See Message In Disinterest Of Voters

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Eugene Phillips apparently has won himself a judgeship and Sidney Eagles has won a judicial nomination. But the real message North Carolina voters sent Tuesday was a different one — they aren't very interested in electing judges.

Only about 300,000 of North Carolina's 1.8 million registered Democrats bothered to vote in Tuesday's statewide runoff primary.

And the voter turnout, low except in isolated cases, is likely to give rise to a re-examination of the way North Carolina selects its judges and, perhaps, the way it provides for runoff primaries.

"It's pitiful," observed William Culp, supervisor of elections in Mecklenburg County. "It's really ridiculous to have an election and no one comes out."

"When they don't come out and vote, they're sending us a message," he added. "And we better start listening to them."

The 16 percent or so turnout pretty well matched the predictions of a "pathetic" vote made by state Elections Director Alex Brock. But it might not have been even that high.

More than a third of the vote came in the 11 counties of the 2nd Congressional District, where a spirited race with racial overtones provided the draw. In a surprisingly heavy vote, some 60 percent of the Democrats in that district turned out as white lawyer Tim Valentine beat black lawyer Mickey Michaux for the nomination.

But in areas where there were no local runoffs, where the races for nominations to two seats on the state Court of Appeals were the only ones on the ballot, the result was laughable.

In Mecklenburg County, Culp expected a low turnout and abandoned the usual use of voting machines. He borrowed ballot boxes from neighboring counties and used paper ballots for the first time in 15 years.

Culp's prediction of a 4 percent turnout was overly optimistic. In Mecklenburg, where Charlotte is the largest city in the state, 2,143 voted in Eagle's race; four less voted in Phillips'. That is fewer than 2 percent of the registered Democrats.

In Forsyth County, Phillips' home, turnout was 3 1/2 percent. Phillips' nomination was tantamount to election as he faces no Republican opposition, while Eagles will have a GOP opponent in the general election.

PLO Warned To Flee An Ultimatum By Israel

By The Associated Press
Israel gave the PLO a new ultimatum today to flee west Beirut, and Israeli divebombers, gunboats, tanks and artillery relentlessly blasted guerrilla targets in the Lebanese capital.

In Jerusalem, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin said U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib promised to seek "an unequivocal commitment" by the Palestine Liberation Organization to leave Beirut, and would give Israel the answer by Friday.

Begin, standing firm on his insistence that the estimated 8,000 trapped PLO guerrillas agree to leave Lebanon entirely, said that only such a commitment would avert an Israeli assault on the city.

He said Syria, Jordan and Egypt each have apparently agreed to take in some of the guerrillas, but that "it is still not clear if the terrorists have even really decided to leave Beirut."

Habib, scheduled to return to Beirut today, met Begin Tuesday night after seeing the leaders of Syria, Saudi Arabia, Egypt and Jordan.

Israeli newspapers said the American diplomat hoped Syria would grant asylum to leaders of the PLO, Jordan would accept members with Jordanian citizenship, and Egypt would take the rest of the guerrillas under siege in west Beirut.

In Cairo, Rep. Paul McCloskey, R-Calif., said that

Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak expressed willingness to host Palestinians evacuated from west Beirut if there was some assurance from the United States they would some day have a homeland. McCloskey is a member of a five-member congressional delegation that has also talked with leaders in Lebanon, Syria and Israel.

Habib told Begin he had made progress and there was "a chance he will succeed in fulfilling his mission," an Israeli official reported.

While the besieged Lebanese capital trembled under the thunderous air and sea barrages, Israeli ground forces and guerrillas duelled with heavy artillery and rockets on Beirut's southern and eastern outskirts, correspondents reported.

Lebanese police said 203 people were killed and 297 wounded in the previous air, sea and land bombardment that began at midnight Monday and continued for 30 hours. However, a PLO communique said put the toll at 247 dead and 395 wounded in Palestinian camps, where police have no access, and in residential neighborhoods.

Witnesses said Tuesday's raid was the heaviest Israeli bombardment of the beleaguered Lebanese capital since Israel invaded Lebanon June 6 and drove to the gates of Beirut to ensnare the PLO fighters.

Divebombing Israeli jets and gunboats offshore pounded a west Beirut beachfront residential district where PLO guerrillas had thrown up barricades and mined one street.

In one block, two apartment buildings, one eight stories tall, were destroyed, and seven others were badly damaged during the afternoon air raids. Costa Rican Consul Abdel Baki, who lived in the neighborhood, said about 200 Palestinian refugees lived in the eight-story building, which took a direct hit.

One of Begin's aides said he brushed aside Tsongas' concern about an Israeli attack on Beirut.

"Beirut is a city?" he reportedly said. "Beirut is an armed camp of our most beastly enemies."

Preparing For Sales

Ray Dixon checks over his tobacco at Farmer's Warehouse prior to Tuesday's first sale. Dixon, a farmer, had several piles on the sale floor. First-day results in Greenville were disappointing for farmers after the record 1981 season. Greenville trailed the other 12 opening markets on the Eastern Belt Tuesday with an average of $140.45 per hundred pounds. (Reflector Photo By Mary Schulken)

Phillips Wins In Court Race

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

"There's not much I can say," Horton Rountree said this morning, "except to congratulate Gene Phillips," who defeated Rountree in a runoff for the Democratic nomination for one of two seats on the N.C. Court of Appeals in Tuesday's second primary balloting.

State-wide, Eugene Phillips of Winston-Salem took 70 percent of the vote, while Rountree gathered only 30 percent of the more than 392,500 ballots cast.

Pitt County voters, however, supported their "local" candidate, giving Rountree — a former member of the General Assembly and now a district court judge — 1,883 votes to Phillips' 484.

While the balloting in Pitt was light, and far short of the number of votes needed to give Rountree a victory, the Pitt balloting helped Sidney Eagles of Raleigh defeat Paul Wright of Wayne County in the race for the nomination to the second Court of Appeals seat.

In Pitt County, Eagles received 1,239 votes to Wright's 841, while state-wide, Eagles received 54 percent of the votes to Wright's 46 percent.

"I regret I couldn't hold up the 'Down East' candidacy," Rountree said. "I guess we got beat by more money and more endorsements."

In the first primary on June 29, Rountree took the top spot among the five candidates for the Appeals Court seat in Pitt County with 7,699 votes, while Phillips placed second with 1,234. However, Phillips led state-wide with 42 percent of the votes, while Rountree placed second.

In the three-way race for the second Appeals Court seat last month, Eagles led in Pitt with 3,444 votes, while Wright gathered 3,051. State-wide, Wright led with 42 percent of the votes, while Eagles took 41 percent.

Valentine Wins Runoff In Second District Race

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — I.T. "Tim" Valentine, benefiting from a surprisingly strong turnout in the 2nd Congressional District, won the Democratic nomination to Congress with a runoff victory Tuesday over black lawyer H.M. "Mickey" Michaux Jr.

Valentine, 56, a conservative, white lawyer from Nashville, won nearly 54 percent of the vote and came back after trailing Michaux by 11 percentage points in the first primary last month.

"I'm glad it's over," Valentine said. "It's been a long, hard, tough road."

The victory dashed the hopes of Michaux to become North Carolina's first black elected to Congress in this century. But it followed a conventional political wisdom in the state that black candidates don't fare well in runoff primaries.

Michaux, 51, of Durham, is a former state legislator and U.S. attorney during the Carter administration.

Valentine will face Republican John "Jack" Marin of Durham, an attorney and former professional basketball player, in the general election.

They are seeking the seat being given up by L.H. Fountain, a conservative Democrat who is stepping down at age 69 after 30 years in Congress.

Unofficial but complete returns from all 219 precincts showed Valentine with 59,272 votes, or 53.8 percent, and Michaux with 50,874 votes or 46.2 percent.

Michaux, appearing before supporters at his Durham headquarters, sounded a conciliatory theme but avoided conceding defeat.

"Let me take a closer look at the numbers and see where we are," Michaux said. "Then I can make a more definitive statement."

"This is no end. This is just the beginning," Michaux said. "This campaign was carried out on a high road. We talked about issues... We've got a good thing going. We've got to keep it going."

$14.80 REQUESTED

I have received a very professionally done mailing from a company called the United States Testing Authority, Television Division, of North Bay Village, Fla. It says that I've already won a prize valued at between $260 and $2,000 and can obtain it by filling out a questionnaire on my television-viewing habits and sending in a $14.80 handling charge. I question how valid this offer is. Can Hotline check on it before I send my money? J.T.

Hotline checked with the Better Business Bureau of Miami, which reported that the company is under investigation. "We may have something to report by the end of this week," we were told.

The Florida attorney general's office, consumer section, in Tallahassee referred us to the U.S. Postal Inspector's office in Miami. We were told by this office that an investigation is under way to determine if any postal regulations have been violated by U.S. Testing and were advised to tell our readers not to send in the money requested in the mailing, which apparently was heavily directed to Eastern North Carolina residents. Hotline will check back with these offices in a few days for information about the progress of the investigation.

Zoning Board Endorses Revised Classification

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

After being under consideration and review for over a year, a revised zoning classification addressing the R-6 residential section has been recommended to the City Council by the Greenville Planning & Zoning Commission.

The board, in a special call session Tuesday night, took action that culminated over a year of work on the revised classification by first the city's planning staff and then the Planning and Zoning Task Force.

In conjunction with the revised R-6 zoning package, commissioners also recommended approval of a special residential use in the R-6 district, which will be regulated by a land use intensity (LUI) system. The system sets broad restrictions on development but provides more design latitude from the standpoint of developers. Any special use permit under the special district will require a specific detailed site plan that will be reviewed and approved as a part of the site plan.

Under the revised Section 32, "The purposes of the R-6 district shall be to allow for a variety of residential uses, including single-family, duplex, and multifamily residences, and such other uses that will not interfere with the development of residences in the district and which would not be detrimental to the quiet, residential nature of the areas included within the district, and to prevent the development of blight and slum conditions."

Permitted uses recommended in the proposed R-6 amendment include: single-family dwelling; two-family dwelling (duplex); multifamily dwellings; family care home; accessory structures and uses; church; elementary or secondary school, subject to setback loading stipulations; temporary or identification sign; and municipal government building, use, or facility. Schools are taken from the special use section of the existing ordinance and recommended as a permitted use, with a buffer provision.

Included in the proposed special use section are: cemetery; day care facilities for children, kindergartens; care homes, not otherwise permitted; boarding house or rooming house; home occupation; fraternity or soror-

Disappointment On Leaf Markets

After breaking out of the gate in 1981 with a record average, the Greenville Tobacco Market launched 1982 sales activity Tuesday on a disappointing note, posting an overall average that is down over $21 per hundred pounds from last July's opening day.

The market, which recorded its best first-day average ever in 1981 with $162.15 per hundred pounds, trailed the other 12 opening markets on the Eastern Belt Tuesday with an average of $140.45 per hundred pounds.

Greenville warehouses sold 700,688 pounds for $984,088, compared with 1,122,539 pounds for $1,820,234 sold last year on the market opener.

While the 13 markets had Stabilization receipts under the price-support program Tuesday estimated at approximately 39 percent, the local market did come in below that figure with 18.16 percent or 130,718 pounds. Stabilization receipts on opening day here last year were only five tenths of 1 percent and, beltwide, the total amounted to only nine tenths of 1 percent.

The drop in opening-day average here mirrored results throughout the belt as decreases were recorded at every market when compared with 1981 results. Last year the Eastern Belt had an overall average of $160.92 per hundred pounds on opening day. This year, the total dropped to $145.66 per hundred.

Working Mother Needs Rest

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of three. The eldest is 8 and the baby is 3. I have a good husband and a nice home. In this time of inflation, I am forced to work part time to make ends meet. I work the night shift and my husband works days, so we seldom need a baby sitter, which brings me to why I'm writing this letter.

Both my husband's parents and my parents are in good health. Our fathers are employed but our mothers are not. I am very happy for them. They've raised their children and can now enjoy their leisure. But since our mothers have so much time on their hands, I would appreciate it if once in a while they'd offer to take the kids for the day so I could get a little rest. Sometimes I get only two hours of sleep on the days I work. (Thank God it's only part time.)

My mother frequently calls and asks how I am, and if I say, "I'm tired," all she says is, "You're going to get sick if you don't take care of yourself." (No offers of help.)

I would like to tell our parents that it wouldn't hurt them to take our kids once in a while, but if they have to be told, it's just too bad.

Please print this. Maybe they'll see it and take the hint. I welcome your comments.

TIRED WORKING GIRL

DEAR TIRED: I agree, it would be lovely and generous and helpful if your mother and mother-in-law would take the kids once in a while, but don't ask them. Grandmothers who really want to take their grandchildren for the day don't have to be asked—they offer. (Some even beg.) In any case, don't put them on the spot.

DEAR ABBY: Please help me! I'm a 21-year-old girl, and I haven't had a decent date in two years. I am a nurse's aide, and most of the people I work with are either married or gay. What a choice!

I don't like the bar scene or going out alone, and all the guys I meet want to jump into the sack right after they say hello.

This is a one-horse town, and there aren't any clubs or singles organizations.

What should I do?

DECENT, FED UP AND LONELY

DEAR DECENT: Since yours is a "one-horse" town, find the horse, get on it, and head for the nearest city.

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend who telephones me four or five times a week. It's always the same one-way conversation. She tells me where she's been, who she's seen, how they looked and what they said. She also gives me a rundown on the health of her friends and relatives.

All this time I just listen to her talk. She never stops long enough for me to get a word in. And she never asks me how I am, or where I've been or what I've been doing.

It is so boring to listen to her. I have been wanting to tell this to her for a very long time, but I never get a chance.

I know she reads your articles, so please run this letter and maybe she will recognize herself and take the hint.

WOONSOCKET CALL

DEAR CALL: Here's your letter. But take no chances. Mail this to her, and if you're lucky she will figure out who sent it.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

Be an early bird and take advantage of the leisurely summer season to get a head start on holiday crafts by making a Peppermint Christmas Tree for the front door or for a wall decoration anywhere in your home. These will make smash-hit charity bazaar items, as well.

This stunning decoration is easily made with simple macrame knots using red and white Maxi-Cord Twisted Hercules cord and red rings and beads. The finished "tree" is approximately 30 inches long and 14 inches wide.

To obtain directions for making the Peppermint Tree, send your request for Leaflet No. M-7024 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler, ("The Daily Reflector"), P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or you may order Kit No. M-7024-K by sending a check or money order for $15 to Pat Trexler at the same address. The kit price includes the instructions, all necessary materials and shipping charges.

Once you learn the basic macrame knots, the chances are good that you will want to take a whirl at designing your own pieces. One of the dilemmas facing the first-time designer, however, is the method of ending a piece. Often just a simple fringe will do and this is a simple matter of tying an overhand knot or a gathering knot above the ends of the cords and letting the cords hang free after you have trimmed them. When doing this, you can simply leave the cord twisted or you can "untwist" the plies and brush them for a fluffy effect.

All pieces don't adapt to fringes, so you need to know some of your other options.

If your piece has a definite right and wrong side, there are several ways of finishing off the loose ends. With any of these methods, first turn your work so that the wrong side is facing you and bring the cord end or ends to the wrong side with a tapestry needle or crochet hook.

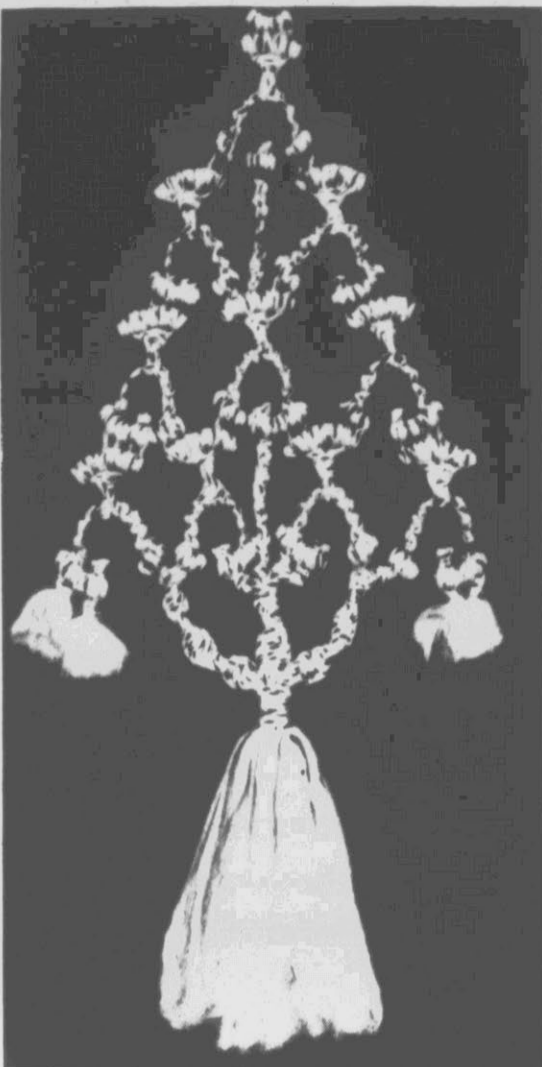

Many cords used for macrame are fusible—that is, they melt and adhere to each other when held over a flame. With this type of cord, just hold an end of cord over a flame from a lighter or candle and then quickly press it in place on the wrong side of your work. Needless to say, you should be very careful when doing this.

Or use your hook or needle to weave the loose ends through the back side of the knots. Often that is all that will be necessary, but if you think there will be much wear or pull on the piece, you might want to make an overhand knot after the weaving through is done.

If you prefer, you can glue the ends to the wrong side. If the piece is likely to be washed at any time in the future, be sure that you use a washable fabric glue. Or you can simply stitch the ends down with needle and thread.

In place of a simple fringe, decorative tassels add super finishing touches to certain pieces. To make a tassel, first cut a number of cords twice the length of the finished tassel.

On top of these "core" cords lay several cords cut to four to six times the desired finished length of the tassel. These cords will be used to do whatever decorative knotting you desire and it is usually best to use a multiple of four cords for this. Now, tie two or more cords around the center of your bundle of core and knotting cords. These are your "hanger" cords.

Using the hanger cords, make a square knot. Then, if you want a long hanger, work a sennit of half knots, square knots or whatever you wish. When the hanger portion is completed, pin that portion to your board and start making decorative knots with the knotting cords over the core cords.

This is a great time to experiment with a variety of knotting patterns, although even a simple alternating square knot pattern is quite effective. Just let your imagination go and then pat yourself on the back for your originality!

Birthing Room Set Up

WASHINGTON — In response to the growing desire for an alternative birthing experience, Beaufort County Hospital has created a birthing room.

The new idea incorporates the concepts advocated by the Lamaze method of child bearing along with a homestyle setting and a birthing bed which doubles for a labor bed and delivery bed.

Dr. A. McCray Jones, chief of obstetrics and gynecology at the hospital said, "I feel this birthing room, in conjunction with the very liberal mother-infant bonding and visitation policy makes Beaufort County Hospital's obstetric service one of the most progressive in eastern North Carolina. I'm very proud of the hospital's response to our patient's request."

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

For those of you who think pictures grow on postcards, I will explain that a tripod is a three-legged stand that supports a camera so it will remain perfectly still.

When fully extended a tripod will stand waist high and weigh in at five or six pounds.

Every year, five million amateur camera enthusiasts leave home WITHOUT one. My husband is not one of them.

For eight years he has dragged that tripod along on our vacation. He has yet to use it. So what good is it, you ask? For starters, it smashes down my dresses so that whatever I wear to dinner, someone will look at the permanent indentation and remark, "Oh, I see you own a tripod."

When you run your suitcase through security, bells will chime, buzzers will beep and you have to ask them when was the last time Great Britain was attacked by tripods.

It gives young cabbies and bellhops their first American hernia. Oh, and once when the towel bars were full of laundry, I hung a few socks on it to dry.

Mostly what it does is make my husband feel like Ansel Adams.

I know now I should never have married an amateur photographer, but when you're 35 and not moving, you panic. My life has been a series of, "would you hold this lens?" "Stand still, I'm losing my light," and, "So the bus left without us. There's always another one."

Blessed are the women who marry a man who photographs the Grand Canyon from a moving car, through the windshield with an instamatic. They don't know how lucky they are.

My husband's version of the tripod is quite different than mine. He will tell you about the hummingbird he saw with crossed eyes, the sun setting over the Kremlin that looked like a hammer it or me. He thought about it a week before leaving it behind. The guide at Christ the Redeemer Statue in Rio said, "I assume all you serious photographers have a tripod."

I knew what I had to do. Drop to all fours, balance a camera on my head and remain still for as long as it took.

That Cigarette Tax

One has to wonder what in the world North Carolina's Republican Senators Jesse Helms and John East were thinking of when they switched their votes last Friday morning to favor a Reagan administration bill which included the increasing of cigarette taxes by 8 cents per pack.

Weren't these the same senators who had properly mounted an attack on the huge increase in tobacco taxes during previous debate? Were they not aware that North Carolina itself has a low tax on cigarette because tobacco is so important to our agricultural and industrial segments?

Did they not know that what they had said previously about the harm to farmers the tobacco tax could cause is absolutely correct?

Yet, here was Sen. Helms at 4:30 a.m. signaling the clerk that he was changing his vote to "aye." He was soon followed by the junior senator, John East. Those two votes were enough to swing the tax increase package and that awesome tax on cigarettes was over a major hurdle.

Why would the senators do it? Here they were in an excellent position to bargain on the cigarette tax, but they meekly helped put it through.

We could guess that Sen. Helms and Sen. East came up with the expectation that, somehow, there would be benefits from the administration if they fell in line. If so, there would be no better time than now to collect.

We wonder if the senators had been told that something had to be done to save the country from the incredibly mismanaged tax cuts of last year. How else could two North Carolina senators be persuaded to vote for a tax that might well cripple one of the state's largest industries?

Closing Of College Is Harsh

The closing of Eisenhower College in Seneca Falls, N.Y., is indicative of the plight of many small liberal arts colleges throughout the nation.

They have been caught in a squeeze between declining enrollments and inflationary costs.

Many of these colleges are church related and have fulfilled an outstanding role in higher education in the nation.

Even though they are needed some of these institutions won't survive because private funds will not be forthcoming and states will not have the finances to carry out a rescue.

In the case of Eisenhower College, named after the late President Dwight Eisenhower, 484 students will have to find other schools and 130 employees will be looking for other jobs.

It is harsh, but it is a situation that will be faced by other institutions.

THIS AFTERNOON

Drunk Driver Foes

By PAUL O'CONNOR
RALEIGH — Some people will under their grief. Others strike back with energy they'd never tapped before. Two women who lost children to accidents caused by drunk drivers are fighting back in North Carolina, organizing the state's first two local chapters of Mothers Against Drunk Drivers (MADD).

Marilyn Sugg of Albemarle lost her oldest son in 1968. The 11-year-old was riding his bicycle home from the swimming pool in the middle of the afternoon when he was hit by a car driven by a drinking driver. Delette Sibley of Rockingham lost her grandson, a 3-year-old, in a mid-afternoon collision last November — also in Albemarle. Her son was taking his family on a Sunday picnic when a drunk crossed the center line on the crest of a hill, smashed head-on into their Toyota, and killed her grandson.

The two women came to their public roles in the fight against drunk driving with vastly different backgrounds. Mrs. Sugg, 45, was a housewife and mother. She'd been involved in her church but never in any public campaign of any kind. She considered herself shy and quiet. Mrs. Sibley, on the other hand, had been the assistant superintendent of the local school system — a woman used to public debate and politics.

Mrs. Sugg didn't wait for MADD to form in 1980 before she got involved. She wasn't satisfied with the punishment meted out to the driver in her son's case who had received a year's suspended sentence, $200 fine and two-year license suspension. So Mrs. Sugg began researching the problem of drunk driving back in 1968. "I conducted my own public education program, sharing those things I learned with the people in my community by writing letters to the editor."

PAUL O'CONNOR

It wasn't long before Mrs. Sugg became involved in a MADD precursor, The National Association of Women Highway Safety Leaders. Through that group, she spoke on drunk driving before audiences around the country and tried unsuccessful. (Please turn to Page 6)

To the editor:

Much has been written in recent weeks concerning the invasion of Israeli soldiers into Lebanon, the destruction of property and loss of life in England, the apparent horrors of personal lifestyles on Capitol Hill, and the varied other problems in life in America and throughout the world.

The key factor in any dilemma must always be the focus toward which one directs his energies and thoughts to resolve the problem. Therefore, it behooves every individual to view conflicts and problems as opportunities to focus upon possible solutions in order to prepare for more such challenges. This focus will satisfy the human need for adventure and conquest and remove unnecessary worry and negativism. Merging the reality of the crisis at hand with the clear direction of where one wants to be, one has the golden chance to achieve success in that situation.

Such persons as Ralph Bunche and Winston Churchill, among others, dared to thrust themselves into difficult situations in order that peace might be earned. Moreover, Lyndon Johnson and Mahatma Gandhi, among others, weathered severe and adverse conditions to bring forth their intended goals. And it is apparent to this writer that these United States and this world is at the threshold for yet unparalleled greatness if we focus, as a community of citizens with a common bond and as dedicated individuals, on the goals toward which we strive and for which we live.

Authors Zig Ziegler and Norman Vincent Peale provide clear messages and sound strategies for excellence in their writings. It is critical that our citizens conceptualize the elements for success and then diligently work to employ them in their lives. Opportunities abound for all of us to seize the chance to resolve the situations, whether in our marriages, on our jobs, within our churches or in our personal lives.

We are the salt of the earth.

To the editor:

As a student in foods and nutrition and a concerned citizen, I feel it is my responsibility to comment on the feature in the Sunday paper on July 18, 1982, entitled, "Weight Loss Begun Christmas Is Complete" by Carol Tyler.

The unprofessional manner in which this story was written leads the reader to believe that taking pills and drinking aloe vera juice is an ideal way for successful weight loss. The article never once stated that a person should see a doctor before going on a diet, nor does it give the side of a professional.

Teresa Lucas, owner and operator of the Down to Earth Food Store, is not a professional in nutrition, making this article no better than an advertisement and presents Teresa as a weight loss expert. Teresa may not have charged for her "counseling," but I'm sure she charged for the pills, aloe vera juice, and whatever else she encouraged Sandy to use.

The article also mentioned that Sandy was in the hospital — Why? Was her hospitalization due to the diet? If not, could there have been weight loss due to some other condition?

I also question the validity of the statements used to promote the weight loss products. For example, spirulina burns calories; lecithin helps to break down fat, and predigested aloe vera juices speeds up the metabolism — since when? If this were true, I think a lot more people would be losing weight.

Unfortunately, some people believe everything they read, so that the newspaper becomes very powerful in one's decision making. The statements used are just a few of the many that take advantage of people desperate to lose weight and encourages them to spend endless amounts of money.

I feel that a follow-up should be written on the false hope given by the products mentioned in the article and the hazards that can result from following advice from nonprofessionals.

DOUBLE TROUBLE!

BY ART BUCHWALD

Start Thinking Bigger

As everyone is aware many of the clothes that you find in stores are now made in Taiwan, Hong Kong or South Korea. While they are not lacking in quality, there are problems with sizes.

For example, I bought a pair of shorts the other day marked LARGE. When I attempted to put them on, I discovered they did not fit. My first fear was that through bracket creep I had become X-LARGE. But before I panicked, I asked my son, who is a MEDIUM, to try them on. They fitted him perfectly. It was obvious the people in Hong Kong had made a mistake. Fortunately, there was a slip included with the shorts which said, "ANYTHING WRONG WITH GARMENT PLEASE REFER TO INSPECTOR 7."

I immediately telephoned information, located the factory in Hong Kong and called. Inspector 7 was not there but were also having difficulty with the sizes of Hong Kong shorts.

"What do you want to know about Inspector 7," he asked.

"Well, for one thing — how tall is he?"

"I believe he is 4 feet 11 inches," the man said.

"And how much does he weigh?" I wanted to know.

"We never weigh our inspectors," the man said. "But I would guess 95 pounds."

"Then that could be your trouble. Are most of your inspectors about that height and weight?"

"Yes, but I don't see what this has to do with your shorts."

"It's quite clear. To them a MEDIUM looks like a LARGE size, a LARGE looks like an X-LARGE and EXTRA-LARGE is too much for them. They are thinking in terms of themselves when they're inspecting your shorts. Do they ever try them on?"

"Once in a while."

"There you are. Inspector 7 puts on the shorts, and on the basis of his height and weight is down-sizing all your garments. He has probably never seen a truly LARGE or an EXTRA-LARGE waist in his life."

"There was a pause on the other end of the line followed by some fast chatter in Chinese. Finally the man came back on the phone and said, "We will be happy to make a pair of shorts to your size if you will give us your measurements."

"That's very kind of you!" I told him. "But I'm calling not only for myself, but for all the large-sized men in America."

(Please turn to page 6)

ART BUCHWALD

I got someone in charge who spoke English. I explained the problem of the sizes.

He said Inspector 7 was a very reliable man and had worked in the factory for 15 years. This was the first time they had had a complaint about him. He even admitted it was the first time they had had a telephone call from the U.S. about any of their inspectors.

I told him I didn't want to make trouble for Inspector 7, but I was just curious about how they inspected their shorts that were exported to the United States. I mentioned that many of my friends

Baker's Own Witch Hunt

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The latest White House gag order on presidential aides was the direct result of President Reagan's anger over the flood of leaks casting aspersions on White House counselor Edwin Meese; the president's oldest political aide.

The irony of the latest White House plumbing crisis is that while chief of staff James Baker is leading the search for culprits, Baker and his closest aides are widely perceived as the principal anti-Meese leakers.

Meese has been regularly disparaged in inside stories by White House reporters with regular access to Baker and Michael Deaver; deputy chief of staff. Thus, Baker, considered a master leaker, is in the anomalous position of conducting an anti-leak witch-hunt.

Reagan's Social Security Burden

Accepting the advice of his pollsters and rejecting words of caution from Republican politicians, President Reagan will go to the nation to defend his Social Security policies.

Experienced politicians regard such a move as overly defensive and playing in the enemy's court. But pollsters Richard Wirthlin and Robert Teeter have convinced the senior White House staff that Democratic attacks on Social Security during the coming mid-term campaign must be anticipated with a preemptive strike by the president.

Accordingly, there has not been any real debate in the White House over whether Reagan should go to the public on the issue — only whether he should give a full-blown 20-minute televised speech or weave Social Security into some other speech. The latter course is probable, perhaps in Reagan's next press conference.

Undermining Reagan

Sen. Alphonse D'Amato of New York hinted to Prime Minister Menachem Begin during a trip to Israel that a military assault on West Beirut in defiance of President Reagan's wishes would have congressional approval.

Briefing administration officials on his return to Washington, D'Amato said he was convinced that the Israelis would have to assault the PLO redoubt in West Beirut sooner or later, despite Reagan's tough oral message to Begin two weeks ago demanding cessation of all hostilities.

D'Amato left the impression in his briefings that he had told Begin he would have important congressional support if he decides to end U.S. mediation efforts by invading West Beirut. Other senators who often support Israel's position even when it conflicts with the U.S. position are known to have given Begin similar advice.

Rostow Blocked

With the Reagan administration entering its 19th month, arms control (ACDA) director Eugene Debs Rostow is still hog-tied by conservative senators blocking his choices for two key posts, a stalemate that dramatizes ideological splits hurting the administration.

The nominations to top ACDA posts of Robert Gray, formerly key aide to Democratic senator Alan Cranston, and Norman Terrell, a major negotiator of the Law of the Sea Treaty (scored by Reagan), have been put on "hold" by five conservative Republican senators including Jesse Helms and Steve Symms. Their grievance: Neither Gray nor Terrell comes close to sharing Ronald Reagan's skepticism about arms control.

Rostow, a neo-conservative Democrat, is so disturbed by the long delay in staffing his agency that he has hinted at resignation. He wrote a letter to Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker beseeching him to break the stalemate, but Baker so far has failed to do so. Rostow's crippled agency crawls along, a victim of Republican fratricide.

Budget Balancing Politics

The fine hand of political consultant Arthur Finkelstein showed through President Reagan's extravaganza Capitol Hill rally for the balanced budget amendment to the Constitution.

Finkelstein, who lately gained access to the White House inner sanctum as confidential adviser to senior presidential aide Michael K. Deaver, never has thought tax reduction had much political velocity. Both the balanced budget proposal and the hoopla of the rally carry the Finkelstein brand.

A footnote: The White House ordered civil servants rounded up to cheer Reagan's

Strength For Today

GILT OR GUILT?

This is an amusing spelling error which turned up recently in some galley proof. But quite apart from being a play on words, it expresses the truth. One of the reasons why people often fall victim to sin is that they see the evils of life painted and tinsel with gilt.

Unregenerate man sees sin as gilt; God sees sin as guilt. The sinner cries cheerfully, "Eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow we have to go back to work." The warning of the Word of God is, "Whosoever soweth unto the flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption, but whosoever soweth unto the spirit shall of the spirit reap eternal life."

The Bible is unwavering in its contention that sin and guilt go together. "The wages of sin is death," says the Word, "but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." — ELISHA DOUGLASS

Recovery May Be By Degrees

By JOHN CUNNIFF
 AP Business Analyst
 NEW YORK (AP) —

Those promises of economic recovery, so regularly announced by the White House, produce an image of fresh air filling the economic sails and pushing the country ahead again.

Recovery, it is widely believed, means that once-idle factories are filled with the sounds of production, that breadwinners can hold their heads high again, that consumers can go out and buy rather than deny.

Maybe so; maybe not. There are degrees of recovery, and what seems to be headed our way might not be enough to fill the sails. Rather than gusting, the winds of recovery might settle in like a gentle breeze.

"We definitely think we are going to have a good third quarter and good fourth quarter," Donald Regan, the treasury secretary, said last Friday. Growth, he said, might be at an annual rate of 4.5 percent.

But in perspective, that isn't much. Jack Lavery, chief economist of Merrill Lynch, Regan's old firm, points out that the average of all the nation's economic expansions since World War II has been 7 percent.

Regan's expectations, though they are the brightest he could envision, as suggested by his use of the phrase "as high as 4.5 percent," are low. Recovery, yes, but a disappointing one, a little breeze only.

Recovery also has to be measured in length. Several years of expansion used to be expected in the wake of a recession, and this was true into the 1970s. How long will Regan's recovery last? There are questions.

Lavery, whose forecast of economic growth in the second half of the year is more optimistic than most published forecasts, feels that the recovery will lose wind around the end of the year. Short, indeed.

Technically, Lavery doesn't see a return to recession at that time, but his forecast for the first half of 1983 is for growth of only 1 percent to 1.5 percent. And that constitutes the economic doldrums.

True, he does forecast a more substantial recovery, but not until the second half of 1983. Even then, he says, it would depend on "reasonable control of government spending" and lower interest rates.

There are questions, too, about the conviction of forecasters. In almost any random sampling of professional economic opinion today you find a decided reluctance of forecasters to be pinned down. Their opinions are cluttered with "assuming interest rates come down" and "if deficits prove to be less than foreseen," suggesting a lack of confidence.

Does that lack extend to the White House too? Murray Weidenbaum, chief White House economist, declined to dispute those who wondered if his personal forecast might be less optimistic than the official midyear outlook, yet to be released. "If you want to think that, I won't argue with you," said Weidenbaum, who soon will be leaving his job.

Further hurting White House credibility is the tendency to be more optimistic than almost any forecaster in the private sector, and the inclination to say the economy will improve without indicating how.

Moreover, some administration officials, such as Regan and Weidenbaum, have revealed their anxieties. Earlier this year, Regan chastised Wall Street for not bringing down interest rates, while knowing that even money men do not have that power. And Weidenbaum confessed publicly that the persistence of high interest rates was mystifying to him.

Recovery can mean different things. It can be a mild or a strong recovery, and a long or a brief one, for example. When the term is used by forecasters it can reveal conviction, confusion or doubt.

Recovery can fill the economic sails, or simply ripple them. And sometimes the forecasts of recovery are filled not with the fresh air of a new beginning but, more or less, just old-fashioned hot air.

Bonus Expeditionary Force Expelled

On this date fifty years ago, the U.S. Cavalry, under the command of Chief of Staff Douglas MacArthur, took part in its last mounted engagement. With drawn sabers, 200 horsemen — aided by five tanks and 300 bayonet-armed infantry — routed 15,000 American civilians, themselves ex-soldiers. These World War I veterans had come to Washington during the depths of the Depression to obtain their promised "bonuses" — voted by Congress in 1924, but not scheduled to be paid until 1945. But the hopes of the "Bonus Expeditionary Force" were dashed when the troops dispersed them with tear gas and burned their shacks. Not until four years later did Congress finally pay the vets — almost $2,500,000,000.

DO YOU KNOW — Who was President at the time of the Bonus March?

Says Age Is Too Private

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Beverly Cuzzetto think her age is her own business, but her stubborn secrecy has caused a few problems.

The state of Washington won't let her register to vote, and a Social Security official says she could be refused benefits when the time comes — whenever that is — if she won't fess up.

The last time Mrs. Cuzzetto revealed her age was when she turned 21 and won the Miss Boise contest in Idaho. People were always asking her age, she said, so she stopped telling them.

"I've always had a hang-up about it," she said. "I don't know why. I just do."

As long as she lived in Idaho, she was able to vote and carry on most business transactions, she said, but things got complicated two years ago when she moved to Spokane. She said a doctor once tore up a hospital registration form when she refused to list her birth date.

"If someone is obviously over 18, he shouldn't have to put it (age) on a voting form," Mrs. Cuzzetto said. "I think the law should be changed."

As for her husband of 10 months, "I just tell him I'm 95," she said.

"Would you like us to fire Inspector?"

"Of course not. Inspector 7 is probably a very fine man. But I don't believe you should permit him to try on shorts for America."

"All of our employees are small," the man said.

"Then in order to maintain your credibility in the United States I suggest that you invite some portly American tourists to come into the factory and show your inspectors what is a LARGE size in shorts and what is X-LARGE."

"But if we do that, Inspector 7 will lose face."

"He will either have to lose face or put on weight. If you people in Hong Kong want to flood our stores with clothes, you're going to have to start thinking BIG."

'Traitor' Slain

TRANI, Italy (AP) — A Red Brigades terrorist-turned-informer, whose information helped authorities rescue kidnapped U.S. Army Brig. Gen. James L. Dozier, has been murdered by fellow inmates at the maximum security prison here, police said.

Ennio Di Rocco, 25, was stabbed and strangled by other inmates Tuesday, authorities said.

No motive for the slaying was announced, but leftist Red Brigades have threatened in the past to kill "traitors" who quit the gang and help police.

cessfully to organize a chapter in North Carolina. The state Division of Motor Vehicles approached her in 1970 and asked her to help them with a film on the effects of drunk driving.

In that film, "They're Leaving Us All The Time", Mrs. Sugg told the story of her grief as she'd recorded it in a diary. In 1971 the film won an international award. In 1975, tired from the strain, she took a job and ended her campaign.

Mrs. Sibley, 65, had just retired from her school career when she lost her grandson. "People don't really believe what is happening. They don't realize that this many people are being killed." The 26-year-old drunk driver got "a total of seven years and everybody was thrilled to death — this was the most they'd heard of but it didn't sound very good to me for the life of my grandchild."

The two women, and many others with similar family tragedies behind them, have now undertaken a statewide campaign to prod the legislature to toughen drunk driving laws and force the courts to more strictly enforce those laws. They're helping organize two dozen other chapters now and hope to conduct a state meeting before the 1983 legislative session.

Just before Mrs. Sugg re-entered the fray against drunk driving, she asked herself "if I have the strength and dedication and energy to get back into this". But then she looked back over the previous period of her involvement. "I always felt that through that work, God had given me a portion of my son back, and that RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Attorneys for three inmates who took hostages at Central Prison in March say the inmates acted out of "fear and terror" in an effort to save their lives and maintain their sanity.

In motions filed in Wake Superior Court, defense attorneys outlined their strategy in an effort to convince a judge that the three should be given state funds to hire psychiatrists and psychologists.

The psychiatrists would testify about prison conditions and their psychological impact on prisoners, the lawyers said.

Inmates Melvin Surgeon of Annapolis, Md., William D. Little of Dobson and Ezekiel Hall of Brooklyn, N.Y., allegedly took eight hostages at the prison's diagnostic center on March 23. The three have yet to face trial on kidnapping and assault charges.

They are charged with holding some of the hostages for as long as 4 1/2 hours before releasing them in exchange for a promise to be transferred to a federal prison. They were taken to a federal prison in Virginia and were sent back to North Carolina after one day.

In interviews after they released the hostages, the inmates complained of poor food, racist treatment by guards, cockroaches and low wages for prison work. All three inmates are black.

The lawyers said in their motions for the three that they planned to claim that "the conditions of confinement existing at Central Prison ... created an atmosphere of fear and terror, causing the defendants to take steps which, in their opinion, were absolutely necessary to preserve their lives and sanity."

U.S. Hopes Avoid Further UNESCO Confrontation

By SOLL SUSSMAN
MEXICO CITY (AP) — The chief U.S. delegate to the UNESCO world culture conference says she won't reply now to a French attack, but her delegation will defend American values against any further criticism during the meeting.

Jean Gerard, the American ambassador to the U.N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, said in a policy speech to the two-week conference Tuesday that she hopes other nations will try to avoid confrontation "in the interest of the serious considerations of an important agenda before us." "I have no intention of responding to criticism at this time," she said. "In the course of the conference, however, my delegation will not listen to attacks on our values, whether formulated in ideological terms or in terms of shopworn, mindless cliches, without defending the principles in which we so profoundly believe."

Ms. Gerard added these comments to the speech she had prepared after French Culture Minister Jack Lang denounced the mass communications industry, with clear references to the United States. He charged the industry "bombs" the world with Western culture to promote one style of music, one way of dressing and one form of entertainment.

"We struggle against this form of intellectual and financial imperialism," he said, and declared it is time to "decolonize radio and television networks."

Lang also praised European nations that stood up to a "powerful nation" — meaning the United States — in the dispute over the Siberian natural gas pipeline. France, Britain, West Germany and Italy have defied President Reagan's ban on shipments to the Soviet Union of equipment manufactured outside the United States under American license and with U.S. technology.

Allen Weinstein, vice chairman of the U.S. delegation, said in an interview that the Americans hope the 119-nation conference would do nothing to promote the new "world information order" sought by Third World governments in Africa, Asia and Latin America and by UNESCO Director-General Amadou Mahtar M'Bow of Senegal.

"We will be defending the rights of free mass media as an imperative," Weinstein said. "We will not find ourselves in a position of accepting restraints on the cultural system of any free society."

Developing nations complain that they are dependent on Western news agencies which they charge ignore their social needs and concentrate on unfavorable news. They want to replace Western news agencies with national and regional agencies.

"It is the industrialized capitalistic states who, with a tyrannical rod, rule the information agencies, the publicity enterprises, cinema and television." Mozambique Culture Minister Luis Bernardo Howanna charged in his policy speech.

The Western media charge that UNESCO proposals to strengthen national and regional news agencies would increase government control over the media and journalists.

Protection In Nosy Neighbor

CHICAGO (AP) — The old-fashioned nosy neighbor may be thwarting more burglaries than those sophisticated locks, alarms and other protective devices, according to a survey of police departments.

In fact, such neighbors may even be better than watch dogs.

In a Burglary Prevention Committee survey released Tuesday, 55 percent of 630 police chiefs responding said reliance on neighbors to report suspicious activity was the best way to catch a burglar.

Forty percent thought the next best way to trap someone breaking into a home was an alarm system connected to police headquarters by telephone.

Only 15 percent thought the best way to scare a burglar away was to fence the yard and keep a guard dog in it.

A typical neighbor of the type police like is Pat Montefinese of suburban Western Springs, a mother of six children.

"I don't drive, I'm always at home," she said. "I keep an eye on things outside, even when I get up at night. My neighbors tell me they feel comfortable just knowing I'm there."

"Once I saw a panel truck that stayed a long time in the driveway of a vacant house across the street," she said. "It turned out to be carpet installers, and I apologized to the police for the false alarm. They said, 'Forget it, lady. Just keep calling when you see something suspicious.'"

In the survey, questionnaires were mailed to more than 7,000 members of the International Association of Police Chiefs Inc. in all 50 states.

For eight years, the Chicago-based Burglary

Prevention Committee has sponsored national "Burglary Prevention Week" in June, providing law-enforcement agencies with flyers, slides, radio and television scripts and other crime prevention material.

Officer Bill Burtis of suburban Arlington Heights said his police department is strong supporter of the neighborhood watch theory.

"It's a throwback to the 1940s and 1950s when the women in the neighborhood were always home to keep youngsters in line," he said. "Today, we're spread thin and have to rely on neighbors to help reduce crime. We advise everybody to inform their neighbors about their whereabouts, even when they go out for dinner."

Another part of the questionnaire asked what a homeowner can do to discourage a burglar from trying to break in when the house is unoccupied. Ninety-one percent said the best way is to make the dwelling look occupied.

More than 86 percent of the respondents said the best way to provide a "lived-in" appearance is to use timers to keep lights and audio equipment going on and off.

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The prosecution today demanded the maximum penalty of 15 years in prison for two key figures in a $250 million loan swindle that jarred this nation's economic and political hierarchy.

Perhaps people shouldn't be faulted for showing no interest in the races. The state's Code of Judicial Ethics prevents the candidates for judgeships from debating any issues, so other lawyers are about the only ones who know anything of the candidates.

But that kind of low turnout, says Culp, calls for more than a routine bemoaning the lack of public interest in voting.

"Obviously the public just has no interest at all in electing judges," he said. "It seems ridiculous because of the high cost."

It cost the state about $500,000 to hold the runoff election, better than $1.50 per voter. In Mecklenburg County, the election cost $45,000, or $21 a vote.

He says it points out a need for two things — a change in the law allowing runoffs to be called, and a change in the method of selecting judges.

North Carolina law now requires a candidate to win a majority in a contested first primary or face a runoff if the runnerup calls for one. Culp thinks that ought to be changed to make a 40 percent score in the first primary the number needed for nomination, allowing runoffs when the leading candidate scores less than that amount.

Others, such as Brock, say 42 percent might be a better number.

But such a change would be a major alteration in the state's political fabric and would face certain, heavy opposition. Valentine and Eagles would not have won their nominations Tuesday under such a rule, and a long list of past races would have turned out differently.

The idea of selecting judges differently may stand a slightly better chance, however.

Proposals to establish a merit selection system for judges arise from time to time in the General

$87,000 Jail Tunnel Is Becoming Dead Dream

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — An $87,000 tunnel constructed between the new county jail and the courthouse has become a "long, long, long closet" because of a county commission decision.

And officials can see no light at the end of the 80-foot-long underground corridor for now.

"Now, we're thinking an underground tunnel is not the answer to all our prayers," said County Commissioner Charles Hooten.

The commissioners voted Monday to halt further construction, leaving them with a tunnel to nowhere.

Plans called for the tunnel to push through the courthouse wall and connect with a freight elevator with doors on two sides. But commissioners balked at the $200,000 cost for the renovation.

"It can be used as a number of things," Commissioner Pat O'Rourke said. "It would be a beautiful storage area. It's like a long, long, long closet."

The saga of the tunnel stretches back to January 1979 when the commissioners decided to burrow under busy Campbell Street in preparation for construction of the jail. At the time, O'Rourke said, the bond issue for the $31 million jail had not been approved.

Since then, the gray concrete jail has risen 11 stories above the ground and is scheduled for occupancy next July. But below the ground, the tunnel has remained unchanged.

"It looks like one of those big culverts under the interstate," O'Rourke said. "It's about 10 feet wide and oh, 10 or 11 feet high. It goes right up to the wall of the booking section (in the basement) of the police department."

"They're trying to balance their budget," Sheriff Ray Montes said of the commissioners. "It's strictly their decision."

But the decision leaves Montes with a problem: how to get inmates from the jail to hearings in the courthouse without exposing them to the public and prospective jurors.

Judge Ponders 'Silent Minute'

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A federal judge has taken under advisement a challenge to Tennessee's new "minute-of-silence" law that requires each school day to begin with time "for meditation, or prayer or personal beliefs."

U.S. District Court Judge L. Clure Morton gave no indication when he might rule.

Attorney Lionel Barrett, representing the American Civil Liberties Union, argued Tuesday that the law violated the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution, which guarantees freedom of religion.

Assembly but have always been defeated — often by opposition from attorneys.

The most frequently mentioned alternative plan would have a committee select state appellate judges on merits. After serving a certain number of years, voters would judge the judge in a yes-or-no vote. The judge's name would be on the ballot with no opposition, and voters could vote him up or down. If rejected, the committee would appoint someone else.

Tuesday's runoff may not be enough to bring about either suggestion, but it's likely to increase talk about them.

"I think today's vote, and the cost of today, is going to be a perfect impetus for those two things," said Culp.

We've got nothing against raising tobacco. We just wanted to point out a few of the things our growers appreciate about the Perdue program. We might also mention that the need for expensive equipment is reduced and a chicken house can pay for itself while it provides a grower with income along the way. With Perdue, you can build the very best house on the market and you can build equity into your farm at the same time. In fact, one Perdue broiler house will give you the same net income as 5 to 6 acres of rented tobacco. When your house is paid for, one house earns the same income as 18-20 acres of tobacco.

The cost of farming is on the rise, but on the other side of the coin, it doesn't cost a penny to check out the crop with the guaranteed income of over $20,000 per year. There's never been a better time to talk chicken with PERDUE.

Warns Boy Could Face Brain-Washing

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former KGB officer says 14-year-old Walter Polovchak is likely to face "brainwashing" or punishment in a labor camp if he loses his court battle to stay in the United States and returns to the Soviet Union.

"His life, from the very first day of his...returning to the Soviet Union, would become without any exaggeration really miserable," the one-time major in the KGB, the Kremlin's massive espionage and secret police apparatus, said in an interview with Rep. Peter A. Peyser, D-N.Y.

Peyser released a transcript of the unidentified KGB defector's remarks in connection with a Capitol Hill session today, marking young Polovchak's first public appearance in Washington.

The boy, his attorneys and his 19-year-old sister, Natalie, were set to answer questions from Peyser and several other congressmen.

U.S. authorities have granted asylum and permanent residency status to the Ukrainian-born Polovchak, who ran away from his parents in July 1980 and refused to accompany them when they subsequently returned to the Soviet Union. He has been living with a foster family in the Chicago area.

However, a number of legal fights over the boy still remain unresolved. In December 1981, the Illinois Court of Appeals overturned a lower court's decision that had made him a ward of the state. That case is currently on appeal to the Illinois Supreme Court.

U.S. officials have argued that Polovchak should be allowed to defy his parents and remain in the United States in view of Moscow's record of human rights abuses and the likelihood that he would face harsh consequences if he were forced to return to the Soviet Union.

But some American specialists on juvenile law and immigration have maintained that this stance constitutes an unprecedented infringement on the well-established right of parents to exercise custody over their children, unless there is evidence of gross neglect or abuse.

Peyser declined to give the name of the former KGB officer, whom the congressman said he interviewed at his Capitol Hill office on June 2. He said the Soviet defector, who had served in the KGB for a decade and fled to the West about three years ago, was now under "protective custody" of the U.S. government.

Asked what he would anticipate in case Polovchak returned to the Soviet Union, the former secret police operative was quoted as saying:

"First thing, the KGB officers will try to brainwash and to force him to cooperate with them to make propaganda, so that the young man will be used to give interviews to several Soviet newspapers, probably to the local TV channel, on the 'atrocities of capitalism.'"

If the youth refuses to cooperate in such a way, the KGB defector said, Soviet authorities may forcefully confine Polovchak to the type of special psychiatric hospital used to incarcerate political dissidents and subject them to massive drug doses.

He noted that "if they don't put him into a mental institution, they have a whole variety of other punitive actions, against even teenagers. He can go to a special teen-ager labor camp, where they claim they treat them with labor and brainwashing by Marxist-Leninist theories."

Once Polovchak turns 18, the defector said, he could face a lengthy term in a regular prison or labor camp on charges of "anti-Soviet propaganda."

"Even if by some miracle he will avoid being confined in a mental institution or put into jail, still he will never ever be able to graduate (from a) good school in the Soviet Union. He will never be able to get a job which needs (official) clearance," the former KGB officer said in the transcript released by Peyser.

Peyser, who has taken a strong interest in the Polovchak boy's case, described today's session as a "congressional briefing" scheduled at his request by Rep. Don Bonker, D-Wash., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on human rights and international organizations.

Brief Strike At Western Union

DENVER (AP) — Union workers went on strike against Western Union for 90 minutes Tuesday night before reaching a tentative contract agreement with management on a contract calling for a 31 percent pay increase over three years, officials said.

The contract expired at 10 p.m. MDT (midnight EDT), and negotiators for the United Telegraph Workers continued bargaining even though they called a strike. The agreement was announced by both sides 90 minutes after the deadline elapsed.

The 11:30 p.m. MDT announcement of the tentative three-year agreement was made by union international President Dick Brockert and Jerry Kent, vice president for employee relations for Western Union.

Brockert said the compromise, which calls for a 31 percent pay increase over three years, totaled $59 million.

Brockert said workers at some 24-hour operations around the nation had actually walked off the job but returned to work.

He said employees had sought a three-year contract for 12 percent wage increases the first year and 10 percent in the second and third years. Management's last offer was 6.479 percent first year, and 6.957 in second and 7.666 in the third.

The average Western Union worker's hourly wage has been $8.63, he said.

The UTW has 8,801 members working for Western Union. The Communications Workers of America, which has about 1,000 members with the company, is continuing separate negotiations.

Brockert said a long strike would have severely hampered or shut down centralized telephone telegraph bureaus in Reno, Nev.; St. Louis and New Jersey, where the nation's telegrams are handled.

The union leader also said Western Union's contract maintenance of other corporations' communications equipment would be hampered.

The talks in Denver began July 7.

Western Union was last struck in 1971 for 52 days.

'Beetle' In Ford Museum

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — The Henry Ford Museum has added a Volkswagen beetle to its collection of historic automobiles.

Volkswagen of America president James McLernon presented the 1949 black car to museum president Harold Skramstad at a brief ceremony Tuesday.

The beetle, one of the first to be imported into the United States from Germany after World War II, needs some minor interior restoration, museum officials said.

It will be the first VW on display at the suburban troy museum. d08B8

Human Fly Eyes Caracas

CHICAGO (AP) — Human fly Dan Goodwin will travel to Caracas, Venezuela, to scale two skyscrapers in his "first legal officially sanctioned climb," according to promoters.

Mike Powers of Jam Productions, which handles publicity for the man known as "Spider Dan," said Goodwin will be paid an undisclosed amount to climb one building Saturday and another on Aug. 6.

Both structures are about 50 stories tall, Powers said.

Goodwin, 26, won fame last year with his two climbs of Chicago skyscrapers. He scaled the 110-story, 1,454-foot-tall Sears Tower, the world's tallest building, as well as the 100-story John Hancock Center.

'Messy Court' Results In Arrests And A Warning

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — Judge Donald Smith, saying the court's calendar was too messy and confusing, ordered the arrests of five lawyers and revoked bond on more than 20 defendants while lecturing District Attorney Joe Brown.

"This is one of the messiest courts I've seen," Smith said Monday. "Lawyers don't show up, defendants don't show up. It was the same thing when I was here two weeks ago. Lawyers just come and go as they wish. I'm not used to it and I won't stand for it."

The judge's orders specified that the lawyers be brought before him immediately. Although Smith mentioned that contempt and/or disciplinary procedures were a possibility, he took no such action.

Smith said the calendar — actually five different calendars — was so confusing that he understood how the lawyers might become confused, although it is their responsibility to be aware of when their cases are scheduled.

Bonds were revoked for more than 20 defendants who did not show up for court. Smith set new bonds of higher amounts or ordered that the defendants be held without bonds.

Brown said he made additions to the original trial calendar because he anticipated the case around which it had been based would be continued until a later date. He said the second addition was made after the courts required that cases, scheduled earlier, be set for trial this week.

None of the lawyers — Robert Powell of Lincolnton and Jesse Caldwell III, Ralph Gingles Jr., James Gray and Robert Whitt, all of Gastonia — was jailed.

Powell, Gingles and Whitt were not present in the courtroom during the morning calendar call. All three later told the judge they were in other courts.

Powell didn't even represent the defendants who claimed him as their attorney. He had represented them in district court, but had not been retained for superior court.

"It was a misunderstanding," Powell said. "I'm not too alarmed by it. This type of thing happens often, but not normally through an order of arrest."

Whitt told the judge that he had been in district court in Charlotte and asked his partner to answer the calendar call. His partner overlooked one of the cases.

Smith said that if Whitt were willing to trust his partner to speak for him, he would also have to take responsibility for his failure to speak.

Gingles told the judge he was in Rutherford County representing a client charged with murder.

The arrest orders for Caldwell and Gray came during the afternoon. Gray said he left after he had been told that no jury cases were to be heard Monday.

Caldwell said it has been custom in Gaston County for lawyers to let the district attorney's office notify them when the cases are to be called. He said he was with a client in another courtroom when his case was called in Smith's courtroom.

He said he cancelled some of the orders for defendants' arrests in cases where they had not been told to appear by lawyers.

New Head Of State Board

Wanda Smith Caldwell, a former resident of Greenville, has been named president of the North Carolina Board of Architecture.

Mrs. Caldwell, who now lives in the Haywood County town of Clyde, is the first female to fill that role in the 67-year history of the committee.

WANDA S. CALDWELL

She was one of two "public members," or non-architects representing the consumer's point of view, appointed to the board by Gov. Jim Hunt in 1979. She succeeds Waynesville architect Tai Lee as president.

Mrs. Caldwell is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W.M. Smith of Greenville. She received her bachelor and master's degrees from East Carolina University and completed her educational specialist certification at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Mrs. Caldwell, a career educator, previously taught at Williamston High School and Farmville Central High School. She also served as a supervisor for the Martin County Board of Education.

Missing Child Found Drowned

BURLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — An 11-year-old deaf-mute girl, missing from her home since Monday evening, was found dead in a pond near her home, according to the Alamance County Sheriff's Department.

Authorities would not reveal any further details, except to say that Kathy McAdams had been found.

The girl's body was found in the pond about a mile and a half south of her home in the Pleasant Grove community, a spokesman for the Alamance County Rescue Squad said.

Searchers had covered a 12-square mile area looking for the girl before she was found around 1:30 p.m., the sheriff's department said.

Long Wait For Appointment

ORANGE, Calif. (AP) — Hundreds of women in suburban Orange County are seeking artificial insemination and must wait up to six months for an appointment, physicians say.

The artificial insemination program at the University of California-Irvine Medical Center expects to serve about 1,000 women this year, compared with only six during 1970, when the program began. Nationally, doctors estimate that 15,000 to 20,000 babies are artificially conceived each year.

The process involves inserting about a tablespoon of sperm from a donor into the woman's vagina. It takes an average of three to four attempts to achieve pregnancy, at a cost of $100 per attempt.

State Ports Budget Cut

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The State Ports Authority Tuesday approved a budget for the year beginning July 1 with only a 7 percent projected growth in revenues.

"We're being conservative and realistic," said William M.A. Greene, state ports director.

The 7 percent growth rate compares to a combined 15 percent increase in revenues at the Wilmington and Morehead City ports last fiscal year, Greene said. The $14.6 million in revenues was a record.

Projected revenues for this fiscal year are $15.6 million, Greene said.

Revenues at Morehead City are projected at $4.7 million, compared to $4.3 million last year. At Wilmington, revenues are expected to reach $10.9 million, compared to the record $10.2 million last year.

Combined profits are expected to be $2.6 million for a 15 percent increase, he said.

The ports authority also approved about $1.1 million in contracts Tuesday for various construction projects at both ports.

ity; non-municipal park or recreation facility; special residential uses; retirement homes and related uses; public agency, building, or use, and principal use sign.

John Anema, president of the Tar River Neighborhood Association, said his group is involved in negotiations with East Carolina University with reference to future development plans by the university in the TRNA residential area. Anema said the TRNA feels future development by ECU should blend in with the character of the neighborhood and the association urged the city to leave ECU development of new structures under the special use section.

John Schofield, a TRNA resident, said the association would like to have time to work with ECU on some of the land use problems, particularly the use of the Howard House on Fifth Street by the campus police department.

Commissioner Rick Miller said he did not feel any uses other than residential should be allowed as permitted uses in a residential area.

Planner Skip Browder said that the Board of Adjustments has to find as fact that a requested use fits in with the character of the neighborhood before granting a special use permit.

Commissioners voted to have the planning staff draft a definition for consideration addressing public agency, building, or use.

Browder said that as now written, municipal building placement requests are under the permitted uses section and would require a public hearing before the City Council.

Mac McCarley, assistant city attorney, suggested that it would be inappropriate to move municipal buildings to the special use section where it would be considered by a subordinate board.

Commissioners also reviewed the section of the Zoning Ordinance dealing with non-conforming structures and voted to recommend the adoption of an amended version to the council. The section would be amended by adding: "For purposes of this subsection, physical alteration of a structure shall not be deemed an enlargement of the nonconformity if the proposed alteration is in full compliance with all development standards of the applicable zoning district as set forth in Section 32-80, and if the proposed alteration does not enclose a previously unenclosed area which does not conform to all development standards of the applicable zoning district."

Commissioners tabled for 30 days action on a R-6 (N) neighborhood concept proposed for consideration by the TRNA. By tabling the matter, the planning staff will have further time to consider and review the proposed R-6 (N) zone, meet with the TRNA, and prepare a recommendation on R-6 (N) for consideration by the planning board relative to inclusion in the R-6 zone.

Anema said the spirit of his neighborhood is to revitalize and he said the TRNA would like to see the R-6 (N) included as a part of the overall zoning definition.

Bitter Boater Says No Help By Others

MONROE, Mich. (AP) — Rene Marlow's shock at being aboard a sinking boat on Lake Erie quickly gave way to dismay when potential rescuers began stealing items from the foundering vessel.

The woman was with her husband, Arnell, and a family friend when their boat went down Sunday afternoon, about 5 miles off Sterling State Park in Monroe County.

About 10 other boats were in the area, but she said only one craft came to their rescue. Meanwhile, people in several other vessels swarmed in and looted some of the floating articles from the boat.

"All I know is that I'll never go on Lake Erie again," said Mrs. Marlow, of Taylor, a Detroit suburb.

She said she and her party had put their 15-foot boat in at the park about 8 a.m. Sunday and had been fishing for nearly 5 1/2 hours when it started to sink.

Mrs. Marlow, a non-swimmer, said she and the others aboard donned life jackets and the boat sank right out from under them.

She started screaming, she said, and only a cabin cruiser with four older men on it came to the rescue.

Some of the other boaters who refused to help took such items as fishing rods and reels, a fish net, a rubber shoe, tackle boxes and other items that floated, she said.

"I just couldn't believe it," Mrs. Marlow said. "They were ripping us off left and right. These people didn't care whether I lived or died."

Police List 3 Collisions

An estimated $5,300 property damage resulted from three traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Tuesday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 1:15 p.m. collision at the intersection of Battle and Tyson streets, involving a truck driven by Allen Lane Moore of 303 Roundtree Drive and a parked car owned by Laverne Little of 1209 Battle St.

Investigators, who charged Moore with operating left of center, estimated damage at $1,500 to the Moore truck and $2,000 to the car.

Cars driven by Michelle Marie Lyons of 409 Oxford Road and Eddie Lay Ray of 829 Fleming St. collided about 3:39 p.m. at the intersection of Fourth and Pitt streets, causing an estimated $600 damage to the Lyons car and $700 damage to the Ray vehicle.

An 11:31 a.m. mishap on Maxwell Street, 50 feet south of the Dickinson Avenue intersection, involved cars driven by Eloise Jenkins Mazingo of 2502 Dickinson Ave. and George Thomas Whitehurst of 103 Martinsborough Road.

Police, who said no damage resulted to the Mazingo car, set damage to the Whitehurst vehicle at $500.

Heart Surgery Said Success

Futrell entered Wake Memorial July 20 and is expected to return home within the next week to 10 days.

Garner Stays Alive, Tops Pitt By 5-4

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
Garner's American Legion baseball team, down three games to one in a best-of-seven series for the Area I baseball title, felt it had to turn things around last night against Pitt County. One more loss and it was all over for Post 232.

"Nothing was going right for us," Coach Paul Faulk said. "I could tell it was just all going bad for us. (Tuesday) morning, the phone rang on the television and I answered the one on the wall. So we just tried to do something different."

As an indication of that, Faulk had his players turn their baseball caps inside out and wear them that way during last night's fourth game, and it — or something — worked.

Garner came away with a 5-4 victory, still alive in the series, although it now trails three games to one.

Garner got a run-scoring double from Mitch White in the third inning to take the lead, and added two in the fourth on a homer by Mark Maulsby. Post 232 collected single runs in the fifth and sixth for a 5-0 lead before Tom Buie's grand-slam homer in the bottom of the sixth brought Pitt County back with one run.

That one turned out to be just enough, however.

"I don't think we took them lightly," Pitt coach Bill Davis said later. "We just made too many errors out that. But that's just baseball."

Faulk said that his team had been frustrated through the first three games of the series with Pitt. "To lose three like we have, I thought we came back well. You got a taste of the kind of ball we are capable of playing tonight."

Faulk admitted too that he thought the bad luck of his team was going to continue in the first inning. White led off reaching on an error, moving to third on a sacrifice and an infield out.

Then, Pitt hurler Mike Kinley's 2-1 pitch got past catcher Emmett Walsh and White began the dash home. But the ball missed the pad at the backstop wall and caromed quickly back to Walsh, and White was thrown out in a rundown.

"Now, how often is something like that going to happen," Faulk questioned.

"For the ball to miss the padding like that is just lucky."

But — the inside-out caps held their luck for the Garner team, although there were a few instances when Faulk thought his team might not get a break. Once he came close to being ejected by umpire J.M. Merrell for protesting a call at second base.

That came in the fifth when, with runners at first and third, Ron Jones broke from second before Kinley had thrown his pitch. Kinley whirled and threw to second, and Jones appeared to slide in safely, bowling down second baseman Mont Carter in the process. Merrell thumbed Jones out, however, for interfering with Carter.

"He said my guy tried to bowl the other guy down. I say (Jones) has the right to the baseline. But I guess it's a judgement call."

The game was not a pitching jewel for either hurler in the game. Although Garner's Don Jones went the distance and gave up only four hits, he walked 11 and struck out but three. Kinley, who went eight before being lifted for a pinch hitter, gave up six hits, walked three and struck out three.

"I don't think Mike pitched a bad game," Davis said. "In fact, he pitched well, well enough to win. But he didn't get the backing either in the field or with the bats to get it done."

Garner broke the scoring ice with its first run in the third. David Proctor led off with a walk and after two outs, White drove one up the alley in right center for a run-scoring double.

In the fourth, Garner added two more. Ron Jones reached on an infield hit and with one down, Maulsby lined the ball over the fence in right for a 3-0 lead.

A fourth run scored in the fifth. White reached on a two-out fielder's choice and took third on Dorsett Clement's single. Jones then hit a high pop that fell in short right scoring White.

The final Garner run scored in the sixth. With one away, Maulsby walked and was sacrificed up. He scored when Proctor reached on an error.

Pitt, after leaving a runner stranded on third in the first, left the bases loaded in the fourth and a runner on third in the fifth, before finally scoring in the sixth.

Walsh led off the sixth with a single and both Roger Williams and Sammy Hodges walked. With one down, Buie's hit a drive that just cleared the fence in left for the grand slam, cutting the lead back to 5-4.

In the eighth, Pitt put runners on first and third on walks, but failed to get anyone else in.

Maulsby led the Garner hitting with two, while Walsh and Buie each had two — and all of the Pitt hits.

"I hope we can bounce back now," Davis said. "I sure don't want to have to go back to Garner." He'll call on Roger Williams for mound duty tonight.

Faulk, meanwhile, will put Ron Jones on the mound. "He's our ticket back to Garner," he said.

East Wins Both All-Star Games

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Rocky Mount's George McClain says he went into the annual East-West high school basketball game just wanting to have fun — and apparently had little trouble accomplishing that.

McClain, a 6-foot guard headed for N.C. State this fall, scored 18 points Tuesday night as the East pounded the West 98-72 at Greensboro Coliseum.

Carl Smith was the only West player in double figures with 21 points.

The East led by 42 points at one time in the second half, and its running game was devastating. But it was the East's ability to play far better within a team concept which ultimately proved the difference.

"We picked the ball off the boards and tried to run it in the third quarter and they weren't getting back," McClain said. "So we took advantage of it."

"I was just trying to play well and have fun. I had a good time."

The East won the battle of the boards 77-56, with Kenny Gattison, Tracy Williams and John Davis grabbing nine each. The East shot 42.9 percent from the floor to the West's 33.7 percent.

With 4:37 to go in the half, the West went ahead 33-31 on a basket by Ed Blyenat, but over the next four minutes the West was guilty of five poor shots. Meanwhile, the East got its running game in gear and converted four baskets and a three-point play all from close range to take a 42-33 lead.

In the third quarter the East outscored the West 33-8. Over one six-minute stretch the West went scoreless while the East reeled off 17 straight points. By the end of the period, the East led 78-45.

The West scored 12 unanswered points in the final 2:33 to avoid putting its name in the record book with what could have been the worst defeat in the 34-year history of the game.

McClain hit nine of 16 shots, got six rebounds, handed out eight assists, came up with two steals and had only two turnovers in 21 minutes. He sparked a running game which led to 25 assists and 14 steals.

The East's Nate McMillan scored 12 points and grabbed eight rebounds, while Gattison scored 15 and had nine rebounds. Every East player scored.

Delphine Mabry scored 11 points as the East smashed the West 71-48 in the annual East-West All-Star girls high school basketball game Tuesday night at the Greensboro Coliseum.

Mabry, of Southwest Edgecombe, was named the game's most valuable player after the East press caused numerous turnovers.

"The press pretty much took them out of their game, but it also got us in foul trouble," said East coach Tommy Hawkins.

Other leading scorers for the East were Bridget Jenkins of Southwest Edgecombe and Jacksonville's Kirsten Weinert, both with 11. Wake Forest-Rolesville's Lisa Squirewell scored 10.

Leading the West was McDowell County's Lisa Davis with 11.

The East led by as much as 11 points in the second quarter and went into halftime ahead at 34-24.

In the third period, the West mounted a minor comeback and closed the gap to eight at 36-28. But the East came back with a 10-4 spurt in the third quarter and a 12-2 spurt in the final quarter.

Gray Leads West Cagers To Victory Over South

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Stuart Gray was the most valuable basketball player in last year's National Sports Festival, but his success may have made the folks back at UCLA expect a little too much from the 7-foot freshman.

"Winning the gold medal at the Sports Festival and being named MVP was something I accomplished, and it really helped me, but people didn't remember I was only a freshman," said Gray, whose defending champion West squad was humiliated 119-94 by the South in Tuesday night's opening round of play.

Gray, who averaged 18 points in last year's Festival at Syracuse, N.Y., managed less than five points a game in his freshman season with the Bruins, a disappointing performance for himself and UCLA fans.

"I don't expect to go out there and be the whole team this year," said Gray, who led the losing West team with 17 points Tuesday night. "But I do expect to be there and play tough. I'm taking it one step at a time."

Gray, the only returning member of the West's Festival championship team, said the 1982 edition is less experienced than last year's squad.

"It also depends on how much heart you have," he said. "The South got too far out in front of us. We started to come back, but something happened."

What happened was one final surge by the much quicker South team, which outscored the West 14-1 after Gray and his teammates had closed a 25-point deficit to 12 in the final quarter.

"The key was that we played in spurts at the right time," said South Coach Nolan Richardson of the University of Tulsa. "Forty-eight minutes is a lot of basketball, and at times we got sloppy because of fatigue. But our quickness was the key at the end when they started to come back."

Utah's Jerry Pimm, coach of the West, said his team "got outmanned on the transition game, and they beat us on the boards. They definitely played better than we did."

Today's second round of games matched the South against the East, which beat the North 116-109 behind Pittsburgh's Andre Williams with 20 points and Villanova's Ed Pinckney with 17 points and a Festival record-tying 15 rebounds. The North plays the West tonight.

In the women's first-round games Tuesday, Sarah Campbell of Missouri scored 13 points and three of her teammates added 12 apiece as the North edged the East 83-81, and University of Georgia freshman scored 24 points as defending women's Festival champion South trounced the West 115-84.

Among the spectators at the Indiana Central University gym were Indiana's Bob Knight, who will coach the U.S. men's team in the 1984 Olympics, and North Carolina's Dean Smith, the 1976 U.S. Olympic coach who guided the Tarheels to the 1982 NCAA title.

One of Smith's freshmen next fall will be guard Curtis Hunter, who matched Oklahoma freshman Wayman Tisdale with 17 points apiece in the South's victory over the West.

Dulaney Sweeps Six Golds In Skating

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Sandy Dulaney came to the National Sports Festival hoping to learn something about her rivals in the upcoming national roller skating championships. She's leaving with a record-tying six gold medals.

The 17-year-old high school senior from Buena Park, Calif., was on the winning four-women relay team Tuesday to match the mark set in the 1979 Festival by Cynthia Woodhead, a swimmer from Riverside, Calif.

Earlier, Dulaney had been on the winning mixed-four relay and also taken golds in each of her individual races — at 500, 1,000, 1,500 and 3,000 meters.

"This has been very exciting for me," said Dulaney, the women's overall and individual world champion. "I didn't know how I would stack up here. This is a prelude to the nationals. You have to see how your rivals have changed their styles over the year."

The national championships are set for Fort Worth, Texas, Aug. 9.

Despite any doubts she had upon arriving in Indianapolis last week, Dulaney soon knew things were going her way.

"I thought after the third medal I had a chance to win each of my last three races," she said. "But I wasn't here to win the golds. I was here to do the best I could."

While Dulaney was tying the Festival medal records at Melody Skateland, across town more meet records were falling in swimming.

Ten swimmers broke Festival marks in the fast water of the new Indiana University Natatorium, bringing to 19 the number set in 23 races there this week.

Roger Van Jouanne of Renton, Wash., smashed the men's 400-meter individual medley mark in 4 minutes, 29.15 seconds.

Susan Rapp of Alexandria, Va., did the same to the women's 200-meter breaststroke record at 2:38.63.

Other record-breaking swimmers were Greg Rhodenbaugh, Cincinnati,

2:21.97 in the men's 200 breaststroke; Theresa Andrews, Annapolis, Md., 1:03.88 in the women's 100 backstroke; the East women's 400 medley relay, 4:15.90; the East men's 400 medley relay, 3:48.15; Matt Cellinski, Lake Worth, Fla., 3:56.36 in the men's 400 freestyle, and Sherri Hanna, Miami, Fla., 4:15.47 in the women's 400 freestyle.

In two events being raced for the first time at the Festival, the men's and women's 50-meter freestyle, Dara Torres of Beverly Hills, Calif., was timed in 26.10 and Bruce Foster of Tallahassee, Fla., in 23.63.

Not a bad performance for a group of athletes who finished third or lower in their events at last week's national championships in Mission Viejo, Calif. That meet picked the United States' team for this week's world championships in Ecuador.

"I came here to go fast," said Cellinski, who won the 900-meter freestyle Monday night. "It's a fast pool and an excellent facility."

Detroit Gets Three Quick 'Outs' During 7th Inning's Argument

By The Associated Press
For it's one ball, two balls, no strikes...and you're out of the old ball game.

Unfortunately, that variation of the traditional baseball ditty will never make the Detroit Tigers' hit parade.

New York was clinging to a 5-4 lead over the Tigers Tuesday night when Jerry Mumphrey, who singled ahead of Oscar Gamble's home run in the first inning and hit a three-run homer in the fourth, opened the Yankees' seventh with a double. Gamble walked, Dave Winfield sacrificed and an intentional walk to Graig Nettles loaded the bases.

The first pitch from Jack Morris to Rick Cerone was a ball and, according to umpire Mark Johnson, so was the next one. Catcher Lance Parrish had a different opinion and was asked to mind his own business — off the premises. One out.

"He was trying to show me up," Johnson said. "He ripped his mask off and got in my face over balls and strikes. If he had stayed down, we could have had a good talk about it."

Morris charged off the mound and eventually was ejected for kicking dirt at second base umpire Dave Phillips, who had joined the discussion group. Two out.

"I ejected him for his actions away from the mound," Phillips said. "I tried to get him back to the mound and he lost his cool and used bad language and kicked the dirt

Greenville Is Area Finalist

S. Pitt League

Southern Pitt 12

Ahoskie 1

GRIFTON — The Southern Pitt 9-12-year-old All-Stars romped to a 12-1 victory over Ahoskie in the first round of the District 7 tournament last night in Grifton.

The game was halted after four innings under the ten-run lead rule.

Southern Pitt got all it was to need in the first inning, scoring ten times in that frame.

Eugene Lee led the Southern Pitt hitting with two, while Paul Jackson hurled the win.

The best-of-three series resumes tonight in Ahoskie. A Southern Pitt win would end the tournament, while an Ahoskie victory would send the series back to Grifton on Thursday night.

North State 9

Northampton 2

RICH SQUARE — Greenville's North State Little League All-Stars vaulted into the District IV, Area II finals yesterday with a 9-2 romp over Northampton County.

The North Staters will now face Tarboro, a 4-0 winner over Roanoke Rapids in the other Area II game. In Area I, Morehead City downed New Bern, 8-6, and Havelock beat Newport, 5-2, to gain the finals.

The two area winners meet for the championship of the district, and a state tournament berth on Friday at Morehead City.

The North State stars got all they needed in the first inning, scoring four times. Morris Johnson opened the game with a double, moving to third on a wild pitch. He scored when Tony Evans grounded out.

Robbie McDonald kept things going by reaching on an error, and scored when Tom Moyer doubled. Kevin Fisher singled and he and Moyer pulled a double steal, with the latter scoring the third run. An error on the play let Fisher come the rest of the way home.

Greenville added four more in the fourth on a two-run homer by Johnson, and picked up one more run in the fifth.

Both of the Northampton runs came in the bottom of the fifth on a homer by Steve Ramsey.

Johnson led the North State hitting with three, while Moyer had two. Earnest Jacobs had two hits for Northampton.

Greenville and Tarboro meet today at 5 p.m. in Rich Square for the Area finals.

KINSTON — Coastal Plains South's 16-year-old all-stars stayed alive in the losers bracket of the state tournament last night with a 14-3 romp over Central Carolina South.

Doug Coley hurled the win and added two hits to the CPS's batting totals. Toby Fisher led the team's hitting with three, while Kevin Langston and Joey Stepp each had two hits, Stepp getting a double.

The win kept CPS alive and moved them into a second game against Central Carolina North.

Ce. Carolina North . . 5

Co. Plains South . . . 3

KINSTON — Central Carolina North ousted Coastal Plains South from the 16-year-old Senior Babe Ruth state tournament last night, 5-3. Once-beaten Central Carolina North now faces unbeaten Wayne County for the title tonight.

Coastal Plains South got only five hits in the game, no one getting more than one. Central Carolina North had seven hits.

Milwaukee climbed back into first place in the AL East, one-half game ahead of Boston. Milwaukee took a 3-1 lead in the fourth inning when Robin Yount walked, Cecil Cooper singled and Thomas homered. Thomas made it 5-1 in the sixth with another homer after a single by Ted Simmons, who ripped a two-run double in the seventh.

The home runs by Gamble and Mumphrey gave the Yankees a 5-0 lead, but Detroit chased Roger Erickson with four runs in the fifth, including Larry Herndon's two-run single and RBI hits by Lou Whitaker and Mike Ivie. The Tigers scored their final run in the eighth on Alan Trammell's double and a single by Whitaker, but it was too little and too late.

"I said things I wasn't supposed to say to an umpire," Morris conceded. "Mr. Phillips threw me out. He did what he had to do and I did what I had to do. I was in the wrong. I admit it. I just couldn't stand it anymore. I lost control after Lance was thrown out. I mean, everybody makes mistakes. Umpires are human and they make mistakes, too. But more than once during this game he (Johnson) called one a ball that was definitely a strike."

Brewers 8, Rangers 2
Gorman Thomas drove in five runs with a pair of homers while Moose Haas and two relievers scattered nine hits as

Angels 8, A's 7
Don Baylor's RBI single with two out in the bottom of the 13th inning drove in Bob Boone with the winning run for California, which tied the game 6-6 on Boone's leadoff home run in the ninth.

Mariners 9, Twins 7
Dave Edler cracked his first two home runs of the season, including a grand slam in the sixth inning off Jeff Little that wiped out a 5-4 Minnesota lead. Edler also hit a solo homer in the first inning, while Richie Zisk connected in the third and Bill Caudill registered his 18th save. Homers by Jesus Vega and Gary Gaetti accounted for five of Minnesota's runs.

Ailing Hubbard Leads Atlanta's Sweep

By The Associated Press
Atlanta second baseman Glenn Hubbard was hurting, but not enough to stay out of the second game of a crucial doubleheader with the San Diego Padres.

"I had to talk to him a little," said Hubbard of Atlanta Manager Joe Torre, who had not listed his second baseman in the lineup after a slight muscle pull in Tuesday night's 9-2 opening-game victory over the Padres.

"I told him I could make the plays in the field and that it only hurt when I swung," added Hubbard.

It obviously didn't hurt him enough, though, to keep him from hitting a two-run homer in the 10th inning to provide the Braves with an 8-6 victory and a sweep of the doubleheader. The two victories boosted Atlanta's lead over the Padres in the National League West to seven games, their biggest of the season.

Hubbard said he didn't think the drive over the left-field fence at Atlanta Stadium would be a homer, "but it was nice when it went over."

Dale Murphy, who had a homer for the Braves in each game to boost his major league leadership to 26, helped set the stage for Hubbard's winning hit in the second game when he reached above the center-field fence to rob Ruppert Jones of a two-run homer in the top of the 10th.

"A seven-game lead puts us in a good position, but you can't sit on it," said Atlanta first baseman Chris Chambliss. "But I think it'll help everybody relax."

Murphy belted a two-run homer and Bob Walk hurled a five-hitter to help the Braves win the opener. Murphy's homer off Tim Lollar, 10-5, came in the third inning following a walk to Hubbard.

Walk, 9-7, also had two hits, including an RBI double in the fifth when Atlanta also scored three runs. He walked five and struck out two.

In the nightcap, pinch-hitter Jerry Royster opened the Atlanta 10th with a walk off Gary Lucas, 0-7, and following a sacrifice by Rafael Ramirez, Hubbard drilled his seventh homer.

Elsewhere, Houston beat Cincinnati 3-2, Montreal nipped Chicago 4-3, St. Louis pounded New York 9-4, Pittsburgh blanked Philadelphia 4-0 and Los Angeles turned back San Francisco 7-3.

Astros 3, Reds 2
Nolan Ryan won his 200th career game, pitching a five-hitter and striking out 13, as Houston beat Cincinnati on Terry Puhl's run-scoring single in the eighth inning.

The 13 strikeouts were a season-high for Ryan, 11-9, and extended his own major league record of career games with 10 or more strikeouts to 143. It was the eighth time this year the Houston right-hander has reached double figures in strikeouts. Ryan walked only two batters.

Puhl's tie-breaking single in the eighth came off Charlie Leibbrandt, 3-6.

Expos 4, Cubs 3
Gary Carter's three-run homer in the first inning powered Montreal over Chicago. Carter's 21st homer came off Randy Martz, 4-7, after Andre Dawson and Al Oliver had singled. The Expos scored their eventual winning run in the second on Tim Raines' RBI single.

Steve Rogers, the major leagues' earned run leader with a 2.13 mark going into the game, had a shaky start but posted his 13th victory against only four losses. Rogers gave up six hits and two runs in the first three innings and then retired 15 in a row before Bump Wills doubled in the eighth. Wills eventually scored on Leon Durham's double.

"I knew he was going to come in with a fastball and all I did was wait for it," said Carter of his homer. "When the count went to 3-and-1 with two men on, I knew it would be a fastball because he didn't want to walk me and fill the bases that early in the game."

Cardinals 9, Mets 4
Darrell Porter homered, doubled and singled to lead St. Louis over New York. Porter's two-run homer, his sixth of the season and first since June 11, keyed a 13-hit attack as the Cardinals extended their winning streak to five games.

Clinging to a 4-3 lead, the Cardinals erupted for five runs in the sixth to put the game away. Porter's homer off Terry Leach, the third of five New York pitchers, capped the rally.

"We changed quite a few things — mainly mechanics," said St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog regarding Porter's hitting.

Porter, who had been booed regularly by Busch Stadium crowds while in the throes of an extended slump, was accorded a standing ovation following his homer.

Pirates 4, Phillies 0
Larry McWilliams and Rod Scurry combined on a three-hitter and Jason Thompson knocked in two runs to lead Pittsburgh over Philadelphia.

McWilliams, 7-4 this season and 5-1 since coming to the Pirates from Atlanta in a trade on June 29, retired the first 11 Phillies and didn't allow a hit until Gary Matthews' one-out single in the seventh inning. McWilliams struck out a career-high 10 batters and walked two in seven innings.

Philadelphia second baseman Manny Trillo set a major league record for consecutive chances without an error. Trillo handled his 459th straight errorless chance in the seventh inning to break the mark set by Baltimore's Jerry Adair in 1964-1965. Trillo also played in his 86th consecutive game without an error to break the NL record set by Ken Boswell of the New York Mets in the 1970 season.

Dodgers 7, Giants 3
Right-hander Joe Beckwith, recalled from the minors last week, didn't allow a hit in 52-3 innings of relief and Ron Cey belted a two-run homer as Los Angeles beat San Francisco.

Beckwith, 1-0, took over for starter Vicente Romo in the second inning after Romo left the game with a knee injury. Beckwith faced 18 batters, retiring 17 before leaving for a pinch-hitter in the seventh.

Steve Garvey drilled three hits and knocked in two runs for the Dodgers.

Zimmer Said Out At Texas

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Texas Rangers Manager Don Zimmer has been fired, but agreed to remain with the team through tonight's concluding game of a series with the Milwaukee Brewers, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported today.

"I'm not confirming or denying anything," Rangers majority owner Eddie Chiles said Tuesday night when asked about the firing.

Zimmer was fired in a meeting Monday morning with Chiles in Fort Worth, the newspaper reported. The Rangers beat the Brewers Monday night, 3-1, but lost, 8-2, Tuesday to fall to 38-57 for the season.

Chiles hedged earlier Tuesday when he was asked about Zimmer.

"As far as I know Zimmer's in the dugout and he'll be there tomorrow night," said Chiles.

When asked what Zimmer's status after Wednesday, Chiles said:

"I don't even know about after that. I don't even know if I'll be here after that."

Zimmer was asked to resign during a Monday morning meeting with Chiles, but refused to quit, the newspaper reported.

Chiles fired Pat Corrales, the man Zimmer succeeded, on the final day of the 1980 season.

Darrell Johnson may get the job, the newspaper said. Zimmer replaced when Johnson when he became manager of the Boston Red Sox in 1976. Zimmer earlier had managed the San Diego Padres.

Johnson, who also has managed the Seattle Mariners, is a coach with the Rangers. He is said to be a favorite of Paul Richards, who has been acting general manager since Eddie Robinson was fired earlier this season.

Zimmer had informed most of his coaches and a few selected players that he was gone before Tuesday's game, the newspaper said.

Chiles, who rarely leaves a game before it is over, departed in the fifth inning Tuesday night, surrounded by a police escort.

Zimmer refused comment after the game.

"You'll have to ask Eddie Chiles about that," said Zimmer, who stayed calm and even laughed. "If he says I'm going to be here tomorrow night, then I'll be here."

But Zimmer said he wouldn't be surprised if he didn't last the week.

"I wouldn't have been surprised if I had been fired seven weeks ago."

Asked if he has resigned, Zimmer shook his head.

"I will not resign," Zimmer said. "And if anyone said I'd resign they're out of line."

The newspaper reported there had been hints that Zimmer knew more than he was telling. He refused to discuss pitching plans for the team beyond Wednesday night.

He also suggested that a sports reporter switch his days off so he could be at Arlington Stadium Wednesday. He wouldn't say why.

Zimmer refused to discuss Monday's meeting.

"We talked. Anything more than that you'll have to get from Mr. Chiles," he said.

Fans Boo When Champion Wins

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — World bantamweight champion Floyd Favours danced when the fans thought he should be slugging it out in the National Sports Festival boxing championships.

For that, the crowd of 7,500 at the Indiana Convention Center Tuesday night roundly booed the 18-year-old from Capitol Heights, Md., after he was awarded a 3-2 decision over Herb Bivalacqua in the 119-pound class to overcome a personal loss.

"How are you going to knock him out when he's running?" said Bivalacqua, 18, of Marro, La. "How are you going to be a champion when you can't get a decision?"

"Bivalacqua, a slugger, echoed the comments made by Bowdy Welch, a loser to Favours in Saturday's semifinals.

"The 5-foot-5 champion, who also beat Bivalacqua for the U.S. Amateur title in April, said the crowd's displeasure with the decision in the three-rounder didn't bother him.

"I think I won the first and second rounds and my foot movement was able to buy me time in the third," Favours said.

"Every time he came in I started throwing flurries."

"Bivalacqua is much too strong a puncher. I'm not going to run into him. If I wasn't the world champion, they probably would have cheered for me. People like the underdog."

He added that he had received a call Saturday, telling him his grandfather had died. That could have affected me," Favours said. "It's hard being on top, but I'm trying to stay there."

The crowd liked what it saw in the 112-pound title bout when Jesse Benavides of Corpus Christi, Texas used his aggressiveness and left hand to score a unanimous decision over Steve McCrory ofetroit.

"I was hungry for the gold medal. I wanted that gold," said Benavides, who became the only repeat Festival boxing winner. He won the 106-pound crown at Syracuse, N.Y. last year.

"I beat him twice at 106 (last year)," added the 17-year-old. "I tired him out by the third round."

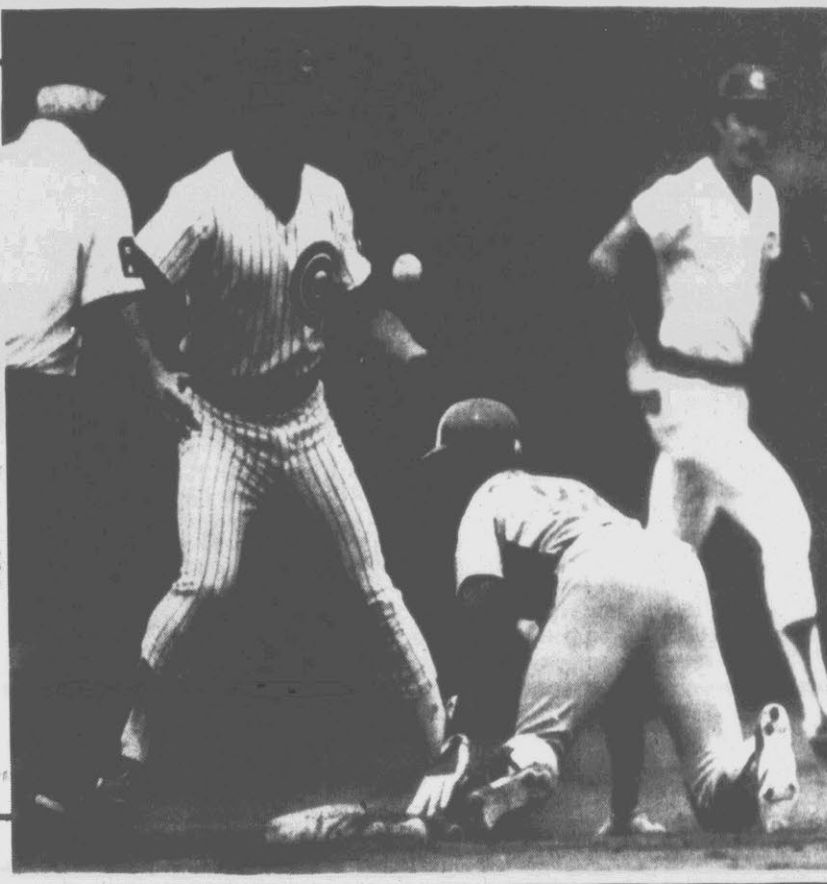

The most impressive winner of the night was Bennie Heard of Augusta, Ga., who stopped Keith Vining of Detroit at 1:20 of the third round after making his opponent take two standing eight counts in the second round.

Nathan Houser of Detroit, Jerry Page of Columbus, Ohio, Pernel Whitaker of Norfolk, Va., Bernard Gray of Boynton Beach, Fla., and Bryan Jones of Philadelphia scored unanimous victories.

Houser beat Elton Singleton of Louisville, Ky., in the 165-pound division; Whitaker topped Joey Belinc of Marysville, Wash.; Page defeated Henry Hughes of Cleveland at 139; Gray downed Orlando Johnson of Chicago at 125 and Jones beat Joe King of Washington, D.C., at 106.

49ers Not Ready To Rest On Laurels

By The Associated Press
In case anyone is wondering if the San Francisco 49ers and Cincinnati Bengals might be sitting on their respective laurels, not to worry.

Dwight Clark, the author of the memorable last-minute, leaping touchdown catch against the Dallas Cowboys that gave the 49ers the National Football Conference title, was among the first of the Super Bowl XVI champions to appear in training camp. He is itching to go, despite the 90-degree heat at the 49ers' Rocklin, Calif., base.

myself pacing around and just wanted to get back," he said. "I decided to get used to the heat. I didn't come to camp early last year, and when I got here I almost died in the heat."

Meanwhile, Bengals Coach Forrest Gregg is preparing the training camp itinerary for his American Football Conference champions, who will open their camp today in Wilmington, Ohio. He will be guarding against one thing in particular. "We've got to make sure we don't get fat," warned Gregg, whose players stumbled on their last collective step toward the National Football League championship and would prefer not to be remembered as runners-up. "We've got to put forth the same effort," Gregg added. "We can't ever let down. We talk about it all the time. We have to recognize that to get the job done we have to work as hard as we did last year."

At the other end of the NFL ladder, Baltimore's Roger Carr wasn't ready to share the enthusiasm of new head Coach Frank Kush at the Colts' Towson, Md., location. The nine-year veteran wide receiver was fined and suspended without pay for three weeks — or about half the preseason — for refusing to practice and for remarks he made to reporters after a meeting last week with Kush.

"I think his program is just asinine," Carr said. "It's like a college football program — only worse. It's a mess." According to a team communique, Carr's suspension was for "actions, attitude and insubordination... detrimental to the club." It wasn't the best of first impressions for Kush, who was hired to shape up the 2-14 Colts, tied with the New England Patriots for the NFL's worst record in 1981.

"He had made some statements in the offseason about Kush and continued to follow up in training camp," team spokesman Marty Goldman explained.

The Denver Broncos are barring four of their veteran starters from camp after they failed to meet the deadline for signing their contracts. According to John Beake, Denver's player personnel director, holdout linebackers Bob Swenson, Tom Jackson and Larry Evans and defensive back Billy Thompson will play out their option at 110 percent of their current salaries because they did not sign by the 10 a.m. deadline Tuesday.

In Tampa, Fla., Mark Cooney will be trying to regain the job he had for 103 consecutive games and lost to a knee injury — and teammate Neal Colzie. Today he came into training camp with both his leg and his attitude in good shape. "The way I look at it, I have to win my position," said the Tampa Bay Buccaneers' strong safety, who came to camp five pounds lighter to work on his quickness. "I feel very confident that I can help this team in some way. I can play strong safety, and I think I can be an effective special-teams player, too."

Unlike Cooney, Robert Shaw's knee remains a question mark. The Dallas Cowboys center decided to postpone surgery and will try to return to the starting lineup, despite a poor prognosis from the team doctor, who says Shaw will need additional surgery to repair a torn ligament.

"The knee might have gotten worse since the last time I saw him in March," Dr. Marvin Knight had said after examining Shaw Monday. "I don't know if he can play or not."

"I can't do much running," conceded the Cowboys' No. 1 draft choice in 1979. "The knee has been pretty painful." Three-year veteran tackle Angelo Fields was traded from the Houston Oilers to the Green Bay Packers for a 1983 third-round draft choice.

Still Blazing Nolan Ryan Gains 200th Career Victory Tuesday

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Astros pitcher Nolan Ryan, who has been flinging fastballs at 90-plus mph since he was a sophomore in high school, figured he would be tending to his ranching business and dabbling in banking in nearby Alvin by his 35th birthday.

Fastball pitchers past 30 years of age are rare in major league baseball and most opposing hitters and managers agree Ryan is one of the rarest.

"I think we should have a different league for that guy to play in," Cincinnati Manager Russ Nixon said after Ryan won his 200th game in a 3-2 Houston victory Tuesday night. "We ran into a buzz saw didn't we?"

Ryan, who struck out 13 Cincinnati batters, said he thought 200 victories would be out of his reach.

"I never thought I'd still be pitching when I was 35 years old," Ryan said. "If you are a fastball pitcher past 30, they look at you like you are kind of strange."

In Ryan's case, batters peer out toward the pitcher's mound with a twinge of fear.

"I am not much on records but I take satisfaction that I am able to strike out as many batters now as I did earlier in my career," said Ryan, who is closing in on Walter Johnson's career strikeout record. "Why I've been able to pitch with this velocity at my age, I have no idea."

Ryan has prepared well for his eventual retirement from baseball. He owns two ranches and during the past off-season entered the banking business in Alvin.

But a pastoral retirement attending his cattle apparently will have to wait a while longer.

Ryan has 3,401 career strikeouts, 107 shy of Johnson's 3,508 record, 143 10-strikeout-plus games and 24 other major league records, plus the admiration of Astros Manager Bill Virdon.

"It's very rare. I can't remember any pitcher who could throw with his velocity at the same age," Virdon said. "After the first inning tonight he was as consistent as he could be."

Ryan threw 123 pitches Tuesday night, 78 for strikes and was more effective as the game progressed. His fastball was clocked at 94 mph early in the game and it was still humming in at 92 mph in the ninth inning.

Swaggering over to his dressing cubicle after a performance, Ryan will predictably give credit to his curve ball for his success, talking slowly in his Texas drawl.

"I am a lot more effective when I get my curve ball over," he'll say to newsmen, who have long ago memorized the line.

Despite the repetition, it is true. When his fast ball is hopping and his curve is hitting the mark, Ryan is devastating.

Ryan, 31-9, is turning disaster into success this season. He lost his first four decisions when neither his fast ball nor his curve was working. But he's won six of his last seven starts and fanned 10 or more batters in six of his last eight outings.

Ryan got an insight into his future as a 15-year-old schoolboy at Alvin when a scout told him he had a major league fastball.

"I didn't start out to be a fastball pitcher, it was just the talent that was given to me," Ryan said. "It's just like a power hitter, he didn't start out to hit home runs, it was just the talent that was given to him."

Ryan's talent has led him to five career no-hitters and a string of records too numerous to mention. Ryan couldn't list them if he tried.

"The games I remember are those 19 strikeout games and some of those others where I struck out a lot," Ryan said. "I'm really not pitching any different. I'm just getting my curve ball over and my fastball is moving. Plus, I know the hitters better now."

Ryan also has an unenviable record of 1,871 walks.

But he likes to spread the credit for his successes.

Lynn Suddenly Has Found Self

By KEN PETERS
AP Sports Writer
ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Fred Lynn was slowly slipping from MVP to mediocrity, but almost magically, he's rediscovered that old touch.

The California Angels outfielder had a dismal 1981 season and a so-so start this year. A month ago, he was hitting .278, with only three home runs and 16 runs batted in. Currently the hottest hitter in the major leagues, he's raised his average more than 20 points and has 13 homers and 49 RBI.

It took Lynn, the 1975 American League MVP and Rookie of the Year and 1979 batting champion at Boston, some time to figure out what was causing his plate production to dip. When he discovered the causes, however, the cure worked overnight.

"I had thought about it a lot, and decided I was being defensive at the plate, not smooth and free-swinging like I used to be," Lynn said.

"And about five weeks ago, I was watching some old films of my swing and realized that I used to hold my hands lower and take a much wider stance."

"I went out the next night and hit a homer off Scott McGregor and was on my way."

"It was the change at the plate and the change up here," Lynn said, pointing at his head.

"I'm an aggressive hitter again."

After Tuesday night's game against the Oakland A's, he was riding a 17-game hitting streak during which he was batting over .400, with seven homers and 27 RBI.

Thinking, which helped Lynn end his problems at the plate, also helped cause them. He was switched from the middle of the batting order to the second hitting spot this spring, and tried to adjust.

"I thought I had to do everything like a No. 2 hitter," Lynn recalled. "I was just trying to nick the ball, get on base."

"I was hitting an awful lot of doubles down the left-field line," said the left-handed hitting Lynn. "I was doing OK, playing all right in the field and leading the league in doubles and hitting around .250 ... but it wasn't me."

He's now hitting in the middle of the order again, and slashing the ball.

"I'm taking a long stride, pulling the ball more than I ever did ... and it's great."

His current hitting tear ends a long period of frustration in Anaheim from the 31-year-old Lynn, who came to California from Boston in a trade during the winter of 1981.

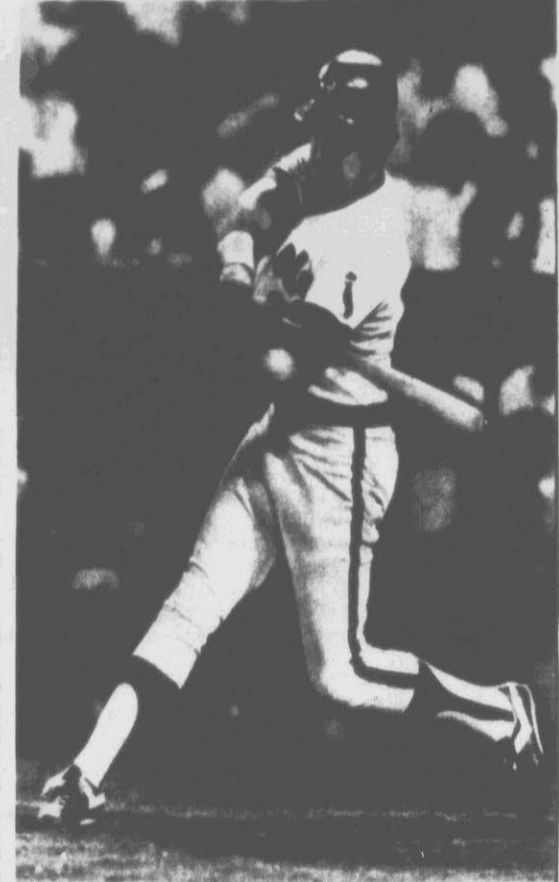

Slowed by a knee injury last season, he appeared in just 76 games and wound up hitting .219, with five home runs and just 31 RBI.

Lynn, a .308 career hitter who had averaged 21 homers and 86 RBI in six seasons prior to last year, is happy he's finally back in the groove.

"Last year was really bad, and, too, I missed the last six weeks of the 1980 season with an injury," he said. "So I haven't felt really good about my hitting for a while."

"But I feel super now in all ways. I feel like I have a chance to really do something."

He smiled and added emphatically, "And I'm not done yet."

THE DAILY REFLECTOR has been advertising local businesses since January 26, 1882.

"My father and I were riding in a used Pontiac back in 1936, and I told him that it was the best car I had ever driven, so we investigated into obtaining a Pontiac dealership franchise", relates W.S. Brown, Sr., on the beginnings of the Brown and Wood Pontiac/Cadillac dealership in Greenville.
Selling cars has been in the family blood since Brown's father, W.W. Brown, moved his family from Wilson to Greenville in 1929 to establish the Hudson/Essex dealership. The business was sold during the Depression. In 1932, the Browns opened Brown and Wood Chevrolet, which was sold in 1935 and subsequently became Phelps Chevrolet.
In the current Western Auto location in 1936, W.W. Brown and his son opened a Pontiac and Packard dealership, but soon dropped the Packard.
"It just wasn't the quality car we had thought it was going to be," said W.S. Brown. They added the Cadillac franchise to the business and moved everything in 1949 to the present location, at the corner of Dickinson Avenue and Fourteenth Street.
Brown was the principal owner/manager of the business from 1940-1977 when he turned it over to his sons William (Bill) S. Brown, Jr., and Robert (Bob) G. Brown, who are now the principal managers.
"We are a third generation business," said Brown, "and the second oldest Pontiac dealership in the Charlotte zone. And also the second oldest and continuous car dealership in Pitt County," said Brown.
The 69-year old businessman has seen a lot of changes over the years, and one of the most significant is in the availability of the media with which to advertise his business.
"When we started out, the only ad medium available was THE DAILY REFLECTOR," said Brown. "There was no local radio and television was unheard of at that time. Everyone at THE DAILY REFLECTOR has always been very cooperative with us and we have continued to advertise with them for over 50 years."

Crum Looking Forward To Fall With A Healthy Kelvin Bryant

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer
PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Since this is an even-numbered year and the odds are in his favor, University of North Carolina football coach Dick Crum knows he'll have senior tailback Kelvin Bryant for the entire 1982 season.

And Bryant's presence for a full year figures to be nothing but trouble for opponents of the Tar Heels, who have been picked to win the Atlantic Coast Conference title this year.

Bryant's freshman year in 1979 ended with a separated shoulder in the third game against Army. The next year he had 1,039 yards, when he shared time with senior Amos Lawrence.

Last season was just three games and several minutes old, and Bryant already had 15 touchdowns and was threatening to rewrite the record books when he was forced out of action for four weeks after suffering a knee injury against Georgia Tech.

He recovered from that injury, and managed to rush for more than 1,000 yards and added a great performance in the Gator Bowl against Arkansas.

There's talk of a Heisman Trophy this summer. Bryant is going on tour on behalf of the NCAA and ABC Sports. Neither Crum nor the university are pushing very hard to gain the Tarboro, N.C., native some accolades, but the prospect of a healthy Kelvin Bryant does bring smiles.

"Though Bryant did not play in the spring game, he probably ran the ball more this spring than any time he's been at Carolina," Crum said. "He feels comfortable that he has recovered from the injury."

"If he's lost any speed, I fail to see it," Crum added.

Bryant's health, as well as the health of quarterback Rod Elkins and most of the returning starters will be crucial if the Tar Heels are to renew when he was forced out of their status as a Top 10 team and a solid contender for the national championship.

A left tackle and a tight end are high on the offensive shopping list. Crum lost ironman Shelton Robinson, a starter in 36 consecutive games. Tackle Mike Marr has also graduated.

Bill Lawson, listed as a reserve defensive lineman last year, will likely replace Marr. Doug Sickels is listed as No. 1 tight end, but freshman Arnold Franklin was stolen from under the Big 10's collective nose and could challenge for playing time, although Crum isn't ready to insert freshmen into combat.

An injury to fullback Alan Burrus brought James Jones off the bench and, surprisingly, into the starting slot. Crum said Burrus will have to fight to get his job back.

Elkins would like to improve on his performance of last year, but Crum said that will involve remaining injury-free, which may mean alterations in Elkins' style.

"The thing that bothers me ... is that once Rod starts running around, he all of a sudden thinks he's a fullback," Crum said. "He trying to run over people and you don't want your quarterback doing that. I've asked him if he'd mind not doing that."

Tyrone Anthony replaced Bryant when he was hurt, then quarterback Ethan Horton was switched to tailback when Anthony went down. Horton will remain a backup tailback.

The defensive line is anchored by tackle William Fuller, an all-conference choice. Replacements are needed at linebacker.

Passing against North Carolina's secondary has always been a concern — especially for Tar Heel defensive coaches. The secondary of Greg Poole, Walter Black, Willie Harris and Sammy Johnson will try to improve on a backfield which was sixth against the pass in 1981.

How N.C. Senators, Representatives Voted

Roll Call Report Service
WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes July 15-21.

Tourism — By a vote of 241 for and 167 against, the House failed to achieve the two-thirds majority needed to pass a bill (HR 6258) authorizing $10 million for the U.S. Travel and Tourism Administration in fiscal 1983. This was doubled the $5 million funding level recommended by the administration for the agency, which conducts promotional activities in behalf of the U.S. tourism industry. A two-thirds majority was required for passage because of the short-cut parliamentary procedure under which the bill was considered. In part, the procedure banned amendments. The authorization is to be reconsidered under conventional debating rules.

Supporter James Florio, D-N.J., said that during the current recession "increases in tourism to the U.S. will help the balance of payments."

Opponent William Danemeyer, R-Calif., whose district includes Disneyland, said "this is one area of federal spending that to me more properly could be served by activities in the private sector."

Members voting "yea" wanted to spend $10 million for the tourism agency rather than a lower figure advocated by the administration.

Reps. Walter Jones, D-1; W.G. Hefner, D-8, and William Hendon, R-11, voted "yea."

Reps. L.H. Fountain, D-2; Charles Whitley, D-3; Ike Andrews, D-4; Stephen Neal, D-5; Eugene Johnston, R-6; James Martin, R-9, and James Broyhill, R-10, voted "nay."

Rep. Charles Rose, D-7, did not vote.

DEFENSE — The House rejected, 127 for and 289 against, an amendment to meet military cargo airlift needs by purchasing used Boeing 747's rather than Lockheed C-5's. Backers said the wide-bodied 747 is not nearly as costly as the C-5, is more reliable mechanically, and would be available to the Pentagon much sooner. Opponents said the 747 cannot land on rough terrain, that tanks and trucks can be driven into the C-5 but must be lifted onto the retrofitted 747, and that the C-5 has a longer flying range. The amendment was proposed to the fiscal 1983 defense authorization bill (HR 6030), later passed and sent to conference with the Senate. Its defeat left intact a $450 million outlay for the C-5.

Supporter Norman Dicks, D-Wash., argued that the Lockheed C-5 would cost about four times the price of the Boeing 747, and he said "we simply do not have enough money to buy every major weapons system that any general over at the Pentagon thinks is necessary."

Opponent Carlos Moorhead, R-Calif., said that "to approve the purchase of an airplane that will cost less at the expense of performance capability is very poor defense planning indeed."

Members voting "nay" favored purchasing the C-5 rather than the 747 as the primary military cargo aircraft.

Rose voted "yea." Jones, Fountain, Whitley Andrews, Neal Johnston, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and Hendon voted "nay."

MX MISSILE — By a vote of 212 for and 209 against, the House adopted an amendment to spend $1.14 billion in fiscal year 1983 to buy the first nine MX missiles. The vote occurred during debate on the $177 billion defense bill for 1983 (see preceding vote).

Sponsor Samuel Stratton, D-N.Y., asked one MX critic: "Does the gentleman not have enough confidence in the scientific and technological genius of America, when we can put men on the moon, that by 1986 we will have developed" an effective means of basing the MX?"

Opponent Nicholas Mavroules, D-Mass., said "the MX program as it currently exists...represents a 'build first, justify later' mentality this nation can no longer afford."

Members voting "yea" wanted to move ahead with the MX missile program.

Fountain, Whitley, Neal, Johnston, Rose, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and Hendon voted "yea."

Jones and Andrews voted "nay."

Senate
WATER — The Senate rejected, 39 for and 58 against, an amendment to require large farms in the West — those above 960 acres — to pay the full cost of irrigation water they receive from federal reclamation projects. Additionally, farms of 320 to 960 acres were to have paid more than they now pay for the water, although not full cost. The vote occurred during debate on a bill (S 1867) to legalize the current practice of large farms getting subsidized reclamation water. The 1902 Reclamation Act limits eligibility to farms of less than 320 acres, but the limit has historically been ignored by the Interior Department. As later passed and sent to conference with the House, S 1867 limits subsidized water to farms of less than 1,280 acres.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wisc., a sponsor of the amendment, said the provision of low-cost irrigation water to large farms in 17 western states amounts to "wholly unjustified subsidies for rich landowners."

Opponent Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., said "our friends from the water-wealth East want to deny water to the water-poor West...the West has lots and lots of land and no water to meet future needs."

Senators voting "yea" wanted western farms of more than 960 acres to continue to receive federal irrigation water from reclamation projects at taxpayer-subsidized rates.

Sens. John East, R, and Jesse Helms, R, voted "nay."

REAGANOMICS — By vote of 45 for and 54 against, the Senate rejected an amendment to exclude those earning $78,000 or more from the third installment of the administration's three-year cut in rates due to take effect next July 1. Revenue generated by this Democratic-sponsored amendment was to have been used for Medicare and to avert planned hikes in the federal unemployment tax, the telephone excise tax, and other taxes that would be raised in the major revenue bill now before Congress. The bill (HR 4961) was headed for final passage.

Supporter Robert Byrd, D-W. Va., said "this is the true middle-class relief amendment that says the middle class is staggering under an already unbearable burden of taxation and we should not add to that now."

Opponent Robert Dole, R-Kans., said "the full third-year tax cut is a promise made to the American working people that must be kept."

Senators voting "nay" wanted to preserve the full three-year tax cut for salaries of $46,500 and above and to raise needed revenue by increasing other taxes.

East and Helms voted "nay."

Disabled Face Up To Public Attitude

NEW YORK (AP)—Recent breakthroughs in technology and legislation have helped thousands of Americans with disabilities break down the social and professional barriers they've encountered in the past, says Robert Ross, executive director of the Muscular Dystrophy Association (MDA).

"However," he adds, "one major problem that can't be solved with science and laws is that many people are unsure of how to relate to a person with a disability, and therefore feel uncomfortable with such a person."

To overcome this difficulty, MDA offers these suggestions:

—Speak directly to the person in a normal tone of voice. Don't rely on a companion as a go-between.

—Don't be patronizing to a person with a disability. Don't assume that his or her life is less interesting or active because of the disability.

Don't talk "down" to a person with a handicap.

—Be considerate of the extra time it might take a person with a disability to get things said or done. Let the person set the pace in walking or speaking.

—Offer assistance if you wish, but do not insist that the person accept it.

—Don't tower over a wheelchair. Consider sitting down to share eye level.

—Don't automatically hold on to a person's wheelchair. It is part of a person's body space.

—Don't move a wheelchair or crutches out of reach of a person who needs them.

—Don't refrain from discussing sports or physical activities.

Ross also suggests that you should not avoid the issue of the person's disability. The person is very aware of it and will most likely be more than willing to answer questions.

Clogging Class Begins Aug. 2

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department will conduct a class for beginning clogging starting Aug. 2. The class will be taught by Nancy Spainhour, a member of the Green Grass Cloggers.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — NUTRITIOUS PINEAPPLE IS OUR PLEASANT SUMMER TREAT.
Today's Cryptoquip clue: U equals E.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

three. Therefore, at trick two declarer should ignore trumps and start on hearts immediately. If both defenders follow to two high hearts, there are no problems. Declarer now leads ace of trumps and another, and he will lose either two or three trump tricks, depending on the break in that suit. As the cards lie, East can ruff the second heart, but he can do no damage. Declarer wins a plain suit return, cashes the ace of spades and then reverts to hearts. Whether or not East ruffs the heart lead, declarer will be able to ruff his fourth heart on the table, and so end up losing no more than three trump tricks.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? VFW Award To Honor Boyd Fifteen members of Veterans of Foreign Wars Post No. 7032 attended the 2nd District meeting in Washington, D.C., recently.

A plaque for attendance was awarded to the Charles Gray Post of Greenville. Post Commander Louis Tyson announced that the plaque would be engraved in honor of the past district commander and member of the Greenville post, Jim Boyd, who recently died. The post has had the highest attendance at the last three North Carolina District 2 meetings, and Boyd had been active in pursuing the award for the post.

Some hands are so simple that even an expert can be fooled. This hand was reported in "Bridge," the official organ of the Netherlands Bridge Federation.

Four spades was a normal contract. Observe that, despite the great disparity in the quality of his suits, South opened in the higher-ranking of his two five-card major suits. The rest of the auction was unremarkable.

West led his fourth-best diamond and declarer finessed successfully. The most popular line was for declarer to lead a low trump. Where East played low, West won and continued with a diamond. Declarer won in dummy and cashed the ace of spades. Had both defenders followed, declarer would have been home. But West showed out. Declarer shifted his attention to hearts. East ruffed the second heart, drew dummy's last trump, and declarer was still left with a heart loser — down one.

The winning line is quite simple. With no fast losers in the side suits, declarer should realize that his contract is safe as long as he can hold his trump losers to

New Road Sign For Motorists

INTERIM COMBINATION — A combination of two types of warning signs is now being installed at certain places in eastern North Carolina, incorporating an international symbol.

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

As roadside works of art, they're quite attractive modern pieces in brilliant white, black, red and yellow. Their purpose, of course, is utilitarian and the two-part signs, a diamond-shaped warning sign with a rectangular word warning beneath, are, as Gerald English explains, an interim measure between old and new warning signs for a "stop ahead" situation.

English, division traffic engineer for District 2, State Department of Transportation, with offices in Greenville, explained "a transition is now under way from a word message type of warning sign to an international symbol sign without words."

The familiar diamond-shaped sign with "stop ahead" in black letterings superimposed on a yellow background, English notes, "is on the way to being phased out. As old signs need replacing, the department will install the adopted international symbol sign."

The new sign bears a black arrow over a red octagonal-shaped symbol for stop and is devoid of words.

"Use of the new sign with a word message sub-panel attached below is being used to train people to become accustomed to the new international sign," English said.

Another decision on where to intermily supplement the international symbol sign with a word sign, English notes, "is the regulation in North Carolina that a warning sign for a stop ahead is to be placed at a point 750 feet before the stop sign. There are perhaps more of the dual combinations in use in this district than anywhere else, especially in rural areas where stop signs may be more difficult to see from a distance."

The interim period of use of the dual warning symbol and word message arrangement, English says "will last at least another year. The department has been working on the change-over for the past two years."

Discuss Fee For 'Free' Booklets

WASHINGTON (AP) — Those public interest government pamphlets that have always been free, soon may no longer be.

The Consumer Information Center is tentatively planning to impose a $1 fee on orders of two or more free booklets, according to Acting Director Teresa Nasif.

Over the years, the center has distributed millions of booklets providing information to the general public about government programs that can help them.

A single booklet still would carry no charge, she said, and the limit of 20 no-cost booklets would likely remain in effect.

The fee is not a charge for the publications, which would still be listed as free, but a service charge for handling the order. Such user fees have been encouraged by the Reagan administration.

Awards Given To Sci-Fi Films

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Raiders of the Lost Ark" captured seven awards including best fantasy film as the Academy of Science Fiction, Fantasy and Horror Films honored the movies of 1981.

"Raiders," a Steven Spielberg-George Lucas adventure film that is drawing millions in re-release by Warner Bros. this summer, garnered top awards for its stars in voting by 3,000 academy members for the ninth annual competition Tuesday night.

"Superman II," produced by Pierre Spengler, was named best science fiction film.

George Folsey Jr.'s "American Werewolf in London" took double awards for best horror film and make-up by Rick Baker.

"Raiders" star Harrison Ford, who portrayed whip-cracking Indiana Jones, was named best actor. Co-star Karen Allen won the best actress award.

"Raiders" also won for Spielberg, best director; Lawrence Kasdan, best writing; John Williams, best music; and Richard Edlund, best special effects.

"Quest for Fire," an interpretation of prehistoric life, took two awards — one as 1981 best international movie, the other a special award as an outstanding film.

Instant Captions For Deaf Soon

By NORMAN BLACK Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Deaf television viewers around the country will soon be able to watch instant captions on live broadcasts of ABC's "World News Tonight," the National Captioning Institute says.

The project, which will begin late this year, will allow the deaf who have purchased a special decoder to read the news on their TV screen at the same time other viewers are listening to the broadcast.

Institute officials say the significance of the new project is its ability to produce captions as the live program is in progress.

Jane Edmondson, a spokesman for the institute that was founded in 1979 to advance the use of closed-captioning technology, said the Department of Education is funding the project through a $1.3 million contract.

Closed captioning is considered "closed" because the captions or subtitles are embedded inside a TV signal in such a way that they're invisible on a normal TV set. That is why the deaf who want to view ABC's evening news program must purchase a special decoder.

The closed process was developed several years ago in part to avoid the problem of distracting the regular audience with open captioning, a procedure that flashes captions on a TV screen for all viewers to see.

Ever since it began offering its captioning services to broadcasters and advertisers, the institute has worked to reduce the amount of time needed to write the captions.

ABC, NBC and the Public Broadcasting Service provide their entertainment programs to the institute in plenty of time for captions to be written. But the normal process cannot be used for live broadcasts.

Last November, the institute and ABC took the first major step toward instant captioning by reducing the lag time to 30 minutes. The new project will produce captions almost immediately once words are spoken.

The process works by having a stenographer type short-hand notes of the dialogue as the TV program airs.

The stenography equipment, similar to that used in most courtrooms, is attached to a captioning computer which then translates the short-hand into readable captions. The entire process takes only 2 seconds to 3 seconds, the institute says.

Conductor And Ballerina To Wed

NEW YORK (AP) — Free-lance symphony conductor Michael Gregori, 29, and ballerina Eva Evdokimova, 33, will marry Sunday, and the conductor says, "We'll have sort of a jet-set career."

Miss Evdokimova, an American citizen, is prima ballerina with both the London Festival Ballet and Berlin Ballet.

"We'll have residences in New York, London and Berlin," Gregori said, noting that he lives in New York.

The wedding will be at the estate of friends on Long Island.

They met in 1980 during a season by the Berlin Ballet at the Metropolitan Opera House. Gregori was playing double bass in the orchestra.

"We've been meeting in airports," he said, "and speaking on the phone every night, of course. We've been supporting the phone company."

Tired Of Summer Re-Runs? Relief Is But Two Years Away

By FRED ROTHENBERG AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Are you tired of summer reruns, programs you wouldn't watch the first time coming back again with mold around the edges? Then do we have some shows for you.

And they are only two years away.

The opening ceremonies of the Los Angeles Summer Olympics are scheduled exactly two years from today. The next day, July 29, the fun and games begin for real, and ABC will be there to cover virtually every tenth of a second.

ABC, which paid $225 million for broadcast rights to the first American-based Summer Games since 1932, plans to carpet our living rooms with 207½ hours of wall-to-wall coverage.

For two weeks, ABC will offer 14 hours of Olympics every day. They'll start in the morning at 10, Eastern time, take a news break at 5:30, then resume at 7 p.m., running another marathon until 2 a.m., barely stopping for a 30-minute news breather from 12-12:30.

The Los Angeles Games will be the first summer Olympic participation by U.S. athletes since Montreal in 1976. Jimmy Carter kept America out of the Moscow Games in 1980 in retaliation for the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

For audiences weaned on Jim McKay and ABC's up-close-and-personal Olympic documentation, the Moscow Games wouldn't have been official anyway. They were going to be on NBC. The Greeks discovered the Olympics, but ABC's Roone Arledge put them on television.

Six years ago, nearly half the households watching TV tuned in for ABC's coverage of the Montreal Olympics, giving the network 7 of the 10 top-rated shows for July.

ABC has been planning the Summer Games and the 1984 Sarajevo, Yugoslavia, Winter Olympics for some time. The point man in that effort is Jeff Ruhe, 30, director of production for the Olympics who formerly was assistant to Arledge, president of ABC News and Sports.

Ruhe says camera and announcing positions already have been determined for 18 of the 22 venues in Los Angeles. Many locations will be familiar, since ABC has done college football from the Los Angeles Coliseum, pro basketball from the Forum and baseball from Dodger Stadium.

"This is a big advantage," said Ruhe. "From our night football, we knew that lighting at the Coliseum has been a problem. (One sponsor) was paying for a new floor, so we suggested they add new lighting, too."

Some problems won't be handled as easily. Like traffic. The '84 Games are spread throughout Southern California, but Ruhe is confident that ABC will win the battle of the freeways, even if commuters and ticket-holders cannot.

"It won't keep us from getting on the air," he said. "Because we're responsible for world coverage (neutral pictures for the international feed), our cameramen will be there early. And, if it takes special lanes on the roads, and helicopters, we'll do it."

This is the kind of positive thinking that made memorable ABC's Olympic coverage from such places as Munich, Montreal and Lake Placid.

Still Winner

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Although it has been on the air for 11 years and undergone many changes in its cast of characters, "M-A-S-H" remains as popular as ever, according to figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co.

The CBS comedy series, which tracks the Korean War exploits of the 4077th mobile army surgical hospital, finished No. 1 in the Nielsen ratings for the week ending July 25.

In all, CBS had seven shows in the Top 10 and won first place for the week ending July 25. CBS had a rating of 12.8. ABC was second with 11.9 and NBC was third with 10.8. The networks say this means in an average prime-time minute 12.8 percent of the nation's homes with TV were tuned to CBS.

Two of the CBS shows in the Top 10 have been canceled by the network — "House Calls" and "WKRP in Cincinnati." The other CBS shows among the Top 10 were "The Jeffersons," "Alice," "Trapper John, M.D." and "60 Minutes."

ABC had two shows in the Top 10, "Fantasy Island" and "The Love Boat," and NBC had one, "Hill Street Blues."

Here are the Top 10 shows: "M-A-S-H," a rating of 21.4 of 17.1 million households; "House Calls," 20.2 or 16.1 million, CBS; "Fantasy Island," 19.1 or 15.3 million, ABC; "The Jeffersons," 18.3 or 14.6 million, CBS; "Hill Street Blues," 17.5 or 13.9 million, NBC; "Alice," 17.1 or 13.6 million, CBS; "Trapper John, M.D.," 16.9 or 13.5 million, CBS; "The Love Boat," 16.8 or 13.4 million, ABC; "60 Minutes," 16.7 or 13.3 million, CBS; "WKRP in Cincinnati," 16.6 or 13.2 million, CBS.

Here are the next 10: "Lou Grant," CBS; "Three's Company," ABC; "Diff'rent Strokes," NBC; "Too Close for Comfort," ABC; "Private Benjamin," CBS; "Magnum, P.I.," CBS; "Quincy," NBC; "Hart to Hart," ABC; "CHiPs," NBC; "Laverne and Shirley," ABC.

For Sarajevo, Ruhe will learn the native tongue. For Los Angeles, he knows the language, so "maybe I'll work on my tennis game," he cracked.

He's already been perfecting his diplomacy.

On the possibility of a Soviet boycott of the Los Angeles Games, he said: "Soviet representatives attended a publicity meeting. Our indications are that they're coming."

And on the concerns of ABC's daytime programmers that pre-empting soap operas for two weeks might force serial lovers to switch allegiance and get hooked on rival sex-and-sorrow shows: "Fourteen hours a day is a lot of time, and it wouldn't bother me if we gave back one or two hours to the soaps."

Frequent Ethnic Rivalry In Soviet's War Machine

By BARTON REPERT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Ethnic conflicts are so frequent in the Soviet armed forces that they could weaken the Kremlin's formidable war machine, says a Rand Corp. study based on detailed interviews with former Soviet servicemen.

U.S. specialists are now trying to assess how much effect these deep-rooted tensions, as well as such chronic problems as alcoholism, insubordination and corruption, have on the 5.8 million members of the Soviet military.

At one secret nuclear installation in western Siberia, racial clashes punctuated by gunfire erupted between local conscripts and darker-complexioned troops from Soviet Central Asia, the study said.

The Soviet government asserts that its armed forces serve as an effective means for overcoming ethnic prejudices among the country's more than 100 nationality groups and for promoting the formation of an ideologically homogenized "new Soviet man."

However, the recently released Rand study concluded that "in the peacetime armed forces, ethnic conflict is frequent, perhaps prevalent and occasionally severe."

"Ethnic problems suggest existing or potential vulnerabilities that should receive the attention of U.S. military planners," the study said, citing possible inadequacies in basic training and unreliability of support forces to back up Soviet combat units.

Its authors, S. Enders Wimbush and Alex Alexiev, wrote that slightly more than half the 130 former Soviet servicemen interviewed said they had participated in, witnessed, or knew someone who had taken part in "violent conflict attributable to ethnic tensions."

"We can envisage combat-related scenarios in which ethnic or racial riots, minority conflicts with local populations, or even mutiny based on ethnic grievances could become real possibilities," Wimbush and Alexiev said.

Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., a persistent critic of U.S. defense spending, has embraced the Rand study and similar accounts as support for his view that Pentagon estimates of the Soviet threat tend to be overblown.

In recent months, Aspin has issued news releases — drawing on testimony by ex-Soviet soldiers who have emigrated to the West — which mention problems ranging from thievery of military supplies to machine gun slayings of officers.

On one post in the Soviet Union, a Latvian soldier tried to run down his company's Russian political officer with a tractor used to haul missiles, according to Aspin's reports.

And in a Red Army unit near Kharkov in the eastern Ukraine, more than two dozen soldiers — short of vodka but thirsty for anything alcoholic — died after drinking truck antifreeze, the congressman said.

The Rand report, Aspin said, "confirms my own findings that ethnic tensions are a serious source of internal dissension within the Soviet army. People are worried about the racial composition of the U.S. Army. But it is clear that the Soviets would be happy to swap for our problems."

That opinion is not unanimous. Ellen Jones, an analyst for the Defense Intelligence Agency, said in a recent article in the journal Comparative Strategy that "the magnitude of minority problems in the Soviet armed forces has been seriously overestimated by Western specialists."

She said, "As a source of disciplinary problems, ethnic rivalry ... is probably less serious than disciplinary infractions relating to alcohol abuse, unauthorized leave, excessive hazing of newly arrived conscripts, or poor small-unit leadership."

Still, the officer corps leading the Soviet Union's mainly draftee force remains overwhelmingly dominated by ethnic Russians, according to Rand, a think tank in Santa Monica, Calif.

Moscow now has to face the prospect of a draft pool for enlisted men increasingly drawn from the burgeoning Moslem peoples of SOVIET Central Asia, among them the Uzbeks, Kazakhs and Tadzhiks, the report said.

The percentage of ethnic

Russians and their fellow Slavs — the Ukrainians and Byelorussians — in the conscript pool of 18-year-old men is projected to decline from 67 percent in 1980 to 62 percent in 1985, while the Turkic-Moslem proportion is expected to climb from 23.5 percent to 28.7 percent over the same period, the report said.

It noted that the Soviet army currently reflects a "stark dichotomy" between combat units manned by a clear majority of soldiers from Slavic nationalities, usually 80 percent or more, and noncombat units generally containing 70 percent to 90 percent or more non-Slavs, particularly Central Asians and recruits from the Caucasus Mountains. "Non-Slavs who serve in combat units often are relegated to support roles, such as in the kitchen or in the warehouses," said the Rand study, adding that only minimal percentages of non-Slavic personnel are found in higher technology services such as the air force and navy.

Overall, it said, "Racism is a dominant feature of the relationship between Slavs and nonwhite non-Slavs, especially Central Asians and other Turkic-Muslim peoples ... We feel confident in speculating that racism in the Soviet armed forces is prevalent and unchecked to an extent unknown in the U.S. forces."

Another Disney Dream Being Readied For Public

By IKE FLORES
Associated Press Writer

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Trucks plow through the mud roads. Construction cranes swing back and forth across the cloud-filled sky.

Thousands of hard-hatted workers swarm over a pitted, busy landscape dotted with huge structures ranging from the odd-shaped futuristic to European ancient. Oriental temples meld with American frontier architecture. William Shakespeare's birthplace and Paris' Eiffel Tower around a huge lagoon.

The "imagineers" of Walt Disney's legacy are busy putting the final touches on their late master's dream: a showplace combining the past and the future. American technology with the flavor of foreign lands and cultures.

The $800 million Epcot Center is in the final stages of construction alongside central Florida's biggest tourist attraction — Walt Disney's Magic Kingdom.

The center's two theme areas — World Showcase, with pavilions representing nine nations, and Future World, featuring the marvels of American science, industry and imagination — will be ready Oct. 1 for the first of an expected 8 million visitors a year.

The new attraction, combined with the familiar amusement park next door, is projected to lure more than 20 million people a year to Florida.

For the visitor, the offerings of Disney's biggest and most expensive project are described this way: In Future World, you travel the corridors of time and discover what lies ahead. In World Showcase, you travel the countries of the world and discover the family of man.

Epcot Center was originally EPCOT — acronym for Experimental Prototype Community of Tomorrow, a futuristic concept some envisioned as a plastic-domed city where people would live and work in a controlled laboratory environment.

That idea eventually gave way to the more practical, permanent exposition of science, imagination and foreign cultures.

Disney officials defend it as much more than a giant theme park.

"Epcot will be as different from Disneyland as this was from Coney Island," says Disney World spokesman Bob Mervine, echoing a favorite company line. "It's a step toward getting entertainment from real things as opposed to fantasy."

Twice the size of the Magic Kingdom and linked to it by eight miles of monorail, Epcot Center still encourages debate about whether it's primarily educational or entertaining.

Even some of the top Disney officials aren't sure.

Dick Nunis, president of Walt Disney World, put it this way recently while conducting an impromptu tour. "I subscribe to what Walt always said — 'I would rather entertain and hope people learn than teach and hope they're entertained.'"

At a distance, Epcot Center's most striking feature is a silver-gleaming 180-foot geosphere, the Spaceship Earth globe, at the gateway to Future World.

From there, the visitor can wander through pavilions named Universe of Energy, Transportation, the Land, Imagination, New Horizons, and Computer Central.

Adjacent to Future World and encircling the 40-acre lagoon, the visitor will walk or ride along village streets joining Aztec pyramids, a Japanese Shinto shrine, a broad piazza from Italy, Chinese pagodas, a Bavarian biergarten and other slices of life from eight foreign cultures.

"I'm as excited as a kid waiting for it to open," says Nunis, supervising the day-to-day construction of what he says may be the largest private building project in the country today.

There are 4,000 construction workers making the stretch drive to complete the 550-acre project, which is costing twice as much as the original Magic Kingdom did when it opened 10 years ago.

Some 1,800 full-time artists, designers and engineers are involved, plus another 1,000 in consulting firms across the country, the Disney organization says.

Epcot will more than double Disney's investment in the 27,400-acre "vacation kingdom" site southwest of Orlando.

Participating in the Future World adventures Disney says are a preview of the 21st century are the Bell System, Exxon, General Motors, Kraft, Kodak, American Express, Coca-Cola, Sperry Univac and General Electric.

The foreign nations involved in World Showcase's first phase are Canada, France, Italy, Japan, China, Mexico, Great Britain and West Germany. The American Adventure Pavilion will feature Disney's first "walking" audio-animatronic robot, Ben Franklin, plus Thomas Jefferson and other historical figures.

Everything is big. One single pavilion, The Land, covers more than six acres, as big as all of Tomorrowland in the Magic Kingdom. The lagoon takes up an area equal to 85 football fields.

She Likes Job As Pawnbroker

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Twenty-five-year-old Penny Malina works in a rough neighborhood at an unpopular job, but there's nothing else she'd rather be doing.

The University City woman recently celebrated her first anniversary as owner and operator of P.J. Loans, a small pawnshop in north St. Louis.

"It's so different," she says. "You see an incredible range of people and merchandise. A millionaire comes in to buy diamonds and people come in to sell their watch for a dollar."

Miss Malina got her first taste of pawnbroking at age 15 when she volunteered to work for a family friend who needed help in his pawnshop. She preferred the job to working at her father's paint factory.

She studied business and marketing at the University of Missouri-Columbia for three years, but quit in 1978 to return to pawnbroking.

In June 1981, she launched her own business on a corner that over the years has been known as a good pawnshop location.

It's a tough neighborhood, and Miss Malina keeps four guns loaded and ready. So far, she's had just one attempted break-in, which occurred at night.

"The people are really nice here," she says. "It's not that bad of a neighborhood. There was a shooting up the street the other day, but that can happen anywhere."

Fellow pawnbrokers like Joe Liberman say they know of no one else like her.

"She is a different breed," says Liberman, president of the St. Louis Pawnbrokers Association. "As far back as I can recall, there has never been a woman who owned and operated a shop that wasn't inherited from a husband."

Miss Malina has learned to evaluate the clarity of a diamond as well as the worth of a chainsaw. She has seen people try to pawn cars, shoes, parachutes, almost anything.

Her shop works like a little banking institution for the community, and she knows many of her customers by name, since the majority are regulars.

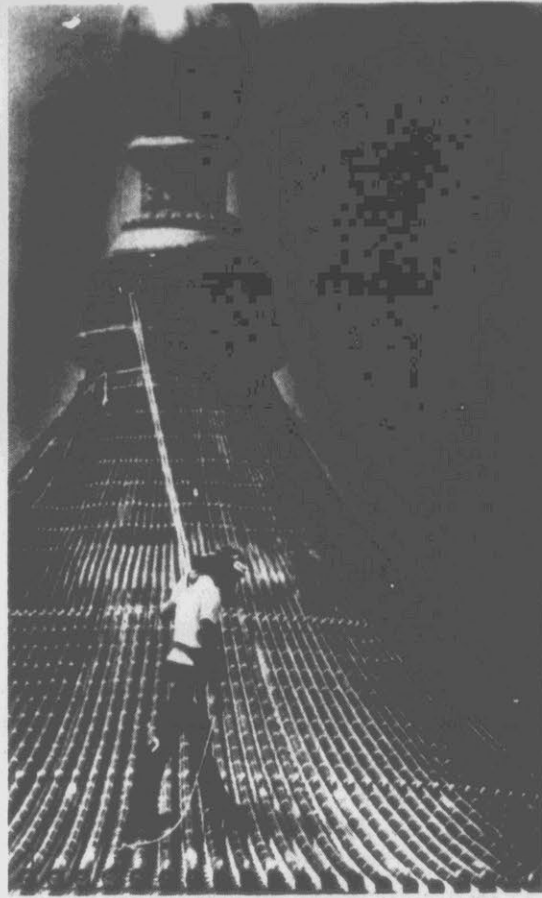

"They come at the first of the month when the checks come in and they buy their stuff," she says. "At the end of the month when the checks are running out, they're back, usually bringing in that same television."

Under Missouri law, a pawnbroker must hold a pawned item for 90 days. Afterward, a borrower forfeits the property if the loan is not repaid. Interest charged legally on such loans is 2 percent per month.

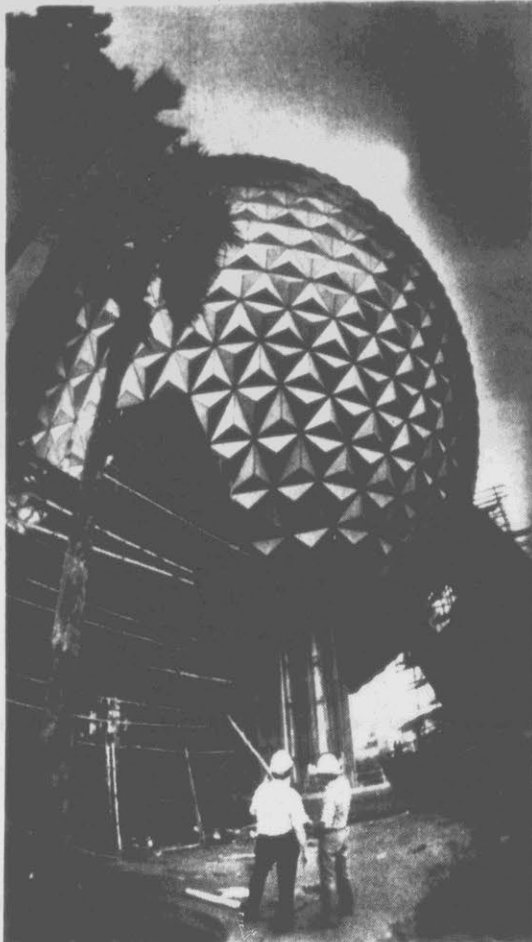

Miss Malina agrees that pawnbroking is sometimes a sad business, but she disputes the popular image of pawnbrokers as "bloodsuckers" or swindlers.

She says if customers need a few extra bucks, she asks them to tell her their stories.

"I hear about how they have been thrown out of their apartments, their cars have broken down, they need to go to the hospital, or they have been robbed," she says. "And if I believe them, I try to help out."

More Women Workaholics

NEW YORK (AP)—Workaholism, traditionally thought to be a male syndrome, is affecting more and more women as they break through "chauvinistic barriers" and fill increasing numbers of top executive positions, says Dr. Ethel Person, a psychoanalyst at the New York State Psychiatric Institute in New York City.

"Most women who suffer from this problem don't regard themselves as workaholics," she said. "They simply can't see how others derive any pleasure from non-work-related activities."

Workaholics tend to avoid relating to family or friends in a personal or emotional manner, Ms. Person explains. Reluctance or defensiveness in admitting any problem is rationalized by the workaholics' belief that they provide "the better things in life" for dependents, things that are possible only because of the high salaries they earn.

"Women workaholics are more noticeable now as the working wife and working mother become common societal roles," Ms. Person points out, "but females have been workaholics inside the household for centuries."

"Compulsive housecleaners and overorganizers are also workaholics," she adds. "They 'take care' of husbands and children instead of relating to them."

One way to spot

workaholics is by their inability to enjoy themselves on days off from the office, the psychoanalyst says, since they can't relax and they feel guilty about not working. These guilt feelings often are unintentional smokescreens created to stave off personal contact, she says.

Frequently depressed on family outings or vacations, the workaholic may take up a leisure activity with fierce determination, Ms. Person notes. "Playing six hours of tennis on Saturday or rigidly adhering to jogging schedules each day are simply other obsessions unconsciously used to put distance between workaholics and personal relationships."

She tells of one busy woman executive, who recently began to slow her pace, and pointed out the ultimate irony of female workaholism.

"Years ago, I used to complain that my husband was too busy climbing the job ladder to enjoy his family," the businesswoman said. "He became a success and began to relax at the same time my career began to take off. Now he's the one who complains that I'm never around!"

India Seeing More Brides Set Aflame

By BRAHMA CHELLANEY
Associated Press Writer
NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Bharati Narula, a 20-year-old newlywed, rushed screaming into the street from her New Delhi home last month, her clothes aflame. "God save me, I'm being burned," she cried before collapsing.

Ms. Narula was the latest victim on a growing list of young Indian women to die from burns after their parents failed to pay promised dowries or were unable to meet demands by in-laws for more money or goods.

Authorities estimate that as many as 400 newly married wives died of burns last year in New Delhi. Many of their in-laws say the deaths were cooking accidents but some parents call the burnings cold-blooded slayings.

In Ms. Narula's case, her husband, her mother-in-law and her father-in-law are in jail, awaiting trial on murder charges. They are accused of pouring kerosene on the young woman's clothing and setting her on fire.

There have been only a handful of arrests in connection with the deaths. In most "bride burnings," the assailants go free because of lack of evidence, authorities say.

The deaths of Ms. Narula and eight other women in New Delhi during June triggered weekly demonstrations by several women's organizations that formed an anti-dowry committee.

Chanting slogans like "Brides are not for burning," "Marriage is not a commercial transaction" and "Send murderers to the gallows," these activists have staged noisy protests outside houses where young women were fatally burned.

They are concentrating their efforts on organizing street-corner meetings and marches to create a greater awareness among women of their rights and force authorities to punish those responsible for the burnings.

"Increased public revulsion against bride burning has not been matched by any change in the traditionally lackadaisical attitude of police," the Times of India said in a recent editorial. "There is nothing to show that they are either more vigilant with a view to preventing bride burning or more energetic in investigating cases."

The Dowry Prohibition Act of 1961 forbids giving a dowry or accepting it, with penalties of six months in prison and fines. However, the custom seems to be growing, particularly among the urban middle class.

A dowry is usually paid in cash, clothes, jewelry, electric appliances and household furnishings. According to a government survey, the size of a dowry is based on a man's education, social standing and job. The higher he ranks in all three categories, the larger the dowry his family can command.

Members of the elite government services — the Indian Administrative Service (IAS) and the Indian Foreign Service (IFS) — are the most sought-after bachelors, commanding up to $40,000. They are followed by doctors and engineers, who get up to $35,000, according to the Women's Vigilance Forum, a women's rights group.

Strong social pressures on parents to arrange marriages for their daughters before they graduate from college and the difficulty in finding good bridegrooms from the same social caste enable the dowry custom to flourish.

"The increasing demands for gifts and ostentatious weddings impose a tremendous strain on the family finances and expose young girls to an extremely unfair competition in which their own worth is hardly recognized," the National Commission on the Status of Women has reported.

Marriage in India's male-dominated Hindu society of 700 million people is not just the union of a man and a woman but a sacred act cementing a network of kinship and social ties. A woman would face social embarrassment and stigma if she were to leave her husband's family and return to her parents during a dowry dispute.

Costs Hurt Jukebox

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) - It was found almost any place people gathered to eat or drink - in soda shops and pizza parlors, diners and truck stops. For a nickel, then a dime and now a quarter, people could play if they wanted to pay.

Those days may be over. Beset by rising costs, declining profits, video games and even Muzak, the coin-operated music machine, or jukebox, may soon be a distant melody.

"There just has been a tremendous decline in the number of places where jukeboxes were once located," says Leo Droste, executive vice president of the Amusement and Music Operators Association.

"I can recall as a teen-ager you would walk up to a counter in a drugstore and there would be wall boxes in the booths," he said. "You don't find that today. You find that if they do have music, it's background music."

Droste says that at the peak of the jukebox craze in the 1950s, there were 700,000 in the United States. By the early 1970s, the Chicago-based association estimates there were 450,000 boxes and 7,500 operators. In 1981, between 3,500 and 5,000 operators were running 300,000 jukeboxes, the association said.

So far this year, the Copyright Royalty Tribunal - a federal agency which collects royalties for song composers and publishers - has issued licenses for only 120,000 jukeboxes, a word derived from the Southern juke house or brothel. Association officials say some operators may not have obtained licenses for their boxes because of a higher licensing fee that went into effect earlier this year.

The jukebox manufacturing business is also in decline. In the early 1970s, the association says four U.S. manufacturers - Wurlitzer, Seeburg, Rockola and Rowe - produced 70,000 jukeboxes a year.

Wurlitzer stopped making jukeboxes in 1974. Seeburg went bankrupt five years later and was purchased by Stern Electronics, which is now marketing boxes under the Seeburg name. The total domestic jukebox output is down to 25,000 a year, and half of those are sold abroad.

Droste said his association was once simply called Music Operators of America. The name was changed in 1974 to reflect the shift by the coin-operated entertainment industry from jukeboxes toward such amusements as pinball machines, pool tables and, more recently, video games.

Because coin-operated machines require constant servicing, most association members are small-business men who have an average of 50 to 70 jukeboxes in a concentrated geographical area. Nearly all now run several forms of coin-operated amusements.

"In the last 25 or 30 years, the jukebox (alone) has never been enough," says Manley Lawson Jr., vice president of the Lawson Music Co. in Winter Haven, Fla., which was a jukebox-only operation when Lawson's father started it in 1934. Now, Lawson says, jukeboxes account for only 30 percent of his business.

Video games are gobbling up many of the quarters that once went into jukeboxes. The jukebox has also fallen victim to other sources of music such as discos and what distributor Dock Ringo of Mineral Wells, Texas, calls "the illegal use of FM radio" piped in on stereo systems.

Many operators said the main reason for the jukebox's decline is that it has become unprofitable. The association says a 1981 survey of operators found that the average jukebox made a profit of only $49.95 in 1980. One-third of the operators surveyed said they were either breaking even or losing money on jukeboxes.

Operators say costs of machines, records and servicemen's salaries are going up. They are upset about recent copyright royalty fee increases: the annual per-jukebox fee went from $8 to $25 this year, and will go up to $50 Jan. 1. Further annual increases will be tied to the Consumer Price Index starting in 1987.

At the same time, consumers seem unwilling to pay more than a quarter to hear their favorite record.

"When our costs go up, it is very difficult to increase our income by increasing our prices," Lawson said. "It's an impulse item, and when you raise the price, you reduce the use... When we put in the dollar-bill acceptor we found that we actually reduced the volume."

As a result, Lawson added, jukeboxes are simply being removed from locations where they are not in almost constant use - "places that are only open a limited number of hours a week, the greasy-spoon type of restaurant, truck stops. The typical location that is continuing to earn money in the jukebox is the neighborhood tavern."

But some operators are unwilling to predict the total demise of the jukebox. Lawson and Ringo say new technology may rescue the industry.

They suggest that future machines may allow operators to play tapes, and that instead of having to buy a copy of a record for each jukebox an operator could then buy one copy and duplicate it on tape. To Ringo, who bought his first two jukeboxes in 1945, the survival of the jukebox is more than just a business issue.

"I think this is some of the freedom of choice that people in the U.S. still have, and certainly I think it's worth trying to preserve," he said. "That's what it's all about, for a person to be able to take their quarter and make a selection and hear some entertainment that they want to hear."

Reunited After A Weather Telecast

PANAMA CITY, Fla. (AP) - Doris Carr thought her goose had been cooked, but thanks to a local weather broadcast, she and the 7-year-old white-tail goose have been reunited after two years.

Blue Jay, a goose originally obtained as a pet for Mrs. Carr's daughter Julie, disappeared from Lake Caroline in December 1979, and Mrs. Carr believed he had ended up on someone's dinner table.

"There is an awful lot of stealing of ducks and geese off the lake around Thanksgiving and Christmas," Mrs. Carr said.

Those dark thoughts vanished recently when Mrs. Carr watched some scenic footage of a goose swimming across a pond on a WJHG-TV weather report. Mrs. Carr said she recognized the bird as Blue Jay.

"I couldn't believe I had found him," she added.

Learning the film had been taken at nearby Bay Point Resort, she obtained permission from the Bay County Sheriff's Department to retrieve her feathered friend.

"I called 'Blue Jay, Blue Jay,' and he came running to me like a kid," Mrs. Carr said. "I picked him up and he rubbed his neck against mine."

Tom Molloy, co-owner and manager of Bay Point Resort, said the goose had been donated to it by a local businessman. But Molloy said he didn't object to Blue Jay's going home.

Less Time In Teller's Line

TRUMBULL, Conn. (AP) — A new cash-dispensing machine cuts the average check-cashing wait at a bank teller's window from a minute to 15 seconds.

With the automated teller machine introduced by Allied Information Systems, bills in various denominations are dispensed at a rate of eight per second under the control of a computerized terminal the teller uses to process all customer transactions.

In each transaction, the amount of cash is automatically verified three times before being dispensed through windows facing the teller stations. The least number of bills needed for the transaction is automatically dispensed, unless the teller specifies a mix of other denominations requested by a customer.

The new system, in addition to increasing accuracy in all transactions, eliminates account shortages, overage and chance of fraud.

Motorcyclists Looking Ahead

LINTHICUM, Md. (AP) — Motorcycling may be considered a sport mainly for the young, but most of today's bikers intend to ride as long as they can.

In a nationwide poll by the Motorcycle Safety Foundation, almost half of the respondents — 43.9 percent — said they planned to stop riding only when they felt they could no longer safely operate a motorcycle. Another 39.3 percent said they hoped never to stop

Press Hotel In W. Beirut Is Thriving

By NICOLAS B. TATRO
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Windows are crisscrossed with masking tape to keep them from shattering during a shelling. Barrels block off streets on each side of the building to keep car bombs away. The executive office suite contains a stock of assault rifles.

The Commodore Hotel, home base for 175 foreign journalists covering Israel's invasion of Lebanon, is thriving despite the war in west Beirut where Palestinian guerrillas are trapped by encircling Israeli forces.

"The Commodore operates better in war than in peace," said Yussef Nazzal, 39-year-old Jordanian proprietor of what has become a virtual international press center.

The lobby, often strewn with television equipment, is a gathering place for members of Lebanon's parliament, officials of the Palestine Liberation Organization, relief workers, doctors, prominent Lebanese businessmen and the few remaining western diplomats
sector of the capital.

Hotel policy requires that guns and grenades be checked at the reception desk, where Teletype and telex machines clatter almost around the clock.

has kept the Commodore a neutral zone, relatively free of interfacional shootouts and shelling exchanges. But the seven-story, 150-room hotel has not been entirely immune from violence, as a notice posted near the elevators indicates.

"In case of shooting around the hotel, the management insists that neither television cameramen or photographers attempt to take pictures. This endangers not only their lives but those of the guests and staff. Those not prepared to cooperate may check out of the hotel."

The notice stemmed from a street battle early this month between two leftist Lebanese militias over a vacant apartment house nearby.

The gunmen turned the weapons on photographers who tried to film the battle and a machine gun mounted on a pickup truck was aimed into the lobby, where patrons dived behind couches.

"It is, without doubt, one of the most dangerous places in the world," said Nazzal.

He explained in an interview that he stays on in west Beirut because he likes challenges and because of long-term friendships with journalists.

"I'm thinking about having new T-shirts made to thank the press for saving west Beirut. The people here have the press to thank for saving their lives, and I satisfied my ego that I helped the press function to make that possible," said Nazzal, who acts as banker, press adviser and psychiatrist to his guests.

Nazzal said he has won over most local militias and guerrillas to the idea that the press coverage has helped stave off an Israeli onslaught into west Beirut through descriptions and pictures of destruction.

"It has been a slow process but most of them now accept the press," he added.

But in the early days of Israel's siege of the Palestinian enclave that began June 13 there were fears that extremist guerrilla factions might seize the journalists as hostages.

Those fears led to the collection of 10 AK-47 rifles, 14 ammunition clips and a Beretta submachine gun in an alcove of Nazzal's office in the hotel.

The most difficult task, however, has been keeping the journalists and 75 hotel staffers fed and finding enough fuel to keep the lights on and the Teletypes and telex machines running.

"When the invasion started
I could see it coming to Beirut and I thought of two things that were needed to keep this place alive: cash money, in the millions, and fuel," Nazzal said, adding that he has loaned his journalist clients four million Lebanese lira ($750,000) to date.

The cash also gives the Commodore priority on the black market.

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Although eyeglasses to aid vision were invented in Europe about 1287 A.D., it wasn't until the early 1700s that frames with temple pieces similar to today's eyeglasses came into use, according to research by the American Optometric Association (AOA).

The earliest visual aids were merely round lenses framed in bone, horn, brass or silver and were either held by hand or carefully balanced on the nose. But by the 1500s nearsighted people were using leather straps to keep double lenses on their heads, or sometimes metal spikes to attach them to hats. In the 1600s light steel frames were popular, as were the lorgnette and the monocle. It was only about 1730 that frames with earpieces started being worn. Designed to be sturdy, they were made of gold, silver, brass and steel. In Spain and China, tortoise shell glasses were considered quite fashionable and were thought to bring good luck to the wearer.

Today, consumers can choose from hundreds of eyeglass frames in a wide variety of shapes, sizes and styles. Generally, well-made frames are available at reasonable cost and frame selection is an area in which consumers can cut the cost of eyeglasses substantially, says the AOA, which has headquarters in St. Louis.

Good quality frames are available in most price ranges but consumers need to know how to judge quality to find them, advises the AOA, which offers these guidelines:

- The frame should be well made, the right size, fit comfortably on the nose and ears, and compatible with your facial structure.
- Check the frames for durability.
- Try on the frames to see if they suit your face.
- With plastic frames, gently pull the temples apart to see if they flex and then return to the original position.

—If you are athletically inclined, ask about the frames' ability to sustain frontal impact during sports.

—With metal frames, make sure the temple pieces are smooth and that there is no extra metal at the bridge, nosepiece or temple.

—If a metal frame has a plastic inserted bridge, be sure it is securely locked in place.

—Look for hinges made of high-grade steel, joined with screws or rivets.

—Ask if your lenses will fit into the frames selected. Thicker prescription lenses can fall out of frames not made to hold them.

Eyeglass frames can highlight good facial features and help play down less attractive features. Generally, thin or wire frames look best on faces with smaller, delicate features, while thicker, larger frames can enhance a broader face.

Aluminum, plastic and wire frames are currently popular among eyeglass wearers. Favorite frame colors for 1982 are earth tones, gray, rose, plum, translucent and, that old standby, tortoise shell.

While the choice of frame color depends largely on personal preference, a good rule to keep in mind when selecting frame colors is that dark-haired and dark-skinned people often look well in gold, silver, dark brown, black and bright colors; fair-haired, light-skinned people's looks may be enhanced with pastels, amber, gray, silver or light tortoise shell frames.

What are the shapes of frames to come? According to the American Optometric Association, the new look in eyeglasses for the '80s may take a turn from the large, round plastic frames of the past couple of years, to smaller, more oval frames. Due to the state of the economy, eyeglass wearers may be less interested in styling novelties and more concerned with durability and "all purpose" frames. It is also anticipated that the boom in contact lenses will continue.

Of course, whatever eyeglass frame, shape, color and style you choose, be sure the prescription of your lenses is correct or you will have

Song Lyrics On The Road

By SUE FERNALD
Kinston Free Press

KINSTON, N.C. (AP) — If you see Jerry Dunbar tooling down the road, his mouth going as fast as his tractor-trailer wheels, he's probably just working out the lyrics to his next hit song.

Dunbar will tell you his song-writing career evolved out of the seat of a tractor-trailer and an old shoe box where he keeps the songs he finally puts on paper. At last count, the box held more than 100 tunes.

Just recently, one of those songs was pulled out of that box to become a hit single, "Semi-Diesel Blues" — recorded by the Super Grit Cowboy Band, a group which originated in Kinston.

Perhaps Dunbar might have been a writer under any circumstances, but he said the majority of his ideas have come from on-the-road experiences during his 17 years as a driver for Kinston's Overnite Trucking Company.

Those long hauls are when Dunbar comes up with most of his songs. "I've thought up a lot of tunes while I'm driving, and just in case something hits me I keep a pad in my pocket all the time," Dunbar said.

He has been writing songs almost as long as he has been driving trucks, 10 years "give or take a few." In that time, he's come up with some doozies.

"I'll tell you," he said in a confidential whisper, "Sometimes I get tickled at myself. I'll be riding along and think of something real funny. Like the one about the fella whose wife ran off."

took everything she could pack.
And, everytime a semi goes by,
I'm afraid he's bringing her back.

Most of Dunbar's song's rhyme, and are light novelty tunes. "I like catchy songs," he said. "ones that stick with you and you just don't forget."

Several times, however, Dunbar has tried his hand at some serious songs. One of his favorite compositions was about a hobo who's down on his luck.

hocked my guitar in Dallas and fiddle in Rome.
Guess I weren't good enough or just too well known...

"I'd guess that'd be Rome, Ga., you know it had to rhyme," he said. "I'm not too good at serious songs," he chuckled.

Dunbar has a system for writing his songs. First, he begins with a tune. "It's always a tune and then the words. Never start without having a tune first," he instructed.

"Then, after you have the tune, you think of a title, but you have to have the tune first," he said. "I don't see how anybody can write a poem without a tune in his head."

"After you have your title you write around that. It's amazing to me how newspaper people come up with titles afterward. I wouldn't know what to write unless I had a title first."

"You can't give up when you draw a blank, you just have to keep on double-clutchin'," he advises. "You've gotta exercise your brain. The more you try, the better you'll get. You just have to concentrate. But remember you've got to exercise your mind, if you don't do that nothing will come to you."

A hit is a blue moon thing according to Dunbar, but "if you keep going over and over the tune in your mind it's a good one. If it's not, you won't." That's how it was with his recent single "Semi-Diesel Blues."

Topics are a wide-open arena. "They've all been used before, but if you write it, it's gonna be different. I write mainly about truckin', women and waitresses," he said. "A topic will always come up because just as soon as you get one set, another comes up."

Now, Dunbar doesn't write about women and waitresses the way a lot of songsters do. For example he wrote about one waitress up in Kentucky and catches the listener with his hands in the cookie jar with the last line.

Regina waited tables at the old Log Inn Truck Stop
She was pretty as a bed of roses and sweet as a lollipop
She always had a pretty smile that made the night seem brighter You'd never guess what she did best...Regina was a song writer!

Even though Dunbar has a hit song he doesn't plan to change his routine. He'll just keep driving, writing, keeping track of his two boys and strumming his guitar. That's what makes him happy.

"Oh hell," he said. "I ain't no celebrity and won't ever be. I'm just a corn-fed, hand-spanked country boy."

Ashley Gang Burial Site Now Ignored

By RANDALL HACKLEY
Associated Press Writer
ROSELAND, Fla. (AP) — A beauty shop and a land office share the site where members of the Ashley gang that once terrorized Florida died nearly 60 years ago in a bloody ambush along the Sebastian River.

The tiny field where the once notorious desperadoes were buried is lost amid a development project. The tombstones are gone and the weed-choked graves have been plundered.

All that remains of the gang's 13-year reign of terror are faded newspaper clippings, a historian's book called "The Notorious Ashley Gang," and memories of people like 86-year-old Gracie Higgins.

"Those were some days. That gang caused the whole of Florida to be scared," recalls Mrs. Higgins, who lives in Melbourne.

John Ashley and his last three confederates died in November 1924, face down on a mud-caked highway that is now U.S. 1. They left behind a hamper of ham sandwiches and a mystery: Did they die in a daring shootout, or were they unceremoniously handcuffed and executed by vengeful lawmen?

The end came on a gloomy, windswept night as the four outlaws were driving a Model-T Ford toward Jacksonville.

Ashley, 31, was riding shotgun, a Winchester rifle between his legs. Cousin Hanford Mobley, 19, was driving. Ray "Shorty" Lynn and John Clarence Middleton were in the back seat.

Ahead, they saw a chain stretched across the Sebastian Bridge, a wood-plank structure which has since been replaced by four lanes of concrete.

Suddenly, St. Lucie County Sheriff J.C. Merritt and eight deputies who had been waiting in the willows rushed the Ashley car. By morning, all four gang members were dead.

A Fort Pierce jury empaneled the next day ruled justifiable homicide after the sheriff described a shootout. Others felt differently.

"The men were handcuffed, then shot down in cold blood," said H.D. Worth, a tanner who claimed he witnessed the incident.

"You could see where the handcuffs had scraped the skin from Ashley's wrists as he fell after being shot. It was murder," he said.

Twelve killings and numerous bank robberies and holdups, starting in 1911, were blamed on the gang.

John Ashley, then 18, allegedly killed a prominent Seminole Indian, robbed him of $1,200 in furs and fled into the Everglades.

Later that year, he and a cohort named Kid Lowe burst into a tiny bank in Stuart and help up tellers for $4,235. Lowe, wielding two pistols Wild West-style, began pumping shots in the air. One errant bullet struck Ashley in the jaw and put out his eye.

Badly injured, Ashley surrendered and wound up in a Miami jail. Four years later, brother Bob showed up for revenge and shot jailer Wilbur Hendrickson.

Bob was subsequently killed trying to free his brother from the city jail. John Ashley escaped a year later and the gang regrouped.

They robbed banks and took to rum-running, hijacking boats carrying booze between the Bahamas and Florida.

In 1921, police captured Ashley and he was sent back to the state prison at Raiford. He escaped once more and in 1924, the gang robbed another Stuart bank.

Palm Beach County Sheriff Robert Baker mounted a posse and trailed the gang eight days through the steamy Everglades, leading to more arrests and more escapes.

The gang regrouped and robbed a Pompano Beach bank of $25,000.

They hijacked a taxi and tied its driver to a tree. Sheriff Baker organized another posse and found Ashley hiding at his moonshiner father's home deep in the Everglades.

In the shootout, the sheriff's brother was killed, along with Ashley's father, Joe, who died on his bed as he was putting on his boots to join the fray.

Kenmore Power Miser™ water heater can save you $185 in gas bills over a 5-year* period when compared with our standard models. . . BIG SAVINGS on Electric Models also.

*In accordance with U.S. Dept of Energy Test Procedures, the operating cost was calculated on the basis of 64.3 gallons per day of hot water usage by a family of 4 with 90° F. temp. rise, with gas rate of 42.64 per therm (U.S. government 1981 national average cost figures). Savings were calculated by subtracting the operating cost of our Power Miser™ 5 40-gal. gas model from the cost of operating our standard 40-gallon gas water heater. Savings may be more or less depending on your hot water usage and local utility rates.

Lowe's Pricing Policy

Many items in this tabloid carry a reference retail price. This reference is intended to provide a guide to the range of retail selling prices in our selling area and may be useful in identifying different units of the same manufacturer. An item's reference retail price is either the manufacturer's suggested retail price or our determination of its full retail price based on prices at which it or similar merchandise is offered by principal retailers (department stores, specialty shops and other non-discount sellers) in our selling area. While we believe our reference retails do not appreciably exceed the highest retail prices at which sales are made in our selling area, we cannot assure you that our reference retail prices, as described above, represent the prices in every community on any given day. Some items in this advertisement are listed at "regular" selling price. The merchandise is offered at this price except during a special sale. The purpose of showing a reference retail price (or a regular price) is to assist you, our customer, in making a knowledgeable and better informed buying decision. We suggest that you also do comparative shopping and compare our prices. (Prices in this tabloid do not include delivery charges. Ask us about delivery rates.)
 Lowe's Raincheck Policy: If we sell out of an advertised item, we'll issue you a raincheck. When we restock, you'll be notified as you can buy at the previously advertised price (except for products marked "Limited Quantities"). Our smaller stores may not stock all advertised items. But every item shown can be ordered for you. 12
