

Arrests Climax N.C. Corruption Probe

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

RALEIGH — A 21-month-long Federal Bureau of Investigation undercover investigation — code named Colcor, short for Columbus County Corruption — ended Thursday with the arrest of a state representative, a District Court judge, a county commissioner, a chief of police, and nine other people on charges ranging from bribery, racketeering and counterfeiting to theft, possession of stolen property and drug trafficking.

A dozen other people were arrested on other charges as an outgrowth of the investigation, but not directly related to the undercover operation, officials said. They added that subsequent investigations, based on information received during the undercover phase of the operation, may lead to another 25 persons being charged with law violations.

The announcement of the undercover investigation and arrests was made at a 12:30 p.m. news conference by U. S.

Attorney Sam Currin and Robert Pence, special agent in charge of FBI operations in North Carolina.

Currin said Rep. Ronald Taylor, D-Bladen, and Judge J. Wilton Hunt Sr., the senior District Court judge in the 13th District, were taken into custody on bribery charges, as were Edward Walton Williamson, a member of the Columbus County Board of Commissioners, and Lake Waccamaw Police Chief Harold E. Lowery.

The U.S. attorney said, "We do expect further indictments in the weeks and months ahead. We have already identified at least 25 additional target defendants as a result of this undercover operation."

According to Pence, the undercover probe began after county deputies and agents of the State Bureau of Investigation complained about corruption in the county and after a citizen said he was asked to pay a bribe to remain in business in the county.

Pence said FBI undercover agents "Brad and Doc" operated a simulated gambling operation, out of a Lake Waccamaw lake-front cottage, and simulated fencing stolen goods and other illegal activities from a precious-metals dealership at the intersection of U.S. 701 and Prison Camp Road in Whiteville, and an apartment in Whiteville.

Pence, who said the FBI has more than 400 videotape and voice recordings of various transactions between the undercover agents and those arrested, said "in one of the negotiations of bribe payments, on the television screen during the actual transaction were replays of some of the Abscam payoffs. Some of the subjects were kind of laughing at that, saying, 'Sure glad that doesn't happen down here.'"

Taylor, 29, of Elizabethtown, is charged with accepting a $1,500 bribe in exchange for using his influence to help undercover agents obtain a mixed drink license once a referendum in the town of Bolton passed.

Taylor, under a $10,000 bond, could receive up to 5 years and/or a $10,000 fine if convicted.

He is already under indictment on state arson charges in connection with the burning of a warehouse owned by Sen. J. J. "Monk" Harrington in Bertie county.

Another defendant in the arson case, Sandy White Jr., 46 of Clarkton, was arrested Thursday on counterfeiting charges as a result of the Colcor probe.

Hunt, 50, of Whiteville, is charged with violating federal racketeering statutes by accepting five bribes totaling $7,000 from FBI agents to protect the simulated gambling and smuggling operations at Lake Waccamaw.

Also charged under the racketeering statutes was Williamson, 56, of Cerro Gordo, who allegedly took six bribes totaling $2,300; Lowery, charged with taking six bribes amounting to $1,650, and James E. Carroll, 43 of Whiteville, charged as a conspirator after he allegedly received $300

Begin Repeats Warning PLO Commitment Unreceived

By The Associated Press
Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin was quoted as saying today that U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib has not received a commitment from the Palestine Liberation Organization to leave Lebanon.

He told Israeli Parliament's Foreign Affairs and Security Committee if there was no negotiated solution soon, Israel would resume its bombing of PLO-held west Beirut or order an assault on the city, Armed Forces Radio reported.

Israel's state radio quoted Begin as saying the Palestine Liberation Organization had offered to withdraw to eastern Lebanon's Bekaa Valley, from where the guerrillas would later be evacuated to several Arab countries.

Habib rejected the proposal and insisted the guerrillas should go directly to Syria and from there be distributed among Arab countries willing to take them in, the radio quoted Begin as saying.

Reports from Beirut said a Lebanese army official and PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat's political adviser had drawn up a tentative plan under which the PLO's 8,000 guerrillas in west Beirut would go to Syria and then be divided among Syria, Jordan, Iraq and Egypt. Habib was reported to have received that plan, but it was unclear whether it had been conveyed to Israel.

Begin said after meetings Tuesday and Wednesday with Habib that the U.S. envoy promised to seek an "unequivocal commitment" from the PLO to leave Beirut and to give Israel the answer today.

Earlier today, Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir said a reply to Israel's demand that the PLO leave Lebanon would have to come via Habib from Beirut, and not from Jidda, Saudi Arabia, where the Arab League announced a plan for the guerrilla withdrawal.

Arafat told a news conference in west Beirut that the Jidda declaration meant the Arab League had approved "what we have agreed upon, the Lebanese government and us." He was alluding to the PLO's written pledge to leave Lebanon, submitted to Lebanon's prime minister July 7.

Shamir flew to Switzerland today for a two-day stopover en route to Washington, where he meets Sunday with Secretary of State George Shultz on the evacuation of the PLO guerrillas from west Beirut. The guerrillas were surrounded a week after Israel invaded Lebanon June 6 to crush the PLO.

Relate Outages, Problems To Lightning Of Summer Storm

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The lightning that accompanied Thursday evening's summer storm caused outages on the southern end of the county that not only inconvenienced customers but posed a potential problem for farmers who utilize bulk curing barns.

Malcolm Green, electric department superintendent for Greenville Utilities, said a lightning arrester blew up during the storm and knocked out a sub-transmission system that interrupted power to most of the southern segment of Pitt County.

Green said that locating the problem, which turned out to be at Bell's Fork, took most of the time, while repairs were completed in areas south of Bell's Fork down to Craven County and below Winterville, he said.

According to Green, a circuit that feeds Pitt Community College was also knocked out for over an hour when lightning struck a distribution line. In addition, lightning burned a line near Ballard's Crossroads, leaving customers in that area, including Worthington Farms, without power.

Chester Don Worthington said this morning that power was out in his area for approximately two and a half hours and he said it is hard to tell how much bulk curing was affected "until the tobacco comes out." Worthington said while the tobacco was probably not hurt by the temporary loss of air, the situation with respect to the bulk barns was reaching the critical point.

He said that barns filled only about 48 hours need continuous air due to high moisture content of the tobacco and some 24 of the 72 bulk facilities at Worthington Farms were in that stage of curing. Worthington said that GUC workmen seemed to be aware of the critical situation and tried to correct the problem as soon as they could. He added, "I can't find any fault with them."

Green said that lightning also affected an underground electrical system, knocking out a transformer in Club Pines that feeds off N.C. 11. After crews took care of that problem and other scattered calls and finished up around 4 a.m., they were recalled around 4:30 a.m. when an underground cable in Lyndale failed, Green said. Only a section of Lyndale was affected by the outage, which Green said was probably not storm related.

Green said that a lot of the fuse and transformer problems that used to plague the electrical system have been eliminated through improvements but now "when we have an outage, it is usually a big one." He said part of the problem last night was that with telephones tied up with repair calls, GUC did not know about some of the customers who were without power.

Green said that GUC is aware that bulk barns are affected by outages and efforts are made to restore power as soon as possible. "A man's livelihood is affected and we know that," he said.

A spokesman at Greenville Cable TV also reported significant lightning-related problems with cable service in the Winterville and Ayden areas, as well as scattered problems in other service areas.

Other problems generally involved super service boxes supplied to customers that were damaged by power surges during the storm. The spokesman urged cable customers to not only cut off television sets during storms but to unplug the units. "Unless they are unplugged," he said, "it does no good since electricity is still running through the line."

Rainfall during the 24-hour period from 8 a.m. Thursday until 8 a.m. today was measured at 1.25 inches, according to the GUC weather station. The high temperature for the period was 87 degrees, while the low was 71. Tar River level was recorded at 1.5 feet and dropping slightly.

Inching Up

Prices improved slightly Thursday on the Greenville Tobacco Market as local warehouses recorded an overall average of $142.86 per hundred pounds, up from the previous day's $140.87 per hundred.

The third day of the new auction season saw 754,544 pounds sold for $1,077,937 as the market completed the first week of sales on a level well below 1981 totals. This week's sales activity resulted in an average of $141.35 for the three days.

In spite of the local improvement, Greenville had the lowest average among 13 markets holding Eastern Belt sales Thursday as totals generally reflected increases from the first two days of auctions. Williamston continued to improve, recording an average of $157.87 per hundred to lead the belt.

Stabilization receipts locally of 149,991 pounds or 19.88 percent were down from Wednesday's 26.58 percent.

Mixed Signals In Index On Economy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Giving mixed signals about whether the economy is recovering from recession, the government reported today that its Index of Leading Economic Indicators held steady in June after rising the previous two months.

Gains in three of the index's 10 indicators balanced declines in six others, with the 10th unchanged, the Commerce Department said. The index, the government's broadest gauge of future economic activity, climbed 1.4 percent in April and 0.9 percent in May, according to the new report, which revised those figures from lower earlier estimates.

However, the department also said the index dipped 0.1 percent in March, the 11th decline in a row, rather than rising 0.2 percent as reported last month.

The index, a compilation of 10 separate economic categories, is intended to forecast future trends in the U.S. economy.

The government reported last week that the overall economy — as measured by inflation-adjusted gross national product — rose at an annual rate of 1.7 percent in the second quarter of the year after rapid declines in the previous two quarters, from October through March. Nonetheless, most analysts were cautious in making predictions of a recovery.

President Reagan said Wednesday that improvement would come in the second half of the year, although recovery was "going to be slow."

In today's report, a big increase in crude oil price had the biggest positive impact on the index in June, the figures indicated. Although inflation is hardly considered good by government officials, rising prices for oil and other sensitive raw materials are considered a positive sign for economic growth because they can be a signal of increased demand.

Michigan Business Plans Locate Plant Here

The Pitt County Development Commission announced today that Simpson Industries Inc. of Litchfield, Mich., will locate a manufacturing plant in the Hudson shell building in the industrial area north of the city.

Bruce Beasley Jr., commission chairman, said the Michigan firm is a producer of machined parts and assemblies for original equipment manufacturers of automobiles, trucks, diesel engines and farm equipment in

NEW INDUSTRY ... The Hudson shell building, located in the industrial area north of Greenville, will be the new location for a Simpson Industries the United States, Canada, Mexico and Europe. According to Beasley, the company also manufactures drills and cutting tools through its Mohawk Tools subsidiary in the United States and Ireland. He said Simpson Industries is known for its precision metal working capabilities and product quality record.

The prime purpose of the Greenville facility is to manufacture engine components for diesel engines to be produced at the Consolidated Diesel plant now under construction in Whitakers in neighboring Edgecombe County.

Greenville, it was pointed out, was chosen by Simpson after an extensive site search in North Carolina.

"We are extremely excited that a corporation the caliber of Simpson Industries has chosen Pitt County as the location for this operation," Beasley said. "Without question they will be a tremendous asset to our excellent industrial community."

Gov. Jim Hunt congratulated the commission "for attracting this fine company to the Greenville area. Location of Simpson Industries in Pitt County is an example of how our success in recruiting Consolidated Diesel will benefit much of eastern North Carolina's economy."

The one-story shell building, erected by J. H. Hudson Inc., general contractors, and the late T. Jack Warren in 1980, will be expanded to 50,000 square feet with future expansion plans anticipated, according to Beasley.

Initially the facility will employ some 15 people, with possible future employment reaching approximately 100.

E. W. Hiner has been appointed plant manager for Simpson's Greenville Division. Hiner and his family will locate in the Greenville area in the near future.

'CIVIL WAR WEDDING'...and renewal of vows by Debbie and David Pruette of Greenville will take place Saturday morning at Fort Macon.

Couple To Have 'Civil War Wedding'

By ROSALIE TROTMAN
Reflector Woman's Editor
A wedding ceremony that could have taken place July 31, 1861, will be performed at Fort Macon Saturday morning. It will be a part of the living history demonstration being staged by members of the 1st Regiment, North Carolina Volunteers.

Debbie and David Pruette of Greenville will renew their wedding vows in a Civil War-era ceremony as part of their 10th wedding anniversary. She will portray the role of a young girl visiting her military fiancée at Fort Macon, where she hopes to be married. Mrs. Pruette (the former Debbie Sue Hendrix of Carolina City) will not have a traditional wedding dress. She will wear a peach-colored day dress made with an unbleached muslin bodice accented by matching cotton lace. The dress has cloth buttons in front, high waistline, long sleeves and tiered ruffled skirt. For accent she will wear a lace choker necklace and her hair will be braided and intertwined with silk flowers and ribbon matching her dress. She will wear white cotton gloves and carry two off-white silk roses with a touch of peach.

Pruette, in the role of a Confederate lieutenant, will be dressed in regulation uniform which is 100 percent wool.

"Everyone will be dressed authentically to the year 1861," said Mrs. Pruette. The couple's matron of honor and best man are Wendy and Charles Clark of Wilmington. She will wear a mint-green dress styled with a full skirt over a hoop with matching green and unbleached muslin undersleeves. Her flowers will be off-white silk roses with a touch of green.

Pier Tunstall of Goldsboro, bridesmaid for the ceremony, will be dressed in an off-white dress styled with a high neckline, short puffed sleeves and full skirt over a hoop. Her husband, Reid, will be an usher. All are members of the 1st Volunteers.

Mothers of the couple will also be authentically dressed in period dresses and their fathers will be dressed in civilian period suits.

After the military ceremony, the wedding party will leave the parade ground under an orch of crossed bayonets held by men in the company.

For the ceremony, the Pruettes will be married by his father, the Rev. Rowland Pruette, a Baptist minister in Murfreesboro. The ceremony will be based on one found by Mrs. Pruette in a 1700s Episcopal prayer book. She will be given in marriage by her father, C.L. Hendrix of Clemmons.

The official photographer will be Mickey Elmore of Greenville, who will be using a camera dated 1890. When asked about their plans, Mrs. Pruette said, "I thought this would be a nice way to celebrate our 10th wedding anniversary and also show the visitors there for the history re-enactment various aspects of a Civil War wedding."

The 1st North Carolina

Volunteers is a Civil War re-enactment organization dedicated to the preservation of history through battle re-enactments and living history demonstrations.

"We try to show the public what life was like in the 1860s," Pruette said.

"The group was begun seven years ago with a handful of men from the Edenton area and has grown to a present strength of over 60 members from all over North Carolina and Virginia. The Original 1st North Carolina Volunteers was a regiment of six-month volunteers organized in 1861. When the regiment was disbanded, its members became the 11th North Carolina State Troopers and carried their original battle flag to the end of the war, 1865. Today we portray the regiment as it existed throughout the war from the neat gray uniform of 1861 to the ragged butternut of 1865."

The activities Saturday will begin at 10 a.m. with the capitulation of the fort followed by a color ceremony and raising of the Confederate flag. A company drill will be held just prior to the wedding ceremony. An artillery drill and a talk on the history of flags of the Confederacy will precede a company roll call and drill. The schedule for Sunday will begin at 10 a.m.

A group of Civil War Marines and a Civil War band also will participate.

The group will have another living history weekend at Fort Macon Sept. 25-26.

The Pruettes, who were married Aug. 19, will celebrate their anniversary by going camping on the Outer Banks.

Dear Abby

Light Fingers Bring On Fear

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My 19-year-old daughter has been acting very moody and strange these last weeks. Finally she told me what was bothering her. It seems she was caught shoplifting in one of the large department stores in the mall. She said her purse was searched and a lipstick was found (under $2) she hadn't paid for. She was asked to sign a waiver using her Social Security number, saying she wouldn't sue the store for detention. The people at the store wrote down a physical description of her (height, weight, hair color, eyes, etc.), and she was told they would keep that information in the store. She is not allowed to enter that store for three years!

This is making her sick with worry. What will they do with that information, Abby? Will it be used against her if she applies for employment anywhere in town? She said they didn't call the police, but a security man from the store read her her "rights" and they questioned her in the manager's office. She's a good girl and has never been in any kind of trouble before. She is petrified to go job hunting for fear the store will circulate the paperwork on her. How serious is this? Does she have a criminal record now? Please rush your answer.

CONCERNED MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Unless the policy of this store differs from those with which I am familiar, your daughter need not fear that this information will be circulated anywhere. She was only apprehended, detained and warned not to come into the store for three years.

Go to the store, talk to the manager and ask him the questions you've asked me. It will give both you and your daughter much peace of mind.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married for three years, but we lived together for two years before that. When people ask me how long I've been married, should I stick to the facts and say, "Three years," or should I explain that we lived together for two years first? Or doesn't the time we lived together count?

TRUTHFUL

DEAR TRUTHFUL: The time you lived together counts, but not as a "marriage." When asked how long you've been married, say, "Three years." Period.

DEAR ABBY: Twenty-five years ago I married a great kisser — his best feature. For 23 years I put up with his tobacco clipping, chewing and smelly breath. Two years ago I refused to kiss him unless he stopped chewing cigar clippings. He wouldn't stop, and I haven't kissed him since.

Who should give in? Sex without a kiss is a bummer.

MISSING KISSING

DEAR MISSING: You gave him a choice: tobacco chewing or your kisses. He chose the tobacco. Now the choice is yours: sex without a kiss, or sex with tobacco-flavored kisses. Choose whichever you hate the least.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. Write to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Washing Tips For Clothing

Indirect contact from clothing, pets, tools and other articles can be just as effective as direct contact with poison ivy in producing symptoms.

An N.C. State University botanist states that reaction to the oil when contaminated clothing is washed with other clothes comes not from laundering process but rather with handling the contaminated clothing in preparation for the wash load.

Evelyn L. Spangler, home economics extension agent, recommends that anyone handling such clothing use rubber gloves and that the gloves be washed with soap before removing them from the hands.

Pre-soak the clothing before following the usual laundering procedures. For people extremely sensitive to poison ivy, use a heavy-duty liquid detergent (noted for their oil-removing ability) and water as hot as recommended for the fiber, said Mrs. Spangler.

Interferon A Cold-Blocker In Research

By PAUL RAEBURN
AP Science Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Interferon produced by genetic engineering can prevent colds and block the growth of cold viruses without harmful side effects, researchers said Thursday.

In a preliminary report in the current issue of The Lancet, a British medical journal, the scientists reported that a nasal spray containing the synthetic interferon prevented the development of colds in all 19 volunteers who were given potent cold viruses.

In contrast, eight of 22 volunteers not given interferon developed colds.

No harmful side effects were seen, the scientists said.

Interferon is produced naturally by the body in very small amounts to fight infections. It is being studied intensively as a possible cancer weapon and for its effectiveness against influenza and other viruses.

The National Center for Health Statistics in Washington says Americans got more than 93 million colds in 1980 that required them to seek care or restrict activity. Thirty-one million work days were lost that year because of colds.

The researchers demonstrated that interferon was effective against a type of rhinovirus, an infectious agent that causes 25 percent to 30 percent of all colds in adults, according to the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases in Bethesda, Md.

They are now testing interferon against other cold viruses and are optimistic it will be effective against them as well, said Dr. Geoffrey Scott of the Medical Research Council Common Cold Unit in Salisbury, England, where the research was done.

"We don't know the answers for other viruses yet, but we've got very hopeful results," Scott, principal author of the report in The Lancet, said in a telephone interview.

Dr. Thomas Merigan, head of the infectious disease division at Stanford University Medical Center and an expert on interferon, said the work was "very exciting."

"I think we can anticipate that if interferon can be shown to be therapeutic — that it will work after the first symptoms have appeared — we might see it eventually as an over-the-counter drug," Merigan said.

In 1972, Merigan and Dr. David Tyrrell, the principal investigator for the new study, determined that natural interferon obtained from human white blood cells was effective against colds. But at that time it cost tens of thousands of dollars for enough interferon to protect one person against colds, Merigan said.

Until now, doctors did not know whether interferon produced by genetic engineering, or recombinant DNA, would be as effective as the natural product.

Genetic engineering allows interferon to be produced much more cheaply. The human gene which controls the production of interferon is spliced into the genes of bacteria, and the bacteria unwittingly spew out interferon.

The researchers used a type called alpha-2 interferon, which was the first kind produced by genetic engineering and is now easy to obtain.

It was made by the Schering Corporation of Kenilworth, N.J. at its laboratories in France. Joseph Kerrigan, the spokesman for the company, said it was too early to estimate what an interferon nasal spray might cost if it were produced in large quantities. He said one object of research at Schering is to make interferon inexpensive enough to be used routinely.

Dr. Gilbert Schiff, director of the Christ Hospital Institute of Medical Research in Cincinnati, said that he and others are testing other anti-cold drugs, but that so far no useful anti-cold drug has been developed.

This winter, the British researchers hope to test the interferon nasal spray on a larger number of people outside the hospital. By then, Scott said, "I think it will be clear what dose is needed to prevent colds."

High Level Campaign

Second primaries are often heartbreakers for the front runners in the first primaries.

Runners-up sometimes throw their support to the candidate who did not come in first. Low voter turnout often affects the voting. Whatever the cause, H.M. "Mickey" Michaux Jr. lost the front-running position he had enjoyed in the 2nd Congressional District first primary and, as a consequence, lost the Democratic nomination to I.T. "Tim" Valentine.

Michaux could have been the first black congressman from North Carolina in this century.

Michaux's defeat meant that once again the dreams of blacks to see a black elected to high government office in North Carolina were thwarted.

To say, however, that North Carolina has not made progress in accepting capable blacks in politics would be incorrect. In this campaign Michaux ran well. He received 50,874 votes to Valentine's 59,272. We can assume that some votes were cast on the question of race alone, but we believe there was far less of that than in past years.

Both candidates conducted good campaigns that were free of the racial overtones that might have characterized an election of this nature a few decades back.

Blacks are serving as mayors and in many other capacities in North Carolina. The time will come when they will be elected to high offices with only their qualifications considered.

Situation Needs Studying

An article about Tuesday's primary reported the winners in the Court of Appeals races but concluded that North Carolina voters were not very interested in electing judges.

It is the truth. North Carolina voters often receive ballots which list judges from all over the state. Even knowledgeable voters frequently admit that they don't know anything about the candidates and fear voting for the wrong ones.

Because of the nature of the positions they aspire to, judicial candidates maintain a low profile, and obviously can't make promises.

It is a situation that needs looking at. There must be a better way.

Improved Chances

By PUALT O'CONNOR

RALEIGH — Matthew and Elizabeth caught their parents by surprise when they entered the world on June 27. They were two months premature. Matthew weighed a bit more than three pounds and Elizabeth a little less.

Had these twins been born in 1969, statistics show that they would have had about a 25 percent chance of survival. Having been born in 1982, they faced a survival rate that had improved to about 60 percent.

Although larger, Matthew faced the greater difficulties in those first days. His lungs weren't fully developed and he had to be put on a respirator. He's now off that respirator and both he and his sister are doing quite well — although they're not expected to leave Wake Medical Center until the end of the summer.

The respirator that saved Matthew's life is one of several technological advances made in recent years that are contributing to the decline in the infant mortality rate in North Carolina. Figures released in early July show that the state's infant death rate has dropped by 25 percent in the past five years — from 17.8 per 1000 live births in 1976 to 13.2 in 1981.

Dr. Richard Nugent, medical director of the state's perinatal program, said the lungs of premature babies often aren't ready for the outside world. They aren't elastic enough and the strain of opening and closing the lungs to breathe can literally work the child to death.

The respirator was designed in the mid-50s to help children with underdeveloped lungs. But it was in the mid-60s before there were enough of the machines so all the nation's major research hospitals had them. That still didn't do much good for people living in the hinterlands and it was the mid-70s before a statewide network of nine hospitals was ready in North Carolina to deliver the best technology — such as these respirators — to pregnant women and newborn babies.

Another technological advancement that is now widely available in the state is ultrasound. Using sound waves that are sent through the mother's womb, this device takes pictures of the fetus. Dr. Nugent says ultrasound allows doctors to watch the fetus move in the womb and see if any problems are developing.

Electronic fetal monitoring is used near the end of pregnancy. By correlating the baby's heartbeat with the labor contractions of the mother, doctors can tell the likelihood that the baby's oxygen will be cut off during delivery. If it appears so, a Caesarian section can be ordered.

Computers are also involved. Doctors feed data on their patients into computers and researchers are able to discern patterns that doctors might otherwise miss. The analysis can raise "red flags," Dr. Nugent said, that warn doctors of developing problems, or the likelihood of problems.

Computer analysis, for example, led doctors to the Efforts in North Carolina have been made in recent months to return the minimum age at which a person can purchase beer and wine to 21. At present, that minimum age is 18.

Now, federal officials are urging all states to establish a minimum 21-year drinking age. The National Transportation Safety Board has sent letters to the governors and legislatures of 35 states, including North Carolina, urging them to take this step.

Federal investigators have called the number of deaths of young people in traffic accidents a "national disgrace".

It is indeed that, and statistics demonstrate that such tragedies can be reduced by increasing the minimum drinking age to 21.

Of 25,000 people who died in alcohol-related traffic accidents last year, more than one-third were between the ages of 16 and 24, the government reported.

Fifteen states already prohibit anyone under 21 from purchasing alcoholic beverages. In North Carolina, a person must be 21 before he can purchase hard liquor in an ABC store. But that doesn't solve the problem of easy access to beer and wine.

"This is a national tragedy and a national scandal," declared James Burnett, the NTSB's chairman and a former municipal judge who favored mandatory jail sentences for drunken driving when he was on the bench.

The safety panel said its recommendation was prompted by a number of recent alcohol-related auto crashes in which there were a large number of young people killed, including one crash on Long Island, N.Y., that claimed nine lives.

A number of states recently have increased their minimum drinking age from 18 to 21, in sharp contrast to the early 1970s when 24 states lowered their laws to 18 and another six to 19.

The government said of the 25,000 deaths involving alcohol-related accidents last year, 3,750 of the victims were between 16 years and 19 years of age and another 4,700 were between 20 and 24.

Certainly the panel's conclusions ought to merit serious consideration by our legislators in Raleigh — consideration that must ignore pressures from the alcohol-industry lobbyists.

Strength For Today

PEACE AT ANY PRICE

There is a growing hostility on the part of many people today to any vigorous measures which divide people into opposing groups. The prevailing idea seems to be to get everybody to agree — which of course is often impossible without moral compromise. Those who stand out for what they believe to be inflexible ethical principles are regarded not only as fanatics but as individuals who are doing society a great disservice by dividing people into contentious groups.

This whole philosophy represents certain humane tendencies and aspirations which have been extended to an unrealistic point. When dealing with evil, we should never become unrealistic. There is sin in the world, and we should recognize it. There is evil which should be restrained. There are bad motives which must be firmly and summarily dealt with. And these actions must be taken even at the cost of provoking contention and disturbing our comfort. — Elisha Douglass

The Letters By Watts

Interior Secretary James Watt has been very busy lately drumming up support for Reagan's strip-mining and oil-drilling plans for America. In his now famous letter to the Israeli ambassador to the U.S., Watt warned that opposition to the administration's energy program by American Jewish liberals would weaken this nation's "ability to be a good friend of Israel."

While the White House disavowed the letter, even though it was written on Interior stationery, Watt defended it, and said he was not threatening anyone. He claimed he was appealing for support from every identifiable group in America, whether they be "unions, the black community, Catholics, Protestants, Jews and Gentiles."

This means Watt's going to have to write an awful lot of letters to prove he doesn't just have it in for American Jewish liberals.

I can see him in his office right now.

"Miss Bloomsbury, take a letter to the Nigerian ambassador to the U.S. ... Dear Mr. Ambassador: As you know the Reagan energy policy is very close to my heart as it is to the President's. Unfortunately there are many liberal blacks in this country who are opposing us. The conservative blacks are for us, but the others are making our life difficult. Therefore I must inform you that unless you can persuade American blacks to back our program, relations between the United States and Nigeria could go very badly. Please do not take this as a threat but a fact of life.

"Okay, who's next?"

"The Catholics. Do you want to write to the ambassador of Ireland or Italy?"

"I think I'll send this directly to the Pope. Start with 'Your Holiness: Forgive me for intruding on your time, but I believe that you should be aware that there are many Catholics in this country who are trying to preserve the environment and keep us from becoming self-sufficient in coal and oil. This administration will not stand by and allow any religious group to interfere with our energy policies. Relations with the Vatican, up until now, have been good. But the Catholic liberals in this country must be made to realize that when they don't support the President, they are making it impossible for him to support you.' I don't think that's too strong, do you?"

"No, sir. I think it's just right. Shall we write to the Protestants?"

"Send the same letter to Queen Elizabeth. If we mail it to the Archbishop of Canterbury he'll throw it in the wastepaper basket. Does that

A Corporate Connection

By MAXWELL GLEN and CODY SHEARER
WASHINGTON — Don't look now, but the days of the wonderfully-innocent, absent-minded professor may be gone.

Corporate America now underwrites some $200 million worth of scientific research in our university laboratories. It seems many of our once-detached scholars are turning into shrewdly-minded Daddy warbucks-in-lab coats.

Examples abound of big business' recent efforts to tap the intellectual wellhead on campus. Exxon plans to spend between $7 million and $8 million over the next 10 years at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology alone for studies of new ways to generate usable gas products.

Meanwhile, computer and engineering experts at Pittsburgh's Carnegie Mellon University, backed by more than $5 million from Westinghouse and Digital Equipment Corp., have formed a "Robotics Institute" to offer research on the automated factory of tomorrow. And Du Pont and Monsanto have invested millions in recombinant DNA research and other biotechnological activities at Harvard and St. Louis' Washington University. The list of big-time corporate-academic marriages goes on and on.

Upon first glance, the renewed spirit of cooperation between the industrial and scholastic worlds may seem downright patriotic. Industrial witch doctors have long argued that improved research abilities can help America "reindustrialize" itself and sustain a dominant position in the world.

Moreover, with university enrollment dropping and the federal government retrenching, faculty members and their assistants are understandably willing to consider corporate stipends for their laboratory and consulting services. In fact, almost 90 percent of all professors in high-tech departments have extramural arrangements of one sort or another with commercial business.

Yet, the federal government still pays for approximately 80 percent of all university-based research. Most of the fixed costs — faculty salaries and equipment — are already spoken for by the time industry comes into the picture. Corporate dollars, in other words, go an extraordinarily long way in directing research priorities.

But perhaps the more significant question is whether professors or the public realize the extent to which academia is becoming just another corporate subsidiary.

In their book, "The Regulation Game," Bruce Owen and Ronald Braevtigan warn businessmen that co-optation of academics with research grants and consulting arrangements "must not be done too blatantly, for the experts themselves must not recognize that they have lost their objectivity and freedom of action."

Taxpayers are similarly blinded by the undue credibility carried by the mere names of some research centers. "We always hear about how a product has been tested at a 'major research university'; and we tend to believe that whatever goes on behind the laboratory doors is OK and for the good of society," Meyerhoff told our reporter, John Riccardi. "But who's to say that research into the automation of the assembly line is in the best interests of our society?"

Indeed, public objections to corporate-academic marriages have been largely stifled, if not completely ignored. While more prescient academicians such as Harvard president Derek Bok are finally confronting some conflict-of-interest questions, leaders of Stanford University's unusual conference on the corporate connection closed their meeting to the public. Labor, consumer and environmental groups, which have been slow to suggest how universities' resources could be put to better use, have been rarely seen or heard.

Let us forget that generations of public support have created and sustained our university system, we might be running the risk of selling off our investment to the highest bidder.

From the student's perspective, the corporate campus takeover may be barely noticeable this fall. But when most professors begin wearing pin-striped suits and curtail their office hours, it may be time to take a look at this dirty business.

Small Business A Frail Crutch

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — New businesses create jobs, products and wealth. They bring competition to the marketplace. Their innovations often improve life. They are the means by which a free economy renews itself.

Nine out of 10 small businesses fail in the first five years. And most of them fail because of the entrepreneur's own managerial shortcomings.

Shocking, considering that small business — sales of $10 million or less a year — is the fulcrum on which so much of the economy balances. And small business may have to support an even bigger load tomorrow.

"If the failure rate could be reduced by improved selection and training of entrepreneurs," said William McCrae, "the impact on the economy would be significant." That is a sizable understatement.

McCrae, an entrepreneur himself, reasons that if the rate were lowered by about 10 percent — to 8 in 10 — about 60,000 companies, and maybe 600,000 jobs, would be saved each year. Each and every year.

Estimating the cost of creating a new job to average about $30,000 — much higher in some industries — McCrae figures the savings would be $18 billion a year. Unemployment, he believes, would fall 0.5 percent.

That would be the immediate impact. But a contribution would be made to future employment also. It is small businesses — not the mature giants so very well known — that grow and create brand-new jobs.

Earlier this week McCrae announced the establishment in Indianapolis of the National Entrepreneurship Development Center, a non-profit institution with the aim of helping new businesses achieve success.

Can it be done? A good question, because entrepreneurs are by nature independent, self-reliant and zealous believers in their capabilities, and not inclined to take instructions from academics or bureaucrats.

But, says McCrae, they will listen to instructions from their peers, from people they think understand them, from those who have successfully traversed the same potholed road on which they are traveling.

Formal educational systems, McCrae believes, have barely responded to these educational needs. True, in the past decade many colleges have added courses in small business, and graduate schools often provide three-week programs in summer. But for the most part, he maintains, "the education system trains job seekers rather than job creators."

The National Center will draw on the services of various groups who have been concerned with these job creators. It will cooperate rather than compete. It will serve as an information clearing house, a coordinator of programs, a research organization, a training center.

McCrae has been thinking that way since his days at MIT. Having helped found a high technology company in Boston, he knew from experience the problems of entrepreneurs, and he sought to do something about it.

What emerged was a series of informal meetings at the MIT Faculty Club between entrepreneurs and venture capitalists, management authorities and battle-wise small-business people.

McCrae later established a new-enterprise development program for the State of Ohio, and in 1976 formed The Entrepreneurship Institute in Columbus, a non-profit organization that among other things seeks to link new entrepreneurs into the local business and professional network.

The Development Center, which will be a division of the Institute, received its primary financing from the Lilly Endowment, Inc., but McCrae says it will also require aid from corporations and foundations.

In the beginning, it will offer instruction to entrepreneurs, and provide programs, internships and other assistance for those seeking to help them, such as public and private community groups.

A library of entrepreneurship materials will be built, McCrae says, and publications, audiotapes, videotapes and videodisks will be provided to entrepreneurs and those in the business of assisting them.

He hopes also that organizations around the country will assist in identifying successful entrepreneurial programs and help "replicate those programs in communities across the country."

What makes the Development Center particularly appropriate is that new-business formations are rising this year, probably to a rate of 700,000 or so, a consequence of recession and the greater need to take risks.

If established patterns prevail — because of the recession it might be much worse — nine out of 10 will fail within five years, taking with them thousands of existing jobs and the potential for creating more.

Unemployment, says McCrae, is already bad enough. He isn't certain the new Development Center can change the pattern of failure and job loss, but he feels it is worth taking the risk. An entrepreneurial risk.

Surgery For Bill Monroe

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Bill Monroe, "the father of bluegrass music," has undergone kidney surgery in Canada.

Tony Chapman, a spokesman for the 70-year-old singer and mandolin player, said Thursday that Monroe's kidneys were drained Tuesday in surgery in Halifax, Nova Scotia. He had entered the hospital earlier that day while on a concert tour, Chapman said. The spokesman said Monroe received his doctor's permission to perform she doesn't get the liberal American Indians to stop opposing us, we'll cut off all food shipments to Bombay?"

Not all North Carolina hospitals have this high technology. But a great many of the state's doctors are using the information culled from the computer analyses. If it is thought that a baby will have problems, the mother can be sent to one of the state's top-level care hospitals. Or, if the problems develop after the baby is born, the child can be transferred.

Dr. Nugent's statistics show that babies like Matthew and Elizabeth who were born in one of the hospitals with the advanced technology — or babies who are transferred to one soon after birth — have a much better chance of surviving.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

DANIEL AND THE IDOL BEL

AS PROMISED HERE IS THE OTHER OLDEST "DETECTIVE" STORY FROM THE APOCRYPHA. CYRUS THE KING, EACH DAY PROVIDED THE IDOL BEL WITH BUSHELS OF FINE FLOUR, MANY SHEEP, AND FIFTY GALLONS OF WINE, BECAUSE THIS WAS THE GOD CYRUS WORSHIPPED. WHEN THE KING ASKED DANIEL TO WORSHIP THE IDOL, DANIEL KNEW IT WAS HIGH TIME TO EXPOSE THE FAKE GOD AND THE SEVENTY PRIESTS WHO MADE A FINE LIVING AS THE REPRESENTATIVES OF BEL. CYRUS BELIEVED THAT BEL WAS REALLY A LIVING GOD BECAUSE ALL THE FOOD THAT WAS PROVIDED WAS ALWAYS CONSUMED OVERNIGHT. DANIEL KNEW DARN WELL THAT IT WAS THE PRIESTS AND THEIR FAMILIES WHO DID ALL THE EATING. BUT HOW TO EXPOSE THEM SO KING CYRUS WOULD KNOW THAT BEL WAS A FAKE GOD? WELL, DANIEL, IN TRUE DETECTIVE STORY STYLE, LAID A TRAP FOR THE PRIESTS AND PROVED CONCLUSIVELY TO KING CYRUS THAT THE IDOL WAS A FAKE AND THAT THE ONLY TRUE, LIVING GOD WAS THE LORD GOD WHOM DANIEL WORSHIPPED! HOW HE ACCOMPLISHED THIS FEAT IS DULY RECORDED IN THE BOOK OF APOCRYPHA AND IS WELL WORTH READING—IT CERTAINLY ESTABLISHES DANIEL AS A FIRST- GRADE DETECTIVE ALONG WITH THE BEST OF THEM! SO GO TO IT—READ IT AND SEE IF YOU DON'T AGREE!

Religious Resurgence In China

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

The scope of religious revival in China has astonished both the government and religious communities there, says a U.S. authority on that country, but he also sees potential dangers to the trend.

PAUL R. BOHR

Paradoxically, a main threat cited is also a big gain — the rising stream of young people into the churches. It "poses the greatest potential danger to the church's relations with the state," says Paul Richard Bohr, a China expert and executive director of the Midwest China Center in St. Paul, Minn.

With an estimated 1 million young people now publicly attending worship services, he says, government organs have stepped up warnings that "religion must not be allowed to become too attractive to disillusioned youth."

Should it be seen as doing so, he adds, toleration of it could be reversed.

"Already, at least in rural areas, officials are skeptical of 'modernization,' saying it's not a good thing and religion is not a good thing," Bohr said on return last week from his latest trip to China.

Nevertheless, in a 20-page summation of recent religious development in China, issued by the China Council of the Asia Society in Washington, Bohr says religion in the communist-run country has made a stunning comeback.

"Nowhere is the resurgence of religious life more dramatic than in China's Christian community," he says, adding that it now surpasses the 4 million total members of 1949 when the communists came to power.

In the years of varied restraints and virtual eradication of visible religious life in the "cultural revolution" of 1966-76, Bohr says Chinese Christians attained "psychological maturity."

During that period, he says, "both Protestants and Catholics claim that they acquired a deep understanding of poverty and suffering, patience and faithfulness, which they associated with the original New Testament experience."

"They have emerged with self-confidence and vitality — and with their numbers expanded... Clergy and lay leaders have been returned from factories, labor camps and prison cells."

"Thousands of Christians are emerging from private worship to profess the faith in the open."

In a telephone update after his recent trip, he estimated a total of 500 churches are open, including at least 400 Protestant churches and more than 100 Catholic churches, including about a dozen cathedrals in major cities.

About a third of the worshippers are young people, his report says, while another third are new believers.

Publication of catechisms, devotional tracts and hymnals has resumed, he says, along with printing of Bibles, with enough of them for all who want them projected in the near future.

recent overtures by Pope John Paul II seem to have backfired.

Both Protestants, through their Three-Self Movement, and Catholics, through the Catholic Patriotic Association, seek to assure survival of Christianity "by cooperating with the powers that be," Bohr says.

But many Christians — their numbers unknown, called "house Christians" — often shun the recognized bodies, calling them collaborators. Bohr says efforts to reconcile them and bring them into church structures have met "some success."

"Many who went underground during the persecution ... are returning to public worship," he says. But he adds that new restraints may be imposed if the church institutions can't "bring into the fold" those still opposing collaboration "even with a moderate regime."

He says Catholic leaders are "in a more serious bind" because the Vatican has never renounced authority over the Chinese church and

Falwell Criticizing Delay On His Goals

By BETTY ANNE WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Rev. Jerry Falwell, president of the Moral Majority, is criticizing the Reagan administration for dragging its heels on anti-abortion, school prayer and tuition tax legislation.

If President Reagan wants to convince conservatives of his genuine commitment to those issues, "all the people around him will have to begin doing everything in the executive branch capability to press those through the Congress," Falwell said Thursday.

"I would like to see a vote on those issues before November," Falwell said at Family Forum II, a leadership training conference for conservatives.

Falwell said anti-abortion legislation is needed most. Calling abortion a "national sin," he said it is the biggest threat to the traditional family.

He also said the Moral Majority will make a "massive effort" to work with clergy in registering one million new voters before the November elections.

The Moral Majority, which claims to have three million members, including 82,000 clergy, proved to be an influence in the election of various conservative candidates in 1980.

Falwell proclaimed that he was "both encouraged and anxious" about the Reagan administration so far.

"My anxiety is with 2½ years left in his (Reagan's) first four years — and I certainly hope he has eight — I'm a little anxious that we have not had the same aggressive support of those three items that the balanced budget amendment of the last week enjoyed," Falwell said.

"I'm not saying the president is not giving total support to those amendments. I'm simply saying that in the next few months, everyone will know if, in fact, these are priorities," Falwell said.

Education Secretary T.H. Bell sought to reassure the 500 activists participating in the three-day session that the president is strongly supportive of the two items that fall in the department's jurisdiction — tuition tax credits and school prayer.

Bell said he had urged the Senate to proceed quickly with the constitutional amendment authorizing voluntary school prayer.

"I know the Congress is busy, but this is a high priority," he said.

On tuition tax credits, Bell said: "The president has a firm commitment to this bill. Don't criticize him on that. I know he has a firm commitment to this bill."

Gainers held a narrow lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.
 On Thursday the Dow Jones industrial average rebounded from a deficit of more than 9 points to finish with a fractional gain.
 Analysts said the market drew some support from hopes that the Federal Reserve's weekly report after the close would show a decline in the money supply. That would presumably give the Fed some encouragement to follow a credit policy that would allow the recent decline of interest rates to continue.
 Meanwhile, the government reported that the index of leading economic indicators was unchanged in June from the previous month. The figure came in near the low end of advance estimates on Wall Street.
 Heublein led the active list, unchanged at 55½ after jumping 8½ points Thursday, when R.J. Reynolds Industries announced a takeover offer for the company.
 Reynolds shares rose 2½ to 42½.
 The NYSE's composite index held steady at 61.83. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .56 at 249.72.
 Volume on the Big Board totaled 18.53 million shares at noon, against 23.21 million at the same point Thursday.

Says Lebanese Welcome Israel

MINEOLA, N.Y. (AP) — A leader of the American Lebanese League, who returned recently from a month's stay in Beirut, says the Lebanese people welcome Israel's intervention there.
 They see it as "an opportunity to break the deadlock" and get foreign armies out so the Lebanese can "form their own government and live in peace," says Msgr. Elias El-Hayek, a Maronite (Eastern Catholic) priest and editor of the league's monthly publication.
 He told a new conference he was skeptical of those shedding "tears of crocodiles over victims of the Israeli intervention, while a year ago they kept a deafening silence about casualties of Christians and Zionists." He said that for the past two years, about 1,000 people have died each month from "explosions, shootings, all kinds of killings."

Tiny Survivor Flies Home To Cleveland

By CAROL TYER
 Reflector Staff Writer
 Four-month-old Annie Napier was flown home from Greenville to Cleveland, Ohio, this morning. Her thrilled parents and grandparents greeted her at Cleveland Metro Hospital about 10:15 a.m.
 Pitt County Memorial Hospital and Onslow General Hospital, Jacksonville, have been the baby's residences since her birth April 23, 1982. According to Pitt Memorial Pediatrics Department head nurse Billy Devill, the baby — whose parents lived in Jacksonville at the time of her birth — was born in Pitt Memorial because her mother's obstetrician had anticipated a premature birth. The two-pound baby was quickly admitted into the Neonatal Intensive Care Unit here. She has severe developmental problems including inability to clear mucus from her respiratory system and take food.

 She was intravenously nourished until she had gained enough weight and otherwise been stabilized enough to be transferred back to Jacksonville. She came back here June 29 for surgery to correct a pyloric stenosis, which prevented her even being tube fed.
 In the meantime, her very young parents felt pressed to go home where they would have the support of their extended family through the trauma of their daughter's grave illness and of previous pregnancies that have ended in miscarriage. They have kept in touch with their daughter's caregivers by phone and have awaited her being transferred to a hospital in their area, nurses here say.
 Annie was accompanied to Cleveland by nurse Corrie Wise. Her flight was donated by Larry Taylor, a local pilot and flight instructor who served as the pilot and also provided the use of his four-seater aircraft and the fuel for the flight.

 Friends and family of both men attended. A portrait of West was unveiled and will hang in the board room along with portraits of three previous superintendents of the High Point schools.

Alumni, Players Blast Dons' Decision

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The University of San Francisco's abrupt decision to end its scandal-ridden men's basketball program shocked other schools and conference officials and was blasted by USF players and alumni.

"We were shocked to learn of it," said UCLA Athletic Director Robert A. Fischer. "Nothing like this was ever contemplated at UCLA but I'm not sure what kind of reaction it will have on smaller schools. I hope others will not take such drastic actions."

UCLA's basketball team, a big money-maker for the university, is still on a two-year NCAA probation for several violations, including payments to players by alumni similar to those that were found at USF.

The Rev. John LoSchiavo, USF president, announced Thursday that the school, which had a proud, 58-year history in basketball highlighted by NCAA championships in 1955 and 1956, is dropping men's basketball because cheating by some alumni and coaches has damaged the university's integrity and reputation.

"Chief executive officers have expressed increasing concern and are becoming more assertive in their programs and in taking action," said David Berst, director of the NCAA's enforcement department in Mission, Kan. "But to date, no one has mentioned (doing) this sort of thing."

USF is a member of the West Coast Athletic Conference, and WCAC Commissioner Jerry Wyness, who said he wasn't consulted by LoSchiavo, angrily criticized the school's move.

"I don't agree with the (LoSchiavo's) decision," Wyness said. "He didn't discuss it with anybody from my office. USF is a very old, very prestigious member of the conference and when they suddenly leave it leaves a hollow feeling."

"LoSchiavo probably has reasons he's not disclosing at this time. We'll have to wait and see what else comes out in the next few weeks," Wyness said.

"won't destroy" the 30-year-old WCAC, which now will have seven schools, but it presents problems for rescheduling next season's games.

"We're going to have to juggle our schedule," Wyness said. "It's going to be very difficult to find opponents for all the schools to fill the two-game void. And there could be legal actions by some schools (against USF) because certain obligations aren't going to be met."

USF was scheduled to play a lucrative nationally televised game in February against Pepperdine and now "that goes by the wayside," Wyness said.

LoSchiavo noted that other universities have experienced similar problems. "Some of them even worse" than USF's admitted violations of NCAA rules.

"If these problems are as pervasive as they appear to be," LoSchiavo said, "the consequences can be more important than their impact on any single institution."

"All of us involved in these problems," he continued, "have to face a fundamental question: how can we contribute to building a decent and law-abiding society in this country if educational institutions are willing to suffer their principles to be prostituted and involve young people in that prostitution for any purpose, and much less for the purpose of winning some games and developing some ill-gotten recognition and income?"

LoSchiavo said USF would meet its scholarship commitments to its athletes but players and alumni alike were bitter in their condemnation of the decision.

"I'm really in a daze," said Rogue Harris, a 7-foot-2 center who was redshirted last season and was looking forward to starting this year. "I don't know what I'm going to do. It's a tough situation because we have only one month until school starts. Where do you go?"

"I'm very bitter," said Reynaldo Thomas, a 6-5 incoming freshman from Gary, Ind., who was recruited by nearly 200 schools. "I committed to USF last December because I wanted to avoid the recruiting hassle."

"I felt some loyalty to the school and I really wanted to play for them," Thomas said. "I came out a couple of days ago to check out what was happening and get ready for school. One day it's peaches and cream, the next day this. I don't know what my next step is. I'm shocked. This was my whole future. Now I'm in no man's land and I have no way to go home."

San Francisco attorney Art

Zief, a USF booster who attended LoSchiavo's news conference, was incensed by the decision.

"I think it's a travesty," Zief said, "because the president didn't have the guts to stand up and take the heat. Anyone knows what goes on here for an alumnus to give a kid a job, but that's not worth closing down the program."

LoSchiavo said his decision was based on a series of violations over several years, but it appeared to be triggered by the Quintin Dailey case this year. Dailey's problems began when he was charged with, and later pleaded guilty to, sexually assaulting a student nurse and ended with revelations the All-America guard received as much as $5,000 in under-the-table payments from an alumnus.

The stunning announcement ended a program that began in 1924 and peaked with consecutive national championships in 1955 and 1956 by a team featuring Bill Russell and K.C. Jones. Last year, USF started the season as one of the nation's top-ranked teams.

Thomas blamed Dailey's "grudge" against Coach Pete Barry for the events that led to the downfall of the program.

"I hold it against him (Dailey)," Thomas said. "It wasn't a team, it was individuals. It was Quintin Dailey. He didn't have a grudge against the school, it was against Pete Barry."

Barry, who is still employed by the university but has no team to coach, issued a statement after LoSchiavo's announcement.

"This is extremely unfair to the players," Barry said. "While I respect the decision of Father President, I cannot totally understand it nor comprehend the decision. This great tradition does not deserve to be terminated."

"The coaching staff is stunned by the events of the last 24 hours," his statement continued. "We will do everything possible to assist our student-athletes in dealing with this tragedy."

Phils Ease Into First; Braves Waltz In Sweep

By The Associated Press
While Philadelphia and St. Louis play hot potato with the National League East lead, the Atlanta Braves are cooling off the rest of the West.

The Phillies, with a 3-2 victory over Chicago Thursday night, moved back into first place, one percentage point ahead of the Cardinals and only 3 1/2 games in front of Pittsburgh and four ahead of Montreal, in the crowded East.

But the Braves, completing a four-game sweep of San Diego with a 6-2 triumph, widened their margin in the West to a fat nine games over the second-place Padres.

Braves Manager Joe Torre sounds as though he's sitting in the hot seat instead of the catbird seat, the way he side-steps references to Atlanta's runaway.

"It's a lot healthier for us than it is for them," he said of the Padres, "but there's a lot of time left. Two months. A lot can happen in baseball in two months."

At least he's relishing his position as a first-place manager after being fired by the New York Mets after last season, right? Wrong.

"If, at the end of the year, we stay where we are, I'll relish it," he said. "But this game is very humbling. Anything can happen. One game at a time may be boring for you to hear, but that's baseball."

Torre clearly has his players programmed to his wavelenght. "We're glad to be there," Jerry Royster said of the Braves' first-place position, "but guys aren't turning flips...It's too early to worry about a magic number."

By the way, it's 55. Any number of Atlanta victories and San Diego losses adding up to 55 will give the Braves the flag.

Dick Williams, the manager of the Padres, said there was only one bright spot in the four-game series against the Braves: "We're leaving Atlanta."

Dale Murphy hit his 27th and 28th home runs, tops in the major leagues, and Jerry Royster added a two-run triple in the Braves' attack. Gene Richards and Sixto Lezcano homered for the Padres.

Phillies 3, Cubs 2

While the Phillies moved into a virtual first-place tie with the Cardinals in the standings, Gary Matthews moved into a first-place tie with Keith Hernandez of the Cardinals in game-winning hits. His RBI single in the seventh inning was his 14th game-winner of the year.

"I think game-winning hits are something that the general public does not follow too closely, but the team and management do," he said.

Expos 4, Cardinals 3
"Each game is so important to us right now. We've got three teams to catch, and you have to try for that little extra," said Montreal's Andre Dawson, who doubled to open the 10th inning, continued to third on center fielder Willie McGee's error and scored the Expos' game-winning run on Tim Wallach's sacrifice fly.

The Cardinals built a 3-0 lead through 7 1/2 innings, then Montreal tied it with three runs in the bottom of the eighth, one scoring when St. Louis relief ace Bruce Sutter issued a bases-loaded walk to Gary Carter.

Pirates 4, Mets 1

Don Robinson's seven-hitter and Dick Davis' two-run homer helped the Pirates hand New York its fourth consecutive loss. It was the 11th victory and fourth complete game of the season for Robinson, 0-3 last year.

And it was Davis' fourth homer of the season and second as a starter in place of injured outfielder Dave Parker.

Astros 4, Reds 3
Phil Garner broke an eighth-inning tie with his ninth homer of the season as Houston beat the Reds. The one-out, 2-2 pitch from Greg Harris barely cleared the home-run stripe on the left field wall in the Astrodome.

Randy Moffitt picked up his first victory as a member of the Astros by pitching two-thirds of an inning in relief. Alan Knicely had three hits and drove in two runs, one of them with hit his first homer.

Pirates To Face Illinois

East Carolina University Director of Athletics Dr. Ken Karr announced today that the Pirates will play the University of Illinois in 1987 in football.

This will mark the first time a Pirate football team has played against a Big Ten Conference opponent. The two will meet in Champaign on October 3, 1987.

In October this year, East Carolina ventures into the Big Eight for the first time, playing the University of Missouri in Columbia.

"Our scheduling of games with Big Ten and Big Eight opponents continues our move forward as an NCAA Division I-A football school," Karr said. "Over the last two years we have added football powers Florida State, West Virginia, Missouri, and now, Illinois to our schedule, in addition to renewing a series with the University of Southern Mississippi."

"We will continue to upgrade our schedule. This is all a part of our plan to compete with the best in various parts of the country. It presents a great challenge to all who support East Carolina University athletics."

The 1987 schedule shapes up to be one of the most exciting ever for Pirate fans as games with Florida State and West Virginia are scheduled in Ficklen Stadium, along with the trip to the University of Illinois.

Missouri, Florida State and N.C. State, all on this year's schedule, will also appear on the 1983 schedule, along with power Southern Mississippi.

East Carolina opens its 1982 slate on September 11 in Raleigh against rival N.C. State.

Some Surprises For Brad Bryant

OAKVILLE, Ont. (AP) — Brad Bryant didn't expect to be playing in the golf tournament. He certainly didn't expect to be playing with Jack Nicklaus. And he definitely didn't expect to be leading the Canadian Open.

"I'd missed in qualifying," said Bryant, a non-winner in six years of PGA Tour activity. "As the ninth alternate, you don't figure to have a very good chance of getting in the golf tournament. I really didn't expect to be playing."

It wasn't until sometime after midnight Wednesday that he found out he had an 8:30 a.m. starting time — "and I was paired with David Graham and Jack Nicklaus."

Bryant, who got into the tournament field after Ed Sneed withdrew because of illness in his family, responded nicely to the sometimes-imposing challenge of playing with the mighty Nicklaus before the largest gallery on the golf course.

He didn't make a bogey. He scrambled when he had to. And he finished with a 4-under-par 67 that provided him with a spot in the three-way tie for the lead in this national championship.

Bryant, twice a runner-up this season, was tied for the top Thursday with long-hitting Greg Norman of Australia and Bruce Douglass. Douglass opened with a double-bogey, then lost sole control of the top spot when he bogeyed the final hole of the day on the 7,060-yard Glen Abbey Golf Club course.

A single shot off the lead at 68 were Nick Faldo of England, Bruce Lietzke, Pat Lindsey, Hal Sutton, Keith Fergus, Wayne Levi and the unrelated Grahams, David and Lou, each a former U.S. Open champ.

Peter Oosterhuis, the defending titleholder, was another stroke back at 69.

Nicklaus, the course designer, bogeyed four holes in a row over one stretch and could do no better than a 73. A five-time runner-up but still seeking his first Canadian Open title, Nicklaus must improve today if he is to qualify for the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

"There's something to be said about playing with a player like Nicklaus," said David Graham, the third member of the Nicklaus-Bryant group.

"You're conscious of your behavior, conscious of trying to play well in his company, kind of trying to elevate yourself," he said. "A young player can take that kind of situation and make it a very positive thing."

Griffin Leads West To Victory

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — South Mecklenburg's Steve Griffin ran for three touchdowns to lead the West to a 38-10 victory over the East in the 34th annual East-West All Star high school football game Thursday night at Grimsley's Jamieson Stadium.

In winning for the third consecutive year, the West completely dominated play, racking up 241 total yards total offense while holding the East to only 77 yards. The West now has a 21-12-1 lead in the series.

The West jumped out in front in the first quarter on a 24-yard field goal by Don Beard of Burlington Williams. The East tied it with a field goal of their own late in the first period when Lee Gliarmis of Wilson Fike was true on a 36-yard attempt.

In the second quarter, Griffin, who was named most valuable player, scored his first touchdown on a 13-yard run with just over seven minutes remaining. The conversion made it 10-3.

A few plays later, the West's

Hamlet Is Pitt Foe

Hamlet romped to a 15-3 victory over Whiteville last night and captured the championship of the Area II American Legion playoffs, four games to two.

Hamlet will now meet Pitt County for the North Carolina eastern championship in a best-of-seven series.

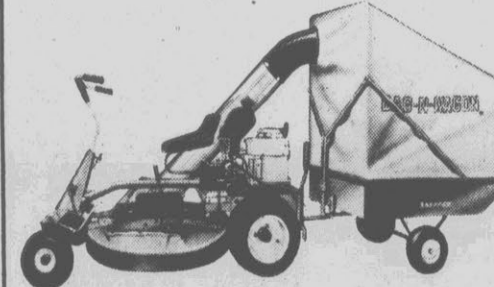

That series is expected to begin either Tuesday or Wednesday in Greenville. Pitt County will serve as the host team for games one and two, with the series then moving to Rockingham for the next three games, should all three be needed. A sixth and seventh game, if needed, would be played back in Greenville.

Thornton's Slam Keys Indian Victory

By The Associated Press
 Andre Thornton got the ball up in the air like he was trying to. In fact, he got it up, up and away.
 Cleveland's designated hitter stepped to the plate with the bases loaded and one out in the top of the 12th inning Thursday night and the Indians locked in a 1-1 struggle with Milwaukee. Two pitches later, Thornton had his fourth career grand slam and the Indians had a 5-1 victory that knocked the Brewers out of first place in the seesaw American League East.

 "I was just thinking one run — put the ball in play, hopefully a sacrifice fly," Thornton said. "I hit a breaking pitch about waist high. It wasn't too high or too low, but it got too much of the plate. It was the kind of pitch I ground out on a lot, but this time I got it up in the air."
 Jim Slaton relieved Milwaukee starter Pete Vuckovich to start the 12th and gave up a leadoff single to Jack Perconte. Miguel Dilone sacrificed Perconte to second and he took third on a wild pitch. Walks to Toby Harrah and Mike Hargrove loaded the bases and Thornton, who also drove in Cleveland's first run with a fourth-inning single, hit an 0-1 pitch into the left field seats for his 23rd homer.

 "I didn't have real good stuff warming up," Slaton said. "Sometimes that changes when you get in the game, but it didn't tonight. I'm very upset at the way I pitched. I threw a slider to get ahead of Thornton and then threw another one right over the plate. I didn't have good location at all and I wasn't as aggressive as I should have been."

The victory went to Dan Spillner, the third Cleveland pitcher, who relieved with two out and the bases loaded in the bottom of the 11th and retired Paul Molitor on a fly ball.
 The Brewers, who have been trading first place with Boston in recent weeks, slipped one-half game behind the Red Sox.

Red Sox 7, White Sox 3
 Jim Rice's tie-breaking two-run single in the fifth inning and Carl Yastrzemski's 439th career homer in the ninth helped Boston send Chicago to its fourth straight defeat. The Red Sox loaded the bases in the fifth on walks to Rick Miller to snap a 1-1 tie. Carl Yastrzemski's sacrifice fly made it 4-1 and Yastrzemski homered in the ninth following a sacrifice fly by Rice.

 The defeat gave the White Sox a 4-12 record since the All-Star break and Manager Tony LaRussa may be on the hot seat.

Angels 3, Mariners 1
 Doug DeCinces drilled a three-run homer in the third inning and Steve Renko earned his ninth victory. Mike Moore walked Tim Foli to start the third and, after Foli was sacrificed to second, Brian Downing singled and DeCinces followed with his 13th homer of the season.
 After fighting the flu for a couple of days, DeCinces felt almost too weak to walk out onto the diamond.
 "Sometimes when you're too strong you overswing, but when you're weak you stay within yourself," said DeCinces, who had three of the Angels' five hits. "I was seeing the ball better tonight. When you play every day, you pick up some bad habits. So tonight when I came back, it was like starting all over again."

The victory was the Angels' third in a row and kept them two games ahead of the second-place Royals in the AL West.
 Royals 7, Orioles 2
 Willie Aikens drove in three runs with a homer and single and Hal McRae drove in two as Kansas City snapped the Orioles' longest winning streak of the season at seven games. Rookie Derek Botelho allowed five hits and one run over five innings and Mike Armstrong pitched three innings before Dan Quisenberry worked the ninth.
 The Royals scored four times off loser Dennis Martinez in the second inning, including Aikens' two-run homer. McRae drove in his two runs with a double in the seventh.
 A's 5, Twins 0
 Rick Langford pitched a four-hitter, Rickey Henderson stole his 96th base of the season and Jeff Burroughs homered for the A's. Langford allowed only four baserunners in his second shutout of the year and struck out five.
 Henderson led off the A's first with a single and loser Brad Havens walked Davey Lopes. Henderson got his 96th steal in 101 games by taking third on a double steal. Twins catcher Tim Lardner conceded third to Henderson and tried to nail Lopes at second, but the throw went into center field for an error, allowing Henderson to score and Lopes to reach third. He scored on a sacrifice fly by Tony Armas.
 Henderson is just four stolen bases short of the American League record he set two years ago. If he continues his present pace, in late August he should break the major league record of 118 set by Lou Brock of the St. Louis Cardinals in 1974.

Woody Peele

Bravo!
 We applaud the results of the study committee on the construction of a civic center here, announced yesterday.
 For a long, long time, we have advocated such a concept, not just for sports but for a number of other activities also.
 Such a center as seen by the study committee would go a long way towards improving not only the sports in the area but other things as well.
 We see many uses for such a facility. East Carolina University could play its basketball games there. It could serve as the host team for the ECAC-South tournament. The North Carolina High School Athletic Association could hold one of its regional tournaments here.
 In addition, the Tobacco Show, boat shows, auto shows, etc., could find a home in such a structure. Major concerts of top artists could be brought in, concerts that this area could not otherwise attract. And on and on.
 It will need a top promotor, someone who could manage a regional market. But the market is there, for sure.
 Hopefully, the construction of such a center will not be that far down the road. The committee was hopeful in its presentation that it could be attained in about five years. Hopefully, this is not an going to be an overly optimistic view, but one that can be accomplished.
 The $16 million-plus price tag may seem steep to some, but in today's dollars it is a bargain price. Consider that the University of North Carolina is currently putting together a $30 million facility for its basketball program in Chapel Hill.
 So we congratulate the study committee on its report and the Chamber of Commerce in its backing of the project. Now to get the job done.

Monday will see the beginning of the high school football season. Practice will start at most of the area schools on Monday with a week's of conditioning drills. Then, there will be an additional three or four weeks prior to the start of the actual playing season.
 The first games for some teams will be on August 27, while the rest will begin on September 3.
 Rose High School's football program will under the direction on Ronald Vincent for the second straight season, but this year, Vincent will be coach in his own right.
 Last season, Vincent served as interim coach following by-pass surgery on coach Dave Bumgarner. Bumgarner later decided not to continue coaching, and recently it was decided that Vincent would serve as head football coach at the school on a regular basis.
 He will also continue as baseball coach at the school. While there has been a general policy of not having one coach more than one of the major sports, the economic situation at the school prevailed and for now, Vincent will handle both activities.
 Rose will also be fielding a new sport this fall in soccer. A 12-game schedule has been set up, all involving Big East teams. Only Northern Nash is not fielding a soccer team this fall in the conference.

We would ask coaches and athletic directors to forward their fall sports schedules to us as soon as possible so that we may begin planning our coverage for the upcoming season.

Davis In Testimony

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — About 20,000 season tickets worth $3.6 million already have been sold for Raiders football games in Los Angeles this season, team Managing General Partner Al Davis said during a surprise court appearance.
 Davis was called to the stand in Alameda County Superior Court Thursday to fight a suit by two long-time Oakland Raiders season ticket holders who have asked the court to block the National Football League team's flight south.
 Raider attorney Moses Laskey branded the suit "an oddball case," and said it was moot because the team has already moved and established itself in Los Angeles. He noted that a federal court in Los Angeles had decided that the NFL itself couldn't block the Raider move.
 Former season ticket holders Stan Tremewan of San Rafael and Richard Duey of Oakland contend that they are beneficiaries of the 1966 merger of the American and National football leagues.
 But Davis denied their claim that the language of the merger agreement guaranteed that the Raiders would never leave Oakland.
 The Raider boss, who was AFL commissioner at the time of the merger, said that there never was "discussion that the teams would stay where they are in perpetuity."
 He said the point of the talks was to make sure the merger didn't force the Raiders out of Oakland.
 Judge Robert Kroninger gave both sides until Aug. 23 to submit briefs and said he would then deliberate on the case.
 After the hearing, Davis shook hands with his courtroom antagonists.
 "I respect what you are trying to do. I just wish everybody would have showed as much emotion toward the (Oakland) coliseum when I was asking for improvements."
 Davis contends a main reason for leaving Oakland was his inability to obtain a satisfactory agreement from the Oakland Coliseum Commission.

Clearing The Way

Sally Survives Bad Sand Shot

DENVER (AP) — Several hours after the "fact, Sally Little was still red-faced.
 "I didn't realize I had that shot in my repertoire," she said, relating her adventures on the ninth hole that upset her momentum but didn't prevent her from taking the first-round lead in the $200,000 Columbia Savings LPGA Classic.
 Little, the leading money-winner on the women's professional golf tour this season, overcame chilly temperatures, wind and intermittent rain to fire a 4-under-par 68 Thursday for a 2-stroke lead over Patty Sheehan entering today's second round.
 Little was 5-under-par coming to the par-4 ninth hole, where she hit her approach shot into the sand. She then skulled her sand wedge shot, sending the ball screaming toward a clubhouse window. It somehow failed to break the window, instead ricocheting back onto the green, 25 feet from the pin.
 "I was so embarrassed," said Little. "Everybody on the practice tee (nearly) broke up. Hollis Stacy rolled on the ground, laughing. I think I lost my composure somewhat after that."
 Little 2-putted for bogey, then bogeyed the 10th hole as well after missing the green. But she recouped, parring the remaining holes except for a birdie at 16.
 The 30-year-old Little, winner of four tour events and $199,010 this year, had six birdies in her round, five of them coming in the first eight holes as she repeatedly hit her shots close to the pin.

Gaylord Wins; Thanks Former Champ

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Mitch Gaylord said "thank you" to a coach and former champion after winning the all-around gold medal in men's gymnastics at the National Sports Festival.

"Kurt Thomas came along at the right time for me," Gaylord said Thursday night. "He helped me out tremendously. He helped with my preparations, how to turn on a crowd. But I feel I have a long way to go before I reach my potential."

Thomas, a one-time Festival and national champ, now coaches and works as an analyst on gymnastics telecasts for ABC-TV.

Gaylord, 21, of Tempe, Ariz., a member of the U.S. National team for the past three years, had his highest mark in the floor exercise — 9.8 of a possible 10. He called the performance "my best ever."

His other scores also were high: 9.75 in both the still rings and horizontal bar; 9.65 in pommel horse; 9.6 in vaulting, and 9.3 on the parallel bars.

Scott Johnson, 20, of Colorado Springs, Colo., last year's NCAA team champion, won the silver and Mario McCutcheon, 22, of New York, took the bronze.

While Gaylord was basking in the glow of a great day, David Boone was in the spotlight on one of the worst days of his life.

"I'm in a state of shock," Boone, a 6-foot-6 guard for the West men's basketball team, said after learning that the University of San Francisco was dropping the sport because of a string of recruiting violations. Boone was to have started classes on a basketball scholarship at San Francisco this fall.

Asked if he felt betrayed, Boone replied:

"Yes. They told me how wonderful things would be and now I feel they kind of let me down."

"I'm a bit confused, it was a shock to me," said the 18-year-old San Francisco, who had picked his hometown school over such Pacific-10 Conference members as Washington and Oregon State.

"I never thought the school would eliminate the program all together."

Boone scored four points as the East beat his winless West team 86-83 to gain a berth in Saturday's championship game against the South.

Michael Brown, a sophomore forward at George Washington University, had 25 points and Festival-record 18 rebounds for the East.

The South moved on despite a 112-99 loss to the North Thursday night. The East, North and South all finished the round-robin portion of the tournament with 2-1 records, but the East and South advanced on the basis of best field-goal differential.

"I'm happy where we are, but I'd rather play the North again," said South Coach Nolan Richardson, from Tulsa. "I always want to play a team we haven't beaten. I'm a competitor. If I played my grandmother, I'd play to win."

The women's championship game at Market Square Arena Saturday night will have the defending champion South against the West.

Shelia Collins, a hot-shooting guard from Colbert, Ga., and the University of Tennessee, scored 18 as the South beat the North 101-81 Thursday night.

Kendra Grant, a 6-3 center from Peoria, Ill., had 16 points for the North, which plays the East for the bronze medal

Saturday afternoon.

The West women advanced with an 86-83 double-overtime victory over the East. Donya Monroe, a Nevada-Las Vegas freshman, scored six of her 10 points in the second overtime for the West, led by UCLA's Charlotte Jones with 15 points. Rebecca Hagerdon of Cal-Long Beach led all scorers with 26 points for the East.

Tonight's ice hockey championship pits the North against the West.

The North tied the South 4-4 in a Thursday night game marked by rough play.

"It was a physical game for both teams," said North Coach Herb Boxer. "But I don't think it'll hurt my team. The West will be more rested, but my team will be ready."

The West beat the East 5-1 Thursday afternoon.

Scott Carlston of Minnesota-Duluth and Steve Murphy of Michigan Tech scored 1:09 apart midway through the final period to bring the North back from a 4-2 deficit. Bryan Erickson of Minnesota scored twice for the South.

In speed skating, Lydia Stephens and Steve Merrifield each won their fourth gold medals of the Festival — on the same team, in the same race.

Stephans, 21, from Northwood, Ill., was pressed into service with the West men's 5,000-meter relay when Tom Carter, an alternate, was hurt. The men had no one else so they called on Stephens.

She helped Andy Gabel of Northbrook, Paul Grannes of Minneapolis and Merrifield of Canoga Park, Calif., to the winning time of 8 minutes, 23.42 seconds.

That gave Stephens four golds and one silver, and Merrifield four golds. Stephens earlier Thursday took the women's 1,000-meter individual, in 1:52.59, and Merrifield won the same event for the men in 1:40.35. Each had won two golds in Wednesday's opening day of speed skating, with Stephens adding a silver

Thursday in the women's 3,000-meter relay.

Valerie Zimring, 17, of Los Angeles broke two Festival records in women's rhythmic gymnastics in capturing the gold. Her total of 37 points and her 9.4 points in rope competition were the new standards.

In weightlifting, Brian Miyamoto of Los Angeles erased his own Festival record with a hoist of 270 pounds in the clean and jerk. His total of 468.4 pounds gave him the 123-pound crown for the second straight year.

Humphrey Accepts Fate, Announces Retirement

By The Associated Press

Some football players go to training camp with hopes of winning a position, some with intentions of keeping the ones they have and others with the stubborn notion that they can force their brittle bodies through the rigors of just one more grueling season.

Claude Humphrey has accepted the painful truth that he could not, because of a knee injury that won't heal. The 38-year-old defensive end made that decision Thursday and announced his retirement from the Philadelphia Eagles after 14 seasons in the National Football League.

"I'm not sure, even if I got well, if I would be able to help the team," said the six-time All-Pro, who once was recognized as one of the NFL's fiercest pass rushers after coming up in 1968 as a first-round draft choice of the Atlanta Falcons. "My age is a factor this time."

The 6-foot-5, 258-pound veteran, who started in four of his 12 games last season, suffered his latest injury in a game against the New York Giants. He later came back to play in a season-ending playoff loss to the Giants but said the knee failed to heal, making surgery inevitable.

"During the off-season, it seemed to improve. But as soon as I started to work out, it started to act up again," said Humphrey, who said he expects to be operated on next week.

"At my age, if I rule out this season, I have to rule out all of them," he said.

Humphrey was the NFL Defensive Rookie of the year in 1969 and was voted to the All-Pro team from 1970 through 1974 and again following the

Sampson Receives Tanqueray Award

NEW YORK (AP) — All-American Ralph Sampson of the University of Virginia received the Tanqueray Award for Achievement in amateur sport Thursday.

The 7-foot-4 center averaged 15.8 points per game, leading Virginia to a 30-4 record last season. Then he resisted offers to turn pro and decided to return to Virginia for his senior year.

"I debated about it, mostly with myself. I thought about it a lot," Sampson said he decided to stay in school because he wants to complete his education and get his degree.

"I have no regrets about the decision, none at all," he said.

Market For Wishful Thinking Apparent On Tube

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — If you have a case of Saturday Night Fever, is television a home remedy? Do the networks offer any companionship?

That, of course, depends on your age, and your susceptibility to the kind of entertainment that demands you close your eyes and dream you were somebody else or somewhere else.

ABC's "Love Boat" and "Fantasy Island," which have been top-rated Saturday programming for several years, prove there's a market for wishful thinking. Last season, "Love Boat" ranked 15th. "Fantasy Island" was 31st.

"A lot of people at home are unmarried. We also have an enormous teen-age audience," says Douglas Cramer, executive producer of "Love Boat." "Our appeal is pure escapism. Our trips are romantic, glamorous and adventurous. They're everybody's dreams."

"These fantasies are about people who find happiness in glamorous surroundings. Viewers fantasize that that's them. It's a way of not being depressed. We have three stories, and if you don't like one, hold on. There are two more." But what if you don't like any of them? What if mindless TV is not your favorite weekend activity? What if you're looking for some intellectual stimulation, sophisticated comedy or realistic drama?

Birthday 90; Feeling 190

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Actor William Powell, who starred in the "Thin Man" series and about 100 other movies, accepted 90th birthday greetings, although he did it grudgingly.

"I feel all of 90," he said in a telephone interview Thursday from his Palm Springs desert home. "I practically live indoors but I do sit out on the porch and yoo-hoo to people as they go by."

WILLIAM POWELL

Then he changed his tune a bit, saying: "I may be 90 years old, but I feel like 190."

"People are congratulating me, and for what? For being alive? That's a peculiar kind of achievement. But I admit I was born on July 29, 1892, in Pittsburgh, Pa."

His wife of 43 years, actress Diana "Mousie" Lewis, said, "Bill is just amazing, marvelous. He has a hearing difficulty and he doesn't get out of the house. But he is in good spirits."

"He watches television. He reads a lot. He takes his own shower. And he enjoys our two darling dogs ...," she added.

Some of Powell's better known movies were "Life With Father," "My Man Godfrey" and "The Great Ziegfeld." His last movie was "Mister Roberts" in 1955 with Henry Fonda and Jack Lemmon.

Then this Saturday's network lineup isn't for you. At 8 p.m. EDT, CBS' "Walt Disney" offers "Pluto and His Friends," NBC has "Here's Boomer," and ABC has "Today's FBI."

Other "highlights" include a CBS cartoon called "Faeries," NBC's "Harper Valley" and "Nashville Palace," starring Joe Namath. Then, of course, there's "Love Boat" and "Fantasy Island."

This is a far cry from the heyday of CBS comedies in the 1970s, when "All in the Family," at 8 o'clock, was television's top-rated program. Traditionally, viewer levels build through the night, but "people were staying at home for 'All in the Family' and going out afterwards," says George Keramidas, an ABC vice president for television research.

In those days, CBS made didn't do so voluntarily. CBS and NBC asserted the rule was unnecessary, since the only case of such unexpected interference had been resolved through voluntary cooperation. The networks also maintained the rule raised serious freedom of speech issues, since it was conceivable a government official could interrupt unfavorable news coverage under the guise of preventing interference.

Richard M. Smith, the chief of the FCC's field operations bureau, said Thursday the networks had continued to cooperate during shuttle flights and interference problems had been avoided.

He added, however, that adoption of the rule would at least provide a clear mechanism for dealing with disputes.

"With the rule, an order can be issued and if it's not complied with, we can go to court," Smith explained. "But without an order, I don't know how we would move to resolve the problem."

Officials at CBS and NBC

staying home worthwhile, with such comedy classics as "All in the Family," "Mary Tyler Moore," "Bob Newhart," and "Carol Burnett." It was respectable — and rewarding — to be dateless and spend the night with Archie or Mary.

And, in the early days of TV, Saturday night was the showcase for some Hall of Fame programs: Sid Caesar's "Show of Shows," "Gunsmoke," "Perry Mason," and the "Jackie Gleason Show."

A.C. Nielsen figures for the 1981-82 season reveal that 5 million fewer households were watching TV on Saturday nights than Sunday nights. "There's some correlation with the type of

FCC Clears The Way To Change Camera Rules

By NORMAN BLACK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Rejecting complaints by CBS and NBC, the Federal Communications Commission has cleared the way for its staff to shut down electronic news cameras if they pose "a threat to the safety of life or property."

The agency on Thursday rejected the two networks' pleas to reconsider the new rule that was adopted last December. The measure governs certain types of electronic equipment that can cause radio interference.

The rule was first drawn up in July 1981, three months after an incident involving the landing of the space shuttle Columbia after its first flight into space.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration had been forced to call in FCC engineers after discovering that electronic news cameras set up at Edwards Air Force Base were jamming sensitive antennas that handled radio communication between the astronauts and ground controllers.

Such cameras, known as Electronic News Gathering or ENG equipment, use a small, built-in microwave transmitter to feed their video signals to nearby vans or control centers, avoiding the need for bulky cables.

With the FCC's help, the offending cameras were identified and the networks voluntarily removed them. But the incident left agency officials wondering what they would have done if the broadcasters had not cooperated.

The result was a rule specifically granting the chief of the FCC's field operations bureau authority to shut down any type of broadcast auxiliary equipment causing dangerous interference if the operator didn't do so voluntarily. CBS and NBC asserted the rule was unnecessary, since the only case of such unexpected interference had been resolved through voluntary cooperation. The networks also maintained the rule raised serious freedom of speech issues, since it was conceivable a government official could interrupt unfavorable news coverage under the guise of preventing interference.

Richard M. Smith, the chief of the FCC's field operations bureau, said Thursday the networks had continued to cooperate during shuttle flights and interference problems had been avoided.

He added, however, that adoption of the rule would at least provide a clear mechanism for dealing with disputes.

"With the rule, an order can be issued and if it's not complied with, we can go to court," Smith explained. "But without an order, I don't know how we would move to resolve the problem."

Acuff Suffers A 'Dizzy Spell'

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Roy Acuff, the 78-year-old Grand Ole Opry veteran known as the "king of country music," has been hospitalized after suffering "a dizzy spell" following a performance, an Opry official said.

Jerry Strobel, manager of the Grand Old Opry House, said Acuff was taken to Edgefield Hospital in Nashville Thursday after being treated by paramedics at Opryland U.S.A., an entertainment complex in a nearby suburb.

Roma Pinkston, a nursing supervisor at the hospital, said Acuff "came in for a checkup. He's doing fine."

The "dizzy spell" occurred after Acuff had performed at the Thursday evening "Opry Star of the Day" show at Opryland, Strobel said.

"Roy wanted to come home (from the hospital) ... but doctors suggested an

An Answer To Frequent Query

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) —
 The most frequently asked question about appliances, reports a manufacturer, is:
 "What is the correct temperature for the fresh food area
 in a refrigerator?"
 The answer, says Jean Hopwood, a consumer-affairs specialist for General
 Electric, is 35 to 40 F.
 Ms. Hopwood says more than 100,000 questions reach GE annually.

 "Sixty percent of the inquires are written, and 40 percent are telephoned," she says. "Mondays, Fridays and days of inclement weather when people have time to think about a particular problem or question can bring more than 600
 telephone calls."

Company C Tries A Little War Dance

FORT LEWIS, Wash. (AP) — Grunting and groaning, stomping and slashing, a platoon from C Company tests the power of an ancient formula for kindling a fighting spirit in listless soldiers: the war dance.
 "The war dance has been used for thousands of years to develop tranquility and courage and tenacity in warriors," says Johnny Kai, a retired Army officer and former Green Beret.
 Kai, 49, who teaches the 21-step dance to the soldiers under a contract with the Army, says it is designed to develop
 "combat chemistry."
 "It keeps it interesting," said Pvt. Donny Davis, 18, of Danville, Ill., one of the 30 or so soldiers in the platoon from C Company of the 39th Infantry's 2nd Battalion dancing along the Nisqually River, where they had been building rope bridges.

Training can get monotonous and mundane, said Capt.
 Robert Simmons, commander of C Company. "This livens it up. The troops get psyched up."
 Kai explains, "For three to five seconds, whether it's football or combat, in the crucial moments a person must be energized and be alive. When the ball is snapped, you have three to five seconds of intense activity. It's the same in combat."
 "It's the chemical effect," he said. "We want to develop combat chemistry."

Kai has taught similar techniques to Green Berets and football players.
 As C Company pounds out its dance, which combines boxing, martial arts, football and wrestling moves, another company of soldiers working nearby hoots and jeers.

Lt. Bill Rice, 23, a C Company platoon leader, said the razzing is a normal, jealous response of those who aren't part of the experimental program.

"Our war dance is better than sitting around telling dirty jokes and discussing the latest issue of Playboy," he said.
 The war dance is just one of the programs C Company is testing for the Army. Unlike most soldiers, who part company after basic training, the soldiers in C Company will spend their Army careers together.
 The "regimental" plan, as it's called, tests the theory that soldiers who remain together will be happier and will fight better.
 The experiment is nicknamed COHORT, for Cohesion Operational Readiness and Training.
 "You can train the men the way you want to," said Staff Sgt. Dennis Pagan in Rice's platoon. "They are not here one week and gone the next."
 C Company, which transferred to Fort Lewis last month after basic training at Fort Benning, Ga., is scheduled to go to South Korea in March 1984. The company will stay one year, returning stateside a few days before three-year enlistments expire.

One of the penalties of growing old is that your circle of friends becomes ever smaller. It is with great sorrow that we learned of the death of the doyen of Dutch bridge journalists, Herman Filarski.

If ever a man deserved to be called a gentle giant, it was Herman. He was a man of great integrity who never had a bad word to say about anyone. The respect in which he was held by his peers was marked by his election as Executive Vice President of the International Bridge Press Association, which benefited for years from his labor and his wisdom. The Bols Bridge Tips were his idea, and he worked tirelessly for the benefit of bridge throughout the world. We loved him, and will miss him sorely.

Herman was a tower of strength on the Dutch team which, in its prime,
 was always a contender
 in the European Championship. Today's hand occurred during a rubber bridge game in 1953.

West led the king of clubs and continued with the ace, which Filarski ruffed.
 The contract seemed simple until East sluffed a heart on the second spade. Now declarer, to keep control of the hand, was forced to abandon trumps.

Filarski cashed the ace of diamonds and ace of hearts, then crossed to the king of hearts. He led a low diamond from the table and ran it to West's king. West did the best he could by returning another club, but declarer had an elegant counter. He simply discarded a diamond from his hand
 instead of ruffing.

West was helpless. If he returned another club, declarer would ruff it on the table. And any other lead would allow declarer to win, draw trumps and make the rest of the tricks with his winners.

Offer Schools Fuel Cost Cuts

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's schools can cut energy bills up to $2 million a day without increasing their budgets, according to an industry report.
 Elementary and secondary schools can save 15 to 30 percent on annual fuel bills by managing energy use better with a time-shared computer system, the study by Honeywell's Energy Management Information Center reveals.

The time-sharing system allows schools to share the services of a central energy-control computer and its operators to manage energy use. The computer, which is linked to a school by telephone lines, operates air conditioners, heaters, lights, boilers, motors, pumps and fans at peak efficiency.

Country-wide, the schools could save from $358 million to $716 million a year by time-sharing a computer without draining operating budgets to buy new equipment, the study estimates.

DELUGE OF ASH
 JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — As much as eight inches of volcanic ash has been dumped on the Indonesian town of Garut following the latest eruption of the 9,154-foot Galunggung volcano, nine miles north of the town, authorities said.

THE DAILY REFLECTOR has been advertising local businesses since January 26, 1882.

In August, 1925, the J.C. Penney Company opened a store in Greenville. Vida Crawford has worked in the Greenville store for 40 years, a store record. She remembers "when the original store was a two-story building on Evans Street, located where Coffman's Men's Wear is now".
 Christine Windham, an employee of 30 years who works in Fashions, remembers when the department was called "ready-to-wear".
 "You couldn't buy better men's work clothes anywhere", said Windham. "And the store very seldom stayed open past 5:30 p.m. Oh, once in awhile during the Christmas holidays we would stay open later than that, but not often."
 Another employee of 30 years, Richard Meeks, is currently a salesperson in auto supply. "At one time I was an assistant manager of the old store," said Meeks, "but I like selling better."
 Asked if he was an avid car enthusiast, he responded, "Nope, I didn't know much at all about autos when I first started selling auto supplies in 1976. My hobbies are hunting, fishing and boats."
 All three employees are natives of Pitt County and remember when only 15 employees did all the work at the store. Now there are 65 full-time employees at the Penney's store in Pitt Plaza.
 The present store opened in August of 1966 and is currently managed by William Hopper.
 "We have seven employees who have worked at Penney's in Greenville for a combined total of 167 years," said Hopper. "We are quite pleased to be in Greenville. The customer/merchandise match-up seems to just perfect."
 "And we have been very satisfied in our relationship with THE DAILY REFLECTOR. They have cooperated to the fullest."
