No Peace Until The Falklands Returned

By the Associated Press

The Falkland Islands war will not end until Argentina withdraws from the South Atlantic British colony, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said today.

In some of her toughest language in the seven week conflict, Mrs. Thatcher also told Parliament that Britain will veto any ceasefire proposal by the United Nations Security Council meeting in New York.

"There can be no ceasefire without full withdrawal of all Argentine troops," she said. "Our objective is to retake the Falklands. They are British sovereign territory and we wish to restore British administration."

Her remarks hardened the stance her government took during talks on at least seven peace plans following the Argentine invasion April 2. Those efforts collapsed last week and Britain invaded the islands.

Asked how Britain would react if the Security Council passed a resolution calling for a halt in the fighting, she said: "If necessary, we shall have to use the veto."

In fighting Monday, Britain claimed it shot down eight more Argentine planes, but said it lost its third major warship, the frigate Antelope, blown up by an Argentine bomb. Despite the latest battles, Vatican officials said today "John Paul II was definitely traveling" to Britain at week's end for his historic six-day visit. Vatican sources said he may make a "bouncing visit" to Argentina, where 95 percent of the people are Catholics.

The pope has unsuccessfully pleaded for a cease-fire between the warring nations. It was earlier feared he would scrap the trip to Britain to avoid angering the Argentines.

In Washington, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. told a White House meeting today that Britain is approaching a position to bring the war to an early conclusion, House Republican leader Robert H. Michel reported. He offered no details, but British military officials have predicted they would retake the heavily defended Falklands capital within days.

At the United Nations, Ireland submitted a resolution to the Security Council calling for a 72-hour ceasefire while Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar made another attempt to negotiate a peaceful solution. British Defense Minister John Nott said earlier a truce was impossible until British troops retake the islands.

British war correspondents reported waves of Argentine Mirage and Skyhawk jets made three attacks Monday afternoon on the invasion task force in Falkland Sound off the British beachhead. It was the third such attack in four days.

The British Defense Ministry said its Harrier jets and anti-aircraft fire from the ships and shore batteries brought down eight of the attackers.

This raised to 64 the total number of Argentine aircraft shot down or destroyed on the ground. Nott told the House of Commons more than a third of the Argentine air force has been destroyed, and more ships were arriving to strengthen the British task force.

The Argentine government admitted the loss of two fighters Monday and claimed the raiders inflicted "serious damage" to a troopship and "damage" to a frigate. The Argentine Embassy in Washington said the troopship was the 44,000-ton cruiser liner Canberra, which the British government requisitioned to carry the invasion force to the South Atlantic, but this was not confirmed in London.

Instead, British Defense Ministry spokesman Ian McDonald said only that some ships may have been damaged.

Argentina also claimed that its anti-aircraft guns shot down a Harrier jet during a British raid Monday on Stanley, the Falklands capital on the east coast of East Falkland and 42 miles east of the British beachhead. The British Defense Ministry confirmed that ships and planes of the task force bombarded the Stanley airfield, but said, "All our aircraft returned safely."

The British announced that the 3,250-ton Antelope, which had been reported afloat after an Argentine air attack Sunday, was abandoned and sank Monday after the crew was unable to get control of the flames. Press Association, the domestic British news agency, said the fire was started by a 500-pound Argentine bomb that lodged unexploded in the ship's engine room and was set off by technicians trying to defuse it.

The Defense Ministry announced earlier Monday that one man was killed and five injured, apparently when the bomb exploded. The later announcement said "there were no further reports of casualties."

The Antelope was the second British frigate reported lost, a sister ship the Ardent having been sunk during the landing last Friday. The destroyer Sheffield also sank May 6 after being hit by a missile from an Argentine plane, but the British force has three other destroyers, at least six other frigates and three cruisers.

"There is no question of a truce," Nott told the House of Commons. He said the British still have a difficult fight ahead but "one thing is certain, the days of the occupying Argentine garrison are numbered."

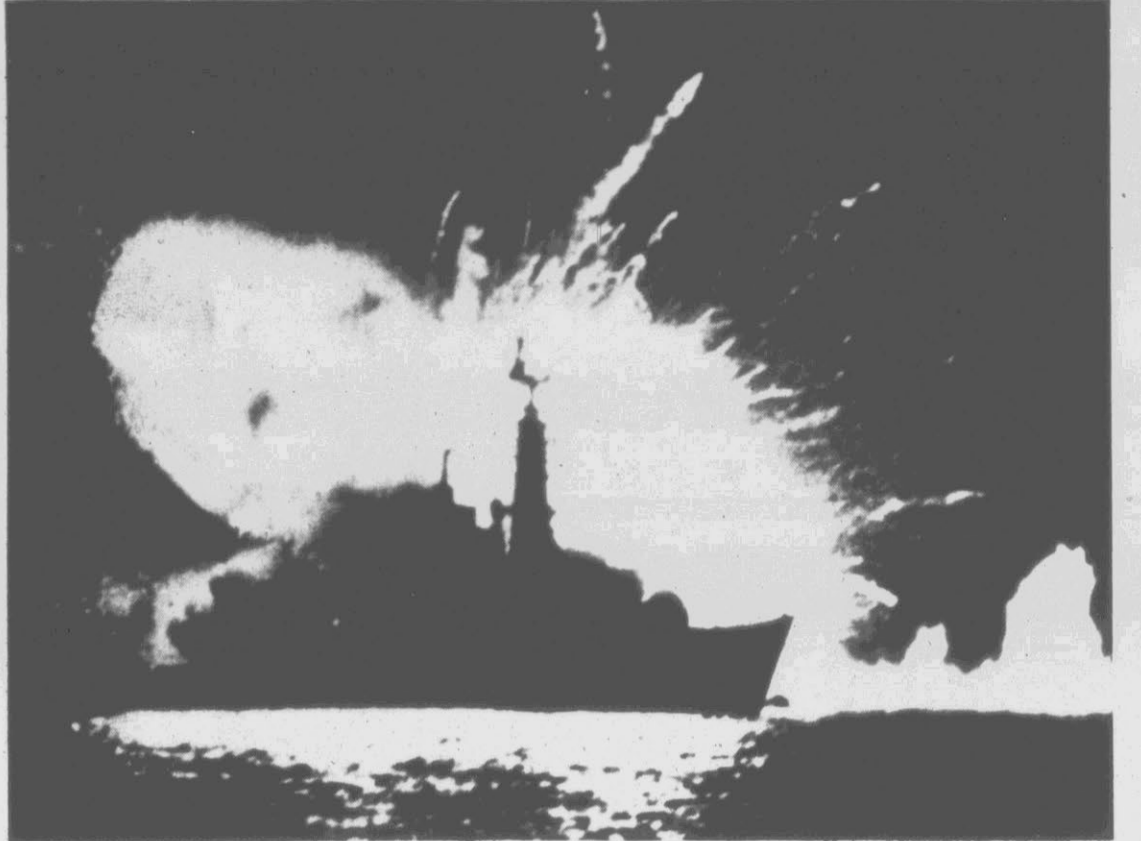

"The task force commander has been told to repossess the Falkland Islands at the earliest possible opportunity," he said in an interview with the British Broadcasting Corp.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher rejected an appeal from Pope John Paul II to Britain and Argentina for a cease-fire. Asserting that "our cause is just," she said Britain would not stop fighting until Argentine troops withdrew from the British colony they seized April 2.

"To do otherwise would leave the aggressor in occupation and in possession of the rewards of military adventure," she said.

British Catholic leaders said the pope would arrive in London Friday as scheduled for the first papal visit to Britain despite earlier suggestions that he would not risk angering Argentine Catholics by visiting the other side while the war was on.

"The visit is on, and the pope is looking forward to being with us," said Archbishop Derek Worlock of Liverpool. "He still yearns for peace, but he is coming to share our life as it is. He has no last-minute reservations."

N.C. Fuel Adjustment Clause Proven To Be Mistake, Says Ingram

By STUART SAVAGE

Reflector Staff Writer Law that allows utility companies to add fuel adjustment charges to customer bills is an example of "a bad utility law" which is wiping out benefits achieved through energy conservation programs, Commissioner of Insurance John Ingram told the University City Kiwanis Club here Monday.

"There is now abundant proof that the present fuel adjustment clause was a bad mistake, and should be repealed," Ingram said, adding "fuel costs should be accounted for in a different and fair way."

Ingram told the Kiwanians there are specific goals in five important areas — "Jobs, health costs, energy, water and education — which must be considered if we are to meet the needs of the people of our state for the year 2000."

Through the Insurance Department's work with building codes, North Carolina was "one of the first three states in the nation to respond to the 1974 Arab oil embargo by adopting energy saving insulation requirements," the insurance commissioner explained. By requiring insulation in new homes, "we have saved both energy and dollars."

However, Ingram charged that the fuel adjustment clause "should be repealed" because it "is wiping out these benefits."

"Business people and private citizens who have been working to conserve energy are entitled to more than a "quick-fix" modification. Unfair fuel adjustment charges panicked one on top of the other... should be stopped, just like we stopped unfair insurance surcharges on safe drivers," Ingram said.

New jobs, Ingram suggested, create a need for housing, and the Insurance Department has moved forward in this area "for affordable quality manufactured housing. We needed a state law to protect the state's mobile home buyer, as well as quality-minded manufacturers and dealers. This law I was able to get passed."

Health costs, Ingram continued, are more than automobile insurance costs today. "Proper planning... is necessary to keep this need off the critical list," and in North Carolina, "we are already pioneering in alternative health systems even though few of my recommendations have yet been followed."

Turning to the need for water, Ingram said water will be "one of the major limitations on growth," by the year 2000, "and probably before."

"Not only will water shortages develop in certain basins that are now growing rapidly, the purity of the water available may be seriously compromised."

Fire safety and protection is also effected by water. "Without adequate water supplies, especially in our rural areas, major problems in the area of fire safety can result, creating higher insurance rates," Ingram pointed out.

Ingram said educational opportunities "allow our citizens to prepare themselves for available and projected job opportunities," and "retraining programs for our jobless citizens," help make them qualify for new jobs.

Ingram concluded by suggesting that if planning is to be effective and the needs of the future are to be met, "and if we are to develop priorities which best serve the people, a major priority is to bring government closer to the people of this state... government governs best which is closest to the people."

Record Donations For Colleges

NEW YORK (AP) — American colleges and universities, led by Harvard University, attracted a record $4.23 billion in voluntary donations from individuals, corporations and foundations in 1980-81, an annual survey says.

Contributions to higher education rose 11.3 percent, or $430 million, from the estimated $3.8 billion in the 1979-80 school year, according to the survey, which was released Monday.

But spokesmen for the Council for Financial Aid to Education Inc., the private, non-profit organization that conducted the survey, said the 11.3 percent increase lagged slightly behind the 11.8 percent rise in inflation during the survey year as measured by the Consumer Price Index.

They also warned against drawing overly optimistic conclusions based on the 1980-81 figures because they reflected the last year before the current recession. Hayden W. Smith, the council's director of research, predicted next year's surveys might well show voluntary college donations have leveled off due to the economic downturn.

"There is no question that the main factor in voluntary support to higher education is the state of the economy, far more than tax policy or anything else," John R. Haire, president of the council, said at a news conference. Individuals, both alumni and non-alumni, were by far the largest source of volunteer support to higher education. Alumni gave an estimated $1.049 billion in the 1980-81 school year, up 15.3 percent from a year earlier, and non-alumni donated an estimated $1.007 billion, up 18.9 percent.

Foundations were the next largest source at $922 million, up 2.1 percent. Business corporations donated an estimated $778 million — up 11.8 percent from a year earlier. Religious institutions gave $140 million, while an estimated $334 million came from other sources.

The survey estimates are based on information obtained from 928 two-year and four-year, public and private colleges and universities.

Among the survey's findings: Harvard received the highest level of voluntary support of any school for the 14th time out of the last 16 years, collecting $90.97 million.

Stanford University was second, at $79.5 million, followed by Yale University, $58.3 million; University of Southern California, $55.2 million; Cornell University, $54.6 million; University of Minnesota, $49.8 million; University of Pennsylvania, $48.9 million; Columbia University, $48.4 million; Massachusetts Institute of Technology, $47.5 million; and Johns Hopkins University, $46.8 million.

Private research-oriented universities received 40 percent of all contributions. Public four-year universities received 28 percent, and private, coed schools collected 24 percent of support reported. The remaining 8 percent was divided among professional schools, private women's colleges, private men's colleges and two-year institutions.

In terms of corporate support alone, the University of Arizona led the list with $19.8 million. MIT attracted $16.2 million; Harvard, $16.1 million; Stanford, $15.5 million; the University of Illinois, $15.2 million; the University of Pennsylvania, $12.3 million; the University of Michigan, $10.4 million; Texas A&M University, $9.9 million; Columbia, $9.2 million; and the University of California-Berkeley, $8.5 million.

House Considering Varied Budget Plans; Major Battles To Come

WASHINGTON (AP) — Brushing aside budget blueprints proposed by Democratic liberals, the House is shifting its attention to a conservative California Republican's spending plan that attempts to eliminate deficits immediately.

The House headed for a vote today on a proposal by Rep. John H. Rousselot to balance the budget next year with large cuts in domestic spending. The plan also anticipated tax revenues considerably higher than those in forecasts by congressional economists.

Regardless of the outcome of the vote on Rousselot's plan, the big battles are still to come when the House takes up the budget proposals drafted by top Democrats and Republicans, the ones President Reagan and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. are focusing on.

Under the parliamentary procedures adopted for the budget debate, the House is voting separately on each of seven spending plans.

The rules are weighted in favor of the competing Democratic and Republican leadership plans.

As the legislators waded through budget plans, Reagan and O'Neill traded jabs Monday over a proposal for a $23.3 billion reduction in Medicare over three years in the GOP budget outline.

"This massive and devastating cut will increase the out-of-pocket medical costs of 29 million Americans," the speaker said.

"It is now obvious that his (Reagan's) promises on Medicare are no more reliable than his promises not to cut Social Security," O'Neill added.

Reagan replied that O'Neill was engaging in "sheer political demagoguery."

Administration and House Republican officials have argued that the Medicare savings would come from controlling hospital costs, not from cutting recipients' benefits.

Meanwhile, Reagan was to meet with the Republican congressional leadership today before taking off for a six-day trip to California.

During nearly nine hours of debate Monday, the House rejected on a 225-181 vote a "pay as you go" proposal by Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., that projected a budget surplus in 1985. It contained a requirement that spending increase above 1982 levels be accompanied by either a cut elsewhere in the budget or higher taxes.

Dear Abby

Living Will Asserts The Right to Die

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

(Feb. 26, 1976)

DEAR ABBY: Last year you had something in your column about the Living Will. I'm sorry to say I didn't pay much attention to it then, but I am interested in it now. Exactly what is it? And how can I get one?

I am Jewish. Is it against my religion? Is it "euthanasia" or mercy killing?

DAVID G. IN BOSTON

DEAR DAVID: The Living Will is a document stating that should you fall victim to a terminal illness from which there is no hope for your recovery, you instruct your physician not to prolong your life by artificial means, such as machines, tubes, pumps and so forth.

Copies of this document may be given to your physician, clergyman, lawyer and to as many family members and/or friends as you desire. To sign such a document, you must be 18 years or older and of sound mind. (If at any time you wish to revoke the document, you are free to do so.) The Jewish view of the Living Will is as follows: It is not "euthanasia" — or mercy killing! There is a clear distinction between actively killing a person and "allowing him to die."

According to Jewish Law, when a person suffers irreversible brain damage and can no longer recite a "bracha" — a blessing to praise God — or perform a "mitzvah" — an act to help his fellow man — he is considered a "vegetable" and there is nothing to "save." It is thus an act of compassion to spare the family the suffering, anguish and expense of artificially prolonging the breathing and heartbeat when death is inevitable.

The Living Will does not give anyone permission to end the life of another in a "mercy-killing" manner. It is simply a document that one signs, stating that he (or she) does not want to have his (or her) life prolonged artificially after his physician decides that there is no hope for recovery.

I have signed such a document. You may get one by writing to the Society for the Right to Die, 250 W. 57th St., New York, N.Y. 10019. The document is free, but please send a few dollars (it's tax-deductible) for the cost of printing and mailing the document to you. I sent $10 for five documents and have given one to my physician, clergyman, lawyer and two members of my family.

DEAR ABBY: Speaking of age differences: I was 33 and contemplating divorce when I fell in love with a beautiful young girl. She was very mature and I judged her to be about 19, so it never occurred to me to ask her how old she was. After going together for three months, she said she was having a birthday. On that day I asked her how old she was. She said 16!

I felt sick, frightened and confused, but I didn't call it off. When her family learned that I was 33, and not yet divorced, three of her seven brothers threatened me and her father pulled a gun on me.

My divorce came through and we were married when she turned 18. Today, I am 39, and she is 22. We have two beautiful children and another on the way. And our love is just as strong today as it was when she was sweet 16 and I was 33.

CLIFF D. IN INGLEWOOD, CALIF.

DEAR CLIFF: Thanks for the romantic tale with the storybook ending. You were lucky. Falling in love with a minor can be hazardous to one's health — especially when the girl has seven brothers and a gun-totin' father.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. Write to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Time-Released Leprosy Treatment Given Tests

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A "time-released" leprosy treatment is being developed to free patients from daily pills, making it more likely they will continue medications until they are cured, researchers said Monday.

Researchers at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill found a way to chemically alter a drug called dapsone so that it is released slowly into the bloodstream, said James Swarbrick, chairman of UNC's Division of Pharmaceutics.

"The conventional therapy is to give the drug by mouth on a daily basis," he said in a telephone interview. "Since it may take five or 10 years on the drug to cure the disease, the patient dropout rate can get very high, either deliberately or because people get forgetful."

The World Health Organization is funding the effort to reduce the need for daily medication, especially in underdeveloped countries, where the tendency to stop taking the drug is greatest, Swarbrick said.

Agree to Recall Squeeze Toy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Rhode Island firm of Reliance Island firm of Reliance Products Co. has agreed to recall a squeeze toy called the "Protecto Hold Me Tite" after two infants choked to death on its handle, the government says.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission said Monday that consumers should take the toy away from children immediately. It is made in the shape of a pink elephant, a yellow bear or an orange lion, each atop a handle, and has a built in squeaker.

The toys, which carry the No. 06233 on the back, can be returned to the stores where they were bought or to Reliance at 100 Mason, P.O. Box 1220, Woonsocket, R.I.

"They don't necessarily grasp the significance of the medication," he said. "If they take it for a few months and they appear to be getting better, apparently a significant number will stop taking it."

Swarbrick said animal tests would continue for another year before tests could begin on humans.

Leprosy afflicts more than 11 million people, mostly in Africa, Latin America and southern Asia, said Dr. Charles Shepard, chief of the leprosy laboratory at Atlanta's Centers for Disease

The Ingredient Not Effective

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you are looking for a mouthwash that will freshen your breath, you don't have to buy one with germ-killing agents in it, according to a government advisory panel.

The panel, chaired by Dr. Lawrence Cohn of the University of Illinois at Chicago, told the Food and Drug Administration on Monday that germ-killing ingredients aren't effective in stopping bad breath and may actually retard the healing of sore throats and other throat irritations.

The panel said the aromatics, essences and flavorings in mouthwashes combined with the act of rinsing the mouth lead to the freshening action. Even when the antibacterial agents kill some germs, they aren't effective against the ones responsible for bad breath, the panel said.

Control. India has the most cases with 3.5 million, while the U.S. has 4,000 to 5,000 patients — 244 reported last year, he said.

The disease, caused by an organism called Mycobacterium leprae, has two forms. About 80 percent are the milder tuberculoid leprosy, characterized by pale, patchy spots on the face, hands and feet. Cases of lepromatous leprosy have far more of the disease organisms, causing numbness in the extremities and disfiguring nodules over much of the body. That form is also more contagious than the tuberculoid variety.

Swarbrick said continuous treatment is necessary to prevent a relapse.

"It's a very tenacious organism," he said. "It hides away in tissues and it's a long, slow process trying to kill the bacteria."

By chemically treating dapsone, the drug can be made to form its own coat, Swarbrick said. The longer the chemical reaction is allowed to go on, the thicker the coat becomes.

When the treated drug is injected into a muscle, the coat dissolves, freeing dapsone at a controlled rate, he said.

"We don't use any foreign material, just a derivative of the drug that is less soluble," Swarbrick said. "As that breaks down, it releases the original drug in the core and the coating material turns into the drug itself. We're not left with any extraneous material at the end of the time period."

Dapsone is believed to destroy the bacteria by interfering with chemical reactions necessary for the organisms to live, Shepard said.

Helms Is Pledging An All-Out Fight

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms is pledging an all-out fight against extending key provisions of the 1965 Voting Rights Act, even though President Reagan and three-fourths of the Senate support the measure, sources say.

The conservative North Carolina Helms has indicated he will lead a small group of ultra-conservatives in a filibuster when the civil rights bill comes up for debate, according to the Senate sources who asked for anonymity.

Enforcement sections of the voting rights law expire in August, and Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker has said the Senate will vote on renewal this summer.

In a letter to other senators, Helms wrote that unless major changes are made in the voting rights bill approved by the Senate Judiciary Committee he will be "obliged to oppose it to the maximum possible extent."

Sources said Helms has indicated he will make full use of the Senate's liberal rules on debate to block extension of the voting rights measure as long as possible.

That includes forcing votes on whether to bring it to the floor, perhaps this week, and a filibuster when the Senate returns from week-long Memorial Day recess in June, the sources said.

In his letter, obtained from Senate sources, Helms said his state and 21 others watched closely for voting rights violations have been treated unfairly.

Earlier this month, the Senate committee voted 17 to 1 to renew key provisions of the law under which millions of blacks and other minorities have registered to vote since its passage 17 years ago.

Senate liberals and civil rights groups say they have 66 co-sponsors for the version approved by the committee, plus another 12 or 13 senators who have indicated they will vote for it on the floor.

The House approved a similar version 389 to 24 last year.

Under the act, rated as the most successful of the civil rights laws of the 1960s, all or part of 22 states are required to come to the Justice Department whenever they make changes in their voting laws.

Helms said he will seek to make the law apply nationwide, a move the Justice Department has said will make it virtually unenforceable.

In his letter, Helms said the Senate should "make the law applicable to everybody." He said he would be unable to support a law which imposes severe restrictions on some states, but not others.

The 22 states were singled out because they had poor minority voting records.

Civil rights groups contend the Justice Department only challenges a state, county or municipality if the area is trying to enact discriminatory voting law changes.

Ralph Neas, chief lobbyist for the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, said he takes Helms' threat seriously, but believes the Senate will ultimately defeat his efforts. "We are confident that we can beat a filibuster," Neas said.

NOW Schedules Marches, Rallies

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Organization for Women says marches and rallies will be held next month in the capitals of the four states given the best chance of approving the Equal Rights Amendment by its June 30 ratification deadline.

NOW said Monday that the events will be held June 6 in Tallahassee, Fla.; Springfield, Ill.; Raleigh, N.C., and Oklahoma City.

ERA has been ratified by 35 of the 38 states required to become part of the U.S. Constitution, but none have approved it since Indiana did so on Jan. 18, 1977. Several state legislatures have voted to repeal their ratifications, a step whose legality has not been determined.

Pickler-Butler Vows Solemnized Saturday

Oak Grove Baptist Church was the scene of the Saturday afternoon wedding ceremony of Jeannie Butler and Gregory Thornton Pickler. The double ring ceremony was conducted by Buddy Sasser at three o'clock.

Parents of the bride are Mrs. Bernice Nell Sautler of Winterville. The bride was given in marriage by her father, Robert Earl Butler. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. William Carey Garris of Ayden.

Gail Butler of Winterville, sister-in-law of the bride, was honor attendant and bridesmaids included Marina Cox and Susan Purser of Winterville, Dawn Pickler and Gracie Swain, sisters of the bridegroom of Ayden.

The flower girl was Karen Swain of Ayden, sister of the bridegroom. Shelton Sautler of Winterville, brother of the bride, was ring bearer.

Johnny Bryan of Greenville was best man and ushers included Dennis and Donnie Stox of Vanceboro, cousins of the bride, Micah Dixon of Greenville and Travis Cox of Winterville.

Sue Heath presented a program of organ music. Joe Smith and Ginger Parker sang "Endless Love" and Smith sang "Wedding Prayer."

MRS. GREGORY THORNTON PICKLER

The bride wore a formal gown of white silk chiffon over peau de soie. The gown was fashioned with an empire bodice, colonial neckline and a sheer yoke of English net with schiffli embroidery. Silk Venise lace and pearls enhanced the entire bodice and neckline forming a cap sleeve. The full A-line skirt flowed into a chapel train. Her veil was attached to a Juliet cap of Venise lace and she carried a bouquet of white roses, lily of the valley, pink roses and delphinium with white streamers.

The honor attendant wore a floral dress in pink and lavender fashioned with a flounced neckline with a ruffle. She wore a white pom pom sprayed with a touch of pink in her hair and carried a single long-stemmed white mum sprayed with a touch of pink.

The bridesmaids were each dressed in a suede rose colored dress styled with a flounced neckline with shoulder straps. The waistline was accented with a ribbon. They each carried a single white long-stemmed pom pom with pink and wore a similar flower in their hair.

The flower girl wore a pink and white dotted swiss dress fashioned with a flounced neckline, sheer sleeves with a pink cummerbund. She carried a white wicker basket filled with pink rose petals. The basket was tied with pink and white ribbon.

A reception followed the ceremony. The couple will be living in Winterville after a wedding trip to Hilton Head Island. The bride works at Eastern Lumber and Supply of Winterville. The bridegroom is serving in the U.S. Navy.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man and ushers were Rusty Gower of Avon, Conn., Stephen Butler of Boone, John Cotton Manning and Michael Gaskins, brother-in-law of the bride. Ben Gaskins, nephew of the bride, rang the chiming bell. Guests were assisted by Jerry Harris and Rickv Gaddy.

The bride is a B.S. nursing graduate of East Carolina University and will be working at Wake Memorial in Raleigh. The bridegroom graduated from Lenoir Community College in Kinston and is presently attending N.C. State University.

After a wedding trip to Charleston and Myrtle Beach the couple will be living in Raleigh.

A lawn reception was given by the bride's mother after the ceremony.

The three-tiered wedding cake was served by Tammy Burch and punch was poured by Leona Miller.

Tables were covered with blue checked cloth and centered with baskets of strawberries. Baskets of mixed garden flowers and white geraniums decorated the lawn. Music was provided by Benny Clayborn and his band.

A wedding breakfast was held May 15 at the Holiday Inn given by friends of the bridal couple. The parents of the bridegroom entertained at an after-rehearsal dinner at the Moose Lodge in Greenville. A luncheon was held May 13 at the home of Beth Warren.

Nieces of the bride, Pweebe and Greta Burch of Durham, Gretchen and Jessica Gaskins were flower girls. Jane Harris directed the wedding.

The bride wore a white waltz length Irish handkerchief linen dress. The bodice featured a mandarin collar edged with handmade lace and insertion as did the cuffs of the long full sleeves. The bodice front featured box pleats and insertion. The skirt featured an inverted pleat. Needed: A Better Way

Trials of people like John Hinckley Jr. give the insanity plea a bad name. Everyone knows psychiatrists can be hired to testify for the side that hires them (opinions are for sale), and it's not unusual to see teams of psychiatrists taking exactly opposite views. It costs the field in credibility.

In the end, lay people (jurors) who have only a passing acquaintance with the workings of psychiatry and its own terminology are expected to decide whether the person being tried is "insane" according to the law's meaning of the word... one more specialized vocabulary to comprehend.

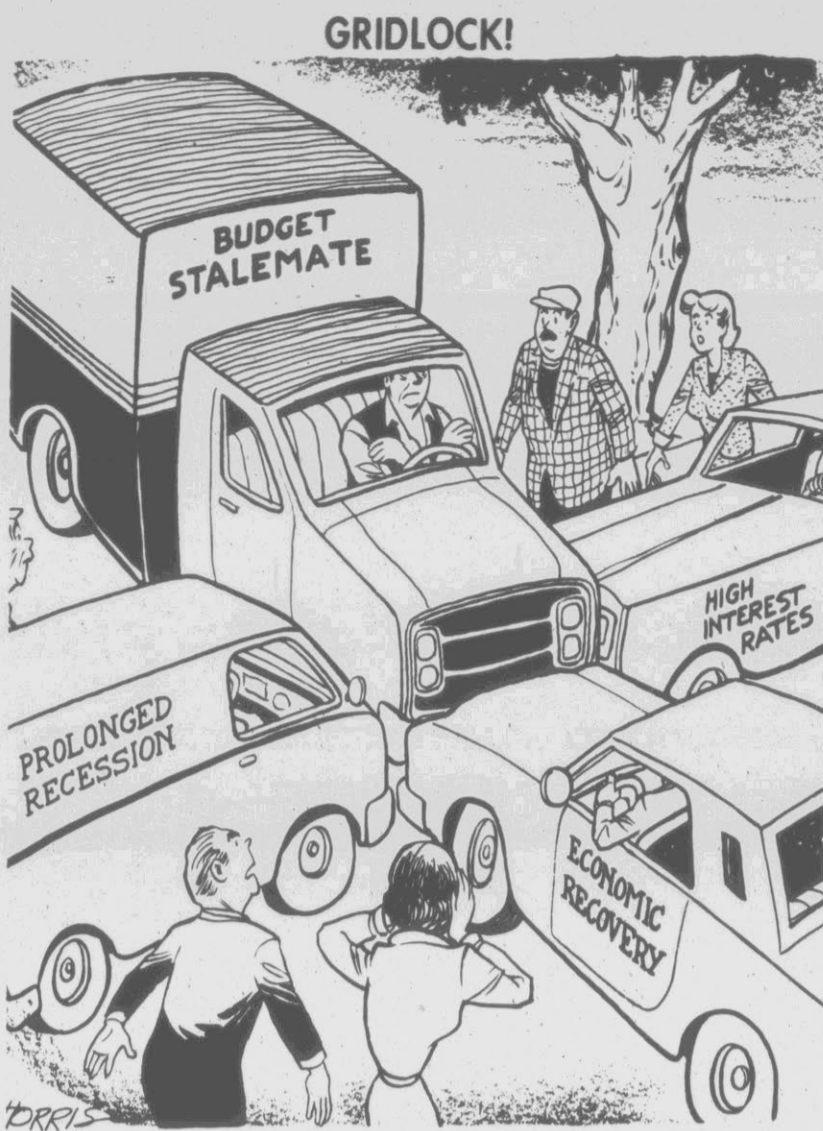

There may be poorer means of determining another person's sanity or insanity (flipping a coin, for instance), but surely not many.

This is not to knock the science. We look on psychiatry as an "art" closely linked to science, in which opinion is guided not only by private reasoning, but knowledge and a keenly developed instinct. It simply cannot be as precise as cabinet-making, electronics, physics etc.

We'd guess most people feel morally certain many killers "got away with it" via the insanity plea. Indeed, there is little to be done about the person of reasonable intelligence who studies the field and charts a course of actions, reactions and responses sufficient to convince a panel of experts he qualifies for a padded cell...but most certainly not for death row.

All of which suggests there must be a better way of dealing with the accused who may or may not be mentally ill but resort to that plea as perhaps their only chance to escape the big penalty confronting them.

The Prayer Amendment

WASHINGTON — President Reagan last week sent to Capitol Hill his proposed constitutional amendment on prayer in public schools. If wisdom and prudence prevail, the resolution will be quietly buried in the judiciary committees.

Sad to say, wisdom and prudence seldom prevail in an election year. This resolution will be a tough one to vote against. Mr. Reagan would write into the Constitution this provision:

"Nothing in this Constitution shall be construed to prohibit individual or group prayer in public schools or other public institutions. No person shall be required by the United States or by any state to participate in prayer."

Several things are wrong with this proposition. For one thing, "individual prayer" never has been prohibited by any court at any time. Nothing on earth prevents a school child from bowing his head over his desk and saying a silent prayer whenever he feels so disposed.

Neither have the courts had a word to say about prayer in "other public institutions." Over the years, various atheistic petitioners have complained of prayer in the houses of Congress, in state legislatures and at military installations. Sessions of the Supreme Court itself are opened with prayer: "God a practical matter, the saving sentence has no meaning. Attendance at a public school is compulsory; the child has to be there. Few children ever would risk the conspicuous embarrassment of refusing to do what the teacher and other children are doing. Saying that classroom prayer is voluntary cannot make it so.

Second, the amendment's protection of "group prayer" plainly implies a structured, organized service of some kind. But what kind? Are state boards of education to provide an official prayer for use statewide? Is every local board to compose its own? Is the group to be led by individual teachers or pupils? Once we embrace the idea of "group prayer," we embrace laws respecting an establishment of religion. The First Amendment has prohibited such laws for nearly 200 years. Do we truly want to cast "that long experience aside?"

Third, one problem with institutional prayer parallels the problem often encountered with institutional food. The group prayers that would be sanctioned by this amendment would be canned peas — bland, innocuous, inoffensive recitations, perfunctory rituals devoid of spiritual meaning. Heartfelt prayer demands something more.

Mr. Reagan is quite in error in his view of the present state of the law. He says that the high court "has effectively removed prayer from our classrooms," but it is only institutionalized prayer that the court has condemned.

save this honorable Court!" To the extent that the amendment seeks to authorize a custom that is nowhere prohibited, the amendment is quite simply unnecessary.

The issue involves one subject only: group prayer in public schools. That is what we are talking about, and it is all we are talking about. Let me argue a case against it.

First, on this matter of "voluntarism," The Reagan draft says, in effect, that no child shall be required to participate in a group prayer. As

Enough IQ To Go Around

Watch out for averages.

A recent news report told us that the Japanese are scoring higher on the standardized intelligence tests than other nationalities, including Americans.

The study published in Nature magazine says the mean Japanese IQ is 111. For the United States it is 100. It was concluded that this may be a factor in Japan's economic growth since World War II.

In dealing with such figures we must remember that Japan is a homogeneous people, while the United States is a heterogeneous society. We are also dealing with larger numbers of people in our nation.

The United States may well equal Japan in numbers of people in any given IQ bracket. In any event we should have adequate numbers of intelligent people to provide the leadership we need to remain competitive economically.

THIS AFTERNOON

Next Year's Roads

RALEIGH — In this year's primaries and elections, we've been promised that legislators will be questioned closely on the 3-cent gasoline tax increase they passed in 1981. But, looking ahead to 1983, a better question for this campaign season may be, "What are you going to do next year?"

The 3-cent gas tax increase — and the motor vehicle fee increases that accompanied it — did not solve the fiscal problems of the troubled Highway Fund. Neither supporters nor opponents predicted they would.

The increases provided money for a vigorous road resurfacing and repair effort designed to make up for past neglect. This year, $80 million is being spent to resurface 2900 miles of roads. That's still less than the 3600 miles recommended by former Gov. Dan Moore's 1979 study commission.

The legislature did not direct any of the new tax money towards new road construction. In fact, new road construction was limited to projects which are primarily funded by the federal government. The usual arrangement has been the feds paying 80 or 90 percent and the state the rest. This year, $44.9 million of state money brought in $192 million of federal money.

This year and next, the state will use money from the 1977 road bond issue to pay the state's share of these projects. Transportation officials and Gov. Jim Hunt warn, however, that after July 1, 1983, there will be no money for a state construction program. That means no new primary roads, no widening of state and U.S. routes, no bypasses, no major new thoroughfares, no interstates. State budget officer John A. Williams Jr. recently estimated that the Highway Fund needs an additional $100 million annually to keep up a vigorous maintenance program, to match federal construction funds and to meet other transportation needs.

It appears highly unlikely that the legislature will allow the state's construction program to just stop dead. DOT officials report that everywhere Secretary Bill Robertson speaks, he's asked about building new roads.

So where will the money come from?

A budget can be finagled a hundred different ways. But it appears the construction money will have to come from one of three sources. It can come from the General Fund. It can come from a tax increase. Or, only two years after the legislature demanded the larger maintenance program, money can be shifted out of the maintenance budget.

None of the three is politically palatable. Taxes were just raised. Legislators don't want to push their luck with the voters two years in a row. There's already great competition for General Fund

To the editor:

My letter is in response to Mrs. Kenneth E. Robinson's letter of May 19.

As a senior at Rose High, I have listened too long to the derogatory comments made by Greenville's citizens about Rose High football. To hear someone refer to the football program as "savagery" is obviously to hear from someone ignorant of the way the program is run.

Speaking as one who has participated in the excellent football program at Rose High School for the past two years, I must take offense at being called a savage. To think that I work so hard to make my community proud of my team, my school and mostly of myself, only to find that the community looks down on me as participating in a "savagery" and a waste of time makes me very deeply upset.

Obviously people cannot understand the values a young person gains by participating in a team effort such as football. Rose High School has built a fantastic record over the years in terms of wins and losses. But, overlooked by the people is the tremendous character building that is vital to today's young people if we are to improve this country in the future.

I feel I have been offended deeply by my community's remarks on the football program at my school. I have only to thank my head coaches (and truly my friends) Dave Bumgardner and Ronald Vincent for the way they have made me feel not only physically, but in my heart as well. I take pride in the two seasons I gave to Rose High football, even if my community refuses to do the same. I also thank them for allowing me to participate and grow in becoming a better person.

Strength For Today

THE PROBLEM OF SUFFERING

"Why has God sent this dreadful thing upon me?" It is with this interrogation of despair that many people meet their troubles. But God does not send trouble upon human beings. He made a perfect world, but man because of his sin has made it a place of pain. God does not create trouble or send it upon human hearts to try them, but He takes the trouble which men themselves have made and utilizes it to a great end. Instead of engulfing us in our follies, His loving hand comes down and supports both the guilty and innocent that they may survive and pass through the deep water.

We are never promised security in this world as a reward for our goodness. What we are promised, if we obey God, is not security but support. No matter what happens to us, we can be confident that powers vastly superior to our own are being extended to us every minute of our lives. —Elisha Douglass

A Tightening Of Security

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The White House will be a much more difficult source of national security leaks than Draconian new security measures are put into effect — the second major security clampdown since January. Worried by persistent military, diplomatic and intelligence leaks that regularly follow National Security Council (NSC) meetings, President Reagan instructed his NSC assistant, William P. Clark, to plug the bottle. Departmental proposals to Clark on how to do it were due in his office late last week, mainly from the State, Defense and Justice Departments.

So extensive is the new machinery needed to police the anti-leak order that budget director David Stockman fears a new drain on the budget. That machinery includes more polygraph (lie detector) machines, new electronic devices — and much more manpower to conduct more probes and investigations into future leaks.

Fenwick's Flip

Rep. Millicent Fenwick may have hurt herself badly when she switched her long-held position on the hot issue of capital punishment, moving from "never" (except for killers of prison guards) to support for sweeping provisions of a stiff death-penalty bill now moving through the New Jersey Legislature.

Fenwick's opponent in the June 8 New Jersey Republican senatorial primary is conservative Jeff Bell, who has long supported the death penalty as an essential deterrent to murder and other violent crime. Bell upset the late Sen. Clifford Case in the 1978 Republican primary but has been pegged far behind Fenwick in polls up to early this month.

Bell has recently surged, however, and may have narrowed the gap to around 12 points — with a large bloc of Republicans still undecided.

Bad For Cap

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger got a hard blow to his pride when President Reagan ordered the Pentagon to ditch Weinberger's plan to put the new MX missile in long-duration aircraft as the best way to protect the U.S. strategic nuclear deterrent.

After 16 months of searching for a home for the 10-warhead MX intercontinental-range missile, Weinberger was convinced that the long-duration aircraft — if one could be developed — remained the best way to give the missile an invulnerable basing system.

But Reagan, alarmed at congressional anger over Pentagon procrastination on the MX basing question, instructed national security assistant William P. Clark to cancel "big bird" altogether. The president's preferred system, which he wants Pentagon approval on in time to kill anti-MX sentiment rising in Congress, is the so-called "closely-packed" system: land basing of the missiles close together and deep in the earth.

GOP Budget Worry
The latest attempt to penetrate the inner sanctum of Ronald Reagan's White House from the great outside came when mostly conservative first- and second-term Republican congressmen sent the president an urgent request for a meeting on the budget, with the emphasis on defense spending.

Rep. Jack Kemp, chairman of the House Republican on May 18 Kemp did so and was promised an early meeting. Since then, however, the White House staff has failed to set a date for the meeting.

That is about par for the course, as top Reagan aides, headed by chief of staff James Baker III, worry that outsiders, particularly conservatives, might upset their delicate budget manipulations. What disturbs the House Republicans are repeated retreats by White House advisers on the defense budget, all in the name of "compromise." The compromises are dangerously whittling down Reagan's promised military buildup.

Soviet-Argentine Link
Top Pentagon Air Force and Navy officers are closely watching the South Atlantic Ocean around the Falklands to see how much help the Argentine military is getting from pictures taken by Soviet satellites and beamed first to Moscow, then to Buenos Aires.

Secretary of the Navy John Lehman says privately there is "absolutely no doubt" that coordinates showing the exact locations of British surface vessels are routinely being sent to Buenos Aires after Soviet specialists have analyzed them.

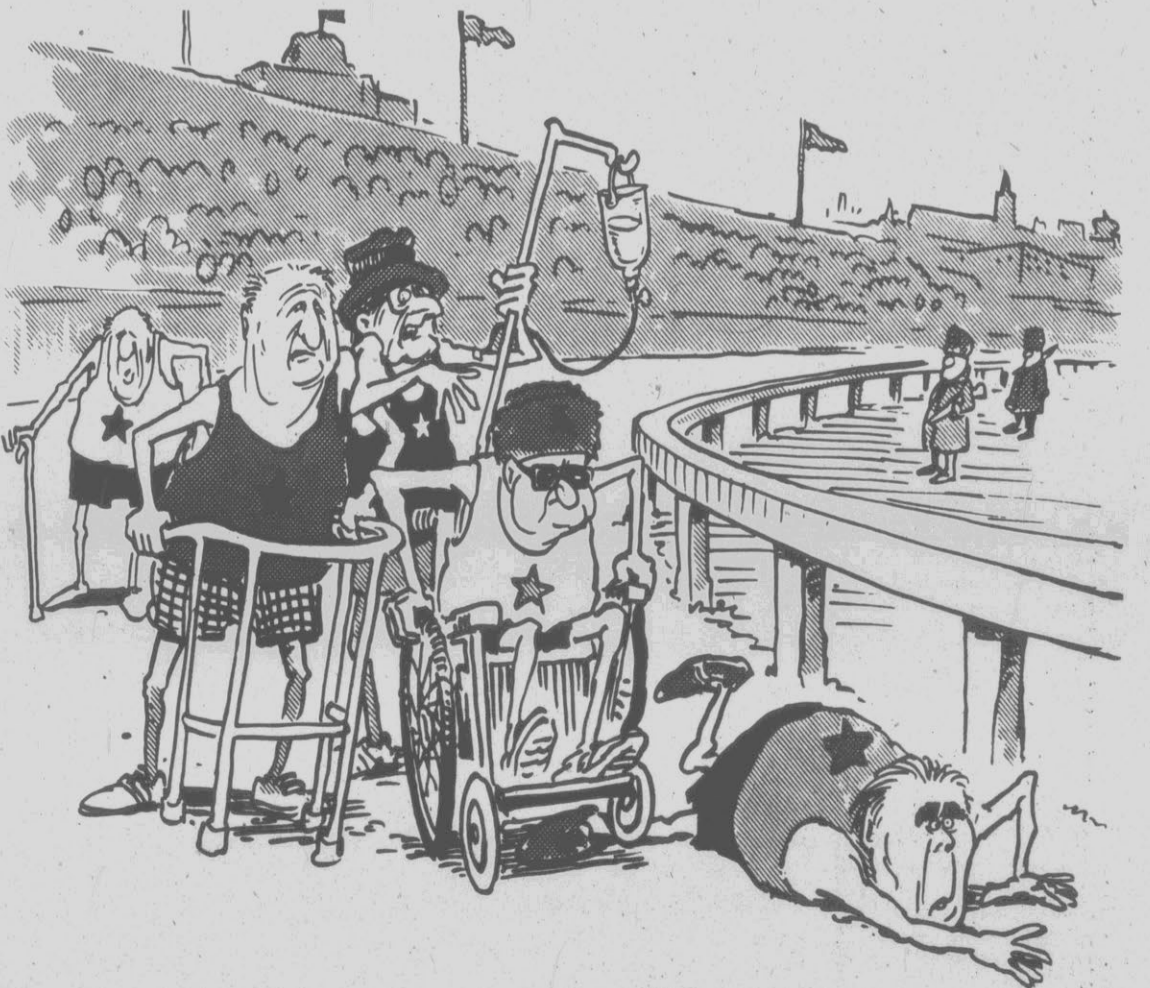

That means the Argentine air force and what is left of the Argentine navy has a fast leg up on naval maneuvers by her majesty's British ships. What the military brass wants to know is how easy — or difficult — it is for the Argentines to capitalize on this information. Naval officers here believe the sinking of the British destroyer H.M.S. Sheffield would never have happened without Soviet satellite help.

PCC Hosts Educators At Monday Luncheon

Pitt Community College hosted Pitt County and Greenville school administrators, principals, counselors, and trades and industry personnel at a luncheon Monday.

Dr. William E. Fulford Jr., PCC president, welcomed the visitors and noted that a bond of friendship and cooperation has existed between Pitt Community College and the two school systems.

"All of you have helped us in the past with your advice and counsel and through the years we have been working on the same team — united in our efforts to educate the young people of Pitt County," noted Fulford, "and may this splendid relationship continue," he added.

Brief remarks were made by Tom Craft, acting superintendent of Pitt County schools and Dr. Delma Blinson, superintendent of the Greenville schools.

Craft advised the gathering, "The three school systems located in Pitt County, which includes the public schools, East Carolina University and Pitt Community College, have all made rapid progress in their growth and service to the citizens of this area. These three educational establishments are presently striving together to educate and train the young people of Pitt County."

Dr. Blinson stressed that his department and PCC officials should formalize a system whereby ideas can be exchanged to get the job done with minimal resources.

"I look forward to excellent and effective communications between my office and Pitt Community College," he added.

Ten PCC department heads made presentations covering the operation of their programs. Remarks were made by Mark King, energy technology; Chester Lilly, air and water resources; William Moore, agriculture; Dick Craft, farm machinery mechanics; Joe Brittain, industrial maintenance; Lloyd Huggins, legal science; JoAnn Leith, business education; Sue Creech, early childhood educational associate - teacher assistant; Joe Downing, trade programs, and Ola Porter, continuing education.

Dean Edgar Boyd served as master of ceremonies.

Students Honored by Duke Tuesday 25 May '82

Seven students at the Greenville Middle School were among students from 16 Southeastern and Midwestern states honored at Duke University May 15-16. They were among 18,000 seventh grade students who took the college level SAT as participants in Duke University's Talent Identification Program.

Two students, Christy Garrison and Kate Shappley, were honored at the Grand Awards Ceremony on Sunday.

The other five students, Gita Gulati, Michele Hunt, Becky Kirkland, Marshall Moore, and Jennifer Newton, were honored at the Awards Ceremony for High-scoring Students on Sunday.

Greenville Middle School was honored with a certificate of merit based upon the students' scores. To take part in the TIP program, a student had to score in the top three percent on CAT tests.

Fuel Clause Under Increasing Attack

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State Commerce Secretary D.M. "Lauch" Faircloth has joined with Gov. Jim Hunt in calling for a modification or elimination of North Carolina's fuel clause.

Faircloth made the announcement at a meeting Monday of the Southeastern Utilities Commissioners Association in Asheville.

"Our present fuel clause in North Carolina is inadequate and too 'automatic,'" Faircloth said in a prepared news release.

"People work hard at their own businesses and they don't want to see anything given to the utilities. Neither do consumers want the frequent and widely fluctuating bills caused by such automatic clauses."

Faircloth said he supported the proposal to change the fuel adjustment clause to a yearly procedure at which time the commission would have full authority to disallow any portion for bad management on the part of the utility.

He said the fuel clause was undermining public confidence in the regulatory process.

The fuel clause gives utilities the authority under state law to pass on adjustments in increased costs for fuel to their customers.

money and, with more federal education and social program cuts, that competition is likely to increase. Taking the money from maintenance would be difficult because many legislators justified their votes for the gas tax increase on the grounds that more maintenance was needed. Cutting the program now would appear hypocritical.

They'll have to make their decision pretty much on their own. Hunt doesn't plan to get heavily involved in the matter. Last year, highway funding was his top priority and he took the political damage for raising taxes. In 1983, a year before he begins looking for a new political office, he won't stick his neck on the chopping block again. He'll address the problem in his 1983 State of the State speech but he plans to have other legislative priorities, his aides say.

Housing Bill Called A Bail-Out

By MARGARET SCHERF Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says a $5 billion mortgage-subsidy program is a budget-busting "bailout" for the housing industry, but a key Republican senator who normally sides with the president disagrees.

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., called his bill a "jobs measure aimed at helping the entire economy."

Reagan, in a letter to Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., said, "A bailout for any one sector is likely to lead to bailouts for others ... Taken together, these bailouts could exceed our budget by tens of billions of dollars."

The president said he is "unequivocally opposed to them for reasons that I hope your colleagues will find persuasive."

Despite that appeal and the implied threat of a veto, Lugar said, "I plan to proceed and try to pass the bill, and then discuss its merits with the administration."

"I remain a strong supporter of the president's economic program," he said in a written statement. "I simply believe that it needs a strong anti-recessionary supplement to accelerate its positive impact. I think a majority of the Senate agree with me."

limited to families with incomes of $30,000 or less, except in "high-cost" areas designated by the Department of Housing and Urban Development. In those areas, the income limit would be $37,000.

The subsidy would apply to a mortgage of no more than $67,500, but in those areas of high cost, it could go up to $77,000.

For a qualifying buyer whose mortgage would be $67,500 for 30 years at 16 percent, a typical current rate, the Lugar bill would provide $225 toward the monthly payment of $907.71 in the first month of the mortgage term.

Under the House version, subsidies could go to buyers whose income is below 130 percent of the area median income and first-time homebuyers would be given priority. The House bill provides that buyers must spend at least 25 percent of monthly income on their mortgage. The Lugar bill has no such provision.

Both bills provide that when the house is refinanced or resold, the owner has to pay the subsidy back to the federal government.

Prexy Of Bob Jones U. Sees Persecution Sign

NEWPORT NEWS, Va. (AP) — The president of fundamentalist Bob Jones University says the fact the U.S. government wants to deny tax exemptions to a school whose only purpose is "to train Christians" is a sign of mounting persecution of Christian groups.

"All is not well between church and state...There's an ominous clash coming...Bible Christianity is no longer in the favored position it has been for 200 years in America," Dr. Bob Jones III said Sunday in a speech to graduates at Denbigh Baptist Christian School.

The university in Greenville, S.C., headed by Jones is involved in controversy over whether it should be denied a tax exemption because of alleged racial discrimination.

The controversy centers around the university's rule against interracial dating or marriage for its 6,300 students, about a dozen of whom are blacks.

The rule does not discriminate against any race but is based on a belief, not shared by most other Christian schools, that God intends the races to be separate, said Jones, 42-year-old grandson of the university's founder.

But he said religious freedom is at the heart of the 12-year-old controversy, which erupted anew last January in a showdown between President Reagan and the Internal Revenue Service.

If the U.S. Supreme Court rules against the university after it hears the case this fall, Jones said every religious group is "going to be in trouble." He added:

"The Catholics, for instance, practice sexual discrimination because they don't let women be priests. The Orthodox Jews do the same because they insist men and women sit on opposite sides (during synagogue services).

"Every denomination that doesn't allow homosexuals to be ministers could be accused of sex discrimination. We feel like we're fighting for the religious freedom of everyone in this case."

If the government insists that religious groups conform to its system of social justice or be penalized — by having to pay taxes — "that's Russia," Jones said.

He noted Bob Jones University lost its tax exemption in 1976, but has paid nothing thus far because of the continuing court battles.

Should it eventually have to pay, the bill would be retroactive to 1970, but Jones said such a development wouldn't close the university.

"It's God's school and the Lord will keep it open," he said.

Jones said he was surprised when Reagan rescinded a January memo asking the Internal Revenue Service to grant the university's tax exemption.

"He wanted to get the press and black radical groups off his back. He sacrificed the university to get the onus off him... It was a weakness I didn't expect from him," Jones said.

Holiday Gas Prices Lower Than In 1981

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Carolina Motor Club officials say gasoline prices over the Memorial Day holiday will be more than 16 cents a gallon less than a year ago, and should result in increased travel.

The club checked 156 service stations and found an average price for self-service gas in North Carolina of $1.21 a gallon for regular and $1.19 a gallon for unleaded. Full-service averaged $1.28 for regular and $1.33 for unleaded.

In South Carolina, self-service prices for regular gas averaged $1.13 gallon and $1.21 a gallon for unleaded. Full-service gas averaged $1.29 a gallon for regular and $1.34 for unleaded.

Diesel fuel prices also dropped from last year, averaging $1.28 a gallon in North Carolina and $1.32 in South Carolina. The 12-month drop in prices amounts to 6.4 cents a gallon in North Carolina and 5.5 cents in South Carolina.

Premium unleaded gas in North Carolina averaged $1.38 a gallon for full service and $1.29 for self service. In South Carolina, it was $1.40 a gallon at the full-service pumps and $1.30 for self service.

A Carolina Motor Club survey says the average price in the Carolinas has fallen one cent per gallon since the last survey on March 31.

"These lower prices that we're now enjoying are accounting at least in part for considerably more auto travel by our members," said Club President Ralph Peters. "Through the end of April, travel routing requests were up 28 percent over what they were through April of last year."

The club said the difference between full and self-service gas amounts to 14.3 cents per gallon, compared with 9 cents a gallon this time last year.

Dixon Means Business

To the Voters of Pitt County

Elliott Dixon supports the concept of representative government. He believes that county government must be concerned about all people, all phases of business and the economy. Elliott has said he believes regular meetings between all elected officials should be held regularly and throughout the entire county. Elliott Dixon believes that the monthly meetings of the Pitt County Commissioners should be scheduled at a time convenient for all people to attend. Elliott Dixon means business when he says there is no place for jealousy between governmental agencies.

I support Elliott Dixon for Pitt County Commissioner and I hope that he will receive your vote on June 29.

ERA Hunger Strikers Get New Quarters, Going Into 2nd Week

By BOB SPRINGER
Associated Press Writer
SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Seven women entered the second week of a hunger strike for the Equal Rights Amendment today hoping to sleep tonight in new quarters — with bedding, showers and fewer stairs.

The seven ended the first week of starvation with a new ailment for one and another nutrition expert calling their medical care inadequate.

Dr. Jimmy Carter, chief of nutrition at Tulane University in New Orleans, said Monday the women need to see how well their bodies' immune systems are working.

As they have every weekday since their fast began last Tuesday, the women journeyed 12 blocks from a Methodist church where they have stayed to camp for three hours in the Illinois Capitol rotunda.

The women vow to live on only water until the ERA is ratified or June 30, the deadline to approve the proposed sex discrimination ban.

Sister Maureen Fielder, 39, a Roman Catholic nun from Washington, D.C., also is drinking fruit juices until June 1. She said the group hoped to switch today to new housing — offering a ground-level floor, showers and more comfortable sleeping.

All but two, have been sleeping on floors in the church's upstairs quarters. One has slept on a table; the seventh was given a mattress last Friday after complaining of lower back pain.

And all but two have complained that climbing stairs is becoming increasingly more exhausting.

So far, all but three necessary states have ratified the proposed U.S. constitutional amendment. Five have rescinded approval, and the U.S. Supreme Court is reviewing the legality of that action.

The women chose Illinois because it is the only Northern industrial state that hasn't ratified the ERA. It also is the only unratified state requiring three-fifths approval by each legislative chamber.

Name Marshals For Graduation

Life Gate Christian School has named marshals for the school's graduation exercise scheduled for Friday, May 28 at 7 p.m.

Students chosen as marshals are: Tammy Godley, daughter of Mrs. Dot Jones and Raeford Godley, of Vanceboro; Teresa Duncan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Aden Duncan of Greenville; and John Glenn, son of Mrs. Anita Glenn of Vanceboro.

TOKEN PROTESTS WELLINGTON — New Zealand (AP) — Token protesters greeted the U.S. nuclear-powered guided missile cruiser Truxtun as it entered Wellington harbor today for a four-day visit.

Sonia Johnson of Sterling, Va., 46, who began the hunger strike as the group's lightest at 120 pounds, was in a wheelchair while in the Capitol on Monday. She was diagnosed Friday in the group's first medical checkup as possibly having kidney stones.

Another, Shirley Wallace of Fort Collins, Colo., 43, is fighting an infection in her lower gum with antibiotics, she said Monday.

Carter said a root canal operation "is absolutely out of the question" because of complications from her weakening condition.

"The antibiotics are fine, although they may not kill the infection as rapidly as normal," said Carter, who last summer studied a 70-day, experimental fast by social activist Dick Gregory.

"People can go 44 to 60 days on a fast in the absence of infection or disease," he said. "If infection sets in, and a test of their immunity will show when that's likely, all bets are off."

Another faster, Mary Ann

Beall, 37, of Falls Church, Va., said she woke up early Monday "bleeding heavily from my nose. It lasted about 45 minutes. It scared me."

Carter said the duration of the hemorrhaging was "rather long, but I wouldn't be too concerned at this point."

Gregory, living in Plymouth, Mass., joined the women on their hunger strike Saturday and has lived without food or water. Staying at a hotel a block from the Capitol, he said he planned to leave the women Wednesday and then continue a fast of only water "as long as they (the women) all do."

Gregory, a veteran by his count of 60 politically and scientifically inspired fasts, asked Carter and another New Orleans doctor Sunday to journey to Illinois to monitor the seven.

The comedian called the women's fasting conditions "the worst I've ever seen" because of the travel to the rotunda, the noise and pedestrian traffic in the Capitol and because most of the seven had launched their starvation ill-prepared.

Carter said he and Dr. Joseph Allain, chief of medicine at New Orleans' Flint-Goodrich Hospital, would monitor the women "if all other medical people in their (central Illinois) area refuse."

"People on a hunger strike are considered to have a kind of political leprosy," he said. "But to look at them once a week is totally inadequate."

The women had said they would visit their local doctor weekly. But three have since rejected medical care, scoffing at what they call the "medical establishment."

Two others say they are leaning toward rejecting medical care except in an emergency.

The group's physician, Dr. David Spencer, chief of the Southern Illinois University School of Medicine's Family Practice Center, is willing to monitor the women more often if they permit it, said Dr. Arthur Frank, an SIU cardiologist and colleague of Spencer's.

WEAK PROTESTER — Sonia Johnson, Sterling, Va., stretches out to rest on laps of Mary Barnes, (Raleigh, N.C.) and Dina Bachelor (of Los Angeles) in the rotunda of the Illinois State Capitol Monday. The ladies are part of a group of seven called "Women's Fast for E.R.A." They began their seventh day of water-only fast, and say they will remain on the fast until E.R.A. is passed in Illinois. (AP Laserphoto)

Claims Hinckley Regards Self As 'An Errant Child'

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A psychiatrist who has examined John W. Hinckley Jr. within the last month says the defendant sees himself as an "errant child" and feels "he ought to be forgiven" for shooting President Reagan.

Dr. Thomas C. Goldman testified Monday that he has visited Hinckley in his spartan courthouse cell three times since his trial began April 27. The defense witness, who returns to the stand today, said he last saw Hinckley on May 15.

Goldman is the first witness to discuss Hinckley's current state of mind, as well as his mental condition before March 30, 1981, the day he shot Reagan and three other men.

Hinckley, 26, has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity.

"The things he has said to me indicate that in many ways, he still perceives himself as an errant child who has done something bad, not terrible, not unspeakably awful," Goldman said.

"He is sorry now and feels he ought to be forgiven. In other words, there is no sense in talking to him of a real appreciation of the magnitude of the seriousness of the crime," he testified.

Running through Goldman's testimony was the theme that Hinckley felt unable to cope with life in general, and women in particular.

"He developed a positive distaste for sex," the Washington psychiatrist said.

When Hinckley spent several months working as a busboy at a nightclub, he would watch men trying to pick up women, Goldman testified.

"He enjoyed seeing a man walking across the dance floor, making a play for a woman, and getting turned down. He had contempt for the whole business of trying to be macho."

But Hinckley's reaction was far more serious, Goldman said, when he felt "totally ineffectual" and "unable to function as an independent person."

"It came to his mind the gun was the only way to be powerful, the only way of making one's presence felt," Goldman said.

Hinckley became "a little boy with a gun, and a gun carries a lot of influence. About this time (late 1980) he starts stalking President Carter."

Previous witnesses testified that Hinckley stalked Carter in several cities, including Dayton, Ohio where the defendant got within several feet of the former president.

Hinckley later turned his attention to shooting Reagan as a way of bringing about a magical union with actress Jodie Foster, the teen-age actress who spurned him, doctors have testified.

About the same time he was stalking Carter, Hinckley was seeing an Evergreen Colo., psychiatrist at the request of his parents. But Goldman said Hinckley didn't tell Dr. John Hopper about his travels or his belief that he needed to carry out a dramatic act to gain Miss Foster's attention.

Goldman said Hinckley lost faith in Hopper even before his first appointment in late October 1980.

Hinckley had tried to commit suicide by swallowing an overdose of anti-depressant pills, and Hopper took his word over the telephone that no suicide attempt had taken place.

"It proved to him (Hinckley) that Dr. Hopper was not going to do everything possible to help him...to find out how miserable he

WASHINGTON (AP) — Treasury secretaries to the nation's five previous presidents are painting a grim picture of economic calamity for the United States unless the present government takes politically treacherous steps to reduce the swelling budget deficits it faces.

In blunt language, the former Cabinet officers, who served in Democratic and Republican administrations over the past 20 years, warned at a news conference Monday that the economy will continue to crumble under the weight of high interest rates without credible spending cuts and tax increases.

"The situation is so serious that unless drastically corrected... we are condemning ourselves to very high interest rates, which, in turn, will lead to a continued recession of the type that I feel could only be realistically labeled a depression," said C. Douglas Dillon, who served from 1961 to 1965 under Democrats John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson.

"Urgent action is required because the time is very, very short if we are to avoid a financial disaster," said William E. Simon, who served under Republican Gerald R. Ford from 1974 to 1976. Simon, who is in London, told reporters on a telephone conference call: "We're very, very prone to a financial accident... a financial crisis."

"You're witnessing day by day a deterioration of the whole economic base of this country," observed John B. Connally, Richard Nixon's treasury secretary from 1971 to 1972.

"I personally do not see any realistic prospects for a decline in these unacceptable interest rates" without a significant reduction in the deficit, said W. Michael Blumenthal, Jimmy Carter's treasury secretary from 1977 to 1979.

"Unless arrested now by fiscal and budgetary programs that will bring this budget into a state of balanced equilibrium... (the deficits) will bring economic and financial disaster," added Henry H. Fowler, Johnson's secretary from 1965 to 1968.

With those predictions, the bipartisan coalition launched a personal lobbying campaign to persuade Congress and President Reagan to accept budget changes the group claims will hold the deficit to less than $75 billion in 1985.

The secretaries want Congress to cut Social Security benefits, something neither Democrats nor Republicans want to do with the congressional elections little more than five months away.

At the same time, the coalition wants to reduce or delay the 1983 installment of the president's income tax cut, something Reagan has vowed is off limits.

The group also is appealing for reductions in Reagan's record military spending plan and for cuts in social programs that primarily benefit middle- and upper-income groups. Programs for the needy, for whom benefits already have been reduced, should be spared out of a sense of fairness, the officials said.

The former officials met Monday with the current treasury secretary, Donald T. Regan, three Democratic House committee chairmen involved in the budget process and Republican Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr.

The president told reporters Monday that the group "may differ on some details" from Republican congressional budget plans the administration is now supporting. Overall, though, Reagan added, "I'm gratified... that they support in general the approach that we have taken" to reduce federal spending.

Asked about the group's proposal to trim the administration's defense budget by $25 billion over three years, Reagan said, "I don't think they quite understand all that's been going on. With all due respect to those gentlemen, they are not in a position now where they have access... to all the information that is necessary to make the decisions."

Recent changes in the North Carolina pesticide law by the General Assembly now make some farmers and pesticide consultants responsible for notifying beekeepers before aerial applications of pesticides toxic to bees are applied within one-half mile of registered bee apiaries (bee hives).

Before the law was recently changed, aerial applicators had sole responsibility for notifying any beekeepers with registered apiary locations. The aerial applicators are still responsible for such notification, but in addition, the person who contracts for the aerial application is also responsible under the amended law. Accordingly, the person who contracts for the aerial application would include the farmer who actually arranges for the spraying to be performed. Both the aerial applicator and the person who contracts for the aerial application are responsible for the notification procedures. It is important for beekeepers to be aware that they must annually register the location of their hives for them to be covered by the provisions of the law. There is a fee for registering each location.

The law makes no provisions for bee yards that are not registered and in the event that a beekeeper moves his hives, they must be re-registered to receive consideration under the law.

Not all pesticides are affected by the provisions under the law. The only pesticides under consideration are those that carry a danger to honeybee warning on the label and also apply to aerial application of the pesticides. Ground applications are not covered by the law.

The aerial applicator and the person who contracts for the aerial application of the bee-toxic pesticides are responsible for notifying any beekeeper with a registered apiary within one-half mile of the spray area. Notification must be performed no more than 10 days and no less than 24 hours before the pesticide is applied. The notification procedure may be accomplished by phone, mail or in person.

Anyone who needs to know the location of any registered apiary may call the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Office. Every county extension office will maintain a list of registered hives that is available to farmers, aerial applicators and other individuals who need to notify apiary owners under the law. In addition, the N.C. Department of Agriculture will continue to periodically mail lists of all registered apiaries to all aerial applicators that are licensed in North Carolina.

Anyone who would like to join the Pitt County Beekeeper's Association and learn more about beekeeping in general may contact Sam Uzzell at the extension office, 752-2934, or Don Dancy, vice president of the organization, at 756-1788. The Pitt County Beekeepers Association meets the second Thursday of each month in the extension office.

soil conservation. He is a member of the D.H. Conley Chapter of F.F.A. and a member of the Winterville Free Will Baptist Church.

The Resource Conservation Workshop combines classroom and field work in such areas as land use and conservation practices and wildlife and fisheries management. The workshop is sponsored by the N.C. Association of Soil and Water Conservation Districts, the N.C. Chapter of the Soil Conservation Society of America, and the N.C. Soil and Water Conservation Committee.

Registration is limited to 100 students, one from each county in the state.

Zoo Reports Second Baby

SAN PASQUAL (AP) — The San Diego Wild Animal Park says another African bush elephant has given birth, bringing the total number of pachyderms born at the park this year to four.

Park spokeswoman Martha Baker said Monday the female baby is healthy and already walking around.

The mother, a 13-year-old elephant named Wanki, is taking good care of the little one. The baby began nursing early Monday morning, Miss Baker said.

Both the mother, brought to the park in 1971 from Zaire, and the father, a 20-year-old elephant named Chico, are reported doing well. Chico came from South Carolina in 1977.

Meanwhile, Kumi, a little elephant rejected at birth by his mother, was improving, Miss Baker said.

Kumi has had to contend with a host of dietary problems caused by his allergies to milk and a vegetable-based formula that was being administered by bottle. Animal care specialists are now feeding Kumi a diluted glucose-based formula, and Miss Baker said the 17-day old pachyderm is getting stronger by the day.

Miss Baker said Kumi has been taken off an intravenous supplement and he has gained five pounds in the past four days. If he survives, Miss Baker said, he would be the first African bush elephant successfully hand-reared from birth.

Cars Collide At Intersection

Cars driven by Virginia Hollowell Bennett of 204 Kent Drive and Raleigh B. Westbrook Jr. of 1302A Charles Boulevard collided about 11:18 a.m. Monday at the intersection of Dickinson Avenue and Greene Street.

Police department investigators estimated damage from the mishap at $800 to the Bennett car and $1,000 to the Westbrook auto.

Artificial Heart Guidelines Set

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — In a policy reversal, the University of Utah has agreed to perform operations in which the living hearts of certain patients would be removed and replaced with a machine, officials say.

The proposal, which is subject to approval by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, would end the pioneering university's policy of implanting artificial hearts only in patients whose hearts stop during surgery and cannot be restarted. No suitable candidates have been in that situation since the artificial heart was developed.

The new rules would mean that about 10,000 people suffering from an inoperable heart disease may soon be eligible for the operations to receive the university's artificial heart — including a Florida man who has asked to have the device implanted.

The school's Institutional Review Board voted 12-0 after a closed 1½-hour meeting Monday to expand eligibility to include patients suffering from cardiomyopathy, a degenerative disease of the heart muscle.

"I'm very excited. We at least won half the battle by getting them to change the protocol," Dale Lott, 38, a cardiomyopathy victim who has sought to become the first recipient of the device, said from his Homestead, Fla., home.

The proposal goes to the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, which has 30 days to accept, reject or seek clarification of the guidelines, said John Dwan, University Medical Center spokesman.

An estimated 10,000 Americans suffer from the debilitating ailment, he said.

Dr. F. Ross Woolley, chairman of a board subcommittee that drafted the new guidelines, said Lott's case wasn't discussed at the meeting.

"We don't know, really, anything about Mr. Lott other than what we've heard in the press," he said, adding that the former Dade County fire dispatcher would have to meet the same criteria as other potential recipients of the heart.

Woolley emphasized the artificial heart did not carry a guarantee of a better life for its recipients.

"There isn't any indication given that the patient will significantly benefit from this procedure," he said. "We're not saying that if you have an artificial heart you're going to live for 'X' period of time."

Also, recipients would spend the rest of their lives tethered to an external compressor that powers the heart.

But both Lott and his attorney, Ellis Rubin, rejoiced at the news.

"This is certainly encouraging," said Rubin, who waged a campaign to get the guidelines revised. "Maybe all our prayers are about to be answered."

Implanting the artificial heart — called the Jarvik-7 heart after its inventor, Dr. Robert Jarvik — in cardiomyopathic patients would mean removing a working, though diseased heart.

Although each year from 3,000 to 5,000 patients' hearts stop during surgery and cannot be restarted, the situation hasn't occurred in a suitable candidate for the Jarvik-7 at the University.

Hospital officials have said Lott's other medical problems, including diabetes and hypertension, would make him a poor candidate for the implant even if the guidelines are expanded. Those ailments have also made Lott unacceptable at other institutions for a human heart transplant.

The review board began considering new guidelines shortly after Dr. William DeVries, head of cardiovascular surgery and the surgeon who would implant the device, renewed his original proposal to include cardiomyopathic patients.

DeVries would not comment on Lott's case, but said he was pleased with the board's action.

A recipient of the artificial heart would first have to pass an initial examination by DeVries and gain approval of a six-member review panel, Woolley said.

Dwan said that if the FDA approves of the new rules, it could be between 35 and 50 days before DeVries would be authorized to implant the Jarvik-7 in cardiomyopathic patients.

The noted Texas heart surgeon Dr. Denton Cooley has twice implanted artificial hearts — not the Utah model — in patients waiting for transplants. Both patients later received human hearts, but died.

Rubin said he would try to speed FDA approval of the new guidelines, then "contact the University of Utah and go out there if necessary to ask that Dale be put at the top of the list of those applying."

First Birth By Sperm Bank-Use

ESCONDIDO, Calif. (AP) — The first baby has been born as a result of a sperm bank set up primarily for Nobel scientists, a spokesman says, and the donor has been identified as "an eminent mathematician."

A spokesman for the Repository for Germinal Choice said Monday the baby was "a healthy nine-pound daughter born in April in a rather small town in a sparsely populated state."

"The parents don't want to be identified publicly," said the spokesman, who declined also to give his full name but said he is the repository's medical geneticist and only full-time employee.

The sperm bank was founded in 1979 as a "means of breeding intelligence" by Robert Klark Graham, a one-time optometrist who made a fortune after pioneering the techniques that led to shatter-proof plastic spectacle lenses.

Graham, 76, was said to be at his home in Escondido, Calif. — a suburb 40 miles north of San Diego — but he was unavailable for comment. His aide said Monday they intended to keep it secret until a national medical magazine hits the newsstands.

A single Nobel Prize winner's name — that of William B. Shockley of Stanford University, the 1956 winner in physics — has been lent publicly to the project. The spokesman declined to say if Nobel laureates other than Shockley had donated sperm.

In an interview two years ago, the reclusive Graham said his intention is to bring into the world a "few more creative, intelligent people who otherwise might not be born."

The first mother "has a high IQ but is not a member of Mensa, a club for people in the top 2 percent of measured IQ," the spokesman said. He said the mother is "quite charming — we had to deal with her by Greyhound bus."

The successful donor, he said, is a professor at a major university, which also was left unidentified. The sperm was inseminated by the woman's husband at home and "that is true of most of our recipients," he said.

There are fewer than a dozen donors, "all high achievers," he said, adding that "we've had several pregnancies even though this is the first delivery."

Emergency-Landing Flight Originated From Pitt-Greenville

CHARLOTTE — Sunbird Airlines officials said this morning that the Sunbird flight which made an emergency landing at Douglas International Airport here Sunday night originated in Greenville.

Spokesmen said the Cessna 404 left Pitt-Greenville Airport at 4:35 p.m. Sunday and arrived in Raleigh about 5:10 p.m. where it discharged its passengers.

The plane then left Raleigh-Durham Airport at 6 p.m. with four passengers from the Charlotte area, and was scheduled to land about 6:55 p.m.

However, when it was discovered the plane could not use its landing gear, it circled the airport for about 45 minutes to burn off excess fuel.

It landed on its belly amid flying sparks, but no fire resulted and none of the passengers or crew members were injured.

White Oak Shuts Out A-G

Pirates Facing Old Dominion

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer
LITTLEFIELD — Ayden-Grifton coach Allan Wilson methodically but without giving up a trace of frustration raked away the clumps of dirt along the base paths.

"Why am I doing this?" Wilson said, looking up briefly from a duty he performs after nearly every home game. "I'm through with it for the year."

What Wilson was through with was baseball — White Oak made sure of that during the preceding two hours.

The Vikings used two home runs by Brian Baquer and a superb one-hit performance by Richard Sloan to whip the Chargers, 6-0, Monday night in the first round of the state 3-A playoffs.

White Oak, now 18-3, will play the winner of tonight's Williamston-Northwest Halifax game.

It was the second straight season Ayden-Grifton has advanced to the state playoffs having not been shutout only to come up scoreless when it mattered most.

"It came to a quick halt, didn't it?" Wilson said. "It's our second shutout. We just seem to wait until the playoffs to be shutout."

Roanoke Rapids blanked the Chargers, 3-0, last year in the opening round of the playoffs behind Chubbie Butler, who is now with East Carolina.

Last night the Chargers ran into an equally impressive pitcher in Sloan. Sloan, a 6-2, 210-pound junior, struck out 15 and walked two and did not give up a hit until Joey Kennedy singled to center to lead off the fifth.

Kennedy's was the only hit of the night for A-G, which did not get a runner past second against Sloan.

"We just faced a good pitcher and he stopped us," Wilson said. "He's the best we've seen all year."

Added A-G third baseman Terry Locust while in the dugout: "He's indescribable."

Sloan, now 6-2, mixed his pitches well, using both his fast ball and an exceptional curve to keep the Chargers off stride throughout the evening.

"He was really up for this game," White Oak coach Tom McGirt said.

Sloan's opponent on the mound was A-G left-hander Tyrone Gay, who, on this night, was no match for the White Oak hurler.

Gay, who had problems getting his curve over consistently all night, gave up seven hits and struck out five and walked five as he saw his record dip to 8-5.

"He's thrown better," Wilson said. "They got to him early and then he settled down (in the middle innings) and then he got tired in the seventh."

Said McGirt: "I think he was nervous. He threw the ball real hard but he had trouble with his curve."

Before the game McGirt watched Gay warm up and he noticed Gay was having trouble getting the curve over. "His curve was coming in high and outside," McGirt said. "We told our guys to not go for it, even if it was a strike."

Gay came into the game having thrown 12 straight no-hit innings. The Vikings brought the streak to a quick end last night.

With one gone in the first, Baquer hit a hanging curve over the centerfield fence, some 350 feet away, to give White Oak a 1-0 lead.

The home run was only the second of the season off Gay, who came into the game with a 1.24 earned run average.

The Vikings upped their lead to 2-0 moments later. Charlie Soos lined a double down the rightfield line with two gone and scored when Sloan followed with a double to the gap in right-centerfield.

"We got behind quick and that was the big difference," Wilson said. "That was the turning point. You could tell early we weren't gonna get too many runs — if any — and that we couldn't afford to give up too many."

For McGirt, the early scoring was a welcome occurrence. "I was pleased to score early," he said. "We haven't done that in the last few games."

"Usually, if we don't hit the first few innings it takes us until around the fifth or sixth to start hitting," he added. "I think that was the key: getting ahead early."

After Sloan struck out the side — one Charger did reach base on an error in the inning — in A-G's initial at bat, the Vikings upped their lead to 3-0 in the top of the second.

With one gone, Gary Appleton, the Vikings' #8 hitter, walked. Then, with two gone, Pat Riley singled him to third and Baquer walked to load the bases.

Gay then walked Israel Meadows to force home Appleton and White Oak led, 3-0.

The Vikings did not threaten again until the sixth, when Joe Hopkins walked and Tim Baker was hit by a pitch. But, Gay got out of the inning when both Hopkins and Baker were tagged out at the plate while trying to score.

But, just when it appeared the Vikings would duplicate the Yellow Jackets 3-0 win over Ayden-Grifton of a year ago, Baquer returned to the scene.

Riley walked to open the seventh and Baquer hit a 2-1 pitch over the right-centerfield fence for a two run home run — his second homer of the game — to give the Vikings a 5-0 lead.

Soos then reached on an error by shortstop Chris Strickland — the only error of the night by the Chargers — and stole second and third. He scored on Sloan's single to up the margin to 6-0.

The Chargers went down in order in the seventh — Sloan retired the final seven men he faced — to give the Vikings the win.

"Brian Baquer really brought us through tonight," McGirt said. "He really spurred us on. He had a lot to do with our win tonight."

So, too, did Sloan, as the Chargers would willingly attest.

Tries To Bunt

Ayden-Grifton shortstop Chris Strickland tries to bunt against White Oak pitcher Richard Sloan last night their first round game in the state 3-A playoffs. The ball went foul. Sloan hurled a one-hitter as the Vikings eliminated the Chargers, 6-0. (Reflector photo by Chap Gurley)

Jamesville's Late Rally Gives Bullets 8-4 Win Over Rosewood

ROSEWOOD — Jamesville struck for four runs in the top of the seventh and then held off a rally by Rosewood to capture an 8-4 win Monday in the opening round of the state 1-A baseball playoffs.

Jamesville, now 19-3, will play the winner of tonight's Bath-Cardinal Gibbons game. If Bath wins the game will be played at Bath. If Cardinal Gibbons wins a coin will be flipped to decide where the game will be held.

The Bullets, who defeated Rosewood, 4-1, last year in the opening round of the playoffs, jumped out to a 1-0 lead in the first inning only to have Kevin Hucks lead off the bottom of the inning to tie the game.

Jamesville regained the lead in the third with a run and then stretched its lead to 4-1 with two runs in the top of the fourth.

With one gone, Rex Bell singled and stole second and third.

Then, with two gone, Greg Hardison walked and stole second.

Kevin Waters, pinch hitting for Marty Swinson, then doubled to score both runners.

Hobgood Has 77

CHAPEL HILL — Farmville Central's Gary Hobgood, the only area player to make the field, toured Finley Golf Course with a 77 yesterday in the first round of the State High School Golf Tournament.

Hobgood's score left him nine strokes off the pace set by Jay Helms of Terry Sanford of Fayetteville, who had a 68.

Greg Parker of McDowell is in second place with a 69, while Art Robinson of Zebulon and Neal Braxton of Burlington Williams are tied for third at 70.

Terry Sanford leads the team event with a 298 total, while Davie County is one back at 299, followed by Gastonia Ashbrook at 303.

The tournament winds up today.

Rosewood, which ends the season at 12-9, cut the deficit to 4-2 with a run in the fifth. It stayed that way until the seventh.

Greg Hardison singled and stole second to leadoff the inning. Kevin Waters then singled him to third to give the Bullets runners at the corners.

Matthew Moore then laid down a bunt on a safety squeeze and when the throw went to first Hardison raced home to score.

Keith Waters followed with a single and Kevin Perry came on to run for the Jamesville catcher. Then, with two gone, Carl Ange drilled a single to score

ECU Inks Pitcher

Winfred Johnson, an East Bladen High School pitcher, has signed to play baseball at East Carolina. Coach Hal Baird announced Monday.

Johnson, a 6-1, 195-pounder, has a 10-1 record thus far this season. He was 10-2 last year and has two career no-hitters.

Johnson was the 1981 Bladen County Player of the Year and made the all-Three Rivers 3-A Conference during his sophomore and junior years.

Johnson is the third player to sign with ECU this year. He joins second baseman David Horne of Fayetteville Cape Fear and catcher Jabo Fulghum of Louisburg Junior College. Fulghum is a former Greene Central star.

Rose In Action

Rose High School opens its quest for a State 4-A baseball title tonight at 7:30 p.m. at Guy Smith Stadium.

The Rampants, 22-0, will face the Cap-Eight Conference runner-up, Millbrook, which finished the regular season with a 17-5 record.

Both teams are expected to field strong pitching teams with good hitting also.

The winner of the game will face Richmond County, victor over Cap-Eight winner Garner on Saturday night, in the second round of the tournament. That game will be held at the site of tonight's game's winner's home field, probably Friday.

Baffled Seaver Bombed By Phillies

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

Tom Seaver, for years one of the best pitchers in baseball, is baffled. Things have never gone so wrong for so long.

"I've been pitching poorly for almost two months," Seaver said Monday night after being bombed by the Philadelphia Phillies. "I don't think I've ever pitched this badly for this long of a time."

Seaver gave up seven runs on nine hits in five innings, absorbing his sixth loss in seven decisions as the Phillies beat the Cincinnati Reds 9-1. The victory was Philadelphia's third in a row, while the Reds lost for the sixth straight time.

Bo Diaz drove in three runs and homered to back Steve Carlton in his first victory over Cincinnati since May 19, 1980.

In the rest of Monday night's National League action, San Diego defeated Chicago 8-2, New York dined Atlanta 5-3, Montreal blanked Houston 2-0, St. Louis shut out San Francisco 6-0 and Pittsburgh routed Los Angeles 9-3.

Seaver was 14-2 last season and finished second in the NL Cy Young balloting to Fernando Valenzuela, and he says he hasn't a clue to his terrible start.

"If I had the answer, I wouldn't be doing what I'm doing out there," he said. "I don't know why."

Pete Rose, a former Cincinnati teammate, said he might have a clue, however.

"I think there was something wrong with him, to be honest," Rose said. "You could see wincing in his face when he threw. He'd make a lot of faces when he threw, like something was bothering him."

"I hope it's not serious ... he wasn't Tom Seaver."

Carlton, 36, spaced four hits over eight innings with three walks and three strikeouts before getting last-inning relief help from Warren Brusstar.

Philadelphia scored three runs in the second inning, two more in the third and Diaz hit a two-run homer in the fifth to chase Seaver.

Carlton yielded a fourth-inning run when a single by Paul Householder off Mike Schmidt's glove at third base brought home Cesar Cedeno.

Padres 8, Cubs 2

Tim Lollar won his fifth game without a loss, working seven innings and getting offensive support from Ruppert Jones, who extended his hitting streak to 13 games with a 3-for-3 performance.

Jones drove in three runs, and San Diego took advantage of some sloppy Chicago fielding and wildness by Cubs pitchers Dickie Noles and Dick Tidrow to score five runs in the third inning. The Padres had just three hits in the inning, but Chicago committed two errors and yielded three walks.

Cubs first baseman Bill Buckner and Manager Lee Elia had to be restrained from taking punches at each other in the sixth inning. Elia wouldn't explain the circumstances, other than to say, "I had some words with Mr. Buckner and I didn't like the way he responded."

Buckner was angered earlier in the game when he felt a high-and-tight pitch from Lollar may have been intended for his head. Lollar said it was a slip.

Mets 5, Braves 3

Ellis Valentine drove in his first two runs of the season with a two-run homer, and New York extended its winning streak to three games behind the pitching of Pat Zachry and Neil Allen.

Valentine's homer staked Zachry to a 2-1 lead in the fourth inning, and the Mets right-hander handcuffed the Braves until the eighth when he yielded a run on three hits. Allen relieved Zachry with none out in the eighth and pitched two hitless innings for his 11th save.

The Mets put the game away with three runs in the sixth, chasing rookie starter Ken Dayley, 1-2. Glenn Hubbard homered in the Atlanta

Expos 2, Astros 0

Montreal won its fourth in a row with a pair of unearned runs, and Bill Gullickson and Woody Fryman teamed on an eight-hit shutout.

The Expos scored both their runs in the sixth inning on an error by first baseman Denny Walling and Al Oliver's run-scoring single. Gullickson held the lead until walking the first man in the ninth, and Fryman finished up.

The Astros now have gone scoreless in the past 21 innings and have lost three in a row.

Cards 6, Giants 0

Joaquin Andujar pitched a six-hit shutout, his second of the season, to lead St. Louis over San Francisco. Willie McGee led the St. Louis attack with a three-run triple in a five-run fourth inning.

Andujar did not allow an extra-base hit while striking out five and walking none. The shutout was the fifth pitched against the Giants this season.

Andujar pitched his first shutout since 1977 on April 17 when he had a three-hitter against Philadelphia. Pirates 9, Dodgers 3

Pittsburgh snapped a 2-2 tie with six runs after two were out in the seventh inning, and the Pirates won their second straight after losing three in a row.

Lee Lacy got the rally started with a two-run double, and Tony Pena also drove in two runs in the inning. Jason Thompson drove in Pittsburgh's final run with a ninth-inning homer, his 12th of the season.

Don Robinson, 5-0, pitched Pittsburgh's first complete game of the season, scattering 10 hits while striking out five and walking three.

After Four Months In Coma, Tony Conigliaro Talks Briefly

By HOWARD ULMAN
AP Sports Writer

BOSTON (AP) — More than four months after slipping into a coma, former baseball slugger Tony Conigliaro has spoken briefly to family members and doctors, his mother says.

The development has led doctors to temper their pessimism and become "cautiously optimistic" about his recovery, Richie Conigliaro, Tony's brother, said Monday night.

"This kid was a hopeless case," said Sal Conigliaro, Tony's father. "Everybody had given up on him except us."

Dr. Maximilian Kaubach, Conigliaro's physician, was not available for comment.

A spokeswoman for Shaughnessy Chronic Disease-Rehabilitation Hospital, Salem, where Conigliaro, 37, is being treated, declined comment on his condition.

She said Evangeline Dumont, hospital administrator, was scheduled to hold a meeting today on Conigliaro's and might be available for comment then.

If the family's reports are true, "it's nothing short of a miracle and it couldn't have happened to a nicer family," said Dr. Roman W. DeSanctis, the cardiologist who treated the former Boston Red Sox outfielder at Massachusetts General Hospital. He said he hadn't been in touch with the case for about two weeks.

Richie Conigliaro said Tony Conigliaro spoke at about 5 p.m. Sunday for the first time since Jan. 9, when he suffered a heart attack and went into a coma. Theresa Conigliaro, Tony's mother, said that on Monday morning he asked a doctor where he was but did not speak to her when she visited the same day.

Mrs. Conigliaro said that on Sunday she had left her son's hospital room because nurses had arrived to give him respiratory treatment. While they did it, she said, nurses noticed him moving his lips.

They adjusted the respiratory apparatus to enable him to speak and he asked where he was, Mrs. Conigliaro added. Nurses then called her into the room and told him to "say hello to your mother," she said.

He then said, "hi, Mom," she said. Then, she added, she called up her husband, Sal, and told Tony to "say hello to your dad." He said, "hi, Dad," she reported.

Sal Conigliaro said a flu condition has kept him from visiting his son since last Thursday but that he heard Tony's words clearly.

"It's absolutely incredible," Sal Conigliaro said. "He had shown slight improvements, being more attentive and following you around with his eyes a lot ... I thought this (speaking) might come a year or two down the line if it was going to come."

"It's amazing. It really is. We've been giving him vitamins," Richie Conigliaro said Monday night. "I said to one of his doctors today, 'Well, I think it must be the vitamins.' He said, 'it's not the vitamins. It's a miracle because I can't explain how he's doing this.'"

After his heart attack, Tony Conigliaro's heart stopped for "perhaps three to five minutes" before he got to the hospital, where the heartbeat was restored, DeSanctis said.

A lack of oxygen to the brain can cause brain damage.

Conigliaro later was transferred to Shaughnessy Hospital.

"The first words he ever said (were) 'Where am I?'" said Richie Conigliaro. "He said 'Hi' to me, too. He knew it was me. He said, 'Richie.'"

Richie Conigliaro said speaking "is tiring" for Tony and he hasn't been saying a lot of words. "He's been saying 'hi.' He's been saying, 'thank you.' It's very hard on him."

When he doesn't speak, "it does seem as if he knows what's going on," he added. "He follows us around the room. He does things. He moves his arms and legs."

"One thing that's very encouraging was that the last brain scan he had in Mass General was flat and he had one two weeks ago and it came out normal."

"We're just kind of numb. It's something that we all wanted and prayed for and maybe deep down inside really were not expecting it to happen this way. We thought it would be years and years before we thought he would say 'hi.'"

"His doctors were actually very pessimistic and didn't want to say anything to be too happy about," Richie said. "They're very cautiously optimistic" now.

He added that until Sunday, Tony Conigliaro had shown small signs of improvement but "nothing this encouraging."

DeSanctis said doctors had expected "some gradual improvement" in Conigliaro's condition.

Conigliaro was stricken as he was being driven to Logan International Airport by another brother, Billy, who rushed him to Massachusetts General.

The Scoreboard which normally carries the baseball standings and league leaders, will not appear today because of continued problems with our computers.

Two Try For Team

Two members of this past year's East Carolina women's basketball team will be among those shooting for spots on Sports Festival teams next week during tryouts at two different locations.

Darlene Chaney will be trying out for the North team, while Lorraine Foster will be seeking a spot on the South squad. Both were alternates for their respective teams last year. The teams are open to young women who have not reached their 20th birthday.

The Sports Festival, sponsored by the U.S. Olympic Committee, will be held July 24-30 at Indianapolis. There, teams in a number of sports will gather representing the South, North, West and Midwest.

ECU coach Cathy Andruzzi noted that expenses must be paid, however, and that anyone wishing to donate for the support of these two in their tryouts, may do so through the Lady Pirate Basketball Office.

Another member of the team, Sam Jones, is expected to be among those on the South team handball team.

Hoyt Glad To Get Tight Game For A Change As Chisox Win

By MIKE EMBRY
AP Sports Writer

Being the winningest pitcher in the major leagues with the league's best earned run average doesn't keep a pitcher immune to criticism. Just ask Chicago's LaMarr Hoyt.

The rap against Hoyt is that his teammates have been overly generous in run production. In his last five starts before Monday night the White Sox had scored 52 runs.

That changed Monday night when Chicago eked out a 3-1 victory over the Kansas City Royals. The 27-year-old right-hander scattered eight hits and struck out eight to register his ninth straight victory of the season.

Hoyt said he felt he needed to win a tight game to prove something to his detractors. "To a point, yes," said Hoyt, who boasts a 1.45 ERA. "(Paul) Splittorff threw well and I thought it was going to be a 1-0 game."

In other American League action, Cleveland blasted Minnesota 9-2 and Baltimore edged Toronto 7-5. California at Boston was rained out.

Splittorff, 2-4, was coasting along until the sixth inning when the White Sox scored three runs. Greg Luzinski drove in one with a single and Tom Paciorek singled in two more.

"Everybody knows we've been scoring a lot of runs for him, but tonight he needed only three," Paciorek said. "We kept it down to see how good a pitcher he really is."

Kansas City Manager Dick Howser didn't have to be impressed by the White Sox pitcher who now has a 27-6 career record, including a 16-0 slate in Comiskey Park.

"I really like the way he goes after the hitters," he said. "He attacks the hitters. He really has a good idea of what he's doing."

Hoyt's shutout bid ended with two outs in the ninth when Hal McRae and Cesar Geronimo hit back-to-back doubles.

He now has 14 straight victories dating back to last season, three short of the American League record of 17 set by Johnny Allen of Cleveland in 1936-37 and equaled by Dave McNally of Baltimore in 1968-69.

The major league mark of 24 straight victories was established by Carl Hubbell of the New York Giants in 1 9 3 6 - 3 7

Indians 9, Twins 2

Cleveland pitcher Len Barker allowed only four hits and took advantage of the Indians' 11-hit attack that included a three-run homer in the first inning by Andre Thornton.

Barker, 5-2, struck out six and gave up two walks in recording the fifth complete game by a Cleveland pitcher this season.

The Indians drove Minnesota starter Pete Redfern, 2-6, off the mound in the second with three more runs, one those being Rick Manning's second homer of the year.

Cleveland added two more runs in the third and another in the ninth.

The Twins scored in the first when Larry Milbourne tripled and came home on Randy Johnson's groundout to second and in the seventh when Jesus Vega crossed the plate from third on Barker's wild pitch.

Minnesota lost its sixth straight game and 20th in its last 23.

The Kiwanis rallied for five runs in the fifth inning and pulled out a 5-3 North State Little League victory over Coca-Cola yesterday.

Coke grabbed the initial lead in the top of the fifth breaking the scoreless tie.

But in the bottom of the frame, the Kiwanis rallied to take the lead for good. Kraig Butler walked and moved up on a wild pitch. Ormie Hale also walked, and both runners advanced on a passed ball. Another wild pitch let Butler score. Charlie Crandell walked as did John Chambliss, loading the bases. Robbie McDonald reached on an error, scoring Hale, and Jimmie Edgehill walked, scoring Crandell. Pat Joyner also walked, bringing in Chambliss, and a wild pitch scored McDonald.

Pepsi-Cola 3

First Federal 1

Pete Rivera singled home two runs in the fifth inning to help lift Pepsi-Cola to a 3-1 victory over First Federal Monday in a Tar Heel Little League baseball game.

Pepsi broke open a scoreless game in the fourth when Mike Kelly singled and came around to score on Rivera's double.

Pepsi then upped its lead to 3-0 in the fifth.

With one gone, Wes MacKenzie walked and Kelly doubled him to third. Rivera followed with a single to score both runners and give Pepsi a 3-0 lead.

First Federal scored its lone run in the bottom of the inning but could not get anymore runs.

Kelly allowed First Federal only three hits. Pepsi was led by Kelly and Rivera, both of whom were two for three.

Star Of KGB Chief Seen Rising As Next President

By MARC ROSENWASSER
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — The appointment of Yuri V. Andropov, the 67-year-old chief of the Soviet secret police, to the 10-man secretariat of the Communist Party Central Committee appears to improve his chances of succeeding President Leonid I. Brezhnev.

Andropov's new position was announced Monday after a special meeting of the Central Committee. He fills the place left open by the death last January of Mikhail A. Suslov, the No. 2 man in the Soviet leadership.

The committee also named Vladimir Dolgikh, 57, the secretariat member responsible for heavy industry, to the party's ruling Politburo as a candidate, or non-voting, member. Dolgikh thus emerges as a leader of the generation of Soviets who will succeed the current leadership generation, most of whom are over 70.

Soviet sources said they expected Andropov to give up his position as head of the Committee on State Security or KGB. Western diplomatic observers feel that continued association with the feared secret police would hinder Andropov's chances of succeeding Brezhnev, who is 75, ailing and drops out of public view with increasing frequency.

The announcement of Andropov's new post by the official news agency, Tass, did not indicate that he would inherit the power and influence wielded by Suslov, the keeper of the party's ideological purity, the man responsible for insuring that the policies of both the Soviet government and other communist governments reflected the Kremlin's Marxist-Leninist line.

In that capacity, he was involved in every aspect of Soviet policy although he generally remained behind the scenes. Should Andropov inherit Suslov's ideological responsibilities, it would give him a major base from which to reach for Brezhnev's mantle.

But Andropov's position should be strengthened, regardless, by his accession to the Central Committee secretariat, where he previously served from 1962-67.

In every leadership struggle since Josef Stalin won the fight to succeed Vladimir I. Lenin in the 1920s, the party secretariat has held the keys to power in Moscow. The secretariat controls the appointment of communist officials throughout the Soviet Union. An ambitious Soviet politician can use a post in the secretariat to put people loyal to him in key spots, then call on their support in a struggle for power.

Brezhnev, for instance, was only one of a three-member "troika," including Alexei Kosygin and Nikolai Podgorny, that ousted Nikita Khrushchev in 1964. But he held the key post of party first secretary and over a period of several years, he was able to use that position to consolidate power and emerge as the supreme leader.

One of those he appointed to a key position, 70-year-old Konstantin U. Chernenko, is widely regarded as the other leading contender to succeed him. Chernenko, like Andropov, is a full member of the Politburo and already member of the Central Committee secretariat.

Last month, he gained new stature when he delivered the keynote speech to a meeting of military commissars in Moscow, a task that had previously been handled by Suslov.

Little is known of the private views, if any, of either Andropov or Chernenko because, in keeping with Soviet policy, their public pronouncements hew closely to the party line.

Andropov was the Soviet ambassador to Hungary when the 1956 revolt was crushed.

MOVES UP — Yuri Andropov, chief of the Russian KGB, seen here in a 1980 photo, has been named to the powerful Communist Party Secretariat. His promotion is considered a step to strengthen his position as a contender to succeed ailing Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev. (AP Laserphoto)

Pentagon Still Wants To Scrap Oldest Of Its Aging B-52 Fleet

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon says it still wants to eliminate the oldest B-52s despite a congressional directive to retain the eight-engine bombers as a key part of the nation's strategic force.

"The Pentagon is playing the same old game of not taking direction from the congress," said Rep. Joseph Addabbo, D-N.Y., the chairman of the defense subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee.

"I'm a little perturbed. It's rather annoying that they have totally ignored what we directed them to do," added Rep. Jack Edwards, R-Ala., the panel's ranking minority member.

Air Force officials told the subcommittee on Monday that they want permission to take money approved by Congress last fall for the oldest B-52s and use it to upgrade some of the later B-52 models.

The giant bombers have been a key part of the U.S. strategic force for 30 years, and the oldest model, the B-52D, ended production in 1955. Two later models, the B-52G and B-52H, were produced until 1962.

Last October, as part of his plan to upgrade and modernize the military, President Reagan proposed scrapping the 79 B-52Ds by 1983 and upgrading the two later models to carry cruise missiles. Seven years ago, the Air Force spent $219 million to modernize the B-52D.

Eventually, the B-1 bomber is supposed to replace the B-52 as the nation's main long-range bomber.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said scrapping the oldest planes would save money and later, Lt. Gen. Kelly Burke, the chief of research and development for the Air Force, noted that some of the planes were older than the crews flying them.

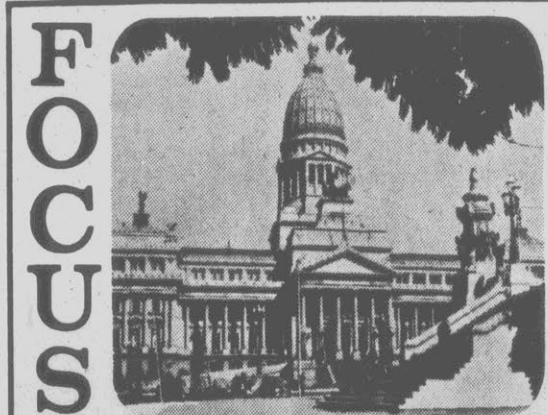

Air Force officials told the subcommittee on Monday that it costs too much to fly and maintain the planes.

But Congress balked at Reagan's idea and retained $62.1 million for the B-52D, arguing that the B-1 would not be ready until 1986 at the earliest and the B-52s were needed until then.

The Pentagon, however, hasn't changed its mind about the need to scrap the planes.

"I think it's probably part of the overall drive to make the B-1 work and not let anything get in its way and I speak as a B-1 supporter," said Edwards, "but I think we still need the Ds."

Officially, Addabbo's subcommittee was asked Mon-

Long-term success in life insurance requires intensive, quick and quality service, and that's what the agency offers its clients. Listen to Administrative Services Manager Maxine Reel:

"When we get a service request from a client, say for policy loans, beneficiary and ownership changes, bank draft and address changes, claims, etc., we do it THAT DAY if it's humanly possible. Kathy McLawhorn and I don't go home until the paper work is completed."

Booger says it more directly: "Maxine and Kathy tend to their business." This kind of customer loyalty works two ways: Many Greenville clients of the Scales agency now boast a third generation client relationship. And year-in, year-out the agency's business remaining on the books (persistence) ranks at the very top of Integon Life's records.

Loyalty to life insurance

Booger and all the members of the Scales agency believe in their mission. They're dedicated to protecting the financial futures of families and businesses.

Quite often home office personnel and people in and around Greenville ask Booger, "How do you stay motivated day in and day out — after 34 years?"

Booger's answer is always the same: "I love dealing with people, and whether I'm selling life insurance or working with civic endeavors, I know that I'm helping my fellowman."

A by-product of this loyalty reveals itself in sales results.

- Booger Scales:
- More insurance in force than any other Integon agent in the company's 62-year history. This is quite a record when you consider that Integon has 1378 full-time agents.
 - Twenty-eight consecutive years as a member of the Million Dollar Round Table. (Fewer than 80 agents in the world have built this record.)
 - National Quality Award winner for 25 years.

- Clarke Stokes:
- Million Dollar Round Table member six years.
 - National Sales Achievement Award 13 years.
 - National Quality Award winner 21 years.

- Waighty Scales:
- Attained Million Dollar Round Table in each of his four years with Integon. The M.D.R.T. qualification for 1981 was $1,900,000.
 - Three years award winner of the National Sales Achievement Award.
 - Two years as National Quality Award winner.

Loyalty to Greenville

These five people are rooted in Greenville soil. They have two centuries of combined residence in the area. They've watched our city grow. And they've helped Greenville grow. In the past 30 years, for example, the Scales agency has helped arrange more than 500 Integon mortgage loans for Greenville and Pitt County families and businesses. Total value of the loans exceeds $10 million.

Booger has helped Greenville in his own personal way. His work on behalf of East Carolina University prompted the ECU trustees to name the stadium fieldhouse in his honor. His civic awards reveal a special kind of loyalty, too. In 1957, the Greenville Jaycees presented him their "Distinguished Service Award." In the same year the North Carolina Jaycees named him the "Community Man of the Year for North Carolina." This was the last year this award was presented to one man. Then in 1961, the Greenville Exchange Club presented him with their "Golden Deeds Award." In 1978 the Greenville Chamber of Commerce designated Booger Scales their "Citizen of the Year." NO ONE else in the history of Greenville has ever won all four awards.

Loyalty to Integon Life

The loyalty of the agency toward Integon Life had its beginnings in 1948 when the late James S. Ficklen of Greenville convinced the late Robert Hanes of Winston-Salem (who at that time was Integon's largest stockholder) to use his influence to have Integon contract an energetic — but rather undirected — young man named W.M. Scales, Jr. Today, people at Integon Life consider that move the best personnel decision ever made. Look at the record through the years and you'll understand why:

In 1952, Booger came in 5th in the company's production for that year. For the past 30 consecutive years, he has been one of the top five producers — number one for 17 of those years.

In 1953, the company made Booger a General Agent.

By 1954, Booger was first named to the insurance industry's Million Dollar Round Table.

By 1956, Booger was elected to the Board of Directors of the company. At age 32 he was the youngest director of any major life insurance company in America. He would serve 15 more years as a member of the company's board.

In 1959, Booger had $10 million of insurance protection on the books. That same year Clarke Stokes — who was to become a million dollar agent in his own right — joined the agency. Clarke has since been a member of every top sales club at Integon Life.

And also in 1959, the incomparable Maxine Reel came aboard. Known throughout Eastern N.C. and at Integon as the finest administrative insurance manager in the field, Maxine has more than 23 years of service experience today.

In 1978, Waighty Scales came to Integon, and began to establish his own records. Waighty is currently a member of Integon's prestigious President's Round Table.

In 1979, Kathy McLawhorn joined the Scales agency. It's her cheerful voice and smiling face that greets you. Kathy works with Maxine, hand-in-hand, to give the best service possible to the agency's policyowners.

In 1980, Booger was made a Life Member of the Integon Inner Circle — the only representative so honored in the company's history.

On May 1, 1982, the agency's total M.D.R.T. insurance protection currently on the books reached the $100 million milestone.

During the entire 33-year history of the Scales Integon Life agency, the agents have never brokered any policies to another insurance company. This kind of loyalty plus the outstanding record creates a strong loyalty among the people at Integon Life.

It translates into superior service for clients of the agency.

If you're not already one of the 4000 clients of the W.M. Scales Integon agency you owe it to yourself to find how much insurance protection — and loyalty — can be worth to you.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — VENTURESOME STUNT MAN BECOMES ABLE CIRCUS DAREDEVIL.
Today's Cryptoquip clue: V equals L

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

If the average citizen sees spots before his eyes, he would be well advised to consult his optometrist. For the average bridge player, however, keeping spots before his eyes is simply sound advice.

South had two methods of showing his good hand. One was to reverse with two diamonds, the other to jump to two no trump. South chose the latter because a nine-trick contract rated to be easier to make than an eleven-trick one.

West led the top of his spade sequence and declarer could count eight tricks. He rejected any thought of looking for his ninth trick in clubs — even if a finesse for the jack was successful, the defenders would have their spade suit running before a club trick could be established. Hearts offered a more reasonable prospect of setting up a ninth trick, so after winning the king of spades declarer essayed a heart to the jack. East won and forced out declarer's remaining spade stopper, and declarer could make no more than the eight tricks he had started out with.

Eights and nines might not be assigned any value in the point count, but they play an important role in the developing of tricks. Here, declarer's heart holding was

Philadelphia Unveils A 'Rocky' Statue

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — After a long struggle, Rocky Balboa, alias Sylvester Stallone, returned in triumph for the unveiling of an 8½-foot bronze likeness of himself at the top of the Art Museum steps, with all the city seemingly at his feet.

It looked just like a scene from the film "Rocky III," which premiered here Monday night, but the dedication ceremony Monday was part of the real-life story of Stallone, star of three "Rocky" movies, and something of a hero in his hometown of Philadelphia.

In the movie, Balboa is honored on the Art Museum steps for bringing the world heavyweight crown to the City of Brotherly Love. Stallone was celebrated Monday as "the man who has done more to promote this city nationally and internationally than anyone else."

"You can break that statue into a million pieces and you'd find a piece of it in every Philadelphian," said Stallone, cutting a string to unveil the statue of the boxer, whose arms are raised in victory.

"Each one has a sense of striving, of getting ahead, of winning," he said at the ceremony, which was part of the celebration of Philadelphia's 300th year.

For Stallone and the city's "Rocky" fans, the struggle

ROCKY STAR, STATUE RETURN — Sylvester Stallone, star of a series of "Rocky" movies, signs autographs after unveiling an 8-foot 6-inch bronze statue of himself at the steps of the Philadelphia Art Museum Monday evening.

While another site was sought, Stallone sent the statue back to Hollywood.

"It sat in my backyard for five months, tied to a tree, until the city decided where to put it," said Stallone. "I was only insulted when they said I wanted it on the steps as a publicity stunt."

After a petition drive by local "Rocky" fans, City Council stepped into the ring with a compromise.

Under the agreement, the statue, which was designed by Thomas A. Schomberg of Denver, will remain outside the museum until July 11. It will then be moved to the Spectrum, the Philadelphia arena that was the scene of Balboa's movie fights.

The controversy was all but forgotten at the statue's dedication, as Mayor William Green struggled to make his "thank you" to Stallone heard over two bands and the shouts and screams of the actor's fans.

City Representative Richard Doran said the statue would symbolize "the determination of the common man to reach for the highest goals."

Arthur Gorman, a 33-year-old taxi driver who helped lead the fight to get the statue back, said he was thrilled by the outcome.

"The people now have a statue that reflects their views of how important it is to be inspired to succeed," Gorman said. "And it ain't a bad piece of art, either."

After the unveiling, Stallone joined about 1,500 people who paid between $10 and $50 to attend the film's benefit premiere. The benefit raised more than $30,000 for the Police Athletic League, which provides recreation programs for the city's youth.

Outside, thousands of fans gathered to get a glimpse of the movie stars, amid bands, balloons and searchlights.

As the movie ended, the cheers of "Rocky, Rocky" from the audience joined with the movie's stereophonic sound track. Stallone, watching from the first row, rose to accept the applause.

"Everything I have I owe to Philadelphia," said the 35-

Disney World Worker In Fall

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — When visitors to Walt Disney World saw Jo Miranda dangling from the sky ride and heard her screaming, many thought it was an act.

Her screams persisted, however, and the crowd realized the danger was real. As several people rushed to her aid, the 20-year-old park employee fell 35 feet, and the onlookers moaned.

"It seemed like I was up there a hundred million years," Ms. Miranda said from Orlando Regional Medical Center, where she remained hospitalized today in stable condition following the accident on the Skyway gondola ride Sunday.

"Actually, I guess it was a few minutes," she added.

Nancy Post, a nursing coordinator at the hospital, said Ms. Miranda was undergoing tests for a possible fractured vertebrae.

"A lot of people thought it was part of the act," said Fort Lauderdale accountant Barry Szule, who saw Ms. Miranda hanging on to the gondola.

When she fell, she struck the roof of a building in Fantasyland before hitting the ground.

Disney officials said it was a "freak" accident.

The ride had been shut down and emptied of passengers during a Sunday morning rainshower when workers prepared to start it again.
