Street Budget Suffers When Repairs Needed

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector STaff Writer

It costs a lot of money to build streets and highways, but the construction price is only the initial investment. It takes a lot of money to maintain them once cars and trucks start rolling over their surface and the roadway is subjected to blazing heat, rain, snow and freezing weather.

In recent years, it seems, money for maintenance — and construction — has been in short supply.

There are 160 miles of streets in Greenville, 131 miles of them maintained by the city's public works department. The N.C. Department of Transportation maintains some 1,050 miles of roads in Pitt County, including 29 miles within the Greenville city limits.

For the 1982-83 fiscal year, the city budgeted $40,830 for maintenance and repair (and another $25,000 for resurfacing), while the DOT budget for maintenance of roads and highways in the county amounts to some $2 million.

Public works Director Mayo Allen said, "I would classify that ($40,830) as enough" in a normal year to do a good job. "But when you have trouble like (the cave in of) First Street (which fell victim to heavy rains earlier this month) ... no. You can't budget for unexpected problems like that.

"The pipe (carrying rain water under First Street between Reade and Holly streets) was put in in the early 1950s and the whole bottom had rusted out. It rusted completely out, 25 feet in the ground. There could be others the same way and we not know it" until the street gives way, Allen suggested.

The repair to First Street, which will include the installation of two 72-inch diameter re-enforced concrete pipes under the street, will cost from $82,000 to $90,000. "We're putting it back the very best way it can be put back," Allen explained.

While Allen views the maintenance and repair budget — money for such things as patching potholes, scraping, sweeping, and installation of curb and gutter — as adequate, he feels there is "not enough for resurfacing." The $25,000 allocated this year "can resurface a mile or two," he said. "I'd like to see five or 10 miles a year resurfaced. We have not resurfaced enough streets per year in the past. We've always been slow on resurfacing."

However, Allen suggested, Greenville "probably has less dirt streets in town ... 2½ miles of dirt streets in the 160-mile system ..." than other cities.

While "we have a good maintenance program ... we have got a conservative budget, but I think it's adequate," Allen said one of the major problems is drainage.

"It's adequate for normal type weather. But the drainage system will not accept water if it comes two inches an hour. It's very expensive to have a system to handle rain water at two inches an hour," Allen emphasized.

"The runoff is good. Some areas will flood for a short period of time, but in 15 to 20 minutes the water is gone. And I feel like we're in as good a shape, if not better, than the average city anywhere."

One thing, according to Allen, that has helped the drainage problem is the establishment of a ditch crew. "We organized a ditch crew within the street division about two years ago. The crew cleans ditches on a regular schedule, at least once a year. That's one reason the runoff is good ... because the ditches are clear.

"The biggest problem," he suggested, is that trash placed

First Street
It's Still Weeks Away

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Motorists are several weeks away from again utilizing First Street to skirt the business and college districts as city crews and contractors continue to repair the drainage system that collapsed under the street on July 13.

Carl Dawson, the public works department's operations manager, says more excavation work remains at the site below the Reade Street intersection before a new drainage network can be installed and the street repaired.

The city has been faced with digging out and removing the damaged drainage section that collapsed during the July 13 heavy rains and a decision has to be made relative to the construction of a drainage system that will take water from First Street over to the Tar River. The street can not be repaired until that segment of the drainage network is operational.

Ron Sewell, director of engineering for the city, said that an open channel from the area north of the street to the river is being considered as the most efficient, cost effective measure of handling the water.

"We are looking at another month," Sewell said in assessing the status of the giant repair job.

The existing drainage pipe just beyond the street will be removed and salvaged for other uses and the open channel will have to meet Corps of Engineers specifications. Sewell said a permit for the work is required from the corps since the river is involved.

According to Dawson, two 72-inch concrete pipes will be installed under First Street to accomodate drainage, more than doubling the previous capacity. During the recent rains, a concrete head wall, installed during the 1950s to protect the pipe, collapsed and crushed the First Street drainage outlet. Water backed up in upstream areas, causing flooding on Reade Circle.

Dawson said the excavation work involves not only the area under the street but the section that will accomodate the open channel.

Contract and material costs alone for the job were estimated by Sewell to be in the neighborhood of $88,000, not figuring city labor and other factors that would swell the total repair bill.

EXCAVATION ... Repair crews are continuing their excavation of the collapsed portion of First Street. The excavation must be completed before a new drainage system can be installed to carry runoff water to the Tar River. It may take several weeks to complete the project. States Gain As Cigarette Smuggling Drops Off

By LEE CREEK
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Cigarette smuggling has declined since passage of the Cigarette Smuggling Act of 1979, but authorities aren't sure by how much.

At one point, states were losing nearly $400 million in tax revenues, with authorities blaming most losses on high state cigarette taxes. The big loser, New York, had one of the highest state taxes at 23 cents a pack.

Investigators said smugglers were purchasing cigarettes in North Carolina, where the tax is 2 cents a pack, shipping them to New York and selling them for an additional $2.10 per carton profit.

Officials with the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms say the smuggling abated after the act passed, because the act carried with it a 5-year prison term and a $100,000 fine.

According to the Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations in Washington, D.C., North Carolina was a big gainer in 1975, receiving an additional $16.6 million in revenues because of smuggling. In contrast, New York lost $72.3 million Florida dropped $35.7 million in 1975.

Mel Bruce, ATF Tobacco adviser in Washington, said the most recent figures — those of 1980 — show North Carolina's gain had dropped to $11.4 million while losses decreased to $32.1 million in New York and $28 million in Florida.

"I think the concensus is yes, it has helped," Bruce said. "The commissioner of revenue in New York testified not too long ago to continue funding in support of the program because it had made a tremendous difference."

"In the fiscal year (1975) the commission said New York was losing $72.3 million," New York Revenue Commissioner James Tulley told a U.S. Senate subcommittee on appropriations in March this year. "In the last year, we've reduced it to $28 million. I attribute this significant improvement largely to ATF's enforcement of the act. If this enforcement is curtailed, I would expect New York's losses to increase by about $40 million annually. New York City would lose an additional $10 (million) to $15 million annually."

In 1980, ATF reduced its enforcement because of federal cutbacks, a decision Bruce said he would rather have not had made public.

"We'd rather prevent crimes from happening than have to arrest people," Bruce said. "We had never planned to continue enforcement at the very same level indefinitely, keeping in mind that once you get a problem under control, you can maintain it with a lot less than it took to get it down. Once we contained it, we could keep it down at a reasonable level with much less manpower."

Joey Thurman, assistant special agent in charge of the federal ATF in Atlanta, said the threat of punishment is working in Georgia, which has a 12-cent-per pack cigarette tax.

"We have not had a case in Georgia since the law passed," he said. "I'm sure there is some of that going through the state of Georgia from one state to another. But we have not detected any pattern here of smuggling into Georgia from some other state."

Helms, Then East:
Tar Heel Solons' Switch Signaled Hike In Taxes

By The Associated Press

It was past 4:30 a.m., the Senate had been in session 19½ hours, and Sen. Bob Dole was in danger of losing the tax-increase bill in which he had invested so much.

As the clock ran out Friday morning on the final roll call, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., the New Right leader who had made no secret of his distaste for raising taxes, sighed, signaled the clerk and changed his vote to "aye."

Helms' protege, Sen. John East, R-N.C., who was encircled by fellow Republicans in the front of the Senate chamber, stared at the floor for several seconds before raising a hand, switching his earlier "no" vote and sealing a 50-47 victory on the bill.

Eighteen hours earlier, Dole, a Kansas Republican, apparently had picked up the North Carolina votes by engineering a compromise on an increase in cigarette taxes. He had wanted a permanent doubling of the tax to 16 cents a pack; Helms, East and other tobacco-state senators wanted no increase. The final compromise provided for a 16-cent tax for the next three years and a return to 8 cents thereafter.

Helms later defended the votes cast by him and East that supported the tax package, including the 8-cent-per-pack cigarette tax boost, by saying they did so to save the bill. Reaction was critical in North Carolina, the largest producer of flue-cured tobacco.

"I find it quite ironic that they would switch their votes in order to save from defeat the largest tax increase in the history of this nation," said Brent Hackney, deputy press secretary to Gov. Jim Hunt.

Helms was awakened Friday morning by a telephone call from President Reagan aboard Air Force One thanking him for his vote for the tax increases. Reagan had supported the measure.

"My intent had been not to support it because of the increase in taxes over the three-year period," Helms said. "I think that's the wrong way to go."

Helms said both he and East first voted against the measure on the roll call vote, resulting in a 49-47 vote to defeat the bill, but he changed his vote after the roll call.

"There's some good features in the bill," he said. "We did some surgery on it and made it somewhat more palatable during the long night. If the bill had been defeated ... they would have had to start all over again and (have) a delay in any action by Congress that would have been harmful to any hopes for reviving the economy. So I switched my vote and John East switched his."

East could not be reached for comment and his press secretary, Jerry Woodruff, did not return two telephone calls from reporters.

Hackney said Hunt was "surprised" by their votes.

"He would hope and expect North Carolina's senators would vote to protect the interests of North Carolina tobacco farmers," Hackney said. "However, Senators Helms and East will have to speak for themselves."

State Sen. Russell Walker of Asheboro, state Democratic Party chairman, released a prepared statement criticizing the senators, saying their votes "speak a lot louder than their empty rhetoric."

Walker said the senators earlier voted to defeat an amendment sponsored by Democrats that would have eliminated the cigarette

'White House Calling...'

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — A 76-year-old man hung up more than six times on President Reagan, convinced his caller was a crank.

"The operator insisted it was Washington, D.C.," said Robert German, who sells hats from his home in suburban Richmond Heights. "I thought he was crazy so I hung up."

After more than a half-dozen trys, the White House finally got through to German Friday after Southwestern Bell convinced him the president really was on the line and wanted to chat.

"My husband was on the phone with businessmen and the operator kept cutting in on them," said German's wife, Adele. "He was really annoyed until he found out who it was."

German said Reagan called after he read a newspaper story that said German's wife and daughter, Simone, 45, waited in vain for several hours Thursday in front of a downtown hotel to take a picture of the president.

Doctor's Patient Wins Suit

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — A jury has awarded $89,000 in damages to a 30-year-old woman who claimed her psychiatrist seduced her and supplied her with drugs while she was under his care.

The psychiatrist did not deny the affair, but said it began after the professional relationship ended.

In 1980, Audrey Chanley sued her psychiatrist of 10 years, George Prastka, claiming he had taken advantage of her trust in him and coerced her to have sex with him. She had asked for $1 million in damages, but a Superior Court jury awarded her $89,150 on Friday.

"Money was not the object in this case," said Ms. Chanley's attorney, Robert Schwartz. "It was the principle of the case.

"It was the fact that Dr. Prastka has now been told that what he did with Audrey Chanley was wrong and that society and the public are not going to put up with that kind of conduct from him or any other medical care provider," Schwartz said.

He said a number of psychiatrists have diagnosed Ms. Chanley as being suicidal, depressive and schizophrenic.

Prastka, a 50-year-old Newport Beach psychiatrist, surrendered his license to the state Bureau of Medical Quality Assurance in May 1980 after admitting he submitted fraudulent Medi-Cal bills for Ms. Chanley and prescribed the barbituate Quaalude for her when she was no longer his patient, according to the Orange County Register.

He testified he billed Medi-Cal for Ms. Chanley's office visits to hide their affair from his wife and office staff. The romance began in the summer of 1976 and the two had interludes at her apartment and his office, according to testimony.

"I really believe I'm fully responsible," he said after the award was returned. "I really feel very sorry and regret what occurred because I know I was wrong."

tax and made other changes in the GOP tax package.

However, they supported other moves to delete the tobacco tax increase, including a successful amendment that causes the increase to expire in three years.

"So our two senators are now undeniably on record as having voted to double the cigarette tax, a tax that could mean the loss of thousands of jobs in the state they purport to represent," Walker said.

The bill now heads to the House where Rep. Charles Rose, D-N.C., is a leading tobacco advocate. He said he'd oppose the tax increase but added, "I'm not very optimistic."

"There's a pretty big head of steam behind this thing as far as the administration is concerned," Rose said.

Most of Dole's battles over the tax package turned out equally well as he guided the bill through four days of debate, 67 amendments and a lot of hurt feelings. He lost only one major test on the bill, which would produce $98.5 billion in revenues over three years and comes on the heels of last year's record tax cut — $749 billion through 1986. But in the end Dole got some revenge on his single loss.

The bill that his Finance Committee had written imposed income-reporting requirements on businesses that employ tipped workers. The aim was to collect some taxes on the 85 percent of tips that the Internal Revenue Service estimates is never reported as income.

The restaurant and hotel lobby portrayed the provision as an attack on workers who earn the minimum wage. Democrats took up the fight and the provision was stripped from the bill, 70-25.

That left Dole more than $2 billion short of raising the revenue that the Senate had mandated through its budget process. He found a $2.8 billion answer: take away half the deduction that business people are allowed for expenses of feeding and entertaining clients.

There's a lot of abuse in the deduction and the big beneficiaries are the well-to-do, Dole said, lines often used by liberal Democrats in attacking the provision, which they have labeled the "three-martini lunch."

Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., who says the deduction is to business what fertilizer is to a farmer, protested that the change would devastate restaurants and their employees.

Dole held together enough Republicans who wanted to make sure the entire bill passed and added enough liberal Democrats, who traditionally oppose the deduction, to win on a 57-40 vote.

Although even the Treasury Department is not sure exactly what the amendment would do, its aim is to allow business people to continue fully deducting expenses of entertaining and feeding clients while out of town but to take only a half deduction for those expenses when they are not away.

"I'm proud of that amendment," Dole told reporters later. "It sort of capped our efforts. I'm certain the restaurant people will be glad to talk to us now about tips."

Dole, Senate Republican Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. and the Reagan administration had to invest a considerable amount of effort to nail down a victory on the provision requiring that 10 percent of interest and dividends be withheld for tax purposes at the time they are paid. If the provision was killed, they said, the whole bill — and the effort to cut the federal deficit — would fall with it.

The banking industry complained that withholding would multiply their paperwork, sharply increase costs and bring in nothing like the $12 billion that Dole claimed over the 1983-1985 period.

Several conservatives said withholding runs counter to President Reagan's push for less government.

Dole trotted out his "equity" argument, as he had on virtually every issue in the bill. "If you're not going to withhold from the rich people (those with interest and dividends) why are you going to withhold from working people?" he demanded. "Maybe we ought to repeal withholding" on wages.

Dole won again. But although he and Baker had tried to sell withholding to GOP colleagues as the ultimate test of Republican leadership, it took eight Democrats to assure him a 50-47 victory on the issue.

Cigarettes ...

Tennessee has no large smuggling problems, state officials say.

George Tidwell, former revenue commissioner and now deputy commissioner, said "when the federal government got involved in it, it declined somewhat."

Tidwell said the only case enforcement officials now plan to prosecute involves "an elderly gentleman who was making trips across the state line in a pickup truck and selling them in his store."

Tennessee's tax of 13 cents per pack is a great deal higher than its surrounding states. Kentucky's tax is now 2½-cents per pack and Virginia's is 3 cents per pack.

"South Carolina is a low-tax (7 cents per pack) state," said Jim Kegley of the ATF bureau in Columbia. "But the supply has been so good in the three states with lower taxes than us, smugglers don't need to tap into our state."

In Florida, where the state tax is 21 cents per pack, state agents in February 1981 seized 25,000 cartons of bootleg cigarettes in Miami, representing an $80,000 tax loss, and charged three men with delivering three truckloads of illicit smokes to officers.

Mississippi, Alabama and Georgia were not big tax gainers or tax losers as a result of smuggling, according to officials in those states. Mississippi has an 11 cents per pack tax while Alabama charges 16 cents per pack.

U.S. Attorney Sam Currin said that in North Carolina, his office has worked closely with the Postal Service to stop mail order cigarette smuggling, but said it is hard to tell if smuggling is increasing or decreasing.

"It's hard to say unlike, say drugs, for instance," Currin said. "I don't think the problem has gotten appreciably worse. I think one of the reasons that it has not is because of the fairly vigorous prosecutions of cigarette smuggling that this office has handled in the past."

Officials from all of the Southeastern states said they did not think a proposed 8-cents-per-pack federal tax increase will have an effect on smuggling, as prices will increase equally nationwide.

FBI Agent Chuck Richards in Charlotte, N.C., said his agency often gets involved because of the Racketeering Influence Corrupt Organization Statute, "if it can be proven that 'organized crime' individuals are taking ill-gotten monies and putting them into legitimate operations."

"It has been a problem in the past because of the difference in the tax in the upper Northeast region where cigarettes are taxed greatly compared to the tax in North Carolina," Richards said. "It makes it very advantageous for some individuals to smuggle cigarettes off hijacked trucks."

Southern Leaders Plan Session At Hilton Head

The economy, education, energy, nuclear waste, hazardous waste, the Reagan administration's New Federalism program, crime and agriculture will be among the topics discussed at the Southern Governors Association's 48th annual meeting Sunday through Wednesday.

Texas Gov. Bill Clements will unveil Tuesday a proposed national energy policy he says would be the nation's first. When the Republican announced his plans last week, Clements said the Reagan administration's energy policies were "in limbo."

At least 15 governors and 400 to 500 others including aides and government officials are expected, said Russ McKinney, spokesman for South Carolina Gov. Dick Riley, chairman of the association this year.

"This is the first time that it's being held in the summer," McKinney said.

The states' chief executives, who usually meet in the fall, wanted to get together before the National Governors Conference Aug. 8 in Afton, Okla., McKinney said.

In past years, he said, the conclaves had been made up of equal parts work and play. This meeting, which McKinney termed "more of a straight work program," the ratio will be 7-3.

Felix C. Rohatyn, chairman of New York's Municipal Assistance Corp. and one of the architects of that city's fiscal recovery, will be one of the featured speakers, a departure from past years when presidents spoke to the group.

Also appearing before the governors will be William A. Klopman, chairman of Burlington Industries: Alex H. Massad, executive vice president of Mobil Oil Corp.; and Rita M. La Velle, assistant administrator for solid waste and emergency response of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

The governors will also hold private powwows. "I've heard Governor Riley say that one of the main things he gets out of these meetings is to see and hear how other governor's handle their problems," McKinney said.

Education, one of Riley's chief interests, will be a focus of the conference.

"I think the governors, rightfully so, see that education is the key to the future," said McKinney.

Tuesday morning's schedule is entirely devoted to the topic. Among the issues McKinney expects are the relationship state and federal governments share in education, Federalism, funding cuts, leveling off of school enrollments and education and the change in the Southern economy.

The governors will consider at least 16 resolutions on issues ranging from the insanity defense to the 1992 World's Fair, according to Lois Segal, secretary for the association.

Panel Says Cuts To Hurt Defense

WASHINGTON (AP) — Continued reduction of federal funds for aircraft research will have "serious" consequences on national defense and the U.S. economy, a National Academy of Sciences panel says.

The committee from the academy's National Research Council said Friday that the budget cuts are occurring while allies such as Great Britain, West Germany and France are subsidizing their aircraft industries and conducting joint research.

Bubble Gum Executive Dies

NEW YORK (UPI) — Philip Shorin, a founder of the company that makes Bazooka bubble gum and the baseball cards traded by generations of American youngsters, died Saturday. He was 85.

Shorin, chairman emeritus of Topps Chewing Gum Inc., died at Mt. Sinai Hospital in Miami Beach, Fla. He had lived in retirement in Bal Harbour, Fla.

Topps, known principally as the maker of Bazooka Bubble Gum and Topps Baseball Bubble Gum cards, sells its products in 55 countries.

Shorin, a New York City native, and three of his brothers founded the company and developed a mass market for chewing gum by selling it in single sticks for a penny apiece at stores across the country.

He was a recipient of the Gold Medallion Award presented by the Federation of Jewish Charities and served on the boards of many charitable and civic organizations.

Shorin is survived by his wife, Celia; a brother, Abram; two sons, Joel and Edward;, and a daughter, Irma S. Barness.

Funeral services will be private.

Panel Seeking More Time

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government commission is asking Congress for more time and money to complete its investigation of the World War II internment of 120,000 Americans of Japanese descent in federal detention camps.

In a letter made public Friday, the Commission on Wartime Relocation and Internment of Civilians, which has received $1 million, said it needed another $500,000 as well as a six-month extension of its work deadline to June 30, 1983.

Three-Vehicle Wreck Reported

Approximately $2,300 damage resulted from a three-car collision Friday on Greenville Boulevard, according to Greenville police.

Police records showed that the collision occurred after a vehicle driven by Gregory Scott Barham of Edenton stopped on Greenville Boulevard. A second vehicle operated by Deboraah Marie Myers of Fayetteville collided with the rear of Barham's vehicle. A third vehicle, driven by Anthony Waller of Goldsboro, then collided with the Myers vehicle in the rear.

No injuries were reported. Police charged Barham and Waller with following too closely.

EVERETTE'S PEST CONTROL CO.

An investment in the future.

As the court system in North Carolina moves into the final decades of this century, we are witnessing many important new trends. One candidate for the Court of Appeals consistently has been a strong force for positive change.

Sid Eagles helped start and directed the Special Prosecutions Division of the Attorney General's Office. He prosecuted many of the most serious criminal cases across our state. In addition, Sid Eagles was the primary architect of the recently revised criminal laws of our state. He continues to serve on our vital Criminal Code Commission and is a nationally recognized leader of a commission working to make the laws of all states more consistent and uniform.

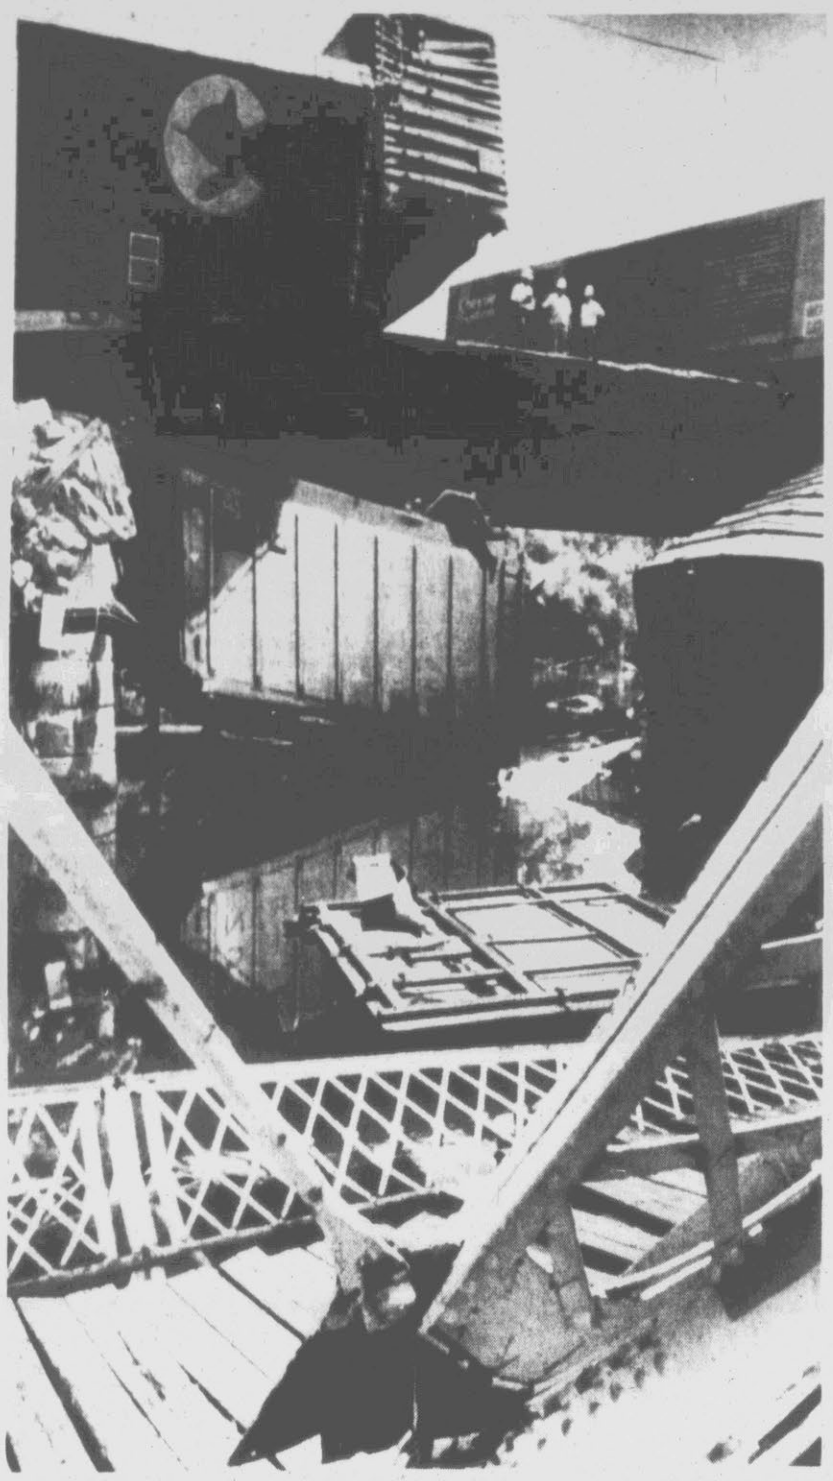

For our future, we need dedicated, capable judicial leadership with a proven record. Make an investment in the future of our courts. Help elect Sid Eagles Judge of the Court of Appeals.

Syrians Down Israeli Plane

By The Associated Press

Israeli jets bombed the Palestine Liberation Organization's west Beirut stronghold for the third day Saturday and one warplane was downed by Syrian missile fire over eastern Lebanon's Bekaa Valley.

Syria said the two Israeli pilots bailed out of the F-4 Phantom fighter-bomber when it was hit and one was captured but the other was found dead.

In Cairo, U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib continued his search for an Arab country willing to take the estimated 8,000 PLO guerrillas trapped in the Lebanese capital. Habib met with Egyptian Foreign Minister Kamal Hassan Aly for 70 minutes, and neither side commented afterward.

Egypt's Middle East News Agency quoted an official source as saying speculation that Habib was trying to persuade Egypt to provide asylum for large numbers of PLO guerrillas "is absolutely of no basis."

The agency reported Aly "affirmed the necessity of Israel's withdrawal from Lebanon and the need for an immediate halt to the bloodshed and guaranteeing the safety of all Palestine Liberation Organization members."

It said the Egyptians "stressed the right of self-determination for the Palestinians and said there could be no just peace in the region without a just solution to the Palestinian problem."

Habib is to meet Sunday with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak and then fly to Israel.

Israel confirmed the loss of the F-4 and said other warplanes destroyed Syrian SAM-8 anti-aircraft missile batteries.

The Israel command said that the Syrians moved the sophisticated ground-to-air missiles — the most modern in the Soviet arsenal — into the Bekaa Valley from Syria late Friday night for the first time.

Italy To Defy Ban

ROME (AP) — Italy followed France Saturday in flouting the Reagan administration's ban on use of U.S.-developed technology for the Soviet gas pipeline to Western Europe, and said, "signed agreements will be honored."

It was the second Western European country in three days to defy President Reagan's embargo on providing American-designed equipment to the Soviet Union. France announced its decision Thursday.

In Washington, assistant White House press secretary Anson Franklin said there would be no immediate comment on the Italian decision. After the French decision was announced, Reagan ordered the Commerce Department to conduct a study of the legal questions involved. He said any effort to enforce the sanctions through court action would await the outcome of that study.

The other European partners in the pipeline project, West Germany and Britain, have made no formal announcements of their plans, but have objected to Reagan's unilateral action on a matter that affects their economies.

The Italian Foreign Ministry statement called for consultations between the United States and the 10 European Common Market countries about the accelerating pipeline dispute.

"In a delicate phase of the relations between Europe and the United States it is essential to preserve — through a frank and fair discussions — the vitality of that relationship, which is vital for Europe and the United States," the statement said.

"Solutions must be reached through dialogue among all parties involved."

Italy had agreed to produce 59 turbines for the compressor stations along the trans-Siberian pipeline, expected to begin supplying Western Europe with natural gas in 1984.

The turbines, manufactured by the Italian state-owned Nuovo Pignone engineering company, were to be built with components based on technology supplied by General Electric Co. The contract is worth $470 million.

Reagan last month expanded sanctions on exports of oil and gas equipment to the Soviet Union to include equipment produced abroad under U.S. licenses. The sanctions are aimed at punishing the Soviets for their alleged role in the imposition of martial law in Poland last December.

Italy's decision to ignore the boycott was expected.

Sunday Opinion

Cigarette Tax Could Reduce Federal Take

The tobacco industry has good reason to be concerned about a proposed sharp increase in cigarette taxes currently being considered at the federal level.

When you think about it, the public, smokers and non-smokers alike, should also be concerned.

Legislation is being considered in Congress which would increase the tax on cigarettes from 8 cents to 16 cents per pack.

Dr. T. Carlton Blalock, executive director of the Tobacco Growers Association of North Carolina, said in a Rocky Mount talk that tobacco interests were "very concerned about it."

He said the state's economy could be hurt by the move if it caused a reduction in consumption.

No one really knows what will happen to a pleasure item like cigarettes if it is taxed exorbitantly. History tells us what the colonists did when the crown put a tax on tea. We don't expect any dumping of tobacco in Boston harbor but we do know that overtaxing of alcohol has led to a vast illegal liquor industry in the past. In the same way, overtaxing could lead to a great expansion of the bootlegging of cigarettes.

The federal government wants the cigarette tax increase primarily for additional revenues, to offset the mismanaged tax reduction program instituted by the Reagan administration at the outset of the term.

The last thing the administration needs, in the short term, is a sharp reduction in revenues from tobacco taxes. This could be the result if this unreasonable proposed increase in cigarette taxes is approved.

Dr. Eddie West, Pitt School System: Positive Chemistry

We believe he found a pretty good, functioning school system. He also found a reasonable number of problems facing him, some similar to those he has faced before, some new.

Some questions will have to be faced immediately. Others, like shifting school populations and bringing about better cooperation between the county's two school districts, will be somewhat more long range.

We believe as Dr. West comes to know us that he will find Pitt County people to be deeply committed to better education. We think our citizens will demand much of our schools and, when the chips are down, they will be willing to pay for maintaining good schools.

Dr. Eddie West has a reputation as an outstanding school administrator. Pitt County's reputation is one of wanting better than average schools. The chemistry should be positive.

Sunday Morning Notes

Alvin Taylor

Who could go wrong writing an editorial about July 4?

Well, trust Hal Smith of Johnston Technical College to find something.

In regards to our July 4 editorial which mentioned John Adams, Hal wrote to point out that Adams thought the nation's birthday would be on July 2.

As proof Hal sent along a letter that John wrote to Abigail. "The second day of July 1776 will be the most memorable epocha in the history of America," it said. "I am apt to believe that it will be celebrated by succeeding generations as the great anniversary festival ... It ought to be solemnized with pomp and parade, with shows, games, sports, guns, bells, bonfires, and illuminations, from one end of this continent to the other, from this time forward, for evermore."

Adams might have been two days off on choosing the date for celebrating the nation's birthday, but he was right on target as how to celebrate it. It was also his fate, as it was Thomas Jefferson's, to die on July 4, in 1825.

As solace Hal wrote to us, "This should give you job security. No one will want to be an editor when they find that even an editorial about the 4th of July is subject to criticism."

Nonsense, we take criticism with a smile ...

Your columnist tackles home repair jobs with varying degrees of success.

Recently a commode began rocking. How do you repair it? Simple. You just remove the covers from the bolts holding to the floor, get a wrench and tighten them up.

Wrong. The bolt broke. (Experts tell me I was lucky the porcelain didn't break.)

Step two is to remove the bowl, but that also means removing the tank. This done and water all over the floor, I removed the remaining bolt and lifted, the bowl off the sewer outlet. New bolt installed, I reassembled it all ... and found out I had three leaks.

Some research told me I needed a new seal under the bowl and a replacement seal around the water tank. These purchased, I tore the whole thing down again and installed the seals. This time it worked. The third leak, by the way, was repaired by tightening up the fitting.

Home repairs? Simple ... if you have plenty of time.

Itch

Paul T. O'Connor

Charlotte Sen. Craig Lawing, president pro tem of the Senate, says there's a small group of senators who find the need to dump a lot of letters in the mail, at state expense, just before the voters go to the polls.

The state will mail 50 letters for legislators every day the assembly is in session — a policy that can cost $50 a week for each lawmaker. If they have more than 50 letters any one day, legislators can exceed the limit with permission from the speaker or the Senate president pro tem.

John Allen, director of legislative services, reported to a recent meeting of the Legislative Services Commission that mass mailings have increased dramatically in the past two years and that postage cost the assembly $25,000 last year.

Neither Lawing nor House Speaker Liston Ramsey wants the job of saying when legislators can pass their limits. Ramsey suggested establishing ironclad rules to determine when mass mailings would be allowed. But that idea got nowhere.

One idea was to drop the 50-a-day limit and let legislators accumulate mailing privilege. So, if they didn't mail anything for two weeks, they could drop 300 letters in the mail without special permission. This would be fair to the legislators who don't use the mail much but have big bundles when they do.

But Lawing and others argued that that would just encourage more use of the mails by legislators. Many don't use their full allotments each day. So they'd store up a big privilege and then before election day send out a mass mailing. "You'd be surprised how many people come in and want to mail five, six hundred, a thousand letters and it's just a week before the primary. It's just hard to figure out," Lawing said.

The commission argued the point for some 45 minutes before deciding not to do anything. They decided changing the system was more likely to increase mailings than to decrease them.

Dave Flaherty, state Republican Party chairman, has a set of county-by-county charts that show where Republican registration increased and where it decreased in the past two years. He said he found it curious that in some counties a big precentage of Republicans were purged from voter registration lists while Democrats didn't suffer much loss.

County elections boards purge their registration lists of people who haven't voted in four years. Flaherty, pointing to Hoke County, said it's funny that Democratic registration increased by 17 percent while Republican registration dropped 6 percent. He spotted a number of other counties where the difference between the two parties was significant and said Democrats obviously were keeping some of their voters on the lists.

But, in a moment of candor Flaherty said, "I can't blame them. If I was in control fo the books I'd do the same thing. I sure wouldn't have taken more Republicans off than Democrats."

New 'Silent Majority' May Be Tough

Maxwell Glen Cody Shearer

WASHINGTON — Few people would ever pass up the chance to press their favorite cause with the president of the United States. And surely that rule would seem to apply to Peter G. Peterson, Wall Street executive and former Nixon commerce secretary who's trying to build political support for budget cuts geared toward the great Middle Class.

But when the chairman of the Lehman Brothers investment house walked into a White House meeting with almost 60 other business leaders recently, the thought of lobbying Ronald Reagan hadn't crossed his mind.

Though Peterson and five former Treasury secretaries have admittedly caused Reagan discomfort with their bipartisan crusade to reduce the growth of the U.S. budget's most sacred cows, they know the bigger challenge lies outside Washington: to convince Americans to accept cuts in such areas as Social Security, defense aud mortgage subsidies.

Unfortunately, the ears of the young, by far the largest part of what Peterson, 53, calls "the new silent majority," may prove too tough to gain. Without them, there's no point in lobbying Reagan.

That isn't to suggest that Peterson and Co. are discouraged. Only two months after he and Uouglas Dillon, Henry Fowler, John B. Connally, William E. Simon and W. Michael,Blumenthal announced their campaign, these blue-chippers have been able to enlist the support of economists such as Lester Thurow, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and John Kenneth Galbraith.

The diverse nature of the group, Peterson believes, underscores how seriously Americans should view Washington's mismanagement of federal programs with largely middle- and upper-income constituencies. While Reagan and Congress have drastically cut poverty-based programs, Peterson complains, "It's not the needy, who are responsible for outlandish deficits. "Simple arithmetic and simple equity will tell you these middle- and upper-income programs ... are over four times" the size of programs for the underprivileged, but have suffered one-third the cutbacks.

The inequities of government spending should cause fear and indignation in younger voters, Peterson suggests. Deficits topping $100 billion levy a two-fisted penalty on young people today in the form of high interest rates and tomorrow in higher taxes.

And the biggest dollar drain on our futures, Peterson suggests, are the steadily increasing transfer payments to the elderly. Short of reforms in Social Security programs, Peterson believes, deductions for such programs could be hacking 25 to 40 percent out of the average paycheck by the year 2000.

There could be a "generational conflict of enormous dimensions ..." warned the father of five. "Younger voters don't appreciate the enormity of what they're going to have to pay in taxes."

As they continue to add to their growing list of big shots, however, Peterson and Co. may have difficulty transforming this prospect into a political consensus. Fearful predictions haven't previously succeeded in rousing the energies of younger voters.

For one, when younger Americans take a look at government spending (which isn't often), they don't tarry long. And like other generations, young people aren't moved to tears by the continuing concerns of Wall Street. Besides, who can comprehend a few billion dollars here or there?

It's to his credit that Peterson knows he must go beyond big names in business and recruit educators, civil-rights leaders and othere with experience in Main Street America,.

So far, the ad hoc nature of his project, not to mention his dependence on personal finances, has prevented Peterson from organizing a campus and community lecture tour, but he admits it would be a good idea.

Over time, Peterson and his cohorts could go a long way in alarming young Americans about the consequences of their insensitivity. He may not ignite the generational time bomb he sees smoldering on the horizon, but he could frighten Washington's decision-makers into seeing it, too.

History And Democrats Have The Edge

Evans Witt

WASHINGTON (AP) — On one side are history and the Democrats. On the other are the Republicans and lots of money.

That's the battle order for this fall's congressional elections, and the conventional political wisdom is that history and the Democrats have the edge. The guessing is that the GOP will lose some strength in the House, although the exact numbers differ a bit.

Edward Rollins, the top political aide in the White House, admits to the possibility of the GOP's losing 10 to 12 seats, while Gene Eidenberg of the Democratic National Committee is talking about picking up 15 or so.

In one important sense, these predictions are based on "fighting the last war." The president's party has lost strength in every off-year election this century except one. Why should 1982 be any different?

In another way, however, the conventional wisdom already acknowledges that 1982 will be different from past elections, so different in fact that the very shape of American politics may be changed.

For if one were simply judging from the past nine off-year elections, the GOP should lose about 40 seats or maybe 45 this fall.

That's the preliminary forecast by the most respected model of such elections, developed by Edward Tufte of Yale. The nation's economic troubles and Ronald Reagan's none-too-high rating with the public don't compute any other way, he says.

But the political pros from both parties don't see that many losses and the reasons can be summed up in one word:

Money.

The GOP has tens of millions to spend and the Democrats don't.

It's not simply that money can buy ads and buttons and political consultants, although all of those are useful for a winning campaign.

Money, at least the way the Republican National Committee has used it for the past four years, means recruiting good, experienced people as candidates. The RNC has been working hard at identifying potential candidates, encouraging them to run, training them in campaign tactics and promising them strong financial backing for their efforts.

This all adds up to having these high-quality candidates running for office even in the years that don't look like good ones to be a GOP standard-bearer.

One of the most compelling explanations for why the incumbent president's party "always" loses strength in off-years is the quality of candidates, two researchers at the University of California in San Diego say.

If the Republican strategy works, it will be the blueprint for campaigns for the years to come. If it fails, the party pros will look for yet another way to fight the tides of history.

Take Your Choice, Ready Or Not

James J. Kilpatrick

WASHINGTON — Politics sometimes works in curious ways, its wonders to perform. On Capitol Hill these days, we seem to be moving along by a process of reluctant willingness or willing reluctance — take your choice.

On the House side, where all bills for raising revenue theoretically must originate, the dominant Democrats understandably are reluctant to be identified as the party engaged in raising taxes. On the Senate side, the reigning Republicans are equally unwilling to be known as the party that did nothing about our mountainous deficits. Thus we find the Senate this week debating a tax bill that technically is not a tax bill; it is a little old amendment to a little old House bill having to do with nothing much at all.

Parliamentary procedure to one side, what the Senate is debating is in fact a tax bill — a walloping tax bill, intended to raise nearly $100 billion in new revenues over the next three years. Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas calls his package the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982, and the title is fairly apt. We will hear hours of caviling over particular provisions, but the package strikes me as both fiscally and politically sound.

These are the principal elements:

Dole would raise $29 billion over the three-year period by a combination of measures intended to collect substantial sums "from those who are not paying what they already owe under existing law." At the very idea of withholding 10 percent from the payment of interest and dividends, the bankers and fund managers are complaining and the fat cats are howling, but it makes sense to those whose salaries and wages are subject to withholding. Dole's bill would exempt such payments to low-income elderly individuals; he has other provisions for hardship cases and for minimal transactions, but the wealthy fellow who lives by clipping coupons would get a little bit clipped himself. Fine with me.

Another large chunk of revenue, amounting to $30.6 billion over the three years, would come from rewriting existing law having to do with oil and gas companies, life insurance companies, large contractors and other big industries. These existing laws are the very staff of life to accountants and tax consultants; they are mysteries to most of the rest of us. I have some reservations about the changes proposed for contractors, who may never know until a big job is completed whether they have earned a profit, but small contractors would be exempt and the package looks reasonable.

Dole also would impose sharp limitations on the regrettable system approved just a year ago, known as "safe harbor leasing." This is a gimmick by which corporations may trade tax advantages back and forth. The misguided device resulted in outright chicanery, or in something close to outright chicanery. The law cries out for immediate modification and for repeal at the end of the three-year period.

Smaller sums would come from 25 to 30 other sources. Roughly 700,000 lawyers, doctors, dentists, journalists and other professionals have incorporated themselves, the better to shelter up to $136,000 in personal income every year by shunting this income to a pension fund. The maximum would be cut back to $90,000. Dole would double the tax on cigarettes to 16 cents a pack. He would impose modest fees on persons using the federally subsidized airways. He would increase the wage base on which unemployment taxes are paid. He would raise the telephone excise tax from 1 percent to 2 percent in 1983 and to 3 percent in 1984.

An objection is heard that for some families, the combined increases would just about wipe out the benefit of President Reagan's famed 10 percent reductions in income tax. In some cases, yes, this is true — but the reductions in income tax will benefit virtually everyone, while most of Dole's package would have its greatest impact on the well-to-do. Politically that prospect has great appeal.

Some of the technical changes in the senator's bill are over my head, but all of us can understand the equity in collecting from those who ought to be paying substantial taxes but aren't paying them. The enormous deficits in prospect for the next decade can't be cured by cutting spending alone. We have to have new revenues, and we have to go after them now.

Public Forum

To the editor:

The newspaper report concerning the academic qualifications of teachers reported in Tuesday's Daily Reflector (Teachers Aren't Necessarily Best, July 20, 1982) is the kind of story that lends itself readily to oversimplification and misunderstanding. Without going into several reservations I have about the research design, I would like to re-emphasize several points, some of which were made by the co-author of the study, Dr. Phil Schlechtney of UNC-CH.

First, there is no one-to-one relationship between scores on the SAT test and measures of teacher effectiveness. This is not to say that anyone is looking for academic mediocrity in prospective teachers. However, one who scores high on a SAT test in high school may or may not be an effective communicator of knowledge or organizer of learning activities as an adult. He or she may or may not be empathetic, patient or understanding of students, may or may not like to be around young people all day for 180 days each year.

If society wants to attract and retain more academic achievers as teachers then it must recognize and correct the factors that are pushing too many academicians out of the profession: low pay and poor working conditions. Public education is absolutely vital to the long-term survival of our democratic government. We must be willing to be taxed to pay for a quality educations, which starts with quality educators. Freezing salaries and rejecting bonds for school construction will only magnify the problems.

I recently heard Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger say that education was America's secret weapons arsenal. We must maintain and exand our "arsenal" by supporting the qualified core of professionals who are the caretakers of our nation's future.

To the editor:

This is my sixth week of incarceration. Prison has taken its toll of me. It's much worse than I had expected. For my crime of impeding traffic, I am being held in a 6- by 8-foot maximum security cell. I leave it for exercise (walking up and down a corridor) once a day for about an hour. My cellmate and I continuously suffer from the humid Florida weather.

I feel like an animal in a zoo. The guards seem to hate their work. I'm not angry with them, because like so many of us, they see no way to change the deeply rooted system.

Crime rates soar and the familiar cry rings out: "Build more jails!" And we do. But crimes rates keep soaring. We call prison punishment, but it's really revenge. Rehabilitation is negligible.

And so the circular pattern continues. First loneliness and despair take hold of the inmates; then the despair becomes resentment and anger. The inmates hate the system — seething and waiting for their turn at revenge. The circle is complete. During these six weeks, I have been housed in five different prisons and jails in four different states. All this movement has been nonsensical, as well as a tremendous burden on taxpayers. But it's standard practice in federal prisons.

I have suffered much harrassment from both inmates and guards. I have feared for my safety. I try to complain about rights violations, but complaints are ignored or held against the prisoner. This system is closed, rarely scrutinized by the outside world, so the suffering of those behind the walls is endless.

I appeal to Americans to study prisons and work for reform. We are all responsible for the systems we support. Whenever they fail, we fail. Inaction, while prisons perpetuate the misery and injustice they are supposed to purge, degrades us all.

Patrick O'Neill 09865-056

Editor's note: O'Neill, a Greenville resident convicted of and sentenced to federal prison for impeding traffic during a demonstration against U.S. policy in El Salvador at Seymour Johnson AFB, Goldsboro, has been moved again since the writing of this letter. His address is Federal Prison Camp, Eglin AFB, Pensacola, Fla. 32542.

To the editor:

There have been numerous inquiries made as to why the fireworks display for the July 4 Celebration was begun earlier than scheduled. As president of the Greenville Jaycees, the sponsors of this affair, allow me to take a few moments to explain.

Those of you who were at the Town Common by 8 p.m. on July 4 were well aware of the approaching dark clouds that are typical of the evening showers to which we are accustomed in this area. We had received word that these clouds were part of an approaching rain system, one which had already postponed the fireworks in Raleigh and was moving eastwardly.

As is expected, the display is the main attraction of our celebration and is enjoyed by thousands, both young and old alike. The expense of the fireworks is over half of this year's $7,500 budget and is funded by local business advertisements, contributions and also by the net proceeds from the sales at our concession trailers.

Due to the fact of the clouds overhead, the thousands of people already present at 8:45 p.m., the lost celebration effect if postponed until Monday night, and the possibility of having no fireworks at all if they got wet, the decision was made to begin 15 minutes early and to fire them in rapid succession. The rapid succession results in a more spectacular show, but also reduces the total length of time for the display.

This 11th annual July 4 celebration took approximately 1,000 manhours on the part of Jaycees and others who volunteered their time to plan, sell ads, build booths and clean up afterwards. We enjoy providing this service to the community and only hope that the display, as well as the rest of the celebration, was an enjoyment to you.

Ken Smith, President
Greenville Jaycees

To the editor:

I am writing in response to an article which appeared in your newspaper on Tuesday. The article stated that the National Organization for Women and the Women's Political Caucus will hold a meeting July 26 at 7:30 p.m. to discuss "offering a slate of candidates for state House and Senate seats in the general elections this fall."

These write-in candidates would seek to improve the under-representation of women in our state Legislature, which presently is composed of only 12.9 percent women. I am pleased that more women are willing to run for political office and I will certainly be at the meeting. Anyone interested in attending and/or needing a ride should call 756-0338.

Politics Is Evident in Budget Talk

WASHINGTON (AP) — When cornered on a tough issue, the journeyman politician tries to change the subject. Only the master craftsman risks an attempt to turn it to his own advantage.

That is what President Reagan is attempting with his campaign for a constitutional amendment to balance the federal budget. He calls it an idea whose time has come, although for the Reagan administration, it didn't come very long ago.

The public opinion polls and the growing roster of congressional supporters bear out what the president said. In a congressional election year of economic woes and giant deficits, the balanced budget amendment is a best seller of an issue.

The original version of Reagan's own budget for next year would have run up a deficit estimated at more than double the record level. The compromise version Congress finally approved envisions a $104 billion deficit, by far the biggest in history.

There was no mention of that at Reagan's rally for the balanced budget amendment, a measure the administration embraced three months ago. Reagan always said he favored the concept, but the administration initially was cool to the measure now before Congress. On April 29, Reagan said Congress should pass a balanced budget amendment as soon as possible; two weeks later, the administration said it should be the one before the Senate.

No matter how soon Congress acts, the ratification process and the two-year lead time built into the amendment mean that it probably will not affect the budgets of the Reagan administration. There is an outside chance that the amendment could apply during the final year or two of a second Reagan term, but that is unlikely.

"It seems to me that Americans are saying 'No more ifs, ands or buts,'" Reagan said at a Capitol rally. "'We want an amendment to the United States Constitution making balanced budgets the law of the land, and we want it now.'"

Actually, the amendment wouldn't make balanced budgets the law of the land. It would make it more difficult for Congress to vote deficit spending, or to increase taxes.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, prime sponsor of the amendment, said its terms "would be enforced primarily through the political process," by making the members of Congress more accountable for votes that produce deficits.

Sixty percent of the members of each branch of Congress would have to go on the record with votes for deficit spending if deficits there were to be. And if government revenues were going to go up faster than the rate of increase in national income, 51 percent of the members of each house would have to vote for that.

"The polls indicate that between 70 percent and 80 percent of the people in this country want a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution," Hatch said.

Sixty-two members of the Senate have signed up to sponsor the amendment, and they'll need the support of only five colleagues to produce the two-thirds majority required for approval of constitutional amendments. The debate started on Monday, recessed for the pro-amendment rally on the steps outside, then was suspended for debate and action on tax increases to reduce the size of next year's deficit.

The path is a bit more difficult in the House, but everyone who wants to stay there has to run for re-election this year, and the amendment issue is a handy antidote for candidates who have just approved record deficits. The amendment has been stalled in the House Judiciary Committee, but Republicans are gathering signatures for a petition to send it to the floor despite committee opposition. There it will take 290 votes to approve the amendment.

The next step would be to send it to the state legislatures for ratification. It would take the approval of 38 states to make it part of the Constitution. Legislatures in 31 states already have voted for resolutions seeking a constitutional convention to adopt a balanced budget amendment.

The political clout of the issue is evident in the debate; every opponent of the amendment prefaces his remarks by saying that he bows to no one in devotion to the goal of balanced federal budgets. Then they blame Reagan for the current deficit problem.

No Change Expected Until After Elections

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan plans to stay the course with his current economic policies, but that does not mean his aides are not worried about the fall elections.

A White House official indicated that the worst thing for Reagan would be to become "Carteresque" and to appear undecided, as Jimmy Carter's opponents liked to perceive him.

The official in effect said it would hurt Reagan's image as a true believer in Reagonomics if he suddenly decided it was not working with 9.5 million unemployed and workers, from blue collar to top corporation excutives worried about their jobs all over the country.

The president has proved stalwart and unflexible. Despite the pleas of the housing industry he refused to give a helping hand with a bailout for mortgages. While he quotes Calvin Coolidge that the "business of America is business," he also believes in sink or swim, survival of the fittest when it comes to free enterprise.

He believes the government shackles business and without restraints the U.S. economy would be soaring. But it is not. Something is wrong. His top aides admit it but they say nothing will be done until after the election.

"We are obviously concerned about the economy," said White House counselor Edwin Meese. "We think it will pick up this year. There are some favorable signs."

"At the same time, we're in a pretty serious situation," he added. "We'll have to see the impact of the tax cuts."

Chief of Staff James Baker concedes that the White House is conducting a wide ranging review of economic policies, but says Reagan does not intend to announce any changes in those policies before the election.

He believes there is too little time before the election to effect a turnaround even with new approaches, and feels it would be politically damaging for Reagan to seem to waver to the financial community and the voters.

But Baker indicates that after the election, there will be some "adjustments" if the economy does not pick up.

Reagan's aides also believe the president has money in the bank because polls show the majority of people, even among the unemployed, do not blame him. Reagan has hammered away at one theme that he expects to hit even more forcefully on the hustings this fall. The theme is that he inherited all the economic ills and that he needs more time to straighten out the country.

According to his aides, the polls show people are willing to give him more time. But they do admit that since July 1 Reagan must take some of the credit or demerits for what happens to the economy. It is his show now.

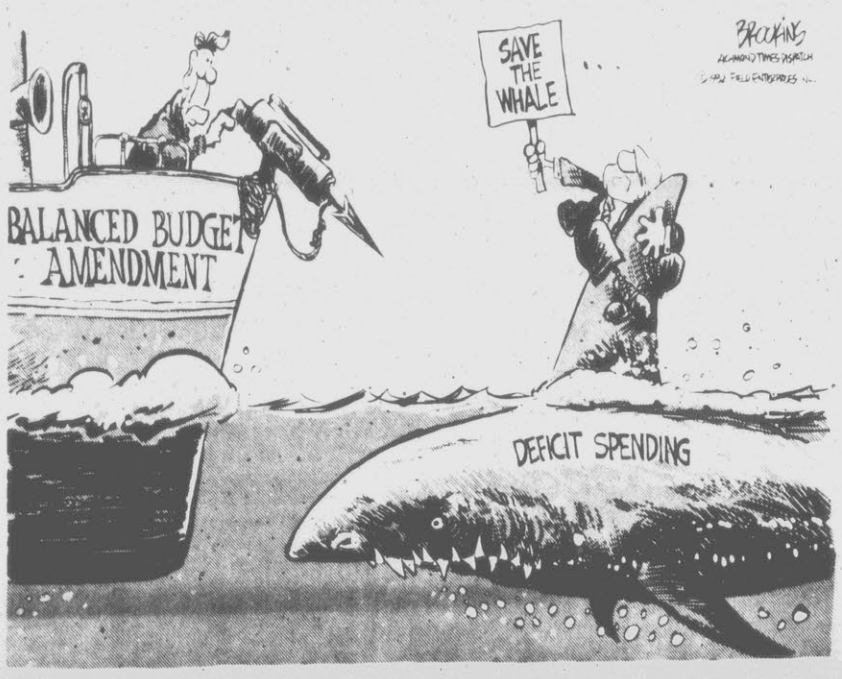

From time to time, there are signals that the Treasury Department is making a study of the role of the Federal Reserve Board. Much is made of the fact that it is an independent agency. But there are also advocates who would like to put it under the Treasury. Former Treasury Secretary John Connally for one has thought it might not be a bad idea.

As for the elections, unemployment could hurt candidates who run on Reagan's program. But the president has other irons in the fire to keep his politiical image up front. The public launching of the campaign for an amendment requiring a balanced budget put him four square against the red ink spenders.

He also is taking credit for a cost of living increase in the Social Security checks that he tried to block several times.

In addition, he is leaning toward a "flat tax" rate that he finds tempting and may be politically saleable as well.

In short, the economy is in the doldrums and there is no longer any hope at the White House for a bright new prosperous world by fall, but Reagan has other irons in the fire that he believes will save the day for the Republicans.

'When I Go'

When William Morris was making ready, back in 1937, to journey to New York for an appearance on the radio program "We The People," his main concern was to enlist the services of the most trustworthy of his relatives to make certain that the fire which blazed brightly on the hearth of his mountain cabin did not go out.

That fire, which had burned continuously since it was started shortly after the American Revolution, was the reason the calm, dignified mountaineer was invited to appear on the program.

Publicity generated by the "We The People" broadcast prompted hundreds of tourists to visit the Morris cabin in Holbert Cove four miles from Saluda. The old gentleman would seat his visitors by the fire, tell them a bit of its history and perhaps, entertain them with a piece or two played on his fiddle.

Morris, a bachelor, had kept the fire burning alone since his mother died 16 years before. His chief concern was that the smoldering coals which glowed among the ashes in the huge fireplace did not go out.

"My mother was always mighty careful that we watched this fire and covered it well at night," he would relate. "All her days people in these mountains didn't have matches. My father died right after I was born, during the Civil War, and women folks didn't make out much starting a spark with flint and steel, so they had to be particular about the fire keeping at night."

With pride, he demonstrated how the fire was covered with ashes to keep it going at night. Then he showed how it was uncovered the next morning and would blaze up again after he added a few splintrs and chips and blew on the coals a few times.

As the fame of Morris' fire spread throught the Appalachians, some ladies of the Daughters of the American Revolution came to visit th old man. They wanted to move him, his fire, his two collie dogs and his mule into the Great Smoky National Park's Pioneer Homestead and see to it that the fire never did go out. He listened to them until his patience wore a little thin because none of the ladies could tell him how he ws going to make a living in the Smokies.

On winter days, the old man would sit alone by the fire, a troubled frown on his weathered, old face. In his mind he could see the flames flicker out one by one and the embers turn to white ash.

"The fire," he would say, "will go when I go."

For more than 30 years, he kept a lonely vigil over the fire, feeding it constantly in good weather and bad, with never a worry until his last years that it would go out. Then, one day in the winter of 1948, Morris became sick and had to be taken to a hospital in Tryon where he died. But before they took him away, Morris' niece, Ida Owens, promised to keep the fire going as long as she lived.

But Mrs. Owens, who was 72 when he died, became blind, her husband died, and she had to live with a son in Spartanburg, S.C. There was no one left to tend the fire and it soon went out, as the old man had predicted.

An Adviser Exits

WASHINGTON (AP) — The man who serves as chief White House economist is leaving his post reportedly, because of mounting frustration that President Reagan prefers to follow his own economic convictions.

Murray L. Weidenbaum is the latest — and highest ranking — economic policy-maker to exit the administration in less than a year. His resignation as chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers was revealed by Reagan Thursday night during a trip to St. Louis.

Administration officials close to Weidenbaum said he has decided to return to his teaching post in St. Louis in part because of his inability to set economic policy for the administration.

"The president is very much in charge of economic policy," said one Weidenbaum associate who did not want his name used. "This president feels that he has a great deal of interest in economics and is not open to a change in course from his senior senior economic advisers."

The associate and other officials involved in economic policy said Weidenbaum's unexpected departure was not precipitated by any single incident or policy clash. One official noted that the economist has been unhappy for some time that the president refused to go along with budget changes to reduce the record deficits the government now faces for 1983 and beyond.

Weidenbaum is the second member of the three-man Council of Economic Advisers to resign his post within the past month and the seventh economic policy-maker to leave the administration since late last year.

Council member Jerry Jordan, who previously announced he is leaving at the end of this month for personal reasons, was quoted in the latest Time Magazine as saying that "you have got to remember that the president himself has set economic policy, and he is so incredibly consistent that it really does not matter who the subalterns, or lieutenants, are."

Sources said Reagan had been expected to name Brown University professor William Poole to replace Jordan on the council. It was not known whether Poole might wind up replacing Weidenbaum or if Reagan had another candidate in mind.

In St. Louis, deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said Reagan is considering "four or five" people in the search for a replacement for Weidenbaum. Speakes said there was nothing "untoward" about Weidenbaum's resignation and added, "I defy you to read into this a policy dispute of any kind."

Asked about the impact of Weidenbaum's leaving on future policy, Speakes said, "I don't think it will have any impact."

Even Alexander M. Haig Jr.'s recent departure as secretary of state is believed to have been triggered in part by a dispute with the president's decision to block plans by Western Europe to help the Soviet Union build a natural gas pipeline to Europe.

Weidenbaum, who has served more as a spokesman for economic policy than a setter of policy, had trouble influencing presidential decisions from the outset.

George Gallup

Poll

PRINCETON, N.J. — Senator Edward Kennedy is the 2-to-1 choice of Democrats over former Vice President Walter Mondale to be their party's presidential nominee, but the two Democratic frontrunners fare about equally well when pitted against President Reagan in Gallup test elections for 1984.

Among registered voters nationwide, Mondale beats Reagan by a narrow 49 percent to 43 percsnt margin and Kennedy tops the President by an even slimmer edge, 48 percent to 45 percent. In similar contests conducted in April, the Massachusetts senator led Reagan 51 percent to 45 percent, while Mondale and the President each received 46 percent of the vote.

In a head-to-head match for the nomination, Democratic voters pick Kennedy over Mondale by a convincin9 2-to-1 ratio, 58 percent to 30 percent. Independents, however, side with the former vice president over Kennedy by 44 percent to 36 percent.

The survey results summarized above suggest that the road to the 1984 election will be paved with a great deal of uncertainty for the Democratic contenders as well as for President Reagan, if he decides to run.

"Suppose the choice for president in the Democratic convention in 1984 narrows down to Senator Edward Kennedy and former Vice President Walter Mondale. Which one would you prefer to have the Democratic convention select?"

And here are the key findings:

Democratic Nomination Choices

	Kennedy	Mondale	Undecided
Democrats	58%	30%	12%
Independents	36	44	20
Democrats and Independents	50	35	15

These questions were asked of registered voters in the test elections:

"Suupose the presidential election were being held TODAY. If President Reagan were the Republican candidate and (Senator Edward Kennedy, former Vice President Walter Mondale) were the Democratic candidate, which would you like to see win?"

Those who named another candidate or were undecided were then asked:

"As of today, do you lean more to Reagan, the Republican, or to (Kennedy, Mondale), the Democrat?"

Presidential Test Elections
(Based on registered voters)

	November	April	LATEST
Reagan	56%	45%	45%
Kennedy	35	51	48
Other	3	1	3
Undecided	6	3	4
	100	100	100
Reagan	54	46	43
Mondale	37	46	49
Other	1	1	1
	100	100	100

The results reported today are based on in-person interviews with 391 Republicans, 681 Demoorats, 398 Independents and 1,119 registered voters out of a total sample of 1,531 adults, 18 and over. The interviews were conducted in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period June 25-28.

For results based on the registered voters sample, one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be four percentage points in either direction.

For the subsample of Democrats an error margin of five points should be allowed. For the samples of Republicans and Independents, a six-point error factor applies.

Whaling Nations Agree To Quit

BRIGHTON, England (AP) — After deciding to phase out commercial whaling entirely by 1986, the International Whaling Commission ended its annual meeting Saturday by ruling that 11,731 whales can be killed in the next year.

Although that is substantially less than the 14,553 whales taken this season, conservationists had hoped for a reduction to around 10,000.

Led by the United States and its conservationist allies, the commission decided Friday to ban all commercial whaling for an indefinite period beginning in 1986. But two of the major whaling nations — Japan and Norway — voted against the ban and vowed to continue hunting.

Japan, Norway and the Soviet Union took about 90 percent of last year's catch. The Soviets also voted against the ban but did not say if they would defy it.

The commission lacks the power to enforce its regulations, but individual nations can unilaterally forbid whaling in their territorial waters. All commercial whaling nations belong to the commission.

In an apparent attempt to placate Japan — the world's biggest consumer of whale meat — the commission agreed to let it take 850 sperm whales over the next two years. Sperm whales are totally protected, but the Japanese ignore the ban and caught 890 this season within Japan's 200-mile territorial limit.

Japan's chief delegate at the conference, Kunio Yunezawa, told reporters he will be advising his government to take "appropriate measures." He did not elaborate.

The Japanese delegation issued a statement charging the 1986 ban "was proposed without any scientific basis and adopted through the sheer power of votes."

It claimed the Japanese government "has engaged, in strict observance of recommendations of the commission, in the management for proper conservation and rational utilization of the world resources.

"In the last years, however, emotional arguments that have no relevance to the terms of the convention, have prevailed throughout the meetings, thereby preventing the normal and proper activities of the commission."

Japan's national Fishery Agency said Saturday in Tokyo that the ban would leave about 65,000 Japanese jobless. The agency said Japan's whaling industry has annual sales equivalent to $44 million.

John Byrne, chief of the U.S. delegation, said the ban was necessary to safeguard the world whale supply.

"We have looked at the whale stocks and saw that they continue to decline despite all the good work the IWC has done," said Byrne, head of the National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration.

He said commissioners had been lenient in cutting the catch quotas.

Six Westerners Kidnapped In Zimbabwe

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — Guerrilla followers of opposition leader Joshua Nkomo kidnapped two Americans and four other Westerners from an African safari and reportedly have threatened to kill them unless two jailed comrades are freed.

Justin Nyoka, a spokesman for Zimbabwe's Information Department, identified the kidnapped Americans as Brett Baldwin and Kevin Ellis. Their hometowns were not immediately available.

The other hostages were James Greenwell and Martyn Hodgson of Britain and Tony Bajzelj and William Butler of Australia, Nyoka said.

U.S., British and Australian consular officials were conferring with Foreign Ministry officials about the kidnapping.

The six tourists were abducted Friday night while making the 240-mile journey from Victoria Falls to the southwest city of Bulawayo, diplomatic sources said.

They were part of a group of 10 Westerners on a motoring safari who stopped at a roadblock of fallen trees on a main highway 40 miles north of Bulawayo.

The group's leader, a New Zealander, and three young women from Australia, the Netherlands and Austria also were abducted but were freed after 30 minutes with a ransom message to the government.

The message demanded the release from detention of two former military commanders of opposition leader Joshua Nkomo's Zimbabwe African People's Union.

The commanders were identified as Lookout Masuku, and Dumiso "Black Russian" Dabengwa, held without formal charge since March 10. They were detained on suspicion of participating in a plot to overthrow the government of Prime Minister Robert Mugabe.

Nyoko would not comment on a South African press report that the gunmen had threatened to kill the hostages if the prisoners were not freed.

Nyoko said security forces were combing the southwest Zimbabwe area for the "dissidents" — the government's term for guerrillas loyal to Nkomo.

Nkomo and Mugabe headed the two largest guerrilla armies that fought for black majority rule before the April 18, 1981, independence of Zimbabwe, formerly the white-ruled self-governing British colony of Rhodesia.

Discussion Held On Afghanistan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has held talks with the Soviet Union in Moscow in a new attempt to convince the Soviets to withdraw their troops from Afghanistan, a State Department official said Saturday.

Rush Taylor, a State Department spokesman, said he could "confirm that there have been discussions."

He said the administration believes "it is essential to make clear to the Soviets that the Afghanistan issue will not go away and that it remains a major impediment to improvement of U.S.-Soviet relations."

But he indicated the talks may have proved fruitless. "There is no evidence to indicate that the Soviets have changed their position on Afghanistan," he said.

Taylor said the administration is seeking "to press the Soviets to withdraw their forces from Afghanistan in the context of a settlement acceptable to the Afghans and the international community."

He indicated the latest talks were part of a series of "diplomatic dialogues with the Soviets" on Afghanistan. "We want to hear Soviet views," he said.

Taylor said the administration is consulting closely with Pakistan on efforts to arrange a settlement in Afghanistan.

Another State Department official, who did not want to be identified, said the Reagan administration would continue to press the Soviets to end their intervention.

"The effort to convince the Soviets to withdraw their troops is ongoing and takes a number of shapes and forms," he said. "We are not going to quit."

Soviet troops entered Afghanistan in December 1979. The Carter administration retaliated for what it felt was a Soviet move to forcefully impose its rule over another country by ordering a partial grain embargo and other sanctions against Moscow.

Streets ...

"in the curb line" by citizens "washes into catch basins and stops them up, or runs down into the drain and out into open ditches and clogs the ditches up. It's a major problem."

Allen suggested that area residents place the trash "on the edge of the yard ... keep the trash out of the street, and in doing so, keep the trash out of the ditch system."

"That would save tax money," Allen said, and help prevent street flooding.

C.W. Snell, chief engineer for the DOT's second division, which includes Pitt and seven other counties, said the Pitt maintenance budget for the current fiscal year totals $2 million. "The three cents a gallon increase in gasoline tax (approved by the 1981 General Assembly) for resurfacing roads is helping a great deal," he said. "Still, we don't have the money to take care of the needs the citizens are demanding."

Prior to the tax increase, Snell said, "We were not able to resurface many roads." Now, with additional revenue, "200 miles or more each year," can be resurfaced in the division (eight counties). But, Snell emphasized, "We have 3,600 miles of paved roads (in the division), and that's not quite often enough ... divide 200 into 3,600."

The Department of Transportation has problems with water too.

"We didn't have a whole lot of trouble," week-before-last when the First Street problem developed in Greenville, Snell said, "but of course, it (heavy rain) always washes dirt in the parallel ditches (on dirt roads), which we have to pull back out. We consider that normal routine maintenance. On unpaved roads we always get soil washed in the ditch line, so two or three times a year we pull the soil back into the road."

One thing, according to Snell, that has helped is that "we've started seeding the slopes on unpaved roads. That's helped a great deal to keep the dirt out of the ditches and outfall ditches that lead away from the roads. We've done right much of that in the last three years and find it's helping to prevent soil erosion and washouts."

However, a continuing problem area, the engineer said, is "out here on 33 (N.C. 33) West. We've had quite a few washouts where Johnson's Mill Run crosses the Belvoir Road and (Secondary Road) 1418.

Snell agrees with Allen. "You can't put in pipelines, bridges and culverts to take care of a sudden flood. It's too expensive." But he noted that drainage on roads in the county is generally adequate in most cases to prevent flooding and washouts.

And, like Allen, Snell said trash in ditches causes problems. "Some of this (flooding) is due to debris or grass growing along the ditches ... it washes down and causes damage."

In addition to the maintenance and repair of streets and roadways, bridges over which the streets carry traffic also present problems.

Snell said of the 166 bridges maintained by the state in Pitt County, "about 65 percent are posted for less than the legal limit ... are substandard."

And again, Snell suggested that there is just not enough money available to bring all the bridges up to standard.

According to Allen, the city "owns" only two bridges within the city limits "one on Hooker Road and the other on East Fifth Street" near Greenwood Cemetery. The others, he noted "are all owned by the State."

But Allen suggested the bridges, including the city owned ones, in Greenville "are in good condition. They're are not substandard."

U.S. Ferrying Material To Honduras

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — U.S. Air Force pilots are flying equipment to Honduran army troops in a three-day operation to strengthen defenses along the border with leftist-ruled Nicaragua, a ranking government official said Saturday.

Nicaragua protested the operation, calling it inconsistent with Honduran suggestions for negotiating differences between the two Central American countries.

In Washington, Pentagon duty spokesman Lt. Col. Mark Foutch confirmed that U.S. Air Force personnel were taking part in a joint exercise with Honduran troops and said it had been announced Friday.

The Honduran official, who said he was not authorized to report the operation and asked that he not be identified, said the U.S. flights were agreed upon because of concern about a possible Nicaraguan invasion.

He said the pilots were delivering "communications equipment" in U.S. Air Force C-130 transport planes from Tegucigalpa to the base of operations for a force of some 1,000 Honduran soldiers in the northeastern coastal province of Gracias a Dios.

He did not say how many U.S. planes and pilots were involved and gave no other details.

The text of an announcement read by Foutch said Air Force C-130s and about 30 U.S. military personnel on Friday joined a Honduran military exercise that had been under way since July 9. Foutch said he did not know how many planes were involved.

The Pentagon statement said the operation, named Combined Movement, was "designed to practice and evaluate movement control and communications procedures in deployment activities."

It said the C-130s "will be based in Tegucigalpa, where they will fly daily missions in support of the Hondurans in the troop field test."

Foutch said, "There's nothing in there about combat exercises."

Nicaragua's Foreign Ministry issued a statement saying the U.S. planes were flying to Puerto Lempira and claimed the port was the staging area for right-wing Nicaraguan exiles who have been fighting inside Nicaragua's northern Zelaya province since last month.

It said the joint operations "are in no way consistent with the peace proposal made recently by the Honduran government nor with the affirmations by the U.S. government that it wants a dialogue to find peaceful solutions to the crisis."

Nicaragua's ruling Sandinista junta claims that most of the right-wing insurgents are former members of the national guard of the late President Anastasio Somoza who was ousted in July 1979 in a civil war spearheaded by the Sandinista National Liberation Front.

A Nicaraguan deputy army commander, Ramon Macis, told reporters in Managua Friday that 96 rightist rebels and 25 government soldiers were killed during "two weeks of heavy combat" in northeastern Nicaragua.

Honduras has accused Nicaraguan troops of crossing into Honduran territory 80 times since the Sandinistas' victory three years ago and four times in the last 10 days.

Soviet Economy Shows Stagnation

MOSCOW (AP) — Key branches of the Soviet economy stagnated during the first half of 1982, according to government statistics released Saturday.

A Western diplomat, who closely follows the Soviet economy, said the latest figures indicate that the Soviets "are still in trouble...They're further behind the (five-year) plan than they were a year ago, and there's no reason to expect they can turn it around in the second half of the year."

The figures, issued by the Central Statistics Board and published in major Soviet newspapers, showed that the output of oil and coal increased, but by less than 1 percent, and the production of steel declined 2 percent from the same period a year ago.

The production of meat, already in short supply in many parts of the country, was down 2 percent and milk production was up only 0.4 percent over the poor production levels of last year.

The five-year plan that expires in 1985 anticipated large increases in both meat and milk production to compensate for shortages acknowledged by President Leonid I. Brezhnev. The average Soviet currently consumes about 40 percent less meat per year than the average American.

Earlier in the week, the government published a report saying that overall industrial growth was up 2.7 percent during the first six months of the year — far below the 4.7 percent growth projected for 1982 and well short of the 3.4 percent growth rate achieved during the same period a year ago.

Not all the news was gloomy, however.

The production of natural gas increased by 8 percent over the same period a year ago, rising from 228 billion cubic meters to 247 billion cubic meters. The sale of natural gas to the West for hard currency will enable the Soviets to buy food, goods and technology in short supply here.

The production of consumer goods such as furniture, motorcycles and scooters, washing machines, china and television sets also increased by substantial amounts.

The current five-year plan is the first in which the Soviet union has targeted higher growth for consumer goods than for heavy industry, and Brezhnev has stressed the importance of meeting consumer needs.

Still, the output of such items as leather shoes, knitwear and refrigerators fell during the first six months of the year compared to the same period in 1981, the figures showed.

Consumers in Moscow and other Soviet cities regularly wait in long lines at state-run stores for what in the West would be considered a poor selection of lesser quality goods — most often for food, but for items such as shoes, too.

Money earned from gas sales to the West, such as the projected Siberian pipeline to Western Europe, could help alleviate the situation if the Soviet Union is also able to continue its export of oil in years to come.

During the first six months of the year, oil production increased by 0.4 percent to 303 million tons (12.12 million barrels a day) from 301 million tons (12.04 million barrels a day) last year.

Coal production increased by less than 1 percent to 363 million tons. Mid-year production last year was 360 million tons; the year before, it was 362 million tons.

Navy Dropping Rating Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy, under fire from Capitol Hill, says it is abandoning its controversial system of rating lawmakers according to how they vote on naval issues.

The Navy's brief announcement Friday came two days after Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, said the rating list prepared by the Navy's legislative affairs office "smacks of ... unethical — perhaps illegal — conduct."

Heavy Rain Kills Hundreds In Japan

TOKYO (AP) — Thousands of rescue workers dug frantically for survivors Saturday, combing through landslides caused by torrential rains that left at least 335 dead or missing in southern Japan.

The rain, described as falling "like endless barrels of water," caused flash floods and slides that killed at least 120 people, injured 63, left 215 missing and thousands homeless by official count.

Police said more than 6,000 policemen, soldiers and civilian volunteers were digging through the mud, crushed houses, and buried cars, trying to find those still trapped.

The rains, coming at the end of a long drought, dumped 16-22 inches of water in a 24-hour period on the southernmost main Japanese island of Kyushu and on some sections of Honshu.

The city hardest hit was Nagasaki, the port where an atomic bomb fell in 1945 and where floods killed 992 people in 1957. A total of 104 deaths were recorded there Saturday.

Police said 687 landslides were reported in Nagasaki and its neighboring areas, while more than 32,000 houses were flooded, roads were cut at 417 places and 61 bridges were washed away.

"The rains, which were falling intermittently late Friday, suddenly changed into a downpour," a survivor, who declined use of his name, told a reporter. "It was like someone had turned over endless barrels of water."

According to Japanese meteorologists, more than a foot of rain fell in the Nagasaki area during a single three-hour period.

Early Saturday, police said waist-high streams of muddy water were still surging through parts of the city.

Casualty figures from other areas included seven dead in Oita Prefecture, four dead and four missing in Kumamoto, two in Saga, and three in Yamaguchi.

Sudden, heavy rains often occur at the end of Japan's rainy season in July, but this year, Kyushu got a season's worth of precipitation in one storm. Prior to Friday, water was being rationed in some parts of the island because of a drought.

The downpour paralyzed air and rail transportation and some areas were without electricity, gas, water and telephone service Friday and Saturday.

Surgeons Use Ceramic Implant As Substitute For Major Bones

PITTSBURGH (AP) — In a new procedure, surgeons at the University of Pittsburgh are replacing broken or missing bones with a ceramic substitute that eventually decomposes to help real bones grow back.

"We've done dog experiments, using it to replace segments of limbs. And now we've used it with children," said Dr. Dana Mears, associate professor of orthopedic surgery at the University Health Center of Pittsburgh.

"It appears to work very well," he said Friday.

Mears first used the bone substitute, a ceramic-like material made of tricalcium phosphate, to help lengthen the legs of two 9-year-old girls with birth defects.

He performed the surgery about two months ago at Presbyterian-University Hospital, marking the first use of the substitute to replace major segments of human bone, he said.

The substitute has been used for facial oral surgery in other parts of the country, Mears said. "But it had never been used in the limbs or pelvis. That's an area we have just started, and we plan to enlarge on it during the next weeks," he said.

Mears expects the bone substitutes, which can be shaped to an exact fit at the operating table, to be used nationwide within a few years.

The only drawback to the substitute is its initial fragility — more breakable than bone — when first implanted, Mears said. So he inserts a piece of metal in the limb to connect the bone fragments and protect the substitute. After several months, the substitute generally is strong enough so the metal can be removed.

In time, blood vessels invade the substitute and the body's enzymes degrade the material, which is replaced with natural bone.

"That's one of its great attractions to us," Mears said. "When it's broken down, the breakdown products are suitable for reconstitution as bone.

"In the long run, you're left with the patient's own bone and no foreign substance. And that's the best you can hope for."

Ceramics are also being used for other bone-related problems. On June 7, 28-year-old Gary Bumgarner became the first U.S. patient to receive permanent, ceramic hip socket replacements developed in Germany. Dr. Edward H. Miller, who conducted the surgery in Cincinnati, said the ceramic implant should outlive the patient, because it does not require cement to attach the sockets.

Before the bone substitute became available, Mears used bone grafts for more than 50 accident victims who lost large segments of bone.

Swedish Surgeons Put Tissue In Brain

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Surgeons have performed the first successful implant of living tissue into the human brain, moving part of a patient's adrenal gland in an effort to combat Parkinson's disease, a Swedish newspaper reported today.

The national daily Svenska Dagbladet said the surgeons found the results so encouraging they want to try the procedure again, but they cautioned it was too early to draw significant conclusions.

The newspaper said the surgery was performed two months ago at the Karolinska Institute's clinic north of Stockholm on a male patient suffering from Parkinson's disease, a degenerative disorder that strikes older people, most often men, with tremors and muscular rigidity.

The newspaper said surgeons Lars Olson, Erik-Olof Backlund and Ake Seiger moved two-thirds of the core, or medulla, of the patient's adrenal gland from its normal spot above the kidney to the part of the brain called the nuclear caudatus.

Parkinson's disease has been linked to a lack of dopamine, which is produced by the nuclear caudatus in a healthy person. The adrenal gland medulla produces small amounts of dopamine and the surgical team hoped it would stimulate the brain's own production of the substance.

Small metal particles were put in the patient's brain to allow scientists to monitor development of the tissues with X-rays.

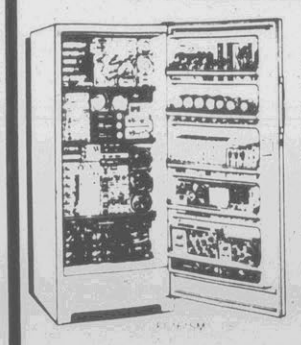

"We have noted a slight improvement, but nothing sensational," Olsen was quoted as saying.

Similar transplants have been performed only on animals, mainly rats

Watt Stirs Fuss With Letter To Israeli

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interior Secretary James Watt, embroiled in domestic controversies since taking office, on Saturday found himself in a foreign policy flap over a letter he sent to the Israeli ambassador.

Watt told Ambassador Moshe Arens that U.S. support for Israel could be jeopardized if Jewish liberals oppose the Reagan administration's energy initiatives.

The letter provoked outcries from American Jewish leaders and resulted in calls for Watt's resignation from two congressmen, one of whom lambasted the secretary's act of "bare-knuckled bigotry." At the White House, officials called Watt's statements "unfortunate" and said they did not reflect President Reagan's views or American foreign policy.

Asked about the White House comment, Watt said what was unfortunate was that his letter was being misinterpreted. He said he was being attacked with "malicious intent."

Watt said the letter was not meant as a threat, as some American Jewish groups charged, and that he told White House officials he could defend his position "ably with or without their help."

"If we do not reduce America's dependency upon foreign crude energy, there is great risk that in future years America will be prevented from being the strong protector and friend of Israel that we are and want to be," Watt said in the one-page letter.

"If the liberals of the Jewish community join with the other liberals of this nation to oppose these efforts (at energy independence), they will weaken our ability to be a good friend of Israel," Watt said. "Your supporters in America need to know these facts."

American Jewish leaders said Saturday that they found "a veiled threat" in Watt's letter and found it offensive that he would appeal for Jewish support through a foreign ambassador.

In a statement issued in New York, the American Jewish Committee said, "Secretary Watt should go back to school for a refresher course on the American political system for he seems to question the right of Americans to hold opinions that differ from his."

Rabbi Alexander M. Schindler, president of the 1.5 million-member Union of American Hebrew Congregations, said, "I don't like being appealed to as a Jew on an issue that is essentially of concern to all Americans."

Sen. Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., said Watt should either resign or be fired "for this act of bare-knuckled bigotry."

"If he goes and his departure awakens the country to the fact that ideologues of the radical right have taken over whole areas of the American government, there may be some gain from this latest episode of bigotry and bullying," Moynihan said.

CBS Signs 'Unknowns' For Dukes' TV Series

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A part-time airline steward and an economics graduate beat out more than 2,000 applicants to win roles on the hit CBS television series "The Dukes of Hazzard," after the two stars of the program got into a feud with the producers.

Christopher Mayer, 28, and Byron Cherry, 25, who will play the new characters Vance and Coy Duke, respectively, were introduced to reporters Friday outside the "Hazard County Courthouse" set at the Burbank Studios.

They were were selected from among 2,230 hopefuls who tried out for parts this summer after "Dukes" stars John Schneider and Tom Wopat sued Warner Bros. Television for a larger share of merchandising royalties, and said they were leaving the top-rated series.

Mayer, who is from Ridgewood, N.J., and has an economics degree from Colgate University, appeared in off-Broadway plays before moving to Los Angeles. Cherry, of Buckhead, Ga., has no acting experience.

Cherry said he had "no worries at all" about stepping into the series from his part-time job as an Eastern Airlines flight attendant. He also tends bar in College Park, Ga.

Filming on the series' fifth season is scheduled to begin next week.

"Everybody on the show has accepted us — since 6 o'clock last night," Mayer quipped as he and his new acting partner nervously fielded questions. Both said they were surprised to land the roles.

Although it appeared that the newcomers were replacing Wopat and Schneider, executive producer Paul Picard said the two new actors were merely additions to the cast.

"We don't look upon this as a cast change," Picard said. "They're additions." He said it was "a possibility" that Schneider and Wopat would return to the show.

Picard said Mayer and Cherry will portray the nephews of Uncle Jesse, but he would not reveal how they will be introduced into the show or if the characters played by Schneider and Wopat — Bo and Luke, respectively — will be written out.

Picard said the two new actors would appear in the first show of next season, scheduled to be broadcast Oct. 1.

Warner Bros. and one of its subsidiaries, Licensing Corp. of America, are countersuing Schneider and Wopat for alleged libel, conspiracy to libel and breach of contract.

Adopt-A-Pet

The Adopt-a-Pet of the Week is Cindy, a young spayed female black part-Labrador retriever. She's obedient and friendly. 756-1268.

Also being sought a home is by the Pitt County Humane Society are the following:

•A white female mixed-breed puppy that will be a small dog; a male German shepherd-collie dog; a brown and white young adult female dog — very friendly; A good-natured part-huskee female dog; and a white male dog that looks like a full-blooded highland terrier. All may be seen at the Pitt County Animal Shelter on County Home Road (State Rd. 1725) Monday through Friday from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m.

•Four puppies about 8 weeks old — three black, one brown. Will be medium-sized dogs. 758-5747.

•A black and white spayed female cat that has had all her shots. She is an indoor-outdoor cat, an excellent mouser. 756-7645.

•A 1-year old female cat and three 5-week old female kittens — one calico, one gray-striped, one white. All have had shots and are litter-trained. 756-5144.

•Four 7-week old kittens, two gray males, one brown tabby male, and one black tabby female. 756-8655 or 756-4003.

•An adult female, black cocker spaniel that has been groomed; a 12-week-old yellow and white male kitten; and an 11-week-old part-collie puppy. 752-9922.

•Four 8-week old kittens. 753-2362.

•Two 3-year-old female yorkshire terriers with all shots and a 10-year-old healthy brown and white male terrier with all shots. All may be seen at Bateman Animal Clinic.

•Two 9-week-old kittens — one gray tabby, one yellow tabby — and three 7-weekold kittens. 758-0341.

•Four 8-week-old kittens, — two black, two black and white. 355-6086 after 6 p.m.

Surgeon Joins Practice

Dr. C. Robert Means Jr. recently has joined Dr. E.G. Crawford Jr. in the practice of oral and maxillofacial surgery at 4 Doctors Park, Greenville.

Dr. Means has just completed a residency in oral and maxillofacial surgery at Vanderbilt University, after graduating from the University of North Carolina School of Dentistry in 1979. He received a B.A. degree in 1975 from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He and his wife, Mary-Margaret, reside in Greenville.

Britain Mints New Gold Coins

LONDON (AP) — For the first time since 1915 Britain is minting gold half sovereigns, and the new coins will go on sale Wednesday, Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir Geoffrey Howe says.

The coins will be supplied by the Bank of England to London bullion traders in the same way as sovereigns are, Howe told Parliament on Friday.

At the current gold price of about $365 a Troy ounce, the half sovereigns will cost about $55 each, he said.

Survey Shows Cutbacks Threaten Rights Of Poor

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The constitutional right to legal counsel is being threatened by cutbacks in funding for criminal defense services for the poor, concludes a national survey by a University of North Carolina professor.

The study, conducted by law professor Norman Lefstein for the American Bar Association, shows that many state courts lack the money to provide any legal counsel for defendants who are unable to pay their attorney.

"Unfortunately there is mounting evidence that the financial problems of defense services are approaching crisis proportions in some parts of the country," Lefstein said.

He said the shortcomings should be corrected because they have the potential of creating greater problems in the criminal justice system.

"There is considerable risk of wrongful conviction of the innocent and of accused persons receiving vastly unequal treatment, depending on their wealth or poverty," he said.

"Some lawyers are very dedicated and will perform very effectively with little or no compensation," Lefstein said. "But unfortunately some will not put forth the necessary effort unless they are compensated."

Lefstein, formerly a prosecutor and public defender in federal court in Washington, D.C., said he obtained his information through interviews with defense attorneys, visits to a select sample of judicial districts and previous studies conducted by various groups.

He said he found that states spend widely varying amounts of money for defending the poor. Alaska and California spent the most — $8.18 and $3.94 respectively for each state resident during 1980-81.

North Carolina was ranked 29th with $1.34 spent per person. The lowest amounts spent were 48 cents per person in Mississippi and 45 cents per person in Alabama.

Fees paid to private lawyers defending indigent clients also varied widely, from $12.50 per in-court hour in Connecticut to $50 per in-court hour in North Dakota.

"The hourly rate at which appointed counsel are compensated is rarely as much as $35 per hour and is often much less," Lefstein said.

He noted that many law firms estimated they must spend up to 50 percent of their revenues for overhead expenses, including rent, secretaries and stationery.

Lefstein concluded that fees for appointed counsel often are not enough to pay law office overhead and as a result, defense lawyers often find themselves in the position of having to subsidize the courts.

Some state and federal courts have ruled that attorneys cannot refuse to take assigned cases even if there is no money to pay them. Some courts also have ruled that attorneys can be sued for malpractice by clients if their defense is not up to standards.

"We don't tell the judge, the sheriff, the bailiff or the prosecutor that from October through December they have to work for free, but in effect, that's exactly what many defense attorneys are asked to do," he said.

Public defender offices represent more than half of all poor clients in the United States. Lefstein said they have their own set of problems — low pay, high caseloads, frequent turnover and inadequate facilities.

Coastal Drilling Will Be Slow In Altering Beaches

By The Associated Press

Officials say it's unlikely that opening 1 billion acres off the U.S. coastlines to oil and gas drilling will quickly alter the view from North Carolina and South Carolina beaches.

The federal government already has offered area coastal tracts for lease but few attracted petroleum industry buyers and the first exploratory well has yet to be drilled.

"I don't think we're going to see any dramatic difference by the opening up of these territories," said Angela Skelton, associate director of the Raleigh-based N.C. Petroleum Council, a trade association affiliated with the American Petroleum Institute.

But, she said, the situation could shift.

"Five years ago, nobody anticipated any interest directly off North Carolina," she said. "Things change. Technology improves. Geologic trends are discovered that no one knew about."

In August 1981, petroleum companies picked up 43 three-mile-square tracts on the outer continental shelf off North Carolina. Only four tracts off the South Carolina shore drew a buyer.

The closest tracts to shore are located 33 miles off the Outer Banks north of Cape Hatteras.

North Carolina Gov. Jim Hunt went to court over the 1981 offering of another block of six tracts located 12 miles off Cape Lookout. But the matter became moot when no buyers showed interest in the patch.

So far, only Chevron USA is close to clearance for drilling in one of the tracts off Hatteras.

"There are many considerations and safeguards that must be made along the way," said Tom Wilson of the U.S. Interior Department's Minerals Management Service.

"This is a long process," he said. "It means this is an area that can be considered. It does not mean that it's all going to be drilled. But it's essential if we're going to reduce our dependence on foreign sources for oil."

Waters off Alaska, Wilson said, are much more attractive to oil explorers than the North Carolina and South Carolina deeps.

A 14-member Outer Continental Shelf Task Force was established in 1979 to protect N.C. interests in the area. South Carolina has a similar body — the 15-member Outer Continental Shelf Advisory Committee.

Eric Vernon, a policy analyst in the N.C. Office of Marine Affairs, is coordinator of the task force.

State policy, Vernon said, supports offshore oil and gas leasing as a means of developing new energy sources. "But not to the point where the environment — the coastal environment — and our coastal industries of tourism and fishing are threatened," he said.

State jurisdiction over coastal waters ends at the 3-mile limit, but the 1978 Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act provides governors with the authority to make recommendations on lease sales and requires consultation with the affected states by the interior secretary.

Amendments to the 1972 Coastal Zone Management Act require that any federal activity must be consistent with an affected state's laws and policies.

"I believe the concern of environmental groups is that Watt will not adminster this program with sensitivity to the environment," Vernon said. "This is where the state comes in — the procedures are here to protect the state's interest."

Geography and geology offer some additional protection to S.C. interests.

"Where they want to drill for exploratory work are areas where the deep water is closer to dry land," said Ed Craig, associate director of the S.C. Petroleum Council.

"Off South Carolina, unlike North Carolina, you have to go out 100 miles or so to get to that deep shelf area. In some areas it's 200 miles .... And you're talking about $1 million a mile for a pipeline."

Craig said interest in S.C. waters could perk up if anything comes up off the N.C. coast.

"They have to find something in North Carolina," he said, "to make South Carolina pan out."

State Legislator Pleads Innocent To Fire Charge

WINDSOR, N.C. (AP) — State Rep. Ronald Taylor, D-Bladen, will be tried Aug. 23 on charges stemming from the burning of three warehouses owned by state Sen. J.J. "Monk" Harrington, D-Bertie.

Taylor pleaded innocent Friday to charges that he solicited and conspired with two Bladen County men to burn the warehouses on April 23.

Another man charged in the case, Graham Franklin Bridgers, pleaded guilty in Bertie County Superior Court to six charges of conspiracy and willful burning of a building. He is awaiting sentencing.

Judge James R. Strickland of Jacksonville denied a request Friday by Taylor's attorney to postpone his trial until October. Strickland did not act on a request to move the trial out of Bertie County but he did modify a court order to allow Taylor to leave the state on business.

Taylor, Bridgers and Sandy White Jr., who has not been arraigned, were charged in connection with the fires, which destroyed the warehouses and damaged other property at Harrington's Lewiston farm machinery manufacturing complex.

Indictments charged that Taylor paid White and Bridgers $5,000 each to burn the warehouses.

Taylor, who heads a family farm machinery business, had been involved in legal battles with Harrington over patents for tobacco-harvesting equipment. He was renominated last month to his fourth term in the state House.

TATER TIME ... Bill Borst of Graham shows off his new invention, the "Tater-time Clock." Borst says acid in the potatoes provides energy for the clock to work. He plans to market the digital spud clock in time for Christmas. (AP Laserphoto)

Clock Uses Potatoes For Power

GRAHAM, N.C. (AP) — What has eyes but cannot see, no hands yet it tells time?

Give up? It is Bill Borst's potato-powered light-emitting diode clock.

"Tater-time Clock" is what the Graham mechanic calls the invention that he hopes will earn a share of the novelty market previously held by the likes of pet rocks and the head-held umbrella.

Powered by two regular spuds — Idaho or any other variety previously destined for sour cream and chives — the clock still is on the drawing board at Holley's Auto Repair on Elm Street in Graham.

The inventor will not say exactly how the clock works. But the Elon College resident did say the potatoes act as batteries, one the negative terminal and the other the positive terminal. Copper wires thrust to the heart of each spud react with acids to create a weak current. Wires carry the current to the clock itself.

Any acidic fruit or vegetable would power the clock, Borst said, but potatoes last the longest and look more novel.

Slumping Textile Firms Reporting No Indication Of Early Upturn In Sales

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — Major textile company officials in South Carolina and North Carolina, who saw earnings continue to drop over the last three months, don't have much hope for a recovery this quarter.

"There's no change on the horizon," said textile industry analyst Kay Norwood of Charlotte, N.C, who called the latest figures "horrible."

Burlington Industries Inc., M. Lowenstein Corp. and the Graniteville Co. reported disappointing earnings in the latest quarter. Celanese Corp., a diversified corporation that is the parent company of Fiber Industries Inc., also posted a decline.,

Riegel Textile Corp. and Dan River Inc., have also reported declining earnings recently.

Corporate officials blame the continuing recession for the textile industry's troubles.

"Nothing has changed," said Mrs. Norwood, who works for Interstate Securities Corp. "The economy is still relatively weak. The textile companies are not getting the volume they need."

Burlington, headquarted in Greensboro, N.C., and the nation's largest textile company; reported third-quarter net earnings of $12.8 million, or 45 cents per share, down from $35 million or $1.25 per share, during the same period a year ago. Net sales for the quarter were $719 million, compared to $858 million a year ago.

William A. Klopman, chairman and chief executive officer of Burlington said there "was virtually no segment of our business which was not adversely affected. Current order rates indicate there will be no significant upturn prior to the end of fiscal 1982."

Burlington employs about 3,200 workers at its seven manufacturing plants in South Carolina and its distribution facility, the Burlington Cotton Co., in Greenville.

In North Carolina, the company announced the closing of two plants, putting 635 employees out of work. The company also imposed a salary freeze for salaried employees.

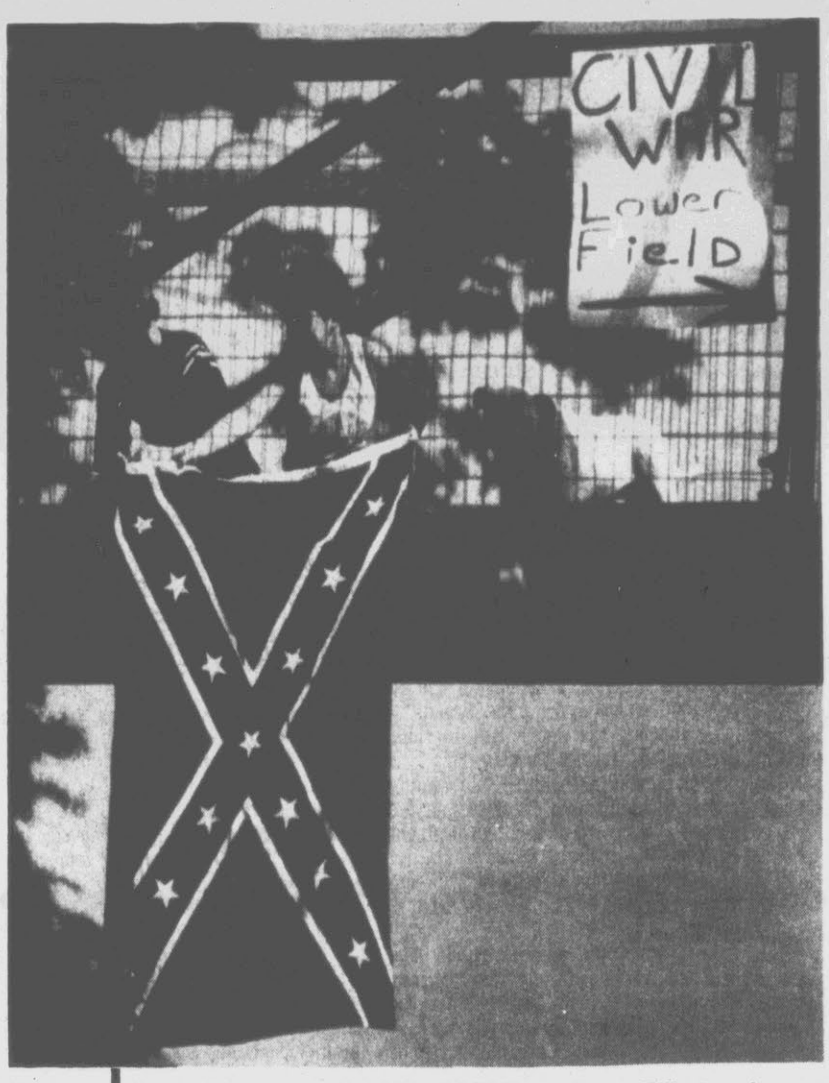

M. Lowenstein Corp. of New York reported a drop in earnings as well, but not as dramatic as Burlington. Net sales were $140 million in the second quarter, down from $159 million a year ago.

Lowenstein employs about 9,000 workers at its plants in Anderson, Honea Path, Lyman, Gaffney, Rock Hill and Columbia.

The Graniteville Co. of Graniteville reported net sales for the quarter were $65 million, down from $91 million a year ago. The company employs about 5,000 workers at its eight plants in South Carolina.

Celanese, which has interests in chemicals, fibers, plastics and specialties, saw its sales for the quarter dip to $788 million, down from more than a billion dollars last year.

The Charlotte-based company employs about 4,000 workers at its South Carolina plants, which include Fiber Industries facilities in Greenville and Darlington and others at Rock Hill and Charleston.

Valerie Cannon Wins Scholarship

Valerie Renee Cannon, a June graduate of Ayden-Grifton High School, was recently awarded a $300 scholarship to Pitt Community College by the Greenville chapter, Professional Secretaries International.

Ms. Cannon, daughter of Arthalia Garfield, was one of six candidates from Ayden-Grifton High School and plans to train as a medical secretary starting in fall.

Ms. Cannon was also presented a Webster's Secretarial Handbook by Yvonne Hardee, scholarship committee chairman.

ALUMNI VOLUNTEER

John Johnson of Greenville was one of the amumni volunteers who helped the North Carolina State University Alumni Association raise more than $500,000 in contributions during the association's fiscal year just ended. Johnson served as NCSU Alumni Fund chairman for Pitt County during the 1981-82 fund campaign.

Studies May Expand Knowledge Of The Ocean

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — In-depth studies of the physics of the oceans may help fishermen and weather forecasters in the future, researchers at North Carolina State University say.

Nearly $800,000 in grants were renewed this month for scientists studying coastal phenomena from Cape Hatteras to the equator, said Dr. Leonard J. Pietrafesa, of the Department of Marine, Earth and Atmospheric Sciences.

By studying waves, currents and temperatures, scientists can determine the probable location of everything from fish to hazardous wastes, Pietrafesa said.

Using satellites, researchers can map the ocean's surface and temperature, locating algae and other nutrients that draw schools of fish.

"We discovered that we can detect on a daily basis where the probable patches or schools will be located," he said. "There are some places, like Japan and the Gulf of Mexico, where fishermen actually use these images on a day-to-day basis and use them quite successfully."

However, Pietrafesa said, no North Carolina fishermen have contacted him about the study.

"Apparently, the fishermen themselves don't advertise it," he said. "But they're really on top of something that's of major importance to their livelihood."

The Department of Energy, which extended its funding through May 1984 with a grant of $409,500, is primarily interested in energy-related questions, Pietrafesa said.

"For instance, if we were to lease some offshore tracts for oil exploration or pipeline placement, or for nuclear power plant placement, where would the toxic or radioactive pollutants go? Are there more or less safe areas to construct, say, an oil pipeline?"

Pietrafesa's work and that of Dr. Robert H. Weisberg, a colleague at N.C. State, could also lead to prediction and even manipulation of weather, he added.

"Because we are an industrial society, we are constantly adding carbon dioxide to the atmosphere," Pietrafesa said. "That can eventually increase the temperature enough to melt the Antarctic ice sheet, raising the level of the oceans enough to wipe out several coastal cities."

The ocean's large capacity for absorbing carbon dioxide could be used to offset that threat, Pietrafesa said.

Weisberg, who recently received a $368,000 grant from the National Science Foundation, is studying the impact of climate changes along the equator on weather "a year or two down the road," Pietrafesa said.

"What we're beginning to find out is that an especially dry spring or an exceptionally cold winter has its origins in what was occurring a year or two earlier," he said.

Scientists are also discovering similarities between air currents, like the jet stream, and ocean currents like the Gulf Stream.

"Both move as very large wave systems," he said. "We normally think of waves as the kinds of waves we see on the surface. But the kinds of waves I'm talking about have wavelengths several hundred miles to several thousand miles in length.

"If the (air) wave amplitude grows, you may see a trough extending down into Georgia, beginning in Minnesota or North Dakota, and cold air from Canada just slides down the trough."

The size of the waves is apparently determined by equatorial climate changes in years past, he said.

Efforts To Revive Fleet Meeting With Opposition

By MATT YANCEY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A flabby merchant marine, fed more than $10 billion in government subsidies in the name of national defense, is being put on a diet and told to get into shape.

But efforts to revive the U.S. commercial shipping fleet by freeing it from antitrust and "free trade" restraints are stumbling in a maze of opposition in and outside the Reagan administration. Among the critics is Rep. Walter Jones, D-N.C., chairman of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee.

And while the government remains committed to keeping the American flag on commercial vessels, it is willing to forfeit thousands of jobs, conceding U.S. shipyards cannot compete with Korea and Japan in a sated world market.

Despite 4½ decades of subsidies now approaching half a billion dollars a year, the U.S. merchant fleet is floundering with only 192 ships engaged in international trade. They carry less than 4 percent of the nation's ocean-borne imports and exports.

The U.S. maritime fleet totals 522 ships, compared with the 1,188 ships at the end of World War II, when half the world's tonnage capacity sailed under the American flag.

The Soviet Union has increased its fleet 71 percent over the past decade to 2,530 ships and ranks only behind Greece in the number of registered ocean-going commerical vessels.

The demise of the U.S. shipping industry is blamed on many factors, but supporters and critics agree that chief among them are mismanagement and the inefficiency of the American fleet.

But the root of the problem may lie in government subsidies, says Charles Hiltzheimer, chairman of Sea-Land Industries, the only non-subsidized U.S. carrier.

"The more an industry is subsidized, the less imagination and aggressiveness seems to grow out of it," he says.

Citing the average age of American ships — 17 years — and their size, Hiltzheimer says the industry should undertake a $6.3 billion program to replace 100 outdated, fuel-inefficient ships with 150 new, larger, diesel-powered vessels.

He acknowledges that only three or four companies, including his own, could raise the money. To attract that capital, he says, the industry must be freed from antitrust restraints and the government must substitute its free trade policy with one allocating a portion of its trade to U.S. carriers.

The administration, at Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis' urging, has endorsed legislation easing regulations and extending broad antitrust immunity to ocean carriers.

That would give U.S. companies more flexibility to form cartels that fix rates, divide up routes and apportion revenues and profits. Still bottled up in the House Judiciary Committee, the legislation is opposed by the Justice Department, consumer groups and shippers fearing higher prices.

While Lewis has urged the administration to reserve 10 percent of the nation's bulk trade for U.S. ships, the proposal has run into much opposition.

The administration released "initial elements" of its maritime policy in May. Among them:

—An indefinite extension of the two-year mortatorium imposed by Congress last year in the 45-year tradition of limiting subsidies to U.S.-built ships.

—Relieving U.S. flagships of the 50 percent tariff on repairs made abroad.

—Extending tax deferments to ships constructed in foreign yards.

—Elimination of the three-year waiting period for ships that reregister in the United States to carry government cargoes.

—Increasing the permitted foreign ownership in U.S. flag vessels from 49 percent to 75 percent.

Meanwhile, the administration has declined to make any new money available in 1982 or 1983 to subsidize construction of ships in American yards.

Jones of North Carolina questions giving companies tax breaks "so that they can invest in ways that benefit foreign shipbuilders instead of U.S. shipyards."

"The administration views the shipbuilding industry as being in a position which does not require any special treatment with maritime policy," he says. "But Congress is not yet certain that this is the case."

"The commercial side of our shipbuilding base is simply being allowed to die a cruel death," charges Frank Drozak, president of the AFL-CIO's Maritime Trades Department, which represents 8½ million workers in the industry. "Lense Department studies, concluded that "most of the major arguments advanced in support of assisting the U.S. merchant marine for national security reasons are seriously flawed."

And the administration has moved to divorce its maritime policy from defense requirements and, in the initial peacetime occurrence, is procuring its own ships instead of relying on the merchant fleet for contingency requirements.

Washington maritime attorney Richard Kurrus says foreign investors are "more bullish" on the U.S. merchant marine, particularly as more nations embrace cargo-sharing agreements requiring that a percentage of a country's imports and exports be carried on ships under its own flag.

The Reagan administration has refused to endorse cargo sharing even though the United States already has such bilateral agreements with China, Argentina and Brazil.

Shippers, "free trade" advocates and the State and Agriculture departments are opposed to the concept. But Labor Department officials cite figures showing U.S. flag vessels carry less than 1 percent of the bulk raw materials imported by American companies to support their claim that such a policy should be the "keystone" of the administration's maritime program.

Some labor specialists in the administration also would like to see a bigger effort made to get the 666 American-owned ships registered in so-called "flag-of convenience" countries back under the American flag.

"The flags-of-convenience countries in effect, for a modest fee, sell a license to pay substandard wages and benefits, provide inadequate living quarters and facilities, escape taxes, ignore most safety provisions and limit pollution liability," Deputy Underscretary of Labor Robert Searby said in a memo earlier this year.

But Searby said any effort to join some Third World countries in phasing out flag-of-convenience shipping would be opposed by oil companies.

Thanks largely to containerization, first developed by Sea-Land, U.S. ships still excel in the more profitable liner trade, carrying 27 percent of all U.S. imports and exports of finished products and durable goods.

But while the United States doubled its container ship capacity during the 1970s, the worldwide fleet of container ships more than tripled. The Soviet Union, using the America below U.S. companies.

Under pressure from its European trade partners and the United States, the Soviets in the past two years have dropped out of the U.S. trade and raised their rates substantially on other routes.

UNC Board To Consider Budget

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The University of North Carolina Board of Governors will consider a $595-million budget for 1982-83 this Friday that includes fewer jobs and a system-wide pay freeze.

The budget was approved Friday by a Board of Governors committee. It is 4.4 percent, or $24 million, higher than last year's budget. The increase is needed to maintain continuing services at 1981-1982 levels, officials said.

A 5 percent salary increase granted in January to state employees, including the 24,000 workers in the UNC system, is in the budget for the 1982-83 fiscal year which began July 1.

But L. Felix Joyner, the system's vice president for finance, told the Committee on Budget and Finance that a salary freeze mandated by the Legislature prohibits salary increases that could be provided for UNC employees from sources other than taxpayers' dollars.

The 16-campus system bore $4.1-million worth of the $9-million personnel cuts required of state agencies by the Legislature in June, Joyner said, noting that amounted to a reduction of 241 positions.

Despite the reductions, no teaching positions were eliminated and faculty-student ratios will be maintained at current levels on the 16 campuses, Joyner said.

Recruit Dies

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A 19-year-old recruit collapsed and died after a 2¼-mile run in the seventh and final week of physical training before graduation at the Naval Training Center, a spokesman said.

The sailor, identified as Jeffery Byrd of Sacramento, was in no apparent distress after finishing the run Friday faster than most others in his company, said Lt. Cmdr. Chris Baumann.

Byrd collapsed three minutes later and was moved to a shaded area and given medical attention, Baumann said. An ambulance was called, and Byrd was pronounced dead on arrival at a base clinic. An autopsy was planned.

ECU Names Harrison New Head Basketball Coach

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

Ending weeks of speculation, East Carolina University as expected named Iowa State University assistant coach Charlie Harrison as its head basketball coach Saturday morning.

The selection, widely rumored since Harrison was interviewed Friday morning by the eight members of the basketball search committee, was announced by Athletic Director Ken Karr at a 10 a.m. press conference at the Pirate Club on the ECU campus.

Harrison, 32, replaces Dave Odom, who resigned in late June after three years at ECU to accept an assistant coaching position at the University of Virginia. Odom was 38-42 at ECU.

"Someone said this was a challenge," Harrison said. "No, it's not. It's an opportunity. I'm not scared of hard work. I promise you one thing: We'll work hard and the kids will work hard."

Harrison, a native of Scotland Neck, is the sixth ECU head coach in the last 20 years — a period that saw ECU record eight of its worst 10 seasons on the hardcourt.

Harrison, who lists Indiana coach Bobby Knight and Iowa State coach Johnny Orr among references on his resume, was selected from a group of five finalists, according to sources.

The other four — all of whom were interviewed Thursday — were Upsala College head coach Tom Chapman, Pensacola Junior College head coach Chip Boes, Richmond assistant Joe Gallagher and Wisconsin-Green Bay coach Dave Buss.

The final selection reportedly came down to Harrison and Chapman, who had not been mentioned previously as being among the finalists.

Dr. Karr refused to name the finalists or explain the final selection process, which concluded Friday afternoon when Harrison was notified he was the committee's choice

"The vote was unanimous," Karr said after the announcement. "I think the committee felt Charlie Harrison presented the recruiting experience and the ability to give us the maximum chance to reach the goals we want for the program here."

Harrison said he has not decided on whether he will retain ECU assistant coaches Tom Barrise and David Pendergraft.

"I'll talk to the two members of the staff, but nothing has been done yet," he said.

Harrison, like Odom a Guilford College grad, was born and raised in Scotland Neck. He contracted polio as a youngster and never played college basketball. But, polio never stopped him from learning the game.

He began his coaching career under Knight at Indiana where he served two years as a graduate assistant. Harrison moved on to Clemson in 1973 to become an assistant under Tates Locke.

The following year he was an assistant coach at Oklahoma. From there, he became an assistant coach for the Buffalo Braves of the National Basketball Association, serving as the team's chief scout.

Harrison then coached in Europe for the next two years before returning to the United States in 1979. That summer he was named an assistant at New Mexico, and drew national attention later that fall when he became interim coach after head coach Norm Ellenberger and assistant Manny Goldstein were suspended.

In 1980, he became Orr's chief assistant at ISU before leaving to take over at ECU.

"Why did I come here?" Harrison said. "I've always wanted to be a Division I head coach. As the crow flies, I took an indirect route but I'm here and I'm happy. I'm proud and I'm excited.

"I'm not going to give any long-range goals, or any short-range goals," he added. "My number one priority is to manage things here at home. I want to get things on an even keel."

Asked what type of offense and defense the fans could be expected to see from ECU under Harrison, the coach said: "Defensively, we'll use man-to-man. I was taught that and I feel comfortable with it.

"I don't know what style of (offense) we'll have until I see (the players) on the floor. I want to run the ball and be quick. I want to put it up on the board and if it misses to go get it.

"If we don't have the break, I want to make sure we get a good shot," he added. "I think that's one of the hardest things to teach — what is a good shot."

Regardless of the offense or defense, Harrison said the watchword for ECU basketball would be work — hard work.

"I will demand it," he said. "I don't give credit for hard work. I demand it and a I expect it."

Harrison comes to the ECU basketball program on unsteady ground. ECU has had two straight losing seasons and has had only one winning season — Odom's first year — in the past seven.

Also, two players — forwards Morris Hargrove and Bill McNair — have announced they will attend Georgia Southern. The Pirates also lose three players to graduation.

As a result, the basketball program at ECU, labeled by some critics as the "Graveyard of Coaching," has been unable to attract the fans to Minges — something Harrison hopes to change.

"I'm going to try to put some people in Minges Coliseum," he said. "We're going to be exciting and we're going to work hard."

Harrison said he was impressed by the recruiting class Odom brought in this season, all of whom — it is believed — will stay despite the exodus of Odom to Virginia.

Polio Didn't Stop New Pirate Head Coach From Working Hard To Achieve Success

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

New East Carolina University head basketball coach Charlie Harrison has a dream. It is more than a dream, however. It is a metaphor for how Harrison views his job at ECU.

"I have this dream that I can run," Harrison said. "All of sudden I am running like everybody else."

Then, just as suddenly, Harrison awakes — to reality that is polio, which Harrison contracted as a youngster. The dream remains that — that and only that.

"I'm not going to wake up and feel sorry for myself that I can't run," Harrison said after being named the ECU head basketball coach at a 10 a.m. press conference Saturday.

Harrison related his dream to the position the ECU basketball program finds itself in — overshadowed by the Atlantic Coast Conference for both attention and recruits.

"You've got to take pride in who you are, where you are and where you are going," Harrison said. "East Carolina is East Carolina. Charlie Harrison is Charlie Harrison.

"I'm not going to worry that Duke or N.C. State gets more TV coverage," Harrison said. "You can't compare yourself with others.

"I'm proud to be who the hell I am. I am not going to change it so why not take pride in it.

"It takes that attitude (to be successful). Success generates interest; pride generates effort; effort generates success."

Harrison, an assistant coach under Johnny Orr at Iowa State University the past three seasons before accepting the ECU job, contracted polio in his left leg when he was 1 year old and never played college basketball.

The disease has done nothing to limit his athletic activities — either on or off the court.

"I'll still play racquetball and I lift weights and I used to run four or five miles," Harrison said. "I didn't run fast but I got where I was going."

Having had polio most of his life has left Harrison in a unique position to view human nature. He has seen the good and the bad, the prejudice and the pity.

The bad: "If someone is turned off by a visible handicap, then I can't take that as a personal insult to me," Harrison said. "I can only look at the person and say there is something wrong with them."

The good: "It has made me work harder. I don't judge people on their physical appearance — be it a handicap or racial or otherwise. That's prejudice. If you open up your mind, you get to know people better."

Harrison, a native of Scotland Neck, appears a confident person. He has a strong, solid — almost booming — voice and seemed at home behind the podium Saturday morning while answering questions.

Later, however, he admitted the last few days have been hard. "Do you mind if I smoke?" he asked. "I don't smoke much, but I haven't had much sleep the last few days.

"I'm a little apprehensive. All I wanted was an interview," Harrison said. "I have enough confidence in myself that I knew if I could get an interview I'd have a chance.

"Getting an interview is harder than most people think," he added. "First of all (when the applications first come in), you're just looking at a person on a piece of paper."

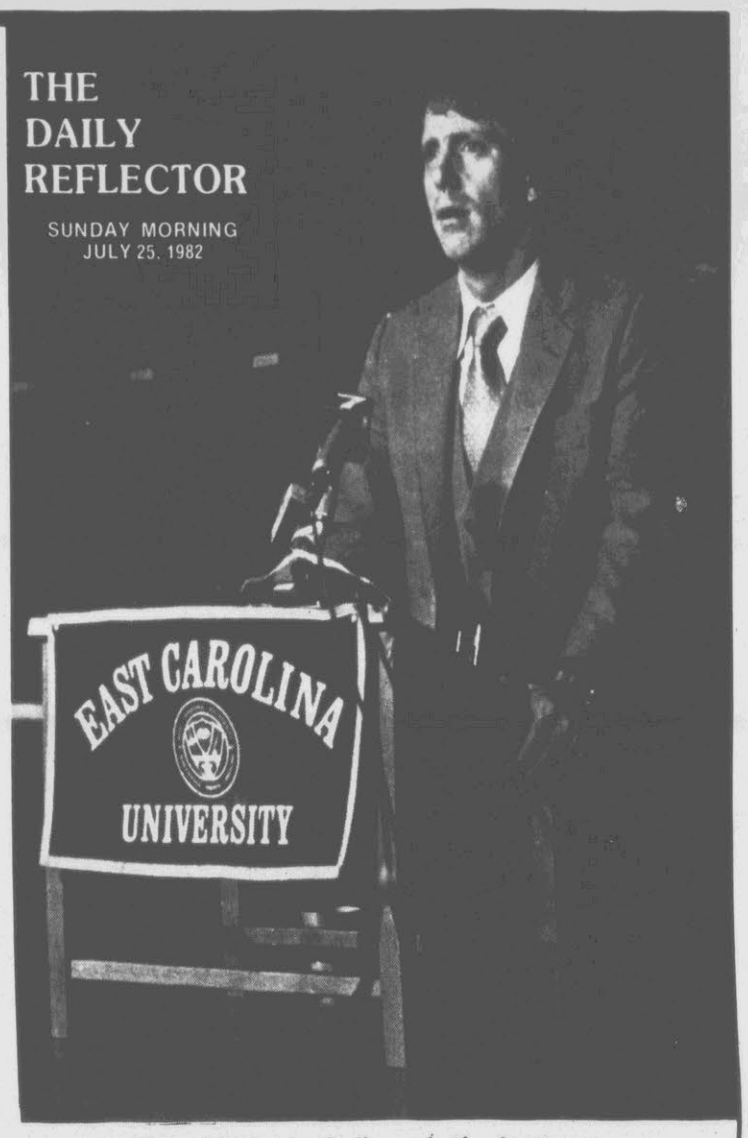

The interview was granted and Harrison appeared before the eight-person search committee Friday. "One of the committee members — I think it was Dr. (Ernie) Swartz — asked me when I could take the job. I told him right after the meeting.

"I wanted the job. There was no question about that. I didn't take it as a stepping stone. I left (ISU) in an effort to better myself."

Harrison comes to ECU from Iowa State, but since graduating from Guilford College in 1971 with a B.S. degree in biology, he has worked for Indiana coach Bobby Knight, Clemson

Lewis Hits 2nd Best Long Jump In History

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Carl Lewis uncorked the second-best long jump in history and the longest in the last 14 years, a 28-9 leap that earned him his second gold medal Saturday night in the National Sports Festival.

While it was a night of joy for Lewis, it was an evening of hard luck for heavyweight boxer Tyrone Biggs, who broke his right hand for the second straight year in the Festival semifinals.

A couple of hours after he scored a unanimous decision over Lucious Kirkley of the U.S. Army, Biggs' hand was put in a cast, ruling him out of the finals Tuesday night.

So for the second straight year, the giant 21-year-old Philadelphian must settle for the silver medal. Instead, Craig Payne of Livonia, Mich., and Al Evans of Chicago will fight for the gold and bronze medals in their bout, which was postponed from Sunday to Tuesday.

Meanwhile, Wendy Wyland earned a diving gold medal Saturday and will join the United States team for the World Aquatic Championships in Ecuador next week, in the first full day of this four-year competition for American amateur athletes.

The dramatic leap by the 21-year-old Lewis came after four consecutive fouls and drew a big ovation from the near-capacity crowd in Indiana University's new $26 million stadium.

Only American Bob Beamon, posting a 29-2½ performance in Mexico City's thin air in winning the 1968 Olympic gold medal, ranks ahead of Lewis.

Just three athletes, East German Lutz Dombrowski, Beamon and Lewis, have cracked the 28-foot barrier in the long jump.

In the midst of his long jumping, Lewis joined Mike Miller, Calvin Smith and Stanley Floyd to run the fifth-swiftest time ever in the 400-meter relay.

The foursome, running for the South team in these four-year-old American Olympics, sped to a clocking of 38.27.

Lewis, ranked No. 1 in the world in the 100 meters and the long jump, fouled once before he ran the second leg of the relay. He followed with three more misses before his meet record performance on his fifth bid.

Biggs, the reigning world amateur heavyweight boxing champion, suffered a broken right hand for the second straight year in a semifinal victory in the National Sports Festival, a boxing official said Saturday night.

"It's broken. They've put it in a cast," said Bill Cummings, an official of the U.S. Amateur Boxing Federation.

"He's definitely out of the finals," Cummings said after conferring with one of Biggs' festival coaches, Vic Zinet.

Biggs, 6-foot-5 and 218 pounds, suffered the injury when he struck opponent Lucious Kirkley's headgear in the first round of their semifinal bout in the Indiana Convention Center.

Despite the injury — the same one that sidelined him after a 1981 festival semifinal triumph — Biggs, 21, went on to easily outclass his 26-year-old U.S. Army opponent for a unamious 5-0 decision.

Biggs had joined another current world titleholder, bantamweight Floyd Favors, in posting opening triumphs in the three-day boxing competition.

Looking at his swollen hand, Biggs said, "Whenever I fight with headgear, I either lose or break a hand. Me and headgears don't get along. It's bad luck."

Still, he now has a career record of 73-3.

"It was a much harder fight than it looked," said Favors, moving into the boxing finals Tuesday night. The other semifinal bouts are scheduled Sunday in the Indiana Convention Center.

Pitt County Takes First

GARNER — Roger Williams struck out 14 and stranded 10 Garner runners as Pitt County beat Garner, 3-1, Saturday night in the first game of the American Legion Area I championship.

The win gives Pitt County a 1-0 lead in the best-out-of-seven series, which continues tonight at Garner.

Pitt County took a 2-0 lead in the third when Bill Kittrell reached on an error to score Sammy Hodges. Kittrell later scored on Mont Carter's sacrifice fly.

Garner scored its lone run in the bottom of the fifth on an error by Kittrell that allowed Derek Faulk to score.

Williams, now 5-0, gave up six hits and walked three. Garner pitcher Ron Jones struck out 15 and walked three.

Up By One Stroke Over Carner

Daniel Atop U.S. Women's Open

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Beth Daniel, a model of consistency through three rounds of the U.S. Women's Open, moved ahead of a jittery JoAnne Carner by shooting a third straight 1-under-par 71 Saturday.

"My nerves got me today," said Carner, the 43-year-old golfer with two U.S. Open championships in her background. "It happens maybe once a year.

"I'm going to be 'controlled nervous' in the last round."

Carner and Daniel, the slim 25-year-old player from South Carolina, played together Saturday and will be a twosome again Sunday in the final round, barring a playoff, of the $175,000 event. Daniel will begin the round with a 1-stroke lead.

"I like playing head-to-head with her. We relax each other," said Daniel. "We're joking around out there, and we have similar games."

On Saturday, however, Carner's game included five bogeys. Daniel has made only six bogeys in the tournament.

Daniel made a 5-foot birdie putt on the 17th green to break out of a three-way tie, with Carner and Janet Alex, for the lead.

Daniel, runnerup to Pat Bradley in the 1981 Open, had just one bogey, but she said, "I was very, very disappointed with my putting."

On the first two greens, she missed birdie putt attempts from the 6-foot range.

"That's kind of the way it went for me all day," she said. "But there are no give-away holes out there.

"I thought before the tournament started that even par would be a very good score, maybe good enough to win. I still feel that way."

Carner, seeking her third Open title, began the third round with a 3-stroke lead, after rounds of 69 and 70, but had a rocky start and finish Saturday. She bogeyed three of the first four holes, and bogeys at the 15th and 16th helped knock her out of the lead.

Alex, 26-year-old pro from Pennsylvania, was twice tied with Daniel and Carner for the lead. She took a bogey 4 at the 16th hole, came back with a 25-foot birdie putt at No.17 to move within one stroke of the lead but finished with a bogey.

Also in good position going into Sunday's final round over the 6,342-yard Del Paso Country Club course were 44-year-old Carole Jo Callison, who is a Sacramento resident, Donna White and amateur Kathy Baker. Those three all were at 217, 1-over par for 54 holes.

Callison and Baker both shot a 72 Saturday while White came in with a 73.

Players Say Strike Remains An Option

WASHINGTON (UPI) — NFL players have not ruled out a job action, including a possible strike, before Sept. 8 to show union solidarity during contract talks with the owners.

Washington Redskin Mark Murphy, a player representative, said the owners will test union strength during the summer.

"(Jack) Donlan (executive director of the NFL's management council) will be testing our strength between now and Sept. 8. It is in our best interest to show him before then," Murphy said.

Ed Garvey, executive director of the NFL Players Association, said a job action is being considered by the union and a spot strike of an exhibition game this summer "has not been ruled out."

Negotiators for both sides met for about four hours Friday, reaching no agreements, including where or when the next session would be held.

Donlan said both sides agreed to meet again Tuesday in New York, but Garvey disagreed, saying union represenatives would "be here waiting for them" in Washington. "We're not going to New York."

Friday's session centered on a management proposal to test players for drug snd alcohol dependence, which Garvey characterized as "an illegal subject of bargaining. We choose not to discuss the subject further."

Donlan described the meeting as "less than acrimonious," adding the union representatives "made it clear they were unilaterally opposed to drug testing. We're at loggerheads on that issue."

Following the meeting, union negotiators repeatedly charged the management lacks the authority to conduct serious discussions.

Donlan said the owners have offered a series of proposals and the union has made counter proposals. "You have to work your way through these things. Nobody said it would be easy to reach an agreement."

He said the sides also discussed the right of a player to choose a surgeon but came to no agreement.

"We want to make sure that club doctors maintain the right to determine if a player needs surgery. They want to go further and talk about time with a second doctor. Club doctors are competent men and we trust their judgment," he said.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

BALTIMORE (AP) — It wasn't the bat, but the batter, as rookie Floyd Rayford found out. Rayford clouted a leadoff home run to give Baltimore a 5-4 victory over the Oakland A's in 13 innings Saturday.

"I couldn't find my bat. I lost it," Rayford said after his third homer of the season gave the Orioles the victory. "But I've used Lenny Sakata's bat before, so I just grabbed it."

"I think the pitch was a fastball," said Rayford, who said he last faced Owchinko in an instructional league in 1976 when Rayford was in the Padres organization. "It probably wasn't his best fastball, though.

"I knew it (the homer) had height when I hit it," he said. "I just hoped it would clear (A's left fielder Rickey) Henderson. I went to the plate just trying to make contact and get a single."

Rayford was inserted into the lineup in the 10th inning as a defensive replacement at third base. He was the last of 16 hitters on the Baltimore roster, all of whom were used against the A's by Orioles interim manager Cal Ripken Sr., at the helm while Earl Weaver serves out a one-week suspension.

"Floyd is a capable ballplayer," said Ripken. "I knew I wasn't losing anything by putting him in. I used everybody. Sometimes that's just what it takes. Anytime you come back and win a ballgame like this, it gives your club a shot in the arm. We weren't doing it before (coming from behind), but now we are."

Tippy Martinez, 4-4, earned the victory by holding the A's hitless in the top of the 13th.

Baltimore sent the game into extra innings, tied 4-4, with a run in the ninth off reliever Dave Beard. Pinch hitter Jim Dwyer led off with a walk and moved to third on a pair of grounders. Al Bumbry then singled to score Dwyer.

Tony Armas, who has homered in each of his past five games against Baltimore, hit a solo shot, his 13th, in the seventh inning to snap a 2-2 tie. His leadoff homer launched a two-run rally that put the A's ahead 4-2. Jeff Burroughs followed Armas' homer with a single, moved to second when reliever Sammy Stewart walked Davey Lopes and scored on Mike Heaths' single.

Lenn Sakata led off the eighth with his third homer, drawing the Orioles within a run, 4-3.

DETROIT (AP) — Alan Trammell and Tom Brookens hit sacrifice flies in the third inning, and Jerry Turner smacked a sixth-inning homer to power the Detroit Tigers to a 3-1 victory over the Texas Rangers.

Tigers rookie Larry Pashnick, 2-3, scattered nine hits to record his first win since May 24 in his only complete game of the year.

Texas had runners on base in each of the first six innings, stranding eight and raising the Rangers left-on-base total to 75 in the past 12 games.

Texas opened the scoring in the second when Larry Parrish led off with a single, was sacrificed to second and scored on a single by Mike Richardt.

Detroit scored twice in third for a 2-1 lead. Chet Lemon drew a leadoff walk from Rangers starter Doc Medich, 7-8, raced to third on Glenn Wilson's single and scored on Trammell's fly to left field. Lou Whitaker singled, sending Wilson to third, and Brookens followed with the Tigers' second sacrifice fly of the inning.

The loss was the 10th in 12 games for Texas, while Detroit won for the second time in six outings.

Seattle 9
Cleveland 0

CLEVELAND (AP) — Rookie right-hander Mike Moore hurled his first complete game in the majors with a four-hitter and Bobby Brown's two-run homer keyed a 17-hit attack as the Seattle Mariners routed the Cleveland Indians 9-0 Saturday night.

Moore, 5-7, struck out three and walked three and pitched out of jams in the first and fourth innings.

In the first Toby Harrah and Mike Hargrove singled with one out, but Andre Thornton grounded into a double play. Thornton walked with two outs in the fourth and went to third on Von Hayes' double, but Chris Bando popped out to short center.

Len Barker, 10-6, yielded Seattle's first seven runs to take the defeat.

Julio Cruz led off the first for Seattle with an infield hit and scored one out later when Brown lined his third home run over the right field fence. The Mariners added another run in the inning on an RBI single by Rick Sweet.

Seattle scored five runs in the sixth for an 8-0 lead. Al Cowens opened with a double and seven of the next eight Mariner hitters singled, including Sweet's second run-scoring single. Todd Cruz, Joe Simpson, Julio Cruz and Richie Zisk also had RBI singles.

Seattle's final run came in the eighth when Zisk singled for his fourthlhit and second RBI.

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Rookie reserve shortstop Lenny Faedo slammed a two-run homer and Gary Ward hit a run-scoring double during Minnesota's three-run seventh inning, carrying the Twins to a 5-3 victory over the Boston Red Sox Saturday night.

Faedo, playing for the injured Ron Wasmington, hit his second homer of the year off reliever Bob Stanley, 7-3, following a leadoff single in the seventh by Sal Butera.

One out later, Randy Bush doubled and came home on Ward's two-out double for a 4-2 Minnesota lead and the Twins' eventual winning run.

The teams exchanged single runs in the eighth — Boston on Carney Lansford's RBI single and Minnesota on an RBI base hit by Bush.

Rookie Brad Havens, 7-6, won his fourth consecutive game, retiring 13 of the last 15 batters he faced before yielding to Ron Davis in the eighth inning. Davis finished up to post his 11th save.

The Red Sox took a 2-0 lead in the third on a two-run homer by Jim Rice, his 14th.

CHICAGO (AP) — Hosken Powell's tie-breaking, two-run single in the sixth inning and Jesse Barfield's three-run pinch homer in the eighth carried the Toronto Blue Jays to an 8-1 victory over the Chicago White Sox Saturday.

Loser Dennis Lamp, 7-5, was sailing along with a two-hitter but ran into trouble in the sixth inning when Toronto scored four runs after two were out.

Rance Mulliniks and Lloyd Moseby singled, and Willie Upshaw walked to fill the bases. Powell singled, scoring Mulliniks and Moseby while Upshaw took third. Upshaw scored on the front end of a double steal and Dave Revering singled to score Powell.

The Blue Jays took the lead with a run in the third on a double by Al Woods, an infield out and Damaso Garcia's sacrifice fly. Chicago tied it fifth on Steve Kemp's infield hit after the Sox had loaded the bases on singles by Vance Law and Rudy Law and a walk to Tony Bernazard.

Dave Stieb, 10-10, was the winner but needed help in the sixth inning from Dale Murray.

Toronto Manager Bobby Cox and coaches John Sullivan and Cito Gaston were ejected from the game by umpire Dale Ford in the first inning after Upshaw was called out on a close play at first.

Allen, Raiders Reach Agreement

SANTA ROSA, Calif. (AP) — Former Southern California tailback Marcus Allen reached a contract agreement with the Raiders Saturday and will report to their training camp here on Sunday, a spokesman for the National Football League team said.

Ken Bishop said Allen, the Raiders' No.1 NFL draft choice in 1982, planned to arrive in time to participate in Sunday's training workouts.

The terms and length of the contract agreement were unavailable, Bishop said.

Reds Down Cubs To Snap 7-Game Losing Streak

CINCINNATI (AP) — Johnny Bench hit a two-run homer and the Cincinnati Reds survived a late threat to outlast the Chicago Cubs 5-2 Saturday night and snap a seven-game losing streak.

Bench's home run, in the first inning, was his second in two nights and boosted his lifetime RBI total to 1,305, passing Enos Slaughter for 43rd place on the all-time list.

Winner Frank Pastore, 5-7, had allowed only one runner to reach third base until the Cubs scored two runs with two outs in the seventh on three hits and a walk.

In the bottom of the first Tom Lawless walked, stole second, moved to third on a groundout and scored on Dan Driessen's infield hit for the Reds' first run. Bench followed with his homer, giving Cincinnati a 3-0 lead.

Cincinnati made it 5-0 in the third off Doug Bird, 6-10, on an RBI double by Paul Householder and run-scoring single by Alex Trevino.

In the top of the seventh with two outs, Scott Thompson walked and scored on Ryne Sandberg's double. Junior Kennedy then drove in Sandberg with a single that knocked out Pastore in favor of Price.

The Reds' victory was only their fourth against 16 losses in July and their fifth in their last 27. For Manager Russ Nixon, who replaced John McNamara Wednesday, it was his first triumph after two losses.

Pittsburgh took a 2-0 lead in the third off winner Phil Niekro, 9-3, when Dale Berra walked and Robinson followed with his second home run of the season and the third of his major league career.

Pittsburgh added a run off reliever Gene Garber in the seventh on singles by Mike Easler and Tony Pena, and a pinch-hit sacrifice fly by Willie Stargell.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Chris Chambliss singled home two runs to highlight a four-run seventh inning that rallied the Atlanta Braves to a 4-3 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates Saturday night.

After failing to score in 28 straight innings, the Braves batted around in the seventh to overcome a 2-0 Pittsburgh lead.

With two outs, Pirate starter Don Robinson, 10-5, delivered his third wild pitch of the game, putting runners at second and third. After Claudell Washington was intentionally walked, Rafael Ramirez walked on four straight pitches to force in the tying run.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Mike Ramsey drove in two runs, and Tito Landrum had an RBI in St. Louis' four-run fourth inning, boosting the Cardinals to a 5-1 victory over the Houston Astros Saturday.

Right-hander Bob Forsch, 10-5, scattered 10 hits over 71-3 innings and pitched St. Louis to its third straight victory, getting relief help from Jim Kaat and Bruce Sutter.

Assisted by five walks, the Cards made the most of five hits, all off Bob Knepper, 4-11, who left after for innings.

Ozzie Smith singled and stole second to start the third inning. He went to third on Forsch's sacrifice and scored on Tommy Herr's sacrifice fly to give St. Louis a 1-0 lead.

George Hendrick and Gene Tenace each singled with one out in the Cards' fourth. Landrum singled home Hendrick, with Tenace stopping at third, and Ramsey followed with a two-run single to center.

Ramsey took second on the throw to cutoff man Art Howe and went to third when Howe's throw was wild. Smith then hit a sacrifice fly to cap the inning.

San Francisco 8

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Rookie left-hander Atlee Hammaker pitched a six-hitter, surviving solo homers by Al Oliver and Tim Wallach, and the San Francisco Giants defeated the Montreal Expos 5-2 Saturday.

Hammaker, 8-5, beat Montreal for the third time without a loss, blanking the Expos on three hits until Oliver and Wallach connected in the seventh inning. He struck out six and did not walk a batter.

San Francisco tagged loser David Palmer, 5-3, for two runs in the first inning. Joe Morgan singled with one out, and Chili Davis was hit by a pitch. The runners advanced on Jack Clark's grounder, and Darrell Evans' bloop single to left scored them both.

The Giants added one unearned run in the sixth and two more in the ninth.

In the sixth, Milt May was safe on shortstop Chris Speier's two-out fielding error, went to second on a wild pitch and scored on Dave Bergman's single. Shortstop Frank Taveras' ninth-inning error opened the door for two more unearned runs, both scoring on Johnnie LeMaster's single.

The Expos didn't get a hit until Tim Raines singled geading off the fourth, but he was caught stealing. Gary Carter led off the fifth with a double, but Hammaker retired the next three batters.

Oliver led off the seventh with his 17th homer of the season and second in as many nights. One out later, Wallach hammered his 12th to extend his hitting streak to 10 games.

As U.S. Advances To Cup Finals

Navratilova Whips Mandlikova

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) — Martina Navratilova, responding to the roars of an American crowd, charged back from a second-set wipeout to lead the United States into the finals of the Federation Cup with a 6-4, 0-6, 6-1 triumph Saturday over former compatriot Hana Mandlikova.

Chris Evert Lloyd gave the United States a 1-0 lead when she played near perfect tennis and crushed 17-year-old Helena Sukova 6-1, 6-2.

The United States, seeking its seventh straight Cup, plays Sunday against the winner of Saturday night's Australia-West Germany semifinals.

Navratilova, representing America for the first time since gaining her U.S. citizenship a year ago, came close to losing only the second match in her last 60. Nothing seemed to go right for the world's top-ranked player in the second set against the fifth-ranked Mandlikova.

But just as Navratilova was on the verge of swooning, the cheers of the crowd revived her. Twice the crowd of more than 5,000 fans stopped play with demonstrations of support for the former Czech.

Lloyd had said at the beginning of this tournament that American crowds never fully support their own players, but that was not the case in this match.

Navratilova broke Mandlikova in the fourth game of the final set to take a 3-1 lead, then broke again in the sixth game on a net cord that dropped ever so softly for a winner. A final point net cord skipped hard out of Mandlikova's reach as Navratilova served out the victory.

Sukova, whose late mother, Vera, was the 1962 Wimbledon runner-up to America's Karen Susman and a former coach of Navratilova, had trouble with her serve most of the match.

Unable to charge the net behind her first serve, the 6-foot-1½ Czech was forced into baseline rallies with one of the game's best groundstrokers. Lloyd drilled shot after shot into the corners and within inches of the lines and even Sukova's man-sized reach was not enough to reach them all.

After racing through the first set, Lloyd was broken at the start of the second set when Sukova deftly placed a drop shot that Lloyd could barely reach. Neither player held service through the first four games.

Lloyd finally held at love to take a 3-2 lead and ran out the match against the increasingly frustrated Sukova.

Navratilova, who defected from Czechoslovakia in 1975, said before the match she was annoyed with the comments Mandlikova had been making about her all week.

"Inside, she knows she is still a Czech," said Mandlikova.

"I don't know why she says those things," said Navratilova. "I'm an American now. I chose to live here. I do not feel like a Czech."

Navratilova now holds a 5-3 advantage over Mandlikova since 1980. Navratilova lost to her in three sets in the semifinals at Wimbledon in 1981 but beat her in the semis at the French Open this year.

Lloyd and Navratilova teamed up in the doubles and coasted to a 6-3, 6-2 rout of Mandlikova and Sukova to give the Americans their fourth straight 3-0 sweep.

Lee Co. Eliminates Greenville, 13-10

Babe Ruth

Lee County 13
Greenville.....10

WASHINGTON — Lee County scored three runs in the top of the eighth inning to eliminate Greenville, 13-10, Saturday afternoon in the State 14-15-year-old Babe Ruth tournament here.

Greenville lost to Durhman County, 3-2, Friday night, its first loss in the double-elimination tournament.

In Saturday's game, Brian Stewart singled home two runs to key the three-run eighth that broke a 10-10 tie.

Tim White had two hits for Lee County. Pat Rand, Tony Taylor and Sterling Edwards all had two hits for Greenville.

In Friday's game, Paul Hill and Dwight Smith combined for a one-hitter but it was not good enough as Durham took advantage of walks and errors to defeat the locals.

Hill worked the first 3⅔ innings before being relieved by Smith. Smith, along with his pitching performce, had two hits for Greenville. Billy Michel also had two hits for Greenville.

CP South 4
C. Carolina 3

Billy Godley was the winning pitcher.

CPS had four hits; CC had six hits.

Lowery Wins Southern Am

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Stephen Lowery, a senior at the University of Alabama, won the 76th Annual Southern Amateur Golf Championship Saturday by sinking a 12-foot birdie putt on the first hole of a sudden death playoff.

Lowery shot a 6-under-par 282 for the four-day tournament and had 70 for the final round. But he had to chip in for a birdie on hole 17 to tie John Spelman of Hilton Head Island and then hold onto a tie.

Spelman had a 71 for the day, finishing second. Spelman had birdied the 14th and 15th holes and had a 1-stroke lead going into 17.

Jay Sigel, of Berwyn, Pa., was the first round leader and finished third with a 4-under-par 284.

Lee Rinker, the second-round leader from Stuart, Fla., finished at 285 and shot 70, finishing fourth. Rinker was the medalist for winning the first 36 holes. Scott Dunlop, of Sarasota, Fla., finished fifth with a 286 total.

The other top finishers in the tournament sponsored by the Southern Golf Association included: Jack Veghte, Clearwater, Fla., and Roy Biancalana, New Orleans, tied for sixth at 289; John Inman, Greensboro, N.C., finished eighth at 291; Brad Faxon, Somerset, Mass., finished ninth at 292; tied in a group for 10th at 293 were Jeff Goettman of Springfield, Ohio; Stuart Smith, Nashville, Tenn.; Ignacio DeLeon, Sugarland.

Peete Shoots 2nd Straight No-Bogey Round For Lead

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Cal Peete composed another no-bogey round, this one a 68, and established a two-stroke lead Saturday in the storm-delayed completion of the second round of the $350,000 Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic.

Peete, who has not made a bogey for the tournament, completed 36 holes in 134, eight shots under par.

He was among the 90 players who were stranded on the Kingsmill Golf Club course Friday by a series of thunderstorms which disrupted play and reduced the tournament format from 72 holes to 54.

The tournament will be completed with a single round Sunday. The full tournament purse will be paid even though the sponsors had the option of reducing it by 25 percent.

"That's great," Peete said. "I thank the sponsors for coming up with the idea."

Bill Rogers, one of the men tied for second at 136, was less enthusiastic about the shorter tournament format.

"You're geared from the word go for a 72-hole tournament," Rogers said. "It's a different feeling, a little weird, knowing it's only a three-round tournament.

"But it's nice to know that I'm going into the third round with a good chance of winning the tournament. With a good round, I can put some pressure on the guy in front.

"Calvin hasn't had a bogey yet? That's unbelieveable on this golf course. He might be due."

Rogers, the 1981 Player of the Year, had a second-round 70 and was tied at 136 with Rik Massengale, who finished off a 68.

Tied at 137 were Hal Sutton and Payne Stewart, a winner last week in the Quad Cities Open. Sutton had a 69, Stewart 68.

The group at 138 included Lee Elder, who finished off a 66 before the rains came Friday, David Edwards, Dan Pohl and Doug Black. Edwards shot a 70, Pohl and Black 66.

Defending champion John Mahaffey could do no better than par-71 and was at 139. First-round leader Bruce Lietzke blew to a 74 and was six strokes off the pace at 140.

Peete, who didn't join the tour until the relatively advanced age of 33, has won twice in the last three seasons and is noted among his peers as one of the game's more accurate players.

But he had some difficulties this hot, humid day.

"This was a little more exciting. I had it in some unusual places — the high grass," Peete said.

He managed to avoid a bogey, however, but had to sink a 25-footer to save par on the eighth hole.

He scored from 18 feet on the next hole and got his other two birdies on approach shots that left him within three feet of the flag.

'Terrible' Tommy: Nickname Undeserved

By CHARLES CROMWELL
The Jonesboro, Ark., Sun

A nickname given to golfer Tommy Bolt on a course in Italy during World War II stuck with him, but he doesn't think it was deserved.

Bolt, 64, who lives on a ranch near Evening Shade became known as "Terrible" Tommy Bolt.

"I threw a couple of clubslover there, and after nine holes some of those Italians were ready to hit the bomb shelter," Bolt said Friday as he prepared to play in a scramble to raise money for Arkansas State University's athletic department.

"I've thrown a couple of golf clubs in my day, but I wasn't the only one. Bobby Jones threw more clubs than I ever saw and he's immortal.

"Between 1950 and 1960 people loved it — it was colorful. I only threw a very few clubs, but everybody who plays golf in this country thinks they've seen me throw a golf club."

Bolt won 15 PGA Tour titles. Winning the 1958 U.S. Open was his biggest thrill, he said. "It was just as exciting for me to win my first tournament — the North & South in 1951 — and about two months later the Los Angeles Open," Bolt said.

His check for winning the Open in 1958 was $8,000, a far cry from the $60,000 paycheck Tom Watson picked up for his Open title in June.

"I think all athletes are well over-paid," Bolt said. "I don't think an individual player should be making $1 million a year. When I started, a $15,000 total purse was big money. My first payheck was $170 for 18th or 19th place in a tournament in Montgomery, Ala. They only paid 20 places back then."

Bolt said one of the biggest changes he has seen in the golf game is the proliferation of good college golfers. "Kids go four years to college and they're ready for the golf profession when they get out of college," he said.

Without hesitation, Bolt said Ben Hogan is the greatest golfer he has ever seen. "He was the greatest from tee to green," Bolt said. "He wasn't a great putter, but he was usually so close to the hole he didn't have to be."

Although he has won a dozen titles on the seniors tour, Bolt is content now to play in only a few while making personal appearances and playing exhibitions.

"I don't want to play a tour again," Bolt said. "I've served my apprenticeship. The seniors tour is just like the regular one — you get up at 6 a.m. to play at 8. I don't want to play at 8. I want to play at 1 when the bankers are out there playing."

Ryder Golfer Leads Batley

BRADFORD, England (AP) — British Ryder Cup golfer Ken Brown shot a 7-under-par 64 on the Bingley St. Ives course Saturday to take a one-stroke lead with a 201 in the $150,000 Lawrence Batley Tournament. But he then angrily stormed off the 18th green after missing a simple putt.

Brown was a stroke ahead of Bernard Gallacher of Scotland, who was at 202 after shooting a 66.

But the missed putt from six feet cost Brown him a share in a new course record of 63, set by Jose-Maria Canizares of Spain.

Brown thrust his ball and glove into his caddy's hand, quickly signed his scorecard, strode to his car and drove off. He dodged a waiting press conference.

Hearns To Battle McCracken Today

DETROIT (AP) — Former World Boxing Association welterweight champion Thomas Hearns faces unknown but unbeaten Jeff McCracken in a nationally televised middleweight bout Sunday.

Hearns, whose only loss in 35 professional fights came last September to Sugar Ray Leonard, has abandoned the welterweight ranks and says he'll pursue a championship in the heavier weight classes.

"They're taking a dangerous chance with Hearns' career matching him against me," says McCracken, 19-0, who fights out of California. "I'm going to knock him out. This fight will go down in history as one of the worst management decisions ever made."

The fight was hastily arranged last week after Sunday's scheduled nationally telecast bout between heavyweights Mike Weaver and Randy Cobb was scrapped when Cobb suffered an injury to his lip.

For Hearns, the fight at Detroit's Cobo Arena is his first in his hometown since December 1980. Hearns has said he felt his followers in Detroit have abandoned him since the loss to Leonard and he sees this fight as a way to rekindle the interest.

That, however, does not bother McCracken.

"When we get in the ring, it's just me and him. And when they cheer real loud, I'm going to fight that much harder," he said.

The bout is slated for 4:30 p.m. EDT on CBS. The telecast is blacked out in the Detroit area.

Getting One In

Mancini Retains WBA Title With 6th-Round Win

WARREN, Ohio (AP) — With actor Sylvester Stallone looking on, 21-year-old Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini extended a real-life dream as dramatic as Stallone's fictional "Rocky."

A wildly cheering partisan crowd drowned out the bell ending the sixth round as Mancini retained his World Boxing Association lightweight title, unleashing a barrage on Ernesto Espana that forced referee Stanley Cristodoulo to stop the fight — after the bell had sounded.

"I hit him with a shot and he came stumbling off the ropes," Mancini said. "If he wasn't going to go down, he would have gone the next round." The title defense was Mancini's first since he won the championship from Arturo Frias on May 8.

Mancini's rapid rise to boxing prominence has been well-chronicled, partly because of his aggressive style and partly because his father's dream of a lightweight championship was waylaid by World War II.

The younger Mancini showed Saturday he has lost none of the emotional fire that drove him to win the title for his father.

Mancini, a native of nearby Youngstown, said the crowd spurred him on.

"I love it. This was the boxing capital of the world today, and it was probably the single-biggest gate of the year besides Cooney-Holmes," Mancini said.

The crowd at Warren Harding High School's Mollenkopf Stadium was estimated at 17,500.

Mancini threw more than 50 punches in the final roun, landing a number of body punches mixed with solid shots to the head. The combination left Espana's legs wobbly and forced the challenger to grab Mancini a number of times.

"After about three rounds, I was ripping him shots to the body, and I heard him moan and groan," Mancini said. "He was backing up, and when he's backing up, he can't be winning. I knew it was just a matter of time."

The victory improved Mancini's record to 24-1, while Espana, a 27-year-old Venezuelan who held the title in 1979 and 1980, dropped to 34-5.

Mancini appeared to take control during the third round, opening with a three-punch combination that sent Espana to the ropes. But Mancini did not unleash the relentless attack that earned him his nickname until he flew out of the corner to start the fifth round, hitting the challenger with a left-right-left combination.

Espana appeared to be laboring in the late-afternoon sun as tenmperatures hovered in the mid-80s.

Mancini pursued Espana, who was against the ropes for much of the round, before he released a series of punches that ended the bout.

Lendl In D.C. Semifinals

WASHINGTON (AP) — Top seed Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia beat local favorite Rodney Harmon 6-1, 6-1 Saturday night to advance to the semifinals of the $240,000 D.C. National Bank Tennis Classic.

In a match to determine the final participant in the semifinals, 17-year-old Jimmy Arias of Grand Island, N.Y., defeated Eric Fromm of Long Island, N.Y. 7-6, 6-3.

Arias will meet Argentina's Jose Luis Clerc in one half of Sunday's semifinal matchups with No.4 seed Yannick Noah of France meeting Lendl in the second half.

Saturday afternoon, Clerc, the defending champion, survived a first-set loss and second-set tie-breaker Saturday to turn back unheralded Frenchman Bernard Fritz 2-6, 7-6, 6-1 while Noah crushed American Van Winitsky 6-0, 6-3.

Harmon, a native of nearby Richmond, Va., who practiced at the Rock Creek Tennis Stadium, site of the tournament, as a youngster, was unable to handle the more experienced Lendl, who has now won 98 of his last 104 matches.

Harmon, an amateur on the tour this summer, is a member of the Southern Methodist University tennis team, where this past year he finished with a 25-5 record.

On Saturday, Harmon rushed to the net behind his serve, a tactic he had used successfully Friday in knocking off No.6 seed Raul Ramirez of Mexico to advance to the quarterfinal round.

Lendl, proved too stern a test, however, as he used his forehand groundstrokes to pass the on-rushing Harmon.

Lendl, who has lost to Noah twice this year, at Palm Springs and in Davis Cup play, will meet the 6-foot-4 Frenchman for a third time in Sunday's semifinals.

Fritz, 28, played the match of his life in extending the world's fifth best player to the brink of defeat.

Clerc, who has won the last three tournaments he has entered and extended his winning streak to 19 straight matches with Saturday's victory, appeared hampered by an Achilles heel injury suffered in a three-set match Friday evening.

Fritz carried Clerc to a tie-breaker in the second set after breaking Clerc to tie the second set at six games apiece. The tie-breaker was all Clerc, who abandoned his earlier strategy to rush the net and put away the fast-fading Frenchman.

The tiebreaker proved Fritz' las hurrah as he quickly wilted in the heat and the increasing pressure of the tournament's No.2 seed.

With temperatures at courtside hovering near 100 degrees, Noah, seeded fourth, wasted little time in dispatching Winitsky, the tournament's No.11 seed and currently ranked 44th in the world by the Association of Tennis Professionals.

In the first set, the 6-foot-4 Noah used a combination of pinpoint passing shots and his own speed to run down Winitsky's apparent winners and turn them to his own advantage.

Winitsky was especially ineffective serving on the slow clay court, as he failed to hold serve during the opening set.

Pitt County Rained Out

GARNER — The first game of the Pitt County-Garner Area I American Legion finals was rained out Friday night.

The game was to have been played last night — weather permitting. Pitt County will travel to Garner Sunday night for Game No. 2.

Games three, four and five will be played Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at Guy Stadium.

Basketball Rule Changes

Some Coaches, Officials Upset Over Variety Of Shot Clocks, Three-Point Baskets

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Following a season of high television ratings and a record crowd in the Superdome for a spine-tingling championship game, college basketball is changes two of its most basic rules in a manner that upsets some coaches and officials.

In efforts to banish the tactically intriquing but often boring slowdown, more than a dozen conferences across the nation have adopted a variety of shot clocks and three-point baskets for 1982-83.

It has created a situation, some fear, which will penalize certain conferences at tournament time. And a leader of a referees' groups sees the chance of a confused official imposing the wrong rule.

"It's the weirdest thing I've ever seen," said Kentucky Wesleyan Coach Mike Pollio. "We get 62,000 to the national championships and we start tinkering with the game."

A basket from 19 feet — the top of the key — will count three points in six conferences, including the Atlantic Coast and Missouri Valley. Three more conferences will have a three-point line ranging as far out as the Big Sky's 21 feet, 3 inches, but still well short of the 23-9 used in the National Basketball Association.

Eight conferences, from the Big East to the Pacific Coast, will try shot clocks of 30 to 45 seconds. Some will be turned on for the whole game. Some will be off in the closing minutes. And some will not start until the ball crosses midcourt.

"If this keeps up, pretty soon we will be playing with a red-white-and-blue ball," said St. John's Coach Lou Carnesecca. "They laughed at us when the ABA (American Basketball Association) started the three-point basket. Now its a big part of the game."

"Let's face it, we're in the entertainment business," continued Carnesecca, who coached the New York Nets in the old ABA. "The days when players played the game for themselves are gone.

"With television and the admission prices we charge, we've got to give the people more excitement. This season we had people starting to hold the ball in the first half."

Edward Steitz, Springfield College athletic director and hewd of the NCAA's rules committee, maintains that the variety, with only the Atlantic Coast and Ohio Valley conferences using the same combination of a clock and three-point shot, is exactly what the committee wanted when it urged the conferences to experiment this spring.

"We are a very conservative court," said Steitz. "We're not interested in tinkering with the game and the rules committee is not going to make any changes until we see how this goes.

"We've got the best game on the street and the thing that makes the college game is the great diversification of offenses and defenses. But experimentation is the only way we can evaluate whether we need to change anything to maintain the delicate balance between offense and defense that we want."

The Four-Corners offense of national champion North Carolina and the Big Ten Conference's zone defenses sparked the move, despite overwhelming votes by the coaches against both a clock and a three-point shot in the NCAA's end-of-season poll, Steitz said.

"I never got so many calls in my 20 years on the committee as after the ACC finals, when you had North Carolina and Virginia, the top two teams in the country, on television holding the ball for 7½ minutes," he said.

But if North Carolina Coach Dean Smith was the target, he couldn't be more delighted with the ACC's 30-second clock.

"It's going to make the college game better," Smith said.

Smith, whose spread offense has been booed by crowds and copied by coaches across the country, said he has wanted a shot clock since the early 1970s. He predicted it will work well in conjunction with a middle-distance three-point shot aimed at curbing zone defenses.

Taking the opposite view is DePaul Coach Ray Meyer.

"Nineteen feet is a pretty cheap three points," Meyer said. "And I think it's going to hurt the ACC in the long run because they won't have it in the NCAA tournament."

The ACC also won't have it when it plays major independents such as DePaul and Notre Dame.

Visiting teams have the choice of rules and both Meyer and Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps say they are sticking with the championship tournament rules, where there will be no shot clocks or three-point baskets. That reasoning led the athletic directors in the Metro Conference to overrule their coaches' vote for the clock and three-pointer.

"When they put in rules aimed at the big men, they just made them better players," Meyer said. "But the thing I don't understand is why play around with the game now when it is at its greatest heights just because of one or two games that were on television.

Some people, Steiz said, are worried because scoring has dropped steadily the past seven years to its lowest level in 30 years last season, a per-game average 67.5 points a team. Last season also recorded the lowest average field goals ever in the modern era, 55.6 per game.

But others point to more balanced scoring and a steady increase in shooting percentages, despite the best defensive statistics in three decades. All five North Carolina starters shot better than 51 percent last season and the team ranked third in shooting percentage, behind national leader Califonia-Irvine's 56.1 percent.

And the excitement of closer games — scoring-margin leader Oregon State's 14.6 points was the lowest winning margin in the history of the modern game — are pointed to as reasons why more than 31 million people came to see college basketball last year.

"You can't just be good at one phase or two phases of the game now," said Wyoming Coach Jim Brandenburg. "I'm not in favor of change just for the sake of it."

"Sure the total scoring is down, but the shooting percentages are way up and the team scoring is more balanced — the game is hitting the open man," said Fred Hess, executive secretary of the college basketball officials association.

Hess, a self-described basketball "traditionalist," forsees trouble for the referees. "I'd hate to see it, but it would be very easy to enforce a wrong rule and unfairly hurt a team."

"And there will be mistakes," Hess went on. "It's enough to try to enforce one set of rules, but we contract with the ECAC (Eastern College Athletic Conference), which has more than 200 schools and our men could be working with different rules from one game to the next."

He also doubts that the most popular version of the clock — 45 seconds — will speed up the game.

"The average shot in college basketball now takes 23 to 25 seconds and the 45-second clock will allow coaches to hold the ball twice that long," Hess said. "Even with the clock it would be very easy to have a 25-24 game."

There are 2,400 seconds in a college basketball game. Consider two teams each taking the maximum 45 seconds to shoot, and each hitting 50 percent of their field-goal attempts, all two-pointers.

That's a 30-30 tie, rounded off.

Western's Carr Returns Home To Recuperate

CULLOWHEE (AP) — Western Carolina University's Ronnie Carr, an Associated Press honorable mention All-America college basketball player this past season, has returned home to recuperate from three heart operations, Coach Steve Cottrell says.

Carr, a 6-foot-3, 185-pound senior from Orangeburg, S.C., was injured in early June when the car he was driving collided with a police car in pursuit of a third vehicle, police said at the time of the accident near Chapel Hill.

"The leg and ankle injuries and the crushed arm are healing very well," Cottrell said this week in a telephone interview. "He should be okay there. The heart situation — he had a valve replaced in his heart — well, relative to his future in basketball, it's just not known now. He's over the crisis stage and on the road to recovery."

Carr and his family have granted no interviews since the accident.

"He's too weak," Cottrell said, then turning his thoughts to Carr's on-court abilities.

"He's the finest pure shooter I've ever been associated with and I've been in basketball 17 years," Cottrell said. "I've never known Ronnie to take a bad shot and he had the green light from the bus if he thought he could make it."

Most of Carr's damage came from long range — very long range. His picture and the ball he used in a game against Middle Tennessee State two years ago are in the Basketball Hall of Fame in Springfield, Mass. That's when he became the first collegian to hit a three-point field goal.

In three years, Carr averaged 17.4, 17.6 and 19 points per game in leading the Catamounts to 17-10, 18-10 and 19-8 seasons. He hit 48.6 percent of his two-point field goal attempts, 46 percent of his three-point tries and 79.1 percent from the free throw line.

"We had gotten a lot of inquiries from the pros," Cottrell said. "He's considered a shooting guard that has no peer in our league."

Twice an All-Southern Conference selection, Carr is majoring in marketing and is on track for graduation, Cottrell said.

"He's blue chip all the way," he said. "One of our finest players in the history of our school and a campus leader. A lot of our success here is directly attributable to him.

"His teammates were crushed by it (the accident)," Cottrell said. "This program here is a real family-type situation. These players are a real strength to Ronnie with their letters and phone calls. The key to Ronnie is that he'll still be a tremendous part of this program always."

Lewis Hits Jump. . .

"I could have made it easier. I just wasn't thinking. I used my sheer determination and power to win," said the 5-5, 119-pound Favors.

Middleweight Elton Singleton, 19, from Louisville, scored the only upset of Saturday's semifinals, stunning Iran Barkley with a 3-2 decision.

Meanwhile, Wyland, third in Thursday's 3-meter springboard competition, earned a berth on the American squad that begins competition in the World Aquatics Championships Thursday in Ecuador.

The 17-year-old Mission Viejo, Calif., star piled up 456.69 points for her platform crown. Debbie Rush, 22, from Columbus, Ohio, finished second with 426.36 points and will join Wyland in the world meet.

"This is the highest score I've ever had by 34 or more points," said Wyland. "My optionals were probably the best I've ever done."

The 33-year-old veteran's best effort was 236 feet, 3 inches in the new $26 million stadium. McKenzie, from Fairfield, Calif., established the meet mark of 228-5 in winning the 1981 Festival title.

In order, his throws were 231-2, 232-10, 235-2, 234-8, 236-3 and 234-10.

Earler Saturday, officials of the governing U.S. Olympic Committee hinted this four-year-old event is on the verge of turning a profit for the first time.

But they insisted that is not the bottom line in the 33-sport competition spread over 11 days at million-dollar facilities around Indianapolis.

"If we just break even, we will be thrilled," USOC President William E. Simon said Saturday during a news conference.

Five corporate sponsors put up $200,000 apiece this year.

Ticket sales reached unprecedented heights with $589,000 sold up to the first busy day Saturday, when 22 sports were active. That easily beat the $450,000 in ticket revenue at last year's Syracuse, N.Y., Festival.

Jack Berger, a spokesman for the local organizing committee, said $750,000 in ticket sales is the break-even point. Some optimists were even forecasting $1 million or more from tickets.

"I wouldn't have believed this two years ago," said Simon, the former treasury secretary. "And, if you had told me last year we'd have close to 100,000 people at the opening ceremonies (Friday night), I'd have said, 'Give me a puff of that.'"

Both Simon and F. Don Miller, USOC executive secretary, emphasize they have not been worried about the red ink flowing over the previous three Festivals.

With no sponsors, the opening show in Colorado Springs, Colo., lost $1.2 million in 1978. The deficits have slowly dwindled to $190,000 a year ago in Syracuse.

"Even if there continues to be a deficit, we would still conduct it for the benefit of the athletes," Miller said.

Added Simon: "Our greatest contribution is to leave facilities all around the country for amateur athletes — facilities that otherwise would not have been built."

For example, in Indianapolis a $21 million natatorium, a $26 million track stadium and a $2 million velodrome likely would not have been built. They were all constructed after Indianapolis landed the Festival, built without any taxpayers' money.

The Festival will return oo Colorado Rprings in 1983. Because of the Los Angeles Olympics, no event will be held in 1984.

Simon said a decision on where to stage the 1985 Festival will not be reached until 1983.

"Our intention is to move the Festival around the country each year," Simon said. "But we are indebted to Colorado Springs. They started with it when no one else wanted it."

Despite the success of the midsummer competition, American Olympic officials have no plans for a winter Festival.

TRAPPING SEASON SET — It is legal to trap beaver, mink, muskrat, nutria, oppossum, otter, raccoon, skunk, weasel and wildcat during the listed season below:

December 15-February 28 in and east of Hertford, Bertie, Martin, Pitt, Greene, Lenior, Duplin, Pender and New Hanover counties, except that in the marshes adjoining Currituck Sound in Currituck County the season is December 15-March 12.

STATEWIDE TRAPPING LAW:

It is unlawful to:

1.Take wild animals by trapping upon the land of another without having in possession written permission issued and dated within the previous year by the owner of the land or his agent.

2.Take wild animals by trapping with any steel-jaw, leghold or connibear trap unless it:

a.has a jaw spread of not more than seven and one half inches.

b.is horizontally offset with closed jaw offset of at least three-sixteenths of an inch for a trap with a jaw spread of more than five and one half inches. This provision does not apply if the trap is set in the water with a quick-drown type set.

c.is smooth edged and without teeth or spikes.

d.has a weather-resistant permanent tag attached legibly giving the trapper's name and address.

3.Set a steel-jaw or leghold trap on dry land with solid anchor with a trap chain longer than eight inches from trap to anchor unless fitted with a shock-absorbing device approved by the Wildlife Resources Commission.

4.Set a trap of the number 330 connibear type or size except in the water and in areas in which beaver and otter may be lawfully trapped.

5.Remove or disturb any lawfully set trap or remove any fur-bearing animal from a trap without permission of the trap owner.

6.Set or use a tap so that animals or birds will be suspended when caught.

7.Set or use a hook of any sort or type to take wild animals or wild birds.

"Dry land" does not include marshland as defined in G.S. 113-229 (n) (3). A water-set as required for 330 connibear taps is one totally covered by water with the anchor secured in water deep enough to drown the trapped animal quickly. In tidal waters, the mean high water is considered covering water and in reservoir areas, covering water is the low water level prevailing during the preceding 24 hours.

WHITETAIL TROPHY COMPETITION — Hunters from throughout the country will be on hand for the "Rendevous of the Pros" at the Whitetail Trophy hunt and Hunters Showcase Show on August 6-8 at the Greensboro Coliseum Complex in Greensboro.

$10,000 in cash awards as enticement for the display of hunter entered whitetail deer heads has generated interest by sportsmen around the nation. The head must score more than 165 B&C points typical and 190 points non-typical to be eligible for prizes.

Sportsmen desiring more information should contact Mann, Route 1, Box 188, Snow Camp, N.C. 27349. Show hours are Friday, noon-10 p.m.; Saturday, 10 a.m.-10 p.m.; and Sunday, 1 p.m.-7 p.m.

LOCAL NEWS — Jimmy Hughes, Carson Edwards, Marvin Hughes and Alan Edwards recently had a good day on the Chesapeake Bay. The four caught 37 trout weighing up to 13 lbs. 12 oz.

coach Tates Locke and as interim coach at New Mexico after head coach Norm Ellenberger and assistant Manny Goldstein were suspended because of various recruiting violations.

Harrison spent two years with Knight at Indiana as a graduate assistant and Knight's influence is readily apparent — in his love of man-to-man defense and the kind of player he wants.

"First of all, I'm a teacher and the basketball court is my classroom. I'm a believer that if you're not out there to learn you're infringing on the right of others.

"The type of player I like is, number one, a team player. I want a player to play within his roll. It's hard for a coach to identify that in a player and to have the player accept it.

"I also want players who can pass. Passing is a lost art. All players want to do now is dunk the ball to the moon.

After his stay at Indiana, Harrison moved on to Clemson, where he was Locke's assistant.

There, while on a houseboat, Locke tried to strangle Harrison. Harrison was quoted by Sports Illustrated as saying: "Tates was having a nightmare. But it scared me good."

Recalling the incident, Harrison said: "Tates sat on my chest and put his hands (around my neck). I said, 'Tates, Tates let go.

"Actually, the guy from Sports Illustrated misquoted me. He asked me if I was scared and I said, 'Hell, yes, I was scared. Wouldn't you be?'"

Harrison stayed at Clemson one season before moving on to the NBA and becoming a coach and chief scout for the Buffalo Braves. There, Harrison moved around the NBA evaluating talent and gaining contacts.

"I've picked up something from everyone I've coached for," Harrison said. "I thought I picked up a lot while an NBA scout."

Harrison was not long for the NBA either, however. After two years with the Braves, he went to Europe to coach. He was the head coach of the U.S. All-Star team that toured Europe in 1977 and came back with a 22-0 mark.

In 1979, he was back in the states, taking a position as an assistant at the University of Oklahoma. Oklahoma won the Big 8 title that year and was invited to the NCAAs.

The following summer, however, Harrison was gone, having moved on to become freshman coach at New Mexico. Within months, however, Ellenberger and Goldstein were fired and Harrison was selected as interim coach.

Harrison inherited a team which had lost 12 of its 16 members who were either ruled academically ineligible or quit. Relying on four scholarship players and walk-ons, Harrison led the team to a 6-22 mark.

The effort did not go unnoticed. Gov. Bruce King declared a "Charlie Harriosn and the UNM Lobos Basketball Day," at the end of the season. It was the season finale that Harrison remembers most.

"A couple of the wins we had at New Mexico were the greatest feeling I've ever had in athletics," he said. "But I'll never forget the last ballgame. There were 17,000 fans and they gave (us) a standing ovation for 25 minutes. The day after the season was over I remember how bad I felt that it was all over."

It was not long after that Harrison took the job as Orr's No. 1 assistant at Iowa State. Now, three years later, Harrison is on the move again — but, this time, he insists he is ready to settle down.

"I made the decision when I went to Iowa State that if I moved again that I would go to where I wanted to live and not have to think of future moves. I can do that here at East Carolina, and at the same time, come back home. I've always wanted to return home."

Harrison Named ECU Coach...

Heading the list of recruits is Johnny Edwards, a 6-6, 220-pound forward from Laurinburg Institute. Also on the list is Curt Vanderhorst, a 6-1 guard from Fayetteville Byrd High School; Tony Robinson, a 6-1 point guard from Jamestown Community College in New York; David Harris, a 6-7, 220-pound forward-center from Wingate High School in New York; and Keith McLeod, a 6-3 guard from Laurinburg Prep High School.

"I think the class Dave brought in is excellent on paper," Harrison said. "I think they'll be able to make an immediate contribution."

On other topics, Harrison said:

•Recruiting — "I'm certainly going to try to be realistic. But, one of the reasons I took the job is I think we can recruit in the eastern part of the state. It's untapped. It's not saturated."

•On the ECAC-South — "It's a damn good basketball conference. I think we can compete in it and I think we can win it. That's one of my long-range goals."

•On the schedule — "I want to try to play teams outside the conference on a home-and-home basis. If not, let's play at the Greensboro Coliseum. I know that's not as easy as it sounds, though.

"There's (a number) of guys who were at Indiana when I was there who are now head coaches. I'm going to get a hold of them and see if they'll play us. I want to bring some quality teams in so the people here can see them."

Landry Out As Baltimore QB

TOWSON, Md. (AP) — The departure of veteran quarterback Greg Landry leaves the Baltimore Colts with three rookies and an eight-year veteran who has only one National Football League start.

But Coach Frank Kush says he is confident that rookies Art Schlichter from Ohio State and Mike Pagel of Arizona State can fill the void created by Landry's release on Friday and the trade that sent veteran quarterback Bert Jones to Los Angeles.

"They have five exhibition games to learn in," Kush said. "Both of them are bright kids with strong arms and they've been impressive in practices this week. We feel that they're capable of doing the job or we wouldn't have drafted them. Now we just have to give them a chance to prove it."

Landry, who was placed on waivers, had been Jones' backup quarterback since he was obtained by the Colts from Detroit in 1979. Veteran David Humm started one game last year for Baltimore after he joined the team as a free agent.

K.C. Nips Brewers In Ninth Inning

By The Associated Press

It just didn't figure. Paul Splittorff of Kansas City and Bob McClure of Milwaukee were locked in a scoreless duel through eight innings.

Enter Dan Quisenberry of Kansas City (23 saves) and Rollie Fingers of Milwaukee (21 saves) — the two best relief pitchers in the American League. This game, which started at 7:35 p.m. CDT Friday, could have lasted forever.

Instead, Milwaukee comes up with three runs in the ninth on consecutive homers off Quisenberry by Gorman Thomas, a two-run shot, and Ben Oglivie.

"When we got three runs and then bring Rollie in, you have to figure we've got them," Brewers Manager Harvey Kuenn said.

George Brett of the Royals concurred. "It was a close game all the way and Split and McClure were in complete control," Brett said. "Then they get the three runs in the top of the inning and everyone thought it was over."

Wrong both times.

The Royals got two runs back in the bottom of the ninth against McClure when Brett belted a two-run homer, so Kuenn figures Fingers is the man for the job.

"There's no way to figure this game," Kuenn said. "You're sailing along and all of a sudden, bang, bang, bang."

Three singles — bang, bang, bang — and a suicide squeeze later, the Royals and Quisenberry were 4-3 winners, and Fingers was the loser.

Frank White's perfect squeeze capped the four-run rally, giving the Royals only their third victory in 12 games.

"It was really an amazing game," Royals Manager Dick Howser said. "The best two relief pitchers in the league this year and all those runs. I brought my best guy in and Harvey brought his best guy in."

After Brett's homer chased McClure, Amos Otis singled off Fingers. Hal McRae's grounder advanced Otis to second, and Jerry Martin drove in a run with a single.

A single by Willie Aikens sent Martin to third, and White pushed Fingers' first pitch toward first base as Martin broke for home. Fingers fielded the bunt, but his throw home was late.

Twins 8, Red Sox 4

Minnesota erupted for six runs in the third inning — highlighted by extra-base hits by Dave Engle, Tom Brunansky and Tim Laudner — to defeat the Red Sox. Bobby Castillo, 5-7, worked 6 2-3 innings, scattering seven hits for the victory, while Ron Davis worked the final 11-3 innings for his 10th save.

Engle drove in a run with a triple, and Brunansky and Laudner each doubled. Brunansky and Laudner had two doubles apiece in the game.

Yankees 6, Angels 3

Jerry Mumphrey and Dave Winfield drove in three runs apiece, and pitchers Shane Rawley and Dave Righetti traded roles to help the Yankees beat California.

Mumphrey belted a three-run homer, and Winfield drove in his runs with a sacrifice fly and a triple.

Rawley scatterd 10 hits through 8 1-3 innings in his fourth start of the season. Righetti, who was sent to the bullpen only hours earlier, earned his first major league save despite allowing a run-scoring single by Rod Carew. Reggie Jackson slugged his league-leading 23rd homer for California.

Rangers 3, Tigers 1

Left-hander Frank Tanana and Dave Schmidt held Detroit to just two hits, and Larry Parrish drove in what turned out to be the winning run with a sacrifice fly in the Rangers third inning.

Tanana, 5-10, worked 62-3 innings, giving up both hits and yielding Detroit's only run in the sixth on a double by Tom Brookens. Schmidt was flawless over 2 1-3 innings of relief.

Texas led 1-0 in the second on an RBI hit by Mike Richardt. Mickey Rivers drove in an insurance run with a single in the eighth.

Indians 4, Mariners 3

Bill Nahorodny lined a sacrifice fly to center field in the 11th inning to snap a 3-3 tie and lift Cleveland over Seattle. Rodney Craig led off the inning with a single. Rick Manning sacrificed, and Craig was safe at second when pitcher Ed Vande Berg's throw was late.

Larry Milbourne then forced Manning at second, sending Craig to third, and Nahorodny drilled a liner to center that was dropped for an error by center fielder Dave Henderson.

Orioles 2, A's 1

Cal Ripken Jr. and Eddie Murray each homered as Baltimore dealt Oakland's Matt Keough his 14th loss in 21 decisions. Ripken hit his 13th homer of the season in the second inning and Murray's 14th homer snapped a 1-1 tie in the seventh.

Keough allowed just one other hit, but the two homers upped his season total to 24. Jim Palmer, 8-3, earned his sixth straight victory with eight innings of four-hit pitching that included a fourth-inning homer by Tony Armas. Tippy Martinez pitched the ninth inning for Baltimore.

Blue Jays 7, White Sox 1

Buck Martinez and Lloyd Moseby each slugged RBI doubles in Toronto's three-run seventh inning, and the Blue Jays took advantage of four Chicago errors to score five unearned runs.

All three of Toronto's seventh-inning runs were unearned after errors by Chicago third baseman Aurelio Rodriguez and shortstop Vance Law.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Pirates 6, Braves 0

After a cool June, Dale Berra's been as hot as July.

"It feels good and I have to thank (Manager) Chuck Tanner for sticking with me," says the Pittsburgh Pirate shortstop. "There was a time he could have sat me down."

Once batting an ice-cold .183, Berra has boosted his batting average nearly 90 points with a .361 pace in July. That included a triple and single Friday night to help the Pirates beat the Atlanta Braves 6-0.

"When he was batting .183," said Tanner, "I said I'd put my managerial experience on the line for him. Now he's outstanding."

Berra has hit safely in 18 of his last 22 games and his work Friday night included a steal of home after his triple in the second inning. He also singled in the sixth and came around to score and walked and eventually scored in the eighth.

After the Pirates took a 1-0 lead in the first on Jason Thompson's sacrifice fly, Berra sparked a two-run uprising in the second. After Mike Easler doubled off the glove of second baseman Glenn Hubbard, Berra tripled, scoring Easler, and stayed on third as Omar Moreno walked.

With Moreno striding toward second distracting catcher Biff Pocoroba, Berra raced home to give the Pirates a 3-0 lead. The Pirates, using Moreno and Berra on the bases, pulled off the same double-steal trick in Atlanta.

"Not too many clubs can make it go," Tanner said. "It's a secret how we do it. I don't want to tell you how we do it because, you know, someone will read it. It's a true double steal. We got two bases."

But Berra was less coy. He said he simply waited for Pocoroba's throw to pass Camp's head and he was off for the plate.

Torre said it was no big deal.

"Berra broke at the proper time — he had a good jump off third," Torre said.

Expos 8, Giants 7

Tim Raines led off the top of the 13th inning with his third home run of the season, lifting Montreal over San Francisco.

The Expos jumped to a 7-2 lead as Andre Dawson and Al Oliver each scored three runs and knocked in a pair.

But the Giants battled back with four runs in the eighth, the big blow a three-run homer by Jack Clark, his 18th of the season. San Francisco tied the score 7-7 when Joe Morgan led off the ninth with his ninth homer off reliever Jeff Reardon.

Cubs 7, Reds 5

Keith Moreland hit a three-run homer in the eighth inning to lead Chicago over Cincinnati as the Reds lost their seventh straight.

With two outs in the Chicago eighth, Leon Durham and Jay Johnstone drew walks off Cincinnati starter Mario Soto. Moreland then hit a 2-1 pitch from reliever Jim Kern, 1-4, over the fence in left-center for his 12th homer to put the Cubs ahead 6-5.

The Cubs added a run in the ninth on a triple by Larry Bowa and single by Ryne Sandberg.

Willie Hernandez, 4-5, pitched 1 1-3 innings for the victory, while Lee Smith registered his third save with 1 2-3 innings of relief.

Padres 11, Mets 4

Rookie right-hander Andy Hawkins, making only his second major league start, hurled a seven-hitter and earned his first major league victory and Terry Kennedy slugged a homer and knocked in three runs as San Diego beat New York.

Hawkins, 1-1, who was called up by the Padres following the All-Star break, struck out three and walked four. Rusty Staub had four of the Mets' hits, all singles.

Cardinals 6, Astros 2

Lonnie Smith and Ken Oberkfell rapped RBI hits to highlight a four-run first inning that carried St. Louis over Houston.

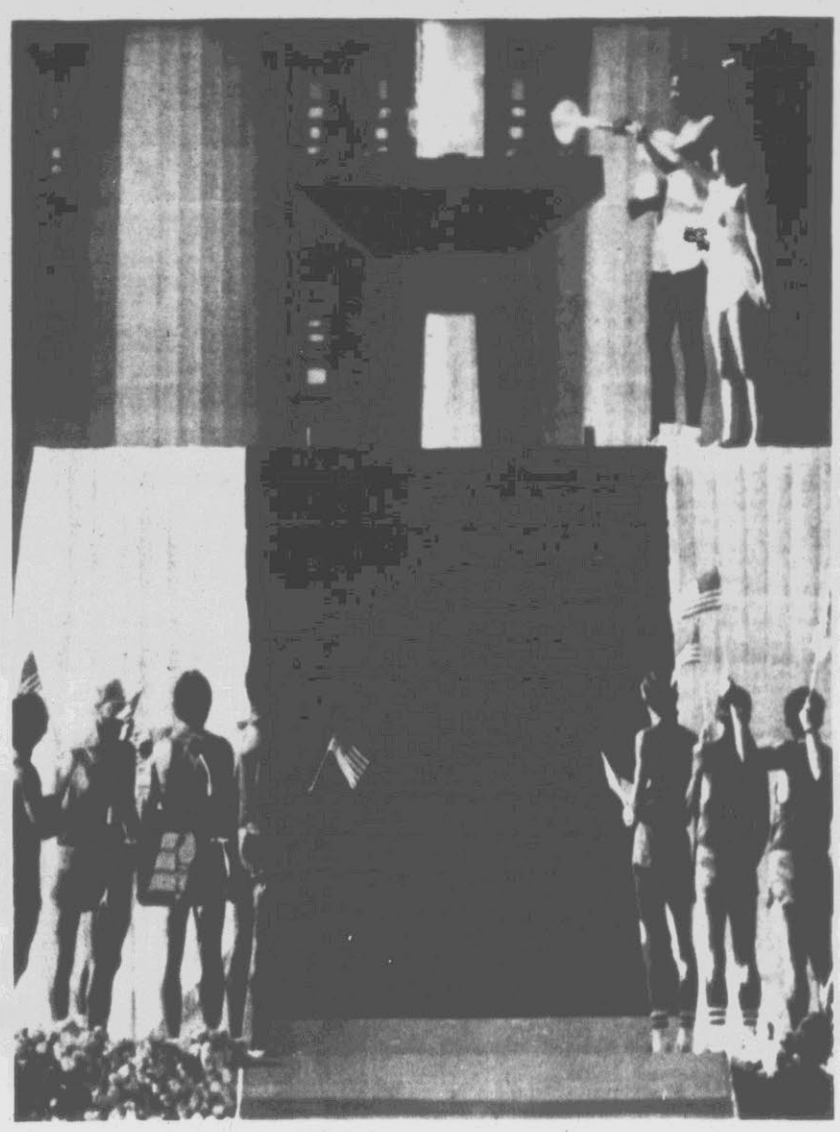

Joe Niekro, 9-7, had beaten St. Louis eight straight games in a streak extending back to August, 1978. But the 37-year-old knuckleballer was lifted in the third after giving up all six Cardinal runs.

St. Louis sent nine batters to the plate in the first. Joaquin Andujar, 8-9, beat his former Houston teammates for the first time in three decisions with a 10-hitter.

Phillies 6, Dodgers 3

Mike Schmidt and pitcher Larry Christenson slammed two-run homers to lead Philadelphia over Los Angeles. The victory was the eighth in the last 10 games for the Phillies, who maintained a one-game lead over St. Louis in the NL East.

Porfirio Altamirano, 2-0, earned the victory in relief of Christenson. Ron Reed hurled the final four innings to record his third save. Dave Stewart, 5-5, who had won four straight decisions, took the loss.

Sports Festival Into High Gear

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The spotlight has shone brightly on Greg Louganis through the opening days of the National Sports Festival.

The 22-year-old diver from Mission Viejo, Calif., has been the undisputed star of the first three days of competition, taking one gold medal and leading the race for another with the help of a near-perfect performance.

But yesterday, Louganis made room for most of the other 2,600 athletes entered in the fourth edition of America's Olympics. Events were scheduled in 22 sports, including the first of two days of track and field, where Carl Lewis was the featured athlete in the long jump.

Also starting yesterday were such sports as baseball, boxing, softball, cycling, rowing and wrestling. And diving and figure skating, which got under way days before Friday evening's official opening ceremonies, were on the list, too.

Finals were slated in the women's platform diving, and the skating rink had the short program for pairs and compulsories in the dance.

Louganis and the rest of the men divers have the day off, waiting until Sunday to battle for the platform crown and the final two spots on the U.S. team in next week's world aquatic championships in Ecuador.

On Friday, he captured the top spot in the preliminaries, totaling 599.73 points to 593.07 for runner-up Bruce Kimball, of Ann Arbor, Mich. The lead did not come easily.

Louganis won the men's 3-meter springboard Thursday night, then had to return to the new $21 million Indiana University Natatorium Friday afternoon for the platform prelims.

"Today was a little rough. I'm exhausted," he said. "It's tough going from the springboard to platform. You have to rearrange your thoughts. In the springboard it's timing. In platform, it's explosive strength."

Explode was just what the University of California-Irvine student did on one dive — an inward 1½ somersault from the pike position. Five of the seven judges gave him perfect scores of 10; the other two had him at 9.5.

"It's strange being thought of as the top diver," Louganis said. "When I was younger, I was the underdog. Now I'm expected to hit every dive."

L.A.'s Redden Will Undergo Knee Surgery

FULLERTON, Calif. (AP) — Fullback Barry Redden, the Los Angeles Rams' first pick in the 1982 National Football League draft, will undergo surgery on his right knee Monday to repair torn cartilage.

It is too early to tell how long he will be out of action, Rams spokesman Larry Wilcox said Saturday.

Redden, 22, injured the knee while running Monday during the first day of summer practice at California State University, Fullerton, near the Rams' home at Anaheim Stadium.

"The initial prognosis was that he had just strained a hamstring, but apparently it was a little more serious than that," Wilcox said.

Redden apparently aggravated the injury at Thursday's practice, he said.

"On Friday morning, the knee stiffened up on him," Wilcox said. Team physician Robert Kerlan diagnosed a cartilage tear.

Dr. Vincent Carter will perform the arthroscope surgery.

"This is a new kind of surgery. You don't actually have to open up the knee. You go in with a needle," Wilcox said.

The 5-foot-10, 205-pound Redden is the University of Richmond's all-time leading rusher with 3,324 yards.

Will Different NASCAR Face Win Talladega 500 — Again?

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Will it be 14 races and 14 faces?

The answer will come next Sunday in the Talladega 500, a Grand National stock car race that has been won by 13 different drivers in its 13 years at the Alabama International Motor Speedway.

Bouchard came out of nowhere on the final lap a year ago to nose past Waltrip and Terry Labonte as they passed the finish line side-by-side.

The decision helped earn rookie of the year honors for Bouchard, a relative unknown from Fitchburg, Mass., and is his only one so far on the big circuit.

Bouchard thus became the 13th different winner in the Talladega 500, one of the more remarkable situations in stock car racing.

Nine of those 13 will on hand to try to break the tradition of no double winner. They are Bobby Allison, Hylton, Petty, Baker, Marcis, Pond, Waltrip, Bonnett and Bouchard.

Practice sessions will begin Wednesday and the 47 hopefuls will begin qualifying Thursday, with the first 20 spots to be decided then.

For Talladega 500

Allison Goes To LeMans

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Race car driver Bobby Allison will switch from a Buick to a Pontiac LeMans for the Aug. 1 Talladega 500, a move that the Alabama native says will make him more a stronger competitor.

"We feel the aerodynamics of the LeMans will make it the car to beat," said Allison, of Hueytown, Ala., pointing out that Benny Parsons won the pole position for the spring Winston 500 with a LeMans. Parsons also became the first Winston Cup driver to break 200 miles an hour in qualifying for the race.

Both the Winston 500 and Talladega 500 are held at the Alabama International Motor Speedway.

Allison will have a relative competing in a Talladega race that weekend. His 21-year-old son, Davey Allison, hopes to make his first appearance in the ARCA 200 race, a preliminary to the Talladega 500. He will drive a 1980 Pontiac Grand Am.

The winner of 21 feature races on short tracks since he started racing four years ago, he has competed twice in ARCA events Daytona International Speedway.

Yarborough Takes Pole For Mt. Dew

LONG POND, Pa. (AP) — Cale Yarborough used an untried engine Saturday to win the pole position for the Mountain Dew 500 Grand National stock car race at Pocono International Raceway.

Yarborough, a three-time Winston Cup national champion and now a part-time performer on the Grand National circuit at the age of 42, turned a lap of 150.764 mph to lead the way on the tough 2.5-mile tri-oval.

The quick lap surprised Yarborough, who ended the morning practice session just minutes before the start of qualifying, with a blown engine in his red, black and white Valvoline-sponsored Buick Regal.

"We cracked a head in the engine (during practice) and we really didn't know what would happen when we went out with the new engine," explained Yarborough.

"But what you saw was what you got (in the engine)" he added. "I couldn't take any chances. We needed to sit on the pole and I used it all."

It was Yarborough's first pole victory of the season, making him the 10th different pole winner in 18 races this season.

That qualified him for the Busch Clash next February at Daytona International Speedway, a 50-mile dash worth between $10,000 and $75,000 to the participants.

Bobby Allison, who won the June Pocono race, was the fourth fastest qualifier at 149.721 in a Buick, followed by Morgan Shepherd at 149.633 in a Buick, Tim Richmond at 149.036 in a Buick, Dale Earnhardt at 148.984 in a Ford Thunderbird, and Winston Cup point leader Terry Labonte at 148.898 in a Buick.

Defending national champion Darrell Waltrip, who leads the way this seasof with five poles and six victories, wound up a disappointing ninth. The best of his two qualifying laps in a Buick was 148.896.

Yarborough, from Timmonsville, S.C., cut back his racing schedule after the 1980 season, leaving Junior Johnson's team, where he won all three national titles, for the team of M.C. Anderson.

Anderson enters cars only at the superspeedways and a handful of selected short tracks, allowing Yarborough a chance to give his family and his numerous outside businesses more attention.

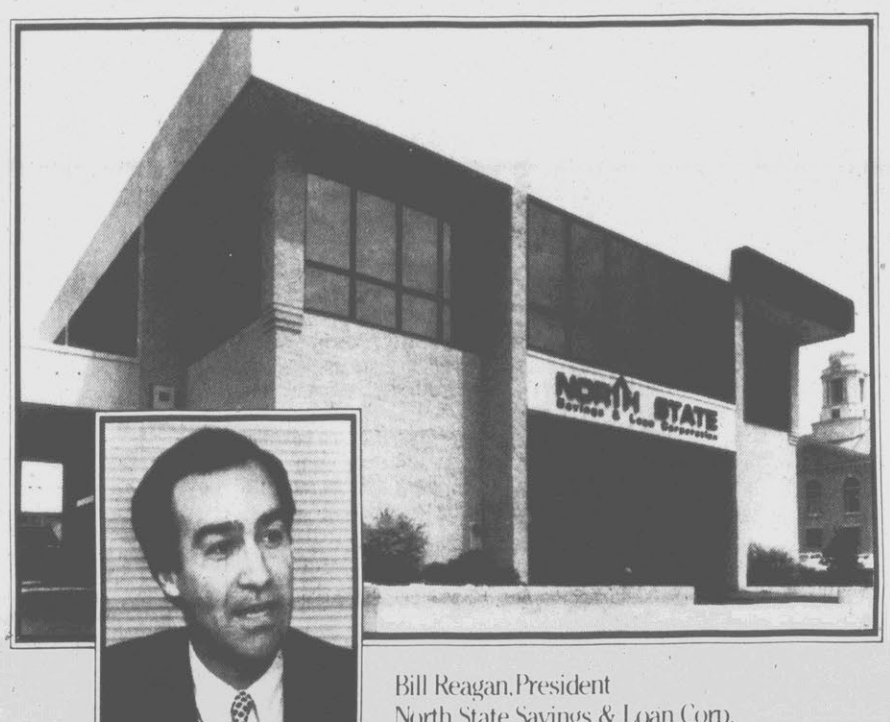

In 1981, Yarborough entered 18 races and won two of them, finishing in the top five a half-dozen times. The Mountain Dew 500 is only his 10th race this season, but Yarborough already has matched those figures.

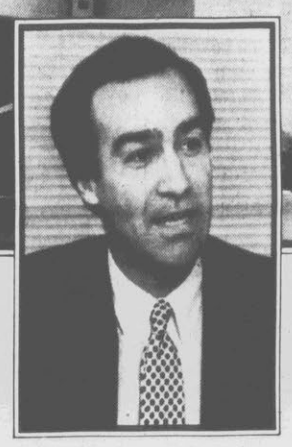

"Driving fewer races isn't really a disadvantage," Yarborough insists. "I don't have the pressure of going for the championshyp, but we have time to prepare for the races we enter. And when the last part of the sahedule comes along, we're fresher.

"We still run 17 races, and that's enough to keep your feet wet and know what you're doing."

THE GREENVILLE Police Department Crime Prevention Section will work with any interested group in establishing a Community Watch Team in its neighborhood. Call Sgt. D. A. Jackson at 752-3342 for details.

"We offer higher rates and insure them to $100,000. But your best insurance is our financial stability."

Bill Reagan, President
North State Savings & Loan Corp.

"At North State we're able to offer higher rates than other banks and savings & loans because we're regulated and insured by the North Carolina Savings Guaranty Corporation rather than the FSLIC (Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation).

"No one has ever lost a penny in accounts insured by either. But since we're not burdened by federal regulation, we're more efficient, more profitable, and we can afford to offer higher yields on your savings investments.

"And, in fact, we do offer higher yields. Higher than any other bank or savings and loan in the State of North Carolina."

"Ultimately, your best insurance is North State's financial stability."

"In truth, the $100,000 deposit insurance, offered by every savings and loan in the state, is the 'absolute last line of defense' against losses of your funds.

"The real security of your savings deposits is the management, liquidity and profitability of the financial institution you patronize.

And this is where North State excells."

"Sound management is why our savings yields are the highest in the state."

"North State started with a crack management team and a strong board of directors who invested their money in a sound financial concept: Offer investors higher rates of interest, invest those deposits in higher yielding instruments, and return a profit to our stockholders and depositors.

"It works.

"In June, while total deposits in savings & loans across the state declined by $2 million, our deposits increased by over $2 million. The reason? In today's economy, people cannot afford to keep their savings in lower yielding investments.

So they switched to North State."

"Join the people who get the highest rates."

"We are anxious to tell you all about the progressive, high yielding, safe financial products offered by North State. And we can help you construct a sound financial program. If you need liquidity, we offer Funds Checking℠ which paid over 13% interest on checking deposits in June.

"Or, for an even higher yield, our $1000 minimum Certificates of Deposit yield over 14% in a six month period. Our 30-month and 3½ year CD's offer even more interest.

"It's costing you money to save elsewhere. Come to North State."

"Come to any of our three locations and start getting a higher yield."

"Customer representatives at our two Greenville locations and our new Windsor branch will be happy to tell you about all the innovative financial products available at North State.

"At North State, you get those high rates in a safe, secure investment insured to $100,000 by the North Carolina Savings Guaranty Corporation.

Did Everglades Flood Really Endanger Deer?

By JOHN-THOR DAHLBURG
Associated Press Writer

THE EVERGLADES, Fla. (AP) — The roaring airboats and exploding shotguns have vanished from the Florida Everglades, but the swirling waters that cut a deer herd off from its food supply and led to the controversial two-day "mercy hunt" linger.

So does a nagging question: Was the flooding that turned the giant sea of grass into a watery grave for hundreds of frightened, emaciated deer avoidable?

No, says the South Florida Water Management District, which controls a labyrinth of levees, dikes, canals and pumps throughout a 16-county expanse stretching from north of Lake Okeechobee south to Miami and beyond.

Yes, counter both the hunters, who spread out last Sunday and Monday in airboats and tracked vehicles to take 730 deer, and the animal preservationists who so bitterly opposed the "mercy kill" and mounted an effort that saved 17 deer (another died after rescue).

Col. Robert Brantly, chief of the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission, authorized the hunt to prune a 5,500-head white-tailed deer herd he said faced mass starvation or death by water-borne parasites.

After a court battle, Brantly set aside a northern tract of Conservation Area 3A for rescuers, while hunters moved through a larger southern section.

By the time the rescuers gave up, Brantly said it was too late to organize a new hunt for the estimated 1,500 deer in the northern tract. He said a massive die-off of as much as 80 percent of that herd would begin this week.

Better, he said, to "let them die in peace."

The 30-inch-high black waters that covered the deer's habitual food supply of elderberry and white water lily and doomed much of the emaciated herd remain, even as the struggling deer die.

And for hunters and preservationists alike, the target has shifted from the suffering deer to the nine humans who sit in West Palm Beach and turn South Florida's giant water faucet on and off.

"I am going to take a week's rest, then go after the real culprits in this controversy — the South Florida Water Management District which flooded the Everglades unnecessarily and created the situation to begin with," said Jack Kassewitz, who led the rescue effort.

At Alligator Alley Sunday, a group of gun-toting hunters spoke out against the water managers, claiming they have altered South Florida's large aqueous ecosystem to suit sugar-cane growers and agrobusinessmen ringing the bottomland around Lake Okeechobee.

Last Sunday, 33-year-old Alan Curreli of Fort Lauderdale cruised the Everglades in search of deer. He bagged one — a scrawny yearling he said weighed only 34 pounds. Curreli blamed the water management district for the worm-infested animal's sorry state.

"Twenty years ago, we had free-flowing water from north to south," said the halftrack enthusiast who chairs the Everglades Coordinating Council, an outdoor-sporting group.

"But the district people came in with dams and levees, structures on the Tamiami Trail, and stopped the free flow into the Everglades. Even Everglades National Park had to go to court to get a guarantee that they be given a specific amount of water!"

While district officials say they are concerned about Everglades flora and fauna, they point out that two duties mandated by state law have priority — protect the Atlantic coast strip of heavily populated cities from flooding, and maintain a bountiful supply of fresh water for its 3.5 million residents.

The whims of tropical weather that brought drought last year and too much rain this year are also to blame, they say.

Heavy May and June thunderstorms, at first sponged up by drought-baked mucklands, rapidly swelled water levels in the tract by 25 inches in one month, says district spokeswoe'n Margaret Yansura. Over the vastness of the swamps, 14.6 inches of rain have fallen since June 1 — 152 percent of the norm.

In Conser6ation Areq , waters swirled from 8.36 feet above mean sea level in May to 10.46 feet in June — about one foot above Formal.

District svatistics attribute 9$.5 inches of the higher waters to spring and summer downxours.

The remainder was pumped into an already wqTer-gorged swamp But the diwtrict says it had no real alternative.

"Our choice is: Move it into the impoundment areas, or leave it in someone's backyard," Ms. Yansura says. "As you can seg,the choice isn't that hard to make."

In Hendry County, lashing storms doused rural areas with 22.37 inches of rain by June 26 — or 59 percent of the typical rainfall of an entire summer. Rising waters forced 25 families of Montura Ranch Estates in the county's watermelon- and tomato-growing country to evacuate their homes. The area was declared a disaster area by Gov. Bob Graham and President Reagan.

Much of the rain that once drenched Hendry County is now on a slow journey to the Atlantic Ocean via the sloughs and swamps where the deer die, a route the district made the water take to relieve Hendry flooding.

Emergency draining methods are also diverting some high waters toward the Caloosahatchee River and Lake Okeechobee.

"But regardless of that effort, water continues to flow south and will flow south," says Ms. Yansura, because of topography. At present, "all the plugs are pulled;" the gates to the sea open, the pumps working to soak up the high water.

But barring rain, only one uqarter-inch of water can be soaked- up and removed0from 910-squaRe-mile vastness of Conservation Area'3 in a day, Ms. Yansura says.

Last week's attacks on the water management district (whose motto is "Protector of the Everglades") echoes years of criticism by Marjory Stoneman Douglas, the 92-year-old dean of Florida naturalists and outspoken guardian of Florida's "River of Grass" that is larger than Delaware and Rhode Island combined.

She calls the Everglades "an awful mess," and insists the district's policy of impounding waters in dike-ringed conservation areas only guarantees the periodic drowning or starvavion of animals marooned on tree islands.

Five times in the past 20 years, she emphasizes, Everglades deer have been trapped up to their necks in high water. In five years, the state has ordered four special deer kills, although last week's was the largest.

But, Ms. Yansura says, "There is no other way."

"If you're going to have people living in South Florida, you've got to have some sort of flood control and some kind of protection of the freshwater source. Without our dikes and canals, the flood waters wouldn't be endangering deer in the Everglades. They'd be endangering people in downtown Miami."

"Pro Acquaintances" Are Newlyweds

Rodney Freeze and Babs Winn were "professional acquaintances" during the summers of 1974-75. This summer they are newlyweds and are appearing in the Summer Theater productions at East Carolina University.

They were both cast members of "The Lost Colony" when introduced and the following year, he appeared in "The Lost Colony" and she played in "You're A Good Man Charlie Brown."

Rodney Freeze

Babs Winn

Rodney and Babs are both graduates of East Carolina University. He received a B.F.A. and was named the most outstanding senior in the drama department. She received a B.A. degree in physical education with a minor in dance.

Rodney started out as an apprentice in dinner theaters during his high school days in the Washington, D.C., area where he grew up. This was followed by having minor roles in the productions. While at ECU for freshmen orientation, he saw a summer theater production in which Babs was appearing.

While at East Carolina, he had leading roles in several university productions. Rodney graduated in the spring of 1977 and moved to New York.

"During 1977-78, Rodney called several people he knew in New York, including me; however, it was never an opportune time to talk — I was either sleeping or just going out. I was in a Cabaret Revue rehearsal with three guys when one quit. The same night, my blind date stood me up and I went to the movies. It was a comedy type and when it was over I was walking home with tears still in my eyes. Suddenly someone came up and put their arms around me. I sensed it was someone I knew and I was still crying when I saw that person was Rodney," she said.

Rodney's dinner-date that same evening was "a disaster." Babs and Rodney went to a restaurant and "caught up on the last several years."

Babs arranged an audition for Rodney to fill the role in Cabaret Revue for the next day and he was given the part. "We were then seeing each other everyday at rehearsal, where we spent a lot of hours together," he said.

"In the revue we had a trilogy of songs together. We each had a solo and then a duet. Rodney's song 'Looking For Love' was first and then I sang 'Beautiful Stranger.' The last two lines of my song were 'So maybe the stranger who's walking right past you is a beautiful stranger just looking for you,'" she said.

"We immediately started singing the duet 'You're Not The Most Loving One,'" Babs commented.

A native of Alabama, Babs and her family moved to Greenville when she was a high scool sophomore. She started taking dance classes then with Ramona Van Nortwick. During her college years, she taught dancing for Mrs. Van Nortwick and, in 1973, she was hired as a dancer for the Summer Theater season. "Mavis Ray was the greatest influence in my decision to chose theater as a career," she said.

In 1974 Babs move to New York "with $250 in my pocket." She found a job through an employment agency — as a switchboard operator for "Times Mirror Magazine."

"Edgar Loessin called and offered me a role as Peppermint Patty in 'You're A Good Man Charlie Brown' at Nags Head during the summer of 1975. I came back to New York and left my switchboard job and started pursuing my career. I then started working at another temporary job and during this time I appeared on 'Candid Camera.' This was followed by waiting tables at a Southern restaurant — the Cotton Patch.

"After working for three years at menial tasks to survive, I began giving parties for fun. At a special Halloween party held at a club in Greenwich Village where I was playing hostess to 400 guests, a composer-lyricist attending the party saw the rapport I had with a large audience and offered me a role in his new cabaret act. Thus began my singing and acting career in New York."

"After the revue Babs and I started seeing each other regularly and supporting one another in our careers. New York is a tough place to make it, especially in our profession. We found it easier to pursue our careers with someone to share the problems and successes with. We were seeing each other during the three years but actually found we were spending less and less time together because of involvement in our careers," said Rodney.

"In order to create a successful career in the theater, you have to dedicate yourself 100 percent. As a result of starting to see so little of each other, we decided that committing 100 percent to each other was committing 100 percent to our careers; because it was the only way to have a relationship and have our careers as well. I asked Babs to marry me at the end of February and right after received a call to come to ECU to appear in 'Show Boat,'" he continued.

Rodney came to North Carolina for six weeks and Babs was in New York planning the wedding. "Actually, it was a perfect arrangement because Bab's mother didn't know how she could help her with the wedding plans since we were going to be married there," he said.

Babs came down here to see the show and also auditioned for summer theater. Rodney's family came to see the show and the two families — Mr. and Mrs. Wilson G. Freeze and Dr. and Mrs. Wilkins B. Winn — were able to meet before the wedding.

Babs and Rodney are now looking forward to playing opposite one another in this season's final production, "She Loves Me."

Acting in films is Bab's ultimate goal. "The stage is training for me — its the most valuable training you can get and I want to concentrate there first," she said.

"To have my career reach a stable point where all my income is derived from performing — that would basically be on Broadway and in television — is my goal. My greatest ambition with Babs is to create a dynamic partnership where we support each other totally, to have our careers and relationship grow simultaneously side by side," said Rodney.

"That's actually for both of us," added Babs.

Tomb Of Egyptian Princess Discovered

(EDITOR'S NOTE — The tombs of ancient Egyptian rulers continue to attract archeologists from other nations, seeking new discoveries and, perhaps, new treasures. Recently, a British-Dutch team unearthed the tomb of Princess Tia, who died more than 3,000 years ago.)

By LISETTE BALOUNY
Associated Press Writer

SAKKARA, Egypt (AP) — Archeologists are unearthing the 3,282-year-old tomb of a pharaonic princess that may illuminate the dim history of daily life in the ancient Egyptian capital of Memphis.

The tomb of Princess Tia, her husband and two daughters, and the remains of a small pyramid nearby have been uncovered at the foot of the world's oldest standing stone monument, the Step pyramid, by a joint British and Dutch archeological team.

"It is part of the large jigsaw puzzle of the ancient capital," says Geoffrey Martin, professor of Egyptian archeology at London University. "We feel like Sherlock Holmes on a hot trail. The tomb may tell us something about life in Memphis. We know almost nothing about that so far."

Tia was the sister of Ramses II and that is why her tomb is important. Ramses II was the swashbuckling pharaoh who ruled for 67 years, during which he fathered about 200 children, built the famous temples of Abu Simbel, fought the Hittites and signed the Middle East's first known peace treaty. He extended the Egyptian empire from southern Syria to northern Sudan. Art and architecture flourished in his reign.

Ramses II ruled from Memphis, at the tip of the Nile delta 12 miles from Cairo. Tia's husband, also called Tia, was the overseer of his treasury. Sakkara, near the ancient capital, is the necropolis of Memphis.

"For all these reasons, it is important that we continue uncovering the tomb and try to read more into the history of Memphis," Martin says. "It is an unusual tomb."

Martin and Jacobus Van Dijk, of Groningen University, says that unlike other tombs uncovered, this one containsd a string of important dieties, etchings of a family boatride, and three chapels, one of which was where a life-size statue of the sacred bull, Apis, was adored. This suggests the tomb could also have been a shrine.

"These combinations are perfectly new," Van Dijk says.

The excavation site of the $20,000 project, about half a mile south of the Step pyramid, is a beehive of activity. Some 50 workers, all experienced in the painstaking work, have so far dug three meters into the ground. Transparent nylon sheets cover some of the walls that show the drawings in still vivid colors.

"The sheets are to protect the monuments from the needling of sand specks," Martin says. "The wind is a real pest and progress is hard," he adds with a grin as he brushes the sand out of his eyes and hair.

As workers remove baskets full of sand to uncover the tomb and the pyramid to its west, the six archeologists record, measure and catalog the paintings and translate the heiroglyphic drawings on the structure. They are still looking for the shaft that should lead to the burial chamber, the key section of a pharaonic tomb.

The archeologists say the tomb originally must have been some 22 yards long and 12 to 14 yards wide, with six pillars that divided the chapels.

But judging from the conditions of the remains, Martin and Van Dijk are skeptical about finding the mummified bodies, the offering jars and the treasures that the ancients usually put into the burial chamber.

"From what we have here, you can easily say this tomb was worked on well, perhaps more than two or three times, by thieves and excavators during the early Christian and Moslem eras and in more recent times," says Martin.

They point out, for instance, that a memorial stone from the temple, showing Tia's husband kneeling with a feather fan before Ramses II, is in the municipal museum of Florence, and the single-block-tip of the pyramid is in the British Museum.

Although Ramses' successors moved the capital of ancient Egypt to Thebes, Memphis remained the most important city of Egypt at the time.

Rulers invariably had palaces there and their armies were equipped by arms factories in Memphis.

The city declined with the Persian conquest (525 B.C. to 332 B.C.) and the subsequent rule by Alexander the Great.

The Arabs, invading in 641 A.D., founded their capital, Al Fustat, near Memphis and looted much of the ruins of the ancient city to build their own. More was taken out of Memphis in 969 to build the present capital of Egypt, Cairo.

Miss MacMillan Weds Mr. Baker Saturday

Virginia Hope MacMillan of Greenville and Michael Howard Baker of Columbia, S.C. were married Saturday morning at eleven o'clock in St. Peter's Catholic Church by the Rev. Maurice Spillane.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Virginia K. MacMillan of Greenville and George J. MacMillan of Goldsboro. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce H. Baker of Greenville.

MRS. MICHAEL HOWARD BAKER

The honor attendant was Robin Mansfield of Mobile, Ala. Bridesmaids included Meg Fowlkes of Cary, Kathy Small of Wilmington and Virginia Baker of Greenville, sister of the bridegroom. Each wore a formal gown of peach chiffon designed with a cowl neckline that extended around to form a scooped back bodice. The sleeveless gown was fashioned with a blouson bodice and chiffon bows at the shoulders. The waistline was encircled with a self-fabric tie sash which fell from the flared handkerchief hemline.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man. Ushers included Bruce Jr., Jesse and Tim Baker, all brothers of the bridegroom, and Jim MacMillan, brother of the bride.

The parents of the bridegroom hosted a rehearsal dinner Friday night at the Colonial Inn in Farmville. An after-rehearsal party was given in honor of the couple Friday night by friends of their families. A bridal luncheon was given by Mrs. Hugh Wease at her home Friday.

The bride is a graduate of East Carolina University School of Business Administration, department of economics. She is currently a doctoral candidate in the School of Business Administration, department of management science at the University of South Carolina. The bridegroom is a graduate of East Carolina University School of Business Administration, department of finance. He is currently employed by Dean Witter Reynolds Inc. investment firm as an account executive.

After a wedding trip to the Outer Banks and Williamsburg, the couple will reside in Columbia, S.C.

Daring Collection Presented

By DANIELA PETROFF
Associated Press Writer

ROME (AP) — Valentino, the maestro of Italian elegance, showed a new side to his fashion character with a daring fall-winter high fashion collection sure to put heat into the colder months of the year.

The suave designer, now in his 50th year and with 20 years of fashion excellence behind him, veered from his usual romantic chic to present a slinky collection Thursday, full of skin-tight gowns, slit skirts and plunging necklines.

Gaudy shades of red and pink, alternating with stark black and white, and flimsy feather collars and myriads of sequins completed the "speakeasy" look.

One concession to propriety was the basque, a type of hip petticoat, that recurred to tauntingly conceal part of the female contour by day and night.

For daytime, Valentino propopsed the layered look, in suits with dirndl skirt and basque, spencer jacket or doublet over-vest. Coats tended to be loose.

A master of fabrics, Valentino played the mixing game this year, combining plaids, prints and velvets to create a cozy enveloping look. Colors ranged from drab grays, browns and purples to the bright orange and red of an autumn leaf.

Though soft and snuggly for daytime, there was nothing demure about the Valentino woman at night.

For the cocktail hour, there were a series of black petal skirts, with a split straight up the front. A basque played delicately around the hips, keeping the skirt together and the wearer modest.

For the later hours, Valentino proposed hip-hugging gowns glittering with thousands of tiny sequins, every one stitched on by hand. These gowns, too, had slit skirts and, usually, with velvet bodices with plunging necklines. Some had jackets, also in hand-stitched sequins.

Pants appeared only briefly. Prescribed only for evening, they were in slinky satin and worn with low-buttoned, hip-length tuxedo jackets, with nothing underneath.

Valentino has never been able to resist a ruffle, and this collection is no exception, except that all ruffles appear on the bodice, in order not to detract from the lower contours.

It is a long hot summer in Rome, but no one in the VIP audience seemed to mind the sweltering heat in the designer's downtown studio as they gasped with pleasure at gown after gown.

Dear Abby

Strong Ties Steams No. 2

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: What is the proper way to introduce one's ex-daughter-in-law? My husband, his mother and I were recently at a function when my husband's ex-wife (I'll call her Marge) walked in. My mother-in-law greeted Marge warmly, put her arm around her shoulder and proceeded to introduce her to everyone as "my daughter-in-law." My husband said nothing at the time, but I could see that he was annoyed. I said nothing either, but I was steamed!

My husband and I have been married for seven years. Occasionally we run into Marge at weddings, funerals, etc., and if my mother-in-law is there too, she always falls all over Marge, referring to her as "my daughter-in-law."

My husband has reminded his mother that Marge is no longer her daughter-in-law and to please quit introducing her that way, but his request has fallen on deaf ears.

What do you make of this, and how should we handle this irritating and awkward situation?

STEAMED

DEAR STEAMED: You don't say how long your husband and Marge were married, but if it was a number of years, your mother-in-law may still have some strong emotional ties with her former daughter-in-law.

In any case, whether she's forgetful, insensitive or just plain spiteful, you can best handle the situation by ignoring it.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I have read your column for years, and now I need help with a personal problem. I am an 85-year-old widow, but my friends say I look 65. My husband and I lived in this town 61 years and had a host of friends. Since his death 14 years ago, when I have gone out, his male friends have been greeting me with a kiss!

Last Sunday, three of his friends kissed me on the cheek in the dining room of the country club with 200 people looking on! I am sure that each kiss was only a friendly gesture, but I do not like such a display of affection in public.

How can I put a stop to it without hurting the feelings of good friends?

LOVE SANS KISSES IN VIRGINIA

DEAR LOVE: Rejoice! To reject such well-intentioned gestures of affection would surely offend the kissers. What's wrong with letting the entire country club know that you are still considered a warm and kissable friend?

* * *

DEAR ABBY: "On the Spot," a 60-year-old college student, resented being asked to write an essay on the first time he made love. He said, "To tell you the truth, I can hardly remember, so it wouldn't have been very good anyway."

That reminded me of my own father, who died at 84. When he was 83, he was asked by a longtime crony if he could remember the first time he made love. My dad's reply: "I'm so old, I can't remember the last time."

A.M.A., ORMOND BEACH, FLA.

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to the grandmother signed "Had Enough," who wrote about the deplorable way her daughter was raising and feeding her children. You advised her to contact social service agencies — because her daughter and son-in-law were, in fact, abusing the children. I just want to urge her to please follow through on your advice.

I was one of six children. And while we were not beaten constantly, we were abused. We lived in filth, had improper food, poor clothing, and a mother who was present but uncaring. (Our father had left us.)

I often wanted to report my home situation to the authorities, but I was young and frightened, and didn't know what might happen to us if I did.

Twelve years (and two nervous breakdowns) later, I realized I'd been carrying the guilt of that impossible situation around with me ever since. I finally realized that a 13-year-old child couldn't be responsible for the situation. But what about the people who surrounded us and did nothing when they should have — especially my grandparents? They saw the negligence, and while professing to "love" us, did nothing. I see now that it wasn't love — and my anger has diminished both my love and respect for them.

So, Abby, please tell "Had Enough" even more emphatically to follow through on your advice. She'll be doing everyone in her daughter's family a favor.

FREE AT LAST IN DENVER

DEAR FREE: Fortunately, today almost every community has a hot line to report child abuse cases, and the children themselves are being taught to report any mistreatment they may suffer.

Quinn-Harris Vows Said In Salisbury

SALISBURY — Marcia Lee Harris of Salisbury, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Charles Harris, and James Michael Quinn of Winston-Salem, son of Mr. and Mrs. A Fitch Quinn of Route 1, Pink Hill, were married Saturday at five o'clock in the Milford Hills United Methodist Church here. The Rev. Robert M. Smith Jr. and the Rev. Charles D. White Jr. performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride was escorted by her father and wore a gown of white knit chiffon with edging of satin. Venise lace and pearls covered the Queen Anne neckline and bodice. The gown flowed into a chapel train. She wore a fingertip veil of matching lace and carried a clutch bouquet of white roses tied with a streamer of white satin ribbons.

Maids of honor were Susan Elizabeth Jones of Greenville and Elizabeth Ann Harris of Salisbury, sister of the bride. Each wore a lavender floor length gown of chiffon and lace with an empire waistline and carried a clutch of yellow, white and lavender cushion mums tied with yellow satin ribbon.

Bridesmaids were Vicky Quinn of Warsaw, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, Ginger Quinn of Pink Hill, sister of the bridegroom, George Anna Chambers of Salisbury, Terry W. Stegall of Raleigh, Beth Downey of Greenville and Donna Floyd of Kinston. Each wore a dress like those of the maids of honor and carried a clutch of yellow, white and lavender cushion mums accented with purple satin ribbons.

Honorary bridesmaids were Cynthia Brooks, Bailey Carter, Betty Lynn Green and Anna Houle, all of Greenville.

Serving as best man was the father of the bridegroom. Ushers included Danald F. Quinn of Warsaw and Marshall K. Quinn of Winston-Salem, brothers of the bridegroom, James Michael Harris of Salisbury, brother of the bride, Robert McIver of Burlington, Anthony Scott Bridgeman of Concord, cousin of the bride, and Gerald Floyd of Kinston.

A program of wedding music was presented by organist Barbara Smith and soloist Caroline Honeycutt, both of Salisbury.

A reception hosted by the parents of the bride was held in the fellowship hall of the church immediately following the ceremony.

A rehearsal dinner hosted by the bridegroom was held after the wedding rehearsal at Pope's Restaurant, Salisbury. The bride hosted a bridesmaids luncheon Friday at the Western Sizzlin' of Salisbury.

The bride is an honor graduate of West Rowan High School, Salisbury, and a graduate of East Carolina University with a B.S. in nursing. She is presently employed as a staff nurse at N.C. Baptist Hospital, Winston-Salem. The bridegroom graduated from Goldsboro Christian School and is a graduate of ECU with a B.S. in business administration. He is employed as claims service representative with State Farm Insurance, Winston-Salem.

MRS. JAMES MICHAEL QUINN

Engagements Announced

CINDY WHITEHURST...is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Cecil Whitehurst of Tarboro, who announce her engagement to Johnny Van Wagenen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lord Byron Van Wagenen Sr. of Ayden. The wedding will take place in the fall.

FRANKIE LYNN ROUNTREE...is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. Frank Rountree of Corapeake, who announce her engagement to Dr. William L. Hand III, son of Dr. and Mrs. W. L. Hand of New Bern. An Oct. 2 wedding has been planned.

CRISP CEREAL

To restore crispness, heat the cereal in a shallow baking pan in a pre-heated oven at 350 degrees for about five minutes, says Rachel Kinlaw, extension food specialist, North Carolina State University.

SUMMER SQUASH

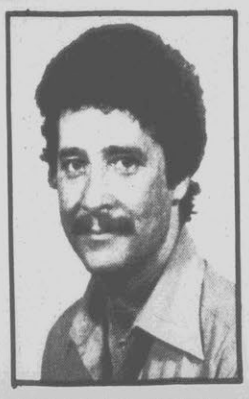

Summer squashes make delicious additions to family meals.

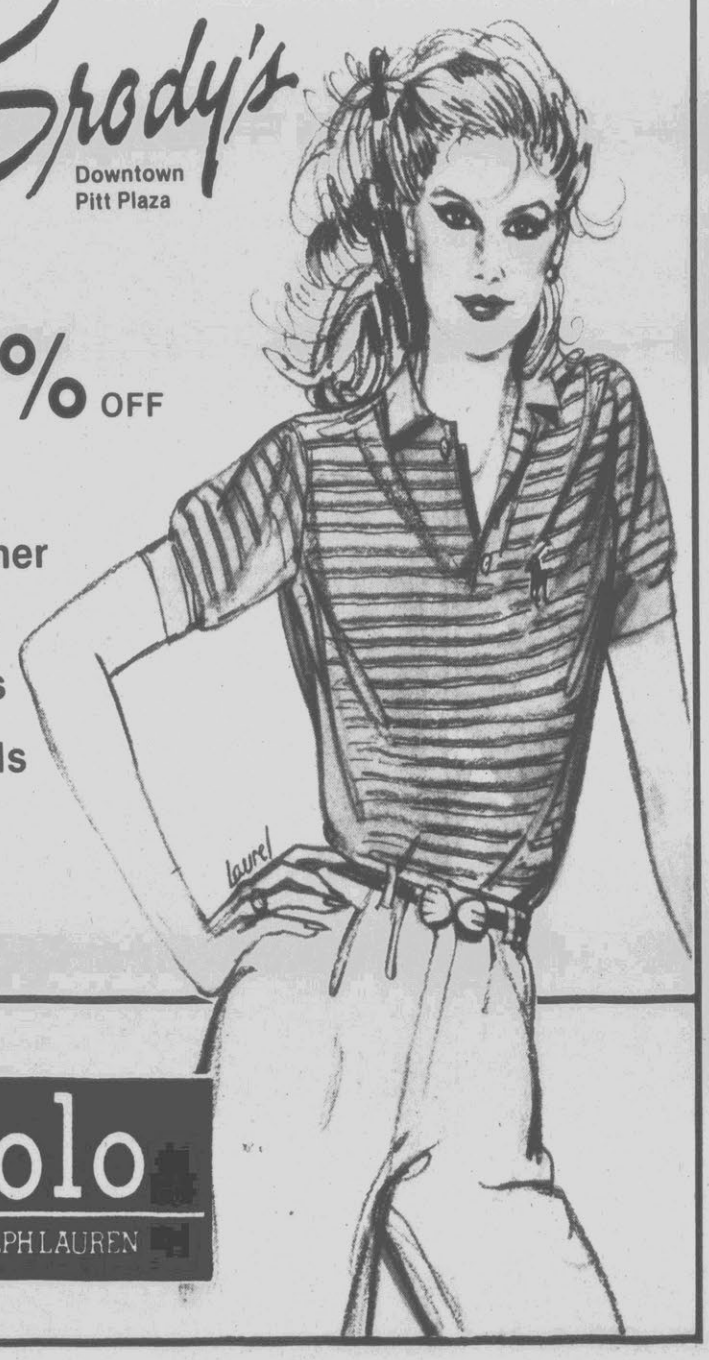

Sliced thinly and served raw, summer squash adds a unique touch to the family's favorite green salad, note extension food specialists, North Carolina State University.

Zucchini squash can be the base for an unusual main dish. Just slice them lengthwise and scoop out the pulp. Mix the pulp with browned sausage, bread crumbs and seasonings, then stuff the squash with the mixture and bake.

Wedding Vows Said Saturday Afternoon

FOUNTAIN — Melanie Ann Bell of Greenville and Franklin James Ingram of Grifton were united in marriage Saturday afternoon at three o'clock in the Fountain Baptist Church here. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Jimmy Rogers of Franklin, Va.

The parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. James Hall Bell of Fountain. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles James Ingram of Salisbury.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents and wore a formal gown of white chantilly lace over peau de soie designed with a high neckline encircled with ruffled chantilly lace. The gown was fashioned with chantilly lace baby doll sleeves accented with miniature satin bows. A satin ribbon encircled the waistline. The full circular skirt was accentuated with cascading tiers of chantilly lace that extended to a chapel length train. She wore a waltz length veil of illusion edged in chantilly lace held in place by a caplet overlaid in matching lace. She carried a mixture of mixed silk summer flowers.

Mrs. Benjamin Gardner White Jr. of Greenville, sister of the bride, was honor attendant. She wore a prarie-style dress of green taffeta with a ruffled skirt fashioned with a sweetheart neckline with lace inserts embellished with bows. The dress featured a cummerbund and puffed sleeves. She carried a bouquet of daisies.

Honorary bridesmaids were Mrs. Challie Arnette of Falkland, cousin of the bride, Mrs. Chris Sumrell, Becky Leith and Teresa Davenport, all of Greenville. Each carried a bouquet of daisies.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man.

The Southern Sportsman Restaurant was the scene of the rehearsal dinner Friday night. The dinner was hosted by the parents of the bridegroom. A bridesmaids brunch hosted by Mrs. Albert Bell, grandmother of the bride, was held at the Colonial Inn Saturday morning.

The bride is a graduate of Farmville Central High School and Pitt Community College, where she received a A.A.S. degree in radiologic technology. She works at Pitt County Memorial Hospital as a cardiovascular technologist. The bridegroom attended Ragsdale High School, Jamestown, and received an A.A.S. in radiologic technology from Forsyth Technical Institute, Winston-Salem. He is chief technologist of the cardiac catheterization laboratory, Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

After a wedding trip to Washington, D.C. and Myrtle Beach, S.C., the couple will reside in Grifton.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Young people are still trying to figure out what makes marriage work.

Early marriages didn't seem to provide any guarantees. Neither did the late ones. Living together was supposed to take away the surprisea, the shocks and disappointments. However, when co-habital couples legalized their relationship, 40 percent of these marriages ended in divorce.

I haven't the foggiest notion what makes marriages work. I've seen extravaganzas blessed by the church hierarchy and 18 pounds of crab dip, and the hangovers lasted longer than the marriage.

I've seen an alcoholic old enough to be the pregnant bride's father get married on their lunch hour and live happily ever after.

Parents of teenagers talk about it a lot. The closest we can come is maybe this is what happens when the Me Generation Meets Marriage . . . and each expects more than the other can possibly give.

My reader mail is very revealing. I hear a lot from single parents who are raising children alone. They confide why they believe their marriage went down the tubes. They complain of an insensitive husband who expected her to pick up after him, a lack of understanding that she is a person with feelings, and personal habits that got bigger every day.

I also hear from older people. "I have a dear husband who changes his undershirt and shorts every day. However, he takes them off wrong side out. He hears me, but he has sudden deafness when I bring this up. I decided to find out how many pieces of underwear I had turned right side out in our 46 years of married life. It comes out to 33,488."

Or another one. "I think the true meaeure of love is how much one is willing to give up of himself to make another person happy. Both Skip and I love the cauliflower that comes in the pickle jar. Skip doesn't know this because I have always left it for him. That's love."

And finally, "I read your comments on snoring. A few years ago my wife had a stroke and I almost lost her. You don't know how often I wake up and smile knowing that she's snoring beside me."

Robert Frost Collection Donated To UNC Rare Book Collection

CHAPEL HILL — A collection of works by Robert Frost, including first editions of his books poetry and manuscript copies of some poems, has been donated to the Rare Book Collection at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Dr. and Mrs. Clifford P. Lyons of Chapel Hill donated the collection, cpnsisting of almost 300 items, most of which were given to the Lyons by Frost during their many years of friendship. Dr. Lyons is a Kenan professor emeritus of English at UNC-CH.

A significant part of the collection is a group of first editions, including "Aforesaid," "A Boy's Will" and the collected and selected poems of Frost. Special edition's of Frost's poetry are also included.

The books are all signed copies from Frost to the Lyons, and many have copies of early drafts of the poems written in the margin.

The donation includes manuscript copies of Frost's poems, many of which are early drafts of published works and some of which have not been published. Correspondence by by and about Frost and tapes of conversations with the poet, which were made for radio broadcasts, as well as tapes of lectures also were donated.

The gift contains works by Frost's children and grandchildren, critical works about poetry, biographical works and publications of Frost's poetry in anthologies, journals and magazines, s well as numerous other items pertaining to Frost's work.

"The potential of this collection for research is excellent now and promises to be better in the future," said Dr. Paul Koda, head of the rare book collection in the university library.

"At least two of the manuscript poems are unpublished, and there are handwritten versions of poems written in the books of poetry," he said. "By having manuscripts with variation of poetry, you can see the development of Frost's thought."

"A Considerable Speck," a framed poem from Frost to the Lyons, is printed on paper handmade by Dard Hunter, who was a leading American papermaker and expert on historical papermaking.

Frost and Lyon were long-time friends, and the poet visited the Lyons every spring. During his visits, Frost lectured and readhis poems at UNC-CH, and the visits became an annual event in Chapel Hill, lasting from 1947 to 1961. Frost missed the trip because of illness in 1962 and died in 1963.

His witty and engrossing lectures were known as sources of humerous sayings and poetic insights. Once, according to a 1956 article in the Chapel Hill Weekly, Frost advised an audience to choose one of the persuits in life: religion, science or gossip. "Gossip is the greatest of all," the article quoted Frost as saying, and he defined it as one of the arts that can be expressed in a story, in newspaer work, or as town talk, poetry and drama.

"Tha flakes and glimpses of wisdom can be derived from gossip," Frost said.

A 1961 article reported that Frost joined Chancellor Emeritus Robert B. House as one of the "Nuclear Age Gospel Singers," an informal quartet. Frost sang baritone.

But Frost's poetry was the centerpiece of his visits. He read and discussed his poems and lectured on poetry. Poetry is something which "begins in delight and ends in wisdom," a 1963 article reprted him as saying.

Frost said he remembered and lived by two particular lines of poetry: "So I have heard and do in part believe it," from Shakespeare; and "Shall I go on or have I said enough?" from Milton.

The Lyons originally met Frost in Gainesville, Fla., in 1937, while Dr. Lyons was chairman of the English department at the University of Florida and Frost was living in Gainesville for the winter.

While at UNC-CH, Dr. Lyons was dean of the college of arts and sciences and secretary of the faculty. He was named a Kenan professor in 1961 and retired in 1974.

The Rare Book Collection is open to researchers and students Monday through Friday from 8-5 p.m. and Saturday from 9-1 p.m.

EASTERN NORTH CAROLINA FOLK SCULPLTURE — Adding a touch of home decoration to a yard is a fairly common practice throughout eastern North Carolina. Often poured concrete fountains, angels or birds are purchased to add art to a yard. In other instances, more innovative people turn to their own creations. Two such examples are the framed arrangement of white-painted tire sculpture created by Mary Ann and Jasper Andrews at their Robersonville home, above; and at right, an army of cans and bottles stuck into soft sand by children in a yard in the Meadowbrook area of Greenville. (Reflector Photos by Jerry Raynor)

——Perkins returns

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Millie Perkins, the petite actress who starred in "The Diary of Anne Frank" 23 years ago, has returned to acting after disappearing from movie screens for two decades.

Perkins was brought from obscurity to international prominence in the title role of Anne Frank, the tragic Jewish girl who hid from the Nazis in Holland during World War II and eventually was killed by them.

Mille, a native of Fair Lawn, N.J., later appeared with Elvis Presley in "Wild In The Country" and "Ensign Pulver" before disappearing.

She has returned to acting with a small role in "The Trouble With Grandpa," a half-hour Capital Cities Family Special being syndicated nationally.

——Niven signed

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — David Niven, who starred in the original 1964 "The Pink Panther," will reprise his role as Sir Charles Litton in the sixth Inspector Clouseau movie, "Trail of the Pink Panther."

Tempest Variation

By GLENNE CURRIE
UPI Lively Arts Editor

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — In his serio-comic "The Isle is Full of Noises," Trinidadian poet-playwright Derek Walcott has loosely paraphrased "The Tempest" to depict the problems of a contemporary West Indian nation.

It's a daring thing to do, but it works, up to a point, and is unobjectionable because he does not draw too close a parallel and only occasionally quotes Shakespeare in his tale of purity and corruption.

The play, a joint production of the Hartford Stage Company and New York's Negro Ensemble Company, opened at the Hartford Stage's John W. Huntington Theater April 16 for a limited run through May 23.

"The Isle is Full of Noises" has so much in it — enough for a half-dozen theses in fact — that most of the time you can't hear the island for the noise, and there is so much talk, talk, talk that you wish there were only two acts instead of three.

The play is set on the imaginary island nation of St. Marta, once a British colony, then a member of the short-lived West Indies Federation, now independent within the (British) Commonwealth — and dirt poor.

The current prime minister, the pragmatic Papa, agrees to let American promoters build a hotel-casino on picturesque Pigeon Island, to bring in much-needed tourist money. The trouble is that the hotel will mean the razing of a cave in which dwells Sir Lionel Robinson, former president of the Federation, who retired from political life when the Federation collapsed and now lives as a hermit.

Sir Lionel represents the old traditional ways, including the old religion, as opposed to Papa's modernity, and Sir Lionel has the moral support of the poet James (Walcott's alter ego), who is Papa's reluctant Secretary of Culture.

In the end James dies a martyr's death, Papa woos Sir Lionel's cooperation in a "New Deal" administration, to avoid a popular revolution, and one presumes that nothing has changed.

There are a dozen subplots, including one in which James rescues Papa's adoptive daughter from a fate worse than death, and one in which Papa is seduced by the voluptuous wife of the British ambassador.

Shakespeare's Caliban is represented variously by Sir Lionel, Papa and James. Prospero can be Sir Lionel, James or the ambassador, who also addresses the audience as Chorus. In a nod to Homer, Walcott calls James' father Achilles and he has James, who dies in the wine-dark sea trying to swim to Africa, doing Herculean tasks such as cleaning out the Augean stables.

Cult Writer Of A Generation Ago

Celebrating 25 Years Of Jack Kerouac's 'On The Road' Book

TRIBUTE TO BEAT GENERATION . . . Poet Allen Ginsberg, one of the organizers of a ten-day conference in Boulder, Colorado honoring Jack Kerouac, is one of the speakers at the affair being held at the Naropa Institute. Kerouac wrote 19 books which documented activities of Americans who became known as beatniks. (AP Laserphoto by Jerry Cleveland)

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — On the 25th anniversary of the novel "On The Road," the brightest names of the Beat Generation are having a tribute to its author, Jack Kerouac, and the lively era he helped launch.

"It is an unprecedented gathering," said William McKeever of the Naropa Institute, sponsor of the 10-day conference which began Friday. "It hit a cultural nerve. It's unbelievable how people have said they remember 'On The Road' and that it was important to them in their teens and 20s."

The lineup for the conference is a Who's Who of the so-called subterranean poets and writers of the 1950s — Allen Ginsberg, novelist William Burroughs, Pulitzer Prize-winning poet Gary Snyder, San Francisco publisher and poet Lawrence Ferlinghetti — as well as representatives of a later generation influenced by Kerouac's books — novelist Ken Kesey, journalist Hunter Thompson, radical activist Abbie Hoffman and one-time drug guru Timothy Leary.

"I don't think all of these people have been in one spot at one time, and some of them have never met each other," said Ginsberg, a conference organizer.

Kerouac, who died in 1969, had a superior ability to observe the emerging Beat scene and chronicle it, according to his biographer Ann Charters.

"His novels documenting a whole literary era are still with us," she said in an interview. "Even though the Beat writers are no longer labeled as such, they are still very much a part of American culture at this time."

In the beginning, before the Beat Generation had a name, it was just Ginsberg, Burroughs, Kerouac and a raw-boned hipster named Neal Cassady, portayed in a series of Kerouac's books as the exuberant archetype of the modern-day American hero.

They zipped across post-World War II America in borrowed cars, a disaffected youth, wild, energetic and freewheeling. They wanted to see everything, experience everything. Their ticket was the open road.

"We were suddenly driving along the blue waters of the Gulf," Kerouac wrote, "and at the same time a momentous mad thing began on the radio; it was the Chicken Jazz'n Gumbo disk-jockey show from New Orleans, all mad jazz records, colored records, with the disk jockey saying, 'Don't worry 'bout nothing!'"

In "On The Road," the most famous of Kerouac's 19 published books, Cassady was portrayed as a juvenile delinquent in early manhood, a street corner philosopher, womanizer, pool shark, son of a Denver wino and reader of the Harvard Classics.

Jane Faigao, conference coordinator, says the conference will break new ground in several areas, including taking a fresh look at how Kerouac related to women.

"I think a perspective of him as a literary figure of the culture will become clearer," Ms. Faigao said. "I'm not sure he has ever been accepted as the literary figure any of us think he is."

"On The Road" was written at a key time. Published in 1957, it documented a postwar America very different from the popular idea of the tranquil, conservative Eisenhower years.

It sought kicks on drugs and sex, jazz and bop, driving at high speeds, Zen Buddhism. Kerouac presented the scene in a curious mixture of street language and poetry.

Writing spontaneously, revising little, he finished novels quickly. "On The Road" took three weeks; "The Subterraneans" three days. Long-time friend Ed White, now an architect in Denver, recalls how Kerouac found his "spontaneous prose."

Not everyone liked Kerouac's writing. Although The New York Times hailed publication of "On The Road" as an important moment in literature, many critics assailed Kerouac's rapid, tumbling style. Truman Capote called it "typing, not writing." Its practitioners were disparaged as "beatniks."

In "The Dharma Bums," published in 1958, the Kerouac-like character teams up with a rugged Buddhist outdoorsman patterned after California poet Gary Snyder — who eventually won a Pulitzer in 1975 for "Turtle Island."

The character became a model for the antiwar hippies of the 1960s, something that horrified Kerouac, who had a strong patriotic streak.

While Ginsberg and other Beats readily embraced new ideas, Kerouac became more conservative, even reactionary in his politics.

Kerouac the conservative fell out of favor with the intellectual elite. He grew bloated, reclusive and began drinking heavily.

In 1968 his hero, Cassady, was found dead lying by a railroad track in Mexico, the victim of exposure. A year later, Kerouac died of a gastric hemorrhage. He was 47.

Now, more than a decade after Kerouac's death, all of his books are still in print, a measure of his continuing popularity. Despite the flop of a recent movie based on his life, Hollywood studios are taking another look at his novels.

One reason, Ginsberg believes, is because Kerouac presented an exuberent, essentially optimistic postwar vision of America based on "tenderheartedness and comradeship — the original open-hearted promise of America."

"And at this critical time when America officially is being dominated by competition and rivalry, when America has got to make a decision about whether it will go into all-out militarization, it's about time to have a discussion of the heart, a national discussion of the American heart."

Richard Harris Had Doubts Over 'Camelot'

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Richard Harris, a battle-hardened veteran of movies and the stage, was apprehensive when he was asked to bring his role as King Arthur in "Camelot" to pay television.

"The usual way to shoot these things is to bring in five cameras and cover everything," he says. "They didn't do it that way. The play was restaged and they brought in cameras and cranes and shot it like a movie. Instead of taking four or five days, we took 14.

"It came out beautifully."

The elaborate musical production, taped at the Winter Garden Theater in New York, will make its first appearance on Home Box Office on Sept. 26. It is part of a growing list of stage productions that are being adapted for pay and cable television, as well as original productions that are bypassing the theater and going straight to the home screen.

Harris had played the King Arthur role, created on the Broadway stage by Richard Burton, in the 1967 movie, and had taken over the role from Burton in the stage revival 13 months ago. His only previous television experience had been in "The Snow Goose" for the "Hallmark Hall of Fame."

"Camelot" opened on Broadway in December 1960, shortly after the election of President John F. Kennedy, and it became an unofficial anthem of his administration. It's a huge and emotionally charged production about love and chivalry and an enchanted kingdom.

Harris, who had starred in "The Wild Geese' with Burton, flew from his home in the Bahamas for Burton's second opening of the show on Broadway two years ago. Burton played in it for 10 months, then was forced out by illness. wharris took over.

"This show looks great," says Harris over breakfast in his bungalow at the Bel Air Hotel. He was in Los Angeles to dub the sound.

"It's been zears since I've been so excited about anything. I think as you get older the glitter wears off and you don't become excited. The last four or five years I've really been disinterested in work. Things weren't that exciting. It was an emotional rebirth to discover that I could get excited about my work again."

Harris is a tall, lean man, whose long yellow hair is thinning on top. He has a thin face, a long jaw and a sprawling nose that looks as if it's been broken.

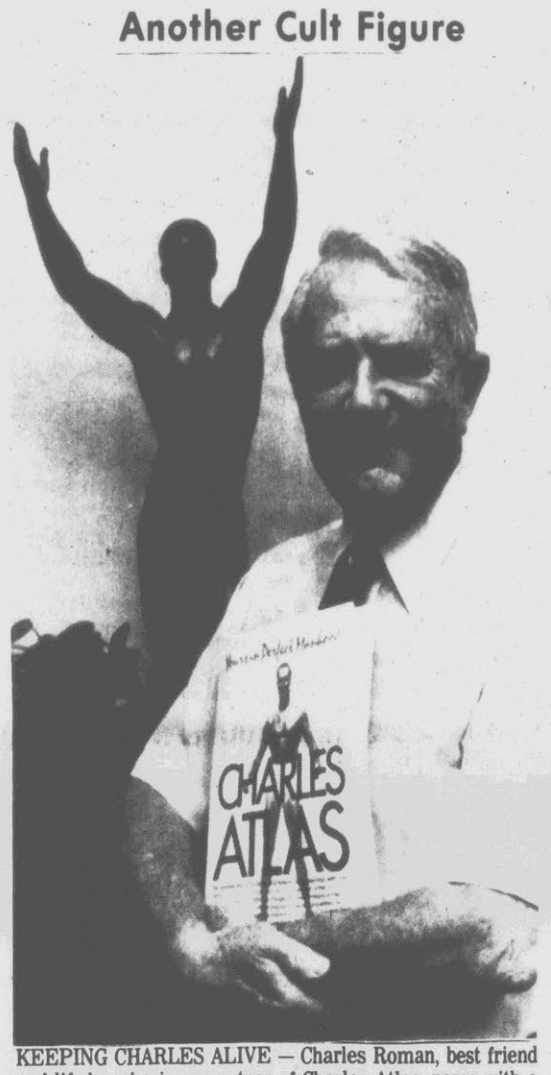

After the dubbing, Harris plans to return to his home in Paradise Island in the Bahamas to complete work on a novel and a play.

"It's very quiet and very beautiful," he says. "They're lovely people and I'm welcome there."

In his next movie he will play God in "Adam and Eve" for John and Bo Derek, for whom he did "Tarzan the Ape Man."

Harris, whose first book of poems was published in 1974, hopes to finish a novel called "Samuel G." and a semi-biographical play called "Miscast in Carriage Fergus."

Visits By European Groups

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Brooklyn Academy of Arts will introduce a major series of visits by European dance companies with The Norwegian National Ballet, Oct. 12-17. Also in the series: the Cullberg Ballet Company of Sweden, Nov. 9-14; the Dutch National Ballet, Dec. 1-12; the Basel Ballet, Jan. 25-30; the Hamburg Ballet, March 15-17; and the London Contemporary Dance Theater, May 3-8.

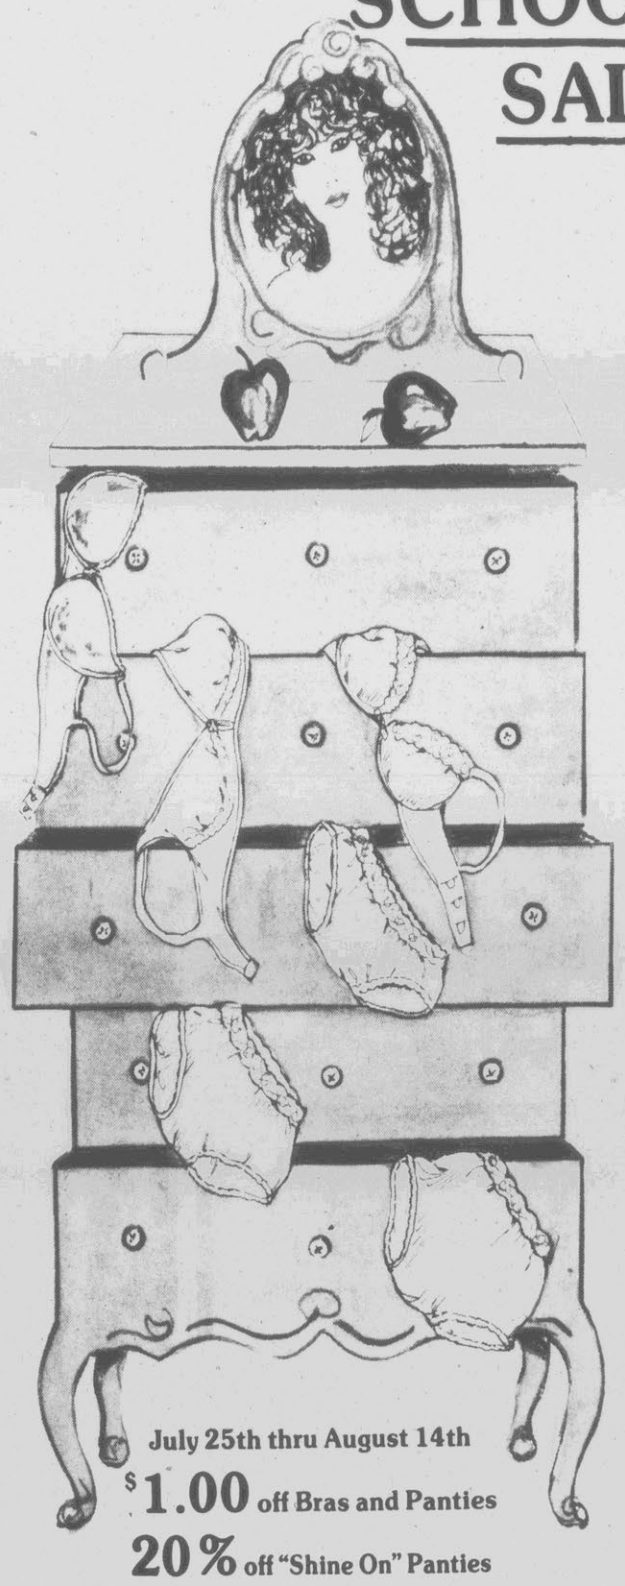

In another dance development, Twyla Tharp has moved her company to Brooklyn, where the Strand Theater is being renovated for use as studios, offices and a TV-video production center. The Tharp company will be in residence at the Brooklyn Academy of Arts until the Strand is ready for use.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI) — The American Repertory Theater, created by Harvard drama dean Robert Brustein, leaves July 17 on a 10-week tour of Europe and Israel. The company will perform at festivals in Avignon, Asti, Rimini, Edinburgh, Belgrade and Israel, and at theaters in The Netherlands. The A.R.T. repertory will include two cabaret revues as well as "Sganarelle," a contemporary version of the Moliere farce, an adaptation of Frank Wedekind's "Lulu" and Sam Shepard's "True West." The American Express Foundation is underwriting the tour with $250,000.

WORKING TO RESTORE — In 1910 Ben Keese built this "barn" as a country store in Pendleton, S.C., but it soon became a gathering place for black residents of the town. The Pendleton Foundation for Black History and Culture is working to restore the landmark as a community center. (AP Laserphoto)

New Officers, Directors Installed

Two new officers and four new directors of the East Carolina Art Society Board of Directors were installed Thursday night at the July meeting of the society held at the Greenville Museum of Art, 802 South Evans Street.

The two new officers, both to serve a two year term expiring June 30, 1984 are Burk Barbee, treasurer; and Lynda Blount, recording secretary.

The new directors, who will serve a three year term to expire June 30, 1985, are: Jim Ficklen, Larry Mallard, Nell Webb, and Frank Wooten.

The East Carolina Art Society Board of Directors, composed of six officers and twelve directors, is the governing body of the Greenville Museum of Art.

SEATTLE (UPI) — Flutist James Galway will give a rare three-day series of master classes, Aug. 16-18, during the National Flute Association's 10th anniversary convention. He also will give a recital Aug. 20.

WRONG ATTRIBUTION

The photograph of "Oriole 1966" by artist Gene Davis, appearing recently in a Sunday issue of The Daily Reflector, was erroneously attributed as a recent acquisition funded by the N.C. Art Society. The painting is instead part of the permanent collection of the N.C. Museum of Art in Raleigh.

August Events

"Outdoors in the Sun" is the theme of public celebrations planned in North Carolina during the month of August, with events ranging from locales in the cooler air of the mountains to the tropical surf breezes of the coast. Among events offered during August are:

• August 2 — A 220 mile bicycle ride to the Peaks of Otter north of Roanoke, Virginia. The ride begins at Blowing Rock, and is sponsored by the North Carolina Bicycle Touring Society.

• August 5-7 — 55th annual Mountain Dance and Folk Festival, Asheville Civic Center. Performers nationally will compete for $2,000 in prize money and trophies. Also each Saturday in August (except for August 7) the Shindig-on-the Green sponsored by the Asheville Chamber of Commerce will held at the City County Plaza. These gatherings feature traditional mountain music and dancers.

• August 14 — The 12th annual Shrimp Festival at Sneads Ferry. About 15-18,000 are expected to attend. Events get underway at 11 a.m. with a parade of 100 units. From noon until 7 p.m. visitors will be served 2,500 pounds of shrimp and flounder, plus clam chowder. Proceeds go to the fire department and rescue squad for that area.

• August 14-15 — The N.C. Bicycle Touring Society is sponsor for a fun event, the Great North Carolina Bicycle-Balloon Chase at Tanglewood Park in Clemmons. The two days of action include bike riding, camping, canoeing, horse backriding and a lecture.

• August 19 — The port town of Beaufort in Carteret County is again host to the annual Strange Seafood Exhibtion at Hampton Mariners Museum, with feeding hours from 1 to 4 p.m. The menu features more than 30 unusual (strange?) edible seafoods among which are octupus salad, shark creole and mullet roe hors d'oeuvres.

• August 24-September 6 — Hendersonville is the site of the North Carolina Apple Festival with several events scheduled at the Opportunity House, with an arts and crafts fair for three days. August 26 is the date of the big King Apple Parade. Two golf tournaments are scheduled at Etowah Valley Golf Course — the women's on August 25 and the men's on August 28. A tennis tournament and a road race will also take place August 28.

• August 28 — Cary is where the Sixth Annual Lazy Daze Arts and Crafts Show will be held. This year 300 artists and craftsmen from all over the southeastern U.S. will be on hand to display their work. About 20,000 are expected to attend.

The above is only a small sampling of events slated to take place in North Carolina during August. For details on more events, write to: Ms. Strickland, Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, P.O. Box 27687, Raleigh, N.C., 27611 or call her at 733-6376.

Book News

By Julie Hicks

There are some new nonfiction books available at the library for those who keep up with current events and world affairs.

By virtue of his early release due to illness, Richard Queen is perhaps the best known of the American hostages. "Inside and out: Hostage to Iran, Hostage to Myself" is his autobiographical account of the period from his arrival in Teheran as a young foreign officer on first assignment to his return to the United States in July, 1980. Queen carries us through his experiences further by writing on how he learned to live with multiple sclerosis, how he coped with the mimistratrions of his family on his return to freedom, how he fled to Alaska to get himself back together, and his unique role as State Department emissary to the hostasges' families. "Inside Out" is a deeply moving book by a man who is grateful to be alive.

The events of the last year and a half in Poland are only the latest chapter in the stormy history of her relationship with the Soviet Union. Neal Ascheron, a British juournalist who has covered Poland for twenty-five years, provides a balanced account of these relations since 1939 in "A Polish August." Included is the story of the negotiations between the Polish United Workers Party and the infant Solidarity organization. The five months of August through December 1980 are covered in detail revealing extensive conversations with individuals involved and intimate familiarity with the demands and concessions on both sides. Ascheron sees 1980 not as a period of nationalistic revolt against foreign domination but as "asocialist" and as "nationalism directed inwards." However, his postscript on the most recent occurrences in Poland casts a gloomy shadow over the preceding events as if they may now signify nothing. "A Polish August" is a worthwhile beginning for an understanding of the situation in Poland.

Has Book Published

Dr. Veronica S. Pantelidis, faculty member of the ECU Department of Library Science, recently had her complilation of materials on Arab education published by Mansell Publishing, Ltd., of London. It is being distributed in the United States by the H. W. Wilson Company.

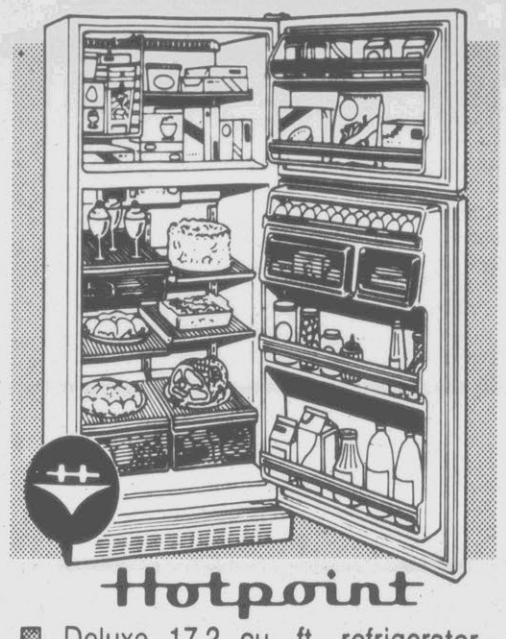

Heralded as the first comprehensive, non-selective, annotated bibliography, "Arab Education, 1956-1978," fills a gap in the coverage of world education in an area which is rapidly developing and increasing in world importance. The work draws together and annotates over 5,600 English language items, covering all aspects of education in twenty-one Arab countries, and the Arab world in general. The book supplies a much-needed reference source for academics and teachers, consultants, librarians, researchers, and students. It is arranged alphabetically by country, and then by subject. The 552-page work has comprehensive author/title and subject indexes.

Previous plublications by Dr. Pantelidis includle, among others, "The Arab World: Libraries and Librarianship, 1960-1976," also published by Mansell Publishing, Ltd.

STOCKBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI) — The Berkshire Theater Festival opened its 54th summer season with Dore Schary's play about F.D.R., "Sunrise at Campobello," June 30-July 18. It will be followed by Philip Barry's "The Animal Kingdom", July 21-Aug. 1; Herb Gardner's "A Thousand Clowns", Aug. 4-15; and a new comedy about Hollywood, John PiRoman's "The Palace of Amateurs," Aug. 18-28.

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Murray Louis Dance Company will tour Britain and Ireland for four weeks in September, including its first appearance at the Edinburgh Festival, Sept. 11. The company also will be seen in London, Sept. 12-18, and Dublin, Sept. 19-25. The tour will be sponsored by Heatherington-Seeling Ltd. of London, Loral Corporation and its British counterpart, Loran International Ltd.

A Review

A Tale Of War Brides

War Brides. By Lois Battle. New York, St. Martins Press, 359 pages, $13.95.

Traditionally, women who marry men from afar are expected to relinquish their homeland. Most do so willingly.

"War Brides" tells us about three such women from Austrailia who marry U.S. servicemen. It describes their ambivalent feelings as their ship separates them from family and friends. Arriving alone in the U.S. to cope with trains and planes to their destinations, they are:

Nineteen-year-old Sheila, eager to grasp America to her heart. Hers is the fabled America of jazz bands and skycrapers. Her fantasied southern mansion turns out to be nothing more than a shack in the hills with her Billy.

Dawn, a widow and mother of two little girls, finds her in-laws impossible to live with and would willingly live in a shack if she could call it her own.

Gaynor has gambled on marrying into a wealthy family. Shedding her shady past, she plays her cards well, she shares little of her emotions and good fortune. Gaynor finds this truly a "land of opportunity."

The author, Lois Battle, herself the daughter of a war bride, writes with ease and clarity about each of these women. She weaves the three lives into a pleasant tale which ends too abruptly. The author at some future date may wish to satisfy our desire to know what happened after page 359.

While "War Brides" is not a spellbinder, it is a "slice of life" on a too-long neglected subject.

Writers To Meet Tuesday

The second meeting of the Greenville Writers Club for the month of July will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W.E. (Ida Wooten) Tripp, Rt. 5, Greenville, beginning at 8 p.m. Tuesday.

All persons interested in creative writing are invited to attend.

The distance from the stop light at the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and U.S. 264 (Pactolus highway) to the Tripp home is 4.6 miles.

Poetry Society Meeting Set

CHAPEL HILL — The summer meeting of the North Carolina Poetry Society will be held August 7 at Bolin-Brook Farm, Chapel Hill. The meeting opens at 9 a.m. and interested guests are welcomed.

Poems, published and unpublished, will be read, and ideas for a Poetry and Arts workshop for Culture Week in November will be discussed.

For more information and directions to the farm, write: Ellen Johnston-Hale, Rt. 7, Box 616A, Chapel Hill, 27514, or phone 933-3939.

For membership information, write: Nancy Rouse, Box 185, Lucama, N.C., 27851, enclosing a self-address stamped envelope.

SECCA Grants

The National Endowment for the Arts (NEA) and the Southeastern Center for Contemporary Art (SECCA) announce the seventh grant program of Individual Aritsts Fellowships for southeastern artists.

Artists 18 years and older, with established residency in Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia, West Virginia, and the District of Columbia, may apply for a grant.

There will be seven $2,000 grants available for painters, photographers, printmakers, and sculptors. Final application must be postmarked by November 5, 1982 to be considered by the National/Regioal Selection Panel.

NEA and SECCA define the purpose of the grant program "to enable southeastern artists to set aside time and/or purchase materials and generally enable them to advance their careers as they see fit."

Southeastern artists are encouraged to request guidelines and application forms by contacting: Southeastern Center for Contemporary Art, 750 Marguerite Drive, Winston-Salem, N.C. 27106, telephone: (919) 725-1904.

Rene Descartes, French mathematician and philosopher, was born in 1596.

'She Loves Me' Is Last Rose Of Summer For Summer Theater

East Carolina Summer Theater audiences with a zest for a nostalgic pre-war European atmosphere that recalls when Vienna was the city of waltzes and Paris and Budapest the cities of love and luaghter, can look forward with anticipation to the musical comedy hit, "She Loves Me," to be staged in McGinnis Theater July 26-31.

"She Loves Me" is a romantic fairy tale with songs by Jerry Bock and Sheldon Harnic that drew enthusiastic acclaim from critics when it opened its 302-performance run on Broadway in 1963. The book by Joe Masteroff is based on a play of the 1930's that was one of Europe's biggest romantic stage triumphs.

Patricia Preston and Mitch Nathan will portray a pair of pen-pals who write romantic letters to each other anonymously in care of mailbox numbers while umaware of each other's identities — bicker with each other from adjoining counters in the perfume store where they work.

No one in the audience has any doubt from the start that each of the two is the other's "Dear Friend" and that in the end they will discover this and fall into each other's arms. But for all this lack of suspense, New York audiences night after night felt the same emotional charge as the hero exultantly discovers the world-shaking fact that — "She Loves Me."

According to Summer Theater Producer-Director Edgar Loessin, the show includes so many songs that two long-playing records were required to make the original cast album.

There's "Days Gone By," a lilting waltz to be sung by Dick St. George; "Will He Like Me?" a ballad of the tension every lover feels; "I Resolve," the solo of Babs Winn as a hoodwinked girl resolving not to be taken in again by glib suitors; and "A Romantic Atmosphere," partly a patter song in which a headwaiter in a luxurious restaurant instructs a new busboy on how to keep the rendevous seductive and charming.

One New York critic reported this about "She Loves Me": "With a full and happy heart, may I tell you that here is a musical play with which everyone can fall in love. It is that rare theatrical jewel, an intimate musical that affectionately enfolds an audience. It is dear, charming and wholeheartedly romantic."

Summer Theater General Manager Scott Parker noted that the ECU productions have had "tremendous response from eastern North Carolina audiences this summer."

"Even though we have sold out a number of performances. I don't think we have had to turn anyone away for any one perfomance. We do have tickets available for "She Loves Me."

Patricia Preston portrays Amalia and Mitch Nathan the role of George in the ECU production. Other performers include Babs Winn as Miss Ritter, Charles Serio as the waiter and Michael W. Hill as Sipos.

The fourth and final production of the 1982 season, "She Loves Me" will be presented at 8:15 p.m. Monday through Sunday. Monday and Tuesday tickets are eight dollars each, and Wednesday through Saturday tickets are ten dollars each. Ticket reservations may be made by telephoning the Summer Theater box office at (919) 757-6390.

Barbershop Music For Sunday In The Park

Two local barbershop quartets and a male chorus of 20 singers are the musicians being headlined in today's Sunday in the Park entertainment. The weekly summer concert begins at 7 p.m. at the Sunday in the Park site east of Reade Street between Third and Fourth Streets. The public is invited and there is no admission charged.

Today's concert is the final of seven in the 1982 city funded public annual Sunday in the Park series now completing its tenth year. The program is under the auspices of the Greenville Recreation and Park Department and is coordinated by Stuart Aronson.

The two barbershop quartets performing today — the "Double Paradox" and the "Four Muscatels" are both members of the Society for the Preservation and Encourgement of Barbershop Quartet Singing in America, Inc., a nationally incorporated society with a large number of chapters.

Members of the "Double Paradox," so named as the quartet is composed of doctors — medical and non-medical — are Norm Pierce, Billy Jones, Al Ingenito, and Bob Hanrahan. The four singers in "Four Muscatel" are Don Lawler, Don Wigent, Greg Baldwin, and Jack Thornton.

The chorus, which has been active in Greenville for more than four years, within the last two years has competed in district contests in Greenville and Raleigh. The most recent show presented by the chorus was in McGinnis Theater in May of this year.

Songs to be presented today by the chorus include a varied selection such as "In The Good Old Summertime," "Wait 'Til the Sun Shines, Nelly," "Darkness on the Delta," "Girl of My Dreams," "Call It Nostalgia," and "Off to See My Sweetness."

Among selections the two quartets will present are "Side by Side," "Sweet and Lovely," "I Love the Way You Roll Your Eyes," "Alexander's Ragtime Band," "If I Had My Life to Live Over," and "Lida Rose," a song from "The Music Man."

The "Double Paradox" is a non-profit organization that supports through benefit performances the work of the Institute of Logopedics. Their mottar is "We sing that they may speak," and the group has performed at numerous area civic, church, charitable and business gatherings in continued support of the logopedics work.

THE "DOUBLE PARADOX" . . . is one of three barbershop singing groups to perform today in the final Sunday in the Park concert for the summer of 1982. The other groups are another quartet, the "Four Muscatels" and a 20-member male chorus. The "Paradox" members are, left to right, Norm Pierce, bass; Billy JOnes, baritone; Al Ingenito, lead; and Bob Hanrahan, tenor. The concert begins at 7 p.m. at the site east of Reade Street and the public is invited. THere is no admission charged.

Auditions For Babies To Play Virginia Dare

MANTEO — Four babies will be chosen through audition to appear in the August 18 performance of "The Lost Colony."

Parents are invited to bring children between the ages of two months and two years to the auditions being held Saturday in the Lost Colony Building. Audition hours begin at 1 p.m. Prior appointments for auditions are not required.

The four babies selected will appear in the August 18 birthday of Virginia Dare night of performance. Bob Knowles, associate producer/general manager notes that mothers must be available backstage on that night with the children until performance time. Three members of the cast will be assigned to help and hold the future stars.

Valdese Drama Now Playing

VALDESE — The 15h season of "From This Day Forward," a historical outdoor drama about the Waldenses, is now playing at the Old Colony Players Amphitheater on Church Street in Waldese. The drama runs through August 15 with presentations each Thursday through Sunday night.

For more information on the drama and for ticket reservations, write to: Old Colony Players, P.O. Box 112, Valdese, N.C., 28690, or telephone 704-874-0176.

WOOW Classics

Because of the hot weather doldrums, hostess Karen Hause was too energeticless to come up with a sprightly theme indicator for the four hours of music she will air tonight. The selections, however, hint at refreshing cool sounds that should counteract summer's inertia.

WOOW Classics are broadcast each Sunday night over WOOW Radio, 1340 on the dial, from 8 p.m. to midnight. The music additionally is broadcast over Channel 9 on the local cable television network. Selections this week are:

8 to 9 p.m.

• "Concerto in F Major for Two Horns and Strings" by Vivaldi, the Collegium Musicum de Paris, conducted by Roland Douatte; Beethoven's "Leonore Overture," Bruno Walter conducting the Columbia Symphony; and Schumann's "Symphony No. 4 in D Major," the Vienna Philharmonic with George Solti.

9 to 10 p.m.

• "Concerto for Harp and Orchestra" by Francois Boildien, Nicaror Zabaleta, harpist, with the Berlin Radio Symphony conducted by Ernst Marzendorfer; Debussy's "Iberia," the Detroit Symphony conducted by Paul Paray; Bach's "Suite in B Major for Flute and Strings," Jean-Pierre Rampal, flutist with the Paris Festival Strings.

10 to 11 p.m.

• Mendelssohn's "Concerto for Violin and Orchestra, Opus 64," Isaac Stern, violinist with Eugene Ormandy and the Philadelphia Orchestra; and "Also Sprach Zarathustra" by Richard Strauss, the Chicago Symphony, Fritz Reiner conducting.

11 p.m. to midnight

•"Partita in B Flat for Harpsichord" by Bach, performed on the piano by Glenn Gould; Bizet's "L'Arlesienne Suite (Numbers 1 and 2)," Eugene Ormandy and the Philadelphia Orchestra; and an old English selection, John Adson's "Masque Ayres" performed by the Gabrielle Masson Brass Ensemble.

SART Seeking New Playwright Talent

MARS HILL — SART, the Southern Appalachian Repertory Theater, an organization that has premiered nine new works in its first eight seasons, is looking for new plays. As part of the search, a North Carolina Playwrights' Conference will be held September 24-26 at Mars Hill College.

SART hopes to establish a continuing source for new plays by assisting North Carolina playwrights to develop scripts for full-scale productions on the SART stage. The project is funded in part by a grant from the N.C. Theater Arts, Department of Cultural Resources.

Details and applicable regulations for participation in the SART workshop are:

• The playwright must be a resident of North Carolina.

• The playwright must have had at least one major play produced by a recognized theater (professional, college or university, or community theater), or have had at least one major play published by a recognized publishing company, or submit the script of their work. This may be the script of a play previously produced or published, or a play-in-progress.

• Playwrights who meet the above requirements are invited to submit a sample of their work and the script they wish to explore at the conference no later than September 1, 1982.

• Scripts are to be mailed to: C. Robert Jones, Southern Appalachian Repertory Theater, P.O. Box 53, Mars Hill, N.C., 28754. Persons interested in more deailed information are also to write to this address.

Up to six playwrights will be invited to attend the conference which will take plae at Owen Theater on the campus of Mars Hill (20 miles north of Asheville) beginning at 5:30 p.m. September 24. The conference will open formally at 7 p.m. with the reading of the first script. The conference is expected to end at noon Sunday, September 26. SART will provide lodging and meals for participants.

Among those leading the conference will be Bill Martin, Broadway director and a Tony nominee for "The Lieutenant," and playwrights C. Robert Jones, Phil Hines, and Dr.Virgil R. Gray, Jr.

Base on readings and evaluations, those playwrights whose plays show the most potential for production will be invited back to SART for a full-rehearsed reading performance before an audience. SART hopes to produce at least one of the scripts during 1983.

Royalty for the initial production will be $500, with all rights reverting to the playwright afterwards. Travel expenses, plus room and board, will be paid by SART during the rehearsal and perormance period.

Carolina Today

Tips on how to prevent automobile repair rip-offs and a look at a plantation house, Somerset on Lake Phelps, are two of the topics to be presented by guests appearing on "Carolina Today," the early riser morning show airing each weekday morning from 6 to 8 a.m. over WNCT-TV, Channel 9. Slim Short and Susan Roberts are the show's hosts.

The calendar for the coming week is:

• Monday — 6:40 a.m., Buck Roebuck discusses his book, "The Tale of a Tramp;" 7:15 a.m., Ned Smith from Bogue Banks gives hints on how to survive your beach vacation.

• Tuesday — 6:40 a.m., the Developmental Evaluation Clinic is the Healthbreak subject; 7:15 a.m., comments on how to prevent automotive repair rip-offs; and 7:40 a.m., to be announced.

• Wednesday — 6:40 a.m., Julia Keville is the early morning song bird; 7:15 a.m., Kathy Smith, the Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival Queen is the guest; and 7:40 a.m., registered nurse Norma Lewis talks about clinical hypnotherapy.

• Thursday — 6:40 a.m., to be announced; 7:15 a.m., Tom Funk, chief archaeologist of N.C. Historic sites, with details on historic plantation house Somerset Place on the shores of Lake Phelps; 7:40 a.m., the guest is home economist June Carr.

• Friday — 6:40 a.m., to be announced; 7:15 a.m, the plant doctor; and 7:40 a.m., Mary Smith, director of REAL Crisis Center, is the guest.

Hospitality House

WASHINGTON — Kay Currie was on site to tape a celebration being shown on today's "Hospitality House" show, airing from noon until 12:30 p.m. over WITN-TV, Channel 7 Washington.

The celebration is that of the 20th anniversary of the Galleon Esplanade at Nags Heads on North Carolina's Outer Banks. Guests appearing today on Kay's show are George Crocker, owner of the Esplanade and also of "By George" Restaurant. Kay and Crocker are first shown on the patio of the firm's courtyard, then move inside.

Here, the scene is a mini-fashion show presented by Margie White, who has been at the Esplanade for the past 19 years as fashion coordinator. Six models show summer sun-wear including bathing suits.

In the final segment of the show, Mike Kelly, manager of "By George" joins the other guests. They tour the restaurant which is decorated in a whimsical mode borrowing from Spanish, African, Greek and Mediterranean motifs.

Pot Painting

The demonstration of anti-fouling paint on crab pots which was originally scheduled for July 15 in Bayboro was rained out and a new date has been set. The demonstration will be held July 29 at Lowland Marine Supply Company in Bayboro from 1-5 p.m.

Please call 726-0125 or 745-3792 if coming. The service is being offered by North Carolina Sea Grant Marine Advisory Services to North Carolina Crabbers. There is no charge.

17 Arts Organizations Are Grant Recipients

Seventeen arts organizations across the state are recipients of Arts Service Organization and Salary Assistance grants from the N.C. Arts Council, a division of the N.C. Department of Cultural Resources.

Announcement of the grants come from Gov. Jim Hunt and Sara W. Hodgkins, secretary of Cultural Rsources.

Arts Service Organization grants go to membership organizations which represent particular disciplines, such as crafts, painting or theater. The organizations typically offer programs which assist artists and other arts groups, several hold annual conferences and publish newsletters.

"These statewide groups do a fine job keeping the communication going among North Carolina's atrists," said Mary Reagan, executive director of the N. C. Arts Council. "Helping them is an important part of the Arts Council's effort to strenghten arts programs across the state," she said.

The following organizations received Arts Service Organization grants:

Ths Association of Symphony Orchestras of North Carolina, based this year in Winston-Salem, received $1,700 for publication of a newsletter and sponsorship of a conference. The association encourages sharing of resources among its 12 member orchestras.

The N.C. Association of Arts Councils, based in Winston-Salem, received $11,700 for general operating support. The association sponsors an annual conference and assists more than 90 local arts councils with fund drives and other concerns.

The N.C. Theater conference, based in Winston-Salem, received $1,595 for its annual convention. The conference's six divisions represent theaters of all kinds, including Black, children's, college and university, community, secondary school and professional.

N.C. Fiber Arts, based in Greensboro, received $800 for operating support. A relatively new organization, Fiber Arts encourages the appreciation of fiber work as an art form.

Thirteen organizations received salary assistance grants, which are designed to strengthen administration of the arts. Salary administration grants went to:

• Charlotte Printmakers Society, $8,000;

• Catawba County Council for the Arts, $6,000;

• Craven Community Arts Council, $6,000;

• Fayetteville Little Theater, $6,000;

• Associated Artists of Winston-Salem, $4,453;

• Marcia Plevin Productions of Winston-Salem, $8,000;

• Little Theater of Gastonia, $4,000;

• High Point Arts Council, $7,043;

• Haywood County Arts Council, $4,100;

• Onslow County Arts Council, $3,000;

• Person County Arts Council, $7,600;

• Pitt-Greenville Arts Council, $7,600; and

• Scotland Arts Council, $3,300.

For details about Arts Service Organizations and Salary Assistance grants and other programs of the N.C. Arts Council, contact the N.C. Arts Council, 109 E. Jones St., Raleigh, 27611; telephone (919) 733-2821.

Playwright Workshop

A playwright's workshop for local persons interested in writing play scripts will be held beginning at 7 p.m. Wednesday at the home of Catherine Rhea-Darby, 1806 E. Sixth Street.

All playwrights and other interested persons are invited to attend.

Houston Ballet Wins 5 Medals

HOUSTON, TEX. — Houston Ballet won five medals at the International Ballet Competition in Jackson, Mississippi, June 20-July 3 — two gold, two silver, and one bronze, along with a special juror's award for best couple.

Janie Parker won the gold medal in the women's division and Ben Stevenson, artistic director, won a gold medal for choreography.

Dancers William Pizzuto and Li Cunxin both won silver medals, and Rachel Jonnell Beard won a bronze medal.

Work Will Soon Be Completed On The History Of Pitt County

HISTORY ARTICLES . . . on Pitt County have been researched and written by Dr. Joe Congleton, along with his wife. With Congleton is the book's coordinator, Elizabeth Copeland, and at right, Mrs. LaRue Evans, assistant to Congleton.

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

"People are really eager to see the publication of the history of Pitt County," said Elizabeth Copeland, retired Sheppard librarian and the person who has acted as coordinator for the project since its inception over a year ago.

"November is the due date of publication, and believe me, we're working full steam ahead on the final review and proofing process," she noted.

The Hunter Publishing Company of Winston-Salem, a firm that specializes in publishing city and county histories, is undertaking publication of the approximately 600 page, large format, illustrated hard cover book. The price of the book, once published, will be $45 per copy. From now until before publication, the advance purchase price is $35. (Orders can be arranged by calling Ms. Copeland's office at 752-2934, extension 303 between 10:30 and 5 daily on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays.)

"All of us involved in this project are tremendously pleased with the response from the public in contributing material," Ms. Copeland said. "In the family history section, we received a total of 1,045 family histories. Most of these are by writers living in Pitt County. Of course, some people now living in other places whose families originated in Pitt County have contributed family histories."

The historical section of the book, which will reflect Pitt County's changing history from pioneer days to the county's present, is being edited by Dr. and Mrs. Joe Congleton. "They're doing a terrific job," Ms. Copeland commented. "These articles require a lot of research and writing, it's truly a labor of love."

Ms. Copeland also praised the efforts of Mrs. LaRue Evans, a retired teacher from Ayden who has been a faithful assistant to Congleton. "And our proofreaders, a group of volunteer people, have really dedicated themselves to lots of hard work in the proofreading cycles.

First, there were long sessions of proofing and correcting the original stories prior to submitting them to the publisher. Now, in the second stage, volunteers are proofing the galley proofs against the originally corrected versions. "More than 700 of the articles in galley proofs have been proofread, and there's still about 260 to go," Ms. Copeland pointed out. "The next step is to return the galleys with photographic cuts indicated, and after that we receive page galleys to check out. That will be the final stage before publication."

Ms. Copeland admits she's as excited as the waiting public to see the book. She admits too it's been a real challenge and great fun, but that it will be nice to see it completed.

COSTA MESA, Calif. (UPI) — The South Coast Repertory will open its 1982-3 Mainstage Season with the American premiere of Irish playwright Bernard Farrell's comic satire of labor mismanagement, "All in Favour Said No!", Sept. 13-Oct. 26. It will be followed, Oct. 26-Dec. 3, by the West Coast premiere of Jim Leonard Jr.'s "The Diviners." The Second Stage season will open, Nov. 3-20, with Harold Pinter's "Betrayal."

Need To Know

All visitors to the North Carolina coast should be aware of a few of the State's "fishing" laws. These are the rules which assure that the State will always have a good supply of seafood.

A person may do something as seemingly innocent as pick up and keep a clam or a scallop and be on the wrong side of the law. Although the offender will probably receive no more than a gentle reprimand, it could be embarrassing and could spoil a vacation day.

The Division of Marine Fisheries offers the following rules to watch for: Clams may be taken any day of the week between sunrise and sunset. Minimun size is one-inch thick shell. You may rake a bushel without any kind license. Watch for orange signs proclaiming polluted water. Oyster season is closed during May, June, July, and August. Scallop season is closed during May, June, July, and August. Crabs have to be five inches across (from tip of spike to tip of spike).

If you use any kind of net other than a dip net, check first with a fisheries inspector. Some areas near inlets are closed during summer months. You may use only one crab pot per person on a dock or pier. More pots might be possible if the site is within a designated crab pot area. All nets, other than dip nets, could be subject to regulation. A hand seine, for example, has to have a 1¼ inch stretched mesh. Effective October 1, a cast net may be used in coastal fishing waters, including closed shirmping areas, to take no more than 100 shrimp per day.

Any boat used in gathering seafood species, even a small boat to get you and your net somewhere, requires licensing — except for gathering a bushel of oysters in season.

Fishing is generally free of regulation considerations, except when a net is used. There is no hook and line license required. Anglers may fish all the time. Flounder have an 11-inch minimum size limit. Striped bass (rockfish) have a minimum size limit of 12 inches. No number limit is set on stripers except in sections of Neuse and Trent rivers above New Bern

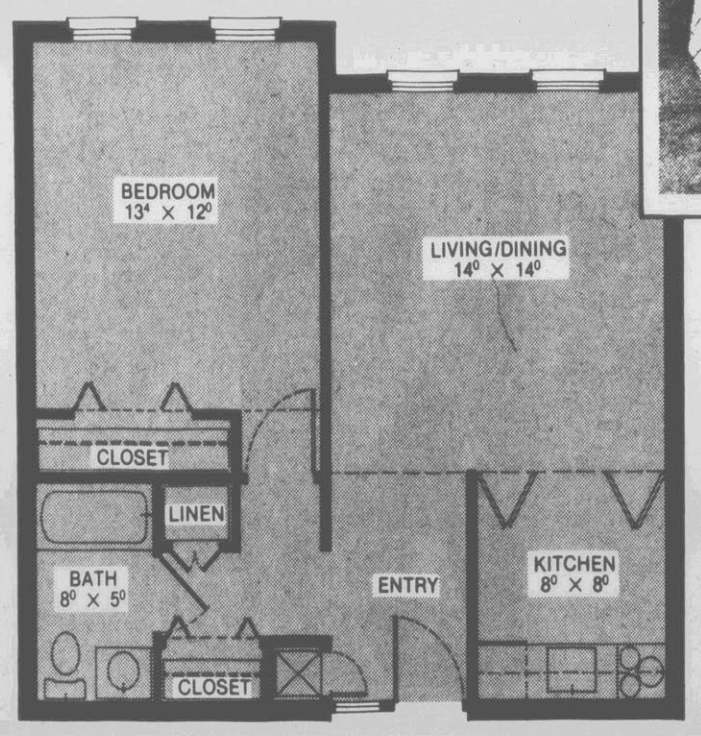

A few areas of brackish waters require a fresh water fishing license issued by the North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission. No license is required to gig flounder unless you sell them. Sea turtles (and their nests and eggs) and porpoises are protected.

A cosatal fishing regulation booklet is available free from N. C. Division of Marine Fisheries, P.O. Box 769, Morehead City, N.C. 28557. A list of fisheries law enforcement officers in the various coastal communities and their phone numbers are included in the booklet.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — SAND DUNES AND SUN ALLURE CASUAL VISITORS ON VACATION.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: X equals E.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF
1982 Tribune Company Syndicate, Inc

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—In an effort to thwart our winning the rubber, my opponent made a bid which I doubled for a set of one. On the next hand, she again overbid, this time doubled, down two. The same thing happened on the third hand. We finally got the bid and closed out the rubber on the fourth hand, and as a result, we won a fairly substantial rubber.

I told the overbidder that, had she been my partner rather than my opponent, I would not have taken kindly to her bidding. She claimed that what she was doing was proper strategy. Is she correct?—Mrs. Evelyn Mark, New Haven, Conn.

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)

A.—Many years ago, when I was just getting started in bridge, there was a player with the same proclivities in our rubber bridge game. My favorite tactic was to get vulnerable with a partscore, and thereafter simply sit back and double my opponent every time he got too high. Even if he eventually "won" the rubber, the cost was staggering.

The art of sacrifice bidding is a delicate one. To go into detail would require much more space than is available to me here. Suffice to say that sacrificing recklessly can prove to be expensive.

For instance, suppose that your opponents are vulnerable. They bid a game against which you are sure you can sacrifice for no more than down two tricks. Naturally, the opponents will double and that will cost you either 300 or 500 points, depending on your vulnerability. Which is the sounder action: to save when you are vulnerable or not?

Strangely enough, your sacrifice is sounder when you are vulnerable, even though it costs you an extra 200 points. Why? When you are not vulnerable, the opponents are still a 3-to-1 favorite to win the rubber, whereas with both sides vulnerable, you have an even chance.

That does not mean that you should never sacrifice when you are not vulnerable. But be wary of sacrificing with abandon just because it looks "cheap." If you settle your game in coin of the realm, as do most of us, you will soon find that adopting such tactics will make your wallet a lot lighter.

Note that the foregoing refers to rubber bridge. At duplicate, each hand is a separate "mini-competition" where your aim is to score better than the rest of the field playing in your direction. There it could be right to sacrifice on every hand if you can be sure that you are giving up fewer points than what the opponents could make if they bought the hand.

Q.—Would you like to play duplicate with me sometime? I really would get a kick out of it and my wife would probably flip.—M.R., Hastings, N.Y.

A.—Thank you for the invitation, but it's a long way from California to New York for an evening of bridge. Besides, I would not like to be responsible for any harm that could come to your wife when she flipped!

Send any questions for this column to: Charles Goren and Omar Sharif, care of this newspaper. Each week a prize of a copy of the new "Goren's Bridge Complete," a $9.95 value, will be awarded for the question judged the best received.

Charles Goren and Omar Sharif personally cannot undertake to answer all questions submitted.

"The Man in the Iron Mask," the subject of an Alexander Dumas novel, actually existed. A political prisoner of Louis XIV, the unidentified man was constantly required to wear a heavy mask made of black velvet reinforced with bone.

Life As It's Lived

Visit To Grandma

By GAIL MICHAELS

Last week after my mother-in-law had called to ask if Meg could visit with her, I was actually worried about hurting Meg's feelings. I had to concentrate on curbing my own delight before I could stop whooping long enough to tell her the joyous news.

"Now let me get this straight," she said. "I'm going to Nana's without you or Daddy or Zachary, and maybe I'll go to the beach while I'm there, and I'm going to fly on the airplane to see Grandmommy, and you're going to pick me up at her house."

"Yes. Isn't that lovely?"

"How long will I be gone?"

"About two weeks," I answered, oozing guilt because I was so excited when she was obviously worried about the length of time she would be away from home. "But it won't be that long."

"I know it won't be that long," she sighed. "Don't you think they might let me stay longer?"

After six weeks of uninterrupted discourse with Meg, I was not certain I would sound believable, but I tried. "I'd miss you too much if you stayed longer."

She patted my arm. "I know you'd miss me, but I'm sure you can bear it, and I do think Grandaddy could use my help in the garden for at least another week.

So much for guilt. The next few days were spent in preparation. "If I'm going to the beach," Meg promptly informed me, "I must have a new bathing suit. My old one is practically ragged."

She wanted a bikini, but we settled on a one-piece with spaghetti straps and a wide band of flowers printed across the front. "Just like the movie star's," she remarked with approval.

I had to wonder what star she was referring to, considering that "E.T." is the only movie she has seen recently.

Anyway, we had to buy sunglasses to match, and then we had to haggle over the clothes we were going to pack. She wanted to pack the cut-offs and the Smurf t-shirt. I wanted to pack her new sundresses.

In the end we compromised. We packed everything except the three-foot-long inflatable airplane that she felt certain would not survive if left within Zachary's domain.

Meg was so excited that she sat in one place by the front door with her suitcase for two hours before she was supposed to leave. I took this rare opportunity to give her a few last minute instructions. "Now you have a good time and remember to behave for Nana and Grandmommy. Absolutely no arguing, do you hear?"

She was matter-of-fact. "You know I always behave for Nana and Grandmommy."

"Well at least I've taught you that much," I said.

I couldn't resist the obvious question. "If that's so, why don't you behave that nicely for me?"

She looked up at me and shrugged. "Because Grandmommy and Nana have to want to have me, and you've got to take me for better or worse.

Baby Can Go With You Safely On Vacations

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

When Howard and Sandra Weinberg of New York go sailing on their boat, 2-year-old Brett comes along. "We've been taking him on all our vacations since he was 2 weeks old," said Mrs. Weinberg.

Seven-month-old Kelly hasn't slowed down her parents, Barbara Sleeper and Bob Citron, either. The Citrons, writers and consultants who travel for a living, often to remote locations, have simply taken their daughter along. Kelly has logged about 70,000 miles with her parents to such outposts as Machu Picchu in the Andes and Mount Kilimanjaro in Africa.

The Citron and Weinberg families are part of a tradition that seems to be growing — traveling for pleasure or business with a baby in tow.

Indications are that nearly half of vacationing American — 44 percent — are taking the children along, according to figures obtained by Samsonite Travel Advisory Service. It is not known how many of those children are infants. But American Baby Magazine says reader comments and letters indicate more Americans are traveling with very young children.

The trend is reflected in the greater number of products designed specifically for traveling with an infant. According to James Fine, a marketer of infant and juvenile furnishings, such products have been on the increase in recent years.

It was the folding umbrella-type stroller that started the present trend, he said. Consumer acceptance of the strollers which appeared on the market about 10 years ago was so immediate and strong that it became evident there was a need for products to make traveling with a baby easier.

Fine cited at least four additional product categories currently available. They include: sling carriers which enable a parent to cradle a very small baby to the chest, side or back, leaving the hands free; portable cribs; portable seats that attach to any table; and hand-operated food grinders that turn restaurant food into baby food quickly right at the table.

Also available are a variety of gadgets such as an inflatable baby bath and a changing pad that folds up into its own small envelope.

The secret to successful traveling with a baby is being prepared for as many eventualities as possible, said Barbara Sleeper.

"We always have a carry bag packed with disposable diapers, a change of clothes, baby wipes, bibs and a cloth diaper for spreading out or mopping up." The bag stows under a seat in an airplane. Also part of the kit is a portable stroller and a baby backpack made especially to transport an infant.

Sandra Weinberg found travel aids such as a food grinder, pouch carrier and portable crib invaluable when her son was younger. "I discovered it was actually easier to take him along when he was an infant than it is now," she said.

Tips for traveling with a baby include the following: Travel with a few small sturdy toys and about a dozen disposable diapers. You may arrive at your destination after stores have closed. Try to time train, bus or airline travel times to a baby's natural sleeping pattern. That way, the child will sleep on the way.

Basics to bring along include a pouch carrier, a collapsible stroller and a child seat that can be attached to any table. This is especially useful for travel in foreign countries where high chairs may not be readily available in restaurants.

Place all medications and liquids in plastic containers to avoid the danger of spills and breakage, and if the baby must take any prescription medications, obtain a copy of the prescription before leaving home.

If traveling by plane, give the baby a few sips of water from a bottle during takeoff and landing. This relieves any discomfort in the ears as a result of air pressure changes.

ON THE HOUSE

In fact, three of them already are in existence. The first, located in southeastern Massachusetts, has 2,300 square feet of space, with the main living quarters on a concrete floor and with two bedrooms and a bath on a second level.

How does it generate its own electricity? Via photovoltaic cells, already in use in various places in the world, including a radio station in Ohio, a lookout tower in a California forest, water pump stations along the Nile in Egype, and two villages in Saudi Arabia.

Photovoltaic cells are solid-state devices which generate electricity instantly when they are hit by sunlight. They are silent, non-polluting, have no moving parts to wear out or maintain and can be mounted on a roof, only a few feet away from the point of use. They are made of silicon, which is refined, then made into slices no bigger than fingernails. The silicon is treated to have positive and negative poles, like a battery.

Invisible particles making up sunlight are called photons. These photons strike the positive side of a cell and dislodge electrons in the silicon. The electrons flow through a wiring system as electric current and then return to the cell through the negative side. The electric current continues automatically as long as the sun shines. When there is no sunlight, other factors take over to conserve and distribute the stored sunlight.

Steven Strong, president of Solar Design Associates of Lincoln, Mass., which designed all three photovoltaic houses, says 500 square feet of the cells produce a peak output of 4.5 kilowatts of electricity on a sunny day. That is more than the house requires, so the surplus electricity is sold to the local utility and then bought back at nights and on cloudy days.

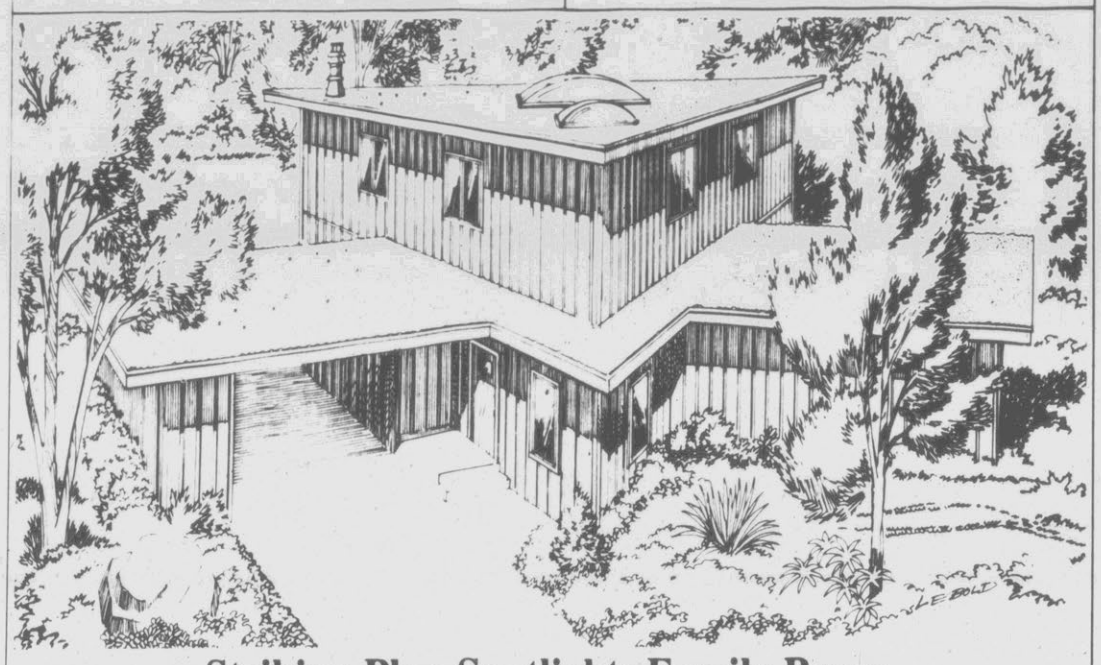

What makes the system work are energy-conscious features and efficient appliances. Earth-sheltering conserves heat in cold weather and helps cool the house when it is hot. The north side of the house is earth-bermed, except for the front entry area, and there are 18 inches of earth on the roof. The earth, 12 inches of fiber glass and 6 inches of rigid foam insulation give a total R value of 50. A special system combines exterior insulation and a maintenance-free exterior finish to produce R-30 walls. Four-inch concrete floors, finished with quarry tile, store excess heat during the day and re-radiate it at night. Add the super insulation to the earth-sheltering and continuous floor-to-ceiling glass on the south, as well as overhangs to block out the summer sun, and the house is said to maintain 70 degrees the year round with little or no backup heating or cooling.

The photovoltaic cells and solar domestic water heating system are mounted on the south-facing roof of a service wing that houses a two-car garage, laundry room, pantry, mudroom and workshop. In addition, the house has a solar greenhouse for food production and a waste recycling system.

Why isn't this type of house springing up all over the country? Because of price, which already has dropped drastically from $1,000 a peak watt to $10 a peak watt today. Experts in the field say that within 10 years the price might dip below $1 a peak watt, which they say would put it within the practical range and cheaper than conventional sources.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find much valuable material in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $1.50 to this paper at Box 5, Teaneck NJ 07666.)

PLAN YOUR HOME — The Beaconview

Striking Plan Spotlights Family Room

By Jerry Bishop

Accessible from all three sides, the triangular family area serves as the focus of the Beaconview, a three bedroom contemporary plan.

Ample living space, plus such amenities as skylights and circular stairway, make the Beaconview a design that can be built as a vacation retreat or a year-round family home. While it includes no formal living areas, the plan will appeal to people who favor a relaxed style of living.

Innovative and eye-catching, the angular exterior exhibits vertical siding and a flat roof punctuated by skylights to absorb natural light. Inside, the creative design climaxes with a triangular living area, overlooked by an interior balcony from the upper level.

Entry is from the carport area and directly into the family living area. Up-to-date in concept, the room melds an efficient kitchen and dining area with an informal activity center. Sliding glass doors expand the room outward to the patio and bring additional light to the interior.

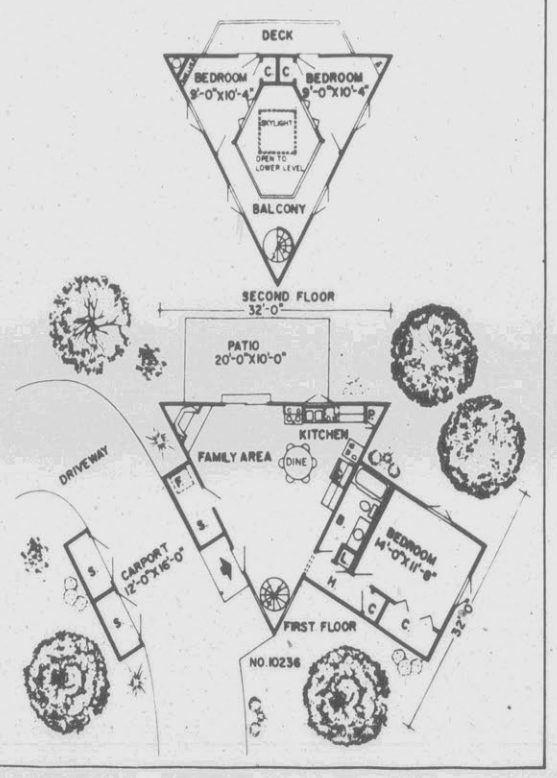

An important aspect of the triangular design used in this plan is that it manages to avoid wasted corner space. Careful planning fills the corners with desirable features: a kitchen pantry, wood-burning fireplace, and circular stairs. A utility and storage closet edges the room and forms one wall of the carport.

Set at right angles to the family area, the master bedroom merits a wing of its own and total privacy. Two closets furnish the room, which adjoins a full bath and linen closet.

Up the circular stairway, two more bedrooms overlook the lower level and enjoy access to a deck. Besides being attractive, the balcony arrangement permits the large skylights to brighten living areas as well as the upper level.

Here's the Answer

Q. - I am going to put up plywood paneling, attaching the panels to an existing wall. I intend to use paneling adhesive, but I am not sure how the adhesive should be applied. Is it necessary to glue the entire back of each panel and can I use the adhesive only on parts of the panel?

A. - Apply a continuous bead of the adhesive about one inch from each edge of the panel and two beads on 16-inch spans on the back. You will have to use shims or blocks to keep the panels snug while gluing. Another way is to apply the adhesive to the entire back of each panel, but it should be spread with one of those saw-toothed spreaders.

Q. - We have a recessed wall area in our main bathroom. I would like to spruce up the old bathtub with fiber-glass materials I have heard about from time to time. Can you tell me something about the installation procedure?

A. - Your best bet is to buy one of the special fiber-glass materials kits sold at building supply stores. It will have everything you need to make the installation, including the proper adhesive. It would take too much space to tell you about the method of installation, but the kit includes detailed instructions.

Q. - We had a discussion recently about solar energy. I am 81 and seemto remember a solar-energy house was on display at the Chicago World's Fair sometime during the Depression. No one at the gathering agreed with me. Was I right?

A. - You surely were. It was called the Crystal House. It was a model house designed by architects George and William Keck and utilized glass windows and walls as heat collectors. Later residential designs in the solar-energy field all had some relation to the Crystal House, including some built by the Kecks.

Q. - In making an attic into two bedrooms, where should the insulation go? I expect to use insulation batts.

A. - Between the collar beams; between the sloping rafters, leaving air space for ventilation between the roof deck and the insulation; between the studs of knee walls; between the joists of the floor outside the living space; and in dormer walls and ceilings.

(Details of insulating an attic are explained, along with sketches, in Andy Lang's booklet, "Saving Money by Insulating," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How P.O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column. Individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.)

Family Reunion

The Laughinghouse and Sneed families held their 10th annual family reunion Saturday and Sunday at the Flamingo Lounge and the Holiday Inn. The reunion was hosted by the North Carolina Chapter of the Laughinghouse-Sneed Family Reunion. Approximately 250 persons attended.

Saturday's affair was highlighted with a pig picking and a talent-fashion show at the Flamingo Lounge. Sunday's activities included a worship service at Saint Peter's Church, a fellowship banquet and a memorial service.

Keynote speakers for the banquet were Bernadette G. Watts, home extension agent of Durham County, and Henry Parker Jr., State Treasurer of Connecticutt. Music was presented by Johnny Wooten of Greenville and the Mideastern State Choir.

Q. I want to plant some hybrid cabbage. Would it be better to plant it as a spring or as a fall crop? (S.U., Henderson)

A. Almost all heads of hybrid cabbage mature at one time. This is a problem especially in the spring when the heads split if they are not cut soon enough. This is not as serious a problem in the fall because growth is slower at the point of harvest and consequently less rupturing occurs. Check the seed packet to know if the variety you intend to plant is hybrid.

Q. There are webs full of caterpillars in my pecan tree. Are these gypsy moth caterpillars? (L.G., Princeton)

A. No. They are fall web worms and are in the same family as the familiar wooly bear caterpillar which, according to folklore, predicts the severity of the winter. There are two generations of caterpillars each year. What you are seeing now is the suumer generation. A more numerous fall generation appears in August. Often the two generations overlap and gardeners do not notice separate generations; they only know that the web worm problem gets worse. Web worms can be controlled by spraying a pesticide such as Sevin on the web and the foliage around it because the caterpillars come out of the web to feed on the green leaves.

Q. I am tired of mowing so much grass and would like to start some natural areas in my yard. Any general suggestions on how I might start? (B.D., Charlotte)

A. Many natural areas end up as disaster areas. This is usually because the person doesn't spend enough time preparing them. The first thing that you must do is to get rid of the grass that is there. You can do this mechanically or by using a herbicide such as Roundup. Don't expect established grass to be completely smothered out just because you dump mulch on it. Another thing that you need to do is to plan the location of your natural grass areas carefully. Natural areas in the middle of the yard look "unnatural" and become another obstruction around which to mow.

Q. Should I attemp to refertilize and maintain my spring cucumber vines? (L.G., Goldsboro)

A. No. Many vegetable crops were drowned by heavy rains. Short season crops like cucumbers, squash and snap beans should be replanted. In Eastern North Carolina seeds should be planted around August 1. Long growing plants like tomatoes, eggplants, and okra should be worked out and refertilized using a fertilizer containing nitrogen and potassium. Any complete fertilizer such as 8-8-8 or 10-10-10 will do.

Prices Doom Old Hotel

HONG KONG (AP) — Hong Kong's oldest hotel, an elegant matron of a bygone era which survived bitter fighting during World War II, has finally succumbed to a new enemy — soaring land prices.

Nestled securely at the foot of a wooded hill and set in a picturesque tropical garden, the Repulse Bay Hotel, which commands a panoramic view of Hong Kong's most popular beach of the same name, will give way to three luxury apartment blocks.

The miniature Italian-style garden of the hotel, its high-ceiling suites, its spacious lounge with a cozy fireplace and its veranda-restaurant with overhead whirling fans all conjure up the charms of Victorian days.

With wreckers moving in with bulldozers to pull down this tourist attraction, the 62-year-old hotel, like several other historic buildings, has fallen victim to the logic of economics.

Although the two-story hotel with a daily room rate at about $95 U.S. still managed to make profits mainly from its restaurant, apartment rents in that area can be astronomical. Monthly apartment rents in Repulse Bay areas range from $3,400 U.S. to $6,800 U.S.

Hotel manager Werner Katte said nostalgically that it was simply no longer profitable enough to run the 30-room hotel with 175 staffers despite its nearly 100 percent occupancy for most of the year.

The decision to demolish the hotel triggered angry accusations that property developers are greedy and show no concern for historic monuments. But it also attracted large numbers of nostalgic customers.

"Suddenly, the number of clients more than doubled. In one day alone recently, we served over 500 covers compared with the usual 100," said headwaiter Joe Lam, who had been with the hotel for nearly 20 years.

Brian Wilson, chairman of the Antiquities Advisory Board responsible for preserving historic monuments, said the Repulse Bay Hotel had little historic significance.

"The feeling about the hotel tends to be more sentimental — from those people who have had meals there or think of its wartime association," he added.

A favorite among royalty and artists, the hotel has hosted a stream of international celebrities, including Prince Don Carlos of Greece and Princess Sophie, who stayed there during their honeymoon.

REACH Group To Be Formed

Reassurance to Each (REACH), a support group for families of the emotionally disturbed and mentally ill, will be introduced Monday at 8 p.m. by the Mental Health Association of Pitt County at Planters National Bank on the corner of Third and Washington Streets.

REACH is designed to help family members deal with guilt feelings, frustrations, financial burdens or new family responsibilities because of his emotional involvement with a family member suffering from mental illness.

Barabar Muse, associate executive director of the Forsyth County MHA and director and founder of REACH in Forsyth, will be featured panelist.

The panel discussion will also include Scott Luce, social work laison; Linwood Walters, associate minister at Immanuel Baptist Church and Dr. Sam William, a private psychologist.

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, JULY 25, 1982

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A good day for pleasing others and letting them know how fond you are of them. The evening could bring unexpected changes that require tact and self-control. Show patience.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Ideal day to put your finest points across to others, but be sure not to argue. Smile more and get excellent results. Be wise.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Study your immediate surroundings and make plans for improvement. You can easily gain a most cherished aim now.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) A good time to attend the services of your choice and express love for others. Avoid the social in the evening.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Make plans to have more abundance in the future. Consult an influential person for the advice you need.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Ideal day to do the things that you enjoy doing the most. Take time to visit a relative you haven't seen in a long time.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You can concentrate and make the right decisions during the early part of the day. Home is the best place to be tonight.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Being with good friends today can bring forth many new ideas and could result in mutual benefits in the future.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) If you confer with a business expert, you can obtain the information you need. Plan how to improve your image.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Avoid arguments with family members and maintain harmony at home. Make a fine impression on neighbors.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Listening to the suggestions of others can be most helpful now, but steer clear of a troublemaker. Be kind.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) A day when you can easily gain your personal aims. Study your property well and make plans for needed repairs.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will require much love and affection in order to best express the personality. There could be much fame in this chart, particularly in the field of politics and entertainment. Give as fine an education as you can afford.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, JULY 26, 1982

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Daytime delays and obstacles can exist in the early part of the day, so try to exercise patience for best results. Make plans to strive for a better performance in the future.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Be sure you don't act too hastily with higher-ups today or you could regret it later. Do less talking at a social affair.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Not a good day to make any radical changes you have in mind. Make new contacts with influential persons.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Be sure to keep promises you have made and gain the goodwill of others. Show more patience with loved one.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Come to a better agreement with an associate. Seek the truth where a civic matter is concerned.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) The week's new work requires all of your attention so don't go off on any tangents. Taking health treatments now is wise.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Changing conditions around you is on your mind but it requires more study before you do so. Save money for future use.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) A situation at home does not please you but don't become involved at present. Make plans to improve your invironment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) More care with the use of your money is wise now. Don't lose your temper with an associates who is in a bad mood.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Make plans to save money instead of spending it so lavishly. Talk with an adviser and obtain the advice you need.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) There is tension in the wind and you may not be able to accomplish much in the morning. Avoid a group affair.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Not a good day for outside activity, but fine for conferring with a business expert about the future. Relax at home tonight.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) One you have known for a long time could inadvertently give you the wrong information, so depend on your own good judgment.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will act well in time of emergency, so direct the education along troubleshooting lines for best results. The latter part of life will be much better than the former. Don't neglect ethical training early in life.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Saez Will Crown New Miss Universe

It isn't all that far from Caracas, Venezuela, to Lima, Peru, but for Irene Saez Conde, Miss Universe 1981, it has been a journey of better than 100,000 miles. And she is still en route.

Rest assured, however, that Miss Conde will make it to Lima in time to crown the new Miss Universe. Viewers can watch the crown change hands Monday, July 26 (9-11 p.m.), when CBS broadcasts "The 1982 Miss Universe Pageant.

It was just over a year ago that the beautiful 20 year old was named Miss Venezuela in her home town of Caracas. Barely two months after that, she became Miss Universe 1982 in New York City.

Since then, Miss Conde has traveled the world as Miss Universe, earning more than $150,000 in cash and prizes along the way. Her travel schedule has been so extensive, in fact, that 10 months into her year as Miss Universe, she needed a new passport — her old one had no more room left for visas.

After seeing so much of the world, is there any one place she considers her favorite?

"You mean after Caracas? Perhaps, New York," she said. "But all countries and cities are so interesting. Each city has its own flavor and charm; one may be mysterious, another exciting...but if I had to live in one place, it would be Caracas."

Although Miss Conde is clearly a world-class beauty, her ties to her homeland remain very strong. Once she surrenders her Miss Universe crown, she intends to return to Venezuela, where a one-year television series awaits her. She also hopes to continue her studies, intending eventually to pursue a career in civil engineering.

Whatever she ultimately decides to do, Miss Conde knows where she wants to do it.

Although she admits that she will be a little sad to see her year as Miss Universe come to an end, she is eager to meet the next Miss Universe, and even has a few words of advice ready for her.

"Enjoy every minute of it; take every opportunity the experience offers; and be prepared to work long, sometimes hard hours. It's not easy. It's wonderful being Miss Universe, but it's not easy."

Perhaps, it is the memory of that hard work that prompts Miss Conde to add: "Before my television career, or my studies, do you know the very first thing that I'm going to do when it's all over? Sleep! For at least three months!"

TERRI UTLEY (left), Miss USA 1982, and Irene Saez Conde (Miss Universe 1981) will appear in "The 1982 Miss Universe Pageant," to be broadcast from Lima, Peru, Monday, July 26 (9-11 p.m.) on CBS.

Mexico's Stability Threatened

THE ABC NEWS "Closeup" documentary unit examines the economic and political challenges facing Mexico in "Mexico: Times of Crisis," airing Sunday, July 25 (8-9 p.m.). Mexico is in the midst of a crisis that some say is the most serious in the country's history.

Mexico today is in the midst of a crisis that some say is the most serious in the country's history. Despite its enormous oil wealth, Mexico faces critical economic and political challenges that threaten its internal stability as well as its relations with other countries, most notably the United States.

The ABC News "Closeup" documentary unit will examine Mexico's growing dilemma and explore whether its current systems can survive new pressures from virtually all sectors of its society in "Mexico — Times of Crisis," airing Sunday, July 25 (8-9 p.m.).

"Although Mexico was long ignored by the United States, it is now a major concern of American policy," said Pamela Hill, executive producer of the "Closeup" unit. "To understand why this change has occurred, we felt it was important to investigate Mexico's internal problems, its one-party political system and the possible threat of a spillover in violence from its Central American neighbors."

As recently as last March, former Secretary of State Alexander Haig warned that the Central American crises could pose "a very fundamental threat to the security of Mexico" in the "very predictable future." Although some officials disagree with this warning, others, including John Gavin, the U.S. Ambassador to Mexico, believe the threat is real.

"Mexico — Times of Crisis" looks at a country that today is on the brink of bankruptcy. Its foreign debt has soared to $70 billion. The Alfa group, the country's largest corporation and the flagship of private enterprise in Mexico, is in deep financial trouble. Inflation is running at 60 percent. The peso is losing its value at an unprecedented rate. Unemployment is rapidly rising, and one million additional Mexicans are entering the job market each year with no prospects for work.

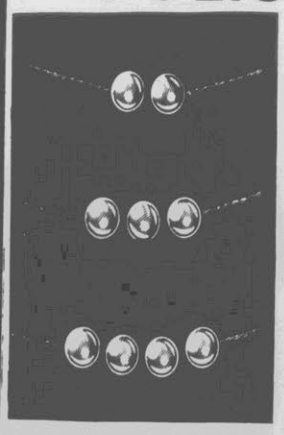

Politically, Mexico faces even more problems. Disputes between peasants and landowners over land in Mexico's rural areas frequently lead to conflicts and violence; the old labor structure is being challenged; the wealthy are rushing to invest in other countries; and refugees from Guatemala are streaming across Mexico's southern border. Also, there is mounting concern over the possibility that violence from the country's Central American neighbors could spill over into Mexico itself.

Butkus Scares Ichabod

JEFF GOLDBLUM stars as the rail-thin schoolmaster Ichabod Crane, who arrives in the seemingly quiet hamlet of Sleepy Hollow and is harassed by tales of spooks, spirits and the dreaded headless horseman in "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow," to be rebroadcast on NBC's Monday Night at the Movies, July 26 (8-10 p.m.).

Mention the name of Dick Butkus, and any football fan immediately will conjure up thickening visions of the former Chicago Bear middle linebacker who terrorized running backs and quarterbacks for nine years before chronic knee injuries hastened his retirement.

Now, Butkus reverts to similar form as he plays the brawny Brom Bones, who tries to frighten the timid schoolmaster Ichabod Crane with tales of the dreaded "Headless Horseman," in "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow," an adaptation of Washington Irving's classic tale, to be rebroadcast as NBC's Monday Night at the Movies, July 26 (8-10 p.m.).

"I was only vaguely familiar with the story," said Butkus. "But I found Brom kind of like me, playing jokes on people. Of course, I'm more subtle."

"When I arrived on the set for 'Sleepy Hollow,' they all said, 'We thought you were bigger than that!' I mean, I only stand 6'3" and weighed about 250 lbs. then (he has since trimmed to 230)."

Although some of Butkus' TV credits include guest spots on "The Rockford Files," "Emergency," "Police Story," "Fantasy Island" and "Wonder Woman," he concentrates more now on his diverse business interests.

These ventures include tending his 30-acre fern farm, and operating a management agency for athletes and a sports marketing company. He also is excited about his partnership as an independent producer for Nautilus Productions, a videotape operation that supplies educational and how-to programs for cable TV.

Butkus readily acknowledges that football made all of this attainable — even if it extracted a painful physical toll in the process.

"Playing football was something I always wanted to do since I was a kid," he said. "It opened up a lot of possibilities for me that I wouldn't have done otherwise. But I had problems with my knee for the last three years and I knew the handwriting was on the wall. It was a blessing in disguise. It was a great thing while it lasted, but then it was time to move on.

"There's a good possibility that I might have to get an artificial knee. They've already removed half of my kneecap. I've had four operations and I can't run on it."

As unfortunate as Butkus' problems are, it could be worse — ask the Headless Horseman.

Howard's Answer

On "ABC SportsBeat," Howard Cosell commented on the probable answers to the problems of drug abuse in the NFL. "The constructive answer to this problem lies in a broad based program of education, detection, treatment and rehabilitation," said Cosell. "The NFL must vastly expand its program of education and detection. The NFL and the players association should enter a joint venture to purchase an institute where football players can, with privacy, get special treatment for special rehabilitation for special skills. The NFL means too much to people in this country for the current image to persist."

Wife Fantasizes

Susan Saint James stars in "Surprise Surprise!," a new motion picture-for-television now in production in Los Angeles for broadcast on CBS.

Also starring in the romantic comedy are John Rubinstein, James Murtagh and Adam West, with special appearances by Dee Wallace, and Brian Dennehy as Phil Zakarian.

Miss Saint James stars in the drama about a woman who has grown tired of her 15-year marriage and fantasizes about being married to three different men. Murtagh portrays her husband, West, Rubinstein and Dennehy are the objects of her dreams.

Michele Will Tell

Q: I would like to know who the young boy is who plays Jane Wyman's grandson on "Falcon Crest." Also, why have they taken "Falcon Crest" off TV? MARGARET BAXLEY, WAGRAM, N.C.

A: Handsome Lorenzo Lamas stars as Miss Wyman's grandson, Lance Cumson, on "Falcon Crest." He gets his good looks naturally — his mother is actress Arlene Dahl, his father is actor turned director Fernando Lamas. Fernando has directed his son in an episode of "Falcon Crest." Asked if it was difficult to be directed by his father, Lorenzo replied, "No, he's been directing me all my life." The 6'2", 175-pound actor is single and lives in Hollywood.

Q: Could you please give me some information on the man who portrays Mike Bauer on the "Guiding Light"? Also, where can I write to him? TRINA GABRIEL, SHERRILS FORD, N.C.

A: Don Stewart joined the cast of "Guiding Light" in December, 1968, as attorney Michael Bauer. Don was born on November 14, 1935, on Staten Island, New York, the son of a doctor and a nurse. At age 3, the family moved to Norfolk, Nebraska, and he grew up on a farm there. He was educated at Norfolk schools and attended Hastings College in Nebraska. Don became the youngest aircraft commander in the Stategic Air Command at 24, putting in some 1,800,000 miles flying jet bombers. Today, he often flies his own plane when making guest appearances throughout the country. Although we all know his tremendous acting abilities, Don is also an accomplished singer. He once understudied Robert Goulet in Broadway's "Camelot." Don is married to former nurse Sue Tremble. They have two children and reside in New Jersey. Write to him in c/o "Guiding Light," CBS-TV, 51 W. 52 Street, New York, N.Y., 10019.

Q: Could you please tell me who plays David Gray on "General Hospital"? What else has he played in? NICKIE WHITE, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

A: A newcomer to daytime television, Paul Rossilli appears as David Gray on "General Hospital." A veteran of commercials and repertory companies, Paul's first acting job came at 17 when he appeared in the feature film "Midnight Cowboy." He was also featured in the film "Serial" opposite Martin Mull.

Kerry Will Join 'Real People'

In the normally specialized business of television reporting, Kerry Millerick has done it all — cameraman, editor, producer, writer and on-air personality. Starting this fall, Millerick will bring his talents to NBC's "Real People" (Wednesdays, 8-9 p.m.) as a roving reporter.

A native of New York, Millerick went on to study filmmaking at the University of Miami. He started as an intern cameraman at WTVJ, the CBS affiliate in Miami, and later became a staff reporter, with several of his feature reports appearing on the CBS Evening News with Walter Cronkite.

"Bored and depressed" with the daily grind of local news reporting, Millerick put together a showcase tape of some of his humorous features. The tape impressed Van Gordon Sauter, the current President of CBS News, who was then general manager of KNXT-TV in Los Angeles.

From 1978-80, Millerick wrote and produced his own lighthearted features for an afternoon news show at Sauter's station. That led to a job writing and producing story segments for the CBS series "That's My Line."

Commenting on his upcoming assignment with "Real People," Millerick said, "What's great about George Schlatter (the producer) is even though he has a certified hit show, he's not content to sit on it. He always seems to be poking around for new ideas and new ways to do things. That's why he hired me, and that's what I hope I can provide."

Millerick is looking forward to the creative freedom that Schlatter has afforded him. "Since this kind of freedom is almost impossible to find in this business, the only thing I can figure is it must be God's way of rewarding me for being nice to my mother," he said.

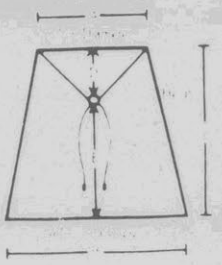

ROVING REPORTER Kerry Millerick has been added to the cast of "Real People" (Wednesdays, 8-9 p.m.) on NBC. Millerick will be writing, directing, and producing stories.

Not Many Returns

When asked to play tennis ace Hana Mandlikova in a charity tournament last year, actress Hillary Bailey, who recently joined "The Doctors," thought she'd "make a fair showing." Instead, she "hardly got the ball back."

Creatures Are Nearly Human

An impassioned scientist on an uncharted tropical island, who miraculously transforms fierce animals into almost-human creatures, makes a desperate attempt to reverse his process and turn a handsome shipwrecked sailor into a jungle beast, in "The Island of Dr. Moreau," to be rebroadcast as The ABC Friday Night Movie, July 30 (9-11 p.m.).

IT'S A CLASSIC example of beauty and the beasts as Barbara Carrera poses with the half-human half-animal creatures in the film "The Island of Dr. Moreau," to be rebroadcast as the ABC Friday Night Movie, July 30 (9-11 p.m.).

In this horror tale, Dr. Moreau (Burt Lancaster), driven out of every respectable medical society in the world, has settled on a tropical isle where, with the companionship of a former prostitute named Maria (Barbara Carrera), he is gradually turning horses, tigers, hyenas and wolves into a grotesque breed he calls "humanimals."

The pathetic creatures with which Dr. Moreau is populating the island are his "near-misses" as he attempts to play God. In time the arrival of a shipwrecked sailor (Michael York) threatens to end his experiments and destroy his relationship with Maria.

"The Island of Dr. Moreau," which was originally released theatrically in 1977, also stars Nigel Davenport as Montgomery and Richard Basehart as the Saver of the Law.

In assessing the actors, New York Times critic Vincent Canby concluded: "Miss Carrera is so beautiful, she's a sacred mystery of life all by herself."

This film was the vehicle in which Miss Carrera shot to international attention. It marked her third leading role in a major production after she abandoned a highly successful career as a high fashion model.

Miss Carrera's first film was "The Master Gunfighter," produced by Tom "Billy Jack" Laughlin. After spotting her picture in a French magazine, he immediately flew her to Hollywood for a screen test. They didn't look any further, Miss Carrera said modestly.

Her second outing as a leading lady was opposite Rock Hudson in "Embryo," a demanding role in which she had to age scores of years.

The Nicaraguan native came to the United States at age 11. She received her formal education both in this country in convents and in Europe. She speaks fluently in five languages.

Psychic Powers Lead To Trouble

A beautiful model's discovery that she has psychic powers leads her on a nightmarish search for a mass murderer, a search in which she becomes the hunted, in "Mind Over Murder," to be rebroadcast as the CBS Late Movie, Friday, July 30 (11:30 p.m.). Bruce Davison and Christopher Cary star.

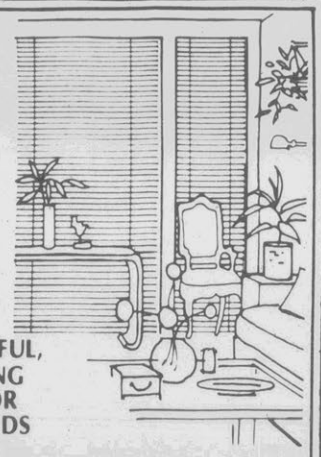

In the story, Deborah Raffin portrays Suzy, a carefree model and dancer, who suddenly and unnervingly realizes that she can sense future events (precognition) and will objects to move (psychokinesis).

Her boyfriend remains skeptical of her mysterious abilities, even after the tragic crash of a commerical airliner, which she had foreseen. When he learns that the crash was not an accident, but was the result of a bomb planted on board, she uses her psychic powers to identify the killer, and thus becomes his next deadly target.

Competition Will Be Tough

Craig Stadler, winner of the 1982 Masters tournament, tops the list of expected entrants in the $350,000 Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic. The final round of this PGA event will be broadcast on NBC, Sunday, July 25 (2-4 p.m.), from the Kingsmill Golf Club in Williamsburg, Va.

Stadler, nicknamed "the walrus" because of his imposing stature and bushy mustache, is currently the leading money winner of the 1982 PGA Tour, having collected over $300,000 in earnings. In addition to winning the prestigious Masters in a sudden-death playoff with Dan Pohl, Stadler has captured the Joe Garagiola Tucson Open and the Kemper Open.

Another torrid competitor on the 1982 Tour has been Bob Gilder, who will also be vying for the $54,000 first prize at the par-71 Kingsmill course. In winning the Westchester Classic last month, Gilder recorded an astounding 261 (23 under-par) — the lowest 72-hole score on the Tour in seven years.

Although the victory at Kingsmill was the sixth of Mahaffey's Tour career, he probably would be far past that figure if he had been healthy every year. He has been the victim of some unfortunate accidents since joining the PGA in 1971.

Physical problems hit him for the first time at the 1976 PGA Championship at Congressional. He suffered a hyperextended tendon in his left elbow. It gradually became worse toward the end of the year, and it practically was impossible for him to compete early in 1977. Mahaffey admitted that he wondered whether he would ever play the Tour again.

In the spring, he received the go-ahead to play, but before he had a chance, he fell off a ladder in his garage and broke a finger. He wasn't able to rejoin the Tour until July, and made money in only 5 of 15 starts that year.

Mahaffey was completely healthy again by mid-1978, and enjoyed a six-month stretch when he played stupendously — winning the PGA Championship and the American Optical Classic.

He was named to the World Cup team that played in Hawaii, and he won medalist honors. When 1978 dawned, Mahaffey started off with a bang and captured the Bob Hope Desert Classic.

However, within a month's hard luck struck again. Trying to blast out of a bunker at Pebble Beach, Mahaffey's clubhead tore into the heavy sod on the lip and came to a sudden halt. The result was that all of the tendons on the back of the hand and wrist were ripped. It was three months before the Texan could return to the Tour.

Rogers doesn't sing praises of D.C.

FOR CONGRESSWOMAN MARY ROSE OAKAR (D.-Ohio)

Why doesn't the Government charge a flat percentage rate to all workers covered by Social Security, whether one makes $2,000 or $2 million a year? — S.S., Herrin, Ill.

● The Social Security Administration does charge a flat percentage rate but there is a cutoff line. Presently, the percentage rate is 6.7, based on a wage base of $32,000. If a person's income exceeds the wage base, his or her withdrawals will only reflect a $32,000 limit. Without the $32,000 cap, after retirement someone making $100,000 a year would receive much more money in Social Security benefits than he or she actually needs. Social Security was set up as supplemental income for retirees, not as their sole income.

FOR SYLVESTER STALLONE, star of Rocky III

You look very macho and muscular in the movie posters. Is it all really you? — H.M., Aurora, Ill.

● I can pat myself on the back and say those powerful biceps and flat tummy are a result of my own work. To get into that kind of shape, I lost 40 pounds and went into intensive training for nine months. Several top pros helped me condition to become the lean, mean, fighting machine I play in the movie.

FOR SUSAN SULLIVAN of TV's Falcon Crest

● I have never heard his name cross her lips, not even during political discussions. Fact is, no matter how curious the cast is, no one would dare to ask her. In short, Jane doesn't like to and won't talk about the President. And we respect her for it.

FOR RAY C. TREMONT, director, Volunteers of America (V.O.A.)

What is the purpose of your organization? —D.B., Long Island, N.Y.

● V.O.A., founded in 1896, is a Christian service organization which provides material and spiritual assistance to those in need. Staffers and volunteers operate day-care, housing, alcohol rehabilitation and other programs in over 150 communities in the U.S.

FROM THE "ASK" EDITOR

QUOTES: Country singer Kenny Rogers, star of the movie Six Pack, defines Washington, D.C., as a city of gamblers: "It's a place where some politicians wait to be discovered, and others are afraid they might be.". . .One of John McEnroe's longtime girlfriends states: "When we first met, at 16, he rarely said 'please' or 'thank you.' Now he's mellowing, softening, calming down. He just needs a bit more work here and there, around the edges."...At a recent party, Maureen Stapleton confided, with a grin: "What I lack in style, I make up for in brute force."...Peter O'Toole, star of My Favorite Year, recalled his early years: "I was in repertory in Birmingham and kept muffing lines. The director, Tyrone Guthrie, said, 'Stop! Peter, go home. Come back tomorrow morning — and astonish me.'". . .NEWS: While the European critics had hot praise for Warren Beatty and his movie Reds, they were only lukewarm about his offscreen looks. His wrinkled, ill-fitting corduroy suits didn't get rave reviews....Bill Wyman, 40, who's been with the Rolling Stones since its formation in the 60's, has kept a diary since the rock group was just pebbles. He's now turning those notes into a book....Dr. Edgar Mitchell, one of the 12 astronauts to leave footprints on the moon, is off to Turkey on a hush-hush expedition. He's seeking biblical artifacts reputed to be older than the Dead Sea Scrolls. Head of Human Resources in Palm Beach, Fla., he says: "Digging into the earth for our past is as important to our future as digging in the lunar landscape."...BIRTHDAYS: The moment family-law expert Marvin Mitchelson turned 54 last May, he felt much younger than he did on his 53rd milestone. "I don't like the odd years," explains the attorney. "The even ones make me feel far more youthful.". . .In the upcoming The Return of the Soldier, Glenda Jackson, 46, plays a woman half her real age. "I'd loathe going through my 20th birthday again," she says. "It was a boring and unhappy time. I was plump in the wrong places and had pimples."... Actress Molly Picon recently turned 84 and recalled her most precious birthday greeting, from late husband Joseph Kalish, who wrote: "To the girl who gets older every year, but younger each day."

PRO Paul B. Carpenter, California State Senator, chairman, Senate Majority Caucus

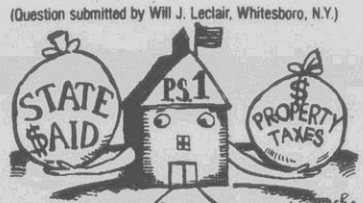

Because schools are so very important, adequate funding for education is vital. Yet, since Proposition 13 passed and similar measures were enacted elsewhere, it's nearly impossible to raise new revenues from the property tax. State funds are the only available alternatives. State funding is important for another reason: People must know there are good schools wherever they need to live. Schools everywhere must have adequate funds, regardless of variations in property-tax returns.

PRO AND CON

Should School Funding Rely More on State Aid than on Property Taxes?

(Question submitted by Will J. Leclair, Whitesboro, N.Y.)

Send questions of national significance, on a postcard, to "Pro & Con," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022.
We'll pay $10 for those published.

CON Edward N. Fadeley, Oregon State Senator, chairman, Ways and Means Committee

Community control of public education requires that local financing continue to be a significant portion of the dollars supporting the decisions made in each community. Nationwide, about half of school money is nonlocal already. Going further risks state takeover, uniform salaries and statewide strikes. It's better to equalize educational opportunity by reforming the property-tax system so that educational expenditures per pupil are relatively the same in "poor" or "rich" districts.

COVER STORY

The Nineteenth Summer of Kristy McNichol

Maybe she's no little darling on the set, but then Kristy McNichol never intended to be America's sweetheart. All she wants is to work hard—and play hard.

Theo Westenberger © 1982 Gamma-Liaison

Kristy in Pirate: "I don't know if I'm sexy."

It was the start of a photographic session in a New York City studio and Kristy McNichol, on orders, stepped behind a partition, yanked off her designer blue jeans and red pullover sweater and slipped into something sexier. Once in front of the camera, she dutifully slid the new garment an inch or two down her shoulder to reveal bare, youthful skin, then screwed her face into a series of semicoy, sultry poses.

But something still wasn't right. The broad, toothy, trademark grin — that nationally recognized signature of America's favorite tomboy — was missing, and her lips were clenched protectively tight, as if concealing some silly little secret. The photographer was starting to get antsy, and finally Kristy deposited a big wad of chewing gum into a tissue.

This is Kristy McNichol — on a bridge between the spunky gum-chewing teen-age tomboy of the TV series Family and a new adult look that Hollywood, that image-manufacturing industry, has yet to fully define for her. These are her very last days as a teen-ager — she will be 20 on September 9 — but already she is a certifiable Hollywood legendette. She won an Emmy as Buddy in Family, and has torn through a succession of good Hollywood parts, such as the reluctant virgin in Little Darlings and the daughter of an alcoholic mother in Neil Simon's Only When I Laugh.

Now 20th Century-Fox is about to release The Pirate Movie, with Kristy in the lead as a comic, romantic singing heroine. The film is based loosely on the Gilbert and Sullivan comic opera The Pirates of Penzance — rock singer Linda Ronstadt played the lead in the New York stage revival.

At the moment, Ronstadt has nothing to worry about. But Kristy's star is on the rise. As former 40's child star Margaret O'Brien says, McNichol is an actress with few rivals in the business today.

It wasn't always so. For years, Kristy McNichol was just one more anonymous Hollywood kid with only two discernible assets — a toothpaste commercial-grade smile, and a mother with a determined dream: to get her cute, all-American-looking kids (Kristy and brother/actor Jimmy McNichol) into show business.

The big push for her to go out on commercial auditions began when she was 8 years old. "I said, 'Why not?'" Kristy remembers, a bit wistfully. "I wasn't against it. I didn't know any differently.

"I didn't plan when I was young to be an actress," she adds, her voice rising slightly in anger. "I wanted to be a doctor. I just kind of grew up in the business."

What this has meant is that Kristy McNichol, the all-American kid, never had much of a chance to be a kid herself. She began work on Family at 12, and today she's a 19-year-old pro going on 30: "I didn't really have a childhood. It's not that I don't care. It's just that, if I didn't have it, what can I do about it? I can't change it. I can't be a child now.

"People who are 40 and 50 talk to me, and say, 'You're so old when you're only 19.' They don't understand it. But what has made me 30 is working with older people all my life."

It's not that she didn't try to be a teen-ager. "She used to bring friends to the set to have someone her own age to talk to," remembers actor Gary Frank, who played Kristy's brother Willie on Family. "She needed someone to confide in. She was quite afraid of some of the things that were happening to her so rapidly."

Playing the role of Buddy didn't help when it came to sorting out the paradoxical role of child-woman. Hollywood was insistent on marketing Kristy as a child ("They wanted to keep me really young — in case the show went on for 10 years. It was like they didn't want me to grow up"). But it also demanded that on the set Kristy be an adult. It was a tough time for a teen-ager who sometimes just wanted to have a little fun.

Recalls one former child actor who guest-starred in a Family episode when Kristy was only 13: "She used to hop into carts [golf carts used for transportation around studios] and drive off," he says. "I'd say, 'Kristy, what are you doing?' She'd say, 'Just hop in!' The director would go crazy, screaming, 'Where are they?' Then Kristy would open up cars at the studio and sit in them, wishing she had a key so she could drive away. She was rebellious and arrogant back then."

Hollywood wasn't amused by her independent streak. The producers of Family cast Quinn Cummings — then a big contemporary talent — as the adopted orphan Annie Cooper, in part, says one of Cummings's representatives, "to keep Kristy McNichol in line. Kristy felt that her own interests were as important as those of the company." The production company, this source says, made plans for the time when they might have to eliminate Kristy's role altogether. "They wanted Quinn as a stopgap in there."

That never came to be. Family went off the air in 1980 and Kristy decided to try to make her mark in feature films. Through it all she hasn't lost her independent streak. "I have a strong drive to get out and have fun," she says vehemently. "I'm impatient. . . .I want to get my hands into everything. But I don't get into things like 'my generation.' I try to stay away from the women's movement, detach myself from the political world. My desire is to work hard and play hard. I'm taking time off between movies and I want to do a lot of playing."

Men, she says unabashedly, are her ideal play-

Ron Galella

mates, because "they're like little kids — they don't grow up." Her current boyfriend, Joey Corsaro, is a hairdresser and a playmate who likes to surf, boat and ski. (They met on the set of Little Darlings when he was called in to correct a "terrible perm" she had.)

All this playing doesn't mean Kristy is afraid of paying her dues in front of the camera or accepting the travails of stardom. "Everyone I meet wants to be an actor or actress," she says. "Everyone wants to be a star. It's a lot harder than they think. You're living for the world. The world owns you — which I accept. If you want privacy, you stay home sometimes, or you go to an island. Everybody is always coming at me."

Her ambition? She would like to cut a record album and do more films. "I would love to do comedy," she says excitedly. "If I could wake up tomorrow and say I wanted to do a movie with somebody, it would be Dudley Moore. But I wouldn't want to be Bo Derek. She doesn't get to get into a lot of the fun. I'm 19, and I don't feel that I want to be sexy and suave. I don't look in the mirror and get sexy. I don't even know if I am or not. On the street, all the time, I get approached by parents who say, 'I wish my daughter was like you.' All I say is, 'Thank you very much.'"

She is not certain how she would feel if the questions stopped coming and the attention ceased: "You can't say that it's going to go on forever, because you really don't know. I don't want to say that if it ended I would freak."

Would Kristy McNichol want her daughter to be like her? "If it was my child, I would probably not want it to be in the movie industry," she says.

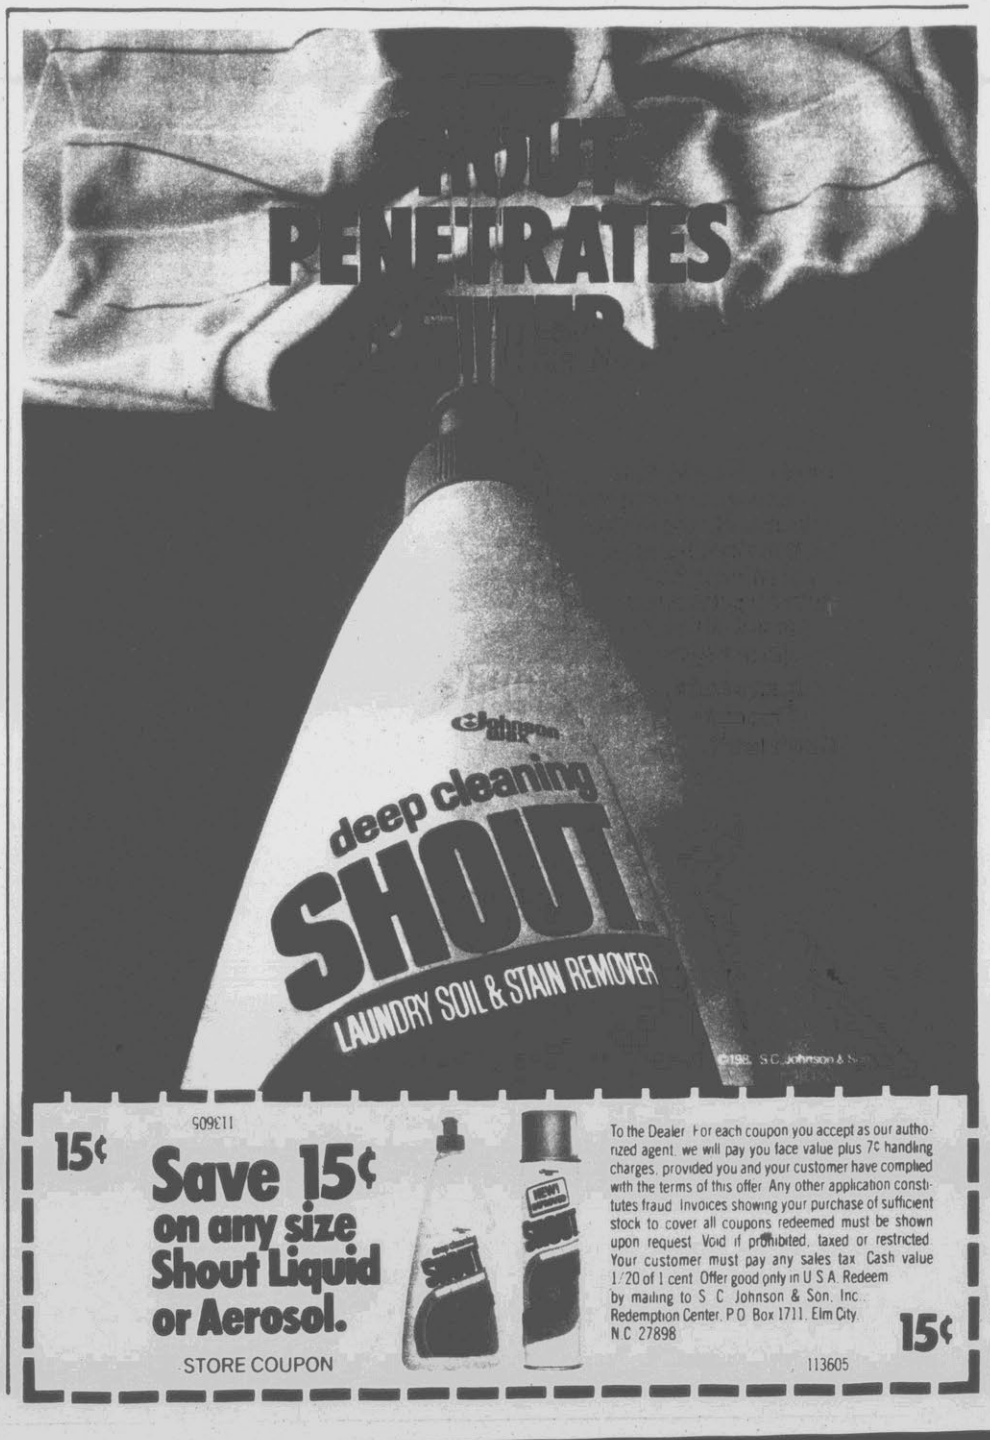

"She had her gum in her mouth all the time," recalls Ken Annakin, director of The Pirate Movie. "We had a constant battle. She would hide it in her cheek. I'd say, 'Come on, you've got the gum!' And she'd say, 'No, I don't!' Then I'd make her open her mouth and give it up. Perhaps she needed the gum with her as comfort. Well, that was her only sign of insecurity."

Or perhaps the gum, hidden deep within her jaw, is a symbolic link to a virtually nonexistent youth. Annakin remembers another scene from the movie. Kristy was wearing a heavy suit of armor, her face covered by a closed visor. Just as they were about to roll the cameras, a forceful but very young voice peeped forth from behind the visor:

"Will someone please take my gum?"

Annakin was only too happy to oblige. FW

Can You Afford Two Weeks in Paradise?

By Andrea Pawlyna

With hotel rates on the rise and vacation homes out of financial reach for many people, resort time sharing has become one of the newest rages to sweep across the country.

Time sharing works like this: You buy a specific one- or two-week slice of a resort condominium — say, the first two weeks in February at a Miami beachfront condo — and you get a guaranteed vacation there year after year. And if you'd like a change of scenery or season after a while, you can swap places with someone else.

National TimeSharing Council of ALDA

Since 1975, time-sharing sales have zoomed from $50 million to $1.3 billion last year. An estimated 350,000 Americans now own a piece of a vacation home at about 600 condominium developments nationwide.

One advantage of dividing up a home among many buyers is that the purchase price for each person is only a fraction of what it otherwise would be. Typically, one-week time shares sell for about $6,000, but prices can vary considerably depending on the resort, its location and the season.

Another plus is that yearly vacation costs remain fixed with a time share, providing buyers with a nice hedge against inflation.

"Time sharing has gained tremendous consumer acceptance in just a short period of time," says Victor Parra, a spokesman for the National TimeSharing Council of the American Land Development Association.

Basically, there are two types of time-sharing plans: ownership and right-to-use. Ownership, as it is defined in this context, means that consumers purchase their unit outright, complete with a deed filed at the county courthouse. Owners may sell, bequeath or mortgage their share, as well as take small tax deductions. Right-to-use is more like a long lease in which buyers are entitled to occupy a unit for up to 60 years, depending on the contract, after which it reverts back to the developer. You pay no taxes nor are tax deductions allowed.

If you buy, real-estate brokers recommend that you do not pay more than 10 times the rate charged for a week at a comparable hotel room or rental apartment in the area. If you opt for a right-to-use, divide the cost by the number of years in the contract; the amount should be less than the rent you'd expect to pay.

Most time-sharing developments are affiliated with exchange networks that assist owners in making swaps. Fees for membership dues and annual swaps range from about $80 to $100.

While many time-sharing programs are highly regarded, agencies such as the Federal Trade Commission (F.T.C.) have warned consumers to beware of high-pressure sales tactics and misrepresentation on the part of sellers. At present, only a handful of states have specific statutes that provide safeguards for buyers.

"As with any purchase, be sure you understand what you're getting into before you sign on the dotted line," cautions Alan Schlaifer, an F.T.C. attorney.

A Few Additional Tips

- Review all documents or have your attorney check them over for you. Be sure everything promised orally is written into the contract.
- When comparing time-share costs with that of a rental, be sure to figure in expenses, such as finance charges, travel costs, annual fees and maintenance charges. Last year, annual maintenance costs averaged about $150 (and these do rise).
- Know what your rights are if the developer has financial problems or defaults. Check your contract for a clause concerning "nondisturbance." The nondisturbance clause will protect you from claims by a third party against the developer.
- Buy from an experienced builder. FW

Cool Pasta Delights For Hot Summer Nights

By Marilyn Hansen

It's hot outside, and who wants to waste time in the kitchen? So beat the heat with our light, quick-cook pastas and delicious no-cook sauces. In minutes you'll be eating a scrumptious meal.

PASTA ROMANOFF

½ lb. fine spaghettini, spaghetti, or cappelletti
Boiling water
Salt
½ cup minced chives or green onions
1 tablespoon snipped dill sprigs, or 1 teaspoon dry dill weed
2 tablespoons white wine or tarragon vinegar
½ teaspoon Dijon mustard
¼ teaspoon salt
Several twists freshly ground black pepper
¼ cup peanut oil
1 cup sour cream
1 jar (4 ozs.) salmon caviar
Thinly sliced cucumber, lemon wedges, cherry tomatoes

1. Cook spaghettini in boiling, salted water according to package directions until the just-tender stage, about 5 minutes. Drain; rinse in cold water; drain well.
2. In large bowl, combine chives, dill, white wine vinegar, Dijon mustard, salt and pepper to taste. Blend in peanut oil, half of the sour cream and half of the caviar. Add spaghettini and toss lightly with two forks.
3. On individual serving plates, make a "nest" of the spaghettini mixture. Using a fork and spoon, twirl pasta around fork and lift to serving plate. Stand fork upright with pasta still around it, lift fork out gently and you'll have a nest.
4. Into the center of each nest, divide the remaining sour cream, top with remaining caviar and a small dill sprig. Arrange several cucumber slices, a lemon wedge and a few cherry tomatoes alongside.

Makes 4 servings

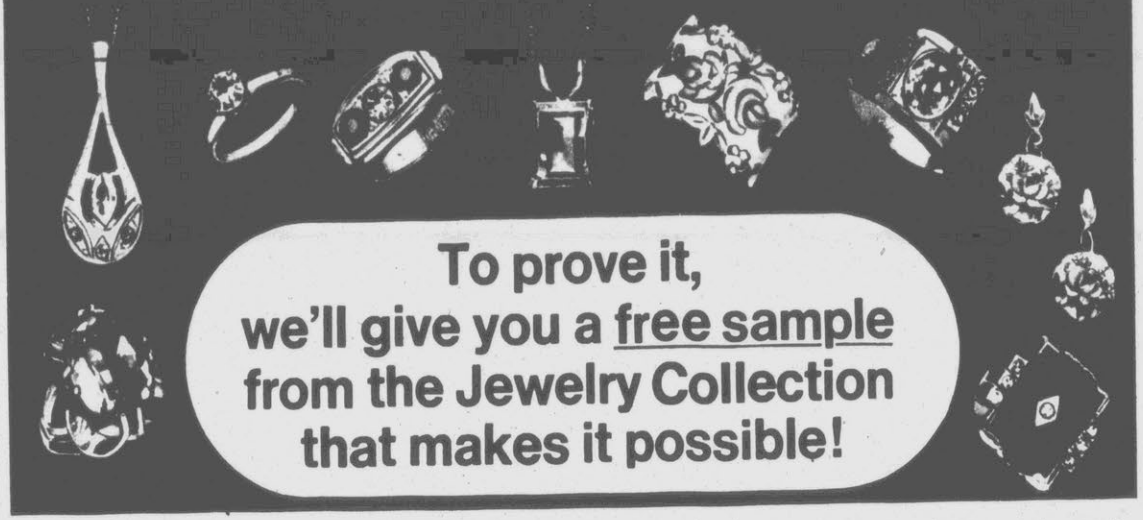

SHRIMP IN GREEN AND WHITE PASTA

¼ lb. spinach fettuccine noodles
¼ lb. fettuccine noodles
¼ cup vegetable oil
2 tablespoons olive oil
Several twists freshly ground black pepper
¾ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons white wine or tarragon vinegar
¼ cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese
½ cup sliced, pitted black olives
½ lb. fresh shrimp, cooked and peeled, or 1 can (4¼ ozs.) small, cooked, peeled shrimp
1 tablespoon minced parsley
2 eggs, hard-cooked and mashed

1. Cook noodles in boiling, salted water according to package directions, about 5 to 7 minutes. Drain. Rinse in cold water; drain well. Toss immediately with vegetable oil and olive oil.
2. Add pepper, salt, white wine vinegar and Parmesan to fettuccine and toss again. Allow mixture to come to room temperature, or follow next step right away.

Makes 4 servings

Sounds impossible, doesn't it? Well, it isn't. In fact, if you just mail the coupon below to us, we'll start you in this business one week from today . . . and we'll throw in a free sample to boot!

OVER 250 FAST-SELLING STYLES OF MEN'S AND WOMEN'S JEWELRY!

Merlite Industries, a famous name in Direct Selling for 30 years, has assembled an incomparable collection of the world's most beautiful jewelry: rings, watches, earrings, pendants, crosses, fashion accessories, gift items . . . all priced to sell and sell FAST.

There are dozens of styles featuring the fabulous Merlite DIA-SIM®, the man-made simulated diamond that's so brilliant, so hard, so blazingly beautiful that only a trained jeweler can be sure it's not a real diamond. Diamonds cost as much as $1,500.00 per carat . . . but YOU can offer your friends the amazing DIA-SIM for as little as $21.00 per carat, hand-set in a magnificent mounting!

In addition to the DIA-SIM, the Merlite Collection includes nearly every popular gemstone you can name, in either natural or high-fidelity simulated form: emeralds, rubies, opals, jade, turquoise and dozens of others. These exquisite stones are mounted in luxurious, designer-crafted settings of 10K gold fill, 18K heavy gold electroplate, and solid sterling silver. And even though Merlite Jewelry looks very, very expensive, retail prices start at just $6.00 . . . and most Merlite styles sell for $30.00 or less!

JUST SHOW . . . AND SELL!

If you're interested in making money – and we mean real money – here's your chance! Just show Merlite Jewelry to people in your area – friends, neighbors, fellow-workers – and we'll give you a 200% – yes, TWO HUNDRED PERCENT – profit on every Merlite item they order from you!

Think of it! When someone orders a $15.00 Merlite Ring from you, YOU keep $10.00 for yourself! When someone orders a $24.00 Merlite Pendant, YOU keep $16.00! Just show our jewelry, write up the orders, and put your profits in your pocket!

And by the way, that word "show" is important. Don't even try to sell Merlite Jewelry – because it isn't necessary! These lovely creations really do sell themselves – on sight – wherever you show them. Your only "problem" may be convincing your customers that you're not kidding when you tell them that such expensive-looking jewelry costs so little!

PEOPLE QUIZ

The Height Of Disrespect

By John E. Gibson

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. In crowds, tall people are treated more respectfully than people of shorter stature.

2. As a person's weight increases, his self-esteem diminishes.

3. Most medical students say they'd prefer attractive patients.

4. Most people would rather work for a man with a full head of hair than have a bald-headed boss.

ANSWERS

1. True. In an interesting study exploring this matter, investigators from the University of Missouri monitored the behavior of scores of male and female commuters in a large metropolitan area. They found that when they had the option of violating the personal space of either a tall or a short person, the commuters significantly preferred to intrude into the short person's space. The researchers also noted that this discrimination occurred for both male and female commuters, and that women invaded the space of the short commuters much more frequently than did men.

2. True. In a Utah State University study of the effect of weight gain on an individual's personality, social life and feelings of self-worth, investigators found that, "With increasing weight, both . . . men and women reported decreasing self-acceptance (lack of confidence and self-esteem), and high emotionality (more easily upset, more subject to both feelings of depression and elation)."

3. False. In a study at the University of Kentucky College of Medicine, students were shown photographs of hypothetical patients and asked to give the order in which they would see the patients in a University health clinic. The investigators found that the physical attractiveness of the patients had no significant effect on the medical students' responses.

4. False. A team of behavior specialists from East Tennessee State University explored this question in a study of the physical attributes job-seekers associated with an ideal boss or supervisor. The subjects felt that a good boss should look the part, be assertive, be a competent manager and be acceptable to others. As for his physical appearance, whether he had a luxuriant head of hair or was completely bald was not regarded as significant. They felt that what was inside his head was of far more importance than what was growing on top of it. FW

The Side Effects of Prescription Drugs

WHAT IN THE WORLD

By Eliot Kaplan

UNDOING THE TOWER OF BABEL

This week an estimated 2,000 people from around the world will meet in Antwerp, Belgium. They will all be using the same language, yet none will speak his native tongue.

That's because they will be attending the 67th annual convention of Esperanto, the universal language created in 1887 by Polish doctor Ludovic Zamenhof and now spoken by at least one million people in more than 100 countries. With only 16 basic rules of grammar and no irregularities, Esperanto is much simpler to learn than most foreign languages, says Cathy Schulze, editor of the Esperanto newsletter in the U.S.

The Bettmann Archive

Still, although 150,000 Chinese citizens recently applied for an Esperanto correspondence course (with only 30,000 openings), only a few thousand Americans speak the language. "A lot of countries want to teach it in their schools," Schulze told us, "but the U.S. could really make the difference."

And then maybe more of us could join the Esperantists this week in Belgium who, thinking toward 1983's convention, will say to one another in fond farewell, "Mi vidos vin venontjare en Budapest" — "See you next year in Budapest."

NOISY NURSERIES

In their hospital nurseries, some newborns are being subjected to noise levels equal to those in a factory.

Researchers recently observed the special-care facilities — for premature babies and other high-risk newborns — at Los Angeles County/U.S.C. Medical Center Women's Hospital, the largest obstetrical hospital in the U.S. They found that the abundance of both special equipment and personnel caused noise levels of roughly 75 decibels, or equal to the sound of traffic, with the noise sometimes approximating that of large machinery.

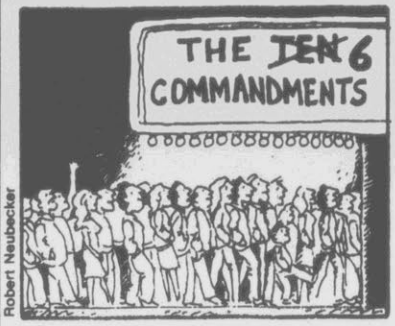

Mort Gross

One of the researchers, Dr. Joan Hodgman, a professor of pediatrics at U.S.C., told us that there could be a link between the noise levels and the high incidence of hearing loss found among premature newborns, and that the noise also may be contributing to the burnout often suffered by special-care nursery personnel.

ROCKIN' ROUND THE U.S.A.

Recently we ran an item mentioning a guide to country music radio stations around the country. So far, it's drawn well over 4,000 requests. Since then, we heard from Arthur Vuolo of Ypsilanti, Mich., who offers a complete guide to rock music stations around the U.S. He lists them by frequency, format (top 40, oldies, soul, etc.) and he arranges them by interstate, so you can figure out where to pick up your favorite sounds whether you're driving on Route 95 from Bangor, Me., to Miami or Route 80 from Berkeley, Calif., to New York City. To order, send 50 cents in coin to ROCKGUIDE, P.O. Box 219F, Ypsilanti, Mich. 48197.

Robert Neubecker

THEEND

When the movie Chinatown was shown on network TV last fall, it was shortened by a full 14 minutes to fit the time slot — yet not a single word was cut.

How? Well, since programmers felt the plot of the mystery was too intricate for conventional editing, they used a technique called time compression, which can speed up recorded pictures and sound by 20 percent without detection.

As reported recently in Science 82, time compression has also become quite popular with radio and TV advertisers, who like to squeeze a few extra words into their costly 30- and 60-second spots. And studies have found that people remember time-compressed commercials better than regular ones, perceiving time-compressed spokesmen as more knowledgeable and enthusiastic.

A BONE TO PICK

"He couldn't run for animal-control officer around here," doesn't quite have the same ring to it, but dog catchers would prefer the old saw reworded just the same.

"These guys just hate being called dog catchers," concludes Charles Owens, associate professor of psychology at the University of Alabama. He collared 50 animal-control officers to see what gives them headaches. It seems their biggest gripe is not snarling German shepherds, but humans, who generally offer up nothing more than contempt, and even an occasional gunshot.

Culver Pictures

On duty: Treated like a dog.

But by far their biggest cause of stress is having to put stray animals to sleep. Notes Owens, "To take the job, they have to love animals. But then they must kill them." He adds that as they prepare to perform euthanasia, many report headaches, upset stomach, muscle tightness and even an inability to interact with other people.

● IPSO FACTO! Thomas Jefferson, noting the divergent views of Congress in 1821, observed: "That one hundred and fifty _____ should do business together ought not to be expected." What seven-letter word (plural) is missing?

● Name Game! Identify an animal popularly associated with each name: 1. Mickey. 2. Kermit. 3. Smokey. 4. Elsie. 5. Snoopy. 6. Rudolph.

1. Mouse. 2. Frog. 3. Bear. 4. Cow. 5. Dog. 6. Reindeer.

● Sum Fun! Twice a one-digit number equals a certain two-digit number. Four placed at the end of that two-digit number increases it by 94. What is the one-digit number?

DEMONSTRATE X-RAY EYES!

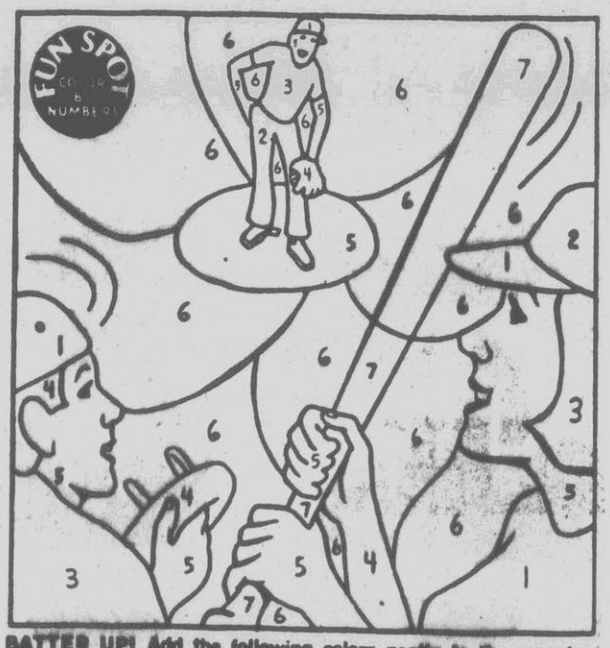

Fill a shallow bowl half full of water. Add a few drops of detergent to create some frothy suds. Ask a bystander to place a coin date-side up in the bowl below the suds.

Now, although the coin is hidden from sight, announce that you will "read" its date without touching or removing it.

CREATED BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: GALAN AND YUAN CHEN CROSS THE INDUS RIVER INTO INDIA. INDIA! NOT SINCE ROME HAS THERE BEEN AN EMPIRE SO VAST, SO RICH, SO CIVILIZED, SO BUSY. THE UNIVERSITY AT BENARES IS AMONG THE GREATEST IN THE WORLD. YUAN CHEN SPIES A SECT OF JAINS. "I HAVE HEARD OF THESE MEN," HE SAYS DELIGHTEDLY, SCRIBBLING IN HIS BOOK. "THEY LIVE A FRUGAL AND HOLY LIFE. WE SHALL PASS THE NIGHT WITH THEM."

THE JAINS HOLD ALL LIFE SACRED. THEY SWEEP THE PATH BEFORE THEM LEST THEY CRUSH AN INSECT, AND STRAIN THE WATER BEFORE THEY DRINK. THE JAINS HAVE BUILT A HOSPITAL FOR OLD AND INJURED ANIMALS AND THERE THE TRAVELERS REST THEIR WEARY BONES.

YUAN CHEN THOUGHTFULLY ORDERS A SIDE OF SALTED BEEF PREPARED FOR THE ESCORT BUT THE JINA, LEADER OF THE JAINS, INTERVENES: "THE STOMACH OF MAN IS NOT MEANT TO BE THE GRAVEYARD OF ANIMALS." HE OFFERS SOME NUTS AND LEAVES INSTEAD.

THEY DEPART FOR UJJAIN THE NEXT MORNING, BUT YUAN CHEN SOON CALLS A HALT. "TIME FOR THAT BEEF, NOW, MEN," HE SAYS. "I FELT LIKE A COW LAST NIGHT."

WITHIN DAYS THE HIGHWAY BECOMES A JUNGLE PATH. FEARFUL OF INVASION BY NEIGHBORING SCYTHIANS, THE EMPEROR HAS MADE ENTRY TO UJJAIN DIFFICULT. SUDDENLY GALAN'S ELEPHANT TRUMPETS IN TERROR. COILED IN THE UNDERBRUSH, A COBRA IS POISED TO STRIKE.
