Columbia's Fourth Flight Ended In Blaze Of Glory

TOUCHDOWN — The Space Shuttle Columbia glides to a hard runway landing at Edwards Air Force Base in California Sunday after completing its fourth test mission in space. Two NASA chase planes accompanied the shuttle's final descent.

By PAUL RECER
AP Aerospace Writer
SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Astronauts Ken Mattingly and Henry Hartsfield relaxed at home today, hailed by President Reagan as Fourth of July heroes for a near-flawless shuttle voyage that cleared the way for Columbia to begin flying for pay this fall.

Columbia's fourth and final test flight ended in glory on the nation's 206th birthday with a pinpoint landing at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., and a flag-waving, cheering, singing celebration of America.

In the central moment of a stunning display of U.S. technological skill and stirring showmanship, the astronauts brought Columbia from space to a dead center landing on a concrete runway while Reagan and more than 500,000 other spectators watched with awe.

"Unbelievable ... just magnificent," Reagan said of the landing. Later, he told the astronauts, "You've just given the American people a Fourth of July present to remember."

Columbia even provided fireworks — a double sonic boom swept across the desert valley, heralding the approach of the speeding craft on its graceful descent to Earth.

The perfect touchdown ended a seven-day, 112-orbit mission. The craft will be ferried to Florida, reconditioned and launched again in October or November with a four-man crew and will deploy two satellites.

Reagan used the occasion to call for "establishing a more permanent presence in space." The White House issued a directive favoring deployment of an anti-satellite weapon and improvements in systems giving early warning of nuclear threats.

The message stopped short, however, of endorsing expansion of the space shuttle fleet or construction of a manned space station, moves favored by the space agency and by the Air Force.

National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials added to the drama of the day by assembling its entire fleet of the black-and-white, stubby-winged space shuttles.

As the President spoke, Columbia, still warm after its return from space, sat on the desert runway. Challenger, second craft in the fleet, was perched atop a 747, preparing for a ferry ride to Florida and an eventual space voyage next year.

And Enterprise, the nonorbiting test ship and first of the line, formed a Presidential backdrop.

As Reagan finished his remarks, he ordered a jumbo

Israeli, PLO Exchange Long-Distance Shelling

By The Associated Press
Israeli artillery blasted Palestinian guerrilla positions near the Beirut airport today and PLO gunners responded with barrages of Katyusha rockets and mortars in the heaviest fighting reported around the besieged Lebanese capital in more than a week.

Associated Press correspondent Tom Baldwin reported from a vantage point overlooking the battlefield that the fighting began at dawn in the Haddeth neighborhood, a quarter-mile north of the airport and just south of the Bourj el Barajneh refugee camp, a PLO stronghold that had been an Israeli artillery target over the weekend.

The renewed fighting came after Israel flatly rejected a reported offer by Yasser Arafat to evacuate most of his Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas from Lebanon, leaving behind a token military force and a political mission.

There were no reports of dead or wounded in the fighting, which Baldwin said was the heaviest since the Israelis were hit by strong Palestinian fire near the village of Khalde 10 days ago as they thrust northward toward Moslem-controlled west Beirut.

Israel, which invaded Lebanon on June 6 to crush the PLO, has trapped an estimated 8,000 guerrillas and 500,000 civilians in predominantly-Moslem west Beirut, which has been sealed off since Saturday by an Israeli blockade of access routes across the "Green Line" frontier to Christian-held east Beirut.

While Israeli artillery fire poured in on Haddeth from the hills today, guerrillas in the rubble launched a barrage of rocket-propelled grenades, mortars and small-arms fire, Baldwin said. The Palestinians also fired Katyusha rockets from deep inside their west Beirut redoubt, striking Israeli positions east of the airport, he reported.

Other witnesses reported that Israeli artillery fire hit Bourj el Barajneh Sunday in what one Israeli officer called "tightening the screws" on west Beirut.

Official Lebanese sources said Sunday that Arafat agreed in a signed document to evacuate most of his guerrillas, but insisted on leaving behind two brigades, a total of 500 men, who would be stationed with the Lebanese army in northern and eastern Lebanon. The PLO chief also demanded a political and diplomatic mission in Beirut following an evacuation, the sources said.

The destination of the bulk of the guerrillas — presumably to another Arab state — would be decided in negotiations among the United States, Lebanon and other Middle East nations, they said.

The Lebanese sources said the document was negotiated by Arafat and Lebanese leaders and delivered to U.S. presidential envoy Philip C.

Habib, who passed it on to the Israelis. Habib has been leading an intensive round of peace talks but so far has been unable to resolve the differences between Israel and the PLO.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin has said he would allow the guerrillas to leave Beirut with their personal weapons, and has endorsed the idea of a peace-keeping force to help establish a strong Lebanese government — a proposal that was said to be included in Arafat's document.

The Begin Cabinet responded to the reported agreement by saying it "unconditionally rejects any proposal for any sort of token political, organizational or military presence of terrorists" in the war-torn nation.

Despite the rejection, Defense Minister Ariel Sharon said Israel still wants to continue peace efforts.

Asked at a news conference in west Beirut if he felt a peaceful solution could be reached in light of the Israeli rejection, Arafat said, "I am doubtful. ... Israel wants to continue its campaigns of genocide against the Lebanese people and the Palestinians."

Diehard guerrilla leaders, especially the Marxist leader of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, Dr. George Habash, have been insisting on a "fight unto death" against the Israelis.

Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy on Sunday advised the PLO "to commit suicide rather than accept shame ... Your suicide will immortalize the Palestinian cause for future generations." The PLO refused to comment on this statement.

The U.N. Security Council in New York passed a resolution Sunday night calling for respect of the rights of Lebanese civilians and for "restoration of the normal supply of vital facilities such as water, electricity, food and medical provisions, particularly in Beirut."

The measure was clearly aimed at Israel, whose blockade has made fruits and vegetables scarce in west Beirut, but did not mention the Jewish state by name. It was a watered-down version of a resolution introduced by Jordanian Ambassador Hazem Nuseibeh that would have referred to specifically to Israel.

TOTAL LUNAR ECLIPSE — North Carolinians early Tuesday, if the weatherman cooperates and clears away Monday's cloud cover, will have the opportunity to view the first of two lunar eclipses visible in North America this year. The second eclipse will be Dec. 30. Tuesday's eclipse will begin at 1:33 a.m., when the moon moves into the darkest part of the earth's shadow or umbra. The moon will be completely in shadow at 2:38 a.m. and will begin to emerge at 4:24 a.m. By 5:29 a.m. the moon will have emerged completely. A lunar eclipse, unlike an eclipse of the sun, is safe to look at without protecting the eyes. (AP Laserphoto)

Engineers Say Shuttle Appears In Top Shape

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer
EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) —

Technicians today begin preparing Columbia for its return to Cape Canaveral after a fourth flight that was so successful NASA says the next mission may start a month ahead of schedule.

Lt. Gen. James A. Abrahamson, NASA associate administrator for space transportation systems, said Sunday the veteran spaceship seemed in top shape after its seven-day flight, and its first landing on concrete at this Mojave Desert airbase.

The shuttle goes to work on its fifth mission, now planned for Nov. 11, with a payload of two communications satellites that will be put into permanent orbit.

Abrahamson said both the ship and the people who handle it are so well tested. "We believe ... we could roll the launch back anywhere from three to four weeks and we would be ready."

He said the only question was whether the commercial payloads would be ready early. "We are now in the operational phase of this program and our job is to be there when our customers want us there," he said.

Technicians at NASA's Dryden Flight Research Center, meanwhile, were inspecting Columbia, which is due to be flown back atop a jumbo jet in a week or so to its launch site at Kennedy Space Center, Fla.

Columbia's sister ship, Challenger, delivered just last week, left piggyback on the same jet Sunday for Florida.

Abrahamson said Columbia's first touchdown and landing on a 15,000-foot paved runway were "very nominal," which is NASAese for "just the way it was supposed to be."

NASA spokesman Ralph Jackson said preliminary figures showed the big ship touched down 3,000 feet into the runway, rolled 8,000 feet and came to a stop with 4,000 feet to spare.

The three previous landings were on lakebeds where a miss or an overrun weren't major problems. But when the ship begins routine landings at Kennedy, as planned next year, a paved runway will be the only option.

Abrahamson said a quick look at the shuttle's shell of heat-shield tiles, some of which shook loose on earlier flights, showed what "looked like a couple of questionable areas" but no serious problems.

"They fared much, much better this time, despite the fact we had a large number of small dents" from a hailstorm that battered the craft the day before it was launched.

"The tile as a system is much more forgiving and much more effective than we thought it would be," he said.

The biggest problem of the mission came moments after launch when the two solid-fuel rocket boosters that help shoot Columbia into orbit sank when their parachute failed after they were jettisoned over the Atlantic Ocean. The boosters are supposed to float until picked by recovery ships for reuse.

Abrahamson said the boosters apparently hit the ocean at 540 feet per second, over 300 mph, and received "a pretty good shock" and promptly sank in 3,500 feet of water.

One was located and examined by a remote controlled underwater sled and "We've decided to recover as much as we can" with a salvage ship that's now being outfitted, he said.

Whatever is recovered, he said, will be used to investigate the cause of the failure and to determine whether the rest can be recovered and rebuilt. He said one theory was that lightning during the hailstorm damaged the boosters.

He said the second booster hit the water at a more perilous angle and "it's likely it will be in much worse condition."

Americans Celebrate July 4 From Coast To Coast

By JOHN DANISZEWSKI
Associated Press Writer

From space shuttle Columbia's big bang over California to the Capitol in Washington, D.C., where a Soviet emigre's baton led the National Symphony, Americans celebrated their 206th birthday with picnics, festivals and fireworks from coast to coast.

Cannon greeted the dawn at the Battery in New York City, roaring a 50-gun salute Sunday to the Statue of Liberty. But the biggest Fourth of July firecracker rang out over the California desert when the shuttle crashed through the sound barrier, sending two sonic booms rolling across the Antelope Valley.

"Unbelievable... just magnificent," said President Reagan, among the 500,000 people to watch the landing. "You've just given the American people a Fourth of July present to remember," he told astronauts Ken Mattingly and Henry Hartsfield.

With gasoline plentiful and cheaper than a year ago, many Americans took to the road. By early today, more than 250 motorists had died on the nation's highways.

An older mode of transit was on display in Boston Harbor as the U.S.S. Constitution made its yearly cruise. "Old Ironsides," the 185-year-old frigate that thwarted British cannonballs in the War of 1812, was then berthed in the opposite direction to weather evenly.

In Jackson, Miss., dozens of ballet dancers from around the world mingled with their U.S. counterparts as a display of sparklers and Roman candles capped the two-week International Ballet Competition.

On the west lawn of the Capitol, Soviet emigre Mstislav Rostropovich conducted the National Symphony Orchestra before 145,000 people.

Police in Washington estimated 400,000 people gathered to watch fireworks near the Lincoln Memorial. In New York City, a rowdy crowd estimated at 250,000 watched colorful bombs burst over New York Harbor.

In Massachusetts, the fireworks combined with rousing music by the Boston Pops to bring out 175,000 celebrants along the Charles River.

But St. Louis claimed the biggest gathering. Police estimated 2 million revelers jammed the Mississippi waterfront on the first two days of the Veiled Prophet Fair.

The Beach Boys sang near the Gateway Arch and fair organizers proclaimed it the best-attended Independence Day bash in the nation's history. "I haven't seen this many people in one spot since the government gave away cheese," cracked comedian Bob Hope.

Elsewhere on the muddy Mississippi — in Hannibal, Mo. — a boy from Rochester, Miss., out-white-washed 14 others at the 26th annual Tom Sawyer Days. Doug Zmolek, 11, won the contest judged on quickness, workmanship and costumes recreating the Mark Twain character.

Americans also held balloon races, turtle races and at least one no-run race, in Scottsboro, Ala. The "winning" runner dawdled through a 33-foot course for about three hours until finally finishing last. A spokeswoman explained the race as a contest for people who consider joggers "a little strange."

Meanwhile, a gathering of another sort was taking place in Council, Idaho, where about 6,000 people got together in a mountain meadow with drugs, song and a prayer for peace.

The gathering came under the banner of the Rainbow Family, a group with roots in the hippie movement of the 1960s. Marijuana was plentiful, and one 10-year-old traded a thimble of hashish along with other trinkets outside a soup kitchen dubbed the Hobo Hilton.

In Portland, Maine, residents celebrated their city's 350th birthday along with Independence Day. Vice President George Bush on Saturday night rededicated a 191-year-old lighthouse in Portland harbor.

Fires caused by fireworks were common during the holiday. New York City reported two house fires that injured nine people. Officials also blamed fireworks for a blaze at the soon-to-be demolished Pan Pacific auditorium in Los Angeles.

The Fourth of July was a dry one for most beachgoers at popular Stinson Beach near San Francisco. Because of recent sightings of great white sharks, most people went no deeper than their ankles.

In Nevada, a 28-year-old soldier, Dirk Knipe, unrolled an American flag after lowering himself by rope 589 feet down the bare face of Hoover Dam, something never attempted. "I did it for America," said Knipe, just before his arrest for the unauthorized stunt.

LEBANESE BEACH PARTY — During a relaxation of firing around Beirut, some twenty miles to the south, some Lebanese girls enjoy a swim in the Mediterranean near Jounieh. So far war has been kept out of the Christian-controlled area.

Meanwhile, Palestinian guerrillas were digging trenches in the Ouzai district of west Beirut, preparing for what they fear will be an Israeli attack from the sea. (AP Laserphoto)

Funeral Set Today For Shot President Of Santo Domingo

By MARC D. CHARNEY
Associated Press Writer

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — The flag-draped casket of President Antonio Guzman lay in state overnight in the ornate National Palace awaiting a funeral today in the nation's second city, Santiago.

Guzman, 71, who was due to leave office next month after a four-year term, died early Sunday, mortally wounded by a gunshot when his pistol fell to the floor in a bathroom at the palace and discharged, the government said.

Vice President Jacobo Majluta, sworn in as president after Guzman's death, told the nation in a radio and television speech Sunday that the shooting was accidental.

However, a State Department official in Washington called the death an apparent suicide, and some prominent Dominicans also drew that conclusion privately as they prepared for the Roman Catholic funeral in Guzman's home town 100 miles north of here.

Majluta, 48, assured Dominicans in his address that Guzman's dream of a peaceful transition of power after his term ended would still be realized.

"As commander in chief of the armed forces and of the National Police, I guarantee the transmission of power to the new authorities elected in last May's election," Majluta said. "All the armed forces of the nation support without reservations the continuation of the constitutional order."

Salvador Jorge Blanco, a left-leaning social democrat, won the presidency in May after defeating the more centrist Majluta in a primary of the Dominican Revolutionary Party. Jorge Blanco is to be inaugurated Aug. 16.

Guzman, a wealthy rancher and businessman, tried to create a tradition of government by compromise and conciliation in this Caribbean nation with a history of violent upheaval, great social inequalities, and dictatorship.

He entered Dominican Revolutionary Party politics shortly after assassins ended the 30-year dictatorship of Rafael Trujillo in 1961.

Guzman served as agriculture minister in the short-lived elected government of President Juan Bosch in 1963. When Bosch was overthrown in a coup Guzman emerged as a mediator who helped set up a provisional government after civil war led to intervention by U.S. Marines in 1965.

Guzman was Bosch's running-mate in 1966, when conservative Joaquin Balaguer, formerly a figurehead president under Trujillo, won an election and began 12 years of highly personal rule.

Balaguer's opponents said he repressed dissidents and set election rules unfair to the opposition, and they did not contest his re-election in 1970 and 1974.

But in 1978 the Dominican Revolutionary Party ran Guzman as its presidential candidate, and as the votes came in it was clear he would win.

Realizing this, the military and police tried to stop the vote count. But diplomatic pressure from the United States, Venezuela and others helped bring about negotiations that ended with Guzman in the presidency and Balaguer's party keeping control of the Senate.

Guzman proceeded to revamp the military command. He instituted agricultural experiments designed to improve food production, but was hobbled by a squeeze between high prices for imported oil and disastrously low prices for exports, primarily sugar.

Perhaps the biggest surprise of Guzman's political career came in 1981 when he announced he was keeping a campaign promise not to run for re-election. Personal lust for power is so familiar here that many had not believed the promise.

But Guzman's party now has made that pledge a cardinal rule for presidential candidates, and Jorge Blanco is promising to write into the constitution a rule that no president could ever succeed himself in office.

Curtis Mathes To Retail Only

DALLAS (AP) — Curtis Mathes Corp. is getting out of the television manufacturing business.

President Ludwig A. Huck said Friday that in the past year the company, more than 80 years old, has changed from being primarily a manufacturer to the operator of the largest chain of retail home-entertainment electronic stores in the nation.

Curtis Mathes plans to continue operating about 650 franchised dealerships, selling TV sets made by manufacturers under the Curtis Mathes brand, he said. Curtis Mathes advertises its sets as "the most expensive in America and worth it." A 19-inch portable color TV can cost between $483 and $850, depending on optional equipment.

Huck said the decision to stop making the sets was promoted in part by increased costs and reduced productivity. Curtis Mathes will close its plant in Athens, in East Texas, and lay off about 850 employees there, he said.

Couple Unites In Marriage Saturday

Pamela Kay Watson of Washington was united in marriage to Dallas Jefferson Mayo of Greenville Saturday afternoon at two o'clock in the Spring Garden Baptist Church. Officiating at the double ring ceremony was the Rev. E.R. MacNair.

The bride is the daughter of Queen Esther Blue of Sanford. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Preston Harper of Greenville.

Escorted by her uncle, Willie Jenkins, the bride wore a formal gown of white chiffon overlaid in re-embroidered English netting. The bodice was designed with a V-yoke of schiffli lace design enhanced by ruffled edging from the shoulders to the V-point front and back. A band of re-embroidered lace fashioned the collar. The skirt, covered in re-embroidered netting, featured an attached chapel length train. The raised overlay on the skirt front revealed four rows of ruffled edging. The long unlined sleeves of English net were embroidered from the elbow to the pointed cuff. She wore a derby hat of schiffli lace design with an attached veil of double layered illusion in the back.

Matron of honor was Debra Braye of Greensboro. Carolyn Wilson of Greenville served as maid of honor. Each wore a formal gown of mauve lustreglo faile fashioned with a front-wrap bodice which formed a V-neck and a cowl draped back. The straight skirt fell from the fitted waist.

MRS. DALLAS JEFFERSON MAYO

Bridesmaids were Esther Grandy of Princeton, Michelle Mitchell of Bronx, N.Y., Barbara Smith of Fayetteville, Sandra Moore and Jennifer Thompson, both of Greenville and Diane Laws, Ada Godley and Gertrude Gardner, all of Washington. Each wore a lavender gown styled like that of the honor attendants and carried long-stemmed lavender mums.

Flower girls were Jean Hardee of Greenville and Lashanda Blue of Sanford. Each wore a lavender floor length dress and carried a white basket with lavender petals and ribbons. Ring bearer was Danny Allen Adams of Aurora.

Elder Milton Sutton of Greenville served as best man and head usher was Ben Taylor of Washington. Ushers included Michael Braye of Greensboro, Reginald Silver of Rocky Mount, Donnie McIntyre of Goldsboro, Michael Mitchell of Bronx, N.Y., Terry Cobb of Washington, and Alston Parker, Ronald Moore and Malcolm Harris of Greenville.

A program of wedding music was presented by the Rev. Collins Kornegay, organist. Soloist Cathy Braxton sang "Giving All of Me," and soloist Nancy Carree sang "We've Only Just Begun."

A reception was held following the wedding at the American Legion Building in Washington. The Hospitality Club of Wells Chapel COGIC, Greenville, served the refreshments. Entertainment was provided by the Voices of Deliverance of Greenville.

The bride is a graduate of Sanford Central High School, Beaufort Community College and Wesleyan College. The bridegroom is a graduate of J.H. Rose High School and is employed with Union Carbide.

The couple will reside in Greenville.

couch covers and even Ultrasuede garments. (I tried making a tent once, but the machine couldn't handle it!)

When knitting, I use the flexible circular needles as much as possible because they seem lighter and they don't click against the arms of my wheelchair. I change patterns if necessary to eliminate seams whenever possible and always knit two socks or two sleeves at the same time.

I store all of my yarns in 3-pound coffee cans. Each is labeled and stored on easily reached shelves. The yarn is kept clean and moth-proof. For large quantities of yarn, I use 25-pound detergent boxes with lids. I cover these with contact paper.

For my needlepoint and crewel yarns, I have a commercially made purse and lingerie holder that hangs from a closet rod. The hanger swivels so it is easy to unzip the see-through pockets. This bag could also be used for sewing supplies or almost any craft supply need in the needlework field.

An upcoming project for me is spinning. I have a hand-held spindle and can hardly wait to collect enough Great Pyrenees wool from our dog to complete a garment.

I think it is great that you are going to include a chapter with hints for the handicapped in the book you are writing — who knows what creativity it will inspire. Good luck to you with this project! — Sylvia Jones, Seattle Wash.

And good luck to you, Sylvia, in all your future projects! I am happy to share

Son's Wife Is No Daughter

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: We are still having an argument that began on Mother's Day. Perhaps you can help us settle it. On Mother's Day I received flowers with a card that read, "To Mother on her special day." It was signed by both my son and his wife, whose mother is still living. I later learned that my daughter-in-law's mother also received flowers with a card signed by both my son and his wife.

I say that the card that came with my flowers should have been signed by my son only. After all, I carried him under my heart for nine months, gave him life and raised him to manhood. I am his mother — and not the mother of the stranger he married.

My son's wife has her own mother, but she is not the mother of my son!

I know if you print this, you will receive many letters from mothers saying, "As long as I am remembered on Mother's Day, I don't care who signs the card." However, that is not the point. The point is that being called "Mother" is a sacred privilege that belongs only to the woman who has earned it. A person can have many wives — or husbands — during a lifetime, but only one mother. What do you say?

MOTHER OF ONE

DEAR MOTHER: Obviously, a person can have only one mother, but when people marry, they create a new "family," and their spouse's relatives become their relatives, traditionally as well as by law. Don't split hairs, Mother, lest you split families.

DEAR ABBY: I am 17 years old and just finished 11th grade. I flunked one semester of social studies, so now my dad has to pay $80 for me to go to night school to make it up. I didn't want to go to night school in the first place, but he says if I don't go, I can't drive, and you know how important driving is to a kid my age.

Anyway, get this, Abby, my dad is making me pay back the $80. Do you think he is being fair?

MAD

DEAR MAD: Yes. And wise, too.

DEAR ABBY: This is concerning the 13-year-old girl who thinks she's a "freak" because she has two different-colored eyes. I'd like to help her by telling her that I, too, was born with two different-colored eyes, and I was always extremely proud of them. One was green like my father's, and the other was brown like my mother's.

Many famous people had eyes of different colors. The beautiful Kay Francis, the late Gracie Allen, who was married to George Burns, Lionel Stander, the houseman on the TV series "Hart to Hart," and many others.

Never mind getting contact lenses to look like everyone else. My husband said he fell in love with my unusual eyes.

ANNA C. IN SANTA MONICA

DEAR ANNA: Since that letter appeared in my column, a surprising number of readers wrote to say that they, too, were born with two different-colored eyes. In any case, I agree, it's nothing to be embarrassed about. (We see eye to eye.)

Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

The ring bearer was Kevin

Hardy of Washington and the father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers included Darl Whitehurst, brother of the bride, Allan Kinlaw and David Jones, all of Greenville and Steve Chandler of Washington, brother of the bridegroom.

Linda Darden of Washington was mistress of ceremonies.

The bride works at Golden Corral Family Steakhouse and Bunch Trucking Co. Inc. both in Washington. The bridegroom works at Estes Express Lines and Fire Alert, both in Washington.

The couple will live in Washington after a wedding trip to Myrtle Beach, S.C.

A lawn reception was held after the ceremony. Mrs. Bobby Cherry poured punch and cake was served by Dora Singleton. Wilma Linton assisted.

MACRAME HANGER

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

Turn your favorite house plant into an exciting decorator item with an outstanding macrame plant hanger. Only the simplest knots are used. An imaginative use of rings and beads lends a distinctive air to this hanger.

To obtain directions for making the "Ring-around-the-Posey" Plant Hanger, send your request for Leaflet No. ML-7400 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler, "The Daily Reflector", P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or you may order Kit No. MK-7400 by sending a check or money order for $18.50 to Pat Trexler at the same address. Each kit contains the instructions plus all cord, beads and rings necessary to make the plant hanger. A coordinated planter bowl is available as an option for $10 extra.

Dear Pat: I saw your recent appeal for ideas for the handicapped in our newspaper. Having been a paraplegic for 32 years, I have some ideas that might be helpful. I do have the full use of my arms and hands so some of the tips will be for everyone.

For machine sewing, my husband took my sewing machine head and installed it in a counter at the exact height for my wheelchair. The machine folds down into the counter just as in a console. A section that matches the rest of the counter slips over the downed machine to make a desk.

To sew, I place the foot pedal on the counter and press it with my right elbow, thus freeing my hands to guide the fabric. Using this method, I have made everything from a Merry Widow to go under my daughter's formal to tailored

City Budget Is A Guide

The City Council has approved a $13.59 million budget for the city operations and a $50.29 million Utilities Commission budget for the 1982-83 fiscal year.

The budgets have been described as "maintenance" and "hold-the-line" budgets.

The city budget holds the tax rate of 49 cents per $100 valuation.

There are some forward moves in the budget. There is $90,000 for a merit program for city employees and an appropriation is included for five additional uniformed patrolmen. That was an expansion of the three new uniformed positions which City Manager Gail Meeks had recommended. She said the positions will be created by eliminating other positions.

There was obviously some shifting around of funds to provide for greatest needs. The $13,592,093 budget compares with the 1981-82 budget of $12.4 million.

Revenues were adjusted upward because of valuation revisions. There were declines in other areas, however.

The city will provide from revenue sharing $25,000 for the airport, $271,187 for Sheppard Memorial Library, capital outlay of $290,274 and capital improvements of $32,000.

All-in-all it seems a well prepared budget. It provides for the city's needs and services and the tax rate has been held to the previous year's level.

The budget serves as a spending guide for the city, but it will be the day-to-day supervision of spending that makes certain the taxpayers get the most for their dollars.

AND IT ISN'T EVEN HIS FIGHT!

Mubarak In Cross-Fire

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
CAIRO, Egypt—Demands from some political leaders here that President Hosni Mubarak recall his ambassador from Tel Aviv to show Egyptian anger at Israel's occupation of Lebanon never got to first base and won't if Mubarak can prevent it—at least as far ahead as he can see.

Mubarak does not dare risk any action that pro-Israeli politicians in the U.S. could exploit as a departure from what Egyptians wryly call "the spirit of Camp David." His fear of plunging Egypt back into the old vicious cycle of U.S.-Egyptian animosity far exceeds any gain that might come from Egypt giving full vent to its anger at Israel. Mubarak knows how desperately Egypt needs the U.S.

The low-key Egyptian reaction to Lebanon, undoubtedly taken into account by the shrewd men in Israel, was predictable. But that leaves the successor of Anwar Sadat on a hot spot.

Israel's occupation of Lebanon is promoting pan-Arab nationalism here, held in check since Sadat's assassination last October. Several days ago the respected leader of one of Egypt's few legal non-government parties asked for a permit to conduct a mass march. He did not get what he wanted, but a small demonstration was dispersed after minor violence. The tone was virulently anti-American.

With few outlets for expressing anger at Israel's slaughter of Palestinian and Lebanese Arabs and rising dismay over the restrained American reaction, political currents could become hard to contain. They run from Islamic fundamentalism on the right, the phenomenon that toppled the shah of Iran and now creeps south into moderate Arab regimes, to secretive Marxist cells on the left.

Mubarak also wants to bring Egypt back into the Arab world after its post-Camp David freeze. But the "no-separate-peace" pledge of Sadat, now proven so wrong by Israel's stealthy takeover of the West Bank, has given Mubarak a lot of explaining to do to Saudi Arabia, Jordan and other moderate Arab countries who ridiculed Sadat's promise.

Soft-spoken and methodical, Mubarak is moving quietly to reduce joint ventures with Israel in the wake of Lebanon. These are so far peripheral, involving youth exchanges, cultural products and trade missions. But the longer Israel remains in Lebanon, the more explosive will grow the pressures against Mubarak's business-almost-as-usual policy. That raises the spectre of an ugly change in Egyptian-Israeli relations, the first major step of which would be the withdrawal of the ambassador to Israel.

Mubarak's economic recovery plan and his country's need for capital investment can only be met today by the U.S. Arab investment money from Persian Gulf states is starting to come in, but lack of world demand for crude oil has reduced cash flows.

The deeper reason for Egypt's relatively mild public reaction is lack of power, pure and simple: Egypt is restoring its military machine, but it's a long, slow process tied to good relations with the U.S. If he displeased pro-Israeli politicians in Washington by seeming to undermine his treaty with Israel, he knows Congress can abruptly stop the flow of weapons. Mubarak aides fear that Israel works behind the scenes for just such a slowdown as added insurance for keeping Egypt impotent.

So the more-in-sorrow-than-anger official reaction here over Lebanon is a concession to the reality of Egypt's uncertain future. A display of the real emotion engendered by Lebanon was a crude cartoon prominently displayed in a Cairo newspaper after the press was unleashed during bloody Lebanon. It showed Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin disguised as Adolf Hitler with the caption: "The New Fuehrer Practices Genocide." Copyright 1982 Field Enterprises, Inc.

Clearer Voice Is Needed

President Reagan sought to reassure the nation and the world at a press conference last week as to the stability of U.S. foreign policy.

In the wake of the resignation of Secretary of State Alexander Haig the president held the conference to say he was in charge of foreign policy and there would be no change.

"I think we are progressing very well with what it is we are trying to accomplish," the president said.

Unfortunately the president didn't outline very well just what it is he is trying to accomplish. Thus world powers are left with the impression that there is drift and confusion in American policy.

Perhaps with George P. Shultz taking over things will settle down. There is no doubt, however, that our nation needs to act more decisively in foreign affairs.

Losing A Heritage

RALEIGH — Much of the state's rural heritage is rotting under the sun, the victim of abandonment and neglect, the author of a study by the Historic Preservation Society of North Carolina says. North Carolina's rural homesites are falling down and with them a significant piece of our history is being lost.

Kathleen Pepi Southern writes in "Historic Preservation in Rural North Carolina: Problems and Potentials" that while urban areas are making major efforts to restore old homes and commercial buildings, few such efforts are underway in the state's rural areas. But the greater part of the state's history lies in its rural areas. "North Carolina's history is that of an agrarian, rural people who lived and worked on small and middle-sized farms. Our farmhouses, where most of our people lived for most of our history, therefore are a major part of the valuable, irreplaceable historic architecture of our state."

Old farmhouses are being left vacant, however. Opportunity in the state's cities and reduced farmwork because of mechanization have reduced the population of the state's rural areas. Those who stay find less expensive but easier living in modern housing, like brick ranches and mobile homes. The availability of government subsidized housing, which brought 27,000 units of FmHA assisted housing to the state between 1975 and 1980, has allowed poor families to move out of old houses. Changing social patterns, where people want to live closer to town or at least to a rural community, have also led people to move out of the most remote rural areas where many old houses are.

When a house is left abandoned, it naturally decays. Sometimes vandals help it along. But even in those houses where people still live, depreciation continues. Some farm families just can't afford the tremendous maintenance expenses. An absentee landlord is unlikely to sink money into a farmhouse when he's not collecting much rent for the place to begin with.

Ms. Southern provides no statewide figures to demonstrate the extent of the problem, but she notes a 1976 study of the 29 counties of the Tar-Neuse River Basin area that showed one out of every three historically significant farmsteads is abandoned with fewer than half facing "a reasonably stable future."

Rehabilitation, while a good option in the cities, is much more difficult in the rural areas. Credit is much harder to get in small towns, especially for projects small town bankers find risky — and they find rural rehabs risky, she says. Restoring old homes is extremely expensive. Absentee landlords own many of these places and they would have little economic reason for undertaking rehabilitation. Farm families which own these homes are often "land rich and cash poor." Government agencies such as FmHA have shown little interest in rural home restoration, she says.

All is not glum concerning the future, however. Ms. Southern notes that "there are indications already that the future may be brighter than the past. Demographic patterns are beginning to show a reversal of outward migration. Government agencies appear to be encouraging the renovation of older homes. Changing land use in rural areas signal

The Lobbyists Of 1776

EDITOR'S NOTE: In the great tradition of American columnists, Art Buchwald is recycling some of his columns, whilst he and his family soak up the sun and enjoy the soft sea breeze of the Falkland Islands, otherwise known as "Maggie's Vineyard."

The Constitutional Convention is meeting in Philadelphia to write a Declaration of Independence. In the hallways are lobbyists for special interest groups, working to water it down.

Thomas Oglethorpe representing the English Tea Industry, buttonholes Thomas Jefferson and says, "Tom, I have to talk to you."

"I'm awfully busy now. I have to put the finishing touches on the abuses that George III has heaped on us."

"It will only take a few moments," Oglethorpe says, grabbing Jefferson's arm and steering him around the corner. "Do you realize that your Declaration is going to play havoc with the tea industry?"

"Well, George III shouldn't have put a tax on it without consulting us."

"I'm not talking about tea, Tommy. I'm talking about jobs. Do you know how many people will be laid off in the colonies if you people go ahead with this declaration?"

"That's just too bad."

George is not going to tax us without our consent."

"Tommy, bend down, I want to whisper something in your ear. I've been authorized to spend five million pounds by the English Tea Political Action Committee to take care of our friends in the Continental Congress. We'll buy six tables at your next fund-raiser if you eliminate the tax protest from the document."

"I can't take it out. It's a key sentence in the Declaration and the one thing that has the colonialists all up in arms."

"Tommy, the Society of English Tea Exporters is meeting in Toronto next month. How would you like to be the keynote speaker? We'll pay you 5,000 pounds, and take you there and back in the East Indies Private Horse and Carriage."

"Oglethorpe, I have to go."

"All right, Tommy, we can play hardball too. We're going to pour 100,000 pounds into Virginia to see that you don't get elected."

Jefferson turns to leave when he is stopped by General Cornwallis. "Tommy, I'm glad I ran into you. The Joint Chiefs in London are very upset that your declaration won't let us quarter our troops in people's homes here. If it passes, we're going to have to build barracks for them, and it's going to cost us a fortune that we planned to spend for flintlocks."

"I can't worry about the military. My concern is that your troops are moving in on our homes without any consent."

"That's no way to treat our boys in uniform. After all, we're keeping the French from making a pre-emptive strike on Boston."

"We don't see it that way. We consider you a foreign army."

"Tommy, if you take the quartering sentence out of the Declaration, we'll build three forts in your state, and a naval base in Portsmouth, which will add 20 million pounds a year to Virginia's economy."

"No soap, General. It stays in as I wrote it."

Cornwallis says, "Okay, Tommy, but don't come to us when you want our engineers to build you a dam."

Jefferson walks down to his office, where he is stopped by a fundamentalist minister from the Royal Majority.

"Tommy, do you realize what you're doing? This declaration is heresy against the mother church. God wants us to be part of the British Empire. You're en-

To the editor:

Russia advocates and is pushing for a Nuclear Freeze. What does a Soviet Freeze mean?

1. Russia would have military superiority forever. They have over 200 long-range missiles aimed at the free nations of Europe. These nations have missiles with range of only 400 miles. Russian missiles outnumber ours at least 3 to 1; intercontinental bombers lead 2 to 1; warships lead by 2 to 1 and tanks and artillery outgun us by 4 to 1.

2. It could sidetrack the NATO plan to deploy mid-range nuclear and cruise missiles which Russia greatly fears.

3. Soviets see more powerful U.S. missiles coming in the future and could threaten their plans.

4. Why could Russia, superior in all instruments of war, want a Nuclear Freeze? Could it be they are using this as a means to the fulfillment of their Communist objective — complete destruction of all democratic nations and domination of the world?

Who else is pushing the freeze?

1. European Concerned Citizens.
2. Many far-left and Communist sponsored groups. These groups have been so successful in Europe they are planning to send many to the American colleges to organize "peace groups," communist style.
3. Many thousands of misdirected and partially informed concerned citizens of the USA, fearful of nuclear war.
4. Far-left and Communist USA groups, directed and orchestrated by Russia.
5. 170 Congressmen have signed a resolution calling for a freeze of nuclear weapons. All but a few are doves — don't believe in strong defense and greatly trust Russia. The most vocal leader is Senator Kennedy. Are you ready to let him make your decision for a freeze?

There will be many questions such as:

1. Would Russia make or accept recommendations that do not favor them?
2. Would Russia adhere to the Freeze?
3. Would Russia allow complete verification?
4. Would Russia keep their promise? They haven't in the past.
5. How can we have peace in the world; freedom for all? Would you bet on it? You would be betting on your freedom, your life and your survival.

Harder To Make Ends Meet

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Supermarket shoppers are more worried about rising unemployment than they are about rising prices, but they still say it is harder than ever to make ends meet and many are gloomy about the future, according to a recent industry survey.

The survey was conducted by Louis Harris and Associates Inc. for the Food Marketing Institute, a trade association whose members account for about half of all grocery store sales. It was one of a series of annual studies commissioned by the institute beginning in 1974 to measure public attitudes about the economy and the grocery business.

Almost two-thirds of those questioned in the latest survey — 63 percent — said that if they had to choose between higher unemployment and rising prices, they would select joblessness as the more serious problem; 24 percent said inflation was more serious. In a similar survey last year, 50 percent said unemployment was more serious and 37 percent said rising prices were a more severe threat. (The remainder of the survey participants in both cases said they were not sure whether unemployment or inflation was worse.)

Sixty percent of the shoppers surveyed said they were finding it harder to make ends meet and 34 percent said there was no change in their personal financial situation. Only 6 percent said it was easier to make ends meet today.

The number of people who believe that prices are rising faster than they were a year ago declined from 1981 to 1982, but a substantial segment of the public still worries about the increases.

Forty-five percent of those questioned in the latest survey said prices were rising more rapidly today, compared to 72 percent of those polled a year ago.

Twenty-nine percent said, however, that prices were rising as rapidly as they had been, indicating that three-fourths of those questioned — 75 percent — do not think that inflation has eased.

Asked about their personal economic futures, 28 percent

RELIGION AND HEALTH

Anyone who believes that there is a fundamental conflict between science and religion should examine the utterances of many modern scientists and see what they really think about religion. On the whole, the day of the materialist scientist is past.

For example, the distinguished Swiss psychologist Dr. Jung declared many years ago: "It seems to me that as religion diminishes, nervous diseases notably increase. For most of my patients who have passed middle age, there is not one whose real problem is not one of religious outlook; in the last resort every one of them has lost what a living religion has at all times given its followers, and not one is really cured until he recovers his religious outlook."

Disturbed people must recover the religious outlook in order to be cured because man is a spiritual being encased in a physical body, and the being and his body are related. — Elisha Douglass remaining survey participants were split among supermarkets, the public itself, farmers, the weather, oil companies, wholesalers, manufacturers and others.

—Consumers are worried about food safety. Eighty percent said they were concerned that some ingredients added to processed foods may be harmful or unsafe to eat; 94 percent said products should carry warning labels about allegedly unsafe ingredients; and 84 percent said supermarkets should refuse to carry allegedly unsafe products. At the same time, however, 89 percent said they agreed with the statement that "The food in supermarkets is safe to eat."

—At least seven people in 10 said they were trying to economize by buying more you blame most for high food prices today — or don't you blame anyone," the biggest chunk of respondents — 44 percent — replied, "No one." Fourteen percent blamed the government, 10 percent singled out middlemen, 5 percent cited the economy in general and 4 percent said unions were responsible. The

Reagan Says Little About Haig

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is treating the resignation of Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. like classified information — details available only on a "need to know" basis. He says there is no need to be filled and no purpose to be served by saying more about it.

Reagan took that position at his nationally televised news conference and underscored it as he headed to his Santa Barbara ranch for an Independence Day vacation. What is known, on the public record, is that the secretary of state resigned and said it was because the foreign policy of the administration was faulty, and that the president said it wasn't.

Reagan said his policy is sound and will not change. "Foreign policy comes from the Oval Office and with the help of a fine secretary of state," Reagan said at the news conference. "And I've had that fine secretary of state."

He said that was so with Haig in the Cabinet, and will be with George M. Shultz, the man he chose to take over.

For all the president's expressions of appreciation and praise for Haig — "his service to our administration has been all that could be desired" — their foreign policy appraisals remain at odds.

Haig said he quit because Reagan policy had shifted away from the agreed-upon course of consistency, clarity and steadiness of purpose. Reagan said the policy has produced great successes and needs no revision.

He said that will be that so far as public explanations go. "If I thought there was something involved in this that the American people needed to know, with regard to their own welfare, then I would be frank with the American people and tell them," Reagan said. "I don't think there's anything that in any way would benefit the people to know or that will in any way affect their good judgment."

To the news conference suggestion that he was critical of the explanation when a Democratic secretary of state resigned in policy protest; Reagan said there were indications then of things the American people did need to know for their own judgment.

When Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance resigned in 1980, it was in opposition to the attempt to rescue American hostages in Iran by force, a military mission that turned out to be a failure.

Vance cited that one item in telling then-President Carter that he could no longer serve effectively. He dissented on a specific decision, said it was too significant a disagreement to permit further Cabinet service, but praised the general course of Carter administration policy.

Haig complained about the course of policy but cited no specifics. That would seem to leave more unanswered questions than the Vance resignation.

Reagan didn't have much to say about Vance at the time he quit. He was seeking the Republican presidential nomination; and had at the time ruled out campaign discussion of the hostage situation. He made an issue of it later on, but not then.

Vice President George Bush was then a Reagan rival in the GOP primaries. He said the Vance resignation showed "that there have been deep divisions inside the administration over how to reach certain objectives."

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., then challenging Carter for the Democratic nomination, said the Vance case showed the need for a Senate investigation of the hostage rescue attempt. "The nation needs to know all the relevant facts about the episode which led the secretary of state to take the extraordinary step of resigning in protest," Kennedy said then.

Reagan critics are going to be no less demanding of further explanation in the Haig resignation. They have a forum for those demands in the coming confirmation hearings on Shultz.

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, insists that Reagan owes the public an explanation. "The president says he thinks it is no business of the American people," said Glenn, a likely presidential candidate, and a member of the foreign relations panel that will hold the Shultz hearings. "I disagree. ... It is of supreme interest to the American people to know what our policies are."

That's only the beginning. There will be more of it when Congress comes back from its recess and Shultz comes up for Senate approval.

A Year Later, Hunt For A Killer Is Continuing

By GIL BROYLES
Associated Press Writer
TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Electronics millionaire Roger Wheeler had just finished a round of golf when he was gunned down last year in a country club parking lot. Although 14 people witnessed the execution-style slaying, police are still trying to find the killer.

Two Tulsa Police Department investigators remain assigned to the case full time "until they tell me they have run out of leads," said detective Maj. Stanley Glanz.

With FBI help, the investigation has ranged from Boston to Hartford, Conn., and Miami.

"They tell me they're a long way from running out," Glanz said, conceding the chances of solving a case "diminish greatly after the first week."

Wheeler was chairman of the board of Tulsa-based Telex Corp. and also owned jai alai frontons in Connecticut and Florida.

A burly, bearded gunman shot Wheeler in the face with a .38-caliber handgun as he sat in his luxury car at Southern Hills Country Club on May 27, 1981.

The killer fled to a waiting automobile, where another man was at the wheel, and the vehicle disappeared into rush hour traffic.

Detectives say a bungled robbery attempt, an attempted kidnapping or a hired execution still remain possibilities in Wheeler's death.

Neither interviews with witnesses nor the search for a car — spurred by authorities' belief that they had a partial license plate number — bore fruit.

Glanz said police spent "probably two months running down tag numbers of possible cars."

When the early investigation produced no results, Telex offered a nationally publicized $100,000 reward. Police set up a bank of telephones to handle what was expected to be an avalanche of calls.

Glanz said fewer than 50 were received — most in the first two days after the reward was offered and none providing substantial help.

The original 90-day reward deadline came and went. A 90-day extension expired last November.

An 11-man task force first assigned to the case dwindled to two. Private investigators hired by Telex were dismissed after their investigation failed to turn up a killer.

"We feel if it was the local criminal element, we would have heard something by now," Glanz said.

The FBI office in Tulsa has one person assigned to the case, said spokesman Gene Pogue, adding that leads are still being pursued but no major breaks have developed.

Glanz said police have received "50 or more" calls from people who gave authorities a name and said "this guy probably did it."

"We have maybe 10 like that still to talk to," Glanz said.

Award Given Senior At FCHS

Scott Cannon of Farmville Central High School received a national scholastic award of merit for excellence in the social sciences.

Sponsored by Collins and Aikman Corp., the award is presented to the graduating senior with the highest academic standing in his school. The award, which includes a certificate and $100 savings bond, was established in 1978 by the corporation at high schools serving its plants' communities.

The 188-page study suggests ways rural preservation can be encouraged. The N.C. ### NORTH CAROLINA Farm Tips

From Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., N.A.

By Dr. J. W. Pou

A reduction in the price of raw milk that became effective March 29, "will aggravate the already tight cash flow problems" on North Carolina dairy farms, says a dairy marketing economist at N.C. State University.

"Dairy farmers everywhere are having a rough time, and those in North Carolina are no exception," said economist G.A. Benson.

In an unusual development, the State Milk Commission announced that the minimum price to farmers for milk utilized in Class I (fluid sales) will be reduced by 50 cents per 100 pounds for the second quarter of the year.

The reduction was from $16.28 to $15.78 per 100 pounds—or from $1.40 to $1.357 per gallon. This is a cut of 4.3 cents per gallon.

Continuing studies by Benson indicate profits from dairy farming in North Carolina over the past two years have been low and most operators have been caught in a cash flow squeeze.

Many farmers apparently have stayed in dairying, even though unprofitable, only because they had no choice. Farm prices generally have been depressed for the past two years, and off-farm employment opportunities have been limited.

Low prices for utility cows have discouraged dairy herd culling, and milk production has increased substantially to record levels.

In 1981 Tar Heel dairymen increased their volume of milk marketings by 21 million pounds or 1.5 percent as compared with the year before, but Class I or fluid milk sales to consumers declined by 30 million pounds or 2.7 percent, according to preliminary figures from the N.C. Milk Commission.

When production outstrips sales, a smaller proportion of farm milk is utilized in Class I and a larger proportion goes into Class II (manufactured products). This means a lower blend price to farmers.

The North Carolina Class II price, adjusted monthly, ranged from $12.73 to $12.59 per 100 pounds during 1981, said Neill B. Sinclair Jr. of the Milk Commission staff. The Class I price was raised to $16.28 last July.

The proportion of N.C. milk going into Class I or fluid use decreased from 81.9 percent in 1980 to 78.7 percent last year, Sinclair said. This decline offset part of the July price increase for Class I.

The average blend price received by Tar Heel dairy farmers for their total grade A milk supply in 1981 was $14.88, up from $13.96 a year earlier.

Benson said the increase of 92 cents in the blend price was inadequate to cover the rise in farm production costs. As a result, he said, most of the state's dairy farmers ended the year facing difficult cash flow problems.

At one time North Carolina had more than 5,000 grade A dairymen. As of last December the number was down to 1,249.

The immediate outlook for dairymen is "not encouraging," Benson said.

"Furthermore," he said, "the dairy provisions of the 1981 farm bill will have a moderating influence on the rate of increase in the North Carolina farm price of milk. Only modest increases can be expected over the next several years."

The Federal Dairy Price Support Program was retained in the new Farm Act, but the levels of support were hotly debated. In the compromise that emerged, supports were approved at these minimum levels: $13.10 through fiscal 1982, which ends Sept. 30; and $13.25, $14 and $14.60 for fiscal years 1983-85 inclusive.

Minimum supports will be in effect as long as large dairy surpluses continue and net federal expenditures for the program exceed $1 billion a year. When and if surpluses are reduced and federal costs go down, higher supports are authorized.

Benson said it's possible that debate on the farm bill will be reopened and changes made to reduce federal expenditures for dairy supports. Such a development, he said, would make the outlook even less favorable for dairy farmers.

Making Money From Thin Air

CEDAR HILL, Texas (AP) — This north Texas town is so high that it makes money out of thin air.

At 870 feet above sea level and the highest point for 500 miles on a line between the Gulf of Mexico and Oklahoma City, Cedar Hill is home to television and radio towers that produce millions of dollars in tax revenue over the years.

The seven antennas account for 10 percent of the town's total property tax valuation of $144 million.

"It's the only thing we've got," says Turk Cannady, mayor pro tem of this town of 7,500 people.

City Councilwoman Gail Douglas says she would welcome more antennas. "We get to tax them, but you don't have to protect them with police," she said.

The antennas carry signals for the major television stations in the Dallas-Fort Worth area and for most of the radio stations. Five of the antennas are 1,550 feet tall. The first tower was built in 1955. By 1957, Federal Aviation Administration officials asked the city to declare itself an "antenna farm."

"The idea is that air traffic can dodge half a dozen towers if they're all in a cluster," Cannady explained.

Hurtado Elected President Of Mexico

By ISAACA LEVI Associated Press Writer MEXICO CITY (AP) — Government party candidate Miguel de la Madrid Hurtado was elected president of Mexico, the Interior Ministry announced today. Opposition parties said they did not dispute the victory, but complained of isolated irregularities at the polls. "We can announce that Miguel de la Madrid took a lead over the other candidates in such a way as we are certain that he has obtained a majority by a wide margin," said Enrique Olivares Santana, the ministry's secretary. However, officials said election returns were arriving too slowly to provide statistics on the scope of the victory. The opposition cited reports of stuffed ballot boxes and election violence, including the alleged kidnapping of four poll watchers and the shooting of another. But none disputed the ruling party's victory in Sunday's election. "These violations were not particularly grave because they were isolated," said Jose Minondo Garfias the opposition National Action Party's representative on the national electoral commission. "The election was not a farce," said Carlos Sanchez Cardenas, the socialist coalition's commission delegate. "It was a serious and important step toward a more democratic system." De la Madrid agreed in a videotaped statement issued shortly after his victory was announced. "The overwhelming majority of voters demonstrated their decision to fortify democracy," he declared.

He said the turnout was abundant and the election "peaceful and clean." De la Madrid, a 47-year-old Harvard graduate who promised voters economic austerity and a fight against rampant corruption, was the personal choice of incumbent President Jose Lopez Portillo.

Thousands of de la Madrid's supporters staged a jubilant celebration at the headquarters of the Institutional Revolutionary Party (PRI) Sunday night, before any official results were known. There was no word on why results were delayed. Rumors — all unconfirmed — circulated about impossibly large voter turnouts in a country where voting has been treated with cynicism.

De La Madrid ran against six opposition candidates, but was assumed to be the future president since being chosen by Lopez Portillo, his political mentor, last September. The PRI has not lost a major election since it was founded in 1929, although it often has faced opposition accusations of fraud. Lopez Portillo's six-year term ends Dec. 1 and, by law, he could not seek re-election.

The party also holds 300 of 400 House seats and all 64 in the Senate in the outgoing Congress. There was no immediate word on results in voting for a new Congress, nor in the balloting for governor of southeastern Chiapas state.

The Communist-led United Socialist coalition claimed four of its election observers were kidnapped in Hidalgo State and another observer was shot and wounded near a polling station in the state of Puebla. There were reports of ballot box problems and other complaints in Jalisco, Puebla and several other states.

The Federal Electoral Commission said it will investigate the charges of election violence and irregularities.

How many of the country's 31.6 million registered voters cast ballots remained in doubt. Government officials claimed the turnout was "fairly good" while some opposition spokesmen called it "low."

Government spokesmen said the balloting was "absolutely tranquil" throughout the country. About 100,000 soldiers guarded polling places and another 400,000 police and security agents were deployed to maintain order.

Sunday's election was the first time opposition parties were allowed to have their presidential candidates and party emblems printed on the ballot — a critical factor in this largely illiterate nation. Lopez Portillo, alarmed by growing absenteeism at the polls, enacted the reform in 1978.

Previously, voters had to write in the name of opposition candidates, who on many occasions complained of ballot-stuffing. Lopez Portillo ran unopposed in 1976 because a number of opposition parties claimed it was useless to field candidates if PRI was assured of victory anyway. In state elections during the past two years, the voter turnout dropped as low as 10 percent. De la Madrid's immediate challenge after he takes office Dec. 1 is to steer this oil-rich nation of 70 million people out of one of its worst economic slumps since World War II.

He has promised to do this by cutting down on government spending, legislating to help distribute wealth more among the working classes, and leading a "moral renewal" to cut down on corruption.

Among the nation's economic problems are 60 percent inflation, chronic unemployment and a $60 billion foreign debt. The government imposed a 40 percent devaluation of the nation's peso currency earlier this year.

Reform For Argentina Military And Economy

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — The government shut down banks, foreign exchanges and the stock market today to avoid "creation of false hopes or speculation" pending announcement of major economic policy changes.

Argentine newspapers, news agencies and broadcasters predicted the new economy minister, Jose Maria Dagnino Pastore, would announce the measures today or tonight.

The government refused to comment.

Dagnino Pastore is a moderately conservative economist who was economy minister under a previous military regime in 1969. He was expected to announce a devaluation of the Argentine peso, now pegged at 15,700 to the dollar at the official exchange and at 27,000 to the dollar on the black market.

The devaluation, aimed at stopping a decline in exports may be accompanied by import restrictions.

Dagnino Pastore also was expected to announce pay increases for Argentine workers to stimulate internal demand. Wages have been controlled by the government since the military came to power by toppling civilian President Isabel Peron in 1976.

The Economy Ministry announced Sunday afternoon that a "banking and exchange holiday" would be in effect today throughout this nation of 28 million.

The order was designed to "harmonize the measures that are to be implemented and, fundamentally, to allow the entire community to learn them at the same time, avoiding possible creation of false hopes or speculation," the ministry said.

Mayor Got Jail Stay, As Asked

MIAMI (AP) — A suburban mayor got exactly what he wanted from a Dade County Circuit judge — a day behind bars.

In the heat of a recent argument over a hearing date in a divorce case, which South Miami Mayor Jack Block was handling as a lawyer, Block invited Judge Jon Gordon to cite him for contempt of court.

After calming down, Block then apologized, but it did no good.

On Friday, Gordon granted Block a delay, giving him an opportunity to appeal, but the mayor decided to get it over with.

"He checked in at 7 a.m. and left around 1 (p.m. Saturday)," said Luis Mateo, an officer at the Dade County Stockade.

"By order of Judge Gordon, we were supposed to treat him as best as possible," Mateo added.

So the mayor was put in a carpeted, private office equipped with a desk, typewriter and television. Block was left alone to do some paperwork and watch the Wimbledon women's tennis final, Mateo said.

Space Shuttle 'Just A Hoax'

LANCASTER, Calif. (AP) — That was no space shuttle, that was a hoax, says Charles K. Johnson, president of the Flat Earth Society.

"This airplane landed, but it's just a simple, stupid old airplane carried piggyback and dropped over Lancaster ... It hasn't orbited the Earth — that we know," Johnson said after the shuttle landed Sunday at nearby Edwards Air Force Base. "Nobody in the whole Lancaster area believes it's for real."

Johnson, who claims the Flat Earth Research Society International has 1,600 members, said no satellites are orbiting the globe and man has never gone into space.

The sun is nothing more than a small light about 32 miles across and 3,000 miles high, following a circular course over a flat circle called Earth, said Johnson.

INCREASED GIVING CINCINNATI — Procter & Gamble has announced plans to increase its contributions to institutions of higher education by $2 million this year, raising its total support of colleges and universities to $7 million. These are unrestricted gifts, and do not include other funding for research.

Lebanon Provides Test For New Israeli Weapons

By RICHARD PYLE
Associated Press Writer
TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The superiority of Israeli weaponry against Soviet-supplied Syrians and Palestinian guerrillas during the invasion of Lebanon will reverberate in the war rooms of NATO and the Warsaw Pact.

Israeli field officers were astonished at their battlefield successes, especially at what they say was the Air Force's downing of over 80 Syrian MiGs and destruction of 20 Soviet-made anti-aircraft missile batteries. These batteries are similar to the air defense system that protects the Soviet Union.

In ground fighting, too, the Arab forces were badly overwhelmed, the Israelis say. Total Israeli losses have not been disclosed, but they were nothing close to the more than 300 tanks that the Israelis said the Syrians lost in at least two separate tank battles.

Hulks of the Syrians' Soviet-made tanks — many of them knocked out with single shots — still litter the El Fatar Valley, mountain roads near Jezzine, and on the strategically important Beirut-Damascus highway.

Although Western military experts here are still waiting for the Israelis' own evaluation, they say the fighting clearly has implications that go far beyond the Lebanese battlefield. The Israelis combat-tested some weapons for the first time and in some cases against Soviet equipment not previously encountered.

Just as Britain's Falklands war against Argentina taught the British a great deal about the vulnerability of ships to missile attack, the Lebanon laboratory will help NATO forces know what to expect in a conventional war with the Soviet-supplied Warsaw Bloc armies in Europe.

The destruction of the Syrian missile batteries was a top priority and "an astounding success," said Maj. Gen. Aharon Yariv, former chief of military intelligence. "It means that Syria does not have an effective air defense — and that the Russians must be very worried."

Military observers in Tel Aviv say reports of Soviet AN-2 cargo planes and a senior Russian general arriving in Damascus almost certainly mean that Syria's losses are being replenished — but with the same SA-6 and more advanced SA-9 missiles that did not survive Israeli air raids or knock out any Israeli aircraft.

The Israelis aren't saying how they achieved their successes against the Syrian missile batteries, but it is known their pilots use a mixture of electronic counter-measures to jam radar and "smart bombs" to home in enemy missiles.

The Israeli fighters scattered flares to confuse heat-seeking missiles, and the pilots flew evasive maneuvers to strike enemy launch sites without being hit themselves.

Some of these methods were employed in the 1973 Mideast War when Syrian and Egyptian missiles took a high toll of Israeli planes. Since then two new U.S.-built aircraft, the F-15 Eagle and the F-16, have been added to the Israeli inventory.

One source said the F-15's advanced "look-down, shoot-down" radar system probably was very effective against the mobile missile sites.

The technology on the planes themselves was aided by the U.S.-made Hawkeye radar reconnaissance planes that are said to be able to track over 200 aircraft at one time and sort out enemy and friendly planes with the aid of computers.

While much of this technology is American-made, Israel prides itself on improving most imported weaponry while adapting it to the Mideast battlefield. It has its own highly developed arms industry that turns out the Kfir jet fighter, the Merkava (chariot) battle tank, electronic gear, artillery guns and shells, anti-tanks shells and small arms.

The mix of Israeli and American technology will make it difficult for outside analysts to determine clearly how well Western arms would fare against Soviet equipment in the European arena. And there is the additional question of what impact Israeli strategy and top-notch pilots and tank commanders had on the battles.

Still, the questions will be asked, and one main area of inquiry will be the performance of an anti-tank helicopter. Israeli pilots flew the latest American AH-1 Cobra helicopter with tank-killing TOW, or wire-guided, missiles. American analysts will want a critique of the Cobra and the TOW, which can hit a target at two miles.

Israeli armored units used the Merkava alongside U.S.-built M-60 Pattons and British Centurions against Soviet-built T-55s, T-62s and the latest T-72, which was touted as one of the best tanks in the world.

Defense Minister Ariel Sharon said at least nine of the T-72s were among the hundreds of Syrian tanks knocked out by air strikes and Israeli armor and guns.

Israeli officers like to claim that the 56-ton Merkava, brainchild of armor designer Israel Tal, is the world's best. With an exceptionally low profile, diesel engine in front and special armor design, it stresses crew protection — in keeping with Israeli concern for casualties.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin likes to say that Israel pays the United States back for its considerable financial aid with combat intelligence.

"It's a two-way street," he reportedly said at a heated meeting with U.S. senators in Washington last month. "We do more for you ... We damaged and destroyed Soviet T-72 tanks, which all of NATO thought were impregnable. We destroyed more than 20 Soviet surface-to-air missiles without losing a plane ... Someday we will tell you how we did it."

Now Top Importer Of French Cognac

NEW YORK (AP) — The United States now imports more cognac from France than does any other country, reports Jean Marie Beulque, spokesman for the Bureau National du Cognac.

All cognacs are a blend of brandies of different years, from the Cognac region. Unlike wine, cognac does not age or change once it is bottled, he points out. All aging takes place in oak barrels beforehand.

The way to judge the age of the contents is to understand the system of labeling, says Beulque, who offers this explanation:

— Three stars means that the average aging period of the cognac is five to nine years. — V.O., V.S.O.P. (abbreviations of the English words "Very Old" and "Very Superior Old Pale") mean that the average age of the cognac used in the blend is from 12 to 20 years.

— V.V.S.O.P. and X.O. are terms applied to cognacs that contain a high percentage of cognac that has aged 20, 30, 40 or more years.

The older the cognac, the more expensive it is likely to be, Beulque says, adding that although cognac, like wine, is made from grapes, the brandy is a concentration of characteristics and thus the alcoholic content is approximately three times that of wine.

Chaotic Nightmare In Britain

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — The second rail strike in as many weeks forced hundreds of thousands of British commuters into their cars today, threatening a repeat of the chaotic rush-hour nightmare that gripped London and other major British cities last week.

"We're expecting a great deal of congestion," said a spokesman for the British Automobile Association. Engineers of British Rail, the financially-ailing state-run railroad, began the open-ended strike Sunday. But the first major impact was expected today, the first workday of the week.

The 11,000-mile rail network serves about 2 million Britons a day during the workweek, including 400,000 commuters who work in the capital.

The strikers, whole belong to the 27,000 member Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen (ASLEF), are protesting the railroad's plans to institute a new system of flexible work schedules today in an effort to cut overtime costs.

Rail officials said about 100 of the network's 15,000 passenger and freight trains were run Sunday by engineers opposed to their union's strike or by men from a rival union.

British Rail officials said they would have to wait to see if enough engineers show up today to provide skeleton service, or whether operations must be shut down completely.

The railroad was struck last Monday and Tuesday by another union in a pay dispute.

David Howell, the transport minister in Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative government, denounced the new strike as "immensely damaging" to the future of the railroad, already expected to lose the equivalent of $240 million this year. But Howell said the government will not intervene in the dispute.

At issue is a series of six productivity improvements, the most controversial of which is the change from the current eight-hour standard shift adopted in 1919 to a flexible shift of seven to nine hours.

The engineers staged a series of 17 one- and two-day strikes earlier this year to protest the proposed change. The issue was submitted to an arbitration panel, whose recommendations were later rejected by both sides.

"This time, a solution must be found, not by blur and postponement but by the clear introduction of common-sense working methods long accepted elsewhere," Howell said Sunday.

"They want to smash my union," union chief Ray Buckton claimed. He said the railroad had declared war on his men.

Eric Heffer, a leading member of the opposition Labor Party, said the Thatcher government wants to "destroy not only ASLEF but all trade unionism."

Mrs. Thatcher denounced the strike, telling a meeting of her Conservative Party followers that the engineers should recognize the new spirit in Britain generated by its victory in the Falkland Islands war with Argentina.

"We have ceased to be a nation in retreat," she said. "We have instead a new-found confidence, born in the economic battles at home and tested and found true 8,000 miles away."

The fewer than 2,000

engineers in the 177,000-member National Union of Railwaymen, which has accepted the new schedules, are divided over the ASLEF strike. Some refuse to cross ASLEF picket lines while others ignore them.

Critical Of Ambassador

NEW YORK (AP) — Former diplomat George W. Ball says U.N. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick "talks to heads of state as if they were children" and would have been fired by "any experienced president."

Interviewed in the current edition of People magazine, Bush also questioned the credentials of George Shultz, the president's choice to replace Alexander Haig as secretary of state.

"He has no direct diplomatic experience, though he has been secretary of the treasury and is on familiar terms with many European leaders," he said.

Ball, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations in 1968, called Mrs. Kirkpatrick "unsuitable" for the job, saying she "has a tendency to behave as if she were still lecturing college classes."

"I've seen her talk to heads of state as if they were children. Any experienced president would have fired her."

Ball, 72, served as undersecretary of state for former Democratic Presidents John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson. He is now a senior managing director at the investment firm of Lehman Brothers Kuhn Loeb.

He also criticized President Reagan, saying his views on foreign policy "lack any central concept. They consist of bits and pieces of slogans and tags that he developed in the years when he was giving speeches all over the country; they are filled with contradictions."

Educators Seek Answer In Test Scoring Gaps

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — State educators want to know the reasons behind large-scale differences in the results of annual standardized tests taken by first and second graders in the state — and why third, sixth and ninth graders are getting lower reading scores.

Test results presented last week to the state Board of Education showed that students statewide were scoring above the national average and had made gains since last year. The results also showed that North Carolina's first graders ranked 22 percentage points higher in math and reading and second graders 16 percentage points higher.

However, students in the third, sixth and ninth grades had lower scores on reading portions of the tests than they did on math or language tests.

The gap narrowed to seven points in third and sixth grade and only one point in ninth grade.

Ninth graders statewide did better in spelling and language than in both reading and math, however.

The state board is interested in the differences in scores and is expected to discuss the matter at its next meeting, according to chairman Dr. David Bruton.

"I just don't believe the figures in grades one and two. But I'm going to try to have my report explain what's happening in grades three, six and nine," said Dr. Bill Brown, a special assistant for research in the state Department of Public Instruction who is preparing a report on the trends.

Teachers are attributing the wider margin in lower grades to tests and scoring methods used and hope to narrow the reading-math gap by using another type of test.

When the General Assembly mandated the annual testing program in 1977, it specified that "criterion-referenced" tests be given in first and second grades so classroom teachers could use results for diagnostic purposes, said Brown.

The tests measure a student's mastery of specific skills and don't compare students to others tested.

Third, sixth and ninth graders take California Achievement tests, however, which are designed to compare each student's performance to the rest of the group.

"Criterion-referenced tests also measure a much narrower range of items than norm-referenced tests. The items are not very difficult and not very easy," said Mary Hoyle, director of psychological services for the Greensboro City Schools.

Criterion-referenced tests were not designed to give students' grade level equivalents and percentile ranks. But at North Carolina's request, the test publisher projected them by devising a formula equating their scores to those of norm-referenced tests.

Brown questions the formula.

"We've looked at the process they use and can see reasons why the math scores would be inflated," Brown said.

Test publisher CTB—McGraw-Hill of Monterey, Calif., defends the accuracy of the method used.

"North Carolina has asked us to look at that linking method. We looked, and there weren't any problems," said Robert Long, the company's director of marketing information services.

North Carolina is the only state to use those tests in the lower grades statewide, making it difficult to compare the results to those in other states, Long said.

freely people behave on the streets," he said. "They dress as they please and go barefooted ... Although I would feel very uncomfortable behaving this way, it is nevertheless very impressive to me."

Frolov, 51, met his wife, Lois Becker Frolov, 27, in Moscow in 1980 when she was an American exchange student. They married in Moscow in May 1981, but Frolov was unable to emigrate until after the hunger strike. He arrived in Chicago on June 20.

Crowd Of Half-Million Hailed Shuttle Arrival

By LAURINDA KEYS
Associated Press Writer
EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — A half-million people cheered, flags waved, a band played and politicians debated in a Fourth of July celebration where the main attraction was the skyrockets — two space shuttles crossing paths on a desert air base.

Residents of four counties along Columbia's landing path Sunday morning said its two window-rattling sonic booms reminded them of giant firecrackers. Sheriff's deputies said the booms triggered some burglar alarms and prompted some phone calls inquiring about an earthquake, but apparently caused no damage.

Most of the spectators were clustered amid camps, tents and cars on a desert field four miles from where Columbia landed at Edwards Air Force Base. Because of exceptionally clear skies, many could see the descent all the way — and everybody got to see the newest shuttle, Challenger, which left two hours later on a piggyback flight to Cape Canaveral atop a jumbo jet.

"All right, America!" one enthusiast yelled as the shuttle landed.

"It's the most exciting thing since I had my five kids," a woman said.

"What makes me so happy is to see so many flags flying," said Grace Brown, of Carlsbad, N.M., who was also celebrating her 77th birthday. "It shows we're Americans and that we care."

Across the lake bed, President Reagan joined about 30,000 invited guests of NASA for a closer look at the aeronautical wonders. He hailed the landing as "magnificent," and called in a speech for "establishing a more permanent presence in space."

But he did not endorse the $9 billion manned space station or the fifth shuttle that NASA wants, and for that he was promptly criticized by Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.

Brown, the Democratic candidate for U.S. Senate in California, called Reagan's view of the future an "accountant's approach to space — too much penny-pinching — while Russia, Europe and France are catching up with us."

His Republican opponent this November, San Diego Mayor Pete Wilson, defended Reagan's space policy, saying "it's good for California in terms of employment and it's good for the nation in terms of scientific advances and security."

Among the VIPs present was former astronaut Edwin "Buzz" Aldrin, the second man to walk on the moon. He was following the flight with binoculars and gave a running play-by-play to his friend, actress Stephanie Powers of TV's "Hart to Hart" series.

Dental Implant Is Last Resort

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Hickory dentist Paul Homoly specializes in putting some bite back into the mouths of hundreds of toothless people from North Carolina and other states.

Homoly, 33, is the only dentist in the state who is certified by the American Academy of Implant Dentistry. He specializes in making dental implants, using metal rods to attach porcelain teeth to the jawbone.

In the past four years, he has implanted teeth in the mouths of about 200 patients from all over the country.

"Many of the people I have worked on had lost all or most of their teeth in accidents or through poor dental care," Homoly said. "For most of them, dental implants were the only answer because they couldn't wear dentures. Without dental implants, they would have been doomed to go through the rest of their lives in pain from dentures that didn't fit or not smiling because they had no teeth."

According to Homoly, many toothless people can't wear dentures because the bones in their mouths have eroded. Homoly uses two implant procedures, depending on the condition of the patient's bones.

If the bones are in good shape, Homoly anchors small nails on blades made of titanium implanted into the jawbone. Then teeth are permanently fastened to the metal. When the jawbone is eroded, he puts in a one-piece stainless steel device to hold the teeth.

In either case, Homoly says implants restore at least 80 percent of normal function to his patients.

"For once, they can eat what they want without pain or embarrassment, they can exercise without worrying about their ill-fitting dentures falling out, they can lead a normal life," he said.

Implants usually cost about $3,000 and last at least 10 years. The procedure involves about eight trips to the dentist, after which patients care for the implants as they would their own teeth.

Although dental implants are sanctioned by the American Academy of Implant Dentistry, the American Dental Association has not given its official approval of the process. Homoly says the association is studying the technique and has reported it to be in a "tentative but hopeful stage."

Arrested On Assault Count

Greenville police today arrested Thomas Ray Jr. of Erwin, on assault on a female charges following a 2:30 a.m. incident at the Subway Restaurant on E. Fifth Street in which he allegedly bit a 22-year-old woman on the breast.

Officers quoted the victim as saying Ray, seated with two other men in the restaurant, got up from his table and walked to the table where she was seated, leaned over her and bit her on the right breast.

Ray then allegedly ran back to the table where he had been seated, took a $10 bill from one of his companions and said "I just won $10." Ray then allegedly ran from the restaurant.

Ray was arrested on the charge about 5 a.m., following an investigation of the incident.

33 Arrests In Cockfight Raid

MARTIN, Ga. (AP) — A raid on an illegal cockfight netted 33 people from three states, along with 35 live roosters and four dead birds, authorities said.

Those arrested in Sunday's raid were from Georgia, South Carolina and North Carolina, said Franklin County sheriff's deputies. No gambling money was recovered, and some of the participants fled.

All those arrested were booked on a misdemeanor charge of cockfighting, which covers both participation and observation, then released.

Challenger Is Carried On To New Florida Base

By PAUL RECER
AP Aerospace Writer
SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Challenger, America's second spacefaring shuttle, flies on to Florida today after a Fourth of July refueling stopover witnessed by 50,000 spectators at Ellington Air Force Base.

Johnson Space Center, just a few minutes after astronauts Tom Mattingly and Henry Hartsfield arrived here. Only hours before, the astronauts landed Columbia, Challenger's sister ship, in California to end a seven-day spaceflight.

The 747, shouldering the 157,000-pound spacecraft, made a magnificent flyover at just 500 feet, triggering cheers. Dozens of astronauts who may make up future crews for the stubby-winged spacecraft were in the applauding crowd.

Crowds lined almost a mile of the Ellington main runway as Challenger and the 747 roared just overhead. The mated craft banked, circled and landed smoothly.

Mattingly and Hartsfield, wearing blue flight suits and baseball-style caps, watched from a platform as the 747 taxied past. The spacecraft, mounted on braces atop the transport plane, towered over the spectators.

"That's what everybody came to see," said Mattingly.

Earlier at Edwards Air Force Base in California, Challenger waited beside a runway while Mattingly and Hartsfield brought Columbia to a pinpoint touchdown on a cement runway. The landing ended the fourth and final test flight of the space shuttle system and cleared the way for operational flights to begin.

President Reagan greeted the returning astronauts and then gave the word for the 747 ferry-transport to take off. The transport plane streaked down the runway and rose majestically. It circled and then made a low flyover while the President, Mrs. Reagan, a group of astronauts and more than 500,000 spectators watched. A band played "God Bless America" and Reagan led the singing.

Challenger will undergo final outfitting at the Kennedy Space Center in Florida and is scheduled to make its first voyage into space next January. It is a two-day mission that will include launching of two satellites into orbit.

The spacecraft appears to be a twin of Columbia, but actually is an improved version. Challenger's on-board systems are designed for use on 100 missions. Columbia, a development model, must be refitted for long-term use.

Challenger also has accommodations for five additional crewmen. It has two seats more on the flight deck than Columbia and an additional three in another compartment.

The new spacecraft weighs 2,000 pounds less than Columbia, which means it can carry that much more payload. Challenger was completed last week at the Rockwell International plant in Palmdale, near Edwards Air Force base. It was towed to Edwards on Wednesday and prepared for its long ferry ride across the country. After delivering Challenger to Florida, the ferry airplane will return to Edwards, where it will be Columbia's turn. The spacecraft, veteran now of four orbital flights, will be flown to Florida later this month.

Labor Secretary Donovan To Stay As Long As He's Wanted

By MERRILL HARTSON
AP Labor Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Raymond J. Donovan is vowing to remain as secretary of labor for as long as he and President Reagan "feel that I'm productive. And that could be six and a half more years."

In his first wide-ranging interview since a special prosecutor concluded there was "insufficient credible evidence" for indictment on allegations of past ties to mobsters, Donovan said he and his family want to forget "the ugly past."

But Donovan, 51, also acknowledged in the interview in his Labor Department office late last week that members of the Senate Labor Committee are unlikely to let him put the ordeal behind him.

Asked about the planned resumption of Senate hearings on his case, President Reagan's embattled Cabinet officer replied:

"If they feel their duty is not done, that's their judgment to make. I intend to be secretary of labor and do this job well and get on with the business of helping the president turn this country around." Donovan would not discuss the allegations in the interview, describing his confrontation with unnamed accusers and disbelieving congressmen as "most grueling."

But he did say that with Reagan's fresh vote of confidence, he's optimistic about chances for surviving the firestorm resulting from the allegations involving his conduct as a New Jersey construction executive before coming to Washington.

"I have never felt insecure," he said. "The president's words, nevertheless, were extremely encouraging to me and my family. He once and for all, in my view, has made it clear that I am his secretary of labor."

All 46 Democrats in the Senate demanded recently that Donovan step aside until the cloud hanging over his office was removed. The Democrats did not withdraw that plea last week, even though a special prosecutor in New York issued a thousand-page report concluding there was insufficient evidence to indict the labor secretary.

Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, chairman of the panel, has indicated new hearings will be held to examine whether the FBI withheld from the committee information on allegations against Donovan that was needed in the confirmation process.

Sen. Daniel Quayle, R-Ind., has said, "If he (Donovan) stays on, we have no alternative" but to continue the investigation.

"Am I angry, yes," Donovan said. "I am realistic to know that my reputation has been besmirched. But at the same time, my character, I believe, has been strengthened. So my wife and family and I continue to look to the future rather than to the ugly past."

"My feelings at this moment are more for the country and our system than it is for me or my family," he said. "If I can use the word 'tragedy' here, it may well be that through the sensationalism that this investigation had taken on, an un-auditable amount of people — good, talented Americans — may hesitate when called upon to serve this country."

Donovan said he doesn't buy contentions that his ordeal "comes with the turf."

"The fearful thing is that it is a phrase that seems to be a philosophy that is accepted in this city, which should be a shining city on a hill for all the world to see..." he said.

He said he views "with some resentment" assertions by his detractors that, aside from the allegations of one-time ties to organized crime, the labor secretary has been inept in running his department.

"I am proud of the job I have done and prouder of my people," Donovan said.

Leon Silverman, the New York lawyer who was appointed special prosecutor to investigate the allegations against Donovan, refused last week to characterize his findings as exonerating the labor secretary.

Silverman said the allegations "by their sheer numerosity, must occasion a raised eyebrow." But he emphasized that no proof could be found for the allegations.

Farm Scene

By LEROY JAMES
County Extension Chairman

What's ahead for farmers in the United States? Will the financial pinch become more painful? Or will the terms of trade turn more in favor of agriculture?

Of course, no one has precise answers to such queries. But there is some basis for optimism. The reasons become apparent from a review of longtime trends of agricultural output and population growth.

World agricultural output gained at an average annual rate of 3.3 percent in the 1950's; 2.6 percent in the 1960's and 2.1 percent in the 1970's.

Most of those increases in production were achieved by boosting yields per acre. But now gains in yields are becoming more difficult to achieve. Irrigation water is more costly, as is fuel, fertilizer, herbicides and insecticides. Gains from plant breeding are smaller.

There has been some increase in acreage of land under cultivation. Most of the new land, however, is subject to drought and erosion.

World population has increased sharply. The increase was estimated at a little more than 2 percent per year during the 1950's. There were about 50 million more hungry people to feed every year.

Need for farm products has increased even faster than population. A larger proportion of the world population today is well-fed than in the 1950's. They want, and can afford to buy, more red meat, poultry, eggs and dairy products. The demand for livestock has increased about twice as fast as the demand for grains for human food.

During the 1950's, world agriculture output per person increased at an average annual rate of about 1.3 percent. During the next decade the gain was only .6 percent. Through the 1970's, this figure dropped to .3 percent.

While the trends in agricultural output and population growth apparently favor farmers, some adverse economic developments should be recognized. Farmers are well aware that the drastic increase in the price of petroleum sharply boosted costs of fuels and many other farm supplies.

In summary, farmers in recent years have gone through an unusual series of unfavorable economic developments. Looking ahead, it seems likely that increasing foreign demand for U.S. farm products will exert positive influences on both volume and prices.

Increasing Registering

WASHINGTON (AP) — The director of the Selective Service is expecting a rush to register now that the government is beginning to prosecute young men for failing to sign up for the standby military draft.

As a result, the government doesn't expect it will have to prosecute all of the half-million men who have so far failed to register, said Maj. Gen. Thomas K. Turnage in a copyright story in this week's issue of U.S. News & World Report.

In the first such case under the present registration system, an indictment charging Benjamin J. Sasway with "knowingly and willfully" failing to register was returned last week in U.S. District Court in San Diego, Calif. Conviction carries a maximum sentence of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

"When the first cases are tried, we expect that a great many who have not registered will come in and sign up," Turnage said in the interview. "It has been our experience over the past two years that every time something happens that calls attention to the registration requirement, many of those who have not registered come in."

Turnage said some of the first men being tried "are those who have been reported by neighbors with sons who did register." Other "individuals will be prosecuted who have written us saying, 'I am so-and-so, and I don't intend to register because of matters of conscience,'" he added.

About a half-million men, 7 percent of those required to register, have failed to do so since registration for the draft resumed in July-1980. More than 8 million men have registered.

The Selective Service System requires young men to sign up within 30 days of their 18th birthday in case a draft is needed in the future.

Lawsuit Over At-Large Elections Given Boost

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — At-large elections are coming under increased scrutiny, and federal lawsuits challenging the use of the at-large method statewide and in Wilson County may have received a boost from a recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling.

The Supreme Court ruled last Thursday that the at-large system of electing county commissioners in Burke County, Ga., was discriminatory, even though that wasn't what the architects of the system intended.

And officials say the result of that Georgia case could affect a similar case in Wilson County.

In its decision in the Georgia case, the court considered the overall quality of life for blacks, who make up 53.6 percent of the county, and their lack of political participation at any level.

Both the decision and the amendment change the law as it had been since 1965, which required that a plaintiff prove discriminatory intent to get an elections system changed.

According to the court and the Congress, election systems can be ruled unconstitutional if they discriminate against minorities, regardless of the intent.

The court's standard is the same imposed by an amendment to the Voting Rights Act, which Congress extended last month.

There never has been a black commissioner in Wilson County, where the population is 36 percent black.

"They never intended to discriminate and they didn't reapportioned," said special deputy attorney general Jim

Wallace. "But as far as intent is concerned... that becomes to some extent irrelevant."

Although the result of an election system alone is not enough to mandate a change, the "totality of relevant facts" combined with the effect of the system was enough to force a change, the court held.

"I think it (the court decision) will be a signal to the power structure that the courts are going to begin to look more closely at at-large elections, and that should be a signal to them to start dismantling the at-large systems," says G.K. Butterfield, president of the N.C. Black Lawyers Association who represents eight Wilson County plaintiffs.

Officials are less certain of the impact on a statewide level, where four of 170 legislators are black in state that has a 24 percent black population.

Leslie Winner of Charlotte, civil rights lawyer handling a case against the General Assembly, said effects of the changes are still unclear.

"It's really hard for me to compare what you have to prove," Winner said. "My frank opinion is that (it) will have more impact on local governments than on the General Assembly."

Winner said the "totality of relevant facts" that really proved the case in Georgia are harder to come by on a statewide level.

"There are a lot more local governments which have never had black representation," she said, adding that she thinks there may be some application in the General Assembly in larger, multi-member districts, which her suits seek to break up.

The Salvadoran Army Improves Prisoner Care

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Salvadoran army's handling of prisoners is improving in the wake of allegations that prompted the Red Cross to consider pulling out of the country, according to a State Department official.

The official, who asked not to be identified, said Sunday that El Salvador's high command has issued a directive declaring that prisoners should be taken. He added that Salvadoran officials have become more appreciative of the intelligence value of taking enemy soldiers alive.

The official, however, confirmed that a confidential State Department cable warned several weeks ago that the Salvadoran military's failure to take prisoners could cause the Red Cross to leave the country.

The situation has improved since the cable was sent, the official said. Asked if the State Department's concern over the issue meant that instead of being kept as prisoners, leftist guerrillas had been killed after being taken into custody, the official said "there's a fine line between someone being in custody and not being in custody." He refused to elaborate.

The Washington Post said this weekend that it received a copy of the cable from an organization called the Central American Information Office in Cambridge, Mass., and that its contents were independently confirmed by a U.S. Embassy official in San Salvador.

The cable states that the International Committee of the Red Cross has "made it clear that it is prepared to pull out of El Salvador" because of its concern over the army's practice of not taking prisoners, The Post said.

The cable suggests that evidence of improvement in this area could be used by the Reagan administration in certifying that the Salvadoran government is making progress in the protection of human rights.

That certification, which President Reagan must make to continue sending military aid to the Salvadoran government, is due to Congress by July 28.

In reports on their military operations, the Salvadoran army normally lists the number of guerrillas killed but rarely mentions any prisoners taken.

Meanwhile, leftist guerrillas fighting for control of the Central American country have asked the Red Cross to accept 43 army prisoners captured in recent fighting in Morazan province, but the Salvadoran government has ignored the offer apparently to avoid giving the guerrillas increased international recognition.

The leftists say they take prisoners partly so army troops will be more likely to surrender than fight. They say that in the past, some army troops have joined them and others were simply disarmed and released.

According to The Post, the State Department cable said "we need to demonstrate immediately an improvement" in the Salvadoran army's handling of captured insurgents, and that "a specific order to take and protect prisoners issued and publicized by the Ministry of Defense should be highly desirable."

The cable suggested that the Salvadoran government invite the International Committee of the Red Cross "to assist in a program designed to ensure proper treatment of prisoners. The ICRC has made it clear that it is prepared to pull out of El Salvador if its concerns are not met."

U.S. Is Committed To Using Shuttles For Defense Role

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — President Reagan, in a far-reaching directive, has firmly committed the United States to use its newly operational shuttle system to forge strong defense operations in space and blunt a growing Soviet military presence there.

The directive, issued Sunday as Reagan led the cheers for the returning shuttle Columbia, calls for deployment of an anti-satellite weapon, protection for manned and unmanned spacecraft and improvements in early warning systems to guard against nuclear threats.

The Soviets already possess an operational killer satellite, the only space weapons system now in existence.

The directive was classified "secret" and only a six-page summary was released.

The president's action cements a somewhat awkward marriage between the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, which developed the shuttle, and the Air Force, without whose desires, needs and help the vehicle would not have been built.

The president, at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., also called for "establishing a permanent presence in space." But he did not endorse a fifth shuttle vehicle or a $9 billion manned space station, both sought by NASA and the Air Force.

Those decisions will wait the recommendations of a newly created government space policy group heavily laden with defense and national security officials. It is headed by Reagan's national security adviser, William P. Clark.

NASA officials were encouraged by Reagan's support, many confident his commitment to a "permanent presence" could mean only one thing, a space station.

"We are hopeful," said Lt. Gen. James A. Abrahamson, head of the agency's shuttle program. Abrahamson is one of more than 150 Air Force officers transferred into NASA as the shuttle has matured through four test flights.

The Air Force has booked more than 20 of the shuttle fleet's first 70 operational flights, starting in November and extending into 1987. The congressional General Accounting Office estimated recently that the Defense Department will require 114 of 234 shuttle flights expected through 1994.

The shuttle could hardly have gotten off the pad without military support. In the early 1970s, when the space agency first sought funding for a reusable space vehicle to succeed the costly and expendable Saturn rockets that carried American astronauts to the moon, many congressional leaders strongly opposed the plan. Only when the Air Force threw its full political weight behind the shuttle did Congress vote funds.

In exchange for this crucial backing, NASA was compelled to change the shuttle's design to satisfy the military. The Air Force insisted that the payload capacity be expanded from 45,000 to 65,000 pounds and the vehicle's "cross-range" be extended so it could glide a full 1,200 miles to the left or right of its original path after re-entering the atmosphere. That gives it greater maneuverability.

In a briefing for reporters, a senior administration official, who spoke on the condition that he not be identified by name, said the United States had no current plans to arm the shuttle or to develop a fighter spacecraft. He said Reagan's proposals were defensive and peaceful in nature.

He refused to comment on reports the Soviet Union was developing a fighter spacecraft. However, he said the Soviets were making "massive investments" in space, adding, "that gives us a great deal of concern."

The official said a U.S. anti-satellite system is being developed because the Soviets already have successfully flown such a weapon. The first American test is scheduled early in 1983.

The directive says the goal is "operational deployment" of the anti-satellite system in order to deter threats to space systems of the United States and its allies and "within such limits imposed by international law to deny any adversary" the use of space for "hostile military forces."

For years, both the United States and the Soviet Union have maintained unmanned defense space satellite systems, for surveillance, communications, early warning and other defense assignments.

Pentagon officials have testified frequently before Congress that the Soviet Union also is developing a credible manned military capability out there, using the Salyut platforms as testbeds for sensors and military techniques. The Soviets have said they expect to have a 12-to-14-man space station in orbit by 1985, and the Pentagon brass is convinced it will grow and become a military space command post.

And that is precisely why the Air Force wants Reagan to commit before long to a space station.

As for the civilian part of the space program, the goals, as set by the directive, were described as preserving U.S. leadership in space science, applications and technology; expanding knowledge of the Earth, solar system and universe; continued international cooperation and increased private investment.

Completes Trip On Paddleboat

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — A paraplegic who paddled a boat from Catalina Island to Long Beach Harbor says he plans to donate funds raised by his 24-hour voyage to create a recreation center for disabled people.

"Handicapped people may be disabled but we're not unable," said Dan O'Hara, who said the donations included a $1,000 check.

O'Hara, with his black Labrador retriever Charlie at his side, paddled 31 miles nonstop from Hamilton Cove to the Queen Mary, which is anchored in the harbor.

His hands were swollen from wheeling his wheelchair to power the custom-built boat's 8-foot paddlewheel. The paddlewheel was linked by a chain to the wheels of O'Hara's chair.

O'Hara braved stiff winds and reported that his catamaran was jostled by three sharks during the trip, which ended Saturday. At one point, dolphins leaped alongside, causing the dog to become so excited that O'Hara feared it would jump overboard.

O'Hara, who is in his 40s, suffered irreversible brain stem damage in 1974 when he was robbed of $27 and mugged in Oakland.

X-Rays Become More Effective

NEW YORK (AP) — X-rays are becoming increasingly effective in detecting breast cancer in women over 50 or where physical examination fails to disclose the disease, a new study confirms.

The American Cancer Society, which cooperated with the National Cancer Institute in a five-year study of more than 280,000 American women, said "the diagnostic capabilities of mammography have improved considerably" in recent years.

The society said 42 percent of the 3,557 cases of breast cancer in the study were found by breast X-rays, also called mammograms, and could not be diagnosed by physical examination.

Listened In On Columbia Talk

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans spent more than $1 million to listen in by phone on live conversations between the Columbia space shuttle and Mission Control during its week-long flight.

The American Telephone & Telegraph Co. said Sunday that $1,230,354 was spent for 1,025,295 calls made to a special number. The calls cost 50 cents for the first minute and 35 cents for each additional minute.

About 8,000 calls were made during the last nine minutes of the flight, AT&T spokeswoman Carolyn Zachary said.

Stopped To Run For Flag Thief

HONOLULU (AP) — A passing motorist stopped to chase a man dressed only in undershorts who had stolen an American flag from the Honolulu Federal Building, authorities said.

Joe A. Valdez, 35, of Honolulu, was charged with second-degree theft Saturday after he allegedly took the 5-by-9-foot flag flying above the building. "It's the Fourth of July weekend and this guy apparently wanted a U.S. flag," said policeman Mike Reiersen.

After being chased by the motorist, Situa Igafu, for several blocks, the man dropped the flag and was later arrested in the Chinatown district.

Explosion

LAKEWOOD, Ohio (AP) — Two people were hospitalized in stable condition today after a July 4 fireworks explosion that injured 22 people in this Cleveland suburb, police said.

The fireworks, which were to be used as part of display at Lakewood Park, blew up in one gigantic blast after sparks from an initial display ignited other fireworks which were stored nearby, police said.

Lakewood Hospital spokesman said none of those injured appeared to be seriously hurt. Most suffered burns and cuts.

John Weese, 7, of Lakewood, and Larry Badurina, 44, of Columbus, were admitted to Lakewood Hospital. Badurina is an employee of the American Fireworks Co., which was hired to put on the show.

Lakewood Mayor Anthony C. Sinagra said the first display was a 24-blast salute. Then a spark somehow got to the other fireworks. "Someone yelled to forget it and get back," Sinagra said. "Then the entire unused portion blew up."

Lakewood Police Captain Glen P. Walker said about 30,000 people were in the crowd when the explosion occurred.

"We were right at the fence, about as close as anyone," said William Chincock, a city councilman. "It was like being in the middle of a battlefield."

Chincock said the crowd was about 60 yards away from the display. "That precaution was a life-saver," he said. "Also, nobody panicked."

Mattingly and Hartsfield later boarded a NASA Gulfstream jet and flew to Ellington Air Force Base near the Johnson Space Center here. They arrived minutes before the ferry craft landed for an overnight refueling stop.

Officials estimated that 500,000 people gathered to welcome home the astronauts and to look at the Challenger.

Mattingly, speaking to a gathering that included fellow astronauts and Mission Control flight controllers, declared the day "a first-class way to go" on July 4th.

New Rioting By Gold Miners

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — New rioting broke out early today in South Africa's gold mining district when 12,000 black miners refused to go to work and some began stoning cars and buildings at the Kloof mine, the South African Press Association reported.

A spokesman for Gold Fields of South Africa, which controls the Kloof mine, said guards fired tear gas to break up crowds of miners and no injuries were reported. He said all was quiet but the 12,000 miners were refusing to work.

Seven black miners died in rioting last week at mines controlled by the Gold Fields group.

The mine spokesman, who asked not to be identified, said he did not know whether the rioting was prompted by differences in pay raises. The Kloof miners are getting pay raises of 12 percent, while miners at Anglo-American Corp. mines are getting 16 percent.

Scarce Housing Seen By 1983

CHICAGO (AP) — A national shortage of 1.85 million housing units will develop by the end of the year because of the slump in new home construction, says a title insurance firm.

Chicago Title Insurance Co. said its estimate was based on statistics from the U.S. Department of Commerce, which also predicts the addition of 17.6 million new households during the 1980s.

John Pfister, the company's manager of market research, said a housing shortage will force families to "double up," with young couples sharing space with relatives, singles finding roommates, and couples postponing divorce for economic reasons.

Firecracker Crash

Escapes Wreck, Late Challenge For Win

Alarmed Allison Takes Firecracker

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Bobby Allison glanced in his rear-view mirror and saw an "alarming" sight just 25 laps from the end of the Firecracker 400 Grand National stock car race.

What he saw from his vantage point at the front of the lead pack Sunday was Harry Gant trying to slingshot from fourth place into the lead, suddenly veering into Tim Richmond's car, sending both of the racers careening into the concrete wall and starting a wild melee that wound up taking four of his most fierce competitors right out of the race.

"I was about this far in front of it," said Allison, holding his thumb and first finger about an inch apart. "I saw it in the mirror and it really was quite alarming, even though I was out ahead of them. I knew it was going to take some of the strong cars out of it."

Both Richmond, who had been running in second place, and Gant, who had been trying to slingshot to the front from fourth place, were eliminated from the competition, as were Cale Yarborough, running third when the accident happened, and Richard Petty, running a strong fifth.

Allison, a 44-year-old from Hueytown, Ala., wasn't able to relax, though. He still had to fend off a late challenge from second-place finisher Bill Elliott.

The winner's Gatorade-sponsored Buick Regal crossed the finish line just one-half car length ahead of Elliott's Ford Thunderbird as he averaged 163.099 mph in his fourth victory of the season.

"I felt that those were the strongest cars," said Allison, referring to the cars that lost their shot at the victory in the multi-car crash. "But I knew right away when the green (flag) came back out that I couldn't sell Elliott short. I knew he'd take a shot at me."

Elliott was running a distant 10th when the Buicks of Gant and Richmond collided coming out of the fourth turn. Gant forced Richmond into the wall and followed him, nearly flipping his car in the process.

That started a lot of wild maneuvering by the cars right behind, with Petty tapping Yarborough's Buick, which then ran over debris, causing a flat tire and suspension problems, and Petty then getting hit from the rear by rookie Geoff Bodine. Petty, a nine-time winner at Daytona International Speedway, hit the wall and spun into the infield.

Meanwhile, Elliott managed to avoid the wreck by quickly ducking onto the pit road. He came out of the pit exit running right on Allison's rear bumper as they dashed into the first turn.

That's right where Elliott stayed until the final lap when he went low on the track going into the third turn and tried to move alongside Allison. He couldn't do it and Allison, who won $42,500 and take over first place in the Winston Cup point championship, went on to become the fourth driver to win both the Firecracker and the Daytona 500 in the same year.

"I thought we'd get into cars (traffic) quicker than we did," said the winless Elliott, who was runnerup for the second time this season. "When he (Allison) was wide open, I didn't have a chance."

Ron Bouchard was third, followed by Morgan Shepherd and David Pearson, all in Buicks. Bodine, who won the pole at a Firecracker record 174.721, was sixth in a Pontiac.

Richmond, who recently won his first Grand National race, said calmly, "He (Gant) hit me and then I hit the wall. I tried to get over as far as I could, but he just moved over until I couldn't go any further."

Connors 'Kills' McEnroe To Capture Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Jimmy Connors and John McEnroe began separated only by a net and 78 feet of worn green grass. They ended more than four hours later, separated by the gulf between a champion and a runnerup.

"Neither one of us was going to roll over and die. It was kill or be killed out there," Connors said Sunday in the aftermath of his 3-6, 6-3, 6-7, 7-6, 6-4 triumph over the defending champion to capture the All-England tennis championship at Wimbledon. "That's why we have great matches."

And, it had to be great, if only to eclipse all the troubles that had plagued the 96th installment of Wimbledon. With five of the top 10 ranked men players — including four of the top six — absent for a variety of reasons and rain that fell nearly every day of the fortnight, the prestige of both the tournament and the All-England Club was in need of saving.

A subway and railroad strike cut even deeper into the gate, which totaled 320,000 through the two-week-long tournament, a drop of more than 37,000 from last year's meeting. And, who was better for the job of saving the tournament than Connors, the 1974 champion, who was in need of a little saving himself.

Since winning the 1978 U.S. Open title, the world's third-ranked player had failed to reach the final of a Grand Slam tournament — the Australian, French and U.S. Opens and Wimbledon — having lost eight times in the semifinals and twice in the quarterfinal bracket of those events.

"I did it in 1974, and once is fine and dandy if you want to be a one-timer. But I'm not a one-timer," he said of the Wimbledon title. "I had the chance to do it three times since then (1975 against Arthur Ashe; 1977 and 1978 against Bjorn Borg) and it slipped by me."

"I had another chance today. I was going to do anything to stop that chance from slipping by me again, and that means fighting to the death."

But at the opening of the match — fittingly on Independence Day, the first all-American final since 1975 — it appeared the only struggle would be against boredom. Connors broke through in the opening game to build a quick 3-1 edge, only to have McEnroe capitalize on his opponent's lackluster play by taking the next five games and the set. Then it was McEnroe's turn to err, with Connors using breaks in the second and fourth games to win the second set by an identical 6-3 score.

But slowly their instincts began to take over and the tension mounted as the third set got under way. Sporadic urging by the isolated spectators swelled into cheers from the enter crowd at Centre Court.

Connors gained another break in the first game, pushed it to 5-4, and was serving for the set. At 30-30, he delivered the sixth of his eight double-faults in the set.

No.7 came at break point. After an exchange of serve, the set went to a tiebreaker.

"I said to myself, 'You're out of it if you don't get straight. You've got to slow down and cut out the errors,'" recalled Connors.

Although his serve was never broken from that juncture on, Connors would have to wait for his payoff. McEnroe's sixth ace of the match — he would finish with 19 — gave him a set point in the tiebreaker, and a service winner gave him the lead in the tiebreaker, only to have Connors rip off the next three points and capture the set with a service winner.

Connors gained the winning margin with a service return down the line for a break in the third game. After the two held serve to 5-4, the 29-year-old Belleville, Ill., native served his 13th double-fault of the match.

Camels Sweep Pair From ECU

BUIES CREEK — East Carolina continued to have its problems in the North State Summer League Saturday evening as the Pirates dropped a doubleheader to Campbell.

The Camels held off an eight-run outburst in the sixth inning by ECU to take the opener, 12-10, and used the four-hit pitching of Karl Herrmann to defeat the Pirates, 11-1, in the second game.

Campbell is now 15-7. The two victories tied the Camels with N.C. State for first place. ECU, which faces North Carolina here Tuesday in a doubleheader, falls to 6-17.

ECU trailed, 12-2, going into the sixth inning of the first game but rallied for eight runs to cut the deficit to two.

Todd Evans singled and went to third on Jack Curlings' double. Robert Wells then walked to load the bases. Mark Shank hit a sacrifice fly to score Art Barnhardt, who was pinch running for Curlings.

Reggie McDonald then singled and John Hallow reached on an error to score Wells. David Wells followed with a home run to score McDonald and Hallow to make it 12-9.

Evans, with two gone, then hit a home run to cut the gap to 12-10. ECU could get no closer, however.

Shank reached second on an error and McDonald walked with one gone in the seventh but Hallow flew out and Kelly Robinette grounded out to end the threat — and the game.

Out-Of-Character Weiskopf Captures Western Open By 1

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — It was an out-of-character Tom Weiskopf who won this year's Western Open golf title. He credits Ken Venturi, Jack Nicklaus and himself for the change.

"Be patient, be patient, be patient," I kept telling myself. "Let it happen." That's always been a problem for me. I try to force things," said Weiskopf after his victory Sunday.

Usually a bold player, Weiskopf turned conservative on the last nine holes at the Butler National course.

"I didn't shoot at a pin on the backside, except 11, until I got to 18. I was shooting for the middle of the greens. I usually fire at the pins," he said.

Weiskopf paid tribute to Venturi and Nicklaus for his 15th career victory, a feat that lifted him into fourth place on the game's all-time money list with $2.1 million.

He said he reviewed a 1970 note from Venturi on golf swing fundamentals. "I took it to the practice tee and worked with it the last three weeks," Weiskopf said of the advice from the former U.S. Open champion.

He said he learned patience from watching Nicklaus, his old Ohio State buddy, play in the U.S. Open.

Still, Weiskopf needed a swing of two shots on the last hole to win the $63,000 first prize with a 2-under-par 70 for a record Butler National total of 276, 12-under-par.

He birdied from seven feet. Larry Nelson, leading Weiskopf by a single shot going to 18, bogeyed by three-putting from the front fringe.

"There's destiny in everything," Weiskopf said. "This is a game of mistakes and Larry made one there."

Nelson finished second place with 71-278. He earned $37,800.

"I'm happy for him, but not very happy for me. That's the way it goes. I played as well as I could," said Nelson.

Nelson admitted a spectator yelled as he was preparing to hit his approach shot to the 18th green. "It threw me off," he said.

Nelson stepped away from the ball, addressed it again and hit his five-iron in the fringe, 35 feet short of the hole.

"I didn't hit that good of a putt, but it was difficult. You couldn't charge the hole. And the second putt I didn't hit as hard as I should have," he said.

Nelson left his first putt 12 feet short, forcing him into the runnerup spot. His second one slipped to the left of the cup, forcing him to settle for into the runnerup spot.

Bob Gilder, the winner of the Westchester Classic last week, finished third, closing with a 69 for 278. Gilder, the hottest current player in golf, is 29 strokes below par for his last eight rounds.

Snow Hill Wins Series By Forfeit

SNOW HILL — Snow Hill won the opening round of the Area I East American Legion playoffs this weekend without lifting a bat or throwing a ball against Edenton.

Edenton, you see, forfeited the best-of-three series to Snow Hill, allowing Snow Hill to advance to the second round of the playoffs in the easiest of fashions.

Snow Hill, which finished 8-12 during the regular season, will now play Pitt County in the second round. Pitt County had a first-round bye.

No date has been announced for the series.

Pitt County finished 15-5 to tie for first place with Wilson but won a coin toss for the tournament's top seed.

Wilson defeated Snow Hill, 9-0, Friday night to earn a tie with Pitt County for the regular season title. Wilson is seeded second.

In other first-round action, Rocky Mount defeated Wayne County, 7-6, Sunday night to sweep their best-of-three series. Rocky Mount downed Wayne County, 8-7, Saturday in the first game.

Rocky Mount will now play Wilson in the second round. No date has yet been announced for the best-of-three series.

The winner of the Pitt County-Snow Hill series will play the survivor of the Rocky Mount-Wilson matchup for the tournament title. The tournament winner will continue on into the state playoffs.

CLEVELAND (AP) — Bobby Rahal, a rookie running in only his fourth Indianapolis-style auto race, won the inaugural Budweiser Cleveland 500 easily, crossing the finish line more than 20 seconds ahead of veteran racer Mario Andretti.

"And I found out last year that you just don't worry about the points. You just race real hard, then when the racing is all done, you look at the scoreboard and see who won it (the championship)."

There were five caution flags for a total of 35 laps in the race, which ran just two hours and 27 minutes. There were no other serious accidents and no injuries were reported.

The quick race made the temperatures in the 90s and high humidity less of a factor for both the drivers and the sun-drenched crowd, estimated at 70,000.

Haynie Takes Third LPGA Major

TORONTO (AP) — Sandra Haynie now has distinction of being the first player to win the three designated major tournaments on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour.

She captured the $200,000 Peter Jackson Classic in dramatic fashion Sunday to go with her previous victories in the LPGA Championship and the U.S. Women's Open.

The 39-year-old Texan ran in an eight-foot uphill putt on the 18th hole to stave off a late charge by Beth Daniel, who came from three strokes back on the 13th by shaving two strokes from par on four of the toughest finishing holes the women see this year.

It wasn't an easy finish for Haynie. Her second shot on the 18th wound up at the back of the fringe because she was forced to go for the pin from a difficult lie when she pulled her tee shot into trees along the fairway. Haynie said she was shocked by the distance the ball went past the hole on her first putt from 30 feet above the hole.

"I thought it would wind up four or five feet past and looked away. The next time I looked it was nearly 10 feet past."

It was the fourth time since 1975 the LPGA stop has been played at the 6,071-yard St. George's Golf and Country Club layout, and for good reason.

"I thought, when I had that birdie at 13 to go three strokes up, all I had to do was play par from there because nobody has made up strokes on those finishing holes," said Haynie. "Like we've been saying all week, they're the toughest finishing holes we'll play all year."

"But, you saw what Beth did out there today. She took two strokes from par, which just goes to show that anything can happen."

Haynie played par golf through the finishing holes, but she needed that roll-in on the 18th for a 68 — 4-under-par — to avoid a playoff with her partner through the final round of the 72-hole tournament. She took home the $30,000 winner's purse and posted her second victory in as many weeks.

Her four-day total of 280 was eight strokes under par. Daniel finished with a 69 and 281.

Expos, Bucs Split 2-Game Slugfest

By The Associated Press

It wasn't a good day for pitchers at Three Rivers Stadium.

"You had to keep your helmet on," deadpanned Pittsburgh relief pitcher Kent Tekulve after a fireworks display by the Pirates and Montreal Expos that included a total of 36 runs and 57 hits Sunday.

The Expos won the first game of the doubleheader 16-6 before the Pirates came back to win the nightcap 10-4.

"We just took a good country whipping (in the first game) — but we came back," said Pittsburgh's Mike Easler, who hit a two-run homer along with Jason Thompson in the second game.

The split gave the Pirates their fourth victory in five games with the Expos and 10th in their last 13 games. After a slow start, the Pirates have moved within 3½ games of the first-place Philadelphia Phillies in the National League East.

"The guys are all pumped up," Easler said. "We're all hustling and we want it real bad this year."

Warren Cromartie hit a home run, triple and double and drove in five runs to lead a 21-hit attack for the Expos in the opener. The Pirates had 15 hits themselves, including a home run by Dale Berra.

Easler had a double and a sacrifice fly along with his homer in the second game. The victory was a welcome birthday present for Pittsburgh Manager Chuck Tanner, who was born on the Fourth of July 53 years ago.

"When you play a club like Montreal and you win four of five, you have to be happy," said Tanner, who cut a huge birthday cake in the infield between games.

The Expos, meanwhile, have dropped nine of their last 12 games.

Montreal's Al Oliver suggested the Expos simply ran into a hot Pirate team, playing its best baseball of the season.

"I think the Pirates have arrived," said Oliver. "You can't feel bad when you're outplayed. If we gave games to them, that would be different. We don't have any excuses. They outplayed us. Pitching, hitting, everything."

Phillies 9-7, Mets 7-2 Steve Carlton struck out 13 and George Vukovich and Mike Schmidt hit home runs as Philadelphia beat New York in the first game of their doubleheader.

Despite his high strikeout total, Carlton, 11-7, struggled throughout. He scattered 11 hits, walked three and survived a two-run flurry in the ninth when the Mets scored on RBI singles by George Foster and Joel Youngblood.

Ivan DeJesus drove in three runs with a triple and a single and Mike Krukow scattered nine hits as Philadelphia won the second game. It was the third doubleheader sweep for the Phillies over the Mets in nine days.

Astros 3, Giants 0 Nolan Ryan fired a four-hitter for his 48th career shut-out as he pitched Houston over Los Angeles. The 35-year-old Ryan struck out 10, the fifth time this season he has struck out 10 or more in a game, to extend his major league record to 140 such performances.

The victory for Ryan, 8-8, was his first ever in Dodger Stadium. He had lost six previous decisions to the Dodgers in Los Angeles.

Jerry Reuss, 9-6, was the loser.

"I was aware I'd never won here before, but I have pitched some good games here," said Ryan.

Said Houston Manager Bill Virdon of Ryan: "He's been throwing very well most of his games recently. He's throwing strikes, that's the big thing. The way he was going, there wasn't going to be anyone warming up in that ninth inning."

Cardinals 7, Cubs 2 Keith Hernandez and George Hendrick knocked in two runs apiece and Lonnie Smith scored four times as St. Louis beat Chicago and snapped a three-game losing streak.

Winner John Stuper, 3-1, scattered six hits before needing Bruce Sutter's last-out relief help in the ninth, when the Cubs scored on a bases-loaded walk to Larry Bowa. Sutter walked his 18th save.

The Cardinals turned the game around with a three-run burst in the fifth helped along by two Chicago errors.

"an't give St. Louis five outs; you can't give anybody five outs and hope to come out of the inning alive."

Padres 4, Giants 3 Terry Kennedy's bases-loaded sacrifice fly in the bottom of the ninth scored Dave Edwards with the winning run to lift San Diego over San Francisco.

The Padres were trailing 3-1 against Atlee Hamaker, 5-5, in the seventh inning when hander Dave Dravecky, 1-1, pitched the final 3-3 innings to earn his first major league victory.

"I hung a slider a little bit," Hamaker said of the gopher ball to Templeton. "I guess he just read it right and that was the ball game for me. Just that one pitch."

Braves 4, Reds 1 Bob Horner hit two home runs and Bob Walk and Steve Bedrosian combined on a five-hitter as Atlanta defeated Cincinnati and extended the Braves' winning streak to five games.

Horner, who now has 16 homers for the season, cracked a two-run shot in the third inning and hit a solo blast in the fifth, giving him five homers in the last four games. With the second homer, Horner moved past Darrell Evans on the all-time Atlanta home run list with 121. Hank Aaron holds the club record with 335.

Bosox Tame Milwaukee To Regain First In East

By The Associated Press

Baseball lore dictates that the teams in first place on July 4 will win the pennant. Maybe so, but two of the three holiday leaders in the American League are no longer there on July 5.

In the AL East, Boston and Milwaukee were tied for first after a record-tying two-week barrage of home run fireworks by the Brewers — 35 in 15 games — but the Brewers were tamed Sunday by Dennis Eckersley, who fired a six-hitter as the Red Sox rolled to a 4-1 victory and regained a one-game lead over Milwaukee.

"This gives us some confidence because those guys had been hammering us," said Boston catcher Gary Allenson. "Now we're in first place ourselves. If they had swept us here, it might have meant a psychological edge for them."

Kansas City did sweep in the AL West. With Amos Otis hitting two solo homers and Bud Black and Mike Armstrong holding California to two hits, the Royals handed the Angels their fifth consecutive setback 6-1 and nosed past them to the top by one-half game.

"It doesn't mean a thing," shrugged designated hitter Hal McRae. "How can it possibly mean anything? It's nice, but there are too many games left to get excited. If we're five games ahead on Oct. 1, then I'll celebrate."

While Eckersley was silencing Milwaukee for his third consecutive triumph, Tony Perez rapped a pair of RBI singles. The Red Sox, who broke a four-game losing streak, gave Eckersley all the support he needed with a pair of runs in the third inning on two-out singles by Jerry Remy, Dwight Evans, Jim Rice and Perez off Mike Caldwell. Perez also singled a run across in the seventh.

"I figured they had been beating us so bad, it was about time they wouldn't hit the ball," said Eckersley, who walked none and struck out six. "The key was my control. I moved the ball in and out. You have to be able to pitch inside to be successful. Then I could set up hitters and come back outside. They're so aggressive and have been so hot that I don't think they're as disciplined at the plate as they might be."

Royals 6, Angels 1
The Angels arrived in Kansas City with a 2½-game lead, but were outscored 19-5 in the three games and have dropped five in a row. Otis was the Royals' big gun, going 4-for-4 with two singles to accompany his homers.

"I feel real good because we played well," said Manager Dick Howser. "Your pitching has to give you a chance, no matter who you're playing, and ours did in this series."

Otis opened the scoring with an inside-the-park home run leading off the second. Center fielder Bobby Clark seemed to have trouble finding the drive in the bright, cloudless sky.

Clark banged into the wall as the ball fell and Otis easily circled the bases.

Mariners 3, White Sox 1
Dave Henderson singled home two runs in the first inning and Gary Gray doubled home another in the eighth. Floyd Bannister allowed six hits but left after six innings when he jammed his pitching hand diving for a ball. The White Sox scored in the fifth on singles by Bill Almon, Ron LeFlore, and Tom Paciorek. Larry Andersen pitched out of a bases-loaded, one-out jam in the seventh and Bill Caudill retired the last three batters, striking out three, to record his 15th save.

Tigers 6, Orioles 1
Lance Parrish and Mike Ivie headed to back the three-hit pitching of Dan Petry and lead Detroit to its fourth triumph in the last 20 games. Detroit tied the score in the fifth when Ivie hit his 10th homer. An inning later, Whitaker and Lynn Jones singled and Parrish homered off Mike Flanagan for a 4-1 lead. Tom Brookens singled home two more runs in the seventh.

Yankees 3, Indians 2
The Yankees trailed 2-1 and had managed only one clean single and two scratch hits off John Denny when Oscar Gamble drew a leadoff walk in the eighth. Dave Winfield's double and a walk to John Mayberry loaded the bases and Graig Nettles singled off Denny's pitching hand to tie the score. One out later, Butch Wynegar's sacrifice fly scored pinch runner Dave Collins, giving New York its fourth straight triumph.

Rangers 11, A's 4
Larry Parrish, who had only eight runs batted in all season, drove in a club record seven runs with a three-run homer and a grand slam as the Rangers routed the A's.

Parrish drove his three-run homer off Matt Keough, 7-11, in the third inning to give the Rangers a 5-3 lead. One inning later, against reliever Fernando Arroyo, Parrish cleared the bases for only the second time in his career with a long drive into the left-field bleachers.

Twins 4, Blue Jays 3
Gary Gaetti led off the bottom of the ninth with his 10th home run of the season, only the fifth Minnesota hit but pinning the loss on Toronto starter Dave Stieb. Gary Ward hit a two-run homer for the Twins in the second inning.

Camels Sweep ECU...

Evans led ECU in hitting with three hits in four at bats. David Wells was two for four with four RBI. Robinette was two for four.

Campbell was led by Bob Posey who was two for three with two home runs and six RBI. Kevin Barger was four for four with a home run and an RBI. Bobby Spicer was two for four.

The game saw seven home runs hit in all, four by Campbell.

Campbell jumped out to a 1-0 lead in the first on Posey's first home run and then upped its lead to 3-0 in the second on singles by Barger and Steve Regnor, a walk to Tom Lynch and error.

ECU cut the deficit to 3-2 in the third inning on David Wells' two-run double after Hallow had doubled and Robinette reached on a fielder's choice. Campbell came back, however, with seven runs in the fourth.

The uprising was sparked by Barger's solo home run and Posey's grand slam. A third home run — a two-run shot by Kelly Hoffman — concluded the scoring for the inning.

Campbell scored two more runs in the fifth before ECU rallied for eight runs in the sixth.

In the second game, Herrmann struck out four and walked none en route to his four-hit gem. Herrmann gave up a first-inning single to Robinette and then set down the next 11 batters.

The Pirates scored their only run of the game off Herrmann in the seventh on an RBI single by Mike Williams. By then, the Camels led, 11-1, and were well on their way to the win.

Campbell was led by Bill Wilkes and Posey at the plate. Wilkes was three for four with four RBI. Posey was three for three with three RBI. No one for ECU had more than one hit.

Campbell jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the first on Posey's two-run home run — his third of the two-game set.

It stayed that way until the fourth, when the Camels struck for six runs to take a 8-0 lead.

Hoffman reached base on an error and came around to score on Tom Montgomery's single. Montgomery was later forced out at second.

Consecutive singles by Regnor, Spicer, Ron Ammons,

Posey and Wilkes scored four more runs.

Campbell added three more runs to its lead in the sixth on a three-run home run by Wilkes

Sinclair Wins Peachtree Race

ATLANTA (AP) — Jon Sinclair was about four miles into the 6.2-mile Peachtree Road Race when he realized his was running alone.

"I guess I was a little stronger than they were," Sinclair said of his competition, which included Michael Musyoki, the world record-holder at 10,000 meters, and American 10,000-meter record-holder Craig Virgin.

Musyoki finished second and Virgin finished sixth.

"It really surprised me. I didn't know how long I could last," said Sinclair, who ran the race in flowered shorts.

"I just thought they looked rather amusing," said Sinclair, who covered the race up and down the hills of Atlanta's north side in a time of 28:16.3, 20 seconds better than his previous best but short of Virgin's 10,000-meter mark of 28:04, set in the 1981 Peachtree race.

Ann Audain won the women's competition in 32:35.

Seeks Move Demolmage

By The Associated Press
The Center for National Policy, a Washington-based think tank chaired by former North Carolina Gov. Terry Sanford, is moving ahead with ideas that would get the Democratic Party away from some of its liberal philosophy of recent years.

Sanford says the center, patterned after the Republican's American Enterprise Institute, is looking for different approaches from the New Deal-Great Society liberalism that has caused many Democrats in the South to look more favorably on the Republican Party.

"The New Deal has been successful and beneficial," said Sanford, president of Duke University, in a recent interview. "But there is no longer the kind of exciting, new approaches that we need today."

Ronald Reagan's 1980 presidential victory and the sweep of Republicans into office on his coattails spurred Democratic activists to seek new ideas.

"In a short time, the center has established itself as a force in the arena of ideas," Sanford wrote in this year's annual report for the center.

The center has issued studies on issues ranging from tax policy to nuclear arms control, many written by such Democratic strategists as economist Walter W. Heller and former Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance.

Although the center has no official ties to the National Democratic Committee, about 5,000 copies of its reports are distributed to key decision makers, including members of Congress, said Terry Van Dyk, the center's president.

"I think it's fair to say among the officeholders there is a fair degree of confidence and trust in what we do," he said, adding, "I am a little worried that there is almost too great a receptivity to the proposals. There has been such a vacuum of ideas that people are almost too ready to latch on to any proposal."

Sanford was chosen to lead the group because of his political experience and unassailable integrity, Van Dyk said.

"Those of us who formed the center asked Terry to take the job because he is a guy who has been a successful governor; he has been a presidential candidate," said Van Dyk. "He was in 1968 the national chairman of the Humphrey-Muskie campaign. He is identified with education, he has written, he is identified with a major, prestigious university. He is a national figure."

"He is also of an age and a place in life where no one could accuse him of wanting to use it as a vehicle for any person or cause," Van Dyk added.

Sanford, who was a presidential candidate in 1972 and 1976, said his main role has been to enlist top Democratic thinkers for the center. He also raises money for the center and helps chart the center's agenda.

Eight Died In N.C. Traffic

By The Associated Press
Eight people died on North Carolina highways over the July Fourth holiday weekend, including a Lexington man who pulled into the path of a train, according to the state Highway Patrol.

The deaths brought North Carolina's traffic death toll to 549, compared with 701 for the same date last year, the patrol said.

The latest fatality occurred when Roy Thomas Crouch, 20, of Statesville, drove his motorcycle into the path of an oncoming car on a rural road about 14 miles north of Statesville. One other person was injured in that accident.

Charles Richard Farmer, 35, died late Saturday night when his car was struck by a train in Davidson County, just north of Lexington.

In other accidents over the weekend, Thomas Raymond King, 34, of Thomasville died Sunday morning when the car he was driving ran down an embankment, struck a tree and overturned north of Thomasville in Davidson County.

A Virginia man died late Saturday night when the car he was driving crossed the center line of a rural road in Kill Devil Hills and struck an oncoming car head-on. Police identified the victim as Larry Thomas Champ, 20, of Poquoson, Va.

In Robeson County, John Henry Brown, 37, of Red Springs died Saturday afternoon when the motorcycle he was driving struck a parked car near his home.

Virginia Bledsoe, 65, of Rockingham, died Saturday morning when she was struck by a car that cut a swath through three pedestrians before colliding with a parked vehicle. Two other pedestrians were injured in the incident.

Early Saturday morning, Onthiel Cedillo, 22, of Wilson, died when the car in which he was a passenger left the road north of Baileys in Nash County. That incident left two others injured, police said.

Michael Ray Taylor, 28, of Gates, died Friday night in Gates County when the car he was driving left the road near Gatesville at a high speed, struck a ditch and overturned.

Not So Happy Over Merging

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Some Southern Presbyterian churches in North Carolina may withdraw if the Presbyterian Church in the United States and the United Presbyterian Church go through with their plans to merge, ministers say.

A merger plan approved by the general assemblies of both denominations would have little impact on individual members, but Presbyterian leaders throughout the South fear the larger United Presbyterian Church would swallow up the Southern Presbyterians.

Some fear the Southern Presbyterians might be forced to accept more liberal positions and practices. For example, Northern denominations require churches to have women among their elders and deacons, while Southern churches have no such requirement.

However, the merger proposal exempts Southern Churches from that requirement.

"I'm not happy with the present plan, because I believe that it ultimately will be coercive," said a Fayetteville area minister who asked not to be identified. "I have a real problem with anyone who wants to tell someone what they must do, in terms of quota systems on boards."

Some Southern leaders also say the merger would accelerate what they see as an undesirable emphasis on social issues within the Church.

The merger would end a 121-year-old rift that opened between the denominations when Northern churches condemned slavery and Southern churches did not.

Those in favor of the merger say the time is right for a resolution of the conflict.

"The reason for it, in part, is to make clear the fact that our faith is strong enough to keep us together," said the Rev. J. Randolph Taylor of Myers Park Presbyterian in Charlotte, co-chairman of the joint denominational committee on union for the Southern Church.

"The strength of the new denomination's 3 million members would be more formidable," added the Rev. Robert E. Fields Jr. of Hudson Memorial Presbyterian in Raleigh. "It would mean we would have a national scope."

Most of the dozen ministers interviewed said the state's seven presbyteries in the Southern Church would probably approve the proposal.

The Rev. Albert Edwards of First Presbyterian Church in Raleigh concedes the proposal will probably pass, but warns it may make the denomination too large for its own good.

"On the surface it may be a beautiful display of unity," he said. "Underneath it would cause problems. We are too diverse. We don't have the same interests."

Whiz Kid Will Go On To Duke

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Thirteen-year-old Vivek Shaota, the youngest student to take a Vanderbilt University course, finishes the four-week computer study this week, then goes to Duke University for more summer work.

The whiz kid, who will be an eighth grade student this fall, scored in the top 1 percent of college-bound high school seniors on the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) earlier this year.

"It took a little while getting adjusted to class," the bespectacled youth said of his Vanderbilt course. "I wasn't too used to being with people this old."

The computer course at Vanderbilt is being taught primarily for teachers, but Shaota was permitted to enroll after four deans at the university reviewed his application.

Shaota's summer plunge into academia comes because he decided to participate in Duke's talent identification program, which sought out super-talented seventh grade students for a special three-week advanced course in precalculus mathematics July 25-Aug. 13.

In March, the boy scored 700 on the math segment and 440 on the verbal portion of the SAT, which is designed for above-average 11th and 12th grade students.

But he wasn't satisfied with the scores and took the test again, said Sharon Smith, a Vanderbilt spokeswoman.

The second testing resulted in scores of 740 for math and 450 for verbal, she said. The average score for freshmen entering Vanderbilt last year to study engineering was 638.

Because Shaota has not covered Algebra I yet in his classes at Ensworth School in Nashville, he needed a crash course to prepare himself for the precalculus math he will study at Duke and enrolled in the Vanderbilt computer course.

The study at Duke will be on a scholarship, he said.

"It's almost like an advanced class for advanced people, is what I'd probably call it," Shaota said. "That's seven hours of math a day for three weeks. It's just school, except all we have is math."

His father, Gian S. Sabota, is an economics professor at Vanderbilt, and his mother, Chander K. Shota, holds a doctorate from Peabody College in Nashville.

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Before Dan Rather, before Walter Cronkite, he was the first face in television news. Now, he's primarily a radio voice, although at 11:57 each morning, Douglas Edwards still has a precious minute of television airtime.

Edwards, who pioneered the first nightly newscast on TV in 1948, is in his 40th year with CBS. He spent 13½ of those years as anchor on "Douglas Edwards with the News," the precursor to Cronkite's "CBS Evening News."

In a television longevity record, Edwards has been doing a daily TV newscast — in one form or another — since 1948. His first news show was mostly narrative stories, some pictures and an in-studio chat with a newsmaker, the "Well-Doug Interview."

"Without a doubt, the big difference today is the technology," says Edwards, 65. "In the old days, if we shot a story and got it on two hours later, we'd be happy. Now, with satellites and the like, the delivery is instantaneous."

In the early days of TV, graphics were certainly not an art form. But that wasn't from lack of trying. When the Soviets launched the Sputnik, Don Hewitt, director of Edwards' show and later creator of "60 Minutes," searched for a way to give viewers a visual sense of the satellite.

Hewitt put a motor on a globe and attached it to a black wire hanger. On the other end of the hanger was a pingpong ball with tiny toothpicks. As the world revolved, the illusion was given of an orbiting satellite. "It was straight out of a science class, but it worked," said Edwards.

One Hewitt device didn't work as well. To illustrate a brutal summer heat wave, he paid $300 for a 100-pound block of ice.

"He wanted to pretend to cool off the country visually," said Edwards. "He had it brought into the studio, and it quickly melted under the hot TV lights. We were really stupid. We could have gone to the cooking show for ice cubes, and then brought the camera in real tight for a close-up."

Another Hewitt idea that didn't fly was asking Edwards to learn Braille, so he wouldn't have to look down at a script, Edwards refused.

The veteran newscaster now does the one-minute prenoon "Newsbreak" and a Sunday morning religious show on TV. For the CBS Radio Network, he does afternoon and early evening radio newscasts.

Originally, Edwards was a reluctant TV guinea pig. "I was leary, to say the least. Back then, radio was the dog. TV was the very tiny tail."

In the late 1940s, Edwards had two very prestigious radio spots, the "World News Roundup" and "Wendy Warren and the News," a combination soap opera-news show.

By MARY CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Singers Carrie Smith, with her rich voice and sparkle, Chris Connor and Bill Henderson were standouts in the "This Time: the Ladies" concert Saturday night at Avery Fisher Hall.

The Kool Jazz Festival concert included only songs with lyrics or tunes or both written by women.

Miss Smith sang lyricist Gladys Shelley's "How Did He Look?" with extremely musical phrasing, then sexily growled Doris Fisher's "Put the Blame on Mame." She got the audience into the rocking blues spirit of "I Can't Move No More," a song Bessie Smith wrote in 1927 about a flood in Arkansas.

On the finale, where everybody traded choruses of lyricist Nancy Hamilton's "How High the Moon," Miss Smith reminded the audience that Louis Armstrong's birthday is July 4. She took her chorus in a cheerful, gravelly bass that sounded a lot like Louis.

Henderson, who has a delicious vocal timbre, sang lyricist Dorothy Fields' "I Can't Give You Anything but Love" with gentle phrasing and swung her "If They Could See Me Now."

Miss Connor sang two compositions by Peggy Lee, wrapped her voice gently all around the lyric of "Willow Weep for Me," words and music by Ann Ronell, and made staccato, choppy jazz of Dorothy Fields' "I Feel a Song Comin' On."

Sylvia Sims sang the oldest song on the program, "Shine on Harvest Moon," music by Nora Bayes and Jack Norworth, and Carmen McRae sang the newest, "From the Rain," by Melissa Manchester and Carole Bayer Sager. Miss McRae also sang "Dream of Life," which she wrote when she was 17.

IN ROLLS BASIE — Jazz great Count Basie rolls onto the stage in a golf cart before taking his place at the piano during one of two sold-out "Ella and Basie" concerts, part of the Kool Jazz Festival this past weekend at New York's Carnegie Hall. Basie rolled in on his cart, then stood and changed to a piano bench to play his traditionally spare piano style. (AP Laserphoto)

Saturday's Cryptoquip — OUR FILLET OF SOLE? A FLATTENED SLICE OF COMMON FLOUNDER.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: C equals P

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

hearts, which is our preference.

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠8753 ♥KJ92 ♦J87 ♣83
The bidding has proceeded:
East South West North
1 ♦ Pass Pass Dble
Pass 1 ♥ Pass 3 ♥
Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—Partner's bid is not forcing, and you, admittedly, do not have much of a hand. Nevertheless, you should go on to four hearts. Partner has contracted for nine tricks opposite what might be a bust. Viewed in that light, your trump honors and doubleton club are adequate to undertake game.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KJ10 ♥QJ104 ♦A98 ♣A87
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♥ Pass 2 ♥ ?
What action do you take?
A.—What can you do? Nothing! Be content to accept a small profit. You have no reason to feel confident that your side can make any contract with this unattractive distribution, and a double by you would obligate partner to bid.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K72 ♥AQ10932 ♦AQ5 ♣5
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♥ Pass 2 ♦ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—Your primary duty is to show your excellent suit and good hand. Jump to three hearts — you can support diamonds later. If you bid only two hearts, it will be impossible to describe your power later in the auction; if you do anything else, you might have a job convincing partner that you have such a good six-card heart suit.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠83 ♥AKJ762 ♦A854 ♣A
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one diamond. What action do you take?
A.—An overall of one heart may get passed out, and a jump to two hearts these days is played as preemptive. So double. Regardless of partner's response, you will introduce your heart suit at your next turn. That should describe your hand pretty well.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q1065 ♥83 ♦AK62 ♣762
The bidding has proceeded:
East South West North

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠42 ♥KJ9843 ♦K5 ♣763
Partner opens the bidding with two no trump. What do you respond?
A.—With a fair six-card suit and an outside control opposite a 22-24 point two no trump opening bid, you must realize that you are on the verge of slam. The best way to indicate your ambition is by a jump in hearts, but not to four hearts — that bid denies slam interest. You can either bid three hearts now and then, no matter what partner does, bid five hearts at your next turn. Or you can jump immediately to five

Julius Caesar's Month
Most people rarely stop to think about it, but July wouldn't be July if it were not for the Roman general Julius Caesar. Caesar and the astronomer Sosigenes devised a calendar in 46 B.C., much like the one we use today. It had 12 months, each approximately the length of ours. As part of the process of moving the beginning of the year from March 1 to January 1, Caesar ruled that the year 46 B.C. would have 445 days in it. The Romans soon called this "the year of confusion." But after Caesar died, the Roman Senate renamed the month Quintilis, calling it Julius, or July. Julius Caesar was born in July about 100 B.C.

DO YOU KNOW — On which day in March, often called the Ides of March, was Julius Caesar assassinated?

FRIDAY'S ANSWER — Coolidge succeeded Harding, who died in office in 1923.

Korchnoi Family Reaches Zurich

ZURICH, Switzerland (AP) — The family of Russian defector Viktor Korchnoi arrived for a reunion after a nearly six-year separation, but the chess grandmaster was off in France playing in a tournament.

Korchnoi said he was originally told his family would leave Leningrad on June 27, so he had signed a contract to play in a chess tournament in Colmar, 93 miles from Zurich, in early July.

Korchnoi's wife, son and stepmother arrived at the Zurich airport Sunday and the family reunion was scheduled at the home of Korchnoi's attorney in Glarus, Switzerland.

Korchnoi's wife, Bela, broke into a smile when greeted by two other Soviet exiles, former world figure skating champions Ludmila Belousova and Oleg Protopopov.

Practice Of Paying Crime Victims Seen Growing

CHICAGO (AP) — The fear still festers for a 26-year-old University of North Dakota professor, several months after she was beaten and raped.

Slowly, she is on her way to recovery. Since the attack the state of North Dakota has paid her about $22,000, mostly for psychiatric care, says Richard Gross, director of the state's crime victims compensation program.

The woman has since moved to California, but remains under the care of a psychiatrist. North Dakota taxpayers continue to pay for that care.

Recalling a meeting with the woman, Gross said, "She kept thanking me, telling me we saved her life. And I'm sure we did. ... She may have very well committed suicide. That was her intimation."

Similar programs are working with varying degrees of success for thousands of victims of violent crimes, said Gross, who also is president of the National Association of Crime-Victim Compensation Boards.

Gross emphasized that the concept is relatively new in the United States and, for the most part, still experimental. California passed the first crime victims law in 1967. Since then, 34 states have followed with similar programs, including six last year.

It's only a matter of time, he says, before victims in every state get similar "rights."

In Chicago, Hazel Johnson talks about being "at an awkward age." At 55, she's too young to collect Social Security and with no job experience, too old to go to work.

She's a widow now. In March 1981, her husband was shot and killed during a robbery attempt in front of their South Side home.

Illinois taxpayers came to her aid through their state's program to aid crime victims and their survivors.

"I really haven't the faintest idea what I would have done without it," she said of the $15,000 she collected — a lump-sum payment of $7,500 and $750 per month for 10 months. "It seemed like an awful lot of paperwork to fill out, but it worked for me."

The national association's hopes for some kind of federal assistance were buoyed with President Reagan's announcement in April of a task force on crime victims — one of his first major non-budget domestic initiatives.

"The victim often comes to court seeking justice, and often society does not have time for him," said Lois Herrington, who was appointed by Reagan to head the force. "We've spent so much time and energy looking out for the criminals — how we can protect his rights, educate him, feed, clothe and house him and find out why he commits crimes.

"We haven't balanced the criminal justice system by recognizing the rights of the victims," she said.

Few would disagree.

"It's an attractive argument. It's sort of like mom and apple pie," says Harvard University Law School professor Daniel McGillis, who is involved in an extensive study, commissioned by the Justice Department, of the crime victims programs.

"Nobody can argue against it," McGillis said, "except on funding."

State victims compensation budgets range from about $12 million annually in California, the largest, to North Dakota's $150,000, the smallest. Maximum claims range from $1,500 in Colorado's new program to $50,000 in Texas. The average claim varies from state to state, but according to the survey the median award is $2,600.

Virtually all the programs cover people directly injured in a crime and people injured aiding a victim. Those eligible for benefits typically include injured victims, dependents of deceased victims and third parties assuming expenses for victims.

There are variations. About a third of the programs have provisions for restricting eligibility based on the victim's level of hardship. Some have a deductible provision. Many allow for attorney expenses. A few have provisions for payment compensating "pain and suffering." None allows for property loss or damage compensation, Gross said.

Virtually everyone contacted by the Justice Department study's researchers indicated that program funding is the central issue for crime victim compensation. With state budgets strained and the federal flow of dollars reduced to a trickle, any program providing aid funds is vulnerable to budget cuts.

Federal victim compensation repeatedly has been proposed since 1965, with little progress.

But in recent years, some states have found success with a new funding formula the experts are hopeful will work. They're taking money away from the criminals — through fines and penalties — and handing it over to the victims. About a dozen states now have some version of this concept in their victims compensation programs.

"People don't care what criminals pay," McGillis said. "Add the fines and penalties provision and you have a very attractive package."

State lawmakers leery of creating an additional burden on general revenue funds are finding this new trend in financing more politically expedient, Gross said. The voters like it, he said, because they're not paying for it.

Non-Runners Dawdled On To The Finish Line

SCOTTSBORO, Ala. (AP) — The entry instructions were short but sweet: "No jogging, no running, no sore muscles." The finish line was only 33 feet from the start. And the timekeeper was taking a snooze.

It was the first "Good Ol' Boys No Run-Run," and a man who didn't even know he was entered was the winner Sunday, by proxy. A sluggish stand-in entry strolled and meandered for about three hours before breaking the tape.

The competition was "a backlash against all those healthy, ruddy-faced people who are always panting up and down the streets. It appeals to people who think joggers are a little strange," said Olivia Brewer, director of the Jackson County Council on Tourism.

Serious runners were barred. "Anyone who came in Nikes were asked to remove them," she said.

The timekeeper fell asleep in a hammock, so there was no official time.

About 8,000 spectators gathered to watch as 300 non-runners dilly-dallied their way to the finish line.

Those who thought the competition too strenuous bought $10 "patron" tickets, which allowed them to sit in lawn chairs beneath a shady tree, sip lemonade and watch the non-runners.

The race was sponsored by the Jackson County Heritage Center to raise funds to renovate a 19th century house as a museum. The idea was sparked by a book called "The Official Non-Runners Handbook," explained Walt Hammer, the official race starter.

Officials dedicated the event to the memory of Calvin Coolidge, former president and July 4th birthday boy who once said, "I do not choose to run."

Bill Clopton of Houston was declared the winner. An unidentified volunteer was entered as Clopton's proxy by his father, John Clopton of Scottsboro. The proxy took longer than anyone else to finish the "10,000" — 10,000 millimeters.

"You mean I won something for coming in last?" said a bewildered Clopton, contacted by telephone.

Mrs. Brewer said lots of people entered by proxy. "We had a non-running team from Wichita, Kan., called the 'Lethargic Racing Team' who entered on the same basis," she said.

Among the proxied entrants was a "track coach" who sent a copy of his training schedule — a blank sheet of paper.

The racers, some holding parasols to ward off the sun, "were just a blur of bodies" as they lagged along, Mrs. Brewer said. Some covered the course in wheelbarrows.

Race officials had suggested that participants take no longer than an hour to finish, but one man carried the hint to extremes, taking only 45 seconds. "We weren't especially pleased with that," said Hammer.

Mrs. Brewer said a second no-run run will be held next July 4.

Participants, who paid $5 to enter, were given official T-shirts depicting a man lying in a hammock with a television on his stomach. The grand prize was free parking in Scottsboro for the World's Fair in Knoxville, Tenn. — about 170 miles away.

Telephone

Booths Bombed

NEW YORK (AP) — Explosions rocked three telephone booths in lower Manhattan early today, injuring one woman slightly, police said. The blasts followed the discovery of two pipe bombs Sunday.

The booths — located at Chambers Street and Broadway, Worth Street and Broadway, and Barclay Street and Broadway — exploded at around 5:30 a.m., police said.

The unidentified woman suffered a minor cut from flying glass near the Worth Street phone booth, but refused medical treatment, police said.

No one immediately claimed responsibility for the blasts. Police were unsure what caused them.

On Sunday, a pipe bomb blast ripped a Queens travel agency and another pipe bomb was discovered unexploded outside the Manhattan office of Yugoslav Airlines. Police believe Croatian nationalists may have been responsible for those bombs.
