

High Court On 'Kiddie Porn'

An Exception To 'Free Speech'

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — States may ban virtually all "kiddie pornography," the Supreme Court ruled today.

had struck down the law as unconstitutional, but today the Supreme Court, led by Justice Byron R. White, reversed the state court's ruling.

The Constitution's First Amendment guarantees that government will not interfere with anyone's freedom of speech. But that protection is not absolute.

also is not constitutionally protected. Today's decision adds a new exception to those previously created.

Congress and state legislatures have been under heavy pressure in recent years to heighten efforts to stem sexual exploitation of children.

Just last week, an official of the General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, told a House committee that child pornography has declined in recent years but that most law enforcement officials believe the number of children involved has not dropped.

No Contests Are Affected

Only Minor Changes By Vote Canvass

Thursday's canvass of primary returns by the Pitt Board of Elections resulted in several minor changes in totals published by The Daily Reflector but revealed only one instance where unofficial totals varied by more than a single vote.

According to the canvass, the constitutional amendment relative to four-year terms for General Assembly members received 2,645 affirmative votes rather than 3,059 as published, while 8,257 votes were cast against the amendment instead of 8,256. The other four amendments also received one more affirmative vote than was published.

In the 9th District senatorial race, incumbent Sen. Vernon White received one more absentee vote than was published, giving him 5,104 votes in Pitt County. In Martin County, the senator also received one more vote than reported, giving him a total of 1,310 in the county's seven precincts. Beaufort County totals of 318 for White and 398 for Linwood Mercer were confirmed. Overall, White finished with a three-county total of 6,732 to 6,657 for Mercer to earn the Democratic nomination by a 75-vote margin.

In balloting for the Ayden township seat on the Pitt Board of Education, Ivan Hill received 2,306 votes rather than 2,303.

Situations where candidates received one more vote than published, as a result of additional absentee votes reported by the Board of Elections, included: Thomas Brandon III, Congress, 1,916 votes; Mark Owens, Pitt Board of Education, 4,739 votes; Anne McGaughey, Pitt Board of Education, 4,365 votes; Appeals Court candidates Eugene Phillips (1,235), Paul Wright (3,052), and Marvin Schiller (2,549); Robert Shoffner, district attorney, 3,835; Ron Cooper, sheriff, 3,507; and Charles McLawhorn, county commissioner, 3,928.

In the 6th District contest for the State House of Representatives, the Pitt County totals for winner John Gillam and for candidates William Harrison and Jananne Ocamb were confirmed by the canvass. However, the canvass in Martin County gave Gillam 960 votes rather than 1,285, Harrison 1,158 rather than 1,310, and Mrs. Ocamb 495 rather than 670. In Hertford County, Gillam received 1,001 votes rather than 975 as reported initially, while Harrison tallied 469 votes instead of 465, and Mrs. Ocamb received 38 rather than 34.

Margaret Register, supervisor of elections for the Pitt office, said today that 12,205 people voted in Tuesday's primary in the county, including those who submitted absentee ballots. The voting total amounted to approximately 36 percent of the county's voter registration of 34,308.

Govm't Agencies Scramble For Funds

By MARGARET SCHERF
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress and President Reagan, in agreement on the need for a 10-day paid vacation but apart on keeping the government in enough money to operate, are telling cash-starved federal agencies to do the best they can in their absence.

At least one federal agency was left scrambling for money Thursday as Reagan, who has vetoed two emergency spending bills, flew to his California ranch and the House and Senate adjourned until July 12.

Nearly 1,000 employees of the Department of Health and Human Services' inspector general's office had been scheduled to be furloughed indefinitely Friday until Secretary Richard A. Schweiker dug up some cash.

Schweiker said he was ordering the "extraordinary step" of borrowing money from the secretary's program evaluation authority to pay employees of the inspector general's office until July 30.

He said he and Inspector General Richard P. Kusserow took the action "only after receiving assurances that the required legislative action would follow shortly after Congress reconvenes July 12."

Some 8,000 Labor Department workers have been told they will be furloughed starting July 12 if the deadlock is not broken. And nearly 2,000 Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms employees will be furloughed indefinitely July 11 unless new funds are made available. Another 3,000 Education Department workers have been told to expect furloughs during the summer.

The impasse, however, posed no immediate threat to Social Security recipients even though the spending bill contains funds needed to process and mail their checks.

July checks were mailed Thursday, and August checks would be affected only if the impasse continued that long. Even then, other Treasury Department funds could be transferred to the affected division.

"We regret that the House, Senate and the administration, despite our best efforts, have not been able to resolve those differences standing in the way of passage of an Urgent Supplemental Appropriations Bill," House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. and Republican Leader Robert Michel said in a joint statement.

Pledging to act as soon as possible to resolve the remaining differences, they urged Reagan "to do whatever is possible to avoid disruptions in government programs or furloughs of any kind."

The battle over the emergency spending bill — needed because the money originally given the agencies wasn't enough to keep them going for the full year — has been in progress for months now.

Reagan vetoed the first version because it included a $3 billion housing subsidy he opposed. After an attempt in the House to override the veto failed, Congress removed the housing subsidy and sent the bill back to Reagan at with $5.9 billion extra to run the government through Sept. 30.

When Reagan vetoed that as too much, the House passed a third bill containing $4.5 billion to keep agencies operating through July 20. That was unacceptable both to Reagan and the Republican-controlled Senate.

Unemployment Rate Said Steady In June; Job-Hunters Drop Off

By MERRILL HARTSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate held steady at 9.5 percent in June, but the number of Americans who gave up looking for work because of the tight job market set a record, the Labor Department said today.

Although the jobless rate was unchanged from May, the number of people out of work actually fell — from 10.5 million to 10.4 million.

But 1.5 million people fell into the government's "discouraged worker" category — a statistic reported by the government every three months. The number of discouraged workers rose by 160,000 from the first quarter.

The department's Bureau of Labor Statistics attributed the steady unemployment rate to the process of seasonal adjustment, by which it adjusts raw unemployment data to account for such routine, predictable variations as school closings and the weather.

The jobless rate normally rises in June with the influx of school-age job-seekers, but because far fewer of these youths entered the labor force than expected the overall adjusted unemployment rate held steady.

The adjustment is designed to insure that seasonal variations do not distort the implications a given month's unemployment rate will have for the performance of the economy.

The labor force actually shrank by 475,000 last month. The number of people holding jobs declined by 353,000 and the number of people thrown out of work fell by 122,000, more than offsetting any tightness in the labor market that would have otherwise driven the unemployment rate up further.

The raw figures showed that the jobless total increased by more than 900,000, so that without the adjustment process the unemployment rate for the month would have been 9.8 percent.

In advance of today's report, several private analysts said unemployment is certain to remain at post-war record levels through the summer. The economists said they doubted the 10 percent cut in income tax rates or the 7.4 percent boost in Social Security benefits that took effect Thursday would produce enough of a spurt in consumer spending to cut into the unemployment toll.

Today's report sent mixed signals on the health of the job market.

The jobless rate for adult males rose three-tenths of a percentage point to 8.7 percent, a post-war record. Unemployment among black teen-agers spurted to 52.6 percent, another new high, and the jobless rate among factory workers as a whole reached 12.3 percent, matching the previous post-war high recorded in May 1975.

In testimony prepared for the congressional Joint Economic Committee, the bureau's commissioner, Janet Norwood, said that while the unemployment rate remained unchanged last month, "the labor market appears to have been somewhat weaker in June than it was in May."

She said, "June is a month in which seasonal movements are especially large, making the over-the-month data ... more difficult to analyze."

"Although the overall unemployment rate held steady from May to June, factory employment decreased and the jobless rate for adult men rose. Thus, the labor market seems to be somewhat weaker in June than it was in May."

The report showed that long-term unemployment, involving people out of work for at least 15 weeks, increased substantially last month.

But, on a brighter note, the number of people who had to involuntarily accept part-time work for lack of anything better declined by 320,000 in June.

Standing Firm On Car Ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration says it is standing firm on its decision to drop a rule requiring air bags or automatic seat belts in all new cars by 1984.

However, Ed Pinto, an agency spokesman, added Thursday that the administration would seek further public comment on the decision, which a federal appeals court said a month ago was "arbitrary and capricious."

Not Required To Pay Losses From Boycott

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today freed the NAACP from paying for the boycott of white-owned businesses in Port Gibson, Miss., during the civil rights struggles of the 1960s.

By an 8-0 vote, the high court overturned a ruling that the civil rights group must pay for the merchants' losses.

However, the court left open the possibility that individual boycotters who may have engaged in acts of violence could be held liable in monetary damages.

The court's action comes two days after the NAACP voted unanimously to authorize a boycott against major motion-picture studios unless the industry increases the number of blacks in its operations.

The group's leaders, at the organization's current convention in Boston, also have left open the possibility of economic boycotts against other companies and industries that allegedly fail to hire enough blacks.

Civil rights groups told the high court they were concerned that a ruling for the merchants could squelch economic boycotts aimed at furthering social or political causes. The groups included the National Organization for Women, the American Jewish Congress and the American Civil Liberties Union.

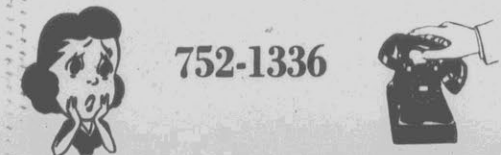

The boycott organized by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People started in April 1966 and lasted for about three years.

It was aimed at alleged discrimination practiced by the businesses and by the Port Gibson and surrounding Claiborne County governments, which were then all white.

Psychological Battle Against PLO Steps Up

By The Associated Press

Screaming Israeli jets dropped flares and smoke canisters on west Beirut again today and troops blared warnings for the population to flee in an escalation of psychological warfare aimed at getting the guerrillas out.

But civilians streamed back to the guerrilla enclave and the PLO warned a new underground would "strike mercilessly" at Israel and its U.S. backers.

Guerrillas feverishly dug in for street battles throughout west Beirut. Scores of red earth barricades rose along the west Beirut beaches with truck-mounted anti-aircraft guns stationed behind them.

Sandbagged positions manned by anti-tank gunners filled the main streets.

Israel radio said Israel's invasion army was "tightening its encirclement" of Beirut to show impatience with diplomatic efforts to get the guerrillas out. It did not elaborate and Israeli military sources said there was no change in the disposition of Israeli forces around Beirut.

Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon told a news conference at a hotel in Christian-controlled east Beirut: "We hope there will be a way to convince the terrorists, the PLO Palestinian terrorists, to leave west Beirut. ... Israel will not accept a situation in which any of the terrorists will stay in Lebanon because we have decided not to accept any longer a situation in which our people are killed and murdered."

U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib resumed talks with President Elias Sarkis and Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan at the presidential palace outside Beirut on ways to get the Palestine Liberation Organization out of Lebanon's capital and prevent Israel from storming in.

Also participating in the talks was Christian militia leader Bashir Gemayel, just returned from a conference in Taif, Saudi Arabia, aimed at helping resolve the crisis. But the conferees apparently failed to score a breakthrough and said they would adopt a firmer position after contacts were made with the permanent members of the U.N. Security Council.

Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir told two French envoys in Jerusalem that negotiations for the removal of Yasser Arafat and his PLO from west Beirut were at a "decisive phase" and the best thing France could do was to stay out of the diplomatic efforts.

Costly Artificial Limbs Disappoint Armless Man

ARMS ARE STILL AWKWARD — Ken South, 37, wearing his artificial arms, scratches his head. Five years ago South had an accident that resulted SEATTLE (AP) — A 15,000-volt, on-the-job accident cost Ken South his arms, shoulders and most of his collarbone. Now a "fantastic" $700,000 computerized replacement set has fallen short of his dreams.

"They're a marvelous piece of equipment, but there's not really enough of me left to make them applicable," a disappointed South said.

It was five years ago that South, 37, was working in an elevated bucket as a Seattle City Light lineman and he touched a power line. His injuries were so severe that doctors had to amputate his arms and shoulder, leaving only about one third of his collarbone.

South adjusted. He was the first double amputee in the state to get a driver's license without the benefit of some special device. He learned to use his feet to drive, to write and to dial a telephone.

An $8 million settlement from the elevated bucket manufacturer left him in good financial shape. But South dreamed of mechanical arms that would allow him to perform simple tasks — like putting on his glasses without poking himself in the face or zipping his pants without using a hook on the wall.

That's when he heard from another amputee about the wizardry of the University of Utah's Center for Biomedical Design in making artificial limbs. He asked the center for help and it agreed.

Smith estimated he made almost 100 trips to Salt Lake City to participate in the design of the harness-like device. He also paid for its considerable cost.

The result several months ago was a one-of-a-kind set of state-of-the-art "Ken South Arms." Made of aluminum and plastic, the flesh-colored arms are battery-powered and controlled by tiny computers.

Each arm is controlled by a swiveling lever that touches South's skin on the side of his torso. Muscle movements guide the lever.

For Smith, the arms proved impractical for everyday use.

With their harness, the arms weigh about 15 pounds — "like wearing a bowling ball around your neck all day," he said. The harness covers most of South's torso and are hot to wear. The arm movements are awkward and slow, with an action like puffing on a cigarette taking six or more maneuvers.

"We can't even come close to the natural arm in control and function," conceded Sanford Meek, one of the University of Utah engineers.

But Meek said South's arms are "essentially a first edition. We don't consider it to be finished yet."

In later models, engineers hope to make the arms lighter and to use sophisticated micro-computers to increase their functions.

Meek said South himself will be a big help.

"We need someone who is intelligent and articulate, someone who can explain how they want it to work and what's wrong with things. And he can do that," Meek said.

Despite their limitations, South eventually may have to depend more heavily on the artificial arms. He has developed degenerative arthritis in his hips and knees from extending them frequently beyond their normal range and motion.

Smith said he's resigned to a long wait for a new set of arms.

"This is like a brand new type of transportation, a new vehicle just hitting the test track," he said. "It's like we're getting rid of wheels and building a hovercraft. We've got a long ways to go."

Couple Unites In Marriage

ROBERSONVILLE — Charlotte Green Grimes and Hartford Smith Jr. were united in marriage Sunday at 3 p.m. in the First Christian Church here.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George David Grimes Jr. of Robersonville. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Hartford Smith of Oak City.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. David Cox, pastor of the church. A unity candle was lighted by the bridal couple.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white organza over white peau de soie designed with a high neckline encircled with alencon lace. The empire bodice, overlaid in alencon lace and pearls, was enhanced by a sheer yoke of point d'esprit. The short cap sleeves were edged with silk Venise lace and the modified A-line skirt and attached chapel length train were bordered with double rows of silk Venise lace. She wore a waltz length veil of illusion edged in alencon lace and held in place by a caplet overlaid in matching lace beaded with pearls. She carried a semi-cascade bouquet of white roses, stephanotis, Treesia, gypsophila, sprangerii centered with a white patleya orchid. White picot satin streamers with love knots accented the bouquet.

Kim Respass sang an original song written by Margaret Rogerson and "The Wedding Prayer." Mike Regan presented nuptial music.

Mrs. David Nobles Jr. of Stokes, sister of the bride, was honor attendant. Other attendants were Kristin Grimes, niece of the bride of Garner, Nancy Smith, sister of the bridegroom of Oak City, Mrs. Jimmy Kearney of Littleton and Susan Sitterson of Denver. They wore rosebud formal dresses of silk ribbon knit over peau de soie. The sleeveless bodices were fashioned with V-necklines curving to lowered square backs and full dirndl skirts. Their jackets were designed with jewel necklines and double capelet sleeves. The blouson bodices were enhanced with double peplums. They each carried an informal semi-cascade bouquet of pink and mauve miniature carnations, statice, snowflake pom poms, gypsophila each centered with a burgundy nova rose and mauve lace edged ribbon bows and streamers.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and groomsmen included Scott Smith, brother of the bridegroom of Oak City, Samuel David Grimes and George Frederick Grimes of Robersonville, brothers of the bride, and Tommy Winslow of Oak City.

Elizabeth Grimes, sister of the bride of Robersonville, served as hostess and directed the wedding. Mrs. Buck Sitterson of Robersonville was assistant hostess.

The mother of the bride wore a pink formal gown and the mother of the bridegroom wore a mauve formal gown. Both wore burgundy rose corsages with pink and mauve ribbon. The grandmother of the bridegroom wore a blue formal gown and a corsage of red sweetheart roses.

A reception was given by the parents of the bride and her aunts and uncles at the

MRS. HURTFORD SMITH JR.

Robersonville Country Club. Elizabeth Grimes and Mr. and Mrs. Jim Roebuck greeted guests.

For a wedding trip to Myrtle Beach, S.C., the bride changed into a white suit and wore her mother's corsage.

The bride is a graduate of Meredith College and has been teaching math in the Rocky Mount Senior High School. The bridegroom is a graduate of N.C. State University and is employed with Carolina Telephone Co. in Greenville.

After the wedding rehearsal, parents of the bridegroom entertained at a dinner at Stack's Steak House in Tarboro. A dance followed at the Tarboro Country Club. Mrs. Buck Sitterson and Susan Sitterson gave a bridesmaids luncheon at Cobb's Corner in Williamston.

Harkley-Murphy Vows Spoken

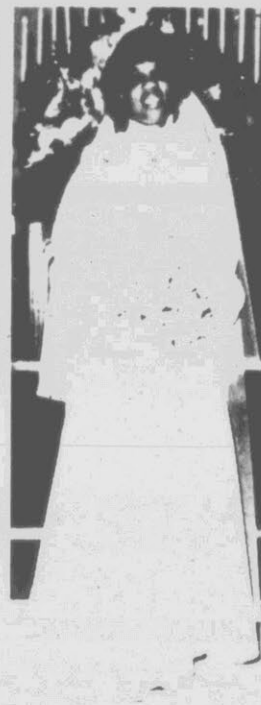

Jo Ann Murphy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Murphy of Greenville, and Jack Harkley, son of Mrs. Cora Harkley of Greenville and the late Mr. Harrison Harkley Jr., were married June 19 at 1 p.m.

The double ring ceremony was performed by Bishop Raymond Griswold in Browns Chapel Holiness Church.

A program of organ music was rendered by Johnnie Wooten. David Dupree, Kathy Braxton and Molly Small were soloists.

Given in marriage by her brother, James Murphy, the bride wore an original gown by D.L. Dupree of bridal satin and French chantilly lace. The bodice was accented with jewels as were the bishop sleeves. The cuffs were covered with chantilly lace accented with pearl buttons. The full skirt and train were also accented with jewels. She carried a bouquet of white roses, blue carnations and lily of the valley.

Shirley Murphy of Burlington, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and bridesmaids included Carla Cumberlander of Boston, Mass., Veronica Jenkins of Greenville, Vanessa Teel, cousin of the bride of Winston-Salem, Martha Harkley of Boston, Mass., sister of the bridegroom, and Sandra Robinson of Alexandria, Va., cousin of the bride, Jennettia La Chandra Murphy of Greenville, sister of the bride, and Shaye Foreman of Central Hill, Va., niece of the bridegroom, were flower girls.

The ring bearers were Leon Anderson of New York and Joel Foreman of Central Hill, Va., nephews of the bridegroom. Michael Johnson of Gronton, Conn. was best man for his brother and ushers included Timothy Bright and Michael Short, cousin of the bride, both in Pitt Memorial Hospital.

Dear Abby

An Open Letter To Teen-Age Girls

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I was appalled to read recently that statistics show that the largest percentage of new cigarette smokers are teen-age girls. So, remembering why I started to smoke, 1) to look older, and 2) to look sexy, I am compelled to write this letter.

AN OPEN LETTER TO TEEN-AGE GIRLS
If you're thinking about starting to smoke, or if you smoke only occasionally, please read this before smoking becomes a hard-to-break habit.

If you think smoking will make you look older, forget it. I started to smoke when I was 16 because I wanted to look older. I didn't realize until I was 22 that smoking didn't make me look older, it only made me look like a young punk trying to look older.

Do you think smoking will make you look sexy? Look at the cigarette ads. It never shows a woman actually smoking a cigarette — just holding one. Why? Because when a woman smokes, she looks ugly. Her cheeks cave in, her face becomes distorted and when she looks down at the cigarette, her eyes cross. Most women are constantly squinting to keep the smoke out of their eyes, and when they take a deep drag, the cords of their necks stand out and their nostrils flare like an old horse.

As if looking funny isn't enough, consider the smell. People who smoke stink. Literally. Their breath stinks, their hands stink, their hair stinks and their clothes stink! No perfume can mask it. As for kissing, unless a smoker kisses another smoker who stinks as bad, it's nauseating.

So, girls, before you light another cigarette, ask yourself, do I really want to look ugly, and do I really want to stink?
SUZANNE CONAWAY, KANSAS CITY, MO.

DEAR ABBY: About high school reunions: They may be great for some people, but I have no desire to go to one. My best day in high school was the day before graduation because I knew I'd never have to go there again.
Why should I go back to Moline, Ill., to see my old classmates? I don't give a hoot about what happened to the snobs I went to school with because none of them ever gave a hoot about me. All through high school I was miserable and lonely. I want to forget those days.

NO REGRETS, NO REMORSE AND NO REUNIONS

DEAR NO REUNIONS: Your letter tugged at my heart because I know you are speaking for many. It's worth space in this column if it inspires just one happy and popular high school student to be less "snobbish" and more sensitive to the shy kids who are lonely and hurting.

DEAR ABBY: I am still very much upset by the letter regarding the tiny poodle that was forced to go on a "death diet" because she was four pounds over the weight limit stipulated by the condo group. (No dog over 17 pounds allowed.)
What a cruel rule! A dog living with a family is a member of that family and should be treated as such.
The dog's owner blames herself for allowing the vet to put her pet on a crash diet in order to keep the dog at the condo. I think the blame should be placed squarely on the shoulders of that condo landlord who allowed such a stupid rule to be on the books in the first place. What's four pounds?
The rule should read: "Small dogs only." I hope that landlord has a lot of sleepless nights.
VIVIAN GROW IN PALM SPRINGS

DEAR VIVIAN: You rate an "A" in compassion, but you flunk law. Unless a "rule" is clearly spelled out, it can be stretched in any direction so far that it becomes useless.
What exactly is a "small" dog? Compared to a St. Bernard, a standard poodle can be considered "small."

DEAR ABBY: So many women write to complain that every man they meet expects them to go to bed after the first date. Thanks, Abby, for saying that all men are not alike, that there are plenty of gentlemen around who respect a woman for saying no. I know, I married one.
We met on New Year's Eve, 1976, at a singles club. I was 56 and had never been married. He was 59, had been a widower for nine years and had five grown children. We started dating, and after we got to know each other better, I told him that I was still a virgin. At first he couldn't believe it, but said it was refreshing to find a woman who could hold out as long as I had.
I was no prude, and I wasn't ugly. I had plenty of dates and plenty of chances. I didn't condemn unmarried women who weren't virgins, but I had my own standards and wanted to save myself for the man I married.
On June 30, 1979, we were married, and I'm proud to say I was a 58-year-old virgin. I am signing my real name, but if you print this, please sign me ...
GLAD I WAITED IN PA.

Problem Is Spotlights

The Greenville City Council last Monday endorsed the idea that the city limits should coincide with the boundaries of the Greenville City School district.

The council acted after meeting with the Greenville City School Board to discuss the effect of declining enrollment on the Greenville community.

Mayor Percy Cox saw the endorsement of the plan as advancing a goal of the City Comprehensive Plan — "supporting the maintenance of a top quality school system for the Greenville area."

There is no question the problem is a major one. Greenville as a city can expand by annexation. The school district, however, is locked in because its boundaries meet those of the county school district. Already the city limits have expanded into the county school district area, and this will continue to occur.

The expansion of city school district boundaries as the city moves might be one answer. Merger is another. Certainly, we have a problem that affects everyone whether they live in the city or county district. It is a problem that eventually will have to be resolved.

Democracy Strong, Vigorous

Among the Constitutional amendments on the ballot June 29 was one which would have allowed four-year terms for legislators.

Amendments have a way of passing and once this one got on the ballot there was a good chance of it becoming a part of the state Constitution, too. Many citizens saw the dangers of changing from two-year terms to four-year terms. Organized opposition developed and the four-year amendment was opposed editorially by many newspapers, including this one.

The results were gratifying. The amendment was defeated overwhelmingly in the state with a vote of 497,796, against and 160,361 in favor.

We are particularly pleased that the public can be alerted to bad legislation and that the voters will react in such a way. It tells us that democracy is still strong and vigorous.

THIS AFTERNOON

A Record 16 Days

By Paul T. O'Connor
RALEIGH — The Legislature set a record this June. It passed more legislation than in any other short session. In all, 270 bills and 29 joint resolutions passed through the Legislature during its 16-day session. That's an increase from 255 bills and 20 resolutions passed in 1980, 167 and 36 passed in 1978 and seven bills and seven resolutions passed in 1976.

The legislators did not break their even-numbered year record set in 1974, however. Back then, 656 bills and 69 resolutions were passed. But you can't call 1974 a short session. With a Republican governor, the Democratic legislators spent four months in Raleigh that year.

The expanded workload didn't go unnoticed. A number of legislators complained that the assembly was trying to do too much in too short a time.

Most of these bills aren't earth shakers. They're local bills or amendments to current law to take out typos that slipped through the proofreaders the first time through. But some of the bills were of considerable importance. Two dozen changes were made to the state's revenue laws and major changes were made to the state's utility laws.

The Legislature is supposed to be a deliberative body. But how can it deliberate when so much legislation is moving across the calendar that legislators don't have time to read the bills they're voting on, several asked.

"We're in a short session down here and we're bringing up bills of great importance," said Sen. Ollie Harris of Kings Mountain. "We're trying to jam too much into the short session. Entirely too many bills have come up and we've passed them not knowing if we did the right thing or not." Much of the legislation could have waited, Harris said. "Why was it so important that we do away with the privilege tax for monument dealers? That could have waited."

Sen. Walt Cockerham of Greensboro said, "The system is designed for bills to be entered, to go to committee and be studied by members of the committee as well as allowing the public interest to be examined and then be brought to the floor for debate." That didn't happen this session. Bills were introduced, sent to a committee which never met, brought back to the floor through a suspension of the rules and then passed. "We've bypassed the normal process," he said.

Many of the bills, including the fuel clause adjustment changes, were said to be emergencies. But legislators tacked on an amendment to that bill that changed the Construction Work in Progress (CWIP) law, too. Sen. Joe Johnson of Raleigh says that amendment was written so hastily that other statutes which permit CWIP were overlooked. The whole law is now self-contradictory, he said. Utility lobbyists were furious about the CWIP amendment, saying they never had a chance to be heard.

Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green says the workload distracted legislators from the primary job of the short session — the budget. He'll propose that the 1984 session be limited to the budget. Harris said no local bills should be considered unless they address an emergency. Rep. Mary Seymour, who saw what she thought was a non-controversial insurance bill die in the Senate because of a controversial amendment attached in the House, thinks major amendments should not be allowed in the short session.

A good number of the bills came out of study commissions established at the end of the 1981 session. Those commissions should only report to the next full session of the Legislature, several legislators said.

Other Editors Say Honor At Stake

(Goldsboro News-Argus)

Ronald Reagan came to the White House seemingly committed to a two-China policy; the United States would continue to seek closer relations with Peking, but not at the cost of abandoning 18 million Chinese on Taiwan.

Unfortunately, President Reagan has sometimes seemed less committed to this equation than did candidate Reagan. Repeated threats by Peking to downgrade relations with the United States led the Reagan administration last year to deny Taiwan F-16 fighters.

Although the F-16 is admittedly far more sophisticated than anything in China's air force, Nationalist pilots outnumbered in the air 14 to 1 ought to be entitled to the best available fighter planes.

Officials in Peking, encouraged presumably by their success in pressuring Washington, then announced that even the sale of spare parts for existing Nationalist weaponry was unacceptable. In other words, if Washington wanted to preserve "normal" diplomatic relations with Peking, the last U.S. security ties to Taiwan would have to be severed.

During the months since that de facto ultimatum, the Reagan administration has declined to respond publicly. Instead it has negotiated quietly in an effort to reach an understanding with the mainland Chinese.

The results of these negotiations have not been made public, a disturbing sign given the administration's refusal to sell Taiwan advanced fighters.

But recently, Deputy Sec. of State Walter Stoessel reaffirmed a continuing U.S. commitment to Taiwan's security. In testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Mr. Stoessel added that this commitment would include continuing sales of defensive arms to the Nationalist government.

Whatever the benefits of cooperation with China in containing the Soviet Union, a sellout of Taiwan would be too high a price to pay. What would an American commitment anywhere in the world be worth if the United States could be bluffed into abandoning an ally of 30 years standing?

To do so, the Reagan administration would not only have to surrender American honor, it would have to violate the express terms of the Taiwan Relations Act passed by bipartisan majorities in both the House and Senate in 1980. That is simply too much for Peking to ask or demand.

AND IT'S A PRETTY FIRM VOICE!

BY ART BUCHWALD

Nobody's Indispensable

The most repeated reason given for Al Haig's resignation is that he wasn't a "team player." For the Reagan administration this is a cardinal sin. But what does it really mean?

I went down into the White House locker room to talk to a member of the staff.

"I guess it won't be the same old club without Big Al," I said to him as he was bent over tying his shoe.

"We can play without him," my friend said. "Nobody is indispensable on this squad except the Gipper."

"I'm going to miss Big Al," I said. "He added a lot of life to this town. He may have had a short fuse, but to me I'll always remember him as 'The Vicar.'"

"You sportswriters never did know what was going on. Do you know when Al first came on the team, the Gipper was down here taking a shower, and Al handed him a game plan spelling out his own position?"

"I didn't know that," I admitted. "Haig insisted on calling all the signals but no one ever understood a word he said."

"But the Gipper liked him, didn't he?"

"The Gipper likes everybody unless you wake him up when he's sleeping. But the Gipper had to do something. The team was fighting among themselves and the fans didn't know what was going on. So they blamed it on the Gipper because he's supposed to be captain of the team."

"Let me ask you the big question. Did Big Al jump, or was he pushed?"

"It was a little of both," the Reagan team player said. "We knew we had a problem on our hands early in the season when the Gipper got hurt in a game, and Big Al rushed up to the press box and announced that he was in charge. We couldn't believe it when we saw the films on TV. If we were confused, you can imagine what it did to the fans and other coaches in the league."

"Al gave us a lot to write about," I said regretfully. "The man had charisma."

"He also had a helluva temper. Every time we got in a huddle, he threatened to walk off the field if he didn't get the ball."

"Some of the sportswriters wrote the reason that Big Al was axed was that Cap Weinberger kept tripping him."

"There was no love lost between Cap and Big Al, but Haig antagonized everyone in Gipper's backfield, and pretty soon no one would block for him. They wouldn't even pick him up when he fell down."

"I noticed that. It was one of the reasons he was such good copy."

"I'll tell you what really did Big Al in. Remember when we all went over to play in the Summit Bowl at Versailles? Well, first Al kept complaining about his room. When the game started, the Gipper wanted to hit all the NATO teams hard for playing ball with the Russians."

But Big Al kept electing to pass. Then he fumbled on a crucial third down play at the United Nations, and finally when Israel started running all over Lebanon, Al announced on his own he was going down to referee the game. The Gipper wouldn't let him go, so he sulked for the rest of the trip."

"But doesn't the Gipper look bad when he fires the only guy on his team who seemed to know the score?"

"Al lacked the killer instinct. He talked tough, but he was never one to hit the Kremlin head-on. Every time someone on the team suggested throwing the long bomb, Al talked the Gipper into trying to gain a few yards on the ground."

"In Al's position, he had to

Caledonian Cauldrons

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
EDINBURGH, Scotland
(AP) — The witches on the heath outside Macbeth's castle would face environmental restrictions boiling their favorite brew in the old iron cauldron these days.

Root of hemlock may still be available at some gourmet greengrocer, and perhaps one can procure nose of Turk and Tartar's lips somewhere in "the alternate economy," as the black market is now called, but wool of bat, fillet of fenny snake, adder's fork, eye of newt and tooth of wolf are all out of the question, with no chance at all of cooling the mixture in baboon's blood, as Shakespeare's recipe prescribed.

The warty newt, the horse-shoe bat, the puffed adder, the wolf and the baboon are all protected species under provisions of the European Convention on the Conservation of Wildlife and Natural Habitats of 1979, which the British government has enforced. Also there is a pure air prohibition against open places.

If the witches are still into entrails, the best they can get away with in these protected times is to boil up some onions and porridge and sundry intimate unmentionables in the belly lining of a sheep on the kitchen range and serve it as haggis to unsuspecting visitors, the way the tonier hotels do.

Standards of highland hospitality have improved somewhat since the Duncans overnighted with the Thane of Cawdor at Inverness, but the Scots still try to inflict their unpalatable concoctions on the unwary.

"What the world throws away, the Scots eat," someone once said of haggis, which the bilious Bobbie Burns on a New Year's toot saluted as "noble chieftain of the puddin' race." Others with more refined taste buds have described it as "boiled castrated bagpipe."

Anyhow, those of us who followed the pope to Scotland managed to survive the quaint Caledonian cuisine by ignoring the table d'hote and concentrating on the elegant scones, the incomparable oak-smoked salmon and the duly praised local elixirs, especially those of the 100 proof malt variety.

Speaking of which, the queen has a distillery located right on the grounds of Balmoral Castle, where the royal family repairs when it's grouse-shooting season in Scotland. And at least a dozen whiskey distilleries feed their enchanting fumes into the heavens above the heavenly glens around Loch Ness, which may account for the scalesore, flailsome monsters sometimes espied surfacing thereon. "Scale of dragon ... maw and gulf of the ravin'd salt-sea shark," Macbeth's witches termed these delectable tidbits when brewing up their thick gruel at Inverness, which is hard by Loch Ness. But even the monster is now officially protected by British law.

Anyhow, a lowland scribe told me in the press club across the street from the Caledonia Hotel that the crowds gathered by the pope were the largest seen in Edinburgh "since someone dropped a fiver on Princes street on Burns Night just before pub-closing time."

Everywhere he went on his Scottish pilgrimage, the pope was pursued by legions of kilted bagpipers squealing the inevitable "Amazing Grace." Every morning at nine at Buckingham Palace, Windsor Castle or Balmoral — there is really no getting away from it — the queen's official piper in Royal Stuart tartan pumps away on that vacuum-cleaner-looking torture instrument beneath her window. Such are the hazards of high office.

Several members of the papal entourage dreamed out loud of nipping off to nearby St. Andrews for a round of golf, but there just wasn't time in the busy schedule. Archbishop Paul Marcinkus, the pope's unofficial bodyguard, is known to be a keen golfer and keeps in shape at Rome's Aqua Sancta golf course. The name translates to "Holy Water," probably from the blessings called down on its tricky water

Strength For Today

GOOD WILL

During the Spanish-American War of 1898, Admiral Cervera, a Spanish commander made a hopeless dash out of the harbor of Santiago, Cuba, with his four cruisers and two destroyers battling a superior American fleet. His ships were forced ashore in flames. An American gunboat commander named Wainwright undertook a rescue operation, and moving toward the sinking Spanish ships while guns were still thundering, rescued Cervera and many of his men. As the Admiral came over the side of the gunboat, Wainwright welcomed him with a handshake.

George Washington feted Lord Cornwallis after the surrender at Yorktown. Later, when Cornwallis was Governor of India, he sent cordial letters to Washington.

People who carry hate only destroy themselves. The fire they hurl at others rolls back to consume their own lives. In the end good will always triumphs. — Elisha Douglass

Assumptions And Forecasting

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The Labor Department made an effort in 1970 to look into the decade ahead. As any forecaster must, it based its forecast on certain assumptions, any one of which could trip it up.

One did: "Fiscal and monetary policies will be able to achieve a satisfactory balance between low unemployment rates and relative price stability without reducing the long-term economic growth rate."

On reflection, several morals can be drawn from such innocence, one being that you can possess more data than a confetti factory has bits of paper but if your assumption is wrong then so is your forecast.

It happens every day. No forecast can be made without assumptions, and in making those assumptions the forecaster's bias almost inevitably intrudes. If you don't believe it, ask Ronald Reagan's advisers.

The president and his staff assumed that spending and tax cuts would spur the private sector of the economy, reduce the size of the federal government, and put more people to work rebuilding industrial America.

So far it hasn't happened. The private sector has shrunk, the public has continued to grow. Unemployment has soared. Private industry has lowered rather than raised its commitments to new capital projects.

Difficult as it is for the president to realize his goals — not to say that he won't eventually succeed — it is that 12-year-old assumption by the Labor Department that best indicates the nation's frustrations.

Fiscal stability remains a goal to be realized. Monetary stability continues to be elusive. Unemployment is near record high levels. The stability of prices is debatable. Economic growth has actually ceased.

In short, the assumptions made back in 1970 have all turned out to be wrong, although they have been the top economic goals of every administration — Nixon, Ford, Carter and Reagan — since then. Dressed differently, the major economic problems of 1970 are the same today.

It goes back before then too. Lyndon Johnson's Great Society depended on all the assumptions made by the Labor Department. If Johnson failed to accomplish his goals, the failures certainly can be related to the fiscal-monetary war that broke out during his administration.

John Kennedy fared better; some headway toward economic stability was achieved, but economic historians tend to say that Kennedy inherited an ideal situation, an indolent economy waiting to be spurred after having undergone three recessions during the Eisenhower administration.

Does Reagan have the answer to the big economic question?

Defenders say he does. They say his goal of re-directing funds to the private sector, still not fully implemented, will provide the answer. But, increasingly, critics ask when. Some say he has already failed.

Those who stand behind his program insist that, in almost a mechanical way, less government means that private sector energy, which built the nation, will be released to do its rebuilding job.

Critics argue with increasing bitterness that so far the Reagan formula hasn't resolved much, that for example it has merely exchanged inflation for unemployment. To which Reagan's defenders reply: When the private sector begins rebuilding, unemployment will come tumbling down.

Delaying that rebuilding, however, are some of the most persistently high interest rates the nation has ever known. So high, in fact, that an investor can earn more by buying bonds than by building a factory.

In other words, things are still as badly out of balance as they were in 1970. The big difference today is that an intense effort, bigger than any effort since 1970, and maybe the biggest ever, is under way.

But now, as if balancing the various forces isn't difficult enough, time must be worked into the formula, and some say there isn't a great deal of it to use.

Pennsylvania Strives To Keep Its Gifted Children

By PETER MATTIACE
Associated Press Writer
PITTSBURGH (AP) —
Stung by falling industry and the loss of young residents, Pennsylvania is trying to keep its brightest high school students close to home with special summertime study programs for budding artists and scientists.

Two five-week programs, at Bucknell University for promising arts students and at Carnegie-Mellon University for superior science students, seek to convince Pennsylvania's best 277 high school sophomores and juniors that there's no place like home to plan their futures.

"When they think about their careers, we want them to think twice about moving away," said Clyde McGeary, a state Department of Education official and a founder of the summer programs.

"We want to show them, and I don't want to be corny, that this state has a rich heritage and has a lot to contribute," said McGeary.

Pennsylvania has been particularly hard hit by layoffs and declines in the steel, coal, timber and railroad industries. In May more than 10 percent of its 11.9 million people were unemployed, above the national average of 9.5 percent for that month.

The state Department of Education reports that 42 percent of last year's 145,518 public high school graduates went to college. Of those bound for college, more than 24,000 — about 17 percent — went out of state, according to department spokesman Bob Burrows.

Pennsylvania officials say their programs may help slow the drain of superior, productive young people from economically struggling cities and towns to bigger-name colleges and careers in cities like New York and Los Angeles.

"When you simply let them go, say to New York, they leave a big gap in their communities," McGeary said. "We want to see them thriving and satisfied in their own communities. It's subtle boosterism. We don't twist any arms."

Kenneth Shepard, 16, a junior at Upper Merion Senior High School near Philadelphia, is considering leaving Pennsylvania for Princeton University or Massachusetts Institute of Technology to study physics, genetics or energy development.

Shepard, a straight-A student, recently won first prize at a Philadelphia science fair for designing a new type of lens for solar collectors.

"I'm not really sure on a college," Shepard said. He plans to use this summer to study at Pittsburgh's Carnegie-Mellon University "and get a smattering of college life to see if I like it."

The state will open its first summer science program July 11 at Carnegie-Mellon. There, college professors will offer introductory courses to about 52 students in biology, chemistry, physics, mathematics and computer science.

The Pittsburgh program is patterned after the state's 10-year-old summer arts program at Bucknell University in Lewisburg, where 225 high school students this year will receive college-level instruction in art, music, dance, theater, photography and creative writing.

At both colleges, gifted students will be encouraged to attend Pennsylvania universities and to launch their careers in the state later. And, officials hope, these students will "inspire" their friends to do the same.

"There are a lot of needs in Pennsylvania and these students can improve the quality of life in the state," said Arthur Gatty, director of the arts program at Bucknell. "Pennsylvania has so many institutions these students aren't aware of."

North Carolina and Indiana offer similar state-funded summer arts and science programs, according to McGeary. New York and Oklahoma have arts programs, he said.

Pennsylvania will spend up to $468,000 on the two tuition-free programs this year, amounting to about $1,000 per arts student. The state will contribute up to $200,000, mostly in start-up costs, to grants from foundations and businesses for the new science program.

The workshops will include presentations by local college recruits who will try to persuade student that Pennsylvania colleges can be as rewarding as bigger name schools in other states.

Other sessions include lectures by prominent people in various fields. Students studying visual arts will hear from artists working in the state. Broadcasting students will talk with more than a dozen television and radio news reporters.

Students selected for the arts and science programs undergo a "rigorous process" beginning the previous fall, preparing a portfolio of their work and completing detailed applications to state officials, McGeary said.

McGeary said the idea of state-sponsored summer schools for gifted students came in the mid-1960s, when he and other officials looked into setting up classes for bright students at Pennsylvania's many summer camps.

"My hope is that we bring the two cultures together, the technological and the arts," McGeary said. "We're going to keep people around and saying they're proud of their state."

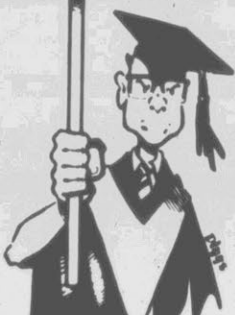

Commissioners Meet Tuesday

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners will meet Tuesday at 10 a.m. at the county office building at 1717 W. Fifth St.

Included on the agenda is the appointment of members to various boards and commissions, the acceptance of bids for office supplies, a report on efforts to secure a state Literary Loan and other business.

The Board of Commissioners will meet Tuesday because Monday is a holiday for county employees.

hazards rising from old Roman aqueducts. The ever vigilant paparazzi, Italy's forceful free-lance photographers, recently lurked in the rough and caught the archbishop in a bunker making some very unepiscopal grimaces.

Mary Queen of Scots was said to have been an avid golfer, and James VI of Scotland brought his custom-made clubs along when he journeyed to London to become James I of England.

Some hapless Highland hacker back in the unhappy days of the House of Stuart may have originated the venerable golfing rhyme that a Scottish journalist friend, Tom Allan of Omaha, recently recited for me as we passed near the site of Nebraska's fabled Cow Chip Open:

"That silly little pill
Went rolling down the hill,
Right into the bunker.
From there to the green
I took 13,
And then, by George,
I sunk her!

But it should have been "by James" ad not "by George," since the House of Hanover was not much into golf.

In addition to its surrounding golf links and apart from the cuisine, Edinburgh is one of the loveliest of all European capitals, and the no-tipping policy of the thrifty natives make it a must for budget conscious tourists.

The saying around here is that January's unprecedented severe snowstorm is the first time in memory that there was anything on the house in Edinburgh.

The Scots themselves seem to enjoy fostering this image of a canny, prudent people not given to digging into their sporrans — those little leather purses worn in front of the kilt — for promiscuous spending, but I have always found them to be exceptionally generous to strangers. Dour, perhaps, but generous.

There was even a "free haggis night" advertised in the lobby of one of the press hotels, but fortunately the papal caravan had to roll on to Wales.

As was to be expected in these Protestant precincts, the Holy Father's trip did elicit a few letters to the Times. For reasons ecumenical, I clipped this one:

"Sir: You report today that the carpet on which the pope stood to say Mass on in Cardiff is being cut into cross-shaped pieces, each endorsed with the signatures of the four Roman Catholic bishops and sold at 5 per time. One does not need to be a Protestant fundamentalist to wonder whether indeed much has changed since the 16th century reformers demanded an end to the sale of 'holy' relics and indulgences. Yours faithfully, P.B. Matthews.

do that." "You don't win the big ones if you're not willing to use the bomb," the White House man said.

"I guess Cap Weinberger will have a lot more to say about calling the plays."

"The Gipper likes Cap's style, and we're going to put all our strategy into defense."

"Which means there is more chance of using the bomb?"

"I'm not saying. We'd be crazy to give our game plan away in an election year."

The Forecast For Saturday, July 3
● Low Temperatures

Rain ☂ Snow ❄
Showers ☔ Flurries ❄❄

National Weather Service
NOAA, U.S. Dept. of Commerce

Fronts: Cold ☐ Warm ☐ Occluded ☐ Stationary ☐

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecasts showers for Saturday for the Pacific Northwest and from the northern Plains to the Midwest. Cool weather is expected for New England. Most of the country is expected to be sunny and warm. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
The high-pressure system that sent cooler, drier air into North Carolina on Thursday will control the state's weather for the rest of today, the National Weather Service says.

The northeast flow produced by the high today will keep the skies fair and the temperatures cool. As it tracks southeast tonight, the winds flow will shift to the southwest by Saturday.

The shift in winds will mean an increase in warm, moist air over the area and may mean some afternoon thunderstorms.

Skies across the state Thursday were sunny under northeasterly breezes. Afternoon readings ranged in the 80s with some 70s in the northwest Piedmont and the northern mountains. The warmest areas were Fayetteville and Jacksonville with 86 degrees, while Mount Mitchell only reached 62.

Skies cleared Thursday night. But early this morning some cloudiness developed over the southwest portion of the state. Lows were in the 50s and 60s.

Clouds will increase from the west tonight and cover the state Saturday. There is a chance of afternoon thunderstorms Saturday due to the increased moisture and afternoon heating that will be taking place over the state.

Lows tonight will be in the 60s. Highs Saturday will be around 90 except for 80s in the mountains and along the Outer Banks.

Along the coast small craft advisories have been discontinued. But winds will continue out of the northeast at 10 to 20 miles an hour. Fair skies will be the rule today and tonight.

By Saturday there will be an increase in clouds and a chance of thunderstorms during the afternoon. Highs will be in the 80s to around 90.

Hunt Says Center Attracted Industry

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The presence of the North Carolina Microelectronics Center was a key factor in drawing an industry cooperative to the state, Gov. Jim Hunt says.

Hunt announced Thursday that The Semiconductor Research Cooperative, formed by the nation's major microelectronics corporations, had selected Research Triangle Park as its headquarters.

"The commitment and the investments that North Carolina has made in this industry are paying off," he said, calling the location of the cooperative "a tremendously significant recognition that North Carolina is where the action is for the fastest-growing industry in the world."

The Semiconductor Research Cooperative was formed last year under the auspices of the Semiconductor Industry Association — the trade association of IBM, Digital Equipment, Signetics, Motorola, Control Data, National Semiconductor, Intel and Fairchild Camera and Instrument.

The joint research arm was created to finance research at universities and centers like the N.C. Microelectronics Center. By 1986, the cooperative plans to have an annual research budget of $40 million to $50 million.

"Combined with General Electric's decision to base its microelectronics effort here, this development brings us even closer to our goal of making North Carolina the East Coast capital of the microelectronics industry," Hunt said.

The cooperative will initially be located in office space owned by Research Triangle Institute until a decision is made on a permanent location in the park.

Postal Holiday

The Greenville Post Office and ECU Station will close Monday to observe Independence Day.

Mail will be placed in post office boxes and special delivery items will be delivered within the city, but no regular deliveries will be made by rural or city carriers and no window service will be provided.

A special 3 p.m. pickup will be made from all collection boxes that have any specified time indicated on the side of the box. This collection of mail will be dispatched at 5:30 p.m.

The self-service postal unit located in the lobby of the main post office will supply customers with most postal supplies and permit them to mail parcels.

Library Closure For Holidays

Sheppard Memorial Library, East Branch Library, and Carter Library will all be closed three days for the Independence holiday on Saturday, Sunday and Monday. The bookmobile will not operate during this three-day period.

Eastern N.C. Children Attended Science Camp

DR. CAROLYN HAMPTON Camp participant Ravi Ajmera assists ECU Summer Science Day with a laboratory experiment.

Approximately 60 eastern North Carolina children, ages 5 to 8, participated in East Carolina University's annual Summer Science Day Camp in June.

The camp, sponsored by the ECU Department of Science Education, was offered in two sessions, June 14-18 and June 21-25. Directors were Drs. Carolyn and Carol Hampton of the ECU science education faculty.

Camp activities featured high interest science projects and experiments designed to increase the participating children's awareness and knowledge of the environment. These included both laboratory sessions and out-of-doors field trips on and off campus.

First session participants were: GREENVILLE — Amy Arits, Isaac Arits, Ravi Ajmera, Peyton Allain, Timothy Cheng, Catherine Collingwood, Scott Griffin, Jonathan Havens, Michele Lang, Jeffery Li, John Mason, Sarah Nickelsen, Michael Powell, Thomas Rose, Megan Schmidt, Michael Schmidt, Erin Shumaker, Alexander Smith, Erik Swanson, Brad Williams, John Casey and Kathrine Collier; AYDEN — Nole Copelan and Carl Lokovitz; BETHEL — Bo Carson, David Williams and David Wright; WINTERVILLE — Evan Sinar; GRIMESLAND — Sammy Brooks and Terry Brooks.

Second session participants were: GREENVILLE — Jennifer Baines, Peter Brinson, Ed Broadus, Christopher Bullock, Jennifer Campbell, Catherine Collingwood, Mathew Clark, George Darden, Christopher Lngley, John Mason, Webb Moore, Sarah Nickelsen, Michael Powell, Amy Roberts, Benjamin Roberts, Erik Swanson, Natalie Volknam, John Wade, David Whitehurst, Read Williamson, Paula Wayne, Natalie Weaver, Greg Pearsall, Julie LaMendola, Ravi Ajmera; AYDEN — Nole Copelan, Jennifer Drye and Allyson Norris; SIMPSON — Tracy Mayo; GRIMESLAND — Sam Simmons and Carrie Wimmer; WINTERVILLE — Jonathan Mann, and VANCEBORO — Patrick Leary.

Big Sign Problem In Catfish Capital

FLOODWOOD, Minn. (AP) — It's not easy being the Catfish Capital of Minnesota, especially when your claim to fame is bigger than your water tower.

Residents here yearned to have "Catfish Capital" painted atop the water tank so travelers approaching on U.S. 2 and Minnesota 73 could see the full title without having to drive in a circle around it.

Individuals and businesses went for the project hook, line and sinker. About 35 of them contributed $616 — enough money to put the 14-letter title on both sides of the tower where it could lure traffic from the highways that intersect in the city of 648 people.

It seemed like a good idea. The 30-inch letters could be read from a distance and the price of $28 per letter was within budget, said Nancy Raihala, who with husband Henry publishes The Floodwood Forum weekly newspaper.

But the sign painter figured out "Catfish Capital" just wouldn't fit twice on the tower unless all 28 letters were reduced in size, which would make "Catfish" look like a minnow from afar.

And building a bigger water tower was out of the question.

With no time to waste — the Floodwood Catfish Festival is scheduled the weekend of July 23 — the City Council debated only 90 minutes Tuesday night before concluding there's more than one way to skin a catfish.

They voted to shorten the tower title by three letters — to "Catfish City."

OPEN SEVEN DAYS!

Field Day

Greenville Lodge No. 885, Loyal Order of the Moose, will sponsor the 27th annual Little League Field Day Sunday with the Coca-Cola Bottling Co. as co-sponsor, according to Bill Jasper, governor of the lodge.

The traditional July 4th event begins at 1:30 p.m. During the afternoon Greenville area Little Leaguers will have an opportunity to show their skill and expertise as they participate in seven events. Prizes will be awarded in two age groups, 9-10 and 11-12.

The Moose Lodge will provide trophies and manpower to supervise the activities. Each Little Leaguer will receive a Mello Yello t-shirt.

Highlight of the afternoon, according to Jasper, will be the Pop's All-Star game with the fathers of Little Leaguers competing with the youngsters.

Following the sports events, the lodge will entertain the youngsters and their parents with hot dogs, soft drinks and the trimmings.

Rain date for the field day is Monday.

Charged In 3 Murders

CHICAGO (AP) — A 26-year-old man was charged today with murdering his stepfather and 6-year-old half brother, then waiting three hours for his mother to come home and killing her.

Authorities identified the victims as Ronald Behm, 36, who was a minister at the South Shore Bible Baptist Church; his wife Barbara, 42, and their 6-year-old son, Matthew. They had been stabbed.

They were killed Tuesday, and their bodies were found piled in a family car at 2:50 a.m. today during a routine patrol of the North Avenue Beach area parking lot, police Lt. John Sullivan said.

Police arrested Herschel L. Jackson, the woman's son by a previous marriage, a few hours after the victims were discovered.

Police spokeswoman Jaye Schroeder said Jackson occasionally lived with the family at their South Side home and often argued with his mother and stepfather.

Ms. Schroeder said investigators believe Jackson got into an argument with Behm Tuesday evening. He allegedly killed Behm, then went into the boy's bedroom and killed him. Mrs. Behm wasn't home, so Jackson waited until she arrived at about 10 p.m., then allegedly killed her, police said.

Investigators said he wrapped the bodies in a blanket, put them in the car and parked them on a South Side street. When no one had noticed the bodies in the car at Wednesday, Jackson drove the car to the North Side beach area where they were certain to be seen, police said.

Go To Court To Silence Rumor About Satanism

CINCINNATI (AP) — Procter & Gamble Co., trying to halt rumors that the company and its executives are involved in devil worship, has filed libel suits against three people, accusing them of spreading "false and malicious" stories.

The giant Cincinnati-based cleaning and food products company also said Thursday it was considering additional lawsuits and "will follow up aggressively on leads of organizations or individuals spreading the rumors."

P&G said the rumors typically report that the company's "moon and stars" trademark — used since 1851 to represent the man in the moon and the 13 original states — is a symbol of satanism.

"We want people to know we are darned serious about stopping this rumor," said spokesman Stuart Kunkler.

He said other false rumors claim that a P&G executive discussed satanism on television talk shows, including the nationally televised Phil Donahue program.

The legal action followed last week's announcement that the company would take aggressive action to stop the persistent rumors, which have hurt sales. The company has been receiving more than 12,000 monthly calls from people asking about the rumors.

Spokeswoman Carol Boyd said the company had found leaflets at stores and churches urging a boycott of P&G products, and that sales representatives, mostly in the South and Southwest, had been harassed and had their car tires slashed when they called on stores.

The company filed suit Thursday against Mike Campbell of Doraville, Ga., an Atlanta suburb, and Mr. and Mrs. William J. Moore Jr. of Pensacola, Fla.

The suits accuse the defendants of "libeling the character of Procter & Gamble by circulating false and malicious statements" about the company and by calling for a boycott of products.

In addition to damages, they ask that defendants be prevented from spreading the rumor further.

The Florida suit listed the Moores as distributors for Amway Corp., which sells numerous cleaning products that compete with P&G brands.

Mrs. Moore, reached at her home, would not confirm that she or her husband worked for Amway, and denied they had distributed any literature. "I haven't done anything wrong, and neither has my husband," she said.

P&G said Campbell works for Raley Brothers, an Atlanta company that represents some manufacturers of household cleaning products. Campbell could not be reached for comment Thursday. A woman answering the telephone at his home said Campbell was not home, and he did not return the calls. Representatives for Raley and Amway denied that their companies had any connection with the rumors.

Big Spenders Checks Bounce

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — A wave of disgruntled creditors, complaining of unpaid bills and bad checks, has descended on three Saudi Arabian sheiks noted for their extravagant spending habits.

The latest claim came Wednesday from a local taxi company, which said Sheik Mohammed Al-Fassi owes $156,964 for two months of limousine and cab service.

Since their arrival in Florida two years ago, the Saudis have purchased mansions, showered charities and development projects with huge gifts, and gone on million-dollar shopping sprees.

Spokesmen for the sheiks attributed some of the problems to the Moslem practice of remaining inactive during the just-concluded holy period of Ramadan, and the upheaval surrounding the recent death of Saudi King Khaled. They also claim payment was stopped on some checks because of attempts to cheat the sheiks.

Al-Fassi and his two younger brothers living here are brothers-in-law to Prince Turki bin Abdul-aziz, a nephew of King Khaled.

The suit filed in Broward Circuit Court by Yellow Cab Co. claims Al-Fassi's checks for $67,767 have bounced, and another $89,197 in checks drawn on a Swiss bank account are being held.

Paul Bretnier, attorney for the cab company, dismissed a suggestion that the checks were related to the holy period.

"We're dealing with Swiss banks. I don't believe they celebrate Ramadan," Bretnier said.

"There are two roads in life — the hard road and the easy road," said Saud Al-Rasheed, the sheiks' spokesman. "They choose the hard road... We have a thousand offers. We deal with them for two years and they can't wait for small checks like this."

At least three other businesses claim checks worth more than $35,000 have been returned by Al-Fassi's bank, Credit Suisse, for insufficient funds.

"Do you think he will hurt these people for this amount of money?" Al-Rasheed said. "What is one thousand? One thousand we spend to tip a waiter."

A Boca Raton businessman filed for foreclosure June 1 on two Star Island homes he has been remodeling for the sheik, claiming he was owed $275,000.

A Miami architect has filed liens against property held by two of Al-Fassi's brothers, Mustafa and Tarek, claiming they owed more than $14,000.

Last month, a local car company put a lien on a $78,000 Lamborghini, saying Tarek, 19, refused to pay for repairs.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

OPEN WIDE !

NO MENTION IS MADE IN THE BIBLE OF THAT SCOURGE OF MANKIND, THE TOOTHACHE! BUT AN ANCIENT SAYING PUT IT, "ONE CAN BUY ANYTHING IN THE MARKETS OF JERUSALEM FROM A CAMEL TO A FALSE TOOTH!" MODERN ARCHEOLOGICAL FINDINGS HAVE REVEALED SKULLS WITH EVIDENCE OF DENTAL TREATMENT AND REPAIRS, AND SOME EGYPTIAN MUMMIES HAVE BEEN EXCAVATED COMPLETE WITH GOLD-FILLED MOLARS. IN FACT, EGYPTIAN DESCRIPTIONS OF DENTISTRY METHODS ARE IN THEIR RECORDS DATING AS FAR BACK AS 3700 B.C.!

ABOUT 500 B.C., HERODOTUS MENTIONED ANIMAL TEETH BEING FILED DOWN TO FILL A GAP IN THE HUMAN MOUTH. THESE SUBSTITUTE TEETH, HOWEVER, WERE CEMENTED IN BETWEEN TWO OTHER TEETH AND NOT USED IN BRIDGES, BUT BY EARLY ETRUSCAN TIMES, ETRUSCAN SKELETONS REVEAL TEETH HOOKED TOGETHER WITH GOLD BANDS, THE EARLY FORE-RUNNER OF THE MODERN DENTAL BRIDGE. SO OUR ANCIENT SAYING WAS, IN ALL PROBABILITY, TRUE—ONE COULD BUY DENTURES IN THE MARKET PLACES AND BAZAARS OF ANCIENT JERUSALEM !

The Emphasis On Human Worth

By GEORGE W. CORNEILL

AP Religion Writer
Findings that a third of Americans don't think much of themselves and that religious participation generally doesn't add to people's self-esteem have spurred a call for a "theological reformation" that stresses human worth.

"Nothing less will do," says the Rev. Robert H. Schuller, the noted pastor of the 10,000-member Crystal Cathedral in California and of the "Hour of Power" television ministry. He says religious bodies have neglected a key element in faith — the "divine dignity that God intended to be our emotional birthright as children created in his image" — and that such neglect is weakening the churches.

"We cannot go any further on this destructive path," he adds. "Without a new theological reformation, the Christian church as the authentic body of Christ may not survive." Schuller's strong comments came with a recent report of a study, conducted for him by the Gallup poll organization, finding that people with firm self-esteem are healthier, happier and more productive than those without it.

Thirty-seven percent of American adults were found to have "high" self-esteem, the study found, but 33 percent have only an "average" view of themselves and 30 percent a "low" self-image. The study, involving in-house interviews with a cross-section of 1,484 people whose views were evaluated on the Rosenberg Self-Esteem Scale, found that religious practice did not affect their attitudes toward themselves.

Schuller, 55, whose ministry has emphasized individual confidence in potentialities — what he calls "possibility thinking" — faults the religious institutions for not instilling a sense of self-worth. "This is a fundamental theological issue that the religious community has avoided too long," he says. "For decades now we have watched the churches in Western Europe and in America decline in power and influence." He blames the decline on failure of organized religions to meet a basic human need for self-esteem by not adequately pointing up God's love for all persons and by sometimes deflating their worth.

Such criticism often is made by outsiders against the churches, claiming they point fingers, see "evil" in people's conduct, classify them as "sinners" and make them feel low. That element explicitly does exist in Christian teaching, as it also does in headline fact, that humans are faulty, prone to err. But Christianity's central point is that humans are of such value that God forgives and saves.

Moreover, Jesus laid down his golden rule to "love your neighbor as yourself," pointing up the priority of loving the self so as to care in that way for another.

"The church has survived through the centuries by assuming that every person's ultimate need was 'salvation from sin,'" Schuller says. "It has held out 'hope for forgiveness' as the ultimate answer. 'What's wrong with this interpretation today? Nothing, and yet, everything, if in the process of interpreting sin and repentance the Gospel is presented in substance or spirit in a way that assaults a person's self-esteem.'"

He says the "crisis facing the church today is a theological crisis that centers on the doctrine of the human being" — on the primary divine worth and image God gave humanity. Without a church reformation that "addresses the dignity of the human being" and "meets the fundamental need for self-esteem," he says the institutional church will continue "off course" with disastrous results.

The survey found that neither religious affiliation or attendance affected the degree of self-esteem, but that those of low self-esteem opened to see God in a harsher light than others. The absence of any "positive relationship" between people's religious practice and their self-esteem "must be heard by the entire religious community from the theological seminaries to the local parishes and churches," Schuller says. Schuller, who combines psychology with theology in his ministry, is a clergyman of the Reformed Church in America, author of 16 books, and since 1970 has led "church leadership" seminars for ministers in this country and abroad.

He says every analysis of anti-social behavior indicate its roots in "conscious or subconscious" need for self-esteem and that a lack of it causes many to fear problems and have doubts about the future. To "stop this negative depression of the human spirit," he says he will devote the rest of his ministry in seeing to it that a "new reformation takes place."

"I will dedicate myself to bringing the church back to its basic message of the love of God in Jesus Christ and the basic fundamental dignity of every human being on this planet."

Increase Aid To Lebanon

NEW YORK (AP) — Churches have stepped up emergency relief to the people of war-ravaged Lebanon.

Catholic Relief Services began a massive food distribution program, involving $3 million worth of food, in addition to a $200,000 rehabilitation program. In Geneva, Switzerland, the World Council of Churches says 113 tons of medicines, blankets and tents with a total value of $800,000 have been sent to Lebanon by air and sea. Estimates of the total number of homeless there run as high as 500,000.

"Suffering of civilians is incalculable," said a message from a Quaker relief worker to the American Friends Service Committee in Philadelphia. "It sent a $25,000 initial donation to help. Lutheran World Relief allocated 25,000 blankets and $25,000 for medical supplies with further assistance planned. "When a disaster of this magnitude happens, the whole international church begins to gear up its machinery," comments Paul Morton of the United Methodist committee on relief.

The Willing and Ready Club will sponsor a program Saturday at 7 p.m. at Arthur Chapel Free Will Baptist Church. Mary L. Williams will be the speaker.

WOMEN IN WHITE
The "One Hundred Women in White" service will be held at Saint Rest Holiness Church at 7:30 p.m. Sunday. Eldress Shirley Atkinson will be the speaker with the junior choir providing the music. The program will be held to benefit the pastor's anniversary.

Irregularities At Convention

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A Southern Baptist investigation into registration irregularities at the denomination's recent convention in New Orleans has resulted in resignation of a church employe and citation of five congregations for inflating their delegations.

A report on the matter says that Jim Thomas, church training director of the Missouri Baptist Convention, resigned after an inquiry showed he presented false credentials as a "messenger" to the convention. Registration secretary Lee Porter cited four congregations as having more representatives present than the denomination constitution allows, including:

First Baptist Church of Jefferson City, Mo.; Riverside Baptist Church of Jacksonville, Fla.; Second Baptist Church of Memphis, Tenn., and First Baptist Church of Tucker, Ga.

The Hollywood Presbyterian Church is planning a special observance of the Fourth of July Sunday. Following church school at 11 a.m., a service of worship from the format of Presbyterian churches 200 years ago will be observed.

As part of the worship, the Lord's Supper will be celebrated the old-fashioned way. Some of the congregation will wear the dress of 1776.

Following the service a luncheon will be held in the fellowship hall.

MISSIONARY TO SPEAK

Dr. Samuel Marx, a missionary physician with the Moravian Mission in Honduras, will speak Sunday at Oakmont Baptist Church at 11 a.m. He and his wife, also a missionary and a nurse, are visiting their son, Dr. Richard Marx, who is a deacon at the Oakmont Church.

CONCERT SUNDAY

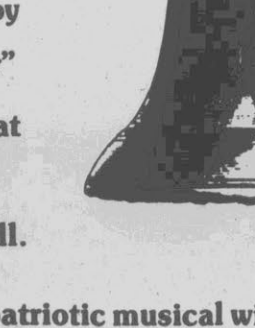

The Best Family of Brooklyn, N.Y., will be in concert at English Chapel Free Will Baptist Church Sunday at 7 p.m. The Spiritual Singers of Greenville, Waterside Male Chorus and other groups will also be on the program.

GUEST SPEAKER

Carl Whitfield Sr. of Greenville will be guest speaker for the 11 a.m. worship services at Arthur Christian Church in Bel Arthur Sunday. The topic of the sermon will be "The Name of the Game is Life."

Ring All The Bells Of Freedom

A Musical Expression Of The American Spirit will be presented by "The Grace Choir" Saturday, July 3, at 7:30 p.m. at the Carolina East Mall. This special patriotic musical will also be presented at the Grace Free Will Baptist Church Sunday, July 4 at 7:00 p.m. Admission is Free 400 Watauga Avenue, Greenville

Poultry

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock broiler market was 1/2 cents higher. Supplies light to moderate. Demand good. Weights desirable. The dock weighted average price for next week is 46.21 for small purchases of plant grade broilers picked up at processing plants. Estimated slaughter today, 2,040,000.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices declined broadly today in a carryover of selling from Thursday's session. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 8.66 Thursday, dropped 6.56 to 796.71 by noon. Losers outstripped gainers by more than 2 to 1 among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues. Analysts found little in the news to encourage much buying on the eve of the long Independence Day weekend. Interest rates turned upward in the credit markets late Thursday after what was regarded as an unenthusiastic response by investors to the Treasury's auction of $4 billion in seven-year notes. Today the Labor Department reported that the unemployment rate remained at 9.5 percent in June. Sony led the active list, down 3/4 at 12 1/2. Blocks of 1.06 million and 200,000 shares changed hands at that price. Kerr-McGee climbed 1 1/2 to 31 1/2 and Texaco was down 1/4 at 28 1/2. On Thursday both companies declined comment on rumors that they were discussing a merger. The NYSE's composite index lost 49 to 62.02. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 1.38 at 248.02. Volume on the Big Board totaled 20.89 million shares at noon, against 18.19 million at the same point Thursday. Grain: No. 2 yellow shelled corn slightly lower at 2.76-2.95, mostly 2.83-2.93 in the east and 2.75-3.05, mostly 2.90-3.00 in the Piedmont. No. 1 yellow soybeans higher at 6.25-6.50 3/4, mostly 6.29-6.50 in the east and 5.65-6.31, mostly 6.07-6.31 in the Piedmont; wheat 2.80-3.30, mostly 3.10-3.25; oats 1.34-1.45; barley 1.80 (new crop - corn 2.28-2.55; soybeans 5.74-6.02). Safe Is Stolen Greenville police were investigating the theft of a safe today from the office at Wilson Acres Apartments on First Street during the night. Chief Glenn Cannon said thieves forced open the office door and removed the small safe, which contained about $10 in cash. The incident was reported about 6:30 a.m.

ON HONORS LIST

STAUNTON — Amy Christine Lawler of Greenville has been named to the honors list at Mary Baldwin College. To receive this honor, students must attain a 2.75 average on a 3.0 scale. Ms. Lawler is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Donald Lawler.

Two Collisions, Here Thursday

An estimated $4,400 property damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Thursday. Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a 5:30 p.m. collision at the intersection of Sedgfield Drive and Sir Walter Avenue involving cars driven by Troy Thomas Baugher of 102 Avon Lane and William Earl Adams of Route 2, Robersonville. Police, who charged Baugher with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety, estimated damage at $1,000 to the Baugher car and $1,900 to the Adams vehicle. Doris Lee Parker of 716 Fleming St. was charged with failing to stop for a stop sign following investigation of an 8:12 p.m. collision at the intersection of First and Elm streets. Officers, who identified the driver of the second vehicle involved as Stracey Clark Eastwood, set damage at $1,000 to the Parker car and $500 to the Eastwood vehicle.

The solar fraction for this area Thursday, as computed by the East Carolina University Department of Physics, was 90. This means that a solar water heater could have provided 90 percent of your hot water needs.

Plan Rebuilding British Defense

LONDON (AP) — Defense Secretary John Nott announced a major program to build $1.74 billion worth of new warships and fighter planes to replace those lost in the Falklands fighting and to boost Britain's defenses. But he stressed in the House of Commons on Thursday that the move does not change his strategy to trim the navy's surface fleet to pay for a $13 billion Trident submarine missile program. The orders for new warships to add to Britain's navy, and a decision to retain three light cruisers due to be scrapped, will go some way toward soothing British admirals. But Nott still faces a bitter fight over plans to cut the navy's force of 60 destroyers and frigates to 42 by 1985. In addition, he is embroiled in a political wrangle over who will pay for the new hardware. Some of the planned ships and aircraft will be replacements for the six warships, eight Harrier fighters and 14 helicopters lost in the Falkland Islands fighting against Argentina that ended in British victory June 14. Nott, fighting for political survival over his defense policy, has angered treasury chiefs by persuading Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher that replacements should be paid from contingency funds rather than his defense budget. The $1.74 billion Falklands replacement program will be spread over three years.

Farmville 4th

FARMVILLE — A Fourth of July celebration will start Sunday at 1:30 p.m. at Farmville's recreation center. MRS. LUCIE B. HUMBER (Reflector file photo)

Her funeral service will be conducted Monday at 2 p.m. in the Wilkerson Funeral Chapel by the Rev. Robert E. Seymour. Burial will be in Cherry Hill Cemetery. Mrs. Humber was born in Paris, France, and earned a Brevet Supérieur at the University of Paris in 1913, followed by a Certificate d'Apptitude de Pedagogie in 1918 and a Diplome d'Etudes Supérieur in 1927. She was a teacher in the public schools of France and in a private school in England and was serving as executive secretary of the American University Union in Paris, where she was married to Mr. Robert Lee Humber of Greenville in the American Cathedral. She studied in Paris for her Doctorate de l'Université, the awarding of which was prevented by World War II. Dr. and Mrs. Humber returned to Greenville with their family to live with his father, the late R.L. Humber. Mrs. Humber served as president of the Greenville Woman's Club in 1947, was president of the American Association of Women's Clubs in North Carolina from 1947-51 and was vice president of the North Carolina

Lloyd, Navratilova Gain Net Finals

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Defending champion Chris Evert Lloyd stripped the magic from Billie Jean King and Martina Navratilova powered her way past Bettina Bunge to reach the women's finals of the All-England Tennis Championships today.

Lloyd, the tournament's second seed, outlasted the 38-year-old King 7-6, 2-6, 6-3. Navratilova crushed Bunge, who was seeded 11th, 6-2, 6-2.

King, playing in her 104th match at the fabled grass court tournament and seeking her seventh Wimbledon singles crown, fought gallantly. She won five straight games to grab the second set, then fended off four match points before finally falling.

Thrilling the Center Court audience, King pulled off another of her two-week string of surprises, fending off the first match point just before a sudden rain shower interrupted play.

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Top-seeded Martina Navratilova powered her way into the women's finals of the All-England Tennis Championships today, crushing 11th-seeded Bettina Bunge 6-2, 6-2.

Navratilova will meet the winner of today's other semifinal matchup between defending champion Chris Evert Lloyd and surprising Billie Jean King in the finals, which are scheduled to be held Saturday at the fabled grass court tournament.

The Czechoslovakian-born Navratilova, who became a U.S. citizen last year, is going after her third Wimbledon singles crown. She also captured the title in 1978 and 1979.

WIMBLEDON, England

(AP) — As sheets of rain cascaded down on the All-England Lawn Tennis and Croquet Club championships, Billie Jean King and Chris Evert Lloyd sat in a television studio, trading quips while a monitor showed highlights of their 1973 battle for the singles crown.

Nearly a decade later, they are destined to relive that battle on Center Court as Lloyd takes on King in a semifinal match.

At 38, King, a six-time singles titlist, is the oldest woman in the semifinals in 10 years. Lloyd, 27, has won three singles crowns here, including last year.

Today's other women's semifinal featured Martina Navratilova, the tournament's top seed, and No. 11 Bettina Bunge.

The men, meanwhile, were completing their quarterfinal round. Defending champion John McEnroe faced Johan Kriek, the fifth-seeded South African, while Tim Mayotte, the unranked American in his second year as a pro, opposed No. 11 Brian Teacher, a six-year Wimbledon veteran.

During Thursday's two-hour rain delay, the eighth day in 10 that play has been disrupted, the British Broadcasting Corp. showed parts of the 1973 battle in which King successfully defended her Wimbledon crown against the then-18-year-old upstart Evert.

"That's not fair to Chris," giggled King.

Of course there have been many other matches over the years, and Lloyd has had the best of it, with a 16-7 lifetime record against King.

But Billie Jean, the acknowledged "Queen of Wimbledon," has the edge on the grass at the All-England Club. In addition to 1973, she defeated Lloyd in the semifinals en route to her last singles title in 1975, though in 1978 she lost to Lloyd in the quarterfinals.

The match between McEnroe and Kriek was another replay. The two faced each other in the quarterfinal round here last year, with McEnroe a straight-set victor. But this year, Kriek defeated McEnroe in the finals of the U.S. Indoor championships at Memphis, Tenn.

Another factor wo...

against McEnroe was the tough schedule he's had to keep because of the incessant rain delays — either a singles and a doubles match or two doubles matches each day this week. He was still on court, defending his doubles title with Peter Fleming, after 9 p.m. Thursday.

The entry by Mayotte into the quarterfinal round was gained at the expense of the last Briton in the tourney, Buster Mottram, who was never in command Thursday and fell 6-2, 7-5, 6-3.

Mayotte's semifinal opponent, Brian Teacher, made the bracket by disposing of Mats Wilander, the Swedish hero of the French Open, 6-4, 6-4, 6-3.

Another upset Thursday was engineered by 12th-seeded Mark Edmonson of Australia, who toppled third-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis 7-6, 3-6, 6-4, 6-3.

On Saturday, Edmonson is to face Jimmy Connors, who breezed to a 6-1, 6-2, 7-6 victory over sixth-seeded Gene Mayer on Thursday.

Ouch!
Jimmy Connors yells, left, as he is stung by a bee during a Wimbledon match against Gene Mayer Thursday. At right, Connors gets a ball boy to pull the stinger from his arm. The incident didn't upset Connors' play as he went on to defeat Mayer, 6-1, 6-2, 7-6. (AP Laserphoto)

Posey's Slam Paces Camels

BUIES CREEK, N.C. (AP) — A grand slam homerun in the fifth inning by Bob Posey of Campbell University highlighted a game in which Campbell took advantage of 14 walks and five hits to rout N.C. State University 14-2 Thursday in North State Summer League Play.

Posey's homer followed a second-inning blast by Ron Ammons that gave the Camels a lead they never relinquished.

Righthander Joe Stephenson, 3-1, went the length for Campbell, yielding seven hits and four walks while striking out three. The Wolfpack's Hugh Brinson, also 3-1, took the loss.

Pitt Wins On Another Forfeit

Pitt County's Post 39 American Legion baseball team received another forfeit victory from Wayne County last night, and clinched no worse than a tie for first place in the Area I-East standings.

Pitt now 15-5, awaits the outcome of tonight's Wilson-Snow Hill game to see whether they will share first with Wilson, or take it outright. A Wilson victory would pull it into a tie, and a coin-toss would take place to decide which team would have top seeding in the up-coming tournament.

At any rate, Pitt and Wilson will both have byes in the first round of the tournament which starts on Friday. Snow Hill will face Edenton, and Rocky Mount will meet Wayne County in the first round of play, which will be a best-of-three series. The winners advance into second round play against Pitt and Wilson starting next Friday.

Wayne, which forfeited to Pitt Wednesday night after rain interrupted their game with Post 39 up, 16-1, elected not to play the game set for last night so as to have their pitchers fresh for the playoffs.

Snow Hill and Edenton will start their playoff series Saturday night at 8 p.m. in Snow Hill. The second game, Sunday, will be played at Edenton starting at 3 p.m. Should a third game be needed, it will be played Monday night at Snow Hill at 8 p.m.

Gilder's Hot Streak Continuing

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — Bob Gilder, who ignores the practice tee, says what he did to the tough Butler National golf course "was just a happening."

The 31-year-old pro is in the midst of a hot streak. It began last week at the Westchester Classic, where he led all the way to win with a 19-under-par 261. It continued Thursday in the first round of the Western Open when Gilder shattered the course record at the 7,097-yard layout, with an 8-under-par 64.

That gave him a two-stroke lead over Larry Nelson and Jim Booros entering today's second round.

Gilder's 31-33 showing eclipsed the record at Butler, home of the Western Open since 1974. David Graham and John Lister had set the mark with 65s during the 1975 tournament.

Ed Fiori's 11-under-par 277 last year established the 72-hole record which could be shaved if the weather holds.

Gilder's round was remarkable in that he had only four pars. It was built around a double bogey when he hit into the water, two bogeys, 10 birdies, and an eagle 3 carved with a 12-foot putt after a nifty five-iron approach.

"I came here because it is a difficult course and I certainly didn't expect to shoot it like I did with two bogeys and a double," said Gilder. "We had the course on its back but it will come back. I didn't know I had a record until reporters told me."

He used only 24 strokes on the greens, one-putting 13 of them by sinking everything in sight from 18 inches to 18 feet. "I made every makeable putt and then some," he said.

The course, praised by all for its splendid condition, was beaten in the pleasant weather by 24 players who broke par. In the thick of the hunt were Ed Dougherty and Jim Thorpe with 67s, and Bob Shearer, George Burns and Bruce Lietzke at 68.

"When you feel you can hit shots where you aim them, and make putts, you are comfortable and in control — and that's the way I am," Gilder said. "I'm out there having fun, and if I don't keep on steamrolling, well, heck, I've had a good time."

Gilder, who also won the Byron Nelson Classic earlier this year, said he doesn't need to practice like most other golfers, "as long as I feel good and feel like I can hit shots the way I want."

"If you're slipping into bad habits then you should practice," he said. "But sometimes you spend hours doing it and nothing happens. But eventually you will find your groove again."

"The way I feel now is giving me a swing and a lie and I'll do the rest," he said.

Gilder theorizes that the more difficult the course, the more limited number of players can win and that is why he comes to Butler.

Parsons Talks About Her Past And Future

COLUMBIA (AP) — Missing are the tailored suit, the heels and the makeup that sports fans had become accustomed to during her five-year tenure as the University of South Carolina women's basketball coach.

In their place are brightly colored gym shorts and a tank top. Her feet are unencumbered, bare of shoes, her face bare of makeup.

Pam Parsons talks, not about the politics and the well-publicized rumors surrounding her resignation as head coach of the USC women's basketball team, but about almost suicidal desperation, surviving against the odds, and of future plans, plans that include founding a business of her own.

She speaks of her mother and her own maternal instinct, about vulnerability and mistakes realized too late. And of growing old.

Since January, she's had a lot of time to think about the turn her life has taken and about what is to come. At that time, she left her job at the university amid allegations of recruiting and academic violations, and amid rumors that she was sexually involved with one of her players.

Her resignation and the

Yarborough's Cutback No Slow Down For Him

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — When Cale Yarborough quit Junior Johnson's team two years ago to cut back on his stock car racing schedule, it had nothing to do with slowing down.

If anything, the 42-year-old driver from Timmonsville, S.C., — a three-time Grand National driving champion — is working harder than ever.

Yarborough is far more than a stock car driver, though. In fact, he's a conglomerate.

Among other things, the Yarborough portfolio includes "a big farming operation, my car dealerships, dry cleaners shops, my Goodyear stores, a body shop and some rental properties."

"I wanted to spend more time with my family, and I am. I'm still as busy as ever in the daytime, it's just that I'm home about every night," Yarborough said Thursday as the M.C. Anderson Team crew prepared his Buick Regal for Sunday's Firecracker 400 at Daytona International Speedway.

Between practice sessions Thursday, with the sun beating down, Yarborough sat atop the team's transporter — a semi-trailer truck — with his driving uniform stripped to his waist.

He sat, looking every bit the master of all he surveyed, in a deck chair with his feet on the railing of the truck's specially built observation deck, timing the practice laps of other competitors.

"I'd do the same thing again if I had it to do over," Yarborough said, referring to his leaving Johnson, his boss and friend, at the end of the 1981 season. "I don't miss running for the championship."

To win a Winston Cup point championship in NASCAR, you must run virtually the entire 30-race schedule, which can become a tremendous mental and physical grind.

Anderson enters his car only at the superspeedways — those tracks a mile or more in length, meaning that Yarborough will drive only about 16 races this season.

But he's not even thinking about retiring. When told that Buddy Baker has said he'll run eight more years, until he's 49,

Yarborough grinned and said, "He's a good competitor and I'll hate to see him go."

He won two of 18 races a year ago and was competitive enough overall that he picked up $150,840 in prize money. Going into Sunday's race, in which he is defending champion, Yarborough already has won two of eight starts this season.

And, overall, he's won six Grand National events at Daytona, including four Firecrackers.

Qualifying for positions one through 20 was scheduled today, with the rest of the 40-car field to be decided in time trials Saturday. The race, which will be televised live by ABC, is set to start at 10 a.m. EDT Sunday.

Perry Beats Blue Jays For 303rd Win

By The Associated Press
Thanks, said Frank Tanana. Thanks, said Mike Morgan. Thanks a bunch.
Texas and New York bunched their runs early Thursday night, the Rangers jumping on California for five runs in the fourth inning en route to a 7-2 victory over the Angels, the Yankees pouring their five runs across in the first inning to pave the way to a 5-3 triumph over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Getting ahead of the other team early takes the starch out of their shorts and lets me be more aggressive," Rookie Dave Hostetler's four hits and Billy Sample's RBI double that gave him a 13-game hitting streak and capped the big fourth keyed the Rangers' victory.
Tanana used to be a California fastballer. Now, though, he's lost some of that speed. He has to rely on guile. He did it against his former teammates.
"I used every pitch I have and every speed I have and every ounce of control I have," he said. "That's the new F.T. — the way I have to pitch now."
Yankees 5, Brewers 3
Unlike Tanana, Morgan still has heat. And the Yankees' early burst allowed him to burn the Brewers.

"You get some quick runs in the first inning and you can pitch differently. You can go right at them with a fastball and that makes it easier to pitch," he said following his seven-hitter. It was Morgan's first complete game in 11 starts; this season with the Yankees and his first since September 1979, when he was with Oakland.
"I was getting stronger as I went along. I didn't lose any velocity. The last few starts I've been trying to finesse the other team. I'm basically a power pitcher," he said.
Ken Griffey had three hits, two of them triples including one that started the Yankees' scoring in the decisive first inning.
Tigers 5, Red Sox 4
Unlike Texas and New York,

Detroit (namely Kirk Gibson) saved the best for last. Gibson, who had singled for a run in the third inning, pulled an inside pitch from Boston relief ace Mark Clear down the right field line — barely fair — for a game-winning, bases-loaded, two-run double in the bottom of the ninth.
"I think he wanted to come in on me a little more, to jam me," Gibson said. "I'm still struggling to find my stroke a little bit. I find it sometimes, then I lose it. I just wanted something to hit hard and I got there. If the umpire had called that a foul ball, I don't know what we would have done."
Indians 9, Orioles 2
Von Hayes had a three-run homer — his second consecutive three-RBI game — and a double to lead Cleveland to its fourth successive victory. Hayes has 18 RBI in the past 14 games.

"My average isn't nearly as good as it was my first couple of years (in the minors)," he said. "But at least I'm delighted that I'm driving in runs."
"He's something, isn't he?" Indians Manager Dave Garcia said of his converted third baseman. "He used to scare me in the outfield, but not anymore. He covers a lot of ground and has a good arm."

Twins 9, White Sox 2
Not since the second, third and fourth games of the season had the Twins won three in a row. Rookie Kent Hrbek chipped in with two RBI but, for a change, his wasn't the only big bat for Minnesota.

"It's about time we picked up Herbie," Manager Billy Gardner said. "Now everybody is chipping in."
Gary Ward opened the scoring for Minnesota in the second with an RBI triple, then he homered in the fourth. And Ron Washington hit a bases-loaded triple in the sixth.
Mariners 4, Blue Jays 3
Bruce Bochte's seventh-inning double broke a tie and gave Seattle's 43-year-old Gaylor Perry his 303rd lifetime victory, but the ancient Mariner needed additional help. Four relievers followed him to the mound, Bill Caudill picking up his 14th save.

"Everybody who came in wanted the ball," said Perry. "The bullpen has done the job for us all season and they believe in themselves."

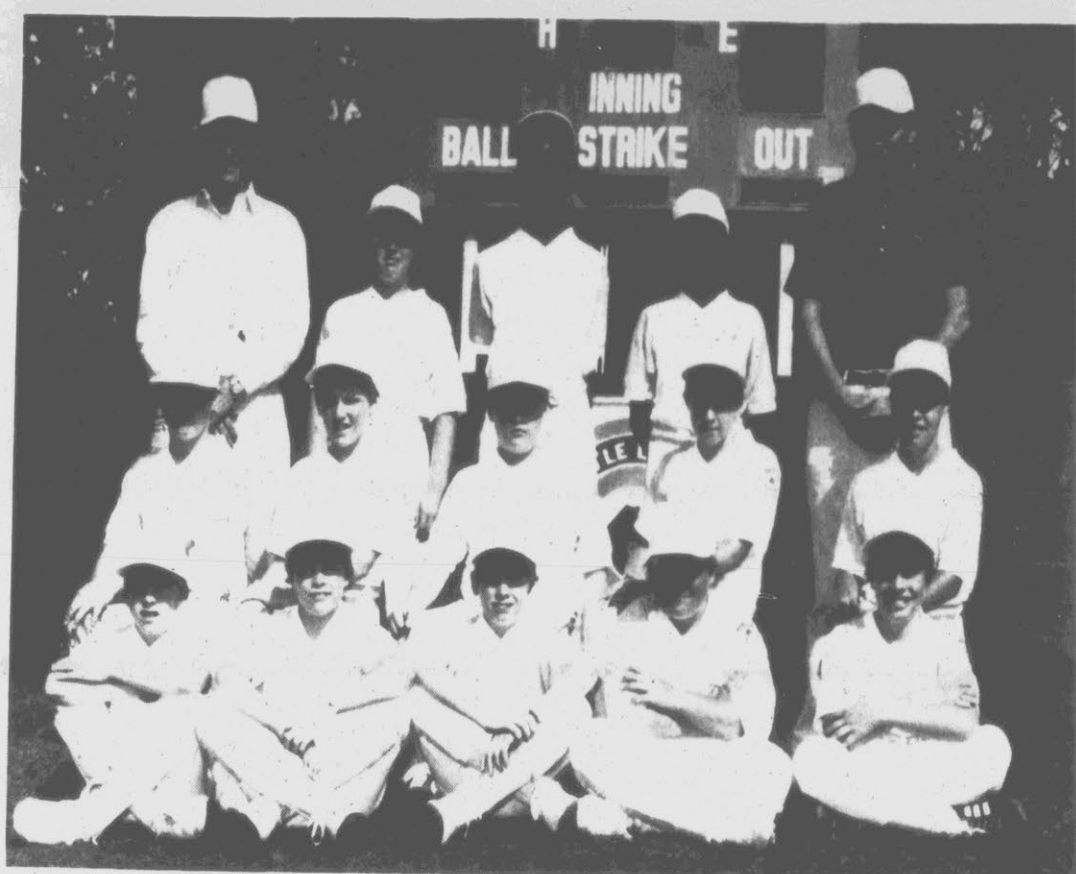

Unearned Runs Frustrate Expos As They Fail To Tie For First

By The Associated Press
Montreal pitcher Scott Sanderson probably felt as frustrated as the frightened squirrel that had scurried around the Olympic Stadium turf in the fifth inning during the game against the New York Mets.
The Expos right-hander held the Mets to only six hits in a complete-game performance, but a pair of unearned runs in the third inning led to a 2-1 defeat.
The loss prevented the Expos from tying the St. Louis Cardinals and Philadelphia Phillies for first place in the National League East. Instead, they trail by one game entering a five-game, three-day series starting tonight against the Pirates in Pittsburgh.
In the only other NL game, Pittsburgh beat Chicago 5-2.
"I've felt good my last 10 starts in a row," said Sanderson. "I think I've done the job that's been asked of me. The only thing you can do is continue to go out there and do your best."

Sanderson contributed to his downfall by yielding a two-out double to rival pitcher Mike Scott in the third. Scott also had another double in the eighth.
Speedy Mookie Wilson then hit a grounder to third baseman Tim Wallach, whose throw sailed over the head of first baseman Al Oliver allowing Scott to tie the score 1-1. Wilson, who took second on the errant throw, scored the winning run when Bob Bailor, the next batter, singled to center.
"I was trying to get the ball there as quickly as I could," said Wallach. "I guess I had a little more time than I thought I had."
"But I hurried the throw. I didn't set myself properly. I knew the ball was going into the dugout the minute it left my hand."

The Expos, who have lost six of their last eight games, managed only six hits against Scott, 6-5, in 72-3 innings. Even the squirrel, which Expos utility infielder Brad Mills said appeared to come from the runway near the Montreal dugout, failed to provide inspiration.
After running around the field for about five minutes, the squirrel was escorted by field attendants out a door down the left-field line.
"We needed this game by Mike badly," said New York Manager George Bamberger of Scott's effort. "Runs have been hard to come by for us lately."
The only run Scott allowed was in the first inning when Tim Wallach drew a two-out walk, Al Oliver singled and Gary Carter stroked an RBI single.

It was Scott's first victory as a starter since April. He had spent much of the last month in the bullpen trying to correct his problems.
Jesse Orosco bailed Scott out of an eighth-inning jam, getting Warren Cromartie to ground out with runners at first and third.
When Orosco walked Dan Norman leading off the Expos ninth, Neil Allen relieved. Chris Speier sacrificed Norman to second before Allen retired the next two batters for his 16th save.
Pirates 5, Cubs 2
Catcher Tony Pena knocked in two runs with a single and a triple to lead Pittsburgh over Chicago.
Enrique Romo, 5-2, took over from starter Ross Baumgarten in the sixth and won the game with a brilliant relief stint. Romo did not allow a baserunner over the final four innings, retiring 12 consecutive Cubs.
The victory was the third straight and ninth in the last 12 games for the Pirates.

Tar Heel Champions

Saints Win Southern Pitt Title; Pugh's Ices Tie For SBR Crown

S. Pitt League

Saints 14

Chicod 6

GRIFTON — The Simpson Saints rolled to a 14-6 victory over Chicod last night in the finals of the Southern Pitt Little League's post-season tournament.

Simpson got only four hits in the game, one of them a double by James Smith. Timmy Daniels hurled the win for the Saints.

Chicod's hitting was led by Jerome Carter with two, one a homer, and Brad Dixon with two, one a double.

Sr. Babe Ruth

Pugh's Firestone ... 8

Kiwanis 3

Pugh's Firestone rolled to an 8-3 victory over the Kiwanis last night and clinched no worse than a share of first place in the Coastal Plains Senior Babe Ruth League.

Pugh's grabbed the lead in the second inning, scoring three times. Two of those came on a homer by Eric Woodworth.

In the fourth, Pugh's added four more runs, clinching the win. Terry Smith led off with a walk and with one down, Billy Godley also walked. Toby Fisher then drew another walk, loading the bases. Rudy Stalls followed with a double, driving in all three runs. He took third on an error and scored with Keith Phillips singled.

Pugh's added its final run in the sixth.
The Kiwanis got two in the fourth, as Troy Hudson homered, and another in the fifth, on a homer by Bill Owens.

Stalls, Phillips and Woodworth each had two hits to lead Pugh's, while Hudson and Mike Iaboni each had two for the Kiwanis.

Prep League

Hendrix & Dail 5

1st State Bank 4

Hendrix & Dail fought its way out of the losers' bracket and forced a sudden death game in the Prep League's post-season tournament last night with a 5-4 win over First State Bank.
The loss was the first for the Bankers in the tournament, leaving both teams with one loss.
The Bankers grabbed the initial lead in the fourth, scoring twice, but H&D came back with three in the bottom of the inning, then scored twice in the fifth to clinch it.

With two away in the fifth, Anthony Cobb singled and Clay Young reached on an error, allowing both runners to come around and score.

First State Bank added two in the seventh, but were unable to push over the tying run.

Tim Clark led the H&D hitting with two, while no one had more than one for the Bankers.

The finals will be played Tuesday night.

Little League

True Value 11

Pepsi-Cola 1

Bobby Bell and Chris Bender combined to toss a one-hitter at Pepsi-Cola as True Value Hardware rolled to an 11-1 Tar Heel Little League victory yesterday.

Mike Kelly got the lone hit off Bell in the third inning, while Stewart Vines led the True Value hitting with two.

Pepsi scored first, getting its runs in the first.

But in the bottom of the first, True Value came up with six to put the game on ice. Kim Parrott walked and moved up on a wild pitch. Bell also walked and an error allowed both runners to circle the bases. Bender walked and Vines got a hit, both moving up on the relay in. Bender scored on a wild pitch and Jay Ormond walked, leading second. Kerry Turner reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Vines, and Richie May singled in both of the remaining runners.

True Value added four in the second and one in the fifth.

Coca-Cola 12

Sportsworld 7

Tony Evans, Eddie White and Mike Smith each homered as Coca-Cola romped to a 12-7 victory over winless Sportsworld, 12-7, in the North State Little League yesterday.

Evans got Coke off on the right foot with a lead-off homer for a 1-0 lead in the opening frame. Sportsworld took the lead, however, scoring three runs in the second. Coke came back with four in the third to take a 5-3 lead, then pushed over two in the fourth as Smith had a solo homer, for a 7-3 margin. Sportsworld rallied for three in the bottom of the fourth, trimming the lead to 7-6.

Coke got what proved to be the winning run in the fifth. Sean Frelke reached on an error and later scored on a single by Todd Taylor, making it 8-6.

Coke then added four more in the sixth, including a two-run homer by White, while Sportsworld picked up one more in the bottom of the sixth.

Evans and White each had three hits for Coke, while Jay Surles and Taylor each added two. Sportsworld was led by John Parker with three and Lori Powell with two.

tion, that's what helps you through times like this." But nothing she had ever experienced, nothing she'd ever read about, prepared her for the events of the past year or for the adverse national publicity.
During her final season as coach of the Lady Gamecocks, she says, her health deteriorated. Long work hours, little exercise and excessive worry combined to wear her down, make her physically weak.
As her physical state declined, so did her emotional strength. "There were moments when I felt very desperate during the season," she says, speaking slowly, deliberately.

She is asked if suicide was ever considered and she first shakes her head no, starts to say something, then hesitates.

"I guess not really seriously, obviously. I mean I thought about it but... most people think of it at one time or another. Don't they?"

She no longer experiences such thoughts. Her time of desperation has passed, and she feels "more relieved than anything now."

"There's not a detail in my life that hasn't been brought out. I can't be hurt anymore," she says.

After she "finally talked to my parents about homosexuality" her tension was eased. "That was always my greatest fear," she says. "You know," she says smiling, "my mother told me after this was over that it was probably a good thing in some ways. She said, 'Pam, if this hadn't happened you'd have gone on winning, giving your life to basketball until you were gray. Now maybe this will help you find out more about yourself, do even more with your life.'"

Pam Parsons wants to do more with her life, something that will help women and young girls. A non-profit organization to help women achieve management level positions in the business world will be her vehicle for doing that.

"The Final Step Up" is also her personal plan for pulling herself "out of the hole that some people think I've fallen into, never to return."

In a way, she says, she will continue to "coach" women through the foundation. The concepts upon which the foundation is to be based, were arrived at through her own experiences in the working world.

"I know I made a lot of mistakes, I realize that now. But I'm going to turn those mistakes around, use them as examples that other women can learn from," she says.

She blames most of her mistakes on her conditioning because she was brought up as a woman rather than a man, she wasn't prepared for the business world.

Specific mistakes she mentions include showing favoritism, "because at the time, I thought some of the girls needed more attention than the others" and becoming too close to her players.

She says the use of excessive humiliation to discipline her players was also a mistake because the players were women and weren't brought up to readily accept such tactics.

"And I'm not so sure I could even have taken my bluntness."

"The Final Step Up" will be managed by a board of directors and herself and will be supported through lectures, television talk show appearances and books. She says the foundation should not be mistaken for a gay rights advocacy board.

"When I first decided to do this, I realized that this was not the cross I have to bear publicly, that the foundation has to bear," she says. She says the foundation will be based in Columbia, the town she calls "home."

Wooten Is Winner

In a tight match in which only five strokes separated first and fifth place, Alan Wooten grabbed top honors in the men's division of the Thursday Night Amateur Tournament at the Greenville Putt-Putt.

Wooten ended the two-round tournament with a 10-under-par 62. Sheri Fearing won the women's division with a two-under-par 70.

Second place in the women's division went to Delphia Beacham who finished on the heels of the leader with a 71. Second spot in the men's division was decided by a sudden death playoff after Vince Lewis and Vince Nelson finished in a tie at 64, with Lewis winning the playoff.

Fourth place went to Eric Nelson who finished regulation play at 65. Coy Triplett finished fifth at 67.

Scarborough Dead At 64
MOUNT OLIVE, N.C. (AP)—Ray Scarborough, a former major-league pitcher and special assignment scout for the Milwaukee Brewers, died Thursday night at his Mount Olive home. He was 64.

A native of Mount Olive, N.C., Scarborough pitched for Wake Forest in the late 1930s. He reached the major leagues with Washington in 1942 and stayed with the Senators until joining the Navy in 1943.

After World War II, Scarborough pitched in Washington, Chicago, Boston, New York and Detroit. He was a member of the Yankees' world championship team in 1952.

Scarborough's best season was in 1948, when he compiled a 15-8 record with a 2.82 earned run average for the Senators. His career record was 80-85 with a 4.13 ERA.

Scarborough retired from baseball in 1953 and returned to Mount Olive, where he had moved in 1946, to open an oil and supply company. He became a scout with the Baltimore Orioles in 1960. Later, he joined the California Angels and still later the Brewers.

Westinghouse Corp. Faces Big Negligence Suits

By RICHARD T. PIENCIAK
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — In lawsuits that could result in damages of $1 billion, Westinghouse Electric Corp., manufacturer of nearly half of the nation's operating nuclear plants, is accused of negligently designing, manufacturing and installing reactors in New York and Florida. The civil complaints filed in federal courts by Consolidated Edison here and Florida Power & Light Co. in Miami demand that Westinghouse pay for faulty steam generator systems that have frequently led to lengthy shutdowns and costly purchases of replacement power.

The nation's second largest electrical products company, Westinghouse is still paying off part of a 1979 settlement for $949 million in cash, goods, discounts and services for renegeing on uranium contracts with 27 utilities, including Con Edison and Florida Power.

Westinghouse refused to deliver on its long-term contracts after prices shot up from $10 a pound to $40. The settlements were reached after Westinghouse was found liable but before a separate $2 billion damages trial began.

In the past three years, Westinghouse, with 1981 assets of $8.3 billion, has made multi-million dollar out-of-court settlements of cash and discounted services in steam generators disputes with Virginia and Wisconsin utilities.

It also agreed last year to provide discounts on new equipment to settle a turbine dispute with the New York State Power Authority, which operates Indian Point 3, presently shut because of generator leaks and cracks.

IN HOT WATER — In lawsuits that could result in damages of one billion dollars, Westinghouse Electric Corp. is accused of negligently designing, manufacturing and installing several reactors, among them the Indian Point plant in New York's Westchester County seen above. (AP Laserphoto)

If Westinghouse is forced to pay, it could mean a break for rate-paying consumers who would be stuck for the repairs in the form of higher utility bills.

The suits "may put pressure" on other dissatisfied nuclear utilities to sue reactor manufacturers rather than applying for rate increases to finance equipment repairs, said Alvin Davis, who successfully represented Florida Power in two other suits against Westinghouse.

Westinghouse has built 32 of the nation's 72 nuclear power plants. Forty-seven plants use pressurized water reactors and the remainder are boiling water reactors, which do not have steam generator tubes.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission said in February that steam generator tube problems exist in 40 of the 47 pressurized water reactors. NRC records indicate Westinghouse built 25 of them.

According to a 1981 NRC report, the generator problems were caused by faulty design and construction as well as the use of poor quality materials.

John Burk, a Westinghouse spokesman in Pittsburgh, said, "We believe we have substantial defenses to the claims. We're obviously not counting on losing."

The suits allege negligence and breaches of contract and warranty in the defective design, manufacture and installation of steam generators at the two Turkey Point units, 30 miles south of Miami, and at Con Edison's Indian Point 2 unit, 24 miles north of New York City.

Con Edison also alleges that Westinghouse kept secret the results of 1975 tests that "revealed evidence of dented tubes and structural deterioration" for 18 months, and when specifically asked by Con Edison in March 1976, denied it was aware of any evidence of denting.

That concealment allowed the tubes and their support plates to corrode, enlarge and crack to the point where they became difficult to fix.

Filed May 28 without public announcement, the Indian Point action also claims defects in its four steam turbines and alleges that 60 other plant parts were "improperly designed, manufactured and installed," including low pressure turbine blades, condenser tubes, piping and circulating water pumps.

Con Edison and Florida Power, whose suit has been bogged down since it was filed in 1978, claim that by its negligence Westinghouse had forfeited its contractual liability limitations for "consequential damages," such as the cost of replacement power.

Westinghouse could lose

3, presently shut because of generator leaks and cracks.

While the suit "spells out the ways in which various plant components are defective or failed to operate properly, in no way does it imply that the plant is unsafe or that it poses any risk to the public or to Con Edison employees," said spokesman Laurence V. Kleinman.

According to a February NRC report, steam generator tube problems at 40 of 47 pressurized reactors are "virtually impossible" to solve. The report also raised the "extremely low" possibility that multiple generator ruptures could cause "ineffective refueling" of the radioactive core, which in turn could lead to melting of the uranium fuel.

Although designed to last 30 years, generators are being replaced much sooner — after only seven years at the two Surry units in Virginia, for example.

Kleinman said replacing generators at TP2 would cost about $130 million, including labor, while Davis estimated the cost for replacement at Turkey Point at up to $180 million.

Burk acknowledged there have been "several settlements," but added: "We have not had any rash of requests for negotiations." Westinghouse has suffered "only minor financial effects" from previous agreements, Burk said, declining to discuss details.

Life As It's Lived

Lonely Is Not Part Of The New Knoxville Life

By Gail Michaels

Loneliness is an unavoidable consequence of moving to a new town, or at least that's what Phillip and I thought until we moved to Knoxville. Suddenly, however, we're as popular as a gasoline war. We have lines of people waiting to visit us, fill up their tanks and make a side trip to the World's Fair.

Thank goodness, we're not as popular as our neighbors. They've been here for seven months, long enough for everyone they've ever met in the continental United States to hear that they have an extra bedroom. They have a total of eight days free in July and August. The rest will be devoted to entertaining dear friends and relatives like the great aunt who called and asked, "Is that you, Sammy?"

Now Sammy, or Sam as he is usually called, is 6 feet, 5 inches tall, weighs over 200 pounds and has a resounding bass voice. His wife had answered the phone. But this didn't daunt the aunt, who couldn't wait to tell them the exciting news: "I'm coming all the way from Texas to see your new home. Isn't that wonderful?"

Sam's mother later informed him that, indeed, it was extraordinary, considering that this aunt had lived within 50 miles of him most of his life and hadn't seen him since he was 6 months old.

This is the kind of visitor I'd like to discourage. I'm all for being sociable, but not when it includes hot water, clean sheets, breakfast and babysitting services. Phillip evidently doesn't share my feelings, however, because he has offered these services to every man, woman and child with whom he has ever held a conversation of more than 10 minutes.

A stack of envelopes addressed to some of these people landed on my desk just last week. "What are those?" I said, staring with intense hostility at the all too familiar sight as he prepared to leave for work.

"What does it look like?"

"It looks like an effort to reintroduce slavery to our part of the world."

He picked up his briefcase. "I'm just sending change of address and maps to our house to a few people I know. There's nothing wrong with that. You've done the same thing."

"No, I haven't. I've invited good friends and our immediate families. I have not invited any sixth cousins or friends of friends."

"You have, too."

"Only once, and that was because he owns a lumberyard and promised to build us a deck at cost if he came. I certainly didn't send a personal invitation to the guy who 'borrowed' my I.D. in 12th grade."

"We were close at one time. I felt sorry for him."

"I'm just glad his parole officer wouldn't let him come."

Phillip was getting defensive. "Well, most of the people I've invited are close friends."

"A close friend wouldn't have left me for two days with a 3-year-old Lone Ranger buff who insisted on pretending that Zachary was Silver."

He hesitated. "Yeah, well I hope that won't happen again. You just be sure to mail those letters."

I waited until he left the house, then dropped the changes of address behind "Moby Dick." Oh, I'll mail them all right. In November.

Frelke Attends Program

RALEIGH — Douglas C. Frelke of Greenville attended the North Carolina State School of Engineering Student Introduction to Engineering program held this week on the campus of N.C. State.

The program brought approximately 400 rising high school sophomores, juniors and seniors to the campus over a month-long period. It is sponsored by the engineering school's undergraduate student services division.

Frelke is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C.F. Frelke of 208 Williamsburg Drive in Greenville. He attends J.H. Rose High School.

Driving Test In Primitive Area

MADANG, Papua New Guinea (AP) — Giuliano Giongo, 41, and Cesare Girando, 35, both of Italy, won the recent Camel Trophy '82 international off-road competition here.

The 1,000-mile driving event was run through some of the world's most primitive areas. The 11-day test of driving skill and wilderness survival ran a course through rain forests and rugged alpine ranges of the Papua Highlands, concluding with a day of river-crossing tests in the tropical lowlands near Madang.

The winners finished well ahead of the runner-up team from West Germany. The American team placed third.

Tar Heels Among Fair Complainers

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — North Carolinians are among the more than 700 people from eight states who say they haven't gotten their money's worth in housing during their visit to the World's Fair in Knoxville, Tenn.

A Knoxville firm that recently took over the job of processing reservations acknowledged that there have been problems, but said it hopes to rectify them. The Tennessee attorney general's office is investigating.

Sharon Parker of the consumer protection section of the North Carolina attorney general's office said Thursday she's gotten no response from housing officials since she first complained May 11.

"It could tell you they're not interested," Ms. Parker said. "It could tell you they've done something wrong and they're trying to avoid you."

While she's only received eight complaints, Ms. Parker said they "indicate a larger problem that's going unreported."

Complaints registered with Knoxville's Better Business Bureau and the North Carolina attorney general's office came from people who paid for rooms in advance, only to show up and find the rooms unavailable.

One motel guaranteed a room for $46 a night but charged a North Carolinian $100 a night. One North Carolina family paid $100 a night for a mobile home and found upon arrival they would share it with three other families.

A South Carolina man said he sent a deposit, but left the motel complaining it was small and dirty. He's waiting for a refund.

WRAL-TV, ABC's affiliate in Raleigh, sent a three-person crew to Knoxville two days before the fair's May 1 opening. The newspeople paid $120 in advance for a campsite.

"We figured we're VIPs," news photographer Joel Sanders, 29, said Thursday. "The press office booked this for us, so you'd think they'd make sure we had a decent place to stay."

"We got there, and all there was a sign and a bunch of bulldozers and a grader," Sanders said. "It was a construction site. There was no shower. There was no toilet. It was a plowed field full of rainwater. We were livid."

Eugenia Clark of Raleigh says she paid nearly $500 for lodging and tickets in mid-March and received nothing but her canceled check. Responding to a brochure from fair promoters, Ms. Clark arranged by telephone for two rooms for three nights and tickets for two days for six people the last week in June. She mailed her check March 15. A week later it was deposited to the account of Knoxville, the firm handling lodging for fairgoers.

Ms. Clark said a woman called at the end of May saying the motel was full. Ms. Clark reluctantly agreed to stay in a trailer.

"I've never heard anything since," Clark said. "No confirmation, nothing. I called and said I wanted my money back." She said Thursday she hadn't gotten it and doesn't expect to.

"I thought this should have been a learning experience," she said Thursday. "It was. But not the kind I expected. This may be a very expensive experience. I probably was naive."

Fair Reservations and lodging inquiries are now being handled by Roger Moore, chairman of Property Leasing and Management Inc. in Knoxville. His firm took over the city-supported reservation system last month from Knoxville, the company Ms. Clark paid nearly $500.

Moore said Thursday he's dealing with about 250,000 reservations and has taken 15 "poor-quality motels" off the register.

"We should have eliminated about 80 of the problems," Moore said. "We've had a lot of aggravation. I think it's about to get under control."

Told Raise Efficiency

By The Associated Press
KANNAPOLIS, N.C. (AP) — The new owner of Cannon Mills Co. says workers must improve their efficiency or risk losing their jobs.

In taped statements scheduled to be shown to Cannon workers Thursday and Friday, David Murdock said workers need to regain pride in their products.

"I'm aware there are some people in the Cannon family who think if they hide in the stairwell they can continue to draw their paycheck and not have to work hard," he said. Murdock said he had instructed supervisors to begin watching employees for signs of diligence and pride in their work.

Cannon officials said last week the company's mid-year annual pay raise would be deferred and about 15 percent of the 700 workers at the Kannapolis headquarters would be laid off. The company also will idle 14,700 employees for a week without pay beginning July 12.

Murdock said Wednesday he regrets the layoffs. "I'm afraid I'll be known as the man who laid all these people off," he said.

Murdock, 58, is a Los Angeles investor who bought Cannon in March for $413 million. He learned then that Cannon was experiencing declining sales, he said.

The Bloodmobile visit Thursday at the Moose Lodge resulted in a collection total of 246 pints of blood, according to Mike Colombo, Pitt blood program chairman.

Colombo said that in addition to the donors, there were 22 deferrals for various health reasons. He noted that the drive overlapped the May Bloodmobile in terms of donor eligibility. For that reason, 159 May donors were unable to give blood on Thursday.

Thursday's drive was sponsored by WNCT-TV in conjunction with the Red Cross.

N.C. Hit List Targets Puzzle ERA Backers

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina supporters of the Equal Rights Amendment say they don't know why national ERA backers are targeting three of the state's politicians for defeat.

The National Women's Political Caucus released a "hit list" Wednesday of officeholders throughout the nation who the group says hindered ratification of the ERA. Included on the list were Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green and state Sens. Craig Lawing, D-

Meckenburg, and Kenneth Royall, D-Durham.

The ERA died Wednesday at midnight, the deadline for acceptance of the amendment by 38 states, which would have made it a part of the U.S. Constitution. Only 35 states voted to ratify the amendment.

At a Thursday meeting in Raleigh of pro-ERA leaders, political action committee leader Ann Chipeley said her group was "confused and puzzled" by the national decision of the national caucus.

Ms. Chipeley said she disagreed with caucus officials who said Green, Lawing and Royall worked behind the scenes to solicit anti-ERA votes when the General Assembly considered the ERA last month. The legislature tabled a bill to approve the ERA.

Gov. Jim Hunt, a strong ERA supporter, said he didn't understand the list either.

"Those people (Green, Lawing and Royall) were good, loyal supporters for all I knew," Hunt said.

Royall and Lawing also voiced unhappiness with their positions on the hit list. Royall said he had "never been so shocked," and Lawing said labeling him a hindrance to the ERA was "the most asinine statement that has ever been said about me in the 30-some years I've been in public service."

While differing with the national caucus on the hit list issue, Hunt and the other North Carolina ERA allies expressed solidarity with the national effort to secure women's rights. Hunt said he still believes the ERA will be approved in North Carolina and nationally.

"If that is to happen, we must speak to the concerns of a significant group of people who see the ERA as a threat to the institution of the family," Hunt said. "That was the greatest obstacle to ratification during the last decade and it is our greatest challenge in the years to come."

Although the ERA failed, the struggle to ratify it wasn't a total loss, Hunt said. It put equality back into the mainstream of American values and has prompted repeal of thousands of discriminatory laws, he said.

Beth McAllister of North Carolinians United for ERA agreed, noting the increased attention being given to spouse abuse, rape crisis centers and widowed or divorced women without job skills.

"Perhaps the most significant accomplishment of the ERA movement in North Carolina is the development of a political network that reaches into every community in the state," she said.

Other pro-ERA speakers advocated child support for single parents, a battle on crimes against women, a lower poverty rate among women and election of more women to public office.

Nearly 400 Youths Are At Music Camp

ECU News Bureau

Nearly 400 young musicians, aged 12-18, from five states are at East Carolina University as participants in ECU's annual Summer Music Camp.

The campers, all instrumentalists, are performing in four camp bands and a full symphony orchestra. They are involved in daily ensemble and sectional rehearsals, as well as workshops in various aspects of music.

They are also participating in on-campus recreation — swimming, tennis and gymnasium free play — and living in campus dormitories.

The 1982 camp, directed by Herbert Carter of the ECU School of Music faculty, began June 27 and will conclude July 9. Campers will present two full public concerts during the session.

Private lessons are available to campers in their respective instruments. At the conclusion of the camp, several awards will be presented, including those sponsored by Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia, Kappa Kappa Psi and Tau Beta Sigma honor societies and the National Band Association.

Those students attending band camp from the Greenville area and the instruments they play include:

FARMVILLE — Mary Beckman, violin

GREENVILLE — Duncan Parks, Scott Evans, Kimberly Redmond, Josh Hickman, Laura Hough, Danielle Nieman, violin; Susan Sayetta, viola; Arleen Song, Shannon Howard, Rena Meteye, Ginny Close, Page Griffin, Debbie Seykora, Celeste Pickett, flute; David Kim, Gavin Sundwall, Becky Powers, Cari Smith, Jennifer Newton, Beth Parham, clarinet; Art Best and Rusty Smith, trumpet; and Bruce Thompson, trombone.

JAMESVILLE — Derrick Cameron, trumpet, and Rhonda Michel Price, bass clarinet.

Presented Program On Dental Health

Ann Griffin, dental health educator with the dental practice of Dr. Jasper Lewis here, presented a half-day program recently at the annual meeting of the N.C. Society of Pedodontists at Blowing Rock.

Ms. Griffin spoke to the gathering of dentists on the subjects of dental health education, practice building and business management.

Sharing the second half-day program at the conference were Dr. Ted Oldenberg and Dr. William Vann from the University of North Carolina School of Dentistry, speaking on dental research. Dr. John Archer of Charlotte also discussed orthodontic techniques during the session.

Dental health education is considered a new profession in the field of dentistry and

Ms. Griffin is a pioneer in the profession, according to Lewis. He said she has spoken to various local and state organizations and is being sought on a national level to discuss the new field. Lewis said that Ms. Griffin has been invited to speak to a group of 40 pedodontists in Indianapolis in November.

Locally, Ms. Griffin speaks to schools and organizations about the new service, which is designed to help patients with their personal dental needs.

An honor graduate from Rice University where she was voted one of the top 10 seniors, Ms. Griffin grew up in Houston, Texas. She has lived in Greenville with her husband, Robert, and children Scott, Brad, and Page since 1976.

HRD Accepting Applications

The Human Resources Development Program at Pitt Community College is accepting applications for enrollment for a new job-training class which begins July 19.

This eight-week program is designed, say college officials, to help adults who are school dropouts, unemployed and economically disadvantaged to become gainfully employed, especially recipients of public assistance.

The program operates jointly under the North Carolina Department of Community Colleges and the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development.

Phalanx Sale

CANBERRA, Australia (AP) — Australia will buy two Phalanx anti-missile systems from the United States for about $32 million to help defend its navy against anti-ship missiles, Defense Minister Ian Sinclair said Thursday.

He said the Phalanx systems would be fitted to the guided missile frigates Adelaide and Canberra by late 1984.

Plan 'Require' Computer Study

MISSION VIEJO, Calif. (AP) — Students in four high schools soon will be required to take a computer course before they can receive their diploma.

"The computer touches our lives in many ways," said Don Ames, acting superintendent of Saddleback Valley Unified School District. "Many families and most business have them. We feel our students should be aware of that."

The requirement will go into effect in either February or September of next year, he said. The district has about 6,000 students.

Weekend Services

Haddock Chapel F.W.B. Church, has scheduled the following services for the weekend and week:

Today, 7:30 p.m., Bishop J.H. Vines and Lewis Chapel choir, ushers and congregation will close out revival services.

Saturday, 1 p.m., Ladies Home Mission will meet; 2 p.m., Mothers Board meeting; 4 p.m., The Traveling Choir will rehearse; 7:30 p.m., Bishop Stephen Jones, the choir and ushers will render the service at Union Grove Church, Farmville.

Sunday, 9:45 a.m., Sunday school.

Thursday, 7:30 p.m., senior choir and senior ushers will meet.

Charcoal Grill...

Salmon Steaks or whole Salmon

Spread mayonnaise generously on both sides of steaks. Place fish directly on the grill, or in a greased hinged wire basket. Cook about 4 inches from hot coals for 6-8 minutes on each side or until fish flakes easily when tested with a fork. No need to baste during cooking.

Wash whole salmon and pat dry. Sprinkle inside of salmon with salt and pepper, dot with butter. Arrange overlapping slices of onion, lemon and parsley in cavity. Brush salmon with oil. Wrap in heavy duty aluminum foil, seal edges with double fold. Place on grill over medium hot coals. Carefully turn salmon every 10 minutes. Test for doneness after 45 minutes by inserting meat thermometer in thickest portion. Cook to internal temperature of 160°F. or until salmon flakes easily when tested with a fork at thickest part. To serve, transfer salmon to serving platter and fold back foil. Cut between bone and meat with a wide spatula. lift off each serving. Serve plain or with Zesty Salmon Sauce.

ZESTY SALMON SAUCE

1/2 cup butter

Opening lead: Three of ♥.

Open lines of communication between declarer and dummy usually make the play of the hand simpler. But sometimes having even a lone entry to one or the other can prove fatal, as this hand illustrates.

South's opening bid showed a hand of 17 or more points and any distribution. Thereafter, the bidding proceeded along natural lines. South decided that nine tricks might be easier to make than ten.

At the table we watched, West wisely chose not to lead a diamond. Serendipitously, he selected a heart, although at first he wasn't happy about his choice when he found that he had given declarer a trick as well as an entry to dummy! But watch what happened.

Declarer used his only opportunity to take the spade finesse. West won the queen and exited with a spade. Now declarer had only eight tricks, and the only suit in which he could establish a ninth was clubs. In hope that something good might happen in that suit, declarer cashed the ace of clubs and exited with a club.

Unfortunately for South it was East who won the second round of clubs. He shifted to a diamond, and five tricks in that suit meant that declarer was down three.

At the other table in this team match, the contract was again three no trump. Here, however, West attacked with the queen of diamonds, won by the king. Since declarer had no quick entry to the table, nor could he afford to force an entry by giving up a spade trick, he was left with no alternative except to bang out the ace and king of spades. The result was most gratifying. Five spade tricks, two hearts and a trick in each minor meant that the contract just made.

Observe that, with a black-suit lead, such as a club, declarer should still make his contract. When the queen of spades drops, declarer simply takes his five tricks in the suit. West is in trouble with his discards, and if declarer reads the position properly, he can end play him for a ninth trick in one of the red suits.

Live Models Among Dummies

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Merchants sometimes pose mannequins — store dummies — with live models. The unusual combination is supposed to attract passing shoppers, which it usually does.

The live models have to remain absolutely still. They can't talk, laugh, twitch or move their eyes. Excellent models can hold a pose for half an hour.

Few Business Bigshots Can Sell On TV

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Federal Express once had a commercial that made company presidents out to be feeble nincompoops, incapable of tying their own shoes. Now the corporate bigshots are all over the tube.

Some are as smooth as professional actors — Chrysler's Lee Iacocca, for example. Others succeed because they're offbeat, a la chicken king Frank Perdue, who has made a name for himself and his fine-feathered friends.

But commercial actors don't have to worry; they're not about to be replaced.

Advertising executives think most company presidents shouldn't play Ricardo Montalban. If they do, they're like the lawyer who represents himself and has a fool for a client.

"These people are generally boring and not very interesting to the public," says Ed McCabe of the Scali, McCabe, Sloves ad agency.

They also don't look good on TV. When image is the message, some of these corporate product-pushers come across like used car salesmen when they need to be more like Dr. Marcus Welby pushing Sanka.

And some ARE used car salesmen.

The local late-night furniture, appliance and cars are guaranteed to make viewers squirm; businessmen reading scripts like English was a second language, dressing in Halloween outfits, trotting out their families for public inspection.

"It's amazing what passes for commercials," says McCabe. "That's why actors pay money to go to acting school."

However, under certain circumstances, Madison Avenue will let the man in charge take center stage. And it can work wonders.

Recently, the benign Victor Kiam told us he liked Remington razors so much, he bought the company. Strident David Mahoney says he's making certain Avis tries harder. And space veteran Frank Borman is earning Eastern Airlines' wings every day.

But these guys aren't as noticeable as the successful corporate characters: chicken king Perdue and Chrysler savior Iacocca. These men are singular personalities, and they've all become strongly identifiable with their products, while building product awareness.

Perdue, a look-alike for New York City Mayor Ed Koch, is a breed by himself. His name is on every bird. "It takes a tough man to make a tender chicken."

What really was tough was creating branded awareness for a product that didn't have any distinguishable differences. "A chicken is a chicken," says Ron DeLuca, executive vice president of the Kenyon & Eckhardt ad agency. "But they made it work."

McCabe's agency put Perdue on the air and the map, raising the company's sales from $58 million in 1971 to over $500 million last year. McCabe says Perdue sells well because he's the expert in a field people know little about.

"Here's a guy who cares about chickens," says McCabe. "He wants to be held accountable. And he doesn't fit the mold of corporate heads. He doesn't look like Harvard '46. He's an off-the-wall kind of guy."

Iacocca's value to Chrysler has been playing the part of the underdog, fighting for the American consumer. He's also been the candid company executive taking Chrysler's case to the people. He's selling credibility.

So is Eastern's Borman, the former astronaut whose suits never seem to fit right. "He does a fair job as chief executives go," says DeLuca. "He's credible in delivering copy, but he hasn't impressed me with his conviction. He's just not comfortable."

He may have felt more comfortable in outer space.

Rich Fare For Jazz Audience

By MARY CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Herbie Hancock played the grand piano. Then Oscar Peterson played it. Then they played three duets on two grand pianos. The music was good, and the musicians' smiles were broad.

And the audience for the Kool Jazz Festival's "The Magnificent Oscar Meets the Monster" concert at Avery Fisher Hall on Thursday night showed its enjoyment with bursts of rich applause.

Hancock, who sometimes uses electronic instruments and plays fusion jazz, was in his "all jazz" mode on Thursday. In fact, he sounded influenced by Peterson, playing a lot of fast-note runs in his right hand.

Neither pianist introduced any tunes. Hancock improvised "As Times Goes By" and "Stella by Starlight" among the five he did in an hour and a quarter. One number started sounding like Liszt, then later developed a solid jazz feel.

Peterson, playing with drummer Martin Drew and bassist Niels Henning, usually made a fancy piano introduction, then was joined by Drew and Henning as he stated the melody. After that, treatments differed. But usually, Peterson cooked before he finished. In one tune, where he used a stride-style left hand, it sounded like he was kneading the melody and it was cooking and expanding like bread dough in his hands.

He did a couple of marvelous solo medleys, weaving various tunes into "Round Midnight," ending with "Misty." He made "Lush Life" big, strong and important, and followed with light, high runs with fragments of the "Caravan" melody dropped in.

Hancock did one piece in which he reached into the piano, making thumps, knocks and plucks. He said that four years ago he and pianist Chick Corea toured and in Hamburg he lay on his back to pound up at the piano.

Later he said, "I did two tours with Chick Corea. I was afraid to play solo piano for an hour. It's more fun than I thought, especially when you've got an audience that's right there with you."

High point of the night was the first duet, "In a Mellow Tone." It really was mellow and sweetly swinging, Peterson leading and Hancock supporting more like a bassist than a pianist. The last tune, "I Got Rhythm," had trading of licks and some nice unison playing.

Two Americans In 16 Finalists

MOSCOW (AP) — Sixteen singers from eight countries were chosen today as finalists in the vocal category of the Soviet-sponsored International Tchaikovsky Competition, the jury announced.

Seven Soviets advanced to the finals, along with two Americans, two Poles and one performer each from Japan, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Romania and Yugoslavia.

Steven West, 31, a teacher from San Diego, Calif., and Dolora Zagic, whose age and hometown were not immediately available, were the American finalists, the organizers said.

The winner will be announced July 8 after four days of final competition.

Separate competitions are being held for piano, violin and cello, with prizes to be awarded in these categories late next week.

Tom And Jane To Middle East

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Jane Fonda and her politician husband, Tom Hayden, are making a quick trip to Israel and war-torn Lebanon.

They left Los Angeles on Thursday and were expected to return Tuesday or Wednesday.

They are accompanied by Phil Blazer, publisher of the national biweekly newspaper, Israel Today.

Sharon Saslow, director of operations for Israel Today, said Miss Fonda was invited by an association of Israeli soldiers. She described Miss Fonda and her husband as supportive of Israel, saying "they want to express this support."

Hayden last month won the Democratic nomination for a seat in the state assembly. The Republican nominee is Santa Monica businessman Bill Hawkins.

A Show For Volunteers

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) — Rock star John Cougar will perform Saturday for a select, non-paying audience: the youth of Fort Wayne who helped bail out the beleaguered city during a flood earlier this year.

The party is called Fort Wayne Flood Fest '82 and city officials hope most of the 20,000 volunteers who turned out in March to work can make it July 3 to play.

Teen-agers — thousands of them — volunteered to help in March when floodwaters threatened thousands of homes and businesses.

The flood, caused by melting snow and early spring rains, forced about 10,000 people to evacuate their homes and caused an estimated $30 million in damage.

Cougar, who started life as John Mellencamp in Seymour, has a hit single, "Hurts So Good," and an album that also is doing well.

House Ethics Committee To Probe Allegations

By JANET STAIHAR
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Ethics Committee is launching its own probe on the heels of a Justice Department investigation into allegations that some members of Congress may have sexually preyed upon the youthful pages they employ.

A top Senate source said the allegations center on a few, no more than two or three House members. But other sources said as many as 10 representatives could be under investigation. None have been identified.

The accusations surfaced when a 16-year-old male page, who said he did not participate in the activities, relayed to a staffer in the office of Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., details of parties involving cocaine and sodomy. The page also reported incidents of homosexual "preying on pages," as one source put it.

The Denver Post said in today's editions that Roy Opp of Denver identified his son, Jeff, as the page who went to Schroeder's office. The elder Opp was quoted as saying he was certain his son, who was not available for comment, wasn't involved in any wrongdoing.

"I'm certain and comfortable that he did nothing," the father told the newspaper. "He was not involved sexually and didn't take drugs."

The Denver Post said the father flew to Washington on June 13 and a day later was with his son when the boy spent more than 90 minutes telling his story to Justice Department officials.

Since then, the Justice probe reportedly has been expanded to include allegations of congressmen soliciting female pages for sex.

Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, chairman of the House Ethics Committee, said Thursday he has instructed the committee staff to immediately begin a "thorough investigation ... of charges that members have promised official acts in return for sexual favors."

"Any charges that may be proved will be reported to the House promptly for appropriate disciplinary action," Stokes said.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said he was "deeply disturbed" by the allegations. "The truthfulness of these charges must be determined without delay ... fully, fairly and swiftly," he said.

A source close to the House leadership said the emphasis is on finding out what actually happened as soon as possible and assuring that it is ended.

"We have to end the thing fast," he said. "But at the same time, it's going to be desired by all the members to make sure the people involved are caught and gotten rid of, because there's no doubt that there's a crime involved if this is true."

Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., who conferred with Attorney General William French Smith on Thursday, said earlier that he was "flabbergasted."

"It's really a depressing thing," he told reporters.

Senate leadership sources said they understood no members of the Senate nor any Senate pages were involved in the allegations.

Baker, however, said he has requested the sergeant at arms to inquire whether an investigation has "any relevance to the Senate whatsoever" and keep the leadership "apprised of that inquiry."

A source said the youngster from Colorado who initially raised the issue told the Justice Department he had knowledge of but had not engaged in "parties involving cocaine and sodomy and involving members of Congress."

Other sources said the young page gave the department during a 1½-hour interview the names of several congressmen who he said were involved. He also alleged that staff members were recruiting pages for "parties, recruiting for sex for members, members giving pages drugs," one source said.

Sources said several other pages since have been interviewed by the department and were being warned before each interview of the penalties for perjury.

Capitol Hill pages questioned by reporters in the hallways Thursday said their superiors have told them not to talk about the case to the news media.

CBS News broadcast an interview Thursday night with an 18-year-old youth identified as a former page who said influential congressional staff members used him as a middle man to set up liaisons with homosexual prostitutes.

In return, the CBS report quoted the youth as saying, the staff members promised him promotions.

The identities of all the present and former pages questioned by federal investigators have not been released for publication.

The Arkansas Gazette has reported that an unidentified 18-year-old former page from the Little Rock area told the Justice Department he had encountered homosexual advances. But the newspaper also quoted the youth as saying the investigation was based on rumors and "no one has any facts to back them up."

A spokesman for Rep. Ed Bethune, R-Ark., who sponsored the page, said the youth was hired after he wrote the congressman for a job.

The page, later identified as Leroy Williams, resigned in January, "and he never made any statements to us" about the homosexual advances, said a Bethune spokesman. "It was news to us," he said.

But the spokesman, who asked not to be identified, said the youth had financial and other problems they were aware of.

Justice Department spokesman John Russell confirmed that an investigation was under way but said it was "at a very preliminary stage. A page came forward and had some allegations. I can't discuss them right now."

The department's investigation is reportedly focused on the promising of favors by members of Congress in return for sex and on having sex with minors.

There are about 70 House pages, ranging in age from 16 to 18, according to John T. Molloy, the House doorkeeper who has direct responsibility for them.

In a CBS interview, Molloy acknowledged that somebody should look into the allegations. "I assume there might be something there. I don't know though," he said.

Molloy said a page's average stay on Capitol Hill is about a semester, though some stay as briefly as two months while others remain as long as two years. They live in supervised housing near the Capitol, attend Capitol Page School and must pay for their own uniforms, lodging and meals from paychecks somewhat above $600 a month.

The duties of pages generally involve running errands for members of Congress, such as delivering letters from one congressional office to the other or getting news releases to the galleries.

N.C. Board Of Education Has Plans For Expansion Program

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina Board of Education has approved a "can-do" program calling for expansion of existing public-school programs and creation of new ones between 1983 and 1985.

But state Treasurer Harlan Boyles warned the board not to get its hopes up too high, saying that now isn't a good time to be thinking about expansion.

Topping the expansion budget's 27 items is a $17.3 million request to alter the formula used to compute the average daily membership in the state's 143 school systems, a figure used in allocation of state funds.

Absent from the proposal is a request to further reduce class sizes. Funds for that are under other items, such as the request to change the funding formula, which would mean the addition of at least 650 teachers, Board Chairman H. David Bruton said Thursday.

"It's a can-do budget," said state Superintendent of Public Instruction A. Craig Phillips, referring to the fact that the request is drastically lower than the $300 million originally sought for the 1981-83 biennium. The Legislature reduced that by $30 million.

Funding the expansion budget, which calls for $59.9 million in 1983-84 and $88.3 million in 1984-85, would cost $60 per student in 1983-84 and $88 per student in 1984-85, Phillips said.

Bruton called the request "terribly conservative," and added, "It's about 5 percent of the (current) total public schools budget." Public schools will get about $1.5 billion in state funds this year.

Even so, Boyles said he thought the board must recognize the difference between being optimistic and realistic.

"To add new costs, add personnel in light of what will face us from other influences makes me wonder how wishful this might be," he said.

The program was developed after review and recommendations by the superintendents' councils in the state education regions.

Before giving the proposal final approval, state board members including Bruton and Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green plan to discuss the request with Gov. Jim Hunt. After final board scrutiny, the proposal will go to the Advisory Budget Commission this fall.

Bethel Class Held Reunion

The Bethel High School Class of 1929 held its first-ever class reunion Saturday in Greenville — 53 years after graduation.

The reunion was hosted by Mr. and Mrs. Edward House of Virginia Beach, Va.

Fourteen of 19 class members are known to be living. The nine present were Edward House and Daisy Bryant Tracy of Virginia Beach, Va.; Dorothy Andrews Ourednik of Newport News, Va.; W.R. James of Charlotte, Nannie Bullock Coburn, Addie Leigh House Gale and Reba Whitehurst Edmondson, all of Bethel; Alton Gurganus of Greenville, and Emily Pearl Clark Moore of Fountain.

Among the guests were Louise Eagles Williams of Nashville and Rachel Barwick Keel of Bethel, teachers of the class, and spouses of the class members, Alice Coburn and Mary M. Beverly.

Living class members who could not attend were Alton Carson of Bethel, Blanche Mooring McKee of Raleigh, Annie J. Congleton Nelson of Robersonville, Maggie Ford Simpson of Norfolk, Va., and Margaret Whitfield Violett of Brandywine, Md. The only class member not located was Cecil Rogers.

Deceased class members are Walter Edward Beverly, J.R. Matthews, Ida Mayo Moore and Emily Whitehurst Tucker. Mary M. Beverly represented her late husband.

Local Delegates At VFW Meet

Delegates representing Veterans of Foreign Wars Post No. 7031 attended the state convention of the VFW in Greensboro recently. The convention featured Rep. Sam Bundy of Farmville as the main speaker.

The problems of employment, education, medical benefits and the disability status change for veterans were discussed by Kenneth E. McDonald, director of the Veterans Administration regional office in Winston-Salem.

Local delegates Louis Tyson, Norman Dickerson and Don Lundgard represented the Charles Gray Morgan Post of Greenville.

CHURCH PROGRAM
The vacation Bible school class will present a program at Mount Shiloh Church in Winterville at 7 p.m. Sunday. The program will be open to the public.

YOUTH DAY
Youth Day will be observed Sunday at 11 a.m. at Arthur Chapel Free Will Baptist Church.

Reverses Self In Corona Trial

HAYWARD, Calif. (AP) — A judge hearing the retrial of Juan Corona on mass murder charges has changed his mind and agreed to allow testimony linking Corona's brother to the slayings.

Arie Jones, who worked in the Guadalajara Cafe near the site where the bodies of 25 itinerant farm workers were found buried in 1971, testified Thursday that he saw Corona's brother, Natividad, fight with one victim in the Marysville cafe, and then lug a body to a truck.

Corona, 48, has been in jail since his arrest May 26, 1971. He was convicted in 1973 of the Sutter County murders and sentenced to 25 consecutive life sentences, but an appellate court granted him a new trial four years ago on grounds he was inadequately represented. The retrial began Feb. 22.

Thursday's testimony outside the jury's presence prompted Superior Court Judge Richard Patton, who presided over the first trial, to reverse an earlier ruling which barred testimony suggesting that Natividad was a more likely suspect.

Jones testified that in March or April of 1971, he walked into the back room of the Guadalajara and saw Natividad engaged in a homosexual act with Sirgurd "Pete" Bieremen, one of the 25 victims.

Jones testified that as he turned to walk out, he "saw Natividad slashing down, like this (demonstrating)." Jones said he saw a knife flash and it appeared as though Natividad "was trying to cut his throat."

"Natividad brought the body out," said Jones, who will be able to repeat his testimony for the jury.

Prosecutor Ronald Fahey said, however, that Jones' disclosures were about "as rank as they come."

Natividad is believed to have left the country in 1970 after losing a $250,000 civil suit for an earlier slashing attack in the cafe.

In his opening statement, defense attorney Terence Hallinan said he would try to show Natividad killed the farm laborers. He also said that questions remain about the authenticity of a Mexican death certificate for Natividad.

Idle Idol

Sunday marks the 110th anniversary of the birth of Calvin Coolidge. Elected on the slogan 'Keep Cool with Cal,' Coolidge diligently followed this advice. A typical 'workday' for the man some historians have called 'the laziest President,' included about four hours of work and ten hours of sleep. When this hectic pace became exhausting, Coolidge recuperated with annual summer vacations lasting up to three months. He often governed the nation from remote spots unreachable by phone. But in the Roaring 20s of jazz and flappers, this taciturn, unflappable man was extremely popular. As Will Rogers observed: 'He is the first President to discover that what the American people want is to be left alone.'

DO YOU KNOW — Which President did Coolidge succeed?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — The President of Mexico is Lopez Portillo.

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, JULY 3, 1982

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Be alert to all sorts of opportunities coming your way today. You have added energy now that needs to be carefully channeled in constructive directions. Be more outgoing.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Improve your environment so that you have more comfort in your life. The evening can be a happy time with loved one.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You are able to obtain information you need in the morning by going to the right source. Improve your appearance.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Make sure you handle your work in a more efficient manner and gain the benefits you deserve. Express happiness.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) A new venture is appealing, but study it well before engaging in it. Show others that you are a creative person.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Study your immediate surroundings and know how best to make improvements. Make the evening a happy one.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Use a better method to handle routine chores and get excellent results. Express happiness with family members.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Analyze your financial affairs well and know how best to handle them in the future. Make this a most productive day.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You have something in mind to improve your personal life, so go ahead with this. Put your talent to work.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Be tactful in talking with family members. Study just where you are headed in your line of endeavor.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You are able to understand your friends much better now and know where best they fit into your plans.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Take steps to improve your environment so you have greater comfort. Take needed health treatments.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) A good day to let your influence be felt far and wide, but use diplomacy in doing so. Strive for increased happiness.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one of those talented persons who can gain valuable information that others cannot, so direct the education along lines of research for best results. Teach good manners. A natural in sports.

Hijackers Net 150,000 Clams

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) — Hijackers have pulled off a big haul that netted them 150,000 clams.

As in seafood, FBI spokesman Jim Waters said three hijackers on Thursday forced the drivers of a tractor-trailer to load the sacks of clams into another truck.

He said the bandits would have to dispose of the clams quickly because "they go bad fast."

A co-owner of R&R Shellfish, which owns the tractor-trailer, said the load of about 150,000 little neck, top neck, cherrystone and chowder bivalves was worth more than $18,000.

"You're talking about a load that was going out for the Fourth of July bakes. Time was of the essence. It's like stealing Christmas tree lights the week before Christmas," said the co-owner, who asked not to be identified.

PATCO To Declare Its Bankruptcy

By H. JOSEF HEBERT Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) —

Almost a year after calling a strike that led to the firing of 11,500 air traffic controllers, the union which represented them is filing for bankruptcy and will liquidate its assets, according to sources.

Gary Eads, president of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization, scheduled an afternoon news conference today to announce the decision made recently by the union's executive board.

The sources, who asked not to be identified further, said the union will tell the U.S. Bankruptcy Court of the District of Columbia that it no longer wants to try reorganizing under Chapter 11 of the bankruptcy laws.

"That means the end of PATCO," said one airline industry official acquainted with the court proceedings.

Union members, however, said PATCO's leaders intend to form a new organization under a new name and charter to help fired controllers try to regain their jobs.

"Maybe that will lessen the stigma of Robert Poli," one union worker said. Poli, the union's president at the time of last summer's illegal strike, resigned in December.

Liquidation means the court would appoint a trustee to distribute the union's assets among creditors, including the nation's airlines which have claims of more than $33.4 million as a result of the walkout.

PATCO's creditors claim the union has assets of about $4 million. The union, however, contends most of that is in a "subsistence" trust fund not subject to the claim.

"That (trust fund money) had nothing to do with any of the organization's operations. It's money that belongs to the controllers — both fired and working," one union official said Thursday.

The courts ultimately will decide whether the trust fund can be distributed to creditors.

PATCO represented more than 16,000 air traffic controllers when it launched its strike Aug. 3 seeking higher wages and better working conditions. Two days later President Reagan ordered that controllers who refused to return to work — about 11,500 of them — be fired.

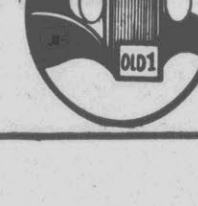

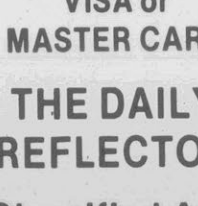

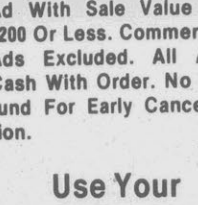

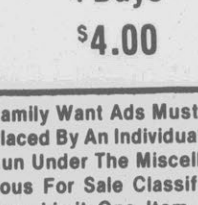

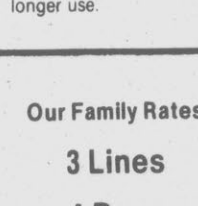

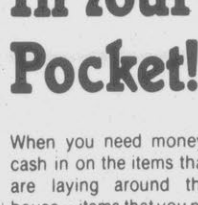

During the first days of the strike a number of courts leveled stiff fines against the union accounting for the bulk of the $33.4 million damages sought by the Air Transport Association.

But that amount is said to reflect only a fraction of the losses incurred by the airlines because of the strike, the impact of which continues to be felt today in the form of restrictions on flights at many airports.

The union was later decertified, stripped of its authority to represent controllers and cut off from their dues.

According to sources, a recent ruling by the U.S. Court of Appeals upholding the decertification prompted the union's leaders to decide on liquidation.

Almost all of the PATCO leadership has changed since the strike. Its new leaders — with Eads as president — have continued to run the organization from its Washington headquarters with contributions from fired controllers.

Europe Eyes Needed Jobs

By SUSAN J. SMITH
Associated Press Writer
BONN, West Germany (AP) - For more than a week, Western Europe has criticized the United States for still trying to delay construction of a Soviet pipeline that offers three things Europeans want - more jobs, more trade with the Soviet Union and more natural gas.

The way Europeans see it, American efforts to delay the pipeline to Western Europe won't hurt the Soviets but could throw thousands of people in Italy, West Germany and Great Britain out of work.

European officials say that if they respect the American equipment and technology embargo, they could wreck future trade relationships with the Soviets.

"What there should not be and what there will not be ... is a trade war with the Soviet Union with which a new epoch of the Cold War could be introduced," Chancellor Helmut Schmidt said last week in reiterating that Europe will proceed with the project.

Schmidt spoke after President Reagan announced he was extending a ban on U.S. technology for the planned pipeline, which is expected to deliver some 21 billion cubic meters of gas to Western Europe when it begins operation in 1984. The American embargo was originally imposed to protest the Soviet-backed declaration of martial law in Poland last December.

The 3,400-mile pipeline will start in western Siberia, go through the Ukraine and Czechoslovakia and end at the West German-Czech border where it will feed into an existing pipeline network.

West Germany, France, Austria and Switzerland have contracted to buy the gas, and the Dutch and Italians are negotiating.

The Reagan administration has criticized the pipeline deal on the grounds that it would make Western Europe too dependent on Soviet energy resources and give the Russians more hard currency to purchase western technology.

The Soviets say that despite Reagan's embargo, the pipeline will be built. What western Europeans may lose, however, are other benefits that go with delivering pipeline parts to the Russians - jobs and good trade relations.

Reagan defended the ban at his press conference Wednesday, saying "we did what we thought should have been done to release the oppression of the people of Poland." He added, "We think there is a risk that they (western Europeans) become dependent on the Soviet Union for energy."

In Italy alone, 6,000 to 7,000 jobs are affected. The Italian firm of Nuovo Pignone, a unit of the state energy conglomerate Nazionale Idrocarburi, has the largest contract in Europe for construction on the pipeline.

The company, which gets its parts from the American giant General Electric, will lose a $470 million contract to assemble 59 gas turbines if it goes along with the U.S. embargo. A decision has not yet been made.

"The company has other contracts. But without a doubt, this one is a very big one and there's some concern," a company spokesman said.

In West Germany, Reagan's decision has hurt AEG Telefunken, which has been asking the government for help to ward off bankruptcy.

The firm's turbine-making subsidiary, AEG-Kanis, had a $270 million contract to supply 47 turbines to the Soviets, but the company's chief executive, Heiny Duerr, said last week that the deal would not go ahead because of Reagan's embargo.

Duerr said the existence of AEG-Kanis and its 1,200 employees were threatened by the embargo because the turbines contract had been about half of the company's current orders.

British companies hold contracts worth about $344 million for the pipeline. A spokesman for John Brown Engineering Ltd. in London said the company has a $178 million order to provide 21 gas turbines and other parts for the pipeline.

The contract was providing "life blood" for the firm and hundreds of jobs would be at risk if it was canceled, he said.

Like the Italian company, AEG-Kanis and John Brown contracted to supply turbines that are made with parts supplied by General Electric.

In the current issue of the West German magazine Stern, U.S. Assistant Secretary of Defense Fred C. Ikle said Europeans should be looking to buy gas from partners in the NATO alliance, not the Soviet Union.

"There are plenty of opportunities to get natural gas from countries in the alliance," such as Norway or Britain, Ikle said, instead of "Moscow, the opponent against which the NATO alliance is based."

To the Europeans, however, and particularly the West Germans, who look over their back fence at Soviet military might in East Germany, amicable trade with the Russians can foster better relations between East and West.

Only 1.9 percent of West Germany's exports currently go to the Soviets. Schmidt's government would like to increase those percentages.

"The federal government adheres to long-term economic exchange between East and West," Schmidt said earlier this year. "Economic cooperation is conducive to the development of reliable political relations and hence to stability."

Pretreated Wastewater Is Required

Greenville is one of 112 towns that will be required to have an industrial wastewater pretreatment program to help prevent toxic chemicals from entering its wastewater treatment facility and possibly the area's water supply.

The North Carolina Department of Natural Resources and Community Development initiated the program to help the state deal with toxics and to meet state and federal requirements for controlling industrial wastewater discharge.

About 30 percent of the 372 publicly owned treatment systems in the state will be required by the state Division of Environmental Management and the federal Environmental Protection Agency to submit program plans by Jan. 1, 1983.

The state pretreatment program staff will assist local communities in developing these plans. The Environmental Protection Agency recently delegated authority to approve local programs to the Division of Environmental Management.

Program benefits for local communities include prolonged life of their treatment works, identification of cost burdens for industrial waste treatment, better planning, and protection of the environment from incompatible pollutants.

A recently adjourned session of the North Carolina General Assembly appropriated approximately $289,000 for the program.

Some other area towns required to develop pretreatment programs include: Goldsboro, Kinston, Farmville, Rocky Mount, Wilson, Tarboro and Washington.

TALENT PROGRAM
A talent program will be held at Sweet Hope Free Will Baptist Church Saturday at 7:30 p.m. Residents of Winterville Rest Home and Spruill's Rest Home will be special guests.
