14,800 Argentine Troops Surrender The Falklands

By The Associated Press
The 74-day war for the Falkland Islands ended today and the Union Jack was hoisted over the capital. Britain said 14,800 Argentine troops throughout the South Atlantic islands surrendered to British forces.

There was jubilation in Britain and sorrow in Buenos Aires.

British Defense Ministry sources said 11,000 Argentine soldiers laid down their arms in Stanley alone. The figure astonished British commanders, who had estimated Argentine troop strength on the Falklands at about 8,500, the sources said.

The office of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher announced early today that Argentina had formally surrendered at 9 p.m. Falklands time (8 p.m. EDT), after an undeclared war that began with the Argentine invasion of the islands April 2 and killed a total of more than 1,000 servicemen, according to British count.

Independent Television News correspondent Michael Nicholson reported later from Stanley that British forces had raised their country's flag over the governor's house.

Government sources said Britain was working through the Swiss Embassy in Buenos Aires to secure a stable peace on the South Atlantic archipelago.

The Buenos Aires government announced that the military commanders of the two forces had drawn up a document "establishing the conditions for a cease-fire and the withdrawal of the (Argentine) troops." The junta's communique made no mention of surrender, but said the document would be made public when the text is available.

"Great Britain is great again," Mrs. Thatcher said outside her Downing Street office just before midnight Monday. A crowd of about 100 sang "Rule Britannia" and "God Save the Queen" as she returned from addressing Parliament.

Aides to Mrs. Thatcher said she was considering a visit to the Falklands and had postponed her scheduled address Wednesday at the U.N. special session on disarmament in New York until later in the week.

The official communique from her residence at 10 Downing Street quoted marine Maj. Gen. Jeremy Moore, commander of British land forces on the Falklands, as saying that arrangements were being made to assemble the captured Argentines for return to the mainland with their arms and equipment.

"Falkland Islands once more under the government desired by their inhabitants — God save the Queen," Moore's message read.

With his forces poised on the outskirts of Stanley, Moore had flown through a snowstorm into the Argentine garrison to accept the surrender from Brig. Gen. Mario Benjamin Menendez, British eyewitness reports said.

Britains rejoiced and Argentines chanted, jeered and wept over the British victory, which frustrated Argentina's 149-year-old dream of sovereignty over the windswept South Atlantic archipelago.

Budgeteers Okay N.C. Pay Freeze

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Legislative budgetmakers, after reluctantly endorsing a one-year freeze on state salaries, approved a $6 billion state budget bill today and sent the measure to the House and Senate floor.

The House and Senate Appropriations committees made only minor changes in the bill today and voted by voice to approve it. Committee leaders said floor votes could come late today or Wednesday.

The budget bill also includes a special provision transferring the Department of Insurance's Division of Engineering and Building Codes to the Department of Administration under the governor — a move bitterly opposed by Insurance Commissioner John Ingram.

It also includes a provision setting the date of the statewide referendum on a $300 million water and sewer bond issue for November of 1983, when many cities are holding local elections. The bonds were authorized by the General Assembly last year, which then gave the governor authority to call a referendum sometime this year.

The freeze, keeping salaries for most of the 180,000 teachers and state employees at their June 30 levels, was reluctantly approved in a session Monday after the panels abandoned an alternative posed by Watkins on Friday.

Although groups representing teachers opposed the panels' action, lobbyists for two groups representing state employees were relieved to see it pass over Watkins' alternative.

"The freeze doesn't sound good to me, but...at least it applies to everyone," said Emmett Burden, head of the N.C. State Employees Association.

"It's the lesser of two evils," said Arch Laney, head of the N.C. State Government Employees Association. "Although we don't like it, it's better than the plan we got Friday."

Watkins' plan would have rolled back half of a 5 percent pay raise that took effect last January, while at the same time allowing scheduled, automatic pay escalators to take effect. He disavowed his own plan Monday, calling it inequitable.

"You would have taken money away from the state employees and given it to the schools," acknowledged Watkins.

"It just goes to show you again, there is no other way," Watkins said. "We did try to make an honest effort to do something different, but with no money, it's just impossible."

The freeze was approved by the panel in almost the same form proposed by Gov. Jim Hunt last month as a way to trim $90 million from the state budget. The cut was needed because of a revenue shortfall caused by the recession, Hunt said.

The budget bill is actually a modification of the spending authorizations passed last year for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

The freeze would cancel merit raises of up to 5 percent that were scheduled to take effect July 1 for state employees, and cancel an additional pay step of a similar size scheduled to take effect for all teachers.

The panels also approved a special provision that would provide each teacher and state employee with a one-time bonus of $200 early next year if state revenues exceed projections by a sufficient margin.

But it would take an unexpected and sudden spurt in tax collections for the bonus to be triggered.

"I don't think it will unless the economy does a tremendous turnaround," said Watkins.

"I think the chances of it being there are very slim," said John I. Wilson, president of the North Carolina Association of Educators.

Israeli Tightening Ring Around PLO

By The Associated Press

Israeli tanks and artillery battled guerrillas near Sidon in southern Lebanon today and tightened the ring around Beirut. The PLO claimed Yasser Arafat and his aides were directing "stubborn resistance" from west Beirut, but Israeli newspapers said Arafat was believed hiding in the Soviet Embassy.

Israel radio said other guerrillas, expecting an Israeli assault, took 75 lecturers hostage at the American University in Beirut.

At a refugee camp, near Sidon 20 miles south of Beirut, Israeli press reports said Israeli tanks and artillery were battling 250 to 800 guerrillas holed up in two mosques for the fourth day.

The reports, subject to Israeli military censorship, said attempts to persuade the Sidon guerrillas to surrender to the Ein Hilwa refugee camp failed when the guerrillas either killed the Arab emissaries sent to talk to them or kept them hostage.

They said the guerrillas were led by Haj Ibrahim Hawim, a fanatic Lebanese Shiite follower of Iran's Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, and that Hawim ordered his men to resist to the death.

In west Beirut, the Palestine Liberation Organization said the only top guerrilla leader not in the PLO enclave was Farouk Kaddoumi, and that he was at the United Nations in New York.

"It is unthinkable that the PLO leaders would desert their people in their hour of need," Lebanon's leftist newspaper Al-Liwa said.

It and other leftist Moslem papers published photographs of Arafat said to have been taken Monday in west Beirut. The photos showed Arafat unshaven as usual, but wearing a military fatigue cap instead of his habitual "khafia" Arab headdress.

In Israel, Chief of Staff Lt. Gen. Raphael Eytan said Arafat had taken refuge in a foreign embassy in Beirut and "we know which one."

The Soviet Foreign Ministry in Moscow said it had "no information" on reports that Arafat had taken refuge in its mission in Beirut.

As the Israelis and their Lebanese Christian allies began surrounding west Beirut Monday, rumors swept the city that the PLO leaders had fled to the Syrian capital of Damascus. The PLO denied these rumors and published the photos, apparently to dispel them.

Armed civilians belonging to various Palestinian and Lebanese Moslem factions were in control of west Beirut and its estimated 600,000 inhabitants. Most shops were closed and the city was rocked occasionally by explosions as rival factions set off car bombs and rockets against each other.

There was no shooting between the Israelis and the guerrillas, however, and the Israelis said they wanted to avoid bloody street fighting and had no intention of entering west Beirut.

Meanwhile, the Israelis advanced their forward armored columns without opposition deeper into Christian-held territory east of Beirut, reaching the hilltop villages of Mansouriyeh and Ain Saade.

SAFETY SEAT APPEAL

The Tar River Civitans have received donations from local businesses, charitable organizations and civic groups sufficient to match 110 of the 150 seats given to Pitt County by the Governor's Highway Safety Commission. Any individual, youth group or adult organization wishing to assist the Civitans with the purchase of an additional 40 seats may contact Patrice Alexander, chairperson of the Save-a-Babe project being conducted by the Civitans in cooperation with the Pitt County Health Department.

July 1 is the date North Carolina House Bill 893 becomes effective and requires all infants under one year of age to be restrained in an approved safety seat while riding in a motor vehicle, Pitt County Health Educator Pat Byrd reminds.

She also reminds that the Save-a-Babe car seat rental program of the Health Department and the Tar River Civitan Club is open to any Pitt County resident, with no eligibility income requirement. Through this program, seats are leased for a $10 refundable deposit and 50 cents per month of actual use. The participants are urged to start saving for a toddler-size seat to be used for another two or three years.

"We would like to see every newborn leave the hospital safely tucked into an approved seat. For this reason, we are leasing seats to expectant parents up to a month before the baby is due," Ms. Byrd said. For additional information about the rental program, call the Pitt County Health Department Health Education Unit, 752-4141.

Ayden Board Hikes Water, Sewer Service Rates

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

AYDEN — Citizens will pay more for water and sewer services beginning in July, the Town Board of Commissioners voted Monday night.

The rate for sewer service was increased for the 1982-83 fiscal year from 1.25 per 1,000 gallons to 1.45 per 1,000 gallons and the flat rate upped from $4 to $5. The increase will be reflected in bills mailed the end of June, reported Town Manager Don Russell.

The board also voted to raise the town's fee for returned checks from $5 to $10, the maximum charge allowed by North Carolina law. The number of worthless checks the town receives has increased dramatically, according to Town Clerk

Ralph Ford, prompting the hike.

"We have received as many as 10 bad checks in one day," he explained, "and it's a pain to deal with them. We have to call the individuals, or write them, and get them down here with cash to pay off the checks. It costs us to do this."

In other business:

The redemption fee for dogs transported to the county pound by the town was increased from $2.50 to $8. Police Chief Tommy Burney reported the police department picked up around 200 dogs per year, a duty he termed "expensive for the town."

"We certainly can't go get them and take them to the pound for $2.50, and I don't

Two Appointments By ECU Bd. Of Trustees

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The East Carolina University Board of Trustees Monday named Dr. Emille D. Henning dean of the school of nursing, and appointed Herman D. Phelps director of the university's division of continuing education.

Henning has been dean and professor of the school of nursing at Florida State University for the past six years, and "is one of the outstanding nurse-educators in the country," Dr. Robert H. Maier, vice chancellor for academic affairs at ECU said. "Her leadership will add great strength to our already fine and outstanding school of nursing."

As director of continuing education, Phelps, a member of the continuing education staff at ECU for 20 years and acting director since January, will head one of the largest extension programs in the nation.

On a motion by Troy Pate of Goldsboro, former chairman of the board, trustees yesterday adopted a resolution of appreciation "to the people who have supported us so well over the past 75 years."

Saying East Carolina has been given the privilege of serving the people of eastern North Carolina and the state for 75 years, the resolution emphasized "the people of eastern North Carolina and the state, and especially Pitt County, have nurtured unprecedented growth for East Carolina University, allowing it to become the third largest college or university in North Carolina."

The resolution also said, "This support helped the university train thousands of North Carolinians and provided a wholesome and warm community for students to pursue their educational experience."

Concluding, the resolution said "The East Carolina University Board of Trustees, Administration, faculty and staff, students and alumni extend sincere appreciation to the university community which has embraced its goals and aspirations for the past 75 years," and furthermore, "the Board of Trustees and the University pledge a continued commitment to the partnership with the community in the mutual goal of strengthening and expanding," the school's "service to the people..."

In other business yesterday, the board: approved the establishment of a medical affairs committee as a standing committee of the board of trustees; approved changing the name of the Department of Rehabilitation Counseling to the Department of Rehabilitation Studies and changed the name of the degree granted under the program to the master of science in rehabilitation; and witnessed the swearing in of Eric Henderson, president of the school's Student Government Association as a member of the board of trustees.

Dr. William Laupus, vice chancellor for health affairs and dean of the medical school, told trustees that the final inspection of the new Brody Medical Science building has been scheduled for July 7, 8 and 9, and that medical school offices will move into the building following the final inspection.

Laupus also said that plans call for the radiation therapy center building to be ready to go to bid in November.

Winterville Bd. Held Hearing

By TOMMY FORREST
Reflector Staff Writer

WINTERVILLE — The Board of Aldermen held a public hearing last night concerning funding under the Housing and Community Development Act.

Tony Carter of Talbert Cox and Associates introduced Martin Holmes, who reviewed the plans of the grant and explained to the board members the steps needed to be taken for making the application. Some comments were heard from citizens and questions were answered. Carl Dean, town advisor said most of the money from the grant, if it is funded, would be used to pave streets and renew housing.

Holmes said streets and areas affected would be Chapman, Boyd, Tyson, Myrtle, North Railroad and Grimes streets.

A second public hearing on the project is scheduled for the next regular board meeting.

In further business heard by the board, Herb Norman explained about the updated land use plan the town planning and zoning commission is preparing.

The board also voted to allow the option at the board's approval, to continue the group insurance rates for retired town employees. A decision would be made when the person retires, whether to allow the coverage on his policy to continue.

The board also approved a request from Greenville Utilities for an exchange of customers for electrical service. The board approved the request.

Town Clerk Elwood Nobles was given permission to order approximately 1,100 1983 license plate stickers.

An audit contract was approved with Farley, Prescott and Mizelle for the year ending June 30.

Approval was given for the reappointment of Robert Blount, Pittman Hines, Raymond Cox, and Floyd Avery for four-year terms on the planning and zoning commission.

The board also approved the roster of the fire department and approved the election of Carlton Branch as the department's chief.

Permission was given to the Pocohontas to sell refreshments on election day, June 29.

Tough Talk On Drunken Drivers

ATLANTIC BEACH, N.C. (AP) — The chairman of the Governor's Task Force on Drunken Driving says North Carolina's District Court judges should help push the state's effort to crack down on driving under the influence.

"Our District Courts represent the first line of judicial defense in this state's current effort in dealing with the crime of drunk driving," John S. Stevens, a former state legislator and chairman of the governor's task force, said Monday at a convention of North Carolina's District Court judges.

"You, as District Court judges, see and deal with more drunk driving problems than any single group of people in North Carolina."

Stevens' speech at the first of the three-day conference for Superior Court judges also coincided with the last day of a series of seven public hearings on the problem of driving under the influence.

He says the task force hopes to complete its report by September — three months before the governor's deadline.

"The predominant attitude expressed to the task forces is that the state is not properly protecting its citizens against drunken drivers," Stevens said.

"The public generally feels that law enforcement, especially the Highway Patrol, is doing an effective job in apprehending drunken drivers, but somehow after they are caught, those drivers are not quickly and adequately punished and that too many of them are not punished at all.

The public generally feels that stricter laws are needed, and they feel with great conviction that our state's present system fails to adequately enforce the laws we have."

Suggestions under consideration for changes in the state's DUI law include:

- Requiring mandatory license revocation for minimal time for someone convicted of driving with a blood-alcohol content of more than .10.
- Requiring mandatory jail time or public service work for second and subsequent offenders and possibly for first offenders.
- Eliminating the lesser offense of careless and reckless driving after drinking, which carries a less severe punishment than DUI.

- Lowering the presumption level of blood-alcohol content from .10 to .07 or .08.
- Supporting the proposal to raise the drinking age for beer and wine to 21 from 18.
- Impounding automobiles driven by people convicted of DUI.

really think we can for $8 but it'll be closer," he noted. Burney said that approximately 20 of the 200 dogs were claimed yearly.

The first of two public hearings was held on a community development block grant, which will be applied for by the town in July. Dale Holland of Talbert & Cox explained the application process and the town's chances of getting funds since North Carolina has assumed the Department of Housing and Urban Development's role in administering the grants.

"I can't honestly tell you what your chances are," he said. "I do think they're good — Ayden is a well-established town and has received funding before. That will help."

A workshop session to choose target areas in the town was tentatively scheduled for June 28, with both board members and Community Development Advisory Committee members attending. The second public hearing on the program will be held July 12 and the target areas will be announced and discussed then, said the board.

The board appointed Clemmie McCarter to the Community Development Advisory Committee.

Seven parcels of land were annexed into the town, including the Skylight Inn property and the Ayden Nitrogen property.

force, was "delighted and relieved" at the news, press secretary Michael Shea said today.

"She is very pleased and proud of the courage, determination and professionalism of the servicemen and all those involved down there," but is saddened by the loss of life in the conflict, Shea said.

The Argentine junta reported Monday that the commander of its soldiers around Stanley agreed to a cease-fire as British forces swarmed forward in a three-pronged attack on the port town. But the Joint Chiefs of Staff said there was no official truce or surrender.

In a dispatch from Stanley, correspondent David Norris of the London Daily Mail said: "Abandoned Argentine vehicles, bandoliers of ammunition, rifles and cans of food, littered the approaches.

Two Items For P-Z Meeting

Two business items are scheduled for consideration at tonight's meeting of the Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission.

The board will consider a request by Tucker Farms Inc. to rezone approximately 0.461 acres, located south of Shenandoah Heights Subdivision and north of U.S. 264 Bypass, from highway commercial to R-6 (residential); and a request by Methodist Retirement Homes Inc. to amend the thoroughfare plan by deleting First Street extending east of Warren Street and by deleting the Brownlea connector to Fifth Street.

The meeting is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. in the council chambers at city hall.

The only people I saw apart from British troops were forlorn, gray-clad Argentine soldiers, hands on head — glad it was finally at an end."

Norris said most of the estimated 1,050 residents of Stanley had fled after the Argentine invasion.

A high British government source said many of the Argentine soldiers were suffering from exposure, exhaustion and frostbite, and food was in short supply.

But British correspondents quoted islanders as saying the Argentines had beat the British air-and-sea blockade right up to the eve of the final British assault. They said Hercules transport planes landed at the deserted Stanley airfield as late as Sunday night, and the container ship Formosa had arrived May 1 with food and supplies.

One of the exiled members of the Falklands Executive Council, William Luxton, said in London that June 15 henceforth would be known as Falklands Liberation Day "to be celebrated with a public holiday on the islands."

Answered 69 Fire Alarms

The rural fire departments of Pitt County answered 69 alarms during May.

Fifty-seven of these were fires — four in buildings, five in motor vehicles, 18 were grass or woods fires, 12 were "others" and 12 were mutual aids.

There was $126,000 involved in fires; $158,800 exposed; $38,750 lost and $246,050 saved by the rural fire departments, according to a report from the office of Fire Marshal Bobby Joyner.

Support Group Helps Children

DEAR ABBY: I read in the Bucks County (Pa.) Courier Times that there is a new organization in that area called "Children of Aging Parents." That's exactly what I need: some people who are in the same boat as I am — people who can guide me in caring for my aging parents.

I need to know how to deal with the physical and medical problems of my parents — now both in their 80s. Also, I need to know how to be more patient when they become forgetful and repetitious, and sometimes paranoid and hostile.

Please tell me how to reach this great group. Thank you!
LOYAL FAN IN LEVITTOWN, PA.

DEAR FAN: Children of Aging Parents (CAPS) is a non-profit organization serving the lower Bucks County area. It consists of adult children who have the responsibility of an aging parent or family member. CAPS provides training, education, counseling and rap sessions as well as information and referral services related to caring for the older person. It is a loving, caring, supportive organization.

For information, contact Mirca Liberti, its founder and president. This wonderful organization deserves to go national, and I hope it does!

The address: 2761 Trenton Road, Levittown, Pa. 19058. And the hot line is: 1-215-547-1070. When writing, please include a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

DEAR ABBY: Ever since our son was born (six months ago), my husband started calling me "Mamma." I really don't like it. I've told him I don't like it and to please quit, but he still calls me "Mamma."

How can I get him to stop? It turns me off in bed.
NOT HIS MAMMA

DEAR NOT: Remind him. In bed.

DEAR ABBY: I am a new mother this year, and what did I get? Nothing! I have a beautiful baby girl — she's 6 months old — but my husband evidently doesn't consider me a "mother."

I expected some flowers or a card. Even a "Happy Mother's Day" would have been nice, but the day came and went with no mention that I was a mother, too.

I felt so bad, I mentioned it before we went to sleep, and he said, "You aren't my mother."

Well, I'm his daughter's mother, and she's too young to shop. Should I get him something for Father's Day?

DEAR HURT: Yes. A course in sensitivity training would be appropriate.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. Write to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Home And School Situations Contribute

Why is it that children from poor families can end up at completely opposite ends of the academic spectrum by the time they're in the third grade?

According to Dr. Frances J. Wagner, extension human development specialist at North Carolina State University, a recent Educational Testing Service study shows that many factors influence the child's academic process.

And, the specialist adds, under certain conditions, the child who starts out in pre-school years with low prospects for success in school, may progress to high achievements.

The children studied were from black Head Start families. Of particular interest to the researchers were two important areas of the child's early life: the parent-child relationship and the teacher-child relationship.

According to Dr. Wagner, the researchers found that the quality of either the parent-child or teacher-child relationship alone was not enough to modify the harmful effects of poverty on a developing child. Taken together, however, the relationships could have considerable effect.

According to Dr. Wagner, those children who made exceptional gains "were fortunate enough to have not only supportive parents, but also teachers who were at least moderately warm, enthusiastic and stimulating."

Other factors emerged from the study as influences upon the child's development. "The educational level and goals of the child's mother were found to be particularly influential, especially in a home where there was no father," Dr. Wagner noted.

Overcrowding, persistent fighting and physical abuse and parental unemployment all were found to lower learning performance, as well.

The child's situations at home and at school, then, contribute to his success or failure as a student.

New Outrage For Old

Congress is demonstrating once again that it is a master of hypocrisy. The House on Wednesday joined the Senate in repealing a special $75-a-day tax deduction Congress had granted itself last year. The action came as the result of what congressmen said — and everyone knew — was an outraged public response.

But the House's repeal was attached to an emergency appropriations bill that President Reagan is expected to veto. That would keep alive the deductions. And if that were not enough, the vote for repeal had scarcely been taken when the House Ways and Means Committee began work on an even newer tax break for members of Congress — one that could be virtually unlimited in its deductions.

This new monstrosity is sponsored by Democratic Rep. Dan Rostenkowski of Illinois, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee. His proposal would simply allow members of Congress to deduct whatever Washington living expenses they can prove. For many members, that would be worth more than $75 per day. In effect, Congressmen would be placed in essentially the same position as businessmen, who are able to deduct the cost of being away from home overnight on business.

There comes the rub. A 1952 law places a lawmaker's home for tax purposes in the district he or she represents. Under that law, a member of Congress is considered away from home on business any time he or she is in Washington — and some of them spend most of their time in the capital. Their expenses could include everything they spend on living in Washington. The outrage has only just begun.

The QEII Did Itself Proud

The British excursion to the Falkland Islands has seen success on land, but the blows its ships have suffered at sea may drastically change the way world powers plan their navies.

It no doubt did the British proud, therefore, when the Queen Elizabeth II returned to its homeport of Southampton. The great luxury liner had been requisitioned by the British government to serve as a troop carrier in the Falkland Island fight. It developed into a dangerous mission, given the damage the British navy has suffered. The liner did its job, however, of delivering troops to the area. Then it returned home bearing the wounded from other sunk or damaged British vessels.

It would have been a great military and psychological lift for Argentina to have sunk the QEII. The proud ship made it to the war zone and back and now is expected to return to its mission of serving as a luxury liner.

THIS AFTERNOON

They Had Enough

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — Sixteen veteran legislators have decided they've had enough of the General Assembly. They're retiring this year and most of them will tell you they're looking forward to getting away from it.

Legislators retire after every term. But five-term legislator Sen. Joe Palmer, D-Haywood, (who wants to serve one more term) says he's never seen anything like the number of veterans quitting this year. And he thinks he knows why they're leaving. "They're tired of the phone ringing off the hook and when they go home, they think they're going to get away from it but it's there. It used to not be like this — people didn't bother you as much — but you can't get any privacy these days."

Talk to the retirees and almost all will say that they're quitting because of business. The assembly spent seven months in session last year. They've been back four times since. That means being in Raleigh from Monday night to Friday noon which doesn't leave much time to earn a living. The little time they have a home is filled with calls from constituents. Sen. Jim Garrison of Albemarle, an oil jobber, says, "My business can't grow as long as I'm down here. I've seen people come to the legislature and get involved and their business back home just dries up."

I'm not going to do that." Sen. Henry Frye's Greensboro law office fills up with people wanting to see him. If he goes home to try to do some work, people call him there. Rep. Joe Hege of Lexington served as an accountant and office manager for a furniture firm last year. He worked nights and weekends and used all his vacation to make up for the time he spent in Raleigh.

But serving in the legislature drains more than one's wallet. As Palmer said, there's no privacy. You'll get calls at all hours of the day and night. Frye said he can hardly walk down the street that someone doesn't stop him to ask for something. Civic clubs and other groups want you to attend their breakfasts at 7 a.m. or their annual dinner meeting at 8 p.m.

Frye said he doesn't know how a marriage could last if the legislator's spouse didn't share an interest in politics. Ask Garrison why he's quitting and the first thing he says is, "There's some things I want to do — and my wife wants to do them with me."

DETERMINED NOT TO BE IGNORED!

J. J. DAVIS

BY JAMES KILPATRICK

An Accurate Perception

WASHINGTON — It was three years ago this summer, if memory serves, that Jimmy Carter got himself in a heap of trouble. In one of his introspective periods, the president concluded that our country was suffering from a "malaise." This was generally defined as the wasting sickness, marked by a decline in old values.

You will recall that Mr. Carter's critics leaped upon his remark, hollering virtuously that the president was all wet. Everything was okey-dokey. Sick? Not us.

Mr. Carter's perception was more accurate than many of us wanted to believe. For evidence of what concerned the president, consider the program known as Guaranteed Student Loans (GSL). You will find few more telling examples of the disease that afflicts us. Once upon a time — and the time wasn't so awfully long ago — there was no such thing as a GSL program. This was how a young person went to college: (1) His family paid the entire expense from current income. (2) His family borrowed a part of the cost from a local bank and paid the rest from current income. (3) His family scraped together what they could, and the student financed the rest from a scholarship or from his own earnings. (4) The student worked his way through college.

In various combinations, this was how the task was accomplished and the expenses were met. It wasn't easy. Except for families in upper-income brackets, it often meant real sacrifice. Ambitious youngsters worked their hearts out. They waited tables, or pumped gasoline in the summers, or took any jobs that made it possible to save something for September. And of course, a lot of this still goes on.

But in 1965, the idea took root in Congress that higher education somehow had become an obligation of the federal government. A modest program of Guaranteed Student Loans came into being. The program began to grow. By 1977 the cost to the taxpayers had reached $331 million for the year. Then it took off. In 1981 the GSL subsidies reached $2.4 billion. No other entitlement program — not even such abused ventures as Medicaid and food stamps — has approached this rate of growth. In the coming fiscal year, despite the best efforts of the Reagan administration to put on the brakes, more than 6 million college students will receive interest subsidies and outright grants amounting to $6.3 billion.

Outlays of this magnitude cannot be justified. There may be some tenuous rationalization for federal aid to elementary and secondary schools, where attendance is compulsory and a plausible argument can be made in the name of the "general welfare." College education is not compulsory, and it is not general.

The GSL program has been terribly abused. Some months ago the General Accounting Office documented cases in which upper-income families had received the guaranteed loans, at a delayed rate of interest of 9 percent, and immediately transferred the proceeds to

Disarmers' Cold War
The cold war waged by the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency (ACDA) to east out Lt. Gen. Edward Rowny as START negotiator before beginning the new talks with the Soviets took a bizarre turn when the use of Rowny's official title was protested.

A cable alerting U.S. embassies in Europe to a forthcoming trip by Rowny referred to him as "chief U.S. arms control negotiator" — the official title given the retired Army officer when appointed by President Reagan last year. ACDA Director Eugene Rostow objected to the use of the title as an encroachment on his authority and sent out a superseding cable that canceled the previous message.

Patron Lost To Stockman

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — White House chief of staff James Baker, who convinced President Reagan not to fire Budget Director David Stockman for disloyalty last November, has soured on Stockman so much that he now tells close associates that it might be time for him to go.

The last straw was Stockman's persistence in pressing for Social Security cutbacks in an administration policy meeting not attended by Baker, even though that violated the powerful chief of staff's orders. It was at that point that Baker privately said Stockman had outlived his usefulness. Nevertheless, Stockman has proved to have so many political lives that nobody knows if or when he will be gone.

A footnote: The current favorite to succeed Stockman, if and when he leaves, is Baker deputy Richard Darman. He is regarded by the Republican right as a sinister force, but has ingratiated himself with the president.

Reagan's Undelivered Speech

Although President Reagan's speech to the British Parliament was eloquent, it would have been a lot tougher had he accepted a draft submitted by Pulitzer Prize-winning columnist George F. Will.

Will's draft hit hard against the Soviets, but Reagan heeded State Department concerns that overly-aggressive prose would hurt the NATO alliance. The result was an amalgam of State Department language, a draft by White House speechwriter Tony Dolan and Will's effort.

A footnote: Although high hopes at the White House for Reagan's European grand tour were blighted by the United Nations vote foul-up and Israel's invasion of Lebanon, the president would not have known it if he relied on his daily news digest for information. That White House-produced private publication gave the impression of a triumphant Reagan conquering Europe.

The cold war waged by the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency (ACDA) to east out Lt. Gen. Edward Rowny as START negotiator before beginning the new talks with the Soviets took a bizarre turn when the use of Rowny's official title was protested.

A cable alerting U.S. embassies in Europe to a forthcoming trip by Rowny referred to him as "chief U.S. arms control negotiator" — the official title given the retired Army officer when appointed by President Reagan last year. ACDA Director Eugene Rostow objected to the use of the title as an encroachment on his authority and sent out a superseding cable that canceled the previous message.

Rowny is an expert on arms control who was Pentagon representative at the SALT talks for six years before retiring from the service in protest over the SALT agreement. He is considered a hard-nosed negotiator who ACDA's civil servants want removed before START begins.

Reagan's Man In N.H.
A commitment by Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada, President Reagan's friend and adviser, to campaign for a longtime Reaganite in New Hampshire's crowded Republican primary for governor signals a slight breach in rigid White House neutrality on State Republican nominations.

Laxalt will deliver a fundraising speech for state Senate President Robert Monier, an ardent Reagan supporter in the 1976 and 1980 New Hampshire presidential primaries. Considering Laxalt's intimacy with Reagan, Monier's opponents contend the speaking date breaks the neutrality rule.

Although there is no evidence that the White House supported Laxalt's move, old-line Reaganites inside the administration would be happy if it is interpreted as presidential blessing for Monier. They were disgusted that there was no slight hint of White House support for ex-Reagan aide Jeffrey Bell in his losing New Jersey Senate primary against Rep. Millicent Fenwick.

Anti-Tax Chamber
The U.S. Chamber of Commerce has survived its annual change in leadership to continue its tough anti-tax position, rejecting White House pleas to lobby for a budget resolution calling for $95 billion in higher taxes.

The Chamber's new national chairman is Paul Thayer, chief executive officer of LTV and a far more amiable chap than his hard-nosed predecessor, Pepsico's Donald Kendall. Thayer would not press President Reagan to reject his staff's tax-increasing advice as Kendall did, and does not seem uncomfortable opposing White House positions.

Nevertheless, the Chamber has maintained its no-new-taxes position. It finessed White House requests to lobby for the House Republican budget (with its $95 billion tax increase) by lobbying against the Democratic version (calling for $149.9 billion).

The Argentine magazine Tal Cual sought to demean and embarrass British prime minister Margaret Thatcher by their depiction of her as the bosomy comic book character, Wonder Woman. What was so newsworthy about that particular photograph that rated it such a prominent position on Page One, Sunday, June 6. The Daily Reflector should avoid catering to blatantly sexist political tactics.

Dawn Branch King

To the editor:

Mr. Savage's article in the June 2 paper concerning the closing of Casablanca Restaurant should have been a paid advertisement for Leroy Cherry. The whole flavor of the article was designed to evoke public sympathy for Mr. Cherry, all the major industries who have used the facilities for various functions (He even included a list of them.) and the 81 people who are losing their jobs. I regret the loss of jobs, but I have no sympathy for an experienced builder and businessman who has not complied with safety and building codes. Mr. Savage was clearly remiss in not reporting the city's side of the citations. Is safety less important than business?

Most of all I would regret picking up the newspaper only to read about a loss of 81 lives during "happy hour." Where are our priorities?

Christine Elmore
Greenville

To the editor:

There seems to be much discussion going on concerning the Fire Marshal closing the Morocco Room of the Casablanca Restaurant. All of this discussion seems to be ridiculing the city officials. Perhaps the general public is not aware of both sides of the situation.

First of all, the Fire Marshal did not close the Morocco Room. It was done jointly by the Building Inspections Department and the Fire Prevention Bureau.

Second, the manager-operator, Mr. Leroy Cherry, was sent certified letters by both the Building and Fire Prevention Offices, stating the hazards found and the action to be taken, on Friday, May 28, 1982. This was sufficient time for Mr. Cherry to receive the letters and correct the hazards before opening on Wednesday.

If the city officials had inspected this business and found all of the fire hazards and had permitted the business to open and a disaster had occurred, causing one or hundreds of injuries or lives lost due to overcrowding of the building, who then would be the "Bad Guys?" Who would be charged for not carrying out their duties? Who would find it impossible to live with his conscience after such an occurrence?

These city officials are out there doing a fine job protecting people like us, and yet we are the first to condemn them. Who knows how many disasters or fires have been prevented because of their work? I say they are doing an outstanding job, but a thankless one.

Keep up the good work, city inspectors!

Salt Lake City Has A Catalyst

By DONNA ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer
SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Mormon Church has sparked a building boom in the heart of this desert city, where its huge and picturesque temple has long been one of the country's best known structures.

New high-rise hotels and office buildings soar near the famous downtown temple, and pedestrians must detour on temporary board sidewalks around half-finished development projects.

But some residents are critical of the changes in the city's core, suggesting the church's pro-development attitude may be helping to destroy the character of the city it built from the Western desert.

The city's geographic location and pro-business tax laws have aided in attracting business to the area, but Fred Ball, president of the Salt Lake Area Chamber of Commerce, says The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints has been a "catalyst" in drawing them downtown.

The 5 million-member church is best known for the two mammoth city blocks on which its historic Temple Square and world headquarters are located. But it also owns large portions of at least five other surrounding blocks, where it has spurred major building projects.

Those projects include the Salt Palace convention center, two shopping malls, numerous office buildings, restoration of several historic buildings, improvements to Main Street and housing projects.

"It's a matter of pride, because it's the headquarters of the church, and because we believe we should keep things orderly," said Howard Dunn, president of the church's real estate arm, Zions Securities Corp.

Zions Securities has devised a variety of deals to promote business, Dunn said. For $1 a year, for instance, the church leases to the county a third of the land for the Salt Palace. The church owns the ZCMI Center mall and the land for Crossroads Plaza. A Marriott Hotel east of the Salt Palace was built on land the church sold.

The church built the Kennecott office building south of its elegantly restored Hotel Utah, and restored the Promised Valley Playhouse. Dunn said there are plans to expand and renovate church-owned apartments around Temple Square.

Ball said a dozen companies are in the process of establishing offices downtown. "We are the hub of the fastest growing part of the United States — Arizona, Colorado, Nevada, Wyoming and Utah," he said.

Utah has no inventory tax, and no tax on goods in the process of being manufactured, Gary Hansen of the Chamber said state law also allows municipalities to loan bonding power to finance industrial development.

Business leaders predict that despite a dismal string of layoffs in Utah's long-established mining and manufacturing industries, and small business bankruptcies, other industries will continue to fuel growth.

Travel, the fastest-growing segment of Utah's economy, is expanding partly because Utah is becoming known for its recreation opportunities. Skiing is available within a half hour of downtown. Fran Haun, director of the Utah Convention Bureau said Salt Lake City's low hotel costs and low crime rate also make it attractive to convention goers.

Salt Lake City seems to be benefitting from an exodus of the meeting industry from other cities. "We have 481 conventions booked for the Salt Palace now. Five years ago, if we'd had 100 on the books, we'd have been very happy."

"Business people are finally discovering Utah," said Steve McCarthy, marketing director for the Marriott Hotel. The hotel was built last year because "Marriott has pretty much saturated the major metropolitan areas," and because the Mormon Church made the property available, he said.

But with new buildings rising, old buildings have had to come down. Architectural historian Allen Roberts said the church has demolished a number of historic buildings to make way for malls and housing.

Walesa Bust At City Hall

LACKAWANNA, N.Y. (AP) — A life-size bust of Lech Walesa, leader of the Polish Solidarity union movement, will be unveiled Wednesday in front of City Hall in this steel-making city.

The statue, done by Louis Dlugosz, a local sculptor, shows Walesa behind bars, symbolizing his continued imprisonment by Polish authorities since the declaration of martial law six months ago Sunday.

money market funds at much higher rates. Thousands of families simply were not making the sacrifices that used to be regarded as a part of the burden of parenthood. The savings that might have financed a son's college education were going into a second home at the beach. Since the program began 17 years ago, $1.7 billion in loans have gone in default. Medical students are among the worst of the deadbeats. Over 6,000 doctors are delinquent on 6,700 loans.

Under prodding from the White House, Congress last year made some feeble gestures toward reform. Eligibility standards were mildly tightened: Families with incomes above $30,000 must demonstrate "true need." But according to the Office of Management and Budget, the new standards are so lenient that a family with two children at Harvard "can make $100,120 and still qualify for maximum federal loans."

Mr. Reagan has asked for a further tightening in 1983, but House and Senate committees already have reacted negatively. The GSL program is immensely popular with middle-and upper-income families who do not benefit from such other entitlement programs as school lunches, military retirement, food stamps and Medicaid. In a social atmosphere pervaded by subsidies for everyone, Mr. Carter's "malaise" affects us all. The deficits go up, and old values go down.

for it? In informal conversations, legislators say they feel like they get pushed around by the legislative leadership. The Senate is virtually a three or four man operation. The House only slightly better. You feel like a rubber stamp for the whims and fancies of Sen. Ken Royall or Sen. Harold Hardison.
They complain about the people back home who think they're having a grand time in Raleigh (which is true in some cases) and the special interest group that threatens to "target" them because of one vote.

It's hard to figure out why anyone would put his name up for a second term in the legislature. No doubt it's fun and there's a lot of power and prestige attached. And then many say they expect things to change. Maybe they'll become a legislative power some day.

Panel OKs Mandatory Work Program

By BOB FICK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Agriculture Committee, which rejected major benefit cuts next year for food stamp recipients, has decided to require as many of them as possible to work or lose their coupons.

"Is there anything along the way that says that four-letter word 'w-o-r-k' can't be brought back into the vocabulary of those on the public dole?" said Sen. Roger Jepsen, R-Iowa.

On Monday, a bipartisan majority of the committee voted 11-5 to require states to set up mandatory work programs for able-bodied food stamp recipients by July 1983.

"We've got to stop giving in to the food stamp recipients here and there and start considering the rights of the millions of hard-working Americans who pay the bill," said Sen. S.I. Hayakawa, R-Calif., who pushed the mandatory work program through the committee.

"It's easy for the involuntarily unemployed to become voluntarily idle," Hayakawa said. "It's time we start cutting back on the subsidies."

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, endorsed the proposed revisions.

"It's a major step in the right direction," Helms said. "Congress is being made increasingly aware that the American people are demanding a work ethic in the welfare system. The committee recognizes the great potential for abuse of the system by able-bodied citizens who refuse to work."

Helms said the complaint he hears most frequently from North Carolinians is that food-stamp recipients are not willing to accept available jobs. "I hope North Carolina will be a leader in implementing these new provisions," he said.

The complex proposal, an extension of the "workfare" program which states were given the option to impose a year ago, would affect about four million of the 22 million persons now on the food stamp rolls, Reagan administration officials estimated.

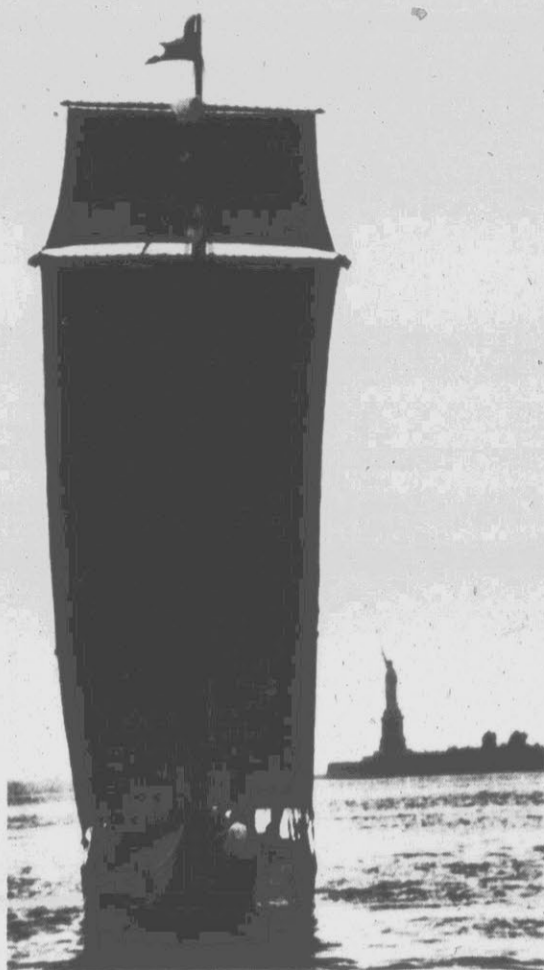

The mandatory work program would result in an estimated federal savings of between $20 million and $1.2 billion a year, officials said. The food stamp program will cost about $11.3 billion this year.

Assistant Agriculture Secretary Mary Jarratt said the workfare program, which is currently being tested in 12 areas nationwide, "can provide valuable work experience to recipients in assisting them to become self-reliant."

The program, she said, would enable more people to transfer from the public assistance rolls to private sector employment.

Although no committee member opposed the idea of requiring able-bodied food stamp recipients to find work, Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., chairman of the nutrition subcommittee, said there is no firm information on how well mandatory work programs operate or how much they cost the states or local governments.

VIKINGS AWEIGH — The Hjemkomst, a replica of a Viking longboat circa 900 A.D., sails past the Statue of Liberty in New York Harbor Monday on its way to sea. Its 13-member crew plans to sail the 77-foot boat 3,500 miles to Norway, a trip that is expected to take 3-4 weeks. The voyage is a memorial to Robert Asp, a Minnesota businessman who built the boat, who died of cancer in 1980. (AP Laserphoto)

"Maybe we'll be able to rework it some way," Dole said, calling for congressional hearings into the question before any final action is taken.

"The oldest dodge in government is to hold hearings," responded Helms.

The committee plan would require states to impose mandatory work requirements on able-bodied food stamp recipients beginning July 1, 1983. The recipients, to remain eligible for food stamps, would be required to perform public service work under a workfare program or obtain a job in the private sector.

Recipients under 18 years old or over 60 would be exempted from working, as would those certified by a doctor as physically or mentally unfit and unmarried parents or caretakers of children 6 years old or younger. Married parents or caretakers of children under 6 provided would also be exempted if another adult in the household was working at least 20 hours a week or was in a workfare program.

A person could also continue to receive benefits if he proved he had looked for work, or was willing to work but couldn't find a job.

The work requirement program would be mandated nationwide, but the agriculture secretary could exempt individual areas or regions if unemployment was more than 10 percent or if he determined there were not enough jobs to provide employment to covered food stamp recipients.

Under workfare, eligible recipients must accept public service jobs of up to 20 hours a week or lose their benefits.

Under Hayakawa's plan, eligible recipients would lose their stamps if they didn't have a job 30 days after their unemployment compensation ran out, or 60 days after leaving a job not covered by unemployment compensation.

Two Robberies Investigated

Greenville police are continuing their investigation of two robberies — one a strong arm robbery at Taco Cid's about midnight Sunday, and the other an armed robbery at the Sav-A-Ton gas station about 4:50 a.m. today.

Capt. J. A. Briley said a lone man armed with a pistol took about $111 from the cash register at the Sav-A-Ton gas station at 612 Greenville Blvd., after accosting the attendant with a pistol.

Briley said in the Sunday robbery at the Taco Cid restaurant on Greenville Boulevard, a lone robber forced an employee to the floor and took three bank bags containing some $1,134 in cash and $75 in checks from the business.

Weather Favoring Blue Mold Return

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Agricultural experts say weather conditions in North Carolina are favorable for the spread of blue mold, a fungus disease that caused heavy losses to the burley and flue-cured tobacco crops in 1979 and 1980.

Frequent showers, high relative humidity and overcast skies favor the development of blue mold in tobacco, according to Sam A. Tuten Jr., Forsyth County extension agent for field crops.

"Blue mold can develop in spite of high temperatures," Tuten said, adding that it was once believed that hot days would stymie blue mold activity. He said the field epidemics in recent years have disproved that theory.

Blue mold has been reported in about a dozen fields in three Georgia counties and in five fields in two Florida counties. The fungicide pre-plant treatment, Ridomil, had been applied on only one of those fields, and that application was beyond the fungicide's effective time period, Tuten said.

Tuten said a number of growers apparently did not use the preplant treatment this year in an effort to cut costs. He said he has heard that in one section of Forsyth County, only about half the growers used Ridomil when they transplanted this year's tobacco.

Prince Accepts Patron's Role

LONDON (AP) — Prince Charles has agreed to become patron of the British government's South Atlantic Fund to help dependents of Britons killed in the fighting for the Falkland Islands, Buckingham Palace has announced.

Charles' younger brother, Prince Andrew, is a helicopter pilot in the Falklands war, which wound toward an end Monday when Argentine troops at Stanley, the islands' capital, waved white flags of surrender.

The fund totals $3.98 million.

"Prince Charles has shown considerable interest in the fund, which included donating personally to it," a spokesman for the fund said.

Monday. "He made it known that he would respond favorably if asked to be its patron."

An estimated 230 British servicemen and merchant sailors have been killed in the 10-week-old conflict. The money will go to their widows, children and other dependents.

Bargaining Over Federal Budget Next Step For House And Senate

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The next step in creating a 1983 federal budget is getting under way with House and Senate negotiators bargaining over the size of the projected deficit, tax increases, spending cuts and other differences in their respective spending plans.

Conferees were expected to start work this afternoon on a compromise between the $784.3 billion outline adopted by the Senate last month and the $765.2 billion package endorsed by the House last week. Both plans were drafted by Republican leaders in each house.

Earlier in the day, President Reagan was meeting at the White House with a bipartisan group of congressional leaders.

White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said Monday the administration "had some difficulty" with the different GOP budget bills. While Reagan would sign either bill, Speakes said, he hopes the compromise package will be an improvement.

Negotiators were likely to be working through the week on the compromise that will set targets and goals for congressional committees as they draft legislation for spending and taxes. The full House and Senate each must ratify the compromise.

The Senate plan carries a deficit of $115.9 billion while the generally more conservative House measure projects the flow of red ink at $99.3 billion — a figure that congressional economists say is underestimated by $10.5 billion.

Both plans would meet the projected deficits through a combination of tax increases and spending cuts.

The deficit figure agreed to by the negotiators will be crucial to the future of any compromise budget outline in the House, where outnumbered Republicans acknowledged that last week's victory was due, in part, to keeping the deficit in their plan below $100 billion.

Aside from the deficit, the negotiators face tough election-year decisions on tax increases and spending reductions.

While it is likely that Republicans in the Senate will be able to use their majority strength to pass the compromise and enforce its targets, there are signs that achieving the savings will be difficult in the House, even if it ratifies the compromise.

Pre-Countdown For Columbia

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — With the blastoff date for the space shuttle's fourth mission less than two weeks away, technicians at Kennedy Space Center have begun a series of pre-countdown preparations to ready the Columbia for its final flight.

NASA spokesman Rocky Raab said workers began a series of tasks Monday that should be completed before the shuttle's 87-hour countdown starts one week from today.

Among the tasks workers must accomplish are the loading of the astronauts' emergency space suits into the Columbia's air lock, tests to the reusable spacecraft's navigational systems, and the installation of small explosive charges to enable the jettisoning of the 15-story external fuel tank and booster rockets.

The space suits were scheduled to be loaded today, and the flight computers' software was to be in place by Saturday.

Work crews at Kennedy Space Center's launch complex 39A picked up the

The admission is part of a federal plea-bargain that will reduce charges against Rep. Tommy Burnett of Jamestown from felony to misdemeanor status. He had been charged since December with lying to obtain low-interest farm loans from the federal government.

"The only thing wrong I've ever done in my life is to file some of my income tax returns late," Burnett said Monday, when the bargain with prosecutors was announced.

Ford's Grand Slam Keys Streaking O's By Milwaukee, 9-4

By The Associated Press Dan Ford was getting sick of watching the Baltimore Orioles. Having a seat on the bench does that to him.

Ford capped a five-run, seventh-inning outburst with a pinch-hit grand slam homer Monday night as the streaking Orioles downed the Milwaukee Brewers 9-4 for the eighth victory in their last nine games.

"I'm always itching to get back in," Ford said after hitting the first pinch-hit homer in his seven-year career. "I'm not a guy to sit around and watch. I'm not a fan yet."

Ford, whom the Orioles acquired from California in the off-season, had been sidelined since Thursday with a pulled hamstring muscle. He didn't have to test it much after he connected on a 1-2 pitch from reliever Jaime Easterly.

The pinch hit homer was the sixth this season for the Orioles, who were mired in the basement of the American League East for a few weeks after getting off to a poor start.

Ford's performance was one of the reasons for the poor start. "I think I was trying too hard in Baltimore because I wanted to get off to a good start," said Ford, whose average dropped as low as .197 this season.

Joe Nolan also homered for the Orioles, who have blasted 18 homers during their recent streak.

With the score tied 4-4, Lenn Sakata reached first on third baseman Paul Molitor's error to open the seventh. Al Bumbry then beat out a bunt, and both runners advanced on Rich Dauer's hit-and-run groundout. Ken Singleton was walked intentionally to load the bases, but Milwaukee starter Moose Haas, 3-4, walked Eddie Murray on five pitches to put Baltimore ahead 5-4.

Ford then batted for John Lowenstein and delivered. Jim Gantner knocked in three runs for the Brewers with a pair of singles, while Charlie Moore also had an RBI single.

Scott McGregor, with two innings of relief help from Tim Stoddard, earned his eighth victory against four losses.

Yankees 5, Red Sox 1

Dave Collins, mentioned in several trade rumors, with the deadline set at midnight PST, may have had his last hurrah as a New York Yankee.

Collins, acquired as free agent last winter, smacked his first homer since August 30, 1981, a two-run shot, to back Ron Guidry's five-hit pitching as New York downed Boston.

Guidry, off to his best start since 1978 when he won his first eight decisions, notched his eighth win of the year against one loss. He struck out seven and walked three.

The victory was only the Yankees second in their last nine games.

Indians 5-2, Tigers 0-1

Len Barker fired a four-hitter in the opener and Rick Sutcliffe and Dan Spillner combined to duplicate the performance in the nightcap as Cleveland swept Detroit and snapped a five-game losing streak.

Barker, 8-3, struck out 11, recording at least one strikeout each inning. It was his first shutout of the season.

"It's the best game I've seen pitched all year. Period. That's all I'll tell you," said Tigers Manager Sparky Anderson.

Campbell Slips By Pirates, 5-4

By RICK SCOPPE Reflector Sports Writer

In a baseball game with its share of mistakes, East Carolina made the last — and costliest — in the ninth inning. Campbell, after seeing the Pirates tie the game in the bottom of the seventh, scored what proved the winning run in the ninth when Tom Montgomery came home on a wild pitch to give the Camels a 5-4 victory Monday evening at Harrington Field in a North State Summer League baseball game.

#9 hitter, worked ECU starter Chubbie Butler for a walk to open the ninth and was replaced by Montgomery. After a sacrifice by Ron Ammon, moved Montgomery to second. Brian Peterson came on to relieve Butler for the Pirates.

Bobby Spicer grounded to short to move Montgomery to third and moments later Peterson uncorked a high fast ball that sailed over the outstretched glove of catcher Jack Curlings.

By the time Curlings could retrieve the ball, Montgomery had scored to give the Camels a 5-4 lead. Charlie Smith singled to open the bottom of the inning and moved to second on Curlings' sacrifice. But, Campbell reliever Carl Herrmann struck out Mark Shank and Art Barnhardt to end the game.

The win leaves Campbell at 2-5. ECU is now 2-6.

"The ball just slipped," ECU coach Gary Overton said. "It was just a wild pitch. I guess those things happen."

The wild pitch ended the three-hour battle that included six errors — three by each team — and numerous base running mistakes, including one in the fifth that cost the Pirates a run.

"We made too many mistakes tonight," Overton said. "That hurt us. We'd make a good play and then come right back to throw it away."

Overton felt the game was lost in the seventh when ECU loaded the bases with one gone and one run in and was unable to score. But, the game may have been lost even earlier — in the fifth.

Campbell took a 3-0 lead in the first and led 4-1, going into the fifth when ECU scored two runs to cut the deficit to a run. Ricky Nichols singled to open the inning. Then, with Nichols off running, Pete Persico singled to left. Nichols rounded second too far and before he could get back was tagged out on the throw from leftfielder Bill Wilkes.

David Wells followed with a triple to center which would have scored Nichols and Persico. As it was, however, only Persico scored. Wells later came home on John Hallows' single to make it 4-3.

Rocky Mt. Edges Pitt Co.

ROCKY MOUNT — Pitt County and Rocky Mount got together for a pitchers' duel Monday evening, and when the dust had settled Rocky Mount had used four straight walks to score what proved the winning run.

Pitt County left-hander walked four consecutive men in the fourth inning to force home a run and Rocky Mount held on the rest of the way to come away on top, 3-2.

Pitt County, which suffered its first loss in four American Legion outings, tied the game in the top of the fourth at 2-2 only to see Rocky Mt. rally to regain the lead in the bottom of the inning.

With two gone, Gay walked Bobo Weisner, Tim Hux and Phil Sikes to load the bases. He then walked Tim Killebrew to force home Weisner and Rocky Mt. led, 3-2.

Rocky Mount did not get a runner past second the rest of the way as Gay, now 1-1, struck out seven in the final five innings. Gay struck out 10 and walked nine for the game.

Pitt County, meanwhile, got a runner to second in the seventh and the eighth — both times with only one gone — but could not score as Hux shut Post 39 down to win his first Coats walked to load the bases before Sikes scored when Marshal White reached on a fielder's choice.

Payne later scored on a double steal to give Rocky Mount a 2-0 lead. Pitt Co. wasted little time in rallying, scoring two runs in the top of the fourth to tie the game.

With one gone, Sammy Hodges reached on an error and stole second. Walsh then doubled Hodges to third. Roger Williams reached on an error to score Hodges before Walsh came home on Terry Locust's sacrifice fly to tie the game.

Rocky Mount regained the lead in the bottom of the inning to take a lead it never lost.

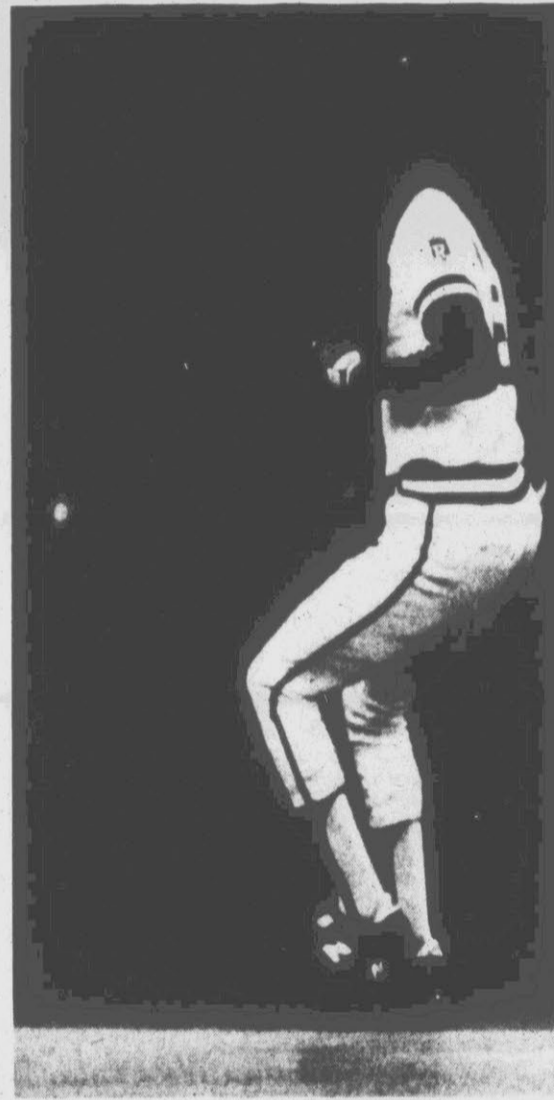

While neither team scored again, the final five innings were not without their highlights — one being a play by Hodges at shortstop in the seventh. Coats laced a grounder that Hodges dove for. After making the catch, Hodges reset himself and threw Coats out at first.

Both Gay and Hux threw three-hitters and only one player on either team had more than one hit: Pitt Co. catcher Emmett Walsh, who was two for four.

Rocky Mount broke open a scoreless ballgame in the third when it scored two runs.

Sikes singled and went to second on Killebrew's sacrifice. Kevin Payne and Eddie

McEnroe No. 1 At Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Tennis stars, standing by to hear the Wimbledon draw today, mostly have been avoiding tournament play to practice on grass.

John McEnroe, preparing to defend his title, was named the men's top seed, with fellow American Jimmy Connors second No. 2.

The seedings came only 24 hours after Connors had defeated the reigning Wimbledon champion in straight sets in the final of the Stella Artois Grand Prix event at London's Queen's Club.

Among the women, Wimbledon made Martina Navratilova the top seed with defending champion Chris Evert Lloyd No. 2.

The seedings, for the most part, conform with the world computer rankings.

With five-time Wimbledon champion Bjorn Borg of Sweden not entered in this year's tournament, McEnroe and Connors were strong favorites to reach the final and compete for the first-place prize of $75,000. The final is set for Sunday, July 4 — the first Sunday play since the Wimbledon tournament began in 1877.

Billie Jean King, 37, a six-time Wimbledon singles champion, was seeded No. 12.

After McEnroe and Connors, the top seedings went to Vitas Gerulaitis, No. 3; Sandy Mayer, No. 4; Johan Kriek of South Africa, No. 5; Gene Mayer, No. 6, and Mats Wilander of Sweden, No. 7.

None of the top seeds played in the Lambert and Butler Grand Prix tournament at Bristol, the last warm-up event for men before Wimbledon.

In the opening round of that tournament Monday, Britain's Jonathan Smith upset Fritz Buehning 7-6, 6-4. In other first-round action, Roscoe Tanner ousted Ramesh Krishnan of India 7-6, 6-3.

Andruzzi Happy With Recruits

East Carolina women's basketball coach Cathy Andruzzi describes her 1982 recruiting crop thusly: "We feel we've got the best all-around athletes ever brought into the program."

With six players returning from last year's team, which earned an NCAA berth, Andruzzi and her staff hit the recruiting trail and returned with five players with impressive credentials.

The five include the North Carolina player of the year, an all-state performer in N.C. and a orep all-America from Virginia.

Topping the list is Bridget Jenkins, the Associated Press Player of the Year in the state. Jenkins led SouthWest Edgecombe to back-to-back 3-A state titles and undefeated seasons.

Jenkins, a 5-7 guard, is a Converse All-America pick. She scored 1,601 points during her high school career. As a senior, she averaged 19.8 points and seven rebounds per game.

Jenkins will play in the upcoming East-West All-Star game in Greensboro.

Joining Jenkins in the ECU camp are Lisa Squirewell of Wake Forest-Rolesville, Sylvia Bragg of Richmond's Jefferson-Huguenot-Wyth High School, Rita Simmons of Miami (Fla.) Central High School and Eunice Hargett of West Craven.

A sixth player, Jenkins' high school teammate Delphine Mabry, will attend ECU on a track scholarship. Mabry, who was an all-stater in basketball, may join the ECU basketball team also.

Squirewell was a member of the AP all-state team and made Converse's honorable mention list. She averaged 24 points and 13.5 rebounds a game this past season and hit over 60 percent of her shots.

Squirewell tallied 2,168 points and 1,188 rebounds and made the Capital Area (2-A) All-Conference team all four years during high school. She was named the Raleigh Sports Club's county player of the year and was tabbed Metro Player of the Year as a junior and senior.

Another Converse All-America, Bragg helped her high school team to consecutive regional titles and a two-year record of 42-1. She averaged 14.5 points, 6.3 rebounds and 3.4 assists a game from the win as a senior.

Bragg was All-Colonial District three times and the regional tournament MVP this season. She was a member of the Virginia McDonald's All-Star Classic team.

Six-foot Simmons averaged 22.6 points and 18 rebounds a game for Miami (Fla.) Central. She was twice the All-Inner labor force is concentrated in one large plant, the town becomes almost totally dependent on a single industry for the support of hundreds of families.

"A better solution to bringing much needed jobs to the people of our area is to match the capabilities of the towns with the types of industries we solicit. Smaller industries in towns with lower populations mean that the town's people work for several different companies. So, an economic downturn in one industry doesn't necessarily affect the entire population."

"The fact of the matter is, however, bringing small to medium sized industries to our area requires a special effort. My experience as 6-year President of the Farmville Economic Council has been that many smaller industries don't get the attention at the state level that the larger plant locations do. So, we need an active State Senator to make sure that local industrial developers get a chance to show our area to these smaller firms."

"As your State Senator, I pledge to become actively involved in helping our new district locate the right types of industries. In fact, I will personally show our area to prospective firms at every opportunity."

"Larger cities, like Greenville, are well suited to providing the labor and waste disposal requirements of a large industrial plant location. But, the smaller towns in the new Pitt-Martin-Beaufort Senate District are better suited for small to medium-sized industries which are non-polluting corporate citizens and don't monopolize our natural resources. Our smaller cities and towns can be especially taxed by the labor, waste and water requirements of a major industry. When most of the

Graham, Rogers Given Little Chance Of Winning

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — The holders of the two most important national open golf titles in the world — David Graham and Bill Rogers — come into the 82nd American national championship with little more than hopes and wishes going for them.

Their games, at this stage, are far from the lofty levels that enabled Rogers to take the British national title and Graham the U.S. Open last year.

Neither has won this season. Neither has really been close. Both, said Graham, are paying the price for the frantically-busy, globe-trotting schedules they devised to capitalize on their important 1981 triumphs.

"What are you going to do?" Graham asked before a practice round on the Pebble Beach Golf Links, where he will defend his title in the 1982 U.S. Open that begins Thursday.

"I'm not Jack Nicklaus or Tom Watson. I'm not going to win all that many majors. You have to take advantage of it when you can. When somebody comes to you and offers you all that money — a lot of money — to play in a tournament, what are you going to tell him — 'Get lost?' You have to capitalize on it when you can."

Graham, as the U.S. Open titleholder, last winter embarked on a three-month around-the-world jaunt that brought him "an awful lot of money" on a schedule that included tournaments in England, France, Hong Kong, Japan, Australia, New Zealand and Panama, among others.

"It takes its toll," said Graham, an Australian native who now makes his home in Dallas. "I was exhausted when it was over. And, I suppose, I'm still paying for it...."

"I think Rogers is going through the same thing." Rogers, a runnerup to Graham in the 1981 U.S. Open at Merion, had a different but equally busy schedule following his triumph at Royal St. George in England.

The lean Texan won three times on those assorted trips, giving him seven international victories for the year, a performance that produced Player of the Year honors.

But it also kept him on the go throughout the winter months. He had no rest at all before starting the American tour this season.

"I'm young. It doesn't bother me. I can handle it," he said early this season.

His performance has not shown it, however, and Rogers is the first to admit that "I'm not playing very well right now. I'm not thinking well. It's been disappointing."

Despite their off-form performances this season, their credentials as the British and American national champions, make both Rogers and Graham targets of attention in the international, 153-man field that will be chasing golf's most prestigious title.

And Graham, for one, will be up for it. "I don't know how well I'll play, of course," he said. "But I'm as well prepared for it as I can be."

The Birdie Chasers — 'Good Guys' Of Sports

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — One need only to jump from a big heavyweight title fight in Las Vegas, Nev., to a tennis shootout in Reno to the world's most prestigious golf tournament here to reinforce an old conclusion.

Our sports heroes — overly paid, overly glamorized and, in many cases, overly pampered — may come in a single basket but they are as different as apples, oranges and prunes.

In Las Vegas, we saw a big, pleasant kid from Long Island get his dreams shattered by a better and more experienced man, the heavyweight boxing champion of the world — WBC version.

His left eye gashed, bleeding, hurting and deeply disappointed, Gerry Cooney should have rushed to the hospital for some repairs.

Instead, he insisted on first going out and facing the music — the postfight press conference where Holmes earlier had shown himself to be a gracious winner.

Two men of class. Oranges.

It's a lesson the pro golfers, who begin play here Thursday in the U.S. Open, learned long ago. The birdie chasers are the premier gentlemen — the "good guys" — of all sport. They are conscious of their obligations, appreciative of the roots of their adopted game.

They're the apples — few bad ones in a carload. The prunes? They swing tennis rackets. While it's unfair to paint them with one broad brush, as a clan they are the most rotten spoiled, arrogant and insensitive creatures in the world of fun and games.

They go through life blithely insulting umpires and ball boys, making profane gestures to fans, scorning the establishment and banking those $50,000 and $100,000 checks.

Sandwiched between the fight in Las Vegas and the golf at Pebble Beach, was an event in Reno Sunday called "The Shoot-Out," matching two of the world's finest court talents, Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia and Guillermo Vilas of Argentina.

A Reno hotel casino, Harrah's, put up the cash, $125,000. It was just a tennis match, nothing at stake, a pleasant, carnival-type afternoon with a few Hollywood celebrities enlivening the soup.

Instead of assisting in the promotion, the two principals insisted on being snippy, aloof and, at best, patronizing.

After one two-minute interview, Vilas said, "Sorry, I must leave."

Lendl, who elected not to compete at Wimbledon this year, was asked who might possibly win. "Somebody," he said curtly.

Someone asked if he was sorry he wasn't playing.

"No," he snapped. He said playing Wimbledon wasn't fun any more.

No one asked him if cabs were available.

Many Big 3 Athletes Fail To Receive Diploma

RALEIGH (AP) — A survey conducted by a Raleigh newspaper reveals that only 25 percent of the football and basketball players attending the three Triangle members of the Atlantic Coast Conference received their diplomas last month.

The Raleigh Times revealed that only three of the 15 football seniors at North Carolina State received degrees and none of the four basketball seniors graduated on time.

At the University of North Carolina, senior basketball player Chris Brust received his diploma last month. The other two seniors, Jeb Barlow and Jimmy Black, are scheduled to graduate after summer school.

Five of the 18 football seniors at Chapel Hill received diplomas on time, the story said.

Duke fared better, according to the report. Thirteen of the 25 football seniors there graduated, said Harry Demik of the Duke registrar's office.

The question of athletes as students was raised last week by Atlantic Coast Conference coaches and athletic directors, who backed a resolution favoring National Collegiate Athletic Association admissions standards for freshman athletes. Currently, it's up to individual schools to decide which athletes they will admit.

The College Football Association has also discussed admissions standards. It has proposed a minimum score of 750 on the College Entrance Examination Board and a high school graduating average of 2.5.

Demik said seven football players should graduate after the first session of summer school and two more after the fall. Vince Taylor was Duke's only senior basketball player.

At N.C. State, the grade point average at the end of the fall semester was 2.32 out of a possible 4.0, said Thomas S. Stafford Jr., assistant vice chancellor for student affairs.

The Wolfpack football team had a GPA of 1.63 and the basketball team 1.66.

Demik said the undergraduate GPA at Duke was 3.04. The football team's GPA was 2.5 while the basketball team earned a 2.72.

North Carolina's GPA was a 2.69, but neither Chancellor Christopher Fordham nor Athletic Director John Swofford released average GPA for the football or basketball teams.

Swofford did say that both teams have "over a 2.0."

"It borders on the unethical in our view to release grade point averages of students," Fordham said. "Small groups of students should be protected just like individual students, so I defend Athletic Director Swofford's policy of protecting student records."

At Chapel Hill, if an athlete does not have a 2.0 GPA, he or she is required to attend a study hall from 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday. Both Duke and N.C. State have similar study programs for its athletes.

Duke's Taylor received his degree on time last month, picking up a bachelor's degree in economics.

Campbell Edges ...

"We had some bad base running tonight," Overton said. "That (Nichols) was only one of them."

The Pirates managed to tie the game in the seventh, and had a chance to win it but were unable to.

Wells walked and went to second on Hallow's sacrifice. Todd Evans then singled to center to score Wells. Evans went to second on the throw. After Smith was intentionally walked, Curlings hit a double-play ball to short. But, Spicer, the Camels' second baseman, bobbled the toss from Posey and suddenly ECU had the bases loaded with one gone.

Shank hit a grounder up the middle that Spicer fielded on the grass and threw home to force Evans. Barnhardt then flew out to end the inning.

"I thought we had a chance to win it in the seventh," Overton said. "That was the big key to the game when we didn't win it right there."

The Camels wasted little time in jumping on Butler and the Pirates, scoring three runs in the first inning.

Butler, who gave up five runs and left without getting an out in his first Summer League start Thursday against UNC-W, walked Ammons and Spicer to open the first last night.

Posey then sacrifice the duo up a base before Shank dropped a fly ball in center by Kevin Barger which allowed Ammons to score. Wilkes followed with a double to score Spicer and Barger and Camel led, 3-0.

ECU came back with a run in the second when Smith scored when Shank reached on a fielder's choice.

The Camels, which had their lead runner on in four of the first five innings, got that run back in the fourth, however, when Wilkes scored on Rodney Stovall's sacrifice fly.

The Pirates threatened in the bottom of the inning on back-to-back singles by Smith and Curlings, but ground outs by Shank and Robert Langston killed the threat.

The Pirates scored twice in the fifth and then tied the game in the seventh, but never could wrest the lead from the Camels.

"Falling behind early takes some of your offense away," Overton said. "We couldn't punt or run as much."

The Pirates outhit Campbell, 12 to six, but left 14 men stranded. The Camels left eight.

ECU was led in hitting by Smith, who was three for four. Persico, Wells and Curlings all had two hits.

Campbell was led by Wilkes, who had two hits with two RBI. ECU returns to action tonight when the Pirates play host to UNC-Wilmington.

In 1981, Steve Carlton of the Philadelphia Phillies became the first southpaw in major-league history to reach the 3,000 mark in strikeouts.

Cubs End Streak With 12-11 Victory Over Phils

By The Associated Press

The way they've been playing for the last few weeks, the Chicago Cubs knew they were due for a good game one of these days.

They finally got one Monday.

"We needed that," saidumpump Willis after the Cubs broke a 13-game losing streak by pounding 19 hits in a wild, wind-blown 12-11 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

The Cubs' streak had tied their all-time record for futility, set in 1944, and was the longest in the National League this season. The last Chicago victory this season was a 3-2 triumph over the Los Angeles Dodgers May 29.

Aided by a 20-mph wind blowing out to the walls at Wrigley Field, the Cubs got a three-run homer from Willis and a two-run shot from Leon Durham, each of whom drove in four runs.

"No lead is secure in this park with the wind blowing out," said Durham, whose eighth inning blast gave the Cubs a 12-7 lead and helped them withstand a Phillies' four-run ninth.

"Maybe this will turn us around," said Willis. "In the last five games you can tell the guys were starting to press."

It was a typical day for the inconsistent Cubs. While roughing up Philadelphia ace Steve Carlton, 7-7, for six runs in just over three innings, they also committed six errors to help the Phillies get back into the game.

The Cubs nearly squandered leads of 6-0 and 9-3 earlier, then almost blew their 12-7 advantage in the ninth. Gary Matthews made it 12-10 with a three-run homer off reliever Bill Campbell. The Phillies added another run when Garry Maddox hit an RBI grounder, and they had the tying run on first, when Luis Aguayo grounded into a forceout to end the game.

Astros 9, Braves 0

Joe Niekro pitched a six-hitter and Denny Walling knocked in three runs, two with a homer, as Houston beat Atlanta, Niekro, 6-4, struck out six and walked two, retiring 18 of 19 batters over one stretch, including 11 in a row.

Walling knocked in the first Houston run with a sacrifice fly in the third inning off loser Rick Mahler, 6-5, then capped a three-run eighth with his two-run homer.

"A lot of things went right tonight," said Phil Garner, one of three Astros to collect three hits.

Mets 2, Pirates 1

Ellis Valentine hit a two-run homer in the fourth inning and New York overcame 10 strikeouts by Don Robinson to nip Pittsburgh.

Winner Pete Falcone, 4-2, allowed only five hits in eight innings before Neil Allen pitched the ninth and posted his 15th save to cool the Pirates, who had won eight of their 10 previous games.

Robinson, 6-2, meanwhile, kept the Mets guessing with fastballs and breaking pitches. He struck out six Mets swinging and allowed only six hits and two walks.

The Pirates scored in the first on Bill Madlock's sixth homer of the year.

Cardinals 2, Expos 1

Darrell Porter tripled home Ken Oberkfell in the third inning and scored on Dane Iorg's sacrifice fly, leading St. Louis over Montreal.

Bob Forsch, 8-2, held Montreal to six hits and one run through seven innings, but left the game in the eighth in favor of Bruce Sutter after loading the bases with nobody out.

Sutter pitched out of the jam and then worked out of another bases-loaded situation in the ninth with the help of the Cardinals' fourth double play of the game to gain his 15th save.

Forsch gave up a homer to Warren Cromartie in the fifth, then worked out of a two-on, one-out jam in the sixth with the help of a double play.

Dodgers 4, Padres 3

Dusty Baker hit his 11th home run with two outs in the 11th inning to lift Los Angeles over San Diego before a crowd of 49,973, the second largest in Padres' history.

The teams played to a 3-3 tie through 10 innings before the Dodgers won for their first time in five games in San Diego.

Steve Howe, 5-1, earned the victory by shutting out the Padres in the 10th and 11th innings after Dodger starter Fernando Valenzuela was racked for 14 hits, the most given up in his major league career.

Eric Show, 3-2, took over for Juan Eichelberger in the 11th and yielded Baker's winning home run. Eichelberger hurled 10 innings before leaving for a pinch-hitter, allowing seven hits. He struck out six while not walking a batter.

Brazil Rallies To Slip Past Russians, 2-1

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Soccer fans in Seville got their money's worth as Brazil and the Soviet Union delivered an action-packed match on the second day of the World Soccer Cup competition.

The sellout crowd of 68,110 at Sanchez Pisujuan was in a frenzy Monday night as the Brazilians rallied for a 2-1 victory.

The game was in sharp contrast to a dull 0-0 draw between Poland and Italy in an earlier game in Vigo.

To the tune of samba drums and thunderous uproars from the mostly South American supporters, Brazil lived up to its reputation as Socrates and Eder scored in the last 15 minutes to erase a 0-1 deficit. It was the opening Group One match of the month-long championship.

About 5,000 jam-packed Brazilians, many wearing yellow T-shirts and hats in the colors of their team, went delirious as the lean Socrates matched the earlier goal of Soviet forward Andrei Bal.

But the Soviets gave Brazil a good game, particularly in the first half, with Bal catching goalkeeper Waldir Peres off guard with a straight, long shot that gave them a 1-0 lead.

"We became shaky after their goal. It was a cheap goal, but it could have happened to any player," said Brazilian coach Te Santana.

"We took our opportunity and scored when the Soviets were not playing well. We imposed ourselves on the game and the result was a just one."

Brazil, the favorite to win the 1982 Cup, is bent on a fourth trophy, having won in 1958, 1962 and 1970. Brazil and the

'Pack Whips UNC-W, 8-2

RALEIGH (AP) — Chris Baird had a home run and three RBIs and Tim Barbour added three hits, including a homer, to power N.C. State over UNC-Wilmington 8-2 in North State League baseball Monday.

Baird belted his 410-foot drive in the first inning off starter and loser Jaymie McGuire, 0-2. Baird then keyed a five-run fourth with a two-run double for the Wolfpack.

Barbour, who entered the game batting .167, put N.C. State in front for good in the second inning, snapping a 1-1 tie with a two-run homer.

Freshman righthander Hugh Brinson took the win, scattering seven hits for his second complete-game victory against no losses.

Moe Barbour and Jim Toman had two hits apiece for the Wolfpack, while the Seahawks were led by Johnny Slaughter with three hits and Paul Murr with two.

The win upped N.C. State's record to 6-1 in league play and kept the Wolfpack a game ahead of UNC-Wilmington, now 7-3.

Orioles Triumph...

Rick Manning homered and doubled to key the first-game victory.

Run-scoring singles by Alan Bannister and Mike Fischlin staked Barker to a 2-0 lead and Manning's two-run homer made it 4-0.

In the nightcap, Andre Thornton's 18th homer snapped a 1-1 tie in the seventh inning and gave Sutcliffe his fifth win in seven decisions. Spillner got the final two outs for his eighth save.

The Tigers took a 1-0 lead in the fourth inning of the nightcap on Larry Herndon's 12th homer of the year, but the Indians tied the score on Mike Hargrove's RBI single in the sixth.

A's 4, Blue Jays 2

Tony Armas' sacrifice fly drove home Oakland's deciding run in a two-run third inning and Rickey Henderson stole his 63rd base of the season as Oakland beat Toronto.

Matt Keough, 6-7, who gave up Willie Upshaw's eighth home run of the season, a two-run shot in the first inning, got the win with relief help from Tom Underwood and Dave Beard. Jim Gott, 1-4, was the loser.

The A's got a run in the second inning on Mickey Klutts' RBI double and another in the third on Dwayne Murphy's single.

Royals 3, Twins 0

Paul Splittorff and Dan Quisenberry combined on a five-hitter and George Brett slammed a solo homer as Kansas City handed Minnesota its 22nd loss in 24 games.

Twins rookie first baseman Kent Hrbek had his 17-game hitting streak halted as he walked three times and grounded out in the eighth.

Quisenberry chalked up his 16th save.

Mariners 4, Rangers 0

Jim Beattie and Mike Stanton combined on a three-hitter and Bruce Bochte, Dave Henderson and Al Cowens powered solo homers as the Seattle posted its fifth victory in six games by blanking Texas.

Beattie, who worked the first six innings and allowed three singles, and Stanton, who collected his fourth save, retired the final 14 Texas batters.

Hargett brings in averages of 11.4 points, 13.2 rebounds, 4.8 assists and 2.6 blocked shots per game from basketball and a 3.9 (out of a possible 4.0) grade average in the classroom.

Fourth in her class of 154, Hargett was still able to make all-conference as a freshman and sophomore and team MVP as a senior.

"The players we recruited will fit into our concept," Andruzzi said. "They are top caliber on and off the court. They all have good defensive knowledge, something that you don't find often at the high school level."

"We feel that each has the qualities to be successful here."

The recruits will help replace Sam Jones and Lillion Barnes, both of whom have graduated.

Refunds Doubled.

Right now, if you're getting a refund from Uncle Sam, you may be wondering what to do with it.

Frankly, we can't think of any way to make more of it than investing in an NCNB IRA. In fact, it's like getting tax refunds every year from now until you retire.

First, as you can see by the chart, it doesn't take long for your money to double, redouble and double again with the interest an IRA pays.

Second, you pay no taxes on the interest your IRA earns until you start withdrawing. Then, you'll probably be retired and in a lower tax bracket.

Finally, any money you add to your IRA each year can be deducted from your taxes.

For more details, stop by and see the people at NCNB. And find out why more people have been opening IRA's with us than any other place in the neighborhood.

NCNB

*Working individuals can contribute as much as 100% of their salary or wages, up to a maximum of $2000 ($4000 total for working couples). Substantial interest penalty for early withdrawal. All depositors insured to $100,000 by FDIC.

Bridge is not for the faint of heart. To be a winner, you must be prepared to take a chance.

The auction was routine. North probed for a 4-4 fit in a major suit with the Stayman Convention, then leaped to three no trump when his partner showed spades rather than hearts.

West led the top of his club sequence, and declarer won. He led a diamond to the ten, and East ducked smoothly. Declarer returned to hand with a club and repeated the diamond finesse. East ducked again!

Declarer might have suspected that East had held up the king of diamonds when the first diamond finesse succeeded, but those suspicions were lulled when the finesse worked again. He returned to his hand with a heart to the king, and any doubts declarer had about the diamond suit vanished when, on the lead of another diamond, West followed suit. Declarer finessed confidently, and East won his now bare king.

As a result of East's daring defense, declarer was held to only two diamond tricks. Dummy was dead, since there was no entry, and declarer had only seven tricks. In the end he managed a second spade trick, but that still left him a trick short of his contract.

Observe the difference if East won either the first or second diamond. Declarer would now have six tricks in the minor suits, and a sure trick in each major. He would only have to guess the spade position to come to nine tricks, and in addition there would be the possibilities of an end play in the major suits.

This type of holdup occurs frequently. But the one thing that East must avoid is to go into a trance when the diamond finesse is taken. That gives away the location of the king, and an alert South will go up with the ace of diamonds on the third round and score four tricks in the suit which will spare him from any further problem.

Charlie Daniels Band In Benefit

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — The Charlie Daniels Band, whose hit song "Still in Saigon" describes the plight of Vietnam veterans, will stage a free concert for inmates at the Attica state prison.

The band was chosen by the state Correctional Services Department for Friday's performance at the maximum security facility, prison officials said Monday.

"There are many veterans in Attica, many are Vietnam-era veterans," spokesman Louis Ganim said in explaining the choice.

The band has given benefits for Vietnam veterans in the past.

The federal government opened the first prison veterans affairs office at Attica in 1981, Ganim said.

Viewers Like 'Beaver' Cleaver

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Who says there's nothing worthwhile on television? Every day, millions of Americans are watching Beaver Cleaver learn the lessons and lumps of life from the likes of Eddie Haskell and Clarence Rutherford.

As Theodore "Beaver" Cleaver might say, "Gee Wally, that's neat." The more things change, the more they stay the same; another generation is growing up with "Leave It To Beaver."

The 25-year-old, situation comedy, which had a six-year run on CBS and then ABC, is experiencing a renaissance in 35 markets, capturing a national Nielsen rating of 3.5 last March. That translates into almost 3 million households.

Nowhere is Beaver's grip stronger than in Ann Arbor, Mich., where seniors from Huron High School have made it a daily ritual to watch June, Ward, Wally "and Jerry Mathers as the Beaver."

Some of them were so inspired they named their softball team "The Almighty Cleavers." They finished the season 9-1 and wore black armbands the day Hugh Beaumont (Ward Cleaver) died.

"We did the Cleavers pretty proud," says team member David Benedek. "There's nothing better on TV today," adds Benedek, 18. "It's nice to see positive family values. There's no sex or violence, and no exploitation. There's no sense that the producers have a certain strategy to capture the sex audience or the violence audience."

Ted Turner, the network gadfly, has been saying the same thing for years. His superstation, WTBS in Atlanta, with a potential reach of 21.3 million households in all 50 states, has been rerunning "Leave It To Beaver."

In Turner's biography, "Lead, Follow or Get Out of the Way," he says "Leave It To Beaver" offers an alternative to programming Turner characterizes as "the school bus attacked by truck drivers wearing bikinis."

WTBS says "Leave it to Beaver" attracts the most viewer mail of the station's nostalgic sitcoms. To Benedek and his friends, watching "Beaver" is part lark, part fun and part repudiation of today's TV.

Each afternoon, "The Almighty Cleavers" order pizzas and watch "Leave It To Beaver," a warm-hearted 1950s program, which saw the world from Beaver Cleaver's kids-eye view.

"It's funny both because it's funny and because it's dated," says Benedek, Huron's high school president, who will be enrolling at the University of Virginia this fall. "Sometimes they get into pretty realistic situations, but some of the attitudes are dated. Mrs. Cleaver's place is in the home, but she understands The Beaver and is always right about how he's feeling."

"The predictability is funny, too. You know The Beaver's lines, even before he says them."

The show offered some memorable characters. Eddie Haskell was the snake who was superficially solicitous but substantially slimy. "He's the original J.R., the guy you love to hate," says Benedek. "We get a big kick out of booing him. Everybody sees somebody they know in Eddie."

Ken Osmond, the actor who played Eddie, is a Los Angeles motorcycle cop. Two years ago, he was wounded in the line of duty, but his bullet-proof vest saved his life. That's a true story, but some rumors surfacing after the show's demise are unfounded.

Osmond did not become a porno star, nor marry Barbara Billingsley (June Cleaver); Frank Bank (Clarence "Lumpy" Rutherford) did not marry Raquel Welch, and Mathers (Beaver Cleaver) did not die in Vietnam.

Not long ago, Mathers and Tony Dow (Wally) toured the dinner-theater circuit in the play, "So Long, Stanley," and, recently, Mathers said in a newspaper interview that the Cleaver clan might be back for a modern TV sequel. "I think people are ready for us again."

Fantasies And Boxing Sequel In BO Battle

By JAY ARNOLD
Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) —

Two outer space fantasies and a boxing sequel are prime contenders in the annual battle for top box office dollars in what could be the most successful movie summer ever.

"Rocky III," the latest in the series of Sylvester Stallone boxing sagas, showed early box office muscle, topping all challengers through Sunday by amassing a huge $43,748,403 in 17 days release in 1,232 theaters.

Despite competition from the Larry Holmes-Gerry Cooney heavyweight boxing match Friday night, "Rocky III" managed to take in $8,222,095 in its third three-day weekend, according to MGM-UA studio officials.

Not far behind was "Star Trek II: The Wrath of Khan," which had grossed $31,028,226 in 10 days at 1,621 theaters — nearly 10 percent of the nation's movie screens.

The new total was a 10-day record for a Paramount film; the previous champion had been "Star Trek, The Motion Picture" in 1979, which was the forerunner of the latest adventures of Captain Kirk and Mr. Spock.

The third contender, Steven Spielberg's "E.T., The Extra-Terrestrial," made a big splash, taking in $11,911,438 in its first three days at 1,101 theaters, according to Universal Pictures.

The film's average $10,188 per screen outshone the $8,851 per screen average registered by "Star Trek II" in its opening weekend. By comparison, "Rocky III" grossed an average $17,056 per screen at 939 theaters when it opened Memorial Day weekend.

If theatergoers continue to flock to the big movies and pay attention as well to the rest of the field, the total dollars accumulated by the industry in this year's Memorial Day-Labor Day period could top the $1.16 billion record established last summer.

Registering a big total so far due to a head start on the competition, was Universal's "Conan the Barbarian," which had totaled $35,136,281 in five weeks. But the film grabbed an anemic $949,961 from 456 of 730 theaters reporting this past weekend, showing signs it was beginning to stumble.

Another Spielberg entry, MGM-UA's "Poltergeist," added $5,379,673 to its coffers in 890 theaters to raise its 10-day total to $15,840,440.

Trailing the leaders by a wide margin was a pack of promising newcomers and also-rans. Warner Bros.' "Road Warrior" registered $703,089 in its fourth weekend in 357 theaters. Its 17-day total was $8,618,887.

"Grease II," the Paramount sequel to the successful film starring John Travolta and Olivia Newton-John, slipped at its start this weekend, picking up $4,654,411 in 1,250 theaters.

"Annie" was holding steady, bringing in $374,950 in just 14 theaters for a 24-day total of $2,751,328. The Columbia Pictures release goes into more than 1,000 theaters Friday for its real test.

"Hanky Panky," also from Columbia, had a weak $7,004,688 in 10 days at 1,207 theaters, with $2,252,348 counted this past weekend.

Universal's "Dead Men Don't Wear Plaid" was hanging on with $765,547 from 470 of 757 theaters reporting for $16,328,763 in four weeks.

Sympathize

ROME (AP) — Actress Sophia Loren had the sympathy of almost three-fourths of Italy when she was jailed recently for tax evasion, according to a survey.

The survey, appearing in Wednesday's issue of the Italian magazine "TV Smiles and Songs," said 74 percent of the Italians surveyed disapproved of Miss Loren's 30-day jail sentence.

Results of the survey of 977 Italians of all ages were released Monday.

The Academy Award-winning actress was freed June 5 after serving 17 days of her sentence at a women's prison near Naples. She was convicted in 1980 of failing to report $180,000 on her 1983 income tax returns. According to the survey, 71 percent of those questioned thought Italian President Sandro Pertini should have granted amnesty to the 47-year-old film star.

The magazine said the survey was conducted in collaboration with sociologist Ferenc Schuch and the S and G Research Institute. The magazine did not release the complete results of the survey — including the number of negative or undecided responses — nor did it give the margin of error.

Presbyterians Plan Reuniting

By The Associated Press
Southern Presbyterians who broke away during the Civil War are meeting to approve reunification with the main branch of the denomination, while two smaller, conservative groups have already joined hands across the Mason-Dixon Line.

Southern Presbyterians, meeting in Columbus, Ga., this week are almost certain to approve a merger with the United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, the oldest American branch of the denomination that traces its roots to 1706.

The group formed in the South during the Civil War, now called the Presbyterian Church in the United States, has about 92,000 members, mostly in the South.

Two Named To Program

Two Pitt County students, Tommie (Chip) Little, of Rose High School, and Michael Brown, of North Pitt High School, both recent 1982 graduates, have been selected to represent Carolina East Mall at the 1982 Academy of Achievement Awards Program in New Orleans June 24-26. They are being sponsored by E.W. Hahn, Incorporated.

The main branch with 2.4 million members, many of them in the North, takes a more liberal view of the role of the church in society.

In the merger of the two smaller groups, the Reformed Presbyterian Church Evangelical Synod meeting Monday in Grand Rapids, Mich., agreed to join the Presbyterian Church in America.

Little has been active in school and community affairs, and is the recipient of numerous scholastic and civic awards, including the Civitan Citizenship Award, serving as student body president, election as lieutenant governor at N.C. Boys' State, and senator to Boys' Nation. He is the son of Tommie and Marilee Little.

If the merger of the two larger groups is approved after debate today at a meeting of the southern group in Columbus, the proposal would be presented for approval at the General Assembly of the northern group in Hartford, Conn., later this month.

The merger would also have to be approved by a united General Assembly meeting next year and by the individual presbyteries that make up the denomination.

Brown, son of Hildred and Pauline Brown, also served as student body president and has been active in other academic and civic areas. He was class president for three years, attended Governor's School, is a member of the National Honor Society, and was on the baseball team and played with the school band.

At the meeting of the conservative groups in Grand Rapids, the Reformed group, with a 200-year history and 26,000 members, mostly in the North, agreed to accept the doctrine of the Presbyterian Church in America, a group that broke away from the larger southern branch in the 1970s, mainly because of its opposition to ordination of women and other liberal policies.

The combined conservative groups would have about 115,000 members.

Each year, E.W. Hahn Incorporated provides an all-expense paid trip for two students from each area where Hahn owns or manages a shopping center. Fifty American businesses sponsor the annual event which brings together 350 outstanding high school honor students to attend the Salute to Excellence program.

She was interviewed at the group's 122nd General Assembly, which opened Friday in Columbus.

Democracy's Forerunner

On this date in the year 1215 King John of England sealed the Magna Carta. But this document, now considered to be one of the most important steps toward democracy, was sealed under duress and provided benefits only to the English aristocracy. A group of aristocrats, unhappy with John's abuses of power demanded that the king grant a list of "rights" they had drawn up. He agreed only when threatened with armed force. It was a great victory for the upper classes but the charter hardly ever mentioned the peasantry. Nevertheless its influence spanned the centuries and its ideals formed the basis of our own constitution — guaranteeing the supremacy of the law over the power of rulers.

District Court Report

Judge Herbert O. Phillips and Judge E. Burt Aycock disposed of the following cases during the May 17-21 term of District Court in Pitt County:

James Robert Brewer, Leon Drive, exceeding safe speed, five days jail suspended on payment of cost.

Sure-Fire Mosquito Recipe Given

Pitt County Environmental Health Chief of the Pitt County Health Department Willie Pate says he has a sure-fire recipe for raising healthy mosquitoes:

1. Keep objects around that hold water — tin cans, jars, barrels, pails, toys, old tires, saucers, bowls, etc.

2. Leave these water-holding containers lying exactly where they are. Do not empty, turn upside down or gather for dry storage.

3. Be sure that ditches, birdbaths, clogged gutters, flat roof tops and the like can fill up with water. Allow any leaking outside faucets to continue to drip.

4. Wait a few days, weeks or months and your mosquitoes will hatch. Cost: None.

Mosquito eggs laid in dry containers may remain unhatched for weeks or month — until they're covered with water a few days. Then you will have adult mosquitoes.

If every Pitt County citizen would act responsibly and destroy small breeding areas around their homes and see that nearby ditches drain property, we might all enjoy the outdoors more, Pate said.

A free brochure on how not to raise mosquitoes in your yard is available upon request from the Environmental Health Section of the Health Department, 752-4141.
