PLO Drops A Condition On Beirut Pullout

By The Associated Press

The PLO has dropped its demands for a political and military presence in Lebanon — apparently eliminating the last major obstacles to a guerrilla pullout — but Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon still wants to storm west Beirut, a key mediator said today.

"They have dropped the conditions," former Prime Minister Saeb Salam told The Associated Press at his west Beirut mansion. "The more they drop, however, the more Sharon asks. Sharon is totally intent on his military plan. He wants to exterminate the PLO and thousands of people in Beirut."

As he spoke, Israeli tanks and guerrilla rocket launchers exchanged intermittent barrages around Beirut's paralyzed airport and the nearby Bourj el Barajneh camp. The Tel Aviv command said Israeli forces also traded sporadic gunfire with Syrian troops in eastern Lebanon.

Most of the 30,000 Syrian troops dispatched to Lebanon six years ago to police the armistice that ended the 1975-76 Moslem-Christian civil war have regrouped in eastern Lebanon following bloody clashes with the Israelis during the first weeks of the five-week-old invasion.

Salam said the PLO wants to go overland from Beirut to Syria, but the guerrilla group's military leader, Saad Sayel, told the Voice of Palestine radio: "The PLO and its leaders are resolved to stay on in Beirut and Lebanon even at the cost of martyrdom."

When Israeli invaded June 6 it was believed the operation would be a limited to pushing the guerrillas back from the border, but Israel's deputy chief of staff, Maj. Gen. Moshe Levy, said Thursday that Israeli forces were girding for a long stay in Lebanon, possibly through the winter.

There was no comment on the reported dropping of PLO conditions either from Israel or the Palestine Liberation Organization, which has been negotiating through Salam and Lebanese Prime Minister Shafiq Wazzan to arrange a pullout of the estimated 8,000 guerrillas to stave off an assault by Israeli forces.

Israel had rejected PLO demands to have a political bureau in Beirut and two units in the Lebanese army and communicated the rejection to the negotiators at the presidential palace in Baabda, outside Beirut. Wazzan drove from his west Beirut office to the palace today, ending a five-day boycott of the talks.

City Council Tables Leasing Of Old West End Fire Station

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The City Council, faced with deciding which of two local organizations should receive a lease agreement to use the old West End Fire Station, tabled the matter Thursday night to give the two agencies an opportunity to work out an arrangement.

Representatives of both Omega Psi Phi Fraternity and American Legion Post 160 appeared before the council to request that their organizations be allowed to lease the facility on Chestnut Street for meetings. Both indicated they would be willing to allow other organizations in the city to utilize the structure.

City Attorney Larry Graham said he had reservations about a joint leasing arrangement and suggested that the council should give the fraternity and Legion post 30 days to discuss the matter and find a possible solution.

Walter Morehead, commander of Post 160, said the post is one of a few in the state made up mostly of Vietnam veterans and he said approval of a lease with the post would facilitate its commitment to serve the city. Saying the post would make a good neighbor for the Higgs neighborhood, Morehead and post officer Rufus Huggins presented a petition signed by neighborhood residents supporting the requested lease.

Ernest Brown, past Post 160 commander, said the two organizations have not had the opportunity yet to sit down and work out an arrangement. He said the agencies are not in competition.

In other business, the council conducted a public hearing on the Community Development Small Cities program to receive citizens' input regarding the city's second year application for CD Small Cities program funding.

City spokesman Jesse Harris said the program is being administered this year by the N.C. Department of Natural Resources and Community Development. Greenville received a commitment last year for $3 million under the three-year program, he said, and the city is required to apply each year to receive approximately $1 million in funding.

Harris said Greenville will apply for funds under the community revitalization program. A minimum of 50 percent of the money must be spent in low and moderate income neighborhoods. He added that the state has agreed to honor the Department of Housing and Urban Development's initial funding commitment to the city if annual requirements are met.

The CD money has already been earmarked for the South Evans area where revitalization work is planned. A second public hearing on the program will be conducted by the city on July 22.

The council also appointed Melvin McLawhorn, who has been serving as an alternate on

Former Page Fails FBI Lie-Testing

By JANET STAIHAR
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former House page LeRoy Williams, who maintains he arranged an appointment for a senator with a male prostitute and himself engaged in sexual acts with congressmen, stood by his story today even though he flunked an FBI lie detector test.

Williams told an Arkansas television station Thursday after the test that he had given the FBI the names of three members of the House and a senator.

But the examiner who conducted the test, Williams said on the NBC-TV "Today" show, "stated that I flat-out flunked the test, that he felt like I should right then turn my story around and tell the truth."

He accused the person who administered the test of being "biased."

"From the start, he was not very objective about the test. His test was pointed toward, was I condemning the congressmen or, he was just not very objective at all."

Asked by interviewer Chris Wallace if he had been lying, Williams replied, "No, I was not."

Williams said he was still ready to testify under oath to the House ethics committee, which is investigating the allegations, or to a grand jury.

Asked what he would tell the committee "with regard to your relationship with three congressmen," Williams said:

"I'm prepared to tell them the truth."

Q: Which is?
A: The fact that I was involved with three congressmen and that I did also set up liaison meetings ... between congressional people, one senator and models from, prostitutes from, friendly models."

In an interview with the Associated Press, Williams said he had been involved with three congressmen from September to November 1981. There were three incidents, he said, all in the congressmen's offices and all after hours.

He declined to discuss the details further, but said in the interview that he was "angry over the attention this has put on the victim instead of the perpetrators" and added that he "would have gone home and never said a word if the doorkeeper's office had not tossed my name around with the media."

Williams charged in the

"Today" interview that he "believed" deputy House doorkeeper Jack Russ had been "involved in sending the media after me instead of sending the media after the pages who were there in Washington in order to get the monkey off their backs."

Russ on Wednesday said of Williams's charges that he engaged in sex with congressmen and set up an encounter for another member: "The bottom line to Mr. Williams is this: He has a serious problem. He's a pathological liar."

In his interview Thursday with Little Rock television station KARK-TV, Williams repeated the names of three congressmen and one senator, but they were deleted from that broadcast. He did not use the names in today's interview.

Williams said today that he had sex with a member of Congress and set up the meeting involving the senator "because I felt I was afraid of the consequences if I said, 'No.'"

On Thursday, Rep. Robert K. Dornan said he is pushing for a second congressional investigation into the allegations that some lawmakers have been involved with illicit sex and cocaine use.

Dornan, a California Republican who allowed his congressional office to be used by an undercover narcotics agent, also says his sources tell him that seven current members of Congress — six in the House and one in the Senate — have been implicated by others as drug users.

The seven lawmakers, along with two former members of Congress, have been named as cocaine users by three separate investigative sources, Dornan said in a letter to Rep. Leo Zeffereiti, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control.

Three of the six current House members are from California, one is from New York, one from Massachusetts, and one from a state in the District of Columbia metropolitan area. Dornan said. He did not list the state of the senator nor the states of the two former congressmen.

Grants OK'd

RALEIGH — Gov. Jim Hunt and Dr. Sarah T. Morrow, secretary of the Department of Human Resources, have announced $14 million in state grants given to 60 local governments for water supply systems projects.

The Greenville Utilities Commission received some $196,000 in two grants for water main work in Greenville.

One of the GUC grants, for $63,000, is for installation of a water line along the Old River Road to connect the city's new water treatment plant, while the other grant, for $133,000, is to re-enforce water mains along 14th and Elm streets and other areas.

The funding was allocated under the provisions of the state Clean Water Bond Act, which authorizes grants of up to 25 percent of the total allowable costs to assist in financing approved local water projects.

To date, state grants of $175 million have been awarded for water projects totaling more than $825 million.

Routine Cruise Of Coast Guard Cutter Boutwell A Voyage Of 'Pot Plots'

By LEE SIEGEL
Associated Press Writer

SEATTLE (AP) — A routine Coast Guard patrol in Alaskan waters ended with one guardsman dead, three charged and another under investigation in two plots to steal marijuana from a pot-laden sailboat, the commander said.

"It's been a heck of a trip. I can tell you that," said Capt. Lee Krumm, commander of the Coast Guard cutter Boutwell. "I could have done without it."

After the Boutwell docked here Thursday evening, Krumm ended weeks of Coast Guard secrecy about the ship's voyage, revealing for the first time a second plot to steal the marijuana. He gave this account:

The problems began June 20, when the Boutwell "just happened on" a 39-foot sailboat about 1,500 miles southwest of Kodiak, Alaska, and found it was loaded with 3,100 pounds of marijuana. The Boutwell took the sailboat, named Orca, under tow.

Two days later, two crewmen sabotaged the Boutwell, planning to board the Orca in wet suits and sail off with the Coast Guard cutter unable to pursue. The plot was foiled when the sabotage, which did not cripple the ship, was discovered.

A second plot to steal the marijuana was foiled June 29, when the body of Seaman Jerome C. Herndon of Horse Cave, Ky., — who was apparently involved in the scheme — was found overboard in the icy waters. Herndon was clad in a wet suit and inflatable life jacket, tangled in a tow rope from the cutter. His death was attributed to hypothermia.

Seaman Phillip Carrasco, 21, of Wilmington, Calif., was charged with involuntary manslaughter, conspiracy to commit larceny and possession of marijuana. Another guardsman, whose name was not released, also was under investigation in the second theft attempt.

The new revelations bring to five the number of guardsmen believed involved in the two plots, which Krumm said apparently were unrelated.

Accused in the first plot, which fell apart June 22, were fireman Duane H. Baker, 19, of Albuquerque, N.M., and Seaman Apprentice Martin W. Gailey, 20, of Puyallup, Wash., said Krumm.

Baker and Gailey both have been charged with five counts of destruction of government property, one count of larceny and one count of attempted larceny.

Krumm said there will be an investigation under the Uniform Code of Military Justice — "very similar to a grand jury proceeding" — into both plots.

Because the Coast Guard first thought other vessels were involved in the marijuana-smuggling plot by the Orca, Krumm said news of the Orca's seizure was not released for more than a week.

It was later determined the Orca was operating independently, he said.

At a preliminary hearing Tuesday in federal court in Anchorage, three men were ordered held under $500,000 bond each on charges of drug smuggling. They are John C. Humphrey, 38, of Santa Cruz, Calif.; Robert Douglas Smith, 29, and William Garbez, 33, both also believed to be from the Santa Cruz area.

SIRENS IRRITATE

I have a dog whose ears are irritated by sirens. Is it common for animals' ears to be hurt by sirens? Is the pitch too high for humans to hear? J.P.

Dr. Margaret Young, veterinarian in the small animal department of the N.C. State University Clinical Practice in Raleigh, said that it is not uncommon for a dog's ears to be irritated by sirens because dogs are sensitive to sound.

"Some animals may interpret the siren as a sort of howling sound and they respond or communicate by howling back at it," she said.

Dr. Young added that she didn't know if a siren's pitch was too high for humans to hear. She said, "Humans may hear the pitch, but the pitch might not bother human ears. Animals' ears are more sensitive."

Israeli Television Coverage Of War Irks Govm't

By MARCUS ELIASON
Associated Press Writer
TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The government's long-standing aversion to Israeli television news coverage has been sharpened by the reporting on opposition to the Lebanon war by the state-owned network.

The conflict between government and television, which in peacetime focuses on controversial issues like inflation and the treatment of Arabs under Israeli occupation, has taken on an additional emotional streak in wartime.

It blew up again Wednesday night in a noisy parliamentary debate at which pro-government legislators vowed to work for greater control of the network, and the opposition claimed free speech was in jeopardy.

The immediate cause of the debate was a television report that 100,000 people attended an anti-war demonstration in Tel Aviv. Members of Prime Minister Menachem Begin's ruling coalition said the figure was closer to 30,000, and that the discrepancy exposed the bias of television.

The row over numbers was symptomatic of the anger

Begin supporters feel toward television which, although monopolistic and under a measure of government supervision, is as outspoken and unshackled as any state network in the West — at least in peacetime.

Newspapers, which are far harsher on Begin than the television and radio networks, come in for less criticism, since they are mostly privately owned. The papers are subject to the same military censorship as the broadcast media.

Politicians who would vigorously oppose any attempt to censor the written press have no hesitation in demanding control of the electronic media, which are financed partly by the government and partly by mandatory public subscription.

Radio, unlike television, broadcasts paid commercials.

Television and radio are overseen by a management committee of seven members picked on a party basis so that five represent the current ruling coalition and two the opposition.

Pro-government members complain that they are powerless to dictate policy to reporters and editors, because Israeli labor laws make it impossible to fire them without causing a strike.

Committee member Aharon Papo contends that most television reporters come from "bohemian, leftist circles" and let their views color their coverage.

Papo said in an interview that on the night of the anti-war demonstration, television ignored two government rallies elsewhere in Israel.

"These reporters are using the screen to brainwash the public," he charged. "And the moment we say a word, they scream that free speech is threatened."

Television reporters complain that the network too often bows to official pressure.

From the start of the Lebanon war, television reporters covering the fighting have had to wear army uniforms and take orders from the military press office.

A total ban was imposed on televising debate on the morality of the war. That restriction was eased when the fighting ended, but reporters still are barred from initiating interviews with participants in anti-war demonstrations. However, they are free to cover demonstrations as they unfold.

Yaron London, an acid-tongued talk show host, was ordered to record his program for prior review after he repeatedly challenged the official line.

London asked one guest whether there were similarities between Jewish children in the Warsaw Ghetto and children in the Palestinian guerrilla army.

Another person interviewed, an expert on the Soviet Union, said Kremlin control of the guerrillas was less extensive than the government would have Israelis believe.

Papo says one reporter, Menashe Raz, went to the front to look specifically for soldiers who would criticize the war on camera. Raz denies the charge, saying his subjects were chosen at random by their field commanders.

On the battlefield, television has emphasized the courage and hardship of the troops. The destruction and suffering of innocents has been less extensively covered, compared with foreign networks. But it has not been ignored. One reporter's stories concentrated so much on the plight of Lebanese civilians that he was assigned elsewhere.

One example of Israeli television's independent mind involved an interview with PLO leader Yasser Arafat. It was sent abroad by an American network, ABC, in defiance of a ban by military censors. A few hours later, Israel television picked it up from an incoming satellite transmission and screened it almost in full.

Hinckley Sees 'Love Offering'

NEW YORK (AP) — John W. Hinckley Jr., comparing himself and actress Jody Foster to Romeo and Juliet and Napoleon and Josephine, said in a letter to The New York Times that his attempt on President Reagan's life was "the greatest love offering in the history of the world."

"My actions of March 30, 1981, have given special meaning to my life and no amount of imprisonment or hospitalization can tarnish my historical deed," Hinckley wrote to Times reporter Stuart Taylor Jr. "The shooting outside the Washington Hilton was the greatest love offering in the history of the world."

The four-page, handwritten letter, delivered to The Times on Thursday, was in response to one written to Hinckley at St. Elizabeths Hospital in Washington where the 27-year-old mental patient is undergoing psychiatric evaluations.

Hinckley wrote that most of the statements in the letter were taken from his "sentencing speech" he had composed on June 20, the day before a Washington jury found him innocent in the attack by reason of insanity.

"At one time Miss Foster was a star and I was the insignificant fan," Hinckley wrote. "Now everything is changed. I am Napoleon and she is Josephine. I am Romeo and she is Juliet. I am John Hinckley Jr. and she is Jodie Foster."

Hinckley criticized the 19-year-old actress for carrying on with her life "as if nothing out of the ordinary has happened to her" and added that her silence "torments" him.

"I gave my life for Jodie and she couldn't care less," Hinckley wrote. "I can't believe her heart. Yes, Jodie Foster knows who I am, just like the entire civilized world knows who I am. But does it matter now? I wanted love, not eternal infancy."

"She will never escape me. I may be in prison and she may be making a movie in Paris or Hollywood, but Jodie and I will always be together, in life and in death."

He also took credit for making Miss Foster "one of the most famous actresses in the world...Everybody knows about John and Jodie. We are a historical couple whether Jodie likes it or not."

Hinckley wrote that Miss Foster hurt him more than he hurt her and that for the past 15 months "I've died a little each day and I'm sure the future will be no easier."

Charge Two In Break-In

Two Kinston men have been charged with breaking, entering and larceny in connection with a break-in at Corey's Exxon service station at 2753 E. 10th St.

Chief Glenn Cannon said officers discovered a window at the service station had been broken out at 12:05 a.m. today, and found Odell Sharpless, 32, of Kinston inside the building.

Change from the store's cash register was found on a counter inside the building and about $60 in cash allegedly taken from the cash register was found in Sharpless' possession, the chief noted.

In addition, four of a dozen tires reported taken from the store were recovered outside the station.

About two hours later, Pitt County sheriff's deputies recovered eight other tires allegedly taken from the station when they stopped a car on the Allen Road just west of Greenville, driven by Douglas Trane Koonce, 33, of Kinston.

Cannon, who said the tires were valued at $90 each, said both Sharpless and Koonce were placed under $2,000 bond each on the breaking, entering and larceny charge. In addition, Sharpless was charged with resisting arrest and placed under a $500 bond on that charge.

Court Canceled

The term of criminal Pitt County Superior Court scheduled to begin Monday has been canceled.

Superior Court Clerk Sandra Gaskins said jurors scheduled to serve during the July 12-16 session "do not need to report."

Couldn't Fire Him; So Cut Off His Pay

ST. MARYS, Ga. (AP) — Unable to fire a municipal judge who meted out sermons with fines, the City Council of this southern Georgia town did the next best thing: it reduced his salary to zero.

Councilmen said they had received complaints that Judge Gerald Burrows, who lives in nearby Fernandina Beach, Fla., was prone to preach to citizens appearing in court.

The only way the council could publicly disapprove of Burrows' lectures was to cut his $200 a month salary to nothing, Councilman Harry Mimbs said at a meeting Tuesday night.

"We have court sessions that last for two to four hours simply because our judge likes to preach and lecture the citizens before him," Mimbs said.

Under a city charter that took effect a year ago, the council may not fire the city court judge. It can, however, adjust his pay. The council adopted the salary cut effective immediately.

"If anything, the salary of the judge ought to be increased," said Burrows, a lawyer with a practice in Kingsland, Ga.

"I've just run a court properly, and this is like a slap in the face, a kick in the pants," he said. "I think they would like to run an Atlanta-type traffic court on a $2,400 budget."

Burrows, 50, told The Florida Times-Union on Wednesday that he would continue to lecture offenders, particularly drunken drivers, stop-sign runners and young people he thinks need a good sermon.

Burrows was appointed city judge in 1980. He holds court on the fourth Thursday of each month, hearing about 50 traffic cases, violations of city ordinances and petty drug cases each session. His term expires in 1984.

Councilman Roger Dyals said the council has been investigating complaints about the city court since February. He said the council would prefer to have a local person as judge.

Mayor Ward Hernandez said he recently asked Burrows to resign but Burrows refused.

Extension Intern Likes Nutrition

By Jane Welborn
Reflector Staff Writer
After taking a few classes in nutrition at N.C. Central University, Alisa Sessoms became interested in the subject. She now plans a career in that area and has been getting first-hand experience as the home economics summer intern with the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service.

She began her internship May 24 and will complete the program Aug. 13.

Although nutrition is her area of specialization, she has gotten to do a little bit of everything this summer. "With the intern experience, I have had a taste of every area of home economics, including consumer education, clothing and human development," she said. "I have worked with 4-H and have gotten to work in a supervisory role and plan projects."

Ms. Sessoms has been involved with many programs and events since she began her internship. She has helped with a canning workshop and a 4-H energy workshop. She has also judged fruits and vegetables food demonstrations at 4-H activity day and a children's poster contest for Dairy Month.

In addition, Ms. Sessoms has conducted a tour of the Johnny Radcliffe dairy farm. She has given nutrition lessons at an ethnic day camp and accompanied 4-H'ers to camp at Betsy-Jeff Penn Camp in Reidsville.

She has given a radio presentation on "June is Dairy Month" about different kinds of milk and has been interviewed on WNCT radio.

Several programs will be planned and presented by Ms. Sessoms this summer. She planned a babysitting class today in which she was to instruct babysitters about toys and crafts that they can make with the children.

She has planned a low calorie cookery workshop for this month. "I will show how to cut calories by reducing fat and sugar and adding more fiber to diet," she said. This workshop began today and will be held also on Monday and Thursday from 12:15-12:45 p.m. at the Agricultural Extension Service.

Ms. Sessoms will also hold a comparative shopping workshop in Ayden at the Annie Brown Recreation Center July 19, 21 and 22. "I hope to help homemakers find ways to reduce shopping bills by planning shopping lists," she said.

On those same days in Ayden, Ms. Sessoms will conduct a vegetable workshop for preschool children. "I will prepare five vegetables different ways to try to change the children's attitudes toward them so parents can get the children to eat the vegetables. I will tell the children the nutritional value of eating vegetables," Ms. Sessoms said.

She will also assist with a clothing workshop and attend Ethnic Youth Day Camp in Robersonville.

According to Ms. Sessoms, the turnout for the programs she has conducted has been good. She explained that an extension agent must recruit people to attend the programs. Some of the ways to recruit people are to send letters to organizations and to put out flyers. "I will also go door-to-door and invite people to attend," she said.

Planning a demonstration or a workshop is not an easy task, according to Ms. Sessoms. "An agent must think about the audience, the times that they are available and the things that would be of their interest. Self-management of projects includes deciding what to do in the area and how it best fits the audience you're attempting to reach," she said.

Ms. Sessoms says that she has enjoyed working with the Agricultural Extension Service. "Since I have been in the program, I feel like I am part of the staff and not just a student coming in," she said.

Alisa Sessoms

"After my internship is over, I will begin a notebook of all the things I have done this summer and will report to the state Agricultural Extension Service," Ms. Sessoms said. "I hope to get a job in agricultural extension when I finish my studies," she said.

Since her graduation from N.C. Central with a degree in home economics education, the Pamlico County native has been working on her master's degree in food and nutrition at North Carolina A&T University. After over two years of work, she has almost completed her studies.

She decided on a career in agricultural extension when she was in college. "I saw it as another branch in my area of work that I could attempt. With this major I could also be a teacher or dietician," she said.

"My goal is to work as a nutritional specialist with the agricultural extension, but I could possibly work in another area or work with 4-H," she said. "Working with the Agricultural Extension Service is a rewarding experience, not only career-wise but also personally," Ms. Sessoms said.

DEAR ABBY: "Blow, blow, thou winter wind, 'Thou art not so unkind 'As man's ingratitude." I think I know why Shakespeare used "man's" ingratitude here: For years I have been mailing checks to soliciting graduates who have thoughtfully sent me announcements of their graduations.

The girls, God bless their thoughtful, grateful hearts, are batting 100 percent in written "thank-yous," whereas, from at least 75 percent of the boys, the only acknowledgment for receipt of gifts is the endorsement on the back of the check. (It is heartening, however, to know that at least the boys can write!)

Now, a bended knee plea to you prospective male grads: Under your endorsement, at least scratch out a "thanks."

No, Abby, amend that to read: "Look, kid, from now on please write a thank-you note." I am swearing off the thankless sex.

TEED OFF IN TEXAS

DEAR TEED OFF: For shame! I know not your gender, nor do I want to know, but pray, judge not all males as thoughtless, lazy ingrates.

Shakespeare undoubtedly used "man" to denote all mankind, which included womankind as well. However, to revise all classic literature in an attempt to desex it, would be a man (or woman)-sized job.

DEAR ABBY: Please settle an argument I'm having with my sister-in-law. Her husband died four years ago, and she has never bothered to change the utility bills or credit cards to her name. All her bills are addressed to "Mr. and Mrs." just as though her husband were still living. (There is still a phone listing for "Mr. and Mrs.") She says as long as the bills get paid, it doesn't matter whose name they are in. Nor does it matter how she's listed in the phone book.

Is it legal to transact business using a dead man's name? PERPLEXED IN PA.

DEAR PERPLEXED: A Philadelphia lawyer can tell you what's legal, but why is this a cause for argument? If your widowed sister-in-law, for any reason, wants to retain her charge accounts and telephone listing in the name of "Mr. and Mrs.," why should you care?

DEAR ABBY: This is a reply to "Bitter Daughter," who complained about having to "entertain" friends and relatives she hadn't seen in years following her 85-year-old mother's funeral. Daughter asks, "Where were all these criers the last four years when Mother was in a nursing home waiting for someone to come and visit her?"

First, my sympathy to the daughter. Then my question to her: How many friends did you invite to your mother's 80th birthday party? And how many times did you phone her "cronies" and offer to pick them up and take them to visit your mother? Did you arrange little parties for your mother at the nursing home? Nothing elaborate — just one or two of her friends and some iced tea, cookies and ice cream?

As we sow, so shall we reap. It seems so strange to me that those who have never put themselves out for others expect so much for themselves when the going gets rough.

My own mother lived life to the fullest and gave of herself as long as she could. Toward the end, the hospital halls were filled with friends because she had been a friend to so many.

Maybe this message will help those who still have time to give of themselves. They will be rewarded.

We Americans long have reserved a special place in our thoughts for the citizens who come forth to testify about what they have seen, but the federal government's witness protection plan may change all that.

A spokesman for the U.S. Marshals Service, which oversees the witness protection program, says 95 percent of the 4,000 individuals who have been given new identities, new homes and guaranteed incomes have a criminal background. Spokesman Howard Safir told a Senate Appropriations subcommittee: "It would be naive to think that some witnesses in the program are not a potential danger to the community in which they are relocated."

His testimony came at a hearing on a requested $17.5 million annual budget appropriation to operate the protection program. Other witnesses backed up Safir's observation, pointing to such cases as that of Marion Albert Pruett, a Gastonia man who was released from prison and placed under the witness protection program after testifying about the murder of a fellow inmate at the Atlanta penitentiary. In recent months, Pruett — for crimes committed while he was under the federal government's protection — has been sentenced to death for a kidnap-slaying and to two life sentences for convenience store murders and is awaiting trial for two other murders.

The program obviously is an asset for prosecutors, but is it really better for the public to win a conviction when that victory, in effect, turns loose the likes of Pruett? Testimony from law enforcement officials at the Senate hearing indicates plainly that Pruett's case is exceptional only in the severity and frequency of the crimes.

Dramatizing A Problem

This may be the last column I write about the CIA. A recent law signed by the President makes it a criminal offense to name names "in the course of a pattern of activities intended to expose covert agents, if the government has reason to believe that such activities would impair or impede the foreign intelligence of the United States."

On paper it sounds good, but the law is so broad that none of us knows exactly what it means in terms of reporting the news.

In addressing the CIA at Langley when he signed the bill, President Reagan opened up his talk by telling an old joke. It used to be told about Moskowitz, but the President switched it to Murphy.

The story was that there was an agent named Murphy overseas who couldn't be contacted. So they sent another CIA agent over to locate Murphy. The code phrase to make contact was, "Tis a fair day and it will be lovelier this evening."

The agent went to a pub in a little town in Ireland and asked the bartender, "How would I get in touch with Murphy?"

The bartender replied, "Well, if it's Murphy the farmer you want, it's two miles down the road, and it's the house on the left. If it's Murphy the bootmaker, he's on the second floor of the CIA. Since Mr. Reagan is a government employee, his carelessness could cost him 10 years in prison and a $50,000 fine. Not only did Mr. Reagan name an agent, but he also gave a way a CIA code phrase which gravely harmed Murphy's intelligence activities, and probably compromised our entire covert operation in Ireland.

It wouldn't surprise me if, at this very moment, the Irish counter-intelligence people are checking out every Murphy in the boon docks.

Some people might say that I've taken an extreme case, and the President would not have mentioned Murphy in his joke unless the agent had already left the country.

But it does dramatize the problems the new law presents for those of us in and out of the government.

Now you know why this may be my last column about the CIA. I'm not going to do three years in the slammer the next time Ronald Reagan tells his old joke about Murphy. (Besides, his name is really Moskowitz.)

building across the street." And the bartender added, "My name is Murphy, too."

The agent picked up his drink and said, "Well, 'tis a fair day, but it will be lovelier this evening."

"Oh," said the bartender, "it's Murphy the spy you're looking for."

Everyone in the audience laughed except the reporters. The reason they didn't is they were not sure under the new law if they could print the story, or not.

It was obvious the bartender had violated the Intelligence Identities Protection Act by revealing the name of Murphy as a covert agent and the poor man could be sentenced to three years in prison and fined $15,000 for the indiscretion.

But worse still, if the bartender was charged with the crime, a newspaperman could not tell about it without blowing Murphy's cover.

Even the President of the United States would be liable for arrest for revealing how the agent found out which Murphy was working for the

Royal Recall For A Baby

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
WINDSOR, England (AP)

— When he's old enough to look up his family tree, Prince William Arthur Philip Louis, first born of Prince Charles and Princess Diana of Wales and second in line to the British throne, is in for some lively learning.

Britain's last King William — William IV, who succeeded his brother George IV in 1830 — was a dotty old admiral who never expected to be king but added considerably to the mayhem and merriment at Windsor Castle by arriving with his 10 illegitimate children by the matronly actress Dorothea Jordan, along with their wives, husbands, children and servants.

The castle is "quite full with toute la batardise," one chronicler delicately described the scene at Windsor, where noise levels must have approached the opening of nearby Heathrow Airport a century later. The royal clan quarreled constantly, mostly over money matters.

Once he got the hang of it and conditioned himself to bow regally instead of exuberantly shaking every hand, William clearly enjoyed being king. He welcomed the public to go riding and strolling about the Home Park, the private hunting preserve of the old Saxon kings where President Reagan and the queen took their recent morning canter. William was a most hospitable monarch, entertaining an average 2,000 guests a week. The only hitch to these royal freebies was that King William had this passion for giving speeches, long, boring ones sometimes lacking in tact and short on logic and elegant diction.

But William was appealing and unpretentious, just a simple sailor home from the sea, a no-frills ruler who tried to run a tight ship. He got rid of the French chef at Windsor, dismissed the German court orchestra as an unnecessary extravagance and removed the gas lighting recently installed by one of his late brother's mistresses.

Queen Adelaide, whom he married after finally breaking with the very motherly actress, was not regarded as a reigning beauty. Charles Grenville pronounced her "very ugly with a horrid complexion." Having little interest in racing, she took her knitting to the royal enclosure at Ascot, and in fact was rarely seen at any royal event without her needles and a ball of yarn. Despite the lack of domestic tranquility, the sailor-king and his German hausfrau led an orderly palace life.

According to the historian Christopher Hibbert, King William rose every morning at 10 minutes to eight, but "did not sit down to breakfast until half-past nine, for he dressed extremely slowly, rarely taking less than an hour and a half. After breakfast he read the Times and the Morning Post, occasionally breaking out with an angry comment such as 'That's a damned lie!'"

William, who came to the throne at 65 and reigned only seven years, always regarded himself as a salty character, even referring to his horses as "my ships," but there is some question how good a sailor he actually was.

Lord Nelson, the greatest sea hero of the age, had a high regard for him: "Above all, he is a seaman, which you would hardly suppose."

Not knowing what else to do with him, since he was third in the line of succession behind his brothers George and Frederick, his father, mad old King George III, packed William off to sea at age 13. He was amiable and fond of practical jokes but a bit of a Queeg when strutting the quarter deck. He once had his first mate clapped in irons in a dispute over where the laundry should be hung on the flagship and sentenced a German portrait painter, whom he had invited aboard but quarreled with, to "a stinging dozen on that part of

PAID IN FULL

The Biblical scholar Adolph Deissmann tells us that in the rubbish heaps outside of ancient cities he found many receipts for goods and money written on little pieces of papyrus by hands which had centuries ago returned to dust. And when payment had been made, the Greek word "apeko," meaning "I have received in full," was always inscribed on the bill.

This is the word our Lord used when he spoke of the hypocrites who had received their reward in full. They prayed to be seen of men. They enlarged the borders of their garments and made a great show of their ecclesiastical position. Jesus assured his listeners that the vain satisfaction these men got out of their personal display was the only reward they would ever receive.

It is tragic to see people who are made for great things wasting their efforts on little things. They often trade happiness for the thrill of some small indulgence or kill their conscience that they might be rich. — Elisha Douglass

THIS AFTERNOON

Sports & Politics

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — On election night, a local radio announcer reading the voting results said he felt a little like a sportscaster. Running for office in his listening area were three former professional athletes — one each in baseball, football and basketball — and the former athletic director of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

As the announcer noticed, athletes are getting increasingly involved in politics. Race car driver Richard Petty, who is a Randolph County commissioner, and golfer Arnold Palmer are mentioned as possible GOP gubernatorial candidates of the future. Former pro basketball player Jack Marin is running for Congress as a Republican in the 2nd District. Former pro football lineman John Baker is running for re-election as the Democratic sheriff of Wake County. Bill Cobey gave up his job at UNC to run for lieutenant governor and now Congress as a Republican. Other former athletes publicly considered running this year but then backed off.

None of this happened by chance. The state Republican party has actively recruited former athletes as candidates and the state Democratic party recognizes that their opponents have come upon a good idea.

Athletes make good candidates. GOP Chairman Dave Flaherty says the essential ingredient in a potential candidate is that person's achievements prior to entering politics. In the past, well-known war heroes (Dwight Eisenhower), news personalities (Jesse Helms) and entertainers (Ronald Reagan) have used their good name identification to launch political careers. They have a record of performance with the people and that translates into public trust. Athletes enjoy the same respect.

"Athletes are naturally competitive and politics is just as much competitive as athletics," Cobey says. Athletes are used to working under pressure, of being the focus of the public eye and of working with a team — all elements of almost every political campaign. Flaherty says.

Cobey didn't play college or professional sports. An injury ended his football career in high school. He said that even a high school or neighborhood league career in athletics can help develop competitive skills. "Many politicians have athletics in their backgrounds," he says.

A high profile athletic career can prepare a person for life in politics. The athlete does some public speaking, works with reporters and becomes accustomed should work harder to recruit athletes as GOP candidates. It's a counterweight to the high name recognition Democratic candidates earn while holding lower offices.

Janice Faulkner, state Democratic Party executive director, said Republicans have done a better job of recruiting athletes to their fold and that Democrats should look for good potential candidates on the playing fields. The Republicans have had more success, she says, because they have been "careful to stroke athletes while they're in their careers and consequently many of them come out of their career with good feelings about the Republican Party."

PAUL O'CONNOR

to being the center of attention. It's a training ground for political life that other candidates don't experience.

Baker says the discipline of professional football — keeping himself in shape, following his role in a defensive play — prepared him well for following the game plan of a political campaign. Flaherty notes that staying in shape is very important for candidates. "Athletes look verile and maintain their health and that appeals to women voters," he said.

Flaherty says that, as the minority party, Republicans

To the editor:

On July 3, 1982, the Eppes Alumni Association held its first alumni parade in West Greenville. The parade was a success, but unexpected traffic could have resulted in serious accidents. We had no police assistance and our one and only police escort started on the parade route as if he were going to a fire. This left us wide open without any real police assistance. Parade units tried to keep up with him, causing large gaps in the parade and traffic coming from both ways got in the parade route at will due to the fact that West Fifth was not sealed off as requested and traffic officers were not placed at various points and intersections to divert traffic away from the parade route as was done in the recent Shriners Parade. Near-fatalities could have resulted "then one of the girls from Operation Sunshine and the girl carry, the Eppes Marching Banner was almost struck by a car. One of the participating queens, riding on the hood of a car, was thrown off due to an abrupt stop by her driver trying to avoid an oncoming motorist. These are just a few of the incidents.

Alert citizens saw the need of assistance and risked their lives in the oncoming traffic flow and diverted traffic away from the parade route. I thank those alert persons who did assist us and made it safe for the parade to continue.

We definitely plan to have this event next year and to those many persons who contacted me about the safety of your children being in the parade, we will not have this problem next year. City officials, the Police Department and I will direct communication to assure that this does not happen again.

To the editor:

Once again we Americans have celebrated the birth of the most blessed nation on earth, a nation whose foundation is a Constitution set to the tune of Christian principles which inspired our founding fathers, a Constitution which thereby provides the framework for its citizens to enjoy the most idealistic way of life on this earth, if we but adhere thereto.

But the evidence is that many of us don't know what we celebrate, for we don't recognize either the successful or the unsuccessful examples of our system in operation. A case in point is the Hinckley trial, with a great show of indignation throughout the country toward the law involved and the jury. Remembering that an accused is to be presumed innocent throughout the trial and that the burden of proof is on the government to establish guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, we see that both sides offered evidence from psychiatrists on the only questioned issue and, in the judge's charge, the burden of proving sanity was on the government. After many hours, the jury could not satisfy themselves that the government had proved sanity beyond a reasonable doubt and, consequently, could not conscientiously convict. I submit that our system of justice can be idealistically administered as intended by the framers of our said Constitution.

There is irony in the fact that those of us who would condemn the Hinckley court are at the same time missing, at our very doorsteps, the opportunity to oppose frequent daily failure to administer our system as our forefathers intended, a failure to follow the rules of law. Yes, the "cloak of innocence" frequently hangs in the "outer" halls of justice and "reasonable doubt" is primarily a legal maxim made obsolete by judges who don't need it. And while Hinckley is rich and white, neither of these adjectives would describe the ones who suffer most from these local or state court inclinations.

And I submit that there is also irony in the fact that the Hinckley court was made up of a black judge and a predominantly black jury.

Yes, if we but discern, there remains cause to celebrate.

Home Operator To Face New Charges

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — The state of Florida will seek extradition of a former boarding home operator sentenced to prison for kidnapping three elderly women, after she faces additional charges here, authorities said.

Michigan intends to prosecute Lucille Walker on charges of embezzlement and perjury, chief assistant Oakland County prosecutor Richard Thompson said Thursday.

On Tuesday, Circuit Judge Hilda Gage sentenced the 61-year-old woman to four to 20 years in prison for kidnapping three residents of her Tangelia Home in Dade County, Fla. The women were abandoned in August at a Detroit hospital.

Her companion, J.C. "Taft" Collins, 58, was sentenced to three to 20 years in prison, and her granddaughter, Teresa Walker, 24, was sentenced to two years probation in the case.

All three could have been sentenced to life in prison,

Thompson said, criticizing what he called a light sentence for Mrs. Walker.

Meanwhile, Florida plans to extradite Mrs. Walker and Collins to face charges of grand theft and false imprisonment, said Tom Peterson, chief assistant state attorney for Dade County.

A Florida warrant charges Mrs. Walker with two counts of grand theft and two counts of false imprisonment, while Collins is wanted on one count of grand theft, Peterson said. Each charge carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison, he said.

Mrs. Walker and attorney Arnold L. Weiner of Southfield have been arraigned on charges of embezzling $64,000 from a 95-year-old Southfield woman and $23,000 from an elderly resident of Florida, Thompson said.

In addition, Mrs. Walker faces perjury charges arising from the alleged falsification of a Medicaid application.

Life As It's Lived

Life-Is-Unfair Lesson Can Come When Young

By GAIL MICHAELS

Lately I've been on one of my guilt kicks, and with good reason. I have just noticed that the woman across the street is a supermom. She works as a nurse six hours a day, bakes cookies, plants marigolds, reprimands her daughters in a whisper and calls them to come home with a euphony that is missing from my raucous shriek. She seems to be balancing work and motherhood effortlessly while I'm still throwing the two together like fruit cocktail and Hungarian goulash.

After observing her for several weeks, I could come to only one conclusion. My children needed a more wholesome, child-oriented environment. In the interest of promoting this, I decided to give in to Meg's request and work the land with her.

I was conservative in my approach, or so I thought. I bought only one bag of peatmoss, two trowels and eight zinnias. The zinnias were large enough to be easily identified by my undiscerning eye as non-weeds.

Initially, the project had all the hallmarks of wholesomeness. I shoveled peatmoss on top of the red mud while Meg threw it back in my face as she attempted to work it into the soil all by herself. In spite of her protests, I finally insisted upon helping, and together we managed to dig three inches down.

But Zachary began to resent his role as a bystander and jerked the trowel out of Meg's hand. Naturally, Meg tried to jerk it back. I tried to make peace by handing her my trowel. We managed to plant four zinnias before Zachary took a stand on two of them.

"You're squashing my zimmers!" Meg shouted and gave him a rough push.

He responded by swinging at her with the trowel. The zimmers having suffered irreparable damage, I concluded as I have half a dozen times before that crabgrass could, without its undeserved reputation, be a lovely ornamental shrub. Without undue violence (a tribute to my seriously diminished self-control) and with only moderate screaming, I separated the children and hosed them down outside before marching them to the tub.

Meg, of course, blamed me for the fiasco, and guilt ridden as I was over my inability to accomplish with eight plants and two kids what others had accomplished with half-acre gardens and large families, I agreed. I promised to make it up to her by baking cookies that same afternoon.

Again, I attempted to minimize my chance of failure. I used a mix. I put Zachary in the highchair with a glass of milk. Meg contentedly blended the contents of the cookie mix package with the egg and pieces of shell that she had cracked herself. Believing everything to be under control, I turned to check the oven.

"Mommy!" Meg shrieked almost immediately. "Zachary is grabbing the cookie dough!"

Indeed, Zachary had two handfuls, which he was cramming into his mouth with all possible haste. His stricken look upon being discovered was followed by a frantic scramble back into his chair. Somehow, in the process, his milk wound up in the dough.

"He ruins everything!" Meg shouted. "It isn't fair!"

"Life is not fair," I explained. If it were, I would be more like that woman across the street.

the body called the seat of honour."

He let the Lords of the Admiralty know who his father was, once sailing home to England for Christmas in violation of fleet orders to winter in Quebec.

Like his brothers, who fathered numerous illegitimate children but no valid male heirs, William was almost always in love in almost every port. When he fell head over capstan for a commoner's daughter in Plymouth, his father the king issued sailing orders that cut off the affair. "What? What? What? William playing the fool again?" Nesta Pain recounts his reaction in her biography of George III: "Send him off to America and forbid the return of the ship to Plymouth."

And indeed he did not return to England for nearly a decade.

William, to whom the nickname "Silly Billy" was soon attached, lost an early girl friend, Polly Finch, to nautical ennui. She left him because she could no longer put up with his reading aloud from "The Lives of the Admirals" every evening.

He seemed to welcome the long years at sea, dreading to return home to Windsor for the holidays and another lecture on clean living from his righteous father and mother.

"My Christmas box and New Year's gift," William wrote on one occasion, "will be a family lecture on immorality, vice, dissipation and expense."

But these were the same themes he struck in later life in long, rambling speeches to the House of Lords, although the morality sometimes got muddled when he mixed praises for slavery with stern if not personalized attacks on adultery.

William was thought to be going mad like his father toward the end of his brief reign, and there was talk of supplanting him with a regency, but he lived on until his beloved niece Victoria reached her 18th birthday.

He was confident she would grow to become "a good woman and a good queen." In the final days of his illness, he thought of her in the romantic nautical terms of a sailor about to cross the bar. "It will touch every sailor's heart to have a girl queen to fight for," he mused on his deathbed in the Blue Room at Windsor. "They'll be tattooing her face on their arms, and I'll be bound they'll all think she was christened after Nelson's ship" — which, of course, was the Victory.

Tattooing in honor of the heir presumptive has gone out of style, but already on the market are Prince William baby egg cups, featuring the face of a squalling infant and, for handles, his father's prominent ears. One wonders if Princess Diana is amused.

President Averts Threatened Railroad Walkout

By MAUREEN SANTINI
Associated Press Writer

SANTA BARBARA, Calif.
(AP) — By invoking his power to temporarily avert a nationwide freight strike, President Reagan is hoping a settlement can be reached in the dispute between 40,000 locomotive engineers and the railroad industry.

Reagan interrupted his vacation at his mountaintop ranch 20 miles from here Thursday to sign an executive order creating a presidential emergency board to investigate the issues.

The president's action, taken three days before a threatened strike, triggers a 60-day cooling off period. Any walkout during that period would violate federal law.

The president's power to forestall a strike is part of the Railway Labor Act.

"It was the president's view that a railroad strike would have an immediate impact on the public," said White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes. "He considers the railroad industry crucial to the U.S. economy."

Reagan signed the order shortly after the National Mediation Board sent him its findings that a strike would virtually shut down rail freight movement in the United States.

The contract dispute between the engineers and 10 rail lines centers on pay, work rules, and working conditions, Speakes said. Mediation efforts began last December and ran through May, he said.

"A strike by the BLE (Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers) threatens substantially to interrupt interstate commerce to a degree such as to deprive a section of the country of essential transportation service," said a written statement issued by White House officials in California with the president.

The president is expected to name the three members of the fact-finding board next week. They would have 30 days to study the issues and develop recommendations, and the union and industry then would have 30 days to consider the board's findings.

The BLE had scheduled a walkout for 10:30 p.m. EDT Sunday. Before Reagan's action, Bill Wanke, first vice president of the engineers' union, said the union "absolutely" would abide by the no-strike ban and the accompanying cooling off period.

Speakes said a strike would have a "severe impact on Department of Defense material, coal, wheat and inter-city rail passengers." In addition, he said it would increase unemployment by 620,000 after two weeks and by 1.1 million after four weeks.

Speakes said in 1981, 18 percent of the Defense Department's freight traffic went by rail. That figure rose to 25 percent in the first six months of this year.

The press spokesman said the unemployment, already at a post-World War II record of 9.5 percent, would be concentrated in such industries as transportation, primary metals, pulp and paper products and coal.

In addition, he said a strike would affect the nation's balance of payments since export sales of winter wheat amount to $5.5 billion.

Speakes quoted Robert Harris, chairman of the mediation board, as having informed Reagan that the situation was "extremely critical" since the carriers involved operate 90 percent of railroad track mileage in the United States and serve all contiguous states except Rhode Island.

Under provisions of the law, the mediation board had to conclude that a rail strike would deprive a section of the country of essential transportation service before Reagan could appoint the fact-finding panel.

Wanke said his union's bargaining impasse with the National Railway Labor Conference involves an effort by management to eliminate work rules requiring payment of special fees and allowances in addition to straight wages.

Charles Hopkins, chairman of the railway management bargaining group, has said the dispute involves union work rule agreements that the rail lines "no longer can live with."

Asks $5 Million In Palimony Suit

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — A woman who says she has been cut off after serving for 12 years as a paid "traveling companion" to socialite Alfred Bloomingdale has filed a $5 million "palimony" suit against the close friend of President Reagan's.

The suit was filed Thursday by celebrity lawyer Marvin Mitchelson in Superior Court on behalf of Vicki Morgan, 29, who said she was the 66-year-old Bloomingdale's companion from the time she was 17 years old.

The suit says Bloomingdale, founder of Diners Club Corp. and heir to the Bloomingdale's department store fortune, never had a live-in relationship with Ms. Morgan, but contends he had a "second home" with her in Beverly Hills and was a "second father" to her son by another man.

"She hates to do this because she loves him, but she has no choice," Mitchelson said.

Mitchelson, best known for the landmark palimony case of Michelle Triola Marvin against actor Lee Marvin, said Ms. Morgan was cut off financially by Bloomingdale, a millionaire, last month.

"Unlike the Marvin case, Ms. Morgan has some signed agreements with Bloomingdale," Mitchelson said. The documents, he added, include an agreement to pay her as much as $10,000 a month.

The suit said Bloomingdale, a member of Reagan's so-called "kitchen cabinet" of advisers, had paid Ms. Morgan as a "traveling companion, confidante and business partner."

He and his wife, prominent in Los Angeles society, have hosted many parties for Reagan and his wife, Nancy, on their trips to the West Coast. The Bloomingdales have three children.

Two Collisions Here Thursday

An estimated $1,900 property damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Thursday.

Heaviest damage, according to officers, resulted from a 9:15 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Arlington Boulevard and Clifton Street involving cars driven by Theodora McGregor Proctor of 94 Windy Ridge and Benjamin Braswell of Route 4, Greenville.

Damage from the collision was estimated at $800 to the Proctor car and $400 to the Braswell vehicle.

Cars driven by David Junior Perkins of 1005 W. Sixth St. and Rosa Dixon Williams of 307 Line Ave. collided about 8:15 a.m. at the intersection of Line Avenue and Wilson Street, causing an estimated $400 damage to the Perkins car and $300 damage to the Williams vehicle.

Investigators charged Perkins with improper passing.

Set Highway Hearing At Lenor CC

KINSTON — The state Board of Transportation will hold a public meeting at Lenoir Community College at the intersection of U.S. 70 and N.C. 58 July 21 at 2 p.m. to receive recommendations on highway and other transportation priorities.

Information collected at the meeting will be used to update the 1982-1991 Transportation Improvement Program, the department's basic planning document for all transportation improvement programs.

The Kinston session — for Division 2, which includes Pitt, Lenoir, Beaufort, Carteret, Craven, Greene, Jones and Pamlico counties — will be the second of 14 meetings across the state to receive public input.

"This year's meetings will be conducted with emphasis being placed on declining state highway revenues," DOT Secretary William R. Roberson said.

"When our board updated our current program last year, $1.2 billion in highway projects had to be made inactive due to anticipated lower funding levels for construction."

Roberson also pointed out that, unless new sources of funds are found by July 1983, the state will not have matching funds for federal highway aid use. Presently, 1977 bond funds for highway construction are being used to match federal aid. These funds will be exhausted by July of next year. That means, in effect, that "we won't have a highway construction program after that date."

See Port At Radio Island

Radio Island in the Morehead City harbor could be developed as a port with strict environmental and train traffic controls if the Carteret County Board of Commissioners adopts a plan accepted by the N.C. Coastal Resources Commission.

The island's location, and its access to transportation and deep water, make it the best site in the harbor area for new port facilities, according to the Radio Island area development plan submitted to the commission by a task force representing state and local government.

The Coastal Resources Commission agreed recently to continue until its next meeting a public hearing on proposed post-disaster planning guidelines. Former CRC Chairman David Stick of Kitty Hawk and Mayor Don Bryan of Nags Head reminded the commission of their experiences with the chaos which follows a coastal disaster and the need for advanced planning to reduce the inevitable confusion.

A commission task force examined ways to allow development which might normally be denied when the projects have overriding public benefits. Procedures to require applicants to improve, replace or restore natural resources in these cases are being studied for possible use in North Carolina.

The CRC also reviewed proposals for permit streamlining and exemptions for routine minor permits, discussed progress in the public beach access program and approved land use plans for Carteret County and the town of Indian Beach.

Bike Auction

A bicycle auction will be held by the Greenville Police Department July 29 at 10 a.m. in the parking lot between the municipal building and the main fire station on West Fifth Street.

The 41 bicycles are to be sold to the highest bidder for cash. They are bicycles that have been lost or stolen and recovered by police, and not claimed by their rightful owners.

REUNION CANCELED

The reunion of the Little, White, Chapman and Hardee families planned for Sunday has been canceled.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

MURDERERS' BIBLES

THE BIBLE IS, AND PROBABLY ALWAYS WILL BE, THE WORLD'S BEST-SELLER! WITH SO MANY MULTIPLE PRINTINGS OVER THE YEARS, IT WAS ALMOST INEVITABLE THAT TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS SHOULD OCCUR!

TWO DIFFERENT EDITIONS ARE NICK-NAMED THE MURDERER'S BIBLE. IN ONE, WHAT SHOULD HAVE READ "LET THE CHILDREN FIRST BE FILLED" (MARK 7:27) WAS MISPRINTED TO READ "...LET THE CHILDREN BE KILLED." IN THE OTHER, THE ADMONITION THAT MURDERERS WERE TO BE PUT TO DEATH (NUMBERS 35:18) SCRAMBLED THE LINE TO READ "MURDERERS SHALL BE PUT TOGETHER."

IN 1702, THE OUTRAGED PURITAN MINISTER, COTTON MATHER (1663-1728), PREACHED AGAINST PRINTERS' SHOCKING MISTAKES IN BOSTON'S NORTH CHURCH, WHERE HE WAS PASTOR. MATHER, ONE OF THE FOUNDERS OF YALE COLLEGE, THUNDERED OUT A VERY APPROPRIATE TEXTUAL MISPRINT—PSALM 119:161 WHICH SHOULD HAVE READ, "PRINCES HAVE PERSECUTED ME..." BUT WHICH APPEARED IN THE BIBLE MATHER HELD IN HIS HAND, BECAUSE OF A PRINTER'S CARELESS WORK, AS: "PRINTERS HAVE PERSECUTED ME..." AND, ACCORDING TO THE REVEREND MATHER, INDEED THEY HAD!

NEXT WEEK: THE DEVIL TREMBLES!

If You Have a Habit Of Following The Crowd, We Suggest, The Best Crowd to Follow is the Crowd Going To Church

Troupes Of U.S. Youths Singing To The Lord

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

From place to place, the bands of hearty youngsters go, singing all the way. By bus or plane, across the United States and around the world, they keep on the move, making music to their Lord.

"Get all excited!" goes one of their catchy numbers, "and tell everybody — that Jesus Christ is king!"

There are about 550 of them roving America and abroad this summer — 16 groups of youthful, high-spirited singers and instrumentalists — throbbing out their contemporary, religious tunes in zesty beats.

"It's a music ministry, letting people know about Jesus Christ and the happiness he brings to our lives — the change, joy and beauty," says Alan Kraft, 19, of Wichita, Kan. "We show it in our music and in being Christians."

He's a banjo-playing tenor in one touring group of about 40 youths. After zigzagging their way from town to town across the country since mid-June, they left last week for England, Holland and West Germany. Several were interviewed on a New York stop.

"It's a real growing experience," said Kathy Jewett, 20, of Wheat Ridge, Colo. "It has brought me into a closer relationship with God. I've learned a lot more trust in him and faith in the answering of prayer."

The summertime musical evangelists are the "Continental Singers," aggregations recruited annually in auditions among high school and college youths around the country. After 10 days rehearsal at a San Bernardino, Calif., camp, they're dispersed in units for 2½ months of daily on-the-go-concerts.

"We come from all different types of churches, but we have a common bond, Jesus Christ," said David Franks, 19, of Amarillo, Texas, a drummer with the group.

Steve Dillard, 21, of Rosston, Ark., said the experience "broadens our whole outlook. We meet all sorts of people and see how God works in their lives."

Each of the participants provides about half the costs of their tours through savings, their parents, home congregations or other sponsors, ranging from $2,000 to $4,000 each, depending on the itinerary.

The other half comes through concert contributions and records. It's the 15th year of the project, founded in 1967 by composer-arranger Cam Floria of Thousand Oaks, Calif., as a non-profit subsidiary of his gospel music enterprise, Continental Ministries.

"It's a real joy to play for the Lord from the keyboard," said pianist Bruce McNeill, 23, of Flintville, Wis. "It's exciting. We also have a responsibility as Christians not just in public situations, but as servants to each other."

In the course of their 10 weeks of concerts — every day and two on Sundays — the groups give 75 to 80 performances each, a total of about 1,200 of them, at churches, schools, hospitals, military bases, civic groups and other audiences inviting them, indoors and out.

Ordinarily, they fan out to spend the night with members of host audiences, traveling by day.

"It's hard but it's fun," says Henry Chastain, 24, of Palatka, Fla. "It's also worth while. Talking to people, staying in homes, you share your Christian walk with others."

Asked if they didn't get weary of the heavy schedule or chafed at being with the same group day-after-day, Bram Floria, 16, of Thousand Oaks, a son of the founder, said:

"No matter what our temperaments, we pull together. We use Scriptures as preventive medicine."

Ms. Jewett observed, "There's no time to be bored." As for fatigue, she said, "You pray about it, and sleep on the bus."

The group says it sees God's hand in solving even the smallest problems, such as the time a member ripped his pants while unloading a bus, then discovered he was assigned for the night to stay with a professional seamstress.

"Some people would consider it mere coincidence, but we see such everyday things as provided by God," commented Dillard.

Asked if they sometimes felt themselves different or odd in a world of many turned-off and alienated youths indifferent to religion, Gene Parents, 18, of Thousand Oaks, said:

"Yes, it is different. We're in a big world but it's exciting when the Lord is using you. Whatever way anyone else is, we are singing."

Said Kraft: "It's not true that we feel 'holier than thou'. We're no better than anyone else. But Christ has brought us happiness and joy and we want to share it with people. Not by any pressure. But they can hear it in our music and see it in our lives."

Collision Course City Council...

VIENNA, Austria (AP) - Iran set a collision course with Iraq and Saudi Arabia today over the Khomeini regime's demand to increase its oil production quota. One OPEC member said something has to give.

"If we are going to remain at 17.5 (million barrels a day), we're going to have to reallocate some quotas," Venezuelan Oil Minister Humberto Calderon Bertoldo reported after an initial three-hour session.

More emergency meetings were planned for later in the day in attempts to maintain the ceiling of 17.5 million barrels a day set by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to protect the $34 benchmark price.

Delegates from Saudi Arabia, the world's biggest oil exporter, and Iraq, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's enemy in the 22-month-old Persian Gulf war, rejected the idea that Iran be allowed to exceed its production quota.

"We oppose it flatly," said Iraqi Oil Minister Kasim Hassan Taqi. "Our aim and aspiration is for all member countries to achieve their agreed-upon quotas."

Shortly after arriving for today's meeting, Iranian Oil Minister Mohammed Gharazi said Iran would not abide by its production limit of 1.2 million barrels a day, and would press for a higher quota. Iran is already violating its quota pledge by producing about 2.2 million barrels daily.

The OPEC ministers' most pressing problem will be to stop excess oil production by some members. Besides Iran, Libya and Nigeria are believed to be violating individual quotas set at a special session last March.

Gharazi said Iran hoped to increase its production to 3 million barrels a day, and that Saudi Arabia would have to compensate for that increase by cutting its output of 7.5 million barrels. Gharazi did not say when Iran expected to reach the higher level.

He told reporters he still approves of OPEC's overall production ceiling of 17.5 million barrels a day, but is seeking a change in Iran's limit.

"We accept the 17.5 (million), but we don't accept our quota," he said. "That is our position."

Gay Paces Pitt Past Snow Hill By 11-2

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

For a guy who wasn't supposed to start, Tyrone Gay did okay.

The slender Ayden-Grifton High School hurler did his job both on the mound and at the plate as he paced Pitt County's American Legion baseball team to an 11-2 rout of Snow Hill last night in the first game of the second round of the Area I playoffs.

Roger Williams had been slated to start the game on the mound. However, he has not responded to an injury sustained a couple of days ago when he was hit in the left foot by a batted ball. Instead, Gay drew the assignment and Williams watched from the bench.

But what a job Gay did in "relief." He scattered four hits, allowed just two runs — those after the issue was no longer in doubt, struck out 11 and walked just one.

And at the plate, he banged out three hits in five trips — one of them a two-run homer — and drove in three runs.

Not a bad night for a fellow who didn't know he was going to play until just before the teams were introduced for the start of the contest.

"I just had enough time to get warmed up," he said afterwards. "I really didn't know I was going to start until the last minute."

Nevertheless, he was one of the driving forces behind the win. Helping him out was Mont Carter, who had a four-for-four evening at the bat, including two singles, a double and a triple. Terry Locust added three hits, while Emmett Walsh and Bill Kittrell each had two.

"I was a little worried about whether we'd be able to keep on hitting like we were at the end of the regular season," coach Bill Davis said. "I didn't know how much the layoff was going to affect us. Apparently, it didn't hurt us much at all."

Davis was referring to the fact that the team hasn't played in over a week, thanks to two forfeited games at the end of the regular season and a bye in the first round of the playoffs.

"I was a little surprised we did hit the way we did. I just hope it keeps on," Davis said.

He had praise for Gay, too. "He pitched a whale of a game and did a fine job with the bat too. Carter had a great game not only with the bat but on defense also."

Losing coach Jim Fulghum didn't offer any excuses for his team's poor performance — a performance punctuated by six errors. His team too had a layoff when Edenton forfeited its playoff rights to Snow Hill.

"I don't think the layoff was a factor. Our bats were rusty, but that's no excuse. We just didn't play. Gay threw strikes, but he didn't throw as hard as I've seen him throw before."

Asked if he through such a beating in the first game might not carry over into the second, Fulghum said he hoped not. "We start again at 0-0. That's the only way I know to go. But I don't know if we can get 'em ready for (Friday night). I hope so. Actually, it could have been a whole lot worse tonight."

It was bad enough as it was.

Snow Hill struck for its first run in the top of the fifth. With one away, Gay issued his only walk to Butch Brown and put him on second with a wild pitch. Bobby Avery singled him to third and he scored when Chris Newsome grounded to second.

Pitt came right back with three more runs. With two away, Kittrell reached on an infield hit off the glove of first baseman Ginn. Buie's pop to leftcenter was dropped, allowing Kittrell to score. Gay then followed with a homer to left, running the lead out to 6-1.

Pitt collected two more in the sixth. Carter singled to right and Locust beat out a slow roller to first, and an error on the play allowed Carter to take third. Locust moved up on a wild pitch and both scored on Walsh's single to right.

The final Snow Hill run came in the top of the seventh on a solo two-out homer by pinch-hitter Lewis Yelverton, who connected on the first pitch thrown him by Gay.

But Pitt came back with three more in the bottom of the inning to finish it off at 11-2. Buie walked and after he stole up, Gay singled him in. Warren walked and Carter singled to load the bases. Locust then singled to left, driving in both Gay and Warren.

No one got more than one hit for Snow Hill.

The best-of-three series resumes tonight in Snow Hill at 8 p.m. Should a third game be necessary, it will be played Sunday at 3 p.m. at Harrington Field.

The winner goes on to face the winner of the Rocky Mount-Wilson series, which gets underway in Wilson tonight.

Marsh Captures Twin States; Fields Sets New Course Record

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Page Marsh, as expected, came away with her third Twin States Junior Girls Golf Championship at Brook Valley Country Club yesterday, but diminutive Kim Fields of Elizabeth City provided the fireworks.

Marsh added a two-over-par 74 to her even par 72 in the second day of the 36-hole tournament to easily take first place with a 146 total. Second place in the championship flight went to Leslie Brown, who finished at 154.

But it was Fields, who opened the day in a four-way tie for the lead in the first flight, who really had them sitting up and taking notice with a course record 70 to win the flight going away.

Fields, who birdied six straight holes, 12 through 17, finished up with a 152, but still only squeezed out a one stroke win over Tracy Ouimet, who had a 71 to finish at 153 after being a part of the four-way logjam that started the day.

"I just wish I had played like that on Wednesday," Fields said. She noted that during the birdie string she was able to put the ball right on the pin. "The longest putt I had was about five feet, and the shortest was about two inches."

Greenville golfer Susan Corbett had a second 80 to finish at 160, good enough for fourth place in the championship flight. "I hit the ball better today, but I still didn't putt well," she said.

Marsh, who successfully defended the title she won last year, ran into some trouble out of her own making on the back side of the course. And although she admitted that it did bother her, she didn't show it outwardly.

Marsh opened the day with a bogey on the first hole. "I got to thinking right there. 'Oh, no, it's not going to be like that.' But I settled down and played par golf the rest of the side except for a birdie on six."

That pulled her back to even par, and she stayed there right through the first 15 holes. She did miss a shot at an eagle on the 13th hole, sending her drive to within 155 yards of the hole and her second shot onto the green.

But she missed the eagle putt by a two feet, then missed the short putt for the birdie.

A day earlier, she had double bogeyed the 14th hole, and was asked if maybe she was thinking ahead. "No, I don't really think I was, but I didn't concentrate. I kind of blanked when I hit it. That second putt didn't even touch the rim. I'm usually not that bad a putter. I very seldom three-putt."

Nevertheless, it took away her chance to go back under par, and on the 16th hole, she ran into a terror problem.

Her drive on the dog-leg right hole went into the middle trap of three that guard the turn. On arriving at the trap, she found the ball nestled down in a hole apparently dug by some children several inches below the surface of the trap and up against the back bank of the bunker. There was absolutely no way of playing the ball and she had to take a penalty stroke to remove it.

Marsh managed a bogey on the hole, parred the 17th, then bogeyed the 18th to finish two over.

"I hit the ball well throughout the day, but I

Leader Page Marsh takes a look at her ball, just barely visible (arrow) in a hole several inches deep in a sand trap on the 16th hole at Brook Valley. The hole had apparently been dug by children playing in the trap. Marsh was forced to take a penalty lift from the unplayable lie and bogeyed the hole on the way to an eight-shot victory in the Twin States Junior Girls Golf Championships which wound up yesterday. A's Top Yanks, Give Martin 1,000th

By The Associated Press

Oakland's Mike Norris lost his no-hit bid against the New York Yankees in seventh inning. By that time, Doyle Alexander had lost more than that.

Norris, making his first start after spending 21 days on the disabled list, pitched no-hit ball for 6-3 innings and wound up with a four-hitter as the A's posted a 6-3 victory over the Yankees Thursday night, giving Billy Martin his 1,000th victory as a manager.

New York's first hit was a check-swing single to center field by Oscar Gamble with one out in the seventh.

"I laughed," said Norris of the hit. "I didn't take it that seriously. You don't ever go out anticipating a no-hitter."

The Yankees weren't laughing about Alexander's performance.

The right-hander, who had been on the disabled list since early May with a broken bone in his pitching hand, lasted just 1 1-3 innings, giving up five runs, including four in the first inning when Tony Armas homered and Jeff Burroughs added a two-run single.

The outing angered Yankee officials because Alexander, who suffered his injury by punching a dugout wall in Seattle, refused to remain with the team's AAA farm club at Columbus to get into shape.

"What Doyle Alexander did to his teammates in Oakland tonight was disgraceful but typical of the selfishness of some of the modern-day ballplayers," Bill Bergesch, the Yankees vice president of operations said in a statement released after Alexander was yanked.

"Here is a man earning hundreds of thousands of dollars to pitch and then flat refuses to get himself ready. He then goes out tonight and proves to the world that the coaching staff and manager were right," the statement went on.

Alexander, now 0-3, felt he hadn't let the team down but added, "I'm not looking for a verbal war in the press with these guys."

Yankee Manager Gene Michael said Alexander, who has a $2.2-million, four-year pact, would be assigned to the bullpen for occasional duty.

Rickey Henderson had his 80th and 81st stolen bases of the season for the A's, while John Mayberry hit a two-run homer for New York in the seventh and Gamble added a solo homer in the ninth.

Twins 3, Brewers 0

Jack O'Connor and Ron Davis combined for an eight-hitter and Kent Hrbek lashed four singles, scored one run and knocked in another as Minnesota blanked Milwaukee for its fifth victory in six games.

It was the first shutout against the Brewers since New York's Roger Erickson, then with Minnesota, beat them 1-0 June 8, 1981.

O'Connor, 2-2, walked four and struck out four over seven innings. Davis finished up to get his seventh save. Hrbek's RBI single put Minnesota ahead 1-0 in the first inning against Pete Vuckovich, 10-4. Minnesota added two more in the fifth on a two-out RBI single by Gary Ward and Gary Gaetti's run-scoring double.

White Sox 3, Tigers 2

Pinch hitter Jerry Hairston slammed a dramatic two-out, two-run homer in the bottom of the ninth inning as Chicago handed Detroit its 19th loss in its last 24 games.

Hairston's homer, his second pinch-hit blast of the season, made LaMarr Hoyt the AL's first 11-game winner this season. It came on a 1-0 pitch from Dan Petry, who had scattered seven hits to that point.

"I've never been more grateful to see a ball go out of the park," said Hoyt, who ended a personal four-game losing streak.

Tom Paciorek's RBI single in the second had given Chicago a 1-0 lead but Detroit tied the score in the seventh on Mike Ivie's 12th homer of the season. The Tigers took the lead in the top of the ninth when shortstop Vance Law's error allowed Larry Parrish to score.

Red Sox 3, Rangers 0

Chuck Rainey tossed a six-hitter and Dwight Evans cracked three hits as Boston handed Texas its third straight loss.

Rainey, 5-3, walked four and struck out two in recording his second complete game. Boston took a 2-0 lead in the sixth when Glenn Hoffman doubled and scored on Jerry Remy's single. Remy took third when Evans' fly ball to center was misplayed into a double and, after an intentional walk to Jim Rice, scored as Tony Perez grounded out.

The Red Sox added a run in the eighth on Rice's RBI single.

Blue Jays 5, Royals 4

Dave Stieb continued his mastery over Kansas City and Barry Bonnell and Willie Upshaw collected RBIs during a two-run, eighth-inning rally as Toronto snapped the Royals' three-game winning streak.

Stieb, 7-10, is 3-0 with an earned run average of 0.71 against the Royals this season.

Trailing 4-3, Toronto reached reliever Mike Armstrong, 2-3, in the eighth. Hosken Powell led off with a single and went to third on Damaso Garcia's double. Bonnell scored Powell on a check-swing roller and Upshaw hit an RBI single.

Mariners 4, Orioles 3

Dave Edler drove in three runs, including the game winner with a seventh-inning single, as Seattle downed Baltimore and to post its 26th come-from-behind victory of the season.

The Mariners, who trailed 3-0 after three innings, closed to within 3-2 in the third on Edler's RBI groundout and Bruce Bochte's run-scoring double. They tied the game in the fifth when Edler knocked in another run with a grounder.

The Orioles scored on Eddie Murray's RBI single in the first and added an unearned run in the second when third baseman Edler made an error. John Lowenstein homered in the third.

Angels 5, Indians 1

Fred Lynn cracked a tie-breaking three-run homer in the third inning and knocked in another run with a groundout in the fifth as California snapped an eight-game losing streak by beating Cleveland.

Brian Downing hit a solo homer for the Angels, while Dave Goltz and Doug Corbett, who posted his 10th save, held the Indians to six hits, one of them an RBI double by Andre Thornton in the first inning.

Optimist 8
Coca-Cola 2

Joel Pierce hit a two-run home run and Optimist scored five runs in the sixth inning to down Coca-Cola, 8-2, Thursday in the first round of the North State Little League tournament.

Optimist was to have played Union Carbide today in the semifinals, with the winner advancing to the finals. Union Carbide had a first-round bye.

Pierce's two-run home run, which came after Nelson Galloway reached base on an error in the top of the second, erased a one-run deficit and gave Optimist a 2-1 lead.

Coke tied the game in the bottom of the inning but Optimist took the lead for good in the fourth. Galloway singled, went to second on a wild pitch and to third on a ground out. He scored on Shawn Giffin's single.

Optimist then upped its lead to 8-2 with a five-run sixth inning. Galloway and Lee Ball both doubled home a run in the inning, which featured three walks and an error also.

Ball had three hits — all doubles — for Optimist. Galloway had two hits. Jay Surles and Eddie White both had two hits for Coke.

Kiwanis 5
Jaycees 3

Curtis Jones hit a two-run home run and helped key a two-run fifth inning with a single to carry Kiwanis to a 5-3 victory Thursday in the first round of the North State Little League tournament.

Kiwanis was to have played the Lions today in the semifinals. The Lions downed Sportsworld, 16-2, Thursday in "My coach told me not to expect to get to play as a freshman, but a lot of other people told me I should expect to be number one. Actually, all I wanted to do was to make the first five, so I kind of surprised myself when I did make number one. It took a lot of hard work."

Page feels that her short iron game is her strongest suit. "I can usually get the ball up and down pretty well," she said.

And while she admitted that she felt comfortable going into the final round of the tournament with a four-shot lead, she said she didn't worry about what the other girls did. "I try to play the course — to break par. I can't do anything about what the others are shooting, so I just play my game and don't worry about what someone else does."

another first-round game.

Both teams scored a run in the first inning and it stayed tied until the third when, with two gone, Jones homered with Kraig Butler on Butler walked to open the inning.

The Jaycees closed the gap to 3-2 in the fourth but Kiwanis came back with two runs in the fifth on singles by Robbie McDonald and Jones, an error and a balk to take a 5-2 lead.

The Jaycees scored their final run in the bottom of the inning.

Jones was three for three to lead Kiwanis. Brian Pierce had two hits for the Jaycees.

Lions 16
Sportsworld 2

League-leading hitter Tom Moye hit two solo homers and the Lions struck for nine runs in the third inning to roll to a 16-2 victory over Sportsworld Thursday in the first round of the North State Little League tournament.

The Lions scored three runs in the first inning on singles by Jarvis Groome and Bobby Williams. Both teams scored a run in the second.

The Lions then erupted for nine runs in the third, an inning that started with a solo home run by Moye. Moye ended the regular season first in hitting in the league with a .643 mark.

The Lions added another run to their lead in the fourth and scored twice more in the fifth, one of those runs coming on Moye's second home run of the game, as the Lions up their lead to 16-1.

Sportsworld scored its other run in the sixth.

No one for Sportsworld had more than one hit. Moye was two for two for the Lions.

Tom Moye of the Lions finished the regular season as the North State League's top hitter, ending with a .643 average. He was well ahead of runner-up Tony Evans of Coca-Cola, who batted .518.

Eddie White of Coke was third at .418, followed by Morris Johnson of Union Carbide at .478 and Kevin Jordan of Coke at .462.

The second five included Jeff Mahoney of Optimists, .453; Terrence Cherry of Optimists, .436; Robbie McDonald of Kiwanis, .420; John Chambliss, Kiwanis, .409, and Brian Pierce of Jaycees, .400.

Wellcome 5
True Value 3

Wellcome rallied for four runs in the seventh inning and came away with a 5-3 victory over True Value Hardware in the first round of the Tar Heel Little League playoffs yesterday.

Wellcome now plays regular season champ First Federal today. First Federal had a bye.

True Value scored once in the second, and Wellcome tied it up with one in the fifth. In the top of the seventh, True Value scored twice to take a 3-1 lead.

But Wellcome pulled it out in the bottom of the inning. Matthew Perry led off with a single and Jason Browder walked.

After two outs, Judd Crumpler singled, driving in Perry. Dallas McPherson then cracked a home run that brought in three runs and gave Wellcome the win.

Crumpler led the Wellcome hitting with two, while Bobby Bell had three and Chris Bender, two, for True Value.

Carroll & Assoc. 10
Pepsi-Cola 1

Carroll & Associates made a wreck of Pepsi-Cola yesterday in the first round of the Tar Heel Little League playoffs, taking a 10-1 victory.

Carroll & Associates grabbed the lead in the first inning, scoring once.

Then, in the second, they added three more to sew it up. Joel Daughtry walked and so did Michael Sutton. Both moved up on a wild pitch and Lloyd May grounded out, scoring Daughtry. Sutton advanced on a wild pitch and Billy Carr walked, stealing second. Sutton scored on Jamie Marshall's ground out, and Carr came in when James Lawler reached on an error.

C&A added one in the third, three in the fourth and two in the fifth. Pepsi's lone run came over in the fourth.

Lawler led the C&A hitting with two, while Pepsi got only two hits off the pitching of Carr.

Moose 13
Exchange 1

The Moose pushed over five runs in the first inning and went on to take a 13-1 victory over the Exchange yesterday in the first round of the Tar Heel Little League playoffs yesterday.

The Moose now meet Carroll & Associates in today's second round.

Chris Christopher led off the first by reaching on an error. He stole second and took third on a wild pitch, scoring on another.

L.L. Everett walked, but was cut down on Wesley Jackson's grounder. Jay Mattox reached on an error and both advanced on a passed ball. Rexter Williams reached on an error, scoring Jackson, and another error let Mattox score. Rob Barnes arrived on another misplay, scoring Williams, and Bill Rogers doubled in Barnes with the fifth run.

Greenville will meet the loser of the Washington-Pitt County game on Saturday at 4:30 p.m., while Green County takes on the loser of the Martin-Nash game, also on Saturday.

The two winners from last night's games and their foes meet tonight.

The Moose then added seven runs in the second and one in the fifth. Exchange got its only run in the fourth.

Christopher, Everett and Mattox each had two hits for the Moose, while Toby Hendrix had three hits for Exchange.

Pugh's Firestone ... 3
Farmville 2

Keith Phillips scored on Kenny Kirland's double in the bottom of the sixth inning and allowed Pugh's Firestone to pull out a 3-2 Coastal Plains Senior Babe Ruth League victory over Farmville last night.

It was the final regular season game of the year for both. The league begins its post-season tournament tonight in Farmville.

Pugh's grabbed the lead in the second inning, scoring twice. Farmville came back with one in the fourth and another in the fifth to tie it up, however.

In the sixth, Phillips opened the inning with a walk and moved up when Eric Woodworth reached on an error. After one out, Kirland doubled to drive in Phillips with the game-winning run.

Randy Norris, Eddie Jones and Gerald Wilson each had two hits for Farmville. No one had more than one for Pugh's.

Pittsburgh Sees Reds Come Back, But Turns On Own Rally For Win

By The Associated Press

Lightning struck in Pittsburgh for the second night in a row, but this time the Pirates replied with some thunder of their own.

On Wednesday night, the Cincinnati Reds had pounded Pittsburgh relief ace Kent Tekulve for five runs in the top of the ninth inning and snapped a nine-game losing streak by defeating the Pirates 6-3.

They appeared to have done it again Thursday night when they scored six times off Manny Sarmiento and Tekulve in the inning and took an 8-4 lead into the bottom of the ninth.

But the Pirates jumped on Tom Hume and Joe Price for five runs on Willie Stargell's two-run pinch homer and Jason Thompson's three-run double and pulled out a 9-8 victory.

"It's like being down for a nine-count, getting up off the floor and knocking the other guy out," said Manager Chuck Tanner.

The Pirates should have been shellshocked when they came up for their final turn at bat. "But our guys just came to the bench and said: 'Let's go get them. The game isn't over,'" Tanner said.

And it wasn't. Tony Pena opened the counter-rally with a single and one out later Stargell slammed his second home run of the season and first in Pittsburgh since August 1980.

"You just swing the bat, close your eyes and when you hear something run like heck," said the veteran slugger.

A single by Omar Moreno chased Hume and singles by Johnny Ray and Bill Madlock off Price loaded the bases, still with one out. Thompson

Cardinals 5, Braves 2
Tom Herr greeted Atlanta relief ace Gene Garber with a two-run triple to key a five-run St. Louis eighth-inning uprising. Atlanta's Rick Mahler was working on a two-hit shutout entering the eighth when Ken Oberkfell singled. One out later, singles by pinch hitter Dane Iorg and Lonnie Smith produced a run.

Herr then ripped his triple, putting the Cardinals in front 3-2. After Willie McGee grounded out, Keith Hernandez was walked intentionally. George Hendrick foiled the strategy with a double that scored McGee and Hernandez. Bob Horner homered for Atlanta, his 18th of the season and seventh in the last eight games.

Padres 5, Phillies 3
Ruppert Jones slammed a two-run homer and Garry Templeton and Luis Salazar added solo shots as San Diego posted its fifth consecutive victory and moved within 2½ games of first-place Atlanta in the NL West. The setback knocked the Phillies out of the lead in the NL East, dropping them one game behind St. Louis. Jones homered in the first inning. Salazar singled a run across in the fourth. Templeton homered in the fifth

Zokol 'Waltzes' To Lead In Milwaukee Tourney

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Canadian Dick Zokol has found a revolutionary way to shake the tension of playing his rookie season on the American golf tour.

He listens to soft rock music through earphones while he plays the game. Zokol tried the strategy for the first time Thursday. It worked.

He fired his best round as a professional, a 7-under-par 65, that earned him a piece of the opening Greater Milwaukee Open lead with Scott Simpson, Jay Cudd, David Edwards and Terry Diehl.

"It paid dividends," he said. Such a lofty spot on the leaderboards is unaccustomed for him.

Zokol never has been in the

Nichols Is Putt Champ

John Nichols won his first sudden-death playoff in three tries to capture the Thursday Nite Amateur Tournament last night at the Greenville Putt Golf Course.

Nichols and Robbie Moyer were tied at the end of regulation at eight-under-par 64 to force the playoff. In two previous playoffs, Nichols lost to finish in second.

Not so last night. It took five holes, but Nichols prevailed over Moyer to gain his first sudden-death triumph.

Mike Futrell was third at 65 followed by Frank Moyer, Robbie's father, who was fourth at 68.

Coy Triplett was fifth at 69 followed by Jimmy Silverthorne and Derrick Hooks at 70 and 73, respectively.

top 20 of a tournament. In fact, he's made money in only three of his 20 American starts, standing 210th on the current money list with $2,743.

The former Brigham Young University standout admits the pressure has been immense in his first pro season.

"It's been a tough year and I knew it would be. I'm just trying to persevere. I've got to convince myself I can play with these guys, players I've seen on TV for the last 10 years. I know my game is good and Salazar connected in the eighth, an inside-the-park smash high off the center field fence.

Expos 7, Dodgers 3

Warren Cromartie drove in three runs, two with a double that broke a 3-3 tie in the fifth inning, as the Expos ended a four-game losing streak. With two out in the fifth, Gary Carter singled and Tim Wallach walked off reliever Alejandro Pena. Cromartie, who had an RBI single in the second inning, then sliced a double that fell inches inside the left field foul line and scored both runners. Montreal made it 7-3 in the seventh. Al Oliver walked and Carter's double got past left fielder Rick Monday, allowing Oliver to score. Carter then scored from second on a sacrifice fly by Wallach as center fielder Ken Landreaux crashed into the fence making the catch. Landreaux left the game with a bruised right shoulder.

Giants 9, Mets 7
Chili Davis rapped off four singles and drove in two runs enough," he said. If he never wins another dollar, Zokol will be known as one of the sport's pioneers with his headset.

Jack Tuthill, the PGA Tour's tournament director and a 22-year veteran of the American circuit, believes Zokol's music listening is a first.

"And I see nothing wrong with it either. It might block out distractions," he said. "We've had a lot of guys listen to ball games, both baseball and football, but never this," said Tuthill.

as the Giants handed the Mets their sixth consecutive setback. Davis' RBI single keyed San Francisco's four-run fourth and he also singled home the first of three runs in the eighth that opened a 9-3 lead. Jim Wohlford drove in three runs for the Giants with a sacrifice fly, single and double and Reggie Smith also had three RBIs with a pair of singles.

Cubs 5, Astros 3
Jody Davis slammed a three-run double with two out in the eighth inning to bring Chicago from behind. The Cubs trailed 3-2 when Junior Kennedy led off the eighth with a single off Vern Ruhle. One out later, Leon Durham was safe on second baseman Phil Garner's error and Keith Moreland singled to load the bases. Frank LaCorte came in to pitch and retired Jay Johnstone on a pop fly for the second out, but Davis doubled down the left field line to clear the bases. Garner had given the Astros a 3-2 lead in the sixth with his seventh home run of the season.

Diplomat Sees Kremlin Threat As 'Maneuvering'

PICTUREPHONE — Bell System executives inaugurate the start of their company's new Picturephone service by placing a call from Washington to New York, Thursday, in Washington. The new two-way video teleconferencing service allows business people to meet face-to-face without the need for travel. American Telephone and Telegraph plans to add 14 cities this year to the system, and 42 more by the end of 1983. (AP Laserphoto)

By BARTON REPPERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Malcolm Toon, who has served as America's top envoy both to Moscow and Tel Aviv, says the Kremlin's warning over possible use of U.S. troops in Lebanon appears to be "political maneuvering" rather than a threat of direct Soviet intervention in the conflict.

Toon said Thursday the message sent to President Reagan by Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev may actually serve to increase the chances that the United States will go ahead with sending Marines into Beirut to help evacuate beleaguered Palestinian guerrillas.

"We're now in a different sort of ball game," Toon said in an interview. "With the Soviets issuing these threats, it's going to be rather difficult for us to back away from the president's apparent commitment without giving at least the appearance of knuckling under to Soviet pressure."

Brezhnev's message to Reagan, as reported by the official Soviet news agency Tass, said that if U.S. Marines were dispatched to Beirut "the Soviet Union would build its policy with due consideration of this fact."

According to Tass, Brezhnev expressed the hope that "at this critical moment ... a sense of responsibility and common sense would prevail over opportunistic calculations."

The report did not specify what steps the Soviets were prepared to take in case American troops become involved in a multinational peacekeeping force for Lebanon.

However, Tass asserted that sending in the Marines would aggravate an already explosive situation, "strengthen the aggressor and in the final analysis ... supplement the Israeli occupation with U.S. occupation."

Toon, who served as U.S. ambassador to Israel in 1975-76 and subsequently as ambassador to the Soviet Union before retiring from the Foreign Service in 1979, said of the Kremlin warning:

"What they're doing is making sure that we go in there. That probably was not their purpose, but that's what the effect of the threatening language will be on the likelihood that the president would back down — unless there is some other device uncovered in the negotiations" involving U.S. special envoy Philip C. Habib.

Toon described the Soviet message as "primarily political maneuvering. They've done this sort of thing before. They used basically the same language back in 1958," when 14,000 American troops were sent ashore to help stabilize Lebanon's government in the face of sectarian strife.

Toon said "the Soviets do not want to get themselves into a military confrontation with us."

"They're not going to move — even if we move with the Marines there — in a way which would make the situation dangerous from their point of view," Toon said, adding that in recent years "there's been very little evidence of reckless Soviet behavior."

Toon, 66, a native of Troy, N.Y., who specialized in Soviet and East European affairs during his 33-year Foreign Service career, also was U.S. ambassador to Czechoslovakia in 1969-71 and ambassador to Yugoslavia in 1971-75.

New Commander At Camp Lejeune

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Maj. Gen. Charles Cooper, known for his controversial hard line on crime, has given up his position as commander of Marine Corps Base Camp Lejeune.

Brig. Gen. Donald J. Fulham assumed control of base operations.

Cooper had completed 13 months of what usually is a four-year assignment as base commander in charge of operations but not military units.

He was regarded as a strong leader and won praise from civilian and military associates. But he drew complaints from area business leader during a crackdown in which he made many businesses off-limits to Marines.

"We've tried a lot of new things this year, and we tried to emphasize a lot of old, important basic values in the corps," Cooper said. "A good tour is always too short, and I am finishing one of my best tours ever."

Two months after he took command of the base in June 1981, Cooper used the Armed Forces Disciplinary Control Board to begin declaring establishments off-limits. They included adult movie houses, massage parlors and a mobile home park.

In addition to complaints, Cooper's "war on crime" spurred two civil suits. One, by a military surplus firm Cooper accused of selling stolen goods, was settled out of court. The second was filed last month by two other businesses Cooper had declared off-limits.

Military authorities deny local pressure forced Cooper out. They say he was relieved of command for another assignment, reportedly as Assistant Commandant for Personnel and Manpower at Marine Corps Headquarters in Arlington, Va.

Postpone Mint Museum Drive

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The Mint Museum of Art has postponed a summer campaign to raise $2 million for a wing to house the multimillion-dollar Mary and Harry Dalton art collection.

During July and August, the museum will accept donations and continue planning for the campaign, but won't solicit gifts.

"The Capital Funds Board asked us to delay, and we are looking at all the options," Edwin Jones, past Mint president and chairman of the campaign, said Wednesday.

U.S. Says Soviet Union Forging Papers; Bid To Create Problems

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration says the Soviet Union is apparently forging letters and documents with the signatures of U.S. officials in an effort to create diplomatic problems for the United States.

A State Department official who asked to remain anonymous said Thursday that Soviet forgers were believed to be behind the recent appearance of bogus documents "designed to stir up trouble."

"It is highly probable that they have done this," the official said, adding that the State Department was making the forgeries public in hopes people would "less likely be taken in" by such practices in the future.

Among examples of forgeries he cited was a letter supposedly sent by President Reagan to Spain's King Juan Carlos last Oct. 23 that said it was urgent that Spain join NATO and proposed ways for the king to counter domestic opposition.

The official said the letter it was distributed twice, once through the mail to Spanish journalists, who apparently ignored it, and a second time to delegates to the Conference of Security and Cooperation in Europe in Madrid last November.

After the second distribution, several Madrid newspapers ran stories exposing the letter as a forgery, "probably of Soviet origin," the State Department official said.

Another forged document attributed to the Soviet Union was a letter allegedly from former Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. to Joseph Luns, secretary general of NATO, discussing ways of neutralizing the anti-nuclear movement in Europe.

Although the letter was expertly done, one obvious mistake was that it was addressed "Dear Joseph" instead of "Joe" — the way Haig would have addressed the NATO official, according to the official.

He said the United States had not protested to the Soviets about the forgeries because "they are well aware of our views."

He said that while Soviet forgeries are nothing new, there have been more of them recently and they appear to be better done than before. "The Soviets are becoming more sophisticated," he said.

Asked if the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency also engaged in forgeries, the official said he could not comment, but he added that if the the United States did engage in such a practice, the Soviets probably would have complained about it long ago.

Other recent examples of alleged Soviet fabrications released by the State Department included:

—A letter purportedly written last September by then-Deputy Secretary of State William Clark to the U.S. ambassador to Greece. Clark allegedly indicated U.S. support for the conservatives in the October elections and hinted at a military coup if Socialist leader Andreas Panandreu won.

—Mailgrams supposedly sent by U.S. officials to journalists in Washington. The mailgrams discussed an alleged secret agreement for U.S. use of a base in Sweden for intelligence purposes.

—A Commerce Department document on sensitive U.S.-European trade issues that was intended to aggravate existing frictions. No such document existed. The name of the secretary of commerce was misspelled.

—The supposed existence of stolen documents from Zaire purporting to disclose a campaign by the United States, Zaire and South Africa to destabilize the government of Angola.

Counterfeit Bills Arrest

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The U.S. Secret Service on Thursday arrested two people in Elko, Nev., after 25 counterfeit bills were passed to merchants in several southeastern Idaho cities, authorities said.

Nick Zarvos, special agent in charge of the Salt Lake City office of the Secret Service, said Daniel T. Mathis, 27, and Mattie J. Mathis, 30, both of Roaring River, N.C., were arrested and booked into Elko County Jail for investigation of passing counterfeit bills.

Zarvos said the two were to appear before a U.S. Magistrate at Elko, but was unsure of the date.

He said merchants in Rexburg, Idaho Falls, Blackfoot, Pocatello, Burley and Twin Falls reported that two people had passed phony $20 bills in the cities Tuesday and Wednesday.

Zarvos said three fake bills were reported at Rexburg, five were passed at Idaho Falls and six at Blackfoot and five at Pocatello.

Zarvos said the Secret Service was notified after merchants in the cities called police.

Network Handicapped In Its Soccer Telecast

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — ABC will televise the finals of the World Cup soccer tournament Sunday with both hands tied behind its back.

The network will have only three of its own cameras to supplement the worldwide feed from Spanish television, so it won't be the kind of broadcast American audiences expect from the network of the Olympics, "Monday Night Football," and "Wide World of Sports."

Since ABC is at the mercy of the button-pushers in Madrid, the telecast won't have as much personality. There'll be fewer close-ups of jubilant players, enraged coaches and colorful characters in the stands.

"It's frustrating," says Ken Wolfe, producer of ABC's World Cup. "It's difficult to interact with someone else's coverage."

ABC will have one low-level camera for tight shots. "That isn't enough," says Dennis Lewin, coordinating producer of "Wide World." "But it will be more than the rest of the world will have."

The second ABC camera will pick up announcers Jim McKay, Paul Gardner and Mario Machado. The other will provide an overview of the stadium for transitions into commercials.

Viewers of the Spanish-produced coverage the past month on cable TV know that nothing interferes with pure soccer for soccer lovers. To capture more of the field, cameras are placed high, making it look like games are shot from the Goodyear blimp.

A sponsor interrupting soccer's non-stop action might see its products torn from the shelf, so printed commercials crawl across the screen like stock market reports.

And, if that famous sports gate-crasher with rainbow-colored hair is in Spain — and he was at the Moscow Olympics — then he's being ignored by Spanish TV.

But you can bet ABC's cameras will find him Sunday, when the network provides live coverage for the first time of the world's biggest single sports event.

"The Super Bowl is one country's game, and it's seen by millions of people," says Wolfe. "The World Cup will be seen by billions of people in nearly every country."

But ABC doesn't expect it to make a big stir here. Local baseball, boxing and old movies probably would do better.

"We're not going in thinking high ratings," says Jim Spence, senior vice president of ABC Sports. "We're talking about a Sunday afternoon in July. Still, we think it's an event we should do."

ABC televised the North American Soccer League for two seasons, but the games didn't generate much of a following. Spence says the preponderance of foreign players and low scoring hurt the NASL's ratings.

"American viewers are not as sophisticated as Europeans and Latin Americans about the subtleties of soccer," says Spence. "They appreciate a 1-0 game; Americans find it dull."

When ABC purchased the rights, the United States already had been eliminated from the 24-nation tournament. In previous years, the World Cup matches were sold to closed-circuit theaters in America and were popular with melting-pot audiences.

"But the organizers thought wider exposure was more important this time, even if it meant less money," says Spence.

Going into Thursday's semifinals, the match-ups were: Italy-Poland and France-West Germany. Wolfe says a game with Spain, the home team, would have been exciting. But the only final that could have generated passion here would have been Argentina-England.

For Sunday's final, ABC will cut away for commercials when the ball is not in scoring position, and then pray hard for nothing important to happen.

Obviously, commercials are the commitment here, not soccer.

And speaking of commitments, in the event of a tie Sunday, ABC has refused permission for its sports department to broadcast the replay live on Tuesday.

Final score: Soap operas 1, Soccer 0.

Declarer led a diamond from dummy and ruffed his winner. Now he led a club. If West ruffed low, dummy would overruff with the eight, so he was forced to ruff with the nine. Declarer discarded dummy's remaining diamond, and West found himself end played in the trump suit!

If West exited with a low trump, dummy's eight would win, so he led the jack of trumps. Tommy won in hand with the queen, and now finessed the eight of trumps. An astonished West found he could score no more trump tricks and the contract was home.

The cards had been breaking badly all day, and only Trump Coup Tommy was smiling. He was in his element — he was busy having his most successful day ever at the club. This hand was typical.

The bidding featured one of those scientific gadgets that work well on the rare occasions when they come up. North's jump to four diamonds showed a good six-card suit, four-card support for partner's suit and values for game. Tommy had nothing to cue-bid, so he reluctantly bid only four spades despite the fact that he had a near opening bid.

West led the king and ace of hearts, and then exited with a heart in the false hope that he was about to collect two trump tricks for a one-trick set. He should have known better, considering that Tommy was at the helm. Tommy won the queen of

Seek Increased Accountability

CHICAGO (AP) — Although the federal government has halted its investigation of the late Cardinal John P. Cody's finances, three ad-hoc Roman Catholic organizations have asked for greater financial accountability by the Archdiocese of Chicago.

The Association of Chicago Priests, Chicago Call to Action and Concerned Catholics of Chicago have issued separate statements saying the end of the probe leaves many questions unanswered.

The statements were issued Wednesday, a day after U.S. Attorney Dan K. Webb said he was ending the probe without seeking indictments.

At the time of his death April 25, the 74-year-old Cody was being investigated for allegedly diverting as much as $1 million in tax-exempt church money to his step-cousin and lifelong friend, Helen Dolan Wilson. He had been head of the 2.4-million-member archdiocese — the nation's largest — for nearly 17 years.

When reports of the investigation first surfaced last fall, both Cody and Mrs. Wilson denied any wrongdoing.

The Association of Chicago Priests, with about 500 members, said, "We are glad no indictments were returned" but added that "the termination of the investigation leaves many unanswered questions."

The group expressed hope that the archdiocese will answer any lingering questions. "If any good can come out of the whole affair, we hope it will underscore the need for greater financial accountability in the archdiocese," the statement said.

Concerned Catholics said the end of the federal investigation leaves the archdiocese with its "legal obligations fulfilled, but not its obligations to the people of the archdiocese."

Chicago Call to Action criticized the archdiocese, saying Catholics should know more about how their money is being used.

New Coalition For Promoting Of ERA

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Don't let the fire of equality be snuffed out. Continue the struggle for equal rights for women."

That's the theme of messages to President Reagan and others being promoted by a new interfaith coalition to keep pushing for equal rights for women after the Equal Rights Amendment failed to gain ratification by the June 30 deadline.

The coalition of Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish women's groups, called Religious Network for Equality for Women or RENEW, was formed to replace the Religious Committee for ERA.

"The change of name indicates a simple change in agenda, not intent," says Louis Bowman, a Church of the Brethren staff member who chairs the new coalition. "We come back to this long fight to end sex discrimination with renewed energy and resources and new strategies."

In Chicago, Sister Marjorie Tuite, president of the National Assembly of Women Religious and an executive of the Catholic-Protestant Church Women United, says "our voices will be clearer and louder."

In New York, Claire Randall, general secretary of the interdenominational National Council of Churches called failure to enact the ERA a slap at the American Declaration of Independence and the "Judeo-Christian traditions and teachings that underlie it."

She said "fears of a minority of our citizens have tarnished our national proclamation that freedom and equality are the right of all people because we are made in God's image."

Loose Moose Is Captured

DULUTH, Minn. (AP) — It took police, zookeepers, game wardens and finally the Coast Guard to capture a moose on the loose in downtown Duluth.

The chase began when the seven-foot, 1,000-pound female moose was sighted asleep in a parking lot around 10 a.m. Thursday.

Four hours later, with four tranquilizing darts stuck in her, the moose jumped into Lake Superior and swam out about a half mile before the Coast Guard managed to herd her to shore, said Richard Laine, senior zookeeper at the Duluth Zoo.

"I was concerned for its life when it was in the water," said Julene Boe, a zookeeper. "I don't think it realized how big a lake it was in," she said.

Ashore, the moose was wrestled to the ground and given more sedatives. Nearly five hours after the chase began, the moose finally surrendered on the grounds of Glensheen mansion, a Duluth tourist attraction.

It was shipped off to the woods in a snowmobile trailer and released about 5 p.m. "When we untied the ropes, it just took off," Laine said.

Laine said the moose was healthy, but apparently became disoriented in the city of 100,000 people.

"I'm happy things worked out. It's a relief," said Ms. Boe. "It was worth going through all the hassle and running around to get the animal back into the woods where it belongs," she said.

WEATHER FORECAST — The from the Canadian border to National Weather Service forecasts Florida, stretching east to the showers Friday in a large band coast. (AP Laserphoto)

By The Associated Press
Heat and high humidity continued to plague North Carolina today with the only relief coming in the form of scattered afternoon and evening thundershowers.

Skies will be partly cloudy across North Carolina through Saturday with a chance of afternoon and evening thundershowers. Hot and humid conditions will also continue with highs in the 80s in the mountains and in the 90s east of the mountains.

Along the North Carolina coast, winds will be west to southwest at 10 to 20 knots with waves from 2 to 4 feet.

High pressure, the Bermuda High, over the western Atlantic will continue to dominate the Tar Heel weather picture through the weekend.

A weak upper level disturbance over the southeastern states and a weak frontal system to the north of us will combine to bring a fairly good chance of afternoon and evening thunderstorms to North Carolina for the next few days.

The Bermuda High will give way a bit today and Saturday, allowing the cold front to the north to dip south into Virginia. But at the moment it does not appear that there is much chance for the cold front to move into North Carolina.

The Bermuda High will strengthen across the state Sunday, pushing the frontal system back to the north. Another cold front moving eastward across the high plains will be approaching the Tar Heel state during the beginning of next week. But this next front will stall and weaken as it moves into the mountains.

Around the state Wednesday day skies were partly cloudy. By the afternoon hours scattered thunderstorms developed over the western sections of the state. Some moderate to heavy rains fell in the mountains. Mount Mitchell had nearly an inch and a half 1.46 and Black Mountain almost an inch 0.90.

Afternoon temperatures reached the upper 80s to mid 90s east of the mountains. While in the mountains afternoon reading ranged from the upper 70s in the northern mountains to the low 90s in the southern mountains.

Fayetteville with a high of 96 degrees was the hot spot in the state, while Boone was on the other end of the spectrum with a high of 76 degrees.

FOCUS

Turning a Deaf Ear

The most widespread occupational hazard facing American workers is not air pollution, dangerous machinery or eye injury — it is noise. More than half of all production work takes place in environments which will cause hearing loss over a 40-year career. About 5 million U.S. workers are exposed constantly to 90 decibel noise levels. This exceeds legal limits for 8-hour exposure. In addition to causing permanent hearing damage, noise causes stress which has been related to ulcers, high blood pressure, irritability and memory loss. But the workplace is not the only dangerous situation. Rock music fans and even Beethoven freaks can be literally deafened by what sounds like music to their ears.

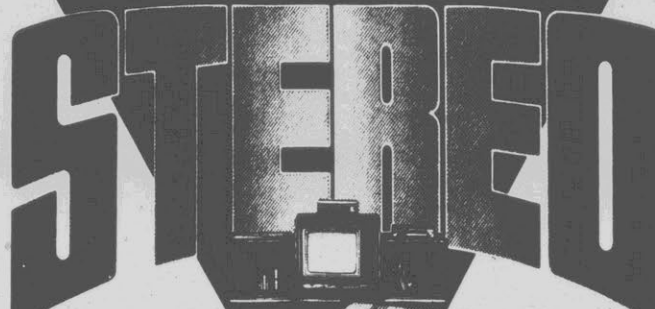

DO YOU KNOW — What federal agency sets safety standards for the workplace?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — The capital of Alberta is Edmonton.
