Both Sides Claim Edge In Falklands

Britain Vows To Wins

By The Associated Press

Despite the loss of a second warship and 20 of its sailors, Britain vowed Saturday to regain the Falkland Islands and said it had 5,000 men ashore in a secure beachhead. But Argentina claimed only 400 British commandos had landed and said they were "being cleaned up."

The British Defense Ministry said Saturday evening it had no reports of any Argentine attacks on the beachhead and claimed two of its carrier based Harrier jets "on routine patrol ... attacked and severely damaged an Argentine patrol boat" in Choiseul Sound, about 25 miles south of Stanley, the capital of the Falklands.

An Argentine communique issued after the British announcement said Argentine gunners shot down another Harrier as the fighter bomber attacked Port Darwin, about 50 miles west of Stanley. That would be the fourth Harrier downed in two days, according to the Argentines, who claimed they destroyed three during the British invasion Friday.

Britain had acknowledged one Harrier was missing and two reconnaissance helicopters were downed in Friday's assault.

British Defense Ministry officials said "poor" weather on the Argentine mainland reduced the threat of any major air strike "for the time being."

Argentina's claim that the British landing forces were being mopped up gave no details or any account of fresh fighting.

The British defense ministry said; "There have been no reports of any Argentine action against the task force or disembarked British forces" and the lull was being used "to continue our consolidation of the position."

Peru's official news agency Andina said Argentina had accepted a peace plan proposed by Peruvian President Fernando Belaunde Terry but the Argentine ambassador in Peru said British conditions set on the plan amounted to a rejection.

Storm Knocks Out Phones

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

While Friday night's rainfall offered welcome relief from the spring drought, the storm that dumped over an inch of rain also knocked out area telephone service for over four hours.

Lightning apparently affected the main computer system at Carolina Telephone's W. 5th St. offices just before 8 p.m. Friday and the system remained down until around midnight, according to R.I. Flye, district commercial manager.

Flye said that as a result of the computer problem, all telephone calls into and out of Greenville were affected. He said that subscribers on the 758 and 752 exchanges could make no calls and the 756, 757 and 355 exchanges could call each other but had no other service.

The spokesman said that all long distance calls from Greenville, including calls placed by customers in Farmville, Bethel, Ayden, Fountain, and Snow Hill through the Greenville system, were out during the period.

Flye said the outage left Pitt Memorial Hospital without incoming telephone service although the hospital was able to make a limited number of calls. Local police and fire-rescue departments were also without service, he reported.

Hospital spokesman Rick Gilstrap said PCMH "had a little trouble getting some of our people on call" but nothing major resulted.

Spokesmen at both the police and fire-rescue stations said their departments were also able to get by without significant problems. The police spokesman said, "We got by the best way we could."

Flye said in one instance Friday night, a caller was able to reach a telephone operator and report a local break-in. The telephone company sent someone to the police station with the message.

The telephone official estimated that between 10,000 and 12,000 area subscribers were affected by the computer outage.

Flye said that while he was not certain just what the lightning struck Friday night, he recalled that "a couple of years ago" lightning hit the tower at the main office, causing computer problems.

Charles Horne, director of Greenville Utilities, said Saturday that he was aware of no major problems during the storm, adding that blown fuses appeared to make up the bulk of the trouble.

A spokesman at GUC's power plant supported Horne's observation, saying that "we did have a lot of fuses blown." He said that only one report was received from the county service area involving a power problem.

While there were strong wind gusts during the storm, the GUC spokesman said that he knew of no problems with limbs or debris affecting power lines. He said that a lightning arrester on a wire feeding Trinity Free Will Baptist Church on Greenville Blvd. went out Friday afternoon and caused the line to burn into. No one but the church was affected by the outage, which was unrelated to the storm. He said power was restored in about an hour.

A spokesman at GUC's water plant said that Friday night rainfall was measured at 1.5 inches, while another .15 inches had fallen by around 10 a.m. Saturday.

The river level was holding at 3.4 feet, up slightly from the 2.9 feet that was recorded as the lowest level during the past week.

Officials Say Space Has Run Out

PCC May Cut Back On Size Of Nursing Class

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt Community College's nursing enrollment will be reduced because of overcrowding when the North Carolina Board of Nursing visits the department in July, say college officials, unless more space is found for the nearly 100 students.

"The board will require, I'm sure, that we reduce enrollment when they see our situation," said Judith Kuykendall, chairman of PCC's Nursing Department. Members of the board will be in Greenville July 9 for what she termed an "accreditation visit." "There are"standards based on what is educationally sound in terms of students per square foot," she added, "and we exceed those standards."

The problem, she noted, arose when Pitt County Memorial Hospital converted for its own use 3,200 square feet that was being used by PCC's nursing department as a practice lab.

That left the department, which Ms. Kuykendall said needed 18,750 square feet according to N.C. Department of Community College and Health Services standards, with around 2,000 square feet and no practice lab.

"The hospital was nice enough to let us use that space but then found themselves in a position to return it to their own use," she explained. "What it boils down to is that we need our own facilities."

Members of the school's board of trustees asked the Pitt County Commissioners May 13 to consider acquiring the former Greenville Home Decorating building, located on N.C. 11 across from PCC's campus.

"We have a major problem we want to place our emphasis on...space," Sen. Vernon White, speaking in behalf of the trustees, told the commissioners.

White said the 19,000- square -foot building could be purchased for $550,000 or rented for $100,000 per year.

PCC President William Fulford said the sit was chosen for several reasons. "First of all, it's vacant and it's close," he explained. "But most of all, we will never have available again a building that good at that good a price, and we need it now — we needed it yesterday as a matter of fact."

Dr. Fulford estimated that another $25,000-$30,000 would be needed to convert the building into the new nursing facility.

Much of the work, he noted, could be done by the college's vocational classes. The building could house four classrooms, faculty offices, an audio-tutorial lab and a nursing practice lab.

In addition to the nearly 100 full-time nursing students, the college has approximately 40 part-time students waiting to get into the program and at least 50, Ms. Kuykendall said, on a waiting list.

"We had 500 applicants this year," she noted, "and even that number is not indicative of how many wanted to go because we cut off applications and screening."

She would like to have 125 students in the program, she added, and the new building would allow her to educate that number.

"This is a mature nursing program," Fulford said, "not just something started six months ago. We've had the LPN program since 1970 and the associate degree since 1974.

"We know what we're talking about and we know what we're doing," he added.

"In addition, Pitt Memorial Hospital and the training programs such as PCC's nursing that supply it with qualified employees are big investments on the part of the taxpayers," he continued. "This investment shouldn't be allowed to sit idle or be reduced because of lack of space."

Ms. Kuykendall said she didn't know how long the proposed site would fill her department's needs. "We haven't done any long-term studies," she noted. "Right now we're working with 2,000 square feet, roughly, without the space at PCMH. That building would give us 19,000 square feet."

"We are concerned now," Fulford said, "because we don't feel like we're meeting the community's needs by turning people down from our nursing program.

"There is obviously a need by many citizens to attend and an even greater need from employers for the students we educate. Note the fact that PCMH is recruiting in Wilmington, Raleigh and all over the state — to me that says there's great need, not not to mention the citizens that need the quality of health care these nurses provide."

Ms. Kuykendall said she didn't think being away from the main PCC campus would pose a problem for in her department.

"We don't feel like it would be half as inconvenient as being fragmented and cramped for space as we are now," she noted. "Now we're dealing with having three faculty members in one office, for example, having no place to have faculty meetings and having no medical practice lab for the students. Being across the road would be no problem in comparison."

Reagan And Democrats Trade Barbs Over Tax Cut Proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, trying to enlist public support for a 1983 budget proposal attuned to Republican priorities, took another swipe Saturday at the leadership of the Democratic-controlled House.

In his eighth weekly radio address, Reagan said the House leadership under Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., favors reducing deficits by eliminating the third year of the tax cut put in place in 1981 rather than by cutting spending.

He also complained that the House leadership wants to prevent future income tax indexing "under the phony claim that it only benefits the rich."

In a Democratic response to the radio message, Rep. Morris Udall of Arizona said Reagan's policies to increase defense spending without raising taxes are leading the nation into "the economic equivalent of Vietnam."

Udall said Reagan unrealistically believes that the government can make tax cuts of $750 billion over the next five years while increasing defense spending by $1.5 trillion.

"...That you can do all this and somehow balance the budget, cure dandruff, low back pain, arthritis and everything else," he said. "And, it isn't working."

Reagan said the GOP-controlled Senate, by a vote of 49-43, took a big step

If Funding Cutbacks Continue

Shift In Services May Be Seen

By MELVIN LANG
Reflector Staff Writer

A survey conducted by graduate students at East Carolina University indicates that North Carolina can expect a major shift in services offered by public agencies as a result of President Reagan's new federalism and the accompanying budgetary shakeups.

Social services, such as programs for the mentally retarded and the handicapped child, probably will be among the most-affected areas while such municipal services as parks and recreation would be the first to be cut if local funding only is available, the survey indicated.

"The Great Society is over," said one of the students involved in the survey, Bruce Wolfe of New Bern.

The survey, which still is being analyzed, grew out of a seminar on governmental interrelations led by Dr. Edwin Griffith, an ECU political sicence professor. In addition to Wolfe, other students participating were Brett Melvin of Fayetteville, Paul Womack of Greenville, Edwin Roberts and William Hutchinson of Farmville.

The study was financed by the ECU Student Government Association.

Survey participants contacted authorities in 30 North Carolina counties, from the coast to the mountains, and 50 municipalities seeking opinions on how local government is or will be affected.

Preliminary findings indicate that the "greatest impact will be at the county level," Griffith said, because local revenues usually come from property taxes, which are slow to respond to change in the economy, and the sales tax. The survey indicated there is little mood for major tax increases locally to offset a loss of non-local funds.

"It took us 30 years to build up the system we have now of highly interrelated programs. Now, in the space of two or three years, we are trying to change the system," Griffith said'

"The system, as I see it, is going to go through a period of shock."

Based on the survey responses, the study group tentatively has concluded that:

— Few local governments will make up loss of funding. An exception, Griffith noted, is Mecklenburg County, which he said has used local funds to make up $487,500 of the $635,000 cut in federal funding of social programs.

Taxes . . .

Friday night to get spending under control by passing a budget resolution that reduces projected deficits by $358 billion over the next three years.

The Senate passed a $784 billion budget outline which calls for higher taxes and less defense spending than Reagan requested in his original budget sent to Capitol Hill last February but still leaves a projected deficit of $116 billion. Reagan's plan drew virtually no support.

When the House and Senate have completed work on the measure, it will be used as a guide on a series of appropriations bills which provide the detailed provision of money for operations of the government. At present, the measure only outlines expected spending in 17 major categories such as defense, agriculture and so forth and does not go into detail.

"I'll be honest with you," the president said in his radio address. "I would have liked more reductions in spending, but at least it's another step in the right direction — the direction we started to go last year."

Unlike what he called the "responsible action by the Senate leadership," House Democratic leaders are "trying to spend more and to eliminate $150 billion or so of your tax cut," Reagan said.

He said the House leaders want to cut spending, but only defense spending. "Eliminating about 73 percent of our planned increase in the defense budget is their goal," he said.

O'Neill said Saturday that the top issue when the House begins debate Monday on the budget "will be the cruel and unwarranted Republican attack on the Medicare program."

In the formal Democratic response to Reagan's address, Udall said former President Carter came to Washington in 1977 promising and believing he could balance the budget but left with a four-year deficit of $194 billion.

A conservative estimate of four years under Reagan, he said, is a total of $749 billion in deficits — $119 billion the first year, $182 billion the second, $216 billion the third and $232 billion the fourth year.

"These are incredible, historic-size deficits," Udall said. "And it is basically wrong, and it won't work, and we can't do it. And the American people are going to see that."

He said the nation cannot "go out and borrow money to finance ourselves a tax cut."

"President Johnson made a mistake in not trying to finance Vietnam with higher taxes," Udall said. "If we actually need an increased national defense, let's be willing to pay the cost, and not go out to borrow the money for that on top of borrowing all the money for the tax cuts that we've needed."

In his radio message, Reagan urged the American people to support a budget proposal sponsored by House Republicans and conservative Democrats and similar to the Senate resolution.

"It will preserve your tax cuts, reduce spending, and keep America strong," he said. "If you want interest rates to come down and the economy to get going, it wouldn't hurt if you told your congressman to vote for the bipartisan recovery budget."

But O'Neill said Saturday that the $23.3 billion cut in Medicare in the House GOP proposal endorsed by Reagan would have a "devastating impact on senior citizens" and "drive many of them into personal bankruptcy."

The House speaker said out-of-pocket hospital expenses under the Republican proposal would double for the nation's 29 million elderly and sick, half of whom have household incomes below $8,750 a year.

"It would require that for the first time in our country's history, a future generation would receive medical care that is inferior to the earlier generation," O'Neill said. "The Democratic leadership will use everything at its disposal to counter this attack."

The House is expected to vote on a budget resolution next week before leaving for a Memorial Day vacation.

Radioactive Disk Found

ATLANTIC BEACH, N.C. (AP) — Local authorities warned sunbathers and shell collectors Saturday not to pick up strange objects in the sand after a disk containing radioactive matter was discovered.

Police Chief Wade Pelletier said a disk slightly larger than a silver dollar was found by a tourist Thursday on Atlantic Beach. The disk was labelled "U.S. Radium Corporation. Radioactive Poison Inside."

Explosives experts at the Cherry Point Marine Air Base tested the disk, which had a clear glass front and contained oil and a light green powder, and found that it was not dangerous, Pelletier said.

Survey . . .

— Changes in one program will result in shifting of burdens to another program. An example may be in the area of vocational rehabilitation, which is scheduled for a 30 percent cut in funding.

"If not funded, these people will go to public assistance," Womack said.

Wolfe also noted that the survey team had found reports of families, denied medical assistance for handicapped children, in which the husband "deserted" so the child could receive publicly assisted treatment: "He's gone through the day and slips back in at night," Wolfe said.

— Changes in Medicaid- Medicare coverage may lead to distinct levels of medical services available. "A fairly high percentage (of the medically oriented respondents to the survey) felt there would be an emergence of the two-class system such as that in England," Griffith said, with specific treatment levels of treatment for patients covered by thepublic insurance and those who are not.

Hutchinson also reported that his study showed bad debts incurred by North Carolina hospitals were not totally attributable to charity or Medicaid or any other publicly assisted treatment. Instead, Hutchinson said, the bad debt problem is traceable to the middle income patient — "those too rich for Medicaid and too poor for other insurance."

Hutchinson said that, in 1979, the bad debt total for North Carolina hospitals was about $80 million. By 1980, it had grown to $94 million.

Morale is disintegrating, especially among state employees involved in public services.

Melvin cited the Employment Security Commission as an example of an agency with morale problems. The ESC has undergone budget cuts and loss of personnel, and Melvin projects that more are to come.

"And this is the one program that could do the most good ... The people affected are people whose wages would average $3.79 per hour. It indicates that the poor are the people who are going to be hurt the most," Melvin said.

Griffith also noted that the survey's respondents indicated a fairly high level of distrust among levels of government, especially over the distribution of any block grants from the federal government.

Of 161 persons interviewed, 112 agreed when they were presented the statement: "The states will skim from the block grants if they administer them." Thirty-seven respondents disagreed and 12 said they didn't have an opinion.

To the question, "Would skimming be more of a problem with the Legislature or the executive branch," 33 said the executive and 13 the Legislature while 83 expressed the belief there would be a problem with both the Legislature and the executive branch.

Similarly, 138 respondents said political motivation would be a factor in the distribution of block grants.

The North Carolina Center for Public Policy Research Inc., based in Raleigh, has conducted its own study that concluded North Carolina has lost $241 million in federal funds since Oct. 1,1981. The center traced $28.9 million of that loss to block grants.

By way of comparison, the center listed the five areas with the largest cuts as: highways, $41.7 million; CETA public service jobs, $31.3 million; school lunch and breakfast programs, $28.2 million; Medicaid, $16.9 million, and water and sewer construction grants, $16.6 million.

Convict Remains Nameless

SEATTLE (AP) — Behind the bars of the King County Jail sits a man whose identity remains a mystery even to those who found him guilty of theft and forgery.

After hundreds of hours of tracking down leads and trying to match fingerprints in 12 states, Canada and England, police and prosecutors have no clues to the identity of the swarthy man.

They call him "John Doe."

He was arrested Feb. 25 at the Seattle-Tacoma International Airport with a briefcase full of stolen identification. He was convicted of first-degree theft and forgery on April 29.

Prosecutors describe him as a slick-talking charmer who had a cleverly planned scheme to convert a stolen business check for $16,000 into cash and traveler's checks.

"We can prove he's not who he says he is," says police Detective Larry Baylor, "but we can't find out who he is."

"They are the ones who arrested me and convicted me," the mystery man said in a recent interview. "It's their duty to find out who I am. I know who I am."

John Doe's fingerprints have not appeared in the department's computer files.

"It's very possible he didn't get fingerprinted even if he had been charged (before)," said Marilyn Hattori, a King County police fingerprint examiner.

The man occasionally has referred to himself as a Vietnam veteran, but searches of military files and the FBI's civil and criminal files have turned up nothing.

"We ran out of places to look," Baylor said, "and we ran out of leads."

Meanwhile, John Doe has filed four lawsuits in federal court, charging various kinds of conspiracy and misconduct by public defender organizations, prosecutors, the jail and medical staff and Port of Seattle police, whose jurisdiction includes the airport.

He's been on a hunger strike since May 12 or 13, he said. When asked how long he planned to continue, he said, "I don't know. I'm really at odds on what to do."

Crane Hatches In Capitivity

By MICHAEL C. BUELOW
Associated Press Writer

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The fourth Siberian crane bred in captivity hatched this weekend at the International Crane Foundation in Baraboo, a foundation spokesman said Saturday.

Spokesman Scott Freeman said the chick appeared to be healthy. The chick was named Ramsar, after an international convention on wetlands protection held in 1971 at Ramsar, Iran, Freeman said.

the chick, which hatched about midnight Friday, is the third Siberian crane hatched in captivity this year, all at the foundation. The first ever was Dushenka, who hatched last fall, also at Baraboo.

Scientists say about 190 of the rare, aggressive birds are left in the wild. The stately creatures are white with black wing tips and stand 4½ feet tall when full grown.

Freeman said the privately funded foundation now has 13 of the birds, tying it with a Soviet institution for the most Siberian cranes in captivity.

Freeman said, however, the Rare Crane Breeding Center at the Oka State Nature Reserve, 186 miles south of Moscow, will not be able to breed its birds for a while because they are too young.

Siberian cranes are noted for undertaking a grueling 3,700-mile migration route between Siberia and central India that takes them through Pakistan and Afghanistan.

The birds' numbers have declined because of hunting and destruction of their wetland habitat, Freeman said.

Dushenka and Ghandi, the second chick, which hatched May 13, share parents — a female named Hirakawa and a male named Tilliman.

The third chick, Poyang, hatched May 16, has the same parents as Ramsar — Hirakawa and Wolf. Poyang is named for a lake near the Yangtze River in China where cranes gather in winter.

Ghandi was named after Indian Prime Minister Indira Ghandi because of her interest in preserving birds. She declared a cranes' wintering ground — Keoladeo Ghana refuge in central India — a national park to better protect the birds.

Hirakawa has been laying eggs at the rate of one per week and another egg is expected to hatch next weekend, Freeman said. A second egg was tested last week and found to be infertile, he said.

Falklands . . .

Foreign Minister Nicanor Costa Mendez prepared to denounce Britain before the U.N. Security Council.

Pope John Paul II appealed for peace and was reported leaving it up to Roman Catholic bishops in London to decide whether the escalation of the South Atlantic fighting should prompt him to abandon plans to visit Britain starting Friday.

The sinking of the frigate Ardent by Argentine jets was announced by British Defense Secretary John Nott, who told reporters in London that about 30 men were wounded in Friday's attack against the warship in addition to the 20 lost crewmen. He said another British warship had an unexploded bomb in its engine room that was later defused, and that three other ships suffered minor damage.

Britain contended it knew the ships would be vulnerable but called it the calculated cost of a landing that Nott described as a "complete success."

The Ardent was the second British warship sunk since the crisis erupted April 2 with the Argentine seizure of the Falklands from Britain. The destroyer Sheffield was sunk and 20 of its men lost after a missile fired by an Argentine fighter-bomber blasted the ship in the icy South Atlantic May 4.

Two days earlier, a British hunter-killer submarine torpedoed Argentina's only cruiser, the General Belgrano, and Argentina said 321 seamen perished.

Just before the British launched their assault Friday a helicopter ferrying British troops ditched in the ocean, leaving 21 dead. Britain reported two more servicemen killed, three missing and 27 wounded in the Falklands assault itself.

But the British said despite the losses they were back on the islands to stay with a total landing force of 5,000 men, including marines, paratroopers, artillery, engineers, medics and other support personnel. This was twice the number of troops ashore given previously.

At a Defense Ministry news conference in London, Marine Lt. Col. Tim Donkin indicated a beachhead of about 10 square miles had been established at Port San Carlos, about 50 miles west of the capital of Stanley.

He said the total operation "involves a total of over 25,000 men in ships at sea and something over 100 ships...At a range of 8,000 miles from the U.K. base." He said this includes all elements of the task force and its maritime supply line strung out across the Atlantic.

Asked about Argentine claims to have "complete control" of British landing forces, Donkin said the British assault "has not been repelled, nor will it be. We are there to stay."

But Argentina's official Telam news agency said Britain managed to land just 400 troops in the San Carlos area, that they "are completely controlled" and were "being cleaned up" by Argentine forces Saturday.

The commander of the Argentine air force, Brig. Basilio Lami Dozo, said his pilots proved their skills in attacking the British fleet and that the results of fighting "undoubtedly has been very positive" for the Argentines.

"The air force is prepared and has given examples of its capacity and professionalism," Lami Dozo said. "We're ready for any new attack."

Britain's domestic news agency, Press Association, said British troops were bolstering their beachhead at San Carlos and bracing for a major counterattack from the Argentine garrison at Stanley within 30 hours.

The British staged their attack on the Falklands when the weather cleared slightly after a winter storm. Meterologists said another severe storm is now approaching the islands, bringing high winds and freezing temperatures.

British correspondents with the task force filed accounts of soldiers hitting the beach under moonlight early Friday, their faces blackened with cork, their backs weighed down with heavy packs.

One of the reporters, Kim Sabido of Independent Radio News, waded ashore with commandos from the troopship Canberra and said in a report subject to military censorship:

"We marched for three kilometers (about two miles) across boggy, windswept terrain and fanned out with constant helicopter support.

"As the weather changed and rain came in, we reached a settlement. Some 50 locals, including up to a dozen children, were busy ferrying ammunition to gunners using their tractors and trailers, dishing out soup and tea to the troops and providing much-needed shelter.

Israeli Radar System Tested

ABERDEEN, Md. (AP) — A portable radar system developed in Israel is being tested at the Aberdeen Proving Ground for use on battlefields beside anti-aircraft missiles and guns.

The Human Engineering Laboratory at the proving ground conducted a limited, week-long test of the system in February at Fort Lewis, Wash., said spokesman David Davison, and more tests are planned here.

City Council Should Now Look Ahead

A budget of $13,514,805 has been recommended to the City Council for the fiscal year 1982-83 with a tax rate of 49 cents per $100 assessed valuation, the same rate as that of the present fiscal year.

The budget was recommended last week by Interim City Manager Gail Meeks. She described it as a maintenance budget which would continue services at their present levels.

Excluding the debt service figure of $744,320, which is mostly Utilities bonded indebtedness, the budget shows an increase of $76,535 or a half percent over the present year's. Including the debt service the increase is $820,835 or 6.4 percent increase.

There are additions and deletions of positions in the budget, the net result of which is to provide for three additional policemen. The additions would be uniformed patrolmen.

Mrs. Meeks saw no unusual increases in revenues for the coming fiscal year. Capital improvements spending would remain about the same as this year. Lease purchasing arrangements would be used for funding large equipment items. These include garbage trucks, street sweepers, police cars, rescue units and other equipment.

It appears that the recommended budget does what is necessary for this recession year — that is it holds spending closely to this year's rate. It also hold the tax rate, something that is virtually essential at the present time.

The City Council, however, does have to be concerned that many desirable projects cannot be financed in a tight budget. Some long term construction, particularly in the way of street work, is being put off to a future time when it will have to be dealt with.

The city's street improvement program may be grinding to a halt at the same time that there is less state highway money for urban street work.

One of the real problems we will have to face is how these long term and expensive projects will be financed. It is something that will require serious study on the part of the City Council.

Time Is Ripe For Big Powers To Seek Terms

President Reagan has made his offer for resumption of arms reductions talks. Last week Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev said he was ready to begin talks and proposed a freeze on strategic nuclear weapons.

Brezhnev, however, was not agreeable to an immediate cut in arms, saying that was unrealistic.

Nevertheless, President Reagan saw positive signs in the Brezhnev statements and said, "I think we'll be meeting."

Anything is positive at this stage. It is clear that concern is rising worldwide about the threat of nuclear destruction. In addition both the United States and the Soviets are in danger of spending themselves bankrupt in the eternal chase for more sophisticated weapons.

We can hope that something will come of a new round of talks. It is time for the super powers to come to terms.

Sunday Morning Notes

Charlie and Anne Lee of Greenville, Kill Devil Hills and Orlando, Fla., have received a zoning compliance permit for additions and accessory buildings.

Normally such permits are issued for changes and additions to a house.

The Lees are building, but not in the accepted sense. What they are constructing will soon be on the road. Their project is a doll house and Mrs. Lee is listed as the principal constructor. Her husband says he is her No. 1 errand runner.

The doll hous, itself will soon be on the way to Florida. It will be used to benefit Our Saviour Community Church in Orlando, Fla., which the couple attends part of each year.

The city permit, which didn't cost anything, had spaces for various information on the prospective projects. None, however fitted this particular one. Under site information, for instance, there are boxes to check for addition and accessory building. "Other" had been added to fit this circumstance.

Under present use there are blocks for single family, duplex, multifamily, commercial and industrial. None fits this case, so under "other" was listed doll house.

The Lees seem to enjoy life. They have calling cards which list Greenville, Kill Devil Hills and Orlando addresses. The nature of their business, according to their card: "No money, no boat, no business, no plane."

They do, however, list behind their names, "retired."

And on the back is a message for those of us who are still struggling:

"We are fully aware that our youth has been spent, that our get up and go has got up and went. But we really don't mind, when we think with a grin, of all the grand places our romances have been."

It would seem the Lees are still going places.

At any rate the legalities of building the doll house for the church benefit have been settled.

But the house has to be moved to Florida.

The question arises, is a permit required to move a doll house on public highways?

Maybe the doll house can be passed off as a camper-trailer and the move can take place.

The only other solution might be to call in the professional house movers.

NCAE May Endorse More Republicans

RALEIGH — Some Republican legislators will get an unexpected boost in their re-election campaigns this year. The N.C. Asssociation of Educators will endorse more Republican legislative candidates than ever before.

NCAE's local chapters will announce their legislative endorsements in the next few weeks and NCAE President John Wilson reports this will be the best year Republicans have ever had with NCAE. The 52,000-member group is considered liberal-to-moderate politically and traditionally helps Democrats.

Wilson gave two reasons for the increase of GOP endorsements. Republicans supported public education more strongly this term and NCAE did a better job of researching voting records to find their friends.

Wilson said NCAE "isn't going to support Jesse Helms Republicans ... but there are more moderate Republicans, those who do support public education issues and many of them support the things we support. So, we shouldn't write them off and they souldn't write us off, either."

One Republican Wilson mentioned favorably is Statesville's Sen. Bill Redman. Asked about the endorsement, Redman said Republicans support education "by trying to get the best public education for the dollar we spend."

Then he added an odd word of advice for NCAE. The organization should be careful about alienating traditional supporters of education who may not have fared well on NCAE's legislative report card this year. He specifically mentioned two Democrats, Durhams's Sen. Ken Royall and Kinston's Sen. Harold Hardison.

During this year's term as NCAE president, Wilson has been mentioned as a possible candidate for either the state House or an office with NCAE's affiliate, the National Education Association. He's decided to go back to teaching school in Raleigh next year, he says, and to run for a three-year term on NEA's executive committee in the summer of 1983.

John LIttle, administrator of the state's division of archaeology and historical preservation, was recently asked by legislators if the state knows how much tourism historical sites generate. He said no. But, the findings of a South Dakota study probably apply to North Carolina also, he said.

Historical sites are the top tourist attraction in that state which also boasts Mount Rushmore and the fabled Black Hills. On impulse, tourists will drive as much as 20 miles off a main road to get to a historical site if something along the road informs them of the site. If they happen across enough sites, they'll change their vacation plans and spend as much as three extra days in the state at an average daily expense of $80.

This month's awards for political repartee goes to Winston Salem's Rep. Margaret Tennille. She was chairing a committee meeting last week when Sen. Redman entered, about 20 minutes late.

A bit flustered by his tardiness, Redman explained, "I would have been here on time if it hadn't been for the traffic jam in Winston."

To which Rep. Tennille, a Democrat, reminded her Republican colleague, "We'd have a bypass around town if it wasn't for the Republicans."

An Angry Hour Passes

WASHINGTON — Most of the time the United States Senate rolls along as politely as an old Stanley steamer, the proceedings oiled by the rituals of parliamentary speech, but something happened a couple of weeks ago that is worth reporting. Jake Garn, the junior senator from Utah, lost his temper on the floor. We witnessed an explosion of honesty. It didn't last long, but it was great while it lasted.

Garn's wrath was triggered by some of the most blatant demagoguery of recent years. Catching the leadership by surprise — in itself a breach of decorum — West Virginia's Robert Byrd suddenly demanded immediate consideration of an amendment to the defense authorization bill. His amendment had nothing to do with defense. It would have declared that "the May 5, 1982, unfair action of the Senate Budget Committee, supported by the president, calling for an arbitrary $40 billion cut in Social Security benefits over the next three fiscal years, is hereby rejected."

In the annals of the Senate, such caustic language about a Senate committee is unheard of. Byrd's amendment had no chance of winning approval, and he knew it. His purpose was to put on a grandstand show of partisan politics.

The fireworks began. Moynihan of New York, Sasser of Tennessee and Riegle of Michigan joined the bear-baiting game, shooting barbs of rhetoric at President Reagan in particular and at Republicans in general. Ted Kennedy got in the act: Would Senator Byrd agree that the enormously unfair economic policy of this administration has resulted in massive tax cuts for the wealthy and massive budget cuts for the needy? Would the senator agree that the president is now asking the senior citizens of this nation, who have worked long to earn their Social Security benefits in their twilight years, to bail out this administration's inequitable policy?

Russell Long of Louisiana entered the fray. His heart grieved for the "little working people" and especially for the "dear old folks" who would be so cruelly abused if Social Security were touched in any way. As demagoguery, this was a class act. Read the Record of May 6 for yourself.

Finally Jake Garn gained the floor. "I do not think I have ever listened to more blatantly partisan, more blatantly rhetorical baloney than I have listened to today. I am angry. I am angry at this body, I am angry at Congress — and I do not care which party, Republicans or Democrats — because there are weak-kneed, gutless politicians on both sides who will not face up to the issues or the problems of this economy."

In a cold rage, Garn spelled out fact after fact on the sorry state of the economy — a condition largely created by the high interest rates that in turn have been largely preserved by the wretched performance of this Congress. Garn refused to yield even for a friendly question from Goldwater of Arizona: "I am too wound up at the moment."

"Who are we kidding?" Garn demanded. "Only Congress can appropriate money. We created this problem. I hope the American people are smart enough to place a plague on both parties if this continues.... We should start facing up to the nature of this problem, and I do not care which side of the aisle faces up to it. There should not even be an aisle on this issue."

In that angry hour on the floor, Garn spoke for millions of Americans who are getting as fed up as he is with the political infighting and backstabbing in this election year. This Congress is now four months into its second session, and nothing constructive has been accomplished. Members are so fearful of Long's "dear old folks" that they will not face up to changes that must be made in Social Security if the system is to survive.

Neither will this Congress face up to other entitlement programs that have grown completely out of hand — food stamps, educational grants, dairy subsidies and the like. Hell-bent on their own re-election, members have thrown responsibility to the winds. The country cries out for bipartisan statesmanship, and what do we get? Blather from Bob Byrd and carping from Ted Kennedy. Thanks to Jake Garn, anyhow, for rising above a wretched hour.

Reagan's Action Recalls Past

WASHINGTON — The president's senior staff gathered for the daily 8 a.m. coffee and conversation May 13 to wrestle with this puzzler: How would Ronald Reagan at his press conference that night handle the House Republican rebellion on Social Security.

The quandary was strategic and tactical, not substantive. President Reagan eight days earlier had embraced the Senate Republican budget, including a $40 billion drop in the expense of Social Security. To stick to it would enrage his allies in the House. To abandon it so quickly would demonstrate Carterite indecision. So, the president that night ended up saying: "I will let the members of the Senate and the members of the House work that out — that's their job."

That recalls the decisiveness of Jimmy Carter, but it also evokes more sinister memories of the recent past. The Reagan White House has been basing the Social Security question on how it would play in the next morning's headlines. Such strategizing as a substitute for policy has plagued administrations of the last two decades.

Strategic politics can be defined as gearing policy decisions less to the public good than to how they will play in Peoria. Since those assessments naturally shift back and forth, the inevitable outcome is vacillation — precisely Reagan's course on the Social Security question.

After last year's firestorm caused by Social Security reforms prematurely proposed by the White House, a lid was put on future talk — a lid bound to pop since it was based on expediency rather than principle. The popping came May 5 when the Senate Budget Committee unanimously rejected the original Reagan budget. Unwilling to let that indignity play in Peoria the next morning, the White House staff determined there must be a countervailing headline generated that same day.

The result was acceptance of Sen. Pete Domenici's Senate Republican budget, including that telltale $40 billion "savings" for Social Security. The congressman from Peoria, House Minority Leader Bob Michel, knew this was Republican suicide, and so did most of his colleagues. Within a week, they came up with their play to remove Social Security from the budget, leading to the president's waffling at his press conference.

This traditional Republican masochism cannot be laid directly at the door of James Baker III, the Republican traditionalist who heads the White House staff. He has worked hard to insulate Social Security, but always against the dogged persistence of budget director David Stockman and the president's own temptation, in the manner of the conservative Republican moth, to brush against the Social Security flame.

But Baker has led those inside the administration who, in defiance of any recognized school of economics, insist budget deficits are the principal cause of high interest rates and, therefore, recessions. This "simple-minded conviction," Irving Kristol wrote in the Wall Street Journal, led to "panic" about the economy and the blunder of May 5. Kristol's analysis is privately confirmed by those presidential staff aides who were appalled at the acceptance of Domenici's budget.

Beyond economics, the Social Security mess reflects the rising tide at the White House of pragmatic problem-solving. Since most of the major players there are sufficiently fluid in their views to work for any president, the tendency is to look anew on each day's problem in search of what they think will work.

That certainly is not Ronald Reagan's style, but he may be more dependent on staff than any previous president. He has, therefore, been going around the country plugging a budget which includes, as an integral part, the $40 billion Social Security savings. At the same time, he has been giving Michel a free hand to exclude Social Security from the budget. Such Carter-style waffling won't play in Peoria.

NEW YORK (UPI) — A machine editing system that balks at overlong sentences or stilted, cumbersome expressions is being developed for the military by the defense division of Westinghouse Electric Corp. at Baltimore.

Ultimately, it could be useful in many civilian fields, especially in the academic and scientific worlds where stilted, clumsy writing is practically endemic. It might even be used to make legal briefs intelligible to ordinary folk.

According to Douglas Kniffin, who is directing the project for Westinghouse, it isn't a brand new machine. It can be adapted to practically any word processing system.

Westinghouse has been working on the system for about six years but began actually using it with word processing machinery about two years ago.

The system and its software are adapted in considerable degree from a popular book entitled "The Art of Readable Writing" by Rudolph Flesch.

The military wants a reliable automatic system for insuring that training manuals are written in highly readable English because it has been demonstrated that many young soldiers, sailors and airmen simply don't understand typical factory-written training manuals.

Consequently, many of them never learn to operate or maintain expensive equipment properly. The young recruits will spend hours poring over manuals they ought to be able comprehend in 15 minutes or a half hour.

"Every branch of the military has its own readability guidelines," Kniffin said. "Nevertheless, the manuals from the factories don't come across. The Ph.D. engineer who writes a manual to be used by high school dropout recruits just doesn't succeed in communicating."

The Westinghouse automatic readability system consists of preprogammed floppy disks for any given age or standard intelligence level. They are used with a standard word processing system including a keyboard, a cathode ray tube, computer text processor and, if desired, a printer.

The text of the manual as it comes from the factory is punched into the processing computer, then brought up page by page on the screen. The pre-programmed disk red-flags every sentence that is too long. It also singles out clumsy or difficult expressions or words and suggests one to three alternatives for each poor expression.

For example, it will suggest "absolutely for categorically," a word not too many recruits are familiar with.

It will suggest "by" or "under" instead of "in accordance with". It proposes "now" instead of "at this point in time."

There are 1,800 words in the floppy disk that can be substituted for 900 objectionable words or expressions.

The Navy and Bell Laboratories are doing parallel research.

Dear Senator:

As a Christian and long-time school teacher I agree that the Constitution should allow voluntary prayers in schools. But I have problems.

First, the Christian group elected to have voluntary prayers at 10:15 every morning — right in the middle of Algebra 2. Then the Jewish students decided to have voluntary prayers at 2:20 p.m., when we were only 20 minutes into Latin 2. To accommodate both groups, I cut some trigonometry and shortened Cicero.

But I don't know how to cope with Ali, Senator. He claims that his religion requires that he pray five times daily, and he's messing things up. He never tells us exactly what time he intends to pray, and he often gets out of his seat and prostrates himself towards Mecca at unfortunate moments — as when I ask the class to conjugate certain irregular verbs, etc. The other day, when I asked Ali to tell the class what happened at Runnymede in June of 1215, he just got up and flattened himself eastwards.

Most recently, Seifu-jo has been raising his hand daily for recognition. I've ignored him until now, fearing that he might come up with something Shinto. And what time of the day would that be? Please help me.

On April 25, 1982, I attended a musical play titled "Let George Do It" at Wellcome Middle School. The students did a superb job of acting and singing, even though during the play the portable stage almost fell apart. Many children could have been injured!

A lot of talent was shown to those of us fortunate enough to be in attendance. Congratulations to Miss Barbara Plummer, musical director, Mrs. Annette Brook, art designer, and all others who had a part in this production. To put on a production of this caliber under such conditions was indeed an outstanding feat.

Can't Pitt County do better than this for its students?

To the editor:

The Cape Hatteras Lighthouse must be saved, as it is the only way that ships can spot danger or even worse before it is too late and can steer into safety. The lighthouse foghorn and flashing light is, therefore, essential for warnings. I am an ex-Navy man and know what it can signal.

It seems the only way to save the Lighthouse is a telethon. Congressman Walter Jones and Governor Jim Hunt's offices have been contact. If interested in sponsoring or participating in this project, call 756-8123 between 6 and 8 o'clock.

Years Later, Soldier Is Remembered

Noel Yancey

On the morning of Jan. 5, 1965, Sgt. Charles Robert Jenkins of Rich Square was leading a U.S. 1st Calvary Division detachment on patrol in the demilitarized zone of North Korea. At about 2:30 a.m., Jenkins halted the patrol, told his men to wait for him and walked out in the darkness.

So far as his family and friends in Rich Square know, that was the last time the young soldier was seen on this side of the Iron Curtain.

After members of the detachment reported him missing, the Army began an investigation. In Jenkins' quarters, they found a note addressed to his mother, Pattie Jenkins Caspar of Rich Square, expressing "regret for the trouble I will cause you ..." It added:

"I know what I'll have to do. I'm going to North Korea. Tell the family I love them very much. Love, Charles."

The Army made the note and the circumstances public after the North Korean radio at Pyongyang said that Jenkins had defected because he was disgusted with the conditions in South Korea and that be believed life would be better under the communists.

Almost a month later, the Pyongyang radio quoted Jenkins as saying he found a society where he could lead "a worthy life, a Shangri-La where I can enjoy happiness."

Since then, Mrs. Caspar said she has heard nothing. "I don't have any idea he went over (to the communists)," she said. "He loved me too much." She said she thinks her son is dead "because if he was still living he would have gotten in touch with me."

"I would rather know he was in a grave out there," she added with a sob. "At least, I would know where he was at. As it is, I don't know nothing."

Mrs. Caspar, who is now 68 and in failing health with a "heart condition," a "back problem" and cataracts, said that since her son has not been ruled dead she has "got nothing from her insurance." She said she hired a lawyer several years ago to try to get some information from the Army, but "he got a letter back that they didn't know anything."

The Army's announcement on Jan. 27, 1965, that Jenkins had defected to the North Korean communists brought expressions of shock and surprise from residents of Rich Square who had known him while he attended school — which he quit after the ninth grade — and while he worked at Pope Motor Co., or while he served in the local unit of the National Guard before deciding to make a career in the Army.

"He was below average scholastically," said W.R. King, his school principal. "His father, an ice plant supervisor, died while he was in the fifth or sixth grade ... Had his father lived, he probably would have finished high school."

He said the youth never presented any disciplinary problems which were not average and he participated in school extracurricular activities "in a minor way."

"He was a good worker but a little strange," said L.E. Pope, owner of the auto firm where Jenkins worked.

Raymond Branch, Jenkins' platoon sergeant in the local National Guard unit, said the youth had planned to make a career in the Army and the word of his defection was "shocking news to me."

After serving in the National Guard a little over two years, young Jenkins joined the Army in 1958, served a tour of duty in Korea, in Germany and in Texas before being ordered back to Korea. He was on leave in Rich Square when he was notified to return to Korea.

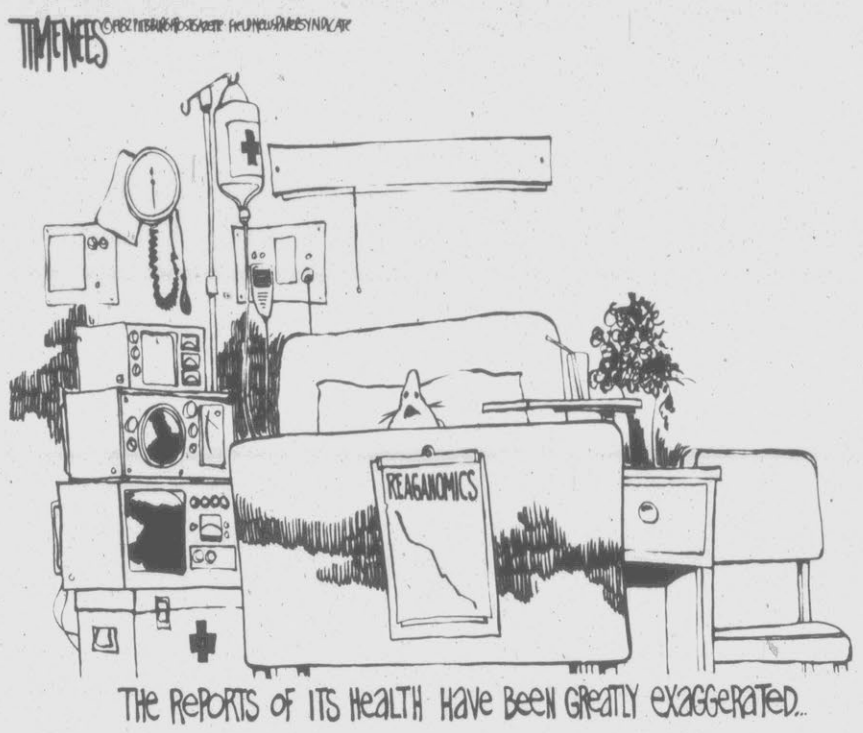
Malcolm Best, who grew up with Jenkins and worked with him at the auto firm, said the young soldier "acted king of strange" on that last leave and "wasn't like he used to be." Asked recently about that comment, Best said Jenkins was "always kind of strange." He said the youth, who never married, "always like to have a good time."

Members of his family and friends could not understand why Jenkins, who was always known as Robert, had signed the note to his mother with his other given name, "Charles." It lent some credence to their insistance that the youth was either kidnapped or brainwashed into going over to the communists.

"I don't know whether he was brainwashed or not, but if he has done what they say he has done, he certainly didn't do it on his own," said the sergeant's younger brother, Gene Jenkins, in an interview at the time of the disappearance. "He loved the service because that's all he knew."

An Army spokesman said Jenkins was a good soldier, that he did not have access to classified information and that there was no known reason for him to defect.

"He seemed pretty disappointed he was having to go back to Korea," Gene Jenkins told reporters in that news conference 17 years ago.



Poll

George Gallup

PRINCETON, N.J. — Two out of three Americans believe there is a relationship between violence shown on television programs and the nation's high crime rate according to a recent Gallup Poll.

This survey finding parallels the conclusions of the National Institute of Mental Health, which recently reported finding "overwhelming evidence" that violence on TV leads to aggressive behavior among children and teen-agers.

Although parents of school-age children and non-parents share the view that TV program featuring gunplay, fistfights and the like induce criminal behavior, they reject a proposal for taking this type of program off the air completely. However, by better than a 2-to-1 ratio, they support a curfew on violent TV shows till after 10 p.m, when most young children have gone to bed.

The survey found two American in three (66 percent) believing a relationship between TV violence and crime exists, while 30 percent feel there is none. Among parents of children 18 and under, 62 percent perceive a relationship while 69 percent of non-parents share this perception. (This apparent paradox is primarily a function of age, since parents of younger children tend themselves to be younger; significantly fewer persons under 50 than over this age think there's a link between TV violence and crime.)

A proposal to eliminate violent TV shows is favored by one-third of the public (34 percent) and opposed by 60 percent. Again, the age of survey respondents is an important factor, with a 57 percent majority of person aged 65 years and older approving of the proposal while a 65 percent majority of those younger than 65 disapprove.

A ban on televising violent programs until 10 p.m. is endorsed by 67 percent of the public and opposed by 27, percent. Heavy majorities in all population groups back this move.

There have been no significant changes in the public's views on these issues since the same questions were asked five years ago.

WIDE DIFFERENCES FOUND

While majorities in all population groups think there is a relationship between TV violence and crime, substantial intergroup differences are found.

Women (72 percent), for example, are more inclined that men (59 percent) to feel there is a violence/crime link. Women are also more likely to favor a prohibition on broadcasting violent shows before 10 p.m. (73 percent, to 62 percent for men) and are more favorably disposed to the total elimination of shows featuring violence (39 percent, to 28 percent for men).

Following are the questions asked and the findings among key population groups:

"There has been a good deal of discussion lately about television programs that show violence — that is, gunplay, fistfights and the like. Do you think there is a relationship between violence on television and the rising crime rate in the United States, or not?"

Question: Why Are Rates Still High?

John Cunniff

NEW YORK (AP) — By its own admission, the best laid economic plans of the White House might not produce a strong recovery if interest rates remain at their extraordinarilly high levels.

Economists of almost every persuasion agree. And by their actions, so apparently do leaders of lending institutions, industrial corporations, farmers, small-business operators, and savers large and small.

But even more depressing is the failure to achieve any consensus about the reason why rates remain so high, and the public exasperation and confusion of those you might expect to understand the situation.

On almost any day you may find government blaming money markets, money markets blaming the Federal Reserve, the Fed blaming spenders, and potential spenders blaming uncertain fiscal and monetary policies.

According to President Ronald Reagan, money markets are not convinced the government will hold the line against inflation and excessive spending. Henry Kaufman, the interest rate guru, tends to disagree.

"Why shouldn't interest rates be high," states Kaufman "when the growth of debt is excessive, when quality is more questionable than in the past and when participants have the capacity to innovate ...?"

Rates are high not because of inflationary expectations or economic growth or some notion that there is a mystical, normal interest rate, says Kaufman, a partner in the Salomon Brothers investment house.

They are high because credit markets have been revolutionized by deregulation that in turn let loose an unprecedented flow of new types of credit instruments: negotiable certificates of deposit, floating bate loans, zero coupon bonds, variable interest rate mortgages, money market funds, NOW accounts, indexed bonds. You get the point.

Simultaneously, he maintains, there has been a "liberalization of credit standards and practices," which is another way of saying that money has been lent to customers who once would have been turned down.

The result has been a growth of debt in the United States to $4.5 trillion at the end of 1981, "three times the $1.5 trillion of 1970," Kaufman told the Association of International Bond Dealers yesterday.

Such is the confusion about rates, however, that not even so esteemed an observer as Kaufman, has the last word. Nobody does. Perhaps never before have so many "experts" admitted that your guess is as good as theirs — bank presidents, Treasury officials, big borrowers among them.

It's a confusing picture, most likely made up of multiple components, not all of them well understood, even by high government officials whose policies are directed at influencing interest rates.

Ironies Exist In Congress

Maxwell Glen
Cody Shearer

WASHINGTON — Congress is one step away from turning an embattled student loan program into little more than a latter-day corollary of the GI Bill.

Last week, late one day, the Senate rushed through an amendment to the Pentagon budget bill requiring student aid applicants, as of Oct. 1, to prove that they've registered with the Selective Service System. Within the next 10 days, Rep. Gerald B. Solomon (R-N.Y.) is expected to offer a similar amendment to the Defense Department Authorizationbill in the House.

Oddly enough, there had never been any congressional hearings or debate on the student aid-registration link before Sen. S.I. "Sleepy Sam" Hayakawa (R-Calif.) introduced Amendment 1441 on the Senate floor. Nonetheless, it passed unanimously.

For the record, the Selective Service System, which admits to falling 550,000 names short in its two-year floor debate, senators seem to have been swept away by the simple principle of the 17th-century political theorist John Locke: With every right in society comes an accompanying responsibility.

Of course, the notion of a social contract between citizen and state is as sacred and relevant in 1982 as in Locke's heyday. But by invoking Locke in approving the Hayakawa amendment, the Senate has badly abused a great principle.

To begin with, the new "eligibility requirements" would, if enacted, place the burden of proof on the student, not the government. If, according to Hayakawa, "any applicant for educational assistance must provide certification of his registration to the Secretary of Education," the rule presumes guilt before innocence. Napoleonic in letter and spirit, the measure runs counter to the traditions of our nation's criminal justice system.

But that's not all. Equally unfair is the disproportionate effect the amendment would have on middle class draft-age men. Those who can pay their way through college would slip through the dragnet; similarly, those who don't go to college would be unaffected. Observed Sen. David Durenberger (R-Minn.), the lone senator to speak against the amendment (in absentia), "The effect ... would be to draw artificial distinctions among a common class of lawbreakers when no distinctions should be drawn."

The Senate seems to have forgotten that the Military Selective Service Act already stipulates harsh penalties for young men who fail to register within 30 days of their 18th birthday. If Congress believes, as the Reagan administration apparently does, that it is too expensive — if not impossible — to fine or imprison half a million nonregistrants, lawmakers should consider revising the law.

Rep. Les Aspin (D-wis.) has offered legislation (HR 5940) which would make non-registration a misdemeanor, punishable by a $200 fine levied administratively (the current $10,000 fine is levied through the courts). Whether or not Aspin's decriminalization is viable, his bill has bearing on last week's shenanigans: If the law's bad, rewrite it. Two wrongs don't make a right.

Other House Democrats, led by New York's Ted Weiss and Peter Peyser, are honing arguments in anticipation of Solomon's likely amendment. Unlike their counterparts in the Senate, opponents in the House seem aware that there is no necessary link between the "right to an education" and the "responsibility to serve one's country." Regardless what one thinks of military obligation today' student aid has nothing to do with it.

There are two ironies at work here. First, the White House and the Selective Service System have been stumped on how to quietly dispose of the non-registrant problem in an election year. Though Congress authorized the possibility last summer, the SSS has been wary of asking President Reagan for permission to flush out non-registrants through Social Security computer files. Undoubtedly, the administration would rather avoid the inevitable criticism that such an invasion of privacy might engender. Ironically, it may now be more difficult for the administration to play safe should the student loan cross-check meet with congressional approval.

The second irony is merely symbolic. Within the last year, the Selective Service and "Sallie Mae," the Student Loan Marketing Assocation, have moved into back-to-back office buildings along the restored Chesapeake & Ohio Canal in fashionable Georgetown. As new neighbors set in bricks and mortar, will one federal agency become the enforcement arm of another?

White House Photographer Recalls Past

Helen Thomas

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Andrew J. "Buck" May returned to the White House the other day to photograph his 12th president — Ronald Reagan — and to reminisce a bit about some of Reagan's predecessors.

The 81-year-old former White House photographer brought along a portfolio of mostly black and white photographs that fascinated Reagan, who paused longest to look at the pictures of his favorite president, Calvin Coolidge.

Two of them showed Coolidge starting out for a walk with fans close on his heels, and Coolidge with flyer Charles Lindbergh in the '20s.

The first president May covered was Woodrow Wilson. He recalls that after Wilson's stroke, the rumors were hot and heavy that Wilson was incapable of performing his presidential duties.

One day, presidential aide Joseph P. Tumulty told May he wanted him to photograph Wilson at his desk to prove that Wilson was able to carry on. Using an old Graflex, May took the photograph of Wilson sitting at his desk signing a paper, but Mrs. Wilson was holding down the document. The picture was not released until five or six years later.

He said that for friendliness and charm, Reagan comes closest to Harry Truman, who was a great friend of news photographers. Truman called them by their first names and sent them a bottle of bourbon when they would have to stand in the rain for hours waiting for him.

In fact, it was Truman who helped the White House photographers organize the "One More Club," referring to their favorite expression: "Just one more, Mr. President."

May realizes the days when presidents bantered along with photographers seem to be gone. There are so many now, and new faces every day, carrying their small cameras into the Oval Office. There is little camaraderie left.

Reagan regaled May with stories of Coolidge and May recalled that Coolidge was a "great prankster," but he was also rigid. When his wife Grace went walking in the woods with a handsome Secret Service agent and showed up 15 minutes late for lunch, Coolidge threw a tirade and had the agent shipped out of Washington.

Another agent suffered the same fate when he went fishing with Coolidge at the president's summer home and it rained. "Do you think the rain will stop," Coolidge asked his guard. "It always does," quipped the agent.

Like most presidents, Coolidge sometimes grew tired of cameramen following his every step."Get those rats away from me," May remembered him saying to his aides.

May said he scored a beat when he took a shot of President Herbert Hoover in a naval uniform saluting the troops while seated aboard ship. Hoover had stood at the bridge for three hours and was tired.

"Young man," he told May, "you know you shouldn't have done that."

May has in his possession a historic picture, taken at the time of the dedication of the Lincoln Memorial, showing Warren Harding, Todd Lincoln, and former Speaker of the House "Uncle Joe" Cannon huddled together.

Also in his album is a photograph of Harding, dressed in his favorite riding togs, on his favorite mount in front of the Executive Office Building next door to the White House. Reagan, whose loves to riding, has to fly by helicopter into Virginia to find protected riding trails.

As a young photographer, just starting out in his career, May recalls the kindness of Theodore Roosevelt.

"Mr. President, I'd like to make a picture of you," he told Roosevelt.

"All right, son," said Roosevelt, and posed for him.

As he was leaving the White House, May said, "I've seen a lot of history made. Those were the happiest days of my life."

WALLACE TRIES AGAIN — Former Alabama Gov. George Wallace said Saturday he will try for a fourth term. Wallace, joined by supporters, held a rally at his campaign headquarters in Montgomery. (AP Laserphoto)

George Wallace Will Seek 4th Term

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Former Gov. George C. Wallace, who said four years ago he was done gith politics forever, said Saturday he would run for an unprecedented fourth term as governor, and promised no new taxes if elected.

Wallace, 62, a paraplegic from a 1972 assassination attempt, announced his candidacy before 2,000 supporters and spectators at an old-fashioned political bally that featured a barbecue and country music.

"I got paralyzed in the legs," he told the crowd in a steady drizzle. "I apologize to you for that. But I won't get paralyzed in the head."

A veteran of four presidential campaigns, Wallace noted the many national and foreign reporters at the rally: "No, I'm not going to run for president," he said. "That's over."

Wallace drew his loudest applause at the rally when he promised there would be no new state taxes if he were elected and also pledged to roll back property taxes.

He also drew loud applause when he pledged to get Alabama working again. During his last two terms, he told the crowd, Alabama led the South in new industries and jobs for six out of eight years.

Once a jut-jawed, fist-shaking firebrand, Wallace appeared tired and weak when he left office in January 1979 and he quietly told friends, "I'm through." He became a college administrator and kept out of the limelight.

Last August, however, his friends threw him a big birthday party, and hundreds of people attended, including some long-time foes.

"I think that encouraged him a lot," said Doug Benton, a former member of Wallace's Cabinet. "He may have looked at himself and stopped feeling sorry for himself. He seemed to have that attitude for a long time."

Wallace attributed his change in attitude to two things: A renewed interest in "serving the people of Alabama" and his third wife, 32-year-old country music singer Lisa Taylor.

Also already in the race for governor are Montgomery Mayor Emory Folmar, a Republican, and Birmingham investment banker Frank Thomas Jr., a Democrat.

Two other Democrats, Lt. Gov. George McMillan of Birmingham and Alabama Speaker of the House Joe McCorquodale of Jackson, say they will announce their candidacies soon.

Gov. Fob James, the Democrat elected after Wallace decided not to run in 1978, has shown no interest in a second term.

The primary will be Sept. 7, and any runoff would be Sept. 28. The general election is in November.

Wallace gon his first term as governor in 1962 by promising "Segregation Forever," but never mentions racial matters these days except to say his segregationist stand was a mistake.

With the switch, Wallace has drawn support from blacks, including Montgomery civil rights activist E.D. Nixon, a leader of the Montgomery bus boycott, and Tuskegee Mayor Johnny Ford, president of the National Conference of Black Mayors.

When Wallace's first term as governor of Alabama ended in 1966, he was not allowed to succeed himself, and his late wife, Lurleen, was elected.

Mrs. Wallace died in 1968, and Lt. Gov. Albert Brewer took over. In 1970, Wallace defeated Brewer to become governor again. In 1974, a change in the state Constitution allowed Wallace to run again, and he won a lop-sided victory to became the first person to be governor of Alabama three times.

Wallace was paralyzed below the waist when he was shot five times while campaigning for president in Laurel, Md., in May 1972. It was his third presidential campaign — he also ran in 1964, 1968 and 1976.

Long-time Wallace aide Elvin Stanton said the former governor has been impressed by his support among college-age people — a generation of Alabama residents who grew up with either Wallace or the late Mrs. Wallace in the governor's mansion.

"I think there is more support than there has ever been. I don't know how to explain it," Stanton said.

The Rev. Joseph Lowery, president of the Atlanta-based Southern Christian Leadership Conference, however, has said Wallace should not be granted "automatic political amnesty."

Youth Held In Killing Moved For Protection

SOMERSET, Ky. (AP) — A 12-year-old boy charged with killing a young neighbor with a pocket knife has been moved to an undisclosed facility for his protection and his parents' home has been riddled with bullets.

"Feelings are running pretty high down there and we're afraid there will be more trouble," said Detective Doug Silvers of the Pulaski County Sheriff's Department. "We're patroling the area heavily."

Timothy Smith, 14, was stabbed to death with a pocket knife Wednesday after what police called a "childish argument." The incident occurred near the boy's home in Somerside Acres, a subdivision about two miles south of here in eastern Kentucky.

Sheriff John Adams said Saturday that the arraignment date for 12-year-old Rodney Turner had not been determined and "we are not releasing any information on his whereabouts until the arraignment hearing."

Police security was increased Friday after vandals struck the mobile home in a nearby neighborhood where Turner's parents live. The Turners had moved out Thursday after five shots were fired into the trailer and several windows were broken, police said.

Assistant Commonwealth's Attorney John W. Polk said no determination has been made yet whether to try the boy as an adult.

A hearing on the case, held by Pulaski District Judge Ernie Woods, was conducted behind closed doors Friday, and Woods ordered all those associated with it to refuse comment on custody arrangements for the boy.

Wood said his demand "is not really a gag order."

"There is a pretty clear policy in juvenile cases to treat the proceedings as confidential for protection of the person being tried," he said.

"I can well understand people's interest in the case and their legitimately wanting to know what's going on," he said. "But I interpret the statutes which were passed by the legislature to say that this information shouldn't be revealed."

Neighbors of the slain youth said they were in shock over the death.

"The whole subdivision was crying last night, nobody could sleep," Linda Mardis said Friday. She works at Pulaski County High School and lives one street over from where the stabbing occurred.

"Everybody is just ill over it," she said.

Funeral services for the boy were scheduled for Sunday morning.

Hassan Begins Two-Day Visit To World's Fair

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Crown Prince Hassan bin Talal of Jordan arrived Saturday for a two-day visit at the World's Fair, where Philippine First Lady Imelda R. Marcos is to speak Monday.

Hassan, 35, youngest brother of Jordan's King Hussein and heir to the Arab nation's throne, was to visit the nearby Great Smoky Mountains and then tour the energy-theme World's Fair on Sunday.

Hassan was greeted at Knoxville's airport by a delegation including Dortch Oldham, U.S. commissioner general to the World's Fair.

Hassan was to have dinner Saturday night in the Smoky Mountain resort town of Gatlinburg with Bert Lance, a Georgia banker with close ties to World's Fair organizers. Lance resigned under fire in 1977 as former President Carter's budget director.

On Sunday, Hassan was to tour the 72-acre site, where 22 nations, four states and more than 50 organizations have exhibits. He is scheduled to leave later Sunday for Atlanta, the next stop on a seven-city U.S. tour.

Hassan, a graduate of England's Oxford University, has overseen Jordan's national development planning since 1971

Primate Urges End To Protests

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Roman Catholic Archbishop Jozef Glemp, in a pastoral letter released Saturday, expressed sympathy for protesters beaten during anti-martial law demonstrations and appealed to Poland's youth to avoid further confrontations with authorities.

In the letter to be read Sunday in Warsaw churches, the Catholic primate of Poland said, "There are emerging tendencies to drag the youth into political games played by social groups without telling the young people what the targets of the people directing such events are.

"The young people experienced in the beginning of May this year painful experiences. I express my sympathy and I share with you your humiliation."

He referred to street demonstrations May 3 and May 13 in support of the suspended independent labor federation Solidarity and to protest five months of martial law.

Police dispersed the protesters using rubber truncheons, water cannon and tear gas. Scores were detained.

"I understand your feelings and your humilation. As a young worker I was beaten too," Glemp said, apparently referring to beatings suffered at the hands of Nazis during the German occupation of Poland during World War II.

Glemp cautioned young people against further demonstrations, saying "a sound look at existing realities is necessary."

The primate also called again for creation of youth organizations "in which the young people could learn how to participate in public life in accord with their views."

More than 90 percent of Poland's 36 million population is Catholic.

Judge Says Anti-Drug Costs Are Deductible

WASHINGTON (AP) — A father whose children's drug addiction drove him to spend tens of thousands of dollars on helping police root out drug pushers has won the sympathy of a tax court judge, if not the Internal Revenue Service.

The IRS had disallowed the nearly $38,000 deduction claimed by Sherman H. Sampson of Mt. Hope, Kan., ruling that Sampson spent the money in his own private war on drugs rather than on exclusively public purposes.

But in a decision written last week, Tax Court Judge William A. Goffe disagreed.

"This is hardly a case of 'Dirty Harry'-type, extra-legal violence directed against 'pushers' in order to exact vengeance," Goffe wrote.

"We are convinced that petitioner's (Sampson's) overriding motivation ... was to prevent drug abuse from destroying the lives of other people's children, as had occurred in the case of ... (his) son and daughter.

"Petitioner was thus inspired by a desire to help his community rather than just himself," the court held.

Sampson's war began when he helped pay expenses of a TIP (turn-in-a-pusher) telephone line. Soon, he started paying money directly to tipsters.

Upon being elected attroney general in Kansas, Vern Miller, a friend of Sampson, asked him to expand his anti-drug efforts and named him a deputy assistant attorney general.

Sampson began working with state law-enforcement officers, providing them with money from his own pockets to make drug "buys" through undercover agents. He also continued working with the sheriff and police in his community.

If Sampson had given money directly to the state, city or county, there would have been no question about its deductibility. But there also ould have been no assurance that the donations would have gone into an anti-drug program.

The IRS contended Sampson's contributions were aimed at creating favorable publicity for Miller, his friend, in an effort they hoped eventually would help Miller get elected governor.

That may be, the tax court said. But "such an objective does not render his services any less beneficial to the public," it added.

UNC Advisers Report Some Jobs Plentiful

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — This year's college graduates probably will discover what college placement advisers have been saying for years — jobs are plentiful in business and health fields but scarce in liberal arts.

However, placement and academics advisers at the University of North Carolina say a few computer or business courses may help liberal-arts students find work that is more rewarding than washing dishes while contemplating the poetry of William Wordsworth.

"We're finding students far more serious than before about their careers, especially undergraduates in the liberal arts," said Doris McCauley, associate director of health and science education for University Placement Services.

"They've had to reassess their marketable skills," she said. "This is why we've had such a great influx of economics, political science and industrial relations majors, and why the enrollment for business administration has increased so much."

Ms. McCauley said the job market looks particularly promising in health services.

"There's a critical shortage of physical therapists and nursing students," she said. "There are far more jobs than people qualified to fill them."

Ms. McCauley said salaries for nurses and physical therapists have increased 5 to 10 percent above last year. Salaries in other health and science fields have stayed the same, but nutrition salaries have fallen slightly, she said.

Federal budget cuts may affect some jobs in public health and nutrition, but recruiting for many health jobs has increased dramatically this year, Ms. McCauley said.

The cost-cutting mood in Washington also has affected sociology students, said Dr. Richard Cramer, associate professor of sociology and adviser in the College of Arts and Sciences.

Cramer said the number of sociology majors was about half of what it was 10 years ago.

Hinckley Nearing 27th Birthday As His Trial Goes Into Fifth Week

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Every morning, weekends excluded, the small door at the back of the courtroom opens and John W. Hinckley Jr. walks in, head bowed, looking neitheb left nor right. His gaze is vacant as he confronts another day of listening to strangers plumb his mind.

He is trailed by a retinue of unsmiling bodyguards and he takes his seat at the defense table without so much as a nod at his parents who sit in the second row. Occasionally, he'll talk to one of the younger members of his defense team. But mostly, John W. Hinckley will spend this day, as he has almost every day since his adolescence, in outward silence.

A strange thing about his trial, about to enter its fifth week, is that the talk is all about Hinckley, the assailant, and not about the president he wounded or about the bubbling, popular press secretary who lost 20 percent of his brain and nearly his life in an awful, bloody, still unbelievable instant.

By his own admission Hinckley shot President Reagan, shot James Brady and shot two law enforcement officers on March 30 of last year. The fact of the deed is not in question; only the state of Hinckley's mind on the day of the assassination attempt is on trial.

As the parade of witnesses passes — 29 so far, including mother, father, brother and sister — Hinckley's face remains a mask.

"We did not know what was wrong, but we knew something wasn't right," said JoAnn Hinckley in a voice laden with emotion, but her son looked away.

"I am the cause of John's tragedy.... I wish to God I could trade places with him right now," said John W. Hinckley Sr., weeping into a handkerchief as his son stared at the polished table.

Two self-assured psychiatrists and a psychologist — hired by the defense, which wants to prove Hinckley insane — confidently describe him as a walking smorgasbord of mental diseases.

He's got them all, they say: depression, delusion, schizophrenia. Hinckley is described as being self hating, suicidal, severely defective, psychotic, mentally ill. He thinks his deed gave him superhuman stature, that he is a special human being, that he is now the most infamous person in the world, the experts contend.

Hinckley is portrayed as being a racist once, imagining himself the head of a new world order. The psychiatrists say that, in his mind, there gas a confusion of identity with John Lennon and Lennon's murderer, Mark Chapman.

On March 30, 1981, Hinckley had in his room a novel about a murderer who escaped punishment by feigning insanity.

The prosecution contends that Hinckley was sane when he shot Reagan.

Hinckley will spend his 27th birthday next Saturday in a cage. It is not likely that he'll be visited by a friend. The last friend he had, he lost in 1975, the psychiatrists say. When that friend was contacted, he hardly remembered John Hinckley.

And coloring it all, is Hinckley's obsession for an actress named Jodie Foster, for whom he literally went on a mission to kill — and expected to be killed.

These revelations are pulled out daily, like the stuffing from a moldy sofa. None of them seem outwardly to affect Hinckley except when his beloved Jodie's rejection of him is mentioned. Then, he simply gets up and walks out, visibly upset. He alternates that emotion with strange detachment, just as he daily alternates a tan jacket with a blue one.

All day, every day, there are 100 people in the spectator seats and they all stare at him, not wanting to miss the slightest reaction, or an explosion they all feel sure will come.

Sometimes Hinckley stares back; through eyes that appear red-rimmed, always dull. He never looks as if he'd had a good night's sleep in his basement cell in the courthouse, where he is the only steady boarder.

Sometimes he'll fold his arms on the table and rest his head on them. Other times he'll put them over his head, lean back, and contemplate the ceiling. Most times he faces the witness or slumps in his seat.

This is a man with an IQ of 113, which is bright-normal and puts him in the top 20 percent of men his age; a man who, in his loneliness, turned to writing poetry, verses such as:

"Not too many days ago,
"I traveled to see
"My princess to be,
"But the world got in the way.

"Not too many minutes ago,
"I made up my mind
"To go out and find
"The reason for staying afloat.

"Not too yany seconds ago,
"I took my own life
"And ended the strife
"Of having to live with myself."

The psychiatrists have no trouble finding out about John Hinckley. He became a sponge, they said, who subconsciously soaked up traits from his heroes, fictional and real.

Thus, he acquired guns, like Travis Bickle in the movie "Taxi Driver" and stalked a real candidate like the fictional Travis did. And since Travis rescued Jodie in the movie, so did Hinckley want to rescue Jodie in real life. He thought up bizarre scenarios of John and Jodie as Romeo and Juliet, kidnaping her, demanding that Ronald Reagan leave the White House for him and Jodie.

Always Jodie, Jodie, Jodie.

"Jodie, please watch over me and protect me," he wrote in the poem "Amen." Have me, do your will on this life of mine. I repent for my sins and ask your forgiveness and I humbly ask all of this in your mother's name, Amen."

The psychiatrists say Hinckley considers the shootings of March 30, 1981 as trivial and the men he hurt as "bit players."

If of them he asks any forgiveness, it has not been introduced into evidence.

Spoleto Puppets

Giant Spoleto puppets were on hand for the opening of Spoleto Festival USA in downtown Charleston Friday. The puppets, which have become a Festival tradition, always attract crowds of children who are both timid and fascinated. The Festival will include both local and national entertainment groups through June 6. (AP Laserphoto)

Spotted Fever Shows Sign Of Leveling Off

ATLANTA (AP) — The dramatic rise of Rocky Mountain spotted fever during the 1970s has tapered off in recent years, with only seven more cases reported in 1981 than in the previous year, the national Centers for Disease Control said Friday.

A total of 1,170 cases of the disease were reported in the United States in 1981 — 5.1 cases for each 1 million people, the agency said. There were 1,163 cases reported in 1980, or 5.2 cases per 1 million people.

The fatality rate from the disease last year was 3.4 percent, with death rates higher among blacks, people over 30, those with no previous exposure to ticks and people not reporting antibiotic treatment for the disease, the CDC said.

"There's no vaccine even close to being available for Rocky Mountain spotted fever," said Dr. Jon Kaplan, a CDC researcher, and at least one experimental vaccine has been rejected because of its severe side effects.

The disease, transmitted by ticks and resulting inrash fever and headaches, increased dramatically from 1970 to 1977, then leveled off, but researchers still don't know why. "We don't even have a clue," Kaplan said.

In 1971 there were only 432 cases reported, but the number reached 1,153 cases in 1977 before leveling off, the CDC said. There were 1,063 cases reported in 1978 and 1,070 cases reported in 1979.

The disease, despite its name, was most common in the South Atlantic states, which accounted for 671 cases last year or 57 percent of the total reported, the CDC said in its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report. The highest rate was in North Carolina, with 301 cases, or 50.6 cases per million people.

NO PASSING — Traffic enters Yellowstone National Park's south entrance single-file because of the heavy snowfall over last winter. National Park Service officials said at Lewis Divide, near where this camper was photographed, 138 inches of snow was on the ground as of May 1. The average snow depth there is 83.5 inches. A park spokeswoman says the park does not measure the snowfall totals during the winter, just accumulations when spring comes and crews are dispatched to clear roads. This photo was taken just before crews came through and opened the second lane, just last week. (AP Laserphoto)

Students Will See Greenwich

WEST SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — When some high school sociology students first asked to visit New York's Greenwich Village, they were spurned by school board members, who feared they might encounter "depravation" and "raw lifestyles."

But after a personal invitation from the president of New York University, a modified version of the trip is on.

"It's narrow-minded. If we're old enough to go to war, I think we're old enough to go to Greenwich Village," said Paul Tesini, a 17-year-old junior who is scheduled to go on the field trip.

On Tuesday board members voted down the Village tour as part of the students' planned trip to New York City. But later they had second thoughts after an invitation arrived from NYU President John Brademas for lunch and a tour of the university, which is located off Washington Square Park in the heart of the Village.

The Village, a traditional enclave of Bohemian lifestyles, includes a large homosexual community, abtists, students, working people, retirees, and a vibrant nightlife within its borders.

"I know they will find this a highlight of their visit to New York City," said Brademas, a former congressman from Indiana.

The original proposal also called for visits to Rockefeller Plaza and the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and there was no objection to those destinations.

West Springfield is a middle-class suburb of about 30,000 across the Connecticut River from Springfield. It's known for large Victorian-style houses and others dating to the 17th century. The town is the home of Breck hair dyes and the Eastern States Exposition, New England's largest fair.

Four of the seven school board members will join the 40 students on the tour.

"Now we find out NYU spills over into Greenwich Village. So they'll see it anyway. But at least it will be more of a structured tour than just a class with some teachers," William Clark, school board chairman, said Friday.

New York Mayor Ed Koch, upon hearing criticism of the Village where he and Brademas live, said, "I won't even dignify that with a comment."

"Depravation" and "raw lifestyles" were descriptions of the Village used by school board member John Colby in casting his original vote against the tour of the Village.

"I don't think it is necessarily a good example of an environment to show young people with impressionable minds," Colby said at the time.

"What we originally were concerned about was that the students' proposal explained that they wanted to see an alternative lifestyle," he said Friday.

The written proposal presented to the board said the students felt the tour would be beneficial because Greenwich Village "is a place where we can observe people who live outside the norm free from harassment. This is a place that many people escape to, to live their lives free from social restrictions."

Is Sophia Seeking Publicity?

By JOHN WINN MILLER
Associated Press Writer

ROME (AP) — Some Italians say Sophia Loren is using her jail sentence for tax evasion as a marvelous, though slightly tacky, publicity stunt. Others say she's being persecuted.

Sociologist Franco Ferrarotti called Miss Loren's decision to return to Italy on Wednesday to serve a 30-day sentence a "splendid commercial operation" that will be repaid "in an extraordinary way."

Most public reaction, though, has been favorable. The Academy Award winner has received hundreds of cards, flowers, fruit baskets and sympathy calls at the women's prison in Caserta 20 miles north of Naples.

Some Italian officials say the real winner in the whole affair is the government, which has gained an image of toughness just before the May 30 deadline for filing income tax returns.

"The imprisonment (of Miss Loren) can provide a great publicity return for Italy" because it shows the government is cracking down on tax evaders, said Dino Felisetti, a Socialist who heads the House Judiciary Committee.

In 1981, the government published a list of more than 200,000 wealthy "presumed tax dodgers." But the Italian legal system, with three levels of appeal, can take nearly 20 years to catch up with the delinquent taxpayers.

Miss Loren, for example, was convicted in July 1980 of failing to report 112 million lire (worth $180,000 at the time) on her 1963 income tax returns. Miss Loren said it was all due to a mistake by her tax specialist.

Almost every newspaper in the country splashed her photo on the front page, with the exception of the Communist Party's L'Unita, which made a brief mention of the arrest on its second page.

The left-leaning Rome daily La Republica said the actress' "gesture" has "helped her regain public sympathy that has waned in the last few years because of a series of bad films and her fiscal problems." It headlined its article "In Triumph to Prison."

Rome's conservative Il Tempo said Miss Loren's problems should be blamed on the specialist who prepared her tax returns — not her — because of Italy's complex tax laws.

"She did a lot of good for the people of Pozzuoli, her hometown," said Franco Frabrissi, a native of Pozzuoli who organized a late-night serenade Wednesday outside Miss Loren's prison. "I don't think she should be in jail."

On her arrival at Rome's Leonardo da Vinci Airport from Geneva, Switzerland, on Wednesday after a two-year absence, she said she came back to resolve "an unjust situation due to a little mistake by a tax specialist" and to "see my mother, my country and my roots."

The actress said she has asked President Sandro Pertini for a pardon.

Pertini said Friday that he had not received the request and that Miss Loren "doesn't seem to be doing badly in prison."

The International Daily News, an English language paper in Rome, said the story provided a welcome break from a long string of grim headlines, regardless of what Miss Loren's motives might have been for returning to Italy.

Auto Dealers Seeking Help

By The Associated Press

North Carolina auto dealers are vigorously lobbying Tar Heel congressmen for help overturning a federal ruling that requires used-car dealers to warn buyers if their products are lemons.

The dealers have conducted a letter-writing campaign and the National Automobile Dealers Association has showered the congressmen with $28,750 in contributions over the past two years, according to Public Citizen's Congress Watch, a Washington-based Ralph Nader group.

The Federal Trade Commission's "truth in selling" rule would require used-car dealers to post window stickers on cars pointing out any defects and spelling out whether the cars are guaranteed.

On Tuesday, the Senate voted 69-27 to overturn the ruling. North Carolina's Republican senators Jesse Helms and John East voted to veto the FTC rule.

Officials say a House vote is expected, possibly next week.

B. Wade Isaacs, executive vice president of the state Automobile Dealers Association, says he expects most of the state's 11 House members to vote to veto the rule.

The Nader group says the auto dealers' political action committee has contributed more than $700,000 to House members in the past three years.

Rep. James T. Broyhill, R-N.C., has been the Tar Heel state's largest recipient, having had $7,000 added to his campaign war chest. Broyhill is the ranking Republican on the House Commerce and Energy Committee, which recently approved the veto measure with Broyhill voting for the veto.

The auto dealers committee also contributed $5,000 to Rep. James G. Martin, R.-N.C.; $2,000 each to Reps. Ike F. Andrews, D-N.C., and William G. Hefner, D-N.C.; $1,700 to Rep. W. Eugene Johnston, R-N.C.; $1,500 each to Reps. Charles O. Whitley, D.-N.C., and William M. Hendon, R-N.C.; $700 to Rep. Stephen L. Neal, D-N.C.; and $250 to Rep. Charles G. Rose III, D-N.C.

Rep. Walter B. Jones, D-N.C., received no money from the group.

The Nader group says the auto dealers also contributed $5,000 to East's 1980 campaign, but gave nothing to Helms, who did not face re-election.

Britt Endorsed By Educators

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The N.C. Association of Educators has declared its support for congressional candidate Robin Britt, a Democrat who is challenging Republican Rep. Gene Johnston from his 6th District seat.

John I. Wilson, the state NCAE president, said in a news conference at a local NCAE headquarters that Johnston, a Greensboro businessman, had not shown enough concern about public schools. "So we hope to replace him with a pro-public schools man," Wilson said.

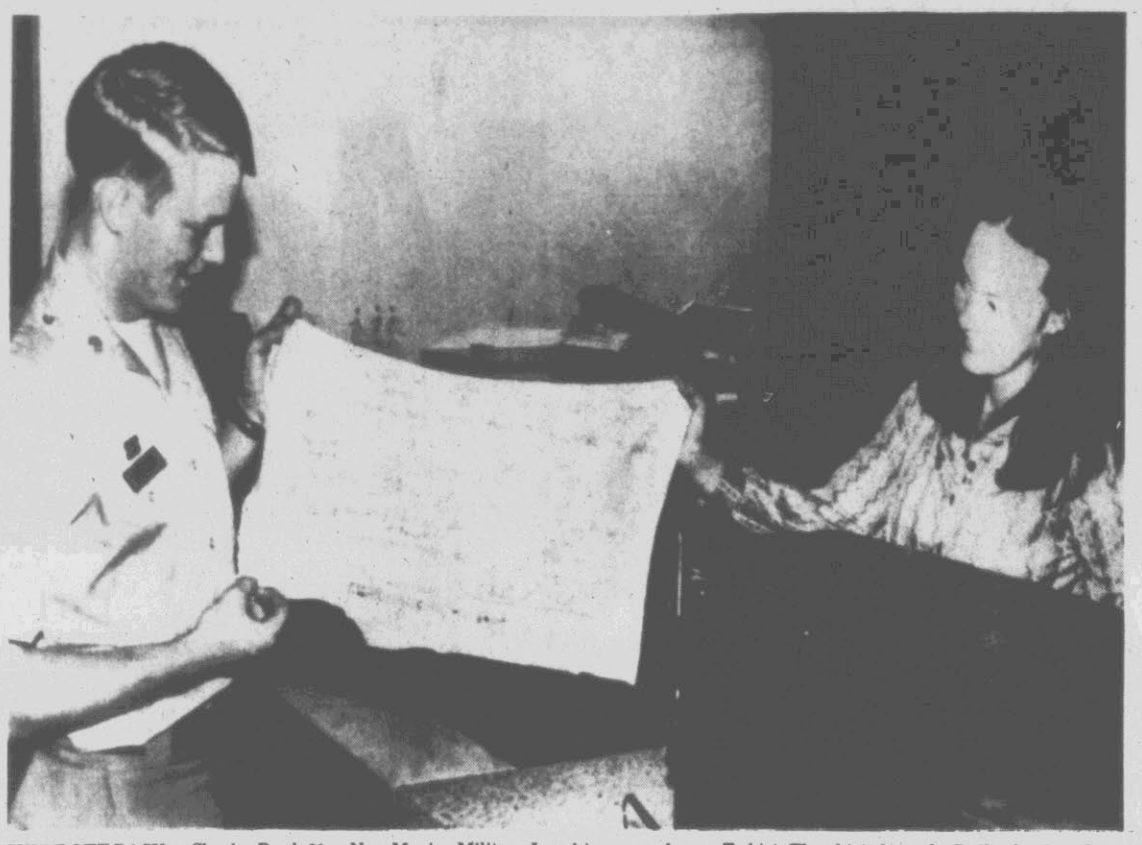
Britt, a Greensboro attorney says Johnston has only attended House Education Committee meetings about half the time. "It may be better that he hasn't been there," Britt joked. "It is almost like putting the fox in charge of the chicken coop."

Library Seeks Unit For Blind

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Greensboro Public Library officials say they hope to purchase a $30,000 machine designed to help the blind read, even though they have no money in their budget for such a purchase.

The machine, called a "Kurzweil Reading Machine," translates reading material into sound. It was tested Friday.

Cathy Shropshire, the library's coordinator for the deaf and handicapped, said the machine will make libraries more accessible to the visually impaired.



SHIRT OFF BACK — Charles Rayl, 20, a New Mexico Military Institute cadet from Wellington, Kan., gave the Internal Revenue Service the shirt off his back this year when he was told he owed the government $19.19. He said he was out of checks, so he made his own — from a T-shirt. The shirt cleared a Dallas bank and was cashed by the government. Security National Bank of Roswell, N.M., is shown with Rayl verifying the cancellation stamps. (AP Laserphoto)

Aide-De-Camp

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Karen M. Brooks, a staff writer for the Kinston Daily Free Press, has been appointed a military aide-de-camp to Gov. Jim Hunt.

Ms. Brooks, a member of the N.C. National Guard Association, was appointed by Hunt Friday. She is one of 12 aide-de-camps who provide additional protection and service to Hunt during ceremonies and social functions.

Robbery Goes To Dogs

LAKE WACCAMAW, N.C. (AP) — A robbery attempt at Estelle Etheridge's Texaco station here literally went to the dogs when two small Boston terriers named Spanky and Cookie rushed in and chewed up one of the the gun-toting robbers.

Man's best friends went into action around 9 p.m. Thursday after two would-be robbers entered the store and pulled a gun on three women and two men. One of the robbers shoved a .22-caliber rifle under the neck of Dempsey Simmons and threatened the others.

But that's when Spanky and Cookie took over. The robber tried to shoot the dogs, which were swirling around him. His two shots went wild under the attack of one dog holding to his throat and the other attached to his arm.

Instead of hitting the dogs, one bullet struck the robber's partner near the groin, passing through the upper part of his thigh; the second hit a store patron in the foot.

The robbers then left and Mrs. Etheridge called off her dogs as the pair fled.

Lake Waccamaw Police Chief Harold Lowery arrested Gregory Emanuel Rich, 24, of Baltimore, charging him with attempted armed robbery. Rich was arrested at the Columbus County Hospital emergency room. The hospital is required by law to report victims of violent crimes.

Police are still seeking a second suspect, whom they believe will be easy enough to find — he has teeth marks on his right arm.

As a reward for their heroics, the two Boston terriers ate steak.

"I think if it hadn't been for those dogs, we'd have all got shot," Mrs. Etheridge said. "Mr. Lowery told me I ought to buy them a steak and that's what I'm going to do. I'm going to get them a T-bone.

"I'm going to give them anything they want," she said. "I've raised them and they usually get what they want, but this time they're going to get a little extra."

Defendant Says She's Innocent

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — A 66-year-old woman convicted of voluntary manslaughter in Craven County Superior Court says she's innocent of the crime.

Mary White, found guilty Wednesday of killing Edward Sawyer, still claims she's innocent after she was sentenced to 18 months in prison Thursday.

"I didn't do it, I'm not guilty of anything," she said.

Ms. White said throughout her three-day trial that she tried to wrestle a gun away from the 54-year-old Sawyer, and it accidentally discharged. Prosecutors said she loved her boarder and shot him when he told her he intended to move out. Sawyer was shot Feb. 22 and died eight days later.

Election Judge Faces Challenge

LINCOLNTON, N.C. (AP) — Two Republicans have called for the removal of rest home operator F.L. Beam from his job as a Lincoln County election judge in the wake of Beam's arrest on charges of assaulting a handicapped person.

County Election Board Chairman June Dellinger, a Democrat, Friday scheduled a hearing on Beam's removal for 10 a.m. May 28. He instructed the elections board supervisor to notify Beam by registered mail to appear at the hearing.

In a related development, Cleveland County Superior Court Judge Lacy Thornburg has ordered that assets of the F.L. Beam Rest Home in Lawndale be turned over to the county Department of Social Services for an indefinite period of time.

The move came after Beam's business office allegedly refused to pay food and medicine bills, employees' wages or utility bills.

Beam is free on $50,000 bond after his arrest Tuesday on assault charges. An employee at the rest home also was charged with first-degree sexual assault.

"Since last August, I have been opposed to F.L. Beam as a judge in the North Brook No. 1 precinct," said Jonnie Heavner, the only Republican on the elections board, at a hearing Friday. "He does not live in the precinct and does not fulfill the qualifications of being of good repute."

Beam has said he lives in an apartment in the rest home in Cleveland County on weekdays and spends his weekends in his log house in the North Brook section in Lincoln County.

Nancy Poole, Lincoln County GOP chairwoman, said Beam has not lived in the county for several years. State election laws require election judges to live in their precincts.

"The election laws of North Carolina further state that a precinct judge must be of 'good repute,'" Poole said in a written statement submitted to the elections board. "If Beam is of 'good repute' we challenge this board to prove this to the voters of Lincoln County."

M.L. Huggins, a Democrat on the elections board, said he had not heard any complaints about election procedures in Beam's district.

Heavner made a motion to have Beam removed immediately but Huggins insisted the board have a hearing before taking any action.

Beam was not at the hearing and could not be reached for comment.

Truck-Train Mishap Fatal

HAVELOCK, N.C. (AP) — A 23-year-old Havelock woman was killed Thursday night when the pickup truck she was dbiving was struck by a freight train.

Darcy Ann Esposito was pronounced dead on arrival at a local hospital. The truck she was driving was struck at 8:35 p.m. at a rural road west of Havelock.

The train was traveling about 25 mph when it struck the late-model truck, investigators said. Ms. Esposito was thrown from the vehicle and the truck was destroyed, they said. Investigators said there was no warning light at the crossing.

Jobless Rate Climbs

RALEIGH — Total unemployment in North Carolina declined significantly in April to 8.2 percent, a drop of 1.5 percent from the high 9.7 percent rate in March. Announcement of the unemployment drop was made Friday by Glenn R. Jernigan, chairman of the North Carolina Employment Security Commission. The April 1981 unemployment rate was 6.1 percent.

"Declining unemployment is due to increased seasonal employment activities in agriculture and some increase among non-agricultural wage and salary workers," Jernigan said. "Indications are that some 20,000 people also left the labor force between March and April."

Jernigen noted that the state has once again fallen below the national unadjusted rate of unemployment which stood at 9.2 percent in April.

Manufacturing jobs overall showed a net gain of some 2,600 (a rise of .3 percent) largely due to employment gains in textiles where employment advanced by 4,800 (a 2.1 percent gain) over the month and in furniture and fixtures which showed an increase of 1,000 (a 1.2 percent gain). These gains were partially offset by the loss of some 1,500 (a minus 2.9 percent figure) in electrical machinery.

Four non-manufacturing industry divisions showed healthy employment increases. Services and construction reported a seasonal gain of 3,900 (1.1 percent) and 1,400 (a 1.3 percent gain) respectively.

The average hourly earnings of production workers in manufacturing in North Carolina were $6.28 in mid-April, up three cents from the previous month and up 49 cents from April 1981.

In Greenville, ESC that figures on the April unemployment rates in Pitt County will be made public as soon as the rates for individual counties are released.

FBI Reports Arrests In Pornography Ring

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. (AP) — A 19-month FBI investigation has led to a federal indictment charging five people with conspiring to produce and distribute child pornography, U.S. Attorney David Farber said Saturday.

The charges involve conspiracy, aiding and abetting the operation of a child pornography ring, and interstate transportation of pornographic and obscene material involving minors, Farber said.

Some pictures involved in the indictment were reproduced in magazines named "Little Dumplins," "Women and Little Girls — A Special Lolitas Magazine," and "Teenage Fantasy," Farber said.

Charged in the five-count indictment are Dean Raymond Martin, 36; Teddy G. Hedgecock, 48, and Eileen Shannon, 30, all of Huntington; Christopher L. Miller, of Columbus, Ohio; and James William Guthrie, 33, of Crown City, Ohio.

Miller also was charged in a separate indictment with transporting a 16-year-old girl from Huntington to South Point, Ohio, for the purpose of prostitution, Farber said.

Farber said FBI agents from Pittsburgh, Pa., posed as child pornography buyers to investigate the ring.

Martin, Miller and Hedgecock are accused of recruiting teen-age girls from the streets of Huntington to pose for still photographs and movies while engaging in sex, Farber said. Ms. Shannon is accused of paying the girls and allowing her apartment to be used for the photo sessions.

Guthrie is named in the indictment for allegedly aiding and abetting the interstate transportation for sale of photos showing children engaged in sexually explicit acts, Farber said.

Farber said Hedgecock, a former U.S. Army Corps of Engineers photographer, loaned camera equipment to Martin and then reproduced and enlarged 80 to 100 photos of young girls engaged in sex.

Farber said Martin was arrested Friday and taken to the Kanawha County Jail, where he was being held in lieu of $20,000 bond. The other four were not arrested but were issued summonses, Farber said.

The five will be arraigned Friday before a federal magistrate in Huntington, Farber said.

Cable Cars Running Again

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Cable car service was partially restored Saturday after welders repaired a 4½-ton driveshaft, and officials offered free rides.

Municipal Railway spokesman Jamie Levin said welders had repaired a cracked main drive shaft that halted the famed century-old system on Wednesday.

"Right now, we're satisfied with the results. We're going to monitor the system and take it day by day," he said.

Levin said 17 of the 26 cars were operating over the 9.4-mile route and would be picking up passengers free of charge for the rest of the day. On Sunday, the $1 one-way ride would be back in effect, he said.

The oldest ongoing mass transportation system in the world — and officially a national monument — is scheduled to undergo a $59 million overhaul starting Sept. 22. It had been feared that Wednesday's breakdown meant an early shutdown.

City utilities chief Richard Sklar told a news conference Friday that if mending efforts on the 18-foot-long shaft failed, other repair efforts could mean another month of down time.

The shaft cranks power from a 14-foot-diameter gear to the winding sheaves that work the sub-pavement cables, pulling the cars up the hills.

During the inactivity — a major blow to tourists who happily risk life and limb hanging onto the perilous machines — shuttle buses were running on the track routes.

Grifton Man Held In Death

GRIFTON — A Grifton man has been charged with first degree murder in the Friday night stabbing death of 18-year-old Michael Eugene Mills of Ayden.

Virgil Malpass of the Grifton Police Department said that Anthony George Best, 18, is in Pitt County Jail without privilege of bond.

Malpass said the stabbing took place around 11 p.m. at the mini-park on Gordon Street and apparently followed an argument over a basketball game at the park.

Mills, who was stabbed in the lower chest area, was dead at the scene of the incident, according to Malpass. He said that the Grifton Rescue Squad responded and Pitt County deputies assisted in the investigation.

Views On Dental Health

If Tooth Knocked Out By Injury

Tommy was riding his skateboard down the driveway. He lost his balance and fell to the pavement. He wiped the blood from his mouth and found his upper front tooth in his hand. What do you do? Luckily, your dentist can deal effectively with this kind of dental emergency. But he'll need your help.

Collect the tooth and replace it in the socket at the site of the injury. Have your child (or you) hold it there until you reach the dentist. This will keep the tooth in its natural environment and extend the opportunity for a successful replantation. If this is not possible, wrap the tooth in a wet cloth or place it in a glass of water. Don't linger! The chances for a successful replantation are best if done within 30 minutes to an hour after this mishap.

Some parents rush their child to the dentist, but in their haste forget to bring the tooth. DON'T FORGET THE TOOTH! And don't try to clean it yourself-even if it looks messy. What you think is dirt may actually be soft tissues that will help the healing process.

Tar Heel Arrested By FBI

By The Associated Press

A Raleigh man sought for nine months by federal authorities on murder charges has been arrested in Chicago, an FBI spokesman said.

Robert L. Pence, special agent in charge of FBI operations in North Carolina, said Andrew L. Jones, 27, was arrested in Chicago Thursday.

Jones was originally charged with the 1979 murder of David Lee Heihgt, but the case was dismissed because of a lack of eligible witnesses. The only witness in the case was Jones' former wife, who was barred from testifying by a legal doctrine which prohibited husbands and wives from testifying against each other in most criminal cases.

But the North Carolina Supreme Court removed those barries in April 1981, ruling that the only time spouses may not testify against each other is when the testimony concerns "confidential communicaton" between the couple while they were married.

A week after that ruling, a Wake County grand jury questioned Mrs. Hornick about Height's death and indicted Jones on a murder charge.

Pence said Jones is being held by Chicago police. He said Wake County authorities would have to initiate extradition proceedings to have Jones transferred to North Carolina.

Rose Says I-40 Link Uncertain

By The Associated Press

State Highway Administrator Billy Rose says completion of the Interstate 40 link between Wilmington and Benson could be delayed 20 to 30 years if Congress kills a special fund used to finance the state's highway construction.

Rose says the state does not have the money to complete the 90-mile, $268 million highway in the near future if the chief federal funding source dries up.

Last week, the $125 million-per-year discretionary fund was placed in jeopardy when U.S. House and Senate committees voted to eliminate it.

The discretionary fund was eliminated from a four-year highway authorization bill approved by the House Public Works Committee and the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee.

State's Spending Cuts Could Balance This Year's Budget

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina can complete this fiscal year with a balanced budget but sagging revenues may force lawmakers to consider trimming $100 million or more from the 1982-83 budget, says John A. Williams, state budget officer.

Williams' conclusion, made public Saturday, supports earlier predictions that sparked consideration of withholding merit pay raises for state workers and teachers — a move that could save the state about $90 million a year. The General Assembly will consider that alternative when it meets June 2 for a short session.

When lawmakers prepared the 1981-82 budget, they predicted state revenues would increase about 10.3 percent. Instead, Williams said the recession has held the increase in tax revenues at 8.6 percent and caused concern among budget officials.

He said Gov. Jim Hunt realized a shortfall might result and ordered a freeze on hiring, strict limitations on travel and equipment purchases and stronger efforts to collect accounts receivable.

Combined with interest on investments amounting to $10 million more than predicted, the cutbacks should result in $105 million of unspent money being returned to the General Fund, Williams said.

Legislators, who already have approved $200 million in projects for 1982-83, had hoped they would begin the new fiscal year with a $150-million reserve.

"Despite a recession that is deeper and longer than anticipated, we have been able to keep the budget balanced and our fiscal house in order," Williams said in a prepared statement. "We would not have been able to do that without the tremendous cooperation and support of all state departments and agencies."

"If we had gone along and spent money according to original revenue projections, we would have been in bad shape," Hunt spokesman Brent Hackney said Saturday.

Williams said that during the first two quarters of the fiscal year, spending was cut to 97 percent of the amount appropriated by the General Assembly. Revenues at that time were running at levels predicted.

For the last two quarters, spending was cut further to 95 percent. At that time, high unemployment and interest rates slowed the increase to 5 percent.

Budget officials estimate that revenues will grow at a rate of about 8 percent for the last two months of the fiscal year.

Hunt has met with representatives of state workers and teachers several times to discuss alternatives for reducing the 1982-83 budget.

State Abortion Fund Is Empty

By The Associated Press

North Carolina officials estimate that 2,000 or more women, including a 12-year-old pregnant by her father and a 16-year-old stroke victim, were denied financial aid for abortions this spring because the state abortion fund is empty.

At the same time the state exhausted money for abortion aid, it ran out of money to help poor women pay for going to maternity homes, places where young, unmarried women can avoid facing the possible stigma of an illegitimate pregnancy.

The $1-million abortion aid fund, established to help the poor pay for abortions, was exhausted in February, eight months into the state's 1981-82 fiscal year. Approximately 4,060 abortions were funded, 1,407 of them for women between the ages of 15 and 19.

A new restriction prompted by anti-abortion sentiment means that additional money for abortion aid won't be available until the next fiscal year begins July 1. In previous years, the fund has been replenished with money left over from other projects.

In most cases, officials don't know whether the women who were denied aid ever found the $150 to $400 needed for an abortion.

"That's something we'd like to know more about," said June Stallings of the state Department of Human Resources. "We don't have any mechanism or personnel to follow them up."

The department does know a few details about some of the applicants who were turned away. The cases, omitting the names or hometowns of the women due to laws requiring confidentiality, include the 12-year-old girl pregnant by her father and the 16-year-old pregnant stroke victim, for whom carrying a child would be a "life-threatening situation."

The cases also include a 14-year-old girl confined in a state corrections center, pregnant and infected with syphilis, which can cause birth defects.

Ms. Stallings said each of the applicants met income limits of $4,226 a year for an individual or $8,126 for a family of four.

State Sen. William Redman, R-Iredell, opposes abortion aid and defends last year's legislative decision to restrict money for the fund. He said he doesn't believe there are significant numbers of women with severe problems who cannot find aid from other source.

"It's time to put the monkey on the back of the man," he said. "If a guy gets a girl pregnant, he ought to pay for it."

Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir, said that without restrictions, the fund "would encourage the situation to get completely out of hand. Why should you and I pay for someone else's foolishness?"

Lilley said he wouldn't object to transferring money into the fund to provide aid in cases of extreme hardship, but "I'd prefer appropriating money to sterilize these men and women."

Since abortion aid became scarce, Ms. Stallings said the counties are compiling more information on aid recipients and following up on cases more closely.

North Carolina is one of only 10 states to have provided money for abortion aid since 1977, when all federal money for such aid was cut off, said Kirk Ashton of Planned Parenthood in Charlotte.

Each year since then the state legislature had budgeted $1 million for the fund. But the budget has been overspent each year since 1979, said June Milby of the state Department of Human Resources.

Road Cleanup Effort Success

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Efforts to pick up roadside litter in April were a success, according to a report from the N.C. Department of Transportation.

The State Board of Transportation was told during its May meeting that 3,625 truckloads of litter were picked up over 6,300 miles of state roadways during a statewide cleanup effort April 19-24. That represents a 12 percent increase over last year, the report said.

More than 300 DOT crews, 167 other organizations and 2,000 citizens helped pick up litter across the state, the report said.

Five Ballot Issues Will Face Tar Heel Voters

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A proposal to double the terms of office for state legislators has attracted most of the debate over changes in North Carolina's Constitution but four other proposals will be decided by voters June 29.

And if recent practice is any indication, chances are they will be approved.

Since 1968, 24 changes in the Constitution have been put before voters after gaining approval from three-fifths of the state House and Senate. Only two have been rejected.

"They are routinely adopted," said state Elections Director Alex Brock, who adds that five constitutional amendments on the ballot at one time isn't too unusual either.

"As a rule, many folks don't vote on them because they don't know what they mean," he said.

Tom Gilmore, a former legislator and Hunt administration official, is trying to counter those odds and defeat Amendment No. 1 on the ballot, the proposal to give House and Senate members terms lasting four years instead of two.

He has formed the "Keep the Two Year Term Committee," the only group organized to push for or against any of the five ballot issues this year.

The other four amendments fall in two groups. Amendments No. 2 and 3 were recommended by the North Carolina Courts Commission and, their sponsors say, are designed to ease handling of cases on appeal.

Amendments No. 4 and 5 would extend the authority of the General Assembly to make available revenue bonds that are exempt from state and federal taxes. Bonds could be issued at below market rates to the benefit of private colleges in one amendment and corporate users of airports and seaports in the other.

Each must be approved separately by a simple majority of the voters to be addded to the state Constitution. Here's a look at each:

— No. 1. Four Year Terms. The amendment was approved by legislators who argued that longer terms will strengthen the General Assembly by making it easier for "citizen legislators" to serve. They argue that running for office every two years has become too costly, and that fewer elections would make it easier for average people to serve.

But opponents say the amendment won't fix that problem and will make the legislature less accountable to the public. Further, they note, the amendment would make North Carolina one of only five states with four-year terms for both the House and Senate, and that the elections would be held in the "off years," two years after the presidential and gubernatorial races.

As one practical result of the change, legislators would be free to run for other offices — such as governor, lieutenant governor, Council of State or Congress — without having to give up their own seats. And legislative candidates wouldn't be concerned with he "coat-tail" effect of presidential or gubernatorial candidates.

North Carolina's Constitution set one-year terms for legislators from 1776 until 1835, and terms have been for two years since then.

— No. 2. Judge Recall. The Constitution now allows for the recall of retired judges temporarily to fill vacancies on the court from which they retired. The amendment would broaden that, permitting retired Supreme Court justices to be recalled to sit on the Court of Appeals as well as the Supreme Court. Retired Court of Appeals judges would be able to sit temporarily on the Supreme Court.

Rep. Parks Helms, a Charlotte Democrat and chairman of the state Courts Commission, said the amendment has the endorsement of the Supreme Court. "It's designed to give the appellate courts relief from the growing caseload," he said.

Recalls could last up to six months, and would be used in cases such as prolonged illness or disability of a judge or justice, he said.

— No. 3. Appeals from the Utilities Commission. The Constitution now allows the Supreme Court to hear appeals only from "the courts below." This would change the provision to allow decisions of the state Utilities Commission, such as in multi-million dollar electric and telephone rate cases, to be appealed directly to the Supreme Court.

Those appeals now must go first to the Court of Appeals. But, says Helms, "all the cases wind up in the Supreme Court anyway. It takes out a step that is actually unnecessary."

Appeals of decisions by the state Industrial Commission, which hears disputed worker's compensation cases, and the Insurance Commissioner, who rules on insurance rate increases, would still go to the Court of Appeals first.

— No. 4. Port Financing. This amendment would permit the General Assembly to pass laws allowing public bodies that operate airports and seaports to build special facilities for long-term lease to private users. And, it would allow the projects to be financed by revenue bonds exempt from federal and state taxes.

The state Ports Authority and many airports now are permitted to lease one-user facilities, but recent court rulings have cast doubt on whether the leases may run for more than five or 10 years.

The amendment was proposed by the state Commerce Department and has the endorsement of state Treasurer Harlan Boyles.

The Ports Authority could use the amendment in the future to build facilities such as a grain elevator or a coal-handling facility for lease to a private company, said Clint Abernethy, assistant Commerce secretary.

He said Piedmont Airlines also may use the amendment to take advantage of the lower-rate bonds to lease an airport terminal. But Don McGuire, Piedmont vice president for public affairs in Winston-Salem, said he knew of no Piedmont building project planned using the bonds.

Boyles said the state would suffer a small revenue loss through the loss of taxes on the bonds' interest. But that amount is insignificant, he said. The major advantage is that the bonds would be exempt from federal taxes too, thus making them attractive to investors at lower rates of interest.

— No. 5. Private College Bonds. Previous amendments to the constitution allow tax-exempt bonds to be issued for financing public or nonprofit privately owned hospitals and private industrial plants.

Video Games Take On Casino-Type Payoffs

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Video poker, blackjack and slot machines are giving some people a bigger payoff than the thrill of destroying a blip on a Pac-Man machine, authorities in North Carolina and South Carolina say.

Operators of some of the machines are allowing people to gamble, giving them free beer, free games or cash, officials say.

Popular games such as Pac-Man and Space Invaders are making way for new machines called "Draw Poker" and "Black Jack" at service stations and convenience stores.

Attorneys general of both states say they think the games probably are illegal.

In Richland County, S.C. last July, four gambling games were tested in a three-day court hearing, and Circuit Judge Rodney Peebles ruled the slot machines required no skill to play so were illegal. That ruling has been appealed to the South Carolina Supreme Court.

In North Carolina, nine characteristics determine if a game is illegal, based chiefly on the level of skill needed to play the game and what prizes are offered.

The North Carolina Coin Operators Association is campaigning against the machines, claiming they will hurt the image of other coin-operated machines.

"We are against them for the simple reason they are easily misconstrued to be legitimate video eqipment," said Milton Hobbs of Valdese, secretary of the North Carolina group. "We feel it would definitely hurt us with respect to the churches, the Moral Majority and the Legislature."

The South Carolina Coin Operators Association believes the games are legal and is not opposing them.

The machines are not weclome in Hickory, and Police Chief Floyd Lucas has warned at least two operators to get the machines out of town.

"These machines appear to be nothing more than slot machines as far as the statutes are concerned," he said.

Some store operators that have the games say prizes are offered to big winners. In Rock Hill, S.C., a service station offers a free case of beer to the week's high hand, a practice state officials say is illegal.

Defenders of the machines say the machines are not designed for gambling but admit they can be used that way.

"You can gamble on anything," said Fred Collins, a game-machine distributor in Greenville, S.C. "It's like me saying that every car that's made is made for hauling whisky."

Five Nominated For Judiciary

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The names of five nominees have been sent to Gov. Jim Hunt to fill two judicial seats.

Jim Ezzell of Rocky Mount, a distict court judge from the 7th District; Carter Lambeth of Wilmington, a district court judge from the 5th District; John B. Lewis Jr., a Farmville attorney; Herbert Phillips of Morehead City, a district court judge from the 3rd District; and Tom Watts of Elizabeth City, the district attorney for the 1st District, were nominated by 1st Judicial Division Panel of the state Judicial Nominating Committee for Superior Court Judges.

Hunt is to appoint one complete the term of Special Superior Court Judge Charlie Winberry, who was apointed a resident judgeship in the 7th District to succeed former Superior Court Judge John George Fountain who retired earlier this year. Another nominee is to be appointed to fill the opening created when Special Superior Court Judge John Jolly resigned to resume private practice.

ERA Backers Focus Efforts On N.C.

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Supporters of the Equal Rights Amendment, facing a June 30 deadline for ratification in three more states, are focusing their efforts now on North Carolina, Illinois, Florida and possibly Oklahoma.

The first vote on the proposed amendment to the U.S. Constitution could come in North Carolina, where lawmakers will meet June 2 in a short session.

Supporters are hoping approval in North Carolina will provide the impetus for enactment in two more states. Opponents are hoping rejection will mean the death of ERA.

The North Carolina Legislature has rejected ERA four times and 13 male senators signed an agreement in 1981 not to discuss the issue.

But boosted by a Lou Harris poll showing two-to-one support for ERA in North Carolina, supporters quickly are gearing up for a close fight. In the 50-member Senate, supporters believe they face 28 opponents. They think they have a slight edge in the 120-member House.

Former First Lady Betty Ford and National Organization for Women president Eleanor Smeal visited the state recently and NOW has begun a series of television commercials aimed at putting pressure on lawmakers.

"These long years of trying to educate members of the General Assembly about what the ERA will do and won't do is paying off now," said Rep. Ruth Easterling, D-Mecklenburg. "Now they're realizing some of the things fed them by anti-ERA groups just aren't true."

"The tactics (in the ERA battle) have not changed as best I can tell because the attitude of people has not changed except to become inereasingly opposed to the Equal Rights Amendment," said Alice Wynne Gatsis, president of the 10-year-old North Carolinians Against the ERA.

North Carolina ERA supporters are in a position much like the suffragists experienced when the legislature considered the 19th Amendment, giving women the right to vote, in March 1920.

At that time, 35 states had ratified the amendment and approval of only one more was needed to make the amendment law.

Suffragists and opponents paraded, held rallies and blanketed the Capitol with leaflets. William Jennings Bryan, then U.S. Secretary of State, spoke in support of the bill when the General Assembly met in special session in August.

But legend has it that anti-suffrage forces had state Sen. Obediah Teague, a supporter, locked in a bathroom during the vote and neither Teague nor Lt. Gov. O. Max Gardner, another supporter, got a chance to vote.

The motion to delay consideration of the amendment passed and the next day the Tennessee Legislature ratified the amendment and it was added to the constitution.

It was not until 1971 that North Carolina formally ratified the 19th Amendment.

The arguments over the 19th Amendment also were much the same as those in ERA battle. Opponents said suffrage would "have a tendency to lower the standard of the home" and would pit husband against wife.

But Walter Clark, a supporter and then chief justice of the state Supreme Court, argued that, "Whenever the law has been administsered solely by men, there has been gross discrimination against women."

The proposed ERA says:

"Equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex. The Congress shall have the power to enforce by appropriate legislation the provisions of this act. The amendment shall take effect two years after the date of ratification."

North Carolina Sen. Sam Ervin, best known for his role in the Watergate hearings, echoed many of the arguments against suffrage when he became one of the most vocal ERA opponents in the Senate in 1972.

He warned that ERA would merge jail and restroom facilities for men and women, that women would be drafted into the military.

Youths Lead Indy Qualifiers

By MIKE HARRIS
AP Motorsports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Youthful drivers Michael Chandler and Dale Whittington led six more qualifiers through the early going Saturday as time trials resumed for the May 30 Indianapolis 500-mile race.

Chandler, who finished 12th in his first Indy race a year ago, churned out a four-lap qualification run averaging 198.042 mph, tentatively good for the middle of the eighth row on race day.

The six qualifiers raised the tentative field to 28, leaving five spots to fill for the 33-car, race-day grid. After the lineup is filled, bumping will begin, with each subsequently faster car displacing the slowest of the already-qualified cars one-by-one.

The fourth and final round of qualifications is scheduled on Sunday.

The 24-year-old Chandler, of Dana Point, Calif., is driving a Chevrolet-powered Eagle entered by car-builder and former Indy car driver Dan Gurney. The car's engine is the fastest of the so-called stock block (normally aspirated) power plants in the field so far.

Whittington, 22, of Orlando, Fla., made history as he became the third member of the Florida family to earn starting spots. Dale and older brothers Don, 36, and Bill, 32, are the first sibling trio ever to qualify for Indy in the same year.

Both the older brothers, who have started two previous 500s, were among eight drivers who qualified at more than 200 mph during the first weekend of time trials for the 66th Indy classic.

The first-week qualifiers also included 1979 winner Rick Mears, who set one and four-lap records in capturing the pole position. Other first-round qualifiers included former winners A.J. Foyt, Johnny Rutherford, Al Unser, Mario Andretti and Gordon Johncock.

Gurney had trouble getting Chandler's engine ready for qualifying and had to pass up the first weekend. Neither Chandler nor teammate Mike Mosley were able to get onto the track until this week.

All went smoothly for Chandler on Saturday, however.

"This was the easiest four laps I've had," Chandler said, happy with his qualification run. "With people like Dan Gurney and everybody else working on the car, I've had the easiest job. I wish I could lie and say it was (going flat out), but the car had quite a bit left.

"I just ran it comfortably to get it in the show," he added. "We're ready for the race now. That was my race motor and my race setup. There really isn't anything more for me to do now until the race."

His fastest lap was 198.632, and his slowest was 197.325.

Whittington, one of 10 rookies to make the tentative starting field, was even more elated than Chandler after his steady four-lap run at 197.694 mph, with a fast lap of 197.976. He was so choked up he could barely talk when he got out of his brand new March-Cosworth.

"It's great, just great," he said several times as his brothers congratulated him on pit road.

Later, after calming down a bit, he said, "We had some problems in practice (earlier Saturday) with a bearing and the wastegate (pressure relief valve). I just felt fortunate to overcome all that and still go that fast.

"I didn't have the horsepower we had before, so I was just running it flat out all the way around. It's a relief to have that over with."

Don, who teamed with Bill to win the 24 Hours of LeMans sports car endurance race in 1979, said, "It's still pretty emotional thinking about all three of us making it (at Indy). It's hard to talk about it yet, but it's something we've thought about for quite a while."

Dale, who got his start in racing in Super Vees and sports cars, noted with a grin, "I like sports cars better. It's less work (than driving Indy cars)."

Other qualifiers Saturday included another brother of an already-qualified driver. Jerry Sneva, former Indy rookie of the year and younger brother of two-time pole position winner Tom Sneva, put his brother's 1981

Pitching Is The Name Of The Game For Baird

By MARK BRAND
Special To The Reflector

After hours and hours of being around East Carolina University head baseball coach Hal Baird, the pitching aspect of the game begins to rub off on you. Why, even the 5-8, 150-pound manager named "Peanut" is blowing pitches by hitters as the team takes batting practice before a doubleheader.

"Peanut," yells Barid, "after you throw a couple by them just dust them off a few times!"

Baird walks down the dugout steps and pauses next to pitcher Charlie Smith who is awaiting his starting assignment that evening.

"Charlie," Baird says, "I'm going to give you a clean ball in the first inning and I want you to give it back to me in the seventh without any marks on it."

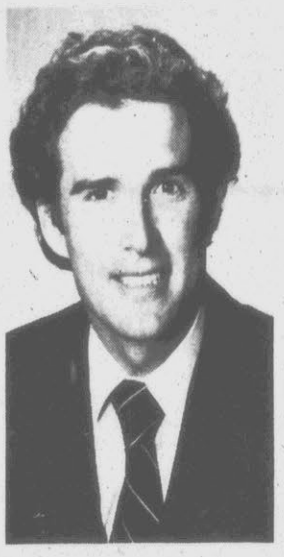
This demand would sound like a tall order to most, but not for Baird, whose forte, not to mention his hobby, is his pitching staff. Realistically it's an obsession. The third-year Pirate coach despises high-scoring games, at least in the opponent's run column.

When the Pirates do get into high-scoring games, Baird is consistent with his reaction following each contest.

"Whew," moans an always beleagured Baird, "Mm, mm, mmm."

Opponent players, coaches and fans also realize his love affair with the pitching game and are often heard commenting, "Yeah, we're playing East Carolina today. Get ready for another low-scoring boring ballgame."

But the statistics, as boring as they may seem to some, are exciting to Baird. In 1976 as assistant coach in charge of pitchers, Baird's staff finished second in the nation in earned-run average at 1.95 and they followed that up with a 2.80 for 13th in 1977. In 1979, his staff copiled a 2.47 mark good for fourth inthe country and his 1981 club fashioned a 2.78 standard which earned first in the nation.



Hal Baird

"It's hard for me to pinpoint a legitimate reason for our success in pitching," explains Baird, "but I do attribute some of it to my experience with my own major league pitching coaches."

Baird, who pitched as a collegian at East Carolina and established many pitching records which have since been broken by his own pitchers, pitched professionally in the Kansas City Royal organization. His windup and delivery was likened by many to that of pitching great Whitey Ford. But a stomach ailment forced him out of playing and into coaching.

"It's fun for me to think back about the pitching coaches I worked under," says Baird. "Johnny Sain, now with the Chicago White Sox, was an excellent teacher of the breaking pitch. Chuck Stobbs of the Royals was a master at analyzing hitters. Galen Cisco, also of the Royals, was good at teaching mechanics and a solid delivery. He is also responsbile for the success of pitchers Dennis Leonard, Mark Littel

Injured In Crash

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Rookie driver Phil Krueger suffered a slight concussion Saturday when his race car struck the fourth-turn wall during practice at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

He was treated at the Speedway's infield hospital, then transferred to the downtown Methodist Hospital for further observation.

Krueger's crash occurred during a break in Saturday's scheduled qualification period for the May 30 Indianapolis 500.

Krueger, 30, of Fullerton, Calif., lost control of his Chevy-powered McLaren race car as he entered the fourth turn. The car spun 1½ times and slid 420 feet, striking the wall backwards. He then skidded along the wall another 40 feet and spun again 440 feet into the infield.

The car suffered extensive damage to the rear section.

Krueger was able to get out of the car without help.

A week earlier, driver Gordon Smiley was killed during a warmup lap before qualifying when his car struck the third-turn wall head-on.

Carolina Stickers Win

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Top-ranked North Carolina blitzed Cornell with a six-goal burst in the second quarter Saturday and then never looked back to down the Big Red 15-8 in a semifinal game of the 1982 NCAA Lacrosse Tournament.

The victory sends the defending National Collegiate Athletic Association champions against No. 2 Johns Hopkins, a 13-9 winner over Virginia Saturday, in a rematch of last year's finals next Saturday.

North Carolina, 13-0 this year and winner of 25 consecutive matches, used a swarming defense and three goals by All-America attackman Michael Burnett to take a 4-2 lead after the first quarter.

The Tar Heels then peppered the Big Red goal for six unanswered goals during a seven minute stretch of the second period to take a commanding 10-3 lead at the half.

The Big Red settled down and played the favored Tar Heels even in the second half. Doug Hall's two goals helpd UNC to a 13-4 lead going into the final period.

Cornell outscored North Carolina 4-2 in the fourth quarter but it was a case of too little, too late.

Burnett's three goals led the way for UNC, while five other players managed two goals each.

Ayden-Grifton, Rose Enter Playoffs

Chargers Hope To Avoid Defeat

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

LITTLEFIELD — Ayden-Grifton, ECC champion for a second straight season, enters the opening round of the state 3-A baseball playoffs Monday evening hoping to avoid the fate that befell it a year ago.

The Chargers dropped a 3-0 decision to Roanoke Rapids in their playoff opener last year. A year later the Chargers return to the playoffs, and this time they hope their stay is not so brief.

"I think they're looking to redeem themselves this year," Ayden-Grifton coach Allan Wilson said. "Not too many teams get a second chance."

The Chargers' second chance comes tomorrow night (8 p.m.) when they play host to White Oak. The Vikings finished tied for the Coastal Conference regular season title and defeated North Lenoir, 8-1, Thursday to earn the league's lone playoff berth.

The two teams did not meet during the regular season but did have one common foe: D.H. Conley. White Oak defeated the Vikings twice while Ayden-Grifton lost to Conley in the first month of the season.

Despite losing to the Yellow Jackets last year, Wilson believes the experience will help his club as it prepares to meet the Vikings.

"I felt like last year there was a lot of pressure on us when we went up to Roanoke Rapids," Wilson said. "I think we'll approach it a little differently this year.

"A lot of the guys were on the team last year, and, shoot, a lot of them just got out of football and they were in the eastern finals. Maybe (all) that will give us an advantage."

Ayden-Grifton, which is 16-6, will start ace left-hander Tyrone Gay, who is 8-4 this season with 116 strike outs and 31 walks in 68 innings. Gay has an earned run average of 1.24.

White Oak, which comes into the game having won 10 straight, will counter with either junior Charlie Soos or senior Richard Sloan, both of whom are right-handers.

Soos, who went the distance in the win over North Lenoir, is 6-1 with a 0.98 ERA. He has struck out 75 and walked 23 in 42⅓ innings.

Sloan is 5-2 with a 1.70 ERA. He has struck out 84 and walked 10 in 49⅓ innings.

"Both of them are big and strong," Wilson said. "Soos is probably the best pitcher we've faced all year, and I've heard Sloan is just as good."

Gay, however, has both the credentials and arm to equal either Viking pitcher.

A junior, Gay has thrown 12 straight no-hit innings coming into tomorrow night's game. Seven of those innings came last Tuesday night when he threw a no-hitter and Ayden-Grifton defeated North Pitt, 8-1, to clinch the ECC title.

"He'll be the key," Wilson said. "Any time he's on the mound we've got a chance. The guys have so much confiddence in him...that's probably why we're in the playoffs."

And, unlike many a high school player, Gay does not shy from big games. Said Wilson: "He thrives on it. He likes throwing against the better people we play. I think he likes the big games."

In White Oak, Gay will face a lineup that is without a left-hand hitter. The only lefthander on the team is a reserve infielder.

Wilson said the Vikings are similar to Charles B. Aycock. "They're big — bigger than we are," he said. "They resemble Aycock as far as defense and they hit the ball fairly well."

Soos leads the Vikings in hitting with a .429 average. Sloan is next at .345.

The Chargers will counter with clean-up hitter Terry Locust, who is hitting .422 with 30 runs batted in. Locust has three home runs, two triples and eight doubles.

Doug Coley, who plays right-field when not pitching, is hitting .344 with 20 RBI and one home run. Coley is 5-2 on the mound with an earned run average just under 3.00.

White Oak Has Met Pressure

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

The state 3-A baseball playoffs have yet to begin, but White Oak has already tasted playoff pressure — and the Vikings found it to their liking.

White Oak, which ended the regular season tied with North Lenoir for the Coastal Conference championship, defeated the Hawks, 8-1, Thursday in a one-game playoff to determine the league's state playoff representative.

White Oak coach Tom McGirt feels the win will help prepare his club for its upcoming game Monday night with Ayden-Grifton in the opening round of the state playoffs.

"I think it helped us mainly because we didn't go to the playoffs last year and it kind of warmed us up (for them)," McGirt said. "It gave us a chance to feel the pressure of the playoffs.

"We were tight before the game, but I think we got a lot our tightness out during the game."

The Vikings, who missed the playoffs last year for the first time in over a half dozen years, come into Monday's 8 p.m. contest with a 17-3 mark having won 10 straight.

McGirt said he has not decided which of his two top pitchers will start, but indicated he is leaning toward junior right-hander Richard Sloan.

Sloan is 5-2 this season with an earned run average of 1.70. He has struck out 84 and walked just 10 in 49⅔ innings.

If Sloan does not start then senior right-hander Charlie Soos will. Soos, who went the distance in the win over North Lenoir, is 6-1 with an ERA of 0.98.

Soos, who pitched 13 innings of perfect ball at one point this season, has struck out 75 and walked 23 in 42⅔ innings.

Rampants Seek To Prove Selves

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Last year's Rose High School baseball team scraped out a win in the Big East Conference, then were stunned by Wilmington Hoggard, 3-0, in the first round of the State 4-A Playoffs. They had been favored to win that contest.

That loss has stuck in the craw of the Rampants every since then. Most of the members of that team have returned and remember that night well.

Come Tuesday night at 7:30 p.m. in Guy Smith Stadium, they have a chance to redeem themselves as the Rampants host Millbrook in the first round of the 1982 playoffs.

This year, however, Rose comes into the game as a solid favorite, sporting a 22-0 record. And for the most part they had little trouble in gaining those 22 victories.

Millbrook, runner-up in the Cap-Eight Conference, put together a 17-5 mark this year, but has a hard-hitting team that claims a .350-plus team batting average.

That certainly is expected to test the right arm of Roger Williams, 8-0, whom Vincent has selected to get the start Tuesday night.

"We're excited about the playoffs," Vincent said.

"We know that it's going to be awfully tough and we expect Millbrook to give us a strong game. We know we have to play well," Vincent added.

"When you get to the playoffs, everyone has the same record. They're all even again, it's all from scratch and it's sudden death.

"But I feel that our chances are as good as they've ever been."

Vincent said that the Hoggard game has been on the minds of the Rampants ever

Millbrook Not Afraid Of Rose

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Last Tuesday night, when Rose High School's Rampants rolled to a 21-3 victory over Wilson Beddingfield, there were some very interested spectators in the stands.

This Tuesday night at 7:30 p.m. at Guy Smith Stadium, those spectators will become participants as Millbrook High School faces Rose in the first round of the State 4-A Playoffs.

Rose, 22-0, captured the championship of the Big East Conference, while Millbrook, 17-5, finished second to Garner in the Cap-Eight league.

And despite that second place finish — and the record of the Rampants, Millbrook coach Mike Brannan says he and his players are "definitely not intimidated."

The lop-sidedness of the win over Beddingfield didn't seem to impress Brannon either.

"Hunt really didn't put up much of a fight," he said by telephone from Raleigh late last week. "I really don't know much about the (Big East) conference," the first-year coach added.

"I did talk with George Kelly (Rocky Mount coach) and he told me Rose had two good pitchers. But he said he couldn't tell me a lot about the rest of the team because those pitchers just dominated things so much, he really couldn't tell how good Rose really was."

Millbrook, meanwhile, isn't such a bad pitching team itself, Brannan notes. "At the start of the season, our pitching was the strong point of the game, but our hitting has come on strong as the season went along. Our team batting average is over .350, and everyone in the starting lineup is hitting .300 or better on a grass infield.

Brannan feels that he has four good pitchers, but he declined to say who he would start against Rose. The staff includes one senior, Keith Pearce, who is 7-3 on the season, with a 1.78 earned run average. He's struck out 38 batters in 55 innings of work.

However, junior Doug Barefoot isn't far behind. He holds a 2-2 record with six saves and a 1.68 ERA. He's fanned 58 in 50 innings, tops on the team.

The rest of the staff includes junior Ken Turner and former Greenville resident John Catlett, also a junior. Turner in 24 innings has a 3-0 record with two saves and an 0.58 ERA. Catlett, 5-0 with two saves has hurled 27 innings and has an 0.26 ERA.

Brannan doesn't really characterize Millbrok as a power team, or a running team, claiming the team does both well.

"We hit 15 homers during the season, and we have four players who have stolen 20 or more bases.' he said.

Tops among the power hitters are first baseman Mike King, a senior, and Eddie Royster, senior shortstop. Both have hit six homers.

Royster is the leading hitter with a .444 average that also includes four doubles, 27 runs and 26 runs batted in. King, hitting .393, has two doubles, two triples, has scored 23 runs and driven in 27.

Brannan has two catchers he uses, depending on which has the hot hand. Kevin Ledet, a senior, is hitting .330 with three homers, while Dan Raynor, a sophomore, has a .350 average.

At second base, there are also two who share time, Joe Welsh and Shaw McDonald, both juniors. Welsh, who usually plays the position, hits .320, while McDonald has a .250 mark.

Rounding out the infield is third baseman Phillip Sloan, a junior, hitting .420. He has 13 runs batted in and has scored 26 times.

The outfield consists of Bobby Reardon, a senior out for the first time, hitting .315; Shane Wilder, a junior, hitting .400, and Marty Bahen, a sophomore with a .364 average with 24 runs scored.

When the Wildcats use a designated hitter, it's either Turner (.334 with 18 rbi's and 21 runs), or Catlett, hitting .310.

Stapleton's Single Is Big Hit For Red Sox

By HOWARD ULLMAN
AP Sports Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Dave Stapleton punched a run-scoring single to right field to snap 4-4 tie, and Boston rapped three doubles in the eighth inning Saturday to beat the Oakland A's 7-4.

The victory was Boston's fourth straight, and the loss was Oakland's fifth in a row.

Stapleton's one-out hit followed a double by Carl Yastbzemski, who left for pinch runner Reid Nichols after legging out double to right field. Rich Gedman followed with a double that scored Stapleton, and one out later, a double by Rick Miller scored Gedman.

The tie-breaking hit came off A's starter Bo McLaughlin, 0-2. Bob Stanley, 4-1, pitched the final 81-3 innings, giving up three hits, walking two, and striking out three in relief of Bob Ojeda.

Oakland jumped on Ojeda for three runs in the first. Rickey Henderson led off with a single and stole second and third, giving him 41 swipes in 42 games this season. He scored on a single by Cliff Johnson, and Joe Rudi followed with a walk.

Johnson and Rudi advanced when a groundout, and both runners scored on a double by Mike Heath, chasing Ojeda.

Boston went ahead with four runs in the second. Gedman started the inning with a single. He went to second and Glenn Hoffman was safe at first when first baseman Jeff Newman threw wildly to second. Miller's single loaded the bases.

Second baseman Davey Lopes then fielded Jerry Remy's grounder, but shortstop Fred Stanley dropped the throw on the attempted force out, allowing Gedman t score. Dwight Evans walked to drive in another run.

Rose's Double Sparks Phillies

By TOM SALADINO
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Pete Rose drilled a two-run double to cap a fifth-inning rally that powered Philadelphia past the Atlanta Braves 5-2 Saturday, snapping a four-game Phillies losing streak.

Rose's double, highlighting a three-run uprising, came off loser Larry McWiliams, 2-2, and scored pitcher Mike Krukow, 4-2, who had singled and Bob Dernier, who doubled. Rose then came home on a single by Bo Diaz.

After a thunderstorm delayed the start of the game for 40 minutes, the Braves took a 1-0 first inning lead on an RBI single by Claudell Washington.

Atlanta missed an opportunity to score more runs in the inning. Brett Butler and Glenn Hubbard had walked before Washington's hit. Butler scored on Washington's hit, but Hubbard was thrown out at the plate by Dernier when he tried to score on Dale Murphy's single to right.

The Braves, who had won three straight, had another runner thrown out at home in the next inning when Gary Matthews nailed Rafael Ramirez trying to score from second on Butler's single.

The Phillies went ahead 2-1 in the second inning when Diaz singled and Garry Maddox doubled. Diaz scored on Manny Trillo's grounder and Maddox came home on a wild pitch by McWilliams.

Murphy slugged a solo home run, his 13th, in the fifth inning for Atlanta's second bun.

Ed Farmer finished up for Krukow, earning his fourth save.

White Oak To Face A-G . . .

"Right now I may go with Sloan," McGirt said. "But I'm not (totally) sure."

Ayden-Grifton, which is 16-6, will counter with ace left-hander Tyrone Gay. Gay, a junior, is 8-4 this season with an ERA of 1.24. Gay has struck out 116 and walked 31 in 68 innings.

Gay comes into the game having pitched 12 straight no-hit innings, including a no-hitter against North Pitt last Tuesday night.

Because of the talent of the opposing pitchers, both McGirt and A-G coach Allan Wilson believe the game will be low scoring.

"I feel like it will be (low scoring)," McGirt said. "You usually get the best two pitchers on each team starting the first round."

Said Wilson: "I hope it is low scoring. When you get two pitchers together like this it's bound to be low scoring."

The Chargers probably have more overall team speed, what with four players with over 10 stolen bases, led by Kelvin Harris' 20, but the Vikings figure to have more power.

Soos leads the Vikings in hitting with a .429 average. He has four home runs and 16 runs batted in.

Sloan is next with a .345 average. Sloan has five home runs and 19 runs batted in.

Whichever player does not pitch will play third base.

Catcher Israel Meadows is hitting at a .326 clip while first baseman Pat Riley is at .311 with one home run, givign the Vikings four players over .300.

Rounding out the Vikings' infield are second baseman Brian Bequer, and shortstop Gary Appleton. In the outfield are Joseph Hopkins in right, Tim Baker in left and Mike Horne incenter.

Asked about his club's strengths, McGirt said' "I think our pitching is fairly strong. Other than Soos and Sloan we've got Appleton, who's won three games for us, and a lefty named Rick Maddox who has won some games for us this year.

"I think our pitching depth is one of our biggest strengths."

As for weaknesses, McGirt said: "We've been inconsistent at the bat. One game we'll hit the ball real hard and the next one we won't.

"However, in the last four or five games we've really hit the ball well."

• •

The Vikings opened the season with a loss to 4-A Wilmington-New Hanover. Some three weeks later they began the conference season with an unusual 6-5 loss to North Lenoir.

White Oak scored three runs in the top of the seventh in game only to have the bottom of the inning rainedout. According to the rules, the score reverts back to the last full inning, in this case the sixth, which gave the Hawks a 6-5 win.

The Vikings did not play another conference game until after the Easter break and promptly lost that one as well, suffering a 1-0 defeat to Havelock.

"At that point we regrouped and reorganized," McGirt said. "The team really buckled down from there.

"We felt confident all along, but here we were with two (conference) losses (in two games) and we had to reassess some things."

The reassessment complete, the Vikings went on to win their final 10 games.

"It's been a kind of uphill struggle for us this year," McGirt said. "But we felt at the beginning of the year if our hitting came around we'd be in there."

NOTES:

•A-G coach Allan Wilson said he noticed that when Soos pitches for the Vikings the outfield swings noticeably toward rightfield.

"They're extremely aggressive," Wilson said. "They really play the batters to swing late with Soos on the mound."

•Ayden-Grifton enters the playoffs having yet to be shutout. The same was true of last year's team, which ended the season on the wrong end of a 3-0 score.

•Freshman Jackie Conway has made on three errors this season in leftfield for the Chargers.

•As long as Ayden-Grifton wins in the playoffs the Chargers will be at home. The brackets are the same as they were in football, which had the Chargers playing three straight playoff games in Littlefield.

•Three A-G players — Bernard Ricciarelli, Chris Strickland and Art Rouse — have started all four years at Ayden-Grif ton.

Their first year the Chargers were 2-20.

Chargers . . .

Gay is the third Charger hitting at least .300. Gay is hitting an even .300 with 15 RBI, five doubles and one home run.

Second baseman Bernard Ricciarelli is just under .300 hitting at .292. Ricciarelli has 13 RBI and four doubles.

Leadoff hitter Chris Strickland is hitting .280 with 10 RBI and four doubles and is followed closely by freshman Jackie Conway, who is hitting .274 with nine RBI and five doubles.

First baseman Joey Kennedy is at .250 with 12 RBI while centerfielder Art Rouse is at .240 with nine RBI and catcher Roger Moye is at .143 with three RBI and five doubles.

The Chargers also have the league's leading stolen base artist in Kelvin Harris. Harris, who usually runs for Gay or Moye, has stolen 20 bases on a team that has four players with at least 10 steals.

Behind Harris in steals are Locust (14), Ricciarelli (12) and Kennedy (11).

"We're quicker than we were last year," Wilson said. "We've got basically the same team from last year but we're running more this year."

Which, Wilson insists, does not mean the Chargers lack power. "We've got two, three, or maybe four players capable of hitting it out.

"We're small but we're stocky. They're worked on the weights and it's helped."

The Chargers opened the season struggling to stay at .500. Eight games into the season the Chargers were 4-4, following a loss at home to Aycock, which, along with Greene Central, figured to be the Chargers' toughest challenge as they looked to win a second straight ECC title.

But, the Chargers won their next three conference games going into the Easter break and the chase was on. Ayden-Grifton finally caught Aycock on April 20 when the Chargers defeated the Falcons in Pikeville to take over first.

Both teams lost ECC games the following week — Aycock falling to Southern Nash and A-G losing to Greene Central — but the Chargers were then all but handed the title when Farmville Central upset Aycock last Friday.

The Chargers clinched the title four days later on Gay's no-hitter against North Pitt.

"When we started the season we knew we had a chance to be a contender," Wilson said. "But we knew we'd have to beat Aycock and Greene Central.

"When we lost to Aycock early we felt we had given the game away and that (the loss) put our backs against the wall," he added. "I think when we beat them over there we felt we had a pretty good chance of winning it but then when we lost to Greene Central I began to worry.

"I honestly thought at that point it would end up in a playoff."

There was no playoff, however, thanks to the Jaguars, which allowed the Chargers to focus fully on the upcoming state tournament.

"I think they know what's at stake," Wilson said. "If you lose you're out.

"But this group isn't the type you can get real fired up. They take everything real easy. But I think they'll be ready Monday night"

Michel Rudigoz, the coach of the American Women's Alpine Ski team, formerly coached the British Olympic men's squad and a French national team.

Indy entry, a March-Cosworth, in the tentative field at 195.270.

Jerry was coming down the main straightaway to take the checkered flag on his fourth lap when his engine let go. He said, "I'm in it now, thanks to the new (U.S. Auto Club) rule that you only get two warmup laps. One more practice or warmup lap and I would still be waiting."

Bill Alsup, one of 10 rookies in last year's race, qualified at Penske-Cosworth at 193.123; rookie Chet Fillip — making the last of three allowable qualication attempts — put an Eagle-Cosworth in at 194.879, and rookie Jim Hickman drove a March-Cosworth to a 196.217 mph set.

Among the drivers who began qualifying runs but were waved off after one or more unsatisfactory laps were veterans Gary Bettenhausen, Bill Vukovich, Josele Garza and Vern Schuppan. Tom Bigelow also had a disappointing lap at 185 before blowing his engine.

With the exception of a 2½-hour practice period Thursday, none of the cars will be allowed to run on the track again until the race begins at noon EDT next Sunday.

Boston Tries To Forget The Past

See Related Story On Page B-15.

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics were trying to avoid thoughts of their past success at postseason comebacks against Philadelphia as they prepared to meet the 76ers in Game 7 of their playoff series Sunday.

The Celtics defeated the 76ers 88-75 at Philadelphia Friday night to tie their best-of-7 National Basketball Association playoff series 3-3.

A victory by the Celtics at Boston Garden Sunday would climax a comeback from a 3-1 series deficit, a feat they also accomplished against the 76ers last year and in 1968, each time in the Eastern Conference finals. The two previous comebacks by the Celtics from 3-1 deficits are among only four in NBA playoff history.

"The only thing important now is the seventh game," Boston Coach Bill Fitch said. "Nobody will remember Game 1 or 3 or 6."

"What happened in the past is history," Boston center Robert Parish said. "The only thing that matters is Sunday."

"The 76ers are capable of winning Sunday," Celtics forward Larry Bird added. "Each team has shown it can win away from home."

Bird and Parish, who each scored 14 points and combined for 30 rebounds Friday, led a Celtics defense that held Philadelphia to a record-low 27 points in the second half after Boston trailed by as many as 15 points in the first quarter.

The previous low was 28 points by the Los Angeles Lakers at Milwaukee on April 7, 1954.

The 76ers hit only seven of 34 shots in the second half and 35 percent for the game. Andrew Toney, who scored 39 and 30 points in two of Philadelphia's three victories in the series, was 1-for-11 from the field and scored three points.

"Defense will be the key again Sunday," Bird said. "If we play the same defense in Boston that we did in Philadelphia, we'll be in shape."

The Celtics did not get their first lead in Friday's game until midway through the fourth quarter, but they never lost it again. Twelve consecutive points late in the game, seven of them by Kevin McHale, sealed the outcome.

"When we got ahead in the fourth quarter, they looked shellshocked," Boston's Cedric Maxwell said. "It's not over, but if the 76ers said what they really feel inside, they would say they had lost a golden opportunity to end the series at home."

Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham said he was "tired of hearing about last year. We're down now ... but we'll be ready on Sunday. I'll guarantee it."

"I think the pressure is still on them because they're the defending world champions and they are expected to win it again."

Nelson Holds To Lead In Rain-Swept Tourney

ATLANTA (AP) — Larry Nelson reeled off a steady string of pars, making only one birdie, to retain the lead at 35— 168 halfway through the rain-delayed third round of the $300,000 Georgia-Pacific Atlanta Golf Classic.

Nelson, the reigning PGA champion, held a one-shot edge over the charging Peter Jacobsen, the 1980 Buick Open winner who shot a 32 on the front side for an 11-under-par 169 after 45 holes.

The round was delayed for two hours, 15 minutes by a thunderstorm after Nelson had played his first five holes.

Nelson, who has led since the start, got his only birdie at No.2 where he two-putted from 50 feet.

Nelson's playing partners both faltered. Scott Hoch, who began play one stroke behind, made the turn at 39-173 and was tied with defending champion Tom Watson, Mike Nicolette and Lee Elder.

Lanny Wadkins, who fired a 64 to move into contention Friday, 40—176, dropped well back when he triple bogeyed the 188-yard par-3 No.3 and followed with a bogey on the fourth hole.

Keith Fergus, who shared the first round lead with Nelson, got it going again in the humid weather with a 32 that left him at 10-under 170 for 45 holes over the 7,007-yard, par-72 Atlanta Country Club course.

Alatorre To Roughriders

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Tennessee quarterback Steve Alatorre has become a free agent with the Saskatchegan Roughriders of the Canadian Football League.

The Roughriders' training camp, where Alatorre will be one of five quarterbacks, opens Friday. The team, which last year had a 9-7 record, has only one returning quarterback.

The CFL's exhibition season begins June 13.

"Calgary originally had my negotiating rights," Alatorre said. "A guy came to see me, and I guess they had something else in the makings. They dropped me from the list.

"Saskatchewan picked me up. I went to mini-camp in Memphis and everything just worked out. They had been interested in me for a while," he said.

"I'm in great shape," said Alatorre, who passed for 1,171 yards and eight touchdowns with Tennessee last season. "It's more a mental thing right now than anything else."

ECU Football Ticket Sale

Ticket orders for the 1982 East Carolina University football season are now being accepted throughout eastern North Carolina.

The primary ticket outlet is the athletic ticket office on the campus of East Carolina, but Pirate fans will again have the opportunity to purchase home game football tickets at various locations throughout the eastern area.

Wachovia Bank, for the second consecutive year, will serve as an outlet for Pirate football tickets. A total of 45 Wachovia branches in 28 eastern cities will be involved in the Pirate ticket operations.

"We are elated to have Wachovia Bank work with us again this season," noted Director of Athletics Dr. Ken Karr. "Our first year of this outlying ticket window concept with Wachovia produced very fine results. We look forward to considerable increases this year in sales at Wachovia."

The 1982 Pirate season will open on September 11 in Raleigh against N.C. State, while the team kicks off its home slate on September 18.

Tickets for the 1982 home games are $9 for reserved seats. The Economy Plan, started last year, will be in effect again. This allows a fan to purchase season tickets in units of five for half price in selected areas of the stadium.

since the first ball was picked up for practice this year. "We felt like we really embarrassed ourselves. We felt we had a much better team than we showed. So it's been one of our goals to get back into the playoffs and prove ourselves."

Vincent said that it is hard to forecast what type of game the fans might expect. "I would think that in the playoffs, you could expect a low-scoring game. I just hope we can hit with 'em."

Williams, who sports an earned run average just under 2.00, struck out 112 batters in 69 innings of work this season. He has been hit hard on occasion, and Vincent admits that he hasn't performed as well this year as expected,

"His rhythm has been off some, but he normally pitches very well in big games. In his last outing, the last three innings he pitched were the best he's thrown all year."

In those final three, he struck out seven of the ten batters he faced, allowing one hit and another to reach on a fielder's choice.

However, Vincent added that he would not hesitate to go with Gordon Douglas, 12-0, should Williams get into heavy trouble. "With no tomorrow, you have to play to win every game."

Rose is hitting at an above .300 mark, but Vincent notes that it hasn't been consistant throughout the year. "We haven't hit the ball that well with power, but everyone is putting the ball in play. We don't strike out much, and when you put a lot of pressure on the other team by hitting the ball, you are going to create some problems.

"And, too, I think we're hitting the ball as well now as we have all season," he added.

Williams is the team's leading hitter with a .479 average. When he isn't pitching, he plays right field.

First baseman Bill Kittrell is next at .432, the only other Rampant over .400.

Above the .300 mark are leftfielder Tom Buie, .340; second baseman Mont Carter, .378; shortstop Sammy Hodges, .348, and centerfielder Randy Warren, .365.

Rounding out the rest of the regulars are Douglas, who plays third when not pitching, at .297 and catcher Crowell Pope at .246.

Pope missed most of the Beddingfield game and all of the Northeastern game last week with a bruised hand, but is expected to be ready for action on Tuesday night.

Rudy Stalls, who plays right when Williams pitches, is hitting at a .375 clip, while Keith Phillips, who takes over third when Douglas goes to the mound, has a .250 mark.

While the Rampants had little trouble in winning the title, Vincent is unsure about the strength of the Big East this year. "I don't really feel that the league was as strong as it's been in the past, but I believe that everyone of the teams that played in a tournament this year won (except for those playing in tourneys with other conference members). That speaks pretty well for the conference."

The winner of the Rose-Millbrook will meet the survivor of the Richmond County-Garner contest later in the week but prior to Friday. (Richmond and Garner played Saturday night.)

"It really doesn't matter which one we play," Vincent said. "But it would be nice to have a shot at Richmond County. Can you imagine what kind of game it would be to have a 23-0 team and a 24-0 team meeting? That should really excite the fans."

Vincent, however, isn't counting chickens. "We've got to win that first one. That's the only one that counts now. And we have to remember last year."

It's unlikely that last year will be forgotten.

Millbrook . . .

Welsh all have 20 or more stolen bases.

"We're definitely not intimidated," Brannan said. "We wouldn't be intimidated if we were playing the Yankees. We know that we are one of the best teams in the state, and if we play good defense we can beat anyone. Errors have hurt us in our losses. Those people who have gotten by us have done so because we've given it to them rather than them taking it.

"But, no, we're not afraid of anybody."

Brannan said he expects a low-scoring game with Rose's reputation for pitching and his own team's strength at that position. "We're coming off a loss, and we always tend to play well after a loss (5-3 to Cary in the final game of the season when the Wildcats committee eight errors).

"And the week off won't hurt us. We're practicing every day and our kids are ready."

Ripley, Cubs Silence San Francisco, 2-1

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Right-hander Allen Ripley and two relievers silenced San Francisco on four hits, and Steve Henderson belted a two-run single to lead the Chicago Cubs to a 2-1 victory over the Giants Saturday.

Ripley, 2-0, was impressive in his second start of the season for the Cubs, spacing three Giants hits over his seven innings. After blanking Houston for six innings in his only other start, Ripley held the Giants to a single run in the fifth inning, getting relief help from Lee Smith and Willie Hernandez.

The Cubs broke a scoreless tie in the fifth after Larry Bowa singled with one out and moved to third on Ryne Sandberg's single. Sandberg stole second, and Henderson scored both runners with a ground single to right for a 2-0 lead against Atlee Hammaker, 2-2.

The Giants averted a shutout when Dave Bergman led off the fifth with a walk, went to third on Jim Wohlford's hit-and-run single and scored on Johnnie LeMaster's sacrifice fly.

Ripley, bidding for his first complete game since April 28, 1981 when he was with the Giants, was lifted for a pinch-hitter in the eighth. Smith worked 12-3 innings, giving up a leadoff double to Joe Morgan in the ninth, and Hernandez got the final out for his fifth save.

Baltimore Tops Jays

TORONTO (AP) — Dennis Martinez pitched the Orioles' third consecutive shutout, and John Lownstein homered for the second day in a row Saturday to lead Baltimore to its fourth straight victory, a 6-0 triumph over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Lowenstein drove in three runs, two with his ninth homer of the season and another with a sacrifice fly, backing the six-hit pitching of Martinez, 4-3. The shutout extended to 33 the number of consecutive scoreless innings thrown by Orioles pitchers. Martinez struck out six and walked two.

Lowenstein, who hit a solo homer Friday, gave Baltimore a 3-0 lead in the first inning when he lofted an opposite-field, wind-aided fly ball into the left field seats. Rick Dempsey hit his second homer of the year in the Orioles fourth.

The Orioles scored all their runs in the first with two out against loser Dave Stieb, 2-5. Al Bumbry opened with a single and advanced to second on a grounder. One out later, Ken Singleton scored Bumbry on a single, and Lowenstein followed with his homer.

Lowenstein drove in his third run in the third inning. Jim Dwyer led off with a single to left and advanced to third on Singleton's bloop double. Lowenstein made it 4-0 with a sacrifice fly.

Dempsey's fourth-inning homer made it 5-0, and the Orioles added a run in the fifth on an RBI single by Terry Crowley.

Pitching . . .

and Larry Gura. And Bill Fischer, now with the Cincinnati Reds whose forte was control, still holds the National League record for 86.7 innings pitched without a walk."

Baird, although using each of these coaches as examples in his teaching, does not try to emmulate any one person. He has his own style and his own beliefs, the major portion being the mental aspects of pitching.

"We approach the mental more than the physical," says Barid. "You're assured kids have the physical equipment if they are in college. The area most neglected is mental.

"We work on their mental ability to concentrate to make certain pitches. We talk pitching 100 percent of the time. We reinforce the basics. I don't believe in working on gadgets or gimmicks or trick pick-off plays. The more complex you get the greater the chance for error."

Baird's plain vanilla concept has worked neapolitan wonders at East Carolina. An example of this "building on the positive" follows.

"In a recent outing freshman Bob Davidson did not have his good stuff, but was throwing the ball 86 miles-per-hour," relates Baird. "A few errors were committed behind him and he lost the ballgame. I told him if he could still get people out with mediocre stuff while throwing an 86 mile-per-hour fastball, then just think what he could do on a good day. He'll get people out with mediocre stuff at 86."

Another example concerns senior ace Bill Wilder, a side-armer a la Ken Tekulve, who holds eight Pirates pitching records after coming to ECU as a walk-on.

"I'm not minimizing Bill's physical ability," says Baird, "but his most impressive attribute is his desire and intensity to compete and to do it against the best teams we play. We use Bill's mental game to our advantage."

Besides the mental part of the game, Baird believes in the basic art of throwing strikes.

"If you can throw strikes," notes Baird, "then you can win. But they have to be moving strikes. We teach strikes and then work backwards. We'll master other things after mastering the moving strike.

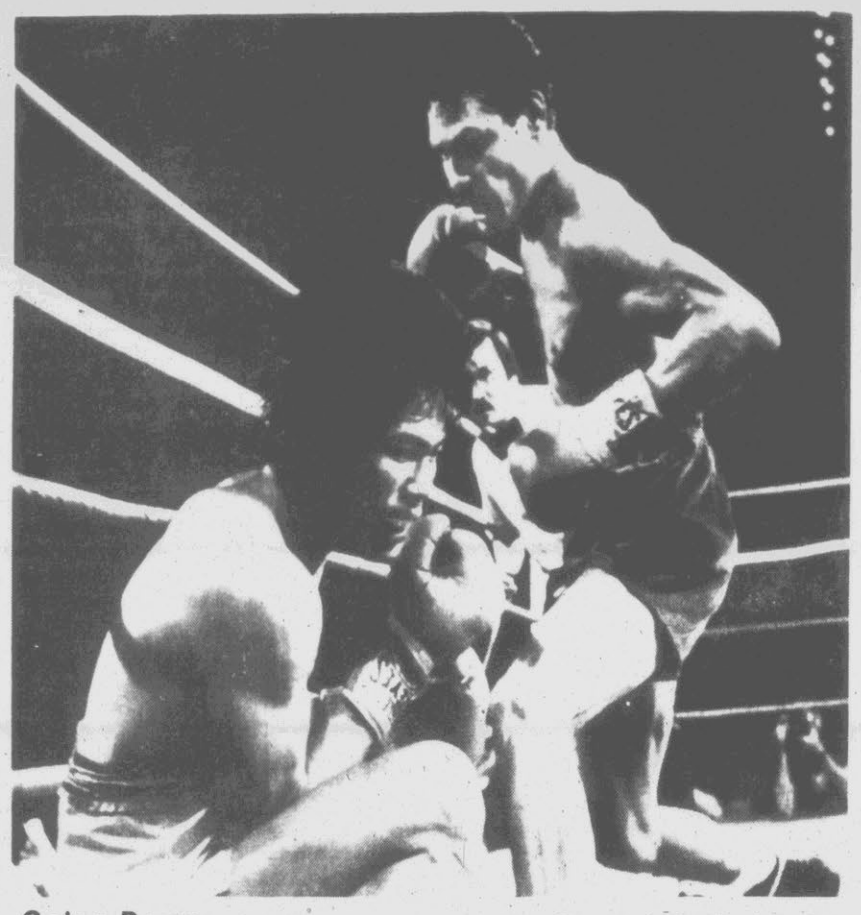
"A case in point is senior lefthander Bob Patterson. Patterson came here with an excellent curve, a straight fastball and a change. We taught him the moving fastball, he mastered it for strikes and today he's a completely different pitcher."

The size of the pitching staff and the frequency of when the pitchers throw also concerns Baird. A small staff and less off-time between innings is the rule.

"I believe in carrying a smaller staff," he said. "You are able to work with them more and everybody knows two things; one, they'll pitch more, and two, they will get more attention. I like to carry between seven and nine pitchers. A lot of people carry 12 to 13. My philosophy is partly by design and partly by money. But ideally I like to have six or seven ready to go with two or three grooming for next year.

"And we throw our pitchers with more frequency. We condition them so they can come back in two or three days. Some teams desire an entire week, but our philosophy afford them more mound time. The day after an appearance we have them run a lot of distance. The second day is a little less run and some throwing to gain rhythm. The third day he's throwing, though short, to gain explosiveness, and the fourth day, he's on schedule."

Whatever the rotation, the ball seems to be spinning in the right direction for Baird and his staff. After all, at 33-12 thus far this year and being ranked for two weeks at number one in ERA, the ball has come back in the final inning with very few marks on it.



Going Down

World Boxing Council lightweight champion Alex Arguello retained his title Saturday afternoon at the Aladdin Hotel in Las Vegas as he pummeled challenger Andy Ganigan to the canvas in the fifth round of their bout. Referee Carlos Padilla watches the knockdown from the background. (AP Laserphoto)

Arguello Comes Back To Win On Knock Out

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Alexis Arguello, knocked down by a powerful left hook in the first round, came back at the 2:59 of the fifth round to knock out challenger Andrew Ganigan and successfully defend his World Boxing Council lightweight title.

Arguello stunned Ganigan with two rights in the final round before catching him in the corner with a combination left-right that wobbled the challenger.

The challenger lay prone on the canvas for several minutes after referee Carlos Padilla counted him out.

Ganigan, 135, kept Arguello, 134¾, off balance with his southpaw style in the first round and late in the round rushed in and caught the champion with a left hook that knocked him down.

But Arguello quickly got up, took the mandatory eight count and was able to finish the round.

In the third round, Arguello unleashed a right lead that put down Ganigan. He took the eight count, but Arguello hurt him again with a right that bounced the challenger off the ropes.

Ganigan came back with a left hook of his own that stunned Arguello in the fast paced round. But Arguello again rocketed Ganigan with a right into the ropes as the round ended.

Arguello began to find the range in the third round and was able to hit the challenger at will with flurries of left jabs and right hands.

For Arguello, one of only six fighters to win titles in three different weight divisions, it was his 19th consecutive title fight victory.

The Nicaraguan native, now living in Miami, Fla., won the lightweight title last June from James Watt and sucessfully defended it four times, all by knockout.

Sally Little Finds Rain To Her Liking

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y. (AP) — Sally Little, unlike most of the field, found a heavy rain to her liking and shot a one-under-par 71 Saturday to go with her opening-day 68 to grab a three-stroke lead after 36 holes on the Ladies Professional Golf Association $150,000 Chrysler-Plymouth Classic at the Wykagyl Country Club.

Little, a 30-year-old South African whose three wins and earnings of $125,084 this year lead the tour, heads into Sunday's final 18 holes with her closest opponent relatively unknown Kathy Morse.

The 25-year-old Morse of Albany, N.Y., tied for third with a 70 after 18 holes, shot a par-72 over the 6,084-yard course for a 142.

Myra Van Hoose had a 73, Vicki Tabor a 74 and Donna Caponi a 75 to share third place at 145.

Amy Alcott, who started the day one off the pace with a first-day 69, wound up with a 77 Saturday, which included a two-stroke penalty for slow play. It was the second such assessment of the round. Debbie Massey, who wound up with an 80—153, also was penalized.

Alcott, who birdied the 18th hole, finds herself in a four-way tie for fifth place with Judy Rankin, Sandra Spuzich and Susie McAllister. Spuzich and McAllister had 72s, one stroke better than Rankin.

Scores were high after the afternoon rains and accompanying winds. However, play was never suspended. A 71 by Pat Bradley, who is now at 146, was the only other sub-par score of the day.

Alcott moved into a tie with Little on the opening hole when the South African bogeyed. Then Morse, who was in a third place deadlock with Caponi after opening day, brought about a three-way deadlock on the second hole with her only birdie of the afternoon.

However, Little pulled ahead on the third hole with a birdie, her first of four for the round. She also birdied the ninth, 10th and 13th holes, more than offsetting a bogey on the 12th as she easily pulled away from the field.

"The rain spoiled my momentum," said Little. "I just wanted to grab a club, hit the ball and get back under the umbrella.

"My momentum was probably the biggest thing as the cold also got to me. I'm not used to playing in this kind of weather and I'm sure the rest of the girls didn't enjoy it either."

Game Set For Pitt

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pitt says it plans to install permanent lights at its stadium, but it won't be in time for the Panthers' season opener with North Carolina this fall.

As a result, the nationally televised game by CBS between the two football powers will be played at Three Rivers Stadium on Sept. 9.

Pitt officials said Friday that permanent lights will be installed at Pitt Stadium in time for the 1983 season at a cost totaling millions of dollars. The lights will enable the Panthers to play night games and late afternoon games at the stadium, opening up its schedule to national television.

The cost of the lights will be amortized over several years, but Pitt officials believe revenue from their TV appearances will more than pay for the expense.

Under the new NCAA television contract involving CBS and ABC, a school will be permitted six appearances on television every two years.

For each nationally televised game, a school will earn between $500,000 and $550,000. For switching a game, like Pitt did with North Carolina, the networks pay $700,000.

Pitt officials feared they would lose TV dates if they switched to Three Rivers Stadium every time a night game was proposed.

"We need flexibility if we're going to be competitive for the television dollars," said Dean Billick, the school's associate athletic director.

"We feel Pittsburgh is a Saturday night town," he added.

Despite Pitt's successful football team during the past several years, attendance has not been good.

Only three of the Panthers' home games consistently are sellouts — those against Penn State, West Virginia and Notre Dame.

Hall Of Fame Golf In Jeopardy

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — The status of the Hall of Fame tournament here is in jeopardy for the second year in a row — this time the problem lies in the condition of the greens on the course used for the PGA event.

The $250,000 tournament is scheduled Sept. 16-19 on the Pinehurst Country Club's No. 2 course, according to the Professional Golfers' Association schedule. But that schedule may be altered or revised because of poor green conditions on the No. 2 course may cause it to be closed.

"We have not secured the No. 2 course for the tournament," said Michael Dann, director of the Hall of Fame tournament who also serves as executive director of the World Golf Hall of Fame.

"We are still negotiating, but there appears to be a problems with the availablity of the course."

The tournament was nearly canned a year ago because of severe financial difficulties. Only a last-ditch fund-raising effort and budget trimming kept it from being ditched, but the tournament enjoyed a successful September run that attracted record crowds.

Financial problems still plague the tournament. The World Golf Hall of Fame, which benefits from the tournament's proceeds, is $320,000 in debt to Pinehurst Inc.

But the condition of the greens is this year's major obstacle, and only a verbal commitment ties the No. 2 layout with the Hall of Fame Tournament. The problem is that Pinehurst Inc., which owns all six golf courses in the Pinehurst Country Club complex, is considering completely closing down the No. 2 course in July.

Pinehurst Inc. has developed plans to convert the Bermuda greens at the No. 2 back to bentgrass. The poor condition of the greens was a source of controversy and conversation among the touring pros before last year's Hall of Fame Tournament, and the continuing deterioration has brought Pinehurst Inc. to the brink of cancelling play on the course.

Currin Grabs Atlanta Pole

FLOWERY BRANCH, Ga. (AP) — Veteran Phil Currin took his first-ever profesional racing pole position Saturday while setting a record for Trans-Am machines at 102.568 mph.

Currin, of Gainesville, Fla., broke the record 100.36 mph set by J. Marshall Robbins in 1973. Currin will start first in Sunday's Trans-Am portion of the G.E. Silicone Grand Prix at Road Atlanta.

Following Currin was Chris Gleason of Johnstown, Pa., in a Pontiac Trans-Am at 102.361 mph.

Local favorite Doc Bundy of Gainesville, Ga., will be the fifth starter in a Porsche 924 Turbo after turning a 100.963 lap.

Maler's Slam Leads Seattle

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Rookie Jim Maler slugged a grand slam homer to cap a seven-run rally with two out in the third inning, and Gene Nelson tossed a four-hitter to give the Seattle Mariners a 7-1 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers Saturday.

Nelson, 2-6, walked four and struck out two in the first complete game of his career, helping Seattle break a three-game losing streak and handing the Brewers their eighth defeat in 12 games.

Bud Bulling began the Mariners big inning with an infield single, and Paul Serna bunted for a hit with two out against loser Randy Lerch, 3-4. Al Cowens was hit by a pitch, and Gary Gray singled home two runs.

Todd Cruz followed with an RBI single, and Dave Henderson reached base when shortstop Robin Yount fumbled his grounder for an error to reload the bases, making the next four runs unearned. Maler lined Lerch's first pitch to him into the left field bleachers for his fourth homer of the year and first career grand slam.

The Brewers had a chance to chase Nelson early but managed only one run in the first inning after loading the bases with one out on successive walks to Gorman Thomas, Cecil Cooper and Don Money. Thomas scored when Ben Oglivie grounded into a forceout at second and beat the relay to first. Yount then grounded out to end the inning.

Tigers Take 5-1 Victory

DETROIT (AP) — Jack Morris pitched five no-hit innings and teamed with Dave Tobik on a two-hitter to pace the Detroit Tigers to a 5-1 victory over the California Angels Saturday.

Lance Parrish provided the offensive spark with a two-run triple as the Tigers won for the ninth time in their past 10 games. Detroit had an eight-game winning streak snapped Friday, losing the series opener to California, 7-9.

Morris, 6-3, allowed only one baserunner, on a second-inning walk to Reggie Jackson, until shortstop Tim Foli homered for the first time this year on the first pitch of the sixth inning. Foli also had California's other hit, an eighth-inning single off Tobik.

Morris was replaced at the start of the eighth inning by Tobik. Morris had complained of a stiff shoulder.

The Tigers took a 1-0 lead in the second inning when Tom Brookens grounded into a fielder's choice, scoring Larry Herndon.

Parrish drove in Mike Ivie and Herndon when he tripled down the right-field line with one out in the fourth, chasing California starter Angel Moreno, 2-6.

In the Detroit fifth, Lou Whitaker drew a walk off reliever Luis Sanchez, moved to third on a wild pitch and scored on a groundout.

Enos Cabell's RBI single in the seventh made it 5-1.

The Optimists pushed over a run in the bottom of the fifth inning to claim a 2-1 North State Little League victory over Sportsworld Saturday.

Sportsworld struck first, getting a run in the third inning, but the Optimists matched that in the fourth, tying it up.

Then, in the bottom of the fifth, the winning run came over. Kelson Galloway singled to open the inning, moving up on a pair of outs. He scored when Jeff Mahoney singled for the 2-1 win.

Mahoney led the Optimist hitting with two, while John Parker had two for Sportsworld.

Kiwanis 6
Jaycees 2

Robbie McDonald cracked out a double and a home run to pace the Kiwanis to a 6-2 victory over the Jaycees yesterday in the North State Little League.

The Kiwanis grabbed the lead in the first, scoring once. Then, in the third, they scored three more to put the game on ice.

Charlie Crandal singled and Jon Chambliss walked. McDonald reached on an error, scoring Crandal, and Curtis Jones hit a sacrifice fly to score Chambliss. McDonald scored on a wild pitch.

The other two came over in the fifth, one of them on McDonald's homer.

Both of the Jaycee runs scored in the bottom of the fifth as Brian Wille cracked a two-run homer.

McDonald and Kraig Butler each had two hits to lead the Kiwanis, while the Jaycees got only two off the pitching of McDonald.

Wellcome 10
True Value 6

Wellcome rallied for eight runs in the bottom of the fifth inning, including a homer run by Dallas McPherson to pull out a 10-6 victory over True Value Hardware yesterday in the Tar Heel Little League.

Wellcome got the lead in the first inning, scoring once, but True Value came back with three in the third then added two more in the fourth. Wellcome got one in the fourth and trailed, 5-2.

But in the bottom of the fifth, Wellcome exploded. David Best led off with a walk and John Uhlman walked also. After one was out, Greg VanScoy singled and McPherson provided the power with a home run. Chris Brown kept it going with a triple, and Matthew Perry walked and stole up. Adam Teel doubled in both runners but was thrown out trying to stretch it into a triple. Joseph Morris reached on an error and walked. An error helped both runners come around with the final runs of the frame.

The final True Value run came in the sixth.

VanScoy, McPherson and Teel each had two hits for Wellcome, while no one had more than one for True Value.

First Federal 12
Carroll & Assoc. 5

First Federal got three hits from Stacy Best, one of them a homer, to power to a 12-5 victory over Carroll & Associates yesterday in the Tar Heel Little League.

First Federal picked up two runs in the first, while Carroll got one.

First Federal then came back with five in the second to put the game away. Stephen Meeks led off with a walk and Maurice Dyer reached on an error. John Bolen walked to load the bases and Mark Holloman reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Meeks. Best then cracked a homer to finish up the scoring.

First Federal added one in the fourth, one in the fifth and four in the sixth.

Carroll added one in the second, one in the fourth and two in the sixth.

Billy Carr led Carroll's hitting with two.

Oaktree Edwards To Defend Karate Title

Demetrius "Oaktree" Edwards will defend his Professional Karate Association World Heavyweight crown against sixth-ranked Anthony Elmore Saturday, May 29, in Memphis, Tenn., it has been announced.

Edwards, a native of Ayden, comes into the fight with a 37-2-1 record. Of his 37 victories, 28 have been by knockout.

Edwards fought Elmore August 12 and earned a split decision over the Memphis, Tenn., fighter. Elmore was ranked 10th in the world at the time and has since moved up to sixth.

That bout was a nontitle fight. The return match will be for the crown.

Edwards comes into the fight having fought once in each of the last three months, winning twice on third-round knockouts.

The title bout will be televised on a delayed basis on Saturday, June 12, by ESPN.

Edwards is one of four kick-boxers on the card who are trained by Greenville trainer Bill McDonald. All four fighters are ranked among the top 10 in the world by PKA — the only time in history any trainer has had four fighters ranked in the top 10 in the world at the same time.

Dale Frye, ranked fifth in the world in the super-lightweight division, will fight the Arkansas state title holder. Frye is 12-3, all three losses coming when he has moved up to fight in heavier weight classes.

Curtis Crandall, ranked 10th in the world in the light-heavyweight class, will go up a weight class and fight the Tennessee heavyweight champ. Crandall is 9-3, all three losses coming to fighters ranked in the top 10.

Lonnie Grady, ranked eighth in the world, will fight a top-ranked contender in the welterweight class. Grady is from Kinston.

Full-contact karate, or kick-boxing, combines the kicks and speed of karate and the power punches of boxing. Each fighter is required to throw a minimum of eight above-the-waist kicks per round.

On Edwards' Card

Curtis Crandall (left) and Dale Frye (right) join hands with their trainer, Bill McDonald, as they look forward to fighting on the card with fellow kick-boxer Demetrius "Oaktree" Edwards. Frye is ranked fifth in the world and Crandall is 10th.

Teltscher Gains Italian Net Finals

ROME (AP) — Eliot Teltscher reached the finals of the $300,000 Italian Tennis Open after a see-saw 6-4, 3-6, 6-3 battle Saturday with unseeded Pablo Arraya of Peru.

The American, ranked 10th in the world and seeded fourth here, will meet Andres Gomez of Ecuador in Sunday's final at the Foro Italico.

The hard-hitting 6-foot-5 Gomez beat 17-year-old Mats Wilander of Sweden 5-7, 6-4, 6-3, reeling off six straight games after Wilander appeared to have control of the match.

The 23-year-old Teltscher acknowledged that Gomez may have one of the best forehands in the game and said he would try to keep the ball deep against him.

"Anything short and it's gone," said Teltscher, who lost to Gomez in Houston last year in their only previous meeting.

Teltscher, the highest ranked seed left in the tournament after a series of early round upsets, is the first American to reach the Rome finals since Vitas Gerulaitis won here in 1979.

Against Arraya, a 20-year-old Peruvian, Teltscher said he lost his concentration in the second set and never was able to gain control.

He wrapped up the third set after breaking his opponent's service in the second game.

In his match, Gomez said he decided to take some risks in an all-or-nothing attempt to win after the young Swede jumped out to an early advantage.

Wilander, one of the youngest player ever to reach the semifinals in Rome, appeared headed for victory when he won the first set and then broke Gomez's service in the first game of the second set.

The Swede, staying deep at the baseline and keeping the ball away from Gomez's powerful forehand, moved out to a 4-2 lead and had two break points in the seventh game.

But at that point Gomez turned the match around, saving his serve and then reeling off the next five games to capture a spot in the finals.

"I lost my concentration," Wilander admitted after the match. "Maybe I was already thinking of winning."

Wilander's game has been compared to that of fellow Swede Bjorn Borg, who won the Italian title at the age of 17 at the start of his brilliant career.

But against Gomez, th youngster had trouble scoring with his smashes and rarely moved up to the net on attack.

"Even if I played more agggressively, I don't think it would have made any difference," Wilander said.

N. Durham Tops Meet

RAEFORD, N.C. (AP) — Northern Durham placed first, second and third in three relay races Friday to take a narrow 34-31 victory over Jacksonville in the state High School Athletic Association girl's track and field team championship.

Northern Durham finished third in the final event — the 1,600-meter relay — to overtake the Cardinals in the championship at Hoke High School. Jacksonville had beaten the Knights by one point in last week's Eastern Regional meet.

Northern Durham's time of 1:41.01 won the 800-meter relay and team member Mamie Wilson, 100-meter state record holder, ran the 200 in 24.57 seconds to nip Jacksonville's Pat Braxton by .19 seconds. Wilson, a senior, had been disqualified for false starts in the 100.

In other events, Richmond County's Kathy Ormsby came from behind in the 1,600-meter run to set a state record at 4:58.94 and defeat Delphine Mabry of SouthWest Edgecombe.

Other state records were set by East Forsyth in the 400 relay with 48.01, Tanya White of Greensboro Page in the 400-meter dash with 56.5 and High Point Andrews in the 1,600-meter relay with 3:58.06.

The only double winner was Fayetteville Smith's Colette. Williams in the triple jump and the 100-meter low hurdles.

BASKETBALL TOUGH

LAFAYETTE, La. (AP) — Raissa Prince, a guard on the Southwestern Louisiana women's basketball team, doesn't believe basketball is a much milder sport than riding in a rodeo.

Before enrolling at Southwestern Louisiana, Prince competed in a number of national high-school rodeos. She never incurred any kind of a hobbling injury.

In the 1981-82 basketball season, her first in college, things were different. She suffered an ankle injury in midseason which sidelined her for three weeks.

Guthrie: Wilson Has No Chance

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Janet Guthrie, the female pioneer at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, gives the second woman to drive at the 2½-mile oval no chance for victory in the 1982 race.

"Desire Wilson is a very good driver, but there's not a prayer she's going to win this race this year," said Guthrie after the car she drove in becoming the first woman to try and qualify here was presented to the Indianapolis Motor Speedway Hall of Fame.

Guthrie, 44, still hopes to return to Indy as a driver.

"I have someone working to put together a package for next year and that person is optimistic, so I'm optimistic of returning," she said.

The turbo-charged Vollstedt Guthrie drove was presented to the museum Friday.

"I had not planned to come back during the period of the race but when Bryant Heating (her sponsor in 1976) called about donating the car, I was delighted," she said. "The car brings back a lot of memories."

Guthrie, whose best finish at Indianapolis was ninth in 1978, has mixed emotions about her debut at the track.

"It was a very trying period of time because of all the commotion, hostility and scepticism," she said. "But it was also a rewarding period of time because of the people I was working with...the car owner, the chief mechanic and the sponsor. We all worked together to try and make the car go faster."

Guthrie said she hoped Wilson, who was her teammate earlier this year at Sebring in an endurance race, would be able to make the 33-car field for the May 30 race.

"But I don't think her success or failure at Indianapolis will have any effect on my hopes for Indianapolis. Desire is capable of winning at Indianapolis but her problem, and mine, is money. You've simply got to find the funding to put together the type of program used by the winning teams," said Guthrie.

Nigerian Sprinter Aids Azusa Pacific

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (AP) — A Niverian sprinter with world-class speed and a weight man from California who will soon try to become a pro football lineman are the main reasons why Azusa Pacific took a big lead into Saturday's finals of the NAIA outdoor championship track meet.

Innocent Egbanike, a freshman who ran for Nigeria's Olympic team in the 1980 Moscow Olympics as a 17-year-old, upset NAIA record holder Darrell Green of Texas A&I in Friday night's 100-meter dash finals to provide Azusa Pacific woth 10 key points. Four more points were added by weight man Doug Barnett, a 6-foot-4, 245-pound Los Angeles Rams' draftee who finished fourth in the shot put after winning the hammer throw Thursday.

After Egbanike tied Green's 1-day-old record of 10.32 seconds in the 100 meters to win the first of what he hopes will be two spring championships this weekend, the first person to greet him was Barnett.

"Some people don't think you can have a team concept in track, but we do," said Azusa Pacific Coach Terry Franson, whose team took 49 points in Friday's events to 24 for runner-up Abilene Christian.

"We're very team oriented. When one guy is competing, all of the other guys are yelling for him."

Franson said Azusa Pacific, a Christian college landed Egbanike through one of its missionaries in Africa. He said Egbanike is very religious and the only way his parents would let him attend college in the United States was at a school that stresses religion.

"I won because I have God-given talent," Egbanike said after holding off Green in the 100. "I was relaxing in the trials, waiting for this. And I am going to coast in the 200 until the finals."

Franson, Azusa Pacific's second-year coach, said Egbanike has the potential to be among the world's top sprinters.

"He's already beaten runners such as Donald Quarrie and Greg Foster," Franson said. "The only runners he's lost to this year have been Carl Lewis and Jeff Phillips, and he would have beaten Phillips in the 200 last week at UCLA if he hadn't misjudged the finish line."

While some schools took vans to Charleston and others came by plane, Azusa Pacific did both. Franson worked out a "super saver" air fare for his 21-member team from Los Angeles to Indianapolis, and the team then drove the remaining seven hours of the trip to Charleston. This is just the second time the NAIA meet has been held outside the West or Midwest.

"It cost us $10,000 to come here, even though we didn't fly all the way," Franson said.

Abilene Christian expected to score well on Saturday, especially in the pole vault, since the Texas school has world indoor record holder Billy Olson and defending champion in Brad Pursley. And that worries Franson.

"Our two big days are over, though I really expect Innocent to win the 200 and run a great time," he said. "It's a catch-up game from here. We'll just try to hold on."

Robert Thomas of Prairie View edged State Parker of Abilene Christian to win the 100-meter hurdles Friday in a photo finish. In the NAIA indoor meet earlier this year, Parker — who had set meet records during the outdoor trials this week — was the winner over Thomas.

"I knew I had to get him (Parker) out of the blocks," said Thomas.

Other men's winners included Mike Manders of Hanline in the shot put, David MoFadgen of Virginia State in the triple jump and Mel McGinnis of Spring Arbor in the grueling 10,000 meter walk.

New Format For NAIA

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — A new basketball playoff format has been approved by the National Association of Intercollegiate Association's District 6 to allow 18 member schools to compete for the district championship.

The district's executive board voted 9-1 Friday to change from an 8-team format determined by the Krause Kount to the 18-team playoffs.

Under the new format, the fifth and sixth seeded teams will receive first round byes with the top four teams automatically advancing to the quarterfinals.

First round action is set for Feb. 28, 1983, with the second round on March 1 and the quarterfinals on March 3.

The final four teams will meet for the semifinals on March 8 at the Carolina Coliseum in Columbia with the district championship slated for March 9, also in Columbia.

In other activities, the 10-member board approved the women's 8-team playoff procedure with the championship set for March 5. The playoff site has yet to be determined.

The women's seeding will be using the Krause Kount for the first time, instead of the Dunkle Ratings used in the past.

The Krause Kount is a weighted point system that factors in the strength of a team's opponents and its scheduled game sites, in addition to the team's won-loss record.

Collins Is Champ

LINVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Tim Collins birdied the first hole of Friday's final round to extend his two-stroke lead and then coasted to a three-shot victory in the Vantage Classic of the Carolinas, the championship of the Carolinas PGA.

Collins, the club pro at the Bermuda Run course in Advance, shot steady rounds of 71-71-70 to finish three strokes up on Mike Bright and four shots ahead of former Professional Golfers Association touring pro Randy Glover.

Bright, the pro at Patriot's Point in Charleston, S.C., had a final round 70 to go with a 70-75 for a 215, one stroke ahead of Glover, the pro at the Wellman Club in Johnsonville, S.C. Collins had to share the spotlight, however, with Stuart Taylor, of Whispering Pines, who set a course and tournament record by firing a 6-under par 66 Friday. Taylor's spectacular round followed an 80 in the second round and an opening 77 for a 223 total.

The victory was worth $2,000 for Collins, while Bright collected $1,250 and Glover received $1,000.

Driver Injured

Rookie driver Phil Krueger of Fullerton, Calif., hits the turn four wall at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway Saturday during practice for qualifications. Krueger suffered a slight concussion and was taken to the hospital for observation after he lost control and slid 420 feet before hitting the wall backwards. The car was damaged extensively. Citadel Star Leads All-Conference

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Citadel first baseman Bill White, who compiled the nation's fourth best college batting average with a .487, is a unanimous choice for the 1982 All-Southern Conference baseball team announced Saturday.

White drove in 75 runs in 44 games to spark the Bulldogs to the league championship and a 38-6 becord, the school's best ever. The senior from Baltimore, Md., was chosen in balloting by eight of the nine conference coaches. The vote was sponsored by the Southern Conference Sports Media Association.

Two other Citadel players — pitcher Jeff Barkley and shortstop Mike Knox — join White on the team. Barkley and Knox are the only repeaters from the 1981 all-Southern Conference team.

Barkley, a senior from Hickory, N.C., posted a 7-3 mark with 58 strikeouts in 70 innings and a 1.68 earned run average. Knox, a junior from Carlisle, Pa., finished second in batting at .433, led in runs scored with 61 and in stolen bases with 37.

East Tennessee State also placed three players on the team — second baseman B.J. Hinson and outfielders Marcus Velazquez and Wayne Dannenberg.

Hinson, a senior from Huntersville, N.C., bounced back from an early season injury to bat .282 with 10 stolen bases and 30 runs. Velazquez, a senior from Charlotte, N.C., ranked fifth in batting average at .419 and first in triples with 10. Meanwhile, Dannenberg, a native of Omaha, Neb., batted .352, with 43 runs and 13 doubles.

Appalachian State's Kirk Bailey joins Barkley on the pitching staff and Virginia Military Institute's Phil Hubbard, a 1980 all-Southern Conference choice, is the catcher.

Bailey posted an 8-4 record with 74 strikeouts in 86 innings and a 1.25 ERA. He joins Hubbard, a junior from Virginia Beach, Va., who placed third in the league in batting at .424.

Marshall's Todd Sager at third base teams with White, Hinson and Knox in the infield. Sager is a sophomore from Huntington, W.Va., who led the league with 16 doubles and batted .358.

Furman senior Terry Smith joins Velazquez and Dannenberg in the outfield and Appalachian's Pete Camelo is the designated hitter.

Smith of Linville, N.C., hit .407 for the season and Camelo of Saranac Lake, N.Y., led the league in home runs with 16.

Earning honorable mention were pitchers Mike Cherry of The Citadel, Jeff Montgomery of Marshall and Randy Sims of Western Carolina; catcher Tim Bailey of East Tennessee State; second baseman Marty Blair of The Citadel; and outfielders Tony Martin of East Tennessee, David Hill and Mel Kinsey, both of Western Carolina.

Red Sox Fans Cheer On Their Celtics

BOSTON (AP) — Nothing was happening on the field, but the fans at Fenway Park were going wild.

They chanted for their heroes and cheered when they won. The strange thing was that the team they were applauding was hundreds of miles away.

"Here we go Celtics, here we go," they yelled in the seventh inning of the Boston Red Sox' 8-7 victory over the Oakland A's Friday night, as the Boston Celtis were going ahead of the 76ers in Philadelphia in their National Basketball Association semi-final playoff.

The Celtics won 88-75 to tie the series 3-3 and force a seventh and deciding game with Philadelphia here Sunday.

"Boston fans are great fans. There's no doubt about it," said Red Sox catcher Rich Gedman. "They get excited about what's going on in Boston. I don't think it's the greatest thing at a baseball game, but I'd probably be doing the same thing."

He said he wasn't upset that the fans were listening to the Celtics on their radios, while the Red Sox were moving into first place in the American League East.

Boston winner Tom Burgmeier said pitchers were listening to the game in the Red Sox bullpen. After he was replaced by Mark Clear in the seventh, he watched the end of the Celtics' game in the clubhouse.

Burgmeier noted that even with the Celtics playing a big game, 29,671 people still showed up for the Red Sox' game.

"That's great," Boston outfielder Dwight Evans said of the fans' reaction to the Celtics' victory. "Ever since I've been here, they've always done that, whether it's for the Celtics or the Bruins.

"It might have broken some people's concentration a little, so you just step out (of the batter's box) for a minute."

Trudi Lacey Still Has Sight Set On Olympic Cage Attempt

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Trudi Lacey never got to be a part of the 1980 Summer Olympics in Moscow, not because the team didn't go, but instead because she was cut from the U.S. women's basketball team.

However, her basketball career flourished, and following two years at North Carolina State and last season as an assistant coach at Manhattan College, her sights are set on the 1984 summer games in Los Angeles.

"So far, it's been a lot of training," Lacey said in a recent interview on the N.C. State campus. "For the last two months, I've put in three or four hours a day."

Lacey says that's necessary because she didn't play much this past winter. She was too busy assisting former Wolfpack star Faye Young. While not playing, she did use the opportunity to pick up some mental pointers.

"I think the coaching aspect really helped," she says. "I can look at other players and what they've been doing wrong and know how things should be done."

Lacey was in that position herself not long ago. Trying out for the 1980 women's squad that didn't get to Moscow taught her a valuable lesson.

"A lot of people said it was because I was 17 pounds lighter and I had gotten hurt," she said. "I don't think I was really prepared."

To avoid making the same mistake, she spends much of her time at N.C. State, working in the weight room and playing basketball.

"This time, I plan to be at my best, no matter what happens," she says. "I have to be mentally prepared to play and I feel like I will."

Lacey had her heart set on a professional basketball career, but those hopes were dashed when the Women's Professional Basketball League folded.

"I felt like I'd get to play," she said. "I didn't necessarily have my heart set on playing pro ball, but I would have liked to have played."

The 5-foot-10 Clifton Forge, Va., native, who established school records for best single-season scoring average and most career free throws, says she's looking forward to getting to the Pan American Games next summer as well as a chance at Los Angeles. First comes the trip to Europe, which begins in The Netherlands on June 11.

If she survives Europe and the Pan Am Games, then comes 1984 and a chance to gain revenge over the team which beat her squad in the World University Games last summer for the gold medal.

"If you want something bad enough, it's worth taking a chance for," Lacey says of her efforts now and in the future. "Regardless of whether I play or whether a lot of people play, I think the '84 team will be a lot better than the '80 team simply because the players are better."

Burden Fails To Show Up

MINEOLA, N.Y. (AP) — Luther "Ticky" Burden, a former New York Knicks guard who was convicted of robbing a Long Island bank, has failed to appear in Nassau County Court to begin serving a prison term.

A bench warrant was issued Friday for Burden, 27, who was sentenced to serve six to 18 years after a jury convicted him in August 1981 of robbing the Guardian Bank of North America in Hempstead, N.Y.

He had been ordered to appear in court Friday to begin serving his sentence, although he is appealing the jury verdict.

Burden was arrested along with three Philadelphia men on July 7, 1980, two days after the robbery, in which $18,000 was taken. The three men pleaded guilty to lesser charges.

He has been free since September 1981 on a $60,000 bond, according to Ed Grilli, spokesman for Nassau County District Attorney Denis Dillon.

During the trial, one of Burden's co-defendants, Michael Elam, said that Burden drove his white Cadillac as a getaway car in the robbery.

Burden, however, maintained he loaned his car to Elam and was at the Falcon's Nest, a bar and disco that he owns in Albany, N.Y., when the robbery occurred.

During the trial Assistant District Attorney Daniel Cotter claimed that Burden needed the money to support his high style of living, although he was receiving deferred salary payments from the Knicks of the National Basketball Association and income from his bar.

Burden, a former high school basketball star in Albany, played college basketball for Utah. He spent the 1975-76 season with the Virginia Squires of the American Basketball Association and joined the Knicks as a guard the next year.

He appeared in 61 games and averaged 5.7 points with the Knicks in 1976-77. The following season, he played in only two games.

Colts' Woods Shot In Robbery

CLEVELAND (AP) — Baltimore Colts linebacker Mike Woods was in guarded condition after suffering a "severe injury to the spinal cord" in a shooting during a robbery, police and hospital officials said.

Woods, 27, was taken to Mt. Sinai Medical Center after the incident late Friday morning.

A medical center employee, who would not give her name, said Woods was conscious, but she did not know if he was paralyzed.

"Whether he will improve or not is problematic," she said.

Police said the assailant escaped with three gold rings, a gold and diamond watch, a gold necklace and a pendant. The stolen goods were valued at $3,150.

Woods reportedly was shot in the nape of the neck, with the bullet striking his spinal cord. A police spokeswoman, however, said she did not have a detailed account of the incident.

Some reports said Woods was shot at his father's Cleveland home, while others said the incident happened at an "after-hours establishment" on Cleveland's east side.

Woods has been a starter for the Colts most of the past two seasons.

Colts General Manager Ernie Accorsi said the National Football League team was having trouble Friday night learning the specifics of the incident and Woods' condition.

"We're not getting that much information on it," he said. "It's difficult for us. We're very concerned. He missed a couple games last year because of minor injuries, but he's been a regular for us. Of course, now, we're concerned for the person, not the football player."

Woods was Baltimore's second-round selection in the 1978 NFL draft, but he missed his rookie season because of a back injury.

He played in all 16 of the team's games as a reserve linebacker in 1979, and he started in 12 of his 13 appearances in 1980, missing three other games because of a knee injury.

Briton In The Lead

GOTZIS, Austria (AP) — Briton Daley Thompson, who set a record total of 8,622 points here two years ago, Saturday led with a fantastic 4,632 points halfway through his attempt at a world decathlon record at an international track meet here.

Competing in the absence of world record-holder Guido Kratschmer of West Germany, Thompson's intermediate total was 146 points beyond his 1980 achievement that was bettered by the West German to 8,649 four weeks later.

In the women's seven-event competition, Jane Frederik of the United States was the intermediate leader after four events with 3,702 points.

Lea's Performance Gives Him Lift

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Since pitching a no-hitter last year, Montreal's Charlie Lea has struggled with elbow problems.

But his performance Friday night certainly gave him a shot in the arm.

"I don't want to have to sit and watch the team play like I did last year," said Lea after pitching the Expos to a 2-0 victory over the Cincinnati Reds with Woodie Fryman's relief help in the ninth.

Lea had a no-hitter going until giving up a single to Dan Driessen with one out in the sixth. He was lifted after giving up another single to Driessen leading off the ninth.

Pitching virtually pain-free, Lea struck out four and walked six for his second victory against two losses. He saw similarities between Friday night's victory and his 4-0 no-hitter against San Francisco on May 10, 1981.

"In the no-hit game, I walked four guys and got in jams I had to get out of," Lea said. "I had to do the same thing tonight, so it reminds me of that game."

Driessen's first hit, by the way, loaded the bases for the Reds, who had put runners on by a walk and second baseman Tim Raines' throwing error on a grounder. But Lea got the next two batters to take third strikes.

"He (Lea) threw 134 pitches," said Expos Manager Jim Fanning. "He threw very well, but I had made up my mind that if there was any little problem in the ninth, I was going to bring in a fresh arm."

Lea also helped his cause with a pair of hits, including an RBI single in the second inning.

Elsewhere in the National League, it was St. Louis 6, Los Angeles 3; Houston 5, New York 1; Atlanta 7, Philadelphia 6; San Diego 7, Pittsburgh 5 and Chicago 6, San Francisco 4.

Cardinals 6, Dodgers 3

Ken Oberkfell drove in three runs with three singles and Steve Mura scattered five hits in 81-3 innings as St. Louis beat Los Angeles.

The Cardinals overcame a three-run Dodger first inning, knocking out Los Angeles starter Jerry Reuss in the sixth, when they scored three times. The loss was the third straight for Reuss, 4-4.

The Cardinals scored twice in the fourth inning on Oberkfell's two-out, two run single. St. Louis tied it in the fifth when Ozzie Smith doubled with one out, took third ona groundout and scored on a wild pitch.

St. Louis broke the tie in the sixth when Reuss walked Lonnie Smith with one out, then gave up successive singles to Tito Landrum, Oberkfell and Glenn Brummer.

Mura, 4-3, walked three and struck out two before needing relief help in the ninth from Bruce Sutter, who gained his 12th save.

Astros 5, Mets 1

Don Sutton scattered six hits in eight innings and became the first NL pitcher to win seven games this year in Houston's victory over New York.

Sutton, 7-1, struck out seven and walked three in posting his fifth straight victory against New York. Frank LaCorte pitched the ninth inning for the Astros.

Alan Ashby drove in two runs for the Astros, one with a single in the fourth and another with a sacrifice fly in the sixth.

Mike Scott, 3-3, was the losing pitcher.

Braves 7, Phillies 6

Chris Chambliss drove in the tying run, then scored the game-winner on third baseman Mike Schmidt's error in the seventh inning as Atlanta beat Philadelphia.

After trailing early by five runs, the Braves rallied for four runs in the fifth inning and another in the sixth before Claudell Washington led off the seventh with a single. He was sacrificed to second and scored on Chambliss' single to tie the game 6-6.

Chambliss took second on Dale Murphy's single, reached third when Bob Horner flied to center and came home when Schmidt bobbled Bruce Benedict's grounder.

Reliever Steve Bedrosian, 3-0, gained the victory, holding the Phillies scoreless over the final three innings.

Padres 7, Pirates 5

Ruppert Jones hit a pair of run-scoring singles and San Diego used some shoddy Pittsburgh fielding to beat the Pirates. The Pirates made two errors, leading to three unearned San Diego runs.

John Montefusco, 2-4, hurled the first six innings and got his first win since April 21 with relief help. Pittsburgh starter Eddie Solomon, 1-5, gave up nine hits and three runs in the five innings he worked.

Jones had an RBI single in the first inning to extend his hitting streak to 10 games and another run-scoring hit in the fifth, when the Padres took a 3-0 lead. The Padres scored their eventual winning runs in the eighth, on a suicide squeeze by Tim Flannery and Garry Templeton's RBI triple. That gave San Diego a 7-2 lead and helped the Padres withstand a three-run rally by the Pirates in the ninth.

Cubs 6, Giants 4

Pinch-hitter Gary Woods broke a 3-3 tie with a two-run double during a five-run, seventh inning, giving Chicago its victory over San Francisco.

The Cubs had only two hits and an unearned run off San Francisco starter Renie Martin, 0-1, and trailed 3-1 before their game-breaking rally in the seventh.

The victory went to Dick Tidrow, 1-0, who pitched the sixth. Lee Smith, Willie Hernandez and Bill Campbell finished on the mound for the Cubs.

Awaiting The Verdict

Brodhead LSU Pick

BATON ROUGE, a. (AP) — Robert Brodhead, the director of finances for the Miami Dolphins, has been named to head Louisiana State University's financially troubled athletic department.

"We will very quickly win again in football, and we will continue to win in basketball," Brodhead said Friday. "The time span will be short. I'm an impatient person. We don't have the time allotted to us with the impatience of this area's fans. The timetable is immediate," he said.

LSU finished 3-7-1 in football last fall, its worst record in 25 years.

Brodhead, 44, said he will consider restructuring the department as well as instituting yearly financial audits.

But he did not announce any staff changes in his department, which is expected to lose $1 million in the current fiscal year.

Chancellor James Wharton said Brodhead, 44, signed a three-year contract at $69,500 a year and would become the Tigers' new athletic director on June 1. He replaces Paul Dietzel, who was ousted Feb. 5 after massive deficits turned up in the hitherto solvent athletic program.

Dietzel is now paid $66,000 annually as assistant to Martin Woodin, president of the LSU system. His contract expires at the end of June.

LSU's board of supervisors approved Brodhead's hiring 13-1 after an 80-minute closed door session.

Leonard Out For 6-8 Weeks

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Kansas City Royals right-hander Dennis Leonard will be lost from six to eight weeks after breaking two fingers on his pitching hand when he tried to protect his face from a line drive.

The club was expected to announce a roster move before Saturday night's game with the Texas Rangers in Kansas City.

The Royals turned Buddy Bell's line drive into a double play in a 3-0 win over Texas Friday night. After the ball hit Leonard, second baseman Frank White caught it at knee level and then doubled Mike Richardt off second base.

"I've been thinking for four days what could happen next," said Rangers Manager Don Zimmer, whose team has lost 20 of its last 24 games. "I didn't think there was anything, but we found something new.

"You break a pitcher's hand, the ball never hits the ground and you got a double play."

The injury to Leonard, 5-3 after being credited with the victory, left the Royals with only three starting pitchers. Vida Blue pulled a leg muscle in his last start and is out for an indefinite period.

Leonard, who had pitched an average of 273 innings a year in the five years before strike-shortened 1981, had missed a start earlier this season with a sprained ankle. And he tore a hamstring in spring training.

Injuries to Royals regulars have knocked players out of the lineup 18 times in 37 games this season.

Renew Your Boat Registration Locally — Are you in a hurry to put your boat in the water? If so, it's best to renew your certificate of number at one of over 200 boat registration agents located throughout the State.

If you mailed your registration or renewal to Raleigh, allow four weeks for it to be processed and returned. However, owners of new and transferred boats don't need to give up boating waiting for the mailman.

New boat owners may obtain a 30-day temporary registration certificate for newly acquired boats, boats that have never been registered, and used boats with expired registrations. To obtain a temporary certificate they must present a notarized bill of sale and their application for transfer to a local registration agent.

"An unusually heavy work load has caused a backlog of boat registrations and transfers to accumulate in Raleigh," said Helen Gournas, supervisor of the Motorboat Registration Section of the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission. "The quickest way for boaters to handle renewals is through a local agent. This year we're swamped with renewals and registrations because six years ago we began issuing three-year registrations in addition to annual registrations. This year marks the second anniversary of the initial three-year renewals. We're looking at ways to ease this problem in future years."

Boat registration agents are located throughout the state, and signs are exhibited at their place of business. In Greenville, Bond's Sporting Goods on Arlington Blvd. is the local boat registration agent.

Fishing Report

Bluewater Fishing Season — has started off the Carolina coast. The first blue marlin of the season were caught off Oregon Inlet this past weekend. A 605-pound blue was caught on Sunday aboard the Miss Boo II operating out of Oregon Inlet.

Catches have also been reported from Hatteras signaling the start of the billfishing season.

Freshwater — Freshwater fishing has settled down to what I call the summertime syndrome: good catches reported every now and then. Nothing to report this week.

Saltwater — As mentioned earlier, the billfishing season has started off the coast. Elsewhere on the Outer Banks, flounder, croaker, spot, gray trout and sea mullet are being caught on the piers and in the surf.

What's The Law On . . .

What's the law on...obtaining a motorboat certificate of number?

The number issued to a vessel is shown on the Certificate of Number. This pocket-size registration card is issued by the Wildlife Resources Commission upon receipt of a completed application form and a check or money order for the appropriate numbering fee. The certificate must be on board whenever the vessel is in use.

A certifioate of number may be obtained for either a one-year period or a three-year period, at the option of the owner. In addition to the certificate, the Wildlife Resources Commission supplies a validation decal which indicates the last month and year during which the certificate is valid. The certificate of number must be renewed on or before the first day of the month following the month of expiration.

Renewal notices are mailed to all owners of numbered motorboats. These notices, when properly filled out and signed by the boat owners, may be used a application forms for renewal of certificates of number. These notices can be either returned to the Wildlife Resources Commission, together with a check or money order for the specified renewal fee, or taken to an approved boat registration agent.

Approved local boat registration agents are Ayden Sport Shop, Farmville Hardward, Manning Supply Co. in Bethel, and Bond's Sporting Goods in Greenville. Fees are as follows:

Private Owners, Original or renewal certificate: One year, $50; Three years, $13; 30-day temporary certificate, no charge; commercial fishing boats, no charge; registration of out of state number, $5.50; Substitute certificate (transfer of ownership), $2; Duplicate for lost certificate, $2.

Manufacturers and dealers: Initial certificate, $25; renewal of initial certificate, $25; each additional certificate, $10; renewal of additional certificate, $10.

Next week...what's the law on...commercial fishing boat registration exemption qualifications.

Sun Belt Adds Three-Pointer To Use Of 45-Second Clock

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. (AP) — Sun Belt Conference faculty representatives Friday agreed with the league's athletic directors that the conference should adopt a 19-foot three-point field goal for the 1982-83 basketball season.

The faculty representatives also agreed to continue use of the 45-second shot clock, a fixture for Sun Belt teams for the last four seasons.

Both the three-point goal and the shot clock will be mandatory for conference games if approved by the NCAA Rules Committee, conference commissioner Vic Bubas said as the Sun Belt ended its spring conference here.

Friday's action by the eight-member Sun Belt, in existence seven years, followed similar action by the Atlantic Coast Conference earlier this week.

In other action Friday, the conference:

—Awarded the 1983 men's basketball tournament to the Birmingham-Jefferson Coliseum, with Alabama-Birmingham as host team. The tournament will be played March 4-6.

—Adopted women's basketball as a conference sport, beginning in 1982-83, and awarded the women's championship tournament to Old Dominion University in Norfolk, a new member of the conference, for the weekend of March 11.

Bubas said the Sun Belt will apply for an automatic bid to the NCAA women's tournament for the winner of the conference tourney.

—Divided the conference into two divisions for baseball, effective next year. Old Dominion, Virginia Commonwealth.

Zimmer Had Not Seen Everything After All

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

Manager Don Zimmer was thinking that maybe — just maybe — he had seen, heard or even imagined everything that could possibly go wrong as his Texas Rangers were losing 19 of 23 games.

Boy, was he wrong.

Friday night, the Rangers made it 20 of 24, while being shut out by the Kansas City Royals 3-0. Dennis Leonard started the shutout for the Royals, but Dan Quisenberry had to finish up. The Royals relief ace entered the game when Leonard's right hand was broken by a line drive-turned-double play in the seventh inning.

"For the last five days, I've lay in bed thinking that I've seen everything happen ... I really couldn't come up with a new one. Tonight, I saw a new one," Zimmer said.

"Break a pitcher's hand and come up with a double play. That's a new one. That's one I hadn't thought of," the Texas Manager said. "Instead of being down 2-1 with the four, five and six hitters coming up, it's a double play and a broken hand."

Leonard had given up just one hit and led 2-0 when Mike Richardt opened the Rangers seventh with a double. Buddy Bell followed with a smash up the middle that ricocheted off Leonard's right hand — his pitching hand — to second baseman Frank White.

Not knowing whether the ball had hit the ground, White threw to first baseman Willie Aikens.

"I thought the ball hit the top of the mound and floated out to me at second," White said. Then, White said he heard teammates George Brett and John Wathan holler that the ball hadn't touched the ground, "and I yelled at Willie to throw it back to second."

Aikens fired back to White, and the Royals ad doubled off Richardt, who was standing on third.

Later, X-rays showed that Leonard, now 5-3, had broken the first two fingers on his right hand and would be lost to the team from six to eight weeks. It was the 18th incapacitating injury sustained by the Royals this season.

"There's nothing you can do about it really," said Royals Manager Dick Howser. "That's part of managing. You have to live with it."

In earning his 10th save, Quisenberry allowed another two hits, polishing off a four-hitter. Amos Otis drove in two of Kansas City's three runs with double and a sacrifice fly.

In the rest of the American League, New York clobbered Minnesota 12-1, Boston edged Oakland 8-7, Baltimore blanked Toronto 3-0, California downed Detroit 9-7, Chicago trimmed Cleveland 3-2 in a rain shortened game and Milwaukee defeated Seattle 4-1.

Yankees 12, Twins 1

Bobby Murcer, Oscar Gamble and rookie Mike Patterson homered to power the Yankees to their third straight victory. New York scored its 12 runs — the most this season — on just 11 hits.

Rudy May, 1-2, spaced eight hits over seven innings, and Roger Erickson and Shane Rawlley pitched an inning apiece.

Gamble's two-run homer in the third gave New York a 5-0 lead. Murcer's pinch homer, a three-run shot, capped a six-run sixth inning, and Patterson's solo homer gave the Yankees their final run in the eighth inning.

Red Sox 8, A's 7

Boston won its third in a row behind home runs by Jim Rice, Dwight Evans and Carl Yastrzemski. The Red Sox pounded out 18 hits, including a run-scoring single in the fourth inning by Jerry Remy that gave Boston the lead for good and culminated a rally from a 4-1 deficit.

The loss was Oakland's fourth in a row. Rick Langford, 3-6, gave up 14 of Boston's hits in 51-3 innings. Tom Burgmeier, 2-0, was the winner in relief.

Orioles 3, Blue Jays 0

Left-hander Mike Flanagan and two relievers combined on a seven-hitter, and John Lowenstein drove in a pair of runs as Baltimore won three in a row for the first time this season. One of Lowenstein's RBI came on a solo homer.

Flanagan gave up just five hits over seven innings, despite getting hit in his left bicep in the third inning with a line drive by Barry Bonnell. The arm did not stiffen until the seventh inning, when Tim Stoddard came on. Tippy Martinez worked the final inning.

Angels 9, Tigers 7

Bobby Grich and Bob Boone hit two-run homers, and California broke Detroit's eight-game winning streak. Grich's homer came in the third inning, and Boone hit his first of the year in the fourth.

Tim Foli contributed a two-run single in California's three-run fifth inning. Ken Forsch, 4-3, got the victory with relief help from Doug Corbett.

White Sox 3, Indians 2

The White Sox won in 62-3 innings when a heavy downpour at Chicago forced umpire Bill Haller to call the game. Bill Almon had just snapped a 2-2 tie with an RBI double when the rains came. Haller waited an hour for the rain to stop and another hour, while the grounds crew worked on the field before declaring it unplayable.

Brewers 4, Mariners 1

Robin Yount singled in the tie-breaking run, and Ted Simmons cracked a two-run double as Milwaukee scored three times in the sixth inning to beat Seattle. The game was delayed 1 hour, 36 minutes at the start because of rain.

Rollie Fingers retired all seven men he faced — five by strikeout — to record his ninth save, in relief of Bob McClure.

All of Milwaukee's scoring came at the expense of Seattle starter Gaylord Perry, 3-4, who went the distance.

Strachan Indicted

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A federal grand jury has indicted Michael D. Strachan, a former New Orleans Saints running back, on cocaine charges.

Strachan, 28, of Kenner, La., pleaded innocent shortly after his indictment Friday and was released on $50,000 bond. Trial was set for July 1.

U.S. Attorney John Volz said Strachan was charged with six counts of cocaine distribution and one count of conspiracy to distribute cocaine between Feb. 4, 1980, and April 30, 1982. Amounts of the drug were not specified.

Union Carbide.....8
Lions.....3

Union Carbide handed the Lions their first loss of the 1982 North State Little League season Friday, taking an 8-3 decision.

The Lions drew first blood, scoring twice in the first inning on solo home runs by Carlos Harris and Tom Moye. Union Carbide came back with one in the bottom of the frame.

Union Carbide then struck for three runs in the second, moving ahead for good. Greg Davis led off with a walk and with one down, Darryl Joyner was safe on an error. Paul Powers also reached on an error, allowing both Davis and Joyner to score. Martin Anderson singled to advance Powers, who then scored on Billy Turcotte's hit for a 4-2 lead.

The Lions closed back within one with a run in the third, but Union Carbide pulled away with two in the bottom of the frame and two more in the fifth.

Morris Johnson led Union Carbide with two hits, while Harris had two for the Lions.

The annual Little League Luncheon-Supper will be held Wednesday from 11:30 a.m. until 1 p.m. and from 4:30 p.m. until 7 p.m.

Plates may be picked up from the trucks at Elm Street Park and will be guaranteed until 6 p.m.

Plates will be available at $2.50 each from the trucks for those without previously purchased ticke-s.

The event is the only fund-raising project of the Little League, and Mrs. Joy Collins is serving as project chairman.

A doubleheader will be played that day at Elm Street Little League field with the Jaycees meeting the Optimists at 4 p.m. and Carroll Associates facing Wellcome at 6 p.m.

Team winners in sales were Coca-Cola in the North State League and First Federal in the Tar Heel League. Highest individual sales were credited to Kevin Jordan in the North State and Billy Bob Anderson in the Tar Heel.

Moose.....5
Exchange.....4

The Moose rallied for four runs in the bottom of the sixth inning and gained a 5-4 victory over the Exchange Friday afternoon in the Tar Heel Little League.

The Exchanged grabbed the lead in the first inning, scoring twice. They added a third run in the fifth before the Moose struck for their first run in the bottom of the fifth.

The Exchange added a fourth run in the sixth before the Moose put on their rally in the bottom half of the frame.

Guy Mattox led off the sixth for the Moose with a single and L.L. Everette reached on an error. Both advanced on a wild pitch, and another scored Mattox. Scott Hemrick walked and stole second and Stephen Smith singled in Everette. Wesley Jackson walked and Allen Speight singled in Hemrick with the tying run. Smith, however, was thrown out at the plate. A wild pitch then moved Jackson to third, and another allowed him to score with the game-winning run.

Speight led the Moose hitting with two, while Britt Erwin had two for the Exchange.

Detroit Tiger outfielder Al Kaline received only one vote for rookie-of-the-year in the American League in 1954, but he's now in the Baseball Hall of Fame.

Celtics Win, Even Series At Three Each

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Boston Celtics, who made Philadelphia's offense and its once-formidable series lead disappear on the same day, are one victory away from completing their second straight miracle playoff comeback against the 76ers.

The Celtics held Philadelphia to a record-low 27 points in the second half Friday night and posted an 88-75 victory to even the National Basketball Association semifinal playoff series at 3-3.

The 76ers, who blew a 3-1 lead in the Eastern Conference finals against Boston a year ago, will suffer the same fate again unless they can beat the Celtics at the Boston Garden in Game 7 Sunday.

"We can't overlook the fact that this is still a seven-game series," Boston Coach Bill Fitch said. "We still have to go home and play hard."

Fitch said he felt no sense of deja vu regarding this series and last year, saying: "I have enough trouble with English without trying French."

Some of the Celtics players said they didn't believe last year's comeback would help them Sunday.

"This game (the sixth) and what happened in the past is history," said center Robert Parish, who scored 14 points and pulled down 13 rebounds for the Celtics. "The only thing that matters is Sunday."

But forward Cedric Maxwell added, "It's not over, but if the 76ers said what they really feel inside, they would say they had lost a golden opportunity to end the series at home."

"I'm so tired of hearing about last year," 76ers Coach Billy Cunningham said. "We're down, but we'll get a good night's sleep, practice some tomorrow and then go up to Boston and try to win."

The 76ers shot only 35 percent for the game, but their offense was especially ineffective in the second half, when they hit only seven of 34 shots for 20 percent.

The 27 second-half points was an NBA playoff low since the league adopted the 24-second clock in 1954. The previous record was 28 points by Los Angeles against Milwaukee on April 7, 1974.

The 11 points scored by the 76ers in the fourth quarter tied the playoff record low held by three other teams. In the final 18 minutes of the game, the 76ers had four field goals, and two of those were on goaltending calls.

Philadelphia guard Andrew Toney, who scored 39 points in one 76ers' victory and 30 in another during the series, scored three points and was a nightmarish 1-for-11 from the field.

"Offensively, we couldn't generate anything in the second half," Cunningham said. "When we had good shots, we didn't make them, and the Celtics were very effective at blocking shots inside."

"It hurts. It would have been great to end it tonight," said Julius Erving, who led all scorers with 24 points although he was only eight of 20 from the field. "We had the nice crowd. Now we have to win one on the road at Boston Garden. It will be tough. We know it's all uphill."

The 76ers appeared to be ready to silence talk about last year in the first period as they took a 25-10 lead gith 3:42 left on a basket by Toney, but that was to be his only field goal of the game.

The Celtics, who have won an unprecedented 14 NBA titles and are seeking to become the first team to successfully defend their championship since 1969, cut the deficit to 26-20 by the end of the first period.

Boston tied the score four times — at 51-51, 53-53, 57-57 and 67-67 — but didn't take the lead until Parish scored with 7:58 left in the game for a 69-67 edge.

That basket was the eighth of 12 straight points for the Celtics. Larry Bird, who had 14 points and 17 rebounds for Boston, completed that run of points with a basket that gave the Celtics a 73-67 advantage.

Philadelphia made a final run that cut the lead to 74-73, but Kevin McHale, who scored 17 points to lead Boston, hit seven of them in the final four minutes to lead a 14-2 flurry that put the 76ers away.

"When we got ahead, I think our guys forgot they were tired," Fitch said.

"I think the 76ers were shellshocked," Maxwell said.

Budget Could Be Balanced If Loopholes Erased

By GARY KLOTT
UPI Business Writer

The U.S. tax code is riddled with special exemptions and loopholes that make for inequities among taxpayers, billions in misallocated resources and a higher overall tax burden.

Breaks for particular groups of taxpayers have been enacted over the years with seemingly good intent to encourage numerous economic and social activities. But the costs have grown to staggering dimensions and often produced undesirable results.

The Congressional Joint Committee on Taxation estimates tax breaks for corporations and individuals this year will cost the Treasury nearly $254 billion in revenues — enough to balance the federal budget twice over, or, by one estimate, slash the top individual tax rate of 50 percent to 24 percent.

Billions of dollars in tax breaks are accorded individuals and corporations for engaging in activites as varied as drilling for oil or gas, exporting, selling timber, investing in Puerto Rico, buying certain types of bonds, buying equipment or leasing it to someone else, or investing abroad instead of at home.

In the view of many economists, a good number of tax breaks have created unwitting side effects:

—Billions in resources have been misallocated to favored industries to the detriment of others.

—Preference has been given to certain energy resources over others.

—Advantage has been given to larger firms over smaller ones, and to profitable firms over weak ones.

—Jobs and investment have been lost to overseas ventures.

—Short-lived equipment has been given preference over longer-lived assets.

Studies show the tax system has favored investment financing through debt rather than equity — a trend which has dumped many firms into dangerous financial waters in the current business slump. The tax code also has encouraged mergers, sometimes striking directly at the heart of competition.

Some corporations pay little or nothing in the way of federal taxes while others are forced to pay effective tax rates closer to the statutory limit of 46 percent.

Rather than U.S. industry operating in a free and open environment with prices and resources allocated according to market forces, increasingly tax considerations are influencing economic as well as social decisions.

Not unlike other nations whose governments centrally allocate resources and production, the American picture that develops is one of the U.S. economy being steered in a smaller, but nevertheless significant, degree by Congressionally decreed tax measures.

"It's a major mess," says economist Lester Thurow of the Masssachusetts Institute of Technology. "We keep punching more special privileges into the tax code and end up with greater inequities between companies.

"With the investment incentives under the new tax law," he added, "we've effectively abolished the corporate income tax in many industries and there's a negative income tax on capital intensive companies. IBM pays its tax (under the new tax leasing law) to Ford Motor Co. and the federal government ends up collecting no revenue."

Indeed, the tax burden has been shifting over the years, with less reliance on corporate income tax as a revenue source and more on the individiual income tax and Social Security. Whereas two decades ago the corporate income tax supplied nearly a quarter of each dollar contributed to the Treasury coffer, it now accounts for less than a dime.

Robert McIntyre, director of federal tax policy for Citizens for Tax Justice, a Washington-based public interest group, estimates the business tax cuts enacted last year will cost each taxpayer $7,330 over the decade.

Even with President Reagan's three-year, 25 percent across-the-board cut in individual income tax rates, analyses show that when coupled with Social Security tax hikes and inflation-induced "bracket-creep," only those earning $40,000 or more are likely to find in 1984 their tax burden lighter than it was in 1980.

Special provisions for special groups of taxpayers also have eroded what has been largely perceived as the guiding criteria of fairness in tax policy: Those better off should bear a larger share of the tax burden and those with equal incomes should be taxed equally.

—Homeowners get a tax break while renters don't.

—Working married couples often find themselves paying more than one-income couples.

—Capital gains often are taxed at half the rate paid on income a worker earns on the job.

—Interest from a passbook account is taxed at the full rate while interest from municipal bonds escapes tax-free.

—Corporate dividends, meanwhile, end up being taxed twice — once at the corporate level and again after the shareholder receives them.

Treasury Department data show that thousands of upper-income Americans are able to take advantage of enough special provisions to bring their tax burden down to an effective rate normally reserved for those in the lower or middle income groups.

"It's a mess," says Brookings Institution's Joseph A. Pechman, a leading authority on federal taxation. "I think we ought to look at the special provisions in the tax code very carefully, and all the deductions, and then use the extra money to broaden the tax base and lower rates."

Rates Might Fall If Breaks Go

By GARY KLOTT
UPI Business Writer

Eliminating the breaks and loopholes in the U.S. tax code could halve the 50 percent top rate on individual income — and put the annual return on a postcard.

Special tax breaks for particular groups of taxpayers have multiplied over the decades, complicating the tax code, narrowing the tax base, and forcing up the overall tax rates.

Cutting out the deductions, exemptions and other special tax provisions has proved a difficult task politically under the pressure of special interest groups lobbying to protect and expand their special individual tax provisions. Despite much rhetoric, special tax breaks continue to proliferate.

As Sheldon S. Cohen, a former commissioner of the Internal Revenue Service, recently testified before a House committee: "The Congress and each new administration preaches that we should simplify our tax laws. This is an important goal, but it can never be achieved so long as you, the Congress, insist on attempting to cure every economic and social disease with a tax provision."

"When you have very high marginal rates," says Aaron Wildavsky, professor of political science at the University of California at Berkeley, "you generate enormous pressure for exceptions — not only by those who are better off by them but also other people who are dependent on them. And over time, you develop a mishmash."

For example, the controversy over the three-martini businessman's lunch tax deduction not only brought out those businessmen who were able to take advantage of the deduction, Wildavsky said, but also restaurant owners whose business often thrives on the deduction.

A listing of many of the tax breaks — formally known as "tax expenditures" on Capitol Hill — is required each year. But the budget process does not give the same yearly scrutiny to tax expenditures as it does to the direct spending programs.

Stanley Surrey, a Harvard law professor who as assistant Treasury secretary in the 1960s coined the term "tax expenditures", says all tax expenditure items should come under review in the budget process to determine whether the money should be spent at all, and if so, whether they should instead be fashioned as direct spending programs.

Surrey believes the benefits of many of the programs could be more efficiently targeted through the structure of direct spending programs.

Rep. David E. Bonior, D-Mich., and Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colorado, have introduced legislation which would subject tax expenditures to the budget process.

"Ironically, while we were battling over $130 billion in budget cuts, we were also indirectly spending over $80 billion in new and expanded tax expenditures," said Hart.

In Canada, tax expenditures now come under the scrutiny of the budget process. Any new tax expenditures proposed are treated as equivalent to direct budget expenditures. In other words, if a new tax break is proposed, say, for investment, direct expenditures for economic development have to be reduced enough to offset the tax break.

"The policy's been in effect for two budget sessions, and we've had no new tax incentives granted in that time," says Richard M. Bird, director of the Institute for Policy Analysis at the University of Toronto. "Before then, we had in the previous five years the greatest explosion in new tax incentives in history."

If most of the special provisions were to be eliminated, many tax experts believe the tax base could be so broadened that tax rates could be cut sharply.

"A dramatically broadened tax base with lower rates and a much more simplified tax code is the only way to go to have a sensible tax system," says William M. Goldstein, a tax attorney with the Philadelphia law firm of Drinker, Biddle and Reath.

Goldstein, a former Treasury official who helped develop such a proposal in 1977 under then-Treasury Secretary William E. Simon, laments: "Unfortunately, Congress has taken two or three more steps in the opposite direction."

Edward Moscovitch, vice president of Data Resources Inc., an economic consulting firm, used computer models to calculate that if the personal exemption were doubled but all other exemptions and deductions were eliminated, the top individual tax rate under a progressive rate system could be trimmed to 24 percent.

Code Provides Means For Firms To Delay Taxes

By GARY KLOTT
UPI Business Writer

The U.S. tax code contains scores of ways for corporations to legally cut their taxes, or put them off to some future date — often indefinitely.

The most common means is shaving the income subject to tax by deducting the costs of doing business such as the cost of goods sold, wages, rent, utilities.

There also are the more controversial deductions under the costs-of-doing-business category such as the "three-martini business lunch", country club memberships, company yachts and the like.

Then there are the numerous tax breaks enacted over the years to encourage certain types of corporate activities. Using several of the provisions in concert can substantially reduce a company's tax bill, sometimes to nothing.

Commercial banks, as an industry one of the more successful in lowering its effective tax rate, often invest in bonds issued by state or local governments that offer tax-exempt interest. While the bonds pay less than the taxable variety, they can provide a much higher rate of return when the tax consequences are considered.

Banks also make use of investment tax incentives. Besides receiving tax benefits for their investments in bank offices and computers, banks increasingly are taking advantage of investment tax benefits by buying equipment and machinery and leasing it out to customers.

Oil and gas companies have the advantage of taking an immediate tax deduction for many of their drilling expenses instead of writing them off over a period of years as in most other industries. Smaller drilles and other mineral producers also are eligible for a generous deduction for the cost of developing a well or mine. The write-off can run many times more than the actual costs incurred.

Companies that export goods are allowed to set up special operations called Domestic International Sales Corporations (DISCS) and have up to half the tax liability on export-related profits deferred indefinitely.

Although all income a corporation earns worldwide is subject to U.S. tax, the U.S. tax liability on foreign operations often can be erased through offsetting credits for foreign taxes paid.

Many pharmaceutical companies manage to cut their taxes by setting up operations in Puerto Rico. A special tax code provision allows the profits from operations set up in U.S. possessions to escape U.S. taxation. Meanwhile, Puerto Rico, in its own effort to lure new business, gives such companies extremely attractive breaks on Puerto Rican taxes.

While most profits from the sale of a company's stock-in-trade are taxed at the normal 46 percent corporate rate, the profits from timber — under a special provision in the tax law — are subject to the much lower capital gains rate.

In March, the Treasury Department proposed new regulations aimed at closing a loophole that may have clipped as much as $3.4 billion off insurance company tax bills last year, according to government estimates.

The tax savings were achieved through controversial "modified coinsurance" contracts — risk-sharing arrangements under which investment income is converted to underwriting income which is taxed at a lower rate.

The Reagan administration charged "such arrangements serve no purpose other than tax avoidance, since little, if any, insurance risk is actually transferred between companies."

Perhaps the biggest reason for the drop in effective tax rates in capital intensive industries over the past two decades has been the various incentives passed by Congress to encourage capital investment.

The provisions were vastly liberalized last year as part of the 1981 tax law generally allowing businesses to write off their investments in a shorter period of time. Thus the deductions immediately will be larger and the tax bill lower.

In addition, the law also provides an investment tax credit of up to 10 percent of the cost of many types of investments. That credit, in effect a government subsidy, can be used to offset dollar for dollar the company's tax bill.

The tax savings thus provide a way for companies to finance capital investment without having to go out and borrow as much.

Some economists believe accelerated depreciation and the investment credit play a vital role in stimulating capital spending, while others believe a rise in the demand for goods is more important.

Although critics have noted that capital spending has failed to increase since the liberalized investment incentives were passed last year by Congress, economist Allen Sinai of Data Resources Inc., says the effects normally are delayed by two to four years.

Without the added incentives, he adds, capital spending would be even lower than it currently is.

A Data Resources forecast for the period 1981-1985 estimates 66 cents per dollar of equipment spending will take place for every dollar lost to the Treasury due to the investment tax credit. Accelerated depreciation is forecast to provide an even bigger "bang for the buck" of 81 cents in spending per tax dollar lost.

The provisions are nevertheless expensive and some say overgenerous.

Government estimates show the accelerated depreciation and investment tax credit provisions costing nearly $220 billion through 1986.

Richard Kopcke, an economist at the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston, said he would have depreciation allowances indexed to inflation so that the amount increases with prices but declines when prices fall.

"If inflation were to disappear tomorrow, you would provide business with a tremendous windfall," he said.

IRA'S
Save $2,000 a year, tax-deferred.
In 1982 you can save $2,000 and not have to pay taxes on it until retirement. How? Simply by setting up your own Individual Retirement Account and contributing to it regularly.
With an IRA, you manage your retirement fund. And you can invest in one or a mix or several qualifying investments.
An IRA offers dramatic growth potential, too. Over a 30-year period and assuming a 10% return, for example, a $2,000 contribution each year grows to $328,968!
To find out more about an IRA and the best selection of investments for one, talk to me at Wheat, First Securities. Together we can take the worry out of retirement planning.

Thrifts Suffer Losses

NEW YORK (AP) — The years 1980 and 1981 were the worst since the Depression of the 1930s for the nation's savings institutions, with little change so far in 1982.

Congress is considering multi-billion-dollar bailouts, and already 18 thrifts have averted failing only through government-arranged mergers with stronger institutions.

Earlier this week, H.F. Ahmanson & Co., the parent of the nation's largest savings and loan association, blamed high interest rates for its $42 million loss in the first three months of 1982.

Ahmanson, with assets of more than $16 billion, is one of the nation's largest diversified financiiial holding companies. Its S&L operation, Home Savings of America, produced a $41 million loss in the first quarter, $4 million less than it lost in the last quarter of last year.

Its status is generally typical of the industry as a whole that last year saw people withdraw $25 billion more than they deposited, largely to put into investments with higher yields than savings.

Here are some questions and answers about the thrift industry.

Q. What is a thrift?

A. Within the broad category are about 4,000 savings and loan associations, about 400 mutual savings banks, and about 4,000 credit unions. They are either state or federally chartered and thus regulated by their home states or the federal government, although some federal regulations apply to all.

Q. How are they different from commercial banks?

A. Commercial banks have wider lending powers such as making loans to businesses and taking commercial deposits. Thrifts by and large are restricted to personal business, mainly home mortgages, except credit unions which only recently were granted mortgage powers.

Q. If banks and thrifts make their money on interest rates, why are they not profiting from high interest rates?

A. It all depends on their loan portfolio. A commercial bank making short-term business loans at today's market rates can do quite well.

The thrifts however have to pay today's rates to attract deposits but their main source of income is interest on mortgages, which typically date to single-digit interest rates. Quite simply they are paying out more than they are taking in.

Q. What about these new savings programs such as All Savers Certificates? Are they helping the thrifts?

A. Yes and no. They have meant new deposits for the thrifts, but some of them have been funds withdrawn from passbook savings accounts that only pay 5.5 percent interest. Thus the All Saver forces the thrift to pay double or more interest on the same money.

Q. Will the thrifts go out of business?

A. So far what has happened is that the government has arranged mergers between two or more thrifts. There were 18 such "supervisory" mergers in the first three months of the year. The government negotiates the merger of a weak thrift with a strong one, helped out by an infusion of cash at a level negotiated with the surviving thrift institution.

Q. What does the future hold?

A. There is great change at work in the world of institutional finance.

Congress is working on a "net worth guarantee" fund that would have the federal government rescue any thrift whose liability falls below 2 percent of its assets.

In addition, there are various proposals to broaden the powers of S&Ls and savings banks, including an experimental plan already underway allow three S&Ls to offer limited securities brokerage services.

The securities industry is opposed to the change.

Also being considered is wider business-lending power by the thrifts. The commercial banks are opposed to that as it would be a new form of competition.

Joey's Talking Because His Mother, Therapists Refused To Give Up

"My Joey can talk!" Jean Zernicek is likely to exclaim to strangers who cannot fully appreciate the significance of her statement.

Mrs. Zernicek is excited because her son's talking is an answer to prayer, a long-held hope whose fulfillment had seemed extremely remote for many years. Joey is 8 years old, a handsome, lovable, intelligent child with a previously inexplicable inability to talk.

On his seventh birthday, after beginning speech therapy here, he said his first word, "Mama," and since then has added several thousand words to his vocabulary. As he's learned to talk, he's also learned to read and to write.

Mrs. Zernicek, originally from the Scotland Neck area, had been a military wife for many years and had raised three children to adulthood when Joey was born. Her husband, a retired military officer, died when Joey was 3. Then living in Colonial Heights, Va., she went anywhere to whatever clinic, whatever therapist anyone recommended to her.

None offered any real help, she said, and many let her spend much time and money only to tell her later, "We were wrong. He isn't autistic" or "He isn't retarded. We don't know what his problem is or how to deal with it."

"I knew Joey was not retarded, knew he wasn't withdrawn or emotionally disturbed, knew he could hear," she said. "It just didn't seem to make sense that he could not learn to talk and I never gave up hope, though I'll admit it waned at times."

Joey and his mother moved to Greenville in August 1980 to allow Joey to enroll in the East Carolina University TEACCH Program, designed especially for communicatively handicapped children. The decision was a good one, Mrs. Zernicek said.

Her son had the first real successes of his life in this program and it wasn't long before Dr. Hal Shigley, the program director, and others working with Joey referred him to the ECU Department of Speech, Language and Auditory Pathology in coordination with TEACCH.

Dr. Duane Logue, a professor in this department, says he saw Joey from their introduction as one of the greatest challenges of his career. "We expect normally developing children," he said, "to begin using words from 12 to 14 months of age, to be combining words by 2 years, and to have complete language by 4.

"Joey, we knew from the start, would call for long-term commitment and concerted effort of me and several members of my staff. He had severe apraxia of speech, what seems to be a malfunction in the speech centers of the frontal lobe of the brain.

"I was impressed immediately with his attention span and his comprehension skills. He showed us without a doubt that he is not retarded. We started experimental therapy with him, building on the signing (like the deaf use) he and his mother had learned at TEACCH. We realized full well we didn't fully understand the nature of his inability to talk, only that we were going to give everything we had to open up a way for him to learn."

Two graduate students who played major roles in Joey's learning to talk are Marianna Morris King and Ann Gschwind. "We both love him dearly," Ms. King said. "He's so good natured and so eager to learn. He's really tested our ability to improvise, find new ways suited just to him, of teaching different sounds, different words."

Joey's speech is now developing very fast. He attends Elmhurst Elementary School, with part of his classes held in the TEACCH program there, and goes to ECU afternoons for speech therapy.

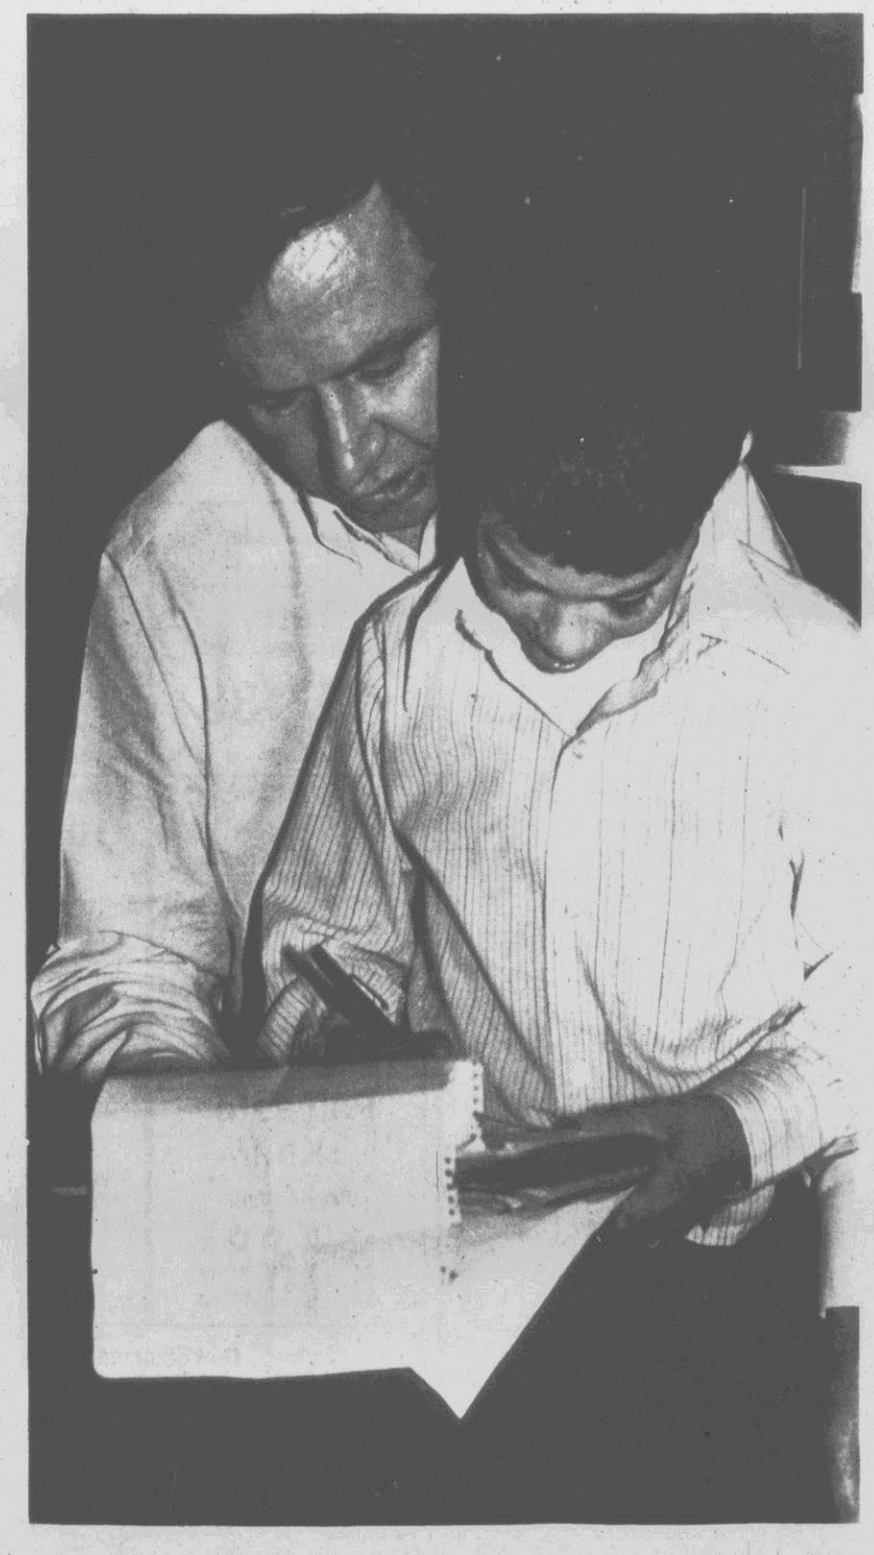
"Joey's a child that most people would have given up on," Mrs. Zernicek said. "Indeed, some of the 'experts' I saw earlier did advise me to give up. I'm so thankful for Dr. Logue and his students and how devoted they are to Joey. What I had prayed for was for someone who'll say 'I'll try.' They said that and they've backed it up with their actions over many months".

She nodded to Joey reading aloud from a book and said, "My Joey can talk!"

Text and Photos By Carol Tyer

"My Joey can talk!" Mrs. Jean Zernicek says joyfully as Joey beams about the praise she gives him for his writing.

"Joey's very special to us," Marianna King and Ann Gschwind say as they listen to Joey read.



Joey loves words and is adding to his vocabulary constantly, much to the pleasure of Dr. Duane Logue, who calls him "one of the greatest challenges of my career."

Candlelight Ceremony Performed

AYDEN — In a candlelight ceremony at 4 p.m. Saturday, the wedding of Beverly Camille Venters and Richard Alan Heins was solemnized in the Ayden Christian Church.

The Rev. Roy L. Turnage of Ayden and Goldsboro officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Dorothy W. Venters of Ayden and the late Mr. Spurgeon C. Venters. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Heins Jr. of Eastchester, N.Y.

Mrs. Turnage, of Ayden and Goldsboro, played the organ. By Prescription Only of Greenville, consisting of Brenda Bunn, Elizabeth Smith, Carol Whichard and Donna Whichard sang "God, a Woman and a Man," "The Hawaiian Wedding Song" and "The Lord's Prayer."

The ceremony was directed by Mrs. S. Wilson Venters of Ayden, sister-in-law of the bride.

At the ringing of the chimes, the bride was escorted by her brother, Ronald C. Venters Sr. of Ayden and given in marriage by her mother. The bride wore a white formal gown of sheer polyester chiffon knit over acetate taffeta. It was fashioned with a Queen Anne neckline and empire bodice with lace appliques and simulated pearl acccents. The lace detail and pearls were repeated on the long sheer lace bishop sleeves and chapel length train. She wore a capulet bordered with Venise lace attached to a fingertip veil of silk illusion. She carried a cascade bouquet of white roses and baby's breath accented with lavender violets.

Mrs. Dennis Otis of Grifton was honor attendant and wore a fitted empire styled chalk violet gown of polyester knit featuring narrow straps, flared skirt with a detachable cape of sheer polyester chiffon with flower trim. She carried a nosegay of mixed flowers and wore identical flowers in her hair.

Amanda Marie Venters, niece of the bride of Ayden, was flower girl and wore an ensemble fashioned like that of the honor attendant and carried a white basket filled with mixed spring flower petals.

Groomsman was George L. King of Ayden and ushers included Ronald Carroll Venters Jr. and Wilson Todd Venters of Ayden, nephews of the bride.

The mother of the bride wore a formal gown of mint green crepe with chiffon sleeves. The mother of the bridegroom selected a gown of shrimp polyester knit with a print jacket. Both wore shoulder corsages of white carnations.

The grandmother of the bride, Mrs. Rosa Wilson of Vanceboro, was given a corsage of white carnations.

Mrs. A.T. Venters of Ayden presided at the guest register.

MRS. RICHARD ALAN HEINS

After the ceremony the wedding party received in the vestibule of the church. Tina Venters presented wedding scrolls and Kimberly Hood distributed tulle packets of bird seed.

The couple will live near Greenville after a wedding trip to Nags Head.

The bride graduated from Ayden High School and Hardbarger Business College of Kinston and is employed by Pitt County Memorial Hospital. The bridegroom is a graduate of Eastchester High School, N.Y. and Pitt Community College. He is employed by Procter and Gamble.

The bridal couple, guests and friends were entertained at an after-rehearsal party at the Ayden Masonic Lodge. Hosts and hostesses were Mrs. Bobby Teal, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Venters, Mrs. Rockfellow Venters and Mr. and Mrs. Ronald C. Venters Sr.

Guests were greeted by Mrs. Venters Sr. and Bobby Venters, brother of the bride. Mrs. Bobby Venters poured punch and cake was served by Mrs. Charles Venters. Both are sisters-in-law of the bride.

The bridal couple remembered their attendants with gifts.

Good-byes were said by Charles and Wilson Venters, brothers of the bride of Ayden.

After the party, the bridal couple and guests were entertained at a party given by Mr. and Mrs. George L. King at their home in Ayden.

Bridal Couple Entertained

Friends of Debra Lynn Stocks and Grover Jed Hardee honored the couple at a bridal shower Saturday night held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wiley Ray Hardee Jr. of Ayden.

The honoree was given a corsage of yellow and white daisies.

The refreshment table was covered with an embroidered linen and Nottingham lace cloth and centered with a silver candelabra holding epergnettes of yellow and white daisies and lighted tapers.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I have just figured out if insurance companies keep circulating forms at their present rate, by 1990, they will need the Grand Canyon for a filing cabinet.

The average family carries insurance on every conceivable risk known to man including their car, health, major disasters of nature, appliances, TV, defamation, malpractice, and the kindest one of all, life.

People are protected from everything except death by forms. (When that comes it will include one original, six illegible carbons, sign at the X and mail one copy to your doctor, one to your accountant, four to the insurance company, and retain the last copy which no one can read for your files with the number of your canceled check in the lower right hand corner and please put I.D. number on the outside of the envelope before mailing.)

I bleed for the average American who had the misfortune to smash the bone in his little finger when it became wedged in the restroom towel machine where the towel was to come down automatically and didn't.

There is a form from the employer, bank, hospital, doctor, radiologist, worker's compensation and insurance company. To get everyone's money into motion is like getting music out of a basketful of snakes.

By the time it's resolved, you could grow a new finger.

And what about the poor fish who is driving to work one day, stops for a traffic light, and the guy behind him drives into his trunk?

As a victim he can look forward to eight months of correspondence, legalese, no personal checks, for business office only and please fill out and return.

I have a solution to these fender-benders that would save a lot of paperwork. It's called "No Sweat" insurance. The victim gets out of his car and trades on the spot with the guy who rear-ended him. (Those cars never have any more damage than a white smudge on the bumper.) He leaves the guilty one with a car that won't run, a towing bill and instructions to "get three estimates and return my car to me when it looks and runs like it did before or my attorney will find you and hurt you!"

It would take three months to write all that down in triplicate.

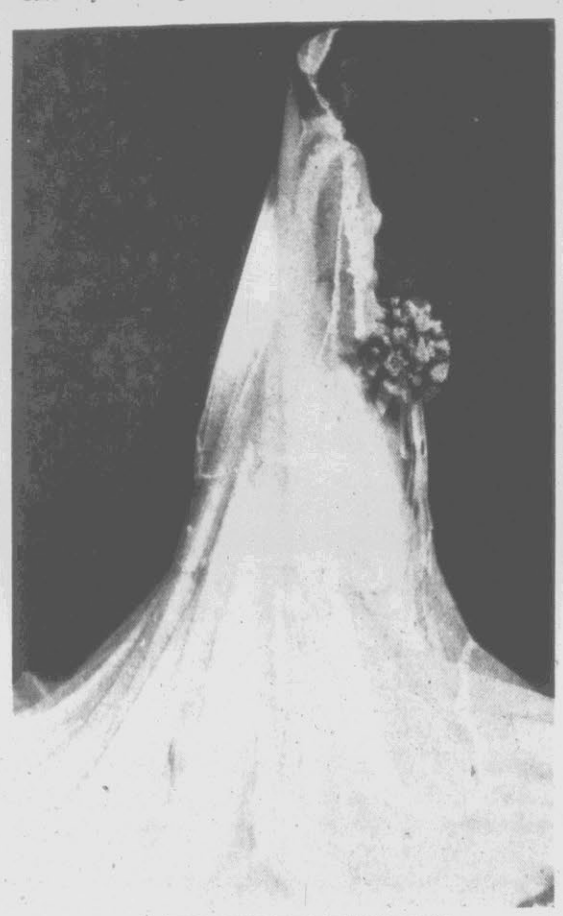
GOLDSBORO — Katie Maureen Wright and William Terry Curry, both of Greenville, were married here Saturday evening in the Adamsville Baptist Church.

The Rev. M.O. Sears, pastor of the couple, and the Rev. Michael Wright, brother of the bride, performed the double ring ceremony at seven o'clock.



MRS. WILLIAM TERRY CURRY

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. J.D. Wright of Route 3, Goldsboro, and Mr. and Mrs. John E. Curry of Route 2, Ayden.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a formal gown of white organza over white peau soie designed with a Queen Anne neckline outlined in silk Venise lace beaded with pearls. The empire bodice was enhanced with silk Venise lace and medallions of beaded lace that encircled the waistline. The sheer bishop sleeves were embellished with silk Venise lace with the cuffs edged in matching lace. The modified A-line skirt and attached cathedral train were accented with appliques of silk Venise and edged with miniature floral silk Venise lace. She wore a waltz length veil of illusion edged in matching lace attached to a caplet overlaid in beaded matching lace. The bride wore her mother's pearl necklace.

Leigh Ann Wright was honor attendant and bridesmaids included Karen Butler and Lynn Porter. All are from Greenville.

Tonya Stone of Louisburg, cousin of the bride, was flower girl and ring bearer was Derrick Wright of Elon College, nephew of the bride.

Joe Curry of Ayden, brother of the bridegroom, was best man and ushers included Al Dawes of Winterville and Randy Jackson of Greenville.

Audrey Thomas directed the wedding.

Presenting the music was Jean Kirk, organist, Bobbie Anderson, soloist, Karen Eidson, pianist, and Debra Joyner played the flute.

Denise Wright, sister-in-law of the bride, presided at the registry. Lori Eidson and Michelle Forbis distributed programs.

Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church fellowship hall.

The reception table was centered with an arrangement of pink carnations and pink lighted tapers. The wedding cake was cut by the bridal couple and served by Ruby Dillingham. Others assisting were Mary Dixon, Edna Joyner, Eunice Meadors and Betty Waters.

The bride's portrait was displayed near the bride's table.

The bride is a graduate of Eastern Wayne High School and Wayne Community College. She is also a graduate of East Carolina University. She graduated magna cum laude. She will enter ECU in the fall as a graduate student. The bridegroom graduated from Colonial Heights High School, Colonial Heights, Va. and is employed at the Pro Shop at the Greenville Country Club.

The parents of the bridegroom entertained at a pig pickin' at the church recreation area Friday. Assisting were Barbara Nobles and Mae Curry. Guests included members of the wedding party, friends and out-of-town guests.

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip to the mountains.

Dear Abby

Woman Calls It Quits On Husband

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I was married to John in the Catholic Church back in 1956. John disappeared in 1958. He took a ride one Sunday afternoon and never came back. Nobody knows what happened to him. The police looked for him, but after several years they gave up.

I never filed for divorce because I kept thinking that one day John might turn up. He never did and his family say they have no idea where he is. For all I know he may be dead, or married to someone else.

Is there any way I can get a divorce? Or do I need one after all this time? I'd like to start my life over as a single woman, but how can I if I'm still married? I'm tired of waiting. I don't think the pope would have waited this long.

HELP ME IN MISSOURI

DEAR HELP: Your parish priest can help you. In recent years the Catholic Church has become more liberal concerning annulments. I am advised that your marriage could be annulled with very little difficulty.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I'm crazy about the U.P.S. man who delivers the mail to my office every day. He seems plenty interested in me but isn't making any moves. I have reason to believe that he thinks I am not available, but I am.

What do I say to a guy I see for only as long as it takes me to sign his clipboard? I want him to know that I am available and would like to get to know him better.

LUCY IN BUFFALO

DEAR LUCY: You need a pal in the office to help further your cause. You could conveniently just happen to be away from your desk the next time Mr. U.P.S. delivers the mail. Your "co-conspirator" could then say to him, "I think Lucy could be interested in you; would you like me to arrange it?"

* * *

DEAR ABBY: "Loves Love, Not Sex" and her husband have a communication gap. I used to feel the same way she does and hated every time my husband wanted to have sexual relations. (Notice, I did not say "make love," because it wasn't love.)

My husband was an unkempt, selfish boor who disregarded his partner's feelings as well as the basic rules of personal hygiene. I talked to him, I bought him underwear, soap, deodorants, but to no avail. Gradually, I was so repulsed, I became frigid and gave up. When I could no longer stand the smell, I divorced him.

Now I'm married to a man who "makes love" instead of just relieving himself.

Tell "Loves Love" if she really loves her husband she will tell him what she likes and what she doesn't like. And if he loves her he will change his habits to try to please her. And if he doesn't, she had better change husbands.

MAKING LOVE AT 52

DEAR MAKING: It's amazing how many readers (men as well as women) write to complain about their spouses' total disregard for hygiene. And as for lovemaking, the getting is always in the giving.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By JULIE HICKS

There are some new books available now at the library which are sure to please the would-be or experienced craftsperson.

"The Complete Cross-Stitch" by Thelma R. Newman is a comprehensive projects book which offers patterns for making scores of decorative and useful items adorned with the ever-popular cross-stitch. Fifty-two stitches with how-to diagrams are given along with instructions on applying them. For the creative needleworker, the author suggests many ideas and themes, and shows ways to transfer them to the fabric. Photographs and drawings complement the text, making each project easy and enjoyable to do.

"Quilting: Patchwork and Applique," by the editors of Sunset Books and Magazine, is a step-by-step guide to one of the country's great folk arts. Techniques of the craft are explained in detail. Beautiful color photographs highlight the examples of the many projects: bed, lamp and crib quilts; wall hangings, table linens; pillows; and articles of clothing. Helpful instructions on how to select and use quilting supplies, fabrics and batting are included as well as suggestions on the display of the handiwork.

It is probably never too early to begin those Christmas projects. "The Christmas Crafts Book" is one book which can help you prepare for the festive season. The whole family can join in the fun of making Christmas cards, candles, tree ornaments, attractive centerpieces and gifts of many types.

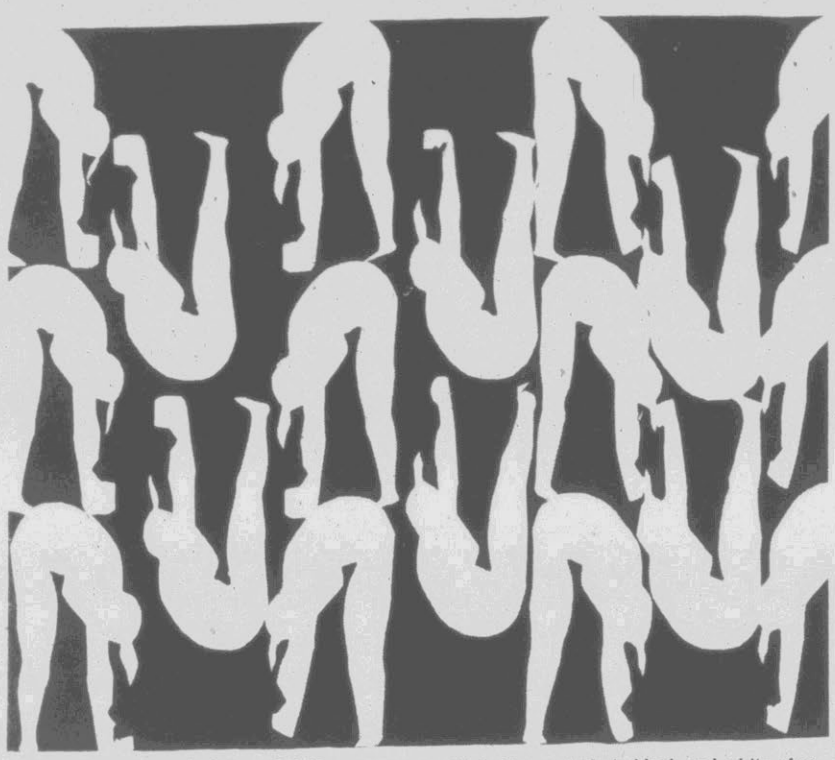
Pitt Student Art On View At Museum



EVERY WHICH WAY PLUS ... C.J. Couras, an eighth grader at G.R. Whitfield School in Grimesland, is the artist who created this multiple figure study in black and white of someone getting in their daily exercises.

The three rooms of art by children in the Pitt County Schools, now being exhibited in the North and South Galleries of the Greenville Museum of Art, 802 South Evans Street, is one of the "must-see" current events in Greenville.

Student artists from all the Pitt County Schools, ranging from the first efforts of kindergarteners to that of high school seniors, have contributed their finest efforts. The net result is an inside garden of art that is as cheerful as children at play and as bright as an early May morning.

People, familiar friends, family members, fantasy creations that are a hybrid of real and imagined people populate these drawings, paintings in crayons and watercolor, and figures created in papiermache. There are landscapes and seascapes, with and without perspective. Sometimes a person may have one short, one long leg; or farm animals may look like they're standing on top of a barn instead of in a distant meadow. But that matters not in the least. It's all so natural and charming, so revealing of the happy emotions of young people. Children in younger grades have no inhibitions about color, and their work is a Gypsy riot of a rainbow of brilliant hues.

Like show of art by city school children which preceded the county show, joy in expression is the keynote to their art. Each spring the Greenville Museum of Art brings to the public these delightful shows, and each year the rewards are as great as the year before. These are welcome events, and should not be missed by anyone who responds to beauty as expressed by young people.

Serious Questions

CHICAGO (UPI) — People who called the publishers of Encyclopedia Britannica to ask for information during 1981 generally asked much more serious questions than in previous years, a spokeswoman for the publisher says.

"I can't remember a time when we receeived so many questions on so many serious subjects," said Virginia Stenberg, who heads the Library Research Service for the Encyclopedia. The Service receives an average of 10,000 calls per month for information. Miss Stenberg speculated the trend is a sign of the times.

"I think we are entering an era when Americans will be taking a more serious look at themselves, their environment, and their future," she said. "The questions asked in 1981 are on sub19s about which there are no easy answers. We provide what information we can.

Whereas one of most frequently asked questions in 1980 was how to make beer, in 1981 the topics frequently asked about included world terrorism, adolescent suicide, nuclear safety, and child abuse.

WINSTON-SALEM — Christopher Brown, a high school dance student in ballet at the North Carolina School of the Arts, Winston-Salem, is the recipient of the Randy Jones Dance Scholarship.

Brown, a native of New Bern, received the scholarship from Jones at Awards Day ceremonies held on Wednesday. The scholarship, given for the first time this year, will cover the cost of tuition, housing and incidental expenses for the current 1981-82 school year.

Raleigh native Randy Jones, who rose to fame as the cowboy member of the disco singing/dancing group, the Village People, was back on home turf Wednesday when he returned to attend the Awards Day. He was a student at the North Carolina School of the Arts when he left in 1975 to dance with the Agnes de Mille Heritage Dance Theater in which he appeared in classical ballets such as "Rodeo."

Later, a French musical producer recruited Jones to join an all-male rock/disco group he was forming. The group, the Village People, has made musical history with hits such as "Macho Man," "YMCA," and "In The Navy." The Village People were also featured in the movie musical, "Can't Stop The Music."

Currently, Randy Jones has ready for release a new solo album entitled "Breakout." He is also doing a musical with Kathy Rigby, "Meet Me In St. Louis."

NEW YORK (UPI) — Neil Simon has sold the 1,100-seat O'Neill Theater on Broadway to the Jujamcyn Theaters group, for an estimated $4 million. Simon bought the theater a decade ago, and has presented most of his subsequent plays there, but the O'Neill has been losing money for some years.

Faced With Problem Of $1 Billion To Spend

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — The J. Paul Getty Museum has a problem that most other art museums would love to have — how to use best the $1 billion endowment it received from the estate of the late oil financier. What its trustees decide could have a profound effect on the international art scene.

Getty, who died in 1976 without ever seeing the museum, turned it into the richest in the nation and probably the world with a bequest of 4 million shares of Getty Oil Co. stock and other securities worth well over $1 billion.

The windfall has stirred concern in the art world because it immediately put the Getty ahead of any other museum in the country in terms of money it must — not just can — spend.

Federal tax laws require that the Getty distribute 4.5 percent of the bequest in three out of every four years. That means at least $50 million and probably more will be spent almost every year. By contrast, New York's much larger Metropolitan Museum of Art operates on about $27 million annually.

"They have a tremendous ability to dominate the market," said Los Angeles gallery owner Michael Schwartz. "With the kind of funds they have, there really isn't much competition. If they decide to go after a particular piece, there's really nothing to stop them from getting it and if they were to concentrate on any particular area, they could drastically affect the marketplace."

Getty was primarily interested in classical antiquities, French decorative arts and Baroque and Renaissance paintings. And while his interests will continue to be reflected, Getty Museum President Harold Williams says funds will be directed into other areas.

"We will be expanding the collection and probably expanding the scope of the collection beyond what it is today. Second, we are now exploring various ways apart from building the museum (collection) where we can make a contribution to the field of the arts locally and nationally," said Williams, who was chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission before joining the museum.

"Third, a very substantial part of the endowment will be reinvested to maintain the value of the endowment so that we will be able over time to continue to fund the collection."

There are some indications that the Getty may share its wealth. The museum purchased Poussin's "Holy Family" jointly with the Norton Simon Museum in Pasadena last year and the two institutions will take turns displaying it. Schwartz and others say more collaborative efforts are in the works, although Williams declined to confirm this.

"We've all been aware of the Getty's situation for some years," said John Ross of the Metropolitan in New York. "And I don't know what (comment) we could add."

Philippe de Montebello, the Met's director, told the Los Angeles Times earlier this year, "I think they (the Getty) will be very prudent and not want to be the ones running up the art market, but obviously if they want something bad enough they have the resources to buy it."

Ian Kennedy, a spokesman in the New York office of Christie's, the art auction house, said he doubted if the Getty would flex its new financial muscles publicly.

"I think it will affect prices, but only for the best things because that's all they'll be buying," Kennedy swid. "I don't know what effect it will have on the auction market. Getty won't want to be seen buying publicly, and of course, they're very aware that if they pour money into the market, it will push up prices and be self-defeating."

If the Getty does begin to acquire new works in any volume, it will probably need another facility for storage and display because space at its Malibu site is limited.

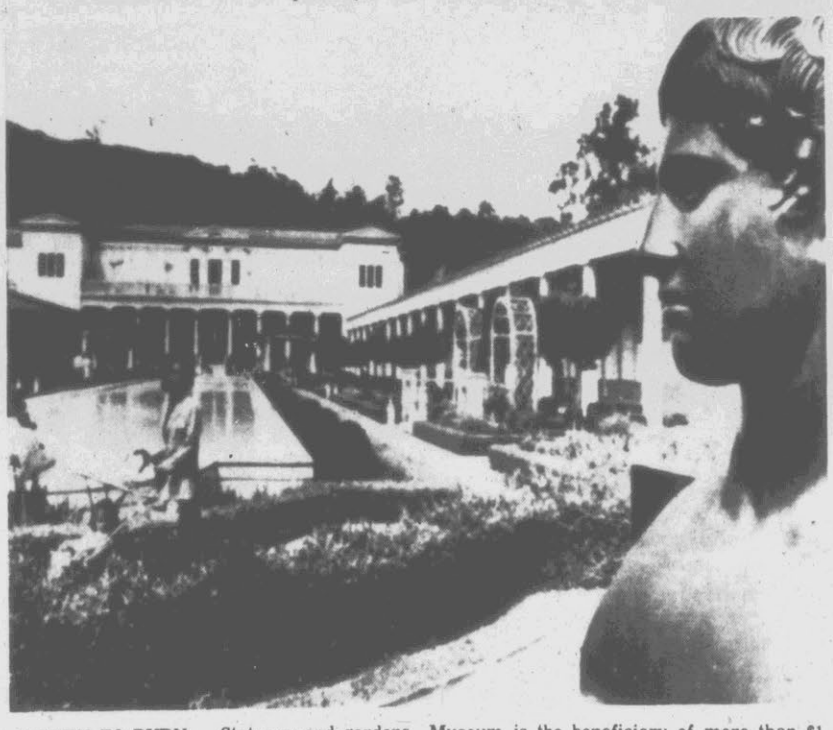
Built at a cost of about $17 million near Getty's ranch house on a bluff overlooking the Pacific, the museum is a stunning recreation of the classical Villa del Papiri, a Roman villa found at Herculaneum.

About 2.5 million people have toured the museum since its 1974 opening. Parking is limited but admission is free, and the precise Getty once figured its operating expenses were costing him about $3, after-tax, per visitor.

Some of the new funds may go for expanded fellowships. The Getty already has interns from several colleges and has sent questionnaires to about 80 Southern California colleges inquiring about their fine arts programs and facilities. The staff is expanding, with Getty director Stephen Garrett estimating that another 20 people will be hired this year for a total of 130 employees.

The Getty may also expand into new areas technologically. The museum has acquired a Massachusetts archival company called RILA which puts out abstracts of art and architectural publications.

Williams said earlier this year that RILA may ultimately become "an art data base of literature and pictu e0208 ibe the world and ultimately accessible from any location in 01:27 the world," a hint that the Getty may have its eye on cable and satellite delivery of art.



MONEY TO BURN ... Statuary and gardens adorn grounds of the J. Paul Getty Museum in Malibu, Calif. In a building patterned after an ancient Roman villa, the J. Nairobi's Thorn Tree City's Meeting Place

EDITH M. LEDERER
Associated Press Writer

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — For 21 years, Nairobi's famed thorn tree has been shedding its tiny leaves into the drinks of thousands of Kenyans, Safari-bound tourists and refugees from neighboring countries.

The tree, nearly 100 feet tall, dominates Nairobi's most popular sidewalk cafe — called the Thorn Tree — and has become the city's best known meeting place.

"The thorn tree at the Thorn Tree is a landmark in Nairobi and in many ways marks the crossroads of East Africa," claimed George Crossland, general manager of the New Stanley Hotel which owns oth tree and cafe. "There's just no place else like it for thousands of miles."

When it's sunny, the thorn tree, which stands outside the eight-story hotel, shades customers from the heat. When it rains, Crossland said, customers rush off leaving an average of 10 bills unpaid.

The bulletin board around the thorn tree's base offers perhaps the best message service in East Africa. Notes in a dozen languages offer everything from rides upcountry to adjustable crampons for mountain climbing to sexual encounters.

One recent message addressed to any "Oklahoma preppie" concluded: "Don't get drunk, and brush your teeth every day." Another said: "Mona — I'm alone here with four guys, where are you?"

The first thorn tree, planted at the cafe to commemorate the opening of the newly renovated New Stanley Hotel in September 1959, died about 18 months later because washing soda used to swab down the cafe floor penetrated its roots.

In June 1961, a second thorn tree just under six feet tall was planted to replace it. Today it is a towering specimen of acacia xanthophloea, a native East African tree popular with landscape gardeners and lions who like to manicure their claws on its yellow-bark trunk.

No lions have been sighted at the Thorn Tree. But Dr. Susanne Mueller, a research associate from Boston University's African Studies Center, claims, "Anything that can be bought and sold in Nairobi is available at the Thorn Tree, from women to jewels to rugs."

Ms. Mueller, a longtime off-and-on resident of Nairobi, said the Thorn Tree is a one-time stop for some people and "a home away from home" for others.

"Every new refugee group finds its way there and some regular characters have been around for years," she added.

Ethiopian refugee Yohannes Gebregzie, a contractor who describes himself as the "lord mayor of the New Stanley," said: "The beauty of Nairobi remains the Thorn Tree — there's no other place.

Classical Repertory Theater Planned

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Drama Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — If you said Broadway could support a new classical repertory theater whose troupe was modeled on the Royal Shakespeare Company, odds are you'd be put in a home for the mentally askew.

Same thing might happen were you a successful TV star whose idea of fun is to fly north to Halifax, Nova Scotia, to perform or direct the works of Ibsen, Chekhov and Shakespeare in the dead of winter.

Tony Randall, star of NBC's "Love, Sidney," has done both. But he's not wearing a canvas jacket, hasn't been put in a dark, quiet room and told he'll be there until his head clears.

He's now actually planning that classical rep company with a close friend, John Neville, head of that Halifax theater where he's spent the last three winters, happily ensconced in the classics.

For 41 years, the dapper, articulate Randall has built a solid reputation as a light comedy actor on stage, in films and in such hit TV series as "Mr. Peepers" and the still re-running "The Odd Couple."

But way deep down, classical theater "is the only thing I've been interested in, it's all I've ever wanted to do," says the actor. And this longing led one day to what you'd call a logical question.

"I said, 'Why do I have to go all the way up to Halifax to do this?'" he recalls asking Neville. "And it kept coming up, why don't we have it in New York?"

That was the start. The actual work began — no troupe has been formed yet, no theater secured — with the unsurprising discovery that what they had in mind would require money, a lot of it.

"Well, I had sworn I would never do another TV series," says the actor, whose oath occurred in 1977 at the end of "The Tony Randall Show," in which he played a widowed judge for a season.

But he reversed himself last year in Halifax when delegates from the TV arm of Warner Communications came to see him. He'd made a TV movie about a single, middle-aged man living in New York.

"They wanted me to make a TV series of it," he says. "I could not be swayed. But they found a way to get to me: They said, 'We'll give you the money for the theater.'"

He made "Love, Sidney." They parted with $150,000 in what he calls "seed money" for the theater. Since then, he says, "we've made wonderful progress. That seemed to get the ball rolling as nothing has."

As the ball rolled, he sought a Broadway home for his troupe. On 42nd Street, of all places.

Once alive and glittering with legitimate theater, the street, between Seventh and Eighth Avenues, is now a garish neon eyesore.

But Randall knew New York City was planning a massive cleaning-up of the Times Square area, with construction of skyscrapers, maybe a new hotel, and most important to him, rehabilitation of a row of fine old once-legitimate theaters

TWO BAD ONES — Tim Curry and Bernadette Peters star as the dastardly Rooster and Lilly in the special benefit North Carolina premieres of the movie musical, "Annie." Premieres with benefits to go to the UNC Center for Public Television will be shown in Wilmington, Asheville, Raleigh and Winston-Salem. The movie's director, Joe Layton, is also director of the outdoor drama, "The Lost Colony," which plays on Roanoke Island each summer.

WOOW Classics

Music for invigorating early summer listening has been selected by hostess Karen Hause for her "WOOW Classics" program. The program of varied classical music is broadcast each Sunday from 10 p.m. to midnight over WOOW Radio, 1340 on the dial.

Tonight's program opens with a colorful Handel composition, "Concerto Grosso in C Major," also known as the Alexander Fest music. The next selection is Holst's "The Planets" with Leopold Stokowski conducting the Los Angeles Philharmonic and the Roger Wagner Chorale.

These works will be followed by two other pieces — the Overture to "Rienzi" by Wagner, with the Bamberg Symphony Orchestra conducted by Otto Gerdes; and the "Piano Concerto No. 1" by Beethoven, with Vladimir Ashkenazy and the Chicago Symphony conducted by George Solti.

Tonight marks the final two-hour broadcast of "WOOW Classics" in the 10 p.m. to midnight time slot. Beginning May 30, the program will go to four hours, beginning at 8 p.m. and concluding at midnight.

Hospitality House

WASHINGTON — Hostess Kay Currie has filmed today's "Hospitality House" (being aired from noon until 12:30 p.m. on WITN-TV) on loation in Belhaven at the River Forest Manor. To film the tour of the house, the first of the place ever recorded on TV, WITN's mobile production center was taken to Belhaven.

Built in 1899 by John Aaron Wilkinson as a country manor home, River Forest Manor is appointed with crystal chandeliers, cut glass windows, hand-carved ceilings and a massive tapestry, all still existing today. The tour ends with Mrs. Axon Smith, Jr. shown enjoying the manor's hot bubbly bath facility.

The property was purchased by Axon Smith Jr. in 1947. He turned the house into a combination restaurant, inn and marina. River Forest Manor is now operated by Mrs. Smith and her son, Axon Smith III.

Another feature on today's program is a mini-fashion show that takes place outside the manor.

A special guest on the show is gemologist Mark Smith, who gives tips on how to shop for diamonds and gold, with words of caution on what to avoid in buying gems.

AN ITCH TO FISH — Aaron Rathbun, 4, who takes his fishing seriously, displays his catch as he tends to an itch at the same item. Aaron competed in a weekend Huck Finn Derby fishing contest at a pond in North Stonington, Conn. The painted freckles are part of the fisherman's effect. (AP Laserphoto)

Williamston Youth Is Chosen Demo Ambassador To Israel

WILLIAMSTON — Tim Rogers, a rising senior at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, is one of four Democratic college students nationally to be chosen as a student ambassador to Israel.

Announcement of the Rogers' selection was made by the North Carolina Federation of College Democrats. Sponsor of the ambassadorship program is the North American Jewish Student Network. The organization recently asked both the Republican National Committee and the Democratic National Committee to select four students from among American colleges and universities for a political and educational tour of Israel.

The student ambassadors are leaving from New York for Israel today. On their arrival in Tel Aviv, the group will begin an extensive tour of Israel that will include visits to Jerusalem, Bethlehem and Haifa, and tours into the occupied areas of the West Bank, Golan Heights and Gaza Strip. The ambassadors will attend government briefings, university lectures and religious services.

The highlight of the trip is to be a private dinner and reception at the residence of Prime Minister Menachem Begin. The students are due to return to the United States on June 7. From New York they will go to Washington, D.C. for a press conference about their trip.

Rogers is the only president of a college political organization, Democrat or Republican, to be chosen as one of the ambassadors. A major in political science at UNC-Chapel Hill, he is the recipient of an award for outstanding cadet leadership, for his role as commander of the AFROTC Flight at UNC.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Willie Rogers Jr. Rogers is the sheriff of Martin County.

Encampment At Bath

BATH — A Revolutionary War living history encampment is to be held June 5-6 in Historic Bath. Thirty members of the 2nd North Carolina Regiment of Foot will present various military demonstrations to include displays of equipment, firing of weapons, military drill and meals prepared in the manner of soldiers' meals in the late 18th century.

The 2nd N.C. Regiment has taken part in many living history programs and is dedicated to interpreting for the public the ways of life and military experiences as lived by soldiers during the Revolutionary War. Members are willing to answer questions concerning their activities.

On Saturday, events will get under way at 9 a.m. and continue until 5 p.m. At 10 a.m., the troops will parade through Historic Bath.

On Sunday, activities will begin at 1 p.m. and end at 3:30 p.m.

Demonstrations during these two days will occur continously, representing the way things would have happened during an actual encampment a little more than two centuries ago. Aside from military talents, some members of the regiment will demonstrate their skill in creating authentic crafts of the late 1700s.

In addition to the military activities, guided tours through Historic Bath will be available and lunch (for a fee) will be provided.

Living History At Ft. Macon

FORT MACON STATE PARK — The 1st Regiment of North Carolina Volunteers will return to Fort Macon State Park June 5-6. The volunteers will present a living history program at the fort from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily on each of the two days.

There will be no charge for the public performance.

The 1st Regiment will return for additional performances on two other weekends this year — July 31-Aug. 1 and Sept. 25-26.

Fort Macon State Park is located four miles east of Atlantic Beach.

Morgan Art In New York Show

ECU Ocean Research

ECU News Bureau

BEAUFORT — A team of scientists headed by Dr. Stan Riggs of East Carolina University is preparing for a 20-day ocean research project to begin Saturday aboard the research vessel Cape Hatteras.

Loading of the expedition's equipment and outfitting the ship began Wednesday at the Duke Marine Laboratory docks at Beaufort. It will continue through today.

Riggs, an ECU geologist, is a widely known authority on world deposits of phosphates whose research centers on studies of vast deposits believed to be lying along the Atlantic's continental shelf. The National Science Foundation has awarded a grant for Riggs' research project entitled, "Genesis of the Phosphorite Sediment Sequence on the Mid-Atlantic Continental Shelf," which involves 23 days of ship time this year and 18 days in 1983.

The R/V Cape Hatteras was dedicated in formal ceremonies in Beaufort last Oct. 2 and is operated by the Duke-University of North Carolina Oceanographic Consortium.

Klinger Won't Desert Show

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Reporter

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — 'Tis a Farr, Farr better thing to stick with a hit television series than to opt for greener pastures — at least for Jamie Farr.

Jamie is the reluctant GI hiding behind a Cyrano schnozz as Corporal Klinger in the "M-A-S-H" series. He is content to remain in the role until the series folds next March.

Four of his fellow "M-A-S-H"ers deserted the astonishingly popular show. Doubtless, they had their reasons, but none has equaled, much less surpassed, the success they enjoyed in "M-A-S-H."

First to flee was Wayne Rogers (Trapper John) who tried an unsuccessful series of his own and finally landed on his feet in "House Calls," although its ratings do not compare with the "M-A-S-H" Nielsens.

Next to go AWOL was McLean Stevenson (Colonel Henry Blake). He bombed out in several pilot shows and a series or two and has been very low profile since.

Then Larry Linville (addlepated Major Frank Burns) split. He was last seen in a supporting role in the "Herbie: The Love Bug" series which may not survive its debut season.

Last to uncouple himself from television's current mother lode series was Gary Burghoff (teddy bear-loving Radar). It's as if he disappeared into a manhole.

Whatever their reasons for leaving the show, the TV-Q — recognition quotient with viewers — might have been a factor. Individually, the "M-A-S-H" cast rates high because of the show's large and loyal following.

The departed actors may have been misled by agents or other advisers in the mistaken assumption that their individual popularity was as great as their characterizations and the show itself.

In any case, Farr, like Alan Alda (Hawkeye Pierce) Loretta Swit (Major Houlihan) and William Christopher (Father Mulcahy) wisely chose to stick around.

"It never occurred to me to leave," said Farr, whose distinctive Lebanese apearance makes him one of the most visible actors on the screen. His TV-Q is No. 11 among almost 1,000 actors in movies and TV.

"'M-A-S-H' is the most exciting thing in my career. It made me famous and slightly rich and something I can be proud of. For 16 years I was going virtually nowhere with my acting career.

"I struggled to get a day's work here or there. I was lucky if I got a week's work in a movie. I spent lots of time in unemployment lines — but not a minute since I was cast as Klinger."

Klinger began as a recurring minor character, a disenchanted GI trying for a Section Eight (psychopathic discharge) by dressing up in outlandish female garb.

After the first season Klinger became a regular. His part grew. He moved up to company clerk when Radar "went home" and this year he was promoted to sergeant. He doesn't wear feminine finery anymore.

"Getting rid of the women's clothes was a risk," Farr said. "It was a gamble whether the gimmick was more valuable to the show than the actor. It turned out viewers like Klinger — and me — just as well without the dresses.

"Klinger still got laughs. He's so bizarre he can do anything and the viewers will believe him. He's a total wacko but likable and believable."

Magic Show At Busch Gardens

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — An all-new production, "The World's Greatest Illusions," a 40-minute stage show of magic, is now being presented in the Globe Theater in the English village of The Old Country, Busch Gardens. Six performances are given each day beginning at 10 a.m. with the last one at 5 p.m. After June 19, a total of eight performances will be presented daily.

Admission to the magic show is included in the $12.50 per person admission price which includes all rides, shows and attractions at The Old Country.

On Aug. 17, 1944, British RAF bombers staged one of the great fire raids of World War II, dumping 70,000 incendiaries on the German ports of Kiel and Stettin.

Ticket Prices

The Associated Press article about North Carolina Symphony ticket prices appearing in the May 6 issue of The Daily Reflector is misleading, according to Dixie O'Connor, the symphony's public relations director.

Ms. O'Connor states the prices mentioned in the AP article should have made it clear that the prices mentioned refers only for concerts held in Wake County. "Each chapter of the North Carolina Symphony has set its own subscription prices for the upcoming 1982-83 season," Ms. O'Connor notes.

"In Greenville, ticket prices for the All-Tchaikovsky concert to be held Wednesday, March 2, 1983, are $8 for adults and $4 for senior citizens and students. Those interested in buying tickets in advance are to call Pat Carter at 752-3021 or Annette Dawkins at 758-6648."

The $8 and $4 ticket prices for the concert in Greenville are lower than the $12 and $5 figures cited in the May 6 AP article. The $12 and $5 figures are applicable for Wake County concerts.

New Works For Houston Ballet

HOUSTON, Texas — Works by choreographers Ashton, Balanchine and Kylian are being added to the 1982-83 season of the Houston Ballet. Ballets by Wright, Moreland, Lander and Stevenson will also be featured, and the company has commissioned a new work by Texas choreographer Farrell Dyde.

The Houston season will open Sept. 23 in Jones Hall with a production of Stevenson's "Peer Gynt."

From Confusion To Harmony

The Power To Change Your Life. By Kathryn Jason and Joe McMahon. Garden City, N.Y., Doubleday & Co. Hard copy. 223 pages. $13.95.

Many of the 1970s "How to have the good life" writers emphasized looking out for number one. Some encouraged us to achieve this egocentrical goal through intimidation while others gave us mini-courses and mini-books promising mini solutions to complex problems.

The authors of "The Power to Change Your Life" tell us "How to" by teaching us to reflect on our own decisions. They believe their method will not only lead us from irrational confusion to rational order, but will also lead us to the "supra-rational" where we can feel in harmony with ourselves and with those around us.

Kathryn Jason and Joe McMahon's style of writing, in spite of some grammatical errors, is quite readable. It affords detailed insights, in layman's language, of the philosophies of psychologists like Victor Frankl and Carl Rogers, among others. The authors present their methods in three parts, preceded by a graphic aid called "Stairway to Effective Decisions." The stairway consists of 12 steps leading upward, beginning with "facing yourself" as step one and climbing to "implementing your plan" as step 12. Below this is a "Stairway to Nowhere'' leading downward, with "hiding from yourself" as number one, and descending to "watching life go by" on the bottom step.

•In the first part of "The Power to Change Your Life," the authors set out to teach us how to understand what is truly important to us. They believe that because our educational system has not helped us to gain the self-understanding important in decision making we are lacking in these skills, and consequently fearful of change. This fear and self-ignorance often makes us feel trapped into someone else's decision, and leaves us feeling that we are the victims of circumstance. After emphasizing that we are responsible for our decisions, Jason and McMahon suggest we break out our pencils and paper as they show us how "to decide to decide."

After making a list of the persons or things that consume significant moments in our lives, we are instructed to place plus signs by those persons or things that at the moment we feel no urgency to decide about. Next we must place a minus sign beside those people or things we are dissatisfied with. The authors give us a list to help get us started, and they suggest that the activity of writing these things down is crucial to our developing our decision-making powers.

After six insightful questions designed to help us discover what is dissatisfying us most, Jason and McMahon list and describe the things which may be holding us back. The list helps us to discover the issues and it aids us in our quest for learning how to accept responsiblity.

•Part two of this book concentrates on discovering ourselves. The chapters on self-discovery discuss: 1) Facing feeling. One good point they make here is that when we ignore our feelings too long, they usually run away with us "resulting in an explosion — rage ... or an implosion — depression." They assert that dealing with problems and feelings the moment they occur is part of the process of deciding to make our lives better. 2) Identifying assumptions. Here the authors list nine assumptions they consider false. They use an effective simile to refute the false assumption "To live is to cope" by saying, "People who cope with life are like swimmers who only tread water. They avoid drowning, but they never really go anywhere." 3) Learning our dominant tendencies. This chapter teaches us that irrational tendencies lead to self-destruction; rational tendencies lead to self-profit; supra-rational tendencies, the ones most desired by the authors, lead to genuine growth. These chapters are full of case histories, self-quizzes and reader exercises to help us in planning our future, using our own reflections and our own values as guides.

•The book's third part, "Discovering the System," gives us a method to help us go about making major decisions. By using the authors' ways of evaluation options, we learn how to avoid making decisions by impulse, in rebellion against feeling victim, and in a state of confusion and conflict.

Their method here includes making two lists, one of positive outcomes and one of negative outcomes and weighing them. They rate each result on a scale of one to four, with one being "hardly important" and four being "most important." After deciding on the best options, we plan where we want to go by setting goals and choosing behavior to accomplish these goals. The decisions should ideally produce a a life of harmony.

"The Power to Change Your Life" is an ongoing approach to problem-solving that can help us discover what we really want out of life — and how to get it. This cannot be accomplished by one reading, but by making numerous lists, by writing down feelings which teach us self-knowledge, and by choosing the best options after we have evaluated them. In short, if we are looking for a guide to help us take the responsibility for living our own lives, reading this book will point us in that direction.

Continued Dedication Needed In Bodybuilding

Pumping Iron — The Art and Sport of Bodybuilding. Text by Charles Gaines, photographs by George Butler. New York, Simon and Schuster. Paper, large format, illustrated, 256 pages, $10.50

With the explosion of interest in bodybuilding in America in recent years, the old familiar question is again being asked — is bodybuilding a sport or an egotistical form of entertainment through self-worship?

This highly readable, finely illustrated, revised and enlarged edition of the earlier book does not succeed (nor seriously strive) to fully answer that question. Essentially, the argument is a moot one, as it really matters little whether or not the desire to create the body beautiful is pigeonholded in one or another category.

What "Pumping Iron" does show is that the people dedicated to bodybuilding are serious about what they do, and thoroughly enjoy the fruits of their labors, whatever the ulterior motive may be. Dedication is an apt word to describe the determination necessary for bodybuilding success. The average man's natural physique is not transformed into the image of ideal man except through a continuing, basically gruelling effort.

Many of the big names in contemporary bodybuilding — the title winners and men of muscle popular in television and movies are prominently featured in this volume — men like Arnold Schwarzenegger, the Austrian who came to America and has since become something of a body cult figure; Lou Ferrigno, the "Incredible Hulk" of television fame; Franco Columbu, the Sicilian shepherd boy who has made good in America and with his wife now operates a thriving clinic in California; and the most serious thinker of the group, Steve Michalik, who has given considerable time to working with young people.

One of the most interesting inclusions in this book is the scattering of insightful viewpoints of family and public reactions to their bodies voiced by these men. Michalik says, for example, "I've been married for seven years and my wife could care less whether I look like a Greek statue ... whether I had a pot-belly or not."

In a similar vein Mike Katz confesses, "I wouldn't want a woman that would have married me because of my physique ... My wife is interested in the real humanness of a person. We don't sit there with her admiring my physique."

Schwarzenegger touches on the a different side of the coin, the awareness of public admiration: "You have to face it if you have a good body, and it is somehow a compliment to a bodybuilder. Sometimes girls are attracted to your body; sometimes homosexuals are attracted to your body." Tony Roma candidly admits that the price for a fine covering of muscles comes high: "I work hard — I go through pain, unbelievable suffering, and I love every minute of it ... You don't enjoy it, but somehow you want to feel that pain in order to know you're having a good workout. And the man who can stand this can achieve the top."

A chapter that looks back on pioneering work of bodybuilding injects an interesting segment of history to "Pumping Iron." Here we learn about the career of that hero of all skinny boys, Charles Atlas, and how he had the foresight to turn his personal bodily achievement into a lucrative business through a widespread advertising campaign in comic books and other reading material favored by youths; of Sigmund Klein, one of the first to seriously systemize carefully planned bodybuilding techniques in gymnasiums especially designed and equipped for the purpose; of the successful movie careers of men like Steve Reeves who filled the demand for men with good looks and spectacular muscles for swashbuckling adventure movies; and the proliferation of muscle magazines designed to capture a primarily young male audience.

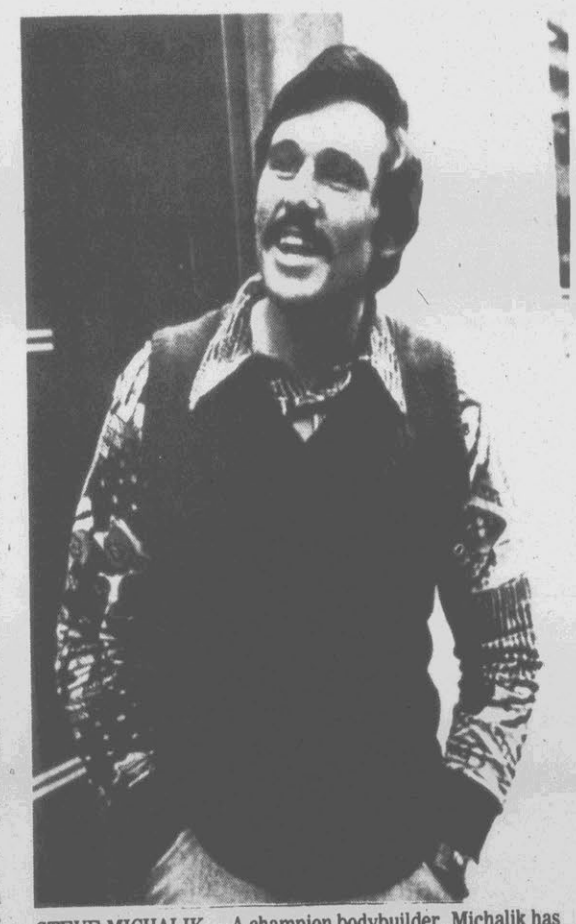
Non-bodybuilding persons will undoubtedly admire those who have the tenacity to dedicate the greater part of every waking hour to the singular determination to physically be the best. And on the contemporary scene, it is an expensive proposition, involving costly equipment, large amounts of top quality foods and vitamins essential to maintaining strength and energy, and the expense of traveling to competitions held across the United States and in foreign countries.

Formal posing for competitions is a highly developed art form that requires an actor's sense of timing combined with an uninhibited flair to readily indulge in narcissistic display. If questioned about the logic of all that hard work for mere display, bodybuilders are likely to point out that in nature it is almost always the male who has the most colorful feathers or the most attractive fur.

"Pumping Iron" is an honest book in that it never makes the road to success seem an easy one. The physical pain, the ordeal of constant discipline, the rigors of competition are realistically depicted. But the book equally shows that for those who are hooked on bodybuilding, there can be no other way of life whatever sacrifices are required.

From any viewpoint, "Pumping Iron" is a fascinating look at a way of life that is attracting a growing number of men (and a small but ardent group of women) and is steadily gaining a larger public audience.

Jerry Raynor



STEVE MICHALIK ... A champion bodybuilder, Michalik has devoted considerable time to youth groups and other organizations at his own expense in an effort to project the image of bodybuilders as persons with minds as well as rippling muscles.

Tar River Poetry Wins Accolades

"The Last Straw," a poem by Minnesota poet Philip Dacey that apeared in the Spring 1981 issue of East Carolina University's poetry magazine, "Tar River Poetry," has been selected for inclusion in "The Pushcart Prize VII: Best of the Small Presses."

Peter Makuck, editor of "Tar River Poetry," was recently informed by The Pushcart Cart of the decision to include Dacey's poem in the prestigious annual publication. "The Pushcart" is an annual anthology that reprints the best poems, short stories and essays published by small presses and literary magazines throughout the country.

A poet whose work is used in the anthology receives $100 in addition to the career boost that goes along with publication in "The Pushcart."

"Tar River Poetry" and other publications from which works are chosen for the anthology received both a hard and a soft cover copy of the volume — plus prominent acknowledgement as the original publisher of the selected works.

"Tar River Poetry" in the last two years has received national recognition in having poems from the magazine chosen for inclusion in nationally known anthologies such as "The Anthology of Magazine Verse" and "The Yearbook of American Poetry."

"Altogether," Makuck says, "a total of 13 poems orginally appearing in 'Tar River Poetry' have been reprinted in anthologies."

Additionally, "Tar River Poetry" has received favorable reviews in "The Literary Magazine Review and in "The Library Journal." In the former, "Tar River Poetry" was reviewed along with a number of older and more firmly established literary publications like "The Georgia Review" and "The Prairie Schooner."

The reviewer in "The Library Journal" wrote that "Tar River Poetry" ... "has a unique claim. Most of the material is written not just for other poets and academics, but for the general public. The poems are clear, precise, and, if this issue is typical, tend to be involved with close inspection of the thing and eveents rather than with the inner layers of the poet's mind.

"Most contributors enjoy long publishing records, success, and appreciation. They are not amateurs, and they cannot be accused of your typical daily newspaper verse.

"Also, the book reviews (while more for the teacher than the average layperson) are excellent. Well worth considering."

Among poets who have contributed original material to "Tar River Poetry" are Pulitzer and National Book Award winners and nominees like A.R. Ammons, William Stafford, Samuel Hazo, William Pitt Root, David Ignatow, Gary Miranda and others.

Local poets and poets from a number of countries — Germany, England, Canada, Japan, Australia and Czechoslovakia — have also had poems accepted for issues of "Tar River Poetry."

Author Kathryn Jason Recalls ECU Days

Her student days at East Carolina University, and especially her encounters with former Chancellor Leo Jenkins, are events that author Kathryn Jason remembers with pleasure.

A native of Rocky Mount, Ms. Jason is co-author with Dr. J.J. (Joe) McMahon of "The Power to Change Your Life," published recently by Doubleday & Co, New York.

In a letter relating events in the years she attended ECU, she writes: "One of the strongest impressions made on me during those two years in Greenville came as a result of an experience with the chancellor of the university at that time, Dr. Leo Jenkins.

"After my first quarter, I enrolled in an algebra class which was mandatory for my math requirement. I was unfortunate enough to have as a professor a very elderly man who should have been retired many years before and who was completely out of touch with his students. He began lecturing five minutes before the bell rang each day whether anyone was in the room or not. When the bell rang at the end of the class, he would close the door and keep talking if he had not finished working through a problem. All of us were nervous wrecks, wondering how we would make our next class on time. I was working in the College Union the hour following math class, so of course it was important for me to arrive on time."

Ms. Jason relates that her efforts to be transferred to another math class were of no avail. "I was about to lose my job because I never appeared on time. I knew if I lost my job I wasn't going to eat that quarter!"

In desperation, she decided the only solution "was to appeal to the compassion of Dr. Jenkins. One Friday night, in a moment of complete audacity, I went to the phone, telephoned him at his home and explained my predicament. To my surprise, he told me to come to his office at 8:30 the following Monday morning.

"At his office, I explained that my mother had just died, that I had made all A's the first quarter, that I was dependent on my job, and that I was in great need of having a reasonable professor in order to keep my grade average for my scholarship.

"Within ten minutes," Ms. Jason notes, "Dr. Jenkins picked up the phone and arranged for me to transfer to another class under a marvelously competent professor."

Ms. Jason looks back to that time as one when "I began to see life as open to me — to see that if I had a good record and behaved responsibly and assertively, that reasonable, sensitive people would respond to that."

Recently, Ms. Jason found out that her sister Judy — a senior at ECU when Ms. Jason was a freshman — had also been helped by Dr. Jenkins.

"The summer before I enrolled at ECU, when our mother was in the hospital with terminal cancer, my sister Judy had nowhere to go because we had to give up our home. There was not enough room for everyone at my sister Pat's home. Judy stayed at the Presbyterian Youth Center, but could not find a summer job. Finally, she decided the only person who could help would be Dr. Jenkins. When she went to see him, told him her situation, he immediately arranged a summer position for her."

After discovering the incident of the help Dr. Jenkins had given her sister, Ms. Jason adds "I have no idea if Dr. Jenkins knew I was Judy's sister when I talked to him. I think he must have found us either extremely presumptous or very courageous!"

Kathryn Jason — born Sara Kathryn Biggs — finished high school at West Edgecombe High School, Rocky Mount, in 1963. After two years at ECU, she attended the University of Wisconsin, where she earned her B.A. in English. Next she taught one year of high school English in Appleton, Wis., and then became a photographic model, working first in Chicago, then in New York.

Later, she made a decision to give up modeling to further her education. She enrolled in the graduate school at New York University, where she earned the M.A. degree in counseling in 1975.

Now, in addition to her own private practice in counseling, Ms. Jason has worked as manager of sales training for an ITT subsidiary and as a consultant to Xerox Learning Systems.

The idea to write "The Power to Change Your Life" arose from an exchange of ideas with McMahon, a doctor of philosophy she met three years ago. "After exchanging our ideas, we decided to combine them, and the result is the book," she said.

The book originally was published in Brazil, where Ms. Jason spends part of each year. During a recent visit back home to Rocky Mount, she appeared on a number of regional television shows to promote her book.

Ms. Jason points out that her family is "an ECU family. Four of us, my sisters Pat and Judy, my brother Jim, and me, all were students at ECU. My mother, the late Louise Groge Biggs, also attended ECU."

ROCKY MOUNT NATIVE ... Sara Kathryn Biggs Jason is co-author with Dr. J.J. McMahon of "The Power to Change Your Life." For two years she attended East Carolina University, and recalls assistance given to her and to her sister Judy by former Chancellor Leo Jenkins.

'84 Primary Trail Already Begun As Hopefuls Eye New Hampshire

By RON AMADON

CONCORD, N.H. (UPI) — There's an old story in New Hampshire about two women gossiping over the back fence. One asks if the other will vote for presidential candidate X.

"Oh no, I couldn't possibly vote for him. I've only met him four times." she replies.

The story may be apocryphal, but the situation is realistic. If you live in New Hampshire, there is a pretty good chance you will shake hands with some presidential candidates in the year or so before the election.

In the state with the first major presidential primary, campaigning is conducted on a personal level reminiscent of school board contests elsewhere.

Would-be presidents are already on the hustings around New Hampshire two years in advance of the nation's first 1984 presidential primary, hoping to avoid being the "candidate X."

Former Vice President Walter Mondale, Sens. John Glenn, D-Ohio, Alan Cranston, D-Calif., and former Florida Gov. Reubin Askew have all visited the state as thinly-veiled presidential candidates for 1984.

Why do they come long before voters cast the first ballots in tiny mountain community Dixville Notch? Why line up such early support among a handful of people? The state has fewer people (900,000) than some cities.

Political history, that's why.

Little known outside of Georgia, Jimmy Carter started campaigning in New Hampshire two years before the 1976 Democratic primary. He won in New Hampshire, went on to win the White House.

Ronald Reagan fought hard to capture the 1976 GOP nomination, but narrowly lost New Hampshire to then President Gerald Ford. By 1978, Reagan's campaign team began cranking up for 1980 — thus giving Reagan almost four years of persistent exposure in the Granite State.

Candidates now start so early some New Hampshire residents aren't sure when the 1984 race began.

Some say it was last fall when Benjamin Fernandez, a 1980 Republican candidate, spoke at Dartmouth College. Others peg the start to Glenn's visit last December. Still others insist it began when Mondale visited in March.

But all agree the campaign to win in New Hampshire two years from now is already underway.

It might appear that all a candidate needs to do is become an early frontrunner, then win in New Hampshire. But it is more complex.

In 1968, President Lyndon Johnson was supposed to win the New Hampshire Democratic primary. He did, but not by enough to satisfy the politicians and the political media. He dropped out shortly thereafter. Vice President Hubert Humphrey became the party's presidential nominee.

In 1972, Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, was supposed to win here. He did, but again, not by as much as expected. Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., ended up as the Democratic nominee.

In 1976, Reagan got nearly 49 percent of the vote and came extremely close to defeating an incumbent president. But Reagan was perceived as a loser because it was supposed he would beat Ford in the conservative GOP state.

Candidates therefore shun the "can't miss" or frontrunner labels. Ideally, a candidate wants to be appear to be one of the pack so that not too much is expected of him or her. Then the candidate can, upon winning, appear to have pulled off a "miracle" finish on election day.

New Hampshire residents enjoy the limelight. The recognition and the millions of dollars that the campaigns bring to the state are as closely guarded by Granite Staters as Old Man Mountain, the great stone face that is the state's symbol.

The Legislature overhwhelmingly passed a bill that requires the state to hold its primary before any other. The national Democratic Party gave in after trying to get New Hampshire to hold its primary later at the time others are held.

"We'll meet two years ahead of time if we have to," said state Historian Leon "Andy" Anderson. "We have fun listening to the candidates and checking them out. That's our way of life."

New Hampshire's first-in-the-nation status was under attack once again this year. A national Democratic rules reform committee wanted the primary held on the same day as several other states.

State Democrats hinted they might ignore the national party orders. A deal was cut — the rules reformers agreed to allow the state to be first if the primary is moved up from the last week in February to the first Tuesday in March.

New Hampshire Democrats argued that in this era of radio and television, the road to victory in the New Hampshire primary is still paved with shoe leather.

"They can start here with our primary and meet the people," Anderson said. "If they had a primary in California with 24-million people they couldn't meet but a small percentage of 'em."

In tiny Dixville Notch, a three-hour drive toward the Canadian border from the state capital in Concord, the desire to be first hits its zenith every four years.

The hamlet's 26 registered voters gather at a resort hotel (owned by the town moderator) and under the glare of television lights cast their ballots at the stroke of midnight — the first in the United States.

Each presidential election year, Dixville Notch has a 100 percent turnout but its choices have rarely proved to match the national preference.

This unique chance to capture the national spotlight has not been lost on outside chance candidates.

Austin Burton — or Chief Burning Wood — ran in a couple of New Hampshire elections on a platform of giving the county back to the Indians and nationalize the insurance industry.

Grady O'Cummings III ran for the Democratic nomination one year on a platform to require the death penalty for anyone convicted of selling drugs.

Jolson's Son Opens Studio

By CINDY MCAFEE

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Unlike many children of famous parents, Albert Jolson admits he hopes to make money from his father's name.

But the new kid on Nashville's Music Row said there is another reason he named his recording studio Al Jolson Enterprises Inc. The younger Jolson said it is a tribute to a man who helped found popular music, a "remembrance" of his father.

Built in an old brick house up an alley from Warner Brothers' Nashville offices, the studio will be in full swing by the end of May.

"We're still getting the bugs out," said Jolson, 34, the adopted son of the late singing star. "Oh, we're operational now. But I want everything perfect — I have a Rolls Royce mind."

While there is already money coming into the demo studio (Conway Twitty was its first customer), "it's not nearly enough yet," Jolson said. "We haven't even advertised yet. I want to go all the way for quality now and everything in there is top quality. All that takes money. Everybody thinks I'm made of money but I'm not."

It's taken young Jolson a while to realize his dream because, for about 10 years, he was recovering from an automobile accident in Switzerland that almost took his life. It did take a toll. Twelve years later, he walks painstakingly with a cane and speaks slowly.

But the accident couldn't take away his love for music. The boy who used to play, manage and act as technician for high school and college bands now puts all his energy into the electric side of producing sound.

He chose Nashville over Los Angeles and New York, "because it's so compact."

"Everything is so spread out in Los Angeles. New York is the same way except everything is spread up, not out."

City Dwellers Turn To Home Gardens

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

The psychological need to be among growing plants is one reason commonly advanced for the current popularity of home gardens. A simple need for more living space is another.

Whatever the reasons, statistics indicate more Americans are extending their interest to the outdoor area surrounding their home.

Some 45 million people have vegetable gardens and as many as 6 to 8 million are growing tomatoes indoors in pots, says Jack Kramer, a gardener who has written many books on the subject.

He attributes the renewed interest in beautifying even the small patches of ground that surround the typical city home or apartment to two factors.

They are the increasing availability of flowers, vegetables and shrubs suitable for container growing, and the widening spread of information about gardening in small spaces.

Kramer, whose most recent book is "Your Garden in the City," says that even if circumstances do not seem propitious, people are finding room for a few plants and a place to sit down to enjoy the outdoors.

Among spots they have appropriated for gardens include apartment balconies, alleys, back yards, garages and apartment-house rooftops or a sunny window sill or window box.

The narrow high-rise balcony, for example, seems to offer little opportunity to flourish a green thumb. But by putting some of the smaller varieties of shrub or a dwarf tree into a container and planting quick-growing annual vines, some city dwellers have created small oases of green amidst the noise and bustle of cars and people outside their windows.

Even the once-ignored narrow alley that sometimes runs along the side of a one- or two-family house has been pressed into service as a garden.

"Shade-loving plants can be planted in easy-to-build containers made inexpensively from five 2-by-12 pieces of lumber. If there is enough sun, vegetables and flowers can be grown, as well. With the addition of a chair and a small table, a former eyesore becomes an outdoor refuge," says Kramer.

Front yards pressed into service as gardens offer little in the way of privacy. But a shrub or two and a few early spring bulbs followed by some potted flowers will cheer a formerly drab entryway.

No matter how small the outdoor space, Kramer advises starting with a written plan. "You don't need to use a tape measure, but measure roughly by pacing the area several times until you're sure you have all the details. I always make a rough plan on paper, marking with an 'X' any plants already in place."

In his exploratory walks, he also takes note of wet and dry areas, makes a rough estimate of how many hours of sunlight can be counted on and checks the condition of the soil.

As a rule, city soils need building up and sometimes are so compacted and poor that they need to be dug up, carted away and replaced with better soil. City dwellers sometimes have to go to considerable extra trouble to find soil sold in bulk.

In Kramer's opinion it is worth the extra trouble since many packaged soils appear to have few nutrients to support good plant growth. If gardening is done in containers, he still recommends using bulk soil, rather than packaged dirt or one of the soil-less mixtures commonly found in stores.

Once the soil question is settled, the arrangement of the space must be tackled. The basic rules of interior decoration — scale, balance and proportion — apply to the arrangement of outdoor spaces as well. It isn't sensible to cram a huge piece of furniture into a small room or to choose a spindly cocktail table to go with a large sofa. So don't select a large tree for a small backyard area or try to make a tiny plant do all the work in a larger open space.

Make sure the plants which are chosen are suitable for the climate, soil and degree of sunlight present. A knowledgeable local nurseryman can offer good advice on plants, says Kramer.

Garden furniture, perhaps even more than interior furniture, should be chosen for sturdiness and ability to stand up to punishing weather conditions.

Kramer recommends making at least one furnishing choice purely for its decorative value.

"If I have the money, I always like to buy an accent piece for a garden — a sundial or a statue or a handsome urn planter," he says.

Q. Many plants in my garden look like they have been shot with a shotgun. I look for bugs and see something jump but am never able to catch them. (D.G., Fayetteville)

A. The jumping insects are flea beetles and the damage results from flee beetle feeding. These brown or black shiny beetles feed on many vegetables including potatoes, tomatoes, peppers, corn and eggplant. Sprays with Sevin should control the beetles and prevent further damage. (Ken Sorensen, extension entomology specialist)

Q. While visiting VPI at Blacksburg, Va., I saw a type of dogwood that was blooming later than our native dogwoods. Do you know anything about these? (L.S., Pilot Mountain)

A. VPI has planted some of the Japanese flowering dogwoods. These flower about Memorial Day or after our native dogwoods have bloomed. You'll also find that the blooms have more yellow on them. I know that the Japanese flowering dogwood has been tried and will grow in Charlotte. But, I do not know where you could buy one in North Carolina. (Jim McGraw, extension forestry specialist)

Q. What kind of plant food should I use on tomato plants grown in peat moss under a grow light, and how often should I fertilize them? They look pale green. (Mrs. C.L., Hickory)

A. A water soluble house plant fertilizer with an analysis such as 20-20-20 will generally supply the nutrients your plants need. Most manufacturers recommend one tablespoon of water soluble fertilizer per gallon of water. Apply the solution each time you water the plants. (Larry Bass, extension horticultural specialist)

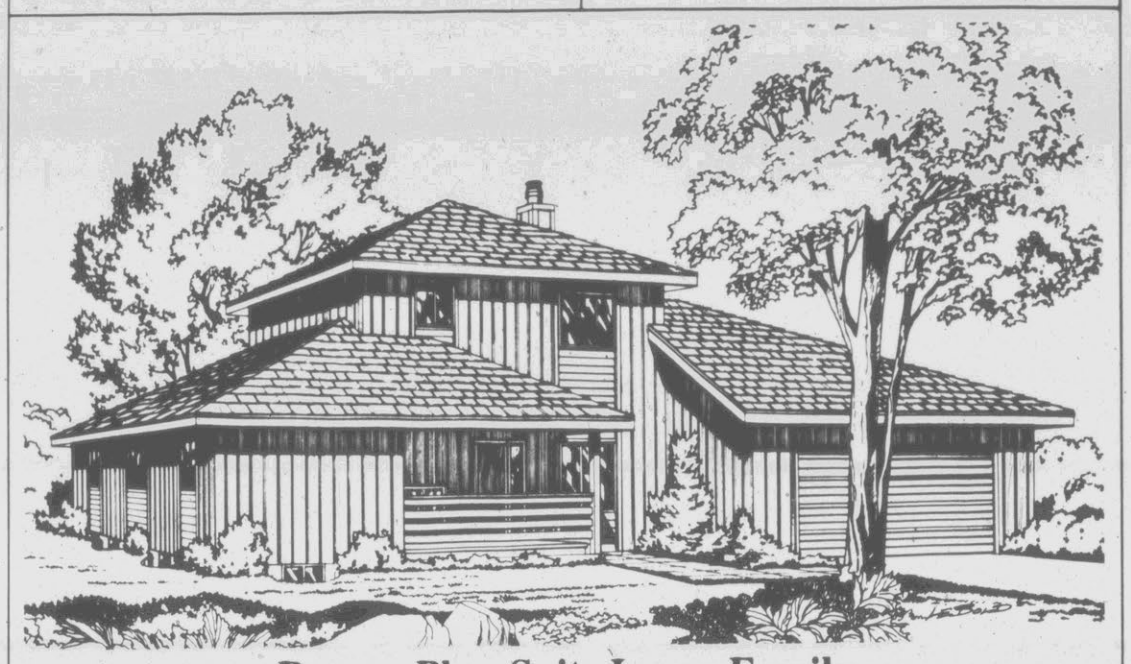
The Orin



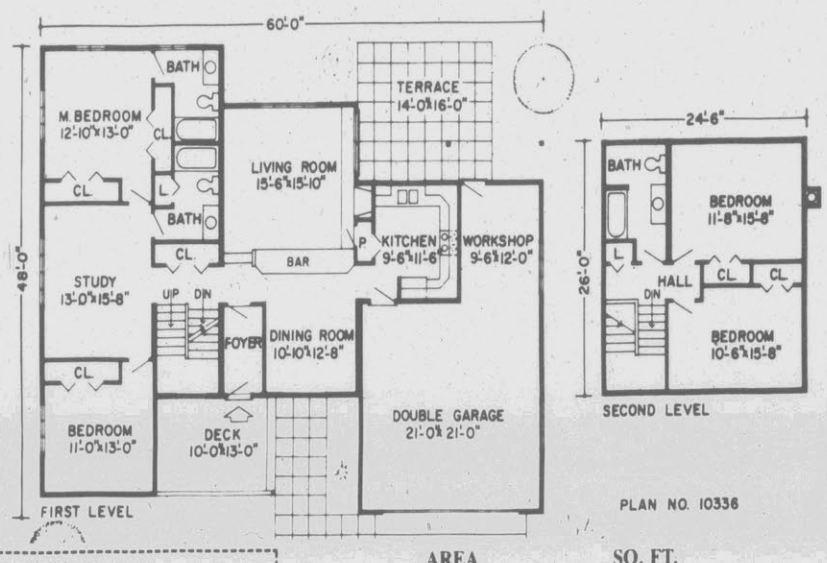
Roomy Plan Suits Large Family

By Jerry Bishop

Four expansive bedrooms, a study, and three full baths are among the features that suit the Orin, a contemporary plan, to the needs of a large family.

In addition, large and efficient living areas are geared for entertaining, and, for craftsman or hobbyist, a workshop occupies more than 100 sq. ft. at rear of the garage.

Exterior lines show a two story center section winged by bedrooms on one side, garage on the other. To enter, visitors traverse the front deck into an elegant foyer. The foyer can be closed off from living areas, thereby reducing drafts and conserving energy.



PLAN NO. 10336

AREA	SQ. FT.
First floor	— 1,562
Second floor	— 637
Basement	— 932
Garage	— 598

Directly ahead of the foyer is the dining and living room area, an expansive area divided by a long bar. A natural for entertaining, the area also supplies family activity space. A family or recreation room is a possibility for the basement level.

Particularly well-planned is the U-shaped kitchen. It overlooks the terrace, features a pantry, and opens directly to the garage, a boon when unloading groceries from the car. Besides offering woodworking or hobby space, the workshop opens to the rear terrace, site of summer living.

Bedrooms occupy both levels. On the first floor, master bedroom with private bath, adjoining study, and another bedroom are buffered from living area noises by closets and hallways. Upstairs, two large bedrooms, a bath, and linen closet are shown. If desired, the upper level may be left unfinished until needed.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG

Q. — I am getting ready to refinish the wooden floor in our living room. Many years ago I did a similar job in another house, so I know I can handle the stripping part of it. What I can't make up my mind about is the kind of finish to use. I want something that does not scratch too easily, if that is possible. I am also considering whether to use something that is not too glossy. What is your advice?

A. — You have described the qualities of penetrating floor finish, which is a kind of sealer that goes into the wood and does not leave a shine. Another asset of it is that, once an area gets a little worn, it can be retouched without doing the entire floor. Because the sealer does not leave a surface coating, it does not scratch. That does not mean the floor itself cannot be scratched, such as when walked on with spiked shoes, but it prevents the kind of scratches that can occur on a surface coating.

Q. — I put up a wooden fence last year. Before doing so, I soaked the wooden slats in a preservative for several hours, since I had been told this was a better way of preserving the wood than by brushing on the liquid. I saved the container in which the wood had been soaked and covered it with some plastic wrap. Now I have another fence to put up. I intended to use the leftover preservative, but a neighbor says this is not a good idea, as the liquid may have picked up some impurities from the wood. Is he right?

A. — That's the first time I have heard that theory and have no idea what impurities your neighbor means. Professionals use the same wood preservative over and over again. You can do the same.

Q. — I recently took some bed sheets from a closet where I had stored them for the winter. Some mildew had formed on them. What did I do wrong and how can I prevent this from happening in the future?

A. — Mildew forms where there is dampness. It forms more rapidly when the dampness is accompanied by warmth and lack of ventilation. The conclusion is that your closet must have been damp and without ventilation. The dampness was probably the result of high humidity. Next time you store anything that might be susceptible to mildew in a confined area, provide ventilation; in the case of a closet, you could keep the door open. However, this would be insufficient and even self-defeating if the humidity is high for a protracted period, so some kind of dehumidifying material kept in the closet would be necessary.

(The techniques of using varnish, lacquer, shellac, stain, bleach, remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," available by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P. O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.)

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

People who have been buying lumber for years usually get a surprise the first time they purchase plywood.

Accustomed to knowing that a 2 by 4 actually is 1½ inches by 3½ inches, they discover that the dimensions of plywood are exactly as stated. A 4 by 8, meaning 4 feet by 8 feet, turns out to be 4 by 8, nothing less, nothing more. This, of course, is vital information when planning a project where the dimensions must be exact.

And, if they didn't know it previously, they learn that plywood is not some synthetic product, as some people believe, but real wood. Not solid wood, but wood made into layers which are bonded together in such a fashion that the resulting panel resists warping, shrinking and swelling, as well as having great strength.

The biggest selling plywood is Douglas fir, which is named after a Scottish botanist and is the state tree of Oregon. It is an evergreen with flat needles and cones shaped roughly like eggs. Walk into a lumber yard and ask for plywood, without any further designation, and you are likely to get Douglas fir. If you do, you will have a plywood of superior strength.

Remember, however, that you should get it with the kind of face or faces you want — with limited defects not affecting the strength, with few defects, with one good face and one not so good, and so on. As you choose, base your selection on whether one or both sides of the plywood will be visible when the project is completed. And, if the plywood is to be used outdoors, get the exterior type, which has waterproof glue between the layers as well as other qualities that enable it to withstand the weather.

Also, if you get Douglas fir plywood, consider the finishing material you will put on it. It has a so-called "wild" grain that needs a special sealer. There are two kinds of a sealer made for woods with such a grain. One is white, intended for use on fir plywood that will be painted. The other is clear, intended for use on fir that will be coated with varnish or any other transparent finishing material. In either case, carefully follow the instructions on the label.

Plywood gets its designation of fir, spruce, birch, walnut or whatever from the wood used on the face of it. Hardwood-faced plywood is used for fine furniture and is more expensive than those faced with softwood. Since the varieties of plywood are almost endless, do a little shopping if you plan a project which may require more than just fir plywood. You will find that, besides the many different kinds, they come in various thicknesses, usually from one-quarter of an inch to one inch.

To avoid splintering the good side of plywood when cutting it with a handsaw, do so with the good side up. This works in reverse when sawing with a portable saw, in which case the good side should be facing down. With a stationary power saw, the good side should be up.

If it is vital that neither side show any splintering, place some kind of backing along the cut line or when a hole is to be drilled. A piece of scrap wood on the back of the panel will serve effectively, since the splintering, if any, will then occur in the scrap. Even a piece of masking tape along the line of the cut will usually prevent splintering.

If you are using screws in plywood, it's a good idea to drill pilot holes to hold the screws. If drilling into the edges of plywood, it's not just a good idea, it's absolutely necessary.

Plywood's big advantage is that it gives you large, unbroken, strong surfaces.

ASK OMAR

Q.—After an opening preemptive bid at the three-level, do you use Fishbein or a takeout double when you have a good hand? Also, if you want to ask partner to bid, how strong should your hand be? There is great disagreement in our game as to the proper course of action over a preemptive three-bid. —J. James, Pittsburgh, Pa.

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)

A.—Before answering your question, it's best that I explain what you mean by "Fishbein." After a preemptive bid, a bid of the next higher-ranking suit by the opponent in the immediate seat is not natural, but is a request for partner to introduce his best suit. A double in that position, therefore, is for penalties.

Very few experts play "Fishbein." Even its inventor, the late Harry Fishbein of New York, eventually abandoned his brainchild. The convention simply causes too many problems. Assume that the auction has gone:

West	North	East	South
3 ♢	3 ♡	Pass	?

What should South bid with: ♠xx ♡AQxxx ♢xx ♣J10xx?

If North has a minimum takeout bid, then three hearts is more than enough. But if North is better than minimum, the hand could easily make four hearts. South does not know what to do.

Even North can have problems. Suppose that West opens three diamonds and North holds: ♠xx ♡AKQxxx ♢x ♣Qxxx

North would dearly like to compete with three hearts, but he cannot do so if he is playing Fishbein. South would almost surely bid some number of spades. So North must pass and hope that he can back into the auction later.

Therefore, most experts give up the penalty double of a preemptive bid in the immediate seat for the more flexible takeout double. Of course, partner always has the option to convert this double to penalties.

How good should a player be to make a takeout double of a preemptive bid? Bear in mind that you are forcing partner to bid at the three- or four-level. Partner has an average expectancy of 6-8 points, so you should have enough to insure some margin of safety if partner has no more than his quota. To make nine tricks usually requires about 22-24 points. By deducting his holding from that figure, you should have the equivalent of about 16 points for the takeout double.

By applying this guideline, a practical rule of thumb for deciding whether your hand is worth a takeout double of an opening three-bid becomes apparent. Subtract a king from your holding. If your hand would still be good enough for a takeout double of an opposing one-bid in the suit, then you are strong enough to double a preemptive opening.

Send any questions for this column to: Charles Goren and Omar Sharif, care of this newspaper. Each week a prize of a copy of the new "Goren's Bridge Complete," a $9.95 value, will be awarded for the question judged the best received.

South Dakota Leader Seeks Second Term

By MELANIE RIGNEY

PIERRE, S.D. (UPI) — Gov. Bill Janklow likes to consider himself a run of the mill South Dakotan, a rough-talking, beer-drinking, fast-driving guy.

The 42-year-old former Republican attorney general said state workers would love him if he weren't governor.

"That's because I drink beer like they do; I'm like them," he said.

But Janklow is better known as a power broker. Since his election in 1978, he has bent, twisted and negotiated giants to their knees like no South Dakota governor before him.

His credits include state purchase of bankrupt Milwaukee Road rail lines which go through South Dakota. He has enticed giant Citicorp to move its credit cards operations from New York to Sioux Falls. And despite howls from downstream states, he has agreed to sell Missouri River water to a coal slurry pipeline company.

Janklow often is invited to the White House for briefings, and has confirmed he turned down a job offer in the Justice Department and as a federal judge.

His political foes paint Janklow as a man obsessed with power whose administration is cloaked in secrecy.

Still, his re-election bid this fall appears to be a virtual certainty given his popularity and the party's strength in South Dakota.

One of 8two Democratic challengers admitted before announcing his candidacy his bid basically was a service to the democratic process.

What makes Janklow tick?

As a 16-year-old high school drop-out, he entered the Marines. He later began college before officials discovered he had no high school diploma, then managed to talk his way into staying.

He entered an accelerated program at the University of South Dakota, finishing his bachelor's and law degrees in six years instead of the usual seven.

In state government, Janklow has been criticized for possible usurpation of legislative powers, especially because of a mandatory 5 percent budget cut in fiscal year 1981, and his secret negotiations with a coal slurry pipeline company.

One Republican state senator described him as a "benevolent dictator."

Democrats tried to limit gubernatorial spending cut powers in the 1982 session, but their numbers — less than one-third in either house — doomed the attempt from the start.

Janklow, on the other hand, recently scolded an interim committee for giving away too much rulemaking power to state agencies.

Democrats and Republicans alike complained privately they should have had more time to consider the deal Janklow struck with Energy Transportation Systems Inc. for purchase of Missouri River water.

Janklow announced the deal in mid-September, the first hint he was talking to ETSI officials, and called a special legislative session for less than one week later. The bills he needed passed handily.

Few Will See Tax Rollback

By GARY KLOTT
UPI Business Writer

Unless you're earning over $40,000 a year you're not likely to find your federal tax bill reduced by 1984 — even with the scheduled three-year, 25 percent cut in individual income tax rates.

For those in the lower income groups, the federal tax burden in 1984 will generally be the same or even higher than it was in 1980.

Most American taxpayers will be disappointed because of the combined effects of inflation and rising Social Security taxes.

In the lower income brackets, a Congressional study showed, the cut in income tax rates is not enough to offset the impact of Social Security increases and inflation-induced "bracket creep."

In an analysis prepared for Congressmen by the Congressional Research Service, those in the $100,000 bracket in 1980 will have the sharpest reduction in tax burden with their total effective tax rate moving down to 27.23 percent from 29.47 percent.

In dollar terms, the reduction means an individual who in 1980 paid taxes of $29,466, or 29.47 percent of his $100,000 in earnings, will in 1984 be paying taxes of $37,664, or 27.23 percent of his infation-increased income of $138,301.

The biggest percentage increase in tax burden faces those who earned $10,000 in 1980. For that group, the effective tax rate will rise to 12.45 percent from 9.87 percent in 1980.

A main reason for the contrast in effects is that taxpayers in the lower and middle-income brackets move into higher tax brackets quicker. The average width of the first 10 tax brackets is $5,660 while the average width of the last four brackets is $38,850.

"Therefore, as incomes are increased to compensate for inflation, taxpayers in the lower-to middle-income ranges are pushed into higher tax brackets at a much faster pace than are taxpayers in the upper-income range," Gregg A. Esenwein, economics analyst at the Congressional Research Service, said.

Social Security hikes affect higher income groups less since the increase in both the Social Security tax rate and the income base it is imposed on is small in comparison to the size of their incomes.

The figures portend a critical roadblock to expectations of any substantial "supply-side" economic response from the Reagan tax cuts. As charted on the now-reknowned "Laffer Curve," a decrease in marginal tax rates will increase work and investment incentives to the point that total government tax revenues will not fall.

A study by Stephen A. Meyer, senior economist at the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia, and Robert J. Rossana, an economics professor at Pennsylvania State University, found that basically only those earning $40,000 or more will have a lower marginal tax rate in 1983 due to inflation and Social Security.

"Our analysis suggests the three-year cut in personal income tax rates will have little effect on people's behavior, because few taxpayers will face lower total federal tax rates in 1983 than they did in 1980," they said.

"Basically what we're saying," Meyer explained, "is that wherever we were on the Laffer Curve in 1980, we'll be about in the same spot in 1983. Even for the over $40,000 group, there won't be much of an effect."

Without the 1981 tax cut, tax rates indeed would have continued to escalate to much higher levels. And that probably would have created additional work and investment disincentives — although the extent to which, and at what levels, taxes erode work and investment incentives are debated issues among economists.

"The important question now is whether stabilizing marginal tax rates is going to give people greater incentives," Meyer said.

Joseph A. Pechman, director of economic studies at the Brookings Insitution, says the Reagan tax cuts have "offset a lot of the inflation impact on income tax rates that occurred during the 1970s.

Being First In The Industry Means Advancement Opportunities Second To None

That's one of the major benefits of working with the nation's leading supplier of office copiers, but we think you'll be rather impressed by the specifics.
Take our comprehensive training and national account manager programs for instance. They're geared to the bright, ambitious people who typify the Savin employee, and they're meant to propel you on a fast track to success. We'll give you all the responsibility you can handle and then some. It's all designed to ensure your continual growth and success...and ours, as well.
If you have a minimum of 6 months selling background, preferably dealing with business equipment, you owe it to yourself to consider a Savin career. In addition to what we already described, we can offer you health insurance, travel expenses, guaranteed draw, car/expense allowances, and what we believe to be the highest commissions in the industry. Interviews will be held at Creech & Jones Business Machines, located at 103 Trade St. Greenville, just off Hwy. 11 next to Parker's Bar-B-Q, between 2 p.m. & 8 p.m. For further information contact Diane Hill 756-3175.

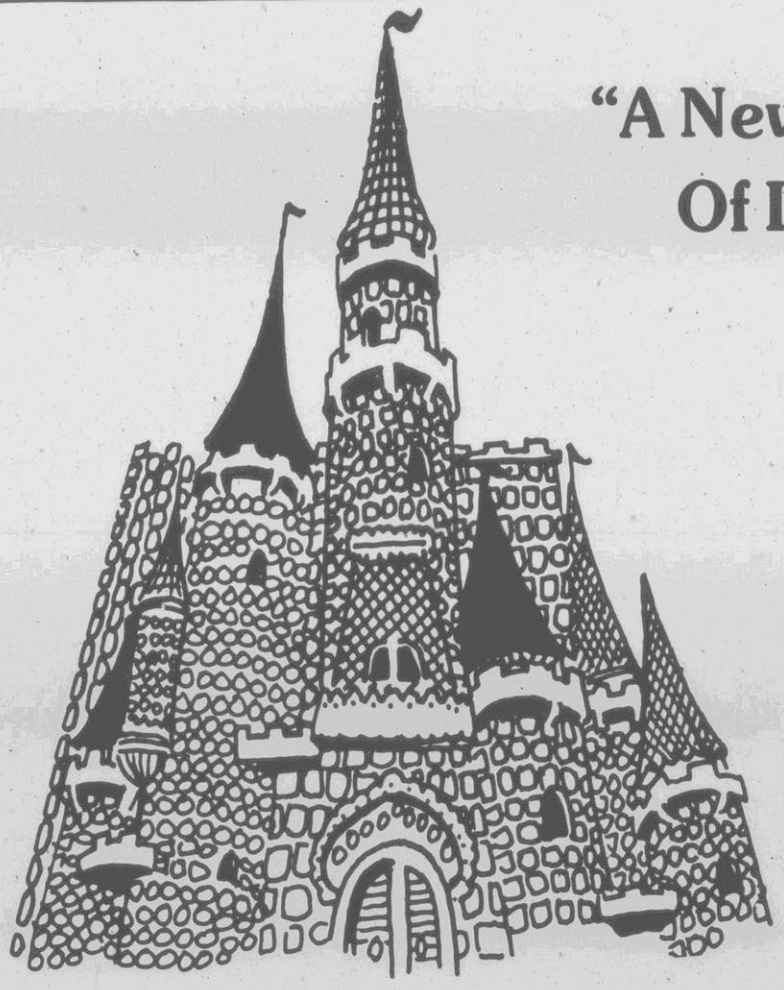
"A New Way Of Life"



Living Like A King Shouldn't Require The Upkeep Of A Castle

In the past, fine homes were often measured solely by size. But, as many of us now know, a home the size of a castle has some rather inelegant ramifications. Like upkeep. Oil bills. Even a simple matter of cleaning can turn into an arduous task.

We've taken care of all that at Treetops residences. Instead of building fine homes the size of a castle, we've carefully constructed elegant homes of more modest size. The many clever floorplans and coordinated exterior wood stains are deigned to complement the surrounding grounds. So, the private drives and common areas of Treetops are destined to take on the quiet grace of country estates.

Yet the homeowner is relieved of groundkeeping duties (excepting the area surrounding the home) as the yards and common areas are maintained by the homeowners' association. Neat? Yes. Difficult to keep up? No.

So, if you're more interested in enjoying your home and environment than maintaining your castle and grounds. You'll enjoy your reign.

- Effective mortgage interest rates in the majority of housing transactions are below quoted rates. People-to-people financing can lower those rates by four to five percentage points.
- Depressed market conditions allow buyers to purchase property at 1980 prices. When interest rates begin to recede, the pent-up appreciation will increase dramatically.
- Home ownership continues to be today's best investment and provides a better hedge against inflation than other investments like stocks, bonds, gold, or silver.
- Allowable tax deductions can help qualified buyers meet a higher monthly mortgage obligation.
- Preferential tax treatment enjoyed by certain types of real estate investments counts as one of the significant financial advantages of owning real estate.
- The vast variety of alternative mortgage instruments available in today's high-interest-rate market can lead to advantageous financing arrangements for the buyer-borrower.

Living Longer Costing More

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans are living longer, healthier lives than ever before, but they are paying more for the privilege, says Family Practice News.

The medical publication reports that between 1961 and 1978, life expectancy rose to 69.5 years for men and 77.2 years for women.

Increased use of medical services, an emphasis on preventive health practices and early detection and treatment of disease were the main reasons for longer lifespans, according to a federal survey.

The trade-off, however, has been spiraling health-care costs that continue to consume an increasingly large share of the gross national product.

Between 1960 and 1980, health-care costs rose an annual average of 11.7 percent. Health-care expenditures reached $247.2 billion in 1980, or $1,067 per person.

TAR HEEL LEAP — It may look like a scene from an escape film, but 9-year old Joey Pearson of Drexel was just following some friends when he left the local ballfield. Instead of taking the short route around the eight-foot-high fence the boys decided to jump from the bleachers over the fence. The landing on the turf below was not-so-soft, but none was hurt, proving that boys are made of tough stuff. (AP Laserphoto)

Bob Hope Turns 79 Years Young

Bob Hope has been entertaining audiences for nearly six decades — since 1924. On Tuesday, May 25 (8-10 p.m.), NBC will salute the veteran comedian by broadcasting a celebration of his 79th birthday from the United States Naval Academy in Annapolis, Md. Joining Leslie Townes Hope (Bob's given name) in "All Hands On Deck for Bob Hope's All-Star Birthday Party at Annapolis," will be former midshipman and Dallas Cowboy quarterback Roger Staubach; heavyweight boxers Larry Holmes and Gerry Cooney; model Christie Brinkley; members of the musical "Sophisticated Ladies;" and the Naval Academy's drum and bugle corps, band and glee club.

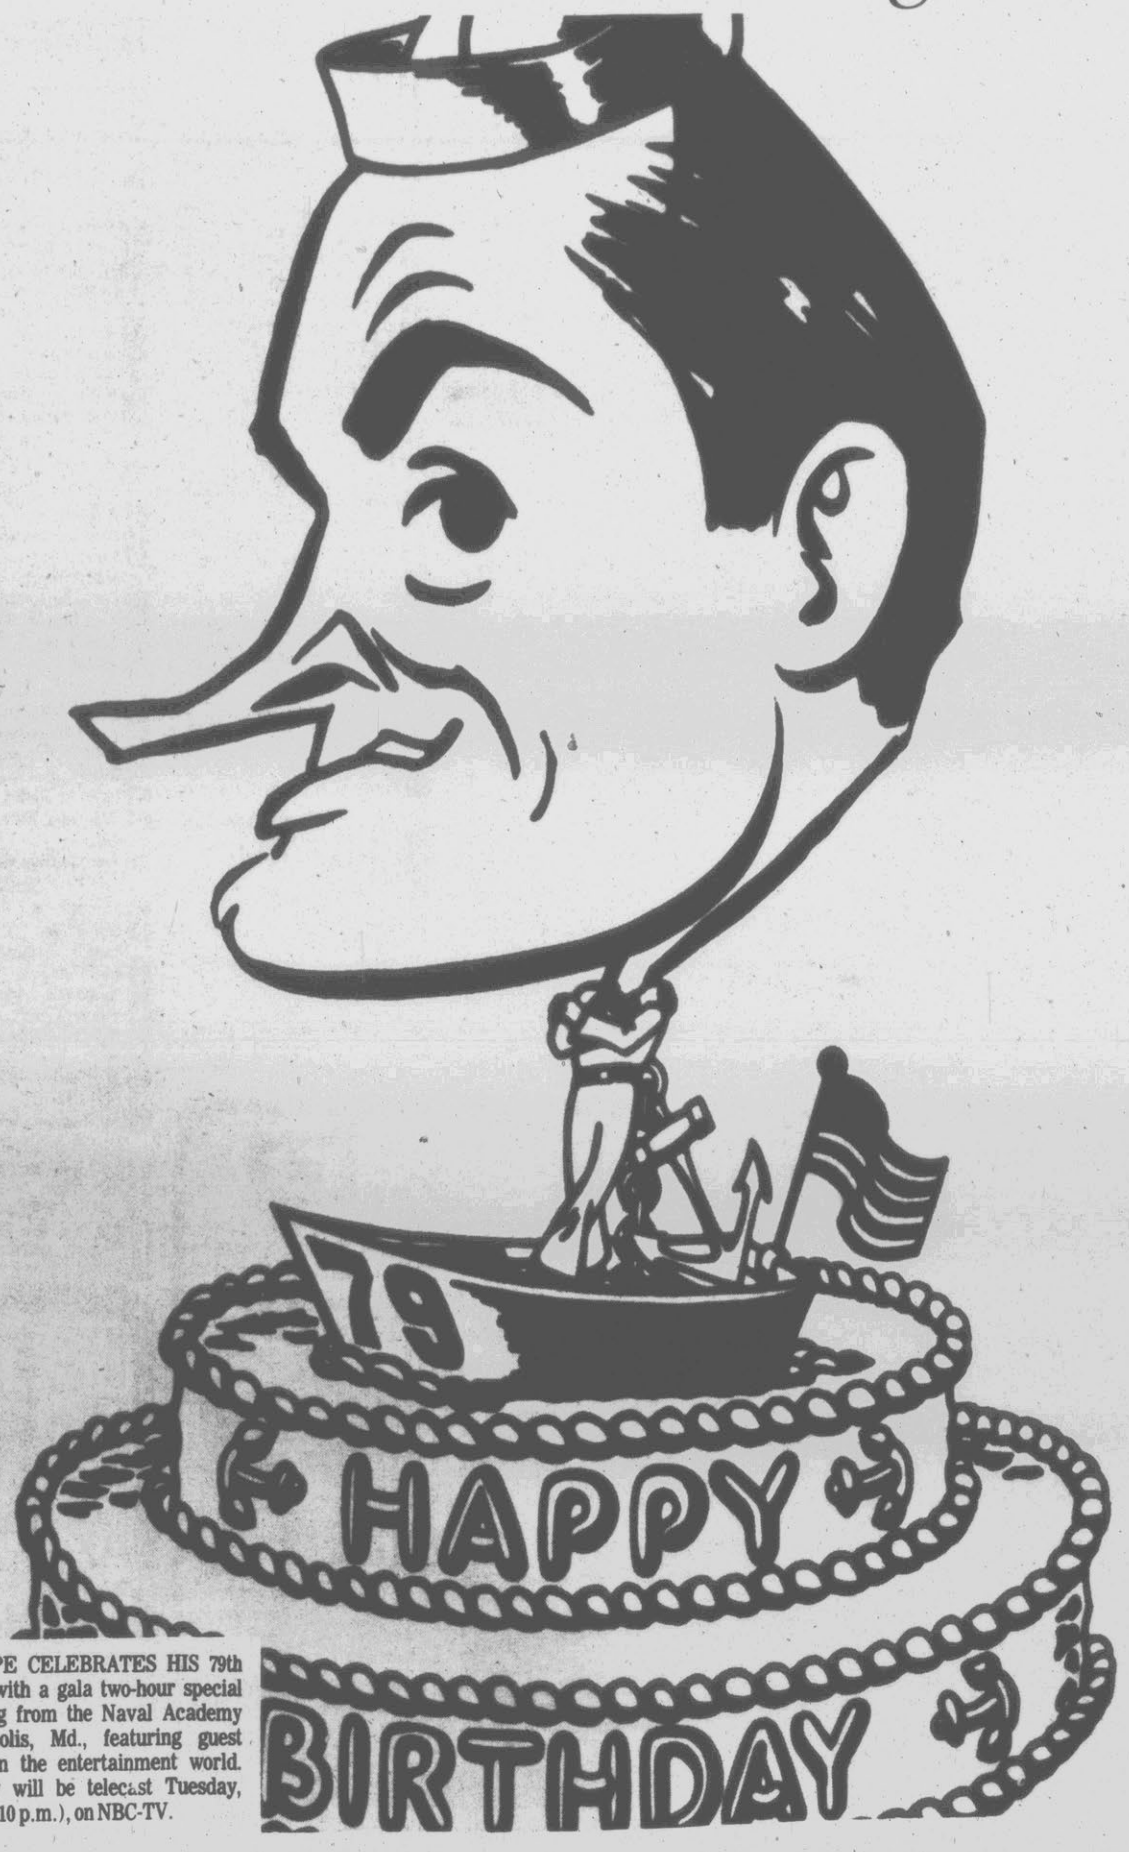
This will be the fifth consecutive year that NBC has televised a birthday salute to Hope. In 1978, his 75th birthday celebration was held at the Kennedy Center Opera House in Washington, D.C. In 1979, he celebrated his 76th birthday aboard the USS Iwo Jima, a helicopter carrier anchored in New York Harbor.

In 1980, Hope traveled to the Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, and last year his birthday party was held at West Point. All of the birthday specials have been presented under the auspices of the USO.

Hope's identifiable face (with accent on the ski-jump profile) has played to vaudeville, television and motion picture audiences throughout the world, and the "elder statesman of comedy" shows no signs of slowing down.

Very few people can claim that their profession actually keeps them healthy, but according to Hope, his busy schedule (traveling an average of over 200,000 miles per year) and keen sense of humor keep him fit. His career has always been in high gear, and Hope's theme song — "Thanks for the Memory" — is perfectly suited to his lifestyle; he sports a wealth of entertainment memories from Saigon to Broadway.

Perhaps a Stan Freberg remark about Hope will shed a little light on his energy: "Audiences love Bob because he provides situations for him to laugh at himself. This is the basis of true American humor. He's got the energy of 10 men, the talent of 20 and the love of millions." This comment is as true today as it was when it was written over 20 years ago.



BOB HOPE CELEBRATES HIS 79th birthday with a gala two-hour special originating from the Naval Academy in Annapolis, Md., featuring guest stars from the entertainment world. The show will be telecast Tuesday, May 25 (8-10 p.m.), on NBC-TV.

Herman Survives With Pride

John Savage stars as a young American in Russia whose dream of returning to his homeland sustains him through 18 years of torture, starvation and brutality in Siberia, in "Coming Out of the Ice," a movie based on the memoirs of Victor Herman, to be broadcast Sunday, May 23 (8-10 p.m.) on CBS.

Willie Nelson, the country music entertainer, makes his television acting debut, starring as Red Loon, a fellow American prisoner in the Siberian gulag, who saved Herman's life and gave Herman the love and support he needed to continue his fight for survival.

In 1931, 16-year-old Victor Herman accompanied his parents and family to Gorky, where his father was to work in an automobile plant. The young man excelled in sports and embraced the life of a Soviet athlete, with the help of General Tuchachevsky (Ben Cross), who recognized Herman's abilities.

JOHN SAVAGE STARS as Victor Herman, a young American living in Russia who is sentenced to hard labor in a Siberian gulag, in a two-hour dramatic special based on Herman's memoirs, "Coming Out of the Ice," Sunday, May 23 (8-10 p.m.), on CBS-TV.

In 1934, Herman broke the world's parachute jump record, but refused to sign the official form that would identify him as a Soviet citizen when his medal was to be conferred upon him. He insisted on identifying himself as an American — an identity he would hold onto tenaciously throughout the 45 years he spent in Russia.

Four years later, Herman was arrested for alleged "counter-revolutionary activities." He then spent one year in a Gorky prison and the next 10 years in a hard labor camp in Siberia, enduring brutal and primitive conditions.

Herman was never to give up his dream of returning to America. He was in exile until 1955, when he was formally exonerated of all charges. But he still had to battle the Soviet bureaucracy. His dream was not to come true until 1976, when finally he was able to return to the United States.

"When Victor was in the camps," Savage said, "he became aware of his desire to have a more fulfilling life. His mind was fueled by the image and dream of returning to America."

A Mystery Is Staged

Mystery hits the legitimate theater in "Rehearsal for Murder," a drama starring Robert Preston and Lynn Redgrave, airing on Wednesday, May 26 (9-11 p.m.) on CBS.

It is opening night on Broadway, and all the excitement and glamour is present while successful playwright Alex Dennison (Preston) waits out the notices for his new play. The vehicle stars his fiancee, Monica Wells (Miss Redgrave), a famous film star making her New York stage debut.

Other principals, on stage and off, are Monica's leading man, the suave David Mathews (Patrick Macnee); director Lloyd Andrews (Lawrence Pressman); ingenue Karen Daniels (Madolyn Smith); second lead Leo Gibbs (Jeff Goldblum), and producer Walter Lamb (William Daniels).

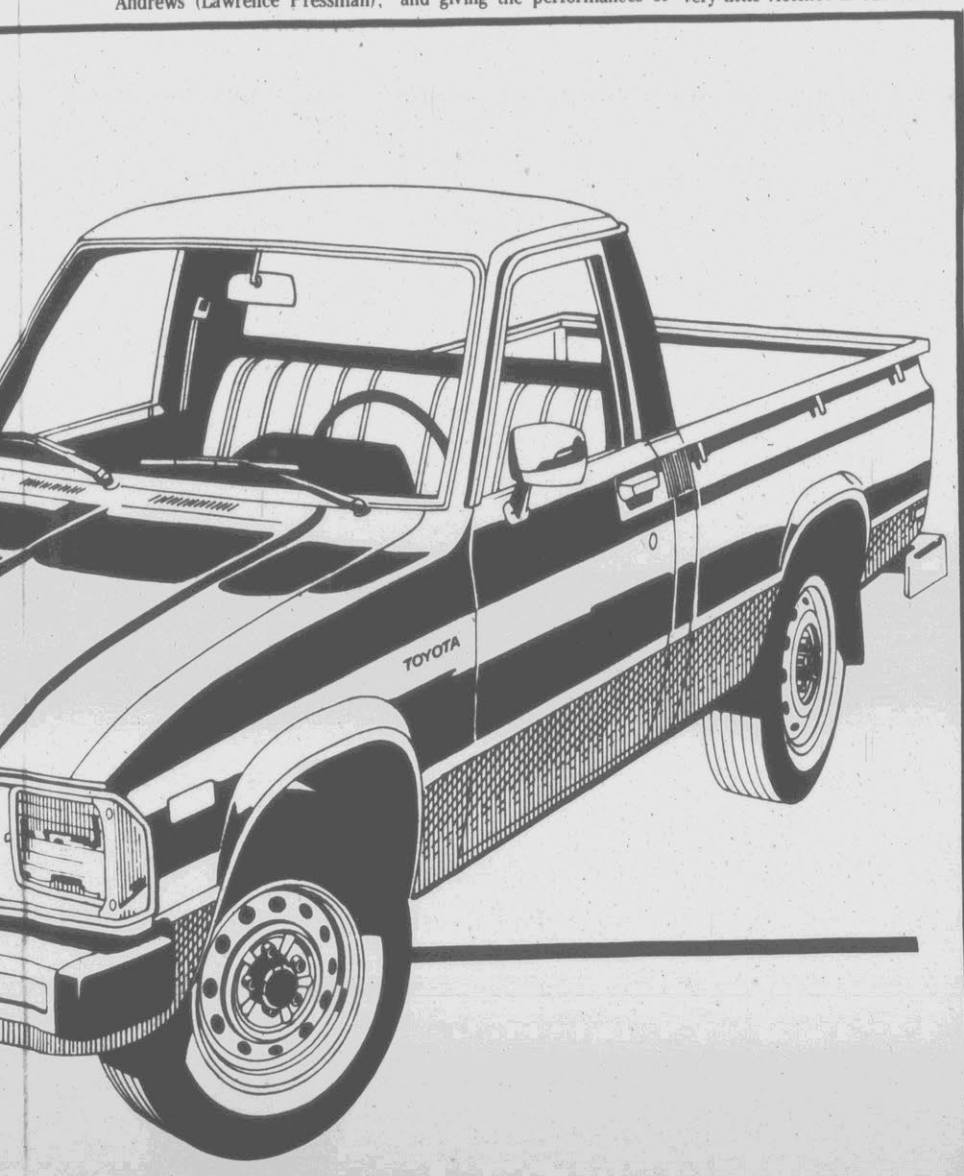
Drama heightens — and danger sets in — when, on the eve of Monica's marriage to Alex, the actress is found dead. The official ruling is suicide. But Alex can't accept that verdict. He thus sets out to learn more about his fiancee's death.

He arranges an on-stage reunion of all those involved in his last play and asks them to read a rough draft of his newest effort in the deserted theater. It turns out to be a remarkable drama. In flashback, the actors — throwing themselves into the cold readings and giving the performances of their lives — re-create the tangled relationship each had with Monica.

"To solve this mystery, it helps to have a twisted mind," said actor Macnee. "No, I couldn't figure it out. None of us could."

Macnee's fellow performers agreed they were enthralled up to the final page, before learning who was the killer, in the script by William Levinson and Richard Link. The writers won Emmy Awards for the "Columbo" series and "My Sweet Charlie," and nominations for "That Certain Summer," "The Execution of Pvt. Slovik" and "The Storyteller."

"We're proud that we have very little violence in our films."



A special purchase of no frills trucks…13 models to choose from… lots in stock!

Explanation: The remarkable new AutoTerm plan brings down the high cost of transportation. AutoTerm is less costly than the conventional way of buying a truck…and it's better than any lease you've ever seen.

Imagine, a new Toyota truck for under $150 per month…and with no money down! The savings on your monthly payments and down payment add up to hundreds of dollars. That's money in the bank…earning you money!

All vehicles qualify for TEMA (Toyota East Maintenance Agreement).

AutoTerm is also available on all cars in stock.

Term is 48 months. To calculate total of payments, simply multiply 48 by the monthly payment amount. First monthly payment and a refundable security deposit in that same amount required at beginning of lease. You have no responsibility at end of term…you may purchase the truck or car or walk away…your option. Price shown requires approved credit and does not include tax and tags.

A Woman Pursues Story Of Murder

A woman, struggling with the demands of being a television news reporter and single mother, finds her life — and her daughter's — in jeopardy after covering a horrifying sniper attack on several nurses, in "This Is Kate Bennett...." airing as The ABC Friday Night Movie, May 28 (8:30-10 p.m.).

After Gary Davis, the alleged murderer, is taken into custody, Kate Bennett (Janet Eilber) gets a hard-hitting interview with him. Racing against time to get the report on the evening news, she is informed that her story must be killed because of a legal technicality.

A true professional — and wanting to know why the murders happened — Kate seeks out the sniper's mother, Mrs. Harris. When she gets the harassed woman to talk about her son, the newswoman and her team are told to leave by Bill Harris (Joel Bailey), the suspect's brother. Gun in hand, Harris tells Kate he will kill her if she doesn't leave his mother alone.

After the emotion-packed news feature airs on the evening news, Bill Harris stalks Kate and her daughter. And, frustrated because she is unable to do a series on what happens to the friends and relatives of innocent victims after a tragedy occurs, Kate must make a decision about her future as an investigative reporter.

The film also stars David Haskell, Greg Mullavey, Kyle Richards, Granville Van Dusen, James Noble, Larry Breeding and David Groh. Harvey Hart directed the screenplay by Sue Milburn.

NBA Playoffs Air On CBS

The saga of Showdown '82 — the race for the NBA World Championship title — goes on, and, as it has for the past several weeks, CBS will broadcast the action. Dick Stockton and Bill Russell will provide the commentary for a playoff game airing Sunday, May 23 (1 p.m.-conclusion).

Twelve teams started in the playoffs, the majority of which won't be seen or heard from again until the rumblings of the 1982-83 season. A few weeks ago, these teams were riding the crest of a winning season — now, with their elimination, the memory of them begins to wane. However, these losing clubs come rushing back to mind with a few choice quotes.

"We don't care how the grapes were crushed as long as the wine turns out fine," said Milwaukee Coach Don Nelson after a particularly sloppy win. The wine turned sour for the Bucks in the Conference Semifinals when they were knocked out by the Philadelphia 76ers.

Seattle forward Lonnie Shelton: "I figure I could score more someplace else, but winning is more important to me. You don't have to be the leading scorer on a team to make your contribution noticeable." Shelton had an exceptional year for the SuperSonics but the San Antonio Spurs pulled their plug in the Conference Semifinals.

Houston Rockets Coach Del Harris: "People have always said 'As Moses Malone goes, so go the Rockets.' Well, I wish that were true because if that were the case we would have finished 75-7 last season." The Rockets finished with a 46-36 record, but were a dud in the playoffs, losing in the first round to Seattle.

Phoenix Suns Coach John MacLeod on guard Dennis Johnson: "I don't care how poorly he has shot up until then, Dennis is the guy I always would like to have shooting it when the game comes down to the final shot." The Los Angeles Lakers put out the Suns' light in the Conference Semifinals.

Ray Williams of the New Jersey Nets shot 0-for-15 from the field in a loss to Indiana. "The worst shooting night of my career," he said — and nobody argued. Washington trapped the Nets in two straight games in the first-round playoffs.

TV Chatter

By Polly Vonetes

HOLLYWOOD — It could have been a segment of "Fantasy Island" but it wasn't — it really happened to RICARDO MONTALBAN and wife GEORGIANA. Departing Philadelphia after the Grace Kelly tribute, the MONTALBANS left GEORGIANA'S jewelry in their hotel room. The chambermaid found it and turned it over to the hotel — which in turn sent it on to the surprised MONTALBANS. They sent a generous reward to MARY ROBINSON, the chambermaid — who was honored by the hotel and the entire housekeeping department — really fantastic.

BROOKE SHIELDS just can't take all the criticism of her films seriously — not when she has been on the covers of five magazines per month for the past two months — I should be so unpopular.

BETTE DAVIS was happy about her role as Alice Gwynne Vanderbilt in which she would finally wear an exciting, expensive wardrobe — but then she learned that Alice wore widow's weeds for 30 years.

GONZO THE GREAT of "The Muppet Show" has joined the U.S. Navy. The turkey-beaked whatsis, whose color is an appropriate navy blue, has officially become part of the life at Gonzo Station, the Navy's remote lookout station in the Indian Ocean. His photograph, personally inscribed to the men at the station, is now ceremoniously passed from the retiring commanding officer to the new whenever the command changes.

How rich is KENNY ROGERS? If rich means being able to give your kids a merry-go-round with 115 live horses worth a cool — $60 millon — with plans to purchase a few dozen more in Moscow this summer — then KENNY is very rich. He is obviously no "gambler" but a sure bet.

"New habits reduce chronic pain."

FOR JUDITH WALKER, medical director, Walker Pain Institute Medical Group

I hear that chronic pain often results from performing simple, everyday tasks the "wrong" way. How can we avoid mistakes that have serious repercussions? —B.N., Redondo, Calif.

● Holding a telephone by cradling it on the shoulder, for example, creates stress on the muscles and eventually turns into chronic pain. With a simple brace attached to the receiver you can hold the phone comfortably and still have both hands free. At the office, a desk that is too high or low can result in physical discomfort, and improper lighting may produce headaches. All of these conditions strain muscles and lead to chronic pain. Acquiring new habits that relieve the stress placed on the body will protect you from long-term disorders.

FOR BILL SCHWEPPE, Los Angeles Dodgers vice president in charge of minor league operations

How did the Dodgers get nicknamed "bums"? —L.S.S., Fullerton, Calif.

● Sometime in the 40's a fan within shouting distance of the press box kept yelling "look at that bum" whenever a Dodger made an error, and the term was picked up by writers and cartoonists. When the Dodgers moved to L.A. in '58, however, it died.

FOR KATHRYN CROSBY, actress

What has been the biggest change in your life since Bing passed away? —B.G., Wenatchee, Wash.

● I find it very hard not having that casual, outgoing fellow around — he was such a friend to me. I miss everything — his love, his companionship, his advice, his humor, his encouragement. Having to stand alone is a big adjustment, but I'm trying to make the best of it and have some fun — while I'm stumbling.

FOR RICHARD SANDERS, star of TV's WKRP in Cincinnati

Is it true that you're rude to people who try to get acquainted with you? —P.D., Tyler, Tex.

● Not exactly, but I prefer hard work to frothy conversation. The cast doesn't socialize because we see each other on the set and need a break after filming. Other than the cast, if anyone persists in asking me personal questions I answer with the wrong information.

Donny kisses Broadway goodbye.

EDUCATION: When a chapter on show biz of 1982 is written, Maureen Brennan will figure prominently in it — and it won't be because she won a Tony or an Oscar nomination or was teamed with Robert De Niro and Robert Redford, all in one year. It's because of her claim that she's the only woman — outside of his family — to give Donny Osmond a big, fat kiss in the line of work. Co-starring with Donny in the ill-fated stage musical, Little Johnnie Jones, was also an educational experience. "I learned from Donny," she glowed, "how to be gracious to people, all kinds of people. That's what impressed me — his calm, his poise." At their first photo session, Maureen was scared stiff. Donny loosened her up. "I've been doing this for years," he reassured. "It's a cakewalk." . . . IGNORANCE: Bob Hope was asked to elaborate on a recent report that he's worth between $150 million and $700 million. "I really don't know how much money I've got," said Bob, cornered in Las Vegas where he was playing in a golf tournament (not his own for a change). "You'd better ask my wife, or Ronald Reagan — he knows for sure." What he did reveal is that he's not a big spender, outside of golf: "That's my biggest expense. I pay dues to 20 clubs throughout the country, so I can always get a game of golf. That costs me $60,000 a year. But I don't mind. . . . TACT — AND LACK OF IT: When Pearl Bailey and Melba Moore met at a Washington TV taping, the veteran Bailey told Melba that they have something in common ("You came from vaudeville just like me"). Even though she began in the record industry, Melba didn't correct her idol, nor mention that vaudeville was before her time ("Almost before my parents' time"). Melba was just a toddler when Pearlie Mae made her stage debut in St. Louis Woman in 1946. . . . Peter Jackson, creator of the floor shows at New York's Rainbow Grill, swears his worst moment has no connection with a stage disaster. While prowling for talent in France he spoke to a lady who seemed vaguely familiar. "Don't you recognize me?" she demanded of Peter who, up to then, boasted that he forgot names — but never faces. The familiar face belonged to his ex-wife, whom he divorced two decades before, after a 10-year marriage.

PRO AND CON

Should Congress Narrow the Scope Of Access to Government Records Under the Freedom of Information Act?

(Question submitted by Roland L. Holter, Bismarck, N.D.)

Send questions of national significance, on a postcard, to "Pro & Con," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022.
We'll pay $10 for those published.

PRO Senator Orrin G. Hatch, (R-Utah), chairman, Judiciary Subcommittee on the Constitution

While the F.O.I.A. has helped insure an informed citizenry, a few flaws in the Act have jeopardized law enforcement, individual privacy rights and trade-secret confidentiality. For instance, suspected criminals can use the F.O.I.A. to identify informants or avoid prosecution. Sensitive information about private citizens or businesses can be obtained for the price of a postage stamp. The Act should be amended to protect law enforcement and privacy rights.

CON Senator Patrick J. Leahy, (D.-Vt.) member, Judiciary Subcommittee on the Constitution

The F.O.I.A. has been invaluable in turning Government accountability from a catch-phrase to a reality. It has led to public disclosure of Government waste and wrongdoing. Through F.O.I.A. the press exposed discrimination in the administration of Federal contracts, major Medicare fraud by private health organizations, defective and unsafe consumer products and harmful drugs and medical devices. It gives citizens information needed to deal with a sometimes confusing and complicated Government.

COVER STORY

The Baby Boomerang

It was the generation that grew up expecting everything. Now, 76 million baby boomers are both causing and curing the problems that face us all.

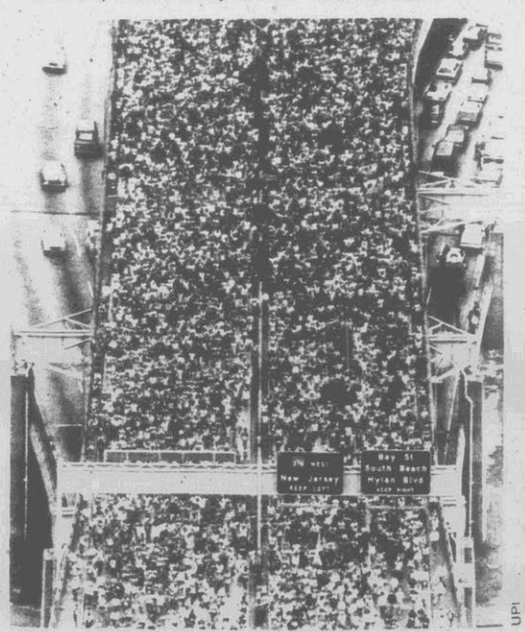
By Landon Y. Jones

Ralph Morse / Life Magazine © Time, Inc.

Coming of age: The 1950's brought coonskin caps.

Dennis Brack / Black Star

In the 60's, "Make love, not war" was the call to arms.



UPI

By the 70's, flabby baby boomers had taken to the road.

Wine sales are booming this year. Moviegoers are talking about divorce dramas like Shoot the Moon. On TV's Happy Days, Richie Cunningham's wife, Lori, recently had a baby. But elsewhere the Army needs volunteers, U.S. colleges are bracing for a historic drop in enrollment and Top 40 radio stations are switching over to talk and news formats.

Are these unrelated events? Not at all. They are just recent reverberations caused by the most extraordinary generation in our history: the postwar baby boomers. Between 1946 and 1964, American husbands and wives created in the privacy of their bedrooms 76.4 million babies — one-third of our present population — who have since affected almost every aspect of our society, from fads, fashions and music to crime, education and the economy.

The baby boomers grew up confident they would become the biggest, brightest and luckiest generation ever. But as we shall see, their very numbers have kept them from achieving much of what they wanted. "Since World War II," notes economist Richard Easterlin, "a generation's fortunes have come to depend, as never before, on how numerous it is. If one is lucky enough to be born when the national birth rate is low, then one may look forward to a relatively bright future. If one has the misfortune of being part of a large generation, one's future is correspondingly dim."

Think of the boom generation as a moving bulge in the population that, like a pig swallowed by a python, causes stretch marks and discomfort along the way. In the 1940's and 1950's, the baby boomers gave us Dr. Spock, burgeoning suburbs, crowded schools, Hula Hoops and Davy Crockett coonskin caps. For the first time, children — millions of children — were starting fads, a fact not lost on advertisers who realized kids controlled both the TV dial and their parents' pocketbooks.

Then, in the 1960's, the first wave of boomers hit adolescence and gave us the Youth Society: rock'n'roll, demonstrations, blue jeans, fast foods, marijuana, teen-age crime and teen-age unemployment. They had affluence and economic power and didn't hesitate to use it. But at places like Woodstock what they really demonstrated was simply how many of them there were.

In the 1970's, just as they previously had changed all our ideas about childhood and adolescence, the baby boomers changed young adulthood. Unlike their parents, they did not go straight from school into families. Rather, they were as untraditional about family formation as they were about religion and politics. They lived alone, married later, had fewer children and divorced more often. Young women went to work in record numbers. Words like POSSLQ (the Census Bureau acronym for Persons of Opposite Sex Sharing Living Quarters) had to be invented as we became a nation of swinging singles. And as always, when the baby boomers sneezed, the rest of us got pneumonia: When they started looking down the barrel at 30, suddenly everyone started jogging, playing tennis and dieting off extra pounds.

"From the time they were born until the time they die," says author/historian Ben Wattenberg, "the baby boomers will be causing and curing our nation's problems." Here are just a few examples of where the baby boom has brought America and where it may be taking us.

Productivity: Baby boomers flooding the labor force have depressed U.S. productivity over the past two decades. We have had an excess of young, untrained workers, and employers have had little motivation to invest in labor-saving equipment. But as the baby-boom workers gain experience, the productivity level should begin to rise.

Promotion Squeeze: The baby boomers have always expected to be on the fast track. But many of them are finding at work that there are too many Indians and not enough places for chiefs. Many have been forced to accept jobs below their qualifications and are placing a greater emphasis these days on job satisfaction (instead of advancement). Other baby boomers, frustrated by the competition, are seeking lateral transfers and dramatic career switches in order to improve their chances.

Education: Most baby boomers are now out of college, and this fall total enrollment in our colleges will drop for the first time in history. Private colleges will suffer most. But there is some good news: The Scholastic Aptitude Test (S.A.T.) scores should begin to rise after dropping every year the baby boomers took the test. The reason: The new group of students is coming from smaller families, which statistically produce higher test-scorers.

Crime Rates: The baby boomers are changing the nature of crime in our country. Most violent crimes are committed by 18-to-24-year-olds. When the baby boom hit that age group in the late 1960's, we saw an enormous leap in violent crime. It wasn't so much that respect for law and order had dropped, but rather that the available supply of potential criminals had risen. Today the number of 18-to-24-year-olds is decreasing, and we are seeing a drop-off in violent-crime rates. What is increasing is the kind of crime committed generally by older people: white-collar crime, embezzlement, income-tax fraud and computer crime.

Housing Prices: As millions of baby boomers began forming families, the median price of a new house in America between 1963 and 1981 more than quadrupled. But now the rise in housing prices is beginning to level off. Why? Remember that most young people enter the housing market between the ages of 18 and 24. In the 1980's the number of households under 25 will decrease as the baby boomers continue to grow up. This year the 4.3 million babies born in 1957, the biggest single year of the baby boom, are turning 25. As they settle down, the demand for new housing will begin to fall. The drop in demand, combined with high interest rates, means that a house is no longer such a safe investment. Some economists believe that U.S. housing prices will soon drop for the first time since the Depression.

Entertainment: The "youth" movies of the 60's and 70's are giving way to the "adult" themes of Ordinary People and Shoot the Moon. Dustin Hoffman made his reputation in The Graduate as a rebellious youth; since then he has kept up with the baby boomers by playing a divorced father in Kramer vs. Kramer. Meanwhile, in the long run, Hollywood faces serious problems as the boom generation leaves the crucial under-30 movie audience. Similarly, the current hard times in the music business are due in part to the baby boomers leaving the peak record-buying ages. The day of the rock tour is over. It's no coincidence that the biggest concerts last summer featured the Rolling Stones and Simon and Garfunkel, both acts made popular some 15 years ago by the baby boomers.

Consumer Products: The law here is Darwinian: Adapt or die. The middle-aged market is the growth market of the future. That's why Levi's is marketing Levi's for Men, with "a scrunch more room" for bodies sagging under the combined effects of roast beef and gravity. Mattel, the company that sold nearly 100 million Barbie dolls to young boomers, is now pitching video games to these grown-up kids. Fast-food chains have redecorated in mellow greens and browns (instead of the garish reds and yellows of the 60's) and added breakfast and dinner menus for working baby boomers.

How are the baby boomers coping with the problems their numbers have brought on? As always, they have found ingenious solutions: One involves updating the communal ethic of the 1960's to an "economics of sharing" to help them survive the 1980's. We see it in the "gentrification" of aging city blocks, as groups of young baby-boom couples buy and rehabilitate old brownstones. Increasing numbers of single people are buying houses with friends of both sexes (with no untidy romances implied). Tandem housing — homes built for two couples — is on the rise. And consider bartering clubs, grocery purchasing co-ops, vacation-time sharing and informal day-care clubs.

On the family front, the baby boomers have redefined marriage and childbearing. Young working mothers no longer apologize for their jobs. Women are increasingly free to pursue education and careers on an equal basis with men. Trial marriages and tentative sexual relationships are condoned. Divorce has become acceptable. In fact, men and women may eventually plan to have two marriages — one in which to have children, another in which to spend the remainder of one's life.

Many baby-boom couples are now engaging in anxious pillow talk as they wrestle with the decision whether to have children. Childbirth among women over 30 has increased markedly. Yet, what is potentially more significant is the large number of baby-boom women who are not having children. Possibly as many as one in every four boom-generation women will remain childless. Childless couples no longer have to defend themselves to society (although possibly still to their parents). Overall, baby-boom women are having only half as many children as their parents, and there is little reason to think they will leave their jobs and careers to create another baby boom of their own.

(Curiously, we do expect a temporary increase in the actual number of children born, which may approach four million a year by 1985. This is because, even if relatively few baby boomers have large families, there are still so many mothers having children that the total births will inevitably rise.)

The Bettmann Archive — Columbia Pictures

Art imitates life: In 1967 Dustin Hoffman was a confused young man in The Graduate. In 1979 he was Kramer vs. Kramer's confident single father.

COMING ATTRACTIONS

As the baby boomers enter their middle years, they will continue to set the nation's fads and fashions. But, in place of coonskin caps and tennis racquets, we will see some different Ins and Outs. Here are a few:

Auto theft	Computer crime
Downhill skiing	Cross-country skiing

—L.Y.J.

"We can think of the baby boomers as an invading army," says historian Wattenberg. "It imposes values on us as it ages. It is now moving forward to the different circumstances of midlife. But it is still the center of gravity in our nation and will continue to be until the boomers retire and die."

The next 20 years will be a paradoxical time for the baby-boom generation. On one hand, believes Wattenberg, they will be entering their most productive years. They will stop taking our money and start producing it. We can expect an economic boom. "As these 76 million marry and have children," he says, "they will have to buy houses. And with the houses will come drapes, rugs, stereos and, yes, even cars. That will mean an enormous rise in demand and eventually more jobs."

But for now, he adds, the baby boomers have a tough road ahead. There just aren't enough jobs to go around. Thus, Wattenberg foresees high unemployment over the next few years. As he puts it, "We will have a prosperous economy with many unhappy people in it. This will not smooth out until the end of this decade."

In 1982 the oldest baby boomers are turning 36; the youngest 18. The median age in the U.S., 28 in 1970, has crossed 30 and should reach 35 by the turn of the century. And consider what will happen to the boom generation after the year 2000. As the first baby boomers cross 65 (in the year 2011), the number of elderly will rise from 32 million at the end of the century to 45 million in 2020 and then 55 million in 2030. We will have to rethink everything we know about what it means to be old in America. Compared to previous generations of elderly, the baby boomers will be healthier, wealthier, better educated and accustomed to getting their way. In the future, to be old may be as in vogue as being young is today.

It is true that the existing Social Security system, or even corporate pension plans, may have to be remade to support this vast generation. But there is no reason to think that it cannot happen. If nothing else, the baby boomers have demonstrated that they have the clout to bring about solutions to the problems they have caused. The consolation for them, as the pig moves in its bumpy course through the python, is that they will always be where the action is. One baby boomer in Chicago put it well. "I am not optimistic at all about the future state of the world," she said. "But I am optimistic about my place in it." FW

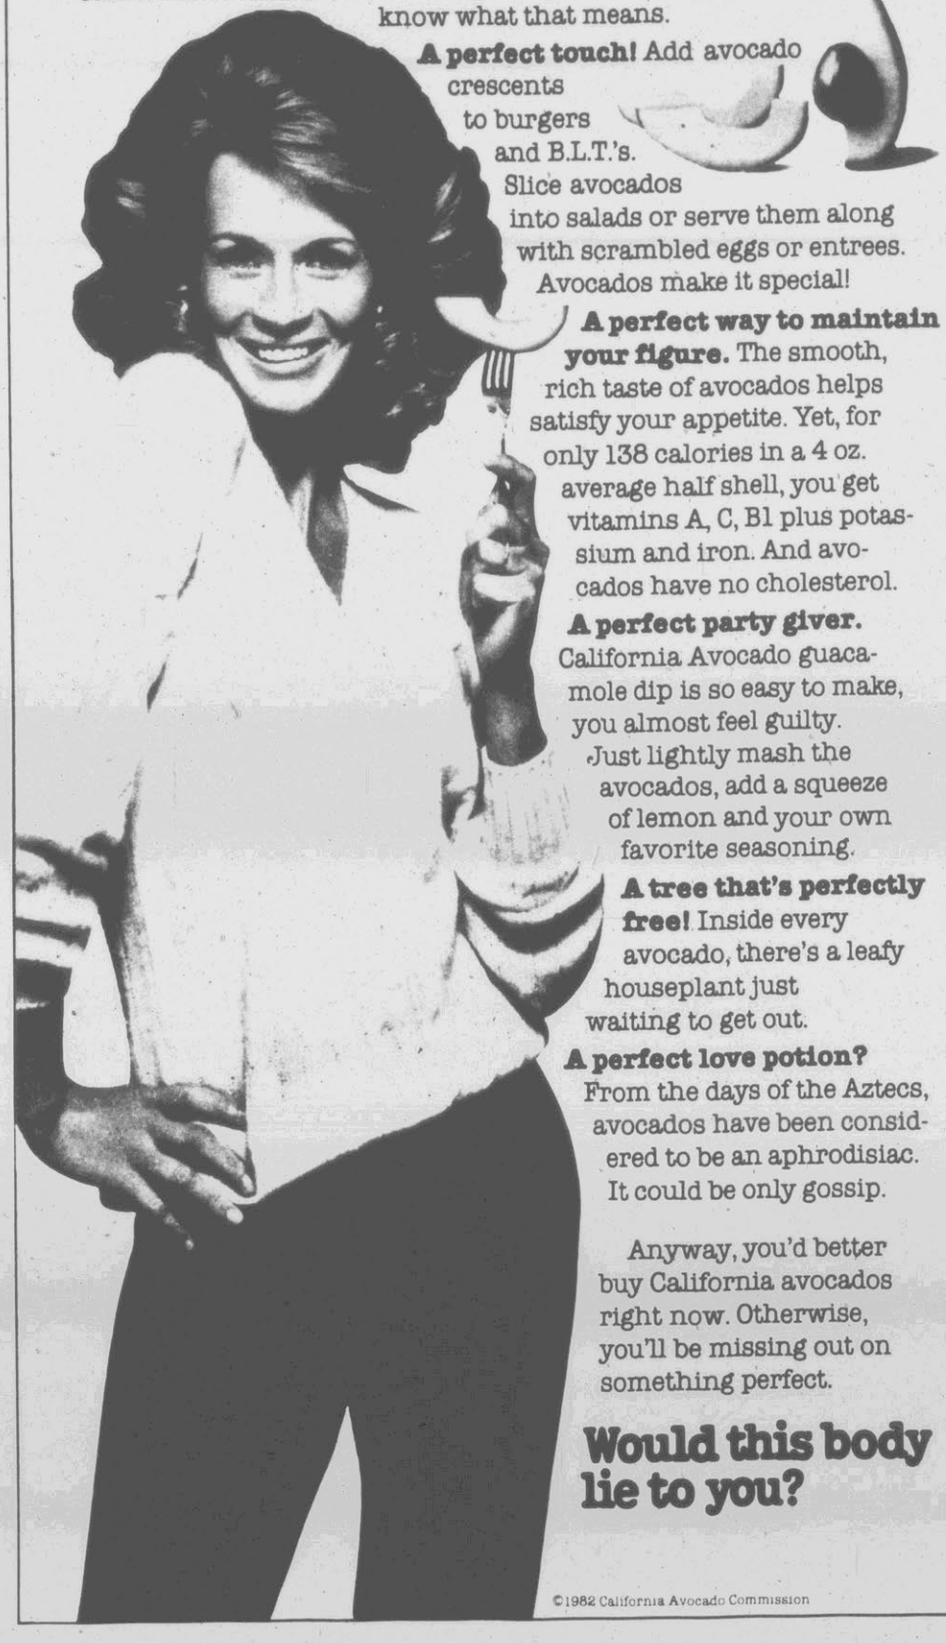
Angie Dickinson says: "Now's the perfect time to buy California Avocados."©



A perfectly grand supply at the store. Right now, California avocados are tumbling into your market. And you know what that means.

A perfect touch! Add avocado crescents to burgers and B.L.T.'s. Slice avocados into salads or serve them along with scrambled eggs or entrees. Avocados make it special!

A perfect way to maintain your figure. The smooth, rich taste of avocados helps satisfy your appetite. Yet, for only 138 calories in a 4 oz. average half shell, you get vitamins A, C, B1 plus potassium and iron. And avocados have no cholesterol.

A perfect party giver. California Avocado guacamole dip is so easy to make, you almost feel guilty. Just lightly mash the avocados, add a squeeze of lemon and your own favorite seasoning.

A tree that's perfectly free! Inside every avocado, there's a leafy houseplant just waiting to get out.

A perfect love potion? From the days of the Aztecs, avocados have been considered to be an aphrodisiac. It could be only gossip.

Anyway, you'd better buy California avocados right now. Otherwise, you'll be missing out on something perfect.

Would this body lie to you?

A Money Guide For Today's Woman

By Merrie Spaeth

More than 52 percent of all women in America now work outside the home. Though many work as a means of personal fulfillment, many more work for economic reasons: in some cases because divorce has suddenly positioned them as the heads of households. All of this has meant that women today must pay close attention to personal finance. FAMILY WEEKLY spoke to Catherine Willis, vice president of Chase Manhattan Bank and director of the Chase Exchange, a financial planning service for women, for advice on effective money management.

Willis: Get credit.

Q: Ms. Willis, one of the biggest financial problems for women used to be getting credit. A number of Federal laws were passed to protect women. Have they made a difference?

A: Yes. The Equal Opportunity Credit Act [1975] prohibits discrimination because of sex, and it has removed most of the real barriers. However, it doesn't guarantee credit, only access. Working women, particularly those on their own, still need to develop and protect their own credit histories.

Q: Why is developing a credit history so critical and what are the basic steps in doing this?

A: It's critical because women have to make their own decisions and stop handing things over to someone else, either a husband or an expert. The unpleasant facts of life are that over half of all women eventually have to make these decisions alone — either as divorcées or widows. Married women, even those not working now, should take advantage of the law and instruct creditors to list their names separately. They can do this even if their husbands pay all the bills. This way they have a credit history of their own. A young woman just starting out should build a history step by step. First, open savings and checking accounts. Next, get a gas credit card and then a charge account at a local store. If you use these and demonstrate over time that you can pay their bills, you will be able to get bank credit cards and bank loans.

Q: What if a woman is denied credit?

A: She should go back and ask why she was rejected. Our studies show that women are too likely to accept "no" for an answer. Frequently, a woman can get the decision reversed if she's willing to accept a lower line of credit. As a last resort, she can take out a small loan using the passbook savings account as collateral. Once you demonstrate that you will pay back a loan, your credit worthiness becomes excellent.

Q: How can a woman avoid problems in managing credit?

A: Our general guideline is a conservative one: Don't spend more than 10 percent of your take home pay on installment payments. Danger signs are if you find yourself skipping a regular bill, like a utility, to pay an installment account or if your monthly bills are getting larger each month.

Q: No woman wants to contemplate being alone, but as you say, many women become heads of households because of divorce or death of a spouse. Besides getting credit in her own name, what are prudent steps for a married woman to take now?

A: The preparation involves assembling information. First, find out exactly how much money comes into the household. That means knowing how much your husband makes. Second, learn what provisions have been made in case your husband dies. Women make a big mistake when they assume a pension provides for them. Sometimes it does, but frequently it doesn't. Last, find out where the will is kept and what's in it. One more thing: Every woman needs her own checking account, if only for these safety purposes.

Q: What's the most common pitfall for women who have suddenly found themselves heads of households?

A: Making a hasty investment decision based on information or advice from a well-intentioned friend. Leave that "great deal" alone. If a woman is suddenly alone she needs two things: access to cash and paid-up insurance. That buys her time. Then she can learn what her own financial needs are and what we describe as her "risk-tolerance" level.

A woman should never assume that her husband's pension automatically provides for her.

Q: Does a woman need a will?

A: I preach on this topic. Every woman needs a will. Married women can have a joint will with their husbands. Single individuals also should have wills because they own much more than they think. Without a will, the Government will make choices for you.

Q: You've mentioned financial planning. Are there steps a woman can take to get started?

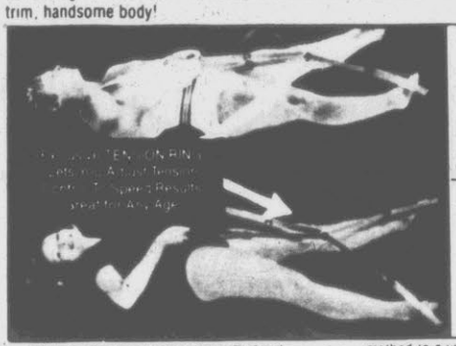
A: It's much simpler than you might think. Local banks will have forms to help you organize this information. First, get a fix on your cash flow. This means writing down your income stream from all sources on one side and your regular expenses on the other. Second, figure your net worth. This means estimating the total value of what you own: house, jewelry, furniture and so on. Those are your assets. Your liabilities would be anything you owe: a mortgage, car or student loan and so on. Third, write down your goals involving money. Short-term goals are under one year and might include purchase of a major appliance. Medium-range goals are from one to three years — for instance, a special vacation. Long-range goals are anything beyond that. Try to put a price tag on each one. After you see where you're going, you'll see the different kinds of plans you need. Generally, you need plans for spending and savings, insurance, investment, taxes and your estate. Credit planning fits in as part of these.

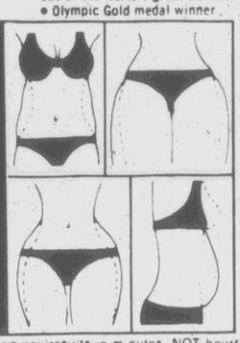
SYNOMETRICS...an Olympic Champion's Discovery!

Turn Belly Fat into a Rock-Hard Lean Stomach

...in 7 short minutes a day with the "miracle" of SYNOMETRICS the fantastic new discovery for speed shaping away ugly, embarrassing fat and flab...to reveal a brand new rock-hard, lean trim, handsome body!

Introducing IKE BERGER
Olympic Champion and truly one of the world's great athletes
• Olympic Gold medal winner.





"I'm over 50, yet in just 7 days SPEED SHAPER™ 'burned' off the fat and flab I've lived with for thirty years."
"I thought my fat and flab was with me for life ...SYNOMETRICS "burned" it off in only 7 days."
HY HARRIS, New York, N.Y.

IKE BERGER explains SYNOMETRICS

You already know about the Isotonic and Isometric principle of body dynamics. Millions of people use one or the other in their daily exercises. One day I accidentally discovered that if I used BOTH methods together in one single exercise, I automatically speeded up the results tremendously and I reduced my daily exercise hour down to only 7 short minutes.

THE SCIENCE OF SYNOMETRICS

I later learned the scientific reason for this amazing result. It's called SYNERGISM—meaning that when you combine two methods the result is greater than the both of them separately. I now called my new discovery SYNOMETRICS and developed a special exercise unit I call the SPEED SHAPER. And that's just what it is—a speed method to give you results in minutes, NOT hours. Now, build yourself a "fantastic looking body" with the incredible SYNOMETRICS—the invention that works on the exciting new scientific concept of ISOTONIC + ISOMETRIC.

IRON CLAD MONEY BACK GUARANTEE

In just a few days you must actually begin to see measurable, real results or your money back promptly and without any question.

• No diet needed if daily caloric intake does not add to present body weight.

FOOD Neighbors' Recipe Exchange

By Marilyn Hansen

If you have a recipe to share, write: Marilyn Hansen, Neighbors' Recipe Exchange, FAMILY WEEKLY, 641 Lexington Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022. For every recipe published, FAMILY WEEKLY will pay $10. Recipes must include your name, address, telephone number and the newspaper in which you read FAMILY WEEKLY. Recipes with the earliest postmark will be used. We cannot answer letters or return recipes. All recipes become the property of FAMILY WEEKLY.

This intriguing dessert comes from a convivial kitchen in Whispering Pines, N.C. "I would like to share this unusual recipe with others," writes Dorothy Warner. "At our family reunions there are so many people who prefer cake over pie and vice versa, that our great aunt Mellie and my grandmother put their heads together and came up with a combination that usually settles the issue, part cake, part pie." We present the result for you to try.

REUNION CAKE-PIE

1 cup dark corn syrup
1 cup chopped pecans
3 eggs, beaten
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
⅔ cup sugar or packed light brown sugar
Dash salt
2 tablespoons butter or margarine, melted
¼ cup shortening
½ cup sugar
1 egg, beaten
2 teaspoons vanilla extract
1 cup sifted cake flour or 1 cup sifted all-purpose flour minus 1 tablespoon
¼ teaspoon salt
¾ teaspoon baking powder
¼ cup milk

1. Make pie layer: Into medium bowl combine corn syrup, pecans, eggs, vanilla, sugar, dash salt and 2 tablespoons melted butter. Mix well.

2. Pour pecan mixture into a lightly greased 9-inch pie pan. Bake in preheated 400°F oven for 15 minutes.

3. Prepare cake layer: In a large bowl, cream ¼ cup shortening with ½ cup sugar, beating until light and fluffy. Beat in egg and vanilla.

4. Add flour mixed with salt and baking powder, alternately with milk, beginning and ending with flour. Beat just until all is combined.

5. Pour cake batter over baked pecan layer. Return to oven, lower heat to 375°F and bake about 30 minutes or until cake springs back when lightly touched with finger. Cool on rack.

6. When cake-pie is cool, decorate surface with confectioners' sugar lightly sifted through a lace paper doily. Cut into wedges to serve. A spoonful of whipped cream on top of each serving is a generous touch. Makes 6 to 8 servings

If you'd like a new look in your kitchen or bathroom but you can't afford major home remodeling right now, why not try some small decorating changes? When done right, they can make a big difference. FAMILY WEEKLY talked to top kitchen/bathroom designers for their ideas.

"Give kitchen cabinets a new look instead of replacing them," says Patty Klassen of Tucson, Ariz. One way is to change the hardware and today there's a wide choice, from antique to modern. If the cabinets are smooth, you can give them a traditional look by framing the doors with ready-to-buy wood moldings. Leave them plain, or cover with a laminate or smoked plexiglass panel for a totally new appearance.

In the bathroom, Klassen suggests decorating a wall with one of the new 12-inch-square stick-on wallpaper products and then framing it with molding. If your tile has seen better days, consider synthetic marble, plastic laminate or tile sheets that may be put directly over old tile, without the mess of ripping it off. Check for these products at your local bath shop or home center.

How about an individual look for your kitchen counter? Laura Trujillo of Chicago suggests a colorful tile "hot spot." Have a portion of the countertop surface near the range removed and replace with several four- or six-inch-square tiles (set in) — a perfect place to let a hot pot cool.

For the bathroom, if you'd like to replace those old fluorescent light fixtures on either side of the medicine cabinet, Trujillo suggests a pair of antique-like fixtures and a wood frame attached around the cabinet.

Ellen Cheever of Sacramento, Calif., has some space-saving ideas for both rooms: For the kitchen, a wooden pole or tension rod installed between two cabinets over the sink is ideal for a hanging herb garden or lightweight kitchen accessories. For the bathroom, she suggests a ladder-like divider for towels in the space between the sink and toilet. You buy two eight-foot-long, 2-by-4-inch boards of clear-grade pine and four two-foot-long wooden dowels and nail together. Then paint or apply a clear sealer finish. Nail one side to the wall.

Florence Perchuk of New York is a champion in putting underutilized space to work. She suggests a storage pulley-and-shelf unit above the entrance to the kitchen or bathroom. You can buy or construct the shelf while the pulley system (cord and weights) is available at home centers or hardware stores. If you have space above the refrigerator, you might hang wire shelving for an open, airy look. FW

Does Your Home Need Inflation-Proof Insurance?

As the value of your home and possessions escalates each year because of inflation, it's essential that you adjust your insurance coverage accordingly. Otherwise a theft or fire could leave you in a serious financial bind.

Getting adequate coverage: According to Nancy Golonka, director of consumer affairs at the Insurance Information Institute, "Most insurance companies advise that the amount of home insurance you carry should come close to what it would cost to rebuild — its replacement value not its market value." Coverage should be at least 80 percent of replacement value. Your insurance agent can help you determine the replacement cost of your house and possessions.

Your total home coverage is the basis for determining the amount of coverage of other structures on the property, personal property and additional living expenses.

"It's good to review your home insurance coverage once a year," says Golonka, "or add an inflation guard to your policy. Typical is one which provides for an automatic increase every three months in the amounts of protection afforded by the policy."

Personal property coverage: Certain property in the home may be more valuable than the coverage limits set in the policy — items such as antique furniture, furs, camera equipment, coin and stamp collections or jewelry. You can adequately insure these valuables separately.

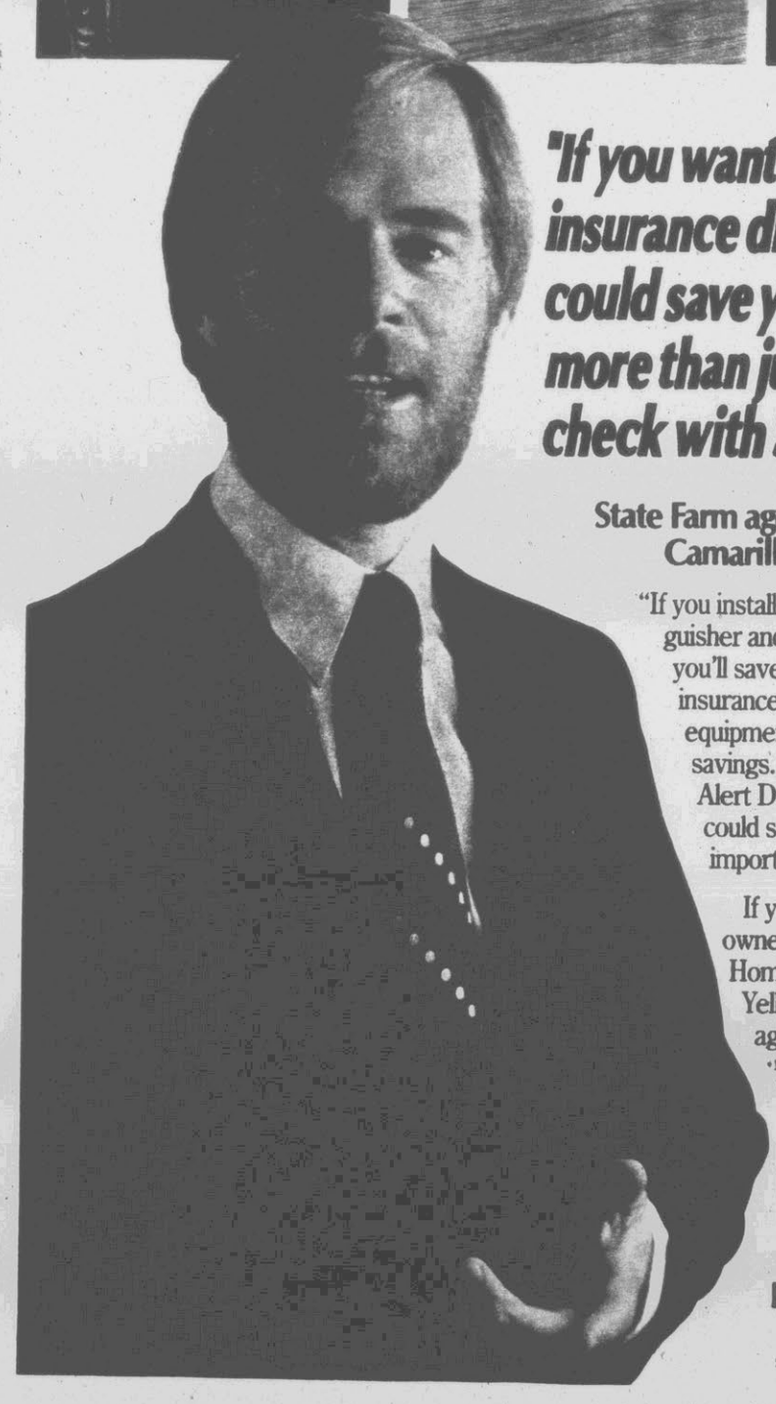
Emyl Jenkins, a nationally known personal property appraiser and author of Why You're Richer Than You Think (Rawson, Wade, 1981), agrees that updating your home insurance is important — especially because the value of such items as furniture, china and silver has soared. She advises making an inventory list of personal possessions and photographing them. Each object should be described in detail (e.g. for a chair, describe the style and its approximate age); you should also include the date of purchase and cost.

"Keep two copies of the list," says Jenkins, "one at home and one with a trusted friend or an attorney."

Shopping for insurance: One of the best ways to select an insurance company is to ask friends or relatives to recommend those that have given them good service. Call or visit several insurance agents to comparison-shop. (There definitely can be a difference in cost.) Take your household inventory list and photographs.

Consider the largest deductible you can afford — that's the amount of any loss that you agree to pay. The higher the deductible, the lower the premium. A number of companies also offer discounts for people who install fire and burglar alarms.

For a free copy of "Taking Inventory," send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Insurance Information Institute, Dept. FW, 110 William Street, New York, N.Y. 10038. FW



"If you want the homeowners insurance discount that could save you a lot more than just money, check with State Farm."

State Farm agent John Pomeroy, Camarillo, California.

"If you install deadbolts, a fire extinguisher and a smoke alarm, as I have, you'll save 5% on your homeowners insurance. Put in additional security equipment, and you can add to those savings. It's all part of our Home Alert Discount program.* And it could save you something more important than just money."

If you're a renter or a homeowner, get all the details on the Home Alert program. Check your Yellow Pages for the State Farm agent near you.

Observations

Summer of '58. It was a time of "beatnik" literature, tailfins and the new music called "rock 'n roll." "Ike" was in the White House. Fidel Castro was toppling the Batista regime, and Salk vaccine was toppling polio. And a daring new venture in touring information, the Mobil Travel Guide, was launched, its first volume covering Texas, Oklahoma, New Mexico, Arkansas, and Louisiana. Now, celebrating its silver anniversary, the Guide has grown to seven volumes that can tell you where to stay, eat and have fun, all across the nation. Traveling with it, as millions have found, can save time, gasoline–and money.

Roaming near home. Wherever you live, there's a Mobil Travel Guide for you. Each of the seven regional editions covering the U.S. and Canada, and a special edition just for major cities, includes 24 discount coupons for attractions ranging from helicopter tours of St. Louis to treks through Lion Country Safari in California. Discounts are just the beginning: Rated are 21,000 hotels, motels, resorts, and restaurants; and the prices they charge are listed. There's more–sightseeing tips, maps, mileage charts, for example–all for $6.95 a volume. That's the same as last year, and about what dinner cost in a "very good" French restaurant back in 1958.

"We'll feel right at home. The travel guide says there are bats in the belfry."

Star gazing. Restaurants, hotels, motels and resorts are rated on a star system, with five stars tops. This year, there are 31 five-star establishments, including 12 restaurants–two (Ernie's and Le Club) in San Francisco. Hungry in Tucson? The five-star Rancho Del Rio Tack Room presents long-stemmed roses to the ladies, along with fine fare. In St. Louis, Tony's serves excellent Italian food, and there's fine French cuisine all over the map: Maisonette in Cincinnati; Le Perroquet in Chicago; Le Français in Wheeling, Illinois; Le Bec Fin, in Philadelphia; La Vieille Maison in Boca Raton, Florida; Cafe Chauveron in Miami. And in New York City it's the "incomparably French" Lutèce. Harralds, in Stormville, New York, won its five stars for cozy meals in an Olde English setting.

Rooms at the inn? Yes indeed. And also in hotels, resorts and motels all over the continental U.S. and Canada too–including the only five-star motel in the country: the Salishan Lodge in Lincoln City, Oregon, with its 750 acres of forest. Five-star hotels include: the Fairmont in Dallas, Harrah's in Stateline, Nevada, the Carlyle in New York, and L'Ermitage in Beverly Hills (a short drive to Hanna-Barbera's Marineland, with its performing dolphins). But the Guide caters also to those who prefer to travel economically: ✔-rated recommendations indicate exceptional values, at reasonable rates. So go with the Guide. It makes sense–and saves dollars, too.

It's a fact: The Mobil Travel Guide is available at most bookstores and at many Mobil service stations.

CRIME

Crimeproofing Your Home

By Manuel Estrella and Martin Forst

Front doors left unlocked all day . . . bicycles lying on the front lawn . . . leisurely strolls in the evening . . . no fear whatsoever of crime. With these images in mind, thousands of people have fled the cities and sought an idyllic life in the suburbs.

But the suburbs are not as safe as they used to be. Though crime is still more prevalent in the cities than elsewhere, it has been on the rise in suburban and rural areas during the last 10 years.

Perhaps you imagine that the typical suburban burglar is a seasoned professional dressed in black, wearing a mask and lurking around homes in the dark of night. Actually, less than 1 percent of the residential burglaries in this country are committed by true professionals. The typical suburban burglar is 14 to 19 years old and lives in the same neighborhood where he pulls his jobs. He knows when his neighbors leave for work, and he knows when they go on vacation. This burglar normally won't strike at night when people are most likely to be home; he usually will commit his crimes between 10 A.M. and 4 P.M. on weekdays.

Burglars, particularly the less sophisticated variety operating in the suburbs, are opportunists. And unfortunately, all of us give burglars far too many opportunities. F.B.I. statistics indicate that in 20 percent of all residential burglaries, the culprit enters through an open or unlocked door or window.

Your home can never be made completely burglarproof, but you can reduce the burglar's opportunities:

Doors and locks: Doors on suburban residences generally are either solid core (wood all the way through) or hollow core (hollow on the inside). Hollow-core doors do not offer adequate protection because they are easy to push or kick in. All doors leading to the outside should be of solid-core construction.

Many suburban homes have spring-latch locks (key-in-the-knob locks) on exterior doors. These can be easily "slipped" (opened) with a credit card or nail file. The deadbolt lock, a proven deterrent to burglary, gives you the best protection. The bolt, which has no spring, remains stationary and can't be slipped.

The best lock for a sliding glass patio door is the deadlock. You can also place a sawed-off broom handle along the bottom track between the sliding door and the opposite wall.

Windows: Unattended windows should be closed and locked, especially when you leave your residence. Standard locks on windows are relatively easy to break or pick. Even though many types of windows are found in suburban homes, there are special custom locks to fit almost any kind. Visit your locksmith and get his advice.

Sliding glass windows pose a security problem because they can be easily lifted up and out of the track. To prevent this, slide the window to one side and place into the top of the track two or three sheet-metal screws. The screws should extend down far enough to prevent the window from being lifted out of its tracks, but they should also be short enough so that the window moves freely back to the closed position. (This works for sliding glass doors, too.)

Burglar alarms: Burglar alarms are being advertised with increasing frequency in magazines and on radio and TV. Each homeowner must evaluate his own situation and needs, but generally speaking, we do not recommend a burglar alarm for the average suburban household. For an active family, with kids and pets going in and out of the house at all hours, burglar alarms are very impractical. False alarms account for over 90 percent of all alarms that sound.

Expensive alarm systems, which can cost as much as several thousand dollars, do provide added security. But since the average loss from a residential burglary is only $525, it is hard to justify spending so much money on an alarm. We believe money would be better spent on good doors and locks.

When you go away: When you take a vacation or go on a business trip, you should try to give the impression that someone is still occupying your home. Buy at least one, and preferably more, electric timers, set so that the lights will go on and off in the evening. Arrange for a friend to collect the mail in your mailbox and the newspapers on your front porch. If you will be gone for more than a few days, have someone come and mow your lawn. In general, make your place look lived in. FW

Manuel Estrella and Martin Forst are authors of The Family Guide to Crime Prevention, (Beaufort Books, 1981).

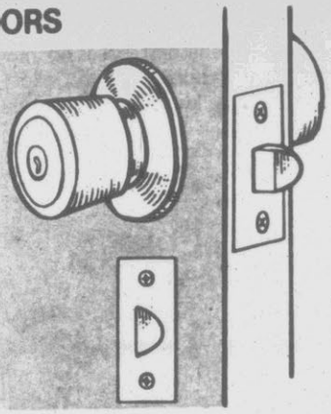
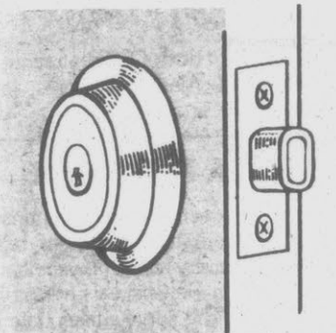
DOORS

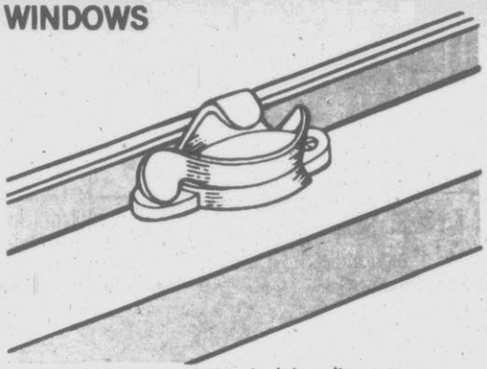


A springlatch lock can be opened easily with a credit card or nail file.

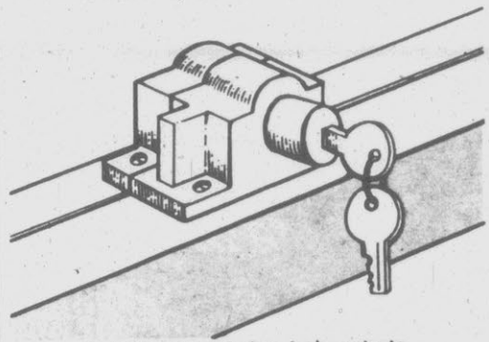


A deadbolt lock lacking springs remains stationary, deterring burglars.

WINDOWS

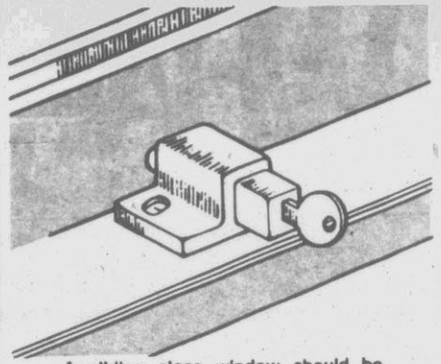


A standard window lock is quite easy to break or pick.

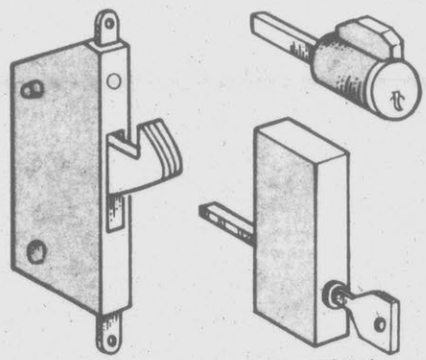


A key locking window lock protects because it can't be jimmied open.

SLIDING DOORS & WINDOWS



A sliding glass window should be secured with a key locking device.



A sliding glass door can be protected with a variety of locks.

WHAT IN THE WORLD

By Eliot Kaplan

SOME LIKE 'EM SMART

Peter Bono

He wasn't considered the world's most brilliant man for nothing, you know.

As noted in Ruth Birnkrant's Fascinating Facts About Love, Sex & Marriage, Marilyn Monroe once said to Shelley Winters, "Wouldn't it be nice to have affairs with the most attractive men and not get emotionally involved?" Each made a list of choices, and Monroe's ended with Albert Einstein.

Winters pointed out the impossibility of this selection to Monroe, noting his fame and advanced age. "I hear he's very healthy," replied Marilyn.

"I don't know how many of her choices she achieved," Winters has observed since. "But after her death I saw a large framed photograph of Albert Einstein on the piano. On it was written, 'To Marilyn, with respect and thanks. Albert Einstein.'"

WHERE THE DOCTORS ARE

Trying to find a doctor? Your best bet is to move to Washington, D.C. Your worst choice—South Dakota. According to information from the Health Insurance Association of America, at last count there were 181 physicians for every 100,000 persons in the U.S. But the District of Columbia has 519 doctors for every 100,000, while in South Dakota the rate is 102 physicians per 100,000. States with the highest doctor/population rates are New York, Massachusetts, Maryland, Connecticut, California, Vermont, Rhode Island, Hawaii and Colorado. The lowest doctor concentrations are in Mississippi, Wyoming, Idaho, Alaska, Arkansas, Iowa, Alabama, North Dakota and Indiana.

FLYING VIA MILKY WAY

Candy is dandy says Shauck.

When stunt pilot and Baylor University professor Max Shauck takes off in his single-engine plane, he can savor the sweet smell of success. Actually, that sweet scent is coming from his exhaust, because the fuel he uses is made from candy bars.

Through a special process, discarded candy waste (including chocolate, nougat and caramel) from the local M&M Mars plant in Waco, Tex. is converted into ethanol—180-proof alcohol. (It takes up to 125 pounds of candy to make one gallon of fuel.)

Shauck told us the ethanol, which can be made from grain, flies his plane quite nicely, thank you, through all his loops and rolls. Candy-bar fuel gives lower gas mileage but is still more efficient since it costs $1.30 per gallon versus $2 for regular plane fuel.

Whether he'll take his plane to the dentist every six months, we don't know.

RIGHT FORMULA FOR A JOB

If you're a graduating college senior gone job hunting, let's hope you majored in chemistry. Businesses report they'll hire 37 percent more chemistry grads this year than in 1981, according to Northwestern University's Endicott Report on 242 major companies. The survey, taken late last year, shows that businesses expect to hire 11 percent more grads with bachelor's degrees and 12 percent more with master's degrees. Other prime growth areas are engineering and computer science. Predicted average starting salaries range from $15,924 for liberal arts students to $25,428 for engineering grads. Students with bachelor's degrees in business administration can expect to start at $17,448 while those with M.B.A.'s will come in at around $26,580.

BRACE YOURSELF

For those who have to endure taunts of "metal mouth," live without bagels and apples, and kiss very carefully, relax — you're hardly alone. Some four million Americans (20 percent of them adults) now wear braces on their teeth.

One necessity for the fledgling "brace face":

1982 by Harold Roth

Jeanne Betancourt's delightful, informative new book, Smile! How to Cope with Braces.

Evolution, Betancourt told us, is primarily to blame for our crooked teeth, as the number of choppers we have hasn't adapted through the centuries to our bigger brains and smaller jaws. And a nice smile isn't the main reason for braces. Orthodontic problems can lead to poor speech, bad gums, cavities and even stomach disorders.

Betancourt advises kids to ask a lot of questions. "Find out what's going on, why and how you can make it go better," she says. "Orthodontists know that the more cooperative you are, the better the results."

C&W ON AM & FM

If you're driving on vacation and feel down and out turning the dial in vain for a country & western station; if you long to hear those familiar strains of "You Dirty Egg-Sucking Dog" and "Drop Kick Me Jesus Through the Goalposts of Life," don't fret. Molson Beer is offering a free guide to some 374 country music radio stations around the U.S. Just send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Country Music Guide, 888 Seventh Avenue, Box FW, New York, N.Y. 10106.

● TRAVELERS ID! Is travel broadening? "He that travels much knows much," wrote Thomas Fuller, M.D. in 1732. In the same year, Fuller also wrote: "If a donkey goes traveling, he'll not come home a —." Fill blank with a five-letter word.

The missing word is 'horse.'

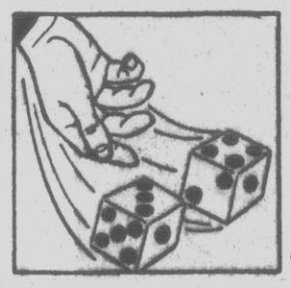
● Think Fast! Spell out the smallest number possible using any letters of the alphabet from d to n inclusive. Answer in 30 seconds.

The smallest number possible is nine.

● Out at Home! If Al's at home in Alameda and Jack's at home in Jacksonville, where are the homes of Phil, Mil, Bill, and Lou?

Philadelphia, Milwaukee, Billings and Louisville are possibilities.

● Riddle-Me-This! What did the bullfrog ask the toad? "Wart's new?" What do you call an elephant's daydreams? Ele-phancies. Where did Daniel Boone keep his boat? In the boondocks.



MATH MAGIC WITH DICE

Have a friend roll two dice where you can't see them. When the dice come to rest, have him double the points uppermost on either die. Have him add five to the result, multiply by five, and add the points of the second die.

Ask him to give you the total, whereupon you tell him immediately the points of the two dice.

Here's how: Simply subtract 25 from his total. The two digits remaining will be the points on the dice.

Give it a try.

CAT'S PAW! Hey there, Junior, what's the fuss? to complete this dot scene, add lines from dot 1 to dot 2, 3, etc.

Prince Valiant

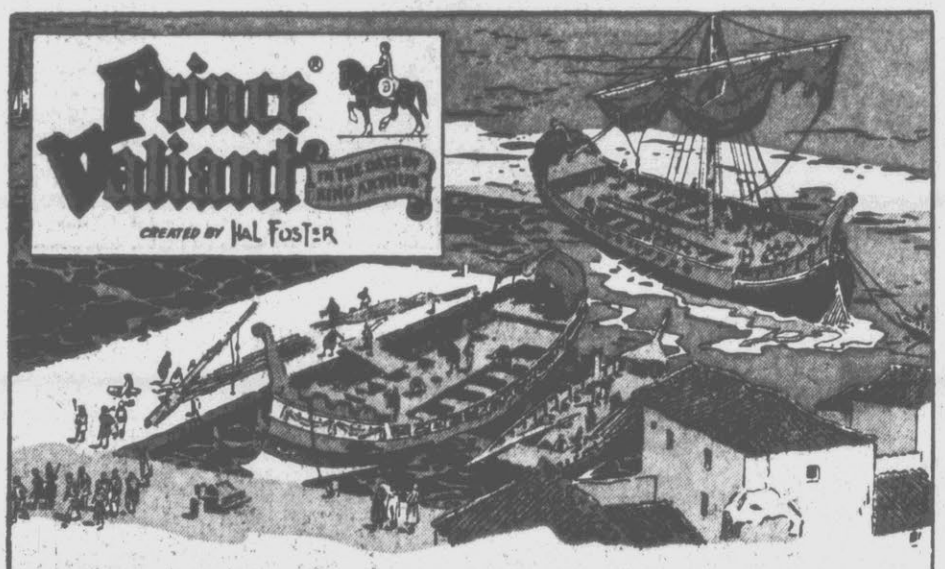
CREATED BY HAL FOSTER

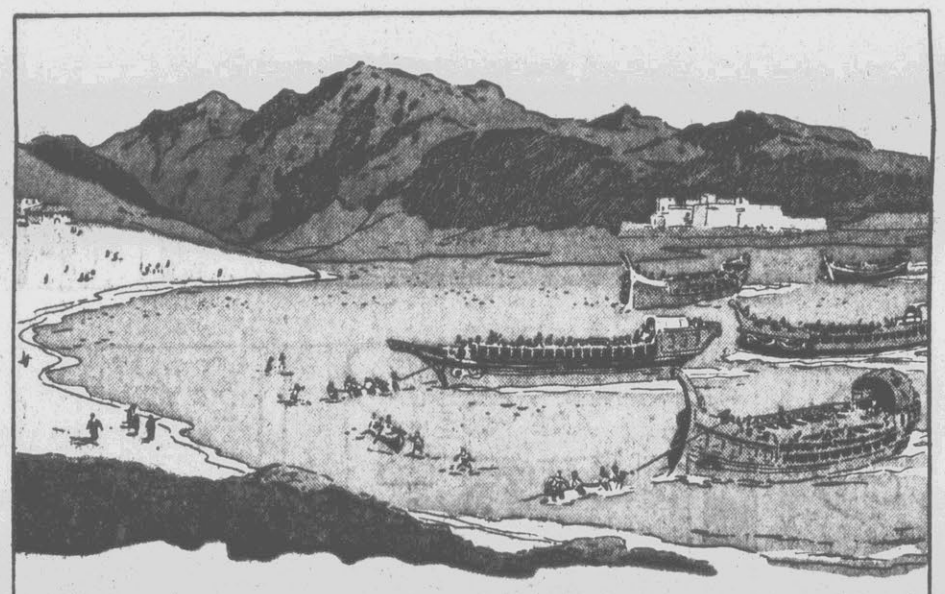


Our Story: CAPTURED IMPERIAL TROOPS COWER UNDER GUARD. A FEW OF THEIR WARSHIPS REMAIN SEAWORTHY. VAL ORDERS THESE STRIPPED OF OARS, MASTS, AND ARMAMENTS. BELISARIUS RECOVERS SLOWLY, HIS SPIRIT BROKEN, AND MANY OF HIS BONES. "WHY DID YOU SAVE ME?" HE ASKS PRINCE VALIANT.

IN REPLY VAL HELPS THE CRIPPLED GENERAL TO THE QUEEN'S CHAMBER. "ALETA," HE WHISPERS SOFTLY. BUT SHE IS AWARE OF NOTHING.

"I REMEMBER HOW SHE WASHED HER TRESSES IN THE STREAM THE FIRST TIME I SAW HER," VAL SIGHS. "I REMEMBER HOW SHE DANCED BEFORE THE TAUREGS TO SAVE BOTH OUR LIVES. IN STEALING MY SON, JUSTINIAN STOLE MY WIFE. MY MEMORIES HE WILL NEVER HAVE."

BELISARIUS SHUFFLES AWKWARDLY. "I DID NOT KNOW," HE STAMMERS AT LAST. VAL SEEMS NOT TO HAVE HEARD. "WE WERE NEVER ENEMIES, YOU AND I. I NEED AN ALLY AT COURT TO FIND THE CHILD. I DO NOT DEMAND TREASON." HE RETURNS TO BELISARIUS HIS SWORD AND ARMOR....



....AND BY ACCEPTING IT THE GENERAL SILENTLY CONVEYS HIS WILLINGNESS. SOON AFTERWARDS HE AND HIS TROOPS ARE MARCHED ABOARD THE GHOSTLY HULKS. THE HELPLESS VESSELS ARE TOWED TOWARD CONSTANTINOPLE, THEN SET ADRIFT TO WASH ASHORE WITH THE TIDE.
