Argentina Junta Refuses Accept POWs

By The Associated Press

Argentina refused today to let its prisoners of war disembark at Argentine ports and British ships that have loaded 1,100 of the more than 9,000 troops will not take them home until Argentina guarantees safe passage, the British Foreign Office said.

The commander of the British task force in the Falklands, Rear Adm. John Woodward, says hundreds of the POWs could die of exposure, malnutrition, trench foot and disease in winter temperatures that dip to 4 degrees at night unless Argentina changes its position.

Foreign Office spokesman Nicholas Fenn told a news conference in London today that "Argentina has indicated by way of Brazil that it is unwilling to receive prisoners of war at Argentine ports." Brazil represents Argentine interests in London since the rupture in diplomatic relations.

British officials speculated that the reason for the Argentine decision was that the arrival home of thousands of defeated troops — in British ships — would humiliate President Leopoldo F. Galtieri's junta, already facing a public backlash.

Britain is asking a number of other countries if they will receive the prisoners, who surrendered Monday when British forces retook the islands. Uruguay has received previous batches of Argentine captives. But it was not clear so far whether Argentina will accept prisoners sent home via Uruguay or other countries, British officials said.

Fenn said Britain has still not received an answer to the other part of the message it sent to Buenos Aires on Tuesday, via the Swiss government, asking for a declaration that all hostilities in the South Atlantic, not just in the Falklands, have ceased.

British commanders in the Falklands have told war correspondents that ships now loading Argentine prisoners will not leave until Argentina guarantees their safe passage.

Independent Television News reported today that 1,100 prisoners have already boarded the requisitioned passenger liner Canberra from West Falkland island and more, marching in batches of 200 to the harborfront, are embarking in Stanley, the capital, in East Falkland.

The ferry Norland is also taking on prisoners, according to dispatches from the islands. The British Foreign Office confirmed that some prisoners already were on board task force ships ready to sail.

Some of the Argentines ran amok Wednesday night and "looted and destroyed the post office and town hall." British Broadcasting Corp. correspondent Robert Fox reported from the Falklands today. He said a company of British marines was called in to restore order.

Reporter Mick Seamark of the London tabloid The Daily Star said a number of young Argentine soldiers were being treated for foot wounds allegedly suffered when officers shot them to keep them from deserting.

New Pitt Schools Superintendent Is Announced

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Bringing an end to a four-month search for new leadership, county school board officials announced today that Edwin West Jr. of High Point has been chosen as the new superintendent of Pitt County schools.

West, 41, will begin work July 19. He is now superintendent of High Point Public Schools, a 9,300-student system.

West served as superintendent of Edenton-Chowan schools from 1972-75 and as director of development and science consultant for the North Carolina Department of Public Instruction from 1968-1972. He also taught science at New Hanover High in Wilmington and was an instructor at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

A native of Wilmington, he received his A.A. degree from Wilmington College and his B.S., M.A.T. and Ed.D. degrees from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

"The superintendency of the Pitt County schools will provide me an opportunity to integrate the accomplishment of personal and professional goals," noted West, goals he said could be reached through the "quality of life in Pitt County."

"Those ideals, values and practices basic to each member of my family can be realized in Pitt County," he added.

"The Pitt County school system is recognized throughout the state as being one of the best," said the new superintendent. "It will provide me an opportunity for greater service and contributions to public education."

The responsibility of a school superintendent, according to West, is to "inspire, lead, guide and direct administrative, instructional and support service teams in setting and achieving the highest standards of excellence so that all students ... may be provided with a valuable and personally rewarding education."

"In essence," he added, "he (the superintendent) must provide leadership which fosters both an individual's commitment and contribution to the goal of excellence."

Craig Phillips, the state superintendent of public instruction, called West "one of the top educators in the state."

"Pitt County could not have chosen wiser," Phillips noted.

West's professional affiliations include chairman of the N.C. Annual Testing Commission, chairman of the N.C. Region V Superintendent's Council and chairman of the board of governors, Governor's Schools of North Carolina.

He is a professor for the National Academy for School

EDWIN WEST, JR.

Executives and the National Academy for Vocational Education and is an adjunct professor for the University of North Carolina at Greensboro in the areas of school public relations, supervision, school finance, school facility planning and management.

In 1973 he received the "Man of the Year" award in Edenton. In addition, he was a recipient of the Rotary Foundation Fellowship for International Understanding.

West will succeed the late Ott Alford, who retired shortly before his death earlier this year.

PLO Begins 'Flurry' Of Secret Diplomacy

By The Associated Press

Beirut airport came under heavy shelling today and Israeli armored columns moved against Yasser Arafat's guerrillas east of Lebanon's capital.

The new fighting came amid reliable reports that the Palestine Liberation Organization had offered to discuss with the Lebanese government "a new form of Palestinian presence in Lebanon."

The PLO leadership denied reports it was prepared to lay down its arms, but it engaged in a flurry of secret diplomatic activity involving U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib and Lebanese President Elias Sarkis.

The Tel Aviv command said Palestinian guerrillas bombarded Israeli troops around the airport, damaging three parked airliners. It said Israeli forces east of Beirut also came under a barrage of the rockets and Israeli troops fired back.

But Salim Salam, the managing director of Lebanon's Middle East Airlines, told reporters that Israeli gunboats shelled the airport and "two Boeing-720s belonging to M.E.A. were wrecked and the airline's building sustained several direct hits."

A smaller jet and a Lebanese helicopter also were destroyed. A group of Lebanese and foreign press photographers saw the wrecked aircraft on the tarmac in front of the previously damaged terminal building, next to another Middle East Airlines Boeing burned out earlier in the fighting.

Salam appealed for neutralization of the airport compound, saying further damage would be a "national disaster."

The airport, closed since the Israelis invaded 12 days ago to stamp out the guerrillas, has been in the center of bitter fighting as the Israelis and their Lebanese Christian allies close in on Palestinian strongpoints located nearby.

Lebanese state radio said Wednesday the Israelis and their rightist Lebanese Christian allies seized a key Palestinian position near the airport. Israeli sources said the Christians overran PLO-held buildings on the east side of the airport's runway. The PLO said it repelled an Israeli assault there, killed 26 soldiers and wrecked two tanks.

A PLO communique said Israeli armored columns tried to advance today into the leftist stronghold of Aley, 12 miles east of Beirut, behind a massive barrage of artillery and rockets. "Our forces engaged the enemy force in fierce and continuing combat," the communique said.

In a move apparently designed to demonstrate the PLO's authority in west Beirut, where Arafat and his leadership have been trapped by the Israelis since Monday, the guerrillas announced that their military police executed three guerrillas convicted of armed robbery.

The announcement did not indicate when the trials or executions took place. The men presumably were shot by firing squad in west Beirut.

"The fist of the revolution will remain hanging over those who threaten the security of the masses or private property. Such attempts are tantamount to national treason in this critical time," the statement said.

In Tel Aviv, the Israel Bonds organization said Prime Minister Menachem Begin, who is now in New York, will launch a drive among foreign Jews for $100 million to offset the economic impact of the invasion.

Some estimates of the cost of the invasion range as high as $1 billion, and Israel has imposed new taxes to raise $650 million additional revenue by the end of July.

War correspondents in Beirut reported Israeli forces shelled PLO positions in the capital Wednesday night, hitting a munitions dump that set off a barrage of explosions and fires. Lebanese press reports said guerrillas returned the fire with Soviet-made rockets.

Arafat's reported willingness to compromise came after a day of intense diplomatic activity between the Palestinians, Sarkis and Habib, indicating the crippled PLO was seeking a face-saving way to survive Israel's invasion.

Habib was reportedly attempting to negotiate the fate of the PLO in Lebanon, seek an end to the fighting and the withdrawal of Israeli and Syrian troops.

Lebanese sources said Arafat, meeting with Lebanese Prime Minister Shafiq Wazzan on Wednesday, suggested possible guerrilla disarmament in exchange for U.S. recognition, safe conduct from Beirut for PLO commanders and a role for the organization in determining the future status of Palestinians.

Israel radio reported today that Habib had proposed the PLO to lay down its arms and become a political movement, and in return he would seek a relaxation of the Israeli siege of west Beirut. The radio gave no source for its report.

The United States, Israel's strongest ally, has promised it will not negotiate directly with the PLO until the organization formally recognizes the Jewish state's right to exist and accepts U.N.-backed frameworks for peace in the Middle East.

Lt. Gen. Raphael Eytan, Israel's military chief of staff, was quoted as dismissing reports from Lebanon that the PLO was ready to throw down its weapons in return for U.S. recognition and a role in future peace negotiations.

The Israeli daily Yedioth Ahronoth quoted Eytan as calling the offer as "a last ditch tactic to save the remnants of the terrorists trapped in Beirut."

On Wednesday Israel said its invasion has given Lebanese leaders "a golden opportunity" to form a strong pro-Western government, recognize the Jewish state and expel the PLO and Syrian troops, who have dominated Lebanese politics since the 1975-76 civil war.

Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon, speaking to Israel television Wednesday, said Israel has decided not to invade Beirut.

Rose Tries To Expedite Tobacco Supports Vote

By BOB FICK

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Taxpayers will continue to pay for losses in the tobacco price support program unless Congress approves proposed legislation in the next month, tobacco-state lawmakers say.

"Our promise to the House of last October is dead for 1982 if this bill isn't moved," says Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C., chairman of the House Agriculture tobacco subcommittee.

Rose also is chief architect of the bill tobacco-state lawmakers came up with after promising last fall to help end the practice under which taxpayers bear the cost of the support program.

Critics of the program say taxpayers have subsidized tobacco prices by more than $600 million over the last 50 years while also paying millions to convince Americans that smoking is hazardous to their health.

The controversial price support program survived House efforts to abolish it last fall only after Rose and others promised to insure that future losses resulting from the program would be shifted to the industry. The Senate retained the program by a mere vote.

On Wednesday, the Agriculture Committee endorsed Rose's bill. Rose wants to expedite action on it in the full House since tobacco marketing begins next month in the South.

But he'll need the support of two-thirds of the House members, and the program's critics say that will be hard to obtain.

Rep. Paul Findley, R-Ill., warned Wednesday that the bill will face an uphill fight in the House because government funds — that is taxpayers — will continue to cover the tobacco program's administrative costs. They average between $13 million and $15 million a year.

Under the bill, farmers would earmark a few cents from every pound of tobacco they put under loan to cover any price-support costs other than normal administrative expenses. Findley warned that continued government payment of administrative costs remains a subsidy that will haunt the tobacco industry.

"You're asking for trouble," he told Rose.

Senate Budget Amendments Face House Test

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A $6-billion 1982-83 state budget bill, including a freeze on salaries for teachers and state workers, goes back to the House today for a test on Senate amendments.

One of the Senate changes, which would eliminate a provision giving teachers and state employees excused absences because of bad weather, stirred House opposition and had the potential to tie up enactment of the budget bill.

The Senate voted 38-5 to give the budget bill its final approval a day after the House approved the spending package.

One of the amendments, proposed by Sen. Joe Palmer, D-Haywood, took out a provision on absences that had been included by the House and Senate Appropriations Committees. The provision gave teachers and state workers up to five absences — with pay and without having to make them up — because of bad weather.

"That's going to be a hullabaloo because the people who put that in over in the House were adamant," said House Base Budget Chairman Al Adams, D-Wake.

The Senate approved two other amendments, one restoring a temporary freeze on permits for construction of new rest homes. A similar provision had been removed by the House.

Senate Appropriations Chairman Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, said the freeze would last six months and was proposed because the state would face higher Medicaid charges if more beds were added.

Another amendment added by the Senate said the $300-million water and sewer bond issue, already authorized by the General Assembly, will be subject to a referendum either this November or sometime next year. A provision added in committee last week would have required the referendum be held in 1983.

The Senate turned back several Republican amendments, including one that would have sharply limited use of the budget's $1-million appropriation for abortions for poor women. It failed 31-14.

The salary freeze was proposed by Gov. Jim Hunt as a way of cutting spending by $90 million.

It cancels automatic pay adjustments scheduled to take effect July 1, 5 percent merit raises that would have gone to half the state employees and 5 percent additional pay steps for all teachers.

"We think it's a disservice to balance the budget on the backs of teachers," said John I. Wilson, president of the North Carolina Association of Educators. "They had some alternatives but not enough incentive to go look for them."

In other legislative action Wednesday:

Tenancy

Legislation that supporters contend would do away with the last major instance of sex discrimination in North Carolina law overcame Senate obstacles and unanimously won tentative approval. It was scheduled for a final vote today.

The bill would change "tenancy by the entirety" — an old common law principle written into state legal statutes — by giving wives equal legal rights to rental income produced by property held jointly with their husbands.

Lawyers said that under existing law, rental income on property held jointly by a husband and wife is controlled by the husband.

Taxes

After lengthy debate over President Reagan's Economic Recovery Act, the House voted 66-43 to approve and send to the Senate a bill dropping state tax provisions allowing businesses to take a faster writeoff on equipment.

Congress adopted the faster writeoff last July in an effort to stimulate the economy and the Hunt administration interpreted state law as permitting adoption of the business-depreciation schedules.

The bill proposed by Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake, would revert state law to the older schedule and save the state an estimated $8 million the first year and as much as $60 million in five years.

Dear Abby

Victims Taken For A Ride

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My parents were involved in an automobile accident four years ago. They were both hospitalized, but thank God they came through it all right. The driver of the other car was at fault, as several witnesses testified.

The driver of the other car was well-insured and my parents were advised to sue. They consulted a lawyer who was also a personal friend and a member of their church. The lawyer worked hard on the case for several years and my parents were awarded a very large amount of money. I was thrilled for them because they were retired, living on a fixed income, and this money would enable them to travel and enjoy a few luxuries.

When my parents received the money, their lawyer told them that he needed to "borrow" the whole amount to pay off some debts. He said he was so deeply in debt he couldn't even tell his wife!

My parents were shocked, but because this lawyer had helped them so much, they turned over the whole amount to him.

I am terribly upset about this because there is nothing in writing, nor was anything said about how the money will be paid back or when. I have a feeling my parents will never see any part of the money. What do you suggest?

CONCERNED DAUGHTER

DEAR CONCERNED: There are many unanswered questions here. What, if anything, did the lawyer tell your parents when he "borrowed" the money? And how long has he had it? On the face of it, it would appear that your parents were taken advantage of, in which case they will need an ethical lawyer to retrieve the money owed them.

DEAR ABBY: The letter stating that two men were legally married to each other in Colorado is absolutely correct. Since County Clerk Clela Rorex could find nothing in the law that forbids one man from marrying another, she issued the license. After the men married, there was a lot of publicity in the local newspapers.

Soon afterward, a local cowboy brought his horse down to the office of the county clerk demanding a marriage license. He said that he and his mare had known each other for a long time, were very compatible, and since there was nothing in the law specifically prohibiting marriage between a man and his horse, he wanted a license.

The request was denied. Would you (or your readers) care to comment?

IT HAPPENED IN BOULDER

DEAR HAPPENED: I've heard of some pretty weird horsing around, but a cowboy leading his horse down the bridal path would be a nightmare!

DEAR ABBY: Our son informed us that he has herpes. After he bragged to us that he had won the bed-hopping contest at college, we were not surprised. ("Bed-hopping" is a game the college boys play. The fellow who has hopped into the most beds in one week is the champion.) We are far from proud and feel sorry for the girls. Too bad they don't know how they are being used these days.

My reason for writing is to ask how contagious herpes is. Should we keep our son's towels separate? And how about his dishes and silverware? Also, is there any danger in kissing him? We are concerned for the rest of the family.
UPSET PARENTS

DEAR UPSET: According to Dr. William Wickert, author of the excellent new book, "Herpes: Cause and Control" (Pinnacle Press), if lesions (sores) are apparent on your son's lips, do not kiss him.

His towels should be washed separately, and if possible sun-dried. His dishes and silverware should be scalded. (The dishwasher turned to high heat will sterilize them.)

Couple Has Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Hoyle A. Hendrix of Greenville celebrated their 50th anniversary Tuesday. They were entertained at a dinner party at the Three Steers.

Mrs. Hendrix was remembered with a corsage of yellow daisies and baby's breath tied with gold ribbon. Host and hostess were her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. George Davis of Jamestown. Special guests included her brothers, Mr. and Mrs. T.M. Gorham and W.T. Gorham of Battleboro and sister, Mrs. Sara Lawrence of Tarboro and niece, Cynthia Hassell of Greenville.

The dinner table was centered with an arrangement of daisies, brown-eyed susans, feverfew, yellow straw flowers and eleagnus foliage and centered with gold candles.

Miss Joines Speaks Vows

EDEN — Cheryl Lynn Joines, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. Lindsay Joines Sr. of Route 3, Reidsville, and Michael Steven Jeffreys, son of Dr. and Mrs. Donald B. Jeffreys of Greenville, were married Saturday.

The Rev. John Christman performed the ceremony in the Leaksville Moravian Church at 3 p.m. Organ music was presented by Debbie Davis of Route 4, Hillsborough.

The bride attended Wentworth High School and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. She works at First Interstate Bank. The bridegroom graduated from J.H. Rose High School and attended UNC-CH. He is employed by First Interstate Services.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She wore a formal white gown of silk organza over taffeta highlighted with re-embroidered alencon lace. The A-line skirt flowed from an empire waistline and was bordered at the hemline with alencon lace and formed a chapel length train. Her fingertip veil of illusion was attached to a silk gypsophila ring and she carried a cascade bouquet of white tubular roses, gypsophila, white daisies and stephanotis.

Audrey Poe of Greensboro was honor attendant and wore a peach colored formal sundress of embroidered eyelet. The fitted bodice was attached to a pleated skirt with a scalloped border. She carried a bouquet of mixed summer flowers, gypsophila and greenery in the wedding colors. She wore a comb covered with satin roses, silk gypsophila and peach ribbon.

Karen Akers of Greenville, sister of the bridegroom, was bridesmaid and wore a similar outfit of pastel blue with a matching comb in her hair.

She carried matching flow-ers with blue streamers.

The junior bridesmaid was Tonya Davis of Hillsboro, who wore a similar outfit in yellow. The ring bearer was Jarrett Davis. Both are from Hillsborough and are cousins of the bride.

The mother of the bride wore an aqua linen street length dress with a matching jacket. The mother of the bridegroom selected a dress fashioned with a sheer white bodice and sheer cocoa batiste skirt.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man while ushers included T. Lindsay Joines Jr. of Greensboro and Steven A. Joines of Route 3, Reidsville, brothers of the bride.

The couple will be living in Portland, Ore. after a wedding trip to Treasure Cay in the Bahamas.

A reception was held after the ceremony and was given by the bride's parents in the church fellowship hall. The refreshment table was covered with a yellow satin overlay with white chiffon. Serving the tiered cake was Debbie Davis of Hillsborough, aunt of the bride, and pouring punch was Wendy Joines of Reidsville, sister-in-law of the bride.

A rehearsal dinner was given by the bridegroom's parents in the garden room of the May-Gre Restaurant in Eden for members of the wedding party and grandparents.

Tables were covered with white linen cloths and adorned with pastel baskets in wedding colors filled with African violets. Burning tapers in Williamsburg globes highlighted tables.

The bridal couple presented their attendants with gifts.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

A mother of a high school junior was lamenting the other night about the cost of class rings. She ended her argument against them by saying, "Does anyone ever know what happens to them?"

I know. Class rings are what you take off every time you wash your hands the first week you have them... and after that are never seen again.

Class rings are what are lost before your check for them clears the bank.

Class rings are what makes the strange noise in your washing machine and what you paid $26 to a washer repairman to retrieve from under the pulsator.

Class rings are what you wear to bed and your hands swell and everyone panics and gives you advice on how to get it off and when you lather up your hands with soap, it falls off into the comode.

Class rings (belonging to boys) dangle from chains in cleavages of girls as a promise of commitment against the day when both of you pass Tragedies of Shakespeare and are ready to make a life together.

Class rings (belonging to girls) dangle from the first knuckle of the baby finger of boys who say they'll wear them forever, and are later found in their gym bags.

Class rings are what you take the plumbing apart for when you don't know how to put the plumbing back again and discover the class ring in the glove compartment of the car.

Class rings are the mark of identity and camaraderie when sighted by a stranger who says, "Hey, I see by your ring you went to Farnsworth High," and you say, "No, this is Rucknell's ring," and discover they're both alike.

Class rings are what were thrown into a drawer when mood rings came out.

Class rings are what college freshmen leave home along with the letter sweater when they go away to college.

Class rings are what multiply, grow feet and appear in the knife and fork drawer, the sewing basket, tied to a blind cord, and in the corner of the bathtub.

Class rings are what are discovered quite by accident by a mother who rubs her fingers over it gently, slips it on her finger, and for a moment relives that time of her life when the end of an era was sealed with a ring.

Protest Lights A Candle

About that massive nuclear warfare protest in New York:

You have to admit parading 700,000 (or more) people in New York City was a whale of a logistics job; and yes, the "kooks" of past demonstrations were kept way back in the background (you'd hardly know any were on hand); and the Big Apple's officials marveled long afterward over the orderly multitude and how careful most of the people were about littering. The follow-up clean-up crews had it easy.

That's the way it should be.

They might have drawn an even greater turnout. Protesting nuclear warfare and all it implies just had to attract a lot of middle-America. As a demonstration of public attitude, it was spectacular and we suspect millions of absentees counted those who had to work, had children to care for, were too old or infirm, or simply uncertain about how safe it might be to be adrift in that sea of humanity.

As to its impact on the world, we have to wonder. Such a spontaneous outburst of support for an idea is almost unheard-of in most of the world.

Many government and high party officials behind the security of their "curtains" comprehended what was going on, but their subject peoples would be told about the rally according to the "party line"....which often distorts the true picture.

So there is ample reason for uncertainty about how effective it might all have been in impressing the world at large. Still, we are reminded it is "better to light one candle"....and that, they did.

Robyn Brings A Smile

A Pennsylvania teen-ager who has struggled through life with a misshapen face is suffering prolonged surgery that may or may not work to gain something the rest of us have and often refuse to use — the ability to smile. Robyn Adams was born with bilateral facial palsy, a disorder that prevents smiling, frowning or even winking. The surgery is unproven, but she says the risk is worth the hope of success.

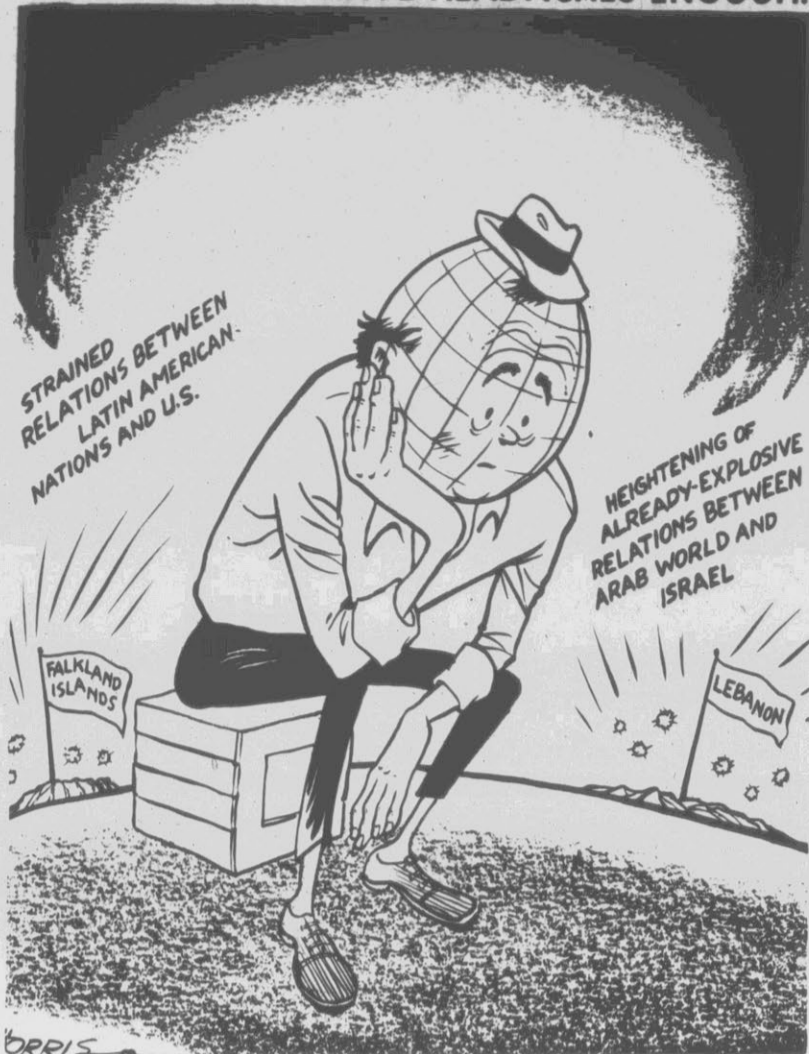

Because she lacks four of five major facial muscles, Robyn's lower lip constantly pouts and her upper lip juts upward. Her mouth stays open and her eyes never close completely, even when she sleeps. A younger brother also suffers from the disorder. Two other brothers were not afflicted.

Robyn is optimistic the surgery will work. "You got to take those chances in life," she says, adding that her 17 years on this earth have shown her that "life is... exciting, interesting, adventurous, sad and scared."

Smile when you think of her.

Some Of The Fog Lifts

WASHINGTON — One of the maxims of law is to this effect, that often it is more important that the law be settled than that the law be settled perfectly. The Supreme Court followed this rule a couple of weeks ago when it undertook to stabilize a shaky area of the law having to do with searches of automobiles.

One effect of the decision is to vest more power in police officers than officers had had before. A second effect is to dispel some of the "exclusionary" fog in which trial judges have had to navigate in recent years. The case is important to every person who drives a car, which is to say, the case is important to just about all of us.

These were the facts. In November 1978, a reliable informant tipped off the District of Columbia police that a suspected drug dealer, Albert Ross Jr., was selling heroin from his car on a certain street in Washington. Police promptly located the car, stopped the driver and searched the vehicle. In the trunk they found a "lunch-type" paper bag and zippered red leather pouch. Without obtaining a warrant, police opened the bag; it contained heroin. They opened the pouch; it contained $3,200 in currency.

Before his trial for possession of heroin, the defendant Ross contended that the evidence had been obtained in violation of his Fourth Amendment rights. He moved that it be excluded. The trial court denied the motion. The appeals court at first held that the warrantless search of the paper bag was valid, but the search of the leather pouch was not. Then the court, on rehearing, ruled that neither of the two containers should have been opened without a warrant.

The government appealed to the Supreme Court. On June 1, in a landmark decision by Justice Stevens, the court overruled a string of prior decisions and laid down new rules. Henceforth — or at least until the court changes its mind again — these guidelines will control the admissibility of such evidence:

If the police, having stopped an automobile, have probable cause to believe that a container within the vehicle contains contraband material, the police need not obtain a warrant. They may open the container on the spot. The determination of probable cause must be based upon the kind of objective facts that could justify the issuance of a warrant by a magistrate. The new rule is to apply equally to all containers — to the poor man's paper bag and to the rich man's attache case. The scope of a search must be limited to the object sought; if police are looking for a stolen lawnmower, they can not open a shoebox on the back seat. Having said all this, the court remanded the Ross case for trial.

Three justices dissented. Justice Marshall, joined in full by Justice Brennan and Justice White, spoke with unusual vehemence. The majority opinion, he said, shows contempt for Fourth Amendment values, ignores precedents, is internally inconsistent and produces unjust consequences. The new rules are completely incompatible with Fourth Amendment standards. The majority "utterly disregards the value of a neutral and detached magistrate."

In Justice Marshall's view, no serious obstacle prevented the police from taking the unopened containers before a magistrate. Ross was in custody. The supposed evidence could not have been spirited away. The police needed only to convince a magistrate that a warrant should issue in order to have made certain that the evidence would not be excluded. Yes, Marshall agreed, the new rules would contribute to "efficiency," but efficiency can never be substituted for due process of law. In an acerbic footnote he inquired, "Is not a dictatorship the most 'efficient' form of government?"

For my own part, I believe the dissenters were right and the majority wrong. The Fourth Amendment's protection against unreasonable (Continued on page 5)

Book List For Summer

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
RIDGEFIELD, Conn.
(AP) — The clang of horse-shoes on a nearby lawn, the zap and sizzle of a blue bulb bug lamp, the golden glimmer of the first bikinied jogger out my north window all portend that summer at last is in the air.

The time has come to string the hammock and laze away the long sunny afternoons in the quiet, cultured company of the Mulligan's Stew summer reading list, now coming at you for the fifth successive season.

At the relaxed pace of a book a week, this year's list offers three months of light literary exercises that will hone your mental agility, increase your conversational prowess and transport you to romantic, blissful climes with no strain on the family budget beyond the energy costs of getting to the public library.

Somehow, summer always strikes me as the most agreeable time for mystery and murder and mayhem. I suspect more mystery writers contrive their foul deeds on languid summer days than on snowbound winter weekends. Didn't Mary Shelley produce Dr. Frankenstein and his monster as a holiday frolic, a vacation exercise entered into among friends who had grown bored with croquet and bocci or whatever was on the program at their Italian resort? And Mary Roberts Rinehart, I am told, did her nastiest work at her pleasant summer house in Maine, where even the sight of a dead moth on the porch screen was inspiration enough to make her day.

Writers who ink their typewriter ribbons with blood can be very fastidious, which is why this year's summer reading list begins with Hector Munro, an elegant writer doling out delicate, delightful malice under the pen name of Saki.

Do try to get hold of the recently published "The Complete Works of Saki," with a splendid introduction by Noel Coward. Actually Saki might have been suspected as the pen name of Sir Noel had that sophisticated playwright indulged a secret passion for the sinister and macabre. Read the stories at random but begin with the oft anthologized "The Open Window" and the lesser known "The Disappearance of Crispina Umberleigh" to start your summer off with spine-tingling shudders from one of literature's more sardonic malfactors.

After Saki on our reading list, summer's long shadow of horrors moves on to John Collier, another master of the macabre happily enjoying a revival after years of neglect by the critics. Collier was an erudite, graceful British author who hid from fame in Hollywood, of all places, where he turned out memorable scripts like "The African Queen" and some of the finest overlooked short stories of our time. "The Best of John Collier" takes the vacation reader to an exciting, evil fantasy world where department store dummies come menacingly alive, the hero of "Bottle Party" is juggled, corked and put on sale, and a salesman calls room service in a Chicago hotel to order cheese for the live demonstration mouse he uses in selling his new invention, "The Steel Cat." Great stuff.

As long as our summertime meanderings have taken us to Chicago, do drop in on Harry Mark Petrakis, an American novelist and short story master long overdue for a Pulitzer Prize. His warm, powerful, bitter-sweet evocations of Chicago's Greek community are literary feasts served up from our melting pot, as much a part of our literary socio-history as Willa Cather's Nebraska, John Steinbeck's Dust Bowl and John Cheever's three-acre-zoned suburbia.

For appetizers at this zesty Greek-American banquet I suggest "Pericles on 31st Street" and "The Wooing of Ariandane," which should make him author of the year among the feminists. Both are featured in "A Petrakis Reader," along with the horrific and hilarious "Pa and the Sad Turkeys."

Under the heading of "Books You May Have Missed But Shouldn't Have," I enthusiastically recommend wickedly, witty

THIS AFTERNOON

See Disadvantage

By Paul T. O'Connor
RALEIGH — Republicans could hardly have done worse this year when the N.C. Center for Public Policy Research ranked legislators on their individual effectiveness. Of the 24 GOP House members, 21 were ranked in the bottom 32. Of the 10 GOP senators, eight were in the bottom dozen.

But before you write off the GOP, you've got to ask if the Republicans got a square deal when the Center asked legislators, reporters and lobbyists to rank the 170 members. In a way, they did. In a way, they didn't.

There's no question that the average Republican legislator is at a great disadvantage in the Democratic-controlled legislature. Power goes to members of the majority party through committee chairmanships where they control the direction of legislation. Republicans don't get these assignments so they don't get to exercise influence in one of its most traditional forms.

In sponsoring legislation, Republicans can get local bills passed but they rarely succeed with statewide legislation. The situation is so bad that Rep. Howard Coble of Greensboro beams with pride that he got a bill through in 1979. And he's the most influential Republican in the legislature, according to the Center survey. When the pork barrel budget is split up into special pro-

Further indignity is heaped on Republicans when they come up with a good idea. Its usually stolen and passed under Democratic sponsorship.

PAUL O'CONNOR

So, in a way, the Center's rankings accurately reflect the relative effectiveness of the GOP. But those rankings could leave the improper impression that the GOP is impotent.

With 20 percent of each house and almost perfect voting solidarity, the Republicans have a big say when an issue comes to the floor. Remember that without them, ERA would have passed the state Senate, for example.

The key for Republicans, says Sen. Cass Ballenger of Hickory, is to work with Democrats and to keep issues from becoming partisan in nature. "A lot of times to be effective as Republicans, we have to keep quiet," he says. If he has a good idea for legislation, he'll see if he can find a Democrat to sponsor it. Then he'll co-sign to give it bipartisan support. Or if he has an interest in a Democratic bill, he'll talk to the sponsor privately hoping to make a change.

As long as Republicans are willing to work with Democrats, the majority party will seek GOP support. If a Democrat asks Ballenger to help him get Republican votes on a bill, Ballenger can turn around and say he'd like a paragraph changed here or a sentence deleted over there. It's a quiet impact but, an impact nonetheless.

Several experienced Republicans said their freshmen colleagues hurt themselves in 1981 by being unwilling to work with Democrats in Raleigh. One GOP senator rudely voted against the pro formula invitation to

Other Editors Say Sound Of Silence

(Carteret News-Times)

The residents of Newport put their ears to the ground and came up with an idea that other communities might like to listen to. An ordinance regulating "loud, disturbing and unnecessary noise" was adopted by Newport's town fathers.

This means that any long-winded car horns, de-muffled motorcycles or cars, and any frequently squeaking or barking pets are now against the law. Loud music past 11 p.m. and before 7 a.m. that might "annoy or disturb the quiet, comfort or repose" is a no-no. Noisy construction work is illegal past 6 p.m., and if you speak, sing, shout or fight in a "loud boisterous manner so as to be audible off the premises," you have violated the ordinance. For violation there is punishment — $50 fine or up to 30 days in jail.

The ordinance also requires a permit for amplified advertising on a truck or car, and it outlaws drums and public address systems attracting attention for any reason.

Anyone who has been annoyed by the continued uproar of man, machine or beast must be jealous of Newport residents who now don't have to rely just on neighborly courtesy for peace and quiet. Life today is so full of sound that it's hard for people to live without it. Witness the canned Muzak in most buildings, over telephones when you're placed on hold and television sets left on in other rooms, not for viewing, but simply for company. There are even devices now that do nothing but emit constant tones so that all other noise — the eternal racket in a large city or car sounds from a busy intersection — are buried by a steady perpetual pitch. Is this a harbinger of the cacophony to come?

If so, the town of Newport is a step ahead. It would be nice to think that pure consideration would eliminate any need for laws buttressing the pursuit of tranquility. But because silence comes less these days, it doesn't come cheap.

Tips For Individual Investor

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) —

James Cloonan founded the American Association of Individual Investors after determining that "there was very little real help out there" for the small, serious, long-term investor.

"Brokers know very little about investing," he said carefully in an interview this week. A cool, low-key, trim man, younger looking than his age of 50, he reflects and says exactly what he intends to say.

"Most mutual funds do a bit worse than darts-throwers," he said softly, no tone of accusation in the words. He does, in fact, believe that no-load mutual funds may have a place in some portfolios.

"Bank trust departments," he continued in the same considered manner, "are among the worst investment managers in the country."

Investment advisers in general? "If anyone had a way to make 'excess' returns he wouldn't tell you," he answered. "If you can make 35 percent why should you tell someone else?"

But, he says, if individuals are provided with education, guidance, materials and psychological help, all of which the nonprofit, Chicago-based AAIL offers, they can do well on their own.

"Well," however, may be less than many small and (unsuccessful) investors are accustomed to seeking. "Nobody, unless lucky, is going to outperform the market drastically," Cloonan states flatly.

What you can do, he suggests, is "improve to somewhat better than average." Or, as he stated another time, if the dart thrower gets 15 percent maybe the informed investor can obtain 20 percent or so.

The first step toward that goal, he continued, "is to stop being worse than average and then develop to better than average." The suggestion, of course, is that the best way in which to take that step is to join the AAIL.

Cloonan, formerly a professor of marketing and quantitative methods at DePaul University, consultant, and chief executive officer of Heindl Securities, founded the nonprofit AAIL in February 1979.

The association has grown to 39,000 members who pay $35 a year for, among other things, a monthly journal, once-a-year analyses of taxes and no-load mutual funds, and computer programs. Home study materials and seminars also are available, but at additional cost.

The goal of the AAIL, says Cloonan, is educational, "to do for the serious investor what other organizations do for professionals." Comparable, he said, to the activities of organizations such as the American Marketing Association and Financial Analysts Federation.

The approach is somewhat scholarly, since AAIL believes investing is a serious, long-term and usually profitable endeavor rather than a somewhat frivolous, exciting, speculative and possibly rewarding game.

Individual investors must diversify, says Cloonan. "Ten go-go stocks are less risky than one blue chip," he says. Not to diversify, he claims, is "a grievous error." You can, he contends, "get rid of two-thirds of the risk by diversifying." If you can't own at least seven stocks, he maintains, your best stock market outlet is a no-load fund.

Never, he says, buy preferred stock. The yield-risk ratio is poor and they're not as safe as bonds. They're a corporate vehicle; corporations obtain tax advantages not available to individuals, he explains. But put customers into them. "The commission is better than bonds by four to one," he says.

Never invest or withdraw a substantial portion of your wealth at one time, or you might be victimized by economic cycles. And don't put "ins" are hardly Cloonan's method, as indicated by the AAIL Journal. It is heavy with lists, charts, graphs. No ads. Plenty of well-researched, clearly presented analyses, much of it by Cloonan himself, some dealing with other investment vehicles, including real estate.

Strength For Today

THE LOOKING GLASS
The ancients had a distinct superstition about looking into mirrors. It was supposed to bring bad luck. The same belief exists today among some primitive people.

There is considerable psychological soundness in this superstition, for we can be sure that no good is going to come from the self-centeredness illustrated in mirror gazing.

Looking in a mirror is symbolic of thinking of one's self and probably of estimating one's self too highly. The ancients were right — misfortune of some kind will probably result from such an attitude. If you have in your family someone who is always thinking about himself or herself, you know only too well what this means. Or perhaps you yourself are this person.

If the ancients believed that it was bad luck to look into a mirror, psychology expresses much the same sentiment today when it puts the stamp of disapproval on selfishness and introspection — Elisha Douglass

"Burr." Gore Vidal in his best form makes a loveable hero out of one of history's villains and etches in acid interesting character studies of George Washington, Thomas Jefferson and Alexander Hamilton. Inviting Vidal to address a Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner would be akin after this novel to staging a St. Valentine's Day dance in a garage in Chicago.

For scholarly reading this summer, we depart from our usual custom of urging some neglected classic and instead call your attention to "Years of Upheaval," the second volume of Henry Kissinger's memoirs.

You may admire or abhor our former secretary of state, but his intimate grasp of history, his penchant for illuminating anecdotes and his graceful literary style combine to produce the liveliest, most readable political memoirs since Harold Nicholson.

Also this summer you can spend some sunny afternoons down memory lane with Malcolm Muggeridge's "Chronicle of Wasted Time." The latest volume neatly skewers some of the sacred cows of his time and barbecues them bite-sized with bitter-sweet British relish.

"Gorky Park" by Martin Cruz Smith stands out among recent best sellers, an intriguing international detective tale that begins with a grisly multiple murder in Moscow and ends up with the fur flying, literally, in the wastes of Staten Island, of all places. It was a book I never should have put down, because my wife grabbed it when I did and I had to sweat out the exciting ending for days. At the moment I am riveted by "Infamy," John Toland's absorbing controversial re-examination of Pearl Harbor.

Finally, now that you've seen the TV series, read the book. Read Evelyn Waugh's "Brideshead Revisited" and find out what you missed, like his message of moral decay and available redemption. No wonder he backed out of a picture deal with MGM, when he learned they wanted to turn it into a love story. I wonder what Waugh would have thought of TV's overly androgynous rendition?

have the governor address the legislature. A House member went on a tirade about legislative partying. "It takes a while after being king of the mountain at home to realize you have to compromise and work with people in Raleigh," Ballenger said.

The GOP has an impact in one other way. A lot of Democrats came back to Raleigh in 1981 and found Republicans sitting in seats their friends once held. It's a constant reminder that North Carolina is emerging as a two-party state.

Ask Halting Nuke Arms

By STEELE HOLMAN
Associated Press Writer
COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — Southern Presbyterians have called on the United States and Soviet Union to halt production of nuclear arms and begin reducing their nuclear arsenals.

The resolution passed Wednesday by the 122nd General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States called the freeze "an essential, verifiable first step toward lessening the risk of nuclear war."

Another resolution called for the United States to take the initiative in a "declaration of no first use of nuclear weapons."

The general assembly also passed a resolution calling for a halt to U.S. military assistance to Israel until that country "ceases acts of violence" against Lebanon.

The action came Wednesday night as the general assembly began winding up its seven-day meeting at the Ironworks Trade and Convention Center. One more business session remained today.

Earlier, the 392 commissioners approved a plan to reunite with the United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A., clarified language on local church property ownership and reaffirmed their opposition to a constitutional amendment to allow prayer in public schools.

The Rev. Marvin Harwell of Alexandria, Va., called the Middle East resolution a response to Israel's military incursion into Lebanon.

The resolution also called on the Palestine Liberation Organization to halt its violence against Israel, and urged the U.S. government to initiate contact with the PLO if and when it recognizes Israel's right to exist.

It strikes me as risky to authorize the police, on their own, to determine probable cause in cases such as these. At the same time, the new rules will prevent some of the nitpicking, hair-splitting, legalistic technicalities that have permitted guilty men to go free. That much is net gain. For the rest, we will have to see how the police use the new power they have just acquired.

A Farm For Desert Of Brazil

BY K. MICHAEL FRASER
Associated Press Writer
PETROLINA, Brazil (AP) — Israeli irrigation techniques are being used on a pioneer farm project here in Brazil's arid northeast. The hope is it will create a new industry and more jobs in the poverty-stricken area.

The aim of the Petrolina experiment is to grow cassava, a starchy root from which tapioca is made. But the Brazilians will make alcohol for use in motor vehicles from its root and burn its leaves and stems to run electric generators.

"We are using an area that was not fit for anything and we are creating jobs," says the farm's co-director Hilson da Rocha Leal.

The key to the project is the irrigation system, developed in Israel for use on hilly land where normal irrigation canals are useless. The Brazilians have adapted the system, using untreated river water instead of well water and increasing the plantation's size 300-fold.

In its first stage, the plantation will cover 7,113 acres, employ 550 workers and supply cassava for a 31,200 gallon-a-day alcohol distillery. If it's a success, the project will be expanded.

But there are risks, the project's managers say. This type of irrigation has never been used before on cassava or on a plantation this big.

And the cassava plant, though hardy, is not native to this region in the state of Pernambuco.

"The basic research hasn't been done," said Antonio Jose Simoes, research head at the government's center for semiarid tropic studies. "But if the project works, it will open badly needed possibilities for this region."

Petrolina lies in the heart of Brazil's huge Northeast drought zone, an area 1.5 times the size of Texas and one of the poorest places in the world.

Sparse scrub covers most of the rocky, desert-like soil. Rain comes seldom and at the wrong time of year for crops. The few farmers left around here say they lose 9 harvests in 10.

The cassava project was the idea of a local businessman, Alcedo Baptista Cavalcanti Filho. In the 1970s he bought 79,000 acres of land near here "for next to nothing" and put his Agroindustrial Camaragibe S.A. company to work on the project.

The first phase cost an estimated $12 million excluding the land, he said.

On the farm, pumps suck water from the nearby Sao Francisco River and force it into a system of quarter-inch tubes that run across the fields in parallel lines two feet apart. Along the tubes, every two feet, a specially designed spigot allows water to escape drop by drop. A cassava shoot is planted by each spigot.

Djalma Gomes, the project's chief agronomist, explained in an interview that "the sand has few nutrients, so we mix fertilizers and almost everything else the plants need with the water. All the soil really does is hold the plant up."

Planners say they ran into unexpected problems in the early stages of the project but that most have been resolved.

Acyr Ribeiro Ribas, an engineer and top managerial assistant on the site, said that in the beginning irrigation tubes became clogged by the muddy river water — a problem the Israeli designers never faced because they used crystalline underground water.

"We had to develop special filters and a special spigot," he said, adding that this seemed to solve the problem.

Ribas also said the impracticality of using wheeled vehicles on the sandy soil had been resolved with the use of vehicles moving on treads, although he said this made the project more costly.

The model farm is nearly ready to enter production early next year. But people close to the project say they are worried about possible long-range problems.

Ribas said, "As far as we know, no one has ever tried this type of irrigation on a project this large. We really don't know what problems we'll face when we start full-scale operation."

Agronomist Gomes added,

"We are completely changing the ecological system of the area. We could even be killing the natural enemy of some plague that could wipe out the cassava. We simply don't know what will happen."

Approve Design For New Mall

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The Fayetteville City Council has approved one of three design proposals for the proposed Hay Street transit mall.

The mall would turn the first three blocks of Hay Street into a public transit street, void of private vehicular traffic and parking. The motion Monday to approve the Fayetteville Revitalization Commission-recommended design proposal included giving City Manager John Smith authority to request further federal Urban Mass Transit Administration funding for the construction phase of the project.

The total UMTA funding request will be $3.6 million.

Firm Acquires Two Stations

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Radio stations WBAG-FM and WQB-FM in Burlington-Graham, have been sold by Burlington-Graham Broadcasting Co. Inc. to the Village Companies Inc. of Chapel Hill, it was announced Tuesday.

The announcement was made by Lawrence E. Neese, president of Burlington-Graham Inc. and James A. Heavner, president of Village Companies. Terms were not disclosed.

The actual transfer of the stations is subject to approval by the Federal Communications Commission.

Cites Anti-U.S. Propaganda

WASHINGTON (AP) — An "unrelenting stream of anti-American propaganda" from the Grenada government is evidence that the country is not serious about improving its relations with the United States, according to a State Department official.

Stephen W. Bosworth, deputy assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, told a House Foreign Affairs subcommittee Tuesday that the Reagan administration has seen "no credible evidence" that the country is interested in improving relations.

The Timberland boat shoe is made of oil-impregnated leathers that won't dry out or crack. The eyelets are only solid brass. The laces are thick rawhide. And, most important, our sole is long-lasting, rugged Vibram.

Opine Ill. ERA Tactics Likely Has Cost Votes

By NEIL McLAUGHLIN
Associated Press Writer

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — A noisy invasion of the Illinois House by a dozen women supporting the Equal Rights Amendment — including two who got stepped on by a legislator — may have harmed chances of passage, both ERA opponents and supporters say.

"It certainly hurts the movement," said Speaker George Ryan, a few minutes after he gavelled the House session to an early close Wednesday. "I'm not for the movement, but I don't condone those kind of activities at any time."

"The actions that are taking place on the floor of the House today are not doing the passage of the Equal Rights Amendment any favors," long-time ERA supporter Rep. Harry "Bus" Yourell told the protesters as they sat on the floor in front of the speaker's podium.

The women chanted and sang while Yourell spoke. Some members tried in vain to conduct legislative business.

Veteran statehouse watchers said it was the first time they could recall that citizens had invaded the legislative chamber.

The protesters remained after adjournment but left at 5 p.m. Lawmakers planned to try to resume work today; the demonstrators did not indicate if they would return.

Most were members of a group that in recent weeks has chained itself to rails outside the Senate door and blocked the doors to Gov. James R. Thompson's Capitol office.

Yourell and Rep. Peter P. Peters — another ERA supporter — said the demonstration abused free speech and might prompt them to vote against the amendment.

Peters threatened to seek adjournment until July 1 — a day after the June 30 national deadline for ERA ratification.

Meanwhile, seven women on Wednesday reached the 30-day mark in their hunger strike for the ERA. The women have vowed not to eat until the amendment becomes part of the Constitution, or June 30, whichever comes first.

One of the fastest, Dina Bachelor, who is from Los Angeles, complained of low blood pressure, which she said had brought on chills.

Thirty-five of the necessary 38 states have ratified the amendment, which would ban discrimination on the basis of sex. Five have since rescinded approval, but those actions are under review by the U.S. Supreme Court.

During the Capitol demonstration, Rep. James Kelley walked twice through the crowd of protesters, appearing to deliberately step on two women. He denied trying to hurt them, but two colleagues denounced him during debate.

"I do not condone or approve of the behavior of people who take the floor of the House and demonstrate," said Rep. Lee Preston. "But equally do I not approve of a member of this chamber, who weighs close to 300 pounds, who purposely walked over the feet of these individuals, not once, but on two or three occasions..."

Yourell told the women, "I certainly don't appreciate the antics of the gentleman who walked on your feet because that I think is absolutely asinine too."

"I happened to step on one of them," said Kelley. "One of them grabbed me and I stepped on another one."

The two, Kris Griffith, 20, and Joyce Meyer, 21, said they were hurt and were taken to Springfield's Memorial Medical Center, where they were treated for undisclosed injuries and released.

Illinois, the only northern industrial state that has not ratified the amendment, is among four key states targeted by pro-ERA forces in the 11th-hour drive for ratification.

ERA supporters charge that Ryan, a staunch ERA opponent, is unfairly blocking a move to change House voting rules so the amendment can be approved with 89 votes, a simple majority. Currently the amendment requires 107 votes, three-fifths of the House membership.

The rule can be changed with a simple majority vote. Ryan, Thompson's running mate in the fall as lieutenant governor, denied the charge, saying he has given ERA backers a fair hearing.

The protesters apparently came in the main House door and walked down the center aisle.

Budget Request

As a follow-up to a previously held workshop, the Environmental Advisory Commission has voted to submit a budget request for $17,950 to the City Council for the 1982-83 Community Development program.

The request would provide for a continuation of the historic preservation effort presently under way by funding the city's consultant, Kate Ohno, for an additional period of approximately eight months.

The additional term would allow Ms. Ohno to oversee the preparation of a formal publication of survey results, prepare a preservation plan and document potential National Register nominations.

Commission members voted to notify the council of their concern regarding the proposed development of boating facilities on the Town Common and their desire to review the environmental aspects of the proposed plan.

Ms. Ohno showed slides on a survey of structures in the Tar River neighborhood.

The election of officers for 1982-83 was held with Inez Fridley elected chairperson and Diane Hankins named vice chairperson.

The EAC meets on the third Tuesday of each month at 5:30 p.m. in the council chambers at city hall.

10 Tornadoes Touch Down In N.C.

TORNADO DAMAGE — This is all that remained of a mobile home after a tornado touched down in rural Harnett County yesterday afternoon. No injuries were reported. (AP Laserphoto)

By The Associated Press
Ten tornadoes touched down in several North Carolina counties Wednesday, flipping a helicopter with five Marines inside in one area and turning over mobile homes and uprooting trees in other places.

Two of the five Marines were seriously injured in the accident at New River Air Station near Jacksonville. All five were inside the 12-ton CH-53 Sea Stallion when a 60-mph blast rolled it over. The other three were treated and released.

Marine authorities declined to release their names pending notification of next of kin.

One of the tornadoes sighted Wednesday overturned mobile homes, uprooted several large trees and knocked down several power lines in Harnett County. Sheriff's deputies said the tornado struck a rural area in the county's northern section about 2:25 p.m.

Other tornadoes were reported in Wake, Warren and Franklin Counties between 2 and 3 p.m. Three small twisters were reported in Moore County after 8 p.m.

A 3-year-old Raleigh boy suffered a minor head injury in an auto collision after a storm knocked out traffic lights. Max Gutierrez was treated and released. There were no reported injuries linked with the tornadoes.

Officials reported that a funnel cloud was also spotted between Wendell and Zebulon moving north at 30 mph. Hail two inches in diameter fell in Macedonia, and one-inch hail was reported in Cary.

The tornado in Harnett County obliterated one mobile home, smashed half of another and overturned a third. Hundreds of trees in the area were snapped and uprooted, power lines were toppled and some tobacco fields were damaged by wind and hail.

Henry Christopher Prince, 24, said he had insured the contents of his mobile home only a few days before Wednesday's storm demolished the trailer and scattered his possessions across a soybean field. Prince and his wife, Tonette, had been at their jobs in Raleigh when the tornado struck. Their 4-month-old baby daughter Brandy had been staying with a babysitter in Raleigh.

"But if that had come through here about midnight," Prince said, shaking his head.

The National Weather Service issued severe thunderstorm watches for Wednesday afternoon and evening in 68 of the state's 100 counties, stretching from the coast to the mountains. By 9 p.m., the watch for western and northern areas had been cancelled.

Scattered wind and hail damage was reported as far east as Chowan, Craven and Onslow counties.

Wind gusts were estimated at 50 mph around 3 p.m. at the Pamlico River ferry of-rice in Beaufort County.

In Craven County, 15 miles west of New Bern near Cove City, marble-sized hail was reported, along with wind gusts up to 42 mph.

A second wave of storms about 8:30 p.m. brought high winds and hail to Johnston and Harnett counties. Several trees were uprooted in Lillington.

The later storm knocked out power to about 3,500 homes across the Piedmont Wednesday night. A Carolina Power & Light Co. spokesman said service probably would resume in all areas later Wednesday night.

Love Canal Is Revisited

By RICHARD S. USIAK

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (UPI) — A paperboy peddles his bike no handed as he rounds a turn to tackle the next street. His fluorescent-banded sack does not hold too many papers, usually an indication his route is nearly completed.

In this case, however, he's just starting. His customers all live at the Love Canal.

It was 1980 when residents of this industrial Niagara Falls community began evacuating their homes to escape harmful chemical contamination from one of the burial grounds of Hooker Chemical Co.

About 625 families have relocated, most at government expense, although health and psychological concerns have not been the only reasons for leaving. Many residents feared their property values would plunge and they would be left with hefty mortgages to pay.

A drive through the area gives an eerie impression of what was once a typical kid-ridden neighborhood. Boarded up windows and doors; graffiti directed to the canal itself, yards of locked fences — all signs of desertion. The occasional inhabited house seems an oddity.

Over 200 homes nearest the contaminated canal are scheduled for demolition in the near future. However, the 99th Street School, with playgrounds right over the controversial dump sight, is not scheduled for razing although the school was closed in 1978.

The federal and state governments — and some former residents — have sued Hooker for dumping at the canal, but the chemical firm contends it gave warning of what was buried at the site when it sold the area to the Niagara Falls Board of Education for $1 in 1953.

The litigation could go on for years, but there seems to be a light at the end of the tunnel for those residents who have decided to remain.

The waiting list for prospective home buyers has reached 260 and continues to grow, and the 111 homeowners still living in the area may someday again reside in a viable neighborhood.

A long-awaited, 400-page Environmental Protection Agency assessment on the Love Canal area has been completed and is being reviewed by the National Bureau of Standards.

"I'm an optimist," declares Richard Morris, executive director of the Love Canal Area Revitalization Agency, which owns more than 400 unoccupied homes. Morris has moved his family into one of the houses that were left vacant and lives there rent free.

"Many people drive through the area and find it looks very nice," Morris observed. "Their casual observation leads them to conclude that there's nothing seriously wrong here."

Niagara Falls Mayor Michael O'Loughlin, chairman of the revitalization agency, said he is not surprised at the interest in the homes, but is somewhat surprised at the number of people who have inquired about them.

O'Loughlin said a number of residents who still live in the area have also made inquiries, some expressing a desire to move to a larger or better-constructed house.

"We're not going to give the homes away once a decision is made," he said, "but maybe we'll give them some sort of tax aid or some kind of mortgage subsidy."

Loretta Gambino, an area homeowner for 20 years, thinks the health situation at the Love Canal "was blown out of proportion."

Mrs. Gambino, who decided there was no reason to leave the area, is now president of the Concerned Area Residents which consists of those who decided to stay.

Mrs. Gambino said she wants the area revitalized not only for visual reasons, but also for safety. Her house has been robbed four times in the past 3 years.

While there are many people who are hopeful the Love Canal area will become a liveable neighborhood, many are fearful of the idea.

Lois Gibbs, who headed the Love Canal Homeowners Association that led the fight for relocation of residents, is outraged at the idea.

"It's criminal," said Mrs. Gibbs, who currently resides in Virginia. "There's been enough proof already that anyone living in the area is taking a risk."

"The city is just asking for more trouble if they let people move back into the area," she said. "Even if the buyers have to sign a disclaimer, that would be as valid as the waiver Hooker gave the Board of Education."

Train Excursion Sunday

The East Carolina chapter of the National Railway Historical Society will sponsor a diesel-powered railroad excursion between Raleigh and Edenton Sunday.

The train will leave at 8 a.m. from Southern Railway's Glenwood Yard in Raleigh and return at 8:30 p.m. Stops are planned at Zebulon, Wilson, Farmville, Greenville, Chocowinity, Plymouth and Edenton in both directions.

Round-trip tickets from Greenville are $22 for adults and $19 for children ages 2-11. One-way tickets will be sold, and tickets can be purchased to or from any stop. One-way fares will be available the day of the trip, subject to space.

This will be the first passenger train to operate between Chocowinity and Edenton since the chapter's last excursion in 1974.

The trip will offer patrons an opportunity to ride across the Norfolk Southern's 5.05-mile Albermarle Sound trestle. This bridge, the longest such structure in the United States, extends between Mackeys and Edenton.

The motive power will be two FP-7 locomotives, built in the early and mid-1950s by the Electromotive Division of General Motors. Each unit is rated at 1,500 horsepower and weighs 244,000 pounds.

The train will be made up of a number of passenger cars, including a head-end tape recorder car, the "Queen and Crescent Club" refreshment car where soft drinks and light snacks can be purchased, and both air-conditioned and open window coaches as well as open-air excursion cars. The train will have a seating capacity of 700 people.

Proceeds of the trip will go toward public interest projects of the East Carolina chapter, National Railway Historical Society, a voluntary, non-profit North Carolina educational organization.

Trip information and tickets may be obtained in Greenville at Hungates Hobbies and Crafts in Pitt Plaza, telephone 756-0121. Ticket information is also available by writing the East Carolina Chapter, NRHS, 802 Madison Ave., Cary, N.C. 27511.

Re-elected By Board Of Trade

Officers for 1982-83 were re-elected at the recent annual meeting of the Greenville Tobacco Board of Trade.

Named to new terms were W. C. Clark Jr., president; J. B. Belcher, vice president, and J. N. Bryan, secretary-treasurer and supervisor of sales.

The board adopted resolutions of respect for Jack S. Warren and T. Jack Warren, Board of Trade members and partners in local warehouse firms who died recently.

Plans for the 1982 marketing season in Greenville were made during the annual session.

Claim Doctor Surplus Unlikely

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
ROUCEMONT, N.C. (AP) — While North Carolina is attracting more and more doctors — especially general practitioners in rural areas — there is little chance of a physician surplus in the near future, state educators say.

A recent study predicted a nationwide surplus of 145,000 doctors by the year 2000, but North Carolina is still recovering from a 1969 shortage, said Dr. Eugene S. Mayer, professor of medicine at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

"Between 1966 and 1972, 37 of the state's 100 counties were losing doctors," Mayer told a symposium of health and medical writers at Quail Roost Conference Center on Tuesday. The losses, most in rural areas, were attributed to death and the lack of available replacements. The state had one doctor for every 1,150 people, placing it 37th among states in population-to-patient ratio, he said. The national average in 1969 was one doctor for every 900 patients.

In addition, the state's population of general practitioners dropped from 1,300 in 1963 to 1,000 in 1971, leading to fears that medical graduates were overspecializing, Mayer said.

The North Carolina Joint Conference Committee, a group including the state's medical school deans, projected that by 1979 there would be 7,000 practicing physicians in North Carolina, a number considered inadequate in light of expected population growth, Mayer said.

The panel recommended increasing the class sizes at North Carolina medical schools, promoting primary care over specialized medicine, recruiting applicants likely to take up state practices, urging graduates to work in rural areas and decreasing the professional isolation felt by doctors in outlying regions.

A widely publicized study by the Graduate Medical Education National Advisory Committee projecting a surplus of doctors was termed a "mischievous document" by Dr. Stuart Bondurant, dean of the UNC Medical School, who also appeared at the conference.

He said the estimates failed to consider declining medical enrollments and a national trend toward shorter hours and early retirement among physicians.

Regardless of the legitimacy of the estimates, Bondurant said North Carolina is definitely not overproducing physicians.

North Carolina is currently 43rd among states in the number of its residents who attend medical school, he said.

Bondurant said the full impact of the steps taken in North Carolina would not be felt until 30 years later, when graduates completed their medical careers.

Already, the number of first-year students enrolled in the state has jumped from 224 in 1967 to 437 in 1979, and the percentage of North Carolinians enrolled increased from 44 percent to 66 percent, Mayer said.

The tendency for state graduates to practice in other states has also been reversed. While only 30 percent of medical school graduates remained in North Carolina between 1965 and 1969, 37 percent took up practice in the state from 1970 to 1974, a trend that appears to be continuing, Mayer said.

The N.C. Area Health Education Centers Program, where state students receive a taste of general practice, has drawn more doctors to rural areas while providing continuing education to physicians in outlying areas, said Mayer, who directs the AHEC program.

Meanwhile, North Carolina's population to physician ratio dropped from 1969 to 1979 to 700 to 1 — a 23 percent improvement, Mayer said. The U.S. average improved by 17 percent to 550 to 1 in the same period.

The number of counties losing doctors has dropped from 37 to five, and North Carolina's 66 most rural counties have improved their population-to-physician ratio from below the national average in 1969 to far above the mean in 1979 — an improvement of 48 percent, Mayer said.

"There are still some deficiencies and gaps, despite the improvements," Mayer cautioned.

Hinckley Jurors Hear Conflicting Views

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — After weeks of testimony, jurors are hearing for the last time the conflicting views on whether John W. Hinckley Jr. was a man driven insane by his "inner dictates" or a criminal seeking a "high-publicity crime."

The jurors, who must weigh those comments offered earlier by opposing psychiatrists, were hearing closing arguments today from prosecutor Roger M. Adelman and chief defense counsel Vincent J. Fuller.

The lawyers recalled the testimony of 25 government and 16 defense witnesses, who have taken the witness stand in the trial of the man who shot President Reagan. Jurors have also seen 300 exhibits that include the defendant's poems, expressing his inner thoughts.

"I think there's enough there to either guide the jury or to confuse the jury," U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker said Wednesday, after listing the doctors who testified for the defense. Fourteen doctors were on the witness stand.

Friday, Parker will explain the elements of the 13 counts against Hinckley and tell the jury of seven women and five men the legal test for insanity. Deliberations may begin that afternoon.

The insanity instruction is the most crucial to a jury that already has been told Hinckley admits the crime, but contends he is innocent because he was insane.

If the insanity defense is successful, Hinckley would be sent to a mental hospital instead of a prison.

There are two parts to the insanity test; first, the determination whether the 27-year-old defendant suffered from a mental disease or defect on March 30, 1981, the day Reagan and three other men were wounded outside the Washington Hilton Hotel.

If the answer is yes, jurors consider part two: whether, as a result of the disease, Hinckley "lacked substantial capacity" to conform his conduct to requirements of the law or to appreciate the wrongfulness of his conduct.

For Hinckley, the eight weeks he spent in a federal courtroom have appeared to wear on him.

He acknowledged to the judge that some testimony made him edgy, and five times he asked to be excused from the courtroom. Then, he watched proceedings on a closed circuit television setup from a holding cell.

Hinckley's most anxious moments came Tuesday when Dr. Sally Johnson, a woman he called in a poem last year "My favorite pregnant psychiatrist," testified he did not shoot Reagan to win the love of teen-age actress Jodie Foster.

He muttered, "You're wrong" as the federal prison psychiatrist testified. Later, the defendant later mouthed curse words in Mrs.

Johnson's direction. That prompted a stern rebuke from the judge.

Hinckley is charged with the federal crimes of attempting to kill the president; assault on a federal officer while armed; and use of a firearm in commission of a federal felony.

Under the District of Columbia Code, the charges are assault with intent to kill while armed, assault with a dangerous weapon, assault on a police officer while armed and carrying a pistol without a license. He could face life imprisonment if convicted.

New Hearings On Tris Measure

WASHINGTON (AP) — With manufacturers again in support and consumers in opposition, the House has opened new hearings on legislation to allow the government to reimburse manufacturers for the cost of a federal ban on children's sleepwear treated with the chemical Tris.

Bills to indemnify manufacturers have passed the Senate four times and the House once since the 1977 ban. House debate on latest bill began Wednesday.

Begin, Haig To Meet Friday

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department says Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin will meet Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. on Friday morning in New York.

U.S. officials, speaking privately Wednesday, also said they expect Begin to meet with President Reagan here Monday provided Israeli military forces in Lebanon do not attack Beirut.

Chapter Honored Mrs. Foreman, 97

Ladies Delight Chapter 10, Order of Eastern Star, observed its 100th anniversary Sunday with special recognition of Georgia Foreman, the oldest member of the chapter.

The honoree, now 97 years old, was presented with a red rose corsage, a floral bouquet composed of the colors of the Eastern Star, a certificate of merit and a monetary gift. A Greenville native, the daughter of former slaves George and Mary E. Williams, she has been a member of Ladies' Delight since 1901 and was its worthy matron from 1951-56. She has been a member of Sycamore Hill Baptist Church for the past 85 years and served as president of its Pastor's Aid Club for 39 years.

Mrs. Foreman began teaching in a one-room school at age 17 and has worked in both the Greenville and Pitt County school systems. Once certification became a necessity and her husband would not agree for her to go to Raleigh, the closest place for a black teacher to engage in study for certification, she went to work in the laundry of East Carolina Teachers College — employment she held until about 30 years ago when she became the housekeeper-companion of Mrs. L.H. Bowling, a position she still holds.

Held at Wynn's Chapel Church, the celebration had as its speaker Ethel Thomas of Greenville, who spoke on "Star-Gazing." Music was furnished by the Senior Choir of Wynn's Chapel.

Recipient Of Scholarship

James T. Warren of Greenville is the recipient of this year's Jennifer Elizabeth Lambeth Memorial Scholarship for study at East Carolina University.

Warren is pursuing a master's degree in rehabilitation counseling. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Burney Warren of Greenville.

The scholarship was established by memorial gifts from family and friends of Beth Lambeth, who was a student at East Carolina University in the department of rehabilitation counseling at the time of her death in 1980.

Governor To Commute 1973 Prison Sentence

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt says he will commute on Friday the six-month prison sentence of the Rev. James E. Orange, one of the leaders of an Alabama-to-Washington, D.C. voting rights pilgrimage who was arrested on a 9-year-old civil charge June 5.

Orange, a member of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, was arrested June 5 on a fugitive charge stemming from his 1973 conviction of failing to follow a police order to disperse at a protest rally in Edenton.

He was arrested in Williamston while participating in the SCLC-sponsored voting rights pilgrimage.

Hunt's order Wednesday came after leaders of the pilgrimage, who had marched on to Virginia following Orange's arrest, announced they were going to return to North Carolina Saturday to protest Orange's incarceration.

Gary Pearce, Hunt's press secretary, said the governor was not bowing to pressure in ordering the release.

"He's proven before he doesn't take outside pressures or public statements (in making decisions)," Pearce said.

The Rev. Joseph Lowery, president of SCLC, had said earlier that Orange was a "political prisoner" and said that his arrest was an effort to stall support for the extension of the 1965 Voting Rights Act.

Elderly Losing On Condo Plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Millions of dollars are being lost, often by the elderly, in schemes involving the sale of fractional interests in condominiums, the chairman of the House Aging Committee says.

Opening a hearing on the problem Wednesday, Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., said that unlike traditional land sales, time sharing or interval ownership arrangements are totally unregulated at the federal level, and regulated in only about four states.

JENKINS' GUEST

Dr. Stephen Creech, area director of the Pitt County Mental Health Center, will be a guest on "Tarheel Portrait" on WITN-TV Sunday at 1:30 p.m.

Dr. Creech will speak with host Leo Jenkins on mental health services in Pitt County and on contemporary mental health issues.

Hunt said his decision to free Orange was based on "two important findings."

He said Orange had had no criminal record in the nine years since the misdemeanor conviction and that Orange surrendered to Georgia authorities after his conviction was upheld by the North Carolina Supreme Court in 1974.

Hunt said Orange apparently was never told that he was required to return to North Carolina.

"I have concluded that his arrest and conviction in 1973 for failing to disperse were proper and that the six-month sentence he received was appropriate," Hunt said.

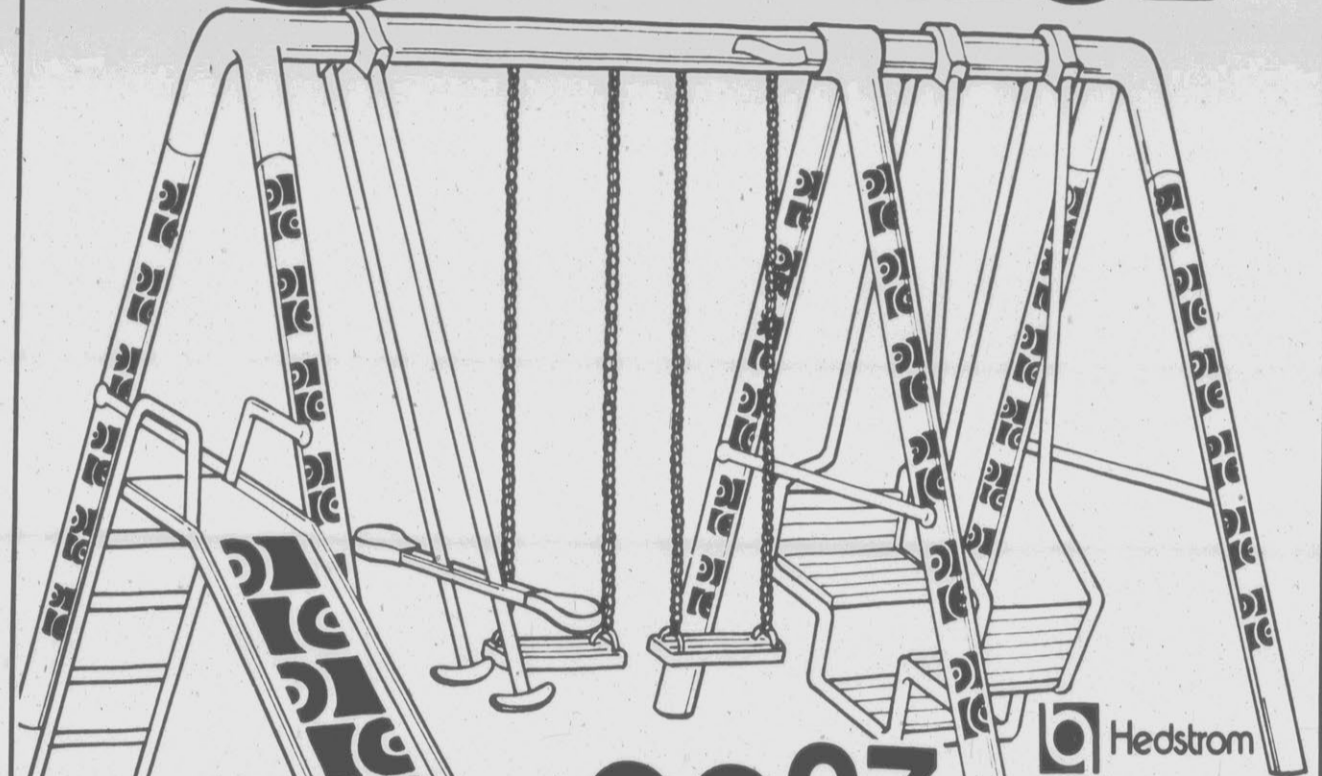

"Law enforcement officials in Chowan County ... made a reasonable effort for more than two years after the conviction to locate the Rev. Orange and have him returned to serve his sentence," Hunt said. "His arrest ... was proper and was made after law enforcement officials learned that he had returned to North Carolina and discovered that he had never served the six-month sentence."

"After a thorough review of this matter, I have concluded that releasing the Rev. Orange after he has served 15 days of his six-month sentence is fair and equitable," Hunt said in a news release.

Chase Begins For U.S. Open Championship

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — In a breathtaking setting that seems like something lifted right off a painter's canvas, the chase began today for the United States Open golf championship, one of the game's most prestigious titles.

The field is loaded with quality candidates for the crown. The professional bettors have made Masters champion Craig Stadler, a three-time winner on the tour this year and the season's top money-maker with earnings of $312,058, the favorite.

"It's nice to have people know you have a chance," he said. "I think I have a very good chance. My game's pretty solid. I know the course well and the course compliments my game."

There's also plenty of support for Jack Nicklaus, who won the only other Open ever played at Pebble Beach in 1972 and has the added incentive of shooting for a record fifth title in this event. After all, he has conquered this course more frequently than any of his colleagues.

Nicklaus was asked why he's had so much success at Pebble Beach, which has taken its toll of quality golfers.

"It's because I've shot low scores, I guess," he said. "I like this type of course because it requires thinking as well as golf. It's a course I've had a great deal of success on and I like very much. I'm playing fairly well. I feel like my golf game is in really good shape."

If you prefer the hot-hand theory, then your man should be Ray Floyd, who has two victories and a second place finish (in a playoff) in the last three tournaments he's played.

"I'm hitting the greens, and I'm putting well," Floyd said. "My confidence is up. Things are going right. Without question, I'm playing the best golf of my life right now."

Then, there is Tom Watson, battling the frustration of never having won this event.

Watson is the No.2 alltime money-winner with $2,778,697, trailing only Nicklaus. He has been Player of the Year four times, captured the British Open three times and the Masters twice. But he is still looking for his first U.S. Open.

"Yes, I want to win it very badly," said Watson. "But it's not critical. I have a few more years to get under my belt."

Watson's best Open finish came in 1980 when he tied for third at Baltusrol with a 276, four strokes behind Nicklaus, who captured his fourth crown that year.

Snow Hill Falls, 11-7

ROCKY MOUNT — Kevin Payne drove in three runs and Rocky Mount jumped out to a 10-run lead and came away with a 11-7 victory over Snow Hill Wednesday in an American Legion game last night.

Snow Hill, now 0-7, used six pitchers in the game, one of whom was Gary Ream, who signed a professional baseball contract this morning with the Milwaukee Brewers. Ream has been assigned to a rookie league in Kentucky.

Rocky Mount jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the first and upped its margin to 8-0 in the second.

With the bases loaded, Rocky Mount tried a squeeze bunt. The ball was thrown away, allowing three runs to score. Payne later singled home two more runs in the inning.

Rocky Mount, now 5-3, made it 10-0 in the fourth before Snow Hill finally was able to score.

Snow Hill tallied four runs in the sixth, thanks to six walks that gave Snow Hill four runs. Snow Hill had the bases loaded in the inning.

Snow Hill closed to 10-6 with two runs in the seventh on a (Please turn to page 18)

Pitt Co., Wilson Split Pair

Post 39 Wins First, 3-1, Loses Second, 7-6

WILSON — Mont Carter drove in two runs and Roger Williams scattered five hits to lead Pitt County to a 3-1 victory over Wilson Wednesday evening in the first game of a double-header.

In the second game, Charles Davis struck out 14 and held off a seventh-inning rally by Pitt County to win, 7-6, and earn a split for Wilson.

Pitt County is now 4-2 overall and in the league. Wilson is 10-3 overall and 5-2 in the league.

After winning the opener, Pitt County fell behind 7-2 in the second game but rallied for four runs in the sixth and then had runners at first and second in the seventh with one gone.

But Tyrone Gay, pinch hitting for Pitt County reliever Mike Kinley, struck out and Bill Kittrell hit into a force play at second to end the threat — and the game.

In the opener, Williams, now

2-0, struck out seven and walked two. Wilson's lone run was unearned.

Pitt County took a 2-0 lead in the first and upped it to 3-0 in the fifth before Wilson scored its only run in the seventh on an error by third baseman Gordon Douglas.

Emmett Walsh walked to open the second and went to second base on Roger Williams' sacrifice bunt on which no one was out. They moved up a base on Douglas' sacrifice before Carter drilled a single to score both.

Randy Warren's solo home run in the fifth with one gone made it 3-0. Warren was two for three and was Pitt County's lone hitter with more than one hit in the game.

No one for Wilson had more than one hit.

In the second game, Davis struck out 14 and walked five en route to raising his record to 5-0.

Pitt County jumped out to a 1-0 lead in the first on a solo home run by Greg Briley with one gone. Briley, a left-hander, hit the blast over the leftfield fence.

Briley was three for three with three RBI for the game.

Wilson rallied for two runs in the second, however, to take the lead. With the bases loaded, Pitt County pitcher Scott Galloway walked John Logan to force home one run to tie the game.

Then, with two gone, Mark Davis scored on a passed ball to give Wilson a 2-1 lead.

Pitt County tied the game in the fourth when Galloway singled home Williams, who had singled and gone to second on a wild pitch.

However, Wilson came back one inning later to score five runs to take a lead that was threatened but never lost.

After one run scored on a double steal, Al Hardison doubled home two runs in the inning and later scored himself on a triple by John Logan. Logan came home on Joey Page's single to make it 7-2.

Pitt County rallied for four runs in the fourth to cut the gap to 7-6. Williams singled and Gordon Douglas and Sammy Hodges walked to load the bases with none out.

Then, with one gone, Bill Kittrell singled to score both Williams and Douglas. After Tom Buie singled to load the bases again, Briley doubled to bring home Hodges and Kittrell.

That made it 7-6, and it was as close as Pitt County could get as Davis and Wilson cut short a seventh-inning rally by Pitt County.

Williams was three for four and Kittrell had two RBI for Pitt Co. to go along with Briley's three hits.

Wilson was led by Hardison, who was two for three with two runs batted in.

Pitt County plays host to Snow Hill Friday.

Twins Win Third In 26 Outings

Perry Pitchers 302nd Victory As Mariners Defeat Rangers

By The Associated Press People tend to worry for different reasons. Minnesota's Frank Viola starting sweating the moment he heard his parents were coming to watch him pitch.

Viola recorded his first major league victory Wednesday night and Hrbek scored the Twins' first run and added a two-run double as Minnesota downed the Kansas City Royals 5-2 for only its third victory in 26 games.

Ironically, Viola, 1-0, has started two of those three victories, but he was a little apprehensive before the Kansas City game. You see, his parents, Frank Sr. and Helen, were present and that hasn't been a good omen for the 22-year-old left-hander from New York.

"The last two times my parents saw me pitch in (Class AAA) Toledo, I only lasted 3-1 innings," said Viola. "I was beginning to think they might be a jinx."

The Violas stopped in Kansas City, while driving their son's car from Toledo, where he spent most of the spring, to Minnesota. Viola, who gave up a seventh-inning home run to Hal McRae, said his control helped him.

"The first time against them,

I kept falling behind the batters and letting them wait on my pitch," Viola said. "My control was better this time. They weren't sitting back waiting for my pitch."

Ron Davis pitched the final two innings for Minnesota, allowing the Royals' second run on a double by McRae.

"I started thinking 'What the heck is going to go wrong now,'" said Hrbek after McRae's double. "That's the way our whole team has been thinking this season, I guess. It's no fun losing, but there's no place to go, but up," he said.

White Sox 7, A's 6 Greg Luzinski, who earlier hit a long homer, singled home Ron LeFlore from second base in the 10th inning of a game marred by the ejection of two players, Chicago Manager Tony La Russa and a coach.

Salome Barojas, 4-1, was the winner despite balking in the tying run in the ninth inning.

Chicago coach Charley Lau was ejected from the game for contesting the balk call. La Russa was ejected during Oakland's five-run fourth inning, and Bill Almon was ousted in the ninth inning.

Dave Lopes, the A's second baseman, was ejected in the sixth.

Steve Kemp's had a two-run homer for Chicago in the eighth, while Cliff Johnson's solo shot ignited the A's big fourth inning.

We Care About Dad Almost As Much As You Do Father's Day is a time for you to let Dad know that you remember and care for him. But every year, as the day approaches, mothers and offspring frantically search for that just right gift to suit that man in their lives. When these eager to please shoppers walk into our store and ask the inevitable, "What can I get him for Father's Day?", we extend our most courteous manners and best service and advice. But many customers want more than that. They only know what they don't want, not what they do want. So we try very hard to insure that Dad doesn't receive things he doesn't need or want and to make it easier for the caring people who are shopping for him. You see, we're not trying to sell you the latest fashion craze and just take your money. We offer style and quality, not fashion. (There is a world of difference.) The simple reason for this is that fashion from last year is either in the attic or in the back of the closet. Style and quality from last year, on the other hand, are either in the front of your closet or on your back. Chambliss' Homer Lifts Braves By Astros In 10th

By The Associated Press

With its spacious outfield and no wind current, the Houston Astrodome is supposed to be a no-man's land for long-ball hitters.

But the way the Atlanta Braves have been swinging this year, no park can hold them.

Behind three different times in their game with Houston Wednesday night, the Braves kept blasting their way out of jams and finally used the long ball to beat the Astros 5-4 in 10 innings.

Chris Chambliss won it for the National League West leaders with a solo home run in the 10th.

"We depend on our power hitting, whereas the Astros have been depending on their pitching for years," Chambliss said. "We have the ability to go farther than we have in the past because of our stronger pitching this year and more maturity on our bench."

Chambliss' ninth homer of the year, off George Cappuzzello, 0-1, was the second Atlanta homer of the game. Claudell Washington hit a solo shot in the eighth to throw the game into a 3-3 tie at that point.

"It was the type of pitch I could hit," Chambliss said of his game-winning homer. "It ran in on me, but it was up. I had two strikes, so I had to protect the plate."

Houston Manager Bill Virdon says there's no magic to the Braves' success as far as he's concerned. "They're getting the hits when they need them. Their pitchers and relievers are doing the job. That's what it takes—a little from everybody."

Atlanta reliever Gene Garber, 5-2, pitched the final two innings for the victory.

The Braves fell behind 3-0 after three innings as Terry Puhl hit two homers for the Astros. But Atlanta scored twice in the fifth before Washington homered in the eighth.

The Astros went ahead 4-3 in the bottom of the inning on Tony Scott's RBI triple. But Atlanta rallied to tie it again in the ninth on a pinch RBI single by Bob Watson.

Expos 8, Cardinals 3

Andre Dawson's three-run double capped a five-run uprising in the second inning, powering Montreal over St. Louis.

After Montreal took a 1-0 lead in the first on a triple by Tim Raines and a run-scoring grounder by Terry Francona, 10 batters went to the plate during the decisive second. In addition to Dawson's double, an assortment of five hits included RBI singles by Warren Cromartie and Francona.

Gary Carter's one-out double triggered the Expos' burst off St. Louis left-hander Dave LaPoint, 3-1. Charlie Lea, 5-2, was the winner.

"We needed something like this," said Expos Manager Jim Fanning, referring to Montreal's 13-hit attack. "We haven't had a big inning like the one we had tonight for some time."

Cubs 7, Phillies 6

Ryne Sandberg's one-out single in the 11th inning drove in the winning run as Chicago beat Philadelphia and handed the Phillies their fifth straight loss.

Sandberg's hit came off reliever Warren Brusstar, 2-3, the seventh Philadelphia pitcher, and made a winner of Chicago reliever Dick Tidrow, 2-1, who pitched the 11th.

The Phillies had rallied to tie the score 6-6 with a four-run ninth keyed by Gary Matthews' two-run single.

The victory was the third straight for the Cubs after a 13-game losing streak.

"We've been having our problems lately, but it seems that during the last three games the breaks went our way," Chicago shortstop Larry Bowa said. "That's a sign of a team that's maturing a little bit."

Dodgers 6, Padres 0

Bob Welch pitched a three-hitter and Pedro Guerrero belted a home run and knocked in three runs as Los Angeles beat San Diego. It was the second consecutive shutout by the Dodgers, who won 3-0 Tuesday night, and extended the Padres' scoreless string to 22 innings.

Weich, 7-4, recorded his third shutout of the season, walking two and striking out six. Only one Padre got as far as second base.

Tim Lollar, 6-2, pitched six innings for San Diego, giving up seven hits and four of the Dodger runs in suffering his first loss at home in five decisions.

"It seems like everything came together at once in this series," said Baker. "We'll have to remember what we did here and go on playing good, sound baseball. We're back at .500 for what seems like the 10th or 11th time this year."

Reds 7, Giants 3

Cesar Cedeno hit two home runs and drove in six runs, powering Cincinnati over San Francisco.

Cedeno walked with the bases loaded in the first inning to force in a run, then hit a two-run homer in the third and three-run blast in the fifth, his fifth of the season. He later added a triple.

Mario Soto, 6-4, scattered nine hits before needing relief help with one out in the ninth from Tom Hume, who gained his 13th save. Soto fanned eight to regain the major league lead with 115 strikeouts.

San Francisco starter Mike Chris lasted only two-thirds of an inning, giving way to Jim Barr, 1-2, the eventual loser.

Reds, Bucs Set Tryouts

The Pittsburgh Pirates and the Cincinnati Reds will both hold tryouts in the coming weeks in the area.

The Pirates will have a tryout camp on June 21 at 10 a.m. at N.C. Wesleyan in Rocky Mount. Players age 16 to 22 should bring a glove and shoes.

American Legion players must have written permission from their coach or post commander.

Pittsburgh scouting supervisor Kelvin Bowles will be in charge of the camp.

Cincinnati will hold a series of camps across North and South Carolina during the last week of June and first 10 days of July.

Dates and locations for the camps in the surrounding area include:

June 24 — Garner Junior High in Garner; June 25 — N.C. Methodist College in Fayetteville; June 26 — Legion Stadium in Wilmington.

Again, all players 16 to 22 can attend and legion players must have written permission.

Players drafted by any major league club in June are not eligible.

Camps will begin at 10 a.m., with registration getting started at 9:30. The camps will be under the direction of Cam Bonifay, Supervisory Scout for the Reds in the Carolinas and Georgia.

Worthy Named McKeivin Winner

RALEIGH (AP) — James Worthy, who led the University of North Carolina to the NCAA basketball title, has been named the recipient of the Anthony J. McKeivin Award given annually to the outstanding athlete in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Worthy, who finished as runner-up to Virginia's Ralph Sampson in balloting for the ACC basketball player of the year, rode his strong performance in the National Collegiate Athletic Association playoffs to collect the award.

The 6-foot-9, 219-pound recreation major from Gastonia, N.C., was voted most valuable player in the ACC tournament, the NCAA Eastern Regional, and the NCAA final four. He was a second-team All-America.

Worthy, who recently announced that he will forego his senior year to turn pro, hit on 13 of 17 field goal attempts and scored 28 points in the Tar Heels' 63-62 victory over Georgetown in the NCAA finals. He also hit on 7 of 10 field goals in UNC's 68-63 semifinal triumph over Houston.

In the ACC tournament, Worthy scored 40 points, including 16 in the final game. He averaged 14.5 points in his 84 games at UNC, averaging 7.4 rebounds. His career field goal average was 54.1 percent.

Worthy enrolled at North Carolina after an outstanding career at Ashbrook High School in Gastonia. He became one of only four freshmen ever to start at UNC under head basketball coach Dean Smith.

Smith, commenting on the award, said, "This is a very deserving honor. James was always such a great team player at Carolina, it's nice he's won another important individual award."

"His play down the stretch for us was just outstanding. He got a lot of attention for the points he scored, but he also did a good job defensively, on the boards, and passing the ball. I know I'm prejudiced, but I thought he was the best all-round forward in the country last season."

Worthy received 67 of the 110 votes cast for the McKeivin Award. Sampson finished second in the voting, with 20 ballots.

Others received votes were Clemson linebacker, Jeff Davis; Tommy Sears of UNC's national lacrosse championship team; Chiam Arlosorov, a tennis standout at Duke; Joe McIntosh, N.C. State running back; Ray Stiles, Georgia Tech's track star; Bill Merrifield, Wake Forest's

Cubans Return For USA Meet

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Cubans are coming! The Cubans are coming!

The Cubans are returning to the USA-Mobil Outdoor Track and Field Championships for the second year in a row — and they want to make up for last year's embarrassment.

In the 1981 Championships at Sacramento, Calif., only one Cuban athlete made it to the finals. That was discus thrower Luis Delis, and he finished second to Ben Plucknett.

This year, in the three-day meet beginning Friday at the University of Tennessee's Tom Black Track, the Cubans will have virtually the same cast that appeared in the 1981 extravaganza, and they reportedly are determined to make amends for their dismal performances of a year ago.

Heading the Cuban delegation, which is scheduled to arrive tonight, is Alberto Juantorena, the 1976 Olympic champion at 400 meters and 800 meters.

Called "El Caballo" — The Horse — the rangy Juantorena has been plagued by leg injuries since his "double" at the Montreal Summer Games. But after years of being sub-par physically, Juantorena is on the comeback trail.

This month, during a one-week span, he won three races in Europe, and apparently looked good doing it.

Although he failed to win a medal in the 1980 Moscow Olympics and failed to finish his 400 heat in last year's USA Championships, the powerful Juantorena still owns two of the six fastest 400 times in history (44.26 and 44.27) and four of the eight fastest times in the 800, including former world records of 1:43.50, set at Montreal in 1976, and 1:43.44, established in 1977.

Like Juantorena, Delis has been impressive this year. He set a Cuban record by throwing the discus 231 feet, 7 inches at the Nike Invitational, won again in the California Relays at 228-3 and was first in the Two Big Guys meet at 227-7.

In addition to Juantorena and Delis, the Cubans, who are paying their way to the meet, are sending sprinters Silvio Leonard and Osvaldo Lara, high hurdler Alejandro Casanas, javelin thrower Antonio Gonzalez, quarter-milers Lazaro Martinez, Carlos Reyte and Agustin Pavo, hammer thrower Genevieve Morejon, high jumper Ubaldo Duany, women's long jumper Aloina Echevarria, women's javelin thrower Mayra Vila and women's high jumper Silvia Acosta.

The best among that group is Leonard. His time of 9.98 seconds is the 100-meter dash in 1977 is the second fastest in history, behind only Jim Hines' 9.95. Leonard also was second in the 100 and fourth in the 200 at the 1980 Olympics, and he won the 100 at the 1975 Pan-American Games and the 100 and the 200 at the 1979 Pan-Am Games.

While the performances of the Cubans are being anxiously awaited, so are those of Carl Lewis and Edwin Moses.

The 20-year-old Lewis won the 100 and long jump last year — the first athlete to accomplish that feat in this meet since Hall of Famer Jesse Owens did it in 1936. And he is going for it again.

Not only will Lewis have to be at his peak in order to repeat his rare double, he will have to be a quick adapter.

His two finals are scheduled only 20 minutes apart Saturday night, with the 100 first.

Moses, the 1976 Olympic champion in the 400-meter intermediate hurdles, the world record holder at 47.13 seconds and unbeaten in his specialty since Aug. 26, 1977, is making his 1982 debut.

Moses, married last month to Myrella Micaela Brodt of West Germany, will be seeking his 73rd straight victory in a final.

'Golden Bear' Forever Hungry

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. — Golf is a golden crown of jewels for the "Golden Bear," Jack Nicklaus, and he never loses his insatiable appetite for more.

"Sure, I want to win it," the world's all-time major title collector replied to an unnecessary question after completing preparations for the 82nd U.S. Open championship, which began today. "Not just because it would be my fifth Open, not because it would be my 20th major or my 70th U.S. tournament victory."

"I'd like to win because I'm an American and it's the championship of my country. It's the biggest and hardest to win. More than that, it's at Pebble Beach."

This picturesque seaside course is a favorite birdie hunting preserve for the 42-year-old fairway king who won his second National Amateur crown here in 1961 and followed with three Crosby events and the 1972 U.S. Open as a pro.

"Why do you have so much success at Pebble Beach?" Nicklaus was asked at his Wednesday news conference.

"Because I shoot low scores," he replied tartly. Some writers interpreted his attitude as touching on arrogance but closer associates saw it instead as a Nicklaus brimming with confidence.

Rarely has the blond Ohioan been seen in a looser or more buoyant frame of mind.

"It's a links type course, like the courses in Britain," he said, referring to the rocks and rills, tricky winds and waves whipping in off the Pacific Ocean and Carmel Bay.

"It has subtle bounces and inconsistencies. It requires a lot of thinking and shotmaking management. The course has been set up fairly (no tricks) with greens on which one won't have to scramble. It reduces the number of players who can win. I like that."

While the names of Craig Stadler, Tom Watson and Ray Floyd are being bandied about as leading threats for the championship, it's the awesome, lingering shadow of Nicklaus that hovers over the course from the clubhouse to the sea.

It's a perfect setting for the game's premier player. Nicklaus has won almost twice as many major titles as anyone in history. He is playing on his favorite course and he has put his game and his mind in what he considers perfect harmony.

"I haven't spent the last week beating balls," he said. "I went home. I traveled about 12,000 miles looking over golf courses I'm building — De-ver, Phoenix, Salt Lake City, Grand Rapids and Southern California. I didn't worry about the Open. I came here relaxed."

For TV, Indianapolis 500, U.S. Open A Lot Alike

By The Associated Press
There are a lot of similarities between the sylvan calm of the U.S. Open and the breakneck speed and danger of the Indianapolis 500, according to the man who will be producing America's national golf championship on ABC this weekend.

"Golf is a very, very difficult sport to telecast, because there are no implicit time-outs to get in commercials," said producer Chuck Howard. "It's a lot like auto racing."

"On a racetrack, once the action starts, it doesn't stop unless you get a horrendous accident. On a golf course, once the round starts, they keep playing, and only the weather can force a break."

"Also, there are 15-20 focal points, again like an auto race. You have to keep an eye on 15 or 20 golfers who are coming up, or going down, or trying to protect their position. In racing, you have 33 cars you have to keep watch on."

"These two sports require more quick decisions than any others. You walk out of that (production) truck wanting a double scotch, and another right on top of it."

Howard will make sure he finds time to get in enough commercials, and probably to quench his thirst after the work is done. But in the tournament which began today at the picturesque Pebble Beach Golf Links on California's Monterey Peninsula, he'll be dealing with something very special among TV sports.

With 32 cameras and 275 people covering the tournament for ABC, it's TV's most extensive undertaking for a single annual sports event. It's also the only golf tournament to get 18-hole coverage on network TV, with full-round telecasts scheduled both Saturday and Sunday, beginning and one of the longest live shows around. The average pro football game, for instance, lasts about three hours.

Saturday's telecast begins at 3:30 p.m. EDT, a half-hour earlier than Sunday's scheduled start. Doing four hours, rather than the last four holes as on most golf telecasts, is worth the effort, Howard said.

"The question, 'Who wants to sit and watch golf for four hours?' has some validity," he said. "But if you want to do the right thing journalistically, you do the whole thing."

It's also proven to be the right thing for ratings. Last year's final round of the Open attracted an 8.9 rating and an estimated 25 million viewers, a record for 18-hole coverage, and was the highest-rated network show that afternoon by far. ABC's Sunday afternoon average for June 1981, including the Open, was 6.8.

UNC-W Slips Past UNC

WILMINGTON (AP) — Lettfielder Roger Hudson stroked three straight hits and pitcher Kenny Smith hurled his fourth complete game to lead the University of North Carolina at Wilmington to a 4-2 victory over North Carolina in a North State League baseball game Wednesday.

Hudson drove in two runs with a first-inning double, then added a pair of singles to pace a seven-hit Seahawk attack.

Smith fanned seven Tar Heel batters, but allowed seven hits and two earned runs — the first earned runs the junior left-hander has given up this summer.

Twins Win Third In 26 Games...

Mariners 7, Rangers 2
Manny Castillo stroked a bases-loaded, two-run double in Seattle's three-run second inning and Julio Cruz slammed a three-run homer as 43-year-old pitcher Gaylord Perry picked up the 302nd career victory.

Perry, 5-5, gave up six hits in 71-3 innings of work. He walked one and struck out three, raising his career strikeout total to 3,399. Bill Caudill pitched the final 12-3 innings for his ninth save.

Jim Sundberg hit his fourth homer of the season for the Rangers' first run and Texas scored again in the eighth when Bill Stein slapped a pinch-hit single.

Angels 7, Blue Jays 1
Bob Boone knocked in two runs with a single and Don Baylor added a two-run homer to back Steve Renko's six-hitter as California posted a 7-1 victory over Toronto, snapping an eight-game losing streak at home.

Rod Carew extended the longest hitting streak of his 15-year career to 20 games when he led off the seventh with a single. Baylor followed with his ninth homer of the year.

Doug DeCinces added a solo homer for the Angels in the eighth.

The Blue Jays scored in the first off Renko, 6-1, on Damaso Garcia's double, Rance Mulliniks' bunt single and Lloyd Moseby's RBI single.

Yankees 4, Red Sox 1
Ken Griffey smacked his fourth homer of the year and drove in two runs to back Dave Righetti's three-hitter as New York completed a three sweep of Boston with a rain-shortened, six-inning triumph.

Righetti, 5-4, struck out seven, but last year's Rookie of the Year hurt his own cause by walking eight.

The Yankees took a 1-0 lead in the first inning on Dave Winfield's RBI single and increased the margin to 3-0 in the fourth on Butch Wynegar's triple, an RBI double by Andre Robertson and Griffey's run-scoring single.

Boston scored in the fifth when Righetti walked Gary Allenson with the bases loaded but Griffey got that one back the following inning before the rains came with his second home run in as many nights.

"I'm not thinking home run up there," said Griffey, "and I haven't been encouraged to hit any homers. I'm really not trying to do too many things with the bat. I'm not trying to be cute. I'm just trying to hit the ball with consistency."

Griffey, who upped his average to .297 with his two-hit night, now has hit in eight straight games.

Brewers 2, Orioles 2
A rainstorm following the ninth inning forced umpires to call off Milwaukee's game at Baltimore with the score tied 2-2.

The game will be replayed in its entirety when the Brewers visit Baltimore on the final weekend of the season. All the statistics from the game will count.

The Brewers tied the score 2-2 in the sixth on a homer by Robin Yount off Dennis Martinez. It was Yount's ninth of the season and his third against Baltimore this year.

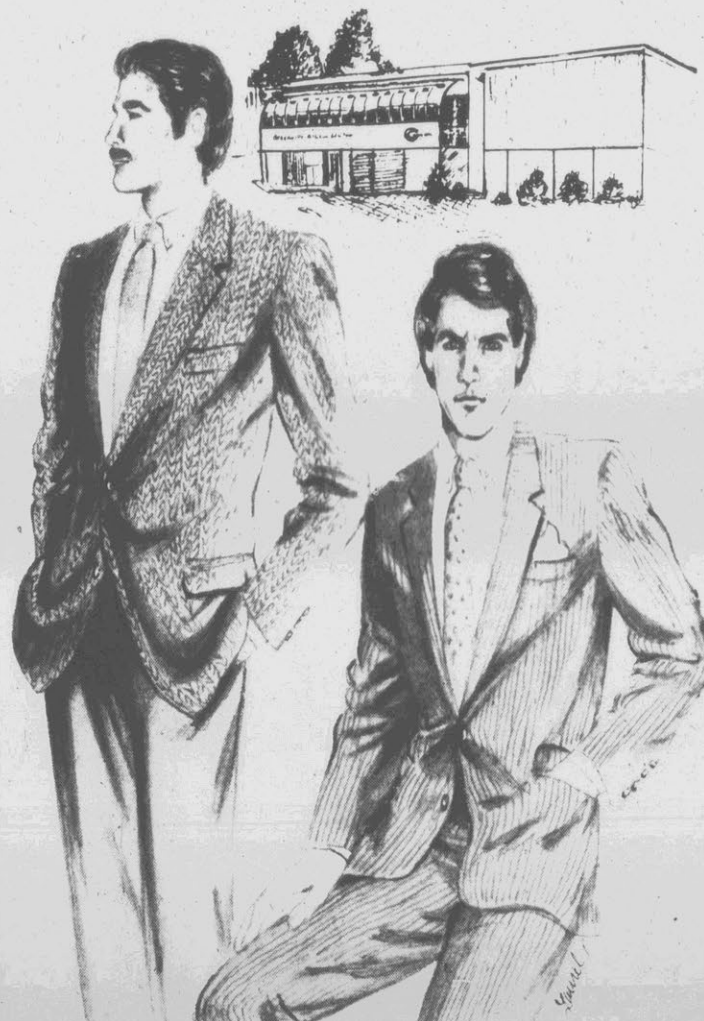

Joe Nolan drove in both Baltimore runs with a two-run single in the third off Milwaukee's Pete Vuckovich.

Malone Named NBA's MVP

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Moses Malone of the Houston Rockets was named the National Basketball Association's Most Valuable Player for the 1981-82 season today after being the league's top rebounder and second leading scorer.
Buck Williams of the New Jersey Nets was voted the league's Rookie of the Year, beating out Kelly Tripucka of the Detroit Pistons.
The balloting was done by a panel of media members.
Gene Shue of the Washington Bullets was named Coach of the Year for the second time in his career, and Gus Williams of the Seattle SuperSonics was chosen Comeback Player of the Year by a narrow margin over Washington's Spencer Haywood.

Balloting was done by 69 media members, three from each NBA franchise city after the conclusion of the regular season.
Malone averaged 14.7 rebounds to lead the league for the third time, and his 31.1 scoring average was second only to George Gervin of San Antonio, who had 32.3.
Malone received the Morris

Podoloff trophy as the MVP, an award he also won in 1979.
Malone had 507 points in the voting to 406 for runnerup Larry Bird of the Boston Celtics. Malone landed 40 first-place votes to 20 for Bird.
Julius Erving of the Philadelphia 76ers, last year's winner, finished with 203, followed by Robert Parish of Boston, 131, and Gus Williams, 115.
Shue, who won the coaching award in 1969 in a prior stint with the Bullets when the franchise was in Baltimore, drew 34 votes for his job at Washington. Doug Moe of Denver finished second with 13 votes and Larry Brown of New Jersey was third with 9 1/2.

Buck Williams, the first rookie in a decade with more than 1,000 rebounds, received the Eddie Gottlieb trophy as top rookie. Tripucka was second with 22 and Jay Vincent of Dallas third with 11.
Gus Williams did not play in 1980-81 because of a contract dispute, but won the comeback award in the closest race of the balloting. He got 27 votes to 22 for Haywood, who spent the 1980-81 season in Italy. Seattle's Lonnie Shelton, who was limited to just 14 games in 1980-81 because of a wrist injury, finished third with six votes.
Also honored the luncheon were Jack Ramsay, coach of the Portland Trail Blazers, who received a special award from the National Association of Basketball Coaches, and Bob Ferry, general manager of Washington, who was selected the NBA's Executive of the Year in a poll of general managers, conducted by The Sporting News.

Thirty Spectacular Tall Ships Visit Philadelphia

By LEE LINDER
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Thirty spectacular "tall ships," relics of the era before sails gave way to smokestacks, are expected to attract more than 3 million sightseers as Philadelphia celebrates its 300th birthday.

Rain or shine, officials predicted more than a million people would compete for vantage points today along 20 miles of waterfront along the Delaware River, from Marcus Hook, Pa., to Gloucester, N.J., to view the billowing Parade of Sail to Penn's Landing.

The ships will remain in port until Monday, allowing visitors to stroll on the decks and peer through the galleys.

Fred Stein, executive director of the sponsoring Philadelphia Century IV Committee, said, "It is very difficult to predict numbers but in 1980 when 20 tall ships visited Boston more than five million people came out to see them."

Scheduled to lead the river parade was the Esmeralda, a four-masted barquentine from Chile that has provoked some local controversy — and was expected to be greeted by demonstrators — because some say it was used as a floating torture chamber by the military regime that overthrew the elected Chilean civilian government a decade ago.

The Esmeralda, 353 feet long with masts 165 feet high, is one of the largest sail training ships in the world and the biggest in the parade. It carries a crew of 169 and 170 trainees.

"Past history of a ship doesn't determine its present use," Stein said, noting that the U.S. Coast Guard's Eagle, the biggest of the 18 American vessels docking here, and Portugal's Sagres II were used as Nazi troop ships during World War II. Esmeralda's masts are too tall to sail under the Walt Whitman Bridge to the Penn's Landing berthing area, so arrangements were

Golden Fleece For A T-Shirt Fiasco

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. William Proxmire has bestowed his latest Golden Fleece Award on federal agencies who gave $700,000 to a T-shirt making enterprise with a star-studded board of directors.

The non-profit enterprise, Giant Step Inc., promised to teach minority youth how to make T-shirts, and the Commerce Department awarded it a $443,570 grant in September 1977. The Labor Department chipped in another $260,000.

"Not one T-shirt was produced for sale; not one minority youth found a job, but the taxpayer lost his shirt," said Proxmire, a Wisconsin Democrat who grants the awards periodically for what he considers ridiculous government expenditures.

A woman at an answering service for the Los Angeles office of Giant Step said Wednesday night that no one would be in the office until Monday. "They're here every day, but not this week," she said. Grier did not return calls made to the office earlier in the day.

Sponsor Program

The Greenville City Schools Community Program, in cooperation with Sheppard Memorial Library, is conducting a summer reading program at South Greenville and Third Street libraries.

The program is operated between the hours of 9 a.m. and noon weekdays. The program theme, "Just Open A Book," is being conducted in public school libraries throughout the state. For more information concerning the program contact Carolyn Ferebee, community schools director, or any school principal.

Giant Step's president is former football star Roosevelt "Rosie" Grier, and its board of directors included Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, John Y. Brown, now governor of Kentucky, and singer Ray Charles. Actress Marlo Thomas was listed as special adviser.

Route C...

Route B, composed of 6.1 miles of highway, is estimated to cost $17.3 million and possibly will relocate 13 residences. Route C covers 7.3 miles and might relocate 14 residences. The cost for route C is $15.9 million, less than for route B because fewer bridges would be required.

A third alternative, upgrading the existing U.S. 13-N.C. 11 and adding more lanes, has been listed being not as feasible as routes B or C but still is under consideration. According to William A. Garrett, a DOT public hearing officer, a recently completed environmental impact statement shows that existing intersections would limit traffic.

According to a resolution presented by the Greenville Chamber of Commerce at the hearing, a thoroughfare plan for Greenville calls for a western loop which will relieve the traffic congestion on U.S. 13-N.C. 11. With the completion of this proposed project, a four-laned road would be provided from Wilson around Greenville toward Washington and the rest of eastern North Carolina. The chamber stated that since Pitt County "is experiencing great commercial, industrial, educational, cultural, residential and medical growth," the western loop is needed. The chamber proposed that route C be accepted.

Jack Richardson, director of Pitt County Memorial Hospital, stressed that there is already a traffic flow problem on Memorial Drive (U.S. 13-N.C. 11) near the medical complex. Richardson said the hospital board recommended that route C be constructed to alleviate congestion in that area.

Chancellor John Howell of East Carolina University said that the safety of the people and the economic development of the region must be taken into consideration. According to Howell, about 7,500 students attending the university, along with some faculty and staff and those who attend ECU functions such as lectures and football games, live in the west and use U.S. 264. "It (the bypass) can't be done too soon for all of us who travel that highway," Howell stated.

John McConney of Burroughs-Wellcome Co. and Tim Rosche of Eaton Corp. stressed that route C would be helpful for industrial motor freight. Both spokesmen emphasized the need for adequate grade separation on the highway.

Although the U.S. 264 northwest bypass is not included in DOT's current transportation improvement program, Garrett said the program receives yearly review and update. An environmental impact statement has been completed and the alternatives have been designed, but no plans have been made to build the highway.

Anyone wishing to submit written material or comments on the proposed bypass around Greenville may do so in the next 10 days by writing George E. Wells, manager of highway design, Division of Highways, P.O. Box 25201, Raleigh, N.C. 27611.

How Tar Heels Voted In House, Senate

ROLL CALL REPORT SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Here's how area House members were recorded on major roll call votes June 3-10.

NAMING CIA AGENTS By a vote of 315 for and 32 against, the House approved the conference report on a bill making it a crime to disclose the names of U.S. intelligence agents. Penalties would be stiffest for offenders who had access to classified information while working for the government. But the bill also covers journalists, historians and others engaged in "a pattern of activities" aimed at exposing secret agents,

N.C. Weather Damages Fruit

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Weather-related problems have resulted in drastic reductions in production levels of most of the tree fruits in North Carolina, agriculture officials say.

Mel Kolbe, horticulture specialist for the North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service, says a combination of frost, rain and hail has cut this year's production of peaches, apples, pears, cherries, plums and, possibly, pecans, to only a fraction of their 1981 levels.

"The situation is unreal," Kolbe said. The weather-related problems began with a severe freeze on March 25. Since then, heavy rains have interfered with pollination in many places and some orchards have been damaged by hail, Kolbe said.

He says peach growers have been the hardest hit percentage-wise — with only 5 percent of their crop surviving the cold weather.

But from a monetary standpoint, Kolbe says apple growers were hurt the most because North Carolina farmers grow far more apples than peaches.

County extension agents estimated the 1981 apple crop at 10 million bushels. Kolbe says weather-related problems will reduce that by 75 percent in 1982.

"Apple growers have a major disaster," he said. "All (that) many of them have this year are shade trees."

Kolbe said growers may get $10 million to $15 million for what remains of this year's crop. Apples grossed about $40 million in North Carolina last year.

Kolbe says the huge financial losses will affect the income of everyone who depends on the crop.

"Pickers won't be needed, containers won't be sold, salesmen won't have a job."

Kolbe says the Red Delicious variety, which normally accounts for about half of the state's production, is essentially gone. He says about half of the Golden Delicious variety remains. The Rome Beauty variety on which many growers were counting on to pull them through "snowballed" at bloom time, Kolbe said, explaining that snowballing means that all buds bloom at the same time rather than in stages. When that happens, Kolbe says it usually means a poor fruit set is likely. He says only a 50 percent Rome Beauty crop is now likely.

Four hailstorms in Henderson County have added to growers' woes, since about three-fourths of the state's apple crop is grown there. Kolbe says damaged fruit can be used for juice, but he says there's no money in that for growers.

Kolbe says that while most of the tree-fruits in the state have been destroyed, a few have managed to survive.

"We've got 100 acres of peaches on Knotts Island (in Currituck County) and they are beautiful," he said. "Also, some growers on parts of Brushy Mountain (in Wilkes County) have good crops of apples, peaches and nectarines."

Picnic Held By Social Services

The Pitt County Department of Social Services' foster children and foster parents of Pitt County were given a picnic Tuesday at the Greenville Boys Club.

According to foster care social worker Becky Starkey, there were 86 children and about 33 adults present, in addition to staff members of the Department of Social Services and the Boys Club.

"From 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., the children enjoyed all the activities of the Boys Club, along with the members," Ms. Starkey said. "And we had a great spread lunch furnished by the foster families themselves."

The Department of Social Services annually holds a summer gathering and Christmas gathering for the foster families of Pitt County.

and it can apply when the publication merely repeats names already in the public record. The Senate had not yet taken up the conference report on the bill (HR 4).

Supporter Henry Hyde, R-Ill., called the measure "a constitutional and effective response to the dangerous problem posed by the callous revelation of the identities of our covert intelligence agents."

Opponent Don Edwards, D-Calif., said the bill would "trample on First Amendment freedom" because "for the first time in American history, the publication of information obtained lawfully from publicly available sources would be made criminal."

Members voting "yea" favored passage of the Intelligence Identities Protection Act.

Reps. L.H. Fountain, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Ike Andrews, D-4, Eugene Johnston, R-6, Charles Rose, D-7, W.G. Hefner, D-8, James Martin, R-9, James Broyhill, R-10, and William Hendon, R-11, voted "yea."

Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, and Stephen Neal, D-5, did not vote.

MEMBERS' TAXES By a vote of 176 for and 218 against, the House defeated an attempt to put congressmen on the same footing as other taxpayers when deducting away-from-home living expenses. This voided a pending measure to eliminate the $75 per diem congressmen can deduct — without documentation to the IRS — for housing, entertainment and other Washington expenses. The rejected measure would have permitted members to deduct any amount of Washington expenses they could document if audited by the IRS. The vote occurred during debate on an appropriations bill (HR 5922).

Sponsor John Myers, R-Ind., said the measure would put congressmen "under exactly the same tax laws as every other taxpayer in the country, no more, no less."

Opponent Paul Findley, R-Ill., said "the possibility of documented expenses for...an expensive home, its furnishings and for living expenses in Washington fiercely fans the political flame that contends that Washington only cares for the 'rich.'"

Members voting "yea" wanted to permit congressmen to deduct all Washington living expenses they can substantiate. Virtually all members voting "yea" preferred this approach to a return to the maximum $3,000 deduction that Congress lifted in votes last December.

Jones, Fountain, Neal, Johnston, Hefner, Martin and Broyhill voted "yea."

Whitley, Andrews and Hendon voted "nay."

Rose did not vote. $3,000 LIMIT Immediately following the preceding vote, the House went on record in favor of restoring the $3,000 ceiling on deductions for Washington living expenses. The tally was 356 for and 43 against. The issue now lies in a House-Senate conference on HR 5922.

Member voting "yea" wanted to repeal last year's law that increased members' Washington tax deductions for away-from-home living expenses.

Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Johnston, Hefner, Broyhill and Hendon voted "yea."

Jones and Martin voted "nay."

Rose did not vote.

GOP BUDGET By a vote of 220 for and 207 against, the House approved the Republican version of legislation setting budget targets primarily for fiscal 1983 but also for 1984 and 1985. On a later tally of 219-206 the House formally adopted the GOP plan as its budget resolution (H Con Res 352). The measure was sent to conference with the Senate.

The GOP budget projects a 1983 deficit of $99.3 billion, down from the $122.2 billion deficit projected in the budget President Reagan sent to Congress in February. It's 1983 defense spending hike is $7.9 billion less than the president had requested, but it still provides the largest peacetime military budget increase in history. It cuts Medicare, Medicaid, welfare, Food Stamps and other special programs more severely than the Democratic alternative (see next vote), yet it is not as harsh in this area as was the president's budget. It caps federal workers' pay hikes at 4 percent, but it rejects the president's call for controls on cost-of-living escalators in federal entitlement programs. Also, the GOP budget calls for $20 billion in unspecified tax hikes in 1983. Overall, it projects $765.2 billion in outlays for the fiscal year, which begins next Oct. 1, and it anticipates $665.9 billion in revenue.

Members voting "yea" preferred the House GOP budget plan to the president's and the Democrats' alternatives.

Reps. Fountain, Whitley, Johnston, Martin, Broyhill, and Hendon voted "yea."

Reps. Jones, Andrews, Neal, Rose and Hefner voted "nay."

DEMOCRATIC BUDGET By a vote of 202 for and 225 against, the House rejected the Democratic budget plan, which called for higher social spending and smaller defense increases than contained in the GOP budget. Although the Democrats would have raised more revenue through higher tax increases, their projected 1983 deficit of $107.4 billion was about $8 billion higher than the GOP deficit. Majority leader Jim Wright, D-Tex., said a key emphasis of the Democratic budget was "to try to help people through this recession, to stimulate jobs and economic revival..."

The Democratic budget was voted on before consideration of the GOP plan, and members voting "yea" saw it as their first choice among the competing budget proposals.

Reps. Fountain, Whitley, Johnston, Broyhill, Martin and Hendon voted "yea."

Reps. Jones, Andrews, Rose, Hefner, and Neal voted "nay."

Odds Against Labor Secretary Said To Be Rising

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Labor Secretary Raymond J. Donovan faces long odds in keeping his job in the Reagan Cabinet, says a key Republican senator who has reviewed the latest charges that Donovan had ties to organized crime figures.

"The odds are in favor of his departure," said Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, who as chairman of the Senate Labor Committee is Donovan's most important contact in the Senate.

"I just don't see how he's going to overcome the fact that 46 Democratic senators and at least one Republican senator are against him at this point," Hatch told reporters Wednesday.

The lone Republican is Sen. Dan Quayle of Indiana who said last month Donovan should resign if he does not apologize to the labor committee.

But deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said President Reagan has not lost confidence in Donovan and will withhold any further decision until completion of a report by special prosecutor Leon Silverman.

However, the Detroit News said in today's editions that the feeling that Donovan should resign is present "at the highest levels" in the White House.

"The feeling here is that enough is enough," the newspaper quoted an unidentified "key White House adviser" as saying. "It is felt that no matter what happens with the special prosecutor, Donovan should resign," the source said.

Silverman, a court-appointed lawyer, is investigating allegations that Donovan was involved in underworld-influenced bid-rigging and union payoffs on behalf of his former company, Schiavone Construction of Secaucus, N.J.

His report is expected to be concluded by next week. Donovan, who has repeatedly denied all organized crime connections, is due back Sunday from a European trip. Hatch stopped short of calling for Donovan's resignation.

But he said Donovan's prospects for staying on are dim because only Silverman's investigation can clear him. That is unlikely, said Hatch, because some of the key witnesses in the probe are no longer alive.

"All I can say is that unless these matters can be cleared up somehow or other, it is going to be difficult for him to stay," said Hatch.

"No use kidding ourselves. There is no question that unless he can resolve these issues it is going to be very difficult for him to serve in the highest traditions of that office," Hatch continued. "It can't help but impair any normal human being to have this kind of media criticism and FBI funneling these reports around him."

Hatch revealed that he received a detailed FBI memo this week that elaborates on the mob allegations against Donovan. He said the information was not new but "more graphic" than an FBI report he examined last week.

Hatch also said he is concerned that the FBI turned the information over to White House counsel Fred Fielding in January 1981, but withheld it from the Senate Labor Committee. At that time, the committee was weighing Donovan's fitness to be labor secretary.

Hatch, who has defended Donovan for the past 17 months, also said he has not prejudged the secretary's innocence or guilt. He said he talked with White House counselor Edwin Meese III to "express the gravity of the situation," and to request a meeting with Reagan "to bring him up to date."

Meese said Wednesday that Fielding told him in January 1981 that the FBI had turned up allegations against Donovan.

"Of course, we indicated they should check out whatever might be there," Meese said in an interview on Mutual Radio. "But I think at the time there appeared to be very little reason to believe in the validity of those allegations."

The latest public disclosure against Donovan is an FBI report that Donovan had "close personal and business ties with known La Cosa Nostra figures."

The report was turned over to Fielding on Jan. 12, 1981, but Hatch said he first saw it last week.

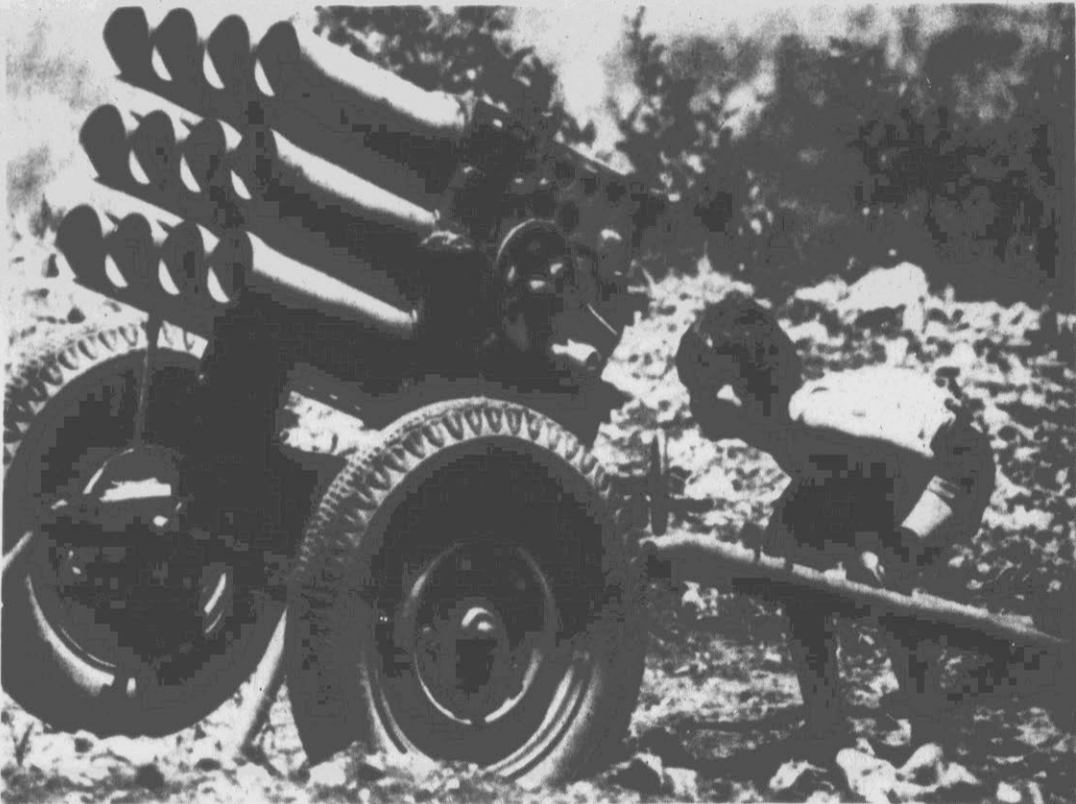

Meanwhile, Republican Party Chairman Richard Richards said the national party "is deliberately detaching itself" from the growing controversy.

Richards, announcing formation of a committee to develop Republican labor union support, ducked the question of whether Donovan should step down.

"We think the Donovan thing is immaterial to what we're trying to do," Richards said.

Senate Democrats have endorsed a letter to Reagan from their minority leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia urging Donovan to take a leave of absence "in the best interests of our country."

Meanwhile, Rep. Toby Moffett, D-Conn., introduced a "resolution of inquiry" in the House seeking information from the White House and Justice Department "regarding any interference with the investigation by the FBI" into Donovan's background.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — After an early setback, Southern Baptist moderates won some rounds from conservatives in the selection of trustees for denominational institutions.

Control of such boards has been an underlying issue in the see-saw struggle between the two factions that have emerged in the nation's biggest Protestant body.

The conservative-fundamentalist wing, after winning its convention drive to elect the Rev. James T. Draper of Texas as president, then ran into a counter-surge of moderate strength.

At the 13.8 million-member denomination's convention Wednesday, moderates managed to bump three conservatives picked for institutional church boards.

The original appointees were picked by a committee on boards, chosen by the denomination's conservative outgoing president, the Rev. Bailey Smith of Del City, Okla.

His committee's chairman, the Rev. Dan Vestal of Midland, Texas, said it had "tried to nominate individuals with a genuine Christian commitment and those who would accept trusteeship as a sacred responsibility."

But the convention named two moderate replacements for the denomination's Sunday School Board of trustees: the Revs. Don Dilday of Navasota, Texas, and J. C. Hatfield of San Antonio, Texas.

They bumped two proposed conservatives, the Revs. Harlon Caton of Spring, Texas, and Elton Ikels of San Antonio.

In sometimes sharp debate on the nominations, Smith ruled that challengers to nominated trustees "may not speak negatively about someone you want to replace, only positively about those you want to nominate."

"This is not the place for character assassination," Moderates also managed to substitute Christine Gregory of Danville, Va., to replace the conservative Eddie Sellers of Morganton, N.C., as a trustee of Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary in Wake Forest, Ill.

Total registration rose to 20,267 at the four-day convention, which closes tonight after acting on a batch of proposed resolutions.

The resolutions variously oppose or support public school prayer, the nation's military buildup, Israel's incursion into Lebanon, and teaching of "creationism" in the public schools.

The convention adopted a $106 million national budget for the coming year, up $13 million, with the biggest allotments, totaling $66 million, going to foreign and home missions. The denomination's six seminaries were allotted $20.5 million.

Watergate Inspired A New Musical Comedy

By DAVID SIMPSON
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — Richard Nixon will lightheartedly concede "a mistake or two" and a group of Cubans will be singing the "Wiretap Blues" in a musical intended to get a few laughs out of the Watergate scandal.

But the creators of "Watergate: A Musical" insist the show isn't intended to exploit the break-in and bugging at the Democratic National Committee headquarters 10 years ago today that eventually led to former President Nixon's resignation.

"It's not really satirical," said Tommy Oliver, who created the musical with Edward J. Lakso, during a break in rehearsals Wednesday. "The line we like to use is we've made a lot of statements and no judgments."

Still, they hope to have the audience laughing through most of the production as Nixon, shown cleaning out his desk on his last day in office, defends himself to a 12-year-old White House visitor.

Gene Barry, who starred as a lawman and cane-toting dandy in the television series "Bat Masterson," plays Nixon. His lines include this somewhat lighthearted explanation of the break-in at the Watergate residential and office complex in Washington: "Some of the fellows made a mistake or two, but nobody's perfect. I'm not. Are you?"

Nixon also is seen telling his wife, Pat — played by Barry's wife, Betty Claire Barry — that the pressures of office and politics must always weigh on him.

"Always stalwart and steady is our favorite pose," Pat complains.

The youngster, played by 14-year-old John Steele of Denver, represents Americans who believe any wrongdoing by the president cannot be tolerated, Oliver said. He said that view is contrasted with the belief that "it's not only OK to bend the rules, to lie, cheat, steal; it's necessary."

In the musical, the boy maintains that Nixon should have operated on the assumption that "the truth will set you free," while the president tries to explain his view of practical politics. In the meantime, Oliver said, "it becomes a love affair between this boy and this presidential figure."

Oliver and Lakso hope the production will play on Broadway after its four-week run here, beginning July 7, and as yet unscheduled engagements around the country. They say they already have turned down a $1.5 million offer for movie rights.

They predict audiences will leave the musical feeling patriotic, and say they are doing more than simply opening an old wound.

"The wonderful thing about the American people is that we tend to forgive, not forget. We learn a lot from our mistakes," said Oliver, a former record producer who has served as musical director for television shows.

Lakso, a veteran television writer whose credits include producing and writing "Charlie's Angels" episodes, said, "Instead of denigrating the American dream, it (Watergate) turned out to reinforce it."

Barry, who also had the lead in the police and spy series "Burke's Law," said playing Nixon "is difficult for me. He'd be difficult for anybody."

Barry worked against Nixon in the presidential campaigns of John Kennedy and Hubert Humphrey and said Nixon "was the kind of politician who went right for the throat."

But the actor said audiences will not detect a Democratic prejudice in his portrayal.

Mrs. Barry said of Mrs. Nixon, "She seems to have been a terrific person" who helped shoulder her husband's worries.

Retrospective Keeps Impact

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — It isn't often that we recommend a rerun, particularly one that is almost 10 years old. But Bill Moyers' thoughtful retrospective on Watergate still has impact and lessons worth restating.

Perhaps for today's high school graduation classes, Watergate already is ancient history, a late 20th-century Teapot Dome scandal. But for those old enough to remember, Watergate symbolizes an end to political naivete and idealism.

Ten years after the Watergate break-in, the "third-rate burglary" that brought down the Nixon administration, Moyers offers "An Essay on Watergate" on public television Friday night.

This examination of a nation's psychic wound originally was broadcast in 1973, and it's a tribute to Moyers that his musings still move us today. It's also another reminder of how involving television can be.

Back in 1973, the networks pre-empted some of their afternoon programs for live coverage of the congressional Watergate hearings. Although some cried for their soaps, most of the nation was fixated on Watergate.

It's all there in Moyers' nostalgic hour: Choir boy John Dean, with the memory of steel, accusing a president of high crimes and misdemeanors. The white knight, with the country lawyer's mind and incredulous eyebrows, Sen Sam Ervin. The repentant Jeb Magruder. And, of course, the defiant ones: H. R. Haldeman, John Ehrlichman and John Mitchell.

This was real afternoon soap opera, a continuing series of confessions and insights into human foibles. And TV made it as big as life.

Ten years later, Moyers' questions are still valid: "Was Watergate a string of deplorable incidents by a handful of men or an attitude toward power and law that could recur? Were the men linked to it acting out of character with the times or responding to something intrinsic in American life?"

As historian Henry Steele Commager tells Moyers, the Founding Fathers' comprehension of history inspired them to build bigger restraints on big government, constant reminders that political leaders were, above all, equally human.

"History had one inescapable lesson," says Commager. "Namely, that power corrupts; power invariably corrupts."

It's clear from Moyers' hour journey that some political leaders resist that temptation less easily than others. It's also clear that the divisiveness from Vietnam and those angry times allowed them to rationalize their actions more easily than others.

"So you come back," says Moyers, "leaving behind the folk stories and myths and wide-eyed innocence, believing that what is best about this country doesn't need exaggeration. It needs vigilance."

The responsibility of documentarians is not just to gather facts, but to disseminate them in a way that the public can best understand them. On Friday night, PBS gets the facts on "Trouble On Fashion Avenue" but fails as a journalistic guide.

The film, part of the "Non Fiction Television" series, is a disjointed, often repetitive examination of New York's $16 billion garment industry, an incurable hodgepodge of slick merchandising, quality goods, bustling activity, trade unionism, imported labor, and sweatshops.

But how many different people need to say that it's a jungle out there to make the point?

Filmmakers Claude Beller and Stefan Moore offer enough glimpses of seedy employment practices, slipshod union vigilance and organized crime influence to make a stinging indictment of how some manufacturers are exploiting minorities in sweatshops to compete with cheap overseas goods during recessionary times.

But, although the program captures some rips and seams, it paints the industry with too broad a black brush, seemingly touching everybody in the garment district. It doesn't capture the frantic flavor of Fashion Avenue nor do justice to the overall industry.

A Simple Burglary

Ten years ago today five men were arrested for burglarizing the office of the Democratic National Committee. Today few people can remember the names of the Watergate burglars though their crime led to the resignation of a President and the imprisonment of more high government officials than did any other scandal in U.S. history. In 1972, the Teapot Dome affair led to the conviction of Harding's Secretary of Interior for accepting bribes. During the Credit Mobilier scandal of 1872, Grant's Vice President and other officials were accused of accepting bribes but no one was arrested. Watergate was a boon to the publishing industry, however. No other event in recent history spawned more best-selling books.

Opening lead: Ace of ♠

Some players find the darndest ways to lose tricks. This hand is from the Women's Pairs Championship of the American Contract Bridge League's Spring North American tournament, held in Niagara Falls in March.

The bidding needs some explanation. The opening bid was a weak two-bid, and South's three heart response was forcing. South simply bid a slam when she found out that her partner held an ace.

West led the ace of clubs, and East signaled with the jack — the two might have been a better choice. Now West continued with a low club, and declarer ruffed East's king. Declarer was Karen Allison of Toronto, who has represented Canada in world championship competition. She was quick to take advantage of that defense.

Declarer ran off all her hearts but one, then cashed the three top diamonds. This was now the position:

Eighth Graders Are Graduated

Eighth grade graduation exercises were held recently at G.R. Whitfield School in Grimesland.

Sheldon Morris gave the invocation and Lee Hardee welcomed the guests. "Building of the Past" was the topic for speaker Renee Rice, Jackie Wendling discussed "Gifts of the Present" and Angela Hardee's topic was "It's Your Choice." Tammy Parker introduced Principal R.R. Reddick.

Certificates were presented to the 54 graduates by Board Chairman Bill Little and awards were given by Reddick, Diane Smith closed the program with the benediction.

The school band performed musical selections throughout the program.

Marshals were Patti Jones, Trudy Coggins, Cynthia Brown, Denise Stancil, Becky Hardee, Tiffany Gatlin and Michelle Medlin. Serving as ushers were John Stepps, Bridgette Daniels, Mike Barnhill, Angela Clark and Chiquita Hansley.

Following the graduation exercises, a reception was held in honor of the graduates and their families.

Shoot-Out Is Ensured

CUMBERLAND, Md. (AP) — The 59th annual National Marbles Tournament almost was lost, but a "generous contribution" from a manufacturer ensured that the cat's eyes, aggies, immies and steelies will keep on rollin'.

Tournament director Gene Mason said Wednesday the shoot-out would be held as scheduled in Wildwood, N.J., from June 21-24.

Earlier, Mason had warned the tournament would have to be canceled this year if a sponsor were not found to foot the estimated $15,000 bill.

Mason said no sponsor has surfaced, but a West Virginia marbles manufacturing company has made a "generous contribution" to the tournament. That, coupled with an increase in the entry fee from $50 to $80 and reserve funds carried over from last year's tournament, would make it possible to go ahead — almost as planned.

A banquet had to be cut to pare the cost of this year's tourney, said Mason, who also serves as this western Maryland city's recreation director. That brought the cost of the tournament down to about $23,000.

Mason said he expected about 65 youths from 15 states to take part.

In previous years, it had been sponsored by IT&T, but the company this year opted not to sponsor the event.
