

Israeli Advance In Lebanon Invasion

By The Associated Press

Israel's invading army besieged major Palestinian guerrilla strongholds in southern Lebanon today and said a pre-dawn assault captured the Crusader-built fortress that was an artillery base for the Palestine Liberation Organization.

"The Israeli flag now flies from Beaufort," Israel radio quoted an unidentified commander as saying, referring to Beaufort Castle.

U.S. Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., en route to Rome, told reporters that his information corroborated the Israeli claim. But the Palestinian Wafa news agency denied the Israelis had taken Beaufort, and a U.N. spokesman said he could not confirm the capture.

In Israel, U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib arrived overnight on a mission to halt the escalating violence.

PLO communiques and U.N. spokesmen said Israeli tanks and infantry ringed Palestinian enclaves at the ancient port city of Tyre on the Mediterranean. The PLO said Israeli forces had pushed into the inland market town of Nabatiyah and "hand-to-hand combat is raging in the streets."

Western correspondents along the easternmost prong of the 33-mile invasion front reported that Israeli tanks entered Hasbaya, about five miles west of the Syrian border, and dozens of mud-camouflaged trucks were seen streaming north into the Bekaa Valley where Syria has SAM-6 anti-aircraft missile batteries.

A major risk of the Israeli invasion was that it might lead to full-scale fighting with the estimated 30,000 Syrian troops in Lebanon.

The correspondents said Hasbaya, capital of the Arkoub region, and the surrounding hills were under Israeli control.

The Syrian command in Beirut said Syrian long-range artillery pounded Israel's forward positions for the second day. It said an unspecified number of Syrians were killed or wounded by shelling from Israel's newly established positions around Jarjoua and Arab Salim, 12 miles north of the border in the center of the invasion front.

Israeli leaders have said they would not fight the Syrians in their effort to wipe out Palestinian guerrillas in southern Lebanon, and today denied exchanging artillery fire with the Syrians. Western correspondents returning from Arkoub said they saw Syrian artillery at the southern flank of the Bekaa firing toward Israeli positions, but saw no returning fire from Israeli positions.

The privately owned "Voice of Lebanon" radio station said Syrian and Israeli jets clashed in dogfights over the Bekaa Valley, but Syria's official SANA news agency said it could not confirm the report.

Israel said its forces captured the cliff-top Beaufort Castle in a pre-dawn assault on the fortress overlooking the Litani River that has long been the PLO's main launchpad for rocket and artillery attacks on northern Israel.

Timur Goksel, spokesman for the U.N. peacekeeping command in southern Lebanon, said tank and infantry combat raged overnight around the ancient citadel 3 1/2 miles north of the Israeli border, "but we don't know the result of the fighting yet."

The Israeli announcement at dawn today came after six years of fruitless Israeli efforts to knock out the Beaufort Castle batteries with repeated air strikes, foiled when the guerrillas pulled their guns back into the maze of tunnels in the cliff.

Residents of the Israeli border town Metulla said a heavy artillery and air attack on the fortress Sunday night stopped at midnight, and apparently the infantry moved up then, crossed the Litani River and overran the cliff-top post.

PLO communiques said Israeli jets and warships blasted guerrilla bases in the hills, in the woods and along the Mediterranean beaches of southern Lebanon without letup on the second day of the invasion, disrupting guerrilla supply routes and setting fire to an oil tank farm at the Zahrani refinery south of Sidon, the provincial capital of southern Lebanon.

The PLO said its forces repulsed repeated Israeli naval landings aimed at capturing the refinery.

Falkland Assault Expected Any Hour

By The Associated Press

With a heavy fog finally lifting and fresh troops arriving, British forces are ready to launch an assault on the Falkland Islands capital of Stanley "within hours," according to British correspondents at the battle front.

The British spent Sunday consolidating their grip around the town and probing Argentine defenses, according to the dispatches.

On Saturday, for the first time in several days, the correspondents said, the dense, chill fog lifted enough to give them a look at the town, defended by an estimated 7,000 Argentine troops. The British forces, augmented by fresh troops arriving from the beachhead at Port San Carlos, 50 miles from Stanley, number about 8,000.

The weather in the Falklands has been miserable, with high winds, freezing temperatures and driving rain making operations difficult. Correspondent Alastair McQueen of London's Daily Standard reported that supply helicopters had to grope their way across the island with crewmen hanging out of the doors to keep sight of the tail lights of the helicopter in front of them.

With the weather improving somewhat, British planes on Sunday dropped more leaflets on Argentine positions urging the troops to surrender. The Argentines responded with sporadic, poorly aimed artillery fire, according to the British reports.

Argentina said its air force and gunners at Stanley bombed, strafed and shelled the British, but the British Defense Ministry was not giving out any information about operations in the Falklands.

Independent Television News correspondent Michael Nicholson reported that the British forces were already carrying out "extraordinarily daring operations" which, if successful, "will bring an end to the war that much closer." He gave no details due to military censorship.

An Argentine communique reported a clash with British marines west of Stanley, and said the British forces were routed. The Argentines said they suffered no casualties from British artillery fire.

Nicholson reported that the British Gurkha troops, the knife-wielding mercenaries from Himalayan Nepal, were moving back and forth across East Falkland, looking for Argentine troops who were overlooked as the main body of the British force moved westward.

The Gurkhas are part of the second wave of British troops on the island. They landed about a week ago at Port San Carlos after leaving their transport ship, the requisitioned liner Queen Elizabeth 2, with the rest of the 3,500-man 5th Infantry Brigade.

The QE2 picked up 700 crewmen from ships sunk by Argentine forces and is bringing them back to England, the Ministry of Defense said. The port city of Southampton was preparing a tumultuous welcome for Friday.

The resolution also attacked the United States for supporting Britain.

Reagan Again Meets Pontif

VATICAN CITY (AP) — President Reagan, declaring himself on a "pilgrimage for peace," met today with Pope John Paul II at the midpoint of a European tour shadowed by warfare in the Middle East and the Falkland Islands.

The pope urged the United States to "step forward at this crucial moment in history to consolidate her rightful place at the service of world peace."

For 50 minutes the pontiff and the president met alone in the 16th century papal library, talking across a simple wooden desk, each man sitting on a high-backed velvet chair.

Then, in a nationally televised exchange of statements with the pope, Reagan noted he was visiting Europe for the first time as president and said, "I would like to think of it as a pilgrimage for peace, a journey aimed at strengthening the forces for peace in the free West by offering new opportunities for realistic negotiations..."

Reagan said he came away from the meeting "with renewed sense of hope and dedication."

"We seek the same goals of peace, freedom and humanity that the church pursues," the president said. Reagan spoke of conflict in Latin America and the Middle East, and called Poland a "martyred nation" that had been a "bastion of freedom." Reagan called for an end to martial law in Poland, freedom for political prisoners and renewed talks between the government and Solidarity.

The president also pledged to work for "arms reduction to help bring a real and lasting peace to the world," and called on the Roman Catholic Church to help him "prevent the spread of repression and godless tyranny" in Latin America.

The pontiff, speaking in English, said peace depends on farsighted world leaders working for human rights and an end to the arms race.

He cited "centers of acute tension" in the Falklands, the Iran-Iraq war and "now the grave crisis provoked by the new events in Lebanon."

"America is in a splendid position to help all humanity enjoy what she herself is intent on possessing," the pope said. "With faith in God and belief in universal human solidarity, may America step forward at this crucial moment in history to consolidate her rightful place at the service of world peace."

PRINCESS GARNER APPEAL

Hotline has been asked to appeal for some community group to "adopt" Princess Garner, a two-year-old girl paralyzed since birth who only recently left Pitt County Memorial Hospital to live in a foster home here.

This group would be called on to supply small needs that Princess might have over the months to come — things that her foster parents find it difficult to add to the needs of hers they're already meeting. Some examples of things needed now include bath-sized towels (She spits up very often and it takes a huge supply), a child's wagon for outings, and Size 3 Toddler clothes. (She has had plenty of clothes, but is growing fast).

A large need, East Carolina University School of Medicine Pediatrics Department social worker Rhonda Stanley said, is a small window-unit room air conditioner for her room only (the family does not want a big one because they have to consider the size of their electric bill.) A used one in good shape will be fine. The reason for this need is the regulation of Princess's body temperature which always runs high, sometimes dangerously high when she gets too hot.

For information about any of these needs, call Rhonda Stanley at the Medical School, 757-2633, days.

County Awards Ins. Contract

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners this morning awarded a contract to Blue Cross and Blue Shield of North Carolina for health care insurance for county employees for the coming year.

The board last month accepted bids from three companies for health care insurance. However, Blue Cross was the only firm which met the bid specifications.

The Blue Cross bid was $44.68 per month for individual coverage.

Commissioners today also approved a fee schedule for services rendered by the Health Department. The fees, approved earlier by the Board of Health, will take effect August 1.

In other action, commissioners reappointed Van Fleming, Dr. Eugene Furth, Dave McRae and Dr. Harriet Wooten to the Pitt County Mental Health area board; reappointed M. B. Hodges to the Pitt County ABC Board; reappointed Dr. Jean Lowry and F. Curtis Martin to the Sediment Control Commission; and appointed George Alvan to the Board of Adjustments of the City of Greenville and O. T. Alexander as an alternate member of the board.

Also approved this morning was a request by the Farmville Recreation Department for permission to hold a fireworks display on July 4.

Arrested Marcher Thought Case Was Dropped

ATLANTA (AP) — A civil rights protest leader arrested in North Carolina on a 10-year-old charge "thought it was settled," the president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference has charged.

Dr. Joseph Lowery told a news conference Sunday that he was surprised at the arrest of the Rev. James E. Orange of Atlanta on a 10-year-old charge of failure to obey a police order to disperse.

Orange was arrested Saturday in Williamston, N.C., as he led a five-state protest march seeking extension of the 1965 Voting Rights Act.

"There've been hundreds of cases like that in civil rights demonstrations and most jurisdictions have just wiped them off because they're not worth pursuing," Lowery said.

"He knew there was some trouble but said North Carolina had not made in 10 years any attempt to do anything about it. He thought it was over, thought it was settled.

"At one time here in Atlanta, he offered to turn himself in. But North Carolina didn't seem interested, so we thought maybe it was just a thing up there," Lowery said.

Meanwhile, about 50 demonstrators making the journey from Alabama to Washington, D.C., rallied in Edenton Sunday night, police said.

The demonstrators, organized by the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, congregated at a grocery store in Edenton and marched about six blocks to a women's club where they ate, said Police Chief John Parrish.

They held a rally Sunday night in a local church, Parrish said. He said the demonstrators planned to spend the night in area motels in depart for Elizabeth City Monday morning.

"We haven't had any problem at all," Parrish said, "It's been an orderly, peaceful thing."

Orange's arrest early Saturday came two days after the marchers picketed the office of Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., Lowery said.

Helms has announced he will filibuster when the Voting Rights Act extension comes before the Senate.

The 1973 charge against Orange stemmed from his participation in a SCLC-sponsored demonstration in Edenton, N.C., demanding that the local school board hire a black band director. He was convicted in absentia and sentenced to six months in jail.

The Voting Rights march began in April in Tuskegee, Ala. Marchers have traveled by foot and car through Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina and North Carolina on their way to the nation's capital and a massive rally.

Floods Follow New England Deluge

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — A storm that dropped up to 11 inches of rain on southern New England washed out dams and bridges, tore houses off foundations and sent up to 12 feet of water through towns. Authorities said at least 18 people died.

The most severe problems were reported in Ivoryton, Conn., where two dams on the Fall River burst Sunday, releasing a wall of water that washed away four houses and several cars.

"It looked like a tidal wave," said Christopher Dewey, who lives on Main Street. "It was like a white wave covering everything."

The heavy rain, which began Friday, began to taper off today.

Rocks shifted in the center of a dam near Leominster, Mass., as rain fell, but the dam held and waters were receding.

At least nine deaths occurred in Connecticut, two in Massachusetts and seven in Rhode Island.

Helicopters and six-wheeled military vehicles were used to rescue stranded residents as a high-pressure system to the north kept the storm bottled up over the Atlantic Coast all weekend.

"The damage is tremendous in many towns," said Connecticut Gov. William A. O'Neill, who called out National Guard units to help with sandbagging. "It will run into the millions of dollars."

The governor declared a state of emergency and asked for federal disaster assistance.

Coastal areas of Connecticut near Ivoryton were cut off by flooding streams and marshes, and streets and highways were lined with cars stalled by flooded engines. Interstates 95 and 91 in New Haven experienced severe traffic jams due to flooded exits.

Rep. Lawrence J. DeNardis, R-Conn., estimated damage to 16 Connecticut shoreline communities at $100 million.

Flood waters were receding in most areas today, although the Connecticut River — the state's largest — was expected to reach four feet above flood stage early today, according to the National Weather Service River Forecast Center in Bloomfield.

Ivoryton native Ronald Krajewski said the town bears no resemblance to the way it was before the flood. "It's just a mudhole. Houses that used to stand here have just disappeared," he said.

To the west, several Naugatuck Valley cities declared local states of emergency and evacuated homes when rivers and streams began spilling over their banks Saturday.

Much of downtown Milford, west of New Haven, remained closed today after what local officials called the worst flooding this century. Water was 4 to 6 feet deep on River Street during the worst of the flooding, they said.

In New Haven's Westville section, mayoral aide Cathy Gollinger said 10 to 12 feet of water roared down streets from the West River, overturning several cars.

The state Transportation Department said 71 sections of roads remained closed because of high water or washouts, and at least 10 major bridges were swept away.

Amtrak passengers were being bused between Bridgeport and New London, around flooded sections of the coast near New Haven and Milford.

In Massachusetts, the weather service said about 2.35 inches of rain fell Sunday. The Boston-area Metropolitan District Commission reported pumping millions of gallons out of the Charles River between Watertown and Charlestown to keep it from overflowing.

Two boys were plucked from a raft bobbing in the Ware River at Palmer by a line lowered from a Massachusetts Air National Guard helicopter Sunday. The youths were treated for exposure at Mercy Hospital in Springfield.

In Southampton, firefighters used a six-wheeled surplus military vehicle to evacuate two couples, three children, two dogs, two cats and three goats from Riverdale Road when the Manhan River overflowed its banks.

EXTENDED WEATHER OUTLOOK FOR N.C.

Methodists Nutrition Awards Set Agenda By County Schools

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina Methodists are scheduled to take action this week on several major issues, including school prayer and abortion, at their meeting here beginning today.

The 1,500 conference delegates are scheduled to vote on whether to ask North Carolina's congressmen to oppose proposed legislation on abortion and school prayer as "violation not only of civil liberty but of religious conscience."

The Rev. Bruce Pate of Durham, who heads the 36-member Conference Board of Church and Society, said he isn't sure whether the controversial resolution will pass.

"It depends on the mood of the conference," he said.

The resolution, endorsed by the whole committee, with representatives from all 12 districts, asks that all Christians come to "a searching and prayerful inquiry into the sorts of conditions that may warrant abortion."

The resolution states that a decision about abortion "should be made only after thoughtful and prayerful consideration by the parties involved."

The resolution comes as a reaction to a proposed amendment supported by Sens. Jesse Helms and John East that defines life at conception and bans most abortions.

The second annual awards banquet for the Pitt County schools' child nutrition program was held recently at the Casablanca Restaurant.

On hand for the ceremonies were cafeteria employees from across the county, school and central office administrators and special guests of the staff.

Hazel Worthington, supervisor for the child nutrition program, presided over the activities. Thomas L. Craft Jr., acting superintendent of Pitt County Schools, welcomed those attending the banquet. Rev. Willis Wilson, pastor at Reedy Branch Free Will Baptist Church, was the guest speaker.

Special recognition was given to those who are retiring. Kinsley Beacham of Paolous, Ray Brewer of Belvoir and Mable Baker of Grifton received honors this year for their contributions to the program.

Also recognized were Dorothy Hamill of Wellcome who was voted manager of the year, and Mary Wilson of Grifton who was chosen as employee of the year. Barry Gaskins, public information director for Pitt County schools, was presented with the best friend award. The award is given each year to a person who has given support and service to the child nutrition program in the area of public relations and recognition.

Couple Weds On Sunday

MRS. GLENN HART

FARMVILLE — Donna Jean King and Glenn Hart were united in marriage Sunday afternoon at five o'clock in the Beacon Free Will Baptist Church here. The Rev. Terry Hardison officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Larry E. King and parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. J.B. Hart, all of Route 2, Farmville.

Pianist Kitty King, aunt of the bride, played the piano and sang "Whither Thou Goest" and "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown with a molded bodice of chantilly lace with a scooped neckline. The gown was fashioned with bishop sleeves and an empire waist which was outlined in chantilly lace. The full skirt was of silk organza over peau de soie. The two tiered cathedral length veil was attached to a headpiece trimmed with matching lace. She carried a bouquet of spring flowers and baby's breath accented with streamers of white lace and ribbon.

Serving as maid of honor was Laura Rouse of Farmville. She wore a pink floor length dress with a fitted empire bodice with a matching capelet of polyester chiffon. She wore a polyester and ribbon trimmed matching hat. She carried a long-stemmed white rose with matching streamers.

Bridesmaids were Wanda King of Farmville and Sandra Phillips of Raleigh, both cousins of the bride.

They wore blue dresses styled identically to that of the maid of honor. They each carried a long-stemmed white rose.

Emily Davis of Fountain, niece of the bridegroom, was flower girl. She wore a blue floor length dress with puffed sleeves and a flounced skirt. She carried a white lace basket with daisies. Wesley Matthews of Farmville, nephew of the bridegroom, was ring bearer.

Best man was James Hart of Greenville, brother of the bridegroom. Ushers included Rudy Hart of Walsenburg, brother of the bridegroom and Ralph Evans and Paul Ligant, both of Farmville.

The director of the wedding was Elma Holloman of Farmville.

After the rehearsal of the wedding, the bridal party and guests were entertained at a cake cutting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Leland Bagley of Farmville. Parents of the bride greeted the guests. Sue Taylor, aunt of the bride, served cake. Geraldine Bagley, aunt of the bride, poured punch. Assisting in serving were Ann Phillips of Raleigh, Kitty King and Doris King, both of Farmville. Good-byes were said by the parents of the bridegroom.

The refreshment table was covered with a cutwork linen cloth and decorated with three branch candelabra featuring spring flowers.

The bridegroom is employed at Sterling Radiator.

Wedding Vows Said Saturday

ROANOKE RAPIDS — Linda Diane Fields and Raymond Woodrow Bramlett, both of Greenville, were united in marriage at seven o'clock Saturday evening in the First Baptist Church here. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. W.C. Campbell.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard A. Fields of Roanoke Rapids. Mother of the bridegroom is Mrs. Willis R. Sims of East Point, Ga.

A program of wedding music was presented by organist Dwight Berry and pianist Debbie Phillips. Soloists were Jacqueline Marin and Don Phillips.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father. She wore an ivory chiffon gown with a fitted bodice enhanced with alencon lace and seed pearls. It featured a Queen Anne neckline and sheer fitted sleeves. The full skirt, which streamed from a natural waist, flowed into a cathedral train and was edged in matching lace. Her headpiece was an ivory wreath of flowers and pearls.

Silk flowerettes and streamers in the back were attached to an imported French walking length beaded veil with a sprinkling of spring flowerettes around the border. She carried a silk cascade bouquet designed after the "Lady Diana" original. White bridal roses, stephanotis, orange blossoms and Vanderbilt orchids formed the showering bouquet and imported lace ribbon tied in love knots accented the cascading effect.

Matron of honor was Leesa Fields Daughtry of Roanoke Rapids, sister of the bride. Maid of honor was Stephanie Ann McAteer of Mableton, Ga. Serving as bridesmaids were Danita Barnes of Roanoke Rapids and Jennifer Jane Oosterwyk and Patricia Jo Caton, both of Greenville. They each wore a dusty apricot taffeta gown featuring a full length skirt with off-the-shoulder, triple-ruffled sleeves.

Flower girls were Ivey Myerling Bramlett of Pollocksville and Dionna Draper of Greenville. They each wore an ivory taffeta gown with a flounce ruffled neckline, full three-quarter length sleeves and an apricot cummerbund.

Best man was Willis R. Sims of East Point, Ga., stepfather of the bridegroom. A reception was held immediately following the ceremony in the church reception hall.

The couple were honored with a pig picking hosted by Mr. and Mrs. Jack Barnes. The parents of the bridegroom hosted an after-rehearsal dinner. The bridesmaids luncheon was given by the bride's mother and sister.

Dear Abby

Lovesick Woman Needs New Doctor

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: To make a long story short, I am in love with my gynecologist. Other than for routine checkups, I keep finding excuses to make an appointment so I can see him. I did have cancer of the uterus, but I had surgery for that and am completely cured now.

I'm divorced and have teen-age children, but I don't know anything about my doctor. One day when I was in his office, we happened to look at each other and our eyes just locked! He didn't look away until I did, and neither of us said anything, but I know it was an electric moment for both of us.

I've been alone for nine years and own my own home. I don't know if he's married or not. He won't offer a word of encouragement during my visits, but he is very friendly and seems to enjoy talking to me. After he looked at me that way, I can't help wondering if there's a chance for me. It says on my chart I am not married, so I'm sure he knows I'm available.

After every appointment, before I leave, he says, "Is there anything you want to ask me?"

Would it be terrible if I said, "Yes. Would you like to see me outside the office?"

GOT A CRUSH ON MY DOCTOR

DEAR GOT: It wouldn't be "terrible," but it would be inappropriate. There's an unwritten law that doctors do not date their patients. If the "crush" becomes too crushing, find another gynecologist. This one is off limits.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 14 years old and I like to talk on the phone a lot with my friends. I want to get a phone of my own so that my parents won't have to yell at me for tying up the line or getting too many phone calls.

I am willing to buy the phone and pay the phone bills myself with the money I earn from baby-sitting, yard work and so on. All of my friends have their own phones, and over half of them bought the phones themselves and pay their own phone bills the same way I want to.

My parents say "No!" Why, Abby? Please tell me why. And if you have any good ideas on how I can change their minds, please tell me.

WANTS MY OWN PHONE

DEAR WANTS: I suspect that your parents are fearful that if you have your own phone you will spend more time talking and less on homework and chores. Try to make a deal with them. Agree to keep your grades at a level that they consider acceptable if you can have your own phone. And if you fall below that level, the phone will be removed without a whimper.

Couple Weds In Outdoor Ceremony

In an outdoor ceremony May 29 at five o'clock in the afternoon, Brenda Diane Baggett became the bride of Randall Lee Page. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Bobby Chandler at the home of the bride.

Mrs. Randall Lee Page

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Neal Baggett of Route 13, Greenville, the bride was given in marriage by her father. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth L. Page of Route 1, Chocowinity.

The bride's honor attendant was Windy Bowen of Greenville. Bridesmaids were Denise Tripp, Tonya and Melissa Baggett, sisters of the bride, and Barbara Hinsley, all of Greenville, Terri Rogerson, sister of the bridegroom, and Julitte Sykes, cousin of the bridegroom, both of Chocowinity. The miniature bride was Jeanning Baggett of Georgia, niece of the bride.

Aaron Page of Ayden, nephew of the bridegroom of Ayden, was ring bearer. The father of the bridegroom served as best man. Ushers included Chip Baggett of Georgia, brother of the bride, Glen and Russell Page of Greenville, brothers of the bridegroom, Carl Branch and Dalton Buck Jr., cousins of the bridegroom, and Stan Clark, all of Chocowinity.

Nuptial music was presented by Pam Bright.

The bride wore a formal gown of white organza over peau de soie designed with an open neckline outlined in re-embroidered chantilly lace beaded with pearls. The empire bodice was overlaid in French chantilly lace and featured medallions of beaded lace that extended to and encircled the waistline. The modified A-line skirt and attached chapel train were accented by a ruffled flounce of crystal pleating edged in chantilly lace and topped by a pick-up overskirt of accordion pleats bordered in re-embroidered chantilly lace. She wore a hat with a waltz length veil in back and carried a bouquet of silk flowers accented with ribbon.

The couple will live near Greenville after a wedding trip to Richmond, Va.

Couple Unites In Marriage

Tommie Pulley Woodard and Curtis Perkins Jr. were married Saturday at 2 p.m. in Proctor Chapel Baptist Church, Rocky Mount, by the Rev. Wray Wheelless.

After a two-week trip in Hawaii, they will make their home in Rocky Mount.

A Raise For Hunt?

It must be tough to be governor when the state Legislature tempts him with a doubling of his salary despite highly publicized money shortages.

It must be even tougher for legislators to even suggest such a measure to Jim Hunt.

For one thing, it leaves lawmakers' intentions very suspect in the minds of our Doubting Thomases ... and we do have them. Does it mean they are intent on legitimizing those already large salary increases they voted themselves and the speaker and lieutenant governor? Does it mean they are actually intent on undermining future Hunt political aspirations by getting him to approve his pay raise while state employees are being denied them, and in some cases being laid off?

Does it mean the lawmakers eye further raids on the state treasury, arguing if the governor can accept a pay raise, they shouldn't worry about just a little bit more plunder?

Governor Hunt properly says he's against the pay raise (but didn't say he'd try to block it); Speaker Liston Ramsey says he'd accept one. Only one "instigator" was identified in the news report, Rep. William Watkins, co-chairman of the House Appropriations Committee; but there are bound to be others behind the scenes.

Their motives are to be questioned.

War Against Civilization

Once again the bullet has been substituted for the political process with the shooting of Israeli Ambassador Shlomo Argov in London last week.

British police quickly made arrests in the case, but the damage to orderly governmental process had been done. The ambassador was critically wounded with a bullet in the head.

Fanatics seem willing to die as they seek what they see in their twisted ways as infamy.

Society has to do all possible to protect its diplomats and public officials against the assassins. And if these killers do succeed in the evil missions, civilization's best defense is to develop other capable leaders to take the places of fallen leaders. It is, after all, a war between civilization and animalism.

NO!—WE THOUGHT THAT GUY'D LOST HIS JOB!

See The Old Uncle Sam

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
GUATEMALA CITY — In the decline of U.S. influence and prestige throughout Latin America, not only is military aid to Guatemala non-existent in the precarious battle against leftist guerrillas but leaders here actually doubt whether Washington's help would be worth the trouble.

U.S. hesitancy over trying to keep Central America's most important country out of the Castro-communist net can be traced to liberal House members and Carter administration holdovers in the State Department. Latin American leaders who danced in the streets in November 1980, when Ronald Reagan was elected, have glumly resigned themselves to the reality that very little has changed.

What Latins view as an exuberantly-insensitive tilt by Secretary of State Alexander Haig toward Britain over the Falklands finally turns Uncle Sam into Uncle Gringo. During a two-week, four-nation reporting trip through Central America, we found anti-communist Latins feeling they must seek their own salvation without help and, hopefully, without interference from Washington.

The prospects are not all bad. El Salvador's new democratically-elected government is winning the guerrilla war. Honduras has its first elected government in 10 years. Unrest grows in Marxist-Leninist Nicaragua. An unbelievably corrupt and brutal military regime in Guatemala has been supplanted by a vastly more honest and decent junta.

Nevertheless, Guatemala is Central America's worst trouble spot. Government plans to clear out some 800 communist guerrillas near the Mexican border in the northwest are impeded by poorly-trained, poorly-equipped troops. The junta would at least like a few U.S. helicopters, but nothing is in prospect.

One reason is the verdict by visiting aides of Reps. Stephen Solarz (N.Y.), Gerry Studds (Mass.) and Tom Harkin (Iowa) that the army still commits human rights violations in the countryside. Could the unpublished judgment of aides to three super-liberal Democrats condemn this important country to communism? Not without help from staffers in the State Department's Latin American division who are holdovers from the Carter administration and maintain its human rights dogmatism.

Actually, sympathetic officials in the U.S. Embassy here wonder whether the aid is worth the kind of congressional scrutiny now threatening retaliation from Washington because El Salvador's elected representatives amended the land reform law. Many Guatemalans feel the same way. Gustavo Anzueto, a thoughtful conservative leader, has proposed seeking military aid from South Africa, Israel and Argentina — but not the U.S.

Honduras wants U.S. military aid to counter the massive public buildup across the border in Nicaragua but is pessimistic, considering Washington's slow pay on economic aid. A high-ranking Honduran official recently wrote a heated letter to the U.S. Embassy noting that a flying visit to Moscow by a Nicaraguan commandante brought $200 million in Soviet aid; one year of negotiations still has not produced a promised $35 million for democratic Honduras.

U.S. support for Britain in the Falklands has created disillusionment throughout Central America about "our big brother." Whatever the logical value, Honduras claim this makes U.S. aid unlikely in a land war against Nicaragua. "I have been anti-communist all my life," one Guatemalan air force officer told us, "but I wonder now whether we can make a deal with Russia."

He will not turn to Moscow. But officials in all four countries told us the next time the gringos ask for a vote at the United Nations, the answer from the Latins will be no. That petty reprisal is a symbolic statement that in the minds of Central Americans committed to democracy and capitalism against a communist offensive, Washington — even under Ronald Reagan — has become part of the problem rather than the solution.

Risks In Untrained

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — Many North Carolina municipalities which have sunk millions of dollars into sewage treatment plants are leaving the operation of these plants to inadequately trained people, the chairman of the state's Environmental Management Commission says. By doing so, they're taking risks with the quality of water released from the plants and with the equipment that cleans the water.

Tom Bradshaw, EMC chairman, told a state conference on water resources recently that training programs are needed to prepare people for work in sewage treatment plants. Bradshaw said a two-year degree program through the technical colleges might be a good approach.

Bradshaw's call for more training of these workers was backed by C.D. Malone, a private environmental engineer who once operated the Winston-Salem sewage treatment plant.

"We can no longer accept that people who are unable to find work elsewhere are suddenly (qualified to be) wastewater treatment operators," Malone told the conference.

Both men said there are many well-qualified people working in sewage treatment plants. "But, on the average, most of our communities don't have as many qualified operators as they need," Bradshaw said.

The equipment used in these plants is highly sophisticated, Bradshaw said. Hiring a man with no background in the technology and then training him on the job doesn't provide him with a real understanding of what is going on in the treatment process. Malone said it is not uncommon to meet a sewage treatment operator with two years of experience who doesn't know what is happening biologically in the treatment process. They may know how to operate the machinery, he said, but they don't understand what is happening.

Malone would like to see operators trained in the micro-biology of the sewage treatment process, in hydraulics, instrumentation and some engineering basics.

The rewards, Bradshaw said, would be plentiful. Cleaner water would come out of the plants. The plants could work to a great capacity thus delaying or eliminating the need for some towns to expand their facilities. The plants would be more secure from damage. Accidents can happen with even the best-trained people. But, when the cost of the plant could run up to $30 million, it is best to have it operated by people who really understand it.

Malone sees another benefit. In some towns, as much as a quarter of the entire municipal utility bill comes from the sewage treatment plant. The entire operating budget can run into the millions annually. "Here's an opportunity to save energy and money." That money, he adds, is all local tax money.

This is not to say boos are running the sewage treatment plants of North Carolina. Many of the workers are extremely versatile. Malone said, and have performed some "real miracles" in keeping plants operating efficiently. The towns do spend a good deal of money sending these people to training sessions, also.

But there is a growing demand for such workers. Private industry must treat its water. And, as in the case of almost every job skill where demand outstrips supply, private industry pays better. Winston-Salem, Malone said, has lost four or five very good people recently to private industry.

In one town, the mayor's official duties include running the sewage plant. The job is too complicated these days for that kind of arrangement, Bradshaw said.

Other Editors Say Embarrassment

(Rocky Mount Telegram)

There has been much talk about how to handle the problem of drunken drivers in North Carolina. A study commission appointed by Gov. Hunt is looking into the matter with the idea of providing suggestions to the General Assembly.

Punishment is the answer. That is being demonstrated in Marshall County, Oklahoma. Drunken drivers caught in Marshall County don't have to tell a judge they are sorry. They have to tell the whole county.

People convicted of drunken driving are required as part of their probation to run advertisements in the local newspaper apologizing to all the residents of the county. The signature of the offender must appear at the bottom of the ad.

Associate District Judge Gary Lumpkin, who started the program, termed it "getting back to basics."

"Sometimes having to apologize is the hardest thing to do. Maybe when you were in school you'd rather take your swats than do it. I think everybody has overlooked the basics in trying to solve a big problem," Lumpkin said.

"There has to be some kind of embarrassment."

Lumpkin handed out his public apology sentence last week and sent the offender to the Madill Record with a copy of the apology. The defendant had just signed the apology in court.

The advertisement, two columns in width and about five inches deep, appeared in the weekly newspaper on the following Thursday.

"I want to apologize to the citizens of Marshall County for driving on a public road of this county while under the influence of intoxicating liquors," it said.

The defendant also had to pay for the ad. Madill Record news editor Wilbert Wiggs said reaction has been positive. "What I've heard is, 'It's about time we went back to a little old-time Western justice,'" he said.

We'll hear that such an approach is simplistic. That's a ploy for dodging the basics involved. Sometimes simple answers are the best answers.

We'll hear that such punishment is "cruel and unusual," Unusual, yes. Effective, yes. Cruel? Is punishment supposed to be otherwise?

Slapping a drunken driver on the wrist in court and fining him a nominal amount solves nothing, does it? Neither is it punishment.

Ghosts From The Past

PARIS — When someone returns to Paris after many years, he has to out up with ghosts from his past. For me these ghosts consisted of the American tourists, who at one time seemed to cover the French capital as far as the eye could see. As I walked along the streets of the city of light this week, I became misty-eyed when I thought back on the days in the '50s when I worked on the "Paris Trib" (now called the International Herald Tribune).

There was a lady tourist who was name-dropping about all the places she had been to — Australia, Tahiti, Hong Kong, India, Brazil. "My," I said to her, "you've traveled a lot."

"Yes," she said happily. "I was extremely lucky. My husband died when I was very young."

And then there was the lady at Fouquet's sidewalk cafe who said to me, "I'm going to Rome. Is the Pope worth seeing?"

On the Rue de Rivoli I recalled some 30 years ago standing next to an American who muttered to me, "Those no-good French S.O.B.'s."

"What happened?" I asked him.

And he replied, "Why should I tell you?"

I saw the ghosts of American tourists everywhere.

There was one friend of mine, a Hollywood writer named Don McGuire, and we used to walk the streets of Paris together, killing time while his wife was shopping. He was bored and always looking for mischief. Once we were at the Arc de Triomphe and he saw a tourist trying to take a picture of the Arc.

He went up to the American and, in an authoritative voice, said, "May I see your passport, please."

The tourist immediately handed him his passport.

McGuire inspected it and then said sternly, "Do you have permission to take a photograph of a French military installation?"

The tourist blubbered, "I didn't know the Arc de Triomphe was a French military installation."

McGuire handed the tourist back his passport and said "Well, ask the next time, dummy."

Tourists who came over to Paris always wanted to know if the French disliked Americans. I discovered when I first arrived in Paris that they didn't like each other, so there was no reason why they should like us.

The worst example of the Frenchman's inhumanity to another Frenchman took place one day at the Place de la Concorde when a French driver in a large Buick tapped the bumper of a Frenchman in a tiny Renault. The Renault owner jumped out and started screaming at what had happened to his car. The Buick owner listened for several minutes to the harangue, then got back in his car, put it into gear and rammed it into the Renault, turning it into an accordion.

The Buick driver then got out and said to the Renault owner, "Now you have something to yell about."

One more trio down memory lane. In the '50s, someone presented the American Cathedral on the Avenue George V with a new set of church bells. The church was so thrilled with the bells they played them every hour. The problem was I lived across the street and got to hate the bells. So I wrote a letter to the Paris Trib mailbag which said, "Dear Sir, My husband works on the metro all night long, and he can't sleep because the American Cathedral keeops ringing its bells. What right do Americans have keeping French citizens awake?" I signed it "Disgusted Parisian Housewife."

This brought on an onslaught of anti-American mail, all sympathizing with the sleepless French metro worker.

It happened at this time that the publisher of the Paris Trib was also on the board of the American Cathedral, and he was getting a great deal of flack from his parishioners. He called in one of the editors and said, "Don't we have any letters for the bells?"

The editor came into the city room and shouted, "We need a letter for the bells."

"You've got it," I said, and sat down at my typewriter and wrote: "Dear Sir, I don't see what all the fuss is about the American Cathedral

NO NEW TRUTH

Some people are convinced that any new truth which comes to their attention and ostensibly promises to make their life more happy and meaningful automatically replaces and cancels out old truths which have meant much to them in the past.

Yet all new manifestations of truth grow out of truths which are old and well-established, just as every new branch of a tree grows out of a larger branch which in turn stems from the trunk of the tree. What we call new truth is usually old truth recently rediscovered. The way to satisfy ourselves that the recent discovery is truth indeed, is by seeing whether or not it fits into old truths which have stood the test of time.

A philosopher has said, "You cannot successfully navigate the future unless you keep always framed beside it a small, clear image of the past." If a thing is really true, it is organically related to all the truth of the universe. — Elisha Douglass

More Foreclosures Looming

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

The high unemployment rate and the shaky housing market are causing thousands of homeowners to fall behind on their mortgage payments and many of them are facing foreclosure — an often-lengthy process which can leave both borrowers and lenders at a loss.

The Mortgage Bankers Association of America said last week that mortgages on at least 100,000 homes were "in the process of foreclosure" as of the end of the first three months of 1982.

The foreclosure rate of just over half a percent was the highest since the group started keeping records in 1953. The numbers don't mean, however, that 100,000 families will lose their homes.

Mark J. Riedy, executive vice president of the bankers' group, whose members "service" or manage mortgages for lenders of all types, said that the term "in the process of foreclosure" covers many situations. It may mean that the lender has filed a first foreclosure notice; or it may mean that the final title transfer is under way.

Riedy said he did not know how many of the homes now in the process of foreclosure will be lost. In the past, he said, homeowners in trouble could sell their homes and pay off the mortgage. Today's economy makes sales more difficult and people who are unemployed over a long period simply fall further behind.

Walter C. Klein Jr., executive vice president of Advance Mortgage Corp., a Michigan-based company which services 185,000 loans in 40 states, said that the traditional pattern shows that about half of all foreclosure procedures are actually completed. The remaining borrowers come up with the back payments or sell their houses.

That may be changing, however. And Klein said the situation varies with location. The Detroit office of Advance, for example, recommended foreclosure on 1.71 percent of the mortgages it serviced in 1981. Almost three-fourths of the recommendations were completed.

Felix Beck, chairman of the board of Margaretten and Co., a national mortgage banker based in Perth Amboy, N.J., said his company does not institute foreclosure proceedings until a homeowner is at least four months delinquent in payments.

State laws affect the time that passes before the initial notice of foreclosure and the final loss of property. In New Jersey, Beck said, it generally takes at least six or seven months.

One of the last formalities before foreclosure is something called a sheriff's sale where the house is put on the block. Anyone can bid.

As a rule, Beck said, the holder of the first or primary mortgage bids an amount equal to the outstanding loan. If there are no other bids — and other bids are rare — title is transferred to the lender.

When the lender finally winds up to the house, it usually is offered for sale through a local real estate broker. In cases where the loan is insured by the Federal Housing Administration or the Veterans Administration, the government will often pay off the lender and take possession of the property.

Klein said it takes an average of seven months to sell a house after the lender has taken title. If the house is sold at a profit, the extra money, after the lender's expenses, goes to the homeowner.

How Tar Heel Senators And Representatives Voted

Roll Call Report Service
WASHINGTON — Here's how area congressmen voted on the fiscal 1983 budget master plans that were on the House floor last week.

THE REPUBLICAN BUDGET This was the alternative backed by the White House, even though floor amendments had added many provisions distasteful to President Reagan. The president and GOP House leaders were particularly upset with an amendment adding Medicare billings at the expense of defense spending. The GOP budget, sponsored by Reps. Robert Michel of Illinois and Delbert Latta of Ohio, continued the Administrations's deep cuts in domestic spending, and it provided the most defense spending and lowest taxes of any of the budget plans before the House. Its projected 1983 deficit was $103.5 billion. The plan was defeated, 192 for and 235 against.

Reps. Eugene Johnston, R-6, James Martin, R-9, James Broyhill, R-10, and William Hendon, R-11, voted "yea."

Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, L. H. Fountain, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Ike Andrews,

D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, Charles Rose, D-7, and W. C. Hefner, D-8, voted "nay."

DEMOCRATS' BUDGET This projected a 1983 deficit of about $105 billion, higher taxes yet lower defense spending that called for by the GOP budget, and higher spending for domestic programs than proposed by the GOP plan. It was defeated by vote of 171 for and 253 against.

Jones, Andrews, Rose and Hefner voted "yea."

Fountain, Whitley, Neal, Johnston, Martin, Broyhill and Hendon voted "nay."

BI-PARTISAN BUDGET Sponsored by Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wisc., and backed mostly by moderates of both parties, this plan offered deeper defense cuts and a lower 1983 deficit ($97.2 billion) than contained in the GOP and Democratic budgets. Its tax increase and domestic cuts fell in between the Republican and Democratic plans. It was rejected, 137 for and 298 against.

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Johnston, Rose, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and Hendon voted "nay."

BLACK CAUCUS BUDGET Sponsor Walter E. Fauntroy, the Democratic delegate from the District of Columbia, said his alternative was weighted heavily toward human needs at the expense of the Pentagon, the very wealthy, and the corporate sector. The Black Caucus budget sought to provide a budget surplus by 1984, primarily by cutting defense spending, closing tax loopholes, and increasing the tax burden on businesses and wealthy individuals. Its projected 1983 deficit of $97.8 billion was the lowest of any of the budget alternatives other than the "no-deficit" budget described below. The Black Caucus budget was defeated, 86 for and 322 against.

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Johnston, Rose, Hefner, Martin and Broyhill voted "nay."

Neal and Hendon did not vote.

BLACK CAUCUS BUDGET Sponsor Walter E. THE LIBERALS' BUDGET This was the budget alternative most concerned with using federal spending to create jobs. It proposed high spending for such public works projects as bridge repairs and sewage plant construction, and it emphasized increased education spending and federal job training programs to help American workers new technological skills that would help the country to compete better in the world economy. To achieve a balanced budget by 1985, it proposed lower defense spending and lesser tax cuts for corporations and the wealthy. Supporter Howard Wolpe, D-Mich., said one premise was that the country cannot withstand "the continued assault upon those within our society who are the most economically vulnerable." The alternative was rejected by a vote of 152 for and 168 against.

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Johnston, Rose, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and Hendon voted "nay."

Neal did not vote.

PAY-AS-YOU-GO This was the most innovative of the several budget plans. It froze spending at 1982 levels, and required that any new program or line item expenditure be financed by higher taxes or spending cuts in the amount of the new outlay. It projected a budget surplus by 1985, on the assumption that an expanding economy would enable the Treasury to increase collections at the same time economy would enable the Treasury to increase collections at the same time outlays remained relatively constant. Sponsor George Miller, D-Calif., called his plan "honest and straightforward" because for Congress to spend more it would have to "go to the American people and ask them to pay the cost of those programs up front." The measure was defeated, 181 for and 225 against.

Jones, Rose and Hefner voted "yea."

Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Johnston, Martin, Broyhill and Hendon voted "yea."

Jones and Andrews voted "nay."

House rejected the plan by a vote of 182 for and 242 against.

Views On Dental Health

Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S. P.A.

GRINDING IN THE NIGHT

An estimated one in 20 adults and three in 20 children unconsciously grind their teeth at night. It is the sound of bruxism. While the noise may disturb spouses or children, it has a far more distressing effect on the sleeper.

Nocturnal grinding can exert thousands of pounds of pressure per square inch on the surfaces of teeth. It can be rough not only on teeth but on the supporting bone, the gums and jaw joint.

For many years, bruxism was attributed to the release of tension from emotional stress. However, many dental authorities today believe that the causes exist in the patient's mouth. Night grinding may be an unconscious effort to correct irregularities of the chewing surfaces of the teeth. Dentists term this a malocclusion. They grind away to eliminate a spot that is too high or to find a comfortable place to fit the upper and lower teeth together.

If you have this nightly grind problem, your first stop should be your dentist's office...before you do any serious damage to your teeth.

Army Reserve Honors Seniors

The U.S. Army Reserve has chosen Rose High seniors Belinda Haselrig and Roger Williams to receive the reserve's "Spirit of Victory" National Scholar-Athlete Award.

The Army Reserve, for the second year in a row, is presenting these awards to the top scholar-athletes in schools across the country this spring. Miss Haselrig and Williams combined 3.692 and 3.636 academic averages respectively, along with outstanding athletic ability, to win the local honors.

Miss Haselrig was on the tennis, basketball and track teams. She was named to All-Conference tennis and is a member of the National Honor Society.

Williams played on the football and baseball teams. He was named to the All-Conference baseball team for three years and was selected the Most Valuable Player in the conference. He was also All-Conference in football.

Russians Pondering Big River Project

NEW YORK (AP) — The Soviet Union may undertake the largest engineering project of all time — a plan to divert the flow of about a dozen rivers from the Arctic Ocean — as early as next year, according to Time magazine.

The diversion would provide fresh water for the Soviet Union's arid regions and its Central Asian republics, Time reports in its current issue.

The plan, if carried out, would take 50 years or more to complete, cover an area larger than Western Europe and displace tens of thousands of people from their homes.

The project would flood millions of acres of land, including tracts of game forest, the magazine said. It would eliminate some towns and villages which date back to the Middle Ages.

Time said the diversion could also drastically alter climate not only in the Soviet Union, but throughout the Northern Hemisphere as far as the United States and Canada.

Supporters of the diversion plan believe it could boost Soviet grain production by 30 million to 60 million metric tons a year, or the equivalent of 18 to 35 percent of the Soviets' current crop.

Officially sanctioned by President Leonid Brezhnev two weeks ago, the first stage of the project, diverting three major northern rivers into the Volga River, could begin as early as next year, Time said.

The rerouting would require the building of 25 dams and numerous pumping stations.

The first northern water should start flowing southward into the Volga through a network of canals and reservoirs by the late 1980s.

Students Help To Raise Funds

The students at North Pitt High School recently participated in a fund drive as a part of the state's "Save the Lighthouse" campaign. Donations were made in homerooms. The homeroom donating the most money received Save the Light t-shirts from Pepsi Cola of Greenville, certificates of participation and a party given by the school.

A total of $192 in nickles and dimes was donated to save the 180-year-old Cape Hatteras Light. John Moore's senior homeroom donated the most money, followed by the junior homeroom of Emory Davis.

Reading Meet At Eastern

A seminar on ways to help a child discover the joy of reading will be held Wednesday at Eastern Elementary School. The seminar, sponsored by the Eastern P.T.A. and Community Schools Director Carolyn Ferebee, will take place in the school's media center from noon to 1 p.m.

Speakers will be Ann Sullivan, librarian at Sadie Saulter Elementary School, and Dr. Nina Mikkelsen of the department of elementary education, School of Education, East Carolina University.

Interested parents are encouraged to attend and to bring a bag lunch to eat during the seminar hour.

By The Associated Press
North Carolinians have not seen too many sunny skies lately, but that may change — at least for today and Tuesday.

Most of North Carolina will be sunny this morning, except for the northeast where there will be some cloudiness and a chance of a shower or two. During the afternoon, skies are going to become partly cloudy as temperatures climb into the 80s.

Fair weather is on tap tonight with lows in the 50s and 60s. Good weather for most outdoor activities will continue Tuesday under mostly sunny skies with afternoon readings in the 80s to low 90s.

Winds along the coast will be northerly at 10 to 20 knots today except 15 to 20 knots over the extreme north. Tonight the winds are going to shift to the northeast at 10 to 15 knots then become variable around 10 knots Tuesday.

Attended State Close Up Event

Four students from North Pitt High School attended the first session of North Carolina Close Up in Raleigh.

Lisa Stancill, Judson Joyner, Eddie Ballard and Keith Coltrain had earlier participated in the local Pitt County Close Up, which a year ago was the first such program undertaken in the United States. Social studies teacher Eddie Tyer accompanied the students during the three day session.

The purpose of Close Up is to allow students to meet and talk with government officials, thus learning the operations of the state and county in a personal manner.

sure system will be drifting closer to North Carolina and the low is going to be moving slowly out to sea. As a result, there will be plenty of sunshine and warm temperatures statewide.

Skies over North Carolina were generally clear Sunday although some cloudiness persisted over the northern mountains and in the northeastern corner of the state. Radar indicated some light showers stretched from eastern Virginia to the coastal waters along the northern Outer Banks.

Pre-dawn temperatures were in the 50s at most inland reporting stations

Energy Retreat Set For June 12

An energy retreat for youth ages 6-12 will be held June 12 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Greenville Middle School on Arlington Boulevard, sponsored by the Pitt County 4-H.

Interested youth do not have to be 4-H members to participate, according to Dale Panero, Pitt Extension 4-H Agent. Workshops will include learning activities in nature conservation (endangered species), electric energy management, solar energy and soil and water conservation.

A "Super Energy Award" will be presented to the winners of the energy contest planned for the retreat. Games and activities are also planned, said Ms. Panero.

Those interested in participating should call the 4-H office at 752-2934, ext. 362, by June 11 to pre-register, she said.

while 60s persisted along the coast. These pleasant readings followed highs Sunday that were in the 70s and 80s statewide. The warm spot Sunday afternoon was Jacksonville with a high of 84. At Canton the mercury could climb no higher than 72.

The persistent clouds over northeastern North Carolina were caused by a low pressure system that was centered off the middle Atlantic coast. The low was drifting very slowly to the northeast, so its effects will still be evident today. There may even be a few showers over the northern coastal area and outer banks, but any rain that does occur will be brief.

The rest of the state is coming under the influence of a high pressure system that stretched early today from the Great Lakes south to the Gulf of Mexico. The northerly wind flow caused by the combined circulation between the high and offshore low pressure system will bring rather dry air into the state. This will result in plenty of sunshine although by afternoon some cloudiness is likely to form over northern and eastern sections.

Over 80,000 Join Peace Rally

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer
PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — A sellout crowd of more than 80,000 packed the Rose Bowl for a marathon rally and rock concert to hear dozens of Hollywood's biggest names sing and speak against the nuclear arms race.

Braving hot sun and nighttime chill, the audience for the Peace Sunday rally, on the eve of the opening of today's United Nations disarmament conference, was rewarded with entertainment by a star-studded cast that included Dan Fogelberg, Linda Ronstadt, Stevie Nicks, Stephen Stills,

Graham Nash, Stevie Wonder, Joan Baez and surprise guest Bob Dylan. Many invited the audience to sing or chant along, and Wonder set the stadium ringing with the cry, "We demand an end to war."

Between songs, there were scores of brief speeches by anti-nuclear activists, religious leaders such as the Rev. Jesse Jackson, and dozens of film and television stars including Ed Asner, Martin Sheen, Jane Fonda, Howard Hesseman, Ellen Brennan, Margot Kidder, Shelly Duvall, Michael Douglas and LeVar Burton.

President Reagan's daughter, Patti Davis, also gave a brief speech that avoided mention of her father, who was harshly criticized by several other speakers.

Several other observances were held Sunday around the world to focus on the U.N. conference. More than 100,000 demonstrators jammed Hyde Park in London, with smaller rallies in Antwerp, Belgium; and Copenhagen, Denmark.

In New York, Cardinal Terence Cooke prayed for peace around the world during Sunday mass at St. Patrick's Cathedral. At the Episcopal Cathedral of St. John the Divine, Coretta Scott King — widow of slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. — urged the United States and Soviet Union to end the arms race.

Organizers of the 11-hour Rose Bowl show had sold fewer than 60,000 tickets at the start of the weekend and were elated at the last-minute turnout. Police estimated 20,000 people who had hoped to buy tickets were turned away.

"I think it's great that the Southern California area responded to this," said rock star Graham Nash, a member of the Peace Sunday executive committee. "The event is a bigger star than any of the stars."

Police Sgt. Jerry Schultz said there were 26 arrests at the rally — eight for illegal vending and 18 for intoxication.

Paramedic Jeff Sadowsky estimated that 200 people were treated at two medical emergency stations, most for "too much alcohol and too much sun." Fewer than half a dozen people had to be hospitalized.

Speaking to reporters backstage, Miss Davis admitted that it is sometimes awkward for her to share a stage with outspoken critics of her father. She added, however, that "there's no one that wants peace more than my father does," and said she and President Reagan differed only on how disarmament should ultimately be achieved.

Miss Baez noted that she had been taking part in peace marches "since I was 14, and I see more hope now than I did in all those years because for some reason the American public has come to realize that we are living on the brink of death."

Tickets to the event cost $12.50. The proceeds will be divided between the two major co-sponsoring organizations: the Alliance for Survival and the Interfaith Council for the Year of Shalom.

Feel Tobacco Program Will Satisfy Critics

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Several North Carolina congressmen say a House bill containing a set of changes that would satisfy critics of the federal tobacco program may be introduced this week.

"I don't believe it will be subject to the kind of fight we had last year, mainly because we are complying with the request to bring a package forward that has no cost to the taxpayer," said U.S. Rep. Charles Whitley, D-N.C.

Rep. Charles Rose, D-N.C., agreed. "I feel confident about it because we've answered the criticisms that were lodged against us in the first place," Rose added.

The package of changes will eventually alter the character of such basic tobacco canons as lease and transfer and allotment ownership.

At the heart of the changes is a phrase called "risk sharing." If the package wins Congressional approval, only people who have shared in the financial risk of growing tobacco once in the last three years will be able to purchase allotments.

Congressional supporters haven't arrived at a definition of risk sharing. But Rose said it probably will include two requirements: a minimum 20 percent investment in the entire crop, from planting to harvesting, and a proposal that the individual sharing in the risk must be paid after the tobacco has been marketed.

Those changes would differ sharply from the current, widespread practice of cash-renting tobacco allotments in which the quota owner, not necessarily a farmer, rents his acreage to a grower and receives payment before his crop is planted.

Tobacco's critics have described the existing allotment rent arrangement as feudal and a retirement system.

Among the proposed changes is a provision — already drawing criticism from some North Carolinians — to make risk sharing a part of the inheritance of tobacco quotas. The quotas are privileges given by the government to grow a certain amount of tobacco on a specific tract of land. Quotas have been held on the same land since the 1930s.

Tobacco supporters predict the risk-sharing idea will mean a gradual end to cash rents — one of the most visible targets of tobacco enemies and a practice that involves 75,000 North Carolina allotment owners.

Allotment ownership eventually will pass from the hands of people who cash-rent to farmers who grow tobacco or to people who share the risk through substantial investment in the crop, leaf supporters say.

Another proposed change, more popular among farmers, requires growers to pay a 1-to-3-cent assessment per pound of tobacco to growers' cooperatives — a move to build a reserve fund that would prevent financial losses and guarantee full repayment of any outstanding loans from the Commodity Credit Corporation.

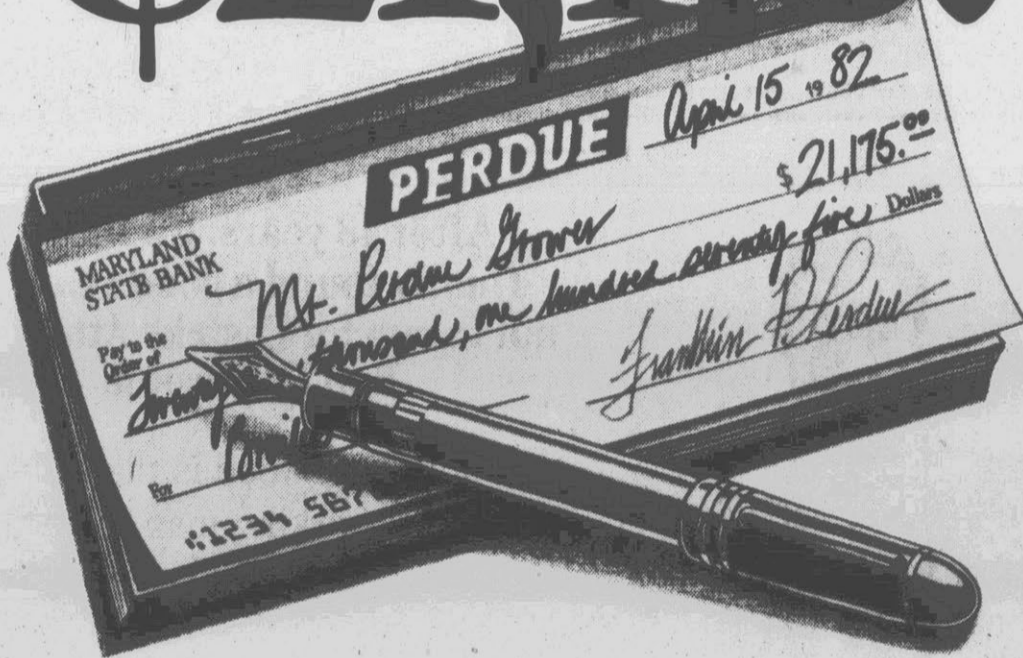

Other issues in the package include giving the secretary of agriculture the authority to adjust price support increases, provided the increase is at least 65 percent of what the existing formula requires.

Lee grew up in Florence, S.C., where he excelled in athletics in high school. He attended a small junior college in North Carolina and College in Charleston, S.C. He spent a year in Vietnam in the U.S. Marine Corps. Upon completing military service, Lee returned to a society that had changed drastically. This was during the late 60's when social turmoil was raging and many of Lee's friends had turned to drugs. Lee began experimenting with drugs and became a junkie with a steady diet of heroin, morphine and speed.

On December 26, 1973, while reading a Bible he had received as a Christmas present, he realized that Jesus was the answer to all of his problems. Immediately he was saved and delivered from drug addiction with no withdrawals whatsoever. He later joined the staff of the Nicky Cruz Home for Boys in Florence, S.C., working with alcoholics and drug addicts, witnessing on the streets, in bars and in jails. Many were saved, delivered, and healed as a result of his efforts.

In November, 1974, Lee married and shortly thereafter he and his wife, Jean, moved to Dallas, Texas, to attend Christ For The Nations Bible Institute. During that time, Lee and his wife became Youth Directors of Wynwood Presbyterian Church. After graduating from Christ For The Nations, Lee became Associate Pastor at Living Faith Christian Center in Myrtle Beach, S.C., where he helped establish a two-year Bible College.

Lee moved to Charleston, S.C., where he founded and pastored New Joy Fellowship (church). Presently, he and his wife are living in Whiteville, N.C. Lee now pastors Living Word Christian Center, a fast-growing full gospel church located in Chadbourne, N.C.

Commodity Group Push Their Own Export Plans

By BOB FICK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Commodity groups, which consider expansion of U.S. farm exports a key to agriculture's economic recovery, are bolstering their own foreign market development programs, their leaders say.

But they also say full development of America's export potential rests with increased government credit to foreign buyers at affordable interest rates, mainly through the Agricultural Export Credit Revolving Fund.

Agriculture Secretary John Block, although saying he supports the concept, has refused to endorse federal financing of the fund because of the government's budget woes. The commodity groups say at least $1 billion should be put into the fund next year to augment their own increasing efforts to expand overseas sales.

"American farmers know that demand development will be a key to boosting depressed commodity prices with which they are now trying to cope," says Darwin Stolte, president of the U.S. Feed Grains Council.

Figures compiled by the U.S. Agricultural Export Development Council show that from 1971 to 1981 producers and others with interests in farm exports nearly tripled their financial commitment to market development, pumping more than $51 million into the effort last year.

The money is used for promotion and advertising programs, trade fairs, educational services for potential foreign buyers and various kinds of exhibits. The groups spending it say increased foreign sales bolster domestic market prices, thereby increasing currently-depressed farm income and reducing the need for federal price supports that are now adding hundreds of millions of dollars to the budget deficit.

As export sales gobbled up 60 percent of U.S. wheat, rice and cotton, 53 percent of the soybeans and nearly a third of the corn, receipts from foreign buyers exceeded $43 billion last year.

But while the industry has been significantly increasing the resources it commits to market expansion, the government's commitment has risen at a slower rate while critical federal credit programs have been curtailed, according to the council, a coalition of the commodity organizations.

As a result, the United States, through all sources, is spending only about one-tenth of 1 percent of agricultural export value on market development, the council says. That's less than a third of the average commitment of America's eight principal export competitors.

And this year, the value of U.S. farm exports is expected to decline for the first time since efforts to significantly expand foreign sales began 13 years ago.

"Our competitors, in spite of current bargain-basement prices, are making every effort to step up their production and export sales," says Winston Wilson, president of U.S. Wheat Associates Inc.

An intensified federal commitment to foreign market development would help counter that competition, and Block has traveled the world in the past year trying to drum up buyers for the burgeoning stockpile of U.S. commodities.

But the commodity group officials say many sales are being lost today because of a lack of reasonable credit.

"The greatest potential growth exists in the moderate-income nations of the world such as Korea, Indonesia, Turkey, Morocco and those of Eastern Europe," says Jeffrey Gain, executive director of the American Soybean Association.

"While these moderate income nations desperately need and want our soybeans and products, their lack of foreign exchange makes it impossible for them to import their needs," Gain says.

Although credit is available through some federal programs and from private lenders, the interest rate is substantial, usually in excess of 15 or 16 percent, Wilson says, and "many countries find they just can't afford the high interest."

Putting the Agricultural Export Credit Revolving Fund to work, Wilson and others say, would ease that problem at no taxpayer cost since loans from the fund would carry an interest rate at the cost of money to the U.S. government, usually several percentage points lower than otherwise available.

"It's time the government recognizes export loans are not just a budget outlay, but an investment in our economy," Gain says.

Pitt Co. Dumps Snow Hill, 11-3

A Staff Report
Pitt County, behind Emmett Walsh's four runs batted in and a five-run fourth inning, opened its 1982 American Legion season with an 11-3 win over Snow Hill Sunday afternoon.

the top of the fourth thanks to three walks and an error by Gay, but Pitt County regained the lead for good in the fourth when it scored five runs. Terry Locust walked to open the inning, stole second and went to third on a wild pitch. 76ers Alive But Still Not Well seventh and deciding game would be here Thursday. The key to the Philadelphia survival victory was the ineffectiveness of 7-foot-2 Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, and a 76ers' defense described as obsessed by Lakers coach Pat Riley.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia 76ers took the first step in mission improbable. The 76ers, down 1-3 in their best-of-seven series against the Los Angeles Lakers for the National Basketball Association championship, routed the Lakers 135-102 Sunday to stay alive.

Riley said, "I've never made any excuses and I won't start now. You get a man in foul trouble and he can't play his game. It makes a difference."

shots, six scored in double figures, four over 20. Andrew Toney, the prolific scoring 6-3 guard, led the 76ers with 31 points. He shot 13 for 18 from the field. Julius Erving, blanked in the first period when he missed his first seven shots, wound up with 23 — 18 in the second half.

"It was Philadelphia's last chance. You knew what their motivation was. We played a good game until the third period. Then they became obsessed."

Wilander Among Those Surprised By French Victory

PARIS (AP) — Perhaps no one was more surprised at the result of the French Open title match than Swede Mats Wilander, a 17-year-old tennis sensation whose triumph over Guillermo Vilas has made him the tournament's youngest men's champion.

Open champion. Borg, who was not competing in this year's event, won his first of six French crowns in 1974 six days after his 18th birthday. Wilander celebrates his 18th birthday on Aug. 22.

'Negativism' Spurs Stadler On To Win

of holes in there, six, seven and eight, there was a lot of negativism in there. "Oh, come on, you can choke it, you've done it before. These kind of things, I've heard them before. I heard that about 30 or 40 times on the front nine. It's fine, if they want to say it, they're going to say it. I'm not going to stop them. That kind of got me going, I think more than anything, I kind of turned, and under my breath, said a few things and went on," he said.

Stadler, who fired a closing-round 69 and posted a 275-13 under-par for the 72 holes over the Congressional Country Club course, said that the pro-Nicklaus crowd pumped him up after he had bogeyed the eighth hole. "It got me a little more excited today than I have been in the past. You're never going to have everybody pulling for one guy or the other. Obviously, you're going to have a lot of people pulling for Jack more than anybody else, or Arnold (Palmer) than anybody else."

Friend's Push Helps Allison Capture Pocono Win

LONG POND, Pa. (AP) — Bobby Allison figured a friend in need was a friend — indeed.

Kim Richmond thought Dave Marcis had forgotten whose side he was supposed to be on, and the Pettys went home discouraged and disgusted.

All played major roles Sunday in Allison's victory in the Van Scoy Diamond Mines 500 stockcar race at Pocono International Raceway.

"That's what friends are for," Allison said of a push he got from Marcis just as he was running out of gas with 37 laps remaining in the 200-lap event, at the 2.5-mile superspeedway.

That push of more than a mile to his pit kept the 44-year-old Hueytown, Ala., driver from suffering a fate that befell Petty nine laps earlier while they were hooked up in a tight draft that had consigned the rest of the contenders for a run for third place.

Richmond, who wound up a soundly beaten second in a bid to win the first NASCAR Grand National event of his career, was the victim of the push. Had Allison's hopes been permitted to die the way Petty's had when his car ran out of gas, Richmond might have won the race.

"As for Marcis pushing Bobby, no comment," said Richmond. "Both 71 (Marcis) and 2 (Richmond) say S-T-A-C-Y."

His reference was to the sponsorship of both cars by Kentucky businessman J.D. Stacy, whose name is carried by seven being campaigned on the Winston Cup circuit.

"Jim Stacy has never told me to help another of his cars to win," said Marcis.

The Stacy drivers do not run as teammates.

Petty and his son Kyle do, however. But the 22-year-old son of stockcar racing's winningest driver could not get to his father until Richard had limped halfway around the track and fallen out of contention.

"It's smarter pushing a slow car off the track than running in the rain," said Kyle, who pushed his father into the pits as rain fell on an event it controlled throughout the afternoon.

Rain, which had washed out Saturday's qualifying session, played havoc with the race. The race began under caution and stayed there through 28 laps, partly because drivers kept spinning out in the treacherous first turn.

Included was polesitter Terry Labonte, who spun out on the 18th lap and watched the rest of the field circle once while he was stuck in the infield mud.

"I couldn't keep up with Allison or Petty," he said in shrugging off the spin. "We were lucky to finish fifth after we got a lap down."

"I say we were lucky to finish," explained Harry Gant, who sustained front-end damage in one of the early spins and hung on to finish fourth behind Benny Parsons.

Apparently seventh-place finisher Richard Petty, winless this year, felt anything but lucky. He was forced after the race to break up a shouting and pushing match between his brother and crew chief, Maurice, and NASCAR starter Harold Kinder.

"They jumped the flag," Richard Petty said in referring to one of seven restarts necessitated by the caution that slowed Allison's speed to 113.572 mph.

Having lost opportunities to win earlier when he dropped from the lead in races flagged by the rain in Richmond and Atlanta, Petty ran first or second most of the day, leading 13 times for 73 laps in a race that saw 44 lead changes among 11 drivers. But his stall had cost him two laps and made him an also-ran by the time the race reached its final rain-induced yellow for the last four laps.

Allison, who pocketed $25,500 of the $250,525 purse after wheeling his Buick Regal into the winner's circle, admitted he had asked Marcis for a push because he realized during a 30-minute rain delay that he was about to run out of gas.

"I gave Dave a motion with my hand," he said. "I guess I can smile and say nice things now."

Then he flashed a $5,000 diamond ring the sponsor's gift to the winner.

Maine Blanks Cal-St. In CWS

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Third-ranked Cal-State Fullerton was shut out for a second straight time and fourth-ranked Oklahoma State survived a scoring battle with South Carolina in elimination baseball action at the College World Series here Sunday night.

Maine blanked Fullerton, 6-0, on Joe Johnson's four-hitter to send the Titans home with a 51-22 record. Oklahoma State held off seventh-ranked South Carolina, 10-8, in the nightcap to end the Gamecocks' season at 45-13.

Maine, 33-13, now advances to meet the loser of Tuesday's Texas-Stanford contest at 8:10 p.m. CDT Wednesday.

Oklahoma State, 57-15, faces the loser of Monday night's Miami-Wichita State game at 5:10 p.m.

Maine's win was a face-saving necessity, according to Coach John Winkin.

"I think this game gives us the credibility that some think we lack," he said. "I've read some criticism about the regional selections and I think all of us felt we had the finger pointed in our direction."

The Black Bears never allowed a Fullerton runner past second base while scratching out a pair of runs in the first inning for all the difference Johnson needed.

Wichita State's Bryan Oelkers also blanked the Titans 7-0 on a five-hitter Friday night.

"We used Wichita State's game plan," said Winkin. "That was to pitch to a spot. We found Fullerton's hitters get frustrated if you keep throwing to that (outside corner) spot and that's what we did. Joe did exactly what he was supposed to do."

"I hope you put credit where it belongs, on the young men who pitched two outstanding games against us," said Fullerton Coach Augie Garrido. "That's a good ball club that's been shutout twice."

Oklahoma State, whipped by No. 1-ranked Texas 9-1 on Saturday, made things happen offensively against South Carolina, according to Coach Gary Ward. The Cowboys scored four runs in each of the third and fourth innings on two-run hits from Jim Traber, Stan Baughn and Dale Rath.

"Our offense controlled the tempo of the game for us all night," said Ward. "Once about every 75 games or so you'll have one of those games like we had the other night when the wheels fall off."

Oklahoma State had five errors against the Longhorns and managed only five hits off Texas pitcher Roger Clemens.

"I thought we were a better offensive ball club than we showed against Texas," Ward said. "Clemens might have had something to do with that but we did a much better job tonight."

The Cowboys jumped ahead 8-0 but the Gamecocks bounced back when OSU pitcher Gary Kanwisher walked the bases loaded and John Sullivan lined an opposite-field homer in the South Carolina fifth. An error and another walk followed before Greg Morhardt hammered a three-run homer over the 370-foot sign in right to cut the lead to 8-7.

Dooley, Others Claim A 'Major' Win With Vote

DALLAS (AP) — Vince Dooley doesn't know whether college football coaches are cheating more than ever. He does know that more violations are being uncovered by the NCAA because it has increased the size of its enforcement staff.

The Georgia coach and his colleagues from College Football Association schools won what they termed a major victory Sunday.

Delegates to the CFA's sixth annual meeting representing 61 of the nation's major football schools — except the Big Ten and Pacific-10 Conferences — voted unanimously for a proposal that a coach found guilty of serious violations of NCAA rules be suspended for at least one year without pay.

"I don't know that there's ever been a forum for that kind of expression by coaches," Dooley said.

The coaches' resolution must be drafted as legislation for the NCAA's annual convention next January. It also recommends that an athlete who knowingly accepts illegal inducements be stripped of all further eligibility, although that part may be modified.

According to Dooley, the resolution "recommends that a coach be suspended for at least one year without pay for any of the following violations — illegal cash payments, gifts, loans, annuities, sale of players' tickets or other violations of a deliberate or extremely serious nature."

Delegates at the close of the CFA meeting also voted to stop further mandatory financing of an antitrust suit brought by the Universities of Oklahoma and Georgia that begins today in Oklahoma City federal court.

The plaintiffs challenge the NCAA over control of football television rights and would keep pro scouts off campuses unless scouting combines hold their pre-draft evaluation camps on weekends rather than school days.

If successful, the lawsuit would overturn what the NCAA claims is its right to sell regular season football TV rights for all its members in one package. This fall, the NCAA begins a $263.5 million four-year deal with ABC and CBS, plus a $17.6 million two-year supplemental prime-time package with Turner Broadcasting System of Atlanta.

Greenville Wins Pair

ASKEVILLE — Greenville used a three-hitter by Marty Varner in the first game and a superb five-inning-plus relief job by Dave Bishop in the second to sweep a double-header from Askewville Sunday in the Tri-County Adult Hardball League.

Varner's three-hitter paced Greenville to a 6-2 victory in the first game and Bishop's 12-strike out, no-hit effort in the second game sparked a 2-0 victory for Greenville.

Greenville is now 11-1 and leads the conference.

Mike Williams was four for four in the first game with a solo home run and was two for three with an RBI in the second to pace Greenville in hitting.

Greenville scored twice in the third and sixth in the opener to put the game away. Williams' homer came in the fifth.

Varner struck out eight and walked two in capturing the win.

In the second game, Danny Varner started but was forced to leave in the second with a pulled back muscle. Bishop came on to strike out 12 and not allow a hit over the final five innings.

Askewville got only one hit in the second game — off Varner.

Williams' single scored a run in the first and Greenville added another run in the second for the win.

Greenville returns to action Sunday when it travels to Bear Grass.

tage before coming up with a bogey. After a par, he picked up two more birdies while Nicklaus made par, to take a six-shot edge.

"I didn't hit the ball as well as I did the last two days, but I made everything happen and nobody really made a substantial run at me early which didn't hurt the cause any," he said.

Stadler said he believes the turning point came after he bogeyed No. 8 and came into No. 9 with a five-stroke lead.

"I hit a shot about 6 feet above the pin," he said. "Jack was about 20 feet away. He hit what looked like a perfect putt, but it spun out and didn't go in. I didn't hit a very good putt and it took a little bound left and just dribbled in the right side of the hole. The way the putts were hit, it should have been a two-shot swing. Jack should have made his and I should have missed mine."

Kupchak Faces 2nd Operation

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Forward Mitch Kupchak of the Los Angeles Lakers will undergo a second operation to repair ligament damage in his left knee this week, the Los Angeles Times reported in its Monday edition.

The Times also quoted a Lakers' source as saying it is doubtful that Kupchak will be able to play at all next season.

The source was also quoted as saying that other than another operation, Kupchak's only option was retirement.

The operation will be performed Wednesday at Centinela Hospital in nearby Inglewood, the Times said.

Kupchak injured his knee early in the second quarter of a game against the San Diego

Clippers last Dec. 19, suffering a broken bone along with cartilage and ligament damage.

Shortly after the injury, the Lakers seemed optimistic that Kupchak would return late in the season. However, as time passed, it became obvious that the 6-foot-10 player would not return. Apparently, the ligaments did not heal properly.

Kupchak, who signed a seven-year contract worth an estimated $5.6 million with the Lakers after coming to Los Angeles in a trade from the Washington Bullets, averaged 14.3 points and 8.1 rebounds in 26 games before being injured.

He played five years with the Bullets after attending the University of North Carolina.

Swan Comes To Rescue As Mets Edge Cincinnati

By The Associated Press
Randy Jones came down with the flu and the New York Mets' pitching staff needed a shot in the arm.

Enter Craig Swan.

"That Swan pitched super," Mets Manager George Bamberger said after the right-hander won his first game as a starter since June 11, 1980 in Sunday's 6-3 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

"He got himself in jams, then reached back and got a little bit extra."

Swan, called on by Bamberger at the last minute to replace the ailing Jones, pitched six innings and scattered eight hits to win his fourth game in five decisions. He pitched tough when he had to, stranding a total of seven Cincinnati runners in the fourth, fifth and sixth innings.

Swan borrowed a page Sunday from Tom Seaver, the former Mets' ace.

"You learn from Seaver. He would throw hard, but he would throw harder with men on base," Swan said. "That's a good lesson to learn."

Ron Hodges belted a three-run homer in the third inning and Joel Youngblood added a solo shot in the eighth to help the Mets break a four-game losing streak.

Tom Hausman worked 22-3 innings in relief of Swan, then yielded to Neil Allen in the ninth. The Mets' top reliever struck out Mike Vail with two men on base to earn his 14th save.

Lollar his first loss of the season.

Lollar, 5-1, yielded a leadoff single in the ninth to Lee Lacy, who had struck out in three previous at-bats. Bill Madlock sacrificed Lacy to second and Jason Thompson was intentionally walked before Pena followed with his game-winning hit.

Kent Tekulve, 3-1, who pitched the Pirates out of a no-out, bases-loaded jam in the ninth, gained the victory. Lollar, who struck out nine, lost for the first time since Sept. 16, 1981, a span over which he was 6-0.

Giants 5, Cubs 3

Reliever Greg Minton saved San Francisco's third straight victory over Chicago and Duane Kuiper doubled and scored on Jim Wohlford's sacrifice fly in the seventh to snap a 3-3 tie as the Giants beat the Cubs.

Kuiper, pinch-hitting for pitcher Renie Martin, 1-3, belted a fly ball that became entrapped in the vines in Chicago's Wrigley Field and was ruled a double. He moved to third on a groundout and scored on Wohlford's sacrifice fly off Randy Martz, 4-5.

The series sweep was the Giants' first of the season. Minton picked up his ninth save by blanking the Cubs in the ninth inning.

Expos 6, Braves 3

Gary Carter and Chris Speier each hit RBI singles in the eighth as Montreal broke a 3-3 tie and went on to beat Atlanta. Carter's single off Larry McWilliams, 2-3, scored Andre Dawson with the tie-breaking run before Speier's base hit gave the Expos a 5-3 lead.

The Expos had tied the game 3-3 in the sixth on Tim Wallach's two-out homer, his seventh of the season.

Jeff Reardon, 3-0, was the winner with three innings of one-hit pitching.

Astros 7, Phillies 6

Pinch-hitter Danny Heep drove home two runs with a single in the ninth and Phil Garner's infield hit scored the winning run as Houston rallied to beat Philadelphia.

The Astros trailed 6-4 entering the ninth, but pinch hits by Dickie Thon and Alan Knicely set the stage for Heep's two-run single off Warren Brusstar, 2-2. Heep took second on a single by Terry Puhl, took third on a grounder by Ray Knight and scored the winning run when Brusstar fielded Garner's slow roller and threw wildly past first base. Vern Ruhle, 4-3, was the winner.

Howser Watches K.C. Pound Yanks

By The Associated Press
By the end of the sixth inning, a lot of fans in New York were chanting "Let's Go, Mets!"

The problem was, they were Yankee fans.

By the end of the sixth inning, the Yankees' problem was Kansas City's 14-0 lead.

Some time after Kansas City's 14-1 victory Sunday, Royals' Manager Dick Howser was relaxing in his office when the phone rang. Without missing a beat, Howser, who used to manage the team in the other clubhouse, reached for the receiver and, smiling at his own joke, said: "Sorry, Joe, I'm on the other end now."

It wasn't Steinbrenner calling, of course. He may have been busy on the other phone, though, with Gene Michael.

than a 2-1 game. Losing 2-1 is more frustrating."

Royals starter Vida Blue pitched six innings of 2-hit ball. The Yanks' run came on Butch Wynegar's eighth-inning homer off Grant Jackson.

Aikens had five hits, including three doubles, and drove in four runs. George Brett had four hits, including a homer, an Hal McRae and John Wathan drove in three runs apiece.

Detroit right-hander Dan Petry was looking forward to a pitching duel with Seattle's Gaylord Perry. The only problem was, Perry wasn't around long enough.

The Tigers chased Perry with a six-run first inning, three scoring on Lance Parrish's double. And Petry pitched a three-hitter.

"It's nice to have a big lead. And I wanted to have a good game against him because he's pitched so well," Petry said of Perry. "But it is kind of a shame that it happened so quick."

Red Sox 5, Angels 1

Rick Miller broke a tie with a single in a two-run seventh-inning and Gary Alenson hit a two-run homer in the ninth as Boston saddled the Angels with their seventh consecutive loss.

Mark Clear bailed winner Bob Ojeda out of a bases-loaded, one-out jam in the seventh inning and pitched 2-3 innings of two-hit, three-strikeout, no-walk relief for his 10th save.

Orioles 7, Twins 5

Baltimore's Eddie Murray was wondering what Twins reliever Ron Davis might throw him in the 11th inning with one out and one on. He guessed right on the first pitch and put it over the Metrodome wall.

"He threw me a changeup in the ninth and I hit it off the end of my bat," Murray said, "so I kind of figured he'd give me a fastball."

The Orioles nearly put it away in the top of the ninth on Terry Crowley's pinch-homer, but a triple by Kent Hrbek and Jesus Vega's sacrifice fly in the bottom of the ninth prolonged the Twins' agony.

NCSU Sweeps Two From UNC

RALEIGH (AP) — Tracy Woodson went 6-for-7 and collected 8 RBIs Sunday to lead North Carolina State to a doubleheader sweep of North Carolina in North State Summer League baseball action.

Woodson cracked a grand slam home run to highlight a 13-run third inning as the Wolfpack took a 19-4 victory. In the nightcap, he smacked a two-run shot to pace N.C. State to a 6-2 triumph.

It was all Pope needed. Pope did not allow a Snow Hill runner past third all night en route to the win.

No one for either team had more than one hit. Wilson managed just five hits off Snow Hill pitcher Ritchie Chase.

It wasn't Steinbrenner calling, of course. He may have been busy on the other phone, though, with Gene Michael.

The Royals could do virtually no wrong against the Yanks, pounding Mike Morgan and three relievers for 22 hits.

"When a club hits .290-something," Howser said of the Royals' .295 batting average, "we're going to score runs."

"That's just a good old-fashioned butt-kicking," said the Yanks' relief ace, Goose Gossage, who never left the bullpen. "It's embarrassing to lose like that. But as a player, not a fan, you'd rather lose like

Wilson Slips Past Snow Hill By 2-0

Wilson doubled home both runners and Brant Pope threw a four-hitter en route to a 2-0 victory over Snow Hill Saturday evening in an American Legion baseball game.

The game was scoreless through 5 1/2 innings, but Wilson broke through with two runs in the sixth to take the lead.

Pope, Wilson's #9 hitter, walked to open the sixth and Don Doster followed with a single. Then, with two outs and a 3-2 count, Barnes doubled to

Watson Races To Grand Prix Win

DETROIT (AP) — John Watson knows you aren't supposed to be able to pass on a narrow, twisting road circuit like the one constructed for the first Detroit Grand Prix.

But, pass he did, charging from the 17th spot on the starting grid to victory Sunday, a triumph that vaulted him into the lead in the world championship point standings.

The race, which was stopped for about 45 minutes after six laps because of an accident that took out two cars, featured just three leaders — pole-sitter Alain Prost, Keke Rosberg and Watson.

But there was plenty of action to entertain the more than 75,000 people who surrounded the 2.5-mile, 20-turn circuit, threading its way around the Renaissance Center in downtown Detroit.

Watson, a 36-year-old native of Northern Ireland, who now lives in England, still was running 14th when the race was restarted on lap seven.

But, by lap 31 his Marlboro-sponsored McLaren MP-4B racer, was fifth, and the 10-year veteran of Grand Prix racing moved into second, behind Rosberg, on lap 40.

"I was surprised I was able to pass so much," Watson said. "I was able to brake a lot and still get in good position to pass."

"Sometimes, when you get the momentum of passing, you can go through a lot of cars, and that's what I seemed to do."

Prost, who had led by more than eight seconds in the early going, fell off the pace because of a fuel pump problem in his turbocharged Renault that eventually relegated the Frenchman to a 12th-place finish.

Rosberg, of Finland and the Williams team, took over first place on the 24th lap and quickly built a lead of 24 seconds. But Watson began to gain steadily when Rosberg lost his second and third gear.

Watson zipped into the lead on lap 42 and went unchallenged the rest of the way, beating American expatriate Eddie Cheever's Ligier across the finish line by a solid 15.726 seconds.

It was the best finish so far for Cheever, a 25-year-old born in Phoenix, Ariz., and raised in Italy.

The winner averaged 78.2 mph for the race that was scheduled to run 75 laps, but was cut to 62 by the slow speeds and the Formula One time limit of two hours.

Watson got nine points for the victory — his second of the season — giving him 26. That left him with a six-point margin over Ferrari's Didier Pironi of France in the battle for the world title. Pironi finished third.

Rosberg wound up fourth, more than a minute behind Watson.

Carner Runs Away With Kids'

MALVERN, Pa. (AP) — Long-hitting JoAnne Carner, affectionately known as "Big Mama" on the women's golf tour, felt unstoppable while running away with the LPGA McDonald's Kids' Classic by six shots.

"I really knew I was going to play well. I felt very confident all week," said Carner after shooting a 5-under-par 67 in Sunday's rain-interrupted final round.

"It's just so seldom that you really feel very confident. When I get it, I just ride. I love it," she added.

Carner, the second all-time leading money winner on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, collected a first prize of $37,500.

'Dreamgirls' And 'Nine' Lead Tony Award Honors

HONORED FOR BEST PLAY — As widely expected the Royal Shakespeare Company's production of "The Life and Adventures of Nicholas Nickleby" won the Tony Award for Broadway's best play for 1981-82. Sharing the honors for directing are Trevor Nunn, left, and John Caird. (AP Laserphoto)

By MARY CAMPBELL, Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — "Dreamgirls," a flashy Broadway production about the problems of a hit singing trio, and "Nine," the surreal story of an Italian movie director and the women in his life, split the lion's share of the Tony awards for musicals.

"Dreamgirls" won six awards, including best actor, actress and supporting actress in a musical; "Nine" won five awards, including best musical, during Sunday night's award ceremony.

"The Life and Adventures of Nicholas Nickleby," a "great gamble" which cost $100 a ticket and took eight hours to see, received four Tonys in the drama field, including best play.

"Nicholas Nickleby," based on Charles Dickens' novel about a young man maturing in 18th-century London, was brought to New York by England's Royal Shakespeare Company. Roger Rees, who played the bright-eyed and exhausting title role, won a Tony as best actor in a play.

Trevor Nunn and John Caird won as best directors for "Nickleby," and John Napier and Dermot Hayes won for best scenic design.

Nunn said, "When we did it in London, it was a huge gamble. It was a slow starter... The public made it take off. We had a dream that we could bring it to New York. Having got it here, it is a great thrill that the show won a Tony Award for us."

The "Dreamgirls" awards included best actress for Jennifer Holliday, the belting lead singer of the trio; best actor for Ben Harney, the trio's opportunistic manager; best supporting actor for Cleavant Derricks, as a rhythm 'n' blues star; best book for Tom Eyen; best choreography for Michael Bennett and Michael Peters; best lighting for Tharon Musser.

"Nine," based on Italian director Federico Fellini's "8½," won five awards, including the big one — best musical; best supporting actress for France's Lilliane Montevicchi as a Folies Bergere dancer turned film director; best director for Tommy Tune; best score for Maury Yeston; best costumes for William Ivey Long.

Zoe Caldwell saluted the theatre after winning the Tony for best performance by an actress in a play for "Medea."

"The live theater is the beginning of every form of entertainment," said Caldwell, 73, who is from Australia. "It's the only one where a live human being stands up, with everything that made him until that moment, and elicits a reaction from other human beings. It's deeply important."

South African Zakes Moko, who has acted in most of Athol Fugard's plays over the past 25 years, won as best supporting actor as a tearful waiter in Fugard's "Master Harold... and the boys."

Young Amanda Plummer won as best supporting actress for "Ages of God," in which she plays a nun who gives birth to a baby which is later found murdered.

Miss Plummer also was nominated in the best actress category for her characterization of the pregnant waif in "A Taste of Honey," a production that closed earlier in the season. Her father, Christopher Plummer, was nominated as best actor for his deadly Iago in "Othello," but lost to Rees, although the Shakespearean tragedy took the best revival award.

Six of the 19 awards — for score, book, reproduction, scenery, costumes and lighting — were announced to the audience in the Imperial Theater before the $1.5 million television show hosted by Tony Randall began.

Special Tonys for achievement went to Radio City Music Hall, the Tyrone Guthrie Theater in Minneapolis, Warner Communications Inc. and the Actors Fund of America.

The Tonys are voted by 620 members active in the Broadway community who affirm that they have seen all the shows nominated in each category in which they cast a ballot. The four nominations in each category are made by a panel of theater professionals.

The Tony awards are named for the late Antoinette Perry, secretary of the American Theatre Wing during World War II.

Warned Their Children To Sing Up Or Ship Out

CHESTNUT, Ill. (AP) — Jean and Hubert Stoll laughingly told each of their eight children, "Either you sing or we ship you back!"

Not only did the clan learn to sing, but they became so involved in instrumental music-making that they recently were named the national "Amateur Music Family of the Year" by the American Music Conference. AMC, a non-profit association which encourages amateur music participation, presents the citation annually to a family deemed representative of America's 50 million amateur musicians. The Stoll family of Chestnut was nominated by the Lincoln Junior Women's Club, which sponsors numerous arts activities in the central Illinois community.

Two regional winners were also cited by AMC. The Richard Lockwood family of Afton, N.Y., was honored in the Northeast Region and the Francis G. Conrads of Fremont, Neb., in the Midwest Region. Thirteen families were nominated for the award.

Mr. and Mrs. Stoll, who are dairy and grain farmers, and their children, Dennis, 31; Cheryl Poffenbarger, 30; Klistra Hegele, 29; Brenda Colantino, 27; Kenton, 24; Kerwyn, 22; Deanna, 18; and Rodney, 14, collectively play 13 instruments. They include French horn, piano, clarinet, guitar, bassoon, English horn and saxophone.

"I never dreamed we'd get the award," Mrs. Stoll said when she heard the news. "The kids were teasing me about filling out the nominating form so I told them 'If we win, we get to play in Carnegie Hall,'" she laughed. The real award is a large plaque from AMC and national recognition for their family music involvement. Carnegie Hall may be only a dream for this family that makes music "just for the fun of it," but they still play together every chance they get and enjoy all types of music.

Mrs. Stoll can be credited with getting her family involved in music. She has been playing piano and singing since she was a child. When her own children were born, she explained, it never occurred to her that they wouldn't take music lessons. She said, "I just thought that (making music) was the way it was supposed to be for everyone."

Apparently her children have grown up believing the same thing. "It's important for children to play an instrument," her daughter Cheryl agreed. "It's a release for them. More of their personality comes out."

Cheryl and her husband, Jim Poffenbarger, also a musician with a music degree, are carrying on the family music tradition by encouraging their 3-year-old daughter, Jill, to take piano lessons. "She loved to sing," Mrs. Poffenbarger commented, "so we thought she'd like playing the piano." So far, so good, she says.

Dennis Stoll also has a daughter taking piano lessons and although Klistra's three sons haven't started lessons, one is eager to play the French horn.

"Music has been a special bond in our family," Mrs. Stoll said. "Even though most of the children are married, you still hear them say 'I found the neatest song the other day. Come down to the piano and listen!'"

"The lack of time is our greatest enemy," she added. "We love singing together and Grandma Great is happiest when they dust off the horns and 'blow' together."

Grandma Great, as Mrs. Stoll's mother, Mrs. Hatcher, is called by her great-grandchildren, occasionally gets in on the act on the piano.

Not only have family members made music together, but each has been involved in extensive music activities away from home. Dennis played in the U.S. Navy Band for four years. Deanna is studying oboe at Concordia College in River Forest, Ill., several family members have played in the Lincoln Symphony, Springfield Junior Symphony and the Deatur Junior Symphony, and they have numerous awards to their credit.

Even if they never played a note outside their home, the Stolls would stress the importance of family music-making.

"So help me, if any of the grandchildren don't sing," says Mrs. Stoll with mock seriousness in her voice. "we might just ship them back, too!"

"California Dream"

Those running in tomorrow's California primary include a President's daughter, a governor's son, a senator's son, and Tom Bradley — a sharecropper's son. Bradley was born on a Texas cotton plantation in 1917. He was graduated from UCLA in 1940. He served on the Los Angeles police force for 21 years, earning his law degree at night. In 1961 he retired from the force to practice law. He became the first black mayor of Los Angeles in 1973 — gaining more than 56 percent of the vote in a city that is only 18 percent black. Now, running for governor, Bradley has promised to revive the "California Dream." If he wins, he will become this nation's first elected black governor.

General Store Changed Little

By ELISSA McCRARY
 Associated Press Writer
 VALLE CRUCIS, N.C.

(AP) — The Mast General Store sells just about everything necessary to run a household or a farm, and the neighboring gatherings around the checkerboard and potbellied stove make it the hub of this community.

"We like for people to take their time in here," said owner John Cooper. "We want a store here like it was in the old days, when coming to the store was a social event, something that could stretch into a whole day."

A well-worn checkerboard with bottle caps for checkers along with several comfortable chairs invites customers to linger awhile. In the winter, the glowing potbellied stove gives oldtimers and shoppers a place to gather around and catch up on community news.

"We're not a tourist trap and, we don't want to be," Cooper says. "We're here to carry on the tradition of service to the community that the Masts started 100 years ago."

In 1883, Mast General Store opened for business, offering its customers just about everything under the sun.

"Mast Store used to pride itself on selling everything, starting with cradles right up to coffins," Cooper said. "We don't go quite that far. But we have just about anything a person needs in everyday life."

On the shelves of the rambling frame store building, located in the Watauga County hamlet of Valle Crucis near Boone, customers can find shoes and boots, overalls, sunbonnets, homemade candies and jellies, and cookware, plus the usual canned goods and foodstuffs.

The 9,000-square foot store also features a deli which Cooper says isn't a new idea at Mast Store.

"The Mast always made sandwiches for people working in the fields, so what we're really doing with a deli is carrying on a tradition, not starting a new one," he said.

The store was built in 1882 by W.W. Mast. The Mast family ran it until 1977 when Mast's descendants lost interest and closed its doors.

Cooper, 36, and his wife Faye, 34, bought the store three years ago after moving to the Boone area from Florida.

The Coopers have made few changes in the store and have kept many of the original features, including the bins, cabinets and shelves. The store has five rooms packed with merchandise with the community post office adjoining the building.

"When I first saw the store in 1976, I was so fascinated with it I had to be dragged out," Cooper said. "I just thought the store was such a fixture in the community it should be kept open."

State's Insured Jobless Decline

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Thousands of unemployed high school and college graduates hit are expected to push June's jobless rate up — after the insured unemployment rate showed a slight drop last month, state officials say.

Statistics released over the weekend by the state Labor Market Information Service show 4.1 percent of North Carolina's workers filed unemployment claims last month, a slight decline compared to April's 4.5 percent insured unemployment rate.

But as freshly graduated high school and college students flood the labor market this month, jobs are likely to remain scarce, said Larry Vestal, assistant manager of the Greensboro Employment Security Office.

"Our load has been just a strong as ever in the past few weeks," Vestal said. "As soon as all these high school kids get out, the ones that aren't going to college are going to have a tough time finding a job."

The insured unemployment rate is used by state labor analysts as a preliminary indication of trends in the labor market. But the rate accounts only for employees eligible for unemployment benefits.

The 4.1 percent rate means ranked second among 150 chapters in a nationwide chapter awards competition. Considered by the competition judges were each chapter's publications, projects, participation in society meetings and service to the home campus.

93,134 people were standing in unemployment lines across the state during an average week last month.

The national unemployment figures announced Friday for May stood at 9.5 percent, a post-World War II record. North Carolina unemployment stood at 8.2 percent at the end of April. The state unemployment peak so far this year has been the March rate of 9.7 percent.

The lower rate was good news for construction and textile workers — both categories showed slight improvements in the jobless statistics.

North Carolina textile workers showed one of the largest declines in jobless claims, with 6.9 percent of the state's textile labor force filing claims in May. That rate represents a 19.3 percent drop from April. Unemployment claims were filed by an average of 16,596 textile workers per week across the state in May.

The situation also improved in the construction industry, with claims declining from 9.7 percent in April to 8.7 percent last month.

"The warm weather made some different for people in outside work," Vestal said. "But with all the rain we've had lately, we may see that change this month."

State jobless statistics also improved for furniture workers, dropping from 8.9 percent in April to 7.8 percent last month. State government workers continued to enjoy one of the lowest jobless rates, with only 0.7 percent of state employees filing unemployment claims in May.

Q.1 — Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠QJ7 ♥KQ52 ♦QJ5 ♣QJ2

You are the dealer. What action do you take?
A. — Although you have 14 points in high cards, you do not have an opening bid. Your hand has two serious flaws — it is aceless and absolutely flat. You should deduct one point for each flaw, in effect reducing your holding to 12 points. And you should not open a 12-point hand unless you have two full defensive tricks and a long suit. Since you have neither, pass.

Q.2 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠KJ4 ♥A10 ♦Q98 ♣AKJ98

What is your opening bid?
A. — You have 18½ points in high cards and a balanced hand, but the combination of a good five-card suit and fine intermediates makes your hand too strong for a one no trump opening bid. Our choice is to open one club and jump rebid two no trump if partner responds with one of a suit — just as though we had a balanced 19 points.

Q.3 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠K9 ♥KQ1054 ♦A83 ♣KJ9

What is your opening bid?
A. — The fact that you have a five-card major suit is no bar to opening one no trump. You have a balanced hand of 16 HCP with stoppers in every suit. A one no trump opening bid describes your hand exactly. Should you open anything else, you might find that your rebid will force you to decide between an underbid or an overbid.

Q.4 — North-South vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠8763 ♥Q962 ♦A5 ♣954

The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♥ Pass 2 ♥ Pass
 3 ♦ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
A. — Though you have close to a minimum raise to two hearts in terms of points, partner's game try in diamonds improves your hand enormously. You should not shirk your duty — bid four hearts. Had your minor-suit holdings been reversed, you would be correct to sign off in three hearts.

Q.5 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠9762 ♥10932 ♦J854 ♣6

Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What action do you take?
A. — This is a hand for the Stayman Convention — bid two clubs. Normally, you should have 7-8 points to probe for a major suit after partner opens the bidding with one no trump, but this is the exception. At no trump, your hand is unlikely to produce a single trick for partner; in a suit contract, it should be good for a couple of club ruffs. Naturally, you intend passing any response that partner makes, including a bid of two diamonds to deny possession of a major suit. Note that you can afford this action on such a weak hand only if your short suit is clubs.

Q.6 — North-South vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠83 ♥K1076 ♦K5 ♣AQ1095

The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♦ Pass 2 ♦ Pass
 2 ♥ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
A. — Partner has reversed the bidding, and your hand is worth 15 points in support of hearts. If partner has a spade control, you could easily have a slam. You are too strong for a simple raise to three hearts. Jump to four hearts — that shows full values for your initial response, trump support but no first-round control to cue-bid outside of your suit.
