

End Is In Sight On Pitt's Budget Work

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners is expected to complete most of its work on the 1982-83 budget at a workshop session Friday afternoon following meetings with representatives of the Greenville and Pitt County school systems.

At a budget session Tuesday, commissioners gave tentative approval to a $1.38 million list of expenditures for the Health Department in the coming fiscal year, after cutting three clerk-typists positions, a public health nurse, a social worker, a community health assistant and several other line items from the $1.47 million budget recommended by County Manager Reginal Gray.

The effect of the cuts — which will save some $86,000 in local tax dollars — will be to close the satellite clinics in Ayden, Bethel, Farmville and Grimesland.

Commissioners made the cuts after deciding not to pick up the major portion of a $200,000 reduction in state funding the department will lose in the coming fiscal year.

The budget for the present year totaled $1.53 million and the department has requested $1.49 million for 1982-83.

The department lost eight positions this year after the state withdrew its model health department support and returned control of the department to the county. There will be a $50,000 reduction in state funding for the 1983-84 fiscal year, as the phased withdrawal of state funds is completed.

The board also gave tentative approval Tuesday to an expenditure by Pitt Community College in the coming year of $63,000 to purchase three mobile classrooms for use by the nursing education program at the school and about $12,000 to convert a boiler at the school to burn used cylinder oil and rework the heating and air conditioning system in the White Building. The latter projects are classed as energy conservation measures.

Those expenditures are included in a proposed $562,200 package for the community college next year. The present county appropriation for the school, which requested a 1982-83 budget of $1.52 million, amounts to $440,300.

The board, which has decided not to give county employees an across-the-board cost of living pay hike in the coming year, is expected to give approval Friday to a longevity-incentive pay program for employees.

The longevity program is expected to follow the state's plan of giving 10-year employees a 1½ percent bonus, 15 year employees 2¼ percent, 20 year workers 3¼ percent, and 25 year employees 4½ percent of their salary.

The incentive program under consideration would give county employees a one-step pay hike, based on an employee evaluation system.

The longevity program would cost less than $20,000 in 1982-83, while the incentive program would amount to less than $54,000.

Also under consideration for 1982-83 is the hiring of an engineer who would direct the operations of the county's solid waste collection and landfill operations and serve functions in the planning department.

The final budget for the coming year is expected to total some $25.4 million and maintain the same 54 cents per $100 valuation tax rate as is in effect this year.

State House, Senate Try Resolve Insurance Issue

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state House and Senate planned to try again today to compromise on a new plan for health insurance for teachers and state employees — the last major unresolved issue of the session.

Another sticking point was resolved Tuesday, when Senate leaders relented in their push to transfer budget control away from the state Board of Education.

Both chambers spent most of Tuesday considering almost 100 bills appropriating about $6 million to legislators' pet projects. After clearing away that business, House and Senate leaders looked toward adjournment Wednesday evening.

The House and Senate named a conference committee Tuesday to consider differences over a bill that would set up a self-insurance plan for handling medical and health insurance for teachers and state employees.

As passed by the House, the state would put up money to finance the medical payments and drop a group policy held for 10 years by Blue Cross-Blue Shield. The House version would award a contract for claims processing to a Texas-based computer firm that submitted the low bid, Electronic Data Systems Inc.

The Senate version dropped EDS and would leave it up to a board of trustees of the plan to award the contract for processing claims.

The conferees met briefly Tuesday and considered an amendment offered by Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, that would have required the board select the low bidder, a provision that apparently would have led to the selection of EDS.

But the panel reached no agreement, and House members left saying they were dissatisfied with the offer.

"It was useless," said Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville. "We might as well not have met."

Meanwhile, the Senate avoided a confrontation with the House by withdrawing approval of a bill that would have transferred the fiscal officer of the state Board of Education to the Office of State Budget and Management in the governor's office.

Education officials opposed the move and several House members had prepared for a fight on the measure. They argued that the transfer would violate a provision of the state Constitution giving the Board of Education authority to administer education finances.

Before the House got the bill, however, the Senate voted unanimously to withdraw its approval and adopted an amendment, rewriting the bill to establish a committee to study the question of fiscal control of the schools.

Hardison, who sponsored the bill, said he and other legislative leaders were upset because they have had difficulty getting financial information from the education controller's office.

Israeli Pound PLO And Syrians Trying Advance

By FAROUK NASSAR
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli warplanes and artillery attacked Syrian and Palestinian forces trying to advance into Israeli-held areas in the mountains east of Beirut today. Heavy fighting also erupted near Beirut airport.

Israel said its forces killed two Syrian soldiers and wounded several in the mountain battles. It also said two Israeli soldiers were wounded when their vehicle struck a mine near Rachaiya, in southeastern Lebanon.

The Tel Aviv command said the Syrians tried to push into Israeli-held territory east of Lake Qaroun, 25 miles southeast of Beirut, and then, joined by guerrillas, attempted to move south of the Beirut-Damascus highway in central Lebanon under a covering artillery and tank barrage.

Israeli heavy guns and warplanes were "silencing the sources of fire," the Tel Aviv command said.

The Palestine Liberation Organization said Israeli forces fired intensive artillery barrages in the hills around the Syrian stronghold of Aley, on the Beirut-Damascus highway, and tried to advance from their positions around nearby Mansouriyeh.

Lebanese state radio and television said Israeli warplanes, in action for the second day in a row, struck six locations along a nine-mile stretch of Syrian-held territory between Aley and Hammana, near the vital highway east of Beirut.

Associated Press correspondent Tom Baldwin reported from the vicinity of the Israeli-surrounded presidential palace at Baabda that artillery shells exploded in Syrian-held territory every 10 or 20 seconds.

Baldwin reported that intensive small arms fire could be heard from Beirut's international airport where Israeli and Palestinian forces have faced each other in almost static positions for more than a week.

The Israelis agreed to a renewed cease-fire Tuesday evening, conditional on Syria holding its fire. The truce, mediated by U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib, was requested by Lebanon's National Salvation Council.

The Council met again today to seek an Israeli withdrawal from the immediate vicinity of Beirut, a return of the Palestinian guerrillas to their camps in encircled west Beirut and assumption of responsibility for security in the urban areas by the Lebanese army. Habib joined in the talks.

Lebanese Prime Minister Shafiq Wazzan said afterward the discussions were continuing but "the problem is not easy while we are under Israeli occupation."

The Israelis invaded Lebanon June 6 to stamp out guerrilla bases and get the Syrians to withdraw from Lebanon, where they have maintained an army for six years, ostensibly to police the armistice that ended the 1975-76 Moslem-Christian civil war.

On Tuesday Israeli warplanes, gunboats and artillery unleashed a fierce artillery barrage on Palestinian areas in west Beirut, and Israeli tanks battled Syrian forces along the Beirut-Damascus highway.

A military spokesman in Tel Aviv said 47 Israeli soldiers were wounded during the Tuesday battles with Syria, three seriously. He also said Israeli gunners destroyed several Syrian artillery batteries. The fighting shattered an 11-day-old cease-fire between the two Middle East foes.

Damascus Radio claimed the Syrians killed or wounded 100 Israeli soldiers and destroyed 20 Israeli tanks and armored vehicles in Tuesday's fighting. The radio said Syrian forces responded to the "repeated violations of the cease-fire by the Israeli enemy."

Several hundred Iranian volunteers sent to help Syria fight the Israelis were known to be stationed along the Beirut-Damascus highway. War correspondents who toured the area later said the Iranians may have joined the fighting, which cratered the road with bombs and wrecked nearby buildings.

IN LIMBO

I mailed "Country Music Magazine" a check for a subscription and a special bonus offer, "Opry Stars." I have complained to the local post office and the postmaster has done what he can to try to assist me. The company has acknowledged receipt of my check, but I still have not received the magazines nor the bonus. J.F.

Hotline checked with Family Media, the publishers of Country Music, in early May. We were told then that there were management changes under way and that the publication of monthly issues had been interrupted from September 1981 to April 1982 but would be resumed, with subscriptions moved forward a compensatory number of months. However, when we called late last week to check on your claim, we were told that Family Media no longer manages publication of the magazine; that, in fact, no one does at the present time. "It's all in limbo," the person with whom we talked in the Family Media office told us. She said a new owner "may be in the making, but it's not at all definite." She had no advice for subscribers as to how to communicate, since there appears at the present time to be no one with whom to communicate. Hotline will check occasionally in the future to find out the disposition of the firm and advise readers who may hold subscriptions.

Justices Bar A 'Blanket Rule' On Exclusions

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — States cannot impose a "blanket rule" excluding the public and press from all criminal trials while young victims of sex crimes are testifying, the Supreme Court ruled today.

By a 6-3 vote, the justices struck down a Massachusetts law that made such exclusion mandatory.

The law was challenged by The Boston Globe as an unconstitutional infringement on free-speech rights.

In today's decision, the nation's highest court agreed.

Writing for the court, Justice William J. Brennan noted that "safeguarding the physical and psychological well-being of a minor" is a compelling interest for any state.

"But as compelling as that interest is, it does not justify a mandatory-closure rule," he added.

Brennan emphasized, "A trial court can determine on a case-by-case basis whether closure is necessary to protect the welfare of a minor victim."

The constitutional right to attend a criminal trial was recognized by the Supreme Court in a July 2, 1980, decision. In it, the justices in splintered voting said trial judges may conduct criminal trials, or portions of them, in secret only as a last resort to insure justice.

The 1980 decision, in a case called Richmond Newspapers vs. Virginia, was based in part on free-speech rights guaranteed by the First Amendment and in part on the "unbroken tradition of openness" in American courts.

In upholding the constitutionality of the Massachusetts law last year, the state's Supreme Court said "cases involving sexual assaults" were a notable exception to that tradition.

But the high court today reversed the Massachusetts court's ruling. Brennan's majority opinion offered a ringing reaffirmation — and perhaps a strengthening — of the court's Richmond Newspapers decision.

"Underlying the First Amendment right of access to criminal trials is the common understanding that a major purpose of the amendment was to protect the free discussion of government affairs," Brennan said.

A TALE OF TWO MOTHERS

ADOPTED BROOD — Perched on a dozen and four Cornish hen eggs and one guinea egg, the mama duck above patiently waits for the remainder of her adoptive children to hatch, while the biological mother (right) looks on possibly with wonder at her full-time babysitter. The duck, says Buster Hardee, owner of the birds, laid eggs, but he gathered them without knowing it was setting time for the fowl. She then took over the Cornish hen's eggs, along with one guinea egg and sat on them for four weeks. Although the hen shared the nest with the duck and hatched a couple of the chicks, the duck has done most of the mothering, Hardee says. (Reflector Photo By Mary Schulken)

Dear Abby

Sad Mother Warns: Buckle Up Your Baby

1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Here in New York, the state legislature recently passed a law requiring all car passengers 4 years old and under to be strapped into approved safety seats. There is a $25 fine for parents who have not equipped their cars as yet, and that $25 goes toward the purchase of a seat. I can't believe all the grumbling and complaining about this law.

We moved here four years ago, leaving behind in Ohio a deep, dark secret we never mention here. Six years ago I was driving my 6-month-old daughter, unbelted, sitting in her carrier beside me. Five blocks from home, I was broadsided by a mail truck. My car was flipped over twice, and my precious baby girl was tossed around inside like a pingpong ball. She died 72 hours later of massive head injuries. (I was told it was a blessing — that she would have been a "vegetable" had she lived.)

Going home to an empty nursery drove me crazy with guilt. I had always been so careful. I had padded her crib, made sure she had only the safest toys, guarded her with my life and loved her with all my heart. If I had only known what I know now, she would have ridden home from the hospital as a newborn baby in a safety seat instead of in my arms.

We buried the truth with Tina and moved here to escape the memories. No one here knows we ever had a child. My husband finds it too hard to talk about. Since I can't tell the story, I beg you to do it for me, Abby. If it saves only one child's life, Tina's death will not have been in vain.

LEARNED TOO LATE

DEAR LEARNED: My heart goes out to you and your husband. But since you are still not able to talk about your loss, it is apparent that you have not yet worked through your grief and accepted it, which you must do in order to "get over it."

Get in touch with "Compassionate Friends," P.O. Box 1347, Oakbrook, Ill. 60521, a supportive group of people grieving over the loss of a loved one. Please include a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

DEAR ABBY: Ours is not an ordinary problem. We have a home in the country very near my husband's overweight brother (almost 400 pounds). We moved into our brand-new home a year ago. The first day "Brother" stepped on our porch, he broke the steps. Then he sat on a living room chair, which is part of a very expensive set, and broke one of the legs. There is only one piece of patio furniture he can sit on (the lounge), and the springs are beginning to sag already.

We are having a swimming pool installed now, and no ordinary ladder will hold him, but he keeps talking about how wonderful it will be to swim here every day when the pool is finished!

He's a nice person, congenial and intelligent, and we don't want to hurt his feelings, but we can't have him ruining our furniture and breaking the ladder on our pool.

Can you help us? Don't suggest that we try to get him to lose weight. It's hopeless.

NAMELESS, PLEASE

DEAR NAMELESS: Buy one very sturdy chair for this man, tell him it's "his" chair and ask him to please use it exclusively. (He knows he's overweight and he shouldn't be offended.) Install a pool ladder that can support a 400-pound person. It may cost a little more, but it's preferable to denying a congenial relative the use of your pool.

DEAR ABBY: I have a very delicate problem that requires a lot of tact. My mother is a social bore. When I introduce her to people, the first hour they have her life story, including all her physical ailments. (She's a chronic complainer.)

This embarrasses me terribly, and I notice that people shy away from her. Please tell me what to do.

EMBARRASSED

DEAR EMBARRASSED: I don't know what kind of relationship you have with your mother, but I hope it's honest and open because she needs to be told in a loving (not judgmental or unkind) way to talk less about herself on first meeting. It's not uncommon for a person who's eager to make a good impression to talk too much. Your embarrassment is secondary to the reputation your mother is earning as a bore.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

A snake was sighted in our front yard two days ago by a sober person who has no wish to make a name for himself nor a reason to lie.

He described the snake as "harmless, non-aggressive, and good to have around." He believed that.

He is fooling no one. The snake is 13 feet long, has fangs that drip human blood, is pregnant, and has the capacity to open doors with a pass key.

The trick is not to overreact to news of this sort, which is why I put some distance (15 minutes) between the time I was told about the snake and when I actually contacted my realtor with orders to "Sell!"

It must be apparent that I am terrified of snakes. There is possibly only one thing that strikes more fear in my heart and that is being in a room alone with a person who defends them.

You just know they are people with one ear out of the water when they say things like, "Snakes are good to have around. They get rid of all the unwanted animals."

Think about that for a moment. That's like asking the Boston strangler to come sit with you because you're afraid to be alone at night.

"Snakes make good pets" is another indication you've got a real wacko on your hands. A pet indeed. Pets bark and chase sticks. Pets sit on the TV set and lick their feet. Pets lick your hand when a piece of meat drops from your sandwich onto the floor when the day comes when Barbara Woodhouse slips a chain around a snake's neck and shouts, "Walkies!" I'll consider it a pet.

The person who really sends me out the door is the serpent lover who says, "They fear you more than you fear them."

Did you ever see a snake spot a human being and run on water to get away from him? Did you ever see a snake hearing the words, "Is that a person in the grass?" hyperventilate and sink into a coma?

The last person who said to me, "You can overcome your fear if you touch them," is still standing there, holding a snake . . . in the home where he belongs.

Bridge Work Needed

Here in the South we like to talk about the crumbling cities of the North. New York's major thoroughfares are falling apart, we lament. The subways are archaic and need billions for modernizing. Bridges in the New York area were built for traffic of 75 years ago and badly need work.

New York does, indeed, have problems, but we had better take a closer look at home. A recent report shows that North Carolina has the highest percentage of inadequate bridges in the nation. Some 75.7 percent of the state's bridges are classified as inadequate, a spokesman for the Highway Users Federation says.

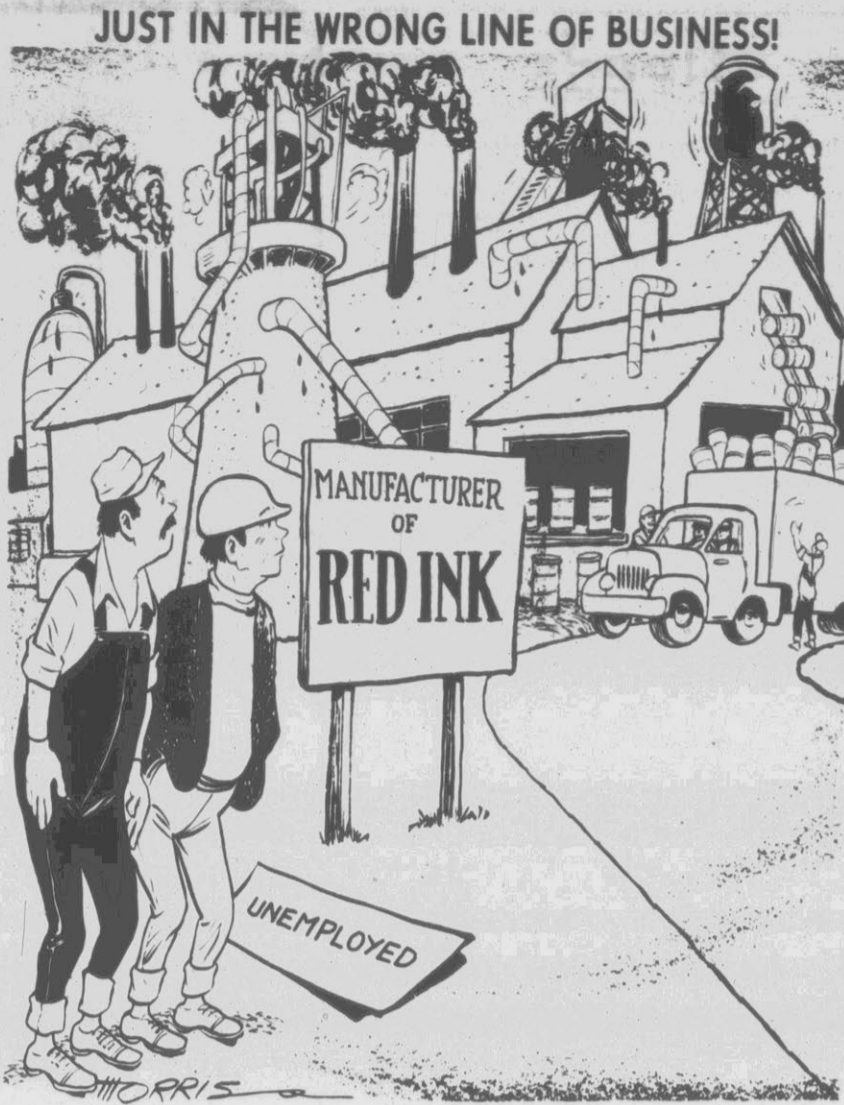

There were 15,398 bridges in the state in December 1981 and 11,373 were considered deficient.

A spokesman for the N.C. Department of Transportation said the state has many old bridges and deficient ones are being replaced.

Perhaps it is not surprising that so many bridges in our state are deficient. With our large highway system there are many bridges across rivers and creeks, as well as major bridges across waterways of the east. Many wooden bridges remain from the days when their roads were unpaved.

Nevertheless the bridge problem is one that we cannot ignore. Highway funds are tight now and the situation is not expected to improve. Yet there are hundreds of bridges that need replacing at great cost. Obviously a regular program of bridge replacement is preferable to letting the situation deteriorate to the point where a huge bridge construction program will be needed to make our roads reasonably safe.

A War Game For Today

"All right we're going to war game it today. Get out your pads and pencils. We are the superpower Alpha, and the enemy is the superpower Beta. Both sides have enough stuff to blow each other off the face of the Earth. What do we do?"

"We stay clear of each other as much as we can."

"Right. Now a mini-power named Omega comes to us and says it wants to be our friend. How do we show our gratitude?"

"We give the people a few weapons to defend themselves against Beta."

"Correct. Here is where it starts getting difficult. Another mini-power named Delta comes to us and says they also want to be our friends. What do we do about them?"

"We give them a few weapons, too."

"Why?"

"Because if we don't, Beta will."

"All right, let's move along. We've sold Omega weapons and we've sold Delta weapons. What do we do next?"

"We bring their military people here to teach them how to use them."

"And then what happens?"

"Each side thinks we've sold better weapons to the other, and demands more powerful stuff."

"Do we sell them the better equipment?"

"Yes, because the more equipment we can sell a mini-power, the cheaper it is to build military stuff for ourselves. Also the more Alpha equipment they have, the more dependent they become on us as a supplier."

"So politically the best way to win the hearts and minds of people is by loading them down with arms."

"Everyone knows that, Professor. I thought you said this was going to be difficult."

"The game isn't over yet. Now Alpha has supplied tack Delta, because they consider Delta a bigger threat to them than Beta?"

"We tell Omega to desist."

"What if they refuse?"

"We point out that according to our military agreement, they were only supposed to use our equipment to defend themselves against Beta."

"What if they tell us to stuff the agreement?"

"They can't tell us to stuff the agreement because we're a superpower, and no one talks that way to a superpower, because if they did we could wipe them off the face of the Earth."

"But we can't wipe them off the face of the Earth, can we?"

"I guess not. But we can cut them off from future supplies."

"But if we do that, Beta, Theta and Pi will step in and fill the void, and we would have lost a friend, and also one of our best customers."

"So we have to support Omega in its war against Delta?"

"Not necessarily. We don't want to lose Delta to Beta either."

"Then we have no choice but to let the two mini-powers fight it out with our equipment until one side wins?"

"Anybody got any better ideas?"

"Couldn't we take it to the United Nations? They're paid to keep peace."

"We could but it wouldn't help."

"So what's the solution, Professor?"

"There is no solution."

An Equal Right Is Upheld

The United States Supreme Court last week ruled that mentally retarded persons who are committed to state institutions will have to be provided training and education, as well as food, housing and medical care.

It is, of course, nothing more than what such citizens are entitled to as equals to other citizens under the Constitution.

The Supreme Court has grown more conservative and less activist, reflecting the times and our aging population.

Whether a justice is liberal or conservative, however, matters far less than whether he or she has a fierce belief in and devotion to the rights our Constitution guarantees us.

We believe in this case the Supreme Court has adhered to the Constitution.

THIS AFTERNOON

Gilmore's Worry

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR

RALEIGH — For the past seven months, Tom Gilmore has been trying to whip up public sentiment against a constitutional amendment that would give legislators four-year terms. His cause has experienced considerable success. The Democratic and Republican parties and most of their county and congressional district units have come out in opposition to the amendment. Most state newspapers have editorialized against longer terms and 200 former legislators last week signed statements opposing the idea.

There is no organized effort to get the amendment passed. A few legislators are speaking for it but most have run for cover in the face of unfavorable comment on the amendment. So why is Tom Gilmore still nervous about the June 29 vote on the amendment? Turnout.

Gilmore has no doubts that the public at large opposes longer terms. But even in good years, only a small portion of the public goes to the polls. There is support for the amendment and Gilmore worries that, if there is a small turnout, this support could be enough to ratify it. Proponents had hoped to keep debate on the amendment to a minimum, he says, in the hope that voters would go to the booths unaware of the proposal. In such a case, they'd be likely to follow a North Carolina tradition of ratifying practically every amendment proposed. (Of the last 24 dating back to 1968, 22 have passed, one has lost and one was made moot by a U.S. Supreme Court ruling.)

There is considerable reason to think the vote on this and the other four amendments on the ballot will be below even the dismal turnout such amendments usually receive. First of all, primaries usually draw fewer voters than general elections. All of the other 24 amendments were voted upon in November and all but the 1977 amendments had a federal race at the same time to help draw voters to the polls.

This isn't even a particularly interesting primary. For the first time since 1970, there is no statewide race on the primary ballot — no governor or U.S. senator. Congressional races head up the ticket but only in a few districts are there interesting primaries. A number of legislative districts are without good intra-party races. Many regular voters will see little reason to go to the polls.

June 29 is a bad date. School is out and the Fourth of July falls on the following weekend. Many people will be on vacation. College students, many of whom vote at school, are home. And, with the primary date having been changed several times this year, some voters are still confused over the date for the primary. In all, Gilmore predicts 800,000 fewer voters than in November 1980.

But getting people into the booths is only half the problem. Since 1968, no constitutional amendment has been voted upon by more than 70 percent of the people who voted on those days. People aren't familiar with the amendments or they don't understand what they read on the ballot, so they leave the booth without voting on the amendments. The two amendments on the 1976 ballot were voted on by only

Other Editors Say A Flawed Ruling

(Greensboro Daily News)

Three to ten million aliens are living illegally in the United States. Do they deserve the same constitutional privileges that other Americans enjoy?

The U.S. Supreme Court said yes last week, at least in one key case. By a vote of 5 to 4, the Supreme Court overturned a Texas law that had denied free public education to the children of illegal aliens, most of whom are Mexicans. Texas must now educate from 10,000 to 100,000 children (estimates vary) belonging to parents who have crossed our borders illegally.

The ruling establishes a major precedent. It marks the first time the Supreme Court has granted the Fourteenth Amendment's "equal protection of the laws" to persons other than American citizens and legal aliens. It has done so gingerly. The equal protection clause, the court said, applies only to children of illegal aliens and not to illegal aliens themselves.

Yet some constitutional experts predict the ruling will have far-reaching consequences. It will encourage illegal aliens, they say, to make additional claims for other government largesse. The court indicated however, that it would not look favorably on appeals for welfare benefits by illegal aliens.

Be that as it may, the court's ruling has serious flaws. While the decision amounts to good social policy — educating children always is — it also amounts to bad law. The court is saying, in effect, that while it is illegal for these children and their parents to be in the country, the United States must still provide them with certain social services — in this case, free public schooling.

Justice William J. Brennan Jr., writing for the majority, tried to reconcile this conflict by claiming that education is a special case: "Education has a fundamental role in maintaining the fabric of our society."

The problem with Brennan's argument is that illegal aliens are not lawful members of "our society". What's more, Brennan's statement implicitly suggests that these youngsters and their parents will continue living here — even without benefit of lawful residency. It makes us wonder if immigration laws count for anything.

Omega and Delta with guns, missiles, ships, submarines and airplanes. We also have assured both Omega and Delta that an attack on them would be considered an attack on us. We, of course, had Beta in mind when we made these assurances. Have we done the right thing?"

"Of course. The more countries we can line up against Beta, the safer we will be."

"On paper it looks good. But now we get to the war game problem. What happens if Omega takes our equipment and uses it to at-aggregate. The upcoming tax cut, for example, might not provide you enough money for a cab ride, but it aggregates to billions of dollars.

But Dunkelberg and many other economists observe that the whole story isn't in the aggregates, because they too can mislead. Overall economic numbers can improve without the mass of Americans improving their lot.

Sindlinger and Company, a market and economic research company, has pointed out for some time that while most Americans can be struggling a smaller percentage at the top probably never had it so good. It may all average out in terms of numbers, but certainly not in individuals.

There is the employment-unemployment situation. Can an economy be considered to be moving ahead when more than 10 million Americans are without jobs? Statistically, yes, but only because statistics, if not handled properly, can hide the underlying problem of unemployment.

"Unemployment is fundamentally an issue of income distribution," says Dunkelberg. What it means, he says, is that in the aggregate you have the same labor costs by reducing everyone's wages 10 percent or by employing 10 percent of the work force.

In other words, he suggests, there still appears to be a sizeable wage adjustment ahead for the American economy if it is to approach that old goal of full employment, which used to be measured as low as 3 percent.

Another worrisome aspect to recovery, as measured by statistics on retail sales, is that it is so totally consumer-based. You will recall that the goal of the existing economic program was to spur industrial investment rather than consumer spending. But capital investments are almost dormant. Instead of raising spending plans, business is cutting.

That raises two important questions: How long can a consumer-led recovery proceed with an impoverished industrial base that is unable to produce products efficiently; that is, without more inflation ensuing?

Going On An 'Offensive'

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — On the defensive for months, the Reagan White House will try to take the offensive next month by claiming credit for the tax cuts and Social Security boosts going into effect July 1.

"The ordinary American is likely to find his pay check a little fatter on July 1," one presidential adviser told us, "and we want Ronald Reagan to get credit for it." A news "event" with the president explaining the glad tidings is planned for California July 1. Beyond that, presidential aides are hard at work dreaming up a "July offensive" to publicize the benefits.

Such an "offensive" is made necessary by the fact the administration has no plans for any policy change despite the dreary economy. Senior officials say it is too late now to have any impact on the 1982 campaign.

A Poll From Strom

Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina salvaged a Republican chance to pick up a U.S. Senate seat in Virginia when he slipped independent Sen. Harry F. Byrd a private White House poll revealing bleak prospects if he sought reelection this year.

The poll showed Byrd running first against two farless-known opponents, Democratic Lt. Gov. Richard Davis and Republican Rep. Paul Trible, but only by the slimmest of margins. That contradicted claims by Byrd's conservative backers in Virginia that he could not lose. Thurmond's evidence that the veteran senator would have lots of trouble winning may have been conclusive in Byrd's decision to stick to his retirement.

Had he run, national Republican officials were convinced Democrat Davis would have been a sure winner. The only battle would have been between Trible and Byrd for second place. With Byrd out, Trible enters the race as a slight favorite.

Targeted Attorney General Attorney General William French Smith, President Reagan's close friend and personal attorney, has replaced Secretary of State Alexander Haig as the designated target in the Cabinet for White House slurs.

White House aides have been volunteering to reporters comments derogating Smith's competence, intelligence and general ability to run the Justice Department. They leave no doubt that the reorganization of the Reagan administration expected after the 1982 election ought to include Smith returning home to California.

Fairly or not, the Justice Department suspects the source of the anti-Smith comments is James A. Baker III, White House chief of staff. Suspicions there are fanned by speculation that Baker has his eyes on succeeding Smith as attorney general.

Supply-Side Feuding

The fact that Lewis Lehrman won official party endorsement for governor of New York in a spectacular state convention victory without any help from Rep. Jack Kemp did not ease the tense relationship between the two suppliers.

At a private Washington luncheon several weeks earlier intended to patch up their differences, Lehrman thought Kemp had promised to endorse him before the convention. Kemp thought he had conditioned that endorsement on conclusion of congressional reapportionment in New York, which is still pending. So Kemp was silent while his fellow Erie County (Buffalo) Republican delivered a solid bloc against Lehrman at the state convention.

The two key conservatives can still get together if Kemp gets aboard the Lehrman bandwagon before the Sept. 7 primary (providing there is still an opponent against Lehrman). But for now, the atmosphere is colder than ever.

Ambushed 'Boll Weevils'

Conservative Rep. Ron Mottl, the Northern "bollweevil" congressman edged out in the Ohio Democratic primary June 8, was the victim of a well-executed ambush conceived by Tim Hagen, the Cuyahoga County (Cleveland) Democratic chairman.

Mottl, fearing his prospects against a labor-backed opponent, had planned to run as an independent if Hagen launched a campaign against him. But Hagen waited until the 11th hour to enter his friend, County Commissioner Edward Feighan — too late for Mottl to withdraw. Ohio law prevents an independent candidacy for the loser in a party primary election.

A footnote: The White House also was taken by surprise. Reagan political operatives would have provided technical assistance to Mottl (as they did to Democratic Rep. Phil Gramm in Texas) had they known he was in trouble in his suburban Cleveland district.

Search For Economic Recovery

By JOHN CUNNIFF

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The search is underway for an economic recovery, and nothing is overlooked, not the slightest fraction of 1 percent that in other times might be viewed as insignificant.

You might not have noticed any meaningful change, but then you are not observing things as closely as they are in the White House and on Wall Street, where even a piece of economic dust is examined for portents.

Evidence uncovered so far includes a 0.7 percent rise in personal income and a 1.3 percent rise in consumer spending during May, higher retail sales and a slowing of the decline in industrial production.

All this, suggests Malcolm Baldrige, the commerce secretary, might result in a rise in gross national product of 0.5 percent to as much as a full percentage point in the current quarter, which ends next week.

So why haven't you noticed it? Because, suggests William Dunkelberg, a Purdue University economist, you are but one bit in what makes up the aggregate. The upcoming tax cut, for example, might not provide you enough money for a cab ride, but it aggregates to billions of dollars.

But Dunkelberg and many other economists observe that the whole story isn't in the aggregates, because they too can mislead. Overall economic numbers can improve without the mass of Americans improving their lot.

Sindlinger and Company, a market and economic research company, has pointed out for some time that while most Americans can be struggling a smaller percentage at the top probably never had it so good. It may all average out in terms of numbers, but certainly not in individuals.

There is the employment-unemployment situation. Can an economy be considered to be moving ahead when more than 10 million Americans are without jobs? Statistically, yes, but only because statistics, if not handled properly, can hide the underlying problem of unemployment.

"Unemployment is fundamentally an issue of income distribution," says Dunkelberg. What it means, he says, is that in the aggregate you have the same labor costs by reducing everyone's wages 10 percent or by employing 10 percent of the work force.

In other words, he suggests, there still appears to be a sizeable wage adjustment ahead for the American economy if it is to approach that old goal of full employment, which used to be measured as low as 3 percent.

Another worrisome aspect to recovery, as measured by statistics on retail sales, is that it is so totally consumer-based. You will recall that the goal of the existing economic program was to spur industrial investment rather than consumer spending. But capital investments are almost dormant. Instead of raising spending plans, business is cutting.

That raises two important questions: How long can a consumer-led recovery proceed with an impoverished industrial base that is unable to produce products efficiently; that is, without more inflation ensuing?

The intense search for evidence of economic recovery, and the hopes that it will come, tend to overwhelm all other aspects of a forecast. Many forecasts, though bullish for the short-term, are qualified. A good many economists see any consumer-led recovery petering out by the end of the year, to be replaced by sluggishness or even more recession.

Among the things pointed out by these forecasters is that the much damage has been done to industry over the past few years, and that the damage might continue.

Typical of comments is that inflation is down not because of economic improvements but because industry has been starved of its ability to produce, expand and employ. Bankruptcies are at rates unseen since the Great Depression, and statistical evidence shows that much of what industry borrows is not for improvement but only to pay current bills.

But, it appears, when you need recovery, as Washington and Wall Street do, you look hard and you shout loudly, and you don't talk much about the base on which the recovery is being built.

Vast Fast

For the world's 723 million Moslems today is the beginning of Ramadan, the ninth month of the Islamic lunar calendar. According to tradition, the Koran was revealed to Mohammed during this month. To commemorate the event, adult Moslems abstain from all food, drink, tobacco and sex for the entire month — but only during daylight. As soon as it becomes so dark that the eye cannot distinguish between a black and a white thread, Moslems may at last quench their thirst and fortify their bodies until dawn brings a new day of fasting. Although the observance varies in strictness from place to place, all Moslems welcome the Feast of Id-Ul-Fitr which spells relief from Ramadan's rigors.

Stable Hiring Activity Seen

Employers in the Greenville area predict stable hiring activity for the next three months, according to a quarterly survey conducted by Manpower Inc., the world's largest temporary hiring service.

Rebecca Ball, manager of the Greenville office of Manpower Temporary Services, said a survey by Manpower's headquarters staff in Milwaukee, Wis., shows that "22 percent of the area employers polled plan to hire additional workers during the third quarter of 1982 — the months of July, August and September. Another 9 percent expect staff reductions and 69 percent plan no change in staff levels."

The survey projected "staff reductions" for educators and employers in the services sector. Also, seasonal increases are expected by construction companies.

The Greenville area, the survey reported, shows "results better than those reported nationally and regionally."

Nationally, based on the Manpower surveys, "A dismal employment outlook is predicted in all geographic regions although the outlook is slightly better in Southern states ... the most notable change from last quarter's survey results is in the Western states where new hiring plans are deteriorating."

Manufacturers, too, predict a sharp drop in hiring activity in both durable and non-durable goods with manufacturers of durable goods expected to be more severely affected.

"Overall, 16 percent of manufacturers of durable goods plan to increase staff," but this figure is offset by a segment of "19 percent which expects to reduce its staff," Manpower said.

40 percent of the people who voted for president.

About two-thirds of the voting age population is registered to vote. Maybe one-half or less will vote on June 29. Then only 70 percent of the people who vote will vote on a constitutional amendment. By informal calculation, that means about 22 percent of the voting age population will be voting on the question of four-year terms and only a shade more than 11 percent is needed to win.

Legislators OK Millions For Projects

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State lawmakers turned their attention Tuesday from salary freezes and budget cuts to cloggers, boaters and history buffs clamoring for $6 million in money for special projects.

Most of the projects were boat ramps, historical sites, museums or outdoor dramas. But there also was money for a sweet potato facility in Clinton, the Crabtree Gap Cloggers' trip to Belgium and water facilities for the 300 residents of Stovall.

Tradition dictates that Democrats, who control both the House and Senate, also control the purse strings when dividing money for special "pork barrel" projects aimed at getting votes back home.

About a half dozen Republicans were able to wrangle money for their special projects Tuesday while Democratic budget leaders succeeded in setting aside hundreds of thousands of dollars for their local projects.

The spending comes during a short legislative session in which lawmakers approved a one-year freeze on the salaries of state workers and teachers because of sagging state tax revenues.

Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake, one of the budget leaders, said the House spent $4.5 million on special projects and the Senate spent $1 million. He noted that some legislators collaborated on bills that distribute money statewide or within their combined district.

"The great bulk (of the projects) include some money for statewide social and educational programs," Adams said. He said funding for some special projects approved last year were continued in the main budget bill for 1982-83. Those included drug abuse centers, adult day care centers and foster care programs.

But Rep. Harold Brubaker, R-Randolph, said he believes that, "If a bill has merit it should be part of the main appropriations bill."

Other Republicans complained that the amount of special bills was too large.

"It wouldn't go very far toward making up the deficit of $93 million," Adams said. "You have about $5 million in special bills compared to a $5 billion state budget. You're talking about very little money."

Partisan debate over pork-barrel spending erupted during House consideration of a bill introduced by Rep. Doug Clark, D-Duplin, that would set aside $100,000 for building a state Highway Patrol station wherever there was no station in existence and where the state already had land for a station.

The only place that fit the description, Clark acknowledged, was Duplin County.

"This seems to be leaving the barn door ajar for the cow to jump out of the fence and into the pasture," warned Rep. Howard Coble, R-Guilford, urging legislators to look more closely at the bill.

Coble said that when he first saw the bill, it called for $40,000. But within several minutes, he said he saw that amount increased to $100,000.

"That's $60,000 within a matter of seconds," he said.

But Rep. William Watkins, D-Granville, said the rapid changes were because of a "computer error" and that Coble's criticisms were partisan.

Clark said legislators from his district had been trying to get appropriations for a Highway Patrol station since 1973 and had been sidetracked once by the Republican administration of former Gov. James Holshouser.

"Some people had it easy with special bills but I've had it tough," he said.

The House agreed and voted 98-5 to give Clark the Highway Patrol station.

Other lawmakers took bills that were before the House or Senate and transformed their meaning.

Rep. Alan Barbee, D-Nash, took a bill specifying the number of various publications to be sent to the legislative library and rewrote it to include a $25,000 appropriation to the Nash County Historical Association Inc. for restoration and rehabilitation of Lewis House.

The bills were voted on in groups of more than 50 at a time, a move Republicans charged made it more difficult for legislators to keep a close watch on the contents of the bills.

Baby Whale Is Force-Fed

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A nationwide survey of 3,400 of the nation's construction contractors indicates that 82 percent of the respondents support President Reagan's program of budget cuts, despite what many say are "terrible" business conditions.

The survey, conducted by the Falls Management Institute, found that support for Reagan is high even among those who have been hit hardest by the recession. It said 87 percent of highway contractors and 73 percent of utility contractors, which have been hit hardest by the slump, support his policies.

The larger the contractor, the better business conditions are seen, the survey found. Among contractors with sales of $1 million or less, 64 percent reported business conditions as "poor" or "terrible" while the ratio is 37 percent among those with sales of $30 million or more.

Forty-three percent of the respondents expected lower profits in 1982 than in 1981, while 37 percent expect an increase and 20 percent expect no change, the survey found. Seventy-three percent expected higher construction activity by the first quarter of 1983.

Contractors of all kinds and sizes reported winning formula through a tube for the second time Tuesday afternoon, she said.

"She just finished another feeding. So far she looks good. She's swimming strongly," Ms. Schmit said.

Ms. Schmit said the formula, which first was fed to the calf Monday night when she refused to suckle, was filled with proteins, vitamins and some milk from her mother, Corky, so the baby could build up natural immunity to disease.

"We're hoping she'll start nursing naturally soon. She sticks very close to Corky," Ms. Schmit added.

Ms. Schmit said Corky has tried to nurse the calf, which was born Friday, but the mother does not have help normally supplied by other whales.

"In the wilds another female directs the babies to the mammaries," said Ms. Schmit. "She has been presenting her mammaries, but they are recessed so it's difficult for her (the calf) to find the mammaries."

If the black and white calf survives it would be the first ever to do so in captivity, Marineland officials said. One of Corky's three previous calves died after 15 days because it did not nurse, another died of apparent brain damage and a third was stillborn.

fewer bids during the first quarter of 1982 than during the same period in 1981. Highway contractors fared the worst, with 61 percent winning less than 10 percent of the work bid compared with 49 percent during the first quarter of 1981.

The survey shows that more contractors are bidding for more jobs than they used to. Many are actually bidding less than what the project will cost them, said Robert Andrews, president of Falls.

"The tendency in a depressed market is for contractors to bid wildly on almost any project that comes along," he said. "But to survive, contractors are going to have to downsize and stick to what they do best."

But some industry officials said they thought contractors would be more skeptical about the program, while others thought support among contractors would be even greater than the survey indicated.

"I'm surprised that the percentage is so low," said Courtney Roberts, manager of industrial relations for the Carolinas Branch of Associated General Contractors of America Inc., an industry group.

Recognition In 'History Day'

Five history students from E.B. Aycock Junior High School recently received a superior rating at the National History Day Contest in College Park, Md.

Maya Ajmera, Carol Ambert, Susan Holec, Lisa Pories and Amy VanSoy, all students of Ron Hochmuth, were the first Aycock students to attend the national competition. They won the state competition earlier with a media presentation.

Students from 36 states participated in the contest at College Park June 10-12. There were 46 media presentations were entered.

The Greenville Kiwanis Club contributed $75 toward travel expenses.

Desperate Farmer On Edge Of Bankruptcy

By JULIE HEDGEPEETH
Sampson Independent
CLINTON, N.C. (AP) — If you looked beneath the sweat and dust from the parched fields, you might have noticed the calm panic in his eyes, the quiet dread that he was catching the fast-spreading disease.

You might have recognized the tense strain of a man watching his life's dream constricted in the taut chains of economy and swallowed up into thirst.

But Hush Honrine says you wouldn't have known. You wouldn't have been able to tell that he, like 15 percent of Sampson County farmers, was on the verge of declaring his farm bankrupt.

"Farmers put up a good face. You'd never know when the door's about to close on them," he says. "They're going to scrape and wiggle and turn 'til they can't turn no more."

Honrine declared bankruptcy last January. According to Farmer's Home Administration supervisor William Bailey, 5 percent of Sampson's farmers lost their farms in the last year. An additional 10 percent to 15 percent are "hanging on by the skin of their teeth."

Bailey says more farmers than usual lost their land last year, and the number is likely to keep growing. "In a good year you won't have 2 percent defaulting," he says. With grain prices so low, Bailey can't see much hope for county farmers, who owe his agency a total of $56 million.

Farmers who have given up, like Honrine, have had to face hard times and a drastic shift in lifestyle.

While Honrine once tended 600 or 700 acres, he now farms a leased, 25 acre plot in the Bearskin community near Salemburg. And he has a garden behind his house.

Honrine says five years of dry weather and low prices gobbled up profits and brought on bankruptcy. He says, "A farmer can spend $255 an acre on planting corn. In a dry year, he gets 70 bushels at only $3 a bushel. That's only $210 an acre."

Like other struggling farmers, Honrine found himself imprisoned by a relentless circle of loans. Honrine borrowed money from the FmHA. When weather and prices kept him from paying debts, he took out more loans.

The FmHA's rules tightened the circle around Honrine. When he'd go to borrow money, the FmHA told him he needed collateral. The only collateral they could suggest was more land.

"So I'd jump up and buy more acres. Then they lent me $95,000 to buy the land, and I only needed $20,000 to pay all the bills," Honrine said.

"If they'd just lent what I'd asked for, I'd probably still have went under, but I wouldn't have went under owing as much as I do," he says. He owes the FmHA $400,000 now and would have owed some $350,000 less had he not felt forced to buy collateral.

The circle around Honrine finally squeezed the life out of the farm. Threatened with foreclosure, Honrine declared bankruptcy. At age 35, Honrine gave up the work he had loved for 20 years. The family suffered.

Honrine couldn't make house payments, so the bank foreclosed on his house. Fortunately, Honrine's cousin bought the house and Honrine hopes to buy it back some day. Honrine would like to farm again, but like so many other farmers, his credit and hopes are sagging.

"I wonder if it's worth it to get out there kicking and fighting all over again, with the same chance that I'll lose it all again," he said.

Big Losses In Collisions

An estimated $2,300 property damage resulted from traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Tuesday.

Heaviest damage, according to investigators, resulted from an 11:15 a.m. collision at the intersection of 14th and Elm streets where a car driven by Alan Frederick Broadhurst of 105 Crown Point Road collided with a utility pole, causing an estimated $1,000 damage to the vehicle.

A truck driven by William David Leudesdorf of Cedar Lane Apartments, and a car driven by James William Jones Jr. of Riverview Estates, collided about 8:30 a.m. at the intersection of Dickinson Avenue and Higgs Street, resulting in an estimated $200 damage to the Leudesdorf vehicle and $275 damage to the Jones car.

Officers said cars driven by Pauline Hall Johnson of Roxobel and Pedro Wilks of Farmville collided about 10:13 a.m. at the intersection of Dickinson Avenue and Memorial Drive, causing $200 damage to the Wilks car and $225 damage to the Johnson vehicle.

An estimated $200 damage resulted to each of two vehicles involved in a 12:15 p.m. collision on Fifth Street, 300 feet west of the Pitt Street intersection.

Police identified the drivers involved as Charles Eugene Connelly of 349 Circle Drive and Barry Sukoneck of Greenville.

Thousands Of Acres Devoted To Sunflower Seeds

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

In Edgecombe, Halifax and Nash counties, field after field of sturdy, brilliant gold sunflowers now stand tall, the heavy heads rich with fat, edible seeds. Within these three counties, 5,000 acres of land normally planted to corn have been put into sunflowers this year.

Bill Hux, a 55-year old farmer who lives in Roanoke Rapids and farms in the area around the town of Halifax, has been one of the prime movers in getting farmers to consider sunflowers as an alternative to planting excessive acreages of corn. In a telephone interview, Hux talked about the benefits to be reaped from sunflowers as a commercial farm crop.

"Corn prices are so low, plus the fact that a farmer overplanting his corn base cannot get subsidy, that finding an alternative crop makes good sense," he commented. "For a long time I've been enthusiastic about sunflowers, and in previous years some area farmers have grown some on a trial basis.

"Until this year," Hux added, "we didn't have a specific contract for the sunflower seed. This year, we have a contract with the National Ag Commodity firm in Norfolk. They have agreed to pay $240 a ton for the seed."

The harvest, according to Hux, will be by turned into food products rather than oil. "They will be used for food items like roasted sunflower seed snacks and other food products." The majority of the sunflower acreage in Halifax County is centered in an area between U.S. 301 and N.C. 48.

In Halifax, a total of 1,300 acres is planted in sunflowers. "In addition to myself, there're nine other growers in Halifax who have signed contracts for sale of the seed," Hux said.

The average yield is expected to be between 1,500 and 2,000 pounds of seed to the acre, and since this year's crop looks exceptionally good, growers can expect to harvest just about a ton per acre.

Harvesting the seed does not require a sizeable outlay of extra capital for special equipment. "We use regular grain harvesters with an attachment that harvests the heads and knocks the seed out," Hux explained.

Due to the relative long growing season in eastern North Carolina, two crops a year can be planted and harvested.

"The harvest of the flowers begins the last week in June and the first week in July," Hux said. "Just as soon as this harvest is over, farmers will disc in the stalks and plant a new crop to be harvested in the fall. So actually, given a little luck, that means with the double harvest each acre planted in sunflowers will bring in about $480."

In addition to acreage planted under contract, Hux also has some acreage devoted to plots of sunflowers planted for research purposes. "I have 27 different varieties planted for testing purposes. The research on these varieties is carried out by the Agriculture Extension Service and N.C. State University," Hux commented.

"I've been farming all my life," Hux said, "and I find it exciting being involved with growing sunflowers. And there's no doubt about it, it's certainly one of the prettiest crops a farmer can grow."

Anyone traveling along the roads around Halifax or in Edgecombe and Nash counties and seeing the fields of golden sunflowers stretching from hedgerows to the woods will agree with Hux that it is indeed a pleasing sight.

In the past few decades farmers in eastern North Carolina have seen the demise of cotton followed by the addition of sweet potatoes and cucumbers as important cash crops to supplement the staple crops of tobacco, peanuts, soybeans and corn. Now it seems evident that sunflowers might possibly become the newest addition to eastern North Carolina's contribution to the national food basket.

SUNFLOWERS ... are being grown on a fairly extensive scale in Halifax, Nash and Edgecombe counties this year, with 5,000 acres under cultivation in the three counties. Halifax farmers have planted 1,300 acres. Harvest begins the last week in June, with a contract with a Norfolk firm to purchase the seed for food items. The photo here is of a field near Halifax.

Beep, Beak In Charity Field

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — Beep, the goose who sports an artificial beak attached with golden screws, is out of the hospital and ready to embark on a series of charity appearances designed to familiarize children with prosthetic devices.

Beep, who lost her mate and most of her beak in an attack by a coyote, was fitted with her new nose June 11 after a beak transplant from a dead goose didn't take. She was released Tuesday.

Grand Avenue Pet Hospital administrator Larry Day, who owns the goose, said Beep had recovered nicely and "now all she needs is a boyfriend."

He said Beep's plans for a Hollywood career fizzled when "The Tonight Show" opted instead for an appearance by a whooping crane.

"Instead of Beep going to Hollywood, I think she has decided to do charity work," Day said. He said he has contacted local hospitals about bringing Beep into children's wards to show young patients there is nothing scary about prosthetic devices.

Soviet Piqued By Columbia Military Experiment

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — With the countdown under way for the space shuttle Columbia's first defense-related mission, the Soviet Union is accusing the United States of making space a new frontier for the arms race.

The countdown began Tuesday for Columbia's fourth and final test flight, scheduled to lift off at 11 a.m. EDT Sunday, and the Soviet Communist Party newspaper Pravda criticized U.S. plans to test military hardware on the flight.

"American brass hats make no secret that they regard outer space as a potential theater of operations," Pravda said. "The Pentagon also is planning to put laser weapons, spy satellites and anti-satellite systems into near-Earth orbit" and it plans "to spread the arms race to outer space."

Meanwhile, the major activity scheduled today for Columbia was the pumping of liquid hydrogen and liquid oxygen into the spacecraft's three power-producing fuel cells. The process takes several hours because workers must condition the fuel cells and lines to the frigid temperatures at which the hydrogen and oxygen is kept. Through a chemical process, the cells produce electricity that operates the shuttle in orbit. It was a malfunction in one of the three cells that forced the curtailment of Columbia's second mission.

The Soviets started a manned space flight countdown of their own Tuesday, aiming for a Thursday launch of two cosmonauts and a French pilot to join two Soviets already aboard the Salyut 7 space station.

Only twice before have U.S. and Soviet spacemen been in orbit at the same time. The first was in 1973 when two cosmonauts were aloft while the three-man Skylab 3 crew was in the midst of an 84-day flight. The other was a joint U.S.-Soviet flight in 1975, when three Americans and two Soviets linked their ships in orbit.

Columbia's fourth test flight, scheduled to end on Independence Day at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., with President Reagan on hand, is to be its last before it begins operational satellite-ferrying missions in November.

The pilots, Navy Capt. Ken Mattingly, 46, and Henry

Hartsfield, 48, plan to test several sensors and instruments for the military for future space satellites. The Defense Department acknowledges the defense payload, but has classified it top secret.

The security label was said to stem mainly from a recent Air Force policy decision to give top secret classification to all military-oriented shuttle cargo.

The Pentagon eventually plans extensive use of the reusable spacecraft to carry communications, navigation, surveillance and other defense satellites. Later, it might test weapons such as lasers, capable of shooting down hostile missiles and satellites.

The Pentagon says its military space hardware is defensive and is needed to counteract the Soviets' own military space effort.

According to congressional testimony and published technical papers, the main elements of the military payload now stowed in Columbia's cargo bay are infrared and ultraviolet sensors being developed for missile and satellite detection and a space sextant for navigation.

Mattingly and Hartsfield have instructions not to discuss the payload on open space-to-ground conversations nor to relay TV pictures of the payload, which weighs several thousand pounds.

Space officials say the military experiments will require little of the astronauts' time.

They will devote most of their activity to thoroughly exercising Columbia's systems in preparation for future pay-for-hire missions. They also will conduct several scientific, commercial and scientific experiments.

Among the experiments is one by the pharmaceutical company, Johnson & Johnson, on separating compounds in a near zero-gravity environment. Another test has to do with manufacturing in space tiny latex spheres which could have important medical applications.

Nine Utah State University students have designed a series of experiments for the mission to see how materials mix where there is no gravity to interfere, and how plant roots behave when there is no gravity to affect their direction of growth.

Because of the military payload, Columbia's countdown is more than 10 hours longer than on its three previous flights. A hold of several hours will be called

Thursday night to open the bay doors and load liquid helium into an infrared telescope that is part of the package.

Mississippian Is Junior Miss

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — The 1982 America's Junior Miss, 18-year-old Susan Lea Hammett, of Hattiesburg, Miss., said it was the "joy of the Lord" that helped her through two hectic weeks leading up to the pageant.

Miss Hammett, who won the crown Tuesday after performing a song she wrote, titled "First Love," told reporters she was looking forward to some sleep.

"Right now, I'm thankful and stunned and kind of tired," she said.

One of 52 contestants in the 25th annual pageant, Miss Hammett won a $25,000 scholarship along with the crown. She plans to attend Louisiana State University in the fall.

First runner-up was Mary Jamie Hendrix, 19, of Rainsville, Ala., followed by Elizabeth Ann Walker, 19, of Omaha, Neb. Both received $5,000 scholarships.

Other finalists were Lisa Annette Kleypas of Carlisle, Mass., and Lorna Irene Revere of Dayton, Ohio.

Miss Hammett, a graduate of Hattiesburg High School, said her religious beliefs helped her through the pressure of the pageant which awards teen-aged girls who have achieved academic excellence.

"The joy of the Lord was definitely my strength," she said. "People don't realize how rough it has been the last two weeks."

The 1982 Junior Miss pageant was hosted by actor Michael Landon and televised nationally on CBS.

"I like working with these girls," said Landon, hosting the contest for the fifth time. "There's so much sincere warmth, so much hugging."

Miss Hammett was crowned by the 1981 Junior Miss, Kim Smith of Raleigh, N.C.

"I'll be sad to leave, and I'll probably be disoriented for a couple of days — no, weeks — but then I can start concentrating on my dancing career," Miss Smith said.

In addition to the finalists, five other contestants won awards and $5,000 scholarships.

Windy Sue Whitesel of Springfield, Va., won the Spirit of Junior Miss award on a vote by the contestants.

The other winners and their categories were: Cathy Anne Montgomery, Anchorage, Ky., scholastic achievement; Lorraine Frances Crever, Hugo, Minn., physical fitness; Kimberly Kay Dunn, East Hartford, Conn., poise and appearance; and Sharlene Wells, Salt Lake City, creative and performing arts.

Bank's Exhibit Of Art Cut Short By Schedule

Originally, the North Carolina National Bank Traveling Art Exhibition: 198-1982 was scheduled to be on view at the Greenville Art Center through the month of July. Due to a scheduling conflict, NCNB has had to curtail the Greenville showing, ending it on June 30.

About two dozen artists are represented in this handsome show that leans strongly toward the new realism now coming to the forefront in American art. Landscapes, flowers, buildings are easily recognizable subjects. Most are painted in flat, sharply defined areas that depend heavily on coloring.

This traveling show offers a fine opportunity to view a cross section of the work of young and not so young American artists, with North Carolina artists forming a sizeable number of those represented. Among the Tar Heel artists is veteran Claude Howell who has two recent paintings of fishermen in stunning shades of blues. The well known New York artist, Alice Neal, has a fine silkscreen of a vase of flowers on a cube, and James Kelly of California is represented by two of his stylized landscapes composed of flowing pastel forms. A fascinating study of clouds with a single curled leaf floating in the foreground is the work of Stanley Townsend

Trying To Delay Postal Increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Postmaster William F. Bolger says the U.S. Postal Service is trying to delay another rate increase until 1985, about year beyond what he previously had said was planned.

"I'd love to go as far as possible. I've set the goal for our management people of going until 1985," Bolger said Tuesday in testimony prepared for the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee.

Bolger had previously said that the next rate increase would be put off until at least November, 1983, and that he hoped it would not be until sometime in early 1984.

One work by an earlier artist, French master Georges Braque is included, a lithograph study of a stained glass window.

Collagraphs, oil pastels, a large delicate pencil portrait, and several photographs are included in the show. The single piece not a painting or photograph is a landscape of heavy woven fabric.

Gallery hours are 10 to 6 daily, and from 11 to 3 on Saturday (closed Sunday and Monday).

This is a rewarding show, one that affords insights to one phase of contemporary American art.

Candidates Talk School Issues

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Six candidates for the Greenville City School Board expressed their views and opinions on city school issues at a candidate's forum Tuesday night sponsored by the Pitt County League of Women Voters.

The forum, held at the First Presbyterian Church, was presided over by league president Rhea Markello, with Ruth Trevathan moderating, and Edith Webber serving as time keeper.

The forum was structured with each candidate given a block of time to make statements, followed by a question and answer session from the audience. All six candidates for the school board attended. Four of the candidates — Penny Dunn, Wilson Rhodes, George Williams and Mary Williams — are seeking election to the board for the first time. Two candidates, Erma S. Carr and Donovan Phillips, are incumbents.

"Mrs. Carr, a retired teacher and a member of the school board for the past year, is a native of Winston-Salem who has lived in Greenville since 1947. "Greenville has a tradition of excellence, has been able to secure good teachers and offer programs beyond what the state requires," Mrs.

Carr commented. Like those who followed her, she stressed that "declining enrollment is resulting in declining revenues which in turn is creating problems in existing programs."

"Mrs. Dunn, a Pitt County native and bookkeeper in a local business, remarked that "declining enrollment and declining revenues call for solutions from the public sector. We all say there cannot be a tax increase, so increased productivity, achieving more with funds available is essential." She added that one phase she thinks has not been explored sufficiently "is a closer educational relationship with Pitt Community College."

"Phillips pointed out that "declining enrollment is a definite problem. We are tied to tight funding at a time when costs are not stable. We have cut everything we can cut and used all the expertise available from all sources." The question of merger, Phillips contends, "is inevitable. It is unfair not to have the best of both systems for all students, but it is a long process, a matter of consolidation step by step."

"Camden County native Wilson Rhodes, a resident of Greenville for 31 years, focused on aspects of vocational education, a factor he considers vital in the total educational program. "I have been close to the schools for years, closely involved in having trained 16 students through the industrial training program," he said. On merger, Rhodes "sees the need for not making quick decisions. It's necessary to see the reasons for consolidation. I feel the first need is to align the city school district lines with the city limit lines."

"ECU faculty member George Williams, also a Camden County native who has lived many years in Greenville, centered his remarks on his belief that a school board member "must be willing to serve professionally, to sacrifice considerable time in order to serve effectively." Williams added that because of his long career in education — at the junior and senior high school levels, then at the university level — "I have sound qualifications that give me insights into the needs of the Greenville city schools."

"Candidate Mary Williams, a Pitt County native and a librarian at ECU, thinks that "merger may or may not be the answer to our problems. It's going to take some careful study. I'm willing to hear all the facts, to compare ideas, and then form my convictions." Mrs. Williams also noted "that for me, one of the most important things in education is the simple basics, the three R's. We have got to, above everything else, teach children the art of reading, writing and arithmetic." In the question and answer session following individual statements, candidates were asked more questions about merger, the feasibility of the open classroom concept at Middle School, their opinions on bond issues, and their thoughts on the day to day problems in the schools relating to discipline, the drug problem and views on the role of counseling in the schools.

Soviet Pipeline Behind Schedule

WASHINGTON (AP) — The planned extension of the Soviet Union's natural-gas pipeline into western Europe is "behind schedule" and will be further impeded by recently broadened U.S. economic sanctions against the Soviets, the State Department says.

Responding to West German criticism about the sanctions, department spokesman Dean Fischer said Tuesday that the decision to broaden the sanctions was essential to underscore "deep dissatisfaction" with the situation in Poland since the military crackdown there in December.

University Job For Waldheim

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Former United Nations Secretary General Kurt Waldheim will join the faculty of Florida State University this fall as a visiting lecturer on international relations and law.

The appointment of Waldheim, an Austrian who served as the U.N.'s top diplomat from 1971 until last year, is "as meaningful" to the university as any in its recent history, FSU President Bernie Sliger said Tuesday.

"These students will have the advantage of the wisdom and experience of a man who for more than 35 years has been in diplomatic service to his country or to the international community," Sliger said.

Unable To Move Needed Data

WASHINGTON (AP) — The most common problem uncovered in recent test exercises conducted at nuclear power plants was the inability of operators to get data quickly to officials who need it, according to Brian K. Grimes, director of Nuclear Regulatory Commission's Office of Emergency Preparedness.

Grimes told the commission Tuesday that a 12-month study ended in April found that up to half of the nuclear plants in the country are "generally deficient" in one or more areas in their ability to respond to hypothetical accidents.

Cutting Out 'The Middleman' In TV Transmission

By NORMAN BLACK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission is poised to push television toward a new future this week, one in which the magic of receiving programs from 22,300 miles in space will become commonplace for the average viewer.

The technology is known as satellite-to-home broadcasting, or Direct Broadcast Satellites (DBS). As its name implies, a DBS system cuts out the middleman transmission role of a local TV station or cable system by providing programming directly to individual viewers throughout the country.

The idea of such service has proven controversial. But if the FCC accepts the recommendations of its staff, it will vote Wednesday to establish ground rules for satellite-to-home broadcasting.

The FCC has already accepted nine applications to build DBS systems and Wednesday's vote could clear the way for conditional approval of those applications. Final approval, however, must await the results of a 1983 international conference that will decide the number of frequencies and satellite orbital positions available to the United States.

If the current timetable is followed, the commission estimates the first DBS systems could become operational in late 1985 or 1986.

The process of providing programs directly from an orbiting satellite to the home depends on special high-power satellites that can beam a signal to the earth with so much intensity that very small antennas can be used.

The DBS applicants — led by the Satellite Television Corp. (STC), a subsidiary of the Communications Satellite Corp., which filed the first application in December 1980 — say they can build satellites with enough power to allow the use of antennas only 2½ feet in diameter.

Such an antenna could easily be installed on the roof of a home, allowing a consumer to receive programming directly from the satellite.

STC has been joined by a number of other huge communication companies as well as some smaller firms in applying for a direct broadcast license. The stakes for each applicant are huge, with the ultimate cost of developing a nationwide system expected to total as much as $1 billion.

Besides STC, the applicants include CBS; RCA; Western Union; the U.S. Satellite Broadcasting Co., a subsidiary of Hubbard Broadcasting; the Graphic Scanning Corp.; the Direct Broadcast Satellite Corp., and Video Satellite Systems Inc. The ninth applicant, Focus Broadcast Satellite Co., wants to offer DBS service by using the satellite of another firm instead of building its own system.

Each of the applicants has proposed a different type of service. Some intend to program each of their three-to-six channels themselves; others propose to lease time to interested programmers. Some propose a subscription service, charging a monthly fee of consumers, while others foresee an advertiser-supported service.

CBS, on the other hand, wants to use direct broadcast to develop a new technology known as high-definition television. High-definition would allow the transmission of a TV picture so sharp and clear it would rival that of a motion picture in a movie theater.

Existing television sets could not display a high-definition picture, however, and the FCC has so far refused to accept the network's position that the satellite systems be reserved exclusively for high-definition.

Each of these proposals presents a policy issue for the FCC. Should direct broadcast operators be treated as regular broadcasters, facing requirements to provide minimum amounts of news and information programming? And however they're regulated, what effect will DBS systems have on existing broadcasters?

And what should be done about the estimated 1,400 to 1,800 radio systems that now rely on the frequencies that would be used by DBS systems? Those private radio systems are used by railroads, electrical utilities, manufacturers, local governments and even publishers who transmit newspaper pages to satellite printing plants.

The National Association of Broadcasters (NAB), that industry's largest trade group, argues only Congress can establish ground rules for satellite-to-home broadcasting. It maintains the entire system of American broadcasting is jeopardized by direct broadcast service, because an operator will have no burden of serving the specific needs of a local audience.

The FCC has already rejected that view once, stating in a Notice of Proposed Rulemaking issued in April 1981: "We believe that authorization of a DBS system would not conflict with the commission's long-standing commitment to local broadcasting."

"Direct broadcast satellites promise to offer valuable services by providing several additional channels of video programming throughout the country," the FCC continued. "In many areas, particularly rural ones, they would offer the only good-quality video reception and might offer the only pay video service."

If that view holds sway Wednesday, satellite-to-home broadcasting could become a reality in 1985.

Tar Heels In Past Threats

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — While a federal jury has spared John W. Hinckley Jr., from serving a prison term in the shooting of President Reagan, a North Carolina man is serving a five-year sentence for threatening Reagan during a conversation about Hinckley's assassination attempt.

And four other North Carolinians have also been charged in separate incidents in past years with making threats on a U.S. president.

A federal jury found Harold Thomas Smith, 35, of Siler City guilty in August 1981 of making an oral threat against a president. Two witnesses at Smith's trial testified that Smith made his threat in April 1981 while eating dinner at the Greyhound Bus Station in Raleigh.

"If I ever get my hands on him (Reagan), I'm going to blow his brains out," Smith was quoted as saying. "The president ought to be killed, and the only thing that Hinckley did wrong was that he didn't kill him."

Smith, like Hinckley, allegedly boasted at the time, "You all will know who

I am one day when I become famous for killing the president."

But Smith never got the chance to carry out his threat. Previously convicted of threatening Presidents Johnson and Nixon as well as two U.S. District Court judges, Smith received the maximum five-year sentence and was committed to the Federal Correctional Institution at Butner, the same facility where Hinckley underwent a psychiatric exam in May 1981.

Four other North Carolinians also have been charged in separate incidents with threatening a U.S. president. Last September, Fred Robert Wise Jr. of Murphy was found competent to stand trial in Jackson, Miss. A Secret Service agent testified that during an interview, Wise told federal officers he had been "hired to kill the president of the United States."

Also last September, a federal grand jury indicted Robert Conrad Jackson for allegedly telling Spring Lake police officers, "I have got to get to Washington to kill the president and no one is going to stop me."

And in yet another case in August 1978, a federal grand jury in Greensboro indicted former mental patient Joseph F. Hurley of Winston-Salem for phoning a Secret Service agent in Charlotte and saying, "Just want to let you know I am going to Washington. I am going to kill the president."

And in January 1979, Wilbert Lee Helms was indicted for making a similar call. Helms served more than a year in prison after pleading guilty to threatening President Gerald Ford. Helms was released from Butner in 1980.

GRIFTON — The Gritton Council of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce will sponsor a candidates' forum for aspirants to the County Board of Commissioners Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the Gritton Elementary School Auditorium.

"The purpose of the forum is to hear opinions and positions of those who are seeking to serve us on the Pitt County Board of Commissioners," the council's board chairman, Ray Wooten, said.

Some of the issues that will be discussed are: What problems the candidates feel the town of Gritton suffers and how they can be corrected? What can be done to enhance economic development and create more jobs? What programs should be eliminated if federal cuts continue? What do the candidates see as the future plans for Pitt County? Also discussed will be property for capital improvements, consolidation of Pitt County and Greenville school systems and views on agriculture development.

Seven Charged With IBM Electronic Theft Try

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — An elaborate undercover operation that required setting up a bogus computer consulting firm snared 18 Japanese businessmen for trying to steal valuable secrets from IBM, America's largest computer company, the FBI said.

ELECTRONICS EXECS ARRESTED — Federal agents escort two Japanese businessmen from San Francisco's Federal Courthouse after they were arrested on charges of industrial espionage. They were among the group charged with attempting to steal computer secrets from IBM. (AP Laserphoto) employed by two giant Japanese electronics companies, were arrested in California and face trial on federal charges, FBI director William H. Webster said Tuesday.

Arrest warrants have been issued for 12 other people who are in Japan after the elaborate, 8-month FBI undercover operation that required the cooperation of International Business Machines Corp., Webster said.

Japanese officials said in Tokyo that they had not received official word of the warrants from U.S. authorities. Several of the people named are senior officials in the two companies, Hitachi Ltd. and Mitsubishi Electric Corp.

Officials of the two companies in Japan said they were "stunned" by reports of alleged illegal activities, and said they were awaiting further reports from the United States.

The six Japanese seized in the United States on Tuesday included employees of Hitachi and Mitsubishi or their affiliates, the FBI said. The arrests were made in the San Jose area after a $500,000 payoff was offered, the agency said.

Hitachi and Mitsubishi are two of the world's largest suppliers of electronic products, computers and components. Japanese and United States companies are battling over leadership in the electronics field, especially microcomputers.

The defendants are accused of paying a total of $648,000 to an undercover FBI agent to obtain "state-of-the-art" computer technology and manuals for the equipment's use, the Justice Department said. The information would have been useful for the building of computers compatible with those made by IBM, the industry's worldwide leader, the FBI said.

Suspects connected with Hitachi paid $622,000 and representatives of Mitsubishi separately paid $26,000, the FBI said.

"This is a classic example of the value of an undercover operation designed to ferret out the theft of high technology," Webster said. At one point, FBI agent Kenneth C. Thompson said in an affidavit, Hitachi Ltd. senior engineer Jun Naruse and an undercover agent "hid in a darkened office" at an East Coast plant. They got past a security door, and Naruse took photographs of an advanced disc-storage device leased from IBM, Thompson said.

Seven defendants were arraigned Tuesday before U.S. magistrates in California. All were ordered to face preliminary hearings July 1, and all but one was jailed in lieu of bail. Hitachi America Ltd. computer programmer Kunimasa Inoue went free on a $200,000 cashier's check from Hitachi.

Tom Yoshida, president of NCL Data, Inc., of Santa Clara, Calif., was reported to be the only American among the defendants. FBI agents searched his company Tuesday in the investigation. All but one of those arrested are accused of conspiracy to transport stolen property to Japan. Tabassom Ayazi, a student living in Santa Clara, was accused of receiving stolen IBM documents.

Hatano, chief of Hitachi's computer department, said his company does carry out legal information-gathering activities in the United States and said its employees "may have been too eager."

Yoichiro Odagaki, chief of the National Police Agency's international section, said Japan and the United States have an extradition agreement but added, "Japan is not obligated to turn people over to U.S. authorities."

Webster praised IBM for its assistance in the probe.

Japanese Executive Disavows Any Role Of Computer Thefts

TOKYO (AP) — A Mitsubishi Electric Co. executive denied today that any of his firm's employees attempted to steal computer secrets from the International Business Machines Corp.

A Hitachi Ltd. executive said he was "shocked" by charges against 14 Hitachi employees and insisted his company does not engage in illegal activities.

Four Mitsubishi and 14 Hitachi employees were charged in San Francisco

Tuesday with conspiracy to transport stolen property from the United States to Japan, a felony.

One Mitsubishi employee and five Hitachi employees have been arrested and arraigned in San Francisco. Warrants have been issued for 12 others in Japan. A warrant is also out for a student charged with receiving stolen IBM documents.

The FBI said Mitsubishi representatives paid $26,000 and Hitachi $622,000 to an FBI agent for information about advanced IBM computer technology.

Yasukichi Hatano, chief of Hitachi's computer department, said Hitachi does not engage in illegal activities, adding he was "shocked" by the industrial espionage charges.

But Hatano said it is "possible" that Hitachi's employees "may have been too eager" in seeking information.

"If the incident is true, it may be right to suppose that something went wrong in the course of information-gathering activities entrusted to a local consulting company," he said.

Hideo Ohta, managing director of Mitsubishi's computer division, flatly denied that any of the company's employees were guilty of the charges.

Yoichiro Odagaki, chief of the international section of the National Police Agency, said no word has been received from the FBI about the case.

Confession Is Rule Of Chinese Justice

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer
PEKING (AP) — American Lisa Wichser conformed to an ancient tradition in the Chinese system of justice when she made a written confession of spying and, officials here said, begged for forgiveness.

The 28-year-old English teacher's confession — pages and pages, she said — led to her eventual release and deportation earlier this month after being accused of spying into Chinese agricultural policy.

The ancient tradition, although not codified, makes mercy a function of confession and self-criticism a central principle of Chinese justice and political discipline.

China's current top leader, Deng Xiaoping, was forced in 1966 to make a self-criticism after having assailed Chairman Mao Tse-tung.

Self-criticism is a fact of life for convicts behind bars, people who oppose the Communist Party line, young people with too many foreign contacts, authors who write gloomy works and criticize communism.

Hundreds of years ago a defendant who confessed was likely to receive a lighter sentence than one who defiantly maintained his innocence. A repentant murderer, for example, might have been beheaded instead of being chopped into pieces.

In the most famous recent case, Mao's widow, Jiang Qing, was sentenced to death a year and a half ago but was given two years in which to repent, State Councillor Ji Pengfei recently said that whether the death sentence is carried out will depend on "how well she repents." She has refused to admit any guilt.

In Miss Wichser's case, the Chinese Foreign Ministry said authorities magnanimously decided to deport her — instead of more severe punishment — because she "made a confession of the crimes she committed and pleaded for leniency."

She admitted in her confession she had classified documents on Chinese agricultural policy. After her release, she told reporters she did not know it was illegal for her to have them. She also said she was interrogated six hours a day for seven days and signed "pages and pages" of transcripts about her research, studies and personal relationships with Chinese.

Other foreigners, too, have had to make written confessions or self-criticism. More than two years ago,

Bryan Johnson, correspondent for the Toronto Globe and Mail in Canada, complained when China raised the price of an exit permit from 1 yuan to 10 yuan (55 cents to $5.55). He called the Chinese authorities "fascists," he said.

The enraged Public Security Bureau, or police, would not let him leave the country until he made a written self-criticism and an apology that finally satisfied them.

In July 1981, a British student in Shanghai was ordered to make a self-criticism after he scrawled slogans on a blackboard praising the radical, disgraced "Gang of Four," Madame Jiang's group. He finally was ordered to leave the country voluntarily or be expelled.

It was all a bad joke, said Robin Hoggard, but authorities at Fudan University demanded that he write four apologies, each one longer and more grovelling.

"I explained it was a joke with an English friend and I did not believe in slogans," Hoggard said in an interview before leaving. "I wrote I was very sorry if I offended the Chinese people. I realized the act of writing the slogan was unfriendly to the Chinese people and although I wrote it as a joke, I realize it was not a joke."

Although he broke no law, a Chinese youth who talked too much to one American journalist was forced to make repeated self-criticism and ordered to give all the details of his meetings. Each was studied by authorities until they were satisfied that the apologies were thorough and sincere.

A Chinese youth familiar with the ritual says young people advise each other to shed tears during their confession in order to achieve the best effect and get off more easily.

A famous army writer, Bai Hua, had to make several self-criticisms late last year because his play "Bitter Love" was critical of Mao and the Communist Party.

Chinese officials told him to hurry up and go through the self-criticism ritual so that the politically embarrassing and messy affair could be wrapped up quickly.

"I must raise my theoretical level of Marxism-

LISA WICHSER
Leninism," he wrote, "enhance Communist Party spirit and eulogize the struggle for a prosperous China." He praised his critics and gave them "a thousand thanks."

Deng Xiaoping's self-criticism in 1966 was one of many during his turbulent political career.

He castigated himself for opposing Mao and being "a kingdom unto myself."

"My way of thinking and style of work is completely incompatible with Mao Tse-tung's thought," wrote Deng. "I have not raised high the great banner of Mao Tse-tung's thought, nor have I followed Chairman Mao closely."

Recent events have revealed me as an unreformed petit bourgeois intellectual who has failed to pass the tests posed by socialism... Although I have gone astray on the road of politics, with the radiance of Mao Tse-tung's thought lighting my forward path, I should have the fortitude to pick myself up and go on."

Deng was purged, nevertheless. But now that he is at the top of the leadership in Peking, he is working to dismantle the legacy of Maoism.

Should Patients Have Access to Medical Files?

I am a member of a group in our community that is putting pressure on hospitals and doctors to open their files and records on their patients. We feel that these records intimately involve us and that we should not be separated from such valuable information. I have been reading your column for many years and I don't recall you having committed yourself to this issue. —Mrs. N.P.Y., Ohio.

Dear Mrs. Y.:

I know that such pressure groups exist, but I have had no personal contact with a member of such a group asking me to open my files.

You ask for a commitment, and I will give one.

I feel that all of my patients should have access to their files in my office and in the hospital, if they want them. I warn them, however, that reading a doctor's record or a hospital chart is an arduous task. I sometimes struggle for many minutes before I can read my own writing. Now compound this a thousand times and it will begin to approximate the difficulty I have in making any sense of the hieroglyphics that pass as writing on a hospital chart.

The Rosetta stone is often the only way for a person, even one with medical knowledge, to make any sense out of the sequence of most hospital records.

In addition, the written notes of a physician and nurse are usually too complex for the layman to interpret and understand. A descriptive term for a word especially adapted to a physician's vocabulary is meaningful only to the doctor. If any translation is to be done, it must be made verbally — so that the patient and family will not be confused or terrified.

Recently a patient of mine read his own chart, which inadvertently had been left on his bed. He came across my note written as a diagnostic speculation and immediately interpreted that as being the diagnosis of his condition.

The misinterpretation of a phrase or a word can set up a state of uncontrolled anxiety. This anxiety can persist long after the underlying medical condition is cured and the patient once more is returned to good health.

An enormous waste of energy is engendered by patients and doctors who set up independent camps of conflict about this problem.

Frankly, I don't think it's worth all the energy. It is only in rare instances that doctors, after long discussions with families, will, out of kindness, expose the patient to terrifying information. This is a protective device for patients.

My own experience is that there would be no advantage, in most instances, for patients to review my records or the hospital records. Any knowledge that might accrue to the patient would not alter or in any way affect the program of treatment that had been established.

I do believe, however, that all these records should be made available immediately to doctors who are being consulted for a confirmatory opinion.

Begin Departs After A Confrontation

By W. DALE NELSON
 Associated Press Writer
 WASHINGTON (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin goes home to Israel with pledges of support from the Reagan administration but sharp words from senators upset over the use of American-made arms in Lebanon.

"I think the message he is getting is that Israel is going to have to take a step or two backward," Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., said after leaving a closed-door meeting with more than 30 senators and the Israeli prime minister Tuesday. Senators used strong words to describe the two-hour meeting.

"This is the first time I have seen such a confrontation between the prime minister of Israel and senators in terms of head-to-head disagreement," said Pressler.

"In my eight years in Washington, I have never seen such an angry session with a foreign head of state," said Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass.

"This was the most difficult meeting with a head of state in my experience," said Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y.

Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., said he and other senators "felt very strongly that excessive use of force was involved" in the Israeli military action against Palestine Liberation Organization strongholds in Lebanon.

Begin left Washington for the first leg of his return trip to Tel Aviv shortly after the Senate meeting.

Earlier, he and Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. met and predicted an agreement might be near for the withdrawal of Israeli, Syrian and Palestinian forces from Lebanon.

Haig also echoed the support that President Reagan voiced for Israel after his meeting with Begin on Monday.

At the meeting on Capitol Hill, senators expressed concern about the destruction in Lebanon and the large number of casualties among non-combatants.

Pressler, a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, said some of the sharpest criticism came from senators who usually support Israel.

Begin himself called the closed-door meeting "a very lively discussion" marked by "absolute candor" but said he feels "the majority of the U.S. Senate and House will continue to be friends of Israel."

Sen. Nancy Landon Kassebaum, R-Kan., however, said Begin was "intransigent" and his attitude was "a keen disappointment, I think, to us all."

Sen. James Abdnor, R-S.D., whose parents emigrated from Lebanon, said Begin spoke frequently of Nazi concentration camps during World War II in explaining that Israel had suffered much loss of life and was only defending its people.

Abdnor said he told Begin that he grieved for the scores of Israeli civilians killed or wounded by terrorist attacks from Lebanon, but added, "Mr. Prime Minister, do those relatively few Israeli casualties justify the killing and wounding of hundreds and thousands of Lebanese and Palestinian women and children?"

Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., met separately with Begin and expressed his opposition to the use of U.S. troops as part of a peacekeeping force in Lebanon after the Israelis withdrew.

Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, also met privately with Begin and said he "raised every sensitive question that Berkeley Bans Handguns As Signpost For Calif.

By The Associated Press
 The Berkeley City Council has followed San Francisco's lead and voted to ban the possession of handguns, while a city in California's Sierra foothills is weighing mandatory gun ownership.

The 8-1 vote Tuesday, a day after the San Francisco Board of Supervisors gave initial approval to a similar ordinance, makes Berkeley the third U.S. city to opt for a handgun ban. The other is Morton Grove, Ill.

"The action of Berkeley coming after San Francisco may be the only effective way we can make an impression on the state of California and hopefully on the Congress of the United States," said council member Gilda Feller.

Violation of the law would bring up to six months in jail and up to a $500 fine.

The ordinance takes effect 30 days after its second reading, a formality scheduled within the next two weeks. Handgun owners in Berkeley, a city of 120,000 people, will have 90 days to dispose of their weapons.

Those exempt from law are police, licensed security guards, military personnel, collectors of antique guns, dealers who keep guns at a licensed store and those licensed to carry a concealed weapon.

Police Chief Thomas Johnson said he supports "the idea of tighter controls on handguns" but expects the ordinance to be challenged by those who believe handgun control is a matter for state law.

The lone dissenter on the council, Leo Bach, called the ordinance a "gun confiscation law."

"What we are doing is taking the guns away from

Arafat Asks Percy To Inspect Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Palestine Liberation Organization chairman Yasser Arafat today called on Sen. Charles Percy to visit Lebanon to see how U.S. military aid to Israel was being used to kill Lebanese and Palestinians.

In a statement carried by the PLO news agency, Wafa, Arafat said Israel had estimated the cost of the invasion begun June 6 at more than $1 billion.

"One thus wonders who other than the United States covers these costs," he said.

"I call upon Senator Percy to head a fact-finding mission to Lebanon to witness modern American armaments and advanced technology in use against Lebanese and Palestinian peoples in Lebanon," Arafat said.

Percy chairs the Senate Foreign Relations committee. Arafat said the Illinois Republican had been sympathetic to the Palestinian cause in the past.

"The voice of Mr. Percy is a courageous voice in the present circumstances," Arafat said. "The situation requires effective measures to put an end to this war which is being waged directed and financed with the full backing of the American administration."

Thousands Of Children Flock To Mountain Camps

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer
HENDERSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — For thousands of children all over the country, summer means going off to camp. And for about 6,000 of them, going to camp means spending the summer in the North Carolina mountains.

Summer camps are big business in Western North Carolina, particularly in Henderson County where there are about two dozen camps. The camps offer everything from classes in Indian lore to rock climbing. They attract kids from every state and several foreign countries.

"Some people think of summer camps as babysitters for kids, to get the kids out of their parents' hair for the summer," said Herman Popkin, owner of Blue Star Camps in Hendersonville. "But we're a way of life. When you have kids for a summer, you have to do more than entertain them. You have to teach them something, too, or you won't have them back again the next year."

The area's camps have a wide variety of backgrounds. Some, like Our Lady of the Hills Camp in Flat Rock, have religious affiliations. Others, such as Cedar Rock Wilderness Experiences, specialize in strenuous outdoor activities.

Popkin's 600-acre camp — actually one large camp divided into seven camps by age, grade and sex — is the largest in Henderson County.

Blue Star, one of the oldest Jewish camps in the South, attracts about 2,000 campers each summer and has a staff of 250, including a librarian and several nurses.

The average camp is about 300 acres and attracts about 200 campers ages 7-17 who pay about $500 for a three-week session. Most camps have two such sessions a summer. The camps run from mid-June to mid-August.

The first camps located in the Hendersonville area in the early 1920s, counting on the picturesque setting and cool, clear mountain air to attract campers. Local historians tell about the dozens of trains that clogged the now-defunct Hendersonville train station each June, bringing in campers from all over the country.

"The station was a scene of bedlam, from what I've heard and the pictures I've seen," said Mead Parce, former editor of the Hendersonville Times-News. "You had hundreds of kids arriving with their luggage and the various camp vehicles coming to the station to pick them up. Now it's the (Asheville) airport that's jammed when June rolls around."

The crowds of eager campers delight camp owners, who are reluctant to say how much money their camps take in but who will say that camping is a multi-million dollar business. Nationally, summer camping is a $2 billion industry.

"It's almost impossible to come up with a figure on how much summer camps bring to our city and county," said Ray Cantrell, executive director of the Hendersonville Chamber of Commerce, who said city officials group campers with other tourists. "But it would be safe to say that it runs into thousands of dollars each year."

"In addition to what kids pay to camp, their parents come to visit them and spend money to stay, eat and shop," he added. "And the kids themselves spend some of their money in town. It helps the economy."

The area's unemployment figure also drops in the summer, when camps and tourist-related businesses hire extra help for the summer. Cantrell said the jobless rate usually dips by two percentage points every summer.

Most camps spend $40,000 to $50,000 for food during a summer and about $8,000 for electricity and gas. They pay an average of $2,500 in property taxes. They also pay for miscellaneous services such as laundry and liability insurance.

Salaries for the hundreds of counselors employed at the camps range from $100 a summer for junior counselors to thousands of dollars for specialists.

"We feel like we give the kids their money's worth," said Frank Bell, owner of Camp Mondamin in Tuxedo, just south of Hendersonville. "Our counselors are well trained to teach and make learning fun. We're proud of what we have to offer."

Campers at Mondamin and its sister camp for girls,

Camp Green Cove, live in cabins that house four people.

The current shaky economy has kept some would-be campers at home this year, but camp owners say they have noticed only a slight decline in their business.

"We're off about 5 percent for the first session, but I think we'll make it up in the second session," Popkin said. "We've been here 35

Five Licensed For Milk 'Sale

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The N.C. Milk Commission has licensed five cooperative marketing associations to sell milk to processing plants in the state.

Grady Cooper Jr., the commission's secretary, said Tuesday that the commission also scheduled a hearing with two companies for alleged infractions of milk commission regulations.

The following associations and the processors to whom they will sell milk are:

- Piedmont Carolina Milk Producers Association Inc. of Huntersville, to sell to Kraft Inc. of Charlotte.
- Mid-State Milk Producers Association Inc. of Mount Ulla, to sell to Pet Inc. of Charlotte.
- Capital Area Milk Producers Association Inc. of Wake Forest, to sell to Pine State Creamery of Raleigh.
- Asheville-Charlotte Milk

Producers Association Inc. of Fletcher, to sell to Biltmore Dairy Farms of Asheville.

— Carolina-Virginia Milk Producers Association Inc. of Booneville, to sell to Kraft Inc. of Winston-Salem.

The commission also re-scheduled a hearing with Pet Inc. about alleged sales of milk under base prices. Cooper said that hearing will be July 13.

On the same day, another hearing with Southern Milk Sales Inc. has been scheduled. The San Antonio, Texas-based firm was licensed several months ago to deal with several North Carolina producers.

Cooper said the commission believes the firm may have violated commission regulations by not complying with pay schedules to producers and paying producers by a process not approved by the commission.

Miss Connecticut Regains Her Title

DANBURY, Conn. (AP) — Virginia J. Reichardt, stripped of her Miss Connecticut title for failing to attend several promotional events, has regained her crown and now looks forward to a recording contract.

"I definitely feel this is a victory," Miss Reichardt said outside the Danbury Superior Courthouse on Tuesday after an out-of-court settlement. "I feel that I've been given back what was rightfully mine. There was no just reason for my title being taken away."

Tom Curtis, executive director of the beauty pageant, also was pleased with the outcome.

"We achieved our goal — she won't appear at the pageant," he said. "We didn't think she should stand up there and say she had a wonderful year, because she didn't."

The operators of the Miss Connecticut Scholarship Pageant dethroned Miss Reichardt on June 11, repossessing her pageant automobile, banning her from this year's pageant and telling her to use her $2,000 scholarship by September or lose it.

The settlement returns Miss Reichardt to her throne, with the provisions that she not sue for damages and that she not appear on stage without permission at this year's pageant. The 22-year-old blonde, however, said she would attend Saturday's crowning of her successor.

The pageant's dispute with Miss Reichardt came to a head when she refused to play her guitar and sing country-western songs while wearing her crown at a truck stop.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP)—Stock prices opened broadly higher today, extending a strong advance in the previous session.

Gainers, paced by aerospace and airline stocks, jumped out to nearly a 4-1 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The lift that extended into today's trading was attributed to a 1.4 percent gain in new factory orders for durable goods in May and House passage of a compromise federal budget for fiscal 1983.

But analysts cautioned that continued high interest rates and heavy borrowing plans by the Treasury — keeping upward pressure on rates — could delay a substantial rally in the stock market.

Among the airlines gaining were American 1/4 to 17/8, Eastern 1/4 to 5/4 and UAL 1/4 to 16/8.

On the downside, Ford fell 1/4 to 23 and General Motors lost 1/4 to 46 1/4.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrials average jumped 9.71 points to 799.66, with most of its gain coming in a late buying surge.

More than four stocks rose in price for every three that fell on the NYSE, whose composite index rose 0.56 to 62.29.

Big Board volume totaled 55.29 million shares, up from 50.37 million in the previous session.

Adventurers Visit North Pole To Find It Covered By Clouds

By CHARLES CAMPBELL Associated Press Writer OVER THE NORTH POLE (AP)—A jetliner full of comfortable Canadian and American adventurers, provisioned with champagne and filet mignon, took an overnight trip to the top of the world and found it covered by clouds.

The organizers called it the first-ever venture to the North Pole by commercial airliner, open to anyone intrepid enough to write a check for $463, spend 13 hours in a Boeing 707 and put up with the taunts of the disbelievers.

"My family nearly died," said Agnes Asta, who came up from Cleveland, Ohio, for the flight. "I kept telling them I was going to the North Pole. They thought I was kidding."

"Everybody laughed at me," said Iva Rhodes, a Toronto resident. "I had one friend who just didn't believe me. But the little girl next door, the first thing she said to me was, 'Say hello to Santa Claus.'"

At about 3 a.m. Tuesday, as the expedition approached its goal, Capt. John Waldie, the pilot, got on the intercom to say, "I hope you're all aware that the pole is just the Arctic Ocean with ice on it, and I'm not sure there's much to see."

There was no shortage of ceremony. An acting postmaster applied a special cancellation to stamps on envelopes commemorating the expedition. A cake was presented to a woman who, as the plane circled over the pole and across the international dateline, celebrated her birthday twice.

Passengers lifted toasts to the adventure and Britain's new prince, born just as the North Pole plane was leaving Toronto.

For a few minutes, the clouds parted to show the Arctic Ocean ice cap at mid-summer, the white sheet laced by cracks of open water.

But by the time the arrival at the pole was announced — to a chorus of cheers and applause — there was nothing to see but cottony clouds. No red-and-white striped barber pole. No Santa's workshop.

"I still feel excited, even though I can't see anything," said Betty Drewery, a 71-year-old woman from Sudbury, Ontario. "Now I want to go to Antarctica."

A computer software salesman named Larry

Moore was responsible for the North Pole trip.

"A bunch of the boys were sitting around, and I said we should get 20 guys, each invite 10 friends, rent a plane and go to the North Pole," Moore said. "Everybody said, 'Yeah!' That was five years ago."

There were complications, especially in arranging for use of a suitable plane and making sure there wouldn't be any problems in venturing across the pole a few miles toward Soviet airspace.

"It appears the Russians don't have radar that goes that far," Moore said. "It was a matter of some concern. A 707 has the same radar profile as a B-52."

But once the plane was arranged and the project announced, the response was overwhelming, Moore said. Toronto's morning radio shows talked enthusiastically of the polar expedition and the 161 seats for paying passengers sold out. Any excess revenues over expenses are destined for charity, Moore said.

So why go?

"For the excitement and sense of adventure," said Isabelle Johnson of Toronto. "It's nice to do something few people have done, something different."

"I think I was in the mood for something different."

Liquor Fee

A bill that would levy a surcharge of 5 cents per bottle of liquor was enacted when the Senate voted final approval. The bill would use the money to finance a new Alcoholic Beverage Control warehouse in Raleigh.

Insurance

Sponsors of a bill altering the way insurance points are awarded for minor traffic accidents gave up on their bill in the Senate. The bill was recommended by a study commission but saw a major amendment, backed by Insurance Commissioner John Ingram, added in the House.

The original bill would have raised the point threshold, so that one point would be awarded for accidents with up to $500 property damage and two points awarded above that amount. Currently, one point is awarded for accidents with up to $200 damage, and two points above that amount.

The House amendment would have restructured premium surcharges.

Direct Deposit

The Senate scuttled a bill that would have allowed state employees to decline to have their salary directly deposited in their bank accounts.

Senate Ways and Means Chairman Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, told the Senate the bill would cost the state $1.5 million, and Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green ordered the bill returned to the Appropriations Committee, where it is expected to die when the session ends.

Taxes

A pair of House bills that would lead to higher and speedier tax payments by some businesses appeared to be near death in the state Senate Finance Committee.

One bill would require the state to use its old tax depreciation schedule for businesses, dropping use of faster writeoffs adopted by the Revenue Department last year after Congress enacted them for federal tax purposes.

The other bill would require insurance companies to pay their premium taxes quarterly. Current law allows some insurance companies to pay them at the end of the year.

Senate Finance Committee Chairman Conrad Duncan, D-Rockingham, said his committee had the bills but he did not intend to call another meeting to consider them.

Gun Control

The House revived a bill that had lain dormant in conference committee since last year and approved the compromise method for regulating the purchase of handguns.

Rep. Ben Tison, D-Mecklenburg, said the state Sheriff's Association, the National Rifle Association and the Wildlife Federation support the bill.

The Senate must approve the compromise, which would conform state laws to federal laws, before it can become law.

Under the bill, qualified citizens, hunters or collectors could obtain handgun permits from sheriffs or clerks of court. Among those who would be ineligible to buy handguns would be those convicted of or indicted for a felony, fugitives, drug addicts or alcoholics or the mentally ill.

Appointments

The House and Senate approved a number of appointments to state boards made by Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green. Among those appointed were David Stedman of Asheboro to the Board of Trustees of the North Carolina Museum of Art and Alice Wynne Gatsis of Rocky Mount to the Board of Trustees of the University of North Carolina Center for Public Television.

Stedman is an industrialist who has been active in campaigning against a number of tax measures, including the increase in the gasoline tax.

Mrs. Gatsis is president of North Carolinians Against the Equal Rights Amendment.

Pitt Gains Split With Wilson Legion

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
Emmett Walsh walked with the bases loaded in the bottom of the last inning of the first game and Pitt County's American Legion baseball team managed a split with Wilson's

Post 13 last night in a doubleheader. Pitt won the opening game, 2-1, but Wilson bounced back to take the second in extra innings, 4-3. In the opening game, Tyrone Gay of Pitt County and Charles

Davis of Wilson hooked up in a pitching duel that saw Davis enjoy for most of the way. Although Gay struck out 11 batters in the seven inning contest, he was also tagged for four hits and walked four, putting the leadoff man on base in all but one of the first five innings. In the fourth, Gay gave up an opening single, then walked the next two batters. Following a meeting on the mound with coach Bill Davis, however, he proceeded to strike out the side.

Overall, Gay threw 135 pitches in the contest, while Davis three just under 100. Davis, who also allowed four hits, walked six, one of them intentionally, and three of the non-intentional in the final two innings. He struck out four.

Wilson, which threatened first in the second, putting three on via a single and two walks, scored its only run of the game in the fifth, taking the lead at that point.

John Logan opened the fifth with a walk and was sacrificed up. He scored when Scott Barnes doubled down the left field line. Barnes, however, was the last baserunner Gay allowed as he retired the next eight in a row.

Pitt, which had a mild threat in the fourth, putting a man on second with one away, finally connected in the sixth to tie it up. With one down, Randy Warren reached on an error and stole up. He took third on a wild pitch and Walsh walked. After the second out on an Pete Rose bangs out his 3,772nd career hit.

Number Two Pete Rose Chases Immortal Cobb

ST. LOUIS (AP) — As long as he's still able to swing a bat, Pete Rose says he fully intends to make the immortal Ty Cobb's most formidable record his target. The hustling Philadelphia Phillies first baseman made that much abundantly clear Tuesday night. His 3,772nd career hit, he said following a 3-2 defeat to the St. Louis Cardinals, was only a milestone en route to Cobb's 4,191. "If you're a home run hitter, you still try to hit 40 homers a year," said Rose in explaining his relentless chase. "For me to try to get 4,000 hits is one of those things I need to keep me going. I think this is the difference in ballplayers today. They have multiyear contracts and nothing to prod them." Rose, while facing St. Louis rookie John Stuper, lined the hit establishing him as No. 2 on baseball's all-time list to center field in the third inning, driving in a Philadelphia run. It looked like a mere single as Rose moved past Hall of Famer Hank Aaron on the list, but the 41-year-old player had other notions. Never letting up while rounding first base, he beat the throw to second with a belly slide for his 685th lifetime double. "It was just a fastball," Rose said of the 30 delivery from Stuper he drilled hard for his historic hit. "Probably the reason I saw it was because of the count. Otherwise he (Stuper) did a real good job," said Rose. "He pitched a good ballgame." Rose was asked if he was disappointed because Aaron was not among the 19,672 on hand at Busch Stadium to watch the feat. "I was more disappointed my little boy was not here," he said. "Hank and I are good friends. He has other places to be and many things to do. There will be other games." Rose also made it clear that the Philadelphia defeat rubbed glitter from his achievement. "In the last 11 years, I've been on five World Series teams and in six playoffs. It's important to me that it doesn't get ahead of the team. If I get a hit the first time up tomorrow," he said in respect to his pursuit of Cobb's record, "I won't be saying 418 more."

Warren reached on an error and stole up. He took third on a wild pitch and Walsh walked. After the second out on an infield pop, Terry Locust singled to right, scoring Warren with the tying run.

The winner came over in the bottom of the seventh. Gay led off with an infield hit, and was sacrificed up. Tom Buie walked and Greg Briley hit one that appeared headed through the hole between first and second. Wilson's Don Doster, however, made a diving stop of the ball, saving the run, but was unable to make a play, leaving the bases loaded.

Warren grounded back to third, and Gay was cut down at the plate, but Walsh then walked to force over Buie with the game winner.

Pitt wasn't to be so lucky in the second game — although the opportunities were there. Again, Wilson scored first. After leaving men in scoring position in the first two frames, Post 13 scored once in the third without benefit of a hit.

Logan led off the third by reaching on a two-base error. He advanced to third on an out, then scored on Barnes' sacrifice fly.

Pitt, which left a man at second in the third, scored twice in the fourth to take the lead in the contest. Warren led off with a single to left, and Walsh followed with a freak single. Attempting to bunt, Walsh hit a low pop that Charles Chatman tried to make a diving catch of, but missed. By the time the ball was recovered, both runners were safe. Both moved up on an out, and Sammy Hodges doubled to the fence in left center, scoring the two for a 2-1 lead.

Wilson, however, quickly came back on mistakes by Pitt in the fifth to regain the lead, 3-2. Logan again led off, reaching on a walk. Chatman was safe when his grounder was dropped at first.

Logan, meanwhile, continued on to third, and the relay there was judged too late. That provoked an argument, but since no one called time, Chatman alertly trotted to second. Barnes then hit his second sacrifice fly, scoring Logan, and Chatman was again safe when he advanced on the play and the ball, there in time, was dropped. A second sacrifice fly for the inning, by Doster, scored the third run.

Pitt scrambled back once more in the seventh to tie it up. Hodges reached on an infield hit and moved up when a pickoff play was errored. He took third on an out and scored on Buie's infield grounder that took a bad hop.

Wilson, however, came back with the go-ahead run in the top of the eighth. Barnes reached on another badhop single, and he was sacrificed up. He scored when Joey Page singled to right.

Pitt again tried to rally. Warren led off with a single, and he was sacrificed to second, moving to third on an errant pickoff attempt. But he tied there as a foul pop and a strikeout ended the threat.

Page had two hits to pace Wilson in the second game, while Buie, Warren and Hodges each had two for Pitt. No one had collected more than one in the first game.

"I can't fault them for the effort," Pitt Coach Davis said later. "They hustled and tried. If we continue with that sort of effort the rest of the year, they'll be all right."

The split left Pitt with a 6-4 record, while Wilson is now 9-4. Pitt returns to action tonight, traveling to Snow Hill.

Hicks Cut By Bombers

WINNIPEG — Ex-East Carolina running back Eddie Hicks, the school's No. 7 all-time ground gainer with 2,101 yards, has been cut by Winnipeg Blue Bombers of the Canadian Football League.

It was the first official cut by the Blue Bombers as they pared their roster to 54 players. The Blue Bombers will eventually cut their roster to 38 or 39 players, according to a spokesman.

The next cut must be made by July 5. Another former ECU back, Theodore Sutton, remains on the team and is expected to make the squad.

Hicks was a sixth-round draft choice by the New York Giants in 1979 but has never been free of injury during his brief professional career. He signed with the Philadelphia Eagles of the NFL during the 1980 off-season but was cut and later picked up by the Blue Bombers.

Hicks was born in Henderson, N.C., and attended Vance High School where he was a standout in football and track.

Hicks later signed with ECU. His most productive season with the Pirates was 1976 when he gained 897 yards — the seventh best single-season total in ECU history.

Wilson, however, quickly came back on mistakes by Pitt in the fifth to regain the lead, 3-2. Logan again led off, reaching on a walk. Chatman was safe when his grounder was dropped at first.

Logan, meanwhile, continued on to third, and the relay there was judged too late. That provoked an argument, but since no one called time, Chatman alertly trotted to second. Barnes then hit his second sacrifice fly, scoring Logan, and Chatman was again safe when he advanced on the play and the ball, there in time, was dropped. A second sacrifice fly for the inning, by Doster, scored the third run.

Page had two hits to pace Wilson in the second game, while Buie, Warren and Hodges each had two for Pitt. No one had collected more than one in the first game.

Unhappy Difference In Year For Jones

By The Associated Press
What a difference six years makes.

On June 22, 1976, Randy Jones of the San Diego Padres tied Hall of Famer Christy Mathewson's National League record of pitching 68 consecutive innings without issuing a base on balls.

On June 22, 1982, Jones, now with New York, walked the first four Montreal batters, the only ones he faced before getting the hook from Manager George Bamberger. Three of them scored and the Expos went on to beat the Mets 4-3 for their fifth consecutive victory and the fourth loss in a row for Jones. He hasn't won since shutting out Houston May 23.

"Some other managers might have gone five batters," said Bamberger, who was at a loss to explain Jones' recent failures (it was the second time in the last four starts he failed to retire a batter). "Jones doesn't know what's wrong. I don't either."

In other National League action Tuesday night, St. Louis edged Philadelphia 3-2 despite Pete Rose's 3,772nd career hit, breaking a tie with Hank Aaron for second place on the all-time hit list: Los Angeles downed Atlanta 4-1, Cincinnati beat San Diego 7-5, Houston blanked San Francisco 2-0 and Pittsburgh trounced Chicago 9-2.

Jones was yanked after walking Jerry White, Mike Gates, Andre Dawson and Al Oliver. Ed Lynch relieved and retired Gary Carter and Tim Lincecum on pop-ups, but Warren Cromartie lashed a single to make it 3-0. Oliver homered in the third for the decisive run.

Winner David Palmer pitched six innings, giving up eight hits, before Jeff Reardon came on to record his 12th save.

"Four guys in a row will kill you, but it didn't cost us the game," Bamberger said of Jones' wildness. "We had our chances. Giving up four walks in a row, you're lucky to only give up three runs. I can't put Jones in the bullpen because of two doubleheaders this weekend. If they weren't coming up, maybe he'd go to the bullpen, but I can't afford that now. He's not releasing the ball properly. He's up and down, no consistency. I have to be patient."

Added pitching coach Bill Monbouquette: "He has to get himself out of it. We can just make suggestions."

Cardinals 3, Phillies 2
Mike Ramsey drew a bases-loaded walk from Ed Farmer with two out in the eighth inning, forcing home Willie McGee with the winning run. St. Louis rookie John Stuper scattered eight hits. Rose's double with two out in the third inning tied the score 2-2 and left him 418 hits behind Ty Cobb, who had 4,191.

"In the last 12 years, I've been on five World Series teams, and played in six league playoffs," said the 41-year-old Rose. "If I get a hit the first time up tomorrow, I won't be saying 418 more."

"It's important to me that it doesn't get put ahead of the team," Rose added after the fourth-place Phillies dropped 5½ games behind the pace-setting Cards in the NL East. "I think it's important to me that I take care of myself so that I'll have a chance. I may go blind tomorrow. I can't worry about that. I don't worry about that. That's why I've missed only nine games since 1970."

Dodgers 4, Braves 1
Steve Garvey and Dusty Baker homered, while Vicente Romo, Dave Stewart and Steve Howe held Atlanta to three hits and one unearned run. It was the third-place Dodgers' ninth victory in the last 11 games and left them just 5½ games behind Atlanta in the NL West. The Braves lead San Diego by 3½ games.

Romo retired the side in order in the first inning, but twisted his left knee running out a single in the second and had to leave the game. Stewart yielded three hits in five innings and Howe pitched hitless ball over the final three.

Reds 7, Padres 5
Eddie Milner scored the winning run on San Diego third baseman Luis Salazar's throwing error and Mike Vail capped a three-run seventh-inning rally with an RBI single, his second of the game. Alex Trevino singled to start the rally against Gary Lucas, 0-5, was sacrificed to second and scored the tying run on Milner's single. Dan Driessen walked with two out and Salazar then threw wildly to first on Cesar Cedeno's grounder, allowing Milner to score. Vail singled home an insurance run.

Astros 2, Giants 0
Vern Ruhle, who has split time between spot starting and relief work, fired a three-hitter, retiring 23 consecutive batters over one stretch. Ruhle gave up singles to Joe Morgan and Chili Davis with one out in the first inning, but catcher Alan Ashby picked Davis off first and Ruhle fanned Jack Clark. He didn't allow another baserunner until pinch hitter Dave Bergman singled with one out in the ninth.

"I made some good pitches," said Ruhle, who struck out five and faced only 28 batters, one over the minimum. "I can't say I've had any better games."

"Ruhle's always tough," Morgan said. "As far as pitching goes, he's as good as anybody in the league. Every time you face him, you never see the same pitch twice. You may see two fast balls, but they're at two different speeds, one sinking and one rising. He's got about 900 different pitches."

Pirates 9, Cubs 2

Snow Hill, Wayne In Split Of Doubleheader

PIKEVILLE — Snow Hill scored eight times in the seventh inning of the second game and pulled out a split with Wayne County in a pair of American Legion baseball games last night.

Wayne County outslugged Snow Hill in the first game, 12-10, but Snow Hill took the second, 11-1.

In the opener, Snow Hill grabbed the lead in the first inning. Chris Newsome led off with a single and Greg Hardison walked. Robbie Pelletier singled in Newsome, and Wade Corbett's single brought home Hardison.

Wayne, however, came right back with five in the bottom of the frame. Five walks opened the game, although one runner was thrown out trying to steal. Those walks forced in one run, and a single by Do Yol Lim scored two more. Ralph Britt singled in two more for the 5-3 lead.

Wayne pushed out to a 9-3 margin with four in the fourth, but Snow Hill came back with three in the fifth to move within striking distance.

In the sixth, however, Lim bit a three-run, two-out homer that moved the Wayne lead out to 12-5. A five-run rally in the sixth by Snow Hill, sparked by Jeff Ginn's homer, went for naught.

Newsome, Hardison, Ginn, Corbett and Chris Suggs each had two hits for Snow Hill, while Joey Rouse added a homer. Lim led the Wayne hitting with three, while Britt had two, one of them a homer, and Jansen Evans also had a homer.

In the second game, Wayne grabbed the initial lead in the fourth inning, scoring once.

However, Snow Hill came back with three to shut the door in the sixth. Steve Sides singled and was sacrificed up. He scored on a double by Ginn, who then scored the go-ahead run on a hit by Corbett. Suggs singled to score Corbett.

Snow Hill then got eight more in the seventh to insure the victory.

Sides, Corbett and Suggs

each had two hits to pace Snow Hill. Corbett drove in four runs and Suggs, three, along the way.

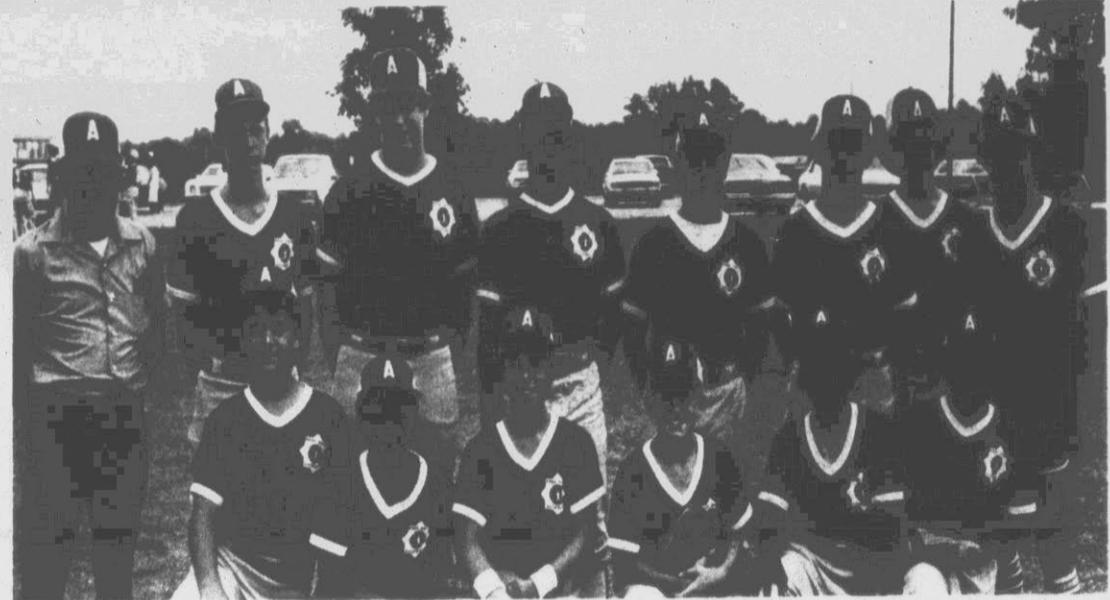

Greg Neal had two hits for Wayne.

Snow Hill is now 2-10 on the season, and will play host to Pitt County tonight.

S. Pitt League
MacKenzie Sec. 6
Chicod 4
SIMPSON — MacKenzie Security got only two hits but it was enough as it outscored Chicod, 6-4, yesterday in the Southern Pitt Little League.

James Boyd got the win for MacKenzie, striking out three and walking five.

Ronald Moore led the MacKenzie hitting with a double, while Joey Johnson had two hits to pace Chicod.

MacKenzie is now 7-6 on the year.

Little League
Union Carbide 6
Coca-Cola 5
Kevin Fisher's one-out double in the bottom of the eighth inning drove in Billy Turcotte and allowed Union Carbide to pull out a 6-5 North State Little League victory over Coca-Cola yesterday.

Coke grabbed the lead in the game in the first inning, scoring four times. Union Carbide came back with one in the third, but Coke added another in the fourth for a 5-1 lead.

Union Carbide struggled back with two in the fifth and two more in the sixth to tie it up at 5-5.

Then, with one on in the eighth, Turcotte reached on a fielder's choice that nailed the preceding runner. Abram Lang followed with a single, moving Turcotte to second, and Fisher came back with a double that drove in Turcotte with the game-winning run.

Fisher led the UC hitting with four, while Morris Johnson had two. Tony Evans and Jay Surlles each had two hits to lead the Coke hitting.

Moose 5
Pepsi-Cola 2
Jay Mattox tossed a three-hitter at Pepsi-Cola as the Moose gained a 5-2 victory in the Tar Heel Little League yesterday.

The Moose took the lead with a run in the second, then followed that with one in the third. Pepsi scored its first run in the top of the fourth.

It was the bottom of the fourth, however, that made the difference as the Moose scored three times to put the game out of reach. Wesley Jackson led off with a single and Allen Speight walked. With one away, Rob Barnes singled in Jackson, and an error let Speight score and moved Barnes up. He then took third on a passed ball and scored on Darren Bullock's out.

Pepsi tried to rally, getting one in the fifth.

Chris Christopher and Jackson each had two hits to lead the Moose, while no one had more than one for Pepsi.

Auto Specialty 13
Hendrix & Dail 8
Chris Meeks banged out four hits and scored three runs in leading Auto Specialty to a 13-8 victory over Hendrix & Dail yesterday in a one-game playoff for the Prep League title.

The two teams had tied at the end of the regular season for the league crown, and will move into the league's post-season tournament on Thursday at Guy Smith Stadium.

In the opening game of the tournament, Auto Specialty will meet Shop-eze Foodland, while First State Bank is Hendrix & Dail's opponent in the second game. The double elimination tournament will continue until a champion is declared.

Auto Specialty took the lead in the game with a run in the first, but H&D countered that with one in the second, then scored twice in the third to take the lead. Both of those runs came on a homer by Anthony Cobb. AS added three in the bottom of the third, regaining the lead, 4-3, and scored a fifth run in the fourth inning.

H&D came back with three in the fifth to move back ahead, 6-5, but lost the lead for good in the bottom of the inning as Auto Specialty scored four times for a 9-6 lead.

Meeks led off the inning with a double and Rodney Harris was hit by a pitch. Donald Perkins singled in Meeks, and Greg Hallow singled to score Harris. Chuck Doak singled in Perkins, and an error allowed Hallow to score the eventual winning run.

Hendrix & Dail picked up two more in the sixth, while AS padded its lead with four in the bottom of the inning.

In addition to Meeks' four hits, Tom Taylor had three, and Harris, Perkins and Doak each had two. Clay Young had three hits, while Jason Galloway, Tim Clark and Pickle Garris each had two for H&D.

Babe Ruth League
Coca-Cola 10
Wachovia Bank 6
Coca-Cola finished off a victory started back in May last night as it won a suspended game against Wachovia Bank, 10-6.

Coke took the lead in the game in the first, scoring five times, adding a sixth run in the second inning. Wachovia came back with three in the top of the third, but Coke then sewed it up with one in the bottom of the frame.

Joey Hallow led off the bottom of the third with a walk, stealing second. Walks to Robbie Erhmann and Lewis Robbins loaded the bases, and a sacrifice fly by Curtis Perkins brought in Hallow with the seventh Coke run.

Coke then added two in the fourth and one in the fifth for its ten run total. Wachovia scored three in the fourth to finish up its six.

Paul Hill and Traye Fuqua

each had two hits for Coke, while Jeff Howard had a pair for Wachovia.

Sr. Babe Ruth
Washington 4
Troy Hudson hit a two-run homer to help lift the Kiwanis to a 6-4 Senior Babe Ruth League victory over the Washington Pirates last night.

Washington got on the scoreboard first, scoring a single run in the top of the first inning, but the Kiwanis also got one in the frame. Washington moved back ahead with one in the third, but the Kiwanis then struck for the lead for good.

In the bottom of the third, Bobby Buie walked and Tony Daniels doubled. Mike Iaboni reached on a fielder's choice that got Buie at the plate. Battle Emory then singled in Daniels, and Iaboni scored on a passed ball. Hudson followed with his two-run shot giving the Kiwanis a 5-2 lead.

The other Kiwanis run came in the fifth, while Washington got its other two in the seventh.

Daniels and Emory each had two hits to lead the Kiwanis, while Seth Edwards and Kevin Cutler each had two for Washington.

Looking ahead at the standard set by Cobb in 24 seasons, once considered unreachable, Rose said conditioning and his level of enthusiasm will represent the keys.

"I think it would be hard on my part if I didn't give it my best shot," he said. "It's important for me to take care of myself so that I have a chance."

Ahead of his double, Rose grounded out in the first inning. Afterward, he flew to left field in the sixth and popped to shortstop Ozzie Smith to end the Phillies' eighth.

"You never know, I might go blind tomorrow," Rose said in looking ahead. "I don't worry about that. That's why I've missed only nine games since 1970."

Chip Hooper Getting Attention From Crowds At Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — While John McEnroe, the defending champion and top-seed, again was the star attraction at Wimbledon, another American, Chip Hooper was getting plenty of notice.

As the crowd awaited McEnroe's second round match with Eddie Edwards of South Africa, the talk was of Hooper's latest triumph.

The 6-foot-6 serve-and-volley specialist whose game is tailor-made for grass, upset eighth-seeded Peter McNamara of Australia 7-6, 3-6, 6-2, 6-4 Tuesday.

"Good player on this stuff," Fred Perry, the former Wimbledon champion said of Hooper's grass-court skills.

"We've been well aware of his potential on this type of surface," Neale Fraser, the Australian Davis Cup captain, said of Hooper's potential. "That serve is something we're going to have to contend with." Hooper, able to hammer the serve from a frightening angle of attack, pounded serve after serve off his oversized racquet, rattling the curtains and an occasional linesman at the opposite end of the court.

McNamara, who became the second ranked player to exit the event, left immediately after the match without talking to reporters. He ran out of steam in the third set, seemingly disheartened as Hooper's service, clocked at 135 mph, appeared to get even stronger. The setting, the historic

All-England Tennis and Croquet Club, obviously had something to do with his performance.

"At other places," said Hooper, who climbed from 235th to 23rd in the rankings over a six-month stretch, "it is like playing in a tennis tournament. But this is like playing on a different planet — and not just because it is grass." McNamara played good tennis for while. But when you begin losing your serve and have to come back so much, you get tired mentally."

Former champion Virginia Wade and defending champion Chris Evert Lloyd were among the standout women winners Tuesday.

Giving away 15 years to fellow Briton Jo Durie, the 36-year-old Wade seemingly made them vanish in the midst of a harrowing tiebreaker — winning 15-13 in the longest ever in Wimbledon women's play — as she pounded out a 3-6, 7-6, 6-2 victory.

"Haven't we all put our foot in our mouths and said that we don't want to go on playing when we're old and decrepit," said Wade, the 1977 Wimbledon champion who wore thick woolen socks over her shoes to gain a better foothold on the rain-slickened grass. "When you are 18, that means about 23."

Wade's match highlighted the first day of women's play, which also saw Lloyd dispatch 17-year-old Barbara Sue Gerken of Thousand Oaks, Calif., 6-0, 6-4 on the rain-slicked Center Court.

"Now I know how Billie Jean (King) and Margaret Court felt against me," said Lloyd, who bounded into the third round with the victory. She was given a first-round bye, as was Gerken, but played Tuesday because Wimbledon calls for its champions to open play on Center Court.

"I don't have the luxury of time on my side," said Lloyd, who squeezed her match in between showers that wiped out much of Tuesday's card. "I'm not playing like when I was 17 or 18, playing loosely and with no pressure." Meanwhile, sixth-seeded Gene Mayer came from a set and a service break down to overtake Tim Gullikson 5-7, 6-4, 6-1, 7-5, becoming the 10th of the 16 seeds to reach the second round. Yannick Noah of France pulled out Monday with a strained thigh ligament.

In other women's matches, 15-year-old Kathy Rinaldi defeated fellow American Stacy Margolin 6-2, 7-6; Lucia Romanov of Romania topped Britain's Anne Croft 1-6, 6-3, 6-1; South Korea's Duk Hee Lee stopped Glynis Coles of Britain 4-6, 6-4, 6-1; American Wendy White defeated Brenda Remilton of Australia 6-3, 6-4 and American Sharon Walsh downed Britain's Sue Barker 6-0, 6-4.

Salem Atop Putt League

Salem Methodist shot a team score of 277 to edge Farmville Presbyterian by one stroke and Arthur Christian by five last night in the Church League at the Greenville Putt-Putt.

Salem trailed Arthur Christian by six strokes after the first round before staging a comeback behind the putting of Johnny Baker who carded a ten-under 62.

Farmville carded a 134 in the second round to overtake Arthur Christian as Jeff Cutler and Kelly Heizer both shot 69's for Farmville.

Arthur Christian was paced by Henry Avery with a 67 and Lanny Morris with a 68.

Hopewell Pentecostal finished fourth, 35 shots off the pace at 312 with Danny Pollard shooting a 65. First Wesleyan came in fifth with a 337 with Phil Martin's 70 being the best score.

Clyn Morris paced Gum Swamp with a 71 as they finished sixth at 339. Faith Pentecostal finished a distant seventh at 410.

Salem is in first place with a 51-3 record. Farmville is next at 43-11, followed by Hopewell at 40-13-1 and Arthur at 37-17.

Bomb Ticking At Wimbledon

By WILL GRIMSLEY AP Special Correspondent WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — A time bomb is ticking away over Wimbledon. Everybody is asking: When will it explode?

With two volatile sticks of TNT such as John McEnroe and Jimmy Connors roaming over the green courts of the All-England Lawn Tennis and Croquet Club, an air of tension grips the place.

"What's with your McEnroe?" an English cab driver asked an American visitor he was transporting to the scene of the tennis championships. "Can the kid hold his tongue this year?"

"What will happen when these two blokes get together?" is a question often heard in the gallery. "You can bet there's going to be some fireworks," they say.

The committee of the staid club where the world's most prestigious tournament was born 105 years ago has got so edgy it has hired a special peace emissary to act as liaison between the committee and the players.

He is towering Ted Tinling, virtually a piece of the Wimbledon fabric who was given the same responsibility 55 years ago when a rebellion threatened after France's fiery Suzanne Lenglen petulantly defaulted in all her three divisions.

Umpires and linesmen are edgy. Targets of Connors' and McEnroe's tirades over the last few years, they are certain to be gun-shy and perhaps overreact every time one of the two takes the court.

So far, McEnroe, whose series of tantrums last year cost him heavy fines and deprived him of a champion's complimentary membership in the select All-England Club, and Connors, who has largely throttled his extraneous outbursts, have been Little Lord Fauntleroy.

But Ladbroke's, the legal betting establishment down the street, won't quote you any odds.

Tinling, the man in the middle, is keeping his fingers crossed.

"I haven't talked with young McEnroe but I've had long conversations with his father," the 72-year-old Tinling said Tuesday. "He is eager that all the past problems be resolved."

"Connors came to the hospital to see me last week when I was having trouble with my leg. We had a long, constructive chat. He had a couple of minor complaints. They were settled."

Sir Brian Burnett, the chairman of the All-England Club, met with the players last Sunday, at which time he stressed Wimbledon's intention to let bygones be bygones.

"We would like to start fresh again," he said.

Yet McEnroe, whose on-court behavior was faultless in his first-round victory over Van Witsky, continued to show some petulance in his postmatch press conference.

In effect, he said: If Wimbledon sincerely wants peace, where are the medals which they've kept from me?

McEnroe was informed that his medals (three medals and a replica of the permanent men's championship plaque) are engraved and ready to be picked up.

They were never withheld, Wimbledon insisted.

Tinling said he had not personally talked to John Jr. because he had been portrayed as "John McEnroe's jailor."

"John apparently is not happy about that because he has been quoted as saying I don't know a racket from a net. I am playing it cool," Tinling said.

He acknowledged that there was greater pressure on McEnroe and Connors this year because of the absence of Bjorn Borg, Ivan Lendl, Guillermo Vilas and Jose Luis Clerc.

"In the past, most of the attention was on Borg," he said. "Now, McEnroe and Connors are front-runners. Both have tender nerve ends and a history of stormy behavior."

"But it's not all their fault. The TV and newspaper reporters keep the pot boiling. We've seen newsmen try to press John into controversies. Last week, in the Connors-McEnroe match at the Queens club, there was a close but correct line call against McEnroe."

"Oh, Oh," said the announcer. "Watch out. John's not going to like that." John was quiet as a kitten.

Brewers' Heat Making George Hot

By The Associated Press
The Milwaukee Brewers and Pete Vuckovich are red hot under interim Manager Harvey Kuenn. New York Yankees' owner George Steinbrenner is just as hot, under the collar that is.

Vuckovich, 9-2, won his eighth consecutive game Tuesday night, combining with Rollie Fingers on a five-hitter as the Brewers won their seventh straight game with a 3-2 decision over the Yankees.

"I don't know what my capabilities are," said Vuckovich, who loaded the bases in the first inning with none out and allowed only one run to score. "All I want to do is improve and become a quality pitcher."

Against the Yankees Vuckovich was. He gave up a home run to Roy Smalley in the second inning to tie the score 2-2 and held New York in check the rest of the way until Fingers relieved in the ninth inning.

"This is a close knit club and Arch (Kuenn) kind of made it that way. We had a meeting in Seattle and he said 'Let's have fun.' We have. At least I have," Vuckovich added.

One person who wasn't having fun was Steinbrenner. The Yankee boss watched the game on television from New York and was upset with the umpires. He was so upset that he telephoned Dave Szen, the club's director of publications, in the Milwaukee County Stadium press box.

According to Szen, Steinbrenner said he plans to send videotapes of the telecast to league President Lee MacPhail.

Steinbrenner was upset with two calls, claiming Brewer catcher Ted Simmons trapped a ball against the foul screen in the eighth inning and that the ump's blew an out call at first on Willie Randolph in the third.

The Brewers took a 2-1 lead in the bottom of the first when Robin Yount tripled and Cecil Cooper slammed his 12th home run of the season off Roger Erickson, 4-6.

The Brewers scored the game-winner in the second on a single by Roy Howell, a double by Ed Romero and Marshall Edwards' infield single.

Rangers 4, Angels 0
Rick Honeycutt scattered seven hits and stopped Rod Carew's 25-game hitting streak and Jim Sundberg delivered a two-run single as Texas blanked California and broke a two-game losing streak.

Honeycutt, 3-7, struck out four and walked two in gaining his first shutout and the Rangers' second of the year. The left-hander got Carew to ground out in the first, fly out in the third, bounce to the mound in the fifth and fly out again in the eighth.

"I get keyed up against that team. They have so many great hitters," said Honeycutt. "I was able to make better pitches against Carew than I've usually be able to. It was nice to stop the streak. He's a real challenge to me, just like all the great hitters."

Carew agreed. "I wasn't swinging the bat lousy, he just pitched me well and got me out," the seven-time AL batting champion said.

Mariners 6, Blue Jays 5
Seattle's Julio Cruz stole third base and scored the winning run on a throwing error by Toronto catcher Buck Martinez in the seventh inning as the Mariners defeated the Blue Jays.

The Blue Jays had tied the game at 5-5 with three runs in the fifth highlighted by Willie Upshaw's two-run homer, his ninth of the year.

Seattle rapped three home runs in the fourth inning when it scored four times. Richie Zisk opened the inning with a solo homer, Dave Henderson, who also knocked in a run earlier with single, added a two-run shot and Bud Bulling added a solo blast.

Royals 2, A's 1
Reliever Dan Quisenberry earned his 20th save of the season, combining with rookie Bud Kaspak on a six-hitter as the Kansas City handed Oakland its seventh loss in its last eight games.

Black gave up four hits in 51-3 innings, while Quisenberry, who leads the AL in saves and games finished with 29, gave up a run in the eighth when Rickey Henderson led off with a single, stole second and third, and scored on Cliff Johnson's grounder.

Amos Otis got his 12th game-winning RBI, tops in the league, with a sacrifice fly in the first inning off Matt Keough, 6-9. The Royals scored again in the sixth on Jerry Martin's RBI double.

Henderson now has 68 stolen bases in 70 games.

White Sox 6, Twins 5
Ron LeFlore snapped a 5-5 tie with a leadoff home run in the bottom of the eighth inning as Chicago won for the sixth time in eight games and handed Minnesota its 27th loss in its last 31 games.

LeFlore's fourth of the season came off Terry Felton, 0-7, and made a winner of Eddie Solomon, 1-0.

Run-scoring doubles by Greg Luzinski in the first and third innings had given Chicago a 3-1 lead. But Tim Lardner wiped it

Red Sox 5, Tigers 4
Dwight Evans tied the score with a two-out, two-run homer in the ninth inning and rookie Wade Boggs drilled his first major league home run in the 11th as Boston sent Detroit to its ninth straight loss.

"Dwight told me to go with the pitch, to take aim on the wall," said Boggs, a left-handed batter. "I was trying to hit to left field because I defeat myself when I try to pull in this ball park."

"I thought we had the streak ended until Evans hit the home run," Tiger Manager Sparky Anderson said. "This thing has got to end. We just have to keep battling and everything will take care of itself."

Rick Leach had given the Tigers a 4-2 lead with a two-run bases-loaded double with two out in the eighth.

Indians 8, Orioles 6
Rookie Von Hayes knocked in three runs and highlighted Cleveland's six-run fifth inning with a triple and a two-run single as Baltimore lost for only the fourth time in its last 15 games.

Cleveland starter Lary Sorensen, 6-6, got the victory, allowing 10 hits, one walk and striking out three in 71-3 innings.

Eddie Murray clubbed his ninth home run of the year for Baltimore.

Palmer Knows Nicklaus' Agony

DENVER (AP) - Arnold Palmer, a golf legend whose dominance of the professional tour was usurped by a young upstart named Jack Nicklaus in the mid-1960s, knows well what agony Nicklaus now is enduring with the emergence of Tom Watson.

As he watched Watson hole a difficult chip shot on the 17th hole for a birdie en route to edging Nicklaus for the U.S. Open championship last Sunday, Palmer was reminded of some of the feelings he experienced nearly 20 years ago.

"It brought back some memories, sure," Palmer said Tuesday during a golf exhibition at Pinehurst Country Club. "What it boils down to is that Watson is doing to Nicklaus what Nicklaus was doing to me. That's the way the ball bounces."

"I know exactly what Nicklaus was thinking when Watson's chip went in, but I can't tell you in public."

Palmer, now 52 and silver-haired, hasn't won on the PGA tour since 1973, but his game remains solid enough to shine on the fledgling seniors tour. Slashing at the ball in his familiar, aggressive style, he won the Marlboro Classic 10 days ago with an 8-under-par 274.

How Tar Heel Representatives And Senators Voted

Roll Call Report
WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes June 10-16.

HOUSE
NEW YORK CITY — By a vote of 218 for 177 against, the House passed and sent to the Senate a bill authorizing $7 million as the fiscal 1983 payment to reimburse New York City for the cost of protecting foreign diplomats during special events or times of international turmoil. This doubles the 1982 reimbursement of New York for past claims that were not paid due to a lack of federal funds.

Supporter Guy Molinari, R-N.Y., said the bill "recognizes the reality of increased security threats to foreign diplomats..."

Opponent Eldon Rudd, R-Ariz., said that since New York benefits economically from its large diplomatic community, taxpayers should not "foot any more of the bill for protective services in New York..."

Members voting "yea" favored doubling the federal reimbursement to New York City for its cost of protecting diplomats.

Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, L. H. Fountain, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Stephen Neal, D-5, Charles Rose, D-7, and W. G. Hefner, D-8, voted "yea."

Reps. Eugene Johnston, R-6, James Martin, R-9, James Broyhill, R-10, and William Hendon, R-11, voted "nay."

Rep. Ike Andrews, D-14, did not vote.

LOW INCOME HOUSING — By a vote of 312 for and 96 against, the House agreed to rescind about $4.1 billion previously appropriated for construction of some 16,000 units of public housing in fiscal 1982. The vote occurred during debate on the 1982 urgent supplemental appropriations bill (HR 5922) that was later passed and sent back to the Senate.

Supporter Edward Boland, D-Mass., noted that the rescission was less than the public housing cuts advocated originally by both the Administration and the Senate.

Opponent Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., said that during tough economic times "this nation must not retreat from its decades of commitment to the decent affordable shelter for all Americans, regardless of their economic status."

Members voting "yea" wanted to inflict deep cuts in 1982 outlays for public housing.

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Johnston, Rose, Hefner, Martin and Hendon voted "yea."

Broyhill did not vote.

MEMBERS' INCOME — The House voted, 381 for and 29 against, to go along with Senate legislation that repealed high tax breaks for members' Washington living expenses and restored the $3,000 maximum write-off that was in effect through the 1980 tax year. This amendment also put a ceiling of $18,200 on the outside income senators can receive annually from speech honoraria and other outside activities. That figure, about 30 percent of the congressional salary, is also the limit on House members' outside earnings. The vote occurred during debate on HR 5922 (see preceding vote).

Supporter Floyd Fithian, R-Ind., said that with unemployment at high levels "it is pretty darn difficult for our folks in Indiana to understand... how one could go to a series of small breakfasts and luncheons and earn the kind of honoraria that is being earned, $8,000 or $10,000 a day."

Most opponents agreed with the substance of the amendment, but voted "nay" out of concern that likely Senate rejection of the outside income ceiling would impede efforts to restore the $3,000 deduction on Washington living expenses.

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Johnston, Rose, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and Hendon voted "yea."

SENATE VOTING RIGHTS — By a vote of 86 for and 8 against, the Senate cut off a filibuster against legislation (S 192) to extend the Voting Rights Act for 25 years. The core of the law is a requirement that nine states and parts of 13 others clear any changes in their election laws with the Justice Department. The bill was headed for final passage and conference with the House.

Supporter Pete Domenici, R-N.M., said the purpose of the act is "to encourage states and localities to bring minorities into the mainstream of American political life."

Opponent Harry Byrd Jr., Independent-Va., said the Justice Department clearance requirement is "an unwarranted and unreasonable federal intervention in the electoral processes of the states and localities."

Senators voting "yea" favored breaking the filibuster and eventual final passage of the Voting Rights Act extension.

Sens. John East, R, and Jesse Helms, R, voted "nay."

NAMING CIA AGENTS — By a vote of 81 for and 4 against, the Senate passed and sent to the White House the bill (HR 4) setting criminal penalties for former CIA agents, journalists, historians and all others who publicly identify U.S. covert agents. A person engaged in a "pattern" of disclosure activities could be prosecuted, and the law would apply even when the named agents had previously been identified to the public.

Supporter David Duren-

berger, R-Minn., said the bill was tightly worded so that it would not "undermine a free and probing press, whose contributions to an informed public are a bulwark of democracy." Opponent Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y., termed it unconstitutional to apply the law to persons "who have not had access to classified information" and in cases where "the identity was discovered from public source information and even if there was no harm to the national interest." Senators voting "yea" favored enactment of the

In 1974 Fuller received the Ella Stephens Barrett Award from the Personnel and Guidance Association.

Fuller has also been active in community services, including serving as president of the Pitt County Mental Health Association, serving on the parish council of his church and on the Greenville City Council. He was governor of the Greenville Moose Lodge and served on the board of the state PTA. He is currently serving as chairperson of the city transportation board.

Speeches were given by former students and colleagues and the Mid-East Chapter presented Fuller a sterling silver pen and pencil set.

A Giveaway Of Ladybugs

VALPARAISO, Ind. (AP) — Mail-order ladybugs were given a chilly reception, but soon they'll be munching aphids and mealy bugs.

The Porter County League of Women Voters is giving away about 400,000 refrigerated ladybugs Saturday to promote a natural way of controlling garden pests.

"Your ladybugs eat aphids, boll worms and mealy bugs off your garden plants," Ms. Kroft said. "Along with the ladybugs will go a slip of paper telling how to release them. There is a certain way to release them to keep them from flying away."

A half pint of ladybugs is the estimated amount for insect control of the average home garden, she said.

In case of rain, the ladybugs will be refrigerated and distributed at a later date. Ladybugs can be kept in a dormant stage in refrigerators for up to a month, Ms. Kroft said.

The league ordered the ladybugs from California. They were sent through the mail in gunny sacks and are being stored in refrigerators until the giveaway, said Charlotte Kroft, a spokesman for the league.

Plan Cut British Fleet Despite Falklands Role

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) - Defense Secretary John Nott is facing tough opposition over his proposed cutbacks in warships, which Royal Navy chiefs claim proved their value in Britain's triumph over Argentina in the Falkland Islands.

"Our splendid success in the South Atlantic must not obscure the fact that the main threat to the United Kingdom is from the nuclear and conventional forces of the Soviet Union and her Warsaw Pact allies," Nott said Tuesday. "Our response to that threat remains the overriding priority."

Nott, who plans to reduce Britain's 60 destroyers and frigates to around 42 by 1985, says the cutbacks are necessary to help finance the $12 billion U.S. Trident submarine missile program. Britain had 98 major warships in 1979.

His critics in the Royal Navy say the Falklands conflict proved Britain needs to maintain a fleet of 100 destroyers and frigates rather than place its main naval power in a costly nuclear submarine force.

Admiral of the Fleet Lord Hill-Norton called Nott's decision to stick to the broad strategy announced last year "judicious."

Newspaper commentators have speculated Nott will lose his job because of Conservative Party rank-and-file pressure to build up conventional forces that were the key element in the Falklands victory.

After Argentina invaded the South Atlantic colony April 2, Britain dispatched a force that eventually included 100 ships, including commandeered passenger liners and commercial transports. The ships played the crucial role in landing British troops on the islands, which Britain successfully retook after 74 days of Argentine occupation.

Nott disclosed in a policy document that the Conservative government plans to increase its $24.25 billion defense budget by 3 percent a year until 1985-86, but this will actually mean less spending on ships, planes and tanks because of the higher costs of defense technology.

The document, delayed for three months because of Argentina's invasion of the Falklands, only made passing reference to the South Atlantic fighting.

Although Nott insisted the Falklands conflict will not change cutback plans, he said Britain will probably replace the two missile destroyers and two frigates.

Hospital To Evaluate Hinckley

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - For more than a year, John W. Hinckley Jr., has had people peering into his brain trying to understand why he shot President Reagan. Now he faces more mental scrutiny to see if he ever leaves a psychiatric hospital.

After so much emphasis during Hinckley's trial on his state of mind during last year's shooting of Reagan and three other men, the focus shifts to how he thinks now, experts said Tuesday.

The new evaluations at a Washington hospital will try to determine Hinckley's current mental status, if he might be dangerous to himself or others, and when he might be freed.

Psychiatrists not connected with the case said it is sometimes possible for a person found insane for a past act to be considered well enough by the time his trial ends to be freed.

A jury on Monday found Hinckley innocent by reason of insanity on all charges stemming from the assassination attempt. U.S. District Court Judge Barrington D. Parker ordered him sent to St. Elizabeths Hospital for evaluation.

The federally funded mental institution, which serves District of Columbia residents and those who go through the federal court system here, has 50 days to evaluate Hinckley before he has a court hearing concerning his mental status.

If the court determines that Hinckley still is mentally ill and dangerous, he would have to remain in St. Elizabeths indefinitely. However, he would have the right to request a rehearing every six months.

Defense attorneys Vincent J. Fuller and Gregory B. Craig said Tuesday that Hinckley will not try to win his freedom after the initial evaluation. They added that they would not try to free Hinckley until he is no longer considered dangerous.

Grier Says No Rip-Off

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Former football star Roosevelt "Rose" Grier says critics of his T-shirt manufacturing program for minority youth "didn't have all the facts."

On June 17, Sen. William Proxmire gave the Giant Step Inc. program his "Golden Fleece" award, saying that the program headed by Grier received more than $700,000 in federal money but that no T-shirts were produced and no minority youths found jobs.

Proxmire, who called the operation "a spectacular failure," is seeking the return of $443,000 to the federal government.

Grier said Tuesday that his program trained 100 youths a year and sold $700,000 worth of T-shirts, including "thousands of dollars worth" to Coca-Cola - all of which was plowed back into the program.

Grier said Giant Step was an experimental program intended originally to teach the youths "how to run a business."

"As time went on, we ourselves saw that the project, as conceptualized, couldn't work. We ourselves canceled the areas where it was wrong and...and $300,000 worth of equipment we purchased was given back to the government."

a 320-acre facility with 1,600 in-patients, declined any comment on the Hinckley case. They would only say that he would be treated in the Division of Forensic Programs, which has about 220 patients held under various degrees of security.

However, experts in this type of psychiatry said most institutions follow a similar routine in evaluating and treating patients connected with criminal cases.

Dr. Thomas Gutheil, associate professor of psychiatry at Harvard University, said patients start with a battery of physical and mental tests, and have therapy sessions one or more times a week with a psychiatrist.

Gutheil noted in a telephone interview that an offender may be a very different person after a trial than when he committed the act, since he has been evaluated and treated during the interim.

"A lot of people have chronic (mental) conditions that carry on through the trial," he said in a telephone interview. "But you can have people with a transient state of disability and by the time you get to the end of the trial, you're dealing with a largely treated individual."

Dr. Shervert Frazier, psychiatrist-in-chief at McLean Hospital in Belmont, Mass., said many institutions do a complete series of physical and mental tests despite what was done to prepare for a trial.

"We do our own tests - including complete medical, neurological and psychiatric examinations - because previous tests may have had other motives involved and we prefer to start fresh," Frazier said in a telephone interview.

After this workup, which can take up to four weeks to do, staff experts and possibly outside consultants determine mental status and a treatment program, if warranted, he said.

Dr. Seymour Halleck, professor of psychiatry at the University of North Carolina, said it might not be necessary to repeat all the medical tests. But he said written and oral psychiatric exams should be fresh for evaluating possible release.

"The issue of 'dangerousness' is not well-documented," Halleck continued. "In general, people change once they get a violent act out of their system. But I don't know how anyone can predict someone won't do it again."

Bar Annexations On Basis Of Race

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Justice Department disallowed on Tuesday three annexations of white areas by the city of Greensboro, N.C., saying they would illegally dilute black voting power.

In a letter to city attorney Jesse L. Warren, Assistant Attorney General William Bradford Reynolds, head of the civil rights division, said that as a result of the department's objections the three 1981 annexations are legally unenforceable.

Under the Voting Rights Act of 1965 nine states and parts of 13 others, including North Carolina, all with a history of past voter discrimination, must obtain advance approval for electoral changes from either the Justice Department or the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia.

"The addition of approximately 11,000 white citizens and only about 1,000 black citizens, given the existence of racially polarized voting, could easily eliminate the limited success black candidates have enjoyed in past city council elections," Reynolds wrote.

Reynolds also criticized a 1980 referendum in the city switching from a ward system to at-large election of councilmen.

"We are unable to conclude that the at-large election system recognizes the political potential of black voters in Greensboro as a fairly drawn ward-type plan would," Reynolds wrote.

TEACH AN OLD DOG NEW TRICKS.

CREOLE WIENERS

- 8 slices bacon, diced
- 3 cups minced onion
- 1 can (16 oz.) tomatoes
- 3/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/8 teaspoon pepper
- 1 lb. Luter's hot dogs

Here's a main course that serves six with a flavor that says "barbecue." Fry the bacon and onion in a large skillet until the bacon is crisp and the onion is tender. Drain all but two tablespoons bacon drippings from skillet. Stir in tomatoes, salt and pepper, heat to boiling, reduce heat and simmer 15 minutes, stirring occasionally. Add hot dogs, cover and simmer for 15 minutes.

SWEET AND SOUR HOT DOGS

- 10 oz. currant jelly
- 8 oz. Dijon mustard
- 10 oz. ketchup
- 2 lbs. Luter's hot dogs

For a tangy hors d'oeuvre that serves 30, start by cutting the hot dogs into bite-size pieces. Separately, heat the jelly, mustard and ketchup until the jelly melts. Add hot dogs, heat for 20 minutes, garnish with pineapple chunks and serve in a chafing dish. One word of caution: If you settle for anything less than Luter's Original Old-Fashioned Hot Dogs, just remember, you'll have those 30 guests to answer to.

 Opening lead: Two of ♠.

"Penny wise, pound foolish," states the old adage. South, declarer at three no trump, took care of the pennies, but the pounds failed to take care of themselves.

The auction was simple. North judged well when he raised to three no trump with his unbalanced hand and good six-card suit—it was unlikely that eleven tricks could be made, but nine were quite likely.

West elected to lead his fourth-best heart. Declarer won in hand with the ten and led a diamond to the jack, which won. Related with the success of his finesse, declarer returned to hand with the ace of clubs and led another diamond. West's discard of a spade was a cruel shock. Declarer took dummy's two high diamonds, and he could set up two long cards in the suit if he wished. But there was no entry to cash them.

Declarer made a fatal error at trick one. Five diamond tricks were all that were needed to make the contract, so declarer should have made certain that he had an entry to dummy to run the suit. Declarer won the first trick too cheaply—he should have taken it with the ace!

Now declarer can take the diamond finesse. Assuming East again holds up, declarer continues with the ace of diamonds. When West shows out, declarer simply concedes the next diamond trick to East's queen while discarding a club from his hand. (That is better technique than taking the second high diamond and then conceding a trick in the suit, because declarer won't have a convenient discard on the fourth round of diamonds.)

As the cards lie, East's best return is a spade. Declarer spurns the finesse. He rises with the ace and leads a heart toward the queen-jack. Now he is assured of an entry to dummy, and he will be able to run the diamonds for his contract.

EDUCATED CYCLISTS

LINTHICUM, Md. (AP)—The more educated a motorcyclist is the more likely he is to seek formal cycle training, according to survey of motorcycle riders.

The Motorcycle Safety Foundation survey of more than 16,000 motorcyclists found that the percentage of riders who have taken a rider course increases slightly at higher levels of education. Participation is not related to age.

The survey also found education relates to helmet use, with riders who have graduated from college being twice as likely to wear helmets as riders who did not go on to college.

Volunteer Guinea Pig For Drugs

By MICHELE DIGIROLAMO

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Robert Amos is locked up in a nondescript building where people clad in white coats extract his blood, prick and probe his body, use machines to monitor his life signs and inject him with drugs.

Some of the drugs have never before been used on humans. That's because Amos, of Liberty, Mo., has for six years been a regular volunteer at Quincy Research Center which specializes in pre-market testing of new drugs and re-evaluation of already-marketed medicines.

"Most testing centers are affiliated with a university hospital which recruits from a large clinic population," says Administrative Director Sherry Lane. "We prefer to go to the community and say, 'Hey, we're here. If you want to come, that's fine.' There's less coercion that way. There are still a lot of people who blindly do what the doctors say."

Amos, 35, a father of one son with another child on the way, makes no bones about why he allows the Quincy team to use him as a human guinea pig.

"Money," says Amos, an unemployed truck driver. "I'd like to have a regular job, but the job field is limited. The situation calls for something like this."

Despite his wife's view — "She don't like it all. She's kind of leery" — Amos has no intentions of stopping. He recently bought a new car from his Quincy earnings.

He is happy with his lifestyle. He has a roof over his head, a comfortable bed, three meals a day, other volunteers to play cards with and talk to and his wife, Kathy, who brings their son, Brian, to visit him about four times a week.

Amos passes the days reading a how-to magazine in preparation for his plan to someday construct an energy-efficient sod dwelling with a solar heating system.

How long will he remain a drug testee?
 "I will until something breaks."

Mrs. Lane said Quincy is the largest private drug-testing agency of the five or so in the country.

The center — founded and run by Dr. John Arnold, who was instrumental in finding a cure for malaria — is funded mainly by pharmaceutical companies who hire it on a contract-bid basis. The Quincy work is done in three ways: in-patient, out-patient and group studies.

In-patient studies are mainly to establish the maximum tolerated dose in man. It requires the volunteers to live at the center for the duration of the program so they can be monitored closely. Many of the drugs are being tested for the first time ever in humans.

"We are simply looking at it for safety, or at what level will had symptoms or side effects set in," says Mrs. Lane. "We're not looking at whether it works or not. This is so doctors can prescribe dosages."

For example, Quincy doctors are using Amos and several volunteers to determine if a drug supposed to relieve the aches of arthritis has any negative side effects, specifically gastro-intestinal bleeding.

Amos was administered a fixed dose of the drug daily during his 23-day stay. Doctors inject a bit of radioactive material into his bloodstream and then measure the blood loss by the amount of radioactive material in Amos' stool, says Dr. Eugene Smith, the center's medical director.

"Almost every in-house study is done in a double-blind fashion — half on medicine, half on placebo," says Mrs. Lane.

In most of the in-house studies, Quincy only allows men to volunteer.

"Many are basically of a transient nature, normally not people out seeking full-time employment," Mrs. Lane says. "Many have served time in jail. They're the best for research because they are used to confinement. They're better than college kids."

"And, unfortunately we benefit from strikes... Many are truly between jobs, but for many more it's kind of a way of life for them to drift from one thing to another."

The volunteers go through a screening including a complete medical history, physical examination and other tests. For some studies, a psychological screening is necessary.

With repeat volunteers like Amos, who says, "I pick the ones (studies) that are the longest and the most money," Quincy insists on a minimal washout period of a month between studies.

"And then we start all over with the person, even if they've been here before," Smith says.

Amos and other regulars say they feel healthier than the average person because of all the medical attention they get.

Are the volunteers ever in any danger? Statistics say no. In the nearly 10 years the center has been testing with humans, none have died or come close to dying.

"I think the best way to express the real safety of this operation is that these volunteers are rated at the same risk as a clerical office worker by insurance companies," Smith said.

In out-patient testing, the center tries out a drug on a limited number of people with specific medical problems such as high blood pressure, allergies, colds or coughs to measure the drug's efficacy.

Volunteers come and go like a visit to the doctor's office. They are treated free and are paid a small amount for their participation.

The volunteers for these studies "come from all walks of life — white collar, blue collar — people who have often become discontent with available treatment for their condition," says Mrs. Lane. "Also, some feel a need to contribute to society."

In group studies, people with no specific medical problems are used to test products usually sold over-the-counter, for example, lozenges for minor sore throat irritations.

"We run into a really fun population trying to raise money for church, Boy Scouts, etc.," Mrs. Lane says. "You have to have a whole lot of bake sales to raise the money they can make here."

Arnold says he founded the center as an alternative to the use of prison volunteers.

He says there was apprehension about public disquiet over prison volunteers and the threat of national legislation prohibiting prison testing — measures which several state legislatures already had taken.

"What we expected would happen happened," Arnold says. "The FDA (Federal Drug Administration) and HEW (Health, Education and Welfare) both passed regulatory acts prohibiting prison testing."

On the importance of the testing, Arnold says, "The need for new medicines is one of the few major crisis points in our current civilization because we have managed to extend life expectancies to age 90."

"Medicare, you think we have problems with that system now, think what will happen in 10 years. They're not even calculating in the 90-year life expectancy."

It Began With Plastic Bottle

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — Beginning with the plastic bottle for bleaches, packaging has dominated the use of high-density polyethylene in the United States, reports Phillips Chemical.

Packaging, including the plastic gallon milk bottle, accounts for almost half of HDPE production.

Drug Supermarket In New York's Lower East Side

By LAWRENCE KILMAN
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) - Illicit drugs carry trademarks, dealers hire barkers to tout their wares and junkies wait in lines to buy drugs on a Lower East Side street that a state survey calls "New York City's major drug supermarket."

Four undercover agents from the state Division of Substance Abuse Services spent four days on an eight-block stretch of Rivington Street and found 50 drug dealers, hundreds of addicts and a dozen "shooting galleries" - abandoned buildings where addicts "shoot up." They found dealers who rented hypodermic needles to customers; youths from suburban New Jersey, New York and Connecticut buying marijuana, heroin, cocaine and pills without leaving their cars; and junkies openly injecting drugs.

The street is in the heart of the Lower East Side. It is a busy street with grocery stores, a matzoh factory, social clubs and a public school. Orchard Street, where New Yorkers flock for bargains on clothing, crosses Rivington in the area surveyed.

"Members of the street survey team were approached and asked if they wanted to buy pot, if they wanted to buy cocaine, if they wanted to buy heroin, and they kept saying, 'No,'" said Dennis Whalen, a spokesman for the agency, which released its report Tuesday.

"Finally, they were asked what they were doing there - that seems to be the attitude on Rivington Street," Whalen said.

In the meantime, police arrested 113 people in a drug raid Tuesday. Police also seized a half pound of heroin with a street value of $60,000, a quarter pound of cocaine worth 15,000 and 750 assorted pills.

To the undercover police officers from the Seventh Precinct's narcotics unit who spend their days on Rivington Street, the survey findings were no surprise. In fact, "they missed a lot," said Sgt. Arthur Nolan, who heads the team.

The surveyors said more than 150 cars with out-of-state license plates were seen cruising or stopping in the area during the four-day period.

Jose Velasquez, a member of the precinct's narcotics team, said he has seen junkies standing in lines waiting to buy drugs. He said dealers often hire people called "steerers" to stand on corners, tout their wares and direct buyers to them.

Some dealers even mark their packets of drugs with trademarks - "Black Sunday," "Presidential" and "Medicaid."

"We made over 1,000 arrests since last July," said Nolan. "We seize a great deal of drugs, money, guns, stolen credit cards, over 1,000 forged prescriptions. The problem is, we get the dealers, we bring them in, and they get light sentences."

Bob Barchiesi, another member of the team, said the dealers "laugh at us" when they're arrested because they know they'll soon be out of jail.

Swain County has been ordered, state Elections Director Alex Brock said Tuesday.

Brock said he ordered the SBI to probe into allegations that sheriff candidate Reeves Colville Jr. paid three Cherokee voters to cast absentee ballots for him and illegally registered another person for the June 29 primary.

Two of Colville's opponents, Paul Crisp and John E. Rogers, and B.J. Laws of Cherokee filed the charges Monday with state and local boards of elections.

Colville has denied the charges, claiming witnesses were pressured into signing affidavits accusing him and an employee, Harold Maney, of wrongdoing.

Brock said the board and its counsel would wait to see the investigation's results before deciding whether to order a full scale probe in Swain County.

Brock said he ordered the SBI to probe into allegations that sheriff candidate Reeves Colville Jr. paid three Cherokee voters to cast absentee ballots for him and illegally registered another person for the June 29 primary.

Two of Colville's opponents, Paul Crisp and John E. Rogers, and B.J. Laws of Cherokee filed the charges Monday with state and local boards of elections.

Colville has denied the charges, claiming witnesses were pressured into signing affidavits accusing him and an employee, Harold Maney, of wrongdoing.

Bear-Baiting Guilty Plea

BRYSON CITY, N.C. (AP) - Eight men, arrested two weeks ago when federal authorities broke up a Cherokee bear-fighting operation, pleaded guilty in federal court Tuesday to aiding and abetting in bear baiting.

The men, arrested when federal and local authorities raided the bear baiting operation in the Birdtown Community June 5, received fines ranging from $200 to $400.

Charges were dropped against eight other defendants, described by Assistant U.S. District Attorney Max Cogburn as bystanders.

A teen-ager was given pretrial diversion because he is a juvenile under federal law, Cogburn said, adding that pretrial diversion amounts to a year of probation without conviction.

Rufus Locust, 39, of Cherokee, the owner of the 225-pound black bear confiscated in the raid, asked that his case be moved to U.S. District Court. Similar requests were made by Locust's wife, Ola, and Ricky Allen Cochran, 22, of Bryson City.

Locust is charged with managing a bear-fighting operation, two counts of aiding and abetting a bear fight, and one count of furthering an act of cruelty to an animal. His wife and Cochran are each charged with a single count of aiding and abetting in bear baiting.

Order Inquiry Into Vote-Buying Charge

BRYSON CITY, N.C. (AP) - An investigation into vote buying charges leveled Monday against a Democratic candidate for sheriff of Swain County has been ordered, state Elections Director Alex Brock said Tuesday.

Brock said he ordered the SBI to probe into allegations that sheriff candidate Reeves Colville Jr. paid three Cherokee voters to cast absentee ballots for him and illegally registered another person for the June 29 primary.

Two of Colville's opponents, Paul Crisp and John E. Rogers, and B.J. Laws of Cherokee filed the charges Monday with state and local boards of elections.

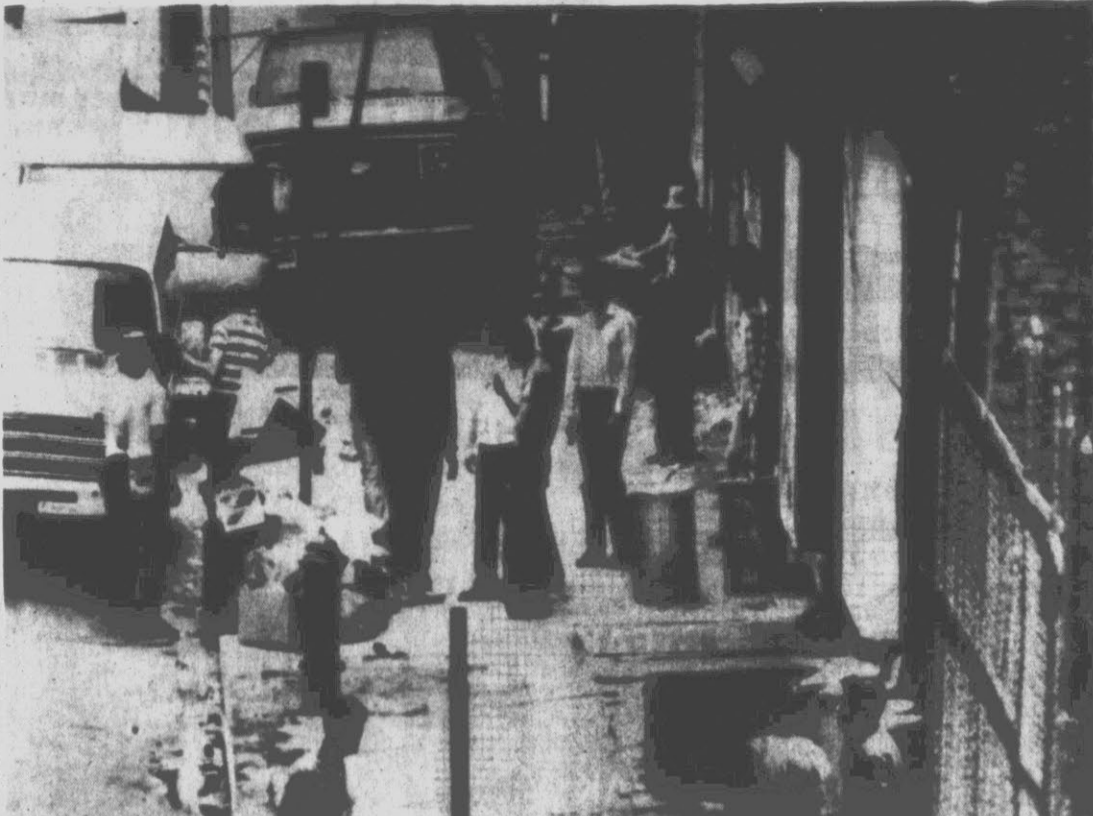

Colville has denied the charges, claiming witnesses were pressured into signing affidavits accusing him and an employee, Harold Maney, of wrongdoing.

Brock said the board and its counsel would wait to see the investigation's results before deciding whether to order a full scale probe in Swain County.

DRUG SUPERMARKET - Buyers make drug deals on Manhattan's Lower East Side Tuesday, which are then transacted in the buildings along Rivington Street. It is a street where cocaine, pills and heroin are sold through car windows, and also where suburban kids flock because it has the reputation for having the best drugs in the city. (AP Laserphoto)

Broadcasting Museum Salutes Bob And Ray

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) - Bob and Ray. Ray and Bob. They're interchangeable, each taking turns making comedy curves out of the other's straight lines. For more than 35 years, their humorously human characters have been delivering the goods without telling a single stand-up joke or the least bit off-color remark.

Bob is Bob Elliott, Ray is Ray Goulding. You can call them Bob and Ray. Everybody does. Their brand of comedy is too universally personal for last names, like Abbott & Costello, Laurel & Hardy, Stiller & Mearer. Bob and Ray are our friends; only friends can get away with making us look foolish.

They once offered listeners GRIT, "which makes your hands look dirty to give you an honest workman's appearance." Only SMURGE will take it off, and only WHIFF, in the two-gallon demi-jar, removes the odor of SMURGE.

Bob is the thinner and shorter one, so the other must be Ray. One was Bert and the other was Harry Piels of beer-ad fame. Even American Express got into their act, giving the boys a "Do you know me?" commercial - a sure sign of superstardom.

The Museum of Broadcasting, open to the public here, is currently in the second week of its four-week "Bob and Ray Retrospective," offering the best broadcast bits from their countless radio and TV routines.

"It's nice to have this retrospective happen while you're still alive," says Ray. Each afternoon, Tuesday through Saturday, the museum offers five hours of film clips and audio snippets from many of their radio and TV shows and guest appearances. "When TV first started, they photographed people standing at microphones reading scripts," says Ray.

Bob and Ray began collaborating by accident in 1946, when newscaster Ray and disk jockey Bob of Boston station WHDH decided to kid around on-air just to amuse themselves.

"The record would end and we'd have to do something out of pure necessity," says Ray. "It wasn't always funny, but it was something."

In October, they'll be back on the radio with regular appearances on National Public Radio.

Whatever characters they bring along, roving reporter Wally Ballou is bound to find their foibles, pierce their pomposity and satirize anything we think we hold dear. Over the years, some of our favorites have been the head of the Fast-TalkersOfAmerica, the editor of Wasting Time Magazine and the Right Honorable G. M. Hummerbeck's bull's-eye of a political babble-burster.

R. H. Hummerbeck believes most politicians make the mistake of choosing one party. He likes both sides of the fence and runs on every ticket. He dusted off William Jennings Bryan's free-silver campaign "to see if it still works."

Wasting Time Magazine gets stuffed-and-mounted hobbyists to come out of the woodwork. One poor soul collects odd-shaped fruits. They don't fit in an album, so he transports them in brown paper sacks. He once paid a Minneapolis farmer a mere $4 for a cucumber-shaped cantaloupe, but it cost $400 for airfare to get there. Another deadly enthusiast photographs the nearly extinct California condor, and if you can't see the fowls because they blend with the foliage, that's your problem, not his.

The Fast-TalkersOfAmerica held their annual convention in New York and wrapped up business in 14 minutes. That left more time to hit ALL the night spots, which they squeezed into one night.

Why live life in the express lane? "It leaves more time for yourself," says the head of the FTOA on his way out.

The boys don't waste time watching TV, although Ray likes baseball for sport and laughs. "I think George Steinbrenner is the funniest guy around."

Muscle Pulled By Ballet Star

CINCINNATI (AP) - The tour manager for Alexander Godunov says a muscle injury in the dancer's right calf might force the cancellation of a six-week, cross-country tour.

Steven Wagner said the ballet star plans to go ahead with his next scheduled performance Thursday in San Diego.

"If he's badly injured, it's unlikely the tour will continue," Wagner said. "We're not looking for anyone to risk his or her body and we've made that clear to all the dancers in the company, including Godunov."

A show scheduled here Sunday was canceled when it was learned Godunov could not dance. "Ethically I felt it was right to cancel because of the way the performance had been marketed," Wagner said.

Godunov appeared only once during a Monday night performance and completed the first selection in considerable pain, Wagner added.

"There was the possibility of tearing the muscle," he said. "That is pressure on a dancer, and I have a lot of respect for Godunov for trying to go on with it."

NBC Picking Up Dropped 'Taxi'

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) - When ABC-TV dropped "Taxi" earlier this year, it was expected the sitcom - starring Judd Hirsch - would return to the garage to gather cobwebs, but NBC has hailed down "Taxi" for next season.

NBC announced "Taxi" - which won Emmy awards as TV's best comedy for the past three seasons - will be presented on the network for the 1982-83 season.

Cast members returning for the series' fifth year, in addition to Hirsch, will be Danny De Vito, Marilu Henner, Andy Kaufman, Christopher Lloyd and Tony Danza. Comedienne Carol Kane has been added to the cast as a regular.

STAYING BUSY - Director Andrew McLaglen, left directs Julia Duffy and Stacy Keach during a scene from CBS' eight-hour miniseries "The Blue and the Gray" which is expected to air next November. McLaglen, son of Academy Award-winning actor Victor McLaglen, is keeping busy with "The Blue and the Gray" while also directing the two-hour ABC pilot "Travis McGee" and another upcoming CBS production, "The Shadow Riders". Wall Street Views Porn Pic Product

NEW YORK (AP) - Insisting their interest was entirely financial, pin-striped brokers came to Broadway for the screening of a movie billed as "the first X-rated film with Wall Street backing."

There was disagreement about the merits of the movie among the 100 businessmen and women Tuesday night after two previews, but executive producer Russell Bonds predicted the film would make a profit.

He called it "strictly a business venture. We don't approve or disapprove of it."

The film, "Wanda Whips Wall Street," is about a woman who uses her sexual assets to take over a New York securities firm.

"I thought it was dumb," said one female viewer, declining to identify herself. "I liked it," said a companion, Jack Emtage of Merrill Lynch.

Few of the brokers, advisers and investors at the screenings were willing to give their names or the names of their firms. But several agreed there is money to be made in X-rated films.

"Any individual who has an interest in profit realizes it's silly to close his eyes to the (film) because of its subject matter," said Bonds, who predicted his would be the first of many movies financed by Wall Street investors. Bonds described himself as an arranger of real estate, oil and gas deals.

In the picture, which drew applause, whistles and shouts from the audience, Wanda arrives in New York determined to land a job at Tyler Securities and gain control of its stock through methods that the Securities and Exchange Commission

Barbara Walters Tops Ratings Of Past Week

LOS ANGELES (AP) - A Barbara Walters special in which she interviewed Willie Nelson, Clint Eastwood and Carol Burnett placed first in the television ratings for the past week, according to figures by the A.C. Nielsen Co.

The ABC special was one of the few original shows of the week - although Miss Walters had previously interviewed Eastwood - as the rerun season entered the summer doldrums.

ABC was first with a 13 in the Nielsen ratings for the week ending June 22. CBS was second with 12.5 and NBC was third with 11.8. The networks say this means in an average prime time minute, 13 percent of the nation's homes with TV were tuned to ABC.

ABC placed four shows in the Top 10. The others were "Too Close for Comfort," "Three's Company," and "The Love Boat."

NBC's "Hill Street Blues," this year's Cinderella series, was third. The show began its remarkable climb after winning eight Emmys last September. NBC also placed two other shows, "Gimme a Break" and the NBC Sunday Movie "Five Days from Home," in the Top 10.

CBS had three shows in the Top 10, "Trapper John, M.D.," "M-A-S-H" and "The Jeffersons."

Here are the Top 10 shows: "The Barbara Walters Special," a rating of 23.4 or 18.8 million homes, ABC; "Too Close for Comfort," 21.6 or 17.3 million, ABC; "Hill Street Blues," 20.7 or 16.5 million, NBC; "Three's Company," 20.2 or 16.1 million, ABC; "Trapper John," 19.5 or 15.6 million, CBS; "M-A-S-H," 19.0 or 15.2 million, CBS; "The Jeffersons," 18.7 or 14.9 million, CBS; "Gimme a Break," 18.1 or 14.5 million, NBC; Movie: "Five Days from Home," 16.9 or 13.5 million, NBC; "The Love Boat," 16.8 or 13.4 million, ABC.

Here are the next 10: "House Calls," CBS; "Alice," CBS; "WKRP in Cincinnati," CBS; "Diff'rent Strokes," NBC; "20-20," ABC; "The Fall Guy," ABC; "60 Minutes," CBS; "Quincy," NBC; Movie: "Charleston," NBC; "One Day at a Time," CBS.

Here are the five lowest-rated shows: "One of the Boys," NBC; "Father Murphy," NBC; "TV Funnies," NBC; "Flamingo Road," NBC; "CBS Reports," CBS.

Park Provides Language Help

By KEVIN McCULLEN
Associated Press Writer
ZION NATIONAL PARK,
Utah (AP) — Victor Jackson greeted visitors to this spectacular national park with a friendly word or pamphlet saying, "Discover Zion."
His book, "Discover Zion," contains passages written in English, German, French and Japanese. It was published in 1978 by Zion Natural History Corp., a private non-profit group which sells maps and books to visitors and helps pay for park projects.

Last year, through the corporation, park information pamphlets were printed in German and French. Each is color-coded to match a country's flag.

Jackson's efforts haven't gone unnoticed by his superiors.
"I think his program is the best in the Rocky Mountain region," said Wescott Wolfe, executive assistant to the service's Rocky Mountain regional director.
"He's a very innovative and enthusiastic naturalist," said Harry Grafe, Zion superintendent. "Vic's the type of guy who, if there's a need, he meets it."

A typical day finds Jackson standing behind an information counter at the visitor center, conversing in French with two Swiss visitors and perhaps conducting an impromptu tour for a group of visitors.

"The French are really fussy about their language and when they find an American who speaks French without an accent they really appreciate it," Jackson said.

He learned French in the second and third grades in Vietnam, after being tutored in English the previous year by a Vietnamese woman.

Japanese troops arrived in Vietnam in 1940 and in 1943
Jackson's mother and father and 60 other missionary families were forced to move into an internment camp on the Mekong River south of Saigon.

Jackson's family was eventually swapped for Japanese and Japanese-Americans detained in the United States, and later
Jackson was graduated from Wheaton College in Illinois.

He joined the park service after a stint in the Army.

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C.
(AP) — The Swiss smoker, for years an oddity because of a preference for cigarettes made solely from Maryland tobacco, is beginning to show a preference for mixed cigarettes, according to R.J.
Reynolds Tobacco International Inc. studies.

American-blend cigarettes, cigarettes combining fluecured, burley, Oriental and Maryland tobacco, are slowly gaining in acceptance in Switzerland, the studies say. R.J.R. executives said the blended cigarette may be growing in Switzerland by as much as 10 percent a year.

Educator Is Advocate Of Basic Study

LONG BEACH, Calif (UPI) — Twenty years as head of the largest college system in the United States impressed Glenn S. Dumke with a lasting lesson: Back to basics.

American higher education should fend off appeals to deal with extra-academic problems and renew emphasis on basic learning, Dumke says. He is the outgoing chancellor of the state university and college system.

"We've got to get back to basic subjects and get away from this idea that education is fun," said Dumke.

"Education isn't fun. Education is hard work and people who want to get educated are going to have to learn to work."

Dumke has been chancellor of the California state college and university system, which now has almost 320,000 students on 19 campuses, since 1962. He is retiring this year.

"The major task of anyone who succeeds to this desk is to maintain a high level of academy quality in the face of all the pressures on higher education," Dumke said.

"For a while during the late '60s and early '70s we got so permissive," he lamented. "People are becoming very worried about a lack of fundamental education, lack of competence in basic English and mathematics..."

A major problem for American higher education, he said, is the trend "to have the university solve many problems of a troubled society which really do not fit into the university's main obligation."

With the declining influence of the church and other social institutions, he said, "people are looking to the university to patch up all of these lacks."

"I don't blame them. It's a logical thing to do. But I don't think the university is equipped or designed to solve all the problems of a troubled society."

"We're asking the university to take on the job of job placement, to be a counseling center for the community, to go into public entertainment in a large way — athletics, rock concerts."

"People have tried to make the university a social welfare agency, a referral point for psychological problems, a local entertainment center."

"They have tried to give it obligations in fields such as child care centers, forcing it to spread its resources in connection with all kinds of social problems. We've been asked to establish family planning centers on campuses, with all that that implies."

The university's main task, he said, is "to pass on the wisdom of the ages to the younger generation, probe the frontiers of knowledge, and along the line, do something in the way of character development."

"This departure from the basics is putting us in a difficult position in regard to international competition. For instance the flight away from foreign languages — formerly a standard subject."

He lamented that the attitude that a well educated person must have some knowledge of a foreign language has disappeared.

"Even in doctoral programs, which used to require French and German pro forma, that vanished. You need one language now, maybe not even that."

"That has put us at the mercy of overseas competitors like Japan, West Germany and others who don't have that repugnance toward language study. They are giving us all kinds of trouble economically because of that."

"It's not only language, it's knowing the other fellow's economic system, culture, and so on."

Dumke, an historian, was dean of faculty at Occidental College, a prestigious private school, before becoming president of San Francisco State College in 1957.

Dumke, 65, a specialist in western American history, married a fellow Occidental College student, Dorothy Robison.

He is an amateur photographer and was active in Republican Party politics before moving into the chancellor's office. He said he is thinking of looking for a role in GOP affairs after his retirement, and will continue to serve on the National Advisory Committee on (college and university) Accreditation.

In 1961, he served on the state commission that laid the groundwork for California's present three-tier higher education framework — the University of California system, the state university and colleges system and two-year community college.

He became vice chancellor of the state college system in 1961 and chancellor the next year.

The university trustees early this month ended many months of searching for a successor, naming Dr. Wynetka Ann Reynolds, provost of Ohio State University, to the $86,700-a-year job.

Dumke believes pressures for lower standards in higher education stem in part from the changing makeup of student bodies.

"We are faced now with large groups of people who formerly did not go to college — ethnic minorities, educationally disadvantaged, whatever. And we're under pressure, often from very well intentioned people, to reduce standards so these people will have an opportunity to get a degree."

"We couldn't be more unfair to them than if we yield to that kind of pressure. We'd simply be telling them they were able to do certain things when they really can't."

A return to basics will require "the appointment of educational administrators who assume the responsibility of insisting on academic quality," Dumke said.

"Another way would be for the people of this country to get scared, as they did in the reaction to Sputnik in 1957. That'll do it every time."

"One of the benefits of this current concern over possible nuclear confrontation is that it is getting people to think about our scientific and technical competence. It may have somewhat the same effect as Sputnik did."

Dumke says he has a higher regard for President Reagan than many other college administrators, in part because philosophically he supports Reagan's budget cutbacks, although he questions the speed with which they are being implemented.

"I've always been of the opinion that the federal government has gotten too far into higher education," he said. "Higher education should be largely a state and region responsibility..."

"But after you've conditioned five or six student generations to depending on federal largesse, you can't just come along with a meataxe and cut it off."

"We ought to phase it out rather than cutting it off."

Data Bank On 50,000 Seeds

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A computer here contains information on some 50,000 varieties of seeds.

Plant breeders use the information in developing new varieties of fruits and vegetables that show commercial promise.

"Plant breeding generates a tremendous amount of data," said Dr. William Hagan of Del Monte. "Each year we breed 2,000 new plants and characteristics. Each of these has two parents."

LOOKING AHEAD
BONN, West Germany (AP) — Draftees must serve longer than the current term of 15 months if the West German military is to maintain its strength of 1.2 million trained and equipped soldiers in the 1990s, Defense Minister Hans Apel says.

Archeology In Backyard Said Trying

By JOHN A. WEBSTER, ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — An archaeological site in your backyard can be something of a trial, according to a woman who wound up with one in hers.

One of the problems now for Kit Sargeant is that the primary excavation of an Indian village that existed from 1300 to 1650 has to be considered pretty much completed. One reason: additional digging might undermine the house.

Mrs. Sargeant said she and her husband, retired Army Col. Arnold Sargeant, did not intend to purchase property when they moved here to attend graduate school, but found an old adobe house near the Rio Grande they could not resist.

A few years later, Mrs. Sargeant, an archaeologist, began digging in the backyard, mainly to trace the source of bits of pottery found on the property. She said she first thought the project would take six to eight weeks.

Two years and 200 hundred tons of dirt later, Mrs. Sargeant, with the help of graduate archaeology students, the Albuquerque Archaeological Society and other volunteers, had uncovered an Indian pueblo occupied intermittently from 1300 to 1650.

The dig, 1,188 square feet of hole up to 10 feet deep, also has resulted in the discovery of a large collection of artifacts such as pottery, tools, arrowheads and beads.

"We didn't really think we were going to have anything like what we found," Mrs. Sargeant said, "and we didn't know how complicated it would be. We did it all by hand."

She said evidence from small digs in other parts of the property and on the surface in neighboring yards indicates the total occupied area may have covered 20 to 30 acres.

The primary excavation is essentially completed, at least for the time being, partly because additional digging could undermine the house, she said.

"What we are trying to do now is finish the analysis (of the artifacts), write and report on what has been accomplished so far and then write grant proposals," she said.

Mrs. Sargeant estimated that $50,000 would be needed to complete a thorough study "of just what happened while the people were here."

"We've put a lot of money in it ourselves — $11,000, and that's a lot for us," she said. "We've also gotten about $3,500 in donations."

Other archaeologists have told Mrs. Sargeant "they would love to have their own site," but she said they may not realize how much work is involved.

"It's marvelous, but it's also a tremendous responsibility. It has been an all-consuming affair. There's little I do in my life that is not concerned with working at this site."

"Responsibility" is a word Mrs. Sargeant uses often in talking about the dig, noting that many southwestern archaeological sites have been lost to "elitist professionals" or ravaging "pothunters."

"We have tried to screen and preserve all cultural materials ... so we would be able to interpret what we have found."

"People need to take a responsible attitude toward cultural and archaeological sites. It's important to understand the past."

The task of interpreting the information gathered at the dig has been complicated by the fact that the village was periodically abandoned and then reoccupied, probably as a result of repeated flooding from the Rio Grande.

Mrs. Sargeant said the pueblo Indians were not the first to occupy the site. Below the clay layer, the floor of the earliest pueblo, is evidence of a campsite with structures built of wood and brush.

A Language For World Is Offered

The Bisbee Review

BISBEE, Ariz. (AP) — At 84, Rusef Jaque wants to give a gift to the world — a new language.

Called Gloneo, short for Globalized Neo Latin, the language is the product of more than 40 years of research into common communication for every person.

Jaque, speaking in a soft voice, went to one of the many wooden boxes arranged throughout his apartment and unlatched the top, revealing 20 or 30 separate holes packed with printed leaflets. Reaching into a cubicle, he drew out a page detailing some of his philosophy of life.

There are sheets on Gloneo, of course, or vegetarianism, European culture and many other subjects.

A printer for 50 years, Jaque said his knowledge of religions and languages had been greatly improved by a 1959 trip around the world. The seeds of Gloneo already had been sprouting but he felt attempts at a universal language had produced a tongue that was difficult for the common person to use. Gloneo would be for every person.

"I broke down language to its common base and then built it back up," he said.

He has taken words from many languages — Latin, Italian, Spanish, French, Esperanto (another universal language), Malay, Arabic, Chinese, Japanese and others. In its present form, Gloneo consists of over 17,000 words.

Jaque believes that the reason he has been successful in creating a simple language is that he is not a professional linguist. He feels that if he had been, his language probably would have fallen into the same traps that other universal languages have.

One of his leaflets, which is printed in English — but like Gloneo minus capital letters or punctuation — lists "23 reasons why I use gloneo." Among them:

- gloneo words sound soft and sweet to heart and ear
- gloneo exists as the most easily learned language anywhere
- gloneo displaces political languages among freefolk
- gloneo easily conveys simple and complex ideas with clarity

All 23 reasons, Jaque says, apply to no other language.

"Men and women who accept these helpful aids to better and more natural living, become more humane as they use Gloneo," he says.

Of all the boxes containing printed material, the most precious is the one he calls "The Emerald Archive." Inside is the original handwritten manuscripts of his first two attempts at a universal language, and the master copy of the 17,000-word Gloneo language.

The archive also contains a copy of his autobiography and many of the books and manuscripts he has written over the years. Reaching into the box, he pulled out a copy of the world code and read a poem, first in the new language, then translated into English:

patrino tenu vir — patrino amu vir — mia docha piqa qifena babino Fermuvia bruna djon — snuglu su glosa —
mia preqoza gaja qifena babino

Mother holds you — mother loves you —
My sweet little fine baby girl!

Close your brown eyes —
snuggle up close —
My precious gay fine baby girl!

Jaque hopes Gloneo will become the universal language.

"I've put in 40 years of research, many nights of midnight oil," he says. "I believe that anything of real value is never lost. Maybe someone in heaven is speaking Gloneo right now."

Real Reward In Lambs Is 'Emotional'

By MILLY McLEAN
GILMANTON, N.H. (UPI)
— The cards are stacked against a New England farmer who wants to raise lamb for market.

Pauline Marriott, who has been raising them for 10 years, can list the problems quickly: disease, long hours, poor stock, hungry dogs, skyrocketing grain prices, shortage of bedding material and competition from New Zealand and the Midwest. On top of that, it rarely pays the property taxes.

Why bother?

"I really like them," said Mrs. Marriott, 37, a thin woman dressed in faded jeans with her grey-streaked brown hair gathered on top of her head.

"It's so rewarding going out there in the barn and seeing all their faces staring at me. There's nothing like going out on a summer evening and seeing them grazing in the field. It's an emotional thing," she said.

Like most New England sheep farmers, she could never make money on lambs alone, she said. During the spring she spends several days a week shearing other people's sheep. She sells breeding ewes, spins yarn, sells sheep hides, gives lectures and demonstrations and edits a sheep growers' newsletter.

But it still doesn't cover the property taxes on her 20-acre Sheep Hill Farm. Her husband, Bruce, works full-time for the county extension office.

Mrs. Marriott's life during lambing season — mid-December to mid-February — revolves almost entirely around the sheep. A ewe that has trouble birthing needs someone who can quickly assist or both the ewe and lamb may die.

"I put a mattress on the floor with an intercom to the barn by my ear. I'm afraid if I go to bed I won't wake up when one of them needs me. You tune yourself into the lambing sounds," she said.

At Christmas, with a house full of company, she "was out in the barn helping one of the ewes. There was afterbirth all over the floor and blood all over my hands and arms" she said. "We'd just finished and I looked up. All my company was staring at me."

Mrs. Marriott, who has about 50 breeding ewes, pointed to the black-faced lambs huddling in one corner of a pen. At about 100 pounds, they were ready for slaughter.

At the turn of the century, most New Hampshire farms had at least a few sheep.

"The old-timers say the increase in population caused the decline. They didn't fence and the dogs began killing off their sheep," Mrs. Marriott said.

"Now more people are beginning to have a few sheep. But the cost of land, the taxes. People don't have the space for the lambs. They're worried about dogs and coyotes are beginning to move in, killing the sheep," she said.

Despite that, New England sheep raising has had a small revival. But as the stock has grown, some farmers have had trouble marketing the lamb, she said.

"You go into the market (in the Northeast) and you see lamb from New Zealand and the Midwest," she said. The Midwest has the large farms and federally-inspected slaughterhouses needed to provide restaurants and supermarkets with consistent supplies.

Marketing of New England lamb is usually done directly between buyer and seller, Mrs. Marriott said. The market has two seasons: one in the spring when Greek-Americans and other ethnic groups buy lamb for traditional Easter dinners. The other is the "freezer lamb" market, from late spring to early fall.

"People always say, 'How can you eat them? They're so cute.' But when you're spending almost $30 a day to feed them you don't feel bad about eating them," she said.

"With as many as I have there's no emotionalism involved. If they're not good quality I'll sell them for 'lamburg.' I had one that had a cough. I cooked it up for the dog," she said.
