Retains Basic Program

Leaf Bill Wins Approval

By LEE CREEK
Associated Press Writer
Supporters of federal tobacco price supports say they're pleased with the U.S. Senate's action on the tobacco reform bill, and say the compromises made were needed to save the program.

The Senate voted 77-17 Wednesday to approve the bill and rejected several amendments which tobacco supporters say would have been harmful to both the bill and the tobacco growing industry.

The U.S. House of Representatives passed a similar bill last month.

The Senate version was to go today to the House subcommittee on tobacco and peanuts for review. If approved, the full House could vote on the bill immediately and it would then go to President Reagan for his signature, with a possibility he might affix his signature to it today.

"I hope the house membership will consider the Senate version and give their speedy approval," said North Carolina Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham.

"Many of our tobacco farmers would have us put this day, this day of reckoning, off indefinitely," said Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., chairman of the Agriculture Committee. "But we have taken the bad news to farmers, and they have made sacrifices."

The measure retains the basic structure of price supports and production controls, aimed at guaranteeing growers a minimum profit and a stable market.

Grower-owned cooperatives will be able to assess a fee of a few cents a pound to pay for all but the program's administrative costs. That creates a fund which will relieve taxpayers of having to support the program, the basis of much of the criticism the program has received.

It also requires non-farming corporations and institutions to sell or forfeit their tobacco allotments by December 1983. Voluntary sales of allotments will be allowed, but allotment holders must prove that they share the risk of growing tobacco with a minimum 20 percent crop investment.

The bill also empowers the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture to reduce by 35 percent the government's supports. Opponents, led by Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., had urged that the secretary be given power to freeze supports at the 1981 level of $1.67 per pound for flue-cured tobacco. It also cuts in half the amount of tobacco warehouse "floor sweepings" that can be sold by warehouses, a provision that was contained in an amendment sponsored by Eagleton.

"The clear implication of what is being sold is not floor sweepings," said Eagleton, who said it was really tobacco illegally obtained from other sources.

Warehouses will be allowed to sell 24 percent of their total sales volume as floor sweepings, compared to 50 percent in the past.

"Overall, we're very pleased with the outcome of that vote," said Brent Hackney, deputy press secretary for vacationing Gov. Jim Hunt. "The Senate kept in the bill the main provisions that we were concerned about. One thing we need to be cautious about is that it must go back to the house or a conference committee to iron out the differences."

"Although tobacco farmers, through our congressional leaders, had to

Iraq Says Iran Halted

By The Associated Press
Iraq claimed today that its forces drove invading Iranian troops back across the border after a counterattack that halted an Iranian offensive apparently aimed at the major Iraqi oil port of Basra.

But Iran, which invaded Iraq Tuesday night, said Iraq's "feeble counteroffensive" failed and the Iraqis retreated.

"The aggressors' perfidy boomeranged on them," an Iraqi communique said. "They retreated in failure across the border, pursued by blows and curses."

Tehran radio, quoting an Iranian military communique, said: "A feeble enemy counteroffensive was defeated this morning" and that the Iraqis lost at least 10 tanks. It said Iranian jets were bombing Iraqi positions.

Earlier Iranian broadcasts today said Iran's "Operation Ramadan" invasion forces had completed a 12-mile thrust into Iraq — Iraq admitted a six-mile penetration — and were consolidating positions near Basra, Iraq's second largest city across the Shatt-al-Arab waterway. The communique, monitored in London, said the Iranians were preparing to drive toward the Iraqi city of Tammamah, on the east bank of the waterway opposite Basra.

Iran's interior minister, Nategh Nouri, said in an interview with the Jomhuri Islami newspaper that Iran would fight Iraq until Iranian cities were safe from attacks and "as long as our rights are not met completely."

Both sides claimed to have inflicted heavy enemy losses and taken hundreds of prisoners.

Damaged Pipe Found

Workmen located the source of trouble that caused Tuesday's collapse of a segment of First Street between Holly and Reade streets and progressed today with the task of digging out the damaged drainage section.

Mayo Allen, director of public works, said that crews finally located the drainage pipe late Wednesday afternoon that was damaged when a concrete header wall apparently crumbled from pressure caused by the heavy rains. A hole was cut by workmen to allow the backed up water to drain, he said.

Allen said approximately 40 feet of pipe was involved and it was discovered that the storm outlet under First Street was much smaller than anticipated. He said he will recommend replacing the pipe with a larger size.

The public works official said the digging out phase of the repair work is continuing and the installation of replacement pipe, refilling the large crevice, and street repair will probably take up most of next week. First Street will remain closed to traffic during the work, he said.

"We've still got a lot of digging to do," Allen said.

Fighting Erupts In Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli and Palestinian gunners exchanged fire early today around Beirut's paralyzed airport in fresh violations of a four-day-old U.S.-sponsored cease-fire, the Lebanese state radio reported.

At the same time, U.S. and Lebanese mediators scheduled conferences in Israeli-tinged west Beirut and the presidential palace in suburban Baabda in attempts to break a stalemate on how, when and where to evacuate Yasser Arafat's 8,000 Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas.

Israel invaded Lebanon June 6 to annihilate PLO forces and has ringed west Beirut with an estimated 35,000 troops and 300 tanks, threatening to blast the guerrillas unless they agree to leave Lebanon.

Lebanese state radio quoted a PLO communique as saying forward guerrilla positions at the Bourj el-Barajneh refugee camp near the airport repulsed a pre-dawn Israeli attempt to infiltrate PLO lines along the airport's eastern runway. The Israelis advanced behind a curtain of artillery and tank fire, the communique said.

In Tel Aviv, a military spokesman denied the PLO claims and said there was no Israeli artillery fire. The military command said the cease-fire arranged last Sunday by U.S. special envoy Philip C. Habib was holding.

The command also said one Israeli soldier was wounded early today in an exchange of small-arms fire in eastern Lebanon near the Beirut-Damascus highway, where Syrian forces have regrouped. PLO guerrillas around Beirut also fired machine guns and other light arms at the Israelis, the command said.

The latest skirmishes came a day after the Lebanese government took its first public stand on the six-week-old invasion crisis, calling on Israeli, Syrian and Palestinian forces to leave the bloodied country.

In a communique Wednesday, the government, struggling to reassert its authority, asked for a multinational peacekeeping force to supervise evacuation of Arafat's guerrillas.

Although the communique did not specify which countries would contribute to such a force, the United States has offered 1,000 Marines. France and other countries have also volunteered troops.

The government supports efforts by President Elias Sarkis and Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan "to deal with the crisis emanating from the Israeli occupation," and "ensure the withdrawal of all non-Lebanese armed forces," the communique said.

Despite Israel's threats to storm Arafat's west Beirut bunkers, Israeli officials say they will give more time, to Habib's efforts to peacefully extricate the PLO fighters.

Negotiations to evacuate the PLO have been complicated because it is unclear when the multinational force would be deployed. It is also uncertain where the guerrillas would go because no Arab country is prepared to host the armed fighters.

Arafat met with Wazzan and former Prime Minister Saeb Salam on Wednesday and said there was progress but did not elaborate. Salam said much depends on talks scheduled later this week in Washington with President Reagan, Secretary of State-designate George P. Shultz and the foreign ministers of Syria and Saudi Arabia.

The PLO says Syria is the most logical destination for its guerrillas. Syrian President Hafez Assad said last weekend Syria would not accept them, but diplomats have said he might be persuaded to change his mind.

CBS news reported without attribution Wednesday night that the Saudis had offered Syria hundreds of millions of dollars to accept the guerrillas. Saudi Arabia has been one of the PLO's main financial supporters and has frequently offered its diplomatic offices for talks between the United States and Syria.

Syria deployed 30,000 troops in Lebanon under an Arab League mandate to police an armistice but has been accused by the Christians of taking sides against them.

Proposal Offered To Upgrade Park

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

A recommendation has been made by Recreation and Parks Director Boyd Lee to the City Council to consider use of a portion of the city's unspent Community Development funds to upgrade facilities at the Tom Foreman Park on West Fifth Street.

At the July meeting of the Recreation and Parks Commission Wednesday night, Lee presented the proposal he and commission chairman Lib Proctor have worked up and given to the City Council.

The recommended proposal calls for a total outlay of $13,350 for seven items that Lee says would enhance public use of the park, the former Eppeps High School site. Items and estimated cost for each are:

- A picnic shelter — $6,000.
- Four outdoor grills — $500.

- Backstop and field construction for softball — $3,500.
- Four picnic tables — $1,000.
- Two outdoor water fountains — $1,000.
- Sand and signs to identify a jogging trail — $750.
- Two outdoor power sources — $600.

Earlier, Lee and Mrs. Proctor had met with a group of about 70 individuals who live in the west part of town to discuss needs for the park. Lee said it was a constructive and informative session, one that showed citizen concern for making the park a better service facility for residents of the area. Clarence E. Baker, acting chairman of the Black Civic and Social Clubs of Greenville headed the group of citizens attending the meeting.

Another request, which Lee said would be considered as a possible future development, is that of lighting the softball field. This would cost about $30,000.

Two new commission members, appointed for three-year terms by the City Council, with date of office effective July 1, attended their first meeting Wednesday night. The two are:

•Dr. Alfred (Al) King, East Carolina University faculty member who is coordinator of the Driver and Safety Education Division in the Department of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Safety. A native of Fremont, Ohio, Dr. King was formerly at Michigan State University before coming to Greenville in 1972. He is a Methodist, and he and his wife Betsy have two sons, Ted and Tom, both students at ECU.

•Dr. Carl Wille, an ophthalmologist with the Greenville Eye Clinic, has lived in Greenville since 1975. A native of Garden City, N.Y., Dr. Wille has served in membership and officer capacity on a number of area medical and medically related boards and commissions, including the Pitt County Medical Society. He and his wife, Carlie, are the parents of three children — Suzanne, a student at Rose High, Carl, a student at Aycock, and Brian, who attends Middle School. He is a member of St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

In making his monthly report for the month of June to the board, Lee noted that the recent heavy rainfall did not result in any considerable damage to recreation facilities. "But we certainly found out where our leaks were," he said.

"It's interesting to note that because of the rainfall pattern in Greenville, we have spent much more money fighting erosion and dealing with drainage problems in the past than we've spent on repairing damage caused by vandalism," Lee commented.

Puppets Help Teach Sensitivity To Others

By ALICE NOBLE BETTENDORF, Iowa (UPI)—Mark Reilly doesn't mind answering questions about his disability—even from an overly inquisitive little girl named Melody, who is just dying to know how Mark goes to the bathroom in his wheelchair.

Mark's personality blossoms before an audience. He cracks jokes and tells stories about his bout with cerebral palsy.

Both Mark and Melody are members of a special puppet troupe used by the Mississippi Bend Area Education Agency to educate schoolchildren.

Project coordinator Tim Hart said the program was initiated after state and federal laws began requiring handicapped students to attend regular classes.

"We felt they weren't being accepted by their peers," he said. "So we began looking at some of the ways to help these kids."

With a $5,000 federal Department of Education grant, Hart and associate Chuck Solheim bought the troupe in late 1980 from the Kids on the Block Corp., a Washington, D.C., company created and developed by special education consultant Barbara Aiello.

Similar programs with Kids on the Block puppets and program materials are being used in 44 states and 8 foreign countries, said corporation vice president Bud Forrest.

Last year Hart and his colleagues staged performances throughout the Quad Cities area. The puppets appeared in pairs in brief skits, which were followed by questions from students.

Association worker Diane Zinn said the puppets give students something to relate to and allow them to discuss handicaps more freely, without fear of hurting a real person's feelings.

"We had a kid who had cancer," Hart said. "His parents said they couldn't get him to talk about his problem. After the show, he told the teacher he wanted to tell the other kids about his cancer."

The program usually begins with a conversation between a blind puppet, Renaldo Rodriguez, and an able-bodied puppet, Brenda Dubroski. Mark Reilly and Melody James follow in another skit.

"Melody's the type of person who asks all the questions," Hart said.

Other cast members include Mandy Puccini, who is deaf and speaks in sign language; Jennifer Houser, who has a learning disability; and Ellen Jan Peterson, who is mentally retarded and works in a veterinarian's office.

After each performance, teachers must devote at least 5 hours of classroom time to follow-up activities and discussions, Hart said.

"The puppets get kids interested but the follow-up is important for them to explore with their peers their feelings and thoughts about handicaps," he said.

Hart said some teachers plan activities simulating handicaps. For instance, a teacher might explain briefly how to do a complicated math problem and then give the class a test the students can't possibly pass.

"The class gets a feeling of frustration," he said. "Then, the teacher tells them, 'This is how you would feel if you were mentally retarded.'" Hart and Solheim conducted intensive interviews during the program's first year to learn what effect the puppets were having on students' attitudes.

Just before each performance and 6 months after it, students were asked questions ranging from, "Would you like to be friends with a blind person?" to, "Would you like to have a handicapped kid spend the night with you?"

"We got some real strange answers to that," Ms. Zinn said of the latter. "Some kids said, 'No, because we'd have to put everything up high where they couldn't reach them,' or 'No, my mom wouldn't let me.'"

Association statistics showed some students' attitudes improved as much as 40 points after seeing the show. Hart said only 8 of the 225 students tested had scores that dropped after the presentation.

"These were kids who said, 'Yeah, I'd like to have a blind person for a friend,'" Hart said. "But afterward, they said they didn't think they could be a good friend to a deaf person because they didn't know sign language."

Ms. Zinn said the puppets help educate adults, too.

"We take for granted that adults know all there is to know about handicaps," she said. "But we've found by some of the questions they ask, they don't."

"That was part of our project: a backdoor approach to get to teachers, too," Hart said. "This puts a lot of pressure on the teacher because the kids get excited about it and they want to know more about handicaps."

She Offers Food For Thought

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Recently I was in Memphis doing some fund-raising cooking demonstrations for Planned Parenthood, and on every occasion I was picketed by a dozen or so Right-to-Lifers. I didn't talk to them because it was not the place to make a scene, but I did want to ask them this: "What are your plans for these children once they are born? Are you going to help provide, for instance, for the child of a retarded 13-year-old daughter of a syphilitic prostitute? What about the child of a convicted wife-beater and child molester? Or that of a tubercular and abandoned welfare mother who already has six children?"

"These are extreme cases, of course, but there are plenty of them, and these are the future citizens who, for the most part, end up in our juvenile courts and in our jails. If you insist on their birth, you must also assume responsibility for their lives."

What do Right-to-Lifers have to say on this subject? Let's hear from them — if indeed they have considered this matter at all, which I very much doubt.

JULIA CHILD

DEAR JULIA: For the world's most famous cook to have whipped up a world-famous controversy is a case of just deserts!

DEAR ABBY: We work in an office. Our boss is a difficult man. In the morning he barely says hello, and he never says good night when he leaves. He never compliments us. And regardless of how well a task has been performed, his tone implies that he expected more.

On his birthday we all pitched in and bought him a beautifully decorated cake, and his only comment was, "I hope I don't have to eat it all now; I just finished a huge lunch!" Then he put the cake in the refrigerator. The flowers and streamers he never even noticed.

Are we fools to stay?

FOOLS IN L.A.

DEAR FOOLS: That depends. If the pay is good, why look for another job? You have no guarantee your next boss will be better. (He could be even worse.)

Since his birthday means so little to him, forget it next year. Don't expect any cheery "Good mornings" or any kind of a "Good night," and you won't be disappointed.

And praise the Lord that he's only your boss. How would you like to go home to a sourpuss like that?

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

As a woman I do a lot of thinking about war, and how to stop it.

It seems futile at this point to imagine that nations can ever will get along with one another. The only alternative is a set of rules that must be adhered to. So, how are these for conditions?

No country shall wage war unless it can pay for it in cash—in advance. No personal, payroll or welfare checks, please.

Notification of an attack on a foreign country will be sent via U.S. mails by the attacker to the attackee. The war may not commence until the response is returned through the U.S. mails.

Wars will be held in downtown public government buildings and no one may engage in them until their vehicles are parked legally in the two spaces provided marked "VISITOR." This is for a two-hour period. All other vehicles will be towed away.

City transit schedules will be provided all others engaging in battles, but will not run after 6:15 in the evenings, with limited hours on Saturday and no Sunday service.

Before injuries are inflicted insurance forms and appropriate claims numbers will have been filled in for benefits. This means your doctor will receive one copy, two will have to be sent to the insurance company, and you retain one for your own record. If not filled in completely, claims will not be considered.

All weapons and vehicles will be in kits and must be assembled before using. Instructions will be in a language foreign to the country assembling them and five wing nuts will be missing from each set.

Adults can only attend a war when accompanied by children. This means children fighting for a window in a tank, standing at daddy's elbow every minute asking what he is doing and will he carry him he is tired, and crayoning on maps in the tactics room whining he is bored.

Each person entering a war will be responsible for personal damages to life and property and must carry a $50 deductible insurance before a weapon will be issued. After two claims, his policy will be dropped and he won't be able to fight.

It all sounds bureaucratic. But when you think of it—what's bureaucracy done for you today?

Reagan To Don Hard Hat In '84 Campaign

ANSWERING EMERGENCY calls from three locations is only part of the services offered by the Greenville Fire-Rescue Department. For details, call 752-4137.

By MAUREEN SANTINI
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan probably won't be seen at many fancy fund-raising dinners this fall. He's more likely to show up in factories, talking with auto workers who have gotten their jobs back.

It's all part of a fall campaign strategy being devised by White House advisers. The plan makes Senate races a top priority and concentrates Reagan's appearances in the West, South and Southwest, where his aides feel he can make a difference.

Advisers are recommending that Reagan stay off the money-raising circuit, fearing repeated photographs of a tuxedo-clad president at $1,000-a-plate dinners, especially during a time of economic difficulty.

"There's no question that if the only time grass-roots people get to see the president is at a $1,000-a-plate dinner, that does not help with the overall picture," said a White House official, who did not wish to be identified. In addition, he said fund-raisers did not make the best use of Reagan's time.

Vice President George Bush has been drafted as the star attraction at these affairs. He already has hit the campaign trail nearly full time and, like Vice President Walter Mondale during the Carter administration, is expected to carry the brunt of the campaign load.

As things now stand, the president's aides believe he could help candidates in California, Texas, Colorado, Arizona, New Mexico, North Dakota, Tennessee, Mississippi and Florida, among other places. Reagan probably will visit New Jersey on behalf of Rep. Millicent Fenwick, the Republican nominee for the Senate, aides say.

The top three Senate priorities for the White House are in the president's home state of California, where Reagan favors San Diego Mayor Pete Wilson over Democratic Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.; New Jersey, where Mrs. Fenwick faces Democrat Frank Lautenberg; and Virginia, where Republican Rep. Paul Trible is running against Democratic Lt. Gov. Richard J. Davis.

"Our top priority is to maintain the Senate because that gives us at least one house (of Congress) where we can move forward with our legislative program," the official said.

The West, Southwest and South basically were selected because of the potential impact of a presidential visit. "The president going to New York is not a major story," the aide said. "The president going to Montana is a major story. We want him to go into states where he will have impact."

Although Reagan's aides disagree about the best way to use his time, the plan envisions him spending about one day a week for the next two months making public appearances in casual settings outside Washington.

"I think he needs to go talk to factory workers and some auto workers who have now gone back to work," said the official. "Anytime you get the president away from Washington it basically helps in his overall approval rating."

In the six weeks before the Nov. 2 election, Reagan would devote a day or two a week to campaigning, followed by an extensive push in the last several days.

Nancy Reagan may be asked to make 10 to 12 campaign appearances, perhaps in connection with her anti-drug crusade, the official said. But the first lady is not expected to assume the extensive role that Rosalynn Carter exercised in the mid-term election of 1978.

Under the law, the president's travel expenses must be paid by a candidate's campaign committee. Since Air Force One alone costs $5,566 an hour, there probably will be no separate appearances for congressmen, who are on tighter budgets.

The White House is hoping to gain two or three seats for the Republicans in the Senate, where there currently are 54 Republicans, 45 Democrats and one independent.

In the House, there are 241 Democrats, 193 Republicans and one vacancy, to which a Democrat was elected Tuesday night.

The official refused to say how many House seats the White House expects to lose, although he agreed that if the election were held now it could be about 20. The party in power traditionally loses seats in the mid-term election.

Barbershop Dispute Is Settled

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Great Barbershop Controversy at the White House has resulted in a decision to build a $9,000 beauty salon, climaxing 18 months of bickering between the barber and the beauticians.

White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III said Wednesday that the barber and the beauticians, who currently share the same quarters on alternate days, have been embroiled in a "raging dispute."

"You have the barber and the beautician fighting and we're trying to resolve the fighting," Baker said in answer to questions from reporters at the Washington Press Club after the matter was disclosed by The Associated Press.

Baker said the barbershop dispute "has been a problem for us for the 18 months that we've been here," adding, "We think there ought to be a facility both for men to get haircuts and women to get their hair done. So we're going to have to see to it that there are those two facilities."

Then Baker, misstating a bit, told the press club: "I think in 1977 when the Carter administration came in, the barber was relieved and you had beauticians brought in there." Carter actually had a barber.

The laughter from the audience grew even louder as he continued dryly, "Now, we have a president who likes to have his hair cut by a barber. So we have a barber back."

Milton Pitts, the barber who occupies the small room in the White House basement on Tuesdays and Thursdays, told the Associated Press recently that he thought it was a wise move to build a separate beauty salon.

But the beauticians, Yves and Nancy Graux, who currently use the salon on Wednesdays and Fridays, are upset about being moved to separate quarters in the Old Executive Office Building adjacent to the White House.

"It just seems unnecessary to spend the money," said Nancy Graux.

John Rogers, director of administration at the White House, said the new quarters should be ready in a couple weeks. He said the $9,000 would be paid from the regular White House operating budget. Rogers said there were no plans to allow anyone but the beauticians to occupy the new salon.

In a recent AP interview, Baker said the new salon was being built "because we think it's important that the president's barbershop be the way it was through all presidencies up until the Carter presidency." That means he wants the shop reserved for the president, although Pitts also cuts the hair of Vice President George Bush, the Cabinet, and several senior staff members. When Carter switched from Pitts to a new barber, he also allowed the beauticians to come in twice a week to style hair for women and some men.

Campaign Ahead?

The Republican Party seems to be coming up with some particularly mean and misleading advertising in this election year ... and since their man occupies the White House, such tactics will necessarily reflect directly on him.

The latest to hit television is an ad in which an actor "postman" is depicted delivering Social Security checks containing the 7.4 percent cost of living increase.

The "postman" says, "He promised that rise and he kept his promise, in spite of those sticks-in-the-mud who tried to keep him from doing what we elected him to do."

The ad, of course, presupposes a dumb electorate, which doesn't know that the only question about the cost-of-living increase was whether or not it would be canceled.

Speaker of the House Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill, Jr. reacted properly in calling for the withdrawal of the ads. "The president knows that the ad is not true," O'Neill said.

The White House said the ad would not be withdrawn, which might give us all an idea of what kind of campaigning we will be faced with this fall.

Burroughs Wellcome Grows

Burroughs Wellcome, the pharmaceutical production firm, came to Greenville in 1970 bringing high hopes that it would be a solid part of the local economy for many years in the future.

Those hopes have been more than met as the firm has steadily expanded to meet the demand for its excellent line of products.

Now plans have been announced for a 36,000-square-foot addition to house offices, computer services, research development, production and engineering, organizational development and the financial staff.

The addition is expected to be under construction by August and to be completed in about a year.

It is a welcome expansion of Burroughs Wellcome's facilities here, and it is indicative of the increasing investment the firm continues to make in Pitt County.

City's Goals Are Tough

By MAXWELL GLEN and CODY SHEARER
MICHIGAN CITY, Ind. — Charles Oberlie may never want to run for president. He already has one of the toughest jobs in America: the task of preventing a typical Midwestern town from going the way of Whiskey Gulch.

The lanky, 36-year-old city planner is under instructions from the mayor, city council and citizens of this Lake Michigan town to develop and implement incentives for new business investment. If, with the aid of the local chamber of commerce, Oberlie succeeds, Michigan City may well have found the magic formula for surviving the economic and technological changes now threatening America's industrial heartland.

No matter how hard he tries, however, Oberlie knows that economic forces are beyond his control. What's more, Oberlie is trying to shift the fortunes of this town from heavy manufacturing to new, service-oriented enterprises — tourism and data processing, for example — that have yet to prove themselves adequate alternatives to the employers of old.

Planning for the future is basically a guessing game in which even the most resourceful of local leaders can only cross their fingers and pray.

Any way you look at it, Oberlie and others have their hands full trying to keep the tumbleweeds out of Main Street. Too many of Michigan City's 13,000-member work force, of whom approximately 14.6 percent are unemployed, remain dependent on an increasingly dormant steel industry. Judging from this week's latest string of nationwide plant closings and layoffs, steelworkers here are likely to see things get worse before they get better.

Meanwhile, although four new manufacturing firms have saved or created about 400 jobs, plants making office furniture and corrugated boxes, and employing approximately 250 workers, have closed in the last six weeks, underscoring a wider trend of shutdowns and layoffs that began last year.

Current economic conditions have only spurred a practical desire of city visionaries to bring Michigan City and environs into a less vulnerable position. Local manufacturing firms "could be here today, but in five years, who knows?" asks Rex

Richards, 32, the chamber of commerce's executive vice president. Adds city planner Oberlie: "we would like to assure that we're not seriously affected by any downturn in the economy."

For all their steely optimism, however, Michigan City's business boosters don't underestimate the decisions of absentee corporate owners and federal monetary policymakers. Nor can they be sure that their favorable property-tax abatement scheme, which promises up to 50 percent in breaks on new plant and equipment, won't be available in similar form from municipal competitors elsewhere in the Midwest.

And even if Michigan City wins the race for new service-sector investment, its planners may then have to contend with jobs that are neither immune to automation nor safe from the undertow of low wages. Without economic growth, there's a danger that new technological advances are going to reduce the need for workers in the long run, resigning more of Michigan City's labor force to the limited rewards of restaurant, retail and tourist-industry employment.

Against this panorama, Oberlie must convince Michigan City's underemployed and unemployed workers not to give up on their town just yet. He knows that the current, shortage of jobs hasn't helped stem a general drift of brains and skilled brawn to other areas, a trend that could adversely affect the decisions of prospective investors.

Unfortunately, as Donita Ton of the local Salvation Army center observes, "Among the young people I'm dealing with, even those with advanced degrees are getting fast-food jobs .... Just look at the wedding announcements. You've got graduates from Boston University working at Burger Chef."

Indeed, Ton can see Michigan City's economic hex close to home: Two of her four siblings, both college-educated, are unemployed; one brother, a computer programmer, has had to move to southern Michigan for a lower-paying job in cost-accounting; another has settled in that quasi-Mecca, Houston.

With the variety of obstacles facing him, it's easy to see why Charles Oberlie is a lot like the president. He could become the most loved and hated man in Michigan City.

Industry Tops List

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — When it comes to cleaning up the waters of North Carolina, industry is doing a much better job than the state's municipalities, figures released by the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development show.

As the end of 1981, only 56 percent of the state's municipalities had their wastewater treatment plants complying with the state effluent standards. Of the state's non-municipal producers — mostly large industries — 80 percent have met the mark. Target date for compliance with the standards was originally set for 1977 but has been set back several times since.

As of Dec. 31, 1981, 2,335 permits had been issued for the discharge of wastewater into North Carolina waters. Of these, 354 were municipal and 1,981 were non-municipal. The biggest problems lies with minor municipal dischargers — large towns and small towns that treat toxic chemicals — are considerably better than 67 percent. But even that means one-third aren't doing the job. Minor non-municipal dischargers — schools, restaurants, hotels, etc. — have a compliance record of 68 percent.

The compliance trend in North Carolina is indicative of the national trend. The summer's issue of "Popular Government" magazine says there was 90 percent industrial compliance at the end of 1981 and only 50 percent municipal compliance, nationwide.

Mike Davis, DNRCD spokesman, says the reason for the difference in compliance rates is simple. Private industry, when told to add treatment facilities, will buy the needed equipment and add its cost to their products. Local government must use local tax money or government grants — money which is harder to come by.

Bob Helms, director of the state Division of Environmental Management, says the public "expects private industry to pay for all the natural resources it uses up. The public expects for-profit organizations to pay for all its expenses, including water. And industry has responded well. They met their limits and they expect to get rapped when they get out of line.

"But the municipal discharger is public, not for-profit. They're using tax money and the public has to vote there on the responsibility to pick up the tab and they don't always want to do that," Helms said.

It isn't just a matter of wanting to do it. The cost of a wastewater treatment plant can simply be beyond the reach of a small town of a thousand or two people. In many of those cases, towns have been holding off on new plants hoping to get state and federal funding. But the Reagan administration has cut sharply into the water and sewer development budget and Gov. Jim Hunt has not yet decided whether he'll put up a $300 million state water and sewer bond issue on the November ballot.

The problem is getting serious for some small towns. With their current treatment capacity filled, in-town growth has stalled. Hunts says its creating problems for towns that want to bring in new industry, or just open new areas for housing.

Helms doesn't see any easy way out of the bind for small towns. "It's a matter of priorities. People will have to continue to place the priority on cleaning up our air and water resources ... and we'll have to pick it (the needed money) up at another level."

Reply Gives Slow Burn

WASHINGTON — A week or so ago, a reporter for the Knight-Ridder papers, contriving a summer feature, interviewed a dozen novelists and intellectuals. He posed provocative questions: What do the country's literati think of television? If they could change TV, how would they go about it? He got one answer that set off a slow burn.

Jim Harrison, author of "Legends of the Fall," knew exactly what he would do: "I would keep firing anyone in the business and rehiring until I gave the people not what they wanted but what they should have. People who have no taste should not be allowed to determine taste. This is a perversion of democracy."

Hoity-toity! Brother Harrison may not have told us what is wrong with TV, but he surely told us what is wrong with the literati. His arrogance set in motion a small train of thought. Let us ride along together.

For a fellow who makes a part of his living from television, I watch the tube very seldom. All things considered, I'd rather read a book. But now and then, out of curiosity or eyestrain, I catch some of the sitcoms and cop shows. The other afternoon, waiting to get a couple of tires changed, I watched an hour of soap opera. Holy Toledo!

Most of these programs strike me as fatuous, but this is the point: It never on this earth would occur to me to order them wiped out, as Brother Harrison proposes, so as to give the people "not what they wanted but what they should have." This is the sin of intolerance, and if there is one vice that infects our society more seriously than any other, intolerance is it.

You find it everywhere. You find it on both sides of the continuing dispute over textbooks and teaching materials. The literati cannot tolerate what they regard as the prudery of the God-fearing folk, and the God-fearing folk cannot tolerate what they regard as the licentiousness of the literati. In the matter of abortion, those who oppose abortion under any circumstances cannot tolerate the thought that a woman should have some freedom of choice; and those who support freedom of some of us positively do not want. The vice of intolerance goes hand in hand with the vice of compulsion. Yes, in an ordered society, operating under the rule of law, there must be elements of compulsion. But ours is also a free society, and the most disturbing trend of our times lies in the growth of compulsion and the decline of freedom. We are seldom content to let the people live their potty little lives as they please. We echo the cry of the old crusaders, who would convert the infidels if they had to kill them first.

H.L. Mencken once contrived what he was pleased to call "Mencken's Law." I cannot put my fingers on the text, but it was to this effect: Whatever A undertakes by force of law to impose his taste upon B, A is a scoundrel. Contrast that view, if you will, with Brother Harrison's "People who have no taste should not be allowed to determine taste."

Milton had a better idea. "Let the winds of doctrine blow," he cried. By extension, it seems to me, we ought to let the weeds and flowers of "taste" proliferate. Let the people who like "The Dukes of Hazzard" watch "The Dukes of Hazzard," and let others watch the Dukes of Gloucester and York. Mud wrestling, Monday night baseball, tennis at Wimbledon — let them flourish! If lonesome ladies get a vicarious charge from "How the Stomach Turns," fine with me. I wouldn't even ban tinhorn intellectuals in a class with Brother Harrison.

What you do with latent little tyrants is first to laugh at them, and then to watch them.

choice cannot tolerate the thought that abortion is murder.

We see such intolerance constantly in Washington. We see it in the medical establishment. Remember the fight over Laetrile? The doctors, a notoriously arrogant lot, were determined to see that terminal cancer patients could not get what they wanted but what they should have. In the matter of automobile airbags, a vociferous crowd of do-gooders would compel all of us to pay for a gadget that

Strength For Today

CONSCIENCE

A man who was in the army during wartime and is now doing work in his community among young people observed in a public address that the 24-hour pass, regularly given during the war, established an unfortunate precedent during peacetime. During the war, the soldiers got into the habit of casting aside all discipline and moral restraint during the 24 hours covered by the pass. This created a precedent which many of them carried over into the years following the war.

Physical and mental relaxation are both necessary, but relaxation in the moral realm is certainly not in this category. Here we have to be on the job all the time, whether we want to or not. The conscience cannot afford to take a vacation, even for a split second. — ELISHA DOUGLASS

Closings Call Attention To Business Problems

AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Each day in some way the theme is repeated. The goal of economic policy, it is said, is to transfer power to the private sector, where risk-taking businesses will innovate and create jobs.

For the time being, the immediate effect may differ from the goal.

The private sector is hurting badly, and as Terry Daniel views the situation, it is hurting because of high interest rates, a big national debt, and the unwillingness of Congress to correct the problem.

Daniel, head of E-Z Pak Inc., P.O. Box 12, Dickson, Tenn., felt the situation was intolerable and so, in a few hours, he won approval of 26 small businesses to close down for a day of protest. It might not correct the problem, he concedes, but it might call attention to it.

Daniel now seeks the help of the National Federation of Independent Business, which claims a membership of 540,000, to publicize the close down day on a date yet to be set. Joe Shafran of the NFIB says it "might put out a little note" in its magazine "Mandate," published every six weeks, but he declined to have the NFIB committed beyond that.

Entrepreneurs aren't easily stopped, however, and Daniel intends to press on. Obstacles, he believes, are there to be overcome, if at all possible, though sometimes it takes extra help. As with interest rates.

Six years ago he founded E-Z Pak, which makes packaging machines for snack food producers, selling his home to obtain the initial $5,000 and borrowing $5,000 from a local bank, "with everything, including the serial number of my lawnmower, for collateral."

He felt confident though. Having worked as a machinist and in maintenance for another machine company, he observed that improvements suggested by customers and maintenance men were ignored. He felt that by incorporating those suggestions he could produce a better machine.

He did. Sales doubled each year until last year, when volume shrank. Sales were lost, he said, because potential customers worried that if E-Z Pak went under, as did 17,000 companies last year, they'd be unable to obtain parts. They liked his product. They feared the future.

"We put a lot of money into research and development," he said. "We created a new machine, but now we can't bring it out because it costs too much to borrow (for production) at today's interest rates."

The machine, which would sell for $40,000 or so, about $20,000 under the competition, is more efficient, he said. A prototype now at Moore's Potato Chip Co., Bristol, Va., proves that, he said.

Further confirmation of the machine's potential came when a larger company, from Massachusetts, offered to buy E-Z Pak, which has a volume of about $1 million a year. "They're trying to buy it at half price," he said. If they raise their bid, said Daniel, he might sell.

James Lamkin, E-Z Pak vice president, helped obtain the signatures. It was easy, he said. "It is quite necessary in small businesses to live on borrowed money," he said, "since your own money is tied up."

But interest rates are too high, he said. "The problem with rates is that deficit spending has backed government into a corner where it is gobbling up the credit on the market. We pay more for

The Federal Reserve is doing what it thinks is right, he conceded. "There is no quick cure." But, said Lamkin, "we feel it would help to have a policy that, over a certain time, interest rates wouldn't fluctuate more than a certain amount." Business then would know what to expect. It could plan, he said.

Daniel said E-Z Pak planned to bring out its innovative new machine at this time because it believed Washington's promise that interest rates would be coming down and the economy would begin to move ahead.

Other companies, too, made business plans over the past year on such forecasts of an impending upturn. They believed, he said. "They tried to hold on; they took out more debt." And when recovery didn't come, he said, "they went under with a big splash."

Under the circumstances, he said, it wasn't difficult to obtain signatures in Dickson, seat of Dickson County, about 40 miles west of Nashville. An office supply company, a carpet company, a well driller, shoe store, car dealers, and a Realtor were among those who signed.

Daniel said they were emphatic about agreeing to shut down so as to persuade governmental leaders "to take action to reverse the trend of an ever-expanding national debt."

To do so would cost them revenues and their employees a day's pay they really can't afford to lose. But, said Daniel and Lamkin, people are upset. "Employees can't even buy a house because of the high rates."

Of 31 small-company executives and proprietors who were approached, they said, only the auctioneer flatly refused to sign. For him, business is good, said Daniel.

Poll Indicates Doctors Unhappy Over Future

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Doctors have become more pessimistic about the future of their profession, but female physicians generally are more hopeful than men about dealing with anticipated changes, says a new survey.

The attitude study by Louis Harris and Associates said the nation's doctors believe medical practice will change substantially in the coming decade, but most think the changes would not be for the better.

The report, done for the Kaiser Family Foundation in Menlo Park, Calif., and released today, said doctors mostly fear a loss of their autonomy and independence.

Anticipated restraints by government and health insurance suppliers on fees and how they practice seem to worry the physicians most.

For example, 83 percent of the doctors agreed that private health insurance suppliers will set some type of ceiling on fee reimbursements in most states in the next decade.

Fully 48 percent thought this would be a change for the worse, while only 22 percent said it would be for the better and 25 percent said there would be no effect.

In all, the study noted, "The most frequent type of change noted by physicians involves various forms of external regulation with emphasis upon government controls and interference."

The report said 50 percent of male doctors, but only 40 percent of females, "feel sufficient doubts about the future of medical practice (that they) said they would not recommend it as highly today as they would have 10 years ago."

The Harris organization interviewed a total of 1,814 physicians nationwide for the study, including 193 medical residents who had just started their careers and about 100 women doctors.

Women doctors tended to be in primary care more than men, with 57 percent of women in such areas as emergency medicine, family practice and internal medicine, compared with 47 percent of men.

The study attributed this difference to a higher concentration of women in pediatrics and obstetrics-gynecology, and their low proportion in the surgical specialties.

Women tended to accept the idea of salaried positions more than men, with 39 percent of women physicians in such positions compared with 16 percent of men.

In the general survey, 51 percent of physicians said that in the coming decade more physicians will opt for salaried positions rather than self-employment or partnerships. But only 13 percent thought this would be a change for the better, versus 46 percent who said it would be for the worse.

The doctors also believed there would be an oversupply of physicians nationwide in the next 10 years, which could limit some options for practicing in such specialties as neurosurgery, ophthalmology and dermatology.

About 52 percent believed there would be too many doctors, 37 percent said the number would be about right, 6 percent said there would be too few and 4 percent were not sure.

Almost 84 percent agreed that an oversupply would make it difficult for doctors to develop practices in the locations they prefer.

The American Medical Association says there are currently 468,000 practicing physicians in the United States, with another 65,000 residents completing their training. Studies predict there may be 535,000 practicing doctors by 1992.

Love Canal Residents Dubious About Report

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — Current and former residents of the Love Canal neighborhood, where thousands of tons of chemical wastes were dumped, greeted with skepticism a federal report that said most of the area is safe to live in.

The findings Wednesday by the federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, based on a study by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, came nearly four years after a health emergency was declared in the area.

At a briefing Wednesday night at City Hall, shouting matches broke out among 250 present and former residents of the neighborhood, where sharp divisions have formed between those who favor redevelopment and those who oppose it.

"We have been surrounded by chemicals all our lives. If it was so bad, there would be no Niagara Falls," said Loretta Gambino, a canal-area homeowner for 21 years who said she has suffered cancer, eye infections and four miscarriages. Her remark was typical of those from residents who stayed.

But Lois Gibbs, president of the Love Canal Homeowners Association and head of a Washington-based hazardous waste clearing house, said the methods of analyzing data were flawed and no conclusions could be safely drawn. She called the study a "whitewash."

Barbara Quimby, a former canal-area resident who blamed the dump for her respiratory problems and her daughter's retardation, commented: "I lived there 30 years. This is the first time we don't go to the doctors every two weeks."

Sens. Alfonse D'Amato and Daniel P. Moynihan also criticized the study, although Gov. Hugh Carey praised its findings and said they opened the way for redevelopment.

The EPA investigation, which first took soil, air and water samples almost two years ago, centered on an area around a former Hooker Chemical & Plastics Corp. dump that was abandoned in 1953 and later became a residential neighborhood. Hooker dumped more than 20,000 tons of chemical wastes into Love Canal for 10 years through 1953, when the property was sold to the Niagara Falls School Board. A school and a housing development were built on the clay-capped dump. As early as 1958, children playing at the dump suffered skin irritations. In 1976, it was confirmed that chemicals were migrating through the soil.

In August 1978, chemicals were found oozing into the basements of homes and people began complaining of illnesses. The state declared a health emergency, evacuated the first two "rings" of houses nearest the canal, and surrounded that area with a fence.

Occidental said in a statement that the EPA report "rebutts the alleged situation at Love Canal as claimed by the New York state attorney general that there is a continuing health hazard."

Shultz Headed For Easy Senate Confirmation

WASHINGTON (AP) — George P. Shultz was headed for swift confirmation today as secretary of state after two days of Senate hearings that revealed differences of style and emphasis but no sharp change in direction for U.S. foreign policy. The Senate Foreign Relations Committee wound up its questioning of the 61-year-old economist on Wednesday and voted 17-0 to recommend that the full Senate confirm him. Senate leaders scheduled action for today. Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., chairman of the committee, urged the unusually quick confirmation vote, saying he felt "a sense of urgency about having a secretary of state" at a time of turmoil in the Middle East.

"People see this and it frightens them," he said. "It has a certain bully-like quality about it."

seemed similar to those of Haig, but less flamboyantly put and different in emphasis.

Alexander M. Haig Jr., who resigned the office in an unexplained policy dispute with the White House, left the State Department last week. His deputy, Walter Stoessel, is acting as secretary while the office is vacant.

"We should be realistic about what is going on. While not looking for confrontation, we should be firm." He said the United States should also "have the self-confidence to undertake negotiations when they are called for."

In his final day of testimony, Shultz spelled out a policy on East-West relations that sounded less bellicose than some of Haig's pronouncements, but was no less harsh in its judgment of Soviet actions.

In sum, he said, the U.S. strategy toward Moscow "should be not a strategy of aggression, not a strategy of confrontation, but a strategy of confidence, strength and realism about what they are trying to do."

"I think we should make it clear that, depending on Soviet behavior and how they conduct themselves, we are prepared to have as constructive and beneficial a relationship as possible," he told the committee.

While Haig's sometimes dogmatic responses occasionally nettled lawmakers, Shultz' low-key testimony won friends even among senators sharply critical of the Reagan administration.

But he went on to say, in his soft-spoken manner, that the Soviet Union "is militarily powerful and has exhibited a willingness to use its military power with bru-

In approximately 10 hours of questioning by the senators, Shultz expressed views on nuclear weapons, the Middle East, China and Latin America that often

Shultz' Mideast Policies Unlikely To Please Israel

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's next secretary of state, George P. Shultz, has signaled his hopes for a change in emphasis in U.S. policy toward the Mideast, one that is unlikely to please the Israelis.

It's too early to say how much of a change Shultz has in mind. In part, that may depend on how much the White House agrees with him.

At a minimum, Shultz clearly wants a better break for the Palestinians from Israel than they have been receiving so far. He favors an even-handed approach to the Arab world in general.

During the tenure of former Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., U.S. interests in the region were closely identified with Israeli interests. There was no criticism of Israeli actions from Haig, who felt the United States had to stand by an ally even when, in Washington's eyes, it was doing wrong.

But judging from his testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Shultz appears ready to put distance between U.S. and Israeli interests in some cases and hinted at a readiness to openly oppose Israel when interests of the two nations diverge.

He told the committee he regretted Israel's invasion of Lebanon, saying it resulted in a needless spilling of "this tremendous amount of bloodshed" because Israel should have been able to accomplish its aims through negotiations.

Except for Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, nobody in the Reagan administration, not even the president, had publicly criticized Israel for the invasion.

When asked by Sen. Rudy Boschwitz, R-Minn, whether he agreed with Haig that Israel is a "strategic asset" of the United States, Shultz declared, "It is not military strength that we want. It's peace that we want."

"We don't do anybody any favors by allowing this to drag on," he said of the Mideast peace negotiations, which have been bogged down on the question of how much autonomy to give to the 1.3 million Palestinians in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

He pointedly said that as a good-faith gesture to Arab nations there should be "some give" in Israel's position, which has been to offer minimal self-rule to the Palestinians.

Nobody on the committee asked Shultz whether he favored a separate Palestinian state. But his message to Israel that it must get started on meaningful negotiations with the Palestinians couldn't have been more clear.

"The legitimate needs and problems of the Palestinian people must be addressed and resolved — urgently and in all their dimensions," he said.

He said representatives of the Palestinians must be included in the negotiations "for these talks to succeed."

At another point, he declared, "We've just got to come to our senses ... shake everybody and say, 'Come on, we've got to do better about this, we've got to get active.'"

Even though he said he didn't disagree with Reagan's foreign policy to date, there was implied criticism of Haig for not giving higher priority to the Palestinian negotiations during his 17 months in office.

He criticized Israeli settlements on the West Bank, and said a proposal by Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon to settle another 70,000 Israelis in the occupied territories would be damaging if carried out. Neither Reagan nor Haig had criticized the settlements.

Asked Wednesday if Reagan agreed with Shultz' statements on the Palestinians, the deputy White House spokesman, Larry Speakes, said he did.

But talk of a strategic consensus in the Mideast — Haig's plan for joining Israel and the Arab world in a united front against Soviet aggression — likely will be forgotten under Shultz.

Shultz said he will work for improved ties with the Arab world, particularly moderate states such as Saudi Arabia, but also possibly even with more radical states such as Iraq and non-Arab Iran.

Howells Feted At Reception

Some 200 people, including local businessmen and members of the East Carolina University Board of Trustees, attended a reception here Wednesday night in honor of ECU Chancellor and Mrs. John Howell.

The reception, sponsored by the Pitt-Greenville

Chamber of Commerce, was designed to introduce the Howells to area business leaders and "to wish them (the Howells) well," chamber spokesman Pat Burnette said.

Heavy hors d'oeuvres were served at the affair, held at the American Legion Building.

The Howells, chamber president Larkin Little and Mrs. Little, and assistant to the chancellor Dick Blake, composed the receiving line.

Howell, who became chancellor July 1, joined the ECU faculty in 1957 and has served as chairman of the department of political science, dean of the college of arts and sciences, dean of the graduate school and provost and vice chancellor for academic affairs.

He was named acting chancellor in January 1982, and was elected chancellor of the school by the University of North Carolina Board of Governors in May.

His wife, Gladys, was an associate professor of sociology at East Carolina until Howell became acting chancellor.

Registration

WINTERVILLE - Residents of the Winterville school district who have children eligible to attend W.H. Robinson school but not currently registered should call or visit the school, Principal Blaine Moye says.

"This applies only to new parents who have recently moved to the area," said Moye. "Parents who registered their children at the spring registration or who registered their children before the school year was over do not need to register again."

Moye reminded parents who have kindergarten age children to bring birth certificates and immunization records. For further information call 756-3707.

Evans Wins Tractor Pull

Gary Evans won first place in the 1982 Pitt County 4-H Tractor Operators Contest held Wednesday.

He was selected after competing in a contest consisting of two-wheel and four-wheel trailer driving events, a written test and a parts identification test.

Evans was awarded a trophy and an expense-paid week at 4-H Congress July 19-23 to compete in the state 4-H tractor competition July 19.

Evans is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry T. Evans of Ayden and has been a member of the Bushwackers 4-H club for six years. He has been enrolled in the tractor project for three years.

Matron Held In Texas Death

LIVE OAK, Texas (AP) - A middle-aged, churchgoing woman was being held in a hospital today on $110,000 bond, accused of bursting into a neighbor's apartment and killing a woman and wounding four people in an unexplained shooting spree.

Mayor Ralph Cullip said a construction crew found the suspect, Joyce Ann Vanguilder, 42, lying on the side of a highway less than two hours after the shootings Wednesday, babbling incoherently and saying she "did some shooting at some snakes and rats in her home."

She was hospitalized at Medical Center Hospital in San Antonio. Hospital spokesman Ralph Cortez said Miss Vanguilder suffered two broken ankles, a broken right foot and fractured spine after apparently jumping or falling from a highway embankment.

The mayor said Miss Vanguilder was unarmed when she was arrested.

Chuck Boltz, a boy of about 10, said the woman rushed into his family's home and began shooting at his parents while screaming, "You killed everybody and you're going to pay." His mother was among those wounded.

Miss Vanguilder was charged with one count of murder and four counts of attempted murder late Wednesday night, said night Magistrate Quon Lew. He said he set bonds totaling $110,000.

Three other boys were inside the apartment where the shooting took place at about 11 a.m., but were not injured, police said.

The mayor said Miss Vanguilder was known to own a .22-caliber pistol and a .25-caliber pistol. He said police had twice before investigated disturbances involving her at the apartment complex.

The Rev. Charles Kemble, pastor of the Universal Baptist Church and a friend of the apartment owner, Elva Ferrell, said Miss Vanguilder lived in a small, two-room unit and did odd jobs around the complex.

Reporters saw religious tapes, a large open Bible and a notebook containing incoherent writings inside Miss Vanguilder's residence. Mrs. Ferrell said the woman, who lived alone at the apartments for the past seven years, attended a non-denominational church almost every night.

Some residents said she walked around the grounds with a pistol strapped to her side in a holster and told them she was in charge of security. Kemble and Mrs. Ferrell denied she was a security guard.

Dozens of police officers from five agencies surrounded the apartment complex for two hours until they were told a woman already was in custody.

The victims had moved to the San Antonio suburb from the Lebanon, Pa., area about nine months ago to look for jobs, said one of those wounded in the attack.

19-year-old Sterling J. Ditzler. The Bexar County medical examiner's office identified the dead woman as Sue Banderman, 32.

Ditzler and Vivian Boltz, 27, were in serious condition at Brooke Army Medical Center. Tim Schwartz, 13, was in fair condition and his mother Karen Schwartz, 33, was in good condition at Northeast Baptist Hospital.

Mrs. Ferrell said the Schwartz and Boltz families lived in neighboring apartments and all five of the victims were believed to be related by marriage.

Kenner Mayor Is Critical Of Settlement Attempts

KENNER, La. (AP) - Mayor Aaron Broussard has criticized Pan Am's insurance company for asking ground survivors and relatives of people killed in last week's jetliner crash to settle out of court, instead of filing suit.

"There are people in this area that haven't buried their dead yet and you'd better not be coming in here and forcing them to make decisions before they put their people in the ground," Broussard said Wednesday, complaining about a letter to residents from U.S. Aviation Underwriters.

Meanwhile, the National Transportation Safety Board continued its investigation into Friday's crash of Flight 759, which killed all 146 people aboard the Boeing 727 and eight others in the New Orleans suburb in the second-worst accident in U.S. aviation history.

The flight originated in Miami and stopped in New Orleans before it was to continue on to Las Vegas, Nev., and San Diego.

The NTSB said a preliminary investigation showed the Pan Am flight sheared off treetops on busy Williams Boulevard, less than a half-mile from the end of the runway, before scorching a path three blocks long and 150 feet wide.

Wrecking crews and bulldozers finished scraping the area clean Wednesday, smashing the homes' slab foundations and carting away the concrete in heavy trucks.

The Jefferson Parish coroner's office said Wednesday that 62 bodies have been identified so far, with 32 released to relatives.

Four accident-related lawsuits have been filed already, seeking a total of $91.5 million in damages.

Wendell Gauthier, a lawyer representing a family whose home was damaged in the accident and is seeking $3.5 million, contended Wednesday that another airliner hit treetops after taking off from the airport eight months ago.

"It may sound unbelievable, but it happened," the lawyer said. "I've talked to people on Williams Boulevard. They said the FAA and aviation board came out and said, 'Let us cut them down or we'll get a court order to do it.'"

USDA Orders Wheat Reductions

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers will have to reduce 1983 wheat plantings 20 percent in order to collect federal price supports and related benefits, says the Agriculture Department.

The 1983 cutback compares with a 15 percent reduction for this year's wheat crop. Back-to-back record crops and indications for another bumper harvest have triggered one of the sharpest U.S. grain buildups in history.

Agriculture Secretary John R. Block said Wednesday that according to current estimates, farmers are expected to take 6 million to 10 million acres of wheat land from production next year. Department officials say farmers have only 1.44 million fewer acres for harvest this year than they did in 1981, despite the reduction program.

Block rejected proposals by some farm groups and members of Congress to pay farmers direct subsidies for taking some of their land out of production next year.

The National Association of Wheat Growers said the program will make farmers "clients of the government" by increasing their dependence on federal support programs.

Block also announced resumption of a loan program to help farmers build grain storage bins, up to a total of $40 million beginning Oct. 1.

Also, he told a news conference, an additional $300 million has been made available to help selected foreign countries to buy U.S. farm commodities. That boosted the credit program to $2.8 billion.

Block said the wheat acreage reduction "will have a negligible effect on consumer prices" because the farm value of grain has so little impact on processed food prices.

At the same time, he said, reduced output is expected to help farmers financially, including the possibility of some strengthening in wheat prices in 1983.

In a move to help encourage participation in the 1983 wheat program, Block said farmers would be eligible to collect cash payments at the time they sign up, beginning on Sept. 7 for winter wheat producers.

The advance payments would be equal to half of the estimated 1983 crop deficiency payments which would be due them. The payments make up the difference between the market price level — or the loan rate, whichever is higher — and a "target price" set under a formula.

Block said that tentatively the deficiency payment for wheat in 1983 is estimated at about 50 cents a bushel, meaning the advance payment would be about 25 cents a bushel on their normal production.

Block said he had no estimate on how much the deficiency payments and the cash advances might total because it is not known how many farmers will enroll in the program.

Business Inventories On Rise Again

By LORRAINE CICHOWSKI
AP Business Writer

A brisk sales pace helped U.S. businesses cut their inventories in May, the government says, but sales have been slipping ever since.

The Commerce Department said Wednesday that businesses cut inventories of their unsold goods 0.9 percent in May, the biggest decline in at least 15 years. Total sales in May rose 2.5 percent.

Plunging inventory levels mean relatively slow production, but economists say inventory cutbacks can be good news for the future since manufacturers are unlikely to increase production and hire back laid-off workers while facing big stocks of unsold goods.

On Tuesday, however, the Commerce Department reported retail sales for June fell 1.5 percent. The government reports retail sales the second week of the month for the preceding month, but reports on business inventories are two months behind.

Commerce blamed a 6.9 percent decline in automobile sales for much of June's sales decline.

On Wednesday, major domestic automakers said new car sales continued to plunge in early July, down 16.4 percent in the first 10 days of the month. An industry trade journal said the five major carmakers will produce 11.4 percent more cars this week than last week but 15.7 percent fewer than the same week last year.

"Following the May business pickup, the economy faltered in June," said Robert Dederick, Commerce's undersecretary-designate for economic affairs.

Said John Savacool, a private economist with Wharton Econometrics, "I suspect we're going to see some inventory building in the very near future. But manufacturers are not going to start to produce more goods until consumers spend more."

Meanwhile, a $1.6 billion modernization was delayed at a U.S. Steel Corp. plant in Lorain, Ohio, because of the recession. And Republic Steel Corp. announced it was shutting down its central alloy district, laying off 3,400 workers in the Ohio cities of Canton and Massillon.

The steel industry is operating at less than 50 percent of capacity. Top steel executives are blaming cheap imports for decimating their business.

Western European officials were scheduled to be in Washington today for another round of talks aimed at resolving the dispute over subsidies on foreign steel. U.S. Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige met with officials last week in Belgium and West Germany over the issue.

The Commerce Department last month issued a preliminary ruling that found nine countries, including seven in the Common Market, of unfairly subsidizing steel exports to this country.

In other economic news: —Former Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. said alcohol and drug addiction could become America's No. 1 health problem. He said they cost business and industry more than $100 billion a year.

—A study by the U.S. League of Savings Associations said homebuyers in the Northeast and the West had to stretch their household budgets further than their counterparts in other regions last year to afford housing purchases. It said 45 percent of homebuyers in the Northeast and 56 percent in the West spent more than one-fourth of their monthly income on housing expenses.

—J.L. Hudson Co. chairman P. Gerald Mills announced Wednesday that the firm will close its 28-story downtown Detroit department store after this year's Christmas holiday season. "The long-term sales trend of the downtown store over the past 20 years has been consistently downward, even during Detroit's most prosperous years," Mills said. The firm had maintained a store there for 101 years.

Former Candidate Charged

A former presidential candidate and his brother were arrested by Greenville police Wednesday on charges of carrying concealed weapons after officers stopped the truck in which the two were traveling at the intersection of Third and Elizabeth streets about noon.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Willis J. Stancill, 43, of 613 Oak St., an Independent Party candidate for president in 1980, was driving the vehicle and charged with driving under the influence. His brother, 45-year-old Claxton G. Stancill Jr. of Route 9, Greenville, was charged with resisting and obstructing officers at the scene.

The weapons charges came after officers found two pistols, three knives, a blackjack and some 150 rounds of ammunition.

Cannon said officers also found $8,843 in cash.

Government May Sell Portion Of Military Resort

By LINDY WASHBURN
Associated Press Writer

HONOLULU (AP) — For sale: 17 acres prime Waikiki beach front. Parcel may include World War II artillery battery currently housing Army Museum, picnic tables, and handball courts. Zoned: Park. Value: $221 million. Contact: 1600 Pennsylvania Ave., Washington, D.C.

It hasn't gone on the auction block yet, but many residents are shocked that Fort DeRussy, an oasis of lawn and sand amid the hotel high-rises and condo canyons of Waikiki, might be auctioned to the highest bidder to diminish the national debt.

"Will the scrap metal in the Statue of Liberty go to the highest bidder?" asked one irate reader in a letter to a local newspaper. "Why not tell New York City to sell Central Park?" wrote another.

"It is the perfect example of the kind of property we need to sell to bring down our $1 trillion national debt," counters Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., an advocate of the sale.

"The times call for this kind of sacrifice," said Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger in a letter to Percy last March, but he noted that the sale of the unique military recreation area undoubtedly would damage military morale.

Seventeen acres of the 72-acre military recreation area have been declared excess land by the Federal Property Review Board. If Congress passes a suitable law, the board plans to sell the land at auction.

More than 300 parcels of land — ranging from a penitentiary in Indiana to a vacant city block in Philadelphia — were included in a preliminary nationwide list released June 26 by review board.

The huge transfer of public land to the private domain is expected to generate $1.3 billion in revenue in 1983, and more than $4 billion annually in succeeding years, federal officials say.

David Stockman, Reagan's director of the federal budget, figures the value of the Fort DeRussy parcel at $13 million an acre. But whoever bids on the land will have to contend with stiff local opposition — backed by strong zoning ordinances.

"I will do everything in my power to prevent its sale to the highest bidder," said Honolulu Mayor Eileen R. Anderson. "We will use all our land use, planning, zoning and permit procedure powers to discourage sale or use of the lands at Fort DeRussy."

City officials say the land is within the Waikiki Special Design District, a section of beachfront under strict zoning laws. In Fort DeRussy, the city prohibits all buildings in a 100-foot beach-front area and beyond the beach, building heights are limited to 25 feet or less.

"The last thing the people of Honolulu need in Waikiki is another major construction site for hotels and condominiums," Mrs. Anderson said in a speech earlier this year. "What we really need is more open beachfront and green space."

Located next to the Hilton Hawaiian Village, the fort is named after Rene DeRussy, a Civil War general. Its spacious grounds and public pathways are used by an estimated 500,000 people each month, according to Capt. Dick Hooter, a former post commander.

Residents mingle with the mainstays of Hawaii's economy — tourists and members of the military. Girl Scouts picnic and American Legionnaires convene beneath its towering shade trees. And nearly every parade in Waikiki assembles or disperses there.

An artillery battery may be included in the surplus acreage. From 1915 to 1946, it housed two 14-inch guns protecting the coast of Oahu; now it is now home to the U.S. Army Museum.

A 417-room hotel, Kale Koa, was opened in 1975 for military personnel and their families and occupies nearly nine acres of the land. A spokesman for Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, says the hotel apparently is not included in the proposed sale.

Mrs. Anderson and Hawaii's four congressmen have opposed the sale in local speeches and in testimony before the House subcommittee on government activities and transportation.

In 1968, Inouye pushed through a measure specifically requiring congressional approval for any federal sale of Fort DeRussy. However, the 1983 military construction appropriation bill was passed June 30 by the Senate with an amendment apparently overriding Inouye's protection.

That measure must still gain approval in the House, and Rep. Daniel Akaka, D-Hawaii, has promised a floor fight.

Mrs. Anderson has emphasized the importance of local jurisdiction over land use. At the U.S. Conference of Mayors last month in Minneapolis, she won unanimous approval for a resolution opposing the proposed nationwide sale.

"I intend to use that resolution whenever I can," she said. "If the federal government does divest itself of the land, Mrs. Anderson said she has recommended that it be offered to either the state or the city."

New Emergency Spending Bill Ready

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) —

Hoping to avoid a third veto by President Reagan, House and Senate negotiators have written a compromise $5.5 billion emergency spending bill that parallels a Senate-passed measure endorsed by Reagan's budget director.

The full House was expected to consider the bill today. If approved by the House, Senate action would soon follow.

Quick congressional action on the stopgap bill — and Reagan's signature — would avert the need for the government to furlough thousands of workers later this month and end an impasse that has dragged on since March.

The emergency measure is necessary to keep money flowing to more than a dozen federal agencies and major domestic programs until Sept. 30, the end of the fiscal year.

Officials at the Treasury, Labor, Health and Human Services, Commerce and Education departments as well as some independent agencies have said they likely would have to furlough workers later this month if the stalemate is not ended.

The compromise measure, drafted in a negotiating session Wednesday, roughly follows an earlier Senate bill that was written with the help of White House budget director David A. Stockman, who later said he would advise Reagan to sign it.

Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., said he had discussed with Stockman on Wednesday what total figure the administration would accept.

Asked if Reagan would accept this new measure, Hatfield said, "I think so."

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., and other House Democratic leaders, had assailed the Senate measure for the domestic spending it had cut from an earlier House bill.

House negotiators came to the conference Wednesday with a proposal to add about $221 million to the Senate measure.

Hatfield said the president likely would reject a bill carrying that much extra, adding that the failure of the House to override Reagan's two previous vetoes of the emergency bill proved he could make another one stick, too.

Reagan rejected the two emergency measures sent to him so far as being too costly.

After two hours of bickering, the conferees agreed to:

—Keep the overall total of the package down by rescinding $171 million in subsidies for rental housing.

—Add $45 million for summer job training for youngsters.

—Add $20 million to reimburse states for the cost of the resettlement of refugees, particularly from Cuba and Haiti.

—Add $72 million in federal highway money.

—Add $42 million in postal rate subsidies for the U.S. Postal Service.

—Add $1 million for grants to retain trained nurses in the work force.

In addition, the House negotiators agreed to delay pressing for $210 million to support part-time jobs for individuals 55 years old and above. That money likely will be placed in a later money bill.

The Senate agreed to reduce from $57.6 million to $35 million the money for a job training program for low-income families.

Hospitals Face Blood Shortage

By The Associated Press

With schools out, plants idle and Americans on vacation, hospitals in many of the nation's cities are facing an annual summer blood shortage amid growing demand. One St. Louis hospital is even asking for donations from visitors.

Appeals for donors have been issued in New York and Arkansas, where blood supplies are at a "seriously low level," while officials in Seattle were to decide today whether to broadcast a plea for blood.

New York City's two-day supply — down from an optimal five-day reserve — threatened to worsen today, disrupting the Northeast blood network. Hospital workers were poised to walk out in a labor dispute that could shut down the Greater New York Blood program.

Improved treatment for gunshot victims and accident cases are responsible for the increase, as are increasingly routine surgical procedures such as open-heart surgery. The need for blood platelets for cancer patients also is boosting blood usage.

Britain's Biggest Job In Falklands Just Beginning

By MARK S. SMITH
Associated Press Writer

STANLEY, Falkland Islands (AP) — The last of the troops that won back the Falklands from Argentina will be home within a month. But Britain's job here is only beginning.

Not only is a military garrison larger than the population to be established, but explosive mines must be cleared, homes rebuilt, the Stanley airfield extended and the islands' economy revived.

"After three months of occupation, we've got a lot of rehabilitation and reconstruction to do," said Rex Hunt, former Falklands governor who returned as civil commissioner.

Of Stanley's 368 houses, 27 were destroyed or so badly damaged during the fighting as to be uninhabitable. An additional 167 sustained less serious damage.

The town's water and power supplies were knocked out by shell fire, the police station had its roof blown off by a rocket and Stanley airfield, though operating, is strewn with the remains of Argentine aircraft and equipment.

Abandoned jeeps, tanks and armored vehicles line the Stanley docks. Argentine booby-traps and mines, scattered aimlessly in the panic of defeat, are sown in and around the capital and throughout the islands' battlefields.

The British military hopes to prevent any repetition of Argentina's April 2 invasion by establishing a garrison large enough to deter initial threats and an airstrip long enough to take airborne reinforcements.

Government officials estimate the garrison force at 2,500, according to British press reports. By contrast, when the Argentines invaded, there were just 42 Royal Marines here to guard a civilian population of about 1,800.

In about three weeks, the airfield will be shut down so Royal Engineers can begin lengthening the 4,000-foot runway to accommodate large transports and high-performance fighter planes.

The British-descended islanders have long sought the extension to establish a direct air link to Britain. But the British government in 1977 refused to spend the 3 million pounds ($5.2 million) then needed.

Defense Secretary John Nott in London has projected the cost of British military operations at a billion pounds ($1.73 billion); estimates on maintaining the garrison, plus the ships, submarines and warplanes that will patrol the South Atlantic for the foreseeable future, run into the hundreds of millions of dollars a year.

The troops are helping in the civilian reconstruction, too. As Royal Engineers clear Argentine minefields, other soldiers are repairing water and power lines. The military is shipping to the Falklands a new water treatment plant, building materials to repair homes and fuel for heating them.

"The Argentines used the peat we normally burn to make their barricades," said John Broderick, director of public works. "We can't cut more right now as our peat banks are suspect because of the mine hazard."

The fighting and the mine hazard have disrupted the islands' principal industry, sheep-raising. Thousands of the 600,000 sheep were slaughtered by Argentine soldiers for food, others were destroyed by mines and many are roaming free after the destruction of fences and pens.

For Hunt, economic reconstruction is a top priority. He hopes the conflict will attract not only aid from London but investment from abroad.

As long as it doesn't destroy the "tranquil and peaceful quality of life," Hunt would like to see exploitation of the islands' natural resources, including an offshore oilfield that is reported — but not confirmed — to be bigger than Britain's North Sea oilfield, abundant fishing and large kelp beds, which could be an important source of alginic acid used by industry in plastics, medicine and jellies.

He also would like to see more islanders own their own land. Currently, the Falkland Islands Co., which controls the wool trade and much of the islands' commerce, owns 46 percent of the land.

Also high on Hunt's priority list is what might be termed psychological reconstruction.

Islanders, he said, are in a "state of shock" after three months of occupation. Most don't wish to consider the future yet, even to decide whether they will remain on the islands or find a new life elsewhere.

But some Falklanders insist the 74-day conflict is all the more reason for the islands to remain a British colony, with no role for Argentina or any other nation to play.

Hunt contends, however, that an eventual role for Argentina — most likely economic — is inevitable. "After all, they are our biggest and nearest neighbor," he said.

Hunt even suggests the islanders consider ending their colonial status in favor of some looser association with Britain or even independence accompanied by international security guarantees.

Britain and Argentina have been disputing the sovereignty of the Falklands since Britain took them over in 1833 and they've been negotiating the issue for 35 years. The most recent talks, in late February, were termed "cordial" by both sides.

In those 35 years, British governments did little to hide their desire to be rid of the dispute, so long as the islanders' rights were protected. But Foreign Office designs were frustrated by Conservative members of Parliament in London and the lobbying efforts of the islanders.

Now, with British and Falklanders' lives lost in the battle, it may be even more difficult to surrender sovereignty.

But Stewart Wallace, a former member of the island's Legislative Council, said he thinks the conflict has made the stakes too high for the islanders' wishes alone to prevail in London.

"We know we're not likely to have that veto power again," he said.

London Chief May Quit

LONDON (AP) — London police chief Sir David McNeer may quit to take the heat for police blunders that enabled a prowler to enter the Buckingham Palace bedroom of Queen Elizabeth II, British newspapers reported today.

The Daily Telegraph said government ministers and senior Conservative Party legislators who received preliminary details of last Friday's break-in by 31-year-old unemployed drifter Michael Fagan were "appalled at the police lapses" at the palace.

The Telegraph reported speculation that the 57-year-old McNeer, who has been Metropolitan Police Commissioner since 1977 and bears ultimate responsibility for police security at the palace, may feel obliged to resign ahead of his official retirement date next October.

The London Times, reporting what it called an "astonishing catalogue of police error," said the trouble started when an officer outside the palace and unconnected with the police there spotted the intruder climbing over a wall in broad daylight at about 6 a.m.

He went to the police duty room in the palace, where officers treated his story

"with some skepticism." They carried out a brief search, found nothing a returned to their room, the paper said.

About 15 minutes later, the Times said, the intruder set off an alarm that triggered a flashing light in the police control room at the palace. An officer there switched it off, saying: "That bloody alarm is always going off."

Unable to get into the rest of the palace from a locked ground floor room, the intruder climbed up a drainpipe to a second floor window and entered a corridor leading to the queen's private apartments and bedroom, the Times said.

He went in and drew the curtains, waking the queen. She immediately rang the police switchboard at the palace. "The officers failed to understand the urgency of her message, apparently because of the calm manner in which it was delivered," the Times said.

While the intruder sat on her bed talking about his family, the queen again called the police switchboard. About two minutes later a chambermaid came in, quickly followed by a footman and they escorted the man from the bedroom. The police arrived two minutes later.

The Times said that in all the queen was alone with the intruder for about 10 minutes. It said its report was based on information from senior Conservative Party legislators who attended a private briefing on the incident given Monday night by Home Secretary William Whitelaw.

Whitelaw is to report on the incident to Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Cabinet later today and make a statement to the House of Commons next Wednesday following completion of a top-level Scotland Yard inquiry.

Other newspapers carried similar reports, also based on accounts by legislators who attended Whitelaw's briefing.

Running For President

Professor Wants To Air Beliefs

By DAVID REED
Associated Press Writer
COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Presidential candidate William P. Kreml sees himself as a modern-day Thomas Jefferson intent on making sure the government has a workable, up-to-date Constitution.

Kreml, a University of South Carolina professor, admits he has no chance of winning the Democratic nomination for president in 1984. But he is hoping his bid for the nation's highest office will draw attention to his concerns about the Constitution.

The University of South Carolina professor thinks there should be some major changes made in the U.S.
Constitution, which he says should be updated constantly to keep up with changing times.

The political scientist is entering six New England Democratic primaries in 1984 on a platform of constitutional revision.

But Kreml, 40, doesn't want his political aspirations to hinder the campaign of South Carolina's favorite son presidential candidate, Sen.
Ernest Hollings.

"I don't want to hurt Fritz Hollings, and I don't plan to enter the South Carolina primary. I consider him a real contender for president.
We're talking about different things."

What Kreml is talking about is a constitutional amendment that would help lift "the stalemate of the American government and keep history from passing us by."

Kreml lost to Hollings almost 10-1 in the 1980 Democratic primary for U.S.
Senate. He said then he was using the campaign as a forum for his views on issues similar to the ones he's now raising. The campaign received some national attention, and Kreml believes it spurred some serious

Constitution.

Kreml's revision of the document would have two main points. It would permit congressmen to serve on Cabinet positions and would extend the term of House of Representatives members to four years, concurrent with the presidential term.

The separation of powers provisions written into the Constitution have tied the hands of lawmakers to the point where little can be accomplished, Kreml says.
The change "would be to provide a greater incentive for Congress and the executive branch to work together on problems."

"House members are continuously running for their office. They are so aware of short term political considerations they are not able to consider long term problems and solutions."

Concurrent terms would help formulate a national mood that could be adopted into policy, he says.

"They will see themselves in the same boat, so they will sink or swim together."

Kreml would eventually like to alter Congress to be more like the European parliamentary systems.

But Kreml says Jefferson wouldn't roll over in his grave if he knew the U.S. government might be more like the government he worked to win independence from.

Jefferson made it clear the Constitution was designed to be valid for one generation and it should be constantly reformed and updated, Kreml says, adding that the United States has been through seven generations with the same basic Constitution.

"We're at the point in our history that if we don't start asking some hard questions about change, we will see a continuation of the slow economic decline we have had since 1965.

"Since 1965, we have been a country not in control of its destiny. With the kind of government we know have, events are beginning to control us rather than we controlling events.

"The person who votes for me will be saying he's prepared to scrutinize the Constitution with an eye toward possible change. He'll be saying he or she wants the government to be structurally designed to work better."

Kreml has had some first-hand experience watching government work. He was born in Chicago and his father worked closely with the powerful Democratic machine run by the late Mayor Richard Daley.

He came to Columbia in 1970 after receiving a law degree at Northwestern University, a doctorate in political science at Indiana and teaching in Tennessee and Illinois.

Kreml describes his effort as an educational candidacy.
He has targeted New England as the springboard for his campaign because of its compacted geography and intellectual atmosphere.

His strategy is to run a kind of Ivy League campaign rather than a grass roots campaign. He hopes to form a strong backbone from academia and spread the word from the many college campuses in the area to the people.

His backers now include many prominent professors and political thinkers such as the noted historian James McGregor Burns, who wrote
"Deadlock of Democracy," a book outlining a philosophy similar to Kreml's.

He said he doesn't seriously hope to win the nomination, but if his campaign should catch fire, he'll enter as many primaries as money allows. He mentions the California and New York primaries as possibilities.

Migrant Held In Girl's Death

TAYLORSVILLE, N.C.
(AP) — Alexander County authorities have arrested a migrant tobacco picker on charges of murdering a 7-year-old Taylorsville girl in a crime described as by the sheriff as one of the most brutal he has ever seen.

Bernardino Zuniga, 27, whose only known address is in Homestead, Fla., was arrested Tuesday night at the Knoxville, Tenn., bus station and charged with the slaying of April Sweet.

The girl's partially clad body was found about a quarter of a mile from her home where she lived with her grandfather and mother, Susan Sweet, 24.

Deputies said the girl's throat had been cut and they suspect she may have been sexually assaulted.

Deputies and state troopers guarded Zuniga closely Wednesday afternoon, and plans were being made to transfer him to another county.

Alexander County Sheriff Thomas Beber said the crime was "one of the most brutal I've ever seen."

"She was just a friendly, little child," said April's great aunt, Gladys Inman, who helped search for the second-grader Tuesday afternoon. "She was curious about everything and liked to talk to people. You hear about this kind of thing happening in big cities, but you never think it's gonna come to your own front yard."

Authorities said the child was watching television around 10:30 a.m. Tuesday when her mother and grandfather left home to spray

some tobacco beds.

Investigators said a man drove up to the Johnson residence in a taxi shortly afterwards.

The family noticed the girl was missing about two hours later and a search began.
Family members were joined by sheriff's deputies and volunteer fire fighters and an extended search around 1:30 p.m.

The search ended four hours later when a volunteer fire fighter found the body.
Investigators said she was lying on her back, dressed only in a shirt, and with a
of her neck.

Supplied with information from cab drivers and others, authorities began searching for Zuniga, whom Beber said had taken a cab from Taylorsville to Statesville Tuesday night and then bought a bus ticket for

State's Milk Prices High

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) —
The $16.17 per 100 pounds of milk that is paid to North Carolina dairy farmers is higher than every Southeastern state except Florida, a N.C. State University economist says.

Geoffrey A. Benson, extension economist in dairy management and marketing, also submitted figures to the state Milk Commission this week showing that prices paid to farmers in a majority of the other states were below $16.

The only other states above $16 were South Carolina and Virginia, which also are the only two states in the Southeast besides North Carolina that have a milk commission.

All of the other states come under federal milk marketing orders, which sets minimum prices that must be paid to farmers in states or sections of states without milk commissions.

Grady Cooper Jr., executive secretary of the state Milk Commission, says the milk price is higher in North Carolina because it's more expensive for farmers to produce milk in the state.

"It cost more here to produce milk here than in most other areas of the country," he said. "We base our pricing formulas on what it costs to produce it."

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was little changed today, pausing after Wednesday's late rally.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 4.19 Wednesday, slipped .10 to 828.29 by noon-time.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about 7 to 6 in the broad tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said investors were encouraged by the market's apparent resumption late Wednesday of the rally it began last week. But they said plenty of economic worries remained to give traders pause.

The Federal Reserve reported this morning that industrial production dropped a seasonally adjusted 0.7 percent in June.

There had been some hopes on Wall Street that the index would show a modest gain, pointing toward the beginnings of an economic recovery.

International Business Machines led the active list, off 1/4 at 66 1/2. The stock climbed sharply to a new 12-month high earlier in the week on the company's report of better-than-expected second quarter earnings.

Raytheon dropped 1 1/2 to 37 1/2. The company reported that its profits edged up about 2 per-cent in the quarter ended July 4.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .07 to 63.43. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .64 at 249.15.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 25.98 million shares at noon, against 27.70 million at the same point Wednesday.

make many compromises and changes in the tobacco program to save it, these compromises were good ones and sufficient ones to keep the basic program in tact while making it the no-cost proposition mandated by Congress," Graham said.

"I am particularly pleased that the Senate left the setting of price-support levels with the current system, with minor adjustments which is tied to a cost factor linked to the general condition of the economy," he said.

Hackney said he thinks the program will do much toward reducing criticism the program has received from anti-tobacco congressmen.

"I think the main thing that even so-called anti-tobacco congressmen can point to now is that we now have a tobacco program that is on a pay-as-you-go basis," he said. "It's truly a self-sustaining program. Also, allotment holders will share the risk in growing tobacco."

The Senate defeated another Eagleton amendment that would have required Congress to renew the program every four years. It was defeated by a 49-47 vote after Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, was persuaded to change his vote after about 20 minutes.

"So many of the criticisms that have been directed at the program have been allayed," Hackney said. "It also doesn't have the four-year-provision, so we don't have to worry about it ever four years."

"I don't feel there are any real problems," said T.C. Blalock, executive vice president of the North Carolina Tobacco Growers Association. "I'm hoping we will have a bill signed by the president soon, maybe in two or three days."

"We are pleased with the results of the legislation passed by the Senate," said Fred Bond of the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corporation. "It will do what tobacco proponents have been discussing during the hearings."

The delays in passage of the program have already created problems for North Carolina's tobacco farmers, said John Cyrus, chief of the tobacco affairs section of the state Department of Agriculture.

The first markets to open will be the Border Belt in Columbus and Robeson Counties. They begin sales July 26. August 10 is the opening date for markets in the Piedmont area.

"Some growers are already feeling a money pinch," Cyrus said.

DHC's Gatlin An All-Star

CAROLINA, Pa. — D.H. Conley guard Keith Gatlin has made the Five-Star Basketball Camp All-Star team for the second straight week.

The camp is one of the most prestigious summer basketball camps in the nation and draws players from across the nation.

Gatlin, a rising senior at Conley, was among 12 players picked to it again this week as the camp moved here to Robert Morris College.

Gatlin, who made the all-star team the first week also of the camp also, said making the all-star team this week was more challenging than the first week because more outstanding players from across the nation were competing for the 12 spots.

Pirates To Battle Camels In Opener

From Staff, Wire Reports
Fourth-seeded East Carolina will take on top-seeded and host Campbell Friday evening in the opening round of the North State Summer League post-season tournament.

The double-elimination tournament is being held at Campbell and will continue Saturday and Sunday.

Campbell won the league title when both its double-header with University of North Carolina at Wilmington and North Carolina State's game at North Carolina were rained out Wednesday.

The bad weather left Campbell, 22-8, one-half game ahead of North Carolina State, 22-9, in the final regular-season standings.

ECU, which split a double-header with UNC-W to clinch a tournament berth, is 11-22.

"Campbell came at the end of the season," ECU coach

Williams is 3-0 this season with a 1.54 earned run average. Gay is 5-1 with 2.90 ERA.

"If he (Williams) is right he'll start," Davis said. Williams, a right-hander, was injured last week in batting practice when a foul ball hit his left foot. The injury, Davis said, has caused Williams to change his delivery.

Wilson will counter with right-hander Charles Davis, who is 7-1. Davis, who attended Wilson Beddingfield, has signed to play for Mt. Olive.

Pitt County goes into the finals having not played since last Friday when it defeated Snow Hill to earn a berth in the championship series. Wilson, on the other hand, finished off Rocky Mount Monday night.

Both teams had first-round byes. Game time for tonight's game at Harrington Field is 8 p.m. Game No. 2 in the best of five series is scheduled for Friday at 8 p.m.

Davis said he wishes his team had not had such a long layoff, but that the layoff will not give Wilson an edge.

"It'll hurt our bats some," Davis said. "It'll make it hard on us (from that standpoint), but I don't think it helps them much."

"I feel like everybody is ready to play baseball. I think they're all ready to go."

Pitt County and Wilson tied for the regular season title and Pitt County won a coin-toss to gain the No. 1 seed. The two teams split their four-game season series.

Asked if he thought the series would go five games, Davis said: "That's hard to say. We're pretty well matched up and most of our games (during the season) were close."

"But, I think we may have a little more pitching depth."

Kiwanis Captures City Championship

Robbie McDonald drilled a two-run home run and Jamie Hale scored what proved the winning run as Kiwanis eased past First Federal, 3-2, Wednesday to win the Little League City Championship.

Kiwanis lost the opening game of the series, 5-0, but came back to take the next two, 8-5 and 3-2, to win the best-of-three series, 2-1.

McDonald's blast erased that 1-0 deficit in the fourth. With one gone and Jon Chambliss on with a fielder's choice, McDonald connected for his two-run home run to give Kiwanis a 2-1 lead.

Kiwanis scored what proved the winning run one inning later. With two gone, Jamie Hale singled, stole second and went to third on an error. He scored when Joyner reached on an error.

First Federal cut the gap to 3-2 in the sixth when Frankie Pugh reached on an error and came around to score on two more errors. But, that was as close as First Federal could get.

No one for either team had more than one hit. Kiwanis had four hits for the game while McDonald held First Federal to two hits.

Price Early Open Leader

TROON, SCOTLAND (AP) — South African Nick Price holed a 70-foot birdie putt to secure a 3-under par 69 and the early first round lead today in the 111th British Open but the show-stealer was 52-year-old Arnold Palmer.

Palmer, who won the 1962 British Open at Royal Troon Golf Club, eagled the 556-yard par 5 fourth hole in bitter 45-degree cold, eventually got it to 4-under, and held on for a 1-under par 71.

Price, who is 86th on the European money list, went out in 2-under 34 and managed a 1-under 35 on the incoming nine played into the teeth of 20 mile-an-hour winds gusting off the Firth of Clyde.

The round-maker for Price, who was born in South Africa but moved to Zimbabwe at an early age, was the 70-foot birdie putt on the 457-yard par 4 No. 15.

"I expected the back nine to be tough and it was," said Price. "The long putt certainly helped."

He said his goal was to finish in the top 10 because "my confidence is not too high right now."

Price has spent some time in America working with club professional Dave Ledbetter of Greenleaf, Fla.

"He has helped me a lot with my game," said the 25-year-old Price.

Tied with Palmer at 71 were former British Open champion Seve Ballesteros of Spain and Danny Edwards, the former All-American from Oklahoma State.

Former U.S. Open champion David Graham was in the clubhouse with a 1-over-par 73 while Americans Ben Crenshaw and Raymond Floyd each shot 74, Ed Sneed 76 and Bruce Lietzke 77.

An example of the backline difficulty in the numbing cold and wind was Floyd's 40 and Lietzke's 44.

American Bobby Clampett was making a run at the leaders at 5-under par through 12 holes while Jack Nicklaus was 4-over through 15. Defending champion Bill Rogers was even after nine and Tom Watson 1-under after four holes.

London oddsmakers, thrilled his hardy Scot gallery by reaching the fourth hole in two shots then sinking a 30-foot eagle putt.

After bogeying the next hole, Palmer, twice a British Open winner, followed with birdies on the sixth and seventh, where he made a 30-footer, to turn the front nine in 3-under par 33.

Palmer holed a 6-foot birdie putt on the par 5 No. 11, called the "Railroad Hole" because of tracks which are out-of-bounds right, to go 4-under. He saved par with a 15-footer on the 12th but then ran into trouble because he couldn't reach the long par fours into the wind.

Palmer was short with his wood second shots at both the 468-yard No. 13 and the 457-yard No. 15, where he hit driver-driver, and two-putted for a bogey.

To Be Remembered As One Of The Best

Kite Has A Career Goal

TRON, Scotland (AP) - Tom Kite has a goal. "I'd like to be remembered as one of the greatest, if not the greatest, player of my time," he said before teeing off today in the first round of the 111th British Open Golf Championship. But the little man from Austin, Texas is the first to point out "I've got a ways to go" before reaching that goal. "My career might not be all that I would want it to be at this stage. But I'm getting there. I must improve this year, and I must improve next year and I must improve the year after that." He is, perhaps, the most consistently high finisher in the game. He is in title contention on a near-weekly basis. Last year, he led the American PGA Tour in money winnings. And he captured the coveted Vardon Trophy for the low stroke average. But he rarely wins.

"I know I can make a living out here, make a lot of money, and a lot of guys would be very satisfied with that. "But winning is what it's all about. That's what we're playing for. And I just don't win as much as I should. "I can't explain it to you because I can't explain it to myself," said Kite, whose record since the start of 1981 shows he has finished 10th or better in 31 of 44 tournaments. In that period, however, he has won only twice, last year at Inverrary and in the Bay Hill Classic this season. While he may be disappointed in his lack of victories (four official triumphs in a 10-year career), Kite is not discouraged. "I won the European Open in the fall of '80 and last year I won the Mixed Team. Those helped. They're not tour wins, but they help. That means I've won four times in about a year and a half. That helps the confidence. But that doesn't do it.

Maltbie Lives 3 PGA Lives

COAL VALLEY, Ill. (AP) - Roger Maltbie, in a sense, has been three separate golfers in his eight PGA Tour seasons. First, he was a rookie sensation in 1975, winning consecutive tournaments at Quad Cities and Pleasant Valley. He won $81,000 that year and followed with earnings of $117,000 the next season. Then, the 31-year-old Californian went into a horrible slump that sent his yearly earnings dipping to less than $10,000 in 1979. Now, he's on the rebound. He has won more than $61,000 in 1982, built on a runner-up finish in the Memorial and a fifth-place spot in the Tournament Players Championship. Maltbie was one of five former Quad Cities champions who began play today in this $200,000 tournament at Oakwood Country Club. The other former winners here are Dave Barr, the champion after an eight-hole playoff in 1981; Mike Morley, Victor Regalado and D.A. Weibring. Scott Hoch, the 1980 Quad Cities titleholder, withdrew Wednesday because of a sternum injury. Maltbie figures he's 80 to 85 percent back to his winning 1975 form.

"It's so much harder this time than it was the first time. I had set up so many mental blocks, it's hard to think of yourself as a good player," he said. Maltbie was asked if success came too easy, too swiftly, when he reached the American pro tour. "No, no," he replied quickly and then paused, adding: "I wasn't that successful, but maybe it was too much for my age." Maltbie's nightlife also may have taken its toll on the golf course. He credits his wife, Donna, for helping straighten out his nocturnal habits: "She's the reason. I've worked harder. I'm making strides. It's a long road back. They never said it would be easy. It hasn't been," he said. "To make $9,000 a year is sinful," he recalled. "Players were beating me I couldn't imagine. I was beating myself."

Pitt County ..... 10 Nash County ..... 5 AYDEN - Bryan Joyner's grand slam keyed a five-run sixth inning that led Pitt County past Nash County, 10-5, and the championship in the 13-year-old Babe Ruth tournament. Pitt County defeated Nash County, 9-8, Monday forcing a second and deciding title game. The game was rained out Tuesday night in Robersonville and when the field was still wet yesterday, the game was moved to Ayden. Pitt County trailed, 5-3, going into the sixth but scored five runs to take a lead it never lost. Joyner's grand slam gave Pitt a 7-5 lead and the locals scored one more run to up the lead to 8-5. No one for Pitt County had more than one hit. Mitchell Phillips was the winning pitcher.

Foster Doing Little For Mets...

NEW YORK (AP) — George Foster sees his role with the New York Mets the same way he saw it with the Cincinnati Reds.

"A guy to carry the ballclub," he explains. "Guys look up at me to do that."

But so far this season, Foster hasn't carried much more than a big check to the bank.

A player who produced 671 RBI, tops in the major leagues, and 198 home runs in the previous six seasons, Foster has admittedly not been delivering the goods since coming to the Mets this year.

"The fans have gotten on my case and I don't blame them," says Foster, who is being paid roughly $2 million a year by the Mets for his long-ball prowess.

"I used to take it personally, but I don't anymore. I realize there's a separation factor there — the fans are not booing me, they're booing the performance they expect but aren't getting."

Up to this week's All-Star break, the Mets' heralded outfielder has played in 84 of the club's 87 games and produced a total of only 22 extra-base hits: 10 home runs and 12 doubles. He has struck out 69 times and his RBI output is a quiet 41, with only five game-winning hits — not what you'd expect from a Two-Million Dollar Man.

"Certainly, he hasn't produced as well as we expected," said Mets Manager George Bamberger, "but a man like Foster can hit home runs in bunches. We just hope they start coming."

"If he's been discouraged, though, he hasn't shown me. It was a lot of pressure coming here, getting all that money in New York. But he's handled the situation well. I've never seen him throw a bat or a helmet — and I'm sure he's felt like it a couple of times."

Actually, Foster came to the Mets because of what he felt was a generally pressure-free situation. "It didn't seem like Cincinnati wanted to sign me," he said. "I felt I could go to New York without them giving up a lot to get me. I'm not replacing somebody here — I feel like I'm adding to the team instead."

The Mets obtained the Cincinnati star for three players — pitchers Jim Kern and Greg Harris and catcher Alex Trevino. They then signed Foster to a five-year deal that had various incentive clauses, but guaranteed him at least $10 million.

In several ways, the milieu has been different in New York than it was in Cincinnati for Foster. With the Reds, he played on some of the most talented teams in baseball history, in four championship playoffs and three World Series. With the Mets, he is trying to get used to losing streaks and lack of runners in scoring position.

...While Reds Stumble Along

CINCINNATI (AP) — How could one of the best teams in major league baseball become one of the worst in just one year?

It's simple. The Cincinnati Reds of 1981, which compiled the best overall record in major league baseball, as they're fond of reminding everyone, bear little resemblance to the Reds of 1982, which have the second-worst record in baseball.

President Dick Wagner overhauled the ballclub last winter, trading two All-Star outfielders and an All-Star third baseman, and allowing his leadoff hitter and prime base stealer to leave as a free agent. What he had in mind instead was building a team that relied on pitching, defense and speed.

Halfway through the season, the experiment has failed. Instead of a team with an overwhelming pitching staff, the Reds have only one winning pitcher (Mario Soto at 8-5) on the roster.

Instead of a team with improved speed and better defense against baserunners, the Reds have a worse stolen base percentage than a year ago. (They've stolen 52 in 85 attempts, compared to 58 of 95 in 1981.) Meanwhile, opponents have stolen 82 bases in 111 attempts.

Instead of a team that wins close games, the Reds are just 10-15 in one-run decisions.

Instead of a team that's a contender in the National League West, the Reds are mired in last place, 20 games below the .500 mark on a pace that would have them finish the season 62-100.

What went wrong? Reds management took several gambles that have not panned out. First, outfielder Clint Hurdle was acquired from Kansas City and given the starting left field job. Hurdle never hit, forcing the Reds to resort to backup players and rookies to fill in. They hoped center fielder Cesar Cedeno, acquired from Houston for Ray Knight, would assume the clean-up role vacated by George Foster. Cedeno is hitting .302, best among the regulars, but he's driven in just 36 runs and is only 8-of-17 in stolen base attempts.

Rookie right fielder Paul Householder also has failed to live up to expectations so far, batting just .188.

Third baseman Johnny Bench is suffering through one of his worst seasons. Without the rigors of catching taking a toll on his body, the Reds hoped Bench would increase his offensive production. Instead, he's batting just .227 with five home runs and 18 RBIs.

As a result, the Reds lack a power hitter who can consistently hit home runs and fuel rallies. Dan Driessen's nine homers leads the club, which has a total of just 42 home runs in 86 games.

Wagner won't say if he has any changes planned for after the season. Attendance at Riverfront Stadium down about 92,000 from last year.

Former All-Star Jensen Is Dead

SCOTTSDALE, Va. (AP) — Former outfielder Jackie Jensen, a member of three American League All-Star teams and the league's Most Valuable Player in 1958, is dead of a heart attack at the age of 55.

Jensen's wife Katherine, said her husband complained of feeling ill Tuesday evening when he returned from the summer baseball camp he operates at nearby Fork Union Military Academy. During the night, she said, he woke up with chest pains and died en route to the University of Virginia Hospital in Charlottesville.

Jensen had also suffered a heart attack in 1969.

In an 11-year major league career, Jensen batted .279 with 199 homers and 929 runs batted in. He began his career with the New York Yankees in 1950, was traded to the Washington Senators early in the 1952 season and played with the Boston Red Sox from 1954-61.

In his MVP year, Jensen batted .286 with 35 homers and 122 RBI. He drove in more than 100 runs five times.

Jensen was plagued throughout his career by a fear of flying, which contributed to his retirement in 1959 at the age of 32. He returned to Red Sox in 1961, hit .263 with 13 homers and 66 RBI, then retired for good.

Jensen's death came two months after he had participated in the Red Sox' Old Timers Game at Fenway Park.

Jackson, Winfield Talk About A Mutual 'Friend'

MONTREAL (AP) — The 53rd All-Star Game gave two former teammates a chance to get together and talk about how an impetuous shipbuilder from Tampa, Fla., had affected their respective baseball careers.

George Steinbrenner's ears had to be stinging. "Sure, I miss New York — I miss the fans, my friends, the guys," said Reggie Jackson, whose home run bat and crowd appeal gave sparkle to the New York Yankees before Steinbrenner, by default, let him slip away to the California Angels.

"Now I am happier and more relaxed than I've been in years. The controversies and needling from upstairs kept me always tense while I was a Yankee."

Tall, talented Dave Winfield, whom Steinbrenner hoped would fill the Jackson void, needed less than two years to learn that even a $22 million contract couldn't save him from similar pressures.

Last month, after Winfield accused Steinbrenner of balking on a written pledge to provide funds for the Winfield Foundation's underprivileged kids, the boss lashed out at his highly paid leftfielder. "I am disappointed in Winfield," Steinbrenner said. "He is not a superstar but just a good player. He can't carry a club the way Reggie could."

Winfield appeared more amused than chagrined by this criticism when he suited up at Montreal's Olympic Stadium Tuesday night for baseball's one-day, midsummer spectacle.

"That's funny," he said. "I remember when Steinbrenner told Jackson when he was still a Yankee: 'Why can't you be a ballplayer like Dave Winfield?' Reggie remembers that, too."

After Steinbrenner's upbraiding, Winfield went on a hitting tear on the Yankees' recent road trip, hitting six home runs in six games and breaking a perilous Yankee skid.

Some baseball observers insisted that Winfield was responding to an old Steinbrenner trick — embarrass a guy in public and he'll take out his anger on the ball.

"That's stupid," said Jackson, who was one of the top vote-getters among outfielders. "It never worked that way with me. In fact, it had the reverse effect."

"I only recall one exception. George yelled at the ball club and the next day I went out and got a home run. I think it was subconscious."

Winfield said he did not hear about George's statement until he returned East from his recent West Coast trip — after he had gone on his home run spree.

"I don't worry about what he says," the 6-foot-6, 220-pound millionaire said. "I am a damned good ballplayer. I do my job. I don't create problems. I get my numbers."

Big Dave's numbers are better than creditable in view of the fact that the Yankees have been floundering in the American League East. Through the All-Star break, he was batting .295 with 15 home runs and 47 runs batted in.

Meanwhile, Jackson, who seems to have a faculty for inspiring championship performances (three World Series crowns with the Oakland A's before joining the Yankees), has been a motivating force for the Angels, strongly in contention in the AL West. Although batting only .257, he has 20 home runs and 47 RBI.

"I got off to a bad start," Reggie said. "I think I was pressing too much. I wanted to show everybody I could still play. But Gene Mauch (manager) kept me in there and Buzzy Bavasi (Angel president) kept calling and assuring me the team had confidence in me."

"If I had got off to that bad a start with the Yankees, they would have branded me. Earlier this year when I got a home run off Ron Guidry, George called me an aging left-handed hitter who can't hit fastball pitchers."

Reggie admitted that he had counseled Winfield not to be discouraged but to remain patient.

"I told him to save his money and keep hitting," Reggie said. Winfield said he appreciated Jackson's concern and advice. He said the two, who were expected to be adversaries when he joined the Yankees in 1981, instead had become strong friends.

The rangy outfielder said he believes Steinbrenner's latest blast stemmed from threatened court action to make the Yankees owner fulfill his obligation to the Winfield Foundation.

"A lot of this stuff is unnecessary," he said. "I think George is using this to try to get rid of me."

"Maybe he thinks he can, but he won't. I won't let him."

Allen, McMahon Have Until Midnight To Sign

NEW YORK (AP) — Heisman Trophy winner Marcus Allen, quarterback Jim McMahon and several other top rookie prospects have until midnight to sign contracts or face being locked out of National Football League training camps.

The NFL players union, meeting with team owners' representatives Wednesday to discuss a new contract, refused to extend a waiver to their current agreement that expires at midnight. That waiver would have allowed all unsigned players to continue individual negotiating with teams past the July 15 expiration date.

Union representatives also officially rejected the NFL Management Council's contract package presented Tuesday, and assailed a letter sent to teams telling them they could conduct spot checks of players — including urinalysis — to indicate drug use. The contract included raising minimum salaries by as much as 56 percent, increased playoff and injury pay and reduced compensation for free agents, which players claim has drastically reduced movement within the system.

Garvey claimed team owners would actually spend less in 1982 than they did in 1981 if the proposed pay raises went into effect.

Talks, which have been stalemated for two days, were to continue this morning.

As it stands now, no contract negotiations can be conducted past July 15, and no unsigned players may report to camp. The Baltimore Colts will open their camp Friday, with the rest of the teams scheduled to start within the next two weeks.

Unsigned free-agent veterans are allowed to accept at any time a team's last written offer made before midnight, or 71 veterans remained unsigned for 110 percent of last year's pay.

But Ed Garvey, head of the players union, said rookies who do not sign before midnight will not be allowed to sign after then, regardless of whether a written offer had been made by July 15.

"We couldn't protect the rookies," he said. "What if they get hurt?"

Currently, 13 first-round draft choices remain unsigned, including Allen of Southern California, drafted by Oakland; McMahon, taken by Chicago; running back Walter Abercrombie of Baylor, drafted by Pittsburgh; Stanford tailback Darrin Nelson, taken by Minnesota; running back Butch Woolfolk, selected by the New York Giants, and offensive guard Roy Foster of Southern California, taken by Miami.

At last count, 99 rookies and Management Council Executive Director Jack Donlan, however, said Wednesday that he was sending a letter that afternoon to all 28 NFL teams, saying they could sign rookies after July 15, if an offer had been made by then.

"It's our position the rookies could sign after July 15," Donlan said.

Union representatives disagreed.

Dick Berthelsen, general counsel to the union, said any contracts signed by rookies after July 15 "would be voidable by law."

Pittsburgh Inks Abercrombie

PITTSBURGH (AP) — After beating a contract deadline, No. 1 draft pick Walter Abercrombie wants to help the Pittsburgh Steelers win another Super Bowl.

"I was ready to be a Steeler from the day they drafted me. I've been working out twice a day," the running back from Baylor said with grin Wednesday night after signing a multi-year deal for undisclosed terms.

Walter is a Steeler," team President Dan Rooney said with a relieved smile.

The deal was reached over the telephone in the face of a deadline at midnight tonight when the contract expires between the National Football League and the NFL Players Association.

The union contends that once the agreement expires, unsigned players will be unable to bargain individually until after agreement is reached on a new general pact.

Agent Gerry Argovitz, who represents Abercrombie and several other top picks, claims such unsigned players will become free agents at midnight tonight.

Rooney downplayed the deadline. "We never believed the situation existed as far as free-agency," said Rooney. "But we're going to camp next week and Walter wanted to be there."

when the deal was announced at a Three Rivers Stadium press conference, where the 5-foot-11, 201-pound Abercrombie posed with a Steeler jersey bearing his name.

"I wanted to be in camp and I didn't want the deadline to be any problem," said Abercrombie. "So we got together and we worked out a compromise with which myself, my agent and Mr. Rooney were satisfied."

Argovitz also represented the Steelers' No. 1 pick last year — defensive end Keith Gary of Oklahoma — who signed with Montreal of the Canadian Football League.

Abercrombie and Argovitz were in St. Louis Tuesday night when the breakthrough came in the contract talks.

Argovitz's associate, Gene Burrough, recounted the rookie's first reaction when he hung up the phone after finalizing the deal Wednesday morning.

Schembechler Insists USFL A Nemesis

DETROIT (AP) — University of Michigan football Coach Bo Schembechler says he sees the fledgling United States Football League as a nemesis with little regard for his players.

The Wolverines' coach said Wednesday that USFL coaches and scouts will be barred from the campus if the league goes ahead with plans for a December draft of college players. He said the draft and a USFL season scheduled to begin in March would destroy a player's chance to graduate on time.

Schembechler, who is beginning his 14th season at Michigan, always has pushed hard for his players to receive their degrees before trying their hand at professional football.

"I have several reservations about the new pro football league. They didn't have much foresight when they said they were going to draft in December," Schembechler told the weekly luncheon meeting of the Detroit Sports Broadcasters Association. "If they persist, we will not allow them on our campus. We will not allow them to view our films and they will not be welcome at our workouts."

"The second thing is the fact that they are going to camp in February. If the USFL was smart, it would operate with players already out of college a year, castoffs from the National Football League."

Schembechler, whose 1981 team finished 12th in the final Associated Press college football poll with a 9-3 record after a convincing 33-14 victory over UCLA in the Bluebonnet Bowl, said he would counsel his players not to sign with the USFL.

Hunt Aides Considering Fund Drive For '84 Race

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Some close-knit supporters and top aides to Gov. Jim Hunt have discussed organizing a political action committee to begin raising money as early as September for Hunt's expected 1984 race against U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., a Raleigh newspaper reports.

The News and Observer of Raleigh reported Wednesday that Hunt's aides are planning a national direct-mail fund-raising campaign to raise money in the expected campaign against Helms. The newspaper quoted sources as saying that Hunt officials are negotiating with Democratic-aligned direct-mail firms in Washington.

The newspaper also quoted Democratic sources as saying that the money Hunt raises would be used to offset the funds Helms is expected to raise through the Raleigh-based National Congressional Club, which raised about $7.8 million for Hunt's re-election campaign.

The initial fund-raising letters may be mailed to people outside of North Carolina in an effort to tap anti-Helms sentiment among national Democratic Party officials, the paper said.

Sources told the paper that the group of Hunt supporters includes press secretary, Gary Pearce; Joseph Pell, Hunt's patronage chief; Betty R. McCain of Wilson, former state Democratic party chairman and co-chairman of Hunt's 1980 re-election campaign; Joseph W. Grimsley, secretary of natural resources and community development and Hunt's 1980 campaign manager; Nancy Roberts, administrative aide to state Transportation Secretary William R. Roberson Jr. and a former Hunt campaign worker; and John Bennett, a Hunt aide who handles appointments to state boards and is the son of Hunt's political adviser Bert L. Bennett of Winston-Salem.

Pearce said that any new fund-raising group would benefit all Democrats, not just Hunt in 1984.

"A lot of us have been talking for a long time," Pearce said. "But a lot of things I hope will happen might not."

"He (Hunt) hasn't made a decision (on 1984)," Pearce said. "And if the group is formed, it is aimed at the 1982, 1984 and 1986 (elections). What I mean is that it would not be just for 1984. It would be designed to benefit any Democratic candidate, particularly one that faces the Congressional Club."

Hunt has refused to discuss his 1984 plans.

However, Hunt has addressed national issues in recent speeches. He spoke Tuesday to North Carolina public school principals, and to school superintendents last week in Wilmington.

In both addresses, Hunt attacked Reagan for allegedly favoring private schools through proposed tuition tax credits and hurting public schools through budget cuts.

He said the nation's public schools must fight "against all these odds — the national leadership's negative attitude, and the economic recession that doesn't seem to be ending as we've been told it would."

In his Wilmington speeches to the school administrators, Hunt departed from his brief prepared text. Using words like "compassion and concern," he sketched the outlines of what he called a state and national "crusade" for improvements to public schools.

Hunt cited what he called a "heartless" decision to cut off Social Security benefits for an orphaned high school student because the student turned 19.

"We need new policies and leadership," Hunt said. "The White House may be silent on this issue, but I don't believe the people will allow that silence to continue."

Farmers End Up In A Pickle

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A sudden abundance of cucumbers this summer left pickle packers panicking about how to handle the surplus and farmers fretting about selling their crops, agricultural experts say.

A cool, wet growing season brought too many cucumbers for pickle manufacturers to process immediately, company spokesmen said.

At least one company, Cates Pickles of Faison, was forced to suspend buying for a period of time in some locations, leaving farmers with more of the crop than they could sell. It was the first time in 50 years that Cates had had to take such action.

Others, including Mount Olive pickles, worked 24 hours, seven days a week to handle the product.

"There was a period of time when the harvest was so rapid there was nowhere to put them," said Curtis Tarleton, director of marketing for the state Department of Agriculture.

Bill Hennessee, president of Cates, said local storage facilities were filled to the brim and about 60,000 bushels of cucumbers were sent to Michigan and 40,000 bushels to Ohio facilities for storage.

"It (the crop) just got so early, so ahead of us that we couldn't physically handle it," Hennessee said. The most critical oversupply came during the week of June 21, Tarleton said, noting that some northern counties still are harvesting the crop.

There are two kinds of cucumbers grown in North Carolina — those used for pickles and the long, green variety used in salads. North Carolina is the nation's leading producer of cucumbers for pickles.

The overabundance affected the price of the salad cucumbers but not the pickle cucumbers because contracts are written before the growing season begins.

"The yields this year are astronomically high," said Peter Westerbeek of the Sampson County Agricultural Extension Office. "This is the first time the pickle supply has been so overabundant in the 15 years since I've been here."

Westerbeek said that as of July 2, about 1,103 trailerloads of cucumbers had been harvested compared to 1,051 trailerloads during 1981.

John Walker, president of Mount Olive Pickles, said he had not seen such a large harvest since 1955.

"They really came in like gangbusters," he said. None of the men could estimate how many more cucumbers have been plowed under in the field or left to rot because there was no market for them.

Court Upholds Ban On Leaf

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals has upheld a federal law restricting flue-cured tobacco producers in Eastern North Carolina from marketing air-cured Maryland tobacco.

The court ruled last week that the provision in the 1981 Farm Bill attaching a $1.24-a-pound penalty to growing the leaf in a quota state like North Carolina is constitutional.

Federal lawyers said the ruling will help keep the support system intact, but several North Carolina producers said they may appeal the case.

Judges rejected arguments from their attorney that the provision violated their rights of due process and equal protection. Their ruling underscores an earlier ruling by Senior U.S. District Judge John D. Larkins Sr. of Trenton who ruled in April that the provision was constitutional.

State flue-cured farmers had gradually increased their acreage of Maryland tobacco until the provision was applied. Acreage this year dropped from 10,000 acres to about 150 acres.

State Board Says College Amendment Failed

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Both money-related issues on the June 29 ballot, including one that was thought to have passed, were turned down by voters, according to returns certified by the state Board of Elections on Wednesday.

The state board said its official figures showed voters rejected Amendment No. 5, which would have authorized the use of tax-exempt revenue bonds to finance construction and renovation of buildings by private colleges and universities.

Unofficial, incomplete results June 30 showed a narrow lead for the amendment. Based on reports from 2,313 of 2,357 precincts, or 98.1 percent, there were 323,032 votes listed for the amendment and 309,979 votes against.

Results for the unofficial tally were compiled by the Associated Press-United Press International Election Pool from county election headquarters throughout the state. They were based on tabulations of precinct reports at the county level.

Results were sent to Raleigh for official tabulation and certification by the state Election Board, which takes several weeks. That process found errors in the unofficial vote totals.

A check of election pool figures turned up a clerical error in tallying unofficial returns from Catawba County. The vote was recorded with an extra digit at election pool headquarters as 28,554 in favor of the amendment instead of 2,855.

Certified returns showed two other amendments were rejected, including Amendment No. 1 that would have lengthened terms for state legislators from two years to four years, and Amendment No. 4, which would have allowed tax-exempt bonds for seaport and airport development.

The state Board of Elections confirmed other winners as expected in judicial, congressional and legislative primary races.

The official vote on Amendment No. 5 showed 338,650 votes against and 303,292 votes for.

State elections director Alex Brock said he was "shocked" when his office tallied official returns Friday and he saw that Amendment No. 5 had been rejected. Brock did not announce the result until the board met.

"The public looked at those money amendments and just voted against both of them," he said.

The amendment was strongly sought by the North Carolina Association of Independent Colleges and Universities. Its president, John Henley, said he was shocked by the rejection.

"I personally feel it was hard to understand the amendment because of the technical language involved," Henley said. "People saw the word bond and thought it would cost money."

Henley said he also thought the large negative vote on Amendment 1 had an effect on the other amendments.

He said the association did not have the money for publicity to help people understand the higher-education bond — an effort that might have helped the amendment pass, he said.

"Never have I had anything hit me so hard," Henley said. Two other constitutional amendments were approved: Amendment No. 2, providing for temporary recall to service of retired appellate judges; and Amendment No. 3, providing for direct appeals of Utility Commission rulings to the state Supreme Court.

Brock said he had confidence in news reports that the amendment had passed. "We haven't reported anything until now. We don't deal in unofficial returns," he said.

Brock said the vote on Amendment No. 5 closely followed that on Amendment No. 4, the port bonds. Official returns showed it failing with 342,567 votes against and 292,031 votes for.

Brent Hackney, deputy press secretary to Gov. Jim Hunt, said he was surprised at the result and described the governor as disappointed.

"The governor as you know was very, very supportive of that amendment," Hackney said.

Brock said he gave a copy of the county voting results to Henley early Wednesday and that he found no errors.

"He tried to find errors and couldn't," Brock said. "He cried a lot. God, he was heartbroken."

Lawyer Nominated

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Frank W. Bullock Jr., a former law partner of a close political adviser to U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., has been nominated by Helms and U.S. Sen. John East, R-N.C., to succeed Judge Eugene Gordon in U.S. Middle District Court.

Bullock, virtually unknown in Republican politics but well-known in Greensboro's legal community, was nominated by Helms and East in a letter Wednesday to President Reagan.

"He is a dedicated conservative and will serve with distinction," Helms and East said in their letter.

Bullock, 43, is a specialist in labor and employee-relations law. He also is a former law partner with Tom Ellis, a close political adviser to Helms and chairman of the National Congressional Club.

Ellis says he had little influence on Bullock being named to the bench. "All I would say is that I have told Sen. East and Sen. Helms that I thought Frank Bullock was a very fine attorney," he said. "They made the decision, not me."

Gordon, who turned 65 this year, moved into what is called "senior status" on the federal court bench Monday, meaning he will no longer be a regular judge but will continue to hold court and have an office and staff in Greensboro.

According to records at the Guilford County Elections Board, Bullock registered as a Republican shortly after moving to Guilford in 1974 but changed to "unaffiliated" in 1975. In November 1981 he re-registered as a Republican.

That Bullock was chosen for the position — considered by some as one of the biggest political patronage plums — surprised local political ob-

North East South West
2 ♦ Pass 3 ♥ Pass
4 ♥ Pass Pass Pass
Opening lead: Five of ♣.

The beginner is fascinated by the finesse, so much so that he tends to take every one in sight. The expert understands the possibilities of the finesse, but seeks to find ways of avoiding taking any, if he can.

The bidding needs a word of explanation. North's opening bid of two diamonds was the Flannery Convention. It showed a limited opening bid with precisely four spades and five hearts. South's jump to three hearts was invitational and North, who held a maximum opening bid for the convention, raised to game.

West led a club. The neophyte would have little or no problem with the hand. He would take two spade finesses and a diamond finesse, and probably end up losing two spade tricks and two diamonds for down one. He would count himself most unlucky, and indeed he would be. But the expert would make his contract, and there is nothing the defenders could do to stop him!

The winning technique is to ruff a club at trick two. Declarer returns to his hand with a trump and ruffs another club with a high trump. Now he gets back to hand with another trump, in the process drawing the last of the defenders' trumps, and leads a diamond or a spade. He simply covers any card West plays. East can win the trick cheaply, but he is in an unenviable position. If he plays another club, he yields a ruff-and-sluff to declarer, and the most his side can get is three tricks in the pointed suits (spades and diamonds). But if he returns either of those suits, he sets up a trick for declarer in whichever suit he returns. Either way, declarer will make his contract.

Jurors Near Midpoint Of Study Into 1979 Rally Violence In Greensboro

By ROBIN TEATER
Associated Press Writer

The federal grand jury empaneled in the 1979 Greensboro shootings of five Communist Workers Party members is about midway through its investigation, a federal prosecutor says.

"The case, I think, is viewed roughly as involving three parts," said U.S. Attorney Michael Johnson in a telephone interview. Johnson has headed the investigation since two days after the Nov. 3, 1979, shootout at an anti-Ku Klux Klan rally.

Johnson said the grand jury, which was expected to resume this week in Winston-Salem, already has heard testimony from demonstrators who attended the rally.

The grand jury is now in the second phase of hearing from people who rode in the caravan to the rally and testimony will later come from law enforcement officials, he said.

On Nov. 17, 1980, six Klansmen and Nazis were acquitted in state court on murder charges in the shootings. The grand jury began hearing testimony March 22 to determine whether any civil rights violations took place in the incident.

A group called the Greensboro Justice Fund has filed a civil suit on behalf of the shooting victims and their families, naming more than 80 Klansmen, Nazis and government officials.

heard from about 72 witnesses during 28 days of testimony.

"This is the most extensive civil-rights grand jury" that has ever been conducted in terms of the length and number of witnesses called, Johnson said.

Signe Waller, 43, of Greensboro, whose husband was one of the communists killed at the rally, said the CWP does not expect that justice will be done in the grand jury's hearings.

"We think that if they (justice department officials) are pushed to hand down some indictments that this may happen," said Mrs. Waller. However, she said the CWP thinks the case will be "covered up completely and hand down no indictments."

Johnson said the grand jury was initiated because of a decision made in the Department of Justice to resolve the issue of whether there was a violation of federal law.

"My hope is that the grand jury will do justice, and if that justice is the grand jury's decision that someone is indicted, then the legal process will continue," he said.

Mrs. Waller said the CWP is urging citizens to come out and express their concern over racial violence, which she said has been on the rise by the Klan and Nazis.

Mrs. Waller said the CWP also is waiting to see what will be done about FBI undercover agent

Bernard Butkovich and Greensboro police informant Edward Dawson.

Former Nazi Roger L. Shannon last month told the grand jury that Butkovich, who infiltrated the Klan before the Nov. 3 rally, urged him to hide any of the participants in the shootings if they came to his home.

Dawson, who led the caravan of Klansmen and Nazis into the anti-Klan rally at a Greensboro housing complex, said he was told he would go before the grand jury this week.

"I think the jury's going to serve its purpose," said the 61-year-old Dawson. "I hope it's not a one-sided deal. But how they're going to put this thing together, God only knows."

If any civil rights were violated on Nov. 3, Dawson said, it was that of the Klansmen and Nazis, whose rights were violated when CWP members started beating on their cars with clubs.

"I definitely will not believe that the FBI was involved in this," he said.

Joe Grady, imperial wizard of the White Knights of Liberty in Winston-Salem, testified before the grand jury last month, maintaining his group was not present at the rally.

"They (the jury) asked me if I had ever been involved in any violence," said Grady, 53. "The way I understood it, my answer was 'no.' I think I came out pretty clean with the grand jury. I didn't have anything to do with Greensboro."

FOCUS

The Greek From Toledo

Domenikos Theotokopoulos was one of Spain's greatest painters. A native of Crete, he studied under Tintoretto in Venice before settling in Toledo. His realistic portraits of the nobility were carefully crafted, but he revealed his true genius in more expressionist religious paintings. With the Catholic Church as his chief patron, he became the artist of the Spanish Counter-Reformation. The first major show of his works to tour the U.S. has just opened at the National Gallery in Washington. The 56 paintings, including View of Toledo and San Ildefonso, will later be exhibited in Dallas and Toledo (Ohio) before returning to Spain — providing a rare treat for all El Greco aficionados.

Stock Analysts Look At Bottom Line In Movies

By SCOTT KRAFT
 Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — In Anthony Hoffman's movie reviews, nothing is ever "stunning," a "triumph" or "one of the year's 10 best."

Even before he saw "Annie," Hoffman described it as "an overproduced spectacular." "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas" won't come out until Friday; it'll be a debacle, he says — again without having seen it.

It's not that this guy pans everything. He'll allow that a movie has "good demographics," is "a break-even prospect" or, like the latest Disney movie, "Tron," "on the edge of reasonable risk."

Hoffman is a Wall Street stock analyst. He's no critic. He doesn't care whether he likes a movie or not. All he cares about is: Will it make money?

Wall Street's buttoned-down analysts are increasingly finding themselves cast as critics of Hollywood's creative offerings. Their opinions, while of little interest to the movie-goer, can influence a substantial audience in the financial community — and, as a result, the price of a movie company's stock.

"The question I have to ask is: Are the regular movie-goers going to get excited about this film? And will it bring out the people who only occasionally go to movies?" says Hoffman, of A.G. Becker Inc.

But he shrugs off the title of critic. "The whole business of us being film critics is ludicrous," he says. "If a film had to depend on drawing people from my demographic group, it'd be in trouble."

Securities analysts all pore through trade journals, but Hoffman and about a dozen others like him even search the gossip columns for tidbits about film production problems (could mean higher costs, lower profit) and box office stars.

Last week some negative words from investment analysts about "Tron" sent Disney stock spinning down $2.50, to $56.37, in one day of trading.

Theodore James Jr., of Montgomery Securities in San Francisco, advised clients to sell Disney stock until the price dropped to $52 a share because the $20 million film told a "seriously flawed, disjointed story."

Several other analysts predict the film won't do well. But they say it won't hurt Disney's overall financial condition.

"I didn't think 'Tron' was all that great, but I never thought it was going to be a major contributor to the company's overall financial situation," says Harold Vogel, of Merrill Lynch Pierce Fenner & Smith Inc. Vogel cut his profit estimate by a nickel, to $3.45 a share, after the screening.

"I've been saying to buy this stock aggressively if it comes down, and I still feel that way," he adds.

Although analysts often attend other studios' screenings, it was the first time Disney had invited them — and perhaps the last. "What does a securities analyst know?" complained Mike Bagnell, senior vice president of finance at Disney.

The creative merits of "Tron" is not what bothers other analysts. They say the movie is geared for a narrow audience, ages 12 to 19, and is unlikely to be very profitable.

"The most important thing is what the numbers are after a film is released," says Dennis Forst, of Bateman, Eichler, Hill Richards Inc., in Los Angeles. "That's where these things are judged — not on whether an analyst or critic likes it."

"If I were following a maker of computers, I'd want to know as much about their new computer product as I could learn. It's the same with a movie. I want to see the new product and make a legitimate business judgment."

Most analysts say one film is unlikely to make or break a company. But the stratospheric costs of a few movies make them iffy investments. A film must earn about double its cost in domestic revenue to be called profitable.

Columbia Pictures' "Annie," for example, cost about $40 million. Universal's "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas," with Burt Reynolds and Dolly Parton, opens Friday with even more invested, analysts say.

"If 'Whorehouse' had cost $20 million, I'd say it was guaranteed a profit," says Hoffman.

"But now some people say it will cost close to $50 million to finish ... there's just no way that can be anything but a major financial debacle — even with Burt Reynolds in it."

The top U.S. box office hit of all time — "Star Wars," had recorded $185 million in domestic revenue before its re-release this summer. No. 2 is "The Empire Strikes Back," $135 million, followed by "Jaws," $133 million.

A film like "Tron," that costs $20 million, "is not necessarily foolhardy, (but) it is on the edge of reasonable risk," Hoffman says.

Analysts would prefer that movie makers offer a selection of 20 feature films every year, for about $10 million each. "If you do that, the chances are good that you'll have a breakaway hit once in a while," Hoffman says.

An analyst's dream is "E.T. — The Extra Terrestrial." It cost $10 million and pulled in $106 million in one month. Even Anthony Hoffman might call that "a triumph."

ABC To Air 'Vietnam Requiem'

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — If television is going to drag us through the swamps of Vietnam again, it should at least take us places we've never been before.

It's not enough that ABC News' documentary, "Vietnam Requiem," goes inside prison walls for interviews with five heroic veterans who became criminals back home.

Just to have these men recount their war experiences, intercut with graphic war footage, is easy television, guaranteed to raise our emotions and unsettle our sensibilities. PBS' "Frank: A Vietnam Veteran" did this better last November.

But there's a big gap between war and prison, which "Vietnam Requiem," surprisingly, never addresses. Why did these men take the criminal path when many other vets were able to find the straight and narrow? Just to say these prisoners are all veterans of a brutal Vietnam doesn't necessarily explain it.

If a program purports to "capture a powerful portrait of Vietnam veterans," shouldn't it have looked into their lives before Vietnam, after Vietnam and then to the crimes themselves. Was there something in their makeup that made them successfully violent overseas and also illegally violent over here?

"Vietnam Requiem" never talks to psychological or sociological experts, nor does it provide any feel for the

Blackbeard's Black Magic Holds True As Age Adds To Quality

A Reflector Review

The love affair between Mary Ormond (Shauna Barnaby) and Ned Teach, alias Blackbeard (John R. Rice) still springs to life each Thursday, Friday and Saturday night in old Bathtown (Bath) 45 miles east of Greenville during these warm days of summer.

When I decided to take it in once more, my first thought was a fear that I'd find it stale after four summers of viewing. But, the moment the spotlight fell on narrator Bill Roberson (explorer John Lawson) with his prologue, I was caught up again in the the old black magic that Stuart Aronson has woven in this out-in-the-open drama compounded of villainy, rum drinking, crooked politicians, bar girls and tender romance. And the performance showed me that like all good tales, it doesn't dull with the retelling.

This is not to say I still do not have points of basic differences with Aronson in the basic structure of the play. Blackbeard's sighs, avowals of longings to be a settled man on scenic Plum Point, and above all, his rhapsodizing about little yellow birds that sing the sweetest music at night — is all a bit thick in the department of treachery flourishes. The Blackbeard I grew up with was more ruffian than swashbuckler, and woe unto anyone who would have put him into ruffles. (Perhaps our past historians deliberately roughened his character — maybe Blackbeard had a closet yearning to wear fancy rig).

Another point. Some tangible evidence of the occupation of the townsmen would be enlightening. We know they, along with a goodly number of townswomen, hang out at The Golden Tankard in the night hours. What about daylight hours? Do they fish, hunt, plough? One short scene or some occupation-related dialogue at the tavern would suffice to fill in that background gap.

Back to the current production. Many of the cast (including Rice and Barnaby) are repeat performers. With all the repeaters, its an obvious case of familiarity breeding a joyous kinship with something enjoyed. New performers are clearly delighted to be part of this generally fast-paced, comedy-laced historical entertainment.

Best of all are the swaggering, athletic dances (Deborah Phipps is the choreographer) and the robust songs delivered by the pirates enjoying a respite from the sea and pirating. These are tough, grown-up kids who love nothing better than boasting about their feminine conquests while clustering strictly buddy-buddy around the rum kegs mustering courage to make passes at the lasses. They are boys, too, whenever there's a chance to play pranks on the staid townsmen.

Mention must be made of the battle scene. Christopher Kara-Eneff's fiery battle staged with such little space and facilities continues to be a theatrical marvel of doing lots with little.

In Bathtown, (as in Greenville), there's a tendency toward frequent rainfall. But Blackbeard's crew and associates are indeed a hearty breed and carry on valiantly despite slippery floors that can (and sometimes does) give unprogrammed action — i.e., a dancer leaping from a table might suddenly execute a skid that nearly takes the performer offstage.

Greenville-area people who have not yet gotten around to seeing "Blackbeard: Knight of the Black Flag" should avail themselves of a drama-music action treat. Repeat patrons will find the proceedings as rewarding as those of previous summer performances.

"Blackbeard" plays each Thursday, Friday and Saturday (through Aug. 21) with curtain time at 8:45 p.m. Ample directed parking space, bathroom facilities and a refreshment stand are available. Tickets are priced at $5 (reserved seating), $4.50 general admission, and $2 for children under 12. Special rates for groups are also available. For reservations, call the box office at 923-6931.

Reagan, Hirohito Are Among Best-Protected World Leaders

By JEFF BRADLEY
Associated Press Writer
The British Parliament, alarmed at how easily an intruder slipped into the queen's bedroom, is one of many governments concerned about protection for their leaders at home. France is considering tightening security, while the United States, Zimbabwe and the Vatican already have done so.

A survey Tuesday by Associated Press bureaus around the world shows that President Reagan, with White House radar to warn of air attack and rooftop sniper teams, and Emperor Hirohito of Japan, with 1,000 imperial guards and a palace moat, are among the best defended world leaders.

Soviet officials won't even say where President Leonid Brezhnev lives. He is thought to have an apartment on Kutuzovsky Prospekt, a main thoroughfare in central Moscow, and to spend time at a secret dacha, or country home, outside the city.

Governments in many other countries also declined to reveal what security precautions are taken for their leaders. In a typical comment, Neville Krige, spokesman for South African Prime Minister Pieter W. Botha, said: "All we can reply is that adequate security arrangements are obviously made in South Africa."

Britain has launched an investigation into whether Buckingham Palace's 43 soldiers, 24 police, dog patrols, surveillance cameras and electronic listening devices are adequate to protect Queen Elizabeth II, who was startled last Friday to find 31-year-old Michael Fagan in her bedroom.

Here is how some other world leaders are protected:
United States — Reagan's security was tightened after the attempt on his life last year. His motorcades frequently contain a decoy limousine, presidential aircraft are equipped with devices to ward off heat-seeking missiles, and Reagan often wears a bullet-proof vest in public.

The White House is surrounded by an 8-foot wrought-iron fence. It is further protected by radiation detectors, TV monitors, rooftop sniper teams, and sound, light and motion detectors to pick up any intruder on the grounds or in the executive mansion.

The airspace above the White House is a prohibited aircraft zone, enforced by ground radar. Tourists and most visitors pass through metal detectors.

More than 20 security posts are manned around the clock by the uniformed division of the Secret Service, and armed agents in civilian dress always accompany the president, even in the White House.

Japan — Emperor Hirohito's palace in Tokyo is protected by 1,000 guards. The grounds are patrolled by about 200 pistol-bearing imperial policemen and are surrounded by a moat, preceded by eight gates with guarded bridges and a high wall.

Kiyomizu Goto, a night duty officer at Imperial Police Headquarters, said there have been no intruders for the past 97 years, except during World War II, but added, "We will learn a lesson from the Buckingham Palace incident and try to tighten our guard."

France — About 40 members of the national police guard the president's Elysee Palace in Paris. But last week, Commandant Christian Prouteau, head of the anti-terrorist Intervention Group of the National Gendarmerie, was appointed to reassess security. Elysee officials said there has not been some new threat to President Francois Mitterrand, but "we want to know if the present system is still viable."

Vatican — Pope John Paul II's living quarters are on the top, fourth floor of the palace overlooking St. Peter's Square, and a visitor has to pass six or seven checkpoints. Vatican City gates are manned by Swiss Guards around the clock and security has been tightened since a Turkish gunman wounded the pope in St. Peter's Square on May 13, 1981.

Zimbabwe — Prime Minister Robert Mugabe's security also has been tightened since gunmen attacked his Harare residence June 23. They were repelled by armed police and troops and Mugabe was unharmed.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, JULY 16, 1982

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The morning is fine for continuing with whatever plan of action you put in effect yesterday. You are also able to extend your activities beyond present boundaries.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) The morning is the best time to engage in activities that will increase your income. Handle social affairs with ease later in the day.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) First take time to handle home affairs, then talk with associates and come to a better understanding. Relax at home tonight.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Study business reports carefully early in the day. Later discuss the future with associates. Obtain important data you need.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Strive to be more successful in your line of endeavor. Keep busy attending to practical matters. Be alert.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Improve your appearance at the start of the day and make the right preparations for the social events you want to attend.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) The morning is best for planning how to make your life better in the future. Be sure to spend only within your means.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Contact influential persons who can assist you in getting ahead in life. Be more positive in going after personal aims.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Handle career matters early in the day, then go after personal goals. A good friend can be most helpful to you now.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You have good ideas early in the day which should be put in operation without delay. Take it easy tonight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Carry through with whatever promises you have made to others and derive many benefits therefrom. Be more cheerful.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Come to a better meeting of the minds with associates before attending to routine tasks. Make plans for the future.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Attend to work facing you early in the day so you will have time to make plans for bigger projects later. Be practical.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will want to make a pattern of living that will lead to a big success. Teach your progeny not to be hasty to criticize others unless it is done constructively. A fine sport in this chart. Also, a good religious person.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!
