ECU Provides On Campus Jobs For Hundreds

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Several hundred students at East Carolina University are benefitting from employment on campus — a few in full-time summer jobs, a much larger number in year-round part-time employment. For students in both categories, on-campus employment is a big help in these times of tight employment, even though the jobs in nearly all instances pay only minimum wage.

Two ECU personnel officials, Pam P. Spell and Dick Farris, provided details on employment requirements and procedures applicable to the two basic types of employment.

Ms. Spell is assistant director in charge of employment in the Student Financial Aid Division of Student Life on campus. Her work with students in the college work summer program is only one of her several duties.

"The summer work program for students is the only full-time student employment program we have," Ms. Spell explained. "To qualify for one of the 40-hours-a-week job, a student applicant must justify a financial need and insure us that he or she will be enrolled at ECU in the coming school year. A student holding one of these jobs cannot be a summer school student.

"Need," Ms. Spell emphasized, "is the key word to approval for full-time employment.

The summer full-time employment program is funded by federal financial aid grant funds which are supplemented with university matching funds. "This summer we are using funds not previously used in the academic '81-82 year," Ms. Spell noted. "The program begins around mid-May and continues until mid-August."

This year's on-campus full-time employment has provided jobs for 15 students, according to Ms. Spell. "We hope to have a larger program next year," she said, "so that we can help more students in financial need."

Jobs provided in the summer work program cover positions in manual work, computer operations, secretarial work and other types of employment.

Because the jobs are based on financial need, Ms. Spell points out that certain stipulations are agreed to by each student qualifying for and accepting one of these jobs.

"A large percentage of the pay is assessed to be put aside for living expenses in the coming academic year," she said. "Because of this requirement, there are needy students who cannot accept a full-time summer job as they cannot afford to be assessed such a large portion of the salary paid."

Ms. Spell acknowledged that this does mean that often a job opening will go to a student who lives in the local area and does not have the expense of a room or apartment to maintain during the summer.

Another of Ms. Spell's duties is to keep a roster of students (and student spouses) who are available for full- or part-time employment off campus. "Many of them are availble for short term, temporary employment," Ms. Spell said. "If there are employers in the community who have need for a worker or a group of people for temporry work, they can call me at 757-6610."

Dick Farris, who is assistant personnel director at ECU, explained that he is not directly engaged in hiring students in year-round part-time employment positions. "Since our computer system handles the payroll for these student, I am familiar with the situation even though we have no involvement in hiring. Our role is that of support," he said.

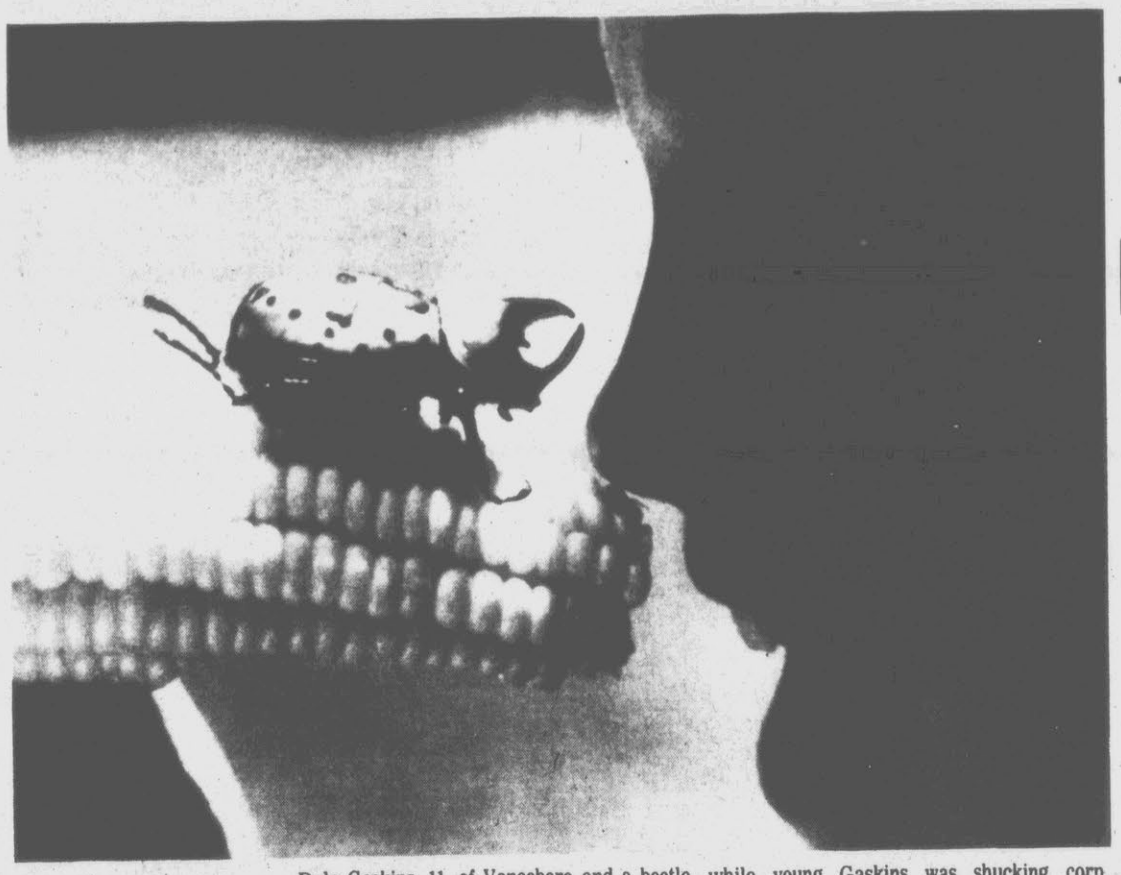

Farris cited a figure of 498 students employed in various categories of part-time work for the month of May. "This was the last big work month," Farris said. "Figures for the summer would be less.

"Most of the student jobs," Farris said, "fall in the self-help classification. Each department is allotted funds to hire students in jobs for up to 10 hours time weekly. Joyner Library and the athletic department are examples of big users of self-help students, hiring students for tasks such as helping to put up books and lining playing fields for games."

Unlike the summer work program and some other special work programs, employment in the student self-help program is not contingent on financial need. "The only criteria for employment in this program is that the student be enrolled at ECU," Farris noted. He added that students work in these jobs on the semester basis.

Farris detailed information on another source of employment for students. "During the summer months each year, there are 26 regular jobs that do not fall into the student self-help classification. These jobs include the painting of

Energy Costs Go Up 4.1 Percent

Wholesale Prices Climb But Inflation Rate Holds

By SALLY JACOBSEN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices, propelled by sharply higher energy costs, took off in June, rising at an annual rate of 13.3 percent, the government said today. It was the sharpest rise since March 1981.

Even with June's surge, however, inflation for the first half of the year was a small 2.5 percent, calculated annually, well under the 7 percent for all of last year and the 11.8 percent of 1980.

Much of the credit for inflation's small gain so far this year has gone to the stinging recession and to lingering, large oil stockpiles.

But those stocks are dwindling, a development reflected in the sharp 4.1 percent gain posted last month by energy prices. For the first five months of the year, energy costs had fallen 27.5 percent, calculated annually.

Overall, the Labor Department's Producer Price Index for finished goods rose a seasonally adjusted 1 percent in June, the department's Bureau of Labor Statistics said today.

The index was unchanged in May. It rose a tiny 0.1 percent in April, fell 0.3 percent in March and 0.2 percent in February. Those twin falls were the first back-to-back declines since January and February 1976.

The figure for March was revised to 0.3 percent today from the 0.1 percent reported earlier. February's figure was revised from 0.3 to 0.2 percent.

If prices rose for 12 straight months at June's rate, the yearly gain would amount to 13.3 percent after seasonal adjustment. The reported annual rate is based on a more precise calculation of monthly price changes than what is made public.

The new report said that over the last year, from June 1981 through June 1982, prices at the wholesale level rose 3.5 percent. Economists are predicting that, for all of this year, wholesale inflation will be 5 percent to 6 percent.

The department provided these details on wholesale price changes last month:

—Energy prices, up the most since March 1981, were largely propelled by higher gasoline and home heating oil costs, which rose sharply after several months of substantial declines. Gasoline prices were up 4.1 percent in June after falling 5.9 percent the month before. Heating oil costs rose 7 percent after falling 1.1 percent in May.

Flood Leaves 4 Missing

ESTES PARK, Colo. (AP) — Search parties flew into Rocky Mountain National Park today to look for four campers feared dead after an earthen dam that was overdue for inspection collapsed, sending a wall of water surging through town.

While shopkeepers scraped away mud and the National Guard stood by to prevent looting, search teams were taken by helicopter into the park, where they started at the dam site and worked their way along the flood-scoured banks of the rivers below it.

The 80-year-old dam, 11 miles west of the city in Rocky Mountain National Park, ruptured just after dawn Thursday. Muddy brown floodwaters up to 30 feet high surged out of Lawn Lake down the Roaring River into the Fall River.

Park spokesman Glen Kaye said authorities believed all four of the missing campers were dead.

He said three of the missing — Bridget Doris of Arlington, Texas, Terry W. Coates of Peoria, Ill., and another person who was not identified — were camping at the Aspenglen campground. The fourth, Steven See of Hilbert, Wis., was at a back-country campsite, Kaye said.

The flood sent five to seven feet of water down Estes Park's main street, Elkhorn Avenue, knocking down street signs, breaking windows, and shifting vehicles, while leaving behind up to three feet of mud.

Snowplows and bulldozers were called in to clean up and workers hauled away debris. City officials estimated damage to businesses could reach $15 million.

Lt. Gov. Nancy Dick ordered 55 National Guardsmen into town to help police. Mrs. Dick, acting in the absence of Gov. Richard Lamm, who was in Washington, said she was told there was "some evidence of looting," but local officials said they had no confirmed reports of such trouble.

Shultz Sworn Into Office

WASHINGTON (AP) — George P. Shultz was sworn in today as secretary of state with the unanimous support of the Senate and President Reagan's promise that he will "have a few things for you to do."

The 61-year-old economist, who served in high-level posts in the Nixon administration before he joined the globe-girdling Bechtel Group Inc. construction firm, promised in return during his swearing-in ceremony at the White House that he would muster all his resources for his new job.

"America has always been blessed in times such as these with citizens of stature who come forward to make certain the job gets done and done right," Reagan said. "George Shultz follows in that tradition."

The president, during the brief ceremony in a sweltering White House Rose Garden, said he was reminded of the expression "Let George do it."

"George," he added, turning to Shultz, "from now on I think I'll have a few things for you to do."

Shultz took the oath of office from Attorney General William French Smith, and said that although he was "impressed by the depth and difficulty of the problems that we face," he was looking forward to the opportunity to "do something wonderful."

After Shultz was confirmed by a Senate vote of 97-0 on Thursday, Reagan said the Senate's "swift action augers well for continued cooperation between the Congress and executive branch and for strong leadership at the State Department."

"His (Shultz's) articulate and convincing presentation sent a strong signal to friend and foe alike — America is blessed with a man of exceptional character and qualifications for this vital position," Reagan said in a written statement following the Senate confirmation.

The Senate vote followed a 2½-hour debate centered on Bechtel's extensive engineering contracts in the Arab world, which some senators said might tempt Shultz to favor the Arabs over Israel.

Shultz was nominated by Reagan after Alexander M. Haig Jr. resigned as secretary of state on June 25, saying, without explanation, that administration foreign policy had lost "consistency, clarity and steadiness of purpose."

Shultz was appointed by former President Nixon to serve first as secretary of labor, then as budget director and finally as secretary of the Treasury.

In his confirmation hearing, Shultz said he favors stronger ties to the Arab world.

TABLE DELIVERED

Selvia Chapel Free Will Baptist Church ordered a table from Church Furnishing Inc. in Christianburg, Va., many months ago. We keep calling and checking and they always put us off. We'd really like to know if they're going to deliver the table and, if not, how we can go about getting our money back. R.F.

Hotline called Church Furnishings at intervals over several weeks, each time just after the date we'd been promised that it would be delivered. The factory was experiencing difficulties with its production line, we were told. Perhaps because of our persistence, the table was finally shipped via truck line directly to your church door. You say you're pleased with the way it looks and are glad you didn't cancel the order, as you were tempted to suggest that your church board do.

Leaders Happy With Leaf Bill

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Agricultural leaders in North Carolina say that compromises made in Congress to save the tobacco bill were worthwhile and that the basic provisions needed by tobacco growers are still in effect.

"Although tobacco farmers, through our congressional leaders, had to make many compromises and changes in the tobacco program to save it, these compromises were good ones and sufficient ones to keep the basic program in tact while making it a no-cost proposition mandated by Congress," said state Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham.

The U.S. House of Representatives gave final approval Thursday to a tobacco bill designed to reduce criticism from anti-tobacco forces while keeping price supports and production controls.

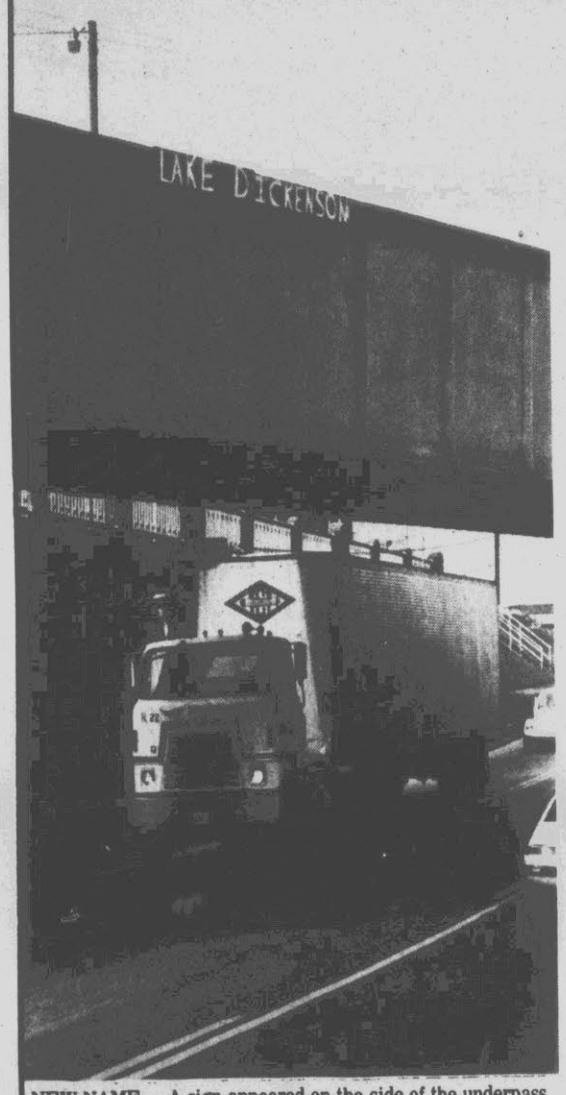

T.C. Blalock, executive vice president of the North Carolina Tobacco Growers Association, and Fred Bond of the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corporation were also pleased with the measure.

"I don't feel there are any real problems," Blalock said. "I'm hoping we will have a bill signed by the president soon, maybe in two or three days."

"We are pleased with the results of the legislation passed by the Senate," Bond said. "It will do what tobacco proponents have been discussing during the hearings."

"I'm very encouraged by this legislation," said Reggie

Rain Thinning Local Tobacco

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County's tobacco may be "thin" this year thanks to the sopping growing season, says an agricultural extension agent.

"Many tobacco farmers are beginning to talk about thin tobacco," said Sam Uzzell, Pitt extension agent. "There's not much body in the crop because of the cloudy, rainy weather and if the weather stays cloudy it will remain light."

Thin tobacco has little weight, clocking in less poundage for the farmer when it's sold. Uzzell said the reduction in pounds could be helpful. "Some people have carried pounds over from last year," he said. "Stabilization also has some tobacco they need to move and a light crop would give it the opportunity to move."

The 4.85 inches of rain Pitt County has received since July 1 has made it difficult for tobacco farmers to harvest their leaf mechanically. "Farmers are having a very hard time getting in the fields," said Uzzell. "Lots of folks are mudding, or harvesting by hand, which is slower."

The unusually wet weather has grown a bumper crop of corn, added Uzzell. "The rain has actually benefitted the corn in the county," he said, "although we've almost had too much rain even for corn in some areas."

Even sandy land, characteristically not good for corn production, yielded corn this year, added the farm agent.

Splitting is a problem for fruit growers in the county, said Uzzell, because of rain at the time of ripening. "When melons, cantaloupes and tomatoes have a lot of sugar in them and get all this rain, they split," he said.

Splitting makes the fruits spoil more quickly, noted Uzzell, but doesn't affect the flavor.

Wet ground has also made it difficult for soybean growers to herbicide-treat bushes. "Some producers might have lost a herbicide spray or two because they can't get the tractor down the rows without getting stuck," said Uzzell.

"But beans are closing up their canopies quickly, which is helpful in deterring corn earworms." A canopy is closed when the soybean bushes meet in the row middle.

Pitt County has had more rain during the first two weeks of July than it received the entire month in 1981, according to Greenville Utilities' Water Plant. Already 4.85 inches of precipitation have fallen, compared to 3.82 for all of July 1981.

Campus Jobs ...

dormitories while the main student body is away. It also includes things like maintenance and repainting of campus signs, and additional maintenance on the grounds and streets," he said.

These jobs, Farris said, are supplemental to the regular work performed by full-time maintenance people. "They do not take employment away from any of our full-time people. This is supplemental work that has to be programmed at a time when there's fewer people on campus."

As with the summer work program for the needy student, the minimum wage scale applies to self-help student jobs and the 26 regular summer jobs. "Under certain conditions, a department may pay more than minimum wage to a student for specialized work, but that is a very rare instance," Farris said.

CAMPUS WORK — Don Jones of Fremont, a rising junior, is among the student work force employed on the East Carolina University campus during the summer. Jones, shown here cleaning grass from a street in front of McGinnis Theater, is part of the regular category of students employed by the university in campus maintenance work in summer months.

Iran Says Iraqi Attack On Prayer Center Kills 30

By The Associated Press

Iran claimed Iraqi jets struck a Moslem prayer center deep inside Iran today, killing 30 people and wounding 200 others at Hamadan, and leveled a school in Islamabad, killing two people and wounding 30.

There were no new reports of ground action in the main battle area of Basra, Iraq's second largest city and Persian Gulf port. The Iranians claim to be entrenched near Basra, but Iraq says the area was "purged" of Iranian invaders in heavy fighting Wednesday and Thursday.

Iraq claims two Iranian divisions were destroyed and 4,733 Iranians killed in the defense of Basra and said Iraqi troops forced the Iranians to flee across their border. But Iranian communiques carried today by Radio Tehran, monitored in London, said 600 Iraqi troops were killed or wounded, 791 captured and 48 tanks wiped out in defeating the Iraqi counteroffensive to Tuesday's Iranian invasion.

An Iraqi tank battalion and an infantry battalion were "completely smashed," the broadcast said.

The rival claims could not be independently confirmed because the warring nations ban foreign correspondents from the front. In Washington, a U.S. official who asked not to be identified said "The Iraqis are not doing too badly. The Iranians are not making the progress some had predicted."

Hamadan, about 180 miles southwest of the Iranian capital, was attacked by two waves of jets today, Iran's official news agency said.

Iran's revolutionary patriarch Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini insisted his fighters would topple the Iraqi regime and "liberate Jerusalem." Sources in the Iranian capital reached by telephone from Nicosia, Cyprus, said thousands of Khomeini supporters marched through the capital ignoring the wail of air-raid sirens warning of possible Iraqi bombings.

The marchers burned an effigy of Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and chanted pro-Palestinian slogans.

Iran claims its troops advanced 12 miles into Iraq in "Operation Ramadan" launched late Tuesday, but Iraq conceded only a six-mile thrust, which it says was subsequently reversed. It was not clear how many Iranian troops had invaded Iraq. War communiques on Wednesday indicated a total of 200,000 troops from both sides were fighting.

The intensified fighting raised new concern about oil supplies because both nations are important petroleum producers. But oil analysts have said that because of the worldwide oil glut the war will probably have little effect.

Iran shattered a military lull in the 22-month-old war Tuesday by hurling hordes of soldiers into Iraqi territory, in what Khomeini called a sacred mission to obliterate Hussein's regime and "liberate" Moslem holy lands all the way to Israeli-held Jerusalem.

The invasion heightened fears of conservative Arab regimes around the Persian Gulf which have supported Iraq in the war, afraid Khomeini would export his violent fundamentalist Moslem revolution to their lands.

Despite Khomeini's rhetoric, other Iranian officials have said the invasion's objective is to create a security belt along the border to prevent Iraqi artillery from shelling Iranian targets.

Iraqi forces stormed into Iran's southwest province of Khuzistan in September 1980 after months of growing friction between the two ancient enemies over disputed territory along the Shatt-al-Arab waterway, Iraq's only sea outlet to the Persian Gulf. Persian Moslem Iran and Arab Moslem Iraq also have longstanding religious and political differences.

The Iraqis occupied much of Khuzistan until this spring when Iran scored stunning victories, retook the strategic city of Khorramshahr and drove most Iraqi troops back across the border.

For weeks Iran threatened to counter-invade despite Hussein's sudden flurry of peace overtures. Iran has refused to make peace until Hussein is toppled, Iraq admits it was the aggressor and pays $150 billion in war damages.

In Thursday's fighting, Iraq also claimed Syria's air force "intensified activity" along Iraq's western border, but did not elaborate. Syria, a longtime foe of Iraq, has supported Iran in the war and Iraq has previously accused the Syrians of attacking Iraqi border guards.

MORNING WRECK — The driver of a late model truck was reported injured about 2 a.m. this morning near Chicod, according to Trooper Walter Featherston. The investigator said Asa Warren Jr. of Route 1, Grimesland, was traveling north on N.C. 43 when he apprently fell asleep and struck a bridge. Warren was treated and released from Pitt County Memorial Hospital. Damage to the truck was estimated at $2,500 and to the bridge about $1,000. Investigation was continuing. Man Arrested In Rape Case

Jake Plowden, 32, of 408 Pitt St. was arrested on first degree rape and burglary charges an hour and 45 minutes after a 20-year-old woman was reportedly raped early today.

Chief Glenn Cannon said the rape was reported at 12:15 a.m. Cannon said that, later, neighbors reported seeing a man walking from the area and investigators took Plowden into custody near Greenwood Cemetery.

The chief said police are also investigating a first degree burglary at 1809 E. Fifth St. — seven blocks from the scene of the rape — which was reported at 6:45 a.m.

Cannon said in that case Linda Ann Templeton told investigators that her pocketbook was on the dining room table when she went to bed about 11 p.m.

When she awoke this morning, Miss Templeton found the door to her apartment standing open and located her pocketbook — with $6 in cash missing — in the yard outside her home, Cannon said.

Investigation of both cases is continuing, the chief noted.

China Dislikes New Secretary

HONG KONG (AP) — A leading Chinese Communist newspaper today warned President Reagan that U.S.-China friendship will suffer because his new Secretary of State George P. Shultz supports arms sales to Taiwan.

The Chinese-language Ta Kung Pao, which has close ties to the Peking government, described Shultz as a member of a small group of powerful U.S. political figures who "lead Reagan by the nose" in foreign policy decisions.

China considers Taiwan a breakaway province and has long threatened to downgrade U.S. relations unless the arms sales stop. The island of 18 million people is governed by the rival Chinese Nationalists.

Shultz was confirmed Thursday as America's 60th secretary of state, replacing Alexander M. Haig Jr. who resigned.

Ta Kung Pao said Shultz' recent statement that he will support the supply of defensive arms to Taiwan proved he is "interfering with China's internal affairs."

Home IV Treatment Cuts Costs

CHICAGO (AP) — Millions of dollars in medical costs could be saved if people recovering from serious infections administer their own intravenous drug treatments away from the hospital, researchers say.

The treatment can be accomplished with few complications if participants are screened and monitored. they said.

In the home treatment, drugs were prepared in a pharmacy and before patients went home, a tube with a rubber cap at one end was stuck in their arm. They could move freely and inject the drug when necessary.

The study of 150 patients at The Fairfax Hospital in Falls Church, Va., showed that such treatment can be practical, cost-effective and more comfortable.

In addition, intravenous treatment at home allows many people to return to school and work, said the study, which was published in today's issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

The study found that nearly $450,000 in hospital room costs were saved with home intravenous treatment.

Home therapy averaged 20 days at a cost of about $800, while an average patient in a semi-private hospital room for the same period would have had a bill of almost $3,000 — not including drugs, treatment and supplies, the study said.

The study also noted that patients with serious infections receiving intravenous treatment often are hospitalized for up to six weeks.

Life As It's Lived

By GAIL MIACHAELS

The major cause of the generation gap is not, as has been suggested at various times, the threat of nuclear war, the ingratitude of children, the rigidity of adults, or the onset of senility at age 30. The major cause of this rift between adults and children is the concept of good manners.

Children, incivility being their natural state, are understandably hostile to the intrusion of this concept into all area of their lives. Adults, on the other hand, hate to do the intruding. No matter what kids think, parents don't get their jollies from coaxing, cajoling and nagging, but they do have to perform their duty to society. At some point they have to take a stand against barbarity.

At our house our stand seems to center around the table. We have rules about the proper positions of body parts and utensils. Elbows stay off the table, napkins go in laps, and forks do not wave in the air like flags in a brisk autumn breeze.

In addition, Meg is not allowed to slurp soup or cereal directly from her bowl; she is supposed to eat with her mouth closed; and we are working hard on eradicating her favorite habit of talking with her mouth full.

Phillip and I didn't make these rules. We were taught that they were handed down with the Ten Commandments. But Meg wants a better explanation. "Who made these rules and why?" she keeps asking.

She is told that rules exist to make it easier for people to live together. "Then why can't I sing at the table?" she counters. "Everyone loves good singing."

She also questions the efficacy of manners in other situations. She wants to know why she can't tell my friends that they've visited long enough or why she has to be polite when she's annoyed.

"I'm just being honest. Don't you want me to be honest?"

According to her, saying "Who is it?" when she answers the phone is an honest question; she really does want to know. Sticking out her tongue at an uncooperative playmate is an honest reaction. Chewing gum in church is an honest way to stay awake as long as she doesn't smack.

So far I've refused to condone these activities in spite of her arguments, but she continues to gather ammunition for her cause. The other day she berated me for yelling at Zachary.

"You know that yelling is not polite, don't you?"

When I stopped in midreprimand to give her a dirty look, she threw up her hands. "Well don't look at me. I didn't make the rules."

Dear Abby

Absence Makes Heart Cooler

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I have a fine 35-year-old son who has been happily married for 11 years to a lovely young woman. They live thousands of miles from me, so we keep in touch by letters and telephone. Our daughter-in-law (I'll call her Lucy) is always respectful and polite to me. Now, here's the rub:

When Lucy writes, she starts off with "Hi." I call this a strange salutation. When she first married our son, she asked if she could address me by my first name, saying she wouldn't feel comfortable calling me "Mother." I said it would be fine with me, but so far she has never addressed me by my first name — or anything else.

Also, whenever they send greeting cards, and incidentally they never forget an occasion, the cards are conspicuously devoid of the word "love" — it's always "special thoughts" or "best wishes." (I'm sure Lucy selects these cards.)

Please understand, Abby, her thoughtfulness is appreciated, but her lack of warmth bothers me. Should I confront her directly? I am reluctant to do so because she can be touchy. I would appreciate your objective viewpoint.

PUZZLED

DEAR PUZZLED: Even though Lucy is not as warm and outgoing as you would like her to be, be grateful that she's thoughtful, polite and attentive. Some people have difficulty showing affection. Count your blessings and don't force a confrontation. Lucy may be cool, but at least she's sincere.

DEAR ABBY: The last physical examination I had was over three years ago. At that time my doctor told me I had to lose 60 pounds, and he gave me a diet and exercise program to follow. Well, I'm ashamed to say that I didn't follow it, and I don't even know how much I weigh now because I am afraid to get on a scale, but I think I weigh more now than I did then.

I feel rotten, and I know I should go back to the doctor, but I am too ashamed. Please help me.

ASHAMED

DEAR ASHAMED: You know, of course, what you must do, but you wrote to me because you desperately need someone to give you a push.

If there is an Overeaters Anonymous group in your area, go! Weight Watchers also does an excellent job. TOPS, too! After you've lost enough weight to feel sufficiently comfortable to see your doctor, please do so. Don't be ashamed. Your doctor has heard your song before.

Tobacco Bill Settled

Tobacco producing interests can breath a sigh of relief with the passage of the tobacco price support program by the U.S. Senate Wednesday night.

It was a cliff hanger until the end when the measure passed by a vote of 77-17. There had, however, been a number of amendments offered by Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., which saw close votes. One of them would have required review of the program by Congress every four years. It was defeated by a vote of 49-47. If it had passed, the bill would have been returned to the House.

It is difficult to understand why opponents were so concerned about this bill. It is a good one for the government and the growers. The program will be carried out at no cost to the government and non grower corporations and institutions will be required to sell their allotments.

The tobacco program should do what it has always done — encourage growers to produce superior tobacco which will be sought worldwide for its quality. In return the grower receives an allotment and the guarantee of a certain price level for his crop.

One has to wonder why something that has worked so well can cause so much controversy. Yet Republicans and Democrats had to lay aside their differences and give everything they could muster to the effort to get this bill passed.

The new tobacco program should meet the objections of even the most violent opponent. Hopefully the issue is settled now and we can give the program adequate time to work.

Tobacco Controls Work

The flue-cured tobacco crop for this year has been estimated by the Agriculture Department at 1.03 billion pounds. This is down 12 percent from the production of 1981.

Less acreage was planted this year and a smaller yield per acre is expected, (2,089 pounds per acre as compared to 2,162 pounds in 1981).

The lower production this year likely will not be a bad thing for the tobacco industry. Less production was needed to keep supplies in line with demand.

The fact that production is down 12 percent this year is the best proof possible that the control system for tobacco works.

THIS AFTERNOON

Valid Criticism

By PAUL T O'CONNOR

RALEIGH — The General Assembly was strongly criticized by the state's utilities last month when they rewrote the Construction Work in Progress law. Utility spokesmen interviewed after the vote said the legislators couldn't have known what they were voting for — the amendment's too vague.

The criticism may have been valid. Outside of generalities, legislators couldn't say how the new CWIP would reduce consumer bills. Even Bob Fischbach, director of the state's public staff, couldn't provide specifics.

CWIP allows utilities to immediately recoup the costs of building new power plants as those plants go up. Under the old CWIP, the utilities got everything they requested. Now, the Utilities Commission will have authority to allow or disallow CWIP costs based on the public interest and the utilities' financial security.

Fischbach is keeping mum on the specific CWIP costs he thinks the commission will disallow. But he agreed with Rep. Richard Wright of Tabor City, sponsor of the amendment, that the new law will help make the utilities more efficient. Wright said, for example, that Carolina Power and Light didn't care how much its Brunswick County crews accomplished because under the old CWIP law, CP&L was practically guaranteed a profit on every cent they spent. Without automatic CWIP, the utilities may have to carry those expenses until the plant is operating so they'll be more careful with thw money they're spending, Fischbach says.

House Speaker Liston Ramsey asked former Utilities Commissioner Tom Eller, a lawyer who represents the textile industry, to write an explanation of the new CWIP. Eller's paper points to several areas where CWIP charges may be disallowed, thus bringing down power bills.

Traditional utility regulation excluded all costs from the rate base except that which was "used and useful" to the production of power. The Legislature diverted from that principle with

PAUL O'CONNOR

CWIP because it was felt that no utility could afford to carry the massive costs of building a nuclear power plant for the 10 to 12 years it takes to bring them into service. But Eller poses the question of other construction work — much smaller in scale — which is getting out into the rate base immediately under CWIP. Should the cost of distribution line built out to a subdivision be included in the rate base this year if none of the houses are completed? Or, should the utility have to wait until that line carries power?

And what is the definition of "in progress?" If work on a plant slows to a crawl while the utility decides whether or not they want to finish it, should they be allowed to keep those costs in the rate base? Or, should CWIP costs be allowed only for those plants which are "advancing" toward completion?

The law says the commission should take into account the financial stability of the utility companies. Eller asks if the commission will consider the present and near furture condition of the power industry in the United States over the long term? Using bond ratings of national concerns, utilities can make themselves appear much poorer than they are.

Eller argues that if the commission doesn't make guidelines in these areas, the Legislature should address these questions in the 1983 session. By doing so, the Legislature would protect consumers and the utilities from "sudden changes depending upon the constituency of the various panels and swings due to the psychological and political climate of the moment."

Other Editors Say Keep It Cool

(The Goldsboro News-Argus)

The people of the United States would do well to keep their emotions under control until some facts have been determined concerning allegations of homosexual conduct between members of Congress and pages.

A furor was triggered when it became known that a former page had told the Federal Bureau of Investigation he had had relations with members of Congress and had been asked to procure a male prostitute for a senator ...

The FBI says it so far has been able to turn up no evidence to support the young man's claim. Senator Howard Baker lsays he knows the senator accused by the young man and that he is certain there is no truth in the allegation.

The House Ethics Committee is conducting an investigation, as well it should.

Meanwhile, congressmen report their constituents up in arms over the reports.

The best thing for the constituents to do is cool it until some facts are known. At this point it looks like a young former page may have sent the FBI and Congress off on a wild goose chase.

Strength For Today

SELFISHNESS

Recently, a copy of a prayer written by a medieval land purchaser was found in an English library. It reads:

"O Lord, Thou knowest I have mine estates in the City of London and that I likewise lately purchased an estate in fee simple in the county of Essex. I beseech Thee to preserve the county of Essex from fire and earthquake, and as I have a mortgage in Herefordshire, I beg Thee to have an eye of compassion upon that county. For the rest of the counties, Thou mayest deal with then as Thou are pleased."

Prayer is talking to God, and it is just as unbecoming to talk to him solely about ourselves and our interests as it would be to do so in daily conversation with friends. Selfishness is one of life's greatest evils, but it is never so hideous as when it mars the beauty of things spiritual. Likewise, love is never so divine as when it shines forth out of our prayers. — ELISHA DOUGLASS

FOLLOWING THE CLASSIC ROUTINE!

BY ART BUCHWALD

What's The Real Reason?

When Neil Armstrong landed on the lunar surface many moons ago, and said' "One small step for a man; one giant leap for mankind," I'll have to admit I was worried. I couldn't believe that the United States would invest all that brainpower and money just to find out what made the universe tick.

I recall turning to my wife, or somebody like her, and saying, "There's got to be a military dividend in all this."

My wife, or whoever it was, is a romantic by nature. "Why does there always have to oe a military dividend in everything?" she demanded. "Why can't we use scientific achievements for peace instead of war?"

"We could if THEY would," I told her. "There is only one reason the Soviets want to get into space and that's so they can conquer us on earth."

"So, why did Neil Armstrong just say what he did?"

"Because the military never tells anyone the real reason they send someone up in a rocket. If they had Armstrong say' 'One small killer satellite for a man; one giant killer satellite for mankind,' it would have just tipped off the Russians we knew that they were planning to use the sky for military purposes. This way they think we just landed on the moon, because no human on earth had ever done it before."

"Maybe we do plan to use space exploration for peace," my wife said.

"Women live in a dream world. Even if that was its original purpose, no military establishment worth its salt would ignore the opportunities of space waging all-out war. Just think, in our lifetime there will be weapons poised up in the heavens aimed at any target on the globe. Man, by just pressing a button, will be able to send them hurtling down on us at the speed of light."

"Is that your dream world?" she asked.

"Of course not. But we have to face reality. The nation that dominates space will dominate the world. Do you think we're going to continue to spend billions of dollars on a program which doesn't have any strategic defensive value? We're not idiots. Mark my words. In a few years from now we're going to send up a space shuttle with a tiny military package in it. Then the Soviets are going to send up one with a larger military package. Then we're going to send one up even bigger than a bread box. And before you know it, the only thing that will be allowed on space vehicles will be military equipment."

"Hip-hip-hooray," my wife said.

"Of course we won't use ours unless they use theirs. We don't want to start a war. We just want to deter one. What better deterrent than a satellite bristling with atomic weapons flying over the Soviet Union every 24 hours. It might finally bring about the dream for peace that all mankind has been waiting for. Once we have parity in the heavens, we can all sleep better on earth."

"So that's what you think this space program is all about?"

"They may not have had it mind when they started it. But now that we know what we can do in space, we've got to make it pay off militarily, or it won't make any scientific sense."

And so the other day when I watched the space shuttle land, and knew the tiny military package on board was safe, I, like all Americans, breathed a sigh of relief.

Tests Aren't Best Choice

By MAXWELL GLEN and CODY SHEARER

WASHINGTON — Whatever your age, please take 15 seconds to complete the following sentence. Pencils ready? Begin now:

Today's Scholastic Aptitude Test ....

a) reliably indicates "aptitudes" and goes far in predicting how well a student will do in college and thereafter.

b) measures not aptitude but achievement, and is closely linked to socioeconomic status.

c) holds undue significance in the eyes of college admissions officers and adulterates the quality of nearly everyone's secondary education.

d) b and c.

Pencils down. The correct answer is "d," though partial credit may be awarded for marking "b" or "c." If you completely choked, however, and opted for "a," you need not feel ashamed. In fact, most people misunderstand the meaning and value of SAT's.

For the thousands of high school seniors brushing up on their vocabulary and geometry this summer in preparation for next fall's three-hour academic Armageddon, additional criticism of the SAT may seem beside the point. Students have always regarded SAT's, at best, as a pain in the neck and, at worst, a worthless measurement of one's ability. Besides, they know the Educational Testing Service has occasionally answered its own questions inaccurately.

Yet, despite all that, few of us ever bothered to question the mysterious relationship between scores and aptitude — that is, our capacity to learn. We always hoped that ETS knew what it was doing.

But, unfortunately, according to Northwestern University sociologist Christopher Jencks, we should have known better. After reviewing several major ETS in-house studies, Jencks concluded that SAT's predict one's potential no better than do achievement tests on specified subjects. As he told our reporter John Riccardi, "SAT scores seem to vary according to one's previous schooling and background at least as much as achievement tests do."

Of course, when the College Board first administered the SAT in 1926, educators were looking for a way to measure students by some criterion preeumably insensitive to the quality of previous schooling. Aptitude was believed to be a stable trait (sort of like genes) in individuals that did not vary according to one's upbringing. Achievement — how much information one has already learned — was thought to be closely linked to one's background.

By, testing skills instead of subjects, educators hoped to find the "diamonds in the rough who could be expected to overcome poor preparation and learn a great deal in college," Jencks wrote in the spring issue of Public Interest.

One doesn't need to be able to score a perfect 800, though, to guess that the distinction between achievement and aptitude has since been blurred. If Johnny High School can define "terpsichorean," who's to say whether it's due to Johnny's aptitude for vocabulary, his parents' frequent use of the word, or because his high school had a dance requirement? And does it really matter to colleges?

Indeed, aptitude and achievement are really just two sides of the same coin. If you've got one, you've got the other. "For those concerned with equality of opportunity, the choice between so-called 'aptitude' and 'achievement' tests is a toss-up," said Jencks.

As a result, SAT's seem to have lost their atuff as distributors of educational justice. Moreover, the SAT's emphasis on so-called "aptitude" only reinforces a popular student notion: Working harder won't help you get ahead; only some kind of inherent "smarts" will.

In this sense, we may only be encouraging indolence in our high schools. Is there any point to mastering historical concepts or the basics in animal behavior, students can ask, if neither subject is likely to appear on the SAT?

Before Stanley Kaplan — the almighty administrator of SAT brush-up courses — replaces Horace Mann as the father of public education, high school administrators may want to pressure their collegiate counterparts into placing more emphasis on achievement tests and paying less homage to the SAT. At the moment, five times as many students take the SAT as do achievement tests, a ratio that seems to value manipulative skills over knowledge and teaching.

"WHAT'S ALL THIS CLAMOR FOR A FLAT TAX, ANYWAY?"

Advisers Say Auto Slump Ending

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Could it be true? The most humbled of all American industries arising from the debris of its collapse — image repolished, sales resurgent, stocks rising, profits beyond anything seen before?

To think — to even think — that the automotive industry might come back that way delivers hope to other unfortunate victims of the big recession. To housing, for instance, and to the industrial Midwest.

An industry ascending from previously unheard of losses — $5 billion in just the past two years — to earn $4.3 billion in 1983 and $6.8 billion a year from 1985 through 1987? It sounds impossible. It may be.

Still, the nation's largest investment advisory service makes those estimates. The Value Line Survey has reasoned its way to the conclusion that "the three-year slump in auto sales may be ending."

From that conclusion to a forecast of record sales and profits sounds like a leap of faith, but Value Line contends that higher volume, overhead reductions and lower interest and inflation rates will be among major factors bringing about the transcendent transformation.

Here, greatly abbreviated, is the reasoning behind the forecast:

The current slump dates to mid-1979, following the sharp rise in fuel costs after the Iranian revolution, which reduced automobile usage and hence the need for replacement of vehicles.

At the same time, automobile costs rose faster than prices in general, in part because of new safety and pollution control equipment and the need to retool for more fuel-efficient models. Cost-of-living wage adjustments worsened the problem. So did consumption of commodities — which rose very fast — that are needed in carmaking.

Atop those problems came high interest rates, which greatly added to the cost of car-ownership. If incomes grew sufficiently this problem might have been offset. But income growth lagged behind rising costs.

As a consequence of the resulting drop in sales, the average age of cars has risen significantly in the past few years. Many of the cars now three years old are fuel-efficient models, "and experience to date is that they deteriorate faster ..." They'll have to be turned in. So will the old gas-guzzlers that so many people have hung onto.

The income-cost relationship also is changing, for the better. Costs of automobile operation are stabilizing in contrast to their rapid rise in the 1978-1981 period. Vehicle price increases also are moderating. And lower interest rates are likely to reduce operating costs more.

Tax cuts, meanwhile, will add to household income.

Justice White Attacked At Bar Meeting

By BOB MIMS
Associated Press Writer

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — There were no police, bodyguards or federal security officers on hand when a man screaming about pornography and busing "just slipped through the cogs" at a meeting of lawyers and pummeled U.S. Supreme Court Justice Byron White, officials said.

White, 65, suffered only a minor abrasion on the cheek before a half-dozen spectators dragged the attacker away. White went on to give his speech to the Utah Bar Association at the Mariott Hotel.

Only regular hotel security officers were present when the attack occurred, authorities said.

White was being introduced about 11 a.m. Thursday when the man walked up to the dias and hit White several times.

Newton C. Estes, 57, of Kaysville, was booked into Salt Lake County Jail late Thursday. Estes was described by his wife as "a patriot down to his fingertips."

Estes was charged with assault on a federal justice in a complaint signed before U.S. Magistrate Paul L. Badger, who set bail at $10,000 and scheduled a preliminary hearing for Wednesday.

"I think I knew what was happening. If somebody hadn't grabbed him, I think I would have," said White, who as an All-American running back at the University of Colorado earned the nickname "Whizzer."

White "said he got hit harder when he played against Utah in football," according to Fred Graham, a CBS News law correspondent who was also seated on the rostrum.

"There was a moment of shock. The justice made no effort to fight back," Graham said.

The assault was the first in memory on a justice of the Supreme Court. It came just two months after Chief Justice Warren E. Burger asked Congress to allow armed Supreme Court police officers to protect the justices on and off court property.

Dan Dotson, Salt Lake City U.S. Marshal's chief deputy, said that while his office is technically responsible for the security of visiting federal officials, it was not to blame for the incident.

"No security was requested by the justice or anyone else. It's done on request only," Dotson said. "This is an isolated incident; it isn't regular. It just embarrasses Utah ... This guy just slipped through the cogs, so to speak."

As he struck, Estes shouted that he was unhappy about White's decisions on busing and pornography.

"He's causing four-letter words to come into my living room through the TV set! The only way I know how to stop it is to go to the source," he told reporters.

If convicted, Estes, the father of two married children, could serve a maximum sentence of three years in prison and be fined $5,000.

In the complaint, FBI special agent E. Rhead Richards said Estes told him he planned in advance to assault White in order to force a jury trial at which he could air his feelings about pornography, foul language on television and forced busing.

Earlier this month, it was White who wrote for the court in a 9-0 ruling July 2 giving states broad new powers to fight child pornography.

Estes' wife, Sally, said a "four-letter word" the couple heard on TV one night "was the straw that broke the camel's back."

She called her husband "an interested citizen trying to keep our civilization from going down the tube."

Friends and neighbors of Estes said he had moved from Memphis to Utah to get away from blacks. Memphis newspaper files indicated a man by that name ran unsuccessfully for the Memphis school board in 1971.

That man also campaigned against busing as the leader of Citizens Against Busing.

Justice Halts Deer Hunt

MIAMI (AP) — A federal judge agreed to a last-minute request by animal preservation groups and stopped a deer hunt set to begin at dawn today, saying he wanted to determine if federal law would be violated by the shooting.

The order late Thursday by U.S. District Judge Eugene P. Spellman came less than seven hours before hunt, designed to thin overcrowded herds, was to begin. He ordered lawyers for animal preservation groups and the state to appear in his chambers today.

"I know there's an awful lot of people out there in the Everglades waiting for the hunt to begin, and who will be very disappointed," Spellman said in an interview after his ruling. "But you can only call them the way you see them."

The restraining order is effective until 5 p.m. Saturday.

Col. Robert Brantly, executive director of the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission, called Spellman's ruling "incredible."

"The opposition won this round of the legal battle. But the deer will pay the price," Brantly said.

The hunt is aimed at thinning the herd of about 5,500 deer, which have congregated in limited dry areas to escape high water. More than 70 deer already have died from stress, starvation and parasites, game officials said. About 2,000 deer were expected to be killed in the hunt.

Brick Thrown From Car

A 21-year-old woman was injured when struck in the head by a brick, while a 26-year-old woman was run down by a car and injured early today in what police believe may be related incidents, Chief Glenn Cannon said this morning.

Cannon said Faith Renise Reeves of 519 W. 14th St. was struck in the head by a brick thrown from a passing car as she rode her bicycle in the 400 block of Cadillac Street about 2:53 a.m.

She was taken to Pitt County Memorial Hospital for treatment of her injuries.

About 3:15 a.m., according to the chief, Shirley Ann Weldon of 606 W. 14th St. was struck by a car as she walked along the 900 block of Cherry Street.

She, too, was taken to the hospital where she was treated and released.

Investigation of both cases was continuing, Cannon noted.

Court Official Is Appointed

Gail Richardson has been appointed trial court administrator for the Third Judicial District, composed of Pitt, Carteret, Craven and Pamlico counties, according to an announcement by Senior Superior Court Judge Robert D. Rouse Jr.

Ms. Richardson was previously assistant court administrator for operations in Bucks County, Pa. She has replaced Paula Alsup Edwards, who left April 1 for family reasons.

She holds a B.A. in history from Ohio University in Athens, Ohio, and an M.S.A.J. in judicial administration from American University in Washington, D.C. FATHER TO ALL ... Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat, who says he is married to the Palestinian cause, smiles at a refugee child in a west Beirut Palestinian refugee camp Thursday. Israel Says 'Sword' Unsheathed

By The Associated Press

While the United States urged the Arab world to help end the crisis in Lebanon, Israel warned its Palestinian guerrilla enemies that it has "not returned the sword to its sheath." A top PLO official said he still expects a street battle with Israeli forces besieging the Lebanese capital.

Negotiations to end the Beirut stalemate reportedly are still bogged down over where the Palestine Liberation Organization fighters will go if they leave Beirut, but Lebanon radio said U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib planned another round of peace talks today.

In a speech broadcast Thursday by the PLO radio station, Yasser Arafat's top security officer, Salah Khalaf, said the guerrillas refuse to "capitulate" to Israeli military threats.

"We are prepared to fight and shall do it with everything we have, even with our nails," said Khalaf, also known by the code-name Abu Iyad. "We are engaged in political negotiations, but a fight remains the foremost possibility."

Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon said during a military ceremony in southern Israel that his government was showing "great patience" with the U.S.-led peace effort.

But he added: "It is better that everyone connected with the matter remember that we have not returned the sword to its sheath and won't return it until the last of the terrorists has left Beirut."

Sharon's warning echoed in the hills outside Beirut, where 35,000 to 40,000 Israeli troops settled in for a long wait and their officers worried aloud that Israel's advantage might be dwindling as world opinion turns against the Jewish state.

"History is full of examples of what happened to armies who failed to seize the moment," said a colonel. "We should have gone straight in. I think we will do it now — soon."

A U.S.-mediated cease-fire has been holding with only scattered violations for the past five days, but Israel still is threatening to storm west Beirut if the PLO does not get out of Lebanon voluntarily. The Israelis have refused to withdraw their siege force until the Palestinians leave.

The PLO says it won't consider evacuating until a multinational force is deployed to stand between the guerrillas and the Israelis. Khalaf reiterated this demand in his speech Thursday.

For weeks, Habib has been trying to find a home for Arafat and the 8,000 PLO fighters believed trapped in west Beirut by Israeli forces that invaded Lebanon June 6 to crush the guerrillas.

Syria, the nearest Arab state, has refused to give the armed guerrillas a refuge, and no other Arab nation so far has offered to do so.

"Now is the appropriate time for the Arab community to assist in the resolution of this particular issue," said State Department spokesman Dean Fischer in Washington.

"It is the major stumbling block," said another U.S. official, who asked not to be identified.

Unconfirmed reports from the Syrian capital of Damascus said President Reagan wrote Syrian President Hafez Assad to ask him to take the PLO, but Assad replied that the Palestinians have not asked to go to Syria.

There also were press reports that Reagan wrote to King Fahd of Saudi Arabia, asking him for help in finding a haven for the guerrillas.

Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak appealed Thursday for Arab leaders to forge a unified stand on the crisis in Lebanon and urged the United States to "start a dialogue with the Palestinians."

"I am ready to go anywhere in the Arab nation provided that we can set aside our differences and be realistic so that we can agree on one line," said Mubarak, whose country has been cut off diplomatically by other Arab leaders because of its peace treaty with Israel.

Faced with the Arab world's division, Arafat appealed to the 94-member non-aligned nations movement Thursday for "effective action to save not only Lebanon and the Palestine Liberation Organization but also ... in order that the law of the jungle shall not prevail."

The PLO chief did not spell out what action the non-aligned nations should take.

The group's foreign ministers, meeting in Nicosia, Cyprus, at Arafat's request, issued a statement saying they "view with profound indignation the aggression of Israel."

Liner QE2 To Become Cruise Ship Again

SOUTHAMPTON, England (AP) — The helicopter pads are gone. Soldiers in battle gear have been replaced by crews working to turn the Queen Elizabeth 2 back into a cruise liner — more luxurious than before — after five weeks as a troop carrier near the Falklands warfront.

The Queen's Grill, where British officers planned strategy for the South Atlantic war with Argentina, soon will be a high-priced dining room again.

By Thursday, hundreds of workmen already had erased most signs of the ship's war duty. They were busy cleaning a stern swimming pool which had been covered by one of the two hastily rigged helicopter pads. In one stateroom, a shirt left behind by a soldier was being used as a cleaning rag.

Cunard Lines plans to have the face lift completed on its 15-year-old liner in time for the QE2's sailing to New York on Aug. 14. The ship hasn't carried civilian passengers since May 3, when it was requisitioned by the Defense Ministry as part of the armada sent to recapture the Falklands from Argentina.

The liner took 3,000 men of the 5th Infantry Brigade to the South Atlantic and returned to its home port of Southampton on June 11 with 629 survivors of three sunken Royal Navy vessels. Three days later, the Argentines surrendered at the Falklands' capital of Stanley.

"I've forgotten a lot of world cruises, but I'll never forget this one," said QE2 steward Ron Coles, 55, of Bournemouth, who was one of the 700 men who volunteered to serve as crew in the South Atlantic.

The QE2 spent most of the campaign well out of range of the Argentine air force, which sank the requisitioned container ship Atlantic Conveyor on May 25. Another requisitioned cruise liner, the Canberra, landed troops on the islands and survived numerous air raids.

The British government has not disclosed how much it is paying Cunard for requisitioning the QE2, but published reports put the figure at $225,000 a day. From May 3 to June 11, that would total nearly $8.8 million.

The total cost of requisitioning and chartering 44 merchant ships for the 74-day Falklands campaign was estimated at $90 million a month.

Disability Reviews Result In Threats

By ANDY O'CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

Social Security officers in Michigan have put up bulletproof glass and Nebraska case workers are refusing closed-door meetings with recipients because of threats from people whose payments are cut off in a stepped-up review of disability cases.

Nebraska officials have held workshops on how to handle potentially violent situations and have considered using fictitious names for case workers, said Doug Williams, director of Nebraska's Disability Determination Section.

"It's scary," Williams said Thursday in Lincoln. "We'll have someone get a letter that says, 'If you try to cease my benefits, I will get you — and I know where you live."

He said a threat is made about once a month, in a face-to-face encounter, over the telephone or through the mail.

Most areas of the country have reported no threats or acts of violence, although the accelerated review of payments has caused "quite a furor," as John Clark, an official in the New York regional Social Security office, put it Thursday.

And where threats have been made, many have come from mentally disabled people, officials say.

"I had one threat to kill me (last year) and this one I took seriously because the individual's disability was mental and he had a history of aggressive behavior," said James W. Keener, operations supervisor for the Social Security office in Georgetown, Del.

On June 15 in Modesto, Calif., a man upset about a decision on benefits marched three blocks from a Social Security office to an Army recruiting station, fired a shot into the floor and ordered Sgt. John Flood to come with him.

The man scuffled with Flood outside, more shots were fired and Flood was seriously wounded in the abdomen, arm and leg. Glen Almanson Lynch, 53, was charged with kidnap and attempted murder.

In Michigan, officials say they have seen an increase in threats from people losing benefits under the accelerated case review effort.

"The majority of the threats are coming from the program's mentally disabled clients whose cases have been reviewed and closed," said Ivan Cotman, associate superintendent in the Michigan Department of Education, which administers the federally financed Disability Determination Service.

Congress in 1980 ordered periodic reviews of all those among the 2.8 million Social Security disability beneficiaries with non-permanent disabilities.

Social Security Commissioner John Svahn says Social Security is reviewing more than 500,000 cases this year, up from 155,000 in previous years. He said about 40 percent are cut off the rolls.

"We have found that as much as $4 billion a year is being paid out to persons who do not meet the criteria ... out of an $18 billion program," Svahn said last month. "It's a mess, it truly is."

He said it takes the average person wrongfully cut off the disability rolls 12 months to regain benefits, but he said the agency believes that disability examiners make the correct initial decision in 97 percent of the cases.

In Michigan, the Traverse City office made bulletproof glass part of a recent remodeling job. Exterior signs identifying the building have been removed.

"In the past year, we've had 12 threats against staff members that we felt were real enough to report to the state police," said Gary Smith, director of the office in northern Lower Michigan.

The office in Lansing has taken its address out of the telephone directory, hired security guards, locks all doors and requires employees to wear identification tags.

A man with a gun was arrested near the office a year ago and threats come in "on a weekly basis," said an administrator who asked not to be identified.

Offices in Detroit and suburban Southfield have electronically locked doors and security procedures are reviewed with police.

"It just has to be related to the fact that we are taking benefits away from people who have developed a habit of depending on them," said Robert Hurley, the program's Detroit area administrator. His office gets one or two threats a month, he said.

In Lincoln, Neb., Williams said workers no longer have conferences with recipients in private offices.

"We've constructed a glass enclosure out in the main office where the meetings are held," he said. "You have voice privacy, but if something develops, there's a room full of people who are watching."

But Williams said threats still are rare.

"It's only one claimant out of 200 or 300 that will do this," he said. "I don't want us to hide. And I don't want to make things inconvenient for the 99 percent who don't make trouble."

Political Parties Battling For Votes With TV Ads

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats and Republicans are battling with rival television ads for votes in this year's congressional elections, but the Democrats are trying to do it for free.

"Our problem as Democrats is that we don't have the money the Republicans have," Rep. Tony Coelho, D-Calif., said Thursday as Democrats unveiled their first campaign ad of the year.

It shows a Social Security card being snipped to pieces by scissors. An annnouncer suggests that Republicans are doing the clipping.

"Their advertising ... is pure garbage," responded Bill Greener, a spokesman for the Republican National Committee. "Small children caught with their hands in the cookie jar could come up with more believable stories."

The Republicans have their own TV ad on the subject of Social Security. It shows an actor portraying an elderly postman delivering Social Security checks.

The GOP ad suggests the automatic 7.4 percent July cost-of-living increase contained in the checks is there because "President Reagan kept his promise."

Democrats call that misleading and inaccurate — and say TV stations should run the competing Democratic ad free of charge to set the record straight.

So far, they haven't had any takers.

"The president has repeatedly proposed delaying or diminishing Social Security benefits," said Coelho, chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee.

"The Democratic Party cannot match dollar-for-dollar the Republican media buy, nor will it attempt to match them lie-for-lie. But if the Republican Party wants this election to be decided by television commercials, so be it," Coelho added.

Coelho also charged that, in using an actor to play a postman, the Republicans may have violated a federal law prohibiting the impersonation of federal officers in political advertisements.

A spokesman for Postmaster General William F. Bolger said the allegation is being looked into. "We are hoping to get a copy of it (the GOP ad) to study it," said the spokesman, Joe McDonald.

Meanwhile, the National Association of Letter Carriers has let the Republicans know it doesn't think much of the postman commercial, either.

"The (Republican) commercial deliberately misleads the American public on the attitudes of letter carriers toward President Reagan in general and toward the Reagan administration's policies on retirement issues in particular," association President Vincent R. Sombrotto said in a letter to Republican National Chairman Richard Richards.

Charles T. Manatt, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, said his party is trying to raise money to buy time for the Democratic commercial — and three others on similar themes — in case the request for free air time isn't honored.

"We are calling on television stations that have run the Republican misstatements to provide us with equal time to run our side of the story, the true side of the story," Manatt said.

Coast Guard's Budget Approved

WASHINGTON (AP) — Refusing to go along with the Reagan administration, the House has overwhelmingly approved the largest Coast Guard budgets in history — $2.5 billion in 1983 and $2.7 billion in 1984.

The amount approved Thursday for fiscal 1983 was about $712 million more than the administration had indicated would be acceptable.

By a vote of 348-25, the House also approved $144 million in supplemental funds for 1982 Coast Guard operating expenses and an unspecified amount of money for retirement pay and military salary increases already authorized by Congress.

The money for 1983 and 1984 will pay for Coast Guard operations and research as well as acquisition, construction and improvement of aids to navigation, vessels and aircraft. A similar bill has been passed by the Senate.

The legislation requires the Coast Guard to have 41,500 military personnel at the end of the year and no fewer than 5,484 civilian personnel.

The amount appropriated by Congress for the Coast Guard for 1982 was $2.4 billion.

In a move to reduce the Coast Guard's budget, the Reagan administration early this year announced the impending closure of search and rescue stations around the country but changed its plans after being deluged with complaints.

The Coast Guard searches for and rescues ships and sailors in distress, enforces fisheries and drug laws on the seas, maintains aids to navigation, protects the marine environment and breaks up ice on lakes, among other things.

Two Collisions Are Reported

An estimated $4,300 damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Thursday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a 5:50 p.m. collision at the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and Cherry Court Road involving cars driven by Charles Howard Jones of Route 3, Greenville, and Pace Barnes Pruitt of 102P Cherry Court Apartments.

Damages from the mishap were estimated at $2,500 to the Jones car and $900 to the Pruitt vehicle.

A truck driven by Henry Edwards of Route 6, Greenville, and a car operated by Kenneth Earl Keys of Ayden collided about 3:45 p.m. on Greene Street, 75 feet north of the Farmer Street intersection, causing $350 damage to the truck and $550 damage to the car, investigators reported.

If You Have a Habit Of Following The Crowd, We Suggest, The Best Crowd to Follow is the Crowd Going To Church

Religious Leadership Split Over Israeli Invasion

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

Keen interreligious friction has developed in this country as a result of Israel's military drive in Lebanon, with most mainline Christian and Jewish leadership edgily divided about it.

Major American churches, with long-time heavy mission investments and ties in Arab areas of the Middle East, including Lebanon, have been strongly critical of Israel's operations there.

But Jewish organizations, along with a few individual Christian leaders, have generally defended Israel's action as sadly justified to end years of attacks by the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Besides causing interreligious tensions, the situation has caused some abrupt church turn-abouts in policy moves, crippled contacts and produced some exceptionally hard words.

While both religious sectors have lamented the civilian casualities and travail and both have encouraged emergency aid to Lebanese civilians in the battle zone, church leaders mainly have castigated Israel for it.

"Machiavellian," denounced United Methodist Bishop Dale White of Princeton, N.J., accusing Israel of aggressive militarism, killing and destroying in violation of international law.

Another strong criticism came last week from J. Richard Butler, director of the Middle East office of the National Council of Churches, who charged abuse by Israel of prisoners it had taken.

Back from five days in Lebanon, he said hundreds of Lebanese civilians have "disappeared, presumably to interrogation centers in Israel." He said a Norwegian held temporarily reported beatings and deaths.

Butler, a former church official in Jordan-ruled East Jerusalem who left there when Israel took it in the 1967 war and with continued links to churches in the Arab region, also accused Israel of "needlessly obstructing" relief shipments.

He told a news conference that 300,000 Lebanese and 200,000 Palestinians "are trapped" by Israel's siege of Beirut, short of necessities. He reiterated demands of church leaders that Israel withdraw.

To questions, he said it's up to Lebanon to decide if it "wants the PLO" to stay there. Asked if Israel should then allow continued PLO attacks without acting to stop them, he said, scowling, "I didn't say that."

The problem, with its repercussions in American interreligious antagonism, led the president of the interdenominational council, United Methodist James Armstrong, to call for a special meeting with Jewish leaders.

Some accepted, but others declined on the ground that church contingents would include PLO supporters. The council itself has urged inclusion of the PLO in Middle East negotiations, arousing keen Jewish resentment.

The Lebanon-provoked ire also spilled over into the recent Southern Baptist convention in New Orleans. A proposed resolution strongly supporting Israel and expressing solidarity with Jews as the chosen "people of God" was abruptly withdrawn at the offstage insistence of foreign mission officials.

They cited extensive involvement of the denomination in mission institutions and personnel in Arab regions, and said such a resolution at the present juncture would undermine church forces there.

While major denominational officials, Protestant and Roman Catholic, have sternly assailed Israel's tactics and the toll of lives and hardship, a few noninstitutional Christian leaders have upheld Israel's cause as just to rid Lebanon of foreign raiders.

The Rev. Jerry Falwell, Moral Majority leader, says he has visited Israel's northern villages, constantly threatened and often shelled by Palestinian postions across the border, and that Israel is fully justified in its action to end it.

The Rev. Franklin H. Littell, a theology professor at Temple University in Philadelphia and a specialist in Christian ties to Judaism, also defended Israel's actions.

But the tangled conflict, its harvest of current suffering in Lebanon, the abnormal presence there both of outside Syrian and Palestinian forces, and now of Israel, with its declared objective of ending violence, yet adding momentarily to it, troubles all religious sectors.

Reform Jewish rabbis, at their recent convention, blamed the crisis on "PLO terrorism" against both Israelis and Lebanese, but also urged and extended cease-fire, and many rabbis voiced individual criticism of Israel's operations and dismay at the deaths and suffering.

They, like the church organizations, were implementing special relief efforts to Lebanon, and on that matter, despite the strains, the religious forces still stood together.

Reagan Staff Misses Point

ELGIN, Ill. (AP) — Staff members of the Church of the Brethren had sent 30 pieces of silver to President Reagan in protest of his budget policies, implying betrayal of the poor, but the administration appartently didn't get the point.

The silver dollars, symbolizing the 30 pieces of silver paid to Judas to betray Jesus, had been sent last Easter week, and the denomination's headquarters says it finally has received a reply from a Treasury Department aide, Paul H. Taylor.

His letter acknowledges receipt of the coins as a donation for the "benefit of the poor," saying the General Services Administration is arranging to sell the coins, valued tentatively at $650 to $700 each.

Proceeds from the sale would be given to a Public Health Services fund for a program among migrants, he said, adding, "I hope this complies with your intent."

A denomination staff member, Ron Hsanft, comments, "We're glad to help the migrant health program. However, our major concern was to encourage a change in economic policy, and to that appeal we have had no response."

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market gave ground today, faced with some adverse inflation news.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 2.19 to 825.15 in the first half hour.

Losers took a 5-4 lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Before the market opened, the government reported that producer prices of finished goods jumped 1 percent in June, for their sharpest rise in 15 months.

Analysts said the news was taken as evidence of some reversal of the dramatic progress made in bringing down the inflation rate early in the year.

At the same time, the market had to contend with indications that the recession was maintaining a strong grip on the economy. The Federal Reserve reported that the nation's factories operated at 69.8 percent of capacity in June, down from 70.4 percent the month before.

Today's early prices included Mesa Petroleum, up $\frac{3}{4}$ at $14\frac{1}{8}$; Chrysler, up $\frac{1}{8}$ at $7\frac{7}{8}$; National Semiconductor, down $\frac{1}{4}$ at $19\frac{1}{8}$, and Raytheon, unchanged at $39\frac{1}{4}$.

On Thursday the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 1.05 to 827.34.

But advances held a narrow edge on declines at the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 61.09 million shares, against 58.16 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index edged up .02 to 63.38.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.69 at 250.20.

Prices ...

Natural gas prices were up 2.9 percent after a 1.8 percent increase in May.

For the first six months of the year, energy prices overall were down 17.1 percent, calculated annually.

—Food prices rose a modest 0.5 percent in June, less than the 0.7 percent gain of May and April's 1.6 percent rise. Prices fell for coffee, fresh fruits, eggs, pork and poultry. Costs rose for shortening and cooking oils, rice, beef and veal, fish, vegetables and sugar.

So far this year, food prices have risen at an annual rate of 8.8 percent.

—Passenger car prices jumped 1.9 percent after rising 0.7 percent in May, a result, the department said, of automakers' ending their rebate programs. Light truck prices also rose, up 3 percent in June, down from May's 4 percent gain.

—Capital equipment costs rose 0.8 percent after climbing 0.4 percent in each of the three previous months. Those costs are for machinery and transportation equipment used by business.

All the increases are adjusted for normal seasonal variations.

In all, the unadjusted Producer Price Index for finished goods stood at 279.9 in June, meaning that goods costing $10 at wholesale in 1967 would have cost $27.99 last month.

Even in advance of today's report, economists were not forecasting a return to last year's torrid pace of inflation.

"This certainly isn't a move toward double-digits (for the year)," said James Annable, economist at the First National Bank of Chicago.

"There really just isn't any prospect short of a major oil disruption in the Middle East for a return to double digits this year or next," he said.

The index was held down earlier in the year, he said, "because of erratic movements in food and energy prices. ... We knew it wouldn't be held down forever. We're paying some of that back now."

But, said Georgia State University economist Donald Ratajczak, "Moderation in energy prices ended dramatically in June."

Jason Benderly, economist for the Washington Analysis Corp., said June's energy price rise was "the first of several large increases."

Price changes that show up in the Producer Price Index are a good barometer of how food, energy and other commodity prices will move at the retail level, as measured by the Consumer Price Index. The CPI, though, checks costs for a broader range of items, including housing and medical care, than does the producer price measure.

Tobacco ...

Lester, managing director of Tobacco Growers' Information Committee in Washington.

"The basic tenets of the tobacco program have been preserved and some of the objections by anti-tobacco congressmen have been met. We would have preferred to keep the program unchanged. But this doesn't create any severe problems."

The Senate voted 77-17 Wednesday to pass the measure, which was approved by the House last month. The differences in the House and Senate versions were then worked out and approved by the House Thursday.

The Senate version includes:

— Assessments of a few cents per pound by grower-owned cooperatives to help pay for all but the program's administrative costs. The assessments are expected to reduce criticism by ending taxpayer support of the program.

— A requirement that non-farming corporations and institutions sell or forfeit tobacco allotments by December 1983. For the first time ever, sales of allotments will be allowed, but allotment holders must prove they share the risk of growing the crop by having a minimum 20 percent investment.

— A provision which empowers the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture to reduce by 35 percent the government's price supports. An amendment by Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., to freeze supports at 1981 levels was defeated.

— The reduction of the amount of floor sweepings which can be sold from .50 percent of warehouse total sales volume to .24 percent, which East said brings it in line with the burley tobacco floor-sweeping provision.

The measure now goes to President Reagan for his signature. Tobacco growers hoep that happens soon, since flue-cured tobacco markets are scheduled to open in Florida and Georgia July 21.

Flue-cured tobacco markets open in Florida and Georgia July 21 and Lester said those in the industry hope the president signs it by then.

The Border Belt, in Columbus and Robeson counties, will be the first to open in North Carolina with sales scheduled to begin July 26. Sales in the Piedmont areas are scheduled to open Aug. 10.

"They need to implement the changes incorporated in this bill for the upcoming season," Lester said. "Particularly the assessment from the growers which would be used to offset any losses which might be incurred under the program."

Judge Orders Runaway Home

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A 15-year-old runaway was sent back to her home town in Iowa today on a judge's orders, disappointing a deputy sheriff who arrested her and then decided he wanted to adopt her.

The teen-ager, Brandy A. Abbott, wept Thursday as Juvenile Judge Val S. Boring ordered her placed in the Marion County Juvenile Center pending her departure to Clinton, Iowa, to face a battery charge and another court action.

Deputy Sheriff Ted J. Cassidy called the latest development "a sad ending to a happy story." He said Miss Abbott left Indianapolis this morning.

He arrested the girl July 4 on charges of under-age drinking. Before making the arrest, Cassidy called the girl's mother in Iowa and said she was "unconcerned."

Worried that Miss Abbott had "no place to go," Cassidy and his wife, Gayle, sought custody of her. However, Boring ordered her home last Friday to reconcile her differences with her mother, Anita S. Abbott, but the girl returned here Monday, without her mother's permission.

On Wednesday, the Cassidys asked for and received temporary custody.

But Thursday morning, Boring received a telephone call from an Iowa judge who told him Miss Abbott had missed court appearances on a battery charge involving a fight between two girls and "a child in need of assistance" case.

The judge then ordered the girl to return home and dismissed the disorderly conduct charge stemming from the drinking incident.

"The only thing I ever wanted to do was help Brandy," Cassidy said after the hearing. "Maybe somewhere down the road I still can."

Cassidy said he knew nothing of the Iowa court cases until Wednesday. He said he hoped that Miss Abbott will be placed in a "good foster home" or returned to his family.

In Iowa, Clinton County Magistrate Arlen Van Zee said the county's Department of Social Services filed a petition for the girl's return at her parents' request.

When the girl is returned, the court has jurisdiction to order an evaluation, Van Zee said. Mrs. Abbott has said she will seek professional help for her daughter.

Man Charged In Extortion

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Chapel Hill police have arrested a Chapel Hill man and charged him with trying to extort money from William C. Friday, president of the University of North Carolina system.

Floyd Goins, 23, was being held in Chapel Hill jail in lieu of $50,000 bond, said police Capt. Arnold Gold.

Gold said a note was delivered to Friday demanding $10,000 in small bills or harm would come to him or his family.

Money was delivered to the drop site, a mailbox near the police station, about 11:30 p.m. Wednesday, Gold said.

Chapel Hill police and State Bureau of Investigation agents staked out the drop site and arrested Goins at the scene after he picked up the money, Gold said.

Gold said there were no other suspects in the case.

Blood Drive Set Tomorrow

FARMVILLE — The Red Cross Bloodmobile will holding its first-ever Saturday collection in Farmville from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the National Guard Armory.

The target for this visit is 100 pints, Tar River Blood Center Director Dick Carney said, and there is a great need of blood types 0 and B.

A blood shortage nationwide is being felt to some small degree in this area, Carney said, and he urged public participation in Saturday's collection.

Repair Shop Has Break-In

Greenville police were continuing their investigation of a 4:57 a.m. break-in today at Harmon's TV Repair at 107 Manhattan Ave.

Chief Glenn Cannon said entrance to the building was gained by breaking out a window, and a television set and record player were reported stolen.

He noted that the television set was recovered outside the building, while investigators recovered the record player about a block away on Chestnut Street.

Solar Fraction

The solar fraction for this area Thursday, as computed by the East Carolina University Department of Physics, was 10. This means that a solar water heater could have provided 10 percent of your hot water needs.

Legion Final Is Postponed

The skies opened up once more Thursday with rain, forcing postponement of the Pitt County's first game of the Area I East American Legion finals against Wilson at Harrington Field.

The game has been rescheduled for tonight at Harrington. Game time is 8 p.m. — weather permitting.

Game No. 2 will be played in Wilson Saturday night at 8 o'clock while game No. 3 will be played Sunday afternoon at Harrington — instead of Sunday evening as previously planned.

A fourth game, if needed, in the best-of-five series will be played Monday in Wilson at 8 p.m. A fifth game, if needed, will be played Tuesday at Guy Smith Stadium.

Contract Expiration Has Many Rookies In Limbo

NEW YORK (AP) — The five-year contract between the National Football League Players Association and team owners expired at midnight, and neither side seems overly concerned at this point.

Three days of negotiations ended without much progress and without a settlement Thursday, but neither the union nor the NFL Management Council is threatening any immediate job action.

But the contract expiration throws about unsigned 90 rookies into limbo.

The union contends that none of those rookies — including Heisman Trophy winner Marcus Allen of Southern California — can sign contracts until an agreement is reached with the council.

No unsigned players can attend training camps, which began with the opening today of workouts by the Baltimore Colts.

Jack Donlan, the owners' chief negotiator, meanwhile, has told all 28 NFL teams that they can still sign rookies, provided those players accept offers made before July 15.

Donlan said he understood several unsigned rookies would file suit against the union, claiming it was blocking them from signing and working out.

Union chief Ed Garvey contends rookie contracts signed after July 15 would "be voided by the courts."

Several top draft picks — such as Walter Abercrombie (Pittsburgh), Butch Woolfolk (New York Giants), Roy Foster (Miami) and Jim McMahon (Chicago) — signed contracts in the two days before the deadline, perhaps worried about the indefinite status past July 15.

Unsigned veterans, about 71 of them, can sign a contract at anytime for either 110 percent of last year's salary or by accepting a team's best offer made before July 15. No further negotiations between the players and the teams can take place.

More talks are planned for next week in Washington, D.C., but despite the apparent lack of progress, and the expiration of a "no-strike pledge" in the contract, there was little talk of players walking out soon.

"There will be football," said Gene Upshaw, president of the players association. He added, however, that a strike is "a real possibility."

Donlan said he believed "there will not be a strike."

Much of the discussion Thursday focused on a drug and personal-problem counseling program proposed by the players and rejected by the council.

The program would have been run by an independent agency, would cost owners $50 per player, and included a clause that no player could "be required to submit to any chemical dependency test or examination."

Donlan has already sent a letter to teams telling them they could conduct spot checks — including urinalysis — to indicate drug use.

"We feel urinalysis is a valid form of testing," Donlan has said, adding that such tests would be conducted for the good of the player.

Clampett Fires 66 To Set 36-Hole Record At Open

TROON, Scotland (AP) — Californian Bobby Clampett fired a 6-under-par 66 in early second-round play today to set a 36-hole Royal Troon Golf Club course record 133 and assume an 8-shot lead in the British Open.

The 22-year-old Clampett, made a 33-1 shot by the British oddsmakers, came within one shot of Henry Cotton's 1934 British Open record of 132 established at Royal St. George's.

Clampett's score was 11-under par for two trips around Troon's treacherous 7,067-yard layout.

Dressed in more conservative sweater and slacks after a day of splendor in knickers and argyle socks, Clampett went out in 4-under-par 32 by firing birdies on four of the first seven holes.

The long-hitting resident of Carmel Valley Ranch then birdied the first two holes on the back side, which plays into the fickle winds off the Firth of Clyde.

He made two mistakes coming home. Clampett hit the fairway bunker on the 457-yard 15th and settled for a bogey.

Undaunted, the three-time All-American from Brigham Young University came right back to slap a wedge to within five feet on his third shot at the 542-yard, par-5 16th and can the putt.

On the 223-yard 16th, his tee shot missed the green on the right. He chipped back over the green and after a second chip had to settle for a five-foot bogey putt.

Again, he answered the bogey with a birdie, sinking a four-footer on the final hole for a 2-under 34 on the back nine.

Clampett, in the second group off the tee, was in the clubhouse eight shots up on a field that included U.S. Open champion Tom Watson and Masters king Craig Stadler, both of whom were 3-under after 27 holes. Clampett finished second to Watson in the U.S. Open last month at Pebble Beach, Calif.

Clampett one-putted 10 times during his remarkable round.

"I'm not concerned about any lead I may have," he said. "I just want to shoot the lowest I can. I'll go out tomorrow with the same game plan."

He added, "I've always felt golf was a challenge against yourself not against others."

Clampett has yet to win in the United States although he won a tournment in Japan.

"The fact I haven't won a big tournament doesn't bother me," he said. "In college I've won by 11, 12 and 13 shots. I won in Japan (the United States vs. Japan team matches) by 7."

Clampett, who started playing golf at 10 and used to shag balls for tour players at Pebble Beach, said the wind wasn't as difficult at Troon today as it was Thursday.

"The wind was from the same direction, there was just less of it," he said.

Defending champion Bill Rogers of Texarkana, Texas, shot a 2-under-par 70 today but trailed the red-hot Clampett by 10 shots at 1-under 143.

Jerry Pate, former U.S. Open champion, withdrew today after shootiog 81 in the opening round, blaming a pulled shoulder muscle.

Asked why he was more conservatively dressed today, Clampett said he did so at the suggestion of his girlfriend.

He said he might go back to the knickerbocker pants Saturday "if the spirit moves me."

While crowds at the British Open championship shivered and players struggled with headwinds on the back nine, Clampett was his usual sunny Californian self after the first round.

"I get plenty of experience of this kind of weather in California," he said cheerfully after shooting a 5-under-par 67 at the Royal Troon links to take a two-stroke lead the first day.

"We get fog and drizzling rain at home. And sometimes the wind blows and it turns quite cold. So this weather doesn't bother me."

The Open got off to its coldest start in years Thursday. Spectators lining the flat, narrow fairways of the 7,067-yard par 36-36—72 course beside the Firth of Clyde were wrapped in coats and scarves.

Only a handful of players tamed the chilling winds that blew into their faces all along the back nine.

Clampett, 22, who lives at Carmel Valley Ranch, Cal., led the way with his 67. Watson, three times winner of this title and the current U.S. Open champion, and the unheralded Nick Price of Zimbabwe shot 69. Bernhard Langer of West Germany, last year's runnerup, and Britons Ken Brown and Des Smyth made 70.

Coming in was a nightmare. Of the 150 players who teed off during the day, only a half dozen made par over the back nine, and fewer than half broke 40.

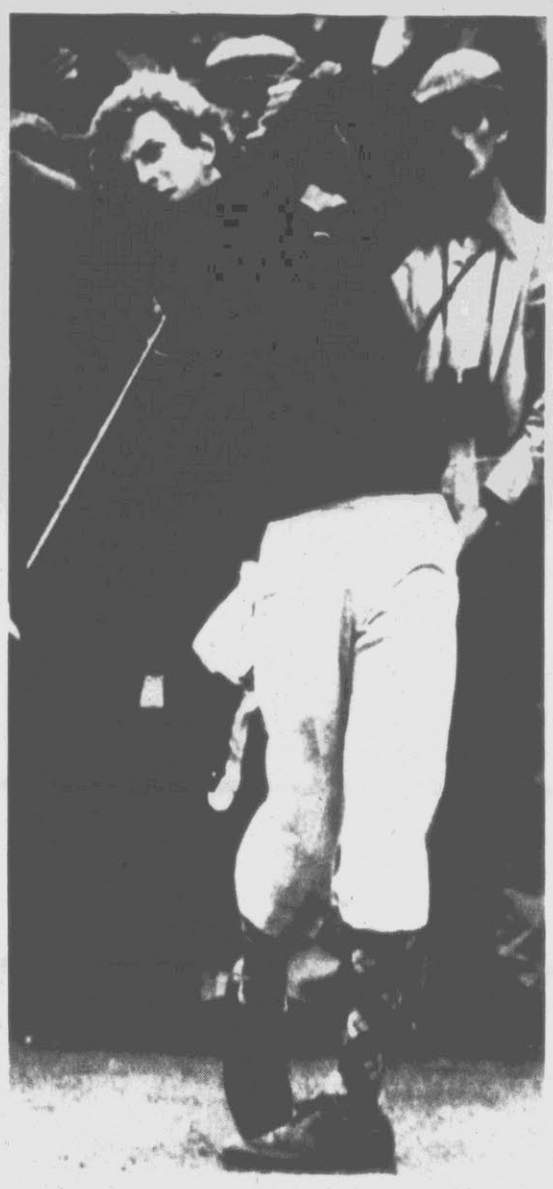

Bill Rogers, defending champ, battled the back nine in the afternoon, when the wind was at its worst, and finished with a 73. He said he could not believe some of the other scores.

"In these conditions Bobby Clampett's 67 was unbelievable," he said.

Watson was pleased with his effort in the dismal conditions.

"Sixty-nine at Troon today was a terrific score," he said. "Clampett's 67 was a perfect score."

Arnold Palmer made a great start and led at one stage, 4-under-par, on the course where he won the title 20 years ago. But he failed to master the headwinds and finished with a 71.

In The British Mood
Dressed fit the Scottish surroundings, Bobby Clampett drives from the 7th tee in the first round of the British Open. Clampett finished the day with a five-under-par 67 for the first round lead and then shot a six-under-par 66 for 11-under-par total and early second round lead. (AP Laserphoto)

Detroit Pounds Twins By 18-2; Brewers Win 2

By The Associated Press

The three-day All-Star break apparently was just what the Detroit Tigers needed.

When play resumed Thursday night, the Tigers proved to be just as hot as they had been cold in losing 22 of 29 games before the All-Star hiatus.

They erupted for 11 runs in the very first inning — Larry Herndon drove in four with a single and double and Lance Parrish capped it with a two-run homer — and buried the Minnesota Twins 18-2.

"We sure started with a bang, huh?" Parrish said after the biggest inning ever against the Twins, surpassing the 10 sixth-inning runs the Tigers scored against Minnesota on June 13, 1967. "I never saw anyone score 11 runs in one inning before. I'm just glad to be on the side that did."

Detroit's Lou Whitaker led off against Minnesota with a single and scored on Chet Lemon's double. Herndon singled Lemon home and Parrish followed with another single before Mike Ivie popped out. Enos Cabell doubled to drive in Herndon and chase Twins starter Jack O'Connor. John Pacella was greeted by John Wockenfuss' RBI single that made it 4-0 and Tom Brookens blooped a single to center, scoring Cabell.

Alan Trammell grounded to short and the bases were loaded on Ron Washington's error. Whitaker forced Trammell at second as Wockenfuss scored the sixth run. Lemon walked to reload the bases, Herndon doubled to clear them and Parrish hit a 434-foot homer. Detroit added four more runs in the fourth on consecutive homers by Brookens, a three-run shot, and Trammell.

"They mean the same — one game," said Tigers Manager Sparky Anderson. "Once a year you have them, maybe once every two years. It's just a freak thing. No matter what, they're going to happen."

Brewers 8-5, White Sox 4-4

The Brewers won the opener as Jim Gantner singled three times and drove in two runs and Jim Slaton pitched 7 1-3 innings of four-hit relief. Cecil Cooper singled home the winning run with two out in the eighth inning of the second game. Paul Molitor walked against Lamarr Hoyt with one out and took second on a grounder. Cooper then singled to score Molitor and give the Brewers their fifth consecutive victory.

The White Sox jumped to a 3-0 second-inning lead but Ben Oglivie's 20th homer made it 3-1 and Milwaukee scored three runs in the third inning for a 4-3 lead on Robin Yount's two-run double and a double by Oglivie. The Brewers snapped a 1-1 tie in the opener with three runs in the fourth inning on consecutive RBI singles by Roy Howell, Marshall Edwards and Gantner. Four runs in the eighth offset Harold Baines' two-run homer in the Chicago ninth.

Red Sox 5, Royals 3

Dwight Evans drove in four runs with a homer and a single while reliever Tom Burgmeier held the Royals to one run and five hits over the final 5 1-3 innings. Kansas City led 3-0 before Evans capped a four-run fifth inning with a three-run homer off Larry Gura after Jerry Remy's RBI single. It was Evans' 12th homer of the season and 10th in his last 24 games. He added an RBI single off Mike Armstrong in the seventh.

Angels 8, Indians 2

Fred Lynn belted his first career grand slam and Dave Goltz held Cleveland to three singles as the Angels posted their fifth straight victory. Goltz walked three and struck out one while pitching his first complete game since 1980. Lynn's homer, his 10th of the season, highlighted California's six-run third inning. Bobby Grich followed Lynn's shot with a solo homer, chasing loser Rick Waits.

Orioles 3, Mariners 2

Al Bumbry hit a two-run homer and reliever Sammy Stewart squelched Seattle's seventh-inning rally. It was the fourth straight loss for the Mariners, who have a 5-23 record in Baltimore's Memorial Stadium since they came into the league in 1977. Singles by Eddie Murray, John Lowenstein and Dan Ford produced a Baltimore run in the second inning and Bumbry homered in the third off Jim Beattie. Winner Scott McGregor allowed only one baserunner through 6 2-3 innings, but needed help from Stewart after Todd Cruz's two-run single in the seventh.

Yankees 2, A's 1

Graig Nettles, who popped out with the bases loaded and one out in the sixth inning, lined a two-run homer with two out in the eighth to end the Yankees' four-game losing streak. Trailing 1-0 against Dave Beard, the third Oakland pitcher, the Yankees got started when Dave Winfield singled with one out. After pinch hitter Dave Collins flied out, Nettles lined a 3-2 delivery into the right field stands for his seventh homer of the season and 302nd of his career. New York relief ace Rich Gossage was the winner. He and three other pitchers held Oakland to six hits.

Blue Jays 5, Rangers 1

Consecutive home runs by Barry Bonnell and Jesse Barfield in the third inning backed the eight-hit pitching of Dave Stieb, who recorded his 10th complete game, tying him with Oakland's Rick Langford for the AL lead. The Blue Jays tagged Rick Honeycutt for four runs in the third when Alfredo Griffin tripled and scored on Damaso Garcia's double. Garcia was sacrificed to third and Bonnell followed with his fifth homer of the season. Barfield then hit his ninth.

Sharpe Captures P-P Amateur

Thomas Sharpe led through both rounds on a wet course to win the Thursday Night Amateur Tournament at the Greenville Putt Putt golf course.

Sharpe shot two rounds of 31 despite heavy rains having left the course soaked to finish with a 10-under-par 62.

Four strokes back in second was Mike Futrell with a 66. Three players tied for third at 70: Charles Gunther, Mike Wetherington and Jimmy Silverthorne. Gunther took third in a sudden-death playoff. Wetherington was fourth.

Correction

A picture of the Greenville All-Star team in Thursday's Daily Reflector had two names wrong in its cutline.

Stabler Placed On Waivers By Oilers

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oiler Coach Ed Biles, recognizing quarterback Ken Stabler as an individualist who likes to do things his own way, gave the 13-year veteran a chance to make his own exit from the Oilers.

Instead, Biles said Stabler did nothing and forced the him to place the former Oiler starter on no-recall waivers Thursday and end the stormy relationship that had existed since Biles became head coach last year.

Biles said he told Stabler on July 7 that he no longer figured in the Oilers' offensive plans. Biles gave Stabler the option of retiring or trying to peddle his services to another team. Biles said repeated efforts to get an answer from Stabler failed.

"We wanted to give him the opportunity to get a job on another team and to have plenty of time for that to happen," Biles said. "In all fairness to the veterans we feel are no longer able to contribute to this football team, we wanted to give them the opportunity in the right sort of way."

Stabler could not be reached for comment.

Biles' decision also shed the Oilers of another problem — Stabler's alleged involvement with a convicted gambler that led to a league investigation.

"The league situation is a private matter between the league and Kenny Stabler," Biles said. "The Houston Oilers are not involved in it so there's no reason in us discussing that."

Stabler did not show up for a scheduled meeting with National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle late last month. Rozelle has declined to make results of the investigation public until he speaks personally with Stabler.

Stabler also avoided the Oiler practice facilities during the off-season, showing up only once for a mini-camp on May 23, despite a request from Biles to be present for off-season training.

Three Home Runs Power Braves Past Chicago

By The Associated Press

It looks as if the Atlanta Braves have found a ballpark they like even better than their own homer-happy stadium.

"With the wind blowing out, it's even better than Atlanta," said Dale Murphy after hitting a two-run homer Thursday in the Braves' 11-4 victory over the Chicago Cubs at wind-swept Wrigley Field.

Aided by a 13-mph wind blowing out to center field, Murphy, Bruce Benedict and Larry Whisenton walloped homers as the Braves got the second half of their season off on the right foot.

Atlanta may not match its record 13-game winning streak at the start of the season, but Manager Joe Torre hopes his team can establish some kind of a foothold at the top of the National League West.

"I think it's important when a team is in first place in the first half to re-establish yourself in the second half and show that you're going to play just as good," Torre said.

The homers by Murphy and Whisenton came off Ferguson Jenkins, 6-10, who was hammered for five runs in 11-3 innings and made his quickest exit of the season.

Cub reliever Bill Campbell yielded two more runs in the third to give Atlanta a 7-1 lead, and the Braves hit Dick Tidrow for four more, including Benedict's two-run shot.

Atlanta's Phil Niekro, 7-3, went the distance for the second time this season, scattering nine hits. And when the Cubs issued an intentional walk to No. 8 hitter Rafael Ramirez in the third inning, putting runners on first and second, Niekro crossed up the strategy with a two-run double.

"He's become a better hitter," said Torre of Niekro. "He used to be the All-American out."

Mets 5, Dodgers 2

Dave Kingman and Mookie Wilson hit two-run homers to pace New York over Los Angeles. Charlie Puleo, 7-6, and Terry Leach combined to scatter eight hits for the Mets.

Loser Jerry Reuss, 9-7, retired the first 11 New York batters until George Foster singled with two out in the fourth. Kingman followed with his 22nd home run.

Puleo singled to lead off the sixth and Wilson followed with his third homer. John Stearns then doubled, took third on a passed ball by catcher Mike Scioscia and came home on Foster's sacrifice fly.

Pirates 5, Astros 1

John Candelaria and Rod Scurry combined to pitch a five-hitter and Dave Parker drove in four runs, three with a homer, as Pittsburgh defeated Houston.

Candelaria, 5-4, struck out six and walked one, allowing five hits before giving way to Scurry in the seventh. Scurry finished up with 22-3 innings of hitless relief to earn his sixth save.

Parker singled home a run in a two-run Pittsburgh first off loser Don Sutton, 9-5, then walloped a three-run homer in the ninth.

Reds 7, Cardinals 3

Dan Driessen, Cesar Cedeno and Ron Oester had run-scoring hits in the third inning, keying a five-run rally that carried Cincinnati over St. Louis.

Eddie Milner's leadoff single triggered Cincinnati's comeback from a 3-1 deficit against rookie John Stuper, 4-2.

Driessen singled home Milner after Dave Concepcion walked and Cedeno doubled home Concepcion to produce a 3-3 tie. Driessen came home on a wild pitch by Jeff Lahti, who relieved Stuper, Oester singled home a run and another scored on Alex Trevino's double-play ball.

Bruce Berenyi, 6-9, and Jim Kern combined on a seven-hitter for the Reds, with Kern earning his second save.

Expos 6, Padres 2

Gary Carter singled in two runs and Chris Speier doubled in a pair to key a five-run fourth inning and Charlie Lea pitched a three-hitter as Montreal beat San Diego.

Lea, 7-5, hurled his third complete game of the season, giving up just one hit through the first six innings. He struck out five and walked three in ending a personal three-game losing streak.

Luis Salazar's sixth homer gave the Padres a 1-0 lead in the third, but the Expos knocked out John Montefusco, 7-5, with their fourth-inning rally. The loss snapped the right-hander's six-game winning streak.

"I was just lucky tonight," said Lea. "They hit the ball on the ground, and the fly balls were right at somebody."

Phillies 2, Giants 1

Gary Matthews' two-run homer in the eighth inning helped Philadelphia overcome a night of futility at the plate and beat San Francisco.

Matthews' homer, his 15th, was only the fifth hit off Giant starter Rich Gale, 3-9, and came after Pete Rose reached base on an error. Rose led off the inning with a ground ball in the hole that shortstop Johnnie LeMaster tried to backhand, but dropped.

Before Matthews drove in the tying and go-ahead runs, the Phillies had managed just three singles and a double off Gale, and threatened only in the fifth inning, when Manny Trillo singled and Ivan DeJesus doubled.

Scott's 1B Keys Greenville, 2-1

PINETOPS — Gary Scott singled home Tom Moore in the bottom of the eighth inning to give Greenville a 2-1 victory over Greene County in the second round of the 13-15-year-old Babe Ruth tournament at SouthWest Edgecombe.

Greenville will play Nash County on Saturday at 1:30 in the semifinals of the double-elimination tournament. The winner will advance to the finals.

The game was tied at the end of seven innings. In the top of the eighth Greene County got its leadoff man on with a single but Scott came on in relief of Pat Rand and struck out the next three batters — the Nos. 3, 4 and 5 batters for Greene County.

Greenville then won the game in the bottom of the inning. Moore singled to open the inning and stole second. He went to third on Billy Michel's single. Michel later stole second.

Scott then ripped his single to drive in Moore to give Greenville the win.

Michel and Scott both had two hits for Greenville.

Greenville's defense sparkled throughout the game, particularly in the first five innings when it turned three double plays.

Scott picked up the win in relief as he and Rand held Greene County to five hits. Greenville had nine hits.

WASHINGTON — The Southern Pitt All-Stars continued their drive toward the District 7 South Area title Thursday night with a 13-7 victory over Washington to advance to the touirnament finals.

Southern Pitt, which won its first two games in the tournament by a combined score of 37-16, is unbeaten in the double-elimination tournament going into the finals.

Southern Pitt will play the winner of the Plymouth-Washington game tonight for the title.

Southern Pitt has defeated both Washington (24-13) in the first round and Plymouth (13-3) in the second en route to the finals.

Mike Chapman picked up the win for Southern Pitt. No one for either team had more than one hit marred by numerous errors by Washington.

Just Before NFL-NFLPA Pact Expires

Bears Sign McMahon

By The Associated Press

Several National Football League draft picks, free agents and already-signed players found the urge to pick up a pen and sign a contract — just as the league's collective bargaining agreement with the Players Association was expiring.

Among those so inclined was Jim McMahon, the All-American quarterback from Brigham Young, who was one of five first-round picks reaching agreement before the midnight Thursday deadline. McMahon signed a three-year contract with the Chicago Bears and will report to training camp July 24.

"We're delighted to have him under contract and glad to have him as a Chicago Bear," said club spokesman Pat McCaskey.

Other first-round picks coming to terms were a pair of running backs — Michigan's Butch Woolfolk and Richmond's Barry Redden — and guards Roy Foster of Southern California and Sean Farrell of Penn State.

Woolfolk signed with the New York Giants, while Redden came to terms with the Los Angeles Rams. The guards joined up with the NFL's Florida teams — Foster with the Miami Dolphins and Farrell with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

"It's a relief," Woolfolk said at a news conference announcing his signing. "I feel like two tons are off my shoulder."

Several other teams announced signing of lower-round draft picks. But there are many choices from the April draft who remain out of the fold. Among them is Stanford running back Darrin Nelson, the first-round pick of the Minnesota Vikings.

The unsigned rookies are in limbo. The Players Association maintains that no player — be he rookie or veteran — can bargain individually now that the collective agreement has lapsed.

Thus, like the rookies, free agents were in sort of a hurry to get their name on the bottom line.

Among the bigger names to sign was Harold Jackson, the leader in career pass receptions among active NFL players. Jackson, who was released after playing last season with the New England Patriots, signed a one-year agreement with the San Diego Chargers.

Other free agents returned to their old teams. Chicago wide receiver Brian Baschnagel re-signed, as did four Denver Broncos veterans — cornerback Aaron Kyle, defensive lineman Barney Chavous and offensive linemen Paul Howard and Keith Bishop.

Some veterans took the opportunity to sign contract extensions Thursday. Leading the way was Atlanta Falcons quarterback Steve Bartkowski, who added two years to his current pact. Terms were not disclosed, but the Atlanta Constitution reported that Bartkowski would be paid $1.35 million over the next three seasons.

Rookie Atop Quad Cities

COAL VALLEY, Ill. (AP) — Rookie Tim Graham concedes his uncustomary position, the lead in the Quad Cities Open Golf Tournament, may be only temporary.

"I'm not too overconfident," Graham said after his 5-under-par 65 gave him a one-shot edge after the first round.

"I'm driving the ball awfully bad. I'm hitting a big hook. I got away with it today because the draw was good in the wind," said the 24-year-old newcomer from McNeese State University.

"I'm just tickled to be in here," he said.

Graham's performance beat his previous best in 19 PGA Tour starts by two strokes and marked the first time he had led a tournament after any round.

The Pennsylvanian has been no higher than 19th and his 1982 earnings of $6,068 place him far down on the current money-winning list.

His seventh birdie of the hot, humid, hazy day, a 25-foot sidehill putt on his 17th hole, gave Graham the undisputed lead.

"I wasn't scared to go at the pins today. The greens were holding shots and they were not fast," he said.

Tied for second place with 66s going into today's second round were veteran Bob Murphy, Canadian Dan Halldorson and Payne Stewart.

Murphy, the winner of $1.1 million, but a non-winner since 1975, and Halldorson, the loser in a playoff on this Oakwood Country Club course last year, bogeyed their final holes to miss a share of the lead.

Murphy's round included an eagle 2 on the 341-yard second hole, where he sank a 123-yard nine-iron approach.

"It hit one foot past the cup and skipped back in the hole," he said.

Stewart, who wears knickers, toured the front side of this 6,514-yard layout in 30, 5 under par. However, he had to settle for a 37 on his incoming nine.

In a big group at 67 were Calvin Peete, last week's victor at Milwaukee, and Miller Barber, who won the U.S. Seniors Open on Sunday.

Dave Barr of Canada, the defending champion, matched par of 70.

The winner Sunday will take $36,000 from the total purse of $200,000.

Trio Tied For Mayflower

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — After watching Chris Johnson birdie three consecutive holes, Kathy Hite came through with five birdies on the back nine to earn a share of the lead with Johnson and Sandra Haynie in the $200,000 Mayflower Classic golf tournament.

The trio took a one-stroke edge over three other golfers going into today's second round of the Ladies Professional Golf Association event after recording 4-under-par 68s Thursday in the opening round.

"It always helps to play with a player that does well. It sort of inspires me," said Hite, who is trying to end a streak of six consecutive weeks of frustration on the tour. "The gallery who watched us got its money's worth. Between Chris, Kathy Postlewait and myself we probably had a best ball of 13 or 14 under."

Johnson, seeking her first victory in three years on the tour, had her three consecutive birdies on putts of 18, 12 and 20 feet. That put the 24-year-old at 3-under after eight holes. She gained another stroke with an 18-foot putt from the fringe on No. 14.

"I kind of just got going on 6-7-8," she said. "Then Kathy got going. That helped me continue to concentrate, and helped me to be aggressive."

Haynie, a late finisher, moved into a share of the lead with a birdie putt of 18 feet on the 17th hole. The shot, which became her fourth birdie on the back nine, followed a brief delay as a spectator was treated for an apparent heat stroke.

"It didn't bother me," said Haynie about the delay near the green. "I felt bad for him. I just waited until he was taken care of."

Temperatures were in the high 80s and high humidity slowed the play, but the players still had success battling the 6,101-yard, Country Club of Indianapolis course.

Janet Alex, Beth Daniel and Donna White shot 69s in the opening round. Defending champ Debbie Austin and Alexandra Reinhardt each finished at 70 after bogeying their final hole. They were tied with Nancy Rubin.

Work On UNC Arena Set To Begin Aug. 1

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — Construction is scheduled to begin Aug. 1 on the University of North Carolina's $30 million basketball and swimming complex, and it could be ready for the Tar Heels' 1984-1985 home basketball opener, says Athletic Director John Swofford.

Swofford says money will not be a problem for the complex, which will seat 21,200 for basketball. He said the fund-raising drive, chaired by Greensboro businessman Hargrove "Skipper" Bowles Jr., has netted $26 million in pledges.

"That's far more than either of two national professional fund-raising groups told us was possible," Swofford said. "One of those firms even removed itself from consideration because they didn't think the goal was possible.

"Of course, it didn't hurt to have the NCAA championship and No. 2 basketball teams during the two seasons when our primary fund-raising drive was underway," he said.

Swofford said he expects the remaining $4 million to be filled by pledges, but even if it isn't, he said The Educational Foundation has promised to cover the deficit with funds from its endowment trust.

In addition to the basketball and swimming areas, the complex will house office space for Swofford, the men's and women's basketball and swimming offices.

Swofford said the facility may open doors for the Tar Heels when it comes times to select sites for various NCAA tournaments, although a lack of hotel space in the area may be a hindrance.

National television experts will assist in the lighting and camera location sites and press areas are 60 percent larger than in the school's current facility, he said.

Man Who Does 'Dallas' Likes To Feel Proud

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Lee Rich had an idea for a series. It would be about a girl, with a smirched reputation, who came from the other side of the tracks. By good looks and good luck, she marries a wealthy playboy and becomes part of a powerful Texas family, only her background prevents her from being accepted.

The story line, with some changes, became a series in 1978, receiving negative reviews and limited interest from the public.

But Rich knew better. "I knew it would be a hit, but I didn't think it would be this big."

Rich, head of Lorimar Productions, is talking about CBS' "Dallas," the top-rated show the past two seasons and one of the biggest hits in television history.

The original concept was changed because it was too narrow. Rich didn't think the Pam Ewing character would work fighting the family all the time, "so we made it a total family drama and gave Pam (Victoria Principal) a totally different character."

Ironically, the first concept bears a resemblance to "Dynasty," the ABC prime-time soap opera. ("They stole that from us," says Rich.) "Dynasty," after two seasons, is gaining popularity, finishing 20th for the 1981-82 season.

Larry Hagman's reputation J.R. character was also modified. "He was always the villain," says Rich. "The fight between Pam and J.R. was going to happen. But we just made him a bigger bad guy."

Rich has had his failures — NBC's "Flamingo Road" and ABC's "Midland Heights" are two recent examples. "But the only time I wasn't proud was when I did a show badly."

He says that happened with "Hunter," starring James Franciscus. The 1977 show, about a foreign agent, was quickly canceled.

" For a series to work, you have to know what you're going to say in the 10th and 20th show. With 'Hunter,' I didn't know where it was going."

Rich seems to have his finger on the pulse of many viewers. His major successes range from the sweetness of "The Waltons" to the tangy "Dallas" and its gentler Friday night companion, "Falcon Crest."

"I understand ratings," says Rich. "I try to discover trends, then try to convince the networks to do them. My programming is larger than life and it doesn't take itself too seriously."

Rich says he is equally proud of "Dallas" and "The Waltons."

"'The Waltons' were right for the time," he says. "People were saying, 'That's my family, or I wished that was my family.'"

"'Dallas" was a respite for the American public, a fantasyland," he says. "We fulfilled the dreams of many people."

"Dallas" is seen in 85 countries. But it's a bust in Japan, where the family feuding is not understood and is contrary to the nation's value system.

"I don't care how it does in Japan," says Rich. "I much rather have it do well in England, Germany and France."

Entering its fifth season, "Dallas" will branch into new plot areas, including the development in which the widowed Miss Ellie will be wooed by a flock of suitors.

"Dallas" will also venture into the movie theaters, with a feature-length film. Lorimar, which did the movies "Victory" and "S.O.B.,'" is no novice to theatrical films. But the question is: Will people pay for what they get for free on Friday nights?

Sophia To Star In Film

ROME (AP) — Actress Sophia Loren is returning to the United States with a prison term behind her and a smile on her face.

Miss Loren said she plans to star in a movie, "Success," with actor-director Burt Reynolds and a new version of playwright Tennessee Williams' "Rose Tatoo" for cable TV.

Miss Loren, a 47-year-old Academy Award winner, appeared Thursday at her first news conference since being released. She was in jail for failing to report the equivalent of $180,000 on her 1963 income tax returns.

She declined to detail her prison life, saying: "My jail sentence was not in vain. It's something I will never forget. It was the ugliest experience of my life.

Miss Loren arrived in Rome on May 19 for her first visit to her homeland since being given a 30-day sentence in 1980. She was released June 5 after serving 17 days.

She said she was not sorry about having returned to Italy, explaining: "I have found my smile again."

U.S. Youth Win Prizes

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Musical groups from Michigan, California and Colorado were among the first prize winners at the 11th International Youth and Music Festival here.

The Kalamazoo, Mich., Junior Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Robert Ritsema, won first prize in the youth symphony orchestra category at Thursday's awards ceremony.

California's Tamalpais High School Orchestra took top honors in the high school orchestra division and the Heritage High School Concert Choir of Colorado won first prize in the mixed high school choirs group.

The festival's music director, Craig D. Nortrup, of San Jose, Calif., told the competitors theirs' was a "festival of champions."

Never before had so many groups entered the competition — more than 30 orchestras and choirs of different age groups took part — and therefore the jury's task had been extremely difficult, Nortrup said.

In addition to the American first prize winners, the Minnesota Boys' Choir received a special award, recognizing the merits of extremely young performers.

The three top prizes of the competition — the Honor Prizes of the City of Vienna — went to two English groups and a choir from Poland.

The Birmingham Academy Chamber Orchestra was honored as the festival's best orchestra and the Cantamus Girls' Choir as the best girls' choir.

Poland's Schola Cantorum Gedanesis received the city's honor prize as the festival's best mixed choir.

General Dislikes Response By CBS

NEW YORK (AP) — Gen. William Westmoreland, the central figure in a television documentary charging a conspiracy to underestimate enemy strength in Vietnam, calls CBS News' investigation in response to criticism of the program "an incredible whitewash."

Westmoreland, commander of American forces in Indochina during the Vietnam War, reacted angrily Thursday to a CBS memorandum that accepted the findings of "The Uncounted Enemy: A Vietnam Deception," while, at the same time, admitting mistakes in the way the information was gathered and assembled.

Van Gordon Sauter, president of CBS News, conceded the program may have been wrong in using the word "conspiracy" with regard to the underestimation of enemy strength, but he declared, "CBS News stands by this broadcast."

Sauter said in a staff memo, also distributed to the media, that "there were some violations of the letter and spirit of CBS News standards in the preparation of this broadcast."

In an interview, Sauter said: "We're not walking away from the broadcast. ... The substance of the broadcast was sound."

USDA Report Shows Farm Income Falling

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has published revised figures showing what most farmers already know from first-hand experience — their incomes declined sharply the past two years.

But the new "Agricultural Outlook" report, which was issued Thursday by the department's Economic Research Service, dodged the 1982 farm income question as it has since early this year. Officials have been saying, however, that farm income prospects look dim for the third straight year.

The revised figures for 1981 and the two preceding years will provide important comparisons when USDA issues its official preliminary farm income estimates for 1982 in a couple of months.

Those figures, regardless of how such statistics may bore the casual observer, will help form the framework for lively political debate this fall as candidates storm into farm areas to defend or attack the Reagan administration's farm policies.

The statistics also help members of Congress and their staffs develop legislative packages of all sorts, ranging from price supports to rural housing.

Department economists have several methods of looking at and publishing farm income information on a national basis. One of the traditional ways is to look at "net farm income before inventory adjustment."

That is derived by totaling the dollars farmers take in from selling crops and livestock during the year — cash receipts — and adding direct government payments, income from recreation, machine hire and custom work, and making an allowance for "non-money" income such as values placed on the rental value of farm dwellings and farm products consumed on the farm.

In 1981, according to the new analysis, those items meant a gross farm income of around $161.2 billion.

Farm production expenses, meanwhile, added up to about $141.6 billion.

Thus, according to the report, net farm income last year was $19.6 billion.

By that system of accounting, the revised figures showed that net farm income in 1981 dropped by nearly 20 percent from $24.4 billion in calendar 1980 and almost 27 percent from net earnings of $26.7 billion in 1979. Farm income rose in 1979 from $25.6 billion in 1978.

Another method includes making an allowance for the unsold crops and livestock farmers have on hand, resulting in "net income after inventory adjustment."

For example, if a farmer had 100 bushels of wheat worth $300 on hand in 1980 and had 200 bushels worth $600 in storage in 1981, the additional $300 would show up in the income calculations.

Last year, according to the report, there was an increase of about $5.5 billion in inventories, mostly due to the record harvests in 1981.

Thus, net farm income after adjusting for inventories was reported at $25.1 billion, a sharp increase from $20.1 billion in 1980 when inventories plummeted $4.3 billion because of short crops and other factors.

In 1979, under that system of reporting, net farm income after inventory adjustment rose to a revised level of $32.4 billion from $25.4 billion in 1978.

Another system involves only cash accounting and does not take into consideration allowances for changes in inventories, depreciation or benefits provided hired laborers.

The report said that under this method "net cash farm income" last year was $31.5 billion, a 12 percent decline from $35.8 billion in 1980 and 15 percent below the level of $37 billion in 1979.

Quotas Are Top Income Source

RALEIGH — A study in two counties by the North Carolina Agricultural Research Service shows that tobacco allotment holders who no longer grow tobacco are primarily elderly, longtime county residents who depend heavily on leasing out their quota as a source of income.

Slightly over 95 percent of the respondents in a survey listed quota leasing as a major source of income to replace tobacco earnings after they stopped growing the crop, said Dr. Michael D. Schulman, assistant professor of sociology and anthropology at North Carolina State University.

Schulman and a co-worker, Gigi Berardi, now with the University of Maryland, obtained completed questionnaires in the summer of 1980 from 116 persons who no longer grow tobacco but still hold allotments. Of these, 35 were in Greene County and 81 in Wayne County. The survey response rate was a very favorable 68 percent.

The mean age of the sample group was 63 years, with a range from 34 to 99 years. Two-thirds of the sample were male. Most had lived in their present county of residence for more than 42 years. The entire sample had completed an average of 9.8 years of school.

About 53 percent of the non-producing allotment holders were retired, 30 percent had off-farm employment, 6 percent still listed themselves as farm operators, and 11 percent — mostly older widows — identified themselves as housewives.

In one-half of the households surveyed, total income from all sources in 1979 was less than $10,000 a year. Sixty percent of those aged 65 and older, and 46 percent of those aged 55-64, had household incomes under $10,000.

In the youngest age group (45 and under), 72 percent had household incomes over $20,000. In many of these households, two or more persons were earning incomes.

Why had the allotment holders stopped growing tobacco? The most imprtant reason cited was retirement. About 17 percent listed health; 13 percent, labor problems and 11 percent, off-farm employment.

Nearly 10 percent found leasing out quota more profitable than growing it. About 14 percent had inherited their quota and never started producing it.

The average size of tobacco allotments leased and transferred out by survey respondents in 1979 was 4.98 acres. More than 80 percent of the respondents controlled allotments of less than nine acres. These allotments are small in size compared with tobacco production units in the Coastal Plain today.

"It appears that the small size of allotments controlled by the survey respondents may be a major factor in their decision to stop growing tobacco and lease out the quota," Schulman said.

Rental earnings from lease and transfer in 1979 averaged 44 cents per pound, or $4,502 per allotment holder. For the entire sample, the share of total household income accounted for by earnings from lease and transfer was 58 percent. Elderly households were especially dependent upon these earnings, it was found.

More than half of the respondents were receiving payments from special services, primarily social security retirement income. A few were on disability or other unspecified types of special service income.

None of the respondents in either county reported food stamps of workmen's compensation as a source of income.

Allotment holders who had turned to the production of other crops were growing primarily corn and soybeans for cash sale and vegetables for home use.

It was found that those leasing out their quota are unlikely to start producing tobacco again, especially since their allotments for the most part are too small for mechanized production.

"It's difficult to generalize about whether the allotment holders in this study have successfully made the transition out of agriculture. But the study does show that without the provision, for lease and transfer of tobacco quota, the adjustment process would be very difficult.

Coed Wins Internship

RALEIGH — Jill Cutler of Farmville is one of 115 college students awarded a 10-week state government internship.

Ms. Cutler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard E. Cutler of Route 2, Farmville, is working in the public affairs office of the Department of Community Colleges in Raleigh.

The intership program offers students opportunities to learn about government and public service professions. Over 600 college students applied for internships.

Ms. Cutler is a senior business administration and communications major at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. She is president of the UNCG chapter of Delta Sigma Pi, a professional business fraternity, and is editor of the North Carolina Student Legislature statewide newsletter. She is also a member of the university's honor society, Golden Chain.

Court Guides Available

North Carolina's Administrative Office of the Courts has made available two new sources of information designed to help witnesses and victims understand courtroom procedures.

An 11-page Witness-Victim Handbook describes in simple language the trial courts' structure, the categories of criminal offenses, trial procedures, and suggestions to assist the witness in giving accurate, responsive testimony while minimizing the difficulties brought on by tension and unfamiliarity with the courts.

Some 75,000 copies of the Witness-Victim Handbook have been issued to the 34 District Attorneys' offices across the state for distribution during a trial period of use.

The second source of witness information is printed on the reverse side of the regular subpoena form used by the courts to notify persons that they are to appear in court to provide testimony in specific cases. The information contained on the back of the subpoena form is a greatly condensed verson of some of the information contained in the handbook concerning the responsibilities of and protection afforded a witness.

Administrative Director Franklin Freeman said, "Witnesses should know what to expect in the courtroom and how to carry out their responsibilities in the trial of cases. We hope these two sources of information will assist witnesses to avoid tension and confusion that they may experience due to unfamiliarity with the courtroom ... and help witnesses understand the vital importance of their role as 'citizen participants' in the operation of North Carolina's trial courts."

Study Cites Areas Of 'Dirty Air'

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Environmentalists are crying foul over a business report claiming that two-thirds of the country could face plant construction bans and federal spending sanctions because of dirty air.

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce issued a study Thursday that said more than 155 million people are living in areas that do not meet national health standards for air pollution.

The federal government has the power under the Clean Air Act to ban construction of major industries and withhold highway construction money and clean air grants in counties which either fail to meet national standards by Dec. 31 or don't have an approved plan for cleaning up their air.

The chamber said such restrictions, facing 608 counties in every state except North Dakota, would jeopardize "billions of dollars of construction projects" and cost the loss of thousands of new jobs.

Environmentalists said the chamber was employing "scare tactics" by neglecting to point out that the federal government has been very lenient in the past in using its enforcement powers.

The chamber's report, based on data compiled by the Environmental Protection Agency, said 135 counties in 20 states are subject to federal sanctions at the present time because they do not have approved plans for cleaning up their air.

While those plans were supposed to have been in place by July 1, 1979, conservationists contend the EPA has seldom imposed sanctions, preferring instead to work with the states to get acceptable plans submitted.

The chamber said another 473 counties are not meeting national standards for one or more of five air pollutants.

If they are still in noncompliance for three of the pollutants on Dec. 31, they could face sanctions also. For the other two car-related pollutants — carbon monoxide and ozone — states can get the deadline extended to 1988 if they agree to take such measures as implementing car exhaust inspection progams.

Business interests are currently lobbying Congress to extend the current deadlines by up to six years and weaken the sanctions the federal government can impose.

The Clean Air Coalition, a group of environmental groups fighting against these changes, said the chamber's listing was an effort to bring pressure on Congress.

"They are using scare tactics. There won't be a single job lost if Dec. 31 comes and goes and the Clean Air Act is not changed," said Bob Rose, of the coalition.

EPA spokesman Byron Nelson said EPA Administrator Anne Gorsuch has repeatedly stated her intention to enforce the law, but he said actually imposing sanctions would only come after many months of review.

But Dr. Harvey Alter, a chamber environmental scientist, said, "Obviously, the Clean Air Act needs to be changed. The construction ban has no place in this country. It is inherently unfair punishment of communities and does not clean the air."

RJR Lists Record Sales

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — R.J. Reynolds Industries Inc. has reported net sales and revenues of $3.12 billion for the second quarter, the highest quarterly sales in the company's history.

The $3.12 billion in net sales and revenues reflected a 5.1 percent increase over the same period a year ago, said J. Paul Sticht, Reynolds' chairman and chief executive officer.

"The company's domestic tobacco, energy and shipping units performed well during the second quarter, and we are satisfied with our overall operating results, particularly since they were achieved during such an arduous period for business in general," Sticht said.

Sticht said consolidated earnings from operations were $409 million, up 8.5 percent from the 1981 quarter. Net earnings of $295 million were up 48 percent due largely to a a $179.8 million arbitration award paid by the government of Kuwait for Reynolds' oil properties, which were nationalized in 1977. The nonrecurring gain contributed 87 cents per share to earnings after taxes.

Earnings per common share were $2.74, up 51 percent from the same period a year ago.

Reynolds' sales in the first half of 1982 were $5.99 billion, up 4.3 percent from a year earlier. Net earnings in the first half were $480 million, up 24 percent.

"Continued growth in our domestic cigarette volume and market share over the comparable period, strong transportation earnings performance and continued good energy earnings were the highlights of the company's first half results," Sticht said.

Domestic tobacco sales increased in the second quarter because of higher selling prices and record-setting unit volume, he said. International tobacco sales increased because of higher selling prices.

The money from Kuwait was paid under terms of an international arbitration panel's decision in April. Sticht said the money provides an opportunity to increase marketing activities in certain areas.

"We have begun to strengthen the marketing programs behind proven performers in our tobacco businesses and accelerate new product introductions supporting Del Monte's transition to a consumer-oriented marketing operation," he said.

Sales for Del Monte, the firm's food-producing business, were down slightly during the quarter, he said.

Sticht said about $17 million of the award would be used for marketing programs in the second quarter. Some of the money may be used to expand investment in energy properties for Aminoil, he said.

FOCUS

Leading Lady

While Susan B. Anthony, Harriet Tubman and Eleanor Roosevelt are well remembered for their contributions to humanity, the late Frances Perkins is today largely forgotten. But her influence is still strongly felt. She was the first woman to serve in a Presidential Cabinet. For 12 years she was Secretary of Labor under Franklin Roosevelt and Harry Truman. She also served as chairman of FDR's Committee on Economic Security, whose report led to the creation of the Social Security Administration. As a fighter for better labor conditions and one of the chief architects of the New Deal, tomorrow Frances Perkins will be inducted into the National Women's Hall of Fame in Seneca Falls, New York.

DO YOU KNOW — What famous event took place in Seneca Falls?

Film Fair Is A Fast Draw

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — While only true western-film fans have heard of such movies as "Boss of Hangtown Mesa" or "Marshall of Mesa City," Charlotte's Western Film Fair has made the "B" classics a fast draw for years.

"These films were made in two weeks or so. When the money ran out, the shooting stopped," said Wayne Short, president of the sponsoring Western Film Preservation Society. "But some big stars — Roy Rogers, John Wayne, Randolph Scott — made these serials. Some of 'em still hold up."

Short keeps the old cowboys from riding into the sunset every year, bringing heroes like Lash LaRue, George Montgomery and Fay McKenzie from their screen roles into the Radisson Hotel where they meet their fans.

This year's edition of the fair, running Thursday through Saturday, includes four screening rooms, a flea market stocked with western memorabilia and a panel of western stars every day. And Short hopes to be able to continue the annual event.

"We play these things by ear from year to year," he said. "As long as we break even, we'll keep putting them on. We'd like to make some money, but so far..."

This year, Short and his partners have assembled a bigger line-up of oldtime stars than Charlotte's two previous western-film festivals. At the banquet closing the fair Saturday night, western-style musicians Pee Wee King and The Tennessee Ramblers will perform in a musical revue.

"The first criteria in inviting guests is whether they made legitimate B westerns," Short said.

Many of the western stars will attend screenings of their pictures, including Fred Kirby Grant, better known as "Sky King," Cal Shrum, Alta Lee, Jock Mahoney and Herb Jeffries, western films' first black cowboy.

"These guys love coming here," Short said. "They say there's no thrill like being recognized by a fan."

HUD To Study Housing Linked To Candidate

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — The inspector general's office of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development in Atlanta has confirmed that it will investigate a federally financed housing project linked to congressional candidate H.M. "Mickey" Michaux.

The Burlington Times-News reported on June 23 that the department violated its own guidelines to approve a multimillion dollar, low-interest loan for the luxury apartment complex called Century Oaks.

Michaux, the U.S. Attorney in Greensboro from July 1977 to June 1981 under President Carter, laid the groundwork for Century Oaks, department sources said. Michaux, 51, is a candidate for the 2nd Congressional District.

The project is owned by the Michaux family, two doctors and a contractor. Developers divided their project into two stages.

Department sources told the Times-News that department officials violated guidelines when, in approving a $7.3 million loan, they failed to make a market study to see whether the apartment complex would be profitable. Records show that many apartments are vacant.

For the first 184 apartments, the owners were loaned $6 million at 7.5 percent interest. After Michaux visited the Greensboro HUD office during his term as U.S. attorney, the project was guaranteed another $7.3 million at 9¾ percent interest for 184 more apartments.

Officials approving the second loan overlooked problems Century Oaks was having in renting the first 184 apartments, where 80 were empty, the Times-News reported.

The apartments are not designed for low-income families, the elderly or the handicapped. If the apartments turn a profit, the owners keep it. If they are a financial failure, the loan is insured by taxpayers through the housing department.

Century Oaks is managed by Union Insurance & Realty Co. Michaux was senior vice president of that firm until his presidential appointment. Michaux is once again associated with the company.

Michaux said, "I don't know the inner workings of Century Oaks." He also denied any vested interest in the development.

In his May 1982 campaign financial report, Michaux claimed $4,302 in income from Union Insurance.

Socialist Workers Placed On Ballot

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Socialist Workers Party will offer only one candidate on North Carolina's general election ballot this year, but the party's biggest race was just to get on the ballot.

The SWP was guaranteed a spot on the ballot by the state Board of Elections on Wednesday when the board certified that the party had gained the necessary 5,000 petition signatures.

State Elections Director Alex Brock said the certification also guarantees the Socialist Workers Party will be on the ballot through the 1984 elections, when SWP expects to field candidates for president and U.S. Senate.

Besides the Democratic and Republican parties, the Libertarian Party has also been assured of a spot on the November ballot. It has nominated candidates in each of the 11 congressional districts, according to state elections officials.

Meryl Lynn Farber, 25, of Winston-Salem, the SWP nominee for Congress in the 5th District, said the Socialist Workers Party would have no other candidates for congressional, legislative, judicial or local offices this year.

"At this point we're not running any other campaigns," she said. "We want to run one, really good, serious campaign here. Also, our (party) headquarters is in the 5th District."

Ms. Farber, an assembly line worker at Gilbarco Inc. in Greensboro, described the Socialist Workers Party as having 35 to 40 members in North Carolina.

Brock said there were no voters registered in the Socialist Workers Party because it was not a certified party until the board's action.

State Elections Board Chairman Robert Spearman said the Socialist Workers Party had 5,063 valid signatures of registered voters on petitions seeking a spot on the ballot.

The party successfully challenged in federal court this year a 1981 state law that required anyone signing a petition on behalf of a new party to have their voter registration affiliation switched to that of the new party.

The good book tells us that there is nothing new under the sun. But that does not mean that old chestnuts are no longer effective.

This hand is from the 1982 Icelandic Bridge Festival. Three no trump was a popular North-South contract, reached on an auction such as the above. A heart was the usual lead.

At most tables declarer won the opening heart lead with the jack and led a club to the queen, which held. With no convenient way back to hand, the declarer led a diamond to the queen. West won the king, and convinced that there was no future in hearts, shifted to the ten of spades.

Declarer held up the ace for one round, won the spade continuation, then cashed the ace of diamonds. He overtook the ten of diamonds, discarded two spades on the thirteenth diamond and high heart, and then led a club. As a result, he managed to scramble nine tricks.

One of the declarers found the way to eleven tricks for an excellent score. He won the first trick with the king of hearts! He, too, led a club to the queen and then a diamond from the table to the queen and West's king. But here West thought that he had struck gold with his opening lead — he felt sure that his partner held the jack of hearts and there was no need to shift to another suit; he wanted to set up his suit while he still held the ace of clubs.

West's heart continuation was won by declarer's jack. Now another club allowed declarer to set up the suit and collect eleven tricks. No big deal at rubber bridge, but in a pairs tournament that proved to be a top board.

Those of you with long memories might recall that you read about this deceptive play here first, more than forty years ago!

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't?
