

Florida Hunters Take Up Trek

THE EVERGLADES, Fla. (AP) — Hundreds of hunters and animal-rescue workers in airboats and haltrucks returned to the Everglades today for the second day of a state-ordered "mercy hunt" to thin out a deer herd threatened with starvation because of flooding.

Sgt. Dick Lawrence of the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission said hunters on 628 airboats had taken part in the hunt Sunday, and "we presume there will be a little less today."

Sunday's hunt left gunners content with their boatloads of venison, but animal protectionists frustrated in their attempts to capture at least 100 of the emaciated animals.

As night fell across the Everglades on Sunday, game wardens reported that hunters had shot and tagged 241 does, 171 bucks and 169 fawns, while wildlife preservationists captured alive only 14 of the thousands of deer state officials say are in danger of starvation.

The growl of distant thunder, the whine of airboats and the smell of broiling deer meat filled the roadside air Sunday as hunters returned from the sea of grass toting skinned and gutted animals. No arrests were made for violations of hunting rules, and there were no reports of injuries among the estimated 1,600 hunters.

Thigh-high water in the 10,000-acre swamp has covered grazing ground, and state game officials said the two-day hunt — aimed at killing 1,500 animals — is needed for the herd of 5,500 deer to avoid mass starvation.

"Good eating. Not bad for a low-down Bambi killer," declared Dick Kempton, a 37-year-old roofer from Homestead, taking a swig of beer after game wardens at mile marker 72 hoisted a 71-pound doe he had felled onto a butcher's scale and read its weight aloud.

Wildlife preservationists — led by The Wildlife Fund's Cleveland Amory and the National Wildlife Rescue Team's Jack Kasewitz — rallied three miles to the east.

Under an agreement with the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission, protectionist groups have until noon Tuesday to capture 100 deer. If they fail, commission executive director Col. Robert Branly said he will open another tract to hunters to reduce the size of the herd by another 750.

By 7 p.m., Amory and Kasewitz's 20 airboats were 86 deer short of their goal.

"Numbers aren't what's important," said Kasewitz, holding down a bucking 2-year-old doe in a van. "Saving animals is what's important. If we get one out, we've shown the world it can be done."

The captured animals were hooded, given a sedative and driven to an animal shelter or to Lion Country Safari park near West Palm Beach.

Two unidentified hunters rescued a 25-pound fawn from an isolated clump of trees, then turned it over to game officials for relocation.

"Even hunters have hearts," said game commission Lt. Biff Lampton.

The hunt had been stayed by U.S. District Judge Eugene Spellman at the request of animal protection groups, but he decided Saturday to let it proceed. The protection groups had argued that the deer could be relocated, but proponents of the hunt said previous efforts

Pitt Tax Bills To Go Out Earlier

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners this morning voiced their approval of a proposal to send county tax bills out earlier this year.

The board's approval came after county Tax Collector Bill Smith recommended sending the tax notices out during the last week of this month or the first week in August this year. In the past, Smith said, the bills for taxes due Sept. 1 have been mailed about mid-September.

Smith suggested that, although no penalty is charged on the late payment of current year's taxes until January, the mailing of the bills earlier might produce more revenue.

Commissioners also adopted a resolution asking the North Carolina Association of County Commissioners to seek action by the General Assembly which would give to the counties the same licensing authority enjoyed by municipal governments.

At present, counties are restricted in their authority while municipal governments have broad powers to license various businesses.

Board members adopted a resolution asking the department of transportation to pave the driveway at the new Carolina Township Fire Department Substation on N.C. 903 near the Beaufort County line, and certified the list of active fire department members in the counties.

By certifying the list of firemen, the 650 firefighters on the list become eligible for the $25,000 state-paid death benefit if killed in the line of duty.

In other action, commissioners rejected a request by representatives of an insurance company wishing to sell cancer insurance to county employees by meeting with them during working hours and extended the educational leave granted to Margaret Foust for one year.

Georgia-Florida

Quality Leaf Expected For Start Of Auctions

ATLANTA (AP) — When the Georgia-Florida tobacco auctions open Wednesday, Georgia flue-cured tobacco growers will offer a high-quality crop that could signal the state's return as a leader in tobacco quality, an expert says.

Georgia growers have been hampered by drought in recent years, but they enjoyed enough rain — but not too much — and favorable temperatures this season, said David Newton, a tobacco specialist with the state Department of Agriculture.

Meanwhile, parts of Virginia and the Carolinas had excessive rain and cool weather earlier in the season. Those conditions can produce tobacco that is thin and light as well as lacking in the body and flavor prized by export buyers, Newton said.

Georgia's tobacco should be superior in quality and per-acre yield to that from the Carolinas and Virginia, Newton said.

"Georgia has been known for years to produce a good-bodied, high-aroma tobacco. But over the last several years, we have somewhat lost that reputation," he said. "This year it looks like Georgia farmers have a chance to lead the market...it looks especially good this year."

Export buyers once sought Georgia's tobacco for European cigarette manufacturers to blend with lower-quality tobacco from other countries, he said.

"The time came when Georgia tobacco was just stacked up alongside North Carolina's or Virginia's or South Carolina's," he said.

A decade ago, Georgia tobacco brought a higher price than North Carolina tobacco, but that had been reversed by last year, Newton said.

Bomb Shipment Still On Refinery Explosion Hurts 14

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has not decided whether to delay a scheduled shipment of cluster bombs to Israel, deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said today.

However, officials at the White House indicated a decision might be made by the end of the day.

A shipment of 4,000 rounds of the munitions, designed for use in 155-millimeter howitzers, was reportedly scheduled to go forward today unless blocked by the president.

Although Speakes said "there's really no deadline," there was no dispute that today had been a delivery target.

"The president has not made a decision on the shipment of the next supply," Speakes told reporters this morning.

The spokesman said the administration was "reviewing all aspects of the Middle East situation and our supplies" being sent to Israel. "We will continue to consult with Congress and keep them informed."

Asked about meetings that Secretary of State George P. Shultz held with former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, Speakes said there was no plan to involve Kissinger in Middle East peace efforts.

Reagan and Shultz will confer at the White House Tuesday with Prince Saud al Faisal, foreign minister of Saudi Arabia, and Abdul Halim Khaddam, foreign minister of Syria.

Reagan was to confer later today with the National Security Council.

The administration has turned to the Arab world for help in finding a haven for the estimated 8,000 Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas bottled up in west Beirut by Israel's invasion force.

While Reagan has offered to send American forces to Lebanon to aid in the evacuation of PLO fighters, no Arab country has offered the PLO refuge. In letters to the leaders of Saudi Arabia, Egypt and Syria, Reagan has asked for constructive ideas about the resettlement issue.

For their part, the Saudi and Syrian ministers plan to tell Reagan of their concern about Lebanon.

Lebanon radio said the Lebanese government expects Reagan to try to persuade Syria to take the guerrillas on a temporary basis, despite Syria's public insistence the PLO should remain in Lebanon.

Dutch radio quoted Khaddam, during a stopover in Amsterdam, as saying his country is willing to admit the PLO's leaders but won't shelter the 8,000 rank-and-file fighters.

Khaddam reiterated Syria's position that it was not in the PLO's best interest to leave Lebanon and said he would ask Reagan to "exert real pressure" on Israel to withdraw its troops, Dutch radio said.

Returning from a weekend at Camp David, Reagan said Sunday the administration had turned to Kissinger and other outside experts for their advice about the Middle East, which also is inflamed by the Iran-Iraq war.

"There have been no decisions or plans or anything of that kind," Reagan said, when asked if he would tap the former secretary of state for a special mission to the Middle East.

Secretary of State Shultz held a lengthy meeting Saturday with Kissinger. Reagan said Shultz and National Security Adviser William P. Clark had "asked a few people like that to come in and have a meeting and get their thoughts on what's going on."

Shultz, who was sworn in to office Friday, also met with Israeli Ambassador Moshe Arens and Egyptian Ambassador Ashraf Ghorbal on Saturday.

Shultz and Kissinger served together in the Nixon administration, and make no secret of their admiration for each other's skills. As secretary of state, Kissinger made Middle East diplomacy his trademark.

Israel Says Used Cluster Bombs

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israel has told the United States it used cluster bombs only against military targets in Lebanon, Israeli officials said today.

The Palestine Liberation Organization has accused the Israelis of using the controversial deadly weapons against heavily civilian areas in their six-week-old invasion of Lebanon.

The Israeli officials, who declined to be identified, said it is up to Washington to decide whether to make public Israel's explanations of its use of the controversial bombs.

The Israeli government messaged its explanations to Washington over the weekend in response to demands by the Reagan administration, which said Israel may have violated the terms under which it bought the American-made bombs.

State-run Israel radio said in a broadcast today that "urgent contacts" are expected between Jerusalem and Washington to prevent any embargo on cluster-bomb shipments.

The bombs are projectiles that open up just before impact and spread hundreds of "bomblets" over the target area. They are particularly effective against enemy anti-aircraft and similar positions, but critics contend the bomb's indiscriminate coverage of large areas makes its use in civilian areas reckless and inhumane.

The Israeli officials said the cluster bombs had been used in Lebanon "only for defensive purposes." Israel radio quoted the message to Washington as saying the bombs were aimed only at Syrian and Palestinian military targets.

Refinery Explosion Hurts 14

BAYTOWN, Texas (AP) — Firefighters poured foam and water today on a stubborn fire at a small petroleum refinery after an explosion injured 14 people and blew out windows at a nearby nursing home, authorities said.

The blast and flames Sunday night at the Chemical Exchange Industries plant sent a thick plume of black smoke billowing above the fringes of this southeast Texas city.

The explosion blew out most windows at the St. James House nursing home about one-quarter mile from the plant, said administrator Elizabeth Alexander. She said one man received four stitches after being hit by a shard of flying glass.

About 20 of 86 patients were moved from the home "because most of our rooms' windows have been blown out," Ms. Alexander said.

"We now have determined only one tank was involved (in the fire)," said Larry Patterson, assistant city manager. "We have determined that whatever is burning is diesel-based. It's under control so we're not worried."

Patterson said the industrial section where the plant is located is bordered by a residential area, but said evacuations would not be necessary.

Earlier, officials feared a nearby ammonia tank would explode before they got the fire under control.

The 6:29 p.m. explosion also shattered windows at some local businesses and troopers were dispatched to prevent looting and help detour traffic, said Larry Todd of the Texas Department of Public Safety.

Four men with serious burns were flown by helicopter to hospitals. Five more were taken by ambulance, hospital spokeswoman said.

Gene Redus and Rick Booher were both in critical condition after being flown to Galveston's John Sealy Hospital, spokeswoman Martha Grisham said.

OK, WHERE DO I START? — Dr. Eddie West, superintendent of Pitt County schools, scans his phone files today during his first morning on the job. The new superintendent met with central office staff and principals and scribed his first day as "very pleasing." (Reflector Staff Photo)

TAKE DOWN POSTERS

Why don't the committees that put up the posters for political candidates take responsibility for taking them down instead of letting them stay up and get shabby? They're fast becoming eyesores all over the county. I think the public should, for future reference, keep in minds which candidates' posters stay up. The same could apply for special events posters, also. Those who put them up should see that they're taken down when they're out of date. S.R.

Former City Man Honored

DURHAM — A former Greenville man was honored at the 21st annual North Carolina Rescue College held at the Durham Public Safety training center Saturday and Sunday.

Dawson Nethercutt, a former member of the fire department and rescue squad in Greenville, was awarded a life membership in the N.C. Association of Rescue Squads for his contributions to the rescue service in the state.

Nethercutt, who now lives in Chapel Hill, retired last year as supervisor of training for the N.C. Department of Insurance's Fire and Rescue Services Division. He had served as director of the Rescue College for a number of years before his retirement.

The N.C. Rescue College, founded in Greenville, moved to Raleigh after four years because facilities in Greenville were not adequate for the number of students attending the school. The site of the school was moved to Durham's Public Safety Academy several years ago for the same reason.

Four other former members of the Greenville Rescue Squad served as staff instructors for the rescue school over the weekend. They included Wilburn Small of Wilson, an instructor with the Insurance Department's Fire and Rescue Services Division, Joe Burris of Newton, a paramedic with the Catawba County EMS system, Harold Ross of Greenville, road maintenance supervisor for the Department of Transportation in Pitt County, and Stuart Savage of Greenville, a staff writer for The Daily Reflector.

Nethercutt and Savage are the only two rescue college staff instructors left who taught at the first of the rescue college sessions in 1962.

All five of the former Greenville squad members participated as members of championship first aid and rescue teams fielded by the Greenville Rescue Squad which disbanded several years ago.

Thirteen Pitt County residents attended the session in Durham as students over the weekend. They included Tony Smart, Allen Hill, Garrett Phipps, Linwood Hines, Kenneth Adams, Chuck Owens, Donald Young and Walter Salisbury, all members of the Greenville Fire-Rescue Department, and Ervin Hardee, Bill Whiteford, Sandy Harris, Buddy Ipock and Brent Stocks, all members of the newly formed Eastern Pines

Rescue Squad.

Included in the subjects taught at the college over the weekend were such things as casualty handling, fire extinguishers, ladders from heights, the proper use of ladders, the use of power and hand tools, rigging and breathing equipment.

In all, some 411 students were registered for first, second and graduate level classes over the weekend. Classes will be held July 24-25 for third and fourth level and graduate classes.

Church Finds, Returns Stash

NORWALK, Calif. (AP) — A retired ballroom owner thought a robbery several years ago had wiped out his $24,100 in savings, but he got a lucky break — and the money — when a church pastor found it stuck in an old safe.

The cash was returned Sunday to Olen Thibedeau at Community Chapel World Outreach Church, in a service held under the same chandeliers that once lit the dance floor of his Golden West Ballroom.

The room, now filled with red velvet theater seats, rang with applause as some 700 churchgoers watched the Rev. Esther Mallett hand Thibedeau his money. Church officials found it tucked in a safe that Thibedeau had sold to them along with his ballroom, once billed as the biggest west of the Mississippi.

"It was really exciting," church secretary Marsha Mason said. "He came up all smiles and received the money and said the pastor was a very honest woman. In turn, he counted out $2,000 and gave it to the pastor. Then they hugged and everybody applauded."

In a robbery which Thibedeau said took place "four or five years ago," thieves cleaned out a safe in his office. Thibedeau assumed that besides $38,000 in cash receipts, the robbers had also taken envelopes containing a 16-year accumulation of "spare change" converted into $50 and $100 bills, plus a $5,000 cashier's check made out to him.

In 1979, Thibedeau sold the ballroom to the nondenominational church and retired to Capistrano Beach.

That would have been the end of the story, except that three weeks ago, church financial secretary Virginia Macauley discovered the cash wedged in the back and top of the safe.

It apparently had stuck in a drop-in chute and became dislodged when the safe was being moved with a crane, Ms. Mason said.

When Mrs. Mallett heard about it, she asked Thibedeau to come by for a visit, then told him what she found.

"I didn't even know she was going to give it to me," Thibedeau said last Wednesday. "I thought she was just showing me what she got. But she said, 'You come to church Sunday and you'll get it back.'"

After the church choir opened the service by singing "Hey, I'm a Believer Now," and "God Cares," Mrs. Mallett told the congregation the story of the found money. Then she presented it to Thibedeau.

Thibedeau, who did not answer his home phone Sunday, said earlier he doesn't expect to keep much of the find. "My ex-wife called me and said she's going to sue me for half," he said, and he expects the Internal Revenue Service to put in a claim as well.

But he'll soon be getting back his $2,000 donation, Ms. Mason said.

"We owe Mr. Thibedeau for our annual payment and I'm quite sure it will be used," she explained. The church is "between $20,000 and $30,000 short" of a $100,000 payment due Aug. 1, she said.

Delayed Veterans' Welcome Set

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vietnam veterans from across America are being urged to come to Washington in November for the welcome home they never got.

The Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund, the chief sponsor, believes 100,000 veterans will participate in the four-day "National Salute to Vietnam Veterans" that will start on Veterans Day, Nov. 11. The Pentagon says nearly 9 million Americans served in Southeast Asia between 1965 and 1973.

Unlike the combatants of earlier wars, returning Vietnam veterans found no parades awaiting them. More likely, they were met by hostility or indifference.

A 1980 Veterans Administration survey of Vietnam veterans found much bitterness about their experience.

Twenty-four percent of those surveyed said they agreed with the sentiment, "The United States took unfair advantage of me" and 30 percent said they would refuse to serve again if asked.

The people behind the fund had hoped that the gathering would mark the dedication of a $6 million Vietnam veterans memorial, now being built on the grassy Mall, between the Washington Monument and the Lincoln Memorial.

But the memorial won't be completed in time because of a decision to meet the complaint of veterans who did not like the original austere design. A flag and a larger-than-life statue of three soldiers will be added.

Nonetheless, veterans and their families will be able to visit the monument, with its black granite walls meeting in a V and bearing the names of 57,692 Americans who died in the war and the 2,500 still listed as missing.

In addition, Vietnam veterans will participate in the traditional wreath-laying at Arlington Cemetery on Nov. 11; will be honored that night by a U.S. Army band concert; will have unit reunions; will parade in units composed of veterans from each state on Saturday along Constitution Avenue; and will honor their fallen comrades at a religious service Sunday at the Washington Cathedral. Show business figures who helped entertain the troops will do so again.

Pentagon historian Fred Beck says most U.S. wars ended with parades and displays of great affection for the warriors.

But the Korean War and Vietnam were different because troops came home alone, rather than in units, when their tours of duty ended.

Tanker Leak Being Studied

SOUTH CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Several days of broiling sun may have caused a pressure buildup in a railroad tank car that leaked poisonous fumes, injuring up to 20 people, a chemist says.

Two hundred people were evacuated before emergency crews capped the leak and isolated the tanker Sunday afternoon, towing it to the Union Carbide Technical Center, a petrochemical plant.

The cause of the leak, which began at about 6 p.m. Saturday, was not immediately known. But officials speculated that several days of 90-degree heat caused pressure to build up inside the Du Pont tanker.

Broken Water Main Repaired

JERSEY CITY, N.J. (AP) — More than 300,000 people had running water again today after a hot, thirsty weekend caused by a burst main, but residents were warned not to drink it until the system is purged.

Jersey City Mayor Gerald McCann announced Sunday that water was again snaking through the city's 300 miles of pipes, which usually supply 65 million gallons each day.

Some residents of New Jersey's second-largest city have been without drinking water since late Thursday, when an aging main ruptured beneath a marsh in nearby Secaucus.

State and municipal health department officials were testing today for sediment and bacteria they feared had contaminated the system serving 225,000 people in Jersey City and more than 75,000 in Hoboken and parts of Lyndhurst and West Caldwell.

The burst pipe was fixed in a 2½-hour patch job early Sunday, as workers welded a steel plate over a 1-by-2-foot hole in the 6-foot-wide galvanized steel aqueduct supplying the city from a reservoir in rural Morris County.

The entire 26-mile aqueduct system had to be pumped dry so workers could perform the repair.

Residents of the city, across the Hudson River from New York, spent hours Sunday lined up to fill jugs, soda bottles and buckets at "water buffalos," 400-gallon tanks on wheels filled with potable water by the National Guard.

I LOVE THE NEW ME

Let me introduce myself and tell you about one of the most important happenings in my life. I'm Laura Willoughby, a junior high teacher in the Pitt County School System, and I have just lost 54 lbs. This weight loss has changed my life. Not only am I happier with my appearance, my children tell me that I am easier to live with, and my physician is very impressed with my weight loss, my lower blood pressure, and the general improved state of my health. He had been telling me for years that I had to do something about my weight and my blood pressure.

Well, I knew the time had come. I HAD TO LOSE WEIGHT, but I knew that I could not do it by myself. I began investigating the options available to me. I knew that some of the group weight loss programs were nutritionally sound, but I felt that my problem was a private one. Therefore, I compared the private weight loss programs available in the area, and I chose DIET CENTER for the following reasons:

1. THERE WERE NO CONTRACTS. I did not have to pay a large sum of money in advance and obligate myself for any specific period of time. I had tried so many plans, and nothing worked for me so naturally I was skeptical. At DIET CENTER seeing my weight come down daily made a believer out of me.

2. THERE WERE NO SHOTS, DRUGS, OR CHEMICALS USED AT DIET CENTER. What I found there was a well-balanced nutritionally sound diet and a behavior modification program to help me keep the weight off.

3. THERE WERE NO PRE-PACKAGED FOODS AT DIET CENTER. I lost my weight without having to buy expensive extra foods. I shopped at my regular food store, and my family was able to eat right along with me.

4. THERE WAS NO NEED FOR BODY WRAPS OR RIGID EXERCISE PROGRAMS. By following the well-balanced diet at DIET CENTER, I found my body tightened up naturally. While DIET CENTER does suggest that exercises such as walking be added to my daily routine, no rigid exercise program or body wraps are necessary or inch loss. As my weight came down, the inches seemed to melt away.

5. AT DIET CENTER I DID NOT FEEL DEPRIVED. I was not hungry. I did not experience nervousness or fatigue. I feel great, and my friends tell me that I look great.

SUMMARY: Diet Center offers a program of private, daily counseling by trained professionals-not only have the Diet Center counselors lost weight on the program-but they have the educational and professional backgrounds to qualify them to help others like me to reach their goals.

Couple Speaks Vows Saturday Afternoon

Linda Rose Tucker and Larry Lean exchanged wedding vows Saturday afternoon at 5:30 in Saint Timothy's Episcopal Church. Rector John Price officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph C. Tucker of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Estelle B. Lean of Fayetteville and the late Nicholas H. Lean.

Wedding music was presented by Mrs. William Tripp, organist. Mrs. Tripp played the guitar and she and her daughters, Robin and Laura Tripp, sang "God's Love." Steve Rogers played the guitar and sang "The Wedding Song." The processional and recessional was played by a string quartet, Nam Ji Kim, violin, Hih Song Kim, viola, Andrea Thomas, cello, and Melody Jones, violin.

The bride wore a floor length gown with a chapel train of organza and re-embroidered Venice lace. The fitted bodice featured full lantern sleeves and a jewel neck outlined in scalloped Venice lace etched with seed pearls. Venice lace adorned the bodice, trimmed the sleeves and encircled the cuffs. The full length flared skirt extended into a chapel train. Venice lace motifs graced the skirt and train and bordered the organza ruffled hemline of the gown. She wore a wreath of miniature garden roses entwined with ivy and baby's breath and carried a white wicker basket filled with roses and fern.

Matron of honor was Diane Dillon of Colfax. Maid of honor was Ann Marie Raper of Greenville. They wore white ballerina length dresses created by Starina of Paris. The dresses were accented with lace and featured a full flowing skirt with a scalloped ruffle. They each carried a wicker basket of garden roses and ivy.

Bridesmaids included Kathy Blizard of Stanfordsburg, Debbie Murphy of Elm City, Melanie Todd of Trinity and Carolyn Harris of Greenville, cousins of the bride, Anna Marie Rogers of Buies Creek and Sally Sergeant of Jacksonville, Fla. The bridesmaids' dresses and flowers were like those of the honor attendants.

Honorary bridesmaids were Mrs. Randy Phillips and Barbara Ramey.

Ron Lean of Colfax, brother of the bridegroom, served as best man. Ushers included Nick Lean III of Fayetteville, brother of the bridegroom, Chap Tucker of Farmville, Mike Lewis and Mel Stanforth, both of Greenville and Ed Lewis of Hendersonville.

Following the ceremony the bride's parents entertained at a reception in their home. Assisting throughout the home were Mr. and Mrs. Sam J. Weeks, Mr. and Mrs. T.R. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Allen Churchill, Mrs. Henry Alex White, Dr. Frances Daniels, Mrs. Kenneth Raper, Oleva Zahnsner and Dr. and Mrs. Al Conley, all of Greenville, Mr. and Mrs. David Blair of Wilson, Mrs. Nick Lean III of Fayetteville and Mrs. Josie G. Smith of Silver Springs, Md.

The bride was entertained with several parties in her honor. Hostesses included Mrs. Donald H. Tucker, Mrs. Arden Tucker, Mrs. T.R. Jones, Mrs. Carmen Albea,

MRS. LARRY LEAN

Mrs. Henry Alex White, Mrs. Bill Moore, Mrs. Randy Phillips and Ann Marie Raper.

A bridesmaids luncheon, given by Mrs. Rex Murphy, Mrs. Donnie Blizard and Mrs. I.J. Rouse, was held at the Colonial Inn in Farmville Friday.

An after-rehearsal dinner was given by the mother of the bridegroom at the Golden Dragon Friday night. A wedding brunch honoring the couple was held at the Ramada Inn Saturday morning. Hosting the brunch were Mr. and Mrs. Donald Cranford, Mr. and Mrs. D.W.

Branch, Mrs. Noel Harris, Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Todd, Ed Lewis, Michael Lewis and Chap Tucker.

The bride graduated from East Carolina University and is currently studying computer science at Bryant and Stratton Business Institute, Rochester, N.Y. The bridegroom received B.A. and M.A. degrees in art from East Carolina University. He is currently pursuing a master's degree in photography at Rochester Institute of Technology, Rochester, N.Y. The couple will reside in New York while attending school.

OLD-TIME CORN
FLANNEL CAKES

They're moister than the usual pancake or griddle cake.

- 1 cup fork-stirred all-purpose flour
- 1/2 teaspoon baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon baking soda
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- 1 large egg
- 1 1/4 cups buttermilk
- 2 tablespoons butter, melted
- 8 3/4-ounce can whole kernel corn, drained

Stir together flour, baking powder, baking soda, salt and sugar. Beat egg until foamy; add buttermilk and butter and beat to blend; add flour mixture and stir only until it is damp; fold in corn. Drop batter, by scant 1/4 cupfuls, onto a lightly greased electric griddle heated to 375 degrees. Bake until bottoms are brown and bubbles break on top. Turn and bake until brown. Serve hot with butter and maple syrup. Makes 12 to 14.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a five by seven picture. During the second week with a wallet size picture and write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement. Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to "The Daily Reflector" one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "Worried Mom in Yorba Linda, Calif.," asking how to get her son who's away in the service to write regularly, triggered some memories across two generations.

Early in 1942, my mother put me on the train at the old Union Station in St. Paul, Minn. She kissed me goodbye and handed me a stack of postcards — all addressed to her. "I'll expect to hear from you every day," she said. Of course, I formed the habit of writing a postcard every day, and just when I was about to run out, another batch would arrive.

Many years later when I put my oldest son on a Marine Corps transport for Vietnam, I handed him a bundle of postcards and gave him the same speech my mother had given me. It worked for him, too.

Then my second son joined the Navy, and I tried the old postcard trick on him. Heaven knows what happened to them. We never received one postcard!

He's been gone for 10 years, and he never writes; he telephones every three months instead. He's called from the Philippines, Saudi Arabia, Japan, Australia, wherever the Pacific Fleet takes him.

Some folks just don't like to write. Right?

JOHN W. KELLOGG

DEAR JOHN: Right!

DEAR ABBY: Know how I got my son to write when he was away in the service? I sent an urgent telegram to his commanding officer saying we had not heard from our son for so long we wanted to know if he was dead or alive.

We heard from our son shortly after, begging us never to do that again! We didn't have to — he became a fairly regular correspondent after that.

MA AND PA IN BUFFALO

DEAR ABBY: Tell "Worried Mom" that if she wants a letter from one of her kids to do what we did: Write a letter and add a P.S., "Enclosed is a check." (Then "forget" to enclose a check.)

Invariably you will get a letter immediately telling you that there was no check in the envelope.

MOTHER OF SIX IN PORT ANGELES, WASH.

DEAR ABBY: Here's one for "Worried Mom": When our son was in the Navy in the '60s, we, too, were worried sick because he never wrote. Finally I devised a letter to him as follows:

- I am sick ()
- I am well ()
- I have been hurt ()
- I had some time off and went to ()
- I have not been away from the base, but ()
- Etc.

I wrote a whole page of multiple choice statements and all he had to do was fill in the blanks.

He got such a big kick out of it he called us — from Alaska, and he's been calling ever since. Expensive, but satisfying.

K.C. MOM

DEAR ABBY: Mark (not his real name) and I have lived together as man and wife for 37 years. We have adult children and several grandchildren. Everyone (including our families) thinks we're married. We have no religious affiliations.

Would it be possible to obtain a marriage license retroactive to the date that we first started living as man and wife?

WANTS THINGS LEGAL

DEAR WANTS: The laws vary in different states. Consult your local department of vital statistics (marriage bureau where licenses are issued), or ask a local attorney.

Velma Kay Peaden Is Bride Of Dale Bishop

HAVELOCK — The Trinity Presbyterian Church here was the scene of the July 10 wedding ceremony of Velma Kay Peaden and Dale William Bishop. The Rev. Gordon Williams performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willis Ray Peaden of Havelock, formerly of Greenville. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. William Levi Bishop of Norton, Mass.

A program of wedding music was presented by Mrs. Nero Olsen, organist. LuAnn Snowden and Loren Mott were soloists.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father. Her honor attendant was Cathy Rice of Havelock. Bridesmaids included Kim Rice of Havelock, Tammy Peaden of Prince George, Va., cousin of the bride, Linda Bishop of Norton, Mass., sister of the bridegroom, and Beverly Smith of New Bern.

Melissa Callis of Prince George, Va., cousin of the bride, was flower girl and the ring bearer was Jeffery Whitehurst of Conetoe, cousin of the bride.

Steven Bishop of Norton, Mass., brother of the bridegroom, was best man and groomsmen included Kevin Peaden of Havelock, brother of the bride, John Fogarty, Dave Curelop and Mark Hoyle, all of Norton, Mass.

The bride wore a gown of white chiffon over taffeta styled with a Queen Anne neckline and bodice of re-embroidered lace accented with seed pearls. The bishop sleeves ended in a cuff of matching lace. The pleated skirt extended into a hemline brushed with Venice lace which extended into a chapel train. She carried a nosegay of yellow roses, white carnations, yellow and white daisies, baby's breath and yellow ribbons. The bride's walking length veil of bridal illusion was attached to a Juliet cap of re-embroidered lace and seed pearls. The veil was edged in re-embroidered lace.

Honorary bridesmaids included Carole Lytle, Connie Smith, Lisa Peaden and Paula MacPhee, cousin of the bridegroom. They each carried a different symbol of love chosen by the bridal couple.

A reception was held in the fellowship hall of the church immediately following the ceremony.

After a wedding trip to Knoxville, Tenn., the couple will live in Norton, Mass.

The bride graduated from Havelock High School and attended Craven Community College and East Carolina University. The bridegroom graduated from Norton High School and served four years

Mrs. Dale William Bishop in the Marine Corps. He is currently employed at Texas Instruments in Attleboro, Mass.

Policy Sound Planning

Greenville Utilities and the City Council have adopted jointly a policy for development which includes the promotion of underdeveloped areas within the city and in its planning area.

The plan was adopted to "promote the expansion of the tax base" and to "encourage the development of land both within the city and within the extraterritorial limits of the city."

The statement calls for coordination of water and sewer extensions in accordance with the city's comprehensive plan. It calls for adopting "innovative policies with incentives" for development of under-veloped areas and the use of Community Development funds to promote development in underdeveloped areas.

The development policy adopted by the city bodies is nothing more than good planning. Even today there are broad areas within the city, or surrounded by the city limits, which remain undeveloped. It is costly to reach past such areas to serve distant sections with city services.

There needs to be some "filling in" of underdeveloped areas of the city and its extraterritorial limits and the policies which have been outlined can help achieve this.

Reversal Was A Shocker

It had to be a real shock to the state's private colleges and universities that the constitutional amendment which would have allowed them to use tax-exempt revenue bonds to finance construction and renovation failed to receive voter approval.

The defeat was particularly depressing because the unofficial tally of the June 30 voting showed the amendment as approved. A tallying error was turned up in the official canvass of the votes and Amendment 5 was defeated. John T. Henley, president of the N.C. Association of Independent Colleges and Universities, was floored by the sudden reversal.

It is likely that voters saw the amendment as a spending measure, although public funds would not be involved.

The private colleges and universities can only start over — and make a stronger attempt to explain their position to the public on the next go-around.

Help For Arms Business

War and destruction in the Falklands and Lebanon may be bad for people, but it has certainly helped the arms business.

I went over to see "Madman" Rangell who runs a weapons discount bazaar across the street from the Pentagon, and he was writing up orders like mad.

"Everyone used to want surface ships," he complained. "Now all they want is submarines. You can't predict people's tastes. I've got a warehouse of frigates I can't give away ever since the French missiles sank the British ones."

"Who are your best customers now, Madman?" I asked.

"The Third World countries. They used to come in and buy a few used tanks and maybe a broken-down artillery piece. Now they want F-16 fighter jets, missile launchers, radar-controlled anti-aircraft guns. I don't know where they get the money, but if it isn't top of the line, they're not interested."

"They're probably spending more on defense than they are on food, housing and creating jobs in their countries."

"I don't ask questions. If their people can't eat it's not my problem."

"Obviously you're not being hurt by the recession."

"You have to be kidding. Whoever heard of a recession stopping arms sales? A general from a Third World country came in the other day; nice guy, beautifully dressed in a new uniform; wanted a gross of heat-seeking missiles that could shoot down F-5 fighter planes.

"While he was waiting to have them packed, I showed him our latest electrically controlled land mines. The Now here's the funny part. As soon as that general left, another general came in from the Third World country that borders the first general's. I told him what the other guy purchased and sold him an entire system to fool the heat-seeking missiles the first guy bought. Then I talked him into buying 1,000 mine detectors that could blow up the mines. I also sold the second general a long artillery piece that could knock out the 1982 howitzer. It was an $80 million order."

"You have a good business here," I told the Madman.

"I make a living. The beauty of it is that no country considers itself safe any more. The Reagan administration has cut down on economic aid to the Third World because you don't get a bang for it. But they're upping military aid to win the hearts and minds of their people."

An Israeli military attache came in.

"What can I do for you, sir?"

"I have $65 million worth of Syrian and PLO weapons in my pickup outside, and I was wondering if you want to buy them."

The attache said he had some other errands and would pick up the order in the afternoon.

"What are you going to do with all the Syrian and PLO used goods you bought?" I asked him.

"I'll probably sell it to Bangladesh. I don't want it cluttering up my yard."

"The best in Washington."

Close Supervision

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR

RALEIGH — Every year, hundreds of young North Carolinians come to Raleigh to serve as pages in either the governor's office or the General Assembly. But, in contrast to the young pages who serve in the Congress in Washington, North Carolina pages are closely supervised.

Compared to Washington, D.C., Raleigh is a fairly calm place. Compared to the hometowns of many of the pages who come from rural North Carolina, however, Raleigh is the big city. Left alone in Raleigh, it would be surprising if some pages got into trouble. But someone in the state government had the brains to realize that 15-year-olds away from home ought to be supervised. It's an idea that soon may find its way in Washington, too.

The governor's office employs pages all 52 weeks of the year. The General Assembly needs them only during legislative sessions. The pages run errands and carry messages between offices. A senator may ask one to run to the snack bar for him or the speaker may have the pages distribute photocopies of an amendment to the members of the House. Each cabinet officer has a page who carries papers, answers phones or works on special projects.

The Legislature employs between 40 and 50 pages — the governor's office 13 — and each serves a week. Most arrive on Sunday afternoon and leave Friday.

Kay Daughtry, Gov. Jim Hunt's page supervisor, screens all applicants for Hunt's page program. She says she checks each applicant's school background to assure no troublemakers are getting into the program. Legislators recommend legislative pages — each is allowed a certain number per session — and they are appointed by the presiding officer of the chamber. Each chamber then has a page supervisor who watches over the youngsters. Each legislator has his or her own selection process. No doubt politics enters it but most of the pages appear to be well-behaved and responsible.

Washington pages are not provided with housing and many people think this is the root of the problem. In Raleigh, pages may stay with family friends. Or, they can rent a room from a family that has been screened by Ms. Daughtry. Many are those of state employees and most have been housing pages for several years. It is up to the parents and pages to find a family for the list and make arrangements for the week.

During the week, the page receives breakfast and dinner in the home. He's responsible for his own lunch. The family will provide the page with transportation to and from work. The page becomes a member of the family for a week and is subject to the rules of the house regarding television and going out at night. Most weeks the pages will arrange to get together at a local sandwich shop at least one night. The host family will also include the page in family outings such as shopping or going to a movie, Ms. Daughtry says. The pages are paid $92.50 a week but almost all of that — usually $85 — goes toward room and board.

Legislative pages are not required to stay in one of Ms. Daughtry's approved houses and some decide to stay in hotels. But that is a decision made by their parents.

Ms. Daughtry gets about 10 applications a day from would-be pages. A few are rejected because their school says they can't have the time off. Others are turned down because their schools don't give them good conduct marks. Enough are accepted that the schedule for pages is full through next March.

Those wishing to become pages should write Ms. Daughtry at the state capitol.

No Phones On Streets

BY MAXWELL GLEN AND CODY SHEARER

WASHINGTON — It was bound to happen, sometime, somewhere.

Woodbridge Township, a New Jersey community approximately 30 miles from New York City, approved on July 6 an ordinance to prohibit the wearing of headphones on municipal streets. If its new law receives sanction from state authorities, Woodbridge would become the first locale to have so regulated the entertainment form that is becoming something of a cultural phenomenon.

As if nobody knows, that phenomenon is called the Walkman, a pocket-size stereo system-cum-headset popularized by Sony Corp. and copied to almost generic stature by numerous other firms. The lightweight contraption has found a niche on the belts and ears of America, enabling seemingly everyone, from skateboarding children to jogging bankers, to carry their music with them — on its face, a rather healthy notion.

But about three months ago, Richard Kuzniak of Woodbridge decided that the sweet-sounding isolation of headphones might not be so healthy where drivers, bicyclists and pedestrians are concerned. Soon thereafter, the local city councilman submitted his restrictive proposal, which received only three public comments — two favorable, one unfavorable — before winning the approval of his colleagues.

For civil libertarians and Walkman nuts, the ordinance's breezy passage may not be the only outrage. Some would contend that, if the deaf can freely drive and cross streets, so should Walkman addicts. Even Kuzniak can't link any known traffic accidents in his community to the use of headphones. "I just don't want to have one," he told us.

Therein, however, lies our chief concern. Rules that attempt to enhance public safety without causing undue inconvenience to citizens are fine and good. But when rules are based on a potential risk to safety, it seems incumbent on lawmakers to extend the logic to other areas including, perhaps, handgun control. With handguns, at least, the threat to human life is well measured.

Unfortunately, we're not expecting Woodbridge Township and other headset-control towns to follow in the footsteps of Morton Grove, Ill., which outlawed handguns several months ago.

Wednesday's re-introduction of the Equal Rights Amendment in a Capitol Hill ceremony took place after weeks of bickering between women's groups and lawmakers anxious to join the new ERA drive.

Originally planned for July 1, immediately following the June ERA deadline, the event was pushed back to July 14 at the request of 150 House members who would have been out of town at the time.

Most bitter of all were negotiations between the National Organization of Women and ERA crusader, Sen. Paul Tsongas (D-Mass.), on the question of which senator would be the measure's chief sponsor. NOW favored Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, and repeatedly asked Massachusetts' junior senator to relinquish his leadership.

From Britain last week, some advice from the National Council for Civil Liberties Rights for Women Unit: If you're sexually harassed at work, fight back — literally.

If co-workers abuse you physically or verbally, the group advises, return the favor. Pinch back. If pin-ups are popular, retaliate with your own male pin-ups. Too many women, said the group, accept harassment as a fact of life.

For the second year in a row, television viewing among teenagers, adolescents and preschoolers has declined, according to the Nielsen ratings. But that's not to imply they've given up on the tube. Teenage girls, for example, still watch 18 hours per week.

Strength For Today

SONG WAS STILLED

One of America's greatest minstrels was Stephen Foster. He wrote "Old Folks at Home," "Swanee River," "Old Kentucky Home," and many other ballads which have gladdened the hearts of generations. He had a hard fight to have his music accepted, but because of perseverance he ultimately succeeded.

But Foster could not carry this perseverance over into the field of morals. He early became intemperate and died a derelict at an early age. A woman working in a large publishing house in New York told how Foster, then well under 40 years of age, came into the establishment one day, disheveled and ragged, looking like a tramp. The woman, who greatly admired his compositions, put out her hand and asked, "Is this Mr. Foster?" He took her hand and replied, "Yes, the wreck of Stephen Foster."

There is a sadness in this reply which echoes the misery of an ill-spent life, his great abilities fell victim to a habit he could not control. — ELISHA DOUGLASS.

Flat-Rate Tax Plan Faces Bumpy Legislative Road

NEW YORK (AP) — A truly flat-rate tax — no deductions, exemptions or credits of any kind, and with everyone taxed the same percentage of income — would appear to have almost no chance of acceptance.

That, however, is not the end of the various so-called flat-rate tax proposals. It is nearer the beginning. And it is conceivable that something called a flat-rate tax might someday become a reality.

In its pure form, however, it's chances of becoming law would appear to be the same as the flat earth theory being embraced by a symposium of scientists. It might go by the name, but it will hardly be the same.

Meanwhile, the discussions will grow spirited. You'll be hearing a great deal about it, from Congress and academe, and from pressure groups that have benefited from deductions, exemptions and credits.

You will hear from those who are outraged by what they feel has been a dictatorial usurpation of power by the Internal Revenue Service, from those accountants and tax preparers and lawyers who benefit from the business of deductions, and by those who think anything so complex and distorted must be scourged by death and born again in purer form.

The idea of a flat-rate tax is simply a phenomenon, viewed by the rich as an opportunity to lower their taxes, and by the poor as a chance to close loopholes for the rich. To some extent it transcends party lines; both liberals and conservatives can be found to support their version.

Whatever the version, it is likely to begin with a tax exemption for the first few thousand dollars of income. Otherwise, rich and poor and liberal and conservative agree, the poor would be taxed outrageously.

Some say that will happen anyway, because a flat-rate tax would end the so-called progressive nature of the system, under which the rich are taxed a greater percentage of their taxable incomes.

It would also end or greatly reduce deductibles, or preferential tax treatments or tax incentives or loopholes. Same thing, different names, according to the way the viewer wishes to interpret them, or the way they are viewed at different times. Having achieved its purpose, for example, a tax incentive might come to be viewed as a tax loophole.

Such means of reducing taxes are woven throughout the system, most of them threaded there because at one time or another they were considered desirable or even necessary in promoting a social or economic good.

Housing, for example. Home ownership is tied to good citizenship. A homeowner, it is thought, is more likely to vote and otherwise support and participate in community activities, strengthening the democracy.

That notion is so readily and widely accepted that home ownership is often thought of as a right, and frequently equated with fulfillment of the American dream. A true flat-rate tax would devastate that dream.

Any flat-rate proposal, therefore, is likely to encounter tremendous opposition if it seeks to do away with the deductibility of interest on home mortgages. At best, it seems likely such deductions would be grandfathered, or allowed to continue on existing mortgages.

Even then, the consequences could work a hardship on markets by making houses less attractive investments. Temporarily, at least, prices might fall. So might legislators who voted for it. It's dangerous territory.

So is the turf of those institutions which rely on charity, such as museums, schools and churches. Here too the issue may be tied to Americanism. Philanthropy on so large and organized a scale as in the United States, it is often said, is almost uniquely American.

And there is, of course, the religious issue. With tax deductibility eliminated, would churches continue to be supported as they are now? Would the issue of religious freedom enter the argument? It's touchy.

Finally, to eliminate deductions, exemptions and credits, would be to end the practice of using the revenue system to direct money and effort into areas of need. For decades, that practice has been one of the most effective tools in directing the nation's economic and social course.

Conclusion: Any new tax system that goes by the name of flat-rate is likely to have a few bumps in it.

British Rail Strike Ends

LONDON (AP) — Rail service in Britain began returning to normal today after a 15-day-old strike by locomotive engineers collapsed because other unions would not support them.

But up to a million employees in National Health Service hospitals started a three-day strike over a pay claim, and security scandals threatened to undermine Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's increased public support due to victory in the Falkland Islands and her successful stand against the rail strikers.

"We don't expect all the drivers to turn up today," said a spokesman for state-run British Rail, "because the ending of the strike on Sunday gave their union very little time to tell the members to go back to work. Hopefully, we shall be running most trains, but there are bound to be delays and cancellations."

The 24,000-member engineers union called off its strike against new work schedules when leaders of the 11.6 million-member Trades Union Congress — Britain's equivalent of the AFL-CIO — intervened with a compromise proposal and told the strikers other unions would not support them.

The other unions abandoned the engineers after British Rail chairman Sir Peter Parker threatened to shut down the 11,000-mile network by Wednesday, throwing more than 200,000 other railroad workers on the streets, if the strike continued.

During the strike, the railroad operated about 10 percent of the 15,500 passenger trains that run on a normal weekday. The walkout inconvenienced hundreds of thousands of commuters and vacationers, forcing them to crowd buses and endure harrowing traffic jams.

The engineers were demanding continuation of the eight-hour day, won in 1919, instead of new schedules of seven-to-nine-hour days with the workweek reduced from 40 hours to 39. Union leaders agreed to accept the new schedules at 71 depots where management has imposed them and to recommend that a union convention accept them at the rest of the 265 depots.

British Rail, which is losing $270 million a year, claims the new schedules will save it $9 million in the first year.

Mrs. Thatcher refused to intervene in the dispute, and newspapers backing the government hailed the end of the strike as a victory for her.

The strikers in the 2,500 state-run hospitals included nurses, sterilizing staff, catering workers, porters, cleaners, laundryworkers and other non-medical personnel. Doctors stayed on the job, and the army and the police were on standby to fill in if ambulance services break down. All surgery except emergency operations was postponed.

The eight striking unions demanded a 12 percent increase in weekly wages ranging from $106 for cleaners to $153 for staff nurses. The government offered 7.5 percent to nurses and 6 percent to other workers in line with its anti-inflation strategy of holding raises in the public sector to 6 percent.

The health workers have been staging sporadic local actions since a national one-day strike May 19 and are threatening stronger action.

Besides the health strike, Mrs. Thatcher must also deal with scandals involving a vagabond who evaded guards and crept into Queen Elizabeth II's bedroom, and allegations of espionage at a top-secret communications center.

Michael Fagan, a 31-year-old homeless father of four, was scheduled to appear today at Bow Street magistrate's court, accused of entering Buckingham Palace June 7 and stealing a half bottle of wine.

Two days later Fagan was arrested inside the palace on his second visit after he entered the 56-year-old queen's bedroom while she slept, awoke her and talked for 10 minutes about his family problems before she managed to alert a servant who seized him.

Mexican Leftists May Gain Strength

By PETER EISNER
Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The leftist coalition got less than 4 percent of the votes in Mexico's presidential and congressional elections this month. But officials of the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party foresee increasing support for their Communist-led opponents because of the deepening economic crisis and election reforms decreed four years ago by President Jose Lopez Portillo.

The government party, known by its Spanish initials PRI, feared that the country's worst recession since World War II would cost it votes and keep people away from the polls.

Instead 75 percent of the voters turned out, and 16.7 million, or 75 percent, voted for PRI candidate Miguel de la Madrid Hurtado.

The 47-year-old Harvard graduate, who will succeed his mentor Lopez Portillo on Dec. 1, proclaimed "a victory for the PRI and a victory for all Mexicans." Behind the scenes, however, party officials predicted increased support for the leftist Unified Socialist coalition, a five-party alliance known as PSUM.

The election reforms allowed opposition parties to appear on the ballot for the first time this year. Previously, the government permitted only write-in candidates, and most opposition parties refused to take part.

The Unified Socialists got only 821,995 votes, or 3.65 percent, according to complete official returns announced Thursday.

That put it far behind the rightist National Action Party, or PAN, which got 3.7 million votes. But PRI officials show greater concern about the more volatile PSUM, which seems capable of drawing support from dissatisfied workers and the swelling ranks of the unemployed.

A week before the elections, the PSUM drew an estimated 100,000 people to Mexico City's Constitution Plaza for the largest anti-government rally in years. The demonstrators, many of them poorly clad rural workers bused in for the occasion, marched to the plaza carrying the coalition's red flags bearing the Communist hammer and sickle.

The opposition parties together outpolled the PRI in Mexico City, and the leftist coalition, which includes the Trotskyite Revolutionary Workers Party and the Socialist Workers Party as well as the Communists, won 20 percent of the vote in the capital.

Voters "reject the policies of the government party," said the PSUM's general secretary, Pablo Gomez Alvarez. He acknowledged, however, that "the bourgeoisie voted mostly for the PAN."

The government party has not lost a major election since it was founded in 1929. It has maintained its power base by cultivating — some say buying — the support of radical rightist and leftist groups.

But the growing problems of joblessness, inflation and a weakening currency have changed things. Opposition leaders no longer are anxious to be part of a political system that is likely to be blamed for higher prices, more unemployment and worsening social problems.

"The PSUM used to be satisfied with whatever crumbs the government gave them, say a deputy ministership in a lesser ministry," said one well-placed U.S. analyst of Mexican politics. "But with the chance to capitalize on popular discontent, the crumbs are no longer enough."

One indication of the change was an outbreak of leftist demonstrations in the two weeks since the voting. The post-election period is traditionally characterized by a lack of overt political activity while power brokers across the political spectrum analyze the election results and make deals to consolidate support of the government party.

On July 12, leftists staged a peaceful but potentially explosive occupation of the Honduran Embassy, denouncing that Central American government's deployment of troops to the border with El Salvador to fight Salvadoran guerrillas.

Meanwhile, students and other demonstrators, many wearing PSUM badges, blocked traffic and shouted in protest against budget cuts affecting student housing at the capital's Normal College, a teacher-training institution.

Those acts led the PRI to cancel plans for a post-election dialogue with the PSUM, the U.S. analyst said.

However, there is no indication yet of a sudden surge of electoral support for the leftist parties.

Heberto Castillo, whose Mexican Workers Party initiated the PSUM alliance and then pulled out after the Communists took charge, said leftist groups are still too isolated from the needs of the workers they hope to represent.

"They are immersed in a reality isolated from that of the people," he said. "Many leftists believe that power is in symbols, in declarations... rather than in ideas."

British Charge Palace Intruder In Wine Theft

LONDON (AP) — Describing him as a man driven to irrationality by a deteriorating marriage, British authorities today charged Buckingham Palace intruder Michael Fagan with stealing a half-finished bottle of wine from the palace on June 7.

State prosecutor Stephen Wooler said that although it was "well-known" that Fagan entered Queen Elizabeth II's bedroom on July 9 there was insufficient evidence to "render his trespass a criminal offense."

Fagan was also charged with stealing a car and assaulting his stepson.

Fagan, 30, claimed he was the son of Nazi war criminal Rudolph Hess, who was in prison when Fagan was born.

Wooler told Bow Street Magistrates Court the earlier palace break-in in which Fagan stole the wine "was one of a series of irrational acts on his part connected with a deterioration in his matrimonial situation."

Fagan, wearing only socks on his feet, told the court he wanted "nothing to do with" his court-appointed lawyer, Maurice Nadeem, who referred to him as "an unbalanced young man."

Addressing Magistrate Ronald Bartle, Nadeem said, "Let us remember what this case is about. It does not relate to the later incident when my client was in the queen's bedroom."

From the dock, Fagan shouted: "I told you not to mention anything about the queen's bedroom. I don't want her name brought into it. I would rather plead guilty than have her name mentioned in court."

Fagan was led into the packed courtroom, opposite Convent Garden Opera House, amid tight security. He was accompanied by his wife, Christine, and parents, Ivy and Michael Fagan, Sr.

He appeared relaxed in the dock, frequently turning to smile at his family in the public gallery.

Shortly after the proceedings got under way, Fagan interrupted and shouted: "Can I say something before you begin?" He was told to keep quiet.

Told to stand in the dock to be formally charged and committed for trial, Fagan said: "I have never had a solicitor, so how can I? I want nothing to do with this man (Nadeem). He is a load of rubbish."

Scotland Yard Detective Superintendent Trevor Lloyd-Hughes objected to bail on grounds he should be held in custody for his own protection, he might fail to appear in court and he might commit further offenses.

PLAQUE POINTERS

Plaque is probably the biggest cause of tooth decay and eventual loss. What is it—how do we acquire it—and how do we control it?

Plaque is the sticky, practically colorless film that builds continuously on the teeth. The main inhabitants of plaque are bacteria—one milligram of plaque can contain a half-billion bacteria. Bacteria ferment sugars in the mouth (why not to eat sweets), changing them to acids which then eat away at tooth enamel. "Look Ma—cavities".

As the plaque creeps below the gum line, it mineralizes and becomes razor-sharp deposits of tartar which is the catalyst of periodontal (or gum) disease—by far, the major cause of tooth loss in adults.

Plaque must be removed daily by "proper" brushing and the use of dental floss. Have your dentist or hygienist show you how to do it properly.

The best way, if not the only way, to remove tartar and long-established plaque is to have a professional cleaning. But, remember, it will start to reform the very next day. The only one who can remove plaque regularly is you.

Flat-Rate Tax: Will It Cut Red Tape?

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

It sounds too good to be true: A simple income tax system with lower rates for most people and more money for the U.S. Treasury. It probably is too good to be true. But that hasn't stopped the politicians from talking about some kind of flat-rate tax system and hearings on the subject have been scheduled in September.

The idea behind a flat-rate tax is neither new nor complicated. Supporters argue that lower tax rates, combined with fewer deductions, exemptions and loopholes, would make the system fairer. A fairer system, they say, would give people less incentive to cheat. And that would boost tax collections, since the Internal Revenue System now estimates that it loses about $95 billion a year in taxes on income that goes into the "underground" economy — income that generally is earned but never reported.

In its purest form, a flat-rate tax system would set a basic rate for all income over a relatively modest level. There would be no deductions or credits. No special tax treatment of certain types of income like capital gains. No depreciation schedules. No exempted income, meaning many people would have to report the value of things like employer-paid health insurance or Social Security benefits.

That kind of system, however, is highly unlikely. "Nobody is talking absolute flat rate," said Elsie Watters, director of research for the Tax Foundation, Inc., a non-profit, non-partisan research group in Washington, D.C. "There are just so many ifs."

Figuring out where you stand under the different proposals is difficult, because most are still in the planning stages. In general, however, you will be better off if most of your deductions are fairly standard — medical, state and local income taxes, charitable contributions — and if most of your income comes from salary or wages and already is subject to tax.

One specific proposal which has been getting a lot of attention comes from Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., and Rep. Richard A. Gephardt, D-Mo. Their proposal retains the basic deductions claimed by the majority of taxpayers and calls for a 14 percent, flat-rate tax for adjusted gross incomes up to $25,000 for single people and $40,000 for married couples. A surtax of up to 14 percent would be imposed on incomes above that level. The top federal income tax rate would be cut from 50 percent to 28 percent.

Bradley and Gephardt estimate that only about 20 percent of all taxpayers would pay more than the 14 percent flat rate. Overall, they say, 60 percent to 70 percent of all taxpayers would pay less than they would under existing law. "Those with the most significantly increased tax liabilities under the proposed system would be the taxpayers who make the greatest use of deductions, credits and exclusions in the present law," Bradley said.

The Bradley-Gephardt proposal would retain some deductions — the one for home-mortgage interest would stay; the one for non-mortgage interest would go. Social Security benefits would remain non-taxable; employer-paid health or life insurance premiums would be counted as income. The personal exemption would be raised; so would the so-called standard deduction (the Zero Bracket Amount) for joint returns. The charitable contribution deduction would remain, as would the deduction for state and local income taxes; the political contribution tax credit and the exclusion for dividends would be eliminated.

Here are some hypothetical examples from Bradley's office of what the proposed changes would do for taxpayers at different income levels. The calculation of existing tax is based on the law as of 1984 when the provisions of the 1981 Economic Recovery Tax Act will have been fully implemented.

—A single taxpayer with an income of $15,000 who does not itemize deductions would pay $1,801 in federal tax under existing law and $1,645 under the Bradley-Gephardt plan. The marginal rate (the amount paid on the top proportion of income) would drop from 20 percent to 14 percent.

—A married couple with a joint income of $30,000 who do not itemize but gain some benefits from an existing child-care credit would have their tax bill cut from $3,165 to $2,674. The calculations are based on increased income from employer-paid health and life insurance premiums; a child-care deduction replacing the credit and an increased personal exemption. The marginal tax rate would drop from 25 percent to 14 percent.

Group Will Monitor Civil Rights

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sixteen former government officials are joining forces to monitor the civil rights records of Congress and the administration and raise a cry when they sense an abandonment of the government's commitment to fight bias.

The privately financed and bipartisan panel, which includes four former Cabinet members, was assembled by Arthur S. Flemming, 77, a Republican who was removed by President Reagan last November as chairman of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights. He held that post for seven years.

The idea is for the group to oversee the government's enforcement of laws barring discrimination on the basis of race, sex, religion, ethnic background, age or physical handicap.

The expectation is that the prestige of the members will be enough to command attention when they comment on what they find.

Flemming said the creation of the group was prompted by "regressive actions taken by the Reagan administration and Congress which jeopardize the gains made by minorities, women and poor people over the past two decades."

The panel meets today for the first time. As a first project, it will consider commissioning an analysis of Senate-passed legislation that would bar federal courts in most instances from ordering that busing be used to remedy school segregation. The administration has endorsed the measure.

Among the commission members are three former secretaries of health, education and welfare — Wilbur Cohen of the University of Texas, Elliot Richardson, who has also served as attorney general, and Fleming, who now heads the National Coalition for Quality Integrated Education.

Other members include William H. Brown III of Philadelphia, former chairman of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission; Theodore M. Hesburgh, president of Notre Dame University and another former Civil Rights Commission chairman; former Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind.; and former Labor

Secretary Ray Marshall.

Also, three former Civil Rights Commission members — Erwin N. Griswold of Washington, who also served as U.S. solicitor general; Frankie M. Freeman of St. Louis; and Manuel Ruiz of Los Angeles; and Rabbi Murray Saltzman of Baltimore, who is leaving his seat on the commission; Aileen Hernandez of San Francisco and Samuel C. Jackson of Washington, both former EEOC members; William M. Marutani, a judge of the Court of Common Pleas of Pennsylvania and a member of the government commission studying the World War II internment of Japanese-Americans; Grace Olivarez of Albuquerque, N.M., former administrator of the Community Services Administration; and Harold R. Tyler of New York, a former federal judge.

Among other matters for potential attention, Fleming listed what he called the curtailment of desegregation aid to schools; new restrictions on the Legal Services Commission, which helps the poor get into court; the narrowing of affirmative action regulations by the Labor Department; and the argument offered in court by the Justice Department that private schools which discriminate should be permitted to keep their tax exemptions.

When he was removed as head of the Civil Rights Commission last year, Fleming said Reagan had "a perfect right" to do what he had done. But Fleming also accused the administration of having "the weakening of civil rights laws" as one of its objectives.

His firing coincided with a commission report critical of the administration's policies on school desegregation.

Pendleton told a news conference in May that he does not believe Reagan is bigoted but that both the president and the administration suffered from "misperceptions."

New Wave Of Executions Ahead?

By KEVIN COSTELLO
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Time is running out for a growing number of the nation's death row inmates, according to a Justice Department official who says a wave of executions could start next year.

Benjamin H. Renshaw III, head of the department's Bureau of Justice Statistics, notes that states' death rows are filling up now as they did in the 1960s.

"Now again, time is running out for a large proportion of individuals awaiting capital punishment," Renshaw said Sunday.

Death row inmates in the 1960s ultimately were spared by a Supreme Court decision striking down then-existing death penalty laws.

Now, Renshaw says, growing numbers of states have passed capital punishment laws "that have passed federal or state constitutional muster."

"The United States will witness a spate of executions beginning in 1983-84 without parallel in this nation since the Depression Era," predicts Renshaw, acting director of the statistics bureau.

"The situation is ripe for the nation to witness executions at a rate approaching the more than three per week that prevailed during the 1930s," he adds.

Renshaw's comments were included in a Justice Department report, "Death Row Prisoners 1981."

Since the Supreme Court in 1976 lifted a four-year moratorium on the imposition of the death penalty, four convicted killers have been executed.

Three of those inmates put to death since 1976 chose death over prolonged legal battles.

Many people would disagree with Renshaw's prediction of a coming wave of executions.

In an opinion last year, Supreme Court Justice William H. Rehnquist said states cannot kill anyone because of his brethren's constant "tinkering with the principles laid down" in the high court's 1976 decisions approving certain death penalty measures.

"The existence of the death penalty in this country is virtually an illusion," Rehnquist wrote in the opinion that spoke only for himself.

The Justice Department's report released Sunday said that at the end of last year, there were 838 prisoners awaiting execution nationwide.

The NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, which also compiles death row statistics, says its more up-to-date figures show there were 1,038 inmates awaiting execution as of last month.

Still, the federal government's figures showed a record-high death row population.

"The death row population in the United States swelled to 838 prisoners by year-end 1981 — 150 more than at year-end 1980. It was by far the largest group awaiting execution since a national count began in 1953," the Justice Department said.

Three times more prisoners were added to death row last year than were taken off, the Justice Department noted.

The federal government's figures showed that 41 percent of the inmates on death row were black, while there were 11 women and 47 Hispanics.

All were killers except for two Florida inmates who were found guilty of sexually attacking a girl age 11 or less.

Thirty-six states had a death penalty law in effect as of Dec. 31, and 28 of them had prisoners awaiting execution.

As of that date, three states had nearly one-half of the death row prisoners. They were Florida with 161, Texas with 144 and Georgia with 91.

You can never be cancelled

We can never cancel your insurance protection—no matter what your age or how much you collect in benefits—as long as you pay your premiums on time. Only you can cancel.

You are not covered for . . .

In order to keep rates down and guarantee that everyone will be accepted with no medical questions asked, there is a limit of only one policy per person.

Also, some exclusions are required: You won't be covered for pre-existing health problems during the first year (any new conditions will be paid for immediately); losses resulting from acts of war, nervous or mental disorders, or use of narcotics, pregnancy, unless Maternity Benefits have been selected; and confinement in a nursing home or convalescent care facility as defined in your policy.

Optional Cash Benefits

All children covered for a single monthly premium
 You'll receive up to $30.00 a day for each child hospitalized for any covered accident or illness when you add Children's Coverage to your basic plan. One premium covers all your unmarried dependent children from birth to 19 years of age.

Maternity benefits also available

Your wife will receive up to $60.00 a day for each day she's hospitalized for pregnancy and childbirth when Children's Coverage and Maternity Benefits are added to your basic plan. The mother must be insured for the entire pregnancy. Benefits will be paid from the first day for as long as needed. Miscarriage is also covered.

Pays in addition to any other insurance

To help pay your medical bills and everyday household expenses, you'll receive a check in addition to any other insurance benefits you collect. Even if you're entitled to "free" medical care at a VA or government hospital, we'll still pay you full benefits.

Economical Monthly Premiums

The chart below shows how little it costs to insure yourself and other family members. Remember, just ONE DOLLAR protects your entire family for the first 30 days from the time your policy is issued. So please ACT NOW—the sooner you apply, the sooner you are protected!

Deer ...

of that kind had not been very successful. Hunters were ordered to gun for the weakest, smallest deer, increasing the survival chances of larger animals.

"There's 24, 25, even 30 inches of water out there, covering the deer's food supply in the sloughs where they browse," said Hampton. "The white water lily, the elderberry are drowned in water. Deer aren't like moose; they won't put their snouts in the water. We're talking about killing 1,500 so the rest of the herd can live." Amory called that argument "the kind of stuff you put on laws to make the grass grow." About 24 protesters demonstrated as some of the hunters were returning with bloody carcasses.

"It's simply horrible," said Sue Selby, 36, of North Lauderdale. "Hunters say they're interested in wildlife, but it's only because they want to guarantee always having something to shoot at."

Some hunters, however, said they were more interested in preserving the herd than in obtaining cheap meat.

"It's pitiful, scrawny, suffering - look at it," said Dick Powell, 39, a shotgun-wielding sheet metal worker from Davie, pointing to a 15-pound fawn in the bilge of his airboat. "No meat on it at all. He was walking around dead out there, and didn't know it."

Faster's Wife Leaving Moscow

MOSCOW (AP) - The American wife of Soviet hunger striker Sergei Petrov said today she planned to cut short her visit here because she had been unable to persuade him to end his fast. It was Petrov's 48th consecutive day without food.

"I don't want to be here to watch him die," said Virginia Hurt Johnson, of Roanoke, Va.

The 24-year-old woman said during a telephone interview that her first 24 hours with her husband had been "extraordinarily painful."

Petrov, 29, who is fasting for the right to live with his wife in the United States, has said he feels extremely weak and that his body weight is dropping almost a pound a day. He has lost about 49 pounds, dropping his weight to about 125 pounds.

Hunger strikers rarely survive more than 60 days without nourishment.

Mrs. Petrov, who arrived Sunday on a 10-day tourist visa, said she planned to leave Moscow on Wednesday or Thursday, unless she unexpectedly prevailed on him to end his protest. She said there was "no sign" that he was ready to comply with her wishes.

Petrov, also speaking by telephone, again insisted that "I'm not going to give up" and indicated that he agreed with his wife's decision to leave.

"I don't want her to be here if I collapse," he said.

Soviet emigration officials have rejected Petrov's emigration application, saying he cannot leave the country because he was exposed to state secrets on his job. Petrov worked in a research

Reagan Signs Money Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan has signed a $5.5 billion emergency spending bill after vetoing two larger versions earlier this summer, a White House spokesman said today.

The spokesman, Larry Speakes, said Reagan signed the measure Sunday night after returning from a weekend at the presidential retreat at Camp David, Md.

The money appropriated by the bill is needed to keep thousands of federal employees on the job and to continue money for student loans, food stamps and other programs.

The House approved the compromise bill 389-13 Thursday and the Senate accepted it 91-6.

Reagan had vetoed two previous emergency spending bills he deemed too costly, but his aides had said in advance the third, trimmed-down version would be acceptable. The battle over the supplemental appropriations had kept the congressional appropriations process at a virtual standstill since March.

The emergency measure was needed because more than a dozen federal agencies and major domestic programs would not have had enough money to keep operating until Sept. 30, the end of the fiscal year, without it.

Court Action Expected

NORTH BELMONT, N.C. (AP) - North Carolina officials plan to go back to Superior Court next month to require two chemical disposal companies to complete cleanup of a long-standing chemical waste dump in North Belmont.

"There is some potential danger," said Glenn Dunn, a lawyer with the state Division of Health Services in Raleigh. "The question is how much."

Dunn said the companies, C.A. Hughes Inc. and JADCO Inc., "have removed most of the materials" on the 3-acre site under an order Judge John Friday signed in September 1975. The dump site is about eight miles west of Charlotte.

"They (company representatives) feel like it is not hazardous and pretty well contained," and would cause no harm if left, Dunn said, adding that state solid and hazardous waste branch officials disagree.

Some of the waste contains potentially harmful amounts of lead and other chemicals, according to Jerry Rhodes, an environmental chemist with the state's solid and hazardous waste branch.

Material containing lead up to 7.4 parts per million is in a rusting tanker truck and lead is hazardous at 5 parts per million, Rhodes said.

Samples taken from three other abandoned tanks showed a mixture of chemicals including toluene, xylene, methyl ethyl ketone, naphthalene and phenol, Rhodes said.

Banks Lower Prime Rates

NEW YORK (AP) - Two of the nation's leading banks today lowered their prime lending rates one-half percentage point to 16 percent.

The move by Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. in New York, ranked fourth by deposits, and No. 8 First National Bank of Chicago followed a decline in other short-term interest rates last week which lowered the banks' cost of acquiring funds.

It was the first change in the prime rate by a major U.S. bank in more than a month.

On May 25, No. 2 Citibank lowered its prime from 16.5 percent to 16 percent, and was followed June 3 by No. 17 First National Bank of Boston. But no other major bank followed, and within two weeks the two banks raised their prime rates back up to 16.5 percent.

In an indication of how interest rates have remained stubbornly high, the last time most of the nation's 20 leading banks posted a 16 percent prime rate was in November 1981.

The prime rate is the base quote used to calculate interest charges on loans to companies with top-grade credit, although some banks make loans at rates below their stated prime rate. While not having a direct relationship with consumer loans, the prime reflects general movements in other bank lending rates.

Short-term interest rates began tumbling last week following moves by the Federal Reserve to inject reserves into the banking system, credit analysts said. A key indicator of the cost of reserves, the federal funds rate charged on excess reserves banks lend each other fell to 12 percent today from 12 1/2 percent late Friday and over 13 percent earlier last week.

The Fed's injection of reserves came as the nation's basic money supply remained within growth targets set by the central bank. That led analysts to believe that the Fed would not have to tighten its grip on credit further, which would put upward pressure on interest rates.

The prime lending rate's peak so far this year was 17 percent in February. It reached a record high of 21.5 percent in December 1980.

Chemical May Produce Cancer

LOS ANGELES (AP) - A chemical used to sterilize medical supplies may cause cancer even in concentrations far below current legal limits, state health workers say.

Dr. Julia Quint, a state health department toxicologist, told 200 workers at a hospital hazards conference Saturday that the general public probably is not endangered by the chemical, ethylene oxide.

However, she said, 8,000 to 12,000 hospital workers in California are exposed in the course of their jobs.

The type of chromosome changes observed in some people exposed to relatively low levels of the chemical has been associated with genetic mutations and cancer growths in laboratory tests, according to another speaker, Dr. Gideon Letz.

Ms. Quint wrote a report on the chemical issued by the Hazard Evaluation System and Information Service, part of the state health department.

She said ethylene oxide is widely used in hospitals, dental offices, veterinary offices and other health facilities for supplies that cannot be sterilized by steam.

At present, the maximum allowable concentration of the chemical is 50 parts per million parts of air, but chromosome changes have been noted in people exposed to concentrations of as low as 10 parts per million in recent studies, said Letz, a staff member of the state health hazards office.

Letz said the chemical has been found to cause cancer in laboratory animals.

The state Division of Occupational Safety and Health is considering a proposal to reduce the maximum allowable amount to 10 ppm.

The conference was sponsored by the Service Employees International Union and the Los Angeles Committee on Occupational Safety and Health.

Search Called Off For Flood Victims

ESTES PARK, Colo. (AP) - Authorities have suspended the organized search for three people missing and presumed dead in the surge of water from a ruptured earthen dam in Rocky Mountain National Park.

"We now believe the bodies were swept out of the park, probably somewhere between the park boundaries and the town of Estes Park," about three miles away, park spokesman Mike Smithson said Sunday.

The dam broke Thursday morning, sending a surge of water down two river valleys and dumping a layer of silt along the main street of this resort community. The body of one camper was recovered.

Meanwhile, state officials drafted a request to President Reagan seeking disaster aid.

The body of Steven See, 21, of Hilbert, Wis., was found

Kansas City Snaps Frustrating Losing Streak In 9-0 Victory

Any way you look at it, the Kansas City Royals finally did things right again. Derek Botelho, making his major league debut after toiling for 5½ years in the minors, combined with Mike Armstrong on a three-hitter as Kansas City snapped a seven-game losing streak with a 9-0 victory over the Boston Red Sox Sunday. George Brett, Jerry Martin and U.L. Washington homered to highlight the Royals' 15-hit attack against three Red Sox pitchers.

"I'm on a cloud; I feel super," said Botelho after allowing three singles in seven innings and becoming the first right-hander to start a game for Kansas City since June 24. "It's been a long time since we got a win from anybody, never mind from a right-hander," quipped Kansas City Manager Dick Howser. "I knew it was just a matter of time. It's nice to get a shutout, but any way that you get a win is nice."

Brett hit his 11th home run of the season in the first inning to give Kansas City a 1-0 lead and the Royals increased the margin to 6-0 when they chased John Tudor, 6-7, in their five-run third.

Willie Wilson led off the inning with a double and scored on Washington's first homer of the year. After Amos Otis walked, Hal McRae singled and Martin doubled for another run. Luis Aponle replaced Tudor and, after an intentional walk to Willie Aikens, Frank White blooped a single to score two more runs.

"I throw all four pitches — fastball, slider, curve and change-up, but mainly I stayed with the fast ball and slider at the start," said Botelho, who was called up from Omaha of the American Association Friday. "Then when I got the jig lead, I felt I just had to throw strikes. So I went mostly with my fastball."

Kansas City added another run in the sixth on a sacrifice fly by Otis and two more in the eighth on Martin's eighth homer.

Brewers 9, White Sox 3 Don Money, Charlie Moore and Jim Gantner delivered run-scoring singles in a six-run second and Milwaukee collected 14 hits in extending its winning streak to eight games.

Randy Lerch, 7-5, who gave up single runs in the first and second innings, worked seven innings in posting his fourth straight victory.

Gorman Thomas walked and Ben Oglivie was hit by a pitch to start the second. Money, Moore and Gantner followed with their RBI singles to give the Brewers a 3-2 lead. After a force out and a sacrifice fly, Cecil Cooper chased White Sox starter Richard Barnes, 0-1, with an RBI triple, and Ted Simmons, who had a two-run single in the eighth, capped the inning with a run-scoring single.

Aurelio Rodriguez homered for Chicago, which has lost five straight.

Yankees 7, A's 3 Rick Cerone knocked in two runs, one with his first home run since April 13, and Ron Guidry and Rudy May combined on a five-hitter as New York won its fourth straight game and the A's suffered their fifth consecutive loss.

Guidry, 9-4, allowed one earned run in 6½ innings, yielding all five A's hits. May pitched the last 22½ innings, striking out three.

New York took a 2-0 lead in the second on Roy Smalley's RBI single and Cerone's sacrifice fly. They made it 3-0 in the third on an RBI triple by Dave Winfield. Cerone, who missed 53 games this year with a broken left thumb, homered in the fourth.

Jeff Burroughs hit his sixth homer of the season for the A's.

Orioles 4, Mariners 3 Ken Singleton cracked a three-run homer and Sammy Stewart stopped Seattle on one-hit over the final 4½ innings in relief of starter Jim Palmer as Baltimore won for the fifth time in six games.

Singleton hit his seventh homer in the third inning following two walks by Seattle's Mike Moore, 4-7. The Orioles had taken a 1-0 lead in the second on Jim Dwyer's sacrifice fly.

The Mariners, who have lost six of their last seven, scored three runs in the fifth inning against Palmer on RBI singles by Manny Castillo and Bruce Bochte, and a sacrifice fly by Al Cowens.

Blue Jays 5, Rangers 4 Alfredo Griffin ripped a two-out RBI single in the 10th inning as Toronto defeated Texas to complete a four-game sweep.

Griffin lined the hit off Danny Darwin, 6-4, to score pinch runner Anthony Johnson from second base and help Joey McLaughlin, 8-3, picked up his sixth straight victory in relief.

Texas tied the game in the ninth on Bill Stein's pinch-hit double. Dave Hostetler drove in the Rangers' first three runs, two with his 13th homer. Jesse Barfield had a two-run homer for Toronto.

Indians 5, Angels 4 Bill Nahorodny pinch hit a two-out, two-run double in the bottom of the ninth inning as Cleveland downed California.

Doug Corbett, 1-9, walked Ron Hassey and pinch hitter Carl Pagel in the ninth and Nahorodny drilled reliever Andy Hassler's first pitch to right-center, scoring pinch runner Rodney Craig with the tying run and Pagel with the winner.

Ed Glynn, 4-0, worked three innings to earn his second victory in as many days over Corbett. Doug DeCinces knocked in three runs with a pair of home runs, while Bobby Grich added a solo shot for the Angels. Toby Harrah homered for Cleveland.

Twins 6, Tigers 1 Tom Brunansky, Gary Gaetti and Gary Ward slammed solo home runs to back Brad Havens' three-hit pitching as Minnesota snapped the Tigers' five-game winning streak.

Havens, 6-6, gave up singles to Lance Parrish in the second and Alan Trammell in the fifth. Larry Herndon hit a triple in the ninth and scored on Mike Ivie's sacrifice fly.

Phillies Victim Of Percentages

The law of averages and Mother Nature got at least part of the blame, but two Philadelphia Phillies had to shoulder some of it, too.

The Phillies had the San Francisco Giants down in the ninth inning and were just about to deliver the knockout blow when they threw the game away.

The culprits were third baseman Mike Schmidt, a Gold Glove winner, and right fielder Bill Robinson.

Philadelphia starter Larry Christenson, 5-5, entered the ninth with a 3-2 lead. But Jack Clark led off with a walk and took third on Reggie Smith's single.

Tug McGraw replaced Christenson and Max Venable ran for Smith. With one out, pinch-hitter Jim Wohlford grounded to Schmidt, who momentarily bobbled the ball for an error and threw too late to force Venable at second.

Clark scored to tie the game. One out later, Duane Kuiper batted for winning pitcher Atlee Hammaker, 7-5, and hit a ball that Robinson lost in right. It fell for a double, driving in the winning run.

Kuiper, whose hit snapped the Phillies' five-game winning streak, added: "The only thing I didn't want to do is strike out. The sun helped, but we'd been playing these guys close in every game with nothing to show for it until today."

The game was highlighted by Manny Trillo's record-setting fielding performance at second base. Handling five chances cleanly, the Phillies' infielder established a major league season record for second basemen with 427 consecutive chances without an error. The previous mark was set by Baltimore's Rich Dauer, who had 425 in 1978.

Al Oliver drove in the final run in Montreal's six-run second inning and added a solo homer in the sixth to power the Expos over San Diego. The first seven Montreal batters reached base in the second inning, with the first six scoring.

Padre starter Chris Welsh, 5-4, yielded seven Montreal runs in six innings.

Cardinals 6, Reds 5 Keith Hernandez hit a three-run homer in the second inning to key an early St. Louis splurge and send the Cardinals over Cincinnati.

Hernandez' homer, his fourth of the year, came off Charlie Leibrandt, 3-5, sending the Cincinnati starter to the showers. The blow established a 5-2 St. Louis lead which the Reds were unable to overcome, despite nine hits in the first five innings of Dave LaPoint.

Braves 4, Cubs 2 Biff Pocoroba drove in two runs with a pair of singles and Rick Camp scattered six hits to lead Atlanta over Chicago.

Pocoroba singled in a run in a three-run first inning and also singled home Rufino Linares from second with an insurance run in the sixth. Camp, 7-3, made only his fifth start of the season and turned in the first complete game of his career, while Doug Bird, 6-9, took the loss.

The Braves turned over four double plays to boost their major-league leading total to 109.

Mets 8, Dodgers 3 George Foster and Phil Mankowski singled home runs in the sixth inning and Wally Backman hit a bases-empty homer and singled home a run as New York beat Los Angeles.

Mike Scott, 7-7, earned the victory with relief help from Craig Swan, pitching for the first time since July 2. Swan earned his first save, shutting out the Dodgers over the final four innings.

The Dodgers took a 3-1 lead after four innings, but Backman homered with one out in the fifth off loser Bob Welch, 9-7. In the sixth, an error by Dodger shortstop Bill Russell opened the way for two unearned runs as Foster singled in the tying run and Mankowski knocked in Foster with the go-ahead run. Astros 4, Pirates 2

Bob Knepper tossed a five-hitter and Ray Knight hit two doubles and an RBI single as Houston downed Pittsburgh.

Knepper, 4-10, struck out three and walked three in winning his second straight start and posting his second complete game of the year.

Saturday's Cryptokuip — CROSSWORD CHALLENGE GAVE SOLVERS GLEE WHEN DONE.

Today's Cryptokuip clue: B equals E

The Cryptokuip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

State Studies Hobby Spending

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Efforts are under way to determine how much federal job-training money was spent by corporations headed by former state AFL-CIO president Wilbur Hobby, according to a state official. N. Wayne Daves of the state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, which oversees Comprehensive Employment and Training Act funds said his agency began reviewing federal grand jury records this month.

STITCHERY CLASS

A stitchery class will be held for youth ages 12 to 16. Registration will be Tuesday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at South Greenville Recreation building. Cost will be $2.50 for a four-week session.

The first class will be Wednesday from 3-5 p.m. and the second class will be Thursday at the same time. The remaining sessions will be held every Monday and Tuesday.

Basics to stitchery on plastic canvas, Swedish weaving and cross stitch will be taught. For further information call Alice Moore, 752-4137.

Solar Fraction

The solar fraction for this area Sunday, as computed by the East Carolina University Department of Physics, was .84. This means that a solar water heater could have provided 84 percent of your hot water needs.

In late 1980, the NRCD tried to recover $291,328 in CETA funds spent by two Raleigh-based corporations headed by Hobby, Precision Graphics Inc. and Carolina Skill Advancement Center.

The department halted its collection efforts in the fall of 1980 pending completion of a federal grand jury investigation into the contracts. Hobby was convicted in December 1981 of fraud and conspiracy involving one CETA contract. He has appealed his 18-month sentence and $40,000 fine.

It took NRCD officials six months to gain access to grand jury records of the companies' CETA activities. State officials said they needed the records to determine just how much the companies owed the state.

The companies have the right to appeal NRCD's decisions. If the department is unable to collect, it may have to repay the federal government.

THE ETERNAL TRIANGLE ... is not only for humans, but for insects as well. On a recent hot summer day, two male insects, left and center, engaged in an all-out battle for the favors of a young lady, at right. The battle took place on top of a spiky green Jimson weed burr. The lady insect turned her face away while the two males engaged in angry waving of antennae and thrusts of bristly legs. The male at center lost the engagement when he lost his footing and fell earthward. The victor and the young lady then marched happily together up a stalk of the weed. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

Analysts Say Too Soon To Gauge Salary Range In Microelectronics

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State officials say they'll have to wait until several microelectronics companies begin production in North Carolina before they can accurately gauge whether the industry will pay higher or lower wages than other industries in the state.

Gov. Jim Hunt has aggressively recruited microelectronics firms to the state as a way to bring higher paid jobs for better skilled workers. But critics have charged that the industry won't bring wages as high as those Hunt had hoped for.

Wages could range from the national average of $7.90 per hour for production workers in the semiconductor industry to $5 an hour which Intersil Inc. said it pays for lower skilled workers.

H. Lee Ausley, analyst for the state Employment Security Commission, said the state won't get a good idea of salaries in the industry until some companies move in to the area.

The ESC classifies the GE Microelectronics Center as the state's only facility that is part of the microelectronics industry. The plant hasn't started production, but Intersil's chief said at the plant's dedication last month that the average entry-level wage is about $5 an hour for lower skilled workers.

The ESC reports the average wage among electronics assemblers in the Research Triangle Park area was $5.45 an hour in January 1981. Ausley estimated a 10 percent increase in the average wage this year, to about $5.99.

Robert C. Wheeler, wage and labor market specialist for the Greater Raleigh

Chamber of Commerce, predicted that microelectronics companies would be unable to employ trained workers in the Triangle for less than about $7 an hour.

He said the average wage for all manufacturing production workers in the area was $7.20 in May, well above the statewide average of $6.28 an hour.

"If they're looking to pay the minimum wage, they don't want to come here,"

Wheeler said. "We tell them that right up front. If they come here, they're going to have to be competitive."

Intersil, a subsidiary of General Electric Co., will produce semiconductor chips at the GE Microelectronics Center in Research Triangle Park. The chips are cards containing tiny, complex circuits for computers.

An official of Data General Corp. said the average production wage there is slightly more than $6 an hour. But

W.E. Sherratt, industrial relations manager for Data General's Apex plant, pointed out that plant workers assemble a type of computer and are not strictly a part of the microelectronics industry.

Sherratt said the microelectronics companies considering plant sites in Raleigh are conducting extensive studies of the labor market to help determine their initial wages, but that he doesn't know what they are finding.

Shippers Protesting Toll

By The Associated Press
 Recent toll increases on the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel have drawn angry protests from Eastern Shore farmers and produce shippers who see their profits threatened.

The 17.6-mile bridge-tunnel, which connects Tidewater and the Eastern Shore, raised its toll rates April 1 because of an increase in operating costs.

The one-way rates for automobiles increased from $8 to $9; for five-axle tractor-trailers, such as those carrying freight, the toll went from $20 to $25.

It is the additional fee on the tractor-trailers, which transport the Eastern Shore's grains and vegetables to market, that has angered farmers.

"The farmers on the Shore are just plain penalized," complained Lorraine

Williams, president of Northampton Growers Inc., a vegetable packing company in Cheriton. "Every single load of grain and vegetables has to go through that awful toll. (The toll authority) has done a magnificent job of jeopardizing anything that can here on the Shore."

Farmers and truckers said the fare boost has in effect increased the existing competitive advantage of North Carolina firms, which can deliver their produce from points such as Elizabeth City or Weightsville to Tidewater without paying a toll.

Tidewater is a prime market for the Eastern Shore farmers, but, Ms. Williams added, "Why should the truckers ship from (the Shore) when they can do it from North Carolina cheaper?"

Instead of going to Tidewater, Eastern Shore produce tends to go to Washington, Baltimore and New York.

Some Eastern Shore farmers and vegetable packers, particularly those such as Ms. Williams who have used haulers not based in that area, are also concerned that the 25 percent toll increase will cause some independent produce truckers to bypass them and go to points where loading is cheaper.

Carolina truckers have agreed that the bridge-tunnel toll takes away the incentive to ship from the Shore because it increases the personal expense of those farmers.

Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond?

A. — You cannot respond one no trump because you might miss a 4-4 fit in one of the majors. However, we also consider it unappetizing to introduce a four-card suit that is so weak, especially where our hand is also weak and where we would prefer partner to declare. Therefore, we would respond one diamond. We dislike responding in a three-card suit, but the bid is quite logical. It leaves room for partner to introduce a major suit if he has one, and if he bids no trump we know that we are in the right strain.

Q.1 — East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠A ♠9 ♠Q98742 ♠Q10873

Partner opens the bidding with one diamond. What do you respond?

A. — If there is a way to bid this hand scientifically, we don't know it. You could have a slam in diamonds, or the hand could belong to the opponents in a major suit. But this does not seem to be the sort of hand that you should bid slowly to see what develops. Jump to five diamonds, and make the opponents guess at the five-level. And if partner is rich in controls, he is free to go on to six diamonds.

Q.2 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠KQ76 ♠AQ1092 ♠AJ92

The bidding has proceeded: South West North East 1♥ 2♠ Pass 2♦ ?

What action do you take?

A. — It looks as if the high cards are fairly evenly divided between the two sides. However, since you possess the major suits, you rate to have a considerable competitive edge. Your side could have a game if partner has as little as one high honor and some length in either of the majors. The correct action now is to double. Since partner has not yet bid, that is for takeout and shows interest in the unbid suit, in this case spades. At the same time the double also promises that your first suit is at least five cards long.

Q.3 — East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠762 ♠KJ85 ♠95 ♠KJ62

The bidding has proceeded: North East South 1♦ 1♥ ?

What action do you take?

A. — Since your hand does not qualify for a penalty double, you have to choose between a bid of one no trump or a pass. It is a close decision. However, we prefer the latter action. We consider your hand a point or two shy of a no trump bid, even though your heart honors should be promoted because they lie behind the overcaller.

Q.4 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠10763 ♠8542 ♠K76 ♠A8

Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond?

A. — There is only one place you want to play the hand — hearts. And despite the fact that you hold only two queens and a jack, you want to be in game. So bid four hearts. Even though there is no guarantee that you can make that contract, your hand is too strong distributionally for any other action. Just a few right cards in partner's hand will make game a laydown.

How do you choose the best opening lead? Charles Goren has the answer. For a copy of "Winning Opening Leads," send $1.85 to "Goren-Leads," care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 259, Norwood, N.J. 07648. Make checks payable to Newspaperbooks.

Q.5 — Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠KQ6 ♠83 ♠KQ6 ♠KQ854

Partner opens the bidding with four hearts. What action do you take?

A. — Partner has made a preemptive bid, which at this vulnerability promises seven tricks. Your three tricks should be just enough for him to make game. Don't even think of asking for aces. Since your side could easily be missing three, any move could get your side overboard.

Q.6 — North-South vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠5 ♠QJ87653 ♠8 ♠Q764

Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What do you respond?

Turner's Forte Is Countering Networks With SuperStation WTBS

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Jeff Chandler week began today. Next week, you can spend five mornings with Doris Day. You can also see movies on Saturday, when ABC, CBS and NBC are awash with cartoons, and more movies on Sunday, when the networks are getting into religion.

Welcome to SuperStation WTBS, the other network, where counterprogramming is the religion. Anything the over-the-air networks do, Ted Turner may not do better, but he'll certainly do differently.

The networks call it negative programming, as in losing propositions. Turner — and the daily 1 million viewers watching WTBS on cable — call it quality, anti-network programming.

"I give them a choice. I break the monopoly," says Turner, chairman and chief cheerleader of Atlanta's independent WTBS, which hitched a ride on the satellite to gain a national cable audience. "I give people a way out of the school bus attacked by truck drivers wearing bikinis.

"...You give people a choice between watching garbage and maybe a fine, classic movie, and many people will watch the movie."

Movies, also the staple of Turner's cable competitors, Home Box Office and Showtime, occupy 50 percent of WTBS' schedule. "We can program movies any time," says Robert Wussler, president of WTBS. "We have 4,200 movies in our library. People never tire of the classics."

WTBS, which has a potential reach of 21.2 million households, is seen at least once a week by 70 percent of those homes, according to the A.C. Nielsen Co.

Besides movies, WTBS offers sports, old network sitcoms, news and a smidgen of original programming.

Sports is a big seller, a come-on for advertisers and cable systems. Turner, owner of baseball's Atlanta Braves and basketball's Atlanta Hawks, sends sports to places without major league teams.

WTBS calls the Braves "America's Team," and fan clubs in Valdez, Alaska, Phoenix, Ariz., and Reno, Nev., attest to their national appeal. In the Nanook, Alaska, chapter of the Braves Fan Club, the faithful have forced their local bar to buy another TV set for non-baseball fans.

This fall, WTBS has exclusive cable rights to a weekly, live college football game after ABC and CBS have made their choices. And, as a bonus for sports fans, WTBS outbid everybody for the long-awaited basketball meeting of Virginia, with center Ralph Sampson, and Georgetown, with Patrick Ewing, Dec. 11.

The battle plan for WTBS and Turner's other broadcast entity, Cable News Network, is anti-network 24 hours a day.

At 7 p.m., while the networks are offering news, WTBS is showing "Green Acres" with Eddie Albert and Eva Gabor. "It was a clear-cut No. 1 broadcast in its day," says Wussler. "Very few stations run it today. It's quality, family oriented comedy."

Nostalgia buffs can overdose on fatherly advice by 7 p.m. on WTBS. Beginning at 4:05, there's "The Addams Family," then "Ozzie and Harriet," "The Partridge Family," "Hazel," "My Three Sons," "Father Knows Best," "Green Acres," and "Andy Griffith."

Another Turner wrinkle is starting programs at five minutes past the half hour, hoping to pick up dissatisfied dial-switchers and chronic slowpokes who miss the beginning of the networks' shows. Perhaps more importantly, this tactic gives WTBS a separate listing in TV Guide.

Though WTBS reported an operating profit of $17.9 million in 1981, the last period for which the information is available, the Turner Broadcasting System, the station's corporate parent, is losing money — $5.3 million in the first quarter of this year.

Wussler says the financial woes won't keep WTBS from producing its own programs, although the first broadcast of one project was delayed from September to January. "Portrait of America" will profile America's 50 states and possessions in 60 one-hour documentaries over the next five years, thus assuring WTBS of counterprogramming through 1987.

Musician Flies His Own Plane

TULLAHOMA, Tenn. (AP) — Larry Hoepfinger makes the 85-mile trip from his Cookeville home to Nashville twice a week in about 30 minutes, but he doesn't worry about traffic tickets or state troopers.

Hoepfinger, 42, who doubles as a professor of music at Tennessee Tech and as the Nashville Symphony Orchestra's bass trombonist, makes the trip in his own airplane — one he built himself.

"If I had to drive it all the time, I wouldn't do it," the bearded Hoepfinger said at a recent gathering of home-built airplane enthusiasts in Tullahoma. "It was bad enough when the speed limit was 75, but when they dropped the speed limit to 55 it made the trip a whole lot longer."

Hoepfinger has been at Tennessee Tech for 16 years. A native of Nebraska, he began flying in 1966 and is now a commercial pilot and flight instructor.

He began commuting to his symphony rehearsals and performances shortly after earning his private pilot's license, flying in a Cessna Skyhawk. A few years later he purchased a Mooney, a more sophisticated airplane capable of about 180 mph.

Then he became involved in the Experimental Aircraft Association, an international organization made up of sport aviation enthusiasts who build their own airplanes or restore antique and classic planes.

In 1976, Hoepfinger decided to build a Vari-Eze, a fiberglass plane designed by Californian Burt Rutan. The futuristic-looking Vari-Eze's swept wings and propeller are in the rear and a small "canard" wing is mounted in the nose.

The pilot and passenger sit beneath a plastic bubble similar to those on jet fighter planes.

But what caught Hoepfinger's eye was the plane's speed and efficiency. The plane's designer was claiming speeds of almost 200 mph on less than five gallons of fuel an hour.

"I had no inclination to build an airplane," Hoepfinger said. "But then I read the articles about the plane ... It just made a lot of sense."

The musician-pilot took almost three years to complete his airplane project, although he stopped work on it for about 10 months. He flew it for the first time in the summer of 1979.

"We had carburetor and oil temperature problems at first, and it took a while to get that straightened out," he said.

Carla Wallenda Has No Fear Of 'Flying' High

By JEFF BARNARD
Associated Press Writer
PAWTUCKET, R.I. (AP) — Hanging by an ankle on a swaying pole 110 feet above the ground, Carla Wallenda doesn't think about the fall that claimed the life of her high-wire-walking father.

"I don't feel it's dangerous because I know what I'm doing," Miss Wallenda said. "Once my spotlight fuse blew out and I was up there hanging in the dark and all I could think of was my husband would be mad at me because I left the Crockpot on."

As the spoke, she speared another porkchop from a frying pan and put it in the Crockpot to keep warm as she stood in the kitchen of the trailer where she lives while performing away from her Sarasota, Fla., home.

A pet snake, two dogs and a monkey sniffed her feet as she prepared dinner for her husband, Mike Morgan, and 14-year-old daughter, Valarie.

Outside stood the 110-foot pole where she would climb that night to entertain the crowds on the midway at Billy Burr's Funorama in a week-long stint at Pawtucket's Narragansett Park.

She is the daughter of Karl Wallenda, the circus legend killed four years ago at the age of 73 when high winds blew him from a high wire stretched between two high-rise hotels in San Juan, Puerto Rico.

As a girl she sat in a chair balanced atop the seven-man pyramid invented by her father as the crowning achievement of the Great tiger pit at the Columbus, Ohio, Zoo.

"My four kids are the eighth generation and they're all dedicated to aerial work," she said.

"The seven-man pyramid has never been duplicated. I heard of an act in South America that is supposed to do one, but it's not the same as my father's with the chair on the top."

Despite the tragedies which have hit her family, Miss Wallenda says she has no fear of flying.

"My grandmother was a performer all her life and she died of old age at 96. I had an uncle who was run over by a drunk driver when he was very young, so ... This is our way of life. Tragedy to me is like some of those coal miners who go into the mines for generations and generations and face that danger."

She reached into a cupboard for a week-old newspaper clipping showing her son Enrico, 27, walking a tightrop stretched over a

Hunt's Action Disappointing To NCAE Leader

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — In a parting shot, the outgoing president of the North Carolina Association of Educators says Gov. Jim Hunt hasn't been the education governor he claims to be.

John I. Wilson, who this month concluded a stormy one-year term as president of the North Carolina Association of Educators, says the Hunt administration has had more flash than substance on school issues.

"I basically think he's sincere about things he wants to do for the public schools, but I think he's made some very bad judgments about how to do that," Wilson said.

"I'm not convinced the efforts have been put forth to put his words into action."

Wilson, a Raleigh teacher who was the youngest president of the 41,500-member statewide teachers organization in recent years, has been an outspoken Hunt critic mainly on account of teacher salaries.

Hunt recommended, and the General Assembly approved, a salary freeze for teachers and state employees this year as a way to cut state spending. The freeze canceled scheduled increment increases already built into the teacher pay scale.

"I think he did us in on that," Wilson said in an interview last week after officially leaving office.

"All the rhetoric about supporting public schools is not going to convince teachers, because they are going to see in their paycheck that they lost that," he added.

But Wilson said his complaints about the Hunt administration run deeper than this year's salary. There is a pattern of Hunt's courting teachers near election time and ignoring them later, he charged.

When his 1980 re-election campaign was approaching, Hunt recommended and won a 10 percent cost-of-living pay raise for teachers plus a revised salary scale that gave many teachers overall raises of 15 percent or better. Last year Hunt's proposed 5 percent raise was delayed half a year, and this year salaries were frozen.

"I think that the pattern shows that teachers do the best before an election year with Hunt, and I think that is the wrong political strategy on his part," Wilson said. "If he wants to be recognized as a pro-education governor, then it should be steady support every year."

Hunt press secretary Gary Pearce says Wilson is unfair to the governor on that point and welcomes the arrival of his successor, Thomasville teacher Loretta Martin, who, Pearce says, is more reasonable.

"The record proves him wrong," Pearce said. "He's being unfair to the governor, particularly on the salary issue this year. He either didn't understand or didn't want to understand economic realities."

Pearce said Wilson has failed to give Hunt proper credit for some accomplishments this year, such as passage of a provision that provides a tax shelter on money automatically deducted from teacher salaries for their retirement fund. The effect was a small boost in take-home pay.

Wilson, who is seeking a leadership position in the National Education Association, said there are other flaws in Hunt's record.

He said Hunt has focused on creating new education projects that are easily identifiable with himself — such as the science and mathematics high school, the primary-grade reading program, testing programs and others.

Those initiatives have come while existing projects have languished, Wilson contended.

"What education really needs is someone who takes programs we already have and improves them on a steady basis," Wilson said. As examples, he pointed to a need for class-size reductions, for more instructional supplies and for improved music, physical education and art instruction in elementary grades.

ECU Publishes Off-Campus Guide

ECU News Bureau. "The ECU Survival Kit for Living Off-Campus," an illustrated 22-page guidebook for students living in off-campus housing, has been published for distribution this fall by the East Carolina University Division of Student Life and the ECU Student Government Association.

The book describes various types of housing available — rented rooms, apartments, houses and mobile homes — and provides explanatory information regarding oral and written leases, subletting, rental security deposits and other legal concerns of renters.

Also included are sections on energy use, with details about utility meters and utility bills, and excerpts from the federal Fair Housing Policy and the City of Greenville Housing Code.

Among the guidebook's appendices are a glossary of legal definitions of housing-related terms, a sample checklist for indicating condition of rental property, a sample lease, a suggested form for a written roommates' agreement and a Greenville city map showing the location of major shopping centers and public parks. The guidebook supplements an earlier publication, a brochure giving general information about living off campus.

Police Arrest Man After Chase

COINJOCK, N.C. (AP) — A Maryland man who police said is wanted in three states has been captured following a high-speed chase through heavy weekend traffic.

Neil Edgar Beacham, 43, of Annapolis, Md., was apprehended Sunday after a pursuit that began in Kill Devil Hills and ended at the Coinjock Bridge, police said.

"This morning we got a tip at headquarters and when Officer (Vernon B.) Hart went to look for him there he was in front of the Cavalier Motel," said Sgt. Bill Walker of the town's police department. "Hart did a good job driving after him."

Hart sighted the 1982 gold-painted Porsche that Beacham was thought to be driving, and the pursuit began when the car failed to stop.

Apparently no other vehicles were struck during the chase, although the beach area was crowded with noonday traffic, police said.

The Porsche, weaving in and out of traffic, roared across the Wright Memorial Bridge into Currituck County at speeds in excess of 100 mph, Hart said.

Currituck Sheriff Norman Newbern Jr. and Deputy Wallace

O'Neal Jr. attempted to block the car at Grandy, but the driver eluded them. Also joining the chase were North Carolina Highway Patrol troopers, and the Currituck sheriff's dispatcher called the bridge tender at Coinjock to request that the swing bridge be opened to block the car.

When Beacham saw the gates were down at the Coinjock Bridge, he attempted to swing into a road through a self-service gas station, which was crowded with customers.

Police vehicles were waiting all around the gas station and the bridge approaches and Beacham drove the Porsche into a ditch, where it stalled, police said.

Hart and O'Neal arrested the driver and returned him to Kill Devil Hills. Walker said Beacham was being held without bond in the Dare County Jail.

"I looked down at the speedometer and it was hitting 110 (mph)" at one point in the chase, O'Neal said. "I didn't look down any more after that."

Walker said Beacham is "wanted in three states, and they're all fighting for him."

He said Beacham faces charges of arson in Maryland, and police in the northern Virginia community of Vienna want him "for stealing that Porsche in an armed robbery July 16."

Rep. Broyhill Says He's Surprised By Clash With Environmentalists

By The Associated Press
Rep. James Broyhill, R-N.C., says he is puzzled about why environmentalists are opposed to his efforts to streamline the Clean Air Act, a position which has caused one environmentalist group to label him as the champion "for dirty air."

Broyhill, chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee and a reported candidate for secretary of the Department of Energy, is co-sponsoring a bill he says would amend the Clean Air Act without changing national air-quality standards.

The act, passed in 1955 and overhauled in 1977, establishes the national plan for controlling air pollutants.

Environmentalists contend the bill would more than double auto-emission standards, provide long deadline extensions for meeting national air standards, weaken protection for national parks and wilderness areas and permit the Environmental Protection Agency to make its penalties optional.

But Broyhill says his bill would make it simpler to achieve national air standards, speed up the process of approving state air-control plans, provide reasonable extensions and more flexibility for states to reach air-quality goals and ensure that a variety of other factors are considered in the act, including employment opportunities.

"I must confess, I don't know what all this fuss is about," insisted the 10-term veteran from Lenoir. "The changes we are trying to make are moderate. But they (environmentalists) are galvanizing the forces supporting this bill."

The League of Conservation Voters in Washington has called him "a rotten egg." At the National Wildlife Federation headquarters, he is seen as a champion "for dirty air."

The National Coalition for Clean Air accused him of trying "to maul the Clean Air Act." And the Sierra Club's Washington office termed him "the most outstanding example" of North Carolina's environmentally lackluster congressional delegation.

Many observers have expressed confusion about what has motivated Broyhill to rework one of the hallmarks of environmental protection.

His district consists of seven mostly rural counties in the Blue Ridge Mountains and it has no major industrial polluters. But some environmentalists suggest that as the son and namesake of furniture magnate J.E. Broyhill, he is a natural opponent of federal regulation.

Explaining his active role, Broyhill notes that he is the ranking Republican on the committee and says, "It's my job."

He said his actions have not stemmed from more than $26,000 in campaign contributions he's received over the past two years from some clean air violators.

Conservationists say things appear differently.

"Broyhill is so far out in left field on this — I should say right field, I guess — that it's inescapable that he's being used as a pawn for industry by this administration," said Jay Hair, a former North Carolina State University professor who is now executive vice president of the National Wildlife Federation.

"They're going well beyond what's necessary to streamline the law," he said.

Broyhill says he hopes to get the measure through this year, but adds, "You ask me two weeks from now and I may say it's dead."

Duke Divinity Dean Dies

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Dr. James Jones, the ninth dean of Duke University's Divinity School and a leading Methodist in the nation, died Sunday of an apparent heart attack. He was 53.

Jones had served as the school's dean since February 1981. Before his appointment he had served 11 years at the Iliff School of Theology in Denver. He also had served as president of the Association of the United Methodist Theological Schools and the University Senate of the United Methodist Church, the accrediting agency for more than 100 colleges, universities and theological schools.

Duke President Terry Sanford said Jones had made an impact on Duke, a Methodist university, in his short tenure. "His abilities as both an educator and scholar have given us much and had promised more," Sanford said. "We shall miss him both as a unique colleague and an irreplaceable leader."

Funeral plans were incomplete Sunday night.

Tobacco Industry Opens Attack On Tax Proposal

R.J. Reynolds Industries and others in the tobacco industry have embarked on a lobbying campaign in hopes of defeating a proposal to double the excise tax on cigarettes.

The Winston-Salem cigarette manufacturer has sent letters to its estimated 95,000 shareholders asking them to send a "Mailgram" to Congress voicing opposition to the measure. The letter was signed by company Chairman J. Paul Sticht.

The Senate was expected to begin consideration today of a tax package which includes a provision to increase the cigarette excise tax from 8 cents a pack to 16 cents.

If approved, it would be the first increase in the federal cigarette sales tax in 31 years.

Despite the lobbying effort, tobacco industry leaders and their political allies say they are in for a fight. The cigarette tax increase has gained momentum after picking up the support of the Reagan administration, the Senate Republican leadership and some business groups.

"It is not going to be easy," said U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C.

Helms and U.S. Sen. J. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., plan to offer an amendment this week that would substitute a higher tax on liquor instead of the cigarette tax.

But Helms admits that such a move is longshot.

The cigarette tax boost was proposed July 1 by Republicans on the Senate Finance Committee. It was part of a plan to raise $21.1 billion — the largest tax increase in peacetime history — in an effort to reduce the record 1983 budget deficit of more than $100 billion.

The cigarette sales tax increase would raise an estimated $1.3 billion in new revenues in 1983.

Helms says a cigarette tax increase was recommended because the health issue surrounding smoking made cigarettes an inviting target.

"For the past several years," he said, "there has been a barrage of propaganda against tobacco compared to hard liquor," which Helms calls "the real killer."

"It is so easy to attack tobacco," Helms said. "You have so few states that grow it."

Helms says the chief argument by tobacco-state senators against the increase is the regressive nature of a cigarette excise tax.

"If you believe in progressive tax policies, you have to recognize that these fellows who earn $10,000 a year are bearing an inordinate burden compared to the guy who makes $50,000 per year and also smokes."

Helms says he may have difficulty getting the Senate to consider an amendment to substitute a liquor sales tax for a cigarette tax, because Senate rules strictly limit non-germane amendments on this bill.

He said he may try to get the Senate to recommit the bill to committee with instruction to examine a liquor tax.

U.S. Sen. John P. East, R-N.C., said another strategy would be to kill the tax package.

Second District Runoff Avoids Racial Issue

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. (AP) — As the July 27 runoff election for the 2nd Congressional District nears, Democratic candidates "Mickey" Michaux and "Tim" Valentine continue to avoid making race an issue.

But despite their reluctance to talk about race, the fact remains that the nomination of the 51-year-old Michaux would put him one step closer to becoming the first black congressman in North Carolina in more than 80 years.

In a primary runoff, especially one with an obvious although unspoken racial element, getting voters to turn out is everything. Both candidates say they are relying on telephone canvasses and precinct chiefs to get the voters out on election day.

The winner of the runoff will face Republican Jack Marin, a former professional basketball player from Durham who has significant backing from the National Congressional Club, the political organization of GOP Sen. Jesse Helms. Republicans have made it no secret they support Valentine because they think he would prove less of an adversary than Michaux.

Blacks make up about 36 percent of the registered Democrats in the 2nd District, which stretches from west of Durham to east of Rocky Mount. For 30 years, the district was represented by Democrat L.H. Fountain. Fountain announced his retirement after the N.C. General Assembly revised the district in 1981.

Michaux, of Durham, has avoided making racial distinctions in the contest for the revised district. However, political observers say Michaux is battling a truism that blacks traditionally do not do as well against a white in a runoff election.

For example, Howard Lee, a black who unsuccessfully challenged Fountain in 1972, led a first primary for lieutenant governor in 1976 only to be defeated by a white candidate in a runoff.

Michaux thinks he can do better. "This is a new district and a new day," he said. "That was six years ago."

Valentine, 56, also has avoided racial undertones in his campaign. Instead, he has depicted himself as a conservative with close philosophical ties to Fountain. He has missed few opportunities to call Michaux, a former state legislator, a free spender with a record of favoring higher taxes who is too liberal for the district.

Valentine also has tried to paint Michaux with a liberal brush, citing Michaux's support as a legislator for tax-rate reform and accusing him of being aligned with big labor "bosses."

"I think he has depicted himself as a liberal and big spender throughout all of his legislative service," Valentine said.

Michaux has focused on economic issues, blaming President Reagan and the Republicans for business failures and farm bankruptcies in the district, which is heavily dependent on tobacco growing and cigarette manufacturing.

Smith said the debates with Valentine are of importance because they point out Valentine's support for GOP economic policies.

The two candidates have been outlining their differences in a succession of meetings before civic and political groups across the 2nd Congressional District.

ORGAN OFFER — David Severn, 42, of Bebanon, Ill., has offered to sell one of his body organs for transplant in an effort to raise funds. Severn, an unemployed graduate student, says he has several debts and no other means of raising money. His offer includes any organ that is paired, such as eyes or kidneys. (AP Laserphoto)

The peanut crop in Pitt County continues to progress nicely this year. The abundant rainfall has produced a peanut crop with a very lush vine growth. If these large peanut plants can be maintained through the rest of the season then chances may be good for abundant yields in October.

But a great deal of vine growth does not guarantee a high yield. July and August are the midseason points in the peanut growing season and the past problems that occur at this time will affect yields later on. The amount of rainfall that Pitt County peanut farmers have had this season could possibly set the stage for disease and rootworm problems.

Peanut leafspot disease is made worse during wet, warm seasons. The past two growing seasons have been dry for the most part and consequently were light leafspot years. It would pay a grower to be very sure that leafspot sprays are frequently applied this year.

In fields where peanut leafspot is severe, the brown or black circular lesions with a yellow halo around them on the upper peanut surface will cause leaves to be shed from the plants. These fallen leaves gather around the stem underneath the peanut plants. The canopy of peanut vines and warm humid days provides an ideal location for development of southern stem rot or "white mold."

Fields that have a history of "white mold" problems or that have had widespread defoliation may need to have a fungicide application of Terraclor or Vita-Vax to reduce the spread of southern stem rot. The presence of fuzzy white mold and mustard-seed-like bodies at the base of wilted or dead peanut plants indicates southern stem rot.

A farmer should know the extent of "Cylindrocladium" black root rot (CBR) that he will have by August. This disease is first seen, during warm spells in late June and throughout July. No chemical control exists at present one variety of seed, NC8C, shows some resistance.

Also it appears that a field infested with CBR should not be tilled in the fall. A severe winter will reduce the number of surviving spores of the fungus, and where an infested field has been disked after harvest in the fall, the fungus seems to survive better.

One or two other precautions based upon excessive rainfall this year might be the use of Kylar, a growth regulator to reduce the size of peanut vines. Also, an insecticide treatment for the southern corn rootworm may help. The larva of this insect eats a hole into the developing peanut at pegging time and later on as the pods continue to develop. Research in Virginia and North Carolina indicates that southern corn rootworm is worse in wet-natured soils.

Entomologists in Virginia suggest that if you see 3-4 adults of the southern corn rootworm, the spotted cucumber beetle, while walking 50 feet down a row, then you should consider treating for rootworms.

It takes about 10 days from the emergence of the young adults until the eggs they lay will be hatching. You should begin scouting for the 12-spotted cucumber beetle around the 15th of July and you should concentrate on those fields that are lower and wetter or adjacent to cucumber fields.

The size of peanut vines is no indication of how large a crop of peanuts will be available. Growers should use all necessary precautions to limit costs of production but at the same time do what is necessary to obtain high yields.

Production guides for peanuts are available at local Agricultural Extension offices.

Adult-Teens Workshop Set

"Almost Even," a workshop focusing on parent-adolescent relationships, will be conducted by Pitt County Mental Health Center on July 22. The workshop is designed for adult and teen-age participants.

The workshop will explore how adolescent changes affect the parent-teen-ager relationship and will emphasize the management of conflict and the improvement of parent-teen relationships.

The workshop is scheduled for 7-9:30 p.m. at the First Presbyterian Church on Elm Street. The registration is $3 per person or $5 per family.

For more information call Don Reeves, Pitt County Mental Health Center, 752-7151.
