TRUTH IN PREFERENCE TO FICTION

Declare A Fraud By Arafat

By The Associated Press

Israeli jets attacked the Palestine Liberation Organization's battered enclave in west Beirut for a fifth straight day today, as Israeli officials attacked PLO leader Yasser Arafat for "fraud" in a meeting with U.S. congressmen.

The Israeli jets made their divebombing run over west Beirut this afternoon, pounding the same targets hit in the previous four days' bombing around the PLO's headquarters.

The Israeli planes continued to foil the PLO's anti-aircraft missiles by releasing scarlet decoy balloons to divert the missiles.

There was no immediate count of casualties.

Israeli Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir called the document Arafat signed Sunday accepting "all U.N. resolutions relevant to the Palestinians" an "exercise in fraud and deception."

Arafat signed the statement for a group of five visiting congressmen. Rep. Paul McCloskey, R-Calif., said he thought the statement satisfied U.S. terms for opening direct negotiations with the PLO and urged the Reagan administration to do so.

The terms are that the PLO recognize Israel's right to exist and accept U.N. Security Council resolutions 242 and 338, which outline a settlement of the Middle East conflict under which Israel returns captured Arab territories and receives recognition and secure borders.

McCloskey said today the Arafat statement "is a recognition of Israel's right to exist. At least, so I interpret it."

But McCloskey acknowledged that Arafat had refused to make the document more specific "and he said that (resolution) 242 alone is not acceptable because it did not recognize the Palestinians, except as refugees without their rights. But taken in context with all the U.N. resolutions, he could accept it."

McCloskey said on Sunday that an Arafat aide had written on the back of the document a list of U.N. resolutions that presumably included 242 and 338. But when an Associated Press reporter who saw the backside of the document noted there was no reference to resolution 242, McCloskey said, "No, it's not (listed), but he (Arafat) kept saying all of them, including 242."

Other PLO spokesman disavowed McCloskey's interpretation. The PLO's U.N. observer, Zehdi Terzi, said in New York Sunday night that Arafat's endorsement applied to U.N. General Assembly resolution 181 calling for separate Palestinian and Jewish states.

The head of PLO's mission to the U.N. offices in Geneva, Daoud Barakat, said the document signed by Arafat does not represent a change in the PLO's position. "Arafat has said this a hundred times, but the Americans wanted it on paper," he said.

The Israeli Cabinet said the McCloskey-Arafat announcement "joins a long line of announcements in the past aiming only to obtain propaganda advantages."

And in New York, Israel's ambassador to the United States, Moshe Arens said McCloskey, "was trying to give artificial respiration to the PLO."

"I don't doubt that Congressman McCloskey was a little naive about the situation. He has in the past, to the best of my knowledge, been a supporter of the PLO, so maybe this is just in line with the sort of things he has been doing in the past," Arens said.

Arens said it was impossible to believe that the PLO would recognize Israel's right to exist.

Israel's ambassador to France, Meir Rosenne, noted in Paris that Arafat, head of the largest of the eight PLO factions, does not have authority to change the organization's charter, which calls for replacement of Israel with a secular Palestinian state.

But Egyptian president Hosni Mubarak said in a speech in Cairo that Arafat's statement was "a very good opening for a peaceful and good solution" of the Middle East crisis.

The State Department said it would study the record of the Beirut meetings, and the White House recommended "extreme caution" in reacting to it.

Pitt Demos Vote Again On Tuesday

Pitt County Democrats will take part in statewide runoff primary balloting Tuesday for two Court of Appeals judgeships, one of them involving a Greenville resident who is seeking to reverse the results of the June 29 first primary.

District Court Judge H. Horton Rountree of Greenville, who received some 19 percent of the first primary vote in his bid for one of the Court of Appeals seats, will face Winston-Salem attorney Eugene Phillips, the pacesetter in the earlier five-candidate race with about 40 percent of the total across the state.

Rountree, a former state legislator, easily outpolled Phillips in his home county as Pitt voters gave him a 7,699 to 1,234 vote margin.

The winner of the Rountree-Phillips runoff will be unopposed in the November general elections.

Also involved in a runoff for a judgeship on the state's second highest court will be Paul M. Wright, a Wayne County District Court judge and Raleigh attorney Sidney Eagles. The attorney finished a close second to Wright in a three-way first primary for the seat being vacated by Judge Robert Martin.

The winner of the Wright-Eagles runoff will face Republican candidate Betty J. Pearce of Greensboro in November.

Area voters tomorrow will receive only one ballot, containing the Court of Appeals candidates.

Margaret Register, supervisor of the Pitt County Board of Elections, said that only 12,205 people, or approximately 36 percent of the county's total voter registration of 34,308, voted in the first primary. Turnout statewide in June was less than 40 percent.

The State Board of Elections has said that a low turnout is expected in North Carolina tomorrow, with the possible exception of the 2nd District, where a spirited race for a congressional seat nomination has shaped up between H. M. "Mickey" Michaux Jr. and Nashville attorney I. T. "Tim" Valentine. Michaux is seeking to become the first black elected to Congress from North Carolina in this century.

All polling sites open at 6:30 a.m. and close at 7:30 p.m.

Area Tobacco Sales Will Begin Tuesday

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Area tobacco growers, who endured a turbulent summer that saw the very existence of the leaf-support program threatened and less than favorable weather conditions, will sell their first 1982 offerings Tuesday.

Local warehouses will launch the 92nd auction season of the Greenville Tobacco Market as 13 of the Eastern Belt's 17 market sites participate in first-day sales.

The Greenville Market, which opened last year with record averages, will have customary opening ceremonies tomorrow prior to the scheduled 9 a.m. auction activity. Gov. Jim Hunt and other North Carolina officials, including state Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham and marketing specialist John Cyrus, usually make Greenville a part of their Eastern Belt rounds.

The opening comes on the heels of a congressional battle that had the future of the state's top cash crop in doubt. Congress did give its approval to a revised price-support program that includes a grower assessment aimed at making the overall tobacco program self-supporting.

The average support price will be $169.90 per hundred pounds, which is lower under the revised program than initially forecast before Congress took action.

In addition to the troubled state of the price support program, farmers had to sit back and watch heavy rains hinder growing conditions and contribute to what industry analysts predict will be a lighter crop, although of good quality. Statewide, the flue-cured total is expected to be some 683 million pounds, down approximately 10 percent from 1981.

In Pitt County, where some 20,000 acres were planted, "things look real well" considering some problems, according to Leroy James, county extension chairman. James said that "overall things are looking real good right now" in spite of some Granville wilt that is showing up in spots around the county.

The extension official said some problems were encountered during the growing season with hail in scattered areas and "from a weight standpoint I feel our crop will be a little light" as a result of the heavy rains. The excessive moisture did not allow needed nitrogen to remain around the young plant long enough and some leeching has taken place, he said. James said "two or three farmers I've talked to said their tobacco just didn't cure out" but overall he feels "we'll still make a pretty good crop."

J. N. Bryan, sales supervisor for the local Tobacco Board of Trade, said the market will begin first-day sales will two sets of buyers. First sales will be at Farmer's Warehouse (set one) and New Independent (set two).

According to Bryan, the first set of buyers will be at Growers for the second sale, New Greenville for the third, Keel's for the fourth, and Raynor-Forbes & Clark for the fifth sale Tuesday. The second set will be at Cannon's for the second sale, Hudson's for the third, Star-Planters for the fourth, and New Carolina for the fifth opening day sale.

The sales supervisor observed, "Every warehouse firm in Greenville will have a sale every day during the season. Under the designation program farmers have designated the warehouse of their choice on the Greenville Market. I would like to urge any farmers who have not already scheduled their sales to please contact the warehouse where their tobacco is designated for sale in order to set-up a schedule of sales for the 1982 season."

The owners and operators of local warehouse firms are: Cannon, W. T. Cannon, Carlton Dail, Billy Cannon, Ray Cannon, Sammy Harrell, Sammy Adams; Farmer's, Harold L. Watson, Gary L. Warren, Harold L. Watson Jr., A. B. Ayers, Willie Edwards; Growers, Jasper L. Tripp, Tommy Elks, Frank Dail; Hudson's, Bobby L. Hudson, Ervin Langston; Keel's, J. A. Worthington, J. B. Worthington, Fenner Allen, Carl Averette, Tull Worthington; New Carolina, Laddie Avery, W. H. Mills;

Clark Jr., Ray Harrington, Billy Clark III, Robert Halstead, Alfred Earl Garris; and Star-Planters, Harding Sugg Jr., James C. Mills, Alton Haddock, Ralph Davenport.

By LEE CREEK

Associated Press Writer
LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP)

Officials were optimistic that prices would reflect the quality of tobacco as the 1982 South Carolina-Border North Carolina Belt market opened today in Lumberton.

Unofficials early figures indicated prices were higher than opening day in 1981, officials said.

Overall prices were $12 to $15 higher per hundred pounds than last year's average of $152 per hundredweight, said T.H. "Harold" Cox, floor manager at Star Tobacco Warehouse No. 2.

Top-quality primers were running $153, slightly above last year, he added, while top-quality lugs were running $195, $15 to $20 higher than last year. Cutters were also estimated at $195, although there were not enough floor offerings to compare that to last year.

About 15 percent to 20 percent of tobacco purchased today was bought by the Flue-Cured Tobacco Stabilization Program.

Gov. Jim Hunt and Rep. Charles Rose, D-N.C., helped christen the new flue-cured season, telling farmers to stand together and asking buyers to offer Tar Heel farmers top dollar for their leaf.

"Tobacco is a vital part of the economy in this state," said Hunt. "Our tobacco program is the most democratic farm program in the nation."

"Our farmers have got a lot of debts to pay off," he said, urging buyers to make their offers generous.

Later this morning, Hunt and Rose will visit Fairmont to open warehouses there. Eastern Belt markets open Tuesday with markets on the Middle Belt beginning sales Aug. 3 and Old Belt markets opening Aug. 10.

"We still have a strong tobacco program, one I believe will last for a long time," Rose said. "I hope tobacco farmers will stay together. They need to tell Congress to vote against a tobacco tax when it comes up next week. It seems like as soon as we get rid of one problem, we get into another."

This past week, the U.S. Senate approved an 8-cent-per-pack increase in federal cigarette taxes, double the previous levy. Some officials said they were not optimistic that the measure would be defeated in the House.

"I really doubt it," said North Carolina House candidate Tommy Wellington of Lumberton. "Our congressman (Rose) will do what he can, but there's a lot of congressmen not for it."

Disagree Over Budget Deficit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government officials are predicting that the size of the budget deficit for 1983 will be larger than previously anticipated, but they don't agree on how much larger.

Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan said Sunday a revised budget review shows the deficit will be "somewhere in the neighborhood of $110 billion to $114 billion." Others say that's underestimating the condition.

Regan's prediction would be an increase of as much as $10 billion over the $104 billion red-ink estimate Congress made just one month ago when it adopted a new budget plan for the year beginning Oct. 1.

The treasury secretary's comments came during an interview on CBS' "Face The Nation."

Other officials in the administration and the Congress, however, say the projection is based on an overly optimistic forecast of a quick end to the recession and relatively healthy economic growth later this year.

Chief White House economist Murray L. Weidenbaum said last week he thought the budget forecast was a little too optimistic to suit him.

Additionally, the non-partisan Congressional Budget Office, using more likely economic forecasts, expects a deficit of $140 billion.

When asked if the administration was being less than honest in its soon-to-be-released forecast, Regan said he personally thinks the forecast may be a little on the pessimistic side. On balance, he said, "the administration honestly believes that this is the kind of recovery we will have."

The administration's forecast will predict the economy will grow at an annual rate of about 4.5 percent for the rest of the year, a pace private economists generally believe is unrealistic.

Even administration economists, speaking privately, acknowledge the economic and budget deficits forecast are too rosy. But they express concern that a more realistic outlook showing the deficit soaring by $20 billion or more could be too discouraging in an election year for Congress, which is anguishing over every $1 billion in cuts facing it.

When he came into office, President Reagan promised to balance the budget by 1983.

FILM REPLACED, MONEY REIMBURSED

In September, 1981, I mailed some film to Clark Color Laboratories in Washington, D.C. They sent me back the wrong pictures. I returned these and explained the situation. They instituted a tracer, but never found my pictures. I've given up on getting these, but would like to have my film replaced and my processing fee and flashbulb cost reimbursed. No amount of writing I do seems to help, though. Mrs. W.S.

Hotline found no phone number for the company, but did talk to the Better Business Bureau in the District of Columbia, which assured us that, while the company has a large number of mixups, it usually does reimburse. We then wrote on your behalf to the company and you report that, soon after our letter was apparently received, you got what you requested.

FBI Joins In Arsenal Probe

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP)

— The FBI is investigating the discovery of weapons, explosives, drugs and computer equipment in rooms rented by a World's Fair employee a block away from the exposition site, according to police.

Police Sgt. Eddie Irwin said the FBI entered the case Sunday "for future security reasons." FBI agents refused to comment.

Several dignitaries, including President Reagan, have toured the fair and former presidents Jimmy Carter and Gerald Ford plan visits.

Irwin said Saturday he did not know what plans, if any, there may have been for the use of the explosives.

Michael Gerald King, 30, a parking lot attendant for the World's Fair, was charged Saturday with possessing drugs and explosives, police said. King was arrested Friday night after police raided his two rooms at the YMCA, where he had lived for six years. Police were alerted by a maintenance worker who reported seeing a .30-caliber rifle in the rooms while spraying for bugs.

Irwin said King slept in one room and used the other to store dynamite blasting caps, chemicals, combat clothing, electronic gadgets, computer equipment and the security plans to a building which was not identified.

Also in King's rooms, police said, was a photo album with "Our Wedding" written on the cover and a photograph of actress Suzanne Somers inside.

Policeman James Anderson said King was charged with possession of unspecified drugs, possession of drugs for resale, possession of explosives and possession of items with altered serial numbers. He was being held in lieu of $53,000 bond pending a hearing in city court on Aug. 10.

Irwin said 30 or 40 dynamite caps, sulfuric acid, ether oxide and nitric acid all were found in one room. He said numerous books on computers, science fiction, drugs and the occult were also confiscated.

He said some computer equipment may have been stolen from the Tennessee Valley Authority and some from the University of Tennessee's College of Agriculture.

However, TVA spokeswoman Sandra Flanagan said the agency had not determined if the computer equipment was among items stolen from the Knoxville-headquartered federal utility in 1979. UT officials had no comment.

Hospital Rates Could Increase

A budget that would increase room rates at Pitt County Memorial Hospital to between $150 and $160 a day is being considered by the hospital board of trustees, according to a report confirmed this morning by Hospital Director Jack Richardson.

Asked if the $150-$160 range is correct, he said, "It's in the ball park, the way things are looking now, but we're still wrestling with it." The proposed budget is slated to be completed by the trustees by the end of July, so the county commissioners can have the month of August to review it. The increased room rates, if approved, would become effective Oct. 1, the beginning of the hospital's fiscal year. The present daily room rate is $125.

Dear Abby

Informed Children Won't Be Silent

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am a psychiatrist who works closely with a child development specialist in Bangor, Me. As an example of the power for good that your column has, we want to share this story:

Two years ago, a teacher in a nearby town gave her class an assignment to bring in a news item for class discussion. Expecting current events and human interest stories, the teacher was surprised when a quiet 12-year-old approached her desk with a clipping from your column about a girl who was being sexually abused (raped), and said, "This is happening to me."

The teacher and the school's guidance person obtained our help in providing supportive counseling during the difficult process in which the child was placed in foster care because her mother "stood by" her husband (the child's stepfather) and called her daughter a "lying bitch."

You have many young readers. We urge you to encourage children to seek help from their school guidance people, doctors or community health centers (listed in the Yellow Pages) if they are being involved sexually by adults. You may use our names or sign us, "Concerned Professionals."

LAWRENCE C. SALVESEN, M.D.
PATRICIA SMITH RANZONI, M.Ed.

DEAR CONCERNED: The importance of your message cannot be overstated. Whenever I publish a letter from someone who has been sexually abused as a child, I am inundated with letters from readers saying that this has happened to them. (Many confide that they had lived with that ugly secret for as long as 40 and 50 years — too ashamed to tell anybody.)

It is the responsibility of adults to teach children (3- and 4-year-olds are not too young to understand) that it is not OK for anyone to touch their private parts, and if someone does, the child should tell a trusted adult immediately. Stress that even if the person who has made these advances has threatened to "kill" her (or him — little boys are molested, too) the child must tell anyway and be assured she will be protected.

Some facts: Today in the U.S. there is a one-in-four chance that a child will be the victim of incest, child molestation or rape by the time he or she reaches 18 years of age. Statistics tell us that 80 percent of the offenders had themselves been physically or sexually abused as children.

All 50 states now have reporting statutes, which are laws that require professionals who work with children to notify public authorities of instances of suspected child abuse (including physical, emotional, sexual) and sometimes neglect.

Children seldom lie about sexual abuse. Child molesters are rarely strangers. They are usually related to or living near the child, and are known and trusted by the child.

A child needs to tell a trusted adult if he (or she) has been molested; if not believed, the child should tell another adult, and still another adult until believed.

A child needs to be assured that if he (or she) has been molested, the shame and blame belong to the adult — the child is the victim!

Double Ring Vows Spoken

Jacqueline Lang Harris and Dr. John Richard Leonard III were united in marriage Sunday at their home here. The Rev. Lawrence Patrick Houston officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Raymond A. Lang of Ayden and the late Mr. Lang. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. John Richard Leonard Jr. of Lexington.

The altar was decorated with two globed candelabra entwined with an arrangement of flowers. A fern centered the altar, which was located by the fireside hearth. Cascading greenery marked with ribbon outlined the staircase.

The bride chose a white off-the-shoulder formal length dress, embroidered at the empire waist and hem with blue ribbon. Chantilly lace which extended to the bodice formed a cape around the dress. The bride wore a garland of greenery in her hair and carried a single red rose.

Shannon Harris, daughter of the bride, served as maid of honor. Julie Leonard, daughter of the bridegroom, was flower girl. Both attendants wore yellow taffeta formal dresses with matching overlay of organza lace. Their headpieces matched the garland worn by the bride. Each carried a basket of flowers.

The sons of the bridegroom, Chris and Scotty Leonard, served their father as best man and ring bearer.

Following the ceremony, a reception and cake cutting was held at the home. The table was lighted by globed candles with flowers matching those of the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Garry Pegram assisted as host and hostess.

The couple plans a honeymoon to unannounced points.

A St. Louis physician invented peanut butter while seeking a nutritious, easily digested, high-protein food for his patients.

COOKING IS FUN!

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Nowadays many cooks who plan low-sodium meals are using freshly grated lemon rind and freshly squeezed lemon juice plus such spices as dry mustard and curry powder to give flavor to poultry. We did just that recently when we baked Rock Cornish hens — and they were good tasting indeed.

If you are interested in low-sodium cooking and you try the following recipe, you may want to note there are only about 118 mg. of sodium per serving.

LEMON-SPICE CORNISH HENS

4 fresh cornish hens (each 1 1/4 to 1 1/2 pounds)
2 tablespoons salad oil
1 tablespoon honey
Grated rind and juice of 1 medium-size lemon
1 large clove garlic, minced
1/2 teaspoon dry mustard
1/2 teaspoon curry powder

Wash and dry hens; with string, tie together the drumsticks of each; turn wings back akimbo fashion. In a small bowl stir together the salad oil, honey, grated lemon rind, lemon juice, garlic, mustard and curry powder; brush some of mixture over hens.

In a 13 by 9 by 2-inch baking dish arrange the hens. Pour the remaining oil-honey mixture over them.

Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven, basting occasionally, until tender — about 1 hour. Remove string from drumsticks. Place hens on individual hot plates. Skim fat from drippings in pan and pour remainder over hens. Serve at once. Makes 4 servings.

DINNER FOR TWO

Curried Pea Soup
Smoked Boned Pork

Shoulder
Butt with Yams and Salad
Bar Cookies Beverage
CURRIED PEA SOUP
No cooking needed, and it's chilled.

8.5-ounce can green peas, undrained
1 cup half-and-half
1/4 teaspoon curry powder
Salt and pepper to taste
Minced chives or scallion
In an electric blender puree together peas with their liquid. Add the half-and-half, curry powder and salt and pepper; whirl to blend. Chill. At serving time, sprinkle with chives. Makes 2 cups — 2 large servings.

I LOVE THE NEW ME

Let me introduce myself and tell you about one of the most important happenings in my life. I'm Laura Willoughby, a junior high teacher in the Pitt County School System, and I have just lost 54 lbs. This weight loss has changed my life. Not only am I happier with my appearance, my children tell me that I am easier to live with, and my physician is very impressed with my weight loss, my lower blood pressure, and the general improved state of my health. He had been telling me for years that I had to do something about my weight and my blood pressure.

Well, I knew the time had come. I HAD TO LOSE WEIGHT, but I knew that I could not do it by myself. I began investigating the options available to me. I knew that some of the group weight loss programs were nutritionally sound, but I felt that my problem was a private one. Therefore, I compared the private weight loss programs available in the area, and I chose DIET CENTER for the following reasons:

1. THERE WERE NO CONTRACTS. I did not have to pay a large sum of money in advance and obligate myself for any specific period of time. I had tried so many plans, and nothing worked for me so naturally I was skeptical. At DIET CENTER seeing my weight come down daily made a believer out of me.
2. THERE WERE NO SHOTS, DRUGS, OR CHEMICALS USED AT DIET CENTER. What I found there was a well-balanced nutritionally sound diet and a behavior modification program to help me keep the weight off.
3. THERE WERE NO PRE-PACKAGED FOODS AT DIET CENTER. I lost my weight without having to buy expensive extra foods. I shopped at my regular food store, and my family was able to eat right along with me.
4. THERE WAS NO NEED FOR BODY WRAPS OR RIGID EXERCISE PROGRAMS. By following the well-balanced diet at DIET CENTER, I found my body tightened up naturally. While DIET CENTER does suggest that exercises such as walking be added to my daily routine, no rigid exercise program or body wraps are necessary for inch loss. As my weight came down, the inches seemed to melt away.
5. AT DIET CENTER I DID NOT FEEL DEPRIVED. I was not hungry. I did not experience nervousness or fatigue. I feel great, and my friends tell me that I look great.

SUMMARY: Diet Center offers a program of private, daily counseling by trained professionals-not only have the Diet Center counselors lost weight on the program-but they have the educational and professional backgrounds to qualify them to help others like me to reach their goals.

REACH 'Missionary' To Describe Group's Work

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Barbara Muse has a mission in Pitt County today and tonight: to share with families of the mentally ill here what the REACH group in Forsyth County has meant to her and about 60 others who participate.

Muse was a founder of the Forsyth REACH group, which was the first such on-going support group for families of the mentally ill in the state. Pitt County's will be the 15th such group that has formed since the Forsyth group was begun in September, 1979.

She is employed by the Mental Health Association in Forsyth County as assistant director, but it was a personal experience with mental illness in her family that caused her to help form the support group.

"It's been the most meaningful thing I've ever done," she said of her involvement with other members of the group. "People come there who've given up hope, who feel they're the only ones in the world having such difficult family problems, who are blaming themselves and destroying their own mental well-being because of the mental problems of someone they love."

BARBARA MUSE

"Usually during the first meeting, they keep very quiet and listen. They find out that no one's going to press them and that no one is going to reject them. And they hear about problems similar to or worse than theirs. Usually by the second or third meeting, they're eager to share, to get out of their systems some of the problems they've lived with so long. They find that talking really does free them and also helps them toward solutions to individual problems and also that the group together can solve problems of the mentally ill and their families together."

For those problems for which there appears no solution, they get help in acceptance. "Sometimes we just laugh together," Muse said. "When a situation is so intolerable, sometimes the only and best thing to do is see the humor in it—it eases the pain."

The deinstitutionalization policy of the state mental health system has heightened the problems of families of the mentally ill in many cases, Muse said. One law that the REACH groups are now trying to get changed is that persons who are deemed untreatable in mental hospitals not be put out on the streets. The way the present law is written, the hospitals are mandated to treat a person only if there is reason to expect positive change in one's condition, she said. "We're trying to get treatable redefined. We feel that treatment can also include humane care of those who can't reasonably be expected to improve."

The Forsyth County group has, in some cases, gone to court with member families. "When it appears necessary to have a family member committed for mental health treatment against his or her will, there is so much stress, so much guilt for the family member who must take that responsibility," Muse said. The support group acts in a supportive capacity to help the family member see that the commitment is for the patient's own good and that the confrontation must be handled to the best of one's ability, no matter how hard it is. Telling in court of aberrant behavior on the part of a loved one is never easy, but it's sometimes necessary in order to get help for that person.

A lovely outcome of the support that one receives in a group like REACH, Muse said, is that often the family member is able, with the group's help, to change his or her reaction to the person's behavior and thus assist the person in changing his behavior.

Muse said probably the largest percentage of the Winston-Salem (Forsyth County) group's members are parents of adult children who are mentally ill or emotionally disturbed. "We have sons and daughters and husbands and wives and sisters and brothers, too," she said. "But most of our members seem to be parents who are having difficulty dealing with children who have emotional problems and choose to stay home with older parents. These people need a lot of support in loving these children enough to help them try once again to take responsibility for themselves."

Ministers, she said, are encouraged to visit the group and learn how to help families of the mentally ill in their ministries. "It's difficult for people who haven't had the problem to know how to relate to people who do have the problem," she said, "and that's why this group is so important. Here people find other people who truly understand and people who truly want to can learn to understand."

A panel discussion is being held here tonight as part of an organizational meeting of a Pitt County REACH group. Families for whom mental illness is a concern are urged to attend. The meeting begins at 8 p.m. and will be held at Planters Bank on the corner of Third and Washington Streets. Those who miss this meeting are urged to contact the Mental Health Association in Pitt County for information about the next meeting or may begin attending at any time, of course. Mental Health Association Director Brenda Gray said. The group is to be sponsored by the MHA in Pitt County.

Plan Gamble On Grandmas

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — There's no one like grandma to take care of the kids. At least that's the hope of a new day care center, which plans to open next month with a staff of grannies, ranging in age from 55 to 74.

Carolyn Sterns, director of "Grandma's" said both children and grandmothers should benefit from the arrangement.

"Most older people are isolated," she said. "They are home alone. They are losing their friends one by one. If you're working, there's no way to withdraw."

Said Elizabeth Dean, 74, one of the grandmothers: "I don't want to kid you. I think a woman who has really mothered and matured always needs the love of children to be fully gratified."

Mrs. Dean said she is eager to get to work.

"My youngest grandchild is too old, not a lap child," she said. "You know there's lap children, floor children, and yard young-uns. That's in the Mississippi vernacular, of course."

The program, scheduled to open Aug. 16 in a former elementary school, will handle 150 youngsters, including 60 infants. Costs will range from $30 to $55 a week, subsidized by the United Way.

Road Fatality

Robert Earl Phelps of Route 8, Greenville, was killed about 9:30 p.m. Saturday when the vehicle he was driving went out of control at a curve on the Stantonsburg Road 1.1 miles west of Greenville, and overturned.

Highway Patrolman Fred B. Davis, who investigated the fatal crash, said the Phelps car left the road, traveled 446 feet and hit a utility pole guy wire, then crossed secondary road 1204, struck a ditch and overturned.

Trooper Davis, who estimated damage to the car at $3,000, reported that Phelps was thrown from the vehicle as it overturned and was found some 30 feet away from the car. The officer said Phelps apparently died instantly from his injuries.

Cars Damaged In Collisions

An estimated $2,500 property damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Sunday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 12:40 a.m. collision at the intersection of Fourth and Cotanche Streets involving cars driven by Douglas Wayne Newsome of Route 1, Fountain and Sharon Elaine Burroughs of 1601 Willow St.

Damage was estimated at $1,000 to each of the two cars.

Police charged Metta Betsy Gurganus of Route 3, Snow Hill, with driving left of center following investigation of a 2:37 a.m. mishap at the intersection of Ninth and Forbes Streets.

According to investigators, the Gurganus car collided with a utility pole, causing $500 damage to the car, $25 damage to the pole, and injuring a passenger in the vehicle.

Vigilance Can Pay Off

It is no secret that home break-ins are a matter of concern locally. Advertisements appear in the paper offering rewards for recovery of silverware taken from homes. Typically such break-ins occur when homeowners are away, but there is nothing more chilling and more infuriating than returning to find robbers have entered your home.

Police say some $214,237 in property was reported stolen locally during the months of April, May and June.

Chief Glenn Cannon also reports some extra efforts will be instituted to deal with the break-in problem. A special four-man tactical squad has been created to concentrate on break-ins. An additional 10 officers have been reassigned to the 4 p.m. to midnight and the midnight to 8 a.m. shifts, to provide better coverage of the city.

The city also has an active crime watch which encourages residents to look out for their neighbor's property.

All of this extra effort can have its effect in halting the entering of private homes. If the public is alert so that calls can be made for police assistance in the event something suspicious is seen, and extra police are available during high crime periods, the rate of breaking and enterings can be brought down.

All of us working together can make the price of robbing private homes simply too high for the criminal types.

Invasion Of Privacy?

"All right class, Journalism 105 will come to order. Today we will deal with invasion of privacy, which is one of the most important lessons you will have to learn if you wish to succeed in your profession. First, why should the media invade someone's privacy?"

"Because everybody likes to read about it, or see it on TV."

"I can see where you would arrive at that answer but it is not necessarily the correct one. We invade someone's privacy because their conduct may affect the public good. Does anyone have any examples where the press has contributed to the people's right to know?"

"I do, sir. When Elizabeth Taylor separated from John Warner."

"That's a good example. Why was this an important story?"

"Because John Warner was a United States senator, and Miss Taylor's departure could have affected Mr. Warner's performance as a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee."

"Correct. If Miss Taylor had separated from singer Eddie Fisher to marry actor Richard Burton, would it have been a news story?"

"No, sir. That would be considered gossip and no one would want to read about it."

"Fine. Now let us take the case of Sophia Loren, who went to jail in Naples for not paying her taxes. Why was this newsworthy?"

"It showed the Italian people that no one was above the law."

"Then the idea of Miss Loren, one of the most beautiful women in the world, going to jail was not a news story in itself."

"No, sir. It only became a public matter when her taxes were involved."

"Now let's deal with a hypothetical case. Someone is giving a lavish party to honor Mrs. Jackie Onassis. The hostess announces that the press will not be allowed phone. Do I climb into his window and try to catch him unawares?"

"You do not. A man's home is his castle, and if he doesn't want to talk about his troubles you owe him a 'No Comment.'"

"I have a question, sir. I'm planning to go into photography. Suppose I see Bo Derek topless on the beach, and I have a telescopic lens. Do I shoot the picture?"

"No. That would be invading her privacy. What you should do is shout to her that you have film in your camera, and ask her to cover herself up so you won't embarrass her."

"Suppose I'm working in TV and I'm ordered to stake out the house of someone who has just been indicted for a big white-collar crime. What do I do if he refuses to be interviewed on television?"

"You turn off your cameras and report to your producer that the person did not want to be questioned."

"Shouldn't I film his neighbors and his wife?"

"That would not be cricket, as people who are not directly involved tend to exaggerate and make things up."

"Professor, have you ever worked on a newspaper or for television?"

"I can't say that I have. I much prefer to teach journalism so I can prepare students for when they go out into the real world."

This Problem Needs Solution

President Reagan, as a part of his economic war against the Soviet Union, has taken a firm stand against the natural gas pipeline from Russia to western Europe.

The only problem is he has also taken a firm stand against something that is very much desired by the United States' western European allies.

France last week ignored Reagan's sanctions and is going ahead with delivery of pipeline parts developed by General Electric Co.

France has the sympathy of other western European nations in the move.

The president, of course, can get tough with France but with perhaps disastrous results to trade between the two nations.

This is a problem that begs for a solution, even if it means the U.S. has to soften its position on the pipeline issue.

THIS AFTERNOON

Change Bail Laws

By PAUL T. O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — "At the time of the suspected arson, the accused was free on bail from a charge that he had been involved in the burning of an in-town building."

Information like that in a news story can send the public into tantrums. The public gets even angrier when the suspect is released on bail again — set free to wreak more havoc on the public.

The General Assembly in 1983 will probably be asked to consider changes in the state's bail laws to eliminate the repeated release on bail of persons accused of the most serious felonies. During its July meeting, the Governor's Crime Commission appeared ready to include such a bill in its 1983 package but decided to hold off until certain language is clarified.

As the law now stands, judges can deny bail only to those defendants accused of first degree murder. The commission is looking at a bill that would allow the judge to deny bail to those accused of committing second degree murder, rape, burglary or arson, or of trafficking in heroin or opium, while free on bail from another charge.

The commission's courts committee recommended the bill saying current law "does not adequately protect the public from those charged with other serious, violent crimes...Occasionally and with disastrous consequences for public perception of the criminal justice system, violent and dangerous persons betray the traditional presumption of innocence and personal liberty given them prior to trial."

Superior Court Judge Robert Collier of Statesville, committee chairman, said "public safety and public confidence would be better served if the court were not required to release those charged with especially dangerous felonies."

At the meeting, the proposal had its doubters. Commission chairman Jim Van Camp of Southern Pines said "we may be denying bail in some areas that go a far distance from where we are now even though I have no trouble with people accused of committing a felony while on a pre-trial release."

Rep. Joe Hackney of Chapel Hill, a commission member and lawyer, said he'd like the bill to include a provision calling for a hearing in which it would have to be proved that the defendant was on bail at the time the second crime is alleged to have taken place.

Sen. Robert Swain of Asheville, also a lawyer, said, "I think it's pretty harsh. I haven't had time to study it but I don't know how necessary that provision is."

Bail is part of the basic presumption of innocence. If a man is innocent until proven guilty, he shouldn't be jailed until he's been convicted, one side will argue. On the other side, there are those who point to the severity of the crime and say the public must be protected. It's an argument of individual versus public rights and it's been raging in this country for a long time.

Another portion of the proposed bill would allow judges to restrict the activities and movements of those released on cash bonds. Judges are currently given this authority with defendants released on secured bonds.

Drug smugglers often have almost unlimited funds for their defense. They'll be arrested and even though bail is set very high, they can post cash bond. While the judges can tell other defendants released on bail not to associate with certain people and not to leave town, the movement of the defendant released on cash bond cannot be restricted. With drug smugglers, the extra freedom can be enough to get back in the business or get out of town.

Other Editors Say Tax Flip-Flop

(The Raleigh Times)

Apropos of a possible 8-cents-a-pack hike in the federal cigarette tax, Sen. Jesse Helms wails that it's "so easy to attack tobacco."

No doubt it's a lot easier than the kind of flipflops you have to go through if you're Jesse Helms, to reconcile your loudly proclaimed devotion to balanced budgets and clean living with the fact that so many of your constituents raise and manufacture tobacco.

These contortions are obviously beginning to be too much even for Helms, who is trying a diversion instead. He suggests substituting a boost in liquor taxes to raise the same $1.3 billion part of a $21 billion Senate revenue package that in turn is part of an effort to balance the budget.

Our feeling on that is, fine, go ahead and boost liquor taxes. But boost them in addition to, not instead of, cigarette taxes. Instead, kill a woefully unfair proposal in that same revenue package that would boost the medical-expense income-tax deductibility trigger from 3 percent to 10 percent of gross income.

Unlike medical expenses, tobacco and liquor are both fair game for a bigger tax bite, whether senators from here in Tobaccoland like it or not.

True, tobacco indulgence does not cause the highway carnage or assaults that drinking does. But tobacco and liquor share other dubious distinctions. Both are necessities, both often create physical or psychological dependencies in their users, and both can be injurious to health.

But if you're Senator Helms, you can't acknowledge these simple, plain facts about tobacco for fear of political reprisal. So he goes on parroting phrases like "the barrage of propaganda against tobacco." And he claims a concern for the "regressive" nature of the cigarette tax with its relatively heavy impact on the low-income smoker. Helms' protests are not so loud when other Reaganist tax notions far more heavily, painfully regressive than this one, are aired.

Senator Helms is to be pitied as well as blamed. His effort to reconcile the irreconcilable symbolizes the similar efforts thousands of Tar Heels continue to make.

Reagan Still Stands Firm

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — The hope of European leaders that they will change Ronald Reagan's mind on anti-Soviet sanctions would fade if they could hear the president express his emotions in the privacy of the White House, unencumbered by Alexander Haig's Europeanist views.

When President Reagan ordered the U.S. crackdown against the Soviet-European gas pipeline after months of delay, both the leaders of U.S. allies in Europe and Reagan's top trade and commerce officials started looking for ways to change his mind. They failed, contradicting published reports that Reagan seeks a way out.

A West German delegation here this week will get this word: Nothing can shake Reagan's determination to punish Moscow until martial law ends in Poland and Solidarity leaders are set free. But Reagan on the warpath, however justified, puts the U.S. and Western Europe on a collision course threatening the Western alliance.

The president's comments inside the White House point to rising tension with Europe. Reagan wonders whether Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher has so soon forgotten what the U.S. did for Britain in the Falklands war; West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, never a favorite of the Reagan White House, is viewed as using the U.S.-European split over the pipeline to advance his sagging political standing at home.

On June 27, trade negotiator William Brock and Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige took their worries over the president's anti-pipeline decision to a rare Sunday session in the White House office of national security assistant William P. Clark. Backed by the State Department, Brock and Baldrige warned that the sanctions risk fatal weakening of the Western alliance.

That secret session leaked into a sympathetic New York Times story on July 9. It portrayed a harried, worried Ronald Reagan praying for a quick fix in the form of some change in Poland that he could use as a pretext for canceling sanctions.

The facts, now slowly becoming known to the Europeans, are radically different. Reagan held off for months imposing the latest pipeline sanctions largely because Haig as secretary of state told him Poland's military dictatorship would ease martial law.

Haig is still unavailable to the press, but Reagan advisers insist that he assured the president there would be major changes in Poland before summer. Haig is said to have told the president that he had private indications to that effect from Soviet foreign minister Andrei Gromyko.

At the same time, Haig's State Department operatives are privately charged in the White House with failing to convey to the Europeans the depth of Reagan's ideological commitment to sanctions. "It's a moral issue with him," one Reagan adviser told us. All this insensitively watered down Reagan's true position. Thus, when the pipeline crackdown came in June, the Europeans still doubted Reagan's resolve. That doubt has yet to be dispelled.

While Haig and the State Department bureaucracy were in the saddle issuing reassuring words, the Europeans ignored or forgot Reagan's words last December: "The United States will have no choice" but to have sanctions against Moscow if the Soviets do not see that "basic rights" in Poland are restored.

That is exactly what Reagan meant to say, the Europeans are now being told. With Haig gone and after the acrimonious Sunday session in Clark's office, there are no longer doubts inside the administration.

Reagan has told intimates that although he wants both the sanctions and the support of Europe, it would be sanctions hands down if he had to choose. That signals an unprecedented crisis for the alliance.

Recently, a man was in- things in our daily lives are formed of a matter which entirely within our power. disturbed him a great deal. But one is not to be con- sidered irreverent if a situa- tress, he laughed and said, "That's too much for me. I'll apparently has no control, let the Lord worry about that one."

And why not? Jesus urged his followers not to be anxious but to let tomorrow take care of itself. Many things to do those things which we worry about are beyond our ability to change in the slightest.

This is not a counsel of hopelessness, for many things in our daily lives are entirely within our power. But one is not to be considered irreverent if a situation arises over which he apparently has no control, and he says, "I'll let the Lord worry about that one." Growing Loss To Shoplifters

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer
The cry of "Stop! Thief!" is becoming more frequent in the nation's stores these days, as retailers report an increase in shoplifting and warn that the cost of the losses is being passed on to innocent consumers.

The National Coalition to Prevent Shoplifting, a non-profit organization with headquarters in Atlanta, estimates that shoplifting losses in 1980 reached $24 billion — up from about $16 billion a year earlier. For every $1 stolen in bank robberies, the coalition says, over $300 was stolen in shoplifted merchandise.

The coalition notes that the loss figure includes the costs of store security and prosecution as well as the value of the merchandise itself. It does not, however, include the loss to states and local government from uncollected sales taxes; nor does it include the cost to the taxpayers of government law enforcement activities.

The anti-shoplifting coalition was formed in 1979 with a grant from the U.S. Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention. Government funding for the program expires next month, however, because of federal budget cutbacks and organizers are seeking support from retailers to continue the educational project.

Thus far, the retailers appear reluctant to foot the bill for the anti-shoplifting effort. Judi Rogers, director of the group, said that only about one-fifth of the money needed had been raised by the beginning of July.

The coalition, which concentrates its efforts on teaching young people about shoplifting and on helping retailers learn how to prevent and deal with the problem, says studies have shown that teen-agers are 2½ times more likely to be caught shoplifting than adults.

An informal 1980-81 survey of more than 100,000 boys and girls aged 9 to 22 conducted for the coalition by volunteers from organizations like Women's Clubs, Chambers of Commerce, PTAs and other civic groups showed that almost all of those questioned — 91 percent — said that shoplifting was a crime.

At the same time, however, almost half — 49 percent — said they had shoplifted at least once. And 60 percent of those who said they had shoplifted before said they would do it again. Only 17 percent of those who had shoplifted said they had been caught.

The coalition study did not attempt to measure the impact of the current recession on shoplifting. Less than one-third of those who stole, however, said they took the items involved because they didn't have the money to pay for them; the rest generally said they acted on impulse, did it for the thrill, or responded to a dare.

A substantial number of the young people questioned placed the blame for shoplifting on the stores. One-third of those who said they had never shoplifted and four-tenths of those who said they had expressed agreement with the statement: "Stores force people to shoplift by charging prices that are too high."

The coalition also contacted almost 5,000 retailers for their views on shoplifting.

Among the findings: —Almost nine in 10 said there had been a definite increase in shoplifting in the past two years. In a 1979 survey, only about six in 10 reported that shoplifting was on the rise.

—More than three-fourths of the retailers said the cost of shoplifting was directly passed on to their customers. Three-fourths also said they will, in general, prosecute shoplifters, but they also said they actually pressed charges against fewer than half of the people they catch.

The coalition report concludes that retailers must modify their own behavior if they want to prevent shoplifting. "Retailers must exercise a consistent policy of prosecution...In turn, courts and legislatures must be convinced of the seriousness of the problem to make the penalty a deterrent to the commission of the crime."

Students, meanwhile, must be convinced that "shoplifting is not worth the risks. A simplified view of the shoplifter's current attitude is: 'If I shoplift, I won't get caught, and if I get caught, I won't be punished.'"

Washington's Top Gossip Sources? It's The Men

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —
The capital's premier gossip columnist says the biggest gossips in town are...
Secretaries? No.
Wives? No.

"Men gossip the most," said Diana McLellan, author of a recently published book called "Ear on Washington," a chronicle of the capital's gossip network: who blabs, why and what they say.

"At least 80 percent of my sources are men," she says. For seven years, Mrs. McLellan has been writing a sassy newspaper column about the adventures and escapades of the capital's bigshots, climbers and manipulators.

She awards Chinese woks to newlyweds, announces who is pregnant or, in her words, "expecting more than the mailman," laments for the divorced, drops hints about affairs and tells who was seen with whom at what parties or restaurants.

"It's the human condition," Mrs. McLellan said in a recent interview about her book, written for Arbor House Publishing Co. in New York. "The news is so serious here, and everyone takes himself so passionately seriously. You need gossip. It's the unifying theme."

Her book consists of 300 pages of anecdotes about the importance of image, romance, fashion, manners, protocol, dining and money for those who ride the Washington merry-go-round.

"In Washington," she writes, "your most important possession is not your Mercedes. Toss away your diamonds; abandon hope of love. Here, you cultivate your image."

"The Ear" column was first launched in 1975 by the now-defunct Washington Star. Mrs. McLellan delighted readers by dubbing

The Washington Post, the "O.P." for "other paper," and infuriated Post executives and staffers by printing frequent items about their personal lives.

When the Star died last summer, the "O.P." picked up the syndicated column which Mrs. McLellan said is printed in about a dozen newspapers.

There have been some changes in the column since Mrs. McLellan went to work for the Post. Not only does she omit Post gossip, but she said each item now must be verified by two sources. Also, Post lawyers must approve each column.

Mrs. McLellan said lawyers had checked the column last October when she falsely asserted that Jimmy Carter had bugged the Blair House residence of President-elect Ronald Reagan and his wife, Nancy, prior to the inauguration. Carter was furious and threatened to sue the Post if the paper did not retract the item and apologize. The Post eventually did both.

"I couldn't explain it without getting a lot of people in trouble, including me," Mrs. McLellan said when asked recently about the incident. "But yes, the lawyers approved it."

Mrs. McLellan said she and her assistant get more than 50 phone calls a day, "depending on the weather." Cloudy days are best, she added, and nobody calls when it rains. An answering machine keeps the gossip churning 24-hours-a-day.

Those most likely to call, Mrs. McLellan said, "are people in pivotal jobs who gossip to make a point, to give someone a hard time, to show they are indignant at special favors for those who don't deserve them."

In Washington, she said, "gossip that goes to a columnist is usually motivated politically."

What doesn't she print? "Nothing that makes people feel creepy when they read it, like tragedies about children," she said. "And I don't think I should be the first person to let someone know her husband is having an affair."

Mrs. McLellan is a short woman most identifiable by her curly blonde hair and distinct British accent. She was born in Leicester, England, the daughter of a British military officer and moved to Washington in 1957 when her father was assigned to the British embassy.

If you believe her official resume, she has worked as a poodle portraitist, a dress designer, a saleslady, a telephone operator and a homes fashion reporter.

Psst. Want to know something you won't read in the Ear, the book or her official resume?

Diana McLellan is 43 years old. And a grandmother.

Politicians Airing Criticism Of Runoff Primary Provisos

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Many politicians agree that the state's system of having a runoff primary is outdated, and some are calling for revising the method of determining when a runoff will be held.

State Elections Director Alex K. Brock has called for reform of the runoff to reduce its frequency. He thinks too often voter interest is too low to justify expenses such as the $500,000 that will be spent Tuesday when the only statewide positions at stake are races for two state Court of Appeals judgeships.

Brock does not advocate scrapping the runoff. Instead, he said it should be made easier to avoid runoffs. It now takes 50 percent plus one vote in the first primary for the leading candidate to avoid a runoff. Brock said the threshold should be lowered to 42 percent for statewide races.

If runoffs had not been in existence, the political scene in North Carolina would have been altered considerably.

For example, North Carolina would not have elected Govs. W. Kerr Scott in 1948, Dan K. Moore in 1964 and James E. Holshouser Jr. in 1972 or Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green in 1976. All won runoffs after coming in second in primaries.

The runoff also frustrated the U.S. Senate ambitions of Frank P. Graham in 1950 and Luther H. Hodges Jr. in 1978 and the gubernatorial hopes of L. Richardson Preyer in 1964. All led primaries but lost runoffs.

Green and other supporters of the runoff argue that voter turnout is just one of many political factors. The mark of a strong candidate, they say, is the ability to get his voters to the polls a second time.

"You know what I always say about runoffs, people get what they deserve if they don't go to the polls to vote," Green said.

In 1976, Green was in a runoff with Howard N. Lee of Chapel Hill. The race gave rise to discussion about the chances of blacks in runoffs.

In an eight-candidate field, Lee, who is black, led the first primary with 28 percent of the vote compared to Green with 27 percent. In the runoff, Green won with 56 percent of the vote to Lee's 44 percent.

Democratic voter turnout dropped from 37.5 percent to 30.5 percent between primaries.

"I think the runoff was designed for honorable reasons," Lee said. "And I don't think it is being used as a conscious tool to keep blacks out of office."

"It is having that effect, and it is making it increasingly difficult for a minority candidate to succeed," he noted.

As in other Southern states, North Carolina's runoff is a product of one-party politics. The Democrats dominated the region from the turn of the century until the late 1950s when Republicans began their resurgence.

"They (runoffs) started in the South when the general election became meaningless," said Merle Black, associate professor of political science at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

"If two-party politics really becomes a reality here, we would probably see a move away from the runoff, but right now I think it's pretty entrenched," Black said.

Views On Dental Health

Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S. P.A.

WHAT IS ROOT CANAL?

Years ago, a badly infected tooth was doomed to be pulled. Today, that's a last resort. Root canal treatment consists of: 1) the removal of the infected pulp that lies within the root canals of the tooth, and 2) the sealing of the root ends to prohibit any further infection.

The pulp is the tooth's center core of soft tissue (nerves, blood vessels and fibers). When the dentist removes a "nerve" from a tooth, he really removes pulpal tissue that contains the nerve. Removing the pulp from the tooth does not produce a "dead" tooth. It will be very much alive and functioning because it has a source of blood and nerve supply from the surrounding tissues that hold it in place. The tooth will have no sense of feeling because the nerve has been removed, but the tooth itself will be fine; it should last as long as your other teeth and could even be eventually used as an anchor tooth for a denture bridge.

Prepared as a public service to promote better dental health. From the office of: Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S. P.A. Evans St., Phone: 752-5126.

Light Voter Turnout Is Anticipated On Tuesday

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A light voter turnout is anticipated in Tuesday's runoff primary, with the heaviest voting expected in the 2nd Congressional District race where H.M. "Mickey" Michaux seeks to become the state's first black congressman this century.

The only other major races features four candidates who are seeking two seats on the North Carolina Court of Appeals.

Michaux led the voting in last month's Democratic primary in the 2nd District with 44 percent of the vote, but Nashville attorney I.T. "Tim" Valentine called for a runoff after gaining 33 percent in the three-way race.

The winner faces Republican Jack Marin, a former professional basketball player, in the November general election.

Voter turnout for the first primary was fairly heavy, 54 percent, in the 2nd District, but it was low — less than 40 percent — statewide.

State Elections Director Alex Brock said he's not making a prediction of voter turnout this time. But he said an extremely low turnout is likely in most places except the 2nd District.

"It wouldn't surprise me if it fell off dramatically," he said.

Turnout is likely to be somewhat higher in areas where there are local races. Brock said about 65 of the 100 counties have some kind of local primary. There are runoffs in one state Senate district and three state House districts.

And voter turnout may hold the key to the outcome in the spirited 2nd Congressional District race.

Kevin Smith, campaign manager for Michaux, said his candidate's campaign is running no television commercials for the runoff and probably will run no radio ads. All efforts have focused on getting out the vote, with telephone banks and door-to-door canvassing.

"We've concentrated heavily on field organization this time, making sure everything is in place," Smith said.

Valentine's campaign has run television commercials in the final days, but they have been only in the eastern end of the district, where Valentine's base of support lies.

"It's a different type of campaign this time," he said. "Rather than identifying the candidate with voters, we have to identify the voters."

Michaux, a former U.S. attorney in the Carter administration, has concentrated on economic issues, criticizing Reagan administration policies and blaming Republicans for farm and business failures.

Valentine has aggressively criticized Michaux, seeking to portray him as a big-spending liberal and himself as a conservative.

The congressional seat is the only vacant one in the state this year. It is being given up by Rep. L.H. Fountain, a 30-year incumbent with a solidly conservative record who sided with President Reagan on some major budget votes.

Valentine has called for more federal budget cuts; he supports a constitutional amendment to require a balanced federal budget and opposes the Equal Rights Amendment.

He is the heir to much of Fountain's organization, although reapportionment significantly altered the make-up of the district by adding Durham County. The district runs from west of Durham along the state's northern border to east of Rocky Mount.

Michaux supports re-submitting ERA to the states and calls the constitutional amendment a "smoka screen."

Race has not been an overt issue in the campaign, though many consider it a key underlying issue.

Michaux has drawn his greatest support from Durham, his home county with a large and active black voting population, and from heavily black rural areas of the district.

Four candidates are battling it out for two seats on the Court of Appeals.

— Paul M. Wright, 34, a Wayne County District Court judge, faces Raleigh attorney Sidney Eagles, 41, who finished a close second in a three-way first primary for the seat being given up by Judge Robert Martin.

— Eugene Phillips, 63, a Winston-Salem attorney, faces Horton Rountree, 61, a Pitt County District Court judge and former state legislator, for the seat being given up by Judge Edward Clark. Phillips held a substantial lead in the crowded first primary.

Debate has been muted in the judgeship races because state judicial canons of ethics prevent the candidates from commenting on issues that may come before them.

Most candidates have seen that as preventing them from discussing anything but their records and experience.

The winner of the Wright-Eagles race will face Republican Betty J. Pearce of Greensboro. The winner of the Phillips-Rountree race will have no Republican opposition.

For legislative seats, there are Democratic runoffs in the:

— 2nd House District, Beaufort, Hyde and part of Washington counties. Incumbent Howard Chapin faces Richard Tripp.

— 16th House District, Hoke, Robeson and part of Scotland counties, where six candidates are seeking three seats.

— 20th House District, Franklin and Johnston counties, where four candidates are running for two seats.

— 14th Senate District, Harnett, Lee and most of Wake counties, where William Staton and Casper Holroyd are seeking one seat.

Fewer Acres For Peanuts

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina farmers have planted fewer acres of peanuts this year than they have in at least 40 years, according to the secretary of the North Carolina Peanut Association.

Norfleet Suggs said farmers are expected to harvest 145,000 acres this year — a 17 percent drop from 1981.

The 1981 Farm Bill suspended acreage allotments for three years, allowing farmers to plant as much as they chose more than their poundage quotas.

But many worried that a 1982 bumper crop, on top of the record 1981 harvest, could drive prices below profitable levels, said Suggs.

The recent history of the peanut market is reflected in peanut butter prices.

The average 18-ounce jar of peanut butter sold in 10 major cities in May for $1.49, according to the Peanut Advisory Board. That was down 21.2 percent from an average March 1981 price of $1.89.

The price was only $1.29 before a 1980 drought destroyed much of the peanut crop and drove up prices. But the 1981 harvest was the best ever, sparking the price drop.

North Carolina produces 14 percent of the nation's peanuts.

Gas Leak Blast Kills Woman

OAK CREEK, Colo. (AP) — A 71-year-old woman trying to find a gas leak was killed when an explosion ripped through a one-story bar in this northwest Colorado mining town. The blast injured four other people.

Bessie Dallas, co-owner of the Colorado Bar, was blown about 35 feet in the Saturday night blast, said Maurice Williams, an insurance agent.

Douglas Fohner, 30, one of two people hospitalized, said he was helping bartender Dierdre Dooley, 30, and Mrs. Dallas try to find a gas leak in a rear storage room when the explosion occurred.

During corn harvest is an excellent time to evaluate your weed control program for the previous year. A weedy crop may indicate problems with chemicals used, weather conditions, or application techniques. This is also a good time to record your weed problems so that you can plan a successful program next year.

If you used a herbicide dependent on rainfall and did not get control, inadequate rainfall may be the reason. If rainfall is not received in 10 to 14 days after application, satisfactory control may not be obtained. These chemicals usually control weeds for the first five to eight weeks and then depend on plant competition to take over. Excessive rainfall early could wash out these herbicides and also be the cause of excessive weed growth.

Failure to obtain weed control with preplant incorporated chemicals can usually be traced to the application technique. Improper incorporation, using the wrong incorporation tools, and failure to incorporate soon enough could cause failure with preplant incorporated herbicides. Again, excessive rainfall could help leach out these herbicides and cause weed growth to occur.

Before laying the blame of lack of control on the herbicides be certain that the weeds not controlled were supposed to be controlled by the herbicides you applied.

Corn harvest is an excellent time to evaluate your herbicide program and make plans for future years. While it is fresh in your mind determine if you are satisfied with your present program or if you want to try other herbicides. Make weed maps of fields and farms so that you can select the appropriate herbicide or herbicides for your next crop.

After corn harvest is an excellent time to control johnsongrass with Roundup. If the corn has been combined or cut for silage by the first week in September, rotary mow all johnsongrass in the field. In three to four weeks johnsongrass will regrow reaching the boot stage at which time two quarts per acre of Roundup can be applied to control johnsongrass rhizomes and seedlings. Be sure to control johnsongrass in your next crop.

Bermudagrass can also be controlled in the fall. In late August or early September spot spray the bermudagrass with five quarts of Roundup per acre. Be sure to control bermudagrass in your next crop.

Concern Over Culture Impact

MEXICO CITY (AP) - Western culture's dominance of what the people of the Third World read and watch will come under fire again at UNESCO's second world cultural conference opening in Mexico City today.

Sources close to the U.N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization said the United States and other Western countries won't be able to prevent the two-week, 100-nation conference adopting recommendations that governments do more to regulate cultural pursuits, especially in the field of communications.

The conference will see a renewal of the drive by Third World countries, which UNESCO Director-General Amadou Mahtar M'Bow of Senegal has fostered, for a "new world information order" to replace Western news agencies by national news agencies in Asia, Africa and Latin America.

Governments of the developing countries charge that their news media are dependent for news on Western agencies that ignore their special needs. They also charge that the Western media, in reporting from their countries, concentrate on news unfavorable to them and ignore favorable news.

The Western media charge that UNESCO proposals to strengthen the national news agencies will increase government control over the media and journalists.

The draft agenda for the conference says modern communications have led to the development of "cultural industries" which can "cover the globe with their distribution networks."

"They are thus able to encourage mediocrity, to standardize tastes, to distort certain cultural values and to affect the behavior patterns of many population groups," the agenda says.

The conference will also debate culture and society, efforts to preserve the heritage of disappearing cultures, establishment of new historical districts, cultural cooperation and "measures to foster artistic and intellectual creativity."

"The conference will no doubt wish to examine the contribution of the 'intellectual and moral solidarity of mankind' to the quest for peace," the agenda report said.

UNESCO sources said the Soviet Union, Cuba and other communist countries are expected to introduce resolutions calling for disarmament and an end to neo-colonialism and racism.

The 1,000 delegates include Greek Culture Minister Melina Mercouri, the actress, film director Costa Gavras, actor Charlton Heston.

Fire-Rescue Members Attend Class

DURHAM - Eight members of the Greenville Fire-Rescue Department attended classes at the 21st annual North Carolina Rescue College held at the Durham Public Safety Academy training center here Saturday and Sunday.

Those attending the session included Ronald Moore, Charles J. Walker, James Tyndall, Carl Harris, James Mayo, Gary Coggins, Wayne Wilson and Ben White.

Three former members of the former Greenville Rescue Squad - Joe Burris of Newton, a paramedic with the Catawba County Emergency Medical Services system, Wilburn Small of Wilson, and Stuart Savage of Greenville, a staff writer for The Daily Reflector - were among the staff instructors on hand to lead the third and fourth year and graduate section classes.

Graduate students this year were offered a two-day course in self-contained breathing equipment, while third and fourth year students were offered classes in such skills as the "A" frame, telpher line, ladder as a derrick, gin pole, jib arm and life basket, rappelling, and ladder hinge.

The Rescue College, sponsored by the N.C. Department of Insurance, was founded in Greenville and moved to Raleigh after four years because facilities were inadequate to handle the number of students. The school was moved to Durham's Public Safety Academy training facilities four years ago because of overcrowded facilities in Raleigh.

This year, 411 students were registered for first and second year and graduate classes July 17 and 18, while 265 students were registered for third and fourth year and graduate classes Saturday and Sunday.

Deputies Make Break-In Arrest

A 19-year-old Greenville man has been arrested by Pitt County deputies and charged in connection with a break-in and larceny incident at Venter's Grill on Mumford Road.

Chief Deputy Brooks Oakley said Peter Morrison of 106 W. Moore St., was charged with breaking, entering and larceny at Venter's. Bond was set at $5,000 and a first appearance hearing will be held in District Court here.

Oakley said approximately $500 in meats, allegedly stolen during the incident, was recovered by deputies. Entrance to the restaurant was apparently gained after forcing open a rear door, Oakley said. The incident was reported at 10:18 p.m. Sunday.

Walking Wounded Among Winners At Festival

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Elisa Spitz still blinks at bright lights 2½ weeks after suffering a concussion during skating practice. Greg Louganis spends much of his time explaining the lingering effects of a should injury, and fellow diver Bruce Kimball is just back in competition after losing his spleen as the result of an automobile accident.

Yet these walking wounded were among the medal winners Sunday at the National Sports Festival.

Spitz, 19, of Short Hills, N.J., teamed with Scott Gregory to win the ice dancing gold medal for the second year in a row.

She fell during a practice session earlier this month and suffered a concussion. Her vision was still blurred as late as last week, and it was doubtful the pair would participate.

"But we took it on a day-to-day basis and Luddy said let's try it," Spitz said, referring to their coach, Ron Ludington. The lights, she said, annoyed her during the competition at the Market Square Arena, but after her medal performance, she grinned and said: "It felt great."

Spitz-Gregory, from the Wilmington (Del.) Skate Club, were unanimous first-place choices after both Saturday's compulsory figures and Sunday's free dance. The silver medal went to Renee Roca and Donald Adair, of Flatrock, Mich., while Susan Wayne of Haverford, Pa., and Joseph Druar of Rosemont, Pa., took the bronze.

Louganis, a veteran at 22, won his second gold of the five-day-old festival, taking the men's platform diving title. The Festival was his first major competition since injuring the shoulder 10 months ago, and his performance put him on the U.S. team for this week's world championships in Ecuador. He earlier won the 3-meter springboard.

Also making the team was Kimball, 19, a close friend of Louganis, who finished second in the platform competition Sunday. Doctors removed his spleen following the crash last October, in which he also suffered a cut liver, and it's been just seven weeks since he returned to diving.

"I'm happy that we're both back," said Louganis, who was questioned repeatedly about his recuperation and the effects the shoulder injury might have on his chances for a world title. His answer was always the same: "I can't think about the injury, because then I might hurt it again."

Kimball said there had been "a few times when I had my doubts" about coming back from the crash.

"I'm a more determined human being," he said. "If anything, it's made me a more determined person. It hasn't made me a more determined diver. I've learned there are more important things."

Sunday was the busiest day of the 11-day-long Festival, being held this year for the fourth time, with competition in 23 of the 33 sports. And it completed a weekend in which 27 Festival records were smashed.

The most spectacular record-breaker was Carl Lewis, who leaped 28 feet, 9 inches in the long jump Saturday night. It was the second-longest jump ever and the longest legal leap at sea level.

On Sunday, Lewis watched his sister, Carol, finish third in the women's long jump, where Jodi Anderson broke her own meet mark with a 22-8.

John Powell, a bronze medalist in the 1976 Olympics, set a discus record at 218-4, beating American record-holder Ben Plucknett. Other track records Sunday included Willie Gault in the 110-meter hurdles, Evelyn Ashford in the women's 100-meter dash, Calvin Smith in the men's 100, Dwight Stones in the high jump, James Mays in the 800, Francie Larrieu-Smith in the women's 1,500 and Edna Brown in the women's 400-meter hurdles.

Stones, who cleared 7-6½, missed several tries at an American-record 7-7¾. Those marks fell before 13,238 fans at Indiana University's track-and-field stadium, one of several overflow crowds Sunday. The U.S. Olympic Committee, which runs the Festival, said 6,150 people watched the diving, 5,000 were on hand for cycling, 2,231 viewed equestrian competition and 750 jammed the bleachers for team handball.

There was a less-than-capacity crowd of about 3,000 on hand for boxing, where Craig Payne, a construction worker from Livonia, Mich., won the heavyweight gold medal, taking a unanimous decision from Al Evans of Chicago. The bout originally was set as a semifinal, but became a championship test when Tyrone Biggs, the national amateur champ from Philadelphia, broke his right hand in Saturday's defeat of Lucious Kirkley. Biggs was given the silver medal and Kirkley and Evans shared the bronze.

The only boxer with a chance at two Festival straight titles is Jesse Benavides, a 112-pounder from Corpus Christi, Texas, who won the 106-pound class a year ago in Syracuse, N.Y. He beat defending 112-pound king Fred Perkins, of Ft. Bragg, N.C., by unanimous decision.

Lewis, who helped the South team win the 400-meter relay Saturday night, and Louganis are among four double-gold medal winners thus far in the Festival, which runs through July 31. The others are Ken Swanson, 19, of Birmingham, Ala., in the air pistol and free pistol, and Elizabeth McKay, from Huntsville, Ala., in the air rifle and standard rifle.

'Deserving' Peete Wins Rain-Shortened Classic

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Cal Peete has a partially-disabled left arm, 18 brothers and sisters and the unmitigated respect of his fellow pros on the PGA Tour.

"If it's any consolation, Hal, that man deserved to win," Bill Rogers said to Hal Sutton, an unsuccessful challenger to Peete in Sunday's final round of the storm-shortened Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic.

"That's the greatest round of golf I ever saw," said Rogers, who played with Peete in the final threesome legging it over the hills of the 6,684-yard, par-71 Kingsmill Golf Club course.

He saw a monotonous series of drives that split the fairway. He saw approach shots that seemed to cover the flag on every shot. And he saw enough putts disappear to produce a 2-under-par 69 and Peete's second victory in three weeks.

This one came on a 203 total, 10 strokes under par for three rounds. The tournament format was cut from the regulation 72 holes to a 54-hole event after a series of thunderstorms disrupted Friday's play.

The sponsors, however, offered to pay the full tournament purse of $350,000, even though the reduction of the tournament's length provided them with the option of cutting the purse by 25 percent.

"I'd like to thank Anheuser-Busch for making this a 54-hole tournament," the weary Peete said. "If we'd had to go another 18 holes, I don't think I could have made it."

His closest pursuer wasn't so sure.

"It looks like Cal can handle any kind of situation, these days," said Bruce Lietzke, who played about a half hour in front of Peete, once had a share of the lead and posted his final round of 66 and a 205 total when Peete had four holes to play.

"Cal had a one-shot lead," Lietzke said. "I kind of mentally reviewed the holes he had to play, and I didn't like my chances at all. All he had to do was go to his strength, drive it in the fairway and hit it on the green."

"He didn't have to muscle any of the holes. He didn't have to be pumping wood. He just had to do what he does best. And, as it turned out, I was a prophet."

Peete, recognized among his peers as the game's most accurate player, did just that. He hit it in the fairway, put it on the green and, on the 17th, dropped an 8-foot birdie putt that gave him a two-shot lead with one hole to play.

He brought it home with ease, acquiring a $63,000 first prize, his third career title, his second in a three-week period and a berth in the World Series of Golf. He won the Milwaukee Open earlier this month.

Sutton and Rick Massengale tied for third at 206. Sutton had a closing 69 and Massengale shot 70.

Rogers was next at 71-207. The group at 208 included Doug Tewell, Victor Regalado, Peter Oosterhuis and David Edwards. Tewell and Regalado each had a last-round 67, Oosterhuis 68 and Edwards 70.

Peete, 39, one of few blacks on the tour, is a completely self-taught player. He's never had a lesson. He didn't take up the game until 23 and had to contend with a left arm lacking mobility, the result of a childhood accident. He didn't join the tour until the relatively-advanced age of 33.

He came to golf's highest level of competition with an uncanny ability to keep the ball in play, to hit it straight. "It's just something that came naturally to me," said Peete, who once made a living selling jewelry from the trunk of his car to migrant farm workers.

Peete led the tour last year in both accuracy categories, percentage of drives in the fairway and greens hit in regulation. He again leads the tour in the percentage of drives in the fairway.

"It's a great feeling to be recognized as being good at what you do," he said. "It's something to be proud of. Beating these guys at anything is a great feeling for me."

U.S. Federation Champs...

(Continued from page 9) Navratilova said. "My palms were all wet. I was really nervous. I was really glad we won that first match."

Lloyd, playing sluggishly against the charged-up Kohde in the first set, found her rhythm in the second set and began to dictate the tempo of the match. As Lloyd grew stronger, the German weakened in the hot midday sun.

Kohde, 6-0½, was superb at the net in the opening set against Lloyd, rushing in aggressively behind a powerful first serve and volleying winners out of the Lloyd's reach.

The turning point in the two-hour match came in the third game of the second set when Lloyd blasted a forehand winner cross-court to break Kohde and take a 2-1 lead.

Navratilova left her seat in the stands and went to talk to Lloyd.

"She came down just for encouragement," Lloyd said. "She told me to hang in there."

Lloyd said she did the same thing for Navratilova when she was struggling against Czechoslovakia's Hana Mandlikova in the semifinals.

Hearns Eyes WBC Champ After Victory

DETROIT (AP) — Thomas Hearns has successfully returned to the ring after a five-month break, and that may be bad news for most middleweight boxers.

Hearns, the former World Boxing Association welterweight champion, resumed his drive to a title fight in the 160-pound division, stopping previously undefeated Jeff McCracken Sunday in the eighth round of a nationally-televised bout scheduled for ten rounds.

"I think I can hit a middleweight like I hit welterweights," Hearns said. "I plan to have another fight, and then I want to fight (World Boxing Council junior middleweight champion) Wilfred Benitez in September."

"I'm here in this division to stay and they're going to have to come and get me here."

The 23-year-old Detroit native is unbeaten in three middleweight fights after fashioning a 32-1 record with 29 knockouts in the 147-pound welterweight division.

"I want to be a champion again because that opens a lot of doors for you," he said.

Hearns would like a fight before the end of the year with middleweight champ Marvin Hagler, the man he was scheduled to face in June until Hearns injured a finger.

Hearns lost his WBA crown to Sugar Ray Leonard in a title unification bout Sept. 16. But Hearns said he will not fight again in that bracket, leaving it open for Milton McCrory, his undefeated teammate on the Kronk boxing club.

Hearns had not fought since Feb. 27, when he knocked out Marcos Geraldo in one minute, 47 seconds of the first round.

During Sunday's fight, Hearns decked McCracken twice in the second round, flooring him early with an overhand right, then dropping him again with a short right following a series of punches that opened a cut over his opponent's left eye just before the bell.

Hearns gained control of the bout in the sixth when he bounced off the ropes and wobbled McCracken with a right hook before chasing him about the ring with a volley of punches.

Referee Harry Papacharalamabous stopped the fight at 1:29 of the eighth round

Candelaria Four-Hits Braves

By The Associated Press

For several years now, John Candelaria of the Pittsburgh Pirates has been trying to live up to his masterful 1977 season. He hasn't come close to that 20-5 record and National League-leading 2.34 earned run average — but Sunday, at least, he looked like the same kind of pitcher.

"That's as great as he can pitch," said Pittsburgh Manager Chuck Tanner after the skinny left-hander hurled a four-hitter to lead the Pirates to an 8-0 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

"I think John Candelaria is one of the best pitchers in baseball," Tanner added. "I've thought that ever since I've been here."

Since 1977, though, Candelaria has posted mediocre records of 12-11, 14-9, 11-14 and 2-2 last season, when he suffered an arm injury which knocked him out of action for most of the year.

The New York-born southpaw has lost much of the velocity from his once-powerful fastball but still showed Sunday that his control was on target.

"My location was good," said Candelaria, 7-4, who hurled his first complete game in two years and fired his first shutout since April 1978. "But I didn't have a good fastball. I'm a control pitcher. I don't have the strength in my arm yet."

Candelaria's latest performance was helped by the Pirates defense, which turned over three double plays. The only other runner was picked off base — so Candelaria pitched to the minimum 27 batters.

Candelaria, who has given up only two earned runs in his last four starts, got the only run he needed in the second inning when Dave Parker tripled home a run. Pittsburgh blew the game open with a five-run spurt in the seventh inning, including a home run by Steve Nicosia.

Meanwhile, the Braves left for home still holding the best record in baseball but glad to have seen the last of the Pirates.

"This ballclub has manhandled us this year," Atlanta Manager Joe Torre said of the Pirates, who took the season series 8-4. "I'm glad we're out of here."

Cardinals 4, Astros 3

George Hendrick's two-out double in the eighth inning scored Keith Hernandez from first base with the winning run as St. Louis nipped Houston. Hendrick's hit came off Don Sutton, 9-7, after the Astros had earned a 3-3 tie in the top of the eighth on Art Howe's RBI single.

Bruce Sutter, 7-5, the fourth St. Louis hurler, got the victory with 12-3 innings of relief.

"They bunched their hits in the right place and got the key hits," said Houston Manager Bill Virdon. "And they got good pitching. That's the key to the game."

Phillies 1, Dodgers 0

Steve Carlton pitched a five-hitter for his 50th career shutout as Philadelphia beat Los Angeles. The victory, which enabled the Phillies to remain in a virtual tie with St. Louis in the NL East, was Carlton's first in Los Angeles in 10 years. The last time he won in Dodger Stadium was July 23, 1972.

Manny Trillo, who tied a National League record for most consecutive errorless games, drove in the game's only run with a second-inning single off Jerry Reuss, 10-8. Bill Robinson, aboard on a fielder's choice, stole second and came home on Trillo's base hit.

Trillo played his 85th consecutive errorless game to tie an NL season record for second basemen set in 1970 by the New York Mets' Ken Boswell. Trillo has committed only one error this year, on a throw he made on the first ball he handled this season.

Giants 3, Expos 2

Chili Davis and Jack Clark belted run-scoring singles in the eighth inning, and San Francisco erupted for three unearned runs to stun Montreal.

Montreal's Scott Sanderson, 6-9, entered the eighth with a 1-0 lead and a three-hitter but was lifted in the midst of the Giants' game-breaking rally.

Winner Rich Gale, 5-9, fell behind 1-0 in the second on Frank Taveras' sacrifice fly.

Greg Minton took over in the ninth after Gale left the game for a pinch-hitter and was touched for a leadoff homer by Andre Dawson, his 13th, concluding the scoring.

Padres 3, Mets 2

Tony Gwynn's RBI single in the 10th inning led San Diego over New York. With one out, Tim Flannery drew a walk off Neil Allen, 3-6. Pittman ran for Flannery and took third on Broderick Perkins' single. Allen then intentionally walked Gene Richards before Gwynn delivered his game-winning hit.

Luis DeLeon, 4-3, got the victory with three innings in relief of John Montefusco.

The Mets had gone ahead 2-1 in the top of the ninth on Mookie Wilson's home run before the Padres tied it in the bottom of the inning on Rupert Jones' RBI single.

Reds 2, Cubs 1

Alex Trevino whacked a pair of hits and drove in a run, and Bruce Berenyi fired a five-hitter to pace Cincinnati over Chicago.

Trevino drove in Ron Oester with a triple in the second inning that gave the Reds a 2-0 lead off Ferguson Jenkins, 6-11.

Berenyi, 7-10, retired the first eight batters he faced before Jenkins singled in the third. Jenkins had two of the Cubs' hits, including an RBI single with two out in the fifth.

Jackson, Angels Whip Yanks To Stay in First

By The Associated Press

No matter where he is, Reggie Jackson feels right at home — as long as he's in first place.

With the California Angels 3,000 miles from home, beating the Yankees 6-4 in New York Sunday, Reggie and his teammates remained two games ahead of second-place Kansas City in the American League West.

"I've always been there," he said when someone mentioned his new club was in first place. "When I was with Oakland, I was in first place. When I was with the Yankees, I was in first again. And now I'm in first again. There ain't nothin' unusual about it."

But what about the new collection of stars Yankees boss George Steinbrenner has assembled — a fifth-place team — that didn't attract a record crowd until Reggie returned?

"I don't want to say anything," Jackson replied diplomatically. "I don't want to get involved in 'Reggie said this,' or 'Reggie said that.'"

And with Reggie back in New York for three games, the Yankees rang up a profitable weekend. No. 44 attracted a paid attendance of 149,792, the most for any three-game series in the major leagues this year, the Yankees said.

"I want a thank-you note from George," he said with a grin.

Reggie owes the Yanks' pitchers a note of thanks. In 39 at-bats against them, Jackson garnered 15 hits — a .385 average — with five home runs and eight runs batted in.

While Sunday's 51,561 fans came to see Jackson (he had an infield hit in three at-bats), they were also force-fed 62-3 innings of four-hit shutout relief by Mickey Mahler, who recorded his first AL win.

"To think I was in Spokane just two weeks ago, pitching Triple A ball and thinking I'm 29 and getting old," Mahler mused. "Then all of a sudden inning and led off the seventh with his 16th homer of the season as the Orioles handed Oakland its third consecutive loss and ninth in 11 games.

Rickey Henderson stole one base to bring his season total to 92 in 98 games for the A's.

Indians 5, Mariners 3

Toby Harrah's 19th homer gave Cleveland what proved to be its winning run in the fifth inning as the Indians survived homers by Richie Zisk, his 11th, and Al Cowens, his 13th, to beat Seattle.

Tigers 7-7, Rangers 2-6

In the opener, it was 2-2 in the seventh when Glenn Wilson singled and Alan Trammell hit his fifth homer of the season, off Danny Darwin. Jerry Turner and Chet Lemon hit solo homers in the eighth off Texas' Dan Bortano.

In the second game, Texas turned a 4-0 deficit into a 6-4 lead on Lee Mazzilli's two-run homer in the sixth and two-run singles by Larry Parrish and Billy Sample in the seventh. But the Tigers tied it in the eighth on RBI hits by Glenn Wilson and Richie Hebner and won in the ninth when Tom Brookens, safe on shortstop Doug Flynn's error, came around on singles by Rick Leach and Enos Cabell.

Jake Loftin and Lavern Mayo came from two strokes back in the final round to win the Sunday Bestball Tournament with a 31-under-par 77 last night at the Greenville Putt Putt golf course.

Danny Pollard and Johnny Carrow led with a 50 going into the final round, with three teams tied for second place, two strokes back. But, a final round of 25 clinched the win for Loftin and Mayo.

Ray Taft and Gator Knox shot an ace on the final hole to tie Pollard and Carrow at 79 and force a playoff. Taft and Knox won on the second hole of sudden death for second place.

Robert Beacham and Bryan Evans were fourth with an 80. Bobby Ippock and Jeff Taft were fifth with an 83.

Time Lag Still Bothers Live TV News Coverage

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — With much fanfare, the first installment of "NBC News Overnight" brought viewers live coverage of the lunar eclipse. But, three hours later, when the program was seen in the West Coast, NBC was still showing the same scene — the eclipse on tape — with the moon clearly visible over Los Angeles.

You can make all the jokes you want about California viewers being laid back and less likely to complain about getting today tomorrow, but news lag is a real problem when broadcasts originate in New York and are seen on tape three hours later in the Pacific time zone.

"The country is in the wrong shape for television news," says Ernest Leiser, a CBS News vice president, referring to the nation's wide beltline necessitating four time zones. "It should be more like Chile or Argentina."

The situation won't get easier Oct. 4, when CBS begins its wee-hours broadcast, "News Watch," from 2 a.m.-6 a.m. EDT, followed by the "CBS Morning News."

When the East is getting fresh stuff, will overnight viewers on the West Coast be seeing old news?

"It will be complicated," says Leiser. "Basically, we'll be coming out of two different control rooms and transmitting in two different ways. We'll update, but we won't bother with minor changes on 'Night Watch.'"

Incidentally, since Cable News Network provides round-the-clock news, it doesn't have a time-zone problem. CNN feeds stories everywhere at the same time.

"CNN — and to a certain extent the networks — are moving away from programs toward the ongoing nature of stories," says Robert E. Frye, executive producer of news for ABC's "Good Morning America" and "This Morning." "Stand by to update Hawaii" is something we kid about. But, with satellite delivery, it's not really that far away."

Satellite transmission, increased viewer appetite for news and escalating network news competition have contributed to greater vigilance in delivering updated news to Los Angeles, the nation's second largest market, and other West Coast cities.

Steve Friedman, executive producer of NBC's "Today" show, says he began doing Pacific Coast updates for the broadcast when he was the program's producer in Los Angeles in the late 1970s. "Before 'Good Morning America,' we didn't update 'Today.'"

They do now — sometimes. "Our M.O. is when it's of sufficient interest and it's a changing news story, we update," says Ron Steinman, producer of NBC's "Early Today."

George Merlis, executive producer of the "CBS Morning News," says updates usually involve a network correspondent in Los Angeles breaking into the network newscast. With the show's block format, it's relatively simple to get "Morning News" anchors Bill Kurtis and Diane Sawyer back into the picture.

Occasionally, a breaking story is so big that the main anchors remain in the studio after the morning shows are off the air in the East. The IRA bombings in London last Tuesday was such a story.

"Today," "GMA" and the "CBS Morning News" all kept their on-air personnel in the studio to provide live reports for the West — and the Central time zone — at the beginning of each half hour. "It was like a lot of trains leaving the station at the same time," says Frye.

"You can't have KNX (all-news radio in Los Angeles) say nine people are dead when we're reporting two fatalities," says Friedman. "But at some point, it would be counterproductive to keep our anchors around too long, plus there are other problems — money, the availability of satellite transmission, and the schedules of our in-studio crews."

The evening newscasts utilize similar techniques for freshening broadcasts, although CBS experimented with a Western Edition in the late 1970s. (It's since been dropped.) Correspondent Terry Drinkwater provided a regionalized segment, which replaced some of Walter Cronkite's broadcast.

"I was scared to death of it. I thought it was going to be a success," says Arthur Lord, an NBC News executive who was then the network's Los Angeles bureau chief. "Our research showed that audiences were uneasy. They didn't know what they had missed. They also missed Walter."

The other side to this story is that the three-hour difference allows West Coast viewers to get more afternoon and evening news during normal waking hours. Local stations can use network film — without the correspondents — in their local newscasts, before Dan Rather, Roger Mudd and Frank Reynolds can introduce the material.

And, when President Reagan has a 9 p.m. EDT news conference, he can get on the networks' newscasts at 7 p.m., Pacific time. Meanwhile, at 10 p.m. in the East, viewers who haven't watched the president might be considered behind the times.

Author Modest About Acclaim

MIDDLETOWN, Conn. (AP) — After a half-century of writing, award-winning novelist Paul Horgan is still surprised at the acclaim his work receives.

"Somewhat of a national treasure" was how one prominent critic described Horgan after his latest novel, "Mexico Bay," appeared earlier this year.

"I'm always surprised by the reaction to my books," the 78-year-old author-in-residence at Wesleyan University said in a recent interview. "It's pleasing and certainly unexpected."

Horgan is probably best known for his work on the Southwest. He won the Pulitzer and Bancroft prizes for his monumental work, "Great River: the Rio Grande in North American History," in 1954 and another Pulitzer Prize for history in 1976 for "Lamy of Santa Fe," a book on the life and times of the first archbishop of Santa Fe, N.M.

What is unusual about "Mexico Bay" is the manner in which the finished product occurred. Horgan said the fourth draft, which had been accepted by his publisher as the final version, was 700 pages long.

"I decided on the way back from New York that it was too much. So, I took out 400 pages in rewriting it," he said.

"A lot of those 400 pages survived between the lines, I think. In other words, what I learned about the characters (in the longer version) was implicit in the final version."

It took him most of 1981 to prepare the novel.

The primary setting for "Mexico Bay" is not the Southwest, although the body of water and its many moods serve as a metaphor for the work, Horgan said. Rather, the novel focuses on the intense lifestyle of Washington, D.C., during the early years of World War II.

ALL TOGETHER NOW — Miss Universe contestants run through the opening production number for the pageant to be held in Lima (Peru) tonight. Front row, from left, are Telma Nonis, Miss Singapore; Karen Baldwin, Miss Canada; Seaya Morey, Miss Dominican Republic; Ana Valdez, Miss Portugal;

Marie-Pierre Lemaitre, Miss Belgium; and Terri Utley, Miss USA. Tight security measures have been taken to protect the contestants with police in riot gear mobilized, after a string of weekend bombing attacks on the U.S. Embassy and the local branches of two foreign companies. (AP Laserphoto)

'E.T.' Is Captivating The Moviegoers

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Each hot, sunny day, 12-year-olds Felipe Zea, Tamer Ayasli and Jeffrey Russo hustle passersby on a Manhattan sidewalk to support their summer addiction.

Their game is cold lemonade for cash. Their habit is a slimy creature with bulging eyes, webbed feet and an inhuman desire to phone home.

Stallone Wants Outdoor 'Fight'

WARREN, Ohio (AP) — Actor Sylvester Stallone, whose "Rocky" movies helped spur new interest in boxing, watched a real-life championship fight and told the crowd he wished he had done "Rocky III" differently.

Surveying 17,500 people gathered Saturday at an outdoor high school stadium to watch local hero Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini successfully defend his lightweight title, Stallone said he wanted to film the fight scenes for "Rocky III" outdoors.

"But the producers said we'd never get a crowd large enough," said Stallone, who portrayed heavyweight champion Rocky Balboa in his three Rocky movies, all commercial successes.

"I don't know if I'm going to do a 'Rocky IV,' because the legs are going fast," Stallone said. "But if I do, this is where I'll do it."

his name, as you probably know, unless you've been cut off from civilization a while, is "E.T. — The Extra-Terrestrial." And with his oversized, glowing heart, he's been capturing the fancy of moviegoers since he touched down in earthbound theaters six weeks ago.

As soon as Felipe, Tamer and Jeffrey have filled their pockets with the day's lemonade profits, they head up the block to spend it on tickets to E.T.; they've seen it a combined total of 19 times.

E.T.'s own summertime business is bringing in about $3 million a day — not including sales of buttons, T-shirts and other assorted E.T. paraphernalia.

Why is E.T. so popular? A Menninger Foundation psychiatrist in Topeka, Kan., cites the timeless appeal of childhood innocence. A UFO expert in Clarksburg, W.Va., says people like the idea of friendly aliens. The young lemonade peddlers call it a movie about love.

E.T. is the story of a lovable otherworldly botanist accidentally left behind by his fellow aliens during a nature walk on earth. Chronically homesick and pursued by adults who see his value in cold, scientific terms, E.T. follows a candy trail to the closet of Elliott Taylor, who offers him refuge and friendship.

There, in young Elliott's suburban California home, E.T. goes trick-or-treating, gets soused on beer, learns to speak by watching Sesame Street, and devises a plan to "phone home" and be rescued after seeing a telephone commercial and a Buck Rogers comic strip.

Since the movie's release, critics have been dusting off their supply of shiny phrases, comparing the film to such classics as "Peter Pan" and "The Wizard of Oz," and delving into the childhood of director Steven Spielberg for clues to the source of all this summertime magic.

"The best Disney film Disney never made," said Variety. "One of the funniest, sweetest love stories in movie history," exulted The Washington Post. "An all-around great movie," said lemonade salesman Jeffrey, after seeing it for the fourth time.

A.—You fulfilled your obligation with your first response. Now you should retire gracefully from the auction. There is no reason why you should give a false preference to two spades — hearts should be as good a contract, or better, than spades. Pass.

 What do you bid now?
A.—Don't give up on slam too quickly. Even though partner couldn't open the bidding, he did come in freely at the two-level. Almost any hand where he has a heart control could easily produce a slam. Start your probe with a cue-bid of three spades. When you later bid five diamonds, partner should get the message of what you need for slam.

A.—Thus far, you have only told partner that you have a minimum opening bid. In fact, you are maximum for your bidding to this point, with a wealth of controls, and a fit for both of his suits. The only way to advise partner of how much your hand has improved is by taking a jump preference to three spades.

Therefore, you cannot expect to have a better fit than that of your clubs. Since partner probably has five clubs for his raise and your values are prime, you should expect to make two clubs even against a trump stack.

A.—Many players would now make the mistake of bidding three no trump. But ask yourself why didn't partner make that bid? The only explanation is that he has doubt about a no trump contract because his spade holding is inadequate. Since your spades cannot ally those doubts, we suggest you show your heart support. Partner will know that you have only three hearts, but the 4-3 fit could play extremely well.

What do you bid now?
A.—From a discouraging start, the auction has taken a turn for the better. Normally, we would suggest that you raise clubs now to establish a fit, but that could land you in the wrong contract — three no trump or four hearts might be the only makable game. We suggest a bid of two spades. Depending on partner's rebid, you can then raise clubs. That shows the three-suited nature of your hand, and will allow partner to proceed naturally.

Thousands of red, white and blue flags will wave proudly today as the first republic on the African continent celebrates its national day. In Liberia's early years, it received major financial contributions from Francis Scott Key and James Monroe. Liberia's currency is dollars, and its cities include Greenville, Harper, Buchanan and Marshall. In some ways Liberia has been more American than African. Freed American slaves founded the country in 1822 and dominated the other 95% of Liberia's population until 1980. For more than 100 years, the Americo-Liberians' True Whig party won every election. But a military coup in 1980 may lead Liberia into somewhat more un-American activities as the tribal majority attains power.

ANOTHER CIVIL WAR — Members of the Third North Carolina State Troops let loose a volley of musket fire during a civil war re-enactment, which was held in Valle Crucis on Saturday and Sunday. Three Die In Crash Of Plane In Wake County

FRANKLINTON, N.C. (AP) — Three parachutists died and two other members of a skydiving club were injured Sunday when their single-engine plane crashed shortly after taking off from the Franklin County Airport.

The Franklin County Sheriff's Department identified the dead as Frank Crawford, 52, of Cary; Paul Guffee of Apex; and pilot Joel Busch of Louisburg. Their bodies were taken to the state medical examiner's office in Chapel Hill.

The injured were identified as Michael Dicello, 25, and Michael Baldivid, 20, both of Raleigh, said Mary Bryant, emergency room supervisor at Franklin Memorial Hospital. She said the two were later taken to Wake Medical Center in Raleigh for testing.

Dicello was listed in stable condition early today and Baldivid was listed in guarded condition at Wake hospital spokesman said.

The crash of the Cessna 182 occurred about 2:15 p.m., said the supervisor of the Federal Aviation Administration's Raleigh Flight Center, who asked that his name not be used.

The plane crashed into a field about 5 miles east of Franklinton off N.C. 56, about three-fourths of a mile from a dirt landing strip north of the airport, according to WRAL-TV in Raleigh. Dicello, who suffered a fractured thumb, broken ribs and lacerations, said in a telephone interview Sunday night from his hospital room that he did not know the reason for the crash.

"We just didn't make it up," he said. "That's about all I can say right now. Nobody said anything. It happened so quick. We went up and the next thing I knew we were down again. I'm just lucky to be here."

Witnesses told investigators that the plane, which was carrying a pilot and four passengers, apparently had trouble climbing. The plane almost hit an occupied home about a quarter of a mile from the end of the runway, said Sgt. Walter T. Upright of the state Highway Patrol.

"It missed it by inches and struck a tree on the far side," he said.

Myrtle Phelps, owner of the house that the plane nearly hit, said she heard a noise and looked outside to see the crash.

"We've got a big pecan tree in our yard," she said. "It hit that and crashed over in the field."

The plane came to rest upside down. Some gasoline spilled from its tanks, but there was no fire.

Upright said a pilot who saw the crash from the ground told him the plane appeared to be traveling too slow and too low.

"It just never gained the altitude it needed," Upright said. "It didn't seem to be overloaded, though, because it normally carries four passengers."

Paul Fayard, owner of the Franklin County Sport Parachute Center, said he owned the plane.

Fayard said there had been no indication of trouble. "It was about 150-200 feet off the ground when it just started sinking," said Fayard, who was in another aircraft at the time.

He said skydiving operations were suspended after the crash.

Dicello said he plans to continue skydiving once he recovers from his injuries.

Dye And Bryant In Stage Roles

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Football coaches Paul "Bear" Bryant of Alabama and Pat Dye of Auburn will move from the sidelines to the stage next week, making their theatrical debuts in the same bit part.
 Each will appear in one performance during a six-show run in Birmingham of "Guys and Dolls," a musical comedy about New York gamblers.
 The coaches-turned-actors will play a bum at the Salvation Army and will be on stage only a minute, long enough to finish a bowl of soup and walk off without saying a word.
 Bryant will appear Monday, wearing his trademark houndstooth hat. Dye will appear Tuesday.
 For Bryant, the part reunites him with one of his former players and the star of the show, Joe Namath. Namath played at Alabama and later was quarterback for the New York Jets in the National Football League.
 "Coach Bryant won't have any lines in the play, but then he doesn't have to," said director James Hatcher. "His presence will certainly be felt. We're just delighted he's going to be with us."

Leaf Industry Debates Tax Sales Impact

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Government economists and tobacco industry leaders disagree over how much cigarette consumption would drop if a proposed 8 cents a pack increase in federal taxes on cigarettes is approved.
 But those experts agree that the tax increase, which could prove crucial to North Carolina where half of the 736 billion cigarettes are made, will probably prompt some people to quit smoking or cut back their habit.
 The proposed tax increase, which would double the federal tax on cigarettes, goes to the House of Representatives this week. The Senate approved a $98.5-billion tax increase package Friday.
 The Treasury Department has predicted a 4 percent drop in consumption if the tax increase is approved.
 "The drop in consumption is not substantial," said a U.S. Treasury Department economist who has studied the proposed increase and who asked that her name not be used.
 "The only area where you see significant elasticity (percentage decline in consumption) is youth smoking, smoking in prisons and places where cigarettes are a large part of a person's income," the Treasury Department spokesman said.
 Tobacco growers disagree and say the drop in consumption would be large enough to cause problems in a tobacco state like North Carolina.

"You're talking a 5 to 10 percent falloff in consumption," said Reggie Lester, head of the Tobacco Growers Information Committee in Raleigh. "Obviously we think that's not a good idea because tobacco growers are in the business to produce leaf for smoking by those who choose to do it...."
 "This commodity is already carrying a tremendous tax burden."
