ERA Supporters, Foes Fill State House

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - Hundreds of supporters and opponents of the Equal Rights Amendment, armed with pamphlets, petitions and buttons, filled the legislature today in anticipation of formal introduction of an ERA bill in the state House.

Gov. Jim Hunt, meanwhile, forcefully repeated his support for the proposed amendment to the U.S. Constitution, telling a news conference, "it's right and it will prevail," if not this year then in the future.

"The question is, is ERA right for the people of our country and state, and I think it is," Hunt said.

Hunt also said he hoped Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green, who presides over the Senate, would not block the ERA bill on procedural rulings, as some supporters fear, and would allow it to be voted on.

"I'll talk to him if I need to. The lieutenant governor knows where I stand," Hunt said. "I hope very much that he'll see that it is voted on fairly."

Groups from various communities statewide arrived as early as 6 a.m. and queued up to get a seat in the galleries to watch lawmakers at their afternoon meeting. Others began swarming through the halls looking for legislators, who began a short summer session Wednesday.

Some opponents, wearing red, octagon-shaped "Stop ERA" buttons, carried tiny, red silk roses to give to lawmakers. They were countered by women dressed in the ERA colors of green and white, who planned a rally later today.

A group of several hundred opponents milled around the front of the Legislative Building this morning, waving red "Stop ERA" signs. One block away, in front of the building where Hunt was holding his news conference, a similar-sized group of supporters waved green signs supporting ERA and held a news conference with leaders of 11 religious denominations.

Organizers were difficult to find in the groups and strategy was passed by word of mouth.

There was little but ERA on lawmakers' minds Wednesday, as both the House and Senate met for less than 15 minutes to start a session expected to run about three weeks.

Strategies and vote counts changed by the minute Wednesday as legislative halls were crowded with both ERA supporters, wearing ERA colors of green and white, and opponents, wearing mostly red.

"We're playing it minute by minute," said Sen. Rachel Gray, D-Guilford.

ERA supporters declared Wednesday and Thursday as "ERA Lobby Days" and promised to bring even more people to lobby today. Legislators said they also expected a loose-knit coalition of opponents to turn out in force today.

Reps. Al Adams, D-Wake, and Ruth Easterling, D-Mecklenburg, filed a bill to ratify the ERA for formal introduction today. It was signed by more than 30 members of the 120-member House.

House Speaker Liston Ramsey, an ERA supporter, said he would send the measure to the Constitutional Amendments Committee, headed by Rep. Bertha Holt, D-Alamance, another supporter.

"We've got a good safe count (in the committee) - 11-8," Mrs. Holt said. "It's looking better than I thought."

Ramsey said he was unsure about approval in the House, where he noted there were 24 Republicans. "If a vote were taken today, I think we'd lose," he said.

Shells And Leaflets Rain On Stanley's Defenders

By The Associated Press

British forces rained shells and surrender leaflets on Argentine troops surrounding Stanley, and the Buenos Aires junta was reported today to have made a major retreat on its demand for sovereignty over the Falkland Islands.

Argentine troops, driven back into a "horseshoe" defensive position, began firing back at Royal Marines shelling Moody Brook, 3 miles from Stanley, in the first artillery exchanges outside the capital, British correspondents reported from forward positions Wednesday night. Moody Brook is believed to be a forward headquarters for the estimated 7,000 Argentines defending Stanley.

As shelling continued, government sources in London said British planes dropped thousands of leaflets on Stanley telling the Argentines their position is hopeless. Defense Ministry sources said Spanish-speaking Britons were among the forward troops to negotiate surrenders around Stanley.

The influential Argentine newspaper La Nacion said the Argentine military delegation sent to the United Nations Wednesday carried a proposal for multinational control of the islands and the withdrawal of both military forces about 360 miles.

"The administration of the archipelago would be the responsibility of Argentina, Great Britain, Venezuela, another country chosen by the British and another that would be designated by the U.N. secretary-general," the paper said.

This was a major retreat from Argentina's demand for recognition of its sovereignty over the islands. But Britain said May 25, after the breakdown of the previous U.N. peace negotiations, that its objective was to retake the Falklands because they were British "sovereign territory."

British helicopters have lifted 105mm guns, with a range of 10 1/2 miles, to the hilltops west of Stanley while British Scorpion light tanks moved into position and Snowcat transport vehicles brought supplies and ammunition across the boggy terrain.

A senior British defense source in London said the buildup was expected to take "a few days."

British correspondents on the battlefield, whose reports were subject to military censorship, said British troops controlled the ridges overlooking Stanley including the 1,535-foot Mount Kent.

Budget Clash Ahead

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - With President Reagan refusing to "split the difference" on the 1983 budget, Democrats and Republicans are bracing for another head-to-head clash on the House floor.

The Democrats' strategy includes a plan to revive Reagan's nearly-forgotten original spending blueprint as the vehicle for the showdown.

In addition, Democratic leaders appeared ready to push a more liberal budget plan than they had supported last week while Republicans said they would move in a more conservative direction.

After the House rejected more than half a dozen budget plans last week, House Budget Committee Chairman James R. Jones, D-Okla., suggested that leaders of both parties "split the difference" between the unsuccessful packages they had each brought to the House floor.

Jones convened a meeting of his panel Wednesday, announcing that "the White House informed me last night that particular path would not be possible."

Jones then suggested that his Democratic-controlled committee report out the president's original budget - submitted to Congress in February - and use it as a vehicle for debate in the full House.

Jones added that the action would be taken with the understanding that the committee would recommend the president's plan not be approved and Democratic and Republican leaders would offer separate substitutes to the administration package.

Such action would amount to a potentially embarrassing blow to Reagan and his House allies because the president's plan, with its high deficit projections, failed to garner even GOP support on Capitol Hill.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said today the action was

Target Education Centers As N.C. Belt-Tightening Gesture

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - Superintendent of Public Instruction Craig Phillips says a vote by legislative budget committees will eliminate nearly one-third of the administrators in the state's eight regional education centers.

Phillips, reacting to a close vote Wednesday by the House and Senate appropriations committees to slash $1 million from the centers' budgets, blasted the move as a "political decision" and promised to fight it.

"They're talking about cutting state employees at a time when the governor said we're not going to dismiss employees," Phillips said.

The committees voted to add the cut to a list of more than $36 million in cuts in the state budget for next year. More than $26 million of those cuts would come out of the public schools.

The panels planned to resume deliberations today, with budget leaders expecting approval of another proposal to cut $93 million by freezing salaries for teachers and state employees.

The panels voted 45-36 to cut $1 million from the $3.6 million annual state budget of the centers. Recommending the cut was Rep. Margaret Tennille, D-Forsyth, head of a study commission looking into the centers.

The centers have come under attack from leaders of the N.C. Association of Educators as an added layer of administrative bureaucracy, but they were defended by some legislators who said they provided needed advice and support for local schools.

"The regional concept is a sound approach, and if we don't provide these services...we won't continue to improve education," said Rep. Margaret "Pinky" Hayden, D-Alleghany.

Mrs. Hayden, who works in a regional center in a federally paid job, opposed the cut and said, "I beg you to let them do their job."

The centers are located in Williamston, Jacksonville, Knightdale, Carthage, Greensboro, Albemarle, North Wilkesboro and Canton.

Most of the cuts approved by the committees were recommended by committee and subcommittee chairmen last week. But the panels overruled the chairmen on one issue, voting to reduce support to the community college system by another $500,000 through an increase from $8 to $15 in the fees for those taking hobby courses.

The committee didn't discuss a proposal by Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, the House appropriations chairman, that the governor's salary be increased from $57,864 to $100,000 a year and that the House Speaker be given a raise from $13,860 to an amount equal to the lieutenant governor's salary, $47,928.

Watkins said he suggested the raises as a "trial balloon" and was awaiting response from legislators. Hunt issued a statement saying he opposed the raise.

"This might be the wrong time," Watkins said. "I think it's right, but maybe everybody else thinks it's the wrong time."

Watkins said he had not decided whether to formally submit the proposals.

Luncheon Meeting For Reagan And Mitterand

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) - President Reagan conferred today with French President Francois Mitterand on the Middle East, Central America and the Falkland Islands war, but sidestepped serious discussion of the stubborn economic issues dividing their countries.

On the eve of an economic summit of major industrial democracies at Versailles outside the French capital, Reagan said he and Mitterand deferred "heavy discussions" of economic issues straining America's allies until they join the leaders of Britain, West Germany, Italy, Canada and Japan this weekend.

The two leaders met over lunch in the splendor of the Elysee Palace. Reagan said it was a good meal. "How would the food be? Delicious. We're in Paris."

Reagan was greeted at the palace by a military honor guard and a salute from a drum and bugle corps. He and Mitterand shook hands and then met privately in a chandelied salon over a lunch featuring a salad of assorted shellfish, veal with truffles and three fine French wines.

A White House aide said that, as is customary for presidents on foreign trips, Reagan brought his own drinking water to the lunch.

Reagan said he and Mitterand only "touched on" the economic issues, including inflation, unemployment, recession and high interest rates, that will be discussed in depth at Versailles.

Despite political differences between the conservative American president and the socialist French leader, the two officials have a cordial working relationship based in part on their similar backgrounds as political "outsiders."

Even so, senior French officials said Mitterand will oppose Reagan's effort to persuade America's trading partners to limit their credit sales to the Soviet Union, which these officials characterized as a misguided and unrealistic policy aimed at forcing the Soviet economy to its knees.

Before the luncheon that began Reagan's 10-day European tour, his first since taking office, French officials voiced criticism of the anticipated U.S. effort to dissuade the Europeans from extending credit to the Soviets at subsidized interest rates.

One official referred to "this frenzy on Soviet credits," and another accused the United States of a "one-sided obsession with the credit issue" without acknowledging its own extensive grain trade with the Soviets.

CERTAIN HAIR CURLER

There is a certain kind of metal hair curler that I have been searching for for many months. I've checked with local beauticians and beauty suppliers and even wrote the Tip Top Co. out in Kansas. They answered that they're no longer making this type curler. I would like to know if any other company is or if anyone has some old ones they'd be willing to share with me. A.E.

Aycock School To Get Apple II Component

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer
It's not an apple for the teacher, but a microcomputer apple for teachers and students that women of the Pilot Club of Greenville have given to Aycock Junior High School.

On Tuesday afternoon, Lenore Morton and Lib LeConte presented a check for $1,250 to Aycock Junior High principal Paul Raspberry. Mrs. Morton is the project division coordinator for the Pilot Club and Mrs. LeConte is the club's immediate past president. She was president at the time fund raising for the special project began.

"The idea of purchasing the computer component was not in our original projects plan," Mrs. LeConte commented. "But we're very happy that we have had a chance to do this for the school."

Mrs. Morton added, "This is a project The Pilot Club sponsored in connection with the Adopt-A-School project. Our primary source of funds for this gift was a spring smorgasboard we held recently. Everybody in Greenville is familiar with our annual smorgasboard so, for this project, we decided to have a second one. It went over well."

"The money is most welcome and will be used to buy an Apple II Plus component for the microcomputer," Raspberry explained. "The additional component will be a big help to us in our programs."

Kay Whitehurst, director of secondary education for the Greenville schools, and Carolyn Ferebee, director of the community schools program, as well as other members of the Pilot Club were on hand for the check presentation. "All of us are deeply grateful to the women of The Pilot Club for this expression of active community involvement in the Adopt-A-School program," Mrs. Ferebee said.

Mrs. Whitehurst, who will be principal at Aycock beginning the next school year, said, "It's very encouraging to see concerned people helping their schools in ways such as this."

The Apple microcomputer will be used for three primary purposes. One purpose is to adapt or develop software for handicapped or disadvantaged students enrolled in a special program; another purpose is to give all students the opportunity for computer-assisted instruction. The third purpose is to provide in-service to teachers of other low-achieving secondary school math students.

The Pilot Club of Greenville, which will celebrate its 25th anniversary in 1983, currently has about 40 active members. In addition to the Apple II project, club members earlier this year gave two pairs of anti-shock pants for children to the local rescue squad. Members also are active in assisting the Salvation Army, Operation Santa Claus, Care and a number of other community charitable causes.

Dear Abby

delinquent party is given every opportunity to pay. In some cases, an automatic deduction is made from every paycheck. The money goes into a savings account specifically set up to pay taxes. The selling of personal property is always the last resort.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is my 10-month-old son. I don't know who his father is. Don't get me wrong, I'm not a tramp. Here's the way it happened: On my 19th birthday, my father came home drunk and raped me. I tried to fight him off, but he hit me across the jaw and said he'd kill me if I made any noise, so I had to give in.

The next day I left home and went to Baltimore to look for a job. While looking for a place to stay, I met a really nice guy. (I'll call him Pete.) Pete was with the Pakistan Merchant Marines. It was love at first sight for both of us, and that very night I moved in with him.

About a month later I started feeling lousy in the morning. Before long I knew I was pregnant. I didn't want to lie to Pete, so I told him that there was a 50-50 chance that the baby was my father's. Well, that night while I was asleep, he packed all his things and took off, and that was the last I heard of him.

The rent was paid until the end of the month so I stayed there, then I went back home. I told my folks the honest truth, and my father kept after me to get in touch with the Pakistan Merchant Marines and make Pete pay child support. I refused because deep down I had the feeling the baby wasn't his.

The boy is 10 months old now and he is the picture of my father. I am going crazy not knowing for sure who my baby's father is. How can I find out?

ALL MIXED UP

DEAR MIXED UP: In order to determine who your baby's father is, you will need blood samples from both your father and Pete. Please talk to your doctor about this. You are to be commended for your honesty, but I think you should try to locate Pete on the chance that he is the father. For the sake of your own peace of mind, do everything you can to learn the truth. And for God's sake, report your father to the authorities. He is sick!

How To Clear District

Among the handful of "delegates" writing a constitution for the statewide campaign in the District of Columbia, idealism overwhelmed practicalities; albeit, they turned out not too impractical.

They were allocated $150,000 and 90 days to come up with a finished product.

For a citizenry residing in an area whose principal "industry" is government, the panel showed remarkable unawareness of the facts of government, the District's reason for existing, the exceedingly frail economic base on which it rests. It makes one wonder if someone hasn't been pulling our leg.

We in turn prefer a proposal made by The Daily Reflector — long years ago — to build a new national capital nearer the geographic center of the nation, return the District property to Virginia and Maryland, and turn that area into a mecca for tourists who seek a refresher course on American history and culture for almost 200 years.

We'd expect the greater portion of the D.C. population would pack up and leave town in a hurry.

Military Standoff Is Best

At this point Iran seems to be winning its war with Iraq, and Iranian leaders now say they are no longer willing to negotiate a peace agreement.

The war began with an Iraqi invasion of Iranian territory with the aim of controlling the Shatt-al-Arab waterway.

Iraq was successful, but now the Iranian army has thrown back the invaders. Neither of the warring nations friend of the United States; at the same time, the U.S. could scarcely take heart from an Iranian military plunge through Iraq. It could encourage the Iranian government to further military adventures in the Middle East.

The best we can hope for is a military standoff in this conflict.

THIS AFTERNOON

Not Really Bad?

RALEIGH — The state's high school dropout problem isn't as severe as we've thought. That's the conclusion of a Southern Pines researcher who's trying to trace where dropouts go after leaving school.

Dr. Bryant Lindsay is project director for the National Model Dropout Information and Service Project at Sandhills Community College in Southern Pines. He was in Raleigh for the Governor's Conference on School Dropouts last month and he told a group of educators that the dropout rate may be as little as one-half of the state's official count — and in some places as little as one-quarter.

In his study, Lindsay has found that a great number of dropouts eventually go back to school. But, since they don't return to the high school they dropped out of, they remain in the state's tabulation of school dropouts. Currently the rate is 33 percent. That is, of every three students who enter the ninth grade, one will drop out before graduation day.

Lindsay's study found "that about one-half of all school dropouts eventually complete high school through programs of community college institutions but the published dropout rate doesn't reflect this." He cited Haywood County which has a dropout rate of 20 students a year but 170 high school completions through Haywood Technical College. That means a "true dropout rate" of only 25 percent as large as reported.

He also notes that some dropouts don't get in diploma programs at their community college but do register for further education, be it vocational or adult basic.

This accounting error, Lindsay says, hides the state's truly successful dropout programs from public view. With an accurate dropout rate, school systems would know which programs are working and they'd consider copying that success.

Lindsay wants the General Assembly to set up a system, similar to his project model, where local schools and their community colleges share both general and individual information about dropouts. His project currently works with nine community colleges and 16 school systems.

When a youngster leaves school, the community college is informed. The student is contacted by the college and told of the educational options available to him at the college. He's counseled on whether he should enroll there or return to high school.

There's no need to increase appropriations for the program, he says. Current computer systems can perform this task very easily. Community colleges already have numerous programs for dealing with dropouts. They just need to know who they are.

His proposed legislation would first define exactly who will be considered a dropout. It would then authorize high schools to give the names and addresses of these people to community colleges as soon after they leave school as possible. The colleges would be allowed access to school records of these youngsters without violating privacy laws. Any new expense for the program would be assigned to the community college.

Gov. Jim Hunt, who spoke at the conference, proposed a five-point program for reducing the dropout rate. One of the points is better tracking of dropouts so other education opportunities can be provided. Hunt said the state should aim for a rate of 10 percent or less within the next few years. Lindsay heard that speech and muttered, "We may already be there, or very close."

Other Editors Say Teach And Test

(Greensboro Record)

Can North Carolina students expect to graduate from high school capable of writing two consecutive, coherent paragraphs? That, reduced to its simplest terms, is the question two state commissions are debating. Sadly, but not too surprisingly, some state officials doubt all students will be able to do it. They are hesitant to include such a writing skills requirement in the state's competency tests administered to candidates for high school graduation.

Gov. Jim Hunt is pushing for development of such a test. He wants it in place along with the present tests on reading and arithmetic before he leaves office in 1985. One member of the two panels studying the matter — the annual test commission and the minimum competency test commission — has expressed frustration in developing a reliable competency test in writing. Field tests of two earlier formats proved unsuccessful — meaning, we must assume, that students were not able to pass the tests — and the competency test commission now is awaiting results from a third proposed test.

It is depressing to think students on the verge of graduation from high school are unable to write two paragraphs. Unfortunately, the reality of that situation is not new. It has been with us for years and years. The fact is, some students and adults have problems putting together a complete sentence, let alone two paragraphs.

Educators long have wrangled about where the blame lies. Some educators say students do not get enough training in the lower grades. Others maintain the blame should be placed at a higher level. Some say there are not enough funds for remedial programs.

Some of the blame can be assigned to the instructional process, no doubt, but problems of culture and learning disabilities also are involved. There is plenty of blame to go around and too few solutions.

Fortunately, not all careers require the ability to write coherently. But writing in its simplest form is one of the basics of communication. A person who has not mastered at least some rudimentary skill in writing likely always will have a problem in communicating — and succeeding in life.

Gov. Hunt is on sound ground to insist that N.C. high school graduates should be able to pass minimum tests in reading, writing and arithmetic. But the problem really is double-pronged: (a) teaching students to write, and (b) devising a test to determine whether they have been taught. Solving the one will take care of the other.

Another Upset By Bell?

WASHINGTON — An encouraging word is filtering down from Paterson, Hackensack, Newark and Trenton — encouraging, that is, to conservatives who pray for one more solid vote in the U.S. Senate. The word is that Jeffrey Bell may pull off an upset again.

The 38-year-old Bell startled the political soothsayers four years ago when he took on the then incumbent Clifford Case in New Jersey's Republican primary. This was one of those David and Goliath combats, an unknown stripling against a veteran vote-getter. No one gave Bell a chance. As things turned out, Bell defeated Case, and though he lost the following November to basketball star Bill Bradley, Bell gained statewide admiration for the race he made.

History may well repeat itself. Until the past week or so, few observers had given Bell much of a chance against his opponent in the June 8 senatorial primary, Rep. Millicent Fenwick. Again he faces an opponent with large identification statewide. Just about everybody knows Mrs. Fenwick, the grandmotherly, pipe-smoking, grande dame of the House, and as a gracious and charming lady, almost everyone likes her. She is Mammy Yokum, Grandma Moses and Miz Lillian wrapped into one personable package. The gentlewoman will be tough to beat.

But Bell has some things going for him this time that he didn't have four years ago. He's no longer an unknown. His campaign is better financed this time around. He is using television and radio effectively. The 1978 campaign against Case taught him some useful lessons in campaign organization. He has sharpened his already formidable skills in debate, and he has learned to present an easier, more affable image on the hustings.

Bell is by nature a serious person. Those of us who have known him since he began writing for National Review some 15 years ago know that — if a bit of political jargon may be forgiven — he is an issue-oriented man. This is not to suggest that he is a cold intellectual fish who was born to swim in a tank. On the contrary, he is a charming fellow with a lively sense of humor; he is engaged to a lovely gal, Rosalie O'Connell, an assistant professor of English at Dartmouth. They will marry once this primary campaign is behind him.

In his race against Mrs. Fenwick, Bell's principal asset is precisely this concentration on issues. He has run a campaign that is squeaky clean. He has not said a word about his opponent's age — she turned 72 in February — nor has he let personalities creep into the contest anywhere. Point by point, as a professional economist, he has staked a solidly conservative position on one issue after another — defense, food stamps, racial balance busing, tax subsidies for abortions.

Mrs. Fenwick's problem is that she cannot escape her own record of genteel liberalism. She has served since 1975 in the House; in these past seven years she has cast dozens of roll-call votes, and these form a consistent pattern. She is by no means a flaming liberal — no Liz Holtzman, she — but the pattern is clear. On the scorecards of such outfits as the American Conservative Union, she ranks relatively low; with Americans for Democratic Action, she ranks with Florida's venerable Claude Pepper, which is to say, among the top third of the House.

Bell has concentrated on the Fenwick record. This is fair game, and though the gentlewoman has complained of Bell's "distortions," her complaints are not impressive. Votes are votes, and Bell has fairly described hers. From time to time, by way of example, Mrs. Fenwick has indeed voted against efforts to restrict racial balance busing; she has in fact opposed the development of new weapons systems; at one point she was among only

Reagan Has Polish 'Ace'

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — After months of wasted time pondering costs that are truly piddling, the administration has a golden chance to let the Soviet Union know that Ronald Reagan has not, after all, forgotten about martial law in Poland.

That chance is to mark six months of martial law by taking the decision that, above almost all others, will bring pain and consternation to the perpetrators of martial law, both in Moscow and in Warsaw: Announce a major expansion of U.S.-financed radio broadcasts to the Soviet empire, including Radio Free Europe (RFE) broadcasts to Poland's news-famished millions.

Yet, in the Reagan administration the powerful White House staff system is capable of blocking the best laid plans from the outside. Nothing can be certain.

Secretary of State Alexander Haig's original letter asking the president for emergency FRE money was sent into the White House bureaucracy on Jan. 5. Whether Ronald Reagan saw it then, weeks later or ever is not known. What is certain is that Haig's proposal raised the hackles among budget-cutting money-savers in the Office of Management and Budget and among sticklers for bureaucratic form at lower levels of the National Security Council staff.

This week marks the passage of five months since Haig's letter to his boss. Next week will mark six months of martial law in Poland under worsening conditions. When Reagan imposed sanctions against the Soviets in late December, there was more than an implication — there was a virtual promise — that if conditions did not improve, sanctions would be broadened. They haven't been.

Lech Walesa, under house arrest since Dec. 13, has been moved down to southeast Poland, near the Soviet border, scarcely evidence of improved conditions. Officials here now give no better than 50-50 odds that Walesa, the worker who headed the 10-million-member Solidarity union, will ever be given his freedom by the frightened group of military and Communist Party operatives who are trying to run Poland as a nation behind bars.

That Reagan could fail to perceive the opportunities in expanding America's radio news transmissions into Poland is a mystery that has puzzled and angered Reaganites — outside the White House. Candidate Reagan declared on Oct. 7, 1980, that the foreign broadcast policies of the Carter administration were "a sorry situation" that "a Reagan-Bush administration will turn around."

Presumably, the president is aware of what an expansion of radio broadcasts into Poland would mean to Communist Party politicians in Moscow and Warsaw. On May 10 the party-controlled Polish radio aired the first of four attacks on RFE in an effort to reduce its influence, blaming it for trying to "erode and dismantle" the communist system. The fourth broadcast charged it with "urging passive resistance, calling for strikes, instigating unrest and destabilization of the country" — all of which amount to "brutal interference in the affairs of a sovereign state."

When Haig met Soviet foreign minister Andrei Gromyko in New York last September, among other things on his mind were Soviet aggression in Afghanistan and Solidarity's stunning success in slaking the political thirst for freedom in Poland. Haig was surprised when Gromyko launched his counterattack: A demand, repeated ad nauseam, that the U.S. must tone down its radio broadcasts into the Soviet orbit; that they were unacceptable.

A quote from Polish radio might explain Gromyko's anxiety. "These radios," said the voice of Poland last month, "are largely responsible for what happened in Poland as well as what may happen in the future."

With the congressional slashing of Reagan's defense budget being read in Moscow as lack of will, a presidential decision to turn up Radio Free Europe a mere $5 million worth in 1983, much of it for capital improvements, would look particularly good on that red-letter day of June 13, the half-year mark in Poland's long night.

Strength For Today

TREASURES IN HEAVEN

Some years ago a man gave a large sum of money to a religious institution. Later, misfortune overtook him and he went bankrupt. Someone reminded him of his former generosity and said, "Don't you wish you had the money back which you gave with such a free hand years ago?" And the reply was, "No, that's really the only money that I ever saved."

Jesus said on one occasion, "Lay not up for yourselves treasures on earth ... but lay up for yourself treasures in heaven." Every time we do something for someone else, every time that we set ourselves aside that another may live a fuller life, every time that we contribute to some project for human betterment, we are laying up spiritual treasures. If we think about the matter for a moment we realize that the only money we have truly saved unto eternity is the money we have spent unselfishly for others. These are treasures stored away "where moth and rust do not corrupt." — Elisha Douglass

Oil Price Increase A Portent

By ROBERT BURNS

AP Business Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices increase by Egypt, Britain and Norway will not add noticeably to U.S. fuel bills. But the moves illustrate a trend in the oil industry that could lead to higher domestic oil prices this summer.

Egypt raised its crude price by 60 cents a barrel to $32.60 Tuesday, sources said. Egypt thus became the third oil producer outside the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to raise prices for June. Britain and Norway are increasing prices for their North Sea oil by $2.50 a barrel to $33.50. OPEC's benchmark price has been $34 a barrel since last October.

The increases come amid mounting evidence that the oversupply of oil that had depressed prices since mid-1981 is rapidly drying up. OPEC's campaign to available to buyers apparently has succeeded in pushing up the price of oil on the spot, or non-contract, market.

The oil industry has turned abruptly this spring from one of glutted supplies and falling prices to more balanced inventories and stable prices.

If U.S. oil producers are persuaded to raise their price for domestic crude, the increase probably would be passed along to consumers in the form of higher gasoline and home heating oil prices, some analysts believe.

The price of gasoline in the United States already is rising modestly, mainly because gas supplies are tightening and consumer demand appears to be picking up despite the national recession.

Egypt's move to boost its price by 60 cents a barrel will not directly affect fuel prices in the United States because this country are relatively small. The increase mainly affects Standard Oil Co. (Indiana), which is the dominant producer of Egypt's crude.

Greg Clock, a spokesman for Indiana Standard, confirmed that Egypt's national oil company had notified his company of the price rise effective Tuesday.

It also was learned that Egypt had tightened the credit terms for its oil customers in May, effectively raising its price by about 35 cents a barrel. Thus Egypt's price effectively has jumped 95 cents a barrel since April.

Britain became the first producer to raise prices this year when it notified its customers of an increase for its North Sea oil to $33.50 a barrel last Friday. Norway, which is a much smaller producer in the North Sea, did the same.

Meanwhile, the oil minister of the United States was quoted by the UAE news agency Tuesday as saying, "We believe that the oil glut has vanished."

Mansoor Oteiba, who heads a special OPEC committee that watches trends in the oil market, was quoted as saying the panel would meet in Vienna, Austria, in early July to discuss developments in oil supply and demand.

Oteiba said that while the committee might recommend that OPEC raise its production ceiling from the current 17.5 million barrels daily, the cartel should be certain that oil demand was strong enough before acting.

"We should not rush into taking decisions that could cause a new setback to the market," he said, adding that if the committee thought a higher production ceiling were needed it might recommend a special OPEC ministerial meeting.

The cartel is not scheduled

World leaders gather tomorrow for an Economic Summit in Versailles, France, an appropriate site for such a prestigious international conclave. Versailles was originally a small hunting lodge. But Louis XIV spent more than $100 million to expand it into the world's most glorious palace. Its hundreds of rooms and miles of corridors are filled with precious paintings, statues and elegant furnishings. The palace has already been the site of many historic events. The American Revolution was concluded here in 1783. In 1919 the Treaty of Versailles, signed in the famous Hall of Mirrors, brought an end to World War I and set up the League of Nations, the first major step toward a world government.

Defer Abortion Coalition Ties

BANNER ELK, N.C. (AP) — The Presbyterian Synod of North Carolina has delayed aligning itself with the Religious Coalition for Abortion Rights and has begun a study of health-care issues.

After lengthy and heated debate, the synod, affiliated with the Presbyterian Church in the United States, voted Wednesday to send the abortion proposal back to committee for further study.

"They got into the question of pro and con on the abortion issue. The Presbyterian general assembly, our national body, has already decided to affiliate with the coalition," said moderator Bill East. "The (state) senate did not feel it had enough information to act on it. I don't think they were ducking the issue, they just did not have enough information."

The synod established a task force to deal with health care issues, which will report back to the church group in 1985, reaffirmed its support for the Equal Rights Amendment in North Carolina and approved a resolution calling for a freeze on nuclear arms.

East said the task force was instructed to examine "all the areas of health care," including health care benefits, hospitalization and homes for the elderly. He said the church has several homes for the elderly in the state, but no hospitals.

With little debate, the synod reaffirmed its support of the ERA. Bob Milks, the synod's communications assistant, said a large majority of the synod's voters agreed to tell the N.C. General Assembly's leadership that the synod approves the unratified amendment.

Milks said the approved nuclear-freeze resolution asks that the United States and the Soviet Union lead the way in a world-wide freeze on nuclear arms development.

As the 1978 contest indicated, New Jersey's Republicans are basically a conservative lot. If Bell can pull off his uphill primary campaign against Mrs. Fenwick, he would be given an excellent chance of winning the Senate seat in November. In that case, New Jersey would have two highly intelligent men in the Senate (Bradley was not only a basketball star but also a Rhodes scholar), an attractive proposition for the state and for the Senate as well.

Dr. Herbert Paschal, 54, Dies In Tennessee

Dr. Herbert R. Paschal, 54, former chairman of the East Carolina University History Department, died Wednesday in Sevierville, Tenn.

Dr. Paschal joined the East Carolina faculty in 1955 after working as an archivist in the North Carolina Department of Archives and History. He became full professor in 1963, serving as a visiting professor at UNC-CH the same year. After becoming chairman, he served until 1979, when he relinquished his administrative duties.

He also served as chairman of the East Carolina Committee on the Carolina Charter Tercentary in 1963.

DR. HERBERT PASCHAL

Dr. Paschal was born July 8, 1927 in Suffolk, Va., but spent most of his youth in Washington, N.C. and Beaufort County.

He served in the U.S. Navy during 1945-1946 and after military service received his B.A. degree from Wake Forest College in 1950, his M.A. in 1953 and his Ph.D. in 1961 from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Dr. Paschal was the author of "A History of Colonial Bath" and "The Tuscarora Indians in Bertie County," along with numerous historical articles, most of them on the colonial period and North Carolina. At the time of his death, he was completing a history of Craven County and was working on a book on Sir Walter Raleigh.

The former department chairman was a member of the Historic Bath Committee, America's 400th Anniversary Committee and chairman of the Joint Committee on the Status of History in the Public Schools of North Carolina.

He was among founders of the committee to plan state and local participation in the American Revolution Bicentennial in 1976 and later served on the N.C. Bicentennial Commission.

He was a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Phi Alpha Kappa, the Southern Historical Association, the American Historical Association, the Historical Society of North Carolina, the N.C. Literary and Historical Association and the Pitt County Heritage Commission.

As a scholar in the field of American and North Carolina history, Paschal was in demand as a speaker and spoke on the changing quality of life in eastern North Carolina and the political process in rural counties.

Dr. Paschal was a member of Memorial Baptist Church, where he served on the board of deacons.

Paschal is survived by his wife, Dorothy Paschal of Greenville; two sons: Herbert Paschal III, Douglas Paschal; and two daughters: Annis Westmoreland of Atlanta and Patricia Paschal.

Funeral arrangements are incomplete and will be announced later by the Wilkerson Funeral Home.

TRUE OR FALSE? — A Buenos Aires magazine "10" published this cover photo (left) of the Invincible, a British carrier, apparently smoking after what the magazine said was a recent missile hit in the Falklands fighting. What appears to

Arraign Five Youths In Inmate's Beating Death

By JOHN HARRINGTON
Associated Press Writer
BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Five teen-agers have been arraigned on first-degree murder charges in the death of a cellmate who was tortured with fire and beaten to death in the Ada County Jail.

Chris Peterman, 17, was attacked in his cell Monday after he was jailed for failing to pay $65 in fines for two traffic violations.

During arraignment Wednesday, Magistrate George Carey denied bail for the five 17-year-old suspects, Randall McKeown, Sean Matthews, Andy Anderson, Richard Engie and Joseph Krahn.

Sheriff Chuck Palmer said pieces of toilet paper apparently were rolled up and stuck between Peterman's toes and set on fire. He said other forms of torture were used, but wouldn't elaborate. "The sheriff and the coroner won't even tell me everything they did to him," said Mrs. Peterman.

Leo McKeown, Randall's father, said after the arraignment that his son described some of what is alleged to have happened to Peterman.

CHRISTOPHER PETERMAN

"He told me he only hit the boy twice," McKeown said. "He also told me that he did try to give the boy resuscitation, mouth to mouth."

"He said the boy (Peterman) called them names; was calling the other boys names. Maybe if they had transferred my boy to the juvenile detention center this wouldn't have happened."

The victim's mother, Janice Peterman, said her son hated to fight and was much smaller than the other five he shared the cell with.

"He was a small kid and he always had a smile," she said. "It's unreal, so unreal. That boy gave his life for less than $65."

Mrs. Peterman said she wanted her son's killers to see what he looked like when his ordeal was over.

"I had to take pictures to the mortuary so they could fix him up," she said. "At the hospital, I couldn't even recognize him."

Mrs. Peterman said the boy lived with her former husband, Lloyd Peterman, a Nampa park worker, and was told he would have to pay his own traffic tickets.

"We knew that he could go to jail," she said. "But we never thought it would come to that."

She said Peterman's father had raised about $35 toward paying the fines just before the boy was killed.

No Propaganda In Graham

CHICAGO (AP) — The Christian Century says that the Soviet Union may have wanted to exploit evangelist Billy Graham's visit there, but that the objective has backfired.

"Ironically, Soviet propagandists have not received the greatest benefit" which instead has gone to the "Soviet-hating element in the U.S. that has leaped upon Graham's graciousness with glee," says the ecumenical weekly in an editorial.

Flat Tax Voices Argue For Amnesty

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Several conservative Republican members of the House, arguing that sugar is a better flycatcher than vinegar, are asking amnesty for tax cheats who agree to square their accounts with the government.

By forgoing penalties and criminal charges, they say, the government would gain billions of dollars by bringing back into the system many delinquent taxpayers and others who hide their income.

A second part of the plan, spelled out at a news conference Wednesday, would replace the present individual income-tax system, whose rates rise with income, with a simplified "flat-rate" tax with few if any deductions.

The simplified tax would make taxpayers out of many Americans who now dodge the system because of its complexity, inequitable loopholes and rates so high that they stifle incentive, said Rep. George Hansen, R-Idaho, chief sponsor of the package.

Rep. Don Young, R-Alaska, endorsing the amnesty plan, said the government's only answer to the underground economy and to $100 billion a year in tax cheating has been to hire more Internal Revenue Service agents to strike fear in the hearts of workers.

"It didn't work in Robin Hood's time and it won't work now," Young said.

The first obstacle facing the conservatives is to get Congress to take seriously the immediate junking of the present graduate income-tax system.

Several flat-tax proposals are pending in Congress but it is generally agreed that it would take years to move away from the present tax. The Senate Finance Committee plans hearings late this year on the concept, but that isn't enough for Hansen and his group.

Seizing on the problems caused by the House's failure to adopt a 1983 budget, the Hansen group is asking immediate consideration of its plan as the surest means to getting a balanced budget.

The present system, with rates ranging from 12 percent to 50 percent, depending on income, would be replaced by a single-rate tax, probably of between 10 percent and 20 percent. The first few thousand dollars of income in each family would be exempt from tax; above that level there would be few if any deductions — such as for home mortgage interest — and the new tax might even apply to Social Security benefits.

Hansen's plan for a 13-percent flat tax with an $8,000 exemption for a four-member family would produce as much as $300 billion in 1983 — the same as the present system.

To coax taxpayers to settle their tax bills, Hansen's legislation would prevent criminal prosecution of any person with a past-due tax account if that person agrees to pay the debt. All penalties for non-payment of taxes would be waived and all tax owed for more than six years would be forgiven.

Such a plan is far more desirable "than to grant more funds to the Internal Revenue Service to hire 7,000 new collectors to go out and increase the pressure on the already-overburdened citizen who may well perceive such an increase of collectors as a new wave of storm troopers," Hansen said.

Hunt Opposes His Pay Boost

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt says he's against a proposal to increase his salary, but House Speaker Liston Ramsey says he'll accept a pay raise if the General Assembly votes him one.

Rep. William T. Watkins, D-Granville, co-chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, says he's having a bill drafted that would nearly double Hunt's salary, probably to $100,000 a year. Watkins also is considering a raise for the House speaker, making his salary equal to that of the lieutenant governor's.

"I will vigorously oppose any attempt to raise my salary during the June session of the General Assembly," Hunt, whose annual salary is $57,864 with an $11,500 personal expense allowance, said Wednesday in a news release.

"I believe it would be unfair for the governor to receive a salary increase during a time of recession and high unemployment," Hunt said. "State employees and teachers are being asked to accept a one-year salary freeze, and the governor should be treated the same way as everyone else."

Watkins says he thinks the governor should be the state's highest-paid official. Currently, the state's highest paid employee is Dr. William Laupus, dean of the School of Medicine at East Carolina University. His salary is $88,000 per year.

Watkins' plan surfaced on the eve of a legislative session that is expected to result in canceled pay increases for state employees and teachers because of a recession-induced financial crunch.

Details of the proposed speaker's pay raise haven't been ironed out, but it would probably combine a salary increase with subsistence and travel payments to equal the lieutenant governor's salary of $47,928.

The speaker's salary is currently $13,860.

"It's a full-time job and it ought to be," said Ramsey, who said he had not heard of the salary-raising move. "I haven't asked for any more, but if you're asking would I turn it down, certainly not."

33-Letter Name Is Opined 'Too Long'

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — It's "real simple," said Vincent Aloysius Evans, explaining why he wanted to change his name to X a r t h e o h a d j i m a d u r o k a s z a m n o u p o u l o s, but the judge said it was too long.

"How do you get it all on a credit card or on a driver's license or in a computer?" asked the judge. "The whole United States depends on driver's licenses, credit cards and computer records."

Evans said he wanted the name to express his love for Greeks.

Xar is for Stevos Zacharhos, "about the youngest Greek composer there is and one of the finest," he explained.

Theo is for Mikis Theodorakis, who composed the music for "Zorba, the Greek," and Hadji is for Manos Hadjidakis, one of the oldest living composers of Greek music.

Then there's Tom and Tina Maduros. They're not composers, but they run a downtown cafe and have been like family to him. Madur is for them.

And, Harry and Toula Giokas. Okas is for the children he babysits.

Back to composers for Zam, in honor of George Zambeta. And Noupoulos, for Chris Nikopoulos, who's "got music like you wouldn't believe."

Xar-Theo-Hadji-Madur-Okas-Zam-Noupoulos. Simple.

The judge noted that the proposed name had 33 letters, and suggested consideration of something shorter. Now Evans is toying with Xartheohadjizamnou. That's only 18 letters.

Driving A Car Costly Habit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government says it costs 33.2 cents a mile to buy and drive an American-made van 120,000 miles over a 12-year period; 26.6 cents a mile for a large car; 23.8 cents for a small car; 21.4 cents for a compact; and 18.9 cents for a subcompact.

The figures, based on a study in suburban Baltimore, are in a new Federal Highway Administration booklet, "Cost of Owning and Operating Automobiles and Vans, 1982."

By The Associated Press
North Carolina's one-day respite from stifling heat and humidity and late-afternoon thunderstorms was expected to end today, the National Weather Service said.
The cold front that pushed through the state Tuesday night and early Wednesday has become nearly stationary across South Carolina to northern Texas. A low pressure area will be moving east and northeastward along the frontal system today and tonight. By Friday this area of low pressure will be moving into southern Virginia.

Ahead of the low pressure area, an easterly flow from the Atlantic will be feeding moisture into North Carolina. A few thunderstorms will be developing across the state today. By tonight high pressure moving eastward across the Great Lakes to New England will push some cooler air southward along the eastern seaboard into North Carolina. Moisture will be over riding the cooler air tonight and Friday and precipitation will be more likely in the form of rain statewide.

Around North Carolina Wednesday skies were clear to partly cloudy. Afternoon temperatures ranged from the low 70s to the low 80s in the mountains. East of the mountains highs were in the 80s. New Bern with a high of 89 degrees was the hot spot in the state. At the other end of the scale, Boone had a very pleasant day with a high of 72 degrees.

Recreational weather outlook: Skies will be partly cloudy today with a chance for thunderstorms across the state. High temperatures today will range from the mid-70s to the mid-80s. Skies will be mostly cloudy tonight and Friday with a chance of rain statewide. Highs Friday will range from the mid-60s in the northern mountains to the mid-80s along the south coast.

Winds along the coast will be easterly at 10 to 20 knots with waves from two to four feet. There will be a chance of showers or thunderstorms along the North Carolina beaches.
Thunderstorms may be severe and accompanied by heavy rains over the western half of the state this afternoon.

MCC Holds Graduation

WILLIAMSTON — Some 143 students were awarded degrees or diplomas Friday evening at the 14th annual Martin Community College commencement exercises.

The keynote address was delivered by North Carolina Attorney General Rufus L. Edmisten.
The program was opened with the invocation by Adron Modlin; a welcome by Robert M. Stalls, Student Government Association president; and special award presentation by Clarence E. Biggs, acting president. Piano selections were rendered by Howard Harrison, Martin County public school music teacher.

Following the introduction of the speaker by A.B. Ayers, chairman of the Board of Trustees, and the address by Attorney General Edmisten, the candidates for graduation were presented by Dr. Tom H. Ward Jr., dean of Degree and Diploma programs. Macon M. Holiday, vice chairman of the board, presented the degrees and diplomas. Clarence Biggs gave a congratulatory message to the graduates.

After the benediction by Modlin, a reception was held in the foyer of the auditorium in honor of the graduates, their families and guests.
Students from Pitt County graduating from Martin Community College were Bernard Michael Kelly of Greenville, who received the associate in applied science degree in environmental science technology; and Mary Alice Maye of Greenville, who received a diploma in cosmetology.

Report On Aging Said To Fall Short

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some advocates for the elderly are criticizing a final report on the White House Conference on Aging, claiming it distorts the delegates' wishes by ignoring demands for a national health policy.

"There must be something missing," said Ed Howard, general counsel of the National Council on the Aging. "They must have gone to a different conference than the one I went to."
The government document, released Wednesday, includes 53 recommendations, but calls for no increased federal spending on the elderly.

John Rother, staff director of the Senate Special Committee on Aging, said, "They've obviously backed away from anything that involves spending money."
Rother praised the three-volume report's analyses and private sector recommendations, but said: "I don't think they were honest in expressing the opinions of the delegates in the area of health care."
"It was quite clear there was a strong push for a more active federal role, especially in providing services for the chronically ill."

assistant secretary for planning at the Department of Health and Human Services, defended the report.
He said it was "a dispassionate and objective way" to meet Congress' mandate for "a comprehensive, coherent national policy on aging."
Nonetheless, Paul A. Kerschner, associate director of the American Association of Retired Persons, called the report "slick" and said: "It's the administration's agenda for aging laid over the White House conference."
The report, he said, ignored the delegates' demands for a national health policy, including provisions

A Tropical Depression In The Gulf Of Mexico

MIAMI (AP) — The first tropical depression of the 1982 hurricane season kept up its slow march across the Gulf of Mexico early today and accompanying heavy rains reportedly caused the evacuation of 2,000 Cubans from low lying areas.
According to a Radio Havana broadcast monitored in Miami, more than 2,000 people were evacuated from low areas in Cuba's easternmost province of Pinar del Rio early today as flash flooding hit the island country.

Communications were reportedly knocked out in the cities of Guane, Mantua, Minas de Matahambre, Punta de Palma and the fishing port of La Coloma by the flooding. More than 80,000 head of cattle were moved to higher ground also, the broadcast reported.

Based on satellite pictures, the center of the depression was located about 200 miles west of Havana, Cuba at 5 a.m. EDT and was moving toward the east-northeast at 5 mph, said forecaster Gilbert Clark of the National Hurricane Center in Miami. It was expected to continue in that direction for 24 hours, he said.

The poorly-organized depression was expected to strengthen today, but Clark said the chances of it becoming a full-blown hurricane were "not good."

"It's too early in the season for the conditions to really be right," said Clark. "The water in the Gulf is really too cold, and the prevailing westerly winds prevent thunderstorms from gathering their force."
Winds were estimated at 35 mph this morning with higher gusts in squalls east of the center, he said.

An air force reconnaissance aircraft was to investigate the area today. The heavy rains was also expected to spread into the lower Florida Keys today with accumulations of 5 to 10 inches through Friday, Clark said.
Small craft around the lower Florida Straits were asked to remain in port.

The depression was identified Wednesday afternoon by an Air Force reconnaissance plane off Mexico's Yucatan peninsula.

A tropical storm becomes a hurricane when its sustained winds reach 74 mph, Clark said.
According to Clark, in an average tropical storm season there will be 10 tropical storms, six of which will become hurricanes.

"But we never make predictions as to a season as a whole," Clark said. "These things are really will-of-the-wisp type."

Pope Encouraged Healing Of Schism

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — Pope John Paul II's visit to Britain enhanced the image of the Roman Catholic Church in a non-Catholic country and encouraged other Christian religious leaders to feel that centuries of schism can be healed.

The pope said in a television interview broadcast Wednesday night as he flew back to Rome that he hoped his six-day visit, the first ever by a pope, would be a step toward Christian unity. He announced that Dr. Robert Runcie, the archbishop of Canterbury and the leader of the world's 65 million Anglicans, had promised to come to Rome to return his visit.

In a glowing farewell tribute, Runcie said the pope, although he is the leader of hundreds of millions of Catholics throughout the world, came to Britain "with the grace of a pilgrim and a prophet" and "conquered hearts by his attentiveness and humanity."

"He has spoken convincingly of the things of God, but he has adapted himself to people and occasions with the sensitivity of a gifted pastor," the Anglican primate said.

Runcie, spiritual head of the Church of England, and the pope signed a joint declaration pledging to continue the consultations, under way for 21 years, on how their two churches might achieve the "unity for which Christ prayed."

The Times of London said the declaration "gave the ecumenical movement a boost beyond anyone's expectations."

The moderator of Scotland's Presbyterian Free Church, Dr. Kenneth Green, said the pope "has given impetus to Christian unity."

Other Protestant leaders who met with the pope — Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian, Reformed Church and others — said they were impressed by his personality but felt they would not live to see unity with Rome. But the pope invited them, too, to visit him.

From the ecumenical standpoint, the highlight of the papal tour was the joint service in Canterbury Cathedral, the Anglican mother church, in which the pope and Runcie embraced and prayed together, and the archbishop in his address called King Henry VIII's break with the Roman church "our unhappy division."

Cardinal Basil Hume, the Roman Catholic archbishop of Westminster, said the service at Canterbury laid foundations "on which we can, I trust, build a successful superstructure for Christian unity."

In previous talks Roman Catholic and Anglican representatives agreed a united church with the pope as universal primate is possible, but they were unable to resolve serious differences on doctrine and the ordination of priests.

One of the major obstacles is the 1896 ruling by Pope Leo XIII that the ordination of Anglican priests is invalid because the 16th-century schism broke the continuity of ordination from Christ's apostles.

Cardinal Hume said in his farewell speech to the pope: "You have presented us with a charter on which I believe the Catholic Church in this country can build its future."

Behind Social Security Woes

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The woes afflicting the Social Security system stem from the same economic squeeze — recession and inflation — that have prompted long lines at unemployment offices and padlocks on factory gates.

Faced with paying out an expected $569 billion in retirement, disability and survivors' benefits over the next three years, or more than $700 billion if Medicare payments are included, the Social Security system is having trouble raising the cash to cover its obligations.

Social Security Commissioner John A. Svahn says that every minute, the system pays out $17,000 more than it takes in. That is $24 million a day in red ink.

Svahn quips ruefully that Social Security "is a bipartisan issue — neither party wants anything to do with it."

But do something they must, for by mid-1983 — if nothing is done — the old-age fund will run short of the cash needed to pay benefits on time.

The politicians say Congress will never allow that to happen. But even if that calamity did occur, it would not mean the total collapse of Social Security. Instead, the result simply would be that the government would mail retirement checks a few days late the first month and progressively later each month.

Social Security operates on a pay-as-you-go basis, with benefits paid from the payroll tax receipts that flow in each month. The trust funds provide a cushion to ensure there is enough in the till to pay each month's benefits.

That cushion, which stood at a full year's worth of benefits in 1970, has steadily eroded and now amounts to only about two months of benefits.

Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan, the managing trustee of the system, told a group of bankers on May 19 that "unless something is done before July of 1983, they will be broke and we will not be sending out checks from that (Treasury) building across the street."

Said Regan: "This is not a scare tactic, this is a fact."

Last year, White House budget director David Stockman warned Congress that unless it acted quickly to shore up Social Security, "the most devastating bankruptcy in history will occur on or about Nov. 3, 1982."

Congress postponed that day of reckoning by allowing the old-age fund to borrow from the fatter disability and Medicare fund reserves. The legislators also made minor cuts in the program, notably in college student and minimum benefits, to save more than $20 billion through 1986.

Congress could buy another year, postponing the crisis until mid-1984, merely by extending the system's authority to borrow back and forth among its three trust funds, according to need.

But eventually, it will have to undertake more fundamental reforms to generate new revenues or cut more benefits.

To keep the retirement fund solvent and benefit checks going out as scheduled on the third of each month, the system needs roughly $34 billion — either in new revenues or reduced expenditures — for fiscal 1984 and 1985, according to a House Budget Committee analyst who asked not to be identified.

When President Carter signed a Social Security rescue bill in 1977 that sharply raised the payroll tax and trimmed future benefit levels, he boasted that the legislation would keep the fund solvent until 2030.

At that time, the trust fund faces another, more serious dilemma when the generation of the post-World War II baby boom becomes senior citizens.

The stagnant economic conditions that have prevailed since 1977 quickly derailed the Social Security recovery that Carter envisioned. The system could have weathered the steep inflation in recent years if workers' wages had risen faster than prices.

But the growth of wages, and consequently payroll tax receipts, have lagged behind inflation, while Social Security benefits have risen inexorably each July in step with the Consumer Price Index.

The Senate Budget Committee's controversial proposal for $40 billion in "solvency" savings for Social Security, which Senate Republicans eventually dumped from their budget blueprint, was intended to assure the trust funds a minimum reserve of 18 percent of annual benefit payments, or two months' worth.

Without a cushion of at least 9 percent, the experts say, Social Security will encounter unprecedented difficulties in paying benefits on time.

Sen. William Armstrong, R-Colo., chairman of the Senate Finance subcommittee on Social Security, says that even at 18 percent the reserves "are so razor-thin that even marginally higher unemployment rates or marginally higher inflation rates ... could absorb most of the $40 billion in savings."

During the brief but bitter political bloodletting that ensued when President Reagan embraced that Senate committee's savings figure, Democrats charged the $40 billion in unspecified savings would mean an average $1,100 reduction in benefits for each of Social Security's 36 million recipients.

But Armstrong countered that "what we are talking about is a potential reduction in the rate of increase in benefits." He said the average Social Security beneficiary actually would receive "an increase of $1,308 over the next three years."

Reagan has promised repeatedly not to cut existing benefits and to safeguard this July's 7.4 percent cost-of-living increases for the 36 million beneficiaries, which will cost the system more than $11 billion in the year ahead.

Social Security trustees recently told Congress they anticipated that by the 1990s, the combined old-age and disability funds would be in good health for as long as 30 years.

The reasons, they said, are that payroll taxes will be higher — from the current 6.7 percent to 7.65 percent in 1990 — and the baby boom generation will be in its peak earning years by then, with only modest growth in the number of retirees born in the Depression era.

But the trustees said the Medicare fund that provides health insurance for the elderly and disabled would begin sinking and could be depleted in the late 1980s or the early 1990s.

The scope of Social Security has been expanded greatly since the system was established by Congress in 1935. The original law provided benefits for workers only, not their relatives.

Nonetheless, Robert J. Myers, former deputy commissioner and chief actuary for Social Security, looked back recently and found that the actual cost of the old-age program in 1980, as a percentage of taxable payroll, was quite close to the founders' original estimates.

Today, Myers is executive director of the 15-member National Commission on Social Security Reform, which is searching for a bipartisan solution to Social Security's problems, and he has an idea that might work.

Myers says Social Security could be made both recession-proof and inflation-proof by a simple change in the formula for cost-of-living increases.

Under Myers' plan, benefits would continue to rise automatically each year, but at a rate 1.5 percent less than the average increase in workers' wages.

He figures that Social Security would be rock-solid financially if that 1.5 percent gap were maintained between taxable wages and rising benefits.

His plan would result in smaller cost-of-living increases for retirees in years when inflation rose faster than wages. But it would provide bigger increases in times when the economy is healthy and wages rise 1.5 percent more than prices.

Focus On Education In The N.C. Tercentenary

By Dr. H.G. JONES
For The Associated Press
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The recent death of Brig. Gen. John David Francis Phillips reminds us that just 20 years ago North Carolinians were preparing for the commemoration of the 300th anniversary of the granting of the Carolina Charter of 1663.

Phillips, retired army officer and husband of Raleigh native Sara Busbee, was recommended by Dr. Christopher Crittenden, director of the Department of Archives and History, to head the Carolina Charter Tercentenary Commission, charged by the General Assembly to conduct the observance.

Chairman of the commission was Francis E. Winslow of Rocky Mount.

Gen. Phillips, a stern disciplinarian, established a close-knit organization that carried out a low-key but instructive observance. From the beginning, it was agreed that the purpose of the commemoration was education, and most of the activities were designed to make North Carolinians more familiar with their heritage.

There was, of course, the usual political veneer — growing of beards, wearing of unhistorical costumes, and street dances unlike anything 17th-century Englishmen had ever seen. These "celebration" aspects of the tercentenary were not considered important enough to occupy much space in the commission's final report.

Yet, the legacy of the Carolina Charter Tercentenary Commission was extensive. Some examples:

An attractive five-cent postage stamp, picturing the first page of the charter, was issued at first-day ceremonies in Edenton. It has since become a collector's item.

National advertising spread the little-known information that the area encompassed in the Carolina Charter included all or parts of 17 states from the Atlantic to the Pacific, plus a part of Mexico.

Separate series of folders and pamphlets on subjects relating to propriety and colonial North Carolina were widely distributed. Topics ranged from the Indians, whose lands the colonists occupied, to early rebellions among the Englishmen themselves.

A statewide essay contest was conducted among high school students, and a literary contest was held among adult writers. Manly Wade Wellman, Sam Raran, and That Stem were senior winners.

R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, largely through the efforts of Charles B. Wade Jr., donated a Mobile Museum of History that carried historical exhibits throughout the state.

A motion picture, "The Road To Carolina," was produced and distributed, and a television musical drama, "The Sojourner and Mollie Sinclair," by Carlisle Floyd, was produced by East Carolina University.

Hunter Johnson's symphonic composition, "North State," was performed by the North Carolina Symphony.

The State Museum of Art put on the Tercentenary Art Exhibit, featuring 128 art treasures.

The American Association for State and Local History, Society of American Archivists, and other national organizations met in North Carolina.

Interest in the tercentenary encouraged the General Assembly to appropriate funds for the new Archives and History-State Library Building.

By far the most lasting contribution of the tercentenary, however, was the launching of a new edition of Colonial Records of North Carolina under the editorship of, first, Mattie Erma Parker, and later William S. Price and Robert J. Cain.

After the termination of the Tercentenary Commission, the project was transferred to the Department of Archives and History, with the assistance of the non-profit Carolina Charter Corporation.

Since 1960, the corporation has raised from grants and gifts nearly $260,000 to assist the state in continuing the colonial records series, including maintaining until recently a full-time researcher in London to locate and copy additional English documents.

Under the chairmanship of George E. London of Raleigh, the Carolina Charter Corporation is continuing its fundraising efforts to supplement state appropriations for research and publication.

The work of General Phillips, who was buried May 5 at the United States Military Academy at West Point, goes on.

Finds Macho Approach Is Disliked By Females

By DOUG ESSER
Associated Press Writer
SEATTLE (AP) — Women looking for mates do not like the macho male approach, says anthropologist David B. Givens.

If a man sees a woman in a singles bar, for example, and wants to meet her with the intention of becoming intimate, he should approach her indirectly and make a comment about her drink or the music.

Do not say, "What's a nice girl like you doing in a place like this?" Do not mention the word "you," at all. It puts too much pressure on the woman to respond, says Givens.

"Courtship is tentative, ambivalent, an exchange of signs over a period of time," says Givens, who observes human behavior the way some other anthropologists watch gorillas.

Macho is a mistake for the male on the prowl, Givens said in an interview at the University of Washington, where he is a researcher.

"Some men take an over-aggressive pose and come on too strong," he says. "Swaggering, a loud voice, pounding each other on the shoulder is appropriate in a locker room."

"It's male-to-male behavior. Because of movies a lot of men think if they can shine the macho image on a woman she'll think it's attractive.

"They talk too loud and get too close. It's not attractive. These are ways of distancing other men so that when a woman comes in he'll have her to himself — like a bull elk."

The bearded Givens, 37, of Seattle, earned his doctorate degree in 1976 with research on non-verbal communication. He did much of his work by watching young couples on campus. He says he realized then that most non-verbal communication is courtship.

Now, he's writing a book: "How to Attract a Mate: The Body Language of Courtship."

The research was carried out on the campus, in singles bars, on buses — wherever Givens could watch people meeting.

He analyzed behavior into what he calls units. He identified about 150 units — the tilting of the head, rotating a palm upward, compressing the lips. Many of the gestures, body positions and eye movements are common throughout the world, including the animal kingdom, he says.

He learned which kinds of behaviors led to a successful courtship by noting which encounters led to touching or an exchange of phone numbers or expressions of sexual arousal.

Getting attention is the first of five steps Givens has identified in the courting process.

In stage two the male and female move closer, unconsciously exchanging gestures and eye movements. Stage three is conversation. If all goes well, stage four — sexual arousal — follows with touching, embraces and kissing. Givens calls stage five resolution — "for euphemistic reasons."

Niekro, Eichelberger Miss No-Hitters

By The Associated Press
Atlanta's Phil Niekro and San Diego's Juan Eichelberger flirted with no-hitters, but Lady Luck only gave them the evil eye in return.

"You need a lot of luck to pitch a no-hitter," said Niekro, who pitched one against San Diego in 1973. "Actually, a no-hitter is nothing but pure luck."

The 43-year-old knuckleballer went seven no-hit innings Wednesday night in his bid to become the oldest major league pitcher ever to hurl a no-hitter. He eventually surrendered four hits, starting with Bob Bailor's leadoff single in the eighth, and needed last-out help from Steve Bedrosian to nail down a 3-1 victory over the New York Mets.

Eichelberger lost his no-hit bid in the second inning through a disputed ruling by the official scorer on a ground ball by Scot Thompson of the Chicago Cubs that skipped off the glove of second baseman Tim Flannery.

"I thought it was the wrong call. I thought it was an error," said Eichelberger, who walked two and struck out three in pitching the Padres to a 3-1 triumph. "But there's nothing you can do about it. You can't let it upset you or the next batter will get you."

In other National League games, the St. Louis Cardinals blanked the San Francisco

Giants 1-0, the Houston Astros downed the Montreal Expos 6-4, the Philadelphia Phillies defeated the Cincinnati Reds 4-2 and the Pittsburgh Pirates edged the Los Angeles Dodgers 8-7.

Over the first seven innings, the Mets managed only two baserunners against Niekro on a hit batsman and a walk.

"It was the best knuckler I've had in a long time. It was consistent the whole game," said Niekro, who made his major league debut in 1964. "It (the no-hit bid) hit me around the fifth or sixth inning. I really thought about it in the seventh and I got serious about it in the eighth."

The Mets got serious in the ninth when singles by Mookie Wilson and John Stearns and two-out walks to Ellis Valentine and Bailor — after Niekro fanned George Foster and Dave Kingman with runners at second and third — pushed a run across. Bedrosian struck out Wally Backman with the bases loaded to earn his first major league save.

"I was overthrowing my knuckler and forcing the ball in the last inning," said Niekro, who walked three and struck out seven. "But you can't be disappointed when you win the game, especially the way our club has been going."

The Braves, who had lost seven of their last nine games, scored all their runs in the third inning. Claudell

Washington led off with a single off Pete Falcone, moved around to third on a sacrifice and an infield out and scored when left fielder Foster dropped Dale Murphy's line drive. Bob Watson followed with a two-run homer.

"It was heck of a performance for a 23-year-guy, let alone a 43-year-old," Atlanta Manager Joe Torre said of Niekro's 243rd big league triumph.

Padres 3, Cubs 1

While Eichelberger was silencing the Cubs' bats, San Diego scored all its runs on a dropped fly ball in the sixth inning. Loser Dickie Noles walked Garry Templeton and Ruppert Jones and Sixto Lezcano singled to load the bases. They were running with two out when Joe Lefebvre lofted a fly ball to left-center. Leon Durham camped under it at the base of the 368-foot marker, then dropped it as all three runners scored. The Cubs got their run in their half of the inning on a three-base error by San Diego left fielder Gene Richards and a sacrifice fly by Bump Wills.

There was little doubt in Flannery's mind about the controversial call by official scorer Dave Nightingale of the Sporting News.

"No way that ball was a hit," said the second baseman, who had to move a few feet to his left on the play. "It hit me right in the pocket. It was a routine play. If that's a hit, I'd like to play all the time here in Chicago. I'd hit .400."

Cardinals 1, Giants 0

Joaquin Andujar fired a six-hitter for his third shutout of the season and Keith Hernandez's third-inning single drove in the game's only run. Andujar struck out three and walked one en route to his second consecutive shutout over the Giants. He outdueled rookie Bill Laskey, who also scattered six hits. Hernandez's RBI single was his ninth game-winning hit of the year.

Astros 6, Expos 4

Alan Ashby drove in five runs with a three-run homer and a two-run double to back the seven-hit pitching of Nolan Ryan and Dave Smith. Houston led 3-2 in the sixth when Ashby slammed his fourth home run of the season with two out against Scott Sanderson following singles by Jose Cruz and Tony Scott. Ryan allowed four hits and two runs in seven innings and did not give up a hit after the second.

Phillies 4, Reds 2

Pete Rose doubled, singled and scored twice and Garry Maddox homered to help Dick Ruthven to his fifth straight victory, with seventh-inning relief from Warren Brusstar. The Phillies snapped a 1-1 tie in the fifth inning when Bob Dernier drew a two-out walk from loser Bruce Berenyi. Dernier moved to second on balk and scored on Rose's double. Gary Matthews followed with an RBI single. After the Reds made it 3-2 in the sixth, Maddox led off the Phillies' half of the inning with his third homer.

Pirates 8, Dodgers 7

Tony Pena lined a two-out, bases-loaded single in the bottom of the ninth inning to drive in the tying and winning runs.

The Pirates loaded the bases against loser Vicente Romo with one out on a pair of walks and a single by pinch hitter Willie Montanez. Tom Niedenfuer relieved Romo and struck out Steve Nicosia before yielding the game-winning hit to Peqa. Rick Monday's three-run homer in the first inning gave the Dodgers a lead they held until Pena's hit.

East Carolina Opening Season At Campbell

East Carolina University's Pirates will open their 1982 North State College Baseball League campaign on Friday night, traveling to Campbell for a 7:30 p.m. game against the Camels.

The Pirates have two other away dates scheduled before they open their home season against UNC-Wilmington on Thursday, June 10.

For the most part, the Pirates will go with veteran players on the team, but a number of seniors who have been a big part of the squad are now gone.

They include catcher Fran Fitzgerald, third baseman Todd Hendley, second baseman Mike Sorrell and pitchers Bill Wilder and Bob Patterson.

There will be other familiar names playing, but in some cases in new positions.

Jack Curlings, who saw duty mostly as a designated hitter during the regular season, will take over the catching duties, while Todd Evans returns to first base. David Wells, who was in left field during the spring, will move to second base, while Kelly Robinette is expected to be back at shortstop.

Third base will go to John Hollow, who usually plays right field.

Robert Wells returns to center field, while Mark Shank, who sat out the spring with an injury, takes over right field.

Coach Gary Overton said left field is still up for grabs between Ricky Nichols, who played there some in the spring, along with Robert Langston and Art House. The pitching duties will be carried by at least four who saw action in the spring. Bob Davidson, Charlie Smith, Chubby Butler and Brian Peterson. Kirk Parson and Mike Williams are also possibilities in the pitching duties, but Overton said they had not indicated this morning whether they would be with the team during the summer.

Other members of the league, in addition to ECU, UNC-W and Campbell, are N.C. State and North Carolina.

The league will wind up its season in mid-July and hold a post-season tournament.

Wayne County Tops Snow Hill

SNOW HILL — Snow Hill's American Legion team, with over a week to go before it gets its full complement of players, dropped an 11-5 decision to Wayne County last night.

Snow Hill is still missing a number of players who are still competing with Eastern Wayne in the State 4-A High School playoffs. They will wind up that competition next weekend.

Wayne County grabbed the initial lead in the second inning, scoring twice. Mike Forbis doubled and Do Yol Lim cracked a two-run homer.

The lead was short-lived, however, as Snow Hill rallied for three in the bottom of the inning to take a 3-2 margin. Chris Suggs walked and stole up, scoring with Richie Chase singled. Lewis Yelverton then hit a two-run home run giving Snow Hill the lead.

Both teams scored single runs in the third, but Wayne struck for the lead for good in the fourth. After one was out, Monty Shaw walked and Ray Fields reached on a fielder's choice that failed to get anyone out. Jansen Evans was then safe on an error, loading the bases. Another misplay, on Chad Yarka's grounder, brought in Shaw, and Ralph Britt followed with a single, scoring Fields and Evans.

Wayne added one in the sixth, on a homer by Greg Neal, then got two each in the seventh and eighth. Snow Hill got its other run in the bottom of the fourth.

Neal and Forbis each had three hits for Wayne County, while Lim, Britt and Cliff Dreyfuss each had two.

Snow Hill was paced by Chase and Yelverton with two each.

Now 0-3, Snow Hill returns to action on Friday, hosting Rocky Mount.

Paschal, Brown In Battle For Backfield Positions

By BILL WERONKA
AP Sports Writer
EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn.

(AP) — The last time the Minnesota Vikings chose a running back in the first round of the National Football League draft was 1979. The back was Ted Brown from North Carolina State.

Brown became an integral part of the Viking offense that same year, running and catching the ball. Last season he became the first Minnesota player to run for more than 1,000 yards since Chuck Foreman.

In 1982, the Vikings again made a running back their No. 1 choice. This time it was Darrin Nelson of Stanford, another back known for his ability to run and catch. Nelson is expected to contribute right away, perhaps in place of Brown.

But don't say that to Brown!

"I don't think my days are numbered here," snapped Brown, whose status as a professional came into question earlier this year when he

Persistence Pays Off For Two Schnupfeil Didn't Choke In Taking 10,000-Meter

By The Associated Press
Persistence paid off for the New York Yankees and the Kansas City Royals.

The Yankees rallied in the ninth inning to tie the Toronto Blue Jays 4-4 Wednesday night, grabbed a 6-4 lead in the 11th, only to see the Blue Jays tie it, then rode Bobby Murcer's grand slam homer to a 12-6, 13-inning decision over Toronto.

The Royals blew a 5-4 lead in the top of the ninth, then fell behind 6-5 in the 10th. But they tied it in the bottom of the inning and came up winners on Amos Otis' run-scoring single in the 11th.

Elsewhere, it was Cleveland 4, Minnesota 2, giving the Indians their 10th straight victory and handing the Twins a club-record 14th straight defeat; Oakland 5, Boston 0; Texas 4, Baltimore 1; Detroit 5, California 4; and Milwaukee 5, Seattle 2.

Yankees 12, Blue Jays 6
Butch Wynegar's run-scoring double tied the game 4-4 in the ninth.

Then the Yankees grabbed a 6-4 margin in the 11th as Toronto reliever Roy Lee Jackson walked Roy Smalley, hit Lou Piniella with a pitch and walked Wynegar. Joey McLaughlin came on and walked Andre Robertson to force in a run.

Dave Collins then grounded back to the pitcher, who threw to Ernie Whitt at the plate for a forceout but the catcher's relay to first bounced off Collins, allowing Wynegar to score.

Toronto came back in its half of the 11th. Pinch-hitter Wayne Nordhagen's RBI single made it 6-5, then Barry Bonnell dropped a bunt down the third-base line. Pitcher Shane Rawley threw it high past first and into the right field corner as Alfredo Griffin scored.

But another bases-loaded walk to Robertson, Collins' RBI single and Murcer's seventh career grand slam, against Mark Bombardier, lifted the Yankees to victory in the 13th.

"I was really just trying to make contact," said Murcer, who was playing with an injured thigh. "I really think I swung at a bad pitch. It was a bit inside but too close to let go by. But I had been swinging at some bad pitches all night."

"It was one of those wild, weird type of games that we have a couple of times a season."

"It was a wild game but I'm just happy that we won. I don't

Out At Third

Seattle's Lenny Randle slides by Milwaukee's Paul Molitor at third base after being tagged out in the first inning of Wednesday's game in Seattle.

really care how long it takes just as long as we end up winning," said Yankees Manager Gene Michael.

Royals 7, White Sox 6
Chicago rallied in the ninth for a 5-5 tie on pinch-hitter Jerry Hairston's single. Greg Luzinski's single, his third hit of the game for his third RBI, pushed the White Sox ahead 6-5 in the 10th.

But KC's Frank White tripled home Greg Pryor with the tying run in the Royals' half of the frame. Then Otis provided his ninth game-winning hit this season, tops in the majors, after singles by John Wathan and George Brett.

It was the second hit of the game for Otis, who doubled home a run in the opening inning and leads the league with 16 doubles.

"Otis hit the ball good," said Kansas City Manager Dick Howser. "He hit the ball hard four times. I just have a good feeling when the guy's swinging the bat good."

Indians 4, Twins 2
Andre Thornton homered for the fourth straight game as the Indians extended Minnesota's slide to 14 games, longest in the majors this year. Thornton leads the majors with 16 homers and 51 runs batted in.

"This hasn't surprised me because I always felt I could do a certain job," Thornton said. "I was out for a couple of years with injuries but I'm still strong and young."

A's 5, Red Sox 0
Dwayne Murphy and Dave McKay hit two-run homers and Mike Norris pitched his first shutout of the year with a four-hitter. Dennis Eckersley, 6-4, was the victim of a shutout for the fourth time.

Norris, 35, broke a three-game losing streak and gained his first win in his last seven starts. He entered the game with a 5.29 ERA and had given up 25 runs in his last 21 innings.

"Mike Norris is back," he said. "I can feel the ball and I have my rhythm back. When I have rhythm back, I'm gonna throw the stuffing out of the ball. When I don't have it, I'm gonna get beat."

Randle tried to take third during a play in which Seattle's Paul Serna was thrown out at first. (AP Laserphoto)

Tigers 5, Angels 4
Kirk Gibson had been 2-for-20 against California pitchers when he came to bat in the eighth inning against Doug Corbett.

"I've been struggling at the plate and I got lucky tonight," said the previously slumping Gibson, who slammed his fifth homer. "I feel that I'm coming out of it."

Gibson's homer capped a Tigers comeback from a 3-1 deficit and followed Enos Cabell's leadoff single. Mike Ivie followed with a double and Larry Herndon singled him in with the winning run.

Rangers 4, Orioles 1
Texas rookie Dave Hosteltier batting .429, had a single and a solo homer, helping Frank Tanana break a personal six-game losing streak.

"I didn't know what to do after the game. I was happy I walked back to the right dug-out," said Tanana, who, in his previous seven starts, got only 12 runs from the Rangers.

"Sometimes when I get to feeling good," said the former fastballer, "I want to go back to where I was five years ago. But I'm not that anymore, and the sooner I realize that, the better."

"I tried to overpower the Orioles last time. I got everything up, and I got roped."

Brewers 5, Mariners 2
Cecil Cooper homered and singled to drive in three runs.

"I hope I don't get too home run happy and try to jerk everything," said Cooper, who has nine. "The last 10 games I've really felt good. I feel I can drive the ball."

PROVO, Utah (AP) — There was no choke in Kim Schnupfeil this time.

The 20-year-old junior from Stanford University held steady to win the women's 10,000 meter race Wednesday night to become the first champion of a single-event competition in the 1982 NCAA outdoor track and field championships at Brigham Young University.

"Last year at the nationals I led for the first five miles, but at the end I choked," said Schnupfeil, who was clocked in 33 minutes, 36.51 seconds and beat runnerup Eryn Forbes of Oregon by more than 20 seconds.

"I felt strong all the way through," added the winner. "I had more confidence than I've ever had."

Schnupfeil also said that Provo's 4,549-foot altitude didn't affect her very much. "I didn't feel it that much because my plan was to run conservatively," she said.

In addition to the altitude, she had to overcome strong winds, light rain and cold to beat her 23 opponents.

Schnupfeil's strategy worked perfectly. She stayed within range of the leaders early than picked up the pace and passed them easily. "I wanted to pass Jill (Molen of Utah, the early pace-setter) earlier, but my coach (Brooks Johnson) just kept saying, 'relax, relax.' I felt really strong and she seemed to be wavering a little bit."

Schnupfeil joined decathlete

Trond Skramstad of Mount Saint Mary's and heptathlete Jackie Joiner of UCLA as NCAA champions in this six-day meet which continues today with qualifying in eight field events and trials in 12 running events. Eighteen finals will be held Friday and 19 finals are scheduled Saturday.

Qualifying in five field events and trials in nine running events were completed Wednesday and there were some scintillating performances.

One of the best was by Tennessee's women's 1,600 relay team. The Lady Vols foursome of Cathy Rattray, Sharieffa Barksdale, Joetta Clark and Delisa Walton broke the collegiate record of 3:31.7 it set last year with a clocking of 3:31.39 in the trials.

Meet records were shattered by Mike Miller of Tennessee and Hammer thrower Robert Weir of Southern Methodist University. Miller, a junior who also is a standout wide receiver on the Volunteers' football team, knocked a NCAA 200-meter record with a clocking of 20.15 in the trials.

Paschal...

During the Vikings mini-camp last week, Brown refused to discuss the events surrounding the shooting that left a bullet lodged in some muscles near his pelvis. But he assured anyone who asked, over and over again, that his leg is A-O.K.

"I've been playing racquetball and had no problems at all," he said. "I'm doing the same things I used to do at the same velocity. The only time I notice it is when I feel the scar."

But Brown remains defensive when the subject of proving himself or sharing the spotlight with Nelson comes up.

"I don't think I have anything to prove," he said. "I don't feel any pressure. I feel like I'm going to be playing here for some time."

The pressure, he figures, is on the 5-foot-9, 180-pound Nelson.

"The (team) must feel he can help us or they wouldn't have drafted him," the 5-foot-10, 200-pound Brown said. "I don't think it's going to cause a controversy. If he can help us win the Super Bowl, that's fine."

"But college and pros, it's totally different. Everyone has high ambitions. He's got to block. I know he did it in college but now he's got to do it in the pros. It's different. There are some big and quick guys in college. But in the pros they are all big and quick."

Nelson is a rookie and all rookies must prove themselves. Brown is a veteran and despite his self-confidence, the Vikings must be sure he can run. (Greenville native)

Doug Paschal has something in common with both. He must make the team after sitting out all last season with an injured knee.

"I've done all I can in the off-season," said Paschal, a fifth-round selection from North Carolina in 1980.

The 6-foot-2, 220-pound fullback showed lots of potential before hurting his knee. Now he must show he still has it or head back to his banking job in Charlotte, N.C., permanently.

"I've got to block hard and don't make any mistakes," Paschal said. "I've got to run with authority and catch the ball when it's thrown to me. I don't think I've lost any speed but I wasn't blazing fast to begin with."

A simple formula but Paschal isn't fooling himself.

"The first contact won't be easy," he said. "I'll just have to close my eyes and run. You got to blot it out mentally. I'm just hoping I'll be one of the five or six running back they keep."

Other than Brown and Nelson, Paschal will be competing with Tony Galbreath, Jarvis Redwine, Rickey Young and rookie Hobson Milner from Cincinnati.

Nothing will be decided until preseason practice starts in late July. That's when Coach Bud Grant and the rest of the coaching staff take hard looks and make hard decisions.

"It's easy to point a finger but you can't say what will happen," Brown said.

Jim Dobbins hurled the win, going the first eight innings, giving up five hits, striking out four and walking five. Howard Leggett came on in relief in the ninth to fan two.

Greg Lassiter led the Greenville hitting with three in five trips, while Paul Golding had two in three appearances, one a double. Mike Williams also had a double.

Now 9-1, Greenville travels to Askeville to meet that team on Sunday.

First Federal ..... 10
Exchange ..... 3

First Federal overcame an early lead by the Exchange to romp to a 10-3 victory in the Tar Heel Little League yesterday.

The Exchange grabbed the lead with two runs in the first inning, while First Federal came back to tie it up with two in the top of the second.

Then, in the third, First Federal came up with five runs to put the game on ice. Mark Holloman led off the third with a single and he advanced on a passed ball. Stacy Best doubled him in and Lee Watson singled Best over. After advancing on an error and a passed ball, Watson scored when Tray Dancy reached on an error. Billy Anderson also was safe on an error, allowing Dancy to score, with Anderson advancing on a passed ball. Maurice Dyer then tripled in Anderson with the fifth run of the inning.

First Federal added two more in the fourth and one in the sixth for its ten run total. The other Exchange run came over in the third.

Holloman, Best, Franky Pugh and Watson each had two hits to lead First Federal. Tray Fogg and Britt Erwin each had two for the Exchange.

Lions ..... 16
Kiwanis ..... 5

The Lions got seven runs in the second inning and overcame the Kiwanis, 16-5 yesterday in the North State Little League.

The Kiwanis grabbed an early lead in the first on a two-run homer by Robbie McDonald, only to see the Lions come back with three in the bottom of the frame. The Kiwanis tied it up with one in the second, but the Lions then put an end to the Kiwanis hopes.

Mike Harris led off the Lion second with a walk and with one away, Carlos Harris tripled to score Harris. Robin Joyner singled in Harris and moved up on a wild pitch.

Jarvis Groome doubled and a wild pitch scored Joyner. After Tom Moyer walked, a double steal plated Goome. Moyer took third on a wild pitch and after Bob Williams walked, an error on a pickoff try scored Moyer. David Tripp reached on an error, scoring Williams, and Harris also reached on a misplay, allowing Tripp to score.

The Lions added four more in the third, and finished it off with two in the fifth. The Kiwanis got single runs in the third and fourth for their five run total.

Harris, Groome and Moyer each had two hits to lead the Lions, while the Kiwanis got only two hits off Moyer's pitching.

Sr. Babe Ruth

WINTERVILLE — Winterville opened its Coastal Plain Senior Babe Ruth League season last night with a 10-4 victory over Greene County.

Doug McRoy hurled the victory, going the first five innings and striking out 11. Doug Coley came on for the final two, striking out six.

Wesley Smith and McRoy each had two hits to lead the Winterville hitting, with both getting triples. C. Joyner paced Greene County with two.

The win leaves Winterville with a 1-0 league record, while Greene County is 0-1.

So. Pitt League

Hornets ..... 7
Saints ..... 1

CHICOD — The Chicod Hornets rolled to a 7-1 Southern Pitt Little League win over the Simpson Saints last night behind the one-hit pitting of Dwayne Smith.

Smith gave up only a double to Ervin Hardee in the third inning, which allowed the lone Simpson run to score.

Aaron Swinson led the Chicod hitting with a triple, while Chad Jones had a double. The Hornets are now 5-3, while the Saints drop to 6-2.

Spuzich Doesn't Feel She'll Be The Winner

MALVERN, Pa. (AP) — Sandra Spuzich says she figures her chances of hitting a golf jackpot this week are about 5,000-to-1.

Spuzich, 45, won last week's LPGA tour stop at Corning, N.Y. If she triumphs in the $250,000 tournament starting today at White Manor Country Club she'll earn an extra $100,000.

The sponsors of the McDonald's Kids' Classic over the 6,283-yard, par-72 course are putting up the extra money for the consecutive victories.

The tournament is the second richest on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour.

Spuzich joked about the $100,000 "pot of gold": "I thought of asking the girls if they'd like to split it. But they wouldn't do it."

Then, in a serious vein,

Spuzich said, "There hasn't been any pressure so far. I guess if I come up to the final hole close to winning I'll feel a little bit of something."

Spuzich, in her 21st year on the tour, has won only six times. Most of the time she has been among the also-rans.

Has she suddenly found a Fountain of Youth?

"I keep in fairly decent shape," said the 5-foot-6 golfer from Boynton Beach, Fla. "Hopefully I keep in good mental shape, too."

"Age is a myth in sports," she added. "You can play as long as you have the desire, as long as you don't put limits on yourself. Maybe I'm getting more patient. I've hit the ball well all my life. I just didn't win many tournaments."

Spuzich will have a tough time earning that $100,000.

Eighteen of the top 20 money winners are on hand for this tournament.

The 115-player field includes Sally Little and Beth Daniels, both three-time winners this year, Patty Sheehan, Nancy Lopez Melton, JoAnne Carner, Amy Alcott, 1982 two-time winner Hollis Stacy, Jan Stephenson, Sandra Haynie and Pat Bradley.

Only Kathy Whitworth, the leading money winner of all-time, and Japan's Ayako Okamoto among the top 20 money winners are missing. Whitworth is being inducted into the Texas Sports Hall of Fame, and Okamoto went home.

Sandra Post, 35, is the defending champion. She came from behind on the final day here last year to beat Alcott.

Cooney Could Do Without All Those Constant Questions

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — "I just like to fight," says Gerry Cooney. "I don't like what goes along with it."

One of the things that goes along with it is the continual questioning a fighter has to undergo.

It is something Cooney says he could do without, but he has been cooperative with the media since coming here to prepare for his bid against champion Larry Holmes for the World Boxing Council heavyweight championship June 11 at Caesars Palace.

"The questions aren't important," said at a news conference after a workout Wednesday in which he sparred two rounds each against three partners. The only thing that matters is June 11.

In the large crowd watching the training session in a hotel conference room was Frank Sinatra, who is appearing at Caesars Palace.

One of the questions usually is about Cooney's left shoulder. He tore a muscle in it while sparring Jan. 11 and his fight against Holmes, originally scheduled for March 15, had to be postponed.

The question was asked again Wednesday.

"It's 100 percent better than it was before," said trainer Victor Valle.

"It's 150 percent better," said Cooney, raising his voice. "There's no chance of it recurring."

But Cooney also displayed a sense of humor.

On opening the news conference, the 25-year-old challenger from Huntington, N.Y. said, "As far as I'm concerned, my view on foreign policy..."

He also said that he had been measured by ABC-TV for a pre-fight show and that his listed height of 6-foot-5 is inaccurate.

"You know I'm 6-foot-7 now," said Cooney. "I hope I don't grow no more."

Valle said that Cooney is right on schedule in his training and conditioning.

"Right now he's at his peak and I got to be a little careful," Cooney's mental condition is in top shape, too, according to co-manager Mike Jones and Dennis Rappaport, who kept interrupting Cooney during the news conference to give answers to questions directed to the fighter.

Rappaport said it's Holmes not Cooney who is feeling the pressure and that the champion has been keeping to himself and not talking to the media.

However, Holmes, who took a day of from training, is talking to the media.

The champion was to resume training today at the Caesars Palace Sports Pavilion.

The two fighters train at different places because ill feeling between some members of the two camps has resulted in shouting matches.

16-Year-Old Jockey Could Be Youngest Ever To Win Belmont

NEW YORK (AP) — One would expect 16-year-old jockey Jack Kaenel to be a bit nervous about Saturday's Belmont Stakes even though he does have the mount on one of the top choices, Preakness winner Aloma's Ruler.

He could become the youngest jockey ever to win the Belmont.

"Only time I was nervous before a race was the Watermelon Derby," said Kaenel Wednesday after galloping Aloma's Ruler around the Belmont Park track.

"I was a nervous wreck. I was afraid I wasn't going to win the Triple Crown, but I did."

Kaenel explained that the Watermelon Derby is held at Rocky Ford, Colo., "on the bush circuit." He won it aboard Play With Rob and he was only 11 years old at the time.

A lot more will be at stake Saturday for the 114th Belmont Stakes, 1½-mile third leg of the thoroughbred Triple Crown.

Eleven 3-year-olds were expected to be entered today. Other leading contenders were Gato Del Sol, the Kentucky Derby winner who skipped the Preakness, Linkage, who ran second to Aloma's Ruler in the Preakness, and Conquistador Cielo, winner of four straight including the Metropolitan Mile last Monday.

Cut Away, Estoril, High Ascent, Illuminate, Lejoli, Royal Roberto and Wolfie's Rascal were other likely starters.

Kaenel, known as Cowboy Jack because he usually wears a big Stetson, drew raves for his heady Preakness ride, slowing down the pace and holding off Linkage, ridden by veteran Bill Shoemaker, by a half-length.

Shoemaker's ride was criticized in some quarters, but Kaenel said, "Mr. Shoemaker ran as good a race as possible. He just got outrun."

Shoemaker will be back on Linkage in the Belmont.

"Jack had a lot more confidence in the horse (Aloma's Ruler) than me for the Preakness," said trainer Butch Lenzini. "He hasn't yet made a mistake."

"You give the jockeys instructions and very seldom do they follow through. In the two races Jack rode this horse, he followed instructions right to the T."

At ease with the media, Kaenel is seldom boastful, but when it comes to whipping a horse and switching the whip, he said, "There's nobody quicker."

The 5-foot-4, 102-pounder said the fact that he's been riding around the bush tracks since he was 10½ helped perfect his riding ability.

Asked his hometown, the young rider said, "No hometown. Oh, I was born in Omaha, but dad (a former jockey and now a small-time trainer) took me for four years in the bushes. I rode everything, apalooses, quarterhorses Kaenel's bush circuit travels took him through Kansas, Oklahoma and Colorado and currently lives in Lanham, Md.

He scored his first parimutuel victory at Assinobia Downs in Winnipeg, Canada on Sept. 13, 1980.

When he was only 15 years — a year under the legal age to be a jockey — Kaenel was the leading rider at Pimlico. When it was discovered he had falsified his age, he was suspended for 88 days, until he turned 16.

When Aloma's Ruler won the Bahamas in February, Angel Cordero was the jockey. But the colt suffered a wrenched ankle and was sidelined for several months.

By the time the Withers came around on May 8, Cordero chose to ride Shimatoree.

Other top jockeys also passed up the mount on Aloma's Ruler and Lenzini finally picked Kaenel.

Nixon, Cheeks Both Stand Tall

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Norm Nixon and Maurice Cheeks both are short enough that they can go through life without being asked if they are pro basketball players.

They stand tall, however, as two pivotal figures in the National Basketball Association championship series between the Los Angeles Lakers and Philadelphia 76ers.

"When I don't play well, it seems to hurt the team," Nixon, the Lakers' 6-foot-1 playmaker, said Wednesday.

"He had good games in the first and third games and the Lakers won and I had a good game in the second game and we won," said Cheeks, Nixon's 6-3 counterpart on the 76ers. "There seems to have been a pattern so far. If that's the case, I guess I have to have a good Game 4."

The two meet again in the fourth game of the best-of-seven title series tonight, with the Lakers ahead 2-1.

Nixon was the leading scorer for the Lakers, averaging 22.5 points per contest, as they set an NBA record for one season by winning nine straight playoff games, including a 124-117 triumph in the first game of the Philadelphia series. He had 24 points and 10 assists in Game 1, while Cheeks had 12 points.

Cheeks, averaging 14.5 points and eight assists in Philadelphia's 18 playoff games, helped turn the 76ers around in the second game, scoring 19 points and holding Nixon to six on 3-for-14 shooting.

In Game 3, won by Los Angeles 129-108 Tuesday night, Nixon was on the mark again. He led the Lakers with 29 points, while Cheeks had 17.

So the score of the Nixon-Cheeks matchup is the same as the series score, 2-1.

"Both teams have shown that they struggle when their point guards don't have a good game," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said.

But Nixon, calling himself "a scavenger off the good play of the rest of the team," said his performance depends on his teammates.

"When our big guys don't rebound well, I can't get our team into transition (fast breaks)," Nixon said. "When I'm playing well, it's because other guys are doing the job rebounding and passing."

Nixon said Cheeks is a key for the 76ers because "when he has a good game from the outside it helps them because they're not that good an outside-shooting team."

Griese Hopes To Keep Pattern

By LARRY SIDONS
AP Sports Writer

As a quarterback for the Miami Dolphins, Bob Griese was never flashy, just a winner. He hopes to follow the same pattern as a broadcaster.

Griese, who retired following the 1980 season after 14 years with the Dolphins, begins a new career this fall. He's signed with NBC as a color commentator on National Football League games, and also will work on the network's "SportsWorld" anthology shows.

"I'm not going to be overly critical and I'm not going to hand out too much praise. I'll try to stick to the middle," Griese said in a telephone interview from his Florida office.

"I'm not going to call just any play the dumbest I've ever seen, because I've probably seen dumber. And if I call every play the greatest, what will I say when a really great one comes along?"

Griese led the Dolphins to two Super Bowl championships and more than 140 victories, and rarely called for a long, difficult pass pattern when a short, simple one would do. "That's the route he says he'll follow behind the microphone."

"Timing is so important," he said. "I want to say something that's relevant and get out. It's better, in my mind, to say too little than too much."

"When I'm watching a game on TV, the ones (announcers) who always get my attention are the ones who let the action work for them. They're the ones you want to say more."

Before picking him as a replacement for Rocky Bleier, the former Pittsburgh Steelers running back, as a color analyst, NBC put Griese through a unique audition.

Ted Nathanson, who produces the network's NFL games, had Griese provide commentary over a videotape of the "Silent Bowl," the 1980 game between the Dolphins and the New York Jets which was telecast without announcers. Bob Costas, one of NBC's regular announcers, did the play-by-play during the audition.

At the time that game was played, Griese was sidelined with injuries which eventually led to his retirement, but familiarity with the two teams helped him in the audition, he feels.

"I went into the booth cold — that is, there was no way to get winning streaks or how the teams were playing into the commentary immediately," he said. "Eventually, though, I found myself referring to a lot of things I knew from playing with the Dolphins and playing so many games against the Jets. It helped."

Although his only previous broadcasting experience was a Miami TV show he had during his first two seasons with the Dolphins, Griese said he quickly felt at home during the audition.

"I felt very comfortable, like I had been doing it for 15 years, and actually, I have been," he said. "When a quarterback watches films at home or in the locker room, he's analyzing the game. That's exactly what I'll be doing as a broadcaster."

A self-described station switcher on TV football afternoons ("It drives my wife crazy, the way I use the remote control unit"), Griese said he never paid much attention to the way NBC and CBS handle the bulk of network NFL telecasts.

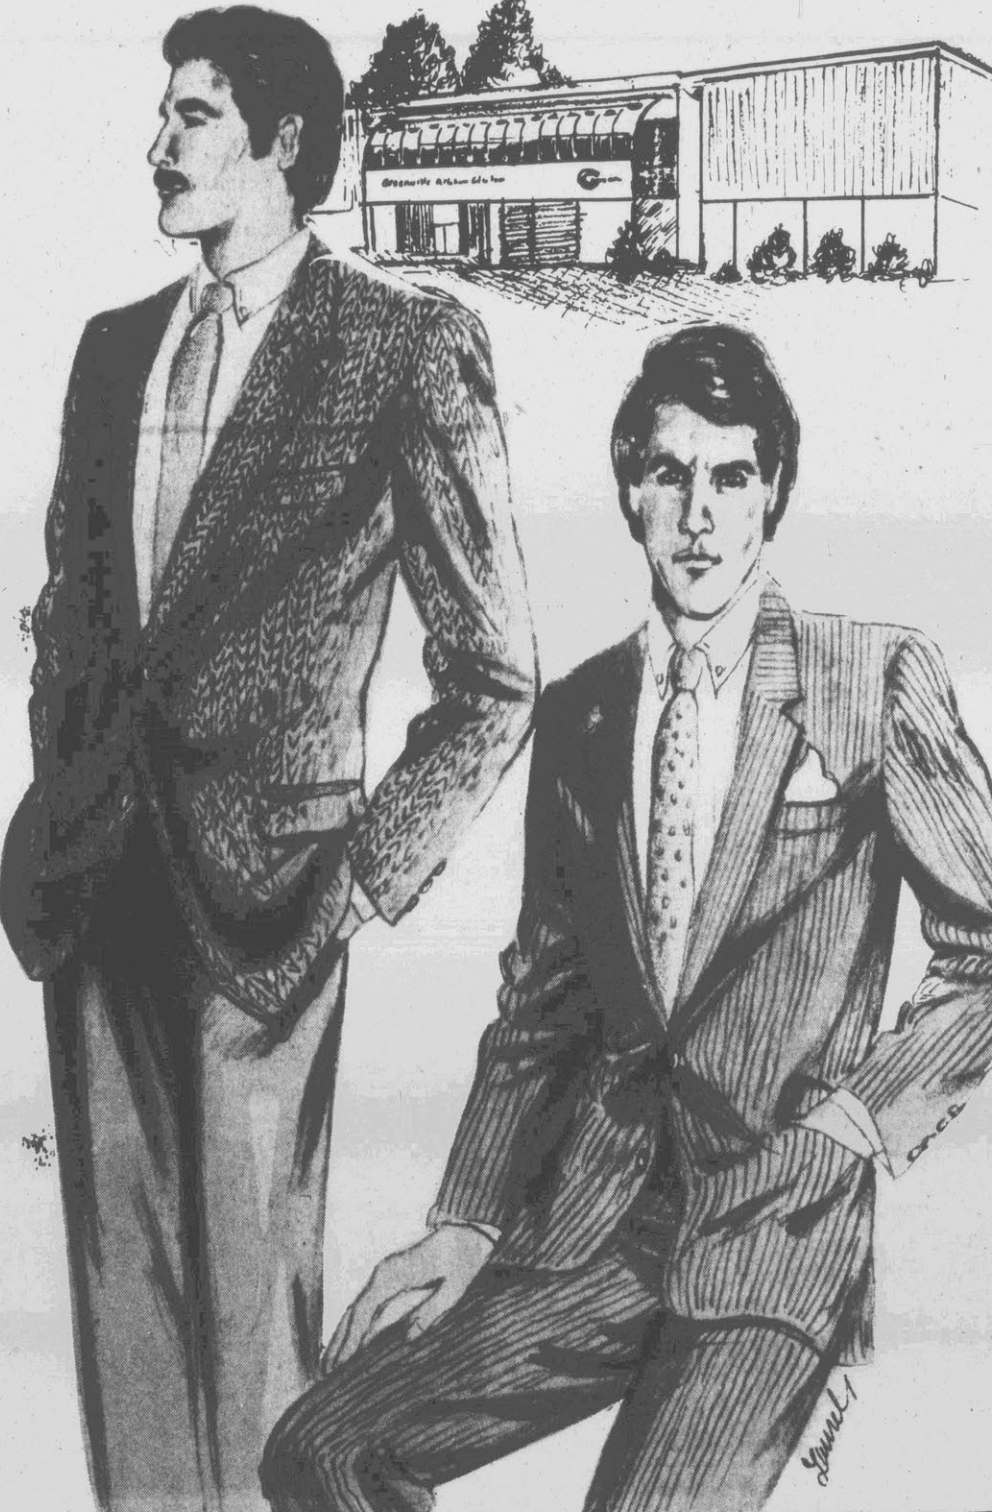

"ABC and 'Monday Night Football,' to me, is more of a spectacle, a happening," he said. "You don't get the analytical work. As far as CBS (where he also auditioned) and NBC, I've never looked at them that way. I'm usually back and forth between the two so often, they blur together."

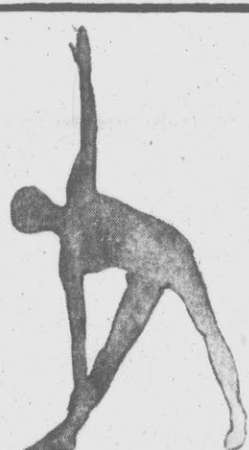

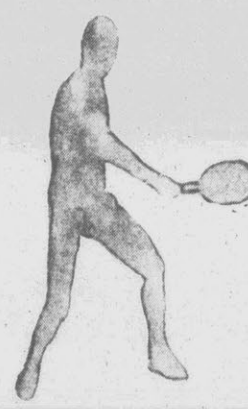

Griese said he enjoys the way NBC's Merlin Olsen handles the football analyst's job, and also had kind words for Bill Russell, the expert commentator on CBS' National Basketball Association games.

"When he says something, it's the strategy of the game that comes out," Griese said. "And there's humor, too. That's something I want to keep in mind, that it's just guys playing a game. If they lose, they'll line up again next week."

Connors Again Out In Paris Mahaffey Wishes He Were Shooting Better

Higuera Eyes It
Jose Higuera of Spain eyes the ball as he lines up a return to Jimmy Connors during play Wednesday in the French Open Tennis Tournament in Paris. Higuera defeated Connors in three sets to advance in the tournament. (AP Laserphoto)

PARIS (AP) — There is an evil spell on American tennis stars on the slow clay courts of the Roland Garros Stadium, and Jimmy Connors again failed to break it.

For the second straight year, Connors fell in the quarter-finals of the French Open Wednesday. Jose Higuera of Spain, a baseliner with a black beard and supreme patience, defeated him 6-2, 6-2, 6-2.

No American has won the men's title here since Tony Trabert did it in 1955.

Connors was eliminated in the quarter-finals last year. This time he was seeded No. 1 and appeared to have a great chance when Ivan Lendl, the No. 2 seed, was upset by Sweden's 17-year-old Mats Wilander.

But once again Connors failed to adjust his game to the Roland Garros surface, which is notorious as one of the slowest in the world. He pressed too hard and netted his attacking forehands in one long and exhausting rally after another.

Higuera stayed unruffled at the back of the court and was content to hit looping, probing shots to Connors' baseline. The rallies often lasted for more than 30 strokes, but more often than not they ended when Connors lost his patience and tried to hit the cover off the ball.

This has happened to dozens of American players who have played at Roland Garros in the last 27 years. The jinx has remained.

Harold Solomon, who specializes in slow courts himself, came nearest to breaking the spell when he lost in four sets to Italy's Adriano Panatta in 1976. Brian Gottfried reached the final in 1977 and Vitas Gerulaitis in 1980, but they failed to win a set among them.

Connors was still optimistic after his decisive defeat by Higuera.

"I really don't see why an American shouldn't win this title," he said. "If I didn't think I had a chance I wouldn't be here."

In long rallies from baseline to baseline, Higuera crept steadily ahead from 2-2 to 6-2 in the first set and again in the second set. In the third he went from 1-1 to 5-1.

Mahaffey Wishes He Were Shooting Better

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — John Mahaffey, winner of the first Kemper Open here two years ago, wishes he were playing better because he likes the Congressional Country Club course.

"You don't have to shoot 15 or 20 under in order to make a good check," said Mahaffey before today's opening round. "This is the kind of course where, if you shoot par, you have a good score and pick up a nice check."

Mahaffey, along with defending champion Craig Stadler, agree that it will be difficult to match last year's feat of a record 10-under par 270 over rain-softened Congressional, five strokes better than the previous mark set by Mahaffey in 1980.

"It depends on the weather," said Mahaffey. "If there is a lot of wind, the scores are going to be nearly that low."

Another player who likes Congressional is Jack Nicklaus, even though he hasn't played it since the 1976 PGA Championship.

Nicklaus said he is not playing the Kemper as a final tuneup for the U.S. Open at Pebble Beach, Calif., in two weeks.

"My Open preparation ... as far as my playing golf ... I've played enough golf," he said.

"This golf course is a good course, and a place I haven't been for a while. That's why I'm here. As for the Open, I'll start worrying about that after this tournament is over. I would like to play well here this week. It is always good anytime you play well prior to a major championship."

Another first time Kemper player here, Johnny Miller, would like to see his putting return this week so he can make a good Open showing.

After winning the $500,000 first prize in a non-tour event in South Africa, he won at San Diego, tied for third in the Bing Crosby and came in second at Los Angeles. But, he didn't make the cut in two of the year's biggest tournaments so far, the Tournament Players Championship and the Masters.

And, according to Miller, his putting last week at the Memorial "might have been my personal worst. I made three putts over eight feet in 72 holes."

"If I can get my putting under control," he said, "I could have a good change at the Open. A lot of people expect so much. I've won five tournaments in the last three years. That's not exactly hacking. But I guess people tend to judge you on how you play the major tournaments. I need to improve my play there."

Stadler just might be positioning himself to win his second major of the year, the Open, after winning the Masters. He believes he is ridding himself of some bad habits picked up in two tournaments in Japan after the Masters.

He picked up a swing so quick and sloppy that when he returned to the tour in the Colonial National and the Memorial, he finished 58th and 62nd, failing to break par in any of his last eight rounds.

"So went back to the basics," he said. "I worked over the weekend and started to strike the ball better. I'm starting to feel good, and I'm getting a little excited again for the first time since the Masters."

Kemper officials lengthened Congressional 119 yards this year, from 7,054 to 7,173, and made it a par 72, instead of 70, for field of 156 who will be playing for $400,000 in prize money, with $72,000 going to the winner.

Two holes — No. 6 and No. 10 — have been raised to par 5s from par 4s.

Stadler said, "If I had a preference, I would have preferred if they left them the way they were."

Mahaffey, whose best tournament this year was his first in Tucson, Ariz., when he finished tied for second, has not made the cut in two of his last five outings and finished tied for 20th in two others and tied for 62nd in the fifth.

Move Won't Be Without A Fight

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Football League can deal with Al Davis' courtroom victory several ways. One way they won't deal with it is by letting him take his Oakland franchise south to Los Angeles without a fight.

"Al Davis chose the courts as the forum to challenge 27 teams and that forum calls for appeals after a jury verdict is issued. So that's the avenue we're going to pursue," NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle told a news conference following a meeting with the league owners, their first since Davis, the Raiders' boss, beat his fellow owners in a Los Angeles courtroom.

"Talk about settling suit? No. There was not one word about not pursuing it," Rozelle said.

The NFL has asked Judge Harry Pregerson to issue a stay to keep the Raiders from leaving Oakland. If he turns the NFL down, it will seek one from the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals. Pregerson, who tried the case, also is considering a request by Davis for an injunction to stop the NFL from bailing the Raiders' move.

The owners' meeting was to end today with 10 cities bidding for Super Bowls XIX and XX. Super Bowl XVII will be played next January in Pasadena, Calif., (the Rose Bowl). Tampa, Fla., has Super Bowl XVIII. The decision on the two after that will not be made until the league's fall meetings.

In another area, the owners have agreed not to disrupt training camp or the preseason, but they are keeping open their option of delaying the scheduled Sept. 12 start of the regular season if a new contract hasn't been signed by then.

Jack Donlan, the executive director of the NFL Management Council (the owners' bargaining agent), said: "There will be no lockout at the (July 15) expiration of the contract or at the opening of training camp. As far as I'm concerned, the preseason and training camp are safe."

"But the owners might want to re-examine the situation in September," he continued. "I have the feeling the owners don't want to do what the baseball owners did — finance a strike." The baseball players' union played about one-third of the season before going out on strike.

"It's helpful," said Ed Garvey, executive director of the NFL Players Association, when informed of Donlan's announcement. "It will end speculation among players."

Erhmann Is Putt Winner

Robbie Erhmann won the Greenville Putt-Putt Wednesday Night Pro tourney with ease as his third round 11 under par 25 tied the field.

Erhmann finished the three rounds with a total of 86. Jay Wynn took the lead after the first round with a 32, while Jake Loftin and Erhmann tied for second with 33's, followed by Rodney Hooks with 36.

In the second round, however, Erhmann and Wynn exchanged places with a 61 and 64, respectively. Hooks finished with a 67.

In the final round, Hooks shot a 28 to move up to second with a three-round total of 95, while Erhmann's outstanding 25 clinched the match by a nine-stroke margin.

United Nations To Attempt To Save Angkor Wat

By BETSY KENEDY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — In the jungle of northwestern Cambodia the ancient ruins of the awesome temple city of Angkor have sat abandoned and deteriorating since 1972, silent testimony to the plight of the nation they symbolize.

Since a French archaeological expert and his staff of 800 restorers were chased from the Southeast Asian country by war 10 years ago, the temples have fallen prey to the unchecked forces of nature — wind, rain, creeping jungle and corrosive dung from resident bats — and a series of continuing wars.

Now, the United Nations has launched an effort to resume restoration of Angkor, the capital of a dozen Khmer kings built between the 9th and 13th centuries. It hopes to do so by skirting Cambodia's complicated political situation with a proposal to neutralize the area where the ruins are located.

The chances of the proposal being approved by both the warring Vietnamese-backed government in Phnom Penh and the ousted communist Khmer Rouge appear, for now, to be as remote as the jungle that is slowly choking Angkor.

A 40-square-mile complex with 72 major monuments, it includes the world's largest — and one of its most beautiful — religious buildings, the temple of Angkor Wat.

Once the capital of the ancient Khmer empire, the brick and stone Angkor monuments are renowned not only for their breathtaking configuration and design, but for what they have told historians about the brilliance and power of that empire.

The effort to restore them was mounted jointly by the National Geographic Society — which sent a three-man team to Cambodia in October — and the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

In an attempt to win international support for its proposal, UNESCO sponsored, and National Geographic produced, a picture and slide exhibit which was displayed in April at the United Nations.

Juxtaposing photographs taken by National Geographic editor Wilbur Garrett first in 1968 and again in October, the deterioration is evident. But Garrett expresses relief that most of the site is intact, and says it could be saved with proper action.

The current Vietnamese-installed government in Phnom Penh, capital of the country now called Kampuchea, has indicated it would welcome a restoration team.

But its leader, Heng Samrin, cannot formally invite UNESCO, because the United Nations does not recognize the government, and UNESCO can do nothing that would appear to indicate acceptance of the regime, according to UNESCO's New York director Doudou Diene.

The Khmer Rouge, who have been accused of killing an estimated 2 million Cambodians during their reign under Pol Pot from 1975 to 1979, are recognized by the United Nations, but do not control the country.

Installed in border areas of Kampuchea, they and a separate group of non-communist resisters continue to fight the Vietnamese.

Bound by its own rules, unchecked forces of nature — winds, encroaching jungle and corrosive dung from resident bats — and a series of continuing wars. (AP Laserphoto)

UNESCO hopes to get around the obstacles by having both sides agree to the neutral zone. The United Nations could then allow dispatch of a UNESCO-sponsored restoration team.

"We agree with the idea of a neutralized zone," but only on condition that Vietnamese troops withdraw from the country first, Thioung Prasith, the U.N. ambassador of Democratic Kampuchea, said in a recent interview.

Equating Angkor with the "national heritage of Kampuchea," Prasith accuses the Vietnamese of using the restoration issue to gain credibility for its regime.

He says Angkor will have to wait "until (there is) a political solution."

"We're frustrated by the system," said Joseph Mehan, a spokesman for UNESCO's New York office. The Geneva-based organization has been sponsoring Angkor's restoration since 1967.

The April photo exhibit in the General Assembly building was the subject of "a very delicate bit of negotiating" by UNESCO leaders, Mehan said.

Members of the Kampuchean mission agreed to the exhibit only after they excised all photos that showed Vietnamese soldiers who currently control the region of Angkor.

The Khmer Rouge protected the complex during their reign, but fighting has left the monuments bulletscarred. Vandals and thieves have beheaded statues, marred and taken others.

All parties agree the temple city has suffered far less than the nation it represents.

Bernard Groslier, former curator of the Angkor Conservancy and perhaps the world's foremost authority on Angkor, told National Geographic, "The most important thing is to save the people. For the time being, the monuments can wait," he told National Geographic.

Although experts estimate it would take another 50 years for damage to be irreversible, fears of prolonged warfare prompted the new campaign.

The exhibit will go on display in June in the National Geographic Explorer's Hall in Washington, D.C.

and, Garrett said, there have been "serious requests" for the exhibit from other countries, including France.

Dade County's Refugees Go Off Welfare Rolls

FISH FOR SALE — Angel Palenzuela, a Mariel refugee who came to Miami during the boatlift 2 years ago, sells his fish from the back of his car on a Miami street. Officials say few refugees show any interest in leaving the Miami area. (AP Laserphoto)

By RANDALL HACKLEY
Associated Press Writer
SWEETWATER, Fla. (AP) — Alberto Morales niked up his pants and waded through the rain-soaked high grass to busy Flagler Street, then patiently dangled a freshly caught red snapper toward the passing cars.

With luck, a motorist would stop to buy the fishmonger's catch for a few dollars.

For the 34-year-old Morales, a Cuban auto mechanic unable to find work in the United States, it is his only income.

The poorly dressed men hawking fish, oranges or apples along Miami-area streets — not an uncommon sight since the 1980 Cuban boatlift that brought nearly 300,000 refugees to Dade County — had new urgency Tuesday.

For some 32,000 Cubans and Haitians, it was the day their names were taken off federal welfare rolls.

Since 1980, the refugees have depended on cash payments of up to $119 a month to pay for housing and other living expenses. However, the Reagan administration this year halved the eligibility for the special cash assistance from 36 months to 18 months.

Florida, like most states, doesn't have its own cash-assistance program, other than Aid to Families with Dependent Children. It paid out $10.1 million in the last two months, but stopped after a federal judge declined to order the federal government to reimburse Florida and to resume the monthly payments.

State officials said Tuesday they will continue to seek relief in the courts, but are concerned about the impact on crime in Dade County — fueled to record levels in 1980 and 1981 by Mariel refugees — for jobless refugees suddenly unable to pay for a place to live.

"It's a shame, because of the inroads we have been making in controlling the crime problem in Dade County. You have to be concerned about this large number of jobless refugees being put into the streets," said Gov. Bob Graham.

"I can't predict the impact on crime, but I can say that of all the refugees we've talked to who were receiving the payments, only three have told us they have found jobs...when you have such a large number of jobless people suddenly with no money, there are going to be problems," said Linda Berkowitz, refugee coordinator for the state's Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services.

Another 6,000 refugees will lose their eligibility Aug. 1.

The aid cutoff may hit hard in this heavily Latin, flood-prone East Everglades town of 8,000 residents. Local officials estimate between 1,000 and 2,000 refugees here had been receiving an average of $98 monthly in federal assistance.

"It may mean some stereotypes are taken and hub-caps are stolen so they can pick up $30 here and $30 there," said Ana Perea, social services director for the city. "This could lead to chaos."

Florida last month caused an uproar among welfare officials in other states by sending letters to the refugees advising them of 10 states from Massachusetts to Hawaii where they could continue receiving welfare for up to 18 months.

But officials say few refugees show any interest in leaving the Miami area, and that the state hasn't organized any effort to move them from Florida.

"The state wouldn't put them on a bus and let them fend for themselves," says state HRS spokesman Danny Pietrodangelo in Tallahassee. "That would be morally wrong."

Officials expect that more refugees now will ask about moving to other states.

Stephene Altone, one of several thousand Haitian refugees affected, earlier sent his wife to Chicago to join a relative there who has a job. The 36-year-old man said he may soon move to Georgia, not for welfare, but to look for a job.

He said he and his wife have lived in Miami's Little Haiti area for a year, sending part of his welfare check to 14 children they left behind.

"Here I am, a young man, I left my kids, looking for a better life for them and for myself, but things have gotten worse. I can't look back, though, because it is too late for that," said Altone.

Jordan Recalls A Frustration

ATLANTA (AP) — The Carter White House was obsessed and frustrated by its inability to gain the freedom of American hostages in Iran, former presidential adviser Hamilton Jordan writes in a forthcoming book, according to promotional material.

"Crisis," Jordan's account of the last year of President Jimmy Carter's administration, will be released in October, according to Ellen Lyons, a spokeswoman for Putnam's Publishing Co.

A Putnam's catalog says Jordan's book will describe Carter as "the ultimate hostage." Ms. Lyons said.

Jordan, who was White House chief of staff and political adviser under Carter, is to finish final editing of the book in a few weeks.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — WE NOW KNOW SHE CAN NIT-TATE — WINK, THAT IS.
Today's Cryptoquip clue: W equals M

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Brian Mervis left South Africa to make a name for himself in British bridge, where he represented England and Britain in international competition. He was on the British team that won the Common Market Championship before he returned to South Africa. Here's an example of his card-reading ability.

North's decision to raise to four spades is at best questionable. We like to consider it a tribute to his partner's skill. If so, he was well rewarded, because six spades was the only slam, as the cards lie, that stood a chance. West led the queen of clubs. Declarer won in dummy as East contributed the eight. Three rounds of spades revealed that declarer had a trump loser — he discarded a heart from dummy on the third round. Now Mervis cashed the queen of diamonds, then crossed to dummy with the king of clubs. He noted that this time East followed with the two.

On the ace-king of diamonds, declarer sluffed a club and a heart. One line of play was to ruff a club in the hope that the suit would split evenly, which would establish a long club to take care of declarer's remaining heart loser. But a 3-3 club break was against the odds, and the carding to the two club tricks already played made it look almost certain that the suit was going to split 4-2. Since West was unlikely to have led the queen of clubs against a slam from an original holding of Q-9, declarer decided to play him for four clubs.

The rest was easy. Declarer ruffed a club, cashed the king-ace of hearts and ruffed another club with his remaining trump to bring his total to twelve tricks. The last trick was won by West with his trump and East with his high heart.

Philosopher For Prison System

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Inmates in Connecticut prisons will have a live-in philosopher this fall to ponder moral and ethical issues that state officials admit they lack time to think about.

David G. Lovell, a former philosophy professor, will be paid $20,000 by the Connecticut Council on Humanities to serve in the new resident philosopher's post for 10 months. He has been working as a therapist at the Hudson Correctional Facility in Hudson, N.Y.

Lovell said basic questions of justice may be ignored in the scramble by corrections officials to find room in teeming prisons for increasing numbers of inmates.

"Ideally, we have a system of justice which treats people not just as numbers, not just as means to an end, but as an end in themselves," he said.

"There are problems that empirical inquiry and cost-benefit analyses are just not going to solve," said Lovell, who maintains that the right to incarcerate people should sometimes be questioned.

"The overcrowding is all the more reason to hire someone from the outside," said Correction Commissioner John R. Manson. "We're so busy with it that we don't have time to ponder any of the larger questions ourselves."

Starting this September, Lovell said he will be talking to judges and legislators, wardens and guards — "all of the actors in the drama."

"This will give me a way of being naturally involved with prisoners and staff," he said.

"I want to get some idea of what individuals in decision-making positions think they're doing — what justifications they offer for the decisions they make."

As part of his work, Lovell will present a series of lectures and make recommendations for the department.

Political concerns and practical problems often violate standards of justice, Lovell said. "This conflict is what I'll try to explore," he said.

Lovell said he believes some people should be incarcerated because they will continue to violate the rights of others.

"But many of them will benefit from therapy and the system often blows its opportunity to work with these people," he said.

"A lot of expensive, highly touted (rehabilitation) programs failed" in part because their proponents tried to work through prisons to correct problems that came from outside, he said.

"Criminals and the criminal justice system have been a scapegoat for economic problems, a lot of other problems," he said.

Lovell said he once held a philosophy professorship at Pacific Lutheran University in Tacoma, Wash.

Workshop For Care-Givers Reception For Piner

A workshop for caregivers to victims of Alzheimer's Disease and related disorders which result in the loss of memory will be held twice Tuesday in the Fellowship Hall of the First United Methodist Church of Washington, N.C. The first session will be held from 2 to 4 p.m.; the second identical one from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

Alzheimer's Disease is a progressive brain disorder affecting 1.5 million Americans that is often mistaken for simple senility. It results in impaired ability to think, to remember and to care for oneself.

Beverly Brooks of the Duke Medical School Center for the Study of Aging and Human Development will conduct the workshop. Professional caregivers and members of the families of victims are urged to attend the free workshop, which is co-sponsored by the Mental Health Association in Beaufort County and the Health Care Center of Washington.

Dr. Eugene Piner, who is retiring this year as principal of Wals-Coates Elementary School, will be honored at a reception Sunday at the school from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m.

Dr. Piner served as the school's principal from 1961-65 and again from 1970-82. He attended graduate school from 1965-70.

The reception will be open to the public.

TV Chills Image Of J. Edgar Hoover

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — What ABC's entertainment division glorified, ABC's news division will tarnish tonight in its documentary "J. Edgar Hoover."

ABC Entertainment has broadcast a pair of two-fisted glamorizations of Hoover's FBI, with Etem Zimbalist Jr. as Hoover's hand-picked actor 17 years ago and Mike Connors bringing the G-Man up to date in last season's "The FBI."

But the FBI that unfolds in the "ABC News Closeup: J. Edgar Hoover" is the other side of the coin, and it doesn't look counterfeit. Hoover comes across as a vindictive, arbitrary, power-hungry man whose 50-year reign as the nation's top cop went from a war on crime to an assault on the Constitution.

"In the end, it's a story of how a secret police power came to grow within democratic institutions," says the documentary's writer-narrator, Marshall Frady. And, in the end, Hoover's indiscretions obscure his contributions to a country he protected — perhaps too vigilantly — against his enemies: criminals, Nazis, communists and, finally, America's minorities.

What gets lost is that in 1924, the 29-year-old Hoover was asked to reform a corrupt FBI. He did, turning it into an effective, squeaky-clean crime-fighting organization that inspired Hollywood and America's youth.

Hoover loved headlines and, 10 years after his death, media attention is refocused on the man, one of the most powerful unelected officials in U.S. history. ABC News has assembled persuasive information, illustrating abuses and misapplications of Hoover's power:

—Hoover had information in 1964 that Lee Harvey Oswald told Cuban officials in 1963 that he was willing to assassinate President Kennedy. ABC says Hoover never attempted to broaden that lead, nor reveal the information to the Warren Commission.

ABC speculates Hoover may have been attempting to limit FBI culpability since the bureau had been monitoring Oswald prior to the assassination.

—Hoover's lust for publicity damaged American intelligence efforts against German Nazis in the United States during World War II. When one Nazi walked into the FBI and disclosed what they were here for, Hoover immediately announced the collar.

Although the announcement reassured a jittery nation, intelligence officials were angry that it prevented snaring a larger net of Nazi operatives.

—The same self-aggrandizing headlines precipitated the FBI's arrest of Ethel and Julius Rosenberg, who were executed for leaking atomic bomb secrets to the Soviets. ABC reveals that cracking the Soviet spy code incriminated the Rosenbergs, although this evidence was never used in court in an effort to keep the Soviets in the dark about the code breakthrough.

Robert Lamphere, who supervised the code investigations, says he would have preferred "working the case as a carefully controlled counter-intelligence operation rather than going from the publicity of a major trial."

—Hoover attempted to discredit Martin Luther King Jr. during the FBI's controversial covert surveillance of civil rights and anti-war activists. "The man deeply offended Mr. Hoover at a personal level," says former Attorney General Ramsey Clark.

According to Mark Felt, former FBI associate director, surveillance tapes revealing King's sexual activities indicated to Hoover that King "was a hypocrite and not the right man to lead the black movement." Soon after King was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 1964, the so-called sex tapes were mailed to King's home.

All of this makes for compelling television, although ABC didn't see fit to broadcast "J. Edgar Hoover" on May 4, exactly 10 years after Hoover's death.

May is one of those important ratings measuring months, and documentaries — even as good as this one — don't draw large audiences.

New Start For David Cassidy

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — David Cassidy, major heart throb of the bubblegum set in the early 1970s, is bent on becoming a serious actor.

Emerging from a self-imposed 3½-year exile, the former lead singer with the Partridge Family says he has begun grooming himself for a new start in show business.

His current role as the estranged son in Calgary Stage West's production of "Tribute" is part of the learning process, an opportunity to prove himself in a role he would have difficulty obtaining elsewhere, he said in an interview.

"I could never have done this play ... in Hollywood," Cassidy said. "They would never cast me in it because I'm not right for the part. 'Not that I can't do it. It's just that the character is not at all like me so I'd never be the first choice of a Hollywood director."

"The young man is very awkward, inhibited and feels uncomfortable around women. That's definitely not me."

Python Squeeze Is Loose Again

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The Monty Python nuts are loose again with a new movie project, "Monty Python's — The Meaning of Life," for Universal Pictures with Monty Python member Terry Jones directing.

The new movie, first for the group since "The Life of Brian," will feature a screenplay written by Monty Python, which consists of Graham Chapman, John Cleese, Terry Gilliam, Eric Idle, Terry Jones and Michael Palin.

Rolling Stones Back In Europe

ROTTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — The Rolling Stones opened their first European tour in six years with a two-hour concert attended by 42,000 fans in a soccer stadium.

The performance Wednesday included oldies such as "Time is On My Side," dating back to 1965, and recent hits such as "Start Me Up" from the Stones' latest album "Tattoo You," released in 1981.

Mick Jagger, who drew loud cheers with his opener "Under My Thumb," had the audience under his spell from the moment he set foot on the giant, pink platform.

The fans ranged from grim-looking Hell's Angels, regular visitors at Stones concerts, to fathers who had brought their children to see the idols of their youths.

Voight Stars In Cruise Role

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Jon Voight and Marie Christine Barrault will star in "Table for Five," a new movie to be directed by Rob Lieberman in Europe and co-starring Richard Crenna and Millie Perkins.

Voight will play a divorced father who takes his three children on an Atlantic cruise and realizes how much better a father he might have been.

'Rocky III' Opens Big In Theater Box Offices

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Sylvester Stallone has showed again that he has the stuff of champions as his latest movie, "Rocky III," recorded the second-highest box office in history in its debut.

MGM-United Artists announced Wednesday that "Rocky III" took in $16 million during its first four days at 939 theaters over the long Memorial Day weekend.

That's an impressive $17,056 per screen and is much-appreciated news for a company that has been deeply in debt for the past year.

The only film to fare better was "Superman II," which debuted at 1,397 theaters on a non-holiday weekend last summer and earned $16.6 million — an average of $11,910 per screen, according to the trade publication Daily Variety.

Second-best business on the Memorial Day weekend was collected by "Visiting Hours," which collected $5.3 million in 1,176 theaters. Among early summer entries, "Annie" increased in business over its first week in 14 theaters, for a total of $1.6 million in the first 11 days. Columbia Pictures views the increase as a good omen for the musical's broad release later this month.

United Press International Sold To New Company

CINCINNATI (AP) — United Press International, born 75 years ago but losing money for more than a decade, has been sold to a new company formed by investors with interests in newspapers, television stations and cable TV, E.W. Scripps Co. announced. The news service had been up for sale for some time. The new owner, Media News Corp., has no plans to change the name, said Scripps President Edward W. Estlow in announcing the sale Wednesday. Estlow said all of UPI's stock was sold to Media News — the 95 percent owned by Scripps and the 5 percent owned by the Hearst Corp. "I am pleased a group of experienced media people is acquiring UPI," Estlow said. Media News did not plan staff changes and Roderick W. Beaton has agreed to remain as president of UPI, Estlow said. Bill Adler, a UPI spokesman in New York, said UPI employees "seemed to react well" to news of the sale, adding the new owners were "charging hard and have big plans for us. You couldn't ask for anything more." Adler declined to reveal financial terms but said, "They (the new owners) are confident they have the capital to run UPI. "There's a lot of money here. There has to be," Adler said. "It would be a pointless effort to try it without the money."

profit for UPI in the coming years. "We feel that the greatest opportunities for growth lie in the new technologies, cable, direct broadcast satellite service, low-power TV, video disc and tape, and computer data bases," Ruhe added. Keith Fuller, president and general manager of the AP, said in a statement issued in New York. "We at The Associated Press are pleased to learn that a new company has acquired our chief competitor in the United States, United Press International. "Under the Scripps ownership, UPI has had its place in the industry, and we are gratified with the prospect of continued competition between the two services."

UPI traces its roots to 1907 when E.W. Scripps founded United Press Associations after he was unable to subscribe to the AP because of the news cooperative's policy, later discontinued, of serving only one competitive newspaper in a given market. The new agency began operating on June 21, 1907. Five years later, the service, by then known as United Press, rejected a bid to ally itself with Reuters. A picture service was introduced in 1952 and, six years later, United Press merged with the Hearst-owned International News Service to become United Press International. The UPI Audio Network was formed the same year.

UPI's figures on the number of newspapers it serves differ from AP's count. UPI spokeswoman Susan Hashim said the company domestically serves 1,036 newspapers, 3,237 radio stations and 445 television stations. She said the company serves 693 foreign newspapers, 170 foreign radio stations and eight foreign television stations. These clients are in 100 countries, she said. The AP has approximately 2,600 employees, including 1,456 news and photo staffers, of whom 1,077 are based in the United States and 379 are based in foreign countries. The AP has 123 domestic bureaus in all 50 U.S. states and operates 77 bureaus in 61 foreign countries. UPI has approximately 2,000 employees worldwide. Of these, more than 1,000 are news and photo staffers, of whom more than 800 are based in the United States and the rest abroad.

THE FINAL DODGE — This old Dodge car on Pamlico Beach is completely hemmed in by a circle of trees. Legend has it that in the mid-1950s, the driver, being chased by a law enforcement officer, dodged the law by pulling off the road and parking in a area of weeds and small bushes. He allegedly never returned to claim his car and, over the years, the bushes have grown into small trees, encircling the vehicle. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

Arrest Made By Officers

Donald Ray Streeter, 22 of 308 Manhattan Ave., was arrested by Greenville police Tuesday on breaking and entering charges. Chief Glenn Cannon said Streeter allegedly was found inside a house at 1300 Ward St. about 7:45 p.m. by officers investigating a report that someone was seen attempting to remove an air conditioning unit from a window of the dwelling. Streeter was jailed under a $2,000 bond pending a hearing of the case.

Consider Use Of Force To Capture Smugglers

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. government officials are considering a plan that would allow the Navy to use limited force if necessary to capture drug-smuggling boats, administration sources say. Such use of force would represent a significant widening of the Navy's involvement in "Operation Florida," a project of Vice President George Bush's Task Force on South Florida Crime. Administration sources, who declined to be identified, emphasized that senior Coast Guard commanders would have the deciding say on whether force was to be used in a given incident. Coast Guard detachments would be placed on Navy vessels and would conduct the actual boarding of suspected craft, although Navy sailors might do so if that was required by circumstances, the sources said. The proposed new rules are reported under discussion between the Navy and Coast Guard. Since last March, the Navy has become increasingly involved in anti-drug operations to help the Coast Guard, which has fewer ships and personnel. Navy planes have flown patrols to help the Customs Service watch for aircraft trying to slip into the United States with drugs. Navy ships on routine operations have reported sightings of suspicious vessels to the Coast Guard, which then sent cutters to intercept them. A bigger role for the Navy was foreshadowed when Navy Secretary John Lehman on May 25 formally waived a ban against participation in civil law enforcement. As a result, Navy ships may tow to port vessels seized by the Coast Guard. They also may carry prisoners taken from such vessels and turn them over to civilian law officers. The proposed rules now under discussion would allow Navy skippers to fire warning shots or use force only with the approval of the senior Coast Guard officer on board and by higher-ranking Coast Guard officials consulted by radio.

Precautions would be taken to use only the minimum degree of force considered necessary to halt the suspected ship. Between spaced warning shots, there would be repeated messages by radio and signaling devices ordering it to halt for boarding. If the warnings were ignored, and a suspected vessel tried to get away, the Navy skipper would be allowed to open fire to disable the fleeing ship. He would be instructed to avoid wounding or killing occupants of the ship. Disabling shots would be aimed at the fugitive ship's rudder, engine or control areas to minimize harm to people or property.

Three Injured In Collision

Three persons were reported injured in an 11:40 a.m. collision Wednesday at the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and Rosewood Drive. Police identified the drivers involved as Adrian Ernal Brown of 1732 Beaumont Drive and Herbert Ervin Creekmore of Route 2, Blounts Creek. Officers, who said both drivers and a passenger in the Creekmore truck were injured, estimated damage at $1,000 to the Brown car and $1,500 to the Creekmore vehicle.

BIG WATER BILL
ROME (AP) — The Vatican owes the Rome city water authority $2.4 million in overdue water bills, the leftist newspaper Paese Sera reports.

More Science

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's public school students need to be taught more science, a study committee has told the state Board of Education. The committee, which spent months studying science teaching procedures in public schools, said science should be included in annual testing programs for third, sixth and ninth grades to help teachers understand the importance of science instruction. Discussions with top elementary school teachers revealed that the average elementary school teacher spends 17 minutes a day teaching science, the committee said. The committee recommended a high school student complete three years of science before graduating. Disposal of hazardous wastes in laboratories also should be studied, the committee said. The committee is made up of teachers, administrators, students, parents and higher-education officials.

Delivers the taste of cigarettes with up to twice the tar.

—Landmark Smoker Study

---

Extensive research proves 'Enriched Flavor' MERIT consistently matches the taste of leading higher tar brands.

---

Latest research offers the most conclusive evidence yet confirming MERIT as the proven taste alternative to higher tar smoking.

MERIT Taste Does It!

In impartial tests where brand identity was concealed, the overwhelming majority of smokers reported MERIT taste equal to—or better than—leading higher tar brands.

Moreover, when tar levels were revealed, 2 out of 3 chose the MERIT combination of low tar and good taste.

Taste Debate Ends.

In a second part of the same study, smokers confirm that MERIT taste is a major factor in completing their successful switch from higher tar brands.

Confirmed: 9 out of 10 former higher tar smokers report MERIT is an easy switch, that they didn't give up taste in switching, and that MERIT is the best-tasting low tar they've ever tried.

Year after year, in study after study, MERIT remains unbeaten. The proven taste alternative to higher tar smoking—is MERIT.
