British Take Hundreds Of Prisoners During Assault Sixth Meeting In Year Confronting General Assembly

By The Associated Press British paratroopers captured 900 Argentine soldiers when they seized Goose Green in the undeclared Falkland Islands war, but their commander was killed in the assault, the British Defense Ministry announced Saturday.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The General Assembly meets Wednesday in its sixth session in a year — a meeting scheduled to adjust the budget but certain to attract national attention because of the Equal Rights Amendment.

state newspapers watching North Carolina on ERA.

And some suggest North Carolina's Legislature could make or break the issue.

"If we pass the thing, it'll give ERA a lot of momentum," Hackney observed. "If we defeat it, it'll certainly take some of the wind out of its sails."

North Carolina's Legislature has killed ERA in five previous sessions. It was the Senate in 1973, the House in 1975, the Senate in 1977 and a Senate committee in 1979. Last year there was no vote.

There will also be talk about high utility bills and freezing teacher's salaries — and because legislative primaries are only 28 days after the session convenes, probably a lot of posturing, too.

"There'll be a few campaign speeches on the floor of the House," House Speaker Liston Ramsey concedes. "Someone may offer an amendment to give everyone a 5 percent or 10 percent pay raise, but they probably will not present a means to pay for it."

Ramsey and Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green say they hope the session can be finished in two or three weeks. But the only practical deadline is the June 29 primary, for which legislators want some time to campaign.

Gov. Jim Hunt says he'll be pushing for three things in the session — his budget, limiting the fuel-adjustment law electric companies use to raise rates, and ratification of ERA.

National supporters of ERA are looking to North Carolina's Legislature to breathe life into their dying proposed amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

ERA needs ratification by three more states before the June 30 national deadline if it is to be successful, and North Carolina is one of three or four states where ERA supporters think they have a final chance.

As an indication of outside interest, it was a Pennsylvania feminist group that paid $12,000 for Louis Harris and Associates to conduct a survey of the state this month. The finding was two-to-one support for ERA.

Brent Hackney, deputy press secretary to Hunt, has been fielding a growing number of queries from television networks and outside newspapers watching North Carolina on ERA.

But Hunt is pushing hard for ratification this time, and although supporters don't claim to have enough votes yet, they appear to be making inroads in what was once seen as 28 sure "no" votes in the 50-member Senate.

At least three senators once opposed to it, Sens. J.J. Harrington, D-Bertie; R.C. Soles, D-Columbus; and Joe Palmer, D-Haywood, have said they were reconsidering.

"It's close. It's very close in the Senate," said Sen. Robert Jordan, D-Montgomery.

In the House, Ramsey says supporters are still seven or eight votes short of a majority. Ramsey is for ERA, but says he is doing "nothing more than just letting the membership know I think it's the right thing to do."

The session, beginning at noon, will be the third this year, after two special sessions devoted to redistricting. There were two other special sessions late last year, after the regular session adjourned in July.

Legislative rules limit the agenda to budget-related matters, bills that passed one chamber or the other last year, local bills and recommendations of study committees. ERA got on the agenda when it was recommended by a study panel.

Hunt earlier had vowed to push this time for an increase in the tax on beer and whiskey, with the money going to the highway system. His senior advisor, John A. Williams, says Hunt will still support the increase, "but we are not going to campaign for it."

Vietnamese To Return 4 More U.S. MIA Bodies

By DENNIS GRAY Associated Press Writer HANOI (AP) — In an emotional meeting Saturday, Vietnamese officials gave a group of American veterans the names of four American servicemen killed in the Vietnam War and said stories of live Americans still in Vietnam were untrue.

Ngô Minh, secretary of the Office for Seeking Information on Missing Persons, promised to return more remains to the United States at a later date.

The new information on dead American servicemen, including the four names, was provided at a three-hour meeting between nine representatives of the Vietnam Veterans of America.

In Washington, the Department of Defense duty spokesman, who asked that his name not be used, said, "We're looking into it. ... The Vietnamese have released inaccurate information in the past. We don't have enough information to confirm anything yet."

Minh told reporters the information was given to the veterans and the remains would be handed over to them at a later date because "they are the representatives of the American people in the correct sense of the word." He charged that "successive American administrations have continued to show a hostile attitude toward Vietnam."

Pope, Anglican Prelate Announce New Panel To Examine Differences

CANTERBURY, England (AP) — Pope John Paul II journeyed Saturday to this seat of British Christendom, symbol of common roots and nearly five centuries of bitter division, and embraced the head of the Anglican Church, prayed with him and pledged to work toward the reunion of Christians.

Welcomed by Runcie in Canterbury as a "beloved brother in Christ," the leader of the world's 760 million Roman Catholics shared hymns, prayers and Gospel readings with Runcie, spiritual leader of 65 million Anglicans worldwide, including 3 million U.S. Episcopalians.

After an unprecedented ecumenical service at soaring Canterbury Cathedral, the pontiff and Archbishop of Canterbury Robert Runcie announced plans for a new panel to examine doctrinal differences separating the Roman Catholic church from the Church of England, an issue which another panel recently studied for 10 years.

"On this first visit of a pope to Canterbury, I come to you in love," John Paul declared. After the service, the pontiff — a red cloak over his white robes — knelt motionless alongside Runcie in the Norman cathedral where, in 1170, soldiers of King Henry II murdered then-Archbishop of Canterbury Thomas Becket for his refusal to yield to the monarch's religious beliefs.

In London, about 1,000 Protestants held a service at Trafalgar Square to protest the pope's visit and demand a halt to the Christian unity movement. The 170-foot column below the statue of Admiral Horatio Nelson was draped with a banner saying "Time to Repent."

A shrine to St. Thomas was destroyed by Henry VIII, who broke with Rome in 1534 and made himself head of a new Church of England after then Pope Clement VII refused to annul Henry's marriage to Catherine of Aragon.

The Rev. David N. Samuel, general secretary of the Protestant Reformation Society, called on Britain to break diplomatic ties with the Vatican, which were restored last March.

The joint declaration by John Paul and Runcie on the second day of the pontiff's six-day visit here — the first ever by a reigning pope — said the commission will "recommend what practical steps will be necessary when, on the basis of our unity and faith, we are able to proceed to the restoration of full communion."

Chicod Creek Offers Sample Of Democracy

A decade ago tiny Chicod Creek was the focal point of a campaign by environmentalists to block channelization of small streams. The campaign took on a national character and Chicod Creek became a landmark case in ecological litigation.

Today, when one looks at the still-meandering creek, the thought immediately comes to mind: why Chicod Creek?

The answer, of course, is that Chicod Creek and the proposed channelization project were coincidental with the mushrooming drive to preserve that which was natural. Chicod was an ideal topic for such a campaign. It had swamps, other lo wlands, wildlife; it served otherwise only to collect the surface water from nearby farms. The channel project had been initiated by the farmers and the Soil Conservation Service in an effort to make the creek more beneficial to agriculture.

After years of debate, verbal and written, in the nation's bureaucracies and courts, a compromise came into being: snag the roots and fallen trees and clean out the channel but otherwise leave the creek pretty much alone, preserving the natural course it had developed through the lowlands.

The compromise, apparently, has been successful. Ecologists have preserved the swampland, wildlife still is in existence and the farmers now have a good waterway to drain their fields.

Testing, by court order, still lies ahead on water samples and wildlife populations. The preliminary findings are encouraging. Thus far, Chicod Creek has been a perfect demonstration of how democracy can work for the benefit of all, and do so peacefully.

Motorists' Decision On Paying The Cost Of Good Highways

There are again ominous signs in the future of highways. Highway Administrator Billy Rose says new construction will halt by July 1983 if new funding sources are not found.

Officials say that North Carolina faces a declining revenue base. The gasoline tax was increased by 3 cents in 1981 but other sources of revenue proposed by Gov. Hunt were not approved.

The situation is of major concern in our area since the improvements to U.S. 264 have top priority.

There is public resistance to gas tax increases, partly because of the general feeling against higher taxes and partly because of the soaring costs of energy.

It must be recognized, however, that gas taxes are, in effect, a user's fee for putting our vehicles on the highways. The funds collected go directly for construction and maintenance. Ultimately it is the motorist who must decide whether or not he wants to pay the costs of adequate highways.

Sunday Morning Notes

Computers, computers. They are great friends when they work and mortal enemies when they don't.

The Daily Reflector's became an enemy last weekend. It crashed. For those who don't know, that means the magnetic disk on which all our news is recorded was wiped out. There is a backup disk which was put into service. It crashed, too.

So our news staff returned to the typewriters, something we were comfortable with only a couple of years back. It wasn't so easy to return. Different codes had to be recalled to accommodate the scanner which reads the typewritten copy, and there was the additional problem of keeping up with all that paper copy.

The big problem, however, was that all the news we received from The Associated Press and United Press International was inaccessible since it now feeds into the computer. The teletypes and tape equipment of years past are long gone. That meant early morning trips to the Goldsboro News-Argus and one day's trip to the Washington Daily News when the Goldsboro paper had problems. To them we are thankful.

Most of our staff had typed for the scanner. Melvin Lang, however, came on the scene after the typewriters and scanner were abandoned.

He patiently accepted the instructions that only editing marks are made on copy with a red pen and one mark with a black pen would eliminate any word or sentence.

He scowled when told that a blue pen was needed to make corrections on the finished type.

"I'm having trouble keeping the black and red ones straight," he said. "I'm color blind."

As this is written we are back to video display terminals — television screens — and the colors of the pens we use don't make any difference. After several days of mixed type faces, due to the variations of type different newspapers use, The Daily Reflector now has its old familiar look.

Typewriters, as anyone who has seen an old newspaper movie knows, have long been associated with journalists.

The battered Remington or Royal typewriter was as much a part of the news room scene as the reporters themselves. The portables went with correspondents who were off to war with America's fighting men in World Wars I and II.

Later the manuals gave away to more modern electric and then they were gone, giving way to video display terminals.

As we returned briefly to typewriters, one writer complained, "This is like going back to the horse and buggy." How quickly we forget.

Now You See It, Now You Don't

RALEIGH (UPI) — Budget deliberations in the General Assembly at times resemble a shell game — items appear and disappear as fast as a pea under shells manipulated by a skilled carnival barker.

The "now you see it, now you don't" philosophy was evident last week when a special subcommittee of House and Senate budget leaders began work on a proposed $3.6 billion 1982-83 budget.

The recession has caused state revenues to lag during the current fiscal year and the trend is expected to continue into the new budget year beginning July 1.

Although the shortfall will not cause a deficit, it has forced sharp reductions in revenue projections and the budget at a time when lawmakers are confronted with the need to continue funding for about $200 million in budget items enacted last year and provide new funds for other programs.

The biggest part of the proposed budget is a pay freeze for state employees and teachers, which is expected to save the state $93 million a year. Gov. James B. Hunt Jr. proposed the freeze and legislative budget leaders endorsed it.

The savings will allow continuation of a 5 percent pay raise that went into effect for all state workers in January, but is scheduled to expire June 30 unless renewed by the Legislature.

The budget subcommittee received Hunt's budget proposal and a separate package put together by House and Senate leaders, including the Appropriations and Base Budget chairmen, the speaker, the lieutenant governor and other influential lawmakers.

The shell game started when the budget subcommittee began considering the recommendations to come up with a package for presentation to the full Appropriations Committee.

Sen. Russell Walker, D-Randolph, discovered legislative leaders had not recommended new funds for the North Carolina Zoo, although the governor proposed $488,000 in new funds for the facility, located in Walker's home county.

Additional funds are needed to operate the zoo, Walker said. He cited a newly completed aviary which is expensive to operate because of the climate controls needed for the jungle birds housed in the facility.

After Walker persuaded the committee to add $400,000 for the zoo, someone asked him how much land the zoo has.

"Fourteen hundred acres and we (Randolph County residents) gave it to them," Walker said.

"And we're buying it back fast," said Rep. William Watkins, D-Granville, the House Appropriations Chairman.

Following Walker's example, Rep. Ruth Cook, D-Wake, tried to convince the panel to recommend increased support for the North Carolina Symphony. The governor proposed a $570,000 increase but budget leaders recommended no money.

Mrs. Cook argued the Villain

WASHINGTON (AP) — Every drama needs a villain. So President Reagan has his Tip O'Neill. And the speaker of the House has the president.

Their mutual denunciation society has enlivened, if not enlightened, the debate over who's at fault for the recession, high interest rates and about everything else that has gone wrong.

Reagan blames the Democratic half of Congress as personified by O'Neill, representing big spending, big taxes and politics as usual.

O'Neill blames Reagan, and seeks to cast him as the ultimate Republican elitist, who doesn't care about ordinary people because he doesn't know any.

Reagan regularly describes the speaker as a demagogue. O'Neill has called the president a tightwad, a reincarnation of Herbert Hoover, and a man so ill-informed that he can't even carry on a conversation about the federal budget.

But Reagan certainly can give speeches about the budget, and about O'Neill. "We did our best to compromise," the president said in Los Angeles the other night. "Instead of compromise, Tip wanted surrender. Instead of progress, he wanted to cancel the election of 1980."

That was relatively tame. The day before, Reagan had accused O'Neill of "sheer political demagoguery" for criticizing proposed cuts in the Medicare budget.

Details do not inhibit the rhetoric. On Monday, Reagan was told that O'Neill had accused him of breaking a promise by supporting a budget that would cut Medicare funds, after saying on Feb. 18, 1981, that they would not be cut.

The Republican budget would cut Medicare spending by $23.3 billion over the next three years. O'Neill didn't mention it, but the budget he advocates would cut spending $9.4 billion during the same period.

Advocates of both budgets argue that the cuts wouldn't reduce medical care for the elderly but would come instead in reduced payments to the health care industry. It isn't clear how that works.

Reagan didn't say. Instead, he denounced O'Neill.

"I think it is very obvious after last year and this year that the speaker is obsessed with the idea of trying to create a Social Security issue for the coming election," the president said. "And I think that's pretty irresponsible with the program now that is actually out of balance..."

Not all Republicans have been so mild in their comments on O'Neill's performance. Richard Richards, the GOP chairman, accused the speaker of trying to sabotage economic recovery for the Democratic political purposes.

"The only recourse left open to the House speaker is to try almost singlehandedly to stop economic recovery dead in its tracks by any stalling or spoiling maneuver possible," Richards said. "The recent history of budget negotiations serves as proof."

O'Neill has been polishing his act for a year, too. He's accused Reagan of "the worst economic mismanagement since the days of Herbert Hoover," called the administration tax cuts a harebrained scheme, questioned the president's grasp of the budget and described him as a Scrooge.

The word war is into its second year, with periodic breaks for a gesture or an expression of respect, and an assurance that the dispute is a matter of political philosophies, nothing personal.

There haven't been any of those lately. When Gerald R. Ford was president, he and O'Neill, longtime House colleagues, would argue politics and policies, then put it all aside to go out for a game of golf.

Reagan isn't a golfer, which may be just as well. Given the vehemence of his dispute with the speaker, they might be at each other with sand wedges before they'd finished the first hole.

Who Needs Enemies With These Friends

WASHINGTON — An English proverb that dates from the 15th century historically has been the prayer of every man in public life: "God save me from my friends; I can take care of my own enemies." On your knees, Ronald Reagan! Let this fervent prayer be wafted up to heaven.

Consider, if you please, a chain of recent events. There was Richard Allen, the national security adviser, who took custody of a thousand dollars in cash from Japanese journalists as a little thank-you for arranging an interview with Nancy Reagan. Allen stashed the 10 $100 bills in a safe and forgot about them.

A couple of weeks ago came the disclosure that William French Smith, the president's dear friend, now the attorney general, had invested heavily in two "adventurous" tax shelters. By putting up $16,500, Mr. Smith was able to deduct $66,000 from his 1981 income taxes. If the deal is legal, the gentleman will knock down $109,000 more in the future.

The president has flocks of wealthy friends. Many of them insisted last year on giving him presents that had to be reported — silver picture frames, cowboy boots, a brass clock, a gaudy belt buckle. The list provided corals for the pugon assaults of editorial cartoonists. With friends like these...

An extended list of these buddy blessings would include the loquaciousness of David Stockman, the budget director, and the associations of Ray Donovan, the secretary of labor. A word or two might be said of Mrs. Reagan's dear friends in the dressmaking and jewelry industries. There was the little matter of the parties thrown in public buildings by James Watt, the secretary of the interior.

If this is any solace to Mr. Reagan — and probably it isn't — we may note that his discomfort is by no means unique. Jimmy Carter, poor fellow, had to bear the burdens — let us think — of Brother Billy and Bert Lance. Not to mention a swinging top assistant and a generous White House doctor. Mr. Carter also had a welfare secretary whose finely honed sense of welfare began with his own official chef. Harry Truman had problems with his cronies.

To the editor:
There is little doubt that the majority of voters in North Carolina support the Equal Rights Amendment considering, not just the so-called "decision makers" polled in the W.H. Long Poll, but with every voter 18 or older having a chance of being included, as was done by the Louis Harris Poll, which showed North Carolina voters favored the Equal Rights Amendment by 61 percent while 30 percent opposed it.

The Harris Poll gave representation to all women workers, who account for 40 percent of the nation's work force, but are paid only 71 percent as much for identical work as the male workers. Obviously, not many of these workers were privileged to be included as "decision makers," or this injustice would not exist.

When Sen. John Glenn called for ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment, while addressing over 3,000 voters from every county in North Carolina at the Jefferson-Jackson Rally April 24, he received more applause than at any other time during his speech.

The 1st Congressional District Convention of more than 300 delegates present from its 21 counties voted on a resolution submitted by the Resolution Committee, calling for the Legislature to ratify the Equal Rights Amendment when it convenes in June. Six delegates spoke in favor of the Amendment. Only one, who said he opposed it because the Old Testament called for supremacy of man over woman, spoke against it. The resolution was adopted overwhelmingly by voice vote.

Former Presidents Carter and Ford and their wives, Gov. Hunt and Carolyn, Senator Morgan and Katie, Walter Mondale, Betty McCain, Ted Kennedy, Liston Ramsey, Betty Speir and many others who can be counted on in the struggle for human rights are working to eliminate the injustices which ratification of the ERA will correct.

The only solution to equal rights for all is the U.S. Constitution, with the backing of the federal government for its enforcement.

To the editor:
The following is the complete text of the Equal Rights Amendment:

"Section 1. Equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex.

Section 2. The Congress shall have the power to enforce, by appropriate legislation, the provisions of this article.

Section 3. This amendment shall take effect two years after the date of ratification."

I find it difficult to imagine how any legislator could consider anything other than ratification of ERA.

According to a recent Harris Poll, North Carolinians support the Equal Rights Amendment by a margin of 2 to 1. If our legislators are doing their jobs (which are to represent their constituents), then they will vote to ratify the ERA in North Carolina and, by doing so, will vote "yes" to equal rights for all men and women.

Persons who are interested in helping work for ratification of ERA should call 756-0338 or 752-4440 for information. Thank you.

To the editor:
Since its inception, the United States has been an experiment in democracy and human rights. This experiment is that of which we are most proud and continues to provide underlying and unifying direction for us as a nation.

The loftiest goal of our form of representative government, and that which sets us above and apart, is not justice under the law but the justness of our laws.

The paramount responsibility of those elected to formulate and enact our laws is to assure that all adult citizens are explicitly guaranteed equal rights within those laws. Such guarantees allow our executive and judicial branches of government to guarantee those rights in practice.

For us to hold differing views about what are appropriate roles for women is a right we all have as citizens. To express our views to influence others through persuasive reasoning is another important individual right.

However, to achieve any objective by denying explicit guarantees of equal legal and political rights for women is foreign to that which we stand for as a people.

I go by many names
Sailor, Marine, Pilot, Doughboy.
In the end they all mean the same,
I am an American soldier.

Many times I have been outgunned and outmanned
But I never lost faith or gave up
And I prevailed because
I am an American soldier.

I have fought in many colored uniforms:
Revolutionary rag-tag, khaki, blue, green and Once in gray when my brother and I fought but No matter what color I wear, I wear it proudly because
I am an American soldier.

I have fought in many places. Cowpens,
San Juan Hill, Coral Sea, In the air above Korea, Ke Sahn.
They are all the same because the job had to be done.
And I am proud to do the job because
I am an American soldier.

I have returned sometimes able-bodied, sometimes on one leg
Sometimes with no arms, and yes, sometimes in a casket.
But no matter how I came home, I came home proud because
I am an American soldier.

All that is ours as Americans has Been bought and paid for with my blood
I am an American soldier.

God Bless America and Her Soldiers.

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — While daily awaiting a new surge of leftist terrorism, El Salvador's government is launching a peace offensive aimed at talking guerrillas into giving up, and, in time, perhaps negotiating with them.

Newly-elected President Alvaro Magana is about to select a "peace committee" aimed at "pacification" — offering amnesty now and perhaps negotiations later to the guerrillas. Simultaneously, the army is about to offer money in return for arms turned in to the government.

Although such schemes are uncomfortable reminiscent of the Vietnam War's many pacification plans, they reflect the optimistic mood prevailing here since Salvadorans braved threats and bullets to vote in the March 28 election. El Salvador may never be truly pacified so long as Nicaragua remains a gun-running, Marxist-Leninist state, but the Salvadoran guerrillas could be sufficiently

WASHINGTON — There is no way to verify whether the invitations are lost in the mail or were never written in the first place. But it looks as though, once again, we won't deliver a commencement address to a single Class of 1982.

Happily, no one loses under this recurring arrangement. While graduates won't have to pretend to listen to us, we won't have to disguise ourselves as wise elders. We were, of course, sad to hear that Illinois' Eureka College opted for alumnus Ronald Reagan instead of us (although hearing the president speak on arms control is a little like listening to Arnold Schwarzenegger talk on sensitivity training).

Since so many seniors, however, will be lectured on "how to change the world" by those very folks who are messing it up, we decided to take steps of our own. After four years of repetitive academic fare, seniors deserve a break. Herewith, then, we're introducing the "Here and Now Speakers' Agency," an ad hoc firm offering an alternative to the traditionally oxymoronic nonsense everyone dreads. Pending approval of our clients, here are some excerpts from our newly-published catalogue:

Howard Putnam — Chairman and chief executive of Braniff International Airlines. In a speech entitled "Free To Lose," the CEO offers words of wisdom to interested students about the virtues of a deregulated, unfettered market economy. Fee: 1,000 packets of smoked almonds.

Ralph Lauren — Mr. Roughwear has an important pointer for the social-conscious seniors bound for the Big Apple: "Say, 'see you later, alligator' if you want to be noticed on Madison Avenue next year." Lauren is particularly suitable for Western colleges in dusty settings. Note: Client insists on caps and gowns.

Robert Young — Known to many as Marcus Welby, M.D., this popular father figure examines the neuroses of an unemployable class. Excerpt: "Hey now, why are my favorite kids so jittery all the time?" Guaranteed to calm nerves, especially parents'. Coffee reception will follow.

Mariel Hemingway — The flexible actress, in a speech entitled "a Farewell To Dorms," suggests that college athletes and drama students hold the key to getting America back on the fast track. "A riveting performance" — The New Yorker.

Lenny Skutnik — Casting aside his noted disdain of the media, the Air Florida crash hero advises striving celebrities that a little fame means a lot of misery. Agent's note: Skutnik requires time-and-a-half should he unexpectedly find himself in a double bill with First Lady Nancy Reagan.

Orlando Jose Tardencillas Espinoza — Recounting his own experiences as a double-crossing informant for the U.S. State Department, the Nicaraguan has some timely tips for students contemplating careers in the Foreign Service. Hold all questions about communist subversion in El Salvador, please.

Squadron Charlie Rapid Deployment Force — In full battle dress, these aerial acrobats offer encouraging words to aspiring doctors interested in serving their country. Title: "Medical Careers in the Army: More Bones To Pick Than Ever." No fee (they'll jump at anything). Already slated for the University of Colorado at Parachute, when it opens.

The Go Go's — Currently topping the rock-and-roll charts with their album, "Beauty and the Beat," the queens of college she-shenness explain how one doesn't need to be a musical genius to set trends and make a mint before graduate school.

Title: "We're Pretty Neat." Fee: $8.99 list; $5.99 discount.

The NBC Peacock — In an address entitled "Birds Like Us," this colorful animal predicts that network counterparts will, having cancelled America's favorite sitcoms, cook their own geese. Fee: better seeds for the Nielsens.

Jodie Foster — The undergraduate actress rises to the occasion in a speech refuting recent reports that television breeds violence in young Americans. Note: Ms. Foster's remarks are available on videotape only.

American Telephone and Telegraph — The mammoth multinational Ma denounces the promiscuous and indiscriminate behavior of today's young in a diatribe entitled: "The Social Costs of Reaching Out and Touching Someone." By order of a federal court, this speech is not available to local community colleges. Fee: $25.00 for the first three minutes.

John McEnroe — The once-and-future tennis ace, hobbled by a debilitating ankle injury, unmasks the secrets of the pro circuit with a special preview of Wimbledon fortnight. Title: "It's Not My Fault."

Of course, we don't expect a flood of contracts in next week's mail. (This is just as well. Most of our wished for clients will have nothing to do with us.)

But if colleges and universities were more sensitive to the average graduate's disdain for academics and politicians, they might choose their graduation speakers more creatively. As is, too many schools allow their well-appointed speakers to use the platform to make headlines or intone hollow truisms that have little meaning 24 hours later. A stodgy speaker may be well known, but he or she can make for an awful few hours.

George Gallup Poll

PRINCETON, N.J. — To an unusual degree, President Reagan must rely mainly on solid bedrock support from his own party members to uphold his leadership and the programs he is trying to put into place. For while he has intensely loyal Republican support, Reagan enjoys less backing from Democrats than did either of his two Republican predecessors, Gerald Ford and Richard Nixon, at comparable periods in their presidencies.

Reagan's standing with the American people has plummeted in the last year, from 67 percent approval last April to 44 percent today — a drop of 23 percentage points. Among Republican voters, however, Reagan's job performance rating slid merely six points, from 87 percent approval in 1981 to 81 percent at present. In the same period approval of Reagan's stewardship by Democrats and independents fell 28 and 24 points, respectively.

Examination of the records of President Reagan's three immediate predecessors at comparable points in their administrations reveals Reagan's political support to be much more restricted to members of his own party, with less rival party support than were those of Presidents Carter, Ford and Nixon.

The main drawback to Reagan's narrow support base, of course, lies in the numerical minority of Republican party members. In the current survey, 26 percent of respondents claim affiliation with the Republican Party while 45 percent say they are Democrats and 29 percent independents.

Jimmy Carter was accorded a similarly low approval rating from rival (Republican) party members but had for less backing from his own party's rank-and-file (56 percent for Carter to 81 percent for Reagan). Gerald Ford enjoyed a broader base than Reagan, with somewhat greater support from Democrats but less from Republicans.

Richard Nixon, who had the highest overall approval score (56 percent), had strong backing from his own and from rival party members. (In the case of each of the four men, independent's assessment of their presidencies stood at or near the national norms.)

The following table shows the approval scores for each of the four most recent presidents approximately 15 months after they took office.

	Presidential Approval Ratings — 15 Months In Office (Percent approval)

GOP More Supportive Of Specific Programs
President Reagan's fellow Republicans also are more steadfast in their assessment of his handling of specific problems. As shown in the table below, there has been for less GOP defection in the past year than there has been by Democrats and independents. The loss of approval has been particularly acute on the president's handling of the economy in general and, specifically, on inflation and unemployment.

The declines in approval of Reagan's handling of foreign policy, national defense and our relations with the Soviet Union have been less severe and, in the case of the first two, have occurred about equally among Republicans, Democrats and independents.

The following question is asked to measure public attitudes toward president's general performance in office:
"Do you approve or disapprove of the way (name of incumbent) is handling his job as president?"

These questions have been asked about Reagan's handling of specific problems:

"Now let me ask you about specific foreign and domestic problems. As I read off each problem, one at a time, would tell me whether you approve or disapprove of the way President Reagan is handling that problem? Economic conditions in this country? Inflation? Unemployment? National defense? Foreign policy? Relations with the Soviet Union?"

Noel Yancey An Instructor Held In Awe

When I was a student at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill back in the early 30s, Dr. Archibald Henderson was one of a handful of faculty members the students regarded with genuine awe. Henderson, who headed the math department, was not only the official biographer of George Bernard Shaw, but was credited with being one of the few Americans who understood Einstein's theory of relativity.

Henderson not only counted Shaw and Albert Einstein among his friends, but the list also included Mark Twain, Auguste Rodin, Earl Bertrand Russell, H.G. Wells, William Butler Yeats and Carl Sandburg.

On the UNC campus, where he was on the faculty for 49 years until his retirement in 1948, Henderson was known as a courtly, gregarious person of unflagging wit. He carried the reputation with him on his frequent, far-ranging travels. He was a polished speaker and an enthusiast in history and drama as well as mathematics.

Henderson's association with Shaw was born in a flash of youthful daring after he attended a performance of "You Never Can Tell." Stimulated by the drama, Henderson made two decisions: Shaw was a genius and he was going to be his biographer. He wrote Shaw and told him so.

The ebullient Irish playwright responded with a postcard request for a photograph. After sending the photo, Henderson received a letter from Shaw saying, "You look like the man who can do the job." Henderson recalled later that he understood the cryptic remark only after he arrived in London for talks with Shaw, and the playwright was quoted in news interviews as saying it would take "a truly desperate character" to write his life.

Over a 45-year span, Henderson produced three full-scale biographies of the playwright. Henderson told of his first encounter with humorist-author Mark Twain to show that he could enjoy a laugh at his own expense. It was on a crossing of the Atlantic in 1907. From the center of a crowd, Twain remarked to Henderson he had seen an article by him in a magazine.

"I read it thoroughly; and to tell the naked truth, I never saw in such small compass so many words I had never seen before. It's only possible rival is the dictionary," Twain added. Henderson often said later that in addition to his own embarrassment, he learned a valuable lesson. He resolved to use shorter and simpler words in his writing.

Henderson's command of words may have been inherited from the long line of lawyers and judges he joined when he was born in Salisbury in 1878. Family background may also have supplied his bent for mathematics: an uncle, Maj. William Cain, preceded Henderson as head of the UNC math department. Henderson died in 1964 at the age of 86.

James Gerstenzang White House Potpourri

WASHINGTON (AP) — Is the White House sinking? That was the key question last week as a team from the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's Geodetic Survey snooped around the executive mansion, making a quadrennial study to determine whether the White House and its grounds are subsiding.

In 1978, the last time the survey was performed, it was determined that the southwest corner had sunk 2 millimeters — 0.0788 inches — since 1955. That was when the first such study was carried out after the White House reconstruction was completed in 1952.

"There are no reasons to think there is any problem," said Rex Scouten, the White House chief usher, whose office requested the survey.

Bean sprouts, a gift to American salads from the State of California, are an unfamiliar item on the presidential table. Or so it would seem from a conversation overheard between President Reagan and his wife.

The two were seated at the head table of a black-tie dinner a few weeks ago. The salad featured sprouts and avocados.

The president took a look at it and leaned over to his wife, Nancy.

"Honey, what is this shredded wheat?" he asked, referring to the skinny green shoots in his bowl, and thereby betraying his roots in Illinois, not California.

"Ronnie, those are bean sprouts," the first lady replied. "We have them in California all the time."

When the president and King Hassan II of Morocco went horseback riding last week, the president chose a 4,500-acre estate belonging to J. Willard Marriott Sr. about 60 miles from Washington on the edge of the Blue Ridge Mountains.

The ride along the Rappahannock River in Fauquier County, Va., took the president and king over rolling meadows where sheep and cattle graze.

The land ownership was traced by the Marriott family back to Charles I, who ruled England at the start of the 17th century.

Mrs. Marriott said in a brochure about the property that her husband purchased it about 30 years ago. For nearly half a century, the land has been intended as a refuge from war.

demoralized to win a measure of peace here if the opportunity is seized.

Accordingly, Dr. Magana's peace committee is an attempt to use the current pause in violence for an initiative aimed at preventing total communication of Central America. High government officials believe the guerrillas, regrouping the last several weeks after their failure to disrupt the election, soon will begin a new wave of terrorism. Magana confirmed this, telling us: "I have the impression that they have to do something soon."

In an interview at the presidential palace, Magana revealed for the first time "my own idea" of a committee composed of representatives of the Catholic Church, the Red Cross and two political parties — one unnamed minor party and, most significantly, the dominant conservative party: Maj. Roberto D'Aubuisson's National Republican Alliance (ARENA).

The president wants

D'Aubuisson himself to serve on the committee to start "a real process of pacification." That would give conservative coloration not only to offering amnesty to individuals but to broader negotiations that Magana and the government have barred themselves from initiating.

Could the peace committee really turn from mere amnesty to full-scale negotiations? "If they decide that something has to be done," Magana replied. "In case it is needed, they could make the contact." The president twice emphasized "they," as contrasted to "me." Roberto D'Aubuisson, the fire-eating anti-communist, and not Alvaro Magana, the urbane international technocrat, would be making the overtures.

The arms-buying plan is strictly a project of the army high command, which often functions independently of the government.

Writing Constitution For D.C. 'Statehood'

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of the delegates writing a constitution for the District of Columbia, should it become the 51st state, proposed that the new jurisdiction be called "Utopia."

Although the name "Utopia" was ultimately rejected, the prospects for statehood — and for putting that constitution to use — still appeared somewhat idealistic.

The constitution — an unorthodox mix reflecting the diversity of the 45 delegates who drafted it — received final approval Saturday. The vote was 36-2 with four abstentions.

However, the plan still faces the city's voters this fall, and the delegates want it to be distributed to the electorate in English, Spanish, Chinese and Braille.

Should it pass, both houses of Congress then have to give their consent by a simple majority for Washington, D.C., to become a state.

But some backers of the proposal fear that members of Congress — many already skeptical of making the district a state — would be even more put off by the document's provisions.

Iran Says Forces Raided Across Frontier

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iran said its forces raided and burned an Iraqi military base across the Shatt al-Arab waterway separating the two nations Saturday and demolished other enemy strongholds "beyond the border" at the southern end of the Persian Gulf.

Iraq said its air force jets blasted Iranian troop concentrations in the foothills of the Zagros Mountains in Iran's western highlands in several bombing sorties at the northern end of the 300-mile warfront.

The claims were made in military communiques reported by the official news agencies of the two warring Moslem nations following increased public threats by Iranian leaders that their forces would invade Iraq to overthrow or capture Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

Reliable Syrian sources, however, said that Iran's religious and political leader, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, had assured Syrian President Hafez Assad that his troops would stop at the international border with Iraq once they retake the remaining Iraqi-held salients in the west and southwest of Iran.

Iran's joint chiefs of staff said 20 Iraqi troops were killed or wounded in the raid across the waterway that "set ablaze an enemy base beyond the Shatt al-Arab and halted movement of the Iraqis on the Fao-Basra highway."

Basra, Iraq's second largest city after the capital of Baghdad, is located on the eastern coast of the estuary opposite Iran's port of Khorramshahr, 416 miles southwest of Tehran and 260 miles southeast of Baghdad.

Fao was Iraq's main oil shipping terminal before it was devastated by the Iranian navy and air force in the early stages of the conflict, halting Iraq's oil exports from the Persian Gulf.

The Tehran communique did not say how the attack was mounted across the 120-mile waterway, but the implication was that naval commandos staged a hit-and-run raid.

Iraq, meanwhile, said 14 Iranians and five Iraqis were killed in action north of Khorramshahr in the oil-rich province of Khuzistan.

Iranian forces drove the Iraqis out of Khorramshahr and back to their border last Monday in Iran's biggest battlefield victory since the war broke out on the gulf's northern flank Sept. 22, 1980 when Iraq invaded Iran to gain control of the Shatt al-Arab.

Syrian sources in Damascus said President Assad promptly relayed Iran's assurances it would not invade Iraq to Saudi Arabia and other oil-rich Arab nations which fear Iran will export its fundamentalist revolution to the gulf region.

Possible solutions to the war were reviewed during a four-hour stop in Cairo by French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson and Egypt's Minister of State for Foreign Affairs Butros Ghali. Cheysson then flew on to Saudi Arabia.

The government-influenced media in Saudi Arabia and Kuwait, the two largest oil exporters in the gulf region, have been campaigning for Egypt's return to the Arab fold as a military counterweight to Iran in the wake of Iraq's defeat in Khorramshahr.

Syria is Persian Iran's staunchest Arab supporter in the 20-month-old border war. Most other Arab countries back Iraq, an Arab state. Saudi Arabia and Kuwait have given Iraq an estimated $30 billion in aid to defeat Iran.

Western diplomats in Damascus said shortly before Iran retook Khuzistan's port city of Khorramshahr from Iraq last Monday that they had noticed an upsurge in the arms delivered to Iran via Syria. Assad's government, however, officially denied sending weapons from its own Soviet-supplied arsenal to Iran.

Syria and Iraq are governed by rival factions of the socialist Baath Party that have long been feuding over ideology, politics and influence in the Arab world.

The latest Iranian threat of invasion was made by Iran's U.N. Ambassador Said Rajaei-Khorassani Friday. He said Iranian forces were prepared, if necessary, to storm across the border to eliminate Iraqi artillery positions and march on Baghdad to topple Hussein's regime.

Since the conquest of Khorramshahr, the last major Iranian city held by the Iraqis, Iran made the removal of Hussein and his Baath Party a precondition for a negotiated settlement.

Rulings Prove Setback On Drug Paraphernalia

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court has dealt three strikes against challengers to North Carolina's drug-paraphernalia law, state officials say.

The court has refused to declare as unconstitutional the drug-paraphernalia laws of two other states and one town. The laws govern the possession and sale of items like pipes and rolling papers that can be used with illegal drugs.

"I'd say it has taken the wind out of their sails," said Daniel C. Higgins, associate state attorney general. "The court has now held in favor of the law's constitutionality for the third time in two months."

Last week, the Supreme Court ruled on a Parma, Ohio, ordinance, which the 6th Circuit Court of Appeals had struck down as unconstitutional. The Supreme Court ordered that the case be returned to the appeals court for additional review and judgment.

In March, the Supreme Court upheld two other appellate-court rulings, which said that drug-paraphernalia laws in Illinois and Nebraska are valid and constitutional.

"The effect of the rulings is to add enormous weight to our position, because our statute is based on the same (1979) model act prepared by the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration," Higgins said.

Two civil suits in Wake Superior Court have challenged the constitutionality of the state law, which became effective Oct. 1, setting a fine of up to $500 and a one-year prison sentence for convictions.

Since then, one of the suits, brought by Rainbow Distributing Co. of Durham, has been dismissed. The attorney in the other suit, William W. Webb of Raleigh, said this week he is considering dropping the suit in light of the recent Supreme Court rulings.

Webb, representing Atlantic Tobacco Co. of Raleigh and Adams Apple Distributing Co. of Chicago, said the court decisions have indirectly clarified North Carolina's law.

"We're simply saying that a cigarette rolling paper is not drug paraphernalia unless it's used with hashish, marijuana or other drugs, and I feel the court has recognized this," he said.

"We're talking about innocuously packaged, white cigarette rolling papers, and I feel that the state attorney general's office is in accord with us now," Webb said. "With this, I'm inclined to dismiss our action, if my clients agree."

Daniel R. Flebotte of Durham, attorney for Rainbow Distributing Co., is challenging another aspect of the law — whether it can be enforced. The test case involves Robert Hocutt, a former Raleigh drug-paraphernalia shop operator who was arrested in October and is scheduled for trial next month.

Flebotte said the state law, "if applied to the 1920s and Prohibition ... would have been the equivalent of outlawing yeast and sugar to ensure that alcohol isn't produced."

Flebotte said the case involves the difference between undercover officers buying drugs and buying paraphernalia.

"The key to this law is the proof of intent — that is, whether the seller had knowledge that the buyer intended to use the product with an illegal drug," he said. "We're saying that if this law is going to be enforced, they are going to have to develop alternative enforcement techniques."

Equivalency Certificate

KINSTON — Twenty-three adults completed their requirements for the high school equivalency certificate through the General Educational Tests at Lenior Community College and the Greene County extension unit in May, according to Learning Laboratory Director Claude L. Barrett Jr.

Those who qualified at the Greene County unit included Barbara W. Beamon of Rt. 2, Snow Hill; Billy W. Mooring of Rt. 4, Snow Hill; Allen R. Ormond of Hookerton; and Anthony L. Vines of Maury.

Among those who qualified on the LCC campus are Johnnie J. Bratten and Paul J. Dawson, both of Rt. 3, Grifton.

The next testing dates are June 10 at the Learning Laboratory on campus and June 24 at the Greene County extension unit.

Sensitive Items Found In Technology Exports

By MATT YANCEY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The government has seized more than $23 million in defense-related strategic materials and technology, much of it bound for Soviet bloc countries, the Customs Service said Saturday.

Customs Commissioner William Von Raab said more than 350 shipments of aircraft parts, communications equipment, laser systems, computers, military equipment, semiconductors and electronic navigation systems have been seized under a program code-named "Operation Exodus."

The operation began six months ago after the Reagan administration began re-evaluating U.S. trade policies in the wake of intelligence information indicating that the Soviet Union has used Western technology to upgrade its military.

Special teams of customs inspectors, FBI agents, intelligence officials and Border Patrol officers were set up at targeted air and seaports to review documents accompanying outgoing shipments and search certain shipments.

The first prosecution resulting from the operation came in February when a grand jury in Massachusetts returned a 30-count indictment charging a British citizen, Brian A. Moller-Butchers, and Paul C. Carlson of Bridgewater, Mass., with falsifying customs documents.

Moller-Butchers and Carlson were accused of using their respective companies, Modern Equipment Services and C.O.

Manufacturing Co., both of Brockton, Mass., in attempting to violate export control laws.

The Customs Service said shipments from the two companies were destined for Eastern European countries and contained a Fairchild Sentry VII integrated circuit tester and other sophisticated equipment valued at $500,000.

Customs officers seized the shipments at Logan International Airport in Boston and at John F. Kennedy International Airport in New York before they could be exported, Von Raab said.

In March, customs agents seized a shipment of computers and computer parts worth about $10,000 after American Electronic Supply Inc. of Solon, Ohio, tried to ship it to a West German company suspected of forwarding similar shipments to Soviet bloc countries, the agency charged.

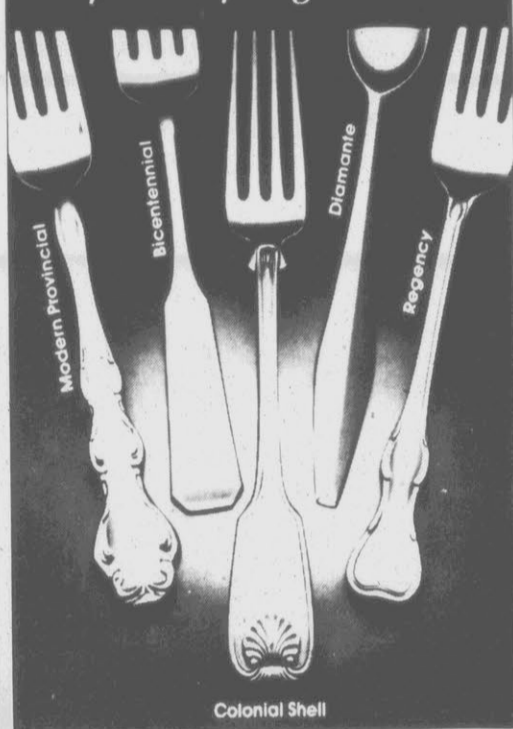

Customs officials said that during an examination of the shipment and accompanying documents, officials learned that it lacked valid export licenses. American Electronic Supply also was charged with violating U.S. export control laws.

Since then, officials said, they have learned that American Electronic Supply had made at least 17 similar shipments to a West German company suspected of diverting U.S. electronic equipment to Soviet bloc countries.

Last month, Turbine Alloy Co. of Washington, N.J., was charged with violating federal laws in attempting to export 32 J-65 jet turbine engines to Argentina.

Klan Decline In North Carolina

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Membership in the Ku Klux Klan in North Carolina and the nation is declining, officials of civil rights groups say.

"According to the information we're receiving, the Klans are not thriving, and their hopes for growth have been frustrated," said Irwin Suall, a Klan expert with the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith.

Less than three years ago, many experts were saying the Ku Klux Klan was on the rise. Klansmen in North Carolina gained national attention on Nov. 3, 1979, when Klansmen and Nazis were involved in a clash in Greensboro that killed five Communist Workers Party demonstrators.

But authorities say many Klan leaders are losing support or dropping out of sight, perhaps because of recent state and federal prosecution of members in firebombing and shooting cases, less media attention and the country's recent swing to more conservative politics.

A newsletter called Klanwatch, published by the National Anti-Klan Network, said in April that defections and sliding membership have plagued the national Klan movement. But it reported that Klan recruitment has intensified in southern Georgia.

The network includes the NAACP and other civil rights, labor and religious groups.

Authorities in Meriden, Conn., Decatur, Ala., and Oceanside, Calif. — sites of confrontations involving the Klan in the last three years — say their towns are quiet now.

David Duke of Metairie, La., led the Knights of the KKK — the smaller of two national Klan groups — from the mid-1970s until about a year ago.

In highly publicized visits to Charlotte, Winston-Salem and cities in a dozen other states, Duke campaigned for his "New Klan" and the politics of "white rights."

But Duke, who now leads the National Association for the Advancement of White People, said the campaign didn't work.

"As long as you are in the Klan, you're fighting a stereotype," he said. "People don't listen to you."

Meanwhile, Bill Wilkinson of Denham, La., is having trouble finding new members for his Invisible Empire, Knights of the KKK, said Suall.

"Wilkinson is still beating the bushes, but getting fewer recruits and less attention from the media," Suall said. "Business is not good, and he's lost virtually his entire Alabama organization."

In North Carolina, burning crosses still occasionally light the sky over the western Piedmont, but the focus of the state's Klansmen is on Winston-Salem and the federal grand jury considering possible civil rights violations in the 1979 Greensboro shootings.

Six Klansmen and Nazis were acquitted of state murder charges in the shootings, which occurred during a CWP "Death to the Klan" rally.

Since March, the grand jurors have been hearing testimony of CWP members. On Wednesday, they will begin hearing Klan members' versions of what happened.

The Klan in North Carolina is split into factions with a total membership of less than 500, according to 1981 Anti-Defamation League figures.

Of the three North Carolina Klan factions active before the Greensboro shootings, one is defunct and two hold occasional rallies.

Vernon Logan of Winston-Salem was the state organizer for the Knights of the KKK in 1979, but since has quit the Klan.

"It's splintered into so many factions, it takes away all your energy just to stay away from them," said Logan, now a candidate for the Forsyth County Board of Commissioners. "I thought I could get more accomplished on the outside."

Klan leader Joe Grady's White Knights of Liberty, also of Forsyth County, held two rallies last year, but Grady won't release membership figures.

Members of the Gaston

County-based Invisible Empire (not affiliated with Wilkinson's group) participated in the 1979 Greensboro confrontation.

The faction, led by Virgil Griffin, recently held several rallies in the western Piedmont region. The average showing was 25 people.

Drunk Drivers Hearing Here

The Governor's Task Force on Drunken Driving will hold a public hearing on the driving under the influence problem in North Carolina at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the Superior Courtroom of the Pitt County Courthouse.

Reagan Renews Budget Attack On Democrats

By MAUREEN SANINI
Associated Press Writer
SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan renewed his attack Saturday on the House Democratic leadership for playing politics with the "ridiculous procedure we have misnamed the budget process."

he endorsed while "the majority leadership of the House of Representatives preferred to play politics." "In a wild life or six days, they battled over which of a half a dozen or so budgets we should have plus 68 amendments and then came up empty. They will now recess for a vacation and come back to start all over again."

Reagan also criticized Congress for not even considering the budget he submitted in February after four months work.

"The Congress simply ignored it," he lamented. "Nothing in our federal government is more in need of an overhaul than the ridiculous procedure we have misnamed the budget process."

Bumpers said Reagan's original budget, which called for deep spending cuts in domestic programs, great increases in defense spending and a deficit of nearly $100 billion, was ignored because "his own party had already unanimously repudiated it."

And he called on the president to "acknowledge impending disaster ... all the rhetoric in the world will not diminish this human misery that now increases daily. Only a decisive change of heart by the president can do that."

But there was no sign the president was willing to do that. Deputy White House Press Secretary Larry Speakes said the president believes the House should produce a new budget in short order next week. But he said a suggestion by House Budget Committee Chairman James R. Jones, D-Okla., that a Democrats "split the difference" with Republicans on tax increases and spending cuts was probably farther than Reagan was prepared to go.

Speakes said the president was willing to work with the leadership but, he added, the White House believes there is a trend by Republicans to stay with the Republican leadership budget that Reagan favored.

Speakes said Reagan would prefer that Congress be forced to vote on the president's budget and also wants authority to veto specific budget items that are not to his liking.

On Friday, the president had called the House budget process "irresponsible, Mickey Mouse."

In Washington, GOP Chairman Richards told a news conference that "the American public will not tolerate the irresponsible leadership of House Speaker Tip O'Neill and his cohorts in the Democratic leadership."

"The speaker's refusal to exert the required leadership over his majority is another demonstration that he would rather witness genuine human suffering than the economic recovery the president has begun," he said.

Richards said he was "forming a special unit at the RNC which will have as its sole task the defeat of members of the leadership of the Democratic Party in the House."

The chairman of Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, Rep. Tony Coelho, responded: "If the Republicans want to target the opponents of the Reagan budget, they would have to include the Republican members of the Senate Budget Committee who voted unanimously to reject the Reagan budget.

"They would have to target the Republican leaders in the House who refused even to bring the Reagan budget to the floor," said Coelho, D-Calif.

"The president's political advisers are obviously hoping to blame Democrats," he added. "But Democrats opposed the program in 1981. The difference this year is that Republicans themselves lack confidence in the president's economic policies."

Suggests Solution For Nuclear Arms

NEW YORK (AP) — The United States should take the first step toward nuclear disarmament by deactivating one weapon, activist Barry Commoner said Saturday at the Citizens Party's national convention.

"Let the United States government, unilaterally, inactivate a single nuclear weapon and ship it for safekeeping to a cooperating nation, perhaps in Scandinavia," Commoner said.

He said the federal government then would announce that "if this action is matched by the Soviet Union, a second weapon would be inactivated and dispatched."

Commoner, who got 235,766 votes when he ran for president in 1980 as the Citizens Party candidate, said such a move could open up the disarmament process.

"Our initiative would provide the Soviet Union and other nuclear-armed nations with an unambiguous opportunity — indeed, a challenge — to establish their own commitment to nuclear disarmament," Commoner said.

Commoner, co-chairman of the progressive Citizens Party, said in his speech at the Prince George Hotel that "we on the left" must develop a military strategy.

"We believe in defending the security of the United States," Commoner said. But he added it was important to "define the threat" and the national interests that would be defended.

Tar Heels Down Johns Hopkins, 7-5

UNC Captures 2nd Lacrosse Title

CHARLOTTEVILLE, Va. (AP) — Junior attackman Dave Wingate scored five goals and North Carolina's defense handcuffed Johns Hopkins as the Tar Heels claimed their second straight NCAA Division I lacrosse championship Saturday with a 7-5 victory over the Blue Jays.

The triumph, which came before more than 10,000 fans at the University of Virginia's Scott Stadium, completed a 14-0 season for North Carolina. The Tar Heels have won 26 straight games dating back to an 11-10 NCAA semifinal setback to Virginia in 1980.

Johns Hopkins, which dropped a 13-12 overtime decision to the Tar Heels during the regular season, finished 11-3.

North Carolina jumped out to a 3-0 first-quarter advantage, each of the goals by Wingate, and maintained that three-goal margin until just 1:42 remained in the game when the Blue Jays' Mike Donnelly accounted for the final score of the encounter.

While it was the 3-0 opening period that gave North Carolina control of the game, it was the play of goalie Tom Sears and the Tar Heels' defense in the middle two quarters that determined the outcome.

Johns Hopkins, held scoreless for the first 24 minutes, outshot North Carolina 17-4 in the second quarter but managed only one goal. That came with 9:25 elapsed in the period on a rebound by Donnelly after Sears deflected a Johns Hopkins shot.

Sears, the 1981 Kelly Award winner as the top goalie in the nation and a virtual shoo-in for the same honor this season, was credited with nine saves in the second quarter. He finished with 17 for the game.

In the third period, North Carolina was penalized seven times, but with Johns Hopkins failing to convert its first three extra-man opportunities, the Tar Heels increased their lead to 6-1 on goals by Jeff Homire and Peter Voelkel.

Johns Hopkins finally took advantage of North Carolina's penalty problems late in the period with Donnelly and Bill Cantelli scoring on extra-man situations to make it a 6-3 game. Donnelly's second of three goals came when the Tar Heels were two men short.

But Wingate scored his fifth goal of the day eight seconds before the third period ended on an assist from Kevin Griswold as the Tar Heels took a 7-3 lead into the final period. Wingate scored six goals against the Blue Jays in the regular-season contest between the two teams, including the game-winner in overtime.

Cantelli scored unassisted on a dodge with 8:25 to play to make it 7-4, but Johns Hopkins could not get on the scoreboard against until Donnelly's final goal with just under two minutes left.

Blue Jay goalie Brian Holman had 20 saves.

West Virginia Eliminates ECU In NCAA Regionals

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
COLUMBIA, S.C. — Lost: a number of base hits, somewhere between Harrisonburg, Va., and Columbia, S.C. If found please return to the East Carolina University baseball team.

That's the type of ad that ECU Coach Hal Baird just might be tempted to put into some area papers after the University of West Virginia eliminated the Pirates from the NCAA East Regional, 4-1, yesterday.

The Pirates, who could scrape up no more than one run in each of the three games they played, winning one and losing two, found their bats silenced once more by the Mountaineers' Mike Scarcella, who brought only a 2.4 record and a 9.23 earned run average into the game. He allowed only three hits by the punchless Pirates, who had a .300 plus average when they left the ECAC-South tournament in Harrisonburg earlier in the month.

ECU got only 16 hits in the three tourney games.

Baird had no explanation for the muteness of the bats. "We hit the ball in Harrisonburg as well as we did all season. And we hit the ball as poorly here as we did at any time during the season. It's certainly a factor that cost us the chance to advance."

Baird felt that starting pitcher Charlie Smith hurled well enough to win, although he was finally chased in the eighth in the 1-1 tie game after giving up two base hits, the latter a double. After issuing an intentional walk, he was relieved by Bill Wilder, who gave up a long sacrifice fly that broke the tie.

That was followed by a hit down the right field line that brought in two more, insuring the win for the Mountaineers.

"Our pitching was good enough to win," the coach said. "They got a seeing-eye hit there in the eighth that brought in two. But if you can't score four or five runs in a park like this, you can't win, and we just couldn't do it."

Baird also had praise for Scarcella. "He was a draft pick out of high school but went with (West Virginia). He hasn't had a good year, but I understand he did win the game that won their conference championship for them. He was as good out there today as anyone in the tournament, and we were a little surprised at how good his control was."

Baird also praised his own team for the Fastest Field Ever Set For 66th Running Of Indy 500

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The fastest field in the history of auto racing's most famous event is poised for the 66th renewal of the Indianapolis 500 on Sunday, an American sports spectacle.

Led by pole-sitter Rick Mears, 33 drivers will zoom around the historic 2½-mile oval in cars that look more like ground-hugging guided missiles than automobiles.

These daredevils, who shrug off the inherent danger of their business, consistently have pushed their cars to record-shattering speeds in the month they have spent here qualifying and practicing for this event.

Mears, piloting a Penske-Ford clocked at 207.004 mph, was one of eight drivers to crack the 200 mph barrier in qualifications. The average qualifying speed for the 33-car field was 197.740, compared with 191.244 in 1981 and the old record 192.584 set in 1978.

The other 200 mph qualifiers were Kevin Cogan (204.082), four-time winner A.J. Foyt (203.332), Mario Andretti (203.172), Gordon Johncock (201.884), Bill Whittington (201.658), Tom Sneva (201.027) and Don Whittington, Bill's brother, (200.725).

The slowest qualifying speed was a not-very-shabby 194.154 by Roger Mears, Rick's older brother, who will start 19th in the 33-car field.

Advanced technology such as ground effects aerodynamics, which virtually glue the cars to the track, has produced the greater speeds.

"The ground effects is a great race car," said Foyt, making his silver anniversary 25th start at Indy. "You can't stop progress, no matter what it is. You have to concentrate more, so much more than you did, say five years ago. You're not allowed much error in these race cars. They give you a very false feeling, a secure feeling until you get in trouble, and then you're in deep trouble."

Fresh in the minds of all the drivers is the crash that killed driver Gordon Smiley, during a warmup for qualifications two weeks ago. Smiley lost control of his car on the third turn and smashed into the wall. It was the first death here in nine years — the longest period without a fatality ever at this track, which opened in 1909.

There are nine rookies in Sunday's field, but Rick Mears feels they're ready for the task they face. "I think it's a good field," he said. "They're well-prepared with good equipment under them."

But the 1979 winner has some words of caution for the first-time starters.

"They have to know where to run in the track if they're being lapped," he said, "where to go to let a person pass."

Because it is narrower than most newer tracks, Indy poses special problems.

"The first and third turns are the most difficult to get into," said Mears. "The new guys have to know what to do at the start. On the straightaway, going into the first corner, you have more rpm's because of the (air) draft. The new drivers have to get accustomed to that. They have to give the car in front plenty of time to see what's going on."

The chief steward for the Indianapolis 500 Saturday emphasized to the 33 starters in Sunday's race that the two most vital parts of the event will be "the start and the pits."

Tom Binford, addressing a public drivers' meeting that began exactly 24 hours prior to the noon EDT start of the race, told the drivers, "Those are the two very important and dangerous parts of this race."

"There are two keys at the start," he added in his final instructions to the competitors.

"The first key is the driver leading you down to the (green) flag at an even pace.

I have confidence in (pole-sitter) Rick Mears that he will do that.

"The second key," Binford said, "is that you all maintain the distance between your rows. There is to be 100 feet between the rows and you can't improve your position until you cross the (starting) line."

"It is very important that if something happens you have that 100 feet to react. And something will happen because it always happens. Somebody will not be able to get his car up to speed that quick. But don't just dart around. Watch where you are going and give yourself that time to react."

There have been a number of bad accidents at the start of the Indy race, but none since 1973. However, the field for Sunday's race is the fastest in the 66 years of racing at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway and there is more concern than ever about the start.

When warning the drivers about entering the pits, Binford said, "Mirrors, mirrors, mirrors. I can't emphasize that enough, particularly to the (nine) rookies. When you come into the pits, know where that car is behind you and make sure he has time to know you're going to slow down to go into the pits."

Rose Wins Battle Of The Unbeaten

Greenville Rose, facing perhaps its severest test in a season nearly absent of such things, proved once more Friday night it had the answers as the Rampants came away on top in the battle of the unbeaten.

Rose used the hitting of Mont Carter and Sammy Hodges and a sparkling relief performance by Roger Williams to slip past Richmond County, 6-4, in the second round of the state 4-A playoffs.

The Rampants, now 24-0, advance to the eastern finals against Eastern Wayne, which slipped by New Hanover, 3-2, in its second-round game. Eastern Wayne is 22-2. The game is tentatively scheduled for Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at Guy Smith Stadium.

An overflow crowd estimated at nearly 2,000 — another 300 to 500 were turned away — packed the stands, aisles and climbed the fences to watch the showdown between the two unbeaten 4-A powers.

The fans, who paid $2.50 for admission, received their money's worth as the two teams battled for over two and a half hours before the Rampants came away with the win.

"I thought it was a heck of a ballgame," Rose coach Ronald Vincent said as he accepted congratulations from many of the fans afterwards. "It was an extremely intense ballgame."

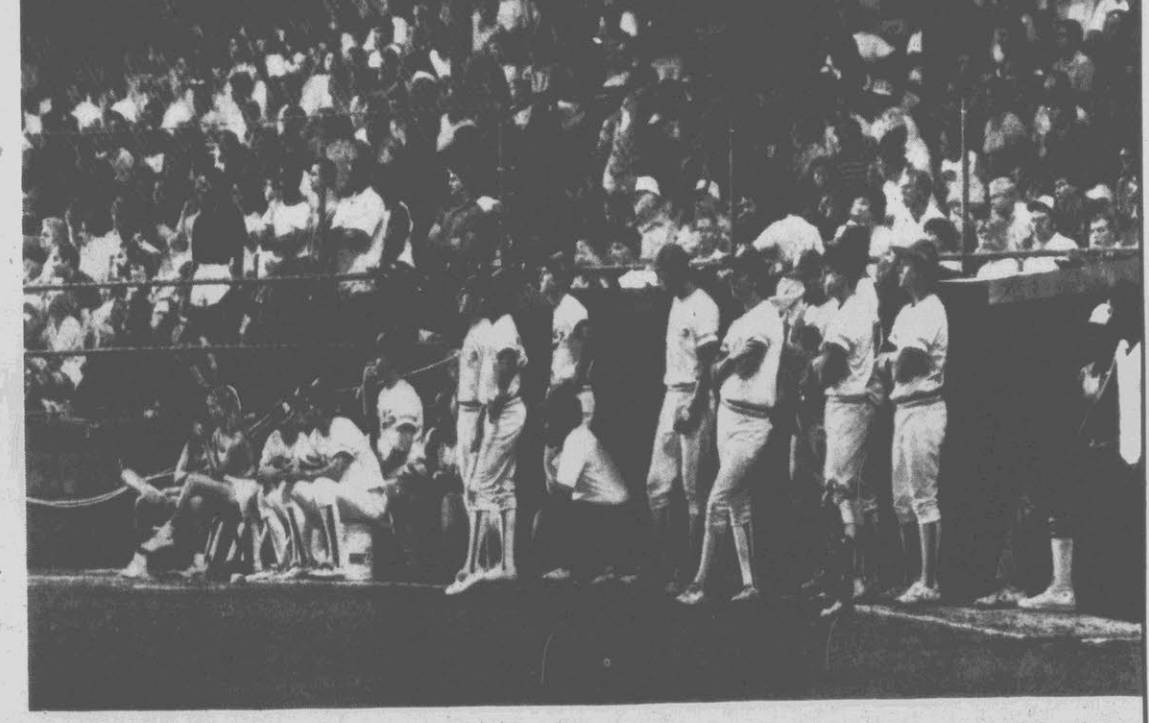

Rose jumped out to a 3-0 lead in the home half of the first only to have the Raiders rally to tie the game with a run in the second and two in the third. Its lead gone, Rose rallied for a run in the bottom of the third when Gordon Douglas singled to score Hodges.

The Rampants upped their lead to 6-3 in the fourth inning when Carter drilled a two-run double. The Raiders cut the deficit to 6-4 in the fifth and seemed poised to tie the game when Williams was called on.

Williams entered the game with one out and runners on the corners. Williams quickly cut short the Raiders' uprising.

With a 1-2 count on Mike Byrd, the #7 hitter, Williams nailed Rocky Walters leaning the wrong way at first and whiffed Byrd on the next pitch to end the threat.

Williams struck out the side in the sixth and gave up a one-out walk in the

Rampants Second At State Meet

From Staff, Wire Reports
RALEIGH — Greenville Rose finished first in the 880-meter relay and Tyrone Forbes was second in the 800 meters to lead the Rampants to second place on Friday in North Carolina High School Athletic Association track and field meet at North Carolina State's Paul Derr Track.

Henderson Vance, behind Greg Richardson's victories in the 800- and 1600-meter runs, won the team title with 55 points. Rose was second with 34 followed by Salisbury with 33.

Roanoke was ninth with 16 points.

Also, three meet records fell in the competition, including a one-year old high jump mark.

"This field might have been the best ever from top to bottom," Rose coach Bud Phillips said. "They've had some outstanding individuals before, but there was some real smoke there (Friday)."

The Rampants' lone first-place finish came in the 880 relay where the team of Frank White, Forbes, Roderick Harrell and Edward Frazier combined to run a 1:27.01 and edge Vance at the tape.

Forbes claimed Rose's only second place finish in the 800 meters, with a time of 1:53.48, over a full second behind Richardson, who won the event with a

Twins' 'Triple' Not Enough To Defeat Yankees

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Ken Griffey hit a run-scoring double and came home on Oscar Gamble's single in the ninth inning to give the New York Yankees a 6-4 victory over the Minnesota Twins Saturday.

The Twins now have lost 10 straight and 16 of 17. With two out, Willie Randolph singled and came home when Griffey punched his double off Brad Havens, 1-4. Gamble followed with a single to right scoring Griffey.

The game also featured a triple play by the Twins, the first of the 1982 major-league season. The triple play came in the second inning. Bobby Murcer and Nettles singled to put runners at first and second. The runners broke as Smalley struck out, and Murcer was trapped off third. When Murcer retreated safely to second, the Twins trapped Nettles for the second out, and Murcer was out trying to go to third for a second time.

Clark's Grand Slam Keys Giants

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Jack Clark drove in six runs and two home runs, including his fourth career grand slam, to lead the San Francisco Giants to a 9-5 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates Saturday night.

It was the second straight two-homer game for Clark, who drove in five runs Friday night in San Francisco's 10-5 win over Pittsburgh.

Both homers Saturday came off Pirate starter Don Robinson, 5-1, who was charged with all nine runs in his first loss since September, 1981.

Clark's fifth-inning grand slam wiped out a 4-3 Pittsburgh lead. It came after Joe Morgan drew a leadoff walk, Jim Wolford singled and Chili Davis reached base on a bunt.

Clark's home run in the seventh, his ninth of the season, followed a walk to Reggie Smith.

single to right field in the 13th inning to drive in Gary Woods with the winning run Saturday as the Chicago Cubs downed the Los Angeles Dodgers 3-2.

Rogers scattered eight hits as the Montreal Expos extended their winning streak to eight games by defeating the Cincinnati Reds 4-1 Saturday.

76ers To Run Against Lakers

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — neapolis did it over two seasons, 1949 and 1950.

A victory in Game 2, which will be nationally televised by CBS starting at 1 p.m. EDT Sunday, also would be the Lakers' eighth straight road playoff victory, dating back to the final game of the 1980 championship series won by Los Angeles in six games.

"It's starting to get planted in the players' minds that they have accomplished something significant," said Lakers Coach Pat Riley. "But the important thing is just to win the series."

Riley said, "The impact of a loss on Philly Sunday would be tremendous in a negative way. They have to play like it's a seventh game."

"That's the way we'll be playing it. We know what a tremendous advantage it would be to go back to Los Angeles with a 2-0 lead."

Philadelphia, however, is no stranger to adversity in the playoffs this year. The 76ers rebounded from a 40-point loss in their first semi-final playoff game against Boston to win the next three meetings against the Celtics.

Then when the Celtics rallied to tie the series 3-3, the 76ers went to Boston and won the seventh game.

"Hopefully, we'll be a little bit smarter against their press next time," said 76ers forward Bobby Jones.

Exchange took a 1-0 lead in the third only to have C&A rally for three runs in the bottom of the inning to take a lead it never lost.

With two gone, Carr singled and went to second on a wild pitch. Jamie Marshall then reached on an error to give C&A runners at the corners. Marshall stole second and James Lawler followed with a single to score both runs.

Lawler later scored on Hank Thompson's triple to make it 3-1.

Carr drove in two runs in the fourth to key a second straight three-run inning and then hit a three-run home run in the fifth.

Exchange scored its final two runs in the fifth.

Britt Erwin had two hits for Exchange. Carr led C&A with three hits in four at bats. Lawler had two hits for C&A.

First Fed. 6

First Federal went back on top with two runs in the fourth and a run in the fifth, but Moose, down 6-4, rallied for five runs in the top of the sixth to take the lead for good.

Jay Mattox walked to open the inning and scored on Rob Barnes' double. Then, with one gone, Chris Christopher singled and Barnes scored on an error.

L.L. Everett then doubled home Christopher with the go-ahead run.

Everett subsequently scored on an error that allowed Allen Speight to reach. Speight later came around to score on a wild pitch.

The game was tied at 3-3 going into the fifth. Cliff Farrell singled and went to second on an error. Brian Pierce followed with a single and stole second to give the Jaycees runners at second and third with none out.

Then, with two gone, Coburn laced his single to right to score Farrell and Pierce and the Jaycees led, 5-3.

Both teams scored two runs in the first inning, the Lions' two coming on a two-run home run by Tom Moye. Both teams then scored a run in the third to leave the game tied at 3-3.

Pearson 'Tickled' To Be Back At 600

HARRISBURG, N.C. (AP) — David Pearson hasn't raced in a World 600 at the Charlotte Motor Speedway in four years. But he says that won't be a handicap when he starts on the pole for the $455,000 NASCAR race Sunday.

The Spartanburg, S.C., veteran driver won the pole for the race Thursday with a record World 600 qualifying speed of 162.511 mph. He broke his own World 600 time trial record of 161.435 mph set in 1977.

"Hey, it's like I never left," Pearson said Saturday. "I can't tell you how much it tickled me to come back and win the pole here. It pumped me up. Now I want to win the race."

"I ain't been away from racing, I just ain't been here," he said.

To win the pole, the Silver Fox, as he is known in racing circles, had to beat what appeared to be an unbeatable speed of 162.396 mph timed by Charlotte's Buddy Baker.

Baker, who will join Pearson on the front row of Sunday's race, took his Buick around the 1.5-mile oval under cloudy skies on a cool track early Thursday. By the time Pearson got onto the track, the sun was shining and the track had become warm.

"We were surprised that we were able to go as fast since the track had heated up like it did," Pearson said. "We wanted the clouds to stay out. The car was ready to go and we got real lucky."

Baker said starting in the second spot won't be a problem for him.

"I'm feeling very good," he said. "The car is capable, but it's like anything else. You've got to be in the right place and the right time. But I'm ready for a World 600 win."

Both Pearson and Baker have won the World 600 three times.

Drivers were hoping for a break in the rainy weather, which played havoc with qualifying for the World 600 and the Mello Yello 300 sportsman's race all week. The World 600 never has been postponed because of rain in its 23-year history.

At the speedway on Saturday, skies were clear and temperatures reached into the 90s.

"Clouds would be OK with me because the track stays cooler that way and there's less wear and tear on the car," Pearson said. "But that rain—we've had enough of that. Let's get on with racing."

A crowd of more than 130,000 was expected to turn out for Sunday's race.

Harry Gant survived a torrid three-way battle for first place with less than 20 laps to go Saturday to win the Mello Yello 300 sportsman's race at the Charlotte Motor Speedway.

The Taylorsville, N.C., driver, who started his Buick on the pole, held off a fierce challenge by Dale Earnhardt and Morgan Shepherd to win the $108,000 event. Earnhardt, of Denver, N.C., and Shepherd of Conover, N.C., both in Pontiacs, finished second and third, respectively.

Eagle Lifts Morgan To Tie

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — Gil Morgan holed out his 167-yard approach shot for an eagle 2 on the closing hole Saturday to join faltering Roger Maltbie in the third-round lead of the weather-plagued $380,000 Memorial Golf Tournament.

Morgan's sensational finish, coming well after national television had ended its coverage, gave him a 5-under-par 67. His 4-iron shot took one bounce on the 18th green 6 inches from the cup and jumped in the hole.

Maltbie, displaying a Memorial record performance with a 36-hole total of 10-under-par 134, cooled off Saturday. He had a double bogey and two bogeys in his first 12 holes.

But he knocked in a 20-foot birdie putt on the 16th hole and had the sole lead momentarily before Morgan's eagle.

Morgan and Maltbie matched 7-under-par totals of 209, equaling the Memorial 54-hole record established by Bob Gilder a year ago. Maltbie settled for a 75.

Morgan, a 35-year-old Oklahoman, said his shot Saturday was not the single biggest one in 10 years as a Tour pro.

"At Oakmont, I flew a 1-iron into the hole during the PGA. I don't think you can do better than that," he said.

Ray Floyd, former PGA and Masters champion, played his best round ever on Jack Nicklaus' Muirfield Village layout, a 67 that he maintained could have been much lower.

Floyd was alone in third place at 210. Gilder bogeyed two of the last three holes and slipped back into a fourth-place tie after his 69-211. He had the sole lead for a few moments after a birdie at 15.

Gets Back

Rose Gives Coach Birthday Gift

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer
Greenville Rose gave coach Ronald Vincent a gift on his birthday Friday night—a trip to the state 4-A semifinals.

"This is the best gift I could get," Vincent said to a fan after Rose edged Richmond County, 6-4, in the battle of the unbeaten in round two of the 4-A playoffs.

The Rampants (24-0) will play host to Eastern Wayne, a 3-2 winner over New Hanover, in the eastern title game. The game is tentatively set for Tuesday night at 7:30 in Guy Smith Stadium.

The winner will advance to the state 4-A finals.

While Vincent was all smiles afterward as he accepted congratulations from some of the estimated crowd of nearly 2,000 that packed Guy Smith, there had been more than a few anxious moments.

The two most anxious moments came in the third and fifth. In the third, Rose saw the Raiders erase a 3-0 deficit to tie the game at 3-3. Then, in the fifth, after Rose had regained the lead with a run in the third and two in the fourth, the Raiders closed to 6-4 and had runners at the corners.

Out came Vincent to the mound to replace starter Gordon Douglas. Enter Roger Williams.

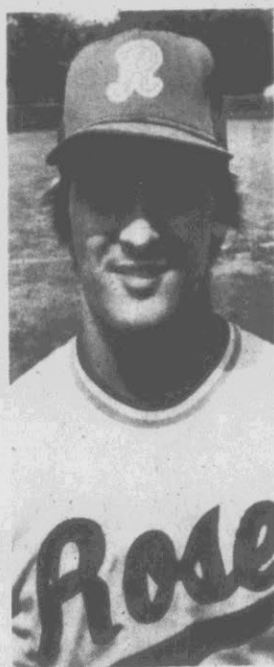

Williams promptly picked off Rocky Walters at first and then struck out Mike Byrd to end the threat. Williams struck out the side in the sixth and after a one-out walk in the seventh got two ground balls to end the game.

Vincent said Williams was the key to the game. Williams, more low key in his assessment, said: "I just tried to do my best. I knew they had runners in scoring position and I didn't want to let them score."

Williams, who went the distance in Rose's 9-1 first-round victory over Raleigh Millbrook Tuesday, said he was a bit tired but felt good as he warmed up on the mound.

"I was a little tired but I felt good," he said. "My fast ball was a little high and I had to rely on my curve ball as my strike out pitch."

Added catcher Crowell Pope: "He really threw good. His curve broke strong and sharp. They were ready for the hard pitch but when he threw his curve hard and it broke they had trouble (with it)."

Mont Carter

Most of the Rampants agreed Richmond County was among the best hitting teams they faced this year. The Raiders managed seven hits and four runs off Douglas, who came into the game with a 0.25 ERA.

"I thought they were very selective," Vincent said. "They didn't swing at a lot of bad pitches."

"They didn't take many strikes, unless their coach told them to," Pope said. "I'd probably say they're the best hitting club we've faced. They hit the ball hard off Gordon."

Going into the game, the Rampants and many of their fans were not quite sure how good Richmond County was, despite the Raiders' 24-0 mark.

"I think we might have underestimated them a little bit," second baseman Mont Carter said. "We had talked to Rocky Mount and Garner and they had said we should win."

Carter was one of two Rampants to manage two hits. Carter and shortstop Sammy Hodges were both two for three with two runs batted in. It was Hodges' two-run single in the first that staked the Rampants to a 3-0 lead and it was Carter's double in the fifth that gave Rose a 6-3 lead.

"Their (pitcher) threw well," Hodges said. "But I felt like we had the game under control all the way."

For Carter, it was the second straight playoff game in which he manage two hits. Carter, the Rampants' #2 hitter, was two for three with an RBI in Rose's 9-1 win over Raleigh Millbrook.

"I've been hitting the ball pretty good, but I haven't been pleased with my fielding," Carter said.

Most all the players who were asked said the crowd and the buildup for the game had an effect on them, however briefly.

"Everybody was a little tense," Carter said. "It was a big game. We were both undefeated."

"We were all a little nervous," Pope added. "They were twenty-four and oh and we were twenty-three and oh."

Notes...

A number of TV stations were at the game, including a cable company VideoTrax which had WNCT-TV sportscaster Mike King doing the play-by-play. VideoTrax reportedly may try to sell the rights to the game to one of the local stations for broadcast.

No announcement has been made concerning when the game might be shown.

Coach Vincent said the crowd that filled Guy Smith was the biggest he's seen in his nine years at Rose. Many fans climbed the fences to watch and a few stood on their cars behind the outfield fence.

Connors, Lloyd Advance

PARIS (AP) — Top-seeded Jimmy Connors and Chris Evert Lloyd posted victories Saturday to continue their march towards the finals of the $917,000 French Open tennis tournament, which has been hit with an outbreak of flu among the players.

Connors breezed past his third-round opponent, Guy Forget, a 17-year-old Frenchman who is ranked 630rd in the world, with a 6-2, 6-3, 6-7, 6-1 victory.

"He's a young guy who tries to hit a lot of winners and makes a lot of errors," Connors said of Forget, who on Friday topped Romanian Ilie Nastase, "Forget's 17, and at that age, it's now or never."

Connors, who has never made it to the finals of the French Open, next meets fellow American Chip Hooper, the No.16 seed, on Monday in the race for the $66,000 men's title prize. Hooper downed Jimmy Arias, a 17-year-old from Grand Island, N.Y., 6-3, 6-4, 6-7, 7-6, in their third-round match Saturday.

Lloyd, favored to win a fifth title in Paris, eliminated fellow American Pam Casale 6-2, 6-0. The 27-year-old American star has not lost a set in her advancement to the $51,000 prize for the women's singles crown.

Lloyd's quarterfinal opponent Monday will be Lucia Romanov, a 23-year-old Romanian ranked 71st whose last two opponents have withdrawn from the tournament because of illness.

Romanov advanced Saturday with a fourth-round triumph over No.8 seed Anne Smith of the United States, who withdrew because of a stomach flu that has forced at least seven players to abandon the two-week clay court tournament.

On Thursday, Romanov won a third-round match against No.10 seed Billie Jean King, a 39-year-old Californian who was forced to abandon a doubles match Saturday because of the viral flu that also has sidelined No.13 seed Sue Barker of Britain and Americans Marcella Mesker and Bonnie Gadusek among the women.

New Zealand's Chris Lewis and Czech Jiri Granat have withdrawn from the men's competition because of the illness.

Lloyd staged her victory shortly before her husband, John Lloyd of Britain, was toppled by No.8 seed Yannick Noah of France 7-5, 6-0, 6-3.

Noah, a 23-year-old ranked 13th in the world, next comes on court Monday against Wojtek Fibak. The 29-year-old Polish player, ranked 26th, advanced Saturday with a 6-0, 6-2, 7-5 triumph over South Africa's Mike Myburg.

In other third-round matches Saturday, No.6 seed Eliot Teltscher of the United States scored a 6-4, 2-6, 6-1, 6-3 victory over Peter Elter, a West German ranked 67th.

Teltscher, a 23-year-old ranked seventh, will play his fourth-round match against No.14 seed Jose Higuera of Spain.

Higuera, a 29-year-old ranked 17th, needed five sets to oust Yugoslavia's Damir Keretic 6-2, 7-5, 6-7, 2-6, 6-2.

No.3 seed Guillermo Vilas of Argentina continued his straight-set advancement by downing Juan Avendano of Spain 6-0, 6-1, 6-0.

Vilas, the 1977 French Open champion, will meet Andreas Maurer of West Germany in a fourth-round match. Maurer topped Czechoslovakia's Pavel Slozil 3-6, 7-6, 7-5.

In other women's fourth-round matches Saturday, No.4 seed Andrea Jaeger posted a 6-1, 6-1 victory over fellow American Dana Gilbert.

Patterson Pitches ECU By UNC

By WOODY PEELE
 Reflector Sports Editor
 COLUMBIA, S.C. — Bobby Patterson was a hungry pitcher when he went to the mound against the University of North Carolina Friday in the second round of the NCAA East Regionals at the University of South Carolina.

Actually, Patterson was doubly hungry. Calm and collected, he had overslept before the game and missed breakfast. Then, too, he was anxious to have a chance to pitch against the Tar Heels, a team he'd never faced.

And he did just what he wanted to do, hurling a seven-hit 1-0 shutout against the Tar Heels, sending them home from the double elimination field.

East Carolina, with one loss, was to face West Virginia on Saturday, with the loser of that game packing up.

The senior lefthander got some outstanding defensive play behind him — especially in the sixth inning when there were two fine plays.

"You know the story," Patterson said. "It's always been that way at East Carolina (strong defense). And it's especially true when you have experienced men in the middle infield like we do."

Patterson said that he was comfortable throughout the game, but was tired at the end. "The humidity was so bad out there. It's hard not to get tired in this humidity."

But he was happy with the win. Throughout his four years at ECU, he'd watched Mickey Britt and Bill Wilder get the call against the Tar Heels. "I really wanted to prove myself against them, and I finally got the chance. But I wasn't nervous. It's no different than any other game. I guess a hungry pitcher does pitch better."

Indeed! But it wasn't all him. There were a number of fine defensive plays, started in the first inning when Todd Hendley grabbed a line drive off the bat of Chris Pittaro, the UNC leadoff hitter. Later, he made another stab of a liner, robbing Todd Wilkerson of a hit with a runner on second base.

In the sixth, however, there were two excellent plays that robbed the Heels of one of their best chances.

First, Patterson walked Barney Spooner, and then raced to pick up Pete Kumiega's sacrifice down the first baseline. He relayed to Mike Sorrell at first, who spun and fired a strike to Kelly Robinette at second, who put the tag on Spooner, who made a turn at second.

"That's a play we had planned," Coach Hal Baird said. "We use it when we play teams that have a tendency to take an aggressive turn of the base. It's an instinct play, with the second baseman turning and throwing and the shortstop waiting. We've gotten some people with it this year."

The importance of that play came just seconds later when Jeff Hubbard sent a shot down the right field line that John Hallow made a leaping catch of to save the home run.

The final big play came in the eighth after Tom Daily had singled and been replaced by Dave Droschak, who then stole second and took third on an infield hit by Kumiega.

The two tried for a delayed steal, getting Kumiega trapped in a rundown, as Droschak broke for home, but first baseman Todd Evans' throw to the plate nailed the sliding runner and killed that Tar Heel rally.

"Hendley made two great grabs," Baird said in praise of the defense, "and that double play was something. And it was followed by Hallow bringing that one back into the park."

Baird said Patterson pitched a "career-type game" in the win. "We were calling a lot of the pitches, and he was hitting them perfectly most of the time. It was like he was wired in to what we wanted. Being familiar with a team like Carolina helped in selecting pitches."

"But to hurl a shutout in this park is just amazing," Baird added.

Baird said that some early fielding problems, one resulting in a Robinette error, and the others in some poor throws to first, were caused by the damp infield grass. "It was like throwing a watermelon seed," Baird said. "We were hoping for pop flies, but we didn't get them. Fortunately, we weren't hurt."

Baird said he really had no answer for the silence of the Pirate bats — the Bucs got only six hits and none in the inning they scored in.

"I told the kids that if we could get past their starter, we'd be able to punch some over, but their reliever (Ronnie Huffman) was stronger than their starter."

The Pirates took advantage of starter Brad Powell's wildness to get on the board in the third.

8th-Inning Grand Slam Fells Williamston, 11-7

JACKSONVILLE — Charlie Soos hit a grand slam with two outs in the bottom of the eighth inning to lift White Oak to a dramatic 11-7 win over Williamston Friday night in the second round of the 3-A playoffs.

White Oak, now 19-3, advances to the 3-A semifinals. The loss ends the season for Williamston, which finishes up 15-8.

White Oak tied the game in the bottom of the seventh with two runs after the Tigers had taken a 7-5 lead in the fourth. The Vikings then won the game with Soos four-run home run.

Gary Appleton doubled to open the bottom of the eighth and went to third on a passed ball. Williamston coach Mike Parrell then elected to intentionally walk Billy Harrell and Pat Riley to load the bases.

Williamston pitcher Ed Pippin then struck out Brian Baquer and Israel Meadows — Baquer had two home runs in the Vikings' 6-0 win over Ayden-Grifton in the first round.

But, just when the Tigers appeared ready to escape without giving up a run, Soos hit Pippin's first pitch over the fence for a grand slam to give White Oak the victory.

Soos' home run was the third of the game and the second for the Vikings, who managed nine hits off Pippin. Pippin struck out 12 and walked six — three on intentional passes — as he fell to 10-3.

Williamston wasted little time in grabbing the early lead Friday, scoring three runs in the first.

James Ward reached on an error by Soos at third and Keith Bryant followed with a double to score Ward. Tim Hines then walked and pinch runner Mike Peele came on to steal second. Pippin then walked to load the bases and Keith Perry followed with a double to score Bryant and Peele to make it 3-0.

It was a lead short lived, however. The Vikings used Richard Sloan's three-run home run in the bottom of the inning to key a four-run rally and take a 4-3 lead.

The Vikings upped their lead to 5-3 in the second only to have the Tigers come back with two runs in the third to tie the game.

Hines walked to open the inning, and Pippin followed with a home run to knot the score at 5-5.

Williamston then regained the lead in the fifth. With Sloan on the mound having replaced runner Mike Peele came on to steal second.

Pippin then walked to load the bases and Keith Perry followed with a double to score Bryant and Peele to make it 3-0.

It was a lead short lived, however. The Vikings used Richard Sloan's three-run home run in the bottom of the inning to key a four-run rally and take a 4-3 lead.

The Vikings upped their lead to 5-3 in the second only to have the Tigers come back with two runs in the third to tie the game.

Hines walked to open the inning, and Pippin followed with a home run to knot the score at 5-5.

seventh before inducing the final two batters to ground out to end the game and preserve the victory for starter Gordon Douglas.

"I thought Roger was the key to the game," Vincent said. "I didn't think Gordon threw that bad but I thought Roger really came on and did the job for us."

Douglas started strong, striking out two in the first but began to get his pitches up as the game progressed. He gave up seven hits — including a solo home run by Walters — and four runs (all earned).

Douglas struck out four and walked three in earning his 13th win of the year without a loss.

"He didn't ask to come out," Vincent said. "But, he didn't argue about it either."

Walters, a left-hander, started for the Raiders but walked two in the first when the Rampants struck for three runs. He left in the fourth after Carter's double.

Walters, who was relieved by right-hander Andre Parker, gave up six runs (five earned) and six hits while striking out four and walking four. Parker did not give up a hit in the final 2½ innings.

Both Carter and Hodges were two for three off Walters. Both also had two RBI. Walters, while not faring well on the mound, led the Raiders at the plate with three hits in three at bats and three RBI.

The crowd roared when Douglas struck out the leadoff batter and the #3 man in the first and before they had time to rest their lungs they were back up again — cheering as the Rampants scored three runs in the bottom of the inning.

Tom Buie walked to open the inning and went to second on Carter's single to the hole at short. An attempted pickoff throw to first got by first baseman Jerome Goodwin allowing both runners to move up a base.

Hodges then lined a 3-2 pitch to leftfield to score both players and give the Rampants a 2-0 lead. Williams was walked intentionally and Douglas flew out to right to send Hodges to third.

Williams then took off for second and when the throw went to second Hodges raced home to give Rose a 3-0 lead.

The Raiders, who came into the game with a .334 batting average, got one run back in the second when Walters hit a 2-1 pitch over the rightfield fence. The Raiders then tied it up in the third.

With one gone, Alex Wallace walked. Gould then sent a long fly ball to center that Randy Warren had in his glove but dropped. Wallace scored but Gould was thrown out at third.

Mike Moore scored the tying run moments later. He walked and Randy Jordan came on to run for him. Jordan stole second and scored on Walters single to right to tie the game at 3-3.

The Rampants regained the lead in the bottom of the inning and Richmond County never got closer than a run the final four innings.

Hodges blooped a single to center and went to second when Walters barked. With one gone, Douglas chopped a single past third baseman Richard Heavner to score Hodges with the go-ahead run.

"I thought there were two keys to the game," Vincent said. "The first was when Gordon knocked in Sammy and the second was when Roger picked off the boy at first."

In between those two events, however, came a two-run fourth inning by Rose. Keith Phillips singled with one gone in the inning and Buie walked for the second of three times.

After a wild pitch moved both runners up a base, Carter lashed a 1-1 pitch to the gap in left-centerfield to score Phillips and Buie and up the Rose lead to 6-3.

"It was a fastball up high and outside," Carter said. "I just went with it."

The Raiders used three singles by Wallace, Moore and Walters to score a run in the fifth and cut the gap to 6-4, but Williams replaced Douglas after Walters' single and the Raiders did not get another hit the rest of the night.

Leave young wildlife alone — They're loveable, cute and amusing. Give them six months and they'll be irritable, a nuisance, and in some cases downright dangerous.

During the next few months, many "abandoned" wild animals are apt to be found and brought home by children and adults. However, anyone attempting to raise a young wild animal to adulthood isn't doing himself or the animal any favors.

It is also illegal to hold a wild animal in captivity without a permit from the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission.

"Young wild animals often appear to be abandoned, but that is seldom the case," said George Smith, assistant chief of the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission's Division of Wildlife Management. "The young animal's mother is usually hiding nearby, waiting for the human intruder to leave so she can go about the business of raising her young."

Smith says there are a number of reasons not to pick up or try to raise wild animals as pets:

- It takes a tremendous amount of work to care properly for a wild animal, and also requires an extensive knowledge of the animal's specialized needs. Youngsters will soon tire of the work that goes into caring for a wild pet, and a wild animal that is raised as a pet will not have the skills needed for survival when it is eventually released.
- Wild pets often become unmanageable as they grow older. Small mammals, for example, like to gnaw on things, and will soon destroy any furniture within reach. Larger animals, as they mature, often become mean and may injure their keepers. There are numerous cases of "tame" deer killing their keepers, and last year a Warrenton woman was badly hurt by a pet deer.
- Few people can afford to build proper holding facilities for wildlife. A bear cub may be able to live in a house when it's a few weeks old, but it will need several acres of space with natural features when it grows older. The same is true for smaller animals on a lesser scale. In addition, it is difficult to meet the special dietary needs of most wildlife species.
- Wild animals are very susceptible to disease in captivity. In the wild, they have relatively little contact with other animals, and haven't developed the disease resistance common in domestic animals.

- Rabies — which is often found in foxes, skunks and raccoons — is also a threat. Symptoms of the disease are often not readily apparent in wild animals, and anyone bitten by one of these animals should seek medical treatment immediately.

What's the law on commercial fishing boat registration exemption qualifications. To qualify as a bona fide commercial fishing boat, a motor boat must be used primarily for commercial fishing operations, from which ment immediately. "Making pets of wild animals is a practice that we certainly don't recommend," Smith said. "Very few people have the facilities, knowledge or commitment to care properly for a wild animal. Wildlife is best left in the wild."

Fishing Report
Freshwater — The spawning season for most inland species of gamefish is in full swing now. Good catches of bluegill bream have been reported from the tributaries of the Pamlico and Neuse Rivers. Bass fishing has been off somewhat. Bass are often reluctant to bite during spawning season.

Saltwater — Most of our saltwater species are close to shore now with good reports on grey trout (around Ocracoke) and bluefish. Spanish Mackerel are off Morehead City.

For anyone interested in the Chesapeake Bay, the big trout are biting. Catches of 40 to 60 have been common. The grey trout in the Chesapeake are running in the 8 to 12 pound class. Large three ounce stingray grubs and live sea bass are choice baits.

West Virginia Eliminates Pirates...

He also felt the defense did another outstanding job for the team. "That one misplay in the first inning cost us a run and put us at a slight disadvantage, but we got real fine play from the outfield, especially the catch (John) Hallow made and the play (David) Wells made."

The coach was referring to a diving grab made by Hallow in the seventh inning when he closed out the inning after Jeff Wilson had doubled. The Wells play came in the ninth after Wilson had walked and been sacrificed up. He had tried to score on a single to left, but Wells threw him out at the plate.

Kelly Robinette also made a fine off-balance stab of a liner off the bat of Roger Hohlbein in the third, followed by a catch by Wells at the fence on Doak Hoestine's long fly.

West Virginia grabbed the lead in the first, however, helped along by an error by Todd Evans at first. After Wilson had opened with a single to right, Vic Rabbits lined to Evans, who dropped the ball as he spun to throw to second. He then picked it up and was wide on the throw to first, leaving Rabbits safe also. Hohlbein then singled to score Wilson for a 1-0 lead.

After failing to put a runner on in the first two frames, ECU got the tying run in the third. With one down, Jack Curlings walked and after a second out, Wells doubled to center, scoring Curlings.

But that was to be it for the one-run Pirates. A threat in the fourth was the only other time the Bucs got a runner to second, on a one-out walk and a single.

The Mountaineers were also without a threat until the sixth when Glenn Goss led off with an infield hit, advancing on a sacrifice and an out, to die at third.

Finally, in the eighth, UWV broke it open. Hohlbein opened with a single to center and after Goss was out for interfering with Fran Fitzgerald's handling of his attempted bunt, Hoestine doubled down the left field line. Tom Craftcheck was intentionally walked and Wilder came on.

Gil Parthemore hit a high fly to deep center, easily scoring Hohlbein, and Greg Van Zant followed with a liner down the first base line just out of reach of the diving Evans, scoring the other two.

West Virginia, now 24-22, will now face South Carolina today as the tournament winds down.

Whether that will be for the earlier game today, title, or the right to play for the East Carolina finishes the title, will be decided in a season with a 34-14 record.

Nice Catch

Yanks Take Home Run Derby

By The Associated Press
The new Hubert H. Humphrey Metrodome in Minneapolis is a nice place to play baseball — well, for just about everyone but pitchers.

"The ball jumps out better here than any park I've ever been in," says Graig Nettles of the New York Yankees. "You know if you get the ball up here it's got a chance. I'd like to have seen Harmon Killebrew and those guys here. He would have hit a thousand."

Major league baseball's newest stadium featured eight home runs in Friday night's game between the Minnesota Twins and New York. The Yankees had the last shot, a grand slam by Nettles in the ninth inning, and the last laugh in a 10-5 victory over the Twins.

"It makes our hitters think they're better than they are," said Yankee Manager Gene Michaels of the homer-happy park.

Nettles' homer capped a five-run rally for the Yankees, but it was Oscar Gamble's RBI single that put them ahead for good. Gamble also hit one of four Yankee homers.

Gamble said he wouldn't want to play in the outfield at the Metrodome. "But at the plate, yeah. It's a good ballpark to DH in."

Twins reliever Ron Davis, who gave up the Yankee runs in the ninth, said, "Look what the Dome did to everybody. I'm a high fastball pitcher and people that throw like that are going to get into a lot of trouble here."

Willie Randolph and Dave Collins singled with one out off Davis, 1-5. Randolph stole third and scored when Gamble singled. Bobby Murcer then walked to load the bases for Nettles, who hit his second homer of the year, and his third career grand slam.

Also hitting homers for the Yankees were Roy Smalley and Lou Piniella. For the Twins, Tom Brunansky had two, including an inside-the-park job, and Gary Gaetti and Gary Ward had one each.

Angels 6, Brewers 5
Don Baylor hit a tie-breaking home run in the eighth inning as California overcame three Milwaukee homers to defeat the Brewers.

Baylor blasted his seventh homer, off reliever Dwight Bernard, 2-1, with one out in the eighth. Doug Corbett, 1-2, picked up the victory with spotless relief over the final two innings.

Indians 5, White Sox 2
John Denny pitched a five-hitter, and Mike Hargrove and Andre Thornton keyed a five-run third inning to lead Cleveland over Chicago for the Indians' fifth straight victory.

Red Sox 3, Mariners 2
Reid Nichols and Carney Lansford blasted home runs and Dennis Eckersley and Mark Clear combined on a

Tigers 6, A's 4
Lou Whitaker hit his second home run of the game, a two-run shot in the ninth inning, to lead Detroit over Oakland.

Eckersley, 6-3, pitched 71-3 innings, walked none and struck out six, giving him 58 strikeouts for the season, nine behind loser Floyd Bannister, 5-3. The Seattle starter fanned six and gave up six hits in his route-going performance.

Clark Keys S.F. Past Pittsburgh

By The Associated Press
Jack Clark has finished beating the San Francisco Giants for the time being, and has started taking it out on the rest of the National League with his bat.

Clark was one of the leaders in a pregame meeting Friday evening that he and Giants teammates said helped clear the air of some potentially demoralizing talk.

Then, the Giants right fielder belted a pair of homers and drove in five runs to lead the Giants to a 10-5 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates in a confrontation of the NL's two division doormats.

Last Sunday, Giants Manager Frank Robinson was quoted as saying that most of his players lacked fighting spirit. "A Pete Rose scares you," Robinson said. "He can do so many things to hurt you. But Jack Clark, if he's not at the top of his game, can't help you. I'm not putting him down, but his whole game is his hitting."

Wednesday night, Clark retaliated in a radio interview after the Giants had lost their third straight game to St. Louis. He said: "The Giants have to look themselves in the mirror and say whether they are even trying. I'm not a loser ... but the organization is a loser."

The meeting, which did not include Robinson, lasted for about 45 minutes. After the game, Clark said he told his teammates that things he had said "were blown out of proportion and it was just something we kind of had a laugh about ... the things I was saying were constructive-type criticism. I wouldn't say anything to hurt the team."

Robinson said he didn't think the meeting hurt but he wasn't sure it had done any good. Joe Morgan, the Giants second baseman, said, however: "I think we felt better when we went out there tonight."

Expos 4, Reds 2
Scott Sanderson tossed a six-hitter, and Andre Dawson and Tim Wallach drove in runs in Montreal's three-run first inning, giving the Expos their seventh straight victory. Sanderson, 5-3, struck out eight and walked none.

Reds starter Bruce Berenyi ran into early control problems. With one out in the first, he walked Terry Francona and wild pitched him to second. Dawson doubled home Francona, and a grounder sent Dawson to third. Dawson scored on another wild pitch, and after two more walks, Wallach singled in a run.

Cards 5, Padres 2
Willie McGee had two hits, stole a base and scored three runs to help Bob Forsch win his sixth game for St. Louis. Forsch, who has lost once, spaced seven hits in 72-3 innings before needing relief help from Bruce Sutter, who earned his 14th save. Sutter came on after Ruppert Jones homered for the Padres.

Astros 8, Mets 3
Nolan Ryan struck out 11 batters before he was forced to leave with a pulled groin muscle, and Phil Garner drove in three runs with a double and a single to pace Houston over New York.

Pitching in a persistent rain that began in the second inning, Ryan, 4-6, walked the first two men in the sixth inning, then fanned George Foster and Dave Kingman before he had to leave.

Cubs 4, Dodgers 3
Keith Moreland slugged a two-run homer, and Ryne Sandberg added a two-run double that gave the Cubs their second straight victory after a string of four losses.

Moreland's homer, his ninth, came in the fourth inning, and Sandberg belted his double in the fifth, both hits coming off Los Angeles starter Bob Welch, 5-3.

Gentlemen:

We have been appealing to our North Carolina Congressmen and Senators to do something to restore the ability of the average American to buy a home. For most of our country's history, affordable homeownership has been seen as the American Dream. Today, that Dream is dying.

Mr. Speaker; Senator Baker, you hold leadership positions which give you the ability to direct the efforts necessary to save the American Dream. We know the Dream can be saved through your commitment and efforts.

Please Gentlemen, save the American Dream of homeownership.

Evictions By Salvadoran Landowners

By RICHARD BOUDREAUX
Associated Press Writer
LOMA LARGA, El Salvador (AP) - Landowners, some backed by military force, have ousted hundreds of subsistence farmers from tiny plots since parts of a U.S.-aided land reform program were suspended less than two weeks ago.

The expulsions have created tension and insecurity throughout the country, along with fears the rightist forces in power could roll back the country's entire land reform.

In this quiet village in Ahuachapan province, removed from the guerrilla war, several families were evicted last week. But nine of them, led by 30-year-old Pedro Cruz, returned a few hours later to their 20-acre corn patch on a steep hill nearby to tend to spring planting despite death threats.

"Where else can we go? How else do we keep from starving?" asked Cruz. They had been driven out by their former landlord, an army sergeant, and four soldiers, despite the fact that Cruz and the others had gained title to the land earlier this year, under a 1980 agrarian reform decree.

The Salvadoran Communal Union, representing eight out of 10 farm workers, reported that 3,604 peasant families eligible under the "land to the tiller" program were evicted between March 28 and May 21 and claims the number of expulsions are increasing every day.

Some of them were forced out by village military commanders with close personal ties to former landlords.

Recently, when the Agrarian Lands Financial Institute asked the army commander in Sonsonate province to stop the expulsions, he replied in a note that "all the benefits (of the program) have been canceled" by the Constituent Assembly.

People also complain that even Lands Institute lawyers, in a number of cases, have sided with landlords in disputes and had peasants evicted.

"There is no single authority able to enforce the law," said Agriculture Undersecretary Jorge Pena, a Christian Democrat. "As a result there is confusion, but this is intentional. We are watching a subtle trampling of the land reform process."

Double Ring Ceremony Performed

ROCKY MOUNT — The double ring wedding ceremony of Patricia Lynne Denson of Rocky Mount and Douglas Glenn Daniel Jr. of Greenville took place Saturday afternoon in the Oakdale Baptist Church here. The Rev. Harry Fowler conducted the two o'clock service.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Denson of Rocky Mount. The bridegroom's parents are

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Daniel Sr. of Rocky Mount.

Escorted by her father, the bride was given in marriage by her parents. She wore a formal white gown of silk-ened organza over peau de soie. The bodice featured a Queen Anne neckline accented with re-embroidered alencon lace motif and bridal pearls. The long bishop sleeves came to a calla point and the chapel train fell from the natural waistline. She wore a waltz length veil attached to a Camelot cap of matching re-embroidered alencon lace and pearls. The illusion was bordered with scalloped lace motif and pearls. She carried a bouquet of silk lilies, roses, daisies and Queen Anne's lace.

Dawn Rhodes of Battleboro served as matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Kim Jones and Toni Denson, sisters of the bride, Catherine Lynch and Susan Daniel, sisters of the bridegroom, and Cathy Wittman, all of Rocky Mount. All honor attendants wore long formal gowns in lavender. The dresses were constructed with an empire waist and spaghetti straps and featured a sheer matching jacket. The matron of honor carried two white silk roses and the bridesmaids each carried a white silk rose.

The father of the bridegroom was the best man.

Ushers included Jim Reid and Tom Groom of Rocky Mount and Ralph Thompson, Bill Wilson and Phil Trull, all of Greenville.

A reception, hosted by the parents of the bride, took place after the ceremony in the church fellowship hall. Chris Bertram and Dot Denson, aunts of the bride, served punch. Helen Proctor served the wedding cake. Doris Riggs of Murfreesboro directed the wedding.

After the wedding rehearsal, a party was held at the bride's home. Hostesses were Kim Jones and Toni Denson, sisters of the bride, and Chris Bertram, aunt of the bride. A tea was given for friends and relatives by the bride's grandmother at her home. The couple were honored by the bridegroom's parents with a pig picking at the bride's parents' home.

The bride graduated from East Carolina University with a degree in psychology. She is now a computer programmer with Carolina Enterprises in Tarboro. The bridegroom received a degree in business from ECU and is currently attending Pitt Community College. He is the manager of Stop Shop-Western Union, Greenville.

After a wedding trip to

On The Young Side

By Lisa Wang

Six finalists have been selected to attend Boy's State on the Wake Forest University campus this summer to learn about and practice governmental procedures.

They were chosen on the basis of participation in school activities, scholastic achievement and community involvement. The final screening before selection was a personal interview.

Selected to attend were James Buie, John Byrd, Thomas Bennett, Alan Dickens, John Ormond and Reid Tripp. The event is sponsored by the American Legion.

Selected to deliver the "Rampant Review," a radio spot for Rose High happenings aired Saturday mornings on WOOW radio, is rising senior Josie Keller. She was chosen by Chip Little, this year's Rampant Reviewer, and Betty Topper, speech and drama teacher, on the basis of a try-out reading. Alternate for the position is Lisa Whichard.

As its public service project for the year, FHA, under the direction of Elaine Tschetter, donated an infant safety seat to the Tar River Civitan Club which is conducting a Save-A-Babe program in cooperation with the Pitt County Health Department.

Two special awards were presented at the Key Club installation banquet May 26 at Western Sizzlin'. Bill Coffman was given the "Key Clubber of the Year" award while Bobby Nicols was named "Most Dedicated Key Clubber."

At Wit's End

When I travel, I always pack three dresses short of everything I have in my closet.

I don't have to like the clothes. They don't have to belong to me. They don't have to fit. They don't even have to be "in season." But in case I need them, they'll be right there — somewhere in those 18 pieces of luggage.

I was on a talk show once with a travel expert, Polly Esther, who stuffed her hose in her shoes, had underwear that doubled for a swimsuit, packed only earth tones, and rolled her skirts over a cardboard cylinder that held Christmas wrapping paper.

Polly packed everything she needed for three weeks into a small overnighter and said she saved a fortune on porters who charged her a dollar a bag every time she had to reclaim her luggage.

I got to thinking about Polly recently when a cabbie lifted one of my larger suitcases and asked, "How long have you been selling transmissions, lady?"

Last week, I spent my first vacation living for eight days out of a small overnighter. There's a couple of things Polly left out.

Any item you bring that is "see-through," make sure you have something to cover what is looking back from the other side.

Do not conserve space by threading your estrogen into a necklace and wearing it.

An Ace bandage worn as a strapless blouse for evening wear doesn't do it.

Do not pack an earth-tone wardrobe unless you pack earth-tone nail polish that blends when spilled.

A traveler who travels light needs constant reassurance that "I will never see any of these people again."

An umbrella in the hand is worth two necks of the travel agents who told you it never rains in Los Angeles during the summer.

Slacks that sit down when you stand up are trying to communicate.

When you are traveling with one piece of luggage, five different porters will carry it to your room, each one demanding a tip for its return.

Polly was right about a lot of things, but she should have mentioned the 30-pound tank of deodorant you have to wear strapped to your back. Getting refills for it is real important.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, wore a formal gown of candlelight silk taffeta designed with a V-neckline accented by taffeta and lace ruffles and a bow. The three-quarter puff sleeves were accented by schiffli lace which extended to a bracelet length. The fitted bodice featured a lace applique with pearls. The flowing skirt and attached chapel train were edged in lace. She wore a candlelight bridal hat of schiffli lace accented with matching ribbon. breath and candleholders. Guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie Morris. Rice bags were passed out by Kim and Tina Williams. Assisting during the reception were Ruth Mills, Betty Pollard, Freda Pollard, Sandra Hendrix and Sheryl Gladson.

COOKING IS FUN!

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

About five years ago a reader asked me for a recipe for a pineapple macadamia cake made in a large loaf pan. Just last year another reader asked for a new recipe for the cake — one that could be made in small-size loaf pans — to give as gifts.

Now comes still another request: a pineapple macadamia cake made in a small, fluted tube pan. We enjoyed developing this recipe. The cake is a wholesome dessert that's not overly sweet. Good for coffee klatches.

HAWAIIAN CAKE
8 ounces glaze (candied) pineapple chunks

1½ cups sifted cake flour
1½ teaspoons baking powder
½ cup (¼-pound stick) butter
1 cup sifted confectioners' sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 large egg
1 large egg yolk
2-3rds cup milk
½ cup chopped unsalted macadamia nuts (from a 3½-ounce jar), see Note

¼ cup finely chopped shredded coconut
Slice the pineapple chunks 1-16th-inch thick — there should be 1 cup lightly packed.

On wax paper or in a bowl sift together the cake flour and baking powder.

In the large bowl of an electric mixer cream the butter, confectioners' sugar and vanilla. Add the whole egg and the egg yolk; at medium speed beat for 1 minute. Stir in the flour mixture in 3 additions alternately with the milk, just until smooth each time. Fold in the pineapple, macadamias and coconut. Turn into a buttered 6-cup non-stick fluted tube pan.

Bake in the preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — 45 minutes. (Cake will have a crack on top.) Loosen edges and turn out on a wire rack; cool completely. Store in the refrigerator, but bring to room temperature before serving.

Note: If these are not available, use the whole salted macadamia nuts that come in jars or cans and chop them coarsely.

PATIO PARTY
Sangria Refried Bean Dip
REFRIED BEAN DIP
Easy to put together when the refried beans are on hand.

2 cups refried beans
¼ cup tomato sauce
¼ cup prepared taco sauce
4 ounces jack cheese, shredded medium-fine
Tortilla chips

Into an attractive casserole (or similar utensil) that can be used on the surface unit of a range, turn the beans, tomato sauce, taco sauce and cheese. Heat very slowly, stirring often, until the cheese is melted. Serve warm as a dip with the tortilla chips.

SNACKTIME FARE
Chocolate Bars Beverage
CHOCOLATE BARS
Repeated on request.

Honey graham crackers
1 cup butter
¾ cup firmly packed light brown sugar
3 tablespoons unsweetened cocoa
½ cup semi-sweet chocolate pieces
1 cup chopped (medium-fine) walnuts

Line a 15 by 10 by 1-inch jellyroll pan with foil. If necessary, break apart the graham crackers at their perforations. Fit one layer of them, with edges touching, so they cover the bottom of the pan. In a medium saucepan stir together the butter and sugar until the sugar melts; stir in the cocoa. Without stirring, bring to a full boil and boil 2 minutes. Off heat, add the chocolate; stir until melted; stir in walnuts; pour evenly over crackers. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until top bubbles — 10 minutes. Cool and cut apart at cracker perforations.

Hatred, Bigotry Mock Sacrifice Of Fallen Heroes

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: May 31 is Memorial Day — the day for Americans to officially honor those heroes who have given their lives in defense of their country.

I would like to quote an excerpt from a sermon delivered by Roland B. Gittlesohn, the Jewish chaplain of the 5th Marine Division, when he dedicated a cemetery on the bloody, windswept island of Iwo Jima:

"Somewhere in this plot of ground, there may lie that man who could have discovered a cure for cancer. Under one of these Christian crosses, or beneath a Jewish Star of David, there may rest now a man who was destined to be a great prophet. Now they lie here silently in this sacred soil, and we gather to consecrate this earth in their memory. . . .

"Here lie officers and men, black and white, rich and poor. . . . Here are Protestants, Catholics and Jews. . . . Here no man prefers another because of his faith, or despises him because of his color. Here there are no quotas of how many from each group are admitted or allowed. Theirs is the highest and purest democracy.

"Any man among us, the living, who . . . lifts his hand in hate against a brother, or thinks himself superior to those who happen to be in minority, makes of this ceremony and of the bloody sacrifice it commemorates, an empty, hollow mockery."

Abby, it's regrettable that Chaplain Gittlesohn's powerful words will probably go completely unheeded when — and if — they are read by those who need most to learn this lesson.
MARTIN M. SEGALL, HALLANDALE, FLA.

DEAR ABBY: Last night I got the most terrible insult from the man I love — my husband. While we were making love, I started to say something and he said, "Please don't talk to me now."

I tried to tell him that I wasn't going to start a conversation with him, I just felt like saying something sweet and loving pertaining to the situation, like, "Darling, you are wonderful and I love you very much." Then he said, "Just don't say anything. You are interfering with my fantasies."

Fantasies? Abby, why does he have to have fantasies when he has me right there?

HURT IN BRAINERD

DEAR HURT: Since a "fantasy" is "an imagined fulfillment of desire," your husband may be "hallucinating" about making love to Cleopatra, Mona Lisa or Betsy Ross. Don't feel insulted. Exercise your right to fantasize, too, if it will help.

DEAR ABBY: I have been married to John J. Jones for nearly three years; and I am still being confused with John's ex-wife because she insists on using the name that now belongs to me. I am the one and only "Mrs. John J. Jones." To further complicate matters, my first name is Joanne and so is hers. And to make matters worse, we live in the same apartment building!

When I married John, his ex-wife became "Joanne Cohen (her maiden name) Jones." Or "Mrs. Joanne Jones" — not "Mrs. John J. Jones."

Our personal mail, bills and magazines are constantly being misdirected to each other. It's a mess!

I can't believe she doesn't know better, so please print this so I can mail it to her. Or do you think she knows better, but enjoys giving me a headache?

THE ONLY MRS. JOHN J. JONES

DEAR MRS. JONES: Since you are both inconvenienced by the confusion, it's highly unlikely that she "knows better." Here's your letter. Mail it to her. And I hope it doesn't wind up in your mailbox.

DEAR ABBY: With summer here, please call your readers' attention to the danger of automobiles equipped with power windows. Who knows how many young lives you could save?

In just one day I heard of two incidents where two drivers inadvertently pushed the rear-window button while a child's head was out the window! Even the children themselves can accidentally push the button with their knees — unless the driver can lock the window at his seat. I hope you think this is important enough to print.
MILLIE H. IN HARRISBURG

DEAR MILLIE: I do. Now, meet Lloyd Kleckner, who has another life-saving suggestion for automobile drivers:

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a five by seven picture. During the second week with a wallet size picture and write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement. Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to "The Daily Reflector" one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

Dolley Madison, the wife of President James Madison, is credited with the invention of ice cream.

"The Best of Dear Abby," featuring Abby's best answers and favorite responses during the past 25 years, is now available. You can obtain a copy of this new best-selling book by sending $9.95 plus $1 for postage and handling to "The Best of Dear Abby," in care of this newspaper, 4400 Johnson Dr., Fairway, Kan. 66205. Make checks payable to Universal Press Syndicate.

Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

The Blue Ridge Mountains, which are included in Virginia's Shenandoah National Park, were once at the bottom of the sea — some 450 million years ago. Today, according to the 1982 Mobil Travel Guide, they are 2,000 feet above sea level. About 300 square miles of them sit within the park.

Northern Ireland Offers Study In Human Conflicts

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer
BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Sean and Sam are "the best of mates."

For two years they have worked together on the factory floor, two ordinary men who joke over yesterday's problems, worry about tomorrow's and try to make a decent living for themselves.

But Sean O'Neill, a Roman Catholic, and Sam Ledlie, a Protestant, do not truly know each other. Over Northern Ireland's sectarian divide, they cannot.

At the end of the day, each heads home to his own ghetto, into his own community's prejudices and fears. Sam can only guess about Sean's youthful "involvement" in the anti-British movement here. Sean can only surmise what apprehensions lie at the back of his Protestant friend's mind.

They both yearn for peace in their troubled land, but with little hope.

"It's the flag wavers that've got us," says O'Neill. "Politicians on both sides have a lot to answer for," says Ledlie.

The everyday story of this fragile friendship helps illustrate the sad story of Northern Ireland, torn by an underground war involving the Catholic guerrillas of the Irish Republican Army, the British army and Protestant paramilitary groups. The IRA wants to unite Northern Ireland with the predominantly Catholic Irish Republic, but the Protestants are determined to keep it British.

The roots of conflict run deeper — in centuries of enmity between the dominant Protestant majority and Catholic minority here.

The violence has left thousands dead or injured. But there are lesser casualties as well — lives altered, an economy shattered, friendships broken.

The O'Neill-Ledlie friendship may be next. Their factory, the financially troubled De Lorean automaking firm, is shutting down next week, and the two workers will head home for good.

Sean O'Neill, 30, is a maintenance worker at De Lorean, in the rolling green hills of suburban Dunmurry. Dark-eyed, mustached and self-assured, he lives with his wife and three children in a modest home at Twinbrook, an all-Catholic housing project splattered with "BRITS OUT" graffiti.

Sam Ledlie, 52, is an assembly-line repairman, married, with a grown daughter. Bald and ruddy-faced, Ledlie speaks in an earnest, halting voice. He and O'Neill became friends as union representatives at De Lorean.

"We're the best of mates. Like that," Ledlie told a visitor, holding out two fingers pressed together.

Interviewed in his tidy brick rowhouse, within sight of the De Lorean plant, Ledlie said he has worked with Catholics most of life.

In fact, until 1969, when "the troubles" began, his best friend was a fellow worker from the Catholic slum Falls Road. "I was up to his house every other Friday night. I drank in the Falls Road bars with him," Ledlie recalled with a laugh.

"But we lost all contact because of the troubles." Ledlie no longer ventures into Catholic areas.

The bloodshed of Belfast has not closely touched his life. But his friend O'Neill, who grew up in Falls Road, knows it well. A cousin was shot dead by Protestant gunmen and a close friend was killed in a bomb explosion, O'Neill said, talking above the barroom din at a Catholic social club near Falls Road.

KEN SMITH

LUDIE SMITH

Husband-Wife Team Installed

Incoming presidents and other officers of the Greenville Jaycees and Jay-C-Ettes were installed during annual ceremonies Saturday night.

Ken Smith was installed as the Jaycees president and his wife, Ludie, took the oath as president of the local women's organization. The occasion marked the first time in the history of the two chapters that husband and wife were installed to head their respective organizations during the same year.

Handling the installations were Jim Cole of Sanford, new president of the North Carolina Jaycees, and Betty Willis of Rocky Mount, newly elected president of the state Jayceettes.

Other officers assuming their new duties for the Jaycees were: Charles Asbell, administrative vice president; Bobby Tripp, internal vice president; Jeff Allen, external vice president; Waverly Barnes, ways and means vice president; Tony Lewis, treasurer; Joel Johnson, assistant treasurer; Brad Walls, secretary; Greg Tripp, state director; Bob James, chaplain; Calvin Shearin, parliamentarian; and directors John White, Richard Tucker, Larry Harrison, Steve Jones, Randy Doub and Darrell Harrison.

Jay-C-Ette officers installed were: Laura Jackson, external vice president; Jane Harrison, ways and means vice president; Ross Walls, internal vice president; Linda James, secretary; Lois Hecker, treasurer; Susan Cox, parliamentarian; and directors Kim Carraway and Elizabeth Whitford.

During the banquet, held at the American Legion facility, Floyd Little was presented an Ambassador award, given to a club member in recognition for outstanding service over an extended period.

"Aging Out" ceremonies were conducted for Mark Meltzer, Marty Goldfarb, Tom Taft and Tom Barrington.

Smith, a Beaufort native, is a 1974 graduate of the school of technology at East Carolina University and joined the Jaycees in 1977. He is a past director, internal vice president and state director of the local chapter, and district director of the state Jaycees. Smith is scheduling manager for Eaton Corp.

Mrs. Smith, a Craven County native, is a graduate of East Carteret High School and joined the Jay-C-Ettes in 1978. She is a past director, treasurer and secretary of the organization and was named "Jay-C-Ette of the Year" for 1978-79. She is a paralegal for the law firm of Dixon, Horne and Duffus.

The Smiths have two sons, Stephen, 10, and Jeffrey, two, and attend Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church.

Climbing Lives Out Your Dreams

NEW YORK (AP) — The average person may not think he has much in common with people who set records climbing the Himalayas in winter. But Ned Gillette, leader of an American expedition that did just that last winter, feels he has a message for everybody: "Live your dreams."

"People see the pictures we bring back and the things we do," Gillette said on a visit to New York, "and they may not want to go on an expedition, but they might have wanted to learn to play the piano for a long time or dance or do something to a very high degree to the very best of their ability. I think it's really important for people sometime during their life — even if it's just pumping gas or whatever they do — to do their very best."

Gillette, who's 36, Jan Reynolds, 26, and Jim Bridwell, 37, became the first Americans to climb Mount Pumori in the Himalayas, and the first people ever to tackle the 23,442-foot mountain in winter. It was a sort of dividend on a bid for another first by Gillette and Miss Reynolds — to become the first people ever to circle Mount Everest. They completed the first half of the circle — in Nepal — last winter. Now, after a springtime trip home, they have set out to complete the job in Tibet — to touch the Nepalese border at roughly the point where, from the Nepalese side, they touched the Tibetan border.

It was on Jan. 6 that Gillette, Miss Reynolds and Bridwell reached the top of Mount Pumori. They didn't spend much time up there, though. Bridwell virtually ran down right away. Because he, more lightly shod than the others, was afraid his feet might freeze.

Miss Reynolds and Gillette spent all of about 10 minutes at the top. The day after they had returned to their base camp, the trio saw an avalanche sweep over the spot where their advanced base camp had been. Such is the fabric of adventure.

Church Leaders Say Upturn Baffles Soviets

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

Signs of growing interest in religion among people in the Soviet Union along with puzzled, uneasy efforts by the government to curb it are reported by U.S. church leaders who visited there this month.

"The Soviet government seems a little confused about it and doesn't know just what to do," says the Rev. Arie Brouwer, administrative head of the Reformed Church in America and chairman of the U.S. delegation at a recent interreligious peace conference in Moscow.

"It's a terribly demoralized society, economically and in other ways, and people sense a need for spiritual strength. The government is ambivalent about it, but certainly is maintaining its formal control and restrictions on the churches." Numerous other U.S. churchmen interviewed individually by telephone reported evidence of rising religious impulses among the Soviet people, coupled with the groping government counter-efforts and continued restraints on churches.

"The churches are more active and fuller than in the early '70s," says the Rev. Lamar Gibble of the Church of the Brethren based in Elgin, Ill. He has visited the Soviet Union five times since 1971.

"Besides the larger numbers, there also are more young persons and men, although women still predominate. But there's a greater distribution of young, old, male, female."

He says there also appears to be "less restriction on the practice of religion," although several hundred people remain confined for religious reasons, mainly people of unregistered churches.

The Rev. Peter Dyck of the Mennonite Central Committee in Akron, Pa., says that while there are indications of an upturn in religious interest, "I wouldn't call it a great awakening."

"It's more disillusionment with the system that isn't producing the new heaven on earth that had been hoped for, with people coming more and more to realize man does not live by bread alone. They're asking, 'what's the purpose of life?' Marxism doesn't answer that."

Reacting to the trend, Soviet publications deny any genuine religious resurgence, dismissing tendencies of young people to wear crosses, marry in church and have babies baptized as mere fads.

But uncertainty about it also is officially voiced. Puzzled, the government organ, Izvestia, recently asked, "Is this really fashion or the consequence of mistakes in the education of our youth?"

The Rev. Avery Post, president of the United Church of Christ, says many U.S. delegates "noted what seemed to us something of a religious renaissance, especially among young people."

"We got the impression of very alive, active and full churches. There also are indications the Soviet state is stepping up its own atheistic campaign."

"In some ways this was one of the strong reasons for our going there in the first place, to express our solidarity with the Russian churches at a moment when they are under very great pressure by the state to stay in line, and at a moment when the Soviet state obviously is concerned at the growth in religious awareness and church loyalty."

Dyck, who has visited Soviet churches several times in the past decade, says they have "somewhat more freedom than five or 10 years ago" and "pressures of surveillance on worship services are not as severe as they had been."

But churches are not free in the Western sense, he adds, having only "freedom to worship" inside registered churches, with no right to preach elsewhere or hold classes for youngsters.

Humans Misread Nuclear Crisis

By CHRISTOPHER GRAFF
Associated Press Writer
MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP)
—The first alarm sounded at 12:56 a.m. In the next four minutes the reactor core of the Vermont Yankee nuclear power plant came within 44 seconds — and three safety systems — of starting a meltdown.

Any one of the automatic safety systems was sufficient to end the danger, and they all worked. The plant shut down safely.

Still, the April 24 incident provided a stark reminder, in the words of Public Service Department Commissioner Richard Saudek, that "ultimately it is humans who control this plant."

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission said operators in the control room were off the mark in guessing what was wrong and also failed to realize how the plant had saved itself.

Probably the most serious

THE CONTROL ROOM ... This control room is the nerve center of the Vermont Yankee nuclear power plant in Vernon, Vt. During an April 24, 1982, emergency at the facility, the reactor operators gathered around the main reactor panel near operational problem at the Vernon plant in its decade of producing power, the incident also was one of the most closely documented at the plant due to investigations by the NRC and the state of Vermont. The following reconstruction is based on NRC documents.

At 12:50 a.m., two reactor operators and the nuclear safety engineer were in the control room of the 540-megawatt reactor. The shifts had just changed and the plant operators were preparing to lower reactor power from 100 percent to perform routine checks.

Sometime before 12:56, with the power in the process of being reduced to 65 percent of capacity, a valve stuck open on one of the pumps that feed water to the vessel containing the reactor's fuel.

The pumps are turned on manually, but turn off automatically when the water level reaches 170 inches above the top of the fuel, 14 inches above normal.

At 12:56 the rising water level led to a shutdown of the pumps. The first alarm went off. Within six seconds, a control room operator had turned the pumps back on. But 2½ minutes later when the pumps automatically turned off again the water level had reached 171 inches — one inch in the control room noticed the shutdown. By now their eyes were on the main reactor control panel.

Without any water feeding into the vessel, the water inside the container began boiling off at a rate of about two inches a second.

A loss of water, if unchecked, would lead to a meltdown of the reactor core, releasing radiation into the environment.

Twenty-two seconds after the second pump shut down, the water level was down to 136 inches, and the reactor itself turned off automatically.

Fourteen seconds later, the water level hit 87 inches. The emergency core cooling system switched on, pouring water into the vessel at 4,250 gallons a minute. It was the first time the plant's emergency cooling system was used.

It took slightly more than a minute for the emergency cooling system to do its work, bringing the water level up to 173 inches. The plant was safe.

When the pumps first turned off, the two operators quickly went to the main reactor control panel, located at the center of a V-shaped wall of lights, alarms and dials.

The shift supervisor heard the pumps slow down and entered the control room, joining the two others at the main panel.

The nuclear safety engineer took a position at the computer console, a few feet behind the others. His post was created after the nation's worst, commercial nuclear accident in March 1979 at Three Mile Island.

The safety engineer is supposed to keep an overall eye on events and provide advice to the operators.

Investigation shows that the operators thought they had saved the plant by using the feedwater pumps, unaware that they had turned off again.

The three men in direct control of the plant also were unaware that the emergency core cooling system had switched on — and had provided the critical water.

The nuclear safety engineer, meanwhile, had noticed the emergency system's activation, and assumed the others had too. The NRC has criticized the engineer's lack of communication.

The main question raised was: How close did the Vernon reactor come to a meltdown?

When the emergency core cooling system clicked on, the reactor core was within 87 inches of losing its coolant. But officials said that uncovering of the reactor fuel in those next 44 seconds could never have happened.

First, there were two emergency cooling systems — one high-pressure and the other low-pressure. Both of them switched on, but either would have been sufficient to raise the water level.

At the same time another emergency system switched on, one that isolated the reactor from the rest of the plant and slowed the boiling rate by increasing the pressure inside the vessel. That too would have kept the water from boiling off and exposing the reactor core, officials said.

While the hardware gets good marks, investigators were critical of the workers, complaining that the shift

'Lost Colony' Opens June 11

MANTEO — It's countdown time for the 42nd production season of Paul Green's outdoor drama, "The Lost Colony." The 1982 season of the Joe Layton edition of the symphonic drama will open June 11 in Waterside Theater and run nightly except Sundays through Aug. 28.

"We have an excellent cast lined up," says associate producer-general manager Bob Knowles. The cast reported in on May 24.

"Our auditioning process was very successful and the cast we will have this summer is quite capable of continuing the quality presentation of 'The Lost Colony.'"

Veterans like Nancy Kaye (Queen Elizabeth), Cora Mae Basnight (Agona), in her 26th season, Perry Turner (Old Tom), Walter Tucker (Father Martin), Pete Peterson (Wanchese), Robert Midgette (Manteo), and John Gullucci (Simon Fernando) will be returning in their same roles.

Various universities and colleges will be sending some talented young professionals to "The Lost Colony" for their first season, according to Knowles.

For information on "The Lost Colony," interested persons are to write to: P. O. Box 40, Manteo, N.C., 27954.

Book News

By MEREDITH FOLTZ

These books are a sampling of new Sheppard Library titles which appeared on the American Library Association's 1981 list of Best Books for Young Adults. The complete list is available at the library.

"Would You Settle for Improbable?" by P.J. Petersen. Ms. Karnisian, "King Kong" to the ninth graders she student-teaches, asks them to befriend a long-time juvenile offender who has entered their class. Although the friendship blossoms, Arnold's graduation with the other class members is threatened by his old habits.

"Adolf Hitler: A Portrait in Tyranny" by Edward Dolan Jr. Hitler, who rose from humble beginnings to lead Germany into the Second World War, was skilled in using the lies, propaganda and force which are the tools of tyrants. His beliefs and methods and his power over his fellow Germans are described here as an example by which other would-be tyrants can be recognized and opposed.

"The Legend of Tarik" by Walter Dean Myers. Trained by wise old men, armed with a magic sword and joined by two unlikely companions, Tarik sets out against El Muerte who has murdered the young knight's family and terrorized the medieval towns of northern and western Africa.

"Coming Back Alive" by Dennis Reader. The death of Bridget's parents and the divorce of Dylan's parents drive the desperate teen-agers to the rugged mountains of northern California where they seek the peace of living off the land in a wilderness without other people.

"The Keeper of the Isis Light" by Monica Hughes. Olwen, daughter of long-dead human parents, has adapted to the strange environment and solitary life as keeper of the lighthouse on the planet Isis. She is upset when Guardian, her robot companion, tells her that human settlers are coming.

"Pack of Wolves" by Vasil Bykov. Early in World War II, Levhuck must lead a small party of injured Russians trying to reach a medical unit before the Germans completely close around the Russian troop company. The group of wounded Russians is chased through swamps by the relentless Germans.

"Don't Forget to Fly," compiled by Paul Janeczko. The modern poems collected here have been grouped together by such life experiences as love, parenthood, separation, death, childhood, war, marriage, even trips to the dentist.

"A Circle in the Sea" by Steve Senn. Robin, a human girl, and Breee, a dolphin, dream of each other. As Robin's mind comes to inhabit Breee's body, she learns of the threat which is pushing the dolphins toward a revolt against the Others, the humans.

Chrysler Museum Labeled 'Treasure Trove Of Art'

NORFOLK, VA. — People traveling to Tidewater Virginia this summer, exploring Williamsburg or Virginia Beach, can also easily visit the oceanfront city of Norfolk.

Norfolk is home of the Chrysler Museum, hailed by the Wall Street Journal as "one of the 20 top museums in the country." Chrysler has also been acclaimed as "a treasure trove of art" by Town and Country, and "one of the most well-rounded museums in the nation" by Art Voices/South.

The reasons behind this praise are the museum's collections — the fine collection of Italian art; one of the great 19th century French art collections in the country, as well as the 10,000 piece-Chrysler Institute of Glass, rated one of the major glass collections in the world.

The 40 galleries of the Chrysler Museum are filled with treasures from ancient civilizations to the present, including works from Greece, Rome, the Orient and pre-Columbian America, as well as paintings and sculpture by masters associated with the major periods of European and American art.

The renowned Garbisch collection of American Native paintings provide the Norfolk visitor with a rare opportunity to view the beginnings of America's cultural heritage. There are works of 18th century American artists such as Benjamin West and John Singleton Copley, as well as those of 19th century artists including Asher B. Durand and Thomas Cole. American Impressionists Childe Hassam, Mary Cassatt and John Henry Twachtman are represented, as are members of "The Eight," including George Wesley Bellows and Robert Henri. In the upstairs galleries, nearly one-third of the exhibition space is devoted to paintings and sculptures of 20th century American artists in the fields of Pop Art, Op Art, New Realism, and Abstract Expressionism — by artists Franz Kline, Willem de Kooning, Jackson Pollock, Larry Rivers, Richard Diebenkorn, Roy Lichtenstein and Andy Warhol.

The Italian collection demonstrates the wide spectrum of styles which flourished in Rome, Bologna, Genoa, Naples and Venice between the 16th and 18th centuries. The Chrysler Museum owns a sculpture by Gianlorenzo Bernini, "The Savior of the World," which The New York Times has called "one of the greatest single works of art in this country."

Another important work is Georges de La Tour's "Saint Philippe," one of only six paintings by the 17th century French artist accredited to the artist in American collections and among only 31 of his works known in the world.

French Impressionism and Post-Impressionism periods are well represented by works by Manet, Degas, Cezanne, Gauguin, Tissot, Signac, Renoir, Dore and Fantin-Latour.

In addition to the permanent collection, The Chrysler Museum has a program of changing exhibitions on loan from museums in this country and from abroad. Throughout the summer, a free tour is offered each Sunday at 3 p.m.

The Chrysler Museum is located at Olney Road and Mowbray Arch in downtown Norfolk. Hours are 10-4 Tuesdays through Saturdays, and 1 to 5 on Sundays. Admission and parking for the walk-in visitor are free, and the museum is air-conditioned.

"Gone With the Wind," a tremendously successful novel written by Margaret Mitchell, was the author's only book.

Center Specials

CHAPEL HILL — A four-part series on the Holocaust and a special on the rock music of Buddy Holly are two of the programs being presented during the coming week on the UNC Center for Television, Channel 25, Greenville. Brief details are:

— Tuesday 10 p.m. — The historical facts behind the Holocaust are examined in "The Final Solution: Auschwitz," a four-part series to be shown on four consecutive Tuesdays. Part one examines the growth of Nazi racial doctrines from their origins to 1939. Part two shows the period 1939 to 1941 as the program developed into a systematic attempt to murder civilians in occupied countries. Part three describes death factories and extermination camps; and part four attempts to explain why, even in the last years of the war, the killing machine continued to function without hindrance.

— Wednesday 9 p.m. — "Buddy Holly: Reminiscing" examines the life and music of the 1950s pioneer rock n' roll singer, Charles Hardin (Buddy) Holly. Although he was on the music scene for only 18 months before he was killed in a plane crash, he left behind a legacy of nearly 50 songs including a few great hits. Reasons for Holly's continuing popularity 20 years after his death is one of the things examined in this show.

The Ashburton-Webster Treaty was signed in 1842 to settle outstanding differences between Canada and the United States. The treaty was negotiated by Lord Ashburton and Daniel Webster. It settled, among other things, disputes on boundaries. Although the treaty was not popular in Canada, the United States or Britain, it served as a compromise.

We put our foot down about apartments being within walking distance.

Wedgewood Arms apartments are within walking distance of three shopping centers, a nursery school, a junior high school, doctors' and dentists' offices and an athletic center.

As if that wasn't enough, three major traffic arteries, 264 Bypass, Arlington Blvd., and Charles St. are close enough to be seen and not heard.

Fact is, no apartments in town can legitimately claim to be more convenient to more things than Wedgewood Arms. And, that's not all. Because Wedgewood Arms is not only convenient, it's different in other ways, too.

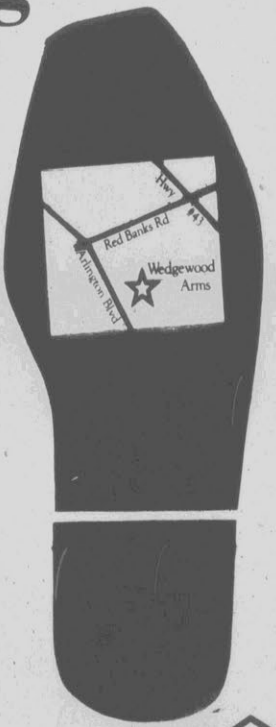

Take the floorplans: they're different from anything you've ever seen. And when you add in high energy efficiency, tennis courts, swimming pool, and the neighborhood "feeling" that these apartments will give you — well, you'll just have to see for yourself.

Cyclorama To Reopen

ATLANTA (AP) — After nearly three years of restoration work, the Cyclorama — the famous circular painting of the Battle of Atlanta — is going back on public display next month.

The historic painting, which is 42 feet high and almost 358 feet around, shows the horror of July 22, 1864, when Confederate soldiers led by Gen. John B. Hood desperately defended this railroad city against Gen. William T. Sherman's charging army.

Art restoration specialists recently finished work on the badly damaged painting, and the reopening of the building that houses it is set for June 5.

While work on the restoration proceeded, contractors built a 184-seat revolving platform that can show the painting in about 13 minutes while a recording provides battle narration and sound effects. Also included in the $5.5 million project is a new auditorium to show a film of events leading up to the battle.

The Cyclorama was painted by a German team in 1885 and 1886 for Milwaukee's Weyner Studio. In the fashion of the day, the painting was taken around the country on railroad cars in a traveling show.

"Usually the narrators would be Confederate veterans, and their accounts were not always accurate," said Franklin Garrett, Atlanta's city historian. "But people would think, 'Gee, this man was there.' It had an air of immediacy about it, if not accuracy."

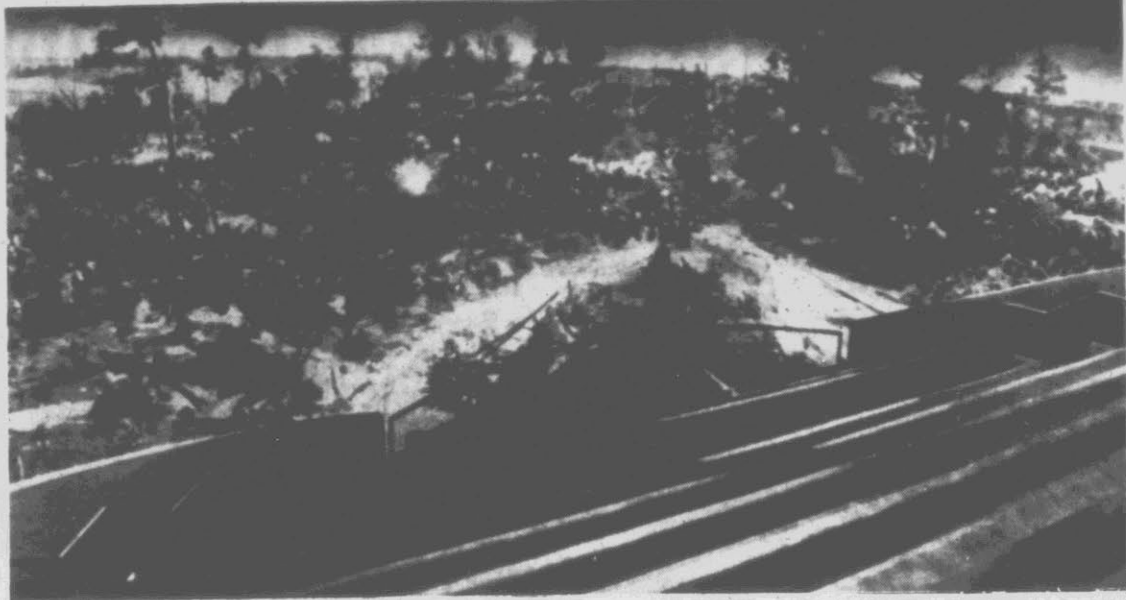

A private company

brought the painting here in 1890 and donated it to the city in 1898, Garrett said.

The painting began deteriorating slowly after a heavy snow caved in the roof of its building in 1893, the historian said. In 1964, a restoration expert warned that the rotting painting, hanging like a shower curtain around the walls of a circular room, would fall in four to five years.

It didn't fall, but water from a leaky roof caused a 37-inch tear in 1976 and spurred the city to undertake the $2.3 million restoration and the associated projects.

The Battle of Atlanta, the largest of four engagements in Sherman's campaign against the city, was fought a few miles east of what was then a city of 10,000. It was largely indecisive, Garrett said.

Sherman's army of 90,000 had marched from Chattanooga, Tenn., in May and reached the outskirts of Atlanta in July after a series of flanking maneuvers around Gen. Joseph Johnston's 60,000 troops. Atlanta finally fell on Sept. 2, 1864.

Tourist and school children can see the battle of Atlanta in air-conditioned comfort when the Atlanta Cyclorama reopens June 5. The cyclorama has been closed for nearly three years for restoration. (AP Laserphoto)

The Birth of the Great Seal

Designing a Great Seal for the new nation was no easy chore. Artist Pierre Eugene du Simitiere, hired by a committee of Benjamin Franklin, John Adams, and Thomas Jefferson, drew up the first design (below left); it contained the Goddess Liberty, an American soldier, several shields, the "eye of providence," and the motto "E Pluribus Unum." Though the design was rejected by the Congress, several of its elements were to be in the final version.

Francis Hopkinson, a Philadelphia designer, tried his hand in the next effort. He embellished the shield with red, white, and blue, as well as an arrow, an olive branch, and a constellation of 13 stars. When Hopkinson's design failed to win approval, a third committee hired lawyer William Barton. Barton added a small crested imperial eagle, its wings spread. Still not satisfied, Congress turned matters over to Charles Thomson, its secretary. Borrowing elements from each of the earlier designs and substituting an American bald eagle, Thomson came up with a scheme that finally, after some minor changes, won approval. On June 20, 1782, the nation had a Great Seal, the forerunner of the seal in use today.

Carolina Today

A tour of the governor's mansion guided by the Carolyn Hunt, wife of Gov. Jim Hunt, was filmed Wednesday by the staff of WNCT-TV's "Carolina Today" program and will be shown Monday starting at 7:10 a.m.

Slim Short, program host, said the tour of the mansion, marking the first time the state's first lady has conducted a guided tour of the facilities for television, was provided for Short, Susan Roberts, Tommy Payne and Walter Hearne.

Short said the visitors saw the entire bottom floor of the mansion which includes six rooms, a sun porch, hall and stairs. Some of the furniture viewed dates back to 1709, he said.

The tour segment of "Carolina Today" will be followed by a personal interview with Mrs. Hunt, who discusses bringing up children in the public limelight and also how she met her husband, Short said.

Gray Gallery Shows Printmaking Exhibit

A printmaking exhibit, "The Southeastern Graphics Invitational," on loan from the Mint Museum of Art in Charlotte, is now on view at Gray Gallery, Jenkins Fine Arts Center, East Carolina University. The show will remain on view through June 20.

Approximately 50 prints — including ones done in etching, lithography, wood engraving, woodcut, photoetching and silkscreen — are being shown.

This exhibition is the third in an ongoing series of exhibitions organized by the Mint Museum and designed to explore a different graphic medium each year. The work of two faculty members in the ECU School of Art — Michael Ehlbeck and Donald Sexauer, — is included in this show.

'Great Seal' Will Be 200 In June

By BORIS WEINTRAUB
National Geographic News
WASHINGTON — Benjamin Franklin wanted a scene showing Moses dividing the Red Sea for the children of Israel, the sea closing behind them to engulf the Pharaoh, and a motto: "Rebellion to tyrants is obedience to God."

Thomas Jefferson wanted a depiction of the children of Israel wandering in the wilderness. John Adams leaned toward mythology instead of the Bible, with Virtue urging Hercules to climb mountains, and Sloth urging him to rest on the ground. In the end, the efforts of these three men came to naught. It took nearly six more years and several other committees to come up with a successful design for the Great Seal of the United States.

The Great Seal — there is no "lesser seal," though there is a Presidential Seal that differs slightly — will be 200 years old on June 20, 1982. The State Department, which has been its custodian since 1789, plans a celebration, and the U.S. Postal Service will issue a commemorative stamped envelope.

The actual Great Seal on public display daily in the State Department's Exhibit Hall, is a die that creates the impression of the seal, plus a counter-die and a press.

It is used 2,000 to 3,000 times a year to seal a variety of documents after they have been signed by the president and the secretary of state. Such documents include treaty proclamations, appointments of ambassadors, Cabinet officers and other officials, and ceremonial communications between the president and other heads of state.

The Great Seal was designed by committees — several of them, each with its own consultant. After the unsuccessful effort of Franklin, Adams and Jefferson, two other committees tried, each presenting an idea deemed unsatisfactory by the Continental Congress. Finally, on June 13, 1782, the Congress turned everything over to Charles Thomson, its secretary. A week later, having used elements from earlier designs, Thomson presented a winning design.

Everything on the Seal is symbolic. On the front, or obverse, side the American bald eagle supports a shield composed of 13 red and white stripes representing the original 13 states, and a blue top, representing Congress, the unifying element.

The motto "E Pluribus

Unum" — "Out of many, one" — also represents the union, and an olive branch and 13 arrows refer to the powers of peace and war.

The reverse side contains more symbols: a pyramid, signifying strength and duration; a single eye and the motto "Annuit Coeptis" — "He has favored our undertakings" — referring to God's aid; and the Roman numerals for "1776" and another motto, "Novus Ordo Seclorum" — "A new order of the ages" — representing the new American era.

Successive dies have brought slight changes in the Seal's design. Six-pointed stars were replaced by five-pointed stars, olives were added to the olive branch, and the rather puny eagle has been made to look much more vigorous. The current die has been used since 1904.

Through both sides are officially part of the Seal, only the obverse is commonly used. A die for the reverse has never been cut, and the reverse is known mostly because it appears on the back of the $1 bill.

Immigrants, Job Seekers Flock To South

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Immigrants, retirees and job seekers accounted for most of the population growth in the Southeast reported by the Census Bureau in recent weeks, an economist with the Southern Growth Policies Board says.

The U.S. population increased by 2.8 million between April 1, 1980 and July 1, 1981, census figures show. About 2.6 million of those people flocked to the South and West.

"Immigration from both Latin America and the Caribbean have had a significant influence on places like California, Texas and Florida," said Bud Skinner, staff economist with the Research Triangle Park firm. "Other states have a competitive advantage, like Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana — those that control oil resources."

In the South, where the annual growth averaged 1.7 percent in the 15-month period, Florida, Louisiana and Georgia had the greatest gains.

Florida was one of only three states where the population increased by 4.5 percent or more in the period, census figures showed. Skinner estimated that up to 90 percent of the influx could be due to immigration.

Florida and other states also draw older people seeking temperate climates for retirement homes, he said.

Although North Carolina's gains were only slightly above average for the region, officials said immigration from other parts of the nation were largely responsible.

Comparing 1970-80 estimates of migration to similar studies in 1960-70 show a change in the pattern, said Francine Ewing of the North Carolina Budget Office.

"Now we have a large rate of net immigration into the state, which was not the case before 1970," she said, adding that there were no figures to show why that was the case.

Other factors encouraging growth were climate, the availability of jobs and favorable conditions for businesses seeking to expand, Skinner said.

"There's been a larger increase in jobs in the South and West," he said. "There's been a lot of new employment opportunities due to the growth in those regional markets."

Nevada led the nation in relative growth, increasing its population by 5.7 percent, the Census Bureau reported. Wyoming was tied with Florida with a growth rate of 4.5 percent in the 15-month period.

In other states in the Southeast, Louisiana grew by 2.5 percent and Georgia increased 2 percent, partly with the help of immigration, Skinner said.

Increases of 1.5 percent in South Carolina and 1.3 percent in North Carolina were mostly due to the favorable business climates there, he said.

The deepest population decline was recorded in Washington, D.C., which lost 1.1 percent of its population. Also posting losses were Michigan, Indiana, Ohio, Iowa and South Dakota.

Celebrities Pack Ballot In California

By DOUG WILLIS
Associated Press Writer

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — It is vintage California politics, a primary including a Reagan (Maureen), a Goldwater (Jr.), and a Nixon (his niece). As if that wasn't enough, a Fonda (Jane) is cast in a supporting role.

Consider what voters will decide when they go to the polls June 8:

— A Republican senatorial primary in which the four leading candidates include the president's daughter, the son of the elder statesman of the conservative movement, a congressional maverick and the mayor of San Diego.

— A Democratic senatorial primary which analysts will watch for signs of whether two-term Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. is recovering from a political slide that has left him running behind three likely GOP challengers in statewide opinion polls. Challenging the governor is novelist Gore Vidal.

— A Democratic gubernatorial primary in which Mayor Tom Bradley of Los Angeles is heavily favored to move with a step of becoming the first black elected governor of a state.

The close battle for the GOP nomination for governor pits the state attorney general against the former record company executive who now is lieutenant governor.

There are also several major policy issues on the ballot, including a referendum on the most expensive construction project ever undertaken by an individual state, a $5 billion to $19 billion system of reservoirs, canals and other water facilities intended in part to substitute for California's pending loss of Colorado River Water.

That proposal is vehemently opposed in Northern California, where the Peripheral Canal would be constructed, and generally favored in Southern California, which would receive much of the canal's water, which now flows into San Francisco Bay.

Also at stake are nominations for six other statewide offices, 45 U.S. House seats, 100 seats in the Legislature, and 12 statewide ballot propositions.

Democrats outnumber Republicans by 2 million in California and are favored to take most of the big prizes in the fall. But most of the action in the primary is on the GOP side, which is having its closest and most divisive primary in two decades.

Bradley, the 64-year-old son of a Texas sharecropper, served 21 years on the Los Angeles police force before his election as city councilman and then mayor. He led his nearest Democratic foe by 7-1 in an early May poll and topped his GOP challengers by margins of 13 to 17 percentage points in matchups for the fall contest.

The only black governor in U.S. history was Pinckney Pinchback, who served six weeks as governor of Mississippi in 1872-73 after the impeachment of the elected governor.

The Republican race for governor is a close contest between state Attorney General George Deukmejian and Lt. Gov. Mike Curb, who produced some of the biggest hits of Sammy Davis Jr., Donny and Marie Osmond and Debby Boone.

Both Curb and Deukmejian are campaigning on law-and-order platforms with few real differences. Curb has challenged Deukmejian's conservative credentials, and Deukmejian has indirectly questioned the 38-year-old Curb's maturity and judgment.

Jerry Brown is the heavy favorite for the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate. The 44-year-old, two-time presidential contender is challenged on the right by KKK grand dragon Tom Metzger, among others, and on the left by Vidal, the sharp-tongued novelist who peppers his speeches with ridiculing one-liners, describing Brown as "Lord of the Flies" for his problems with the Mediterranean fruit fly infestation.

Although Brown has a heavy negative rating in polls in California, his Democratic opposition is divided, and he has a strong 59-11 lead over Vidal, his closest challenger. However, polls make him the underdog against any of the top three Republican contenders for the Senate.

It's the Republican Senate primary that offers the longest list of famous names.

Rep. Barry Goldwater Jr. is the front-runner in polls, hoping to join his father, the Arizona senator and 1964 Republican nominee for president, to create the first father-son team in the Senate since 1855.

But Goldwater is in a tough race in which 13 Republican candidates are expected to spend nearly $10 million.

San Diego Mayor Pete Wilson trailed Goldwater by just 1 percentage point in Mervin Field's latest California Poll, with Rep. Pete McCloskey third another seven points back and President Reagan's daughter, actress-businesswoman Maureen Reagan, in fourth.

Sculpting From Junk Is Joy To Paul Carr

Brazed metal figurines seem to smile and emote personalities all their own. Springs and flywheels out of junked cars become attractive lamp bases. And friends and relatives delight in the items created especially for them by Paul Carr with his oxy-acetylene welding torch.

Carr, who worked for the Dupont Company for 28 years, says he has always enjoyed welding, even from his early apprenticeship days in his hometown, Danville, Va. In the early 1970's, as he started to think ahead toward retirement from his position as supervisor of planning and scheduling in maintenance engineering at Dupont, Kinston, he developed a home workshop and began to make fun things from scrap.

He now has developed over 100 different designs and is constantly coming up with new ones. In fact, he really enjoys the challenge of creating a new figure to adhere to a theme suggested by the person who wants it. For instance, he made a secretarial station complete with typewriter and switchboard for a man whose lady friend was a secretary. For a retiring friend, he made a man on a riding lawnmower.

This past week, he made up a goodly supply of spark plug biplanes, nut bookworms, and fishermen that balance on the edge of a table as if on a pier. These he took to Raleigh along with his portable welding equipment to share with the members of his daughter, Jean Hart's third grade class at Wake Christian Academy. His plan was to demonstrate his art for the class and to give each child a figurine to take home.

He also enjoys painting and has several paintings in his home done by him. He also gives these away. He recently did a fawn painting for each of his three grandchildren, Ashley Smith, Jonathan Smith and Ellen Hart. The grandchildren also benefit from his welding pursuits. He has made Ellen a doll bed that has her first name designed into the headboard; her last name on the footboard. He's made Ashley and Jonathan each a lamp from parts found in the junkyard.

Of course, he's also made gifts for his daughters, Jean Hart of Raleigh and Caroline Smith of Grainger's Station and for son, Paul Jr. in Goldsboro, as well as for many other friends and acquaintances.

Most days he spends at least two hours in his workshop. And he frequents flea markets and junkyards. "I seldom draw up a design," he said. "I just weld it into the form I want. And I look at a piece of junk and picture in my mind what I'm going to make from it. People get rid of such terrific stuff."

His welding technique is meticulous, as well it has to be when he's working with tiny figures that can be cut in two by one slip of the 2600-degree torch tip. Once he's brazed together the scrap metal (soldered with brass), he usually cleans up each piece by sand blasting. "Some people leave their metal sculpture unfinished, but I like everything neat and clean," he says and you can tell by looking around his shop he's telling the truth.

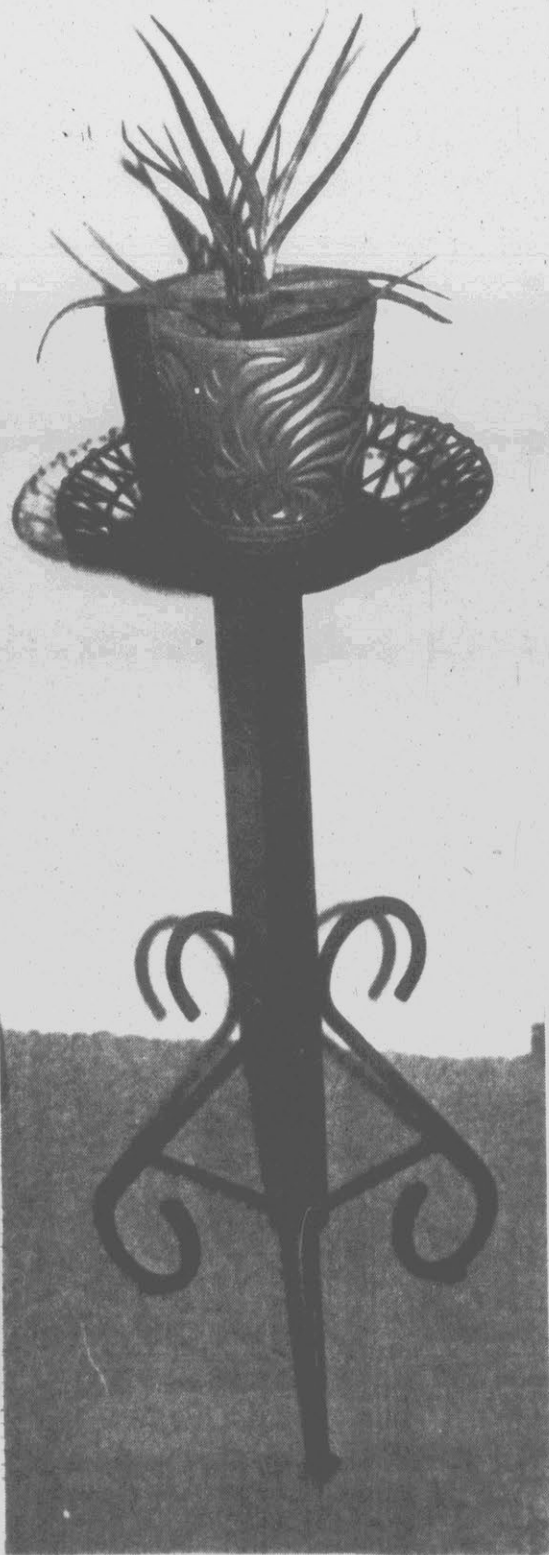

Carr says he began about 10 years ago on his own to develop leisure-time activities that would prepare himself for his retirement. It was then that he began to weld just for the fun of it and then that he took up painting, something he'd always wanted to do but didn't know whether he could. Of the two, he still prefers welding, but finds painting satisfying, too.

Shortly before his retirement in 1979, Dupont sent him to a special retirement preparation school in Washington, D.C. Accompanied by his wife, Sylvia, now also retired from a career in nursing, he spent two weeks studying everything from budgeting to talent development to nutrition and exercise. "These retirement schools are great," he said. "I'm so glad Dupont saw fit to send me. I wish everyone who retires could have the benefit of one."

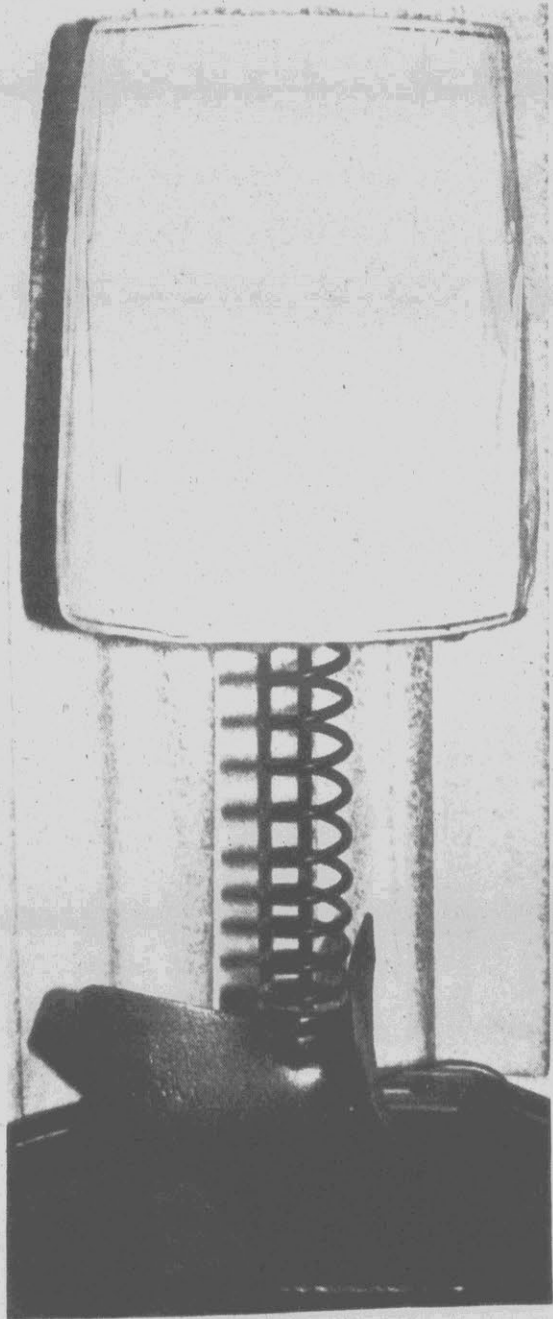

"Retirement has been such a wonderful time of my life. I wish everyone could experience it this way."

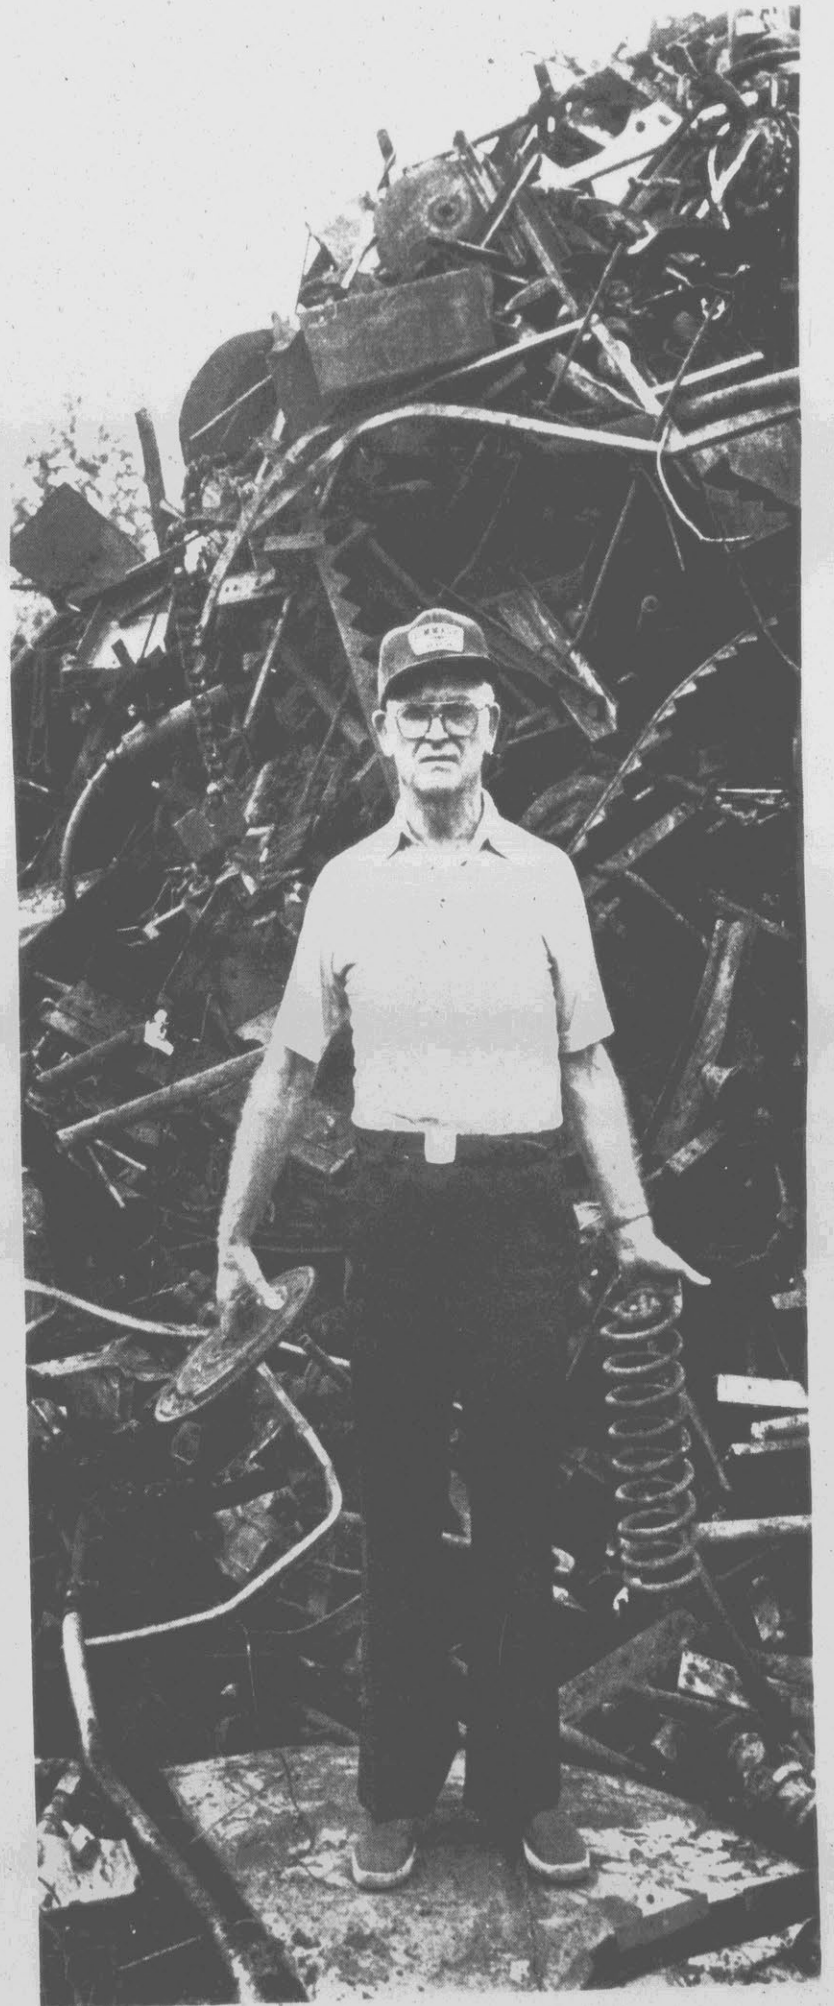

"Mr. President" is what Carr calls the whimsical door stop he made for his home.

A plant stand made from discarded metal was donated by Carr to his church, Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church, along with a large bookworm figurine for the church library.

A shock absorber spring and a plow part became a lamp base for grandson, Jonathan's room.

Seeing the potential is the key to choosing gems from a junkpile, according to Paul Carr who poses during a search for treasure at Greenville Parts and Metal Company here.

NOT FROM THE TAP — Sharon Lynch pours a drink for her son Christopher, 11 as daughter Chandra, 7, looks on. The Farmington resident travels 15 miles every few weeks to get "pure" water from a spring in Bristol, Conn. (AP Laserphoto)

Asbestos Water Pipes Causing Concern

By MARTIN J. WATERS
Associated Press Writer
HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Every few weeks, Sharon Lynch drives to a natural spring in Bristol to stock up on water. Fearing that microscopic asbestos fibers threaten her family with cancer, she won't use tap water for drinking or cooking.

"I have to go on a kind of gut reaction to the whole thing and say I just don't want to drink water that might have asbestos in it," said Mrs. Lynch. "I would just prefer not to have any in my kids."

She is chairwoman of Citizens for Clean Water, a group of Farmington residents whose water supply system uses asbestos-reinforced concrete pipe, commonly called asbestos cement pipe.

Since 1979, she has been negotiating with the water company in Farmington's Unionville section over the asbestos issue, which arose when federal testing showed high levels of the substance in the water supply. Asbestos levels are down, but Mrs. Lynch's group still wants the pipe replaced.

Only a few of the approximately 300 families on the water system have avoided drinking the tap water since then, she said. But Mrs. Lynch periodically makes the round trip of about 15 miles to the spring to get water for herself, her husband and their two children.

Connecticut authorities are about to implement a much-disputed regulation requiring water utilities to monitor the pipes for signs of contamination that might pose a cancer risk.

But the pipe industry and some medical experts question the need for monitoring and criticize the state's 20-month-old legislative ban against installing any more of the controversial pipe. Pipe manufacturers are pressing a court challenge to the ban, saying the pipe is safe.

Connecticut is the only state to ban the lightweight pipe, which uses asbestos as reinforcement and has become popular because it is easier to install than much heavier iron pipe. About 900 miles of the controversial pipe are buried in the ground in about 80 of Connecticut's 169 communities, according to state officials. An estimated 575,000 of the state's 3.2 million residents get their water from supply systems using asbestos cement pipe.

The ban was imposed after federal officials in 1978 and 1979 found high levels of asbestos fibers in the water systems of six Connecticut towns — Farmington's Un-ionville section, Simsbury, Newtown, Middlebury, Stratford and Sprague — and detected some asbestos in 17 other water systems.

No one knows if any Connecticut water supplies still have high asbestos levels because the complicated federal Environmental Protection Agency monitoring program was not intended to be permanent. It was designed to find out if a problem existed with asbestos cement pipe dissolving and has led to current research into ways to prevent corrosive water from eating away at the pipe.

"We haven't done any additional research recently," said Ray Jarema, chief of the water supply division at the state Health Services Department.

"The testing is very expensive and very time consuming. We really don't have the ability to do it," he said.

The state monitoring regulation, if it becomes final, is expected to increase customers' bills as water companies seek to recover their testing costs.

Water companies would not be required to conduct the type of testing the EPA performed four years ago to discover tiny asbestos particles. They would have to check water before and after it flowed through the pipes.

Sorority Holds RIF Distribution

St. Gabriel's Catholic School was a distribution site for the Reading is Fundamental (RIF) Project sponsored by the Iota Kappa Omega Chapter of the Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority recently.

Each student from grades 1-6 received three books. Kindergarten students were given one book. The students were involved in various reading and book-related activities before and after the distributions.

The sorority also sponsored a RIF program at the Cornerstone Baptist Church in connection with the tutorial program held there.

Jean Carter, RIF chairperson for the sorority, said that the chapter has been sponsoring RIF programs in the Greenville-Pitt County area since 1973. The objective of the program is to provide students with the opportunity to select and own quality paperback books, in the hopes of improving the students individual reading habits and skills.

Bartering Of Oil Helps Spur Iranian Economy

By SCHEHEREZADE FARAMARZI
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iran's government, looking for a quick fix to rescue its war-shattered economy, has signed a series of barter agreements in which Iranian oil is exchanged at reduced prices for imported goods.

The deals conceal the real price of oil Iran is offering to countries such as Syria, Turkey, Greece, Pakistan, Uruguay and Nicaragua.

Western diplomats say Iran has sold its oil for as little as $25 a barrel under these deals, or about $9 a barrel less than mandated under the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries' current pricing system.

"You could say they are horse trading and they are pretty good at it," a Turkish businessman, who does business in Tehran, said recently.

Iran, which has been at war with Iraq for nearly two years, has been exchanging its oil for petrochemicals, phosphates, meat, coffee, sugar, cigarettes, grain, rice, livestock and steel products. The cost of importing those products had been draining Iran's dwindling foreign exchange reserves before the barter agreements began early this year.

One Middle East oil expert, who declined to be identified, described the barter deals as a temporary expedient that was "risky" in the long run because the oil markets are improving and prices are heading upward.

While many other oil-exporting countries are having trouble marketing their oil because of the current oversupply on world markets, Iran has boosted its production to perhaps 2 million barrels daily — almost double the 1 million barrels a day of six months ago, the oil expert said.

That higher production — which would exceed Iran's OPEC-mandated output quota of 1.2 million barrels daily — and the discount pricing have angered some of Iran's fellow cartel members. At OPEC's recent meeting in Quito, Ecuador, the Iranian delegation said it was verbally attacked by Saudi Arabia for violating the quota system and for discounting its oil.

Iranian officials contend they did not make the barter deals as a means of selling oil cheap.

"We strongly deny that we are selling oil at less than OPEC prices because we are selling the conditions of OPEC," of which Iran is a member, Iranian oil ministry spokesman Ali Honardoost said in a telephone interview.

Honardoost, who declined to say what Iran's current oil production was "because of the state of war we are in," described the new trade agreements as "a bank procedure and we don't pay cash."

A lack of foreign exchange has been a major problem for Iran in paying its import bills — $1.5 billion monthly for food alone. Iran's currency reserves have dwindled to an estimated $1 billion from $14 billion before the war started in September 1980.

As the oil-revenue surplus accumulated during the reign of the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi has dried up, the revolutionary government of Ayatollah Khomeini has tightened control over the economy by taking such actions as nationalizing industries and the banking system.

A bill pending before the Majlis, or parliament, would nationalize foreign trade as well.

Iran agreed in March to sell Syria 65 million barrels of oil a year for $2.21 billion, or $34 dollars a barrel. But economic experts note that Iran gave Syria 7.5 million barrels free of charge, effectively discounting the oil to $32 a barrel.

The apparent purpose was to keep Syrian President Hafez Assad's government from being dependent on either Iraq or conservative Arab oil producers such as Saudi Arabia. Syria has supported Iran in its war with Iraq.

In exchange for the oil, Syria agreed to sell Iran phosphates, barley, glass, lentils and other goods. But one Western economist noted that Syria's total exports in 1980 amounted to only slightly more than $2 billion, indicating that Iran had extended long-term credit to the Syrians in exchange for political support.

According to the official Iranian news agency, Iran also struck a bargain with Pakistan in May calling for Iran to provide 10,000 barrels of crude oil a day in exchange for textiles, chickens, rice, iron, steel, fertilizer, sugar, meat, fish, raisins, saffron and zinc from the neighboring Islamic republic.

The stop-gap solution to the foreign exchange and import problems have apparently won a reprieve for the sagging Iranian economy even though travelers say that Iranian housewives still must stand in long lines for basic foodstuffs such as meat and eggs and that rationing of fuel and other basics continues.

"There was a significant drop in the national income (about 40 percent from the $56 million of 1978, the last year of the shah's reign) and a very high inflation rate of 40 percent in 1979," says Marwan Iskandar, a respected Middle East economist in Beirut. "And the situation became very serious after the United States froze Iranian assets following the seizure of the American hostages which led the Iranians to face an acute shortage of foreign exchange."

But, Iskandar notes, oil prices rose by 130 percent between 1978 and 1980, bringing in sorely needed revenues.

And Iran's situation has been helped by another factor, he adds. The war has resulted in vast destruction of Iran's oil installations and drained off resources for weapons purchases, but it also has limited consumer demands, he says.

"Very little consumption is required because people are living through war conditions and do not have the same needs," he says. "They are willing to settle for much less."

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF
©1982 Tribune Company Syndicate, Inc.

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—You have been my "guru" for lo, these many years, so now I am turning to you for advice. There is considerable dissension in our group as to which suit you bid when you have two four-card suits — do you start with the higher-ranking one or the lower-ranking?—L. Booker, Atlanta, Ga.

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)
A.—Your question is incomplete — do you mean as opening bidder or as responder? Are the two suits touching, or are they not? These questions materially affect the reply.

If the suits are touching, you should invariably open the higher ranking of the two. If they are not touching, open the suit below the shortest suit in your hand; partner is likely to respond in that suit and then you can rebid in your second suit. If your suits are spades and clubs, it will usually keep the bidding a level lower if you open one club, since clubs will always be the suit below your shortness.

In responding, different criteria apply. Perhaps the most important consideration is whether your hand is worth two forward-going bids or not; is it strong enough to try for game, or a weak hand worth only one bid? Here's a rule of thumb: if the hand is worth only one constructive bid, it is usually better to bid your lower-ranking suit, but don't suppress a good four-card major. If your hand is worth two bids, bid your higher-ranking suit first to give yourself an easy rebid; if you are strong enough to insist on game, it is usually better to bid your lower-ranking suit first.

Thus, assume that partner opens the bidding with one club and you hold:

- a) ♠ Q x x b) ♠ Q x x
- ♥ A J x x ♥ A x x x
- ♦ x x x ♦ x x
- ♣ x x x ♣ x x x

With hand a), you have the values for two constructive bids, so respond one spade and show your hearts next, unless partner raises. Hand b), however, is too weak for two forward-going actions, so you should respond one heart.

Q.—Can honors be claimed if they are split between declarer's hand and dummy? Are the defenders entitled to honors if one of them holds four in my trump suit? When should honors be claimed?

A.—This question is a composite of the hundreds of letters we have received about problems in scoring honors, so I will answer them all in one.

To earn the honor bonus, the honors must all be in one hand — they cannot be split between declarer and dummy, for instance. Any player who has four or five honors in the trump suit, be it declarer, dummy or either defender, is entitled to the honors bonus. And you can claim honors at any time until the rubber is scored. However, if you do not claim them before the cards of that deal have been mixed, you receive the bonus only if the opponents agree that you held them. And the best time to claim honors is immediately after the completion of the hand, when your claim can be checked. If you claim them during the play, you are revealing your holding unnecessarily.

Correction

In the Sunday, May 23, article "New Bern Dancer Wins Randy Jones Award," it was incorrectly stated that the scholarship was given for the first time this year.

This is the third year the Randy Jones Scholarship has been awarded. The recipient each year has been the same dancer, Christopher Brown of New Bern.

East-West Tensions Bother Think Tank

By KENNETH JAUTZ
Associated Press Writer
VIENNA, Austria (AP) — The chill in East-West relations has struck sharply at a major international think tank that was born in the age of detente, promising cooperation among scientists from both major power blocs.

Tarnished by a spy scandal, hit with a cutoff in U.S. support and facing possible withdrawals, the International Institute for Applied Systems Analysis is retrenching and rethinking its priorities.

Institute officials privately say that many of their problems stem from the current political climate. There is an apparent suspicion in Washington that joint East-West ventures pass on Western technological know-how to the Soviet Union, they say. Founded 10 years ago in a spirit of cooperation, the 17-nation center became a major East-West data-exchange venture.

But the Reagan administration announced recently a cutoff in the U.S. $2.3 million contribution to the institute, which amounts to nearly 25 percent of the organization's budget.

Officials say they expect the institute's U.S. member agency, the National Academy of Sciences, to withdraw, and perhaps others may also do so.

In addition, complaints about the quality of scientific research have been registered by Great Britain and West Germany.

But officials say the institute will survive its current troubles, and become a stronger and more focused center in the process.

"There is a rather rigorous screening process going on now," said spokesman Peter Schlikke. "But the institute will not cease to exist."

Housed in a sprawling and stately former Hapsburg hunting lodge outside Vienna, the institute is a computer-based organization and conducts research with both "hard" and social sciences.

With a pool of more than 100 scientists, the center specializes in the use of mathematical models to study long-range global problems such as environmental and agricultural issues.

Officials have acknowledged that the flow of computer information at the institute is mostly West to East, but add that Eastern scientists have provided much environmental and other data never publicly released elsewhere.

But the center's reputation was tarnished last year when press reports charged that the institute's former Soviet secretary, Arkady Belozorov, was involved in a spy scandal unfolding in Norway.

In an effort to decrease their dependency on the prevailing political climate, institute officials are attempting to broaden their support, encouraging some Third World members to join.

The institute also says it is searching for private support in the United States to replace the cutoff of government money.

NCNB Exhibit Here in June

A representative sampling from the more than 2,200 works of art which comprise the NCNB Collection will be on view. Although the collection has a major focus on the arts and crafts of North Carolina, it also includes works by regional, national and international artists.

The exhibit will open with a reception on June 8 from 7 to 9 p.m.

Bethel Report

The Bethel Council of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce has scheduled the "Progress Report — Bethel's Chamber of Commerce On the Move Banquet" at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at Bethel Elementary School cafeteria.

Bob Bowers, the council's board chairman, said the "Citizen of the Year" award will be presented at the meeting to someone who has made significant contributions to the Bethel-Pitt County area.

A slide presentation on the town of Bethel which is to be presented to the Governor's Community of Excellence Award Committee will be shown.

Tickets for the meeting are $5 per person and the deadline for reservations is Tuesday.

Life As It's Lived

By Gail Michaels
Nothing will escalate hostilities between husband and wife faster than buying a house. Phillip and I had four days in which to find a new home in Knoxville.

As long as we were looking at houses in our price range, we were all right. Our shared reaction could best be described as that of a barefoot socialite winking up to find herself in a cow pasture.

Each night when we returned to our hotel, I would cry. Phillip would try to assure me that purple bathtubs were just a passing fad and that the next day we were certain to find a house without one.

I would moan that after two years of complaining I was finally becoming aware of the virtues of my house in Smithfield, that it was a jewel among bird droppings and that I was planning to hike the price by at least $20,000 as soon as I got home.

He would point out that we would never sell the house then. And I would declare that I didn't care, that leaving North Carolina for the sake of mere employment was like trading Eden for an apple.

Overreaction this was not. For three days we toured homes that made the house we once rented with pink kitchen appliances look like a set on "Dynasty." In fact, pink as well as purple was an "in" color on Knoxville multiple listing. The two usually occurred in combination in the bathrooms, and one we toured had as a counterpoint to this ensemble an orange and brown carpet.

The same house had huge green and white checks on the kitchen walls and orange, gold and brown linoleum on the kitchen floor. And that house was one of the more appealing to the eye. One house had six cats who weren't potty trained and black walls in the master bedroom.

Another had a different paneling in every room except the kitchen. That sported a most unusual wallpaper with mushrooms, carrots, tomatoes and onions, none of them less than six inches in width, floating in vivid shades of orange, red, tan and white on a brown background. After submitting to this aesthetic assault, Phillip and I decided to look out of our price range.

That was when the fireworks between us really started. I found the house I wanted right away, a lovely blue colonial with an exquisite interior. The builder met us in the driveway. He was wearing an embroidered, open-necked shirt and several gold chains. Phillip stiffened immediately.

"I don't like that house," he told the builder. "The whole house shook when I walked around upstairs."

I was incensed. "Baloney! Face it, Phillip, you're a bigot. You just don't trust any man who wears jewelry."

In the next neighborhood we drove through, I spotted a darling farmhouse that interested me. But Phillip was determined to look at a split-level behemoth on a hill.

"That depends on where you're standing."

"This house has more room for the same price than the other house, and it's solidly built."

In other words, the builder was wearing a flannel shirt and worn corduroys, and he kept running his fingers through his hair so that it stood up on end as Phillip's would if he had any.

In the end, spineless creature that I am, we bought the house. But I refused, as a matter of principle, to be enthusiastic. Yes, I admitted to his mother later when she inquired, the inside was comfortable, but that's as far as I would commit myself.

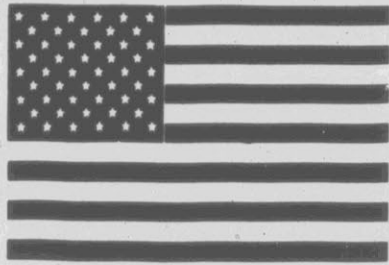

My attitude made Phillip miserable. "Can't you find anything nice to say about the biggest investment we've ever made?"

Home Furnishings Follow Changes In Lifestyles

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Once upon a time, there was living room furniture, bedroom furniture and dining-room furniture. Everybody knew which was which and there was no confusion about what went where.

Oh, perhaps there were also desks and bookcases to go in the library or "den" as some called it, and some comfortable pieces for the porch. But anything too outre which couldn't be quickly classified was probably something you didn't need anyway.

Try walking into a furniture store today and dividing up the merchandise by the old classifications. You'll soon give up the task as a hopeless case. Where would you place the etageres? The bars? The armoires that can be used for clothing storage or home-entertainment components? What about the sleep sofa that flips into a king-size bed.

Life at home is both simpler and more complicated than it used to be. For many — perhaps a majority soon — the old idea of a single-family home in the suburbs is an irrelevant solution to a problem they don't think they have.

The new American consumer is a career girl in Dallas; a childless couple in Seattle; a bachelor in his first "pad" in New York; a houseful of roommates who turn in the same office in Los Angeles, or a couple of seniors in an adult community in New Jersey.

These home furnishings consumers are represented in many attributes and attitudes. But one thing about most of them is that their lives are non-traditional. They may share the same holidays and associations as the rest of the country. But when they go shopping for home furnishings, they are a different breed. These new consumers with different needs are giving rise to new categories of furniture, according to some retailers and manufacturers.

If a single descriptive word could be chosen to characterize the new market, that word would probably be informal. The concept contains the idea of rooms that are used interchangeably for all the activities of living, of furniture that is in no particular style, but instead is geared to function as seating or storage or surface in any room where the need for the function exists.

The new informal furniture is unlikely to be authentic anything. Instead, it may "borrow" design elements from one or more cultural traditions.

Some companies have switched their product lines to cater to the new consumers. Other firms have been set up just to cater to them. The furniture they are producing to meet the new needs includes multi-use storage pieces such as armoires and wall systems, combination game and dining tables, chairs on casters for easy mobility, sofas that convert to beds and rolling carts for a variety of uses, including meal serving wherever convenient.

An example of a company formed to cater to the market is Stavook. The 2½-year-old firm is a subsidiary of Jack Daniels Distilleries.

"Ninety percent of our furniture is made of barrelwood. We were giving them away and we decided that we should recycle the wood into furniture," explained Largin Grover, assistant manager of the furniture operation.

The products, designed by O. B. Solie, are geared to appeal to the customer for informal furniture who company executives believed might find whiskey barrel furniture a good idea.

Trend Line is an example of an older firm that recently began catering to the new consumer. Bill Hairston, its president, says less space is a part of the new consumer equation. The new consumers have gotten accustomed to smaller quarters than Americans usually consider desirable. If they are young, they haven't been around long enough to acquire traditional housing. If they are older, they may have moved from larger quarters. With less horizontal space, they have to look to the vertical dimension. So they appreciate the value of modular stacking storage units and gall systems.

"These consumers are not buying pieces of furniture. They are buying atmosphere, comfort, beauty and retreat," said Hairston.

"The fact is that many Americans will never buy a piece of formal dining-room or living-room furniture," says Sherwood Smith, president of Sherwood Furniture, producer of foam seating and sleeping furniture. Perhaps they haven't the money. Perhaps they haven't the space. Or maybe they simply don't see why they should, when the new pieces suit all their needs so well.

Weeders Guide Roses Win '83 Awards

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

The two roses selected for 1983 All-America Selections honors were hybridized by two consistent winners of this top award.

The new roses are Sun Flare, a bright yellow floribunda, the work of William Warriner of Tustin, Calif., and Sweet Surrender, a silver-pink tea developed by Ollie Weeks of Ontario, Calif.

For Warriner, it was his ninth AARS award dinner in the past 11 years.

The AARS awards are based on test-garden judging results.

Sun Flare has a compact, bushy growth with attractive, glossy, bright-green, holly-like foliage. It produces clusters of three or more 3-inch blooms that cover the bush during the peak blooming periods and are repeated throughout the growing season.

Tests, AARS reported, indicate Sun Flare has good disease resistance and hardiness. Several judges noted that it produced more flowers throughout the season in their gardens than any other rose entry. They also emphasized its fragrance.

Sun Flare resulted from a cross, Sunprite (Freesia) X unnamed variety.

AARS said the rose was another example of Warriner's "special ability to produce outstanding floribunda roses, although he has many hybrid teas to his credit, as well as grandifloras and the only climber award-winner in 18 years — America, 1976."

Sun Flare also won a Certificate of Merit in Japan and a silver medal at Roleux, Belgium, both in 1981.

Sweet Surrender, a well-shaped, upright plant, produces flowers reported to have an intense, true-rose fragrance.

Sweet Surrender has medium-size, high-centered buds with silvery-pink outer petals. Flowers are borne on long stems. The plant is many-branched with deep, leathery, dark-green foliage. If you give it room, you will have lots of roses to cut all summer, AARS suggests.

Sweet Surrender is Weeks' sixth hybrid winner of this honor. In addition, he co-produced five other AARS award winners with Herbert Swim.

AARS said Weeks and Warriner "belong to a group of American hybridizers who seem to be producing outstanding new roses more adapted to North American growing conditions than those of the European breeders."

A new all-natural vegetable insecticide reportedly safe to use right up to harvest is on the market.

The manufacturer says that used correctly it will not harm the environment, animals or humans.

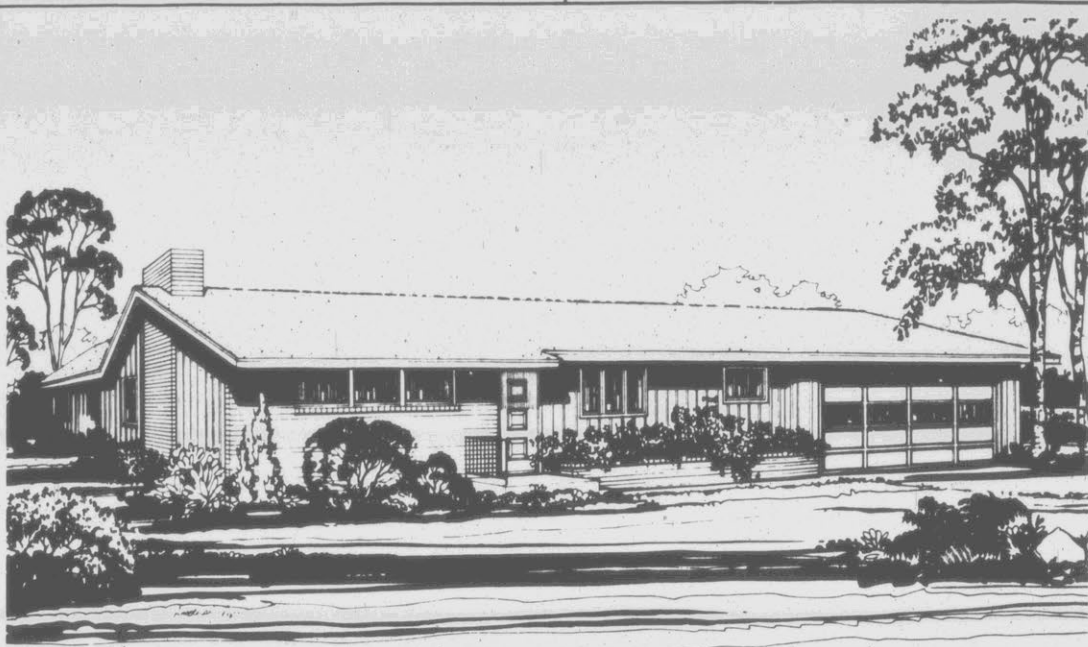

It is available in a 16-ounce container with a "horn" actuator.

Also available is a new "Gypsy Moth & Japanese Beetle Killer" fatal to both insects on contact without harming trees, shrubs or flowers. The container features a hose-end sprayer. When the water is turned on, it automatically mixes with the insecticide.

The products, marketed by Johnson Wax, are "Raid Tomato and Vegetable Fogger," and "Raid Gypsy Moth & Japanese Beetle Killer."

The Fawnview

Ranch Style Zones Sleeping Areas

By Jerry Bishop

Tucked away behind the living room for quiet and privacy, the sleeping wing sets the tone for this comfortable ranch style home. The Fawnview provides four bedrooms and two full baths in this simple, restful L-shaped design.

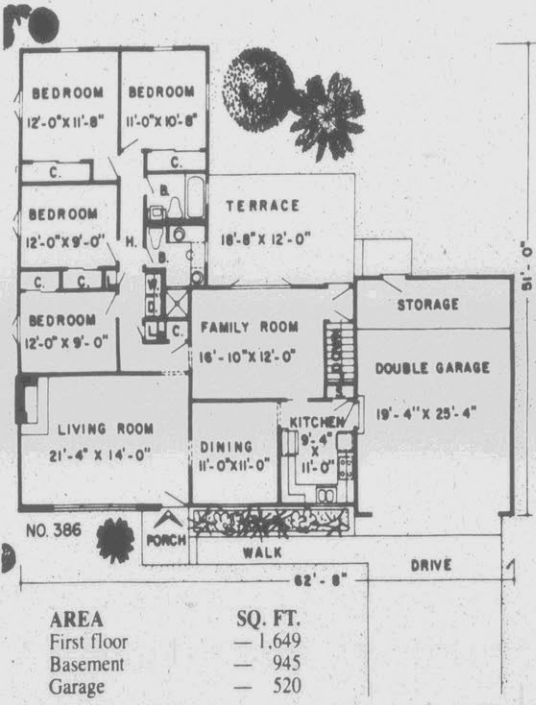

Layered with brick and vertical siding, the facade is accented by a planter treatment that borders the small porch. Entry is into the 21-ft. living room, where guests are greeted by the cozy corner fireplace.

For formal parties, the living room and bordering dining room create an efficient and spacious complex. The U-shaped kitchen is situated to serve the dining room and family room, and, for easy transfer of packages, opens into the garage.

Offering a casual contrast to the living room, the family room extends nearly 17 feet and overlooks the terrace to provide an airy center for family fun, television viewing, and children's play. The room is made even more useful by the handy entrance onto the terrace and access to the basement.

The long sleeping wing houses four bedrooms, two baths, and a total of seven closets. Edging the larger bath is a washer and dryer niche, located to minimize laundry chores and save steps.

A substantial storage area is defined in the double garage, where the entry to the rear yard saves time in moving garden equipment and patio furniture. Additional storage space is available in the large basement, which provides 945 sq. ft. of space.

Q. — Our home is a two-story, 75-year-old wood frame. The exterior walls have no insulation, but the attic has 12 inches and an R-value of 15. What kind of insulation should we use in the walls and what method should be used?

A. — Without actually breaking down the walls, the best method is to have what is called "blowing" insulation blown into the walls. Have it done by a contractor who uses pneumatic equipment. Not exactly certain what you mean by 12 inches and R-15 in the attic, since mineral wool batts with an "R" insulation efficiency of R-22 are about 7 inches thick.

Q. — My concrete driveway is 25 years old and it has started spalling in places. Can you advise me what I might do to keep this condition from getting worse?

A. — Spalling or chipping can come from a variety of causes. The most likely in your climate is a very cold winter that causes contracting and expanding, plus the traffic over 25 years. You can try to keep up with the damage by cleaning out each chipped area. Undercut the edges so that the patching material will be locked in place. While the patch is hardening, keep it wet at least once or twice a day for a week. Since you will have to do this in several places, you may have to forego using the driveway during that time. Sometimes you can find a way of spacing the patches and doing them a few a day so that the car can be driven without the patches being touched by the wheels.

Q. — We have a tub which is worn. The tub is 20 years old but is perfect for my tall husband. Is there a paint for porcelain tubs?

A. — There are paints that approximate the finish of porcelain, but never having used them, I cannot make a recommendation. There are also patching materials for repairing chips in porcelain. My experience with one of these was good, but the chip was fairly small and it might be a tedious job for a larger surface. Besides, you indicate the entire surface needs attentions rather than a spot or two. There are a limited number of companies that reglaze bathtubs. Try the yellow pages of your telephone book or neighborhood directory to find one.

While a number of different kinds of toilet-tank mechanisms have come on the market in recent years, the overwhelming bulk of them are still the old-fashioned type, with a float ball, inlet tube, overflow tube and valve seat through which the water goes into the bowl.

The old type of system, unfortunately, is and always has been susceptible to the eventual failure of one or more parts. If the inside of the toilet tank remains a mystery to you, unraveling its seemingly puzzling contents is not difficult. Carefully take off the tank cover, which is usually not connected and stays in place because it is so heavy. You can avoid trouble by placing the cover on something soft, like a bed, after first putting a piece of scrap material there to prevent the spread from getting soiled. Broken tank covers often occur because they were placed on hard surfaces from which they slid off.

Once the cover is off, turn the flush handle and observe what happens. The water level will quickly go down as the water rushes into the bowl. The metal or plastic float, attached to a horizontal rod, will go down with the water level. Fresh water immediately starts to enter the tank via the inlet tube, usually at the left side of the tank. As the water in the tank rises, it takes the float ball with it. When the float ball reaches a designated height, it shuts off the valve at the top of the inlet tube and no more water comes into the tank. Do this three or four times and you will understand what goes on inside a toilet tank when you turn the flush handle.

If water drips into the bowl after the flushing action has stopped, a frequent troublemaker, it can be due to one of several causes. Usually it is because the water level is too high and some of the water is going into the overflow tube, the vertical hollow tube to the right of the inlet tube. Look at the float at the end of the horizontal rod. It should be resting on the water, part of it below the surface. If it is fully covered by water, it has lost its buoyancy and needs to be replaced. If it is all right, bend the rod to which the float is attached. Bend it downward a little, working carefully with two hands so the mechanism is not thrown out of alignment. Try flushing the tank. The water level now should be lower. If not, experiment with the bending until water no longer goes into the overflow tube.

Another possible cause of the dripping is a leak under the valve at the bottom of the tank. Be certain the "stopper" is dropping exactly on the valve seat. If not, make an adjustment of the guide that usually fits around the overflow tube. And rub the inside of the valve seat with steel wool to remove any grit. Check the condition of the valve ball, which may need replacement.

A new washer is sometimes required at the top of the inlet tube. As you take off the valve gadget to replace the washer, do it very carefully, being certain you will know how to replace the parts properly.

Should it be necessary to install more modern flushing equipment, have a plumber do it unless you are very handy. Possibly the most difficult part of the operation is getting under the tank to loosen the nuts holding everything in place.

Residents Of Tiny Pennsylvania Town Must Now Own Weapons

By CARL MANNING
Associated Press Writer

FRANKLINTOWN, Pa. (AP) — Residents in the tiny pastoral community of Franklinton, Pa., don't worry much about crime — and they want to keep it that way.

To that end, the town's Borough Council is mandating gun ownership and is making no secret about it.

"If a burglar knows every home has a gun and the person has received instruction on how to use it, they would pass up this town," Council Vice President Ralph Gundrum said. "We're lucky here, but crime is going up everywhere and we decided to do something."

Borrowing an idea started earlier this year in Kennesaw, Ga., leaders in this rural southeastern Pennsylvania hamlet of 300 people enacted a law this month requiring the head of every household to own a gun.

"You don't wait until you smell smoke to buy a fire extinguisher," Gundrum said.

But the council wasn't unanimous in the matter. Councilman Larry Wonders, who cast the one dissenting vote, predicted it wouldn't help protect homeowners.

"If someone comes to rob you, they're still going to rob you," he said. "You're liable to get shot with your own gun."

The idea dates back to colonial militia laws, which eventually were stricken from the books during the 1900s, National Rifle Association spokesman John Aquilino said.

The law is more form than substance. It contains a provision exempting those who really don't want to own a weapon from being penalized up to $300 and 30 days in jail.

And, most residents already own a gun, because most are hunters. The community consists of rolling farmland, and is next to a state hunting preserve.

"There's nobody around here who doesn't have a house full of guns," Calvin Graham, former mayor and justice of peace, said. "It's an old hunting town; everybody knows how to use a gun."

Graham, who can recall when Main Street was a dirt road, said the town always has been tranquil.

Most of the houses in town are empty in the daytime, while residents are away working. About the only signs of life are a service station and a post office in a converted mobile home with plaster figures of elves and animals in front.

Gundrum, who farms the land behind his house, said the council plans to establish a firearms instruction course for the residents.

"The people here don't look at it like city people do. It's a way of life," Gundrum said. "We realize you don't shoot somebody for stealing something, but you have to do something to protect yourself and your family."

The law was not intended as a criticism of local police officials, who, Gundrum said, are doing a good job maintaining law and order. But, he added, "People have to learn to take care of themselves."

When Gundrum heard of the Kennesaw law, he said he thought it was "dumb."

"But crime decreased down there," he said. "I hope it will do some good here."

William Castle, chief of the Carroll-Franklin Township Police Department, said that the town so far this year has had two cases of vandalism and one case of unlawful entry.

Although the ordinance doesn't take effect in Kennesaw until June 1, officials there already credit it with discouraging some crimes.

Kennesaw Mayor Darvin Purdy said that 55 burglaries were reported last year in his community of 5,200. Since the law was adopted in March, not a single burglary has been reported, he said.

"It's going to have a significant deterrent on crime if the last nine weeks are any indication," Purdy said.

Kennesaw residents who violate the law face a $50 fine. The town has established a firearms instruction course conducted by the police.

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day to carefully consider what your goals are and to work out a sensible plan to gain them. The day grows better as it advances so try to avoid any drastic actions early.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Morning is not a good time to ask for favors from friends, so wait until later in the day. Attend the social tonight.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Be sure not to argue with an outsider who could give you trouble today. A good time to attend a group meeting.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Seek advice from expert on how to improve yourself so that you can get ahead faster. A good time to plan a trip.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Don't give up present commitments and take a chance on something that could prove worthless. Make future plans.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Know what it is that associates expect from you and do your best to please them. Avoid the limelight today.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) The afternoon is the best time to do a favor for one who has been good to you in the past. Show more devotion to loved one.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Attending the services of your choice and meditating can make this a most happy day for you. Relax at home tonight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Pleasing family members is your first responsibility today, although outsiders may want to occupy some of your time.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Be sure to attend services that will be helpful to you. Later engage in favorite hobby with congenials. Strive for happiness.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You have much personal work to do now, so clear up small tasks first for best results. Later tackle the most important.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Take time to improve your appearance. Later you can easily gain a personal goal with the help of a good friend.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Don't take any risks today with your good reputation. Make plans to have increased income in the days ahead.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will have a great need to be gregarious and upon maturity your progeny will want to deal with others successfully since the life's work here is connected with the humanities. Love for religion is in this chart.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You are able to gain personal aims easily during the day, but not in the evening when you are not thinking clearly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Be sure to keep your part of any contract you have negotiated with others. Try to have more rapport with loved one.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Try to understand the aims of associates better so that you can coordinate your efforts more gainfully. Be poised.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You have to make some changes if you are to gain your aims at this time. Strive to be more successful.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Engage in familiar activities that could bring you pleasure and profit. Take no risks where your health is concerned.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Try to cooperate with ideas of family members. Make your home more comfortable. Avoid a troublemaker.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Look to a higher-up for the support you need in a new project you have in mind. A good evening for quiet relaxation.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one with a practical mind, but should be taught early in life that changes must be made from time to time to gain overall objectives. Give the right kind of spiritual training for best results in lifetime.

SHOWTIME

'M*A*S*H' To Go One More Season

"M*A*S*H," which airs on CBS (Mondays, 9-9:30 p.m.), beat the odds. Inspired by the hit movie of the same title, the series premiered in 1972 and immediately garnered a huge audience — viewers who have stayed loyal for ten years and, when the show comes to a close next season, will surely mourn its loss. It is rare that a series of the quality and dedication of "M*A*S*H" comes along — even rarer that a series lasts ten years and still maintains the fine acting, directing and production standards that made it such a success in the beginning.

"I think we can say — everyone who has been involved in the show — that we've never side-stepped our responsibility," said Alan Alda, who plays the irreverent Hawkeye Pierce on the show. "Nobody has treated 'M*A*S*H' as a job where you punch in at nine and punch out at six at night."

"M*A*S*H" has undergone numerous cast changes in its ten-year run. The first major casualty was Lt. Col. Henry Blake (McLean Stevenson), who was killed in a helicopter crash — this coming in 1975 to accommodate Stevenson's wish to leave the show and sign with NBC. Blake was replaced by Col. Sherman Potter (Harry Morgan), the fiercely dedicated Commanding Officer.

The next to leave was Wayne Rogers, who portrayed Trapper John, one of the mobile hospital's best surgeons and Hawkeye's roommate. Rogers left after a contract dispute and was replaced by Mike Farrell as B.J. Hunnicut, Hawkeye's new co-conspirator.

Among the other casualties were Larry Linville as Maj. Frank Burns, the doctor who had an ongoing affair with head nurse "Hot Lips" Houlihan; and Gary Burghoff as Radar O'Reilly, the innocent but all-knowing company clerk. Burghoff was the only actor from the original film to recreate his role in the series.

Additions to the cast came in the form of Jamie Farr as Maxwell Klinger, the eccentric corporal who was constantly trying to earn a section eight-discharge; and David Ogden Stiers as Maj. Charles Emerson Winchester, an aristocratic Bostonian who became a reluctant member of the company when his predecessor — Maj. Burns — went AWOL.

NOW IN ITS TENTH season, "M*A*S*H" features (left to right) Mike Farrell, William Christopher, Harry Morgan, Alan Alda, Loretta Swit, Jamie Farr and

David Ogden Stiers as members of the 4077th Mobile Army Surgical Hospital. "M*A*S*H" airs on Mondays, 9-9:30 p.m., on CBS-TV.

Welch As An Indian

Raquel Welch - in her television movie dramatic debut - stars as a 19th century American Indian woman caught in the glory and tragedy of her people's last great stand, in "The Legend of Walks Far Woman," airing on NBC's Sunday Night at the Movies, May 30 (9-11:25 p.m.).

The story begins in Montana in 1875, where Walks Far Woman (Miss Welch), a young Pikuni Blackfoot tribeswoman, is forced to escape into the countryside after she avenges the death of her husband. Searching desperately for food and shelter, she is taken prisoner in a Sioux village by Old Grandfather (George Clutesi). After she saves the life of Many Scalps (Frank Sotomora Salsedo), the handicapped husband of Old Grandfather's daughter, Red Hoops Woman, she earns acceptance among the Sioux.

Soon, she befriends Singer (Bradford Dillman), a man of

IN A DEPARTURE from the glamorous roles that made her famous, Raquel Welch - in her dramatic debut as the star of a TV movie - portrays an American Indian woman who fights for her life and the survival of her people, in "The Legend of Walks Far Woman," a drama to be broadcast Sunday, May 30 (9-11:25 p.m.), on NBC-TV.

mixed blood who runs a local trading outpost. Through him, she learns about the white man's culture and in time, the two fall in love. Singer leaves for a year-long trading trip and in time, Walks Far grows to admire Horses-Ghost (Nick Mancuso), an arrogant and handsome Sioux brave. The two eventually marry and raise a family.

As friction between white men and Indians grows, a violent confrontation ultimately takes place at Little Big Horn. And while the Indians are victorious in that battle, Walks Far and her people do not fare as well when they are led to grazing lands by the tribal chief, Left Hand Bull (Nick Ramos).

Based on Colin Stuart's novel of the same title, "Walks Far Woman" was adapted to the screen by writer Evan Hunter. Mel Damski directed.

Michele Will Tell

Q: Could you tell me who played Walter Matthau's son, Randy, on "Casey's Shadow"? DEBBIE, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

A: The role of Randy Bourdelle in "Casey's Shadow" starred Stephan Burns.

Q: Why do the networks show repeat programs of prime time programs during the regular season? Also, what is the name of the excellent actress who plays Vanessa Chamberlain on "The Guiding Light"? Why did she leave the show and then return? WAITING BREATHLESSLY, LUMBERTON, N.C.

A: Has there really been a regular season this year? As you're well aware of, strikes within the industry set things back a good deal, leaving very few shows in the can before hiatus. Hopefully, next season will be better and longer. Maeve Kinkaed, who appears as Vanessa Chamberlain on "The Guiding Light" took a short leave of absence to give birth to her new baby boy, Abraham.

Q: Could you tell me something about Ed Marinaro of "Hill Street Blues"? Also, where can I write to him? D.S., LEXINGTON, N.C.

A: Now that he's hung up his cleats and become a full-fledged TV star, Ed Marinaro continues the pursuit of his craft, studying under drama coach Milton Katselos. Ed is still single, enjoys working out in a gym, and plays racquetball, golf and tennis. Write to him in c/o "Hill Street Blues," NBC-TV, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N.Y. 10020.

Q: I was told by a friend that Dean Martin and Perry Como are brothers. Is this true? B.R., LEXINGTON, N.C.

A: Your 'friend' is pulling your leg — Martin and Como are both Italian and that's the extent of their relation.

Q: Could you please tell me if "Kings Crossing" has been taken off television? If so, why? Also, where can I write to the show? RAQUEL LEAKE, LUMBERTON, N.C.

A: "Kings Crossing" has been deleted from ABC's fall lineup — low ratings scored another casualty. Write to ABC-TV, 1330 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y., 10019 for any further information concerning this canceled series.

Q: Is Tom Selleck the son of Burt Reynolds? If not, where is Tom originally from? A FAN IN GOLDSBORO, N.C.

A: Although Burt has said "Tom Selleck has my old face," they are 'not' father and son. Selleck was born in Detroit, Michigan — moved to Los Angeles at age 4.

Making The Choice To Ride

Does the wife of a champion rodeo performer have the right to try for a rodeo career of her own? Sammy Garrett thinks so and decides to take a serious try at it even though her husband doesn't approve, in "Rodeo Girl," to be rebroadcast on The CBS Wednesday Night Movies, June 2 (9-11 p.m.).

Proud of her husband's accomplishments but frustrated by her subsidiary "housewife" role, Sammy (Katharine Ross) is encouraged in her rodeo ambitions by her mother (Jacqueline Brookes), herself a longtime rodeo performer, and by J.R. Patterson (Candy Clark), a successful member of the Women's Professional Rodeo Association. Wil Garrett (Bo Hopkins) reluctantly goes along with his wife's plan, assuming that it will be a short-lived accomplishment. But he balks when she becomes successful and is away from home on more than an occasional weekend.

Their lives are further complicated when Sammy learns she is pregnant. She receives her doctor's permission to continue with her riding — a situation that Wil finds unacceptable. Sammy is forced to confront her new life style and make some critical decisions about the direction in which her life will proceed.

While preparing for her role as a "rodeo girl," Miss Ross passed her first test with flying colors — she made a good impression on her "coach," world champion rodeo star Sue Pirtle, who told the actress that she "has a flair for rodeoing."

"I'll admit she surprised me a little at first," Miss Pirtle explained. "Like most people outside of Hollywood, I had my own ideas of how a movie star would act. But Katharine sure fooled me. She wasn't a bit afraid and she adapted well. She's also just about the right size for rodeoing."

High praise, indeed, from the lady who was women's world champion seven times, five for bareback riding and twice as "all-around champion." Now an executive of the Women's Professional Rodeo Association, Miss Pirtle was happy to take time off for this "coaching" job.

A special purchase of no frills trucks... 13 models to choose from... lots in stock!

Explanation: The remarkable new AutoTerm plan brings down the high cost of transportation. AutoTerm is less costly than the conventional way of buying a truck... and it's better than any lease you've ever seen.

Imagine, a new Toyota truck for under $150 per month... and with no money down! The savings on your monthly payments and down payment add up to hundreds of dollars. That's money in the bank... earning you money!

All vehicles qualify for TEMA (Toyota East Maintenance Agreement).

AutoTerm is also available on all cars in stock.

Term is 48 months. To calculate total of payments, simply multiply 48 by the monthly payment amount. First monthly payment and a refundable security deposit in that same amount required at beginning of lease. You have no responsibility at end of term... you may purchase the truck or car or walk away... your option. Price shown requires approved credit and does not include tax and tags.

Allen Fronts For Blacklisted Writers

Woody Allen stars in "The Front," a comedy-drama about the infamous Hollywood blacklists of the early '50s, to be rebroadcast as The ABC Friday Night Movie, June 4 (9-11 p.m.).

Although it has been thirty years since the House Un-American Activities Committee began its witch hunt to root out alleged Communist infiltration of the entertainment industries, the fact becomes poignantly topical as director Martin Ritt and screenwriter Walter Bernstein (both of whom were blacklisted) dredge up their memories of that era.

The film is based on a practice that was common during the days of the blacklist — using a politically clean television or film writer to front for blacklisted authors by submitting their scripts under his name. Woody Allen plays one such front.

Working as an irresponsible, indebted tavern cashier, Allen is asked by a friend — a blacklisted TV writer played by Michael Murphy — to hand in some scripts to the networks under his name and, for his trouble, to take a 10 percent cut. Unaware of the possible consequences, Allen agrees and becomes an instant sensation.

The networks love his work, and to meet their demands, he starts to front for more writers. Although new at the game, Allen is able to bluff his way through story conferences and to win the affections of a comely liberal intellectual. Eventually, the charade backfires and Allen is called before the HUAC committee to testify.

Under the committee's intense questioning, Allen suddenly transforms from a simple nebbish to a courageous man of principle and bluntly tells the HUAC what he thinks of them and their investigation. For his noble stab at honesty, he is taken to jail on a contempt charge.

ABC Gears Up For Indy '500'

For the 12th consecutive year, ABC Sports will present coverage of the Indianapolis "500," perhaps, the most celebrated auto race in the world. The event will air on Sunday, May 30 (9 p.m.—approximately midnight). From a record 109 entrants, lured by more than a million and a half dollars in prize money and the prestige that goes with a win at Indy, the final field will consist of 33 drivers. Over 300,000 racing fans are expected to be in attendance at the storied Indianapolis Motor Speedway for the 66th running of the race.

A.J. Foyt, brothers Al and Bobby Unser, and Johnny Rutherford, with 11 wins at Indy among them, head the list of seven former Indy champions entered this year. Foyt, the only four-time winner (1961, 1964, 1967 and 1977) in history, will be appearing in his 25th consecutive "500."

Last year, nine different drivers led the race on one or more occasions as the lead changed hands 24 times before pole sitter Bobby Unser crossed the finish line first, touching off a controversy unparalleled in Indy history. The following day, Unser was penalized one lap for improperly passing some cars under the yellow flag and Mario Andretti was declared the winner.

Later in the year, after appealing to USAC, Unser was reinstated as the victor and instead of losing a lap he was ordered to pay a $40,000 fine. Andretti appealed that decision, and finally, in early March, he abandoned his appeal, accepted second place, and Unser was declared champion.

Another strong competitor in this year's race will be Rick Mears, who was burned in a fueling fire in the pits at Indy last year. Mears won six of the 11 CART races in 1981 and captured the CART point championship for drivers of Indy-type cars. He picked up this year where he left off, winning the first two races of 1982 for Indy-type cars, the Phoenix "500" in March and the Atlanta "200" in May.

Taft Was First

The first president to throw out the first ball at a major league game was William Howard Taft on April 19, 1909. He did the honors at a game between the Washington Senators and the Boston Red Sox.

TV Chatter

By Polly Vonetes

HOLLYWOOD — When LARRY WILCOX of "CHiPs" decides to make a change — the 'chips' really fly. LARRY is bowing out of the "CHiPs" series and his marriage at the same time. So far the NBC Publicity department has not come up with a publicity release announcing his exit in "tactful terms" — though it is generally known that he and ERIK (Ponch) have not been the "good buddies" depicted on the series — As for wife JOANNA — she had filed for divorce last January — but stopped the proceeding to attempt a reconciliation which obviously didn't work as LARRY is now doing the filing for divorce.

An early June opening is being planned for ELVIS PRESLEY'S 21-room Graceland mansion as a public museum. Admission to the grounds will be $5 per person. Opened year round there will be memorial services held on the anniversary of his death.

DACK RAMBO will be answering to name of 'DACK RAMBEAU' when he joins the daytimer cast of "All My Children" in June.

The Honest Truth About Cotton Knit Shirts

We make no pretenses about cotton knit shirts. We believe in leveling with a customer when they want to know how their purchase will do when it's washed.

Many people are very surprised to hear a salesperson actually talk about the disadvantages of a product he's trying to sell. But we want you to know what you're buying. So we tell you, in no uncertain terms, that a cotton knit shirt, will without a doubt, shrink to some extent the first time it is washed and fade after repeated washings.

The beautiful Polo and Alexander Julian knits you'll find in our selection are among the finest we can offer. They are of quality fabrics and are constructed to last a long time if cared for properly.

We take this space to tell you this because we are not in this business just to make a quick sale. We offer the merchandise and service that we do in hopes that it will prompt you to return to us again.

Joe Didion/N.E.A.

FOR TERRY HERNDON, executive director, National Education Association
How do teachers get the best results in the classroom — by being disciplinarians, or by creating an air of informality? — C.O., Council Bluffs, Iowa

● An orderly classroom helps most children learn, and rules must be clear, reasonable and consistently enforced. It is important to note also that discipline is only effective when meted in an atmosphere of respect and good will. There is no formula for success in the classroom and no teacher is ever completely successful with every student, but each accomplishment is both important and priceless. The teacher, like the farmer, must plant, water and cultivate his or her crop of students. This makes a fruitful harvest possible.

FOR JOHN WESLEY SHIPP, star of TV's Guiding Light

Would you want to get involved with a 17-year-old the way your character, Kelly Nelson, does on the show? — P.R., Pine Bluff, Ark.

● No. I tend to be attracted to older women. I prefer being with them because they've done it all and can show me a thing or two. Besides, what 17-year-old would find a 27-year-old guy like me attractive?

FOR PEGGY CASS, star of Broadway's 42nd Street

As a game show veteran, how do you feel when those programs are belittled? — J.T., Quincy, Ill.

● Let those who want to look down, look down. I look up to them because they're fun. I know they say only those with low I.Q.'s watch, but that's not true about either the viewers or the panelists. Paul McCartney became my fan after watching To Tell the Truth. I don't consider him stupid.

FOR STEVE KRANTZ, author of Skycastle (Macmillan)
Did you become a novelist because you wanted to be on par with your wife [Judith Krantz]? — I.B., Pittsburg, Kan.

● I truly don't think that was the reason. I've had an extremely successful career as a producer and I have a lot to look forward to in the movie business. But Judy's success introduced me to the creative opportunity and financial rewards of writing.

CLOTHES: Julie Christie, about to head east to the city of Hyderabad to film Heat and Dust, was asked how she planned to stay cool under the burning Indian sun. She replied, grinning: "I always thought that when it gets hot, you take your clothes off." . . . Sonja Henie, three-time Olympic skating champ who made only 10 movies during her Hollywood career but wound up as one of the wealthiest women in show biz, is the subject of an upcoming TV movie. Says writer-producer Andrew J. Fenady: "Unlike many actresses with delusions of grandeur, Sonja knew her limitations. Once, when Tyrone Power threw her on a bed for a daring (in those days) love scene, both completely clothed, Sonja complained "I could do this much better if I had my skates on." . . . CHATTER: Rudolf Nureyev isn't one of those starting off each day with a glass of

He went to the rescue and was knocked unconscious in the struggle. Concluded the victim from his hospital bed: "It's so much safer in the jungle." . . . Joe Robinson, a "heavy" in the James Bond film, Diamonds Are Forever, is teaching women to disarm men — and not with sex appeal. Joe teaches judo and karate at England's famed Rodean school, where self-defense is as important for women as the three R's.

PRO Senator Jeremiah A. Denton (R.-Ala.), chairman, subcommittee on Aging, Family and Human Services

Proposed Government regulations would require that, in most cases, parents be notified within 10 days if a Federally funded birth-control clinic gives a prescription drug or device to a minor. Both the I.U.D. and the pill are hazardous, especially to young teen-age girls. Parents have a responsibility and obligation to protect the health of their children. They cannot do that if the Federal Government keeps them in the dark.

PRO AND CON Should Parents Be Notified When Minors Receive Birth-Control Prescriptions from Federally Funded Clinics?

(Question submitted by Lillie M. Zechman, Jonestown, Pa.)

Send questions of national significance, on a postcard, to "Pro & Con," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $10 for those published.

CON Representative Henry A. Waxman (D.-Calif.), chairman, subcommittee on Health and Environment

I agree with parental involvement in children's decisions about sexuality. But it must be recognized that there are those families in which communication, especially on such issues, is absent. No Federal mandate will improve such relations. In a recent survey of teen-agers, over half said they would stop coming to the clinic if notification were required. Only 2 percent said they would abstain from sex. The result will be more pregnancies and abortions.

After eight years as New Jersey's Congressional gadfly, the irrepressible Millicent Fenwick is looking for a new challenge. At the age of 72.

When Fenwick smells injustice, she doesn't hesitate to pipe up.

Wide World

Thoroughly Modern Millie

You first notice Millicent Fenwick because of her elegant bearing and carefully tailored suits. But it is her manner of speaking — refined, deliberate, in deep, raspy tones — that ultimately makes the 72-year-old, four-term Republican Congresswoman from Bernardsville, N.J., most appealing and believable. She projects her convictions, her sincerity and her desire with that “You-know-my-dear-I-really-mean-it” voice.

Now she wants to be a Senator, replacing New Jersey Democrat Harrison Williams, who resigned in March following his conviction in the Abscam sting operation. In April New Jersey Governor Thomas Kean appointed investment banker Nicholas Brady as interim Senator, with the understanding he will not run for the post this November. Fenwick's first major test toward winning the job comes June 8, when the Republican primary is held.

Like Lacey Davenport, the character she inspired in Garry Trudeau's Doonosbury comic strip, Fenwick doesn't always know what to make of clever political tactics. With the delight of an eccentric who does not give a fig whether she'll actually pass a bill, she once introduced a piece of legislation that would not permit any Congressional raises without recorded votes. Knowledgeable observers on Capitol Hill chalk it up as another one of “Millie's adventures” and make fun of her naiveté.

Yet Fenwick seems to know exactly what she is doing. She is holding her colleagues to a higher standard of behavior and making her mark as a gadfly, the public conscience. “The fact of the matter is nobody is crazy about me,” she says.

Well, hardly. Political experts think her chances for the Senate race are excellent. She is the most widely recognized of the current Republican candidates and won her home district in 1980 with 78 percent of the vote. As one New Jersey Democrat on Capitol Hill who is critical of Fenwick's legislative performance puts it: “She's unstoppable. They like her because she's rich and they don't think she'll steal from them.”

Hiding her aristocratic upbringing is not Fenwick's style. As the daughter of a New York financier and a New Jersey heiress, Millicent Hammond was born to wealth: life on a luxurious estate of gently rolling hills, fox hunting and society balls. Her mother died when the Lusitania sank in the North Atlantic and the lifeboat she was in tipped over. Her father, Ogden Haggerty Hammond, was rescued and went on to become the U.S. Ambassador to Spain under President Calvin Coolidge. When her father went to Spain, Fenwick was taken out of the fashionable Foxcroft School for girls in Virginia and educated briefly at a French convent.

Not long after returning from Europe at age 19, Millicent met a dashing young neighbor, Hugh Fenwick, at a fox hunt. He was married but left his wife, and in 1934 he and Millicent were married despite family outcries. Four years, two children and many tribulations later, they separated and finally divorced in 1945. Just before the separation, Mrs. Fenwick had begun modeling for Harper's Bazaar and when the split came, she landed at Vogue magazine as a $40-a-week caption writer. She was on staff for 14 years and in 1948 wrote Vogue's Book of Etiquette.

Remembers Alexander Liberman, former art director of Vogue and now editorial director of Condé Nast Publications. “She was very beautiful, but her interests were always deeper than just fashion. There was always a righteousness about her — a sense of right and wrong.”

In 1952 Fenwick returned to her parents' estate in Bernardsville when her family's investments, battered during the Depression, began to turn around. (She's inherited some $5 million.) During that period, she became more active in volunteer work and local politics, serving from 1958 to 1964 on the Bernardsville Borough Council. She would go on to join the State Assembly and become director of consumer affairs for New Jersey.

She says now that in those days she was much more timid and likely to take a back seat to men. “My dear,” she says, “It really took me years to be able to say ‘sex’ publicly.”

Millicent Fenwick may be the most prominent, but she is just one of a small but growing number of women on the Hill. There are now 19 female Representatives (up from 10 in 1970) and two women Senators (Republicans Nancy Kassebaum of Kansas and Paula Hawkins of Florida).

Despite their rising ranks, all is not rosy for these women. Representative Patricia Schroeder, a 41-year-old Colorado Democrat with a degree from Harvard Law School, says that women are either “focused on” or “forgotten.” Most importantly, they don't have access to or feel comfortable in bars and men's clubs — the informal places where Washington deals are made so frequently. “In the House cloakroom, for example,” notes Schroeder, “the men are much more physical. I love the way they always pound on each other. Every now and then, when my shoulder gets hit for the 15th time, I have to say, ‘Hey, guys, cool it.’ They are like bears.”

Fenwick, for one, believes she may be spared some of the annoyances endured by her female colleagues because, "As an older woman, I don't represent the threat the others might."

Though her critics accuse her of grandstanding, Fenwick is at her best in Congress when crusading against evil. She is a master of the free 30-second ad — getting on the TV news. She criticizes waste, takes examples of human suffering and, using the same technique favored by President Reagan, tries to blame problems on a vast, unthinking bureaucracy hamstrung by blind allegiance to sometimes nonsensical rules. Like the President, Fenwick is able to make her aging and wrinkled, yet extremely attractive, face twinkle with innocence and surprise on cue for the cameras.

Though her voting record on fiscal matters is conservative (she supported nearly all of President Reagan's budget cuts), she is a liberal about social causes. She does not believe that "abortion is a proper question for politics" but opposes all efforts by right-to-life groups to outlaw it. She is a strong supporter of gun control, human rights causes, the Equal Rights Amendment and stringent environmental-protection laws. Fenwick opposes increased defense spending and fights efforts by the religious right wing to force prayer in schools. A lifetime member of the N.A.A.C.P., she disapproves of efforts to remove Federal judges' power to order school busing for ending segregation.

As one of the few Republicans who won a first-term seat in the 1974 post-Watergate elections, she is particularly sensitive to the need for honesty in government, sometimes said to be in short supply in New Jersey politics. Quoting a French patriot, she says, "Every society on earth has corruption. It is the nature of human society. But my country was lost because we had corruption without indignation! We have got to be more amazed and furiously angry when corruption is revealed."

Allan Dodds Frank, a former Washington Star national staff writer, now writes for Forbes.

On weekends, Fenwick takes phone calls at her new Jersey home. (Her number is listed.)

Her pet peeve is the rising influence of Political Action

Committees, which raise vast amounts of money for special interest groups to spend on campaigns. "The country suffers from these damned deals" says the straitlaced Fenwick, "— and don't use the word 'damned.'"

There are those, however, who say that, press attention and crusading oratory aside, Fenwick has not found a way to be an effective power in the House. Congressional Quarterly's authoritative 1982 almanac, Politics in America, concludes, "Fenwick's popularity outside the House exceeds her effectiveness within it. Though she spends a lot of time on the House floor and regularly speaks out on behalf of causes . . . of broader political strategy, compromise and coalition building, she remains largely unaware."

Adds conservative Jeffrey Bell, her chief opponent in the primary, "There are two types of Congressmen — the spokesman type and the workhorse type. Millicent is definitely the spokesman type."

Fenwick remains undaunted by criticism. She continues to awaken every day at 5:15 A.M. in the rented townhouse near the Capitol where she lives alone. She is in her office by 6:30, scribbling handwritten notes to hundreds of constituents with whom she corresponds regularly. After a full day in Congress, she heads back to her office, writes more letters and returns phone calls until 9 or 10 P.M. Then she goes home and has the same dinner each night: spaghetti with margarine and Parmesan cheese and a glass of white wine. Every weekend she takes the train home to Bernardsville, where she takes more calls (her number is listed), writes more letters and hops in her Chevrolet to give as many as five speeches in nearby towns.

So why does this grandmother of 11, with a pacemaker already implanted and several major operations behind her, want to run for the Senate? For one, under New Jersey's Congressional redistricting plan, she and fellow Republican Representative James Courter would have to fight it out for the same seat. For another, she is having much too much fun reminding the country of its duty to strive for higher ethical standards. She says her doctor told her that her health is good enough to do whatever she wants to for 20 more years, so why not run for the Senate. "I think your voice is heard more," says Fenwick. "As Theodore Roosevelt said of another office, 'It's a bully pulpit.'" FW

HEALTH

Bypass Surgery: The Heart Of the Matter

By Gloria Hochman

At 30, Larry R. was a Chicago attorney with an impressive list of big-name clients. He was a whiz in the courtroom, traveled to Egypt, Singapore and Marseilles on behalf of his clients and was known as the city's most eligible bachelor.

One day, Larry was in the courtroom trying an important case. Suddenly he experienced a chest pain so severe that it almost knocked him over.

His condition was diagnosed as atherosclerosis, which is a buildup of fatty material in the arteries that impedes the flow of blood. The medication his doctor gave him didn't help. Neither did giving up smoking. Or drinking. Or sex.

Many years later, Larry heard about a procedure for people suffering from exactly the same kind of pains he had: The operation, developed a little more than a decade ago, involves bypassing the blocked portions of any or all of the three major coronary arteries (the arteries which carry blood to the heart muscle itself) and often some of their subsidiary branches with veins from a patient's legs. In some cases, the bypass is accomplished through using an internal mammary artery — one of the many arteries carrying blood to the chest wall — instead of the leg vein.

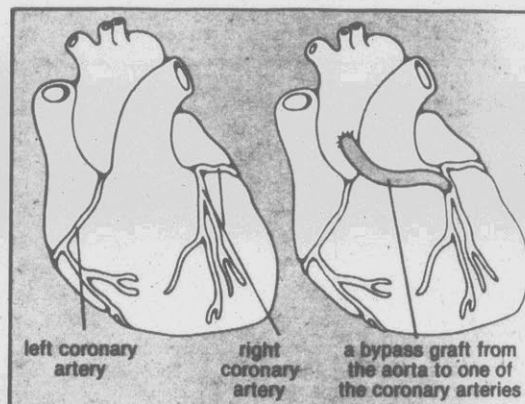

Certain clogged arteries are more worrisome than others. To understand why, it is critical to know the anatomy of the heart and how it works.

The heart, a hollow, muscular organ, is situated in the center of the chest, a little to the left. Its job is to pump blood, which is rich in oxygen and other nutrients, to all parts of the body.

The arteries carry blood away from the heart, and veins return the blood to the heart.

When this network is functioning well, it provides the heart muscle with a half a pint of blood per minute, at rest, and up to a quart of blood per minute when a person is exercising or is under stress.

When atherosclerosis has not progressed to more than 50 percent, most people will have no symptoms; but when it exceeds 50 percent, an inadequate supply of blood will be furnished to the heart when the person is exercising or stressed. If the blockages get to be 85 or 90 percent, a person is likely to feel discomfort even at rest, because such severe clogging prevents blood from getting through even when there is no activity.

No one knows for sure what causes the fatty buildup, but evidence is mounting that individual life styles and certain physical risk factors such as hypertension and high blood cholesterol weigh heavily.

Often, as a result of the blockages, a portion of the heart muscle, starved by a lack of oxygen-rich blood, will die. This is known as a heart attack.

Almost half of all middle-aged men with coronary artery disease have a heart attack as their first sign. But about 25 percent experience angina, the kind of pain Larry experienced, as a warning that their arteries are clogged.

Coronary bypass surgery is a process of rerouting, something like a highway underpass or overpass that permits a driver to avoid clogged city streets. One end of the graft vessel is sewn to the coronary artery below the

"I've never endorsed a garden insecticide before, but this new one's a natural."

Bob Thomson, Gardening Expert

"I've read a lot of garden insecticide labels. And most warn you 'not to pick for at least 24 hours'. That's because they contain synthetic or systemic bug killers. But the bug killer in new Raid Tomato & Vegetable Fogger is all-natural pyrethrum, derived from a type of chrysanthemum flower. So you can use it right up to harvest.

"Raid's unique fogging action covers leaves more quickly than liquids or dusts. And because the insecticide is all-natural, you can pick and enjoy your vegetables anytime.

"Look for it wherever Raid is sold."

area of blockage, and the other is attached to the aorta, the main artery. In this way, blood is taken directly from the aorta, bypasses the obstruction and flows through the graft to nourish the heart muscle. Because the blood supply flows freely once more, the heart muscle receives more of it and is able to pump more effectively.

The operation became feasible when the heart-lung machine was perfected. This is a futuristic-looking device that breathes for the patient while he or she is on the operating table.

Ultimately, Larry decided against the surgery (he was apprehensive about it and so opted for a less active life style instead). But each year since 1967, more and more heart patients have chosen to have the operation. By 1981, more than 850,000 patients had undergone it. Patients count on the surgery to relieve their pain, cure their disease and prolong their lives.

However, in the past few years, there have been rumblings of discontent within medical circles. The major controversy surrounds the question of whether or not the surgery prolongs life. Most studies show that life is prolonged when surgery is performed for a blockage in the left main artery of the heart. (This type of blockage is particularly dangerous because the left main artery supplies blood to the whole body.) However, in all other instances there are conflicting studies, some indicating that the surgery prolongs life and others indicating that life can be prolonged just as well by appropriate drug treatment and life-style changes (control of hypertension, loss of weight, proper exercise, stress reduction). There have also been claims that patients have been misled about what the operation can accomplish.

Some doctors talk about grafts that do not remain open, the incidence of surgically induced heart attacks and the need for second and third operations.

Nonetheless, the operation does relieve pain in 85 to 90 percent of the patients who have it.

Bernard P., 58, who had a bypass operation several years ago, testifies that he "came through perfectly. They were right when they told me I would have little trouble. I had almost no pain from the operation, and now I feel better than before."

But Genevieve T., who is 62, is not so happy. "I didn't feel too bad while I was in the hospital after the surgery," she said. "But the original angina came back. And it was even worse than before."

A recent report from the Cleveland Clinic described a survey of nearly 3,000 women who underwent coronary artery surgery. It found that the operative mortality (the number of people who die on the operating table or within 30 days of surgery) was slightly higher and that graft patency and angina relief were less than in men (the graft stayed open less frequently). But the five- and 10-year longevity in both sexes was almost identical.

"I tell my patients that we are not taking away the disease, we are not curing the disease," says Dr. Horace MacVaugh of Philadelphia's Lankenau Hospital. Dr. MacVaugh and his surgical team perform more than 500 bypasses a year.

"I tell them that everyone is on a gradual downhill course, but that theirs is at a little sharper angle than that of the general population. With this operation, we take them off that curve and move them straight up and start them off again. From that point, they will probably go downhill again at about the same rate that they did before unless they can do something to alter their life style, which may have contributed to the condition."

Coronary bypass surgery is a process of rerouting, something like a highway underpass or overpass.

Patients usually stay in the hospital for a week to 10 days and there is a four- to six-week recuperation period. Some patients take no medication after surgery. Others continue to take medication for high blood pressure, high cholesterol and for other reasons.

How can a patient decide whether to have surgery? Virtually all specialists agree that if you are in serious pain and drugs or a change in life style do not relieve your symptoms, you should really consider surgery. If the pain is not incapacitating, but tests indicate that you have blockages, you should find out which arteries are blocked. Should the left main artery be clogged, most doctors agree that surgery should be performed to prolong life. But there are risk factors involved in the surgery which you should consider. If you are overweight, female (women have thinner arteries than do men), suffer from diabetes or hypertension, have a high level of cholesterol in your blood or have had a heart attack, the risks of bypass surgery increase. Ultimately, the individual must weigh the pros and cons of the operation. FW

Family Feuds: Why Some Fights Last Forever

Just desserts? Once banished, it can be hard to go home again.

By Roberta Plutzik

Almost every extended family has seen a misunderstanding between two relatives snowball into a full-fledged feud. Such fights can last for years and cause a lot of pain — but they don't have to last forever. With patience, persistence and the courage to swallow your pride, it's possible to make amends.

"Misunderstandings are a source of hidden pain for many families," contends Joan Overturf, D.S.W., a Claremont, Calif. social worker in private practice. The feud can be triggered by a significant event — a death in the family that leads to disagreements over money or property; a marriage or divorce that sparks disapproval — or it can begin with something as seemingly unimportant as a forgotten holiday phone call or a wedding present that's never sent.

But because we depend so heavily on our families and want so much from them, Dr. Overturf notes, any misunderstanding, major or minor, has the potential to erupt into a long-standing conflict. "We expect a lot from our families," she says. "We expect to be nurtured and cared for and accepted with very few qualifications. We expect them to be perfect, and when they're not we're disappointed." Because the bonds between family members are so powerful and the hurts relatives can cause each other so painful, adds Dr. Overturf, it is extremely difficult to resolve feuds without a great deal of effort.

But experts contend that even family misunderstandings that continue for decades can be overcome, at least in part. Here are some suggestions for coping with old conflicts and heading off new disagreements:

- In a conflict situation, we sometimes condemn a person as totally bad and worthless. But try to think about your relative's total personality. He may seem obnoxious or unsympathetic, but does he have good attributes? Are these positive traits just as strong as or stronger than his faults? Try to recall the good things that have happened between you.

- If you decide to confront your relative in order to resolve the dispute, Sidney Lecker, M.D., a New York City psychiatrist, advises that you take a constructive approach. Often feuding family members employ a self-defeating discussion technique. Dr. Lecker calls this the "dominance argument," the purpose of which is "to prove the other person wrong, to knock him down and destroy him." He recommends an alternative tactic: the "integrity argument." Its purpose is "to remove irritants between you and yet to preserve family intimacy, love and integrity."

- If you tend to be indirect, try to work at communicating more directly and concisely with your relatives — and work at being a good listener, too. Also, use "I" statements ("I feel hurt because...") rather than "you" statements ("You hurt me..."). They sound less accusatory. Then encourage your relative to respond in like terms.

- Don't count on a third relative who is supposedly neutral about your dispute, to bail you out. Experts say that using your child or anyone else in the family to relay messages and plead your case is generally futile. As a family member, this intermediary will have a hard time being objective.

- If you can't make progress, you can contact your clergyman or the mental health division of a local teaching hospital for the names of therapists trained in family dispute settling.

Roberta Plutzik is the co-author of The Secret Lives of Parents, to be published this fall.

Is Anxiety Evenhanded?

By John E. Gibson

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Right-handed people are more anxious than left-handed people.
2. Wearing certain colors can increase your vulnerability to anxiety.
3. Anxiety can be detrimental to your health.
4. Anxiety can affect the way you draw.

ANSWERS

1. False. In a study at San Jose State University (Calif.) a team of investigators gave right-handed, left-handed and mixed-handed undergraduates a psychological test designed to measure anxiety. The researchers found that "right-handers were significantly less anxious than both the left- and mixed-handed groups." Other research matches these findings.

2. True. If you're under stress, wearing certain colors or having them around you can make you feel even more anxious. In a study conducted jointly by specialists from the Veterans Administration and Augusta College (Ga.) undergraduates were subjected to four colors (red, yellow, green and blue) which have been shown to affect the anxiety state. Subjects were then administered the anxiety-trait scale of a standard psychological test. The study found that students who scored high on the anxiety scale "were significantly more anxious while viewing blue, red and green than were the low scoring anxiety-trait students. And tests of the colors' main effects indicated that blue was associated with significantly more anxiety than was either yellow or green."

3. True. The purpose of a study at the University of Miami School of Medicine was to determine the association between levels of anxiety and the functioning of the body's immune system. Findings indicate that psychological states of stress and anxiety cripple the function of this defense system, inhibit recovery from illness and render an individual more vulnerable to infections and disease.

4. True. In order to assess the extent to which anxiety affects human behavior, investigators at St. John's University (N.Y.) exposed student subjects to an anxiety-inducing film and a neutral film. All were then instructed to make human-figure drawings. The researchers found that "the proportionality of the human-figure drawings drawn subsequent to ex-posure to the anxiety-producing film was significantly different than when subjects were exposed to the neutral film." It was also noted that the amount of darker shading of the human-figure drawings was significantly greater on those drawings executed after the subject had been exposed to the anxiety-producing stimulus. This is cited as just one of the ways in which anxiety may affect us mentally and emotionally. FW

WHAT WORLD

IN THE

By Eliot Kaplan

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

Are you a coward when it comes to eating chicken in public? Do frogs' legs make you jumpy? The thought of lobster force you into a shell? Well, bubby, have we got a book for you. Rochelle Udell's How to Eat an Artichoke offers eating etiquette for all sorts of potential faux pas makers, from mussels to mangoes, pâté à la mode, asparagus to, yes, artichokes. Here's advice on a few common culinary quandaries:

— Corn on the cob: Handle only a few rows or a section at once: buttering, salting, eating. This keeps the mess to a minimum.

— Bacon: If it has any fat on it, use a knife and fork. If crisp, crumble with a fork and eat with your fingers.

— Banana: If served at the dinner table, peel it, cut it with a fruit knife and eat it with a fork. At informal gatherings, eat it like a monkey.

"People end up eating the same things all the time because they're afraid of so many foods," Udell told us. "The idea of learning proper etiquette is to get pleasure from food — instead of falling victim to it."

LET ROVER RING

Lorin Sowards would come home from work around midnight, get into bed and faintly hear the dog out in the snow, scratching to get in. The kids had let Benji out again. Someday, Sowards feared, the terrier might get stuck out there all night. There must be a better way, he realized.

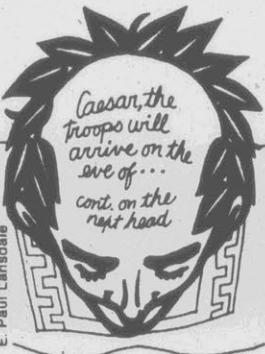

So lo and behold, another invention is born — Sowards's recently patented "doorbell for pets." When a dog or cat wants in (or out) he leans up against a Plexiglas scratch pad mounted on the outside (or inside) of the door. This activates a battery-operated bell, buzzer or flashing light (for the deaf). Sowards, a 50-year-old maintenance man from Brownsville, Neb., told us the idea itself was easy enough to come up with. ("It took me longer to buy the stuff at the hardware store than to do the actual work.") He's now looking for a distributor and hopes to have his device out soon, costing around $25.

THE MANE LINE

It may not be as speedy as the U.S. mail. (But then again, maybe it is.)

When they wanted to send a secret message, the ancient Romans and Greeks really used their heads. According to Yours Truly, King Arthur, Marc Drogin's new history of calligraphy, they would shave a messenger's head, write the dispatch on his scalp and then keep him around until all his hair grew back. That way, nobody could see what was "on his mind." Of course, it's pointed out, this method only works if you have a lot of time.

TALK ISN'T CHEAP

Economics, it seems, makes strange bedfellows. How else can one explain Timothy Leary and G. Gordon Liddy getting together for a series of civilized debates?

The Leary and Liddy show is just one example of the burgeoning business of college speaking engagements. Some 800 schools regularly schedule speakers, and some of the most popular choices are Henry Kissinger, Gerald Ford, Zbigniew Brzezinski, Jane Fonda, Ralph Nader, William Westmoreland and Dick Gregory. To commemorate the 10th anniversary of the Watergate break-in, one speakers' bureau is even putting together John Dean, E. Howard Hunt, Sam Ervin and Bob Woodward.

Needless to say, the lure for these speakers is more than just a soapbox to air their views. Fees range from $1,000 to $25,000, with the average around $2,000 a crack. This year, for example, Liddy will pocket around $280,000 from his talks. Who says crime doesn't pay?

TESTS: BOYS LIKE NOISE

If a boy wants to do his best while taking a test, he should turn up his Walkman. But a girl should put in earplugs.

At least that's what a recent study at Ohio State seems to indicate. On typical academic tests, boys outscored girls by an average of 26 percent when the test was given in a noisy room, while girls outscored boys by 8 percent when the room was quiet.

As reported in Psychology Today, researchers gave 156 first, third and fifth graders a standard intelligence test. In one room, taped noise levels approximated a classroom in which everyone was talking at once. In the other, the loudest noise was the hum of fluorescent lamps.

The researchers attribute the difference, at least in part, to early conditioning. "Young boys are often encouraged to do noisy things," they noted, "whereas girls are encouraged toward quieter, more retiring activities. Consequently, boys may adjust to sounds better."

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with those below.

Junior Whirl

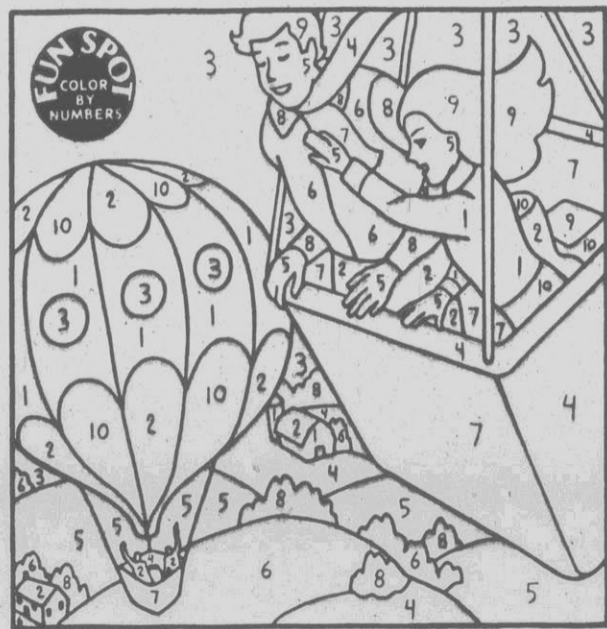

by Hal Kaufman

- HAL'S PALS! Dear Hal: Man, did I catch a fish! It was the 1-1 long. I never saw such a fish! Dear Pal: I believe you. Dear Hal: I'm always ill the night before a vacation. What can I do about it? Dear Pal: How about leaving a day early?
- Murky Math! Twelve's as much greater than four as twice this number exceeds five score. What number? Answer in 30 seconds.
- Hue's Who! Complete these expressions by adding missing colors: 1. Caught _____ handed. 2. In the _____ of condition. 3. _____ around the gills. 4. Born to the _____ - Riddle-Me-This! Why did the dress-shop clerk resign? She had clothes-trophobia. Why did the chicken thief hire a helicopter? To fly the coop.

ANAGRAM RIDDLES

Four anagrammatic transposals are used to solve the riddles below. That is, letters are rearranged to form other words. Ex.: What did Susie say after ONE HUG? Answer, by switching letters: ENOUGH.

1. If an ELEPHANT refuses to walk through a puddle, what should its trainer say?
2. What troubles a POSTMAN?
3. What can you say when using a FIRE ESCAPE?
4. What helps to make BAKERS FAT?

RIDING HIGH! Add colors to this daring aerial adventure scene: 1-Red. 2-Lt. blue. 3-Yellow. 4-Lt. brown. 5-Flesh. 6-Lt. green. 7-Dk. brown. 8-Dk. green. 9-Black. 10-Purple.

SPELLBINDER

SCORE 10 points for using all the letters in the word below to form two complete words:

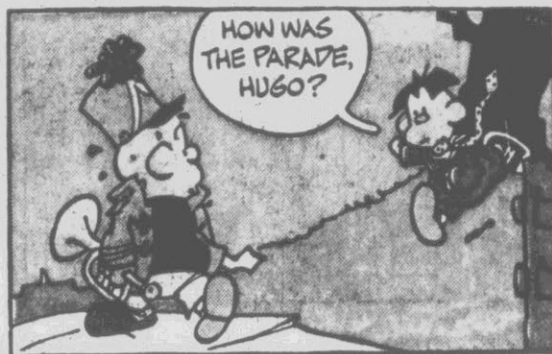

MAGNETIC

THEN score 2 points each for all words of four letters or more found among the letters.

TIGER

by BUD BLAKE

Our Story: JUSTINIAN RAVES AT THE DESTRUCTION OF HIS FLEET, BUT EXHAUSTION FINALLY RESTORES SANITY. ONLY THEN DOES BELIGARIUS SPEAK. "PRINCE VALIANT BADE ME DELIVER THIS TO YOU," HE EXPLAINS. INSIDE THE CASKET LIES A BABY'S CRADLE, EMPTY BUT FOR A MESSAGE AFFIXED TO THE BOTTOM WITH A DAGGER.

THE WORDS ARE FROM A HOLY BOOK: "WHATSOEVER A MAN SOWETH, THAT SHALL HE ALSO REAP." AND JUSTINIAN TURNS SUDDENLY ILL.

IN THE MISTY ISLES, LIFE AT THE PALACE RETURNS TO ITS TRAGIC ROUTINE. VAL SUPERVISES THE RELIEF OF THE OUTER ISLANDS, RAVAGED BY THE INVASION. ARN AND THE TWINS TAKE TURNS SPOON-FEEDING THEIR MOTHER. IT KEEPS HER ALIVE.

VAL JOKINGLY CALLS ARN HIS "GRAND VIZIER" BUT ONE DAY SIR GAWAIN TAKES THE TIRED LAD AWAY FROM HIS DUTIES. THEY SPEAR FISH IN THE MOUNTAIN STREAMS, FEAST ON THE CATCH, AND AFTERWARDS BASK IN THE WARM SPRING SUN. THEN GAWAIN BECOMES SERIOUS.

ARN TREMBLES. HE THINKS OF MAEVE, HIS BELOVED. HE THINKS OF THE BROTHER HE HAS NEVER SEEN. HE ACCEPTS THE QUEST.
