Panel Accepts Package Of Tax Increases

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Republican majority of the Senate Finance Committee has agreed to a package of two dozen tax increases that would double the tax on cigarettes to 16 cents a pack and, for the first time, withhold taxes on interest and dividend income.

The full, 20-member committee planned to begin voting today on the package, tentatively agreed to Wednesday by the panel's 11 Republicans. In advance of the voting, aides involved in the negotiations said the proposal could fall apart in the public session.

The committee is under orders from the Senate to devise tax increases totaling $100 billion over three years in an effort to reduce the federal deficit.

The agreement was reached in a closed-door session

Wednesday that followed several weeks of closed-door sessions among the Republicans.

As expected, the Republican plan leaves intact the third installment of the personal income-tax cut, scheduled to take effect July 1, 1983. President Reagan had emphasized to the committee that he would tolerate no tampering with that provision.

Democrats, however, still may try to delay that portion of the tax cut.

The item in the Republican package that would affect the most taxpayers probably is the proposed doubling of the eight-cent federal tax on cigarettes, which would produce nearly $5 billion for the government over three years.

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., the committee chairman, said these provisions also are in the GOP package:

—Double, to 2 percent, the federal telephone excise tax, producing nearly $2 billion over three years.

—Let the government withhold taxes on 10 percent of interest and dividends earned, with a provision allowing lower-income taxpayers to avoid withholding. When the Reagan administration proposed this last year, the idea was so unpopular that it was withdrawn.

—Tighten the limit on deductible medical expenses. The law now allows a deduction for expenses exceeding 3 percent of adjusted gross income. The GOP plan would raise that to 10 percent, resulting in a tax increase for millions of taxpayers who itemize deductions. It would raise $4.5 billion.

—Stiffen the separate minimum taxes on higher-income individuals and corporations. These levies are aimed at requiring such people and businesses to pay some tax, even though they ordinarily would have enough large deductions to wipe out any liability.

—Reduce from 12 months to six months the minimum period that an asset must be held before profits from its sale qualify for preferential tax treatment as a capital gain. The maximum tax on most income is 50 percent, but the top level on capital gains is 20 percent.

—Cut considerably the "safe-harbor leasing" law enacted last year that encourages unprofitable companies to sell some of their tax benefits to profitable firms.

—Require federal employees, who are not under the Social Security program, to pay taxes to finance Medicare, which they are eligible for even though it is financed under Social Security. The tax would be 1.3 percent of the first $32,400 earned this year, with the base amount rising each year. The government would pay another 1.3 percent for each worker.

—Tighten tax benefits now available to life insurance companies involved in co-insurance and on contractors using the "completed-contract" method of accounting to defer a significant portion of their taxes.

High Court Clarifies Guideline

Election Discrimination Rules

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today made it easier to prove that existing election systems unlawfully discriminate against blacks and other minorities.

By a 6-3 vote, the justices ruled that the way Burke County, Ga., has elected its county commissioners since 1911 unconstitutionally discriminates against black voters.

Today's decision upheld lower court rulings that, in the words of Justice Byron R. White, "the at-large election system in Burke County was being maintained for the invidious purpose of diluting the voting strength of the black population."

The decision represents a significant modification of a 1980 Supreme Court ruling that had constructed a major obstacle to civil rights activists' challenging entrenched election systems for diluting black voting power.

In its Mobile vs. Bolden decision of 1980, the court ruled that a local election system cannot be found to violate the 14th Amendment's guarantee of equal protection of the law by discriminating against blacks unless it can be proved that the system harbors "purposeful discrimination."

A showing of disproportionate effects is not enough under that 1980 ruling, making challenges against longstanding election systems extremely difficult.

But today, the court said that a 14th Amendment violation can be shown by proving that the election system is being retained because of purposeful discrimination.

A federal trial judge and the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that although the Burke County election system originally was adopted for racially neutral purposes it is being maintained for discriminatory reasons.

The county was ordered to abandon its system of electing five commissioners in at-large or countywide voting.

The county now must be divided into five districts, with one commissioner being elected from each district.

Blacks comprise about 60 percent of the population in Burke County, a mostly rural area in eastern Georgia.

Blacks comprise about 40 percent of the county's registered voters, but no black has ever been elected to the county commission.

Eight blacks sued the county commission in 1976, charging that the at-large election system unconstitutionally diluted black voting power.

Today, the nation's highest court agreed with those eight plaintiffs.

In upholding the trial judge's system-changing order, the 5th Circuit court fashioned this rule from the Supreme Court's Bolden decision:

Unconstitutional vote dilution through maintenance of at-large systems of election must be sustained by evidence that the system was created or maintained for discriminatory purposes, which may be inferred from circumstantial evidence.

One element, although not a conclusive one, can be the government's unresponsiveness to the aggrieved group.

White's opinion today said, "We are not inclined to disagree with the court of appeals' conclusion that the district court applied the proper legal standard."

Joining White were Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices William J. Brennan, Thurgood Marshall, Harry A. Blackmun and Sandra Day O'Connor.

Runoff Possibilities

The outcome of today's canvass of Tuesday's primary balloting was being watched closely by two area candidates who have the option of calling for runoffs in their respective races.

District Court Judge H. Horton Rountree of Greenville, who ran second Tuesday in a five-man race for a seat on the North Carolina Court of Appeals, said this morning that he "would not make a decision until I get a read-out of the county votes" following the statewide canvassing.

Rountree, who is seeking the seat on the Court of Appeals to be vacated by retiring Chief Judge Naomi Morris of Wilson, ran second to Eugene H. Phillips of Winston-Salem in unofficial tabulations, polling nearly 19 percent of the vote to Phillips' 40 percent.

The former member of the N.C. General Assembly ran strong in his home county as Pitt voters favored him by a 7,699 to 1,234 margin over Phillips.

Dr. J. Elliott Dixon of Ayden ran second to Charles McLawhorn in five-candidate balloting for the 5th District seat on the Pitt County Board of Commissioners and could seek a runoff with McLawhorn.

Dixon, who trailed McLawhorn by an unofficial total of 3,927 to 2,692, said today he was "still considering" the runoff possibilities and was "looking at options" relative to his position.

Candidates eligible for runoffs have until noon on Tuesday to declare their intentions in writing to elections officials.

Howell Officially ECU Chancellor

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

"I can hardly tell the difference. I had gone into the morning a fairly good way before someone reminded me of it," Dr. John Howell, who became chancellor of East Carolina University at midnight Wednesday, said today.

Howell, with 25 years at ECU as a political science professor, a department chairman, dean of the college of arts and sciences, dean of the graduate school and provost and vice chancellor for academic affairs, was elected to the chancellor's post by the University of North Carolina Board of Governors on May 14. He had been serving as acting chancellor of the third largest university in the state for the past six months.

Commenting on his new roll, Howell, as he has done a number of times as acting chancellor, said he forsores no major changes at the school.

"I do not have any plans for any major additions to the university in terms of new departments and new professional schools. That doesn't mean we won't add one or two sometime, but there are no plans for that

Adjourned Without Vote To Keep Agencies Going

By JAY PERKINS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House today adjourned until July 12 after members from both parties urged President Reagan and federal agencies "to do whatever is possible" to keep cash-short federal agencies operating this summer.

The action ended speculation that the House might return from its July 4 recess or take some other possible action to keep about a dozen agencies solvent.

Adjournment came as no surprise. House leaders had signaled late Wednesday that they might take that course rather than call vacationing congressmen back to Washington for a special session.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., and Republican Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill., issued a joint statement Wednesday urging Reagan to keep the agencies and their programs running until Congress can break a deadlock over a new emergency spending bill.

And Reps. Don Edwards, D-Calif., and Jerry Lewis, R-Calif., made the same plea on the House floor today just minutes before the adjournment motion was made — and passed — without opposition.

O'Neill and Michel said the House leadership is "committed to acting as soon as possible to resolve the remaining differences and provide the necessary funding for essential government services." And they suggested Reagan "do whatever is possible" to avoid disruptions in government programs or furloughs of any kind.

Edwards urged agencies to defer planned furloughs until "the House has returned and considered supplemental appropriations." Lewis noted that "the agencies have been able to skate along since March. We can extend ourselves a bit further and make certain that furloughs do not unduly harm our employees." The impasse in the latest battle between the Democratic-controlled House and Reagan poses no immediate threat to Social Security checks even though the spending bill contains funds needed to process and mail those checks.

July checks are being mailed today, and August checks would be affected only if the impasse continued that long. Even then, other Treasury Department funds could be transferred to the affected division.

But 13,000 federal workers face the possibility of furloughs, beginning July 11.

"I think it would be the most unfair thing in the world for anyone to think he has been anything but unfairly and unjustly accused," Reagan said of his labor secretary.

He also said he will fight for congressional passage of

Reagan Reminds He Calls Shots On Foreign Policy

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says he calls the shots on foreign policy and "there is going to be no change" despite outgoing Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig's charge that it is off-course.

"I think we are progressing very well with what it is we are trying to accomplish," Reagan said Wednesday night during his first televised news conference in seven weeks.

But the president again declined to discuss the reasons for Haig's resignation last Friday, saying the American people had been told everything about it that they needed to know.

Reagan disputed suggestions that the United States knew in advance of Israel's invasion of Lebanon and approved of it. "I've given no green light whatsoever" to the Israelis, he said.

He also made clear he is giving serious thought to running for a second term in 1984 because "it would be unlike me to think that I would walk away from an unfinished job."

While he said it is too early to make up his mind, he joked that he has advised his aides "they should not waste their time reading the help-wanted ads."

Celebrating The 4th On Saturday And Sunday

The annual Jaycee-sponsored Fourth of July celebrations on Sunday will encompass activities on both Saturday and Sunday.

On Saturday, the Independence Day kick-off event will be the Canoe Race starting at the Wildlife Ramp in Falkland with the Town Common as the finish line. This event is sponsored by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department.

The evening event Saturday will be a street dance on First Street along the Town Common. Music will be provided by The Original Kays.

The line-up for Sunday covers a spectrum of activities for young and old, with proceedings to get under way at 1 p.m. and to continue through the display of fireworks after dark.

Unless otherwise noted, all Sunday events will take place at the Town Common. The calendar is:

- All day events, beginning at 1 p.m. — Balloon dart throw, bake sale, dime throw, greasy pole climb, bingo, dunk booth, pick up ducks (for toddlers), clown or face painting.
- 1 p.m. — Popsicle-eating contest for children in three age groups — 5-6, 7-8, and 9-12.
- 1:30 p.m. — Softball throw competition in four age groups — 2-5, 6-14, 15-up (men) and 15-up (women).
- 2:15 p.m. — Bubble-gum blowing contest in three age groups — 7-8, 9-12, and 13-15.
- 2:30 p.m. — Skydiving event (this event will be held depending on weather conditions).
- 3 p.m. — Three-legged races for children in two age groups — 6-14 and 15-up.

- 3:45 p.m. — Water balloon toss for children in two age groups — 6-14 and 15-up.
- 4 p.m. — Hot air balloon event (this event will be held depending on weather conditions).
- 4:30 p.m. — Tricycle race ages 1-5 (bring your own tricycles).
- 5 p.m. — Shoe scramble for two age groups — 2-5 and 6-14.
- 5:30 p.m. — Watermelon seed-spitting contest — two age groups — 6-14 and 15-up.
- 6 p.m. — Supper break.
- 7 to 8:30 p.m. — Sunday in the Park on the grassy slope east of Reade Street between Third and Fourth streets.
- 9 p.m. — Fireworks display over the Town Common. This year the Greenville Fourth of July fireworks exhibition is reportedly the largest being held in a three-state area.

SON'S RESCUERS SOUGHT

Mrs. Emma Spruill of Farmville says she would like to be in touch with the persons who saved her son's life Sunday, June 20, between 7 and 7:30 p.m. Her son, Adolphus H. Spruill, she said, went swimming at Greenway Apartments, Greenville, and was knocked unconscious when he struck the diving board during a dive. His companion called for help and an unidentified couple pulled him out and gave him artificial respiration. "Because of these people's help, my son is alive," Mrs. Spruill said.

She said she'd like for them to contact her so she can thank them personally. Her address is 708 S. George St., Farmville, N.C. 27828; phone, 753-4377 or 753-4658.

CHAIRS NEEDED

Gloria Pearsall, director of Operation Sunshine Girls' Activities Program, says she is delighted if somewhat overwhelmed by the unexpected tremendous increase in participation in Operation Sunshine this year. The greatest number of girls the program was called upon to serve on any one day last year was 41. The highest number this year has been 72. She needs more chairs. Anyone who has straight-back or folding chairs to donate or lend for the summer is asked to call Mrs. Pearsall, 355-2374, after 4:30 p.m.

Wedding Vows Said In Garden Setting

MADISON — A garden wedding united Jill Patricia Vaughn and James Victor Lunney in marriage Saturday at 2 p.m. at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Vaughn. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Lunney of Greenville.

The Rev. Mark Cranford performed the double ring ceremony.

Escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white silk organza over peau de soie designed with a Queen Anne neckline and long full sleeves. Embroidered lace in a scalloped floral pattern beaded in pearls edged the neckline and extended over the bodice front. Appliques of the beaded lace enhanced the sheer sleeves and fitted cuffs. The full skirt and attached cathedral length train was bordered in the embroidered lace at the hemline. The train was fashioned in a scalloped effect trimmed in panels of lace interspersed with fluted panels of pleated organza. She wore an elbow length veil of illusion edged in embroidered lace which complemented her gown. The veil was held in place by a Camelot headpiece which was trimmed in the beaded lace. She carried a cascade of white roses and daisies, stephanotis and baby's breath accented with satin streamers.

The maid of honor was Donna Pendley of Columbia, S.C. She wore a lavender voile pastel dress and matching garden hat. The bridesmaids were Anne Lunney of Charlottesville, Va., sister of the bridegroom, Rena Vaughn of Danville, Va., sister-in-law of the bride, Holly Stallings of Greenville and Terry Young of Raleigh. Each wore a dress identical to that of the maid of honor in colors of yellow and pink with matching garden hats. All carried bouquets of summer flowers in pink, lavender, yellow and white.

The flower girl was Leah Westenberg, niece of the bridegroom. She carried a basket of rose petals. The ring bearer was Mather Westenberg, nephew of the bridegroom.

John Tolbert of Waynesboro, Va., served as best man. Ushers were Robert Lunney, brother of the bridegroom, and Nick Radeka, both of Greenville, Steve Hyrt of New Jersey and Mark Vaughn of Danville, Va., brother of the bride.

The mother of the bride wore an apricot-pink formal gown of knit complemented by a lace jacket. The mother of the bridegroom wore a formal gown of floral chiffon in shades of lavender, maize and apricot over cream beige taffeta. Both wore corsages of summer flowers.

A program of wedding music was performed by Thomas Lunney, father of the bridegroom, Ann Cranford and Cheryl Westenberg, sister of the bridegroom.

The wedding was directed by Mrs. Kenneth Christie of Wadesboro.

A reception given by the parents of the bride was held at the Deep Springs County Club following the ceremony.

A rehearsal dinner was

BANANA COMPOTE
Repeated by request.

1/4 cup butter
1/2 cup maple syrup
Juice of half a medium lemon (about 1 tablespoon)
2 tablespoons water
4 medium-size ripe but firm bananas, quartered lengthwise and crosswise
Vanilla ice cream

In a 10-inch skillet stir together the butter, syrup, lemon juice and water and bring to a boil. Add the bananas and simmer, basting, until the bananas are hot through — a matter of minutes. Serve at once, topping with the ice cream. Makes 4 servings.

SUPPER FOR SIX
Vegetables with Anchovy Dip
Seafood Curry Rice
Lemon Cream Iced Coffee
LEMON CREAM

Light, refreshing and easy to make ahead.

1 envelope unflavored gelatin
1/2 cup milk
4 large egg yolks
1/2 cup sugar
1 pint half-and-half
Grated rind from 1/2 medium lemon (1 1/2 teaspoons)
1/4 cup lemon juice

In a medium bowl sprinkle the gelatin over the milk to soften. In the top of a double boiler beat the egg yolks slightly; gradually beat in the sugar until thickened and lemon color; add the half-and-half and beat to blend. Cook over boiling water until mixture coats a spoon — about 10 minutes. Off heat, stir in the lemon rind and the gelatin mixture until gelatin dissolves; gradually stir in the lemon juice. Turn into a 1-quart mold; cover and chill to set — 6 hours or overnight. Unmold at serving time and garnish as desired. Makes 6 servings.

The American people do something better than anyone in the world. They love their country.

LAWN CHAIR

If the unpainted aluminum on your lawn chairs looks dull, clean it with fine steel wool and kerosene, but use caution, advises Dr. Linda McCutcheon, extension house furnishings specialist, North Carolina State University.

Dip the steel wool in the kerosene and rub the metal until it gleams. Then wipe with a cloth. Make sure the kerosene doesn't touch the webbing or tubing of the chair.

Wash color-coated aluminum with a detergent solution and rinse.

After cleaning the aluminum, apply automobile paste wax for added protection.

A whopping 80 percent admitted this in a recent Gallup poll. That's pretty amazing when you realize that patriotism is a lot like sex to people. It's too personal to talk about in public or to flaunt on a bumper sticker.

Patriotism is also hard to diagnose. Most people don't realize they've got it.

Some people look at the Statue of Liberty and cannot speak. Others look at the flag on the side of the Space Shuttle and tears begin to well in their eyes. Occasionally, people will find themselves sitting a little taller when an athlete bends down to receive an Olympics medal and the massive United States flag unfurls behind him. Or the throat may hurt when a hostage from Iran puts his hand over his heart and salutes a flag he has not seen for 14 months.

These may seem like flu symptoms. It's patriotism.

Sometimes you travel with patriotism and don't know it. Like the Russian who said to me, "I've never been to the United States. What are the borders like?"

I told her there were no border patrols or checkpoints or walls to go through between the states. All 50 were open and free with only an amused California trooper who watches you eat three oranges and four bananas which you can't bring into California.

Or the Australian woman who cornered me on a book tour and said, "Tell me how far the American women are now in their struggle for liberation so that we will know where we'll be 25 years from now."

I thought the flush was menopausal. It was patriotism.

We take for granted that we elect peanut farmers to the presidency, have a Bill of Rights for children, give hurricanes human names, have a bell that is a symbol of freedom with a crack in it, are a nation of immigrants from every pocket of the world, and have more people watch "Dallas" on television than voted in the last election.

You have to love a nation that celebrates its independence every July 4, not with a parade of guns, tanks and soldiers who file by the White House in a show of strength and muscle, but by family picnics where kids throw Frisbees, the potato salad gets icky, and the flies die from happiness.

You may think you've overeaten, but it's patriotism.

Living With A Terminal Illness

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago you published something that helped me tremendously when I learned that I had cancer. Please, please run it again. It's advice to patients on how to live with a terminal illness. I showed it to my doctor, and he thought so much of it, he had copies run off to give to some of his patients. Thank you. D.J. IN IOWA

DEAR D.J.: It's "How to Live With Illness" by Orville Kelly:

1. Talk about the illness. If it's cancer, call it cancer. You can't make life normal again by trying to hide what is wrong.
 2. Accept death as a part of life. It is!
 3. Consider each day as another day of life, a gift from God to be enjoyed as fully as possible.
 4. Realize that life is never going to be perfect. It wasn't before, and it won't be now.
 5. Pray! It isn't a sign of weakness, it's a sign of strength.
 6. Learn to live with your illness instead of considering yourself dying from it. We are all dying in some manner.
 7. Put your friends and relatives at ease. If you don't want pity, don't ask for it.
 8. Make all practical arrangements for funerals, wills, etc., and make certain your family understands them.
 9. Set new goals; realize your limitations. Sometimes the simple things of life become the most enjoyable.
 10. Discuss your problems with your family. Include the children if possible. After all, your problem is not an individual one.
- Have a good day... make it count.

DEAR ABBY: I am a nice-looking, 28-year-old divorced woman. I have no trouble getting dates, but my problem is that every man I date runs to the nearest exit when I tell him I have three kids.

I do not hide the fact that I have three children. My oldest is 9 and my youngest is 2. They are well-behaved and well-mannered and I am not ashamed of them. In fact, I am proud of them.

The last four men I dated seemed interested in me — until I told them I had three children. After that I never heard from them again. I haven't dated anyone in nine months because I don't want to be hurt again.

What can a mother who loves her children do?
NOT DATING

DEAR NOT DATING: Look into Parents Without Partners. You will meet other single parents who also love their children. Don't waste your time worrying about those who ran for the nearest exit when they learned you had three kids. Too bad they weren't aware that some of the best deals are "package deals." It's their loss.

DEAR ABBY: A few years ago my husband, whom I loved very much, left me for another woman. I was heartbroken. I had a dear friend who was very supportive of me when I was going through this, but in my deep grief I couldn't stand to see her so happily married, so I told her that her husband had somebody else, too.

I'm sure she didn't believe me, but she didn't get mad at me, and it was never mentioned again. However, after that we drifted apart, and now we rarely see each other unless we meet accidentally on the street or in a store.

I am now happily married to a fine man and the lie I told keeps bothering me. I miss the friendship we used to have. This is really getting to me. Should I break down and tell her the truth? Or just try to start the friendship all over again and not mention it?

SORRY

DEAR SORRY: If you want to revive the friendship, tell her the truth, apologize and clear the air.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is a customer who patronizes my bookstore regularly. He's dirty, grossly overweight, rarely shaves or combs his hair, and his body odor nearly knocks me down! After he leaves, I have to use a room deodorizer.

He comes in almost every day and stays from two to three hours reading my books. His hands are usually filthy, and in the book business dirty hands are what we dread the most because if a book is soiled, it won't sell.

This man is not a bum. He's educated, loves to read and he buys everything from cookbooks to political science. I appreciate his business, but I really think I'd be better off without him.

How do you tell a customer you would rather not have his business? People move away from him in the store because he smells so bad, and some won't even come in if they see he's here. I'm a rather sensitive person myself and I hate to hurt his feelings.

Is there some way to handle this?
BOOKSELLER IN HAWAII

DEAR BOOKSELLER: You are under no obligation to allow anyone to come into your store with filthy hands and soil your merchandise. Neither must you permit anyone to come into your store whose odor and appearance drive other customers away. Find a gentle way to tell this well-read, smelly character that he will either have to clean up his act or shop elsewhere.

Clear Guides Needed

The U.S. Supreme Court opened up a legal and moral nightmare with its rulings on pornography that cleared the way for publishers to include virtually any subject, photography or word in printed material intended for use by the public. State and local authorities have battled for years in trying to maintain some semblance of propriety in their communities against the court's vaguely defined "community standards" regimen for combatting pornography.

Now the court itself appears to be having some difficulty with the subject.

In a case involving the removal of nine books from a school library in New York, the court split about as sharply as ever before — four said restrict the school board's powers to remove objectionable books; four said broaden the board's powers, and one justice couldn't decide.

The lone justice did side with the four who wanted to restrict the board's powers that the case should go back to trial to determine if board members had "constitutionally valid concerns" that justified their removal of the books. It boils down to a case of passing the buck.

The school board has contended it ordered the books removed from the school library because of strong passages dealing with drugs, sex and brutality. Some of the books used four-letter words. Opponents argued the board's action was a First Amendment violation.

Freedom of choice in reading material is one thing; a captive school audience is another. Some of the books involved in the New York case had been used in classroom work. Even with today's unrestrained street talk, there are few who will argue that four-letter words are a necessity in classrooms, where teachers will tell you they already have enough problems with students' language.

The Supreme Court, as well as all other courts in this land, should continue to strike down censorship. That may well be the situation in the New York school board; if so, the court acted wisely in sending the case back to a trial court. But the fact remains: school boards are charged with establishing the format for our children's education. They cannot do it so long as they have only wishy-wash guidelines.

It's time for the Supreme Court to reconsider its own actions, decide definitely what will and will not be acceptable in its interpretation of what material may be used where, and say so.

AND THAT WON'T HELP MUCH AT ALL!

BY JAMES KILPATRICK

A Travesty Of Justice

WASHINGTON — If anything could prompt a wholesale review and revision of the "insanity defense" in criminal trials, the acquittal of John W. Hinckley Jr. should provide such impetus. The jury's verdict is a travesty of justice.

Did Hinckley attempt the assassination of President Reagan? In that attempt, did Hinckley so wound press secretary James Brady that Brady will be crippled for life? Were Hinckley's murderous attempts premeditated and deliberate? To all these questions, the answers were yes, yes, yes.

At the time he dropped into a shooter's crouch outside the Washington Hilton and pumped round after round of especially deadly bullets toward the president, did Hinckley know the difference between right and wrong? In the minds of most observers who followed the long trial, there is not the slightest doubt on this point. Of course he knew that what he was doing was wrong.

Well, then, was Hinckley deranged? The answer, again, is yes. Any man who sets out to assassinate a president, under the delusion that his action will favorably impress a young actress, is plainly irrational. We reasonably would say that such a person would be "out of his mind," that it was an "insane" thing for him to do.

But such words as "irrational" and "deranged" and "insane" are cotton words. Their meaning pulls apart at the touch. The terms are matters of degree. All of us might agree, at one extreme, that it would be cruel and inhumane to imprison the obvious lunatic — the pathetic creature who stabs an infant thinking that he is cutting a watermelon. In these cases, indeterminate custodial care under conditions of maximum security provides the only answer.

John Hinckley suffered no such affliction. Yes, he had fantasies; we all have fan-to get at the heart of the matter: What did the defendant intend to do? Without endorsing Hatch's bill specifically, it can be said that the senator is on the right track. A jury does not require psychobabble to get at a question of intent. When Hinckley acquired his arsenal of weapons, what did he intend to do? When Hinckley engaged in handgun practice against simulated human targets, what was in his mind? The evidence of intention was overwhelming. Hinckley was as guilty as John Wilkes Booth, as guilty as Charles J. Guiteau, as guilty as Lee Oswald, as guilty as Sirhan Sirhan, as guilty as James Earl Ray, as guilty as Arthur H. Bremer Jr. These were assassins or would-be assassins, all of them. The notion that Hinckley was "not guilty" is itself an irrational notion.

The verdict in the Hinckley trial is doubly regrettable, both for the manifest miscarriage of justice in the immediate instance and for the larger damage to the public confidence in the rule of law. The outcome will be cynically viewed as another example of one kind of justice for the rich and another kind of justice for the poor. Hinckley's wealthy family provided the best psychiatrists that money could buy. Defense witnesses spun sticky webs of pseudo-scientific jargon, and in these webs the concept of justice, like a moth, fluttered feebly and was trapped.

As so often happens, the states are ahead of the national government in seeking sensible reforms. Idaho has abolished the insanity defense. Georgia, Indiana, Michigan and Illinois permit verdicts of "guilty but men-dered." The states are ahead of the national government in seeking sensible reforms. Idaho has abolished the insanity defense. Georgia, Indiana, Michigan and Illinois permit verdicts of "guilty but mentasies. Yes, he felt his family had treated him badly. Are such feelings rare? Hinckley wrote morbid poems, dripping with self-pity, bewailing his lonely life. Is there a college student of "creative writing" who has not thus watered good bond paper with ink and tears?

The whole business of the insanity defense, as it has been perverted by the incantations of psychiatrists, cries out for legislative reform. At the federal level, Congress most assuredly has the power to write new rules to govern trials in which the defense is raised. Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, has introduced a bill that would cut through the psychiatric murk

Risks Ahead For Lebanon

By NICOLAS B. TATRO
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Creation of a strong central government in Lebanon may prove to be a difficult task even if Israel succeeds in driving the Palestinian guerrillas out of the country.

Syria remains the dominant force in the northern half of Lebanon. Many people here fear that no matter how the current crisis of PLO-dominated west Beirut is resolved the country could face effective partition into a Syrian-controlled north and an Israeli-run south.

At the same time, Lebanon is composed of a delicate balance of more than a dozen religious and ethnic groups which have traditionally squabbled — often violently — with each other for their share of the economic and political power. The sectarian differences will also make strong central government difficult to achieve.

"The nature of our internal problems hasn't changed," Walid Jumblatt, 33-year-old leader of the leftist National Movement, said in a recent interview.

The presence of 90,000 Israeli troops in Lebanon has given the rightist Christian Phalangist headed by Pierre Gemayel and his militia-commander son Bashir an upper hand in the political scene, at least temporarily.

Bashir Gemayel, a 34-year-old lawyer, already has been picked by his party as its candidate in elections scheduled within the next two months to find a replacement for President Elias Sarkis, a former banker who cannot succeed himself under the constitution.

"What concerns us and what we are working for is to get all the strangers out of our land, Syrians — Palestinians and Israelis and even U.N. security forces — because as Lebanese with a strong system and a strong army we would no longer need anyone," Gemayel said in the interview.

But Moslems and leftist have long been suspicious of the 21,000-man Christian-commanded Lebanese army. They fear Gemayel will attempt to reassert Christian privilege in the economic and political sphere.

One of the principal causes of 1975-76 Lebanese civil war, Jumblatt added, was the "overthrow of bourgeois privileges" by those at the lower end of the social-economic ladder. Lebanese leftists were assisted in that conflict by the Palestinians, whose numbers grew to a half-million in Lebanon and upset the Christian-Moslem balance.

How willing the Moslems and leftists will be to cooperate with Gemayel and the rightists may well depend on the resolution of the crisis in west Beirut, where Israeli forces have trapped the leadership and many members of Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization.

Political observers say there will be lasting bitterness if Gemayel joins with the Israelis in eliminating the last of the guerrillas and the west sector of the capital is destroyed.

"After all, this is a country of vendettas," said one prominent Lebanese Moslem academic with close ties to leading Lebanese politicians.

The professor, who declined to be further identified, claimed the Christians no longer constituted a majority of the population and predicted that in the long term "there will be civil war" rather than strong centralized government.

"The civil war has not finished or reached a logical conclusion," he said. "If the Israelis break the back of the PLO and turn over control to the Phalangists this will not resolve the problem. That is why I do not anticipate an early Israeli withdrawal."

"The tendency for fragmentation is greater now than before — including the possibility of a north and south Lebanon. I believe Lebanon will be a small country with a disunited people and many factions."

Syria, which maintained 30,000 troops in Lebanon before Israel's June 6 invasion, still has control of east Lebanon's Bekaa Valley and the mountainous north — which together represent about half the 4,000-square-mile Mediterranean nation of three million people.

Two Palestinian camps exist in the north as well as the Christian militia of former President Suleiman Franjeh, which is bitterly opposed to Gemayel family rule.

THIS AFTERNOON

A New Definition

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — Just about the time North Carolina makes significant progress in the fight against illiteracy, the definition of the word "literacy" is about to change, says the president of the state's Department of Community Colleges. Dr. Larry Blake thinks the literate person of the 1990s and the 21st century will know not only reading, writing and arithmetic. He'll be "high technology literate" — he'll know how to use computers and he'll have a basic understanding of advanced math and science.

Blake is a futurist — a person with a great interest in the future. The world is in the middle of its third major peaceful revolution, he says. First came the agricultural revolution and then the industrial revolution. The "Third Wave," an information and communications revolution, will be completed within 20 years and American life at that point will be so significantly different from today that he says he can't even imagine the details.

But the trend of the "Third Wave" is obvious. Advanced scientific techniques will lead to the development of super crops. Computers will get smaller and smaller, making today's electronics look quaint and bringing high tech into even more phases of our lives. Highly educated scientists will develop the technology on paper but technicians will build those computers and prepare the chemical procedures for the wonder crops. Those technicians will have to know the basics of physics and chemistry.

There will be no small part of the workforce. Instead of pushing people out of work, as some people fear, all this new technology will create millions of jobs, Blake says. Microelectronics firms will need 15 electricians supporting every engineer in a few years and bio-engineering will have the same demand shortly after, he predicts. Microelectronics, a blip on the economic charts in the mid-70s, will be a $20 billion American industry by 1985, analysts say.

Now the bad news. While we head for a time when our workforce will need so much manpower, our children are showing decreased interest in the basics required by such a world. Nationally, Blake says, enrollment in algebra classes has dropped by one-third, in chemistry by one-half and physics two-thirds, during the past decade.

Schools can't give today's high schoolers the specific training they'll need to be high tech workers of the 1990s. They don't know what to teach yet. But they can give them the basics on which to build. If you know algebra, chemistry and physics, you'll be ready to start a high tech training program, he says.

It's not that we'll have a choice, he says. Almost all jobs will become high tech intensive. Factories won't hire assemblers. They'll hire robot repairmen and computer programmers. "High tech is here whether we want it or not," he says. Non-technical jobs — unskilled work — are already being farmed out to underdeveloped countries. By mid-life, many of today's high schoolers will find the only job openings are for the highly trained.

The days of people graduating from school and never seeing a classroom again are also over, he says. In the future, there'll be such rapid expansions of knowledge and technical procedures, that workers will be constantly retrained either through a technical college or corporate programs. As he talked about nitrogen fixation of crops, and overnight genetic manipulations, he stressed that workers of the 1990s and beyond will need to know the Periodic Chart of the Elements as well as they know the alphabet.

To the editor

I do not so much intend this as a prophecy, but as a warning. I did not finish Albert Speer's memoirs. They inject by nature of the tone amongst other things something radically different from the CBS movella supposedly based on them. Mr. Speer's character was indeed one of a very professional and ambitious nature, it is obvious from the avid descriptions of professional sense and success (not only his but that of the government in general) and of the pronouncements and verbatim quotes present in one script and not in the other, that this Nazi was not in the least a victim of circumstance nor a timid aesthete, but rather an amazed and pleased architect in the public eye who was more than willing to seize the reins of the economy when that opportunity arose.

Speer was not himself an antisemite, but an intrinsic part of the development of worker loyalty among Aryan Germans in the economic plant, was their full employment in place of what Jewish jobs, properties, and estates existed. He was therefore completely cognizant of the basic plight of the Jews, not only that but planned and effected management of the economy on that basis.

A professional man who takes part in the affairs of state is not innocent of that state's moral atrocities, and as a rule the plain fact is that they not only ignore but also accept these phenomena when they consider them practical. Hitler lost the term in 1932 elections to a conservative war general, but the banking and capitalist institutions supported Hitler, whereas a coalition of moderate socialist and liberal parties were the only backbone invested by a relatively rich Jewish minority, to make an effort on behalf of Hindenburg, in a last attempt to mollify fascism and preserve at least the constitution of the republic.

Extremes Of Advice On Future

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The conflicts and crises that have afflicted the U.S. and world economies over the past decade or so afford an insight into two extremes of dealing with the future.

The financial evangelists have been telling you the world economy is coming apart, and that if you are to save your assets you must correct your financial sins and get in a supply of dehydrated food, quick.

The other extreme professes faith in the inevitable superiority of riches over poverty, and has expressed its faith throughout a dozen dismal years by insisting that the stock market will rise again, soon.

Urgency electrifies their spiel. Should you delay, they say, you will regret it. Very well known by them is that fear and greed are marketable: They sell books and newsletters and raise lecture fees.

No matter that time and events decline to cooperate. That too must be viewed as an opportunity! For another book, perhaps, to explain why the promised events have been delayed — but will come, soon.

Soon takes an interminable time. Patience wanes. Many stock market forecasters become irritants even to themselves, and so begin to shift slowly and, they hope, imperceptibly, lest they lose their audience.

The less subtle among them do lose their audiences, and begin to lash out at anyone who points out the errors of their ways, such as asking why the Dow Jones industrial average is down where it was 17 years ago.

But those who shift do get by. Those who read earlier works of Douglas Casey or Harry Brown or Howard Ruff may wonder how, after depicting such apocalyptic scenarios, there can be anything else worth saying.

But there is. Ruff says he may have sounded a bit extreme in some of his earlier material. Browne continues to write. Casey has a new book with an inspiring dedication: "To those who know that the Ascent of Man will continue, and do their part to ensure that it does."

No matter the criticism, such authors have said a good deal of things that perhaps should have been said — about short-sighted government economic policies, inflation, rising indebtedness, interest rates.

The scorn from the establishment economists in government, industry, finance and academe was to be expected, although their record is no more prize winning. But a case might be made against the extremists for the repent-or-be-damned manner in which they presented their cases.

A case also can be made against their claims of success. Several letter writers defend their forecasts of a collapse in housing prices by pointing to declines in Beverly Hills and other posh communities.

The better to sell, you might say, and sales — rather than accurate advice — is the name of the game. Some letter writers have persisted for many years in disseminating poor stock market advice at annual prices ranging into the high hundreds of dollars.

Some of these writers sometimes land at the extreme of pessimism, but that's really not the way to play the game. You go the other way in stocks, to the extreme of optimism. Stock buying is buying the future. Paint a black future and destroy your market. Color it gold instead.

And if you are a reader of either the doom or boom boys, it might be some advice to allow a gray shade of hesitancy and skepticism to creep over the material. Sufficient, that is, to get rid of the glare.

Strength For Today

IF WE BUT WAIT

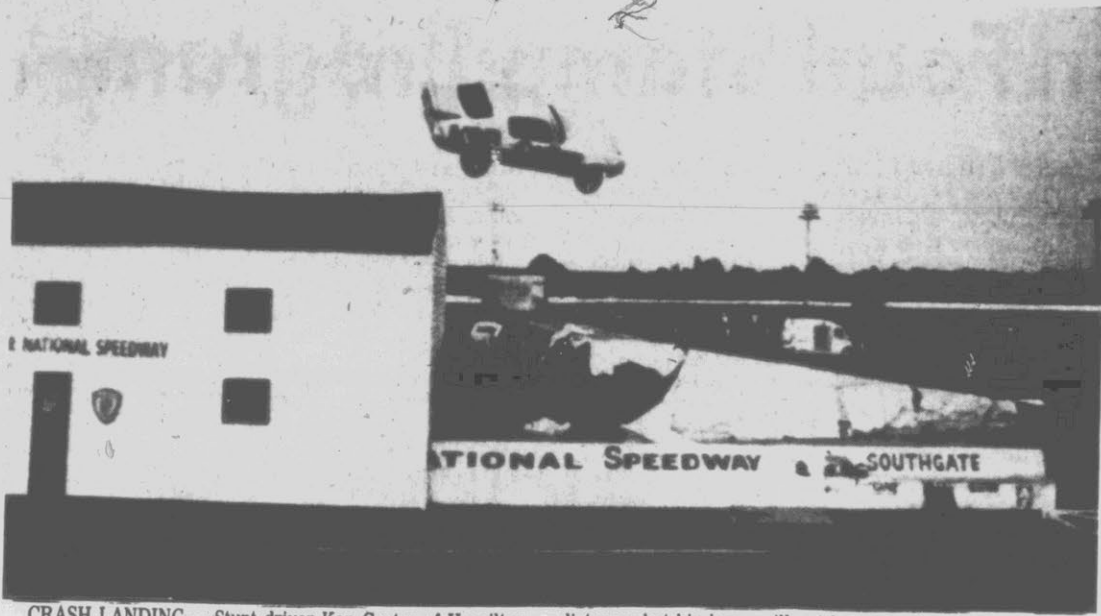

Someone once observed, "It's always noontime, somewhere."

Yes, somewhere there is always sunlight. We get the picture of God's graciousness going about the world, his sun shining on the good and evil, his rain falling on the just and the unjust. The general impression conveyed is that the world, in spite of all its trouble and sorrow, is a place of light. When fortune turns against us, or pain comes to plague us, it is very easy to believe that God has forgotten us. But no. Darkness must follow day. The sun will always rise again.

We have very little control over the way our environment affects our lives. The changing seasons, the cycle of life — here we see God at work.

Millions are asleep in some other part of the world while we work. But noontime can belong to anyone... if he will but wait a few hours. — Elisha Douglass

Foot And Mouth Vaccine Works

President Hafez Assad's government in Damascus has rejected Israeli ultimatums and Lebanese government requests to pull out his troops, either from Beirut or the rest of the country.

Syrian officials, including Information Minister Ahmed Iskander Ahmed, have insisted that Syria came to Lebanon under an Arab League mandate separate the warring Christian-Moslem factions and that it would take a summit of the 20 Arab League nations to reverse the decision.

Israel has made it clear that its troops will not leave until the Syrians do. The standoff has prompted some Lebanese political observers to fear a north-south split that could last for months or even years while negotiations to achieve a mutual withdrawal take place.

NEW YORK (AP) - A new experimental vaccine has protected laboratory animals from one of the world's deadliest livestock plagues, foot-and-mouth disease, according to a report published Wednesday.

Nature magazine reported that the vaccine was developed at the Research Institute of Scripps Clinic in La Jolla, Calif., and the Animal Virus Research Institute in Pirbright, Surrey, England.

Dr. Richard Lerner, who led the Scripps scientific team, said the research technique he used should allow the creation of vaccine against anything to which the human or animal body can respond.

Unlike conventional vaccines, which contain dead or harmless viruses, the experimental vaccine is made entirely from chemicals and contains no virus.

A recent outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease in Europe was attributed to a faulty batch of vaccine containing a virus that caused the disease it was supposed to prevent.

Guinea pigs given a single injection of the new vaccine developed protective antibodies against the foot-and-mouth virus, the report said.

No attempt has been made yet to test the immunity of cattle to the natural virus, but the cattle inoculated with the experimental vaccine developed protective antibodies, according to the report.

"Prospects for a totally synthetic vaccine against foot-and-mouth disease are encouraging," said the report by Lerner and his English counterpart, Dr. Fred Brown.

The vaccine would be practical, they said, because one inoculation is enough to give protection and the synthetic vaccine would not need refrigeration.

"The real potential here is for discovery," said Lerner, noting that the same research techniques could be used to discover important substances in the human body. The techniques already have been used in several laboratories to find and study the products of genes that are involved in some cancers.

The technique involves stringing together a series of amino acids to produce a substance that mimics a protein on the surface of the virus and induces the body to produce an antibody to that protein.

Reagan Bows To States On Food Stamp Program

By DON McLEOD
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is about to move a trimmed-down "new federalism" back to center stage, minus the $11 billion federal food stamp program that state and local officials balked at taking over.

Details of the plan to transfer $39 billion in federal programs to the states were learned from persons who attended final negotiating sessions at the White House over the past two weeks.

It would have the federal government assume most of the expensive Medicaid program costing states some $18.3 billion this year while transferring basic welfare and about 30 other federal programs to the states.

Reagan originally proposed a $50 billion package with the states taking over welfare and food stamps in return for federal assumption of Medicaid. He also would have transferred more than 40 other programs to the states over an eight-year period.

Under the latest version, Aid to Families with Dependent Children, the nation's basic welfare vehicle, would be turned over to the states immediately and 30 other programs would be handed to them over a transition period.

The proposal emerged after five months of negotiations with state and local officials and is still subject to some revision before it is submitted to Congress, officials said.

Richard S. Williamson, Reagan's advisor for intergovernmental affairs, confirmed in an interview that the president will unveil the plan in a speech to the National Association of Counties in Baltimore on July 13.

Reagan also will send a federalism message to Congress followed by formal legislation with hopes of getting the debate fired up again this year even if it is too late to get a bill passed in this session, Williamson said.

Strike Threat Is Posed By Engineers, Trainmen

By MERRILL HARTSON
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Contract negotiations between the railroad industry and unions representing workers who run the trains have soured to the point where labor leaders are threatening a nationwide strike as early as July 10.

"We presently are contemplating a strike on a national basis," G.R. Bichsel, vice president of the 40,000-member Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, said in a telephone interview from the union's headquarters in Cleveland.

"We're preparing for one. But it could change," President Reagan, however, could invoke his emergency authority under the Railway Labor Act to forestall any national walkout for up to 60 days.

The National Railway Labor Conference, management bargaining arm for virtually all of the some 110 rail carriers except Amtrak and Conrail, has achieved contract settlements with 11 of its 13 unions.

But the locomotive engineers rejected the board's offer of voluntary arbitration last month, and an initial 30-day cooling-off period required under provisions of the Railway Labor Act will expire at midnight July 10.

The United Transportation Union, largest of the labor organizations and representing some 85,000 trainmen, on Wednesday rejected voluntary arbitration by the National Mediation Board and said it also plans a strike within 30 days.

The BLE represents some 40,000 workers, including three-fourths of the engineers who actually run the trains for more than 100 rail lines across the nation.

If the carriers are struck, the BLE would likely be the first to walk out since its 30-day cooling off period is closer to termination than the July 30 termination date for the transportation union.

"I just wouldn't know how to assess the odds" of a nationwide walkout, said Charles Hopkins, chairman of the management group. "These (union officials) are responsible people and in the main reasonable. We just have not been able to bridge the gap. It's just unfortunate."

Reagan could forestall a strike by naming an emergency fact-finding board and imposing another 30-day cooling off period. The panel would have 30 days to report its findings to the chief executive. Under the law, the unions would not be free to act until 30 days after those findings have been issued.

Hopkins said he believes Reagan would invoke the provisions of the act authorizing a fact-finding panel. A national rail strike, he said, "would be terribly disruptive in view of the other economic circumstances at the present time."

"The main (negotiating) problems," he said, "have to do with the fact that management has been pressing for relief from some of the restrictive practices and (work) rules that still beset the industry. We can no longer live with these conditions and remain competitive."

Bichsel, whose union represents three-fourths of the locomotive engineers on 100 railroads across the country, said the contract stalemate involves economic issues and demands by management for concessions on a host of work rules.

Robert Hart, a spokesman for the United Transportation Union, said it would have to notify the railroads two weeks before any strike.

"We plan to go," he said. "We would strike selectively, maybe one, two or three carriers in pursuit of a national agreement." He said the three railroad targets would be the Baltimore & Ohio, the Southern and the Santa Fe.

A Celebration At New Bern

New Bern will hold its 205th celebration of American independence this weekend. The town held its first Fourth of July celebration in 1778 — the first town in the South to officially celebrate its independence and the third in the nation (after Philadelphia and Boston).

The festivities in New Bern will begin Saturday from 5-9 p.m. with a free concert by the Little German Band in the parking lot of the Harvey Mansion.

Sunday's events will be held from 1:30 p.m.-10 p.m. There will be a registration table for entering the recreation events and contests. Anyone planning to enter the contests must register. The public should bring own lawn chairs or blankets. Concessions will be available throughout the day. Picnic facilities are available at Cedric Boyd Park at Union Point.

The schedule of events for Sunday is as follows:

- 1:30 p.m. — registration for 2 p.m. events at Bicentennial Park.
- 2 p.m. — games and contests such as sack race, egg toss, money dive, basketball toss, potato race and greased pole events at Bicentennial Park.
- 1:30-5 p.m. — Tryon Palace Gardens/Drama; reptile exhibit at Bicentennial Park.
- 3 p.m. — Little German Band on Tryon Palace Lawn behind the main building.
- 4 p.m. — Paula Larke, jazz and blues singer, on the stage at Bicentennial Park.
- 5 p.m. — Little German Band and Folk Dancers on the stage at Bicentennial Park.
- 6 p.m. — Tryon Twirlers Square Dance Group on the stage at Bicentennial Park.
- 7 p.m. — Flag raising ceremony in Bicentennial Park.
- 8 p.m. — Marine Band concert on the stage in Bicentennial Park.
- 9 p.m. — Fireworks in Bicentennial Park.

July 4 'Hallmark' Linked To A Chinese Discovery

By ELIZABETH HERRMAN
 WASHINGTON (UPI) — "The day will be the most memorable in the history of America. I am apt to believe that it will be celebrated by succeeding generations as the great anniversary festival."
 John Adams, writing to his wife on July 3, 1776, said the Fourth of July "ought to be solemnized with pomp and parade... bonfires and illuminations from one end of this continent to the other, from this time forward forevermore."
 If Americans genuinely appreciate the 200 years of American history behind Independence Day, few realize that the Chinese invented fireworks over 2,000 years ago.
 Originally, the Chinese used black powder to scare away evil spirits. The ingredients of the powder have remained the same for 2,000 years: 75 parts potassium nitrate (or saltpeter as it is commonly called), 15 parts charcoal and 10 parts sulfur.
 "In fact," says George Zambelli, president of the Zambelli Co., one of the nations largest fireworks manufacturers, "We're still using the same paper, paste, chemicals, and twine that have been in our business since we got started 87 years ago. New ideas are difficult and dangerous."

 In ancient societies talk was forbidden while preparing the fireworks, because it might upset the "soul" of the black powder, which is "very sensitive and explosive in bulk form," says John Conkling, director of the American Pyrotechnics Association.
 Fireworks were brought to Europe from China by 13th century crusaders, but, were not in widespread use until the 15th century. Then they were used to celebrate saint's days, royal weddings, births, coronations, and battle victories.
 The Italians were the first to actually manufacture fireworks. They perfected the art and remained the masters until about 1600.
 The early Americans brought the tradition of celebration from England to the New World. In 1781, Massachusetts was the first colony to vote for official recognition of Independence Day.

Pre-19th century fireworks displays consisted primarily of noise and rockets.
 Charcoal and iron filings supplied an orange-gold effect, but pyrotechnics technology had not advanced enough to produce the array of beautiful colors we see today.
 The reds, greens, blues, yellows and bright whites that are common now were not produced until the 1800s when new materials were used: strontium, barium, copper and sodium.
 Fireworks manufacturing is a very labor intensive industry. Most color compounds are, still made by hand, according to Zambelli.
 A fuel, such as sulfur, is mixed with potassium perchlorate and a metal salt. This mixture is then pounded by hand and shaped into loaves, then sliced and diced and dried in the sun. Each chunk of charcoal will produce one individual dot of color, when ignited.
 Today, the fireworks shells are quite sophisticated, unlike the bamboo shoots used 2,000 years ago by the Chinese.

In order to produce a wide variety of colors and noises, each shell is divided into separate compartments containing different types of powder. A slow burning fuse reaches different compartments in successive stages, producing a series of spectacular colors and sounds.
 While the chemistry of fireworks has changed very little through the ages, computers have revolutionized some aspects of the industry. Electronic control boards harmonize colors and noises with music. Elaborate laser shows spurt out bursts of colored smoke.
 The only unsolved problem for the pyrotechnician is producing "an intense, vivid blue," according to Conkling. "It's the most illusive color."
 The most significant future development in pyrotechnics will be the development of the blue color, says Conkling.
 "And given the ancient origins of the fireworks industry, it is perhaps appropriate that the formula will probably be produced in China," he says.

Need Arrangement For 9,000 Voices

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Anyone have an arrangement of "Down by the Old Mill Stream," for 9,000 voices?
 That's how many barber shop singers are in town today for three days of barbershop chorus and quartet competition at the Pittsburgh Civic Center.
 It's the 44th annual convention of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America.
 They're here "to share one mutual love — the barber shop chord," said George Stothard, 44, of Webster, N.Y., whose Chorus of the Genesee is one of 16 competing choruses.

 Not all stereotypes about barber shop singers hold true for the assembly. For example, handlebar moustaches are rare among these crooners.
 "That's because they're a great nuisance and the wives don't like them," said Leo Stefano of Pittsburgh, who was bucking the trend with a modest handlebar of his own, without wax.
 The idea that barber shop singers harmonize at the drop of a note also is wrong, said Rod Olevson of Palo Alto, Calif., who says he prefers a well-practiced rendition to an impromptu melody.

Draft-Registering Sticking With Donovan Resister 'Shaken'

TRYING MOMENT — Benjamin Sasway holds his mother as she begins to cry after they learned he was the first person to be indicted by the Justice Department for failure to register for the draft. (AP Laserphoto)

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A college student accused of failing to register with the Selective Service System in the first such charge since the Vietnam war says he is "absolutely terrified" of the indictment but not about to back down.

Benjamin H. Sasway, 21, of Vista, Calif., was indicted Wednesday by a federal grand jury in San Diego, becoming the first person accused of failing to register for the standby military draft.

Sasway, a political science and philosophy student at Humboldt State University, was to surrender for arraignment today.

"I'm absolutely terrified but I can't allow fear or threat of bodily punishment to alter a moral belief," he said Wednesday. "What good is a moral belief if we're just going to not pay any attention to it every time the going gets rough?"

Federal regulations require young men over 18 to register in case a draft is needed in the future. There are no current plans to draft any men into the armed forces, which rely on volunteers.

U.S. Attorney Peter Nunez said the charge was filed only after repeated efforts to persuade the young man to register had failed.

The one-count indictment alleges Sasway "did knowingly and willfully fail, evade and refuse to present himself for registration." If convicted, he could face five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Sasway told reporters earlier this week that he "is ready to go the distance — fine or jail or whatever it takes." He added that his parents feared the prospect of their son going to jail but supported him anyway.

Sasway said he is not a pacifist and would fight in a "just war." But "when they come into my home and tell me to start packing because I'm going to war wherever they think it's right, that's where I draw the line," he said.

Workshop For Professionals

Environmental health supervisors in eastern North Carolina will participate in a continuing education workshop on management and supervision for environmental health professionals July 12-14 in Greenville.

Sponsored by the Eastern AHEC and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill School of Public Health, where the program was developed, the workshop will deal with managing change, frustration, conflict and other topics chosen to improve participants' management skills.

The workshop will be held at the Willis Building.

Charged Driver In Collision

Kay White Cherry of Route 3, Edenton, was charged with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety by Greenville police Tuesday, following investigation of a 12:55 p.m. collision at the intersection of First and Meade streets.

Police said the Cherry car collided with an auto driven by Suzan Dawn Gunter of 1401 Willow St., causing an estimated $1,200 damage to the Cherry car and $4,000 damage to the Gunter vehicle.

By MERRILL HARTSON

AP Labor Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is sticking with Raymond J. Donovan as secretary of labor, declaring "that case is closed," but key members of Congress say Donovan's fitness to serve remains an unanswered question.

At his nationally broadcast news conference Wednesday night, Reagan gave Donovan a warm vote of confidence, saying the Cabinet officer had been "unfairly and unjustly assailed" by allegations linking him to mobsters.

"Certainly, I'm going to be sticking with him," the president said.

Reagan noted that a 1,000-page special prosecutor's report released Monday said there was no basis to prosecute Donovan on a variety of allegations by FBI informants that the labor secretary had ties to organized crime figures when he was a New Jersey construction executive.

Asked if Donovan had become a liability to his administration, Reagan said:

"Now, why should someone become an embarrassment who has been attacked and undergone what he has undergone all these months, and then a thousand pages of investigatory report says there was never any substantiation for those charges, as he had said in the beginning, there would be none."

"I think that it would be the most unfair thing in the world for anyone to think that he has been anything but unfairly and unjustly assailed."

But on Capitol Hill, Sen. Daniel Quayle, R-Ind., a member of the Labor and Human Resources Committee, said the panel "has no alternative" but to resume its investigation if Donovan remains in the Cabinet. The committee's probe was halted while special prosecutor Leon Silverman completed his investigation.

"If he stays on, there has to be an investigation," Quayle said of Donovan.

He said committee members will embark on "a period of digestion" of the contents of Silverman's three-volume report and then likely will resume their probe after the Fourth of July recess.

Meanwhile, Senate Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., has asked Reagan to turn over to the Senate any background material on Donovan or other administration officials that has been withheld.

In a letter to the president, Byrd said the failure of the FBI and White House to give a Senate committee everything it knew about Donovan prior to his Senate confirmation "may have been an accidental or an isolated incident."

He said he would be "remiss in my duties" if he didn't try to determine whether other materials had been withheld from the Senate.

Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, the labor committee's chairman, had no immediate comment on Reagan's remarks. But Hatch had said previously the panel would not rest until it presses an inquiry into the FBI's handling of the Donovan confirmation probe.

Earlier Wednesday, a company attorney for Donovan's former construction firm said it has halted a counter-investigation of the Senate committee.

Theodore Geiser offered no apology for the mirror investigation by the Schiavone Construction Co. of Secaucus, N.J., which infuriated members of the committee and soured calls for Donovan's ouster.

In a telephone interview from his law office in Newark, Geiser confirmed that the company had recalled sleuths hired to dig up information that might be damaging about congressional investigators. But he said there was no justification for the outrage on Capitol Hill.

"I'm sorry they're so sensitive," he said.

Charge Charlotte Man In Shooting Policeman

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A Charlotte man was charged with murder early today in the fatal shooting of a city policeman — the arrest came only hours after another Charlotte man had been sentenced to life in prison in the fatal shooting of a city policeman last November.

Charlotte police said a man tentatively identified as Richard Eugene Watson, 23, of Charlotte was charged with shooting officer Ernest Coleman, who was working during off-duty hours at a convenience store.

Police said Coleman, 31, was shot in the forehead after he stepped out of the store after ejecting a man from the store for rowdiness.

It was the second fatal shooting of a Charlotte policeman in the past year. Police officer Edmond Cannon, 29, died Nov. 23 after he was shot five times when he walked into a robbery in progress at another convenience store.

Ameen Kareem Abdullah, 32, of Charlotte, was sentenced to life in prison late Wednesday afternoon in the shooting of Cannon.

Less than two hours after Abdullah was sentenced, Coleman was shot.

A police officer who asked not to be identified said Coleman's assailant stepped from behind a corner and fired at Coleman from about 20 feet, apparently missing once and firing again, shooting Coleman in the forehead.

Coleman was rushed to the hospital where specialists performed brain scans and surgery. He was pronounced dead at 12:13 a.m. today.

Five men were questioned about 40 minutes after the shooting but were not charged. They were sitting in a car four blocks from the convenience store when the shooting occurred, police said. Watson was brought in for questioning shortly before midnight.

"Oh, this is unbenevolent," said Barbara Paysour, the owner's wife.

Second Phase Of Tax Cut Will Show Up This Week

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Paychecks are a little fatter today as workers start collecting the second installment of the largest tax cut in history. If the Reagan administration's forecasts are on target, the extra money will spark a recovery from the worst recession since World War II.

The reduction in the tax withheld from individual paychecks will range from 40 cents for the $100-a-week earner to $13.40 at the $700 level and higher. The Treasury Department figures a typical married worker with two children and the median family income of about $24,000 a year will take home an extra $6 a week.

In many cases, the higher Social Security taxes that began Jan. 1 and the effects of inflation, which nudges workers into higher brackets as their incomes rise, will leave taxpayers no better off than they were.

But President Reagan's advisers are counting on that extra money and the 7.4-percent increase in Social Security benefits taking effect today to set off a consumer buying spree that would quickly work its way through the economy, firing up idle factories and slashing the high unemployment rate.

"If we stick to our plan, if we keep the Congress from going back to its runaway spending, the recovery will take hold, strengthen, and endure," Reagan declared Wednesday night in a nationally televised news conference.

The president said the buying power of Americans is growing for the "first time in years" under his economic program, and declared, "Our loyalty lies with little taxpayers, not big tax spenders."

As he often does, Reagan promised to defend the third installment of the tax cut — scheduled for July 1, 1983 — from efforts to change it. "These tax incentives must be preserved. They are essential to lasting economic recovery," he said.

As for Social Security, Reagan referred to his campaign pledges of 1980 that "we'll protect those benefits and we will protect the integrity of Social Security. We are honoring these promises."

Despite his statement, Reagan's aides circulated budget-cutting proposals among congressional leaders at private negotiations earlier this year that called for delaying the Social Security cost-of-living increase until Oct. 1, and limiting it to 4 percent.

The administration expected some of that economic recovery to happen last year when businesses began receiving their share of the tax reduction retroactively. But business investment is lagging far behind what had been anticipated, and for the tax cut to produce the hoped-for results will require consumers to do what business did not do.

"If consumers don't overcompensate by spending a substantial portion of the tax cut, hopes for a robust recovery are right out the window," said an economist for Democrats on the congressional Joint Economic Committee. "That goes for housing and automobiles as well as retail sales."

Bruce Bartlett, senior economist for Republicans on the committee, sees it differently. "It's quite clear the recession is ended, and to that extent this (tax) reduction is a plus — it can only make the recovery better than expected," he said.

The new tax reduction is the second installment of a multi-year cut enacted last year that, when fully effective in 1984, will slash individual tax rates by an average of 23 percent. Taxes were cut by about 1.25 percent and withholding rates reduced by 5 percent last Oct. 1. The third stage will be a 10-percent reduction in withholdings on July 1, 1983.

Starting today, paychecks will show a cut averaging about 10 percent in federal income taxes withheld. Any wages paid today or later should reflect the full reduction, even if the money is for work done before today.

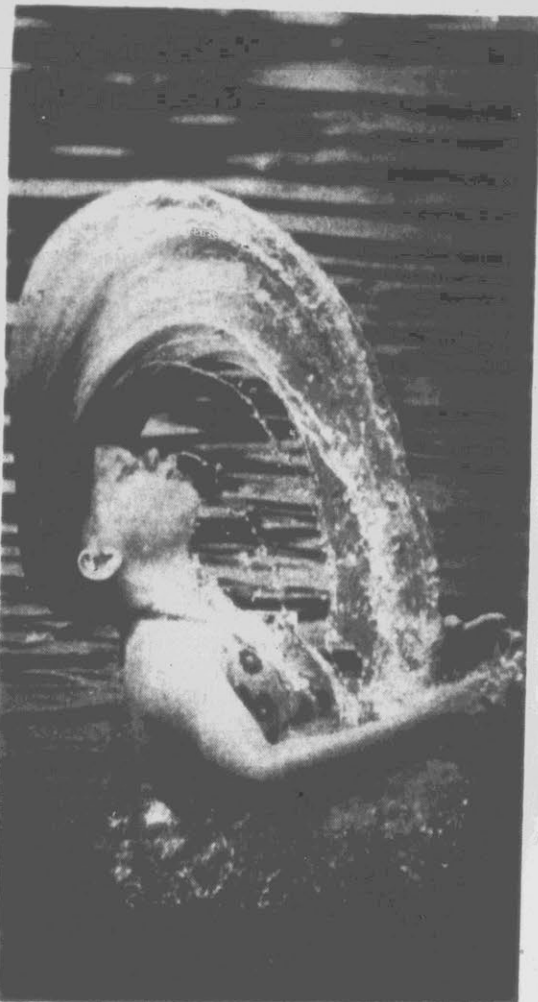

The amount withheld for federal income taxes varies with income, marital status, the number of allowances (including those for spouse and dependents) and frequency of pay periods.

In the case of married workers who are paid each week, a $200 earner with three allowances will take home an extra 80 cents weekly; a $400 earner claiming four allowances will get $4.20; a $600 worker will get an extra $12.30 if he or she claims no allowances, $11.60 with two allowances or $8.80 weekly with six allowances.

A single worker earning $200 a week gets an additional $2.30 if two allowances are claimed; a $300 weekly wage and one allowance produce a $5.60 cut in withholding; a $500 worker will take home an extra $11.80 if no allowances are claimed, $11.20 with one allowance, or $10.50 with two.

The new withholding rates reflect only the across-the-board reduction in income-tax rates. Workers who qualify for the new "marriage-penalty" relief or a liberalized child-care credit, or who contribute to an Individual Retirement Account may have withholding cut further.

Insurers Want New Rate Hike

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Auto insurance premiums would increase an average of 7.7 percent for most drivers and 11.9 percent for drivers insured through the state Reinsurance Facility under the latest requested rate increases put forth by the auto insurance industry.

The proposed increases were filed by the N.C. Rate Bureau Wednesday with Insurance Commissioner John Ingram. Ingram's office represents the industry in rate matters.

Ingram issued a statement Wednesday saying he would respond to the proposed increases after his staff has had time to review them. He can allow all or part of the increases or he can reject them entirely — something he has often done in the past.

"The cost to insurance companies of providing auto insurance has increased much more than the rate increase allowed during the five years North Carolina law has imposed a 'cap' on rates," Rate Bureau Chairman D. T. Zimmermann said in explaining the insurance industry's reasons for the increases.

"There has been no cap by the state or anyone else on our losses and expenses," he said in a prepared statement. According to the requests, actual rates would vary depending on a motorist's driving record, home town and other factors.

Industry officials said the proposed increases actually would not be high enough to cover their costs, but state law limits the annual increase to an amount based on increases in the U.S. Consumer Price Index. Under the formula, a 7.7 percent increase is all the industry could get.

The 7.7 percent hike would apply to 2.5 million policy holders who are not covered by the reinsurance facility. The facility is a pool in which all companies share losses on drivers they do not want to cover voluntarily.

The higher increase of 11.9 percent would apply to drivers in the facility with poor driving records.

Last year, auto insurers applied for an average increase of 10 percent. Ingram negotiated an agreement that left rates unchanged for drivers with clean records but raised premiums for others.

In his prepared statement, Ingram said he was able to "hold the rate bureau to no increase...There was a total savings for North Carolina motorists of over $10 million."

The industry proposal calls for an increase of 12.4 percent for liability coverage, which insures the policyholder against injury to others.

The overall amount of the proposed increase would be held to 7.7 percent because coverage to policyholders' cars and against theft or fire damage would be only 1.1 percent.

N.C. Primary Results To Be Made Official Today

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The results of Tuesday's Democratic and Republican primaries in North Carolina will be made official today, setting the stage for some key congressional runoff in the 2nd District and putting an end to attempts to extend legislators terms to four years.

The 2nd District was far and away the most widely contested congressional race — primarily because U.S. Rep. L.H. Fountain decided not to seek re-election, and because former U.S. Attorney H.M. "Mickey" Michaux Jr., was the leading vote-getter in his attempt to become the state's first black congressman since 1901.

In other election results, a runoff appears likely for the Democratic nomination for two of three seats open on the North Carolina Court of Appeals and several state House and Senate members lost bids for renomination.

One who did not lose, however, was state Rep. G. Ronald Taylor, D-Bladen, who was indicted May 13 on charges of conspiring and soliciting to burn warehouses owned by state Sen. J.J. "Monk" Harrington, D-Bertie.

In the 2nd District congressional race, Michaux led the three-way Democratic race to succeed Fountain, but Michaux fell short of obtaining 50 percent of the vote needed to avert a runoff.

With all 219 precincts reporting in unofficial returns, Michaux had 46,552 votes, or 44.1 percent, to 34,775, or 32.9 percent, for former state legislator I.T. "Tim" Valentine of Nashville. Former state House speaker James E. Ramsey finished third with 24,429 votes, or 23 percent.

Although he led in the voting, Michaux said in an interview Wednesday that his chances of defeating Valentine in the July 27 runoff were "about even."

"Right now," Michaux said, "November is as far away as Utopia."

Michaux's cautious outlook is based on the fact that he is black and Valentine is white. Michaux has campaigned against "Reaganomics" and says he will continue to do so.

Valentine has said he does not expect his second primary campaign to be much different than the first. He says the difference between himself and Michaux is not color but philosophy.

"I have felt all along that it was not a racial matter," he said.

Whichever candidate is victorious in that race still won't be home free, however, as the Republicans believe they have a strong candidate in the 2nd District race as well.

Former professional basketball player and Duke collegiate star John W. "Jack" Marin was the leading vote-getter in the three-way Republican race in the 2nd District primary. Unofficial returns showed Marin with 3,160 votes, or 48.39 percent; while challenger F. Douglas Biddy was second with 1,875 votes, or 28.86 percent, and Barry L. Gardner had 1,483, or 22.75 percent.

In the state's other congressional races, 1st District Democratic congressman Walter B. Jones easily gained renomination, as did 3rd District Democrat Charles Whitley.

Former University of North Carolina athletic star William W. Cobey Jr. ran away with the Republican nomination in the 4th District race. Incumbent Democrat Stephen L. Neal won renomination in the 5th District race, while Republican Anne Bagnal captured 60 percent of the vote for the 5th District Republican nomination.

U.S. Rep. Charles Rose won his 7th District Democratic primary race, as did 8th District Democratic incumbent William G. Heffner. James M. Clark won the Democratic nomination in the 11th District.

Voters in Tuesday's primaries defeated two of five proposed constitutional amendments, including one that would have doubled state legislators' terms and helped finance port construction in North Carolina.

Gov. Jim Hunt appeared pleased that 75 percent of the voters rejected the four-year-term amendment, although he fell short of saying he approved of it.

"They thought two-year terms were the best thing," he said at his weekly press conference Wednesday.

Asked if four-year terms would have increased the power of the legislature at the expense of the executive branch, Hunt said, "I think it would have made the legislative branch stronger."

Former Guilford County legislator Tom Gilmore, who organized the "Keep The Two Year-Term Committee," echoed Hunt's feelings.

"The message should be very loud and clear," Gilmore said. "The voters of this state oppose strongly giving executive power to the legislative branch."

However, state Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Goldsboro, who proposed the amendment, said the issue was far from dead.

"I think we will see more and more discussion in the future about whether the citizen legislature will be able to stand up under the high cost of campaigning and the cost of staying in Raleigh so long," he said.

The defeat of Amendment No. 4, which would have let public bodies operating airports and seaports make use of tax-exempt revenue bonds, was something of a let-down for Hunt.

"I wish it had passed," he said, but he added that development of state facilities would continue.

"In October we will dedicate the third of three new major airports in the state — Raleigh-Durham, Charlotte and Winston-Salem-High Point," Hunt said. "And we're going ahead with a $7 million improvement in our port at Wilmington. So we'll continue to make progress."

While the air-seaport finance amendment was defeated 52 percent to 48 percent, a similar measure aimed at helping colleges was approved by an equally close margin.

Amendment No. 5 extends the availability of tax-exempt bonds to the state's 38 private colleges and universities. Such bonds were formerly used only by public and non-profit privately owned hospitals and private industrial plants.

The amendment was approved 51 percent to 49 percent. The largest margin of approval was for an amendment allowing the Utilities Commission to appeal cases directly to the state Supreme Court, bypassing the Court of Appeals.

Supporters of the amendment, which was approved 61 percent to 39 percent, said the cases eventually wind up in the high court anyway, but cost more in the longer process.

An amendment allowing retired judges to be temporarily recalled to fill vacancies on courts other than those on which they served was passed 54 percent to 46 percent. Amendment No. 2 permits retired Supreme Court justices to be recalled to sit on the Court of Appeals as well as the Supreme Court, while retired Court of Appeals judges would be able to sit temporarily on the Supreme Court.

In the state legislative races, perhaps no one was more surprised at being renominated than Taylor, who has pleaded innocent to conspiracy charges stemming from fires at three warehouses owned by Harrington.

"I'm overwhelmed at the confidence the people have placed in me," Taylor said.

Taylor, 29, was leading incumbent Edd Nye in the 12th House District Democratic primary. Unofficial vote tallies showed challenger Edward C. Bowen had 8,137 votes, compared with Taylor's 7,565 and Nye's 7,331 in the two-seat district.

But in a telephone interview from Elizabethtown on Wednesday, he said, "I feel like they (the charges) were a liability. I worked harder than I ever have before."

But several other incumbents in Democratic and Republican state legislative primaries lost their seats.

In Democratic primaries in the state Senate's 12th District, veteran Sen. Joseph Raynor lost to incumbent Anthony E. Rand and former Rep. Laura Tally. Unofficial returns showed Rand, with 10,979 votes, beat Raynor by only six votes, while Ms. Tally garnered 12,349 votes.

In another apparent upset, challenger Wendell H. Murphy defeated incumbent Douglas A. Clark in the 10th House District Democratic primary. Clark, chairman of the House Elections Committee, lost by nearly 5,000 votes.

Democratic incumbents in the state House also lost in:

— The 20th District. Rep. George W. Brannan was defeated by incumbent Rep. John M. Radford and Barney Paul Woodard.

— The 6th District. Rep. William D. Harrison lost to incumbent Rep. John B. Gilliam and Jawanne B. Ocamb.

— The 7th District. Rep. George A. Hux lost to Frank W. Ballance. Hux was a vocal opponent of the way his area had been redistricted by the Legislature.

In another Senate upset, 30th District incumbent Sen. Sam R. Noble lost to David Russel Parnell by a vote of 14,192 to 10,510, unofficial tallies indicated.

In other notable races, Ku Klux Klan leader Glenn Miller lost in the 15th Senate District Republican primary and Christian Action League president won one of four Republican nominations in the 34th House District primary.

In the judicial races, Eugene Phillips, Paul Wright and Superior Court Judge E. Maurice Braswell were leading as ballots for three state Court of Appeals seats were counted, but only Braswell appears certain of victory.

Because only one Republican is running for a judgeship, victory in the five-way race for the seat being vacated by Chief Judge Naomi B. Morris would be tantamount to election.

But Phillips, of Winston-Salem, held 40 percent of the vote and appeared headed for a runoff against Horton Rountree of Farmville, running second with nearly 19 percent of the total.

Close behind Rountree, with 17.3 percent of the vote, is Bert Montague, who resigned in 1981 as director of the Administrative Office of the Courts to enter private legal practice. James P. Crews had 12.5 percent and George W. Lennon had 11.3 percent with 91 percent of the ballots counted.

Wright, a District Court judge from Goldsboro, and Signey Eagles Jr. of Raleigh each held about 42 percent of the vote in their three-way race with Rennie Lawrence Riggs. With more than 90 percent of the ballots counted, Wright had 183,737 votes to Eagles' 179,890 and they, too, appeared destined for a runoff.

The victor in that race will face Republican Betty J. Pearce of Greensboro.

Meanwhile, Braswell, of Fayetteville, held a 2-to-1 edge over Marvin Schiller of Raleigh. Braswell accounted for 285,966 votes, or 68.2 percent, while Schiller had 133,164, or 31.7 percent.

Two Collisions On Wednesday

An estimated $5,100 damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Wednesday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 9:51 a.m. collision at the intersection of Stantonsburg Road and Arlington Boulevard, involving cars driven by Willie Earl Joyner of 304B Darden Drive and Elvy Kitrell Forrest Jr. of Route 8, Greenville.

Police estimated damage from the collision at $1,000 to the Joyner car and $2,500 to the Forrest auto.

Trucks driven by Stephen Earl Haddock of Route 1, Greenville, and Edward Rudolph Cahoon of Chocowinity collided about 12:35 p.m. at the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and 14th Street, causing an estimated $100 damage to the Haddock vehicle and $1,500 damage to the Cahoon truck.

Newton Selling Share In Hotel

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Entertainer Wayne Newton is selling his half interest in the Aladdin Hotel to partner Ed Torres, but Newton's attorney says the two will remain friends.

Attorney Frank Fahrenkopf also said Wednesday that "each wished the other well in the future."

Rumors of a dispute between the two had circulated in Las Vegas for months. Earlier this year, Torres, one of the city's top hotel executives, established a production show at the hotel, thus preventing Newton from performing at the hotel in which he shared ownership.

The sale is subject to approval of the Nevada Gaming Commission.

Fahrenkopf declined to disclose sale terms, but he said Newton will make a profit on his 21-month tour as part owner.

The attorney said Torres will own Newton's 50 percent interest personally, with the other 50 percent remaining in a trust in the name of Torres' children.

PICKIN' TO THE WORLD — Members of the band Corn Rose, from Morganton, N.C., played their Country/Rock music to a large gathering of fairgoers at the North Carolina Exhibit at the World's Fair in Knoxville. Corn Rose was part of a large group of entertainers who appeared at the exhibit for Burke County Day. Many people attending the fair found the entertainment a welcome change of pace. (AP Laserphoto)

Hope Radioactive Cylinder Picked Up

By TOM McCORD
Associated Press Writer
KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Authorities are seeking the public's help in locating a cylinder of radioactive material, which apparently fell from a truck in downtown Knoxville while being whisked to the airport.

Authorities hoped that somebody along the 1½-mile downtown route would find the 25-inch-cylinder, packed in a 3-foot-long container.

The white container, marked "radioactive," apparently fell from the back of a Federal Express Corp. cargo truck Tuesday night, officials said.

Foot searches along the route, mostly in an industrial area, failed to turn up the missing cargo.

"I don't think it's theft. There's really no motive for theft," Brandon Davis, a Federal Express spokesman, said Wednesday.

Packed tightly inside the container is a steel cylinder, two inches in diameter, that contains tritium, a radioactive form of hydrogen.

Dr. George Kramer, a hazardous materials specialist with the Tennessee Emergency Management Agency, said the cylinder could be dangerous if somebody opened it.

"It's a lot of radiation. But it's the kind that's not very dangerous," Kramer said. "Compared to the amount of material in the core of a nuclear plant, it's miniscule. Compared to the amount often used in research, it's considerable."

Kramer said the radioactivity, if released, wouldn't penetrate the outer layer of skin, but could harm internal membranes if inhaled.

Jim Alexander, an Energy Department spokesman, said

Plant Trees To Rebuild Forests

PALM COAST, Fla. (AP) — For the past four years, ITT Community Development Corp. has planted more than one million seedlings to restore forest areas.

After lots here had been cleaned and filled to meet building specifications for an ICDC community development project, the company decided to plant some 400 trees per acre.

By planting about 350,000 trees each year during the dormant season from October to March, the company has reforested more than 3,000 acres with sycamore, red cedar, pine and catalpa seedlings.

the container was one of two en route from Oak Ridge National Laboratory to New England Nuclear Corp. in Boston.

He said each of the containers carried tritium worth $1,035. The material is used frequently in medical research for tracer experiments.

The containers were in a load of cargo being carried from the Federal Express terminal to McGhee Tyson Airport, and apparently fell from the truck because a rear door was open, officials said.

State Education Board Still Pondering Budget

By LEE CREEK
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's Board of Education continued its discussions on its 1983-1985 expansion budget request Wednesday, but one thing the board probably will not include in its request is money for teachers' salaries.

"Our position is that we want teachers to get the best salaries they can," Department of Education spokesman Tom I. Davis said in a telephone interview. "But, as a general rule, the board does not get involved in salaries. I doubt they do this time because they never do."

The General Assembly earlier approved a freeze on teacher salaries eliminating automatic pay adjustments scheduled to take effect July 1.

"If the board approves anything, (it will be) what they think the schools need to improve the quality of instruction," Davis said.

Davis said the request would be for specific areas, such as a dropout prevention program.

"They're required to put these things in order of priority," Davis said. "That could be No. 1."

In another matter affecting teachers, Davis said the board discussed a report from the state Personnel Commission for School Employees.

The plan creates a standard procedure requiring the evaluation of all teachers each year, whereas in the past those evaluations were performed at the discretion of each of the state's 143 school systems, Davis said.

Earlier Wednesday, the board reviewed the 1982 Annual Report of Student Performance, later a topic of discussion at a news conference conducted by Gov. Jim Hunt.

Each spring, students in grades 1, 2, 3, 6 and 9 are tested, Davis said.

"Scores this year are the best they've ever been," Davis said. "They exceeded the national average in all testing areas."

Both Davis and Hunt said they thought the improvement was the result of better teaching, and Davis said the efforts of parents were also a contributing factor.

"The first three years, grade 9 scores were terrible," Davis said. "They were very low. They've started improving to the extent that they're also above the national average."

Hunt cited several programs he said were begun under his administration and were designed to "make our schools better and more accountable."

Those programs included the Annual Testing Program, the Competency Testing Program and the Primary Reading Program.

"Since the inception of these programs in 1978, we have taken a big step in the direction of educational excellence," Hunt said. "The Annual Testing scores are the latest evidence of that."

Susan Anton On Long Probation

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Susan Anton has been placed on probation for 36 months and ordered to take part in an alcohol-rehabilitation program after pleading guilty to drunken driving.

The 31-year-old Miss Anton, star of the movie "Golden Girl" and the short-lived "Cliffhangers" television series, entered the plea through her attorney Friday. She had been scheduled to be arraigned Wednesday.

In addition to the probation and rehabilitation program, the judge fined the Beverly Hills resident $300 and restricted her to driving to and from work for 90 days.

Miss Anton was arrested June 3 after crashing a car owned by actor-comedian Dudley Moore into a parked vehicle. Tests indicated she had a blood alcohol level of 0.17 percent. The legal maximum level for driving in California is 0.10 percent.

Each spring, students in grades 1, 2, 3, 6 and 9 are

Poultry
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock broiler market was steady. Supplies moderate. Demand good. Weights desirable. The dock weighted average price for this week is 45.46 for small purchases of plant grade broilers picked up at processing plants. Estimated slaughter today, 1,828,000.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices gave ground today as traders kept a wary eye on interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 3.43 to 808.50 by noon.

Losers held a 5-3 lead over gainers in the broad tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Interest rates in the bond and short-term money markets have declined in the past two days, providing something of a lift for the stock market.

One major reason for the drop in rates was the warm reception investors gave to the Treasury's sale of $4 billion in four-year notes earlier in the week. Today, analysts said traders were waiting to see whether another $4 billion offering of government securities, this time in seven-year notes, would fare as well.

Wall Street is watching such Treasury auctions especially closely these days because of the government's heavy borrowing needs to finance the federal budget deficit.

Mapco led the active list, up 1/8 at 29 1/2. A 500,000-share block traded at 29.

The NYSE's composite index lost .24 to 62.78. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .71 at 250.08.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 18.19 million shares, down from 34.15 million at the same point Wednesday.

Bignone Is Installed

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Retired Army Maj. Gen. Reynaldo Bignone received Argentina's presidential sash from the commander of the army today in a ceremony ignored by all but a handful of military officers.

The chiefs of Argentina's navy and air forces did not participate in the ceremony, underscoring the fact that the army has taken sole responsibility for installing another military man atop the government. Bignone is the seventh military chief executive in six years.

Bignone, 54, dressed in an officer's uniform, raised his hand and said, "I swear," as the army commander, Lt. Gen. Cristino Nicolaides, administered the oath and gave him the sky blue and white sash.

It was Nicolaides who resisted navy and air force suggestions that it was time to install a civilian as head of the government after the military debacle in the Falkland Islands that led to the forced retirement of the last president, Gen. Leopoldo Galtieri.

About 100 people, mostly military officers, witnessed the five-minute ceremony at Government House, in the historic Plaza de Mayo. Dozens of police stood guard, but civilian passersby paid scant attention to the fact that their new president was being sworn in a few steps away.

School Offices Closed Monday

The Pitt County school system's central offices will be closed Monday to observe the July 4 holiday, report county school officials.

Along with the central office, all schools will be closed and the Pitt County Community Schools summer programs will not operate. All offices and programs will resume normal schedules Tuesday.

BOARD TO MEET

The Pitt County Board of Education will meet Tuesday at 2 p.m. in the third floor conference room of the county office building, 1717 W. Fifth St. Items on the agenda include finance and personnel.

Howell...

 right now," he said.
 "The structure of the university is about complete," Howell continued. "This university" and others across the nation, he suggested, have been "in the process of expansion in structure for a couple of decades. That process is complete here and elsewhere ... with a few exceptions."

However, Howell noted, "I see the future as one in which the university is going to be striving to keep its programs in tune with the needs of society."
 "Again, this is something that American universities have always done ... been very much interested in serving some social need. They are not ivory towers, in other words."

Universities which have survived and prospered over the years, Howell suggested, "are the ones that did that best ... provide service ... educate people to take jobs."
 East Carolina will place "more emphasis on that in the future, because the growth and success of a university is going to depend even more on that adaptation" in the future than in the past.

In the past, Howell suggested, a university could survive and grow even if it didn't adapt, just as a poorly managed business could survive in a healthy and growing economy.
 "That's not the case today," he said. Universities, just as businesses in today's tight economy, must "produce and market a product there is a demand for."

Howell said "we provide service, educate people to take jobs," and the university's "research and public service function deals directly with people and industries. East Carolina University has always been a university that has been successful at this sort of public service activity."

"We're slowing down the physical expansion. But I want to increase our energies in other areas of public service ... teach students what they need to know to be sought after in the job market ... provide public service."

According to Howell, "My basic plan for the future is to increase this awareness among the people on campus. This we need to do for us to be an even better university. This is one of the most important jobs for the university ... this gearing up for this sort of interchange between the university and community."

"We know how to do it," Howell continued. "It's simply a matter of emphasis ... putting resources there, seeing to it that agencies within the university make this bridge between the professor and the people in the community."
 "One of the things I intend to see to it that they are nourished so they can do it."

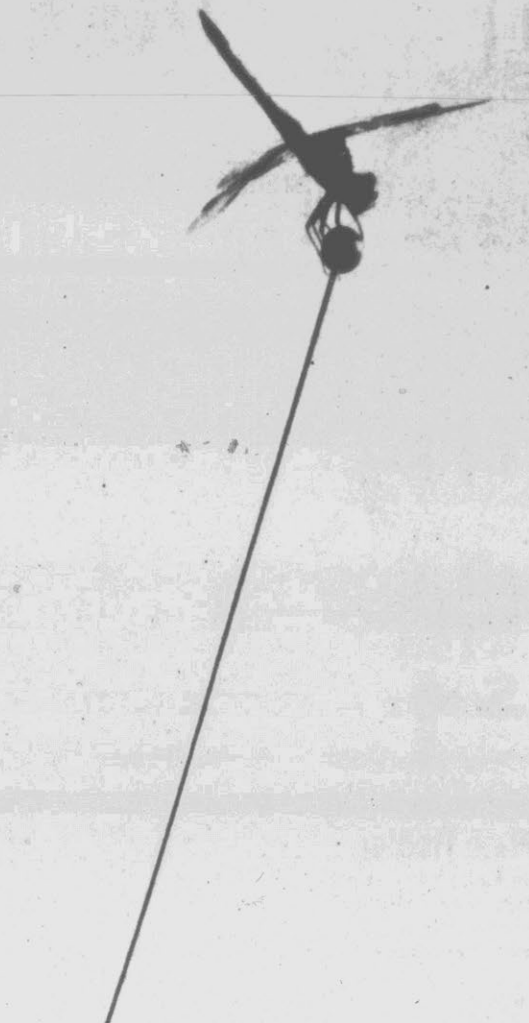

"I'm challenged by all that. It's something I want to do. I hope the university and the community will join with me in that."

"If we do it, we can accomplish something for the advantage of the university and for the region," Howell said.
 "I'm going to go out and tell a group about that this morning."

Probe Actions Of Lawmakers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Charges of illicit sex between members of Congress and their teen-age pages are being investigated by federal authorities, according to the FBI and Justice Department.
 CBS News on Wednesday reported that "several" congressmen were subjects of the investigation.
 "I can confirm that there is an investigation, as reported," Larry Knisely, night supervisor of the FBI's District of Columbia office, said.
 "It's at a very preliminary stage," said Justice Department spokesman John Russell. "A page came forward and had some allegations. I can't discuss them right now."

The Arkansas Gazette, in a copyright article in today's editions, quoted an unidentified Justice Department source as saying the department was looking into complaints that members coerced or bribed pages of both sexes to engage in homosexual or heterosexual activities with them.
 The Little Rock newspaper said nine or 10 members of the House and one senator were under investigation.
 Homosexuality reportedly was not the issue in the investigation, but rather the promising of favors by members of Congress and sex with minors.

The network broadcast an interview with a former page supervisor who said he engaged in sex with a member of the House on three occasions, including once in the representative's office and once at an apartment in the Watergate complex.

Plan Parade On Saturday

An Eppes Gala Parade will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday, with a reconstituted Eppes Band to provide music during the parade.

Parade co-chairpersons Carolyn Barnhill and Carolyn Eppes have announced details of the event.
 The parade route will be from York Memorial Church down Albemarle Avenue to West Fifth Street, and continue west down West Fifth to the former Eppes athletic field (now the Tom Foreman Park).

Johnny Wooten, assisted by Willie Morris, Frank Morris and James and Anne Fleming, has reconstituted the Old Eppes High School Marching Bulldogs with musicians drawn from former students and their children.

Nearly 70 units have been formed to accompany the band on its parade march. The units include class queens, class presidents, clubs, and a large number of former students and local participants. Activities planned range from the serious to comic and innovative.

Additionally, routines that were performed by the D.H. Conley High School Band in New Orleans will be given a repeat performance.

The last parade held by an Eppes Band was in 1969, the Eppes Homecoming Parade led by 17 marching bands to celebrate the merger of Eppes and Rose High schools.

Grand marshals for the event are Selena Davenport Forbes and Mary Alice Murrell.

Quarterly Meet

Corey's Free Will Baptist Church will hold a quarterly meeting Friday and Saturday.
 The business meeting will be held Friday at 7:30 p.m. The Rev. James Wilks and Burney Chapel FWB Church will be in charge of the service Saturday at 7:30 p.m.
 The pastor will lead the Sunday 11 a.m. service and the Rev. J.W. Randolph and the Joseph Branch congregation will close out the meeting at 3 p.m.

BOARD MEETING

A board meeting will be held at Cherry Lane church Thursday at 7:30 p.m. The Rev. C.R. Parker asks all members to attend.

Wild Rally Gives ECU Split With Pack

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

It was Yogi Berra who once made the fateful comment: "It ain't over 'till it's over."

And last night, not only N.C. State found it out, but the East Carolina Pirates, too.

N.C. State captured a 2-1 victory in the opening game of the Harrington Field doubleheader last night, with Mike Pesavento winning a pitchers' duel with Chubby Butler.

Then, in the second game, State stormed out to an 8-4 lead after six and a half innings, and appeared ready for the sweep. But East Carolina took advantage of Wolfpack mistakes to score four runs and tie it up. Then, after State scored two more in the top of the eighth and again appeared on the verge of victory, the Pirates rallied for three to pull it out, 11-10.

But — it wasn't quite over. There was still one more play to be made.

It was like this: Charlie Smith had led off the bottom of the eighth and been replaced on base by Mark Shank. After a fly ball and a strikeout, Mike Williams grounded to short and the game appeared over. But Mo Barbour's throw to first sailed high and Doug Davis had to leap to get the ball, and Williams beat him to the bag.

Ricky Nichols followed with a high pop to right that just fell in for a double and scored Shank, making it 10-9. Kelly Robinette then followed with a single to left, scoring both Williams and Nichols to give the Pirates the win.

State, however, didn't leave the field, announcing its intent to appeal one of the runners missing third base.

As the anxious Pirate team, suddenly subdued, waited in a crowd just off the first base line, Robinette was returned to first and John Hallow brought to the plate, putting the ball back into live play. State hurler Kim Caulk stepped back off the rubber, tossed to third and plate umpire J.M. Murrell signaled: "Safe."

And the Pirates were able to breathe a sigh of relief.

"That first game was a well-pitched one," ECU coach Gary Overton said. "Both of the pitchers did a good job, and although we had the chance to do something several times, I have to give credit to Pesavento for getting us out. We didn't get the hits and it was the way he pitched that did it."

"But that second game was just wild. Our guys did a great job of battling back. We were behind twice and battled back."

He praised pitcher Bob

Davidson for his effort, despite having given up 10 runs and 13 hits. "He hung in there. He didn't have one of his better games, and there were times when we could have taken him off. But he had enough to go on and get the job done. The key was our getting the hits we needed at the right time."

In the first game, however, the Pirates couldn't get those key hits. They did outlast State, 6-5, but State bunched theirs better, getting three of those five in the top of the first, when the Wolfpack scored twice.

Artie Hill led off the first with a ball that rolled slowly down the third base line. Hallow hoped for a foul and let it roll, but it stayed on the playing surface. Hall then stole second and took third on a long fly to deep center. He scored on Tracy Black's sacrifice fly.

But it wasn't over. Tracy Woodson doubled and scored on Jim Tomans' hit up the middle with the run that later proved the difference.

East Carolina came back with one in the bottom of the second. Todd Evans reached on an error and was sacrificed up. He took third on a fly out and scored when Robert Wells singled.

Both teams had a couple of other chances. State left a man stranded at second in the fifth, and on third in the fourth. The Pirates put men on third in the third and sixth, and left them at second in the fourth and seventh.

Hall and Woodson each had two hits for State.

In the second game, it looked like the Wolfpack was going to take an easy victory after the opening innings.

The Pack scored first in the opening inning. Chris Baird doubled with one down, and after a second out, scored on Woodson's double.

East Carolina quickly tied it up in the bottom of the frame. With one down, Robinette singled and Hallow got a hit. David Wells singled to score Robinette.

State appeared to blow the game open in the third, scoring five times with the help of two home runs. Baird walked and moved up on a wild pitch, scoring when Black singled. With two away, Ray Wojkovich homered to center, scoring two, and Doug Davis followed by reaching on an error. Bob Hoffman then homered to left, scoring the other two runs. That left State up, 6-1.

The Pirates got a second run in the third. Hallow singled and Wells walked. Todd Evans then singled in Hallow.

East Carolina added another pair in the fifth, cutting it to 6-4. Wells reached on an error and Evans slapped the ball out of the park in right to account for both runs.

State then added single runs in the sixth and seventh. The first came when Davis singled, was sacrificed up and scored on an infield hit by Mo Barbour, coming all the way from second. On the play, the ball, sharply hit, was touched by a diving Hallow, but the ball then shot high into the air and into foul territory. Hallow, scrambling after it, lost the ball, and Davis scored before he could recover it.

In the seventh, Baird reached on a two-base error during a heavy rainfall, and scored when Black singled to right.

That set up the first of the two big Pirate rallies. In the bottom of the seventh, they scored four to tie it at 8-8. Evans opened with a single and with one away, Jack Curlings slammed a two-run homer to left. Robert Wells singled and after a second out, Ricky Nichols walked, as did Robinette.

That loaded the bases — something the Pirates had done in the first, third and fifth without getting another run. But this time it was different. Relief pitcher Caulk walked both Hallow and David Wells, forcing in two more runs to knot the score.

State, however, came up with two more in the top of the eighth, and again appeared headed for the win. Davis singled and was sacrificed up. Barbour walked and with two away, Baird doubled, driving in both runners.

That set the stage for the final Pirate rally in the bottom of the inning that won it.

Evans led the Pirate hitting in the game with three, while Robinette and Hallow each had two. State's hitting was led by Baird with three, while Black, Davis and Hoffman each had two.

East Carolina returns to action on Friday, hosting Campbell in a doubleheader starting at 6 p.m. at Harrington Field.

For Billie Jean, It's All Bonus At Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Billie Jean King, the oldest Wimbledon semifinalist in 62 years, is an optimistic realist.

"It's very gratifying," the 38-year-old tennis player said Wednesday after upsetting third-seeded Tracy Austin 3-6, 6-4, 6-2 and moving into the semifinals. "Anything now is a bonus."

Even John McEnroe, at 23 the defending champion and seeded first in the men's singles at the All-England Tennis Club, was impressed.

"I'd be far away from the tennis court if I were her age," he said. "But why shouldn't she still be playing if she's enjoying it so much?"

Prior to the victory over Austin, King advanced by upsetting sixth-seeded Wendy Turnbull of Australia and eliminating Tanya Harford of South Africa and Claudia Pasquale of Switzerland.

"I felt I could play three more sets," King said after her match with Austin.

King, playing in her 103rd singles match at the fabled grass court championships, dropped the first set to the 19-year-old Austin, who had won their five previous meetings.

King won her first of a record 20 Wimbledon titles — the women's doubles with Karen Hantze in 1961 — the year before Austin was born. Her first of six singles titles came when Austin was 4 years old.

Austin said King had been one of her childhood idols. She recalled that when King visited her tennis club, she wrote a composition about the experience.

"I was mad because I received only an A-minus," Austin said.

If Billie Jean's victory was a surprise, McEnroe's fourth-round win over fellow American Hank Pfister was expected.

After his most serious blowup so far in this year's Wimbledon championships, McEnroe faced his toughest challenge today in a quarterfinal match against fifth-seeded Johan Kriek.

The confrontation was a replay of last year's quarterfinal, won by McEnroe in straight sets en route to his singles crown. McEnroe has defeated the South African in seven of their nine meetings, but he warned: "Kriek is capable of playing some tough tennis."

Other quarterfinal matches today pitted second-seeded Jimmy Connors against No. 6 Gene Mayer and third-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis against No. 12 Mark Edmondson of Australia.

On the women's side, 13th-seeded Anne Smith and 11th-seeded Bettina Bunge disputed the last semifinal berth. The winner faced the tournament's top-seeded woman, Martina Navratilova.

King will take on defending champion Chris Evert Lloyd in the other semifinal. Both semis will be played on Friday with the finals scheduled for Saturday.

McEnroe, facing a grueling schedule of a singles and doubles matches through Sunday's singles final due to last week's rainouts, was given two misconduct warnings Wednesday, his second and third of the tournament.

The first, which came during his victory over Pfister, earned him a penalty point for angrily slamming the ball across court after missing a volley.

The second came in a doubles match in which he and Peter Fleming narrowly defended their men's doubles title in a second-round bout with Rod Frawley of Australia and Chris Lewis of New Zealand.

In the third set, McEnroe first disputed an out call by a linesman. Later, he insisted one of Lewis' serves had clipped the net and began instructing the net judge how to hold his hand on the tape.

When McEnroe persisted, he was warned for "delay of the match." The Center Court crowd roared its approval.

In the next game, McEnroe served a double fault, and again the crowd cheered — considered unsportsmanlike when a player double-faults — and McEnroe disgustedly joined in the clapping.

Pitt Gets Forfeit Win

PIKEVILLE — Pitt County's Post 39 American Legion baseball team came away with another victory last night, but it wasn't what they really wanted.

After two and a half innings of play, Pitt had rolled up a lopsided 16-1 lead, which included a grand-slam home run by Sammy Hodges.

However, at that point, a heavy rainstorm swept the field, and the game was then halted. Wayne, with another game to make up with Pitt tonight, then announced that it would forfeit the game, 9-0.

While glad to get the win, Pitt was disappointed at losing its stats from the game, since it had not gone the mandatory five frames for them to count.

Wayne and Pitt meet tonight at 8 p.m. at Harrington Field in Greenville, winding up the regular season for both teams.

Snow Hill's American Legion baseball team also won a forfeit game from Edenton last night. Edenton was unable to field enough players for the game, and notified Snow Hill that it would not show for the game, awarding a 9-0 forfeit to Snow Hill.

Snow Hill has one more game remaining, at Wilson on Friday night. That game was originally set tonight, but Fleming Stadium was unavailable.

East Carolina women's track coach Pat McGuigan announced today the signing of three more prospects for the coming school year.

McGuigan had previously announced the signing of two other outstanding athletes in Regina Kent of New York City, and Delphine Mabry of SouthWest Edgecombe High School near Pinetops.

The new signees include Jamie Cathcart of East Forsyth High School near Winston-Salem; Kathy Leeper of High Point Andrews; and Teresa Hudson of Salisbury High School.

Cathcart, also a member of the Greensboro Pacesetters, was a member of the 1982 North Carolina state champion 400-meter relay team at East Forsyth. Cathcart placed second at the 1981 AAU Junior Olympics in Lincoln, Neb., in the mile relay and third and fourth, respectively, in the 400-relay and 800-meter run in the 1981 North Carolina high school state meet.

Leeper ran the anchor leg in the 880 and mile relays for Andrews the past three seasons. Her squad finished first in the mile and second in the 880 in the 1982 state event. Her 880 quintet also copped state championships in 1980 and 1981, while her mile relay placed second both years. She may also long jump for the Pirates.

Hudson, a sprinter from Salisbury, was conference champion in the 100 and 200-meter races and in the 440 and 880 relays.

Quick Change Gave Brewers A Victory

By The Associated Press
From the time the pitch left Shane Rawley's hand until the ball reached the plate, Gorman Thomas had a radical change of mind.
With the score tied 7-7 and Cecil Cooper on first base in the 12th inning, the power-hitting Thomas intended to lay down a bunt to get the winning run to second base.
In the fraction of a second it took the ball to reach him, however, the Milwaukee center fielder decided to swing away, and the result was a two-run homer that gave the Brewers a 9-7 victory over the New York Yankees Wednesday night.

"Sure I was looking for a bunt," said Thomas, who now had 19 homers this season. "I thought I might lay down a drag bunt with the situation the way it was."

Thomas said that when he saw Rawley's mediocre fastball, "I was surprised. I was looking for a breaking ball. When I saw the fastball, I just had to swing away."
In other AL games, Seattle bombed Toronto 10-4, Cleveland blanked Baltimore 9-0, Detroit blasted Boston 12-3, Texas outlasted California 5-3, Oakland shut out Kansas City 4-0 and Minnesota edged Chicago 4-3.

The Brewers, who had 17 hits against five Yankees pitchers, had taken a 6-0 lead midway through the game before New York rallied to send the game into extra innings.
"Winning 6-0, you figure you've got them beat, but the Yankees showed character," Thomas said. "This was really a big win for us."
"Just another laugh for us," Brewers Manager Harvey Kuenn said. "We've had games like this for a week or so and I've gotten used to them."

Rollie Fingers, who had given up a walk, two hits and sacrifice flies by Willie Randolph and Dave Winfield in the bottom of the ninth, got credit for his fifth victory in 10 decisions. Jamie Easterly got a save, holding the Yankees scoreless in the 12th after they loaded the bases with one out.

"I sure made it interesting for us," said Easterly. "I guess Rollie was a little worried there at the end."
The Brewers took a 6-0 lead with the help of a five-run third.
A triple by Robin Yount and a run-scoring grounder by Cooper gave the Brewers a 1-0 lead in the first before they sent nine men to the plate two innings later.
Paul Molitor's bunt single brought home the first run of the inning, Yount followed with a run-scoring single, Cooper with a sacrifice fly and Thomas with an RBI single before Don Money doubled in another run.
Randy Lerch held the Yankees scoreless until the fifth, when Randolph drove in a run with a single. The Yankees then scored four runs in the seventh on run-scoring singles by Dave Collins, Butch Wynegar and Ken Griffey and a sacrifice fly by Winfield.
Tigers 12, Red Sox 3
Detroit, which had won only one of its previous 15 games, blasted first-place Boston for 17 hits, including a three-run homer and a run-scoring single by Mike Ivie.

Lance Parrish added three RBI with a double and a single for the Tigers, while Jim Rice and Reid Nichols accounted for the Red Sox runs with homers.
Rangers 5, Angels 3
Texas defeated California, the West Division leader, on Bill Sample's two-out, three-run homer in the bottom of the ninth inning.
Mariners 10, Blue Jays 4
Richie Zisk hit two two-run homers and Dave Henderson blasted another two-run shot as Seattle overpowered Toronto.
Al Cowens went 4-for-5 for the Mariners and Jim Beattie went the distance, allowing nine hits.
"I put more pressure on myself than I should. But if this ballclub is going to be near the top this year, I've got to have a better second half," said Zisk, who is hitting .275 with seven homers and 22 RBI.
A's 4, Royals 0
Matt Keough blanked Kansas City on seven hits and Joe Rudi twice knocked in the speedy Rickey Henderson for Oakland.
Henderson singled in the first, stole his 73rd base in 78 games, advanced to third on a groundout and scored on Rudi's single. Henderson scored again in the third on Rudi's short fly that Royals second baseman Onix Conception caught with his back to the infield.

Indians 9, Orioles 0
Von Hayes drove in three runs with three hits and Rick Sutcliffe allowed four hits in seven innings of shutout pitching to lead Cleveland over Baltimore.
Sutcliffe gave hits in the fifth and sixth innings and two more in the seventh before leaving the game. Ed Whitson finished with two hitless innings for the Indians.
Hayes singled home a run in the second, completed a four-run outburst in the seventh with another RBI single and added a run-scoring double in the ninth.
Twins 4, White Sox 3
Minnesota won only its 20th game in 76 starts this season by beating Chicago for the second night in a row.
Tim Lardner and John Castino had run-scoring doubles to highlight the Twins' three-run fifth inning, and Bobby Castillo got the victory with relief help from Ron Davis.

1st Federal Wins Tar Heel

Little League
First Federal 8
Wellcome 7
First Federal rallied for five runs in the fifth inning and pulled out an 8-7 victory over Wellcome yesterday in the Tar Heel Little League.
The win clinched the Tar Heel title for First Federal.
First Federal took the lead with a run in the first, but Wellcome tied it up with one in the second. Then, in the fourth, Wellcome pushed over six runs to vault into a 7-1 lead. First Federal scored twice in the bottom of the fourth to cut it to 7-3.
Then, in the fifth, First Federal rallied for five to push ahead for the first time, 8-7. Maurice Dyer led off with a walk and moved up on a pair of wild pitches. John Bolen walked and stole second. After an out, Stacey Best reached on an error and fielder's choice that scored Dyer, and Frankie Pugh singled in Bolen. Lee Watson was hit by a pitch, loading the bases, and Keith Corbett walked, scoring Best. Mike Cox then singled in both Pugh and Watson to give First Federal the lead.
Neither team scored again and the First Federal lead held.
Dyer led the First Federal hitting with two, while Greg VanSoy had three and Adam Teel had two for Wellcome.

play scored Kirkland, and Mike Hathaway singled in both Martin and Taylor.
B&W added two in the sixth and three in the seventh. Pepsi got one more in the fifth.
Smith, Joe Hobgood and Kirkland led the Brown & Wood hitting with two each, while Marc Nover and Les Turner each had two for Pepsi.
A second game, between Coca-Cola and Wachovia Bank, was rained out.

Red & White 2
GRIFTON — Chicod edged past Grifton Red & White, 4-2, to gain the finals of the Southern Pitt League's post-season tournament last night.
Chicod will now play the Simpson Saints in the finals tonight.
Jerome Carter hurled the win for Chicod, scattering five hits. He led the Chicod hitting with two, while Paul Jackson and Brad Dixon each had doubles. No one had more than one hit for Red & White.

Saints 6
Hornets 4
GRIFTON — The Simpson Saints outlasted the Chicod Hornets, 6-4, to win a berth in the finals of the Southern Pitt Little League's post-season tournament last night.
The Saints will meet Chicod for the crown tonight.
Zay Thompson got the victory for the Saints, allowing five hits. Anthony Harrison led the Saint hitting with a double, while Chad Jones and John Green each had doubles for the Hornets.

Sr. Babe Ruth
Farmville 4
WINTERVILLE — Winterville edged Farmville, 6-4, in a Coastal Plains Senior Babe Ruth League game played last night in Winterville.
Doug Coley scattered four hits against Farmville in gaining the win for Winterville. Randy Norris collected two of those hits.
No one had more than one hit for Winterville, which is now 3-4 in league play.

Babe Ruth Champs

Kiwanis 1
Joel Pierce capped the Optimist attack with a three-run homer yesterday as his team downed the Kiwanis, 5-1, in a North State Little League game.
The Kiwanis grabbed the lead in the first inning, scoring what was to be its only run.
The Optimists then pushed over two in the fourth to take the lead for good. Terrence Cherry opened the frame with a single and moved up on a wild pitch. He scored when Jeff Mahoney doubled. He moved up on a sacrifice, and scored when Pierce reached on an error.
The other three came on Pierce's roundtripper in the sixth.
Cherry and Mahoney each had two hits to lead the Optimists, while no one had more than one for the Kiwanis, who got only three off Mahoney.

With the Greenville Babe Ruth League championship safely tucked away, Pepsi-Cola could have afforded to be generous — but Brown & Wood made it a walkaway, gaining a 12-5 victory over the league champions last night.
Pepsi grabbed the initial lead in the third inning, scoring twice, and Brown & Wood got one in the top of the fourth. Pepsi added two more in its half of the frame for a 4-1 lead.
Then, in the top of the fifth, Brown & Wood exploded for six runs and a 7-4 lead that it never relinquished. With one away, Frankie Atkinson walked and Rob Deyton reached on an error, scoring Smith singled in one run, and Doyle Kirkland singled to score another. Todd Martin reached on an error, scoring Smith, and Tony Taylor walked. An error on a pickoff

Atlanta Bats Lead To Winning Rally

By The Associated Press
Atlanta's booming bats have the Braves clicking again. The past two games, they've found that special something that invariably turns defeat into victory. On Tuesday night, they rallied from a 5-0 deficit in the sixth inning to beat Houston 6-5 in 11 innings. On Wednesday night, things got a bit more improbable. Down 4-1 going into the bottom of the ninth, the Braves got consecutive-pitch homers from Dale Murphy (his 22nd, tops in the majors) and Bob Horner (his second of the game and 13th of the season). And down in the bullpen, Biff Poceroba began stirring. "Once Murphy and Horner homered and Rufino Linares singled, I kind of saw the situation developing," he said. "So I started getting loose."

Chris Chambliss also singled, chasing loser Bob Knepper. In came Randy Moffitt, who got Bruce Benedict to bunt into a forceout at third. But he walked Larry Whisenton to load the bases, bringing up Poceroba, who batted for Carlos Diaz, a reliever making his major league debut. His single to right gave the Braves a 5-4 victory and made reliever Carlos Diaz a winner in his major league debut. It also widened the Braves' National League West lead to three games over San Diego. In the rest of the NL it was Pittsburgh 7, Chicago 3; Philadelphia 6, St. Louis 3; San Francisco 7, Cincinnati 6 in 12 innings; Montreal 4, New York 1, and, in a twilight doubleheader, Los Angeles 5, San Diego 1 in the first game and San Diego 6, Los Angeles 4 in the nightcap.

Giants 7, Reds 6
Charlie Leibrandt's wild pitch, the fifth wild pitch of the game, allowed Johnnie LeMaster to dash home with two outs in the bottom of the 12th inning, giving the Giants their victory in four hours, nine minutes. Tom O'Malley led off with a single but was thrown at Philippia, which sampled first place in the NL East a couple of nights ago, got another taste of it, regaining the lead by two percentage points over St. Louis after Larry Christenson pitched and batted the Phillies past the Cardinals. Christenson gave up 13 hits before giving way to Tug McGraw in the ninth inning—but he had one big hit, a two-run double in the Phils' three-run second inning. "It feels good to get the decision," said Christenson, who had pitched eight times without getting one. In those eight appearances, the Phillies had scored two runs or less for him. Bob Dernier, who had four hits, scored two runs, drove in one and stole his 32nd base, got the single in the second inning that drove in the decisive run.

Greg Lassiter had two hits, one a triple, while Jim Gibson had a double for Greenville. The league's post-season tournament will be held Saturday and Sunday at Guy Smith Stadium in Greenville. Games will be held at 2, 5 and 8 p.m., with Greenville playing in the final game on Saturday. The single elimination tournament will end on Sunday. Teams involved include Greenville, Bear Grass, Hamilton, Askewville and Elm Grove.

Green, Lawing And Royall On Hit List Of Women's Group

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green and state Sens. Craig Lawing and Kenneth C. Royall are included on a "dirty dozen" hit list which the National Women's Political Caucus will work to defeat because of the role they played in defeating the Equal Rights Amendment.

The caucus, established 10 years ago to help women get elected, said the three "worked behind the scenes to secure anti-ERA votes" when the amendment was voted on in the General Assembly.

"Whatever their motivation, whatever their means, each of these men held the legal destiny of American women in their hands, and they strangled it," Kathy Wilson, caucus chairman, said at a Washington news conference Wednesday.

The announcement angered Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, president pro tempore of the Senate, who introduced a bill to ratify the ERA in 1979.

"It is the most asinine statement that has ever been said about me in the 30-some years I've been in public service," Lawing said in a telephone interview.

"If this is the kind of attitude they take toward their friends, they'll soon be without anybody to vote for it, I'll tell you that."

Neither Green nor Royall, D-Durham, could be reached for comment Wednesday, but Green's press secretary, Margaret Webb, said she didn't believe the political targeting would hurt Green.

"If they are as effective (in campaigning) as they were in getting the ERA passed, I don't see that he has much to worry about," she said.

At their news conference, the caucus called the 12 — 10 Democrats and two Republicans — "the dirty dozen" and said over the years they played key roles in defeating the ERA, often through backstage maneuvers.

The other state officeholders singled out by the caucus are: Florida: Sen. Demsey Barron, a Democrat. Illinois: Rep. Thomas Hanahan, a Democrat; House Speaker George Ryan, the Republican candidate for lieutenant governor.

Missouri: Sen. Richard Webster, Republican. Nevada: Sens. James Gibson and Floyd Lamb, both Democrats.

Oklahoma: Sen. Roy Boatner, a Democrat. Virginia: Democratic Delegate Albert Lee Philpott, and Sen. Virgil Goode, a Democrat who once supported the amendment but provided the single swing vote that defeated it in 1980, the caucus said.

In addition, the National Organization for Women released the names of 100 Democrats and 137 Republicans in the legislatures of Florida, Illinois, North Carolina and Oklahoma who had opposed ERA ratification in recent votes. It said they had "turned their backs on the Equal Rights Amendment in 1982."

Israeli jets roared low over Beirut today to drop smoke bombs and flares in a mock attack that sent thousands of panicky inhabitants rushing to basements and bomb shelters.

The 20-minute foray, which began at midnight, appeared designed to tell Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas that Israel's patience was running out. No bombs were reported dropped during the raid.

In Israel, a top official underscored the warning of the mock attack. "Time is running short... We are very rapidly reaching the limit of our patience," said the official, who declined to be identified.

Israel is demanding that the PLO surrender its heavy weapons and leave Lebanon or face a full-scale assault by the array of tanks, planes and naval vessels which have encircled the western Moslem half of the Lebanese capital.

Flares illuminated beachside resorts and shantytowns along the southern flank of the capital as nerve-shattering sonic booms shook the west Beirut PLO hideouts where Arafat and his estimated 8,000 guerrillas are trapped.

The U.S.-arranged cease-fire in and around west

Beirut went into its sixth day virtually intact as American and Lebanese mediators sought to arrange intricate mechanics of the PLO evacuation operation.

A key Lebanese intermediary said Wednesday night that despite the PLO's defiant calls to fight to the death, the guerrillas were ready to leave their 10-square-mile enclave because they did not want a showdown with Israeli forces. But he said details of evacuating them remained unclear.

"It is not easy to say how armed people will leave Lebanon," the intermediary, former Prime Minister Saeb Salam, told reporters. "This is an intricate procedure and cannot be done overnight."

No official confirmation was immediately available from PLO leaders on how the armed guerrillas would be evacuated or where they will go.

Salam, Lebanon's 77-year-old Sunni Moslem elder statesman, has been playing a key role in indirect mediation efforts between Arafat's PLO and U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib to solve the crisis. Habib arranged the cease-fire between the PLO and Israeli forces.

Publicly the PLO persists in proclaiming it will resist leaving Lebanon unless the Israelis grant several concessions, which include an Israeli pullback from around Beirut and allowing the guerrillas to maintain a token military and political presence in the country. Israel has rejected those demands.

Acting Lebanese Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan, fresh from a meeting with Habib late Wednesday, said the negotiations were progressing but gave no details. The two met again today at the Israeli-encircled Lebanese presidential palace in Baabda outside Beirut.

Palace sources said the mediators were trying to find a country willing to grant asylum to the guerrillas. The sources, who requested anonymity, also said plans for a rapid deployment of the previously inactive Lebanese army in west Beirut to collect the PLO's heavy arms also were discussed as the first step of a political settlement. Israel has agreed that the guerrillas may keep their personal weapons, including rifles.

The well-informed Beirut newspaper An-Nahar quoted Habib as telling Wazzan that the United States would guarantee safe passage for the guerrillas to neighboring Syria in buses under International Red Cross escort. The guerrillas rejected a similar offer from Israel on Monday.

Habib, who has maintained silence about details of his negotiations, was not available for comment on the report.

Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir met in Jerusalem today with Habib's assistant, Morris Draper, to stress Israeli impatience. The official who briefed reporters afterward said Israel has set no deadline for the PLO withdrawal, despite Prime Minister Menachem Begin's statement on Tuesday that in "another day, two days, we'll get them out."

Without specifying a timetable, the official said Israel would not tolerate "feet-dragging. We are not going to be drawn into protracted negotiations lasting weeks or months."

The Israelis have hesitated to storm west Beirut because it would mean a heavy casualty toll. Lebanese officials say the 26-day-old war has already claimed 15,000 lives, although Israel has insisted the figure is much lower.

ple in west Beirut have fled in response to Israeli leaflets dropped on the city, urging them to abandon it.

The Jewish state invaded Lebanon June 6 to destroy the military threat of the PLO, which is fighting to gain a Palestinian homeland on Israeli-held territory. The PLO has been based in Lebanon as a virtually autonomous state-within-a-state since 1971, when it was evicted from Jordan.

In Washington, President Reagan told a news conference Wednesday night that the United States had no advance knowledge of the Israeli invasion and was pressing for a peaceful solution. But he did not otherwise rebuke Israel's actions.

Arab states have criticized the United States, Israel's chief arms supplier, for not exerting more pressure on the Israelis to leave Lebanon.

his proposed tax credits for parents of children in private schools. "It's simple fairness" to give them a break since they also pay taxes to support the public school system, he said.

The president said the nation was "fortunate" that former Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz has accepted his nomination to succeed Haig. He said Shultz "is a man with great experience and a man of unquestioned integrity."

In an obvious response to Haig's criticism that Reagan has wandered from the policy course he established when he took office, the president said he is satisfied he is meeting his goals.

"There is going to be no change in policy," he said. "Foreign policy comes from the Oval Office and with the help of a fine secretary of state."

The president met with Shultz this morning, then set out on a 10-day vacation trip to California. Shultz escorted the Reagans to their helicopter on the White House lawn; shook hands with the president and got a kiss from Mrs. Reagan.

While sources close to Haig are saying he feels he was forced into a resignation by the White House, Reagan said nothing critical of Haig at his news conference and didn't mention any policy differences.

Instead, Reagan praised Haig for "a superhuman job" of trying to prevent the war in the Falkland Islands. "His service to his country and his service to the administration have been all that could be desired," he said.

Reagan declined to answer questions on the progress of the negotiations to end the war in Lebanon and save Beirut from further fighting between Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization.

While he said some Arab nations may think Washington knew of Israel's plans, it did not. "We were caught as much by surprise as anyone," he said. "We wanted a diplomatic solution and believed there could have been one."

But he was not otherwise critical of Israel's actions, and he seemed to accept Israel's explanation that it launched its invasion to defend itself against artillery and rocket attacks from PLO units in southern Lebanon.

New Shuttle Craft On Snail's Pace Journey

PALMDALE, Calif. (AP) — America's second space shuttle, Challenger, began its first journey today — a snail's-pace, 38-mile voyage through two towns to the desert spaceport at Edwards Air Force base.

During the 12 hours Challenger is on the road, being towed through Palmdale and Lancaster and into the desert flatlands, the veteran Columbia will circle the Earth eight times.

Palmdale residents got up early for a glimpse of the shiny new shuttle. By the hundreds, they huddled on streetcorners as the ship inched by.

Once at Edwards, Challenger will become part of a multi-shuttle extravaganza on the Fourth of July, when President Reagan will watch Columbia land.

"This whole nation, and in fact the whole world... is going to see Columbia return from space and Challenger become airborne (atop a jumbo jetliner for a piggyback ride to its Florida launch site)," said Joe Engle, commander of the second shuttle mission last November.

"That's some kind of birthday present for America," he said Wednesday at Challenger's coming-out ceremonies in front of Rockwell International's assembly hangar near here.

The new shuttle was towed slowly around the corner of the giant hangar as some 1,200 workers and dignitaries applauded and craned their necks. Its nose appeared as a Marine Corps band played the themes from "Star Trek," "Star Wars" and "Superman."

It was clearly a day for back-slapping pride and patriotism. And several Rockwell officials used the occasion to make a strong pitch for a fifth shuttle, one more than currently funded. They hope Reagan may come out in favor of it in a speech Sunday.

Meanwhile, Paul J. Weitz, who will command Challenger on its maiden voyage early next year, accepted from Rockwell a "symbolic key" — a replica of the tool that opens the shuttle's hatch.

"I'd like to accept this key to the orbiter in trust for the American people and all us taxpayers who are footing the bill for this magnificent flying machine," he said.

Group Supports Non-Registering

The Greenville Peace Committee scheduled a public witness today at the Greenville Post Office in support of Ben Sasway of Vista, Calif., who has been arrested for not registering for the draft.

According to Carroll Webber, a spokesman for the Conscientious Objection subcommittee of the local peace committee, Sasway is a non-registrant of conscience. Webber said the committee was supporting him for expressing his convictions concerning the U.S. draft policy.

No Oil Yet, But They Still Drill At Georges Bank

By FRED BAYLES
Associated Press Writer
ABOARD THE ALASKAN STAR (AP) — Once a week a supply boat makes a 16-hour journey from this giant drilling platform in the Georges Bank to the mainland with a precious cargo of tin cans packed with mud and bits of 150-million-year-old rocks.

These rocks, sandstone and limestone, are the product of a year-long search for oil and gas below the valuable fishing grounds off the New England coast.

The nation's oil companies have already bet over $1 billion that the rocks will tell them where to look for the millions of barrels of oil and billions of cubic feet of natural gas geologists think lie beneath the waves.

But so far, analysis of samples from four other exploratory wells — as deep as two miles into the ocean floor — have found no trace of gas or oil. Despite the lack of immediate success, the oil companies are preparing to spend millions more for offshore leases on 3.1 million acres scheduled for bid in August.

The sale is likely to face opposition from state officials and environmentalists worried about the impact of deep-water drilling on lobster beds and fish spawning grounds. But the oil companies say it is vital to the national interest to know what is out there, even if billions are spent without result.

"This country must define its hydrocarbon supply," says Charles Schneider, a spokesman for Tenneco, which runs the drilling aboard the Alaskan Star. "If there's nothing out here we should know that too."

Drilling in the Georges Bank, the nation's latest offshore drilling operation, began July 24, 1981, more than a year and a half after 63 tracts on the fringe of the fishing area were leased for $817 million. Since then Exxon, Shell and Mobil have spent $93 million to drill four dry holes.

Mobil, Shell, Tenneco and Conoco are now operating in an area about 160 miles southeast of Cape Cod.

No one expects a sudden discovery. "In a frontier area you're looking for information," says Allen Stockman, a Tenneco geologist aboard the Alaskan Star. "They'll use all the information we get from this hole to determine where would be a better place to go to drill another hole. The cost for that information is high. Joe Elkins, Tenneco's East Coast drilling superintendent, says rental on a "semi" — semisubmersible drilling rigs — runs from $80,000 to $100,000 a day. The costs of running the drilling operation and crew of 80 pushes the costs to over $160,000 a day.

Tenneco estimates it will cost $25 million to $30 million to drill the 21,000-foot well. The bill will be split among seven companies that have already paid $15.8 million to lease the nine-mile square tract.

And drilling for oil at sea is a difficult and dangerous occupation. The Ocean Ranger, a rig built by Mitsubishi Heavy Industries of Japan, the same firm that built the Alaskan Star, sank off the coast of Canada in a fierce storm Feb. 15, killing all 84 crewmen.

Costs may be a factor in the upcoming lease sale. Forty-eight bids offered last December on tracts in the Baltimore Canyon off New Jersey were rejected as too low by the Department of Interior.

Oil company executives say the government's expectations, based on optimistic geological estimates, were too high.

There is also a current lull in oil exploration, due in part to high interest rates and the worldwide oversupply of oil. Elkins also says an increase in Norwegian and British taxes on North Sea operations has slowed drilling to the point that some rig owners are cutting charges by 15 percent to keep their equipment working.

"A year ago, rigs were hard to come by," he says. "Now they're available."

The second Georges Bank lease sale is scheduled for Aug. 24 in New York.

Massachusetts officials, including Gov. Edward J. King and Attorney General Francis Bellotti have asked U.S. Interior Secretary James Watt to delay the sale four months and to delete 600,000 acres that include lobster beds and spawning grounds at the head of underwater canyons.

Massachusetts congressmen have sent a similar letter to Watt, warning that the sale may be contested in court.

Douglas Foy, executive director of the Conservation Law Foundation, said his group may also go to court to oppose the sale. The foundation, representing environmental and fishing groups, was involved in a long legal battle that delayed the first sale for more than three years.

Foy said his group wants a year's delay in the sale until more information is available on the effects of drilling muds on the sea life in Georges Bank.

"There's a good argument that you're not going to have a lot of information until you've gone through at least a set of seasons out there," he said.

The on-shore debate seems remote to those aboard the Alaskan Star, the largest of the drilling rigs on the Georges Bank. The rig covers 2.5 acres and can drill 30,000 feet, aided by three separate computer systems. It is built to take 115 mph winds and 100-foot seas; the Ocean Ranger sank in 80 mph winds and 50-foot seas.

The rig offers such amenities as movies beamed in by satellite, a fully-equipped gym and a closed circuit television system that offers a view of the ocean floor 307 feet below.

Wants Lost Blimp Back

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — When you've got your very own blimp, well, heck, you get a bit possessive.

"Somebody, somewhere, has got to know who's got my blimp," said Bill Williams. "It's my personal blimp and I'd like to have it back."

It's not a big blimp, as blimps go — only 7 feet in diameter and 20 feet long — but Williams thinks it should be easy to spot anyway.

But more than two weeks after the blimp escaped from its line during Norfolk's Harborfest celebration, and after classified ads offering a $100 reward, and after radio announcements and a newspaper article — no blimp.

"I just came in and there's nothing on my (telephone) recorder," an unhappy Williams said Tuesday. "Maybe somebody's already found it and sold it."

Williams, who owns a marine salvage and well drilling company here, bought the $2,000 helium-filled blimp to promote a restaurant he has near Kitty Hawk, N.C., home, where the Wright brothers staged the first, heavier-than-air flight.

He rented the blimp to Hardee's restaurant during the waterfront celebration June 11-13.

One of those who saw it float away, Hardee's manager Walt Davenport, said: "The wind just took it away. Everybody at Harborfest saw it, but we couldn't do anything about it."

"We just saluted it."

Brooklynese - It's Wunnerful

By JERRY SCHWARTZ
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Ya got dese guys. Dey live in Brooklyn wit dere muddus and faddus, see? People tink dey talk funny.

Nah, says Margaret Mannix Flynn. It ain't funny. It's wunnerful.

Mrs. Flynn has listened to thousands of people in Brooklyn, and as a lecturer at the Department of Speech of Brooklyn College, she's put together a study of the dialects and accents of the borough that calls itself the nation's fourth largest city.

"Most people believe that coming from Brooklyn is some kind of joke," the Brooklyn native says.

"It always gets a laugh — you know, the guy in the World War II movie who is played by William Bendix and says he is from Flatbush."

He always says "Toity-toid Street and Toid Avenue," and "woik" for "work," and "earl" for "oil."

First of all, she says there is no Brooklynese. There's a New York dialect that is found throughout the metropolitan area.

That changing, living dialect is the culmination of wave upon wave of immigration, starting with the Dutch and continuing right up to today's influx of Russian Jews, Mrs. Flynn says.

"Very few places have the rich cultural diversity of Brooklyn," and thus Brooklyn's dialect is especially rich, says Mrs. Flynn.

"We learn to speak from the people around us," Mrs. Flynn said in a recent interview. "Say you have a second-generation Italian child. All around him, he hears relatives who speak an Italian dialect."

"But then he's 3 years old, and he goes out to play. He may meet an Irish-American kid or a Jewish-American kid, and he adopts some of the way they speak. Before you know it, his speech is a conglomerate."

And so it goes. New Englanders who came to Brooklyn after the Revolution changed "mother" to "mothah"; the Germans changed "where" to "ver" and "so" to "zo"; the Eastern Europeans added a melody that made declarative sentences sound like questions; the Italians made the word "last" sound like "le-ast."

The Irish changed "going" to "goin'" and "this" to "dis." Mrs. Flynn says the Irish spoke an archaic form of English because of their isolation; the early part of this century marked the arrival of blacks, who had been similarly isolated and made similar changes in Brooklyn speech.

Even now, Mrs. Flynn says, Brooklyn's new immigrants are changing the speech of the borough. Puerto Ricans make "ship" sound like "sheep" and "very" sound like "berry." And West Indian, Oriental and Russian Jewish newcomers also are having their effect, she says.

"Brooklyn is not a peculiar place where people speak a peculiar language," Mrs. Flynn says. "Brooklyn really represents a multi-national heritage. I think we deserve a little respect."

Told The Truth About Whopper

ANDERSON, S.C. (AP) — Don Hughes has violated the unwritten code of the fisherman — he told the truth about a whopper.

It seems that Hughes, of Cleveland, Tenn., came back from a day on Lake Harwell lugging a 38-pound striped bass.

But instead of regaling his friends with an epic tale of a battle royale between man and fish, he was honest.

Hughes admitted to his buddies that he stumbled across the big bass struggling to breathe in shallow water. Hughes tossed aside his pole, waded into the water and snagged his catch with a pair of pliers.

"To tell you the truth, I would have lied if I was him," said Mark Dickerson, owner of the small grocery store where Hughes took his Leviathan to be weighed Monday.

"I would probably have made up something better than saying I caught it with a pair of pliers. But that's how he did it," Dickerson said.

FIGHTING CHARGES

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A Catholic order of nuns called on the government yesterday to drop murder and subversion charges against two nuns and three layworkers accused of meeting with communist guerrillas.

Tom Higgins Big Ripley Contributor

By PETER de JONGE
Associated Press Writer
GRAHAMSVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — Fans of the fanciful, tracers of trivia and probers of the improbable probably owe something to Tom Higgins — believe it or not. As a gleaner of exceptional details about other people and places, the 60-year-old former gardener, soldier, free-lance cartoonist, linotype operator and furniture mover (in roughly that order) is in a class by himself. Higgins has contributed more than 150 pieces of offbeat trivia to "Ripley's Believe It or Not!" the syndicated cartoon appearing in some 300 newspapers throughout the world.

The column's tens of millions of readers have Higgins to thank for bringing to light the fact that:

"Jim Mather of Stanford University can catch an arrow in flight in his bare hand," and that "the adult giraffe has a heart that is two feet long and weighs 25 pounds."

When in April 1981 the syndicated column presented his 100th idea — "The 'Big Hole' of the Kimberly mine in South Africa, between 1871 and 1914, yielded 14,504,556 carats of diamonds" — a drawing of Higgins himself appeared beside the diamond mine. Higgins was pronounced the column's most prolific contributor.

For Higgins, who has spent most of his 60 years relishing the unusual, it was a very believable milestone.

His interests began veering from the norm even as a youngster growing up in Far Rockaway, N.Y.

"When I went to Coney Island, my friends might go on the rides or play the booths, but I would visit the freak shows," Higgins says.

He was also a precocious collector of off-the-wall minutiae, filling scrapbooks with cigar wrappers, matchbooks and bird nests.

He was 18 when he shared his first unusual tidbit with Ripley. He doesn't remember what it was.

Robert L. Ripley was a young sports cartoonist for the New York Globe who, on a slow sports day in 1918, drew up a panel honoring some of the more obscure athletic accomplishments of his day. There was a man who used a mirror to walk across the country backwards, another who jumped rope for more than four hours and another credited with a time of 11 seconds in the 100-yard hop.

Ripley titled it "Champs or Chumps." His editor renamed it "Believe It or Not!"

After high school and a stint in the South Pacific in World War II, Higgins curtailed his contributions to Ripley and set out to become a cartoonist.

He published his own oddity panels in trade publications after graduating from an illustrator's school. But Higgins says the payments for his cartoons never did much more than pay his expenses.

Then began the succession of jobs that took him to Lewiston, Maine, and elsewhere before bringing him back to Manhattan, where he found himself living with his third wife and their young twin sons.

It was then that Higgins saw a real estate listing for a 50-year-old hunting cabin on a mountainside in this small upstate New York town. He bought it with a $50 retainer. Eleven years ago, he moved his family in full time.

"We wanted to get out of the jungle," he said.

It was here, after a heart condition forced him into retirement two years ago, that he returned in earnest to

Prague's War On Pollution

By KENNETH JAUTZ
Associated Press Writer
PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Czech officials are waging a war against pollution in an effort to save the famous architecture that sets apart this smog-filled capital city.

More than 300 million crowns ($30 million) have been allotted to a preservation program that authorities describe as a major government effort.

"Because our history lies in our architecture it is a problem that touches us deeply," said Josef Mayer, head of the government department for historical monuments.

Experts say the smog that has darkened facades in this once-colorful capital is caused by the high sulfur content of Czech coal used to heat homes and offices.

Though known for centuries as the city of 100 towers, Prague has more than 500 spires, and nearly 2,000 palaces, patrician houses, churches, monuments and fortifications.

With many of its historical buildings dating from the 14th century, Prague's Old Town is a dark maze of narrow cobblestone streets that is famous throughout Europe for its beauty.

As part of the effort to preserve Prague, monuments and buildings in the area are now ringed with scaffolding, and its streets resemble a construction site.

Officials have also embarked on a program of converting coal-heated buildings to natural gas.

The changeover, which began almost five years ago, is proving difficult, according to residents here. Homeowners have to pay for installing equipment in their buildings, and pipe-laying is hampered by the small streets and crowded conditions.

Czechoslovakia has plans for a major nuclear-power buildup, and officials add that they hope to turn toward electrical heating in the future.

Other preservation efforts include rerouting trams and private cars from some downtown areas, and the expansion of the city's subway system.

Only Old Town residents with a special sticker on their cars were allowed to drive in the area in recent months.

According to preservation officials, the heating conversions and traffic changes will cut down on Prague's threatening air pollution.

The use of sandstone and other soft materials by Czech artisans throughout the centuries has also left Prague monuments and statues more weatherbeaten than those of other European cities.

In Florence, Paris and other former centers for flourishing art, marble or granite were the common materials for outdoor creations.

Czech officials criticize the restoration efforts used in some cities, and say research into new methods is under way at a number of Czechoslovak universities.

'Yard Patrol Craft' Train Landlubbers For Navy

By JOHN W. FRECE

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (UPI) — When Alex Smith arrived at the U.S. Naval Academy two years ago, his experience at sea amounted to a few fishing trips down the sometimes muddy Ocmulgee River in southern Georgia.

Ten or 15 years from now, though, America's strength at sea will depend on the abilities of men like Smith and his academy classmates, men who will be moving up through the navy ranks to become captains and admirals.

Between now and then, Smith, 19, of McRae, Ga., and his classmates must learn to handle a ship at sea, to navigate, to carry out commands as part of the fleet and to safely make port.

Their classroom for honing such skills, is often the Severn River or the nearby Chesapeake Bay. Their ships for maneuvers like those at sea are 80-foot Yard Patrol Craft.

To the officers who train the young men and women, there is no training like sea training. To them, the "laboratory" classes aboard the YPs are as important as anything the young men and women will do during their four years in Annapolis.

"In a way, I feel like I'm doing more for the fleet here than I was doing out in the fleet," said Lt. Cmdr. Paul Mori, the officer in charge of boat number one.

Training for sophomores aboard the 25-year-old, gray, wooden-hulled YP's is technically called "Shiphandling and Tactics," but it could be called "Trying to Stay in Line."

From the bridge of his YP, Lt. Cmdr. Tom Cutler looked back across the stern at the three identical training craft following at 200-yard intervals in single-file formation.

Suddenly, without warning or apparent reason, the middle of the three YP's veered to its port side and headed off alone.

"What the hell?" muttered Cutler, who was in charge of the four-ship formation. "What is happening?"

Almost by the time he had noticed the disruption, however, boat No. 3 had turned back to starboard and was falling in line again.

"When you execute a speed change, you make sure the guy behind you executes it, too," said Mori. "The fourth boat probably didn't execute the speed signal, or was slow, and he (No. 3) had to veer out of the line."

"Execute speed zero," Cutler barked to Smith, who for that day of training was the midshipman in charge of the lead YP.

Like some old salt from a World War II movie, Smith leaned over the voice tube and shouted Cutler's order to the helmsman below. Cutler then stopped everything. It was class time.

"When you execute speed zero, do you automatically stop 'right away'?" Cutler asked the seven or eight midshipmen on the bridge.

"Mr. Horn, yea or nay?" he asked. The middle shrugged his shoulders and guessed "yea."

The answer, Cutler said, was that the lead ship must stop immediately, but the others can keep moving just enough to realign themselves in the proper formation with the guide ship.

Problems faced by the novice seamen are compounded by bad weather, mechanical trouble, missed signals and pleasure boaters who don't know the rules of the road.

"It's not too hard as long as you don't hit anything," Smith said.

Much of the training on YP's involves one ship signaling to the others (with either flags or radios) what it is going to do — speed up, slow down, turn or stop.

The commands are usually coded, so the receiving ships have to first receive or see the signal, acknowledge receipt, then decode it, understand what it means, and then do it.

When the officers get back to land, they grade each midshipman's performance. Among other traits, they look for proper military bearing: Did the mids act like they knew what they were doing aboard ship?

Cutler said his biggest difficulty was watching a midshipman dock a YP.

"You have to let the midshipman do it, but you have to step in if he's going wrong. We have a responsibility not to wreck the craft. It's a very fine line to draw."

Cite Nutrition In Teen Snacks

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Despite fears about the eating habits of American youth, teen-agers aren't becoming "saltaholics" and those who eat salty snacks like potato chips and popcorn aren't sacrificing nutrition, a food scientist says.

"Consumption of varying amounts of salted snack foods had little impact on the average daily nutrient intake of adolescents," Mary Zabik of Michigan State University's Department of Food Science and Human Nutrition said Wednesday.

Ms. Zabik and Karen Morgan of the University of Missouri sampled food records over seven days for 480 youths aged 13-18. They said most teen-agers ate a moderate amount of potato chips, popcorn, corn chips, tortilla chips, pretzels and other such salty snacks.

"The average amount (of these snacks) consumed per week by the entire sample population was 2.1 ounces," Ms. Zabik said.

She said that equals two to four small packages of the snacks, and consumption of such snacks doesn't eliminate nutrition from the youths' diets.

"The data show that teen-agers consuming moderate quantities of salted snack foods had higher average intake levels of nutrients than individuals who did not consume any salted snack foods," she said.

Nebraska Still The Exception

By SCOTT KRAFT Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — You can get a gourmet cooking utensil, a "greatest hits" album, a moving van, a hotel room, a credit check or some advice simply by dialing an 800 number from anywhere ... except in Nebraska.

Ma Bell's toll-free number business has always had its exceptions, and Nebraska is accepted as the most-often excepted.

Need an Avis rental car? Oklahoma is the exception. Want to locate a Porsche Audi dealer? Illinois is the exception. Have a question about Apple computers? California is the exception.

The list goes on. Forty-nine states get one number — the state where operators answer the calls gets another.

And because Nebraska has the highest concentration of 800 numbers, it's the most-often excepted state.

Why so many 800 numbers in Nebraska?

About seven years ago, as the use of "800" numbers grew, Northwestern Bell of Omaha launched a campaign to bring reservation centers to its area. It worked. Omaha is home to 1,000 "800" lines and several hundred "800" numbers.

"If it can be sold in a catalog, chances are pretty good that you called here to get it," says Terry Sanford, account manager for Northwestern Bell's 800 operations.

The campaign to make Nebraska home for 800 numbers worked because the state's central location made the rates lower. Also, the accent. Yes, the accent.

"Some say we have a vanilla accent and our speech can be understood by anyone in the country," Sanford explains, understandably. Talk show hosts Johnny Carson and Dick Cavett are exceptional Nebraska products.

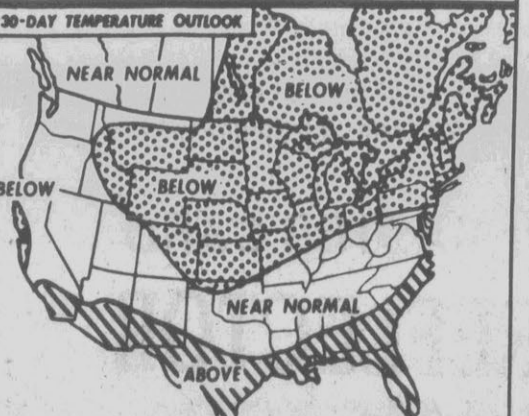

The operators may be easily understood, but the advertisements that have to list more than one 800 number may not be. AT&T recently overcame the mechanical quirk and sells an 800 service with one nationwide toll-free number — no exceptions. Until companies change over, there'll be some exceptions, especially for Nebraskans.

An Allied Van Lines driver who's looking for an all-night gas station simply calls one of his company's 800 numbers no matter where he is — unless it's Nebraska.

Want to order the Wall Street Journal? We dial one 800 number — Nebraskans get another. A reservation for a Hyatt hotel? One number — except in Nebraska.

And if Clair's Nice 'n Easy hair-coloring kit turns your hair blazing red instead of blond, simply dial Clair's toll-free line ... except in New York.

Nebraska can't always be the exception.

Victorian Soc. Behind Times

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The Victorian Society in America is a hundred years behind the times and plans to stay that way.

The 5,500 members across the country who belong to the society are fascinated by the architecture, fashion, cuisine, and lifestyle of the Victorian age, although few actually try to emulate the way Victorians lived.

"We're not trying to turn the clock back," said Judy O'Boyle, membership director for the society, which has its headquarters in Philadelphia. "It would be too hard — no running water, etc. You couldn't do it without the battery of servants that upper class people in that time had."

"But it was such a fascinating age, coming from the early parts of the 1800s and ending with light bulbs and refrigerators. It's a whole spectrum of two different worlds and that period linked them together."

The Victorian Society was founded in 1966 in New York City, but its headquarters were moved to The Athenaeum in Philadelphia later that year. The Athenaeum was a private library founded in 1814 and was the first major structure in the United States built in the Italianate Revival fashion, said Johanna Natarella, coordinator of programs and special events for the Victorian Society.

"It's the only national organization dedicated to the preservation and enjoyment of our 19th century heritage," Ms. Natarella said. She said the society's studies encompass 1790 to 1917.

Ms. O'Boyle said two types of people join the Victorian Society. One group grew up with mothers or relatives who were part of the Victorian era and appreciate a "very old-fashioned way of life, simple, scholarly."

The second group are people who realized in the 1960s and 1970s that one of the wonders of the Victorian age was its architecture — "the space, the quality, the materials that you can't get any more," said Ms. O'Boyle. "They appreciate the age, maybe not what it was known for — stuffiness and oppression, but as one of the last times when you could get good quality."

She said members of the society also appreciate Victorian fashions in clothing, noting that many current styles are based on Victorian styles "probably because they're so flattering to women."

The society holds annual meetings in cities around the country that have strong 19th century heritages and restored architecture of the era and an annual summer seminar in England in conjunction with the Victorian Society in Britain, which is not affiliated with the American group.

"It's half fun and half serious study," Ms. O'Boyle said of the society. "People who join do so for fun, but they also live in 19th century buildings and like it, or for some other reason have other aspects of its style, such as being collectors. There also are really serious 19th century scholars, who present papers and contribute to 'Nineteenth Century' (the society's magazine)."

The Victorian Society in America has 33 chapters and 5,500 members. The annual dues are $25, although some paid $1,000 for lifetime memberships.

With a lifetime membership, a person gets to pick a year in the 19th century and that becomes "his year." Only one person can have each year in the century.

"It's kind of silly, but kind of cute," said Ms. Natarella.

While the members do not adopt the Victorian way of life most of the year, many don the ornate costumes of that earlier time at the yearly ball, usually held during the annual symposium.

In 1981, Philadelphia hosted the symposium and members were told how upper class Victorians dined and drank. They also were taught somewhat modernized versions of the recipes.

"They (Victorians) ate a lot more than we do. They ate an enormous amount," said Felicity Taormina, one of the instructors. "It was a very opulent age. God help you if you were poor."

Food was more elaborate in the 19th century and the cook was an important part of any household, said Irini Smith, who is co-director with Ms. Taormina of To Market To Market, a Philadelphia cooking school.

"People had more time then, even aside from having servants to do much of the work," said Ms. Smith. "They'd spend all day preparing for the evening meal."

Dining was "more of an occasion. It was the center of entertainment," she said.

An upper class Victorian breakfast would include deviled kidneys, game pies, various egg dishes, scones, bacon, and porridge.

Lunch would be fairly light, followed by tea at about 4 p.m., a meal that included scones, sandwiches, tea breads, and cakes — and, of course, tea.

Supper, as the main meal, started with game soup followed by such culinary treats as braized venison, rabbit, potted game — which was a pate, pheasant, game in season, and various desserts.

"It was a lot of food, but they exercised a lot — horse riding and hunting," said Ms. Smith.

Chaga's Disease Among Millions Of Brazilians

By BRYNA BRENNAN
 Associated Press Writer
 BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — Hidden inside the cracks in the mud of makeshift shanties lives a bug that carries a disease said to affect millions of the rural poor in Brazil. There is no known cure.

Chagas' disease, first discovered in the early 1900s by Brazilian doctor Carlos Chagas, is found in all of South America. Two cases were reported in Texas in 1955.

The disease, transmitted by several insects that carry the organism trypanosoma cruzi, can cause neurological disorders, heart failure and intestinal tract problems, according to Antonio Carlos Silveira, the head of the Chagas' disease division of the Brazilian Health Ministry.

Carlos Silveira said in a recent interview that four million Brazilians living along the eastern section of Latin America's largest nation are infected with the disease.

Chagas' disease is not contagious, but can be transmitted through blood transfusions and infected mothers can pass the organism on to their unborn, Carlos Silveira said.

"It usually affects the infants," he said, explaining that the bugs come out at night while the children are asleep and leave the organism on their faces.

The bug is known here as the "bicho barbeiro," Portuguese for barber bug.

In many cases, the symptoms seem to disappear, with the majority of the deaths occurring among victims aged 30 to 49, Carlos Silveira said.

The first sign, Carlos Silveira said, is usually a swollen, almost closed eye, technically called Romana's sign. "But its symptoms are very vague," he added.

Exact numbers of cases and deaths attributed directly to the disease are hard to come by.

"It affects the poor, those who live in bad socioeconomic conditions," Carlos Silveira said. Most of the rural population live far away from doctors and hospitals and don't seek formal treatment, he added.

A specialist in the field, Joao Carlos de Pinto Dias, was quoted recently by the newspaper O Estado de Sao Paulo as saying that about 1.5 million of the people who now have the disease will die "shortly" and that the disease had become a problem of "national security."

"It's very serious," Carlos Silveira said. "We don't have the medicine to give all the people. There are two drugs, but they're only good at the beginning."

Instead, the government is trying to eliminate the cause — the bugs.

In 1975, the Health Ministry set up a program to spray countryside houses, Carlos Silveira said. In 1982, he said, the government allocated $13.2 million for the program.

Three thousand workers are employed by the program, most of whom work in the rural areas spraying insecticide inside the rural homes built of wood, bamboo, palm leaves and mud, Carlos Silveira said.

According to Health Ministry statistics, 792,183 houses and outdoor buildings were sprayed in 1981. The figures also showed that 6,716 of the 205,646 insects examined carried Chagas' disease.

Carlos Silveira said it is too early to pinpoint precise results of the spraying program.

"Until we eradicate the cause, the bad conditions, it will continue. But we think this will work."

In many cases, he added, people suffer losses of energy and appetite — but then appear to be fine.

A Western source, who asked not to be identified, said the victims also become susceptible to other infections, or tuberculosis and malnutrition.

"It's really sad," the source said. "Sometimes they just collapse. But it's not a priority disease for the developed world."

Voters Ban Terminals

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — City voters apparently made history in North Carolina Tuesday when they approved a zoning amendment banning coal terminals from areas classified for light industrial use.

Officials believe the vote marks the first time in this state that the public has successfully petitioned local officials to spur a zoning change.

In a referendum, city voters approved the ban by a 3,239-1,799 margin. The referendum was put on the ballot after a petition containing 1,300 signatures asked for a referendum.

The petition was aimed at Wilmington Coal Transfer Inc., a Kentucky-based firm that hoped to build a coal terminal near the downtown historic area.

Wilmington is one of a handful of towns and cities statewide whose charters allow voters to petition for legislative changes, but officials with the N.C. Institute of Government think Wilmington's vote is unique.

A little-known provision in Wilmington's charter gives the Wilmington City Council the choice of enacting voters' requests or calling for a referendum. The council could have initiated the ban, but preferred to let the voters decide.

The change is effective once the referendum's results are verified Thursday.

Hinckley's Sanity Debate In Congress

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Psychiatrists testifying before a Senate subcommittee say it is impossible to predict for certain that it would be safe to release John W. Hinckley Jr. or similar mental patients from a hospital.

"We don't have the means to guarantee members of society that we will protect them from a person like John Hinckley," Alan Stone of Harvard Law School said Wednesday.

Stone and six other psychiatrists appeared before a Senate judiciary subcommittee considering proposals to change the insanity law under which Hinckley was found not guilty by reason of insanity for shooting President Reagan March 30, 1981.

Hinckley is undergoing tests in a federal mental hospital in preparation for a hearing later this summer at which U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker will decide if he should remain in confinement.

His trial ended last week after four months of testimony, including conflicting psychiatric opinions on his sanity at the time of the wounding of Reagan and three other men.

Under the insanity law in the District of Columbia, Hinckley would be eligible for a review of his sanity and his potential threat to himself and others every six months with the judge making the final decision.

Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., the subcommittee chairman, said he is looking for a way to enact legislation which would guarantee that Hinckley would remain in a mental hospital for a long time.

Specter said possible legislation might set "a new standard for Hinckley's detention ... although it may present some problems of double jeopardy."

While there were major disagreements among the psychiatrists, all agreed that it would be a mistake to completely eliminate the insanity defense under which Hinckley's lawyers persuaded a jury that he was too mentally ill to know that the attack on Reagan and three other men was wrong.

"In a sense," said Jonas Rappoport, chief medical officer of the Maryland court system, the insanity defense "is a mark separating us from the wild beasts."

Mentally ill defendants, he said, are protected "from the harshness of the law."

Rappoport and two other psychiatrists, James Cavanaugh of Rush-Presbyterian Medical Center in Chicago and Ernst Prelinger of Yale University, were participants in Hinckley's four-month trial.

In his testimony, Rappoport cited figures showing that only about 10 per cent of defendants who successfully plead not guilty by reason of insanity commit new crimes once they are released from mental hospitals.

"Only a small number of those who are released return to the hospital," Rappoport said.

Cavanaugh said a program in which he works has allowed about 65 persons who were found not guilty, but insane, to be released and treated in a psychiatric clinic and only a handful returned to crime.

But Stone cited a study in Michigan which he said showed that about half of the defendants found not guilty but insane were released within three months.

The current legal standard which decides who is released, Stone said, "rests on quicksand."

The issue is controversial because of a change in psychiatric treatment from an era when seriously ill patients remained hospitalized for most of their lives to the current practice of emphasizing early release with regular treatment at a clinic.

Bar Pistols Around Pope

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Police today said two tourists stopped for carrying a pistol and jackknife in St. Peter's Square were people of good will who did not intend to hurt Pope John Paul II.

They identified the two, released after questioning on Wednesday, as Louise Papi Mussot, 40, of La Clotat, France; and Neil Bretherton, 22, of Matamata, New Zealand.

"They didn't mean any harm," said Luigi Mazzotta, deputy chief of the Monteverde police station in Rome. "They are obviously people of good will."

Mrs. Mussot, who was carrying the pistol in her purse, told police she used it to scare off purse-snatchers or muggers. The weapon, known as a starter's pistol, is capable of firing blanks but not bullets, police said.

Bretherton had the jackknife closed in his pocket.

The two were stopped as they entered St. Peter's Square on Wednesday for the pope's general audience. All people entering the square for papal appearances must pass through metal detectors, a security measure enforced since the attempt on the pope's life last year.

Mehmet Ali Agca, a Turkish terrorist, shot and seriously wounded the pope at the beginning of his general audience in the square May 13, 1981. Agca is serving a life term in an Italian prison for the attack.

Strike Again

PERTH, Australia (AP) — Another large consignment of gold is missing in western Australia — the fourth this year, informed government sources said today.

The latest, containing 100 antique gold coins dated from 1887 to 1901 and reportedly worth $10,494, vanished in transit between the Great Western Gold Exchange in Perth and Melbourne on June 29, the sources said. A spokesman for the gold exchange and Perth police declined to discuss the case.

Since February, thieves and confidence men have taken more than $1.23 million worth of gold bars. The biggest haul was a $663,000 shipment from the Perth mint last week.

Return Planned By Cosmonauts

MOSCOW (AP) — French cosmonaut Jean-Loup Chretien and his four Soviet crewmates are completing joint work aboard the orbiting Salyut-7 space station, Tass reported today.

The official Soviet news agency said "preparations have started for the descent of the Soyuz-T 6 spaceship" that will carry Chretien, mission commander Vladimir Dzhanibekov and engineer Alexander Ivanchenkov back to earth Friday.

Two other Soviet cosmonauts, Anatoly Berezovoi and Valentin Lebedev, aboard Salyut-7 since mid-May, will stay in the space station.

All systems of Salyut-7 and the Soyuz-T 6 capsule "are functioning normally and the cosmonauts are in good health and feeling well," Tass said.

Chretien, 43, is the first Western European to fly in space.

FACE IS FAMILIAR — Wayne Sellers, 17, of Atlanta, Ga., bearing an uncanny resemblance to actor John Schneider of the "Dukes of Hazzard" television program, joins crowd estimated at over 1,000 other aspiring actors answering a "cattle call" audition at Burbank Studios in Burbank, Calif. Warner Bros. Television, which produces "Dukes," had an open casting call for actors to fill new character roles being added to the series which stars Tom Wopat and Schneider. (AP Laserphoto)

'The New Storytellers' vs. The 'Dukes'

By KENNETH R. CLARK
UPI TV Reporter
NEW YORK (UPI) — Behold CBS — the Jekyll and Hyde of television. Under the influence of foul chemicals called rating points, it sprouts yellow teeth and commits a prime-time crime called "The Dukes of Hazzard," only to awake pure of heart and clear of eye with "The New Storytellers" on cable.

Jack Willis, who works for CBS, is serene in the face of such a dichotomy. As vice president of programming for CBS Cable, he is on the side of Dr. Jekyll, insulated, at least for now, from Nielsen madness.

"At CBS Cable, we talk a lot about the intimacy of television and the fact that you have to humanize it," he said. "You have to ask, 'What does it do best?' What we feel it does best is bring to the audience other kinds of experience."

Since its debut in October last year, the CBS entry in the booming new cable television industry has brought its audiences a lot of that.

The music has run from jazz to classical, the drama from Dylan Thomas to William Shakespeare, but it is in such relative non-celebrities as a great, expansive black lady named Jackie Torrence, who will be featured on the network July 5-6, and a taciturn Down-easterner named Marshall Dodge, slated for July 28-29, that Willis takes most delight.

They are practitioners of an art anthropologists rate as the first learned by humankind after the knack of hunting and gathering was down pat.

They are storytellers —

Dodge, of the droll kind, and Ms. Torrence of the sort remembered with goose bumps from childhood when her equivalent whispered ghost stories by candlelight and made every flickering shadow an eerie menace.

Add to their performances an exquisite British import called "Clouds of Glory," to be seen July 13, and the art of storytelling is as total as television ever has seen it.

"Clouds of Glory" — a surrealistic re-creation of Samuel Taylor Coleridge's "Rime of the Ancient Mariner" — is unlike anything ever seen or heard in school. Coleridge, a weakling who blamed his wife for all his misfortunes, was a drug addict, and it is from that warped viewpoint that the web of his immortal poem is spun.

Far from the mindless morass that dominates prime time, "Clouds of Glory" is a brilliant lecture on literature, and the aspect of television as a teacher excites Willis who has won more prizes as a maker of documentaries since 1961 than he can count.

"This belongs in a classroom," he said of the Coleridge effort. "I think it's the kind of thing children would grab onto instantly ... If the teacher sets it up right and says, 'Look, this is really about drug addiction, and it's also a marital conflict....'"

Jackie Torrence and Marshall Dodge — who, tragically, was killed in a traffic accident shortly after taping his segment for CBS Cable — were chosen essentially for the same reason.

"The idea was that there was drama in one person telling us stories that were basically folk tales, and that storytelling was probably the oldest way of perpetuating culture," Willis said. "That's what we're doing — perpetuating culture. It's the sum total of who we are."

"Sixty percent of what we do, we produce ourselves ... I can't prove it, but I would say that we have probably had more hours of good drama in this season than any other network in history."

In a bid to protect that identity, CBS Cable has done everything it can to disassociate itself from its parent. The familiar CBS eye-logo never appears. The cable graphic is in block letters and script. Still, Willis is kind to the ratings-ridden network that owns his shop.

Has there been a cable erosion of the traditional network audience?

"I think to some extent there has been," Willis said. "Nobody can measure the effect. The network audience is down and nobody knows whether that's cable or not. There are still 81 million homes hooked up to network television, so I hardly think that at this point in time we're any threat."

The only threat Willis sees to his own operation is pressure recently exerted by some network executives who want the A.C. Nielsen Co. to lay its yardstick to cable as well as to prime time commercial programming.

"That would destroy the concept that says you can deliver a high quality product to a relatively small audience," he said. "In cable, you create an environment in which an advertiser is going to want to participate because you're reaching an audience that he would not normally reach on a regular basis."

"The moment you become a slave to the Niensens, you have lost that concept. Then you truly are competing with the networks ... It's antiquated thinking to be pushing for that, it really is. It's apples and oranges."

But Willis said with cable, anything can — and probably will — happen in months to come.

"Instead of a 5-year business plan, we have a 5-week business plan," he said. "The name of the game in this business is flexibility. In order to function in this business, you have to be the kind of personality that is very flexible and doesn't mind functioning in chaos.

"Cable's new and you've got to cut through the hype. There's a lot going on."

Cagney & Lacey Shine In Ratings

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Cagney and Lacey," which seemed destined for the television scrap heap last year, finished second in the TV ratings for the past week, according to the A.C. Nielsen Co.

Only its Monday night companion, "M-A-S-H," placed higher than the CBS series about two policewomen who are also close friends.

"Cagney and Lacey," now running in the "Lou Grant" spot on Mondays, was a spring tryout series that failed in the ratings and seemed to be dead. It was given a "last chance" on a Sunday night and scored well in the ratings. Then when CBS dropped "Lou Grant," the show that no one thought would be renewed was picked up for the fall.

Third place in the Nielsen ratings went to another CBS Monday night show, "House Calls," which won't be back next year. Sharon Gless, one of the stars of "House Calls," will return in the fall, replacing Meg Foster as Chris Cagney in "Cagney and Lacey."

In all, CBS had seven shows in the Top 10 for the week ending June 27 and won the week. The other three shows were ABC's NBC's highest-rated show was "Quincy" in 16th place.

CBS was first for the week with a rating of 14.1. ABC was second with 13.5 and NBC was third with 11. The networks say this means in an average prime-time minute 14.1 percent of the nation's homes were tuned to CBS.

Here are the Top 10 shows: "M-A-S-H," a rating of 23.8 or 19 million households, CBS; "Cagney and Lacey," 21.5 or 17.2 million, CBS; "House Calls," 21.2 or 16.9 million, CBS; "Hart to Hart," 21.1 or 16.8 million, ABC; "The Jeffersons," 19.9 or 15.9 million, CBS; "Too Close for Comfort," 19.3 or 15.4 million, ABC; "Alice," 18.7 or 14.9 million, CBS; "60 Minutes," 18.5 or 14.8 million, CBS; "20-20," 18.3 or 14.6 million, ABC; "Trapper John," 18 or 14.4 million, CBS.

Here are the next 10: "Fantasy Island," ABC; "Three's Company," ABC;

"One Day at a Time," CBS; "WKRP in Cincinnati," CBS; "The Love Boat," ABC; "Quincy," NBC; "Gimme a Break," NBC; "Archie Bunker's Place," CBS; "Diff'rent Strokes," NBC; "Hill Street Blues," NBC.

'Fame' Finally Back To Roots

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The honking cabs wouldn't cooperate. Nor would the ogling crowds, labeled "morons" by one cop. And the neighborhood entrepreneurs were kvetching. "They're blocking off my business," said one beefy souvenir saleslady, who was wearing her wares, space antennae.

"Fame," NBC's Thursday night series about energetic and talented New York high school students, had finally come home. After a season of shooting in laid-back Los Angeles, the cast was in the bustling Big Apple last week, filming several scenes, including one musical number in Times Square.

"This is the only place in the world to get this kind of thing," says Bill Blinn, "Fame's" executive producer. "It's not easy working in congestion, especially doing musical numbers. But if you want the look and texture of New York, you've got to come here."

Blinn's production assistant, Tony Amatulo, oranizes the city cinematography, working with the mayor's office to get police officers assigned for crowd control.

"People love to come up and touch the actors," says Amatulo, whose name was borrowed by "Fame's" Danny Amatulo character.

Leroy Johnson, the rubbery dancer played by Gene Anthony Ray, created the biggest stir. "We want your body," shouted a sidewalk dance critic.

The writers' strike and production problems limited "Fame" to using Los Angeles to re-create New York during its first season. Last week's shooting from Lincoln Center, the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Central Park Zoo, Battery Park and the Staten Island Ferry will be sprinkled throughout the show's 1982-83 episodes.

One place "Fame" didn't film was at the New York High School for the Performing Arts.

"They're having exams now and, anyway, they don't need the publicity," says Blinn.

RICH AND FAMOUS — Adam Arkin, recently dropped from the cast of NBC's "Teachers Only," has been winning rave reviews for his role in the John Guare play "Rich and Famous" currently playing at the Coronet Theater in Los Angeles. "There is literally no time to get your bearings," says the 25-year-old actor, whose demanding part calls for him to be onstage for 120 minutes nonstop. (AP Laserphoto)

Moderate Revolutionary

Miguel de la Madrid is both a lawyer and an economist. He has served as an official in Mexico's state oil company and in the Finance Ministry, and earned a master's degree in Public Administration from Harvard University. A political moderate who is friendly to the U.S., de la Madrid seems an unlikely revolutionary. But Mexico's Institutional Revolutionary Party (PRI) has selected him as its candidate for President of Mexico in Sunday's election. There are few doubts about the election's outcome. The PRI has won every presidential election for the past 52 years, and since it is the only legal party in Mexico, this moderate Revolutionary is likely to win by a landslide.

Delaware House Poetic Resolution

DOVER, Del. (AP) - The Delaware House of Representatives has joined in the crusade to show the Pierres of the world how lucky they are.

By unanimous vote, the House passed a poetic resolution for Gov. Pierre S. du Pont IV to send to a young pen pal who hates his first name, which happens to be Pierre.

Nine-year-old Pierre Fox of San Francisco wrote a letter to du Pont last week to find solace in the name Pierre. He said his friends made fun of him and he asked du Pont to be his friend.

In his reply, du Pont told the youth that his friends call him "Pete" and he also ticked off the names of other famous people named Pierre, such as Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau.

The Legislature's poem, which was written anonymously, offered the following:

There's nothing wrong with being Pierre

As long as the folks call you Pete;

Just look at me - so cool, debonair

With Guccis to cover my feet.

There's everything right about being Pierre

Just don't let your friends get your goat;

You can be Governor, Senator, Millionaire

You can eat and drink 'til you float.

So, there's much to be said for being Pierre

A President, maybe, one day;

There's really no reason to live with despair

A strong heart will take you all way.

After examining his shoes, du Pont assured the lawmakers he would forward a copy of the resolution to Pierre Fox.

Deadlock On Carter Park

ATLANTA (AP) - A deadlock has developed in a $110 million plan to develop a northwest Atlanta park that would include the presidential library of Jimmy Carter - and it came after the former president had reiterated his support for the proposal.

The City Council's Transportation Committee Wednesday deadlocked at 2-2 over Mayor Andrew Young's development plan for the Great Park, sending the issue to the full council July 6.

In a handwritten letter, Carter urged the council to include the four-lane, 2.2-mile parkway the mayor had proposed along the length of the park.

"It will be my intention to work as closely and harmoniously as possible with local and state officials and with the interested neighborhood groups," Carter said in the letter.

"Also, I will do everything possible to assure that the plans for the presidential park, the roadways, bike trails, and footpaths are maintained as described to the public, and not later modified to the detriment of the community," the letter said.

Neighborhood leaders have opposed plans for the four-lane road through the park.

Young's proposal includes the proposed Carter library, 700 new housing units, eight miles of jogging trails and bike paths, and the four-lane parkway.

DETAIN SUSPECTS

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) - Eight soldiers and an undisclosed number of civilians have been detained in connection with an attack on the residence of Prime Minister Robert Mugabe last week.
