SAFETY AWARDS DINNER — An annual safety awards dinner sponsored by the N.C. Department of Labor was held in Greenville Tuesday night to honor 48 area firms. The firms were cited for maintaining a perfect safety record during calendar year 1981 or recording an occupational injury incidence rate at least 50 percent below the statewide rate for that particular industry. Receiving special awards were Clarence Edwards (left), director of manufacturing for Singer Furniture of Chocowinity, which has compiled 2,278,000 safe employee-hours, and Sheila Needham (right) of Union Carbide, who received the plant's 17th consecutive annual safety award. Presenting the awards is Charles Jefferies (center), assistant state labor commissioner. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

British Newspapers Say Falklands Decision Made

By The Associated Press
Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said today Argentina's response to the latest Falkland Islands peace proposal "doesn't look very encouraging," and British newspapers reported she has already decided to invade the islands.

Mrs. Thatcher said in a British Broadcasting Corp. interview her government had not yet seen the full text of Argentina's response, but that "the gap looks big" between London and Buenos Aires positions.

Argentina's chief negotiator at the United Nations, Deputy Foreign Minister Enrique Ros, said after he presented the response Tuesday night it was intended to bridge differences and resolve the conflict peacefully.

Earlier, British landing forces were reported closing on the South Atlantic islands, and Mrs. Thatcher was quoted by the London Daily Express tabloid as telling Queen Elizabeth II that she has ordered troops to invade.

"Only the time of a British landing on the Falkland Islands seemed in doubt," the London Times reported today.

Mrs. Thatcher told Parliament on Tuesday that Argentina was stalling for time and the outcome of U.N. talks should be known by Thursday. She said if talks failed, "no military action can be held up in any way."

"I believe that any military action or option cannot and must not be delayed by people who are extending negotiations," she declared.

Britain's Independent Television News said about 50 ships with 3,900 marines and paratroopers aboard were believed massed off the South Atlantic archipelago, ready to challenge the estimated 9,000 Argentine troops sent to the islands since they were seized from Britain April 2.

Press Association, the domestic British news agency, said reports were circulating in London that the assault force, including the liner Canberra with 2,000 marines aboard, was within 100 miles of the Falklands.

Correspondents with the British task force reported the arrival Tuesday of a container shipload of Harrier jets to reinforce the estimated 37 vertical-takeoff jump jets in the fleet's air arm.

After Ros conveyed Argentina's new proposals to Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, the U.N. chief delivered them to Britain's U.N. Ambassador Anthony Parsons, who sent them to London for consideration.

The secretary-general's proposed framework for peace reportedly calls for a truce, a phased, supervised withdrawal of British and Argentine forces from the Falklands area, and a U.N. interim administration of the islands during negotiations on their future.

British and Argentine sources say the main stumbling blocks are:

— Britain's insistence that the Falkland islanders' local government bodies be restored during the interim U.N. administration. Argentina contends these are vestiges of British colonialism.

— A dispute over how far the British fleet would withdraw. Britain is willing to move its fleet 200 miles from the Falklands, nearly the distance of the Argentine mainland from the islands, but Argentina wants the task force much farther away.

— Argentina's insistence on next Jan. 1 as the deadline for settling the sovereignty question, which Britain and Argentina had been negotiating for 17 years before the Argentine invasion. Britain proposes that the U.N. interim administration and negotiations continue if an agreement cannot be reached by a target date.

Britain reported no military attacks in the Falklands area Tuesday. A communique from the Argentine joint chiefs of staff said military action was limited to British "attempts at naval bombardment, which were repulsed by Argentine forces, and reconnaissance flights by British planes, which were foiled by anti-aircraft fire."

Assign School Posts

Greenville school Superintendent Delma Blinson announced today the assignment of Paul Rasberry as principal of Wahl-Coates School and the assignment of Kay Whitehurst as principal of E.B. Aycock Junior High School.

Both assignments are effective July 1.

Rasberry succeeds Rexford (Gene) Piner, who is retiring after 16 years as principal at Wahl-Coates. Rasberry has been principal at Aycock since 1971. Kay Whitehurst currently is director of secondary instruction and has been in that position for 10 years. Prior to that time, she was a teacher at Rose High School.

The director of secondary instruction position is now vacant and Blinson announced that applications for that position would be received through June 4.

Commenting on the reassignments, Blinson said: "We regret the loss of the very capable services of Dr. Piner. Wahl-Coates School has distinguished itself through Dr. Piner's leadership."

"Aycock is an excellent school with one of the most outstanding faculties of any school in the state. Rasberry was principal during some rather difficult times and deserves much credit for what he has done for Aycock."

Blinson said Rasberry had requested the reassignment, "and we are pleased that we can honor his request. Kay Whitehurst has done an excellent job in the central office and she has requested the move to Aycock."

Blinson added that Mrs. Whitehurst "is as knowledgeable about secondary instruction as anyone I know. She has a deep commitment to students and has expressed enthusiasm about the faculty at Aycock."

"I believe the moves will be good for each of these professionals and for Greenville City Schools."

East 10th Street Rezoning Rejected

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Stated opposition by some residents of the East 10th Street area to a rezoning request Tuesday night was followed by a unanimous vote of the Planning & Zoning Commission to recommend that the City Council deny the zoning change petition.

Board members voted to pass the request by Eula G. Cannon to rezone about two acres at 956 E. 10th St. from an R-9 residential designation to office and institutional along to the council with a recommendation for denial.

Durward Harris, speaking for Edna C. Harris, who is serving as agent for Mrs. Cannon, said the property has served as single-family residential quarters but the owners feel it is an ideal location for use by the college as a sorority or fraternity site. Harris said it is difficult to find someone who is willing to buy the house and property for family living quarters. He said he feels it is a "good piece of property for college-related items."

Staff planner Skip Browder said the area basically has single-family dwellings and, while it adjoins East Carolina University property, it is located generally in a residential zoning district. A sorority is located adjacent to the property on the west.

Browder said the city's comprehensive plan recommends that the site continue in residential usage and he added that the planning staff was uncomfortable with rezoning a single lot in view of its spot zoning nature. As proposed, the staff was not in favor of the rezoning, Browder reported.

Charles Cavanaugh of 605 Maple St. said the area remains residential in nature and he felt the "highest and best use" of the Cannon property would be residential. Cavanaugh said there has always been a demand for good property near the university.

Charles Vincent, whose parents live just east of the Cannon property, said they opposed the rezoning request and he was also against it as their sole heir. Vincent said if the one lot is rezoned, "You will run into 'one lots' all across the area."

The attorney said there is a need to preserve some of the residential areas of the city and if more fraternities and sororities are allowed it will erode the area.

Opposition was also expressed by George Shoe of 950 Shady Lane, who said he resides behind a fraternity located on East 10th Street and it is "not the most pleasant residential living." Shoe said the fraternity at his back door is a "distressing situation."

Paul Jewett, a resident of 957 E. 10th, also stated that he opposed the rezoning matter, saying that the area will be degraded if a fraternity is located in the Cannon home. Jewett said he had experienced no problems with the sorority on East 10th, but he pointed to "filth and loud music all day long and half the night" at the fraternity.

The council will receive the request at the June meeting and can set a public hearing for July.

Planning board members voted to recommend that a request by Judson H. Blount Jr. to rezone 11.096 acres located north of Airport Road, east of N.C. 11-U.S. 13, south of Gum Road, and adjacent to the airport and National Guard Armory, be approved.

Blount is seeking rezoning from unoffensive industry to highway commercial, and

Board Reviews Medicaid Reimbursement Policy

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Memorial Hospital Board, meeting Tuesday night, heard Steve Morrisette of the N.C. Hospital Association talk about a Medicaid reimbursement policy statement developed by the Task Force on Government Reimbursement of the Association.

Present for the discussion were local legislators Vernon White, Sam Bundy and Ed Warren. It is to the Legislature that hospitals will be looking for decisions on Medicaid reimbursement on the state level, Morrisette pointed out.

The board voted to retain the services of HDR Company of Omaha, Neb., to prepare master plans for expansions of hospital facilities and service through 1990. The fee payment to the firm will be $110,000, with reimbursement for expenses not to exceed $20,000. Half of the cost will be paid by the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

The trustees were reminded of the budget workshop to be held in conjunction with the Pitt County Commissioners June 15, the day of the next hospital board meeting.

Hospital plant manager Ralph Hall reported that work on the expansions of the dining room, special services department, laboratory and medical records department is 7 percent complete.

Associate Director Rick Gilstrap said a U.S. Department of Health and Human Services validation survey team will visit the hospital June 9-11.

Gilstrap also reported on an apparently abrupt growth in hospital patient population. The patient count has averaged 413 for the past seven months, he said. Recently a record 443 was reached. Last week that went to 463. Sunday there were 482 patients; Tuesday, 500.

Associate Director for Nursing Betty Trought said that 46 new nurses start to work at PCMH Monday, 40 of them new graduates.

All but one of the 36 new nurses who are ECU graduates participated in the Nurse Extern Program last summer and many worked part-time through the year, she said. She said use of students is helping the hospital several ways: the quality of their work is good; they are gaining on-the-job experience which lessens the need for orientational training later, and many are knowing when they're hired full-time what the hospital and the work here is really like.

She said nurse recruit Helen Abbott has good hopes of adding at least 54 more new nurses between now and October, many from Pitt Community College which holds its graduation in August. She said that if Ms. Abbott can continue to do as well with recruitment and she with nurse retention (about 20 percent turnover this past year) the hospital may not have a nurse shortage next year this time.

Provisional staff privileges were given to

Dr. Joyce Mitchell in emergency medicine; provisional consulting staff privileges to Dr. Satpal Grewal in radiation therapy; courtesy staff privileges (until he establishes a Pitt County residence) to Dr. James Holland in ophthalmology; and consulting privileges to Dr. Clifford Kiehn and Dr. Paul Cunningham.

Approval was given for the purchase of $63,992.40 of equipment for purchasing, laboratory medicine, operating room, respiratory therapy, central distribution and administration.

ECU Medical School Dean William Laupus said the move into the Brody Medical Science Building will begin in July and that plans for the radiation therapy center of the medical school are proceeding, with plans to be ready to accept bids by the end of this year. He said there will be 64 members of the entering medical school class, with 90 percent saying they wish to be primary care physicians, 60 percent in the field of family medicine.

Pollsters Rank Low In Reader's Opinion

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: In my opinion the Gallup Poll's list of the top 24 professions in order of their reputation for honesty, integrity and ethical standards reveals a high degree of non-professionalism.

Policemen, congressmen and salesmen would no doubt have ranked differently had the terms "police officers, members of Congress and sales representatives" been used, thus recognizing the important contributions women have made to these professions.

And why were nurses, secretaries, schoolteachers and other predominantly female professions omitted?

You can put "pollsters" down at the bottom of my list for integrity and ethical standards.

APPALLED IN PA.

DEAR APPALLED: Move over. A lot of readers were also appalled. But here's a letter from at least one who had a kind word for the piece:

DEAR ABBY: Seeing pharmacists ranked No. 2 on the Gallup Poll list of professionals in order of their reputation for honesty, integrity and ethical standards offered a small consolation to my husband who is a pharmacist.

He's sometimes treated like a pest when he phones doctors' offices to verify prescriptions as he is required to do by state and federal law.

He's insulted by rude, impatient customers who resent being kept waiting until "all that red tape" is completed before he gives them their prescriptions.

He's even faced a crazed drug addict whose trigger finger was nervous on the gun because my husband wasn't moving fast enough to fill his bag with drugs.

Small wonder none of our children want to follow in Dad's footsteps and become pharmacists.

SMALL-TOWN PHARMACIST'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: You think your husband has problems? Read on:

DEAR ABBY: Recently when the Gallup Poll listed the 24 most "respected" professions, the most important profession of them all didn't even make the list. I refer to agriculture! Since the beginning of civilization, farmers have performed the most indispensable service to mankind — feeding the people.

Farmers today have to be knowledgeable not only in agriculture, but also in veterinary medicine, politics, mechanics and economics — to name a few. They are also at the mercy of unpredictable weather, government policies and world politics.

Perhaps that's why, in a recent government survey, farmers are listed as having one of the highest stress levels of all workers.

I think the family that wants a big splashy wedding should foot the bill. If they both want it, they can split it, but if only one wants it, the one who wants it should pay for it. PAID FOR THREE AND WANTED NONE

New Revolution Ahead

A financial firm recently informed its customers that interest paid on a special fund could be obtained daily by calling an 800 number.

The number, if called, will give the figures in an efficient female voice which is the forerunner of the talking robots that are eventually going to be a part of our lives.

If you think that the information can be recorded by a human for replay, you are correct. There is more, however. Customers with money in the fund can punch in their account numbers. The voice will give the account balance at that time.

It is but another graphic example of how quickly computer technology and delivery of information is changing our lives. If an account balance can be given us by a computer voice, any individual stock quotation can be given the same way — over the phone and by demand.

Large amounts of information can be obtained by attaching a printer at the home end of the phone line to deliver what is known as a "hard copy."

It is only a matter of time before information on almost anything will be available to us at home and as we ask for it — at a price, of course. It will not only change our personal lives, but it will greatly alter the way business is transacted and even the way our industries operate. It can well be the foundation for the next wave of prosperity such as was brought on by the industrial revolution.

Airlines Can Meet Needs

Braniff International Corp. last week announced the cessation of flights and ordered all its employees not to report to work.

The airline had run out of funds. It hopes to reorganize under court protection and resume operations.

It is distressing when a major corporation such as Braniff runs into financial difficulties. Passengers were inconvenienced and all the airlines' employees found themselves, with a chilling suddenness, out of work.

It will be argued for sometime as to what was the cause of Braniff's problems. For the most part it can be blamed on the competitive nature of air service at present.

The Braniff situation is a matter of concern to the nation, but it is not a national disaster. There is still an adequate number of airlines with sufficient planes to meet the needs of the traveling public.

THIS AFTERNOON

Scott Cites Need

By PAUL O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — You can tell former Gov. Bob Scott isn't running for political office this year by the speech he's making on the political circuit. In talks across the state and on public TV, Scott is saying the state's politicians should face up to the need for tax increases.

"We cannot keep saying no new taxes," he said while taking part in a panel discussion on UNC-TV. "If you do (keep cutting) and you keep revenues down, the quality of services is going to decline."

Between Scott's administration (1969-73) and last July, there were no general tax increases in North Carolina. Gov. Jim Holshouser did not raise taxes during his term and Gov. Jim Hunt promised the same thing for his first term. Hunt pushed through a three-cent gas tax increase last year and wants higher alcohol taxes to help the Highway Fund. But Hunt says he will not ask for any other kind of tax increase.

During Scott's administration, the General Assembly approved a two-cent tax on cigarettes, a one-cent tax on soft drinks and increased gasoline taxes by two cents. Since then, economic growth has brought in revenue "that enables state government to continue to improve programs and add a few along the way". But those days of painless revenue growth may be over, he says. "You're either going to have to cut back, or have more revenue."

The state's highway construction program is about to run out of money and public schools are being forced to cancel programs. Yet, people continue to complain of high taxes and politicians keep promising lower taxes. "North Carolina has probably some of the lower ad valorem taxes in the country. But yet we squawk like the dickens when someone talks about raising taxes... This is all going to get us somewhere down the road. We can't keep putting these things off forever," he said. Several speakers at the Child Watch conference warned that this is a bad time to seek new programs for children. Scott responded that people said the same thing when he pushed his kindergarten program in 1969. "We didn't have the money back then, either. So I went to the legislature and I'm still disliked by some because I got the first ever tax on tobacco... and soft drinks in this state. If you want it, you have to pay for it, and someone's going to have to pay for and fight for it."

"For a long time, candidates for office have been saying that if you support me, you won't have any new taxes... I wish they'd say that if you support me you won't have any more taxes but I wish they'd go one step further and say this is what's going to happen... your services are going to be cut."

Scott says he won't get involved in the question of Knee jerk fulminations are not unique to liberal Democrats. Thursday almost 30 New Right and anti-abortion groups rather passionately asked President Reagan to fire the director of the National Institute of Health — Dr. James B. Wyngarden, formerly of Duke University's department of medicine. The poor man had chanced to say that whether to have an abortion was in his opinion a "personal" matter that should be "up to the individual," not regulated by the government.

Dr. Wyngarden's position is a popular one that conflicts directly with the position of Sen. John East, R-N.C., sponsor of a proposed anti-abortion amendment to the Constitution. But that did not impel the professorial Sen. East to abandon reason with an attack on the good doctor's right to express his opinions while he does his federal job. No, Sen. East said, his fellow members of the New Right were wrong. It is not, he opined, necessary for every appointee to meet some kind of ideological "litmus test." East said he saw no evidence Dr. Wyngarden would let "his personal views adversely affect his position..." as a public servant.

Sen. East's refusal to support an anti-abortion witch hunt is refreshing. He has not heretofore drawn attention to himself by being a model of tolerance for dissenting views. By doing so now, he has undercut shrill charges that all members of the so-called New Right are simple-minded dogmatists, and that North Carolina somehow nurtures such people.

LOCKSTEP!

BY ART BUCHWALD

Practice Evacuation

Unlike most people, I take Civil Defense very seriously. While the evacuation plan for Washington hasn't been fully worked out, I know what we're supposed to do. When the sirens go off, we're all to get in our automobiles, grab our credit cards and head for Lickety Split, West Virginia.

The other evening around five o'clock I decided to take a dry run. I came home and told my wife, who was in her housecoat and curlers.

"Get in the car, we're going to have a practice evacuation drill."

"Let me get dressed first." "You don't have time. Do you think when the real thing happens, the Russians are going to wait for you to get all gussied up? Grab the credit cards and let's go."

"What credit cards should I take?" she asked.

"American Express, Visa, Master Charge and Diner's Club." I told her. "If we use up our credit line on one, we can switch to another."

"Do you have gas in the car?" she wanted to know.

"I have half a tank."

"That won't get us to Lickety Split."

"I'm sure if the real thing happens, the Civil Defense people will have emergency gasoline trucks all along the highway. After all, they can't expect us to evacuate Washington during an atomic bomb attack and not supply the petrol. Now stop talking and get in the car. We have to pretend this is not a drill."

As soon as we got near Key Bridge, we found cars bumper to bumper. My moved 10 feet every five minutes.

"What's going on?" my wife wanted to know.

"It's normal rush hour traffic," I explained.

"If it's like this now, what's it going to be like when they try to evacuate the entire city?"

"They'll have National Guardsmen on every corner to move the traffic along," I said. "It wouldn't surprise me if they emptied Washington in 20 minutes. The Soviets are in for a shocker when their missiles hit Ground Zero and find nobody there."

We made it over the Key Bridge in 45 minutes and moved smoothly along the George Washington Parkway at 25 miles an hour until we hit the Beltway and were slowed down to 15."

"I guess you didn't get out of town as fast as you had hoped," my wife said.

"That's because this is just a drill. When people know they're racing against a Soviet ICBM, they'll be doing 80 miles an hour."

"How do we get to Lickety Split?" my wife asked.

"I told you to always keep a map of West Virginia in the car. You never listen to anything I tell you."

She started to cry. "Let's go back."

"We can't go back until the Civil Defense people tell us it's safe. Washington, as far as this drill is concerned, has been completely vaporized."

By asking directions from 40 people, we finally got to Lickety Split six hours later.

It was dark, and no one was on the streets. We knocked on the door of a farmhouse. A man carrying a shotgun answered it.

"Hi," I said, "we're from Washington, D.C., and we were told to come to Lickety Split in case of an atomic attack. We thought we'd arrive early and look the place over just to see where we'd be the most comfortable."

"You got one minute to get off my farm."

"Don't shoot. Haven't you heard from the federal Civil Defense people? You're supposed to open your homes to us until they can rebuild the capital."

"Fifteen seconds."

My wife pulled me away from the door towards the car.

"I'm reporting you to the Federal Emergency Management Administration," I yelled at him. "You're making their atomic war evacuation plan into a farce."

They'd Jump At 'Routine'

By MAXWELL GLEN and CODY SHEARER

WASHINGTON — Each spring, as college seniors prepare for their last all-nighters, they get wind of some poisonous information.

Specifically, they learn that petroleum engineers and computer scientists will garner the top salaries after graduation. This year, such lucky dogs will start work at $31,000, on the average.

For the vast majority of today's "career-oriented" seniors, however, these annual bulletins offer little solace. The salary report serves as the final "class rank" by which graduates enter the real world. It says nothing about who's career-conscious and who's not; everyone is.

Peer competition, in fact, only heightens the sense of urgency that nagging parents and high unemployment lend to securing a post-commencement job. Only 14 years after Dustin Hoffman (in "The Graduate") looked askance at a career in "plastics," the Class of 1982 seems desperate for just such an opportunity. Better to hitch on to a well-paying routine, they reason, than to languish in the uncertainty of experimentation.

For many, that means taking the plunge into banking. Almost daily, for example, several dozen Brown University seniors rise at dawn to sign up for interviews with bank representatives. As elsewhere, the competition is fierce for "bank trainee" slots at places such as Citicorp, Manufacturers Hanover and First National Bank of Boston.

"Most of the students on line want to live in New York or Boston and make enough money to afford a high lifestyle," admitted David Marcus, Brown senior class president. "They definitely aren't fascinated with IRA's (individual retirement accounts)."

Certainly, there's a rich tradition of bank apprentices who work their way from teller up to senior vice president. But as the managerial ranks of financial houses have expanded (more than 50 percent) since 1972, banking opportunities have become a salvation for many panicked seniors. Some 10,000 of this year's graduates, according to the American Bankers Association, will have been saved by September.

Said Dave Huddleston, college recruiting manager for Chase Manhattan Bank: "We're reaching out to a lot more students today. We're looking for the well-rounded recruit. All our clients aren't business majors, so why should our employees be?"

Indeed, it seems that undergraduate desperados don't need much background to make a career out of finance. Headhunters notice good presentation, reasonable numbers skills and affability.

Oddly enough, Brown's Marcus told our reporter, John Riccardi, that at least half of all bank-bound graduates "have the notion that they'll be in banking for only five years, just to make a little money and move onto something less stodgy." Nonetheless, the banking world's consistently low turnover rates indicate that many graduates apparently enjoy their new life too much to think there could be any other.

We understand that an almost irrational fear of poverty tends to afflict seniors during their final year. At 22, many seem to feel that time is running out on them.

Yet, there is also something to this "technological age" that seems to breed among our contemporaries a lack of confidence in non-technical areas. With the attention given to math and science wizardry, many graduates forget (or never realize) that

To the editor:

Well, the plows have raked the field at Ficklen Stadium. There will be nice green grass next fall for ECU and Rose High football. And in case any of us didn't already know, we've had redefined for us, by university and public school officials, just exactly what it is about education that's most important — football. Even here near the end of the 20th century, we haven't gotten beyond a system of values in which education exists as a front to keep the gridiron going... to keep the savagery a little respectable looking.

Meanwhile, what about the taxpayer whose money goes to refurbish and upkeep that great property over at Ficklen? In an economy in which we all find it hard to make ends meet, how long will we go on paying for such luxurious properties which see so little use? While it is deplorable that no way was found to accommodate the Rose High Graduating Class of 1982 in Ficklen Stadium, it is even worse that our society allows such a gigantic waste of facilities at such great expense while some go hungry and others struggle to keep roofs over their heads. How can we pretend we live in such affluence as to tolerate this mess that even allows room for controversy in the use of a property that lies idle and empty 90 percent of the year? Where is the conscience of the system? Is there one?

Private Sector: Main Engine

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — As the White House views the economy, "the private sector is the central engine of economic growth and progress."

That's the way it was described a few days ago by Murray Weidenbaum, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers. The engine, he suggested, is being stoked and soon will roll down the tracks.

"It is in the private sector that products are created, markets are developed, factories are built, productive jobs are generated, and economic progress truly advanced," he reminded those who, in the midst of recession, might have lost sight of the White House's goals.

As he spoke, however, the engine sputtered and coughed, the sounds of illness rather than health. It hissed with escaping power rather than roared with strength.

Its wheels slipped on the rails.

"Nobody is forecasting an economic Valhalla," said Weidenbaum. "But we really are setting in place the basis for a healthy and sustainable period of growth in the 1980s." And that provokes the question asked more often with each passing day: When in the 1980s will growth begin?

So far, there is very little evidence that much expansion will occur this year, and the worst news of all seems to come from some of the strongest supporters of the president, that is, large businesses.

If business is planning for growth it isn't very obvious. Surveys continue to show little enthusiasm for exploiting the promised economic growth, and many companies have even lowered their spending goals.

The most recent survey by McGraw-Hill shows big cutbacks in capital spending plans, leading to the conclusion that after adjusting for higher prices there will be a spending decline rather than an advance.

"For the rest of the year," concludes Business Week magazine after examining the survey results, "most businesses will concentrate more on survival than expansion." The comment is typical of other assessments increasingly being made by business and academic economists.

To Weidenbaum, the lag in business investment is nothing exceptional. "Capital spending is traditionally the lagging sector of the economy, and we are seeing that pattern today," he states. But critics point out that tax incentives were supposed to have destroyed that pattern.

They haven't. In his address, to a St. Louis business audience, Weidenbaum confessed that rapid expansion in capital spending "depends heavily on our success in bringing interest rates down much further than we already have." In effect, high rates are offsetting tax cuts.

But there is always the consumer, and the consumer will get a 10 percent across-the-board personal tax cut on July 1. This, Weidenbaum claims, "will provide a shot in the arm to the American economy."

The consumer? Long memories will recall the argument that it was an overemphasis on consumption and too little understanding of the need to expand production that got the economy into its current mess.

They will recall the theory of reindustrializing America, of funneling funds and energy into making the engine of production more efficient and productive, and that tax benefits should be given toward that goal.

They will recall also that it became part of the president's program, and they might therefore become a bit confused that it is the consumer again who is being relied on to bring the country out of recession.

BEAUTIFICATION ... is already apparent in an uncompleted planting effort at the Stantonsburg Road County refuse dumpster site. The work is being done by the 18 members of the Candlewick Flames 4-H Club and their advisers. Topsoil was brought by the county and local nurseries and civic

Graduates From Wake Forest

WINSTON-SALEM — Six students from Pitt County received degrees from Wake Forest University Monday. They were among 1,025 students who graduated from the college.

Receiving degrees from Greenville were: Micah David Ball, son of Dr. and Mrs. Wilbert R. Ball of Route 3; Tommy J. Payne II, son of Mr. and Mrs. Tommy J. Mr. and Mrs. William Walter Hearne of 107 Greenbriar Drive.

Graduating from Grifton was Troy Rhyme Jackson Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Troy R. Jackson Sr. of 312 Fairway Drive.

Both Ball and Payne received J.D. degrees from the university's school of law.

Earns Degree

CHAPEL HILL — Robert J. DaVanzo of 885 Briarcliff Road, Northeast Atlanta, Ga., received the doctor of medicine degree from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill during commencement exercises held recently.

But now that his political career has ebbed after his resounding loss to Hunt in 1980, he can say some things he really thinks need to be heard. "Maybe I can say it better by virtue of having been there and not seeking to get back there," Scott said.

Peace Graduates

RALEIGH — Two Greenville residents were among 200 women who received their degrees during commencement at Peace College recently.

Sandra Lyn Evans and Dianne Manning received associate of arts degrees.

there is a great need all over the country for people who can speak, write and think clearly. Some people say the liberal arts are dead, but such skills will never be obsolete.

Naturally, not everyone who entered college four years ago planned to graduate with a job offer in hand. Many students assiduously avoided the career question in order to concentrate on other matters.

But this faction seems to be dwindling.

Unless seniors expect to show off a spouse, two children and a mortgage at their Fifth-Year Reunion in 1987, they probably don't need to graduate to a $30,000-a-year contract. On much less, one can get along very well and find out what the big bucks are really worth.

Warned To Care For Defective Babies

By BETTY ANNE WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, disturbed by a case where a deformed Indiana infant was allowed to die, is investigating charges of a similar case in Illinois and sending warnings to thousands of other hospitals.

The Department of Health and Human Services has sent an investigator to check allegations made against Crawford Memorial hospital in Robinson, Ill., after receiving a complaint contending that a child suffering from the congenital birth defect spina bifida was being denied surgery it needed. The complaint was filed by Laura Canning, assistant director of the Chicago-based Family Life League.

But Gregory Coler, director of the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services, said he met with physicians and others involved in the case and found no evidence that the infant's parents had been negligent. In spina bifida cases, there is an opening in the spinal column which can admit infections and cause death.

Health and Human Services also put 6,800 hospitals receiving federal funds on notice Tuesday that they risk losing the government's financial support if they deny proper care and treatment to any handicapped person.

Betty Lou Dotson, director of the department's office for civil rights, sent letters to hospitals receiving Medicare and Medicaid funds notifying them that denying food or treatment to the handicapped or to infants with birth defects risks violating Section 504 of the 1973 Rehabilitation Act. That law, which protects the rights of the handicapped in federally-funded programs, forbids discrimination against the handicapped solely because they are handicapped.

"In the aftermath of the recent death of a handicapped newborn child in Bloomington, Ind., there has been a great deal of justified public concern about the protection of newborn infants with birth defects and their right as human beings to receive appropriate treat-

Services Secretary Richard S. Schweiker said in a statement.

In the Indiana case, the deformed infant suffered from Down's syndrome. The Indiana Supreme Court and two lower courts declined to issue orders that would have required that the baby be fed. The baby died April 15.

"President Reagan and I share this concern (for the rights of such infants), and the president has instructed me to make absolutely clear to health care providers in this nation that federal law does not allow medical discrimination against handi-capped infants," he added.

Separately, the department sent a telegram containing the warning to Carlton King, administrator of the Illinois hospital. King would neither confirm nor deny that the infant was a patient in the hospital. But he did acknowledge that the 107-bed hospital was not equipped to handle spina bifida surgery.

He also acknowledged that an investigator from the department had questioned him. But he said he would not disclose information about patients to even government investigators unless they were armed with a subpoena.

"Because we place confidentiality of our patients as the highest priority, I am not free to release any information on any of our patients," he said.

The Justice Department was monitoring developments in the Illinois case to determine whether the infant's rights were being protected. A source in the department who had determined the identity of the child's parents, said the infant's father was a physician.

Attempts to contact the parents proved fruitless.

Coast Guard Base Idled

CAPE LOOKOUT, N.C. (AP) — The U.S. Coast Guard Station at Cape Lookout was closed Tuesday with a brief, solemn ceremony — nearly 100 years after it first opened.

The search and rescue station has watched over ships passing the treacherous cape for nearly a century. It first opened in 1886 under the U.S. Lifesaving Service, which was a predecessor of the Coast Guard.

"This is a sad occasion to close the Cape Lookout Station after a long and successful history on the Outer Banks," Capt. Joseph Blackett, chief of search and rescue for the guard's 5th district, said to about 50 people attending the ceremony.

Commenting on the station's rustic architecture, Blackett said, "We don't make them like this anymore, and we have lost a great deal with the closing of Cape Lookout."

The station was closed for economic reasons, said Lt. Cmdr. Leo Tyo. He estimated that savings would amount to about $2.1 million in the next 10 years. Most of the savings will come from automating the nearby Cape Lookout Lighthouse.

OLDEST GRAD — Education officials say that Jessie Byam of Madison Heights, Mich., may be the oldest person in the United States to graduate from high school. "I'm not finished yet," said the strong-willed Mrs. Byam, 98, who spent four years studying English, math and history at the Madison Heights Senior Drop-In Center. Mrs. Byam graduates on Friday. AAMA Chapter Meets Thursday

The Pitt County Chapter of the American Association of the Medical Assistants will be meeting Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the office of Pitt Surgicals, No. 10 Doctors Park.

The guest speaker will be Dr. Richard Taft. His topic will be on the new surgery center.

All members are asked to be present and guests are welcome.

Poll Belief In An Afterlife

NEW YORK (AP) — More college-educated Americans believe in life after death than do people with a high school education or less, and there are more believers in heaven than hell, says a new Gallup poll.

The poll, published Monday in the June issue of McCall's magazine, says two out of three people questioned expressed belief in some sort of afterlife.

Gallup called it the most comprehensive poll ever done on the subject. Of those polled, 71 percent believed in heaven and 53 percent in hell. Asked to choose among descriptions for the afterlife, two-thirds said it would be peaceful. Five percent said it would be boring.

Earned Degrees At Appalachian

BOONE — The following students were among those receiving degrees from Appalachian State University during commencement exercises held recently:

Greenville — Stephanie Gail Hall, Bonnie Lynn Lee and Donna Kay McLawhorn. Farmville — Stuart Burton James.

Winterville — Michael Terrance Phillips.

Hookerton — William Benjamin McLawhorn.

Snow Hill — Terri Lynn Wade.

Younger Women Being Treated

NEW YORK (AP) — Two out of three women in the United States being treated for alcoholism are under the age of 35, and the problem exists even among junior high school girls, a magazine survey says.

In an article published in its issue dated Tuesday, Redbook Magazine said it surveyed 11,000 women across the country who have sought help for problem drinking.

The magazine concluded women become intoxicated more easily than men because their bodies contain more fat and less fluid. Men receive a disproportionate amount of money spent to treat alcoholism, in part because the problem in women is often "masked and hidden," it said.

Pentagon Leak Results In Official Reprimand

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Pentagon official won't be fired but will be reprimanded for allegedly violating regulations on classified information, according to his attorney.

The attorney said Tuesday night that Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger also has dismissed a specific leaking charge against his client. There was no announcement from the Defense Department and a spokesman said he had nothing to say on the matter.

The charges against John C.F. Tillson, a decorated veteran of the Vietnam War, grew out of an alleged leak of information from a high-level Pentagon conference last January.

The attorney, James H. Heller, acknowledged that the penalty decided upon by Weinberger was much less severe than it might have been. But he said his client was innocent. Heller said Tillson has not yet decided whether to file a formal challenge to the letter of reprimand, which is to be placed in his personnel file for two years.

Tillson's lawyer said Weinberger cited Tillson's war record in deciding on the lesser punishment. That record includes two Silver Star medals for bravery while Tillson, a West Point graduate, was an Army captain in Vietnam.

Tillson is to be returned to his job as director of manpower management in the office of the assistant secretary of defense, from which he was transferred while his case was under investigation, Heller said.

Weinberger and Deputy Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci were said to have been angered when The Washington Post published a story including the gist of discussions at a meeting of the Defense Resources Board.

Three Named To Committee

Three persons were named to the executive committee of the Pitt County branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People at the branch's executive committee meeting Monday.

New executive committee members include public relations chairman Gloria Grimes, economic development chairman Ashley Fenner and regular membership chairman Dee-dee Morehead.

Erma Carr, a candidate for the Greenville Board of Education, spoke briefly, saying major problems facing the city school system are decreasing enrollment and decreasing funds.

Missing Children's Day To Be Nationally Observed May 25

May 25 has been designated as National Missing Children's Day by Child Find Inc., a national non-profit organization which serves as an international network for locating missing children.

Child Find aims to be a two-way communication system between searching parents and their missing children, its information director, Kristin Cole Brown, said. This, she said, is how Child Find works: Parents register their missing children. The child's photo is placed in Child Find's directory of missing children and in national print and broadcast media. Public service announcements and Child Find's school poster tell children how to contact Child Find.

Most finds are made when the missing children themselves call Child Find's toll-free line, 1-800-431-5005, or when concerned citizens call or write to identify the locations of stolen children. Child Find chose May 25 to bring national attention to the problem of missing children in recognition of the effort of the family of Etan Patz, a 6-year-old boy who vanished on his way to the school bus stop one and one-half blocks from his home May 25, 1979. There has been no trace of Etan since. The Patz family successfully lobbied for the introduction of a bill into Congress to become known as

"The Missing Children's Act."

Child Find has targeted four primary issues for Missing Children's Day:

- The creation of a national "census" of missing children. No publicly funded body has ever been allocated funds to collect data on missing children. Child Find will work with other missing children-related groups to develop a data-gathering process through which to assemble the most accurate statistics available.

- Passage of the Missing Children's Act sponsored by Rep. Paul Simon of Illinois and Sen. Senator Paula Hawkins of Florida.

- Introduction of child-safety programs in the schools teaching children how to avoid potential abduction situations.

Avers Hinckley Carried An Inner Rage

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — John W. Hinckley Jr., "burning with inner rage" and possibly influenced by tranquilizers, thought he had "no choice" but to fire on the president because the Secret Service had spotted his gun, a psychiatrist says.

Dr. David Michael Bear, testifying at Hinckley's trial Tuesday, also said the Colorado psychiatrist who treated the defendant before the March 30, 1981 shootings devised a "disastrous" plan of therapy for his patient.

Bear, who is returning to the witness stand today for cross-examination by government attorneys, concluded that Hinckley was too mentally ill to appreciate the wrongfulness of his conduct.

Hinckley has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity in the wounding of Reagan and three other men outside the Washington Hilton Hotel.

"There was no ability to plan, there was no ability to premeditate," the Harvard Medical School psychiatrist told the jury.

"Do I conclude he was logical and planning? My God, my sense of justice says absolutely not," he said.

That remark prompted U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker to inform Bear, "Your sense of justice is not sought here." The jury was out of the room at the time.

Bear said Hinckley told him during psychiatric interviews that he took four 5-milligram tablets of the tranquilizer Valium before leaving for the shooting scene.

Hinckley should not have been taking the drug at all, Bear said, because it makes psychotic people like Hinckley more aggressive.

One Injured In Accidents

One person was injured and an estimated $1,350 property damage resulted from three traffic mishaps investigated by Greenville police Tuesday.

Officers reported Jeffrey Lloyd Cooper, 24 of 1504A Fleming St. was injured when he walked into the side of a car driven by Betty Ruth Carmon of 307 Watauga Ave. about 9:45 p.m. on Fleming Street, 75 feet west of the Vanderbilt Street intersection.

Cooper's injuries were listed as minor and no damage resulted to the Carmon car.

Cars driven by Phyllis Spencer Cox of Route 6, Greenville, and Joseph Barnhill of 106 Raleigh Ave. collided about 7:50 a.m. at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Greenfield Boulevard, causing an estimated $400 damage to each of the two vehicles.

Police charged Barnhill with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of the incident.

Investigators reported a car driven by Florine Clark Everett of Robersonville collided with a railroad crossing gate at the Southern Railroad crossing on Greenville Boulevard near the 14th Street intersection about 4:40 p.m.

Damage was estimated at $250 to the car and $300 to the crossing barrier.

"John Hinckley was burning with inner rage," he said. "It's very possible that Valium released this rage."

At the Hilton, Hinckley was amazed he got so close to Reagan without the Secret Service stopping him, Bear said.

"Their eyes were on me. They saw the gun. Now I have no choice. I have to go forward and shoot," Bear said, recalling Hinckley's description of his thoughts.

Once Hinckley had emptied his .22-caliber pistol, he relaxed in a state of "steely calm," Bear said. At the time, the psychiatrist said Hinckley thought, "I'm relieved, it's over."

At the time of the shooting, Hinckley considered himself a failure because he had stalked former President Carter and was unable to kill him, Bear said. And he was also obsessed with actress Jodie Foster and griet-stricken over the murder of his idol, John Lennon.

Bear said the decision to allow Hinckley to remain on Valium was among several crucial mistakes made by Dr. John Hopper, the Evergreen, Colo., psychiatrist who treated the defendant from October 1980 through February 1981.

NEW OFFICER
CHARLESTON — Stephen Jude Lawler of Greenville, N.C., graduated from The Citadel during commencement ceremonies held recently and was commissioned as a second lieutenant in the U.S. Army. He is the son of Dr. and Mrs. D.L. Lawler, 109 Cheshire Drive, Greenville.

Hopper, who had been hired by Hinckley's wealthy parents, testified he believed Hinckley suffered from anxiety and was upset because he couldn't find a career.

Along with Hinckley's parents, Hopper devised a plan that set deadlines for the presidential assailant to get a job and live outside his family home.

"The plan of the therapy was just disastrous," Bear said. "I think the man (Hinckley) should have been in a hospital. It was an inappropriate time to cut him off from his family. This advice was an absolute calamity."

In addition, Bear said Hopper should have probed more deeply when Hinckley told him of his obsession with Ms. Foster.

The psychiatrist said "to the outside world" Hinckley would have looked normal. Even the law enforcement officers who arrested him could not have determined that Hinckley was suffering from a serious mental illness, he said.

"If Dr. Hopper, who was trained, sat with the man for five months and did not reach a correct diagnosis, would officers on the scene reach a correct diagnosis?" Bear asked.

The prosecution claims that officers' observations of Hinckley's acute memory and calm demeanor at the time of the shooting indicate he was of sound mind.

Said Bear: "This is not evidence I would use to reach state of mind conclusions."

Hinckley is charged in a 13-count indictment with attempting to assassinate the president and assault with intent to kill Reagan, White House Press Secretary James Brady, a Washington policeman and a Secret Service agent.

'Selective' As To 10 Commandments

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans believe in the Ten Commandments more than the people of most Western countries, a new survey suggests, but they accept some commandments more than others.

In a Gallup Organization study of changing values in the United States, Japan, South Africa and 12 Western European countries, a higher percentage of Americans than members of other nationalities said the commandments still apply fully to themselves.

But while nine Americans in 10 Americans feel the commandments against killing and stealing are applicable to themselves, fewer than six in 10 feel that way about keeping the Sabbath holy.

Here is how the commandments rate with Amer- icans:

- Thou shalt: 93 percent say it applies.
 - Not kill: 93 percent.
 - Honor thy mother and father: 90 percent.
 - Not bear false witness: 89 percent.
 - Not covet thy neighbor's goods: 88 percent.
 - Not covet thy neighbor's wife: 89 percent.
 - Not commit adultery: 87 percent.
 - Have no other gods before me: 79 percent.
 - Not take the Lord's name in vain: 68 percent.
 - Keep the Sabbath holy: 57 percent.

Stock And Reports

NEW YORK (AP) - Stock prices headed lower today, continuing their week-long decline.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 1.62 to 839.23 in the first half hour.

Losers took a 5-3 lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The market's recent retreat has been blamed on persistent high interest rates and doubts that a hoped-for economic recovery would materialize.

A new problem emerged this week with the disclosure that a small government securities firm, Drysdale Government Securities, couldn't pay $160 million in debts.

The firms' problems stirred controversy among Wall Street brokerage houses and banks dealing with Drysdale over who would have to cover the debts.

Shares of Chase Manhattan Corp., one company in the middle of the dispute, rose 1/4 to 48 1/2, today after falling 3/2 points Tuesday.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 4.47 to 840.85, bringing its loss over the past five sessions to 25.02 points.

Five stocks fell in price for every two that rose on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 48.97 million shares, up from 45.60 million the day before.

The NYSE's composite index fell 52 to 66.84.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off 1.89 at 273.81.

Rescued At North Pole

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) - Seven U.S. tourists scrambled to safety from an aircraft at the North Pole in time to watch the plane sink through the ice, an airline official says.

Steve Penikett, general manager of Kenn Borek Air, said Tuesday the stranded passengers and two crew members were rescued unharmed six hours after the accident last Friday.

The pilot, Rocky Parsons, was landing the Twin Otter on a smooth patch of ice at the pole when all three wheels broke through, Penikett said from his office in Calgary.

"He landed on a lead, which is a crack that has opened and refrozen, giving a smooth landing spot. We've been landing on them for years," Penikett said. "This one happened to be newly refrozen."

The plane began to sink slowly and the passengers evacuated with survival gear while the pilot radioed a base camp at Lake Hazen near the northern tip of Ellesmere Island. Six hours later another Twin Otter landed at the pole for the rescue and other planes were on the way.

Fourteen Americans were on the tour, operated by a travel company called Sobex in Los Angeles. The group flies to Lake Hazen and half go to the pole at a time.

The trip to the pole for the second group was canceled after the accident but the rest of the itinerary, including a visit to an Inuit community and a flight over the North Magnetic Pole, was kept.

The passengers, whose names were not released, were unavailable for immediate comment. The Canadian Department of Transport was investigating.

It is the seventh year that Kenn Borek Air has been flying the tours.

Planner Faryce Goode said the undeveloped tract was formerly used as a parking lot for the old fairgrounds. She said residential dwellings are located to the north of the property and there are also businesses in the area.

Ms. Goode said that a buffer might be needed between the R-6 and highway commercial zones.

Commissioners approved what Mac Carley, assistant city attorney, referred to as a technical amendment to Section 9-5-14 of the City Code relative to changing of street names. The amendment removes street name-changing from the subdivision ordinance and places it in the general code under public works.

The planning staff handed out copies of the administrative portion of the proposed zoning ordinance. Planning director Bobby Roberson said other sections of the new ordinance will be distributed in the coming months.

VOTING VIOLENCE MANILA, Philippines (AP) - Fourteen people - including four candidates - were killed and 13 others wounded in political violence connected with Philippine local elections, the military announced Tuesday.

Expects Student Loan Defaults To See Drop

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) - A North Carolina A&T State University official says she expects student loan defaults to drop to a level equal to the national average by the 1983-1984 school year after 1980-1981's efforts produced a 9 percent reduction.

Alberta Dalton, the school's director of financial aid, said this past year's reductions were the result of policy enforcement and the hiring of a professional collection agency.

The June 1981 figures - showing a 46 percent default rate - were made public last week during an audit of A&T's financial records, Ms. Dalton said.

Ms. Dalton's goal is to reduce defaults to 20 percent by next year and to 16 percent, about the same as the current national rate, by 1983-1984.

The default rate is a cumulative figure which includes loans made over a period of 20 years.

However, the drop is not indicative of students paying off their loans, but is the result of the school giving up efforts to collect on more than 2,000 old cases.

Those will be turned over to the U.S. Department of Education, causing a rapid decline in the default rate. A&T must first show proof that it has done everything possible to collect the loans, including court action for students who defaulted after 1978. Ms. Dalton said her office is preparing that proof.

"Once the Department of Education takes the cases, that brings your default rate down," she said.

In June 1981, 3,545 students who attended A&T were in default on $2.4 million in National Direct Student Loan funds. In 1980, June's default rate was 55 percent, with nearly 4,100 students in default on $2.1 million in loans.

The NDSL program provides government funds to individual colleges to establish their own revolving loan accounts, based on student needs. Students can borrow at 5 percent and repayment doesn't begin until after they leave school.

Because of its high default rate, A&T has received no federal contribution for its NDSL account since the 1976-77 school year. Funds are cut off to campuses with default rates of 25 percent or more.

Other Greensboro campuses haven't had as much trouble collecting on loans as A&T, one of 16 campuses in the University of North Carolina system. The University of North Carolina at Greensboro, another local UNC-member school, had a 1981 default rate of 6.65 percent.

Last year's default rate was 9.8 percent at Greensboro College; 7 percent at Guilford College; and 18 percent at Bennett College, all independent schools.

Unmowed Lawn Is Supported By Jury

CAMBRIDGE, Mass (AP) - The grass may not always be greener in Frank Paone's neighbor's yard, but it's taller - much taller, in fact - and a Middlesex Superior Court jury says it can stay that way.

The jury on Tuesday found Abul Sayied innocent of charges he violated the state's sanitary code by not cutting the grass or shrubs in his yard.

Sayied, a mathematician and physicist, called the trial a "gigantic waste of money and time. Sheer harassment."

He said grass was meant to grow naturally, and when cut, all kinds of chemicals are needed to maintain it.

Sayied was brought to court after Paone, his 72-year-old neighbor, complained to the city health board.

"You mean he can keep it that way?" asked Paone when he heard the jury's verdict. "He hasn't swept the outside of the place once or cut the grass in 14 years. His shrubs are growing above the second-story window."

The retired maintenance man, said he won't quit in his efforts to get Sayied to clean up his property.

"I keep my place up all the time and I'm old," he said. "He's a young man and he won't do a thing. All I want is for him to clean it up and make it presentable."

Cite Value In College-Closing

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) - The closing of up to 200 U.S. colleges by 1990 may provide valuable information on why some institutions fail, according to two University of Michigan researchers.

About 235 colleges and branch campuses have closed since 1960, yet there has been no systematic study of the trend, James L. Miller Jr. of the Center for the Study of Higher Education and J. Michael Erwin, project director at the Institute of Labor and Industrial Relations, said Tuesday, in a statement.

They urged a "a thorough, objective study of college closings" to guide decisions by colleges that are still functioning.

DEGREE AWARDED CHAPEL HILL - Jimmie W. Adcock received the doctor of medicine degree recently from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He is married to Terry Manning Adcock, formerly of 1303 Wright Road, Greenville.

Said Wilson: "He threw the ball well. I've seen him throw better, but he did a good job tonight. Over at North Pitt they hit the fast ball a lot. He threw his curve more tonight."

It was not only the Panthers' lone run of the night but the only one of two times a North Pitt runner made it past first. The only other time came in the fourth when Gay issued back-to-back walks to Trellis Moore and Greg Briley to lead off the inning.

Chris Strickland reached on an error by second baseman Lee Manning to start the inning and stole second — the first of eight steals for Ayden-Grifton. A sacrifice bunt by Bernard Ricciarelli moved Strickland to third.

ACC To Try Clock, 3-Point Field Goal

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. (AP) — The Atlantic Coast Conference voted Tuesday to try a 30-second shot clock in next season's basketball games along with a 3-point field goal for shots of 19 feet or longer.

The rules changes will have to be approved by the NCAA rules committee, but ACC Commissioner Bob James said there should be no problem with the one-season shot-clock trial.

James declined to reveal details of the voting, noting only that a two-thirds majority among those present is required for approval.

Conference school representatives also voted to recommend that the date at which basketball high school players can sign letters of intent be moved forward to Nov. 1 from April.

Propose that the January 1983 NCAA convention establish a $6,000-per-year salary for part-time football and basketball coaches.

Endorse a recent report by representatives from 14 colleges around the country calling for minimum academic standards for athletic recruits and stricter penalties for recruiting violations.

The clock will not be operated for the final four minutes of any game or of any overtime period.

Conference President Charles Taff of the University of Maryland said the change would speed up the game and bring "the return of more finesse to basketball."

Calls for a shot clock intensified after the slow-paced ACC championship game between North Carolina and Virginia last season.

Johnny Bench

Johnny Bench Former All-Star Doesn't Miss Action Behind Plate

By The Associated Press

Johnny Bench, the third baseman, has no envy of Johnny Stearns, the onetime premier catcher.

"John Stearns asked me that," said the veteran all-star slugger of the Cincinnati Reds, referring to the man who wears the mask for the New York Mets.

"First time I came to bat Monday night, Stearns asked me, 'John, do you ever regret giving up the mask and the pads?' I told him emphatically, 'No.'"

"I'm not sorry I started out as a catcher. I loved it when I was young, strong and full of pepper. But, if I'd had to remain behind the plate, I am convinced I couldn't have lasted another year."

As it is, the bull-shouldered Oklahoman, sporting a 32-inch waist and a new three-year contract ($900,000 per), is into his 16th season as a Red with a refreshed enthusiasm.

"People keep asking me why I didn't hang on and try for Al Lopez' record (1,818 games behind the plate)," he said. "I don't need that record. If they had tried to make me do it, I would have turned to something else."

"Seventeen hundred games over 13 years. That's enough."

In a career that makes him a cinch for almost automatic induction into baseball's Hall of Fame, Bench caught 1,738 games, 180 short of Lopez' record and fourth in the all-time list. He left a fielding percentage of .991, less than five points off the National League record set by Johnny Edwards and just two back of Bill Freehan's all-time major league mark.

But statistics fail to record the pain and suffering Bench had to undergo as one of the game's most aggressive and hardest hitting catchers.

"I've had my left foot broken six times and my right foot five times," he said. "I had my little finger broken once while batting. After a game, my legs were so stiff that it would take me several minutes to get comfortable on a plane."

"The worst shot I ever took was in a game against the Giants in 1975. Gary Matthews was storming home on a hit to left field. (Pete) Rose threw short and the ball took two bounces. I was a sitting duck for Matthews who smashed into me like an army tank, wrenching my forearm and shoulder."

"The pain was almost unbearable. But I kept on catching. Every day I'd get a shot of cortizone. At night, I'd try to lie down in bed, and I would shoot straight up. It was like getting hit by a hammer."

"A few years later I got hit by a pitched ball and fell flat on my face. I went to the hospital for X-rays. The doctor said the X-rays showed five old breaks in my ankle but nothing new. I still had to walk on crutches."

Bench said he never regretted choosing what have been called the "tools of ignorance."

"In the first place, I don't think that term is relative any more," he said. "Sure, years ago, people thought it was crazy for a guy to want to put on that equipment. He was the fat guy who couldn't run, the last chosen on any team."

"Yogi Berra helped change that. Some looked upon him as a buffoon. But he turned out to be dumb like a fox. With all those World Series checks and rings, he became an institution. They even named a comic strip character after him."

"And I may have helped change the image. 'Actually, it's a fascinating position. You are in the middle of everything. There are so many different ways you can get satisfaction. You can call a good game. That leaves you feeling good. You can throw runners out. You can block runners from scoring. And you can hit.'"

"No other position offers so many possibilities. But I paid my dues."

Used at first base for a period, Bench became the Reds' regular third baseman this year after playing 34 games there experimentally in 1981.

"I'm getting there," he said. "It's a big change for me. You move forward on the ball instead of laterally and you have to stay on your toes. I've never been known for my speed."

"I almost got killed last week in a game in St. Louis. Gene Tenace hit a cannon shot which hit the dirt and grazed my left ear. If it had caught me flush, it would have taken my head off."

Vikings Defeat Havelock, 10-7

HOLLYWOOD — Chris Buck and Doug McRoy each drove in two runs as D.H. Conley closed out the year with a 10-7 victory over Havelock Tuesday in a Coastal Conference baseball game.

Conley used a decoy steal with runners on second and third to take a 1-0 lead in the first only to have Havelock counter with two runs in the top of the second.

But, the Vikings came back with four runs in the bottom of the inning to take a lead they never lost.

Greg Toler singled and Jimmy Kaler and Keith Mills walked to load the bases. Wesley Smith then singled home Toler and Buck followed with a single to score Kaler and Mills.

Smith subsequently scored on a sacrifice fly to leftfield by Dixon Page to make it 5-2.

Havelock came back with two runs in the top of the fourth but Conley answered with three runs in the bottom of the inning. Smith and Buck singled and Page walked to load the bases.

Smith then scored on a sacrifice fly by Jeff Cox and McRoy followed with a double to score Steve Mills, who was running for Buck, and Page to make it 8-4.

The Vikings scored a run in the fifth to up the lead to 9-4 before the Rams scored three runs in the sixth. DHC scored its final run in the bottom of the sixth.

Smith and McRoy were both two for three for DHC. Buck was two for four. Mike Green was two for three for Havelock. Rob Rice had a triple for the Rams.

ACC Officials Pleased With Vote

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. (AP) — Atlantic Coast Conference coaches and officials say they are pleased with the decision to adopt a 30-second shot clock and a three-point field goal for the 1982-1983 conference basketball season.

ACC Commissioner Bob James said the proposals were approved by officials as the league's six-day business meeting ended Tuesday.

Although James would not give a vote count, he said conference rules required at least six affirmative votes for passage. He also said the proposals were a package deal.

"If the NCAA Rules Committee does not accept our changes in toto, we will not approve any change at all," James said.

Most surprising was the 19-foot distance set for the three-point field goal. Previously, the least distance used for the shot was 21 feet.

The shot clock is also the shortest in college basketball, with the Sun Belt Conference using a 45-second timer.

"The shot clock will run until the last four minutes of the game," James said. "It will be in effect in overtime until the last four minutes."

James said a 1981 ACC survey showed that 99 percent of the shots taken were sent goalward within 20 seconds.

"It was felt the clock won't affect the game that drastically," he said. "But we felt the two changes together are sensible at this time."

James said the ACC schools would not use the new rules in non-conference games without the consent of opposing teams.

"I'm glad to hear it," said Maryland coach Lefty Driesell of the changes. "It will keep people from jamming back in a zone. The 19-foot shot will help the little guy, the outside jump shooter."

Driesell said he wanted to keep the clock on the entire game, but said "this is fine, too."

Driesell said the 30-second clock was chosen over the 45-second clock because it was felt teams would hold the ball for 30 seconds and then run a play in the final 15 seconds.

"The little guy will play a greater role," said Clemson coach Bill Foster. "The first thing I thought of was (Duke's) Chip Engelland's stock goes up immediately."

"These changes will be good for the players and they're good for the fans," Foster said. "We felt the equalization of talent has changed things. We can all recruit."

"For me personally, it's not good where my program is right now," said Georgia Tech coach Bobby Cremins of the shot clock. "It's definitely terrible from Georgia Tech's standpoint at this time. But what's more important: me this season or the game of basketball over the long haul?"

76ers Go For Berth In NBA Championship Tonight

BOSTON (AP) — The sizzling Philadelphia 76ers can clinch their third berth in the National Basketball Association title round in six years tonight by continuing their domination of the out-of-sync Boston Celtics.

Only 10 days ago, that prospect seemed extremely unlikely. Boston handed the 76ers their worst playoff loss ever, 121-81, on May 9. But Philadelphia bounced back with three straight victories and is a hot team going into the fifth game of the best-of-seven Eastern Conference final.

Boston, which lost playmaker Nate Archibald for the series with a dislocated shoulder in a 99-97 third-game loss, has been less organized than it was in compiling the league's best record, 63-19.

Still, the 76ers know all too well that a 3-1 lead doesn't guarantee another shot at the Los Angeles Lakers, who beat them in the 1980 final round and have won this year's Western Conference championship.

"We have a mission, a purpose," said forward Mike Bantom, who joined the 76ers this season. "It's not to win just one game. It's to win four; 3-1 does not win this series."

It didn't last year, when Philadelphia also went out to a 3-1 lead over Boston in the Eastern Conference final, then blew the last three games in the final minutes by a total of five points.

"Last year we probably had a feeling that the series was over and there would be no way they would be able to come back," said Philadelphia guard Lionel Hollins. "We learned from that. We learned that it's a seven-game series."

That comeback also taught the Celtics a lesson that could boost their confidence as they struggle to stay alive in their battle for the club's 15th championship and second in a row.

Although it's been done only four times, the Celtics feel they can win after trailing 3-1 because they already have accomplished it.

"Being down 3-1 last year is no different than this year other than they know we can do it. We know we can do it," said Boston forward Larry Bird. "It was tough last year. You can't get any harder games than the last three we played."

Last season, Boston trailed Philadelphia by six points with 1:51 left in the fifth game, was tied with 40 seconds left in the sixth, and was behind by nine with 5:23 to go in the seventh.

"I don't think it can be any tougher than last year," said Celtic guard M.L. Carr. "That was unreal to do that."

However, Boston hasn't been playing as well as it did in the first four games against the 76ers last year. It also will be without Archibald, who had 27 points and 19 assists in the first two games.

"Philadelphia is making everything happen, and we're not doing anything," Bird said. "That can switch around. We know we're capable of winning the championship."

The 76ers last won the NBA title in 1966-67. Ten years later, they lost in the final round to Portland.

Boston's bid to become the first NBA team since the 1967-68 and 1968-69 Celtics to win consecutive championships hinges on its ability to shut down Andrew Toney and to regain its own offensive rhythm.

Toney's average of 25 points per game leads all scorers in the series. He was virtually unstoppable in pouring in 39 points in Sunday's 119-94 win at Philadelphia that put the 76ers up 3-1.

"If we don't find some means to contain Toney, then I don't think that we can win," said Boston forward Cedric Maxwell, the most valuable player of last year's playoffs.

"I don't think there's a legal way in which you can stop him," said Philadelphia's Julius Erving, who has averaged 17 points during the series. "He's able to handle the ball and get into his rhythm. His wrists are so strong that he's capable of getting his shot off against any type of pressure."

With Archibald out, Boston has had trouble adjusting to Gerald Henderson as the starting playmaker.

"We're not cohesive on offense at all," said Henderson, who prefers to stay outside and stick to set plays more than Archibald, who likes to penetrate to the basket and create opportunities.

"If our outside shots were falling,"

Bird said, Philadelphia's double-teaming of Boston big men Maxwell, Robert Parish and Kevin McHale wouldn't be a problem. "Kevin, Max and Robert can start scoring a lot easier in there because somebody's got to start guarding their man. They can't be playing a zone all night long."

Boston didn't lose three consecutive games during the regular season and never has lost four straight in Bill Fitch's three years as coach. The Celtics had the NBA's best home record this season, 35-6, but Philadelphia's 26-15 road mark is worse than only Boston and Los Angeles.

If Boston wins tonight, Game Six will be Friday night in Philadelphia. A seventh game, if necessary, would be here Sunday.

If the 76ers win tonight, their championship series against Los Angeles will begin Sunday in Philadelphia.

Rams Pound SWE, 15-4

PINETOPS — Greene Central scored six times in the second inning and romped to a 15-4 baseball victory over SouthWest Edgecombe in the Eastern Carolina Conference yesterday.

The win closed out the season for the Rams, who finish 13-10 overall and 7-5 in league play.

SouthWest grabbed the initial lead in the game, scoring once in the bottom of the first. With two away, Harold, Hobgood singled and stole second. He moved up on a passed ball then scored on a wild pitch for the 1-0 lead.

But that lead quickly evaporated as Greene Central pushed over six runs in the second. After one out, James Mayo walked and Richard Chase was hit by a pitch. John Mayo followed with a double, driving in two runs. Donald Warren singled and Elmer Dixon also doubled, driving in two more. Tony Goff followed reaching on an error, and — you guessed it — Chris Ginn hit a two-run double.

Greene Central went on to score seven in the third and one each in the fourth and fifth, the last on a solo homer by Goff.

SouthWest added three more in the third.

Mayo led the Ram hitting with four, including two doubles and a triple, while Ginn had three, one a double. Goff and Warren each had two for the Rams.

SouthWest was led by Hobgood with three, one a triple, and Hank Farmer, with two.

SouthWest ends the season with a 2-10 league record and a 3-18 overall mark.

Judge's Ruling Expected Soon On Oakland Move

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A federal judge says he expects to rule by the middle of next week on whether to grant an injunction that would allow the Oakland Raiders to move to Los Angeles.

U.S. District Judge Harry Pregerson must grant the injunction before the team can move even though a jury decided the the National Football League had violated the nation's antitrust laws in refusing to allow the team's transfer in 1980. An injunction is necessary to enforce the jury's decision.

The NFL asked for a stay of the injunction on Friday, and Pregerson said Tuesday he needed more time to review briefs on the issue.

"We had assumed they would ask for a stay in the 9th Circuit Court of Appeal. It was a last minute maneuver by the NFL," said Raiders attorney Joseph L. Alioto.

Attorney Maxwell Blecher of the Los Angeles Coliseum argued that the judge must allow the team to move.

"If you grant a stay, you are sending vibrations to the court of appeals that you don't agree with the jury."

Raiders attorneys said the team is ready to move to Los Angeles this season if "they didn't have the threat of a stay hanging over their heads."

But the NFL argued that refusal of a stay would "disrupt the status quo until a final decision on the legality is resolved."

Bears Edge Lakers, 7-5

SWAN QUARTER — Bear Grass High School closed out the 1982 baseball season with a 7-5 Tobacco Belt Conference victory over Mattamuskeet High School last night.

The Bears jumped ahead in the top of the first. Mark Taylor walked, stole up and scored on a sacrifice fly by Jody Peaks.

Mattamuskeet came back with two in the bottom of the inning on a homer by Harris, but the Bears regained the lead with four in the third, taking a 5-2 lead. Bob Peele provided some of the punch in the inning with a three-run homer.

The Lakers came back with one in the bottom of the third and another in the fifth to close within 5-4.

Then, in the sixth, the Bears scored twice to wrap it up. Greg Harrison singled and Tony Leggett and Darius Cratt both walked, loading the bases. Jay Lilly walked, scoring Harrison, but Leggett was then thrown out trying to advance. Peele then singled to score Cratt.

The Lakers added one more run in the bottom of the inning, but their rally fell short. Peele and Harrison led the Bear Grass hitting with two each, while Dave Cratt and Lawrence Watson each had doubles. Harris had three hits to lead the Lakers.

Guerrero HR Fells Cubs

By The Associated Press
One thing about Pedro Guerrero: He doesn't think small.

"I wasn't thinking single or double," the Los Angeles Dodger outfielder said about his trip to the plate Tuesday night leading off the bottom of the ninth inning against the Chicago Cubs. "I was thinking home run."

Guerrero translated his thoughts into action, belting a 3-1 pitch from Bill Campbell into the center field seats at Dodger Stadium.

The result was a dramatic 2-1 victory for the Dodgers over Chicago that saved some embarrassment for reliever Tom Niedenfuer, who had given up the Cubs' tying run in the top of the ninth.

"I knew I would hit one," said the confident right fielder who has delivered the long ball on eight other occasions this season for the defending world champions. "You've got to feel good after winning a game like that. (Manager Tom) Lasorda told me to get on base. But as I walked to the plate, I wasn't just thinking about getting on base."

He would have preferred to hit with a man in scoring position, of course.

"I love to hit with men on base, I'm a better hitter," said Guerrero, who has driven in 23 runs, second among the Dodgers.

Guerrero's blast off Campbell, 0-2, made a winner of Niedenfuer, 1-1. The Cubs had tied game in the top of the ninth when Keith Moreland and Leon Durham hit one-out singles to chase Dodger starter Bob Welch and pinch-runner Gary Woods scored on Larry Bowa's single off Niedenfuer.

Bill Russell's sacrifice fly in the seventh inning had given Welch a 1-0 lead. Welch struck out nine, his high for the season, before Niedenfuer came on in the ninth.

Cardinals 2, Padres 0
Bob Forsch pitched a five-hitter and singled home a run and Gene Tenace blasted a homer as St. Louis blanked San Diego.

Forsch, 5-0, drove in the Cardinals' second run with a two-out single in the seventh after Tenace had walloped his homer leading off the inning. The right-hander walked one and struck out two.

John Curtis, 2-2, pitched eight innings for San Diego, allowing seven hits, and was locked in a scoreless duel with Forsch until Tenace slammed a 3-2 pitch for his third homer of the season.

Forsch had not won since beating Houston 5-4 on April 29, failing to get a decision in his last three starts. His last shut-out came in 1979.

"Tonight I felt comfortable and when they did hit the ball the infield made some great plays," Forsch added. "One time out doesn't mean I'm back in the groove, but I'm throwing the ball real well."

Mets 2, Reds 4
Gary Rajsich hit a three-run homer, the first of his major league career in a four-run fifth inning, as New York defeated Cincinnati.

Randy Jones, 5-2, was the winner with relief help in the eighth when Neil Allen, who gained his 10th save, Cincinnati starter Bruce Berenyi, 4-2, lasted five innings and gave up all the Mets' runs.

Jones walked to start the New York fifth, Mookie Wilson singled and Wally Backman beat out a bunt to load the bases. Rusty Staub's sacrifice fly scored Jones to give the Mets a 4-1 lead and Rajsich then hit Berenyi's first pitch over the right field wall at Shea Stadium.

"The first time up Berenyi threw me all fastballs," Rajsich said. "The next time he made me look bad on three curveballs, and I struck out. I saw Berenyi was throwing the slider at me the third time, and I just stayed back and waited for the pitch. It was fastball all the way, and I just connected."

Braves 6, Expos 4
Bob Horner and Chris Chambliss hit successive home runs in the fifth inning to send Atlanta over Montreal. The Braves trailed 2-1 before Horner opened the sixth with a game-tying homer off Expos starter Bill Gullickson, 2-3. Chambliss followed with another homer.

The Braves then sewed it up with three runs in the seventh. Dale Murphy brought home one run with a single. A throwing error by left fielder Terry Francona allowed another to score, and Murphy eventually scored the third run of the inning on Chambliss' sacrifice fly.

Phil Niekro, 2-0, struck out four and walked four before needing Gene Garber's relief help in the eighth.

Astros 2, Phillies 1
Alan Ashby's two-out single in the 12th inning scored pinch-runner Scott Loucks from third base to lead Houston over Philadelphia.

Ray Knight, who earlier extended his batting streak to 15 games, opened the 12th with a double off reliever Ed Farmer, 1-2. After Jose Cruz fled out, Loucks, running for Knight, advanced to third on an infield out by Joe Pittman.

The Phillies elected to walk hot-hitting Phil Garner, who had hit in 14 of his last 16 games, to face Ashby. Ashby, who snapped an 0-for-17 slump with two hits Monday night, then spoiled the strategy by lining a single to center.

Giants 2, Pirates 1
Rookie Bill Laskey pitched a four-hitter and batterymate Bob Brenly belted three hits and scored twice as San Francisco ended a four-game losing streak by beating Pittsburgh.

Laskey, 3-2, allowed singles in the first, third and eighth innings before giving up Jason Thompson's 11th home run with two out in the ninth. He retired 12 straight batters between the fourth and eighth, and finished with seven strikeouts and two walks.

The Giants totaled eight hits off Pittsburgh starter John Candelaria, 0-2, who pitched seven innings.

A QUIET GIVER

HOUSTON (AP) — Calvin Murphy, the crack guard of the Houston rockets, believes actions speak louder than words, doubly so in the case of his big teammate, center Moses Malone.

Murphy recalled the time Malone donated $3,000 to a baton-twirling group he heads. "He came up to me, stuck a wad of money in my hands and said, 'That's for the kids,'" Murphy said. "I tried to get his OK to make the contribution public, but he wouldn't let me. Doesn't that say something about the kind of a guy Moses is?"

To The Editor:

A while back I criticized The Reflector for its failure to have covered a perfect game pitched by a Greenville Rose high school jayvee. I must say that since then the Reflector's coverage has tremendously improved. Woody and Rick have been as good as any reporters in the state that I know of. Congratulations.

The Rose High varsity baseball team is 20-0 as of (this writing). What a fantastic achievement. What a masterful job by Ronald Vincent and his very talented (and deep) players. We had a crowd of 1,700 at Guy Smith the last time were were here in the state playoffs. This year, if we play there, we ought to triple that number present, at least.

Our team is excellent and these boys deserve our presence and support.

Let me say a word about our seniors. We will miss Roger Williams with his great finesse, skill in fundamentals, bat and leadership. We'll miss Gordon Douglas' fastball, fielding and overall talent; Bill Kittrell's fielding and bat will be gone. Mont Carter's great bat, baserunning, and pitch selection will be lost, and the glue that holds the team together, Sammy Hodges, who is solid in every area of the game. Crowell Pope, an extremely hard worker and a hard nose, will be gone. Keith Phillips, a winner all the way, will be gone. Last but not least, a great all around athlete with great intensity and savvy, Tom Buie. What a great bunch of young men and great athletes. We in Greenville are extremely proud of all of them, not just the seniors.

The road to the State 4-A championship can be very rough. (I understand that Richmond County is 20-0.) But, the Rampants can take it. Let's all help them by our support.

Madlock Says Comments True

PITTSBURGH (AP) — scout who discovered Hall of Famer Roberto Clemente, said Pittsburgh fans won't come out if there are too many blacks on the National Baseball League team.

"We're going to have to trade for some whites," Haak said. "I'd say you have to have about four whites starting."

Haak said the Class AAA farm club at Portland, Ore., where the Pirates played an exhibition game Monday night, is overloaded with black and Latin American players, some of whom may have to be traded to make room for more whites on the major league team. Eleven of the 25 players on Pittsburgh's major league roster are white.

Galbreath, a businessman in Columbus, Ohio, said he couldn't believe Haak would make such statements. Galbreath said Haak's remarks did not reflect his own views or those of his son, Dan Galbreath, the Pirates' president.

"That's not the attitude of myself or my son or the ball club. I assure you of that," Galbreath told WBNS-TV.

"In fact, the question I don't think has ever come up in our minds here between Dan and myself, and I'm just as disappointed as the devil that Howie, being the fine scout he's been over the years, would make a statement like that," Galbreath said.

Galbreath said he was so shocked by the remarks that he wasn't prepared to make any comment on what might be done about them.

Madlock told The Pittsburgh Post-Gazette that Haak's remarks had some basis in fact.

"Now when the Pirates call up a white player from the minors, there might be a black player who will feel he wasn't called up because he is black," Madlock said.

Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn a strong statement Tuesday rejecting Haak's statements.

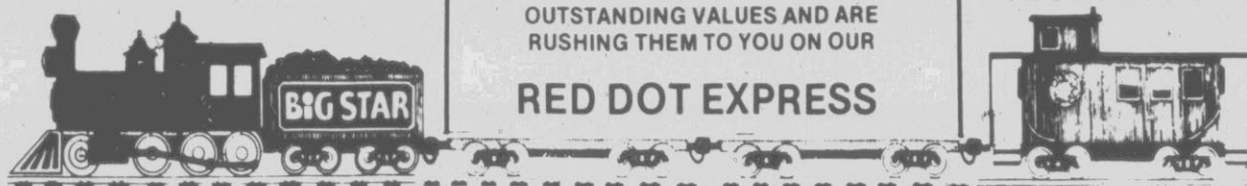

"In baseball, color or nationality has nothing to do with a player's ability to succeed," Kuhn told the Post-Gazette. "It is a man's talent which determines whether he should be playing — that and nothing more."

Nigerian Sangodeyi Hoping Next Stop Is NBA

NEW YORK (AP) — He didn't get the publicity that surrounded James Worthy of national champion North Carolina. He's not an All American like DePaul's Terry Cummings or Quintin Dailey of San Francisco. Yommy Sangodeyi of Sam Houston State, though, does have the same career ambition. He wants to play in the National Basketball Association next season.

Sangodeyi, a 24-year-old, 6-foot-9 center from Nigeria, Worthy, Cummings and Dailey were among a dozen players who decided to end their collegiate careers early and seek professional status, the NBA announced Tuesday.

Eleven of the 12 are juniors, while Sangodeyi is a freshman.

Other players who also filed letters of intent to the NBA office postmarked prior to the Saturday, May 15th deadline were: John Bagley of Boston College; Ollie Johnson of Washington State; Clark Kellogg of Ohio State; Cliff Levingston of Wichita State; Michael McDuffen of Murray State; LaSalle Thompson of Texas; Dominique Wilkins of Georgia and Rob Williams of Houston.

"Frankly, we're surprised he (Sangodeyi) declared," said Rick Campbell, Sam Houston's sports information director. "He's got a lot of raw, natural talent. He's strong and agile, but he plays like a freshman, good one game, bad the next."

Sangodeyi, who played for the Nigerian Olympic team, averaged 11.9 points per game and 4.6 rebounds in helping Sam Houston State to a 22-9 record. He was named the Lone Star Conference Freshman of the Year.

"We thought he would stay in school at least one more year," said Campbell, who added that Sam Houston didn't recruit Sangodeyi, who he said is a cousin of Houston freshman center Akeem Abdul Olajuwon.

"They played together in Nigeria and since we're only 70 miles from Houston he came here."

Sam Houston, an NAIA member, will be playing NCAA Division II basketball next year. Sangodeyi will be trying to make a bigger jump.

The NBA draft will be held June 29 in New York with the team to get the first pick to be determined Thursday at noon EDT. A coin flip between the Los Angeles Lakers, who own Cleveland's No.1 pick, and the San Diego Clippers will determine which gets to choose first from a mediocre crop of seniors and a bumper crop of underclass eligibles.

Worthy, a 6-9 second team All-American, could be to first underclassmen picked. He scored a career-high 28 points when North Carolina beat Georgetown, D.C. 63-6 for the NCAA title.

Cummings, 6-10, averaged 12 rebounds and over 20 points per game for DePaul, while Dailey was the nation's fifth leading scorer at 25.2.

Bagley, who had a 21.1 point per game average — the same as Williams — helped Boston College to the finals of the Mideast Regional. Thompson was the nation's leading rebounder with a 13.5 average. Wilkins, 6-7, led Georgia in scoring. Kellogg averaged 10 rebounds a game, while Levingston, 6-8, decided to make a bid for the pro after Wichita State was placed on three years probation by the NCAA for recruiting violations.

Virginia's Ralph Sampson, college basketball's Player of the Year last season, for the third year in a row passed up an opportunity to go for early entry in the pros.

Salem Methodist Captures P-P

Salem Methodist, behind Ray Taft's 66, came in first in Putt-Putt Church League action last night.

Salem's 288 total put the team on top of the standings for the opening week. Salem is 9-0.

There was a close match for the next few positions as Faith Pentecostal (8-1) shot 300 for Farmville Presbyterian's (7-2) 3-1 and Arthur Christian's (6-3) 303. They were led by Lynn Cherry, 70; Scott Lewis 67; and Lanny Morris, 70, respectively.

Last year's champ, Hopewell Pentecostal (5-4) could finish no better than fifth with a 327, six strokes ahead of Gum Swamp Free Will Baptist (4-5) and 13 strokes ahead of First Wesleyan (3-6). This trio was led by Danny Pollard, 68; Greg Buck, 75; and Mike Roberts, 75, respectively.

First Baptist (2-7) of Ayden, Falkland Church of God (1-8) and Gloria Day Lutheran (0-9) played in the league for the first time. They were led by Fain Worthington, 81; Gordon Braxton, 87, and Trena Stallings, 108, respectively.

Valentine Out For Replay At Atlanta

ATLANTA (AP) — Tommy Valentine fought Tom Watson down to the third hole of a sudden-death playoff to lose the 1981 Atlanta Classic golf tournament, but "last year seems like a million years ago," says the Georgia golfer.

Valentine, who hails from nearby Gainesville, Ga., says he'd like nothing more than an instant replay of his 1981 performance, but he's not sure he can deliver when play starts Thursday in the $300,000 event over 6,945-yard, par-72 Atlanta Country Club course.

"There really isn't any carryover," he said Tuesday. "This is still the toughest tournament for me to play in because it's close to home. It's great to play well in front of these fans but gosh awful to play bad. I've done both, and it just adds to the pressure."

Although he lost last year, the event boosted Valentine into a higher echelon of pro golf. He won $97,323 and for the first time made the top 60 list.

"For the first time in my life, I was considered a success. I believed it and others did, too. It has made playing the tour easier and a hell of a lot more fun. You don't have to worry about getting sponsor exemptions or just making the cut so you could play the next week," he said.

"Now, there's the luxury of being able to plan a schedule, play where you want to and rest when you want to," he added.

The golfer says he still has not reached the "upper echelon, not up there with Watson, (Jerry) Pate and some of those guys."

After his close call at Atlanta, he led another event in Abilene, Texas, until late in the final round, when he shot back-to-back double bogeys at 10 and 11 to wind up three strokes behind Tom Weiskopf.

In this year's Heritage, he led at the midway point but ballooned with a 79 and 77 on the final two rounds when the weather turned bad, finishing tied at 45th place. He's tied for 15th at New Orleans, tied for fifth at Houston and was 34th last week at the Colonial.

"Winning will come, I believe that," he said, "and I believe it probably will come when I least expect it. I've got to learn to handle my game in stressful situations, which isn't easy when you're trying so hard."

"It seems I never play well until this time of year, but I don't know how I'll do this week. I don't have a lot of confidence in my swing right now — the ball could go anywhere," he said. "I wish I could offer an instant replay of last year, and maybe it will work out that way, but I don't feel it right now."

Rampants Roll...

Tommy Walston hit a sacrifice fly, scoring Logan, and Jones advanced when the ball got past Evans on the relay. A passed ball moved him to third, and he scored when the throw-down bounced past third.

"We were real aggressive tonight," Vincent said. "I hope some of it is going to carry over into the playoffs."

Those playoffs are scheduled to begin next week. Rose, now 21-0 overall and 13-0 in the conference, winds up the regular season on Thursday, hosting Northeastern at 4 p.m. in Guy Smith Stadium.

The Rampants then open the 4-A State Playoffs by hosting Raleigh Millbrook, the Cap-Eight runner-up, on Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at Guy Smith.

Hunt falls off to 13-8 on the year and 5-8 in the league.

ciarelli's single. Gay then singled and Harris, in for Gay, stole second to give A-G runners at second and third.

Locust's sacrifice fly to left scored Ricciarelli and Harris came home on a twisting pop-up to shallow rightfield by Coley that fell in for a double and A-G led, 7-0. A-G's final run came in the fourth. With one gone, Gay singled and Harris, in once more for Gay, stole second. Locust then singled home Harris to make it 8-1.

Ayden-Grifton travels to Roanoke today for its season finale.

Bloodworth Is Announced Dept. Head

ECU News Bureau
William Andrew Bloodworth Jr., a member of the East Carolina University English faculty since 1972, will become chairperson of the department later this year.

Dr. Bloodworth, 39, succeeds Dr. W. Erwin Hester, who is resigning after serving for the past 14 years. His appointment will become official at the beginning of fall semester.

DR. Wm. BLOODWORTH

Announcing the appointment, Dr. Angelo Volpe, dean of the ECU College of Arts and Sciences, commented, "I am delighted that Dr. Bloodworth has accepted this important position. He brings a wealth of experience to the leadership of the English department, and I am eagerly looking forward to working with him."

"I would like to thank Dr. Erwin Hester for bringing 14 years of fine and dedicated leadership to the students and faculty of the department of English," he added. "It has been a pleasure to work with him and I wish him the very best as he resumes teaching and research on a full-time basis."

A specialist in American literature with research interests in post-Civil War American fiction, the literature of the American West and popular culture, Bloodworth has degrees from Texas Lutheran College, Ladar University and the University of Texas. He is a native of San Antonio, Texas.

Before joining the ECU faculty as an assistant professor, Bloodworth taught in Texas public schools and at the University of Texas. He was promoted to associate professor in 1977, having served as assistant to the English chairperson since 1974. With the beginning of fall semester, he assumes the rank of professor.

Among Bloodworth's numerous activities in campus service have been chairing the ECU Planning Commission's Subcommittee on Institutional Support and campus-wide Continuing Education Committee.

His civic activities include presidency of the Sadie Sautler Elementary School Parent-Teacher Association and the Greenville City-Wide P.T.A. Council.

Bloodworth's wife, the former Julia Rankin of Beaumont, Texas, is a staff member in the ECU Student Supply Store. The Bloodworths are the parents of two children.

He also won the Triangle Communications Award, a plaque presented by the Triangle Communication center for Outstanding Research.

Williams is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Williams of Farmville.

 Today's Cryptoquip clue: J equals L

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

TEACH AN OLD DOG NEW TRICKS.

Any good hot dog can cut the mustard in a bun. But when you want to cook up something really special and different, there's just no substitute for good old Luter's Original Old-Fashioned Hot Dogs.

- CREOLE WIENERS
- 8 slices bacon, diced
 - 3 cups minced onion
 - 1 can (16 oz.) tomatoes
 - 3/4 teaspoon salt
 - 1/8 teaspoon pepper
 - 1 lb. Luter's hot dogs

Here's a main course that serves six with a flavor that says "barbecue." Fry the bacon and onion in a large skillet until the bacon is crisp and the onion is tender. Drain all but two tablespoons bacon drippings from skillet. Stir in tomatoes, salt and pepper, heat to boiling, reduce heat and simmer 15 minutes, stirring occasionally. Add hot dogs, cover and simmer for 15 minutes.

- SWEET AND SOUR HOT DOGS
- 10 oz. currant jelly
 - 10 oz. ketchup
 - 8 oz. Dijon mustard
 - 2 lbs. Luter's hot dogs

For a tangy hors d'oeuvre that serves 30, start by cutting the hot dogs into bite-size pieces. Separately, heat the jelly, mustard and ketchup until the jelly melts. Add hot dogs, heat for 20 minutes, garnish with pineapple chunks and serve in a chafing dish. One word of caution: If you settle for anything less than Luter's Original Old-Fashioned Hot Dogs, just remember, you'll have those 30 guests to answer to.

The bidding:
 South West North East
 1. ♦ Pass 1 NT Pass
 3 ♣ Pass 4 ♦ Pass
 5 ♠ Pass Pass Pass
 Opening lead: Jack of ♠.

Sometimes, the same suit combination can be tackled in different ways. How would you handle the club suit on this hand?

After he had limited his holding with his one no trump response, North felt that his fine support for both of his partner's suits merited a jump preference. South took heed of the fact that he could not expect more than nine to ten points in his partner's hand and wisely settled for game.

West led the jack of hearts. Since he would surely have to lose a trick in each major suit, the fate of the contract hinged on declarer being able to avoid losing a club trick. Obviously, if the suit were to split 3-3, there would be no problem, but since the odds favored a 4-2 division, the fourth club could present a problem.

One way to manage the suit is to draw two rounds of trumps and then play off three rounds of clubs. However, it is unlikely that the hand that is short in clubs would also have only two trumps. Therefore, that line must be combined with another possibility — that the hand short in clubs might have to waste a trump by ruffing "on air" instead of trumping a high club.

That can be accomplished only if East is the defender who is short in clubs. With the king of hearts in dummy and cash the ace-king of diamonds. Now the clubs must be handled with care. Cash the ace and king of clubs and lead a club toward the queen. If East does not ruff, win the queen and ruff your fourth club with dummy's high trump, and you make your contract.

But it does help East to ruff the club, for now you follow with your low club and East has ruffed your loser.

'Soldier Girls' Is No Laughing Matter

By FRED ROTHENBERG
 AP Television Writer
 NEW YORK (AP) — Boot camp is supposed to make men out of boys. But what happens when the military recruits are girls, who began life playing with dolls and not tin soldiers? "Soldier Girls," on PBS tonight, is an intimate look at the painful personal moments and the public humiliations of a platoon of women volunteers taking basic training at Fort Gordon, Ga.

In particular, the cameras probe behind the scenes with four recruits, who are seen commiserating about their ordeals, comforting each other and doing whatever it takes to survive the kind of harsh conditions that were laughing matters in the movie "Private Benjamin."

Although this documentary has its comic moments, it generally concludes that basic training is so dehumanizing that one's sex is irrelevant.

After watching sergeants from "Charlie Company" physically and mentally torment recruits, the realization is that these motivational techniques aren't used in a discriminatory fashion. Trainees may go in as boys and girls, but everybody who makes it comes out a drab-green soldier.

Except for more tears and lesser physical prowess, there's very little feminine about the recruits in "Soldier Girls." The strongest scenes counterattack those slick, upbeat television commercials that say the Army offers opportunities to "be all that you can be."

If women are supposed to have a softer nature, the forever barking sergeants aren't interested in finding it. Women are seen marching and chanting "I want to go to Iran, I want to kill an Iranian." One sergeant tells a scared woman on the firing range that the Army has no room for emotion.

During a survival lecture, the need for food is considered. One gun-ho commander demonstrates the fastest way to kill a chicken: biting off its head.

The soldiers are also coached in surviving a nuclear attack. "Turn away from the blast," one sergeant says, "and brush off the radioactive dust." He then flicks away some imaginary specks like they were lint.

These graphic images are captured by cinema verite filmmakers Nicholas Broomfield and Joan Churchill, who also did "Tattooed Tears," about juvenile prisoners.

Broomfield and Miss Churchill spent 3½ months in early 1980 shooting basic training, and the result is a fascinating, stark picture, but one lacking real explanations why these women wanted military careers.

The cameras and microphones of the documentarians seem as unobtrusive as possible, under the circumstances. And it looks like business as usual at Fort Gordon. One exception seems to be one subject, Joann Johnson. Her persistent smirk, which may reflect some hamming for the cameras, infuriates one sergeant.

"Are you a Russian spy?" he asks her. Miss Johnson happily quits basic training, hugging some recruits and the filmmakers before departing in a yellow cab.

Of the four profiled women, Miss Johnson and Clara Alves don't complete their training. This disproportion may slant the documentary a bit — and the military has criticized it as not representative — but the resistance of Miss Johnson and Miss Alves does enliven the documentary.

Miss Alves, for example, is punished for being lazy and is forced to dig ditches long into the night. She gets hysterical, and, apparently, assaults her superior with a shovel. At least her commanding officers intimate that she did when three of them castigate her during a brutally harsh interrogation.

In contrast, one dedicated woman recruit asks for combat duty, and her male sergeant advises against it by recounting his own spiritual sickness from Vietnam. War robbed him of part of his humanity, and he says he's lost the emotional capacity to love.

"I can't give nothing to anybody else anymore," he says.

ABC Wins In Rating Again

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC won the networks' ratings race for the third week in a row, thanks in large measure to "Inside the Third Reich" and a couple of light-hearted specials, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. show.

Two programs, CBS' broadcast of the Miss USA Pageant and "Too Close for Comfort" on ABC, finished in a tie for first place in the competition for the week ending May 16, and Part I of NBC's 10-hour "Marco Polo" miniseries was third.

But ABC had nine shows in the Top 20, more than any other network, including "It's Not Easy Being Me: Rodney Dangerfield" in 12th place, and "Hollywood: A Gift of Laughter," 17th.

The conclusion of "Inside the Third Reich," a two-part made-for-TV movie, was No. 5 for the week.

The prime-time schedules of all three networks were loaded with special shows for the May ratings "sweeps," which determine advertising rates for local stations.

A CBS special, "Eleanor, First Lady," finished 15th, and the network was moderately successful with a two-part movie, "Rules of Marriage." The first installment was No. 33 for the week, with the conclusion tied for 25th place.

The rating for Miss USA, as well as "Too Close for Comfort," was 22.5. Nielsen says that means in an average minute of the show, 22.5 percent of the television-equipped homes in the country saw at least part of each program.

The rating for ABC was 15.4 to 15.2 for CBS and 13.2 for NBC. The networks say that means in an average minute of prime time, 15.4 percent of the nation's homes with TV were tuned to ABC.

NBC had four of the week's five lowest-rated shows, with Mexico Weighs Suspending Nuclear Power Plans

By RICHARD BOUDREAU
Associated Press Writer
MEXICO CITY (AP) — Burdened with an acute financial crisis, Mexico is considering a suspension of its atomic energy program, the most ambitious in the developing world.

The decision will affect the nuclear industries of Canada, France, Sweden, the United States and West Germany, which have dispatched heads of state, cabinet officials and atomic scientists to lobby for the first of a series of contracts worth an estimated $32 billion in current prices.

President Jose Lopez Portillo, whose administration wrote the energy plan as part of his oil-financed push to industrialize Mexico, planned to sign the first contract before leaving office Dec. 1, 1982. It calls for construction of two of the 20 atomic reactors planned for the year 2000.

But soon after the bids were opened Feb. 1, the Mexican peso collapsed under the strain of declining oil revenue and a $70 billion foreign debt. The 40 percent devaluation set off a burst of inflation and forced an 8 percent slash in government spending.

The Federal Electricity Commission is assuring bidder its 180-member evaluation team will meet the original August deadline for awarding a contract. But the president is reportedly under pressure from financial aides to let the next administration decide whether to sign it.

"There are currents in the government that are against the project, given the extremely difficult situation Mexico is in," West German Science Minister Andreas von Buelow said last week after talks with Lopez Portillo. "No decision has been taken, but my assumption now is the entire nuclear program will be delayed."

Seven companies spent millions of dollars promoting their bids for the twin-reactor plant and delivered truckloads of supporting documents. The 2,300-megawatt project would be built at the Mexican Gulf coastal site of Laguna Verde, where the nation's first atomic generator has been under construction since 1973.

The bidders are Westinghouse, General Electric and Combustion Engineering of the United States, Atomic Energy of Canada, Framatome of France, ASEA-ATOM of Sweden and Kraftwerk Union of West Germany.

Competition is keen because the government is also committed to deciding, by August 1983, which bidder will supply fuel-cycle technology for all 20 plants. Their production target is 20,000 megawatts of electricity — more than Mexico generates from all sources today and about double the goals of such big atomic planners as Argentina, Brazil, India, South Korea and Taiwan.

Until the financial crisis, opposition to the plan was limited here to a small group of academics. Foreign powers, they contended, want to saddle Mexico with dependence on expensive and hazardous technology, inappropriate for a country with the world's fourth largest oil and gas reserves.

Even with today's oil glut, government planners argue hydrocarbons are more valuable earning export dollars for Mexico than generating its electricity. But they admit budget pressures could stall the switch to atoms.

"If the economic situation continues to be this critical two or three years from now, then clearly we cannot build nuclear reactors," Juan Eibenshutz, the electricity commission's planning chief, said. "It's like being stuck in an apartment. Buying a house makes better long-run economic sense, but at the moment, we cannot afford one."

Costly construction delays on the first Laguna Verde plant have dealt the government a sobering lesson. A joint venture of Mexican firms and General Electric, it was first billed as a three-year project costing $263 million. Nine years later, $2 billion has been spent or allocated, with a completion date tentatively set for 1984.

An example of what is at stake is Canada's nuclear industry. Forseeing slack times after its reactor orders from Romania run out in 1985, it spent "$10 to $25 million" on the Mexican bid, a Canadian diplomat said. Roy McLaren, the Canadian parliament's energy secretary, called it the country's "largest and most comprehensive export proposal ever."

Worth about $2 billion at face value, the initial Mexican contract could generate "35,000 man years of employment and $8.8 billion in spinoff benefits" for Canada's economy, the industry journal Nucleonics Week quoted McLaren as saying.

Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau came here to make a sales pitch for his country's technology as did Swedish King Carl XVI Gustaf, French President Francois Mitterrand and U.S. Vice President George Bush.

France and West Germany gained an edge over U.S. competitors by offering Mexico formulas for enriching its own uranium for atomic fuel. Though Mexico has signed the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, U.S. law bars the transfer of such "sensitive" technology.

Even so, Reagan administration officials told Mexico they were willing to discuss such a transfer if U.S.-sponsored studies show that enriching uranium in Mexico is cheaper than importing the fuel, U.S. industry sources said.

Winter Death Toll Is Believed Heavy

By RANDOLPHE SCHMID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The suddenness and severity of January's cold snap may have caused an unusually high death toll for the winter just past, according to a government report.

Although the 1981-82 winter was not the worst on record, the death toll of 350 is believed to be higher than normal, the Center for Environmental Assessment Services said in a report Monday. It said the estimate was based on reports from state and local disaster assistance centers and that the actual toll may have been much higher than 350.

The report said the impact of January's bitter cold was heightened because it came after a relatively mild fall. By contrast, said Malcolm Reid of the center, the death toll was far lower in the winter of 1976-77, which was colder overall. The pattern of plunging temperatures that winter was more gradual and there was less snow, he said.

Even though center officials say they are confident the death toll last winter was higher than usual, they say they have no firm figures for comparison because they are just now devising a mechanism for keeping track of such estimates.

In addition to the human toll, the winter of 1981-82 cost the nation an estimated $8.2 billion, compared to $36.6 billion during the winter of 1976-77, the most severe on record, according to government estimates.

The largest estimated economic losses were for property damage and transportation losses in traffic, damage to roads and bridges and increased costs for snow removal. Contributing to the total economic figure were production losses in major industries, increased energy consumption and severe damage to agriculture, including Florida's citrus crop.

Overall, the center ranked the winter of 1981-82 the nation's third most expensive in terms of the per capita cost of energy consumption and snow removal. Only the winters of 1976-77 and 1977-78 were more costly, according to the study.

Helped Plane For Retirement

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — Because all too often employees who reach retirement age are set adrift without guidance, a program to help retirees prepare for a second career is being conducted by a manufacturer of postal and office equipment.

Employees of Pitney Bowes Inc. who are at least 50 years old are reimbursed up to $300 a year to help defray the costs of preparing for a second career. The employees can take retirement courses until an aggregate total of $3,000 is reached.

Since the program was instituted in 1978, nearly 500 employees and spouses have availed themselves of the financial assistance by taking a wide range of courses in areas such as business management, real-estate appraisal, ceramics, sewing and cooking.

Part-Time Jobs An Indicator

WASHINGTON (AP) — An indication of worsening times for many Americans is a large number of part-time employees.

According to the U.S. Department of Labor, more than 5.7 million people held part-time employment in March because they could not find full-time positions.

"It indicates a serious weakness in the economy," according to Sar A. Levitan, a labor economist and head of George Washington University's Center for Policy Studies.

"What it means is that more than a million more families have had to live on short rations compared to a year ago," he said.

OK Compromise Welfare Role

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National League of Cities has decided to support to a key compromise on the future of welfare payments, enhancing chances President Reagan will see enactment of a "new federalism" program.

The league, largest of the country's local government coalitions, said Monday it would not obstruct the welfare swaps proposed by Reagan if certain safeguards are provided, specifically that all states will be required to maintain minimum benefit standards and those that can't afford it will get federal help.

The league position, accepts Reagan's proposal that the states take over Aid for Families with Dependent Children, better known as AFDC, the country's largest welfare program. Reagan had proposed initially that the federal government take over the costly Medicaid program and later agreed to keep the food stamps program if the states would take over AFDC.

Long War Final Stages

By JAMES R. PEIPERT
Associated Press Writer
NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) —
In the mountainous terrain of northern Ethiopia, the army of the nation's Marxist government appears to be in the last stages of a campaign to end Africa's longest-running war.

Diplomats and Ethiopian sources interviewed last month in Addis Ababa, the Ethiopian capital, and by telephone more recently from Nairobi, said the key military objective is the mountain town of Nakfa, the last redoubt of Eritrean guerrillas fighting a 21-year-old war of secession.

"It's the only thing to capture. I think they're now in the final stages," one diplomat said of Nakfa, held by the rebels since March 1977.

The capture of the town would be a highlight in the career of Ethiopia's Marxist leader, Lt. Col. Mengistu Haile Mariam, who on Jan.
25 launched what is seen as an all-out effort against the guerrillas.

Some diplomats following the so-called Red Star campaign through the skimpy official reports said the capture of Nakfa, about 110 air miles north of Asmara, capital of Eritrea Province, might come soon but others said it could take longer.

At least two Western journalists who reached Nakfa recently by way of neighboring Sudan reported the guerrillas are well dug-in and have repulsed Ethiopian attacks on the town.

Some diplomats said Nakfa's capture would not necessarily end the war, because the guerrillas — estimated at more than 10,000 — would simply melt into the mountains and continue their campaign with hit-and-run raids on the army's supply lines.

The secessionist movement was born in the former Italian colony in 1961. The Italians settled in Eritrea in the late 19th century and it remained an Italian colony until 1941 when Britain took it over during World War II.

In 1950 the United Nations recommended a federal arrangement that would ensure self-government for the province. But during the next decade under the reign of Emperor Haile Selassie — who was deposed in 1974 and died in 1975 — Eritrea's autonomy started to erode, giving rise to separatist movements.

The Eritrean People's Liberation Front and the rival Eritrean Liberation Front scored major victories in the province in 1977 when government forces were spread thin by Somalia's invasion of the Ogaden region in the southeast.

But the government began to turn the tide in the Ogaden and Eritrea in 1978 with an influx of thousands of Cuban personnel and some $1.8
billion worth of Soviet arms, and regained control of all the major cities in Eritrea.

The EPLF repulsed a government assault on its Nakfa stronghold in December, 1979, and Mengistu seems determined to root out the guerrillas this time.

"You couldn't have a bigger commitment, so he's got to win," said one diplomat, noting that Mengistu has deployed half of Ethiopia's 250,000-man army in Eritrea.

Diplomatic sources said an estimated 80,000 to 90,000 troops already in Eritrea were reinforced for the Red Star campaign by some 30,000 soldiers from the relatively peaceful former battlefronts in the Ogaden.

"I would not care to make a prediction," a senior Ethiopian official said when asked about the prospects of Nakfa's capture. "But we are more determined than ever to weed out the bandits."

The main weapons deployed around Nakfa, diplomats said, are heavy artillery, Soviet-made MI-24 helicopter gunships and MiG-21 and MiG-23 fighter planes.

The Ethiopians also have at least 650 operable Soviet-made T-54 and T-55 medium tanks, said one senior envoy. But their effectiveness is limited in the rugged terrain, similar to that in Afghanistan where Soviet forces are fighting a similar war against Afghan guerrillas.

Throughout the campaign,

the guerrillas have claimed major successes against the government forces in communique issued from their offices in Rome, Paris, Kuwait and Khartoum, capital of Sudan.

The claims have included the shooting down of MiG jets, the bombing of Asmara's airport, the killing or capture of thousands of Ethiopian soldiers, destruction of an oil depot and even the wounding of the 42-year-old Mengistu in a mortar attack.

The Ethiopians strongly denied the claim about Mengistu and ignored the others.

The Ethiopians have not reported their own casualties, and most reports on Red Star have emphasized reconstruction work in the war-ravaged province.
Foreign diplomats, however, estimated that about 3,000 government soldiers have been killed or wounded since Red Star began.

There were no reliable estimates available on guerrilla casualties.

Despite the casualties, Mengistu seems to have the backing of most Ethiopians, and even many Eritreans weary of two decades of war and uncertainty, diplomats said.

Playing on the Ethiopians' traditional nationalism and injecting a strong dose of Marxist ideology, the official media have depicted the Red Star campaign as a struggle against imperialism.

Citing the numerous construction projects planned or under way in a pacified province, the media seems to be trying to convince the Eritreans that socialism — not independence — offers the best chance for development.

Live Wasps Need Filled

ITHACA, N.Y. (AP) — A call for 300 live wasps by researchers at Cornell University, who sweetened their offer with a reward of honey, has brought results from as far as California.

"The public response has been overwhelming," said Kenneth G. Ross, a graduate student who is seeking the live, queen yellowjacket wasps for research on an antidote to their venom.

Ross called off the invitation last week after the quota was nearly filled in just two weeks. Each wasp carried a reward of a pound of honey, but Ross said about one in four people declined the reward.

"People are genuinely interested in the type of work we are doing," said Cornell entomologist Roger A.
Morse, who supervises Ross' research.

Ross is trying to establish large colonies of yellowjackets under controlled conditions to collect venom, needed to develop antidotes for people who are highly sensitive to the wasp's sometimes deadly sting.

Queen yellowjackets were easy to collect because they are the only kind flying at this time of year.

The "picnic wasps" have become a problem throughout the eastern United States, Ross said, especially around picnic tables, where they are attracted to hamburgers, hot dogs, soft drinks and beer.

Civil War Will Resume In July

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) —
The Civil War "resumes" next July when a Union
gunboat in the Mississippi River engages in a duel with a Confederate cannon on the bluffs overlooking Memphis.

Visitors to Mud Island, a $63-million, 50-acre education and entertainment center, will get the full impact of the battle.

Visitors will find themselves aboard a full-size reproduction of the gunboat under simulated fire. They will hear what Union sailors say between explosions as they receive and return the fire. Later, they will find themselves on the bluffs, looking down on the siege and listening as Confederate soldiers talk about the battle.

Excavating 'Treasures' Threatened

By WILLIAM C. MANN
Associated Press Writer
COPENHAGEN, Denmark
(AP) — Archeologists say science stands to lose much of the value of one of northern Europe's richest Iron Age digs because of a gravel pit.

The site is made up of 300 graves, filled with porcelain, iron, precious metals, cloth and other objects of the Germanic peoples inhabiting Denmark 16 centuries ago.

By early summer, 270 of the graves will have been excavated and their contents recovered. Then bulldozers will gouge out gravel at the site near Sejlflod, the prehistoric north Jutland village where the graves were found in the late 1960s.

The remaining 30 worry the archeologists, even though they are out of reach of the bulldozers and not threatened directly by the encroaching pit.

Jens Nielsen, the archeologist heading the excavation team, said the pit will lower the level of groundwater and within two years will ruin almost all their artifacts unless private financing can be found for the excavation of the 30 graves.

The same Danish law that allowed the Environment Ministry to finance excavation of the 270 graves — "rescue excavations," to save digs directly threatened by encroaching civilization — forbids it from financing work on the last 30.

Carl Johan Becker, a professor of archeology at Copenhagen University's Iron Age Institute, said finding the money is important for science.

"We have the possibility of excavating two very rich burial areas," Becker said. "It should be possible to excavate them totally." He said only a study of the contents of all 300 graves would give a full picture of the people who dug them.

Nielsen said the graves under excavation are yielding about 15 items each, which he said makes the Sejlflod find one of the most scientifically lucrative from the period 400-500 A.D.

"There are very few finds at all from this particular period, and these are some of the richest graves in all of the Iron Age," he said. "From a scientific point of view, it is important that we excavate all 300."

Svend Erik Albrethsen, the Environment Ministry official who handles money for preserving antiquities, estimated that the ministry has spent 500,000 kroner (about $63,300) since excavation of the graves began in 1979.

"Even if we had very much money — which we don't — we couldn't pay for excavating the last 30 graves," he said. "Our money is strictly bound by the law for rescue excavations."

Environment Ministry money entered the picture in 1979 when the gravel pit, being dug by a private company 10 miles southeast of Aalborg, came dangerously close to the site.

At the time, the graves were only black spots on aerial photographs taken in 1968 by a British scholar, J.K. St. Joseph of Cambridge University.

Nielsen said they were thought to be only fire pits associated with the nearby village, which is not especially well preserved.

"It was possible for us to make limited excavations in 1979, when the limits of the gravel pit came very close," he said. "During the excavations, we discovered the graves. And because the owners told us the gravel pit would include the area they were in, we had to excavate them."

"The amount of information we have already is so big that it will influence all Danish and northern European knowledge about this period of the Iron Age."

Soviets Not Informed Of Kremlin Role

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP)—Despite a roar of Kremlin rhetoric on the dangers of nuclear war, Soviet leaders give their citizens little information on Moscow's role in the arms race or how a nuclear war would affect them.

Soviet newspapers and radio and television reports are filled with accounts about anti-nuclear demonstrations in the United States, western Europe and Japan, but public debate and demonstrations on arms are tightly controlled here.

The Kremlin has given generous encouragement to the pacifist movement outside the socialist bloc, a role that Western leaders charge is designed not to bring peace to the world, but to advance Soviet strategic interests.

The most recent example of Soviet support for the "peace movement" was the World Conference of "Religious Workers for Saving the Gift of Life from Nuclear Catastrophe," held in Moscow May 10-14.

The Russian Orthodox organizers and delegates from countries friendly to the Soviet Union have steered the conference close to the Soviet line, laying sole blame for the nuclear build-up on the United States.

U.S. clergymen at the gathering expressed concern over its anti-American tone, but their remarks were ignored by Soviet news media. Westerners at the conference also criticized a Soviet decision to bar Dutch delegate Wim Bartels from delivering a speech condemning the nuclear policies of both Moscow and Washington.

Westerners taking part in the conference, unaccustomed to the workings of Soviet society, were apparently surprised by Kremlin tactics at the conference.

Soviet leaders debate their nuclear strategy behind closed doors, with virtually no information leaked to the public.

The names and numbers of Soviet nuclear weapons go unmentioned in the Soviet press. The exception came last fall in an interview given by President Leonid I. Brezhnev. He disclosed estimated levels of Soviet medium range nuclear weapons deployed against western Europe.

The Soviet names of nuclear armaments are not used publicly. Western arms control negotiators have reported that the Kremlin penchant for secrecy is so pervasive that Soviet military leaders will not discuss their own force levels with civilian Soviets present.

Although Brezhnev regularly advocates reducing the nuclear stockpiles of the two superpowers, no one in the country has dared to call publicly for unilateral disarmament.

Despite Soviet support of gestic peace activists, Soviet leaders tolerate no anti-war sentiment at home. Nikolai V. Ogarkov, first deputy defense minister and chief of staff, warned in a recent book of the need to counter growing pacifism among Soviet youth.

Official Soviet media, movies and popular literature play their role in shaping the popular view of war and overcome their silence on the effect of a nuclear war with heroic and tragic tales from World War II. Twenty million Soviet people died in the conflict.

The Kremlin is also careful in manipulating public demonstrations. During a May 1 parade, thousands of Soviet workers marched through Red Square pushing large, wheeled signs bearing approved slogans against the neutron bomb and North Atlantic Treaty Organization plans to deploy Tomahawk cruise and Pershing II missiles in western Europe.

In contrast, uniformed and plainclothes police quickly detained seven western Europeans in Red Square on April 19 after they tried to distribute pamphlets urging the Kremlin to ease world hunger by reallocating money "wasted on conventional and nuclear arms."

Soviet media regularly report western opinion polls showing sentiment against nuclear weapons. But the Kremlin does not release similar information on the Soviet Union.

A book issued this spring, "The Danger of Nuclear War," gave detailed medical data on the U.S. atomic bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki at the close of World War II.

The book and its principal author, heart specialist Yevgeny Chazov, have been widely quoted by Soviet media. Neither the book nor the Soviet press, however, speculated on the possible destruction of Moscow, Leningrad or other major cities in a nuclear holocaust.

Chazov, reportedly Brezhnev's personal doctor, is emerging as a key figure in the "Soviet peace movement," due largely to his role as founder of "International Physicians for the Prevention of Nuclear War." The group includes prominent doctors from a number of western countries.

Chazov's book, subtitled "A Physician's Viewpoint," referred repeatedly to "western militarist circles" who, it said, "readily resort to nuclear blackmail to achieve their political ends and gain unilateral advantage."

The closest Chazov's book came to admitting the destructive potential of the Soviet nuclear arsenal was the observation that "experts estimate that the U.S.A. and U.S.S.R. have enough weapons, taken together, to kill all living things on earth many times over."

SENTENCED TO SCRUB — An unidentified youth scrubs the outside of a subway car window in New York. The youth was sentenced to scrub away graffiti as part of a new program which New York officials hope will serve two purposes. Their aim is to punish minor offenders such as farebeaters and graffiti writers in a meaningful way, and to provide the public with cleaner subway cars. (AP Laserphoto)

Foster Nest For Eaglets

DANGEROUS DUTY — While the mother bird soars overhead, Dennis Case makes his way up a tree toward the eagle's nest. The method is used by Case to introduce a captive wild eagle chick into the nest of a pair of wild birds who are unable to hatch their own. (AP Laserphoto)

By MARIANNE MCGOWAN Associated Press Writer CLEVELAND (AP) — Two large eagles, shrieking disapproval, hover overhead as Dennis Case places a fuzzy eaglet into a nest of sticks high up in a cottonwood tree along Lake Erie.

With an offering of a fish and just the right timing, Case hopes the male and female bald eagles will accept the little bird as their own. The eaglet was born about a month before in a Maryland laboratory and brought to Ohio under the state's bald eagle preservation program, designed to bolster depleted ranks of the majestic bird.

Since the 1970s, America's national bird has been an endangered species.

"We were losing nesting pairs and not getting replacements. So we try to increase production in nests by taking young eaglets and putting them in," said Case, a field biologist for the Ohio division of wildlife and head of the state's eagle program.

The program, started in 1975, helps eagles do what should be a natural process — reproduce and fledge healthy eaglets. Many have not been able to because pesticides, particularly DDT, have become concentrated in eagles through their principal source of food — fish. That has caused females to lay eggs with thin shells.

"The shells would break as the eagles were hatching them or else the levels (of pesticides) would be so high they would cause the embryo to die," Case said.

DDT has been banned since 1972, but it takes a long time for the chemical to work its way out of the food chain and out of the eagle's system, Case said. So the problem remains.

Loss of forest land also has driven the eagle away and many are killed in collisions with high-voltage power lines.

"We've had a steady decline in nesting pairs in Ohio since the late 1950s," said Case. "In 1959, the first year accurate records were kept, 15 pairs of eagles were nesting in the state. That declined to only four pairs in 1979."

Fostering was begun in Ohio in 1979 and so far, four eaglets have been successfully adopted by adult pairs. That accounts for 4 percent of eagle production in the state, said Case, who reports no failures.

Case said his efforts appear to be working. But for now, he's "cautiously optimistic."

The number of Ohio's nesting pairs — a male and female who mate for life and produce eggs each spring — was five in 1980, six in 1981 and seven in 1982.

"The result of the program and the general trend nationally is to see improvement in productivity in bald eagles as a result of the banning of pesticides and the environment getting cleaner," Case said.

Case estimates Ohio's total bald eagle population at 29, most of them along the western shore of Lake Erie or near other bodies of water. There are believed to have been 250,000 eagles in the country at the turn of the century. The National Wildlife Federation, which began counting eagles four years ago, says there now are about 13,400.

Other states are actively trying to protect eagles, including New York, Maine, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Arkansas and Mississippi.

Case spent his first several years in the program locating and studying eagles. The large white-headed birds nest only when ready to reproduce. Two eaglets are usually fledged per nest. Eggs incubate for 35 days with the male and female sharing responsibility for keeping it warm.

"When you foster a young eagle into a nest, you're either dealing with a situation in which the eggs are infertile and don't hatch, or only one young is hatched in the nest," Case said.

Because fostering is such a delicate procedure, understanding the eagles' behavior through observation is crucial.

Case scouts the nests from a helicopter and observes the birds from the ground through binoculars or a spotting scope.

"Starting in late February, we watch all breeding territory to see when they're incubating eggs," Case said. "If they're disturbed during late February or during early stages of incubation, they're likely to abandon their nests."

"The parents will either be taking care of existing young or incubating bad eggs," Case explained. "We climb the tree, put the eaglet in, remove the eggs and just get out of the area as quickly as possible."

Often, the parents perch nearby and watch. They become agitated and make a noise Case describes as "rapid, high-pitched clucks." But they will not attack humans, he said.

One recent attempt in Sandusky was called off because Case discovered after climbing the tree that the eaglet already in the nest was too old to have a month-old sibling. When there is an age gap between the young birds, the smaller ones lose the competition for food.

Ohio's eagle preservation program currently is financed through the sale of hunting and fishing licenses. That provides about $50,000 a year and wildlife officials are trying to establish an income tax check-off procedure aimed at generating $1.2 million annually.

Liberty City Shares Hope

By MIKE McQUEEN
Associated Press Writer
MIAMI (AP) — Two years after rioting claimed 18 lives, the neighborhood known as Liberty City still has run-down housing, high unemployment and vacant storefronts that serve as hangouts for out-of-work young men.

But financial commitments by private industry, government-backed loans and minority hiring by the police have some given black leaders hope for long-term improvements — if the city can get through the summer without new rioting.

Miami Police Chief Kenneth Harms says the summer could be "critical," with the national recession leaving more than half of the black youths unemployed and with little to do but congregate for "street discos." Police say they have noted increases in the number and size of youth gangs in the city.

Young blacks were blamed for the worst violence and most of the $100 million in damage in three nights of rioting in 1980. The disturbances were touched off when an all-white jury in Tampa acquitted four white former Dade County police officers of charges stemming from the beating death of black businessman Arthur McDuffie.

Dade County's two major police agencies have responded with intense minority-recruitment drives and special community-relations patrols of troubled areas. Eighty percent of the Miami police department's new hires since the riots have been members of minority groups.

"I'm very optimistic about the rebuilding efforts going on right now," said Charles H. Rogers of the mostly black Miami-Dade Chamber of Commerce. "I think the effort is well-placed. The strength of a community is its businesses."

Howard V. Gary, Miami's first black city manager, said city government deserved no better than a "C" for its efforts to provide government contracts to black-owned businesses. "But I assure you next year, it'll be at least a 'B.'"

Only 2,148, or 1.5 percent, of all businesses in metropolitan Dade County are black-owned, according to the Census Bureau. Of those establishments, Dade's community revitalization board says 82 percent are owner-operated and have no employees.

Nationwide, about 3.8 percent of all businesses are minority-owned, according to a study done this year for the Commerce Department's Minority Business Development Agency.

In Miami, Rogers said he's particularly optimistic about the Greater Miami Chamber of Commerce's $5.4 million private-industry revitalization plan. It calls for businesses to donate money to train black entrepreneurs, build an industrial park and set up a job-skills training center.

Among the more ambitious rebuilding projects is the move to establish Dade County's first black-owned bank. Black millionaire Sonny Wright has asked the Federal Reserve for permission to buy a branch of People's National Bank.

Revitalization efforts by municipal government include a commitment by Dade County to buy 17 percent of its supplies from blacks. The city has promised to buy 10 percent of its goods from black suppliers.

The short-term worry that tempers the long-term optimism is the high jobless rate among Miami's black youths, which leaders say breeds crime and hopelessness.

The South Florida Employment and Training Consortium, an association of government job-training programs in southern Florida, places the black youth jobless rate at 50 percent.

"I think this is going to be one of the most critical summers in the history of Miami," said Harms.

"Reductions in certain classes of jobs and federal assistance in those job programs will impact on the community. Now, to the extent that idleness contributes to criminality, then we could and should expect an increased level of criminality," the police chief said.

Rogers, who's optimistic about the prospects of an improved black business community, concedes that joblessness and government cutbacks could mean an explosive summer.

"I'm concerned that we're going to have another civil disturbance," Rogers said. "When you have unhappy folks who are out of work with no money, things happen."

Wood Waste Is Energy Source

USING WOOD WASTE
PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Georgia-Pacific used wood waste to supply 90 percent of the energy needed to produce 1.4 billion board feet of lumber in 1981. In the energy-intensive pulp and paper industry, Georgia-Pacific provided 70 percent of its own energy from "wastes."

The whole paper industry reduced its annual use of fuel oils by 40 percent, between 1972 and 1981, the company reported.

ICE CAP
BOSTON (AP) — The world's largest island is Greenland, located about 1,800 miles north of here. An ice cap, two miles thick in places, covers the island.

If the ice cap were removed, you would see a ring of mountains surrounding a lot of water. The center of Greenland, about one-third of the land area, lies more than 1,000 feet below the surface of the sea.

Hottest Guessing Game: Will Reagan Run Again?

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — At a recent Washington cocktail party, each of the 70 guests was handed a red jellybean and asked to deposit it in one of two glass jars. One jar was labeled "He Runs," the other, "He Runs Not."

No one needed further explanation. For one of the hottest guessing games in town is whether or not Ronald Reagan will seek another term as president.

Election Day is 2½ years away, and chances are, even the president doesn't know for sure.

The political and economic conditions that will prevail in 1984 are impossible to predict. But Washington without speculation would be like Reno without blackjack, so the guessing is fast and furious.

The party guests included VIPs from the White House and Capitol Hill, Republicans and Democrats, political analysts and reporters. When their jelly bean ballots were cast, the vote was 3-to-1 that Reagan will not seek another term.

"It was apparent from early on in the evening which jar was filling up faster," said party host Marty Plissner, who is political editor at CBS news in Washington.

The "He Runs" camp generally argues that it is unlikely that the president will accomplish his goals of reshaping government in four years, that Reagan is a healthy man who will stay until the job is done. These people are usually happy to be quoted by name.

"I definitely think he'll run, though a lot can change in two years," said Nancy Reynolds, a close friend of the Reagans and a vice president of The Bendix Corp. "The Reagans are settling in, and if the president feels he has a job to finish, he will (run)."

Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., another close friend of the Reagans, put it this way: "I hope the president sees fit, Lord willing and all that, to run for a second term. It's apparent from the magnitude of the problems we have here that it will take at least that long."

Richard S. Williamson, White House strategist for the "new federalism" program, predicted that Reagan will not make his decision for another 15 months.

"If his economic recovery plan is in place and he has reasserted world leadership and been successful with the new federalism, if all is done in fulfilling his dreams, he won't run again," Williamson said. "He is more likely to run if he feels the job is undone."

"Of course there is sound reason for Reagan supporters to cast the 'He Runs' ballot. In Williamson's words, 'To make him a lame duck wouldn't help.'"

The president will be 73 years old in 1984 and, as one White House insider said, off-the-record, "that plays a factor." They point also to the tightened security measures since the assassination attempt 14 months ago and say Reagan sometimes feels cut off from his friends.

Those in the "He Runs Not" camp argue that public support for Reagan's policies is eroding, that even Americans who voted for Reagan are less enthusiastic about his economic program as high unemployment, federal budget deficits and high interest rates persist.

These people rarely like to be quoted by name, usually because a Republican with political aspirations has nothing to gain by offending a Republican president — or his aides.

"I think the job is harder than he expected," said a high-ranking White House official who claimed he would lose his position if he allowed his name used. "I think he likes the job but will find four years enough."

An Associated Press-NBC poll taken last week found Americans are divided on the subject. Forty-two percent of the respondents said the president should run again; 43 percent said he should not.

Mrs. Reagan's attitude about a second term is another subject of close attention. It's no secret in Washington that the first lady is extremely protective of her husband and that she was enormously shaken by the attempt on Reagan's life.

Some Republican insiders say the first lady's personal desire would be for her husband to retire from politics when his term ends, but that she is careful not to express her private views.

Mrs. Reagan's press secretary, Sheila Tate, said the first lady insists she and the president never talk about whether he will seek another term.

"No decision has been made, and I don't think she's even thinking about it," Mrs. Tate said.

Different Pay In Same Jobs

By DOLORES BARCLAY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — John Laws, a radio announcer in Australia, recently signed a five-year contract for about $5 million to do his show.

President Junius R. Jayawardene of Sri Lanka earns $243 a year.

High school teachers in Chicago earn $22,455 a year. That's about $14,000 less than high school teachers in Geneva, Switzerland, make.

But it's $20,000 more than teachers in Bangkok, Thailand, earn.

These are some of the salary oddities compiled by David Harrop in his book, "World Paychecks," published by Facts on File.

Harrop, who two years ago pried loose the financial secrets of the famous and not-so-famous people in the United States for his book, "America's Paychecks," now has detailed those countries where politicians, police officers and bus drivers are paid the most.

"It was an enormous, and an almost comic project," Harrop said. "So many people didn't want to give me information. People in England, Japan, Switzerland and France don't like to talk about incomes. It has a more social connotation in those countries than here."

Also, he said, in many foreign countries there is the problem of income tax evasion, so discussions about income are avoided.

Sir David Steel, chairman of British Petroleum, was paid $232,000 in 1979. Robert O. Anderson, chairman of Atlantic Richfield Co. in the United States, made $1,650,000, the book says.

Harrop said Steel earned 17.5 times as much as the average British Petroleum worker, who earned $13,280. Anderson made 45.9 times as much as the average petroleum worker at his company, who earned $23,000, Harrop said.

In the legal profession, Harrop said lawyers' salaries in the United States are the envy of the world. The average pay for lawyers in all countries, he said, is less than $45,000 a year. But graduates from the best law schools in the United States can start at about $46,000.

Harrop said he was surprised by "the enormously larger number of lawyers we have in America."

"Japan graduates 500 lawyers a year. We graduate 35,000."

Law as a profession in Japan also receives little esteem. But journalists have more prestige than in any other country.

At a major city newspaper in Japan, a top reporter or columnist can earn $80,000 a year. In France, reporters with 10 years experience earn $17,234. And in China, editors at the People's Daily make $1,716.

That's still more than what Prime Minister Zhao Ziyang of China makes in a month — $319, or $3,828 a year.

Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser of Australia receives a salary of $117,913 a year. That's higher than what Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau makes, $53,760. Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of Great Britain earns $70,879.

BOATING MISHAP
PEKING (AP) — At least 25 people died when a boat sank in a park lake in Tianjin, northeast China, a local daily newspaper reports.
