickets to Chicago, police said.

The 19 juveniles had $1,813.11 on them when captured.

The youngest person arrested was 12 years old, Spaulding said.

Of the adults arrested, 13 were charged with criminal conspiracy to commit robbery and unlawful transactions with a minor. Most listed Chicago addresses. Three others were charged with picking pockets.

As of Sunday, five of the children had been released. Four of them had local relatives, police said.

Police say the youngsters operated in groups of three, with one creating a diversion while the another lifted a watch or wallet and the third stood by for a handoff.

The ring was discovered by Sally Goulet, admissions manager of the Youth Center, where young offenders are booked. She noticed the Chicago bus tickets the detained children carried and the similarity of their stories, Spaulding said.

Meanwhile, police said they made nearly 100 other arrests at Churchill Downs and said they confiscated enough beer, wine and liquor to fill 20 large dumpsters.

Some fans at the race were caught carrying concealed weapons and drugs.

Emergency Medical Services spokeswoman Diane Bauer said there were 31 ambulance runs in the race area over the weekend. There was one stabbing, one possible heart attack and a fainting caused by high blood pressure, she said.

Reagan offer implies that the president agrees with O'Neill that something about his tax cut is what's really wrong with the economy. But if delaying it three months would help the economy, why not six months? Why not cut it in half? Or, best of all, why not eliminate it?

For Reagan to go so far means he has accepted Baker's iron conviction that failure to reach bipartisan agreement on the budget would further damage the economy. Memoranda prepared inside the administration by economists this week disagree. They say the one outcome of the negotiations that would hurt markets would be a tax increase. Isolated even from his own experts, the president listened instead to advisers who long have rejected the economic foundations of the Reagan revolution.

Nine Dead In N.C. Traffic

By The Associated Press
Nine people died in traffic accidents on North Carolina roads over the weekend, including three pedestrians and two people who were killed in separate head-on collisions, the state Highway Patrol said.

The fatalities brought this year's highway deaths 327, compared with 451 reported by May 3, 1981.

Walter B. Huntley, 30, of Oakboro, died Saturday night in Stanly County when an oncoming vehicle crossed into his lane near Albemarle. The patrol said two others were injured in that crash, which involved three vehicles.

Later Saturday, a vehicle crossed the center line of U.S. 64 in Henderson County, striking a vehicle driven by Ned Ray, 43, of Fletcher head-on and killing Ray and leaving one person injured.

Three pedestrians were among those killed this weekend.

Randy Wayne Moore, 3, died Saturday morning when he ran into the path of a vehicle on a Mooresville street in Iredell County. Willis Martin Jr., 28, of Whiteville died Saturday morning of injuries suffered when he was run over in Columbus County. And Christopher Brian Bouie, 25, of Kinston, died Sunday when he was struck while walking on a roadway in that Lenoir County community.

High speeds contributed to two deaths, the patrol reported.

Jasper Lee Hobbs, 22, of Clinton, died Saturday morning when the vehicle he was driving left N.C. 403 in Sampson County at a high speed and struck a bridge, and Albert Carr Jr., 34, of Shelby, died when his car left the road in Cleveland County, struck an embankment and overturned.

Earlier this weekend, Robin Anita Isley, 17, of Burlington died Friday when the vehicle she was driving turned into the path of an oncoming car in Alamance County and Edward Carpenter Abell Jr., 37, of Greensboro, died when the car he was driving left a rural paved road in Guilford County and overturned.

Sees Rising Gas Prices

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Oil industry analyst Dan Lundberg says increased demand for gasoline at a lower price is beginning to push the prices back up at the pump.

"Petroleum product prices are rising again, and because stocks in the storage tanks of most distributors, dealers and consumers are low, refinery sales will bounce back and prices will probably run, not walk, to higher levels," says the latest issue of the industry report, the Lundberg Letter.

"How high prices may run is impossible to predict, but a runup may very well be long overdue," Lundberg said Saturday in a telephone interview. He said his organization's most recent survey of wholesale gasoline prices showed increases outnumbering declines 2-1.

The overall price for all grades of gasoline had dropped from a high of $1.38 a gallon in March of 1981 to a recent low of $1.18 a gallon, Lundberg said, and prices have now begun to move back up.

The weekly newsletter noted that industrial, agricultural and commercial users of petroleum have been drawing on their inventories as much as possible while prices were declining.

That has set the stage for a sharp rebound in prices, the letter said, because "the moment they (consumers) spot a trend that prices may be leveling off when they had been dropping... they think it is a trend they will start to fill up immediately."

Lundberg said consumption of gasoline and other petroleum products is still

Practicing On Bridges

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The skies around the Falls Lake Reservoir area were to be filled with paratroopers today, as Army combat engineers practice their demolition expertise on three bridges.

The paratroopers from the 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg were scheduled to jump at 2 p.m. today to demolish the bridges with explosives, Army officials said.

The bridges are on State Road 1900 at Ledge Creek, State Road 1805 at Lick Creek and State Road 1804 at Little Lick Creek. They need to be removed because they would pose an underwater hazard after the reservoir fills to form the 12,490-acre Falls Lake.

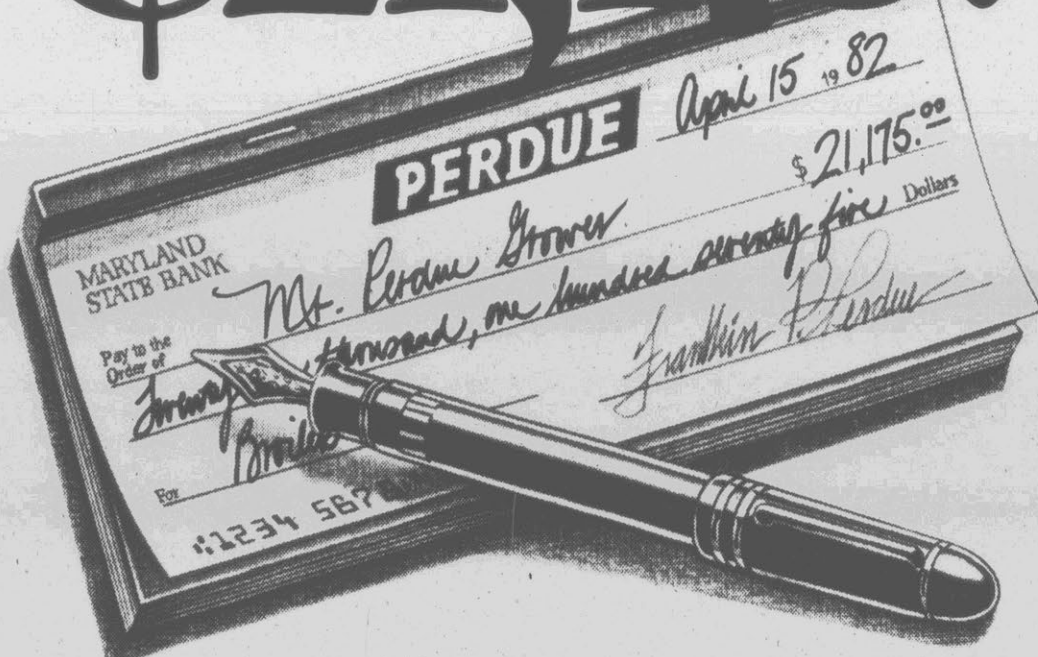

The lake is expected to be completely filled by September. It will cover parts of Wake, Durham and Granville counties.

The parachuting engineers will be dropped from two C-130 aircraft at 2 p.m. each day through Wednesday. They will perform a tactical maneuver to secure the bridges, place explosives throughout the night and, after a safety inspection the next day, blow them up.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers decided to allow the Army to demolish the bridges because it would be cheaper than hiring a private contractor.

IN TODAY'S UNCERTAIN TIMES, PERDUE ANNOUNCES SOMETHING YOU CAN BE SURE OF...

$21,175.

With the population rising and the per capita consumption of poultry increasing, the future keeps getting brighter for Perdue's broiler producers. With prices increasing each day it seems there's only bad news. But Perdue keeps coming up with good news—like our New House Guarantee. Now you can earn a guaranteed $21,175.00 per year, the highest guarantee available in North Carolina.

Because of Perdue's consistent quality, the market for our product is more than our supply. To keep up with the demand, we need 150 more good producers in your area now!

If you're interested in a good dependable extra income, take a look at the six points below. We think you'll agree; Perdue broiler houses are one of the best agricultural investments you can make.

- Perdue has been in the poultry business for 62 years and is the fourth largest poultry company in the country and chickens are our only business.

- There are nearly 3,000 Perdue broiler houses in operation on the Delmarva peninsula and over 900 in North Carolina. You will be joining other successful farmers that are improving their farm income with poultry.
- Because of Perdue's consistent quality, the market for Perdue chickens in the Northeast is growing faster than we can grow chickens. Five major retailers are now wanting Perdue chickens but we cannot supply them. Even though we process over 4 million chickens each week we can sell 15% more chickens than we can produce.
- There is no other agricultural investment that offers you a guaranteed income on a weather-proof crop that has never failed to make money.
- Perdue absorbs fluctuations in the grain and poultry markets and these markets do not affect the producer's paycheck.
- As a broiler producer, Perdue will guarantee you a gross annual income of $21,175.00 for the first six years for each 500 foot house (based on 5.5 flocks each year).

The market for Perdue broilers in the Northeast is growing faster than we can grow chickens. So if you're interested in a sound investment, we're interested in you.

Medical School Will Graduate Second Class

ECU News Bureau

The East Carolina University School of Medicine will honor its second class of graduating physicians May 7 at a convocation ceremony on the ECU main campus.

Dr. Charles G. Rob, professor of surgery at the medical school, will give the keynote speech at the 4 p.m. ceremony at Hendrix Auditorium in Mendenhall Student Center.

During the assembly medical school faculty and the graduating class will present outstanding student and faculty awards. The 36 students in the class will receive their diplomas during hooding ceremonies at ECU commencement May 8.

Rob, internationally known for the development of pioneer techniques in vascular surgery, joined the ECU faculty in 1978 after retiring from the University of Rochester School of Medicine and dentistry, where he was professor and chairman of the surgery department for 17 years.

A native of Weybridge, England, Rob received his medical degree from Cambridge University in 1937 and completed his postgraduate training at St. Thomas's Hospital, London. He served as professor of surgery at the University of London before coming to the United States in 1960 to accept appointment as chairman of surgery at the University of Rochester School of Medicine.

In addition to teaching and patient care responsibilities at ECU, Rob is director of the medical school's vascular laboratory. He has also been active in the development of the regional program for emergency medical services.

Weed problems can often develop in corn fields after the initial herbicide or herbicides have been applied. Some very competitive or hard-to-control weeds may need to be controlled with a postdirected or layby treatment. Layby applications are applied when the corn is 15-20 inches tall using drop nozzles to direct the spray to the base of the corn plant. At no time should the spray come up more than one-third the way on the corn stalk. For convenience these treatments may be applied in nitrogen solution.

Begin scouting fields for weed problems when the corn is 8-12 inches tall. A light cultivation may take care of your weed problems but sometimes more than a cultivation is needed. Remember, when corn reaches 12 inches in height, the roots have already met in the row middles. Any cultivation must be shallow. Some weeds are very competitive and are quite hard to control. Sometimes a layby application was needed and returned an average of 24 bushels of corn over the planting treatment alone. Be sure to get good coverage of the broadleaf signal grass. Lorox or Evik plus a surfactant gives excellent control.

Sicklepod is another hard-to-control weed especially in soybeans. This is one reason corn is planted in several fields here in Pitt County. In an on-farm test in 1981 the addition of a layby treatment increased corn yields 17 bushels per acre. There are several herbicides which are effective used as a postdirected spray. They are, 2,4-D amine plus a surfactant, Banvel, Evik or Lorox. All of these are effective on sicklepod with up to four normal leaves on a plant. Be careful when using 2,4-D and Banvel. Some crops, especially tobacco, are very sensitive to these.

Every field has different needs when it comes to weeds. Scout fields and make the decision on additional weed control based on actual weed pressures.

Knoxville No Forbidden City To Treasures Of Old China

By DEAN FOSDICK

Associated Press Writer
KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — China is using bricks from the Great Wall as building blocks for friendship with visitors attending the 1982 World's Fair.

Han Dexin, deputy director of China's pavilion at the six-month energy exposition, said Sunday that it was the first time that a mainland government has appeared in a world's fair since 1904 at St. Louis.

And it is only the second time since the communist government took power in 1949 that pieces of the 1,500-mile-long wall have been taken out of China. The destination was Tennessee that time, too; the government in December donated an inscribed block to the Museum of Ancient Brick in Johnson City.

"It was done because of a special arrangement with the World's Fair," Han said. "Not many of our friends know about China because of historical reasons. I hope our exhibit will promote friendship."

The United States and 21 foreign countries, four states and more than 50 corporations and organizations have assembled some of the newest wonders of science along with the oldest relics of civilization at the fair, which opened Saturday.

China's 20,000-square-foot exhibit contains thousands of pieces of porcelain, furniture and artwork along with two life-size terra cotta warriors and a horse sculpted more

Six Students Semifinalists

DURHAM — Charles R. Eilber, director of the North Carolina School of Science and Mathematics, announced that six students from Pitt County are among the semifinalist nominees who will be interviewed for selection to attend the school next fall. Approximately 240 students will be chosen out of 454 semifinalists.

The semifinalists from this area are: Michele D. Coburn, D.H. Conley High School; Rebecca L. Denson, Ayden-Grifton High School; Phillip C. Evans, D.H. Conley High School; Ragan S. Spain, D.H. Conley High School; Grayson B. Morris and Marc A. Shannon, J.H. Rose High School.

The NCSSM is the nation's first public, residential, high school for 11th and 12th graders who are gifted and talented in science and mathematics.

Hospital Picnic Is Held

Barbecue was served up with fellowship, games and nice weather during the Pitt County Memorial Hospital fifth annual employees picnic Friday.

The picnic has been held on the hospital grounds each April 30 since the new hospital facility opened on that date five years ago.

The Country Squires bluegrass band provided music, and employees and their guests took part in volleyball, softball, horseshoes, relay races, and disc throwing. Two sessions were held, one from 11-3 p.m. and one from 4:30 to 6 p.m. The separate sessions were planned to accommodate all the shifts of hospital workers.

Many of the hand-made items are being offered for sale, Han said, including intricate carpets, some of which are priced around $2,000.

"We hope to sell all the items, but friendship is more important than profit," said Han, 48, who doubles as deputy director of China's

Three Wrecks Reported Sat.

An estimated $3,150 property damage resulted from three traffic collisions investigated Saturday by Greenville police.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from an 11:47 p.m. collision on Dickinson Avenue, 150 feet west of the Grand Avenue intersection, when a car driven by Bernard Little of 409 Ford St. collided with a building at 1008 Dickinson Ave.

Damage was estimated at $700 to the car and $1,000 to the building.

Vehicles driven by Manzer Ann Saad of 400 Martinsborough Road and Louis Franklin Everett Jr. of Winterville, collided about 10:05 a.m. at the intersection of Arlington and Greenville Boulevards, causing an estimated $500 damage to the Saad car and $300 damage to the Everett truck.

Cars driven by Cary Wayne Williams of 104 Edgewood Trailer Park and Kelly West Lemley of Shady Knoll Trailer Park collided about 1:05 p.m. Saturday on Greenville Boulevard, 300 feet west of the Arlington Boulevard intersection, resulting in an estimated $400 damage to the Williams car and $250 damage to the Lemley vehicle.

Solar Fraction

Greenville's solar fraction calculated by the department of physics of East Carolina University was 70 yesterday, which means that a solar water heater could have provided 70 percent of your hot water.

Council for Promotion of International Trade.

Lined up along railings leading to the pavilion are displays of industrial equipment, most of them solar energy-related.

"Energy is a big problem in our country," Han said. "Solar cookers and heaters are being used in the countryside. We protect our forests, so we can't use wood."

Fair organizers contributed about $1 million to help China bring its exhibit to the exhibition and Chemical Bank of New York helped pay for the pavilion.

The last three world's fairs in this country have had exhibits sponsored by the Republic of China, or Taiwan, but the island nation wasn't invited here.

Forty-two people were brought halfway around the world to supervise construction of China's pavilion. They live in apartments on Knox-

E.B. Aycock Students Win Robbery Investigated

Seven E.B. Aycock Junior High School students were winners in the state History Day competition held at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte this past weekend.

Earning a second-place award in the senior media presentation division were Amy Van Scoy, Maya Ajemera, Susan Holec, Carol Ambert, and Lisa Pories. The girls' presentation titled "Child Labor" is eligible for competition on a national level in College Park, Md. in early June.

Joey Jenkins and Charles Moore's project titled "Super Train" placed third in the senior division.

The students were accompanied to Charlotte by Ron Hockmuth, their history teacher.

Most don't understand English, Han said, and they have had little time to practice since arriving three weeks ago.

"We've been working on the pavilion from 8 a.m. to half-past 6," he said. "We haven't had time to do any sightseeing."

Along with artisans, sales clerks and experts in solar, hydroelectric, coal, petroleum and gas technology, the Chinese brought their own chef.

"We Chinese people like Chinese food," he said, waving his hand toward a restaurant and cafeteria in rooms adjacent to cases of jade art objects.

"Our stay here for a half-year is a long period. It is more convenient and more comfortable if we have a Chinese chef."

Open to visitors, the restaurant and cafeteria serve oriental delicacies from the nation's 21 provinces.

Claim Public Lands Damaged

WASHINGTON (AP) — The country's largest environmental group says Interior Secretary James Watt is pursuing policies that are hurting the nation's public lands.

In a report that evaluated Watt's first 15 months in office, the National Wildlife Federation said Watt's goal of speeding up energy and mineral development represents a "drain America first" approach.

The report also said Watt's opposition to acquiring new land for the National Park system means critical lands will be lost to development.

A spokesman for Watt said the secretary would have no immediate comment on the report. In February, the Interior Department released an 18-page laudatory review of Watt's first year in office.

Harry Leslie, general manager of the manufacturing division of Burroughs Wellcome Co. here, retired May 1 after 30 years with the pharmaceutical firm.

Leslie accompanied Burroughs Wellcome to Greenville in 1970 when the company moved its operations from Tuckahoe, N.Y. to North Carolina. Following the relocation, he was plant manager at the manufacturing facility that now employs nearly 1,400 people.

He has served as trustee to Pitt Community College and is president of the Pitt County United Way. He has also served with the Chamber of Commerce and is currently chairman of the board of trustees of Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Following high school, Leslie served a three-year apprenticeship with a drug chain in Ontario. In 1941, he graduated with honors from the University of Toronto where he was awarded the Frank R. Lorrman medal for proficiency in organic chemistry.

After serving as a flying officer in the Royal Canadian

Air Force during World War II, he worked for several pharmaceutical firms including Parke-Davis and Co. and R. P. Scherer Corp. of Detroit before joining Burroughs Wellcome. He rose to general site manager here in 1979 and became director of occupational health and safety at the plant in 1981.

Leslie and his wife, Myrtle, and their children David, Dale and Mary Anne joined some 350 friends and associates at a dinner honoring Leslie Friday night at the Casablanca.

Want A Global Vote On Nuclear Arms

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

Some leaders of the disarmament movement are getting behind a proposal to give every adult in the world a chance to vote for an end to the arms race.

But other peace leaders are leery of the idea. They think it might fall flat, and thus discredit their work.

Such a global referendum has never been conducted. Those promoting the idea say it would serve as a spur by the people of the world to their leaders to get going on disarmament.

The notion originated in Canada, where an organization called Operation Dismantle has worked since 1977 to rally support. Operation Dismantle is trying to persuade the Canadian government to lay the idea before the United Nations either at the special session on disarmament in June or at a regular General Assembly meeting next fall.

In the meantime, 33 Canadian cities and towns will vote in a peace referendum this fall.

In the United States, leaders of the National Nuclear Freeze Campaign, a loose coalition of local organizations, will discuss at their June meeting whether to get behind the referendum idea.

T. James Stark, president of Operation Dismantle, appealed for support from the campaign's international task force two weeks ago.

Task force chairman Terrence Provan, an official of the American Friends Service Committee, said he supports the concept if it were clear "that it would not be done in a feeble way." He said the soonest a world vote could occur would be late next year.

But some leaders are fearful of blurring their movement's single-minded focus on a Soviet-American freeze in the development, deployment or testing of nuclear weapons as a first step toward disarmament.

"We don't want the freeze movement to bite off more than is manageable," said George Sommaripa, a freeze campaign worker in Massachusetts.

Another peace worker, James Olson, director of the Unitarian-Universalist U.N.

office in New York, said he had a hunch the scheme would not get very far.

But Seymour Melman, an engineering professor at Columbia University and co-chairman of the Citizens' Organization for a Sane World, said he intends to propose this week that SANE's executive committee endorse the idea.

"It would encourage discussion, put the issue before a large public," he said.

As Stark sees it, public opinion would prevent any country from refusing to participate once the idea got the backing of the United Nations.

Stark proposes that the ballot question should read:

"Do you support the goal of balanced general disarmament beginning with a verifiable U.S.-USSR freeze on testing, producing and deploying all nuclear weapons and delivery systems?"

In conversations with the U.N. missions of 50 countries in 1979, he said, only one country expressed disapproval of the idea. He declined to identify the country, saying his conversations were confidential.

"Governments have failed for 35 years to face up to the consequences of nuclear war," Stark said. "The people of this world have a human right to a vote as a matter of survival."

Seek TV Tapes In Suit By Policemen

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — New Jersey's shield law comes under scrutiny this week when a Superior Court judge hears from two police officers who want a look at unused tape from a "60 Minutes" segment.

The two officers filed suit against CBS in August, claiming they were defamed in a "60 Minutes" segment entitled "Equal Justice." The officers — Orange Police Capt. Frank Possert and former Orange detective Sgt. Jack Farley, now an investigator with the Essex County Prosecutor's office — maintain portions of the program were incorrect.

CBS has refused to turn over the tapes, invoking provisions of the shield law, which protects reporters' notes and news sources.

The first motion hearing in the case is set for Friday, when Superior Court Judge Robert Muir in Morristown will be asked to decide if the shield law applies to outtakes, film that is not used in a broadcast.

The program dealt with the indictment of black high school teacher Mims Hackett in 1975. Possert and Farley maintain the program should not have been broadcast in August of 1979 and again in December of 1980.

Hackett was charged with kidnapping Larry Moss, a man Hackett suspected of breaking into his apartment. He was convicted, but later pardoned when Moss recanted his testimony. Hackett campaigned against four white candidates for a seat on the Orange City Council.

Possert and Farley say the show incorrectly indicated they orchestrated Hackett's arrest and indictment to prejudice his chances in the election.

Their attorney, Robert F. Gold, contends in a brief filed in Muir's court that the shield law does not apply to civil cases.

CBS attorneys Barry Shapiro and Barry Epstein maintain in their brief that the outtakes are protected as information gathered by the reporting staff. The attorneys say it would be "absurd and meaningless" to have a shield law that automatically is waived in civil cases.

New York Man Hit By Auto

A Great Neck, N.Y., man, in his 60s, was admitted to Pitt Memorial Hospital Sunday night after being struck by a car on Greenville Boulevard, near the Ramada Inn.

Police Department investigators said Sidney Sommers, a guest at the Ramada Inn, was struck by a car as he and a friend attempted to cross the street.

Officers, who identified the driver of the vehicle involved as Andrea Ray Williams, said Sommers was taken to surgery to correct damage to his right shoulder and arm following the 10:55 p.m. incident.

Investigation of the mishap is continuing.

CARS DAMAGED

Cars driven by Terry Keith Tugwell of Route 1, Farmville, and Claudia Vernet Massinburg of 209 North Elm St. collided about 4:53 p.m. Friday on Charles Street, 20 feet north of the 14th Street intersection.

Police investigators estimated damage from the mishap at $400 to the Tugwell car and $3,000 to the Massinburg auto.

Caribbean Exercise Is Regarded U.S. Signal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pentagon officials say the current military exercises in the Caribbean Sea serve to back up President Reagan's statement that America is ready to do whatever is necessary to protect U.S. interests in the area.

"We want to send a signal to those people who are friends and those who would oppose us in this part of the world that we can project military force," said Rear Adm. Robert P. McKenzie, who will command the "Ocean Venture '82" maneuvers.

But the Defense officials said the exercises were planned long before Reagan declared in February that America would do "whatever is prudent and necessary" to keep U.S. interests in the Caribbean safe.

Nonetheless, they see the exercises as a way of getting Reagan's message across.

McKenzie and other U.S. officials note that the Soviet Union is helping Cuba to build its navy from a defensive to an offensive force, particularly with light, fast patrol boats and upgraded MiG fighter planes.

They also make the point that much of the oil imported by the United States, along with other key needs such as bauxite, is shipped through the Caribbean sea lanes.

The exercises, which conclude May 16, are the largest ever, involving 45,000 servicemen, 350 airplanes, and 60 ships. That armada includes two aircraft carrier battle groups.

Among the exercises will be amphibious assaults and naval gunnery at the Navy's Puerto Rican base, Roosevelt Roads. Another will be a Marine demonstration that family members and other dependents can be quickly removed from the U.S. base at Guantanamo, on the eastern end of Cuba.

The exercises, held annually for several years, come against a backdrop of increasing focus by the Reagan administration on the area.

The administration claims Cuba is supplying arms to guerrilla movements in Central America, particularly El Salvador.

There has been speculation that a naval blockade of Cuba might be ordered in an attempt to stop arms shipments. Six weeks ago, Navy Secretary John Lehman said the U.S. fleet could set up a blockade "anywhere in the Caribbean against all comers." But he refused to say if that would be done.

Administration officials have also criticized the socialist government of Grenada, which has allied itself with Cuba.

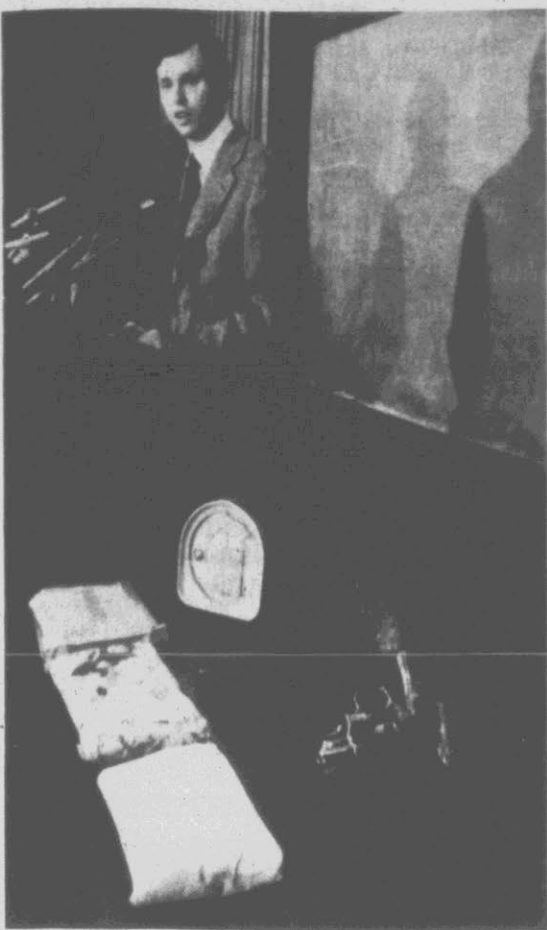

Reagan has also laid out a

Caribbean Basin plan that includes an additional package of $350 million in economic aid and $60 million more in military assistance to various nations.

In 1981, the "Ocean Venture" maneuvers involved a scenario in which U.S. hostages were rescued from an out-island of a nation called "Amber," followed by the seizure by U.S. troops of Amber's airfield on the nation's main island.

In some ways, "Amber" resembled Grenada and the Grenadines complained that the exercises presaged an invasion by the United States.

But U.S. officials denied any such intention. Last week, Pentagon officials said the parallels were "only a coincidence," but any similar scenario was avoided in the planning for the current exercises.

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦AK ♠A8 ♣954 ♦A98742
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♦ Pass 1 ♠ 1 ♦
2 ♣ Pass 2 ♠ Pass

What action do you take?

A.—Now that partner has shown a long, and possibly fine, heart suit, game is a distinct possibility. However, the hand might play better in no trump than in hearts. Rather than raise to three hearts with your doubleton ace, we suggest you cue-bid two spades and hear what partner has to say. Since you made a minimum rebid at your second turn, partner won't expect you to hold the world for your cue-bid. What he should expect is that you have a spade stopper, some sort of heart fit and a maximum for your previous bidding. Doesn't that describe your hand?

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦AK4 ♠AQ93 ♣AQ7 ♦J87
In third seat, your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one spade. What action do you take?

A.—Your hand is too strong for an overall of one no trump, which shows about the equivalent of a one no trump opening bid. Double, then bid no trump at the cheapest level over partner's response. That will describe your hand exactly.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦Q952 ♠AK98 ♣K5 ♦J82
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♦ Pass 3 ♣ Pass
4 ♣ Pass 4 ♠ Pass
5 ♣ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—With your wealth of prime controls, you certainly intend to continue cooperating with any slam efforts your partner might make. We suggest a bid of five no trump. That cannot be the grand slam force, because neither you nor your partner has shown first-round control of diamonds. The only makable slam might be in no trump, where your king of diamonds won't be exposed to a lead through. Your bid must show second-round diamond control, and it must be the king since you are prepared to play in no trump.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦AQ ♠J2 ♣K1065 ♦Q8652
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♦ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
1 ♠ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—The auction has developed very favorably for you. A jump to two no trump will not only announce your intention to get to game, but it will also inform partner that most of your strength lies in the suits he did not bid. The danger with a jump to three clubs is that it might take you beyond three no trump.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦1065 ♠7 ♣A985 ♦KJ1072
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 NT Pass
3 ♣ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—What started out as an ordinary hand has suddenly become very powerful. You must flash the message to partner. A jump in clubs will not convey the full strength of your hand. The only sensible course is to make a cue-bid of three diamonds followed by a jump to five clubs if given the opportunity. Don't concern yourself with the possibility that partner might pass three diamonds — his jump shift guaranteed another bid.

Q.6—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦K87 ♠952 ♣Q65 ♦AJ107
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
Pass Pass 1 ♠ Pass
1 NT Pass Pass Dble

What action do you take?

A.—If your partner has a sound opening bid, East is in trouble — your side has a significant edge in strength. A redouble now will advise partner that you are at the top of your range for your original response, and will leave him well placed to make intelligent decisions as the auction progresses.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market showed a moderate loss today, continuing last week's decline.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial, off 13.80 last week, fell 6.27 to 842.09 by noon.

Losers held a 5-3 lead over gainers in the broad tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

More than half the Dow average's decline stemmed from ex-dividends, or dividend payment adjustments, involving seven of its component stocks.

American Telephone & Telegraph led the active list, off 1/4 at 54 1/4. A 115,000-share block traded at 54, and another of 100,000 changed hands at 54 1/4.

The NYSE's composite index lost .16 to 66.92. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off 1.11 at 269.35.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 17.66 million shares at noon, against 23.39 million at the same point Friday.

Second Only To Citrus Crop

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Florida's marijuana crop, worth an estimated $400 million last year, is second only to citrus growing as the state's largest agriculture industry, authorities say.

Federal officials report that 400 suspected drug smugglers and 2.9 million pounds of marijuana were seized in southern Florida during the first four months of 1982.

"But while we're preoccupied with them, we've also had it coming up in our backyard," the state law enforcement department's Jim Sewell was quoted Sunday.

Outstanding ECU Students Inducted

ECU News Bureau
 Thirty-nine outstanding students in the ECU University School of Business have been inducted into the chapter of Beta Gamma Sigma honor society in business administration.

The new members include residents of 17 North Carolina counties, 10 other states and West Germany.

Beta Gamma Sigma is the national scholastic society recognized by the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business and has chapters only at campuses with accredited business schools.

To be eligible for membership, a student must rank in the upper five percent of a junior class, top 10 percent of a senior class or top 20 percent of students working towards master's degrees.

The ECU chapter also inducted Glenn H. Williams of Raleigh, a managing partner in the accounting firm of Arthur Andersen and Co., as an honorary member.

Names, parents' names and hometown addresses of area new student members follow:

Convention For Inventors Held

By BOB DVORCHAK
Associated Press Writer
PITTSBURGH (AP) — Inventors who swear they have what the world is clamoring for are gathered here to peddle such creations as an automatic fly swatter, an automatic card shuffler, and a portable road block.

Eighty booths of inventions of all sorts were previewed Sunday as manufacturers and distributors opened a five-day convention as part of a technology show called Technomat '82.

"We have household products, industrial machinery, fashions, new games, lawn and garden items and educational products," said Jane Kostik, manager of a trade show sponsoring the North American Invention-New Product Exposition.

"Inventors are a unique group of people. They're very determined," she added. "They all have an idea that they think will probably make them a million dollars."

Inventors paid up to $800 a booth to show off their contraptions in hopes that some businessman will buy, license, manufacture or market their ideas.

There's a gadget that is supposed to peel oranges in 30 seconds, a skateboard made for snow, a typewriter keyboard that plays music, a timer-clapper that scares away pigeons, a soap holder that keeps soap dry, a bionic marble that claims to communicate with people through mental telepathy, an automatic way to keep oil in your car and a desk made for use in an automobile.

There's also a toy sound wagon that plays music by driving on top of an album record, swimwear made with signs of the Zodiac, breakfast cereal storer, a folding baby changer for diapering and improved safety pins.

V. Lopez Rome of Huntington, Calif., invented a device that enables a person on a bicycle to take a drink by sipping through a retractable hose. He got the idea after a biker in the Olympic games lost a race when he reached back for his water bottle.

"There has to be a better way. That's what inspires people," Rome said.

William Houser of East Brunswick, N.J., got a brainstorm for the His & Hers Auto Lug Wrench when a woman with a flat tire awakened him in the middle of the night with a knock on his door.

The device loosens wheel nuts with less force. "Somebody's got to come up with something better," Houser said.

Necessity is the mother of some inventions. Cynthia Frings of Theresa, Wis., invented her Pill-Crusher because nobody was making a handy device that would crush the vitamins she had to feed to her show dog. It works like a pair of scissors.

"I needed something. And I asked myself, 'Why doesn't somebody make this.' So I did," said Mrs. Frings, who says her device will make the mortar and pestle obsolete.

Review Prison Security Setup
 YPSILANTI, Mich. (AP) — A disturbance at Michigan's toughest prison is causing a second look at security, including whether to add more guards, reduce the number of inmates allowed out of their cells at once and provide prisoners a different type of shoe.

Huron Valley Correctional Facility officials want to prevent a recurrence of a brief cell-block takeover.

Face Jail For Setting Fires
 NEW YORK (AP) — Five supermarket owners face jail terms of between 10 and 20 years for setting fire to competing stores in their northern Brooklyn neighborhood, officials said.

The five — convicted of charges including conspiracy, arson and criminal restraint of trade — were scheduled to be sentenced May 25 by state Supreme Court Justice Charles Lawrence.

A jury deliberated 1 1/2 days before convicting the men late Saturday, according to a spokeswoman for Brooklyn District Attorney Elizabeth Holtzman, who said the fires were set at neighborhood groceries between April and August of 1980.

The Pritikin Research Foundation says, however, that not all was lost. A recent survey of 99 Natchitoches residents showed 55 could list more than four items from the Pritikin diet while no one in the nearby college town of Ruston could name more than two.

"I guess one way of putting that is that Lum Ellis did a good job," said Roland Pippin, who conducted the survey.

Waltrip Gambles, Takes Winston 500

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Darrell Waltrip said it was just a typical Talladega finish. "You've got three or four cars going for it and you gamble," Waltrip said. "This time I won it. Next time, it'll probably be somebody else."

Waltrip, with Terry Labonte right on his back bumper, went way up on the high-banked Alabama International Motor Speedway track to roar past Benny Parsons on the last of 188 laps. He then won the $398,000 Winston 500 Grand National race by about one-car length over Labonte.

Parsons, who set an all-time NASCAR stock car record in qualifying with a fast lap of 200.176 mph, was right behind in third, with 21-year-old Kyle Petty on his bumper in fourth.

"That's just a typical type of Talladega finish," Waltrip said. "Put 'em in there again and run 10 more laps, you'd have another winner."

It was the fourth victory of the season for the green and white Buick Regal, owned and prepared by Junior Johnson and sponsored by Mountain Dew. And it was the 43rd career victory for Waltrip, a 35-year-old Franklin, Tenn., resident who is 10th on the all-time Grand National list.

After Parsons set the qualifying record in his Pontiac LeMans and Waltrip qualified on the outside of the front row at 199.446, many people thought Sunday's crowd of more than 105,000 might see the all-time 500-mile racing record of 177.602 — set by Buddy Baker in the 1980 Daytona 500 — broken.

But eight caution flags, most of them brought out by blown engines and debris on the track, slowed Waltrip's overall pace to 156.683 mph.

"Every time a caution flag flies, you can kiss a record goodbye on at a major speedway," the defending Winston Cup champion noted. "But we were actually running faster out there than when we set the record (at Daytona Beach)."

The last of those caution

also sank a pair with 17 seconds left in regulation to force the extra period.

Coach Bill Fitch also credited Maxwell's work off the boards.

"Maxwell was the first to realize that everything Larry Bird shot wasn't going in," said Fitch. "He started rebounding just before Larry shot, and it paid off. The second shots kept us alive."

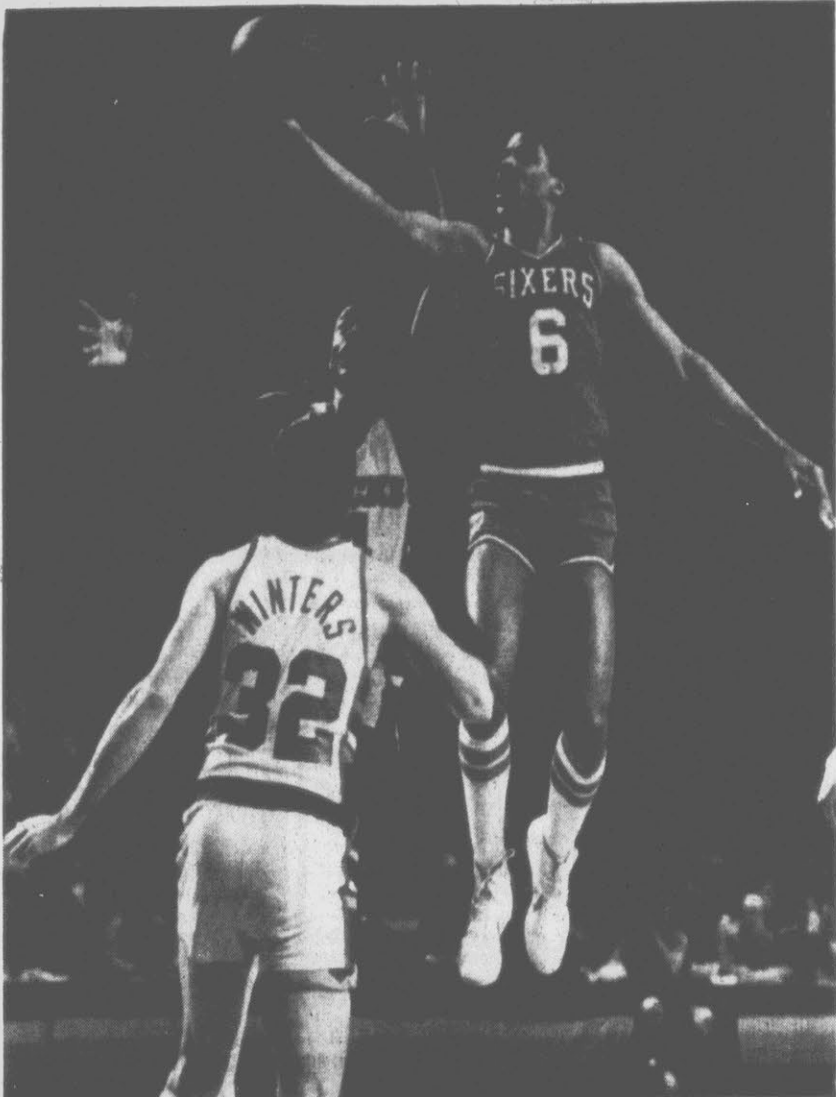

Bird, Boston's leading scorer during the regular season, was only 4-for-16 from the field.

Spencer Haywood had 28 points to lead the Bullets, but he missed a shot at the end of the fourth period that would have tied the series 2-2.

Terry came with me. "Then, when I looked back there and saw Benny and Terry running side-by-side, I knew I had it," Waltrip added. (Please turn to page 11)

Kirmayr Is 'Magic' In First-Round

NEW YORK (AP) — The magic — Carlos Kirmayr — is back, and he helps to give the famed West Side Tennis Club a decidedly Latin flavor.

Kirmayr, the Cinderella finalist here a year ago when he began by upsetting John McEnroe in the first round, led a parade of six Latin players who posted victories on the opening day of the $500,000 WCT Tournament of Champions.

McEnroe, who is the No. 1 seed in this tournament for the third straight year, begins play tonight when he takes on Chris Johnstone of Australia. Second-seeded Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia will play his first-round match later in the week.

The winner in the final on Mother's Day earns $100,000 while the runnerup takes home $40,000.

Kirmayr, the blond, bearded Brazilian who became a crowd favorite last year with his uncharacteristic serve and volley clay-court game, displayed his magic again Sunday night, returning seemingly impossible gets and spinning and diving at the net to hit winning volleys.

Kirmayr stopped Romesh Krishnan of India 6-3, 5-7, 6-3 to lead a trio of Brazilians into the second round. Joao Soares upset 15th-seeded Vince Van Patten 6-3, 6-7, 7-6 and Marcos Hocevar outlasted Diego Perez of Uruguay 6-4, 4-6, 7-5.

Coach Pat Riley isn't convinced another long layoff will help Los Angeles in the National Basketball Association playoffs, although the Lakers were idle for nine days before sweeping the Phoenix Suns.

"I'm disappointed we have to be off seven straight days because we're playing so well right now," Riley said after the Lakers finished off the Suns with a 112-107 victory Sunday.

"But if they (the Lakers) want to win four in a row all the time, I'll take it."

While the Lakers advanced to the third round, San Antonio, Boston and Philadelphia all widened their best-of-7 series leads to 3-1. The Spurs defeated Seattle 115-113, the Celtics wore down Washington 103-99 in overtime and the 76ers defeated Milwaukee 100-93.

San Antonio is at Seattle, Washington at Boston and Milwaukee at Philadelphia on Wednesday night.

Riley said he feared the Lakers, who won the first two games by 19 points and the third game 114-108, "were going to have a letdown for this game, but we really held the intensity level up high."

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Jamaal Wilkes scored 24 points each and Earvin "Magic" Johnson had another brilliant all-around game to beat the Suns.

Johnson had 15 points, 12 rebounds and 11 assists, the third time in the four-game series that he was in double figures in all three categories. He also had six key points down the stretch.

The game was tied at 100 with 5:11 to play when Johnson tapped in a basket, then hit a pair of free throws and drove for a layup in the next 90 seconds to put the Lakers in control.

"I didn't think they could beat us," Johnson said. "We would have had to beat ourselves. It was a total team effort and a great series for us. We sustained our intensity throughout the whole game."

"We were able to upset them," said Abdul-Jabbar. "They couldn't do what they wanted to do at all. They had to find ways to get around our defense and they were on unfamiliar ground."

Walter Davis scored 18 points to lead the Suns, who had advanced to the second round by beating the Denver Nuggets in a best-of-3 series. Alvan Adams and Larry Nance added 16 apiece.

"Give L.A. credit — they played some outstanding basketball," said Suns Coach John MacLeod. "I don't know if they're the best team in the NBA, but they are as good as anybody we have seen. The way they're playing, they're of championship caliber."

MacLeod said the Lakers successfully countered everything the Suns did, both offensively and defensively.

"We were never able to get a lead on them, to get them to play catch-up with us," he said.

Spurs 115, Sonics 113

San Antonio got within one game of joining the Lakers in the Western Conference final by winning their third two-point game over Seattle.

The Spurs got 17 points from backup center Dave Corzine, including four free throws in the final 30 seconds to hold off Seattle. Mike Bratz also had 17 points and contributed a pair of clutch foul shots down the stretch as the Spurs survived a seesaw game in which the score was tied 23 times and there were 17 lead changes.

"We're in the driver's seat, but it's not over yet," said the 6-foot-11 Corzine. "We're going to try our hardest in Seattle."

Gus Williams hit a game-high 33 points for the Sonics. Mike Mitchell led the Spurs with 22, 16 in the first quarter.

76ers 100, Bucks 93

Julius Erving had 21 points and Caldwell Jones, Philadelphia's defense-minded center, added 20 for the 76ers in their victory over tired Milwaukee.

The Bucks, playing without Quinn Buckner and Junior Bridgeman, both sidelined for the rest of the season with injuries, seemed "to burn out a little," said Erving. "They had to play a lot of people a lot of minutes yesterday (Saturday), and I think you could feel that late in the game today."

The Bucks had five players average 42 minutes each in Saturday's victory that temporarily cut their series deficit to 2-1.

Jones scored 14 points in the second quarter, the most he has had in one period during his eight-year pro career, to give Philadelphia a 56-49 halftime lead. The Bucks cut the margin to 75-71 after three quarters, but Bobby Jones scored 10 of his 18 points in the fourth quarter to keep the 76ers ahead.

Celtics 103, Bullets 99

Robert Parish scored 28 points, but he fouled out and wasn't around in overtime when Boston free throws made the difference against Washington.

Two of the six Boston free throws in the final 75 seconds were made by Cedric Maxwell, who finished with 20 points. He also sank a pair with 17 seconds left in regulation to force the extra period.

Coach Bill Fitch also credited Maxwell's work off the boards.

"Maxwell was the first to realize that everything Larry Bird shot wasn't going in," said Fitch. "He started rebounding just before Larry shot, and it paid off. The second shots kept us alive."

Bird, Boston's leading scorer during the regular season, was only 4-for-16 from the field.

Spencer Haywood had 28 points to lead the Bullets, but he missed a shot at the end of the fourth period that would have tied the series 2-2.

Simmons Drives In 6 Runs As Brewers Beat Twins

By The Associated Press

Ted Simmons says switch-hitting is like being two different personalities — so both sides of Ted Simmons hit three-run homers Sunday...one from each side of the plate.

"Switch hitting is a strange thing. It's like being two separate people," Simmons said after homering off Al Williams in the first inning and Darrell Jackson in the seventh. His six runs batted in led the Milwaukee Brewers to an 11-4 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

Both Ted Simmons had combined for only a .204 batting average going into the game and neither had a home run.

"Today, both people are alive and well," added Simmons, who was struggling with a .204 average — 243 from the left side, .118 right-handed — and only three RBI coming into the game.

The Brewers jumped on Williams for four runs in the first inning on Ben Oglivie's RBI single and the first of Simmons' homers, this one batting left-handed. Gorman Thomas homered in the Brewers' third, Charlie Moore tripled a run across in the sixth and Simmons struck again with two men on base in the seventh, this time hitting right-handed against Jackson.

"People say you hit the same from both sides. I defy them to say that," Simmons said. "It's like being two separate people.

It'd be interesting to see what a psychoanalyst would say about it. Sometimes I hit good one way and not the other. Mechanically, you try to hit the same way. But you always know if you're hitting right-handed or left-handed."

Red Sox 6, Rangers 0

Dennis Eckersley scattered eight hits for his second shutout of the season and Boston wrapped up the decision with five runs in the first inning off Doc Medich. Glenn Hoffman and Rich Gedman each drove in two runs as the Red Sox won for the 11th time in the last 12 games and opened a 1½-game lead over Detroit in the AL East.

"It (the shutout) feels real good because I had lost five in a row against that team," said Eckersley, who hadn't beaten the Rangers in almost three years. "It also means a little bit more because I've got a losing record (5-10) against Texas."

"Actually, it's a different ballclub now. I'm not taking anything away from them, but I don't think they're as tough as they used to be. They're getting some bad breaks now. And they came in here at a time when we're playing great ball, getting the pitching, hitting and outstanding defense."

White Sox 10, Tigers 3

Harold Baines drove in three runs with a sacrifice fly and a two-run triple and unbeaten Lamarr Hoyt, making only his second start of the season, became the American League's first five-game winner. The White Sox knocked out loser Jack Morris with four runs in the fifth. Tom Paciorek singled home two runs in the first inning and Baines delivered his sacrifice fly in the fourth following singles by Greg Luzinski and Paciorek. Bill Almon opened the Chicago fifth with a single and scored on a double by Steve Kemp. Luzinski singled Kemp home and, after Paciorek walked, Baines tripled. Tony Bernazard socked a two-run triple in the sixth.

Orioles 6, Angels 4

Eddie Murray hit two doubles, drove in a run and scored one and Scott McGregor recorded his 10th straight victory over California. Murray doubled in the first inning to drive in Al Bumby, who walked, and hit another double in the third, chasing California starter Angel Moreno.

McGregor, who hasn't lost to the Angels since Aug. 18, 1978, said he didn't know why he has had such success against them. "The Angels have a lot of excellent players, some really strong hitters in the lineup. I just try to get the ball over the plate and let the rest take care of itself," said the left-hander, who scattered 10 hits.

Yankees 4, Mariners 2

Dave Winfield drove in the tie-breaking run with a line drive off the third base bag in the eighth inning and Roy Smalley added a two-run single, as the Yankees broke up a pitching duel between winner Ron Guidry and loser Floyd Bannister.

With one out, Willie Randolph doubled and took third on Jerry Mumphy's infield hit. Mike Stanton relieved Bannister and Winfield ripped a smash down the line which hit the bag and bounced straight in the air.

A's 5, Indians 2

Jeff Newman cracked a two-run homer and Jeff Burroughs scored twice to support the four-hit pitching of Mike Norris, who struck out five and walked three. Norris held the Indians hitless in all but two innings, giving up two hits in the third and fourth.

Cleveland took a 2-0 lead in the third on Toby Harrah's two-run homer but Oakland got three in the top of the fourth against Rick Waits, 0-4, on a walk, Joe Rudi's double, Dave McKay's RBI-grounder and Newman's homer.

Blue Jays 7, Royals 5

Lloyd Moseby and Willie Upshaw drove in two runs apiece. Upshaw's single in the first inning scored Damaso Garcia, who reached on an error by shortstop Onix Concepcion and stole second. Al Woods doubled Upshaw home. The Blue Jays went up 4-0 in the fifth on Moseby's two-run double. In the seventh, Moseby doubled and scored on Upshaw's single. Alfredo Griffin got an infield hit, was sacrificed to second, stole third and scored Toronto's sixth run on a single by Garth Iorg.

Schmidt Returns, Blasts Home Run As Phils Win, 3-0

By The Associated Press

Mike Schmidt, who says he hasn't fully recovered from a rib cage injury that sidelined him for 17 days, didn't need much time to start inflicting pain on National League pitchers again.

Schmidt, five-time NL home run champion and the league's Most Valuable Player the last two years, hit a two-run homer and a double Sunday in his second game since returning from the disabled list. Mike Krukow pitched a four-hitter as Philadelphia beat San Diego 3-0.

"Right now I've got to concentrate on my physical condition," said Schmidt, who was injured April 13 when he twisted his side while hitting a single during a game. "I'm always thinking about my rib cage. Because of that I sometimes don't take a good fundamental swing at the ball."

His swing was fundamentally sound enough Sunday to give him his first homer of the season and first two extra-base hits.

"It was one of the most fun home runs and doubles I've ever hit," said Schmidt, who hit his homer in the fifth inning off John Curtis, 2-1, giving Philadelphia a 3-0 lead. "After sitting out so long, I was beginning to wonder if I'd ever be able to swing fluidly again."

Krukow pitched his second shutout of the season for the Phillies, who have won only seven of 21 games.

Using an assortment of off-speed pitches, Krukow, 2-2, scattered a double to Sixto Lezcano in the second inning, a single by Juan Bonilla in the fourth, a sixth-inning single to Luis Salazar and a single by Dave Edwards in the ninth.

The Phillies got their first run in the first inning when Bob Dernier singled, stole second and third and came home on Gary Matthews' grounder. Dernier doubled before Schmidt's homer in the fifth.

Daniel 'Sneaks' To Win

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Beth Daniel led throughout the $100,000 LPGA Birmingham Golf Classic, but she said it wasn't until her lead slipped to one stroke in the final round that she knew she had won the tournament.

"The putt (on the first hole) was the key to my round. It was a sneaky five-foot to the cup with at least an eight-inch break," said Daniel, who fired a 3-under-par 69 Sunday to win her third LPGA tournament this year.

She the putt for par, and that set her on a record-tying course as she birdied the next three holes. Daniel finished with a three-round total of 203 on the 6,043-yard course at Green Valley Country Club, which tied the tournament record set by Jan Stephenson in 1976.

The 203 gave Daniel a four-stroke margin on Patty Sheehan, who challenged most of the day before she bogeyed the 15th hole and dropped three shots off the pace.

"When Patty got bogey there, I knew I had it won," Daniel said. "I hit the ball better this week than I have all year. I'm coming out of the tournament with a lot more confidence than I came in with."

Daniel took the lead in the first round with a course record 64 and held it the rest of the way, finishing 64-70-69 on the par-72 course.

Daniel's lead, which was two strokes starting out Sunday, shrank to one after the first hole, which she parred and Sheehan birdied. But Daniel birdied the second, third and fourth holes and never led by less than two strokes the rest of the way.

Sheehan closed with a 71 to lock up second place with a 207 total.

Sandra Haynie and Bonnie Lauer tied for third and fourth at 209. Defending champion Beth Solomon had a 75 and finished with a 5-over-par 221.

Sheehan said she may have been trying a little too hard on the back nine. "I hit the ball very well and putted rotten," Sheehan said. "I felt great after No. 1, when I pulled within a stroke. I felt it would be a battle all day."

"But I couldn't capitalize on my good shots. I couldn't have hit it much better."

THE DAILY REFLECTOR has been advertising local businesses since January 26, 1882.

In the early 1930's, White's Department Store was known as White's 5 & 10 Store. According to John Shannonhouse, manager, the family business started in the last years of the 19th century in a building at the corner of Fifth and Evans Streets, across from Brody's.

"Sam White, Jr., bought the business from his father and moved it to a building that was located on Evans Street, next to Taft Furniture Store," said Shannonhouse.

The present building was built in the early 1930's on the site of the White home. The house was moved behind the store, where the parking lot is today.

Back when receiving clerk Joe Averett began working at White's 40 years ago "most merchandise came to town by rail," said Averett. "Then we used a dray (mule) cart to bring it from the railroad station to the store. Then I would deliver the goods to Whites' other stores in a panel truck that would fit inside the one we use today."

Betty Worthington Bryant, payroll clerk, started working at White's, on Saturdays and during the summer, when she was 15 years old.

"The biggest over-all change," said Bryant, "is that the store is now self-service. We used to have cash registers in each department."

"We really sold some hot dogs on Saturday," remembers long-time employee Roosie Williams, "sometimes as many as 150 dozen of them at 10¢ each."

"White's used to sell groceries and meats, and the highest priced men's dress shirt was $1.00," said Williams.

"But over the many years, changes and all," said Shannonhouse, "the advertising department at THE DAILY REFLECTOR has been a good department to work with."

Preakness May Be Mims Gato del Sol

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Kentucky Derby winner Gato del Sol won't win thoroughbred racing's Triple Crown this year if trainer Ed Gregson has his way.

"I planned for the Derby and I planned for the Belmont," Gregson said Sunday, the day after his 21-1 colt won the 108th Derby. "His schedule has no Preakness on it."

The absence of the Derby winner from the Preakness would remove much of the lustre from the May 15 second leg of the Triple Crown.

Not since Tomy Lee in 1959 has a Derby winner passed up the Preakness.

There were few definite takers from the rest of the Derby field, either, for the 13-16-mile Preakness at Pimlico, one-sixteenth of a mile shorter than the Derby at Churchill Downs.

Leone J. Peters, who owns Gato del Sol with Arthur B. Hancock III, said the colt won't go to the Preakness "unless we want to win the Triple Crown."

"But with this kind of horse we don't have to win the Triple Crown because he can win any race he wants to win," said Peters, a retired New York realtor.

Only 11 horses have won the Derby, Preakness and the 1 1/2-mile Belmont, a feat that makes a horse very valuable breeding property. The last to do it was Affirmed in 1978.

While both Hancock and Peters seemed inclined to skip the Preakness, they said they would discuss it further with Gregson.

Hancock is from the famed Kentucky breeding family that has been active in raising thoroughbreds for many years. He owns Stone Farm; his brother, Seth, runs Claiborne Farm, which their late father A. B. "Bull" Hancock operated.

Before Saturday's 2 1/2-length victory over Laser Light, an 18-1 outsider, Gato del Sol hadn't won a race in four starts this year. In his previous effort April 22, he finished second, 5 1/2 lengths behind Linkage, a non-Derby starter although eligible in the Blue Grass Stakes at Keeneland.

Facing a rested colt like Linkage was one of the factors in skipping the Preakness, the owners said Saturday.

But on Sunday, Gregson said, "We're not ducking Linkage. I'm trying to do what's right for the animal."

Gato del Sol, a Kentucky-bred son of Cougar, was a survivor from a 3-year-old crop that was decimated by injury and illness. He came from last in a field of 19 under jockey Eddie Delahoussaye to win $417,600 from the gross purse of $522,600, the richest Derby ever.

Reinvested, part of the seven-horse parimutuel field, finished third, a neck behind Laser Light and 2 1/2 lengths in front of Water Bank.

Water Bank's more publicized stablemate, the one-eyed Cassalera, finished 13th.

Air Forbes Won, the 5-2 favorite of the crowd of 141,009 — second largest in Derby history — finished seventh. El Baba, the second choice, ran 11th.

They had been considered the best of what remained after standouts such as Timely Writer, Hostage and Stalwart were sidelined with illness or injury.

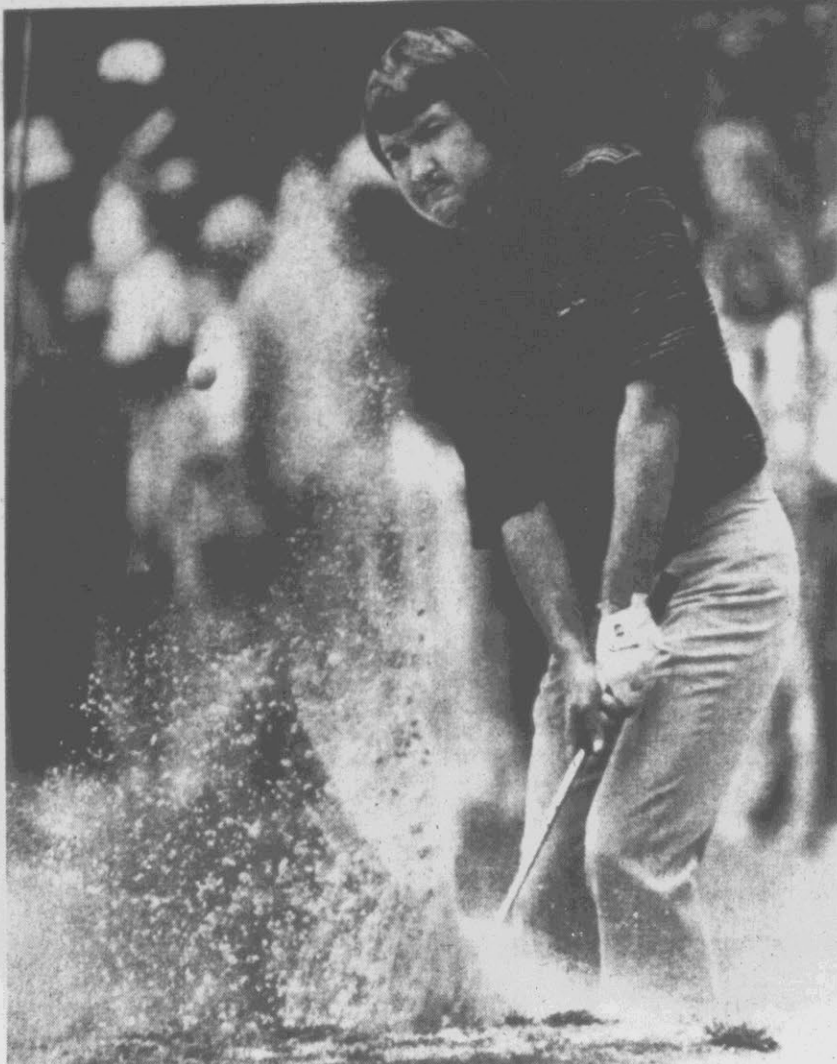

The Derby snapped Air Forbes Won's four-race unbeaten streak, and there are no Preakness plans for the Wood Memorial winner, said trainer Frank LaBocchetta.

El Baba, the Louisiana Derby winner, next will be pointed to the Illinois Derby, according to trainer Dewey Smith.

Gato del Sol made his move on the far turn, broke out of the pack in the stretch and was in command just past the eighth pole.

"That's the way this horse has to run" said Gregson, a Stanford graduate and a former Hollywood bit actor. "Eddie (Delahoussaye) is especially good at coming off the pace. At the half-mile pole, he was in the middle of the pack, but I knew we had it. Eddie hadn't even asked him to run yet."

"They're probably going to call this the 'Default Derby,' but I know this horse was a distance horse."

Gilder Says Goodbye To Club With 5-Stroke Win

DALLAS (AP) — Bob Gilder said goodbye to Preston Trail Golf Club in a par-wrecking finale that forever will leave his name listed in the Byron Nelson Classic record book.

Gilder cruised home with no fives on his card and a 3-under par 67 Sunday to establish a tournament record 14-under-par 266.

The tournament leaves Preston Trail after 15 years in 1983 and will be played at a new course, Cottonwood Valley, in nearby Irving.

"I'm sad to see it go," said Gilder, who earned a $63,000 check and his first victory since the Canadian Open in 1980.

The 31-year-old Gilder's score, fashioned with four rounds in the 60s, was three strokes lower than the previous record held by Buddy Allin and Tom Watson.

Gilder won by five shots over Curtis Strange, who cashed $37,800 with a final round 1-under 69 and a 271 total.

"Bob played just perfect ... He was just too tough to catch," said Strange.

"I knew my wife was going to come so I had better win," said Gilder. "I didn't want to blow it like I did at Muirfield. I was nervous at first but the putts didn't drop for Curtis and that made it easier."

Gilder made birdie putts of 2, 15, and 16 feet and saved par on two holes coming out of bunkers in his relentless round.

The Arizona State graduate boosted his earnings this year to $110,344 with his third tour victory.

Gilder said he knew he had the victory after he birdied the 15th and 16th holes.

Playing partner David Graham, who finished in a three-way tie for third, sidled over to him and quipped: "Do you think you can get in now?"

Graham was in Gilder's group at the Muirfield disaster. "David made me laugh," said Gilder. "I'm a lot more confident player now than I was then. My swing was breaking down under pressure. The swing held up Sunday."

Nordiques Look For Miracle Run

QUEBEC (AP) — In their third season of National Hockey League life, the New York Islanders staged a miracle run to the Stanley Cup semifinals. The Quebec Nordiques have achieved similar success in their third NHL season. And they claim they are not through yet.

The Nordiques trail the two-time defending champions 3-0 in the best-of-seven Wales Conference final. With the Islanders on the doorstep of their third consecutive Stanley Cup finals, the Nordiques are talking bravely of spectacular comebacks beginning Tuesday night.

All they need to do is look back at the 1974-1975 Islanders for encouragement. That team was in a 0-3 hole in the quarterfinals against Pittsburgh and stormed back to win the series. The '75 Islanders also trailed eventual Cup champion Philadelphia 0-3 but rallied to win the next three contests before they ran out of miracles.

"We are not going to lay down and die," said Quebec defenseman Dale Hoganson. "They still have to beat us one more."

The Nordiques played a solid game Saturday night but still couldn't defeat the Islanders, who won 5-4 in overtime on Wayne Merrick's goal. They could have been crushed by the loss. Instead, many of the Quebec players spoke of what it will take to clear the substantial hurdle between them and their first victory in the series.

You can't be more down than 0-3. At least the Nordiques can be comforted by the memory of the 1975 Islanders — even if the 1982 Islanders are the least likely team against which they might pull off a miracle comeback.

Meanwhile in British Columbia, the Vancouver Canucks got brilliant play from their penalty killers, their power-play lines and goaltender Richard Brodeur in a 4-3 victory Saturday night over the Chicago Black Hawks. It gave them a 2-1 lead in games in best-of-seven the National Hockey League Clarence Campbell Conference final.

"It was a tough game to win, even though we had the edge, because they hung in their right down to the last second," said Coach Roger Neilson of the Canucks. "We have to give a lot of credit to the penalty killers for the job they did and, of course, our power play came through with two big goals."

The last two Canucks goals, scored by Curt Fraser and Stan Smyl, came shortly after the Vancouver players had successfully killed penalties.

The goaltending was there, too, with Brodeur appearing in his 11th straight playoff game for Vancouver. Brodeur faced 27 Chicago shots and now has allowed just 27 goals in the playoffs.

Fourth game of the series will be Tuesday at the Pacific Coliseum and the fifth May 6 in Chicago.

Waltrip Wins...

Labonte said, "Last year in the Talladega 500 I was running second on the last lap and finished third (behind Ron Bouchard and Waltrip). This time I figured third was the place to be, but I wound up second.

"I thought I might have a chance to beat Darrell to the finish line, but I just couldn't pull it off. They both (Waltrip and Parsons) were a little stronger than I was today."

Parsons, who now has three poles and no victories this season, said, "I wouldn't have minded if just Darrell got by me back there, but he took Terry with him. I'd had a better chance at the checkered flag running second at the end. Besides, we need a win to get us going."

Waltrip picked up $44,350 for the victory, while Labonte, who has a 75-point lead over Waltrip in the Winston Cup point standings, won $28,730. Parsons, third in the point standings, won $33,564 — more than Labonte because of lap and contingency prizes.

Judith Anderson Back On Stage With Medea

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Drama Critic
NEW YORK (AP) — The Greek classic "Medea," first performed in 431 B.C., told of the maddened "barbarian" princess who took terrible revenge on her faithless husband by murdering their two young sons.

In 1947, Dame Judith Anderson so triumphantly played her here, in Robinson Jeffers' adaptation of Euripides' "Medea," that one awed critic wrote: "It would be useless now for anyone else to attempt the part."

But Zoe Caldwell is making that attempt on Broadway. And Miss Anderson, still a formidable actress at 83, is with her in the Jeffers' edition, now playing the key supporting role of the Nurse. Sadly though, neither this production nor Miss Caldwell's efforts are in the must-see category. Directed by her husband, Robert Whitehead, this "Medea," opening Sunday, is a disappointment, however well-intended.

Although full of sound, fury, and David Amram's discreet incidental drum and flute music, it's a strangely unconvincing classical display of passion, hate and overpowering lust for revenge.

Save Miss Anderson's moments and the loud, bloody-handed closing scene in which Medea's dead, blood-covered tykes are brought out, this piece seems ill at ease with itself, even self-conscious at times. It doesn't often grab you, involve you.

The menfolk here are partly to blame, among them Mitchell Ryan as Jason, the unhappy, opportunistic hearty who's casting aside Medea to wed the lovely young daughter of Creon, King of Corinth. His Jason — John Gielgud had the part in 1947 — is a routine one, a huge, bearded party who competently but none too memorably agonizes, bellows, briefly beams, then, at the finale, cries out in horror.

Peter Brandon's Aegeus, reluctant future protector of Medea, is a pale presence, while Paul Sparer's Creon, full of basso sternness, is little more than your basic, gruff-mannered king.

On the plus side, the distaff side, Pauline Flanagan is superb as the oldest of three Corinthian women here, with Miss Anderson brilliant throughout, particularly in her vivid description of the death agonies of Creon and his daughter, victims of Medea's golden gifts. More than anyone else, Miss Anderson makes the language come alive.

But Medea is said to be the main event here. And Miss Caldwell's interpretation of her, while flamboyant, daring and given a standing ovation at the preview I saw, just doesn't come off.

Clad in a low-cut purple gown, her eyes lit with insanity, her Medea rages, pleads, whimpers, screams, howls and hisses, as befits a proud woman scorned, betrayed, divorced and even ordered into exile.

But her histrionics seem too calculated, too obvious, flaws further aggravated by annoying mannerisms, particularly her frequent toying with her gown and her odd little toe-forward, almost-prancing steps as she moves in and out of moments of rage and madness.

Ben Edwards' towering Corinthian house, in front of which most of the proceedings take place, is an impressive set. I only wish the production matched it.

Still, Miss Caldwell, a fine talent, deserves credit for making the attempt. So do the producers, Barry and Fran Weissler, who despite this misfire at least can take comfort in the fact they succeeded this season in giving Broadway one solid-gold classic — "Othello."

Maugham Story Again Used

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Somerset Maugham's sultry, sensual short story, "The Letter," gets its fourth cinematic treatment tonight, but the first one made for television. The wonder is why ABC waited so long. This is what soap opera should be all about.

In essence, "The Letter" is a classy soap opera, brimming with intrigue, rich characters and steamy, tropical settings that raise the plot's torrid temperatures even higher. Maugham lived in the Far East in the early 1920s and acquired a feel for the judicial injustices, class condescensions and social tensions between the British and their colonial dependents in the Malay Peninsula.

This sensitivity appears throughout "The Letter," and serves to heighten the drama about a woman enflamed by passion who is restrained by a life and environment completely foreign to her.

"The Letter" spins its course through the mind and motivations of a classic literary character, Leslie Crosbie, the restless wife of a boring British rubber plantation owner. Played by Lee Remick, Leslie has as many sides as she has versions of why she killed the dashing Geoff Hammond (Ian McShane).

The story, set in 1939 in the jungles outside Singapore, is immediately grabbing. Leslie, her blouse torn from the shoulder, didn't just shoot Geoff, she unloaded six bullets into him.

During the police investigation, Leslie claims self-defense: Geoff tried to rape her. In her composed account, she has the adoring support of her blow-hard husband, Robert.

Jack Thompson, the brilliant Australian actor from "Breaker Morant" and "A Woman Called Golda," effectively turns Robert into a unlightened clod, who's only good fortune is to be one of the chosen British in colonial Malaya.

"I'm an ox," Robert tells Leslie. "But there's something I value; it's you."

Under these circumstances, Miss Remick is fine as the controlled, aloof Leslie, the proper, high-society lady weaving her needlepoint as her insides burn for a more exciting life and love. And she's quite effective as Leslie's original story begins unraveling. Leslie's lawyer privately reveals the existence of the one piece of evidence that could incriminate her, the letter. The contents show that Leslie made an impassioned plea for Geoff to visit her that fateful night.

Miss Remick conveys discomfort: a touch of her forehead, awkward movements, accelerated speech. In her newest story, a contrite Leslie says her needs temporarily clouded her thinking, and admits to an affair with Geoff. But, she says, her letter was merely an invitation to end the relationship.

However, when the heat's really on, as Leslie's second story also gets a little fishy and she seeks to destroy the letter, Miss Remick just doesn't cut it. She doesn't generate the same fire and fury that earned Bette Davis an Oscar nomination for the 1940 movie, "The Letter."

The rest of the cast gives full justice to Maugham's elaborately winding story. Ronald Pickup is the lawyer, who is torn emotionally and ethically about paying bribe money for the letter. Korean Soon-Teck Oh, who was in "East of Eden," is his ambitious law clerk who outwardly is deferential but privately disdainful of the British intrusions and discriminations.

And, in a short appearance, Wilfrid Hyde-White is delightful as the playful judge who conducts Leslie's trial.

One other star is the scenery. "The Letter" was filmed entirely in Hollywood and Los Angeles' Chinatown, but it sure looks like we're being transported into the jungles of another world.

And isn't that what good soap opera is supposed to do?

Competition Concerns Cable Industry Chiefs

By NORMAN BLACK
Associated Press Writer
LAS VEGAS (AP) — The cable television industry opens its annual convention this week still excited about the future but showing uncharacteristic concern over competition from other types of media.

"Cable is no longer the only way to eliminate the scarcity of programming options," says Thomas E. Wheeler, president of the National Cable Television Association. "Whereas cable may have once been, itself, a scarce resource, providing the only alternative to traditional broadcast television, we no longer sit astride that scarcity."

Those are unusual words from a man who just last year oversaw an annual convention with the theme, "Cable: The Future of Communications."

Wheeler's — and the industry's — change in perception stems from the growth of subscription television stations; microwave pay TV systems known generically as Multipoint Distribution Services, and satellite master antenna systems, in which large apartments or condominiums build their own private satellite dish to capture programming.

One example of the type services offered by cable television was inaugurated Sunday night, with a flip of a switch during a ceremony here, of Landmark Communications Inc.'s new "Weather Channel."

"There are few things as vital to people's lives as the weather," said Frank Batten, chairman and chief executive of Landmark. "We think the Weather Channel will be watched by more people than any other channel on their cable systems."

Company officials said the new channel is starting off with 4.2 million viewers.

The industry's overall concern with competition is spurred by the Federal Communications Commission's recent authorization of low-power TV stations and the likelihood the FCC soon will authorize construction of satellite-to-home broadcast systems. The cable industry has also taken note of the rising sales of video cassette and video disc players.

Nothing has changed the common viewpoint that cable is the only medium with the potential of offering consumers 100 or more channels. The problem, explains Wheeler, is that the other alternatives together can so fractionalize the market that cable loses the economic base it needs to build such large systems.

The cable industry, with more than 4,700 systems in operation serving an estimated 23.7 million households, has grown dramatically thanks to revenue from premium services that cost the subscriber extra like Home Box Office, Showtime and The Movie Channel. Wheeler notes it is precisely those services that subscription TV stations, microwave systems and, eventually, satellite-to-home systems, offer.

And because construction of pay TV and microwave system stations costs much less than wiring a big city with cable, those alternative media are growing even faster than cable. In the past clowning, such as one bouncing with bent knees, the other with one hand on his head, as though he were bouncing a basketball.

Then everybody danced — a big finale — to "La Manchega," which means a girl from La Mancha, Spain.

The evening at the Metropolitan Opera began with "The Kingdom of the Shades" scene from "La Bayadere," in which Fernando Bujones was outstanding, and ended with divertissements from "Raymonda."

Gottschalk Ballet Gallops In Winner

By MARY CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — "Great Galloping Gottschalk," danced here for the first time Saturday night by American Ballet Theater, gallops home a winner. It's a half hour of fun with a lot of inventive dancing stuffed into its six parts. And it was glowingly performed.

The music is by Louis Moreau Gottschalk, 1829-69, born in New Orleans and America's first musical celebrity. The choreographer is Lynne Taylor-Corbett, silver medal winner in choreography at the International Ballet Competition in Jackson, Miss., in 1979.

In the first section, to Gottschalk's "Souvenir de Puerto Rico," soloist Elaine Kudo moves with and in and out of a group of eight dancers. They use arm movements which look like modern dance but their feet follow ballet. It all looks right for the music.

The second section is a romantic pas de deux for Susan Jaffe and Robert La Fosse, in graceful exuberant style. They look as though they're dancing for each other's eyes, rather than dancing as partners. It's modern and young and contains no swoons or death falls though the music is the tone painting "The Dying Poet."

Cheryl Yeager, Hilda Morales and Christine Spizzo come on to the fanfare of "Tournament Galop" and dance like a dazzling three-ring circus, fast and lively.

Lisa Houlton, apparently thinking of missed romance, dances a troubled solo to music Gottschalk based on a Creole ballad, "Savane," meaning a treeless plain.

The most fun is Danilo Radojevic and Johan Rennall, dancing like rustic fools, to music based on an Afro-American song, "Le Bananier," or banana tree. Theirs is a dance of much

A Knick with a Knack

While the now-forgotten Fred Hetzel and Mel Counts were being lauded as All-Americans in 1964 a basketball player at little Grambling College was virtually ignored. But by the next spring, the young 6'10" center had been acclaimed NBA rookie of the year. During his ten-year career, he led the New York Knicks to two championships, snatched over 8,000 rebounds and scored 12,000 points. He is the only NBA player ever to win three MVP awards in one year — for the regular season, the all-star game and the championships in 1970. Today Willis Reed will join other basketball immortals as he is inducted into the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame.

Law Will Help 'Lemon' Buyers

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Connecticut lawmakers have approved what would be the nation's first law to protect car buyers who get stuck with "lemons."

The proposal, which cleared the House on Friday, is awaiting action by Gov. William A. O'Neill. He has said he probably will sign it. Under the bill, which was opposed by the auto industry, car manufacturers would have to refund the purchase price or replace a vehicle if it could not be repaired in four tries or if it was out of service at least 30 days during its first year on the road.

Supporters of the measure have argued that "lemon" owners have little protection under existing law. Car dealers who opposed the bill said they feared they would be named as co-defendants in suits by consumers against manufacturers.

Eruption Of Volcano Has Lured Public

HAWAII VOLCANOES NATIONAL PARK, Hawaii (AP) — Thousands of people spent the weekend stepping over hot rocks and braving volcanic gases to get a close-up glimpse of an active volcano as it begins to cool off and perhaps drift into slumber.

"You can put your hands right on it and feel it moving and cooling," Marine Cpl. R. C. Bohn said of the cooling lava that came down the side of the Kilauea volcano, which spewed smoke, ash and rock in fiery fountains Friday and then became an instant tourist attraction over the weekend.

Bohn, who is stationed at the nearby Kilauea Military Camp, said the sightseers go to the point where the flows stopped, "walk right up to it and can see it moving as it contracts."

Scientists estimated that the lava reached 2,100 degrees Fahrenheit as it spewed from a half-mile-long crack in the mountain during the spectacular 19-hour eruption that began late Friday morning.

About 1 million cubic yards of lava was drawn from the interior of the volcano and spread across the floor during the eruption, according to an estimate by Robert Decker, the scientist in charge of the Hawaiian Volcano Observatory.

The lava flow was contained inside the crater and there were no injuries or loss of property.

Kilauea was quiet Sunday. Decker said, however, that the eruption did little to relieve the swelling within the volcano, and it could flare up again soon.

"It's still critical," he said. "We are sitting in the same position we were in Thursday" before the eruption.

Officials estimated that more than 55,000 people turned out to watch the eruption, most of them Friday night when curtains of fire shooting 45 feet into the night air provided the most spectacular viewing from the crater's rim, three-quarters of a mile away.

On Saturday, more than 8,000 people walked to the very edge of the cooling lava flow. Many backed away from the heat of the still steaming lava, while others wore masks to screen the sulfuric gases that filled the air.

"I've never seen anything like it," said Jon Ericson, chief ranger at Hawaii Volcanoes National Park as the crowds continued to pour in over the weekend.

The eruption brought joy to the slumping tourist industry on the island of Hawaii, about 200 miles southeast of Honolulu.

As word of the eruption spread, airlines scrambled to line up extra flights from Honolulu, and hotels on the island, the largest in the Hawaiian chain, began advertising special "eruption" rates. Most hotels in Hilo, the nearest town, were filled through the weekend.

"As the lava started shooting up, the workers started clapping and people in the dining room were screaming," said Carol Bissen, food and beverage manager at Volcano House, a hotel on the rim of the caldera, the volcano's craterlike basin, three miles from the eruption.

Bohn, who is stationed at the nearby Kilauea Military Camp, said the sightseers go to the point where the flows stopped, "walk right up to it and can see it moving as it contracts."

Hunt Says State Employees May Face Bad News

Phone Rates Expected To Keep Rising

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Telephone rates probably will keep soaring in the next few years, but the North Carolina Utilities Commission shouldn't act rashly in an effort to curb the trend, say commission members.

"The consumer's interest is the most important issue before the commission," said Marvin R. Wooten of Charlotte, a federal bankruptcy judge who served eight years on the commission and was its chairman from 1973 to 1976.

"But you cannot bankrupt a utility and benefit the consumer. You cannot severely cripple a utility's ability to raise capital, which would result in services deteriorating, and say you are serving the consumer."

Robert K. Kroger, commission chairman, agreed that rejecting rate proposals entirely would harm the consumer in the long run.

"Utilities would find it harder to expand, their bond ratings would drop, which in turn would cost them more to borrow money," he said. "And that gets passed on to consumers."

Customers of the state's two largest phone companies have seen their rates increase more in the last three years than in the previous nine years combined, according to records from the commission records.

Residential bills have risen more than 50 percent in some areas served by Southern Bell and Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Co.

A study by the U.S. Department of Commerce indicates that rates for telephone service in North Carolina could climb as much as 89.6 percent within five years.

"I have some real concern that telephone rates are going to go too high in the future, pricing some people out of the market for this essential service," said Douglas Leary of Wake Forest, a member of the commission.

The reasons for the increases most often cited by industry officials are deregulation, inflation and high interest rates on capital that telephone companies must obtain for construction and new equipment.

"I'm not surprised at all that telephone rates are going up," said former commission member J. Ward Purrington of Raleigh. "The cost of borrowing money these days is tremendous."

Family Rejoins Romanian Coach

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The coach of Romanian gymnastics sensation Nadia Comaneci has gotten his wife and daughter out of Romania.

Geza Pozsar met his family Saturday at the San Francisco airport. Pozsar is chief coach at the Byers Gymnastics Center in Sacramento.

Pozsar was the coach of the Romanian national gymnastics team and the instructor of Miss Comaneci when at age 14 she won seven perfect scores of 10 and six gold medals at the 1976 Olympic Games in Montreal.

He is a native Hungarian and so is his wife, Maria, a language teacher. Both are 32. Their daughter Karina is 2½.

Pozsar defected while in New York on April 7, 1981 with fellow coaches Bela and Marta Karoly. The Karoly's 7-year-old daughter was allowed to join her parents in September, but the Romanian authorities wouldn't let Mrs. Pozsar and Karina leave.

"They publicly condemned me, sentenced me to six years in prison and tried to do everything possible to get Maria to divorce me," Pozsar told reporters.

The Romanians finally gave in after receiving a petition on the Pozsars' behalf from U.S. Rep. Robert Matsui, D-Calif. It was signed by 60 members of Congress.

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt's words sent chills through lobbyists for teachers and state employees last week, and his warning was based on what budget officials say is a shortfall that could top $100 million in the coming year.

Hunt, questioned about the worsening budget outlook, said the state could be faced with a choice between cutting salaries or laying off workers.

His senior advisor and budget officer, John A. Williams, sought to downplay the scare, saying the crisis could be handled without a pay cut when the new fiscal year begins July 1.

Others in the administration

NO SURVIVORS
PEKING (AP) — About 600 soldiers and civilians have recovered 112 bodies from a Chinese airliner that crashed into a mountainside last week, a Canton newspaper reports.

tion say handling the economic gloom could still take money out of the pockets of teachers and state workers, but they were eyeing a combination of alternatives for cutting spending.

"Because of the magnitude of where we are, I'd say yes, we're at a situation where we may have to cut salaries or lay people off," said Marvin Dorman, deputy budget officer and the administration's top number-cruncher.

Dorman and other state officials say the administration is looking at ways to trim $100 million, or maybe more, from the budget already passed for the 1982-83 fiscal year.

Of chief concern to lobbyists for public employees keeping is the 5 percent pay raise, which took effect Jan. 1. To continue it in the next fiscal year would cost the state about $120 million, and legislators didn't include money to cover it in the 1982-83 budget.

Alternatives considered in an effort to avoid rolling back salaries include postponing all normal merit raises scheduled for the next year and the additional pay step for teachers, canceling new equipment and auto purchases for a year, and trimming some of a $15 million package of special projects for the University of North Carolina system.

Recognizing the grim outlook, the North Carolina State Government Employees Association, one of two such groups, last month set as its top priority keeping pay and benefits at current levels.

That was the first time in memory that a state employees' or teachers' group didn't make seeking a new pay raise its top priority, said Bob Robinson, spokesman for the group.

"We know revenues aren't going to be anywhere as good as expected, but we certainly didn't think it is as bad as the governor said," he said.

When legislators passed the biennial budget last year, they paid for the pay raise through June 30. Money to cover the raise in the second year, they hoped, would come with the economic recovery that was surely around the corner.

But that recovery hasn't come, and Dorman compares the current outlook to the 1974-1975 recession. Then, legislators cut nearly $300 million out of a two-year budget. Now it may be $100 million or more in one year.

"The recession is just as severe as in 1974," he said. "It may not have dropped during one quarter as much, but overall it is as deep and longer."

The major problem is that state taxes aren't rolling in at the level anticipated in the budget. The state's budget assumed a growth rate of 10.3 percent this year and 11 percent next year. So far, the growth has been 8.4 percent.

State revenues are running about $60 million below the figured amount this year, and can be assumed to be at least that much lower going into the next year, Dorman says, combining for $120 million shortage.

On top of that, the legislature included $200 million in projects in the new budget year without earmarking money to pay for it, producing a $320 million negative figure on Dorman's balance sheet.

On the plus side, Dorman says economizing steps taken since last fall assure the state will end this year with a balanced budget, and investments and cost-saving measures may leave a hoped-for reserve of $150 million. In the next budget, lawmakers left $88 million not earmarked for any spending, producing a positive figure of $238 million.

The difference is an $82 million shortage. But then the 11 percent growth estimate will surely have to be lowered, reducing revenues by $30 million for each percentage point. State officials say they're counting on the shortage to hit $100 million, and it could go higher.
