Hailstones 'Dimple' Shuttle's Tiles

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A severe thunderstorm peppered the space shuttle Columbia with pea-sized hail Saturday on the eve of its final test flight, jabbing 400 dimples into the ship's heat-resistant tiles. Officials said they expected to repair the damage and launch on time at 11 a.m. EDT Sunday.

Astronauts Ken Mattingly and Hank Hartsfield went to bed while the damage assessment was going on. Earlier, a visiting congressman said they were "loose as a goose," and ready to go.

NASA spokesman Hugh Harris said 400 small holes were found in the tiles. He said they would be filled and smoothed over with the same adhesive used for attaching the tiles to the vehicles and that the work would be finished by 2 a.m. when the fueling was scheduled to begin.

Scaffolds were erected for the task and a service tower was moved back around the shuttle for inspecting areas not easily visible from the launch pad.

The work went on during a planned 8-hour hold and did not affect the countdown, which had been the smoothest of any flight to date.

Lightning struck the service tower during the midafternoon storm and alarms were triggered on the pad area. Firemen were dispatched but found no fire.

The spacecraft, mounted on the back of a huge fuel tank, had been protected on the pad by the service tower until it was moved away early Saturday.

On its fourth trip into space, the shuttle is slated to add 2.8 million miles to the 5.2 million logged earlier.

Mattingly and Hartsfield flew practice landings Saturday and attended flight briefings. Their families visited them during the day. The fliers were to be awakened Sunday at 5:30 a.m. and climb into Columbia's cockpit at 8:50 a.m.

If all goes well, the flight will end at Edwards Air Force Base in California next Sunday, the Fourth of July.

Although NASA officials insist that the test is the thing for this flight, too, the unseen star of the show is the cargo, a secret assortment of sensors being auditioned for use on new generations of spy satellites.

"The real priorities on the mission, as they have been on each of the missions to date (are) checkout and data gathering for the orbiter," said NASA shuttle director James A. Abrahamson. "We have had payloads ... they have been sort of piggy back. The primary objective is the test mission."

"Our job on Flight 4 is to be the cleanup hitter, to do all the tests that have not been accomplished, for one reason or another, on the

Israel Strengthens Beirut Seige

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli warplanes attacked a Syrian missile battery Saturday in the first battle action reported since announcement of the latest U.S.-arranged cease-fire. An armored column closed in on the the Beirut airport as Israel strengthened its siege around Palestinian guerrillas in west Beirut.

Israeli jets screamed overhead on reconnaissance missions and Lebanese army units were ordered to report to their units immediately, indicating their entry into west Beirut might be imminent.

Hundreds of refugees fled south and north in search of sanctuary. PLO chief Yasser Arafat toured his devastated enclave and expressed skepticism that the U.S.-mediated truce, announced Friday night, would hold. "Every two or three days, they (the Israelis) declare a cease-fire, only to break it shortly afterward," he said.

The Israeli military command said its warplanes returned safely to base after destroying a new SAM-6 missile battery Syria had moved into the Bekaa Valley in eastern Lebanon. No casualties were reported.

Israel has insisted that Syria cannot bring in new missile batteries. The military command did not say when the one attacked early Saturday had been set up.

Arafat also rejoiced over the resignation of Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., calling him the "pillar in the Reagan administration

County Board Approves Two New Pay Plans

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Comissioners has moved a step closer to finalizing the 1982-83 fiscal year budget by giving tentative approval to establishing longevity and incentive pay plans for county employees.

The board, in a meeting late Friday, also adopted a resolution which will tax-shelter employee contributions to the N.C. Local Government Employees Retirement System.

The longevity pay plan will cost an estimated $20,000 during the coming fiscal year, while the incentive program will cost an estimated $60,000 for 1982-83.

The longevity program, which follows the state scale, will give employees who have been with the county for 10 years a 1½ percent bonus, while those with 15 years service will receive 2¼ percent. Persons with 20 years service will get 3¼ percent, and those with 25 years service will receive 4½ percent.

The incentive program will allocate 1 percent of each department's total salary package for distribution among employees, based on job performance, in one-half or one pay-step increment.

Action on the incentive and longevity programs came after commissioners decided not to give an across-the-board pay hike to employees during the coming year. The decision not to give such increases was based, in part, on a survey of more than 20 counties of similar population and property valuation which indicated that Pitt's salaries are in line with those paid by other county governments.

Pitt County workers contributing to the N.C. Local Government Employees Retirement System will receive from 2 percent to 4 percent more take-home pay because of the adoption of the tax-sheltering resolution.

The tax shelter, created last week by the General Assembly, will mean that no state or federal income tax will be paid on the 6 percent of a worker's salary paid to the retirement system until the worker begins drawing retirement.

Commissioners held to their tentative decision made earlier last week to cut six positions and other items amounting to some $86,000 from the Health Department budget, even after hearing objections voiced by representatives of the Board of Health.

County Manager Reginald Gray had recommended a $1.47 million appropriation for the department in 1982-83 as compared with the present $1.53 million list of expenditures. The department has requested $1.49 million for the coming fiscal year.

The effect of the reduction will be to close the satellite clinics in Ayden, Bethel, Farmville and Grimesland.

Commissioners approved the cuts because the state has withdrawn its model health department support and the board decided not to pick up the major portion of the $200,000 reduction in state funding for the coming year. The department lost eight positions this year because of a similar loss in funding from the state, and stands to lose another $50,000 in state money for the 1983-84 fiscal year.

Dr. Sam T. White, chairman of the county Board of Health, and board member Dr. Earl Trevathan met with commissioners to voice the panel's objection to the proposed cuts.

White told commissioners his board "voted not to accept the cuts without meeting with you and objecting publicly."

"I feel strongly enough and am concerned enough to object," Trevathan told commissioners. He suggested that if the Health Department does not provide preventive care, it will "cost more later" to provide treatment. "One way or another, it's going to cost."

although no action was taken, commissioners met with members of the Pitt County Board of Education and Greenville school officials in an effort to work out solutions to funding requests for the coming year.

The county school board has asked for capital outlay funds to build a new middle school in Ayden, while the city school board has asked for current expense funds to maintain the present school program.

The recommended capital expenditure appropriation for the county did not include enough money to fully fund the Ayden project, while the recommended current expense budget for the city fell some $150,000 short of meeting the city system's requirements.

As far as the city schools are concerned, Superintendent Delma Blinson suggested that an additional $95,500 in capital outlay money and a switch of funds in current expense and capital outlay line items would "allow us to hold our own next year. That would allow us to hold on by our finger tips for another year."

At the meeting with the county school board, commissioners asked school officials to see if they could find any more surplus funds that could be used toward construction of the Ayden facility, after Gray reviewed the projected cost of the facility and funds available for its construction.

The county manager said bids received in 1981 placed the base cost of the proposed building at $2.34 million, while the net cost of the facility, including all alternatives, amounted to $2.56 million.

He said $1.81 million is available for the project, including $978,000 the school board has on hand, $424,000 in county school capital outlay money being held by the county, and $407,900 in proposed capital outlay funds for 1982-83.

Gray said "some possibilities" of raising the $755,600 deficit needed to fund the total project include a $370,000 loan at 4 percent interest from the State Literary Fund, or the issuing of $540,000 in bonds (two-thirds of the amount of bonds retired by the county during the present year may be issued without a vote of the people). Another possible way to start construction of the facility, he said, is by use of a continuing

City Lawyers Express Concern Over Hinckley Trial Verdict

By MELVIN LANG
Reflector Staff Writer

"Sane beyond a reasonable doubt."

Jurors in the trial of presidential assailant John W. Hinckley cited that phrase in the trial judge's charge to the jury as the main point in their decision to acquit Hinckley "by reason of insanity."

The verdict has touched off a wave of resentment approaching outrage across the country. In its wake have come numerous demands for change in state and federal laws that allow defendants to blame criminal acts on insanity, win brief court-ordered treatment and then go free. In Hinckley's case, he could go free in less than two months by convincing the trial judge that he now is sane.

"I guess from what one of the jurors said the government psychiatrists admitted this fellow (Hinckley) had a mental problem. That must have been what swayed the jurors," Greenville attorney Charles Vincent said.

"The defense evidently got the jury thinking about the insanity rather than the act. I guess what happened was that the defense lawyers got the law across to the jury. And if they (the public) don't like the law, it's up to the Legislature to change the law. The judge and the jury have to follow the law."

Veteran District Attorney Eli Bloom said the Hinckley verdict would not have occurred in North Carolina.

"He would have been found guilty and then by reason of insanity ..." scheduled for treatment, Bloom said.

Bloom, who said he has faced the guilty-but-insane plea perhaps three times in his career as a prosecutor, expressed surprise at the jury's verdict in the Hinckley trial, saying: "My feeling is that the man was absolutely guilty and should have been found guilty ... I feel that if he had been tried under North Carolina law he would have been found guilty."

In the Hinckley trial, the judge placed on the prosecution the burden of proving that Hinckley was sane at the time President Reagan and three other men

Miss Greensboro Wins N.C. Crown

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Elizabeth Williams, who captured a preliminary talent competition as Miss Greater Greensboro, went on to win the 45th annual Miss North Carolina Pageant Saturday night.

Miss Williams, 22, of Shelby, edged out Miss Topsail Island, Gay Willis — who had captured both talent and swimsuit competitions leading up to the final night.

Lynn Williford, Miss North Carolina 1981, presented the crown to Miss Williams, who will be among those participating in this year's Miss America Pageant.

Second runner-up was Miss Mount Holly, Margaret Smith, 23, of Charlotte, while Miss Pender County, Helen Williams, 21, of Wilmington, was third runner-up.

Miss Tarboro, Crystal Constance Collins, and Miss Morganton, Teresa M. Webb, who won swimsuit competitions in the earlier rounds, were not among the finalists.

The remaining finalists were: Miss Dunn, Lisa Hohn, 20, of Greensboro; Miss Garner, Donna Griffin, 21, of Goldsboro; Miss Rocky Mount, Terri Leggette, 25, of Rocky Mount; Miss Spiveys Corner, Kathy Memory, 23, of Elizabethtown and Miss Stanley County, Kelly Leigh Kepley, 20, of Albemarle.

Talent counts for half of each contestant's score, with swimsuit, evening gown and the judges' interviews making up the rest.

Educator Katheryn Lewis Is Retiring

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Katheryn Lewis admits she's the kind of person that needs a mountain to climb.

As an educator she's scaled some lofty peaks in the last 30 years — integration, consolidation, accreditation — but says she did it because she wanted to.

Ms. Lewis has been involved in education on and off since 1945 as a teacher, supervisor and, for the last four years, assistant superintendent of Pitt County's public schools. She will retire July 1, but says her involvement in education won't end.

"I don't know exactly what I'm going to do next, but as a firm believer in predestination, I'm confident that something's going to come along — it always has," said the assistant superintendent. "I'm not ruling out any possibilities."

In her trek through the last three decades, the most important thing she's learned, Ms. Lewis says, is that "there is no limit on human potential as long as you have someone who can arouse the potential — but you have to have someone who can bring it out."

She became a teacher not from choice but from necessity. "I wanted to manage my family farm", said the assistant superintendent, "but it didn't occur to me that I could be anything but a nurse or a teacher. I came from a family where women were teachers."

In the heart of the depression, Ms. Lewis spent two years as a high school senior because her family had no money for college when she graduated. Her father told her if she stayed out of school, she'd never go back.

"So he sent me back to high school for the 12th year," she said. "In the middle of the year my principal found a way for me to attend Atlantic Christian College so one day I was in high school and literally the next I was in college."

After spending a year in a classroom in Franklin County, Ms. Lewis made the decision not to teach anymore because, she said, she couldn't afford anything on her salary. "At that time I was making $97 a month," she explained. "I loved my kids, loved teaching, but couldn't have a thing."

Ms. Lewis went to work for the Bank of Wayne for $90 a month and hated the work but said she saw possibilities there. "But I saw no women in these possibilities," she noted.

Wooed back into teaching by what she called "convincing friends," she married, taught in Wilson, then moved to Pitt County to teach at Chicod.

When Ms. Lewis began her career in the county, it was the most rural she'd ever seen. "First of all there was no effort in the county at cohesion — no central control," she said. "Each school community had its own local school board and made its own decisions."

"The kids did a minimum of work and were happy to get out of school," she added, "and the parents were content with that."

Teaching at Chicod taught her one lesson that's remained with her since — expect more and you'll get more. "I learned that when I expected more, sooner or later I received it," she explained. "To this day I love the people of the Chicod area for teaching me that."

While at Chicod, Ms. Lewis began her family and continued teaching because "I didn't know teachers were supposed to quit if they were pregnant — I didn't know I was doing something wrong, quote unquote.

"At this point in my life I was living my role model of wife, mother, director at the church, etc.," said Ms. Lewis. "I had always envisioned myself in these roles — I always saw myself in charge of something."

In 1962, she was ready for a change, so she packed up her teaching materials and left Chicod. "I was separated and didn't know what I was going to do but I knew it was time for a transition," she explained. "I wanted to go back to school to get my doctorate but I could see no way financially to do so and feed my small children."

That summer, Superintendent D.H. Conley offered her a position as a county school guidance counselor.

"I set up a guidance program for the high schools, picking out small groups of bright students and working with them on college entrance and scholarships," said Ms. Lewis.

"Never before had there been any guidance of that type in the county," she added. Later, she was appointed director of pupil personnel and then assistant superintendent.

She learned, she said, during those early years in Pitt County's segregated schools that separate but equal was a myth. "I came to understand that black but equal was untrue. There were 14 white high schools and numerous black high schools but the facilities and services offered were far from symmetric".

One of the biggest challenges she was handed in Pitt County, said Lewis, was writing the county's policy manual. "I was told by the district chairman that a chore of that magnitude would take one full-time staff person, a secretary to do legwork and a consultant whose going rate was about $15,000," she noted.

Hinckley ...

were shot. In North Carolina, the defense is required to prove insanity.

"It's generally the worst defense you can use," Vincent said. "When all else fails, you have to use that defense. I would say a majority of the time it would be unsuccessful."

Attoney Milton Williamson, who said he has used a plea of insanity for a client only once, expressed indignation at the Hinckley verdict.

"I don't appreciate the verdict in the Hinckley trial," Williamson said. "I don't think a poor man would have had a chance. An indigent person without the ability to hire the best lawyers, to hire the psychiatrists, would not have had a prayer."

Greenville attorney Dallas C. Clark Jr. believes there is a place in courts for the insanity plea, but acknowledges he has qualms over its usage.

"I wonder if there is going to be a hue and cry to erase it from the books, but the problem is, there's going to be that one guy in a thousand who really needs it. Do you exclude that one situation ...," Clark said.

Clark said he used the insanity plea for two men while he was serving in the Marine Corps in Vietnam.

"I represented two guys that killed people. Both of them were evaluated psychologically, just as Hinckley ... Neither went to ... (prison) because both were insane," Clark said.

"I remember them vividly. I didn't have any qualms about the results of those particularly cases because I was really into the mental situation of my two clients. But those cases were different, both were in war zones, both had been in firefights — a lot of outside pressures involved that you could really see. Whether Mr. Hinckly had real pressures or not ... the jury obviously decided that he did.

Williamson agreed that a plea based on insanity is needed. He also said he believes the North Carolina law should be changed to take some of the burden of proof from the defendant.

"I feel like we need to change it," Williamson said, because "it's too strong against the defendant. The time has come when it just needs to be changed."

Hinckley, who has been admitted to a Washington facility for more evaluation, may face another trial involving his sanity.

Attorneys for the other three victims of the shooting incident that wounded Reagan have filed civil suits seeking damages totaling $72 million from Hinckley.

They have indicated efforts will be made to have Hinckley, who waived his right to defend himself in the trial that ended last week, testify about his conduct if the civil suits go to trial.

The suits were filed on behalf of White House press secretary James Brady, Secret Service agent Timothy J. McCarthy and retired District of Columbia policeman Thomas K. Delahanty.

The United States used 157.2 million troy ounces of silver in 1979. Photography used 66 million; electronic equipment, 38.1 million; sterling-ware, 13 million; soldering and brazing, 10.9 million; silver plating, 8.1 million; catalyst, 5.6 million, jewelry, 5.3 million, and miscellaneous, 10.2 million.

Lewis ...

"I went back and told him (the late Ott Alford, then superintendent of the county school system), 'I can't do it.' He said, 'You must,' so I loaded my husband's pickup truck with toilet paper boxes full of notes, memos and minutes from board meetings for the last 25 years, went home and worked seven days a week into the wee hours of the morning."

When she was through and presented the manual to the board she was told by one board member it was "terrible."

Since Ms. Lewis came to the central office, she's witnessed frequent and diverse changes in education in the county. "Integration and subsequent total consolidation were big changes," she said.

"Southern Association Accreditation for the elementary and high schools, the writing of a policy manual, definition of grade level, development of a differentiated curriculum and the rise of test scores to at or above grade level were biggies, too.

"I'm proud of the policy manual and I'm proud of the vastly improved test scores," she noted. "I believe in testing. I believe you have to have something to measure growth by. I do not believe, however, that test scores are absolute."

The assistant superintendent attributes the growth in county school education to leadership and to what she calls the "quality of people in Pitt County."

"The influence of the university and the industries in the county can't be overlooked," she said, "but above and beyond these, we had leaders with vision — (former East Carolina University Chancellor) Leo Jenkins, for example, and Ott Alford.

"Also, the people just wanted better," she added. "Unless they had, we'd never have moved to where we are — one of the top five systems in the state."

Although integration had a profound effect on education in the county, Ms. Lewis doesn't feel it was the biggest influence.

"The biggest change affecting education in Pitt County was not integration," she said. "It was the setting of expectation levels for teachers and students and then evaluating them to see that they meet these standards."

In the future she envisions Pitt County as the foremost school system in the state. "We're in the top five now and we have the leadership and support to become number one," she said. "I firmly believe it will happen."

A reception honoring Katheryn Lewis will be held Wednesday from 7-9 p.m. at North Pitt High School.

Shuttle ...

earlier flights," Mattingly said.

"We're taking a big step bridging that gap from test flights to the operational era," added Hartsfield.

Mattingly, 46, and Hartsfield, 48, are to be greeted on their return by the president and as many as 100,000 holiday spectators. Lined up as a backdrop for a presidential statement will be three shuttles: Columbia; Enterprise, a test vehicle used in early drop tests from an airplane, and Challenger, the second shuttle, which is to be delivered to Edwards on July 1 before being taken to Cape Canaveral for its maiden launch in January.

For months, Reagan's science advisers have been formulating a national space policy which Reagan is expected to unveil at the landing. Among items reportedly under study are go-aheads for a fifth space shuttle and a permanent manned space station, both long-sought by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Packed in Columbia's cavernous 60-foot cargo bay for Flight 4 is the first Defense Department payload ever carried aloft by U.S. astronauts. Its presence underscores the growing emphasis on militarization of space by both the United States and the Soviet Union.

The defense package contains test sensors for future spy satellites — a modest beginning to a burgeoning program that could develop by decade's end into a formidable American military space force of ships, pilots, satellites and out-of-this-world weapons.

For policy reasons, the Pentagon has classed its payload top secret, listing it simply as DOD-82-1. The astronauts have orders not to discuss it on open space-to-ground conversations or to show televised pictures of it.

Nevertheless, many details are known about it from Air Force congressional testimony and technical papers.

The main elements being tested are an infrared telescope and ultraviolet sensors for detecting hostile missiles and spacecraft from future defense satellites. There also is a Space Sextant being developed to give defense satellites independent navigation capability, free of ground control.

Dual Transplant Operation Fails

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — A man died Saturday when his newly implanted lungs failed following the seventh heart-lung transplant operation at Stanford University Medical Center, a spokesman said.

Joe McDermott, 22, of Schenectady, N.Y., had waited since November for a suitable donor to undergo the operation that was first performed at Stanford in March 1981. That first recipient is still alive.

But in McDermott's case, "essentially the lungs never started," said hospital spokesman Mike Goodkind.

The surgery in which McDermott was given the heart and lungs lasted eight hours.

McDermott was born with a hole between the aorta, the main artery carrying blood out of the heart, and the pulmonary artery, which carries blood from the heart to the lungs to be oxygenated.

When McDermott was 12 he underwent surgery to close the hole but doctors discovered his lungs had been damaged by constriction of blood vessels.

Late last year, the cardiovascular surgery team decided McDermott would die within a year and that a heart-lung transplant offered his only chance of survival.

Dr. Stuart Jamieson, the surgeon who headed the transplant team, said it was not yet known why the lungs failed.

The last patient before McDermott to undergo a double transplant at Stanford was Nancy Lassen, 27, of Phoenix, Ariz. She died Feb. 12 after slipping into a coma a few weeks after the operation.

Two other patients have died after the double transplant at Stanford.

The center's longest surviving heart-lung transplant patient is Mary Gohlke, a newspaper advertising executive from Mesa, Ariz. Hers was the first such operation that surgeons at Stanford performed.

contract, under which all the funds would not have to be available when the work on the building is begun.

Commissioners suggested the use of surplus school current expense funds or the use of alternatives, which could be deleted from the bids to reduce the scope of the project, as other methods of helping the project along.

Commissioners are looking at a budget totaling some $25.4 million for 1982-83 which will be funded by a tax rate of 54 cents per $100 valuation — the same tax rate in effect this year.

Marie Osmond Weds

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Marie Osmond, wearing a glittering dress made of 35 yards of silk taffeta, married a college student and former basketball player Saturday as 150 fans waited outside the Mormon Temple to cheer her.

Her eyes bright with tears, the 22-year-old entertainer and her husband, Stephen Craig, left the temple for a wedding breakfast. They planned to embark on a three-day honeymoon to an undisclosed location after a wedding reception for 4,0000.

The couple said they planned to live in Provo, where the singing Osmond family has a studio, and said they "absolutely" planned to have children.

"It feels wonderful; I got the best," Mrs. Craig said following the private ceremony.

Some 150 fans stood outside the wrought-iron gates that ring the temple, cheering as the couple walked on the temple grounds. Some of them had been waiting since about 6 a.m., and security was tight.

The bride wore a a white silk taffata gown glittering with pearls, sequins, lace and tiny mirrors over a petticoat of 40 yards of silk organza and 20 yards of silk maline.

Her train and veil were 16 feet long. Her bouquet was of white roses, lilies of the valley and baby's breath.

Craig, a Brigham Young University wore a white dinner jacket. His brother and the Osmond brothers — Verl, Tom, Alan, Wayne, Merrill, Jay, Donny and Jimmy — served as groomsmen.

Miss Osmond, who has called being a wife and mother her first priority, was engaged to another BYU student in 1980, but broke off the relationship because he wanted her to give up her career, she said in a 1981 magazine interview.

Craig, 23, plans to graduate from BYU in 1983 with a bachelor's degree in communications and public relations. The blond, 6-foot-3 guard played for BYU in 1975-76, served a two-year mission for the Mormon Church and returned to BYU in 1978 to play for three more seasons.

VOLCANIC FLOW

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — A volcano that spews words instead of lava will be one of the attractions at Epcot Center when it opens near here Oct. 1, according to its sponsors.

The exhibit is part of a fantasy experience developed by Walt Disney World experts for the Journey into Imagination pavilion presented by Eastman Kodak Co.

The letters and words pouring from the volcano will erupt as ideas flowing from a giant typewriter-organ.

Medically Inclined Students Training

ECU News Bureau

Twenty-six college and high school students who plan careers in medicine or biomedical research are participating in two summer programs at the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

Sponsored by the Center for Student Opportunities, the programs are designed to prepare minority and disadvantaged students for admission to medical school and to encourage their interest in medical research.

Four Rose High School students are enrolled in the Research Apprentice Program, an eight-week session that provides experience working in the laboratories of medical school faculty in the anatomy, microbiology and physiology departments. Those local students attending are Stephanie R. Deans, Esther L. Hammond, Susan E. Spell and Melanie H. Streeter.

Twenty-two of the students are enrolled in the Summer Program for Future Doctors, another eight-week session that introduces college students to the quality and quantity of work required in medical school. The program also encourages the students' interest in practicing primary care in rural areas.

The programs are funded by a $23,000 grant from the National Fund for Medical Education and a $4,500 grant from the National Institutes of Health.

Sunday Opinion

Four-Year Term A Proposition To Be Defeated

Somewhere in the past an idea occurred to some members of the state Legislature.

Why not go for four-year terms and save themselves the trouble of facing the voters every two years? It was a bad idea but the perpetrators pressed on until now the voters are faced Tuesday with a Constitutional amendment which would make four-year terms for legislators the law.

The idea should be soundly dumped. Running every two years is clearly no hardship on those who aspire to the governing body. They should face the voters every two years, if nothing else to find out what is on their minds.

There is a disturbing trend in Raleigh. It is one to more frequent and longer sessions of the Legislature. The lawmakers get to Raleigh and some become intoxicated with power. Some of them just don't want to go home — not even to campaign.

Well, we can assure ourselves that they will get out among the voters at least every two years if we vote to defeat Amendment 1, which would provide for four-year terms.

Voting No on Amendment 1 has our strongest recommendation.

Sunday Morning Notes

There is a story going around about a visitor to the ECU campus.

She was due to be at the Jenkins Fine Arts Building at a certain hour.

She drove around campus for a time but was unable to locate the building.

Finally she stopped to ask directions from a worker.

"Do you know where Jenkins is?" she asked.

"Ma'am," the worker replied. "Dr. Jenkins has been retired for two years."

Dr. Leo Jenkins, of course, is no longer chancellor of ECU but he is far from retired.

There has been some talk of his running for governor in 1984, as there was in past years. He tells us he is interested and "running around talking to people and they are talking to me."

Jenkins is a special adviser to Gov. Hunt and as such can sit in on the governor's cabinet meetings.

He also from time-to-time fills in for the governor for speaking engagements. Much of his time is spent making speeches on his own, something that was a Jenkins trademark from the days when he was dean at ECU.

He says he has made over 300 graduation speeches and set a record one year by doing 15.

"I got tired of hearing myself," he chuckles.

Making graduation talks can be rewarding, however. Gov. Hunt often recalls that Jenkins was the speaker the year Hunt graduated from Rock Ridge High School in Wilson County. Hunt says he came out of the auditorium feeling he could become anything he wanted to be.

The commandant of the Marine Corps once called to say he felt Jenkins graduating speech had turned his son around.

Then there are times like when he carefully prepared a talk on business, drawing on the ECU School of Business expertise. The person who introduced Jenkins brought him to the podium by saying that he would talk on medical education. Scratch one business speech.

And there was the lady who introduced Jenkins by saying that the audience would be hearing "the dope from ECU."

Jenkins doesn't have the assistance now that he had when he was chancellor. He keeps up with his own schedule but can call on state offices for secretarial assistance or background information.

He says he is not asked about ECU these days as much as one would think, and most of the questions he gets are about the medical school. Mostly in the east he is identified with his television show on WITN, Tar Heel Portraits.

Is he available for speeches? "I rarely, if ever, turn anyone down," he says. He has never forgotten a speaking engagement and recalled having to cancel due to illness only once.

CWIP

RALEIGH- Some mornings you wake up not knowing how great a day lies ahead. That's how June 10 turned out for Rep. Richard Wright of Tarbor City.

During his eight years in the state House, Wright has been a constant critic of the construction work in progress (CWIP) plan, the provision of state law that has consumers pay for construction of power plants as they are built. He unsuccessfully fought passage of the CWIP bill in 1977 and unsuccessfully sought its repeal in 1979 and 1981. But the mood of the Legislature was different this session for several reasons including public displeasure over high electric rates bvrought on by the state's fuel adjustment clause.

On June 10, Gov. Jim Hunt's proposal for changing the clause sailed through a House Public Utilities Committee that only a year earlier had killed Wright's bill to repeal CWIP. Wright reasoned that the committee's change in sentiment might bode well for action on CWIP when the clause came to the floor the next week. But his schedule got pushed up dramatically when he learned minutes later that House leaders wanted to seize the momentum and put the clause on the floor that day. Wright ran back to his office and in the next hour furiously prepared his amendment.

In a later interview, he conceded he had little hope the change would pass. If it did, he figured, it was sure to be defeated in the Senate. But he reasoned that this was the only chance he'd get and it couldn't hurt to try.

The amendment doesn't elimnate CWIP. It says the Utilities Commission may consider CWIP costs in determining a utility's expense. The law had required inclusion of the costs.

The amendment appeared unannounced. Wright didn't discuss it with his legislative allies or with House Speaker Liston Ramsey. Consumer advocates, who'd usually support such a bill, opposed it. They reasoned its inclusion would lead the Senate to kill the entire bill. He reasoned just the opposite. A CWIP provision in the House bill would make the work of the utility lobbyists all that much tougher in the Senate.

The amendment had not come out of nowhere. Wright had proposed the measure a year before after his proposal to kill CWIP had been defeated but the House committee had refused to even consider it. During debate, Rep. J.P. Huskins asked Ramsey if the amendment was appropriate — if Ramsey ruled that the amendment was similar to the Wright repeal bill defeated in 1981, the amendment would have been out of order. Wright shuddered because he hadn't cleared the way with Ramsey. But unknown to him, Rep. George Miller of Durham had. Miller anticipated Huskin's question early in the debate and sent a note to Ramsey saying the amendment was significantly different from the 1981 bill. Ramsey ruled with Wright and the House went on to approve the measure.

The Senate Utilities Committee took the provision out but Wright's allies in the Senate put it right back in with a resounding 31-16 victory on the floor.

That first day, when he got back to his room, he called his wife in Tarbor City to give her the exciting news. "Jenny answered the phone and before I could tell her about the amendment, she said, 'Guess what, the lights are out.'"

An electrical storm had come through Columbus County and knocked down the power lines to Wright's home. The Wright family was without power for two hours.

Absolute Immunity Frees President For Official Actions

The Supreme Court gave the president sweeping powers last week in ruling that the chief executive has "absolute immunity" from being sued for damages for misconduct in office.

The ruling involved an Air Force worker allegedly fired illegally during the Nixon administration.

The former president had already settled the claim in this case but the ruling affects other claims against him.

It was a troubling question for the court as evidenced by the 5-4 decision and certainly the justices had to be more concerned over the decision's effects on future presidents even more so than the case before them.

Obviously they felt that a president has to be free to act on the matters that confront him without being concerned about spending months in the courts fighting law suits. It is difficult to argue against that.

Anti-Woman Stigma Bothers White House

WASHINGTON — Vice President George Bush's recent refusal to meet with seven hunger-striking supporters of the Equal Rights Amendment may have left the impression that the Reagan administration doesn't care about its "woman problem."

But the opposite is closer to the mark. Despite the vice president's cold shoulder, White House officials are concocting measures to avoid a "permanent anti-woman stigma and massive defeats in the 1982 election," as the Illinois fasters warned in their telegram to Bush last week.

It's no secret, of course, that Ronald Reagan suffers from a hazardous gender gap. His he-man talk in the 1980 campaign led to an unprecedented 8 percent difference between his male and female support. Since then, with the help of regressive domestic policies, Reagan's support among women has dropped to 16-18 percent below that of men, which could translate to a 3 to 5 percent difference in an election.

Hounded by the conservative right and ERA leaders, Reagan's advisers are looking to salvage a middle ground without sacrificing administration policies.

One possibility is to endorse specific legislation that would address women's equity. Oregon Sen. Mark O. Hatfield's Economic Equity Act of 1981 is the obvious candidate and currently under examination by Reagan's domestic-policy advisers.

White House officials are also considering a meeting between the president and leaders of selected women's organizations as a testimonial to the administration's concern for women's issues. National feminist groups, which lack the entree they invoked monthly with Jimmy Carter, may accept an exchange with Reagan. Yet they're skeptical about the value of such a tryst.

Most likely, the administration will upgrade an in-house initiative known as the 50 States Project. For about one year, two White House staffers have been lobbying governors' offices to identify discrimination in state laws. However executed, the law-by-law concept has alwaysrepresented Reagan's substitute for the ERA.

"I believe this is one area where there will be an increased push," Elizabeth H. Dole, assistant to the president for public liaison, told us last week.

But, in addition to being merely voluntary, the 50 States Project is largely redundant. A recent study by Rep. Don Edwards (D-Calif.) revealed that 34 states have already finished reviewing their laws; another eight reviews are well underway. Besides, changing discriminatory laws — not identifying them — is what counts. As Edwards told our reporter, Michael Duffy, "The 50 States Project is just designed to take attentien away from the ERA battle. It's really much ado about nothing."

Whatever option emerges next week, it will probably be the White House's idea of a quick fix to the gender gap. All we can say is, "Lots of luck."

Regan Signals A Turning Point

WASHINGTON — The meeting of the administration's economic policymakers June 17 in which Donald T. Regan reverted to being more of a Marine combat commander and less of a Wall Street smoothie could prove the turning point for Reaganomics.

The gloom was palpable at that day's seseion of T-1 and T-2 (the first and second levels at Treasury, the Office of Management and Budget and the Council of Economic Advisers). Ruinous interest rates promised to streak higher, and the administration acted defenseless. It was then that Treasury Secretary Regan ordered a full-scale inquiry into monetary policy as practiced by the Federal Reserve Board.

That broke four months of silence on monetary policy and belatedly acknowledged that what the Fed is doing — not budget deficits — is the cause of the dreadful economy. No less important is the fact that Don Regan, who all year has been executor of policies fashioned by the White House staff, finally was claiming his role as the administration's chief economic policymaker.

Regan was angry as he entered the meeting of T-1 and T2. Eager to be a team player, he had reluctantly gone along with the grand design by White House chief of staff James Baker to bring down interest rates by calling for higher taxes and lower defense spending.

But others in the study group (consisting of T-1 and T2) want to probe whether not merely the execution but the concept of monetarism is at fault and that a new policy is needed. That could prompt the first productive course correction for Reaganomics.

Emotional biases (including Volcker's own) prevent anything so straightforward as a return to the gold standard. But otherwise, the agenda is open. Such options as a gold-convertible dollar and fixed international exchange rates, considered unmentionable short weeks ago, are mentioned today at high levels of the administration.

It was Regan, at long last seizing the economic policy reins, who opened the closet of forbidden alternatives. After submitting all year to the leadership of presidential aides who confess they know nothing about economics, the secretary of the Treasury was reemerging. It was the first good economic news in months.

The Best Of Ideas Frequently Must Wait

WASHINGTON — Danford L. Sawyer Jr. holds an ancient and honorable title. He is the nation's Public Printer. Acknowledging that the field is both large and competitive, I would award him a second title: At his level of public service Sawyer is probably the Most Frustrated Man in Town. The poor fellow is down with the Washington willies.

This is a familiar affliction, but Sawyer's case seems unusually severe. The gentleman is 42, a multimillionaire who made his bundle in publishing and advertising down in Florida. Before he came to Washington last summer, he was politically as innocent as a newborn calf. The president named him Public Printer; the Senate confirmed his appointment; and Sawyer assumed his office in a mood to Get Things Done.

Heaven knows that he found plenty of things that needed doing. The Government Printing Office is among the most sacred cows in the national feedlot. It employs 6,200 persons, most of them union printers; it does three-quarters of a billion dollars worth of printing a year, most of it for the sacred Brahmins of the U.S. Congress. Such is the unions' cozy relationship with Capitol Hill that the GPO printers are the highest paid printers in the country, if not on the planet Earth. Until just a few years ago, they were setting all their type on Mergenthaler Linotypes; they were composing display matter by hand.

Into the GPO's musty red brick building came the eager new executive, breathing efficiency, full of the old sis-boom-bah, bringing a management team with him. Sawyer swiftly discovered what the General Accounting Office long ago disclosed, that the GPO is overstaffed, overpaid, and in many of its operations woefully unprofitable. Charge! He proposed to cut the printers' salaries by 20 percent. He proposed to close 23 government bookstores around the country. He proposed greatly to reduce overtime. He proposed to send more of the work out for private contract. He proposed to impose six days of unpaid furloughs. The gentleman was bursting with ideas — most of them excellent ideas.

Then our subject discovered something else. He discovered that making progress in the Washington bureaucracy is like walking through sludge. He encountered the Joint Committee on Printing (JCP), which is like encountering the Chinese army, a force that with great subtlety does not defeat its enemies but merely absorbs them. He made the mistake of antagonizing Sen. Charles McC. Mathias of Maryland, chairman of the JCP. And now our Pilgrim finds himself in the Slough of Despond. Nothing much has happened at the GPO, and Sawyer has the Washington willies.

Patience, I would counsel him. Patience! Mac Mathias has been in politics for 30 years, 22 of them on Capitol Hill. He is a man of engulfing amiability. He and Sawyer, in point of fact, are not far apart on the reforms that are needed at the GPO. Both of them want to accelerate the transition to new printing technology. Both are agreed on a reorganization of the office that would free Mathias from the ridiculous burdens now imposed on the JCP chairman. Under present law, Mathias must personally sign every contract the GPO enters into. Not a gross of envelopes can be ordered without his say-so. It is absurd. Mathias raises no objection to closing the unprofitable bookstores and replacing them with an efficient mail-order operation.

But in the nature of life in Washington, these things take time. The printers' contract is now headed toward arbitration. The proposed furloughs have been put on hold. In order to abolish the existing structure of the GPO, bills must be drafted, studies must be made, hearings must be held, committee reports must be prepared, et cetera, et cetera, et cetera.

I do not mean to sound complacent about Sawyer's problems. I mean to sound philosophical. Life in government is not like life in private business. It never can be made so. The decisions of a private executive can be as quick and clean as a pole vault — up and over and the thing is done. Here decisions require all the ritual bows and turns and arm-in-arm formalities of a minuet. We confer, we consult, we reach a consensus. Shall we reorganize the GPO? By all means. But maybe next year. Or maybe the year after that.

To the editor:

Back from New York (just one bicycling week from Greenville), I'm 10 pounds lighter, invigorated, buzzing with ideas.

One idea concerns the one-sidedness of the disarmament movement in the Soviet bloc. Greenville Peace Committee receives mailings from the East German Peace Council and there are numerous peace committees in the U.S.S.R. I think none finds fault with Soviet armament; all consider it a necessary reacton to Western arms race leadership. On June 14 the Reflector reported that police in Moscow warned 10 "independent" peace activists to stop. One leader was arrested and another disappeared. Most of us feel powerless to support them.

My idea is — we aren't powerless. One proposal — each of us could write to one soviet citizen and tell them almost a million rallied here against all nuclear goverments, then thousands blockaded all five nuclear powers' U.N. missions in New York; tell them about the leadership arrests reported after 11 people organized toward protest in Moscow; ask them why we are allowed to demonstrate against (among others) our government, but they aren't allowed the same. A few hundred letters like that should set some people thinking. Names of addresses could be obtained in several ways, including Soviet phone books, professional journal articles and letters to the editor in Second World periodicals.

Big results wouldn't be immediately visible. Would you get any answers? (Answers might set us thinking: I have been told that most Soviet citizens support their government officials, some of whom have tried experiments giving traditionally un-Russian liberties, slowly, cautiously. If you write, I hope you can indicate respect for such officials. Your past Eastern experiences, some dreadful, could preclude or enable this.)

I'd welcome your response to this idea; if needed, I'll work on getting U.S.S.R. addresses, as random as possible.

To the editor:

On July 9, 1982, we will honor those who remain missing as prisoners of war in Southeast Asia and elsewhere. It is National POW/MIA Recognition Day and it is imperative that we who enjoy the blessings of peace and liberty speak out in behalf of the POW/MIAs.

There is a continuing flow of credible eyewitness reports of Americans still in captivity in Vietnam. As shocking as it might be to some, these men should not be forgotten or else freedom as we know it today may well be forgotten in the future.

Do we dare forget the special debt we owe our fellow citizens who, in the act of serving our nation, relinquished their freedom?

Twins Chang And Eng Added A Phrase

When Caleb Vance Haynes was a freshman at Wake Forest College, he waved a pair of pistols at a group of upperclassmen when they came to haze him one night.

"Take one more step, and I'l shoot," Haynes warned. Several boys did take another step, and Haynes fired. The mob fled — all except one youth. The bullet had grazed his head, and he fainted.

Haynes, who graduated from Wake Forest in 1917, probably inherited his determination not to be imposed on from his grandfather and his great uncle, Chang and Eng Bunker, the original Siamese twins who settled on adjoining farms near Mount Airy before the Civil War.

The twins, weary of touring the world as exhibition hall freaks, had lived in Wilkes County for several years previously and had wooed and married sisters — Sarah and Adelaide Yates, daughters of a prosperous farmer.

On their farms, the twins and their slaves — later hired hands — grew bumper crops of grains and beans and potatoes, raised livestock and were among the first farmers in the state to produce "bright leaf" tobacco. They also fathered a host of children — Eng and Sarah had 11 and Chang and Adelaide had 10. Their living descendants now probably number more than 1,000.

One of Chang's sons, Christopher, was a Confederate calvaryman who left a large portion of his estate to the North Carolina Baptist Children's Homes when he died in 1932 at the age of 88. The Baptists used a portion of his legacy to build Bunker College at the Kennedy Home in Kinston. Other descendants included a state legislator, a bank executive, a president of the Union Pacific Railroad, a textile executive and the aforesaid Caleb Vance Haynes, an Army Air Corps hero of World War II. On the other side of the coin, one of Eng's sons fell on hard times and died on a Kansas poor farm and another was killed in a barroom brawl in St. Louis.

On the twins' voyage home from their last exhibition tour — in which they visited England, France, Germany and Russia and which was climaxed by an audience with Queen Victoria — Chang suffered a stroke which left his right arm, side and leg paralyzed. Eng, however, remained in excellent health.

Returning to Mount Airy, the twins resumed their pattern of living three days at Chang's home, then three days at Eng's, until early in January 1874. Chang complained of chest pains and was racked by a dry cough. The doctor diagnosed bronchitis for him and again foung Eng in the best of health. He advised him to remain indoors until Chang recovered.

However, two days later Chang insisted that they maintain their schedule and drive the one mile to Eng's home despite the bitter cold. The following night, Chang died while Eng slept. The death was discovered by Eng's son, William, who decided to look in on the two.

When Eng, who had awakened, learned of Chang's death, he looked at the lifeless form beside him and exclaimed, "Then I am going." About two hours later, Eng died. Doctors concluded Chang had died of a cerebral clot while Eng died of sheer fright. They are buried in a joint grave in the Baptist Church cemetery at White Plains near Mount Airy.

In their biography of the Siamese twins, "The Two," Irving Wallace and his daughter, Amy, picture Chang and Eng as two rather cultured gentlemen who enjoyed reading and reciting the works of Alexander Pope, Shakespeare and Lord Byron. They were great music lovers and both played the flute. They enjoyed hunting, fishing and shooting. Although they were skilled at playing both checkers and chess, they did not enjoy playing against each other.

Reports are that Chang and Eng sometimes quarreled heatedly and that they came to blows at least once and paid a fine for disturbing the peace. The Wallaces wrote that as the twins grew older their personality differences became accentuated with Chang's increasing fondness of liquor the most serious cause of contention. While Eng drank in moderation, Chang not only drank to excess but could not hold his liquor well.

Contrary to what many people have said, Eng did not get drunk when Chang drank, but he did voice his displeasure over being attached permanently to an often drunken man.

"For all their differences, however," wrote the Wallaces, "it may safely be said that Chang and Eng probably quarreled less than most of the legally attached couples whom they counted among their friends."

The Wallaces wrote that most descendants of Chang and Eng share "a real love of the land on which they were raised, a belief in keeping their word, and an explosive temper when others do not keep theirs, and a sensitivity about having descended from the Siamese twins."

The most famous of these decendants was Caleb Vance Haynes, who joined the Army shortly after his graduation from Wake Forest. After learning to fly, he served as an aide to President Wilson at the Versailles Peace Conference. He was chief of the American Bomber Command in China during World War II. He was decorated for gallantry in the evacuation of refugees and wounded soldiers from Burma in 1942. He died in 1966 with the rank of major general and was buried in Arlington National Cemetery.

He must have wondered often about the ligament that bound his famous grandfather and great uncle together at the chest. The two consulted doctors throughout the world about the possibility of the operation of separating them and were advised that it would be fatal.

But if medical science had been as advanced when they were born in 1811 as it is today, Chang and Eng would most likely have been surgically separated at an early age, and would never have toured the world as freaks and would never have settled down in North Carolina.

Reagan Is Stepping Up Mideast Activity

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Every president since Harry Truman has been faced in a major way with a crisis in the Middle East, and the question of peace.

President Reagan, determined to push his domestic program, has been concentrating on the budget and the economy since he took office. Mainly, he has ignored the tinderbox that is the Middle East.

As such, there has been no major foreign policy thrust toward the region or any definitive American strategy for peace in the troubled area.

But American presidents have not been allowed the luxury of standing on the sidelines while a region strategic to U.S. interests is involved in one conflagration after another. The destruction of Lebanon is only another episode in the long saga of conflict that has engulfed the region for decades.

Since its creation during the Truman administration, every president has pledged U.S. support for Israel's security. And there has been the follow-through in economic and arms aid.

The attempt to move the cycle of violence off dead center was highlighted by the Camp David accords and the peace agreement between Israel and Egypt. But the central question of what happens to the displaced Palestinians remains and has yet to be addressed, although the pact calls for autonomy talks.

When Reagan first came to power there was a question as to whether the Camp David process would be continued. Since then, the administration has vaguely supported moves toward revitalizing the peace effort but no policy was evolved and no concrete efforts were made.

The most that was done was the naming of Middle East negotiator Philip Habib, who made three trips to the region before the war in Lebanon and won a nine-month ceasefire between Israel and the Palestinian Liberation Organization. It was a proud effort for all involved, particularly Habib, who extracted promises from both sides to keep their guns silent.

Secretary of State Alexander Haig told reporters there would be no condemnation of the Israeli move and no halt to arms sales. He indicated the United States understood Israeli objectives.

But the goals were expanded and Habib, a protege of former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, has had a more difficult job trying to stop the shooting war. A high American official has denied that Habib wanted to resign, but depicted him as "distraught" over being caught in a battlefield with an unclear mandate.

The situation has now moved to a point where Reagan feels compelled to take a more active role. He has requested humanitarian aid for Lebanon. He also has talked to Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and some of the Arab leaders.

King Abdul Fahd, the new monarch of Saudi Arabia, has ventured a peace plan in which Arab recognition of Israel appears implicit. It also provides for establishing a Palestinian entity.

After a trial balloon, and opposition, the plan was shelved. But Fahd, known as a friend of the United States, may seek to resurrect his proposals in the search for a lasting peace in the Middle East. Whether the crisis in Lebanon will provide a more receptive atmosphere for that plan or for new impetus for the next stage of the Camp David accords remains to be seen.

There are clear indications that Reagan is giving more time and thought to solutions for the Middle East.

Bailout Can Be A Dirty Word

NEW YORK (AP) — Should you say "bailout" in speaking with some members of the housing industry they'll accuse you of having uttered a dirty word, and advise you thereafter to refer to "aid" or "assistance."

"Bailout," they say, is too close to "handout," and it suggests that the aid being sought is necessitated by the recipient's ineptness. If anyone has been inept, they say, it has been the federal government.

At the White House they don't see it that way. An interest subsidy plan just passed by Congress has already been called by that dirty name and returned to the House, where the President's veto was sustained.

Fireworks are scheduled to follow, however, because in the reasoning behind this bill are merged two polar views of how the economy should be run. Friction of that sort produces sparks. Great sparkling showers of them. And they will continue right through the fall elections.

You have, as one of the contestants, a housing industry that has been decimated. Builders are going bankrupt. Home mortgage lenders are being forced to merge. Millions of families have been priced out of the market by inflation and high interest rates, and must rent instead.

Therefore, the industry claims, help was needed. Housing, the argument went, is not just another business. It is special, a national priority, and it been viewed that way for 50 years. If must be protected.

The National Association of Home Builders supported the vetoed bill, which would have subsidized mortgage rates for low and middle income buyers by 4 points the first year, and by one less point in each succeeding year. So did the U.S. League of Savings Associations.

The National Association of Realtors, alone among the major housing associations, declined to publicly state its support, convinced that the route to lower mortgage rates was in reducing the budget deficit.

That too is the White House stand.

The administration was unwilling to accept any short-term remedy, arguing that to further involve government in the private sector is to delay and probably prohibit any fundamental economic correction.

Addressing the Pennsylvania Bankers Association recently, the chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, Murray Weidenbaum, said bailouts threaten the entire economic program.

First, he said, they send the wrong signal. "Embracing the bailout proposals ... would tell the financial markets and the public at large that we are returning to the same old discredited policies of the past," he told the bankers.

By their very nature, he continued, bailouts are "are narrowly targeted, much more so than the general public is led to believe." The housing bill, he said, would penalize all taxpayers "to provide subsidized mortgages to 74,000 lucky homebuyers."

Donovan Spurs New Talk Of Changes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Once again there is talk in the Senate of reform in the way nominees for federal appointments are investigated and confirmed there. And once again, the liklihood is that the call for change will lose its urgency when the season's controversy is settled.

This time, the proposal for an overhaul of the confirmation process stems from the case of Secretary of Labor Raymond J. Donovan, who dismisses as cowardly lies reports that he and his New Jersey construction company had dealings with organized crime figures.

Last time, the case was that of Bert Lance, director of the Office of Management and Budget under former President Jimmy Carter. Lance resigned after weeks of controversy and Senate hearings on his banking practices, loans and overdrawn checks.

Donovan said Monday that he has every intention of remaining in the Cabinet and "completing the job I was asked to do."

In both situations, the administration involved had information that was not passed along to the senators who confirmed the officials to their Cabinet-level jobs.

"... Our responsibilities can be fairly and faithfully discharged only if we have the facts upon which to make an informed judgment," Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd said in proposing a change in the confirmation system. He said the Senate apparently did not get the facts on Donovan before he was confirmed.

It is far from clear that a different system would have produced a different decision on confirmation. Never has a newly elected president, like Reagan, been denied Senate approval of his nominees to the first Cabinet of the new administration. There have been midterm Cabinet rejections, but only eight of those.

Donovan said the allegations raised against him are not facts but that "raw and unsubstantiated data has been leaked in total disregard for the rights of individual American citizens." A special prosecutor has been looking into the case, with a report due soon. Donovan said he would be happy to appear at new Senate Labor Committee hearings after that, to "answer fully any and all questions."

The controversy stems from his career in the construction business, and as a partner in Schiavone Construction Co. of Secaucus, N.J. It began shortly after Ronald Reagan picked Donovan, who had served as his New Jersey campaign manager, for the Cabinet post.

There were allegations of payoffs and contact with crime figures during the confirmation proceedings. Donovan called them scurrilous and unfounded. He was the last of the Reagan Cabinet members to be confirmed, on Feb. 3, 1981, by a vote of 80-17.

"If you're in the contracting business in this country, you're suspect," Donovan said sarcastically at his confirmation hearing. "If you're in the contracting business in New Jersey, you're indictable. If you're in the contracting business and you're Italian, you're convicted."

Allegations, and they are only that, surfaced since Donovan took office now have led even some Republican allies to question whether he can survive in office. Forty-six Democratic senators have said Donovan should stand aside until the special prosecutor has issued a report and the whole business has been settled.

Sen. Byrd said he would propose legislation to make certain that information bearing on the fitness of a nominee is sent to the Senate prior to confirmation, and not sent to the White House for decisions as to whether or not it should be passed along.

"Additional steps might also be necessary to affix clearly the responsibility and accountability of particular executive officers of our government to ensure that such information is not withheld," he said.

Byrd said it might also be better to centralize the process in the office of the Senate legal counsel.

In the Lance case, both the FBI and the comptroller of the currency had information that didn't reach the Senate until months later.

After that case, Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., and then-Sens. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., and Abraham A. Ribicoff, D-Conn., proposed creation of a new and politically independent Senate agency to deal with major nominations. Their resolution would have given the new overseers access to any investigative reports available to the president, including those from the FBI.

But when the controversy subsided, so did the pressure for change.

George Gallup

Poll

PRINCETON, N.J. — With the congressional elections now less than five months away, substantially more Americans feel the Democratic Party rather than the Republican party can better deal with the nation's most urgent problems, unemployment and inflation.

In the latest (mid-June) Gallup survey, 41 percent name unemployment as the most important problem facing the country while 25 percent cite inflation or the high cost of living. Other concerns in the forefront of voters' minds include the poor shape of the economy in general (11 percent), high interest rates (10 percent) and fear of war (10 percent). The percentages of Americans now naming each of these problems are similar to those found in an April survey, when 44 percent named unemployment, and 24 percent, inflation, as the most pressing.

The Democratic Party nows enjoys a seven percentage-point advantage as the party voters see as better able to deal with the problem they consider uppermost, with 35 percent naming the Democrats, 28 percent the GOP and 37 percent saying there is no difference between the parties or not expressing an opinion.

In January, the Democratic Party's lead in this "issue barometer" was only four percentage points, named by 34 percent to 30 percent for the Republican Party. In that survey, as in the current one, the Democrats held a wide margin over the GOP as better able to handle the paramount problem of unemployment. However, in the earlier survey the Republican Party (36 percent) was thought to be more qualified than Democrats (31 percent) to deal with inflation, an advantage it no longer holds.

As reported recently, the Democratic Party now enjoys a commanding 15-point lead over the Republican Party in the popular vote for seats in the House of Representatives.

Following is the question asked to identify the key concerns of the American people:

"What do you think is the most important problem facing this country today?"

Here are the latest results:

Most Important Problem

Unemployment; recession	41%
Inflation; high cost of living	25
Economy (general)	11
High interest rates	10
Fear of war	10
Excessive government spending	6
Reagan budget cuts	5
Moral decline in society	4
International problems	3
Crime	3
All others	8
Don't know	3
	129 pct.*

* Adds to more than 100 percent due to multiple answers.

Unemployment is cited more frequently than the high cost of living in all major population groups, but is considered particularly urgent by women, blacks, the less well-educated, persons 30 to 49 years old, Democrats and Easterners and Midwesterners.

In the question sequence all persons who name a problem are then asked this question:

"Which political party do you think can do a better job of handling the problem you have just mentioned — the Republican Party or the Democratic Party?"

Here are the national results and the party named by people citing unemployment and inflation as the nation's dominant concerns.

Party Better Able To Handle Most Important Problem

	Any problem	Unemployment	Inflation
Democratic Party	35%	40%	37%
Republican Party	28	23	27
No difference	25	24	25
No opinion	12	13	11

The results reported today are based on personal interviews with 1,456 adults, 18 and older, conducted in scientifically-selected localities across the nation during the period June 11-14.

For results based on a sample of this size, one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be three percentage points in either direction.

ECU Study Challenges Disease-Finding Drug

ECU News Bureau

A cardiologist at the East Carolina School of Medicine has found evidence that a drug frequently used to diagnose coronary artery disease may in fact cause a heart attack or produce unreliable results in some patients.

Dr. Allen F. Bowyer, professor of medicine, presented the results of his research on ergonovine maleate at the ninth World Congress of Cardiology in Moscow last week.

Bowyer says moderately large doses of the drug are commonly given to patients who, doctors suspect, have coronary artery spasms, a condition which can cause severe chest pain, arrhythmias, sudden death or heart attack. The medication is used to provoke a coronary spasm so that physicians can visualize obstruction in the arteries during an attack.

The ECU research documents how much the normal coronary artery constricts when the drug is administered. Bowyer's study concludes that a narmal artery narrows in diameter in proportion to the amount of the drug given and shows that the usual dose of the drug creates a 40 percent constriction in the normal artery.

He says the results indicate that if a patient has a pre-existing, moderate narrowing of a coronary artery, the drug could provoke a heart attack from loss of blood flow to that portion of heart muscle supplied by the artery. The drug may also falsely create a spasm.

Bowyer's investigation of ergonovine maleate is one of three research projects he will share with the 35,000 cardiologists who attend the Moscow meeting.

Stolen Skulls Found

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — Two New Bern men have been charged with desecrating graves in connection with what police say may be a voodoo cult patterned on the rock group Kiss.

Arrest warrants were issued Friday for Allan Gettsinger and Lonnie Steven Pridgen, 28, for allegedly digging up the graves of two Civil War soldiers in National Cemetery and taking the skulls.

Investigator T.R. Dunn said Saturday that Gettsinger turned himself in to police Friday night. Gettsinger was released on $500 bond.

Dunn said police were still searching for Pridgen, son of Lonnie Pridgen, a candidate for Craven County commissioner.

Police discovered one of the skulls in Gettsinger's house Wednesday after subduing a man who was trying to pound his way into the broken-down two-story home, he said.

The man was apparently under the influence of alcohol and drugs when he went berserk and began punching out windows and beating on the walls, police said.

Police said they believe the man had seen something in the house that disturbed him. Witnesses said he was shouting that his brother was inside and he had to get out.

Before he could be calmed, the man cut his arms on the glass, leaving blood dripping from the windows and walls, police said.

When police later entered the house it was unoccupied, but they found a skull they believe was one of the two stolen several months ago from gravesites in National Cemetery, Dunn said.

The other skull was recovered at an apartment in New Bern. Police said one of Gettsinger's friends had taken the skull from the house.

Police said they found voodoo dolls and puppets, pierced with scissors and other objects, hanging from the ceilings and walls of the house. They also found cat skulls, along with numerous albums of the rock group Kiss.

"It looked like they were imitating Kiss, freaking out, looking at the weird stuff," Dunn said.

Police said the inside of the house was littered with trash and other debris.

Dunn said there was no evidence of any other criminal activity in the house.

Second District Race Highlights N.C. Primaries

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Ask the state Republican Party chairman, David Flaherty, which among Tuesday's primary races he is most interested in, and he'll tell you it is not even one of the GOP's own.

Republicans, like Democrats, are watching the three-way race for the Democratic nomination to Congress in the 2nd District, where the retirement of 30-year-incumbent Democrat L.H. Fountain has created the only open seat in North Carolina's 11-member delegation.

There are 12 primaries for congressional nominations across the state, including a GOP race in the 2nd District, as well as primary races for judges, legislative seats and county offices, and referendums on five constitutional issues.

In the 1st District, veteran Democratic incumbent Walter B. Jones faces Robersonville attorney Thomas B. Brandon III, while the Republicans have a primary between James F. McIntyre III and Gene Leggett.

There is no major statewide race in North Carolina this year, and it is the the Democratic race in the newly shaped 2nd Congressional District that has captured the most attention.

Each of the candidates has established Democratic Party credentials — former legislator and U.S. Attorney H.M. "Mickey" Michaux Jr., 51, of Durham; former state House Speaker James M. "Jim" Ramsey, 50, of Roxboro; and former legislator and state party chairman I.T. "Tim" Valentine, 56, of Nashville.

Michaux, seeking to become North Carolina's first black congressman in 80 years, is viewed as the frontrunner in the first primary. He is hoping to win the nomination outright Tuesday and avoid a runnoff, where his chances might be lessened.

"I honestly believe Michaux's going to win it in the first primary because of registration and the heavy liberal vote in Durham County," said Flaherty.

Flaherty freely acknowledges the GOP is hoping Michaux will win because he believes the Republican nominee will have a better chance in the fall against Michaux than against Ramsey or Valentine. The GOP chairman says he's not basing that on race.

"It's not the black-white thing," he said. "It's the conservative-liberal thing. Now obviously, some people will try to make something of race."

Michaux, who entered the race after Durham County was shifted to the 2nd District in reapportionment this year, has been aided by voter-registration drives launched by Gov. Jim Hunt's administration and other groups.

The district, which includes 10 counties and stretches from west of Durham to east of Rocky Mount, gained 12,500 new black voters over the last two months. That raised black registration from 33 percent to better than 36 percent, most of them registered as Democrats.

All three are running television commercials, and each is talking about the economy — Michaux attacking federal budget cuts, and Ramsey and Valentine stressing a need for a balanced budget.

Ramsey, who has turned to his old legislative allies for help, has proposed major changes in Social Security, including making it partially voluntary.

Valentine has drawn heavy support from business leaders, ties to former Gov. Dan Moore and allies of the conservative Fountain.

Michaux's appeal is clearly to the left of Ramsey and Valentine, and he has attracted support from teachers, women's groups and organized labor.

"I'm not running against Reagan," says Michaux. "I'm running against the Republican economics. There is a difference there."

Both the Valentine and Ramsey campaigns would be happy to finish in a runoff with Michaux, though they say the increased black registration won't hurt them.

"It really hasn't changed our strategy any," said Bill Pulley, Valentine's campaign manager. "We feel like the new district with Durham is probably more conservative than the old 2nd."

The race has overshadowed the 2nd District's GOP primary between F. Douglas "Doug" Biddy, 50, a Durham mechanical engineer; Barry L. Gardner, 36, a Rocky Mount telephone company engineer; and John W. "Jack" Marin, 37, a Durham attorney.

Marin played basketball at Duke, finishing in 1966 and going on to play in the National Basketball Association. He has been running television commercials stressing his background and is expected to receive help from the National Congressional Club, the political organization of GOP Sen. Jesse Helms.

Republicans also have a large primary field in the 5th District, where Democrat incumbent Stephen Neal is seeking a fifth term. There are four GOP candidates, led by Anne B. Bagnal, 47, who lost to Neal two years ago. She has stressed allegiance to Reagan's economic program as well as opposition to abortion and the Equal Rights Amendment.

Her leading GOP opponent is Wallace A. Vanhoy, 41, a contractor who has stressed economic issues and says Mrs. Bagnal, "is a fine lady, but being a nice lady is simply not enough to defeat Steve Neal."

Among the other GOP candidats is Warren B. Brooks, who has announced a white supremacy platform and who was arrested in 1979 when his Clemmons neighbors complained of his wearing only a G-string garment in open view. Brooks called the garment a "legalizer."

In the 8th District, Republicans Harris D. Blake of Pinehurst and Jake T. Presson of Salisbury are seeking to oppose incumbment Democrat W.G. "Bill" Hefner.

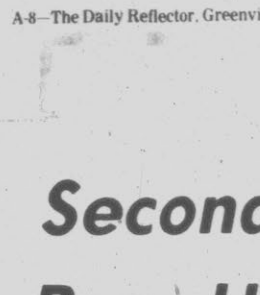

Blake, 52, who owns hardware stores, has attracted support from both the Congressional Club and allies of former GOP Gov. Jim Holshouser of Southern Pines. He has waged a tough-talking campaign, closely alligning himself with President Reagan and blasting Hefner as "Tip O'Neill's handmaiden."

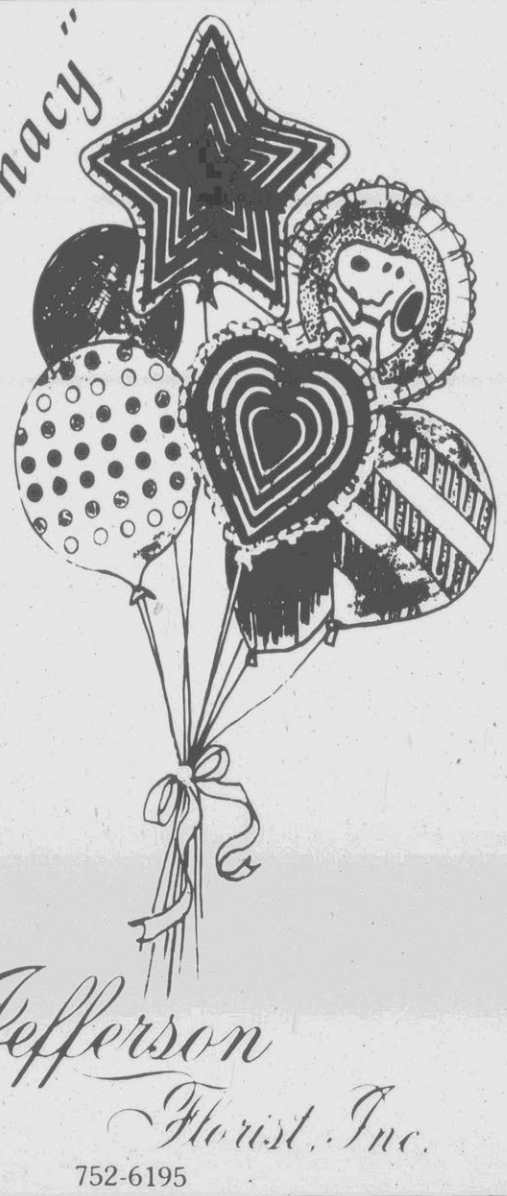

He has also been promised support from the National Republican Congressional Committee.

In the 7th District, incumbent Democrat Charles G. Rose is favored over his primary opponent, Thomas Gibson of Lumberton. Gibson, who has ties to the Congressional Club, has been airing a television commercial attacking Rose for a taxpayer-financed trip to South America.

In other primaries, former University of North Carolina Athletic Director William Cobey, aided by the Congressional Club, is favored over retired airline pilot Leo Tew for the GOP nomination in the 4th District. The winner will face incumbent Democrat Ike Andrews.

Jury Finds Two Innocent In Tobacco Trial

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A federal jury has found Bunn Mayor Wayne Winstead innocent of conspiring with a Farmers Home Administration official and a Louisburg farmer in a tobacco fraud scheme.

The U.S. District Court jury deliberated about seven hours over two days before returning the verdict on Friday.

Thomas B. Marshall Jr., supervisor of the Franklin County FmHA office, was also found innocent of conspiracy.

The jury failed to reach a unanimous verdict on a separate count charging Marshall with trying to obstruct justice by threatening and pleading with a third codefendant, tobacco farmer David Thomas Long, not to implicate him in the alleged scheme.

Long, who pleaded guilty to conspiracy and will be sentenced in two weeks, testified for the government in the joint four-day trial of Winstead and Marshall.

H. Robert Showers, an assistant U.S. attorney, said Friday he had not decided whether to retry Marshall on the charge of obstructing justice.

The federal government had charged Winstead with conspiring with Long and Marshall to use Long's federal flue-cured tobacco quota card to sell tobacco belonging to someone else in 1980 and 1981.

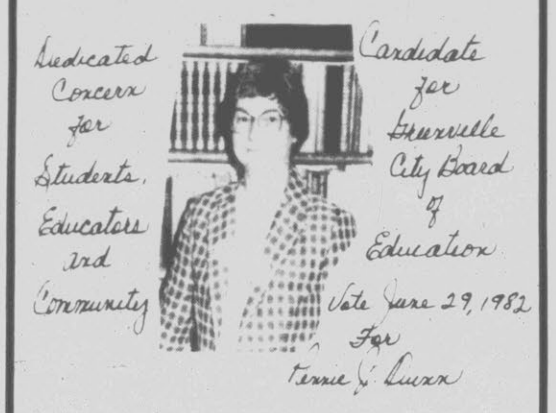

Under the federal flue-cured quota system, a person is allowed to grow only a certain number of pounds of tobacco. Long testified that he underplanted his fields and did not meet his quota.

The government contended that Winstead asked Long for use of his quota card. Indictments in the case claimed that Winstead listed 3,067 pounds of tobacco that belonged to someone else on the unused portion of Long's tobacco quota card.

The government claimed that the tobacco was sold for $4,787.52, and that Long gave the money to Winstead in return for $1,840.20 for use of the card.

The government claimed that Marshall fit into the scheme by clearing Long's card of an FmHA loan.

Testimony in the four-day trial indicated that if a person has a FmHA loan, part of the profits from the sale of any tobacco on his quota card automatically would be used to help pay off the loan.

Equal Rights Amendment Dies This Week But New Effort Starts July 14

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Time runs out on the Equal Rights Amendment Wednesday. A 10-year struggle to win its ratification is collapsing, and no one is certain what brought it down. It once looked like a sure thing.

Phyllis Schlafly, the mother-housewife-lawyer who has come to symbolize opposition to the Equal Rights Amendment, has invited 1,000 friends to dance on ERA's grave at a ballroom banquet that night.

But ERA advocates say the celebration is premature and the corpse may yet come back to life — but not without another struggle lasting a decade or two, or more.

The women who fought that 10-year battle are not wearing long faces: In the struggle, the women's movement became a permanent political force that helped rewrite laws that discriminated against women.

The Equal Rights Amendment would have put into the Constitution a prohibition against discrimination based on sex by any law or action of federal, state or local government.

It says: "Equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex. The Congress shall have the power to enforce, by appropriate legislation, the provisions of this article."

Neither those who favor that step nor those who oppose it are sure what caused ERA's demise.

Eleanor Smeal, president of the 180,000-member National Organization for Women, does not see Mrs. Schlafly as a major factor; she says she was used. Mrs. Smeal points to big business "as the silent lobby" which did ERA in. Mrs. Schlafly points to feminists like Mrs. Smeal, saying they affront American womanhood.

When Congress sent ERA to the states on March 22, 1972, after it had languished there for 49 years, the "libbers," as they were called, thought they had nearly won their fight.

Birch Bayh, then an Indiana senator, foresaw ratification "with dispatch" — surely, he thought, within two years.

Only 32 minutes later the first state ratified the amendment and in the first year 30 approved it. But eight more were needed and only five came aboard — and five others had second thoughts and sought to undo their ratifications.

What visible opposition there was to ERA came from such fringe groups as the League of Housewives, a division of an outfit called Happiness of Womanhood, whose slogan was: "You make the living and we'll make life worth living."

Mrs. Smeal now says it will take 10 to 25 years to get ERA into the Constitution.

At a news conference Thursday, she conceded defeat, called an "Until Justice Is Ours" rally for Wednesday to counter Mrs. Schlafly's big "Over the Rainbow" bash that night in a Washington hotel and announced a new tactic.

In the last few weeks, with NOW spending $1 million a month and mobilizing 6,700 volunteers on ERA's behalf, legislators in North Carolina, Florida and Illinois voted again, and again rejected ERA.

"In the final analysis, we were begging men for our rights," Mrs. Smeal said, but in the future NOW will try to elect friends to the legislatures so it will no longer have to beg.

NOW will seek to "create an independent third political force" and will concentrate on electing women and "men committed to equality" to legislatures to overcome "a 'stag club' atomosphere which keeps those bodies from being representative of women or responsive to women's concerns," Mrs. Smeal said.

Meantime, on July 14, congressional supporters will start the constitutional amendment process over again, reintroducing the ERA word for word. One hundred members of Congress and 40 senators have signed on as co-sponsors and more are expected.

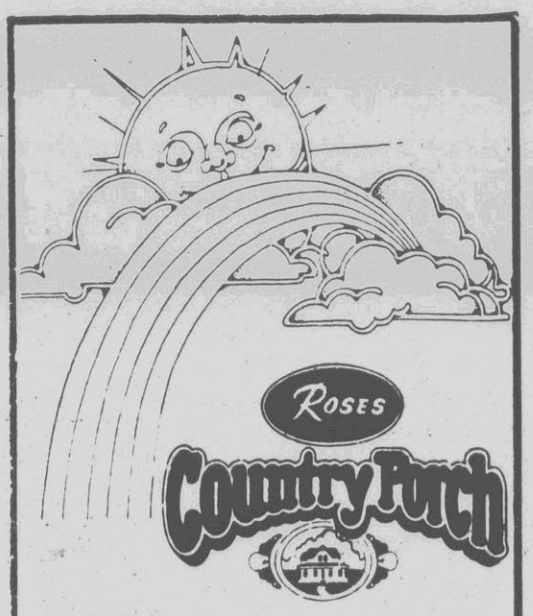

But, in the first replay of an old, old story, they concede it is not going anywhere in this session of Congress. They will hope for a better climate in January, when a new Congress assembles.

To enter the Constitution, amendments must be approved by a two-thirds vote of Congress and by the legislatures of three-quarters of the states. Since the ratification of the Bill of Rights in 1791, some 6,000 have been introduced in Congress, but only 23 have been sent to the states for ratification and only 16 have been ratified.

Dissident Israelies Protest Invasion

By MARCUS ELIASON
Associated Press Writer

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The invasion of Lebanon has dispelled the image of the Israeli David fighting the Arab Goliath and provoked domestic divisions that may be a long time healing.

About 4,000 Israelis demonstrated against the invasion in Tel Aviv's main square Saturday, waving placards reading "Out Of Lebanon," "More Conquest Means Less Security," and "No More War, No More Bloodshed."

A few arguments broke out with bystanders who support the war but there was no violence. Meanwhile, the military command announced two more Israeli soldiers killed in Lebanon, bringing the official toll to 260 in three weeks.

Day after day, Israel Radio's newscaster reads the latest battle deaths in somber tones: "Private Ram Mizrahi, to be buried at Mount Herzl Cemetery at 4 p.m. Thursday...."

Families sit transfixed by their TV screens, hoping to spot a son, father or husband among Israeli soldiers in Lebanon.

The busy streets of Tel Aviv are half-deserted, many shops closed by the mobilization of thousands of reserve troops. Dinner-table debate peters out into unanswered questions: will Israel invade Beirut? Will Syria opt for all-out war? How long will America go on supporting Israel? What will the Soviets do?

The death and destruction brought to Lebanon and civilians there by the invasion has further darkened the Israeli mood. Many feel guilty, while others feel the foreign media have ignored the efforts the army claims it made to avoid civilian casualties while fighting a war in heavily populated towns.

"I envy those who have no doubts or reservations," wrote Rabbi Menachem Hacohen in the daily Yedioth Ahronoth. "I envy those whose hearts are not sore, who suffer no remorse, no pangs of conscience."

The resignation of Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. has placed a huge question mark over Israel's next moves. Haig was seen here as the administration man most sympathetic to the invasion — Israel's bulwark against powerful critics like Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger, and now presumably, George P. Shultz, the secretary of state-designate.

When the latest cease-fire took hold Friday night, the invasion was 18 days old — just three days shorter than the 1973 war, Israel's most traumatic conflict. The death toll acknowledged by the government so far is a terrible price for a closely knit society in which everyone seems to know everyone else.

This is a war that has raised high hopes and deep dreads.

Israel's defense minister, Ariel Sharon, holds out the promise of a peaceful Lebanon, rid of Palestinian guerrillas and Syrian forces. Prime Minister Menachem Begin believes it has cured Israel of its 1973 trauma — when Egypt inflicted heavy losses on Israeli forces — by proving its army can smash any threat to the national welfare.

The war has showed that Syria, Israel's most militarily dangerous neighbor, can be beaten without Soviet intervention, at least as long as Syria's own borders are not threatened.

The failure of the Arab world to rally around the PLO is interpreted here as meaning that the Arabs can live without the Palestinian cause. The United States' acquiescence thus far indicates to Israelis that President Reagan doesn't mind them playing policeman in the Middle East.

They may be wrong on all counts, but the war has dispelled the image of Israel the David fighting Goliath. Even before its troops stormed into Lebanon on June 6, Israel was in the most comfortable military position it had ever known.

Iraq had been humiliated in its war with Iran. Egypt was at peace with Israel and has remained so despite the invasion. Saudi Arabia seems unlikely to tangle with a country that considers self-defensive measures to include bombing an Iraqi nuclear reactor and besieging Beirut, and whose defense minister has been quoted as saying "the Saudis have the oil but we have the matches."

Sharon believes the destruction of the PLO will advance plans to grant the West Bank and Gaza Strip autonomy, because the Arabs of these areas will have no other choice.

But the pessimists of Israel fear that the tanks that rumbled into Lebanon may soon become mired in Lebanon's domestic violence. They warn that once in, Israel will have to stay in for fear that Lebanon will revert to Moslem-Christian civil war and the PLO will return and the Syrians will come back in as "peacekeepers."

Critics of the war say the campaign has far overextended its declared goal of pushing the PLO guerrillas out of range of Israel, and has become an effort to impose an Israeli peace on Lebanon.

Open protest has been limited so far, primarily because the opposition Labor Party is supporting the invasion as long as Beirut is not attacked.

Israelies Concerned Over U.S.

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israel's invasion army in Lebanon has to move quickly now that Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. has resigned because the Reagan administration may adopt a tougher line toward the Jewish state, senior political sources said Saturday.

The sources, quoted by Israel Radio, said the resignation of Haig, Israel's staunchest backer in the Reagan administration, could prevent Israel from achieving its objectives — getting the Palestine Liberation Organization to surrender and Syria to withdraw from Lebanon.

"The central issue in the next 24 to 48 hours is, to what extent will the United States demand the dismantling of the terrorist organizations within Lebanon, or will it suffice itself with a weaker, milder arrangement," Simcha Dinitz, former ambassador to Washington, told the radio.

Dinitz said he feared that in the interim period until Haig's successor George P. Shultz was sworn in, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger would gain ground with his hardline views on Israeli conduct.

Dinitz and former Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, both of whom know Shultz personally, expressed guarded concern about the latter's business ties with the Arab world. Shultz is president of the Bechtel Group Inc., which has vast business interests throughout the world, especially in Saudi Arabia.

U.S. Policy May See Change In Style

By JIM ANDERSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The departure of Alexander Haig is expected to change the direction and pace of U.S. foreign policy, although the change is likely to be one of style more than substance.

As Haig demonstrated in his 18 stormy months in office, style is an important part of a secretary of state's ability to deal with the rest of the world and the rest of the administration.

With 2½ years left in this administration, the timing of the switch will make it possible for Haig's designated successor, George Shultz, to put his stamp on policy and to have more than the caretaker role Edmund Muskie had when he assumed the job in 1980 after Cyrus Vance resigned in a policy disagreement.

Haig and Shultz have remarkably similar careers and political outlooks. Both were key members of the Nixon administration, and were two of the few who emerged with reputations intact. Both were remarkably successful in the high-pressure corporate world, Shultz with Bechtel, Haig with United Technology.

They are both regarded as moderate, pragmatic Republicans and both are actively opposed by conservative Republican groups for their lack of ideological fervor.

The two men also are suspect, in conservative circles, because both worked closely with — and are highly regarded by — former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

Of Shultz, Kissinger once told reporters, "He would be my nominee for any job in the Cabinet."

Officials who have worked with both men say the main difference comes in style. Haig insisted on putting his personal stamp on every important action, and this meant some important business was left undone while he concentrated on the Middle East, or the Falklands shuttle, or the time-consuming Versailles economic summit.

Shultz is described as much more of a team director, who delegated responsibility widely when he was economic "czar" in the Nixon administration.

He has not spoken out recently on foreign policy, except in 1978, when he delivered a speech to a business group denouncing what he called "light-switch diplomacy."

The phrase described what he considered the unhealthy tendency of the Carter administration to switch economic relations with other countries on and off, as a tool of current political tactics.

Thus Shultz would appear to side with Haig in one of the final losing battles that Haig fought in trying to moderate the economic sanctions toward the Soviet Union.

The President, on the advice of the Pentagon and White House aides, overruled Haig and extended and broadened the restrictions on the sale of equipment for the oil pipeline from Siberia to Western Europe.

Because the Bechtel Group Inc., Shultz' company, has large-scale dealings with Saudi Arabia, some members of Congress have expressed fear that Shultz — like Caspar Weinberger, also a Bechtel ex-official — may "tilt" toward the Arab side in the Middle East.

State Department officials, however, said Haig, himself, was losing patience with the Israeli invasion into Lebanon.

George Shultz: 'Team Player'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and his key aides conferred Saturday at Camp David with George P. Shultz, while top administration officials described the new secretary of state as a "team player" in contrast to Alexander M. Haig Jr.

After a 2½-hour meeting with Reagan in the shade of a pine tree, Shultz came to Washington and told reporters, "I can work simpatico for him and with his administration."

The secretary of state-designate said he saw the job "as an opportunity to do what I can to advance the cause of peace, freedom and justice in a world so troubled and so anxious to hope for a good future."

Meanwhile, deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said Shultz' nomination will be sent to the Senate "very promptly." Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., has said it is likely to be considered by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee during the week of July 12.

Thomas Jefferson Said:
"I have sworn eternal hostility to every form of tyranny over the human mind."

MY MESSAGE TO ALL PITT COUNTY CITIZENS

WATCHED SPENDING

I have watched many of my opponents spending a great deal of money in this campaign—billboard, newpaper and television advertising in addition to fancy leaflets, cards, buttons, T-shirts, and posters. Quite frankly, I am not wealthy enough to afford a five or six figure campaign, nor would I attempt to buy an election if I did have the financial means.

READ INTENTIONS

I have read much about what many of my opponents have said they would do if elected through their forum attendance as well as their advertising. As an elected Board of Education official, I know, without a shadow of a doubt, that good intentions sometimes have a way of going astray when given a "whole" set of facts in a particular situation. As in life, we have good future intentions, yet there are times when circumstances dictate a different course of action.

WON'T BORE YOU

I don't plan to bore you with promises or tell you what I will or I won't do, if elected. I will tell you that I'll work hard as your county commissioner and I'll listen to your ideas to improve county government. I will tell you that county government will have to tighten it's belt just as the average citizen such as you and me. I will tell you I won't be an administrative "Yes Man".

BY ALL MEANS VOTE

More importantly, I ask you to vote June 29, 1982. Local county citizens should express themselves with their vote, and whether you vote for me or not (and I hope you will) on June 29th, I respectfully urge you to take time out to cast your "important" ballot.

THANK YOU,

Convention Endorses Israeli Stand In Lebanon

Democrats Show Strong Party Harmony

By CLAY F. RICHARDS
UPI Political Writer

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The Democratic mid-term convention, diplaying almost unheard-of party harmony, Saturday proposed a series of policy positions including support for Israel in Lebanon and for a nuclear freeze.

In a carefully orchestrated move to draft bland statements that offend neither Democratic conservatives nor liberals, convention workshops also rejected a proposed Constitutional amendment for a balanced budget and called for complete reform of tax laws.

The policy statements, passed by committees almost without debate, are expected to be adopted by the convention Sunday. That final session will be highlighted by a speech by Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts.

Fighting at party conventions is as much a part of Democratic party tradition as the donkey. But in Philadelphia, the only discord at what officially is called the Democratic National Party Conference came outside the Civic Center.

About 250 demonstrators demanded the party discipline 100 Democratic state legislators in Oklahoma, Florida, North Carolina and Illinois who helped kill the Equal Rights Amendment. Eleanor Smeal, president of the National Organization for Women, said if Democrats don't punish them, women will abandon the party in November.

And, down the street, two Republican House conservatives came to town to hold a news conference attacking Democratic policy statements.

The convention's foreign policy workshop took note of Alexander Haig's resignation as secretary of state, prompting Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass., to comment that "contrary to what Secretary Haig said a year ago after President Reagan was shot, "no one is in control in the White House in foreign policy."

"The Reagan administration is scared stiff of the (nuclear weapons) freeze," Markey said. "It's hauled out a bunch of baloney about weapons superiority, it's tried to belittle the nuclear freeze movement by calling it simplistic, it's tried to co-opt the freeze movement."

The Mideast policiy statement says the warfare in Lebanon is "an opportunity for the reunification and restoration of Lebanese sovereignty and independence, free from any form of foreign occupation."

It called on the United States to exert efforts to "reinstate Lebanese sovereignty and Israeli security," supported immediate humanitarian relief, and expressed "deep regret" over loss of lives in south Lebanon.

The committee also endorsed a summit meeting between Reagan and Brezhnev on nuclear arms control.

The economic panel called on Congress to limit the individual income tax cuts under the Reagan program to $700 per person, to close tax loopholes, to restore funding to social, health and welfare programs, and to adopt a jobs program.

In other convention activities:

— Two Republican House members, Reps. Eugene Atkinson — who switched parties last year — and Newt Gingrich of Georgia, held a news conference to harass the convention. The two blamed Democrats from almost all the nation's ills, including the jury verdict that John Hinckley was insane when he shot President Reagan. Gingrich said that verdict was "a logical result of the liberal welfare state approach."

—Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., received the first major endorsement of the 1984 presidential race Saturday — that of his home state governor, Edmund Brown Jr. "There can be no doubt in my mind and in the minds of millions of Californians that our nation needs Sen. Alan Cranston as president," Brown said in a statement released at the convention.

—A committee approved and sent to the full meeting a call for eliminating discrimination against homosexuals. The statement says the party will work to "prohibit discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation" and will try to pass laws prohibiting bias on the basis of sexual orientation, race, creed, color or other reasons.

Environment To Be Major Issue In 1984 Campaign

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Bolstered by polls showing the public wants stringent air and water standards, Democratic candidates said Saturday that they will make the environment a major issue in the 1982 election.

"There's no question that being for the environment now makes good political sense. And that wasn't always true," said Rep. Toby Moffett, D-Conn., who is challenging Republican Sen. Lowell Weicker in November.

At a news conference sponored by Friends of the Earth, pollster Peter Hart called the environment "the biggest single-issue vote in America."

He said a public opinion survey at the end of last year found that 67 percent of the respondents favor stronger air and water regulations, and only 18 percent believe they should be relaxed.

Questions on party perception revealed that only 26 percent of the respondents believed the Republican Party favored strong regulation, while 64 percent believed the Democrats were with them on the issue, Hart said.

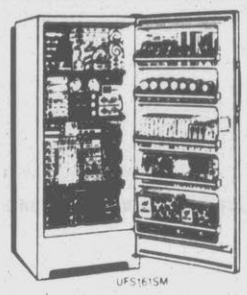

In addition, he said, Democrats can expect support from 16 percent of those who are Republican or independent and share Ronald Reagan's economic beliefs, but disagree with his environmental policies.

Later, during an energy and environmental policy workshop, Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., said some Republicans "would like to be sound on the environment" but they are "being forced to play loyal to Reagan."

Panelists at the workshop said the environmental issue could give Democratic challengers a 3- to 5-point boost in races against Republican incumbents.

Workshop participants adopted a draft statement accusing the Reagan administration of ending the nation's bipartisan commitment to the conservation ethic.

British Brace For National Rail Strike

LONDON (AP) — Bicycle shops and hotels did a brisk business Saturday as Britain braced for a national rail strike that threatens to paralyze traffic, particularly in London, where the subway system has already been shut down.

The rail strike, set to begin at midnight Sunday, "could be a very long strike indeed — one month, two months, three months," said Sir Peter Parker, chairman of state-run British Rail.

Last-ditch efforts to avert the rail strike have ended in deadlock. No new talks were scheduled Saturday to try and settle the dispute.

"The talking is over," National Union of Railwaymen General Secretary Sid Weighell said Saturday. "The battle is on — it's war."

The first all-out rail shutdown since the 1926 General Strike was expected to create traffic chaos in most British cities. In London, the subway strike has already produced what an Automobile Association spokesman called "hell on wheels," as cars jam the roads.

London's traffic police chief, Assistant Commissioner Robert Barker, fears Britain's capital could come to a standstill on Monday. He said: "It's the worst traffic situation in my memory."

Companies were snapping up hotel rooms in the city for their employees and bicycle shops were reporting a very brisk business.

The railway union, which represents both British Rail employees and London Transport subway workers, has demanded a 12 percent wage increase for its 177,500 members.

But financially-strapped British Rail and London Transport have both offered 5 percent linked to productivity deals aimed at streamlining their networks.

Parker said a strike could lead to the loss of thousands of job and a cut in the already shrunken 11,500-mile rail network.

FATAL CRASH... A Raleigh woman was killed and five other people, including truck driver Buddy Henry of Farmville, were injured when this tractor-trailer came to rest on top of a car in Wake County Friday. The truck was hauling liquid asphalt. (AP Laserphoto)

Farmville Man Hurt In Fatal Crash

By The Associated Press

Similar collisions between tractor-trailer rigs and automobiles — one in Forsyth County and one in Raleigh — left three people dead and several injured Friday, officials reported.

Terri H. Osborne, 23 and Nellie McKaughan, 45, both of Kernersville, died when their car swerved to avoid a pickup truck and was struck head-on by a tractor-trailer on Interstate 40 near Winston-Salem.

Charles Gonaware of Sheboygan, Wis., driver of the tractor-trailer, was not injured, police said. Thomas V. Tioran, 29, of Raleigh, driver of the pickup truck, was charged with two counts of manslaughter.

Anita Dillard, 31, of Raleigh, was killed in a similar accident in Wake County when a truck carrying liquid asphalt came to rest on the top of the car in which she was riding. Her husband, John Dillard, 34, was listed in critical condition at Rex Hospital.

The couple's daughter, Lori Dillard, 10, was treated and released from Rex, as was the child's grandmother, Sadie Dillard, 55, of Morrisville.

Also injured were Frankie Wilson, 28, of Durham, Anita Dillard's sister-in-law, and Buddy Henry, 31, of Farmville, the truck driver. There injuries were not believed to be serious.

The truck in that incident is owned by Central Transportation Inc. of High Point.

French, Soviet Cosmonauts Unite In Orbit

MOSCOW (UPI) — One French and four Soviet cosmonauts spent 13 hours working on experiments Saturday during their first full day together aboard the Salyut 7 space station.

Jean-Loup Chretien, French space researcher, Commander Vladimir Dzhanibekov and enginer Alexander Ivanchenkov joined cosmonauts Valentin Lebedev and Anatoly Berezovoy on the orbiting station Friday.

The official Tass news agency said all the cosmonauts were "feeling well" and that the spaceship was functioning normally.

Soviet television interspersed interviews with the international crew, filmed before they left Earth, with shots of the team on board the Salyut. The cosmonauts were read messages of good wishes from Presidents Leonid Brezhnev and Francois Mitterrand, and replied in turn.

"We assure you that we shall fulfill with honor the honorable and responsible mission that was entrusted to us," Berezgvoy said in his reply to Brezhnev.

Tass said work was begun on researching the cardiovascular systems of the cosmonauts, measuring the functions of their hearts, the rate of blood circulation and the size of blood vessels under the condition of weightlessness.

The international crew blasted off from Baikonur cosmodrome on Thursday night and docked their Soyuz T-6 capsule during its 18th orbit of the Earth.

Babysitting Class Planned

Eroded Strength Is Main Issue At NAACP Session

BOSTON (AP) — The nation's oldest and largest civil rights group convenes here this week to assess how blacks can generate new influence in the face of eroding political leverage.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People opens its annual convention Sunday on the heels of what civil rights leaders call their only clear political victory during the Reagan administration — Congress' extension of the Voting Rights Act with strong enforcement provisions.

President Reagan, who is more often considered an adversary than a friend in civil rights fights, backed the extension. But his endorsement came only after months of signals that the administration preferred a weaker version.

While the expected 3,000 convention delegates are scheduled to hear from two contenders for the 1984 Democratic presidential nomination — Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and former Vice Presdient Walter Mondale — the elections this fall are at the top of the association's agenda.

The NAACP, with 1,800 branches nationwide, is focusing its voter education and registration emphasis on 100 congressional districts where blacks make up 20 percent or more of the voting population.

But the association also will have to deal with dissension in its own ranks this week over tactics for maintaining its membership of 450,000 in the changing political climate.

The national leadership's decision to sue the NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund in an attempt to have the fund drop use of the initials or rejoin the parent organization has been criticized by many civil rights activists as being divisive and counterproductive.

But NAACP president Benjamin Hooks and board chairwoman Margaret Bush Wilson said they brought the long-standing feud to the surface because the organization's membership instructed them to do so. The two groups split originally to avoid a court challenge.

Voting rights has not been the only issue which rubbed salt in the wounds separating Reagan and blacks, who overwhelmingly voted for former President Carter in the last election.

Fund-Raiser Set For Local MDA

Muscular A four-day benefit "Soft Drink Palace" to raise funds for the Muscular Dystrophy Association Inc., will be held at the Center Court of Carolina East Mall Wednesday through Saturday.

Daniel Litz, program coordinator for the eastern chapter of the North Carolina Muscular Dystrophy Association, which covers 40 counties in the eastern half of the state, said 81 percent of all funds raised by the MDA "go to direct service to victims of muscular dystrophy. "Fund-raising costs account for another 17 percent of each dollar, and only two percent goes to administrative costs," he said.

Fourth in a series of conversations with Linwood Mercer....

"If our State Legislature can set mandatory retirement ages for educators and judges, shouldn't it do the same for itself?"

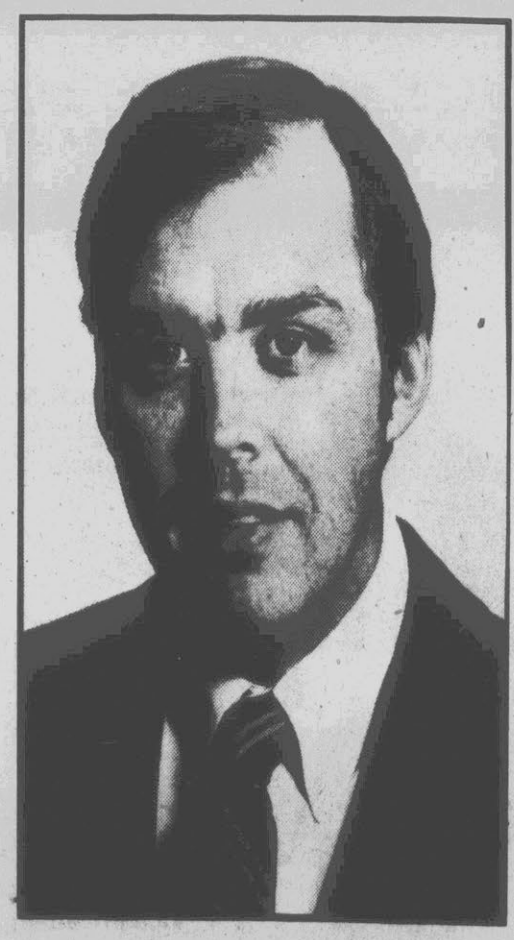

"What's good for the goose is good for the gander, they say. And while my own position is that a person's retirement age should depend entirely on his or her ability to perform the job, it seems only fair that the State Legislature should treat itself as it treats other state employees. That is, if it requires others to retire at age 65, then the state legislators should also be required to retire at that age.

"Take your present State Senator for example. He's now 76. And if the 4-year term is passed, he will be 80 by the time he retires.

"It's unfair. The double standard of requiring all state employees except legislators to retire at a certain age is something we could do without.

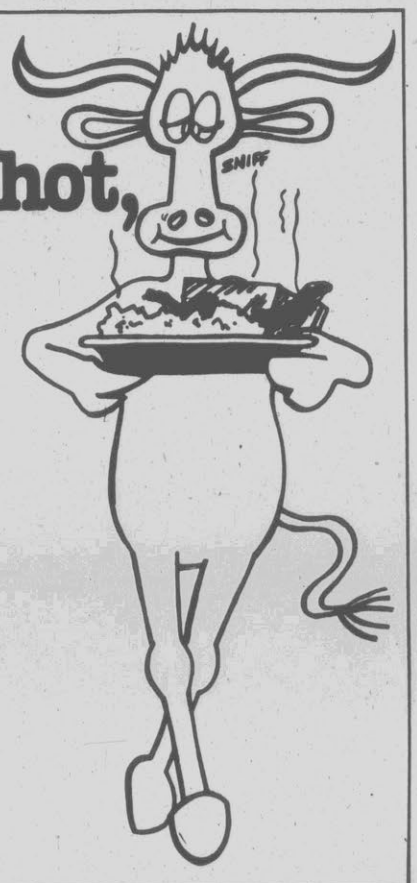

"I want the job as your State Senator. And I think that our laws concerning mandatory retirement ages should be carefully examined.

"Please give me your support on June 29."

SCLC Opens Symbolic Resurrection City II

WASHINGTON (AP) — Declaring "We made our point," the Southern Christian Leadership Conference on Saturday formally opened Resurrection City II, a symbolic re-creation of the shantytown established near the Lincoln Memorial by the same organization's Poor People's Campaign of 1968.

The Rev. Joseph E. Lowery, SCLC president, told the crowd of some 200 on the Ellipse behind the White House, "There is a smoldering discontent in 'Mt. St. Ghetto.' We hope America wakes up before 'Mt. St. Ghetto' erupts."

On a meandering path to Washington that started April 19 in Tuskegee, Ala., the demonstrators passed through towns in Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina and Virginia, urging local residents to vote and demonstrating for passage of an extension of the key provisions of the Voting Rights Act of 1965.

Unlike the 1968 Resurrection City, the current 10 tents — none of which was to be used for sleeping — serve as information centers and symbols of what the organizers say is the worsening plight of blacks and poor people under the Reagan administration.

On Wednesday, the group arrived at the Capitol steps just as the House voted unanimously to approve the voting rights measure. President Reagan signed it Thursday.

In their trek through the Deep South, the SCLC marchers had conducted door-to-door canvassing for voter registration in 30 congressional districts judged particularly vital to black voters. Lowery said the procession was designed, in part, to stir memories of the civil rights struggles of the 1960s.

Lowery told the small crowd: "This is not a march on Washington. That will come next year to mark the 20th anniversary of the 1963 March on Washington. We did not want the hordes. This was a pilgrimage."

Most of those in the audience were picked up on the way. There also was a small group from New York City.

Although no one, including Lowery, would say how long the marchers would stay in Washington — they have a 21-day permit to keep their tents up — Lowery indicated they would leave within a few days.

"We'll be here a few more days," said Lowery. "But we made our point."

In an interview, Lowery called the demonstration "an unqualified success, beyond our wildest dreams. I thought I had faith, but I can feel that faith now."

"We're going back home fired up. Their hometowns are not going to be the same," he said.

Israel ...

on which (Israeli Defense Minister Ariel) Sharon relied in his scorched earth strategy in Lebanon."

"American civilization, American human rights here we are," Arafat cried as he toured bombed-out neighborhoods. Men and women dashed out of their demolished houses to hug and kiss the stubble-bearded leader of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Senior political sources in Jerusalem said Israel's invasion army had to move quickly against the PLO guerrillas — perhaps in 24 to 48 hours — in case the Reagan administration adopt a tougher line toward the Jewish state following Haig's resignation.

But Israeli television reported the U.S. State Department sent Israel a message that Haig's departure would not mean a change in U.S. policy.

The state-run television said this apparently was meant to reassure Israel and deter it from any last-minute offensive before the State Department changeover.

Analysts said the Israelis probably would overrun the airport before storming into the adjacent Palestinian camp of Bourj el-Barajneh in case Israel decides to move in on the PLO nerve center.

Beirut newspapers reported mediation efforts were under way on a formula to move the hitherto inactive Lebanese army into west Beirut while the guerrillas pull back into the camps on the city's southern rim.

The army would then collect the PLO's heavy arms from the camps while a multinational force is set up to police a 25-mile guerrilla-free security zone adjoining Israel's northern border in southern Lebanon, the papers said.

The west Beirut sector has been controlled by the PLO and its leftist Lebanese militia allies since the 1975-76 Moslem-Christian civil war.

Syria snuffed out the war and its 30,000 "peacekeepers" remained in Lebanon, but increasingly attacked Israel's Christian allies rather than policing the civil war armistice as they were supposed to do.

Israel invaded June 6 to crush the guerrillas near its northern border and rout the Syrians.

Haig is known to have been at odds with Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, an opponent of the 3-week-old invasion, and is now to be replaced by George P. Shultz, president of a group with wide interests in the Arab world, especially in Saudi Arabia.

Lebanon's latest cease-fire was arranged by U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib and went into effect Friday as Haig's resignation was announced.

Habib met Saturday with Lebanese President Elias Sarkis at the Israeli-ringed presidential palace in suburban Baabda.

U.N. Demands Withdrawal By Israelies

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The General Assembly adopted a resolution Saturday by a vote of 127-2 demanding that Israel withdraw its troops from Lebanon immediately.

The United States and Israel cast the only votes against the resolution, which was sponsored by Syria and about 50 other Third World and Arab nations. Twenty-eight members were absent from the 157-nation assembly.

Adoption of the resolution ended a two-day emergency session of the assembly on "The Question of Palestine."

America vetoed a French-sponsored resolution in the 15-member Security Council earlier Saturday after lengthy consultations. That resolution would have called on Israel to pull its forces back six miles from Beirut, preparatory to a complete withdrawal.

The U.S. delegate said the council veto was cast because the draft did not call on the Palestinian guerrillas besieged in Beirut to lay down their arms.

There is no veto in the General Assembly, but the assembly does not have the power to enforce its resolutions while the Security Council can impose mandatory sanctions.

Billie Jean King Still Reigns As Mistress Of Wimbledon's Courts

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Billie Jean King was still mistress of Wimbledon Saturday at 38 years old, saving three match points and battling back to beat an opponent 15 years her junior at the All-England Tennis Championships.

The six-time Wimbledon champion, the oldest woman player in the tournament, defeated Tanya Harford of South Africa 5-7, 7-6, 6-3 in an up-and-down match played in four stages between rain showers.

For the fifth time in six days, rain disrupted the tournament, which ended the first week some 150 matches behind schedule. Officials planned to make up lost time by starting early and using all 17 courts of the All-England Club through the second week. They still hope to finish with the men's final on July 4.

The third round of the women's singles was completed, but more than 40 men were still waiting to play their second-round matches.

Vitas Gerulaitis, the No.3 seed, slammed his way past Bruce Derlin of New Zealand 7-5, 6-2, 6-3. Johan Kriek of South Africa, seeded fifth, twice came from behind to overcome Peter Elter of West Germany 4-6, 6-3, 3-6, 6-0, 6-4.

Lloyd Bourne, a 23-year-old Californian, won a long match against Cassio Motta of Brazil 6-4, 6-4, 1-6, 5-7, 6-3 and qualified to play defending champion John McEnroe in the next round.

McEnroe and his main rival Jimmy Connors had already reached the third round.

It is 19 years since King was first frustrated by the rain on Wimbledon's Center Court. In 1963, when she reached the final for the first time as Billie Jean Moffitt, the tennis was washed out on the Saturday final and she lost to Margaret Smith (later Court) two days later.

This time the rain kept interrupting the match, and it may have cost her the first set.

Rain fell as she served to save the set at 5-6. She asked for the match to be stopped, but the umpire told her to play on.

King broke off play once to wipe her glasses, but she lost the game and the set.

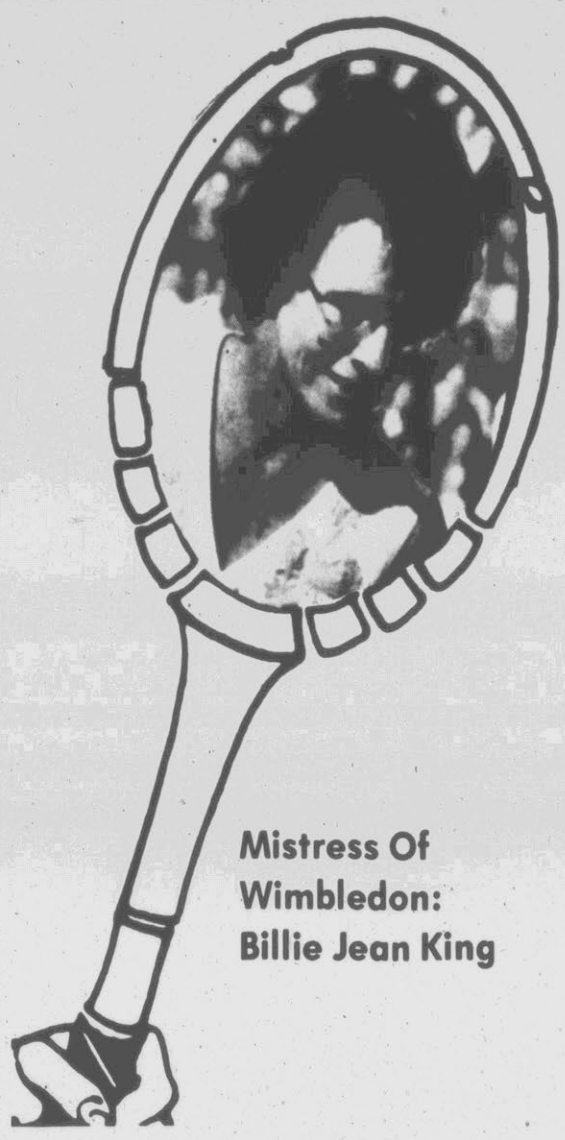

At 4-5 in the second set, King trailed love-40 on her service and was on the brink of being eliminated. But she fought back with some of the strokes that made her the Wimbledon champion in the '60s — volleys that often moved at an unexpected angle and had the South African going the wrong way.

The set went to a tiebreaker. King won it 7-2, and from then on she was in command. She broke service for a 5-3 lead with cunning short returns, and dropped only two points in five service games.

"I can't recall the previous time I have been so close to defeat and won," she said. "When I was down 4-5 and love-40, I told myself, 'You have been here 21 years, so use that experience and hang on.'"

Seeded players reaching the last 32 of the women's singles, along with King, were No.6 Wendy Turnbull of Australia, No.11 Bettina Bunge of the United States and No.15 Virginia Ruzici of Romania.

Turnbull beat Pat Medrado of Brazil 6-2, 6-4. Bunge was leading 6-3, 2-1 when her opponent, Marjorie Blackwood of Canada, pulled out with a pulled thigh muscle. Ruzici edged Sabina Simmonds of Italy 6-7, 7-6, 7-5 in a long close duel which attracted a big crowd around a court at the far end of the grounds.

Mistress Of Wimbledon: Billie Jean King

Hank Pfister ousted Stan Smith, the 1972 champion, 6-4, 7-6, 7-6. But Smith enjoyed his share of glory from the past. During the longest rain break, a film was shown on television of his five-set victory over Romania's Ilie Nastase in the 1972 final, and players eagerly watched it in the locker rooms.

"Just watch this volley on the next point," King told the women players as the final set was shown. She remembered it all.

Astounding Double Eagle Ups Gilbert's Lead To Six Strokes

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Just at the moment it seemed that his record-setting scoring binge had come to an end, Bob Gilder achieved golf's most rare accomplishment, a last-hole double-eagle that gave him a share of an all-time PGA Tour scoring record.

Gilder holed a 3-wood second shot from 251 yards out — achieving a score of "2" on a par-5 hole — Saturday on the 18th hole of the third round of $400,000 Manufacturers Hanover-Westchester Classic. It was the first double eagle of his career and the first of the year on the pro golf tour.

The spectacular shot, on the 509-yard final hole at the Westchester Country Club course in suburban New York, turned what appeared to be a relatively routine performance by Gilder into a thing of drama. It finished off a 5-under-par 65 and giving him (1) a whopping six-stroke lead going into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $72,000 first prize and (2) a share of the all-time Tour record for the lowest score on the first three rounds of a tournament.

He had earlier rounds of 64 and 63 and completed 54 holes in 18-under-par 192. That figure tied the record set by Mike Souchak in the 1955 Texas Open.

Gilder, who missed the all-time record for the first two rounds by a single stroke, now has a shot at the record for 72 holes, 257, also by Souchak in the same Texas Open. Gilder needs a final round of 65 to tie it.

The record book, however, was not the chief casualty of Gilder's shot from the fairway, a shot that ran from the front of the green, up a little slope and into the heart of the hole.

That unhappy distinction belonged to Tom Kite, who, undaunted by Gilder's earlier heroics, had grittily maintained pursuit of the leader and had him within range for a last-round challenge.

That disappeared, along with the ball, in the cup on the 18th.

"What," the stunned Kite asked, "is the antidote for shock."

He made birdie on the hole, dropping a six-foot putt. He made birdie and lost two strokes to the leader, falling six big strokes back.

"Jeez," Kite said, "that's unbelievable. I make birdie and lose two strokes. That's hard to take.

"When he hit it, when it was in the air, I said, 'God, he's made it.' My caddy said, 'no, it's gonna be short.'

"Obviously, he wasn't."

And it puts the tournament in Gilder's hands. It's his to win or lose.

"There are two things have to happen tomorrow for me to have a chance," said Kite, who had a third-round 68 and was alone in second at 198. "Bob has to play bad and I have to have a really low number. Six shots have been overcome before, but if I shoot 64 tomorrow, all he has to do is shoot par — and that's just for a playoff.

"Nobody else has a chance."

Gilder, seeking to add this title to the Byron Nelson Classic he won earlier this year, took a different view.

"I'm not surprised at the score or the 54 holes," he said of his share of the record.

He paused just a moment, smiled broadly and continued.

"It's that double eagle that kind of throws you. You don't expect that.

"But you have to remember that anything can happen yet. There's another round tomorrow. But I have a good feeling about it. I'm playing well. I'm not over-elated or flat. I'm a little nervous.

"But," he said, and grinned again, "I guess a 6-shot lead is a little better than three."

Peter Jacobsen, who entered the third round in a tie for second only three shots back, simply couldn't keep up with Gilder's record pace. Jacobsen managed a round of par 70 and was eight shots back at 200.

No one else was within 10 strokes of Gilder going into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $72,000 first prize.

Defending titleholder Ray Floyd had a 66 and was at 206. British Open champion Bill Rogers birdied five holes in a row over one stretch, had a 67 and was at 205, 5-under par and, incredibly, 13 strokes behind. Masters champ Craig Stadler was at 209 after a 71. Tom Watson, who won the U.S. Open last week, failed to make the cut for the last two rounds.

Gilder, winner of the Byron Nelson Classic earlier this season, had a three-stroke lead over Kite and Jacobsen when the day's play started.

Kite made a run at him on the front side, scoring birdies on the fifth, sixth and ninth, but, he noted "Bob put one in on top of me on every hole."

So there remained a three-shot difference on the back, and neither played particularly well on that side.

Gilder got it into deep rough a couple of times and made a pair of bogeys. So did Kite.

And then, on the 18th, when Kite seemed to still be in the race, Gilder holed out his 3-wood second shot from 251 yards for golf's most rare accomplishment, the double eagle. It was the first of the year on the pro golf tour and the first of Gilder's career.

Campbell Tosses East Carolina Aside In Twinbill, 13-1, 5-0

Bob Posey and Tom Lynch each hit home runs to spark Campbell University to a sweep of a North State Collegiate Baseball League doubleheader over East Carolina University last night.

Campbell rolled to a 13-1 victory in the first game, then came back with a 5-0 shutout in the second.

The Pirates were behind in the first game before they got realized what was happening, as starter Brian Peterson was chased before the first inning was over, having given up six runs.

Bob Spicer opened things with a single and Bob Posey also got a single. Bill Wilkes walked, loading the bases. Kelly Hoffman walked to force in the first run, and Tom Lynch reached on an error, scoring another. Rodney Stovall's single not only chased Peterson, but plated another run. Ron Ammons finished things off with a two-run single for the 6-0 lead.

The fifth saw another Camel run come across as Spicer singled, moved up on Posey's hit and scored on an error on the play.

Four more scored in the sixth, on a pair of doubles, one each by Posey and Spicer, a snd two singles and a walk.

The final Camel run crossed in the seventh.

East Carolina's lone run of the game came in the third inning. Mark Shank singled and moved up on an error, taking third on the play. He scored when Robbie Langston grounded out.

It proved to be the only Pirate run of the night.

All five of the Camel runs in the second game came over in the third. Spicer reached on an error and stole up. He scored on Kevin Barger's single. Barger moved up on a wild pitch and Wilkes reached on an error. Kelly Hoffman also was safe on an error, scoring Barger.

Lynch then finished off the scoring by cracking a three-run blast to account for the rest of the Camel runs.

Lynch and Barger each had two hits in the game.

Record Showings Highlight Meet

AP Sports Writer

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Record performances by pole vaulter Dave Volz and high jumper Coleen Sommer paced a team of American track and field performers to a sizeable lead in an international triangular meet at Duke University Saturday.

Volz, a rising junior at Indiana University, cleared 18-feet, 9½-inches on his first try to break an American record set by Dan Ripley and Billy Olson one week ago. Sommer, a former student at Arizona State, topped 6-6 to break a mark of 6-5½ set last year by Pam Spencer of Los Angeles Naturite Track Club.

The United States holds a 54-40 lead over the West German team, and a 61-28 edge over the Pan-African squad in men's competition. The American women claimed a 61-34 lead over West Germany in the meet, which concludes Sunday. The Pan-African team fielded no women.

As the small crowd of 8,000 began to file out of Wallace Wade Stadium, Volz attempted a world mark of 19-1½, but failed in all three attempts at the height.

"My legs are tired today. A little calf injury I had earlier this week slowed me down," Volz said. "The hot weather drained me. I was really exhausted by the time (19-1½) came up."

Meanwhile, Calvin Smith won his latest battle with Carl Lewis in the 100-meter dash, while Americans captured victories in four other events to dominate early competition.

Smith, a junior at the University of Alabama, ran a wind-aided 10.03 seconds to nip Lewis by two-hundredths of a second. Innocent Egbunike of Nigeria finished third at 10.32 and Theophile Nkounkou of Congo was fourth at 10.43.

In their last meeting, one week ago at the USA-Mobil meet at Knoxville, Tenn., Lewis defeated Smith by five-hundredths of a second, despite the fact Lewis waved to the crowd 10 meters from the finish line, allowing Smith to close the gap.

The Mississippi native never saw Lewis in Saturday's race. Breaking quickly from the blocks, Smith claimed the lead at 20 meters while Lewis had to overcome Egbunike to take second.

"Calvin's a good sprinter," Lewis said after accepting his second-place trophy. "I'm not displeased to run and lose to him. I'm not sure I could say that about any other competitor."

Smith said he was surprised to get the victory, achieved in temperatures reaching 90 degrees. But he said he felt he'd beat Lewis sometime this year.

"I felt that on any given day I could win," Smith said. "I've been running well the last couple of weeks. Beating Lewis feels very good since he's the number one sprinter right now."

Diane Williams of the U.S. turned in a 11.20 in the women's 100 meters to claim top honors. Teammate Brenda Morehead was second at 11.48 and Chandra Cheeseborough completed the American sweep at 11.49.

American Candy Young fought off an early challenge by Kim Turner to take to 100-meter hurdles in a time of 12.94. Pam Page was second at 13.01, while Turner was third at 13.09.

Young's time was the sixth-best performance ever by an American woman and established a meet record. The previous mark of 13.14 was set by Marlies Koschinski of West Germany in 1975.

Ingrid Thyssen of West Germany captured the women's javelin with a toss of 209 feet, 3 inches, with teammate Eva Helmschmidt second at 207 feet.

Karin Smith of the United States was third at 203-2, with American Lynda Hughes fourth at 195-4.

Other American winners were Larry Cowling in the 110-meter hurdles at 13.53 seconds, Al Feuerbach in the shot put at 66-feet-8½-inches and Willie Banks in the triple jump with a leap of 54-11½.

Carol Lewis, sister of sprinter Carl Lewis, leaped 21-11½ to take first place in the women's long jump. Lorna Griffin won the discus with a toss of 187 feet and Leann Warren took the 1,500-meters in a time of 4:11.74.

Farmville Central's Rose Lang Named Female Athlete Of Year

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Back when Rose Lang was a freshman at Farmville Central High School, she was named as the Most Improved Athlete on the girls' track team.

That award was a note of prophesy for Lang, who has gone on to become an outstanding athlete, not only in track, but in basketball and volleyball as well.

Today, she is named as the first recepient of the Daily Reflector Female High School Athlete of the Year Award winner.

She joins earlier announced winners Mike Long of D.H. Conley, Male High School winner, and collegiate winners, Sam Jones and Tottie Robbins in the elect circle of athletes honored this first year.

"Rose Lang is one of the most outstanding athletes we have had at Farmville Central," said Farmville Central Athletic Director Hilda Worthington. And she should know. She coached Rose in both track and basketball throughout the four years of her career with the Lady Jaguars.

"She has excelled in athletics as well as being above average academically," Worthington continued. "I have personally worked with this young lady for four years and can say she is a real joy to work with."

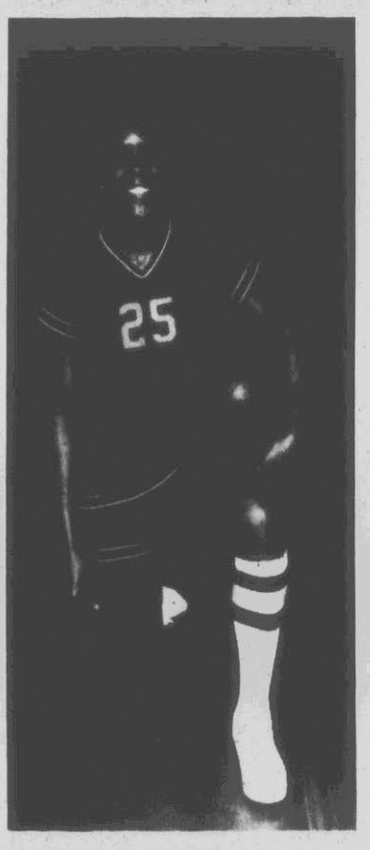

One of the attributes that Worthington really liked was Lang's willingness to work extra for improvement. "If she cannot accomplish the goals she sets for herself, she will spend many hours working by herself to improve."

One of 13 children, Rose had offers from East Carolina in track, and from Atlantic Christian and N.C. Wesleyan in basketball. She choose the latter, and will join a former teammate, Rose Edmundson, on the Lady Bishop basketball team next year.

As a freshman at Farmville, Rose began early to show the promise that she would fulfill as a senior. Her first year, she played both basketball and ran track, winning, as noted, the Most Improved award in the latter.

But it was as a junior that she really began to blossom. She won the coaches award in basketball, and was selected to the All-Eastern Carolina Conference team in track in four areas: the 100-meter hurdles, the triple jump, the 400-meter dash and the anchor leg of the mile relay. She was also named as the team's Most Valuable Athlete.

Farmville's Rose Lang

"She played for the first time as a junior," Coach Mike Terrell recalled, "but quickly adapted to (the sport) and made a great contribution to our team. She is an exceptional athlete."

The awards continued to pile up during her senior year. To her MVP awards of the previous year, she added more trophies, picking up Most Valuable honors in all three sports.

She was chosen all-conference in basketball, despite the team's overall dismal record, and also made the all-tournament team. She was chosen to the All-Area team by the Wilson Daily Times.

In track, she continued to be all-conference in the triple jump, the 100-meter hurdles and the 1,600-meter relay team's anchor leg.

In the sectionals, she took first place in the 400-meter dash and finished fourth in the event in the sectionals.

And she is not only an athlete, but a well-rounded student as well. She belongs to the Keywanette Club, the Fellowship of Christian Athletes, the Spanish Club and the Art Club. As as artist, she won third place in the State Art Contest.

She's also been chosen for inclusion in Who's Who.

Topping off her awards at Farmville, however, is the Dickie Newton Award, presented to the outstanding athlete in the school. Only once before has a girl won the award, and fete Worthington points to an "outstanding."

It only is fitting that she receive the Daily Reflector award as the final touch to her high school career.

Lang beat out several other nominees, including Belinda Haselrig of Rose High School, Gladys Roberson of North Pitt, both three-sport stars, and Kathy Vernelson of Greenville Christian Academy, a basketball player.

Kaat Hurls Cards To Win In First Start

CHICAGO (AP) — Jim Kaat allowed four hits in six innings in his first start of the season to lead the first-place St. Louis Cardinals to a 2-1 victory over the Chicago Cubs and a doubleheader sweep Saturday.

Bruce Sutter got the save in both games, giving him 17 this season. He worked one inning of hitless relief for Dave LaPoint in the opener, and 11-3 innings of one-hit relief in the nightcap.

Keith Hernandez singled in the lead run in the opener and also singled and scored in the ninth inning for a 4-1 triumph.

Kaat, 43-year-old left-hander, upped his record to 2-1 and was nicked for a run in the first on singles by Ryne Sandberg and Keith Moreland. He didn't allow another run before departing for a pinch batter in the seventh.

The Cardinals tied it in the second inning on doubles by Ken Oberkfell and Gene Tenace and went ahead to stay on another run-scoring single by Hernandez in the third inning of the nightcap. Lee Smith, 1-3, took the loss.

Hernandez and George Hendrick led the attack in the opener, each getting two of the Cardinals' six hits off loser Doug Bird, 4-8.

Hendrick singled in the second, went to third on a single by Tom Herr and scored as Oberkfell grounded out.

The Cubs tied it in the bottom of the second on a single by Jay Johnstone and a run-scoring double by Larry Bowa, but Hernandez' run-scoring single with two outs in the third put the Cardinals ahead to stay.

Bird then retired the next 17 batters before Hernandez beat out an infield hit in the ninth and scored on a double by Hendrick. Hendrick advanced to third on an error by Bowa and scored as Mike Ramsey grounded out.

LaPoint went 4-1 with the opening-game victory.

Milwaukee 11
Boston 10

BOSTON (AP) — Ben Oglivie homered and broke an eighth-inning tie with a two-run single, and the Milwaukee Brewers held on to edge the Red Sox 11-10 Saturday after squandering a six-run lead.

Oglivie's hit came after reliever Mark Clear, 6-3, the third Boston pitcher, walked three straight batters to load the bases. Rollie Fingers, 4-5, went the final three innings for the victory. The Brewers, who added a ninth-inning run on Robin Yount's sacrifice fly, have won nine of their past 10 games.

The Red Sox came up with two runs off Fingers with two out in the ninth to cut the margin to a single run. Dave Stapleton singled and Rich Gedman followed with a ground-rule double. Wade Boggs singled home both runners, but Fingers struck out Glenn Hoffman to end the game.

Trailing 8-2 after 4½ innings, Boston tied the score with four runs in the fifth and two in the seventh.

Two-run homers by Dwight Evans, his sixth, and Carl Yastrzemski, No. 10, cut the Brewers' lead to 8-6 in the fifth.

In the seventh, Dwight Bernard yielded walks to Yastrzemski and Dave Stapleton with none out and was relieved by Fingers. Gedman sacrificed, and the runners scored on a sacrifice fly by Boggs and a single by Hoffman.

Cecil Cooper's 14th homer gave the Brewers a 1-0 lead in the third, but the Red Sox tied the score in the bottom of the inning when Jim Rice stroked RBI single.

The Brewers got to starter John Tudor for three runs in the fourth. Oglivie belted his 18th homer, and Charlie Moore followed Ed Romero's single with his third homer to make it 4-1.

In the bottom of the fourth, Hoffman's RBI double cut the lead to 4-2, but Milwaukee added four more runs in the fifth on Ted Simmons' sacrifice fly, a two-run single by Romero and an RBI hit by Moore.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Rookie catcher Ozzie Virgil drove in the winning run with a fifth-inning single and Marty Bystrom scattered nine hits as the Philadelphia Phillies defeated the New York Mets 4-3 Saturday in the first game of a twi-night doubleheader for their fifth straight victory.

With the score tied 3-3 in the fifth, Mike Schmidt drew a one-out walk off loser Randy Jones, 6-7. Bill Robinson then lined to shortstop Ron Gardenhire who threw wildly to first attempting to double up Schmidt, allowing the runner to go to second. Virgil then singled between first and second for the game-winning hit.

Bystrom, 2-0, struck out six, walked one and did not allow a hit after the fifth inning. For Jones, who hasn't won since May 23, it was his fifth consecutive setback.

The Mets scored in the second inning on a single by Joel Youngblood and an RBI double by Gardenhire. The Phillies tied it in the bottom of the inning on Virgil's grounder following singles by Schmidt and Robinson.

Philadelphia took a 2-1 lead in the third on Gary Matthews' 10th home run of the season but the Mets tied it in the fourth on three singles and a double play grounder by Hubie Brooks.

The Phillies went ahead 3-2 in the bottom of the fourth on an RBI single by Ivan DeJesus. The Mets tied the score again in the fifth on a double by Mookie Wilson and George Foster's single.

San Francisco 6

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Broderick Perkins looped a two-out single in the 15th inning to drive in Garry Templeton from third base with the winning run Saturday and give the San Diego Padres a 7-6 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

The Padres lost an opportunity earlier in the 15th when Luis Salazar led off with a triple. After an intentional walk to Templeton, Ruppert Jones grounded a 3-0 pitch to shortstop Johnnie LeMaster, who threw out Salazar by several steps at the plate.

Eric Show, 6-3, who came on the 14th, earned the victory.

The Giants had a chance in the 11th when Max Venable led off with a pinch single and was sacrificed to second but was thrown out at the plate by right fielder Joe Lefebvre on Chili Davis' one-out single.

The Giants completed a comeback from a 6-2 deficit by scoring the tying run in the eighth inning. Milt May led off with a single and Darrell Evans walked. Tom O'Malley's double play grounder sent May to third and LeMaster drove in his third run of the game with a single to make it 6-6.

Home runs by Steve Swisher, Perkins and Templeton helped San Diego build its 6-2 lead, but the Giants scored three times in the sixth to pull within a run. Jack Clark led off with a single, O'Malley belted a run-scoring double and LeMaster followed with a two-run homer, his second.

Swisher's first homer of the season triggered the Padres' two-run third. Alan Wiggins singled, stole second and third and scored on Gene Richards' single.

Perkins' first home run of the season made it 3-0 in the fourth, but the Giants scored twice in the bottom of the inning on Davis' single and a homer by Brenly.

Pitcher John Curtis' leadoff single started the Padres' three-run fifth. Curtis was sacrificed to second, went to third on Richards' single and scored on reliever Fred Breining's throwing error attempting a pickoff at first base. Templeton's two-run homer made it 6-2.

CINCINNATI (AP) — Tom Seaver hurled a three-hitter over eight innings and an unusual two-error play that allowed Dan Driessen to score from first base gave the Cincinnati Reds a 2-1 victory over the Atlanta Braves Saturday night.

Seaver, 4-8, surrendered a run on two hits in the first inning and retired 12 batters in a row following a fourth-inning walk to Claudell Washington, who was thrown out attempting to steal. Biff Pocoroba singled in the eighth to break the string.

Seaver, who struck out four and walked one, faced the minimum number of batters after the first inning befor giving way to Tom Hume, who pitched the ninth for his 16th save.

With the score tied 1-1 in the sixth, Driessen led off with a single off loser Ken Dayley, 3-4, and stole second. When catcher Pocoroba's throw was low and skipped into center field, Driessen continued to third. He scored when center fielder Brett Butler's throw caromed off third baseman Bob Horner's glove into left-center field.

Atlanta took a 1-0 lead in the first inning when Washington doubled with two out and scored on a single by Dale Murphy, who has a National League-leading 58 runs batted in.

Cincinnati tied it in the third on singles by Ron Oester and Dave Concepcion, a wild pitch and a sacrifice fly by Paul Householder.

MONTREAL (AP) — Pittsburgh capitalized on a seventh-inning throwing error by Montreal shortstop Chris Speier to score two unearned runs and break a 4-4 tie and Willie Stargell capped an eight-run outburst the next inning with a two-run pinch double as the Pirates blasted the Montreal Expos 14-5 Saturday night.

The unearned runs in the seventh came off starter Charlie Lea, 6-3. Enrique Romo, 4-1, the third of four Pittsburgh pitchers, was the winner.

With one out in the seventh, Bill Madlock reached first base on Speier's error and went to second on a single by Jason Thompson. Madlock scored when Dave Parker singled, with Thompson stopping at second. Lee Lacy singled to right, but Thompson was thrown out at the plate by Warren Cromartie. Tony Pena's infield hit drove in Parker.

O'Connor Spells Quick Relief For Twins

TORONTO (AP) — Jack O'Connor never thought his duties as a reliever with the Minnesota Twins would include coming into a game with two runners on and no one out in the first inning.

That was the situation he faced Saturday against Toronto, however, and the young left-hander came through with a superb showing in Minnesota's 4-3 victory.

"I didn't really have much time to think about it," O'Connor said of his sudden insertion into the game after starter Pete Redfern was hit on the right heel by a hot smash from Rance Mulliniks.

Damaso Garcia had led off the inning with a single and moved to third when the ball caromed off Redfern into left field.

"With runners on, I just wanted to get each guy I faced," said O'Connor, who retired the side in order but surrendered a run on Willie Upshaw's grounder.

"I was happy to get out of that with only one run," said O'Connor, who took the mound with a hefty 12.38 earned-run average. He lasted seven innings, giving up the run and striking out seven.

John Castino's two-out single in the Minnesota ninth inning snapped a 3-3. Gary Ward led off with a single, was sacrificed to second and scored on Castino's single off Toronto right-hander Dave Stieb, 6-8, who scattered eight hits in going the distance.

The Blue Jays nearly spoiled the performance of O'Connor when they tied the score 3-3 with two runs in the eighth. O'Connor gave up a leadoff single by Garth Iorg that brought on reliever Ron Davis, 2-7, the eventual winning pitcher. Davis walked pinch-hitter Hosken Powell, and Willie Upshaw followed with a bases-clearing triple.

Bobby Mitchell hit a two-out, two-run triple in the fifth inning to give Minnesota a 3-1 lead. Mitchell's hit scored Ward and Gary Gaetti, who had singled.

Tim Laudner's solo homer, his third of the season, tied the score 1-1 in the Minnesota second.

Milwaukee	11
Boston	10

BOSTON (AP) — Ben Oglivie homered and broke an eighth-inning tie with a two-run single, and the Milwaukee Brewers held on to edge the Red Sox 11-10 Saturday after squandering a six-run lead.

Oglivie's hit came after reliever Mark Clear, 6-3, the third Boston pitcher, walked three straight batters to load the bases. Rollie Fingers, 4-5, went the final three innings for the victory. The Brewers, who added a ninth-inning run on Robin Yount's sacrifice fly, have won nine of their past 10 games.

The Red Sox came up with two runs off Fingers with two out in the ninth to cut the margin to a single run. Dave Stapleton singled and Rich Gedman followed with a ground-rule double. Wade Boggs singled home both runners, but Fingers struck out Glenn Hoffman to end the game.

Trailing 8-2 after 4½ innings, Boston tied the score with four runs in the fifth and two in the seventh.

Two-run homers by Dwight Evans, his sixth, and Carl Yastrzemski, No. 10, cut the Brewers' lead to 8-6 in the fifth.

In the seventh, Dwight Bernard yielded walks to Yastrzemski and Dave Stapleton with none out and was relieved by Fingers. Gedman sacrificed, and the runners scored on a sacrifice fly by Boggs and a single by Hoffman.

Cecil Cooper's 14th homer gave the Brewers a 1-0 lead in the third, but the Red Sox tied the score in the bottom of the inning when Jim Rice stroked RBI single.

The Brewers got to starter John Tudor for three runs in the fourth. Oglivie belted his 18th homer, and Charlie Moore followed Ed Romero's single with his third homer to make it 4-1.

In the bottom of the fourth, Hoffman's RBI double cut the lead to 4-2, but Milwaukee added four more runs in the fifth on Ted Simmons' sacrifice fly, a two-run single by Romero and an RBI hit by Moore.

Pepsi-Cola.....12
Coca-Cola 8

Pepsi-Cola rolled to a 12-8 victory over Coca-Cola Saturday and moved within two games of clinching the 1982 Babe Ruth League championship. Any combination of two Pepsi wins or Coke losses would wrap it up.

Pepsi jumped into the lead in the first inning, scoring once. THey added three more runs in the second inning before Coke rallied for three in the bottom of the second. Pepsi added a fifth run in the third and a sixth in the fourth. Coke then came up with two in the fourth to cut the lead to 6-5. Two more Pepsi runs crossed in the fifth before four in the sixth closed the door.

In the sixth, Les Turner singled with one away and Sterling Edwards doubled. Russell Vines walked and Kelly Parrisher singled in two runs. Mitch Phillips reached on an error, allowing the other two to score.

Coke added its final two in the seventh.

Turner and Phillips each had two hits to lead Pepsi, while Joey Hallow and Paul Hill had two for Coke.

Wachovia Bank 4

Tony Taylor tossed a two-hitter at Wachovia Bank as Brown & Wood came away with a 12-4 Babe Ruth League victory yesterday.

Brown & Wood jumped into the lead in the first inning with a run, but Wachovia countered that in the bottom of the frame.

Then, in the third, a nine-run explosion ended the Wachovia hopes. Doyle Kirlland opened the inning with a single, stealing third. Kelly barnhill singled and a hit by Todd Martin brought in Kirkland. Tony Taylor walked, loading the bases, and Darryl Perkins singled, scoring Barnhill. An error let Martin score and Taylor came over on a wild pitch. Frankie Atkinson walked and Joe Hobgood reached on an error, scoring Perkins. A passed ball let Atkinson score and Brian Bridges walked. Kirkland reached on an error, scoring Hobgood, and a Martin walked, loading the bases. Taylor reached on an error, scoring two more.

B&W added two more in the fifth. Wachovia got one in the fourth and two in the fifth.

Taylor had a no-hitter going until the fifth, when Wachovia got both of its hits.

Barnhill had two hits to lead B&W.

Planters Bank.....10
Famous Subs.....6

Jimmy Best had three hits, while Monty Atkinson, Jason Boyd and Derek Dickens each had two to pace Planters Bank to a 10-6 win over Famous Subs Saturday in Babe Ruth League action.

Both teams opened with a barrage, each scoring six runs in the second inning. However, it was the first and last for Famous Subs, while Planters went on to score four more.

What proved the difference came in the third. Clark Stallings led off with a single and Boyd walked. Stallings advanced on an error and scored on a balk.

Planters then added one in the fifth and two in the seventh for its total of ten.

Little League

Exchange 3

Judd Crumpler drove in the tying run and Dallas McPherson added the winner as Wellcome rallied to pull out a 4-3 victory over Exchange in the Tar Heel Little League yesterday.

Exchange got a run in the first, but Wellcome tied it up with one in the second. Exchange went back out in the fourth, scoring twice.

Then, in the bottom of the sixth, facing the loss, Wellcome rallied to win. With one away, Jason Browder walked and David Best did too. Blake Stallings also walked, loading the bases.

Crumpler followed with a single, driving in two runs to tie it up, and McPherson singled in Stallings with the game-winning run.

Crumpler, McPherson and Chris Brown each had two hits for Wellcome, while Greg VanScoy allowed only two hits by Exchange.

Joel Pierce threw a one-hitter at the second-place Lions Saturday in the North State Little League as the Optimists gained a 6-1 upset victory. The loss by the Lions insured Union Carbide of no worse than a tie for the league championship, and needing just one win or a Lion loss to wrap it up.

The lone hit by the Lions, by Tom Mopye came in the fifth, when the lone run was scored — also by Moye.

The Optimists took the lead with one in the second, then added two runs in the third to insure the win. Jeff Mahoney got on with a hit with one away to start the third inning action. He scored on David Tinglestad's triple. Tinglestad then scored on Nelson Galloway's single.

The other two Optimists runs came in the fourth.

Carroll & Assoc....15
Pepsi-Cola.....2

Billy Carr struck out nine batters and pitched a no-hitter at Pepsi-Cola as Carroll & Associates romped to a 15-2 North State Little League victory Saturday.

Both of the Pepsi runs came in the sixth inning, after the issue was long decided.

Carroll & Associates got all it needed in the first, scoring seven times. Lloyd May opened with a single and stole second. James Lawler walked, and Howard Moore was hit by a pitch, loading them up. Jason Lee reached on a fielder's choice, scoring May, and Toure Claibourne doubled in both Lawler and Moore. A wild pitch brought Lee over, and Tavis Williamson walked, stealing second. Joel Daughtry also walked, reloading the bases. A walk to Hank Thompson brought in Claibourne, and a sacrifice by May scored Williamson. Daughtry scored when Lawler reached on an error.

C&A added two in the second, two in the fourth and four more in the fifth.

Coca-Cola 11
Jaycees 2

Eddie White hit a three-run homer and Tony Evans hit two round-trippers to spark Coca-Cola to an 11-2 victory over the Jaycees in the North State Little League yesterday.

Evans got Coke's scoring going in the first inning with a lead-off homer. Jay Surles reached on an error and advaned on a passed ball. Derrick Hines then walked, setting the stage for White's homer that gave Coke what proved to be an insurmoutable lead.

Coke added two more in the second, on a homer by Hines, and picked up two in the fourth. Another pair scored in the fifth as Evans hit his second blast of the day. The final run came over int he fifth.

The Jaycees got single runs, both scored by Brian Pierce, in the third and fifth.

Evans led the Coke hitting with three, while White had two. No one had more than one for the Jaycees, who got only three off the combined pitching of Surles and Walter Gatlin.

Haynie Surges Past Carner

PITTSFORD, N.Y. (AP) — Sandra Haynie popped three birdies in the first five holes Saturday and shot her way past faltering JoAnne Carner to lead after three rounds of the $200,000 LPGA Rochester International.

Haynie shot a 3-under-par 69 despite bogeying No. 18 — her only miscue of the round — for a one-shot lead and 54-hole total of 209.

She led Nancy Lopez and Carner.

Haynie, a 39-year-old LPGA Hall of Fame member, has 40 victories to 34 for Carner, who would qualify for the honor gallery by winning here.

Lopez has won all three tournaments she has played at Locust Hill, setting the LPGA record in 1978 with her fifth consecutive victory here and repeating in 1980 and 1981.

Kyle Petty Gets Ride With Ellington For Superspeedways

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock car king Richard Petty took steps Saturday to remedy what he felt was a bad situation, closing a deal that will put his 21-year-old son, Kyle, in another team's car.

The third generation of racing Pettys will drive the rest of this season's superspeedway races in a Buick Regal owned and prepared by Hoss Ellington.

That will mark the first time since the early days of stock car racing, when Kyle's grandfather, Lee Petty, occasionally took an outside ride, that a Petty will be driving outside the family fold.

"Hoss will prepare cars for Kyle for superspeedways only," said Richard in a telephone conversation from Joliet, Ill., where he is attending the dedicaion of an office building belonging to his son's new co-sponsor, UNO.

"He'll still be in the Petty Enterprises No. 42 for the short track races," the seven-time NASCAR Grand National champion added. "We feel, this way, both Kyle and I can be competitive in every race.

"The way things have been going, it's been too gosh darn difficult for our operation to field strong cars for both of us week after week.

"Sometimes we hit on the right combination and one (car) or the other seemed to run pretty well. But, often as not, we didn't hit on either one.

"We knew one of us had to go to get things moving again," he added "This will be best for everybody."

The deal was made possible when veteran Buddy Baker, who had himself been struggling all season, quit Ellington's team two weeks ago. Kyle's new ride, co-sponsored by UNO and STP, which has long-term sponsorship contracts with both Pettys, is for the rest of the 1982 season. However, a spokesman for Ellington said negotiations for next year are already in progress.

Richard Petty, whose 195 victories are the most ever in Grand National racing, has failed to drive his Pontiac Grand Prix to a victory this season. His best finish in the first 15 events — exactly half the season — is a second-place in the Coca Cola 500 at Atlanta in March.

Kyle, who is in his third season as a full-time Grand National racer, had his best finish so far in May at Talladega, Ala., when his Grand Prix came in fourth in the Winston 500.

Lee Petty, a two-time national champion, still is fifth on the all-time victory list with 54.

Match #101 Not Easy For Billie

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — "I still don't think I did it," a dazed Billie Jean King said Saturday after fighting off three match points for a third-round victory over South Afriia's Tanya Harford in the Wimbledon tennis championships.

"I was standing on the balcony after the match and I couldn't realize whether I was still in the tournament or out of it," she added. "But I did it. Now I must get on with it."

It was the 101st singles match in the All-England event for the 38-year-old former No.1 player of the world and her 87th singles triumph in a 21-year career that has seen her win a record 20 titles.

It was one of her most harrowing.

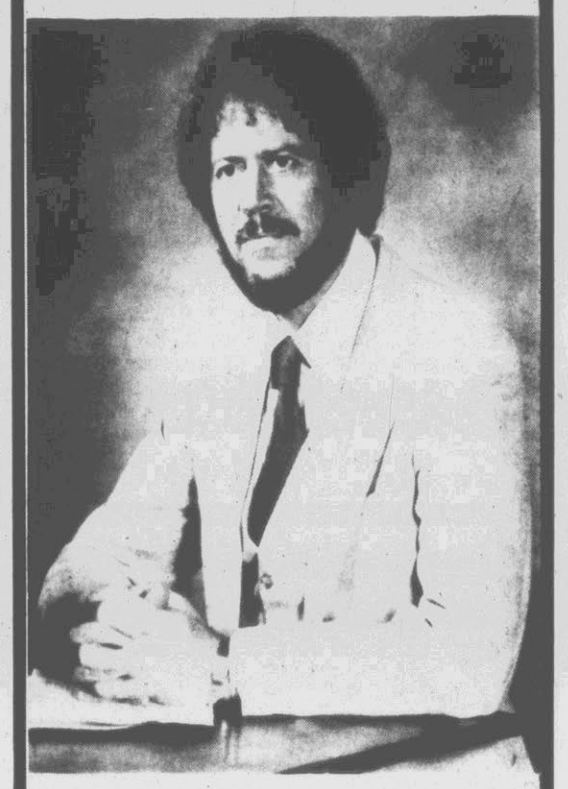

"I didn't know much about Tanya's game," Billie Jean said. "But I knew that she had a reputation for playing one or two great matches a year and I realized this might be one."

King prevailed 5-7, 7-6, 6-3 in a match interrupted three times by rain.

Billie Jean said during intermissions she watched a British Broadcasting Corp. replay of Stan Smith's five-set victory over Ilie Nastase in the men's final in 1972.

"I remember a great volley he made at 4-4 in the final set," she recalled. "He barely got his racket on the ball, but he won the point and it was very vital to the match.

Pirates Sweep Pair From Tar Heels

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Bob Davidson tossed a four-hit shutout in the opener and Kirk Parsons came on in relief to shut the door on the Tar Heels as East Carolina swept a doubleheader from the University of North Carolina Friday night, 7-0, and 8-5.

Davidson overpowered the Tar Heels in the opening game walking only one and striking out seven as he raised his record to 3-2. Two of the Carolina hits off him came in the first inning as the first two batters got on base. The second hit came in the second inning and he held the Tar Heels off base via hits until the sixth when Mitch McCleney, who had two of the four, got a double.

Meanwhile, Davidson's teammates were banging out eight hits, including a solo homer by Todd Evans, to rip the Heels for the win in the opener.

In the second game, Parsons, who has just rejoined the Pirates after not playing since the end of the regular season, came on in relief of Charlie Smith and, although giving up one run, allowed only two hits in three and a third innings as he held off the Heels, earning the victory.

"This is the first time this year that we've put together two victories," Coach Gary Overton said. "We really needed these two."

Overton praised the effort of Davidson. "His effort just sums up the first game for us," he said.

"We did a lot of things well tonight. We played with a lot of intensity and like the games really meant something to us. The defense did a good job, as it has all year.

"We hit the ball better than we have, and when we needed to hit it. By taking the lead, we were able to do a lot of thing, like running. (East Carolina stole five bases, including three by speedster Ricky Nichols.) We had our speedsters on base when it counted," Overton added.

After their threat in the first, putting men on second and third with none out, the Heels were stopped cold. Davidson got the third batter on a strikeout, then a grounder back to the mound and one to second ended the threat.

For the rest of the game, only two men reached second, and none advanced further.

East Carolina grabbed the lead in the first, getting two runs after two were out. John Hallow walked after the second out and stole second. Evans walked and Smith doubled, driving in Hallow. An error on the relay allowed Evans to score also.

The Pirates added three more in the fourth. Jack Curlings walked and courtesy runner Art Barnhardt reached second when Mark Shank's infield grounder was errored. With one away, Nichols singled in Barnhardt, and after David Wells walked, a single by Hallow scored both Shank and Nichols.

In the second contest, Carolina got the lead for the only time during the night with a first inning run. With two away, Jeff Scott singled and stole second, scoring on Chris Mench's single.

East Carolina came right back with three runs in the bottom of the first to take the lead for good. Nichols singled and stole second, moving to third on an error on the play. Wells then singled him in. With two away, Smith walked and so did Mike Williams. Curlings then doubled in both Wells and courtesy runner Barnhardt.

Two more Pirate runs came in the second. Langston led off with a single, and Nichols reached when his attempted sacrifice was overthrown at first. The result of the play was that Langston came home and Nichols ended up on third. He scored on Hallow's sacrifice fly.

A sixth run came over in the third. With two away, Curlings tripled, and Parsons ran for him, scoring on Shank's single to center.

Carolina got back into the action in the fourth, finally chasing Smith from the mound and scoring three times. Tim McGee opened with a single and Chris Goff beat out an infield chopper. Luke Rasnake walked to load them up, and Eddie George's sacrifice scored McGee. McCleney then singled in both Rasnake and courtesy runner Shawn Dean to cut the lead to 6-4.

East Carolina came right back with two more in the fourth, however. Nichols walked and stole second, scoring on Wells' single. Wells was out on Hallow's fielder's choice and Evans doubled. Smith walked and a walk to Williams brought in Hallow.

The other Carolina run crossed in the sixth. After two outs, George singled and scored on a double by McCleney.

Hallow had two hits in the opener to lead the Pirate hitting, while Wells, Curlings and Langston each had two in the nightcap. McCleney had two in each game for the Tar Heels, while Goff had a pair in the second game.

East Carolina, following a Saturday night doubleheader with Campbell, was to travel to N.C. State on Monday.

Pitt Nips Rocky Mount In 15th

ROCKY MOUNT — Just when things seem brightest, they sometimes darken, and it took Pitt County a little while to find the light again after a ninth-inning rally by Rocky Mount Friday night.

Pitt County's American Legion baseball team had gained a 5-2 lead over Rocky Mount going into the final inning of regulation play when Post 58 rallied for three runs to tie it up.

The two teams then battled through six additional innings before Pitt finally scored twice in the 15th to pull out the victory.

The Post 39 men went through their pitching staff in the game, starting with Scott Galloway, then bringing on Greg Briley — in his first Legion effort — followed by brief stints by Roger Williams, winner Mike Kinley, and Gordon Douglas, who got a save.

Pitt grabbed the lead in the third inning, scoring three times. After two men had been retired, Galloway got thing going with a triple. Randy Warren followed with another three-bagger, easily scoring Galloway. Briley added a double to that, scoring Warren. Terry Locust, who continued his hot hitting streak with three in six trips, singled in Briley.

Rocky Mount came back with two runs in the fifth inning to trim the lead to one. Griff Burgwyn led off the frame with a walk and Kevin Payne also walked. Both runners stole up a base, and with two away, Tony Thomas doubled, driving both across the plate,

Pitt County padded its lead in the ninth, scoring twice. Galloway opened with a single and Warren reached on a fielder's choice that got no one. Both were sacrificed up, and Locust again did the job, getting a hit to drive in both of them.

But Rocky Mount then rallied for three in the bottom of the inning. Clint Carter led off with a walk and Burgwyn followed with another. With two away, Payne singled in Carter, and Eddie Coats walked, loading the bases. Thomas followed with a single, scoring both Payne and Burgwyn to knot it up.

Rocky Mount then left runners in scoring position four times over the next six frames, but could not push over another run.

Pitt, which threatened in every inning but the 14th, finally scratched over two in the 15th.

Briley led off with a walk and was sacrificed up. He took third on an out and scored when Williams reached on a fielder's choice. Douglas then followed with a double, scoring Williams with the insurance run.

Locust was joined with three hits by Galloway, while Walsh and Williams each had two. Rocky Mount was led by Thomas with four, while only one other Rocky Mount hit was recorded.

Following a game Saturday night at Edenton, Pitt was to travel to Wayne County today.

Strachan's Lawyer Says Officials Tried Coercion

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A lawyer, representing former New Orleans Saints running back Mike Strachan, says prosecutors tried to coerce his client into helping a drug investigation by offering a plea bargain and threatening to add charges against him if he did not cooperate.

A new federal indictment came down Friday against Strachan, who was accused in a previous indictment of similar charges of selling cocaine to some current and former Saints, including 1981 National Football League rushing leader George Rogers.

Strachan's 12-count superseding indictment did not say who bought the cocaine, but the charges emerged in the midst of new reports of drug use by more than a dozen present or former Saints.

Strachan's lawyer, Dennis Jude Dannel, made his charges against prosecutors Friday, but U.S. Attorney John Volz would not comment on any deals.

"Dannel knows we cannot comment on any pretrial negotiations and, though he has violated the court's rule, I will not," Volz said.

Volz said no other indictments were expected in this investigation unless new evidence crops up.

He added that he is not inclined to push chargers against athletes who may have used cocaine and other drugs, but vay prosecute their dealers.

"We are pincipally concerned in the people who supply the drugs," Volz said.

U.S. Magistrate Marcel Livaudais allowed Strachan to remain free under the $50,000 property bond he posted after the first indictment on May 21.

The new indictment charges him with conspiring with "other persons whose names are known and unknown to the grand jury to distribute cocaine," and with 11 counts of distribution between Feb. 4, 1980 and Jan. 4, 1982.

Maximum punishment would be 75 years in prison and a $125,000 fine.

Dannel had asked that the trial set for July 1 be delayed a month or two, but the magistrate left that issue to Judge Veronica Wicker, the trial judge.

The superseding indictment comes in the wake of newspaper reports namwng Rogers, the best running back in Saints history, and Dave Wilson, the team's quarterback of the future, as being among Saints who told federal investigators they bought cocaine from Strachan or his associate.

Rogers spent more than $10,000 last season to buy cocaine, the New Orleans Times-Picayune, the States-Item said Thursday in a copyright story. The newspaper quoted sources as saying Rogers told a federal grand jury he paid for cocaine with personal checks on several occasions.

In Friday's editions, The New York Times quoted unidentified Justice Department officials as saying Wilson, like Rogers a rookie last season, also told the grand jury of his purchase and use of cocaine.

The New Orleans story identified the sources only as being familiar with the federal inquiry into cocaine use by Saints players.

One source was quoted as saying Rogers was one of more than a dozen present and former members of the Saints who have told investigators they bought cocaine from either Strachan or Joselyn Bruno, 28, recently convicted of conspiring to sell the drug.

The New York Times quoted its sources as saying the grand jury was told that Strachan sold the drugs to Rogers and Wilson.

Justice Department sources told the Times there did not appear to be evidence of trafficking and distribution among the players.

"This appears to be a case of recreational use by current and former Saint players," one official said.

Snow Hill Rally Nips Edenton

SNOW HILL — Wade Corbett's sacrifice fly brought home the winning run in the bottom of the ninth inning as Snow Hill pulled out an 8-7 American Legion baseball victory over Edenton Friday night.

A five-run fifth inning, highlighted by a grand-slam homer by Al Bunch had powered Edenton into the lead in the contest, 6-3, but Snow Hill fought back and capped the rally with a three-run effort in the final frame to win the game.

Edenton grabbed the initial lead in the first inning. Michael Hardy walked and stole second. He scored on Eddie Pipkin's single.

Snow Hill came back to take the lead with a pair of runs in the second. Corbett singled and Ron Pelletier reached on an error. Chris Newsome singled in Corbett, and Richie Chase grounded out, scoring Pelletier.

After Snow Hill pushed over one in the fourth, Edenton rallied for five in the fifth, taking a 6-3 lead. Snow Hill got one in the sixth, while Edenton countered with one in the seventh. Snow Hill got another in the eighth and trailed, 7-5, going into the bottom of the ninth.

But in that inning, the Post 94 team rallied to pull it out. Bobby Avery was hit by a pitch and John Hooks ran for him. Chris Suggs walked and a passed ball let Hooks score. Greg Hardison singled in Suggs with the tying run, and Steve Sides singled. Chris Ginn walked, loading the bases for Corbett, whose sacrifice fly brought in Hardison with the game-winner.

Snow Hill left a total of 16 runners on base in the game, including runners at third in the first three innings.

Hardison led the Snow Hill hitting with three, while Sides had two. Tony Lee had two to pace Edenton.

The win boosted the Snow Hill record to 4-11. The Post 94 players traveled to Wilson Saturday night and meet Rocky Mount in a day-night twin-bill today.

Pirate Pitchers Lead Sweep Of Expos

By The Associated Press

They'da done ol' Diz proud.

In the early 1960s, even as big Detroit left-hander Hank Aguirre was going 2-for-3 — two hits in three years — Dizzy Dean was badgering Pee Wee Reese from across the broadcast booth about the hitting prowess of pitchers.

Friday night, the Pittsburgh Pirates' Don Robinson and Rick Rhoden dispelled any questions of Dizzy's veracity.

Robinson scattered seven hits and slugged a two-run homer in the opener, and Rhoden doubled twice, scored twice and drove in a run on top of claiming the victory in the nightcap as the Pirates swept a doubleheader from Montreal, 4-3 and 9-7.

In the opener, Dale Berra was on second via a single and an error when Robinson came to bat in the eighth inning. Tanner ordered his pitcher to bunt, but when the first attempt failed, the bunt sign was removed.

"I wanted him to bunt the runner over to third, but after that one attempt, I took the bunt sign off," said Pittsburgh Manager Chuck Tanner said. "I figured the way Don swings the bat, he's as capable as anyone of getting the run in."

Robinson, who was hitting .333, said it was "only the second time in four years I've tried to bunt."

Robinson improved his record to 7-3 with the victory, his fourth without a loss at Olympic Stadium in Montreal. Tony Pena had a pair of homers for Pittsburgh in the opener. Rhoden, 4-6, worked the first six innings, and the Pirates survived a five-run Montreal ninth inning that included a three-run pinch homer by Al Oliver. Pittsburgh scored five runs in the seventh, sparked by Willie Stargell's two-run pinch single.

Elsewhere in the National League, Philadelpia swept a doubleheader from New York, 1-0 and 5-3, Atlanta downed Cincinnati 5-2, Houston got by Los Angeles 7-5, San Diego edged San Francisco 3-2 and Chicago defeated St. Louis 5-3. Phils 1-5, Mets 0-3

Four Philadelphia pitchers held New York to nine hits total to make a clean sweep of their twinight doubleheader. Dick Ruthven, 6-5, pitched a three-hitter in the opener, outdueling Met lefty Pete Falcone, and the Mets managed just six hits off three pitchers in the nightcap.

Phillies reliever Ed Farmer made his first start since 1979 in the nightcap, forced ito the rotation for this five-game, three-day series. He worked 5 1-3 innings, giving up four hits, for his second victory in six decisions.

Philadelphia scored the only run of the opener when Bill Robinson drew a two-out, bases-loaded walk from Falcone in the bottom of the ninth inning. In the second game, George Vukovich's two-run double started the Phillies on their way.

Braves 5, Reds 2

Phil Niekro took a three-hit shutout into the ninth inning, then got last-out relief help from Gene Garber to pitch the Braves past Cincinnati. Claudell Washington drove in four of Atlanta's five runs with a sacrifice fly, a single and a two-run double.

Niekro, 6-2, walked six, including Johnny Bench with one out in the ninth. After another was out, pinch-hitter Larry Biittner chased Niekro with an RBI double. Al Hrabosky relieved Niekro, promptly yielding a run-scoring double by Eddie Milner, but Garber put out the fire by getting Ron Oester to ground out for his 12th save.

Astros 7, Dodgers 5

Houston snapped a 5-5 tie with two out in the sixth inning on run-scoring singles by Alan Ashby and Tony Scott to hand Los Angeles only its third loss in 11 games.

With two out, Jose Cruz doubled to start the Houston sixth, and Ashby drove in the first run with a single. Phil Garner followed with a walk, and Ashby scored on Scott's hit.

Mike LaCoss, 3-2, got the victory with four innings of relief, and Bert Roberge pitched the final three innings for his first save of the year and the Astros' first save since May 28.

Padres 3, Giants 2

Right-hander Juan Eichelberger drove in the winning run with a double in the seventh inning and picked up the victory as San Diego edged San Francisco. Eichelberger worked six innings, taking a shower after pinch-hitter Dave Bergman singled with one out in the seventh. It was the sixth hit off Eichelberger, 6-8, and Gary Lucas worked 2 2-3 innings of hitless relief.

San Diego scored all its runs in the seventh off Bill Laskey — the first two on Joe Lefebvre's single and a grounder by Garry Templeton, and the go-ahead run on an opposite-field double into the right-field corner by Eichelberger.

Cubs 5, Cardinals 3

Jay Johnstone, released by the Dodgers earlier this season, belted a three-run homer, and Ferguson Jenkins scattered seven hits to give Chicago its first victory this season over St. Louis. The Cardinals now have lost three in a row.

Johnstone's fifth homer of the season, in the fourth inning, came off Joaquin Andujar and gave the Cubs a 3-0 lead.

Jenkins, 5-8, struck out four, raising his lifetime total to 3,026 in his 269th career victory.

Keith Hernandez drove in two of St. Louis' runs with a sacrifice fly and a single. The Cubs' Larry Bowa had three singles for his fourth straight three-hit game.

Algeria Ousted From World Cup While Watching In Frustration

MADRID (AP) — The upstarts who made it the biggest soccer championship ever have fallen from the World Cup. From now on it's a slugout among the sport's traditional powers, the Europeans and South Americans.

Algeria, the biggest surprise of the 24-nation first round and the last outsider in the running, watched in frustration Friday as West Germany beat Austria 1-0. It ensured the advancement of both, eliminated the Algerians on goal difference and prompted charges of impropriety.

The crowd at Gijon jeered, shouted "fix" and tried to storm the field in protest. The Algerians needed an Austrian victory, a draw or a lopsided West German victory to advance to the 12-team second round.

After Horst Hrubesch's 10th minute header gave West Germany a 1-0 lead, the game's pace slowed abruptly. Both sides maneuvered in midfield, preserving a mutually suitable result.

Benali Sekkal, president of the Algerian Soccer Federation attended the game and called it "scandalous and immoral." He demanded disqualification of both teams, but there was no formal response by the Federation of International Football.

England, already qualified for Round Two, beat Kuwait 1-0 on the final day of the opening round, knocking the Kuwaitis out and enabling France to move up. Northern Ireland beat Spain 1-0, lifting both into the second round and sending Yugoslavia home.

Spaniards who packed Seville's 47,500-seat stadium alternately cheered and jeered their team. Then they poured into the streets for an all-night celebration of its achievement — backing into the second round ahead of Yugoslavia on goal difference and avoiding the first early elimination of a home team in World Cup history.

Spain joins England and West Germany, perhaps the best European teams, in Group B in the same second round.

Groups B and D open round-robin play Monday in Madrid while Groups A and C, filled earlier this week, play in Barcelona. The two Madrid group winners will meet in one semifinal and the two Barcelona winners in the other, setting up a July 11 final.

Cup holder Argentina and tournament favorite Brazil ended up in Group C with Italy. European dark horses Belgium, Poland and the Soviet Union make up Group A.

The Los Angeles Dodgers defeated the Montreal Expos in a five-game playoff for the 1981 National League pennant without any of their pitchers working a complete game.

George Makes Noise; So Do Yankees

By The Associated Press

Given another of Steinbrenner's pep talks in a closed-door meeting Friday night, the slumping Yankees came alive and clobbered the Cleveland Indians 11-3.

Smalley also had a talk with batting coach Joe Pepitone that seemed to help him personally, too.

"I talked with him before the game about some technical stuff," he said. "I hadn't been keeping my weight back well."

None of the Yankees was willing to discuss the meeting with Steinbrenner, although relief star Rich Gossage called it "a very positive meeting. There was no ranting or raving. It was pretty much cut and dried, although some very to-the-point things were said. It was pretty much 'let's get our act together and go.'"

The Yankees, who had been going through a lengthy scoring drought of late, came through with 13 hits which included two doubles, a single and two RBI by Oscar Gamble, and three singles, a double and a sacrifice fly by Dave Winfield for his first four-hit game as a Yankee.

It marked the Yankees' largest production since June 2, when they scored 12 runs against Toronto, eight of them in extra innings. They had not scored more than five runs in a game since.

"I don't think I've ever seen anything quite as dramatic as a meeting with a flamboyant boss and we go from scoring one run to 11 off the best right-handed pitcher in the league (Len Barker)," Smalley said. "I don't think I've ever seen anything quite that timely."

Tommy John, 5-6, was the winner with ninth-inning relief help from Dave LaRoche, scattering seven hits in eight innings. It was the first victory in exactly one month for the veteran left-hander.

Meanwhile, the Yankees put the game away early, tagging Barker, 8-4, for three runs in the second inning and five in the third.

Elsewhere in the American League, it was Milwaukee 9, Boston 3; Baltimore 5, Detroit 2; Oakland 6, Texas 2; Seattle 1, Chicago 0 and Kansas City 8, California 6 in 10 innings. Rain postponed the Minnesota-Toronto game.

Brewers 9, Red Sox 3

Cecil Cooper and Gorman Thomas each hit two-run homers as Milwaukee blasted 16 hits to bury Boston. Cooper also had a pair of singles while driving in three runs and scoring two.

Reliever Jim Slaton allowed six hits and one run over the final five innings, boosting his record to 5-1 to go along with four saves in 19 appearances. Bruce Hurst, 2-2, took the loss, allowing eight hits and five runs before giving way to Luis Aponte in the sixth. Aponte was shelled in a four-run seventh which nailed down Milwaukee's victory.

Orioles 5, Tigers 2

Terry Crowley and Cal Ripken Jr. drove in runs with two-out singles as Baltimore snapped a sixth-inning tie and went on to defeat Detroit.

Ken Singleton walked with one out in the Baltimore sixth and took second as Eddie Murray grounded out. Crowley singled for the third hit off Dan Petry, 6-5, took second on the throw home and scored on Ripken's single to give Baltimore a 4-2 lead.

Mike Ivie drove in both Detroit runs off Mike Flanagan, 6-5, who had two innings of relief help from Tim Stoddard. Ivie homered in the second and his RBI single, following hits by Lance Parrish and Larry Herndon, tied the score 2-2 in the sixth.

A's 6, Rangers 2

Dwayne Murphy's two-run double keyed a five-run fifth inning and Steve McCatty won his first game since returning from the 21-day disabled list as Oakland beat Texas.

The A's chased Frank Tanana, 3-9, with their big fifth inning. Dave Lopes led off with a double and scored on Fred Stanley's single. Rickey Henderson was hit by a pitch before Murphy drove home both runners with his double.

Mariners 1, White Sox 0

Dave Henderson hit a sixth-inning homer and Jim Beattie and two relievers combined on a four-hitter to lead Seattle over Chicago.

Henderson broke up a duel between Chicago's Lamarr Hoyt, 10-5, and Beattie, driving a 2-1 pitch from Hoyt leading off the sixth.

Beattie, 5-4, was in command until giving up a leadoff double to Tony Bernazard in the ninth. Ed Vande Berg and Bill Caudill finished up, with Caudill posting his 12th save.

"I think what I what I hit was a very good pitch," Henderson said of his game-winning homer. "I was swinging at anything he threw up there. I just happened to be swinging where he threw the ball."

Royals 8, Angels 6

Hal McRae, who hit a two-run double in a three-run first inning, slugged a two-run homer in the 10th to lift Kansas City over California.

McRae's 11th homer of the season followed a one-out single by Amos Otis off Angel Moreno, 3-7, the fourth California pitcher.

Yankees Listen To Their Boss

And after listening to him for almost 45 minutes before Friday night's game with Cleveland, the defending American League champions went out and buried the Indians 11-3.

Their 13-hit attack included a grand slam homer by Roy Smalley, a solo shot by Graig Nettles, three singles, a double and a sacrifice fly by Dave Winfield — his first four-hit game as a Yankee — and two doubles, a single and two RBIs by slump-ridden Oscar Gamble, one of the prime targets of Steinbrenner's dissatisfaction with his club's poor record.

It was the first time since May 30 the Yankees scored more than five runs in nine innings and the outburst enabled Tommy John, who scattered seven hits over eight innings, to record his first victory in exactly one month.

Postgame reaction to Steinbrenner's lecture ranged from Manager Gene Michael's opinion that "it was a good meeting and I think it had some influence tonight" to catcher Butch Wynegar's feeling that its effect on the team's performance was "none whatsoever."

No one was willing to go into detail on what Steinbrenner said and the owner refused to talk to newsmen who followed him down the hall after he left the clubhouse.

"It was a typical George meeting," said Gamble, "but I'd rather not say any more. I just sat there and listenedI'li've been in baseball 13 years and I'm not trying to show nobody nothing. I'm just getting my at-bats now. Give me my at-bats and you can forget George's meeting."

"What's said in here stays in here," said relief ace Rich Gossage, one of Steinbrenner's biggest boosters through all the stormy years. "I won't say what was said, but I thought it was a very positive meeting. There was no ranting or raving. Tonight was a very big plus for our side, a very positive outing.

"The meeting was nothing negative, really. It was more positive. I think he really took the right approach. It was prety much cut and dried. Some very to-the-point things were said. It was pretty much, 'Let's get ouy act together and go. If we're gonna do it, we'd better start doing it pretty quick.' I think everybody felt good afterward; that was obvious."

Although Alan Bannister's leadoff homer gave the Indians a quick lead — the game began at 8:10 p.m. and the Yankees trailed 1-0 at 8:11 — Nettles' homer capped a three-run second inning and Smalley's fifth career grand slam — second this year — kayoed Cleveland ace Len Barker in a five-run third.

"It was an interesting way to meet him (Steinbrenner) for the first time, let's put it that way," said Smalley. "That's all I'm gonna say about it.

"I don't think I've ever seen anything quite as dramatic as a meeting with a flamboyant boss and we go from scoring one run a game to 11 against the best right-handed pitcher in the league. I don't think I've ever seen anything quite that timely."

Smalley was one of the few players who escaped Steinbrenner's wrath in a spur-of-the-moment news conference following Thursday night's 5-2 loss to the Indians.

"Most of this team is new and it was the first time most of the guys had seen him. All they had to go on was perception and myths. I just think it was good they met him. Just because you come here and put an 'NY' on your chest doesn't give you a license to perform miracles. That's all I'll say about the meeting.

"I don't know if there was any correlation or we were just due, but we played well and we got a lot of runs."

Wynegar's, whose second-inning sacrifice fly gwve him his first game-winning RBI of the season, preferred the latter version.

"If that's what our problem was, I wish George would do this every day," he said. "But in my mind it was just Tommy John going out and pitching a good game."

Cleveland Manager Dave Garcia called the Yankees "a good ballclub. They've got a lot of pitching on that club and good hitters, but they're just not hitting. I know they're a better ballclub than .243.

"They're going to be representative, there's no question about it. But there are other clubs in the American League East who are going to be heard from, too."

Before the game, Gamble said he would have approved a spring trade to Texas for Al Oliver if the Rangers had agreed to extend his contract for five years with a raise in salary. Steinbrenner has been highly critical of Gamble, who entered the game hitting only .222, for vetoing the deal.

"He should have checked my contract before making a trade," said the outfielder-designated hitter, whose contract lists only seven teams, Texas not among them, to which he can be traded without his consent.

Beware of Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever – There were 301 reported cases of Rocky Mountain spotted fever in North Carolina in 1981, and severn of the cases resulted in deaths. Young children are most susceptible to the disease because of the amount of time they spend outdoors in the summer when ticks are most common.

However, the disease is most dangerous to people over 40. If the disease is not treated, the fatility rate is about 17 percent and many survivors die years later from complications caused by damage to internal organs. Even when treated, the mortality rate is about five percent.

"Most cases of Rocky Mountain spotted fever occur in the Piedmont," said Dr. Charles Apperson, a medical entomologist with the N.C. State University Agricultural Extension Service. "The American dog tick carries the disease which can only be contracted through the bite of an infected tick. About five percent of the dog-tick population carries spotted fever."

Symptoms of the disease appear within 2 to 14 days of the bite. They include headaches, fever, chills and aches and pains. Also, a rash often breaks out around the wrists and ankles.

"Prevention is the best cure for Rocky Mountain spotted fever," said Dr. Apperson. "Fortunately, a tick has to be attached to a human for at least six hours to transmit the disease. Always remove ticks immediately and note the day that the bite occurred. If any of the symptoms appear within 2 to 14 days of the bite – including headaches, feaver, rashes, or aches and pains – seek medical treatment immediately."

Apperson says that there are several ways to prevent tick bites. First, use insect repellents. Also, cover bare skin so that ticks can't find a place to bite, wear a hat to keep them out of your hair, and tuck in your clothing because ticks tend to climb upward. The use of flea/tick collars will prevent family pets from bringing ticks indoors.

"Anyone who spends a lot of time outdoors should check for ticks regularly," said Apperson. "If you check your body two or three times a day, a tick won't have time to transmit the disease. Check yuour entire body, but pay special attention to your arms, legs, groin and hair. If the mouthparts break off in the wound, remove them with a sterilized needle. The mouthparts alone can't transmit the disease, but can cause an infection. Also, it's important to use tweezers or a paper towel to hold the tick because an engorged tick can transmit the disease through minute breaks in the skin. There is no effective vaccine for Rocky Mountain spotted fever, and the vaccine used in the past has been taken off the market."

The Lone Star tick and black-legged tick – which are also common in North Carolina – don't carry the disease. The Lone Star tick has a distincitive white spot in the center of its back and the black-legged tick has an orange-brown body and dark black legs. However, the dog tick is brown with a whitish patch, so take no chances with any ticks.

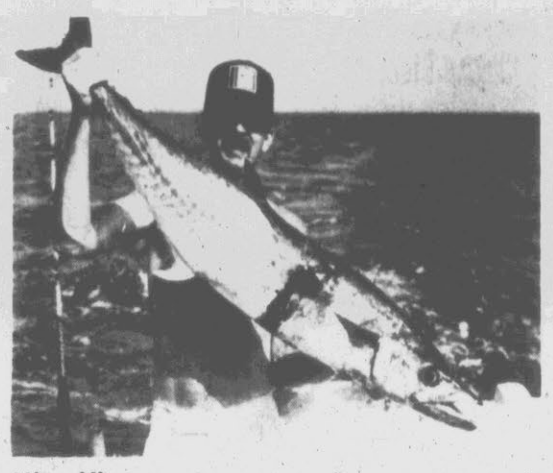

Anyone wanting more information should contact the Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever Project, Extension Entomology, P.O. Box 5215, Raleigh, N.C. 27650.

Fishing Report

Saltwater – Fishing still remains good as we head into the hot summer months on the coast. King macheral, Spanish mackeral and cobia are being caught just off Core Banks.

In the Gulf Stream, blue marlin, white marlin and sailfish are being caught regularily when the winds have been down. Good catches of tuna, dolphin and wahoo have also been reported.

Close to shore, trout and croakers were picking up after the big storm of last week. The Croaker and Marlin Tournament held last week was fairly successful considering the weather. Results will be published next week.

What's The Law...

What's the law on...sale, trade, or transfer of boat?

"If you sell a number boat to another person or to a boat dealer, you are required to enter the date of the transaction and your signature on the back of your certificate of number and deliver it to the person or dealer to whom the boat is sold.

If you buy a new motorboat which is required to be numbered, you are responsbile for obtaining an original boat number.

A dealer or manufacturer who is designated an agent of the Wildlife Resources Commission for the purpose of issuing temporary certificates of boat number may issue, on a form supplied by the Wildlife Resources Commission, a temporary certificate of number to the purchaser of a boat which has not been previously numbered or to the purchaser of a boat for which the certificate of number has expired. The purchaser will be given a temporary certificate of number which will authorize the operation of the boat for a period not exceeding 30 days from the date of purchase. The dealer must submit the designated copy of the temporary certificate to the Wildlife Resources Commission within 10 days following issuance. Within 24 hours of the issuance of a temporary certificate of number, the purchases must submit a completed application for the regular certificate of number, togerther with the appropriate fee, to the Motorboat Registration Section of the Wildlife Resources Commission.

If you buy a boat which has already been numbered, the dealer or person from whom you buy it is required to give you the old certificate of number after entering the date of your purchase and his signature on the back of the certificate. When so endorsed, you may operate the boat on the old certificate for a full 30-day period immediately following the date of purchase if the old certificate has not expired on the date of such purchase, and this is permitted even though the old certificate may expire during such 30-day period. Thereafter, you must have a new certificate of number which has been issued in your name. If the old certificate is still in effect, the new certificate will be issued for the remainder of the period by the Wildlife Resources Commission upon recepit of a completed Transfer of Ownership former or Part B of the certificate of number and a transfer fee of two dollars. If the old certificate received with the purchase of the boat has expired, the new owner must apply for a renewal of certificate of number and remit the appropriate fee with the completed application form."

Day In The Life Of Tennis Fan

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) – He was the image of the English gentleman, complete with checkered cloth hat, tweed jacket and a lighted pipe. And from the covered portal of the northeast stands, he watched calmly as steady rain beat down on the tarpaulin-covered tennis courts at Wimbledon.

"Sorry, dear," he said to a slender, dark-eyed girl at his elbow. "Next year, maybe."

It was an empty, disappointing day for Ian Hopper of Norfolk and his grand daughter, Gabriana, who had been looking forward to this occasion for a year.

Hopper had ordered the precious tickets weeks ago, paying the Center Court price of eight pounds ($14.40) for each only to have the Friday program washed out until after 6 p.m. When he and Gabriana were on their way back to Norfolk.

"I'm a mushroom farmer," Hopper said. "So is my son, Gabby's father, who lives in Diss. I had to get up well before dawn today and take a train to Diss, about 70 miles away, to pick up Gabby and then continue on to London.

Under questioning, Hopper acknowledged that the train ride was only part of the overall expense and frustration.

"The train fare for both of us, round trip, was 40 pounds ($71.60). Because of the underground strike in London, we ordered a taxicab to meet us at the train station and pick us up at the stadium at 6 p.m.

"That was another 40 pounds."

One of the most distressing factors, insofar as the Hoppers were concerned, was the fact that Wimbledon has no such thing as a raincheck. They were not only out the $28.80 they'd paid for tickets, but had no recourse to purchase Center Court tickets for any other day this year.

Center Court is a solid sellout.

Asked if he wasn't chagrined over such a policy, Hopper shrugged and smiled:

"Why should I be?" He replied. "What else can Wimbledon do? The tickets are all sold for the other days."

Wimbledon tennis fans are the most patient and persevering in sports.

"What would happen," one American journalist asked another, "if people went to an event in America, didn't see a thing and didn't get their money back?"

"They'd tear the stadium down, plank by plank," the other replied.

Not so these polite worshipers of the court game. They start queuing up for standing room tickets at dawn, wait in line for hours until the gates open at 12 noon, and then scramble for a sight of a single player or match.

If there is a rain, as on Friday, the day's a washout. There's no refund. But there's no rebellion.

Center Court fans, thousands of them, sat patiently in the rain for six hours before Wimbledon officials were able to put Pam Shriver and 15-year-old Kathy Rinaldi on at 6 p.m.

There was no barracking, no yelling, no hand-clapping such as that which breaks boredom among American crowds.

Thousands of the spectators are school kids, so-called "teeny boppers," who save shillings for weeks for a one-day holiday at Wimbledon.

They strain against the chains protecting the contestants' passageway, cameras and autograph books poised. Most of them are satisfied just to catch a glimpse of a player, any player.

When John McEnroe shows, they go into hysteria.

"There were 50 in my class from St. Ralph Sherwin School," said 14-year-old Michella DeWire. "We've been here all day and have seen nobody."

"Whom do you want to see?" Somebody asked.

"John McEnroe," chorused Alicia McCrindle.

"John McEnroe," added Hanneloes Weeda. "We all love John McEnroe."

Nature Turns Wrath On Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — It's rained so hard and so long at Wimbledon this week that mushrooms have sprouted on No.9 Court, putting it out of action for the All-England Lawn Tennis Championships.

Nature, it seems, has turned its wrath on Wimbledon, and with the rain, a subway strike and the absence of five of the world's top-ranked men players, everything's coming up mushrooms.

Bimbi Holt, member of the All-England Club Managemert Committee, says $260,000 has been lost so far because attendance is down sharply over previous years.

Fred Hoyles, the chief referee, says the rain has put Wimbledon 117 matches behind schedule. However, he says, with early starts and a little better luck "We are still within target to play the finals on the correct dates," next Saturday and Sunday, July 3-4.

The transit problems promise to get worse, rather than better, with a nationwide rail strike set for Monday.

As to the weather, forecasters are predicting more rain over the weekend. But Hoyles noted they were wrong in predicting a dry Friday.

"I only hope the forecasters are as wrong as they were today," he said.

Saturday's card — which was to start two hours early, at noon (London time; 7 a.m. EDT) — was optimistically full, featuring clashes between third-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis and New Zealander Bruce Derlin; No.5 seed Johan Kriek and Peter Elter; Gene Mayer, the sixth seed, and Brad Drewett; 11th-ranked Brian Teacher and Australian Rod Frawley.

On the women's side, fourth-seeded Andrea Jaeger faced Rosalyn Fairbank of South Africa; Bettina Bunge, No.11, met Canada's Marjorie Blackwood, and, on Center Court, Billie Jean King, in her 21st Wimbledon, was challenged by South African Tanya Harford.

In Friday's seven completed matches, there was one upset — and plenty of hilarity.

After a four-hour rain delay during which Pam Shriver napped on the locker room floor and Kathy Rinaldi played charades with top seed Martina Navratilova and veteran Virginia Wade, 14th-seeded Andrea Leand of Brooklandville, Md., was defeated by Claudia Kohde, the tall West German, 7-5, 6-2.

Navratilova, meanwhile, ousted her lanky opponent, fellow American Anne White, 6-1, 6-4, completing the match as the day's first sunshine burst through the clouds.

"I just about fainted when the sun came out," Navratilova said.

Over on Center Court, Rinaldi, the 15-year-old sensation from Jensen Beach, Fla., battled fellow American Shriver and a bee — and lost to both.

Shriver rode her powerful serve and attacking volley to a 6-4 triumph in the first set. In the second, she raced to a 4-1 lead and was about to serve in the sixth game when a bee stung Rinaldi on her left arm.

Play was interrupted as Shriver removed the stinger and applied ointment, supplied by a fan, to Rinaldi's arm. When it resumed, Shriver nailed down a 6-4, 6-1 victory, but not before narrowly averting a fate similar to Rinaldi's by swatting and stomping on another bee.

None of the men saw action Friday, but two other women's seeds did.

Tenth-ranked Barbara Potter of Woodbury, Conn., ousted Kim Steinmetz of St. Louis 6-2, 6-3 and Anne Smith of Dallas eliminated Australian Sue Leo, 6-4, 6-4.

O'Brien Asks For Probe Into Move By Clippers

NEW YORK (AP) — National Basketball Association Commissioner Larry O'Brien has called for a public investigation of the Los Angeles Coliseum Commission's efforts to bring the San Diego Clippers to Los Angeles.

O'Brien, responding Friday to a $120-million lawsuit filed by the commission against the NBA, charged it with a "serious and grievous misuse of public funds," in its efforts to snare the Clippers.

The Commission filed suit Thursday in U.S. District Court in Los Angeles, charging the league with interfering in the Clippers' proposed move to the Los Angeles Sports Arena, which the commission operates, and of violating its own constitution by not taking action on the move at the league meetings earlier this week.

"The Los Angeles Coliseum Commission seems to be more involved in the litigation business than it is in the business of running a coliseum," said O'Brien. "Since the Commission is a public agency that is funded by taxpayers' money, I think the people of the City and County of Los Angeles and the State of California should be concerned about how their money is being spent — and wasted."

Commission spokesman Glenn Mon said, however, the commission does not receive public funds and is self-supporting.

"Before Commissioner O'Brien starts calling for an investigation of the Coliseum Commission, he should have his facts straight as to how the Commission operates. The Coliseum Commission does not receive and has never received any support from taxpayer monies or public subsidies."

The commission and Clipper owner Donald T. Sterling jointly announced June 7 that the Clippers intended to move to Los Angeles for the 1982-83 season.

At the NBA meetings this week in Coronado, Calif., the league announced it had filed a $10-million suit against the commission for allegedly attempting to induce the Clippers to move without NBA approval. The league also said it was investigating Sterling.

In addition, the league Tuesday asked a federal court in San Diego for a declaration of the NBA's rights with respect to the Clippers' application to move. Two days later, the commission filed its lawsuit, contending the NBA had failed to consider the Clippers' transfer request.

"That contention is utter nonsense," said O'Brien. "Transferring a franchise is a very serious step with many ramifications, and we will not be rushed into a hasty action which might later be deemed inappropriate.

O'Brien said a committee will be appointed to investigate the operations of the Clippers, and that the committee members would be named within the next week.

Dixon Means Business

To the Voters of Pitt County:

If you seek to elect a County Commissioner that has initiative and is willing to take responsibility, I urge your support for Elliott Dixon.

I support Elliott Dixon because of his past experience as a Town Commissioner of Ayden for nine years.

I support Elliott Dixon because of his effective civic leadership in his community. He is vitally concerned about providing the leadership necessary to improve Pitt County for all its residents.

I support Elliott Dixon because he is fully aware of the needs of the agricultural business and industrial sectors of our economy. He will work with enthusiasm to see that these needs are recognized by our county commissioners.

Please give Elliott Dixon your vote on June 29.

Thank you,

Bob Griffin

Alexander Won't Play

NEW YORK (AP) — Doyle Alexander has pitched his one game in the minor leagues, and he thinks that's quite enough. His employer, the New York Yankees, have a different opinion.

Alexander, who suffered a broken finger on his pitching hand last May 6, has refused to pitch any more for the Yanks' International League farm club at Columbus under the club's 20-day rehabilitation plan, the Yankees said Friday.

Alexander injured the finger when he punched the dugout wall in Seattle after a Mariners' scoring outburst. The Yanks said Alexander agreed to go to Columbus to work himself back into shape, but wanted a clause which would limit him to just one appearance with the Clippers.

Bill Bergesch, the Yankees' vice-president of baseball operations, said, "We didn't want to limit ourselves, but we agreed with the proviso provided that we could discuss his returning to Columbus if we felt he needed another time out. He agreed with that."

Alexander threw 42—3 innings against Richmond Tuesday night, allowing four runs on five hits, with two walks and one strikeout. The right-hander threw 64 pitches and "is not ready to pitch here yet," Bergesch said.

"The Yankees are partly in our standings situation (sixth in the American League East) because of Alexander's injury," said Bergesch. "We cannot afford the luxury of another loss by a pitcher who is not quite ready to pitch up here."

"Since he was the one responsible for his injury, the least he can do is to be cooperative," said Bergesch. "Pitching batting practice or facing batters in a simulated game is not the same as being in actual game competition."

Alexander was not available for comment.

Also on Tuesday, Rudy May, another Yankee pitcher on the disabled list, pitched 32-3 innings for Columbus.

"May has told us he will do whatever is best for the club," Bergesch said. "We feel that he needs one more outing before rejoining the Yankees.

"We also feel that Doyle needs at least another game under his belt. Though he feels that his hand felt good the other night, it was apparent that he isn't ready yet."

Shortly after his injury, Alexander offered to have a month's pay deducted from his salary since the injury was self-inflicted. However, the Major League Baseball Players Associaton convinced Alexander to withdraw his offer and the Yankees then fined him an unspecified amount.

Stocks Gain Despite Market Uncertainty

By FRANK W. SLUSSER
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Wall Street doesn't like uncertainties and the investment community was full of them by the end of the week as Secretary of State Alexander Haig resigned in a move that stunned the world.

Traders, who enjoyed a rare winning week, will have the weekend to dissect the Reagan administration shakeup and news that the nation's money supply plunged $2.3 billion in the latest statistical period.

Aided by a 24.55-point spurt the first three sessions, the Dow Jones industrial average, which skidded 21.12 points to a 26-month low last week, gained 14.46 points.

The early week rally, sparked by House and Senate approval of a 1983 budget, was seen by most observers as a normal rebound from the market's precipitous slide since early May. Also, many institutions adjusted their portfolios.

The Dow skidded late Friday after the Haig announcement and Ralph Acampora, Kidder Peabody vice president, thinks "the market will be looking for a new low soon before taking off on possibly a strong summer rally."

With takeover issues setting the pace, the New York Stock Exchange index rose 0.98 to 62.72 and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index jumped 1.86 to 109.14. Advances topped declines 1,106-710 among the 2,092 issues traded.

Big Board volume jumped to 262,963,612 shares from the 244,405,620 traded last week and 223,459,124 traded during the same week a year ago.

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter totaled 307,636,972 shares compared with 281,549,620 traded last week.

Haig said Friday he quit because the Reagan administration shifted from a clear and steady course. Wall Street observers were fearful the news would put the stock market back on the downward course it has followed most of the year.

Interest rates have stayed on a rather steady high track throughout and experts are uncertain whether they will come down much in the near future.

Judging by the rise in bond prices late Friday, investors were encouraged by the drop in the nation's money supply because it could take pressure off the Federal Reserve to tighten credit even further.

But key federal funds rates banks charge one another for loans rose to 15 percent Friday from an average 14.17 percent earlier in the week. If that trend continues, analysts believe banks would be tempted to raise their prime lending rate.

Further, the Treasury is scheduled to sell $17 billion worth of notes and bills this week and another $10 billion the next week.

Japanese Concerned That Robots May Take Jobs

TOKYO (AP) — Industrial robots have freed Japanese workers from tedious tasks and given Japan's products a competitive edge worldwide, but labor experts are beginning to worry that robots may some day create a product few Japanese are familiar with — unemployment.

The threat, if distant, of workers losing their jobs to automatons is particularly disquieting in this nation, where lifetime employment is still prevalent and the current unemployment rate, a minuscule 2.35 percent, already is viewed as excessive.

Business and labor leaders still generally agree that Japan's 76,700 industrial robots — reputedly more than the rest of the world combined — have been an economic asset.

But with Japan's economy slowing down while microelectronic technology races ahead with new tools capable of duplicating sophisticated human actions, future harmony between man and machine is being questioned.

The Japan Productivity Center, a government-supported think tank, warned in a recent report that the spread of industrial robots and office automation could cause unemployment if Japan has a zero growth rate. Economists predict that national growth this year will be about 3 percent, with little prospects of a major business upturn in the near future.

The report also cautioned that robots, by eliminating lower-echelon jobs, could undermine the lifetime employment system in which managerial jobs are earned after years on the work site. It does not take years of experience, the report said, to supervise a machine.

Although Japan's jobless rate would be somewhat higher if calculated by U.S. or European standards, Japan has kept unemployment far lower than in other industrialized states with a system in which workers stay with one company and make sacrifices in times of business downturns in exchange for job security.

"There is no real problem now because most of the companies introducing robots are in high-growth fields and have been able to shift workers to other jobs," says Isao Ikeda of the Labor Ministry Secretariat. "But without proper coordination between labor and management, and training for those displaced by robots, there could be trouble in a low-growth future."

A private research group, the Science and Economy Society, said in May that there probably would be no problems before 1985. Until then, it predicted, jobs lost to robots in the steel, chemical and nonferrous metal industries should be more than made up by demand for workers in the fields of electronics, precision machinery, communications and space.

"It will be after 1985, probably in the 1990s, when the effects of electronics become a major social problem in Japan and we must face up to the consequences," the report said.

Ikeda said one concern is the rapid spread of industrial robots into small- and medium-size companies that are more vulnerable to economic quirks and have less flexibility in job placements. At present, 60 percent of robots are in the huge auto and electronics industries.

The Labor Ministry has initiated a two-year study into the effects of robots on working conditions and employment, and even the Ministry for International Trade and Industry, the guiding force behind Japan's technological revolution, has taken note of possible robot side-effects.

Trade Minister Shintaro Abe recently said that the current "honeymoon with labor over introduction of microelectronics" could come to an abrupt end if robots on the assembly lines extend unemployment lines.

In 1980, Japan produced about 20,000 industrial robots worth $31 million, the Japan Industrial Robot Association says. The group predicts sales will climb to $1.2 billion by 1985 and almost double that figure by 1990.

Unlike U.S. and European workers, who have resisted the rapid introduction of robots, Japanese labor has accepted, and even encouraged, automation.

A spokesman for Nissan Motor Co., which has put 730 robots on its assembly lines since 1969, says, "In Japan there are no job demarcation lines, so it has been easy to move workers to new jobs."

The spokesman, who asked not to be quoted by name, says Nissan autoworkers were "pleased" to be moved from grimy and monotonous jobs on body assembly, welding and paint lines to more complex work on auto interiors and accessories that robots cannot handle.

He says the unions, which in Japan are organized by company rather than trade oriented, "were very cooperative because they realize that profits for the company will increase their standards of living."

To maintain this peaceful situation, the National Federation of Metal Industry Trade Unions called in May for a labor-management agreement on future use of industrial robots.

The federation said there should be prior consultation for all new robot purchases, no layoffs as a result of robots, equitable sharing of the fruits of increased productivity, maintenance of health and safety standards, and no job transfers resulting in downgraded pay or working standards.

The opposition Komeito Party — a centrist, Buddhist-affiliated group — has proposed a "robot tax" to bolster pension funds.

GM White-Collar Workers Rally

FLINT, Mich. (AP) — Disgruntled white-collar employees of General Motors Corp. gathered in Flint this weekend for the first national rally in their growing campaign for union membership.

Norm Bissell, an international United Auto Workers representative, said about 1,000 employees were expected at Saturday night's meeting.

"We've had calls from California, Ohio, even Canada," Bissell said. "We've got people who have worked for 28 years who are now out on the street."

Around 27,000 salaried workers have been laid off in the past three years as domestic car sales slump.

The main organizer of the meeting is Bill Hopper, a clerk at a GM plant here. He and Bissell and Irving Bluestone, a former UAW vice president, were scheduled to address the gathering.

The organizing effort — the first major effort that has been made to unionize white-collar workers at GM — gained momentum early this year when the automaker sharply cut its white-collar payroll.

Some of the layoffs were made on the basis of performance rather than time on the job, and that angered some workers who have been with GM for many years, organizers said.

Later, General Motors announced that in future layoffs, seniority would be taken into consideration for employees who have been with GM five or more years.

Workers with less than five years would be cut according to work performance, GM said.

A UAW vice president and director of the union's organizing department, Martin Gerber, attributed the change in layoff policy to the union's white-collar organizing efforts.

GM said it was merely putting the benefits of salaried workers in line with those of blue-collar employees.

In the past month, Bissell said, there have been at least six UAW organizing meetings in Michigan, attracting nearly 900 workers.

The site of the weekend rally has historical significance for the UAW, which represents 470,000 blue-collar workers at GM.

This auto-dependent city, about 60 miles northwest of Detroit, is where autoworkers conducted a sit-down strike in late 1936. When the strike ended after 44 days, GM agreed to recognize the UAW as the workers' bargaining agent.

The plant was the first the UAW was to represent.

GM has 129,000 U.S. salaried workers.

Hannah Has Owned His Heart Through 65 Years, Adrian Brown Says

By Jeanie Brown Whitehurst

When Hannah Cuthrell was 16 years old and living in Aurora, she attended a house party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Aldridge, grandparents of Dr. Henry Aldridge and Mrs. Lula Sauls, both of Greenville.

She played the piano while the girls and boys talked and sang. During the evening she met Adrian Ernul Brown of Greenville and his sister, Mary Jane.

In the next few months, she and Mary Jane visited each other. The next summer she and Adrian drove a horse and buggy to Winterville to a Baptist revival meeting. That night Adrian "lost his heart and hasn't gained it since," he said.

They courted for five years. He would travel by Norfolk-Southern train to Washington, N.C., cross town, and board the Atlantic Coastline to Aurora. Actually, most of their courting was done by correspondence.

During those days, Adrian was attending Trinity College (now Duke University) and Hannah enrolled in East Carolina Training School (now East Carolina University). He was graduated in 1916 and she finished in 1917.

Three weeks later — June 27, 1917 — they were married in a formal ceremony in the Aurora Methodist Church at 7:30 a.m. They chose the early morning hour in order to go to Vanceboro to catch a train to Norfolk where they boarded the Bay Line boat, a huge steamer, to Baltimore. From there they went to Washington, D.C. and toured the city and surrounding countryside.

MR. AND MRS. ADRIAN BROWN

By train, they returned to Norfolk and spent some time at Virginia Beach and arrived in Greenville with $15 of the $50 they had taken. They bought "just one thing, one set of 12 hand-painted cups and saucers," Hannah said.

They both began their teaching careers at Newton Grove. In 1922 Adrian was called into the Methodist ministry at Stumpy Point. He could get there only by boat — a three-day trip from Greenville. That was the beginning of his 40-year active ministry.

As time went on, Hannah taught full-time or substituted in any grade anywhere Adrian preached. She vividly recalls that one male student in seventh grade declared he wasn't going to memorize a poem because he was "just sitting here waiting to get old and join the Navy." Perhaps he did.

Between 1919 and 1933, five children — four boys and one girl — were born while the Browns lived in Greenville, Bethel, Robersonville and Bynum.

During this time, Adrian received his Master's and B.D. degrees. In his senior year he had to reside in Durham where they rented an apartment. However, the family had to travel 24 miles to Bynum on Wednesday nights for prayer meetings and on Fridays through Sundays to serve the six churches to which he had been appointed.

Although four children had already been born, Hannah also completed a year's course at the Durham Conservatory of Music. Her teacher said she studied harder than any student she had ever taught before, she recalls.

By the time Rev. Brown retired, he had finished paying for a house in Greenville where he and Hannah have resided for 19 years.

For the last 11 years he has been visitation pastor for Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church. Hannah has been active in all phases of church work here and throughout his pastorates.

Adrian still visits, gardens, cooks, freezes vegetables, drives and attends sports events — especially East Carolina University football games. He will be 90 August 11.

On holidays, vacations and weekends their five children, 19 grandchildren and 22 great-grandchildren "come and go" at their own leisure because they know "the latch string is always on the outside," Hannah said.

The Browns plan a quiet 65th wedding anniversary with no "pomp and circumstance." They just pray for continued peace, health and the blessings of their Saviour, they say.

His Auto Body Skill Enabled Masterful Creation Of Mobile Stage

Artist-chemist-mechanic Marty Tharpe marshals all his talents to paint the Jazz Is mobile stage. Constructed from the shell of a tractor-trailer, the stage is to be performed upon in 20 cities this summer.

By Maura T. Payne

WINSTON-SALEM — "I guess I'm part artist, part chemist and part mechanic," says Marty Tharpe. Those who've seen his work say he's also part magician.

Tharpe paints trucks, buses, planes, motorcycles, signs, banners and just about anything else that isn't moving at the time. He is currently under contract with R.J. Reynolds Industries Inc. to paint the mobile stage for this summer's national tour of a production called "Jazz Is," which is being sponsored by the corporation.

Tharpe has trouble putting a title on what he and his employees actually do. "About the best description we can come up with is 'special interest car craftsman,'" he says. "We get involved in all sorts of construction, repair work and painting of vehicles."

Tharpe says that without his experience in auto body repair, he would not be able to provide the kind of customized services required for a project like the "Jazz Is" trailer.

"Knowing what kinds of paint will be durable, fade-resistant and adherent to the various surfaces of the truck takes a better-than-average knowledge of automotive paints and chemical bonding properties," Tharpe says.

"For example, the shell of this truck is steel, and certain paints adhere well to steel. But the side panel, which folds down during a performance to become the dance floor and stage area, is fiberglass. The 'Jazz Is' logo had to be painted over an entrance at the rear of the truck, and the edges of that door are rubber. It meant I had to pick a paint that would chemically match all of the different surfaces of the truck," Tharpe says.

Once the paint is selected, Tharpe projects the image to be painted onto the area where it is to be painted. A pattern is made on paper, then transferred onto the truck itself. From then on, the painting is much like using a child's coloring book — you have to stay inside the lines.

"This is a job for someone who loves detail work. Absolutely no sloppiness can be tolerated," Tharpe explains. "Precision and patience are very, very important."

While the "Jazz Is" truck-turned-mobile stage is one of Tharpe's more unique projects, he has a great deal of experience in satisfying customers' special requests.

"The first custom painting job I ever did was for a guy who wanted his motorcycle to stand out in a crowd. I told the guy that if he could see it, I could paint it — even if it was a common housefly. The next day the guy came back into my shop and placed an order to have a housefly painted on his motorcycle. That was when I began to wish I'd kept my mouth shut," Thorpe said.

Such a request would hardly throw Tharpe now. He has painted hundreds of cars, trucks and motorcycles since then, including several Winston Cup and Camel GT race cars, which are sponsored by the R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.

Once the painting of the "Jazz Is" truck is completed, lighting and sound equipment will be installed inside to make it a completely self-contained stage for the cast of six dancers, nine musicians and two singers.

Produced by the North Carolina School of the Arts, "Jazz Is" traces the history of jazz and its influence on other forms of American music. All members of the cast and crew are current or former NCSA students.

The mobile stage will travel with the cast on its five-week national tour that opens June 30 in Raleigh. Included in the 20-city tour schedule are performances in New York's Lincoln Center, the Houston Astrodome and Disneyland.

The truck's conversion into a traveling stage ws designed by Scott Templin, NCSA's assistant dean of design and production and the technical director of "Jazz Is." Templin believes the stage is the first of its kind, and Tharpe agrees.

"You can bet that when I'm finished with this truck, it will be like nothing else you've ever seen," Tharpe says laughing.

Tharpe takes great pride in all his work, despite some of its demands. "Sometimes you have to work around the clock for seven days a week if the job is to get done. But we always get it done, and get it done right."

Isn't there an easier way for a young man with an assiciate's degree in business administration to make a living?

Children Vulnerable To Pollutants, Absorb More

NEW YORK (UPI) — Children are especially vulnerable to environmental pollutants, says Paula DiPerna, author of a public affairs pamphlet on the subject.

Their young bodies have a much higher rate of absorption than adults, she says, and they also lack the level of immunological protection that adults have.

Their intake of pollutants is higher than that of adults because, for their body weight, children consume relatively more air, food and water.

The author's suggestions for lessening the risks include:

—Before buying or renting a new home or apartment, check the number of days a year that air quality in the area reaches unhealthy levels. Ask about the source of the water supply and how near it is to a toxic waste dump or a heavily industrialized area.

—Find out if teachers and school officials are aware of potential hazards such as asbestos and chemicals in art supplies and school laboratories and if they know how to monitor and control such hazards.

—Let public officials and candidates for public office know you are concerned about children's special vulnerability to environmental hazards.

—If your child is ill for no apparent cause, try to inventory environmental agents with which the child might have been in contact. If a child shows a consistent pattern of illness, point out the possible environmental factors to the child's physician.

The DiPerna booklet, "Environmental Hazards to Children," is 50 cents from the non-profit Public Affairs Committee, 381 Park Avenue South, New York, N.Y. 10016.

Swados Now Novelist

By CAROL DEEGAN

NEW YORK (AP) — Already an accomplished playwright, composer and director, at the age of 31 Elizabeth Swados has added novelist to the list of her achievements.

Her original Broadway musical, "Runaways," received a record-breaking five Tony award nominations. Her musical version of "Alice in Wonderland" starred Meryl Streep. She has worked with theatrical director Andrei Serban and New York theatrical producer Joseph Papp.

Now she has written her first novel, "Leah and Lazar," which at first she considered publishing under another name.

"The seemingly radical or sudden transition from theater person to writer concerned me," she said in an interview. "It concerned me that the book would not be taken seriously and read as a first novelist who is really trying to accomplish that — and not as a show-biz person who was taking a year off and thought, well, I might try something different.

"Generally, I would say that my career up until now has been music for theatrical pieces, be they theater or movies, but I've always written, simultaneously to that, prose and poetry and things like that."

Ms. Swados was born in Buffalo, N.Y. She began studying the piano at the age of 5 and later studied classical guitar.

As a teen-ager, while attending a private girls' school in Buffalo, Ms. Swados said she wrote songs for a school singing group and plays for the school drama club. She also had a folk singing group with twin boys — "we were sort of trying to be Peter, Paul and Mary" — and a "semisoft rock 'n' roll group."

"I was having a desperate attempt, from the time I was a freshman in high school, to get my poetry published and get my stories published, and I had a whole bulletin board of rejection slips, which I thought was just great — I'd sort of send things out to get the rejection slips," she said.

Kidney stones are a common ailment and usually consist of small, hard masses that form in the kidneys and sometimes work their way into the bladder. Not so for an 80-year-old patient in England in 1952. Doctors removed a kidney stone from her that weighed just short of 14 pounds, and is the largest ever recorded in medical history.

Suitcase Substitutes Suggested

CHICAGO (UPI) — Duffles or laundry bags make good substitutes for bulky suitcases for family camping and not just because they are lighter in weight.

They can also be used as temporary pillows for sleepy children during a long drive, says Pauline Church, home service adviser to a plastic housewares manufacturer.

She also suggests using airtight plastic food containers for some non-foods on camping trips. They're good for protecting such items as personal toilet articles, postage stamps, extra film, safety matches and powdered detergent.

If your destination is the wilderness for a long stretch, Ms. Church says snugly covered containers should be used to protect dried foods from insects, dirt and moisture, just as they should always be used for carrying sugar, cereals, flour and other grain products.

Ms. Church is home service adviser to Republic Molding Corp., of Chicago.

Announcing... BLOCK OUT STARCH CALORIES!
EAT BREAD, POTATOES, PASTA!

STARCH BLOCK™
STARCH BLOCK™ IS:
• A revolutionary new concept in natural weight control.
• A natural product that blocks excess starch digestion.
• So effective we back it with a complete money-back guarantee.
STARCH BLOCK™ IS NOT:
• A chemically synthesized drug.
• A stimulant
• Another appetite suppressant.
Almost half the average American's calories come from carbohydrates.
Starch is a major dietary complex carbohydrate. If enzymes did not break down the starch to simpler sugars, those calories would not be absorbed to add to total calorie intake.
Scientists have spent years studying and reporting on naturally occurring protein in legumes (beans) that blocks alpha-amylase, a major body enzyme that breaks down starch to absorbable forms. It was decided that if this protein could prevent or inhibit alpha-amylase from breaking down starch in test tubes, maybe it could do the same in people.
The idea was tested in human diet study and it worked! The test group given the inhibitor lost more weight than the control group not given it. No undesirable side effects were reported. These exciting results were put to use in the development of STARCH BLOCK™. Now you can put STARCH BLOCK™ to work for you!
One STARCH BLOCK™ Tablet can block the conversion of 150 grams of starch to absorbable calories—that's 600 calories! Simply take one tablet at the beginning of each meal or two tablets at the beginning of a large starch meal.
STARCH BLOCK™ contains no sugar, no starch, no artificial colors, no artificial flavors or preservatives—only the natural help you may have needed to get rid of those excess pounds and keep them off!

In a few years the doors and hoods of the family car may be made of fiberglass reinforced plastics. Some doors and hoods are currently made that way, but it will be the late 1980s before the majority are plastic, says David Clavadetscher of Premix, a North Kingsville, Ohio, materials supplier to the auto industry.

Miss Pinkerton, Mr. Holliman Wed

RALEIGH — Teresa Lynne Pinkerton and Andy Ray Holliman were united in marriage Saturday at 7 p.m. at the home of the bride's parents here. The wedding was performed by the Rev. James C. Loy.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter L. Pinkerton, was given in marriage by her parents. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Holliman of Stokes. The bride chose a gown of organza with a bodice of necklace embroidery and seed pearls. It featured tiers of chantilly lace flowing into a cathedral train. The veil was of chantilly fingertip length appliqued and attached to a Juliet cap. She carried a cascading bouquet of white roses, dendrobrium orchids and stephanotis.

The maid of honor was Joyce Pinkerton, sister of the bride of Raleigh. She wore a pink floor-length southern bell fashion dress with a sweetheart neck of taffadia and a full bouffant skirt of organza. She carried a spring bouquet of lilies, sweetheart roses and baby's breath. She wore a coordinating wreath of flowers in her hair.

The best man was the father of the bridegroom. A program of nuptial wedding music was presented by Billy Elledge, cousin of the bride. The registry was attended by Amanda Holliman, sister of the bride.

A reception was held in the garden of the bride's parent's home. The refreshment and champagne table was covered with a cloth of white and mint green lace. The centerpieces were of lilies, roses, frecsia and baby's breath. The garden was decorated with blooming plants and torches. The three-tiered wedding cake, decorated with the figures used in the bride's parent's wedding, was served by Carloyn Buffaloe, aunt of the bride. The punch was served by Carol Elledge and the champagne was poured by Richard Pettengilla.

After a wedding trip to Washington, N.C., the couple plans to reside in Stokes.

The bride, a graduate of East Carolina Univeristy School of Nursing, is employed by Pitt County Memorial Hospital. The bridegroom is a dispatcher on Squad C of the Greenville Police Department.

Novelist ...

After high school, she attended Bennington College where she was graduated with a bachelor's degree in music for theater. She became a professional composer when she was 19 years old.

Ms. Swados won an Obie at the age of 20 for her music for Andrei Serban's production of "Medea." In addition to her own original musical, "Runaways," she did a musical version of the book on the Vietnam War titled, "Dispatches," and written by Michael Herr. She composed the music for the film, "Four Friends."

Finally, last year, at the age of 30, Ms. Swados said she had decided to collate material she had been gathering for six years to write her first published novel, "Leah and Lazar."

"Leah and Lazar" is the story of a brother and sister, growing up in the 1960s and 1970s, each tormented by his and her own inner thoughts and motivations and their relationship to their family and to one another.

Ms. Swados said that aside from the "narcissistic, author-like need to make something," she was motivated in writing the novel by her belief that "whatever goes wrong in the bigger scheme of things begins in the family, begins in the home and begins in the habits that we teach our children."

"Leah and Lazar are parentless children, for all intents and purposes," she said. "I've encountered a lot of parentless children, either by choice or because of circumstance ... and the way they survive has always been a fascination to me."

She explained, "I have an enormous interest and I would say investment in young people."

Ms. Swados says the novel also represents people of her generation growing up in the 1960s and 1970s who had a romantic view of trying new and dangerous things.

"I lived in an atmosphere all the time with people who were testing the edge. Some made it and some didn't. Lazar represents some who didn't. Leah represents some who did," she said.

Ms. Swados said she was now working with a group of 10 children, between the ages of 9 and 16, setting works of literature to music for CBS Cable television. The authors include William Blake, Grace Paley and Mark Twain. She lives and works in New York City.

America Has Mona Lisa In New Jersey

DIANA DAVIS? — Anna Hyatt Huntington's statue of Diana, the huntress, at the Brookgreen Gardens near Myrtle Beach, S.C. could have been posed for by actress Bette Davis, but no one knows for sure. The speculation began after the Boston Museum of Fine Arts curator said Wednesday their statue, "Young Diana," also by Huntington, could have been posed for by Bette Davis. (AP Laserphoto)

By MARIE COLVIN

MONTCLAIR, N.J. (UPI) — The enigmatic smile of the "other" Mona Lisa is hidden in a bank vault.

This spring, it drew hundreds of people on an unlikely pilgrimage to New Jersey to view a portrait some say Leonardo da Vinci painted before the one hanging in the Louvre.

New Jersey's Mona Lisa was exhibited in a darkened gallery of the Montclair Art Museum in only the second public display since the oil was painted, possibly more than four centuries ago.

It has since been crated again in a plywood case and returned to storage in a climate-controlled bank vault.

During the exhibit, a replica of the Louvre's Mona Lisa, painted in the early 1500s by da Vinci, was hung at the other end of the Montclair Museum's gallery. The original is in the Salle des Etats, a room off the Paris museum's main Picture Gallery.

Visitors to Montclair could pace between the two to puzzle out the pale madonna's faint smile and speculate on her portrait's trail of intrigue and mystery.

Both are modeled with da Vinci's characteristic sfumato, blending light and shadow. The woman in the Vernon oil, as the New Jersey painting is termed, is younger and slimmer, the famed smile also undecipherable but softer, less knowing than her more worldly elder sister's. The Vernon version is on canvas; the Louvre's on a wood panel.

But the women are so akin that when Time-Life Books in 1961 published a volume on Italy, they mistakenly — and embarrassingly — illustrated "Leonardo da Vinci's Mona Lisa, the world's most famous portrait" with the New Jersey version.

"We have no quarrel with the Louvre," said the New Jersey painting's owner, Suzanne Vernon Swick, whose ancestor reportedly was given the oil by the doomed Queen Marie Antoinette.

Her claim dates to the return of William Henry Vernon from the French court in 1797. The young American brought home 55 Old Masters — including a Raphael, a Rembrandt and what he listed in spidery handwriting as "A Nun, a finished piece by Leonardo da Vincy (sic)."

Art experts have debated its authenticity for years.

Thomas Judson, former curator of the Cigognara Collection of the Vatican and a da Vinci expert, attributed the Vernon oil to the Florentine genius.

Seymour Reit, author of "The Day They Stole the Mona Lisa," came across the Vernon oil while researching the 1911 theft of the Mona Lisa from the Louvre. He dubbed it "Lisa One," an earlier version of the masterpiece.

When cleaned by the Fogg Art Museum at Harvard in 1933, X-rays dated the painting in the early 1500s, the Vernon family says. The brushwork was found to be that of a left-handed artist, which da Vinci was.

The Mona Lisa was sold by da Vinci to his patron, King Francis I, in the early 1500s.

The Royal Inventories of the French Court list in the early 1700s two "Mona Lisas" — the painting and a valuable "copy." In those days copy meant another work of the same subject painted by the artist.

Vernon was given one by Marie Antoinette, although he never said why. Family history has it he knelt and prayed daily before the painting.

By the time a second inventory was done in 1806, only one of the Mona Lisas could be found; the Vernon family claims the second was hanging on their ancestor's bedroom wall in Newport, R.I.

Two years after Vernon's death in 1833, his holdings were auctioned, but a friend bought the Mona Lisa for $305 and returned it to the family. Passed from Vernon to Vernon, it now has nine official heirs.

Its history was researched by Reit, who became "a believer" almost by accident.

"I had intended to focus my book on the 1911 theft of the Louvre's Mona Lisa," he said. "But along the way I was sidetracked by the many people who claimed to have real da Vinci paintings."

Two trips to Europe and visits to dozens of art galleries convinced him the Vernon Mona Lisa was "the strongest claimant" to authenticity, he said.

In the French Mona Lisa, the bases of two flanking columns are partly visible; experts believe they were sliced off to cut the painting to a particular frame. In the Vernon painting, the columns are intact; a later copyist would not have included the pillars, he said.

$100,000 Grant To Museum

RALEIGH — A grant of $100,000 has been awarded by the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation to the N.C. Museum of Art for publications and exhibitions relating to its collections.

The grant, to be used over a five-year period, is one of 35 given by the Mellon Foundation to museums who meet three criteria — collections of national importance, active and significant exhibiton and publication programs and operating budgets of more than $1 million.

The grant is to help museums research and display their own collections in a time when major traveling exhibitions are becoming less affordable. The funds are to be used for preliminary reearch and planning, rather than the actual production of exhibitions, catalogues and scholarly publications.

Dr. Edgar Peters Bowron, the museum's director, said the grant will help in producing a series of guides to specific collections, such as the African, pre-Columbian and classical collections. It will also facilitate research into areas of the collection, such as the ethnographic work, for which there is no specialist on the museum staff.

THE PAWS THAT REFRESHES — Alex Steven relaxes at a busy intersection in Jackson, Miss., as a giant kitten appears to stare over his shoulder. The image of the cat is on a rug, one of many that Steven peddles across the South. He said the cat rug has been his best seller. (AP Laserphoto)

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

BY LOUISE PERRY

What better for lazy summer afternoons than a gripping tale of suspense and intrigue? Sheppard Memorial Library has many new titles to delight the avid mystery buff as well as the vacation-only reader.

John Gardner's second shot at continuing Ian Fleming's James Bond is "For Special Services," a well-paced novel of hijacking, car-dueling, brainwashing and drugs. In this one, Bond meets his old, supposedly dead nemesis Blotfield who has revived SPECTRE and is out to capture America's Particle Beam Weapon. Bond's new partner Cedar, daughter of an old FBI pal, provides the romance — the action, as usual, is plentiful.

Nicholas Conde handles a disturbing occult theme as a masterful storyteller and makes "The Religion" a spellbinder that is hard to put down. Anthropologist Cal Jamison, studying voodoo practices in New York, is drawn into helping Lt. MacTaggart solve a rash of ritual child murders. Cal's skepticism breaks down as he discovers his mentor (a Margaret Mead look-alike) is also a believer, and that his own son has been chosen as the next sacrifice needed to prevent a nuclear holocaust.

In "Katie's Terror" by David E. Fisher, Katie Townsend, an actress turned librarian, has solved murders through after-hours research in the stacks. In a television appearance on "Morning In America" she describes her newest hypothesis — that several murders in different cities may have been committed by a performer on tour. Later threatened with a series of calls from a man whose voice sounds like Charles Laughton's, Katie turns to the police. A spine-tingling scene deep within the cavernous New York Public Library climaxes the mounting tension.

"Day of Wrath" by Jonathan Valin is another well-made suspense novel of private detective Harry Stoner's search for a runaway 14-year-old girl. When Stoner attempts to locate the girl's boyfriend, he finds the boy's body in the back seat of his car. Patient plodding through honky-tonks and penthouses puts Stoner on the right track and convinces us that Valin's attempt at a well-rounded, Chandleresque private eye character was successful.

In a lighter vein, Elizabeth Peter's latest, "The Copenhagen Connection," is as usual a blend of mystery, romance and humor. The plot involves a Nobel prize-winning woman scholar, her short-tempered, long-suffering son and her newly acquired secretary. The setting is Danish, the mystery hinges around a long-dead queen and involves kidnapping and murder before all is resolved with a happy ending.

Summer Workshops At 'The Lost Colony'

PTW CO-CHAIRMAN . . . Darrins Larson, co-chairman of the Professional Theater Workshop at "The Lost Colony," shows office manager Deloris Utley a resume of one of this season's visiting guest artists. Larson will host a number of theater professionals coming to Manteo, including James Coco, Kim Hunter, and Chita Rivera. (Photograph by Allen Sandy)

MANTEO — Pat Brymer, puppeteer for stage, television and film, opens this year's activities for Joe Layton's Professional Theater Workshop at "The Lost Colony."

He conducted a four-day workshop on puppetry for this year's "The Lost Colony Children's Show," which opens July 3 at the Manteo Marine Resources Center abd shows through Aug. 14.

Brymer is presently the master puppeteer with Hanna-Barbara Productions in Hollywood and has spent the last two seasons working on the "Barbara Mandrell and the Mandrell Sisters" series. Included in his film credits are Jim Henson's "The Muppet Movie" and the gopher puppet in "Caddyshack." He is currently inm thr process of designing and creating puppets for a newly syndicated series starring Shari Lewis.

PTW is a creation of Layton, a stage, TV and screen director-choreographer who gives young performers a chance to talk and work with contemporaries in the many diverse fields of the performing arts.

Among the list of professionals appearing this year is Nananne Porcher, a PTW guest for several seasons. She has been the lighting designer at "The Lost Colony" since 1964. Her credits lighting designs for the movie "Turning Point," The American Ballet Theater, The Metropolitan Opera and several Broadway productions.

Also returning to PTW this season is "The Lost Colony" scene and costume designer, Fred Voelpel. He has designed for on- and off-Broadway productions and regional theater and is a design instructor at NYU School of the Arts.

Mary Porter Hall, who has worked with Layton as productions stage manager for "Barnum," will be joining PTW to discuss stage management. She has also stage-managed "Annie," "The Stratford Shakespear Festival" in Connecticut, and will also be directing "Barnum" at the end of the summer in Italy.

Actress Kim Hunter will arrive in late June with her husband, Bob Emmett, a writer for stage and television. Ms. Hunter has acted in hundreds of Broadway, television and feature film productions. She is remembered for her work in "Planet of the Apes" and "Backstairs at the White House," and has an Academy Award for her role as Stella Kowalski in "Streetcar Named Desire."

Arthur Joesph will be on hand to instruct vocal awareness. He will delve into all facets of the voice. Joesph has appeared on many television shows and coaches numerous stars.

Mary Jo Slater, casting director for Broadway's "Chapter Two," "California Suite," "Grease," "Hair," and currently ABC's "One Life to Live," will be joined by commercial agent Jean Thomas in a one-day workshop on how to go about getting an agent and employment in the arts.

Another famous husband and wife team, Lee and Kelly Wood Adams, will also be joining PTW this summer. Lee has been a lyricist since 1960 and has won Tony Awards for "Bye Bye Birdie" and "Applause." He also wrote the theme song for the TV show "All in the Family." Kelly has stage and television experience and plays the role of Laurie Phillips on "Search for Tommorow."

Other guests include acting coach Sondra Lee; acclaimed make-up artist Michelle Bruno; Hollywood resume photographer John Rose; and dance master and choreographer, Joseph Levinoff. Special guest appearances will be made by Chita Rivera and James Coco. Other top performers are also expected to join PTW this summer if their schedules allows it.

PTW is co-chaired by two veteran cast members of "The Lost Colony," John Gullucci and Darrin Larson. Gullucci will be the artistic director for the PTW production season. The season includes "The Lost Colony Children's Show," a one-act musical, a dance concert and "The Lost Colony" Choir Concert.

The administrative duties of PTW are the responsibility of co-chairman Darrin Larson. A native of Salinas, Calif., Larson will be returning to acting studies at Carnegie-Mellon University in the fall.

St. Louis Baroque Movie Palace Of The 1920's Being Restored

By TIM BRYANT

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — One of the spectacular movie temples of the 1920s is being restored.

The Fox Theater opened shortly before the Great Depression as the centerpiece of St. Louis' Grand Boulevard entertainment area, then marked by numerous theaters and night spots.

The Fox closed in 1978. In its final years, it had switched from showing first-run films to running sleazy movies and staging rock concerts. The neighborhood had shriveled because of crime and accompanying urban ills.

Now, more than a million dollars is being spent to restore the "Fabulous Fox," which was placed on the National Register of Historic Places in 1976.

After a grand opening, scheduled for September, it will be available for dance performances, Broadway shows, opera, receptions, benefits, high school graduations and almost any activity seeking ornate surroundings.

"There will be no rock concerts," said Mary Strauss, who is heading the restoration effort. "Anything but rock concerts — and Kung Fu movies. Those were the worst.

"The last three or four years were the hardest on the theater. You could see broken seat backs where somebody decided to practice a karate kick."

When the six-story high Fox opened in 1929, the Roxy in New York was the only larger theater in the nation. William Fox built his theater at the then unheard of cost of $6 million.

Fox built similar theaters in Detroit, San Francisco, Brooklyn and Atlanta. The theaters in San Francisco and Brooklyn were torn down years ago. The Detroit Fox is in a state of disrepair. In Atlanta, the Fox is being renovated and is used for a variety of events, including Broadway shows.

Fox, who later founded the movie production company that carried his name, gave his wife a free hand in furnishing the St. Louis theater.

Other parts of the theater are a conglomeration of Moorish, Far Eastern and Indian themes. Enormous, ornate plaster spears appear to support the auditorium's domed ceiling, which is painted a deep blue to resemble the night sky above the tent of a desert sheik.

Craftsmen who decorated the Fox were experts at scagliola, the art of making plaster look like marble. Frescoes throughout the theater are decorated with figures of elephants, peacocks and potentates.

Fox named the mish-mash of furnishings "Eve Leo style" in tribute to his wife, who traveled worldwide to collect paintings and sculptures that adorn every niche of the theater.

The Fox's style reflected the past, but its technology was modern. It was the first theater with full "talkie" equipment for the Movietone Process. It was equipped with a recording studio, and a radio station for broadcasts from the auditorium.

Four people have worked full time two months polishing brass. A team of workers is restoring the mammoth Wurlitzer organ, which rises majestically from its pit at the front of the stage.

IT'S KUDZU TIME AGAIN — In Pitt County and all across the South, kudzu, that Oriental import that spreads like wildfire, is back in full green force covering shrubs, trees, anything in its people. The vine-covered trees shown here that have been transformed into leafy statues were photographed near Falkland. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

We put our foot down about apartments being within walking distance.

Wedgewood Arms apartments are within walking distance of three shopping centers, a nursery school, a junior high school, doctors' and dentists' offices and an athletic center.

As if that wasn't enough, three major traffic arteries; 264 Bypass, Arlington Blvd., and Charles St. are close enough to be seen and not heard.

Fact is, no apartments in town can legitimately claim to be more convenient to more things than Wedgewood Arms.

And, that's not all. Because Wedgewood Arms is not only convenient, it's different in other ways, too.

Take the floorplans: they're different from anything you've ever seen. And when you add in high energy efficiency, tennis courts, swimming pool, and the neighborhood "feeling" that these apartments will give you – well, you'll just have to see for yourself.

THE FIRST CATHOLIC CHURCH . . . in Halifax County, the Church of the Immaculate Conception was constructed nearly a century ago, in 1889. The small frame church, freshly painted yellow and white, is a charming example of 19th century church architecture. Located downtown Halifax, the church is surrounded by stately trees.

Landscape In White

North To Halifax

The 'First For Freedom' Town

On Wednesday the 1982 season of "First For Freedom," the outdoor drama for the historic town of Halifax, opens at the Joseph Montfort Amphitheater. The drama, written by Max Williams, is directed by Charley John Smith of Louisburg College. "First For Freedom" will be performed each Wednesday, Thursday and Friday night through August 6. Curtain time is 8:30 p.m.

Beginning Saturday, July 10, a second attraction will be presented each Saturday and Sunday evening at 8:30, the familiar musical, "The Sound of Music."

All tickets are priced at $4 for adults and $2 for children. Discount rate for groups of 20 or more is $3 per person. For tickets, call 583-1776.

"First For Freedom" is the big drawing card bringing visitors to Halifax during the summer months. However, there's a lot more to enjoy in this quiet village nestling near the Roanoke River in the midst of rich farm lands.

Daily, except Mondays, free tours are offered of the town's outstanding historic buildings and sites. Tour hours are 9 to 5 Tuesdays through Saturdays, and from 1-5 on Sundays. An old courthouse, an early printing plant, a historic tavern, and a charming country residence are among the authentically restored buildings included on the tour. There's also an old cemetery, and a cool stretch of grass and trees to explore leisurely.

The compact area of downtown Halifax also beckons the visitor with time for strolling. An 1889 Catholic church, a small Episcopal Church, and a block of antique shops are all worth investigating.

Much of the pleasure of going north to Halifax is getting there. The trip from Greenville to Halifax is about 65 miles. A traveler can go through Rocky Mount, or Tarboro, or by the Bethel-Oak City-Scotland Neck route. At this time, flowers, wild and cultivated adorn roadside yards. Vine-covered abandoned homes and barns are numerous. In many areas, fields of golden sunflowers ready for harvest brighten roadside acres.

SALLY BILLY HOUSE . . . A favorite with Halifax visitors, the Sally Billy House was moved several years ago from the countryside to its present Historic Halifax location. Situated on a dirt road just beyond the amphitheater, the secluded tree encircled setting is an ideal spot for listening to bird song.

An Old Tavern

THE EAGLE TAVERN . . . built in the 1790s, is a sturdy building with a huge weeping willow in the picket fence enclosed yard. The nearly two centuries year-old public house was used in 1825 to entertain French General Lafayette during his triumphant tour of Southern states. The building is one of seven historic landmark buildings included in tours of the town.

MIMOSA FLOWER CLUSTERS . . . The distinctive feathery cream and reddish flowers of the mimosa tree and the tree's graceful, spreading shape add a tropical note to any Greenville-Halifax travel route. This decorative tree is becoming an increasingly popular addition to the Southern landscape.

Life As It's Lived Silence Is The Ultimate Threat

By GAIL MICHAELS

Meg's philiosophy of life can be summed up in one statement: I speak, therefore I am.

I really think she talks to reassure herself of her own existence. Silence is the ultimate treat. She regards any mandatory quiet time the same way Solzhentsen regards the Gulag Archipelago.

She can expatiate at absurd length upon any subject: the terrors of haunted houses, the implications of the plot of the most recent episode of "Happy Days," or the possibilities of giving mouth-to-mouth resuscitation to a beached whale are only a few of her favorites. On a rainy day the monologue doesn't end until Phillip gets home and insists upon taking turns. Meg abhors this. "Don't you think it would be wonderful if we could talk forever without any interuptions?" she will ask me as she pats my arm lovingly.

At the risk of being branded as a poor listener, I have to admit that the thought appeals to me about as much as having triplets when I'm 45. I dread the days that weather forces me to tolerate the prolonged assault on my eardrums. On the evenings of such days I pray for drought.

I don't think I can stand to hear again how she plans when she gets rich to have a house with nine purple bathrooms, a suite for her 300 cats and complimentary batmobiles for all her guests. On those days I lust for the arrival of her bedtime.

But as one born to filibuster, Meg naturally views bedtime as the worst part of her life. The prospect of 10 hours without conversation must terrify her. To fortify herself, she says the Lord's Prayer, the Twenty-third Psalm, "Now I Lay Me," and an ad lib postscript before she will consent to a goodnight kiss. "I don't want God to forget me," she confides.

Meg's return from dreamland resembles a verbal dambreak. She doesn't even need a warm-up period. She does try to keep quiet when other family members are still asleep, but the effort is sheer torture for her.

"Will I wake up Daddy if I read to myself in a normal tone of voice?" she asked me last Saturday morning.

Her normal tone of voice could mask the sound of a freight train at a railroad crossing. I told her yes, she most certainly would wake up Daddy.

"Then can't I lower my voice just a little?" She lowered her voice to Martha Raye volume with the hissing overtones that, to Meg, constitute a whisper.

When I refused this request, she mouthed protests to me like a devotee of Richard Simmons doing facial excercises.

Finally, Phillip came plodding into the kitchen. Meg threw her arms around his legs. "Oh Daddy, thank goodness you're up!" she cried. "My voice has just been aching to be free!"

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—My partner has some sort of bromide for every occasion. One of his favorites crops up after I have jumped to game and he, with a good hand, passes and we make slam. He then looks at me with a shocked expression and says: "But partner, you made a 'drop-dead' bid." Is there such a thing, and have I been bidding this badly for all these years?—J. Campbell, Boca Raton, Fla.

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)

A.—If only the person who had invented that term had followed his own advice! There are very few instances where a 'drop-dead' bid occurs, and misapplying that advice has cost millions of points over the years.

The only time that game bids must be passed are on those hands where one player has limited his hand and the other, knowing almost exactly what his partner holds, elects to bid game. Perhaps the most typical case of this is where opener has bid one or two no trump and responder leaps to game directly, either in a suit or no trump. The only excuse for opener bidding again is that he miscounted his points in the first place and has now located an extra ace!

Another case is where one partner has prempted and the other raises to game. But here it is not the responder's action that is the drop-dead bid — the preemptor, by his first bid, is barred from acting again, since he has already described his hand accurately.

Many players get confused with the following situation:

South	North
1 ♡	1 ♠
4 ♠

Oh, the number of times I have heard North accuse South of having made a bid that had to be passed! What utter nonsense. Just examine the logic of the situation.

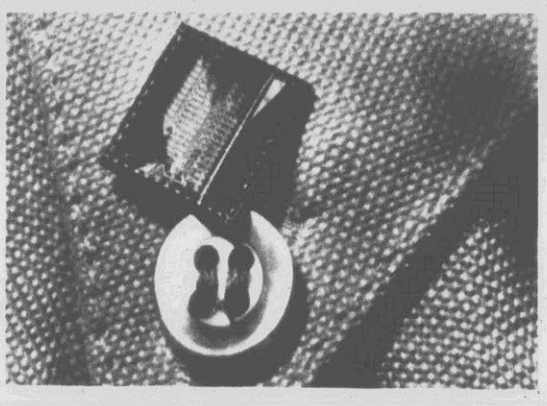

North's one spade response can be made on as few as 6-7 points. Knowing that, South has jumped to game, even though his partner might have been bidding on a relatively weak four-card suit. Therefore, South must have a hand worth about 20 points and excellent support for North's suit. If North has a full opening bid, there is no excuse for his passing. There should be a slam on the hand.

Q.—I have come up with a great improvement in scoring contract bridge. How do I go about having it accepted and publicized? Everyone who has tried it agrees with me that it makes for a more interesting game.—R. Higgins, Waltham, Mass.

A.—The American Contract Bridge League at 2200 Democrat Rd., Memphis, Tenn. 38116, represents the World Bridge Federation in this part of the world. But don't hold your breath waiting for fame and fortune. Over the years there have been hundreds of suggested changes in bridge scoring, but almost none have been accepted. By and large, the scoring is as Harold Vanderbilt devised it in 1925. That is perhaps the greatest tribute that can be paid to him.

Send any questions for this column to: Charles Goren and Omar Sharif, care of this newspaper. Each week a prize of a copy of the new "Goren's Bridge Complete," a $9.95 value, will be awarded for the question judged the best received.

Charles Goren and Omar Sharif personally cannot undertake to answer all questions submitted.

TINY AND FAST — Bell Labs scientists have built what they believe to be the most complex circuit ever, a tiny and highly efficient chip the size of a collar button. This chip, which will help make television transmission more efficient, consists of 600 tiny switches and is a step toward the day when a computer about the size of a baseball will be able to handle the amount of information now handled by a room-size computer. GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day and evening to make sure you don't act in an impulsive manner. Show others you are able to turn potential difficulties into new opportunities. Be logical.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Use particular care in motion today and avoid possible trouble. Be sure to keep those promises you have made.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Don't jeopardize your good name in any way now and stay out of trouble. Your creative ideas need expression now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Study new worthwhile ventures but don't commit yourself to anything yet. Safeguard your good credit standing.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Find out what could be annoying loved one and do something constructive about it. Show others you have wisdom.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Situations arise at this time in connection with associates that need right handling. Maintain a cheerful manner.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Don't neglect important work you have to do early in the day. You are able to communicate well with others now.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You could be tempted to have a good time at needless high costs, so forget it. Make this a profitable day instead.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Don't make matters worse than they are at home by unnecessary arguments. Show others that you can be relied upon.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will understand how best to solve many problems, but will require a very good education in order to be successful in life. Teach early in life to finish whatever is once started. Sports are good in this chart.

New Life Is Found For Old Mansions

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

What do you do in today's world with a 15,000-square-foot house standing on over 50 acres?

Frequently the answer is to tear it down and develop the acreage for something else. As a result, the grand homes of a bygone era are disappearing.

However, some properties are being saved as creative individuals figure out how to transform yesterday's white elephants into useful additions to the present without sacrificing either the buildings or the beautiful grounds on which they often stand. The properties are being recycled into conference centers, country inns, condominium apartments, resorts, spas, nursing homes and schools.

The Northeastern corridor is home to many white elephants. What is happening in one rural area where the states of Connecticut and New York meet offers an illustration of several imaginative salvage operations.

In Sharon, Conn., for example, the former William F. Buckley Sr., estate is being turned into Great Elm with division of the 15,000-square-foot house into five condominium apartments and subdivision of the acreage into 14 homesites. Some of the acreage is being left open, as it has been since 1760 when the house was built.

Nearby in Amenia, N.Y., Troutbeck, the former home of Joel Spingarn, one of the founders of the NAACP, has been turned into an executive conference center during the week and a country inn and restaurant on weekends.

Troutbeck's 422 acres and lake will soon be developed with 35 homes, plus open land and recreational amenities for those who will live there.

The price of such renovations is not cheap. Homes at Troutbeck will range from $250,000 to $400,000 and at Great Elm, the asking prices for the condominium apartments start at $175,000 and for the homesites at $60,000.

Furthermore, the Sharon development does not sit well with all its neighbors. G. Laurence McGowan, developer of Great Elm, said turning crumbling former estates into paying propositions is rarely considered a good thing by all the neighbors.

"People are fearful there will be a negative impact on their property. They don't realize that if these places aren't developed in some fashion, they will end up being razed. It can cost between $100,000 and $150,000 a year just to keep a huge place like Great Elm empty," said McGowan.

At Great Elm, Jane Buckley Smith explained what led her family to develop their ancestral home. "We simply couldn't keep it up, but we did want to preserve it if possible." The family hired a firm to study what could be done to preserve the property.

A school, an inn, a corporate headquarters or a conference center were considered, but the rambling house seemed particularly suited to conversion into apartments, she said. Two members of the family have purchased condominium apartments and will continue to live on the place and one has bought a homesite.

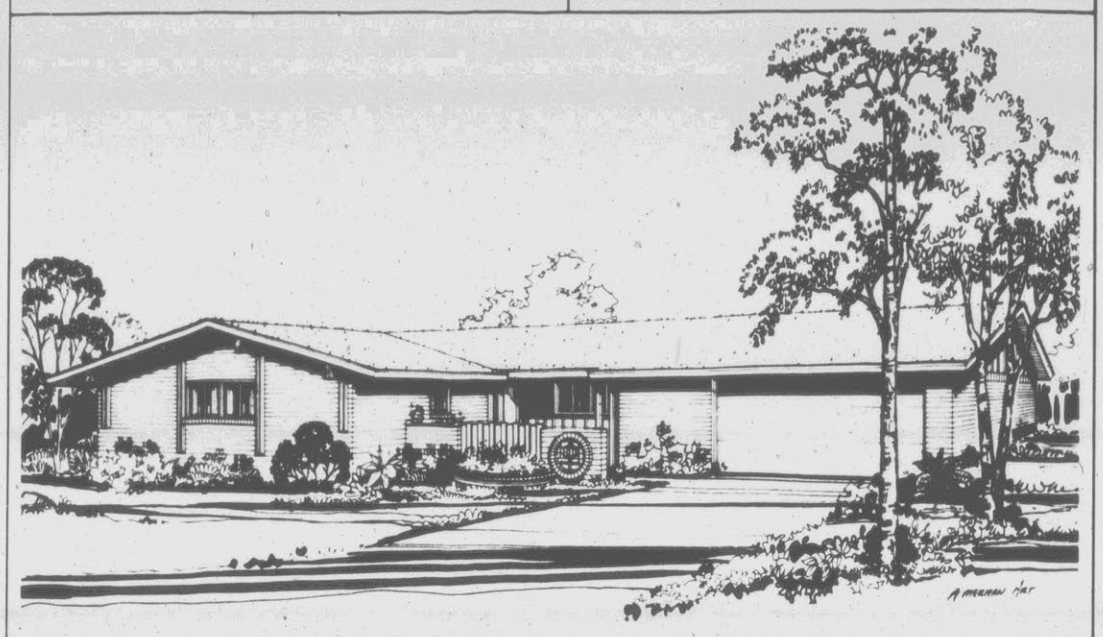

Walking through the now-empty rooms of the house, once filled with furniture and accessories which were auctioned last year, raised another question: What happens to the furnishings when an old place is broken up or taken for other uses?

The answer was supplied by Elizabeth Fitch and Sally Kain, who run estate sales in the area from their Sharon headquarters. The two women have built a business over the past seven years by holding such estate sales. Each year over the Memorial Day weekend they run a consignment sale.

"Many of our consignors are moving from large homes they can no longer afford to maintain. Money may be short. Their children may not want their old things. So instead of keeping them, they are turning them into dollars," said Mrs. Kain.

Consignment sales and recycled mansions go together, the two women said. And, they added, both are reassuring developments. After all, recycling the past is better than throwing it away.

PLAN YOUR HOME — The Peachtree

Excellent Traffic Pattern Benefits Plan

By Jerry Bishop

Bedrooms, living room and family room are within steps of the entry and are reached without cross-traffic in the Peachtree, a compactly-designed ranch style.

The plan is, above all, functional. It saves steps wherever possible, placing storage areas where needed and tucking laundry equipment into the kitchen within easy reach.

Simple lines detail the exterior, with brick siding suggested for a low maintenance dwelling. Wide overhangs give shelter from baking sun or driving rain, a particular asset in areas prone to heavy storms or hot summers. A similar function is served by the entry porch; in addition, it is large enough to hold furniture and be used as a porch.

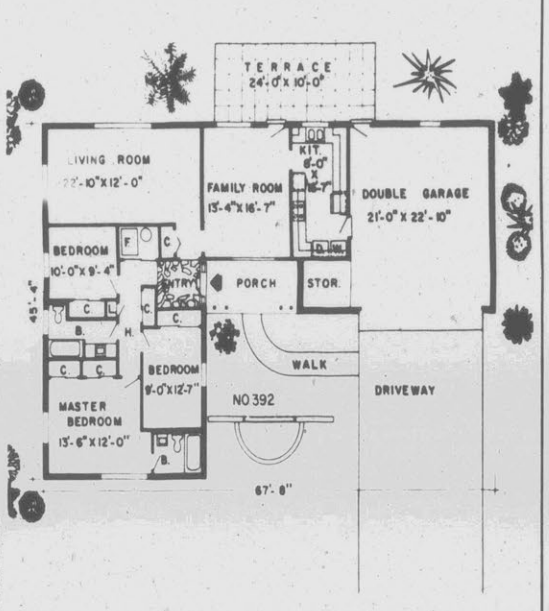

A flagstone entry greets visitors, channels traffic, and protects living areas from muddy shoes or wet clothes. The coat closet is set near the living room for efficiency.

Plenty of room and plenty of light make the living room an effective entertainment center. Nearly 23 feet in length, the room overlooks the back yard through large windows. For more informal moments, the neighboring family room absorbs activity and is extended via the terrace. With easy access to garage and kitchen, the terrace is well-placed to cater barbecues or serve as a child's play yard.

The kitchen is unusual. Long and narrow, its design dictates a wealth of counter space and benefits from a laundry niche at one end. Another welcome feature is the garage entry which simplifies grocery shopping.

Bedrooms are grouped in the left wing of the plan, with closets, living room, and foyer serving as buffer zones. Featured is the master bedroom, a double-closeted unit with full private bath. Equally handy to two smaller bedrooms, another bath is also fairly near living areas.

The Peachtree displays ample storage space, including a large storage room at the end of the double garage and two hall closets in the sleeping wing.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. —Over the years I have painted quite a number of rooms inside the three houses we have owned. Soon I would like to try something new — painting the outside of our present house. The outside has horizontal wood siding. Is there some special way to paint this kind of siding? The problem is that I have always used a paint brush, never a roller, and I don't think I would like to try the roller at this time and on this kind of surface.

A. —You are not alone in thinking that painting siding can be easier with a brush than a roller, although I personally prefer a roller. First, be sure you don't have too much paint on the brush, otherwise it will run down the handle as you paint the undersides of the projections. These undersides must be painted first. Next, do the main part of the siding, using sweeping, back-and-forth strokes to apply the paint and the same kind of strokes, but with a lighter touch, to smooth out the paint. When doing the undersides of the projections, it is necessary to use only the tips of the bristles. If you are using latex, you probably will not get lap marks and you might not even get them with some newer kinds of oil paints, but it's still a good idea to finish at least one side of the house at a time. Try not to stop in the middle of a side to answer the telephone or eat lunch.

Q. —We want to finish our basement and plan to have a toilet. How can this be done without tearing up the concrete floor, since the sewer pipe is above the basement floor?

A. —On the assumption that you will hire a plumber for such a professional job, tell him you want one of the up-flushing toilets now in use. They are made especially for this purpose, but are not always available everywhere. If your plumber balks at getting one, get another plumber.

Q. —I have to do some outside wiring soon and wonder whether it is necessary to use a ground-fault interrupter?

A. —Why wouldn't you want to use it? It might save your life or someone else's someday. A ground-fault interrupter is required by the Electrical Code. It works as a kind of fuse, protecting you if the circuit begins to leak electricity from the outside line.

Q. —There is a hole in our asphalt driveway somewhat different than the one a reader of your column had recently and which you advised him about. Mine is a lot larger, above 6 inches deep and 2 feet square. It seems to me that merely putting asphalt patching material in the hole will gobble up a lot of it and perhaps not be very solid when it hardens. How do I handle it?

A. —Take out everything from the hole that is loose, including sand or dirt. When you have a solid bottom, put half a dozen or so rocks there. Cover everything with gravel to 4 to 5 inches from the top. Tamp all this down lightly. Don't pound it. After it is fairly smooth, pour in the patching compound and level it with a float or trowel that should be dipped in clean water every so often. Do this until there is enough patcher to bring everything to an inch or so from the driveway surface. Tamp once again, this time with a little more firmness. Now add more patching material, bringing it about half an inch above the surrounding surface. Once more, tamp, with controlled force this time. After a day or two, cover with a light coating of asphalt sealer.

Q. Rain. Rain. Rain. Among other things, I have wondered if it has washed out all the fertilizer that I put under my shrubs earlier in the spring? (J.D., Greensboro)

A. Most likely. It wouldn't hurt to give them another application. Use from five to 10 pounds of a complete fertilizer, such as 8-8-8, per 1,000 square feet of bed area. You may want to use a slow release nitrogen. This would be fine also.

Q. I would like to grow some fall tomatoes. Which is quicker, growing the plants from seed or starting with suckers from my present tomatoes? (L.D., Lexington)

A. Starting with suckers. They can be rooted and ready for transplanting in about 10 days after being removed from your present plants. It takes five to six weeks to get a ready-to-set transplant from seed. Simply pinch off the suckers when they are three to four inches long. Stick them in moist sand in a partially shaded location.

Q. When is the best time to root azaleas from stem cuttings and how can I get maximum livability? (B.G., Burgaw)

A. Midsummer is the best time. New stems are no longer succulent by midsummer, yet they have not hardened. Always take your cuttings from the current season's growth. Make them about six inches long and remove each one with a slanting cut. Strip the leaves from the lower half of the cutting and dip the cut end in a rooting stimulant or hormone. Insert the cutting to about half its length in a root medium. A good medium consists of a mixture of half sand and half peat moss. Keep the cuttings exposed to daylight but never to direct sunlight. Keep moist and make sure they have good drainage. They should root in about two months. Grow them through one winter in a coldframe before transplanting to a permanent site.

Q. My cucumber vines are not producing many cucumbers and I was told the problem might be poor pollination. Since I don't have any bees, what can I do about this problem? (G.C., Elm City)

A. If you have only a few cucumbers, you can "play bee" with a cue tip. Just take the cue tip and stick it in the center of each flower. Move from flower to flower, and in this way you spread pollen as the bees would do. Try this for a few days and see if you get results. The best time of day to "play bee" is usually between 9 and 11 each morning. Pollen is more viable in the morning and by 9 o'clock it is usually dry.

Q. I noticed tomato plants coming up in my vegetable garden this year that I did not plant. Will these grow and produce as well as newly planted tomato plants? (D.H., Durham)

A. "Wolunteer" tomatoes can be just as vigorous and productive as newly planted tomatoes. However, if you originally planted a special hybrid variety, then the second generation will be genetically difference and will not be true to type. The apperance of the plant and fruit will tell you if this is the case. At any rate, you will get tomatoes of one sort or another. You might replant thse volunteer plants if they are growing into adult plants.

Q. Will extremely hot weather — above 95 degrees — keep cucumbers from setting fruit? (H.N., St. Pauls)

A. Yes, in an around and about way. Female cucumber flowers must be visited by bees or other insects in order to be pollinated, and bees stay home when the temperature soars to 95. Bees try to protect the honey by moving their wings rapidly to fan the hive. When bees are needed for this purpose, they are not available to pollinate cucumbers.

Even though the word adhesive is used interchangeably with glue and cement these days, old-time woodworkers used only the word glue to describe the bonding materials with which they worked. There were various kinds of glue, some of which had to be heated before being spread, but the principle of using glue hasn't changed.

The saying was, "If you want a good joint, make a good joint." Once that is done, the glue will bond the pieces together indefinitely. There's even a condition to that statement. You must use the proper glue for your particular project. Well-glued joints remain secure even when the wood around them breaks.

No matter what you read here or anywhere else, no matter what you recall about a particular type and brand of glue from using it in the past, never buy a container of adhesive until you read the label. That's the only way you will know whether it is suitable for the job you have coming up.

A typical example is the fairly new cyanoacrylate, the very powerful bonder which requires the use of only a drop or two to make a strong adhesion. Its reputation has been based on its truly amazing results with certain kinds of materials, but not with wood or other porous items. But today you can purchase a cyanoacrylate which does an excellent job of binding wood to wood. Be certain you know which kind you are buying.

The label-reading is important for another reason. It tells you whether the product is flammable or toxic or both. Again, don't go by what it was when you last bought it. You now can purchase contact cement and other adhesives which need not be hazardous.

Speaking of contact cement, while it does not have to be clamped while drying, wood glues in general must be held together during the curing process. You should have some types of wood clamps or other fasteners on hand for this purpose, but if you don't, use your imagination. Weights, strings, wires and tapes sometimes can be used while the glue is drying.

You will find that directions for regluing old joints always tell you to remove the old adhesive or old paint or other finish before applying the new. That's because the new glue will hold only as long as the old material does. The bond may seem to be very secure initially, but will come loose when the material underneath pulls away from the surface.

Epoxy adhesives are very strong, usually come in two parts which must be mixed and sometimes require no clamping. The so-called white glues are excellent on paper, cloth, cardboard and similar porous materials. They are inexpensive and will also work on wood, but should not be used where there is much stress. Resorcinol glue has great strength for wooden joints.

Sky's The Limit For 'Highrise Joe'

By K.C. MASON

DENVER (UPI) — Being blind from birth has not stopped "Highrise Joe" Engressia from fulfilling his dreams of independence, becoming an electronic whiz and communicating with people.

This summer, he moved, alone, to Minneapolis.

"There's a saying in Minnesota that the cold weather keeps the riff-raff out" said Engressia, 33, before making the move. "That may be true, but I'm coming anyway."

Engressia said the move was part of a plan to be "warmer in the winter." He said a new covered Skyway in Minneapolis allows him to shop, bank, work and live in a highrise apartment building without ever having to put on a coat.

Engressia lived alone in his 12th floor apartment near downtown Denver for the past seven years. He endeared himself to battered women's shelters, abused children's groups, communications specialists and radio talk show fans.

His first love is people. The second is talking to them on the telephone. He was listed in the Denver phone book — under Joe Engressia, Highrise Joe and Dial-A-Friendly Conversation. One of his phones in Minneapolis will be reached by dialing FEELING.

His highrise apartment lifestyle is a symbol of his independence. He moved to Denver from Memphis in 1975 because Memphis didn't have any highrise apartment buildings with an indoor swimming pool.

"Teachers and counselors told me a blind person could never make it on his own and I would be in a home all my life," he said. "The highrise became a symbol of the impossibility."

A year ago, Engressia became the first blind person to pass the exam for a 2nd Class radio-telegraph license with aircraft telegraph endorsement. It was the 15th FCC license he has acquired since obtaining a ham license in 1962.

Engressia made up for his lack of sight by developing such a perfect sense of hearing that he can whistle tones into the telephone to call anywhere in the world, or trouble-shoot for the phone company by listening to the sounds of the equipment.

"I was running out of money and couldn't get a job so I decided to plan my arrest to get the phone company noticing me," Engressia explained.

"I reported some trouble in the phone system and when the phone company tested my line, I whistled a series of tones that would call the U.S. Embassy in Moscow free through a satellite circuit synchronous orbit."

"After we got off Moscow, I got on a military circuit called Autovon (Automatic Voice Network) and called on a priority flash override to a missile site and asked 'is mommy there?'"

Engressia was charged with possession and use of devices that would make free calls. He denied using any device. The charge was reduced to malicious mischief. He got a suspended sentence.

After living on Social Security disability benefits and conducting telephone solicitations in Denver for 18 months, Engressia met Lloyd Leger, a Mountain Bell Telephone Co. vice president. It wasn't long before Leger discovered his unique talents and hired Highrise Joe as a trouble-shooter.

"I've been doing phone stuff since I was 8 years old," Engressia said. "I can dial into systems anywhere in the country and can tell by the sound what kind of system it is and where the trouble is."

Engressia's life history gives him a special kind of empathy for the children in family crisis and battered women's shelters.

"I tell them how neat life is and try to share a little joy," he said.

"People call from all over the country," he said. They include "prostitutes who want to give it up, drug addicts who need help and one little kid who just wanted to talk about the first home run he hit in Little League."

"He always has his own unique sense of humor and people are interested in what he says and knows about phone equipment," said Tessler.

Engressia has often been a guest of talk shows and hosted one for eight months. "I went to visit the station and the host didn't show up."

Engressia has an acronym for his white cane: EDITH — Early Detection of Idiotic Tripping Hazards.

He is serious about living up to his acronym for HIGHRISE — harmony, integrity, gratitude, health, rebirth, imagination, self confidence and enthusiasm.

The car rental people make it sound so easy. You step off the plane and your wheels are waiting for you. What they don't tell you is:

It doesn't make sense. You're being thrown together with $7,000 worth of electronics but you've had more instruction on how to ride an elevator.

Ever sit in traffic and try to pick out people driving rental cars? It's easy. He's usually the guy with the windshield wipers going back and forth when the sun is shining. Or the woman who releases her hood going 60 miles an hour on the expressway...with her eyes closed.

Recently, I rented a talking car. From Japan. My car doesn't talk. It's tried to communicate on a few occasions, but it sounded expensive so I ignored it.

No sooner was I settled in this car than a voice said, "Your trunk is open." Now that line may be a scream in Japan, but not to me, who couldn't find the trunk in the first place and whose luggage was piled on the front seat beside me.

"You brake is on," she said mechanically.

When I returned the car, the girl at the desk said, "Whey are your keys?" I motioned to the parking lot. "Let her tell you."

There was the car sitting alone in the darkness with a voice saying over and over, "Your keys are in the ignition. Your keys are in the ignition. Your keys are in the ig--"

Would it have killed her to tell me how to get them out?

African Art Guards Spirit Of The Dead

By CHARLOTTE MOSER
Smithsonian News Service

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The shiny, dark, baby-like figure with the big eyes now squatting awkwardly in the middle of the museum exhibit has a past of nearly forgotten dignity.

Day after day, night after night, for many generations, the tiny man-child sculpture kept a wide-eyed vigil as he perched on the edge of a large shrine in a village of the African forest. As a spiriutal guardian for the Fang people of Central Africa, he had the somber responsibility of protecting the bones of his people's ancestors gathered in the basket or box beneath him.

The figure, still sweating from countless libations of palm oil over the years, is not a simple African version of a headstone. And the bones — principally skulls and legs — were not gathered in sentimental reverence for village forebears. Instead, the bones were reminders of the ancestral wisdom whicn guided the everyday life of the people; the figure, their symbol of the continuity of life and death.

In most African cultures, birth, death, rebirth and after-life are parts of a cycle of existence facilitated at every turn by these carved or molded images. To western eyes, the masks and sculpted figures appear as art objects alone, but to Africans, they mean much more. Sentinels for the smooth passage of the soul, they are both summations of the past and augurs for the future in the African search for a life free from uncertainty.

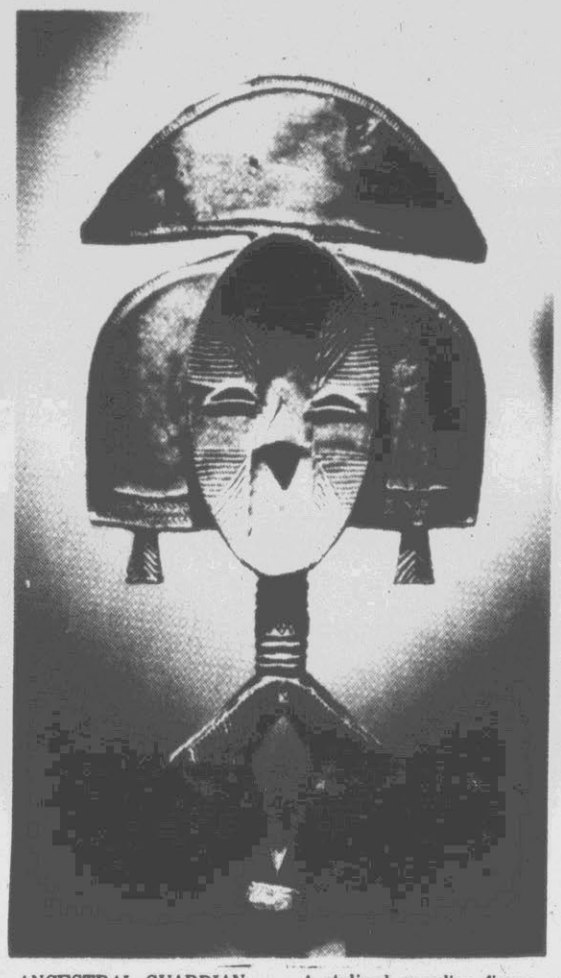

"Life is a revolving door in African religions. You pass out of it and back into it," Edward Lifschitz, coordinator of academic studies at the Smithsonian's National Museum of African Art, says. "In a sense, you never die because your spirit is always reborn in some form."

Thus, the reliquary figure guarding the dead is both "reborn" infant and full-grown adult. Like a baby, its head — in most primitive art, the respository for all wisdom — is disproportionately large for its stubby infant limbs. Yet, its strong, well-define muscles and genitalia describe a man in prime physical form strong enough to protect ancestral spirits from the most earthly abuse.

The passage into spiritual exisence provided by death, thus, is a time for celebration as much as for mourning.

African funerals honoring the dead are elaborte rituals making maximum use of symbolic images — memorial shrine objects, masks, grave gifts — to ensure the proper transfer of power, both spiritual and earthly.

ANCESTRAL GUARDIAN . . . A stylized guardian figure from the west-central African country of Gabon is intended to watch over ancestral skulls and bones. African funerary artifacts, collected in the Western world as art, has a complex function in African tribal society. (Photo courtesy of Delmar Lipp, National Museum of African Art).

Westerners don't like to think about that," Lifschiz, one of the organizers of the museum's exhibition, "Life . . . After-life: African Funerary Sculpture," says. "Most pre-industrial people are directly dependent on nature's cycles, whether in agriculture or in life, and it's important to understand that context in their art."

According to African myth, originally human beings never died but were automaticaly rejuvenated or transformed into other living things when they became old. To incorporate the unavoidable presence of death into that mythology, the idea of a dual exitence emerged. The body of a man may die, but his spirit continues eternally, gaining strength with each generation.

African funerals emphasize this duality. On one level, the funeral has a social function. While burial in tropical countries take place immediately after death, elaborately planned funerals may occur weeks or even years later and, depending on the deceased's importance, they can last for days. If a village chief dies, the funeral reognizes the re-ordering of the social structure by initiating new leaders. Social obligations can be repaid through ritualistic mourning.

"The funeral shows that the deceased is still a part of society and that the lines of kinship are still strong," Lifschitz says.

More complex is the role that funerals play in African art and religion. For most Africans, ancestral spirits are potent forces among the living. As University of Indiana art historian Roy Sieber describes it, they become "lobbyists in the spirit world" to ensure the security of the living with such things as rain for a good harvest. In most African cultures, powerful ancestral spirits are believed to be "captured," or given physical form, in arifacts used in ceremonies.

Different objects embody different aspects of the spirit. Wood or stone figures, used in private memorial shrines either in households or sheltered village areas, are portraits capturing the essences of the deceased.

Because the figures represent the dead, their eyes are frequently slit, as though closed, and the arms clasp the belly as a symbol of inward gazing.

Particular physical traits, unusual hairdos or garb related to status or occupation are emphasized in funerary sculpture. Figure of twins, a genetic phenomenon peculiarly frequent among the Yoruba people of Nigeria, are among popular funerary portaiture installed in household shrines.

Some of the most realistic royal portraiture comes from the Benin people of Nigeria. Their cast bronze sculpture, requiring metallurgy skills, relays both the appearance and relative status of the rulers. Ornate crowns with dangling chains and beaded necklaces designate rank while five-foot-high ivory elephant tusks carved with metaphoric scenes from the ruler's life and mounted atop the bronze heads reprsent an apex in royal memorial portraiture.

Objects used by the deceases are also included in memorial tributes. Among the Baule, Agni and Ashanti people of the Ivory Coast and Ghana, stools, believed to house the souls of their owners, are turned on their sides and blackened with a mxiture of soot and egg yolk before being added to the memorial shrine. Terra cotta containers, costumes and fabrics belonging to the deceased can also be part of memorial shrines.

Masks, on the other hand, are important elements in the public drama which plays out the mythical journey of the soul from the physical to the spiritual. The masks, worn by close relatives, friends and associates of the dead, lure free-floating ancestral spirits into assuming physical form and, at the same time, protect the dancers who impersonate spirits.

"Trapped in the mask, (the deceased's life force) is controlled, one might say exploited, and then redisributed for the benefit of the collectivity," art historian Jean Laude of Paris' Musee de l'Homme writes. "But the mask also safeguards the dancer who, during the ceremony, must be protected from the infuence of the instrument he manipulates."

A mask's expression may indicate a range of meaning, from the deceased's sense of adult responsibility to his membership in an important communal society. Among the Senufo people of the Ivory Coast, a hornbill bird — symbol of death and rebirth — often decorates masks used in funeral celebration. Masks are also interchangeable; a mask used in agricultural ceremonies can also be used in the funeral of a farmer.

While the most effective masks are carved, some are made from a conglomeratino of nails, shotgun shells, leather and fibers. If a mask is found to be unreliable or damaged, however, it can be discarded.

Of all the African funerary arts, grave gifts are the most temporal. These objects — which are more valuable according to the status of the deceased — are buried with the dead to aid his journey to afterlife. In addition to food and drink, gifts include personal aricles — such as headrests or containers, which the living think the deceased might need.

Woven and dye raffia cloth, an expensive article in both money and labor to produce, are frequent royal gifts among the Kuba people of Zaire. Even funeral mourners exchange gifts. One tradition in Ziare is to exchange funeral mementoes called "bongotal." These elaborately patterned blocks of pressed camwood are also frequently buried with the coffin.

The cycle of life, death and afterlife is thus completed, the mourners engaged once again with life among men and the dead prepared for re-birth in another form. From start to finish and back again, art tells the complex story of African existence.

Monroe Appointed

Dr. Edwin W. Monroe, associate dean of East Carolina University School of Medicine and director of the Eastern Area Health Education Center, was recently appointed to the advisory board of the Kate B. Reynolds Health Care Trust.

The trust, a private foundation headquartered in Winston-Salem, was created in 1946 through provisions in the will of Mrs. William N. Reynolds for the purpose of improving health care to the people of North Carolina. Approximately $1.5 million is awarded annually in grants to non-profit organizations throughout the state.

The 11-member advisory board meets twice a year to consider grant requests and make recommendations to the foundations trustees.

Warheads Will Be U.S. 'Chips'

WASHINGTON (AP) — New MX missiles, advanced bombers or sea-launched missiles will not be U.S. bargaining chips in the strategic arms reductions talks with the Soviet Union, according to a senior U.S. official.

"What we're offering to give up is an equal number of warheads," said the official, who spoke with reporters Thursday on the condition he not be identified. "I don't envisage being in a position to say we're prepared to give up one of these (new weapon) systems."

The official said that even if the talks, which begin Tuesday in Geneva, result in lower limits on U.S. and Soviet nuclear warheads, the United States will need land-based strategic weapons systems to maintain a nuclear deterrent.

Lee Majors Falls For 'The Fall Guy'

After Lee Majors' fourth television series, "The Six Million Dollar Man," was canceled, he said that he would never star in another series. To prove his claim, Majors began his non-bionic years by cranking out several "B" movies and turning his back on episodic television. Finally, due to a fluke meeting with an ABC producer in the Los Angeles Airport, Majors was persuaded to come back to the roost. The decision appears to have been a wise one.

With the release of ABC's "The Fall Guy" (Wednesdays, 9-10 p.m.), Majors seems to have found a winning formula. This comedy-adventure series marks the first time that Majors has stepped outside of a drama format, and he likes it. In fact, the chance to do comedy is the reason Majors gives for ending his self-exile from network television.

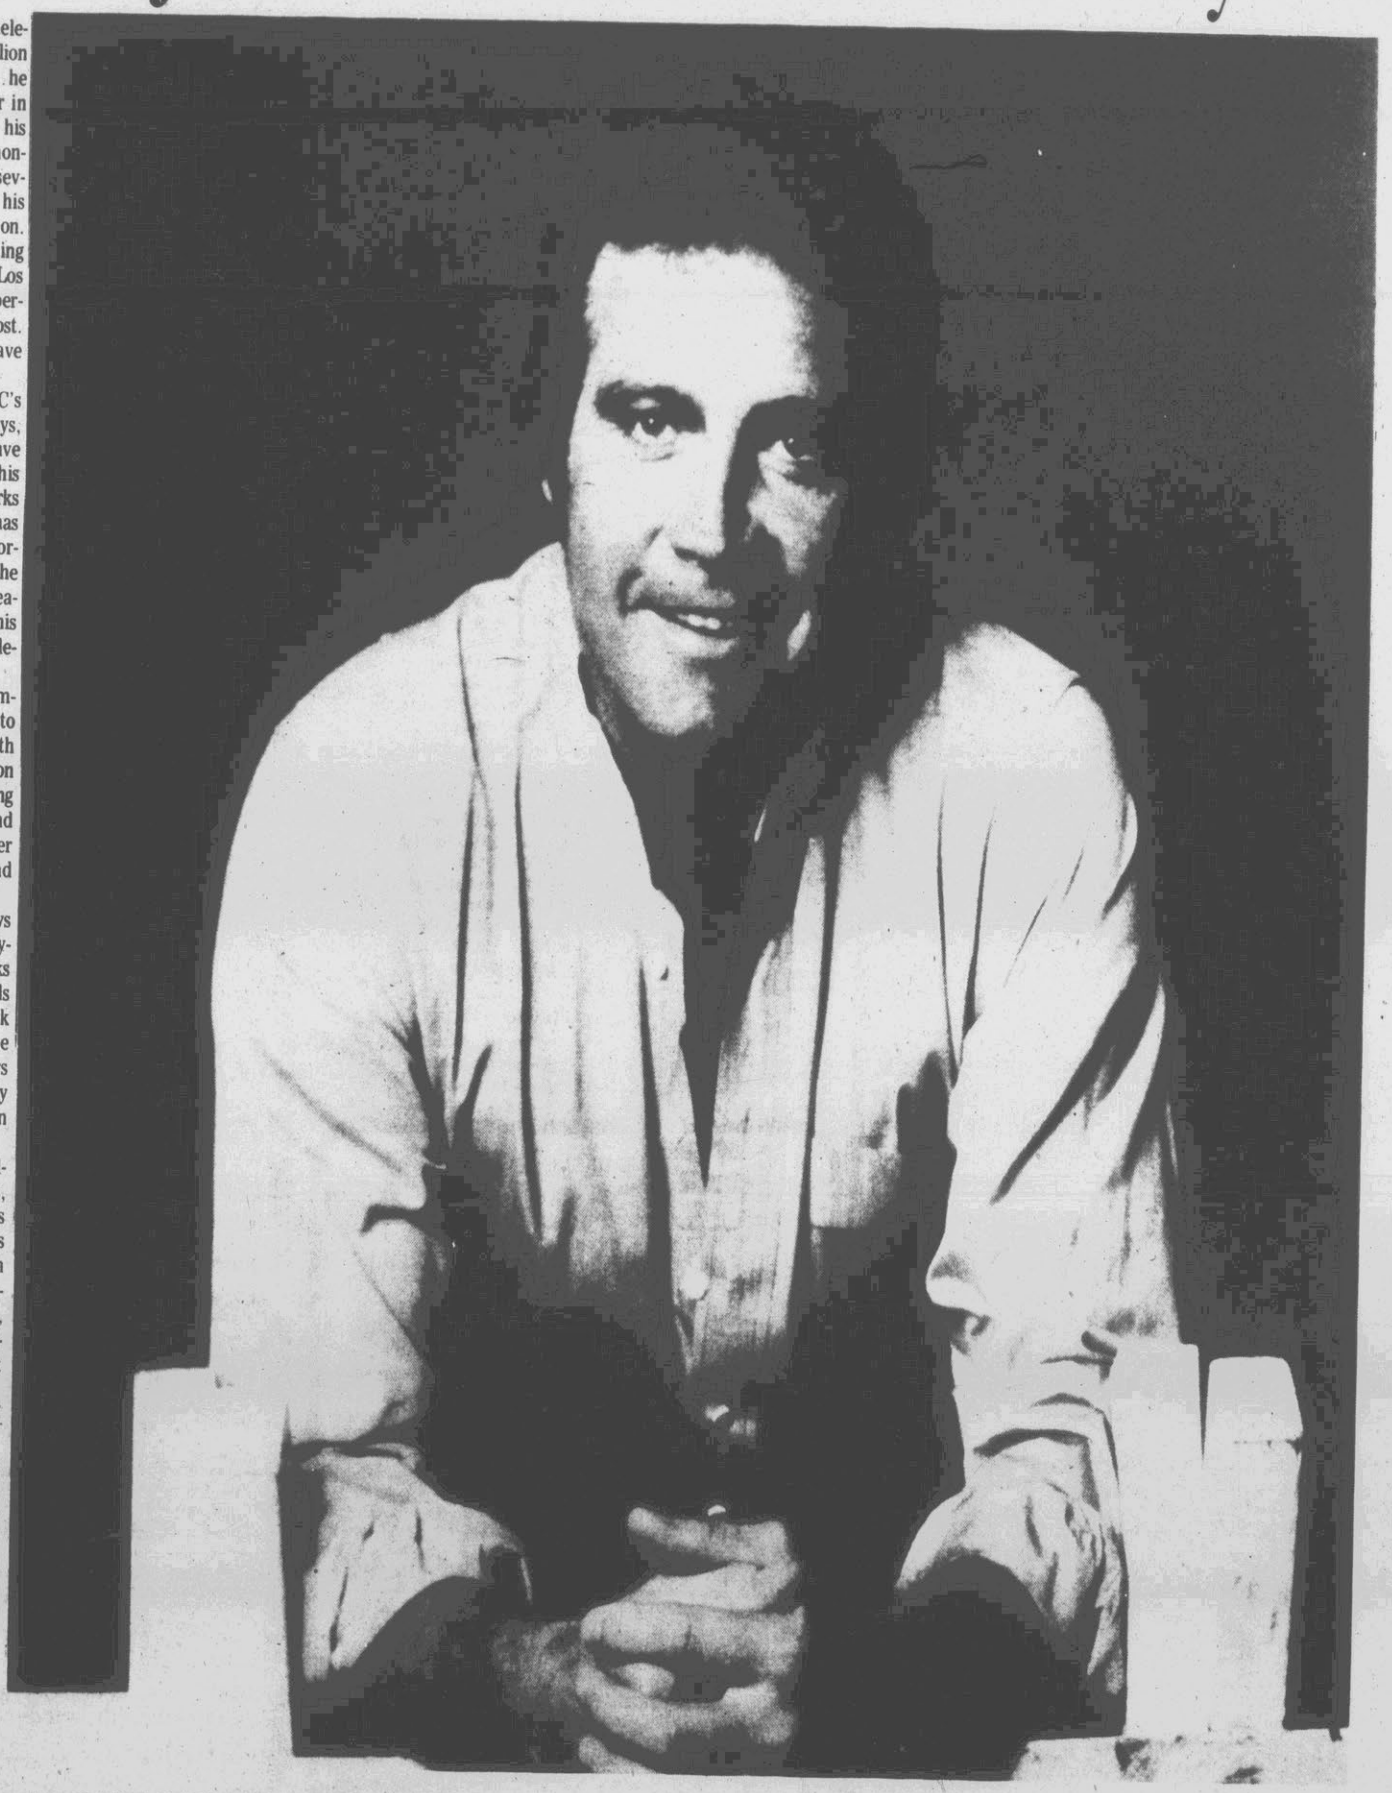

"I've got to correct my image," he explained, trying to shake his identification with Steve Austin, the Six Million Dollar Man. "I'm tired of having kids stop me on the street and asking me to lift a girder weighing several thousand pounds."

In "The Fall Guy," he plays Colt Seavers, a veteran Hollywood stuntman who also works as a bounty hunter to make ends meet. Even though stunt work pays well, the assignments are few and far between, and Seavers must pick up the slack — usually by working for bail bondswoman "Big Jack" (Jo Ann Pflug).

Seavers is no longer the devil-may-care stuntman he once was, and he often has to rely on his experience rather than his muscles to pull him through tough spots. Fortunately, his protege, Jody (Heather Thomas), can be counted on when experience and muscles alone can't do the job.

Help also comes in the form of Seavers' "business partner"-cousin, Howie Munson (Douglas Barr), who, despite having had seven years of college, is still wet behind the ears. However, Howie makes up for his inexperience with cheerful determination as he tags along with the cousin he idolizes.

The theme song for "The Fall Guy" definitely is an in-house affair. The song, entitled "The Unknown Stuntman," is sung by Majors and co-written by Glen Larson, the show's executive producer and creator.

LEE MAJORS STARS as daredevil Hollywood stuntman Colt Seavers in ABC's fun-filled adventure series, 'The Fall Guy," airing Wednesdays (9-10 p.m.).

Protecting A Prime Minister

An irrepressible group of teenagers tries to protect the beautiful Prime Minister of a small Middle Eastern country from a tough team of would-be assassins, in "The Double McGuffin," airing Sunday, June 27 (7-9 p.m.) on ABC.

In the story, the Prime Minister (Elke Sommer) is attending a function at a Southampton, Va., school with her daughter. Security officer Firat (Ernest Borgnine) is along for protection, but it soon becomes clear to the youngsters at the school that with protection like that she better not make any dates for next week.

Unfortunately, the kids can't convince the local police chief that the Prime Minister is in danger...he has been tricked too often to believe anything they say about anything.

So, unless the youngsters want their hometown turned into an international murder site, they will have to take care of business themselves. And they do.

Greg Hodges, former Mouseketeer Lisa Whelchel and Dion Pride (son of country singer Charley Pride) are among the youngsters who smell something fishy when they find a briefcase filled with money, which, to them, is clear evidence that a murder is being arranged.

Ed (Too Tall) Jones and Lyle Alzado — who have been known to threaten life and limb in reality as defensive linemen for, respectively, the Dallas Cowboys and the Oakland Raiders — are featured as the definately offensive "hit team."

IN "The Double McGuffin," Elke Sommer portrays the beautiful Prime Minister of a small Middle Eastern country whose life is in danger. The movie will be broadcast on Sunday, June 27 (7-9 p.m.), on ABC.

It's Hip But Tacky

Dianne Neil plays Ruby Wright on "Texas." One of the most unusual characters on daytime television, Ruby is a cocksure country-music businesswoman with comedic overtones. Her distinctive look — short-shorts, miniskirts, cowboy boots, western jackets and sweatwear — is a result of a shopping spree in which she says, "Costume designer Lewis Brown and I bought everything we thought looked hip but tacky."

TV Chatter

By Polly Vonetes

Talented DEBBIE ALLEN of "FAME" has just returned from a "terrific vacation" that began with a cruise on the 'Love Boat' to Greece and Italy — then she and her husband took off for Egypt on their own, where she was delighted to find fans in Cairo who recognized her and beseiged her for autographs — that's fame.

It is definite now that LANA TURNER will return to "FALCON CREST" in four special guest-star appearances. She will return to Napa Valley with secret information enabling her son, ROBERT FOXWORTH, to keep his vineyard from the control of Angie Channing played by Jane Wyman.

NELL CARTER, of "GIMME A BREAK," takes her break by refusing to watch herself on television. It makes her uncomfortable, because she says, she sees a pimple she didn't know was there or sees something bigger than she thought it was.

ROCK HUDSON is very pleased with the scripts that were rewritten for his new series "DEVLIN" which he describes as a "high-styled mystery show." Believe me the "ROCK" is more handsome than ever even though he is twenty pounds lighter than last year due to his heart by-pass surgery.

KEVIN DOBSON has been signed as a regular cast member on "KNOTS LANDING." KEVIN will portray a district attorney who will become romantically involved with MICHELE LEE.

Discussions are being conducted among NBC executives on the merits of salvaging "FLAMINGO ROAD" as a possible daytime serial on the network. Of course, many of the "biggies" like MORGAN FAIRCHILD will not be returning to the daytime version.

JARED MARTIN, who has appeared as Dusty on "DALLAS," will be heading for Rome soon to play the matinee idol in the Harold Robbins novel "LONELY LADY" opposite PIA ZADORA.

DANNY DE VITO translated for me exactly what his mom said in Italian on the "SATURDAY NIGHT LIVE" show when told that "TAXI" had been canceled — according to Danny she said: "The devil ABC — the stupid jackasses." It seems others felt the same way — HBO put in a bid for the show along with NBC.

There is no doubt in anyone's mind that DIANA ROSS will be able to fill the 60,000-seat Yankee Stadium during her concert there this summer.

NBC is the first network to announce that it is returning to the pre-strike days of television and will premiere its entire new schedule of shows in their time slots during the week of September 27th.

Just Another Face

Actor Wayne Tippit of "Search for Tomorrow" spent three weeks last summer working on the motion picture "Taps," as Timothy Hutton's Army-tough father. Though his performance was memorable, some folks forget the performer.

"People say they love the role and how dramatic it was," said Tippit. "But the trouble is, they don't realize it was me."

This Time, She's The Victim

"I was so glad when this part came along, because I wanted to get as far away from my 'Dallas' role of Kristin Sheppard as I possibly could," said Mary Crosby, who stars in "Midnight Lace," to be rebroadcast on NBC's Monday Night at the Movies, June 28 (9-11 p.m.).

Instead of the villainess, Miss Crosby is playing the victim in this updated version of the 1960 movie of the same title, which starred Doris Day and Rex Harrison.

In the suspense drama, heiress Cathy Preston (Miss Crosby) is achieving success as a glamorous reporter and seems happily married to her new husband, record producer Brian Preston (Gary Frank). Aunt Sylvia (Celeste Holm), the matriarch of the family, lives nearby and is supportive, aware that Cathy, as a small child, saw her insane mother jump off a cliff at Carmel.

But Cathy's happiness is dimmed when she starts to receive mysterious phone calls. And when she hears a child's voice come hauntingly out of the fog during her television assignments — including one on Alcatraz Island — she begins to question her sanity.

MARY CROSBY STARS as a television reporter stalked by a mysterious would-be assassin who follows her while she works, in "Midnight Lace," airing Monday, June 28 (9-11 p.m.), on NBC-TV.

Brian calls the police and Lt. Sam Ackerman (Shecky Greene) is put on the case. He appears to have it solved when a weirdo named Herman (Blackie Dammett) is picked up, but the haunting voice and other harassments continue until Cathy's car is involved in a fatal hit-and-run accident.

It's not until Cathy returns to Carmel with Brian in an effort to "get away from it all" that the pieces fall into place.

"Midnight Lace," which Ivan Nagy directed from a Jerry Ludwig screenplay, also stars Carolyn Jones as Bernadette, Susan Tyrrell as Ann Galvin and Robin Clarke as Craig Clinton.

She Learns Fast

Loretta Swit stars in "Games Mother Never Taught You," a new motion picture-for-television about the first executive in an office where men have made the rules, now in production for future broadast on CBS.

Talented, hard-working Laura Bartels (Miss Swit) wants a happy marriage, good friends and success in her career but discovers there seem to be rules against her having all three. However, once she learns the game, she goes into unique action against her stunned opponents.

RAPID TRANSIT FOR THE "PEANUTS" turns into a perilous adventure when they are challenged to a "white water" river race through the rapids by a band of bullies, in "Race For Your Life, Charlie Brown," an animated feature film to be rebroadcast Wednesday, June 30 (8-9:30 p.m.), on CBS-TV.

IRS Honors Host

He was honored for hosting the 1982 tax show entitled "Your Tax Return — The Bottom Line On Improving Your Form."

Michele Will Tell

Q: Can you please tell me why Beverly McKinsey left "Texas"? Is she really the pushy type she portrays? Did she leave because she couldn't boss her way around? E. SKINNER, CLINTON, N.C.

Q: Who was the co-pilot in "No Time For Sergeants"? Was it Jamie Farr? If not him, it sure looked like him. DEBRA DICKENS, ROANOKE RAPIDS, N.C.

A: Jamie Farr did not appear in either the movie or television series "No Time For Sergeants." The series, which was first telecast on ABC-TV September 14, 1964, ended September 6, 1965. It starred Sammy Jackson as Airman Will Stockdale. The role of Airman Ben Whitledge, Will's co-pilot and best friend, was portrayed by Kevin O'Neal.

Q: Could you please tell me if Genie Francis will be returning to her role as Laura Webber Spencer on "General Hospital"? If not, will she be starring in any other TV shows or movies? B. AVANT, BLADENBORO, N.C.

A: Miss Francis is definitely NOT returning to "General Hospital." However, she has signed a contract with CBS-TV to appear in TV movies for them.

Q: A friend and I have a bet. He says the late Natalie Wood was Mexican, or of Latin decent. I say, she was of Russian ancestry. Who's right? DEBORAH LOWERY, PEMBROKE, N.C.

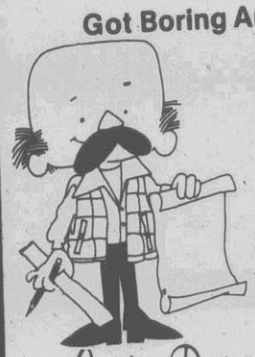

A: You are! Natalie Wood was of Russian ancestry.

Q: Can you settle an argument for me? I say Tony Danza, who plays a cab driver on the TV series "Taxi," is not married. My cousin says he is. Who's right? Can you give me some information on him? Also, where can I write to him? PEGGY WOOD, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

A: Tony Danza is single. He has a son, Marc Anthony, 10, from a previous marriage. Marc has appeared on "Taxi" with his father, in the role of Tony's young orphaned friend. The Brooklyn, New York native was born on April 21. A former pro boxer, he had an 8-3 record that included several spectacular knockouts. Tony continues to stay fit by using his own gym and by jogging. Write to him in c/o ABC-TV, 1330 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y., 10019.

Blakely Was Fit For Football

Susan Blakely was exhaused. The young actress had been playing football for nearly eight hours, and the late summer heat had finally taken its toll. The football was required by the part she was playing in a film that she feels will have a moving effect on the nation's women.

Blakely stars as the leader of a frustrated group of factory women who form a football team in "The Oklahoma City Dolls," a comedy to be rebroadcast as The ABC Friday Night Movie, July 2 (9-11 p.m.).

"All of us who were in the film went out and trained for our roles," she said. "We got in really good shape for filming and then, four days into production, the actors strike happened and we were shut down for three months. When we went back into production again, it was very hard because it was at the worst time of year for heat and smog in Los Angeles. But, all of us who did the film believed in what we were doing so we accepted the agony."

The basic premise of the movie involves a group of women who have to put in extra hours at their factory in order to let the men play football. They rebel, and the company allows them extra time off provided they, too, play football. Thus, they form a team and set out to prove to their men that they can handle the gridiron as well as the steam iron.

"I hope that women will realize from this film that they don't have to accept second-class citizenship from their employers. What the women in our film prove to themselves and their men is that they can do most of the things that men can do. We tell the story in a comedic way but I think it will have a serious effect on women. At least I hope it will."

Unknown Powers Appear

A boy whose passion for science doesn't allow for mysteries, and an old-fashioned witch who has been banished because her witchcraft is out of date join forces to discover that they both have powers they never appreciated, in "The Trouble With Miss Switch," an animated tale of magic and adventure, the first part of which will be rebroadcast as an ABC Weekend Specials presentation on Saturday, July 3 (noon-12:30 p.m.). Part Two will air the following Saturday, July 10.

"Miss Switch becomes a schoolteacher when she's banished from Witch Mountain for not having a 'specialty,'" said Marilyn Olin, ABC's Vice President of Children's Programming. "And — without realizing it — she performs the most perfect sort of modern witchcraft by simply being a very good and totally fair teacher.

"It takes the sensitive appreciation of a boy and a girl to show her this — but only after a series of hair-raising adventures on a midnight flight through the regions of darkness.

It also takes the witch's adult recognition of the unknown — and a few nifty tricks, like making the children float and conversing with her cat — to help the boy and girl learn to appreciate fantasy and the importance of mystery in life," she added.

In the story, Rupert and Amelia begin to suspect that their new teacher is something special when the blackboard wipes itself and a spitball stops in midair, turns around, and flies back to splat the smart aleck who aimed it at the teacher's back. They also discover that she is even more special when she proves to be a teacher who totally understands what it's like to be a kid.

Because she trusts them, Miss Switch lets them in on her secret — she's been banished to the world of ordinary people because she hasn't come up with any new magic, and the dreaded Comput-o-Witch is about to banish her to the Dead Forest.

"The Trouble With Miss Switch" is based on the book by Barbara Brooks Wallace.

BESIDES being a terrific schoolteacher, Miss Switch also has a few other super talents — such as piloting a broomstick with her best pupils as passengers — in "The Trouble With Miss Switch." Part One of this ABC Weekend Special will air on Saturday, July 3 (noon-12:30 p.m.).

24 Hours Of Wimbledon

Emmy Award-winning sportscaster Dick Enberg will again serve as primary host when NBC Sports presents a record 24-plus hours of coverage of the 105th All-England Tennis Championships from Wimbledon. On Saturday, July 3 (9 a.m.-2 p.m.), NBC will air the women's singles finals.

Additional coverage will be provided by match commentator Bud Collins; Charlie Jones, who will host the late-night updates and extended morning coverage during the tournament's final week; Byron Day, who will report on tournament developments both on and off the court; and contributing commentator Pete Axthelm, who will offer his observations on this uniquely English tennis tradition.

By the time the competitors in the women's and the men's finals are determined, the combatants may not even resemble the field that was envisioned at the beginning of the tournament. The unpredictable grass surface at Wimbledon has sent more than one top-seeded player into humiliating defeat, and more than one oddsmaker has been shot down, suffering a quick lesson in humility.

The women's singles final may be even harder to predict than the men's singles final, which will be broadcast the next day. The men's ranks at the start of the tournament are expected to be painfully lacking in big names — Borg, the winner of five consecutive Wimbledons, is out because of a rules dispute; Ivan Lendl, this season's hottest player on the men's tour, plans to take a break from his rigorous schedule, and also claims to be allergic to grass tennis surfaces; and Argentineans Guillermo Vilas and Jose Luis-Clerc are planning to skip the tournament because of the Falkland Islands crisis. That, more or less, leaves John McEnroe, the defending champion; Jimmy Connors, who has never won at Wimbledon; Peter McNamara, Vitas Gerulaitis and Roscoe Tanner.

The women's ranks are more tightly bunched. Chris Evert Lloyd will be defending her singles title, with a strong list of contenders breathing down her neck. Martina Navratilova, Tracy Austin, Hana Mandlikova, Andrea Jaeger and Pam Shriver are all quite capable of dethroning Evert Lloyd anywhere along the line.

Future Lawyer

Track star Willie Banks isn't always going to be breaking records competing in the triple jump. Currently enrolled at UCLA, he has just completed his second year of law school.

Always On Call

Performers must often be ready for last-minute surprises, even learning a new language. A few years ago, actress Millee Taggart of "Search for Tomorrow" found out the night before leaving New York for a California shooting that her part in the film "Young Doctors in Love" required some sign language.

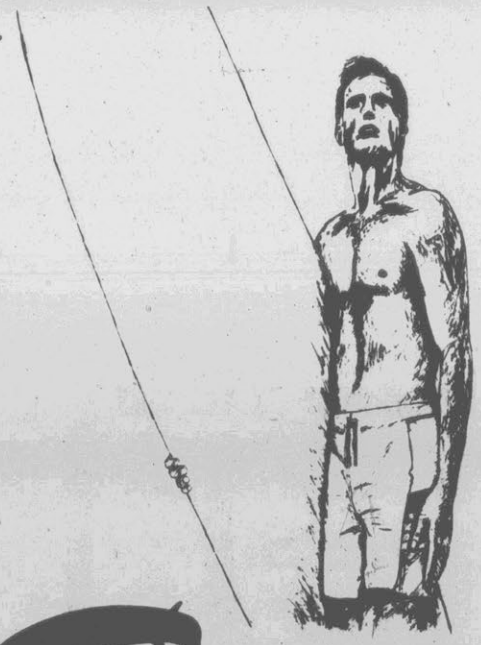

No problem for the veteran actress, however.

"At 5 a.m., there was a knock at my door and there was a deaf person ready to teach me my lines. She taught me the five lines; and I went to work."

The Good Old Days of Summer

Bathing suits and swimwear have come a very long way since the good old days of tank top style shirts and knee length bottoms. Todays active swimwear by Sundek is for a man with more contemporary tastes and an eye for styling. Sundeks are constructed of a highly durable nylon fabric, made to last for many a summer. They are available in all the colors of the rainbow and are distinguished by their unique trimwork.

New code doesn't add zip to mail.

FOR SENATOR DAVID F. DURENBERGER (R.-Minn.)

Why do you object to the proposed nine-digit ZIP code? —G.W.M., Albert Lea, Minn.

● A nine-digit ZIP code is far more difficult to remember. But worse, it puts all the burden of an efficient mail delivery system on private businesses and individuals. They'll have to go to the expense of converting their address lists to the new style for little or no return. Even the Postmaster General admits that the longer ZIP code will neither cut costs nor improve service. And the success of the nine-digit ZIP code depends on equipment which was chosen in 1978 and won't be implemented until 1986. The technology will be out of date before the machines are completely installed.

FOR ERIN GRAY, star of Sixpack

As a one-time Army wife, explain what life was like on base. —N.I., Tyler, Tex.

● The days can be boring, but traveling is an added benefit. I loved living in Germany, visiting Switzerland. Women on base were friendly and interested in sharing recipes and household problems. Some were content just being Army wives, but that kind of life was not enough for me.

FOR DICK CLARK, host of American Bandstand

What changes have you noticed in the youth of America in recent years? —K.G., Glendale, Calif.

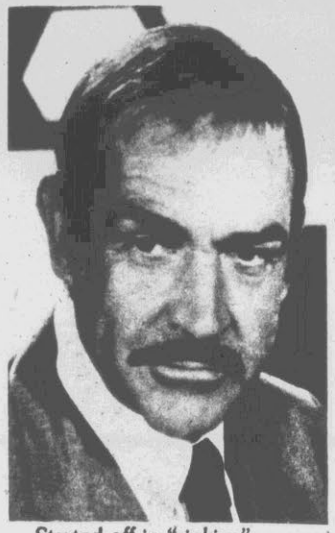

● Today's young people are growing old too soon. They have lost the youthful idealism of years gone by and are now very much a "what's in it for me?" generation. They have traded idealism for materialism. I believe their change in attitude reflects what they see and hear in the media.

FOR BARBARA NICHOLS, president, American Nurses' Association

● Qualifications and requirements for nursing personnel differ among hospitals. Normally, operating-room nurses receive special training, as do doctors who are specialists. Salaries vary widely and depend on education, experience and different hospitals.

FROM THE "ASK" EDITOR

CONFESSION: Before becoming an actor, Sean Connery — currently starring in Wrong Is Right — earned his daily bread as a plumber's apprentice. "Being a movie star in those days," he recalled, "was always a pipe dream."... COUNTRY: Anthony J.F. O'Reilly, chairman of the Ireland Fund, touched on the situation in Ireland by quoting British Prime Minister Benjamin Disraeli who said, around 1876: "Every time we find an answer to the Irish question, the Irish change the question." He added, with a straight face: "Being Irish is a disadvantage — until one considers the alternative."... COMPLIMENT: If Al Pacino was feeling his age a while back, he had every reason to. He was given not one surprise birthday party (for year number 42) by his fellow cast members in the Off Broadway play American Buffalo, but two. Showing his heart's in the right place — or perhaps because he was still in the party mood — he responded by throwing another party for all of his two-time hosts.... Actress Pia Zadora made points across the ocean when she reviewed the male population and announced: "I think English fellows are the sexiest in the world. They've got savoir faire, and they're also very handsome."... COUTURIER: Do you know what ruins a beautiful coif and a stunning cocktail dress? A timepiece, frowns designer Fontayne: "When you're out for a glamorous evening on the town you'll probably be with an escort who wears a watch, so you don't need to weigh yourself down with one." Loosely translated, that means whether the man is a husband or beau, the woman should be watching him, not her watch. Or, don't bother to check the time — it flies when you're having fun... COWARDS: The cabbie who took Evan Frances Agnew, editor of 1001 Home Ideas, to the recent star-studded Broadway opening of Nine (a Broadway play based on Federico Fellini's film 8½) gushed, "I'd know you anywhere." Ms. Agnew lit up like a Christmas tree — she had no idea her fame from the magazine was so far flung. Upon reaching the theater, the driver said, "Sign this please, otherwise my wife won't believe I met Ginger Rogers." Too much of a coward to own up, the embarrassed editor forged "Ginger Rogers" and fled.

PRO AND CON

Should Federal Price Supports for Dairy Products Be Reduced?

(Question submitted by Sister Florita Waters, Scranton, Pa.)

Send questions of national significance, on a postcard, to "Pro & Con," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022.
We'll pay $10 for those published.

PRO Representative Paul Findley (R.-Ill.), member, Agriculture Committee

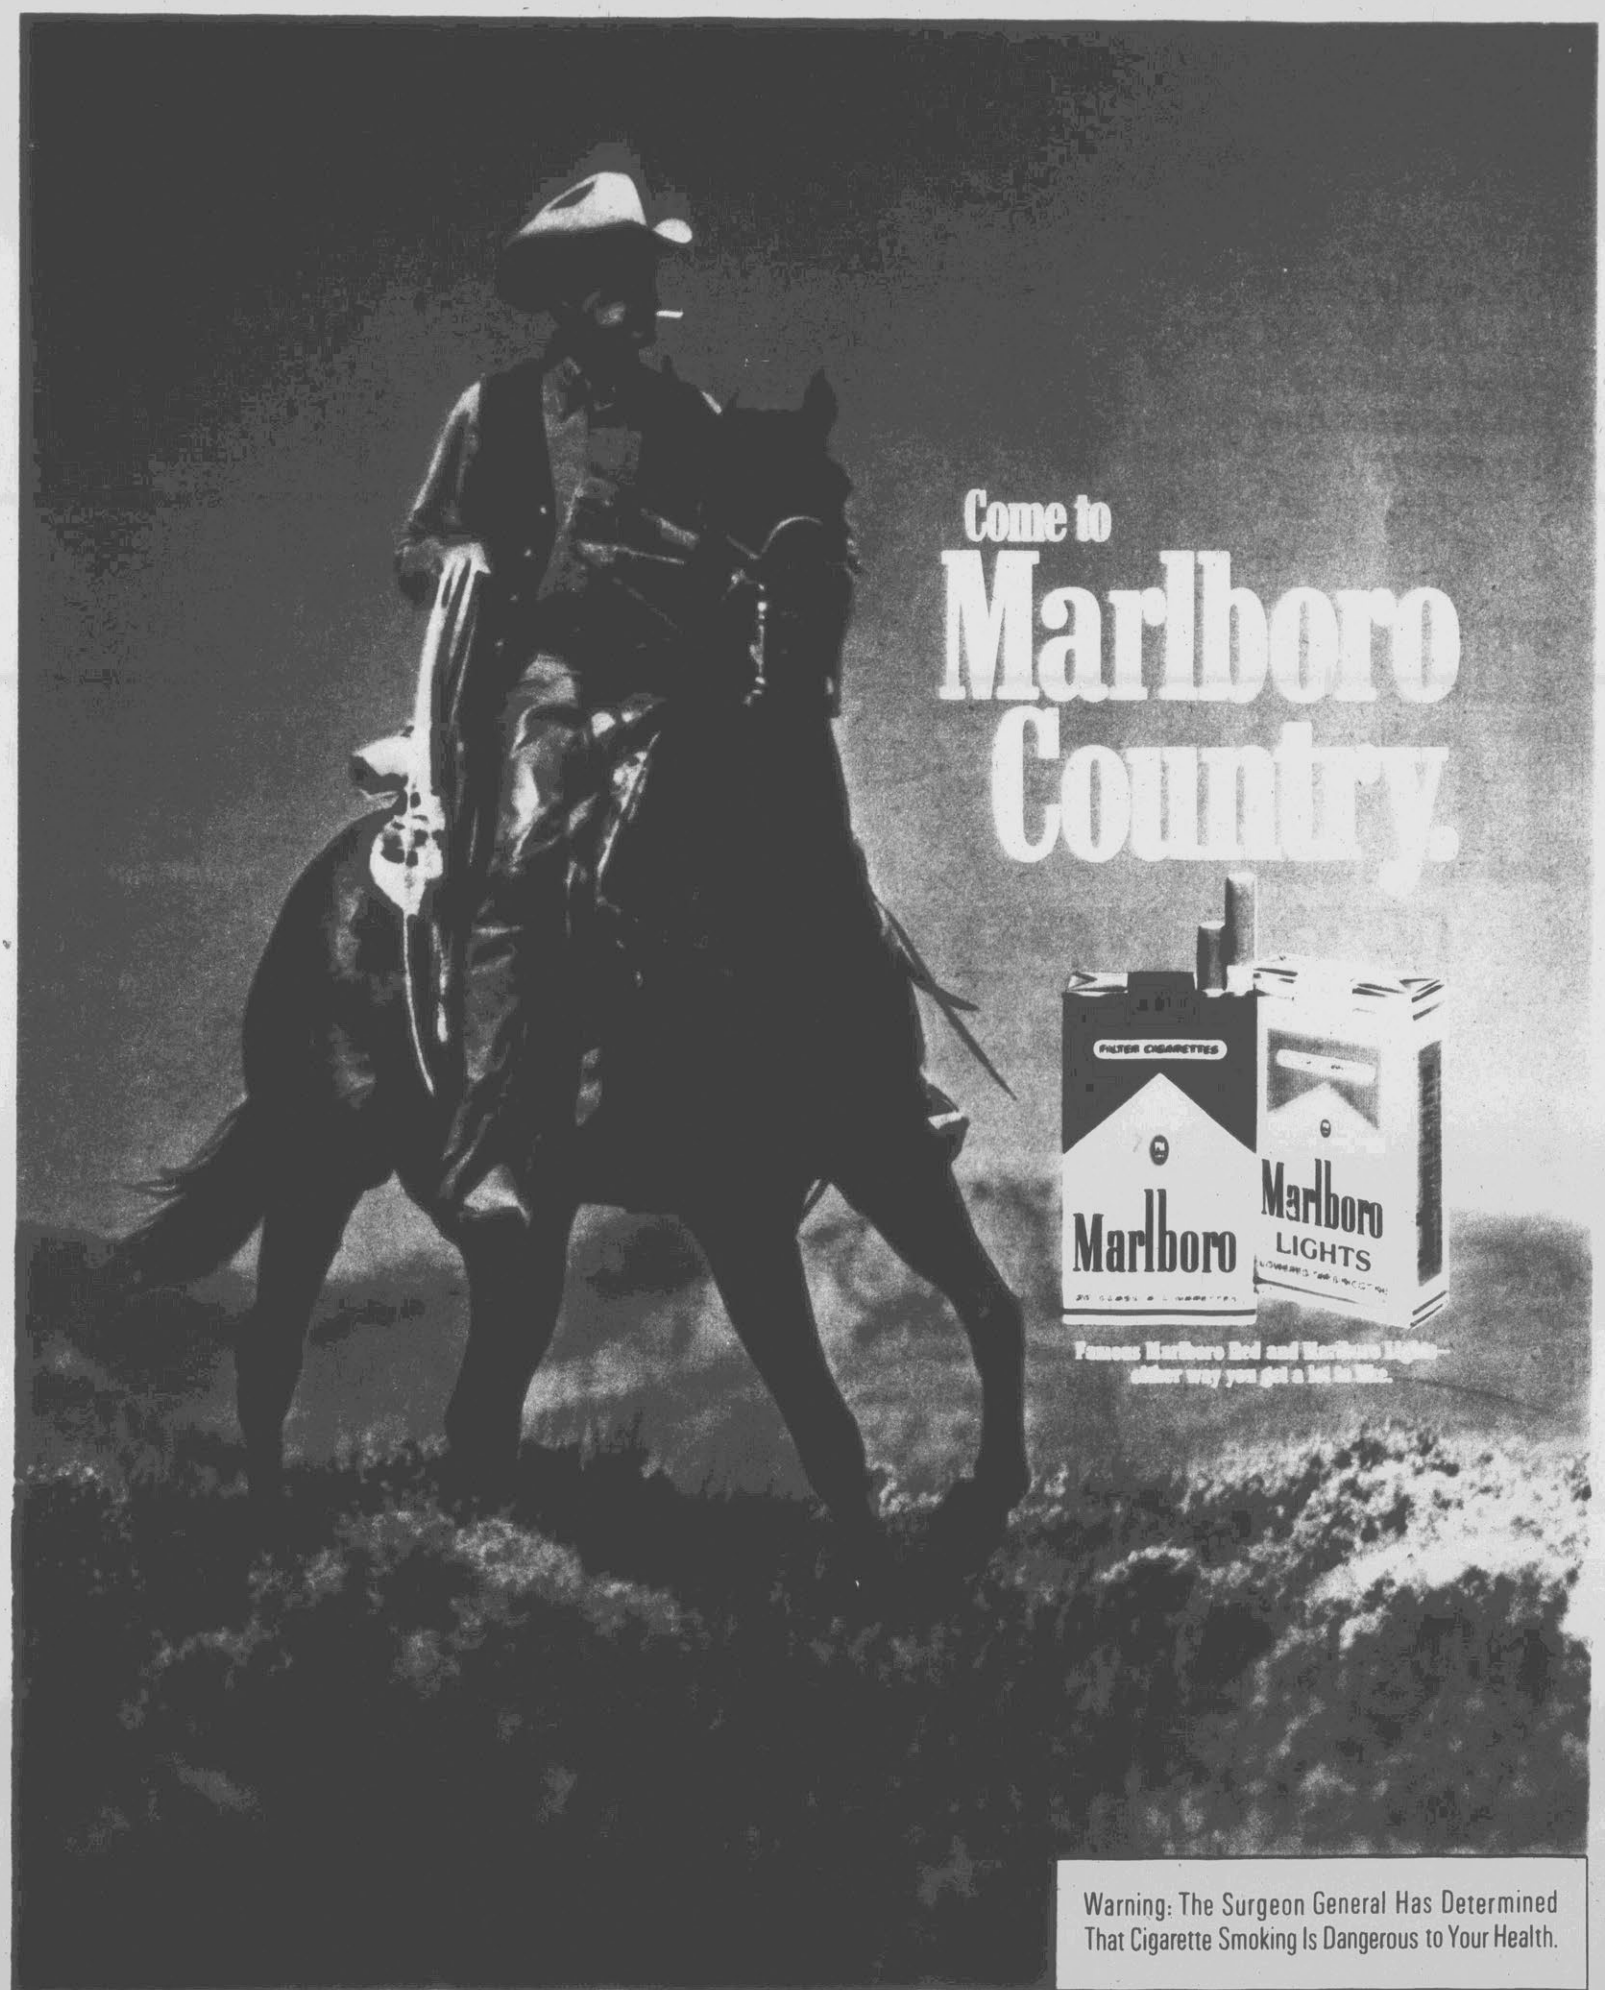

● Dairy price supports must be reduced. While I think we need a support program, it's clearly out of control. In 1978 the Government bought less than 1 percent of the milk produced, and it was distributed through school lunch and other programs. Last year, the Government bought almost 10 percent of the milk produced at a cost of billions. Our school-lunch programs cannot absorb nearly that much. We must reduce surplus production.

CON George W. Stone, president, National Farmers Union

● A reduction in dairy supports is the best way to assure future shortages of dairy products. The current program is in trouble only because the recession is slashing consumer buying, because of food-stamp program cuts (14 percent of food stamps are used for dairy items) and because dairy imports add $300 million a year to program costs. A dairy program need not be costly if it gives producers the tools to tailor production to market demand.

COVER STORY

Who really carries the big stick, and who calls the strikes? The answers may surprise you.

THE LORDS OF BASEBALL

The men who own major-league baseball teams are able to speak with easy authority on such subjects as the San Clemente estate of former President Richard Nixon, the agonizing battle between Big Mac and Chicken McNuggets and the various problems of Rudolph the red-nosed reindeer. When the discussion moves to baseball, though, their conversation is not always as illuminating.

George Argyros, a California land developer who bought the old Western White House, is principal owner of the Seattle Mariners; Ray Kroc bosses McDonald's and the San Diego Padres; Gene Autry, the old singing cowboy who crooned about the reindeer with the shiny honker, is president and board chairman of the California Angels. Among the other 23 owners are people capable of building a ship (George Steinbrenner, New York Yankees), racing that ship (Ted Turner, Atlanta Braves) and reporting on the race (The Chicago Tribune Company, Chicago Cubs). Let's face it, baseball owners can be most useful fellows away from the diamond.

Very few, specifically Calvin Griffith of the Minnesota Twins and Peter O'Malley of the Los Angeles Dodgers, earn their principal income from baseball. O'Malley's father, Walter, was the man who moved the Dodgers from Brooklyn to Los Angeles, opening the Golden West to major-league baseball and filling his pockets along the way. Since he made a great deal of money — drawing almost three million customers annually to Dodger Stadium — the other owners tended to pay attention to O'Malley. By happy coincidence, that was precisely what the Dodgers' owner had in mind.

O'Malley, until just before his death three years ago, was said to be the single most powerful force in baseball. He enjoyed dealing behind the scenes, influencing decisions by the various baseball commissioners, including the current officeholder, Bowie Kuhn. "When Walter O'Malley sends out for a cup of coffee," columnist Red Smith once wrote, "it's Bowie Kuhn who says, 'One lump or two?' "

Some of today's owners are taking a lead from O'Malley. After spending recent years in the dark squabbling among themselves, they are finally blinking in the daylight and have begun to join the ranks of baseball's most powerful, which include, among others, the superagents — such as Dick Moss and Tom Reich. Here's a look at five of the dominant players in the sport's power game.

Team owners aside for a minute, the most influential man in baseball over the last decade has been Marvin Miller, executive director of the Players Association, the ballplayers' union. When he moved his desk from the steelworkers' union in 1966, the minimum salary for players was $7,000. He wanted to raise that, he said, to $12,000. He intended to earn for players the right to discuss their working conditions rather than accept the unilateral decisions by management.

By Vic Ziegel

That day has arrived — and in a big way. Miller, 65, spearheaded the fight against the reserve clause that bound a player to his team. A system of salary arbitration was the first step. And then in 1976 came free agency, entitling players to place themselves in the open market. The minimum salary now is $33,500, and the million-dollar contract is a familiar headline.

During last season's 50-day strike, forced by owners who were anxious to win back much of what they had given away, Miller warned what might happen if the strike ran past the season's end. He suggested that the players might form a league of their own, composed of free agents. Young players, not yet eligible for free agency, and players with long-term contracts could use the courts to allow them to join a new league.

Would he have tried to pull it off? Well, keep in mind that this is the man some owners call Commissioner Miller.

Among the new breed of owners making their presence felt is the 44-year-old O'Malley. His tough style reminds some people of his old man, but Roger Kahn, author of The Boys of Summer and observer of the O'Malley clan for more than 30 years, notes, "You can't compare them. Peter's on the board of the Los Angeles Philharmonic. Walter thought Brahms was the plural of brahm."

At baseball's annual winter meetings last December, nine of the 26 club owners signed a letter urging Bowie Kuhn's dismissal. The palace revolt was squelched by O'Malley, whose continued support of Kuhn weighed heavily with the majority of owners. He is currently co-chairman of baseball's Restructuring Committee, which will decide Kuhn's future after his seven-year contract expires next year.

Kuhn wants to stick around. "I'm certainly available for another term," is how he puts it. His annual salary, paid by the owners, is said to be $250,000; his well-appointed office is 16 stories

ROACH PRUFE, #1 in University Tests

In a report released by the UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA and published by the ENTOMOLOGICAL SOCIETY OF AMERICA, eight commercial and test products that included a broad spectrum of insecticides were tested against a product called "ROACH PRUFE." The tests were conducted in heavily infested apartments and showed at the end of the 8 week test period that with a single application of ROACH PRUFE in each apartment, the roach population was reduced by an average 99.5%. By comparison, with the worst results were two widely recognized insecticides currently used in aerosols and applied by exterminators. They showed a 0% (no) reduction at the end of the 8 week tests.

Commenting in a letter, the University researchers stated: "Our experience under field conditions has shown that when properly applied, the ROACH PRUFE formula provides a degree of cockroach control that is usually superior to all other registered commercial or consumer products."

Disease Carriers

Odorless. Easy To Apply

Alan Brite, holder of 15 U.S. and foreign patents has just been awarded the first of 3 U.S. patents pending on ROACH PRUFE. Brite says: "Because roaches simply do not recognize ROACH PRUFE as an insecticide, they do not try to avoid it by scattering to other parts of your residence as they do with other insecticides. Plus the electrostatically charged powder sticks to their bodies. They then carry the powder back into the walls spreading it among the other roaches. The result is you kill not only the roaches you see, but also those hiding and multiplying in the walls."

ROACH PRUFE is odorless, non-evaporating, non-staining and non-flammable. The powder is simply applied with a teaspoon under kitchen appliances and in other hidden areas. It can be used in homes, schools, hospitals, restaurants, plus new construction.

If ROACH PRUFE is not available at your local hardware store, the manufacturer will be glad to send it to you. To obtain a one pound container, just send a check or money order for $8.90, which includes postage. Add tax if you live in California. One pound covers up to a 9 room residence. You'll need an extra pound for a basement or garage. Send to Copper Brite, Inc., Dept. 12 at 5147 W. Jefferson Blvd., Los Angeles, Ca. 90016. Copies of the University test are available by sending a self-addressed stamped envelope to Copper Brite, Inc., Dept. A.

above Manhattan's Rockefeller Center, convenient to all subway lines. During his 13 years as Commissioner, annual attendance zoomed from 23 million to 43 million. But during the strike, Kuhn was virtually invisible, a hired hand who wouldn't exert his influence, publicly or privately, to tone down the owners' demands. A decisive Commissioner might have headed off the strike. That cost Kuhn some support. How can he keep his job? By taking up jogging, he quips, since it's constantly reported that "the owners are chasing the Commissioner."

A relative newcomer among the power brokers is Edward Bennett Williams, 62, the attorney who bought the Baltimore Orioles two years ago. During the strike's first week, Williams, Steinbrenner and Texas Rangers' owner Eddie Chiles urged Kuhn to produce a quick resolution. To no avail. But Williams's performance was impressive. Chiles, who began calling him "fearless leader," said, "He [Williams] would modernize baseball if they allowed him to have an influential position. But there's a lot of folks who do not think baseball should be modernized."

Those folks are losing money. Kuhn says 15 teams finished in the red last year. Then again, the players have never been healthier: 1981's average salary was $185,000.

George Steinbrenner, 52 on July 4, dreams of power. His outspoken approach alternately dazzles and frightens his peers. Some owners follow his lead because he has shown them, as did Walter O'Malley, how to succeed. "If it weren't for George Steinbrenner's brains and luck," says Mets general manager Frank Cashen, "the lesson of this free-agent period would be: 'Don't spend wildly. It's not worth it. More teams crap out than win.' It's only Steinbrenner's example that, year after year, convinces other owners he has the right idea."

But even Steinbrenner can't win them all, by George. Doyle Alexander, a $400,000-a-year pitcher for the Yankees, was responsible for an early season confrontration between Miller and Steinbrenner. Alexander was on the mound during a five-run inning that led to a Yankee loss against lowly Seattle. Well, nobody likes to lose. Alexander proved as much when he returned to the dugout and angrily punched a wall, breaking the knuckle on the little finger of his pitching hand. The Yankees placed him on the disabled list and thought about fining him for his rash act.

Wide World

Alexander, who said he was acting on his own, decided to "fine" himself by foregoing a month's salary, estimated between $30,000 and $65,000. The Yankees were delighted.

Miller's reaction was immediate. "A player on the disabled list must be paid his salary," he pointed out. Suddenly Alexander saw the light. He retracted his voluntary offer. The Yankees, moving back to Plan A, announced they would fine the pitcher. Alexander's offer to forego at least $30,000 instead became a fine of approximately $10,000.

Score one for Miller's vigilance. So much for the question of who has the power. Clearly, the owners are still searching for their Marvin Miller. FW

PEOPLE QUIZ

Do Looks Help Children Make the Grade?

By John E. Gibson

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Children who are physically attractive tend to get lower grades in school than do unattractive children.

2. How well a child does in school may depend on whether he is a Type A (ambitious, active, competitive) or Type B (easygoing, relaxed, less competitive) personality.

3. Middle-class children have a greater abhorrence of violence than do working-class children.

4. Males are more likely to "batter" their parents than are females.

ANSWERS

1. False. A Pennsylvania State University study on looks and academic achievement surveyed more than 400 children at the third-, fourth- and fifth-grade levels and concluded that "attractive children received significantly higher report cards and, to some degree, higher achievement test scores than their unattractive peers." Other studies confirm these findings.

2. True. In a University of Pittsburgh study, "Efforts to Excel and the Type A Behavior Pattern in Children," schoolchildren were classified as Type A or Type B. The investigators concluded that "Type A children, like their adult counterparts, make greater efforts to excel than do B's (on various tasks)." The Type A child, it seems, has the edge as far as achievement goes but he should be careful to keep ambition within bounds so that it does not result in stresses which may have a detrimental affect on his health.

3. False. In a study of children's values, conducted by a team of behavior scientists at Australia's Monash University, middle- and working-class children ages 11 and 12 were asked for their feelings about a wide range of people, events and actions taking place around them and depicted in the mass media. Violence in general was seen as wrong, but more so by girls and working-class children than by boys and middle-class children; middle-class children were more accepting of capital punishment and boys were more tolerant of war.

4. True. Specialists at the University of Maryland Medical School conducted a study of abusive children and their battered parents and reported that the majority of cases have involved males (although the phenomenon has also been seen in females). They also concluded that the perpetrators of this form of family violence tend to be adolescents and young adults, the majority ranging in age from 13 to 24. The most common pattern is described as one of repetitive or threatened attacks on the parents, most of whom are middle-aged or older (40 to 70 years old). Attacks range from threatening behavior, such as destroying furniture in front of the parents while verbally assailing them, to a serious attack on one or both parents, which in some cases leads to hospitalization for physical injuries. BEHAVIOR

Ouch! Learning to Handle Criticism

By Norman Lobsenz

Theater people like to tell the story of the actor who was unmercifully booed when he finished the "To be or not to be" soliloquy in Hamlet. "It's no use booing me," he said to the audience, "I didn't write this stuff." Thanks to his oversized ego, this actor was immune to criticism. Most of us, however, do not have such big egos and, as a result, criticism usually leaves us feeling angry, hurt or rejected.

Yet while it is never pleasant to be criticized, there are ways of accepting and appraising criticism so that it becomes helpful rather than hurtful. "Most people have been told to take criticism 'constructively,'" says psychologist Dr. Hendrie Weisinger. "But all too often that means making believe you aren't upset, or even falsely seeming to agree with your critic. Accepting criticism in a positive way should mean learning how to use it as a catalyst for personal growth."

Redefine the word. Most people tend to think of criticism as an attack but it is often simply an objective comment, an assessment of merits as well as demerits. Learn to see valid criticism as a communication tool that can improve your skills and enhance personal growth. "Criticism," says Weisinger, "is simply a source of new and potentially useful information."

Change your "self-statements." When a sociologist asked people what they said to themselves when they were criticized, most reported such statements as "I can't take this," or "She doesn't like me," or "Do I have an answer for that!" Significantly, not one of those "self-statements" has anything to do with the actual content of the criticism that provoked it. Try to respond with positive self-statements such as, "I should listen carefully so I won't repeat the error," or "What she is saying may be helpful, so I should stay relaxed."

Take time to appraise the criticism. A student who was told once that his term paper was "sloppy" assumed that meant he'd fail the course. When he asked the teacher to be more specific, she offered positive suggestions for improvement. The lesson? Find out what the critic is really trying to tell you.

Ask yourself how important the criticism is. If you decide a remark is mere nit-picking, you can safely ignore it; if you feel it is important, the more likely it is you will do something about it.

Assess the source of criticism. If a friend who can't play tennis any better than you criticizes your backhand, his comment probably carries little validity (some people are just critical by nature). If the tennis pro says the same thing, it's wise to pay heed. Judge the critic's motives. Does he or she want to impress you? Intimidate you? Or help you?

Gauge the emotional climate. If the person criticizing you is under stress, chances are his words are not aimed at you but are a byproduct of his own tensions.

Are you frequently criticized by different people for the same failing? If so, it's a strong sign the criticism is valid.

If you think criticism is worth acting on, do so productively. That means not only accepting it calmly, but also recognizing that it may be time to change the criticized behavior. What's important is to convert a critical comment to a beneficial two-way exchange of information. FW

FOOD

A Jubilee of Cherry Recipes

By Marilyn Hansen

CHERRY TIPS

- Good supplies of fresh, sweet cherries will be available this year.
- Look for plump, shiny, dark-red fruit with green stems. Avoid light-colored fruit, dark brown stems and fruit with soft, brown spots.
- Refrigerate cherries in a plastic bag. Rinse cherries just before using.
- Cherries are a treat for dieters, since 10 cherries have approximately 42 calories. Or, put another way, 1 sweet, fresh cherry has 4 calories! They contain moderate amounts of iron, copper, fluoride, potassium and zinc and are low in sodium.
- Cherries may be frozen: The fruit needs to be washed, put in small, plastic bags, sealed and frozen. They are ready to serve, still partially frozen, 45 minutes after removing from the freezer.

BRANDIED CHERRIES

1 qt. fresh, sweet cherries
1½ cups sugar
¾ cup water
½ cup brandy

1. Wash and pit cherries. Combine sugar and water; bring to boil. Pack cherries into sterile, hot, 1-pt. canning jars.
2. Pour ¼ cup brandy over cherries in each jar. Pour boiling syrup over cherries to within ⅛ inch of jar tops.
3. Seal with lids according to jar manufacturer's directions. Place jars on rack in canner. Process 20 minutes in boiling water bath with boiling water 2 inches above jar tops.
4. Remove jars from canner. Cool away from drafts. Remove rings from sealed jars after 12 hours.

BOWL OF CHERRIES

2 lbs. fresh, sweet cherries, rinsed
½ pt. heavy cream
1 teaspoon grated orange rind
2 tablespoons confectioners' sugar
2 tablespoons Grand Marnier or Cointreau
1 pkg. (6 oz.) semisweet chocolate chips
Dash salt
½ cup light corn syrup
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
2 tablespoons brandy
Orange Cream Chantilly, recipe follows
Brandied Chocolate Fondue, recipe follows

2. Make Orange Cream Chantilly: In a chilled bowl with chilled beaters, whip heavy cream until it holds a definite shape. Fold in orange rind, confectioners' sugar and Grand Marnier. Pile lightly into a serving bowl.
3. Make Brandied Chocolate Fondue: Melt chocolate chips over hot, not boiling, water. Remove from heat, stir in salt, corn syrup, vanilla and brandy. Place in container and place over candle warmer.
4. Provide dessert plates and allow guests to pick cherries and dip into Orange Cream Chantilly or Brandied Chocolate Fondue as desired.

Makes about 8 servings

CHERRY-RASPBERRY PARFAITS

2 cups pitted and halved fresh, sweet cherries
⅓ cup Cassis liqueur
1 teaspoon finely grated lemon peel
6 scoops vanilla ice cream
6 scoops raspberry sherbet
Whipped cream
6 fresh, sweet cherries, with stems

2. In each of 6 parfait glasses, layer 2 tablespoons cherries, 1 scoop vanilla ice cream, 2 tablespoons cherries, 1 scoop raspberry sherbet and 2 tablespoons cherries. Garnish with dollop of whipped cream and 1 fresh cherry with stem.

Makes 6 servings

CHERRY DUCK IN ASPIC

2 (5-lb.-size) ducks, rinsed
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
1 tablespoon minced, fresh gingerroot
2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
¼ cup water
½ cup port wine
1 can (10½ oz.) beef bouillon
1 egg white
½ lb. dark, sweet cherries, stemmed, halved and pitted
Curly leaf or iceberg lettuce, shredded
1 green bell pepper, julienne cut

1. Pat ducks inside and out with paper towels. Preheat oven to 400°F.

2. Blend garlic, salt, pepper and gingerroot. Rub seasoning mixture well into entire cavity and skin of duck.

3. Place ducks on rack in large, shallow roasting pan and roast for 45 minutes. Remove ducks from pan and pour fat and juices into a metal bowl. Place bowl in freezer.

4. Return ducks to roasting pan and 350°F. oven. Roast 1 hour longer or until leg joint is tender.

5. Drain ducks, place on large platter and refrigerate.

6. Soak gelatin in water to soften. Spoon off congealed fat from duck juices. In 1-qt. measuring cup, combine duck juices, softened gelatin, port and beef bouillon. Add enough water to make 3¼ cups.

7. Pour gelatin mixture into saucepan and heat, stirring until gelatin dissolves and mixture boils.

8. Beat egg white until frothy; add to boiling mixture. Heat, stirring until mixture boils rapidly.

9. Line a large, fine sieve with several thicknesses of cheesecloth or a clean tea towel. Pour boiling mixture through to remove all sediment and gray matter. Pour the now-clarified broth into a bowl and place in freezer until not quite set.

10. Spoon the almost-jellied broth over the chilled ducks. To build up a glaze, do this slowly, one layer at a time, chilling after each to allow time to set.

11. Toss cherries into 1 cup of the gelatin mixture. Fill duck cavities with cherries. Refrigerate. Heat any remaining gelatin mixture until melted and pour into a shallow pan. Refrigerate until set.

12. Spread lettuce and green pepper on chilled serving platter. Place ducks on lettuce bed. Cut jelled broth into tiny cubes. Spoon cubes around ducks.

Makes 4 to 6 servings

WHAT IN THE WORLD

By Eliot Kaplan

PRIME TIME NEAR-MISSES

Now that the TV networks have announced their fall lineups (and they actually look a little more promising than usual), let's reveal some of the more offbeat shows we almost got. (Not that the new season doesn't have its eccentricities. Witness the new all-black version of The Odd Couple.)

According to advertising's Dancer Fitzgerald Sample, Inc., here are a few of the other pilots the networks were considering (and which, of course, could appear at some future date).

ABC

Pat and Paul: New heights.

ABC has Rooster, starring lilliputian Paul Williams and Herculean Pat McCormick as two detectives making a lot of gumshoe-size jokes; and We Dare You, with Sha Na Na's John "Bowser" Bauman searching the land for willing pranksters.

CBS still has Filthy Rich, featuring a wealthy land baron who is frozen after death. His will stipulates that his family must live together in harmony for five years in order to inherit his fortune. Also, there's Small and Frye, the story of two detectives, one of whom has the disrupting habit of shrinking to about six inches in height.

And from NBC there's Kangaroos in the Kitchen, the tale of a woman who runs an animal talent agency and keeps a chimp, llama and wombat in her apartment. For some reason, her husband seems to object.

SPACE CADETS

Some 20 students at the University of Colorado, Boulder, are getting spaced out these days. But don't worry, Mom, it has nothing to do with drugs.

They are in charge of the Solar Mesosphere Explorer, the only NASA-sponsored satellite not under the agency's direct control. Launched last October, the satellite is also the only one specifically studying the effects of both nature and man on the ozone, the atmospheric layer that shields us from the sun's deadliest rays.

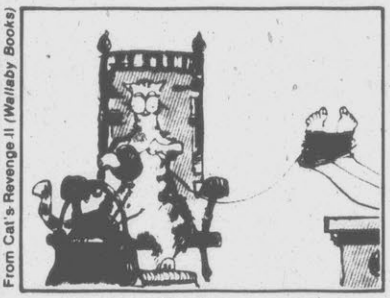

One student and one professor man the flight-control center seven days a week, 24 hours a day. Twenty-one times daily, the satellite passes over one of 12 antennae stations around the world. It is during these 10-minute intervals that the students send messages to the satellite and collect all its data.

Missions operations manager Elaine Hansen told us it's been easy to find willing students for the job, which pays $27.50 for the typical five-hour shift.

SPOOFING FOR DOLLARS

Recently such strange books as Cat's Revenge: More than 101 Uses for Dead People; Cat's Revenge II; Dissolving Rubik's Cube: The Ultimate Solution; and How to Make Love to a Cat have appeared, all the work of one Philip Lief.

Who is this Lief fellow and why is he getting rich when young, would-be Saul Bellows are starving? Lief, 36, told us he's been packaging books for 10 years and that spoofing trendy best sellers was a natural. "The other side was just crying out for attention," he notes. He admits, though, that he actually owns a cat and, yes, even a cube. ("I keep it hidden in a drawer.") Lief and several of his zany colleagues hole up in a room somewhere and don't come out until they have enough material to fill a book. ("Fatigue is an excellent motivator.")

From Cat's Revenge II (Wallaby Books)

A touch of Lief's cat-ty humor.

Lief has two new books just out: The Burbank Diet, a spoof of various fad diets, plus a catchall volume that's going to be tough to top: I Hate Cubes, Cats, Pac-Man and You, Too.

REMARRIAGE: THE EX FACTOR

Temple University psychologist W. Glenn Clingempeel asked 40 remarried couples (married less than three years) about their overall satisfaction in their new marriages and the degree of agreement with their spouses in eight areas, from finances to sex. Couples who saw their ex-spouses (usually about the children) one to three times a month reported happier new marriages than those who saw their exes either once a week or more, or only once or twice every six months.

ENTER AND KEY IN, PLEASE

Protas PHILs in a patient.

In his office waiting room, osteopath Dr. Stephen Protas has installed a minicomputer called PHIL (for Patient Health Information Line). Patients wander over ("They think it's a video game," he told us) and can punch in and choose from among 10 health topics, from hypertension to family planning. A question is flashed on the screen and you have several seconds to type in the right answer. If you're correct, PHIL says so and why. If not, it will give more information until you do guess correctly and then move on to the next question.

Protas, who spent about $2,500 for the setup, says he did it partially to attract patients to his new practice, but also as a way of getting across information important for preventive medicine. "Patients just throw a brochure away unless they have that particular disease," he notes. "And by then it's too late."

Prince Valiant

CREATED BY HAL FOSTER

"THERE WILL BE ONE LESS ANIMAL IN THE FOREST WHEN YOU RETURN HOME," YUAN CHEN PREDICTS. GALAN SMILES.

"WHAT KIND? HOW BIG?" ASKS GALAN. THE SCHOLAR THINKS FOR A MOMENT. "A KILLER," HE SAYS AT LAST. "NO BIGGER THAN YOU." GALAN CANTERS OFF IN A FLUSH OF EXCITEMENT, WILD BOARS ON HIS MIND. A FORLORN HUNTER RETURNS LATER, EMPTY HANDED.

"NOTHING!" HE SPITS OUT. "NO," LAUGHS YUAN CHEN, "BUT NOW THAT YOU ARE HERE THERE IS ONE LESS ANIMAL IN THE FOREST." GALAN AIMS A KICK AT YUAN CHEN. YUAN CHEN, SKILLED IN THE ORIENTAL ARTS, TEACHES THE LAD A LESSON. "WHY, YOU ARE AS MAD AS CROESUS," THE SCHOLAR DECLARES.

GALAN HAS NEVER HEARD OF CROESUS AND YUAN CHEN'S VOICE FILLS WITH MOCK REPROACH. "YOU DO NOT EVEN KNOW YOUR OWN HISTORY. CROESUS WAS KING OF THE LYDIANS. LIKE YOU, HE HEARD ONLY WHAT HE WANTED TO HEAR. ONE DAY HE VISITED THE GREAT ORACLE AT DELPHI. 'CAN I DESTROY THE PERSIANS?' HE ASKED.
