Panel 'Sidetracks' Freeze On Salaries

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - State legislators, still looking for unspent money in next year's budget, have sidetracked a proposed one-year freeze on salaries and merit increases for teachers and state workers.

Representatives of state employees took Tuesday's vote by the joint House-Senate Appropriations Committee as a sign of hope.

The panel voted not to consider the freeze until Thursday afternoon in hopes that the Senate Finance Committee might meet before then and find a way to generate $93 million for the pay raises.

Under the proposed freeze, raises for merit and additional pay steps that teachers and state workers are scheduled to receive July 1 would be canceled.

"I guess it's a little ray of hope," said Arch Laney, lobbyist for the N.C. State Government Employees Association. "It was certainly a show of concern by this body."

"It's a positive sign the rank and file legislators are with us and are concerned about freezing salaries," said John I. Wilson, president of the N.C. Association of Educators.

About 2,500 teachers, many of them NCAE members, marched Monday on the Legislative Building to protest the freeze.

Sen. George Marion, D-Surry, suggested the delay Tuesday, noting that the Finance Committee had before it a bill to increase the tax on beer and liquor. Although legislative leaders noted the bill would use the tax increase to pay for state roads and was not sufficient to pay for all the raises, the

Utilities Vote Larger Turnover Going To City

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Greenville Utilities Commission Tuesday night voted to increase its monetary turnover to the city for the current fiscal year by $107,314.

The increase in the turnover, a variable payment to the city based on citizens' equity in the municipally owned utility, will boost GUC's return to the city for the current fiscal year to $1.26 million.

The action was taken because of the city's loss in franchise tax revenue due to the settlement of a Virginia Electric and Power Co. rate case that resulted in a refund of $4.7 million to GUC.

Because the Veeco rate case was settled in 1981 (the utility had been charging higher rates for a three-year period than were ultimately allowed), this reduced Veeco's gross receipts tax payable to the N.C. Department of Revenue, GUC Director Charles Horne explained. Half of the $214,629 reduction - $107,314 - was deducted from Greenville's franchise tax payment by Veeco for the October-December 1981 quarter. Thus the city fell short on its budgeted revenue for the 1981-82 fiscal year.

Commission members also voted Tuesday night to increase the customer deposits required for utility service because of an increase in the amount of bad debts, which amounted to three-tenths of 1 percent this year, or more than $100,000.

The deposit required for electric-only customers or customers with electric and gas service (with no electric or gas heat), was increased from $50 to $75. For customers with the same service, but having electric or gas heat, the deposit was increased from $55 to $85.

The deposit required from customers with electric and water service, or electric, water and gas service (with no electric or gas heat), was increased from $55 to $85, while for electric and water, or electric, water and gas customers with electric or gas heat, the deposit required increases from the present $80 to $110.

The new deposits go into effect Aug. 1. Also approved was an agreement which will allow Alert Cable TV Inc., now operating in the Farmville area, to use GUC poles to extend cable television service from Farmville toward Greenville.

Under the agreement, Alert will pay GUC $5 per pole per year - the same agreement GUC has with Greenville Cable TV.

In other business GUC members awarded contracts for a number of items to low bidders.

The approved bids included: $62,650 for 1,000 load management switches from Motorola C and E. Inc.; $52,700 for 100 transformers from Hesco Inc.; $21,350 for 50 transformers from Hesco Inc.; $35,282 for 52,000 pounds of conductor from Rigby Electric Supply Co.; $26,930 for 40,000 feet of cable from Hesco Inc.; and $23,567 for replacement of employee uniforms from Textilease Corp.

It was reported at the meeting that the new 500,000-gallon elevated water tank on Greenville Boulevard, between Evans Street and Hooker Road, was to be placed in service today. Construction of the $375,000 water tank has been under way for the past several months.

Commission members were reminded that Sherwood Smith, president of Carolina Power & Light Co., will be in Greenville June 18 for a noon luncheon with community leaders at the Ramada Inn.

Syrians Say 'On Attack'

By The Associated Press
Syrian helicopter gunships and ground forces went on the attack against Israel's Lebanon invasion force in the Beirut highlands today, heightening fears that the two old Mideast enemies were close to the brink of all-out war.

The Syrian command said its forces struck advancing Israeli armored units 12 miles east of Beirut near the Damascus highway, where the Israelis had made a lightning thrust Tuesday as they tried to close their vise on the Lebanese capital and other Palestinian guerrilla strongholds.

A Syrian communique claimed the advance had been halted and 23 Israeli tanks were destroyed.

The Israeli military command in Tel Aviv said its warplanes shot down a Syrian jet fighter near Beirut and a helicopter in a separate clash near Lake Qaraoun, 20 miles southeast of Beirut, when the helicopter attacked Israeli ground forces.

Four Israeli warships, meanwhile, shelled the beaches of southern Beirut's Ouzai neighborhood, Lebanon's state radio said. The 10-minute bombardment caused no casualties or damage, it said.

Palestine Liberation Organization chief Yasser Arafat appealed from his secret command bunker in west Beirut for collective Arab intervention to keep Israel from invading the Lebanese capital.

"The Israeli government is carrying out a mass massacre of the Palestinian people in Lebanon with open approval of the United States," Arafat said in a "Voice of Palestine" radio broadcast addressed to Arab heads of state.

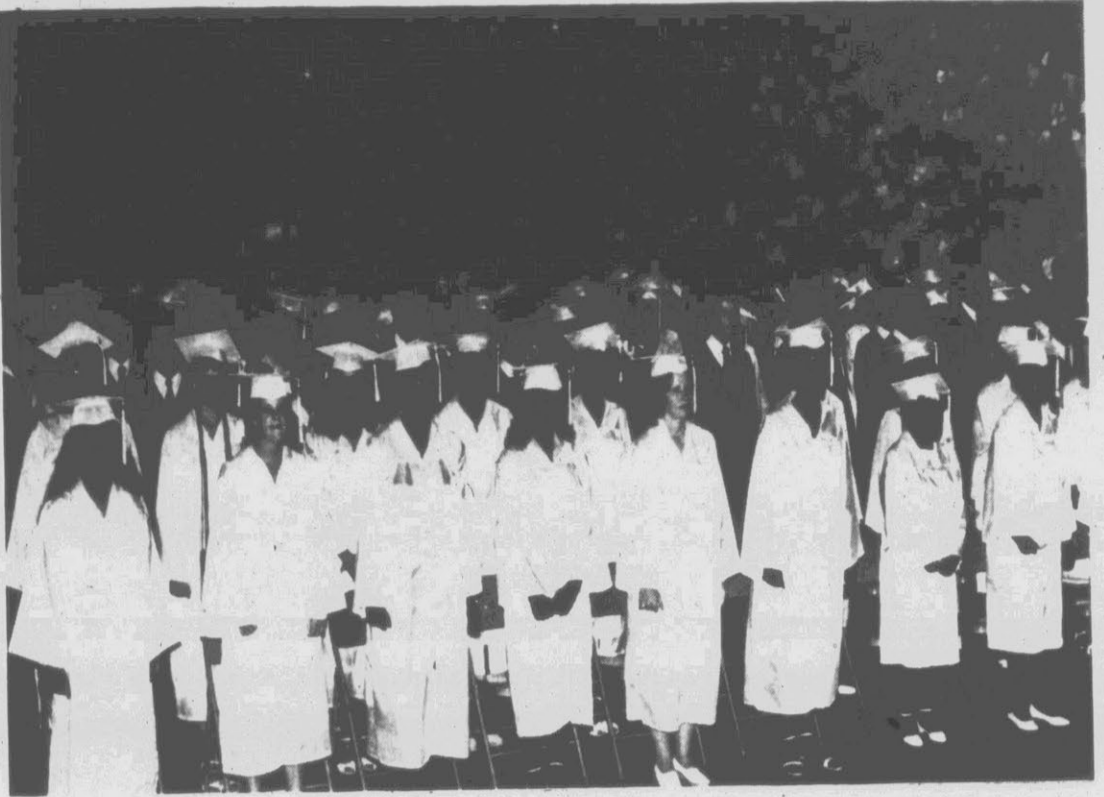

Despite Prime Minister Menachem Begin's declaration that the Israelis "don't want war with Syria," the mounting clashes threatened to turn Israel's campaign against Palestinian guerrillas in southern Lebanon into a major confrontation with the large Syrian force based around Beirut and in eastern Lebanon's Bekaa Valley.

An estimated 30,000 Syrian troops are in Lebanon to police a truce that ended the 1975-76 civil war in Lebanon.

AP Correspondent Michael Goldsmith, on the way from Damascus to Beirut, saw convoys of Syrian reinforcements rolling into Lebanon Tuesday night.

The Israeli military command said today that Israel had reinforced its troops on the disputed Golan Heights, which it captured from Syria in 1967 and annexed earlier this year.

Associated Press photographer William Foley, who watched a mid-morning Israeli-Syrian air battle from the highway east of Beirut, said he saw one jet crash in flames, but could not establish whether it was Syrian or Israeli.

THE 1982 GRADUATION ... for Rose High students Tuesday night was the first held inside in a number of years. A full capacity of 6,500 packed Minges Coliseum to witness the graduation of 385 seniors. The audience made good use of the graduation programs to fan at the heat generated by the large gathering in the coliseum.

385 Rose High Grads In Graduation Ceremony

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

An audience estimated at 6,500 packed Minges Coliseum Tuesday night to see 385 Rose High seniors receive diplomas at the first graduation ceremony held in an inside setting for Rose students in many years.

A quintet of female student speakers - Mary Spivey Vick, Shaela Kathleen Ray, Belinda Marie Haselrig, Elizabeth Ann Longino and Catrina Ann Logan - made brief speeches.

"Commitment - The Defeat of Apathy" was the topic chosen by Mary Vick. "In-difference is the invincible giant of the world," Ms. Vick said. "A significant cause of this apathy is lack of commitment to a definite purpose ... It is not until a momentous time that we are shaken from this lethargy and become consciously aware of the direction of our lives."

In her speech, entitled "Steps," Ms. Ray compared life's continuing progress to the process of a child learning to walk. After the shakiness of first steps, she noted,

"By focusing on our strengths, accepting our limitations, and taking the necessary risks, we can grow and find our place in life ... Contentment in our own strengths can mean success."

Ms. Haselrig, who spoke on "The Challenge of Competition," said, "We are challenged to be flexible and adapt to our environment ... Man enjoys striving to reach his goals." Striking a note of philosophy, she added, "Making the right decision is often a difficult task because sometimes there is no right decision."

"Talents" was the topic of Ms. Longino. "The challenge which faces each of us is to find and to develop fully these potentials (talents)," she commented. "Our search for our natural gifts will continue. Through many enriching experiences, we will come to realize our individual talents, our hidden treasures ... We must continue developing our individual talents if we are to realize our future goals."

The final of the five speakers, Ms. Logan, focused on "Moonbeams" as dreams. "For 17 or 18 years, most of us have been spinning dreams, idealistic goals with wings of gossamer. Now is the time to take those dreams and to fulfill them ... following your dreams is not abandonment of the tangible, only heartfelt determination to reach your goals. Don't give up your dreams just to satisfy someone else's mandate for practicality," she said.

Traditional graduation music was performed by the Rose High Band under the baton of Ben Ferguson. The graduation invocation was given by Louise Carmen Taft. Ms. Taft also conducted the tassel ceremony. The thought for the day was presented by William Ray Stallings Jr., and Martha Ann Ferrell introduced the speakers.

In presenting the graduating class, school Superintendent Delma C. Blinson made a few brief comments, asking the students to remember that behind this day of graduation lay hard work and high hopes on the part of parents and teachers, as well as their own dedication to getting an education.

Diplomas were awarded by Dr. Jon Tingelstad, chairman of the Greenville City School Board, and Howard Hurl, principal of J.H. Rose High School.

Illinois Seeing Hot ERA Fight

By NEIL McLAUGHLIN
Associated Press Writer
SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) - The chief Equal Rights Amendment sponsor in the Illinois House says she has the votes needed to change a rule requiring a three-fifths majority to pass the measure.

"We're going to start working for majority rule tomorrow," state Rep. Susan Catania of Chicago said Tuesday after a special legislative session in which testimony was taken on the amendment.

Among those testifying was one of seven women who are in the midst of a hunger strike for the ERA, which must be ratified by three more states before June 30 to become part of the U.S. Constitution.

Mrs. Catania said she has the 89 votes needed for a rule change to require only a simple majority of the 177-member House to approve the ERA, which would ban discrimination because of sex.

Under the three-fifths rule, 107 votes are needed to pass the ERA in the House. With a simple majority, only 89 lawmakers are needed.

A similar three-fifths rule is in effect in the Senate and ERA forces also are seeking a change there.

Mrs. Catania made her remarks after Gov. James R.

Thompson told House legislators that Illinois' most famous son, Abraham Lincoln, would not have had "the slightest bit of trouble" with the ERA.

Dear Abby

Son's Letter Worth A 1,000 Gifts

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Just before Mother's Day you ran the following item:

"Confidential to Junior Citizens: Next Sunday is Mother's Day. You're broke? Don't sweat it. Sit down and write her a letter, telling her how much you appreciate her, and don't worry about getting too sentimental. I promise you, she'll appreciate it more than a $100 gift. (And I'll bet she saves it.)"

Well, I wasn't exactly a "junior citizen" at age 34, and I wasn't broke, either, but I took your suggestion. I want you to know that my 74-year-old mother said that my letter was the finest Mother's Day gift she had ever received, and that's saying something because she has eight other children!

Please run that suggestion every year.

MICHAEL

DEAR MICHAEL: I shall. And thanks for a perfect segue to remind my readers that June 20 is Father's Day. And since fathers are just as sentimental as mothers, the above suggestion can be applied to Dad, too. The following is a testimonial from a proud father:

DEAR ABBY: Prior to Mother's Day you had a "Confidential to Junior Citizens" suggesting that an appropriate gift for Mother would be a letter of appreciation.

May I suggest that such a letter to Father would be just as valid on Father's Day? I know, because my 28-year-old son, Eric, who lives in Houston, sent me that kind of gift, and it was the greatest present I have ever received. No amount of money could have bought anything that could have pleased me more. In fact, I framed the original and am sending you a copy.

JOHN TAYLOR, MERRITT ISLAND, FLA.

DEAR JOHN: You have a right to be proud, and I think your son's "gift" is worth sharing with my readers:

TO MY FATHER ON FATHER'S DAY

I remember my dad when he would come and sleep with me so the "boogie man" wouldn't get me.

I remember when my dad helped me win the space derby when I was in Cub Scouts.

I remember when my dad helped me to tie my first necktie before going to church.

I remember my dad teaching me how to drive when I was 16.

I remember my dad cheering me on when I won a swim meet.

I remember my dad looking proud when I graduated from high school.

I remember my dad when I first moved out of the house — on my own.

I remember my dad when we buried his father and then his mother.

I remember my dad's joy when my own son was born.

I will always remember that no man on earth will ever have a greater influence on me and my life than my father.

YOUR LOVING SON, ERIC

DEAR ABBY: Once again National Secretaries Week has passed unnoticed by my boss. I wonder how many other secretaries can identify with this:

On holidays and special occasions, nobody in the boss's family would be remembered if his secretary didn't remind him to send flowers or buy a gift. (And guess who orders the flowers and buys the gift? And when the boss receives a gift, guess who writes the thank-you notes?)

Believe me, the movie "Nine to Five" was no exaggeration. I would sign my name, but my boss is a very famous celebrity. Thanks for listening.

Couple Renews Wedding Vows

FARMVILLE — On Saturday in a three o'clock ceremony held in Macedonia Baptist Church here, James Earl and Pearl Harris, of Route 2, Farmville, celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary with a renewal of their marriage vows.

The Rev. James Lucas of

Wilson, uncle of the bridegroom, performed the ceremony. The altar was decorated with twin spiral candelabra holding lighted tapers.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Richard Gay and Mr. and Mrs. Julius Harris of Farmville.

A program of music was rendered by Walter Bolden, organist, and Marsha Vines, soloist, both of Farmville.

Escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of angel blue with an empire waistline. The V-neckline was accented by alencon lace. A three-quarter length capelet edged with ruffling accented the gown. The gown had an A-line skirt. She carried a bouquet of blue and white daisies, carnations and miniature mums and wore matching flowers in her hair.

Barbara H. Hendrix of Hamden, Conn., sister of the bridegroom, was matron of honor and wore a formal gown of plum chiffon with an empire waistline. The bodice featured a cowl neckline and the skirt had accordion pleats. She wore a matching flower in her hair and carried a single blue and white chrysanthemum.

Glenwood Gay of Farmville, brother of the bride, was best man and ushers included Julius Charles Harris, brother of the bridegroom, Dennis Wooten of Falkland, John H. Sharpe and Robert L. Moore of Greenville.

A reception was held in the fellowship hall after the ceremony. Gifts were received by Mary Williams. Daughters of the couple, Debbie Jean Harris poured punch and Jennifer Denise Harris served the four-tiered wedding cake. The serving table was decorated with summer flowers.

Guests were greeted by Essie Ruth Parrish of New Canaan, Conn., sister of the bride, and Annie Gay, sister-in-law of the bride, presided at the guest register.

A toast was made by Charles Harris. Wedding rings were exchanged by the couple. Assisting during the reception were Mary Frances Fields of New Canaan, Conn. and Mr. and Mrs. Charles White of Trenton, N.J. Good-byes were said by the couple and their daughters. Lillian Dupree Bradley of Farmville was advisor.

When I first came on recipes for Mexican refried beans (frijoles refritos), I wondered why the beans were called "refried." I was puzzled because the recipes called for cooking such beans as dry pintos and draining them, then frying and mashing them in a skillet with a goodly amount of fat. Why were they named refried?

If you, too, have been curious about the terminology, you may be interested to know that, according to one culinary researcher, the "re" prefix may mean "well-fried" rather than "fried again."

As I looked through the material on refried beans stashed away in my files, I came on some interesting ways to garnish the beans. For example, when they are served as a side dish, one good cook likes to top them with strips of sweet green pepper, coarsely shredded cheddar cheese and crispy cooked crumbed bacon.

The following recipe gives directions for making refried beans from scratch and using them to mound on tortillas. This way they make a good, nutritious and economical dish for a weekend brunch, lunch or supper.

REFRIED BEANS WITH TORTILLAS
1 pound (about 2 to 2 1/4 cups) dry pinto beans
Water
2-3rds cup chopped (medium-fine) onion
1 clove garlic, minced
2 teaspoons salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1/2 cup bacon fat, see Note
8 six-inch corn tortillas, heated Shredded iceberg lettuce
Diced tomato
Sour cream

Cover the beans with a generous amount of water (at least 6 cups) and soak overnight; drain and discard the soaking water. Into a 5-quart saucepot, turn the beans, 6 cups fresh water, the onion, garlic, salt and pepper. Bring to a boil; simmer, covered, until the beans are tender — 1 1/2 hours. Drain, reserving 1 1/2 cups of the liquid.

In a large skillet heat the bacon fat. Add the beans; mash (with a potato masher, if available) and cook slowly until all the bacon fat is absorbed. Continue cooking, adding the reserved 1 1/2 cups liquid — 1/4 cup at a time — and stirring often, until the liquid is absorbed. Makes about 4 cups.

Did you ever wonder why older people can break their hips and other bones in a single fall, while younger adults can use and abuse their bodies much more and not get hurt?

Scientists blame the thinning and weakening of the bone structure for these mishaps. But studies now show that proper care can ensure strong bones, even as we get older.

Calcium is the basic material that keeps bones strong. The lack of this mineral can cause hip, wrist and long leg bones in particular, to weaken.

Most frequently suggested in the scientific literature is that a sufficient amount of calcium, vitamin D, sunshine and exercise can keep bones strong, or strengthen them if they are already weak. The lack of calcium is considered the most common diet deficiency among adults, according to the National Academy of Sciences, Food and Nutrition Board.

To lower these statistics, the Board recommends 800 mgs. of calcium daily for people 25-50 years old. It also suggests drinking two glasses of milk to fulfill 75 percent of that daily need. One glass of milk contains 291 mgs. of calcium. Intake of vitamin D (also in milk) is also necessary to help the body absorb calcium. Other foods rich in calcium include cheddar, gruyere, roquefort and processed cheese; yogurt and sardines.

Osteoporosis is the disease that finally results from excessive thinning of the bone structure. It affects six million Americans each year, five million of which Hospital. But treating this problem with increased estrogen, he continues, has been suspect ever since the drugs given to these women were linked to cancer. Dr. Lane recommends getting calcium in the diet and exercising at an early age to prevent skeletal deterioration later on.

While 99 percent of calcium intake is used for tooth and bone building, the other 1 percent plays an essential role in working with the body's nerves and muscles. According to "Nutritional Reports International," August 1973, calcium plays a crucial part in muscle contractions. The most significant muscle is the heart. Calcium was also cited in the nutritional report as preventing heart disease.

There is no doubt that calcium plays a significant role in bone health. And the evidence points out that adequate calcium intake throughout life can help reduce the chance of developing serious bone disorders. Many doctors and scientists recommend milk and milk products as a good, natural source of essential calcium.

Exercise In Futility

North Carolina teachers marching in Raleigh Monday night in protest of a salary freeze ordered by Gov. Jim Hunt may truly be prophetic. One marcher carried a sign that read, "Hunt Uses N.C. For D.C." Hunt has left little doubt that he has political ambition, dating back to ... who can say? College certainly, high school maybe, perhaps even earlier. His style as lieutenant governor and now as governor certainly has demonstrated his ability and expertise as a politician.

But one could easily believe this week that Hunt's ambitions had gotten the best of him in his illogical support of the Equal Rights Amendment. That marching teacher offered the only "sane" explanation for the activities credited by his staff to Hunt.

According to his press staff, Hunt favored a last-second referendum on the ERA to circumvent the five losses the amendment has suffered in the Legislature. Rules would have had to be waived by the General Assembly to approve such a referendum, the State Board of Elections would have had to bend its regulations, 60 counties that prohibit paper ballots would have had to make an exception — because paper ballots only could be used due to the lateness of the proposal — and the state Highway Patrol would have been called on to distribute the ballots throughout the state. There even was a question as to whether such a referendum could be binding. Thus, assuming the dubious possibility that the ERA could have gained a favorable vote, the General Assembly would have to be called back into still another session on June 30 — the final day for ERA ratification. And all of this time, effort and expense for a lost cause coming hard on the heels of Hunt's demand that state salaries be frozen and merit increases cut off to save money.

We don't always see eye-to-eye with Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green, either, but his public assessment of this latest ERA proposal was a good one. Such a referendum, Greene said, would be an "exercise in futility."

We could also add, it might have backfired on those political aspirations of James B. Hunt Jr.

Has Recession Bottomed?

Despite some hopeful signs in indices which measure the national economy there was still little to cheer about in the latest unemployment rate.

The business slump, coupled with graduates joining the job market, sent the rate up to 9.5 percent in April, a postwar record.

It was reported that 10.5 million Americans were without jobs.

This is a serious matter that cannot be ignored by our nation. At the same time we must recognize that a drop in the unemployment rate will follow behind an upturn in business. We can at least hope that the recession has bottomed out.

House-To-Senate

By PAUL O'CONNOR

two Democratic nominations in his district. But he'll have to unseat either Republican Sen. Jack Cavanagh or Democrat Sen. Marvin Ward, in the fall. A Senate seat would help his bid for commissioner, but losing his House seat could destroy that bid. Democrats feel strongly that they can take one of the representative and a former senator. Then there'll be three Republicans in the fall. In terms of pure political gambling, Parnell and Ms. Tally are taking the biggest chances. They are the only two House members trying to take the Democratic nomination away from in-

Other Editors Say Athletes' Grades

(Raleigh Times)

We hope the talk from leaders of several major athletic conferences — including the ACC — about requiring brains as well as brawn in college recruiting is more than just talk.

A report adopted by the Atlantic Coast Conference calls for tougher entrance standards that would require three years of high school English, two years of math, a 2.0 average in both, and at least a 700 score on the Scholastic Aptitude Test. At present, the NCAA requires only a 2.0 (C) average.

A 2.0 average doesn't speak highly of a person's academic preparation for college, especially when one considers that many high schools require little more than class attendance for that C and that special considerations extended to high school athletes can inflate the grade. When you average in the As in physics and related courses, a high school 2.0 is almost automatic except in cases involving the near-literate.

The ACC, to its credit, had earlier urged the NCAA to adopt higher admission requirements for athletes. But to no avail. Now, the ACC and a coalition of 14 other officials representing major conferences and independents, are not just asking, they're threatening.

If the plan materializes, these schools, many of them carrying considerable clout on the national sports scene with potential for drawing big crowds and TV contracts, will refuse to schedule schools that do not adopt their level of academic standards.

This could be the start of something big. The 14 men on the committee in most cases represent schools that have already established impressive athletic programs. That they want to establish at least respectable if not impressive academic credentials for their players is encouraging.

The move comes at a time when college sports desperately needs to create a better image than the one it is rapidly building as merely a source of entertainment and a farm system for professional sports.

ACC Commissioner James went straight to the heart of the problem with college athletes when he said "We need to have less tutoring in college and more graduating. The only way to do that is to have students better prepared in high school."

Life With Mitterrand

PARIS — I hadn't seen my friend Dupont in six years. We chanced to bump into each other on the Avenue de Champs Elysees. The last time we met he was the most dapper Frenchman I knew. He openly bragged about his penthouse in Paris, his villa in the country, his yacht on the Mediterranean, horses in Deauville and a mistress between the sixth and eighth arrondissements. When he showed me his Porsche double-parked on the Avenue Foch, he said, "President Giscard has been good to me."

I couldn't believe it was the same man this time. The lapels on his suit and cuffs were frayed, his tie had soap stains on it, he had just come out of the Metro station and his eyes were trying to get us ed to the light. "How goes it, Dupont?" I asked. He looked around nervously. "Shh, I could be taxed for talking to an American."

ART BUCHWALD

"How could that be?" "Mitterrand is taxing everything. If the finance people see me talking to you, they will think I'm trying to get my money out of France."

"Speaking of money, how is your penthouse in Paris, your villa in the country, your mistress between the sixth and eighth arrondissements and your Porsche double-parked on the Avenue Foch?"

"I don't want to talk about them," Dupont said. "But that's all you did want to talk about when I saw you the last time. You haven't lost them have you?"

"No, but I can't talk about them. The Socialists are taxing everything I own. Nobody in France brags anymore about what he owns."

"Mitterrand is really going after the rich, then?"

"If your entire worth is more than $500,000, they put your name into a computer. Once your name is in it, you can't get out. You have to declare everything you own, including your wife's jewelry. I spend all my time trying to knock down everything I have."

"That must be hard to do with your race horses." "What race horses? They are milk horses."

"And the yacht?" "It's no longer a yacht. It is now a sinking rowboat."

"And the villa in the country?"

"Are you talking about my broken-down farmhouse without a roof on it?"

"What happened to the Porsche that was double-parked on the Avenue Foch?"

"A junk heap, which I couldn't sell if I wanted to."

"You had a wonderful maid. Do you still have her?"

"Are you talking about the cousin that lives with us until she can find an apartment?"

"I see what you're doing, Dupont. But it can't be much fun to own the good things in life and not talk about them."

"What choice do I have? Mitterrand is taking everything away from the rich and giving it to the poor, and the economy is the worst it's ever been."

"That's odd. I said, 'Ronald Reagan is doing just the opposite, and our economy isn't doing any better than yours.'"

"But at least the rich aren't suffering in America."

"Reagan isn't out to get them, if that's what you mean. But then again he never was too big on soaking people just because they have money."

"Reagan is a good man," Dupont said. "I wish he was president of France."

"Some people in the United States wish he was, too. I have an idea, Dupont. Mitterrand worries about the poor people in France, and Reagan worries about the rich in the U.S. Why don't we send France our poor people, and you could send us your rich people, and then everybody would be happy?"

"It is forbidden to take any of our money out of France so we can only be rich here."

Reagan Has Fragile Vote

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
FRANKLIN PARK, Ill. —

The defection of one-third of his 1980 vote only 16 months into his presidency shows the political havoc wrought by the recession on President Reagan even though Democrats in Congress and the Carter administration get most of the voters' blame.

The fragility of the modern presidency was obvious in our political scouting expedition to Leyden Township, a lower-middle-income Chicago suburb, with Patrick Caddell and three of his Cambridge Survey Research interviewers. The 65 voters we interviewed in their homes blamed the recession on "the Democrats and Jimmy Carter" by a 7-to-1 ratio over Ronald Reagan. They blamed the "free-spending policies" of the Democrats, not Reagan's tax cuts, for high deficits. Nevertheless, the president, not the Democrats, pays the political price.

Precincts 31 and 41 in Leyden Township are swing districts that often reflect national trends. In 1976, Carter won the two precincts with 53 percent of the vote; in 1980, Reagan took 49 percent to Carter's 42 percent and 9 percent for independent John B. Anderson.

If Reagan were matched today against Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, he would lose eight of the 32 votes he won in 1980. An additional three Reagan votes are undecided, today, leaving intact only two-thirds of his 1980 vote. Overall, Kennedy narrowly beats Reagan, 44-40 percent, with the rest undecided.

That is terrible political news for Ronald Reagan, reflecting the political corrosion of high unemployment and interest rates. "He's certainly not bringing down inflation or interest rates like he promised," the 58-year-old wife of a retired union man told us. She voted for Reagan in 1980, but now prefers Kennedy over Reagan.

Her mistake in failing to realize that inflation has slowed under Reagan was endemic. Few voters interviewed were aware of it; those who knew did not credit Reagan. So, the ordinary American still suffers from inflation, even if the pace is slowed. What's more, Reagan as president is held accountable for inflation even by voters who blame "free-spending" Democrats for starting the trouble in the first place.

"I realize Reagan inherited a can of worms," said a 66-year-old retired plumber who voted for Carter in 1980. "He is just not making the situation any better." A 56-year-old supervisor at the local Borg-Warner plant strongly disagreed with the statement that "Reagan really cares about me," saying: "All us middle-class people will soon be a thing of the past and there will just be the rich and the poor in this country." By 2-to-1, Reagan's policies are seen to "help the rich."

Our 65 voters broke down this way by party: 28 Democrats, 15 Republicans, 22 independents. By large margins, even Democrats blamed the performance of their own party, together with Carter administration policies, for the economic mess. They blamed their own party's spending policies, not Reagan's tax cuts, for predicted hundred-billion-dollar budget deficits. Contrary to the conviction of Democratic leaders, voters here, by a 4-to-1 margin, chose spending cuts over tax increases as the right path toward cutting deficits. They definitely oppose delay or repeal of Reagan's third-year, 10 percent cut.

The one bright note here for the president was the fact that by a margin of 5-to-1, voters said it is too soon to judge Reaganomics as a failure, despite the recession, because the Reagan economic program has only recently gone into effect. That sends this message to the president: It is not too late to restore Reaganism to its appeal of 18 months ago, but only if the economy revives before the Nov. 2 election.

To the editor:

In answer to Sunday's editorial asking "Is the Equal Rights Amendment necessary?" The answer is YES! Women were left out of the coverage of that umbrella of equal rights.

Abigail Adams wrote her husband, John Adams, while he was in Philadelphia helping to fashion the constitution:

"I desire you would Remember the Ladies, and be more generous and favorable to them than your ancestors. Do not put such unlimited power into the hands of the Husbands. Remember all Men would be tyrants if they could. If particular care and attention is not paid to the Ladies, we are determined to foment a Rebellion, and will not hold ourselves bound by any Laws in which we have no voice, or Representation."

And John Adams replied, "Depend upon it. We know better than to repeal our Masculine systems."

We women have been out in the rain ever since.

As Senator White doesn't believe in the Harris Poll, you 61 percent of Pitt County who favor the Equal Rights Amendment need to call him at home. Leave a message with his wife, your name and address, that you favor the Equal Rights Amendment and that you are angry that the Senate tabled the ERA Bill.

He's your Senator. He's not representing you and you are not seeing to it that he does.

He's in the book, VERNON E. WHITE.

A Taste Of The 21st Century

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Eight years ago the U.S. Chamber of Commerce offered a frightening forecast of inflation to come. By the year 2002, for example, the median price of a house was forecast to reach $62,500.

Inflation flies, faster than time. Here in 1982 we are getting a taste of the 21st century. The median priced home already is close to $70,000, and now, says the chamber, it might cost $363,000 in 2002.

Shocking, of course, but no more so than the federal debt, which was expected to reach $1.2 trillion in 2002 but which, 20 years early, is already bloated to nearly that size. Similarly obese is the federal budget, expected to reach $762 billion in 2002 but already beyond that.

The typical automobile was foreseen as costing $7,500, a suit of clothes $312, and a pair of shoes $75, prices that anyone can recognize as having arrived in advance of the chamber's warnings.

No surprise therefore that Americans suffer from inflation shock, a lingering malady that now prevents them from believing price rises have been brought into check, despite an abundance of single-digit evidence.

The malady shows up most destructively in the form of extremely high interest rates, but in a half-dozen other ways too. In, for example, the fears of savers, stock market investors and corporate managements.

The latter are in a dither. Should they assume that inflation and related problems are under control, making it safe to commit funds for expansion? They're not making that assumption. They're cutting instead.

Throughout the economy there is evidence of a siege mentality, of digging in, hunkering down. Consumer buying plans for big ticket items are as indefinite or negative as are corporate expansion plans.

Searching through government, business and academic analyses of the economy, you find broad agreement on high interest rates as the cause.

Who can borrow at 16 to 20 percent, when those rates preclude profit for the business person and sometimes represent 50 percent of gross pay for the would-be homeowner? Perhaps more important, who dares borrow at such rates, knowing they are symptomatic of deeper economic ailments?

One of those ailments is inflation shock. You may recall the first casualties 15 years ago, when inflation's roots spread like crabgrass in the nation's lawn, destroying the economic illusion of prosperity.

What happened? For one thing, the solid saver who had put away little bits year by year found his savings eaten up in big bites. Insurance policies that had been dutifully maintained lost their value.

The consequences are still with us, and now represent one of the big obstacles to economic recovery. While inflation had been reduced to 5 percent or so, millions of people refuse to believe it is permanent.

ERA Supporters Abandon Referendum Push

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A proposal to hold a statewide referendum on the Equal Rights Amendment has died almost as quickly as it was born, apparently taking with it ERA supporters' last chances for ratification in North Carolina this month.

"I do not now see any possibility of it being done this year," Gov. Jim Hunt, who has pushed ERA strongly, said Tuesday after key legislative supporters of ERA dropped their push for a referendum.

The ERA forces gave up on their last-gasp effort for a referendum on June 29 in an afternoon strategy meeting in which they decided a thicket of Senate rules blocked their path.

"The obstacles are just insurmountable," said Betty McCain, Hunt's appointed ERA lobbyist.

The referendum, to be held with the scheduled statewide primary elections, was an idea raised by Hunt after the state Senate voted 27-23 to table an ERA ratification bill Friday.

Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake, a key ERA strategist, said he had enough votes to win House passage of a referendum bill but that it was certain to be hung up in the Senate.

"We have explored every avenue we can think of...to have it considered in the Senate," Adams said. "And we have determined it is impossible."

Some ERA supporters said they were holding out hope for a miracle to revive the measure in the Senate, and suggested Hunt could use his constitutional authority to call a new special session on ERA later this month. But Hunt told reporters, "That would be futile."

Sen. Robert Jordan, D-Montgomery, an ERA sponsor, said the referendum bill, if pushed, would have faced a Senate rule saying that no part of a defeated bill can be considered in another measure. An earlier referendum bill was left in a Senate committee last year.

He said Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green could rule the bill out of order, requiring a two-thirds vote in the Senate to suspend the rules to allow consideration — a margin ERA supporters could not muster.

Jordan said Green, the presiding officer in the Senate, did not tell him he would rule adversely on the ERA referendum bill but that he came away with the impression that the rules were too great an obstacle.

"We were satisfied it would be ruled ineligible by the presiding officer of the Senate — there was no doubt," said Adams.

Green, in an interview later, said he never told ERA supporters how he would handle the referendum. But he added, "Representative Adams may have made a very valid assumption."

The referendum would not have been binding on the legislature, and it would have been held one day before the June 30 national deadline for ERA ratification. The proposed ban on sex discrimination is three states short of the number needed to ratify if it is to become part of the U.S. Constitution.

Supporters hoped ERA would be favored by a substantial margin in the straw vote, and that legislators would be convinced to ratify it in a special session called by Hunt the day after the election.

Had the referendum been called, however, an extraordinary suspension of normal election procedures would have been required.

State Elections Board Director Alex Brock said calling the referendum would have required a suspension of a state law requiring a public notice of election issues 20 days before the close of voter registration books, which were closed June 1.

It would also have required the use of paper ballots, even in the 60 counties where voting machines are now required by law.

Announce Grant

RALEIGH — The Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation Inc. has notified America's Four Hundredth Anniversary Committee of a grant of $150,000. The grant, payable over a period of three years, is to help fund programs and events being planned to commemorate the early Roanoke voyages to the coast of North Carolina between 1584 and 1587.

America's Four Hundredth Anniversary Committee was established in 1973 by the North Carolina General Assembly, and its 14 members were appointed by Gov. Jim Hunt. The committee is charged with planning a commemoration of the voyages which were the first efforts by the English to colonize the New World.

Among events planned are the construction of the "Elizabeth II," a ship of the type sailed in Elizabethan times; publication of a series of books, pamphlets and folders; extensive archaeological exploration to discover clues to early American Indian life and also of the Lost Colony; exhibits from the British Library; and a wide range of commemorative programs and activities.

The Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation was established in 1936 as a memorial to the younger son of the founder of the R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. The foundation, drawing on the income from the Zachary Smith Reynolds Trust and the William Neal Reynolds Trust, has made 1,360 grants totaling more than $107,308,643 to almost 700 recipients in all 100 North Carolina counties.

River Races

NEW BERN — Nearly two dozen events are scheduled for the 1982 Great Trent River Raft Race on Friday and Saturday. Coordinated by radio station WAZZ, the event, first held in 1976, is co-sponsored by the radio station and the New Bern Shriners. Last year the event drew 22,000 spectators, and this year's race is expected to have about 30,000 in attendance. The calendar of events for the two days are:

Friday
•3-5 p.m. — Parade of rafts, Shrine units.
•5:30-6 p.m. — Golden Knights preview jump, Bicentennial Park.
•6-7 p.m. — Shrine band units in concert.
•8-11 p.m. — Captain's party.

Saturday
•8-9:30 a.m. — Colonial Capital peddlers bicycle race.
•10-10:15 a.m. — Flag Day ceremonies, national anthem.
•10 a.m. — The beginning of the canoe race.
•10:15-11 a.m. — Golden Knights parachute team show.
•10:15 a.m.-2 p.m. — Southern Railroad "Best Friend of Charleston" free rides and exhibit car.
•11 a.m.-noon — Jet ski demonstration and water ski show.
•Noon — Lunch with the Shriners.
•Noon-12:30 p.m. and 2:30-3 p.m. — Buck Swamp Kickin' Cloggers.
•Noon-1 p.m. — Sentry dog demonstration.
•1-1:30 p.m. — Tug-o-War, U.S. Marine team versus any team of volunteer competitors.
•1-1:30 p.m. and 2:30-3 p.m. — Clear the course periods in preparation for raft races.
•1:30-3 p.m. — Speed raft race.
•3-5 p.m. — Regular raft race.
•5-5:30 p.m. — Ronald McDonald Show.
•5:30-6 p.m. — Rafts & Canoe Race Award Ceremony.

There is no admission charged to any of the show or races. All proceeds from concessions and souvenir sales as well as raft race entry fees go to the Shrine Crippled Childrens Hospitals and Burn Centers.

For the first time this year, rafters have been divided into two categories — speed and regular. Speed rafts are those using any type of mechanical device for propulsion. Regular rafts are those limited to steering power provided by oar, paddle, pole, or sail.

The U.S. Marine Corps' participation includes the sentry dog demonstration and the entry of an "invincible" tug-o-war team that will take on all opposition.

Because of the hundreds of persons who will be taking part in water events, a safety-monitoring force of two regular Coast Guard vessels, five or six Coast Guard Auxiliary boats and several wildlife enforcement officers will be on hand to control marine traffic on the Trent River.

cumbent senators. Parnell is challenging Sen. Sam Noble and Ms. Tally wants one of the Cumberland County seats held now by Sens. Joe Raynor and Tony Rand.

The Noble-Parnell race is typical Robeson County politics. There are no issues. The two belong to different local camps and the camps are involved in a power struggle. For Parnell, the campaign means giving up a place in the House leadership — he's an appropriations chairman. He says the risk is worth it, however, and that his House experience would be considered in Senate appointments.

Ms. Tally is probably aiming to knock off Rand. He was appointed to replace Sen. Glynn Jernigan who last year became Employment Security Commission chairman. Rand doesn't have the political experience Ms. Tally has, but is running a strong campaign and this one promises to be as close as the Noble-Parnell race.

So why do they give up that often hard-earned, yet safe, seat? Why give up a position of leadership in the House to enter a chamber that is virtually controlled by a few powerful senators? Most say they'll have a greater individual voice in the 50-member Senate — more chance to accomplish what they've set out to do. Personally, some will admit, the Senate is a step up, an advance of one's political career. The successful House candidates this year will follow a well-worn path across the hall. Of the 50 Senators elected in 1980, 22 had served at least one term in the House.

However, there must be improvement soon. Our talks with voters showed that patience is fast running out on Ronald Reagan. Asked to name one thing they liked about the president, one-sixth of our voters said that he is "trying" to do a good job, giving him a grudging benefit of the doubt. Failure of the economy to perk up will persuade these voters to answer that question the way 17 others did when asked what they like about Reagan: They replied either "no" or "nothing."

Dupont said, "If we went to America and our fortunes stayed here, we would be poor."

"I'm sure the French are smart enough to figure how to get money out of France."

Dupont's eyes lit up. "Perhaps. How would you like to buy the most beautiful villa in the French countryside? I'll throw in my cousin who works as a maid in the deal."

"When my husband the perfectionist had trouble with his eyes, I suggested another perfectionist!"

"I knew Pearle Vision could not only meet my husband's high standards, but exceed them. Right down to the smallest detail. And I was right. He's said he's never seen anyone take so much time and care making sure he got exactly the right prescription. And the perfect pair of frames. He only had one complaint — he couldn't find anything wrong."

House Budget Choice: Cutbacks Or Higher Taxes

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic and Republican leaders are presenting the House with competing 1983 budget plans that offer a choice between higher taxes or deeper cuts in welfare and other domestic spending programs.

We have targeted our limited resources to those efforts that will retrain workers, cut unemployment, encourage recovery and end the Reagan recession," said House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass.

The rival leaders and their allies completed work on their separate budget plans Tuesday night and prepared for another showdown on the House floor, now expected Thursday. Basically, the competing packages are modifications of the spending plans the leaders unsuccessfully brought to the House floor last month.

The Republicans are bringing a plan to the floor that they say keeps faith with President Reagan's overall economic program. It calls for $765.1 billion in outlays and $665.9 billion in revenues for a 1983 deficit of $99.2 billion.

Democrats, saying they have fashioned a "back-to-work budget," are calling for outlays of $784.1 billion, revenues of $676.7 billion and a $107.4 billion deficit.

If both plans fail to win a majority, the House then would have to vote on Reagan's unpopular original February plan, estimated by congressional economists to have $779.3 billion in outlays, $657.1 billion in revenues and a deficit of $122.2 billion.

While neither side is yet claiming a majority, both sides agree the Republicans have the best chance for victory.

O'Neill said Tuesday that even if the Democratic plan fails, "We're winning principles out there."

"We're winning victories" by forcing Republicans to incorporate some Democratic ideas in their budget, he said.

However, O'Neill denied that Democrats want to lose the fight so Republicans and the president will be held responsible for the nation's economy at election time this fall. He said his pessimism about the chances for the Democratic plan stems from the fact that Democrats have not won a budget battle since Reagan took office last year. Michel said his problem will come from conservatives who think the deficit in the GOP plan is too high.

He also disclosed that the Reagan administration was not pleased with the $22.6 billion that the Republican plan would trim from the president's planned military buildup over three years.

The Democratic plan would cut $40.7 billion over three years.

"The Defense secretary has been on the phone to several of us and not happy with our having taken the swipe at defense that we did," Michel said.

Both plans accept amendments agreed to by the full House in the last budget debate, including additional money for Medicare, and retention of cost-of-living adjustments for Social Security, federal and military retirees.

The Republican blueprint calls for substantial cuts in a variety of social programs — including Medicaid, welfare, food stamps and nutrition — while the Democratic plan makes bigger cuts in defense and trims deficits with higher taxes.

The Republican plan calls for tax increases of $95 billion over three years; the Democratic plan calls for $147 billion in tax hikes over that period.

Among reductions proposed in the Republican plan is an additional $834 million in Medicaid cuts over the $498 million in their original plan the House rejected last month.

The GOP plan also calls for an additional $14 million in cuts in public assistance, increasing the proposed reductions in those programs to $1.03 billion. And it proposes cuts of $1.44 billion in food stamps and nutrition programs — an increase of $837 million over the previously proposed cuts.

The major reduction in food stamps would come by repealing a provision that 18 percent of an applicant's income is not counted when figuring eligibility for food stamps. Democrats, meanwhile, are adding $4.5 billion in domestic spending over their original plan the House rejected, including $1.8 billion to allow states to continue paying extended unemployment benefits to those out of work. He said 14 states will be without funds to pay those benefits by Oct. 1 unless new money is provided.

Democrats also include money to restore cost of living adjustments for federal workers and federal retirees.

Super Bowl Had No Lasting Effect On Bourbon St.

By HARRY ATKINS
Associated Press Writer
PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Four months ago, Saginaw Street seemed like the center of the universe as throngs of people — partying in the week prior to Super Bowl XVI — walked and drank their way through the January cold under the glow of bright Christmas lights.

The game, the first National Football League finale in the Snow Belt, was held at the Pontiac Silverdome, about a mile to the east.

The city had renamed the thoroughfare Bourbon Street North, after the famed New Orleans entertainment district. The five-block stretch of mostly deserted, boarded-up storefronts was transformed into a series of restaurants, pubs and souvenir shops — all operating on temporary permits.

James B. Fitzpatrick, controller of the Pontiac Motor Division of General Motors Corp., who served as chairman of the Pontiac Host Committee for the Super Bowl, estimates nearly $3 million was spent by some 150,000 people on Bourbon Street North the week before the Jan. 24 game.

Today, on the surface, it's as though it all never happened.

"I've got to tell you the truth, the new faces never came back," says Diana Winkler, who along with her husband, Al, owns Griff's, a popular tavern on Saginaw Street.

Now some of the old faces have joined the exodus, with four businesses closing since January. Most headed for nearby shopping malls.

"I didn't really expect Bourbon Street North to turn the town around," said Neil Munro, a past chairman of the Chamber of Commerce. "I don't think anybody expected any real lasting impact."

Munro is editor of the daily newspaper, The Oakland Press. Ten years ago, the newspaper was called the Pontiac Press, but it changed its name to reflect the exodus of both commerce and residents into other parts of the county.

"It used to be that the newspaper's advertising people could probably walk out the door and do about 90 percent of their business on foot," Munro said. "Now, there are very few businesses on Saginaw Street that advertise in the paper."

Pontiac, with a population of more than 76,000, is an automobile town, and its economic health has been closely tied to the fortunes of the American auto industry. The world headquarters of GM's Pontiac Motor Division and the GMC Coach and Truck Division are located here.

Pontiac's unemployment rate at the end of March, according to the Michigan Employment Security Commission, was 31.1 percent.

The city, located 35 miles north of Detroit, was at its peak in the late 1950s and early 1960s.

Despite the apparent lack of progress, downtown Pontiac is not without hope.

GM soon will move its Truck and Coach Division into the Phoenix Center, a new office complex at the south end of Saginaw Street. When that happens, officials assume a second new office building — adjacent to the Phoenix Center — also will fill.

"GM obviously will help," Munro said. "Then, you'll have about 800 people who have to have lunch and other services. I think what Bourbon Street North showed is that Pontiac is a viable place to do business if there is a reason for people to come here."

One new restaurant is scheduled to open soon in a renovated building on Saginaw Street and a cable television company soon will move its headquarters into an old department store building.

The Downtown Development Authority has come up with a plan to entice other entrepreneurs into the area. Called the Private Initiative Assistance Project, the plan, financed by the city and private money, offers to return 10 percent of an investor's expenses.

"I meant Bourbon Street North to be more than a good time," Fitzpatrick said. "I meant for it to build for the future."

"Most of the businesses in downtown Pontiac are marginal anyway. If we can replace them with more successful businesses, that would be good."

One of the most discouraged men in town is Bruno Kearns, former sports editor of the newspaper and a driving force behind construction of the Silverdome. He is the man who dreamed up the idea of Bourbon Street North, and sold it to Fitzpatrick.

"I'm determined to leave this area, head for Florida," said KEARNS, WHO WAS CLOSING OUT THE LAST OF THE INVENTORY

FROM Bruno's Locker, a sports souvenir shop. "Everybody wants to keep Bourbon Street North going, but they don't want to pay anybody to do it. I put myself in the hospital three times putting this thing together last winter."

Fitzpatrick said a Bourbon Street North Commission, formed prior to the Super Bowl to get businessmen interested in downtown Pontiac, will try to woo potential investors this summer with several events, possibly including casino-tube gambling.

"You can't see anything happening down here at the moment, but I really think the groundwork has been laid," Fitzpatrick said.

Supermodel Built New Life

NEW YORK (AP) — Jean Shrimpton, a supermodel of the 1960s who helped popularize the miniskirt, has made a new life for herself — operating a 17th-century English hotel with her husband.

"I actually think fame is ridiculous," she says.

"It's all right when you're young, but now my life interests me much more than my looks," Miss Shrimpton said in an interview published in the June 14 issue of People magazine.

Miss Shrimpton, 39, devotes herself to bookkeeping, caretaking and scrubbing in the 1620 hotel that she and her husband, Michael Cox, purchased in 1980.

She said she recently turned down a $30,000 offer to do TV ads for margarine, but hasn't ruled out modeling to boost the hotel, located in the Cornish seaport town of Penzance.

"If we desperately need a new roof or some major repair, I will go out and do a job," she said.

Sees 'Non-Compliance' On Industry Effect Studies

By ROBIN TEATER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state Departments of Commerce and Natural Resources and Community Development apparently are not complying with a statute requiring them to examine the effects of industry in North Carolina, says an employee of Farmworker Legal Services.

Joseph T. Hughes Jr., head of the services' pesticide project, drew that conclusion in an article "Targeting Desirable Industries" which appeared in the May issue of "N.C. Insight," a quarterly magazine published by the N.C. Center for Public Policy Research.

In a six-month study, the 31-year-old Durham man analyzed 20 industrial sectors in the state, looking at their economic and environmental health desirabilities.
Hughes developed an overall desirability score for each of the sectors, examining the U.S. average hourly wage rates and capital intensity of new North Carolina industry.

He also looked at the intensity of chemical use, hazardous waste generation and the incidence and severity of occupational illness and injury.
Hughes discovered a state law, passed by the 1931 General Assembly, which calls for the two departments to "conduct an evaluation...of the effects on the state's natural and economic environment of any new or expanding industry or manufacturing plant locating in North Carolina."

At the same time, however, his study concluded that many of the industries recruited to the state from 1977-80 were large, toxic-waste producing companies.

"This is counter to the intent of this legislation," Hughes said Monday in a telephone interview from Durham. "Why, if there'd been this law for 10 years...would they (state officials) be attracting some of the biggest toxic-waste producing companies to come here?"

He discovered that six of every 10 jobs recruited to the state during the four-year period were in "very desirable" or "desirable" industrial sectors including printing, transportation, machinery, petroleum, tobacco, electronics, measuring instruments and food.
In addition, he found that over 70 cents of each dollar in new industrial investment during this period also fell in these eight sectors.

"But these figures result more from good fortune than from good policy," Hughes said.
The Department of Commerce does not seem to use any criteria concerning the environment or worker health, he said.

"This study represents a first effort to fill that gap," Hughes added.
Ranking lowest in terms of overall desirability in Hughes' study were paper, rubber and plastics industries "because they have had effects on the environment and don't pay very well," he said.

He said North Carolina could recruit industry which is both economically and environmentally healthy.
"The existing legislation is obviously not being followed," Hughes commented. "I want to see in the '83 session of the General Assembly some new legislation around this question" of evaluating industry.

The state law, he wrote, should affect not only the criteria in seeking new industry but also the monitoring of new industry once it has begun operation.
"I don't want to see North Carolina become a dumping ground for dirty industry...and I'm afraid that's what's been happening," Hughes said.

Mom's Eyes On Hizzoner

AVALON, Calif. (AP) — If the municipal budget wasn't enough of a headache, Mayor Gil Saldana must also soothe his mother when he leaves his room a mess, and cope with a city clerk who used to change his diapers.

But the 23-year-old mayor, who lives at home and commutes 50 miles by boat each day to California State University-Long Beach, says he loves every minute of his job.

As mayor of Avalon, a Santa Catalina Island city of 2,000 people, "everybody knows me," Saldana said. Residents "come up to me with their problems — a sidewalk needs repairs, potholes in the street, the city sewer system is malfunctioning — I love it."

"It was only yesterday I was his babysitter, changing his diaper," recalled City Clerk Shirley Davis.

The City Council appointed Saldana mayor April 20 for a two-year term. With 71 relatives living on the island, "I have the largest voting bloc in town," Saldana said.

But being Hizzoner hasn't changed anything at home. Saldana said, noting, "Mom gets on my case if I don't make my bed or clean my room."

At age 17, Saldana became an administrative intern at City Hall, and at 19 he was appointed to the city planning commission, where he designed and developed a waterfront park.

"I don't own a home or any real property and never had dealt with a budget before," he says. "Imagine. Here I am mayor of a town that has a $3.2 million annual budget. This is a terrific learning experience."

Job Resume Is On Videotape

NEW YORK (UPI) — A former television producer has launched a new service for job hunters. Jon P. Kraushar's videotaped resumes are designed to supplement the traditional written resume, says an article in a recent issue of Dun's Business Month. Kraushar is quoted as saying the three-to-five minute presentations command attention and demonstrate resourcefulness and individual creativity. Kraushar says his clients have ranged from a senior vice president at a major office supply company to a recent MBA graduate of an Ivy League school.

AYDEN — Two candidates for the Pitt County Board of Education agreed Tuesday night that top priority should be given to construction of a new Ayden middle school, but differed sharply on how to finance the project.

Board hopefuls Ivan Hill, a state personnel executive, and Stephen Tripp, a pharmacist, spoke at a candidates' forum sponsored by the Ayden Council of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

Marvin Baldree Jr., moderator for the forum, said the Rev. R.T. McCarter, who is opposing Hill and Tripp for the board seat from Ayden, Grifton and Swift Creek townships, had sent word he could not appear. Incumbents Anne McGaughey of Farmville Township and Mark Owens, who represents Falkland, Fountain and Bell Arthur townships, also passed up the session. Ms. McGaughey and Owens are unopposed.

Hill said he believes funding for the proposed middle school, if not available from the county, could be obtained through a local option sales tax with at least a portion of the revenue earmarked for public education. He expressed doubt that a bond referendum, as proposed by the state, would win approval from voters.

Tripp, who stressed the need for more efficient "communication" among school proponents, the community and county officials, put his emphasis on the bond issue although he also endorsed the one-cent sales tax proposal.

Each candidate expressed conditional support to proposed consolidation of specific programs, such as food services or maintenance, now offered separately by Pitt County and Greenville school systems.

Hill, however, said he has found no support in the county for a merger of the two school systems. Tripp said he needed more time to study the proposal before taking a stand on such a merger.

Casablanca To Close Its Doors

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Casablanca restaurant on North Greene Street, which opened Dec. 11, 1980, will close for business after tonight, owner Leroy Cherry said this morning.

Cherry said the closing of the 12,000-square-foot facility, which represents an investment of $1.3 million, is "absolutely...totally" due to the closing of the Casablanca's Morocco Room by the city last week. "We have no choice," Cherry said.

City officials ordered the Morocco Room closed June 2 after a routine inspection by the city fire marshal and codes enforcement supervisor revealed what were described as "major fire and safety hazards."

The alleged hazards cited in a prepared statement issued by the city June 4 included: "The stage in the Morocco Room is constructed of flammable materials and does not meet the requirements" of the state building code; "only one exit light is visible in the entire Morocco Room," with "the inadequate exit lights" being a violation of the building code; and "the exit passages along the rear... wall of the Morocco Room is blocked by built-in storage cabinets and serving stations" in violation of the building code.

"We were treated extremely unfairly," Cherry said today, adding that "with what they want done," the Casablanca has "no choice" but to close.

One of the most popular Casablanca functions has been its Wednesday "happy hour." Started about six months ago, attendance at the happy hour, held in the Morocco Room, has averaged 1,000 a night, Cherry said, and has drawn patrons from "Raleigh east."

"It has become the event of the week in eastern North Carolina... publicised all over the country," Cherry said of the happy hour. "It was a good thing."

Cherry suggested that the closing of the Morocco Room and the loss of revenue generated by the happy hour, coupled with the cost of improvements required by the city to reopen, created a financial burden which the business is not financially able to cope with.

"It's put 81 people out of work," he added. "The way we were treated was unfair...totally out of line."

Since its opening, the Casablanca has been the site of a number of prestigious meetings.

The Governor's Awards banquet honoring businessmen's support of the arts was held at the Casablanca last year, with Gov. Jim Hunt, who has been to the Casablanca no less than three times, in attendance. The restaurant was also the site of the first United Telephone System — Carolina Telephone & Telegraph Co. — stockholders meeting ever held in the East.

And, according to Cherry, "all local industry has held major functions," at the Casablanca since its opening.

panel overwhelmingly approved the delay.

On an initial voice vote the panel appeared evenly divided, but on a show of hands — with lobbyists for teachers and state workers watching — the vote was overwhelmingly in favor of delay. No vote total was announced.

In a related action, the committee abruptly adjourned before voting on a motion to strike from the budget a $360,000 appropriation to buy liability insurance for state teachers.

Wilson has opposed the insurance item, saying the NCAE provides insurance as a service to its members and suggesting the budget provision was a move to reduce the attractiveness of the NCAE to teachers.

"I'm willing to spend $360,000 to dismantle that union they've got over there," said Sen. Walter Cockerham, R-Guilford, referring to the NCAE and explaining his reason for supporting the insurance item.

Earlier in the day, Sen. Bob Swain, D-Buncombe, said he was going to file a bill that would tax game room operators $200 a year for each video machine they operate. Swain said he hoped the new revenues would pay for salary increases.

Assisted Moving Blood Center To New Facility

MOVING DAY ... for the Tar River Blood Center Saturday was completed in a morning because of the volunteer effort of the 691st Maintenance Company of the National Guard headquartered in Farmville.

Fifteen officers and enlisted personnel of the 691st Maintenance Company of the Farmville National Guard Unit turned out Saturday with heavy equipment and transport vehicles to move the Tar River Blood Center to its new facilities on the Stantonsburg Road near Greenville.

SFC William Goins, coordinator for the National Guard, and Dick Carney, administrator of the blood center, reported that the move was completed without problems. Carney said that, because of the efforts of the 691st, the blood center was able to relocate with no interruption of its supplying of blood to the 25 eastern N.C. hospitals that the center serves.

Goins said the Guard members, all on a volunteer basis, reported at 7 a.m. with a five-ton tractor trailer, a five-ton fork lift, a 2½-ton truck, a three-ton fork lift and a jeep and utility trailer to load, transport and locate the blood center's refrigeration equipment, centrifuges, sterilizers, testing devices, ice makers and supplies of dry ice. By 12:30 p.m. the move was completed, he said.

CP&L Official Is Given Big Pay Hike

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The head of Carolina Power & Light Co. has been given a 20.9 percent pay increase in 1982 — upping his salary, including benefits, to an estimated $275,000 — only one year after he received a 24.9 percent jump in salary.

According to figures filed with the Public Staff of the North Carolina Utilities Commission, CP&L Chairman Sherwood H. Smith Jr., will earn an estimated $275,000 in salary and deferred compensation in 1982, up from the $227,383 he was paid in 1981.

And Smith's 1981 earnings reflected an increase of about $46,000 over the $181,250 he was paid in 1980, according to the company's annual proxy statements to shareholders for those years.

Robert Fischback, executive director of the Public Staff, said the salaries of Smith and other CP&L executives are too high.

"My personal opinion is that these executive salaries and (latest) increases are too much for the economic times we're in," he said. "I can assure the whole issue of executive salaries will be raised by the Public Staff" in upcoming rate cases.

The Public Staff computed the salary totals based on information provided by CP&L. But the company pointed out that the overall salary includes deferred compensation, and said the actual 1982 salary increase would be lower when deferred compensation is excluded.

Smith's actual 1982 salary will be $244,600, the company said, plus stock credits worth 1,518 shares of common stock. At CP&L's recent selling price of from $20-$21 a share, those credits would be worth about $30,000.

A CP&L spokesman added that the actual value of the stock credit would depend on the worth of CP&L's stock when an executive leaves. If the credits are not counted, the company said Smith's salary increase is 7.6 percent.

Smith said in an interview that studies done by an outside consultant showed the salaries of top CP&L officials have often been lower than other similarly sized companies outside the industry.

Salvador Rebels Blame Army For Slaughter

By SAM DILLON
 Associated Press Writer
SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — El Salvador's leftist rebels have accused American-trained army troops of slaughtering 600 peasants in two northern villages last week. The government jammed a broadcast of the charge and has made no comment on it.

"The first reports received from Chalatenango (province) mention 600 victims — men and women, children and old people — murdered by the gringo battalion," the rebel Radio Venceremos said quoting guerrilla commander Joaquin Villalobos.

The "gringo" battalion was a reference to a batalion that returned last month after 14 weeks of training at Fort Benning, Ga., and is taking part in an anti-guerrilla sweep in Chalatenango.

"They were killed because of a single crime: they lived within or near the places where our forces are stationed," the broadcast said. The broadcast was made

Saturday but could not be monitored here because of jamming. A transcript made by a U.S. government facility in Panama became available Tuesday.

Radio Venceremos makes frequent claims of government massacres that sometimes are confirmed and other times prove groundless. Foreign reporters cannot check this one out because roads in the area are mined and the government prohibits them from going there.

The anti-guerrilla dragnet by about 4,000 troops was launched in rugged northern areas of Chalatenango on May 29. The rebel broadcast said the slaughter occurred in the villages of Titure and Titurito, near the town of Arcatao, 69 miles north of San Salvador.

The area is a longtime stronghold of the guerrillas fighting to overthrow the U.S.-supported government. An estimated 34,000 people have died in political violence here since October 1979.

The Defense Ministry has not released any information on the anti-guerrilla sweep since it began.

However, a military spokesman confirmed that guerrillas regained control of Perquin, a town of 5,000 people 126 miles northeast of San Salvador in Morazan province, another rebel stronghold.

Guerrilla radio broadcasts claimed five soldiers were killed, 12 wounded and six captured in the weekend fighting there. They said only two guerrillas were wounded.

The government gave out no casualty information.

The ministry also reported that guerrillas blew up a bridge over the San Jose River outside the northwest industrial city of Metapan, 68 miles northwest of Guatemala City near the Guatemala border.

Fighting dropped off for weeks after the election March 28 of the Constituent Assembly, but the guerrillas said the outcome of the elections would not alter their determination to topple the government. Leftist parties boycotted the vote, and a coalition of four conservative parties won control of the assembly.

Roberto D'Aubuisson, leader of the ultraconservative Nationalist Republican Alliance (Arena) and the assembly's speaker, announced that his party is proposing amnesty for "any civilian or military person, Salvadoran or foreign, who has participated as an author or accomplice in political crimes or subversive activities."

He warned that the amnesty would be the "last chance" for the guerrillas and would be followed by tougher measures against them. He said the proposal had been sent to President Alvaro Magana and the military high command for their opinion.

As worded, the proposal apparently would extend amnesty to members of right-wing "death squads" as well as to the leftist guerrillas, but d'Aubuisson spoke only about leftist rebels at his news conference.

A former army major, d'Aubuisson was widely believed to have had a part in the assassination of Archbishop Oscar Arnulfo Romero in March 1980. However, U.S. Ambassador Dean Hinton told a meeting in Washington Monday that d'Aubuisson is now "basically a patriot" who has behaved in a responsible manner since his election as speaker two months ago.

Shivar Is Named Town Manager Of Siler City

Ben Shivar, director of community development in Greenville, has been named town manager in Siler City effective June 21.

Shivar, who joined the staff here five years ago as a planner, will complete his duties with the city on June 15 and begin his new job in Siler City, a Chatham County town of approximately 4,500, the following Monday.

plementary" of Shivar's administration of the program. She said HUD credited the city with having "one of the most outstanding and best administered" CD programs in operation.

A Charlotte native, Shivar was named CD coordinator in 1978 and became assistant to the city manager for community development in January 1980. The following July, he became CD director and was responsible for administering the city's block grant program, which had a budget from 1975 to 1981 of some $9.6 million.

Shivar received his bachelor's degree in political science from the University of North Carolina at Charlotte and earned a master's in public affairs from N.C. State University. He also completed a course in community development administration at the Institute of Government in 1981. Shivar served as vice president of the North Carolina Community Development Association for 1981-82.

A member of Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church, Shivar is married to the former Laura Willis of Charlotte.

BEN SHIVAR

City Manager Gail Meeks commented, "The city is going to miss Ben a great deal. We consider him to be one of the most outstanding community development directors in the state. He has in the last three or four years worked very hard to develop a good CD program for the city and we wish him every success in his new endeavor."

Mrs. Meeks pointed out that the Department of Housing and Urban Development, after completing its annual audit of the CD program here this week, was "very com-

Blame Fish Kill On Heavy Rain

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State officials say the recent heavy rains are to blame for the deaths of between 1,000 and 1,500 freshwater fish last week in Merchant's Millpond State Park in Gates County.

The North Carolina Department of Natural Resources and Community Development said Tuesday that inadequate oxygen levels in the pond's water caused by heavy rains caused the kill. The rains also flushed swampy areas that contain water with little oxygen, they said. Park officials reported the kill June 6.

Seek Compromising Chiropractic Issue

By JOHN FLESHER
 Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A state House subcommittee, hoping to avoid antagonizing both chiropractors and doctors, will try to draft a compromise bill describing the chiropractor's job.
 "I'd hate to have to choose between our doctors and chiropractors when they disagree so sharply," said Rep. Richard Barnes, D-Forsyth. "I'd like to see them get together if possible."
 The House Health Committee voted Tuesday to send to a subcommittee a Senate bill and a House substitute bill defining chiropractic, although each bill received mixed reactions in a packed public hearing.
 Representatives of doctors, physical therapists and dieticians said the Senate bill, approved in the 1981 session, would let chiropractors encroach on their fields.
 The Senate bill "is the most radical definition of chiropractic ever produced," said Don Chaplin, representing the North Carolina Medical Society. "It proclaims to the public that chiropractors can do anything doctors can do except prescribe drugs and perform surgery."
 Chiropractors maintained the Senate bill would give them no new powers, but feared the House version would prevent them from doing what they've done for years.

 Sen. Cecil Jenkins, D-Cabarrus, who sponsored the Senate bill, said the House version is an attempt to "stifle a practice that's been going on in North Carolina since 1917." His bill, on the other hand, is "completely consistent with the services customarily associated with chiropractic," he said.
 The Senate bill defines chiropractic as the "science and art using the natural healing processes of the body and the functional relationships between the body structures, especially the spinal column and the nervous system, for the restoration and maintenance of health."
 Under the bill, chiropractors would be allowed to manipulate the spine and joints, provide physical therapy, give nutritional advice and use diagnostic procedures including "routine analytical, physical, clinical, laboratory and radiological examinations."
 Under the Senate bill, chiropractors could conduct laboratory and radiological examinations, but would not be allowed to prescribe drugs or performing operations.

The Forecast For Thursday, June 10
● Low Temperatures

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecasts showers for Thursday in the Ohio Valley, western Carolinas, the Midwest and Great Lakes. Warm weather is expected for most areas. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
North Carolinians who didn't take advantage of the sunshine during the past two days have missed their chance because the National Weather Service says scattered showers and thunderstorms will return to the state today.

day afternoon were generally in the 80s statewide. Some cooler 70s were observed along the outer banks and in the northern coastal area as well as in the northern mountains.

Partly cloudy weather is expected to continue across the Tar Heel state today and tonight. The air over much of North Carolina has become rather moist and unstable, so there will be a chance of showers or thunderstorms mainly during the afternoon and evening.

Showers and a few heavy thunderstorms moved from northwestern North Carolina into the eastern part of the state Tuesday night. Most of that activity dissipated or moved offshore early today. But scattered showers persisted in the southeast.

At Fayetteville the mercury did reach the 90 degree mark. Readings dipped into the 60s in most areas just before sunrise this morning.

A weak high pressure system edging down the east coast will push slightly more stable air into the northeastern portion of the state. Also, drier air persists over the mountains. As a result, the chance of showers will be somewhat less over the northeast and far west counties.

A few areas received locally heavy rainfall from Tuesday night's thunderstorm activity. Almost a half-an-inch fell at the Raleigh-Durham airport in a short period of time.

'I-Dare-You' Award-Winners

Ayden-Grifton High School students Gail Nobles and Anthony Jackson were awarded the national "I Dare You" Award on June 3, according to school Principal Bill Wiggins.

On Thursday a cold front will be approaching the state from the west. This will result in an increasing chance of showers and thunderstorms over the western part of the state.

Plan Vacation Bible School

Vacation Bible School will be held at Red Oak Christian Church June 14-19. The church is located at the intersection of U.S. 264 Bypass and U.S. 264 Business.

Ms. Nobles and Jackson were selected, Wiggins said, in recognition of excellence of character, well-balanced personal development and leadership potential. Both students received a copy of William H. Danforth's book, "I Dare You" and a certificate.

Skies today will be partly cloudy with a chance of showers or thunderstorms mainly in the central and southeast during the afternoon and evening. Highs will be in the 80s to around 90, although some 70s will be found in the northeast and in the northern mountains.

Classes will be held 7 to 9 p.m. nightly for nursery, beginners, primary, middlers, juniors, intermediates, CYF and adults.

Ms. Nobles is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Nobles of Grifton and is a rising senior at Ayden-Grifton. She belongs to the math team and serves as business manager for the school newspaper, reporter for the Future Business Leaders of America and treasurer of the National Honor Society.

Partly cloudy weather is going to persist tonight and Thursday, with an increasing chance of thunderstorms in the west Thursday. Lows tonight will be mostly in the 60s. Highs Thursday will again be in the 80s to around 90 with some cooler 70s in the northern mountains.

A Vacation Bible School Fair will conclude the week's activities June 19 from 10 a.m.-noon. A closing program will be held at 9:45 a.m. June 20 during the Sunday school hour.

Jackson, also a rising senior, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Jackson Jr. of Winterville. He is a bus driver and served as president of his freshman class in addition to receiving several subject area awards.

Along the coast, winds will become easterly today at 10 to 15 knots and continue tonight. Winds on Thursday will become more southerly at 10 to 20 knots.

California Rejects Canal Plan

By BOB EGELKO
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Northern Californians have voted with near unanimity to defeat the multi-billion-dollar Peripheral Canal, a proposed 43-mile waterway that would have been used to deliver water to the southern part of the state.

The project would have linked the Sacramento River to existing canals that take water to Southern California.

$22 for a family of four making $20,000 to $25,000 a year, while the state loses $230 million in tax revenue the first year and $445 million the second.

in. The state said the tab for all the water projects, which include another canal, two reservoirs, groundwater storage facilities, and facilities to protect the delta and Suisun Marsh, would come to $5.4 billion, when adjusted for inflation. A task force headed by Lt. Gov. Mike Curb came up with a figure closer to $20 billion, and fears of the growing cost preyed on the canal.

Diplomas To 20 Grads

Greenville Christian Academy awarded diplomas to 20 graduates at a recent commencement exercise conducted by academy President J.M. Bragg and Principal Della S. Dixon.

In other ballot measures, California voters Tuesday demanded harsher treatment of criminal defendants, more prisons to put them in, and more tax cuts for themselves.

The losers, besides the canal measure, included Propositions 10, 11 and 12, the redistricting plan for congressional and legislative districts passed by the Democratic-controlled Legislature last year.

Supporters had argued the canal was needed as the "last link" in the state water project, bringing water to the south to offset the loss of Colorado River water to Arizona in 1985.

Dr. J.R. Faulkner, president of Tennessee Temple University, delivered the commencement address. John Parnell presented the invocation.

Winners among ballot issues included: —Proposition 8, a sweeping pro-prosecution change of criminal laws, lengthening sentences, admitting some illegally seized evidence, narrowing insanity defenses, limiting plea-bargaining, and giving victims more of a voice in the criminal justice system.

The fight over the canal pitted the northern against the southern sections of the state, and the lukewarm support it received in the —Proposition 1, a $495 million construction bond for the state's overcrowded prisons.

—Proposition 6, abolishing the $520 million-a-year state inheritance tax.

—Proposition 7, a Howard Jarvis-sponsored measure cutting state income taxes by requiring tax brackets to be raised annually with the cost of living. The tax cut totals

Local Students Are Invited

Two area students have been invited by the American Academy of Achievement to attend the academy's "Banquet of the Golden Plate" weekend June 24-26 in New Orleans.

DIES — Ferdinand Waldo Demara Jr., "The Great Imposter" who spent much of his life pretending to be somebody else, died Monday at the age of 60. At various times during his life, Demara lived as a Trappist monk, a doctor of psychology, a dean, a law student, a zoology graduate, a teacher, a surgeon in the Royal Canadian Navy, an assistant warden and a career researcher. (AP Laserphoto)

Tommy Leon Little, student body president at Rose High School, and Michael L. Brown, North Pitt High School student body president, will join 350 other high school students in the academy's 21st annual "Salute to Excellence" program.

Little resides at 110 Ashley Drive in Greenville and Brown resides on Route 6, Greenville.

The following awards were presented: Chairman's Award, Dana Hines; Mr. and Miss GCA, Troy Hudson and Dana Hines; Athletic Award, David Hollingsworth; Academic Award, Rhonda McLawhorn; President's Merit Award, Jerry Simpson; Jimmy Alton Woodard Memorial Scholarship Award, David Hollingsworth. The "I Dare You" award was presented to juniors Joel Nason and Sharon Dixon.

Battle Lines Shaping Up As Result Of Primaries

Democratic Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. of California and Rep. Millicent Fenwick, R-N.J., won nominations for U.S. Senate seats as returns from 10 state primaries established battle lines today for a general election campaign in which President Reagan's economic policies will be a dominant issue.

California Democrats also nominated Mayor Tom Bradley of Los Angeles for governor. If he wins in November, Bradley would be the first black elected governor of any state. Attorney General George Deukmejian won the GOP nomination for governor, defeating Lt. Gov. Mike Curb.

Brown's opponent, San Diego Mayor Pete Wilson, outdistanced a crowded Republican field and opened his campaign declaring, "The time has come to say, goodbye, Jerry Brown."

In Iowa, Democrats chose former U.S. Atty. Roxanne Conlin to run for governor. She and Republican Lt. Gov. Terry Branstad will battle to succeed GOP Gov. Robert Ray, who is retiring after 14 years in office.

In a runoff in Arkansas, former Gov. Bill Clinton, 35, continued his comeback attempt by defeating Lt. Gov. Joe Purcell. Clinton will face Gov. Frank White, the Republican who upset him in 1980. Tuesday night, they were already at each others throats.

Four senators and two governors were renominated.

There was no clear message for the national parties from the returns except the one they already had received: the economy is the issue most people were talking about.

Reagan policies dominated the debate in California, New Jersey and Ohio.

Mrs. Fenwick, 72, a late convert to Reaganomics, defeated Jeffrey Bell, an early architect of part of the Reagan program. But the congresswoman's maverick personality may have overshadowed ideology as a determining factor.

"Millicent's magic was just too much," said Bell.

New Jersey Democrats nominated millionaire businessman Frank Lautenberg, who quickly moved to make the president's economic program an issue in the race.

"The voters have a clear choice between a staunch supporter of Reaganomics and a staunch supporter of what's good for New Jersey," he said.

Republicans in the president's home state of California squabbled over who was the most loyal to Reagan.

Wilson, who opposed Reagan's 1976 presidential bid but who had the endorsement this year of the president's brother, Neil, won the GOP Senate nomination over a crowded field. Trailing Wilson were Reps. Pete McCloskey and Barry Goldwater Jr. Running a distant fifth was Maureen Reagan, the president's daughter.

Brown and Wilson quickly agreed to debate each other.

The race for the Republican nomination for governor of California was a tight battle between Deukmejian and Curb. Much of their campaign involved cross-accusations questioning each other's history of support for Reagan.

Curb conceded after about 28 percent of the vote had been counted and Deukmejian had opened a 50 to 46 percent lead.

Rep. Clarence Brown won the Republican nomination for governor of Ohio. His Democratic opponent will be former Lt. Gov. Richard Celeste, who defeated Atty. Gen. William Brown and Jerry Springer, a former Cincinnati city official.

Ohio Democrats renominated Sen. Howard Metzenbaum for a second term and he immediately told followers he expects conservative groups to "go all out in the campaign against me." Metzenbaum predicted Republicans would have "an unlimited amount of money" to spend in the fall campaign.

Winning the Republican nomination to oppose Metzenbaum was state Sen. Paul Pfeifer, who responded that "I've been through races with criers before and I'm not going to let him get away with crying his way through this race."

One Ohio race in which the Reagan economic program was an issue was the Democratic primary in which Rep. Ron Mottl, who supported the president, was opposed by Edward Feighan, on the ground Mottl had deserted his party. Feighan held a narrow lead.

Here are the latest returns from California, New Jersey and Ohio:

With 68 percent of the vote counted, Brown had 1,005,759 for 52 percent, Gore Vidal 289,363 for 15 percent, and state Sen. Paul Carpenter 270,291 for 14 percent.

In the Republican Senate race in California, Wilson had 552,825 for 37 percent, McCloskey 363,833 for 25 percent and Goldwater 273,397 for 18 percent.

In the Democratic race for governor, Bradley had 1,317,499 for 63 percent and state Sen. John Garamendi 494,943 for 24 percent.

In the GOP race for governor, Deukmejian had 839,514 for 51 percent and Curb 722,758 for 44 percent.

With 99 percent of the precincts reporting in New Jersey, Mrs. Fenwick had 189,463 for 54 percent and Bell 159,506 for 46 percent.

Lautenberg had 101,481 for 26 percent, former Rep. Andrew Maguire 90,650 for 24 percent and former Rep. Frank LeFante 80,491 for 21 percent.

In the Ohio Senate races, Metzenbaum captured 83 percent of the vote over token opposition.

For the GOP nomination, Pfeifer polled 136,207 and Walter Beckjord 61,628.

For the Republican nomination for governor of Ohio, Brown had 137,287, Seth Taft 52,476 and Thomas Van Meter 51,956.

In the contest for the Democratic nomination for governor, Celeste had 156,397, Brown 141,277 and Springer 73,697.

In other races:

Democratic Gov. Joseph Brennan of Maine was renominated and will be opposed by Charles L. Craggin III, a Portland lawyer, who defeated two state legislators. Sen. George Mitchell, a Democrat who was appointed to replace Edmund S. Muskie when he became secretary of state during the Carter administration, will be opposed in November by GOP Rep. David Emery.

Sen. John Melcher of Montana, a Democrat, was renominated and will be opposed by Larry Williams, an investment counselor and author of the best-selling book, "How to Prosper in the Coming Good Years."

Democratic Gov. Richard Riley of South Carolina was nominated for a second four-year term. His Republican opponent will be William D. Workman, a retired newspaper editor.

Democratic Sen. Quentin Burdick of North Dakota and Republican Gene Knorr were unopposed for their party Senate nominations.

In Virginia, Democrat Ira Lechner won the primary in the 10 Congressional District. He will oppose incumbent Rep. Frank Wolf in November.

Hospital Provides Place For Laughs

DECATUR, Ga. (AP) — Laughter may not be the best medicine for all ills, but doctors at DeKalb General Hospital are willing to give it a shot.

The hospital has opened a "laughing place," a blue-walled room filled with plants, a player piano, a stereo equipped with comedy records and a video tape player featuring old Laurel and Hardy films and clips from the old "Candid Camera" television show.

It's all designed to help patients laugh, said Dr. John Harrel, medical director at DeKalb General.

"I think everybody agrees that happiness and mirth and glee take one's mind off an illness," Harrel said.

The laughing place was dedicated "The Lively Room" in ceremonies Sunday. It is named after W.W.

"Wash" Lively, an original member of the hospital's governing board, who donated the money for it.

But the idea came from Saturday Review editor Norman Cousins, who said he conquered a debilitating disease with laughter and vitamin C.

Cousins said he checked into a hotel room shortly after his illness was diagnosed, deciding that he had to laugh. He brought old movie comedies and "Candid Camera" tapes.

After eight days of viewing the episodes, Cousins said he noticed a significant improvement in his condition, which involved the stiffening of joints in his back.

If laughter helped Cousins, it could help others, said Jodale Brodnax, who presented the idea to hospital authorities.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) - Stock prices lost more ground today as the market hovered just above its lowest levels of the year.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped 1.72 to 800.51 in the first half hour.

Losers held a 6-5 edge on gainers in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said little had occurred in recent days to alleviate traders' worries about high interest rates, the deadlock over the federal budget, and the recession.

Wall Streeters were watching closely to see whether the market could attract some support with the Dow Jones industrial average near a couple of landmark points.

Some saw 800 as an important psychological level. Others said the biggest test was shaping up at around 795, which marked the average's closing low earlier in the year.

Union Electric led the active list in early trading, up 1/4 at 11 1/2. A 200,000-share block traded at that price.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 1.80 to 802.23, bringing its loss since May 7 to 66.97 points.

Declines led advances 8 to 5 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 46.82 million shares, compared with 44.63 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index lost .29 to 63.07. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 1.13 at 256.87.

British forces shot down seven Argentine jets in two attacks off the Falkland Islands in which a British frigate and two landing craft were damaged, the Defense Ministry in London said today.

At least four other Argentine warplanes were damaged in the fighting Tuesday and were not expected to make it back to mainland bases 400 miles to the west, British officials said.

The British earlier claimed that six Argentine jets were shot down and one possibly damaged in the raids on British ships landing supplies and equipment.

Argentina said its warplanes sank a British frigate, damaged three landing ships so badly that two were abandoned and the third put out of action, and inflicted heavy casualties among troops being put ashore at Port Fitzroy, 15 miles southwest of the Falklands capital.

The British Defense Ministry reported the frigate Plymouth and the 412-foot-long landing ships Sir Tristram and Sir Galahad suffered "some damage," but it did not say how extensive this was. However, it said the only casualties reported were five men injured aboard the Plymouth.

The British also said the supertanker Hercules, leased to an American company and damaged in a bomb attack 480 miles east of the Falklands Tuesday, was warned by an Argentine radio station it would be attacked 15 minutes before it was hit.

The British Defense Ministry said the warning was believed to have been broadcast by a station at Ushuaia on the southern tip of Argentina.

The British claimed two attacks were made on the Protesters Get Jail Sentences

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) - Three of four men arrested in March while protesting the training of El Salvadoran soldiers at Fort Bragg have received 90-day jail sentences.

Alex Charnes, 25, and Mark Beay, 22, both of Chapel Hill, and Patrick O'Neil, 26, of Greenville, were taken to Cumberland County Jail immediately after sentencing Monday, a jail spokesman said.

The fourth protester, Stephen Kahn, 22, of Chapel Hill pleaded guilty in a federal hearing in April.

According to testimony, the four were arrested when they refused to leave the pavement of a road on the military reservation.

Lt. Gary Nichols testified he asked the protesters to leave, and was told they would not go "until the El Salvadorans went home."

An estimated 1,000 Salvadoran soldiers were trained at the base.

Satchel Paige Dead At About 75 Was He Greatest Pitcher Ever?

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — as July 7, 1906, which means he was Satchel Paige the greatest pitcher who ever lived? That question may be asked as long as serious students of the baseball discuss the game. It can never be answered with certainty because he was in his 40s when he followed Jackie Robinson across baseball's color line in 1948. But Paige, who died in Kansas City Tuesday following a heart attack at the age of 75 ... or thereabouts ... was near 40 when he beat Hall-of-Famer Dizzy Dean 1-0 in a 13-inning exhibition game. And Dean, along with many old-timers who saw Paige in his heyday, swore by him. "Let 'em argue," Dean said, "the best pitcher I ever seen is ol' Satchel Paige. My fastball looks like a change of pace alongside that li'l pistol bullet Satch shoots up to the plate." Many things about Paige, his nickname, his age and the breadth of his talent, remain in death as mysterious as they were throughout his colorful, quotable life. Paige died at 1:30 p.m. at a Kansas City hospital, just three days after attending the remaining of a baseball park here in his honor. He was born Leroy Robert Paige in Mobile, Ala., to a woman who was born a slave a few weeks before the outbreak of the Civil War. The Baseball Encyclopedia lists his birthdate

Satchel Paige

Paige stories concerns a young Joe DiMaggio, who was preparing for a tryout with the New York Yankees when he faced Paige in winter games on the West Coast. After many frustrating trips to the plate, he finally managed a hit. "Now I know I'll make good with the Yanks," DiMaggio reportedly confided to a teammate. "I got a single off Satchel Paige."

Search Will Begin Soon For Another ECU Basketball Coach

By WOODY PEELE Reflector Sports Editor It may be a few weeks before the hunt for a new basketball coach at East Carolina gets underway, but in the meantime, David Odom, who resigned the head coaching job at the school yesterday, will be around to help as he can. Odom announced yesterday that he would accept an offered position on the University of Virginia staff and would leave ECU on June 30. He will, however, remain in Greenville through the end of summer school, as an unpaid working consultant in the basketball program. Odom thus becomes the first ECU coach in some time to resign with another basketball job definitely in mind. He is the fifth coach to serve in the head position since East Carolina became a Division I NCAA member in 1963. Wendell Carr, who was the head coach when ECU joined the Southern Conference in 1964, resigned after three years, and later became athletic director at Campbell University. His successor Tom Quinn, left the job after eight seasons when his contract was not renewed, later becoming a successful coach in the European Leagues. Dave Patton, who coached the next three seasons, quit following the last game of the 1977 season, going into private business. Larry Gillman, who preceded Odom, was forced to resign after two years of his three year contract, and Odom went through his first year as head coach under the stigma of an NCAA probation for recruiting activities under Gillman. Odom, however, said that when he first arrived at East Carolina, he was "shocked" by the talent level he found. "This is just an opinion and doesn't make it fact, but the talent here was better than I ever dreamed it would be. "Despite the fact that we had a lot of dark clouds over the basketball department, we were able to put together a good record (16-11). That's not great, but it was the first winning season in five years," Odom said. "But we lost five of our first six players to graduation that year, and we brought in six freshmen and were only 12-14 the next year. We had only one letterman back on that team, and I still think that with a little luck the record could have been reversed." Odom said that he really had expected a good third year, but "the chemistry never really materialized. But I think our players have put that year behind them and we had a good recruiting year and I expect them to snap back next fall." However, he won't be guiding them. Odom said that he had talked with the five new recruits he and his staff had signed prior to the resignation, and that he felt all five would attend East Carolina. He said that of the returning players, only two, Morris Hargrove and Bill McNair, had said that they would leave — and that came prior to his resignation, so they might still return. "I think the future at East Carolina is bright and exciting, and that the goals are reachable," he said. "It will take time. But at this point, I would say that the talent level is at least as good as it was when I came here." Odom, as a member of Coach Terry Holland's staff at Virginia, said he was unsure what his duties would be. "I believe that Coach Holland tries to involve each of his staff members in the whole program, and that once the entire staff is together, assignments will become clear." Odom said that in stepping down from a head job to that of an assistant might seem strange, but that there were only a handful of schools in the country that he would consider for such a move. "Academically, Virginia ranks at the top in terms of curriculum difficulty and diversity. They graduate a high number of their enrolled athletes. Basketball at UVa under Terry Holland has grown to a position of respectability and stature throughout basketball circles. "I feel that I am a people person. Relationships with those that I work with are most important. I believe that I can enjoy a healthy relationship with Coach Holland and the other members of the UVa staff, much as I have enjoyed here at East Carolina. "The ECU administration, staff, students, alumni and fans have been most supportive and helpful to me. I could not ask for more." Odom said that he would make a recommendation to the school as to a successor only if he were asked, either by a staff member or by the administration. "It's always been a dream of

WILMINGTON — UNC-Wilmington's Ken Smith and East Carolina's Brian Peterson hooked up in a pitching duel last night in the first game of a North State College League doubleheader, with Smith finally emerging with a 2-0 victory. Wilmington came back to win the nightcap, 5-2, sending the Pirates to their third straight loss of the young season. Peterson gave up only four hits to the Seahawks, while Smith allowed just three in the well-pitched contest. The end result came through a couple of Pirate errors, which allowed the two Seahawk runs, both of them unearned. The first Seahawk run of the opening game came in the first inning. Mo Marshburn led off with a single and moved up on an out. After a second out, Chris Cabbage reached on an error, moving Marshburn to third. He then scored on a hit by John Slaughter.

Sports Hall After Nominees

The East Carolina University Sports Hall of Fame is seeking qualified nominees for possible induction for the 1982 class and classes thereafter. To qualify for induction, one must have brought outstanding recognition to themselves and to the university by their direct participation in East Carolina University intercollegiate athletics. A nominee must not have been connected with the university in the capacity to which he is being elected for a minimum of five academic years. The Sports Hall of Fame Committee is especially interested in nominees of years prior to the 1960's. Anyone wishing to submit a nomination should do so by August 1. Complete information regarding the nominee's participation in ECU's athletics should be included along with the current mailing address for the nominee, if living, or next of kin, if deceased. All nominations should be mailed to: ECU Sports Hall of Fame, c/o Office of Athletic Public Relations, Minges Coliseum, East Carolina University, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

Defense Aided Chaney's Bid

"It was defense that made her a sure bet from the start," East Carolina University head women's basketball coach Cathy Andruzzi said of the selection of one of her players, Darlene Chaney, to the 12-women East National Sports Festival basketball team. Chaney, a rising sophomore, was one of those picked for the East team for the games to be held in Indianapolis in late July. Andruzzi watched the tryouts for the team, held at Rutgers University and said, "Her offensive game was excellent, but her defense was great. "The selection committee was impressed with her fundamentals. Most of them said, 'Was she on your team this year? How come we didn't see her play?'" Chaney was a reserve as a freshman, averaging 6.9 points and 5.3 rebounds a game for the 17-10 Lady Pirates. She blossomed in the late season to help East Carolina to an NCAA playoff berth. Intensity

Lakers Again Champs

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers are National Basketball Association champions for the second time in the past three years. And according to their captain and elder statesman, the seed for the 1981-82 title was planted a long time ago.

"Last year's Houston series was the start of this season," said Kareem Abdul-Jabbar after the Lakers topped the Philadelphia 76ers 114-104 Tuesday night to win the 36th NBA Championship Series 4-2. "The NBA championship becomes sweeter as you grow older."

The Lakers won the 1980 title without Abdul-Jabbar, who suffered an ankle injury in Game 5, then watched on television as a rookie named Earvin "Magic" Johnson took his place in the pivot in Game 6 and led Los Angeles to a 123-107 triumph over the 76ers at Philadelphia.

Last year, however, was a different story. The Lakers failed to win the Pacific Division title and were stunned by Houston in a first-round mini-series.

Now, they're all the way back. But it wasn't easy.

Just 11 games into this season, Paul Westhead, who coached the 1980 title team, was fired and replaced by Pat Riley.

The Lakers, who swept Phoenix and San Antonio to get to the Championship Series, wound up with a 12-2 post-season record, a mark equalled only by the 1971 champion Milwaukee Bucks.

Johnson, who scored 42 points, grabbed 15 rebounds and had seven assists in Game 6 two years ago, had 13 points, 13 rebounds and 13 assists Tuesday night. Like his team, the 22-year-old Johnson was a repeat winner, earning the Most Valuable Player award in the Championship Series for a second time.

Abdul-Jabbar, held to a career playoff low of six points in Game 5 on Sunday, didn't score until midway through the second quarter Tuesday night, but finished with 18 points, 11 rebounds and five blocked shots. Wilkes led his team with 27 points while Nixon contributed 16 points and seven assists.

As was the case in the two previous Championship Series games at the Forum, the Lakers never trailed. It was 30-26 after one quarter and 66-57 at halftime. The 76ers got as close as one point three times late in the third quarter before the Lakers rattled off the final six points of the period to take an 86-79 advantage into the final 12 minutes.

Los Angeles led by 11 points on three occasions early in the fourth period but the 76ers stormed back once again, getting to within three points at 103-100 on a jump shot by Andrew Toney with 3:52 remaining.

But that was as close as they could get. The Lakers missed four shots but kept hitting the boards. Abdul-Jabbar, completing his 13th NBA season, finally connected from close range, was fouled, and hit the free throw to make it 106-100 with 3:07 to go. The 76ers did not threaten thereafter.

Julius Erving led the 76ers with 30 points and Toney added 29.

"Our guys just hung in there," said Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham. "I am proud of the way we played. I just want to congratulate the Lakers."

Four Vikings In State Meet

CONCORD — Four D.H. Conley wrestlers — three ranked third or better in North Carolina — will compete in the United States Wrestling Federation state championships here Saturday.

DHC's Lorenzo Strong, William Bridgett, Willie Green and Mike Long will be among some 75 wrestlers expected to take part in the Greco-style wrestling championships.

The top three finishers in each weight class advance to the Nationals, scheduled for the last week of July at the University of Iowa.

Strong, who wrestles at 154 pounds, goes into this weekend's tourney ranked second in the state — the top ranking among the four Conley wrestlers.

Bridgett (165 pounds) and Green (178 pounds) are ranked third in the state while Long (191 pounds) is unranked.

The rankings are based on a wrestler's performance during spring matches. Long has not wrestled in enough matches this spring to receive a ranking.

Cardinals 'Squeeze' Win From Montreal Expos

By The Associated Press
The St. Louis Cardinals put the squeeze on the Montreal Expos — two times, in fact.

And it added up to a 5-4 victory in 12 innings for the Cardinals Tuesday night.

"It was a struggle, but I think we executed well," said Cardinal Manager Whitey Herzog after watching his team use textbook suicide-squeeze plays in the seventh and 12th innings, not to mention two perfect sacrifice bunts.

The second squeeze play, by Ken Oberkell, capped a two-run rally and provided the National League East leaders with their winning run.

The Expos, meanwhile, weren't nearly as proficient fundamentally. They stranded 10 runners.

"We had our scoring opportunities, and we also had walks that we could have benefited from, but we didn't," said Montreal Manager Jim Fanning.

Mike Ramsey's squeeze bunt brought home Tom Herr from third base in the seventh to provide the Cardinals with a 2-2 tie. They went ahead 3-2 in the top of the 11th on Lonnie Smith's sacrifice fly before the Expos came back to tie in the bottom of the inning on Tim Wallach's RBI double.

Then in the 12th, Willie McGee tripled home Ozzie Smith with the go-ahead run and scored on Oberkell's bunt for a 5-3 Cardinal lead.

"Around these guys, you can't help but feel comfortable," said McGee, who is adjusting to the Cardinals this year after a stint in the New York Yankee system.

Braves 4, Dodgers 3
Dale Murphy's tie-breaking RBI single in the seventh inning lifted Atlanta over Los Angeles.

Thompson In Trade?

DENVER (AP) — The Denver Nuggets have been talking with the Seattle SuperSonics about a possible trade for one-time National Basketball Association All-Star guard-forward David Thompson.

"I have been talking with Seattle as well as some other clubs," Denver president and general manager Carl Scheer said Tuesday. "But any deal has to make sense for us, too."

Scheer said a deal for Thompson could be for another player or players, a draft choice, cash, or some type of combination of the three.

Thompson wasn't available for comment, but his agent, Ron Gollehan, said he thought Thompson would favor a deal that sent him to Seattle. "David would like to play for (Seattle coach) Lenny (Wilkins)," Gollehan said.

saying: "He used to like white people. I don't think he does anymore."

Holmes and Cooney appeared separately at a news conference Tuesday. Promoters and Caesars Palace have kept the fighters apart because of ill will exhibited by members of their entourages.

Cooney, who has been more available to the media than Holmes the past few days, talked for a few minutes and when there were no more questions left, left the stage to Holmes — who took it for well over a half hour.

"I wish the fight was tomorrow so I could get the questions over," said Cooney, who has told journalists, with a smile, that answering questions was one of the bad parts of boxing.

"Get there early Friday," said Cooney, who has refused to predict a round in which he thinks he will win. "The first chance I get," is all will say.

Holmes has made a prediction — "seven rounds or less" — but said he won't slug with Cooney early, but will try to soften him up first with his excellent left jab.

Before Holmes addressed the news conference, trainer Eddie Futch said, "Larry Holmes wants to win this fight even more than when he won the championship."

A victory for Holmes would make his record 40-0, and the champion has indicated his career is nearing an end. Rocky Marciano is the only heavyweight champion to retire undefeated.

"This is a fight my kids will have to live with the rest of their life ... my brothers, my family," said Holmes, indicating a defeat would badly tarnish his reputation.

"I'm fighting this fight for my family, my people," he said. "I'm fighting for my family, my people."

Asked if he might have a favorite passage of scripture he read before a fight, Holmes said he had a prayer:

"God don't let me kill this guy. Just let me beat him up and get out of here."

Racism Charges Have Holmes Angry At Media

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — 25-year-old Gerry Cooney Friday night, is upset over Larry Holmes has given members of the media a message — don't label him.

"I'm very bitter about labels being put on me," the World Boxing Council heavyweight champion said Tuesday at a news conference.

"I feel we all got a little prejudice in our hearts."

The 32-year-old Holmes, who will defend the title against

Freddie Brown, a trainer who worked with Holmes when he fought Earnie Shavers before winning the title, was quoted as Cooney is white, and Holmes has said the challenger is getting a 50-50 financial cut in the fight and is ranked No. 1 only because he is white.

In a newspaper account Cooney said he is not a racist. Cooney is white, and Holmes has said the challenger is getting a 50-50 financial cut in the fight and is ranked No. 1 only because he is white.

mine to have a member of my staff succeed me, and I have full confidence in this staff in being able to do that."

While there have been high and low points during the three years here, Odom said he could think of two big wins that stood out. "The top road win would have to be during our first year when we beat South Carolina down there. Then, the top home win would be against Illinois State. They went on to get an NCAA bid that year, and I don't think people here realize just how good they were. They may have been the best team ever to come here."

Two lowpoints also came up. "I'd have to say that I am sorely disappointed in our overall record. I'm bitterly disappointed in myself for letting that happen. As bad as people feel about that in the east, they don't feel anything like I do. I've got to live with it, and they can go on with a new program."

Odom said his second big disappointment was not being able to stabilize the ECU program in terms of player turnover. "We've had a lot of players come in for a year or two and then leave. I had hoped to end this, but I wasn't. But I do think that it will stabilize."

Odom was asked if he thought he would ever be a head coach again, and he said he wasn't sure. "I've linked my future with Virginia. I don't know if I have the goal of being a head coach again. I understand both sides of the desk and I can better appreciate both roles now."

"All I want to do now is help Virginia stay at the level it's at."

Finding a new coach at East Carolina will apparently not be done in a matter of days. Athletic Director Ken Karr indicated at the news conference yesterday that it would be about two weeks before it was decided on the method of choosing a new coach.

"We have to do an intensive review of our program. Because Coach Odom is still going to be with us until around August 1, that could become the date for clearing all our options," Karr said.

Asked what qualities he would look for in a new coach, he replied, "If you take the qualities that are moving to Virginia, those are the ones we seek."

"We need someone who can manage, motivate and recruit. I'm sure that there are a lot of them out there who meet these qualifications and we've got to find them."

In the past, committees have been named to screen potential candidates, but Karr said he could not say at this time whether that process would be used. "I will have to talk with our new chancellor (Dr. John Howell) about how we should go about it. That should be decided in about two weeks," he said.

Karr added that he feels the ECU program is on a solid base, and that getting into the ECAC-South has helped the program.

At any rate, two months of speculation would seem to lie ahead — and names of potential candidates for the job are already being spread around.

Who will eventually get the job however, remains to be seen.

Old-Timers Pace Angels To Victory

By The Associated Press
It took a couple of old-timers at the bottom of the batting order to get the California Angels back to their winning ways.

Hagler-Hearns Fight Is Off

NEW YORK (AP) — Marvin Hagler's scheduled defense of his world middleweight boxing title against Thomas Hearns has been called off, a spokesman for Top Rank Inc., announced Tuesday.
The fight originally had been set for Windsor, Ontario, May 24 and had been reset for July 15 at an undetermined site.
Hearns had wanted the fight to take place in the Pontiac (Mich.) Silverdome, close to his hometown of Detroit. Hagler had said he would fight anywhere but in the Detroit area.
Irving Rudd, a spokesman for Top Rank, said, "Neither of the fighters could agree conclusively regarding terms, including the site of the fight."

Angels to an 11-4 victory Tuesday night over the Toronto Blue Jays, snapping a seven-game losing streak.

"Those two guys sure were the key to our big inning in the fourth which changed the game around," said California Manager Gene Mauch. "They're a couple of old-time ballplayers that really like to play."

Boone and Foli keyed a four-run fourth inning that helped the Angels overcome a 3-1 deficit. Boone contributed a two-run double and Foli a run-scoring single.

Boone, batting .364 in the last 21 games, finished with two hits and Foli, with a .368 average over the same period, had two hits and two runs.

It wasn't entirely the Boone-Foli show as the Angels rapped 14 hits, including Reggie Jackson's eighth home run of the season.

"There are all kinds of ways to come out of a slump and I think that's as good a way as any of them, maybe better," Mauch said of the hitting attack. "There were more people involved today to get a kick out of a game like that."

Toronto's runs came on Barry Bonnell's three-run homer in the first and Lloyd Moseby's solo shot in the ninth.

Geoff Zahn survived the first inning to go the distance to improve his record to 6-2. Jim Gott, 1-3, was the loser.

Royals 9, Twins 4
Amos Otis was practically a one-man wrecking crew as he homered, singled and knocked in four runs in leading Kansas City to its seventh straight victory.

The triumph helped the Royals maintain a half-game lead over Chicago and California in the tight AL West standings.

Larry Gura picked up his sixth victory in eight decisions, giving up eight hits, striking out seven and walking one. Jack O'Connor, in his first major-league start, was the loser.

It was the fourth straight loss for the tumbling Twins, who have dropped 18 of their last 19 games.

Minnesota's only bright spot was Kent Hrbek's 13th homer of the season that extended his hitting streak to 13 games.

Orioles 4, Brewers 2
Scott McGregor retired 15 of the last 16 batters he faced in registering only his second career victory over the Brewers against five setbacks with a sixty-six-hitter.

Baltimore got its winning run in the seventh inning when Gary Roenicke scored from third on Rick Dempsey's chopper off the glove of Milwaukee starter Randy Lerch to break a 2-2 tie. Roenicke also homered in the ninth for the final margin.

Lerch, 3-5, was the losing pitcher.

White Sox 5, A's 4
Oakland continued its slide, dropping its fifth straight game after leading 4-3 in the top of the eighth.

Bill Almon's two-run single in the bottom of the eighth off loser Bo McLaughlin, 0-4, was the big hit for the White Sox in the game that lasted three hours, 47 minutes.

Oakland's Rickey Henderson stole three bases, including home, to raise his major-league leading total to 57 in 57 games.

Rookie Salmome Bajojas, 2-1, picked up the victory in relief of Jerry Kosman.

Mariners 2, Rangers 1
Todd Cruz doubled in Al Cowens with the deciding run in the top of the 14th to carry the Mariners over Texas in a game dominated by pitching.

Bill Caudill, 7-2, pitched 41-3 perfect innings in relief of to gain the victory. Paul Mirabella, 1-1, was tagged with the loss.

Texas starter Frank Tanana allowed only three hits and struck out three, facing only 31 batters in the first nine innings. And Floyd Bannister, the Seattle starter, fanned eight batters to raise his league-leading total to 82 before leaving in the sixth inning when he developed a blister on his left foot.

Red Sox 4, Yankees 3

Carny Lansford's RBI-single in the bottom of the 10th lifted Boston to its fourth straight victory and fifth extra-inning triumph without a loss.

Boston reliever Mark Clear, 5-1, blanked the Yankees on one hit over the final two innings to gain the victory. New York's George Frazier, 1-1, failed to retire a batter in the 10th to pick up the loss in relief.

John Mayberry and Ken Griffey hit solo homers for the Yankees.

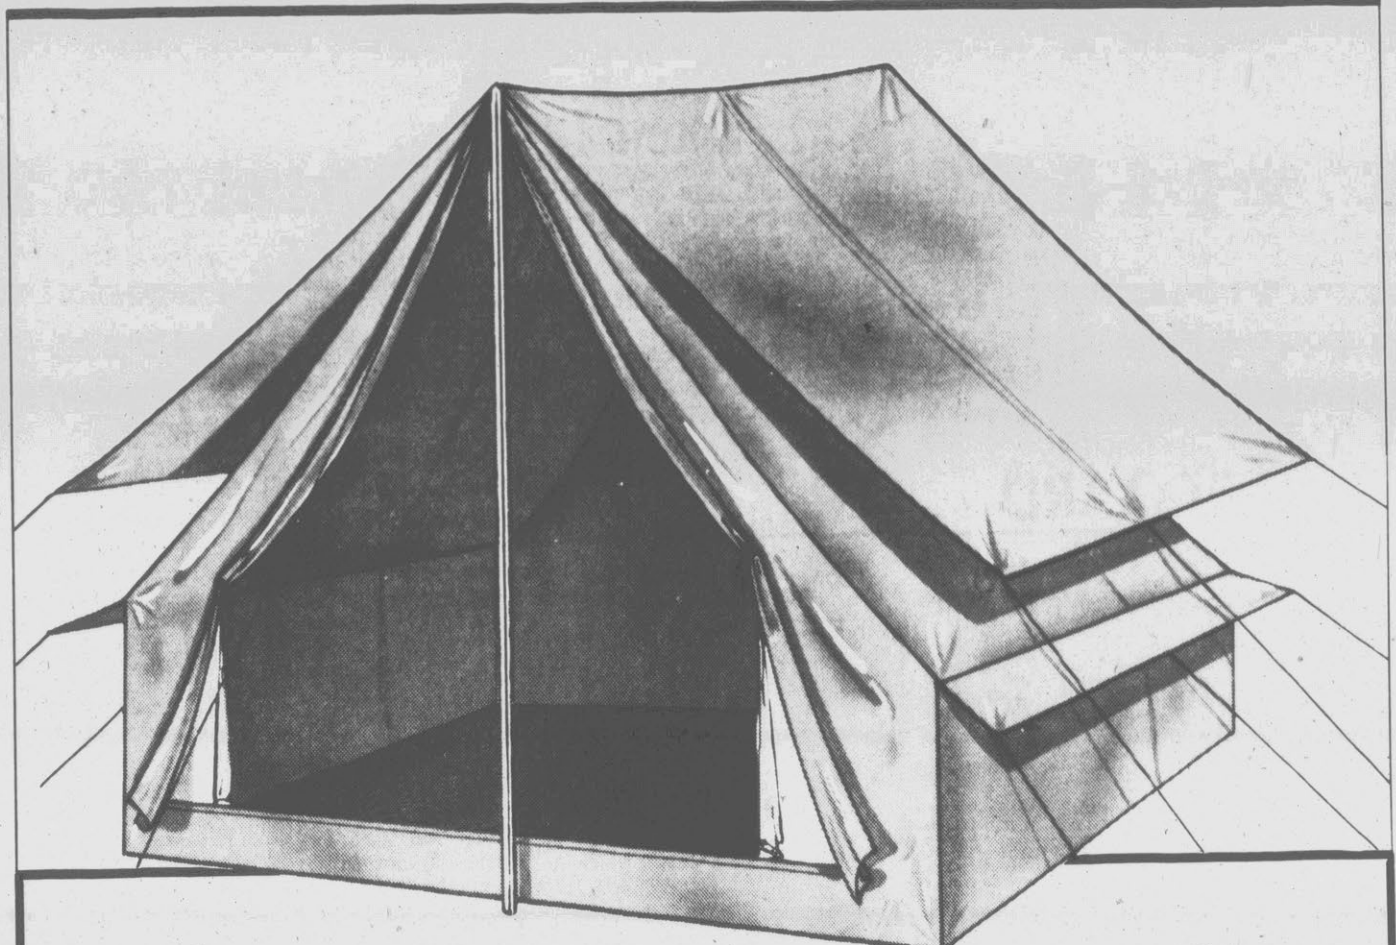

Tigers 8, Indians 3

Chet Lemon blasted two home runs and Mike Ivie a solo shot to power Detroit over the Indians.

Pat Underwood, 3-3, scattered nine hits before giving way to Dave Tobik in the ninth.

A Tentative Discovery: Planet Neptune's Rings

Record Profits By State Ports

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina Ports Authority officials say profits at the Wilmington and Morehead ports fell $1.3 million short of what was predicted last summer, but this year's $2 million profit is still higher than ever before.

And Executive Director William M.A. Greene says next year's outlook is bright because of possible increases in furniture and textile exports.

In March, the ports authority board cut the original budget, after several slow months, to show profits of just under $1.3 million.

(May) was the month we dreaded when we revised the budget," Greene said. But instead of a slump, Greene said, shipments through the two ports rebounded "overnight."

The rebound was most evident in Morehead City, which was expected to suffer a $43,000 loss in April under the revised budget. Instead, the port showed a profit of more than $51,000.

Greene said the difference primarily was because of resumption of coal exports through the port in March. Shipments by Alla-Ohio Valley Coal Inc. had been halted late last year after the company filed for reorganization under the federal bankruptcy laws. A federal court, however, earlier this year allowed Alla-Ohio to act as shipper for coal supplied by Pardee Co. of Virginia.

For the 10 months ending in April, the coal shipments helped boost profits at Morehead City to $363,000 compared with a $38,000 loss predicted in the budget.

Wilmington's 10-month figures also exceed the revised March budget as the port made about $1.3 million, compared with the $1.17 million anticipated. Adding May's estimated income, comptroller Ruff De Vane told the board Wilmington's profits should hit $1.4 million, with both ports making about $1.95 million by the end of the fiscal year June 30.

Greene said the brighter outlook at Wilmington dawned with increased container and wood pulp shipments as well as tobacco and military movements.

The ports authority's decision in April to expand its container facilities and add a third container crane also helped the port, Greene said.

"That shows confidence," he said. "And there's nothing like confidence to promote business."

Greene said he could not predict what the rest of the calendar year would bring, but said he doubted there would be any serious cutbacks in shipments through the two ports.

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists believe they have discovered a pair of rings circling close to the planet Neptune, a finding that would mean all four of the giant outer planets have ring systems.

Astronomers from Villanova University said today they discovered evidence of at least two rings around Neptune while examining overlooked data gathered at a New Zealand observatory in 1968.

Dr. Edward F. Guinan told a meeting of the American Astronomical Society in Troy, N.Y., that each ring appears to be 1,200 miles in width. Assuming that the rings go around the planet's equator, he estimated that they circle at about 1,800 miles and 4,200 miles above Neptune's cloud tops.

The other giant, gaseous outer planets of the solar system — Saturn, Uranus and Jupiter — have rings and scientists had suspected that Neptune might have a system also.

But Neptune is the eighth most distant from the sun of the nine known planets and very difficult to observe. Guinan indicated in his paper that other scientists may have missed detecting the rings because they are so close to the planet and relatively transparent.

The astronomer said his results and identification of the rings, based on analyzing variations in star light passing near the planet, have yet to be confirmed.

However, Guinan said in his paper, "we present them so that future searches can be carried out for a possible ring system that is located relatively close to the planet than are the more extensive ring systems of Jupiter, Saturn and Uranus."

Guinan noted that Australian astronomers were observing Neptune at the same time he was studying the planet from Mount John Observatory in New Zealand. These nearby observers have been asked to reexamine their data for evidence of the rings, he said.

The announcement of the discovery, made jointly by the astronomers and the National Science Foundation, which funds their work, said the composition of the rings has not been determined.

But Guinan said he believes they are composed of ice and debris from a satellite that was shattered by Neptune's gravitational forces as it was being formed.

Neptune is 2.8 billion miles from the sun and cannot be seen from Earth without a telescope. During part of its 165-Earth-years trip around the sun, it becomes the most distant planet when Pluto crosses inside its orbit.

The planet has a diameter of 30,000 miles, about 3.5 times larger than that of the Earth, and it is about 17 times more massive. Neptune has two confirmed moons, Triton and Nereid, but University of Arizona astronomers reported possibly finding a third last year.

Like the other cold giant planets, Neptune is believed to be composed of ice and frozen gases such as methane, ammonia and hydrogen.

Guinan, with colleagues Craig C. Harris and Frank P. Maloney, found evidence of the rings last fall when processing computer cards containing secondary data from the 1968 observation.

Primary recordings of the three-hour observation of Neptune eclipsing the light of a star were lost in shipment back to the United States.

Guinan said that in June 1983 and July 1984, stars will be in favorable positions for observers to use their light to confirm the presence of rings around Neptune.

But the ultimate test could come in 1989 if the Voyager 2 spacecraft, now enroute to a 1986 pass by Uranus, survives for a planned visit to Neptune.

How Tar Heel Senators And Representatives Voted

MEDICARE VS. MILITARY — By a vote of 228 for and 196 against, the House adopted an amendment to increase fiscal 1983 Medicare outlays by $4.85 billion and reduce military outlays by the same amount. The language was attached to the chief GOP-backed 1983 budget plan, the GOP leader Robert Michel, R-Ill., later said it was "the margin of difference" that caused defeat of the Republican budget. The votes occurred during debate on the budget measure (H Con Res 345) setting 1983 spending, revenue and deficit targets. The resolution later was defeated and the Budget Committee now is working on a new budget blueprint for consideration by the full House.

Sponsor Mary Rose Oakar, D-Ohio, said the House has lost "our sense of morality when we say the cost overruns of a submarine are more important than the health benefits of older Americans."

Opponent Robert Michel, R-Ill., accused the Democratic leadership of playing politics with Social Security and Medicare issues, calling this the "most aggressive and the most irresponsible exploitation of America's elderly and the issues affecting them that I can remember."

Members voting "yea" wanted to spend nearly $5 billion more on Medicare in 1983 and to cut defense expenditures by the same amount.

Rep. Walter Jones, D-1, voted "yea."

Reps. L.H. Fountain, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Ike Andrews, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, Eugene Johnston, R-6, Charles Rose, D-7, W.C. Hefner, D-8, James Martin, R-9, James Broyhill, R-10, and William Hendon, R-11, voted "nay."

TAX LOOPHOLES — The House rejected, 164 for and 246 against, amendment to force the House to formally include money lost through "tax expenditures," or tax loopholes, in its annual budget computations. The $273 billion that the Treasury loses annually as a result of some 104 loopholes — from mortgage deductions for homeowners to massive corporate write-offs — is not counted as an expenditure or potential revenue source in the annual budget resolution. Critics say this is fiscally irresponsible because Congress is relinquishing control over a major "expenditure" that greatly affects spending, revenue and deficit levels.

The vote occurred during debate on H Con Res 345 (see preceding vote).

Sponsor David Bonior, D-Mich., called revenue lost through loopholes a "hemorrhage" and said it was time for Congress to "deal with the tax expenditure within the budget itself."

Opponent Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the Ways and Means Committee that writes tax laws, said the amendment was out of place during the debate on fiscal 1983 budget and should be offered instead in committee consideration of changes in the congressional budget act.

Members voting "yea" wanted the congressional budget process to reflect their concern that tax loopholes need to be better policed by Congress.

Jones voted "yea."

Fountain, Whitley, Neal, Rose, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and Hendon voted "nay."

Andrews and Johnston did not vote.

FEDERAL PENSIONS — The House adopted, 327 for and 94 against, an amendment providing full cost-of-living increases in the pensions of federal civilian and military retirees. This moved a 4 percent cap from the fiscal 1983 budget plan sponsored by Republicans and the White House. The GOP and Democratic budget plans did not cap other annuities such as Social Security. The vote came during debate on H Con Res 345 (see preceding votes).

Sponsor Thomas Downey, D-N.Y., called it "unfair to single out federal ... retirees for an arbitrary 4 percent cap" when neither the GOP nor major Democratic budget plans contained caps for Social Security recipients, railroad retirees and veterans who get U.S. pensions.

Opponent Bill Frenzel, R-Minn., said the amendment would worsen the federal deficit, and he added that "we have been warned that control of entitlements is the key to control of the budget. If we vote for this amendment, we give away the key."

Members voting "yea" were opposed to limiting at four percent the cost-of-living hikes in the federal military and civilian pensions.

Jones, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Johnston, Rose, Hefner, Martin and Hendon voted "yea."

Fountain and Broyhill voted "nay."

Senate

MEMBERS' TAXES — The Senate adopted, 70 for and 23 against, an amendment to repeal the higher tax deductions for Washington living expenses that senators and House members approved for themselves in late 1981. The amendment restored the previous $3,000 per year flat deduction, thus abolishing the new $75 per diem system that enables members to deduct as much as $19,000 for expenses associated with being in Washington. The House has not yet considered the repeal legislation. The amendment was attached to an appropriations bill (HR 5922) that was not sent to conference with the House.

Sponsor William Proxmire, D-Wisc., said "the public well understands and disapproves of the action Congress took in the closing days of last year" and responded with "almost universal condemnation" of the higher deductions.

Opponent Robert Dole, R-Kans., said the vote "will give the media another round of shots. The million dollar anchorman will be talking about our $4,000 savings, but they will say it is a $19,000 tax break. I have suggested to some of the networks and others ... that they may be acting hypocritically."

Senators voting "yea" wanted to repeal the higher tax deductions congressmen voted themselves in 1981 for Washington living expenses.

Sens. John East, R, and Jesse Helms, R, voted "yea."

SUBSIDIZING HOME-BUYERS — The Senate adopted, 69 for and 23 against, an amendment to appropriate $5.1 billion over five years for a program subsidizing the mortgage interest paid by buyers of new homes. Tens of thousands of buyers earning less than $37,000 annually could get up to 4 percentage points of their interest paid by the Treasury. The amendment was attached to HR 5922 (see preceding vote).

Supporter Henry Jackson, D-Wash., said "this is not just a housing bill. This is an attempt to ignite a spark to start to turn the economy around."

Opponent S.I. Hayakawa, R-Calif., called the measure an expensive "quick fix" and said "the only way to reduce interest rates is to reduce spending and reduce the deficit."

Senators voting "yea" favored subsidizing interest payments to spur the housing industry and help homebuyers.

Helms voted "yea."

East voted "nay."

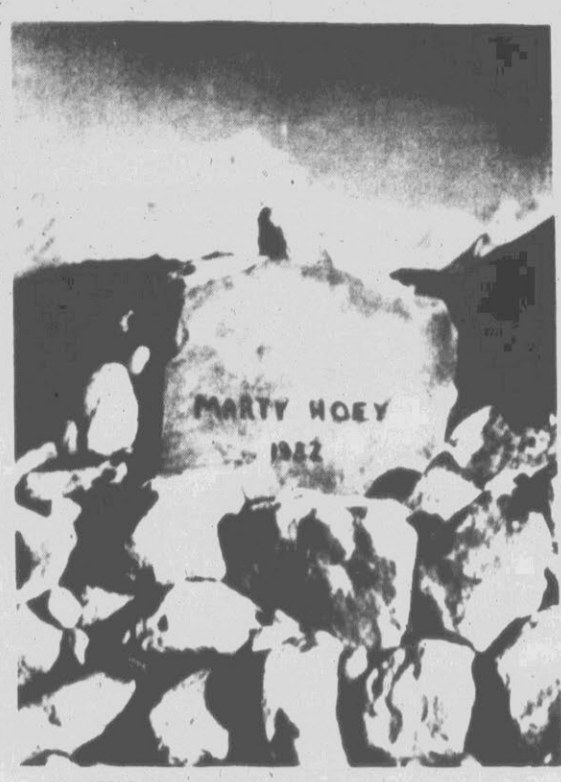

BUTTER VS. GUNS — By a vote of 61 for and 30 against, the Senate tabled and thus killed an amendment to spend $18.9 billion less on defense in fiscal 1983-85, $4 billion more on domestic programs such as Medicare and unemployment compensation, and to reduce the deficit by about $14.9 billion. The amendment was proposed to the budget resolution (S Con Res 92) for 1983 and later years. The resolution later was passed and sent to conference with the House.

Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., who voted to kill the amendment, said it would "cripple our (defense) modernization program and jeopardize our national security."

Sponsor Donald Riegle, D-Mich., said his amendment would bolster domestic programs that are "critical to the long-term security, health and human circumstances" of the U.S. Senators voting "nay" favored more domestic spending and lower defense outlays in the next three fiscal years. East and Helms voted "yea."

Want Teton Dam Rebuilt

By KEVIN McCULLEN
Associated Press Writer
REXBURG, Idaho (AP) — Donald Trupp remembers standing on an embankment, mesmerized as chocolate-colored water blasted through a gaping hole in a 300-foot dam and gushed toward his house a mile away.

The muddy water came within three feet of Trupp's house, which rests 100 feet above the Teton River. His home was spared, but the flood damaged homes of 4,000 other southeast Idaho residents.

The earthen Teton Dam, built after years of argument, burst June 5, 1976, as it was being filled for the first time. The angry water rolled downstream, inundating 180 square miles, killing 11 people and an estimated 16,500 livestock and causing about $500 million in damage.

Six years after the disaster — blamed on a design flaw which allowed water to erode the dam's silt core — Trupp and many others want the dam rebuilt.

They say it would provide the Upper Snake River Valley with an irreplaceable source of irrigation water, control annual flooding along the Teton and Henry's Fork rivers and generate electricity.

Trupp is secretary of the Upper Snake River Water Protective Association, a water user's group. Both the association and the Fremont-Madison Irrigation District passed resolutions earlier this year urging the dam be rebuilt.

"We have been using every effort to try and get it reconstructed," said Mary Smith of Rexburg, attorney for the Fremont-Madison Irrigation District. "The need for it now is greater than when it was built."

Heavier than normal winter snows are now melting, swelling the Teton River to flood stage. "If you had a dam here, you could hold all that water back," Trupp said.

"The need for the dam — supplemental water storage and flood control — are the same problems that existed before the dam was built," said long-time Rexburg Mayor John C. Porter.

The federal Bureau of Reclamation recently completed a study on the feasibility of reconstruction. Steve Wade, regional public-affairs officer for the bureau at Boise, said the study, while not highly detailed, supported some of the irrigators' claims.

"Our people tell us that they feel a safe dam could be built at the site," Wade said.

Wade, however, said the bureau couldn't begin a reconstruction project without total community and congressional support. He was unsure how much reconstruction would cost.

Rep. George Hansen, R-Idaho, also said he would be reluctant to seek approval for reconstruction unless convinced there was widespread backing.

Porter conceded that many Rexburg residents are indifferent about rebuilding the dam. Del Klinger, Madison County commissioner, said the same attitude seems prevalent in the county.

Trupp said his neighbors — many of whom saw their homes obliterated in the flood — fervently favor rebuilding of the dam, but want assurances it would be safe.

Marva Holman of Sugar City, who was vacationing in Mexico City when her home was buried by the muck, said she'd be wary of a rebuilt dam.

"Every year I'd wonder if that was the year it would break again," Mrs. Holman said.

Reactivating Traffic Signal

Ron Sewell, the city's director of engineering, said the traffic signal at the intersection of Third and Washington streets is being reactivated following City Council action in May.

Sewell said the council adopted an ordinance last November "to remove five traffic signals in the Central Business District that did not meet warrants for signalization."

He said the Third and Washington signal has since been re-evaluated and the council approved reactivation. On June 7, the bags were removed from the signal heads and the signal was placed on flash. Effective Monday, the signal will be back in normal operation, Sewell reported.

Tells Class Prison System

Donald D. Walter spoke with the consumerism classes of Gigi Walter at North Pitt High School on law and the prison system of North Carolina.

Walter served three years as a member of the Governor's Drug and Detention Council and did volunteer work at the youth center in Raleigh.

The two classes recently completed a unit on laws, punishment and prisons in North Carolina, according to Mrs. Walter.

Writing Is Compulsion

SUCCESSFUL NOVELIST — Jon Hassler, author of five novels, devotes his mornings to writing in his office at St. John's University in Collegeville, Minn.

By CHRISTOPHER EVANS
The Minneapolis Star COLLEGEVILLE, Minn. (AP) — One September day in 1970, Jon Hassler and a fellow teacher at Brainerd Community College made a bet.

They would each write a short story every two weeks. If one of them didn't write a story he would pay the other one 50 cents.

After eight weeks Hassler's friend dropped out, but Hassler continued through to the spring, writing 14 stories.

Hassler has since written five novels. His latest book, "The Love Hunter," has been optioned by Robert Redford's film production company.

"Half my life was gone, and I thought if I was ever going to write I'd better get started," Hassler said in recalling the friendly bet.

"It is a wonder to me how far I've come," said Hassler, the son of a grocer, born in Minneapolis and reared in Staples and Plainview.

"I was so completely occupied with a wife and three kids and a house and a job that I was never sure I would be a writer. I never had any encouragement along those lines," Hassler said.

"I grew up in a place where artistic pursuits were thought to be somewhat suspect. It was something a woman could do, but a guy had to go out and make a salary."

So after he graduated from St. John's University in Collegeville in 1955 with a degree in English, Hassler began teaching — the first 10 years in high schools and the next 15 years in community colleges.

"It wasn't something I really planned on," he said, "but now I see it as a good thing. I remember having a really strong urge to write in my 20s, and yet not having the time or what I considered to be the subject matter."

Hassler, whose five novels are all set in Minnesota, draws heavily on his teaching experience, especially in his novels "Staggerford" and "Simon's Night," both of which received high critical acclaim.

His other two books, "Four Miles to Pine Cone" and "Jemmy," were written for young adults and are based on children he met in the classroom.

In "The Love Hunter," teachers are the two central characters, but Hassler has for the first time moved away from the classroom.

Hassler says he thinks of novelist John Cheever as his teacher.

"I've never met the guy, and I've never had a writing teacher. But I've read him very, very closely," Hassler said.

Hassler, who now teaches one class a quarter at St. John's University and spends most of the rest of his time at the typewriter, says writing has become a compulsion for him.

"It seems sometimes like I'm making up for lost time. The funny thing is I want to also keep teaching. I taught all those years, wondering if the day would come when I could quit. Well, that day came last year, and I found I missed teaching," Hassler said.

"It does things for my writing, but I'm not sure what. I like that flow of people through my life. I like the way quarters begin and end and begin again."

Hassler, who is separated from his wife, says he finds the sprawling, monastic community of St. John's, surrounded by rolling farmland, woods and water, "a wonderful atmosphere to write novels in."

He prefers to write in the morning, beginning about 8 a.m. Then shortly after noon, "I can feel it go," he said.

"It was hard for me to start writing, but I made myself do it so thoroughly that now there is something wrong with my day if I don't write," Hassler said.

The author has the five framed jacket covers of his novels, arranged in the order in which they were published, left to right, along one wall of his office.

"I guess I'm more confident now. The very fact that these books have been published makes me more confident. But that's why I have those pictures up there. I suffer from lack of confidence pretty regularly, and looking at those helps," Hassler said.

Hassler, who says he's not happy any more when he isn't working on a novel, is currently writing his sixth.

"The setting this time is not northern Minnesota but southern Minnesota," he said. "It's more of a leisurely character study than my other books, and it grows out of a whole bunch of images I have of those years when my family moved to Plainview, near Rochester."

Plan Jobs For Young People

The Summer Youth Employment Program, sponsored by Martin County Community Action, Inc., is set up to help economically-disadvantaged youth find summer jobs. The program will begin June 21 and continue until August 13.

Some 500 residents of Martin, Pitt and Beaufort counties between the ages of 14 and 21 will be placed in 32-hour a week jobs. Those who are school drop-outs are required to attend school four hours per week and work on the job for 28 hours. A total of 55 college students are permitted to work in the program.

The program will provide work experience, labor market orientation, counseling and possible permanent job placement for those not returning to school. The program is coordinated with the Employment Security Commissions in Martin, Pitt and Beaufort Counties.

Applications have been distributed through the local schools and community colleges and may also be picked up at the tri-county office.

Named Winner National Award

Brent DeMarc Moore has been named a 1982 national award winner by the United States Achievement Academy in history and government. Moore attends Gritton Elementary School and is the son of the Rev. and Mrs. Farney Moore.

Students are selected for awards based on academic performance, interest, aptitude and recommendation from a teacher or director.

West presented declarer with a trick he was unlikely to make under his own steam. He was well rewarded for his act of charity.

North-South were using transfer bids in response to no trump opening bids. North's sequence showed a five-card spade suit and a hand good enough to invite game in either his suit or no trump — thereby implying a reasonably balanced hand. Since South had a near maximum opening with good intermediates and two key honors in his partner's long suit, he accepted.

West led his fourth-best heart. Declarer played low from dummy. East won the king and returned a heart, knocking out one of declarer's entries to dummy. Declarer won performance on the table and led a spade to the queen. East played the seven to start an echo — he wanted his partner to know he had an even number of spades.

West realized that his partner could not hold another point in addition to the king of hearts. And his partner's signal in spades meant that declarer had started with the king-queen doubleton. So West made his first good play when he won the ace of spades. Then he made an even better one by exiting with a club!

Since declarer still held the blocking king of spades, he could not afford to win the club in dummy — he had to win in hand. He now had four club tricks in the bank, but no longer could he come to nine tricks! After cashing the king of spades, he crossed to dummy with the king of clubs and cashed two spades. However, declarer had no good discard on the thirteenth spade. If he let go a diamond, West would be able to make three diamond tricks when declarer led a diamond from dummy. So declarer left a spade on the table and led a diamond to his jack.

West had a counter. He won the queen of diamonds and put declarer back in his hand with a heart to the queen. Declarer could cash his club winner, but West then scored the last two tricks to successfully conclude his brilliant defense.

A Love-Hate Relationship Is Explored

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The White House called Bill Moyers' last documentary about budget cuts in social programs a "low blow." Moyers' CBS News special tonight, "Our Friends The Germans," should be more to the president's liking. On the day President

Reagan was to arrive in Bonn for a meeting of members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, CBS examines West Germany's complicated love-hate relationship with the United States. It's a connection that began in the rubble of post-Nazi Germany, turned into a full-blown alliance during the Cold War but is now springing emotional leaks, as West Germany flexes its technological muscle and national identity, and fears becoming the nuclear battleground for someone else's war. In a sense, the illuminating "Our Friends The Germans" deals with another side of the federal budget fight: the costly defense of Europe and its most immediate buffer, West Germany.

Merely by pointing its cameras across the Berlin Wall, and visually presenting philosophical, spiritual and economic differences between the two Germans, CBS offers a version of Reagan's political reality and a rationale for America's costly European peace-keeping effort.

"The Americans are the ones who make sure the Russians don't move that wall west," says a man whose passage past the wall was purchased by West Germany for $20,000 after he failed in three escape attempts.

The man questions the understanding of West Germany's pacifists. "Perhaps, these young people would also have to live in a dictatorship for a while to know what it means to be free, and to be able to live free."

The United States maintains 350,000 troops in West Germany. To some Germans, the soldiers are a necessary protective evil and a burden of World War II guilt. To others, any foreign presence on German soil is a cause for World War III anxieties, spurring a growing anti-nuclear, anti-American movement.

Although most Germans view the Soviet Union as the more serious threat, Uncle Sam gets the most public ridicule. "We can't talk to the Russians in the way we can to America, because America's supposed to be our friend," says one young German.

Yet to a small segment, America is the more evil giant, with nothing to offer besides "Coke and hamburgers." Some Germans feel invaded, closing their night spots to American soldiers. Yet these are the same servicemen who are in a foreign land to protect Germans, perhaps, more than anybody else, they need friendly drinks, casual conversation and relaxing relationships.

In one eerie scene, a few feet separate American and East German soldiers patrolling the German border. "You see a guy sitting there, staring," says one Army private. "You say, 'Is he gonna shoot me? Is he thinking, 'Well, should I walk across and shake his hand and say hello to him?'"

The GIs don't feel Germans appreciate the risk. Says one: "I don't think a lot of Germans understand that the majority of Americans are willing to die on their soil, anywhere in Europe, for their safety."

We thought "Made in Taiwan," on PBS tonight, was about another ally, from the perspective of its manufacturing industry. Instead, it's a look at Taiwan's best television.

It's an Ed Sullivan-type variety show, with jugglers and sword-swallowers. Billed as family entertainment, why is it on at 10 p.m. EDT?

Don't fret, though. It's all very amateurish, with but one claim to fame: By comparison, American TV looks scintillating.

FIRST COUPLE OF COMEDY — Gilda Radner and Gene Wilder are Hollywood's latest love couple, having parlayed an off-screen romance into a series of film deals that could keep them paired on movie marquees for many years to come. It was during the shooting of "Hanky Panky", a comedy-thriller that he opened to positive audience reaction despite less than enthusiastic comment from critics, that the Radner-Wilder romance was reportedly born. Dolly Returning To Tour Routine HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Dolly Parton, who took three years off to star in a couple of movies — "Nine To Five" and "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas" — will return to the concert circuit this summer.

A spokesman for the busy, blonde country singer said Dolly, who last toured in 1979, will visit 31 cities to star in 46 concerts beginning at the World's Fair in Knoxville, Tenn., July 17.

During her hiatus from the road Dolly also won accolades for her platinum record of "Nine to Five" and wrote original songs for the soundtrack album of "Best Little Whorehouse in Texas."

TV Satellite News Channels Schedule A June 21 Opening

By KENNETH R. CLARK
UPI TV Reporter
STAMFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Not even David Merrick would start full dress rehearsal on a Broadway play a month before opening night, but then the people who will raise the curtain June 21 on Satellite News Channels never expect their show to close.

The initial audience for the new 24-hour cable news service conceived by ABC and Group W Satellite Communications will open to an initial audience of 2.6 million subscribers. That crowd is expected to swell to 5 million by the end of the year, and to 7.5 million by the end of 1983.

SNC president William S. Scott said he wants to be ready.

"I remember, I was running an audio news service years ago and we were supposed to go on at 6 a.m.," he said. "We had a big Ampex board and we had it all wired and at 3 a.m., we said, 'It's done.'"

"We threw the switch and smoke came out of it. We got it fixed ... but that brief moment set me back about 400 strands of hair. I've never recovered...."

Beneath the glass wall that encloses one end of Scott's office in a studio so new half of it still is in packing boxes, more than 100 broadcast journalists and technicians labored mightily.

Writers wrote. Directors directed. Anchor men and women stood in hot lights before live cameras delivering news from wire services and ABC bureaus all over the world, and none of it was going anywhere.

"We make a promise — give us 18 minutes and we'll give you the world," said

Scott. "We want to go through this and make sure it's right ... We're going to be the best video news anywhere. This is the single most complex news operation that's ever been put together."

The view belied any thought of hyperbole in the statement. The SNC studio, resplendent in deep rust-red and wood tone with gray carpet and desk tops to cast a rosy pink glow, dwarfs any studio boasted by ABC, CBS or NBC.

SNC, utilizing an unprecedented five transponders aboard the high-flying Westar satellite, will go on the air with an 18-minute "wheel" of news, constantly updated, 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

Regional feeds from 24 participating television stations — many of them CBS and NBC network affiliates — and from a Washington bureau with 50 staffers, will flow between commercials, adding to the report.

Cable operators will be given a chance to develop and sell their own 60-second local news programs and as an incentive to sign up for the service, they will be given a one-time cash bonus of 50 cents per subscriber.

Early next year, a second news channel — SNC-II — will go on line with in-depth coverage, but the SNC-I operation will deliver like a machine gun.

No story, said Managing Editor Tom Capra, will exceed 60 seconds in length. His office, too, overlooks the studio and a stopwatch never was far from his hand as he rode herd on the activity below.

"We're in the hard news business — no pets," said Capra. "Well — groundhog news is hard news on Groundhog Day. We'll do your Fourth of July parade wrap-up, but we're not going to do features and analysis. Nothing runs longer than a minute."

It was Capra's lot to hire the people who will staff the new operation, and since he found himself buried in 9,000 resumes shortly after the formation of SNC was announced, the lot was not an easy one.

"I read about the first 5,000, and after that, we started computerizing them," he said. "We did really well. This staff is absolutely tremendous. One of the things we did was look for experienced people. Our major competitor started with a lot of kids and trained them as they went."

"We decided long ago not to do that, so we put enough money in our budget to attract experienced news people ... There are no kids. They are all at least 30 and many of them are over 50. Some are over 40 and one, I think, is over 50."

From the 9,000, Capra drew 250, and from them, he drew nine anchors for the never-ceasing newscast.

"One of the keys in choosing these anchors was to turn away from the television set while watching their audition tapes," he said. "I'd just turn away and stare at the wall and listen to them. If they cut through all the background noise and junk and I could clearly understand them, they got consideration."

But human talent wasn't all the people who put SNC together were looking for. They wanted computerized talent as well, and a creature (since it paints like a combination of Andy Warhol and Michaelangelo, it can scarcely be called a machine) named the Institute of Technology Images System filled the bill.

ITIS is one of two presently in existence. Art director Billy Sunshine said its twin is working for George Lucas who is working on his third "Star Wars" epic and much of what surrounds Luke Skywalker and Han Solo will be found in the SNC newscast.

Handful Bahamian Socialists Fight King Dollar

By JOHN THOR DAHLBURG
Associated Press Writer
NASSAU, Bahamas (AP)
In a rundown neighborhood five miles inland from chic Bay Street and the Straw Market, a group of young men led by a professor who studied political science in Iowa and Indiana dream of bringing socialism to the Bahamas.

No one, not even the leaders of the Vanguard Nationalist and Socialist Party, gives the outnumbered group much chance for victory in the June 10 general elections. The party workers' goal is 5 percent to 10 percent of the popular vote, after tallying only 55 votes nationwide in the last general election five years ago.

Fiercer competition for the Progressive Liberal Party of incumbent Prime Minister Lynden O. Pindling is expected from the opposition Free National Movement, led by millionaire lawyer and former Attorney General Kendal Isaacs.

"The economy is not yet bad enough for revolutionary parties like the Vanguard to succeed in the Bahamas. We would be very surprised to see them win even one seat," said Isaacs.

Forty-three seats in the House of Assembly are up for grabs, and the leader of the majority party will be asked by the governor-general to form a government. The Bahamian Parliament has a Senate, but it is a non-elective body.

The government must hold elections every five years, or when it loses a vote of confidence in the House.

There are some, like Dean Collingwood, a professor of sociology at MacMurray College in Jacksonville, Ill., who think the Vanguard could be a surprise. The party is running candidates in 18 districts.

Collingwood, an observer of Bahamian politics, cites 20 percent to 30 percent unemployment (the government has not issued statistics since 1980), rising crime and drug and alcohol abuse among the young as reasons.

Both major parties are dismissed with a shrug by Vanguard members as "rival groups of hustlers" and "two different cliques of lawyers."

Chairing the 10-year-old Vanguard Party is former Purdue University political science professor Dr. John McCartney, an articulate, American-educated Bahamian who quotes Martin Luther King Jr. and Abraham Lincoln more often than Marx or Lenin.

"Strange as it may sound, I think my awakening probably came when I went to Iowa as a student in political science at Drake University," says McCartney, speaking loudly to be heard over the rain pounding on the roof of the rundown bookstore that serves as the Vanguard Party's command post, printing press and meeting hall in Nassau's impoverished "black belt." "First, there were the farmers so interested in their work and in production. It was so radically different from the kind of lazy cater-to-the-tourists economy we have in the Bahamas. Then, there was the shock of seeing white men doing manual labor like mowing lawns and sweeping floors."

The Commonwealth of the Bahamas achieved internal self-government in 1969 and full independence from Britain in 1973, led by Pindling and his party.

"But soon we began to perceive a change in the class of men who had led us to independence. They adopted the same postures and privileges as the whites they replaced. In Nassau, they even moved into the same houses on Prospect Ridge," McCartney says.

Repelled by what they saw as the opportunism of their young nation's leaders, a tiny cluster of Bahamian socialists formed around 43-year-old McCartney and the Vanguard Party.

The walls of their headquarters are covered with colorful, politically confusing posters. Lenin, "Che" Guevara and Fidel Castro are there, but so are Billy Graham, Malcolm X and King.

For now, the party speaks with the lonely voice of an aged printing press, while larger parties buy big chunks of broadcasting time, print mass-circulation tabloids and hand out T-shirts and pennants to voters in the archipelago's 43 constituencies.

"The election campaign has been turned into a rum-filled circus by the PLP and FNM. We will not hustle and pander like that, even if it costs us a few hundred votes," says McCartney.

McCartney and his followers talk of the need to introduce a graduated income tax to pay for expanded social services, and for curbs on the hundreds of foreign banks, trust fund and insurance companies that have turned this tourism mecca into a Switzerland for North America.

"We want to end the rule of King Dollar here," says Lionel Carey, 39, a founding member of the party.

But their socialist rallies or campaign "walkabouts" are sometimes met by a hail of bottles and bricks in other neighborhoods.

Although they concede that they will lose most, if not all, of the 18 districts in which they are presenting candidates, Vanguard members predict the winners of the June elections, whether PLP or FNM, will be incapable of dealing with the chronic unemployment, violent crime, inflation and allegations of widespread graft and influence-peddling that nag the Bahamas.

"Both the government and the opposition, they treat the country as though it were an alcoholic," says McCartney. "Instead of helping it overcome its sickness, they keep feeding it liquor and keeping it drunk. That makes us forget the problems of poor housing, the low standard of living, prostitution, the laughable level of education and culture, the lack of control we have over our own economy.

"But we in the Vanguard Party have news for the gentlemen in power. Some day, the drunk is going to wake up."

Jurors' Wait Is Now A Fun-Time

BRIDGETON, N.J. (AP) — Jurors waiting for Superior Court duty used to describe their hot, steamy waiting room as "the dungeon." Now they can while away the hours playing Pac-Man or watching television.

"This room is something we have long needed," said Superior Court Judge Philip Gruccio. "We're trying to make the jurors' stay here happier."

The waiting room has chess, checkers and backgammon games, a color TV and a video game in the snack bar next door.

Last November, 69 of 70 jurors signed a petition protesting their occasional displacement to an unfinished portion of the basement.

Amerasian Children: Complex Vietnam Legacy

By DENIS D. GRAY
Associated Press Writer
HO CHI MINH CITY, Vietnam (AP) — They are freckled or blue-eyed — starkly different from the other children of Vietnam, these youngsters whose fathers left them years ago to return home to the United States.

Bureaucracy, politics and prejudice are insuring that many of these Amerasians — born of liaisons between American men and Vietnamese women during the Vietnam war — will probably remain outcasts in Vietnamese society and never find homes in America.

"Our policy is to let them all go," Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach told a group of visiting American Vietnam war veterans last week.

But as the two sides got down to talking details, it became clear that the children and their mothers seeking exit from Vietnam would be subjected to the same complex, case-by-case process that has existed since 1979.

Here in what was called

Saigon before the Communist victory in 1975, a dozen Amerasians and some Vietnamese mothers gathered outside a municipal building where a female official was giving the delegation from the Vietnam Veterans of America a stern lecture on maternal love and fractured families.

The youngsters and mothers trailed the veterans when they emerged from the meeting, pressing identity and emigration papers on them and begging for help.

One woman broke down in tears. Another said that her four children — fathered by three Americans — sold the contents of garbage cans and movie tickets on the streets to eke out a living.

"My father in America. You buy peanuts," repeated a girl with brownish hair, freckles and a disarming waif-like smile, offering peanuts for one dong (10 cents) a packet.

The Americans could make few promises to them.

The United States does not automatically grant citizenship to Amerasians. Washington's Indochinese refugee policy provides for the admission of Vietnamese who used to work for the U.S. government, for those with next-of-kin already in the United States and for those who face persecution in Vietnam. But being ostracized for being half-American isn't the kind of persecution that Washington recognizes.

Several bills before the U.S. Congress relate to Amerasians but none is comprehensive.

One would deal only with offspring of U.S. servicemen. But the large majority of Amerasians in Vietnam were fathered by civilians, most of them working on contract with the U.S. Defense Department, according to a U.S. Embassy source in Bangkok, Thailand.

An unknown number have escaped aboard boats. About 100 to 200 others have left under complex provisions of the United Nations-sponsored Orderly Departures Program, which began in 1979. Only 11 have emerged from Vietnam carrying U.S. passports.

Donald Colin, who heads the program at the U.S.

Embassy in Bangkok, says there are documents now on about 2,000 Amerasians in Vietnam. Of these, some 1,100 are considered "possible Americans" because some claim to U.S. citizenship may be established. Seventy-five Amerasians still in Vietnam are now documented Americans.

The U.S. government believes there are perhaps 4,000 Amerasians — averaging 12 years of age — who are "unassimilated" and would want to go to the United States, which has no diplomatic relations with Vietnam. There are no statistics on those who accept Vietnam as a permanent home.

The Vietnamese government denies it discriminates against the Amerasians. But many mothers of Amerasians claim the children encounter deep prejudice, sometimes hostility, in day-to-day life.

One woman told the American delegation she had a son by a U.S. Navy man who left Vietnam in 1972 and has now married in the United States.

Her son, now 10, was allowed to attend school, Mrs. Bich said, but she withdrew him after the teacher consistently berated him for being an American. Squatting on the pavement here, she displayed photographs of her son, the man she said was the American father and an application asking the U.S. government to display "the spirit of philanthropy toward the half-breed."

"Traditionally Vietnamese have felt a cultural and racial superiority toward persons who are not pure ethnic Vietnamese," says an information sheet of the U.S. Embassy in Bangkok. "This is compounded by the view of the present government that Amerasians are simply the children of former enemies and of women who consorted with them."

Colin believes that complex administrative procedures on both sides and meager Vietnamese resources for tackling their side of the departure program are to blame for the slow movement of Amerasians to the United States.

Both sides must unravel the complicated human dimensions. Who besides the mother should go with the child to the United States? Does the American father want the reunion? Will the mother regret it if she lets the child go without her? On the American side, the cooperation of the father is often necessary to initiate the process. Although many of the fathers probably would not want a marital bond, Colin says most who are tracked down or who send letters to his office are willing to help get the children and the mothers to the United States.

"We get a lot of letters saying they would like to get their kids out," Colin said. "I lived with the mother, the letters will say. 'Her name was Suzy.' That kind of stuff."

AMERASIANS — Children born of American fathers and Vietnamese mothers pose for a photographer in Ho Chi Minh City, formerly Saigon. Many claim servicemen as their fathers, but a majority are said to be sons and daughters of American civilian employees stationed in what was then South Vietnam. (AP Laserphoto)

The Moonlight Is Often Unhealthy, Says Doctor

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Moonlight does not become your health.

Gershon Lesser knows why Dracula was such a pallid type, never the apple-cheeked boy. Working at night is unhealthy, the doctor says.

Worse yet is working a melange of different shifts, he says.

He is worried that the United States is becoming more and more a nation of night people, pointing out that radio and television networks and stations are paying increasing attention to the post-midnight market.

"Our lifestyle is causing great strains on our nervous systems and if we don't do something drastic about reversing the trend, we are headed for a national health disaster," he says.

"About 50 million Americans have sleep problems," he said, promoting abuse of barbiturates and amphetamines.

Yet, many Americans — police and firefighters, bartenders and banjo pickers, journalists and jailers — must work nights or irregular hours. What would the doctor advise a patient who had to work several different shifts in a week, most of them at night?

"I would advise you to consider finding some other kind of work. I don't think anybody should do this — that's the reason so many doctors die young."

"Physicians have a very high early mortality rate," he said, because of the stress of answering emergency calls at night for years. "Many of my patients are other physicians."

Lesser, an internal medicine specialist, is a professor at the University of Southern California Medical School. An attorney as well as a physician, he is also on the faculty of the University of West Los Angeles Law School and is medical director of Westside Hospital and a radio and television health issues commentator.

But what can round-the-clockers do to stall off the effects of working untill dawn, short of finding a new profession?

Basically, Lesser maintains, night workers have already used up their quota of body abuse and must lead lives otherwise as clean as eagle scouts — no cigarettes, little or no caffeine, lots of exercise, lose any excess weight, avoid nervous stress of all kinds.

"First try to stabilize," he says, meaning work the same night hours and adjust your system to them.

"Bouncing your working hours around is a terrible stress on the body. Nature moves in cycles — if you work different hours, your body never knows where it is. That's unnatural and you're probably working at your lowest level of efficiency and greatest level of stress."

"Then you get rid of everything that makes matters worse."

"Your boss may tell you when you have to work but he doesn't tell you that you have to drink 16 cups of coffee. The boss isn't stopping you from losing weight. Stop smoking, and go to a gym and exercise."

"Spend at least 15 minutes a day in healing silence.

Lock yourself in a closet, the bathroom, anywhere you can't be available to anyone. Use your imagination and inside your head transport yourself to some pleasant space and just stay there for 15 minutes."

"When you get a day off, really rest. Don't go home and paint the garage. Just go sit in the sun."

One of the worst health factors for night people, Lesser said, is that "most of them are caffeineists," his term for caffeine addicts, which he defines as anyone who drinks more than four or five cups of coffee a day and couldn't get along without it.

"It's a disease, caffeineism, which over-stresses your system and magnifies the harmful effects of stress — the cause of heart disease and high blood pressure."

He tells caffeine addict patients to try to taper off over about 10 weeks, not to try a "cold turkey" reform, which is what he did several years ago.

"That can produce a massive withdrawal phenomena. You can get a headache like you've never felt before, like your head was going to absolutely break. The second symptom is a feeling of lethargy and fatigue, a feeling that everything has slowed down, the way you feel when you come off the freeway into city street traffic."

"The (withdrawal) symptoms can last for a week or more. Some people become hospitalizable cases."

An Editor's Past Probed

By DAVID CRARY
Associated Press Writer

DENVER (AP) — Michael Balfie Howard, an heir to the Scripps-Howard publishing fortune, was one of Denver's beautiful people — a bright, attractive, accomplished newspaper editor with powerful connections. He also had a taste for cocaine.

Howard was viewed in the 1970s as a wunderkind who made major improvements at the Rocky Mountain News, where he became editor in 1975 at the age of 32.

The year before, the paper lost $800,000. By 1979, its pre-tax earnings were reliably estimated at between $6 million and $7 million. During Howard's tenure, the paper improved its news coverage and overtook The Denver Post in circulation, before The Post was taken over last year by the Times-Mirror Co.

At the same time, Howard admits, he developed a severe cocaine addiction which forced his resignation in 1980 and drove him to the brink of suicide.

In April, he talked to The Post, his old paper's chief competitor, about his $6,000-a-week habit. The paper devoted several pages to the interview. The story attracted wide attention in Denver, including the interest of the local U.S. attorney and a Colorado legislative committee which decided to investigate Howard's friendships with narcotics officers and police officials.

In The Post interview, Howard, who has never been charged with narcotics violations, said he would voluntarily testify about drug trafficking and possible public corruption in Denver if a grand jury were called.

U.S. Attorney Robert Miller said he has ordered a federal investigation based on what Howard has told him.

The investigations have taken some strange turns — to the state's top narcotics agents, to Elvis Presley, drugs, cover-ups and allegations of political favoritism.

Investigators are curious about detective Ron Pietrafeso, a narcotics agent loaned by Denver to the Colorado Organized Crime Strike Force, who moonlighted as Howard's bodyguard for about two years starting in 1976.

Pietrafeso and other police officials who befriended Howard say the association was above-board. But in The Post interview Howard said he was "trying to buy immunity" by having an off-duty narcotics investigator as a bodyguard.

"At best the officers acted in poor judgment, at worst they did something illegal," said Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Paul Powers. "I doubt the average citizen would get that type of treatment."

Pietrafeso swears he had no idea Howard was a cocaine user until a dinner party — in 1977 or 1978 — when he overheard Howard offering cocaine to Dr. Gerald Starkey, the police department's medical consultant. Pietrafeso says he raged at Howard confiscated a bag of white powder he believed was cocaine, reported the incident to his strike force superior, and broke all ties with Howard. No prosecution followed.

Neither Pietrafeso nor the other prominent law enforcement officials who attended recall the date of the dinner. The Judiciary Committee wants to verify that Pietrafeso's last payment from Howard came prior to the confrontation.

At hearings last month, the committee turned up contradictions in sworn testimony. Denver Police Chief Art Dill said Capt. Jerry Kennedy, the city's top narcotics officer, told him he didn't know until 1980 about Howard's drug habits. Starkey, meanwhile, testified that he told Kennedy that Howard offered him cocaine at the dinner party.

Denver police officers arrested more than 2,000 drug suspects in each of the past two years, but neither Howard nor his cocaine suppliers were among them. Powers wonders why.

"Maybe I'm old fashioned," he said. "But I thought it was the duty of law enforcement officers to enforce the law, even if that means arresting your friends."

Denver police "are very bitter and upset with me" for pursuing the inquiry.

"For three years, large purchases of cocaine took place, by Howard's admission," Powers said. "It seems incredible the police weren't on top of that. They could have investigated the sources and had him under surveillance."

Kennedy, Pietrafeso and Howard were out of town when the committee tried to have them appear last week. They are to be subpoenaed for a hearing June 8, and Howard has indicated he may be ready to talk publicly about drug use among members of Denver's upper class.

The committee also has questioned special treatment police may have extended to other rich and powerful people including Presley.

Pietrafeso, Starkey and other police officers who befriended Presley during his visits to Denver, insist they never suspected the late singer abused drugs. They said they willingly posed for pictures with Presley, who was dressed as police officer, and accepted gifts.

Some members of the Judiciary Committee are skeptical. "Elvis Presley was a bizarre individual who killed himself with drugs, and here we have our strike force close to him and receiving gifts," said Sen. Don MacManus, a Denver Democrat.

Meanwhile, the Denver police have taken a tougher stand against illegal drug use. Earlier this month, officers swept through a city park and rounded up a score of young people smoking marijuana and drinking beer.

As for Howard, at the age of 39, he is unemployed, living in Denver and undergoing rehabilitation for drug and alcohol problems. He talks about writing a book.

Sugar Price Levels Hurt A Neighbor

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — As the Reagan administration focuses on the Caribbean's precarious economies, efforts by the United States to protect its own sugar producers and a sharp drop in world sugar prices have put severe pressure on the Dominican Republic's fragile finances.

Economic experts have been saying long-run growth prospects are bleak for the Dominican sugar industry, and short-term problems may wipe out whatever benefits President Reagan's Caribbean Basin Initiative can bring.

This initiative is based on the theory that chronic economic problems breed political unrest that favors anti-U.S. leftists in the Caribbean area.

The Reagan program would offer this nation, where half the population is chronically unemployed or underemployed, tariff-free treatment for the all-important sugar industry and $40 million in emergency financial aid — if it passes Congress.

But the U.S. government last December raised domestic sugar price supports to protect domestic producers. And in April it adopted low sugar import quotas coupled with import fees. Dominicans consider the combination highly restrictive and likely to compound their problems.

In 1980, sugar accounted for 34 percent of export earnings, with the United States normally buying two-thirds of the crop. Leaders here put great emphasis on U.S. moves that could alleviate or worsen the crisis.

Salvador Jorge Blanco, who became president-elect on May 16, said last February in a Washington speech that his nation was closely following the Caribbean Basin Initiative discussions.

"For our country, the biggest impact would be the elimination for Caribbean sugar of the protectionist measures which the United States took, since it would represent an increase of around $80 million in the value of Dominican exports."

Reagan administration officials responsible for Caribbean policy are known to have campaigned for a less restrictive sugar policy in the face of strong lobbying from domestic producers and their allies in Congress and the executive branch.

The crisis here has deep roots. The Dominican economy did well when commodity prices were high, but slowed in the late 1970s during a squeeze between rising prices for imported oil and depressed prices for Dominican exports, primarily sugar and minerals.

U.S. and Dominican economists say the squeeze became particularly tight this spring, when world sugar prices suddenly plummeted to between 8 and 9 cents a pound — a dramatic fall from October's 16 cents, which is roughly the cost of production here, according to Dominican economist Bernardo Vega.

Economists blame the price drop in large part on European dumping on the world market.

But even before that, when U.S. Vice President George Bush visited last autumn, Dominican producers were warning against the effects of U.S. protectionism, asking a quota of 800,000 tons a year at the guaranteed U.S. market price. Bush promised his personal efforts to prevent "further legislative barriers." But that did not stop the U.S. Congress from raising domestic price supports in December.

Nor, in recent weeks, under added pressure from the price drop, did it prevent the Reagan administration from also adopting a system that combines new quotas with import fees.

Vega, a top adviser to Jorge Blanco, says the quotas are harmful so long as the fees and tariffs remain. Even if they could sell in the United States at 19.75 cents a pound, he says, Dominican producers would net only 11.5 cents because they would pay a 2.81-cent tariff as well as a 3.02-cent import fee on top of shipment charges of about 2.5 cents.

Argentina Is Able To Get More Arms

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) - Argentina is getting replacements for its war arsenal from Israel, Peru and Venezuela and the black market, mainly in Libya, foreign diplomats and military attaches have told The Associated Press.

An Argentine with high military and political connections confirmed this, saying, "We are buying everything we need." Quoting Napoleon, he added, "The secret to military supply is 'argent, argent, argent,' 'money, money, money.'"

The people interviewed, who refused to be quoted by name, said Argentina has not yet received military equipment from the Soviet Union or Cuba. They also ruled out South Africa as a supplier.

Since it invaded the Falkland Islands April 2, Argentina has bought at least 24 surplus American-made A4 Skyhawk jet fighters from Israel plus an unspecified number of Daggers, the Israeli version of the French Mirage jet fighter, the military attaché at one embassy said.

Argentina also has partially replenished its supply of deadly French-made Exocet missiles in Libya, this source said. He said the Argentines had to pay black-market prices that ran as high as $1 million per missile, a 500 percent markup.

The attaché added that Saudi Arabia has coordinated clandestine deliveries of other types of missiles to Argentina.

The missiles arrive in Argentina disguised as civilian cargo in commercial planes and ships, he said, and the planes from Israel are flown in.

Britain claims to have destroyed about 60 Argentine warplanes, including Skyhawks and Mirages. But on May 31, 30 days after the war started, the head of the air force, Gen. Basilio Lami Dozo, said, "We have the same operating capacity we had on May 1."

Lami Dozo claimed replacements came from "air brigades in the interior."

The army attaché said Argentina's second-biggest supplier of Skyhawks and Mirages is Peru, described by one ambassador as a "very, very strong ally in this conflict."

The attaché said the Peruvian jets land in Cordoba, in north-central Argentina, where they are wheeled into isolated hangars and painted with Argentine colors and insignia.

Venezuela, another enthusiastic backer of the Argentine cause, is supplying spare parts and fuel for Skyhawks and Mirages, said the attaché.

At another embassy, military attaches said Argentina is getting non-strategic military gear from private suppliers in Brazil, one of the Third World's fastest growing manufacturers of artillery, combat vehicles and ammunition.

These attaches said Israel sold the Skyhawk and Dagger jets to Argentina for two reasons: the deals were in the works before the war started, and Israel had a lot of surplus aircraft it wanted to unload so it could get money for more advanced planes for its own military campaigns.

They said the United States and West European countries that back Britain and refuse to sell military supplies to Argentina tolerated the Israeli deal because it kept the Argentine military junta from having to seek Communist arms.

Officials at the Israeli Embassy declined to answer questions about the reported plane sale.

Although President Leopoldo Galtieri said recently that Argentina would accept military help from "other latitudes if necessary," all sources interviewed by The Associated Press said there was no evidence of the junta's turning to the Soviet Union or Cuba for military equipment.

Foreign Minister Nicanor Costa Mendez recently returned from Cuba where President Fidel Castro gave the Argentine cause outspoken public support, but Costa Mendez said Castro "never at any time spoke of arms."

The Horrors Of Lidice Is Remembered

LIDICE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — After nightfall on June 9, 1942, Nazi troops avenging an assassination took the women and children from this little village, massacred its men, and then obliterated it.

The women and children were taken to concentration camps; 60 of the women and 82 of the children eventually died; 192 men were killed in the massacre itself.

The village of 503 people was no more.

The Nazis covered over its burned rubble and ordered its name removed from German maps of World War II Czechoslovakia.

"No one can describe how terrible it was," said Anna Nesporova, a survivor. "We didn't know what was happening or why."

"For a long time afterward we still thought we would see our loved ones again one day. We didn't know."

But Lidice lives again and the Czechoslovakia is marking the 40th anniversary of the massacre and destruction this month with memorial concerts, exhibitions and commemorative services.

The Nazis wiped out Lidice in reprisal for the assassination in nearby Prague of SS chief Reinhard Heydrich on May 27, 1942.

Historical records show no evidence to connect the village to Heydrich's assassination by partisans, but Nazi suspicions were aroused by an intercepted love letter to a woman with a family name that the Gestapo traced to Lidice.

In the letter the man wrote of a "fateful day" — a phrase the Gestapo took to mean the day of Heydrich's assassination. Historians later said the phrase probably referred to a lovers' parting or something similar.

In a postwar People's Tribunal in Prague, a former SS officer, Harald Wiesman, testified that the SS — the Nazi elite corps — was under such heavy pressure to solve the assassination case that the faked reports were sent to Adolf Hitler about weapons being found in Lidice. He said the reports probably prompted the destruction of the village.

Seventeen "Aryan-looking" children of the village were spared the concentration camps and sent to Germany for "re-education." Most of them returned to Czechoslovakia after the war, while others remain unaccounted for.

"Lidice should be remembered as a symbol of the millions of children and other innocent victims destroyed by war in our cruel century," said Czechoslovak sculptress Marie Uchytlova.

For the past 10 years the nationally known artist has been sculpting life-sized statues of the 82 Lidice children who died.

If a local arts board grants the 6 million crowns (about $600,000) she says is needed to bronze the nearly completed figures, Mrs. Uchytlova hopes to place them in the meadow that now marks the original village.

After the war, Czechoslovak officials planted a "garden of peace" on the site, with flowers from 36 countries. A cross draped with barbed wire stands in the field, and stone plaques represent each of the destroyed homes.

A museum visited by nearly 300,000 people a year overlooks the meadow and commemorates the victims of Lidice with pictures, relics and documentary film clips.

The new Lidice is a quiet residential village of 530 people set in the rolling hills 20 miles northwest of Prague, and less than a half mile from the old village.

Neat rows of single-family homes face its tree-lined streets, and a cluster of small stores makes up its shopping district. Nearly half the families lived in Lidice before the war. They were given new homes by the government when they chose to return.

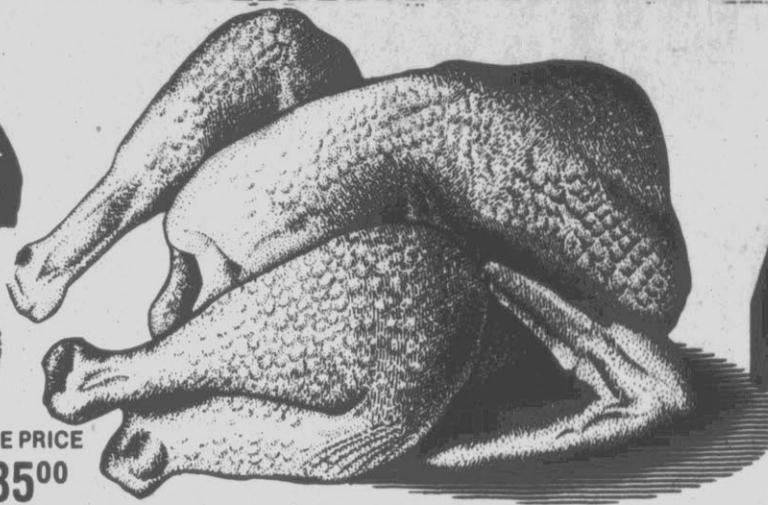

"It didn't matter where we lived after the war, we would have carried those memories with us everywhere," said Josefa Enduslova, a pre-war resident. "So we came back."

A survivor of the concentration camps, the 70-year-old grandmother said her daughter was one of the children sent to Germany and returned.

Lowe's Pricing Policy

Many items in this tabloid carry a reference retail price. The reference is intended to provide a guide to the range of retail selling prices in our area and may be useful in identifying different units of the same manufacturer. An item's reference retail price is either the manufacturer's suggested retail price or our determination of its full retail price based on prices at which it or similar merchandise is offered by principal retailers (department stores, specialty shops and other non-discount sellers) in our selling area. While we believe our reference retail prices do not appreciably exceed the highest retail prices at which sales are made in our selling area, we cannot assure you that our reference retail prices, as described above, represent the prices in every community or on any given day. Some items in this advertisement are listed at "regular" selling prices. The merchandise is offered at this price except during a special sale. The purpose of showing a reference retail price (or a regular price) is to assist you, our customer, in making a knowledgeable and better informed buying decision. We suggest that you also do comparative shopping and compare our prices. (Prices in this tabloid do not include delivery charges. Ask us about delivery rates.)

Lowe's Raincheck Policy: If we sell out of an advertised item, we'll issue you a raincheck. When we restock, you'll be notified so you can buy at the previously advertised price (except for products marked "Limited Quantities"). Our smaller stores may not stock all advertised items. But every item shown here can be ordered for you.

Lowe's Low Payment Credit Terms

Your credit must be satisfactory. Cash price does not include sales tax. Life insurance available, but not required or included in our figures. Delivery charges, if any, are not included. Applies to Lowe's North Carolina stores only.
