Pitt Education Board Approves Budget

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Education approved a budget request Tuesday for 1982-83 that calls for $6,594,596 in current expense funds and $3,156,885 — including $1.3 million for completion of the Ayden Middle project — in capital outlay monies.

These totals, combined with the approximately $14 million received in state public school funds, puts the county schools' budget at the $24 million mark.

Board members also voted to affirm in writing to the County Commissioners that Ayden Middle was their top priority project after hearing a request from a representative of the Ayden community for "a solution to our eight-year project."

"We request that you (the board) make known in a written statement to the commissioners that you are committing the entire proposed capital outlay request to the Ayden Middle School project," said Dot Dail, spokesperson for the Ayden

Concerned Citizens Group, "except for the funds to be used for most pressing needs that must be met this year."

Ms. Dail said Ayden wanted to see a "bridge of good will, confidence and commitment built between the Board of Education and the County Commissioners."

In addition, the group asked the board to:

- Further express its dedication to the project by committing the $25,000 proposed by the Board of Education last year to secure the needed funds.
- Allow a committee of Ayden citizens to have input in further discussion or negotiations on the project.

"Guard carefully the monies in escrow and exhaust all means possible to ensure the building is constructed in two to three years.

Board members agreed to make the project their top priority, but noted that compliance with the other requests was "premature until we find out exactly what we're getting from the county..." according to Jack Edwards.

Secret Session Defense Briefing 'Sealed Off'

By DON WATERS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amid security that extended even to yanking telephones from a sealed-off press gallery, the Senate watched a Defense Department slide show depicting a Soviet military buildup. Some viewers said they saw little that was new.

Republican members of the House gathered in the House chamber under equally tight guard today to view the same presentation today, as the Reagan administration and its allies lobbied for passage of a record $180 billion defense authorization bill in the face of budget-cutting efforts.

With material supplied by the Defense Intelligence Agency, Sens. John Tower, R-Texas, the Armed Services Committee chairman, and Barry M. Goldwater, R-Ariz., chairman of the Intelligence Committee, ran the 2½-hour briefing and question period Tuesday.

Under Senate rules, only members may speak on the floor, but DIA Deputy Director John T. Hughes was the briefer today at a meeting of the House Republican Conference, composed of all GOP House members.

Much of the House side of the Capitol, including press work areas, was closed during the morning presentation. Protests by the Standing Committee of Congressional newspaper and news agency reporters, were unavailing. Congressional officials blamed DIA security regulations.

To discourage eavesdroppers at the top-secret Senate briefing, admission was by code word only and the public and press galleries were emptied and placed under police guard on Pentagon orders. Most of the adjoining press room also was sealed.

The security even extended to removing two press-gallery telephones used by The Associated Press and United Press International.

It was the 23rd secret session of the Senate in the last 19 years, but veteran Senate staff aides said they could not recall that security was ever as tight.

Similar security arrangements were made for today's meeting on the House floor.

For all the preparation, the presentation drew a mixed response from senators.

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, one of the senators who had sought the briefing, said later he thought it had been valuable.

But Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., told reporters he doubted that any minds were changed.

And Tsongas complained that the briefing — which reportedly featured photographs of Soviet weaponry and facilities projected on a large screen at the rear of the Senate chamber — told only half the story.

"It would have been more appropriate to have a their side-our side presentation so we could compare," he said.

Tsongas also noted that the DIA briefing had been available earlier for any member who wanted to receive it.

"I think everything I heard was in line with the kind of information that we've been getting for the past several years," said Sen. Charles Mathias, R-Md. "There is a gradual, slow and impressive buildup of Soviet strength. It's not to be ignored... (or) underestimated, but I don't think there were any surprises."

Taking Only 2 Days To Present Hinckley Case

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prosecutors, ready to rest the first stage of their case against John W. Hinckley Jr., are taking less than two days to re-create what they portray as his cross-country odyssey to plot a presidential assassination.

Chief prosecutor Roger M. Adelman said he would show a videotape of Hinckley shooting President Reagan and call seven additional witnesses today before ending his presentation.

Then it will be the defense team's turn.

Nine witnesses were summoned Tuesday to trace Hinckley's nine-month journey from a Lubbock, Texas, pawnshop, where he bought ammunition, to the gruesome scene outside the Washington Hilton Hotel last March 30 when he shot Reagan and three other men.

Two of the witnesses who testified Tuesday were victims of bullets fired by Hinckley, but the young defendant never raised his head to face them.

When the government finishes, the focus of the trial will shift dramatically from what Hinckley did last year to what he was thinking at the time.

Psychiatrists hired by the defense will testify that he believed he was acting out the last scene in a love fantasy; that he wanted to kill Reagan to impress Jodie Foster, the actress who had spurned his mail and telephoned advances.

The doctors will say he was insane at the time and thus should be absolved of legal responsibility for the crime. That is the sole defense: that Hinckley was insane and not responsible for what he did.

The government then will present its own rebuttal psychiatrists to testify that Hinckley was sane, a procedure that may take up more time than the initial case outlined by the prosecution during the first two days of the trial.

Hinckley faces life imprisonment if convicted in the 13-count indictment that charges him with attempting to kill the president, and assault with intent to kill while armed.

Hinckley wore a tan suit to court Tuesday and at times smiled ever so slightly when talking to a defense lawyer, Gregory B. Craig.

But he closed his eyes or stared at the defense table while Secret Service Agent Timothy McCarthy and former Washington policeman Thomas Delahanty relived the shooting.

"All of a sudden I heard a shot," McCarthy told jurors, recalling those few fateful seconds when he led Reagan out of the VIP entrance of the hotel, a doorway built for presidents.

"I tried to place myself between the apparent danger and the president. A moment later, I was hit by a gunshot," he said in a voice that cracked at times.

Delahanty, who was wearing his raincoat on that cloudy March day, recalled that he was trying to hold back the crowd when Reagan emerged from the building.

"I heard somebody say 'he's coming, he's coming,'" Delahanty said. "I turned to the right. I heard a single shot, followed by four-to-five more in rapid succession."

McCarthy took a bullet in the chest, but is back on the job as a White House body guard. Delahanty was shot in the back and retired on disability after never returning to his job.

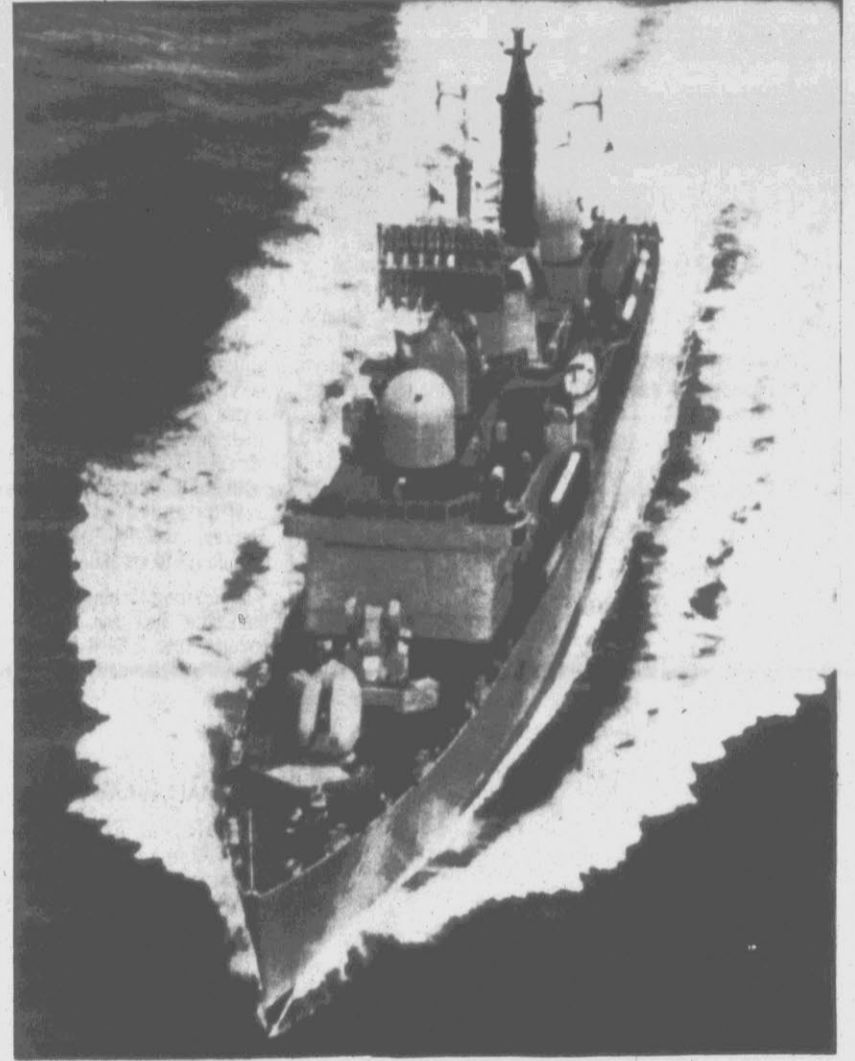

Hinckley's other victims, Reagan and White House Press Secretary James Brady, will not testify.

NEW YORK (AP) — A 22-year-old man accused of ripping a diamond-studded gold pendant from the neck of Miss Hawaii was arrested only a few blocks away from where the $7,000 necklace was snatched last week, police say.

Zachariah Robinson of Brooklyn was charged with grand larceny after he was arrested Tuesday afternoon on 47th Street in midtown Manhattan, police said.

Miss Hawaii, Vanessa DuBois, was walking across Lexington Avenue at 49th Street with four other state beauty queens last Wednesday when the necklace was yanked from her neck.

The pendant was recovered by police one day after the theft at Montoya's Findings jewelry store on West 47th Street. Its diamonds had been removed and it was cut in half, but all its parts were recovered.

Heavy Casualties For Destroyer Sheffield; Retaliation Anticipated

By The Associated Press

Relatives of 87 crewmen aboard the British destroyer Sheffield were notified today that their men were dead, missing or wounded in an Argentine missile strike off the Falkland Islands, and speculation rose that the British would retaliate by trying to hit the Argentine aircraft carrier 25th of May.

The figures on the Sheffield casualties were given by government sources in London, where Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, reported as "firm as ever," called an emergency Cabinet session. Argentina, meanwhile, continued the search for about 360 crewmen missing from the General Belgrano, the cruiser torpedoed and sunk by a British submarine Sunday.

British press reports said a missile fired from a land-based Argentine fighter-bomber 24 miles away hit the control room of the 3,500-ton Sheffield early Tuesday afternoon, turning one of the Royal Navy's most modern warships into a raging inferno.

Some British press reports said the ship, one of three destroyers in the British war fleet in the South Atlantic, had sunk. But a British reporter with the task force said it was still afloat and burning more than six hours after it was hit.

The Argentine government was silent about the Sheffield, although news of the attack was broadcast by Buenos Aires radio stations quoting foreign news reports. The joint chiefs of staff said in a communique early today that an "air incursion" against the British task force was carried out "with results that still are not known."

The communique said the attack occurred 60 miles southeast of the Falklands about 40 minutes before the Sheffield was reported hit.

British planes made two attacks Tuesday on airstrips in the Falklands. The British Defense Ministry said a Harrier jet was shot down and its pilot killed, while Argentina claimed two Harriers were downed.

The British said a long-range Vulcan bomber, presumably flying Ascension Island, made a "successful" attack on the airfield at Stanley, the Falklands capital, in the morning and returned safely to its base.

The Argentine communique said the second attack was made in the afternoon by three Harrier jets on a dirt runway at Goose Green, 40 miles west of Stanley. Both airstrips were attacked by British planes Saturday in the first major strike of the air-sea offensive launched by Britain to recapture the island colony.

GOING THROUGH CHANGES

I wrote to Country Music magazine's subscription service months ago because my subscription stopped in September, well in advance of its expiration date. I never received a reply. Now, in April, I receive a January-February issue, still with no explanation. I'd like to know what's going on. B.J.

You wrote to the subscription service in Boulder, Colo., but we called the magazine's editorial offices in New York. Family Media publishes the magazine and Ms. Gardner, to whom we spoke, said there have been management changes and all subscribers' subscription were interrupted from September to April. She said that January-February issue is the only one published since September. Subscribers' expiration dates will be moved forward to compensate for the interruption of service, she added.

DOG THEFT SUSPECTED FEEDBACK

"Why can't somebody find the people who are getting people's pets?" A.W. of Highland Trailer Park, Greenville, asks after reading the Hotline item published April 28 about suspected dogs thefts. She says she's advertised extensively to try to get back a beloved 10-year-old male chihuahua who was missing 10 minutes after he was let out of the house about a month ago. He is brown with a white chest and was wearing a blue sweater. Anyone having information about the whereabouts of this dog is asked to call A.W. at 758-4251 or return the dog with no questions asked. "He won't live long without me," she said. "When I get sick, he won't eat and he never eats dog food."

WILLIAMSTON — Additional efforts to resolve or at least to alleviate some of the staff, board of directors and monetary problems besetting Martin General Hospital were attempted on two occasions this week — at a May meeting of the Martin County Commissioners on Monday night and at a joint meeting of commissioners and representatives of Carolinas Hospital and Health Services Tuesday night.

The commissioners agreed Monday to provide $104,256 in stop-gap funds to pay for retirement benefits which are due. Commissioners labeled the decision to allocate the funds as one essential in keeping the hospital open.

For several years, Martin General Hospital has chalked up financial losses in excess of $100,000 annually. Without periodic county stop-gap funding, it would have been necessary to close the hospital or to drastically alter services offered.

Another recurring problem has been that of securing adequate numbers of physicians to service the hospital. Various recruitment efforts have been made to attract new physicians, with little success.

A couple of weeks ago, nine of the hospital's 13-board members tendered letters of resignation. Of the four who did not indicate intention to resign, two are ex-officio members.

Following this dilemma, the commissioners asked the Carolinas Hospital and Health Services to provide information on possible assistance. Under the agreement presented by CHHS, the agency outlined its willingness to provide a maximum of 60 days' management service to the hospital under certain stipulations, including negotiating for that time period for services only through CHHS.

The commissioners Tuesday night failed to take action on signing an agreement with CHHS, and did not indicate whether future action to formalize an agreement would be considered.

CHHS, based in Charlotte, is a non-profit hospital assistance organization funded by the Duke Endowment.

Comprised primarily of persons versed in hospital administration, with a few physicians on it staff, CHHS is currently involved in giving administrative assistance to 22 hospital units in the two Carolinas that face operating and financial problems.

At the joint meeting Tuesday night, the commissioners took action to reactivate the hospital board as a functioning body. It was not known how many of the nine who submitted resignations will agree to continue to serve on the board. If any do not, the commissioners will appoint a sufficient number of new board members.

In the past, county commissioners have expressed caution relative to the possibility of increasing county taxes to provide funds sufficient to cover the hospital's losses. It is estimated that such an action would result in a direct increase of 8 or 9 cents in the annual tax rate paid by county resident, a move which commissioners generally feel would not gain public favor.

Dear Abby

Select Gift Of Your Choice

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Last week I received an engraved invitation to my niece's wedding. Enclosed was a mimeographed letter. When I read it I couldn't believe my eyes. It said: "Gift suggestion: Because the bride and groom have everything they need, an ideal gift would be something that can be put into a pocket or purse." (I later learned that this letter was included in all the invitations — not only to family members.)

Abby, the bride's family is extremely wealthy, but even if they were in modest circumstances, is it proper to send a "gift suggestion" along with an invitation?

I believe that a gift is just that — a gift — and I prefer to select a gift myself, but now I feel that I no longer have that option. How should I respond?

NAMELESS, PLEASE

DEAR NAMELESS: Ignore the "suggestion," and select your own gift. It is never proper to "suggest" a gift, unless, of course, the giver asks for suggestions.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the woman signed "Nervous in Northridge" caught my eye. She said she had a baby boy who was so beautiful that strangers used to stop her on the street and say, "That child is much too beautiful to be a boy, he should have been a girl!"

As a baby boy I was never particularly beautiful, but dating back to my earliest recollections, I always felt that I should have been a girl.

As I matured, those feelings became so strong and painful that I often considered suicide rather than living the rest of my life in the "wrong" sex.

When I was 31, I wrote to you about my problem and you recommended a Dr. Paul Walker, who practiced gender identification therapy in San Francisco.

I went to see him, and after several months, he confirmed that I was a bona fide transsexual. I decided to do whatever was necessary to become a woman physically. Dr. Walker explained what it entailed, and he guided me through the necessary stages.

The transition hasn't been easy, but it saved my life, and now I have a body that matches my mind and emotions. Best of all, I no longer have to pray to be a woman — I am one.

FROM HARRY TO HARRIETTE

DEAR ABBY: Mother's Day will soon be here, and I wish you would say something in your column to remind "young marrieds" to remember their mothers-in-law, too — even if it's only a card or a note. There were so many years when I should have remembered my mother-in-law, but I was too "busy."

This year I will send her a spray of flowers — to the cemetery — bitterly regretting that I failed to send her flowers while she was living. I should have appreciated her more, written her more about her grandchildren, whom she loved so much, and most of all I should have let her know how much I had grown to love her.

I hope others will not make the same mistake I made, because next year may be too late.

Mainstream cooks in the United States are fascinated by cake recipes that call for mayonnaise as an ingredient. To cater to that interest, a short time ago I invented the Waldorf Salad Cake. Now a friend has one-upped me. She has just invented the Mayonnaise Chiffon Cake.

When we tried her recipe, I told my tasters it was a chiffon cake with a secret ingredient. None of them guessed the ingredient was mayonnaise, but they all thought the cake was delicious.

For a party, we recommend cutting the cake in layers and sandwiching them together with strawberries and whipped cream, then covering the whole cake with whipped cream and studding the top with strawberries.

MAYONNAISE CHIFFON CAKE

2 1/4 cups sifted cake flour
1 1/2 cups sugar
3 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
6 large eggs, separated
3/4 cup water
1/2 cup real (not imitation) commercial mayonnaise
4 teaspoons vanilla
1/2 teaspoon cream of tartar

Into the large bowl of an electric mixer sift together the flour, sugar, baking powder and salt. Make a well in the center and add the egg yolks, water, mayonnaise and vanilla. At medium speed, beat until smooth.

In another large bowl with mixer at high speed, beat the egg whites and cream of tartar until straight stiff peaks form when beater is slowly withdrawn. Fold the egg whites into the flour mixture until blended. Turn into an ungreased 10- by 4-inch angel cake pan. Bake in a preheated 325-degree oven until cake springs back when lightly touched — 65 to 75 minutes. Top will be cracked. If pan does not have "feet," invert it over a large funnel or bottle. Cool completely. With a metal spatula, loosen edges and ease from pan.

Are You A Creditaholic?
A creditaholic is one who can't stop using credit even if he sees all the warning signs and knows the over-use of credit will get him into trouble. He can be identified by several signs:

—The hip pocket bulges with a fat billfold full of credit cards.

—He pulls out a long strip of plastic pockets holding 24 credit cards, selecting among them when making any purchase.

—He's never too poor to buy what he wants.

—He dreads to see the mailman because he knows more and larger bills are coming in.

—He never has any cash to spend because he used his whole paycheck paying on his credit card accounts.

—He's beginning to feel he's on a treadmill, running but never getting anywhere.

—In the final stages he becomes a hermit. Since his credit limit has been reached on every card, he can't buy anything.

What's The Cure?

—The drastic cure (cold turkey) is cutting up and throwing away all credit cards. This may require that the creditaholic not visit any business that accepts credit cards until he has paid all his bills and has cash left over to spend.

—A more gradual treatment is self-reflection and evaluation of one's true goals in life. Then the credit user pays all his bills, selects a very few (three to five) cards to keep and learns to use them with very careful planning.

The Reformed Creditaholic: —Has replaced most of his credit cards with family pictures in his billfold.

—Has learned to distinguish between his needs and wants so he doesn't practice careless buying.

—Uses his few credit cards so that interest charges are minimized.

—Practices self-discipline to keep credit payments less than 10 percent of his take-home pay monthly.

—Knows that eternal vigilance is needed to keep credit under control.

A message of hope: almost no one is incurable!

Should You Make That Minimum Payment?

The way you manage your credit cards accounts has a lot to do with the costs of using that form of credit. Careless or thoughtless use of your cards can add to the costs, even if you do not make more purchases on the cards. One way to save some money is to use your cards in such a way that the amount of interest you are charged is minimized.

The least expensive way to use a credit card is to pay your bill in full each month. Then no interest charges are added the next month.

Another way to minimize the costs is to pay as much as you can each month. Then the principal amount on which the monthly interest is figured will be less.

If one pays only the minimum balance each month, the account can gradually grow up to the top limit of the account especially if new purchases are made each month. If you charge more every month than you pay off, you will never pay off the bill. You may reach a point that the only amount you can charge each month is the amount you have paid on the previous bill. To get your bill down to manageable proportions, pay as much as you can each month, more than the minimum payment and the new purchases listed. Then you may eventually reduce the bill so you can pay it all each month.

Negotiations Still Best

It's been said that war is hell, but mankind never seems to grasp that until the fighting actually starts.

The stark reality of war came home Monday when the British sank the General Belgrando, Argentina's second largest Navy vessel. It was reemphasized Tuesday with the sinking of the British destroyer Sheffield.

It is never certain what to believe in the official communiqués issued by warring nations. That is particularly true in a war so remote as this one. It appears, however, from what the Argentines say that there were 1,000 men aboard its ship. Over 600 may have been rescued, leaving over 300 unaccounted for.

Thus it appears that already Argentina has lost hundreds of its young men, and Great Britain a considerable number. For what? For a desolate island which has little value to either nation.

It makes no difference that this started as a small scale war. When the shooting starts the enemy is always the target.

We happen to believe that Argentina's military government started this war, with its high-handed forceful takeover of the Falkland Islands. We believe this even as we recognize a need for negotiations on turning the islands over to Argentina.

Someone has said that the leaders who started the war should have been standing on the decks of the ships involved. War doesn't work that way, of course. The leaders stay behind and the fighting personnel die.

If ever there was a situation that called for immediate resolve, this one is it. The burden is on Argentina to reverse the military action which started it all and turn to peaceful negotiations to settle the matter. The Argentine generals owe this to the young men they sent to their deaths.

Planning Can Save Us

A panel of governors, appearing on public television, agreed that water resources, responsive politicians and cooperation between cities are among North Carolina's greatest needs.

Gov. Hunt appeared with former Govs. Dan Moore, Bob Scott and Jim Holshouser.

We are fortunate that North Carolina is aware of these things. Protection of our water supply will be essential for future development of our state. We have a tradition as a state of responsive government. The problem will be to maintain that responsiveness as government grows larger and legislators move toward fulltime jobs.

Cities will have to cooperate to maintain orderly growing. So, too, will counties and other planning areas.

Through planning North Carolina can avoid the urban problems that have beset other areas.

Tax Delay Pushed

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — The Legislature's Committee on Aging is trying to revive legislation that allows a low-crime senior citizen to delay payment of his property taxes until he sells his house. The bill has been languishing in the House Finance Committee since the 1981 session. The Committee on Aging voted last month to encourage Finance to send the bill to the House floor during the June session.

Under House Bill 1023, qualified senior citizens should postpone payment of their property tax until they dispose of the property. If a senior citizen took the deferral, a lien would be placed against his house. The property taxes and any interest due would have to be paid if the house was either sold or given away. If the property owner died, the owed taxes would come from his estate.

Eleven states allow tax deferrals. In a memo, legislative aid David Crotts said the deferral "directly attacks one of the major defects of the property tax — the cash flow problem. An elderly homeowner could be poor in cash terms even though they may have a reasonable amount of property. A deferral program in beneficial when the state is unable, or unwilling, to provide other types of elderly property tax relief."

The bill as now written would allow deferrals for almost anyone who qualifies for the state Homestead Tax Exemption. Anyone whose house has a lien prohibiting tax deferrals, of which liens totaling 85 percent of the house's market value, could not participate.

Crotts said several policy questions should be answered before the Legislature adopts a deferral system.

Should the program be states limit participation by income — although seven have set income limits above the poverty level. The North Carolina program, using homestead exemption criteria, would have an income limit of $9,000.

Should interest be charged on the deferred taxes? If so, how high should the rate be? All 11 states charge interest. In nine states, the rate is far below market rates and in the other two it floats with restricted to the elderly and should there be an income limit? Nine of the 11 states limit the program to the elderly. North Carolina's proposed legislation would also include disabled persons. Seven of the 11

It's Put In Your Hands

One of the things the American people pay their President and their legislators for is to handle the United States budget. It's a messy job and most of us are too busy to deal with it.

That's why there has been a lot of anger by the average citizen over the impasse between the administration and Congress.

Klondike, my milkman, told me, "I can't deal with it. Why is the President appealing to me?"

"He has nowhere else to turn," I told him. "Reagan's offered to go the extra mile, but the Democrats won't let him walk it."

"What's the problem?"

"It's a question of philosophical differences, based on the fact that the Democrats want to cut the deficit and Republicans want to give everyone a tax cut."

"I thought the President said when he was running for office the Democrats were for big deficits and the Republicans were against them."

"He did say that, but now that he's seen the size of the deficit for next year, he's changed his mind."

"How big is the deficit going to be if Reagan's budget goes through?"

"The Democrats say $180 billion."

"How much will they settle for?" Klondike asked.

"Not one nickel more than $100 billion. Reagan has offered to split the difference, but Tip O'Neill said the deficit is not negotiable."

"Which figure do you like?"

"I've never been one for big governmental deficits," I admitted, "but I guess I could live with $110 billion if it would make everyone happy."

Klondike asked, "Why can't Reagan and Congress live with it?"

"Because we've never had that kind of deficit before. The Democrats predict if Reagan doesn't slash defense spending and eliminate his 10 percent tax cuts, the deficit will grow to $216 billion in 1984 and $233 billion dollars in 1985."

"That's a lot of bread. What is Reagan's answer?"

"He says the only way you can cut the deficit is by getting the economy going again, and the only way you can get the economy rolling is to give everyone their tax cut, and build a strong defense for America."

"It makes sense to me," Klondike said. "Maybe I might go along with a $150 billion deficit if that would make Reagan happy."

"But if we have a $150 billion deficit," I said, "that means the government will have to borrow money from the people and interest rates will soar and there won't be any capital left for getting the private industry back on its feet. At least that's what the Democrats claim."

"What does Reagan say to that?"

"He says the Democrats are just trying to make him look bad, so they'll win the 1982 elections."

"Why would they want to do that?"

"How do I know?" I said testily. "The question is, Klondike, what are you going to do about the U.S. budget"

Found Glenn Pretty Dull

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Some of Washington's most astute backroom Democratic operatives, in quest of a presidential candidate to recapture the ordinary American, took a long, private look at Sen. John Glenn the other day, and found him wanting — at least for now.

"He's brown and boring, just as I heard," commented one of 10 influential lobbyists, all Democrats, invited for lunch April 26 to look over Glenn. They found him an admirable human being (though his professions of goodness reminded some too much of Jimmy Carter). But the consensus was that the ex-astronaut had not nearly come to grips with the realities of a race for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Their interest in Glenn stemmed partly from fear that the party's nomination might shake down to a choice between Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and former vice president Walter F. Mondale, neither of whom they consider ideal to challenge Ronald Reagan for Joe Six-pack's loyalty. But when lunch was over, the Democratic power brokers left convinced that John Glenn, no matter how formidable in a general election, had not yet focused on the travails of a moderate seeking the Democratic nomination.

Millionaire lobbyist J.D. Williams, who at age 43 typifies the new generation of Democratic power brokers taking over from the Clark Cliffords, decided he and his colleagues should inspect Glenn as the possible moderate alternative to Teddy and Fritz. Veteran political consultant Matt Reese, who has worked for Glenn in past Ohio campaigns, delivered the senator.

Among the lobbyists invited by Williams to eat crab-cakes at his Northern Virginia estate were rising young lobbyists, who, like Williams, have wide experience inside the Democratic Party: Tommy Boggs, John Meek, Bob Mc-Candless and John Sweeney, among others. What they heard certainly departed from contemporary Democratic rhetoric.

Glenn asserted that, between the Appalachians and the Sierra Madres, "Americans believe in God, motherhood and the flag." That was less so on the East Coast and still less true on the West Coast, he continued, "As a Marine and as an astronaut," said Glenn, "he had sought to do his duty and he still did so, foregoing private wealth. He told of his heritage as a boy watching the Fourth of July parades in his birthplace of Cambridge, Ohio.

Glenn expressed worry about the future of this country, which he said is "eating our own seedcorn." He declared that, "The American dream is being perfected in Japan and Germany." Nervous restlessness at the table was broken by McCandless, who asked Glenn what three basic changes he would make in America.

"Well," said Glenn, "the economy has got to be changed." When pressed for details, he indicated the need to peel back on tax cuts for the rich. He then listed foreign policy (to be improved by breaking down the world into areas), defense and "White House reorganization." The audience was unimpressed. "I think it was the answer to McCandless' question that sort of devastated him (Glenn)," one lobbyist told us.

But would he run? Glenn made no promises and did not even gently ask for support. He said he had traveled to 24 states and leads all other Democrats in Midwest polling (actually, Kennedy leads even there). "I might make a decision this fall," he said, "if that's what he perceived the people wanted."

To the political mechanics at J.D. Williams' table, Glenn was a general-election candidate unprepared for the primaries. At least, they thought, he might have prepared himself for a luncheon that could prove important to his candidacy. At a

To the editor:
Regarding Terry Hardison's letter in Sunday's paper: Just because a handful of men agree not to consider the Equal Rights Amendment does not mean that women or the rest of the Legislature need to abide by that agreement.

Those men should not have entered into such an agreement and it is in no way binding on the rest of the Legislature.

Polls show that a majority of North Carolinians favor the ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment. To have a few legislators refuse to have the Legislature consider the Amendment and deny North Carolina women the opportunity of knowing who their friends are in the state Legislature is unconscionable.

Governor Hunt should be commended for his efforts to get the Legislature to vote on the amendment.

To the editor:
As Mayor of Ayden, I feel that Ayden and Pitt County citizens need to know more about the trial and acquittal of our city policeman, Keith Gardner.

Since the jury took less than half an hour to return a verdict of not guilty, the only conclusion is that there was no evidence to support the charges.

I question:
First: Several policemen worked part-time as security guards for Clark's and Abraham Pruett, Clark's manager, testified that all bought goods from him at reduced prices, but Gardner was the only one charged. Why?

Second: Pruett testified that Policeman Gardner did not know that he, the manager, was embezzling the money received from the sales of these goods at reduced prices. Why didn't the District Attorney's office know this?

Third: The Pitt County District Attorney's office did not prosecute this case, but brought in the Martin County District Attorney to prosecute. Why?

Fourth: The Martin County District Attorney said it was an extra cost to Pitt County taxpayers for him to be brought in to prosecute the case. Why was this extra money spent?

Fifth: Why did this case ever come to trial when, after the trial and acquittal, the Pitt County District Attorney said to Ayden Police Chief Tommy Burney that, if he had known the facts, the case would not have come to trial?

This case, in my opinion, so poorly investigated and brought to trial without proper evidence, must have hidden reasons for having been so done that I cannot understand. Not only has it cost Pitt County taxpayers money, but Policeman Gardner has incurred attorneys' fees of some $6,000. And we can only imagine the stress, anxiety and worry that has been with Policeman Gardner and his family during this time.

What a waste! With proper investigation and analysis all of this money could have been saved!

Misery Index Quite Useless

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Defenders of Reaganomics have been resurrecting the so-called discomfort or misery index to support their thesis that you are better off now than you have been at any time since 1976.

What really may be demonstrated, however, is the uselessness of the index, a combination of the unemployment and inflation rates devised by Arthur Okun when he was Lyndon Johnson's chief economic adviser.

Okun never intended his device to be anything but a rough indicator of consumer strength or weakness, a rule of thumb, but that was before the politicians grabbed it and began sticking the thumb in opponents' eyes.

Jimmy Carter utilized it to job the administration of Gerald Ford, and in so doing set himself up for a haymaker from the right when Ronald Reagan reminded voters that the index in 1980 was around 20 percent.

Now the index is coming down, and two things are happening: 1. Its use as propoganda is being speeded up by Republicans, and 2. the absurdity of treating it as a scientific measurement is becoming more apparent.

The index is coming down, as most people would surmise, because the rate of inflation is falling. But, as many people might not surmise, you can inflate or deflate the rate of inflation to suit your wishes.

From February 1981 to February 1982, for example, the consumer price index rose 7.7 percent. Should that rate be used? Should you instead use the estimated 5 percent or 6 percent inflation rate anticipated for calendar 1982? Or should you take the rate for March and annualize it?

That is what the U.S. Chamber of Commerce has done, and you will agree when you see the results that the thumbs used in rules of thumb come in many sizes. By its calculation, the March misery index was 5.7 percent.

It arrived at it by combining the jobless rate of 9 percent and the consumer price index for March. The CPI for March declined for the first time in many months. It was a tiny decline, but if you annualize it — that is, assume it will continue for a year — it amounts to minus 3.3 percent. Deduct 3.3 percent from 9 percent. Result: 5.7 percent.

By this reckoning, the March misery index plunged from 18 percent in March 1981 and 20.6 percent a year earlier, suggesting in a relative sense that you must be elated, 9 percent unemployment notwithstanding.

Albert Cox, Jr., president of Merrill Lynch Economics Inc., calculates the rate a bit differently. That is, rather than projecting the one-month rate, which might turn out to be unique rather than the rule, he chooses a six-month period. By his estimate, the index for the first half of 1982 would be around 12.5 percent, same as it was in 1976.

Some calculations are also made on the basis of projections for the entire year 1982. If you assume, as many economists do, that the CPI will rise 5 percent from the end of 1981 to the end of 1982, and that joblessness will average around 8.5 percent, you come up with a still higher misery index of 13.5 percent, rather than the chamber's 5.7.

Regardless, 13.5 percent is a distinct improvement from the celestial levels of 1979 and 1980, and some people say the Reagan team should take a bow. Says Cox: "By this measure, the Reagan administration is in far better political shape than is generally perceived."

But is the indicator by which people will measure the strength or weakness of the economy? Should prices take equal standing with jobs in the equation? Can unemployed persons appreciate less inflation, or are they likely to see it as coming at the expense of their jobs?

No matter what, the discomfort or misery index is absurdly incomplete in that it doesn't tell us a thing about interest rates, and high interest rates today are the bane of consumer and producer alike.

In fact, say economists of various political persuasions — certainly, as many Republicans as Democrats — interest rates might even be the death of the economy unless they come down. They are miserably high.

Any measure of misery is incomplete without those interest rates, so you can expect the Democrats to come up with a brand-new rule of thumb that includes them, and then jab the Republicans in the eye with it.

B-52s Begin Leaving Base

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The Strategic Air Command has begun moving its nuclear retaliatory aircraft further inland, with the first of 14 B-52 bombers having already left Seymour Johnson Air Force Base.

The bombers, which have been located at Seymour Johnson since 1963, are attached to the 68th Bombardment Wing and all 14 carry nuclear warheads. They will be relocated at bases in Louisiana and North Dakota by early September.

An Air Force spokesman says one reason for the transfer is the proximity of the Eastern North Carolina base to the Atlantic coast and enemy submarines. The move inland would give crews more time to launch in event of attack by missiles fired from submarines.

Master Sgt. David McMahon says another reason is the introduction of the air launch cruise missile, which require the Air Force to modify the B-52s to make them capable of firing the traditionally ground-launched missiles.

The first plane left Monday for Barksdale AFB, La. Its six crewmen were to return to Seymour Johnson until their new assignments take effect. The last of the B-52s is scheduled to depart in early fall. Until that time, the 68th is to continue its alert commitment at Seymour Johnson.

Air Force plans call for Seymour Johnson's fourth squadron — 24 F-4E Phantom jets Composing the 337th Squadron — to start arriving this summer. Authorities say the smaller, faster, short-range fighter planes will bring with them more than 700 crew members and maintenance personnel.

The base's overall strength will be increased by between 100 and 200 people, with McMahon estimating that 960 people will be involved in the move.

minimum, he might have consulted former Democratic national chairman Robert S. Strauss (who leans toward Glenn for the nomination).

Yet, Glenn's problem goes deeper than insufficient preparation. To attract the money and volunteers needed for any chance at the Democratic nomination, he must generate support by taking left-of-center positions that are inappropriate for him. His pro-defense stance and invocations of "God, motherhood and the flag" can help win elections, but hardly Democratic nominations.

Matt Reese, the man who brought Glenn to lunch, suggested during table talk that "Teddy has purged himself" of the Chappaquiddick stain. Some of the backroom operators did not rejoice at that, fearing it might be enough to nominate but not elect Kennedy. So they departed, disappointed that Glenn had not begun to approach his political problems, but still hopeful that he might learn from such early disasters as J.D. Williams' lunch.

the credit market. North Carolina's rate would be the same as charged on late payment of all other state taxes. This year, that's 9 percent — well under market rates.

Two states established the program as a local option. That is, local officials decide if the program is to be available in their area. In two states, the state financed the program.

In only two of the states — California and Oregon — has the program drawn a great deal of participation. Crotts said the California program got much more use before Proposition 13 drastically cut property taxes in 1978. In Oregon, the state's active "marketing" of the program has led to the fairly high participation rate.

The amount of participation a program will enjoy depends upon a number of factors, Crotts said. If property taxes are not a great burden, if interest rates are high or the local tax man discourages participation, it is unlikely many people will sign up. If the state doesn't put much effort into publicizing the program, participation will be low. And then there is the natural proclivity against having a lien out on one's home. That has scared some people away, he said, although attitudes on that matter appear to be changing.

HOUSE DAMAGED BY FIRE — Greenville Fire-Rescue officials pull burned furniture from a 113 Wade St. residence Tuesday afternoon after fire caused heavy damage to the home's bedroom, hall and attic. tendent Thomas Craft noted that need for classroom space at W.H. Robinson and A.G. Cox necessitated the purchase of mobile units for both schools at a total estimated cost of $25,000.

"We have students and no place to house them," he explained. "It's a stark reality that we have to have space for the children we do have and right now we don't have this space in Winterville."

In his budget message to the board, Craft said the Pitt County school system is "no better than its instructional programs and the (current expense) budget request for 1982-83 places a strong emphasis on instruction."

"Out of a total request of $6,564,596 for the year, $3,214,464 is linked directly to instruction," he noted. "The only other large aspect of the budget request falls under such subject areas as operation of plant at $938,310 and maintenance of plant at $1,165,550."

The budget, said the acting superintendent:

- Continues funding as far as possible the existing programs.

- Places emphasis on the continued reading curriculum.
- Supports increases in the science curriculum in the middle grades.

- Emphasizes opportunities in computer science in middle grades.

- Maintains a salary schedule for personnel but contains no cost of living increase.

"This budget is presented," he added, "with the hope of maintaining support areas and advancing dollars in the investment of the future, that being the boys and girls of Pitt County."

Of the total current expense request, $5,563,832 will come from local funds, $907,984 from the state and $92,780 from other sources.

In 1981-82, the board received $5,864,406 in current expense monies, $700,101 less than the request for 1982-83

Four Injured During Fire

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — A "flash fire" broke out at Mobile Chemical Co. Industrial Finishes this morning, injuring at least four workers, police and fire officials said.

Wayne Hartley of the High Point Police Department said the fire broke out about 8:59 a.m. when employee Jerry Allen was working with "some type of material, like lacquer." Hartley said he believed Allen suffered burns and was the most seriously injured of the four.

The injured were taken to High Point Memorial Hospital. In addition to Allen, Hartley said one of the injured was Murdock MeQueen. The names of the other two workers were not immediately available.

Hospital spokesman Barry Ward confirmed that the injured had been taken there but would not release their names until relatives had been notified.

Ward did say, however, that one victim was in serious condition with "extensive" burns and would be transferred to the burn center at North Carolina Memorial Hospital. The other three were in stable condition with less serious burns and weren't expected to be transferred, he said.

Fire officials said the blaze was quickly contained. They were investigating the cause of the fire and still assessing damage this morning.

Hartley said the burned materials at the plant on English Road, which makes finishes for the furniture industry, posed no danger to the public.

Vacancy Signs At Knoxville Appear

WORLD'S FAIR PARKING — Knoxville because of rate changes The "All Day" price has been painted out on the price sign of this Car Parking, Inc. lot in downtown (AP Laserphoto)

By TOM EBLEN
Associated Press Writer
KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Inflated parking rates are falling and the predicted housing shortage is nowhere in sight as attendance at the 1982 World's Fair remains below projected levels.

"I think some of the people who jumped into the parking business for the six months of the World's Fair will be surprised at how much the public dictates parking prices," said Winston Frazier of Safety-Park, Knoxville's biggest parking vendor.

The company dropped all-day rates on two of its 25 downtown lots to $4 a day from $5 and $6. "We may go lower yet," Frazier, the assistant general manager, said Tuesday.

"We would rather charge $3 and be full than $6 and have eight cars in a lot. There's an awful lot of parking available downtown. It's incredible."

Many lots, which a year ago charged $1.50 and $2 for all-day rates, went up to the $6 range before the fair opened. Some parking lots a block from the 72-acre downtown fairgrounds raised their rates to $8 to $10.

Many lots Tuesday were dotted with empty spaces and some lot owners waged price wars.

Business has been light at the fair's official parking lots too, with some big city-owned shuttle buses pulling up to the fair with only three or four people inside, said a driver who asked not to be identified.

The fair started Saturday and the crowd that was on hand for President Reagan's kickoff address was not matched the following three days.

The 22-nation exhibition, which has energy as its theme, had a weekend attendance of 127,660, more than 50,000 less than expected. But 57,300 people came Monday — 20,000 more than expected. Tuesday's attendance was 48,690.

"We filled up Saturday morning when President Reagan was here and we haven't been full since," said W.S. Merritt, who works at Allright Auto Park's $8 lot. "I've had people slow down on the street and look up at the price and just keep on going."

Some innkeepers were angry with their plight — stuck with plenty of vacant rooms priced between $60 and $100 a night.

Hotel owners even forced the Community Information Center to change its telephone scripts, which told callers that hotel space was "very tight." That boosted reservations at campgrounds, makeshift motels, houseboats and even a converted tobacco warehouse.

The new script says all types of housing are readily available.

Meanwhile, city officials said they will begin prosecuting landlords who defy the city's ban on renting apartments by the night.

The ban is being challenged in court by several landlords who were denied nightly rental permits because the city council believed they evicted long-term tenants to make way for tourists.

Landlords found guilty of violating zoning laws against nightly apartment rentals could receive a 30-day jail term and $50 fine each time they rent a unit.

New Study Supports Concern TV Violence Affects Youth

WASHINGTON (AP) — There is "overwhelming" evidence that violence on television leads to aggressive behavior by children and teen-agers, a new government study says.

Both prime time and weekend children's television are dominated by action, power and danger. There is an average of five violent acts per hour on prime time and 18 acts per hour on children's weekend programs," the National Institute of Mental Health report said.

The study, "Television and Behavior: Ten Years of Scientific Progress and Implications for the Eighties," is a follow-up to a widely publicized 1972 Surgeon General's report on television violence.

The report is based on a review of several hundred research studies.

Among the research studies cited in the report were two that found preschool children showed "unwarranted aggressive behavior in free play" after heavy television viewing of violent programs.

In another study, a sample of teen-age boys in London showed they were more likely to engage in "serious violence" after watching violence on television.

"Violence on television seems to be cyclical, up a little one year, down a little the next, but the percentage of programs containing violence has remained essentially the same over the past decade," it said.

"In general, television, despite the concerns of congressmen and citizens' groups, remains a violent form of entertainment," the report said.

"The evidence accumulated in the 1970s seems overwhelming that televised violence and aggression are positively related in children.

"The consensus among most of the research community is that violence on television does lead to aggressive behavior by children and teen-agers who watch the programs. This conclusion is based on laboratory experiments and on field studies. Not all children become aggressive, of course...."

It said a recent study by researchers at the National Broadcasting Co. found no evidence of a long-term link between viewing violence on television and aggressive behavior. "Others doing television research will no doubt examine this new study to try to learn why it does not agree with many other findings," it said.

On other issues, the study said: "Television does a poor job of promoting good health practices. "Much of television's content seems to foster poor nutrition, especially in commercials for sweets and snack foods. Children who watch a lot of television have poorer nutritional habits than children who do not watch as much." The report noted that alcohol consumption is common on TV programs and that when television characters drive cars "they almost never wear seat belts."

—Women and the elderly are underrepresented on television shows. "The men are mostly strong and manly, the women usually passive and feminine," it said, and the characters usually have better jobs than people in real life.

—Minority groups tend to watch more television than others, and women more than men. Heavy watchers tend to be less educated, "yet among college students television is a favorite past-time."

The report calls television "one of the most beguiling" inventions of the electronic age.

"A sound-and-light show appealing to the prepotent senses of vision and hearing, it draws attention like a magnet. Infants as young as six months gaze at it; little children sit in front of it for hours at a time; and millions of elderly, sick and institutionalized people keep con-

Plans Bid In 3rd District

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Republican Eugene "Red" McDaniel says he's seeking a chance to challenge Democratic Rep. Charles O. Whitley of Mount Olive for the 3rd District congressional seat.

McDaniel filed Tuesday for the 3rd District race while Democrat James M. Clarke filed to challenge for Republican Rep. William Hendon's 11th District seat. Hendon is from Asheville.

Four-term Democratic incumbent W.G. "Bill" Hefner filed as a candidate for re-election to his 8th District seat, and veteran GOP incumbent James T. Broyhill announced his intention to run again.

McDaniel, of Buies Creek, paid his $607 filing fee at the state board of elections.

Clarke, a state senator from Fairview, also paid his filing fee at the state board's office, assuring a Democratic primary in the 11th District. On Monday, John Garfield Kleibor of Asheville filed as a candidate.

Republican Jake Presson of Salisbury filed Friday as a candidate for Hefner's 8th District seat.

Broyhill says he will seek an 11th term. He would be the dean of the state's congressional delegation, following the retirement of 30-year veteran L.H. Fountain in the 2nd District. He will rank 30th on the list of seniority in the 435-member House.

W.W. "Billy" Yeargin Jr. of Oxford said he wouldn't become a fourth candidate for the Democratic nomination to succeed Fountain.

tact with the outside world mainly through television," it said.

Dr. Herbert Pardes, director of the National Institute of Mental Health, said the report focused on television entertainment, not news, advertising or other areas.

The report made no recommendations. Pardes said,

"We would anticipate, however, that persons bearing responsibility for policy and for television industry practices would be interested in the findings for use in decision making." Officials of the National Association of Broadcasters could not be reached by telephone late Tuesday for comment on the report.

FARMVILLE — Farmville citizens, for the second month, crowded the Town Commissioners' meeting room to make known their wishes for a community center.

Mayor Rusty Duke promised that the board will make a decision this month about the center. Architects' reports are due May 18 and the decision will be made soon afterward, he indicated.

The assessments rolls for completed paving projects on East Church Street, South Davis Drive and Mandarin Drive were approved following a public hearing in which there was no protest.

A public hearing on the proposed use of revenue sharing funds was conducted. The town has $27,000 left from previous years and will receive $92,000 this fiscal year. The town administration's recommendation that the $109,000 be used for construction of a public works center was not opposed. A request that funds be set aside for operation of the senior citizens' van if other government funds are terminated was heard. No decision will be made till budget time.

Authorization was given for the town administrator to organize a farmers' market on the Town Commons. It was suggested that the market will be opened, beginning May 18, Tuesdays from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. As the season progresses, Thursdays may be added. It is hoped that the market will be of benefit to downtown merchants by generating interest and traffic in the downtown area and to local citizens by enabling them to sell their excess produce and buy fresh produce. The only requirement would be that each seller register with the town before selling at the market.

The board directed the town administrator to check with other towns about operating procedures and suggested that starting earlier in the morning might be advisable.

A contract for auditing services for the year ending June 30 was awarded to Umphlett and Hatcher, CPAs of Farmville. This is a continuation of a proposed three-year contract with this firm.

The board agreed with expressions of citizens' sentiment that money refunded the town by Carolina Power and Light be distributed on a pro rata basis to each customer. The $88,733.41 will be refunded on a per-KWH-billed basis, after deducting $3,400 for administrative costs. Outstanding obligations due the town will have to be deducted from refunds due any individual or company and former customers will have to apply for a refund by noon of June 1. Refunds may be made by applying credits to July bills.

The Police Explorers, sponsored by the Farmville Police Department, were authorized to establish a react base station in the police department. This would give the Explorers experience in police dispatching and let them be "an extra set of eyes for the Police Department," Maj. David F. Nichols wrote in his request letter.

A prior-made request that use of the fire horn be curtailed, since firemen now have pagers, was withdrawn. Fire Chief H.P. Norman said the firemen have since decided that the horn is a good backup and that they'd like to keep it.

The board decided to allow a lien to be placed against the property of the owner of a house that is being rehabilitated under the Community Development residential rehab program. He is being required to pay 20 percent of the cost, but is disabled and has a very low income. Therefore, extra time is being allowed him to pay that cost.

The board decided to exchange property at 703 S. George St. appraised at $3,680 plus $1,070 cash for the No. 2 Wastewater Treatment Plant appraised at $4,750; to recognize the value of property at 705 S. George St. at $15,000 and to authorize the town administrator to proceed to acquire that property by purchase and 701 S. George St. through condemnation proceedings since previous acquisition attempts have been unsuccessful because of uncertainty about rightful heirs. The plan is to make the three lots at 701, 703 and 705 S. George St. into two buildable lots.

It was resolved to make grant application for funds to help out this summer with mosquito control and to designate Bill Oakley as the operator of the mosquito control program.

Broad Impact By Court Ruling

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) —

An attorney representing a brown lung victim says a state Supreme Court ruling will have a significant impact on benefits for other victims of occupational diseases.

Attorney R. James Lore says the effect of the court's 6-1 ruling Tuesday was that the Industrial Commission cannot limit the liability of workers' compensation insurance to medical expenses over a certain length of time.

Lore says the effect was that expenses involved in continuous medical care must be paid "if it's necessary to give you relief from symptoms of the occupational disease."

The court ruled that workers' compensation must pay continuing medical expenses of a brown lung victim whose compensation had been limited by the state Industrial Commission.

The decision came in the case of Spurgeon W. Smith, 73, of Albemarle, who was ruled permanently disabled with byssinosis in 1980, twelve years after he was forced to quit his mill job because of breathing difficulties.

"The important point in this case, and for all other types of occupational diseases, is these people won't have to have this paid by things like Medicare and the taxpayers," Lore said. "And this will mean a lot of money."

Smith had sought compensation for brown lung disease in 1978. He had worked for American & Efrind Mills, whose workers' compensation carrier was Aetna Life & Casualty Insurance Co.

The Industrial Commission ruled him disabled and awarded 300 weeks' compensation and medical expenses.

The Supreme Court's decision, written by Chief Justice Joseph Branch, modified and affirmed a Court of Appeals decision that said Smith was entitled to lifetime medical benefits. It also ruled he was entitled to permanent total disability, rejecting arguments that state law in effect at the time of his employment limited his disability compensation.

Refund Plan At Hospital

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Eastwood Hospital has doctored its billing plan a bit, offering refunds to patients unsatisfied with the service.

"By placing our services under a money-back guarantee, we are letting people know they will get the service they have been promised, or they will get a credit on their account," administrator John Davis said Tuesday.

The 243-bed hospital says that all a patient has to do is ring Extension 650 and get:

— $15 back if the admission isn't completed within 45 minutes.

— $10 if a nurse fails to respond to a call signal within a minute.

— $10 if the patient's room isn't cleaned daily or if all equipment in the room isn't working properly.

— $5 if the patient's meal is late or cold.

"We haven't had any calls yet," said ward secretary Nelda Crowe, who oversees the complaint telephone number.

And the hospital plan doesn't cover certain other inconveniences.

"How can we guarantee that the needle is not going to hurt or that all the tests and procedures are going to be nice and comfortable?" asked personnel director Travis Keenum.

UPS Contract Awaits Vote By Rank-And-File

WASHINGTON (AP) — A tentative three-year contract to head off a threatened strike against United Parcel Service awaits ratification by some 80,000 Teamster drivers and package handlers working for the nation's largest package carrier.

The accord was reached Tuesday evening, less than 30 hours before tonight's midnight strike deadline set by the union. The Teamsters continued bargaining with UPS after the old contract expired last Friday.

Nicholas A. Fidandis, a federal mediator, announced the agreement but declined to provide details.

"The Teamsters and the United Parcel Service have reached a settlement on a national master agreement, subject to ratification by the members," said Fidandis, head of the office of mediation services in the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service.

The two sides hammered out the agreement in more than 10 hours of bargaining at the federal agency's headquarters here this week.

Both sides temporarily withheld details of the settlement, which would ensure labor peace for the Greenwich, Conn., company until 1985 if approved by the rank and file.

Duke Zeller, chief spokesman for the union, said, "We have reached a settlement, but I can't say anything further."

The agreement headed off a halt in UPS service that almost immediately would have placed a heavy burden on the much smaller parcel post service of the U.S. Postal Service.

Postal Service spokesman Lew Everhardt said the independent government agency handled about 595 million parcels in 1981, compared to an estimated 1.5 billion packages moved by UPS.

Fearing the worst, UPS had begun sending some of its business elsewhere Tuesday, saying that long-distance parcels "might get caught in our system" if a strike occurred.

Other carriers, such as Emery Worldwide and Federal Express, said they were prepared to step in and handle deliveries that UPS would turn aside.

During the negotiations, all management spokesmen would say was the disagreement centered on money issues, while union officials were silent on the issues in dispute.

Union sources had indicated that Teamster truck drivers working for UPS were unwilling to grant the kinds of wage concessions their counterparts gave to the freight industry.

In a new National Master Freight Agreement signed with Trucking Management Inc., bargaining arm for the unionized trucking industry, the union agreed in March to forsake increases in wages over the next three years and accepted having their cost-of-living adjustments paid only once a year, rather than twice.

Find Corrosion In TMI Reactor

MIDDLETOWN, Pa. (AP) — The undamaged but idle Unit 1 reactor at the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant has been found to have more corroded heat-exchange tubes than previously thought, and nearly all of the 31,000 tubes will be fixed, plant officials said.

Spokesman Doug Bedell said Tuesday more than half the tubes show signs of corrosion and it will be more efficient to fix them all.

Officials believe sulfur caused the corrosion.

owners living within town limits are required to have the tags.

Discussions were held with officials of Williamston Cablevision on a request for a rate increase. No action was taken by the board on the request, with commissioners stating they need more time to study the situation. During the discussions, commissioners suggested the company make efforts to secure more subscribers.

The two company representatives, Berney Stevens and Bill Travis, pointed out that the company is competitive in scale with others in the area, citing a 60 percent saturation rate within Williamston. The two also explained that due to the addition of ESPN and USA networks to the system, and the limited revenue available from a small system like Williamston's, along with rising costs of services, an increase was justified.

On the question of video games being operated in establishments located in Williamston, the board deferred action.

WILLIAMSTON — Acceptance of a $167,125 State Clean Water Bond and amendment of two town ordinances were the principal items acted on at the May meeting of the Williamston Town Board.

Town commissioners approved acceptance of the Clean Water Bond money for use in constructing a new well and elevated storage tank outside the town limits. The town is working with Martin County officials and with other funding sources in an attempt to secure more than $600,000 needed for the new well project.

On the matter of the town ordinances, the first one amended deals with threats to lives and property created by overhanging trees which may be dead or in deteriorating condition. Where such trees are on private property and are noted, the owner can eliminate the danger himself or the town will take care of necessary removal with the cost billed to the property owner along with taxes.

The second ordinance was amended to make more clear the requirement of who will display city automobile tags. Before the amendment, the wording of the ordinance read in a manner that made it possible to interpret that anyone using the streets, including county people and visitors, needed to purchase a tag. The amended ordinance specifies that only car owners living within town limits are required to have the tags.

Discussions were held with officials of Williamston Cablevision on a request for a rate increase. No action was taken by the board on the request, with commissioners stating they need more time to study the situation. During the discussions, commissioners suggested the company make efforts to secure more subscribers.

The two also explained that due to the addition of ESPN and USA networks to the system, and the limited revenue available from a small system like Williamston's, along with rising costs of services, an increase was justified.

On the question of video games being operated in establishments located in Williamston, the board deferred action.

NATURAL CAMOUFLAGE ... Cloaked in dense weeds, this five-foot alligator goes incognito in a pond near Big Creek at Lake Waccamaw with only his eyes and tail clearly visible.

Nearby, but out of the range of a nervous photographer, his 14-foot daddy and 10-foot mama sunned in the quiet. The big creatures, kin to the lizard, are experiencing a comeback in the state, say wildlife officials, after being pushed from their habitats by development of low-lying areas in the last 20 years. Residents Help A 106-Year-Old GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A city official says he thought he was doing 106-year-old Georgia McTier a favor by suggesting she have her house painted. As it turned out he was, but perhaps not as he had planned.

Miss McTier, who has been blind for 40 years, said a city official told her several months ago that her two-story, 102-year-old home must be painted or else face condemnation.

Miss McTier was upset at the threat to her home and called Sister Genevieve at St. Mary's Catholic Church. Sister Genevieve, who has a reputation for getting help for people with problems, passed the word to the Rev. Daniel Kramer, who mentioned the dilemma at mass.

"We announced that our oldest parishioner needed her house painted," Kramer said. "People took an interest."

Miss McTier later recalled how happy she was when she heard St. Mary's would help with the job saying, "I stayed awake all night, dancing in ecstasy."

For several weekends in March and April, a dozen volunteers from St. Mary's scraped and sanded and then applied a new coat of light gray.

"To me, Christianity means helping other people," said Greg Coward of Randleman, a professional painter who helped with the job. "I'm a Christian — a lay pastor. When Father Kramer called, I thought it was something I should do."

City housing inspector Otis Jordan said he did give Miss McTier a written recommendation that the house be painted, but that it was in effect, a friendly suggestion.

Miss McTier remains unconvinced that she misunderstood Jordan's message, but said she holds no grudges.

"They can't have a nice-looking city with the houses all broken down and dirty," she said. "I imagine it needed some paint."

Concern Over Reserve Fleet

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Spokesmen for the U.S. House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee say they're concerned over the conditions of the nation's Ready Reserve Fleet, saying it isn't what it should be. The committee has been holding hearings on the state of civilian ocean defenses and Molly Dominick of the committee's staff says "Basically, we found the U.S.

Merchant Marine is not in as good shape as it should be."

Gerald Seifert, also of the committee's staff, said that during hearings in 1978 it was found much of the reserve fleet was "deplorable and completely unserviceable."

"We haven't made another physical survey since then, but our understanding is the condition has improved," Seifert said. "But we're not really certain since we were led to believe (prior to 1978) that it was in good shape."

The fleet's condition came to light recently when the 39-year-old SS Ohio participated in the U.S. Army's "Gallant Eagle" exercise in California.

The Ohio developed engine troubles, and other minor problems, causing a three-day delay in its arrival on the West Coast with about 250 pieces of Army equipment. The equipment was loaded and unloaded at the state port in Wilmington.

The former Seatrail ship, which had undergone a $3 million overhaul, has been "mothballed" since 1979 and is counted as part of the U.S. Ready Reserve Fleet at James River, Va.

The fleet, which will number about 32 ships by next year, includes ships that could be put into operation within 10 days in case of a national emergency.

The Ready Reserve Fleet is part of the larger National Defense Reserve Fleet, which has about 190 ships of potential military value.

Seifert said the committee's main concern recently has been to keep the Merchant Marine afloat in the face of federal budget cuts. In the long run, Seifert said what the commercial fleet — and ultimately the reserve fleet — needs is an overall program that will bolster ship construction and use.

He said that won't happen, though, until the Reagan administration reveals its policy on the merchant marine.

Polish Police And Rioters Clash Again

By THOMAS W. NETTER
Associated Press Writer
WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Police clashed with youths who destroyed buildings and erected barricades in the northwest Baltic port of Szczecin for the second night in a row, it was reported here today.

Published reports gave few details of the unrest, which followed clashes Monday in more than a dozen Polish cities.

The rioting was the most violent show of opposition to the government since martial law was declared last Dec. 13 and the independent union Solidarity suspended.

Official reports said the authorities clamped a curfew back on Warsaw and Gliwice.

In a surprise move, telephone lines in the capital and other cities reopened after being cut Monday night.

The East German news agency ADN said restrictions also were imposed in Szczecin and Gdansk, the Baltic port where Solidarity was founded in August 1980 and site of big anti-government demonstrations Saturday and Monday.

Meetings of student clubs and all public entertainment, including discotheques, were banned again.

Gen. Cieslaw Kiszczak, the interior minister in the martial-law government, reported a second day of unrest Tuesday in Szczecin, the provincial capital 15 miles from the East German border. He gave no details.

Kiszczak told Poland's parliament, the Sejm, that 1,372 people were detained Monday in riots in Warsaw and at least 13 other cities. He reported at least 72 policemen injured.

The minister said nothing about casualties among the demonstrators, but many bleeding, battered protesters were seen in Warsaw.

"The most serious incidents took place in Warsaw where police decided to disperse aggressive groups," Kiszczak said. "The incidents lasted until late night, and similar excesses were repeated today (Tuesday) in Szczecin."

Clean-up crews hurriedly collected the debris from Warsaw streets where demonstrators battled police amid clouds of tear gas for six hours Monday. The crews removed most Communist red flags that survived the demonstrators' attacks.

Official newspapers and other sources reported disturbances Monday in Swidnik, Gdynia, Lublin, Elblag, Torun, Krakow, Lodz, Bydgoszcz, Gliwice, Wroclaw and other cities as well as in Warsaw, Gdansk and Szczecin. The widespread manifestation of unrest indicated it was coordinated.

Solidarity, emboldened when thousands turned out Saturday for counter-demonstrations to official May Day observances, called for more demonstrations Monday on the anniversary of the liberal 1791 constitution. The government did not interfere with the demonstrations Saturday, but it cracked down Monday.

GRADUATION DAY — A young Salvadoran soldier carries his rifle on its side as he passes the reviewing stand at Fort Bragg, N.C. Tuesday as 957 Salvadoran troops graduated from basic training. U.S. Army officials said eight youths were sent home before graduation because they were too young. One was 14-years old, and seven were 15. (AP Laserphoto)

How Tar Heel Representatives, Senators Voted

Roll Call Report Service
WASHINGTON — Here's how area senators were recorded on major roll call votes between April 22-28. There were no House votes.

HOME RULE — The Senate adopted 49 for and 43 against, an amendment protecting the power cities now have to regulate foreign government property within their boundaries. The chief aim of the amendment was to preserve the D.C. government's authority to keep embassy office buildings (chanceries) out of certain neighborhoods. It also blocked a State Department request for a limited say in certain property decisions affecting the location and use of foreign consular offices in 200-plus U.S. cities.

In seeking the pre-emptive authority over certain local zoning decisions, the State Department argues it needs such leverage to insure that foreign property decisions affecting U.S. offices overseas are made fairly. The amendment was attached to S 854, later passed and sent to conference with the House.

Sponsor Charles Mathias, R-Md., said his amendment was "both for the cities in the other states affected by pre-emption and for their sister city and national capital, Washington, D.C."

Opponent Charles Percy, R-Ill., said that by giving the State Department the authority it wants "we will be able to insure fair, equitable and non-discriminatory treatment of U.S. missions and personnel overseas."

Senators voting "yea" wanted to block creation of a new State Department office with powers to influence local property decisions affecting foreign offices.

Sens. John East, R, and Jesse Helms, R, voted "nay."

CRIME LAWS — By a vote of 45 for and 46 against, the Senate failed to achieve three-fifths majority needed to silence a filibuster blocking consideration of a massive bill that is the first streamlining of the U.S. criminal code since the founding of the Republic. The Bill (S 1630), years in the drafting stage, was then shelved among uncertainty over whether the Senate will take it up this year. In the House, there are no plans to consider the measure in 1982.

Senators favoring the filibuster — those voting "nay" — were mostly conservatives unhappy with parliamentary rules or liberals who thought it futile for the Senate to spend long hours on a bill that, if passed, likely would die this year in the House. The parliamentary snafu ranking conservatives was a ruling that language from an existing criminal laws could not be grafted essentially verbatim onto the new code.

This jeopardized a strategy for insuring that their favored laws in areas such as obscenity, gun possession and strike-breaking remain on the books. Sen Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., who supported ending the filibuster, said "sooner or later, we have to act on this code. There have been 12 or 15 years of work on it. It is extremely important." Pro-filibuster Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said "the Senate should not take up this bill in a way that invites some in this chamber to turn it into a Christmas tree that would destroy not only any hope for action in this Congress but any hope for future action in any future congresses."

Senators voting "yea" wanted the Senate to begin debating the criminal code reform bill. East and Helms voted "nay."

Smoking Cigars By The Billions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Smokers in the United States consumed 3.9 billion cigars during 1981, according to the Cigar Association of America.

Contributing to the total was a 20 percent increase over 1980 in the sales of cigars retailing for 8 to 15 cents each and a 5 percent gain in the sales of those selling for over 15 cents each, the Association reported.

The United States also exported more cigars than it imported in 1981, the report said. Cigar exports totalled 131.8 million, an increase of 5.3 percent over 1980, with the United Kingdom (23 million) and The Netherlands (10 million) the leading foreign customers. Some 115.3 million cigars were imported in 1981, the largest numbers (33 million) coming from the Dominican Republic, 23 million from Honduras, 17 million from Jamaica, 12 million from Mexico, and 8 million from Nicaragua.

Count New York Jewish People

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's largest city has a Jewish population of 1.1 million, or 15.8 percent, according to a survey by the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies.

The group's researchers said that marks a decline in the number of Jews living here and parallels the decline of whites. The survey said Jews still constitute one-third of the white, non-Hispanic population.

The survey material came from "several sources melded together," including a list of 1,600 distinctive Jewish names.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market advanced slightly today, adding to the gains of the past three sessions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 1.81 to 856.26 in the first half hour.

Gainers took a 4-3 lead over losers in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said the fighting over the Falkland Islands continued to have little apparent effect on the market.

They said the market seemed to draw continued support from hopes for some reduction in interest rates, and pickup in economic activity, in the months ahead.

Not much encouragement on that score was expected in the next few days, however. When the government reports Friday on April unemployment, analysts expect the jobless rate to climb above the 9 percent level reached in March, which equaled a post-war high.

American Electric Power led the active list in early trading, up 1/8 at 17 1/2. A 150,800-share block traded at 17.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 5.42 to 854.45, bringing its gain over the past three sessions to just under 10 points.

Advances outnumbered declines by close to a 2-1 ratio on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 58.72 million shares, against 46.49 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index gained .37 to 67.63.

Gaylord Chasing No. 300

SEATTLE (AP) — Two decades and 299 victories later, Gaylord Perry says he's not much different from the 23-year-old rookie for the San Francisco Giants who faced the Pittsburgh Pirates on April 25, 1962.

"They had some awful impressive hitters," said Perry, recalling the team he beat, 4-1, with a 7 2-3-inning performance that night in Candlestick Park.

"They had some fellas like Dick Stuart and Roberto Clemente," continued the right-hander, now pitching for the Seattle Mariners. "They could really hit the ball a long way."

"The way I see it, baseball hasn't changed for me. I'm still pitching, and there's still a lot of guys who can hit the ball a long way. Only the names are different."

Things have changed, though. Perry wasn't good enough to stick with the Giants in 1962, pitching only 43 innings before being shipped to the minors. But Thursday night against the New York Yankees in the Kingdome, he will try and join a select list, only 14 names long, names like Cy Young, Walter Johnson, Christy Mathewson, Warren Spahn and Lefty Grove.

won 300 or more games. Early Wynn was the last to join, in 1963.

There is another group of names that helps put Perry's incredible longevity into perspective, too.

During Perry's rookie season, the major leagues' 20-game winners were Jack Sanford of the Giants, Don Drysdale of Los Angeles, Bob Purkey and Joey Jay of Cincinnati, Ralph Terry of the Yankees, Dick Donovan of Cleveland, Ray Herbert of the Chicago White Sox and Camilo Pascual of Minnesota.

All are long gone from the playing fields; none came close to 300 victories.

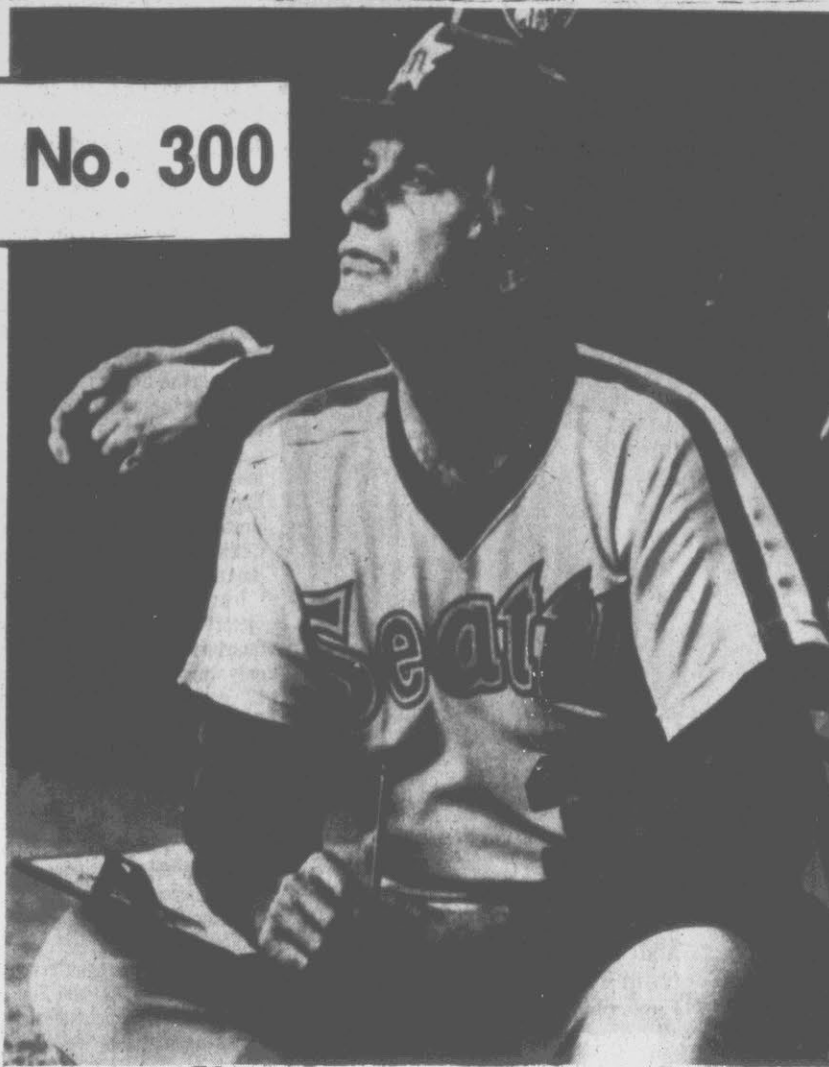

"When you've been around as long as I've been, there are several reasons," said Perry. "In my opinion, the main thing you have to do is stay physically fit all year around. You don't want to ever get out of shape."

"But you should go at it gradually instead of rushing to get into condition."

"He gets off the mound as quick as any 18-year-old," points out Mariners catcher Jim Essian, 31. "Really, he's an inspiration to all of us."

Home Runs Spark Rose By Gryphons

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
Crowell Pope slapped a three-run homer and Sammy Hodges and Randy Warren added one-run tallies to spark a six-run fifth inning last night as Rose High School's unbeaten Rampants romped to a 10-1 win over Rocky Mount High School.

The homers were the first of the season for all three and accounted for five of the six runs scored during the inning, which was helped along by four Rocky Mount errors.

The win runs the Rampant string to 17 in a row this season, and eight straight in the Big East. The Rampants also reduced their magic number to three, with only Northern Nash and Kinston still having a chance to pass the Rampants. Northern has four losses and Kinston, three, following games last night.

Roger Williams threw a four-hitter at the Gryphons and the only run scored off him was unearned. That came in the first inning and staked the Gryphons to an early 1-0 lead.

But Williams got very frugal after that, and only two other Gryphons reached as far as second base on him as he walked just two and struck out 13, including the last four men he faced.

Rose had ample opportunity to break the game open early, loading the bases with none out in both the first and second inning, but a lack of hitting and some baserunning mistakes resulted in only three runs produced during those two frames.

"I thought we came back and played well after the first couple of innings," Coach Ronald Vincent said. "We made a lot of mental mistakes early, and I'm not sure that we really had our minds on the game when it started."

"We swung the bats well after we got started, and I thought Roger threw the ball awfully well in the last few innings."

Vincent also praised the defensive work of Mont Carter, who initiated a double play in the fifth and also retired the final batter of the inning, as well as coming up with a heads-up play in the third that got Rose out of trouble.

In the third, Eddie Coates had walked and broken for second as Marshall White hit the ball into the hole left by Carter as he went to cover the bag. He recovered in time to field the ball, but not quickly enough to get White.

However, Carter noted that Coates had taken a turn at second, and quickly fired back to the bag to get the diving runner in time.

"Bill Kittrell (Rose first baseman) also continues to give us solid defensive play," Vincent added.

The scoring in the first couple of innings took on some weird tones.

Rocky Mount scored first. With one away, Tom Berry walked and stole second. He moved to third on an out, and scored when White's grounder to short was bobbled.

The Rampants then came back with two runs to take a 2-1 lead. Tom Buie walked and Carter appeared to double off the fence in left center. Buie, however, thinking the fielder had a chance at the catch pulled up at second, and Carter had to scurry back to first after nearly running up on Buie. Hodges then walked, loading the bases. A wild pitch then let Buie score, although the runner hesitated between home and third before finally dashing across for the tying run.

Then, with two away, Pope grounded back to third. The fielder, however, instead of throwing on to first for the force, trapped Hodges in a rundown between second and third, and while the chase was on, Carter scored with the go-ahead run.

In the second, Rose added a third run. Warren led off with a double to right and took third on a wild pitch. Both Kittrell and Rudy Stalls walked and Carter grounded to second, scoring Warren. Carter, however, was then picked cleanly off first to end the threat.

A fourth run crossed in the fourth. With one down, Kittrell beat out an infield hit. He stole second and took third on a balk, scoring when Stalls grounded out.

Then, in the fifth, the Rampants broke it wide open with six big runs. Hodges led off things with a solo homer to left field. Williams reached on an error and Jeff Wilson ran for him, moving up on Gordon Douglas' hit to center.

That brought up Pope, who popped up in foul territory, only to see the ball dropped by the Gryphon first baseman.

"Their catcher told me, 'You got lucky. Now don't hit a home run on us.'" Pope said one pitch later. "I told him, 'You gotta be joking!' and there it went."

The next pitch sailed over the fence in center, and both Wilson and Douglas trotted home ahead of Pope.

Warren then followed with a towering blast over the fence in

N. Pitt Stuns Rams, 11-7

BETHEL — Ken Whitehurst hit a three-run home run to key a five-run third inning and North Pitt scored five runs in the sixth to pull off a stunning 11-7 win against Greene Central Tuesday afternoon in an Eastern Carolina Conference baseball game.

The loss dampens the Rams' ECC championship hopes. Greene Central dips to 5-3 in the conference, 2½-half games behind league-leading Ayden-Grifton. The Rams travel to Ayden-Grifton Friday.

North Pitt, now 5-10 overall and 2-7 in the league, fell behind in the third when Chris Suggs' two-run home run staked the Rams to a 2-0 lead. The Panthers, however, rallied for five runs in the bottom of the inning.

Lee Manning reached on an error to open the inning. Then, with two gone, he scored on Trelis Moore's single. Greg Briley followed with a double to score Moore to tie the game at 2-2.

Richard Heller then doubled but Briley held up at third. Whitehurst then hit his home run to give the Panthers a 5-2 lead.

Greene Central edged back within one with two runs in the top of the fifth, but the Panthers countered with a run to make it 6-4. North Pitt then erupted for five runs in the sixth.

Daniel Keel singled, moved to third when Mike Brown reached on an error and scored on a wild pitch. Brown followed him home moments later on a single by Edward Ayers.

After Greg Briley singled, Heller reached on an error to score Ayers. A single by Whitehurst loaded the bases. Then, with two gone, Jay Hines walked to force home Briley and Lee Manning followed with a sacrifice fly to score Heller and make it 11-4.

The Rams came back with a three-run home run by James Moore in the top of the seventh, but it was not enough.

Briley and Whitehurst were both three for four for North Pitt. Suggs was three for four for the Rams. Moore was two for four.

North Pitt plays host to Farmville Central Friday.

Chargers Defeat Southern Nash, 7-2

LITTLEFIELD — Chris Strickland, Jackie Conway and Doug Coley each drove in two runs to help lead Ayden-Grifton to a 7-2 victory over Southern Nash on Tuesday night in an Eastern Carolina Conference baseball game.

The win leaves the Chargers at 13-5 overall and upped their league-leading mark to 8-1. C. B. Aycock stayed one-half game behind the Chargers last night with a 9-0 win over SouthWest Edgecombe.

Aycock, which plays host to Southern Nash tonight, is now 7-1 in the ECC and 12-6 overall. Southern Nash, with the loss, falls to 8-10 overall and 5-4 in the ECC.

Ayden-Grifton broke up a scoreless tie in the third inning when Conway scored on Strickland's single. Conway had reached second on an error and went to third on a passed ball.

The Chargers upped their lead to 3-0 in the fourth. Terry Locust reached on an error and stole second and came home on Joey Kennedy's double. Conway followed with a double to score Kennedy.

Southern Nash closed the gap to 3-2 in the top of the fifth when they loaded the bases. Tyrone Gay came on to relieve starter Terry Garrett with the bases full and one run in.

Gay, the Chargers' ace left-hander, walked the first batter he faced to bring in the Firebirds' second run but then struck out the next three batters to end the threat.

Ayden-Grifton quickly got those two runs back in the bottom of the inning when Coley singled home Strickland and Locust. Strickland singled to open the inning and went to second on Bernard Riccarelli's sacrifice.

Locust then reached on an error and stole second before Conway lashed his single that upped the Chargers' lead to 5-2. A-G added two more runs in the sixth for their seven-run total.

Garrett, a freshman, got the win for A-G. He is now 3-0.

Strickland led A-G in hitting with three hits in four at bats. Conway, a freshman, was two for three with two doubles.

Southern Nash did not have anyone with more than one hit.

Boston Looks To End Series With Bullets

By The Associated Press
The Boston Celtics are always tough at home. Tonight they figure to be even tougher for the Washington Bullets.

"I hope they fall asleep and go off form," Washington guard Kevin Grevey says hopefully, "but I don't really think it'll happen."

Grevey reflects the popular opinion as the Bullets try to do the improbable — come back from a 1-3 deficit in their seven-game National Basketball Association Eastern playoff series.

If they are to overtake the league's defending champions, they'll have to start tonight at Boston Garden, where the Celtics had a 35-6 record during the regular season.

Ironically, the Bullets' only victory over the Celtics in this quarterfinal series — and their only win over Boston in the last 13 games — came in the Celtics' arena last Wednesday night.

A Celtics' win tonight will advance them to the Eastern finals, where they expect to meet the Philadelphia 76ers. The 76ers hold a 3-1 edge over the Milwaukee Bucks going into tonight's fifth game in Philadelphia.

In the other quarterfinal game, the San Antonio Spurs hope to clinch their Western series against the Seattle SuperSonics. A win tonight in Game 5 will put them into their division finals against the Los Angeles Lakers, which earlier swept the Phoenix Suns in four games.

"If we beat this team Wednesday," said Boston forward Kevin McHale, "I'll be very thankful. They're making us play our best basketball...That team is so much better now than it was two months ago."

The 76ers expect to see Milwaukee try to clog the middle and keep Julius Erving from driving. The Bucks have been double-teaming Erving and jump shooter Andrew Toney, who has done a fine job replacing the injured Lionel Hollins in the 76ers' starting lineup.

Caldwell Jones, the 76ers' 7-foot forward who is counted upon for rebounding and defense, upset the Milwaukee game plan by scoring 20 points Sunday in Game 4, most of them on 15-foot jumpers.

Jones said he expects the Bucks to employ the same tactics.

"If I'm hitting," he says, "it takes the pressure off everybody else."

The San Antonio-Seattle series has been a tight one. All three of the Spurs' victories have been by two points.

"We're playing well, just not well enough to win," Seattle center Jack Sikma says. "We still feel we can take three (remaining) games, but we have to concentrate on one at a time."

"There can be no coasting," San Antonio guard George Gervin says. "I'm confident, but not cocky. There is no room for being cocky in this league. That will eat you up."

Streaks End: Braves Lose; Seaver Wins

By The Associated Press
All good things must come to an end...like the Atlanta Braves' unbeaten road streak.

And all bad things must come to an end, too...like Tom Seaver's winless skein.

After missing much of spring training with a pulled thigh muscle and a severe virus and then dropping his first three starts, Seaver finally recorded his first victory of the season Tuesday night, holding Houston to four hits and one run in seven innings as the Cincinnati Reds defeated the Astros 5-2.

"I had some consistency. I had decent control and decent movement on the ball," said Seaver, who blanked the Astros on two hits until the seventh, using off-speed pitches early, then going to his fast ball. "I started to get tired in the sixth inning. I felt some fatigue setting in. I felt a little wobbly."

Meanwhile, the Braves finally lost after winning their first nine road games, bowing to the Pittsburgh Pirates 8-4.

Pirates 8, Braves 4
Mike Easler hit the first grand slam home run of his career to cap a five-run third inning and Omar Moreno collected four hits, scored three times and stole two bases as Pittsburgh halted a four-game losing streak. The Braves wasted home runs by Dale Murphy, Glenn Hubbard and Bob Horner.

"I don't think this is going to get us down. We knew we weren't unbeatable," said rookie Joe Cowley, the losing pitcher. "I made some good pitching tonight, but the Pirates were just hitting the ball. They were due."

So were Pittsburgh's starting pitchers, who have taken a pounding in the first five weeks of the season and still don't have a complete game.

"Our starters haven't been going more than four or five innings, so I wanted to go nine," said Don Robinson.

Dodgers 2, Mets 1

Dusty Baker's bases-loaded single in the bottom of the ninth inning broke a 1-1 tie. Fernando Valenzuela, who snapped a personal two-game losing streak with a seven-hitter, set up the winning run with a leadoff single off relief ace Neil Allen. Steve Sax sacrificed and when Allen threw wildly past first the runners went to second and third.

Padres 7, Expos 3

First-inning home runs by Garry Templeton and Sixto Lezcano helped unbeaten Tim Lollar, who went 61-3 innings, to his third victory of the season — the Padres have won all six games he has started — while winless Ray Burris suffered his fifth defeat.

Phillies 9, Giants 4

Steve Carlton won his third straight game after starting the season by losing four in a row, striking out 10 batters in seven innings and hitting a three-run homer. Philadelphia's George Vukovich hit his first home run of the season, a three-run blast in the fifth off Rich Gale to break a 4-4 tie and the Phillies won their third game in a row for the first time this season.

Cardinals 7, Cubs 4

Keith Hernandez belted his first home run of the season and George Hendrick hit his fifth, while Lonnie Smith singled and tripled and scored his 23rd and 24th runs, tops in the NL. In addition, winning pitcher Joaquin Andujar singled home the deciding tally in the sixth inning and picked up one of four stolen bases by the Cardinals.

EBA Downs Rocky Mt.

ROCKY MOUNT — E.B. Aycock Junior High School gained an 8-5 baseball victory over Rocky Mount yesterday.

Tyrone Jones hurled a four-hitter for the Jaguars in gaining the win.

Battle Emory led the Aycock hitting with three, driving in three runs, while Steve Wall had two and Gary Scott had two runs batted in. Coach Wilson McDowell noted special praise for the defensive play of Wall and William Ward.

Rocky Mount's hitting was led by N. Avent with two.

Aycock, now 5-3, plays host to Fike on Thursday.

ECU's Smith Gets Award

East Carolina pitcher Charlie Smith has been selected as co-pitcher of the week in the ECAC-South for his no-hitter against Atlantic Christian College last week.

Smith shared the honor with Towson State's Steve Townes. Smith, 3-1 on the year, pitched the gem in the second game of a doubleheader last Wednesday. Smith walked three and struck out three along the way in his first career no-hitter.

The honor marked the second straight for the Pirates in the pitching area. Bob Patterson had shared the honor the week before.

East Carolina, 30-12, has completed its regular season, and is hoping to be one of the four teams selected this Saturday for the ECAC-South Tournament, which begins May 14.

Jag Golfers Take Match

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central's golf team swept a four-way match yesterday at the Farmville Golf and Country Club.

The Jaguars finished the day with a 297, led by Gary Hobgood's three-under-par 69. Williamston was second with 357, followed by Wilson Fike at 363, and Eastern Wayne at 374.

In addition to Hobgood's 69, Alan Wooten, Mel Williams and Robbie Langston each shot 76 for the Jaguars.

Williamston was led by Mark Ross' 80, while Jeff McKeel and Doug Boyd each had 91 and Glenn Perry had 95.

Fike's leader was Claude Alligood at 84, followed by Billy Price at 85, Jim Horne at 96, and Paul Sakas at 98.

Eastern Wayne's Greg McMillan had an 83, while Wey Leach had 88, Tracy Cook had 94 and Glenn Manning had 109. Farmville returns to action

Cleveland Cools Off California

By The Associated Press
 Bill Nahorodny, 28-year-old journeyman catcher, says he can't get enough of baseball, but the California Angels probably have had enough of Nahorodny.

Acquired Sunday from Charleston of the Triple-A International League, Nahorodny rapped two of seven doubles by Cleveland hitters and collected two RBI Tuesday night as the Indians defeated the red-hot California Angels 6-5.

Nahorodny, a veteran of five major league seasons with four different clubs, was signed to replace the injured Chris Bando. He had been released last August by Atlanta after appearing in just 14 games and batting .231.

"There was never a doubt about coming back and playing ball," Nahorodny said. "Baseball's baseball, wherever you play it. I love the game."

Nahorodny drove in both his runs with a double in the fifth inning, when Cleveland scored three of its runs. Toby Harrah and Mike Hargrove hit consecutive doubles to score one run, and after Andre Thornton walked, Nahorodny cleared the bases with a two-bagger.

The loss was only the ninth in 26 games for the American League West Division-leading Angels.

Lary Sorensen and Dan Spillner combined for the victory. Sorensen yielded seven hits in 72-3 innings, and Spillner two-hit the Angels the rest of the way. Spillner yielded a pair of unearned runs in the ninth on Bobby Grich's RBI grounder and an error by shortstop Jerry Dybzinski.

Indians Manager Dave Garcia said Nahorodny's performance was outstanding, "plus, he caught a great game. He was so intent out there, we were yelling at him from the dugout and he didn't hear a word."

A's 9, Yankees 7
 Tony Armas belted a two-run double in the top of the 13th inning off Dave LaRoche, snapping a 7-7 tie and giving Oakland its sixth straight victory.

Mariners 4, Orioles 3
 Jim Essian singled home the tying run in the ninth inning, and Al Bumbry's error in center field allowed the winning run to score as the Mariners 4, Orioles 3.

Glenn Hoffman ripped a two-run single in the third inning that snapped a 3-3 tie, and Bruce Hurst made the lead stand until getting eighth-inning relief help from Luis Aponte. The victory was the fifth in a row for Boston.

Tigers 4, Rangers 3
 Charlie Moore's two-run homer in the sixth inning erased a 5-4 Kansas City lead, and Milwaukee scored three more runs in the seventh inning to beat the Royals.

Jim Slaton pitched 41-3 innings of one-hit relief, taking over from starter Bob McClure in the fifth after Jerry Martin homered to give the Royals a 5-3 lead. Ben Oglivie made it 5-4 with a fifth-inning homer, and the Brewers salted away the victory on a two-run error by Kansas City shortstop Onix Concepcion and an RBI single by Jim Gantner in the seventh.

White Sox 4, Blue Jays 3
 Greg Luzinski's three-run homer highlighted a four-run rally as Chicago scored all its runs in the sixth inning off losing Toronto starter Dave Stieb, now 1-3. Britt Burns, who trailed 3-0 after four innings, made the lead stand up for his third victory in four decisions.

Later, Flynn was taken to a nearby hospital to be examined with what was preliminarily diagnosed as an injured right shoulder.

The loss was the 10th in a row for Texas.

Rose Netters Win, 6-3

Rose High School's tennis team dropped the number one and two singles, but swept through the rest of the action to take a 6-3 victory over Rocky Mount yesterday.

The victory brings the Rose record to 12-2 overall and 10-2 against Big East competition.

The Rampants close out the regular season on Thursday, traveling to Beddingfield.

Islanders Roll Into Stanley Cup Finals

QUEBEC (AP) — What is it like facing the New York Islanders' juggernaut at its peak?

"Frustrating and very difficult," says Quebec right wing Wilf Paiement. "The Islanders are very solid. They don't give you many chances. I just hope we can progress like they did."

The two-time National Hockey League champions have progressed so quickly that in this, their 10th season, that they are on the verge of becoming the first United States-based team to win three straight Stanley Cups. The Islanders threw a defensive blanket on the Nordiques Tuesday night to build a 3-0 margin, then held off the late-charging enemy for a 4-2 triumph to complete a four-game sweep of the Wales Conference finals.

Next up for New York is the winner of the Campbell Conference finals between Chicago and Vancouver. Vancouver leads that best-of-seven series 3-1.

"We set out to play good defense before the series started and it was the difference," said Wayne Merrick, who won the third game with an overtime goal. "I'm pleased with our attitude. We've shown again that we have pride in our game and, if we're conditioned right, we're going to win."

The Islanders staunch defense and goals early in the first two periods started the team on its way to the clincher. Bob Bourne connected on a short wrist shot just 2:01 into the contest. John Tonelli took a Bob Nystrom feed and drove a 20-foot slapshot over the left shoulder of Quebec goalie Daniel Bouchard at 1:09 of the second period.

When Clark Gillies beat Bouchard on a power-play breakout with only 4:25 left, the Islanders appeared to be home free. They weren't. "We relaxed," said Nystrom. "We thought we had it sewed up. We didn't think they could score two goals in a minute."

But the Nordiques did just that. Dave Pichette ruined Bill Smith's shutout bid with a 50-foot shot and, only 37 seconds later, Michel Goulet got his only goal of the series on a breakaway.

"Two mistakes and two goals," said Gillies. "They capitalized but then we didn't let them get anything else."

"I'm really proud of my team. We lost this series in four but it was to a great hockey team."

The Islanders, who may have doubted their greatness while they struggled to beat Pittsburgh (in overtime of the decisive fifth game of the opening round) and the Rangers (in a grueling six-game series), don't seem to have any questions about themselves now.

"Year after year," said Bourne, "we prove what kind of team we are and the character we have. They beat two good hockey teams (Montreal in a five-game opener and Boston in seven) to get here and we walk in and beat them four straight. That says a lot for our team."

"The experience of the Islanders was the big difference in this series," said Nordiques Coach Michel Bergeron. "They know the way how to do that and will be ready a little more next year."

Canucks Kick Hawks, Lead 3-1

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — Everyone keeps waiting for Vancouver to knuckle under to Chicago in the National Hockey League playoffs, but the Canucks keep kicking sand in the face of the Black Hawks.

The Canucks, who had never won a playoff series before this spring, are now one game away from a berth in the Stanley Cup finals against the New York Islanders following a 5-3 victory over the Hawks Tuesday night.

The Islanders, two-time defending league champions, gained a berth in the finals Tuesday night with a 4-2 victory over Quebec to complete a four-game sweep of their Wales Conference final. "We're a hungry team that hasn't had its fill just yet," said Vancouver defenseman

Harold Snepsts. "We've matured in the playoffs and it's getting pretty scary."

"We want to end this thing (with Chicago) as soon as possible. Everything has fallen into place. We're on a lucky streak and we don't want it to end."

Vancouver has a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven Campbell Conference final and can put the Black Hawks out of the chase Thursday in Chicago.

The Canucks have ridden the hot goaltending of Richard Brodeur to unexpected heights in the playoffs. Brodeur has allowed just 30 goals in 12 games and Vancouver has won 10 times.

"Chicago has been having trouble beating Richard and we've played pretty good defensively," said Coach Roger Neilson. "We'll go into Chicago and play as aggressively as we can."

Brodeur stopped 27 shots Tuesday and twice robbed Al Secord of seemingly sure goals. Brodeur has the Hawks so frustrated that their shooters are passing instead of shooting on some good scoring chances.

Ivan Boldirev and Darcy Rota, two former Hawks, turned on their old teammates, combining for three goals. Boldirev scored twice and Rota once and both scored on the much-improved Vancouver power play.

Defenseman Doug Halward and Thomas Gradin completed the Vancouver scoring, while the Hawks to solve Brodeur's netminding were Glen Sharpley, Dennis Savard and Grant Mulvey.

"We fought the puck really bad tonight," Pulford said.

Tony Esposito in the Chicago

net wasn't nearly as sharp as Brodeur in stopping 26 Vancouver shots. Esposito looked particularly weak on Halward's shot from the blue line which turned out to be the winner in the third period.

"Vancouver played great and deserves a lot of credit," said Savard. "They deserved to win, especially because of Brodeur."

"But we can come back. We came into the dressing room and said we'll win Thursday and then come back here for Game Six. We're not beat. We won't quit."

Chicago Coach Bob Pulford was in a surly mood after the game. He said Chicago had enough chances to win, but couldn't cash in against Brodeur.

"We fought the puck really bad tonight," Pulford said.

"We had lots of chances in the first period, but we fought it bad."

"But, don't worry. We'll be back here for another game. We can win at home and come back."

The Canucks will take a 4-1 road record into Thursday's game. Vancouver is 16-2-3 since March 13.

Vancouver won't have center Ivan Hlinka Thursday. He suffered a shoulder injury when hit behind the Chicago net. The Hawks hope to have center Terry Ruskowski back Thursday after missing one game with a similar shoulder ailment.

"It's a great feeling to be part of something like this," added Rota. "Like the sign (on the dressing room wall) says, take enough clothes for a seven-day trip."

Bunch Leads Aces Past 'Skins, 19-2

ROBERSONVILLE — Al Bunch hit a grand slam and scattered four hits to spark Edenton to an easy 19-2 win over Roanoke Tuesday in a Northeastern Conference baseball game.

Edenton jumped out to a 4-0 lead in the first inning and never trailed as the Aces upped their record to 12-4 overall and 8-3 in the league. Roanoke falls to 5-9 and 4-6.

Roanoke scored once in the first and used a solo home run by Angelo Spruill in the second to make it 4-2. But the Aces erupted for six runs in the third to push their lead to 10-2.

After scoring a run in the fourth, Edenton scored eight runs in the fifth, keyed by Bunch's grand slam. The game was called at the end of the fifth.

Roanoke did not have anyone with more than one hit.

Union Carbide 10
Sportsworld 5
 Union Carbide pushed over five runs in the fifth inning and gained a 10-5 victory over Sportsworld in the North State Little League yesterday.
 Union Carbide took the lead in the second inning with two runs, and added one in the fourth. Sportsworld came up with four in the bottom of the fourth, however, gaining a 4-3 lead.
 But Union Carbide put it away with five in the top of the fifth. Kevin Fisher led off, reaching on an error, as did Abram Lang reached on an error and Morris Johnson singled. Greg Davis grounded out, scoring Fisher and Jeff Bennett walked. Andre Hopkins singled in Lang, and Paul Powers reached on an error, scoring Johnson. Billy Turcotte then doubled in both Bennett and Hopkins.
 Union Carbide added two in the sixth, including a solo homer by Johnson, while Sportsworld got one more in the fifth.
 Johnson led the UC hitting with four, while Jamie Brewington and John Parker each had two for Sportsworld.

Chicod 10

SIMPSON — Tyrone Turnage and Joey Johnson combined for a no-hitter as Chicod defeated MacKenzie Security, 10-6, Tuesday afternoon in a Southern Pitt Little League exhibition game.
 Turnage started and went two innings before being relieved by Johnson, who went the final two innings. MacKenzie got most of its runs thanks to 10 bases on balls.
 Jerome Carter led Chicod with two hits in three at bats, including a three-run home run.

WILLIAMSTON — Williamston High School scored five runs in the first two innings and went on to record a 9-4 Northeastern Conference victory over Ahoskie last night.
 The win boosts the Tiger record to 8-6 overall and 5-4 in the conference standings.
 Williamston jumped on Ahoskie for three runs in the first inning. Gray Thomas led off with a walk and Keith Perry and Keith Bryant both singled, loading the bases. Tim Hines walked, forcing in Thomas, and Ed Phippen reached on a fielder's choice, bringing in Perry. Reggie House then grounded out, allowing Bryant to score.

 Ahoskie rallied for a pair in the top of the second, both scoring on a triple by Jeff Outlaw.
 But in the bottom of the inning, Williamston put it away with two more runs, giving the Tigers a 5-2 edge. Sterling Mizelle singled and Thomas doubled. Perry reached on a fielder's choice bringing in Mizelle, and Bryant singled to score

Thomas.
 Williamston later added one in the third, two in the fifth and one in the sixth. Ahoskie got single runs in the fifth and sixth innings.
 Bryant, Hines and Phippen each had two hits to lead Williamston's hitting, while Dennis Wilder had two for Ahoskie.
 Williamston returns to action on Thursday night, traveling to Roanoke.

 Williamston, N.C., will be 44 Sept. 15. He is the oldest player in the majors. Jim Kaat of St. Louis turns 44 Nov. 7; Carl Yastrzemski of Boston is 42, Willie Stargell of Pittsburgh and Pete Rose of Philadelphia both 41.
 "I feel a lot of guys are lying about their ages," Perry said. "There is a trace of a smile in the eyes. The thousands of balls and strikes obviously have not dulled his sense of humor."
 The Mariners are Perry's seventh major-league club. In addition to the Giants, with whom he spent his first 10 seasons, he has been with Cleveland, Texas, San Diego, the Yankees and Atlanta. The Braves cut him after he compiled an 8-9 record with a 3.93 earned run average in 151 innings last year. With 297 victories, he was unable to latch on with another club until Seattle signed him March 27.
 He opened the season with losses to Oakland and California (his 240th and 241st setbacks), before recording victory No. 298 — 6-4 over the Angels at the Kingdome April 20. Perry struck out 13 California batters, a Seattle club record. On April 25, the 20th anniversary of his first major-league victory, Perry was knocked out in the seventh inning of a game against Minnesota; the Mariners went on to win 5-4 in 11 innings.

 Last Friday night, Perry got victory No. 299, beating the Yankees 6-3 in New York. His two strikeouts gave him 3,364 for his career, 144 behind Johnson's record of 3,508.
 That's another tribute to Perry's durability; he never has led his league in strikeouts for a season.
 Perry's name already is familiar in baseball's record books.
 He and his younger brother Jim, who pitched 17 seasons before retiring in 1975, are the winningest brother combination in major league history, with a total of 513 victories.
 Gaylord Perry ranks seventh in innings pitched (4,988), fifth in games started (633), 17th in games pitched (720), and is tied for 12th in shutouts (52). He is the only pitcher to win the Cy Young Award in both leagues (American in 1972, National in 1978). Cy Young, Ferguson Jenkins, Jim Bunning and Perry are the only pitchers to win 100 or more games in each league.

 Perry won 15 games in a row with Cleveland in 1974, one shy of the AL record. He pitched a no-hitter for the Giants in 1968. He also has pitched a one-hitter, 13 two-hitters and 21 three-hitters.
 He registered his 100th career victory as a member of the Giants, against Los Angeles on May 16, 1970, and his 200th on April 13, 1975, as the Indians beat the Milwaukee Brewers. He has won 20 games or more in five seasons.
 With the impressive statistics, Perry has carried a reputation as a player who puts something special on his pitches — saliva, perhaps, or Slippery Elm, or maybe even Vaseline. In his book, "The Spitter and Me," Perry said he built his career around the spitball and variations of that illegal pitch.

 "I probably would have been farming 10 years ago" without the spitter, he wrote.
 Another effort by Perry to get an edge on batters was quickly caught and thrown out in 1981. He was accused of rubbing the ball with the resin bag, so that the pitch emerged from a white cloud. The "Puffball" was ruled illegal by NL President Chub Feeney.

It looked for a while last winter as if Perry would not get the chance to reach the 300-victory mark. Several teams expressed an interest in him, but his age and stories about clubhouse problems scared off most of them. Only the Mariners wanted Perry.
 With monthly bonuses, Perry can make as much as $180,000 if he stays with the Mariners this season. His basic contract calls for a $40,000 salary; the major-league minimum salary is $33,500.

by cashing the jack-ace of clubs and ruffing dummy's last heart. The stage was set for a safety play.
 Declarer simply got off lead with a low spade, not caring what happened to that trick. If both defenders followed, the king of spades would draw the opponents' last card in the suit and the jack would be high. If either defender showed out, his partner would win that trick, but would then be forced either to lead a spade into declarer's ace-jack tenace, or yield a ruff-and-sluff, which would allow declarer to discard his spade loser from one hand while ruffing in the other. Making five-odd.

Maude Is Not To Be Bossed

MOSES LAKE, Wash. (AP) — After 100 years, Ida Maude Burch isn't about to "get bossed around."
 She's enrolled in the assertiveness training class at Big Bend Community College.
 "I can get bossed around" by younger folks, she said. "I can't do all the things I used to do. People aren't always fair in what they expect of elderly people."
 "I just need to tell them, that's all."
 Mrs. Burch and her daughter, Jessie Jackson, 69, are among seven people from the Soap Lake area enrolled in the night class.
 "It's easy to do nothing in life," she said. "Then your mind goes to sleep. My daughter and I have taken many classes that have interested us."
 She learned needlework at 82 and still tends to her garden of vegetables and flowers.
 "Learning is important — keeps your mind awake," she said.

Nixon Revisits Disney World

BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP)—Former President Richard Nixon made a return visit to Disney World where eight years ago he told the nation: "I am not a crook."
 "You haven't seen the world until you've seen Disney World," Nixon said Tuesday as he toured Disneyland's East Coast version with his wife, Pat, daughters Julie Eisenhower and Tricia Cox, two grandchildren, and friend Bebe Rebozo.

Rights Are Stressed At Fort Bragg

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A Fort Bragg official says the U.S. Army "went overboard" in teaching human rights to nearly a thousand Salvadoran troops who underwent basic training at the facility.

Col. Edward Richards made his comments during Tuesday's graduation ceremonies for the 957 Salvadoran soldiers who made it through the training.

"Let's face it," Richards said. "If they go back and do good, that's what's expected. If they go back and something happens between them and the (Salvadoran) people, that would reflect bad on them and us, so we went overboard on teaching human rights."

"I urge you to remember that wars of insurgency cannot be won or countered without the support of the people," added Brig. Gen. Joseph C. Lutz. "The support of your fellow countrymen is critical to your success."

Officials said 10 Salvadorans did not graduate, including one sent home because of disciplinary reasons, one hospitalized with a mortar wound and eight sent home because they were ages 14 and 15.

Officials at Fort Bragg say there were outbreaks of malaria, mumps and measles in the first month after the soldiers arrived.

Fort Bragg was given the task of training the soldiers after El Salvador asked the Reagan administration for assistance.

"We think they are ready to fight," Richards said, adding that the soldiers were responsive and well-disciplined.

He said a special village was created for training the soldiers in urban combat and that during initial mock battles, the soldiers suffered casualty rates of 50 percent to 60 percent. After the training, the rate dropped to 3 percent or 4 percent. He said laser targets were used to determine hits and misses.

Col. Renaldo Golchey, defense attache to the Salvadoran Embassy in Washington, reviewed the troops following the ceremony.

There were no protests Tuesday, a marked change from the reception the Salvadorans got shortly after they arrived. Several hundred demonstrators protested their presence, claiming Salvadoran government troops had killed 30,000 civilians and imprisoned and tortured hundreds more.

Fort Bragg officials said the soldiers are expected to return home in about a week, but they would not disclose the date, citing security reasons.

Green Berets Special Forces unit trained the troops, most of whom had little previous military training. Army officials said they received what amounted to basic combat training.

El Salvador returned to civilian rule Sunday for the first time since 1979, when independent Alvaro Magana was sworn in as president after being chosen in March 28 elections.

Observing Hospital Week

Pitt County Memorial Hospital will observe National Hospital Week May 9-15, using the slogan, "You've Got a Friend in the Hospital."

"We think the 1982 National Hospital Week theme reflects the role of our hospital and its staff as friends helping community residents stay healthy," PCMH General Director Jack Richardson said. "We are working to reduce the need for hospitalization through our progress in both prevention and cure of illness and injury."

During the week, Pitt Memorial also will remind people to be their own best friends by taking care of their health and learning how to use the hospital wisely to be well, he added.

The 6,000-member hospitals of the American Hospital Association sponsor National Hospital Week each year to improve communication among hospitals, their patients, employees and the communities they serve.

Some Unruly Inmates Said Restrained

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Western Correctional Center officials resorted to hogtied six violent inmates, some for more than 14 hours, during disturbances two years ago, officials acknowledged Tuesday.

Robert L. Caldwell, assistant superintendent at Western Correctional Center at the time, was dismissed Tuesday from his current position as program supervisor at the Caldwell County Prison Unit.

Rae McNamara, director of the state Division of Prisons, said Caldwell was dismissed because he shackled Western Correctional Center inmates' hands and feet behind their backs in violation of Department of Correction orders.

Restraining incorrigible prisoners in padded office chairs with Velcro straps is standard operating procedure in North Carolina prisons, she said. Hogtied inmates was specifically barred by correction officials in 1978, Ms. McNamara said at a news conference.

In March 1981, Caldwell was transferred from Western Correctional, a 16-story prison southwest of Morganton, after a department investigation revealed he was involved in an incident in which a handgun was to have been a prize in a gambling contest at the prison. No charges were filed against Caldwell.

"It is my opinion that the individual authorizing this form of restraint (hogtied) was negligent in performing his duties and behaved irresponsibly in failing to advise the superintendent of the seriousness of the situation and of the measures taken to control it," Ms. McNamara said.

Caldwell told officials that he did not believe the situation was serious enough to report at the time, according to a statement given to Department of Correction officials.

An investigation begun last December revealed that seven inmates were restrained on 45 occasions between March 3 and June 5, 1980 and all but one were hogtied at least once, Ms. McNamara said. Two inmates were hogtied for more than 14 hours in late March 1981, with breaks only for meals and visits to the bathroom, she added.

Earlier that month, the same two inmates were strapped into restraining chair that held them immobile for more than 28 hours each, Ms. McNamara said.

State law prohibits the use of restraints as punishment and Ms. McNamara said there was "no evidence that restraints were used at any time for punishment."

She said the restraints became necessary when two older inmates, ages 23 and 25, were admitted to the facility, which normally houses prisoners under 18.

The older inmates, along with other inmates from Polk and Harnett youth centers, were a "strong, negative influence on the younger prisoners," Ms. McNamara said.

Notes kept by center officials showed that older inmates led prisoners in "screaming obscenities, shaking bars, banging on doors, throwing articles from the cells, throwing urine and fecal matters at other inmates and staff (and) spitting and threatening to assault (the staff)," she said.

Ms. McNamara said inmates also threatened to kill correction officers "if they ever got out."

During the disturbances, residents within a mile of the center complained of the noise, she said.

"A potentially dangerous situation did exist," she said. "We could have had a very violent situation on all of the floors."

The investigation started last December, when the North Carolina Prisoners Legal Services sent a letter to the state attorney general's office charging that inmates at the center had been hogtied or placed in restraint chairs as a punishment, said James C. Woodard, Corrections Department secretary.

Results of the investigation were not made public until Tuesday because attorneys representing the prisoners were involved in discussions about possible lawsuits stemming from the incident, he said.

See Senate Approving Civil Rights Measure

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —
With only the most conservative members still opposed, the Senate now seems sure to swiftly approve a compromise extension of the 1965 Voting Rights Bill supported by liberal Democrats, President Reagan and the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights.

With chairman Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C. in the majority, the Senate Judiciary Committee voted 17-1 Tuesday to recommend renewal of the measure.

A similar extension has already been approved in the House — 389-24 last October — so final congressional enactment seems certain before certain key provisions expire in August.

Supporters said more than 70 senators have indicated they will vote for the compromise which is likely to be debated and voted on in the Senate later this month. That would be enough to choke off any filibuster from archconservative opponents led by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C.

Thurmond, who had opposed the compromise, said he voted for it reluctantly in committee because of the need to make sure the right to "register and vote will be protected against discrimination of any kind."

Sources said Thurmond probably will support some changes on the Senate floor, but vote for final congressional passage.

During a lengthy and sometimes acrimonious committee meeting Tuesday, only Sen. John East, R-N.C. voted against sending the compromise — worked out among a divergent, bipartisan group of senators — to the Senate floor.

East said the compromise punishes the South for discriminatory practices which no longer exist and would extend unfair provisions from other states to the rest of the country.

Another Republican, Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., seated next to East, replied angrily, "Let's not blather about a double standard. This stuff (voting rights violations) never started in my state. When we are talking about voting rights, we are talking about civil rights."

East offered about a dozen amendments to weaken the compromise. Most failed by a wide margin, including one to make it easier for municipalities and counties accused of voting rights violations to escape Justice Department scrutiny.

Nine states and parts of 13 others now must seek Justice Department approval for any change in their election laws.

The compromise, fashioned primarily by Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., would prohibit any voting procedure or jurisdictional boundaries that would discriminate against blacks, Hispanics or Indians.

A judge could use different kinds of evidence — including inconvenient polling hours, election results, elected officials who ignore the needs of minorities, and the makeup of voting districts — in deciding whether voter discrimination has occurred.

A provision of the House bill was designed to offset the impact of a 1980 Supreme Court decision which said the voting rights law is violated only if intentional discrimination can be proved.

The House bill said the effects or results of discrimination, regardless of motive, were enough to prove that black or minority voting strength had been diluted or negated.

Conservatives like Thurmond said that approach would lead inevitably to racial quotas for local elective bodies and destruction of at-large voting districts.

In contrast to the House bill, the compromise says nothing in the renewed measure would require racial quotas on city councils, school boards or state legislatures. Still, under its provisions, a judge considering a broad range of evidence could redraw voting districts in such a way that would have the net effect of guaranteeing minimum representation for minorities.

The compromise allowed President Reagan to shift his position, and almost eliminated lingering conservative opposition.

Never before had the Senate Judiciary Committee agreed to extend the voting rights law.

Civil rights groups pushed previous extensions directly to the Senate floor because the Judiciary Committee was headed by Southern conservatives who blocked action.

Critics Are Jumping On The Tobacco Program

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Critics of the tobacco program are sounding off following the release of a government study showing that only an estimated 26 percent of tobacco allotment holders in this country grow their own tobacco.

The U.S. General Accounting Office study released Tuesday indicated that 68 percent of the owners of flue-cured and burley tobacco allotments lease or rent their allotments, and the remaining 6 percent either allow relatives to use it, use only part of their allotment or don't use it at all.

"The data developed by the GAO proves that the current tobacco program is really little more than a glorified income-transfer program — taking from the farmer to line the pockets of allotment holders," said U.S. Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo., a tobacco program critic and one of two senators who requested the study.

The other senator who called for the study, Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., also criticized the tobacco program.

"This report indicates that the tobacco support program does much to reduce the farmer's income while augmenting the incomes of people not directly involved in the farming operation," Hatfield said.

Hatfield, who is chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, further said, "It is time to stop this ludicrous practice."

The GAO study revealed that only 12 percent of allotment holders for flue-cured leaf actually grow the leaf. For burley tobacco, the report said the allotment usage figure was 40 percent.

Although the report did not give a state-by-state breakdown on allotments, the U.S. Department of Agriculture has estimated that 42 percent of North Carolina's 116,098 tobacco allotment holders were growing tobacco.

That figure may be revised as a result of the GAO study.

The study further showed that only 40 percent of the farms with tobacco allotments were owned by full-time farmers (28 percent) or part-time farmers (12 percent).

But the GAO report said many of those farmers leased their allotments to neighbors. In addition, another 25 percent of farms with tobacco allotments were owned by retired farmers or widows of farmers.

The remaining 35 percent of the farms with allotments were held by non-farmers, the study said.

"The non-operators included doctors, teachers, realtors, tobacco warehouse operators and government employees," the report said.

The GAO said it had selected 32 tobacco-growing counties, including 12 in North Carolina, for the study. The counties selected in the state were Pitt, Edgecombe, Greene, Sampson, Johnston, Wake, Vance, Granville, Person, Caswell, Rockingham and Surry.

Answering Most Calls To Police

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Police Department says the transfer of 30 officers and seven sergeants to communications duty is paying off.

Of more than 3 million phone calls to police last year, only about 2.5 million were answered. Many callers hung up as they listened to a taped message, police said.

"We've reduced the dropped calls to almost nothing," Capt. Robert Jones, head of the 420-member communications division, said Monday. "In our valley section, we're losing almost none, but downtown, we're losing a few." Jones said most calls to police now are answered by the fourth ring.

Temporary relief from too much work.

Ired Over Advice To Refugees

By ANNE S. CROWLEY
Associated Press Writer
MIAMI (AP) — The welfare directors of several Northern and Midwestern states have reacted angrily to Florida's letter to Haitian and Cuban refugees suggesting they can stay on welfare rolls by moving.

"It seems like a pretty cheap shot on their part to pass off the problem in that way," said Robert Harder, secretary of the Kansas Department of Social and Rehabilitative Services.

"This would compound all the current problems we are trying to resolve. It certainly would be an unanticipated increase in our caseload."

The letters were mailed after Florida officials got upset with the Reagan Administration's decision to curtail refugee aid.

The assistance was cut back to 18 months from 36 months in states that have no public assistance for jobless adults, such as Florida.

The letter pointed out that 36 months worth of welfare is available in states that have such programs and it listed 10 of them: Michigan, Ohio, Minnesota, Kansas, Wyoming, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, Rhode Island and Hawaii.

"The U.S. government is allowing some states to continue to provide cash and medical assistance," the letter said.

The letters went out last week and began arriving Monday.

"We're certainly going to blister Florida," Charles Schultz, the director of assistance for the Minnesota Welfare Department, said Monday. "It strikes me that not a whole flood of people is coming up here, but we're not too happy about Florida advertising for us."

The monthly subsistence checks in Florida come to $119. About 32,000 refugees in southern Florida — nearly all of them Cubans or Haitians — will be affected this month by the 18-month cutoff.

"It's not that we are encouraging the Cuban and Haitian refugees to go to these states, but we did want them to know that additional aid is available," said Danny Pietrodangelo, a spokesman for the Florida Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services.

Steve Hull, press secretary to Florida Gov. Bob Graham, said the federal government "is being unfair and capricious in its treatment of Florida, the state with the most refugees. The governor feels the federal government has been penalizing Florida."

Reagan said last fall that Americans have unique freedom, "the right of the citizen to vote with his feet." Where services are lacking, taxes are too high or the government is inefficient, he said, "the people will ... either use their power at the polls to redress that, or they'll go someplace else."

Joseph Gallant, Massachusetts' deputy welfare commissioner, said the Florida letter "sounds to me like what they used to do in old days, before they had the residence requirements changed. It was alleged people moved to states with more liberal benefits."

GRACELAND TO OPEN — Priscilla Presley, the former wife of the late Elvis Presley, answers reporters' questions as she outlines plans to open Presley's Graceland Mansion to public tours. The tours, which will cost $5 for adults, will allow visitors to see portions of the house which have never before been open to the public. One of the stops will be the trophy room where Mrs. Presley spoke to reporters. (AP Laserphoto)

Ann Landers Is Getting Support

By JAMES LITKE
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — Although one newspaper canceled Ann Landers' daily feature because of her use of recycled material, the advice columnist was buoyed by messages of support from friends and readers.

"People have been calling since last night, asking me what the flap is all about, telling me to carry on," Miss Landers said Tuesday, one day after The Associated Press reported she had recycled 15-year-old material in her column.

Shreveport (La.) Journal. "In one sense, the nature of the column makes it a benign error. But, said Tiner, "we can't allow any area of our papers to be cast in doubt because it casts doubt over all areas."

"It's downright unethical," said Les Trautmann, editor of the Staten Island (N.Y.) Advance. "The question now becomes, do you kick out a top feature because of this? It's something that will rest on the backs of the editors that use the column."

On Tuesday, the Omaha (Neb.) World-Herald, the Louisville (Ky.) Times, The Daily News of Los Angeles and The Denver Post suspended use of the column pending assurances from the syndicate that the material was original.

In a story announcing the cancellation, the Idaho Falls Post-Register said: "The Post-Register has an obligation to its readers to be open and to be ... a daily newspaper carrying real accounts of real events. Readers of the Ann Landers column are entitled to genuine letters from people seeking advice, not letters 'recycled' by the person who then turns around and answers them."

At least three newspapers, the San Rafael (Calif.) Independent, the Quad City (Iowa) Times, and the Phoenix (Ariz.) Gazette published coupons asking readers to comment on the disclosure.

Charge Driver In A Collision

Kathryn Randolph Lindsley of Route 1, Jamesville, was charged with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 5:15 p.m. collision Tuesday at the intersection of 10th Street and College Hill Drive.

Police, who identified the driver of the second car involved as Donald Wayne Webb of 1403 Willow St., estimated damage to each car at $300.

Take Calls For Private Nurses

Registrars taking calls for the Pitt County Professional Private Duty Nurses Registry are:

Grace Turner, R.N., 756-0375, today through May 21; Helen McArthur, R.N., 756-1854, May 24-28. The registry is closed on weekends. For emergencies call the above numbers.

ANN LANDERS

"Still others have called and said, 'We don't care if (the material) was written 20 years ago, 30 years ago or yesterday,'" she said.

The Idaho Falls (Idaho) Post-Register announced in its Tuesday editions that it was dropping the column. Four others suspended publication of it temporarily while awaiting assurances from the Field Newspaper Syndicate that material for publication later this month is original.

The Field syndicate, which distributes the column to more than 1,000 newspapers, issued a statement Tuesday from its Irvine, Calif., headquarters informing subscribers that "it is possible a few of the reused items are in copy you have on hand. If so, in tomorrow's mail we will send you a list of items and substitute material."

Syndicate President Steve Jehorek was not available for comment and others at syndicate headquarters refused to say whether it had received any cancellation requests from its newspaper subscribers.

"It's unfortunate that I didn't label the letters," Miss Landers said during a telephone interview. "Some people may say I'm dim-witted, but I'm not crooked."

Miss Landers said she had recycled "very little" material, and said she would discontinue the practice altogether because it had been questioned and "my credibility is all I have."

A joint investigation by the AP and the Pontiac (Ill.) Daily Leader led to stories Monday revealing that over the past 18 months Miss Landers' column — with an estimated 70 million readers across five continents — contained 33 clearly identifiable examples of items that had appeared in her columns in late 1966 and early 1967.

Editors attending the American Society of Newspaper Editors meeting, which began Tuesday in Chicago, had a range of reactions to the disclosure.

"I feel a little bit taken even though we use 'Dear Abby.' But this thing makes me cautious," said Stanley Tiner, editor of the

Applying Scare Tactics In ABC Programming

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Since CBS' "60 Minutes" became habit viewing, ABC has had difficulty finding popular programming for its first hour Sunday nights. Now ABC is trying to scare America with "Counterattack: Crime in America," which premiered Sunday on the network considered most violent by the National Coalition on Television Violence, won't change any minds about ABC's propensity for hard knocks.

It must have alarmed viewers, particularly youngster who happened to be watching at 7 p.m. EDT. The idea is to encourage viewers to join the battle against crime, but "Counterattack" may only cause Americans to triple-bolt their doors.

One suspects the reenactment of a Los Angeles "Cat Burglar" standing over the real victim in her bedroom, and other crimes, will induce more nightmares than constructive lessons.

And you have to question how much help local police will get in solving local crimes by asking a national audience to call a toll-free number with any information on two local investigations — one involving the ice pick murder of a St. Paul, Minn., high school girl, and one of a gun-toting thief who has terrorized stores in Nassau County on Long Island.

The eerie taped voice of a man confessing over the telephone to police that he had just killed a woman with an ice pick and wanted to be stopped from doing it again was sensational. The pleas from the woman's next of kin to call with information seemed like exploiting grief, not preventing it.

The Federal Communications Commission requires that the first network hour on Sunday nights either be suitable for children or news-and-information programming.

"Counterattack" certainly isn't for kids, and it's news-and-information value consists of such advice as this: "Lock your balcony doors" to keep out cat burglars.

Ratings appear to be the real reason for "Counterattack," though, and it hasn't worked so far. Last week, "60 Minutes" finished first, while "Counterattack" was next to last among 67 shows.

The title of PBS' "Media Probes" is only half right. It's about the media, but it's not particularly probing. Nevertheless, the series has its lighthearted and entertaining moments.

Tonight's segment, with John Cameron Swayze as host, is on TV news. Its scope is limited to changes on local news, most of which are cosmetic and designed to bolster ratings.

Many of the local stations featured studied under media guru Frank Magid of Marion, Iowa, whose researchers review tapes of local news broadcasts and then recommend ways to improve the product.

A local anchorman is told to "hit words a little harder." A station in Greensboro, N.C., which offered a slow-paced and stodgy news show, found a different stride under Magid's guidance. According to a Magid associate, the new broadcast "moved quickly, still had Southern charm, covered all the news, but with feeling, personality, color and texture."

May is a sweeps month, when local ratings determine advertising rates for the next few months. As one local news director says tonight, sex and major investigations are the most effective ways to immediately bolster ratings.

You can do your own "Media Probes," too. Just turn on the local news, and decide for yourself whether solid news reporting, interesting information or the lust for ratings are behind tonight's local stories.

ECU News Bureau
Six outstanding students in the East Carolina University Department of Drama and Speech are recipients of annual departmental awards.

A $300 John D. Messick Scholarship was presented to Robert John Willie of Northport, Long Island, N.Y. Willie, a senior health administration major with a minor in drama, has appeared in several major stage roles with the ECU Playhouse and the Greenville Little Theater as well as other professional and community theaters.

John Fouke of Chapel Hill, a sophomore, received the Nell Draper Burnette Scholarship which carries a cash award of $500. Among his ECU Playhouse appearances have been roles in "Show Boat," "Julius Caesar" and "Getting Out."

Engraved plaques were presented to senior Lori Mahl of Wilmington, recipient of the Rosalind Rouleston Award for Excellence and Professional Promise, and Gregory Smith of Washington, who was recognized as the department's most outstanding senior. Both students appeared in the recent ECU Playhouse production of "Show Boat" and in previous ECU productions.

Mahl has also been featured in "Blackbeard: Knight of the Black Flag," the Bath outdoor drama and in the "Hooray for Hollywood" show at Carowinds. Smith has appeared in productions of the DeMille Players. Awards of $300 were presented to two drama majors, Donna Lynn Cooper of Yanceyville, who accepted a

Swing King Is Now 73

PATCHOGUE, N.Y. (AP) — The king of swing, Benny Goodman, celebrated his 73rd birthday at a Long Island radio station with some old friends. Suffolk County Executive Peter Cohalan, who was present at the celebration Tuesday, proclaimed the day "Benny Goodman Day." Goodman, who lives in Stamford, Conn., said he plays mostly in combos now, but said it was possible he would get back into big bands again. He noted there was an increased interest in jazz. "People are getting out on the dance floor again," he said. At the party, he was paid a surprise visit by Arthur Rollini, a resident of Shirley, N.Y., who was a member of Goodman's swing band. "Schneeze," as Goodman nicknamed Rollini, and Goodman recalled the celebrated 1938 Carnegie Hall concert where jazz was heard for the first time in the classical music hall. He said, "after a few moments it was just another club date." Jack Ellsworth, owner of WJIM Radio, invited Goodman for the birthday celebration. Goodman told reporters, "I usually don't do this kind of thing, I just came to visit my good friend Jack."

MOVING TO UTAH — Linthong Siharath sits with his wife and five children in their Salem (Ore.) home. Siharath and his family are Laotians who came to America 10 months ago. He's a former officer in the CIA-backed army which was defeated by the communists. He fled southeast Asia when he learned he was to be sent to a communist re-education center. Now he can't find work and he can't speak much English. They are planning to move to Utah although he still has eight months' aid eligibility left in Oregon. (AP Laserphoto)

Inventor Claims Cold-Curing Device Being Kept From Public

By CARL MANNING
Associated Press Writer
WILLOW STREET, Pa. (AP) — A runny nose and ruined blueprints led inventor Norman Lake on a quest for a cold cure. He says he's found it but complains federal bureaucrats are keeping it from the public.

The 89-year-old retired mining engineer says his cold-fighting weapon is a 3-inch piece of thick, nickel-plated music wire bent into a U-shape with two round white plastic nubs the size of shirt buttons on either end.

"It's a simple device, but its impact is tremendous," Lake said, his blue eyes sparkling as he talks about the invention he patented in 1977.

According to Lake, his "inductive nasal device" (IND) keeps the nose pinched shut so cold viruses cannot thrive inside and spread symptoms to the rest of the body.

However, he says, the federal Food and Drug Administration is reluctant to approve his medical claim, which means he can't market the IND as a cold cure.

Normally, a medical-cure device requires two independent studies to show that it lives up to its claims with no unnecessary harm to people, FDA spokesman Wayne Pines said in Washington.

"We require this for all products. There are standards generally accepted by the scientific community. It's not a matter of simple observation," said Pines, adding he wasn't familiar with Lake's device.

The drawback, Lake countered, is that the required tests could cost up to $1 million, which he doesn't have.

Lake's one-man cold-cure campaign began in 1953. He was working on some blueprints at home one night when a dripping nose ruined some of his drawings.

In a flash of inspiration, he clamped an old-fashioned slotted clothespin on the end of his nose to stifle the sniffles. Not only did it save his drawings, but the anticipated cold never occurred.

"I didn't know why it worked, but I continued using the clothespin to ward off colds when I felt them coming," said Lake, who also invented two timing devices for explosives during World War II.

For years, Lake tinkered with several designs before coming up with the one he patented in 1977. When a person first starts feeling cold symptoms, he should clamp the IND over the bridge of the nose for about an hour, Lake said.

His own research, Lake added, found studies that show one-third of colds are caused by rhinoviruses, which cannot survive in temperatures around 98 F, such as is found in the mouth and throat.

But the temperature in the nose normally is around 91 F, making it an ideal breeding ground for the rhinoviruses, he said.

Lake contends this is where his idea has merit. By clamping the nose for up to an hour, the temperature inside rises to around 98 F and the cold never gets a chance to take root.

It's the same way the body works to fight a potential cold, he said, but the natural defense mechanisms take up to 48 hours to get under way and it takes another week for the other symptoms to disappear.

Lake says his documentation includes studies by Baylor Medical School, Britain's Common Cold Research Unit and the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases. All these studies, he said, show the growth of the rhinoviruses is inhibited in the 98 F range.

Although it rejected Lake's medical claims, the FDA said he could market his device as something to keep foreign material out of the nose, he said. But Lake has rejected that course.

He hasn't lost faith in his idea, he said, recalling that when Thomas Edison was inventing the light bulb, experts of the day said he was wasting his time.

Scandinavia Also Seeing 'Acid Rain'

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — With 40,000 Swedish and Norwegian lakes virtually dead and others dying from acid rain, Nordic scientists are increasingly worried about its damage to other forms of life.

Forests are already falling victim. One study estimated that acid rains in the 1970s reduced by 1 percent a year the yield from Sweden's woodlands, which produce one in every five of the country's export dollars.

Scientists suspect that acid rain is making trees less resistant to disease and pests, a possible explanation for extensive damage caused by insects in recent years.

"There are also possible adverse effects on human health from mercury and cadmium" in water exposed to acidification, said Dr. William Dickson, researcher of the Swedish Environmental Protection Board. "Fish that don't die because of the hazard become poisonous to predators that eat them — including humans — because of accumulations of such heavy metals in the fish's tissues."

A similar process takes place when soil is acidified, he said.

"Cadmium and other heavy metals are released and enter food chains," Dickson said. "High concentrations have been found in moose kidneys."

"More alarming is that ground water in western Sweden has been contaminated. In some parts of the country, high levels of aluminum and copper have been found in drinking water."

He describes acid rain as "the gravest disaster Sweden ever faced" as evidenced by the decimated plant and animal life in thousands of lakes in the Scandinavian peninsula. The rains also disfigure buildings and cause corrosion damage, estimated at some $200 million a year in Sweden alone.

Acid rain is caused by the transformation into volatile acids of sulphur dioxide and nitric oxides emitted by combustion of oil and coal. The acids are transported long distances by wind, eventually falling with rain or snow.

The phenomenon so far has been most severe in northeastern North America and in Scandinavia, victimized by northern European industry from Belfast to Moscow, wherever power plants burn oil and coal on a large scale.

Some 60 million tons of sulphur dioxide and nitric oxides were discharged in northern Europe in 1973, the peak year.

The only treatment has been putting lime into affected waters to counteract the acids, but that is only a life-sustaining method that does not restore a lake's vitality. In many Nordic lakes, pH value — the measure of acidity — already ranges between 4 and 5, well below the level in which fish can survive. Vinegar has a pH value of 3.

Although a British researcher identified the problem in the 1870s, it was not until the late 1960s that a Swedish scientist pinpointed acid precipitation as a serious threat to the environment.

Dr. Svante Oden proved in a 1968 study that acids emanating from Western industrial nations were having a serious impact on Swedish brooks and lakes.

The problems of geography and meteorology mingle with others of geology and climate. Over most of Scandinavia the bedrock is acidic granite with a soil layer so thin that it holds nothing to neutralize the acid rains.

Furthermore, roughly half the precipitation falls as snow, meaning the pollutants build up during the winter months. They wash out with the first melt, producing a sudden peak of acidity in lakes and rivers in the spring that coincides with the hatching and spawning of fish.

With public feeling about acid rain running high in Sweden and Norway, the governments have tackled the problems vigorously. Norway launched a multimillion-dollar research program to trace the exact origin of pollutants, and Sweden has imposed strict new environmental rules.

Vietnam Makes The Tears Flow Again And Again

EDITOR'S NOTE: AP Special Correspondent George Esper covered the war in Vietnam and remained there after the American evacuation to report on the earliest days of the communist victory.

By GEORGE ESPER
AP Special Correspondent
WOBURN, Mass. (AP) — Charles McMahon got up from the sofa in his living room and walked into the kitchen to hide his tears. Vietnam made them flow again.

Seven years ago today, McMahon's son, Charlie, was one of the last Americans killed in Vietnam. He was struck down at random in a war and a country where no one wanted to be the last to die. It was, his father said, just bad luck, a "bummer" riding on the imprecision of a North Vietnamese rocket that could have landed anywhere.

"It could have been the boy next door, the boy down the street, it could have been any of them," says his mother, Edna McMahon.

"It just happened that our boy was there, that's all," says McMahon.

At noon the next day, April 30, 1975, the guns fell silent across Vietnam. The American evacuation had ended. Saigon had fallen to the North Vietnamese. It marked the end of 30 years of American involvement at a cost of 57,661 dead, more than 300,000 wounded and $150 billion.

Today, McMahon is 51 years old. His wife is 52. He still works at a gelatin processing plant, the same job he has held for more than 30 years. Mrs. McMahon has been driving a school bus for 19 years.

Their son was 21 when he was killed along with another Marine, Darwin Judge, 19, of Marshalltown, Iowa, in a rocket bombardment of Tan Son Nhut airport during the final evacuation of Americans.

McMahon and Judge were embassy guards who had only recently arrived in Vietnam and were assigned to the U.S. defense attaché's compound at Tan Son Nhut. They were believed to be the last two Americans killed on Vietnamese soil. Two other Marines were killed the following day when their helicopter plunged into the South China Sea during the evacuation.

Neither the McMahons nor Judge's parents, Henry and Ida Judge, are bitter, even though they suffered the agony of having to wait nearly a year before the bodies of their sons were returned home for burial. They say their sons wanted to be Marines and enlisted.

"Maybe it would have been different if he had been drafted and sent over there without really wanting to go," says Mrs. McMahon.

"What makes you feel bitter," says McMahon, "is the ones who went to Canada."

The McMahon family endured triple tragedy. Three months after Charlie's death, their youngest son, Scott, also a Marine, was in an auto accident in California that left him a paraplegic. In October of that year, Mrs. McMahon's father died, shielded because of his illness from the news that Charlie had been killed.

Scott, now 25, lives in California and has been in and out of the hospital. Another son, Michael, 26, and a married daughter, Susan, 31, live in Woburn.

What would things be like today if Charlie were alive? "Sometimes you wonder," says McMahon. "You could project what they would be, but you'll never know, if you know what I mean."

"I just wonder," says Mrs. McMahon, "what he'd be doing now, if he'd be married and have any children, and if he would still be living in Woburn. Things like that. Whether he would have stayed in the Marine Corps, because he did love it."

There have been many sad moments, too, for the Judges in Iowa.

But her son, says Mrs. Judge, was doing what he wanted.

"So you have to be very proud of him," she said. Time has helped ease the pain for both families.

"It's like that life has to go on," says Mrs. Judge. "Some days are good, some days are bad. Last June we had a terrible phone call that started my nerves and stuff all up again."

"The operator wanted to know if we'd accept a collect call from Darwin. And I said, 'Well, Darwin was killed.' Then all of a sudden I heard this horrible voice that said, 'Hello, Mom, I love you.' And that was all there was to it."

"It was a horrible experience to go through. I called the Marines right away and they said it was probably a crank call. My nerves were pretty well shot for a long time."

McMahon says "things get smoother and smoother all the time, but when people talk about it, it does upset me. You get used to it after a while, but when everything starts flooding back at once, it's hard."

Charlie McMahon was home on leave, here in Woburn, a 30-minute drive from Boston, less than two weeks before he was killed. His father will show you the photos of him then. The pictures hang in a frame on the wall.

He rests now in the soldiers' lot at Woodbrook Cemetery opposite his high school.

"He told me he'd be home," recalls Mrs. McMahon. "When he left, he said, 'I'll be back.'"

Avers Land 'Good Hedge'

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A North Carolina State University economist says real estate is still a good hedge against the poor economy, even if inflation has caused the increased land prices over the past 10 years.

Leon E. Danielson says real estate prices have risen sharper than inflation each year of the past decade except 1980-1981 and farmland generally provided a better hedge against inflation since stocks since 1940.

Danielson said the dollar value of North Carolina farmland increased an average of 14.8 percent between 1972 and 1981, while real estate, discounting inflation, increased an average of 5.2 percent.

The use of farmland for non-farm use created part of the rising land values, with a 1980 survey of the North Carolina rural real estate market showing that 34 percent of all farmland sold was for non-farm use, he said.

The survey indicated that non-farm influences were strongest on land values in the Piedmont and mountain regions, while agricultural influences dominated in the coastal region, Danielson said.

Respondents were asked to indicate the specific non-farm use having the greatest impact on land value. Rural development for home sites was cited by 41 percent of those surveyed, while development of recreation and vacation home sites was mentioned by 18 percent.

Of the tracts sold for non-farm use, 49 percent was primarily forest land, 20 percent was idle, 12.9 percent was primarily cropland and 8.3 percent was mostly pasture, the survey showed.

'Good Name' Is At Stake

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — The pickles and lettuce are on hold while Sleggy Goffstein grills his landlord with spicy language to save the good name of his restaurant.

Goffstein went to court Monday to fight the Oakridge Mall, which demands that he change the name of his gourmet hamburger restaurant or leave the premises.

The restaurant is called Elegant Buns.

"They said it was suggestive," Goffstein said. "It never occurred to me that it might be taken that way."

The restaurant's logo depicts a smiling hamburger with a monocle and top hat. "I wanted a name that would give the place some class," Goffstein said.

Goffstein got his take-out order from the mall March 10 and the owners sued last week after failing to evict him. In the meantime, he said, the mall seeks to triple his $2,000 monthly rent.

Goffstein, 50, claims his free speech rights are being violated.

The court documents refer to the need to "mustard defenses" and "get to the meat of the matter."

"We were trying to show that words can mean a lot of things," said Goffstein's lawyer, Ronald Rossi.

Goffstein had operated Brothers Pizza Galley at the mall since 1975 but switched to Elegant Buns two months ago at a cost of $50,000.

DOCKET NO. M-100, SUB 92

BEFORE THE NORTH CAROLINA UTILITIES COMMISSION

In the Matter of Implementation of Cost-Control Practices and Procedures by Electric, Natural Gas, and Telephone Utilities

NOTICE OF CONFERENCE TO RECEIVE REPORTS AND PRESENTATIONS ON IMPLEMENTATION OF UTILITY COST-CONTROL PRACTICES AND PROCEDURES

In recent months the Commission has become increasingly concerned that the rising cost of public utility services coupled with the deepening economic recession is placing an extreme, if not an intolerable, burden on the citizens of this State. Although rate increases allowed in recent years have been held, under the North Carolina Statutes, to the minimum amounts required to assure adequate present and future utility services, the Commission is not unmindful of the fact that the impact of such increases on consumers has nevertheless been substantial. Therefore, the Commission has scheduled a conference for the purpose of requiring each major electric, natural gas and telephone utility operating in this State to report to the Commission all plans, programs, procedures, and other steps undertaken in the future in order to minimize and otherwise streamline all costs related to the provision of public utility service. The Commission is also interested in determining what steps the utilities are taking to see which, if any, costs can be deferred to later months or years without sacrificing adequacy of services and without causing substantial future increases in rates as a result of such actions.

Reports and presentations will be received from Carolina Power & Light Company, Duke Power Company, Virginia Electric & Power Company, Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Company, Carolina Telephone & Telegraph Company, Central Telephone Company, General Telephone Company of the Southeast, North Carolina Natural Gas Corporation, Piedmont Natural Gas Company, Inc., and Public Service Company of North Carolina, Inc., concerning the current and proposed implementation of utility cost-control practices and procedures.

The conference agenda will proceed in the following manner. The conference will be convened on Wednesday, May 12, 1982, at 9:30 a.m. in the Commission Hearing Room, Dobbs Building, 430 North Salisbury Street, Raleigh, North Carolina, for the purpose of receiving reports and presentations from each of the above-named telephone and natural gas companies. Presentations and reports from the above-named electric utilities will be reconvened at 11:00 a.m. in the Commission Hearing Room. An evening conference session beginning at 7:00 p.m. in the Commission Hearing Room has also been scheduled on Thursday, May 13, 1982, for the benefit of interested utility customers who may wish to appear and make a presentation to the Commission. The conference will be resumed, if necessary, on Friday, May 14, 1982, at 9:30 a.m. in the Commission Hearing Room.

ISSUED BY ORDER OF THE COMMISSION.

This the 29th day of April, 1982.

Violence On 'Jade Trail'

By DENIS D. GRAY
Associated Press Writer
CHIANG MAI, Thailand (AP) — The Chinese once regarded jade as a symbol of the best qualities in man, but along today's jade trail — from the jungles of Burma to the emporiums of Hong Kong — it drives men to gang wars, smuggling, a strange kind of gambling and sometimes suicide.

Mined in the heart of the notorious "Golden Triangle," the precious mineral passes through the hands of warlord armies, rebel minority groups and former Chinese Nationalist army men before it is fashioned into carvings and jewelry sometimes more valuable than diamonds.

The Golden Triangle, an area at the conjunction of the borders of Burma, Laos and Thailand, is also known for its opium growing and smuggling.

The best jade in the world is quarried in the Kachin state of northern Burma. The Chinese discovered it there some 4,000 years ago and ensured a flow of it to their imperial court, where it was sculpted into artifacts that now are priceless.

Today, jade exits northern Burma in three directions, the bulk of it being smuggled into Thailand.

The Burmese government, which needs foreign currency badly, has tried to get its hands on as much of it as possible since nationalizing the mining industry 19 years ago. What jade it does retrieve is sold to European, American and Asian dealers at state gems, jade and pearl auctions held each year in Rangoon, the Burmese capital.

Burma has made $75.5 million since the auctions began in 1964, with jade sales accounting for more than 45 percent of the total proceeds.

Those involved in the gem trade in Rangoon estimate that at least 10 to 20 times what is sold at the state auctions is smuggled abroad. The mining areas, located in rugged, jungled terrain, are infested with rebels of the Kachin Independence Army, one of a dozen or so minority groups fighting for autonomy from the Rangoon government.

Kachin rebels who recently surrendered to the government claim that some of the jade is smuggled into China, a claim also made by jade dealers in this city in northern Thailand.

But by far the largest quantity of illicit jade finds its way to Thailand by boat, mule caravan, human porters and motor vehicles.

The passage of the jade is taxed by other rebel groups, who use the funds to maintain small, "liberation armies."

The Golden Triangle is one of the world's major sources of narcotics and somewhere along the way the jade rocks often end up in the same caravan of mules hauling bundles of opium, from which heroin is refined.

Some of the biggest opium smugglers, who also maintain private armies, happen to also be among the top jade traffickers, and the periodic "opium wars" among groups competing for the lucrative opium harvest can also be regarded as "jade wars."

Thai authorities say that Khun Sa — whom they regard as the most powerful opium warlord of the Golden Triangle — maintains a highly profitable sideline in jade. Although his Shan United Army, formerly based in Thailand, was badly battered by Thai military forces early this year, Khun Sa's opium network is still strong and his jade operation is still run by a relative in Chiang Mai.

Another key operator is Gen. Ly Wen-huan, who fled China with armed remnants of the Nationalist Chinese army in the wake of the communist takeover of the mainland in 1949.

Nationalist Chinese exiles in Burma and later in Thailand quickly got involved in the opium and gem trades and today the aging general runs a jade factory on the compound of his Chiang Mai villa.

American, European and Japanese dealers leave jade buying to overseas and mainland Chinese largely because its acquisition is an excruciating form of gambling, both in Rangoon and in places like Chiang Mai, a key transit point for Hong Kong, the world's jade capital.

Jade is sold as rock, with only a sliver of crust shaved off to expose the normally green or whitish insides.

One veteran dealer in Chiang Mai says that it is virtually impossible to tell from this exposed slice whether the stone inside is good for little else but a paper weight or will turn out to have the translucent, unmarred texture and uniform coloring to fetch thousands of dollars.

A friend, he says, recently bought a 22-pound rock for the equivalent of $4,000, had it cut and to his disgust found that he couldn't sell it for $200. The best quality jade — rarely found on the market — can sell for as much as half a million dollars for a half kilogram (1.1 pound) in Chiang Mai.

Dealers, he says, have been known to make such all-or-nothing purchases, watch the saw bisect their stones and then kill themselves if the stone turns out to be worthless.

Denies Prophet Of Doom Title

By DAVID BROWNE
CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Best-selling author Charles Berlitz dismisses the notion that he is a prophet of doom.

"You do not have to be a prophet to see what is happening to mankind," said Berlitz, who lives in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., in an interview with the Associated Press in Caracas recently.

The 68-year-old grandson of M.D. Berlitz, the founder of the Berlitz language schools, was in Venezuela to promote his new book, "Doomsday 1999." He also plans to soon continue his lifelong search for the "lost city" of Atlantis with a diving expedition off the coast of the Bahamas.

Berlitz cites several major reasons for his prediction of the demise of man before the turn of the century.

According to scientists, an alignment of the planets in July 1999 may force a giant asteroid to crash into earth, said Berlitz.

"If this happens the minimum impact would be equivalent to a 200-million-megaton blast, which would trigger massive volcanic eruptions and earthquakes," he said.

"Even Nostradamus wrote of a great king of terror that will come out the skies to smite the earth" in this year. For me this is further proof of the asteroid theory," continued Berlitz, referring to the 16th-century French astrologer and prophet who is interpreted by some to have predicted, among other events, World War II.

Nuclear proliferation could also lead the world to disaster either through war or accident, said the writer whose previous credits include "The Bermuda Triangle," "The Mystery of Atlantis" and "Mysteries of Forgotten Worlds."

"By 1999 there will be 44 countries capable of producing 2,000 atomic bombs a day. And that is precluding assorted terrorist organizations," he said.

"We are in great danger of blowing the world up by war or by chance. We still do not even know what to do with nuclear waste.

"Man is poisoning his own planet. He is destroying the oceans, seas and forests, his own lifeblood. Unless we get ourselves under control we will soon kill all life, leaving only mice, rats and cockroaches."

Ill-planned industrialization, and overpopulation leading to scarce food resources are other factors that he predicts could lead to an insurmountable world crisis.

Yet, despite his message, Berlitz feels civilization has not lost all chance of averting Armageddon.

Rival Feminist Movements In Revolutionary Iran

JIGGS UP, AND OUT — Jiggs, an orangutan at the Pittsburgh Zoo, opens wide for Dr. George Bentz, the dentist who removed all of the ape's teeth last week. A victim of advanced gum disease, Jiggs was anesthetized for the 3-hour operation. Bentz and other medical personnel volunteered their services to the zoo. Jiggs, who did not volunteer, is recovering nicely. The 277-pound orangutan's normal diet of easy-to-gum fruits and vegetables, etc. will not change. (AP Laserphoto)

By TOM BALDWIN
Associated Press Writer
TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's revolution has given birth to two rival feminist movements over Islamic guidelines that call upon Iranian women to cover up from head to toe in a garment called a chador.

One movement encourages the extremely modest dress; the other still dresses in Western styles, sometimes at risk. The rivalry often is evident on the streets of Tehran: A woman dressed in the latest Paris fashions without the prescribed head covering is publicly reprimanded by a woman in a chador. It is in this way that women who are militant about their Islamic attire police their sisters dressed Western-style.

The clergy-led regime is exerting subtle but strict pressure on women to go along with the Islamic fundamentalists on the matter of dress.

But some women resist quietly and in their own individual way. They simply refuse to go along.

This represents one of the many social fractures in Iran today, three years after Moslem militants overthrew Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi. Diplomatic observers and Iranian sociologists say Iran's women, who make up about half the nation's 37 million people, represent one of the Islamic republic's more worrisome problems.

"Nobody in this country wants another king," said one sociologist. "But women who had contacts with the West feel they have been victimized by the revolution and lost some of their rights."

"The majority that never traveled or studied abroad think they have been liberated (by the revolution). And they have. They have the political clout because their side is running the government. They can berate a woman who doesn't have a head scarf on, and that woman must listen and take notice. The sides are very angry with one another."

The fundamentalist women likely come from the lower end of Iran's economic scale. The Western-oriented woman probably was part of the middle or upper-middle class.

"It is a relatively classic case in a revolution where the maid is now able to tell the mistress of the house what to do and what to wear," said a Western diplomat.

Iran's Revolutionary guards, the private army of young Khomeini loyalists, are trying to encourage use of the dark, sack-like chadors by pressuring Tehran's merchants.

Shopkeepers say guards warn them their shops will be forced to close if the merchants do business with women in non-Islamic apparel. In some cases, such as hotels, government offices and hospitals, Revolutionary Guards turn away unsuitably dressed women.

Measurements Have Evolved

WASHINGTON (AP) — Our measurement system, which has been evolving since the time of the Egyptians, came to us by way of the English.

Here, according to National Geographic, is how some of the measuring units began:

Foot — the length of Charlemagne's foot, modified in 1305 to be 36 barleycorns laid end to end.

Inch — the width across the knuckle on King Edgar's thumb, or three barleycorns.

Yard — the reach from King Henry I's nose to his fingertips, a distance also twice as long as a cubit.

Cubit — the length of the arm from elbow to fingertip.

Mile — 1,000 double steps of a Roman legionary. Later, Queen Bess added more feet so the mile would equal eight furlongs.

Furlong — the length of a furrow a team of oxen could plow before resting.

Acre — the amount of land a yoke of oxen could plow in one day.

Fathom — the span of a seaman's outstretched arms; 880 fathoms make a mile.

Under conditions like these, the Western-oriented women stroll the city in their fashion-page outfits, but carry lightweight raincoats and scarves in their handbags. These they take out and put on before entering a building. And when they emerge, the coat and scarf go back into the handbag.

Just as often, though, women are seen wearing the chador of tightly knotted head piece and ballooning smock. Jeans and sneakers worn beneath the baggy dress have replaced stockings and fashionable shoes.

Literature produced by the revolution says women are soldiers of the war against anything not Islamic. It says they are the nucleus of the family and that the ouster of the shah liberated women from Western corruption that abused them as sex objects, whether in girly magazines or in suggestive advertisements promoting suntan lotion and perfume.

"The woman is sacred," is an oft-repeated statement attributed to Khomeini.

A U.S.-trained air force fighter pilot who spent three years in the United States told a visiting news correspondent that he subscribes to the theory that in a genuine Islamic nation there must be no mixing of the sexes at parties, on buses, at the beach, even on the ski slopes.

There are women here who ridicule such attitudes, but they do so privately. These women say they welcomed the fall of the shah but now they simmer at the role the revolution has forced upon them. They also say the revolution has gone too far, if only temporarily.

"We did not know we would be dominated this way by the extremists," said one professional woman.

In between the hardline fundamentalists and their sisters who quietly resist is a large group of women that goes along with whatever the extremists want.

"I wear this because I would lose my government job if I didn't," said one such working mother.

Another young woman who claimed she didn't care a bit about politics commented: "I walk around like this and keep my mouth shut. Nobody will bother me. It won't be this way forever."

Job-Placing Class Slated

The Human Resources Development program at Pitt Community College is accepting applications for enrollment in a new job placement class beginning May 17, according to college officials.

This eight-week program is designed to help adults who are school dropouts, unemployed and economically disadvantaged. Recipients of public assistance are encouraged to apply, say PCC officials.

Charles Dickens, HRD coordinator, said his department hopes to enroll persons from throughout Pitt County.

"HRD works closely with the Employment Security Commission, the Department of Social Services, Martin County Manpower program, Migrant and Seasonal Farmworkers Association and numerous other agencies within the Greenville-Pitt County area," said Dickens.

HRD operates under the joint supervision of the North Carolina Department of Community Colleges and the N.C. Department of Natural Resources and Community Development.

Appointments for interviews may be made at the HRD office on the PCC campus or by phoning 756-3130, ext. 255. An open meeting for persons interested in the program will be held by the HRD staff Thursday at 7 p.m. in room 209 of the Humber Building, PCC.

Border Patrol And Policemen Share El Paso Beat

By STEVE BREWER
Associated Press Writer
EL PASO, Texas (AP) —
The U.S. Border Patrol is now walking the beat in downtown El Paso with members of the local police department, and authorities said the double-teamed patrols are having a chilling effect on crime.

"For March, as compared to March 1981, we had a 32 percent reduction in reported crimes in the downtown area (during daylight hours)," said acting Border Patrol Chief Dale Cozart. "We don't claim credit for all of that, but we think the foot patrols have been a big factor."

For the first 10 weeks of the joint foot patrol operation there have been 299 misdemeanor arrests and 24 felony arrests, said Capt. Bill Long of El Paso Police Department. The Border Patrol footmen also apprehended 2,931 illegal aliens during that period, he said.

The patrols are unique because they team one Border Patrol officer with one local policeman. Border officers usually patrol by car or helicopter, officials say. "Of course, the El Paso sector itself is unique. . . Cozart said. "It's the only place along the border that has such a large population and large residential and business areas right on the border."

El Paso, with a population of more than 400,000 people, is separated from Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, by the Rio Grande. Juarez boasts nearly 1 million residents and the cities are so inter-related that Cozart refers to them as an "international metropolis."

The downtown areas of the two cities, pressed against the river, are directly across from one another, making it easy for illegal aliens to cross from one to another simply by wading or walking across on stones.

Cozart said many of the crimes in the downtown area, the section of the city with the highest crime rate, are committed by illegal aliens who can easily escape across the border.

"Foot patrol arrests way more than car patrols," Long said. "With seven officers on the street, we're arresting 9 to 10 people a day. And that's not counting the Border Patrol guy who might be picking up illegal aliens."

Cozart said the seven border patrolmen on the beat apprehended more than 2,200 illegal aliens since the program began in early February.

Although the combined program has been under way for less than three months, foot patrols downtown are not new, Long said.

In the 1970s, the police department, using federal grants, kept as many as 30 officers on downtown beats. But the money eventually ran out and the city couldn't afford to keep them going.

"Immediately after we did away with it, we had a different type of crime in the downtown area," Long said. "We started having aggravated robberies in downtown businesses — robberies at gunpoint. In downtown during the day, we usually didn't have that type of crime."

The Downtown Merchants Association demanded that foot patrols be resumed.

Last November, the merchants convinced the city council to have the patrols during the December holiday season when business — and traffic across the border — is at its peak.

"After we started the foot patrol again, the robbery problem stopped," Long said.

But the overall problem remained — there was not enough manpower to keep the foot patrols going. Then Long decided to rotate his tactical units so that each of the three seven-man squads spend a month on foot in the square-mile downtown area. Those patrolmen were joined by the Border Patrol officers and the new patrols were born in February.

Downtown is divided into seven sections, which means a lot of territory for each two-man team, said Border Patrol officer Jim Duff, a former policeman who volunteered for the duty.

"We figured it out once and we average about eight or nine miles a day," Duff said.

"We get a lot of public intoxication arrests, a lot of arrests for minor drug possession," Long said.

"They also pick up quite a few wanted people, people who are wanted for crimes in other jurisdictions."

The worst crime, a stabbing incident, occurred early last month. Long said the patrol spotted a fight on a downtown street and rushed to break it up.

"It turned out that one guy was stabbing the other," he said. "They actually witnessed an attempted murder. The guy had already been stabbed a couple of times. They literally saved his life." "The foot patrol is a funny phenomenon," he said. "You might not call in a report on a broken window if you know all you'll get is an officer in a car who will drive up, take the report and drive off into the sunset. But if you see this officer walking past your business every day, you might report it to him."

China launched its first earth satellite in 1970.

EMBATTLED JUDGE — Circuit Judge William Reinecke, who faces a recall election May 11, poses in his chambers in the Grant County Courthouse in Lancaster, Wis. (AP Laserphoto)

By ROBERT O'MEARA
Associated Press Writer
LANCASTER, Wis. (AP) — William L. Reinecke, a small town circuit judge whose comments in a sexual assault case brought him to national attention, chooses his words now slowly and with great care.

One phrase got him into trouble. He described a 5-year-old girl as an "unusually sexually promiscuous young lady," and now faces a recall election May 11.

Reinecke, 51, has been on the bench for 14 years in this community of 4,000 in southwestern Wisconsin. He leaned back in a chair in his second-floor chambers and placed a booted foot on the window sill as he talked of the events leading up to the recall.

It has been "an agonizing experience," he said.

Reinecke made the controversial remark last Dec. 22, in sentencing Ralph Snodgrass, 24, of Gays Mills on a first-degree sexual assault charge involving the girl. Snodgrass was put in jail for 90 days under a work-release program and placed on three years probation.

Crawford County District Attorney Rod Satter said the child's mother was outside last Oct. 16 while Snodgrass was sleeping in the nude in her home. Satter said the girl crawled in bed and initiated sexual contact.

There was no intercourse, "no aggressive behavior on the part of the defendant" and no injuries, Reinecke said.

The judge said the girl's behavior probably resulted from her having seen Snodgrass and her mother have "sexual contact in view of that young lady."

Authorities learned of the case about a week later when a teacher noticed the girl was experiencing discomfort and a physician examined her.

When word got around that Reinecke had called a 5-year-old "sexually promiscuous," some Grant County residents formed a group called Citizens for Children and organized the recall drive.

The state Elections Board certified 5,027 signatures on recall petitions. Only 3,798 were required to force a recall election.

Ellen Day of Fennimore, who presented the petitions to the board in March, said at the time: "I feel real good that the people of Grant County are that concerned about their children."

The recall group has endorsed attorney James Dahlquist, 31, who says that other "very significant problems" with Reinecke's tenure are part of his campaign. He did not spell out the problems in announcing his candidacy.

Norman Kvalheim, 55, also entered the race.

Reinecke could be out of a job May 12.

That prospect, the divorced father of eight says, is worrisome.

"This is the first time I've ever been criticized publicly for anything I've done as a judge," said the slightly built man with dark thinning hair.

"You know," he said, "the defense lawyers described her as a very sexually curious child. That probably would have been a more appropriate statement."

He said that in summarizing the case in court "I was attempting to use a phrase that was descriptive."

"I used the wrong phraseology. Looking at the dictionary definition, it was in no way inaccurate," he said. "But I probably just should have said the child was involved in unusual activities instead of saying she was sexually promiscuous."

Definitions in Webster's New World Dictionary include "showing little or no taste or care in choosing," and "without plan or purpose."

Reinecke, who has apologized publicly for the remark, said he and the defense both recognized the incident was not the child's fault.

"I clearly told the jury at the trial the law of Wisconsin is that whether the child consents to the act is not an issue. The child is incapable of consenting," he said. "The adult is to blame."

Why do his opponents continue their drive after his apology?

"The apology came too late and gave no indication that the judge had changed his attitude regarding children who are the victims of sexual abuse," said recall backer Jerry Brendenmuhl.

Still, Reinecke says he is known as a firm and fair judge and that people come up to him on the street and tell him they're behind him. He has received letters from throughout the country and abroad but hasn't noted how many are for or against him.

"Some are neutral, some are supportive and then there are those who are very supportive," he said with a grin.

Reinecke said he has been heartened by the public support given him by his former wife and 41 lawyers from Grant and nearby Crawford counties.

What is the campaign costing him?

"In dollars and cents, or heartwise?" he responded.

The dollars and cents came from his campaign manager, Pat McNamara. About $5,000, McNamara said. Plus another $5,000 if no one takes 51 percent or more of the vote May 11 and a special election must be held June 8.

"Heartwise," Reinecke said, the pressure will be off him if the vote is heavy next month. A good turnout, he believes will be in his favor. But the farmers, he said, may be in the fields instead of voting.

"After all, we are a rural county," he said.

Train Gives Luxury Ride

By ANDREW TORCHIA Associated Press Writer
JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — On the platform, a timeless African scene: a black woman in coveralls ambles by, sipping a fruit drink and effortlessly balancing a tray of dishes on her head.
On the train, a scene of European luxury: white passengers settle in upholstered chairs, sipping the sparkling wine that South African Railways provides to begin one of the world's great journeys.

On a crystal-sharp morning in the southern hemisphere autumn, few things sum up the contrasts in this land as well as the Blue Train.

Lessons unfold in history, geography and the forgotten joys of traveling slowly, as the train covers 1,600 kilometers — 1,000 miles — in 26 hours.

Passengers, up to 106 of them, discover that it all slips down as easily as the buttermilk pudding that ends a seven-course dinner in the dining car.

According to railroad spokesman Ernest du Plessis, no one knows why the Blue Train is blue; other South African trains are red. The gold train might have been a more fitting name in the country that produces 55 percent of the world's gold. Carpets and metal fittings are golden in color and a microscopically thin layer of gold on the windows deflects glare.

For gadget lovers, there are electrically operated Venetian blinds, temperature controls in each suite and four music channels.

Two identical, 16-coach Blue Trains were built in South Africa at a cost of 5 million rand — now $4.8 million — and put into service in 1972, successors to a train of World War II vintage. The Blue Trains provide two or three departures a week from Pretoria and from Cape Town.

The Blue Train, like about 70 hotels in South Africa, is open to all races. "But if you see 20 non-whites in six months, it's a lot," said chief steward Harry Joseph. "The ticket costs too much."

A recent 25-percent increase put the fare for a one-way Johannesburg-Cape Town ticket at 225 rand — $213 — with meals included but not drinks. A first-class ticket on a plane that covers the distance in two hours costs about 183 rand.

No conductor calls, "All aboard." Passengers find suite assignments on a printed list posted on the platform.

The train is nearly always full, largely with American, British and other foreign travelers who purchase the trip in package tours.

South African bureaucrats favor the train as a last calm haven before a parliamentary session; when the government moves south in mid-January from Pretoria, the winter capital, to Cape Town, the summer capital.

The train rolls across the mile-high veld outside Pretoria, past the massive Voortrekker Monument to the white, Afrikaner settlers who came north in ox wagons 140 years ago, at the same time as American pioneers were trekking west. Silent and gently swaying on air springs, the train passes flat-topped piles of mine waste at Johannesburg, a gold-boom town that grew up to have 70,000 swimming pools.

Farther on are vast cornfields, auto scrap yards, rural black slums where the roofs of metal shacks are held in place with stones, and immaculate playing fields where white children test themselves at the national sport — rugby.

As a white-jacketed waiter serves the trout mayonnaise for lunch, there is Potchefstroom, a theological center where a siege during an Afrikaner-British war 101 years ago forced townsfolk to boil grass to stay alive. Dusk brings Kimberley, where a diamond rush in 1871 made South Africa's first overnight millionaires.

The train changes to a diesel engine for the night-long haul across the Karoo, a semi-desert region of windmills, sheep and stubble, where electric lines don't reach. Shoes left in a locker under a bunk are removed through a small door opening into the corridor, shined and returned before dawn.

An early riser sees Matjiesfontein, an oasis where, legend has it, an oldtime hotel keeper sold train travelers soup so hot that they couldn't drink it during a brief stop. The untouched soup went back in the pot for the next train.

Then comes the drop through mountain passes into the coastal grape country, where every village seems to have a white, church steeple, wine tanks near the siding and advertisements for apartheid — railroad station signs marking separate toilets for whites and blacks.

The Blue Train loses money, railroad spokesman du Plessis said.

"We keep it going as a prestige thing," he said. "The present train has a remaining life span of 20 years. Whether there would be another one after that, we'll leave it to the gods."

Workshop

A mini-workshop on family relationships and communication will be held during a meeting of the ACME chapter of Eastern North Carolina Saturday at 7:30 p.m. in the fellowship hall of the First Baptist Church of Farmville.

The workshop will be conducted by Me. Markowski, professor of child development and family relations at East Carolina University and a practicing marriage and family counselor. The general public may attend.

Plans for a June cookout and fellowship will be made during the same meeting.

Memory Of Mine Toll Lingers On

By GEORGE TIBBITS
Associated Press Writer
PINEHURST, Idaho (AP) — When fire flashed through the Sunshine Mine in Kellogg, leaving 91 miners dead, Delmar Kitchen made it to the surface only to learn that his brother and father were among the dead.

"I never got a chance to break down myself and really let go, because I had to take care of everybody else," Kitchen said Sunday on the 10th anniversary of the disaster.

Within weeks of the fire, he was back at work, a mile underground mining silver ore.

"I had my sister-in-law, my stepmother, my mother, my sisters and my uncles and my aunts that I had to take care of and I couldn't get off and do what I would like to do," he said.

Surpressing the grief worked for about five years, but then Kitchen began to have emotional problems. He became moody, and sometimes would hyperventilate and pass out. Everyday stress became insurmountable.

"He could handle his job but not much else," said his wife, Donna. "He cut everybody off. He wanted just me and the kids just right here. If he wanted to see anyone else, he went out, he didn't want anyone coming."

Finally, he saw a doctor who prescribed medication for his nerves and helped talk him through the problems. He's been off the medication for a year now, but he still could not bear to join 200 others at a memorial service Sunday.

"I never have gone to the memorials," he said. "To start with, I used to go out to the grave sites, but it started bothering me. Maybe that was one of my problems, too, I shouldn't have done it."

The tragedy of May 2, 1972, the second-worst hard-rock mining disaster in U.S. history, left 179 children fatherless and dozens of widows.

"Those who deal with the mines have always had their lives at risk," Idaho Lt. Gov. Phil Batt said at the service. "The events which took place 10 years ago make this fact tragically apparent."

Right after the fire, Kitchen said, he thought about quitting the mines, maybe accepting the state's offer of retraining and becoming a mechanic.

But within weeks, he was back in the pit.

"I wanted him out of there," said Mrs. Kitchen, as she sat with her husband at the dining table of their home here, a few miles from the mine. "I didn't want any more of that and I put pressure on him every way I could, boy."

"And it didn't work," Kitchen chuckled.

The Kitchens say they and most others in this close-knit northern Idaho mining district have put the bad times behind them. That's where it belongs, in the past, they say.

The U.S. Bureau of Mines issued a report about five years after the fire, but never arrived at a cause. It said then that its best guess was that the fire was set off by spontaneous combustion.

Fad Item Taken Off Shelves

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Feathered hair clips, a fad item among teen-agers, are being taken off the shelves of 263 stores by Zayre Corp. because they resemble a piece of drug paraphernalia — the pot smoker's "roach clip."

The fluffy feathers with an alligator clip on the end were designed to decorate hair, hatbands and belts. They sold for $1.25 each.

The chain acted on a complaint by Harry Marlow, drug paraphernalia chairman for the Pinellas Park Chamber of Commerce.

Stanley Berkovitz, a Zayre vice president, said Monday that the number of buyers using the item for the smoking of marijuana cigarette butts may be small. But, he said, "we're a family store."

Seven Times A Champion Of Skinners

By CHRISTOPHER SULLIVAN

Associated Press Writer VIENNA, Md. (AP) — If it's Wylie Abbott versus the wily muskrat, bet on Abbott.

Seven times now, he's been crowned national muskrat skinning champion — besting competitors from Louisiana's bayous and the boggy environs of his home on the Chesapeake Bay's Eastern Shore.

"I'm going to retire from speed-skinning," the 42-year-old trapper and waterman says. "These young boys, they're getting pretty fast. But I said to 'em, 'You boys start slackin' up, and I'm coming back.'"

In competition February in Cambridge, Md., Abbott skinned five "rats," as he calls the sleek rodents, in 1:07.5 — about nine seconds ahead of his son, Wylie Jr., who finished second.

The current champ's time this year was six seconds off his best, a fact he attributes in part to lack of practice, because of the scarcity of muskrats. Many were killed in last winter's hard freezes.

There's always pressure on the reigning champion, he said.

"Everybody's gunning after you. Those boys from Louisiana, they're tight. They're fast, you know," said Abbott.

"You've got a fast one on both sides of you. You don't want to get one that don't peel right."

Displaying a "buck knife" that he has trimmed to a narrow edge, Abbott described the requirements of a speed-skinner: "You've got to be fast with your hands — and strong."

"When I get to that fifth rat, I'm dead tired," he says.

Abbott has been competing since he was 10, and chasing the bay's quarry since before that. He recalls diving after turtles, confiding that the way to tell in murky water the snapping end from the tail is by feeling the slope of ridges along the shell.

Abbott speaks respectfully — almost affectionately, sometimes — of the muskrats he stalks.

"I've set and watched 'em feed lots of times... Real pretty to look at," he said. "He's the cleanest animal there is."

A kind of student of muskrat habits, Abbott tells a favorite story: "I had two muskrats alive ... and put 'em in the bathtub. I thought my wife's going to kill me."

"They're in each of their corners. And then they'd come out and hit each other right in the middle. All you see is a blur."

Later, as a "norther" blew through Elliott's Island, where Abbott lives, he said, "I went in to see 'em. They were both laying on top of each other." He covered one hand with the other to demonstrate, and his voice turned soft: "Keeping warm."

A muskrat is like a scaled-down beaver, but with a round, leathery tail.

For Abbott, there's sport in the chase as well as profit — from pelts that become European fur coats, and from meat for what's known locally as "marsh rabbit" stew.

Slogging through the 600 marshy acres that he leases in Dorchester County, where trapping animals in winter gives way to crabbing and fishing in warmer weather, Abbott can check and set 150 traps a day.

During trapping season, from mid-December through mid-March, he'll lay about 600 steel, cage-like traps along the muskrats' swimways. An unlucky rodent passing through trips a trigger, clamps hold the muskrat and it drowns.

"Kills him like that," Abbott says, snapping his fingers.

In a good season, Abbott said he'll collect between 1,000 and 1,200 muskrats. Last season, he said he trapped only 400.

Muskrat carcasses sell for 50 to 60 cents each.

Hide prices were down this year. Sold in sizes "medium, large and extra large," Abbott said, pelts brought about $4 for brown and $6 for black.

Abbott said he doesn't worry much about lean seasons like the one just past — any more than he does about the scarcity of striped bass, or rockfish, that his grandfather used to catch.
