

Big Bite For A Little Lady

IT'S BERRY SEASON AGAIN ... Hungry for some natural goodness, Eran Krupa, 2, takes a bite out of a giant-sized strawberry she plucked from the field. Eran was one of several school-aged youngsters who toured a local dairy and strawberry patch Wednesday. According to county Farm Bureau member Alma Worthington, the tour was an effort to "get children back on the farm and make them realize where our food really comes from." Judging from the smile on her face after finishing the bright red goody, Eran got the point. (Reflector Photo By Mary Schulken)

New Highway-Building In N.C. Will End In 1983 Unless Funding Is Found

By MARK DAVIS
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — New highway construction in North Carolina will end by the beginning of July 1983 unless new sources of funding are found, state fiscal and highway officials said Wednesday.

"Unless the General Assembly does something to get funds to match federal aid, our construction program will come to a halt next year," said Highway Administrator Billy Rose. Jim Newlin, a fiscal analyst for the state Fiscal Research Division, said the state is facing a declining revenue base.

"We're concerned about July of 1983," said Cy Lynn, a public-affairs spokesman for the state Department of Transportation.

Unless the state devises new sources of revenue — either by raising the tax on alcoholic beverages, gasoline or other items — state money used to match federal money to finance construction of highways will be depleted by the beginning of the next fiscal year, the three men said.

The state gasoline tax, increased by 3 cents during the 1981 session of the General Assembly, will not be adequate to finance long-run construction, they said.

The gas tax possibly was Gov. Jim Hunt's toughest political challenge last year when he cajoled a majority of the House and Senate into raising the tax to 12 1/4 cents. A Blue Ribbon Study Commission he appointed recommended the tax be increased so that an extra $200 million would be added to the state Highway Fund.

Hunt asked the Legislature for tax increases in gas, license fees and other driving-related expenditures that would raise an additional $180 million yearly and ordered DOT to reduce costs by $20 million. The Legislature compromised with a package that analysts said would raise an additional $120 million.

That package has raised an estimated $90 million in the first nine months of the fiscal year which began last July, officials say.

To date, the increased gas tax has raised approximately $280 million. About $220 million was raised during the same period last year and in 1980, budget figures show.

The gas tax accounts for over half the state's $535 million Highway Fund. This year, $79.9 million of that amount was to be used to resurface highways. Secondary road construction was to use $30 million and $10 million has been set aside to increase funding to improve municipalities' roads. The fiscal year ends June 30.

Rose said $50 million from a $300 million bond issue approved in 1977 is being used to match federal money to build new highways. After this year that money will be gone and North Carolina will have no money for new roads, he warned.

Legislators will need to raise taxes or forsake new-road construction, he said. "Whatever they do, it will be a difficult decision," he said.

There are a couple of tax-raising options that legislators could consider when they meet in the June 2 budget session. Foremost is a bill that would raise an estimated $20 million by increasing the tax on alcohol. That bill passed the House last year and stalled in a Senate committee when the Legislature adjourned.

Another proposal would shift an estimated $60 million in money raised through the sale of auto-related equipment from the General Fund to the Highway Fund. However, legislators would need to find a new source of revenue for the General Fund if that money was transferred to the Highway Fund, Newlin said.

Newlin predicted lawmakers will be faced in 1983 with the same question that plagued them in 1981 because gasoline sales are declining while the costs of building and maintaining roads are increasing.

"Our economists are projecting a continuing decline in gas revenues," he said. "We're taxing a declining base."

British Say Talks 'Dead'

By The Associated Press

Britain said today it is considering new U.N. ideas for a peaceful settlement on the Falkland Islands conflict. It also published its own proposal and blamed Argentina for failure to resolve the conflict.

It said no move has been made to hold back the British armada, poised to invade the Falklands. Press Association, Britain's domestic news agency, reported "deep gloom ... about the prospects of avoiding war."

British Foreign Office spokesman Nicholas Fenn told reporters in London, "It is clear the Argentine government are not serious about continuing the negotiations."

Fenn made clear that U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar's "ideas" were separate from the publication of the British negotiating position and Argentina's "discouraging" reply Wednesday.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's government said its proposal was given to Perez de Cuellar Monday. The British blamed Argentina for the crisis and the failure to reach a peaceful settlement.

"In their ... attitude, the Argentine government showed that they had no respect either for democratic principles or for the rule of law. Britain stands firmly for both," the document said.

It said Argentina "was not seeking an agreement, but was playing for time in the negotiations in the hope of holding on to the fruits of aggression with all that this would imply for the international rule of law."

Britain's proposal called for a cease-fire within 24 hours; a phased withdrawal of all armed forces to at least 150 miles from the Falklands within two weeks; appointment of an interim U.N. administrator who would function "in consultation" with the islanders' legislative and executive councils, including two representatives of the small, resident Argentine population; and talks on the long-term future of the islands, "without prejudgment of the outcome," with a target completion date of Dec. 31.

Britain said the draft agreement "represented the furthest (it) could go in the negotiations," and that Argentina's reply "amounted to a rejection."

Perez de Cuellar called Mrs. Thatcher late Wednesday night to make a last-minute appeal for peace and made a similar appeal to Argentine President Leopoldo F. Galtieri in Buenos Aires.

Officials said Perez de Cuellar also handed a new set of peace proposals to Britain's U.N. Ambassador, Sir Anthony Parsons, Wednesday night and that these were cable to Mrs. Thatcher early today. It was the first time in the crisis that the U.N. secretary general has personally intervened with his own set of proposals.

Perez de Cuellar said in New York Wednesday night that in his conversations with Mrs. Thatcher and Galtieri he "suggested new ideas which I believe might be of assistance in overcoming the remaining points of difference."

Unveil 'New' Budget Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Republican leaders, hoping to rebuild their successful budget coalition of last year, are offering a new plan with sharply scaled back domestic spending and $95 billion in tax increases over three years.

But Democrats and Republicans alike agree that finding a majority this election year in the fractious House will be an uphill battle.

"The No. 1 problem before the House is not which one (budget) to pass, but being able to pass any of them," said House Budget Committee Chairman James R. Jones, D-Okla.

During a flurry of Capitol Hill news conferences Wednesday, separate plans backed by Republican leaders, liberal Democrats and a small group of Democrats and Republicans were unveiled to compete with the plan drafted last week by majority Democrats on the House Budget Committee.

House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois hopes to repeat the budget victories that outnumbered Republicans

Japanese IQ Testing Outscores The World

NEW YORK (AP) — The Japanese score higher on standardized intelligence tests than any other nationality, including Americans, and the edge has increased steadily since the end of World War II, says a study published in this week's Nature magazine.

The article in the May 20 issue says the mean Japanese IQ is 111, compared with 100 in the United States.

"Since intelligence is a determinant of economic success...the Japanese IQ advantage may have been a significant factor in Japan's outstandingly high rate of economic growth in the post-World War II period," says the study conducted by Dr. Richard Lynn, a psychologist at the New University of Ulster in Londonderry, Northern Ireland.

Previous studies have consistently shown the Japanese scoring higher on IQ tests than Americans and Europeans. But the Lynn study is significant because it documents a sharp increase in mean Japanese IQ scores since World War II.

It says improved nutrition and other environmental factors are the most likely explanations for the Japanese intelligence gains.

The study says Japanese born between 1936 and 1946 have a mean IQ of about 104, while those born between 1946 and 1959 have IQs of slightly more than 111. Japanese children born in 1960 or 1961 score 15 points higher than the 100 average IQ of Americans.

"It seems doubtful whether a rise of this magnitude could be accounted for by a change in the genetic structure of the population. Instead, the explanation probably lies largely in environmental improvements," the study says.

The study estimated that at least 10 percent of the Japanese population has an IQ of 130 or more, high enough for success in management positions or professional jobs such as law, medicine or teaching. By contrast, only about 2 percent of the American population has an IQ of 130 or more, according to Dr. Lynn.

CAR COOLING OFF PERIOD?

Is there a three-day cooling off period for the buying of used cars?

According to a specialist in the office of the state attorney general's Consumer Protection Division, three-day cooling off periods are written in the law expressly for merchandise purchased by direct sales and for contracted entertainment and edification services such as health spa memberships.

A claim against a used car dealer that comes up within three days after buying would depend mainly on whatever papers were signed and how the condition of the vehicle was represented by the salesman. The Consumer Protection Division has a special automobile complaint form and will be glad to send it to you upon request. With the filled-out form, be sure to send along to Consumer Protection copies — not the originals — of any papers you signed in connection with buying the car.

The consumer protection specialist warned that no one should, at the time of purchase, sign any agreement that releases the seller from responsibility for problems that might quickly come up and be provable as having existed prior to the sale.

WASHINGTON (AP) —

John W. Hinckley Jr. joked with his lawyers in federal court today and read a newspaper account of his trial, showing no signs of the emotional upset that caused him to flee the courtroom twice on Wednesday.

Hinckley, charged with trying to assassinate President Reagan and shooting three other men, chatted with defense lawyer Gregory B. Craig for several minutes. Both men smiled and Craig patted the blond defendant on the arm.

Hinckley then began reading a newspaper opened to the page where the story of the previous day's trial proceedings appeared.

Dr. David Michael Bear, a defense psychiatrist, began his third day on the witness stand today, answering questions by government prosecutor Roger M. Adelman on Hinckley's state of mind on March 30, 1981, the day of the assassination attempt.

On Wednesday, Hinckley walked out of the courtroom when Bear recounted actress Jodie Foster's message to the defendant: "Drop dead." He left a second time when Bear discussed the protagonist in the movie "Taxi Driver."

The defense claims that Hinckley, who has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity, was obsessed with Miss Foster. She played a teen-aged prostitute in the film.

Before leaving the courtroom on both occasions, Hinckley looked pale, folded his arms on a table and put his head down like a child taking a nap at school. Defense lawyer Vincent J. Fuller then asked if his client could be excused.

Each time, a prosecutor continued the cross-examination of Bear, who has concluded Hinckley suffered from severe mental illness when he shot Reagan.

Although on the stand for two days, Bear virtually demanded more time to tell jurors that sophisticated brain scans confirmed his diagnosis of a severe form of schizophrenia.

When the trial resumed Wednesday morning, the doctor refused to answer questions from Adelman unless he could mention the brain scan results.

Couple Says Vows In Morning Ceremony

CLINTON, N.J. — Linda Sue DeBoer and Robert Benjamin Clodfelter were married here Saturday at 11 a.m. in the Clinton Presbyterian Church. The Rev. James R. Barber performed the double ring ceremony.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Cornelius DeBoer of Clinton Township, N.J., the bride was given in marriage by her father. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Harold Clodfelter of Lexington, N.C. His father served as best man.

A program of wedding music was presented by Mrs. Robert Zeh, organist, and Charles E. Hoffman, vocalist.

The bride wore a formal gown of ivory schiffli embroidered lace over peau de soie designed with a Queen Anne neckline outlined in schiffli lace that continued over the shoulders and featured button closures on the back bodice. The fitted bodice was overlaid in matching lace beaded with pearls and the full bishop sleeves were fashioned of the embroidered lace and featured lace cuffs. The modified A-line skirt and attached cathedral length train were accented with a double founced hemline of the scalloped embroidered lace. She wore an ivory silk flower wreath accented with a satin ribbon and streamers and attached fingertip pencil edged veil. The bride carried off-white cymbidiums on her mother's wedding Bible accented with stephanotis and baby's breath. The honor attendant was Karen Stahle of Potomac, Md. and bridesmaids included Mrs. William Currie of Grand Rapids, Mich. and Patricia Sori of Spring Lake, N.J., sisters of the bride. Mrs. Stephen Charles Hofon of Lexington, N.C., sister of the bridegroom and Mrs. Kelly Perdue of Madison, Va. Courtney Currie of Grand Rapids, Mich., niece of the bride, was flower girl and the ring bearer was Christopher DeBoer of Brielle, N.J., nephew of the bride.

MRS. ROBERT BENJAMIN CLODFELTER

Ushers included Christopher and James Clodfelter of Lexington, N.C., brothers of the bridegroom, Jack Riggs of Ann Arbor, Mich. and Robert Taylor of Charlotte.

The attendants each wore a gown styled by Gunnie Sax made of voile with a floral print on an off-white background. Ivory lace trimmed the Queen Anne neckline, lace-up bodice and hemline ruffle. The ivory lace sleeves were gathered at the buttoned cuff. They each carried a colonial bouquet of mixed summer flowers. The flower girl wore a gown made similar to that of the attendants and carried a basket of mixed summer flowers.

A dinner reception, given by the bride's parents, was held at the Coach N' Paddock Restaurant of Clinton, N.J. Music was provided by SDM Quartet with Jane Paulson.

After a wedding trip to the South Carolina coast, the couple will live in Greenville, N.C.

The bride is a graduate of the University of Virginia and is presently employed by Pitt County Memorial Hospital as a neonatal intensive care nurse. The bridegroom is a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

Dear Abby

Name Game No Laughing Matter

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am an older gentleman. After my beloved wife died, I married a lovely, refined widow my age. My grandchildren, ages 10 and 12, started to call her "Hazel," her given name.

Hazel feels that it is disrespectful for children to address an older person by her given name, and I agree, so I asked my daughter (the children's mother) to please instruct them to call my wife "Grandma Hazel." I thought a word from their mother would solve the problem. It didn't. My daughter informed me that she asked the children how they felt about it, and they told her they preferred to call her "Hazel," so they continued to do so.

I recently suggested rather pointedly that should this irritating situation continue, it would eventually have some rather unfavorable repercussions.

They have not as yet taken the hint. It is causing a strain on the family ties. What do you suggest? Should I just keep quiet, and quietly cut them all out of my will?

FROM MISSOURI

DEAR FROM: Why not approach your grandchildren directly? Explain how proud you are to hear them call you "Grandfather," and you know it would make your wife feel very proud to be called "Grandma Hazel." Explain that it is rude and disrespectful to address an older person by her given name.

If they object to the term "Grandmother" or any variation of it, suggest "Miss Hazel" as an alternative — anything but just plain Hazel.

And if this doesn't work, you're from Missouri — show 'em!

DEAR ABBY: My daughter is marrying a young man soon. He has never been married, but he has a son whom he sees every day. After he and my daughter are married, do we look at this man's son as our grandson?

NERVOUS IN MASSACHUSETTS

DEAR NERVOUS: Inasmuch as your future son-in-law sees the boy every day and obviously regards him as his son, it would be very generous of you to "look at" the boy as your grandson.

DEAR ABBY: This is an open letter to Dr. Heineman, who thinks if a man gets an unmarried girl pregnant and she wants an abortion and he doesn't, his wishes in the matter are as important as hers.

I'm not talking through my hat. Have you ever worked in an abortion clinic? Well, I have. A sample of the interviews: Question: "Why are you here?"

Answer No. 1: "My boyfriend refuses to see me until I get rid of the baby."

Answer No. 2: "I just found out my boyfriend is married."

Answer No. 3: "When I told my boyfriend, he left me."

Answer No. 4: "My boyfriend says he is too young to be a father."

Answer No. 5: "My boyfriend says the baby is not his." Abby, I am sure many more girls would keep their babies if the men were more supportive. But the truth is, it's the men who do not want the baby, and women can't handle it alone.

By Erma Bombeck

Open Letter to the Bombeck Kids:

Well, how in the world are all of you? Since you moved out, Mommy and Daddy's nest is really empty and you can make book on that. Speaking of books:

Have you heard there's a new sibling kiss-and-tell book coming out? This time it is written by the children of the late Peter Sellers. Hope none of you gets any ideas. (Ha, ha.)

What am I saying? You little rascals would never take anything we said or did seriously, would you?

I suppose a lot of things come to mind that Daddy and I did that in retrospect were bizarre and misunderstood. Hey, what are parents for, right?

I know you're thinking about that incident that summer in Florida when you turned on the car heater. Well, no publisher in his right mind would blame us for that! We had no way of knowing about the tooth that was loose.

And as for the math seminars for your birthday surprise, we did it for your own good. You have to believe that.

Besides, the written word — and wills — are something you have to live with for the rest of your life.

I know what you're thinking. What about the six books I wrote about you? They were fun, weren't they? Even your attorney had to admit they had their moments.

The problem with children writing books is that they feel compelled to tell the truth, and you know how deadly unentertaining THAT can be sometimes. No one wants to know about the time I cut a hole in your bicycle seat to shame you into toilet training. It wasn't my idea anyway. I think I read it in Heloise. Naturally, Mommy and Daddy would never tell you what to do with your lives. (The time I locked you out for not voting a Democratic ticket was a joke. Did you think I was serious?)

Why am I going on so? I cannot believe the idea of writing a book ever crossed your minds. If it does, may you have terminal writer's block. Only kidding.

we are both well and miss you very much. We are still storing all of your things and wouldn't think of charging you for it. We're that kind of parents. Write or call when you can.

Love, Mama

A Flawed Ordinance?

And here goes the Greenville City Council!

Our elected leaders have included in an ordinance regulating sexually oriented businesses, a provision prohibiting "the exposure of female breasts in public places." This was done despite a North Carolina Court of Appeals ruling that the female breasts are not "private" parts as prohibited by the indecent exposure statute.

While we are not advocating "the exposure of female breasts" or any other public nudity in Greenville, it does seem to us that the City Council should leave this matter to the courts which have already spoken. Greenville's City Council is no more going to rewrite the laws of the state than it is going to re-invent the wheel.

But, our council says, it "finds as a fact that it is in the interest of the public welfare to prohibit the exposure of female breasts in public places." It says the council "desires to establish a higher standard for conduct in the city ... than that established by the state in the indecent exposure statute."

The ordinance says, "It shall be unlawful for any female, over age 14, or any other physically developed female, to expose her breast or breasts in such a manner that they may be seen from any street or highway, any place of entertainment, including any restaurant, club, or any other public place of any kind by a member or members of the opposite sex."

So our City Council has jumped into a matter that has already been addressed in court decisions.

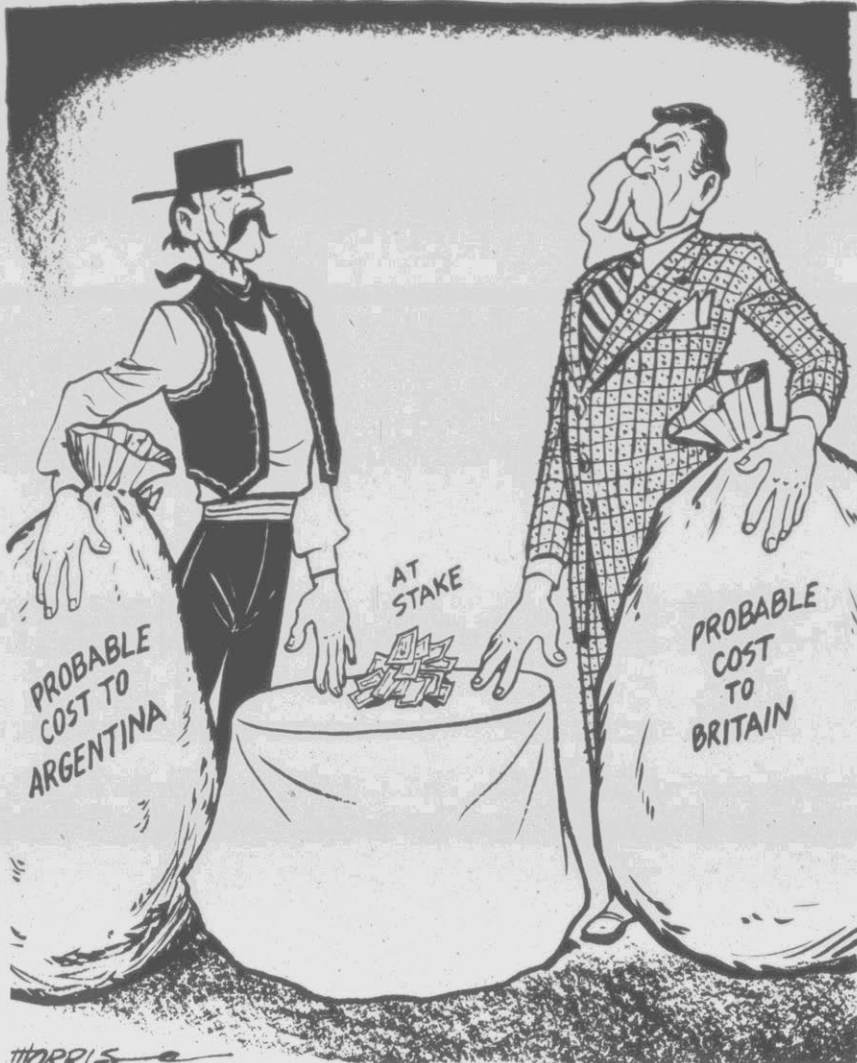

What its ordinance says could affect sophisticated art programs at East Carolina University, or stage productions designed for a few.

In the old ways of our Eastern North Carolina culture, mothers sometimes unashamedly nursed their babies in semi-public places. They had better not try it now.

This one overzealous stipulation could be the fatal flaw in an ordinance which might otherwise stand the test in court.

The City Council should not ignore the law as it has been interpreted. And if it chooses to do so, the council should not expect taxpayers to bear the costs when the ordinance is challenged in the courts.

STRANGE GAMES THAT PEOPLE PLAY!

MORRIS

A Civilized Sport Found

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — After giving the old college try in my graying alumni years to hiking, paddleball, jogging and yachting (if barfing abaft the beam aboard a 16-foot sloop so qualifies), I at last have found a red-blooded American sport that fits my physical and spiritual conditions: steamboat racing.

The sport is elegant, scenic, as fast paced as a papal consistory and as historic as the mighty rivers that serve as its playground. It requires nothing more of the participant than to sit at the teak taffrail with a tall mint julep in hand and watch the big red paddlewheel churn up misty rainbows of spray, while the crowds along the levee cheer each mournful moan of the whistle. A contest that proceeds at the pace of 8 miles an hour does not strain the concentration or neck muscles of the spectators.

Occasionally, but not often, when the going gets rough, the captain issues a call to battle stations, and the tough get going.

"Hold up on that buffet dinner," Capt. James R. Blum, master of the Delta Queen out of Cincinnati, anxiously got on the horn. "Everyone forward, please. Get to the bow of the boat. Weight is important. We gotta lift that paddlewheel higher out of the water."

The Natchez, the pride of New Orleans, was gaining steadily on us, while the Belle of Louisville, with Walter Cronkite aboard, was far astern in the annual "Great Steamboat Race." This geriatric wheeze of straining steam boilers happens every spring over a 12-mile course up and down the beautiful Ohio River from the docks of downtown Louisville.

Capt. Blum, who looked like a riverboat gambler with his wide sideburns and dimpled choirboy smile, was risking everything, even mutiny among the 162 passengers paying upwards of $150 a day for their passage and rations, to hang the Golden Anglers, the race trophy, on the roof of his pilot house.

In his anxiety to get going, he had somewhat anticipated the thunderous starting cannon and was 200 yards up river, almost under the railroad bridge, while his two rivals were still lining up two bridges back under Clark Memorial Bridge, the agreed on starting line.

With a look made of all sweet accord and in tones as innocent as the refrain of "Sweet Genevieve" issuing from the steam calliope, the captain denied any wrongdoing, explained he was marching to a different drummer and "besides, the Belle of Louisville pulled the same dirty trick last year when she won the others."

That's the civilized thing about steamboat racing. The sport isn't complicated by a lot of fussy, incomprehensible rules and regulations — or any at all, as far as could be ascertained during this, my first passage on a racing sternwheeler.

"Anything is fair in steamboat racing," observed Mark Twain a century or so ago, when the powers that be up on the Texas deck could order cotton bales soaked in bourbon stoked into the wood burning furnaces and didn't have to contend with television crews on every contending boat and a couple of live action news helicopters hovering overhead to monitor the show.

Furthermore, on the integrity issue, Capt. Blum took pains to point out there was an official judge on board, a U.S. Coast Guard officer from Cincinnati, who hadn't seen anything scandalous about the premature start on account of at the time he was busy studying the contours of some bare shouldered belles in plantation gowns instead of the bends of the river. In steamboat racing, each boat supplies its own judge, which would be akin to a major league baseball team going on the road with its own personal set of umpires. Not a bad idea at all, since this cozy arrangement allows plenty of time for drinking in the scenery and whatnot and cuts out boring arguments and childish kicking of waves in each other's faces.

It's not for naught that in race track parlance the term "boat race" connotes a certain lack of suspense about the outcome.

Built 56 years ago on the River Clyde in Scotland, the Delta Queen showed her age and her determination by belching enormous plumes of jet black smoke from her twin funnels to keep the upstart Natchez, launched in 1974, from overhauling her illicit advantage on the up-river leg. The boats were bucking 12-mile-an-hour head winds and a 2½-mile current and gobbling up fuel oil at the rate of 100 gallons an hour. The Belle of Louisville continued to lag far behind, although she had drawn the favored Indiana side of the river, which riverboat pilot call "the pool," because the water is more slack.

Now the Natchez and the Delta Queen were almost neck and neck, or nose protruding gangplank to gangplank.

"Shove the oil to her," rasped a gnarled tourist river rat, leaning into the wind on an aluminum walker. "Damn the pollution. Full speed ahead." Words to warm the heart of a James Watt, whose ancestors back there somewhere may have invented the steam engine.

Americans Are Appreciative

A survey shows that 84 percent of Americans take pride in their work.

The study was done by the Center for Applied Research in the Apostolate, a Catholic organization. The study also shows that, compared to other nations, Americans are:

- More willing to fight for their country.
- Take more pride in their national identity.

- Are more religious.
- Are more satisfied with life.

Some of our own politicians tell us what a terrible state of affairs our nation has fallen into. This study indicates our citizens still have the moral fiber, the will to excel and an appreciation of what we have in our country. Our leaders should take note.

Tips For Citizens

BY PAUL T. O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — Congress is about to ax your favorite program. Or, the General Assembly is about to increase your taxes. You want to get in touch with your representative but you don't know the best way of going about it.

At a recent conference on legislation for children, a state legislator and congressional aide suggested ways to be more effective with your elected representatives. Their suggestions are remarkably simple, but according to their comments, not widely followed.

The panelists were Goldsboro's Rep. Martin Lancaster and Phil Kirk, administrative assistant to Rep. Jim Broyhill, R-N.C.

The best place to see your representative is at home. In Raleigh and Washington, there are committee meetings, floor votes and numerous other distractions. If you must contact him at the capital, Lancaster says a visit or phone call is more effective than a letter. Kirk says a congressman sees only a small portion of those who want meetings. Better to talk with an aide who can pass the message along.

There are two cardinal rules for any meetings, phone calls or letters. Be polite and be accurate. A threatening or rude contact with your representative won't help your cause. Accuracy is just as important. A lobbyist — and that is what you are when you contact your representative — is worthless when he isn't believable. Tell your representative an outright lie and when he finds the truth, your cause will most likely suffer and you'll lose your credibility with him. Simply getting a fact or two wrong can be almost as damaging. It makes the representative wonder if he can believe anything you've said.

PAUL O'CONNOR

So make sure you know what you're talking about. Have specific, reliable figures and facts to back up your arguments and present them succinctly. Kirk suggests bringing a one-page outline of your position to any meeting and leaving that

The Useless Statistics

WASHINGTON — Stuart M. Statler, a maverick Republican member of the Consumer Product Safety Commission, struck a nice blow for common sense the other day. In the process, he provided a splendid example of what we mean when we talk about the "bureaucratic burden."

The story requires a little background. Nine years ago the commission established the National Electronic Injury Surveillance System (NEISS). The idea was to compile data on injuries that result from consumer products. Toward that end, 130 hospitals originally were put under contract to provide daily reports on all injuries treated in their emergency rooms. The number of hospitals is now down to 74, but the system itself remains essentially unchanged.

A couple of weeks ago the commission voted on a proposal further to reduce the scope and complexity of the NEISS operation. On this vote Mr. Statler lost, 3-2. He then delivered himself of a sterling dissenting opinion explaining his point of view.

One problem, he said, is that the system — helpful as it may have been at first — now delivers too much.

"It gives us far more than we need. It provides volumes products: "Playing in graveyard, tombstone fell and hit knee ... While sitting on toilet, bathroom ceiling fell on head."

"To me it is an embarrassment," Mr. Statler continued, "that this commission collects information about frivolous incidents which are only faintly associated with consumer products — which do not even approach the perimeters of unreasonable risk — and then uses those incidents in projecting national injury estimates. Why bother? Who cares? Such figures are as meaningless as they are useless."

At the end of all this fact-gathering, the commission's staff prepares a priority list of products most likely to cause injuries. But over the past nine years, the ranking of product codes has changed scarcely at all. Thousands of these carefully tabulated accidents involve incidents about which the commission can do nothing at all. The NEISS estimates of injuries nationwide, extrapolated from the sample of 74 hospitals, "are really only ball-park numbers." Mr. Statler futilely urged that the number of reporting hospitals be cut in half, that reports be required semi-weekly instead of daily and that other constructive changes be made.

Alas, the gentleman's four colleagues issued a stuffy statement of rebuttal, saying that Mr. Statler's dissent contained "more rhetoric than substance." They strongly disagreed with his recommendations for economy. His proposal that the reporting of irrelevant accidents be ended, in their view, would save nothing. Indeed, it would cost more to eliminate a product of data which we cannot, will not, and should not ever use."

The trouble is that the system picks up everything. Mr. Statler cited random samples of emergency room reports on the causes of accidents: "Struck nose against water fountain ... Dropped sewer cover on toes ... Jumped over laundry basket, struck wall with toe ... Dropped record album on toe ... Ran into door running to answer phone ... Put seashell in nose ... Suffered blow to head while in pillow fight."

Two reports provide remarkable examples of the dangers that lurk in dangling clauses if not in consumer

Other Editors Say We Want Ours

(Rocky Mount Telegram)

Members of the North Carolina Association of Educators seem to have little real concern for the economic conditions now prevalent in this country — and particularly in North Carolina.

They demonstrated this last week when they said they disagreed with Gov. Jim Hunt's assessment of economic conditions while at the same time demanding higher salaries and other benefits.

Specifically, they want an across-the-board living increase, funding of medical insurance at the rate it was funded last year, two more steps in the salary schedules for all personnel, a change in rules on moving to a different pay grade when educators earn a masters degree, a cost-of-living adjustment for all former school employees who have retired, an increase in the retirement formula for people who retire in the future and no tampering with the tenure law.

In short, they are saying, "We want ours, regardless of what condition the economy is in."

Nobody can accuse Gov. Hunt of being indifferent to the needs of education. Yet, he is the governor of all the people — not just the governor of special-interest groups like the NCAE.

Brent Hackney, speaking for the governor, pointed out that "we are in a severe budget pinch. Anyone who looks at the figures can see that. We'd love to do a lot of those things but we are in a recession, and it will be difficult."

The record bears him out. State agencies have been pinched severely in budget matters. The state's highways are testimony to the fact that money for new roads and upkeep for old ones simply isn't there anymore.

The state's not doing this to punish motorists. Cutting state budgets is a realistic necessity. The NCAE refuses to see this. A spokesman for that group claimed that "the governor says there's no money, and we're not sure that's true yet. We don't think things are as bad as the governor is saying."

If that's true, they're the only group that doesn't know what's going on.

Strength For Today

MARTYRDOM

One of the great characters of the early Christian Church was Polycarp, Bishop of Smyrna. A terrible persecution of Christians broke out when he was very old. Along with eleven other believers he was brought into an arena to be slain for the entertainment of a bloodthirsty multitude. The Roman governor, taking mercy on Polycarp, promised him life and freedom if he would curse and repudiate Christ. Polycarp's answer has become immortal. "Eighty and six years I served him, and he has done me no wrong. How then can I speak evil of my King, who saved me?"

We thought days such as this were past, but of course they are not. Probably they will never be entirely past. Believers are languishing in prisons today behind the iron curtain, and some, directly or indirectly, have suffered death because of their faith.

Polycarp will probably stand in the arena many times before the pageant of history is completed. — Elisha Douglass

The Know-How Being Ignored

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The information and knowhow are free for the asking, and so valuable it must be thought of as a catalyst in correcting the lagging productivity problem. But it isn't sought. It is ignored.

Instead, management executives seeking to raise productivity call in outside management consultants. The consultants immediately seek the knowledge they need from those who possess it. They query the workers.

The first question they ask is: "What's wrong?" Usually they get an earful. They sometimes ask just one more question: "How do you think it can be fixed?" Again, they receive concrete, specific answers.

The answers, very sound ones, says George Labovitz, consultant and professor, are printed up between expensive covers and presented to management, along with a bill for consulting services rendered.

Too often, says Labovitz, management blames workers for lagging productivity, when in fact the blame lies with them. Rather than invite workers to participate, he says, management ignores and blames them.

George Labovitz, 42, professor of management at Boston University School of Management and president of Organizational Dynamics Inc., preaches participative management with a conviction based in results.

"Management has to let people into the process," he says. How ironic, he observes, that management detaches itself from the reality, seeks to make decisions in a vacuum and then blames the workers.

The general thrust of participatory management is that it is easier to lower the river than raise the bridge, says Labovitz. That is, it is easier in a recessionary environment to cut costs than to raise sales.

If an employee contributes an idea that save $1,000, he explains, that saving often goes right to the bottom line.

But for a salesman to make a similar contribution might require a $10,000 improvement in sales.

Oddly, the estrangement of management from its own workers seems to have developed simultaneously with what is often considered to be modern, professional management. But Labovitz feels that participatory management has conclusively demonstrated its practical superiority.

In Japan, for example, where each worker is also considered his own critic. And in the best American companies, where there is an overwhelming emphasis on people.

In fact, he preaches, the best run American companies are very much like well run Japanese concerns. They are, he says, tight and flat. They are combat-like organizations pulling together for a common goal.

In such companies, he observes, management and workers participate together for the same goals. They are involved. "Management is out on the line — with the bank tellers, the salesmen, the nurses," he says. He sees "good management as experiential," rather than theoretical, "hands on" rather than abstract, in contact rather than distant.

Increasingly, critics of American management have observed that some of the latest improvements are really the remembrance of things past, of effective ways of doing things that were wrongly discarded.

In a sense, some of Labovitz's theories might fit that category. If they do, it seems that Americans have seen the errors of their ways. About 300 companies, many of them high on the Fortune 500 list, and about 1,000 hospitals, now use Labovitz's programs, and he has advised the FBI, the Department of Labor and the U.S. Army War College.

What he tells managers essentially is that "the door to productivity is locked from the inside," and that by opening up those doors the true potential of an organization can be realized.

Sen. Hatch Vows Pursuit Of Donovan Inquiry

By MERRILL HARTSON
AP Labor Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Senate Labor Committee is vowing to pursue allegations linking Labor Secretary Raymond J. Donovan to union payoffs and organized crime figures — despite an anonymous death threat to a committee investigator.

Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, disclosed that a committee investigator got a call warning him "to lay off" Donovan, the subject of a special prosecutor's investigation in New York City and a continuing Senate committee probe.

Hatch, who declined to identify the staff member, said "there's no proof that it could be attributed to anybody. But, basically it was to lay off Mr. Donovan."

"It was a serious call. It was a threat," said Hatch, adding the matter had been referred to the FBI. The senator also said, "I've had some minor threats in this matter, but I don't consider them significant."

One labor committee

source, who declined to be named publicly, said the anonymous caller warned that if the investigator did not back away from the Donovan probe, "your wife will end up in a pine box."

The labor secretary said through a spokesman late Wednesday that he would not comment on the death threat.

Spokesman Vernon Louviere reiterated Donovan's position that he will not talk publicly about the allegations against him while the case is before a special grand jury in Brooklyn, N.Y.

Hatch's disclosure of the death threat came on the same day that the Utah senator and committee members said they were outraged by instigation of a counter-investigation of the labor committee. That probe has been launched by Schiavone Construction Co., the New Jersey firm which Donovan served as executive vice president before joining the Reagan administration.

Donovan is under investigation by special prosecutor Leon Silverman on an allegation that in 1977, while with the Schiavone company, he was present at a Long Island City restaurant luncheon at which a $2,000 payoff was made to the head of Local 29 of the Blasters Union.

with the representative. If you're writing a letter, keep it short. It should be neatly typed, clearly and logically written. An be sure to mention the name and number of the specific piece of legislation that concerns you — such as Child Safety Act, House Bill 1000. Simply expressing an interest in children doesn't tell him if that is a good or bad bill.

Form letters get very little attention. Form postcards get even less. Word processing equipment is now available to make a form letter look like a personally written letter. But, with the volume of mail generated this way, the representatives can usually spot a form letter. Kirk says he has form letters ready to respond to practically every kind of form letter Broyhill receives.

Just making one contact isn't likely to have much impact. The two recommend persistence. And numbers. If you want the legislator to support your bill, get everybody you know who feels the same way to write him, or to drop in at his office. If you know someone who knows the representative, try to enlist him in your cause. He might have better access. And, if you have an interest in political issues, you might consider getting interested in political candidates. It's always easier to persuade the representative if he remembers that you helped in his last campaign.

Since Silverman opened his investigation early this year, new allegations by FBI informants have been made, including an assertion that Donovan had business and social ties to several reputed organized crime figures.

The labor secretary denied allegations of union corruption and links to mobsters during his confirmation hearings, but has refused to discuss the case in recent months. He testified May 12 before the federal grand jury in Brooklyn. Meanwhile, Hatch said his committee will continue to look into the allegations against Donovan. But he also said that no new hearings will be held until Silverman completes his investigation.

"It's the special prosecutor's job," he said. "I'll wait for his report." Hatch said he was "personally offended" by the counter-investigation of his committee by the New Jersey construction company.

Sen. Dan Quayle, R-Ind., another member of the Labor Committee, suggested that Donovan consider resigning.

At the White House, deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said President Reagan retains confidence in Donovan.

Hatch and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., the ranking minority member of the committee, wrote a letter to Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker, R-Tenn., condemning the tactics. Their letter calls news accounts of the investigation of the Senate Labor Committee "a matter of grave concern to us, transcending any partisan political concerns, largely because it appears to be an assault upon the institution of the Senate itself."

They called on Baker and Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd for advice on how to respond to what "evidently is intended as a threat to (the Senate's) membership, proceedings and integrity."

Theodore Geiser, a Newark, N.J., attorney representing Schiavone, said Wednesday the aim of the company's inquiry was to determine the source of allegations against Donovan and to track down leads to the news media. Asked whether the counter-investigation was started at Donovan's request, Geiser replied: "Absolutely not. I want to make it very clear that what we're undertaking is on behalf of the company and its employees."

code than to keep it on the reporting forms.

It's a small matter — $1.3 million for NEISS out of a $700 billion federal budget — but small matters often contribute to large insights. Our government is bogged down in hundreds of entrenched programs that fall into this same pattern. Crop reports, accident reports, air samples, water samples, morbidity data, the consumption of spinach in school lunches — you name it, the government wants it reported. And all these reports must be received, analyzed, summarized, compiled and interred. Some small fraction of the data is truly important; a large amount may be moderately useful; much of it is data for data's sake.

Jimmy Carter warred upon this costly bureaucratic addiction. Ronald Reagan is warring upon it now. Presidents come and presidents go, but file clerks live forever. Great toppling tombstones! Useless statistics are hazardous to our wealth.

Falklands Campaign May Hinge On An Air Battle

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — The crucial battle for control of the Falkland Islands will be fought in the skies above the South Atlantic chain when the British task force launches its apparently imminent invasion, British military analysts believe.

The fleet massing off the Falklands will be at its most vulnerable when it moves within combat range of Argentina's air power, based on the mainland.

"If it can't get its air defense right, then it's in trouble," said Col. Jonathan Alford, deputy director of the International Institute of Strategic Studies.

Argentina's air force commander, Gen. Basilio Lami Dozo, has threatened a massive air assault when the Royal Navy fleet moves inshore to land its 4,000 marines and paratroopers.

British experts question Argentina's ability to mount a large-scale coordinated air attack. But "if the Argentines are prepared to risk their planes in a determined fashion," said Alford, "it will be very difficult to produce a water-tight defense. The Argentines will lose a lot of planes and men. But if the Argentine pilots are prepared to die in a major attack, some will get through."

"The main problem the fleet has suffered right from the start is the lack of air cover. ... operating a long way from home without early-warning radar and an adequate fighter umbrella," said Vice Adm. Sir John Roxburgh, a former NATO submarine force commander.

The Argentines can muster about 190 combat planes for any mass attack. Against this, the British have about 30 Sea Harrier fighters on the task force's two carriers, Hermes and Invincible. But an estimated 10 of these are RAF ground-attack craft, assigned to strike at Argentine shore positions in support of the landing force.

That will leave only 20 fighters to meet any large-scale Argentine air strike. But the missile-armed fighters, dubbed "dancers of the skies" because of their maneuverability, will be backed by a formidable arsenal of missiles aboard the ships.

These include computer-controlled Sea Wolves aboard several ships that probably will be stationed between the Falklands and the mainland as an anti-aircraft screen.

So far, the Argentines have not committed their warplanes to a major strike. The British say that in the only dogfight of the six-week-old conflict, on May 1, the Harriers downed two Mirage fighters and an aging Canberra bomber, and no British planes were lost. In the only other air strike against the fleet, Sea Wolves brought down two A-4 Skyhawks, and another one trying to evade a missile cartwheeled into the sea.

The Argentines' only success in the air came May 4 when a French-built Super Etendard fighter-bomber wrecked the destroyer Sheffield with a French Exocet missile. Informed sources said one of the three planes involved in that operation crashed when it ran out of fuel before it could get back to its base.

Informed sources who asked not to be identified said the Argentines have only four Exocets left and are husbanding them for a major strike when the British fleet moves into invasion range.

"If the Argentines use other planes to run interference to let the Super Etendards through with their Exocets, the British should count on as many as two getting through the net," said one source.

However, Alford commented: "I think in the end it will be the quality of the pilots that will decide the question of air superiority, and the British have the advantage in this respect."

Award Medal ECU Cadet

ECU News Bureau
Maj. Gen. Thomas B. Bruton of Washington, D.C., awarded East Carolina University ROTC Cadet Stephen R. Jones the Air Force ROTC Silver Valor Award for Jones's involvement in helping an injured student.

The medal, given rarely, is granted for "saving someone's life without risk to one's own life," explained ECU's Capt. Steven A. Bienstock. If Jones had not administered first aid to the student, Michael Leflore, he might have died, officials said.

Maj. Gen. Bruton, staff judge advocate for the Air Force, pinned the medal on Jones at a recent ceremony. He also awarded the cadet a ribbon and citation.

Laflore, 19, a freshman from Charlotte, punched his hand through a fire extinguisher in a university dormitory in March, severing an artery. Jones, a dormitory resident adviser who has never had first aid training, applied pressure to the wound, elevated his arm and secured an ambulance.

Selective As To Compatibility

WASHINGTON (AP) — In what may be a unique practice, the Agriculture Department is trying to make sure that appointees to its scientific grant review panels are only people whose "philosophical views" are compatible with those of the Reagan administration, an official says.

James Handley, an assistant to the secretary of the department, said Wednesday that checks on nominees for the review panels take the "philosophy" of the nominees into consideration. Other government agencies sponsoring research do not, as far as is known, seek political or philosophical compatibility, but all agencies run background and security checks.

Handley said that the procedure for checking nominees was not aimed at insuring "political" compatibility. "If you review the people we've appointed you'll probably find a wide mixture of political views," he said.

Asked if the department had ruled out anyone because of differing philosophy, Handley said, "I don't think we've found any."

Asked for an example which would rule out a scientist's service on a review panel, Handley said, "I don't know if I can draw you an example," but then added, "We don't want any big spenders." If two scientists have equal ability, "and you find one of those people shares your philosophical viewpoint, and one is very much opposed to you, our job is to appoint those people with our philosophical views," he said.

"As far as I know, this went on under the previous administration," he added. The department's Scientific and Education Administration awards about $16 million a year to university scientists. About 800 scientists apply and about 80 others are asked each to serve on panels to judge the scientific merit of the proposed projects.

Members of the panels are paid their regular university salaries by the federal government while sitting for what Handley said might be 10 days of work over a three-month period.

The Washington Post reported in Thursday's editions that although scientists must routinely pass political checks before holding policy-making jobs in the department, a bitter controversy broke out when the department extended political loyalty checks early this year to scientists who make no policy decisions but only provide expert advice on the scientific quality of grant applications.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: P equals R

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Opening lead: Four of ♠.
South's success on this hand was based on a simple proposition. If you need one of two finesses, your chance of finding one right is exactly the same as that of finding the other.

South's opening bid is fully justified because of his fillers and five-card suit. Despite his six-card suit, North was not interested in slam, so he bid what he thought would be the simpler contract.

This hand is from a team match, and the same contract was reached at both tables. At both tables the lead was a low heart, and both declarers made the technically correct play of the jack from dummy. East put up the queen and declarer won.

One declarer cashed the king of diamonds and continued by overtaking the ten of diamonds with the jack. That lost to the queen and dummy was dead forever. When clubs failed to break declarer could come to only six tricks.

The other declarer combined his chances. After winning the king of hearts, he led the ten of diamonds to the jack. East could not afford to win this because the diamond suit would then run. Now declarer used his entry to the table to take the club finesse, which won.

Declarer got back to dummy by overtaking the king of diamonds with the ace. Had the queen dropped, the contract would have been assured. When the lady did not appear, declarer repeated the club finesse and cashed the ace of clubs. Even though the suit did not split evenly, he was in control. He simply gave up a club and made his contract - one spade trick, two hearts, two diamonds and four clubs.

True, declarer would have gone down had the defenders' hands been reversed, whereas the first declarer would have gotten

Cruise Missile Test A Success

DUGWAY PROVING GROUND, Utah (AP) - The latest successful test of the computer-controlled Tomahawk Cruise missile could hasten its scheduled deployment in Europe next year, the Air Force says.

The missile was launched here Wednesday in the fourth of 11 tests planned before deployment of the nuclear-equipped weapons.

"We were very pleased with the performance of the launching system, which was our primary focus," said Col. Donald Couture, ground launch program manager.

"We feel the Tomahawk is well on its way to operational use."

In a post-flight briefing, Couture said the missiles, intended to counter the Soviet nuclear threat in Eastern Europe, could be operational before the test schedule is completed.

"If they all go like today, we may want to shorten that a bit," he said.

Couture said the test was successful despite the failure of the missile's telemetry system, which gives information on engine thrust, temperature and performance.

The system failed 16 minutes after launch and almost forced an early termination of the flight, Couture said. Officials decided to continue the test when trailing F-4 fighters began monitoring the missile's performance.

The blue-and-orange missile was hurled 500 feet above the desert by a rocket booster from a camouflaged mobile launcher before its jet engine ignited to carry it on a 906-mile, circular test flight.

Couture said the missile was programmed to attack two simulated targets in western Utah. It was the first test conducted entirely under Air Force authority.

At the end of its two-hour flight, the missile floated slowly to the ground under a parachute triggered about 25 miles from the launch site.

Couture said the primary purpose of the launch was to test computer programs that identify the missile's target and course.

The $1.3 million missile flies at altitudes below 100 feet to evade radar, at speeds up to 550 mph. It has a range of about 1,500 miles.

A Navy version of the Tomahawk has been fired from submarines.

How's The Weather?

Fronts: Cold Warm Occluded Stationary

WEATHER FORECAST - The National Weather Service forecasts showers for Friday from Texas to the Dakotas and across the lower midwest to the mid-Atlantic. Cool weather is expected for New England and the upper Great Lakes. (AP Laserphoto)

By The Associated Press
The National Weather Service says occasional sunshine, warm and humid weather is expected today with a chance of mainly late afternoon thunderstorms.

Highs will be mostly in the 80s. Tonight should be cloudy, damp and mild with a few showers or thunderstorms.

Clouds will persist Friday along with temperatures a bit cooler than today's readings and a continued chance of showers.

No clear-cut drying trends are forecast for the weekend. Saturday and Sunday should be partly cloudy with a chance of afternoon and evening thunderstorms. Highs will be in the 70s and 80s.

Thunderstorms affected many portions of the state yesterday and last night. The showers later diminished and gave way to lingering clouds and patchy fog. Temperatures were mid overnight with dawn readings in the upper 50s to mid 60s statewide.

A high pressure system well off the coast is still pumping warm, moist southerly winds over the state. Tonight a cold front dropping southward from the Great Lakes area will begin to affect our weather.

The cold front is scheduled to sink southward across the state during the day Friday, lowering temperatures and maintaining a chance of showers.

Solar Fraction

Greenville's solar fraction calculated by the department of physics of East Carolina University was 65 Wednesday, which means that a solar water heater could have provided 65 percent of your hot water.

Took Honors In History Contest

Students at E.B. Aycock Junior High won two first place awards and three honorable mentions in the annual Tar Heel Junior Historian statewide competition held Tuesday in Raleigh.

One of the Aycock students, Glenye Cain, was a double honors winner. She received the top award in the individual media category for her taped project, "An Oral History of Mrs. J.B. Spilman," the first woman to run for political office in Pitt County.

For this project, Glenye also received the special award presented by the Bloomsbury Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution for outstanding work in oral history.

Nancy Johnson won first place in the individual arts category for her model of a Pitt County tobacco farm.

Another model building, that of Greenville's Jones-Lee House constructed by Greg Vacek and Mark Elmore, won honorable mention in the group arts category. This model was displayed recently in the Jones-Lee house for the April 17 Heritage Tour of homes.

In the literary category, Skip Pascasio received an honorable mention for "Research on the Tucker Graveyard" in individual entries; Jennifer Byrd, Nancy Douglas and Vicki Parrott received honorable mention for their group entry, "The Lost Colony."

E.B. Aycock students had to compete in the special achievements division of the competition. This division is for clubs that have won first places in three regular contests. Only first place and honorable mentions are given.

In addition to the Tar Heel Junior Historian competition, Aycock had winners in the historic architecture photography contest. Sarah Burden won first place in photographs of barns; third place in institutional commercial; and third place in industrial commercial. Kevin Baker won first place in the category of photography of houses.

All these projects were an outgrowth of classroom study in the eighth grade gifted history-language arts class team taught by Faye Creegan and Patricia Sheppard.

The Aycock winning entries, along with other winners, will be on display in the N.C. Museum of History in Raleigh for a one-year period.

154 Pints To Bloodmobile

The Bloodmobile visit Wednesday at the Moose Lodge resulted in the collection of 154 pints of blood, according to Ruth Taylor of the Pitt Red Cross.

Miss Taylor said there were also 12 deferrals recorded during the blood drive. Of the total units collected, 36 percent were donated by employees from area banks.

The next Bloodmobile visit to the area will be June 11 at Procter & Gamble, followed by a July 1 Moose Lodge visit. The July 1 drive begins the new fiscal year for the blood program, Miss Taylor said.

Arrest Two For Break-In

Greenville police early today arrested two men on breaking, entering and larceny charges and recovered most of $2,652 worth of merchandise allegedly taken from a storage warehouse at White's Department Store at 524 Dickinson Ave.

Chief Glenn Cannon identified the men arrested as Jerry Coward, 24, of Stafford, Conn., and Howard Kennedy, 22, of 412A Davis St.

Officers, the chief said, saw two men carrying a large box across Dickinson Avenue near the Pitt Street intersection about 1:55 a.m. Investigating, they found a large box full of clothes near the intersection, and Coward and Kennedy hiding behind Home and Auto Supply Co. at 718 Dickinson Ave.

Further investigation revealed that someone had gained entrance to the White's storage warehouse by cutting a lock from the door, and removed $2,652 worth of merchandise, including such things as jeans, tennis shoes, men's robes, sweatshirts, shorts, shirts, batteries and a flashlight.

Cannon noted that $2,173 worth of merchandise was recovered at the time Coward and Kennedy were arrested, while 16 pairs of tennis shoes valued at $479 are still missing.

Investigation of the case is continuing.

Three Pitt Countians Are Chosen For Trip

MIKE ARCHIE

TOMMY LITTLE

CHARLES MAYO

Three Pitt County men have been selected to represent Rotary Club District 773 on a five-week trip to southern England in September as part of a cultural exchange to promote international understanding.

Selected were Charles Mayo of Falkland and Tommy Little and Mike Archie of Greenville. Also named to the group study exchange team were Brownie Futrell of Washington and Dempsey Herring of Lake Waccamaw.

The exchange teams consist of five non-Rotarians between the ages of 25 and 35 and one Rotarian team captain, who will be Past District Governor Gene Merritt of Wilmington.

District 773 is one of four Rotary districts in the state and has 50 clubs in southeastern North Carolina. One year from now a similar team from England will visit District 773. The teams study small business, industry, government, recreation, religion and customs.

Mayo is transportation officer with the Pitt County and Greenville school systems, Little is senior manufacturing engineer with Eaton Corp. here, and Archie is a manufacturing supervisor with Du Pont in Kinston.

Democrats Seek Funds To Challenge Sen. Helms

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina Democrats are mounting a drive to raise money for a senatorial confrontation between their 1984 candidate and Republican incumbent Jesse Helms.

Officials say the action is the result of what they've learned from watching

Helms' National Congressional Club, a group that helped raise more than $7 million for his 1978 re-election bid.

The Democrats call themselves the North Carolinians for Responsible Representation. They have not yet filed with the Federal Election Commission in Washington, D.C.

Gov. Jim Hunt is considered Helms' most likely opposition.

Joseph A. Pell, a Hunt adviser, said Democrats wouldn't try to emulate Helms' organization, adding that "I think they (Democrats) see that the tactics that have been used in previous campaigns have been successful."

"They've found out it's sure hard to stay on the high road," he said. "You've almost got to get down there at the bottom with them."

Much of Helms' 1978 re-election money that the National Congressional Club raised came from out of state, and much of it bought television advertising that many Democrats called smear tactics.

Officials say the Democrats' committee will be organized in Washington, D.C., and begin seeking contributions from North Carolinians, but may expand to other states.

Hunt, who says he hasn't decided whether to run against Helms in 1984, says a political action committee on his behalf is only in the talking stage.

"No final decision has been made yet," he said, adding that if such a group is formed, it will be designed "to get the facts out" and to raise money.

"Our feeling is that there are a lot of North Carolina people raising for Jesse Helms, and a lot of that money will never get back to North Carolina," said John Crumpler, an organizer of the North Carolinians for Responsible Representation group.

Sees Risk In Aged Driver

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — An 81-year-old woman who crashed her car into a bus bench killing three women and injuring five others has lost use of her driver's license for one year and been fined $500.

Dade County Judge David M. Gersten told the woman, Gertrude Karmiol: "I think you'd be doing everyone a service never to get behind the wheel again."

The fine was the maximum permitted for the careless driving conviction for the February accident. He also suspended her driver's license for one year.

"This isn't an isolated case, but it's a classic case. I believe I will personally take it upon myself ... to see if we can get some reasonable laws to protect the public," the judge said.

Gersten called Florida's current requirement of just passing a written test every four years "a mockery." He recommended that elderly drivers, perhaps at 75, be required to pass a physical exam to prove they can react in emergencies.

Mrs. Karmiol sat quietly in the Miami Beach courtroom during three hours of testimony, showing little reaction.

She voluntarily relinquished her driver's license after being ordered to retake a driver's exam last March. She had run into three other people with her car in two accidents since 1978.

Ten people, including three eyewitnesses and three accident survivors, testified at the trial. They gave conflicting reports of why Mrs. Karmiol's car jumped the curb and rammed the bench, but agreed she never braked before crashing into the bus stop.

Name Twelve Students To Attend Boys' State

Twelve students who will be seniors in school year 1982-83 have been selected by Greenville's Post 39 to attend the American Legion Boys' State at Wake Forest University in Winston-Salem from June 13-19.

Six of those chosen are students at Rose High School. They are: Alen Dickens, son of Mr. and Mrs. M.B. Dickens; John Byrd, son of Dr. and Mrs. J. William Byrd; John D. Ormond, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Lyman Ormond, Jr.; John A. Bennett Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Bennett;

Walter Reid Tripp Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Reid Tripp; and James Robert Buie, son of Mrs. Nancy Emory.

Five of the 12 selected are students at North Pitt High School. They are: Keith E. Coltrain, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eldon Coltrain; David Lawrence Davenport, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Davenport; Mark James, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene James; Roy Edgar Ballard Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy E. Ballard; and Woody Leggett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Leggett.

The twelfth member is Christopher James Murphy, a student at D.H. Conley High School. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Murphy.

Boys' State delegates take part in a variety of activities designed to improve their understanding of the organization and operation of government and policies in North Carolina. They also study major areas of state and public policies currently being debated in North Carolina. The primary object of Boys' State is to foster citizenship for present and future generations of Tar Heels.

Candidates are screened for outstanding qualities including leadership, character, scholarship and service. Lester E. Adams of American Legion Post 39 serves as chairman of the Boys' State Committee.

Girl Scouts At Weekend Camp

Approximately 300 Girl Scouts and adults participated in a weekend of camping and related activities last weekend at Camp Hardee.

In addition to cooking their own meals, many girls were involved in crafts, canoeing, paddle-boarding, camp fire safety, learning new songs and proper tent procedures.

A Sunday morning service and a flag ceremony highlighted the more serious aspect of the weekend.

Naming Park For Gaylord Perry

WILLIAMSTON — The newest of Williamston's recreation areas, a park located off Pine Street extension, will be named the Gaylord Perry Park at a ceremony to be held at the site at 10:30 Friday morning.

Perry, a Martin County native, is the 15th major league baseball player to establish a record of 300 game wins in his career.

Chances are that Perry will not be able to be in attendance; however, First District Rep. Walter B. Jones, a number of Perry's immediate family, and town officials will be on hand for the ceremony.

The new park consists of two youth baseball fields, four tennis courts, several areas for playing basketball and Williamston's new recreation building which serves as an office, has an all-purpose room and an exercise room. The park additionally has areas not yet developed.

Fla. Drug Smuggling Curbed

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is claiming success in stopping drug smuggling into South Florida by using sophisticated airborne radar.

A House Government Operations subcommittee, pleased with the news, planned to question Defense Department officials today in hopes of getting assurances that the Pentagon will play a leading role indefinitely in fighting drug smuggling.

Assistant Treasury Secretary John M. Walker Jr. said Wednesday that AWACS-type planes have very nearly shut off the massive air supplies of drugs that have helped turn South Florida into the nation's crime capital.

The radar planes "in the last two months have had a nearly total effect" in discouraging smugglers, Walker said. Of the relative few who have tried to evade it, many have been caught, he added.

The effectiveness of the radar has been "close to 100 percent," he told reporters during a brief recess by the subcommittee.

Rep. Glenn English, D-Okla., the subcommittee chairman, noted that in addition to the Airborne Warning and Control System-type planes, the government also is relying on a blimp-like aircraft known as a Sky Hook or "Fat Albert" to detect smugglers.

The craft, anchored to the ground in the Florida keys, floats more than 10,000 feet in the air. Like a plane equipped with AWACS, it has "look down" capacity that can detect low-flying planes that would go unnoticed by more conventional radar.

English endorsed a Treasury Department proposal to set up a second Sky Hook at Patrick Air Force Base in Florida.

The two Sky Hooks could be supplemented by training flights of AWACS-type planes, he suggested.

"I hope these hearings will strike such terror that we'll be able to declare a victory today" over drug smuggling along the South Florida coast, English said.

Administration officials said an apparent decrease in crime in the Miami and surrounding area is due in part to creation this winter of a task force on South Florida crime headed by Vice President George Bush. The administration's optimism has been supported by Florida officials who said the crime rate appears to be easing.

"It is too early at this time to determine whether there has been a displacement of smuggling operations to other areas" of the country, Walker testified. But he said it may be too costly and too risky to fly to other states.

"It is believed that smuggling between Colombia and South Florida is less flexible than originally thought," said Walker.

Rep. Dante Fascell, D-Fla., agreed that the administration's use of the latest military technology has hampered smugglers in his home state.

"A lot of them are sitting on the front porch sipping bourbon until the heat is off," Fascell said. He urged the administration to continue the surveillance permanently.

Walker cited Tuesday's capture by U.S. Customs agents of three men and a cattle transport plane in New Iberia, La., as evidence the new interdiction program is succeeding. The plane, returning from Panama, carried 1,100 pounds of high-grade cocaine, valued at $50 million, hidden in feed sacks, Customs officials said.

Walker said that since the creation of the administration task force to crack down on Florida drug smuggling, wholesale prices of marijuana and cocaine in Colombia have dropped substantially and street prices for the drugs here have risen.

Smuggler aircraft "appear to be on standby," he said, and two-man flight crews are demanding $100,000 to $150,000 per flight, double what they were charging a

City Employee Benefit Added

The city of Greenville has a new employee benefit — the Employee Assistance Program carried out in conjunction with the Pitt County Mental Health Center.

The program offers confidential assistance for municipal employees who are experiencing personal problems.

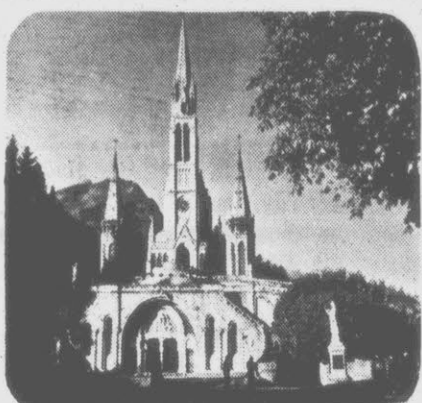

City Personnel Director Jerry Cox said he feels the program is an asset to the employees who use it and to the city. "The program is aimed at early detection and early treatment of any personal problem. It used to be that personal and emotional problems were regarded as misconduct or moral issues. Because of this kind of thinking, many good people lost their jobs and also the chance to recover from their problems," Cox said.

that we feel the EAP is a cost-effective means of dealing with costly problems."

Orientation sessions for supervisors and employees were held recently by EAP consultant Lynne Siddall. She said approximately 500 employers in North Carolina have implemented EAPs. Christians Rejoice Christians around the world today celebrate the ascension of Christ into heaven. But just how many Christians there are had been a matter of conjecture until the World Christian Encyclopedia was published recently. This Oxford census reports a total of 1.4 billion Christians — 32.8% of the world's population. Its nearest rivals are Islam with 16.5% and Hinduism with 13.3%. Although the percentage of atheists has risen from .2% to 2.0% since 1900, the percentage of Christians has remained steady. Christianity is losing Westerners at the rate of 7,600 per day, but it is gaining 16,000 members a day in Africa alone. In the U.S. there are about 160 million Christians in over 2,050 different denominations.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock broiler market was steady. Supplies moderate. Demand moderate. Weights desirable. The dock weighted average price for this week is 44.07 for small purchases of plant grade broilers picked up at processing plants. Estimated slaughter today 1,553,000.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market drifted lower today as the decline of the past six sessions continued.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 29.97 in the last six trading days, slipped another 2.38 to 833.52 by noon today.

Losers held a 3-2 lead over gainers in the over-all tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said the market was unable to mount much of a rally in the face of concern over high interest rates and doubts about the chances for an economic recovery from the recession in the near future.

Traders also were unsettled this week by the inability of a small government securities firm, Drysdale Government Securities, to make interest payments on some transactions in which it had been involved.

Chase Manhattan Bank, at the center of the situation, and Manufacturers Hanover Trust, with a lesser role, announced Wednesday that they would cover the debts.

But brokers noted that many questions remained to be answered about the situation.

Chase Manhattan stock, off 4 1/2 in the last two sessions, dropped 3/4 to 46 1/2. On Wednesday Chase estimated that the Drysdale case would mean a charge of $135 million against its second-quarter earnings.

The NYSE's composite index lost .13 to 66.19. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 2.56 at 270.29.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 21.59 million shares at noon, against 25.54 million at the same point Wednesday.

Aerobics Dance Class Planned

Pitt County Community Schools in cooperation with Winterville Recreation Inc. will sponsor an aerobics dance class at A.G. Cox School in Winterville beginning Monday.

The class will meet for six weeks on Mondays and Wednesdays from 5:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. each night. Instructor for the class will be Rosie Purser. Registration will be held the first night.

For further information, call the Pitt County Community Schools office at 752-6106, Ext. 248 or 249.

Responded To 115 Alarms

During April the rural fire departments of Pitt County answered 115 alarms with 106 fires, County Fire Marshal Bobby Joyner said.

There were 11 house fires, two in house trailers, six in buildings, nine in motor vehicles, 39 grasslands and woods fires, 39 "others" and nine mutual aids.

There was $149,750 involved in fires; $3,465,998 exposed; $66,400 lost; and $3,549,348 saved by the rural fire departments, Joyner said. The Staton House Fire Department had the most fires—18.

City Postpones Workshop Date

The City Council has postponed until sometime in July a workshop meeting with members of the Ad Hoc Committee on Public Safety to hear a presentation regarding the group's public safety report.

The workshop had been scheduled for May 24 but the council informed Dr. Wallace Wolles, committee chairman, that it would have more time to devote to studying the report after the city budget is adopted at the end of June.

The committee, in its report to the mayor and council, is recommending the establishment of a permanent, five-member public safety commission with the chiefs of police and fire-rescue serving as ex-officio members.

RALEIGH — St. Mary's College held its 140th commencement exercises on Saturday. Graduates included:

Greenville — Jane Jordan Edgerly, daughter of Mrs. Donald Allen Edgerly Sr., 243 Windsor Rd.; Angela Tripp Patrick, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. D. R. Patrick, Route 9; Farmville — Mary London Darden, parents of Dr. and Mrs. Cowan Darden, 201 West Church St.

Transportation Week Planned

Gov. Jim Hunt proclaimed May 16-22 as Transportation Week in North Carolina, emphasizing the theme, "Pathways to Progress."

In conjunction with the observance, C.W. Snell Jr., Division 2 engineer in Greenville, said the public may tour the highway offices and maintenance yards in the division Friday between the hours of 9 a.m. and noon. He said a Division of Highways representative will be at each location to explain the role of the department.

The division consists of Pitt, Beaufort, Craven, Pamlico, Carteret, Jones, Lenoir and Greene counties.

Winners In Math Contest

The following Pitt County students were winners in the recent third annual Middle School Math Contest:

•Seventh grade — first place, Alex McLawhorn, Grifton; second, Brian Joyner, A.G. Cox; third, (tie) Meredith Page, Ayden, Missy Rose, Grifton, and Donna Lister, Grifton.

•Eighth grade — first, Roy Lewis, A.G. Cox; second,

Mary Lyon, A.G. Cox; third, Keith Pridden, Grifton.

•Algebra I — first, William Carlye Dunn, A.G. Cox; second, Curtis Clay Tucker, Grifton; third, Reggie Barrow, Grifton.

Best school awards went to Grifton, A.G. Cox and Chicod respectively, with Grifton receiving the best algebra team award.

Budget Plan....

scored last year with the "bipartisan recovery budget" he has worked out with conservative Democrats and moderate Republicans.

In the Senate, meanwhile, majority Republican leaders Wednesday stripped their budget of plans for $40 billion in Social Security savings over three years. At the same time, they restored $3 billion for a variety of domestic programs including Medicare, guaranteed student loans, housing, veterans programs and space.

Michel's budget calls for deeper cuts in domestic and benefit programs and the defense buildup than either the Jones plan or the proposal under consideration in the Senate.

President Reagan was calling Republican members of the Senate today to lobby against any effort to scale back previously approved tax cuts. Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said "we are encouraged by the support for the compromise budget" in the Senate.

Speakes said the Michel budget proposal in the House was "close to what we can support in most respects," while the Democrats' version went "back to the old policies of too much spending, too much taxing" and allowed too little money for defense.

Reagan himself has not made a public commitment to Michel's budget, although White House budget director David A. Stockman participated in the private meetings in which it was hammered out.

"If the president isn't with us, then we're in real big trouble," said Rep. Silvio O. Conte, R-Mass., one of the moderates who helped fashion the package.

Chiropractor At Seminar

Dr. Steven I. Cohen of Family Chiropractic Health and Accident Services of Winterville attended a post-graduate seminar in Atlanta recently.

The seminar's focus was neurological dysfunction and improvement of neurologic communities on a recently discovered approach, "Bio-Energetic Synchronization Technique." Cohen said the method has been shown to speed the healing process in injuries including fractures and whiplash sprain injuries.

Service Station Robbed

FARMVILLE — The Hustler 1 Service Station at Marlboro was robbed at gunpoint Monday evening, police said today.

Police Capt. W.G. Barber said the station attendant, Ellen Gallmeyer, reported that a man wearing a ski mask entered the store about 8:30 p.m. and pointed a handgun at her. She followed his instruction to open the cash register and he pulled the money into a paper bag. He left the store on foot, she said, headed west on U.S. 264.

A convenience store across the highway intersection was robbed about two weeks ago. It was raining during both robberies, Barber pointed out. During the first robbery a knife was used and the man's head was covered with a stocking.

Boston Stays Alive With 114-85 Romp

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics and Philadelphia 76ers usually fight furiously to the bitter end. Recently, the end has come long before the final buzzer. Just 10 days after burying the 76ers by 40 points and only three days after being crushed by 25, the Celtics walloped Philadelphia by 29 Wednesday night to stay alive in the seesaw series of the National Basketball Association playoffs.

Boston's 114-85 romp slashed the 76ers' lead in the best-of-seven Eastern Conference final to 3-2. Game Six is Friday night in Philadelphia.

"This game was over in the latter part of the third period," said 76er guard Andrew Toney, who canned just six of 20 field goal attempts after hitting 14 of 21 in Sunday's 119-94 Philadelphia victory.

Boston had 85 points through three periods, the same amount Philadelphia had in four.

On Sunday, the 76ers had 85 points after three quarters, just nine fewer than Boston had for the entire game. In the Celtics' 121-81 triumph that opened the series, they scored their 81st point with 4:39 left in the third period.

Why have the teams been taking turns routing each other?

"With two great teams like this, all it takes is one little setup in one area and you're going to capitalize," said Boston center Rick Robey. "Tonight we played defense and were able to capitalize. The last two games we didn't play well and they capitalized."

"It shows the capability of both clubs to make adjustments and come back after a low point," said Celtic M.L. Carr.

The nearly 21-point average margin of victory is particularly unusual for the 76ers' and Celtics. In last season's Eastern Conference final, when the Celtics clawed back from a 3-1 deficit to eliminate the 76ers, three games were decided by two points and two others by one.

Boston has outscored Philadelphia by 34 points in the current series but still is just one loss away from being foiled in its attempt to successfully defend its NBA title.

"It's not like income averaging," Carr said. "You don't add up the points and the team with the most points wins."

Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham agreed.

"The point spread doesn't mean anything, just a win," he said.

The Celtics got that Wednesday night with a rejuvenated team defense and by using the two days off to adjust their offense to the absence of playmaker Nate "Tiny" Archibald, who dislocated his shoulder in Saturday's third game.

Robert Parish's 15 points led Boston to a 33-22 lead after the first quarter, and the closest the 76ers came thereafter was nine points.

Parish led all scorers with 26 points, and Larry Bird added 20 points and 20 rebounds for Boston. Toney had 18 points and Darryl Dawkins scored 14 for the 76ers.

If a seventh game is necessary, it will be here Sunday afternoon. The winner of the series will face Los Angeles, which swept its two playoff series in four games each, for the NBA championship.

Boston, seeking to become the first team since the 1967-68 and 1968-69 Celtics to win back-to-back titles, was aggressive on defense, often forcing the 76ers into poor shots as the 24-second clock wound down.

STANTONSBURG — Rose High School's Steve Holloman was disqualified from the Regional Tennis Tournament yesterday, and it brought on a howl of protest from Rose coach Tom Evans.

Holloman was the lone area qualifier for the Regional, having been a Sectional quarterfinalist last week.

The flap developed when Holloman, scheduled for a 9 a.m. match, arrived, according to Evans, on time for the event at Hunt High School.

"We had been told that the tournament was being played at Hunt," Evans said, "but when we got there, we were told that only the doubles were being played there and that the singles were at Greenfield (a Wilson County private school)."

Evans said that he and Holloman arrived at Greenfield in time for the player to be on the court at 9:13, but that Hunt athletic director Larry Thompson, in charge of the singles, refused to allow him to play, stating he was late and therefore disqualified. "We argued for several minutes about it before he finally ruled Steve out of the competition at 9:17," Evans said.

Evans also related that in last week's sectionals, held at Wilson Fike, Washington's doubles team arrived 45 minutes late for the event, but was allowed to play.

"I think it's terribly unfair," Evans said. "This is for the kids, not the athletic directors and coaches." We were told the tournament was at Hunt and that's where we were."

Oddly enough, it marked the second time this school year that an area player has been penalized for not being on time for a match. Williamston's Theresa Duffy said a similar circumstance occur in the state meet at Chapel Hill last fall. She arrived at the courts and warmed up before finding out her match was scheduled at another site. After arriving there, she was disqualified for being late.

Thompson was involved in the second day's play of the tournament this morning, and was unavailable for comment.

UNC Stickers Trim Middies

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The third time was just as charming for North Carolina's lacrosse team as the first two were, as the defending champions scuttled the Navy 16-2 to advance to NCAA tournament semifinals.

On Saturday, the unbeaten and top-ranked Tar Heels will face Cornell, an 11-9 victor over Army in another quarterfinal matchup Wednesday.

The 12-0 Tar Heels extended their winning streak to 24 games, while Navy added to its own lacrosse success as it remains the only team to participate in all 12 NCAA lacrosse tournaments.

The Middies, 6-5, have been eliminated from the playoffs by North Carolina three straight seasons including 18-11 in the 1980 quarterfinals at Annapolis, Md., and 17-8 in last year's semifinals at Chapel Hill.

Dave Wingate sparked the Tar Heels' romp by scoring four goals while Doug Hall and Brent Voelkel added three each.

North Carolina sprinted to a 10-0 halftime lead, despite a heavy rainstorm that made the field muddy.

"Anybody can slip and fall down in these conditions and give you the opportunity to score easy goals," said North Carolina coach Willie Scroggs. "We got some goals like that, but they didn't seem to catch us in any of those situations."

Scroggs credited the Tar Heels' defense with holding the Midshipmen scoreless until Bob Sturgill hit the first of his two goals with five minutes left in the third period.

"We've all expressed at one point or another in this season that we weren't playing like we could," Scroggs said. "We knew we could play better and today was an example of that kind of intensity."

and the Cavs' top selection in 1982.

This year's draft lost some prestige last weekend when Ralph Sampson, the University of Virginia's 7-foot-4 star center, announced he would finish his senior year and bypass early entry into the NBA.

After Sampson made his plans known, Worthy declared for early entry and is sure to be one of the top rookies — probably the first — selected. Other early entrants included Terry Cummings, an All-American from DePaul; Quintin Dailey an All American at San Francisco, and Cliff Levingston of Wichita State, the Division I rebounding leader this season.

Worthy's way. The laws of probability may have been revoked when it comes to the coin-toss.

In the 16 years the NBA has used the coin toss to determine which team opens the draft, the silver dollar has come up tails 12 times.

That might lead to the conclusion that Clippers' General Manager Ted Podleski and Lakers' executive Jerry West went into today's flip convinced that a call of tails would guarantee them the best rookie of the 1982-83 season.

Not necessarily. Only one player who was the

Worthy's Future Up In The Air As Lakers, Clippers Toss For First

NEW YORK (AP) — North Carolina forward James Worthy's fate may be up in the air today, but it won't be for long.

Worthy, who led North Carolina to the 1982 National Collegiate Athletic Association championship this spring, is expected to be the number one draft choice in the National Basketball Association draft June 29th.

However, the right to make the first choice will be decided today when the Los Angeles Lakers and San Diego Clippers will flip a coin to see who gets to flip even more coins

Astros Top Carlton, Sweep Series

By The Associated Press
How sweet it was for the Houston Astros.

Not only did they sweep a three-game series from the Philadelphia Phillies in Philadelphia for the first time since 1965, but they beat nemesis Steve Carlton in the process.

"Nobody expected us to do that," said Houston reliever Dave Smith after saving Wednesday night's 5-3 victory over the Phillies. "But we battled them and played real good baseball."

The Astros' victory was the first in nine games over Carlton. The last time they managed to beat him was May 16, 1978, when they won 6-1 at the Astrodome.

Smith was largely responsible for Wednesday night's success, earning his sixth save with two strong innings of pitching in relief of Bob Knepper. He came into the game in the eighth inning after a 73-minute rain delay.

"I made some bad pitches," said Smith. "I made some bad pitches but got away with them."

The Phillies were hot before running into the Astros, having won 10 of 11 games. Now Phillies Manager Pat Corrales is hopeful that his team can turn things around as they head to Atlanta on a road trip.

"We've got to play better than we have been, that's for sure," Corrales said. "We've got to get Mike Schmidt going. We need his bat."

Schmidt had four hits in the last two games, but had no home runs and has not been driving in his usual batch of runs.

Kiko Garcia knocked in two runs to back the combined efforts of Smith and Knepper, who scattered seven hits, struck out four and walked two in seven innings. In losing his sixth game in 10 decisions, Carlton gave up 10 hits and had eight strikeouts, giving him the National League lead with a total of 71.

The score was tied 2-2 in the sixth when Houston's Ray Knight, who extended his hitting streak to 16 games, opened with a single. Phil Garner tripled to score Knight and Garcia singled across Garner with the eventual winning run in the eighth.

Elsewhere in the NL, it was San Diego 5, St. Louis 4 in 10 innings; New York 4, Cincinnati 2; Pittsburgh 2, San Francisco 1; Atlanta 9, Montreal 1 and Los Angeles 4, Chicago 1.

Padres 5, Cardinals 4
Catcher Gene Tenace's bases-loaded error with one out in the 10th inning allowed Alan Wiggins to score the winning run as San Diego beat St. Louis.

Wiggins led off with a bunt single off reliever Bruce Sutter. 2-1, then stole his third base of the game. After Tim Flannery sacrificed Wiggins to third, Sutter intentionally walked Garry Templeton and Ruppert Jones to load the bases and bring up Sixto Lezcano. Lezcano hit a routine chopper to third baseman Dane Iorg, who threw to the plate and appeared to force Wiggins. But Tenace failed to touch the plate and Wiggins was ruled safe with the winning run.

Mets 4, Reds 2
Dave Kingman hit his 13th home run, a three-run shot in the first inning, and Pat Zachry scattered seven hits as New York beat Cincinnati, 4-2.

Zachry, 3-1, making his first start since May 1, allowed two homers to Dan Dreissen while walking one and striking out three. It was Zachry's first complete-game victory since May 27, 1981.

Losers Tom Seaver, 1-5, lasted six innings, yielded five hits, two walks and struck out four.

"That's what we were looking for tonight," said Mets Manager George Bamberger. "Our bullpen is kind of tired right now, and we needed somebody to go the full nine." Pirates 2, Giants 1 Don Robinson survived eight walks and three wild pitches over 7-3 innings and got relief help from Rod Scurry and Kent Tekulve as Pittsburgh defeated

San Francisco. Robinson allowed four hits before both Scurry and Tekulve came on in the eighth. Tekulve finished up to post his fifth save as the Giants left 12 runners on base.

the Pirates scored twice. Then he made a diving catch with the bases loaded in the bottom of the fifth to snuff out a San Francisco threat.

Braves 9, Expos 1
Bob Horner went four-for-four and drove in three runs and Chris Chambliss knocked in two as Atlanta defeated Montreal. Ken Dayley, 1-1, making only his second major league start, yielded the Expos' run on Andre Dawson's homer in the fourth inning. Dayley pitched a three-hitter before getting relief help from Steve Bedrosian with two outs in the seventh.

The Braves battered Montreal starter Ray Burris, 0-7, for seven runs through the first five innings, as the Expos lost for the 11th time in 15 games.

"Too many guys can do too many things on this team for a player to get carried away and put too much on his back," said Horner. "There's no reason for a guy to say he has to hit 40 homers and drive in 150 runs."

Dodgers 4, Cubs 1
Dave Stewart pitched five-hit ball for eight innings in his first major league start and Bill Russell hit his first home run since June 18, 1980 to lead Los Angeles over Chicago.

Stewart, subbing for injured Burt Hooton, brought an 0-2 record and a 9.00 earned run average as a reliever into the game. Stewart, whose longest previous stint was 31-3 innings last year against Cincinnati, struck out six and walked four, including two in the ninth when he was replaced by Steve Howe. Keith Moreland's single off Howe knocked in Chicago's run before Tom Niedenfuer came on to post his fourth save.

Watson's Pick To Win Is Himself

ATLANTA (AP) — It didn't take Tom Watson long to reel off his list of favorites in the Georgia-Pacific Atlanta Golf Classic. Watson, the defending champion, tossed out the names of Lee Trevino, Andy Bean and Larry Nelson before getting to the player generally regarded as the favorite in the $300,000 event that begins today over the 7,007-yard, par 72, Atlanta Country Club course.

"I think you've got to watch Tom Watson," he said Wednesday. "I feel like the Watson of old," he said. "I'm playing real well right now, hitting it longer than ever. I haven't been this excited about my game in a long time."

This will be Watson's fifth appearance in the 14th Atlanta tournament, and his record here is outstanding, with the exception of his first start in 1972, when he tied for 56th place.

Watson, who has two Masters and three British Open championships, was second in 1975 and 1978. He won last year over Tommy Valentine on the third hole of a playoff.

"I think the scores will be pretty low," Watson said. "There is no rough to speak of. I think 15 or 16 under par will win it."

The four-time PGA player of the year said he sees little chance of anyone breaking the tournament record, a 23-under-par 265 posted by Bean three years ago.

Most of this season's top performers are skipping this tournament, with only five of the top 15 money-winners in the field of 156 — No. 2 Watson, No. 5 Lanny Wadkins, No. 6 Scott Hoch, No. 8 Bean and No. 15 Danny Edwards.

Former PGA and Masters champion Ray Floyd had a 67 during Wednesday's pro-am, which could signal his comeback from a hand infection that has hampered his performance since the start of the season.

Floyd said of the hand ailment, "It cantered back into the rest of my game. I had numerous problems with my swing and I've been trying to get it back ever since."

"My rhythm was off," he said. "My timing was off. Right now, I'm hitting the ball well."

The Atlanta Country Club layout has undergone extensive changes since last year's tournament, with Jack Nicklaus supervising the rebuilding of all greens on the back side.

"I like the changes," Watson said. "The greens had severe slopes before that really weren't necessary," Floyd said.

Kupchak Can Only Sit And Watch In Playoffs

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers are right where they wanted to be, preparing for the National Basketball Association's Championship Series.

But one of the players they counted on to help get them this far, forward Mitch Kupchak, can only sit and watch.

Kupchak, who turns 28 next week, was acquired from the Washington Bullets last summer and immediately signed a rich, multi-year contract with the Lakers.

Injury-prone during much of his five seasons in Washington, he was in the best of health when the 1981-82 season began and was excellent as a starting power forward and backup center to Kareem Abdul-

Jabbar until Dec. 19. Then, as has happened so often to Kupchak, disaster struck. He was driving to the basket early in the second quarter of a game at San Diego when, as he recalls, "My knee exploded."

"That's exactly what it felt like," he said the other day after a Los Angeles practice session. "I'd never had knee problems before and I had made that move a million times. Who knows what it was?"

Kupchak, who was averaging 14.3 points and 8.1 rebounds at the time of the injury, underwent surgery and may need another operation.

"Nothing is definite right now," he said. "I don't know what's going to happen. I'm in the process of making decisions. It (the knee) feels fine, but it's not really together, not really functional, in terms of being a normal human being."

"I think I can swing walking around and things like that. One thing I have learned is to work within the framework of medical opinions. I've got an idea of where I stand right now but I can't give a definitive statement."

"I'll go as far as my leash allows. I have learned over the years to listen to doctors."

Kupchak was a first-round draft choice of the Bullets in 1976. In January of 1978, he suffered torn ligaments in his right thumb and missed four weeks. He missed most of the 1979-80 season with back problems. And now this.

Does he feel snakebit? "No," he answered quickly. "Everybody goes through some lows. Every time I start feeling self-pity, I stop it right away. I wouldn't trade what I've been through. If somebody said 'Give up the bad things but you have to give up the good things,' I'd say no way."

"I'm kind of used to having to go through rehabilitation every year or so, honestly. It's a voyage, that's all there is to

"We double-teamed and pressured them and they became disorganized and confused," said Cedric Maxwell, who had 15 points and 12 rebounds for Boston.

The '76ers made only 15 percent of their field goal attempts in the second quarter, 29.5 percent in the first half, and 33.3 percent in the game.

"They did an excellent job defensively," said Cunningham. "When you shoot 29 percent in the first half it's tough to beat anyone."

Gerald Henderson, who took over Archibald's floor leadership role in Saturday's and Sunday's losses, had 15 points and six assists Wednesday night in his best performance of the series.

"The two days off were very important for us," said Boston Coach Bill Fitch. "They allowed us to make adjustments to our game without Tiny."

Now it will be Philadelphia's turn to make adjustments and try to get the series swinging back in his direction.

"We'll be more physical. Our whole game will be more aggressive" Friday night, Cunningham said.

"Sometimes you're going to see both teams clicking and you're going to be back to the typical Philly game that's decided at the gun," said Fitch.

Wellcome 3

First Federal 1

Wellcome knocked First Federal off the unbeaten list in the Tar Heel Little League yesterday, taking a 3-1 victory. The loss by First Federal left the league without an unbeaten team after five games of play.

Dallas McPherson hurled the win, allowing only four hits by First Federal, two of those coming in the fourth when the lone run was scored. No one managed more than one of those hits.

Stacy Best, with sixth inning relief from John Bolen, took the loss, giving up only three hits to Wellcome — but it was enough.

Wellcome took the lead with a run in the first, then came back with two in the top of the fourth to pull out the win. McPherson got the fourth going after one out getting hit by a pitch. He advanced on a passed ball and scored when Greg VanScoy singled. VanScoy stole up, scoring on Jason Browder's single.

No one had more than one hit for Wellcome.

Kiwanis 3

Optimists 2

Pat Joyner's double allowed the Kiwanis to tie the Optimists in the bottom of the seventh, and moments later he scored the winning run as the Kiwanis won the North State Little League contest, 3-2.

The Kiwanis grabbed the initial lead in the game in the second inning, getting one run. The Optimists rallied to tie it up with a run in the fifth.

Then, in the first extra inning, the Optimists pushed over a run to take a 2-1 lead.

But in the bottom of the inning, Kraig Butler led off with a walk and he scored on Joyner's double. Joyner came on around on an error on the play to score the game-winning run.

Curtis Jones led the Kiwanis hitting with two, while Terrence Cherry had a pair of hits for the Optimists.

MacKenzie Sec. . . . 16

Red & White 5

SIMPSON — MacKenzie Security rolled to a 16-5 victory over Griffon Red & White in the Southern Pitt Little League yesterday.

Jeff Best hurled the win for MacKenzie. MacKenzie's hitting was led by Kevin Moyer, who had a three-run homer, while Tim Mobley, Reginald Wallace and James Boyd each had two hits.

Red & White was led by Stacy Cole with three, while John Tyndall had two.

MacKenzie is now 3-1, while Red & White is 1-3.

Hornets 11

Indians 2

CHICOD — The Chicod Hornets romped to an 11-2 win over the Bethel Indians yesterday in the Southern Pitt Little League.

Dwayne Smith hurled the win for the Hornets. Aaron Swinson and Smith led the Hornet hitting with three, while Russ Pittman had two.

Bethel was led by Kevin Briley with two hits.

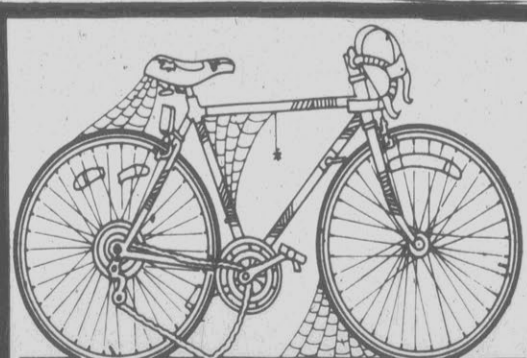

The Hornets are now 2-2 on the year.

Smith Still Leads In 1,600 Meters Run

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Last week's North Carolina High School Athletic Association sectional meets produced some outstanding performances, which highlight the final North Carolina high school track and field honor roll.

In the Charlotte sectional at Myers Park, Shelton Boyer of West Charlotte cleared 7 feet in the high jump. If Boyer can duplicate the feat in next week's state meet, he will set a new state record. State records can be set only at the state meet.

One other high jumper — Obie Martin of Eden Morehead — put in a performance that is better than the state record of 6 feet, 10 inches. Martin won the Greensboro sectional with an outstanding effort of 6-11.

Two Eastern athletes — Dennis Barron of Wilson Beddingfield and Donnie Wallace of Robersonville Roanoke — went over 60 feet in the shot put at the Tarboro sectional. Barron, the leader on the shot put honor roll all season, turned in an effort of 63 feet, 6 1/2 inches. Wallace was second at 60-5/8.

Chris Brooks of Raleigh Broughton had his jumping shoes on last Friday at Northern Durham. Brooks triple jumped 50 feet, 2 inches to hold the lead in the that event. Tim Leach of Salisbury also topped 50 feet in his sectional meet at North Rowan with a 50-2, but will have to settle for second on the honor roll.

Brooks claims the top spot in this week's long jump list, his 24 feet, 8 3/4 inches passing Leach, who is second at 24-5.

Bryan Frazier of Lejeune takes over the lead in the pole vault. Frazier cleared 14 feet, 6 inches at the New Bern sectional. Steve Edwards of Charlotte Myers Park is second at 14 feet even.

There is also a new leader in the 110-meter high hurdles — Odell Williams of North Ireddell. Williams recorded a 14.1 in the highs at North Rowan to pass Walter Southerland of Henderson Vance, second at 14.2.

Mark Shea of Raleigh Broughton takes over first place on the 3,200-meter honor roll after a 9:25.0 clocking at Northern Durham. Bill Will of Gastonia Ashbrook is second at 9:26.4.

Reuben Davis of Greensboro Grimsley unseats Bynum Morris from first in the discus this week. Davis covered 162 feet, 6 1/2 inches to win the Greensboro Sectional. Morris, of Western Guilford, slips to second at 161-7.

Vance makes a very strong showing on the final honor roll. The Vikings have one individual leader in Greg Richardson in the 800-meter run (1:53.9) and are first in all three relay events.

In the 300-meter intermediate hurdles, Scott Gilmer of Western Guilford broke the 38-second barrier with a fine 37.6-second effort in Greensboro. John Bogans of Salisbury is second at 38.2.

Sprint leaders are Brian Collins of High Point Central and Erskin Evans of Greenville Rose in the 100-meter dash (10.4) and Daron Council of Lee County in the 200 (20.9).

Delton Hall of Greensboro Grimsley claims the lead in the 400-meter dash after a blazing 47.9 in the sectional. Sherman Horne of Winston-Salem Reynolds, last week's leader, slips to second at 48.0.

The Greenville Rose duo of Kenny Smith and Harry Williams remain 1-2, respectively, in the 1,600-meter run. Both are under 4:20 in the event, the only two runners in the state to break that barrier.

This week's regional competition and next week's state competition will wrap up the prep track season.

Following is this week's North Carolina high school track and field honor roll. The top 10 reported performances (and ties) are listed in each event. Times reported in hundreds of a second are rounded up to the next tenth. This is the final honor roll of the season.

Bruce Kison Isn't Complaining About Early Departure In Victory

By The Associated Press
Bruce Kison missed more than a year following following surgery on the ulnar and medial nerves in his right elbow and wrist, so he isn't about to gripe because a little thing like a pulled back muscle cost him a chance for a complete game and a shutout.

"I could have gone out in the ninth and pitched, but it's no big deal," Kison said after blanking Milwaukee on five hits for eight innings Wednesday night in the California Angels' 7-2 victory over the Brewers. "We won, and I felt very comfortable out there, as comfortable as I've felt at any time since coming back."

In other American League action, the Chicago White Sox edged the Texas Rangers 6-5, the Detroit Tigers beat the Oakland A's 6-3, the Boston Red Sox nipped the Seattle Mariners 6-5 in 12 innings, the New York Yankees shaded the Kansas City Royals 3-2, the Baltimore Orioles downed the Minnesota Twins 4-2 and the Toronto Blue Jays defeated the Cleveland Indians 8-5.

Kison, a 32-year-old right-hander and 10-year major league veteran, last pitched a complete game May 3, 1980. His last shutout was April 23 of that year.

"I feel I'm pitching within the capabilities of myself," he said after walking two, fanning five and upping his 1982 record to 3-0. "I don't feel I've lost any velocity because of the injury, and I think I've gained some knowledge about pitching. My delivery was out of synch for a while after I came back, but I've been able to work it out."

"My arm poses no problems at this point. I got ahead of the hitters, and getting some breathing room early takes a lot of heat off a pitcher. Every pitch doesn't have to be a game-on-the-line type of pitch."

Reggie Jackson batted Kison with a two-run homer, while Doug DeCinces hit a bases-empty shot and Brian Downing had a two-run single as California won its sixth game in a row and handed the Brewers their seventh setback in nine games.

White Sox 6, Rangers 5

Pinch runner Jerry Hairston scored from second base on an infield hit and an error by Texas second baseman Doug Flynn with two out in the ninth inning. Rookie relief sensation Salome Barojas picked up the victory, his first decision of the year, to go with his league-leading 10 saves.

Greg Luzinski singled off Danny Darwin with two out in the ninth and Hairston went to second on Tom Paciorek's fourth single of the game. Marv Foley then hit a grounder which Flynn stopped but tossed wildly trying for a forceout at second. Hairston, who had stopped at third, was waved home and just beat shortstop Mario Mendoza's throw to the plate.

George Wright's three-run homer helped Texas to a 4-0 lead in the second inning. The White Sox chipped away and went in front 5-4 on Jim Morrison's two-run single that capped a four-run sixth.

Tigers 6, A's 3

Enos Cabell's single drove in the go-ahead run in Detroit's four-run sixth inning and the Tigers went on to their seventh consecutive triumph. Trailing 2-1, Lou Whitaker led off the sixth with a double and scored on Alan Trammell's single. Trammell went to third on Chet Lemon's single and scored on Cabell's single to put Detroit in front 3-2. Lemon and Cabell moved up on Kirk Gibson's grounder and scored on a single by Mike Ivie. Wayne Gross and Rickey Henderson homered off Oakland.

"We've got confidence," said Cabell. "We don't even worry about being behind now. The guys know somebody's going to do something sooner or later to win it for us."

Red Sox 6, Mariners 5

Gary Altonson's double to deep center field following Dave Stapleton's two-out single drove home the winning run in the 12th inning against Bill Caudill. The Red Sox tied the game 5-5 with two out in the bottom of the ninth. Rick Miller walked, was sacrificed to second, took third on an infield out and scored on a single by Jim Rice. Al Cowens and Bobby Brown homered for Seattle, while Glenn Hoffman drove in three Boston runs with a homer and single.

Yankees 3, Royals 2

Tommy John, in his 100th start for New York, scattered seven hits in seven innings, John Mayberry and Graig Nettles delivered RBI singles and Willie Randolph squeezed Nettles home with what proved to be the winning run. John gave way to Rich Gossage to start the eighth and the Yankees' relief ace earned his ninth save. Paul Splittorff, who hasn't beaten the Yankees since July 1977, suffered his ninth consecutive loss to them.

Orioles 4, Twins 2

Benny Ayala, the first batter after an 81-minute rain-delay in the second inning, rapped a three-run homer, his first of the season, off Pete Filson, who was making his second big league start. Sammy Stewart went eight inning for the Orioles, giving way to Tim Stoddard after a leadoff single in the ninth. Baltimore, which has a 17-3 edge over Minnesota since the start of the 1980 season, added another run in the third on Rich Dauer's double and Gary Roenicke's single.

Blue Jays 8, Indians 5

Rance Mulliniks and Dave Revering cracked RBI doubles to highlight a three-run eighth-inning rally. Cleveland's Len Barker, who hurled a perfect game against Toronto just one year and four days earlier, took a 4-3 lead him home.

After a walk to Hosken Powell, Willie Upshaw singled home the go-ahead run. Revering's double provided an insurance run and Toronto padded its lead with two runs in the ninth on a walk, another RBI double by Mulliniks and a single by Barry Bonnell. Andre Thornton and Toby Harrah homered for the Indians.

Trio Of Brothers Seek Spots In Indy

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A Florida family is one step from becoming the first to have three brothers in the same Indianapolis 500 field.

Bill and Don Whittington, already assured of starting the May 30 race, want their younger brother Dale to join them, and they've been concentrating this week on that goal.

"Bill and I feel real good about our cars," said Don, the oldest of the trio at 36. "We both were over 200 (mph) in qualifying and have turned our attention toward Dale's car."

Dale, 22, had both brothers in his pit area Wednesday when his yellow March-Cosworth race car was clocked at 195.907 at Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

Both made suggestions each time Dale brought his car off the track, as well as supervising tire changes and mechanical adjustments.

"We can be around but he's got to turn the steering wheel. It's his mind that's hooked up to the foot. We haven't rushed him but we've tried to have him learn something from the car each time out. First, we had him understanding and now we're having him oversteer," said Don.

"I guess we seem like a pair of mother hens. Maybe we've overcoached him a little bit. But we've been passing on everything we've learned about this track since we came here in 1980 and we've talked him through the car piece by piece."

"The help they're giving me is great," said Dale, who hopes to join the 22 drivers already in the field when the final weekend of qualifications begins Saturday. "But I'm doing my own thing. I can build up to speed myself. I need some pushing, but I think I'm at the point where I can go up to 200 now."

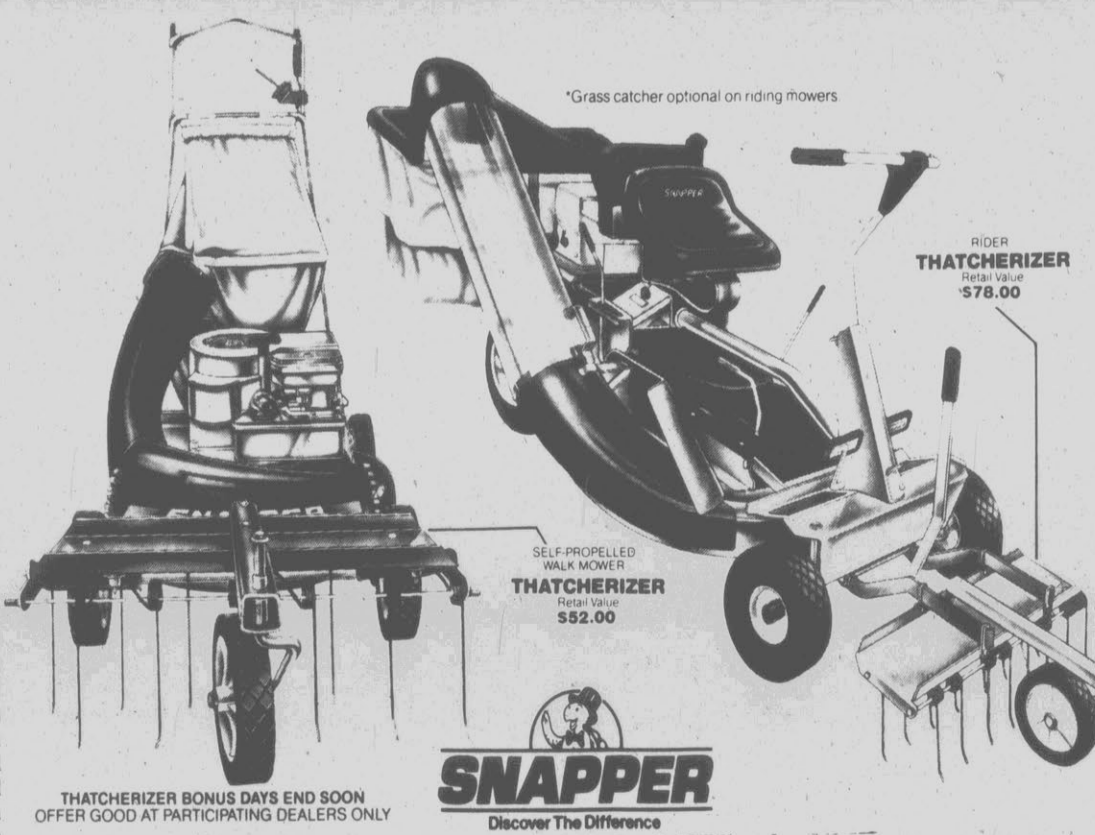

"It's much tougher working with another driver than qualifying a car yourself," said Don. "It would give us a lot of satisfaction having the three of us in the race. It's not a monumental event but it would mean a lot to our overall racing program."

Don, Bill, 34, and Dale have

ABC's Routine Indy Coverage Became Dramatic, Deadly Event

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Given a choice, television would always prefer dramatic to dull when it comes to sports. A one-run World Series game is better than a blowout. A Super Bowl decided in the final seconds gets the edge over a rout. A battle in the stretch like the one the Preakness provided last Saturday is certainly more exciting than a Secretariat-type runaway.

But sometimes, dull might be easier to take. Sometimes television's unique ability to take the viewer right to the scene of the action is a ticket to terror. That's exactly what happened to ABC last weekend during its coverage of the Indianapolis 500 qualifying trials.

The camera's eye has a unique ability to deliver events as they happen with no commentary really needed. And for stark, dramatic television, it would be hard to beat the frightening tape of Gordon Smiley's tragic crash.

ABC will present the 500 on Memorial Day weekend and planned to show the qualifying trials as a logical lead-in to its race day coverage. It had no idea it was purchasing a life and death show, although that's always possible with auto racing.

There had been a festive air at the Speedway on Saturday, especially after the first two drivers, Rick Mears and Kevin Cogan, had shattered speed records during their runs. The customary 200,000 fans were in the stands, but few of them could have seen the Smiley tragedy as well as ABC's cameras did.

The network had 10 cameras positioned at the track for the qualifying that was about to begin. That's 18 less than the number assigned for the actual race. They were shooting routinely, following Smiley's warmup trip around the oval, when suddenly they had a tragedy on their hands.

The tape of the accident is gripping. It shows Smiley's car beginning a terrifying slide toward the wall on the third turn as the driver battled vainly for control. He can be seen crouching in the cockpit, anticipating the impact of the crash. When he hits, the car breaks into pieces, fragments flying in every direction with flames enveloping what is left of the car. It is shocking, chilling television, caught by the camera's eye as awesome evidence of the potential which the medium possesses. This was, after all, a man's life ending right there on the screen.

The accident occurred some 2½ hours before the network was to go on the air with its coverage. It was reported by news media immediately. But, instead of interrupting local programming to show the accident, ABC chose to wait until its qualifying coverage began.

This was a journalistic decision and ABC was on the horns of a difficult dilemma. If it used the tape as hard news and broke into its regular programming, it could be accused of trying to capitalize on a tragedy to hype its later coverage of the qualifying and the race. If it held back the tape, it could be accused of suppressing the news. That's a heads I win, tails you lose situation.

ABC was so protective of its tape that it even kept it off the closed circuit television system at the track, making it available only in its production truck to help newsmen covering the qualifying reconstruct the event.

Meanwhile, CBS was on the air with coverage of the National Basketball Association playoff game between Boston and Philadelphia, and, during a break, the accident was reported, although without the dramatic tape which was ABC's exclusively. NBC's baseball game of the week coverage, which was on the air at the time, does not provide a format option to report a breaking news story like the Smiley crash.

Over the weekend, the ABC tape was played and replayed, taking the viewer through that terrifying trip in graphic detail. It was a monumental piece of tape, stark and frightening, the ultimate in sports drama.

To ABC's credit, there will be no effort to capitalize on the grim piece of tape that details death. At the moment, there is no plan to include it in the network's coverage of the race itself.

In posting his National League leading earned-run average of 1.69 in 1981, Nolan Ryan of Houston permitted only 28 earned runs in 149 innings.

Bradshaw Won't Strike

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Terry Bradshaw of the Pittsburgh Steelers says he will "lead the parade" across the picket line if the National Football League Players' Association calls a strike this season.

"I don't want to strike. I want them to settle it, and if they call camp tomorrow I'm going in," said Bradshaw, in town for the Steelers' annual quarterback school.

"Gene Upshaw (president of the association) would just have to write me a letter and tell me how disappointed he is," Bradshaw added.

Bradshaw said he has read newspaper articles quoting other players who are definitely willing to strike to back demands for salary scales and a share of the gate.

"I'm happy with what I'm making," said Bradshaw, who reportedly makes in excess of $300,000 per year. "I'm under contract to play football, and I don't think it's right for them to force us to strike."

"I think people ought to be able to sit down and work things out," said Bradshaw, who thinks the labor movement has "priced themselves out of jobs."

During the 1974 strike, Bradshaw initially honored the picket line. He later quit the strike and reported to camp.

"I originally stayed out just to be one of the boys," he said. "I didn't want to stay out at all."

But while Bradshaw was out, Joe Gilliam was off to a good start in the Steeler preseason camp.

"If I got to a point where I was losing my job, and I had to shuck all those other ideas and get on in," he said.

He said he would cross the picket line from the start this season.

"I think there will be a lot of people go in, and I'll lead the parade," he said.

If he were a betting man, would Bradshaw bet there was going to be a strike?

"Yes, if I were a betting man," he responded.

"I think it will be nasty and everything else, and everywhere we go there will be a lot of trouble."

There is also the possibility that NFL owners, threatened with a possible strike once the regular season begins, might close training camps?

"If they do that I'll demand to be paid because I want to work," Bradshaw said.

Talking Again; No Agreement

NEW YORK (AP) — The two sides in the National Football League's contract negotiations are once again huddling although it seems they're still far apart on a new bargaining agreement.

Meeting for the first time in more than a month, representatives of the NFL Management Council and the NFL Players Association met for about four hours Wednesday at the New York Sheraton hotel. The two sides discussed the philosophy of key economic issue, the union's demand that 55 percent of gross revenues be allocated for salaries, but their positions were far apart.

The current contract expires July 15.

The players unions want to replace individual bargaining with the percentage-of-gross concept. The owners' bargainers have not accepted that theory.

"We don't consider that good business," said Jim Miller, a spokesman for the management council. "We feel it is a radical concept and one we do not want to be a party to."

Ed Garvey, the players association executive director, said the fixed-percentage concept to determine salaries has long been used in contracts involving The Directors Guild and The Screen Actors Guild as well as musicians.

"It's just a question of (the owners) responding to a different approach to bargaining in this industry, where individual negotiations have only worked to help the clubs and hurt the players," Garvey said.

Loftin In Putt Win

Jake Loftin shot a 14-under-par 94 to win the Wednesday Night Tournament last night at the Greenville Putt-Putt Golf Course.

Loftin shrugged off a 34 in the first round with rounds of 29 and 31 to gain his first Wednesday victory this year.

Bobby Ipock and Robbie Ehrmann tied for second with a pair of 97's, with Ehrmann winning the sudden death playoff by aceing the first hole.

Johnny Carrow came in fourth with a 98 while David Beacham was fifth at 99.

The Thursday Night Amateur Tournament begins at 8 p.m. tonight.

How Tar Heel Representatives And Senators Vote

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes May 6-12.

HOUSING HELP

By a vote of 350 for and 54 against, the House passed and sent to the Senate a bill (HR 6294) providing in fiscal 1982 a $1 billion U.S. Treasury subsidy of an estimated 74,000 new-home purchases. Moderate and low-income buyers of single-family homes would have from 4 to 6 of their interest percentage points paid by the government for up to 7 years. This could set mortgage interest rates for many purchasers at 9.5 percent. The Administration opposed the bill as a budget-busting "bailout" of the housing industry, while supporters said it would stimulate the economy by providing 140,000 jobs and generating $1.2 billion in increased federal, state and local tax revenues. Supporter Ron Wyden, D-Ore., said "we are not talking about a subsidy here today, we are talking about the survival of one of the most important sectors of our economy."

Opponent Robert Michel, R-Ill., said he could "swallow hard" and support the bill if he were sure it would cost only $1 billion, "but we all know the truth — this billion-dollar bailout has all the potential of becoming another of our great multi-billion (dollar) boondoggles."

Members voting "yea" wanted to stimulate the housing industry with $1 billion in mortgage-interest subsidies.

Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, L. H. Fountain, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Ike Andrews, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, Charles Rose, D-7, W. G. Hefner, D-8, James Martin, R-9, and William Hendon, R-11, voted "yea."

Reps Eugene Johnston, R-6, and James Broyhill, R-10, voted "nay."

WESTERN WATER The House passed, 228 for and 117 against, a bill that expands the acreage of farms eligible to receive federally subsidized irrigation water from federal reclamation projects in 17 western states. The new maximum is 960 acres, up from 160 acres per single ownership or 320 acres for a married couple. A federal court ordered stricter enforcement of the 1902 Reclamation Act after environmentalists filed suit charging agribusiness interests were abusing the acreage limitations. HR 5539, which was sent to the Senate, also sets a new pricing structure requiring higher payments from the largest agribusiness users of reclamation water.

Supporter Don Clausen, R-Calif., said reclamation water benefits the agricultural economy of the whole nation, and he said the bill should be addressed on its merits "and not on a regional or East vs. West basis."

Opponent James Weaver, D-Ore., said the bill is "a bald-faced, anti-family farm package of direct subsidies to the richest of America's agribusiness interests."

Members voting "yea" supported liberalizing the 1902 Reclamation Act along lines advocated by western farm interests.

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Johnston, Hefner, Broyhill and Hendon voted "yea."

Martin voted "nay."

Rose did not vote.

MINE SAFETY By a vote of 186 for and 220 against, the House rejected an amendment to make the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) — rather than the Mine Safety and Health Administration (MSHA) — responsible for policing working conditions at surface sand, gravel, phosphate, stone and clay mines. The amendment was offered to HR 5922, an appropriations bill later passed and sent to the Senate. The bill would switch jurisdiction over the mines from OSHA to MSHA. Mine operators want to continue to be answerable to OSHA, arguing that the more aggressive MSHA would harass them.

Sponsor John Rousset, R-Calif., said his amendment was necessary because MSHA regulation "ill serves the objective of employee safety and health, imposes unnecessary burdens upon the separate industries, and dilutes government enforcement resources."

Opponent Joseph Gaydos, D-Pa., said mine operators want the switch because understaffed OSHA makes infrequent checks on the mines compared to MSHA's two annual inspections.

Members voting "yea" wanted OSHA rather than the more aggressive MSHA to police the surface mining operations listed above.

Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Johnston, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and Hendon voted "yea."

Jones and Rose voted "nay."

Neal did not vote.

SENATE

DEFENSE WATCHDOG By a vote of 45 for and 46 against, the Senate refused to table the more independent of two approaches to establishing the office of inspector general at the Defense Department.

Senators voting "nay" want the Pentagon IG to be independent of the defense secretary as he or she seeks to ferret out waste, fraud and corruption, although the secretary could oversee probes judged to endanger "national security." Senators voting "yea" want the IG to be under the authority of the defense secretary. Ten cabinet departments and five other agencies have IG's, but there is none at the Pentagon. The vote occurred during debate on a still-pending $177.9 defense authorization bill (S2248) that would give the Pentagon its first IG.

Sen. William Roth, R-Del., who sponsored the tabling motion, said the IG would make defense spending more cost-efficient even though under the authority of the secretary.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., who opposed the tabling motion and advocated an independent IG, said the IG "should not have the secretary of defense blowing the whistle on him." Senators voting "nay" wanted the inspector general to be independent of the defense secretary.

Sens. John East, R. and Jesse Helms, R. voted "yea." OVERSEAS SCHOOLS The Senate adopted, 59 for and 38 against, an amendment to keep the overseas school system for children of military personnel under the control of the Defense Department. The amendment was attached to S 2248 (see preceding vote). It seeks to block the planned transfer of the system next May to the jurisdiction of the Department of Education. With 136,000 students, 270 schools in 20 countries, and an annual budget of more than $400 million, the defense system would be the nation's 12th largest if situated in the U.S.

Sponsor Dan Quayle, R-Ind., said the transfer would "have a debilitating effect not only on the Department of Defense but on the families and ultimately the children."

Opponent William Roth, R-Del., said the overseas schools should be "brought out of their current isolation in DOD and into the mainstream of our education system."

Senators voting "yea" wanted to keep the military's overseas school system a part of the Defense Department.

ment. East and Helms voted "yea."

A Substitute In Powder, Water

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Water mixed with an experimental freeze-dried powder may one day temporarily substitute for blood in the arteries of wounded soldiers, an Army researcher says.

The substance may be tested in humans in about two years, said Lt. Col. Robert Bolin, of the Letterman Army Institute of Research. There already have been tests on rats, monkeys and pigs, he said.

Water turns the color of blood when mixed with the maroon, hemoglobin-based powder, and the resulting liquid has the ability to carry oxygen to the body just as blood does, Bolin said. He added, however, that the body's tolerance of the substitute is uncertain.

'Unwise'

TOKYO (AP) — A Japanese Cabinet official told Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki today that it was unwise for Japan to continue its policy of limiting defense spending to less than 1 percent of gross national product, a government spokesman said.

Ichiro Nakagawa, director-general of the Science and Technology Agency, said in a Cabinet meeting on security issues that there is a need to review the arbitrary ceiling set by the Cabinet in 1975, in view of the current world situation.

FAST TRAINS

NEW YORK (AP) — Great Britain boasts the world's most intensive domestic rail system, with 14,000 trains a day, serving more than 2,000 stations.

The Inter-City trains, heading to such northern cities as York, Edinburgh or Glasgow, run at speeds up to 125 miles an hour and are the most modern and best equipped in the system, according to Rand McNally's "Great Britain: A to Z Guide" by Robert S. Kane.

SCHOLARSHIPS GIVEN

Twelve students from the city band program were awarded David Welborn Memorial Scholarships. The name was incorrectly spelled in Tuesday's edition.

PBS 'Flickers' Offers Comedy Without Help Of Laugh Track

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — PBS' comedy "Flickers," an affectionately bawdy look at the British film industry before talkies, doesn't have a laugh track. So, without that incessant elbow in the ribs, how are we to know when to laugh?

Easy. For the next six Sundays on "Masterpiece Theater," whenever anybody says anything, it'll probably be funny. Belly laughs are back, and it's been a long time since television could rouse us from the doldrums. But "Flickers" does it with cutting comedy that is both perceptive and rollicking fun.

As soon as the honky-tonk piano introduces the credits, the bad memories of the past three months of programming begin to fade. After the second-rate "Nelson" and "Love in a Cold Climate," "Flickers" will put "Masterpiece Theater" back on a pedestal.

The opening sequence immediately sets the tone. A silent movie shows a train cascading into the water. But, before you begin deciphering the device behind this cinematic stunt, the train is seen chugging along inside what looks remarkably like a goldfish bowl.

The man showing the movie is Arnie Cole before he had bigger dreams and began making movies.

The primitive, pre-World War I film industry needed some spunk and innovation, when course Arnie came to knock down the door. Played with roguish charm and full speed ahead by Bob Hoskins, Arnie doesn't jilt anybody who can't afford it or doesn't deserve it.

He's Barnum with a bowl-er, shifty but not shiftless. He adheres to his own moral code, never orchestrating a film-flam that he wouldn't do himself. It's just that the hustling Arnie will try anything.

He was the first cinematographer to show pictures of King Edward's funeral. Charges that the funeral was actually Queen Victoria's didn't faze him. Edward was at that one, too, Arnie said.

Arnie doesn't untarnish the seedling film industry's seedy reputation, but he sure makes it entertaining. Says Arnie's lackey, a generally tipsy but loyal Welshman: "Arnie could talk his way out of anything but a coffin."

However, he meets his match in the movie's heroine, Maud. Frances de la Tour, who looks and plays comedy like Carol Burnett, breathes dignity and compassion into Maud. As plain as toast, Maud has philosophically come to terms with what she calls her "apparent drift into spinsterhood."

Then the upright Maud has the misfortune to get pregnant by an egotistical cad, and her life is put on a collision course with Arnie. He needs her family fortune for his films; she needs his name to give her baby respectability.

When they first meet, Arnie mistakes her for his friend's mother, not the sister, and mocks her mannered ways. Maud proves to be tart enough for his Cockney mud-slinging. While he's looking up his nose, she's leveling him. "Don't patronize us because we wash more than the national average," she says.

After working around the clock to cement a film deal, Arnie arrives for his wedding scruffier than usual and proceeds to fall asleep. When Maud wakes him, Arnie complains that "she's nagging already."

It's a marriage of reservations that turns into a warm, loving relationship. She admires his drive, ambition and ability to turn chaos into chaos. He appreciates her kindness, patience and belief in him.

The odd couple genuinely grow to like and love each other, seeing their contract as their last shot at happiness and family roots.

As Arnie endeavors to keep his film business afloat, he's aided and abetted by a menagerie of zany characters who are guaranteed to ward off the Sunday night blues: a pint-sized comedian, an absent-minded writer who wheezes his way through everything verbal, and a daffily pretentious director.

Who needs laugh tracks? "Flickers" is the real thing.

Pink Jail Cell Houses Sophia

CASERTA, Italy (AP) — Sophia Loren spent her first night behind bars in a private, pink-walled cell with a private bathroom and a black-and-white TV set. But her guards said she woke up today to the same breakfast of coffee, milk and bread served the inmates in the other nine cells.

The 47-year-old film star returned to her native Italy Wednesday to begin serving a 30-day sentence for tax evasion handed down in July 1980. She had said that September that she would return and serve her sentence as soon as she fulfilled her "work obligations."

Miss Loren left Geneva, Switzerland, one of her residences, and entered Italy for the first time in two years. She was met by police at Rome's Leonardo da Vinci Airport as soon as she stepped off the plane.

She said she was innocent of the charge that she failed to file a tax return in 1963. The problem, she said, was caused by her tax specialist, now dead. But she said she decided to return home "to see my mother, my country and my roots."

After nearly being knocked down by the crowd of photographers and reporters at the airport, Miss Loren and her sister, Maria Scicolone, were ushered into an unmarked police car and driven to the three-story women's prison at Caserta, 20 miles north of Naples.

The jail is an 18th century convent with flowers on the balconies and a staff of six nurses and eight male guards.

"She was brought here because this is a tranquil place and nothing will happen to her here," said Vincenzo Scolastico, a local judge.

Miss Loren, wearing a green silk dress and tinted glasses and carrying a bouquet of flowers, was serene as police rushed her through a crowd of cheering fans and journalists outside the prison.

The women inmates cheered and shouted "Sophia! Sophia!" as she entered the jail's only private cell, a room 15 feet square with an unbarred window looking into a barren enclosed courtyard. Other inmates, convicted of crimes ranging from prostitution to homicide, are housed two and three to a cell.

Prison guards said Miss Loren would follow the same routine as other inmates and would eat the same meals.

Reaction to their famous visitor was mixed in Caserta, a town of 70,000 dominated by a vast 18th century royal palace that was the headquarters for Allied forces in Italy during part of World War II.

Some bystanders said they were sorry to see her go to jail. But taxidriver Vincenzo Esposito disagreed.

"They were right to arrest her," he said. "Italy gave her everything — success and money — and then she renounced Italy. She took her money abroad."

Taste Smokers Convinced.

Former higher tar smokers report MERIT “Best-tasting low tar I’ve tried.”

Can a low tar cigarette provide the taste incentive to switch smokers from higher tar brands?

Research consistently proves that MERIT can.

MERIT Taste Sparks Switch.

Nationwide survey reveals over 90% of MERIT smokers who switched from higher tar are glad they did. In fact, 94% don't even miss their former brands.

Further Evidence: 9 out of 10 former higher tar smokers report MERIT an easy switch, that they didn't give up taste in switching, and that MERIT is the best-tasting low tar they've ever tried.

MERIT Clear Choice.

In addition, extensive unmarked-pack tests confirm that MERIT delivers a winning combination of taste and low tar when compared against higher tar leaders.

Confirmed: The overwhelming majority reported MERIT taste equal to—or better than—leading higher tar brands.

Confirmed: When tar levels were revealed, 2 out of 3 chose the MERIT combination of low tar and good taste.

Year after year, in study after study, MERIT remains unbeaten. The proven taste alternative to higher tar smoking—is MERIT.
